As we approached some of the islands, the little fishes could be seen in such vast numbers that they formed an amber tint, like a shadow hovering about it; as we drew nearer, they darted to their protective island, and disappeared as we rounded to alongside, and anchored by trailing a leaf, which the boatman would haul in. Nine islands out of ten, and they were scattered over a large area, had other attendants in the shape of yellowtails (Seriola), ranging from fifteen to twenty, or even thirty pounds; splendid fishes, amber-hued above, silver below, with yellow fins, and a vivid yellow streak from head to tail, along the median line; radiant creatures, among the hardest fighters of all the game fishes of the Californias. It was an easy matter to catch them. A cast with the light resilient rod, and the shining sardine would hardly reach below the surface before it would be taken, the screaming reel telling the story.

But it was not yellowtails that we were in search of, though it must be admitted it required an extraordinary amount of moral courage to pass these splendid fishes by; and it was while indulging in this very pastime that the first dolphin was taken with rod and reel on these fascinating fishing grounds.

We were flying the flag of the Tuna Club, hence fishing or angling strictly according to its rules; and possibly it may interest the reader to know what this means in the parlance of the angler. The first injunction is to give the game the advantage, and to accomplish this the rods were of split bamboo and noibwood (as two were fishing), which

I undertook the first part of the programme, leaving Paul to cut the wood and pile it near the tent, and went to the snares I had set the previous evening, where I found three hares. The Labrador hare is the same as that found elsewhere in Canada, the Lepus americanus or hunsonicus, brown in summer, white in winter. In some years it is found in great numbers, at other times it disappears entirely without any apparent reason. Finally, the hunters here say that it can change its sex. This of course is absurd, but it is nevertheless a fact that at certain seasons you catch only males and at other seasons only females.

Leaving my lines and snares, I went into the woods to look for partridges. After walking about three-quarters of an hour I flushed a covey of spruce partridges on the shore of a small lake and treed them not very far off. I had left my gun behind me for fear of frightening the caribou, so I determined to noose them. I cut a long pole of white birch, fastened a piece of wire with a slip-knot at the end of it, and carefully approaching the partridges, which were looking at me with curiosity, I slipped the noose over the neck of the lowest one. I then took the nearest, and so on until I got seven out of the eleven on the tree, the others being too high for me to reach them without alarming them. These stupid birds are shot in the same manner; the report of the gun does not alarm them, but they are frightened by anything falling from above.

I got some more trout on my way back, so that, adding the trout, hares and partridges to the pork and butter we had brought with us, we had a supply of excellent provisions for several days, and were at liberty to look after the caribou.

Just as we finished cleaning our guns the snow began to fall in heavy flakes, and we knew we were in for a three days' storm. We were not mistaken, and for two days and three nights we did nothing but turn out to remove the weight of snow from the tent and to get water. After the storm there was a light thaw, and then it froze hard, which was just what we wanted. We began to get ready at 3 in the morning, and two hours before day we were on our way, followed by our dogs, which ran easily on the crust, over which we skimmed with our snow shoes.

We went in a westerly direction, and, as we expected, we soon came upon a ravage of caribou; that is, a place of several acres in extent where these animals had pawed the snow, crossed and recrossed each other, browsing on the lower twigs of the birch trees and on the spruce and older sapins.

The gang or herd must have consisted of at least thirty individuals, among which were several fawns. They evidently had quitted the spot quite recently, and by circling around it we found fresh tracks where they had left it.

We followed, keeping our dogs behind us and taking advantage of the wind. An hour's march brought us to the edge of a small and narrow lake, in the middle of which were our caribou, about twenty-seven in all, some lying in the snow, while the young fawns played about. They were 200yds. away, just the range for my Marlin, but a great deal too far for my companion's heavy, slugloaded gun. This was too bad. I had brought my rifle, relying upon my man for shots at close range. With my rifle I could not expect to hit more than one, while with his he could hit three or four. It was impossible to get closer without being discovered. I therefore fired and hit one, which, although mortally wounded, ran away with the others, while we started in pursuit. Near the wood we came upon the one I had shot, we gralloched it, stuck a small fir tree near it to mark the spot, and continued on, the hard crust giving us an advantage over the caribou. About 3 in the afternoon we saw seven in a glade and got two, a large buck and a doe. It was then getting late and we had to give up the pursuit, as we had to gralloch the dead animals to reduce their weight, which we could not have done had they become frozen, and to make arrangements for camping before it got quite dark. We shovelled out the snow with our snow shoes piling it up to windward, made a lean-to with poles covered with fir and spruce boughs, strewed a thick layer of the same for a floor, and crawled under shelter.

Although we kept up the fire, we could not sleep for the cold. We smoked, dozed, chatted, drank lots of tea and took an occasional sip of whisky; then at daybreak we ate a bite, harnessed the dogs and ourselves to the caribou and hauled them with great difficulty to the tent, which we reached two hours after sunset.

As the weather continued fine and we were in good trim, we decided to remain. I am never so happy as when in the solitude of the forest, and then I had no home attractions. We accordingly buried our caribou under the snow and set out in different directions to look for tracks of other herds, as the one we had fired at must have fled to a great distance. I walked all morning without being able to find anything besides hare and partridge tracks, when I came to the edge of a small lake. There was nothing on its surface except a small track, which I took to be that of a lynx; so I went on the stream which fed the lake; looking for open water to wash down my homely meal of bread and frozen pork. In a few minutes I reached the foot of a small cascade, where I got some water and began my lunch. While I was so engaged I heard a noise, caused by the fall of a large lump of snow, which started from the top of the falls and rolled down near my feet. One of the edges of the lump showed the marks of a caribou's foot, while the excitement displayed by my dog Brandy indicated the presence of something. I checked him, got my rifle ready and carefully crawled up the slope. When I reached the top I saw a large buck with magnificent antlers browsing and unconscious of danger. Brandy gave a growl, the caribou turned suddenly, giving me a splendid opportunity, and I got in a shot behind the shoulder which laid him low. Of course my taking the body to the tent alone was out of the question, so I gralloched him, to the great delight of Brandy, who feasted to his heart's content. Then I covered up the carcase with snow and made my way back to the camp as this caribou seemed to be a bachelor and without any following.

It was almost dark when I reached the camp and Paul had not returned, so I lit the stove and set my kettle to boil, while in a tin plate I put some slices of caribou tongue on a layer of onions and butter, making a delicious dish, and lay down awaiting the arrival of my companion. I waited patiently for several hours and had fallen into a deep sleep when I awoke on hearing him coming with his dog. I jumped up and asked him what made him so late. "Don't ask me," he replied, "I think I have walked a hundred miles. I have seen plenty of caribou tracks, but they are far away and not very fresh; the animals seem to expect a heavy storm and are moving away. There are plenty of hares and partridges. I have a dozen at the door. For goodness sake, give me a cup of tea and something to eat."

While he was eating I told him of my luck, and we decided to return to the same spot on the morrow to get the buck I had killed and try our luck again. We did so following my snow-shoe tracks which showed clearly; I had also taken the precaution to blaze my path through the woods.

We looked around carefully, but could find no fresh tracks, so we set to work to bring our quarry home. We harnessed the dogs in tandem fashion to the antlers and then fastened our own pack straps to them, and in this way we made good time over the crust.

Two days afterwards we struck our tent and moved a day's march from the spot. When we had settled down we started off, found a ravage, and in a short time came upon two caribou standing on a slight eminence which sloped down to the river. I climbed up the slope to stalk them in that direction while Paul went toward the river which was covered with an accumulation of snow and ice 10ft. deep. When we got within range the caribou were facing in my direction while exposing their flanks to Paul. I made a sign to him to fire and saw him raise his gun to his shoulder and press the trigger. The report was so loud that it made me jump on my snow shoes. I ran in, found one animal dead and the other badly wounded. I put an end to its sufferings and then looked toward the river. Paul had disappeared; I could only see his dog Coffee stretching his head over a considerable excavation and howling piteously. I ran to the river, and lying down near the dog I saw at the bottom of a deep hole, in which the water of the torrent rushed past, my man hanging on to his long gun, which, luckily for him, had fallen across the excavation and was retained in position by two pieces of ice jutting out from the sides. His head and shoulders alone were above water, while his legs and body were carried under the ice by the current. There was not a moment to lose. Calling out to him to hold on, I tied our pack straps together, and descending very carefully into the hole I tied the straps under his arms. Then I climbed up and hauled with all my might, but in vain.

"Help yourself?" I yelled. "You are heavier than two caribou."

"I can't, sir; my clothes are frozen and stuck underneath the ice. You will have hard work to get me out of here."

"Don't be afraid," I replied, "I have a good hold of you. Here is my axe. Cut away the ice and free yourself."

While doing so I harnessed the dogs to the rope, and when he was free we hauled away and pulled him out of the hole.

He did not look like a man, but like an icicle. His clothes were frozen solid and we had to drag him to the bank to thaw him out by means of a huge fire, which I started at once.

After he had taken a good drink of whisky and had thawed a little he began swearing at the ice, but I told him it was due to his own stupidity.

"You heard the reports of the trees cracking last night with the frost, and you might have known that ice does the same and cracks from one bank to the other. You might also have known that the heavy detonation of your gun would break the ice under you, and you should have waited till you were ashore. If I had not been with you it would have been all up with you. You would have turned into an icicle, and in spring you would have gone over the falls."

"Ah, sir, one gets so excited at the sight of game that one does not always stop to reflect."

This was the last of our adventures worth relating on this trip. We hunted for some time longer with varying success, and I returned to the settlements well pleased with my outing.

He was an untried sportsman, but he entered a tailor's shop and approached a clerk with the air of a champion.

"I am a rower," said he, "and I want to be measured for two pairs of rowing trousers—the kind with the sliding seats."

Proud Father—My child is only a month old, and he cries for the moon. Proud Mother—Mine isn't a week old, and he cries for the milky way.

"In writing up the burglary," said the excited caller, "you can say that the thieves in their hurry overlooked seven hundred and fifty dollars' worth of jewellery and solid silver plate in one of the cupboards." "Might that not bring the burglars to your house a second time?" suggested the editor. "I don't care if it does," exclaimed the other. "I don't want the public to get the impression that a gang of robbers can go through my house and only find twenty-five dollars worth of stuff worth stealing."

Fishing.

A NEW GAME FISH.

To those who go down to the sea in ships on the Atlantic coast, and especially make their way in winter down among the Bahama and Leeward islands, along the mysterious Spanish main, a vision of loveliness is often vouchsafed in the guise of long, big-headed fishes, which give a continual and extraordinary exhibition of agility, directly in front of the cut-water of the fastest steamer, yacht, or sailing vessel, seemingly playing with it. From a distance of several feet, they look blue-backed, not unlike albacore; and they go by the name of dolphins, but are fishes; not the whale-like creature known as the bottle-nosed dolphin, which has the habits of the porpoise and others of the whale family.

It has been my good fortune to take several of these fishes which live out at sea in the Atlantic; one from the dolphin-striker of a ship, with a spear; and again in a vast floating patch of weed—a disconnected section of the Sargasso Sea, where I had an excellent opportunity to see them, and played my dolphin in a glorious garden of the sea, until it ran aground in the weed; which, I fancy, explains why I caught it. It was a case not of skill, but of good luck; not on the side of the fish, but good luck for me.

For nearly twenty years I fished the Pacific off the southern Californian islands, where is found the greatest variety of big game fishes, of size and quality to stir the soul of the most phlegmatic ingrate. In all this time, though I saw some of the rarest fishes of the sea taken, including the opah, the ribbon-fish, fishes that have lights, and many more, never did I see a dolphin or even hear of one until in 1906 or 1907, when one was brought in by a professional fisherman; then another later, and then, everyone went dolphin fishing with light rod and reel tackle.

There is but one criticism to be made about the sea-angling in southern California, if, indeed, one should have the temerity to take exception to the fulsome bounties of nature, and that is when you go fishing you often catch fish too easily, and if disposed to see how many you could take, which, unfortunately, is the aim and desire of certain lamentables, you could almost fill a boat at times with fifteen or twenty-pound yellowtails.

But there was no danger of this with the dolphin. One fisherman said (and he was not under oath) that he had seen a school of dolphins so immense that it tinted the turquoise seas, and changed them to gold, as though some Midas-hand had passed over the waters. But the reality, so far as I was concerned, was very different. I fished singly, and in pairs, and in groups. We trolled the sea, up and down; now inshore, along the high and precipitous cliffs of the island, following along in undulating kelp beds that form the rialto of the fishes in these seas; then finding them not, went offshore over the seas of glass, which constitutes one of the wonders and charms of the region.

Down to the south-east of Santa Catalina, about five miles off-shore, is a region called the "doldrums," as here there is almost always a lack of wind, and boats and yachts under sail often drift about for hours until they escape when the vagrant wind reaches them. In the doldrums, as in a vortex, patches of kelp were often found drifting with the tide; some twenty or more feet across, others but three or four; and all afforded excellent shelter for swarms of little fishes called by the men sea-minnows. Singularly enough, they all had taken on the tint and colour of the weed—a rich brownish green, and when lying near it, were almost indistinguishable from it.

The weed was mostly kelp, a long olive-green or amber-hued vine, with broad fluted leaves six or eight feet long, which floated on the surface and hung down, forming beautiful arches and loops—natural lurking places for the fishes—of a graceful and beautiful character, as aside from their natural beauty, every leaf was spotted or decorated with the white tracery of delicate coral-like animals, which had the appearance of white lace seen over amber. Each leaf was covered with these and other forms, lending to the beauty of the whole.

As we approached some of the islands, the little fishes could be seen in such vast numbers that they formed an amber tint, like a shadow hovering about it; as we drew nearer, they darted to their protective island, and disappeared as we rounded to alongside, and anchored by trailing a leaf, which the boatman would haul in. Nine islands out of ten, and they were scattered over a large area, had other attendants in the shape of yellowtails (Seriola), ranging from fifteen to twenty, or even thirty pounds; splendid fishes, amber-hued above, silver below, with yellow fins, and a vivid yellow streak from head to tail, along the median line; radiant creatures, among the hardest fighters of all the game fishes of the Californias. It was an easy matter to catch them. A cast with the light resilient rod, and the shining sardine would hardly reach below the surface before it would be taken, the screaming reel telling the story.

But it was not yellowtails that we were in search of, though it must be admitted it required an extraordinary amount of moral courage to pass these splendid fishes by; and it was while indulging in this very pastime that the first dolphin was taken with rod and reel on these fascinating fishing grounds.

We were flying the flag of the Tuna Club, hence fishing or angling strictly according to its rules; and possibly it may interest the reader to know what this means in the parlance of the angler. The first injunction is to give the game the advantage, and to accomplish this the rods were of split bamboo and noibwood (as two were fishing), which eighed, butt included, just nine ounces, and were under x feet in length; rods resilient, and so frail that, appaently, they seemed utterly impracticable for fishes of any ize; rods the tips of which could be broken by the least xertion. As for the line, it was a seemingly impossible hread, known as number nine, about the size of an ye-glass cord, but possessing a strength that would aul a dead weight of two pounds per strand, or eighteen; et so fragile was this line that the slightest misplaced ovement resulted in a break; indeed, when six hundred eet are out, this line will often break of its own weight, howing conclusively that it is an uncertain and hazardous hing upon which to place any dependence.

With this tackle we had taken four or five yellowtails anging in weight up to twenty-five pounds, each fish naking a splendid play of from twenty to thirty minutes owing the launch around for several yards, and coming up to the gaff out of a sea whose beauty of colour no pen could describe, no brush could paint. The water was as clear and smooth as a disk of polished steel and the sun, high overhead, sent great bands of pulsating light down into it, which seemed to intensify the color and render it so translucent that the eye could penetrate it seemingly for great distances and strange and beautiful shapes seemed to be brought out, and their details illumined and magnified. Far below, standing out against the blue, were crystaline forms—comets, chains, globes and a thousand radiant bas—reliefs against the watery sky—really jelly fishes, while everywhere the ocean was sprinkled, as it were, with gems, sparkling in their iridescence; some red, like rubies; others blue as sapphires; others again with the steely glow of a diamond, some pink, like a tourmaline; indeed, every possible colour, tint, or glow that ever flushed over a spectrum seemed to find place in this fairyland of the sea.

The silvery glow of a fighting yellowtail could be seen, seemingly, three hundred feet below as it coursed around the launch; and the eye was constantly regaled with strange and beautiful objects designed to arrest the attention of the angler, and possibly to enable the fish to escape, a conspiracy of nature to defeat the ends of the angler.

We had visited perhaps six different floating islands, taking yellowtails here and there, and finally ran silently up to a long attenuated mat of weed under which we could see several large fishes. As the launch slowed down my companion made a long cast; and, as the shining smelt sank a foot or more, out from the green island there dashed what I assumed was a yellowtail, seized it, and disappeared. I saw a flash of brilliant yellow and purple; but such an evanescent blaze of colour is often seen when a yellowtail strikes, so nothing was thought of it. The fish made a hard fight, sulking deep in the blue heart of the channel, making the delicate nine-ounce rod bend to the danger point more than once. But my companion was one of the most skilful anglers in the country, and the way he persuaded this game creature to rise and come to the surface was well worth seeing. But it took a goodly measure of line; the fish was doubtless headed downward.

Gradually, however, the angler gained, and leaning over so that my face was near the water, I saw a vision that held me like a magnet. The channel was the most beautiful mass of colour human eyes ever looked into; it was indescribable. I had seen the beautiful blue of the sky in the Garden of the Gods, Colorado; had wondered at its tone and hue on the flanks of the Sangre de Christo; had seen the narrow river of blue from the Grand Canon of San Clemente, that was like a ribbon of indigo. But none of these compared with the wealth of colour that stretched away to infinity in this splendid deep, this abysmal world. Every definition of the colour flashed through my mind; azure, ultramarine, cerulean, sapphire, iris; all the results of this espial, and all in vain as mere words failed to describe it. Deep in its centre was a spot of gold of so strange a hue and tint that it fascinated me like a great eye of topaz. It was saffron; it flamed with lurid copper and amber tints; it was aureate; it was a deep yellowish green, coming nearer, and growing more and more familiar, until the dregs of memory came to my rescue, and I recalled where and when, years before, I had seen this strange weird colour on the borders of the Sargasso Sea. I knew it by its colour alone, and shouted to my companion that he had a dolphin, if not the king of colourists of the sea, a near kinsman.

My companion at once began handling the game with the greatest care, as was this not the fish we had been hunting for, covering miles of water? Slowly he reeled, while I, still peering into this wonderland, where the sky seemed to be reflected, saw the marvellous changes of the greatest master of colour-change in the world.

Up it came, foot by foot, until I saw its splendid outline against the blue, its tall, domed head, the long, beautiful dorsal fin from head to tail, the thin knife-like body, the sardonic mouth, small beautiful eyes, the silvery belly, the yellow fins, all of which flashed waves of chromatic storms, dazzling to the eye and senses.

The dolphin was about four feet in length, a doughty specimen, and it was making literally the fight of its life; swimming, head down, in great circles, protesting every inch, every turn of the reel. In due time it was reeled to within twenty feet of the surface, and the boatman was fingering the gaff, and I was still reporting its changes of colour for the benefit of the angler, who could not see them, when it suddenly changed its tactics, stopped circling, dashed upward in a blaze of glory, and leaped like a tarpon into the air, where for a single second it thrashed about, a thing of beauty, a living rainbow, an ecstatic prism, scintillating with effulgent rays, to fall and leap again and again, to our amazement and delight.

Then it rushed away, making the reel sing a brazen cascarole; coming around in a great circle, to leap again; always coming in nearer and nearer, fighting for its life the epitome of pluck, never once showing the white feather, or ceasing to struggle until the gaff caught it, and ever the harlequin; changing, melting, from one glorious tint to another, it came in—the first dolphin ever taken with rod and reel on the Pacific coast.

The fish was a typical specimen, nearly four feet long, very thin, its head domed in a marvellous manner; altogether a remarkable creature to catch with such light tackle, striking testimony to the modern reformation in sea angling.

The beauty of the dolphin is a revelation to the fortunate angler who takes it and it may be considered one of the rarest of fishes to capture with road and reel. Yet a number were taken at Santa Catalina in the season of 1907, and the beautiful creature is now added to the remarkable list of game fishes of this prolific region.

The fish is often confused with the other dolphin, also common in these waters, but the latter is allied to the whales, and is not a fish, but an air-breathing, milk-giving creature, generally harpooned when it is taken at all, though I have seen one taken with a hook and the line along the hanging kelp gardens of the Californian islands. Little is known of the habits of the dolphin beyond the fact that it is an ocean roamer, a pelagic wanderer, found everywhere in tropic and semi-tropic seas; a radiant creature adding to the beauties of the open sea, as do the birds to some grove or forest ashore. Doubtless the young are found and born on the surface of the open sea.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTORS

OF THE

NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY.

To the Annual General Court of Proprietors, to be held on Tuesday, 2nd, June 1908, at the Society's Office, Surrey Street, Norwich.

THE Directors beg to submit to Proprietors the following Report upon the transaction of the Society for the year ending the 31st of December 1907.

The nett Premium Income for the year ending 31st December, 1907, amounted to £1,119,358. 0s 9d. The Losses (paid and outstanding) were £582,302. 10s. 3d. being 52·02 per cent of the Premiums.

After setting aside one-third of the Premiums (£373,119) as a Reserve against liabilities on policies not run off the balance at the credit of the Profit and Loss Account, including the unappropriated Balance, £225,505, brought forward from the previous year, is £363,976, out of which an Interim Dividend of £2 per share, was paid in January last, and a further dividend of £2 per share, with the addtition of a Bonus of £1, has been declared by the Board, and will be payable on the 4th of June.

The undivided Balance, amounting to £308,976, is carried forward to next year's credit.

According to rotation, Mr. G. Hustler Tuck and Mr. H. T. S. Patteson retire from the Board, but, being eligible, offer themselves for re-election at the General Court.

The Directors again desire to express their high appreciation of the valuable assistance afforded by the United States Trustees; by the Local Directors, Branch Managers, and other Representatives at Home and Abroad.

Appended will be found the Accounts and Balance Sheet, shewing the results of the Society's operations for the year ending 31st December, 1907, duly certified by the Auditors.

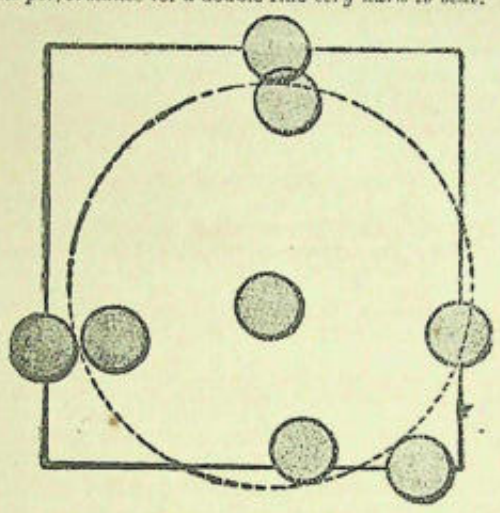
LANG



New No. 2 ·360 Bore

In comparison with the ·400/·360 the muzzle velocity of this new Cartridge is approximately 230 F.S. higher, and although the charge is increased the same low pressure, viz., 14 tons, is maintained. The increased velocity coupled with the extra weight of bullet and consequent greater striking energy gives one a rifle that has practically the stopping power of a ·450 or ·500 Black Powder Express, and is consequently an ideal weapon for deer stalking and for shooting heavier forms of non-dangerous game; moreover, in consequence of the importation of the ·303 into India being prohibited, it is well worthy the notice of Sportsmen in that country who desire to have a weapon in which is combined High Velocity, Flat Trajectory, Great Striking Energy, Minimum Recoil, and in which, through low pressure, a greater margin of safety is given and the risk of jamming reduced to a minimum.

VELOCITY 2,150 F. S., Striking Energy 3,280ft. lbs.

The accuracy is of the highest order, as will be seen by the accompanying diagram made by the Editor of The Field and not by a professional expert.

"FIELD." "A trial series produced a remarkably fine group of eight shots fired alternately from the two barrels. . . . A very fine performance for a double rifle very hard to beat."

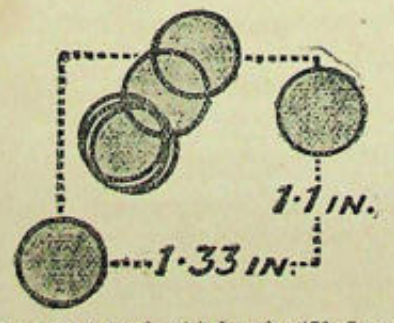
LANG'S



NEW ·470 Bore
FOR SPORT IN INDIA.
VELOCITY 2,250 ft. sec.

This cartridge as originally designed did not, in our opinion, come up to a sufficiently high standard, and in consequence our expert visited Messrs. Kynoch's works, and in conjunction with their experts conducted a series of experiments extending over three weeks, ultimately designing the bullets now in use from this popular rifle.

J. L. & S. therefore confidently claim that in collaboration with Messrs. Kynoch they were the first to introduce the ·470, and as evidence submit the following extract from the Field, and illustration of the actual diagram made before the editor of that journal.

"FIELD," 23rd March 1907: ". . . . A very valuable advance has been achieved, and Messrs. Lang are to be congratulated on their enterprise in so promptly bringing forward a rifle and cartridges complying with the two most pressing demands in sporting rifles, viz., a weapon to take the place of the prohibited ·450, and a cartridge which shows an advance in flatness of trajectory, with a diminution of recoil and pressure."

THE BEST DIAGRAM made before the Editor of the "Field" with a Rifle of this bore.

7 Shots at 100 yards with Lang's ·470 Sporting Rifle.

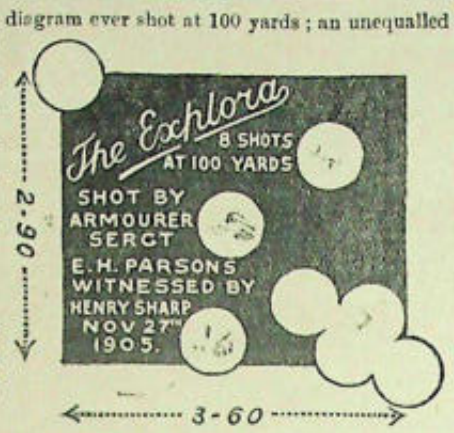
TO HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

WESTLEY RICHARDS AND CO., LTD.



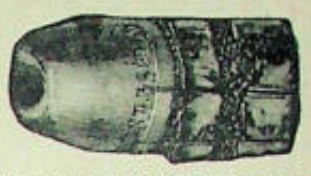
ESTABLISHED 1812.

The "Explora" 12 BORE LONG RANGE NITRO BALL & SHOT GUN.

The Explora system has not only trebled the range of the ball and shot gun but it has also increased the standard of accuracy at all ranges compared with the ordinary ball and shot gun of the past. "It has made the best group with the old gun at 50 yards possible with the new at 100. In fact the shots at 100 are in less space than the best older guns diagram at 50 yards."—County Gentleman.

RECORD DIAGRAMS MADE IN PUBLIC.

THE EXPLORA has to its record the finest diagram ever shot at 100 yards; an unequalled 8 shot diagram made before the Editor of the Field at 200 yards and finally a remarkable close diagram at 300 yards, shot on the same occasion, which demonstrated beyond doubt the wonderfully accurate shooting qualities of the Explora at long range. The Editor of the Field, London, says: "This question has been settled in our presence by a comprehensive series of firing tests."



The Explora is the most Accurate Ball and Shot Gun in existence at short range, mid-range, and long range.

THE "EXPLORA" SYSTEM PROVIDES TWO BULLETS.

One for increased penetration, the other for complete expansion.

No. 1. WESTLEY RICHARDS' BRASS-CAPPED EXPLORA BULLET.

Augments penetration against hard surfaces. The cap "cups in" on impact and produces very formidable effects. Trials at steel plates and at huge targets of Beef demonstrated the superior penetrative power of this form of Bullet over all others. It is recommended for the longer ranges.

No. 1. BRASS-CAPPED.

No. 2. WESTLEY RICHARDS' ALL HEAD (PATENT) EXPLORA BULLET.

Designed Expressly for great expansion, but is also capable of accurate flight to 300 yards. Recommended for thin skinned lightly built animals.

The Explora is the only system affording choice of bullets.

No. 2.

THE EXPLORA IS A FIRST RATE SHOT-GUN, REGULAR IN PATTERNS AND PENETRATION.

Latest speciality— The Fauneta 20 Bore LONG RANGE NITRO BALL and SHOT GUN

WEIGHT OF BULLET 425 grs.

VELOCITY 1,500 ft. per sec.

STRIKING ENERGY 2,121 ft. lbs.

WEIGHT 6½lbs. to 7lbs.

Increased bullet weight and velocity.

The Fauneta 20 bore Ball and Shot Gun is an extension of the long range Explora system which opened up a new era in this type of weapon shooting from the same barrel both ball and shot. The W. R. patent system of bullets in conjunction with the loading of the cartridges and the rifling of the barrel permits of long range shooting with this Fauneta small bore weapon with a degree of accuracy superior to that of the well known express rifles. At 100 yards 8 shots have been grouped into a diagram of 1¾ × 2¾ and this standard of accuracy is maintained at mid-range and up to 300 yards. The increased velocity and consequent lower trajectory of the 20 bore Fauneta establishes it as the most accurate Ball and Shot Gun made. The shot patterns equal those of a first rate hard hitting cylinder 20 bore Shot Gun.

THE STRENUOUS LIFE IN INDIA.

Is It Possible?

A want of energy and whim are characteristic traits of the white population in tropical and semi-tropical countries. It is a well established fact that this unfortunate condition is in a very large measure due to insufficient nourishment; to want of a diet that shall sustain the system under the increased demands upon the powers. Not only is the appetite feeble, but the food supplies also leave much to be desired in both quality and nutritive power as compared with the products of the temperate zone. Hence one often feels at a loss to know how to combat the depression and languor consequent on what may fairly be termed an improper diet supply. It follows therefore that the ideal remedy for physical exhaustion must be one which feeds the hungry tissues with a nutrient that is easy of assimilation, and at the same time enriches the blood and tones up the nervous system. This much-to-be-desired remedy is found in Sanatogen, the wonder-working food tonic.

Sanatogen is a scientific combination of two distinct elements, the one nutritive, the other tonic. The nutritive element is presented by pure milk albumen—the body building food, demanded constantly by the body for the repair of its tissues. Without a due supply of such food-principle, life would not continue.

The tonic element is represented by Phosphorus. The latter is an all-important constituent of the brain and the nervous system. But hitherto it has been impossible to administer this vital principal so that the nervous system could take hold of it. Dr. Andrew Wilson, the well-known medical author, writes:—"Sanatogen has solved the problem of administering Phosphorus in precisely the form in which the tissues can readily seize upon it and appropriate it to their various needs." The medical profession in Great Britain and India entertain the highest opinion of Sanatogen, which is amply evidenced by the fact that over 7,500 physicians have written in praise of it. This and the written attestations of very many distinguished men and women, whose names are well-known in the community, conclusively establish Sanatogen to be the pre-eminent recuperative and restorative.

The Rt. Rev. William Sinclair, D.D., Archdeacon of London, writes:—

THE CHAPTER HOUSE,
ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL,
London, E. C.

"Sanatogen appears to be an admirable food for invalids and those who suffer from indigestion."

William Sinclair

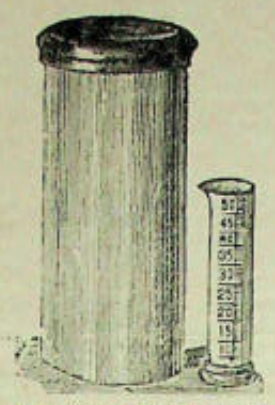
Unlike other tonics the use of Sanatogen does not derange digestion but actually assists enfeebled appetite and strengthens the digestive organs. Its tonic effect is marvellous, and if taken regularly for a short period the feeling of being run down will be replaced by brightness, mental alertness, and healthy vigour. It differs also from other tonics in that its effects are permanent.

Mr. C. B. Fry, the celebrated cricketer, writes:—

GLENBOURNE MANOR,
WEST END, HANTS.

"Sanatogen is an excellent tonic food in training, specially valuable as a tonic during the periods of nervous exhaustion commonly called staleness, to which men who undergo severe training are liable. I have recommended it to many of my friends."

C. B. Fry.



There is no doubt that Sanatogen is the ideal food for invalids and convalescents. It can be borne by the weakest stomach when all other food is rejected. It is powerfully effective in all those cases where through illness, or overwork, or climatic conditions, the system has become debilitated. For the nervous and the dyspeptic, Sanatogen restores, naturally, sound digestion, healthy vigour, and the elasticity of well-being.

Sanatogen, which is a fine white powder, is packed in bottles, and can be obtained from all chemists.

An engrossing booklet containing matter of vital importance to well-being in the Tropics has recently been issued. It is from the pen of a physician long resident in India and is entitled "How to keep well in India." It should be in the hands of all desirous of knowing how to get well and keep well. A copy can be obtained free of charge from Messrs. Smith Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, from whom also Sanatogen can be purchased.

THE TURF.

KEMPTON PARK.

AFTER such a busy four days at Epsom in such enervating weather, and with another week crammed with fixtures before Ascot, it was surprising to see such a good muster at Kempton on Saturday, the 6th instant, where the delightful surroundings and comparative quiet were gratefully welcomed. Though the sun shone brightly, the wind was bitterly keen, and great coats were indispensable, considering the temperature in the sun was 50 degrees cooler than on Thursday, and half that in the shade. The going, green as emerald, was in good order, and fields panned out well. Details:—

HURST PARK.

All roads led to Molesey Hurst on Whit Monday, and the weather, returned to its summer groove, brought the holiday-makers out in thousands, the attendance being almost, if not quite, a record one. The course was in capital order, and fields of comfortable size, while backers were well on the mark in the first three events, and again in the Surrey Stakes, in which Foxcote easily justified the odds laid on him. The features of the afternoon were the popular victory of the Duke of Westminister's colt in the principal event, and the dual success of the Manton stable. The Wiltshire establishment is likely to play a prominent part in the near future, as there is little doubt that their horses are now coming into form. Details:—

After the rain, sunshine brought a really big attendance to Hurst Park, although compared with the masses of Monday it looked small, and the same prominent patrons of the noble sport again assembled in the club enclosure. Fields were in delightfully moderate quantity—just sufficient to lend all the interest to a race that is wanted, as no one, except he be a layer of odds, wants to see 30 horse scrambling for the lead. Trigg and Maher had matters almost quite to themselves, the former securing three and "Danny" two out of the six events on the card. Details:—

MANCHESTER.

Whitsuntide racing is a never-failing source of attraction to the sporting section of the populace of Manchester, and an immense crowd on Tuesday last journeyed to Castle Irwell. The course was in capital order, while the experiment of adopting the Grey gates with electric releases answered admirably. Mr. A. Coventry has to be congratulated on his efforts as a starter, and in harmony with the expeditious despatches came some excellent sport. Details.—

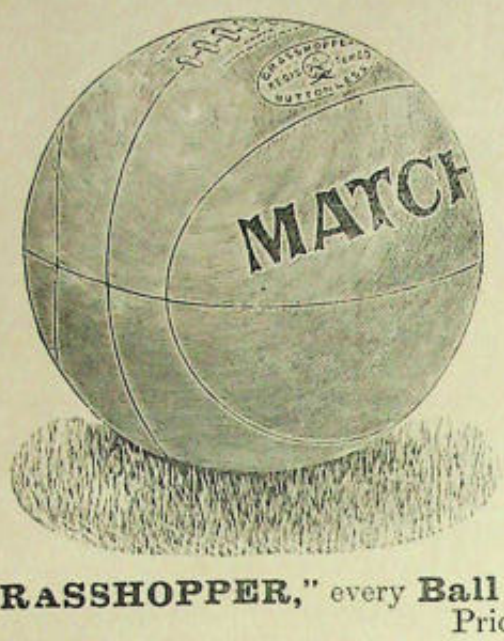
POLO.

HURLINGHAM CHAMPION CUP.—Old Cantabs beat Roehampton by 4 goals to 3. Had the Old Cantabs been beaten yesterday in the semi-final round of the Champion Cup at Hurlingham—and they were perilously near to defeat at one time—it would have been a tragedy in polo. For no unprejudiced onlooker could have failed to appreciate their superiority on the afternoon's play. The general run of the game in their favour, and throughout the whole of one period—the fourth—they simply bombarded the Roehampton goal, but not a straight shot could they get in. At least a dozen times in this exciting ten the ball went over the Roehampton line, but always a yard or two wide of the mark. Supreme anxiety to score no doubt made the players less sure in their hitting than usual; in any case, the fact remains that Roehampton were extremely fortunate in getting through the period without a goal being registered against them. They held a lead of one point at this stage, but things were level when the last period was entered upon—3 goals all.



Players put in all they knew, ponies were extended to the utmost, but still the deciding point did not come. Three minutes from the end, however, Captain Bellville dribbled the ball down cleverly, and left it for Mr. Freake. It needed an extraordinary nearside shot, but the Cantabs' No. 2 was equal to it, and thus the winning goal was scored. The cheer which went up from the polo pavilion thronged with many of the best-known players past and present, not only signalised the victory of the Cantabs, but was a tribute to a stroke which only a master-player could have brought off.

Apart from this, Mr. Freake was not quite in the same irresistible form as he displayed on Monday and Mr. Buckmaster was this time the best man on the side. Lord Wodehouse must have been suffering badly from nerves in the first twenty minutes, as he was woefully inconsistent. But he settled down later on, and at the finish was playing as well as any. Captain Bellville found Mr. Patteson Nickalls rather a different proposition from the back he had been pitted against in his first Champion Cup match, the Roehampton defender playing a powerful game, and being very difficult to get past. All the same, the Cantabs' No. 1 acquitted himself most capably, and it was his clever manœuvring, as we have said, which led up the deciding goal. No player, either on the winning or losing side, added more to his reputation in the match than Captain Herbert Wilson. Mounted on some wonderfully fast and handy ponies, he was ever conspicuous, ever earning applause for some brilliant break-away or skilful hitting. Mr. Morris Nickalls and Captain Lloyd hit strongly without being quite so good as the No. 1 and the back of the team.

A unique feature of the match was that three of the seven goals were scored from penalty hits from the fifty yards mark. Crossing is an infringement of the rules which very properly is rigorously dealt with. Only last year the penalty was made more drastic than before by the Hurlingham Committee, and in this match it was seen how heavily illegal play will recoil on the offending team when there are good men to take the shot at fifty yards. Captain Lloyd and Mr. Buckmaster are the surest hitters from a mark now playing polo, and they had two shots each yesterday. The former scored once and missed once. Mr. Buckmaster found the mark on both occasions. Fortunately it cannot be said that the match was decided on these penalties, as the sides were equally at fault in violating the rules.

Excitement was great even in the first period, as Roehampton, the non-favourites, actually took a lead of two goals. Their opponents pressed heavily from the start, and kept up a heavy attack for six minutes. Then for the first time Roehampton dashed away, and Captain Lloyd took a shot at about seventy yards range. The ball went skimming straight and fast over the smooth carpet of turf without giving Lord Wodehouse a chance of getting to it, and Roehampton stood 1 up. A minute later the Cantab back crossed Captain Wilson in midfield, and Captain Lloyd scored from the penalty hit. Certainly the leaders were not two goals the better on the play, but they did more of the attacking in the second period until Mr. M. Nickalls crossed Captain Bellville, and Mr. Buckmaster crashed the ball through. The third ten saw the Cantabs having the better of the play; still, they could not score, and it was the same all through the next stage, and the equalising goal did not come until the fifth ten. Mr. P. Nickalls was this time guilty of crossing, and as the result had the mortification of seeing Mr. Buckmaster hit another goal. However, this was nullified when Lord Wodehouse missed his backhander, and Mr. M. Nickalls, jumping in with an open goal in front of him, drove the ball home. This was an eventful period, as before the end Mr. Buckmaster brought things level again. It was the last-named player who was pulled up for crossing in the final ten, but Captain Lloyd was unsuccessful this time, and then came Mr. Freake's fine effort which decided the issue. Teams:—

Roehampton.—Captain H. Wilson, Mr. M. Nickalls, Captain H. Lloyd, and Mr. P. W. Nickalls (back).

Old Cantabs.—Captain G. Bellville, Mr. F. M. Freake, Mr. W. S. Buckmaster, and Lord Wodehouse (back).

Umpires:—Major K. McLaren and Captain E. A. Fagan.

ROWING.

Cambridge and the Olympic Games.—For some time now in official circles it has been expected that Cambridge, as the winners of the inter-'Varsity Boat Race, would be called upon to be one of the English representatives at the coming Olympic Regatta. Mr D. C. R. Stuart, the 'Varsity president, has just announced that he had received a communication from the Olympic Committee to this effect. The Blues are naturally extremely delighted, and general satisfaction was expressed by those few persons who were fortunate enough to hear the good news.

As soon as the May races are over, the president will set to get his crew together, and it was understood that he is only likely to make one alteration from the crew which beat Oxford. H. M. Goldsmith, who was unable to row, will have to be included, and the most likely man to stand down is G. E. Fairbairn. Other members of last year's crew are F. H. Jerwood, O. A. Carver, J. S. Burn, H. E. Kitching, E. G. Williams, E. W. Powell, D. C. R. Stuart, with R. Boyle (cox).

GOLF.

The Amateur Championship.—Won by Mr. E. A. Lessen, 'Lytham and St. Anne's who defeated Mr. H. E. Taylor, Richmond, by 7 holes up and 6 to play, in the final tie of 36 holes. Both players started rather nervously, but the young Yorkshireman settled down to his game the sooner, and, after leading by two holes at the end of the first round, completely outplayed his opponent in the afternoon. Taylor played much below his proper form, particularly in the shot game. Scores:—

Out: 553444536—39. Home: 765675346—49.—Total, 88.

H. E. Taylor.

Out: 544543666—43. Home: 475655356—46.—Total, 89.

Afternoon Round:—E. A. Lassen.—Out: 444543635—38. Home: 455—14.—Total, 52 for twelve holes.

H. E. Taylor.—Out: 654554545—42. Home: 564—15.—Total, 58 for twelve holes.

Mr. John Ball, the open champion of 1890 and amateur champion of 1888, 1890, 1892, 1894, 1899, and 1907, acted as referee. The championship cup was handed to Mr. Lassen by Lord Northbourne.

RECORD OF WINNER AND RUNNER-UP.

Mr. Lassen was born at Bradford in 1876, and educated at Rugby, where he was in the school eleven. He won the Yorkshire Championship in 1900, was runner-up to H. H. Barker (since turned professional), and has been champion of Germany. At Bradford, Ravenscliffe (Bradford), and Huddersfield, Mr. Lassen is plus 2, and he carries a penalty of plus 3 at Lytham and St. Anne's.

Mr. Taylor, who was born at Uttoxeter in 1869, and educated at Wellington College, is a well-known competitor at Richmond, Mid-Surrey, and Felixstowe, at each of which he has a handicap of plus 4, and holds the amateur record. Last spring he won several important competitions in the South of France.

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HOUNDS.

Thursday, 18th June.—Rees' Corner, 7 A.M. Jackal was blank. Hounds drew down by Pearl Crossing along the Blackmore Vale and picked up a travelling jack on the slopes of Newmarket, which led us a merry chase over the shoulder of Bagman, along top of Mills' and down by the bottom of New Covert. With a swing to the right he ran over the road at Rees' Corner, then to the left over Dairy Maid and plunged down past Denmark to the Fairlawns Stream and up into Cairn Hill. Hounds hunting well drove him through, and out at the bottom of Woodstock and up the hill as it for Rees' Corner; short of it, however, he turned to the left and raced down to the Fairlawns Valley again and made good his escape. In the Nanjanad Valley hounds went away on the trail of a jack and ran him for a time round about Sambur Shola and lost him near the village. A long climb, with the south-west monsoon blowing a howling gale in our faces, brought us to Sheffield Corner, thence on to Rallywood and down the Blackmore Vale, which again provided us with a good jack. Hounds went off at a great pace and lots of music by Rawlins Nullah and down to the Sandy Nullah Stream, over Lawley's Course by Schmidt's Clump, between Gibb's Shola and Herbert Plantation into Briar. Out at the far side and down the hill, leaving Bacon Wood on the right. At the bottom they swung to the right into Bungalow Shola, then over the ridge between Chemmund and the Pykara Road, into Wenlock. Without dwelling here, they pushed him out over the bog through Wapshare's Hare, round the shoulder of the hill and over the Pykara Road into Lower Briar, then along the Back-Staircase Road for some distance, up the side of Staircase and back again over the road and down the Yemmakal Valley and finally to ground in a small ravine below Yemmakal Mund.

The field included her Excellency the Hon'ble Lady Lawley, Miss C. Lawley, Captain Duff, Mr. Lee, Major the Hon'ble H. D. and Mrs. Napier, Mr. Hope Johnstone, Captain Lambton, Mr. Mitchell, Colonel Hawkins, Major and Mrs. Younghusband, Dr., Mrs. and Miss Forsyth, Mr. Crum, Mr. Cresswell, Mr. de la Hey, Mr. A. A. Dangar, Major and Mrs. Lovell, Colonel Formby, Mr. Marjoribanks, Major Hinge, Mrs. S. Browne, Major and Mrs. Henderson, Captain and Mrs. Vaughan Edwards, Miss Gales, Major Graham, Miss Hammick, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, Miss Harrison, Mrs. Porteous, Colonel and Mrs. Gordon Price, Miss Romilly, Miss Rolfe, Captain Rawson, Mrs. Russell, Mr. Packenham Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Taylor, Mr. Yorke, the Minor Zemindars, etc., etc.

Saturday, 20th June.—Toda Coffee Shop, 12 noon. The Master drew along the right bank of the Pykara river to within a mile of the falls, without touching the line of a jack. In a ravine to the north of Tuvalkundi Mund one was proclaimed; he moved off over the ridge and down to the river, along the bank to Mount Gordon Tea Estate; bearing to the right of this, he went to ground in a large earth in a deep gully, where he was left, the terriers failing to make him quit. We then drew on over Tuvalkundi Mund to Lord Roberts' Shola, which produced a jack. Pointing his mask for Ampthill Wood, he climbed up the side of Kengodu and bending to the right over the top of Boasters' Shola sank the hill to the bog. Still bearing to the right below Paragon Shola he crossed the bog and running below Warrick Shola, swung to the left through Malkod Shola past Glyn's Covert and down the Ghants where hounds lost him.

Amongst those out were his Excellency Sir Arthur Lawley, Miss C. Lawley, Captain Duff, Captain Vesey, Mr. Leigh, Major and Mrs. Lovell, Mr. A. A. Dangar, Mr. Robertson, Miss Morgan, Mrs. Horne, Mrs. Sam Browne, Miss Rolfe, Mr. Cresswell, Mr. O'Dwyer, Mr. Mitchell, Captain Rawson, Mr. Marjoribanks, Mr. H. A. Irwin, Captain Lambton, Mr. de la Hey and the Minor Zemindar of Sevagiri, the Hon'ble Mr. Stokes, Mr. Thurston and Miss Gass in a motor.

Monday, 22nd June.—Golf Corner, 7 A.M. The first draw was over the hill above the Municipal Drainage Works, then over the side of Bagman to New Covert, and along the Municipal Stream. Near Elmhirst Corner, hounds put up a jack, which, after running a very short distance, popped into an earth above Treble Crossing. Hounds were taken on up the Blackmore Vale to Rawlins' Nulla, where they picked up a line: again we were treated to a short run, over the Sandy Nullah Stream to the foot of Staircase, the jack going to ground in a watercourse. The terriers did their best to dislodge him, but without success. A jack was viewed in the Dartmore Vale, both jack and scent had vanished when hounds were put on almost at once and they could make nothing of it. We had better luck at the top of Beadnell's; a jack jumping up close to the pack, went off at a good pace through Beadnell's Shola up the hill towards the wire fence and with a sharp turn to the left dived into Hamlet. Coming out at the top, the jack sunk the hill on to the Pykara Bridle Path and sped along it. Hounds overshot the line on the path, but recovering it again, they raced after him to Fuddler's Shola. Swinging to the left they hunted him smartly to Wenlock, where they checked on the road, the jack having run it and turned up to the left and over the hill into Chemmund. The Master coming to their assistance, they recovered the line on the hill, and chased the jack through Chemmund into Dormer, and brought him out at the bottom; they turned to the left and sweeping down to the Yemmakal Stream they ran him to ground in a cavern where they killed him. The next thing was to unearth him: "Cyclops," the native whip, crawled in and was hauled out again by the heels, clasping a thundering big jack in his arms. The field included their Excellencies Sir Arthur and Lady Lawley, Mr. R. E. and Miss C. Lawley, Mr. A. Y. G. Campbell, Captain Duff, Major and Mrs. Younghusband, Captain Elwes, Mr. Cresswell, Mr. L. Phillips, Colonel Formby, Dr. and Mrs. Forsyth, Captain and Mrs. Vaughan Edwards, Mr. De la Hey and the Minor Zemindars, Mrs. Henderson, Mr. Holme, Major Graham, Major Hinge, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, Miss Harrison, Captain Lambton, Mr. Leigh, Major Johnstone, Mrs. Hope Johnstone, Colonel Hawkins, Mr. Irwin, Major the Hon'ble and Mrs. Napier, Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Majoribanks, Colonel and Mrs. Gordon Price, Captain Rawson, Miss Rolfe, Miss Romilly, Mr. Porteous, Mrs. Russell, Miss Stickney, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Taylor, and others.

Tuesday, 23th June.—Avalanche Finger Post, 12 noon. After a fruitless draw in the direction of Gartree Hill, hounds put up brace of jack just beyond Hookham Snivey, the pack at once split up, and it was some time before they were got together again. We then drew up the side of Gartree Hill, a jack was viewed, but slipped into an earth almost immediately: the terriers were put in, it took them about 20 minutes to persuade him to bolt. Although hounds were quickly in pursuit they lost him in a small gulley beyond. The covert on Gartree Hill was unproductive. A long trot brought us back to the Avalanche Finger Post. Hounds went away on a line from here pointing for Nunjanand Village, below which they turned up towards the Tin Hut, where several jack were afoot moving off in different directions, causing the pack to divide, but fortunately they reunited in Kundathirigarai Shola. Going away up hill towards Pug Pits they swung back and dashed down to the Avalanche Bridle Path, ran over the stream and up the hill in the direction of Ittalur Village. The jack running the road for a short distance was headed; flinging himself down the hill he crossed the bog and rose the next hill and down the far side of it, getting to ground under some large rocks, where he was left. The small field included Mr. R. E. and the Misses Lawley, Captain Duff, Mr. Cresswell, Captain Vesey, Mr. Robertson, Mr. Hope Johnstone, Mrs. Horne, Mr. Packenham Walsh, Major Graham, Miss Stickney, Miss Rolfe and Miss Romilly.

THE HARWOOD LEAGUE.

COMMERCIAL GYMKHANA vs. R. G. A.—This match was played in the rain on the 20th ultimo. Play was all in favour of the gunners who were more at home on the heavy, slippery ground. They scored two goals in the first half. Cumming and Reynolds putting through, and on changing ends Macdonald notched two goals and Cumming one. The Commercial Gymkhana were unable to score and the R. G. A. thus won by five goals to nil. Teams :—

R. G. A.—Jackson, goal; Wiggit and Watts (Captain), backs; Southcots, Gillet and Columbs; half-backs; Titley, Cummings, Reynolds, Betts, and Macdonald, forwards.

COMMERCIAL GYMKHANA.—Street, goal; Harwood and Chapman (captain), backs; Kay, Osborne and Hotz, half-backs; Lay, Barrett, Elliott, Wooly and Bellamy, forwards.

Referee :—Mr. G. Walton.

ROVERS vs. Y. M. C. A.—Played on the 23rd ultimo an interesting game being witnessed. The Y. M. C. A. had the better of the exchanges during the first half and Brewin shot a goal. After the interval the Young Men kept up the attack but could not score. Play then ruled up and down and both goals were visited in turn, but there was no further scoring the Y. M. C. A. winning by a goal to nil. Teams :—

Y.M.C.A.—Rose, goal; Rowbottom and Kelly, backs; Spierce, Jaeger and Gradwell, half-backs; T. Brewin, H. Templeton, G. Brewin, Dowling and Templeton (semior), forwards.

ROVERS.—Lane, goal; Kellit and Brydon, backs; Benson, Cuzen and Petty, half-backs; Watson, Mungavin, Black, Osborne and Christie, forwards.

Referee :—Mr. C. Ward.

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPHS vs. ROYAL SCOTS "A."—Played on the 24th ultimo ending in a draw. The Scots played nine men most of the game, two of the team retiring injured early in the first half. The Telepraph had the best of the game before the intervals but neither team scored. On changing ends the soldiers attacked but could not get through. Even play followed, till Holman got the ball in front of the Scot's goal and put it into the net. The military team ran down on resuming and Kennaway equalised. There was no further score, the result being a draw of one all. Teams :—

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPHS.—Mercer, goal; Nicholas and Edwards, backs; Taylor, Crutchly and Clarke, half-backs; Cahill, Cowper, Cotterrill, Aspen and Holman, forwards.

ROYAL SCOTS "A" TEAM.—Robertson, goal; Henderson and King, backs; Jack, Wilson and Kieler, half-backs; Morton, Bolton, Girdwood, Kennaway and Pringle, forwards.

Referee :—Mr. G. Walton.

BOMBAY GYMKHANA vs. R. G. A—A very good game was witnessed when these teams met on the 25th ultimo. The Gymkhana, who are improving rapidly, had the best of the first half. Cole opened their account and put on a second goal shortly after and Christy scored a third. The gunners next attacked and Titley put through. The second half was evenly contested, both goals were attacked, but there was no further score. Eratic shooting on the part of the gunners lost them opportunities. Final score: Gymkhana 3 goals R. G. A. 1 goal. Teams :—

BOMBAY GYMKHANA.—Thomson, goal; Ward and Morris, backs; Bussey, Morris, and Sim, half-backs; Evans Abbots, Christy, Cole and Moir, forwards.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.—Jackson, goal; Wiggit and Hughes, backs; Gillet, Columbell, and Bayley half-backs; Titley, Cummin, Reynolds, Betts, and Macdonald forwards.

Referee :—Mr. B. Christy.

Y. M. C. A. vs. GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPHS.—A big crowd witnessed this match on the 26th ultimo. The Young Men were the better team in the first half and Macmillan, G. Brewin and Dowling scoring goals, they led at the interval by three to nil. On changing ends play was very level. Both goals were attacked but the only score was a goal to the Telegraphs put through by Cowper. Final score. Y. M. C. A. 3 goals-Telegraph 1 goal. Teams :—

Y. M. C. A.—Rose, goal; Rowbotham and Kelly, backs; Templeton, Jaeger and Macmillan, half-backs; T. Brewin, H. Templeton, G. Brewin, Lowing and Spiers, forwards.

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPHS.—Cook, goal; Nicholas and Edwards, backs; Taylor, Crutchley and Clarke, half-backs; Cahill, Cowper, Stevens, Asplin and Holman, forwards.

Referee :—Sergt. Watts.

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

DIVISION I.

GORDONS vs. CALEDONIANS.—Played on Friday the Gordons winning by a goal to nil. The Military had the best of the opening half and scored one goal, the result of a long shot by Spence. On changing ends the Caledonians were assisted by the wind and play was well contested, fast and most exciting. Neither team scored, however, and the Gordons won as stated. Teams :—

GORDONS.—Inch, goals; Montgomery and Aitken, backs; Spence, Graham, and Harper; half-backs; Galletty, McClement, McKay, Foreman and McDougal forwards.

CALEDONIANS.—A scome, goal; Irvine and J. Stoddart, backs; Grant, Hardinge, and Wilson, half-backs; Apcar, Knight, Tobin, Clegg and R. Stoddart, forwards.

Referee :—E. H. Behrend.

DALHOUSIE vs. Y, M. C. A.—Played on the Dalhousie ground on Friday, an interesting game ending in a win for the home team by a goal to nil. Allen scored the only goal of the match in the first half. Thereafter the Young Men made great efforts to draw level but without success. Teams :—

DALHOUSIE.—Henry, goal; Dunn, Stevens, backs; Storrie, Lees and Beadle, half-backs; Burnett, Dalling, Allen, Wright and Evans. forwards.

Y. M. C. A.—Rozario, goal; Reynolds and Berkley, backs; H. Vanspal, Gay and Collingwood, half-bzcks; Gillon, Wright, Brown, Ramsay and Rossetti, forwards.

CUSTOMS vs. RANGERS.—These teams played a pointless draw on the Customs' ground on the 26th ultimo. It was a scrambling game throughout. Teams :—

CUSTOMS.—Fertado, goal; Anderson and Goldsmith, backs; Maitland, L. H. Smith and Marsden, half-backs; Echlin, Fischer, L. A. Smith, McCready and Ogg, forwards.

RANGERS.—Margrett, goal; Minnet and Postence, backs; Cornish, Cody and Skempton, half-backs; Davis, McKay, Oliver, Little and Taylor, forwards.

Referee :—Mr. Miller.

DALHOUSIE vs. GORDONS.—Played on the Fort ground on the 27th ultimo, the soldiers winning by a goal to nil. The game was fairly level during the opening half, but the Gordons forwards playing well together often kept the Dalhousie backs busy. McDougall got away just before the interval and scored the only goal of the match. The Dals pressed on changing ends and several shots were sent in. The military backs were not to be beaten and it was not long before the Gordons were again pressing. There was no further score. Teams :—

GORDONS.—Insch, goal; Montgomery and Atken, backs; Harper, Graham and Spence, half-backs; Galletty, McClement, McKay, Foreman and McDougall, forwards.

DALHOUSIE.—Hendrie, goal; Stevens and Dunn, backs; Morrison, Lees and Beadle, half-backs; Burnett, Dalling, Allan, Wright and Gibson, forwards.

Referee :—Sergeant Curley.

CUSTOMS vs. Y. M. C. A.—Played on the Y. M. C. A. ground last Saturday, the Customs winning a poor game by two goals to one. The Y.M C.A. drew first blood and led at the interval by a goal but McCready quickly equalised after half time and L. A. Smith scored the winning goal.

RANGERS vs. H. L. I.—A pointless draw was the result of this match on Saturday. The first half was fairly level, but the H. L. I. were on the offensive during the major part of the second moiety. The shooting was poor and the game ended without score. Teams :—

RANGERS.—Margrett, goal; Postence and Minet, backs; Skempton, Cody and Cornish, half-bakes; Taylor, Little, Gault, Oliver and Davis, forwards.

H. L. I.—Cassidy, goal; Henderson and Tait, backs; Scollins, Scevitcy and Collins, half-backs; H. Collins, Marshall, Devlin, Innes and Duncan, forwards.

CALCUTTA vs. CALEDONIANS.—A fast and interesting game on the C. F. C. ground last Saturday ending in a draw of two goals all. The opening exchanges were even; then the visitors got away and Tobin scored from a pass by Apcar, Owen putting on a second goal shortly after. The home team improved and H. Sherman reduced the margin after a good run. Calcutta attacked all through the second half and H. Sherman scored again. All further efforts of both teams were unsuccessful and the game was drawn as stated Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Dods, goal; Gahan and Campbell, backs; Taylor, O'Shea and Crawford, half-backs; H. Sherman, Foster, Kingcome, V. Sherman and Oliver, forwards.

CALEDONIANS.—Anscombe, goal; Chandler and Irwin, backs; Wilson, J. Stoddart, and Grant, half-backs; R. Stoddart, Tobin, Owens, Knight, and Apcar forwards.

Referee :—Mr. A. R. C. Miller.

CUSTOMS vs. H. L. I.—These teams met on the Rangers, ground on Tuesday, a fast and interesting game ending in favour of the military by a goal to nil. During the first half the exchanges were very even, but after the interval the customs had the best of the play and had they taken advantage of their opportunities would have scored on more than one occasion. Fitzgerald scored the only point of the game, heading theball into the net just before half time Teams :—

CUSTOMS.—Furtado, goal; Anderson and Goldsmith, backs; Maitland, L. H. Smith and Marsden, half-backs; Fisher, Berkley, L. A. Smith, McCready and Ogg, forwards.

H. L. I.—Lees, goal; Tait and Henderson, backs; Scollins, Scevity and Collins, half-backs; Collins, Marshall, Fitzgerald, Duncan and Innes, forwards.

Referee :—Mr. R. P. Claridge (C.R.A.).

DIVISION II.

WANDERERS vs. SIBPUR.—Played on the Measurers' ground on Friday, the Wanderers winning by a goal to nil—netted by Patterson.

ST. XAVIERS OLD BOYS vs. GORDONS.—Played last Saturday, the Gordons winning by two goals to nil.

SIBPUR vs. MEASURERS.—Played on the Measurers' ground on Saturday, the visitors winning by two goals to nil. Pyne and Battersby were responsible for the scoring.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

SAVE for three abandoned matches which will probably be played off next Saturday the Calcutta Football League Competition of 1908 will be a thing of the past by the time these notes appear in print, and it will be generally admitted that never has there been a duller or more mediocre exhibition of football on the part of Calcutta clubs. With the exception of the Gordons whose League record is consistent with their prowess on the field of play, we have been treated to nothing which, by the greatest possible stretch of imagination, could be described as brilliant, and individual skill has been strangely lacking everywhere. Whether the Shield Tournament will provide better play cannot at present be discerned but as the "unknown element" is likely to figure conspicuously amongst the entries for this splendid trophy it is possibly that we may witness some memorable matches.

The improvement in the weather during the past week has brought the maidan grounds to a very welcome state of elasticity and it is a pleasure to let one's eyes rest an the brilliant verdure of the Dalhousie or C. F. C. ground. There has been an accompanying improvement in play, too, amongst the civilian clubs, particularly the Rangers who have bucked up wonderfully and are now seemingly out of all danger of being sent down. The match between Calcutta and the H. L. I. last Tuesday week provided a sensation hitherto foreign to the annals of the leading civilian club, one of its members being sent off the field by the referee. The matter has since been settled up by the I. F. A. Council so there seems be no necessity for comment save to congratulate O'Shea on his subsequent reappearance in the position which he fills so well. The C. F. C. League Record for 1908 is not very pleasant to contemplate. They will only manage to finish third after all for the H. L. I. still have two matches in hand.

The mid-week matches last week were not very interesting Dalhousie found the Y. M. C. A. a rather harder nut to crack than on their first meeting when the Young Men were defeated by 3-0. Still the Dals managed to put up a 1-0 victory and so gained the necessary two points. The Gordons beat Caledonia by 1-0 and would have won by more but for the magnificent play of Anscombe in goal. The Gordons vs. Dalhousie match on the following Saturday attracted large crowds to the Fort and a splendid tussle ensued, the Gordons just winning by 1-0. Dalhousie played one of the best games of the season. Lees being a very tower of strength.

In drawing with the H. L. I. the Rangers have taken a good grip on the First Division and must retain their place unless the Y. M. C. A. can beat the H. L. I. The excitement is intense amongst the supporters of the two clubs and their closing fixtures will thus be vested with more than usual interest. The Customs found the weak joint in the Young Men's armour last Saturday and managed to beat them by the odd goal in three. The Calcutta vs. Caledonia match attracted a vast horde of spectators. Calcutta very nearly lost the match by "footling" when they ought to have been shooting. The absence of V. Cooper, who was injured on the previous Tuesday in the match vs. H. L. I. greatly weakened the defence, and Campbell was a nervous substitute. The Caledonia team played a good game all through and scored twce before Calcutta had smelt a goal. Hugh Sherman notched both points for Calcutta with really magnificent shots from almost impossible angles. In giving a point away like this Calcutta have come down one on the list and the H. L. I. now fill position No. 2.

The C. F. C. Reserves have been obliged to relinquish their claim to the Sarma Cup. "A" Co. of the H.L.I. just beat them by 1-0 last Friday after an exciting match in which the Calcutta team had the worst of luck in not scoring. The H L I. goal was bombarded all through the second-half but the ball refused to be netted. The Minerva Cup, an upstart affair dating from last season only, seems already to have attained fame. Entries include every company team of the Gordons save one, half a dozen other military teams, and innumerable civilian entries amongst which the Dalhousie "B," C. F. C. Reserves and C. F. C. Rugby Rugsters (Captained by that young giant, Jack McLeod) are conspicuous.

Entries for all I. F. A. compititions close next Saturday July, at 5 P. M., to Douglas Baker, 9, Hare Street. In spite of the Empire prediction, Sergeant Spence is quite determined to enter not only one but two teams from the Gordons for the I. F. A. Shield. The H. L. I. have entered two teams and several other clubs are likely to follow this example.

The Annual General Meeting of the Calcutta Football League was held at the Caledonia Club Tent on Monday evening last and was largely attended. It was decided to hold a Campsie Benefit Match next Saturday, the proceeds to be made over to the Fund which is now being collected in aid of the victim of the recent Kankinarra Bomb Outrage. A team of Jute Mill Assistants will meet a team composed of players from the various League teams. The Civil vs. Military Charity Match will be played on the following Wednesday. Mr. D. L. Walker was elected Honorary Secretary for the ensuing season by unanimous consent. The League Cups will be given away at the conclusion of the Civil vs. Military Match on Wednesday next

The following is the League Table corrected up to Saturday last.

REFEREE.

THE FOX AND THE GRAPES.

A Fox travelling in the country for the health of the townsfolk, observed a fruity bunch of grapes that hung high above his reach. He made several leaps at them, but failed to bring them down.

"Blister the things!" said he, turning away in disgust "Grape-juice is intoxicating, and I almost forgot that I am a teetotaler."

"Certainly," observed the Sun, cheerfully. "I'll blister them"; and he forthwith proceeded so to do, an easy job for him, seeing that the bunch of grapes was only the painted sign of an inn.

Healthy Children

Can only be reared by giving suitable nourishment. If unable to feed your child, the proper substitute is a food that corresponds in all respects with human milk. The "Allenburys" Milk Foods are so prepared as to remove the difference between cow's milk and human milk, and are most easy of digestion. They are alike suitable for the delicate and robust, and, when used as directed, form the best means of rearing a child by hand. The No. 1 Milk Food may be given alternately with the natural food without fear of causing digestive disturbance.

The Story Teller.

MR. TURTLE'S TRIUMPH.

WHEN men have enjoyed a good day's hunting and a good dinner afterwards, they are entitled to be happy in the evening, and if they are not so, there is something wrong with either their mind or their digestion, or both. Perhaps both are effected; for undoubtedly if a man cannot eat what he loves, and plenty of it, without fear of a subsequent interior commotion, he is not likely to be joyful at meal time, and if not mentally serene despite the pleasures of the chase, he will not do justice to the most sumptuous banquet. Such creatures of circumstance are we! It is not exhilarating to reflect even after hunting that our happiness is often dependent upon food, we dare not eat to an extent that would, under brighter auspices, have been practicable.

After dinner!—yes that is the time when sportsmen are most expansive—perchance most irresponsible—in their ideas and utterances. All then is, appropriately, couleur de rose. There has been, of course, a kill in the open after a fast forty minutes on the grass, with only a few in it at the finish, all done to a turn, gasping. The huntsman would have been there only his horse collapsed backwards into a ditch some distance away, and was so beat that he was unable to co-operate with those who tried to help him out. One whip was up, running and riding, now off, now on, or he would not have been there, and—but have we not heard the same old story a thousand times?

With our feet under the mahogany instead of in the irons, we can all go wonderfully well when hounds are running in the boundless fields of Imagination, where there are no obstacles that cannot be surmounted; and a good sportsman will not, under such circumstances, object to a brother-enthusiast romancing slightly if he be allowed his own turn before it is too late to do himself justice.

And they were telling the same old story, just a few of them, after dinner in the smoking-room. Tommy Turtle was there, with congenial friends. Several were speaking at the same time, flourishing their cigars with great recklessness in order to emphasize their eloquence, and it did not matter if nobody listened. Their discourse was about hunting; and many worthy persons talk to themselves quite contentedly for hours on that theme. They may not believe their own stories; few people do; but they derive a pleasure from their recital far in excess of what they would enjoy if the stories were even partially true.

"What a day!" shouted Tommy enthusiastically; "it must have been a good ten-mile point, very fast, and all jumping. I say, you fellows, did you see me do the double-post and rails, not in and out, clever, but over?"

"Oh, yes," replied Joey Jasper, the really hard man, "I saw you. You went at 'em as if you were a steam battering-ram bent on destruction, and what you didn't jump you took away with you—enough to stock a timber-yard in a small town. I don't mind how high rails are if the're only rotten."

"The mare never moved a splinter," exclaimed Turtle indignantly; "I just steadied her about thirty yards from the rails, and then slipped her at 'em. Mercy upon us, how she did jump! I thought she was never coming down again."

"I thought you were never coming down again," said Jasper, the relentless; "you began the ascent a little before the mare, but on landing she fortunately caught you up, and even then you were cuddling round her ears. You always were lucky, Tommy, my lad, and I hope you always will be. For you do your friends really well, and I'm proud to be one of the number, but don't let us cherish absurd delusions; you can't ride, old chap, for penny buns."

That, alas! was true. Therefore was Mr. Turtle proud of his horsemanship. He was a young man of considerable wealth and decent family; he had not made his own money or selected his own family, all that having been done for him, and the results were conspicuously satisfactory. He had a large bachelor establishment in Creamshire, kept up entirely for the hunting, which was the chief amusement of his life; and there he royally entertained friends whose tastes were congenial. A simple, good-hearted youth, not overburdened with brains—which are certainly not essential if you have plenty of money—Tommy Turtle nursed a secret ambition: he wished to ride the winner of a race!

He knew little of nothing about racing in its practical aspects, and, as already intimated, was not a good rider. Even when hunting he could not go well without a pioneer and the best horses that money could purchase. He was not a "bruiser" until (as is the case with many of us) the fighting was over. Then, in the prancing-round business, and in the telling of how it was done, he was capable of playing a leading part on the shortest notice, and he wanted no understudy. He could talk enough for three silly men as a rule; for more when heated.

Yet, curiously, he did not care to expose the secret ambition of his soul to the rude gaze of even those friends whom he was entertaining at his hunting-box; for he knew that if he had barely hinted that he desired to ride a winner, they would have laughed at him. And he did not like to be laughed at in his own house, where, as he reflected, the catering was conducted on a scale of delightful magnificence, regardless of cost for the benefit of others, and where, if people could not be happy without ridiculing the aspirations of their host, they did not deserve such a menu, to say nothing of the vintages.

But after time, Mr. Turtle was obliged to take Jasper into his confidence, since he knew that, as a skilful gentleman rider, Jasper was a practical man and could help him if anybody could. So one morning when they were riding to a meet alone, and just jogging along to keep their toes warm, he opened his heart to Jasper, greatly to that gentleman's amusement.

"My idea, you know, is to ride the winner of a steeplechase," said Tommy tentatively; "it's a nice thing to mention in society for the remainder of your existence. Many fellows have established a life-long reputation on it. And, upon my word, some of them ride worse than I do. Can't you help me, Joey?"

"Of course I can, old chap," replied Mr. Jasper; "but we must try and do it without breaking your neck. Accidents of that sort do occur sometimes in steeplechases, and it would be a pity (for your friends if not for your relations) that your bright young life should end in the regulation ditch."

"Don't mention it," said Turtle, hurriedly, not liking the picture. "My father lived to be 86, and I wish to live longer. The world it too good to leave when one has plenty of money to spend and plenty of time to spend it. I must have a horse that will jump the ditch, not explore its depths with me under him."

"Well, I'll have a look round your stud," answered Jasper, meaning business, "and see if you have anything good enough to win a hunt steeplechase. You must have a really fine lepper with a turn of speed. You don't want a national horse for a race of that class—only one that can jump and keep plodding along when the others are beaten."

"That's your sort," said Turtle, excitedly; "one that jumps straight and always the same; it is when they introduce variations of their own at every fence that I am inclined to dissolve partnership. I have learnt to adhere in one way, not in several. Find me one that I can ride, Joey, without being smashed, and upon my soul I shall be eternally grateful."

"That's all right," replied Joey the cynical; "but don't be grateful too soon. Wait and see whether you have anything to be grateful for before you become effusive. A man once promised me £100"—continued Jasper, reflectively—"before I had done anything for him, and after I had done it I got—nothing."

"You shall have what you like, and as much of it as you want," said Turtle with the glow of honest feeling in his heart, "if you will pull me through all right this time. You must also ride in the same race, nurse me round the turns, tell me when to go on, and help me not to fall off."

Mr. Jasper promised to do so. It was just the kind of enterprise he loved. In the interests of sport he was prepared to do anything or go anywhere at any time, although, as regarded the ordinary purposes of life, it was difficult to move him. He would not, for instance, have gone into the next street to look at a house even if he had nowhere to lay his head during the evening hours; but he would cheerfully travel hundreds of miles to see a horse, even though he did not want one.

As may be imagined, he lost no time inspecting Mr. Turtle's stud. He rode several of the horses over fences, and bustled them along a little on the flat to discover if they had any speed. Most of them were slow, hunter-like animals that jumped beautifully and wasted a lot of time in doing it. Their orthodox style is appreciated by sportsmen who wish to hunt, not to die. It combines the maximum of safety with the minimum of haste; and a prudent man does not mind being up in the air a long time if he descends to earth all right, with or without a grunt.

At last Mr. Jasper found something to his taste. She was a big brown-mare, about three parts bred, that gave him a grand "feel" when he galloped her, and she jumped like a stag. She rushed somewhat at her fences, but only pulled hard enough to steady even an inexpert rider, and when she got there she made no mistake, always jumping straight and with the utmost resolution and cleverness.

"This is just Turtle's ticket," reflected Joey after trying the mare; "he can't fall off her if he will only keep his eyes open, and I'm sure she has pace enough to beat the generality of hunters."

The next process was that Mr. Turtle was compelled by his enthusiastic friend to undergo some preliminary practice in riding at racing speed over a private "regulation" course, in order that he might acquire the art of "sitting back" at the right time. Like many other neophytes of the same class, he only wished to perform in public; when he rode over fences he liked someone to see him do it, not necessarily a large audience, but for choice a few young lady friends in whom he took an interest, who would look at him admiringly and with a heightened colour after the performance, and who withal were not quite sure whether he was a hero or an ass. One can never be certain what women will or do admire. Some like pluck, many prefer beauty, a few goodness, and all love men—I mean modest worth.

"Is all this private schooling necessary?" asked Tommy one morning, sorely exacerbated, after riding a good three-mile gallop over the steeplechase course. "I don't jump now before the mare does, at least not often, and when she lands and bounds away I'm bounding with her."

"You are," remarked Jasper, "a perfect bounder. Nothing offensive meant, of course, but the way in which you cling to the saddle with arms and legs in moments of peril does you credit. If necessary I believe you could use your back teeth to help you to remain. And, oh! yes, I think you are all right now old chap. We may dispense with any more private rehearsals, and assume that you are ready for the race."

"You are coming with me, of course," said Tommy, his confidence cooling as the hour of trial approached; "you said you would some time ago, and I've done nothing since to forfeit your esteem. You can keep some of the other Johnnies off me at the fences, I hate jumping in a crowd. And should I fall—though I devoutly hope I shan't, for I am really too rich to roll about—you can fall after, not on me and pick me up."

"Yes, I'll come with you," replied Jasper soothingly, "to aid you in your flight. I'll ride my old chaser Gunboat: he can gallop round you all the way, and chivy you up the straight when it comes to finishing, don't you know."

"Thanks," murmured Turtle, "a thousand thanks. If I can only ride the winner of a steeplechase I shall die—that is live—happily ever afterwards, and can brag about it until I'm quite an old man."

• • • • •

The day of the race arrived. It was at a country meeting, conducted in the good old style with plenty of fun, finery and feasting. All the young ladies whom Turtle liked best were present. He had arranged that not one of them—not even she with the short nose who snubbed him after his most eloquent squeezes—should miss the opportunity of seeing him in his new jockey costume, "do the ditch." Many young men, it is said, put on boots and breeches with the same noble ambition.

There were several runners, all "tryers," bar Gunboat, and some might as well have been in their stable for any chance they had. They were good hunters, bad racehorses. They could jump almost anything with time, but could not go fast. Jasper knew that it was a good thing for Turtle's mare if her owner could be induced to stay with her during the full length of the journey.

So they started, and dashing away at flag-fall Jasper, shouting to his friend to "lie up," steered the latter clear of all scrimmages, and took him to the front. There they kept for about a couple of miles, Turtle having lost first his whip, then his cap, and finally both irons. Seeing about half-a-mile from home, that the race was practically over, and that the other runners were beaten, Jasper took a pull, and helped Tommy to recover his recalcitrant stirrups, so that he might be able to ride a creditable finish past the stand for the delectation of his lady friends and others less emotional. But, though his mare was going strong and well, poor Tommy was exhausted, and a sickly pallor which overspread his features did not add to their beauty. His reins were flopping about anyhow, so were his legs; he was too tired to speak.

Happily Jasper was a man of infinite resource. Grasping the situation at once, he rode up alongside Tommy's mare, and as the saying is, "took her in with him." No man ever rode a better finish on two horses. He let the mare win cleverly by half-a-length; and when Tommy was removed from the saddle almost unconscious, and had weighed in, he shook the deserving Jasper's hand and arm so vigorously on the stand as to provoke sympathetic thrills amongst those of his female acquaintances who were accustomed to feel for another.

Mr. Turtle never rode another race. "Oh! no," he said, after marrying for money, "one ride, one winner, not so bad you know. And I'll leave off with a good average."

"If Smithers undertakes to pull my ears," said a fellow at a street corner, "he will have his hands full."

The crowd looked at the man's ears and smiled.

MOTOR MEMS FROM ENGLAND.

ORIGINAL AND OTHERWISE.

LONDON, Friday, 12th June 1908.

BROOKLAND motor-racing track was on Whit Monday the scene of a great struggle between two cars for £500, in which the tremendous speed of 120 miles per hour was attained over a distance of 2¾ miles by the victor, Nazarro, in a Fiat.

The race came about through Mr. S. F. Edge's challenge to race with a 90-h.p. Napier car for £500, accepted by Mr. D'Arcy Baker with a 90-h.p. Fiat.

The meeting was certainly the most successful that the Brooklands Automobile Racing Club has yet held. The enclosures were crowded with cars, and at least 15,000 spectators were present, giving the track a gay and prosperous appearance and the dresses were more summer-like than on Saturday.

It was obvious that the public had been drawn by the great international match between the Napier and the Fiat, driven by the two greatest drivers of the day in their own particular line—Nazarro of the road, and Newton of the track. The two giant cars were a complete contrast—the Napier long, low, and slim, and the Fiat big, powerful, and assertive, the former green and the latter vermilion. Newton was on Samson and Nazarro on Mephistopheles.

Everybody collected to cheer the big racers out of the paddock and on the parade, and the coolest people in the crowd were the two drivers, who were literally taking their lives in their hands, both smiling and determined. The cars were started at the end of the finishing straight in full view of the spectators, and Samson jumped off very fast, and soon established a lead of a hundred yards, which Newton increased to a quarter of a mile on the far banking.

But Mephistopheles was hot on his heels, and began to pick up fast a lap later, and in the third lap was obviously gaining. In the fourth, to everybody's disappointment, Samson suddenly stopped, leaving Nazarro in sole command of the track. However, it took him two or three laps ro realise that he had won, and the great red car tore round and round to victory.

As soon as Nazarro reached his achievement, however, he slowed down considerably. His net time was returned at 94¾ m.p.h. for the whole distance, but his time for the third lap is unparalleled at Brooklands or elsewhere, being 120 miles per hour for two and three-quarter miles, or two miles per minute, these figures being officially certified by the Brooklands Racing Club and the secretary of the Royal Automobile Club.

General regret was expressed that the great race could not have seen a close finish; but the victory was undoubtedly a popular one owing to the great impression made by Mephistopheles.

In Samson a hot bearing seized and drove the connecting-rod right through the crank-chamber, making it impossible for it to go on. The Mephistopheles' tyres, cooled by a new patent, wore wonderfully.

But from a spectacular point, the race of the day was the Fifth 26-h.p. Class, in which the victorious Firefly was again faced by Mr. Cupper's Metallurgique. In the fourth lap Firefly took the lead, with Mr. Cupper hard on his track pulling up wonderfully. From that point to the finish there was nothing in it, and though in the straight Mr. Cupper looked all over a winner Newton just beat him on the post after a wonderfully exciting race.

The President's Cup, presented by Lord Lonsdale, who was present, was won by Mr. Nalder, on one of this year's Berliets; Mr. Moss won the Household Brigade Cup on an Arrol-Johnston car; while the concluding race, with the Austin Grand Prix cars, was won by Resta. Details:—

The following are among the highest speeds attained in motor car racing, and each is a world's record for the distance. It should be noted that Ormond Beach, Florida, is practically a straight course, whereas Brooklands is, of course, oval shaped a factor which militates against the best speeds being obtained.

Destructive criticism of the road hog has at last resulted in the A.A. evolving a new scheme in order to cope with the motorist who is always on the roads for the purpose of record-breaking. In these notes I have always urged that the motorist who seeks notoriety in police courts by not considering the safety of other users of the roads should find solitude, if the case merited such punishment, in imprisonment, and practically all the writers in the technical Press agree. The outstanding feature of the crusade against reckless driving is not the beating of drums by writers in the general Press, who have sought circulation in scare head lines and sensational "pars," but the real efforts made by the better informed motoring critics to convince the public that all monsters of the roads are not only a source of danger to pedestrians and cyclists, but also to the sporting motorist.

The new development of the Automobile association should therefore be welcomed as an earnest attempt to lessen the evils of reckless driving, and motorists should lend every assistance to the A.A. patrols by communicating to the committee of public safety such information as will lead to the conviction of those drivers who are a plague to all other users of the roads. The action of the A. A. should induce motorists to make a special effort to back up their scheme, as once the problem of the road hog is settled future legislation should extend greater facilities to owners of cars.

In beautiful weather yesterday morning forty-six of the fifty-one cars entered left London on the Royal Automobile Club International Touring Club trial of 2,000 miles on the road and 200 miles on the track. The cars started from Carlow-street, Camden Town.

There was a representative gathering of cars, from the big Lorraine-Dietrich and the Rolls-Royce down to the little 'Compose-de-Trois" Cadillac and the tiny De-Dion.

The run yesterday was to Nottingham, 126 miles. To-day the long line of cars will proceed to Newcastle-on-Tyne, another 161 miles, and to-morrow they complete the 440 miles to Glasgow.

Next week they run in conjunction with the Scottish trials, which cover between seven and eight hundred miles, and on Saturday, 20th June they commence their southward journey. This day fortnight all the cars will undergo a 200-mile speed test on the Brooklands motor racing track at Weybridge to complete the trial.

CHUKKUR.

Years ago in Glasgow there was a well-known publican who had a weakness for composing "poetry," and, at the same time an inclination to water his whiskey rather freely. One day two of his regular customers went into his house and ordered twa hauts." As mine host set the liquor down before them he fired off sixteen lines of his latest composition. One of his hearers took a sip of his whiskey, and then inquired "whaur did we hear that?"

"It's ma ain composition," replied the publican, with a self-satisfied smile.

"A'n I'm thinkin' this whuskey's yer ain composition, tae!" retorted the customer. "I'm nae judge of po'etry but ma consicence, if it's no only better than yer whuskey, it didna dae ye muckle credit."

One of the subjects recommended as part of the education of girls is, we note, poker work. It is useful, of course, but it should not be resorted to unless the husband becomes very violent.

THE "INNER LINE."

WHEN the Government of India forbade sportsmen from crossing the Tibetan frontier, or even going near it, a couple of years ago, for secret political reasons, it was said that the prohibition would last for a short time only. It was understood that the Home Government was negotiating treaties with Russia and China which intimately concerned Tibet, and that it was imperative on our side to adopt the most correct attitude, so as to give no cause for irritation or suspicion by Englishmen or Europeans, haunting this frontier, during the course of these delicate negotiations. The treatment of Sven Hedin, who came all the way from Yarkand to Simla to cross into Tibet, by the easiest and shortest route to the scene of his present explorations, is the hard case which gives point to the consequences of this hard and fast policy on the Government's part in this country. The indomitable explorer had to retrace the many hundreds of miles which he had wearily travelled and recommence his explorations from the North-West, with the loss of many months of precious time!

These treaties are now accomplished facts, and British sportsmen have been anxiously expecting some relaxation of the temporary restraints put upon them in the pursuit of the splendid game of the Himalayan range and of the elevated hunting grounds beyond. What has been the reward of their self-denial?

The Anglo-Russian Convention of 1907 secured the independence of Tibet on a thoroughly satisfactory basis, the high contracting parties having bound themselves mutually to obtain no influence or footing whatever, under any pretext, in that country, and the suzerainty of China was clearly defined and acknowledged. We undertook to allow no travelling or exploration by Englishmen or Europeans from our side. To prove our bonâ-fides and remove even the shadow of suspicion we went a step further and drew an "Inner Line" some distance below the Anglo-Tibetan (now Anglo-Chinese) frontier, beyond which no European could proceed without a special license from the Indian Government. It is not known whether Russia on her side has been as thorough as we have been in placing a similar barrier between her subjects and Tibet. The creation of such artificial obstructions would belie the principles of her well-known Central Asian Policy, which has always allowed more facilities for entrance into rather than for exclusion from that country.

The Anglo-Chinese treaty of the present year, which was worried out of us by the Chinese Commissioner who remained for so many months with the Supreme Government at Calcutta, does not seem to go on all fours with our Russian Convention of last year. It has given China a thorough grip over the Tibetan nation and has in fact changed the mild suzerainty of ancient times into annexation pure and simple. Tibet is now in fact a Chinese province—an integral portion of that widespread Empire—and is held in subjection by a Chinese army (a small one certainly at present) permanently located in the country, while a Tibetan army is in course of creation. While we carefully hedged in the country from all chance of aggression on our side, we quietly let in China, who was not long in coming into full possession!

We are not, however, concerned with high politics. We desire to put on record here our emphatic protest against the creation of the "Inner Line" and its permanent establishment. There is no necessity for this annoying hindrance to British sportsmen who have visited these now prohibited hunting grounds for more than half a century. As these treaties have been happily accomplished, the "Inner Line" should be abolished: unless, indeed, it is intended to make this unique big game country official preserves for the powers that be! The Anglo-Chinese treaty clearly lays down that "British officers and subjects must adhere to the trade routes from the frontier of India; they shall not proceed beyond the trade marts, or from or to Gartok and Gyantse by any route through the interior of Tibet without permission." Surely these restrictions are sufficiently explicit without the added obstruction of an "Inner Line."

It will be as well to define the "Inner Line" as laid down officially by Government, to make clear the extent of the Himalayan shooting grounds which have been put beyond the British sportsman's reach, except under trying restrictions. In the first instance it was necessary as far as the United Provinces are concerned, to bring the two districts of Kumaon and Garhwal under the provisions of the "Scheduled Districts Act (XIV of 1874)" to enable the Local Government to exercise powers conferred by the "Bengal Eastern Frontier Regulations Act (V of 1873)." So armed, the Lieutenant-Governor promulgates in his own Gazette under notification No. 231I—V, 305 1905 dated 23rd March 1907, the provisions of sections 2 to 4, 6, 7 and 11 of the lastnamed Regulation as applicable to his jurisdiction. Under the glare of this official fulmination is created the "Inner Line." The Local Government by notification in the Gazette prohibits "all British subjects, or any class of British subjects, or any persons residing in or passing through either of the districts, from going beyond such line, without a pass under the hand and seal of the chief executive officer of such district, or of such other officer as he may authorize to grant such pass, and the Local Government may from time to time cancel or vary such prohibition." Then follows the penalty for crossing the inner line without a pass, the form of pass to be given, and the power to arrest the culprit who transgresses this law. "The acquisition of interest in land by others than natives of the districts is also forbidden." By a separate notification, No. 233—IVI 305 of 1905, the Local Government then proceeds to prescribe the line described below, as the "Inner Line" on the frontiers of the districts of Almorah and Garhwal: "a straight line from the junction of the Darma and Kali rivers on the frontier of Almorah and Nepal, to Mansiari, thence direct to Phurkia, thence direct to Suraitotar, thence along the road to Vishnupriag, thence direct to Kidarnath, and thence due west to the frontier of Tibet and Garhwal." This line having been fixed, the Local Government then proceeds formally (Notification 235—1VI 305 of 1905) "to prohibit all persons residing in or passing through the said districts of Almorah and the said district of Garhwal, other than officers of Government on duty, or persons who by nationality are either Indians or Tibetans, from going beyond the "Inner Line" without a pass. Lastly, the details to be entered in the pass are laid down; the licensee must be described, period of permit stated, also purpose for which the line is crossed, points where the line may be crossed, and conditions under which the pass is given, i.e., it must be returned to the Deputy Commissioner, the holder shall not cross the "Inner Line" at any but the licensed points, on cancellation of the pass the holder "shall forthwith return" within the "Inner Line" by an indicated, or the shortest, route. The Simla and Kangra districts have, for the same purposes, become "Scheduled Districts."

Any good map will give a clear idea of the Himalayan hunting grounds which have thus been cut off. From the borders of Nepal on the south-west to the Ladak frontier on the north-east the distance is about 400 miles: the "Inner Line" now constituted by the Anglo-Indian Government with all the solemn formalities of the law, runs between these two frontiers at distances varying from a few miles to 35 miles from the established Tibetan or Chinese boundary. Year after year numbers of Brittish sportsmen have wandered over this now forbidden country without let or hindrance. It is difficult to imagine for what high political reasons this portion of British territory was at first provisionally prohibited to Englishmen and has now apparently become permanently closed to them.

Before this new departure on the part of the responsible authorities becomes a well-established but unnecessary obstruction as far as British sportsmen are concerned we desire to enter our emphatic protest against their action, and would suggest the removal of the barrier, as far as big game hunters, at any rate, are concerned.

HENLEY ROYAL REGATTA.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

London, Saturday, 4th July 1908.

The following are the results in the finals of the events at the Henley Regatta. The Oxford crews carried all before them, for, with the exception of the Ladies' Plate won by Jesus College, Cambridge, and the Wyfold Cup won by Thames R.C., they scored wins in all the other events. Christ Church won the Grand and, represented by Barker and Gladstone, the Silver Goblets; Wadham College won the Thames Cup; Magdalen College repeated their last year victories in the Stewards' Cup and Visitors and A. McCulloch of University College, who was runner up to Captain Darell last year, won the Diamonds, easily beating D. C. R. Stuart. Results:—

THE AMATEUR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION CHAMPIONSHIPS.

London, Saturday, 4th July 1908.

The Championships were held in London to-day and some good performances were put up. Archibald established a new record for the Polo Jump clearing 12 feet which is 3 inches higher than the previous best. Gillis' throw of 164 feet 5⅜ inches with the Hammer beats the former record by 13⅜ inches. Appended are results:—

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

THE entries for Tollygunge Gymkhana which we publish elsewhere are well above the average and though there are many duplicates fields should be fair throughout and provided that Jupiter Pluvius stays his hand for a bit a very good afternoon's sport may be anticipated. Among the entries are several new comers—Jacky, Ebony, Erastras, Ungaba, Furlong, Grey Granite, and Paddy II. Of these Ebony is a small black horse which Mr. Masmarnah bought in the cold weather, good looking, in fact on the showy side but has never galloped yet in public. Erastras is a three-year-old Cimmaron colt for which Mr. Rowan gave a good price "down under" last year and of whose future he has a great opinion. He is a speedy looking chestnut, but we are not to have the pleasure of seeing him gallop this time as he has knocked himself slightly and is therefore a non-starter. Ungaba is, we believe, the pony Mr. Ballantyne has just purchased from Messrs. Milton and Co., and is said to be something very special in the chasing line. Furlong is reported an ordinary sort of hack pony with a slight turn of speed. Grey Granite is of the slow paperchaser style. Jacky and Paddy II. are unknown to us.

LOCH LILY and Killarney are both entered for horse as well as pony events which is a wise move on the owner's part as they will no doubt get quite impossible weights to carry among the little runs, as otherwise it will be impossible to get half of those entered within the rideable weight limit.

BY the way it may interest our readers to know that Sache in Park Street has a lot of really good photographs of different aspects of the last meeting at Tollygunge, which are for sale at a moderate price and will be good to look back on in days to come as reminders of pleasant afternoon's racing at Calcutta's most charming club. Another good thing in this line will be the Paperchase Records which are at last in Messrs. Thacker Spink's hands and will soon be on sale at about Rs. 10 a copy. They have been compiled with great care, are absolutely up to date and copiously illustrated. It is to be hoped that from now on a yearly record will be produced—a book devoted to paperchases and the races for hunters run in connection therewith well illustrated would always command a certain sale and be of great interest to many.

For the first book subscribers are asked to send in their names to Messrs. Thacker Spink as there is no money to spare for advertising and by so doing they will greatly facilitate the work of the paperchase committee.

THE course was advertised to be open for fast work on Tuesday and pretty well every race horse in Calcutta came down for the chance of a sprint. However, the turf was too soft for the authorities to take the risk of letting them gallop over the track and they had to be content with sprinting across the centre. They all went for this short burst Galstaun's, Smallman's, Piper's and Bott's lots. There was also a certain amount of jumping. Merry Elsie (Gee) and Clodian (Mr. Barrow) went over three or four flights, the mare who is a bad handful baulking badly. Roland (Gee) and Parole (Bloss) did a school next. The latter who is now Mr. M. Turner's property went, like the straight old horse he is, but Mr. Pugh's big chestnut pulled his rider about a good deal and did not go at all freely. Foy, Mulison, Envious and Pennant were sent round in the cage and all shaped well.

THE Channel Swim is once more being attempted. Reuter wires the splendid effort of Jabez Wolffe on Monday last. Wolffe was in the water 13 hours 47 minutes and covered 35 miles, finally giving up within a mile of the French coast.

THE Ascot Stakes provided a contretemps. D'Orsay was severely kicked at the post by Cuffs and took no part in the race; but having come under starters' orders was, of course, considered a runner.

THE tragi-comedy of last year's theft of the Gold Cup is responsible for an innovation at Ascot. The glittering trophies are securely boxed in a glass-case and guarded by two worried-looking policemen. Why the policemen looked so worried presently becomes apparent. It was not a sense of responsibility that oppressed them, but the stock remark of the jocular racegoer, "Going to lose the Cup this year?" The question was fired at them twice a minute. Elderly gentlemen with snowy spats, smooth-faced striplings in their first frock-coats, even gentle ladies found the opportunity irresistible. So the wrinkles grew in the brows of the two guardians of the plate, and the answer, "Hope not, sir," came gruffer and gruffer as the afternoon advanced.

IN our issue of the 18th June we published a special cable giving the result of the race for the Grand Prix de Paris, further details will be found in our London Sporting Letter. The race is, perhaps, not so great a fashionable event as it was, but popular interest in the nearest French approach to Derby Day is as great as ever, 180,000 people paid for admission to stands and enclosures. We learn from an exchange that the stream of people to the course was immense, every kind of vehicle on the road and vessel in the river being employed in carrying sightseers. There were 11,250 vehicles, of which 2,200 were motors, at the course. The takings at the gates amounted to £18,000, and the takings at the parimutuel to £176,634, the amount of the betting on the Grand Prix alone being £68,000.

The three English competitors in the great race, Mountain Apple, Sir Archibald, and St. Magnus, proved a sad disappointment. The first started coughing and was withdrawn, while the other two were outclassed on the long course of a mile and seven furlongs. Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt's North-East—the owner's second string, Sea Sick II., being not in good condition—won by half a length from his French rivals.

In celebration of his success Mr. Vanderbilt gave £800 to the poor of Paris, £40 to the Jockeys' Hospital at Chantilly, and £40 to the Jockeys' Distress Fund. Mr. Vanderbilt, who has a beautiful country house at Poissy, on the outskirts of Paris, commenced to patronise the French turf many years ago. He won the French Derby and other important races with Maintenon in 1906, and divided the Derby this year with Sea Sick II., who afterwards hurried across to Epsom for the English Derby, in which he ran fifth.

OPINION is in a state of chaos as to the exact effect of the new Anti-Gambling Laws enforced this month on the future of betting and horse-racing in New York State. For the moment betting, except for well-known sporting men of undoubted financial standing, has been extinguished.

"On the Gravesend race track yesterday, as I personally assured myself, wires the correspondent of a London contemporary, it was as hard to place a bet as to obtain a drink in a rigid prohibition territory. More than three hundred policemen watched the observance of the new laws with ceaseless vigilance. Though bets were made by old stagers, who whispered offers to bookmakers or recorded bets by means of a kind of deaf and dumb finger language, the general public was absolutely excluded from such transactions. Anybody making an entry in a book was liable to instant arrest.

The new Acts precipitated a short-lived riot on the track, where a crowd of 200 idle bookmakers jeered and hooted the police and attempted to rescue one of their number who had been arrested for violating the new laws. Eleven arrests altogether were effected, but three of the prisoners were subsequently released, as the magistrate held that it was no crime to offer to make a bet. Others who accepted bets were held for trial.

The Jockey Club and police authorities have arranged for Monday a series of test cases to determine the exact scope of the new laws. If these cases show that private betting cannot be punished as a crime, leading sportsmen will organise a club on the lines of Tattersall's, where members will be able to settle transactions periodically among themselves. But the day of the small betting man has irretrievably gone, and with it probably public interest in horse-racing. The railways have already decided to reduce by one-half the number of excursion trains to the race tracks. Some half-dozen agents of the various large stable-owners, it is reported, left for England yesterday for the purpose of looking over the ground in that country.

If the estimates published by the newspapers are correct the new laws mean a shrinkage in value of race-track property in New York State from £16,000,000 to £6,000,000.

Kentucky, too, if those are right who affirm that horse-racing cannot exist without betting, will be deprived of a gigantic source of profit, for it has invested over £2,000,000 in farms for training and rearing thorough-breds destined for the Eastern markets. Yesterday, in fact, was a day of profoundest gloom for the railway employés who run special trains to the races, stable-hands, jockeys, trainers, waiters, cab drivers, and restaurant-keepers, who to the number of over 100,000 are entirely dependent on the great race meetings.

Though no definite statements on the subject are available, persistent reports are current of the intention of several owners of racing studs to export their horses to Great Britain."

THE sudden death of Lord Derby from heart failure occurred on the 14th June at his Kentish residence, Holwood, Hayes. With his career as a statesman we have little to do, but we are concerned with his record as a lavish supporter of English racing. He had been a member of the Jockey Club since 1894, though he left it to his son and successor, Lord Stanley, to take an executive part in the government of the turf as a steward of the club. Few families have had a longer and none a more honourable connection with racing than the house of Stanley.

It was to the twelfth earl that the institution of the Derby and Oakes was due. The big race, of course, derived its name from the earl, while the Oaks got its title from the valley of Lambert's Oaks, attached to his residence at Banstead. His successor preferred the hobbies of zoology and ornithology to the turf, and spent something like £15,000 a year on them, having an enormous aviary and menagerie in Knowsley Park, but the taste for racing reappeared in the fourteenth earl, the celebrated "Rupert of debate," and it has suffered no lapse down to the present.

Curiously enough, however, as showing the elusive character of the great Epsom race, it has been only once won by an Earl of Derby, which was in 1787, the name of the horse being Sir Peter Teazle His noble owner so named him because of hi marriage with the celebrated actress Miss Farren, one of whose most distinguished impersonations was that of Lady Teazle in the "School for Scandal."

With Canterbury Pilgrim and Keystone II. the deceased nobleman twice won the Oaks. He was far from being a regular attendant at meetings, but he visited Epsom in order to see Keystone II. win on account of the animal being home bred and this fact gratified him even more than did her success. "I bred her," was his response to one of his congratulators.

Keystone II. was also expected to win the St. Leger, which, however, fell to the Duke of Westminster's Troutbeck, and it may be stated that the "black jacket and white cap" of t

Stanleys have never yet been carried to victory in the great Doncaster race. "It must be fatality," said Lord Stanley after the defeat of Keystone II. Lord Derby was the last of the nobles to go racing in what may be termed "semi-state." He entertained largely at Knowsley for the Liverpool meetings, and the procession of carriages to the course at Aintree was an almost feudal sight.

His lordship's best year as an owner was in 1906, when his winnings amounted to £32,926. He naturally liked to win at Liverpool, and his sideboards came to groan under their weight of spring, summer, and autumn cups.

Lord Stanley, who now succeeds to the title, is this year the senior steward of the Jockey Club, and one of the most energetic and industrious men who have ever filled this onerous position. He has himself owned horses.

At the Emperor's jubilee trotting meeting at Vienna the principal item on the card was the classical Summer Prize, mile heats, which brought out the best international horses. Mr. Louis Winans's American horse Silico started favourite and won, trotting the first heat in 2mins. 8-3/10secs. and lowering the European mile record.

Our London Sporting letter to-day gives details of the racing at Ascot, the big fight between Burns and Squires in Paris, the final for the Hurlingham Champion Polo Cup, and some interesting 'Varsity rowing.

A London Correspondent writes on the 19th June:—The college crews from Oxford and Cambridge are arriving at Henley, and it is expected that the list of entries (which close on Friday) will be made public on Saturday. Entries are likely to be numerous, but quality will suffer this year from the proximity of the Olympic meeting. Foreign entries are barred, and it is also understood that English oarsmen selected for the Olympic races will not compete. This will probably prevent Leander putting on any crews, and Magdalen (Oxford) will also relinquish the idea of going for the Grand, owing to the fact that A. G. Kirby (and possibly C. R. Cudmore) will be wanted for one of the Olympic eights. Christ Church (Oxford) will put in for the Grand, and Eton College may also be expected to compete.

The Oxford entries at Henley will probably include two eights from Christ Church, fours from Magdalen and Trinity, eights from Brasenose and Wadham, and an eight and four from New College. There will also be some Oxford scullers for the Diamonds.

Trinity Hall will enter for the Grand, but they will be without D. C. R. Stuart and H. E. Kitching who are rowing in the Cambridge eight for the Olympic. The Hall are practising at Bourne End, where they are staying at the Quarry Hotel. They were out there yesterday for the first time. Jesus College will send an eight and four. First Trinity two eights and possibly two fours, and Magdalen an eight. Lady Margaret, Emmanuel, Caius, and Pembroke are also likely to be represented.

The Amateur Rowing Association does not approve of "writing for the press" under conditions. At a Committee meeting held on the 10th June, a communication was laid before those present calling their attention to the practice of some coaches and competitors of writing articles to the Press criticising themselves and their opponents during practice for a race in which they were concerned. The Committee unanimously expressed their strong disapproval of this objectionable practice, and it was decided to draft a resolution on the matter for submission to the next meeting.

For the English sculling championship Geo. Towns and Ernest Barry have been matched for £400 and the race is to come off on the 12th October over the Putney to Mortlake course.

Towns, who hails originally from Newcastle, Hunter River, New South Wales, came to England in 1897, and during six or seven years, rowed three times for the English championship. First, in a sweepstakes in 1898, with W. A. Barry, Geo. Bubear, and James Wray (New South Wales), in which the Hunter River man was unluckily beaten by Barry (when he looked all over a winner) through his boat being damaged by a submerged log; then, in a match against W. A. Barry, in 1899, which Towns won; and, thirdly, in a match with Jas. Wray in 1900, when Towns won easily. Since the latter race there has been no match for the English Sculling Championship, although Towns went to Canada in 1901, and beat Jacob Gill Gaudaur for the Championship of the World, on the Lake of Woods, Rat Portage, Ontario, and has engaged in sundry other world's championship matches in Australia.

Ernest Barry, who is a brother of W. A. Barry, tried hard to force Towns into a match some three years ago, but Towns pleaded business, and then there was a break in the negotiations through the Australian objecting to make a match on the ground that he was not to receive sufficient expenses. The result was Towns was obliged to resign the English championship and return the challenge cup to the trustees, and lose the value of his two successes towards making the trophy his absolute property. This occurred two years ago.

Few better players ever went on a football field than James Crabtree, whose death at Lozells, Birmingham, was announced on the 18th June. He played in fourteen internationals for England and seven times represented the English League against the Scottish League. He was one of the few men who could play in any position. For his club—Aston Villa—he was generally in the half-back line, and for England in internationals he generally played at back. But his versatility was tremendous, and he played in five positions on the field in international football.

It is now possible to give quite a fair idea of the entries in various of the branches of sport comprising the fourth Olympiad. There are over 1,200 entries in the athletic section, 350 for swimming, 300 for cycling, 300 for gymnastics, 200 for fencing, and 200 for wrestling. When to these figures is added the entries for the numerous other sides of sport included in the Games, some little idea of the magnitude of the Olympiad is conveyed. One thing is very certain—a series of gatherings will be held the like of which the world has never seen.

The Marathon Race alone has attracted over seventy names. A rapid glance through the list reveals that practically the whole of the great distance runners—at home and abroad—have entered. It will be observed that Tom Longboat is down for Canada, but it is not certain that he will be a starter. It has yet to be decided whether his status is satisfactory. Following are the entries—to which it is just possible there may be one or two additions—for what has been described as the Blue Riband of the running world:—

United Kingdom.—F. Appleby, T. Jack, A. Duncan, G. G. Beale, F. Lord, J. Price, H. F. Barrett, F. B. Thompson, E. Barnes, A. Wyatt, S. Stevenson, W. T. Clarke.

Canada.—F. Simpson, H. Lawson, W. Goldsboro, G. Goulding, W. Wood, E. Cotter, F. Noseworthy, J. Caffery, T. Longboat, G. Lister, A. Burn, J. Tait.

United States.—J. Forsham, S. H. Hatch, J. J. Hayes, Lee, Lors, T. P. Morrissey, O'Mara, Ryan, Thibeau, Jewanina, Welton, Wood.

Australasia.—J. M. Lynch, W. V. Aiken, G. B. Blake.

South Africa.—J. M. Baker, C. Hefferon, A. B. Mole, C. E. Stevens.

Greece.—G. Couloumberdes, A. Contonlakis.

Finland.—Nieminen.

Prussia.—G. Lind.

Holland.—W. T. Braams, A. C. H. Vosbergen, W. W. Wakker, W. F. Thennissen, G. J. M. Buff.

Belgium.—F. Celis.

Italy.—P. Dorando, U. Blasi, A. Cocca.

Germany.—H. Muller, F. Reiser, P. Nettelbeck.

Sweden.—G. Toruros, J. F. Svanberg, J. G. Peterson, S. L. Landgvist, J. Lindgvist, J. T. Bergvall, J. G. A. Lundberg.

Austria.—E. Rath, F. Kureton.

Bohemia.—A. Nejedky.

Denmark.—R. C. Hansen, J. F. Jorgensen.

Hungary.—L. Merenyi.

The Calcutta Rowing Club will hold their first regatta on the Alipore Canal on Saturday 15th August 1908, entries closing on the 5th idem. The programme is as follows:—

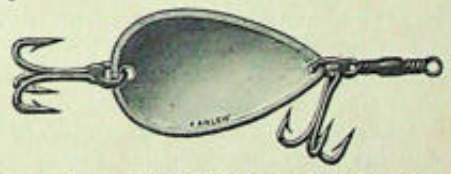
The Hoare Cup.—½ mile. Fixed seats for junior oarsmen who have never won a rowing race.

Junior Sculls.—½ mile. In whiffs.

Tub Pairs.—On slides. ¼ mile. Entries by pairs. Lady Cox optional.

Scratch Fours.—Entries on the Bank.

Dinghy Race.—For Ladies. ¼ mile.



Canoe Race.—¼ mile.

Entries for the Hoare Cup must be sent in to the Honorary Secretary as soon as possible to enable crews to be drawn and practice commenced.

The fortnightly regatta at Naini Tal on the 27th ultimo was put through in fine weather, and a good programme provided excellent sport. The Men's Double Sculls opened the proceedings and was rowed in heats and finally won by Messrs. Hollins and Rouse. The Mixed Fours went to the crew composed of Mrs. Hogg, Mrs. Crawford, Major Hogg and Mr. Rouse, and Major Grove won the Novice Sculls. There were 22 entries for the Robinson Crusoe Sailing Match—each crew, consisting of a man and a lady in a canoe to paddle to a certain line and construct a sail out of some elementary material provided by the Committee, and to sail home; no paddling allowed on the return journey. Won by Major and Mrs. Grove. The Navigation Stakes attracted twelve entries—crews of two ladies to sail under sealed orders in canoes, and carry out instructions given in their orders, which were in nautical terms, using a compass and losing marks for mistakes. Won by Mrs. Grove and Miss Winby. The winning crew in the Go-as-you-Please Race was composed as follows.—Mrs. Westcott, Miss Ottley, Captains Pollok and Conningham and two others. The Mussack Race, which terminated the regatta, was won by Mr. Hamilton.

Appended are the results of the important cricket matches played in England during the week:—

The Players beat the Gentlemen by seven wickets.

Gloucestershire beat Northamptonshire by 156 runs.

Kent beat Leicestershire by 190 runs.

The match between Surrey and Warwickshire was drawn.

Lancashire beat Notts by three wickets.

Yorkshire beat Somerset by eight wickets.

Hampshire beat Sussex by nine wickets.

The Gentlemen of England beat Cambridge University by four wickets.

Derbyshire beat Essex by seven wickets.

Warwickshire beat Hampshire by six wickets.

Kent beat Derbyshire by an innings and 234 runs.

The match between Oxford University and the Gentlemen of England was drawn.

Reuter wires, that in connection with the proposed visit of an Australian cricket team in 1909, the Advisory County Committee has resolved that Marylebone will not invite any Colonial team in 1909, except for a triangular contest. It is hoped that Australia will now reconsider the decision arrived at in May last.

The very latest in "howlers" from London schools:—"The modern name for Gaul is Vinegar." "Double dealing is when you buy wholesale to sell retail." "To dog a man's footsteps is to set your dog at him." "Common sense is sense that you have to think about a bit before you see it." "Peeress is the property of a peer." "Amatory verses are verses composed by an amateur." "Income is a yearly tax." "'Reductio ad absurdum' means 'there is no sense in reduction.'" "Yew is a she-sheep." "Dodo is a bird that is nearly decent now." "A knave is a man who shows people their places in church." "Making anyone understand anything is called 'exasperating.'" "An epistle is the wife of an Apostle." "Jacob was a tailor who made coats of many colours." "The foolish virgins were them as didn't get married."

The last Gymkhana of the Simla season was held at Annandale on Saturday last, when an attractive programme of five events was discussed. The first was for gentlemen—to jump a hurdle, catch up a spear and take a peg. This was won by Colonel Brooke with Major Turner second. The Kadir Cup for ladies to burst a balloon, carried about the ground, was run off in three heats and eventually won by Miss Du Cane Smithe. The third event was the Affinity Stakes—couples changing saddles, won by Mrs. Macleod and Captain Howell, with Mrs. Knaggs and Captain Fane second. The Bridge Stakes came next—ladies to pick out a suite of cards from a basket and race back to the winning post. First Miss Mahon, second Mrs. Knaggs. The Affinity Mathematical Stakes concluded the programme—lady to solve a simple problem and partner to run with answer to the winning post. Won by Captain and Miss Deane. The Baring Prize for most marks obtained by a lady during the season was won by Miss Mahon with 40 points. The Thackersey Prize for gentleman under the same conditions was won by Colonel Victor Brooke with 30 points; he also took the Club Cup with 16 points.

The ridiculous pampering of canine pets grows apace. The quilted cradles, elaborate cushions, and other accessories of those unfortunate little beggars the Maltese, Toy—Yorkshire, Pekingese et hoc are now suspended by the folding travelling bed! In future dogs who fare sumptuously and live lives of petted indolence can travel with their owners without fear of risks from being put to bed in damp or draughty resting places. The folding bed, which can be taken with mistress's, or perhaps, master's luggage, makes comfort for Fido certain.

These little beds, which are being shown at the Burlington Arcade Emporium, in London, resemble glorified dolls' beds. They are upholstered in smart and attractive styles, and some of them even have gilded tapestries and bindings. To make the luxuriousness complete there are pretty soft cushions. Special little rugs are also being sold to go with these precious beds. Footwarmers and "nighties" will follow ere long as a matter of course.

The following alteration has been made in the N. I. K. A. Rules with regard to the registration of dogs:—

"All dogs exhibited under N. I. K. A. Rules must be registered with the N. I. K. A. In the case of dogs registered in England, the Kennel Club registration receipt (which will be returned) must accompany the application for registration to the Secretary, N. I. K. A. In any case of change of name the old name must be shown in brackets after the new name. The fee in every case will be Re. 1."

(N. B.—If an owner is not in possession of the K.C. registration receipt, a copy can always be obtained from the Kennel Club, 7, Grafton Street. Bond Street, London, W.)

It is just possible some of our readers may still be able to blush on momentous occasions, such as can may be interested to read the latest definition supplied by "A Physician" to The Globe. He says a blush is "a temporary erythema and calorific effulgence of the physiognomy, etiologised by the perceptiveness of the sensorium when in a predicament of unequilibrity from a sense of shame, anger, or other cause, eventuating in a paresis of the vasomotor nervous filaments of the facial capillaries, whereby, being divested of their elasticity, they are suffused with radiance emanating from an intimidated pericordia."

Nothing seems more clearly to show the extent to which the available spaces of the world are being circumscribed and curtailed than the limitations which are now—of strict and beneficent necessity—placed on the shooter of big game.

Alaska, for instance, is in some measure a new country; but already the conditions are vastly altered from those of the days when Mr. Reade was collecting for that unequalled museum of heads and trophies which Mr. Hornaday has succeeded in acquiring for New York.

The actual number of the big game has decreased, states Country Life, and the shooter is so fenced about with restrictions as to close times and the specimens of each kind permitted him that he can hardly think himself to be in a wild country any longer.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 19th June 1908.

Continuous rain, fog, and gloom for the first two days of Ascot! Need anything more be said to convey an impression of what the beginning of this week has been? Ascot robbed of its picturesque and picnic side practically loses its character and anything more depressing than this year's Royal Hunt Cup Day I cannot imagine. Elsewhere you have details of the racing. It is satisfactory to add that the Gold Vase was not spirited away on this occasion!

Despite the weather the London season goes merrily along. Where we manage to stow away our visitors is a mystery: we are so overcrowded that in the central district, hotels and boarding houses are crammed to their utmost capacity and are often put to it to meet the demands of even a fraction of the applicants for beds. I understand, however, that in Bloomsbury a few landings and a portion of a bathroom are still to be had at special prices. The Anglo-Indian is very much in evidence now: one meets him everywhere. On Monday I met and saw no less than fourteen Calcutta holiday makers in a walk down Regent Street, the Strand, and Fleet Street. The "Ditchers' Dinner" is on the tapis as I write; it is to be hoped the response will be better than it was last year when the promoters had to abandon the gathering.

The Richmond Horse Show this week—the seventeenth of the series—was held in very unsettled weather, but it was a complete success. There were over five hundred entries competing for the £2,000 money prizes and twenty cups; taken all round, quality was exceptionally high and the jumping competitions and driving extra first class; the performance of Mr. Grange's Rufus, who cleared 5 feet 11 inches, was greatly appreciated by the huge crowd. For the fourth year in succession, Mr. J. H. Stokes won the championship with Astral and Mr. Walter Winans was, as usual, almost invincible in the harness classes.

The great International Horse Show opens at Olympia this afternoon. No less a sum than £100,000 is the estimated value of the animals stabled in Olympia, but the total worth of all the horses to be shown in the ring will approximate £250,000. Prizes to the value of £10,000 are offered, and exhibitions of remarkable feats of horsemanship are promised. There are countless novelties. For instance, in the quick-change class four-in-hand teams will be started, stopped, the horses changed, and started again. Four men and the guard will be allowed to assist in changing the horses. Here is a suggestion for your next show at Tollygunge!

I announced in my last letter the impending Suffragist march through London. It eventuated last Saturday and was altogether a most remarkable demonstration and in several particulars pleasantly differed from the boisterous parades which have incommoded the West-end traffic recently. To begin with, the ladies observed strict punctuality. The organisers have an eye for effect and the starting hour of the three miles long column was fixed for the moment when City men were returning homewards. The ladies, therefore, secured an audience at once important and sympathetic. The earnestness of the demonstrators was sufficient in itself to win the approval of the crowd, but in addition to the sincerity of the women there was self-restraint, and an obvious desire to shrink from advertisement that commanded admiration. Noise is generally considered a valuable weapon in the Suffragist armoury, and the events of the past year or two have led many to believe that the leaders of the feminist movement seek the fierce light of publicity. The ladies who braved the trials of a route march on Saturday adopt different methods, and few will say that the cause they plead is not advanced by tactics in keeping with their sex.

Yet another link between North and South London! Verily of the boring of tunnels and the construction of tubes there is no end, London some day will get uncommonly like a white-ant eaten log. The latest is the Rotherhithe tunnel which was opened by the Prince of Wales the other day with appropriate ceremony and demonstration. It has cost two millions, has given steady employment to eight hundred men for three and a half years, and has been completed eighteen months withincontract time.

I see the Semi-Teetotal League, under distinguished "support" is gathering great strength. The Daily Mail is working it for all it is worth, business men in particular are apparently most enthusiastic about it. Everywhere one now sees the badge of the League displayed on the lapels of the coats covering the manly bosoms of those who pledge themselves to take "No Drinks Between Meals"—the motto of the devoted band. It is possible that many of the disciples will make up for hours of abstinence by absorbing far too much fluid with their food and so become martyrs to indigestion in their zeal to promote the cause of temperance. Nous verrons, but there is no denying the fact that the fad is making remarkable progress, helped thereto by Lord Roberts and his fellow enthusiasts among the aristocracy, the legal profession and the services.

Mr. Lewis Waller and his large army of lady admirers had a great night at the Lyric last Saturday when "The White Man" was displaced by "The Explorer" written by that prolific and versatile playright Mr. Somerset Maugham, who has now four plays running in London. The story is by no means new: the hero is a gentleman who sacrifices himself in order to protect a friend and is rewarded by nearly losing the girl of his heart. As "The Explorer" Mackenzie, Mr. Waller has unlimited scope for the self-sacrificing business and the wit and smartness of the greater part of the dialogue help matters considerably. True the hero and most of the characters neither speak nor behave as ordinary beings, but what would you have in melodrama? Mr. Lewis Waller has not a great many opportunities, but he played like a real hero—a strong, brave man, every inch—as Mackenzie. Mr A. E. George, as his friend, is the mouthpiece for most of Mr. Maugham's best things, and he fired them off with fine effect. Miss Evelyn Millard played very tenderly as Lucy; Mr. Shiel Barry was excellent as the weak-kneed George; Mr. Charles Rock gave a capital little study as a Scotch doctor; and Miss Eva Moore and Miss Mary Rorke were delightful in other small parts. What need to add that copious tears and unstinted applause greeted the play.

M. Coquelin Aine began a season at His Majesty's Theatre last Monday night with Victorien Sardou's historical drama, "L'Affaire des Poisons"—a play in which the famous French actor has proved highly successful in Paris. In it Sardou is shown at his best as a dramatic architect. An involved and melodramatic story is made powerful and engrossing by the perfection of the stagecraft. The plot is concerned with the attempt by Madame de Montespan, the mistress of King Louis XIV., to poison her Royal lover from motives of jealousy, and with the manner in which the plot is frustrated by the Abbe Griffard. There are, however, several side issues—mostly connected with poison. All the situations have grip, and the drama is judiciously sprinkled with comedy.

M. Coquelin the elder is admirably fitted by the part of Griffard. His wonderful power of facial expression, his telling gestures, his expressive voice, his perfect mastery over scenes of comedy are shown at their best. In short, he gives a wholly finished and artistic performance. A performance of great ability was also forthcoming from Mlle. Gilda Darthy, who, as Mme. de Montespan, ran up the scale of the emotions, played with fire and passion, but never over-coloured her scenes, and invested the part with a dignity that won the sympathy of the audience for an unsympathetic character. M. Jean Coquelin, as Colbert, and the rest of a strong cast played admirably, and the reception of a large and fashionable audience was decidedly hearty.

Suddenly confronted with Mr. Cyril Maude in the rôle of a self-sacrificing hero one might perhaps consider that he would hardly fill the eye; let me hasten to say that the impression would be unjust, for it is generally conceded that as Lascelles in "The Flag Lieutenant," now running at the Playhouse, he appears in quite the best part he has had for some time. It is a good, healthy piece, by no means lacking in interest and dramatic situation, the story is well worked out and it really gives a true picture of Naval life and sailor men. The central idea of the plot is this: Lieutenant Lascelles and Major William Thesiger are old friends of totally different temperament. The sailor is a harum-scarum, happy-go-lucky, boyish individual, who has lost much of his interest in his profession since coming into a fortune of £4,000 a year. Thesiger is one of the world's unlucky sons, grave, reserved, keen on promotion that he may be able to marry the woman he loves. These two men are members of a small British force surrounded by fanatics at Kandia. Their only chance of salvation lies in a message being got through to the cable station in the town. Thesiger sees his opportunity of distinction at last. Disguised as a native, he is about to make the attempt to reach the cable station when a chance bullet stuns him, and Lascelles goes instead, unbeknown to a soul save the doctor. He is successful in the attempt, but Thesiger's wound has the effect of depriving him of all memory of the events of the few previous days, and Lascelles, sorry for his friend's bad luck, decides to let him get the credit for having gone on the heroic journey to the cable station. The result is that Thesiger is made to believe that he has forgotten the adventure with the rest of the day's happenings, and he gets promotion and all manner of honours, while Lascelles, who has no explanation to offer for his absence from the camp at a critical moment, is under suspicion of having shown the white feather. Some complications arise, but all is satisfactorily adjusted without Thesiger ever discovering that he has been honoured for something he did not do. Mr. Aubrey Smith has a strong part as Thesiger and he played it well; and among others in the cast deserving of special mention are Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Miss Winnifred Emery, and Mr. Arthur Holmes Gore. The piece is certain of success.

A diverting controversy has been going on in various papers, notably a certain Sunday journal and a certain evening sheet, on the subject of our music-hall comedians. Are they really funny? Are they original? Do they sing always the same sort of song in the same sort of way? Whether a lion comique is funny or not, of course, is less a matter of fact than a matter of taste. As to the small matter of originality, that is soon settled. None of us is original—except in the sense that originality is simple skill in concealing the source of one's inspiration.

If the music-hall star sings always the same sort of song in the same way, that is what he is paid for. Mr. George Alexander plays nominally many parts—but if he were not always George Alexander he might be a successful County Councillor, but he would not be a successful actor and the darling of the matinee girl. So is it with Lewis Waller; and so is it in only lesser degree with all the popular actors. The popular actresses could not be anyone else but themselves if they tried. As a wise Frenchman once said, "Your stage ladies (I except your two or three real actresses) do not need brains; and Clarkson and the picture postcard makers can do the rest." The music-hall artist is paid to be himself or to repeat under various aliases the same old character in the same imperfect rhyme and catchy air. Why blame him because he does it?

* * * * * *

On 24th June, Madame Melba celebrates at Covent Garden Theatre the completion of twenty consecutive years' artistic service by giving a matinee, at which their Majesties the King and Queen have graciously intimated their intention to be present, and the proceeds of which will go to the London Hospital. The boxes and orchestra stalls, the only reserved seats left, are already bringing exceptional prices. Madame Melba herself started by subscribing forty guineas for her own box, and many friends have followed her initiative, the highest price so far subscribed for one being seventy-five guineas.

A large and representative gathering of friends and admirers of Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree entertained him at dinner at the Savoy Hotel, on the 14th instant, to celebrate his twenty-first anniversary as a London theatrical manager. The Right Hon'ble Sir Edward Carson, K.C., M.P., occupied the chair, and he was supported by a big gathering of social and professional notabilities.

Those of your readers who remember Sir William Burkitt, C.S., erstwhile judge of the Allahabad High Court, will hear of his death on the 16th instant with regret: his remains will be cremated at Golders' Green to-morrow.

Reuter has announced the death of Lord Derby, Statesman and Sportsman. In the morning of the 14th instant Lord and Lady Derby attended service at Kefton Parish Church, near Bromley, when he seemed in his usual health. In the evening he fell to the floor at his residence, apparently in a fainting fit. A doctor was summoned, but could only say that death was due to heart failure. I see his heir Lord Stanley, a staunch supporter of the turf, has resigned his position as Senior Steward of the Jockey Club owing to the death of his father.

The Right Hon'ble Sir John Day—"Hanging Day" as he was often called—for many years a Queen's Bench Division Judge, died at Newbury on the 14th instant. He retired from the bench in 1901 on account of age, and he would have completed his 82nd year on Friday next. Latterly he had somewhat regained strength, but a relapse occurred and he expired at 2-30 A.M. on Saturday. Sir John was formerly a man of considerable vigour. He was fond of walking, and still more of riding. For years he carried out the old-fashioned health-preserving plan of going circuit on horseback. He would ride all the way from Salisbury to Dorchester, and thence to Exeter, precisely as judges had done in the days of Elizabeth or the Stuarts.

The Vagrant.

Shikar.

FIVE TIGERS WITH FIVE SHOTS.

We noted some time ago the brilliant success of His Highness Nawab Mahomed Nasrulla Khan, Bahadur, Crown Prince of Bhopal. We are now able to present our readers with a photographic reproduction of his record bag of tigers. A successful right and left at tigers is not uncommon, and three in three shots has often been heard of. One Paul, an old time shikari, frequently mentioned in Williamson's Oriental Sports having been credited with the feat on more than one occasion and the honour has been shared by a few modern Nimrods. But four in four shots is something one does not often have the pleasure of announcing.

This good luck befel the Crown Prince of Bhopal not long ago when out of a beat in the Gadhi jungles four full-grown tigers were brought to bag in five minutes with a single shot apiece. But this remarkable performance was eclipsed recently when in the Badni jungle this lucky and distinguished sporting noble got five in five shots! A writer in Country Life adds that the weapon used on both occasions was a Rigby's ·450 cordite rifle and the projectile the soft nosed, nickel-covered, hollow-pointed bullet with which most Indian sportsmen are familiar. Not a single shot went amiss, not one of these nine tigers wanted more than one bullet to bring him down, not one moved a step after being struck. What more can be said of the excellence of the shooting or the efficiency of the rifle.

Fishing.

AN ANGLER IN THE ANTIPODES.

I.

It occurred to me when I decided to spend a portion of my furlough in the antipodes that a few, perhaps more than a few, of my brethren who remain under the yoke in India might care to know my experiences with the view to shaping their own plans in the future. I have therefore decided to jot down a few observations in Tasmania, the first place in which I made a stay.

The object of my trip was primarily to shake off the effects of an unduly prolonged and intimate acquaintance with the plains of India and secondarily to catch trout.

As is now fairly well known most of the rivers in Tasmania and New Zealand have been stocked with English trout which have thriven amazingly. The same is true, I understand, of many of the rivers of New South Wales though the fact is not so well known.

I am now in a position to confirm to a great extent the stories, and a few of those stories which until recently I had regarded as fables, of the enormous size of the trout in some of the Tasmanian waters. I am also, alas! in a position to rub some of the gilt off many of the said stories and to disclose the brown gingerbread of prosaic and from the angler's point of view disappointing fact which it conceals.

My first discovery was that all the trout in Tasmania are not large. On my arrival in Launceston I was directed in the first place to St. Patrick's river. The good fellow and sportsman who directed me, and of whom I shall have more to say in another article, did so frankly on the ground that it was a duffer's river and therefore suitable for a new arrival. A second and to him I think less cogent reason, was that the St. Patrick's was the only river in the neighbourhood in which the water happened to be in good order.

I was as clay in his hands, and presently found myself jolting along in a vehicle known as a spring cart beside the small farmer in whose house I was to lodge.

A drive of 18 miles behind a mare, which might have gone well in the shafts of one of Pickford's vans, but which nature had not designed for any pace faster than a walk, brought us to a tiny farm in the mountains.

The buildings are all made of planks and roofed with shingles. They stand in the midst of a beautiful desolation of dead trees. Beyond the limits of the farm and the aforesaid desolation lies a luxurious forest. The trees in it are of enormous height. Many of them shoot up 80 and even 100 feet to the first fork as straight as the mast of a ship. They are all gums of various kinds—a species on which the bark is of a beautiful milk white colour, predominating.

When a settler takes a piece of land in the forest, or as they call it tree "bush," his first business is to clear the timber. To do this he rings the trees, and little by little, as they die and become brittle, he hacks or burns them down. Hence the first sign of a clearing is a cluster of dead trees standing like silvery ghosts in the middle of the green forest.

This method of clearing is wasteful in the extreme, as the wood of the ringed tres is useless for anything but firewood. As, however, there are no means of transporting the timber to a market, it is the only way in which clearing can be effected without an expense which the high price of labour in the colonies render prohibitive.

I have only to add that the bush in this neighbourhood grows on the sides and in the valleys of a fine range of hills. From the farm which is perched on one of these hillsides a fine view of verdure clad mountains unfolds itself while the little river in which I was to fish tinkles through the valley in the foreground.

The place is well worth a visit from the point of view of scenery alone; but to return to my fishing.

I sallied forth in the morning only to find that rain had fallen during the night and that in consequence the river was in flood.

I had not seen a trout for years, and this must be my excuse for catching a couple of the beauties on the worm.

A party of picnickers arrived at the farm about midday and started operations with the same bait. They made a bag of over 70 and went away delighted.

After catching the couple of fish aforesaid, I tried the fly, knowing that it would be useless, but impelled by the desire to feel what it was like to throw the fly in a trout stream once more.

When I gave up the fly I took a gun and shot rabbits which were fairly plentiful in the neighbourhood and are regarded as a pest.

In the course of a couple of days the flood went down and I began to catch fish. They were very shy and the fishable portion of the river is rather limited.

However I generally managed to bag from half a dozen to a dozen quarter pound fish in the course of the day. Fish have been caught in this river as heavy as a pound. I caught a couple which must have weighed nearly ¾lb., myself, but the average weight is about ¼ of a pound, and it is curious to observe how comparatively rare are fish which scale either below or above this average.

They are beautifully shaped trout, being very deep in proportion to their length, and fairly marked.

They are, however, poor eating, the flesh being white, flabby and muddy. Notwithstanding these drawbacks I put in a very pleasant week on this river.

The fish being as I have said extremely shy, I had to use the dry fly and the finest of casts. None but the most careful fishing gave any result in the shape of a rise. These difficulties served to put me on my mettle and lent a zest to the fishing which would have disappeared had the fish been easier to take.

I found that the Red Governor was a-out the most taking fly. Next came the Red Palmer and next to the Red Palmer a floating fly, whose name I forget, but which was very dark coloured with a long body which projected from the hook. Locally the fly is very little used indeed. The average Tasmanian who regards himself as a fly fisherman either impales a grasshopper on his hook and calls the dopping in which he indulges with this bait "fly fishing" or else he applies the lines to fishing with a gentle (!) when this refined lure is stuck on a fly.

The grasshopper is a most deadly bait and the users of the "hopper" as it is called, generally bring back heavier bags than those who stick to the unadorned fly.

This is not, however, a consideration which is likely to influence the latter class of fishermen.

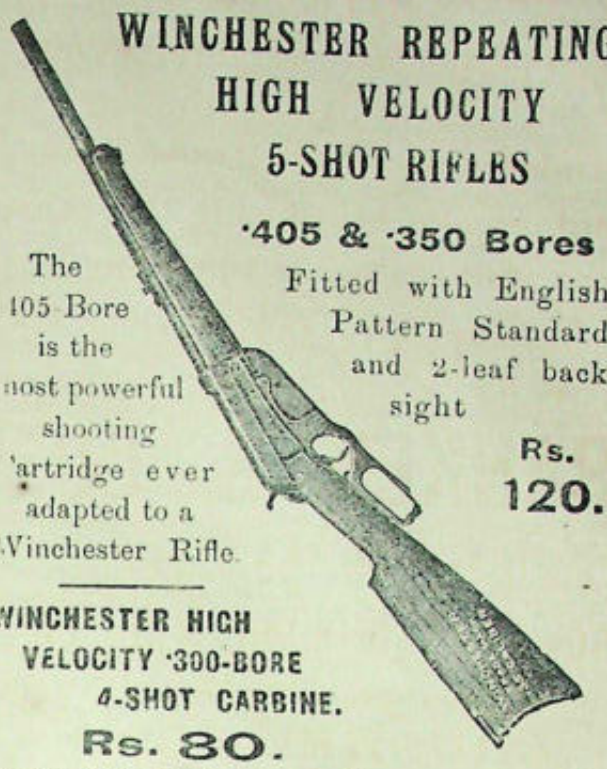
I many mention that on the St. Patrick's river I saw several specimens of the platypus. This queer animal is a sort of cross between a water rat and a duck. It has a duck's bill and it wings are so rudimentary that they might almost pass as rudimentary legs. It is covered with the closest and most delicate fur imaginable. So close and delicate as to be quite waterproof. The animal lives in the water for the most part and feeds on small fish, worms, etc. I have known of one being caught by a fisherman who was trying for trout with a worm. Those I saw were playing in the water—now lying at full length on the surface, now diving with the startling swiftness of a water rat. Various kinds of snakes abound in this locality and all of them are poisonous. Also, and most fortunately, none of them are aquarius. The tiger snake is the most dangerous, being a sleepy brute which does not get out of the way until he is trodden on. He then wakes up to some purpose.

Waders are required for the St. Patrick and indeed for most of the rivers which one fishes in Tasmania. On this point a word of warning is needed. I left an order with a rubber shop in Melbourne to make and send me a pair of waders. When they arrived I found them unfit to use. The material was of a flimsy kind which would not stand two days wear while the cut was such as to render it impossibe to put on a pair of boots.

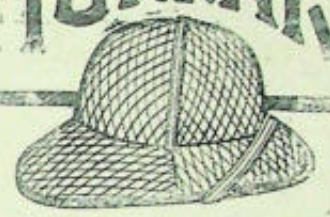
I sent them back with a polite request for a refund. The shop refused to accept the goods or to answer my letter. Result, I had to buy another pair in Launceston where Messrs. Allen and Slater stock the proper article.

I am thinking of presenting my Melbourne waders to the Tasmanian Tourist Association to be hung up in their rooms at Launceston as a curiosity—and a warning. I can recommend Richards' farm on the St. Patrick's to all who, notwithstanding my strictures on the fishing, care to visit this lovely place.

Richards is himself a fine specimen of the sturdy settler, and the existence of his thriving little farm is a standing proof of the grit which has seen him through a long fight with nature.



The labour of clearing and settling the bush is appalling and Richards cleared and settled his farm singlehanded. I have since met others like him. They are a fine breed of men and make one proud of one's kin. Mrs. Richards is homely, talkative and assiduous in looking after the comforts of her visitors. She makes the best bred mother and woman in the neighbourhood.



Their terms are moderate—30s. a week. On the whole I consider the St. Patrick's trip well worth doing. On leaving this river I went to a place called Crissy, where I did some more fishing. Of this however, I will speak in another article.

Secretary and Clerk of Course.—H. DONNE, ESQ.

First Day, Thursday, 2nd July

THE first day of the Bangalore races not only produced a really good attendance, but the racing was better than any seen here of late years. The weather was showery but not hopelessly bad, and only an occasional rush to the shelter of the pavilion was necessary. There was some fairly heavy punting, and the half dozen or so of bookmakers were said to have had a bad day, in fact one or two of them probably did, but there is plenty of time yet, and one or two races are so open that punters will have to be clever to pick winners. An objection laid against the winner of the second race, on the ground that he had not carried the proper weight is not decided as I write. There is nothing much more to be said about the day, which was a very fair afternoon's sport indeed. It was a pity that Southall, owing to sudden indisposition was unable to ride Bell Dhu. In his hands, the horse would probably have won. Results :—

THE PADDOCK PLATE.—Rs. 1000. Of which the second pony will receive Rs. 100. A handicap for ponies 14-2 and under, which have not won a flat race of the value of Rs. 200 or over, since 31st March 1907. 5 furlongs.

Third Day, Tuesday, 7th July 1908.

(By Telegram).

THIS afternoon the races were got through without any hitch in fine weather in the presence of a very large concourse of people. The Grand Stands, in first and second enclosures being crowded. The metallicians did a brisk business, raking in big hauls. The six races coloured on card attracted fairly large fields. The first race, the Cambridgeshire, was considered a dead cert for Mint. William Rufus, Young Gazelle and Girgistan were all freely supported both ways. The favourite was piloted home safely by Robinson. For the All Horse handicap top weight, Posco was again selected to win, Manlock had next call but Twistum's old friends stuck to her and were not disappointed : the betting on Twistum opened at fives and shortened to threes at the start. After a good race Twistum won easily. The July plate attracted seven candidates, Morette carrying 10-3 being most fancied, Circuit and Wakeful had a large number supporters and Royalist carried a lot of place money. The race went to Morrette, Wakeful a good second. The country bred race was contested by seven starters and was very open, Philcourage was in great demand, then there was a rush for Cowslip ; Pearl was well backed on her Saturdays performance and was again landed winner with Sir Simon second. The Desert Handicap was considered a good thing for Vasco but King Cobweb, who started second favourite, just managed to win and upset several pots. The last was the selling race in which there were only five starters and Harpist went to the post a red hot favourite, Royal Revenge very freely backed for win and places. It was a good race the favourite getting home in front This brought the three days meeting to a most successful close. The Stewards, Secretary and other officials deserve the congratulations of the public. A programme has been issued for an extra day's racing on Thursday the 9th ; six races are provided, stakes in each being Rs 350 of which second receives 100, third 50, no third money will be given if there are less than six starters. THE TURF.

MANCHESTER.

The final stage of Manchester's Whitsuntide racing carnival last Saturday was rendered the least enjoyable of the four by an incessant rainfall, the fixture fizzling out rather tamely under dismal and weeping skies. The breakdown in the weather had its detrimental effect upon the attendance. Nevertheless it mustered well, considering the adverse conditions, whilst the conversion of the going from the firm to the soft side had a rather undesirable bearing upon some of the results, albeit, in all, the winners came under the heading of well backed horses. Details :—

County Welter Handicap—Of 200sovs. added. 5 furlongs.

Capt. Bewicke's Black Gal, by Gallinule—Hydrangea, 3yrs., 6st. 12lb. ... Clark 1

ASCOT.

I have wired you the result of the Stakes and the Royal Hunt Cup, and now give further details. A wet Ascot is little short of a sporting and social tragedy and it has rained throughout ! Nevertheless it was a brilliant gathering of the beauty, wealth, rank, fashion, and intellect of the nation that greeted the arrival of the Royal procession, which, punctual as ever, reached the entrance to the enclosure close on one o'clock. The cheering which commenced at the Royal Hunt Cup starting-post, increased in volume as the carriages, with their outriders and brilliantly uniformed attendants, trotted between massed crowds of loyal spectators up the hill, and culminated in a tremendous burst, which nearly drowned the strains of the National Anthem. For the Stakes Day the attendance was excellent. Tattersall's, of course, was crowded, the further stands brilliant with bright costumes, and the success of the new stand was at once assured, as, containing 10,000 people was packed to plethora : whilst a big crowed lined the far rails. The going on which a lot of pains has been expended under scientific and practical advice, was in beautiful order, green as grass, in fact, and now that the crowd do not trample on it between whiles, it looks like lasting well. Details :—

Trial Stakes.—Of 500sovs. added. 7 furlongs and 166 yards.

Betting : 11 to 8 Bushranger ; 6 to 4 Rousay, 3½ to 1 Bruges. Won easily by three lengths ; bad third.

Wednesday's weather was too disheartening for words. The costumes of the ladies were concealed by the necessary waterproofs and wraps, which scarcely an interval allowed to be discarded and a good stout pair of golfing or shooting boots were much more adaptable to the situation than the latest Parisian fashions in buckled shoes. As if in derision the sky cleared and the sun came out after the last race to show what might have been. Details :—

A Remarkable Book ON THE Preservation of Health.

The French have a particularly happy phrase which, literally translated, means "The Joy of Living." It conjures up in the mind's eye a picture of buoyant health and happiness which appeals with particular force to the jaded Anglo-Indian. Yet there is no earthly reason why the residents in the Tropics should not share that exhilaration of well-being with our sprightly Gallic friends.

That is exactly what a physician long resident in India now comes forward to show in a timely and fascinating publication with the very tempting title "How to keep well in India," a title that will find a sympathetic echo in every heart from Calcutta to Bombay and from Peshawar to Madras.

How to keep well in India is so easy, too, if you only know how. And this the doctor proceeds to tell us in such a breezy style that after reading it we feel that we possess the master key to health.

The author plunges right into his subject by first telling us frankly that many make the fatal mistake of attempting to regulate life on the European plan. There is hope and cheer in the declaration that "it is absurd to suppose that the European cannot live and enjoy life in the Tropics."

After the quaint paradox that "your stomach is only half a stomach in India," he dwells upon the necessity for supplying the stomach with something rich in that element which goes to build up the nerve health and without which there can be no bodily health, viz., phosphorus. And it is equally essential, the writer says, "that we should supply this substance in an easily digestible form, for the stomach is, as we have heard, a low-power one."

"It is here," declares this medical authority, "the tonic food called Sanatogen comes in as an aid to diet. It is so easily digestible that patients in the acute stage of enteric fever are constantly being fed on it, and it administers the vitalising substance upon which the vital forces actually depend, and in such a manner that the hungry tissues can seize upon them and adapt them to their various needs."

There is the solution of the whole problem. And then a grave note of warning is sounded by this expert. Digestive disorders are the frequent forerunners of enteric fever and dysentery. "In this connection," says the doctor, "it must never be forgotten that we live not on what we eat but on what we absorb."

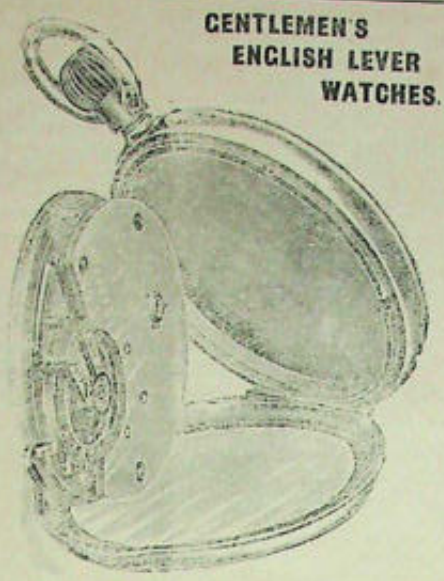
After pointing out the special milk dangers in India, he says:—"In Sanatogen we have a substance which is milk and yet is better than milk. Milk," he observes, "consists roughly of Casein and water. The Casein or nitrogenous part is made the basis of this new nerve food Sanatogen, which is almost universally recognised by medical men as the scientific food."

"In Sanatogen," he goes on to say, "we have 95 per cent. of Casein combined with 5 per cent. of phosphorus, the combination supplying the most powerful known substance for both stimulating and feeding the nerves."

He proves conclusively that with its high nutritive value Sanatogen forms at once an almost perfect and complete diet for the low-power system of the average Anglo-Indian.

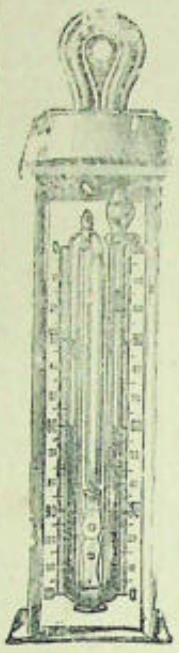
He quotes, amongst others, the testimony of the famous Dr. Ewald, of the University of [illegible] who declared after an extensive series of [illegible]iments with enteric patients treated with Sanatogen that: "The inference to be drawn from our experiments is that Sanatogen, on account of its ready absorption and its perfectly non-irritant character, may be used with great advantage for increasing the nutritive value of a given diet in all cases of physical weakness, as well as in the acute stages of all those maladies accompanied by rise of temperature, and particularly in enteric fever."

His graphic pen brings home to us most forcefully how Sanatogen is a better tonic than alcohol; how it is indispensable in low fever, Dysentery, Malarial Fevers, and he concludes with some most profitable advice which every Anglo-Indian should read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest.



His points are pregnant with significance. To take only one of the many rich nuggets contained in this gold mine of information: "Don't be conquered by the debility which supervenes on most tropical ailments and allow yourself to drift into the 'interesting invalid' condition; you may be interesting to yourself but you will be but a bore to others."

And then he goes right on to tell us how to shake off the deadly debility.



"How to keep well in India" is absorbingly interesting throughout; plain, straightforward, and to the point. It should be in the hands of all desirous of knowing how to get well and keep well.

A limited number of specimen copies of this interesting booklet will be distributed free of charge and can be obtained from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO., CALCUTTA, who also [illegible]ck Sanatogen.

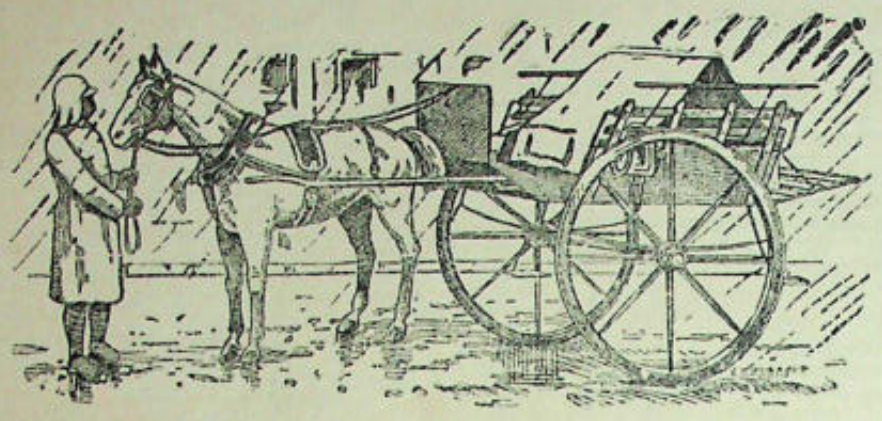
ROWING.

CONCLUSION OF THE CAMBRIDGE "MAYS."—On Saturday, the 13th instant, a bitterly cold and strong head wind prevailed, but despite this there was the largest attendance of the week. On the towing-path were many famous old oarsmen, among whom were Messrs. E. W. Atkin, B. C. Johnstone, T. J. G. Dunkinson, E. J. Dunkinson, J. H. F. Benham, H. D. Gillies, etc.

Ten bumps were recorded, which made the total for the four nights thirty-five. It cannot be said that Trinity Hall, although Jesus got within a quarter of a length of them on Thursday, were ever in any real danger of losing the headship of the river. Magdalene made two bumps on Saturday, and reached the first division, where they have not had the distinction of rowing for over forty years. They made five bumps during the four nights' racing. The other boats to win their oars were Jesus two (who have ascended nine places in two years) and King's two (the "getting on" boat). Caius 1, Clare 1, and St. Catharine's made three bumps. Christ's 1, Sidney, and Emmanuel 2, descended each night, whilst Third Trinity (who badly want some good rowing members) only got an eight this year by bringing a man from London each day. First Trinity 2, King's 1, and Pembroke 2, went down three places.

On Saturday Messrs. E. C. Brooksbank, L. H. K. Bushe-Fox, and O. Shimwell officiated as judges. Results:—



SECOND DIVISION.—Order of starting: Lady Margaret 2, Magdalene, Trinity Hall 2, Clare 1, Pembroke 2, St. Catharine's, Sidney, Queens', First Trinity 3. Christ's 2, Jesus 3, Emmanuel 2, King's 2, Caius 2 Peterhouse, Downing.—Magdalene gained rapidly on Lady Margaret 2, and achieved their object opposite the Pitt Club Lawn, where also Clare 1 brought about the downfall of Trinity Hall 2. "Pemmer" 2 lasted to the Willows, but then had to give in to St. Catherine's. In the Gut Sidney fell victims to Queens', First Trinity 3 rowing over. Jesus 3 caught Christ's 2 at Ditton, but Emmanuel 2 were soon in difficulties, and were vanquished by King's 2 at Post Reach. Caius 2, Peterhouse, and Downing rowed over.

FIRST DIVISION.—Order of starting: Trinity Hall 1, Jesus 1, First Trinity 1, Lady Margaret 1, Pembroke 1, Emmanuel 1, Third Trinity, Caius 1, Christ's 1. considerably improved form, and were less than a quarter of a length away from Jesus at the finish. Lady Margaret were their distance clear, but Emmanuel gave Pembroke a run, being a quarter of a length from their bump at the Glass Houses. The Etonians were very soon in a bad way, and were overlapped at Grassy, but kept away to Ditton. Opposite the Long Reach Inn Christ's went under to Jesus 2, whilst First Trinity 2 had their colours lowered by Corpus at Ditton. Selwyn rowed over, but Magdalene in their clinker ship caught King's at the Little Ditch.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PAIRS.—The final of the pairs was rowed last Friday afternoon, under very favourable conditions, and excited considerable interest, the competing crews being Christ Church—A. C. and C. A. Gladstone (stroke)—and Magdalen—J. R. Somers-Smith and C. R. Cudmore (stroke). An interesting race was witnessed for half the distance, and up to the Weirs Bridge there was practically nothing between them. By the time the Gut was reached, however, the Christ Church pair, who had second station, had secured fully half a length's advantage. This they further increased along the Willows, and passing the boat-house were quite a length in front. They lost some ground through going a bit wide at the wall, but it did not affect the result, as the Magdalen pair were showing signs of distress and going across the river after passing the Cherwell. The Christ Church pair gained rapidly in the last 200 yards, and eventually passed the post easy winners by four lengths in 7mins. 27secs.

BOXING.

ANOTHER WIN FOR BURNS.—Tommy Burns has added another to his long list of victories. At the Bowling Palace, Neuilly, just outside the western boundary of Paris on the 13th instant, he met Bill Squires, the champion of Australia, in a match for £2,500 and the heavy-weight championship of the world, and won by knocking his man out in the eighth round; but he did not by any means have it all his own way, and there was, in fact, a time when just a little slice of luck might have turned the scale against him. Not that Burns fought below his reputation. On the contrary, he showed all the qualities that have stood him in good stead so often. His coolness, pluck, and good generalship were all there; but in Bill Squires he had a tougher customer to deal with than Jewey Smith. Good judges who witnessed the encounter, were of the opinion that, although defeated, Squires gave Burns one of the hardest fights he has had, and none but a scientific boxer could have put the Australian out under the circumstances.

With his advantage in height and weight (Burns scaled 12st. 13lb., and Squires 13st. 3lb.), the Australian was always dangerous, writes the correspondent of Sporting Life. He got in some very effective blows, particularly in the fifth round, and at about this period Burns looked anything but happy, and as if another good drive or two would have meant the finish. Whether this was part of Tommy's game and meant to lure Squires on in the belief that he had an easy job, I am not prepared to say, but if the champion was acting grogginess, he certainly did it uncommonly well, and gave a good many spectators the impression that the championship was going to change hands. Anyway, Burns tided over the critical period, and, like the great fighter he is, seeing that he was on the wrong tack, he changed his methods, and, instead of letting Squires get in any of his full-arm punches, Burns stuck close to his man, and kept hammering away. It reminded me of a warship obliged for some reason or other to give up firing with her big artillery, and closing in so as to pepper the enemy with her small quick-firers.

It was interesting to see how the change in tactics worked. Squires did not look as if he liked it at all. These bustling methods were not what he wanted; the pace soon became too warm for him, and he began to puff in a style which showed that he was not in such good condition as the champion. When, at the end of the seventh round, Burns was getting in a succession of punishing fore-arm blows, Squires made a comparatively feeble resistance; and even if the knock-out punch on the chin, which came in the next round, had been delayed, I do not think the result would have been different. The cleverer fighter won, but he had not much to spare, and if the two meet again I would not care to lay more than a slight shade of odds on the champion.

Burns, as is generally known, had met Squires once before, when he knocked out the Australian at Colma, Cal., on 4th July 1907, in one round.

Dr. Phelan was referee, Jim Pratt time-keeper, and Max Sergy M.C. Burns was seconded by Pat O'Keeffe and Johnny Summers; while Squires had MM. Moreau and Rous. There were a good many English and American sportsmen, over for the Grand Prix, in the hall. It was not as full as it might have been, but as the lowest price for admission was 11 francs, or nearly nine shillings, the takings must have been pretty good. As usual, the most interested spectators included many ladies, among whom was Princess von Hohenlohe and party.

GOLF.

THE "INTERNATIONAL" ABANDONED.—Seldom is a golfing event scratched owing to bad weather, and the abandonment of the professionals international contest, England vs. Scotland, arranged to take place at Prestwick on Saturday, provides the first instance of a fixture of importance being dropped on account of rain.

In 1899 the annual match between the Royal Liverpool and Tantallon Clubs, which led up to the institution of the amateurs' international contest, was abandoned through just such a downpour as prevailed on Saturday, although the Prestwick links suffered more then than on the occasion under notice, the Pow burn overflowing and inundating part of the course. Still, that was an inter-club match, and prior to the occasion under notice international events and championships had always been played according to the programme, no matter what the weather. Some of them, too, have been held under terrible conditions, and one remembers that when Mr. Charles Hutchings and Mr. Sidney Fry contested their historic final at Hoylake in 1902 play had to be suspended for twenty minutes in the middle of the round owing to the fury of the gale.

Rain began to fall at Prestwick on Friday night, and throughout the following morning it descended in torrents, accompanied by a heavy wind from the sea. It was felt that with the championship the main item of the meeting it would be useless to go out in such weather. Harry Vardon, for instance, had barely recovered from an attack of influenza, and he would have been taking risks in venturing out in such conditions, although it should be stated he said nothing about the matter and was on the spot ready to start.

It was at first agreed to postpone the beginning until 2 P.M. in the hope of an improvement in the weather, but as this was not forthcoming the committees of the Prestwick Club and the Professional Golfers' Association conferred, and it was then resolved to abandon the event. The professionals were willing to decide the match by singles this morning, but the Prestwick committee felt that such a step might interfere with 150 other players who would probably wish to practise for the championship.

THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP.

FIRST DAY.

SOME interesting golf was witnessed at Prestwick on the 16th instant, when the opening rounds of the qualifying stroke competition were decided. The players in the first section which comprised all the "stars," with the noteworthy exceptions of Arnaud Massy and Mr. John Ball, had to contend against a strong south-westerly wind.

The consequence was that the early returns were somewhat high. Massy was one of those who played under almost perfect conditions, and he showed form which argues, anything but an outside chance of the championship again going to France. The champion played wonderfully steady golf, and steadiness is the thing that counts in the open championship.

At the close of the play Mr. R. Andrew led the field with 72, and Arnaud Massy andAlec. Herd tied for second place with 74. The following went round in less than 82 strokes:—

SECOND DAY.

THE second section were the first to play. Here the scores of the leaders were singularly level. Arnaud Massy cannot be said to have played anything more than good average golf in his round of 77. He did one or two things which no one but a first-class golfer could have accomplished—but he made mistakes which showed that he was not above the failings of the ordinary human player.

Mr. Robert Andrew, the amateur who showed such brilliant form on the previous day, also contented himself by playing a steady round.

Thomson used to be the professional at Romford. He has played a remarkably consistent game, and should be very near the top in the championship. Yesterday he and W. J. Leaver, of Worsley, shared the distinction of doing the best round in the second section—76.

The amateurs did remarkably well. In addition to Mr. Andrew, Mr. John Ball, Mr. John Graham, jun., Mr. Claude Hutchison, and Mr. W. Herbert Fowler were among those who qualified.

In the first section, which contained most of the cracks, there was a strenuous fight for qualifying places. Braid never seemed to settle down to his best game. He took 40 to go out, and had an average of five over 4's for twelve holes. He eventually finished in 79, however, and thus had a total of 157.

Captain C. K. Hutchison, who is rapidly coming to be recognised as one of the best amateur players at the stroke game, was only one stroke worse. Below are the players qualified to compete in the competition proper. The others are counted out.

They were making history in the first two rounds of the championship at Prestwick yesterday. It was generally agreed that this year's competition for the blue riband of golf would provide a particularly strenuous struggle, and it is now quite certain that general opinion will not be belied.

In no other championship has the pace been made so warm in the first round as it was on the Ayrshire links yesterday. The weather and conditions were practically all that could be desired.

The hero of the day was Ernest Gray. Gray has distinguished himself a good deal in big open tournaments lately, but few of the spectators thought it worth while to follow him round. And while most of the onlookers were running after the cracks, Gray was quietly playing a game which, for deadly accuracy, bordered on the uncanny. He went out in 31, and completed the round in 68, a score which is likely to stand a record for many a day. The details of his card were —Out: 4, 2, 4, 4, 3, 4, 3, 3, 4=31; home: 4, 4, 5, 4, 4, 4, 4, 5, 3=37; total 68.

Gray was unable to maintain this high standard in the second round, and ultimately finished with a total of 147.

Braid proved the old school is still the school for consistency. The famous Scot showed brilliant form all day, and he is now a very strong favourite for premier honours. He did a splendid round of 70 in the morning, and, with a card of 72 in the second round, he leads the field by five strokes from his nearest rival—Gray.

At present Massy seems to be out of the hunt. He was playing only moderate golf, and moderate golf yesterday was no good for the man who would win the championship. The Frenchman had rounds of 76 and 75, giving him an aggregate of 151.

Harry Vardon lost his chance through weakness on the greens. In all other respects the ex-champion was playing sound golf; but he could not get down his putts. The consequence was that he took 79 and 78. Taylor also played only moderate golf. He, like Vardon, took 79 for the first round, and failed to get among the leaders.

Mr. Robert Andrew was singularly disappointing after his brilliant performance of the previous day. From the start it was obvious that he had lost his form. He took 41 to go out in the morning, and eventually required 81 for the round. His aggregate for 36 holes was 161.

Herd cannot be said to have been favoured with any luck. He did not hole a single long putt in the morning, but still had a round of 74. He ultimately tied with David Kinnell for third place at the end of the day's play, each with a score of 148. The scores were:—

ATHLETICS.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL SPORTS.—One of the most noteworthy competitors at St. Thomas's Hospital sports at Chiswick on the 12th instant was A. R. Hargreaves, who won the cup for the competitor gaining the greatest number of points. Hargreaves won the half-mile handicap from scratch in 2mins. 9-2/5secs.; the high jump at 5ft., and the mile handicap from scratch in 4mins. 59secs. Details:—

100 Yards Handicap.—J. G. Skeet, scratch, 1; M. E. Dellschaft, 2 yards, 2. Won by a few inches. Time—10-2/5secs.

Putting the Weight.—H. B. Wilson, 3ft. 9in., 1; M. E. Dellschaft, 30ft. 7in., 2.

100 Yards Race.—M. E. Dellschaft 1, J. G. Skeet 2. A close race. Time—11secs.

Throwing the Cricket Ball.—F. Skrimshire, 91 yards, 1; J. G. Skeet, 2.

220 Yards Handicap.—M. E. Dellschaft, 6 yards, 1; J. G. Skeet, scratch, 2. Won by 6 yards. Time—22-4/5secs.

Long Jump.—J. G. Skeet, 18ft. 5¼in., 1; H. B. Wilson, 17ft. 9½in., 2.

Half-mile Handicap.—A. R. Hargreaves, scratch, 1; A. R. Esler, scratch, 2. Won by 5 yards. Time—2mins. 9-2/5secs.

High Jump.—A. R. Hargreaves, 5ft., 1; G. H. Roberts, 4ft. 10in., 2.

Quarter-mile Handicap.—M. E. Dellschaft, 10 yards, 1; J. G. Skeet, scratch, 2. Won by 20 yards. Time—54-2/5secs.

100 Yards Staff Race.—Dr. J. Headley 1; Dr. J. H. Fisher 2.

120 Yards Hurdles.—H. B. Wilson 1; J. G. Skeet 2. Won easily. Time—19secs.

One Mile Handicap.—A. R. Hargreaves, scratch, 1; A. R. Esler, scratch, 2. Won by 10 yards. Time—4mins. 59secs.

INTER-HOSPITAL SPORTS.—At Stamford Bridge on Wednesday the 17th instant, the forty-second annual sports of the United Hospitals Athletic Club resulted in St. Bartholomew's winning, for the first time since the year 1903, with a total score of 63 points. London Hospital (winners in 1904-05 and 7) secured second place with 42 points, and Guy's Hospital third with 29 points. King's College Hospital scored 6 points, and St. Thomas's 3 points. The winning Hospital received great assistance yesterday from T. H. Just (the Cambridge Blue), who has recently entered St. Bartholomew's. He won the mile by 40 yards from R. H. Hodges (King's) in 4mins. 41-2/5secs., and the half-mile by 20 yards from A. R. Hargreaves (St. Thomas's) in 2mins. 1sec.

A. Abrahams (St. Bartholomew's); another old Cantab, scored a double win by finishing first in the 100 yards, beating A. C. Palmer (London) by a few inches in 11secs., and again beating Palmer, though a little more easily, in the 220 yards race. The time was 22-4/5secs. This performance, and that of Just in the half-mile, were the best achievements during the day.

Other wins by St. Bartholomew's representatives yesterday were at putting the shot (J. Van Shalkwijk winning at 35ft. 0½in., with R. G. Rice, London, second), and the quarter-mile (F. J. Gordon beating H. Maher, Guy's, by a foot in 54-1/5secs.

E. E. Paget-Tomlinson, also an old Cambridge blue (London), won two events, viz.—the 120 yards hurdles race by a yard from H. F. Renton (Guy's) in 18secs., and the high jump at 5ft. 4in., beating E. D. Whitehead-Read (St. Bart's) by an inch. Paget-Tomlinson was also second (beaten by four inches) to A. C. Palmer (London) in the long jump, which the latter won at 20ft. 8¾in.

R. M. King (Guy's) won the three miles race in 16mins. 38secs., R. H. Hodges (King's) finishing second in 16mins. 38secs.

During the hammer-throwing competition (won by G. Tucker, Guy's, at 96ft. 3in., R. Rankine, Guy's, being second at 95ft. 5in.) the hammer slipped from the hand of one of the throwers, and, travelling about twenty feet, struck a policeman just below the stomach. He was subsequently conveyed to St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

A tug of war for a challenge cup resulted in Guy's beating Westminster by two pulls to nil. This, however, did not count in the competition for the shield.

POLO.

HURLINGHAM CHAMPION CUP.—For the third time in its history the Champion Cup was won on Saturday the 13th instant, by the Old Cantabs. This team is stronger now than it has ever been—better than when the brothers McCreery played in 1900, and even better than the victorious side of 1904, when it included Captain Godfrey Heseltine and Mr. W. McCreery. All the Cambridge men played fine polo in the final tie; not a fault could be found with them either as a team or individually. Lord Wodehouse, on whom so much depended, did particularly well. There was no trace of the nervousness which he showed in the earlier ties, and now that he had a less remarkable No. 1 than Captain Wilson against him he gave his best game, combining all the vigour and dash of youth with the confidence and resourcefulness of the oldest hand. The Hurlingham sub-committee can scarcely leave Lord Wodehouse out of their recent-form list after this notable display.

It is highly satisfactory to see young players like Lord Wodehouse and Capt. Bellville come so strongly to the front in championship polo, and curious to reflect that the latter would never have played in the tournament at all had not an accident laid Mr. Isaac Bell aside. Enormously helpful to them both, of course, was the presence in the team of players of the highest calibre like Mr. Freake and Mr. Buckmaster, who were in good form. Mr. Freake's artistic hitting was the admiration of all, and Mr. Buckmaster's mighty drives and extraordinary backhanders always gained ground for his team. He played in a winning champion cup team as far back as 1896, and is as good as ever he was, and it can be said of Mr. Freake that he has never done better than in this Champion Cup.

A score of 6 goals to 4 would seem to indicate that the struggle was desperately keen, but as a matter of fact the match did not compare in excitement with the semi-final between Roehampton and the Old Cantabs. In that game Mr. Buckmaster's team had unexpectedly found themselves early in arrears, and had to fight tremendously hard before they could get the upper hand; but against Rugby they took a lead in the first period, went further ahead in the second, and never once looked to be in danger of defeat. After the initial twenty minutes it was always long odds on the eventual winners, as a comfortable advantage on the scoring-board enabled them to settle down to a calm, unflurried game. Teams:—

RUGBY.—Mr. Walter Jones, Mr. G. Miller, Capt. E. D. Miller, and Mr. C. D. Miller (back).

OLD CANTABS.—Capt. G. Bellville, Mr. F. M. Freake, Mr. W. S. Buckmaster, and Lord Woodhouse (back).

THE OOTACAMUND HOUNDS.

Friday, 26th June.—Umbrella Tree 12 noon. The meet was fixed for to-day instead of Thursday as usual, it being a public holiday in honour of the King's Birthday, and consequently there was a large turnout than usual. A lovely morning and a lovely view out over the plains of Myme to the north. Moving off to the south-west we drew the small sholas below the Connemara Road and on to Hanging Shola, nearly always a sure find. To-day, however, the jack was not at home. Drawing on across the valley towards Black Bridge just above the road, hounds feathered on a stale line which they puzzled out slowly across the Sigur Road and down the Demon Valley Stream, till below Rocky where scent failed altogether. Crossing the Pykara Road the Master then drew over Lawley's Course past the Barber's Shop to Beadnell's, through Hamlet and Bracken to Khed Shola. Here the second Whip viewed a jack and hounds ran at a great pace through Wenlock Shola and left handed towards Fuddler's Shola. Crossing the path they ran below Bracken into Warwick Shola over the bog at the bottom through Badankid Mond Shola and down the ghaut into the Dunsandle Tea Estate, where they hunted him some distance down the valley, and finally lost him. Bringing hounds up by the Sholur Bridle Path and past Beadnell's, the Master crossed the waterfall river and drew over the side of Rocky, where finding a jack they ran him over Rocky and across the Demon Valley into Brooklands where he turned back, right handed over Toll Bar Hill, recrossed the Demon Valley and climbed the side of Rocky. Passing the small cover left handed, he raced along that excellent bit of galloping ground on the top of the Ridge, and set his mark for Toda Cathedral, but turning left handed past Toda Cathedral Shola he plunged down the ghaut finally saving his brush, a long way down, somewhere not very from Kulhutty Falls. A good day.

Saturday, 27th June—Briar Shola 12 noon. Finding a jack almost immediately we left the meet, hounds ran in a circle left handed by Preston's Crossing, Portalon's Crossing and over the bog into Briar close behind their jack. Crossing the Pykara Road they ran the Back Staircase Road for more than a mile, then swinging up to the left as if to climb Staircase itself they hunted their jack backwards and forwards in the small shola which lies in a nullah above the big horseshoe on the Back Staircase Road, finally killing him in covert. Then drew down the Devil's Dyke and across the Yemakal Stream, up through Bungalow Shola and over into Wapshare's Hare and after a long draw in the homeward direction a jack was viewed on Newmarket. Taking hounds to the Hollow, they drew forward on the line and forced their jack at a great pace over Newmarket, running the whole length of the ridge past the top of Rawling's Nullah and right round Bluegums in a right handed circle. Crossing the stream below Bluegums they then headed for Staircase, but leaving this on their left they turned into the shola below Herbert Plantation, when swinging to the left again they climbed the ridge and running through Staircase passed the top of Round Shola and dived down into Martin's Shola. Leaving this at the bottom they crossed the stream near the Toda School and up into Governor's Shola, where after hustling him round for some time in the very thick undergrowth, eventually they had to give him up and hounds returned to Kennels. A good hunt. Though so fine early in the day a thick monsoon mist and heavy rain came up later on, making the rides rather greasy, but we were all glad to see the rain, it is very much wanted, as though we have now had the monsoon for nearly three weeks, there has been extraordinarily little rain.

Monday, 29th June.—Lake End 7-30 A.M. A dull wet morning and very high wind. Drew Dairymaid first, hounds feathered on a line in the bog below and carried it up the hill above Druid, gradually warming to it they went off at a fair pace over the top of Dudley into Jackal, out at the bottom, and swung over Pearl Crossing to the right over the hill to the head of Long Swamp, where they were at fault. The Master cast them forward into Dudley, in which they picked up the line and ran over the bog to Dendron Belt and along the ravine below Denmark to below Ursula and then turned to the right along the side of the hill into Porcupine. Coming out by Rugby Shola they crossed over Denmark Hill and sank the valley to Owl Crossing and up to Swamgar Bluegums and lost him in a ravine near Kurathugalli Village. A few couple of hounds got on to another jack, went away below Hecuba to Sambur Shola and away beyond Pug Pits.

Tuesday, 30th June.—Brooklands 7-30 A.M. A regular monsoon morning, light rain, and a tearing wind. A jack was on the move as soon as hounds were thrown into covert, he was very reluctant to leave the shelter and face the open, hounds, however, pushed him out at the lower end. He led off to the right over the top of Toll Bar Hill, swinging round to the left along the Pykara Road to Triple Crossing where hounds caught him and finished him off in the Municipal Stream just above the crossing. After a long draw over Bagman, by Mill's and New Covert and back on the west side of Bagman to Point to Point Tree, hounds touched the line of a jack and ran over the top of Bluegums and down between Bluegums and Porlock, crossing the stream and over the ridge into Governor's Shola where they lost him below the road. Jackal was next tried, in which hounds spoke to a line and worked it down to Pearl Crossing and back to the left into Jackal, but could do no more with it. We next found in the bog between Dendron Belt and Denmark. The jack led down the ravine as if for Fairlawns, but turned sharp to the left and came back over the ridge, through Denmark, crossed the bog to the left below Dreadnought rose the hill and swept down to Druid. Breaking covert at the bottom, he bent to the right and headed for Monkey. Not pausing in this, he led hounds smartly on past Sheffield and through Tiger Shola to the top of Andy Plantation, turning to the right he plunged down the hill, leaving Andy on the left he pointed for Governor's Shola. The pack hunted him steadily through this and over the road by the Toda School, along the bottom and over the ridge and up the hill between Porlock and Bluegums, topped the saddle above the Potatoe field and sank the hill into the bottom of Rallywood. Over the side of the next hill, leaving Jackal Shola on the left, they crossed the Krurmund Road and ran over the side of one Tree Hill through Dudley to Druid. Then doubled back to Monkey, the jack was viewed by the Terrier boys taking a line to the right over One Tree Hill and heading for Dudley. Hounds were at fault near Monkey and by the time they were laid on the line up One Tree Hill scent had failed. The Master cast them forward past Dudley into Baikie without result. This brought the morning hunt to an end. We were all sorry to hear

Mrs. Stone had a bad fall on Monday breaking her arm. Her horse fell heavily on the greasy road in Baikie.

Thursday, 2nd July.—The Barber's Shop 8 A.M. Another rough day, a perfect gale of wind, with driving rain and mist, which made it almost impossible to see or hear hounds. In spite of a poor scent, hounds hunted remarkably well. We moved off up the Dartmore Valley, then over the ridge to the bog below Wapshare's Hare. Below Fuddler's Shola hounds touched a line and carried it up between Wenlock and Khed, over the Pykara Road. Working patiently over the top of Wenlock on into Dormer, where the scent died out altogether. A wide cast over the top of Dormer in the direction of Road Shola, set them going again, they ran through the shola over the Pykara Road, and across the bog, then over the hill, leaving Toda Coffee Shop Shola on the left and skirting Paragon Shola they led smartly over the bog to Warwick, and along the side of the wire fence to the road at the back of Castle-y-Dail into the lower ends of Beadnell's Shola, over the Todamund near Hearty, and sank the hill on to the Pykara Bridle Path where scent gave out and they could do no more with it. Hounds were then taken on to Lawley's Course drawing up the bog in the direction of Herbert Plantation, just below the latter, they struck the trail of a jack, which led them over the hill to Back Staircase Road along this into Briar and back into Staircase. Coming out on the far side above Martin's Shola, they swung back over Staircase Hill back into Staircase Shola where scent failed altogether. Hounds were then taken home.

THE BANGALORE TOURNAMENT.

20TH DECCAN HORSE vs. 14TH HUSSARS "2." TEAM.—The tournament opened with this game on the 3rd instant, the Deccan Horse winning by 8 goals to nil.

First Chukker.—The Deccan Horse attacked and scored two goals, through Macquoid and Ley.

Second Chukker.—The Hussars were forced to defend all through. Macquoid scored for the 20th, who subsequently missed more than one chance.

Third Chukker.—The 20th pressed and Jarvis put the ball through. Thereafter play ruled fast up and down, the Hussars making determined efforts without success.

Fourth Chukker.—The Deccan Horse rushed down and Jarvis scored and continuing to press they registered another point through Ley.

Fifth Chukker.—Play was in the Hussars territory but there was no score.

Sixth Chukker.—The Deccan Horse outplayed their opponents in this period and Macquoid scored twice.

Final Score.—20th Deccan Horse 8 goals; 14th Hussars nil. Teams.—

MYSORE GYMKHANA vs. IMPERIAL SERVICE LANCERS.—This match was also played on the 3rd instant and resulted in a win for the Mysore Gymkhana by 9 goals to 3.

First Chukker.—Up and down play till Faiz Mahomed got away and scored. Bunny Singh following this up with a second goal a little later.

Second Chukker.—This chukker was all in favour of the Lancers; Murad Beg played brilliantly and hit a goal.

Third Chukker.—A penalty hit for a cross against the Gymkhana was cleared by Faiz Mahomed and then the Lancers' goal was attacked. Desaraj Urs scoring two goals in quick succession.

Fourth Chukker.—The Lancers pressed and Henderson scored. Then the Gymkhana took the ball down and Subaraj Urs put through; but the Lancers returned to the attack and Murad Beg hit a goal.

Fifth Chukker.—The Gymkhana kept up a hot attack on the Lancers' flags and two more goals were added by Bunny Sing and Faiz Mahomed.

Sixth Chukker.—Fast and even play. Gopalraj Urs and Bunny Sing scored goals for the Gymkhana, who thus won by 9 goals to 3. Teams:—

Athletics.

THE CHANCES OF BRITISH ATHLETES AT THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

THIS year, for the first time in their history, the Olympic Games will be held in London, and as it is extremely unlikely that England will again be their home in the lifetime of any of the present generation of athletes, it is not to be wondered at that tremendous efforts are being made to make the coming gathering at the Stadium the most representative sports meeting the world has ever known.

At the Games held in Athens two years ago British athletes fared very badly, the only track event falling to their share being the five miles running race, which was won by H. C. Hawtrey, while, had it not been for the prowess of Con Leahy and P. O'Connor, we should have come away empty-handed from the field events.

On that occasion, however, no attempt was made to place a representative British team into the field. This time elaborate precautions have been taken that none but the very best men in their own particular branches of sport shall be selected.

STRENGTH vs. ENDURANCE.

In exercises which demand strength and agility, such as jumping, weight-putting, hammer-slinging, the hurling of the discus, and the throwing of the javelin, the Americans are undoubtedly our masters, and in sprint running they are, on the whole, quicker off the mark and smarter in finishing than our own men.

When it comes to contests demanding stamina and endurance, however, the Briton is still able to hold his own.

In what are generally known as the "strong men" events America looks like sweeping the board. At weight-putting they have two men whose achievements are far in advance of anything that we can show.

R. Rose of California, is a young giant who breaks records as easily as ordinary people crack egg-shells. He thinks nothing of two or three in the course of an afternoon, and one day last August he actually broke nine right off the reel.

His record "putt" of 49ft. 6½in. looks like being far too good for our men, thirty-eight or thirty-nine feet being about the limit of the best of them.

It is the same with hammer-throwing. We do not appear to have anyone to touch John Flanagan, of the Irish-American Athletic Club, and M. P. McGrath, both of whom are good for 175ft., while the best of our men, T. R. Nicholson, of the West of Scotland Harriers, has to be content with a modest 160ft.

Standing broad and standing high jumps, a branch of sport seldom practised in our country, are also likely to go to America by the aid of Ray C. Ewey, of New York, who won both these events at Athens two years ago.

Pole-jumping seems to be a lost art in England, and last year the championship was wrested from us by Swede, B. Soderstrom, of Stockholm. His leap of just over 10ft., however, will not compare with Walter Dray, the Yale student, whose effort of 12ft. 5in. should be quite good enough to carry him to victory.

RELYING UPON IRELAND.

Great Britain may make a bid for the high jump if Con Leahy, the Irishman, puts in an appearance, but he will have to be in his best form to beat Moffatt, of Pennsylvania, who can always be relied upon to clear 6ft.

In the long jump Great Britain will again have to rely upon Ireland if she is to make any sort of a show, for the Englishmen and Scotsmen look like being outclassed. D. Murray, of Dublin, is, however, a long jumper of above the average ability, a worthy successor to the great P. O'Connor, of Waterford.

America have in Dan Kelly, of Oregon, a long jumper who can always get well over 23ft., a distance which will probably be beyond the compass of even the Irishman.

If Martin Sheridan, who won the discus throwing at Athens two years ago, competes he will probably again prove successful both in this and the javelin throwing, as neither of these events have made much headway in England.

Sheridan, however, has for some time been on the injured list, and may not be at his best. F. H. Garrels would, however, be a useful substitute for America.

We have some strong men in England who are practising hard for these events. H. A. Leeke, the old Cambridge University weight putter; E. Barrett, of the City Police; and A. H. Fyffe, the old Oxford hammer thrower, are three sturdy giants who with a little training should become adepts at these particular exercises.

Sweden is, however, likely to be dangerous in the javelin-throwing, as in Arno Halse, of Christiania, they have a man who is good for 176ft., which is considerably in advance of any of our performances.

In running and walking the outlook for England is much more hopeful, and especially in walking, which is a form of exercise which finds very little favour in other countries.

We have quite a number of capable long distance runners just now, and it is not likely that anyone America, Australia, or South Africa can send over will beat us at such distances as one mile or five miles.

THE MARATHON RACE.

The experience of the Marathon race at Athens, however, showed us that Canada possesses a runner of exceptional grit and stamina in M. D. Sherring, and if he goes over to defend his title even such British stalwarts as A. Duncan and F. A. Appleby will have to go all the way to beat him.

We were very poorly represented, however, in the Marathon race at the Athens Olympiad, and Sherring's performance of running twenty-six miles on an uneven, dusty, and dirty road, though a great one, is by no means unbeatable. K. McArthur and C. Hefferon are two sturdy athletes from South Africa who may, however, have to be reckoned with in long distance events.

In the short cuts the outlook is doubtful. There are the usual tall stories about as to the wonderfully fast times accomplished by American sprinters, who appear to make quite a common practice of beating 10secs. for the hundred yards and 48secs. for the quarter. One of these is N. J. Cartnell, of Pennsylvania University, who, however, when in England last July was beaten on more than one occasion by our own champion, J. W. Morton, in the by no means wonderful time of 10-4/5secs.

The fact of the matter is that tracks are faster in America than they are in this country. E. J. Duffey, of South Africa, is another who will take some beating.

In J. B. Taylor America is said to possess a quarter-miler capable of beating the world's record time of 47-4/5secs. made by M. W. Long at New Jersey in 1900. This, again, was on an American track, and the performance of the young Scotsman Lieutenant Wyndham Halswell at Stamford Bridge two years ago, when he ran clean away from his field in the fast time of 48-4/5secs., is probably quite as good as anything that Taylor has ever accomplished. With T. I. F. Fairbairn Crawford, T. H. Just, and H. E. Holding in the 800 metres and G. Butterfield in the 1,500 metres we should beat anyone that America, Australia, or South Africa can put into the field against us.

THE BOMBAY HARWOOD LEAGUE.

ROYAL SCOTS "A" TEAM vs. "B" TEAM.—Played on the 27th ultimo, "B" team winning by 2 goals to 1. Had the shooting of "B" team been less erratic many more points might have been scored. "A" team started off well and Pringle scored a goal. Lakin quickly equalised for "B" and thereafter "A" were compelled to defend. Parkes notched the second point before the interval, and though "A" team attacked throughout the second half they were unable to utilise their chances and the game ended with the score "B" team, 2 goals; "A" team, 1 goal. Teams:—

"B."—Holt, goal; Taylor and Foster, backs; Hill, Finnigan and Lakin, half-backs; Wright, D. Ross, G. Ross, Mackintosh and Parkes, forwards.

"A."—Robertson, goal; Henderson and Williams, backs; Keyler, Wilson and Lamont, half-backs; Morton, Bolton, Girdwood, Kennaway and Pringle forwards.

ROYAL ARTILLERY vs. Y.M.C.A.—The heavy rain, which had caused the postponement of a couple of League fixtures, held off on Wednesday when the above teams met on the Cooperage. It was a well contested game. The Young Men were handicapped in the first half, having to play a man short, and during this period the Gunners scored 3 goals, Titley, Betts and Reynolds putting through. On changing over the game was very level and the Young Men scored through Dowling but were unable to get through again. Final score: R. A., 3 goals. Y.M.C.A., 1 goal. Teams:—

ROYAL ARTILLERY.—Bowyer, goal; Wiggett and Watts, backs; Collumbell, MacGharry, and Downey, half-backs; Titley, Southoote, Reynolds, Betts and Bayley, forwards.

CAMPSIE BENEFIT MATCH.—JUTE MILLS' XI. vs. CALCUTTA LEAGUE.—There was a big attendance at this match last Saturday and the victim of the bomb outrage at Sankinara will realise a substantial sum when expenses are paid. The weather conditions were excellent and though the play was poor it was an interesting game from start to finish. The first half was very even and there was no score at half time though the Jute-wallahs lost a couple of good openings. On changing ends, however, the League team warmed to their work, McCready opened the scoring and after some good combined play with H. M. Sherman, put on a second point. The League men continued to press. Wright registered the third point and Cody finding the net shortly after, the League team won by 4 goals to nil. Teams :—

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

DIVISION I.

CALCUTTA vs. RANGERS.—These teams met on the 1st instant, a poor game ending in favour of Calcutta by 2 goals to nil. The Rangers had the best of the opening exchanges and obtained two corners. From one of these the ball was put through but the point was disallowed for off-side. Then Calcutta pressed and Kingcome headed in from a corner kick. A run down and centre by this player a bit later enabled Lee to head the ball in, and the interval arrived with Calcutta leading by 2-0. The Rangers attacked on resuming but all their shots were cleared by Dods and the game was transferred to the other end. There was no further scoring, Calcutta winning as stated. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Dods, goal; Nichols, and Campbell, backs; Taylor, O'Shea, and Crawford, half-backs; H. Sherman, Kingcome, Lee, V. Sherman and Forster, forwards.

RANGERS.—Margrett, goal; Minnet, and Postence, backs; Skempton, Cody, and Cornish, half-backs; Bennett, Little, Gault Davis, forwards.

Referee.—E. A. Cooper.

GORDONS vs. Y.M.C.A.—This match was played in the Fort on the 1st instant the Gordons winning by 3 goals to nil All three points were scored by McKay.

H.L.I. vs. Y.M.C.A.—This postponed match took place on the 3rd instant, the Dum-Dum team winning by 3 goals to nil. The first half was very evenly contested and there was no score but the military asserted themselves after the interval and Duncan, Paterson and Innes each scored goals, Renton made his first appearance this season in the H.L.I.team.

DALHOUSIE vs. H. L. I.—This postponed match was played on the 6th instant, the Dum-Dum team winning a fast and interesting game by 2 goals to one. The first half was very even and the Dals led at the interval by a goal to nil, Wright being credited with the point. In the second period the soldiers attacked and Devlin scored two goals. Then the civilians pressed and missed more than one opportunity of drawing level. Teams :—

H.L.I.—Lees, goal; Renton and Tait, backs; Scollins, O'Rourke and Marshall, half-backs; Collins, Patterson, Innes, Devlin and Duncan, forwards.

DALHOUSIE.—Hendry, goal; Stevens and Dunn, backs; Storrie, Lees and Whyshall half-backs; Burnett, Gibson, Allen, Wright and Murdoch, forwards.

Referees :—Sergeant Hounsell.

GORDONS vs. RANGERS.—The match between these teams on Tuesday evening concluded the League programme. The match was played in wretched weather, rain falling throughout and good football was not to be expected. The Gordons won by a goal to nil. McClament netting the ball.

GORDONS.—Milne, goal; Aitken and Montgomery, backs; Harper, Graham and Spence, half-backs; McDougall, Middleton, McCoy, McClament and Galletly, forwards.

RANGERS.—Margrett, goal; Minet and Minet, backs; Skempton, Cody and Cornish, half-backs; Little, Gault, Postence and Davis, forwards.

Referee :—Sergant Hounsell.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THIS is about the most tiresome rainy season on record. There seems to be no end to it and its visitations are as sudden as they are inconvenient. Constant showers impart just sufficient moisture to the ground to render the turf extremely treacherous even to the wariest of goers, and, whilst an extra element of excitement is added to the game, the sensations of players are distinctly uncomfortable. Nor do the weather reports offer any solace with their gloomy predictions so that it would seem likely that the I.F.A. Shield Tournament is to be a matter of mackintoshes and umbrellas for touch-line enthusiasts.

SINCE the conclusion of the Calcutta Football League last Wednesday the H.L.I. have managed to play off their postponed games against the Y.M.C.A. and Dalhousie winning by 3-0 and 2-1 respectively. The Gordons played the Rangers on Tuesday and the complete League table for the season can is as under.—

	P.	W.	L.	D.	Goals For	Goals Agst.	Pts.
Gordons ...	14	14	0	0	30	4	28
H.L.I. ...	14	9	3	2	19	8	21
C.F.C. ...	14	8	1	5	25	13	17
Customs ...	14	6	2	6	11	12	14
Dalhousie ...	14	5	3	6	11	11	13
Caledonians ...	14	3	3	8	12	18	9
Rangers ...	14	1	4	9	7	22	6
Y.M.C.A. ...	14	1	2	11	6	34	4

THE record of the Gordon Highlanders is truly brilliant and is the outcome of consistent play allied with a dash and determination that have placed them streets ahead of any other combination in Calcutta. The H.L.I. thoroughly deserve the second place on the list. Though they have been handicapped by the absence of several of last season's players they have done very creditably and with Renton back in his old place they should do even better in the Shield Tournament. It is difficult to commend the C.F.C. on its League record. Five matches lost and thirteen goals against them does not compare well with the one match lost and the five goals against them of 1907. The "change and change about" policy of the Selection Committee has borne its fruits as the knowing ones predicted it would do. Customs, perhaps, deserve the highest praise for the efforts which have brought them up to fourth position above the redoubtable Dalhousie. Here we have conclusive evidence of what promotion means to a Junior Club. The Customs take their place in first-class football quite naturally and evidently mean to stay there. Dalhousie has fallen off a lot this season and finishes fifth as against fourth last season. The absence of Prike has robbed them of their most dangerous weapon of attack and there does not appear to be anyone in the team with his genius for getting goals. Caledonia has also gone down a place since last season but as they have devoted their League fixtures to training promising colts, they should be in greater prominence next year. Their draw with Calcutta was the best match they played. Rangers retain their place in the First Division They have cantered through the season with a stout heart despite much disappointment and many reverses. The Y.M.C.A are candidates for the facilis descensus but it is said that no promotion is to be made from below so they may yet live to fight their way through another season in their present company.

Now for the I.F.A. Competition, drawings for which were made at the C.F.C. Tent last Monday evening. The Challenge Shield Tournament has attracted fifteen entries this year. Seven of which are military. By the most curious double coincidence the Gordons "A" were drawn against the Gordons "B" and the H. L. I. "A" against the H. L. I. "B". This accident at the outset greatly discounts the military interest in the competition, but as the three up-country teams are all reported to be "burning for the fray" it is to be assumed that the public will be contented with the excitement afforded by their appearance on the Calcutta maidan. Calcutta play the West Ridings next Saturday on the C.F.C. ground. It is a long journey from Ranikhet to Fort William and a team travel-worn and stale is never at its best. Still a very good contest may be looked for, although the chances seem in favour of the civilian team.

DALHOUSIE has a hard nut to crack next Saturday in the King's Own who are reported to be as fit as fiddles up in Lebong. They will find it heavy going down here after the sandy Lebong, but they anticipate a more kindly fate than that which greeted the Middlesex Regiment which came down last year from the same hill station. Caledonia play the King's Royal Rifles on Monday next. Nothing is known about this military team which hails from Jubbulpore beyond that they are the old Cockaigne stock and that the K.R.R. is reputed a fine football regiment. Gordons "A" play Gordons "B" in the Fort and H.L.I. "A" play H. L. I. "B" at Dum-Dum by special permission of the Council. If Calcutta can beat the West Ridings they stand a very good chance of getting into the finals. They should meet the Customs in the second round and if they survive will meet either Rangers or Sova Bazar in the semi-final. Altogether it looks as if it was going to be a really exciting tournament.

THE Trades' Cup is as popular as ever and has attracted 35 entries this season. Mohon Bagan and National Association should battle it out for final honours. The same two teams should be there or thereabouts in the Cooch Behar Cup which numbers 22 entries this year. The Elliot Shield and the Cadet Cup have the average numbers of entries and may be expected to afford the usual interest to junior players.

THE Benefit Football match in aid of Mr. Campsie was played on the C.F.C. ground last Saturday and resulted in a net profit of Rs. 1,582-1-0 which will be handed over to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce fund. The match itself was not highly interesting though the Jute-wallahs surprised everybody in the initial stages of the game when their combination was vastly superior to that of their League rivals. The Jute-men died away after half time and a score of 4-0 was soon run up, at which point the game concluded. The Pipers of the Gordons made a brave show and filled the hearts of thousands of Scotsmen with delight at their weird skirlings.

"FIELD" "A trial series produced a remarkably fine group of eight shots fired alternately from the two barrels. . . . A very fine performance for a double rifle, very hard to beat. Shooting was conducted in a manner somewhat out of the ordinary routine, that is to say, the shots were not fired by a professional expert, but by one who had enjoyed no previous opportunity of acquainting himself with the idiosyncrasies of the weapon."

The following papers and notes were read:—(1) On the Flora of Cutch, by Rev. E. Blatter, S. J.; (2) Further notes on the butterflies of the Konkan, by G. W. V. de Rhe Philipe; (3) Crows and their sleeping place, by Rev. T. Bomford; (4) Flying snakes, by Major A. Begbie; (5) Some notes on the low level Laterite in Portuguese India, by H. J. Davies, and the meeting terminated with a vote of thanks to the various authors of the papers, all of which will appear in the Society's journal.

THE ROYAL SOCIETY FOR THE PROTECTION OF BIRDS INDIAN BRANCH.

REPORT FOR 1907.

In writing the Report for the year 1907 the Honorary Secretary feels that some explanation is due to the very small amount of work that he has been able to do, and asks the indulgence of those who have supported the Indian Branch of the Society in the past towards such as has been accomplished.

To keep the aims and objects of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds before the public, to enlist people's sympathies and overcome their prejudices requires a large amount of spare time. Most Europeans in India have their days and hours more than filled with official work, and anything beyond that has to be done as opportunity may occur.

The present Honorary Secretary is unfortunately no exception, and the amount of time he can allot to the Society is altogether out of proportion to what he would like to do. Throughout the early months of the year changes in various Educational Schemes filled every spare moment, then followed a large amount of University Examination work, after which he had to leave for England on Urgent Private affairs. Returning in November, an effort was made to do something to make up arrears, and to put himself au fait with what was going on in India relative to bird and animal destruction.

For these reasons no appeal for subscriptions was made, but as expenses were small, the balance still to the Society's credit is considerable.

The thanks of all well-wishers of birds and animals are due to such papers as the Indian Field, Asian and Indian Sporting Times. The Jains of Western India and elsewhere have done, and are doing a great deal, especially in attempting to improve the conditions of pinjrapols (animal hospitals).

The £15 granted by the Home Society some time ago to found a small scholarship in the Meerut College has been greatly appreciated, but it is felt that probably the awarding of medals will be more popular, as certain students are sometimes averse from taking small monetary awards. It is proposed, therefore, to try the effect of medals during the present year, and in addition to award a few books as prizes out of the funds at the disposal of the Branch.

The Honorary Secretary hopes to be able to obtain from the Home Society some sets of slides for lecture purposes, as he has now the use of a good magic lantern.

A few years ago the rapid diminution in the numbers of certain species of birds in different parts of the world looked as though it would compel "the trade" to indent upon India for a supply of feathers. The writer issued a series of questions and received replies from all over the Peninsula, including Burma and Ceylon. The general purport of the statistics obtained was that, though in certain parts a good deal of damage was being done, taking India as a whole the feather-trade had not assumed anything like the proportions it had in many other countries.

The Act prohibiting the export of feathers for trade purposes has evidently taken effect, as not long since an English "Trade" journal inveighed bitterly against the action of the Indian Government in preventing the unfortunate peasant from earning a livelihood during a time of famine by catching birds for the sake of their plumage.

Certain persons have criticised this Act as being of little value. It can be, and undoubtedly is evaded, particularly on the frontiers of Portuguese and French Territory, and it is true that a good many skins and bales of feathers find their way to Europe by these routes, but it is not at all easy for those who live in remote parts of India to send their goods via Goa or Pondicherry, and, in spite of a certain amount of leakage, the enactment has put a distinct damper on the feather-dealer.

A further supply of these questions is being sent out in the hope of getting statistics enabling the present position to be compared with that before the Act came into operation. Enthusiasts in Europe may regret that more police supervision is not exercised, but all who know the conditions in the East are aware that more harm than good would result therefrom.

As has often been remarked the actual wearing of birds feathers would cause but little protest were it not for the abuses which seem inseparable from supplying the market. The slaughter of many species during the breeding season has been so ruthless, and has been carried out with such cruelty that it has been impossible for it to pass unnoticed.

The ornithologist views with pain the extinction of beautiful and interesting creatures, while the economist and agriculturist sees with alarm the disappearance of birds which may happen to be the natural enemies of insect pests, and thus possibly upset the balance of nature.

So far as the destruction of game is concerned, a large number of municipalities in India have local bye-laws, but they are often more or less a dead letter unless the Magistrate happens to take special interest in the matter.

Fortunately for the birds most Indians are vegetarians. Mahomedans, Christians, and many of the lower castes will eat meat when they can get it, but as it is beyond the means of the poorer classes as a rule, the demand is not sufficiently great in the hot weather when most of the "Plains" birds breed. Duck and teal are brought to market so long as any remain, but the majority are away to the north by the end of April. A few partridges are brought in occasionally, but the quail—such a standing dish in India—is kept in quaileries and fattened like the domestic fowl. In the "Hills" unfortunately a large number of pheasants and partridges are shot on their nests—particularly near hill-stations and sold to hotel and boarding house proprietors. The risk of detection is so small and the punishment if caught so inadequate that there is very little to deter the man who would make a little by supplying the market.

To sum up, the higher Hindu castes and the Jains are strict vegetarians, and the great majority of Mahomedans, low-caste Hindus and native Christians are practically so from motives of economy. Moreover the "Arms Act" restricts the number of firearms which can be used against birds and animals. These causes combine to check the rapidity of diminution in our fauna which would take place were our large and increasing population of the same habits and possessed of the same weapons as the European. Nevertheless diminution is proceeding, much more so in some parts than in others, and though this may appear slight, yet, if things are allowed to pass unnoticed evil may be done which may be difficult to remedy.

In certain parts of the country there exist tribes which from time immemorial have been hunters. The Bhils and Gonds, amongst others, have become famous for their skill as shikaris. The Ghurkhas and many hill tribes are no mean sportsmen, though their methods, particularly the wasteful snow-driving, do not commend themselves to our ideas. In Northern India the Gujars and Kunjars, Pasis and Ahirs destroy numbers of birds and animals: the damage caused by the two former tribes is often only to be compared with that done by wild dogs.

But while in former times frequent war, pillage and social disturbance restricted the tracts occupied by these people and prevented their numbers from increasing, conditions have changed under the Pax Britannica.

The risks of war being eliminated the tribes have spread beyond their accustomed limits, and the Gujars wander all over the country netting and destroying everything in those tracts which are unfortunate enough to attract them. Not very long ago the Honorary Secretary received information regarding wholesale netting by these people in the Ganges "Khadir" and simular localities, and once they start operations they rarely leave much behind in the place they have selected for their patronage.

The advance of civilisation has not been forgotten in seeking an explanation for the disappearance of certain forms, but these are chiefly the larger animals, and do not strictly come within our limits. Thus the lion has become practically extinct and the bear and panther are rare now in many places where they formerly abounded. The railways as they open up the country bring large European and Eurasian staffs which rapidly thin the herds of blackbuck and chinkara (gazelle). Amongst the birds the decrease is chiefly noticeable in the water birds which as the jheels they frequent are drained and turned into arable land, return no more to their former haunts.

Attention is drawn to the Gold Medal of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds together with twenty guineas which are offered by the Society in England for the best essay or Treatise on "Comparative legislation for the Protection of Birds." Copies of the regulations guiding the competition have been sent for from England and will be forwarded to anyone who asks for them.

The Honorary Secretary appeals to those who take an interest in the Fauna of India for subscriptions and donations however small to carry on and extend the work. Funds are required for printing, advertising, postage and the usual expenses incidental to work of this nature. A clerk is wanted to carry out the office work, as it is impossible for the present Secretary to carry on the correspondence himself with anything like proper regularity, but until finances are better it is impossible to employ one.

It was found at first that a large number of persons were deterred by the idea that the Society looked askance at followers of Sport and Natural History, and it has been no easy matter to eradicate this impression.

The only rules that are binding on members are:—

(i) That they shall discourage the wanton destruction of birds (and animals) and interest themselves generally in their protection.

(ii) That they shall refrain from wearing the feathers of any bird not killed for food, the Ostrich only excepted.

(iii) That they shall endeavour to recognise fully the breeding seasons of the various species and refrain from sport at those times. (This is not intended to prohibit naturalists from indulging in their several pursuits, but it is taken for granted that their innate sense of what is right and proper will cause them to act with moderation).

(iv) That they shall endeavour to act as becomes true sportsmen and lovers of nature and to induce others to do the same.

MEMBERS.

Any person may become a member of the Society, on paying the sum of two annas as registration fee and agreeing to the objects of the Society as stated in the rules.

ASSOCIATES.

Members may become Associates of the Society on agreeing to pay one rupee or more annually, and Life Associates, a donation of one gold mohur.

Associates who subscribe five rupees and upwards annually and donors of five gold mohurs, will receive a copy of each new publication as issued.

Subscribers of one gold mohur annually will be designated Fellows.

It is to be hoped that all sportsmen, naturalists, and lovers of bird and animal life, will be induced to lend their influence and financial aid—the smallest subscription and donation—to enable the Society to defray the few necessary expenses.

The number of letters and communications that have to be written, before individuals make up their minds to join is very great, and numbers of circulars and letters have to be despatched to which no answer is vouchsafed. Such work should really be carried out by a clerk, but until further funds are forthcoming, it is impossible to employ one. In the meanwhile every advantage possible must be taken of the means at our disposal.

It is to be hoped that those who had supported the Society this year will not only not withdraw their aid, but will endeavour to further its aims and objects by inducing others to join. The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, which in India also includes wild animals generally, does not propagate the views of a few faddists, but endeavours to prevent by reasonable means the extermination or undue diminution of our Indian fauna.

Subscriptions and donations may be paid to the Honorary Secretary.

The Horse.

A FEW NOTES ABOUT HORSES.

IT is in nearly all cases a matter of great difficulty to trace the animals and plants which mankind has domesticated or cultivated to the original wild stock from which they have been derived, writes Prof. Ray Lancaster. Lately, we have gained new knowledge of the origin of the domesticated breeds of the horse. It is generally agreed that the Mongolian wild horse represents the chief stock from which the horses of Europe and those conveyed by Europeans to America were derived. This wild horse was formerly known as inhabiting the Kirghiz steppes, and was called the Tarpan. It became extinct there some seventy years ago. The natives of that district asserted that the pure breed was only to be met with farther East in the Gobi Desert of Central Asia, the Tarpan itself showing signs of mixed blood in having a mouse-coloured coat, which is a sure indication amongst horses of cross-breeding. Prevalsky, a Russian traveller, was the first to obtain specimens of the pure bred wild horse of the Gobi Desert, which still exists. Live specimens have been brought to Europe, and some are in the possession of the Duke of Bedford A female is mounted and exhibited in the Natural History Museum, and also a skeleton and skulls. Prevalsky's horse, or the Mongolian wild horse, is of small stature, standing about 12 hands at the shoulder. The root of the tail is short-haired, the mane short and upright, without forelock. The body colour is yellow dun, the mane and tail black, as well as the lower part of the legs, and there is a dark stripe down the back. The muzzle in pure-bred specimens is white. The head is relatively large and the muzzle thick and relatively short. A very decided character is shown by the great size and relative length of the row of cheekteeth, it being one-third larger than the same row of teeth in a Dartmoor pony of the same stature.

A very interesting fact which goes a long way to establish the view that the European domesticatad horse is derived from the Mongolian wild horse comes to us in a most striking way from the most ancient records of the human race. In the South of France the contents of caves formerly inhabited by men have been dug out and examined with increasing care and accuracy of late years, though first investigated fifty years ago. Similar caves, though not so prolific of evidences of human occupation, have been explored in England (Kent's Cavern at Torquay, and others). The astounding fact has now become quite clear that these caves were inhabited by men of no mean capacity from 50,000 to 100,000 years ago, when bone harpoons flint knives, flint scrapers, and bone javelin-throwers were the chief weapons in use, when these islands were solidly joined to the European continent, when a sheet of glacial ice, alternately retreating and extending, covered the whole of northern Europe, and when the mammoth, rhinoceros, hyena, lion, bear, bison, great ox, horse, and later the reindeer, inhabited the land and were hunted, eaten and utilised for their bone, tusks, and skin by these ancient men. I shall revert to this subject, but would merely say now that it is all as certain and well-established a chapter in man's history as that of the ancient Egyptians, who are really quite modern (only 8,000 years at most) as compared with these cave men of 100,000 years ago.

The bones of the animals killed and eaten by the cave men are found in some cases in enormous quantities. In one locality in France the bones of as many as 80,000 horses (which had been cooked and eaten) have been dug up and counted! The most wonderful and extraordinary thing about these cave men is that they carved complete rounded sculptures, high reliefs, low reliefs, and line engravings on mammoth's ivory, on reindeer horn, on bones, and on stones—the line engravings being the latest in date, as shown by their position in the deposits on the floor of the caves, which are often as much as 20ft. or 30ft. in thickness! Not only that but these carvings are real works of art extremely well drawn, and showing not mere childish effort but work which was done with the intention and control of an artist's mind.

An immense number of these carvings is now known. I have before me one of the most recent publications on the subject—a series of plates showing the carvings collected from caves in the Pyrenees, the Dordogne and the Landes by M. Piette, who recently died. I have examined his collection and others of the same kind in the great Museum of St. Germain, near Paris. We have in London some of the earlier collections, and especially that of the Vicomte de Lastic, to purchase which my old friend Sir Richard Owen journeyed to the Dordogne in the winter of 1864. Many animals, as well as some human beings are represented in these carvings—the mammoth itself carved on a piece of its own ivory is among them, and a good many represent the horse. Now it is a fact that the carvings of the horses of that period undoubtedly represent a horse which is identical in proportions, shape of head, mane, and tail with the wild Mongolian horse, and is unlike in those points to modern European horses or to the Arabian horse.

It was, until the discoveries of M. Piette, held that though the cave men killed, ate, and made pictures of the horse of those remote days, yet that they did not tame it, put a halter or a bridle on it and make use of it. Some of the carvings figured by M. Piette leave, however, no room for doubt that the cave men fitted a bridle to the head and muzzle of the horse. The carvings show a twisted thong placed round the nose and passing near the angle of the mouth where it is possible, though not certain, that a "bit" was inserted. Connected to this main encircling thong are four twisted cords (on each side of the head), which run horizontally backwards, and the two lower of these are joined by a flat, plate-like piece, which is ornamented. The whole apparatus is further connected to a twisted cord on each side, which runs towards the back of the head, but it is not shown in the carving what becomes of it. Thus it seems clear not only that the cave men of these remote ages were wonderful artists, but that they mastered and muzzled the horse.

Some of the engravings of horses' heads seem to indicate the existence of a horse alongside the commoner form with a narrower, more tapering face, and may possibly be due to the introduction even at that remote period of another race distinct from the Northern or Mongolian wild horse. That this admixture of a distinct and more slender horse with the Northern horse has taken place over and over again in historical times is a matter of knowledge. The question is when did it first take place, and where did the more slender horse come from? In later days we know this more shapely breed as the Arab and the Barb, and the introduction of its blood at various times into the more Northern stock is well ascertained. The latest great historical case of such admixture is the production of the English thoroughbred in the eighteenth century by such sires as the Darley Arabian, the Godolphin Barb, and the Brierley Turk, whose blood is transmitted to modern racehorses through the great historic sires, Herod, Matchem, and Eclipse, the ancestors of practically all modern racehorses.

The horse of more Southern origin thus recognised as distinct from the prehistoric European horse, it is now convenient to speak of as the Southern or Arabian horse. There are certain various structural features which seem to mark these horses and their offspring, even when their strain is blended with that of the more Northern horse. Probably from the time of the cave men onward the selective breeding of horses has been carried on, so that in many breeds size has been vastly increased. It is an important fact that the English racehorse has never been selected and bred for "points" (as cattle and sheep are), but always by performance on the racecourse. Thus it becomes an extremely interesting matter to see what are the changes which the breeder of thoroughbred stock has unconsciously produced and what are the differences between the racehorse of to day and that of 50, 100, and 150 years ago. This was pointed out to me by the late Duke of Devonshire as a reason for supporting my proposal to secure and place in the Natural History Museum the skulls, limb-bones, hoofs, and other indestructible parts of great racehorses (and of other breeds), and also for having very accurately measured reduced models made of such horses, in order that we may after some years compare the proportions and structure at present arrived at with the later developments which the continual selection of winner's blood in breeding must unconsciously produce. Such a collection was started by me in the museum, but it needs the assistance of owners of horses—both as to placing record specimens in the museum and in paying for the preparation of accurately reduced models by competent artists. It already comprises the skulls of Stockwell, Bend Or, and Ormonde. There is no doubt that the English racehorse has increased in size. He is a bigger animal to day than he was 200 years ago, and the opinion of the best authorities that he has increased on the average an inch in height at the withers in every twenty-five years. The racehorse has a much longer thigh-bone and upper-arm bone in proportion to the rest of the leg than has the cart horse, and it is probable that this length has been continually increased by the selection of winners for breeding. There are other points of scientific interest as to modern horses and their forefathers which deserve further statement and explanation.

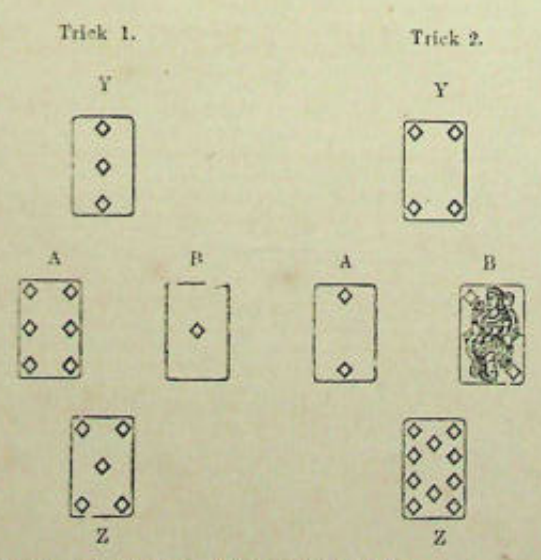
Solution to Problem No. 65.

B has evidently doubled on hearts, and A has led the wrong suit. Z should lead the knave of diamonds, and put upon dummy's king, whether A covers or not. Y then leads out the ace and king of spades, and Z makes all his clubs, upon the last of which Y discards a heart. This gives Z eight tricks and I game, so he can now lead the 10 of diamonds and finesse against the queen for a slam. A is not likely to cover at trick 7, but the knave must be led in order that Y's suit may not be blocked later.



Problem No. 67.

Score: A B 21, Y Z 0. Z deals and leaves it to Y, who declares no trumps. Y's and Z's hands are as follows:—

Y's Hand (Dummy)—Hearts, ace, 9, 5, 2; diamonds, jack, 9, 4, 3; clubs, king, queen, 10; spades, ace, 7.

Z's Hand (Dealer)—Hearts, king, 8; diamonds, 10, 5; clubs, ace, jack, 3, 2; spades, jack, 10, 8, 6, 4.

The first two tricks as follows:—

Tricks: A B 1, Y Z 0. Tricks: A B 2, Y Z 0.

At Trick 3 B leads the queen of hearts. How ought Z to play, and why?

MOTOR MEMS FROM HOME.

ORIGINAL AND OTHERWISE.

LONDON, Friday, 19th June 1908.

Both the long and short records in the 26-h.p. standard class were broken yesterday by Mr. J. E. Hutton, with a 25.6 h.p. Hutton. The previous records in this class 71.605 miles per hour for the long distance (about 27 miles) by J. W. Stocks, on a De Dion, and the short (half-mile) one of 77.92 miles an hour, by F. Newton, on a Napier, were regarded as the most unapproachable of the class records, but Mr. Hutton beat them both under far from favourable circumstances. The track was very slippery, especially on the railway straight, on which the half-mile record attempts are timed. Consequently Mr. Hutton had to slow up somewhat on this part of the track, as is testified by the fact that his fastest lap was made at a greater speed rate than the flying half-mile.

For the long record his speed rate was 76.59 mile an hour, while the short record was accomplished at 78.9 miles an hour. The rate of speed for the fastest lap (2.11.16 miles) was 79½ miles an hour.

EVEN motorists, writes a correspondent, must recognise the fact that during the summer months they cause more or less nuisances of themselves by reason of the dust they raise. At a gymkhana the other day I noticed a car with the following legend painted on a board in front of the car: "Sorry for the dust we raise, but do not make." True, we do not make the dust, but it certainly lies very much within our power to mitigate this evil, an evil, by the way, which probably causes more prejudice against motors than anything else. For instance, such of us are on our local councils can clamour for treatment of the road by tar or a similar dust preventive, and, when the time comes round for the mending of the road, we can stand out for the latest method, i.e. stone chips and tar on a foundation of loose stones. The shape of the body has a great deal to do with dust raising, low-bodied cars hung near the ground being the worst offenders. Experience goes to prove that wire wheels raise considerably less dust than wood wheels, and possibly, the position of the exhaust outlet may contribute in some degree to dust raising. All such points as these the considerate motorist will consider when buying a car, for, after all, we desire to popularise the sport, not to put people against it.

THE Irish trials, held over a particularly severe course, in somewhat indifferent weather, proved most successful, and were remarkable for the fine driving display given by the amateur section. Trials of this description, though affording but a poor trial of the capabilities of the big touring cars, very soon find out the weak points in a small car, whose resources are strained to the utmost to keep up with its big brethren over mountainous and indifferent road surfaces. It is a noticeable feature of these trials that quite a number of small cars put up most excellent performances. Thus, for instance, in the classes for cars whose chassis price costs under £350, we find no fewer than fourteen cars gaining over nine-tenths of highest possible marks, and out of this number eight cars cost less than £200 per chassis.

THE improvement in the small car is quite phenomenal, fostered, as it has been lately, by such events as the Voiturette races in France and Sicily. What racing has done for the big car it can do for the small car, that is to say, it will teach makers to get the utmost out of an engine of given dimensions; at the same time taking into consideration economy in petrol consumption. It is quite extraordinary the good value and high-class finish which is embodied in the modern small car. For less than £200 one can purchase a four-cylinder 15-h.p. car fitted with magneto and accumulator ignition, and many other refinements hitherto associated only with luxurious cars whose cost ran in to four figures. Small cars are booming, and many a man who has bought a big, powerful touring car is repenting in sackcloth and ashes, hence the number of advertisements one sees: "For sale, 40-h.p.—Cost £1,200, price, £400. Car too powerful for owner." The big car has had its day, the handy little runabout will give one just as much pleasure, and do quite as much hard work at one-quarter the cost.

A CORRESPONDENT has written asking whether an amateur can successfully fit piston rings. There is no reason why he should not if he takes certain elementary precautions. To remove the cylinder from the crank case requires a chain and pulley, or several strong men (if the engine be a big one). When pistons are exposed, start at bottom ring, and having prised open ring slip one or two bits of metal underneath it, so that it can be pushed down them, and so removed from piston. See, when replacing rings, that the slits are all in different places, otherwise loss of compression will ensue. When replacing cylinders, take great care to guide the pistons in, and carefully manipulate the cylinders so that they are not allowed to fall into their seating too suddenly. Make a seating of brown paper, and when screwing down the engine to the base chamber tighten each bolt a little at a time, so as not to get the cylinder out of truth.

IN connection with the Renard Road Train sent out from the Daimler Works last week for service at the Franco-British Exhibition, it is interesting to note that the Daimler Motor Co. (1904), Ltd., are the sole manufacturing contractors for this train, and several large Colonial orders are now nearing completion at their Coventry works. The remarkable way in which this train negotiates roads and turns, impassable to the ordinary type of tractor, reminds one of a huge snake. The motor is of 100-h.p. and the whole design of the train is eminently suitable for Colonial transport.

THE EPSOM CLASSICS.

THE struggle for this year's Blue Riband of the English Turf was one of the best and one of the worst on record, one of the worst on account of the mediocrity of the horses taking part and one of the best from the point of view of the weather, and the unprecedented attendance.

It was also remarkable for the international character of the race. It was won by an Italian, Chevalier Ginistrelli, for the first time in its history, while America was represented by Mr. August Belmont's Norman III., and French-bred racing stock was present in Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt's Sea Sick II. It was clear from the enormous attendance present on the famous Epsom Downs that the Derby still holds its place as the National event.

The crowd on the Derby Day eclipsed all previous records, and throughout the weather was of a glorious character. The Derby was won by a rank outsider, which was also a filly, and she subsequently carried off the Oaks, in which the favourite, Mr. Richard Croker's Rhodora, came to grief. These events in themselves are sufficient to cause the Epsom meeting of 1908 to hold a most prominent place in the history of the English turf.

Throughout the period which elapsed between the decision of the Two Thousand Guineas and the race for the Derby, it was the general impression that not for years had the Epsom race presented such an open appearance, and whereas danger at one time apprehended from the French candidate Sea Sick II., this was to a certain extent, removed after his exertions in the French Derby of the previous Sunday when he had to be hard ridden to avert defeat and could then only succeed in running a dead heat.

The belief in the ability of Norman III, to confirm the Two Thousand Guineas running with those which he had beaten in that race was very strongly shared by the connections of Watson's stable and his owner, Mr. A. Belmont, had journeyed across the Atlantic with the fond hope of seeing this consummated. Unfortunately, the colt when holding a very prominent position and going well was struck into by one of the other competitors. The injury was in the cap of his near hock, and it is a regrettable fact that it was of such a serious character that he was not able to run at Ascot, and this, indeed, was an unfortunate piece of business. Had he escaped this mishap there is no telling what might have happened. The result of the race goes to prove that the English three-year-old colts this year are undoubtedly moderate.

Considering the fact that Signorinetta had run unplaced to Rhodora in the race for the One Thousand Guineas, and was only fifth to St. Wolf in the Newmarket Stakes, there existed no cause to fancy her chance for the Derby, though she presented a very well trained appearance. A well-known owner whose yearlings when they are offered for sale usually run into four figures, on looking over the Derby horses in the paddock prior to the start of the race, came across Chevalier Ginistrelli's filly. Examining her critically, he remarked: "What does Ginistrelli want running that thing for? I might as well run my collie dog." The race told a different story and how easily Signorinetta won is now a matter of history.

Like Mr. Larnach's Jeddah which was successful in the race in 1898, she started at the forlorn odds of 100 to 1. Trained by her owner, Chevalier Ginistrelli, an Italian nobleman, who has for many years resided at Newmarket, she had no professional preparation for the race. A daughter

THE EPSOM CLASSICS.

THE struggle for this year's Blue Riband of the English Turf was one of the best and one of the worst on record, one of the worst on account of the mediocrity of the horses taking part and one of the best from the point of view of the weather, and the unprecedented attendance.

It was also remarkable for the international character of the race. It was won by an Italian, Chevalier Ginistrelli, for the first time in its history, while America was represented by Mr. August Belmont's Norman III., and French-bred racing stock was present in Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt's Sea Sick II. It was clear from the enormous attendance present on the famous Epsom Downs that the Derby still holds its place as the National event.

The crowd on the Derby Day eclipsed all previous records, and throughout the weather was of a glorious character. The Derby was won by a rank outsider, which was also a filly, and she subsequently carried off the Oaks, in which the favourite, Mr. Richard Croker's Rhodora, came to grief. These events in themselves are sufficient to cause the Epsom meeting of 1908 to hold a most prominent place in the history of the English turf.

Throughout the period which elapsed between the decision of the Two Thousand Guineas and the race for the Derby, it was the general impression that not for years had the Epsom race presented such an open appearance, and whereas danger at one time apprehended from the French candidate Sea Sick II., this was to a certain extent, removed after his exertions in the French Derby of the previous Sunday when he had to be hard ridden to avert defeat and could then only succeed in running a dead heat.

The belief in the ability of Norman III, to confirm the Two Thousand Guineas running with those which he had beaten in that race was very strongly shared by the connections of Watson's stable and his owner, Mr. A. Belmont, had journeyed across the Atlantic with the fond hope of seeing this consummated. Unfortunately, the colt when holding a very prominent position and going well was struck into by one of the other competitors. The injury was in the cap of his near hock, and it is a regrettable fact that it was of such a serious character that he was not able to run at Ascot, and this, indeed, was an unfortunate piece of business. Had he escaped this mishap there is no telling what might have happened. The result of the race goes to prove that the English three-year-old colts this year are undoubtedly moderate.

Considering the fact that Signorinetta had run unplaced to Rhodora in the race for the One Thousand Guineas, and was only fifth to St. Wolf in the Newmarket Stakes, there existed no cause to fancy her chance for the Derby, though she presented a very well trained appearance. A well-known owner whose yearlings when they are offered for sale usually run into four figures, on looking over the Derby horses in the paddock prior to the start of the race, came across Chevalier Ginistrelli's filly. Examining her critically, he remarked: "What does Ginistrelli want running that thing for? I might as well run my collie dog." The race told a different story and how easily Signorinetta won is now a matter of history.

Like Mr. Larnach's Jeddah which was successful in the race in 1898, she started at the forlorn odds of 100 to 1. Trained by her owner, Chevalier Ginistrelli, an Italian nobleman, who has for many years resided at Newmarket, she had no professional preparation for the race. A daughter of that good stayer, Chaleureux, the winner of the Cesarewitch and Manchester November Handicap in 1898 out of that beautiful mare Signorina, she has stamina and speed in her blood. As a two-year-old Signorina won each of the eleven races in which she took part, and her owner was so fond of her that he treated her like a pet, and refused the most tempting offers for her.

She did not sustain her two-year-old promise, and frequently proved barren at the stud, but at length she foaled Signorino, third to Cicero in the Derby of 1905, and then Signorinetta, and the latter's now yearling sister, which has been named Star of Naples.

Naturally the Chevalier Ginistrelli was delighted at the victory of a daughter of his beloved Signorina in such an important race, and it was well deserved by such a true hearted sportsman, who takes a keen delight in breeding and training a few horses and rarely indulges in a bet.

Great as was his delight at Signorinetta's victory in the Derby, it knew no bounds when two days later the gallant filly won the Oaks, and he received a most popular ovation from the assembled thousands, numbers of whom had now supported his filly, and the climax of his happiness was reached when the King sent for him and in the Royal box facing the multitude, heartily congratulated him upon his dual victory, and the characteristic kindness of the King was applauded with tremendous cheering. Whether Signorinetta would have won the Oaks had Rhodora steered clear of accidents will always remain a contested point.

Mr. Croker's filly which was greatly fancied, was going well when French Patridge fell at the tan road which crosses the course at the mile post, and Rhodora unfortunately rolled over her. Signorinetta did not win the Oaks as easily as she did the Derby, but then she was probably feeling the effects of her exertions of two days before, but on each occasion when led back into the unsaddling enclosure she had scarcely turned a hair, and this was convincing proof of the excellent preparation which she had undergone.

Only twice previously in the history of the Derby and Oaks has the two events fallen to the share of the same filly, the occasions being in 1801, when Sir C. Bunbury's Eleanor won, and in 1857, when Mr. W. I'Anson's Blink Bony proved successful. So far as the English three-year-olds are concerned there can be no doubt that the fillies are the best. Signorinetta holds a liability in the Doncaster St. Leger.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

"What a very jolly little meeting" said a casual visitor to Tollygunge last Saturday. No doubt he had backed a winner or so, but even then it is a high tribute to the way they run things at the Club that such should be the impression on the mind of the stranger after an afternoon in which the fates seem to have conspired to do their utmost to spoil sport. But not even 1¼ inches of rain falling between 3-30 and 4-30 could damp the ardour of our Calcutta race-goers, whether active participators in the performance or passive onlookers, and the veritable stream over a yard wide that separated the books from the would-be punters was ineffective to stop the steady flow of business—probably to the regret in most instances of the fielders as the public again seemed to manage to get right there nearly every time.

The Stewards decided that jumping in the water was too unhealthy a game, and to the mingled relief and disappointment of the warriors assembled for the fray they turned the pony hurdle race into a mile on the flat and abandoned the steeplechase altogether. The feature of the day, apart from the long delays at the start, was the clever riding of Mr. Barrow, who, though he did not succeed in scoring, showed the young 'uns how the experienced man can very nearly win a race even when he isn't on the best stuff. In the Tollygunge Bowl by sheer hard riding he brought Lady Thirza up from a long way back to within a length of the winner. In the Lilliputian Cup he got Golden Star going again when apparently beat and very nearly had Lady George on the post, but perhaps the cleverest performance of all was in the Pony Plate. His mount was Lily II., who on merits appeared to have no chance, but Mr. Barrow brought up his mare on the inside and with a sudden dash all but caught Mr. Galstaun's mare at the finish, though the winner probably had nearly 10lb. in hand. He had hard luck not to get a win, but anybody can be first past the post if he has enough in hand.

The first item on the mutilated card was the substituted Pony Flat Race, 1 mile. Nimrod and then Dynamite were liked best for it, though it is hard to see why the Pink 'Un should have been overlooked, and as soon as Maud, who seemed principally anxious to get out of the mud, was done with, Mr. Corbett went on and won as he pleased with his little roan, who is a much improved pony on her last year's form. Seven of them left the paddock for the Tollygunge Bowl, but Yuglibar never got to the start, as he bolted past the new house and the tapes having broken his rider dismounted and led him back. Lord Chester got tired of the innumerable false starts and cantered round the course to the stables and after 15 or 20 minutes' delay the remnant got off, Leading Lady, Thelma and Lady Thirza in front. The first two were soon away to the front, but Mr. Barrow brought his mare up very fast at the finish and got within a length of Leading Lady. Thelma a somewhat tired third.

In the Lilliputian Cup, Kipper was a hot favourite at 6 to 4 and Golden Star and Lady George were both fairly well backed. After a good deal of delay, due chiefly to the vagaries of Golden Star, they got off to a good start. Grey Granite cut out the pace, followed by Kipper, Lady George lying last. Coming round the bend the black mare began to go through her field. Kipper overtook Grey Granite coming into the straight, but was in turn passed by Lady George, and then Golden Star, who, going very strong at the finish, eventually was only beaten by half a length by the tiring black.

Seditious was thought a very good thing for the Club Cup, 11st. 11lb. and all, but he gave the lightly-weighted Schoolboy every chance by going out and making all his own running, eventually winning, however, fairly easily by half a length.

The Pony Plate, the last, was the best race of the day to watch. Mr. Galstaun's Flower Girl was a hot favourite and indeed she won with at least 10lb. in hand, but Mr. Barrow very nearly succeeded in getting home on Lily II. and indeed ran the winner to a short head. All the way down the straight Mr. Galstaun was watching Loch Lily, who was inside him, and going easily had her beat whenever he liked. Lily II. at the last moment came through with a great rush on the inside of Loch Lily and Mr. Galstaun only just got home by a short head.

The programme for the fourth and last meeting at Tollygunge, which we publish elsewhere, embodies several new features. The Jiujitsu Stakes is now limited to G. R.'s who have never ridden a winner or for approved bona fide hacks, catch-weights 12st., 3 furlongs. The steeplechase for horses and hurdle race for ponies, which did not come off last week, appear again. There is a 7-furlong flat race for horses of the absolute novice type, who have not even won at Tollygunge, a mile flat race for 14-2 ponies, also of the "never won" class, and an absolute novelty in the way of a 4-furlong "Monsoon trial plate," open races for horses that have never won Rs. 1,000, C.W. 10st., with penalties and allowances. This will be a popular innovation and is likely to draw a big field and some pretty good horses.

We are glad to see "Pony" Howie is back again looking very much better for his trip home. We expect he will get lots of riding during the coming Monsoons.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—It may be confidently stated that Bangalore's ten days of serious sport (if this be not an Irishism) has been more successful this season than for many years past. Fields have been larger, the attendance has been much more encouraging and altogether there has been more "go" about matters than I have seen during the last decade at least. The weather, too, has been more propitious than is usual at this time of year and some very pleasant afternoons have been spent on what has been called by a man who should know "the best training course in India." By the way, however, please do not forget the italics Mr. Printer, for it is certainly not a very good course from a spectator's point of view, and as the last three furlongs are uphill it is naturally a slow course.

You have already had details of the racing, so that it will hardly be necessary to do more than comment generally upon each day. The opening day was damp and showery, but notwithstanding this the attendance was more than fair. Class told in the first event and good old Minimus, who has been a standing dish here for half-a-dozen years, just got home. Then came an objection, Honey, the winner of the next race, being said to have carried the wrong weight. As however the question depended upon whether he was a horse or a gelding, the objection was speedily settled and overruled. For the Horse Trials, no less than eleven went out, quite a mammoth field for Bangalore, and a special word must be said in praise of the winner. Morette is a very handsome mare, she won her race with lots in hand, and will prove uncommonly useful to her owner before all is done. Young Gazelle won the Pony Trials in not too good time and so ended a day which was said to have been a very bad one for the pencillers, although none of their money came the way of your scribe.

"Coop Day" provided perfect weather and an absolute crowd, the first enclosure being quite as full as was comfortable. Pretty faces and pretty frocks, too, were in great force and with same excellent music, the scene was really animated and pleasant to behold. For the Leonidas Purse (poor old Leonidas of Viceroy Cup fame!) Misty Dick was the great tip and it would have certainly been in accordance with the fitness of things had Colonel Desaraj Urs' representative won the purse which the sporting Colonel always gives in memory of his old champion. But he could only finish third to Bell Dhu and Royal Revenge. Surely these two are the least taking horses in a paddock that ever ran well on a course. But they beat better looking ones when it comes to galloping. An outsider in the hooded William Rufus next won a good race from Young Gazelle and then that queer mare Twistum, who can go with the best when in the humour, went out almost friendless and annexed the Horse Scurry. The big race of the meeting produced eight runners and Balayeuse was always a steady favourite, although a good deal of money went on Wakeful just before the start. In the event, the pony mare had the race in hand from the home turn and well ridden by Southall won in a canter by two lengths from the favourite. A popular win, for not too much luck has come "Rammy's" way of late. The other two events do not need much comment. The country-breds got away almost one after the other, but Pearl had so much in hand that he would probably have won in any case. Captain Heyland, riding a good race on his own pony, beat a hot favourite in Cocoa for the concluding event, and, if bookmakers really lost money on the opening day, they should certainly have got much of it back on the second.

Again the weather was pleasant and all went merry, etc., on Tuesday, the 7th instant. Mint justified the confidence of his many backers in the opening event, but Twistum, again in galloping humour and apparently coming on every day, beat Posco even more easily than on the preceding Saturday, although the two were meeting at 13lb. instead of 22lb. Although backed to some extent on this occasion, four's could always be had about the winner and she must have done the few who stuck to her for the two races an uncommonly good turn. Then Morette, with an extra 8lb. on her back, won the July Plate almost as easily as she had previously won the Horse Trials, although on this occasion the time for the mile was 1½ seconds slower. Pearl won a somewhat remarkable race from St. Simon in the country-bred event. He got well away and a furlong from home looked like winning easily. But Manley had broken a stirrup leather at the start, and with a somewhat lazy mount, could do little to help him. With St. Simon galloping great guns behind him, it was an interesting finish, but Pearl just got home by a head. Another good finish succeeded, Trahan riding a really good race on King Cobweb and beating a strong favourite in Vasco. But although I am not in the one and only "Jimmy's" confidence, it struck me that Envoy held such a strong lead at the three-furlong post, that Vasco had to "go after" him, which was hard lines on a 9st. 12lb. wallah and may have contributed to the result. The final event was an exercise canter for Harpist and a comfortable ride for the aforesaid Jimmy.

The Extra day was once more productive of beautiful weather and there was little or no falling off in the attendance. Comeback, with odds betted upon him, won the All Comers' Handicap as he liked, and it was then a question whether St. Patrick or Bobbaway was most fancied for the Horse Scurry. But old Bell Dhu, against whom three's and even four's could be had, beat Bobbaway in a close thing, and Philcourage, notwithstanding some three stone of dead weight, had the country-bred event at his mercy from the distance. There was a tremendous rush on Gunner for the Horse Consolation, and within three minutes he had advanced from four's to even money. Though it was more the horse's distance than the events in which he had previously started, I could not see his chance, and he was never dangerous, Misty Dick winning a good race from Victor. Again a strong tip went down when Bellis could only get third to Idleness and Phil Palm, and although it did not suit deponent's book, it was a treat to see Robinson win this race with a thoroughly characteristic run in the last hundred yards. Any odds could have been had about Non Plus in the last race of the day and meeting, and the pony won easily. So ends the brief Bangalore racing week, and it has certainly not been a punters' meeting.

But as a brief closing paragraph it may be pointed out to the Executive that things having been brighter than for many years past, there are one or two minor improvements which would make things pleasanter for race-goers at a very small cost. For instance the judge's box is either too high or too low. Cases have occurred to my certain knowledge of placed horses flashing in right under the box and being entirely unnoticed by the judge, who has delivered his verdict in all good faith. In my ignorance I have before suggested in your columns that the box should be lower, but a well-known Calcutta authority with whom I have discussed the question says "higher," so higher let it be. This would be a trivial expense, as also some improved arrangement for hoisting the numbers of the placed horses. At present, after a close finish, the whole human contents of the enclosure are rubbing their noses against a black board placed very low down, upon which the numbers are inscribed in chalk. This is not worthy of such a meeting as has just concluded, and I am sure the energetic Stewards and Secretary will see that Bangalore labours under such minor reproaches no longer. As for the rocks in the centre of the ground round which the racecourse runs, we want a few bomb throwers to experiment upon them. Their removal would improve the mise en scene 50 per cent. and surely with the ever obliging 2nd (Q.O.) Sappers and Miners a fixture in Bangalore, it should not be an impossibility.

Turning briefly to the Bangalore polo tournament which fills in the interval between the racing days here, it may be said at once that there were only three really good teams out of the six who entered, although the (Q.O.) Sappers and Miners, the Imperial Service Lancers and the 14th Hussars "B" team played sporting uphill games. In the first ties the Deccan Horse walked round the Hussars "B" team by 8 goals to nil, and the Mysore Gymkhana had an equally easy task in beating the Imperial Service Lancers to the tune of 9 to 3. In this latter game, however, it may be remarked that the superior cattle of the Gymkhana had a lot to say to the result. In the semi-finals the Mysore Gymkhana again won easily beating the Sappers by 9 goals to 2. But the match between the 14th Hussars "A" team and the 20th Deccan Horse was a great game, and with such dash did the native cavalry regiment attack that it looked almost as though they were going to rush the Hussars out of the game. A really bad bit of luck overtook the Deccan Horse, however, when Major Macquoid's pony broke a fetlock and had to be destroyed, and it may be mentioned that one of the Hussar goals was scored when this veteran and reliable player was off the ground. Still the winners, especially Astley and Stephen, played a sterling game and fully deserved their win by 4 goals to 2. But every polo player will know what playing strange ponies means.

The final was a magnificent struggle and without in the least disparaging the fine play of the Mysore Gymkhana, it was the general opinion that the better team lost, for the Hussars were usually the aggressors. At the call of time the score was 3 goals all, and when the goals were widened and the game prolonged, the Mysore team just managed to score a point and win. For the winners Bunni Singh was excellent, as also was Faiz Mahomed. For the Hussars Astley, who has improved out of all recognition during the past twelve months, played the game of his life, and it may be noted that during the last bit of play after the widening of the goals, only a pony's foot turned a shot from his stick aside. But Mason, Tilney and Major Stephen were almost as good, and whilst the Mysore Gymkhana are to be heartily congratulated upon a plucky win, the 14th Hussars may fairly be condoled with for an unlucky lose. The Honourable Mrs. Fraser presented the cup and the British Resident spoke a few well-chosen words. The game was watched by an immense gathering of natives, numbering four or five thousand, and the whole of Bangalore Society.

Our London Correspondent writes.—There will be many in India to whom the news of the death of Mr. Fred Armfield, the well-known bookmaker, will cause genuine regret. Poor Armfield had not been in good health for a very long time and in recent years had pulled through some serious illnesses; yet he held on pluckily and to the last was a good example of what may be achieved by perseverance and fair dealing; for he built up his connection from very small beginnings. He died at Brighton on the 20th ultimo, and was buried at Mitcham, Surrey, on the 24th idem.

It is some time since one of our London correspondents gave us his impressions of "The Metropolitan School of Shooting" established by Messrs. Joseph Lang and Son, Limited, at Neasden, near London. In a letter lately received he tells us of another very pleasant afternoon he had there not long ago and of the improvements and extensions he noted. "Quite apart from its excellence and completeness as a shooting school, a trying ground for guns and a place where, in the off season, one may keep one's hand and eye in, is its accessibility from London" he writes. "Turning out of New Bond Street (where Lang's business premises are) you are at the Marble Arch in a few minutes, thence there is a choice of motor 'bus, horse 'bus, or taxicab, and it is just about six miles straight down the Edgware Road and a few yards from the Welsh Harp, 'which is 'Endon way.' Or one may take train from Baker Street, and alight at Neasden close to one of the entrances to the School.

"It is quite in the country, this piece of ground, and its natural beauties of tree, meadow, hedgerow, and bush enable one to shoot 'clays' under absolutely realistic conditions. There are butts for grouse driving, towers for rocketing pheasants, arrangements by which capital driven birds are sent along or one may enjoy an imitation of walking up partridges in rough cover, bowling over rabbits across a real ride or trying one's luck at woodcock in covert which is as near the natural thing as it can be. The latter is a unique feature. The avenue of big trees, the ingenious disposition of the traps, the consummate skill with which the birds are thrown render this item on the afternoon's programme most alluring. The way bolting inanimate rabbits are sent across the ride is a revelation and the value of the practice thus obtainable can hardly be over-estimated I think. Men home on leave might put in a few pleasant and profitable hours at the 'Metropolitan,' where they will find every comfort and convenience for practice, every item of equipment for gunfitting, or the most complete plant for tuition or the correction of errors in marksmanship or weapon."

The law of probability constantly confronts the raisers of live-stock, and a study thereof certainly opens up points of absorbing interest now and again. The article by Mr. C. J. Davies on "The element of Chance in Breeding," which we reproduce elsewhere, we commend to the attention of all interested in kennel matters in this country.

Apropos a paragraph in our last issue regarding the idiotic, if not wicked, way some pet dogs are treated nowadays, we observe a writer in a London paper has some remarks rather to the point. He says:—"When one thinks of all the good that the money wasted on pampering pets might do if expended on deserving human beings or even on deserving dogs one is moved to a contemptuous pity for the dog spoilers. I am very fond of dogs. I think the dog, like the horse in the schoolboy's essay, is 'a nobel annymal,' but I don't believe that any man ever really liked a ladies' lap-dog."

THE SPOILED PUPPY.

DEAREST FRICO, sweetest pet,
I suppose you simply revel
In the fashionable set,
Where you find your proper level.
When you lay your weary head
On a pillow soft and useful,
In your little travelling bed,
May I hope your sleep is peaceful ?

Little boys and girls in slums
Would, no doubt, be very grateful
For the dainty food that comes
To your Highness by the plateful.
But, of course, one bears in mind
(Only faddists would regret it),
Being only human kind,
Little boys and girls don't get it.

Yet, dear Frico, when you take
Everything without a "thank you,"
I have sometimes longed to shake,
Even, little dog, to spank you.
Yet I own with grief sincere,
Justice here has caught me tripping ;
'Tis your mistress, Frico, dear,
Who so well deserves a whipping !

MESSRS. Thacker, Spink and Company have now in the press a new Edition of their popular "Dogs for Hot Climates." It is being printed in a handier form than before, has been carefully edited, and revised, much new matter has been added and a very special effort is being made to keep abreast of the times by a complete revision and large extension of the illustrations. There will be reproductions of photographs of type specimens and champion dogs of the present day, a feature of which alone should ensure a big demand for the book.

THE very latest thing in quickfiring weapons has been evolved in France, where we learn that a Government committee of military experts is about to conduct experiments with an electric gun which is stated to be capable of discharging 1,200 bullets a minute without heat or smoke and without the use of any explosive.

The inventor of the new gun is M. Alfred Pouteaux, of Dijon. He is forty-one years of age, and is said to have several chemical inventions to his credit. He was, it is stated, one of the pioneers of the discovery of smokeless powder in 1884, made valuable experiments with bullets of different metals in 1894, and in 1897 invented a match which contained no phosphorus and would ignite after being submerged in water. He then turned his attention to explosives, but after sustaining injuries in an accident devoted his time to the study of electricity.

According to the published descriptions the new gun resembles the Maxim gun. It consists of an electric motor, a reservoir for bullets, and a tube about six feet long and one-third of an inch in diameter, the tube being open at both ends. The bullets have no cartridges attached, and consist simply of pieces of metal. They are lifted electrically from the reservoir to the tube, on reaching which the "firing current" comes into play and hurls them from the tube. The discharge of bullets continues automatically until the reservoir is emptied.

M. Pouteaux maintains great secrecy as to his invention, and will only say at present that it is "based on the utilisation of polyphase currents of relatively high frequency."

A CORRESPONDENT who made an enquiry in reference to the recently-published statement that the King would dispose of the whole of his racing stud at the end of the present season has received the following reply from Lord Knollys :—"I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter and to inform you in reply, that there is no truth in the report to which you refer."

A NOTED shooter of rare birds has just died in the North of England. It is fervently hoped that the vacancy thus created will never again be filled.

THE Field protests against the feeding of the sparrow, which is accused of being a worthless pest. What a good job for some of us, the principle is not applied to the human race.

PIGMY SHEEP are the latest domestic pets in England. They are only about 13 inches high, and 7lb. in weight, and were discovered by an agent of Jamrach in the heart of Siberia. Apart from their diminutive size, they are similar in appearance to the ordinary English sheep. "They are sold at about £3 each, and are very popular among little children" according to a London paper.

MR. J. E. WATMOUGH, the editor of Pigeons, states that he has partaken of a pie which must have cost the host at least £100—without the pastry. Every season English breeders of high class birds place many of their "misfits"—those that have failed in competitions—in the pot rather than sell them at low prices. What a chance for the Yankee freak dinner founder ! Why not a pie of pigeons which have won prizes ?

TOWARDS the middle of last month "Nero," Bostock's best performing lion at Earl's Court, found himself minus his left eye as the result of a little difference of opinion with "Brutus" over a young and attractive lioness named "Nellie." The enterprising Bostock decided to present "Nero" with a glass eye and this is how he went about it.

With lassoes about his neck and legs, "Nero" was thrown to the floor of his cage and then drawn against the bars by eight men ; he was gagged with a stout wooden bar. Then a vet administered the sedative, a hypodermic injection of morphia. Five grains (twenty times as much as the full dose for a man) were injected under the skin of the right foreleg.

With three men inside the case holding the lion's head steady the vet reached through the bars and deftly inserted the glass eye.

After the operation when his ropes had been removed, "Nero" walked majestically about his cage, seemingly very proud of his improved appearance. But, unfortunately, a few minutes later the animal, with a mighty roar and toss of his mane, shook out his new eye.

But Bostock declares he will try again with a size larger.

Meanwhile the Cyclopean victim to science has supplied a good advertisement to the show and kept his keeper busy retailing zoological details strangely reminiscent of "The Showman" which our correspondent says he remembers to have heard at the fag end of certain Calcutta smoking concerts what time he was a Ditcher.

WE read that M. Marcel Deprez, a French savant, an engineer and a member of the French Institute, claims to have solved definitely the problem of human flight. Recently to an interviewer he said :—

"I have not the least doubt, that in a very short period, in a very few years, it will, on any day on which there is sufficient wind, be quite a common thing to see thousands of human beings soaring about in mid-air, just as you now see thousands of people skating when there is ice on the lakes and rivers."

"Have you actually succeeded," was asked, "in making a heavier-than-air instrument that will support the weight of a human being and enable him to fly ?"

"Yes," he answered. "I have not only made such a machine, but what is better still I have made it soar in mid air with the weight of a human being."

"Have you flown with it yourself ?"

"No, that is a matter for much younger men than I—for men who, like Santos Dumont, Delagrange, and Farman, look on aviation as a sport. I am very shortly about to give a practical demonstration before a small committee of the French Institute, and then before Press representatives.

"The question of equilibrium I have—it goes without saying—also solved, but some practice is required before the average person could safely soar. That is why we want the aid of sportsmen and aviators."

MAN required for demonstration purpose on old English rack (Star Chamber pattern) ; would have to be slightly stretched to show how rack worked ; man should be short to start with.—Address, M. R.

Terrifying as this advertisement appears at first sight, it admits of quite a simple explanation. It refers to a sideshow at the Franco-British Exhibition in London, where a number of instruments of torture are being exhibited, and it appeared in the "agony" column of a newspaper three weeks ago.

For the purposes of the exhibition the leather straps connected with the rack will be substituted by elastic, so that "the object of torture" will not be subjected to any pain whatever when the lever is turned. It is stated that at a similar exhibition, when the precaution of using elastic was not taken, an inquisitive visitor set the machinery in motion, and subjected the man on the rack to considerable pain.

J. BRAID, the Walton Heath professional, as will be seen in our English sporting letter, won the Open Golf Championship for the fourth time on the 19th ultimo. And he won by a very substantial margin—no fewer than eight strokes from his nearest rival, Tom Ball.

The score in itself is a record. No other championship has been won with such a low total, the previous "best" being Jack White's winning total of 296 at Sandwich in 1904.

Ball is said to be a relative of Mr. John Ball. He certainly has the instinct for golf, and is undoubtedly one of the most promising of the many promising professionals who learnt their golf at Hoylake. Unlike most of the younger players, Ball is consistent. His rounds of 76, 73, 76, and 74 certainly rank among the best performances of the meeting.

Arnaud Massy was singularly disappointing. In his first three rounds of 76, 75 and 76, he cannot be said to have risen above the mediocre. In the last round, probably realising that he was hopelessly out of the hunt, he went to pieces altogether, and took 81.

The other acknowledged leaders also displayed very indifferent form. Appended are the leading scores, full details appear further on :—

G. A. OLLEY's performance in lopping 2 hours 44 minutes off the Land's End to John o' Groat's record, thus reducing it to 5 days 5 hours 20 minutes is a very notable one, for while it is an achievement to put up new figures for such a coveted record, it is doubly so when opposed by wind and rain. The times for the main stages of Olley's ride will show how the last ten hours of wind and rain told on him. He left Land's End at 10-40 on Wednesday, the 17th June, was at Launceston at 4-7 P.M., at Exeter 7-5 P.M., at Bristol 12-45 A.M. on Thursday. At 4-50 A.M. he was at Worcester, and for the first time got inside record. He reached Wellington at 8-40, Carlisle at 10-10 P.M., and Moffat at 5-26 A.M. on Friday. Burntisland was reached at 10-51 A.M., and he was then two hours inside record. Perth at 1-43 P.M., Blair Athol at 5-20 P.M., Inverness at 3-10 A.M., Saturday, and Tain at 6-28 A.M. At this point Olley was over three and a-half hours inside record, but the elements began to bear too hardly on him, and when the northernmost point was reached nearly an hour of this advantage was lost. When the end of the ride was reached he and his followers were drenched to the skin and in a piteous condition. Olley's saddle was so thoroughly saturated that it was distorted completely out of shape.

This ride of Olley will find an honourable place on the end-to-end roll of fame. J. Lennox was the first man to put his name in the Roads Records Association book, taking nearly seven days to cover the ground in 1885. Then follow such renowned names as G. P. Mills, T. A. Edge, L. Fletcher, R. H. Carlisle, Mills eventually leaving the figures at 3 days 5 hours 49 minutes (paced). The unpaced heroes are C. J. Mather, F. W. Wesley, T. Peck, and W. Welsh. Olley is twenty-seven years of age, stands 5 feet 10 inches and rides at 11st. 6lb. His cycling career has been a very interesting one from the early days when at the tender age of twelve he rode from London to Brighton and back in a day. He has scored in the London to Portsmouth record, the Carwardine Cup, the Dibble Shield, the London to Edinburgh record, the mile record—in fact, his cycling history shows him to be a sprinter as well as a stayer. He rides a Radge-Whitworth, the machine which took him safely to

John o' Groat's weighing 22½lb. and being fitted with Constrictor tyres. This was a single geared machine, and he rode it nearly the whole way changing once or twice to a two-speeder over the very hilly roads. Rudge-Whitworth's have certainly scored over the road records this season, Fisher riding one in his brilliant capture of the 1,000 miles, details of which we recently published.

When last advices left England Georges Hackenschmidt, the eminent wrestler, was lying ill in a hospital at Aix-la-Chapelle. An operation for water on the knee was followed by paralysis of the hand and a condition that looked very much like a serious breakdown.

Barely five years have sufficed for Hackenschmidt to emerge from obscurity and to occupy one of the foremost positions in the athletic world and a unique place in the hearts of British sportsmen. "Hack" he is called affectionately, and, were he an Englishman, his triumphs could not excite greater pleasure among the people who have adopted him, so to speak. He is a Russian, and in his earlier wrestling days he dubbed himself "the Russian Lion." He was born thirty-two years ago in a little village on the coast of the Baltic. His parents were humble people and quite poor. "Hack," who is said to have amassed £40,000 by wrestling, must feel the contrast when he thinks of those early days and his present affluence.

An advertisement elsewhere introduces us to "Sanatogen," a restorative and tonic which appears peculiarly suitable for residents in tropical climates. It is not a "secret remedy," we believe its basis is the curd of milk, the stuff which contains its nitrogenous and body-building principle. It is claimed for it that it is excellent in cases where one is run down, it is good in cases where the internal machinery has gone wrong, it is strongly recommended for children, it cures anaemia and insomnia, it nourishes the old and invigorates the young and lusty. Ergo we commend it to the attention of the jaded worker, the overdone athlete, the "sere and yellow" brigade and that section of the rising generation which, according to the late Mr. William Shakespear, spends much time in "puling and puking." The advertisement, itself supplies all the rest one wants to know about it.

A Toast to the "Also Rans."

(From "To-day and Other Poems.")

Ye have drunk, O my friends, to the victors,
Ye have toasted the valiant and strong;
To the great of the earth ye have drunk in your mirth,
To the wise ye have lifted your song.
It is well—they are worthy, my brothers,
As aught that firmament spans,
But I pledge you a health to the others—
A health to the "also rans."

To the men who went down in the struggle,
To the runners who finished unplaced,
To the weak and the young, the unknown, the unsung,
The depraved, the opposed, the disgraced.
Ye are blooded, developed, completed:
They were bred without stamina, class;
'Tis to them the surpassed, the defeated,
I bow as I drain my glass.

Who are ye that should dare to reject them?
Do you know what the handicaps weighed?
Did ye suffer the pain, run the race, stand the strain,
That ye scoff at the pace that they made?
It may be that they ran overweighted,
It may be they were left at the post—
Far or near, 'tis to them, the ill-fated,
I bow as I drink my toast.

They have lost, they are ill, they are weary;
Ye have won, ye are well, ye are strong.
By the drops that they bled, by the tears that they shed,
By your mirth, by your wine, by your song,
By all that has e'er helped to sweeten
Your lives, by your hopes, by your plans,
I pledge you the health of the beaten,
The health of the "also rans."

All going well, writes a correspondent in the Sydney Referee, there will be a third meeting between Bill Squires and Tommy Burns for the championship of the world, and it is to take place in Sydney. Thus much was arranged a couple of weeks ago, when Mr. Hugh D. McIntosh, as manager of the "Burns Syndicate," endeavoured, by cable, to prevail upon Burns and Squires not to fight in Paris, but to save themselves for Australia. It was, however, impossible then to get out of it, as contracts had been entered into, the stake money posted, and all details arranged, but the cablegram, which put the matter, as I have done it though fortunately, for Mr. McIntosh and his co-speculators, in very much fewer words, conveyed that the pair were prepared to fight in Australia under certain stated conditions, of which I have full knowledge, but must not publish till the proper time.

Mr. McIntosh, like the keen business man he is got the under sea wires going immediately with a request to his syndicate's representative that the option of matching Burns with Squires in Australia should be made one of the provisions of the contract between the two parties, and now it is quite on the cards the world's champion's first engagement here will be with the Australian top-notcher, as the passages of both boxers and Burns' manager and trainer (Neall) and Squires' trainer (Jimmy Russell), have been arranged for at this end.

The final game in the Finney Hockey Challenge Cup Tournament, between the Rawalpindi Railway team and "A" Company Royal Munster Fusiliers, was played on the 4th instant at Rawalpindi and resulted in a win for the Railway team by 2 goals to 1. The game should have been played last April but had to be postponed as the Munsters were ordered to the Mohmand expedition.

The Gymkhana postponed on the 20th ultimo was held at Naini Tal on the 4th instant and was successfully carried through. Six entered for the Tent Pegging which was won in good style by Captain Pollok. The Tennis Ball and Racquet Race brought out sixteen couple. Mounted ladies had to carry tennis balls on racquets round a zig-zag course followed by their partner, who had to dismount and replace the balls on the racquet every time they fell off. Won by Miss Harenc and Captain Pollok. The zig-zag Hurdle Race for men was run off in heats, Captain Pollok placing another win to his credit. Then came the Time Race for ladies—to complete the course nearest the time set. Won by Miss Mackenzie with Mrs. Moore second. "The light that failed" stakes was won by Miss Dyer and Major Boudier from sixteen entries. Conditions were—each gentleman to ride to a lady with a candle and cigarette, and both to be lit by her. Gentleman to remount and finish the course with cigarette in mouth and candle in hand both alight. The programme closed with the Kadir Stakes for Ladies—to break a baloon with sticks, trailed on a string by a mounted pig. Crossing another or the pig, colliding or interfering with the latter to disqualify. Won by Mrs. Fremantle, Mrs. Barlow second.

Playing for the Somerset Stragglers against the Devon Dumplings on the 15th and 16th June, Prince Hitendra Narayan of Cooch Behar scored a century in both innings—104 in the first and 103 not out in the second.

The Bombay Gymkhana Athletic Meeting which has not been held during the last two years has being revived and will take place in October in the same week as the three days' meeting of the mounted sports.

The first of the mud sports meetings under the auspices of the Bombay Gymkhana was held on the 1st instant. There was a big attendance, entries were large and the sport interesting Results were as follows:—

Tent-pegging (horses) (12 entries)—Mr. Carter 1.

(Ponies) Lt. Griffin, 1; Mr. Scott, 2.

Juldie Stakes.—Mr. Boothby, 1; Mr. Mackie, 2; Mr. Griffin, 3.

Ladies' Spiral Race.—Mrs. Rumbold, 1; Mrs. Cutbush, 2.

Chattie Race.—(5 entries): Capt. Crods, 1; Mr. Baraclough 2; Mr. Turner Green. 3.

Sporting Race.—(13 entries): Mrs. Boyd and Mr. Saxby, 1; Miss Whittel and Major Sitton, 2.

Pony Scurry.—(8 entries): Mr. Griffin's Bill-Bailey, owner, 1; Mr. Blandford's Kaffir, owner, 2; Mr. Phillip's pony, Franks, 3.

Horse Scurry.—(5 entries): Mr. Griffin on Mr. Max Ronald's horse, 1; Mr. Max Ronald on his own horse 2; Mr. Carter (on his own horse), 3.

The following are the results of the important cricket matches played in England during the week:—

Oxford beat Cambridge at Lord's by two wickets.

Harrow beat Eton by ten wickets.

The Gentlemen beat the Players by six wickets.

Hampshire beat Northamptonshire by nine wickets.

Philadelphia beat South Wales by 95.

Surrey beat Northamptonshire by an innings and 15 runs.

Lancashire beat Warwickshire by two wickets.

The matches between Notts and Derby, Leicester and Hamsphire, Lancashire and Sussex, and Kent and Yorkshire were abandoned.

Reuter telegraphs the result of the Olympic Lawn Tennis Championship as a victory for Ritchie representing England, who beat Froitzheim (Germany) the score being 7—5, 6—3, 6—4.

In India where cholera claims so many victims, the care of one's drinking water has long been a recognised axiom. There are many in Calcutta who are not satisfied with the purity of the filtered water which runs through the pipes to the houses for drinking purposes and most people refilter their water themselves. Such will be interested to know of a new patent water filter and anti-splasher which has just been put on the market. The "Hydriol" fits any tap, is easy to fix, simple in construction and cannot get out of order. Owing to the double filtering action it is very effective in abtracting from the water and retaining injurious organic or mineral substances and impurities. Moreover it is easily cleaned. It consists of three parts easily unscrewed; the lower chamber can be detached and the filtering substance renewed at a trifling cost, which renewal should take place weekly, fortnightly or every three weeks according to the state of the water: the middle chamber contains gravel or crushed pumice stone, which should be taken out every 6-12 weeks boiled and put back. The "Hydriol" is moderately priced and within the reach of all. Further particulars can be had of Messrs. Nawn and Co. (agents for importers), 6, New China Bazar Street, Calcutta.

At last we have a theatre worthy the metropolis of India. The Grand Opera House was opened on Tuesday last, and Mr. E. M. D. Cohen, to whose enterprise the Calcutta public owes this up-to-date play house, is to be congratulated on the result of his labours, and we wish him prosperity in his venture. Lofty, comfortable, well ventilated and cool, the structure, which is not yet quite finished, has three tiers, and from every seat in the house, in stalls, boxes, dress circle and gallery, an excellent view of the stage may be had. There is accommodation for about two thousand people, promenades, cloak rooms, and a plentiful supply of electric fans add to the public comfort; the stage is large and commodious—in short the new opera house is a theatre of which the city may well be proud. There was a good house on the opening night when a fine series of Pathé Freres pictures was exhibited, the intervals being filled up by the splendid string band of the Gordon Highlanders. Mr. Cohen was "at home" to his many friends and a very pleasant evening was spent.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 26th June 1908.

The 28th June is the official date for the beginning of the English summer: it has made its appearance wreathed in chilly smiles. Keen, though invigorating, breezes during the day have caused overcoats to reappear and at night we are glad of the extra blanket we hoped we should not see again till the leaves were kindling into red. This morning's temperature was 53°; how would that suit you in Calcutta now? Still we are persuading ourselves that summer is with us and the universal straw hat of the men and the light and many hued habiliments of the ladies help to keep up the illusion. One portent of summer is absent; the Panama hat is nowhere to be seen. Hatters who have a stock of it are hopeless of a reviving fashion. Popularity has killed popularity. The most expensive of head-coverings, the Panama, should have remained with us. But, with a fatal enthusiasm, everybody who could raise the guinea, which is the lowest price for which a self-respecting Panama can sell itself, made the sacrifice, and the Panama was no longer smart. Our obedience to fashion was never more apparent, for the guinea Panama is an enduring thing, with a generation's life in it. Everyone, therefore, has a Panama at the back of his drawer, yet no one dare bring it out.

Waterside men, hotel keepers and others in a position to judge, are agreed that Ascot Sunday (the last) was a record up the river. From Richmond to Maidenhead the Thames was almost as crowded as Piccadilly on a matinée afternoon. By one o'clock there was not a punt to be hired at Taplow or Maidenhead. At the latter place people offered as much as £4 for one for the afternoon. In the morning, when the dark clouds threatened rain, the boat-owners were glad to accept £1 for the day's use of a punt.

The rush on the hotels for lunch and tea was so phenomenal that at four o'clock many of them were "eaten out." Hungry but patient visitors waited in some cases for nearly two hours before they could obtain refreshment. Seven and sixpence for a plate of cold beef and a quarter bottle of claret, five shillings for a steak and vegetables, half a crown for a pot of tea with bread and butter. These were some of the charges made—and paid.

In the late afternoon Boulter's Lock presented a very gay and animated spectacle. The massed launches and smaller craft, with their fair occupants wearing the fashionable large hats and carrying vari-hued parasols, resembled a floating garden party. At one time some forty large launches and about a hundred punts and boats were awaiting their turn to pass the lock gates, and they waited for three and four hours, some of them. It was estimated that taking both the up and down river traffic, over one thousand craft passed through the lock.

The great "Votes for Women" demonstration in Hyde Park last Sunday afternoon was an amazing success, and it is estimated that when the programme closed with the "great shout," nearly half a million people were massed round the twenty platforms. When the speeches were over and the bugles blew to give the signal for the shout of "Votes for Women" a roar went up from the mighty multitude that must have put to shame any sound that Hyde Park had ever heard before in all the demonstrations that have been held there during its long history.

About seventy women speakers addressed the meeting from the aforesaid platforms and at the conclusion of their exhortations the inevitable resolution was put. It was a model of brevity, and in this respect compared favourably with many that are proposed when the lords of creation do assemble for a common object.

"That this meeting calls upon the Government to give the vote to women without delay."

This resolution was sent to the Prime Minister with a request that a statement of the Government's intentions with regard to woman suffrage shall be made.

The International Horse Show at Olympia has been a marvellous undertaking wonderfully well carried out, and was considered by most people the best show held in London this summer. The interior arrangements were gorgeous, the floral and other decorations transformed the place into a veritable fairyland; the work in the arena was splendidly performed, the entries were enormous and the big foreign competition a pleasing and convincing feature. It is needless to say that the standard in all classes was of the highest and the judging of the best. Naturally the jumping and course events attracted the lion's share of attention. And the jumping was often of the eye-opening order. The course was a severe trial for both horse and rider, including, as it did, twice round a series of gates, fences, and triple bars, thence over an awkward "double," finishing with the "pianoforte" jump, which took the form of a high mound on to which the horses had to jump and then make their way down an inclined plane to the exit. It was in the last-named jump that accidents occurred. Some of the riders were sent flying over their horses' heads, and several had nasty falls, but no bones were broken, though many bruises were sustained. But while accidents were not wanting there were certainly many exhibitions of superb horsemanship and graceful jumping, and among the best were those for which our foreign visitors were responsible. For example Lieutenant Volpini, an Italian Cavalry officer, and his bay gelding, Airone, which cleared 7 feet without the suspicion of a touch. This and many other feats by the Belgians, Austrians and Frenchmen were greeted with thunders of applause.

At the Windsor Castle garden party last Saturday there were over eight thousand guests and, as may be imagined, the gathering was one of remarkable brilliance and distinction. Everybody who was somebody seemed to have been there, among them several Indian princes and Mrs. Dosebai Cowasji Jessewalla, a Parsee lady of some seventy-eight summers. I confess to never having heard of her before, but she was responsible for one of the incidents of the afternoon when she presented to their Majesties some beautiful specimens of gold and silver embroidery worked by her deft old fingers.

Public feeling against that evil smelling, nerve shattering, death dealing atrocity the motor omnibus found expression in influential quarters last Monday when, at the Mansion House, a big meeting of bankers, merchants and City men, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, discussed their delinquencies and decided to take action and appointed a deputation, headed by Sir John Bell, to wait on the Home Secretary, the President of the Board of Trade, and the President of the Local Government Board on the subject of the intolerable nuisance and terrible danger of the motor traffic of London. The following resolution was passed:—

That this meeting . . . is of opinion that in the interests and safety of the citizens and inhabitants, amended legislation is absolutely necessary . . . and, therefore . . . urges the necessity of providing the police authorities with such legislative powers as will enable them to regulate the construction and use of motor vehicles.

A second resolution (and a much more important and far-reaching one) urged that the time had arrived when a Central Traffic Board should be formed, with powers to give effect to the recommendations made by the Traffic Commission of 1905. This action comes not a moment too soon, for it is no exaggeration to say that in many parts of the city with racing motor cars and taxi cabs, electro buses, steam-driven vans and motor cycles, added to the other vehicles on the streets it is often courting death to step off the pavement, and always a matter for devout thanksgiving when one has safely negotiated a busy crossing!

There is to be no memorial to Charles Dickens in the Embankment Gardens. That is the L.C.C. decision. It will be remembered that Mr. Percy Fitzgerald offered to erect a statue to the novelist if the County Council would accept it, but the latter body, having considered the matter, has been impressed by the fact that the great novelist himself, in his will, expressed the desire that no such memorial should be erected. On this ground alone the L.C.C. has decided to refuse the offer.

When Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton revived "The Taming of the Shrew" at the Adelphi Theatre four years ago, it proved one of the biggest successes of the season. There was a life and breeze about the performance all too often absent from even the lightest Shakespearean revivals which won the ready favour of playgoers. Last Monday night's revival at the Aldwych, with Mr. Asche and Miss Brayton in their familiar parts, was as enjoyable as ever. There may be those who consider that there is a tendency to "clown it" rather too much on occasions, but there is no question about the effectiveness of the boisterous spirit in which the comedy is treated. The more sentimental passages have been judiciously cut, and in consequence the audience is kept continually chuckling. Mr. Oscar Asche as Petruchio and Miss Lily Brayton as Katharina last night repeated their former success, and although the rest of the cast are somewhat unequal, Messrs. Arthur Whitby, Vernon Steel, and Henry Kitts and Miss Muriel Ashwynne all acted admirably. The staging left nothing to be desired, and the reception was enthusiastic.

From newspaper folder to prima donna is a big step, yet it has been successfully taken by Mdlle. Natalina Cavalieri, the Opera star who made a brilliant début at Covent Garden in Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" last week. Her career has not lacked in romance. She began by folding newspapers in Rome and sang at her work. She attracted the notice of a Café Chantant proprietor; she sang for him for five pence a night plus what tips she could get out of the audience. Next she sang and danced at the Folies Bergeres and Paris was at her feet: after this did variety turns at the London Empire. Then she appeared in opera in Italy, Russia, and America and enraptured every audience. Now she captures London. Also she is lovely to gaze upon—probably the most beautiful woman on the operatic stage.

"A war on pirates." Such is the latest movement taken in hand by the Variety Artistes' Federation—commonly known throughout the profession as the V.A.F.—and there can be no doubt as to the importance of the many questions which have just been brought under discussion. Practically every performer in variety's domains is interested in this problem of the protection of songs, acts, tricks, gags, "business," and the rest, and the fact that the music-hall "pirate" has been uncommonly busy of late in the appropriation of other people's wares, and that the law, as it now stands, cannot touch him, has led to the present crusade. As the Performer which is the official organ of the federation, puts the matter: "We are met by laws that are singularly inept; as ill-designed, in fact, to prevent the robbery of original works as laws well could be." It is pointed out further that another difficulty in the case arises from the existence of "a certain sort of manager who is ever on the look out for cheap talent, and who bothers himself very little whether that talent is nasty in its methods, as well as low in its price." In addition to these two main obstacles to reform, there are "the unscrupulous artists and the mechanical pirate."

THERE is very much more than average merit in the new drama by Mr. Jack Denton, entitled "Convict 99," produced at the Crown Theatre, Peckham. The play is adapted from Mrs. Marie Connor Leighton's story which first appeared in Answers, and in its stage version the tense interest of the novel, with their human sympathy and moving incidents are very faithfully set forth. The performance met with an enthusiastic welcome, and the chief players among whom must be mentioned Mr. Frank Beresford, Mr. E. Maule Cole, and Miss Margaret Murch, were fully entitled to the appreciation shown them.

MR. ROBERT COURTNEIDGE is now busily engaged upon the new musical piece which he is writing in conjunction with Mr. A. M. Thompson. The composition of the score he has entrusted to Mr. Lionel Monckton and to Mr. Howard Talbot. His contract with them is, however, not only for the piece referred to, but for another which will follow in due course. The first of these pieces will not be produced until early in the coming year, whether at the Queen's or at some other West End theatre is not yet settled. The lyrics Mr. Arthur Wimperis will provide. Although the novelty may be described as a costume play the story is modern, which reminds one rather of "Lord and Lady Algy." At the Adelphi, at Christmas, Mr. George Edwardes and Mr. Courtneidge have agreed to present a pantomime on the subject of "Cinderella" with Miss Phyllis Dare as the heroine, Miss Carrie Moore as the Prince, Mr. Dan Rolyat as the Baron, and Mr. John Humphries a comedian who has made a considerable mark in the provinces, as the Baroness. For the coming autumn Mr. Courtneidge is dividing his forces, Mr. Rolyat touring with "Tom Jones," for which Mr. Edward German has composed several new numbers and Miss Phyllis Dare with "The Dairymaids."

AN Indian Mutiny veteran has just died at Hereford. I refer to Mr. H. Cecil Moore, medical officer of health for that city, and president of the Woolhope Naturalists' Field Club. He was the son of Brigadier-General Moore, of the Bengal Army. The deceased gentleman served in the Royal Engineers during the Indian Mutiny. Twice he received the thanks of the Government for his services. In 1866 he retired invalided, and then entered the medical profession. He had been medical officer at Hereford for nine years, and had carried out several useful reforms.

MR. JOHN BURNS likes nothing better than to make himself conspicuous in the course of his walks abroad; he loves to patronise the little urchins, or chide the mischievous, or teach all and sundry their duties and he will be in at the worry if he spots anything which suggests a jostle or a little horse play. The other day he saw a bobby wedged between a bus and a taxi cab. Such a chance for a little notoriety was not to be lost (for, of course, it would be in the papers, with portrait) so he rushed to the rescue and tried to pull the taxi away! He prides himself on his strong man feats, but as he is getting a wee bit too old to be throwing taxi cabs about he naturally failed to extricate the uncomfortable Robert, and he got a very severe strain which laid him up. But the advertisement was forthcoming right enough: also a call of sympathy from a deputation of suffragettes!

MR. FRANKAU, the managing director of a City firm, and his mother (whose pen name is "Frank Danby") have provided a certain section of society with a little mild sensation this week. They were expelled from "Almack's"—a bridge Club—the gentleman for having failed to pay his sub, the lady for being his mother and—as it is alleged—because of personal spite on the part of the Club Secretaries Sir Hugh Stewart and Mrs. Amy Caldwell. They brought an action for damages and the evidence in the case provided unique entertainment to the fashionable crowds—chiefly of the fair sex which attended the hearing before the Lord Chief Justice. There was a good deal of dirty linen washed in court and some curious lights were shed on bridge as played at Almack's. In the end the jury found that the acts of the Secretaries were unfounded and malicious and the damages were assessed at £50.

MR. BERNARD SHAW says he only writes blank verse when he is in too great a hurry to write ordinary prose. Here is a hint for the hard-driven reporter. In the near future to save time our newspapers may print their news items like this:—

I.

The clock had scarcely struck the hour of ten
Last night, when Mr. Jones' clothing shop,
In Hammersmith, was seen to be ablaze.
The fire brigade were quickly on the scene;
And, after twenty minutes strenuous toil,
Snatched from the fiery element its prey,
The damage is but slight, and we are told
Insurance covers it. Business as usual.

II.

Yestreen Bill Gubbins sought the "Rose and Crown,"
But was refused the draught for which he craved,
Because of sundry scandals in the past.
Baulked, he upheaved a gleaming pewter pot,
And straightway hurled it at the barman's head.
It missed the servitor, and smashed a glass,
The worth of which was twice four golden coins.
As for Bill's language——! Well, at Marlboro' Street
The Bench remarked that it would be a month.

SURELY never before have so many bishops been gathered together as this week when the Pan-Anglican Congress made the churchman a common object of the streets to be met almost every few yards singly or in platoons. They congressed most successfully one hears, and concluded their operations on Wednesday with an imposing ecclesiastical procession to St. Paul's Cathedral. Over two hundred archbishops, bishops, and leading churchmen in full canonicals—and right smart and gay some of them looked—marched up Ludgate Hill at midday through the immense throng that blocked up the church yard and its many approaches—for anything will attract a crowd in London—a broken window will do it—and the Archbishop of Canterbury addressed and blessed a congregation of over five thousand. While this was in progress all the wheeled traffic which should have passed through Cheapside and down the hill had to be diverted and naturally the blocks in traffic were frequent and naturally the strenuous city man, whose precious minutes represent money, swore like the army in Flanders. I wonder what sum would represent the time lost by twenty-five city gents in a bus held up ten minutes on a busy day: probably much more than one would imagine.

* * * * * *

A REFERENCE to bishops recalls the recent midnight Sabbath march through Westminster of His Grace of London. I told you about it some time ago. Methinks the worthy divine is now in a very unenviable position as the result of the affair. In the course of an address delivered at the Albert Hall he made some very sweeping statement as to the almost incredible number of "semi-drunken and drunken men" he allured from the pubs that evening. One Mr. Stanley Boulter, Chairman of the Brewery Debenture Holders Committee, took the matter up. He addressed a circular to every pub in Westminster by which the procession passed asking for statistics of the "drunks" of the evening and the result is rather startling. Over twenty public house proprietors have given their most emphatic denial to the Bishop's statement; some replies, as was only to be expected, were rather strongly worded, the good man has been charged with malice, slander, and the failing King David in his haste attributed to all men, making no exception in favour of the higher clergy. The poor bishop has been convicted of culpably reckless talking to put it mildly and one cannot envy him his present position.

CORRALED BY TURTLES.

To the Englishman the term turtle only conveys the idea of the queer Testidinata, or animal fish between two shells, commonly called a tortoise, connected with the nursery on the one hand and with the Guildhall feast on the other. With the American, however, the meaning is different, and well does he know the difference between the dainty Terrapin, the salt-water varieties of the Chelonis, the mud-turtles of every penned-up stream, and the fierce, aggressive snapper, the brute that, if he once get a hold on your finger or foot, will continue to bite with the head even after it is served from the trunk, and the teeth of which have still to be forced loose as a dog's from a bone. The American snapper is a terror, and numberless adventures with them have been recorded. One of the most interesting of these was told me by a western man some little time ago, which I think will bear relating.

We were out hunting antelope, and had camped for the night when two men—hunters—strolled into the camp, having located the blaze from their own camp at a mile or so distance, and being friends of our guide, sat down for a chat. While we were talking a small turtle made his appearance, and was picked up by one of the party, who threw it across to the guide; he looked up and said, "Jack, tell us about that muss you and Mike had with the turtles two years back." And Jack, leaning back, told the following story:—

"The only way over Needle Pass, in Arizona, was by Rillit's buckboard (a spring waggon) stage, and we wanted to go up to the mines by it, but the driver was sick, and there was no one to take his place, and the boss at Rillit's would not go himself; the only way, therefore, in which we could cover the matter was to undertake to drive ourselves, and either find a man to return with the vehicle, or promise to bring it back ourselves inside of a week. Mike had been over the road a score of times, and Rillit knew him well. I had a big piece of work waiting for me up there, so Mike said he would do it, and we started off about three hours or more later than the regular time, and there were no other passengers. The road was rough, often only a mere scratch on the mountain-side of boulders, and the night was as black as the bottomless pit, but we trudged along, and soon after midnight we passed over the ridge, and into an atmosphere not quite so dense in its blackness as when climbing up the mountain-side. This was the top of the pass and the remainder of the ride was all downhill, with not more than two hours of daylight, so Mike let the horses go at a lively pace, hoping to get it over, and strike the mine.

"Thus we rolled along until we reached an open spot, banked in by a belt of pine timber growing so close that it was practically impossible to get the team ahead, and that was the first intimation we received that within sight of our destination, as one may say, we had got off the road, and had to lay up till morning came to light us out. That was no great hardship, and we began to make the best of it. The horses were unhitched, the blankets spread out, and a noble pile of pine cones and knots heaped up for a fire. It is not particularly pleasant to be lost in a pine wood by night, the blamed trees are so straight up and down, and have no branches, and whichever way you look there is nothing but blackness, until day dawn; moreover, there always seem to be more faces grinning among the trunks than there is with any other trees. However, we lay down after we started the fire, there was scarcely wind enough to stir the trees, but in a pine wood there is always enough to swing the cones before they fall, and make a noise like the moaning of the ocean. We heard it that night, and hoped it would assist our slumbers. Well, Mike went to sleep, but I could not, and I lay there, and thought and thought and listened, until it seemed to me that the whispering was growing louder and louder, as if the sea was coming nearer; at first I thought it was just nervousness, and would not give way to the idea, but at last was induced to sit up and listen, and, Great Scott, it was not fancy, but a solemn sober fact!

"What was it? I woke Mike up, and he listened, and then we found that the horses had heard it too, and were shaking like leaves, as they will when they hear anything that they do not understand. Louder and louder it grew, and we thought it must be the whistling sound that goes before a storm. The trouble was that we could not tell from which direction the sound came; it seemed to come from all sides, also from above, and from below. Finally we decided to make ready for a move, and getting up we threw some wood on the fire, and Mike went to the horses to put their bits in their mouths, and be ready for a start, just as soon as we could make up our minds in which direction we should move. The horses were ready to go, and just as Mike put the bit in the mouth of one, he heard a sound in the brush close to him, and turning quickly he whipped out his revolver, and blazed right at it. This increased the roaring until it became deafening, and now there was a hissing sound along with it. I am not, it is certain, easily scared, and as for Mike, he was a rough-and-tumble frontier boy, and frightened of neither man nor devil, but I guess he as well as myself had goose-flesh on his back that he could have hung his hat on without much difficulty for several minutes after he heard that noise. 'Let's get out of this,' said Mike in a shaky voice, but it was already too late, the trouble was on us, and there was no longer any doubt as to what it was. As the fire blazed up, we could see that the ground was alive with something, which seemed to be moving along like a panorama, and a close look told us that it was covered with mountain terrapin or turtles, mad as thunder, some of them three feet long, as old as Adam pretty nearly, and a drove had struck us coming up from the Gulf of California for winter quarters in the desert. The old timers say that they carry water with them like a camel, and frequently get 200 miles from the Gulf and so spend years away from saltwater.

"It was a hard fix, and we realised it still more when the horses broke loose, and kicking like mad, got to the edge of the little clearing, then stopped and stood still with the turtles biting at their feet. There is evidently no way out, the nags were for the moment puzzled, then in a minute, screaming, they started off, and we could hear them sliding over the shells, slipping, kicking, and crunching them until the sound died away in the distance. Nearer and nearer came the turtles, and all there was left for us to do was to climb into the waggon, for the trees were too large and too straight to reach the lowest branches. So into the waggon we got, and Mike was so mad that so long as the fire lasted he kept blazing away at them with his gun, killing one at each shot, and that mistaken movement on his part nearly proved fatal to us. As the dead turtles barred the way of the living ones, the nearest one stopped, and laying hold of the body commenced to suck the blood, at least so it seemed to me. This caused a block, and in less time than it takes to relate, they began to pile up at the side of the waggon, and I swear that the expression in their eyes told plainly enough that what had commenced as an accident, was now a dead set, earnest endeavour on their part to get into the waggon and eat us. There is no doubt about it in my mind. On each side of the waggon they piled up, and soon they rose in a never stationary heap as high as the waggon. Those who have never seen a heap of turtles can scarcely picture it. It is a mound in which the under ones are constantly climbing through the mass to the top, there is no rest, the shells slip and clatter, and still the upward movement goes on, still the shells are tilted skyward, still the snake-like heads glare up with those cruel, glassy eyes, pitiless, unwavering—a cross between those of a snake and the dead Pharoah.

"Seizing the waggon shafts we broke them off, and using them as levers, thrust the upper ones down and away. It was hard work, the brutes were heavy, they seized each other by the claw, or the neck, and held on, and as the upward movement was checked, the area of the pile spread. The waggon began to move around, and one of the hind wheels, which was a trifle weak, gave out under the pressure and broke under us, but it did not fall, because of the turtles under the bottom board of the body That settled the matter, and it was plain that there was nothing left but to do as the horses had done, and make a run of it. It was a risky thing to attempt, but needs must when the old fellow drives. Mike jumped first landing square on a turtle's back, and went staggering along calling to me, so I braced up my nerves and followed, and I tell you it was ticklish work. Wire-walking was nothing to it! Then we scrambled along, knowing that unless we fell we were safe, but there were so many turtles that we began to think the earth was covered with them.

"Suddenly Mike stopped, looked down, and in the growing light, said, 'Great Scott, but we have come the wrong way, and are walking right with them.' Well, I was so tired with the hard and dangerous walking that I nearly fell down then and there. A word from Mike saved me, for looking ahead he saw a small rock, about twelve feet high, and we knew if we could reach that we would be better off, and away we went for it. It was smooth-sided, and we had a sorely hard time getting up on the top; but at last we succeeded, and then lay down to rest, wearily watching the dawn climb higher over the hills. Then we saw that the rock we had climbed was right at the edge of a canon, with sloping sides, and that this canon was clearly the objective point of the turtles, for they were tumbling over the edge at a great rate, without noticing us, thank the gods! Dawn grew stronger and stronger, and then became overcast, as the rain clouds came up and spread east and west until they burst, and Lord, how it did rain! We were drenched in a minute, and the sounds of the big drops on those turtle shells was like peas on a drum. It rained hard for over an hour, and still the army of turtles filed over the edge into the canon until it seemed there was no end to them. But at last we understood it all. Away up the canon, a mile or more, there appeared a tiny silver streak that grew until it passed beneath us a tiny stream of water that swelled with the rain, until in an hour it was a raging freshet ten feet deep, and down there in the swirl were the turtles, with more still following.

"They had known all about it! There were no flies on their weather glass! They had it down clearly that it was going to rain, and they knew where to find water in plenty. Of course, they would not have been averse to a little free lunch on the way if they could have got at us, but that had merely been a side issue, their real errand was pure business. We sat there for a considerable time, looking at the turtles, who were being thrown around in the mad swirl, and we could hear their shells grinding against each other and crackling with the force of the freshet whenever they jambed, and then, having pulled ourselves together a bit, we climbed down and made our way to camp, just as they were coming to look for us. One of the horses only reached the mine; the other fell, and never got up again, two days afterwards we found the skeleton with not a pound of meat on the bones and half-a-dozen big turtles lying around. The boys made a subscription for the price of Rillit's horse and Mike's hair went as white as snow inside of a week, so now he is known as Turtle Mike."

Fishing.

PACIFIC COAST SALMON.

With the possible exception of the codfish in point of food value, and of the tuna or the tarpon from the angler's standpoint, the salmon of the Pacific Coast—from Monterey to Alaska on the American side and down to China on the Asiatic—is the greatest fish that swims.

Scores, if not hundreds, of anglers have crossed a continent to wet their spoons in the bay of Monterey in the pursuit of the quinnat; thousands and hundreds of thousands have fed on the canned salmon which the West yearly pours out to the East, but of all of these there are few who know the whence and whither of the salmon's existence, or anything at all of its life, the most mysterious of any of the finned dwellers in the sea.

On the Pacific coast of the United States there are five species of salmon: The quinnat known also as the chinook, tyee, king, Columbia River and Sacramento salmon; the blueback salmon, called sockeye, a corruption in all probability of the Indian name "saw qui;" the coho or silver salmon; the hump-back salmon, and the dog salmon, the last two of little value as food or game fish.

To begin at the beginning, one should bear in mind that all Pacific coast salmon, in contradistinction to all other large fish of their own or other tribes, die when their spawning time is over. They spend all their growing time in the ocean, where is not definitely known, but supposedly near the mouth of the streams in which they were hatched. At spawning time, however, they one and all seek the waters of ice cold mountain streams, making their spawning beds on the riffles, often so shallow that the water seems scarcely sufficient to cover their bodies.

Practically nothing is known of the ocean life of these fishes, except that it is the only time at which they will take the hook, and consequently, about the only time the sportsman is interested in them. Monterey, California, despite the famous salmon streams of the north of England and Scotland, holds the palm for salmon fishing.

To this bay, in June, come the big quinnats, full fed and yet eager to dash at the shimmering spoon. Then the pretty harbour is filled with boats and royal sport is to be had, fighting fish which range up to 30 pounds in weight. Market fishermen have invaded this field within the past five years, but this does not seem to have affected the sport, though hundreds of tons are salted yearly.

Inasmuch as the quinnat is the leader, both as a food and as a game-fish, it seems proper to discuss it and its habits first; but before doing so, it may be well to consider another point or two concerning the general group of the Pacific Coast salmon.

When these fish reach maturity—and how long this development process requires is not known—they, of course, seek fresh water in which to spawn. After quitting the ocean which has been their home for months, possibly years, they never taste food, a habit peculiar to the Pacific Coast salmon and a fact which ends only with their death.

Upon entering fresh water the digestive organs of these salmon begin to shrink and in a short time they are barely visible. The fish lose all their fat, the skin becomes much thicker and the flesh changes from its pink hue to a sickly white. Usually the trip up the stream to the spawning bed, costs the salmon from a quarter to a third of its weight, no light matter when the fish in question weighs from twenty to thirty pounds.

Peculiar, too, is the habit the male quinnat has of growing big canine teeth on his jaws, which become elongated and hooked on the ends. The body becomes more or less flat, the flesh flaccid and the skin of the male a rusty, grayish red. The female, too, changes colour, but puts on a sort of gray shade instead of the red of her mate.

From even the immense catches of the five species of Pacific salmon which are caught up and down the Pacific Coast one can form no idea of the hordes which pass up the streams at spawning time. A salmon stream at high water is one of the most inspiriting sights on which an enthusiatic angler ever gazed. Hundreds and thousands and tens and hundreds of thousands of the great fish are seen hastening, pushing and crowding each other just like humans, each one eager to be first at his own grave.

After the eggs are laid about fifty days are required for the hatching. The young has a large yolk-sac on its body on which it subsists for several weeks and this makes it helpless until all the food supply shall have been exhausted. These young are known as "alevins" and they spend the first month or six weeks hiding as best they can in the bottom of the stream where they were hatched. At this time, of course, the alevin makes very acceptable food for trout or other full grown fishes in the brooks of their nativity.

When the yolk-sac is gone the fish becomes a "fry," is able to swim and eat and is about to begin his journey to the sea. This journey may be four or five miles or it may be 1000 or 1,500 miles, down the Columbia or some other mighty stream. Some of these fry, for little-known reasons, remain at the place of their hatching several months after others of their kind have begun their trip to the sea. Eventually, however, these, also, slip away to the ocean.

The writer has argued in vain with several men who had caught these fingerling salmon while trout fishing in the north-west and who claimed from this that young salmon always stayed in fresh water for some time after hatching. It is hard to disprove this idea by any practical method as the salmon fry travel down stream almost entirely by night giving even the most careful observer little opportunity to see them. All the migrating fry seen by any one who has ever discussed the subject with the writer were moving backward and travelling at about the speed of the stream.

Judging from this, it must take these tiny salmon many months, possibly more than a year in some cases, to reach the sea from the headwaters of long streams. Fry which leave the mountain fastnesses wherein the Columbia is born must lose thousands from their ranks on the long journey to the sea. But this loss never seems to affect the numbers which return each season to the fresh water streams of the coast to reproduce their kind.

And now, to return to the quinnat, which we left in Monterey Bay. This is the largest and most valuable of all the family; its flesh is the standard for colour—a real "salmon pink," and it brings the highest price of all the salmon taken on the West Coast.

Weighing up to seventy-five pounds, a powerful swimmer and a voracious feeder, the quinnat ranges from Monterey on the California Coast clear up through Bering Sea and south on the other side the Pacific to China, at least, and possibly further down the rim of Asia.

Quinnat salmon are most usually found during the spawning season in the large rivers rather than in the smaller streams. Another peculiarity of this species is the queer dwarfs known locally as "grilse." These fish, always males, are always deprived of some part of the sexual organism. What brings about this deformity is also unknown, along with about all the rest of the salmon's life history. These "grilse" are small, seldom running above six pounds, often as low as one. (The term "grilse" is properly applied only to normal young salmon on their first return from salt water to fresh.)

After the quinnat comes the blueback salmon, weighing on the average, about five pounds. It is one of the most valuable of the world's food fishes. Its flesh is deep red and probably more of its members are canned than of all the rest of the five species put together, but it does not command the price set by the quinnat and, therefore, is not so valuable. Instead of spawning in the riffles of streams as do other salmon, the sockeye will ascend only streams which flow from lakes and in these natural reservoirs will spawn, seeking deep water for the process.

The blueback or sockeye is most abundant further north, notably in Alaska, and immense hauls are made by seine in the shadow of the Circle. As many as 50,000 sockeyes have been taken at one drawing of the seine, while 10,000 is merely the average take in one indrawing of the huge net, which is handled by steam.

The silver salmon (coho), while almost as large as the quinnat, is of a pale colour as to flesh and of little value. Neither is it of any importance as a game fish, seldom frequenting waters within range of the average sportsman.

The humpback salmon is so called because at the beginning of the spawning time a hump forms on the back of the male. Its flesh is worthless and it is about as game as a German carp in the Chicago drainage canal, if such a combination be possible. In the southern part of its range, the humpback spawns only every other year; further north it is said to spawn yearly.

The dog salmon, also worthless save when packed under false names, ends the list.—Western Field.

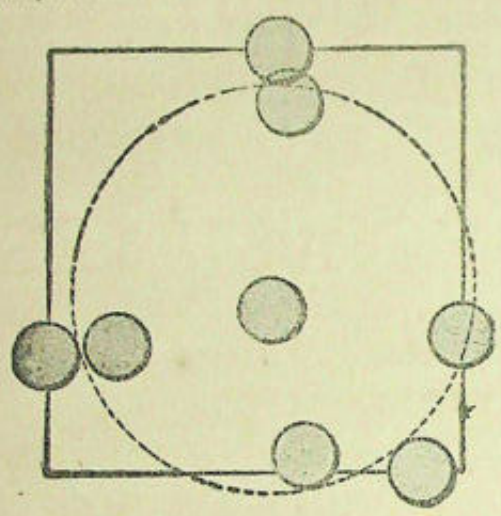
LANG



New No. 2 ·360 Bore RIFLE.

In comparison with the ·400/·360 the muzzle velocity of this new Cartridge is approximately 230 F.S. higher, and although the charge is increased the same low pressure, viz., 14 tons, is maintained. The increased velocity coupled with the extra weight of bullet and consequent greater striking energy gives one a rifle that has practically the stopping power of a ·450 or ·500 Black Powder Express, and is consequently an ideal weapon for deer stalking and for shooting heavier forms of non-dangerous game; moreover, in consequence of the importation of the ·303 into India being prohibited, it is well worthy the notice of Sportsmen in that country who desire to have a weapon in which is combined High Velocity, Flat Trajectory, Great Striking Energy. Minimum Recoil, and in which, through low pressure, a greater margin of safety is given and the risk of jamming reduced to a minimum.

VELOCITY 2,150 F. S., Striking Energy 3,280ft. lbs.

The accuracy is of the highest order, as will be seen by the accompanying diagram made by the Editor of The Field and not by a professional expert.

"FIELD." "A trial series produced a remarkably fine group of eight shots fired alternately from the two barrels. . . A very fine performance for a double rifle very hard to beat."

Sport in England.

(FROM THE HOME PAPERS.)

LONDON, Friday, 19th June 1908.

THE TURF.

WINDSOR.

FOLLOWING in the immediate wake of Ascot, it was no matter for great surprise that this one-day fixture on the banks of the Thames should have been extensively patronised. The outside attendance far exceeded the executive's most sanguine expectations, whilst Tattersall's ring and the members' pretty little lawn held their full complement of visitors. When the lime trees which have been artistically planted have grown to that height to afford shade to the horses as they promenade for each succeeding race, Windsor will boast of one of the most picturesque paddocks to be found in the South of England. On Saturday, the 20th instant, with its pretty flower-bedecked beds, it struck uncommonly bright to the eye. On the far side of the course haymaking was in progress, but the executive had given their accustomed attention to the running track, which rode splendidly with its cushion-like covering of herbage. GATWICK.

A HALCYON day dawned on the Surrey weald on the 23rd instant, but the heat threw up a curtain of mist that shut out Box and Leith Hills, and enshrouded the mile starting-post in its haze. It is a pity that Gatwick could not have been apportioned a two days' meeting, but the executive crowded all their good things into one, and treated us to a capital day's meeting. The track was in capital condition, and fields ruled well throughout. Details :—

NEWBURY.

WITH a pleasant breeze, glorious sunshine, and the course in fair condition, despite the drought, the meeting on the 23rd instant claimed its usual quota, the club enclosure being well filled by dainty dames and their attendant cavaliers. Tattersall's of course, was crowded, despite counter attractions at "canny" Newcastle, and the holiday crowd has found its level. Fields were quite plethoric enough to suit the most exacting of punters. Details :—

A dull morning was happily succeeded by a glorious day, and an increased attendance yesterday was early apparent. The paddock was thronged between races by a big muster of society, amongst whom we recognised many of the principal patrons of the national sport. Tattersall's was crammed, and with the local forces in strong muster, the attendance was both large and representative. We were treated to a glorious afternoon's racing, in which, as on Wednesday, a popular idol went down, and the result of the Royal Stakes does not elucidate the problem of three-year-old form, the only excuse being the slow pace to start with. HEALTHY LIFE IN INDIA.

Punch's old and trite, but nevertheless, true saying—"Is Life worth living? That depends upon the liver" applies more to Anglo-Indians than to anyone else—only those who suffer know how very much more. And yet there is no reason why this should be so, why a man should not be just as fit in India as in the home country. The majority of those who come out do not regulate life in accordance with the climate and changed conditions of tropical countries. To be well and to keep well requiries the greatest care and discipline. In a country like India, where the extreme heat makes so enormous a difference to the functions of the human body, it is essential to life, that the requirements of the body should be regulated with more than ordinary care. But if we keep the digestive organs healthy and the nerve machine in good working order, one can be as well and healthy on the Bund as in Piccadilly. And we can do so, for medical science has evolved a substance that, whilst easily digested, contains in happy combination the two vital properties for nourishing the body and for stimulating and feeding the nerves.

Sanatogen, the nerve food is almost universally recognised by medical men as a true scientific food. Readily digestible—so much so that its use in the acute stage of typhoid fever is practised by many physicians—with a high nutritive value, almost every atom of it being absorbed and assimilated, rich in that necessary element of all the tissues of our body—phosphorus— Sanatogen forms at once an almost perfect and complete diet for the low-power system which most Anglo-Indians possess. Used in time it will prevent that devitalisation of nerves and indolence of digestion, respiration, circulation, etc., which all dwellers in tropical climates know and dread so much.

Mr. Hall Caine extols its virtues:

Whitehall Court,
London, S. W.

"My experience of Sanatogen has been that as a tonic nerve food it has on more than one occasion done me good."

Hall Caine

Even when one of the numerous insiduous tropical diseases has gained a foothold, Sanatogen, according to medical testimony, is a power with which to dislodge the foe, if scientific theory and actual practice in the case of enteric and other fevers have any weight at all. The author of a paper in the "Indian Medical Gazette," December, 1906, entitled "The Maintenance of Health in Tropical Climates," states this opinion: "For residents in tropical climates, suffering from general debility, the best and most readily assimilable food is a combination of casein with glycero-phosphates. This cannot be prescribed as an ordinary mixture, pill or powder, but for some years past I have used the preparation known as Sanatogen, which is composed of 95 per cent. of pure casein and 5 per cent. glycero-phosphate of sodium. I have used Sanatogen on a large scale and have every reason to be satisfied with the results obtained."

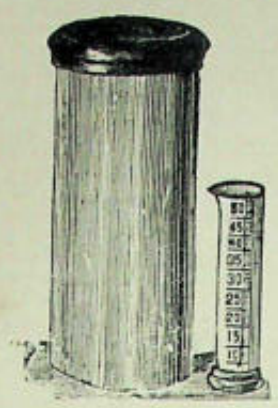
This is only one of over 7,500 written endorsements from physicians in Great Britain and India. If any further proof were required it is to be found in the vast numbers of letters from distinguished men and women, who have themselves derived benefit from the use of Sanatogen.

Madame Sarah Grand, the distinguished authoress, writes:—

10, Grove Hill,
Tunbridge Wells.

"I am glad to be able to tell you that Sanatogen has done everything for me which it is said to be able to do for cases of nervous debility and exhaustion. I began to take it after nearly four years' enforced idleness from extreme debility, and felt the benefit almost immediately. And now, after taking it steadily three times a day for twelve weeks, I find myself able to enjoy both work and play again, and also able to do as much of both as I ever did."

Sarah Grand



Sanatogen which is a fine white powder, is put up in bottles and can be obtained from all chemists.

An engrossing booklet containing matters of vital importance to well-being in the Tropics has recently been issued. It is from the pen of a physician long resident in India and is entitled "How to keep well in India." It should be in the hands of all desirous of knowing how to get well and keep well. A copy can be obtained free of charge from Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, from whom also Sanatogen can be purchased.

NEWCASTLE.

THE three days' summer meeting at High Gosforth Park was opened under favourable weather conditions and in the presence of a crowd well up to the average, notwithstanding the depression on Tyneside owing to bad trade and the industrial strife. Fields ruled strong and sport was interesting, a feature being the triple success of Lord Durham's colours, Maher riding in each instance. The chief event of the card, The North Derby, fell to this noble patron of the meeting with Bardolph, who ran with great gameness. Details :—

GOLF.

THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP.

JAMES BRAID, of Walton Heath, now shares with the two Morrises and Harry Vardon the distinction of being four times winner of the Open Championship. He triumphed at Prestwick on the 19th instant with an aggregate of 291, beating his nearest rival, Tom Ball, of West Lancashire, by no fewer than eight strokes. After his two brilliant rounds on the preceding day, Braid was generally regarded as a certain winner when play began on the 19th. There was a period, however, when his chance trembled in the balance. He was trapped in the dreaded cardinal at the third hole—the hazard that has ruined the prospects of more than one favourite for championship honours—the eight that it cost him might at such a critical stage of the competition have broken the heart of a man of less grit. Braid, however, rose to the occasion splendidly. He required three puts on the fourth game, but he risked a two at the fifth and got it, and reached the turn in 39. He was not blessed with any luck that was going as regards the long game coming home, and his inward half of 38 was mainly due to the excellence of his putting. His round of 77 gave him an aggregate of 219, with which he led by six strokes from his nearest rivals, Tom Ball and E. Ray. In the afternoon Braid played faultless golf, and had a round of 72. Braid's score for four rounds is by far the best that has ever been accomplished in the Open Championship. The previous "best" was 296, the total with which Jack White won at Sandwich in 1904.

Next to Braid, the man who came out of the ordeal with the most credit was, of course, Tom Ball. Ball is undoubtedly one of the best of the Hoylake school, and all this season has shown wonderfully good form. Unlike so many of the younger professionals, Ball seems to possess the elusive quality of consistency. For a player of his years—he is only 26—and comparative inexperience, his rounds of 76, 73, 76, and 74 must rank among the best of the many fine performances accomplished in the championship of 1908.

With the exception of Braid, the acknowledged leaders failed to rise to the occasion. Herd should have had a better aggregate than 302, but he played a wretchedly bad long game at the last nine holes of his third round, with the result that he took 79. Harry Vardon recovered his position to some extent yesterday, but he was not equal to making up for his weak putting on the first day. Arnaud Massy was very disappointing. He played three mediocre rounds of 76, 75, and 76, and in the last 18 holes went to pieces altogether, with the result that the round cost him 81, and gave him an aggregate of 308.

On the whole, the amateurs were more successful than usual. For several years past, Mr. John Graham, junior, has had the distinction of being the leading player in the "Open," but on the occasion he had to give way to Mr. John Ball. Rain fell up to midday, and a strong south-easterly wind made golf much more difficult than on the preceding day. Chief interest was, of course, centred in the doings of Braid, who was, however, one of the last to go out. He began well enough with a five at the first and a three at the second. The third, however, cost him eight. He reached the turn in 39, but his splendid short game coming home enabled him to finish in 77. Herd played such a fine game going out that it seemed probable that he would challenge Braid's position as the leader at the end of the third round. The Huddersfield man played splendid golf, and reached the turn in 34, but failed to maintain his form, and the result was a round of 79. Tom Ball played a wonderfully good long game. He dropped a stroke or two on the greens, but did not make any serious mistake in his morning round of 76. In the afternoon, he played perfect golf up to the turn. He was bunkered going to the fifteenth, but in spite of the fact that he took two strokes in the hazard, he had a round of 74.

Braid, in the afternoon, had a following of between four and five thousand spectators. With the exception that he missed a short putt at the fifth, and was weak with his approach to the sixth, he played faultless golf, and the perfect line that he kept was undoubtedly one the features of the meeting.

ATHLETICS.

THE CIVIL SERVICE SPORTS.—The forty-fifth annual athletic sports of the Civil Service A.C. were held at Stamford Bridge on the 20th instant. T. H. Just, of Cambridge University and London A.C., won the half-mile strangers' scratch race easily in 1min. 59secs. The London Athletic Club's "A" team won the relay race in 3mins. 38-3/5secs. R. J. Dunn, of the L.A.C., secured the 100 yards open handicap from the 5½ yards mark in 10-2/5secs.

H. A. Leeke, the Light Blue threw the discus (free style) 113ft. 6in., but was unfortunate in going over the line in so doing. He won the event easily. For the third year in succession and the fourth time in all, O. Groenings won the high jump with 5ft. 9¾in. The final of the open 440 yards produced an exciting finish, but F. R. Yeatman, 11 yards, won by three yards; J. F. Lintott, 16 yards, just beating E. H. Montague, the 440 yards champion, by inches for second place. Details:—

100 Yards Race (Members).—L. J. de B. Reed (penalised 3 yards), 1; F. Ord, 2; H. W. Monroe, 3. The winner took the lead two yards from home and won by half a yard. Time—10-3/5secs.

Throwing the Discus (Free Style).—H. A. Leeke (Cambridge University A.C. and L.A.C.), 106ft. 6½in., 1; A. E. Flaxman (L.A.C.), 102ft. 6½in., 2; E. E. B. May (Oxford University and L.A.C.), 101ft. 11½in., 3. Leeke threw 113ft. 6in., but went over the line.

120 Yards Handicap (Veterans).—J. Parkhurst, 12¾ yards start, 1; J. Jackett, 22 yards, 2; W. T. Cobb, 8½ yards, 3. Won easily. Time—14-2/5secs.

120 Yards Boys' Handicap (open to sons and brothers of Civil Servants over ten and under fifteen years of age).—A. A. Barge (10½ years), 22 yards, 1; C. F. Gardner (10¾ years), 21½ yards, 2; R. A. Gough (12½ years), 12½ yards, 3. Time—14-2/5secs.

One Mile Bicycle Handicap.—D. R. Hedley, 170 yards, 1; J. Brace, 170 yards, 2; J. de Vane, 170 yards, 3. Won by a length. Time—2mins. 14-2/5secs.

100 Yards Handicap (Members).—E. C. Lock, 5 yards start, 1; V. T. Brennan, 4, 2; C. C. Davies, scratch, 3. Won by a yard. Time—10-3/5secs.

880 Yards Scratch Race (Strangers).—T. H. Just (Cambridge University and L.A.C.), 1; J. F. Lintott (L.A.C.), 2; F. A. Knott (L.A.C.), 3. F. M. Ashford, of the Finchley H., led until the bell. Just, running grandly, took the lead half a lap from the finish and won easily by 10 yards. Lintott passed Knott 20 yards from the tape. Time—1min. 59secs.

100 Yards Handicap (Open).—R. J. Dunn (L.A.C.), 5½ yards, 1; S. W. P. Walpole (L.A.C.), 8, 2; A. A. Cameron (Blackheath H.), 10¾, 3. Won by a yard; inches between second and third. Time—10-2/5secs.

One Mile Invitation Relay Race.—London Athletic Club, "A" team (T. H. Just, E. H. Ryle, A. E. D. Anderson, S. G. Ereaut), 1; L.A.C., "B" team (K. Hellstrom, J. B. Densham, H. S. Harmer, L. F. Tremeer), 2; Surrey A.C. (R. F. C. Yorke, R. Bibson, E. H. Montague, L. J. de B. Reed), 3. The Polytechnic Harriers did not start. Ereaut was first home, with Tremeer and Reed following in that order. Time—5mins. 38-3/5secs.

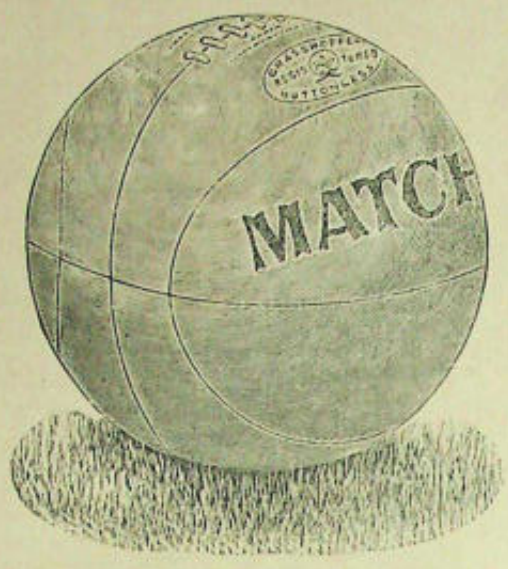
One Mile Scratch Flat Race for "Strathcona" Challenge Cup (Members).—G. C. Smallwood, Patent Office, 1; C. G. Mathie, Board of Education, 2; P. M. Brennan, S.B.D., G.P.O., 3. Won by 25 yards, Brennan being beaten a yard from home for second place. Time—4mins. 42-2/5secs.

One Mile Members' Relay Race.—Patent Office, 1; Board of Trade, 2; War Office, 3.

Boys' Race 120 Yards (open to sons and brothers of Civil Servants from six to ten years of age).—E. C. Webb (9½ years), owed 3 yards, 1; G. R. Riley (9¼ years), owed 4½ yards, 2; D. S. Walker (9¾ years), penalised 3 yards, 3. Time—17-4/5secs.

220 Yards Members' Handicap.—P. Corry, Admiralty, 21 yards, 1; E. C. Lock, Customs, 11 yards, 2; H. Norrey, C.T.O., 15 yards, 3. The winner quickly went to the front, and won by a foot, a yard separating the second and third. Time—23secs.

Two Miles Walking Handicap.—G. H. C. Manning, S.B.D., G.P.O., 150 yards, 1; J. Jackett, Customs, 625 yards, 2; S. C. A. Schofield, India Office, scratch, 3. Won by 80 yards, the scratch man failing to catch Jackett by ten yards. Time—14mins. 27-1/5secs.



120 Yards Hurdle Handicap (Open).—V. Duncker, South African A.A.A., owed 17 yards, 1; D. A. Stupart, South African A.A.A., owed 18 yards, 2; H. W. Kirk, Tooting A.C., scratch, 3. The South African Olympians ran a fine race, the winner just getting over the last hurdle. Time—18-3/5secs.

440 Yards Open Handicap.—F. R. Yeatman, Polytechnic H., 11 yards, 1; J. F. Lintott, L.A.C. and R.H., 16 yards, 2; E. H. Montague, L.A.C., scratch, 3. Yeatman showed fine judgment in this race, and coming away round the bend, led into the straight, and won by three yards, Lintott just beating the 440 yards champion for second place. Time—50-2/5secs.

LAWN TENNIS.

OXFORD VS. CAMBRIDGE.—After winning the singles by the substantial margin of seven matches to two, the Dark Blues gave a very disappointing display when they met Cambridge in the doubles on Saturday, the Light Blues completely reversing the verdict. Fine weather prevailed, and although there was a stiff wind, the players were well sheltered from its effects, and it had no material effect on the play. Cambridge led off in most promising fashion with a victory by Andrews and Blundell over the first Oxford pair, Lowe and Holland, although it should be mentioned that the latter slipped up and dislocated a finger in the second set. The latter pair, however, won both their other matches, and alone earned winning brackets for the Dark Blues, the other pairs giving a very disappointing display, Oxford having won the singles by 7—2 and Cambridge the doubles by 7—2. The result was a draw. Details:—

First Round.—W. S. Andrews (Caius) and E. Blundell (Selwyn, Cambridge) beat A. H. Lowe (New College) and A. C. Holland (Merton, Oxford) (6—4, 6—2); E. O. Tancock (Selwyn) and J. A. D. Naoroji (Christs, Cambridge) beat W. Reynell (Balliol) and A. S. Roe (Balliol, Oxford) (6—4, 2—6, 6—3). G. S. Stathers (Trinity) and R. J. Hudson (Caius, Cambridge) beat V. O.'C. Miley (Brasenose) and G. D. Roberts (St. John's, Oxford) (2—6, 6—3, 6—2).

Second Round.—Tancock and Naoroji (Cambridge) beat Miley and Roberts (Oxford) (6—3, 1—6, 6—3), Stathers and Hudson (Cambridge) lost to Lowe and Holland (Oxford) (—7, 1—6), Andrews and Blundell (Cambridge) beat Reynell and Roe (Oxford) (4—6, 6—1, 6—4).

Third Round.—Stathers and Hudson (Cambridge) beat Reynell and Roe (Oxford) (6—4, 4—6, 6—3), Andrews and Blundell (Cambridge) beat Miley and Roberts (Oxford) (4—6, 6—3, 6—0), Tancock and Naoroji (Cambridge) lost to Lowe and Holland (Oxford) (6—2, 2—6, 2—6).

OLYMPIC CUP FINAL.—Although the Royal garden party took away many of Hurlingham's usual visitors on Saturday, there was a large company to see the final tie of the Olympic Cup, between Roehampton and Ireland. The match was the most disappointing of the season. Those who remembered Ireland's fine effort two years ago in the international match at Hurlingham, hoped to see the visitors give the Rothamnton team a hard struggle. Victory for the Irishmen was not expected, excepting by their most sanguine countrymen, but the sides were thought to be level enough to make it an interesting game. Unfortunately, this was not the case. Comparatively slow on the ball, and quite uncertain in their hitting when harassed in any way, the visitors were by no means strong enough fully to extend Roehampton, and had not the latter been content to take things fairly easily in the last twenty minutes it is questionable whether Ireland would ever have scored. In the first period Roehampton took a lead of two goals, and by half-time all excitement had gone out of the game, the winners having increased their advantage to 7 to nothing.

On the losing side Mr. O'Reilly was the best on the afternoon's play, the difficulties of his position being the greater by reason of the fact that he had against him a brilliant No. 1 like Captain Wilson, who has never been in finer form than this season. The winning team was really an amalgamation of forces of Rugby and Roehampton, two players being drawn from each of these redoubtable sides. The result was an exceptionally strong combination. Mr. P. Nickalls and Mr. C. D. Miller form a defence which any No. 1 might regret to find himself against, and Major Rotheram could make little impression upon it on Saturday, especially as he was not up with the back so often as a No. 1 who plays the orthodox game should be. Mr. George Miller and Captain ...ilson both hit well, and combined prettily in the attack, and had many opportunities for testing their skill in front of goal.

Half-way through the opening period a clever back-hander by Captain Wilson found the mark, and almost from the throw-in the same player dribbled the ball down and scored again. The next ten was clearly Mr. George Miller's, as he put in some grandly-judged shots, and hit no fewer than three goals. All the way through the third stage Roehampton were pressing, first Captain Wilson scoring and then Mr. Nickalls getting through with a long drive. The last-named got Roehampton's eighth goal, and after that the leaders were possibly content with their big advantage, as the game was more even, and Ireland could have scored several times had they accepted the chances that came their way, but it was not until two minutes from the end that Mr. McCann secured Ireland's solitary point. Thus easily Roehampton had the distinction of winning the first polo tournament ever played in connection with the Olympic Games. Teams:—

Ireland.—Major A. M. Rotheram, Mr. John McCann, Captain Hardress Lloyd, and Mr. P. P. O'Reilly (back).

Roehampton.—Captain H. Wilson, Mr. G. Miller, Mr. P. W. Nickalls, and Mr. C. Miller (back).

Umpires.—Major K. McLaren and Captain E. A. Fagan.

Referee.—Captain Phipps Hornby.

INTER-REGIMENTAL TOURNAMENT.—Something of a surprise was caused in the third round of the Inter-Regimental Tournament at Hurlingham on Wednesday, when the 5th Lancers started in grand style against the Royal Horse Guards, and got 3 goals to the good before their opponents had hit a point.

Within two minutes the Lancers scored the opening goal. Before the end of the period they had put on another, and in the second stage took a lead of three points. Then the Blues, who had been playing very disjointedly, settled down to a much better combined game. Before the end of the ten they had nearly wiped off the deficit, and by half-time had drawn level—three goals all. The Lancers, however, once more went to the front, for after the ball had struck the post Mr. Montefiore made an easy goal. The fifth ten opened with a very fine angle goal by Major Browne-Clayton, and when Major Cape hit through also the Lancers seemed assured of victory. But the Blues made a plucky attempt to avert defeat. Captain Bowlby hit a goal, and then a desperate fight ensued in the last ten. Eventually, after a long scrimmage in front of their opponents' goal, Mr. Harrison scored for the Blues in the last minute, the Lancers consequently winning after an exciting finish by a single goal. Teams:—

Royal Horse Guards.—Captain G. V. S. Bowlby, Lord A. Innes-Ker, Mr. J. F. Harrison, and Captain H. E. Brassey (back).

5th Lancers.—Mr. W. Sebag Montefiore, Major H. A. Cape, Mr. R. C. Browne-Clayton, and Major J. B. Jardine (back).

THE OOTACAMUND HOUNDS.

Saturday, 4th July.—Krurmund Bungalow, 12 noon. This meet is a long way out, and the country rough and mountainous. The attendance this morning was unusually small. Mr. Colin Mackenzie, Dr. and Mrs. Forsyth, Mr. Leigh, Captain Vesey, Mr. Hope Johnstone, Mrs. Marjoribanks and Mr. Neill. It was a poor scenting day, and sambur caused a good deal of trouble. After a long draw down the bank of the Pykara river, hounds picked up a line and carried it smartly for about a mile when the jack went to ground in one of the numerous watercourses which tunnel their way underground to the larger streams. Another long draw to below Chemmund before hounds broke to a line, which resulted in a very short sport, the jack (a cub) popped into an earth almost at once. Chemmund was blank: hounds drew on below Bungalow Shola and through Bacon Wood without success. They were then taken home. A very poor day.

Monday, 6th July.—Andy Plantation at 7-30 A.M. A thick mist swept up and lay like a pall over the hills, but lifted for a time. Drawing round to the left, hounds went away on a line near Democrat Shola; sweeping round to the right, they sank the hill and crossed the bog and rose the hill to the left of Dante Spinney, down the other side and over another bog, then to the left again over the top of Bilanjikod Mund and bent to the right. As the pack descended the hill another jack jumped up, and four couple slipped away in his wake hunted him by Gaylad Shola into the Nunjanad Valley, where they lost him near the Bagada Village. The main body of the pack turned sharp round to the right of the hill and put their jack to ground in a hole in the bog below Bilanjikod Mund. The fog came down thick and damp as we drew along the Parsons' Valley and up by the Toda Burning Ground, on to the Krurmund Path, from thence to Sheffield Corner and over the top of Porlock and Bluegums. A fresh breeze sprung up and the mist lifted leaving the home downs quite clear.

Near Sandy Nullah stream a jack was viewed making for Staircase. Hounds went off with a great dash the instant they touched his line and hunted him through Staircase Shola, forced him out to the left a little above the Centre Ride, and ran almost over the top of the hill. When they reached the Back Staircase side they swung sharp back to the left past Cromwell Shola, and touching the edge of Governor's Shola ran over the ridge into Bluegums. Without dwelling in it they drove their jack through this covert over the hill into Rallywoods, where the jack stole a march on hounds, and doubled back over Newmarket, Rawlin's Nullah and Sandy Nullah back into Staircase. Leading to the right, he took a line over Herbert Plantation into Briar, where hounds were unable to own to it. A cast forward to the far side of Briar they spoke to a line which they hunted slowly along the ridge above Wapshare's Hare and down the Dartmore Valley, but had to acknowledge defeat just short of Hamlet. After trying Wapshare's Hare and Hero sholas, hounds were taken home. The field included their Excellencies Sir Arthur Lawley and Lady Lawley, the Misses Lawley, Mr. R. E. Lawley, Captain Vesey, Captain Elwes, Mr. A. Y. G. Campbell, Mr. Leigh, Major Douglas, Mr. Packenham Walsh, Colonel Formby, Mr. and Mrs. Russell, Major the Hon'ble H. D. Napier, Mrs. Marjoribanks, Miss Morgan, Mr. A. A. and Miss Dangar, Miss Hammick, Miss Sturrock, Colonel and Mrs. Gordon Price, Captain and Mrs. Vaughan Edwards, Mrs. Porteous, Mr. Hope Johnstone, Miss Rolfe, Mr. Cowie, Mr. Score Smyth, Mr. H. D. Taylor, Mr. Colin Mackenzie, Miss Stickney, Mrs. Sam Browne, Miss Jesson, Miss Harrison, Major Henderson, Miss Gales, Major and Mrs. Younghusband, Mr. Neil and others.

THE BANGALORE TOURNAMENT.

SEMI-FINALS.

14TH HUSSARS "B" VS. 20TH DECCAN HORSE.—Played on the 6th instant the Hussars winning by 4 goals to 2.

First Chukker.—The Deccan Horse pressed and a bombardment of the Hussars' goal followed. None of the shots were successful, however. Major Macquoid's pony had his leg broken by a stroke from a polo stick and had to be removed and shot. During this player's absence from the field the Hussars got away and Stephen scored.

Second Chukker.—Up and down play. No score.

Third Chukker.—The Hussars attacked and Stephen scored. Then the Deccan Horse took the offensive and pressed for the rest of the period but did not score.

Fourth Chukker.—The 20th pressed, but Astley relieved. A free hit to the Deccan Horse was unproductive, but they returned to the attack and Ley scored their first goal. The Hussars rushed down on resuming and Astley put on a third point.

Fifth Chukker.—Fast up and down play: both teams attacked in turn but there was no further score.

Sixth Chukker.—Stephen scored for the Hussars, who continued to press for some time. The Deccan Horse eventually got the ball away and Worgan ended a good run with a successful shot. Final score: 14th Hussars, 4 goals, 20th Deccan Horse, 2 goals. Teams:—

MYSORE GYMKHANA VS. 2ND SAPPERS AND MINERS.—Played on the 6th instant ending in a victory for Mysore by 9 goals to 2.

First Chukker.—Play opened brilliantly and neither team gained any advantage till Mysore were given a free hit for a foul. This was saved but shortly after Bunny Singh opened the scoring.

Second Chukker.—Mysore pressed and Faiz Mahomed scored. Desaraj Urs was next conspicuous for two good runs. He missed both final shots, but Bunny Singh was lying handy at the second and put the ball through. Even play closed the period.

Third Chukker.—Mysore got on and Faiz Mahomed scored the fourth goal. The Sappers pressed for the rest of the chukker but could not get through.

Fourth Chukker.—Conran scored for the Sappers and Bunny Singh for Mysore, Faiz Mahomed putting on another goal before the end of the chukker.

Fifth Chukker.—The Sappers scored through White. Then Mysore attacked and registered 3 goals, Desaraj Urs and Bunny Singh being responsible.

Sixth Chukker.—Rain fell during the final period and there was no further score, the Mysore Gymkhana thus winning by 9 goals to 2. Teams:—

THE FINAL.

14TH HUSSARS VS. MYSORE GYMKHANA.—A large gathering witnessed the final game on the 8th instant and were treated to a splendid display. At the end of the sixth chukker the score stood 3 all, the goals were widened and the game continued. The Mysore Gymkhana scored during the extra period and thus won a great game.

First Chukker.—Fast play throughout, both goals were visited in turn, but there was no score: Mysore were awarded a free hit for a foul, but Astley saved brilliantly.

Second Chukker.—Play continued fast and furious, but there was no score. Astley played an exceptionally good game.

Third Chukker.—The Hussars rushed down twice, but were stopped on both occasions. Then Desaraj Urs got possession and after a fine run the length of the field sent the ball through. A foul against Mysore gave the Hussars a free-hit and Astley equalised. During the interval the legality of the umpires' decision in granting this penalty hit was discussed and it was decided to play the stroke again. This was done and Astley again scored.

Fourth Chukker.—Mysore attacked and Faiz Mahomed put through. The Hussars immediately rushed down and Tilney equalised and for the rest of the period the Hussars made determined onslaughts on the Mysore goal.

Fifth Chukker.—A foul against the Hussars, but Astley stopped the free hit. Play was then transferred to the Mysore goal but was quickly brought back and Faiz Mahomed notched another point. The Hussars made several unsuccessful attempts to get on terms.

Sixth Chukker.—The Hussars attacked and Astley equalised. They continued to press and the Mysore team were kept on the defensive. No further score.

Extra Chukker.—With the score three all the goals were widened and the game resumed. Astley drove at goal but the ball was stopped by a pony's foot and Mysore getting possession came away and Faiz Mahomed scored the winning point. Final score: Mysore Gymkhana, 4 goals; 14th Hussars 3, goals. TRAP SHOOTING AT OOTACAMUND.

IT is very pleasing to note that the trap shooters are increasing; but unfortunately the high winds which we are now experiencing from the south-west prevents the scores being better. None of the fair sex have yet made their appearance to contest the cup offered for the best shooter. It is to be hoped they will not allow this competition to fall through.

THE BOMBAY HARWOOD LEAGUE.

ROYAL SCOTS "B" vs. R.G.A.—Played on the 4th instant, an interesting game ending in a win for the Scots by a goal to nil. The Scots pressed throughout the first half but there was no score. During the second period the Gunners had the best of the play. The Scots, however, got away and Wright scored. Teams:—

ROYAL SCOTS "B."—Underdown, goal; Taylor and Foster, backs; Hill, Finnigan and Lakin, half-backs; Wright, D. Ross, G. Ross, Mackintosh and Parker, forwards.

ROYAL GARRISON ARTILLERY.—Bowyer, goal; Wiggitt and Watts, backs; Downey, Collumbell and MacGharry, half-backs; Titley, Southcote, Reynolds, Betts and Baily, forwards.

Referee:—Mr. G. Walton.

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPHS vs. BOMBAY GYMKHANA.—Played on the 7th instant, ending in a draw. The Telegraphs did all the attacking in the first half and scored twice. But on changing ends the Gymkhana pressed and equalised, Moir and Abbott putting through. Both teams tried hard to score during the remainder of the game but without success. Teams:—

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPHS.—Edie, goal; Nicholas and Edwards, backs; Taylor, Crutchley and Clarke, half-backs; Lambert, Cahill, Cowper, Asplin and Holman, forwards.

GYMKHANA.—Thompson, goal; Ward and Hotz, backs; Sim, Holl, and Bussey, half-backs; Evans, Abbott, Burnett, Morris, and Moir forwards.

Y.M.C.A. vs. COMMERCIAL GYMKHANA.—These teams met on the 8th instant, a well-contested game ending in favour of the Young Christians. The Commercial Gymkhana led at the interval by a goal to nil, and crossing over play was very even for half the period: then Kelly equalised and the Young Men scoring once more ran out winners as stated. Teams:—

Y.M.C.A.—Rose, goal; C. Templeton and Rowbottom, backs; Macmillan, Jaeger and H. Templeton, half-backs; Spierce, Dowling, G. Brewin, Kelly and T. Brewin, forwards.

COMMERCIAL GYMKHANA.—Street, goal; Chapman and Harwood, backs; Hotz, Osborne and Bellamy, half-back; Marsden, Wooley, Lay Barrett and Ellis, forwards.

Referee:—Mr. G. Walton.

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPHS vs. R.G.A.—A good game was witnessed when these teams met on the 9th instant. The Gunners scored a goal at the start but the remainder of the first half was very evenly contested and there was no further score till the interval. On crossing over the Gunners pressed and Reynolds scored a goal. Visits to both ends followed and a penalty kick against the Telegraphs enabled Wiggitt to score another goal for the Artillery who thus won by 3 goals to nil. Teams:—

ROYAL ARTILLERY.—Bower, goal; Wiggitt and Collumbell, backs; Downey, MacGlany and Southcote, half-backs; Titley, Reynolds, Watts, Bett and Bayley, forwards.

BOMBAY GYMKHANA vs. ROYAL SCOTS "B".—A big crowd witnessed this game last Friday. It was an excellent display. The first half was evenly contested and the interval arrived without score. On changing ends the Scots attacked but were unable to score. Up and down play followed and a few minutes before the close of play the Scots were awarded a penalty kick, Foster finding the net and giving them a victory. Teams:—

SCOTS "B".—Underdown, goal; Taylor and Foster, backs; Pipps, Finnigan and Lakin, half-backs; Wright, D. Ross, G. Ross, Mackintosh and Parkes, forwards.

First Round.

DALHOUSIE vs. KING'S OWN.—This match was played last Saturday, the heavy rain during the afternoon rendering the turf heavy and slippery. The King's Own pressed at the start and forced a corner, this was not improved upon and later Moss missed a chance of scoring. Up and down play followed and then the soldiers were called upon to defend and Burnett beat Hughes with a fine shot. The visitors pressed for the rest of the period. On resuming the Dals attacked but were kept out and the military once more invaded the home team's ground. Hendry was called upon to save and did so at the expense of a corner which was not improved upon. The Dals next rushed down, a shot by Burnett was cleared and later Hughes conceded a corner in saving a shot by Holley. This was not turned to advantage but Burnett got possession soon after and scored a second goal. The King's Own pressed during the rest of the game but were unlucky in not getting through. Poole was injured early in the game and had to retire. Final score: Dalhousie, 2; King's Own, nil. Teams:—

DALHOUSIE.—Henry, goal; Stevens and Dunn, backs; Storrie, Lees, and Beadle, half-backs: Burnett, Dalling, Holley, Wright, and Gibson, forwards.

KING'S OWN.—Hughes, goal; Reid, and Poole, backs; Ralph, Windiem, and Brown, half-backs; Goulden, Cassidy, Burton, Mitchell, and Moss, forwards.

SOVA BAZAR vs. CHINSURAH.—On Saturday last Chinsurah played one short at the start and Sova Bazar pressing scored an easy goal. A foul against S. Chatterjee next enabled Rahman to head the ball into the net from P. Mukerjee's shot. Chinsurah played better after the interval but Sova Bazar continued to have the best of the game. They scored another soft goal—the ball rolling between Chuckerbutty's feet and hands—and qualified for the second round with a 3-0 victory. Teams:—

SOVA BAZAR.—S. Mukerjee, goal; H. Roy and L. Mitter, backs; L. Boy, P. Mukerjee and Laha, half-backs; Bhattacharjya, Ghose, D. Mookerjee, B. Chatterjee and Rahman forwards.

CHINSURAH.—Chuckerbutty, goal; S. Pal and Mondal, backs; Sil, B. Pal and S. Chattterjea, half-backs; N. Mukerjee, H. Pal, T. Mukerjee, S. Guha, and Mullick, forwards.

KING'S ROYAL RIFLES vs. CALEDONIANS.—Played on the Dalhousie ground on Monday last, a splendid game ending in a win for the Military by a goal to nil. Each team put in a couple of runs, at the start then play settled down with the Caledonians attacking. All their efforts were frustrated, however, and the Rifles pressed but missed an opening. Good combination by the civilians took the play into the Rifles' territory but the backs relieved and Anscombe was called upon to save. Abortive corners to both teams brought the first half to a close. On resuming the Rifles rushed down but were stopped by Wilson, a foul against Durrant gave the soldiers a chance but Anscombe cleared. A little later, however, the Caledonian custodian was beaten by McCulloch. The civilians made great efforts to get on terms, Apcar was always prominent, but they could not get through and the K. R. R. won as stated by a goal to nil. Teams:—

K. R. R.—Mitchell, goal; Hansen, and Evans, backs; Liney, Jones, and Ward, half-backs; Arnold, Wright, McCulloch, Moore, and Pikering, forwards.

CALEDONIANS.—Anscombe, goal; J. Stoddart and Irvine backs, Grout, Harding, and Wilson, half-backs; Apcar, Owens, Allen, Tobin, and Durrant, forwards.

Referee.—A. R. C. Miller.

CALCUTTA vs. WEST RIDINGS.—This match which was postponed last Saturday on account of the wretched state of the ground was played on the 14th instant and ended in a draw—2all. There was a huge crowd and enthusiasm ran high. The game was not a particularly brilliant display. Calcutta started well and scored 2 goals. The Dukes nothing daunted pressed hard and were not long in putting up a like score. Crossing over with 2 goals each the game was exciting though not brilliant. The Ridings had most of the play but could not score. Full time arrived without addition to the score, but extra time was agreed on and the game resumed. This was also unproductive and the match will be replayed on Saturday next. Teams:—

CALCUTTA:—Dods, goal; Nicholls and Gahan, backs; Crawford, O'Shea, and Taylor, half-backs; H. Sherman, Fyffe, Lees, Kingcome, and Oliver, forwards.

WEST RIDINGS.—Chadwick, goal; Crady and Kenchatt, backs; Finch, Morris, and Andrews, half-backs; Hullyn, Ashbury, Rowe, Thomas, and Ryan, forwards.

Referee:—A. R. C. Miller.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

SUCH Shield Matches as were played last Saturday were entirely spoilt by the impossible state of the ground and it seems a pity that all teams did not follow Calcutta's lead and play a friendly game so as to avoid disappointing the crowd. All sportsmen will sympathize with the King's Own in having had to contend with such adverse circumstances in the matter of weather and, although it would be unfair to detract from the merits of Dalhousie's victory, it must be admitted that on a dry ground with a light ball they would have had to gallop all the way to beat their opponents from Lebong. Still Dalhousie has not been having the best of luck this season and this win should spur them on to greater efforts. They now meet the Gordons "A" next Saturday and this should be a memorable match.

THE Gordons "B" have scratched as well as the H. L. I. "B"—perhaps the wisest thing that could have been done in the circumstances—and the Y. M. C. A. have likewise given up the ghost in order to release several men who are needed for the Trades Cup Team. Whether Mr. Reynolds' policy is likely to be productive of the desired result is rather uncertain, but it will require a lot of persuasion to induce Mohon Bagan to part with the trophy.

JUDGING by the deafening enthusiasm which greeted Calcutta's two goals against the West Riding last Saturday very few of the crowd could have been aware till play finished that it was only a friendly game. An anxious consultation between the referee and the two captains resulted in a decision to postpone official hostilities till the following Tuesday and meanwhile to entertain the ten-deep crowd with an exhibition game. To the surprise of all that wonderful veteran Fyfe was resuscitated for the occasion and played a great game at inside right. Lee at centre forward was also a recruit from the "B" Team where he has been putting in some good work lately. Scientific football was out of the question with the ground in a marsh-like condition, and a prodigious amount of sliding varied with shots from the 25 line constituted the order of play. Kingcome and Lee were the goal-getters for Calcutta, although neither goal was above suspicion. As it was only a friendly game, it may be assumed that Mr. Miller was in a lenient mood, but there are not many referees who would have allowed Lee his goal. The West Ridings played a good, clean game all through, and the way that their left half—quite the best man on the field in spite of being knocked out of time by V. Cooper in the early stages of the game—marked young Sherman was a revelation.

SOVA BAZAAR disposed of Chinsurah Town Club by three goals to love after a scrambling game. The Chinsurah goalkeeper's star was evidently below its zenith for he let two long shots through his legs in sensational fashion. The hero of Sova Bazaar was P. Mookerjee who was supposed to have been captured by the National Association to play for them in the Trades Cup Competition but apparently has remained true to his first love. Sova Bazaar now meet the Rangers next Saturday on the Sova Bazaar ground.

THE match between the King's Royal Rifles and Caledonia attracted a vast crowd to the Dalhousie ground on Monday evening. The turf on the well-appointed and carefully tended ground was in ideal condition and the play was of an exciting nature throughout. Caledonia had out its strongest team but it was evident from the first that the soldiers were a much heavier lot especially in the back division. Their head play, too, broke up attack after attack and the Caledonia forwards, who were showing really fine combination, spoilt their chances again and again by trying kick and rush principles. It was a game of lost chances on both sides, the K. R. R. once having an open goal at their mercy, whilst the Caledonians missed a certain goal when the ball rebounded from the cross-bar.

THE King's Royal Rifles now meet the H. L. I. on Saturday and, on form, the Dum-Dum men should have the better of the game. If only the rain will hold off for a little, the second round is sure to provide some highly exciting matches, but it is impossible to predict what may happen so long as we continue to be treated to this ghastly weather.

THE C. F. C. Reserves have not been having such a successful time of late. Though in their friendly matches they have been seldom beaten, they failed in the second round of the Sarma Cup and last Friday were beaten by the Customs B" in the Minerva Cup. The Jabakusum Cup is the only pot for which they are now fighting and their chances seem very rosy.

A RUMOUR was going round on Monday that the King's Own had lodged a protest on the score of short time in the second half of their match vs. Dalhousie. No protest has, however, been lodged with the I.F.A. Honorary Secretary and as the time for doing so expired at 5-30 P.M. on Monday, the King's Own have evidently decided that it is not worth while doing so.

CHAMPION JAMES BRAID.

NOTHING could have been more appropriate than the victory of James Braid, of Walton Heath, in the Open Golf Championship at Prestwick this year, for but a few weeks ago he produced the finest work on golf ever written, namely "The Advanced Golfer," a book full of useful hints and advice and interesting personal details of the author's progress in the game in which he has won championship honours on four occasions.

The four times champion was born at Earlsferry, in Fifeshire, thirty-eight years ago, in the very heart of the greatest golfing centre of the world, Earlsferry being hard by Elie and St. Andrews and Leven. Living in such a neighbourhood, it is not surprising to learn that from his very childhood James Braid has always had a golf club in his hand, and gained his earliest hints by watching and copying the golfing giants of those days. At the early age of eight he won his first competition, defeating all his opponents in a junior caddie tournament by no fewer than twenty strokes.

On leaving school Braid was apprenticed to a joiner, but in spite of long working hours he found time in the summer evenings and on Saturday afternoons to play the Royal and Ancient game. Later he worked at St. Andrews and Edinburgh, showing wonderful form as a member of the Edinburgh Thistle Club, and as an amateur he won the Braid Hills tournament in 1892.

Then followed a period in London, working as a clubmaker for the Army and Navy Stores, and during this time Braid made his first appearance as a professional at Stanmore, where he tied for first prize in a special competition. In 1894 he made his first appearance in the Open Championship, a successful appearance, too, considering that he was bracketed ninth in the list.

It was not until 1901, at Muirfield, that Braid first gained championship honours, after a stiff struggle with Harry Vardon. At Hoylake in 1902 and Sandwich in 1904 he was second to Herd and Jack White respectively. In 1905 at Sandwich and again at Muirfield in 1906 Braid secured Championship honours, and now that "unkindly" Prestwick course has at last adapted itself to Braid's methods, and he has regained the title for the United Kingdom which Arnaud Massy so brilliantly carried over to France last year.

The fact that he has triumphed at Prestwick will be a source of special gratification to Braid, for speaking of this very course he says: "Prestwick does not seem to be a course that is very kindly disposed towards me, or it may be that such small peculiarities of play as I have are not very kindly disposed towards Prestwick. I must not be understood to be grumbling about the course, which is one of the very finest to be found anywhere. I have a great admiration for it, but there is just the coincidence that on the two occasions that I have played in the championship there I have been at very nearly my worst.

It is, indeed, a triumph of cool perseverance that the man soon after writing these words should have played such wonderful golf on a course of which he possessed an innate fear, since he has not only won the championship but has broken all previous championship records. Only a golfer knows what a handicap it is to start an important match on a course that never seems to suit one's style. How much must this dread be intensified when one has to play four severe rounds against the very cream of the golfing world!

This, however, is one of the least astonishing features of James Braid's championship career. For be it known this four times champion, on his own confession, was a "short driver" and "a really poor putter." It seems incredible that that loose-limbed Scottish giant, who hits his tee shot almost out of sight with mechanical regularity, can ever have been a "short driver. Braid's drives nowadays belong to the wonders of the golfing world, yet he could get "no length at all," even after he had become a scratch player and had broken records, and yet he has driven 395 yards of late years.

Wonderful in the extreme is the story of his conversion from a short to a long driver. The main interest in this lies in the fact that Braid himself, who knows all that there is to be known about golf, has not the slightest idea of how it came about. To quote his own words, "I am not conscious that I made any difference whatever in my style or methods. . . . As I have often said, it was just the same as if I went to bed a short driver one night and got up a long driver in the morning. It was then, and is still, the greatest golfing mystery that I have ever come across."

Braid's other great weakness, putting—the most match-and championship-winning department of the game—was only put right by sheer hard work, determination, and practice. Therefore the champion's advice on putting is priceless, and it is summed up in these words: "The player must study everything that there is for him to study when he making an accurate calculation of the effect of different varying factors and how they balance each other; otherwise his attempts at reckoning will end in a frightful muddle, and his mind will be in a very unhappy state when he comes to make his effort." The champion favours aluminium and wooden putters rather than putting clocks, and is firmly of the opinion that the balance rather than the shape of the putter is the important point.

Braid agrees with the saying that there are two kinds of golfers, "the born" and "the made." But by his own showing he is a mixture of the two. For he must have been a born golfer to have won competitions and established records in spite of short driving and poor putting, and now he is a "made" golfer by virtue of the fact that he has remedied his faulty putting by sheer hard work. Consequently his advice is doubly valuable. "Steady does it" is the epitome of his advice to those struggling to overcome their faults.

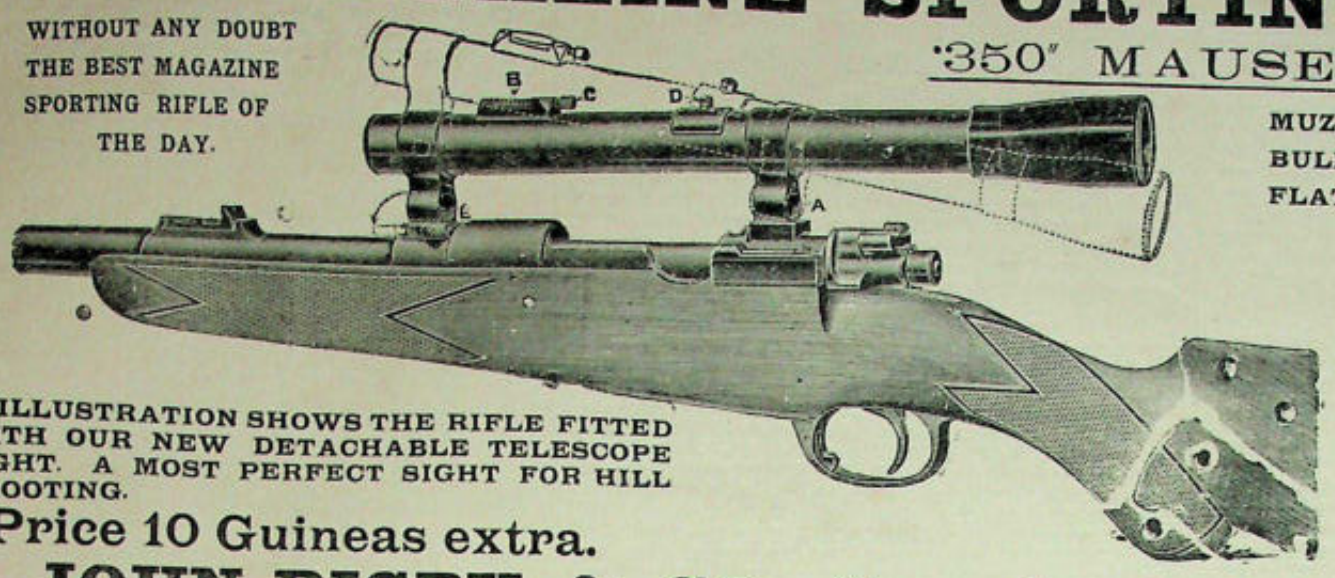
"It is a very dogged, persistent sort of game," he says, and then adds the comforting words, "This is how I learned the game myself, and it seems to me that I had more than an ordinary share of difficulties and troubles to encounter and at one time it hardly looked that I should ever do much good in the golfing world." Yet here he is, Open Champion for the fourth time, after as "dour a struggle" with his faults as any Scottish golfer could desire.

Braid's quadruple triumph must indeed bring joyful hopes and encouragement to those still struggling to break down what seem hopeless barriers to their progress in the Royal and Ancient game.

The Kennel.

THE ELEMENT OF CHANCE IN BREEDING.

THERE are a great number of people with very few of the qualifications essential to the successful outcome of the undertaking who annually embark upon the breeding of exhibition stock. Their attitude with regard to the matter is that it is chiefly a matter of luck. Their neighbour, who possesses a very small kennel of not particularly prepossessing individuals, breeds a winner or two every year, and has once bred a champion, so why not they? they say. To the initiated this attitude is, perhaps, provocative of a superior smile; first at the faith exhibited in the personal equation by the optimistic experimenter; secondly at the faith which is pinned to that fickle goddess, Luck. The question is: Is the smile justified? There is little doubt most people can do a thing if they set their mind on it and go the right way to work; there is also, no doubt, something in chance, only it is not the uncontrollable factor many would have us believe, but a more or less orderly phenomenon which can be reduced to a mathematical basis, as we hope to show in this article.



Where luck begins and good management ends in any given case it is almost impossible to say. It is human nature to think that a successful man is a lucky one; one is apt to fail to realise, or to forget if one has ever known it, the years of unremunerative work which have, perhaps, been given to the hobby, and the enormous amount of trouble which has always been taken in attending to details which to the novice seem unimportant, but which experience shows to be one of the main factors of success. It is doubtful whether there is such a thing as luck at all. Supposed instances, when analysed generally show that the phenomenon can with an even greater appearance of truth be relegated to another and more matter-of-fact category. For instance, one may remark that one wishes to breed a good female animal, and when such a one arrives in the next litter people say, "How lucky you are." But the actual facts are that: (1) the reason one happens to want a good female is because a preponderance of males have lately been bred; (2) as about an equal number of both sexes are always bred in the long run it is only natural or probable that females should preponderate in the next litter; and (3) as there are several of them there is a great chance of one of them being a good one. When a man succeeds where one fails oneself the last thing to believe is that it is his luck, and the first thing to realise is that one's failure is one's own fault. Explanation and excuses won't fool anyone or aid success; the only course is to find out where one goes wrong and to remedy it.

The law of probability plays no small part in everyday life, one of its most familiar applications of a strictly practical nature being in connection with annuities, life assurance, and other interests of a similar nature, depending upon the average duration of human life. If such serious matters, often involving vast sums of money, are based on probability or chance—and successfully so, as the dividends paid by most assurance companies testify—then it is certainly worth while to endeavour to get a grasp of the subject from the point of view of the breeder, as modern discoveries with regard to the physiology of heredity have demonstrated that probability or chance plays a small part in the production of individuals with definite characteristics.

The law of probability is defined as an extensive and important application of analysis, having for its object the determination of the number of ways in which a future or uncertain event may happen or fail, in order that one may judge whether the chances of its happening or failing are the greater, and in what proportion.

Every contingent event (say the inheritance or non-inheritance of a certain character) gives rise to two opposite probabilities—one that the event will happen, the other that it will not. A few years ago, when breeding was thought to be all a matter of luck, the breeder took but little interest in this aspect of the affair. Now, however, that we know that this luck, or whatever you like to call it, is orderly and under control, and that given certain data, it is possible to almost accurately forecast whether or not a certain event will happen, i.e., whether or not a certain character will be inherited, the breeder who will not take the trouble to study the matter from this point of view will soon find himself eclipsed by those who are applying the results of modern research in a practical manner.

After all, there is nothing particularly complex or wonderful in the thing, and the man with knowledge who makes a correct guess as to the chance of inheritance of a certain point is doing nothing very remarkable or supernatural. Broadly speaking, if both parents possess a certain character it will be inherited; if neither possess it, it will not be: if only one possesses it, inheritance is doubtful, and without data a correct guess would certainly come under the category of lucky.

The clue to the whole matter lies in a proper appreciation of the organism, not as a whole, but as a composite, built up of innumerable unit characters, each of which must be considered as a separate entity. We do not cross species, varieties, or even individuals of the same variety, but rather unit characters; and in breeding we must consider the animals in their position as the bearers of certain units.

Presuming, then, that the germ cells are composed of a host of units representing the different characters, we have next to conceive of each unit as incapable of developing alone; it requires a complement or pair to enable it to evolve. This complementary half is supplied by the other parent when we mate two animals together. But one parent may differ in slight degree; that is to say, it possesses, say, ears, and the units transmit these appendages, but they are a different class of ear to those of the other parent (prick instead of drop, to use a crude analogy), and the ear units when they meet are not in such complete accord as they would have been if alike. In such a case development proceeds, but one unit is often stronger or more dominant than the other and controls the visible inheritance. Thus we find that all the progeny come with, say, prick-ears, and the drop-ears of the other parent have apparently disappeared. As we know, however, if the prick-eared (half-bred) progeny are mated together, the drop-ear re-appears in a definite percentage of their progeny, thus proving that the effect of the cross was not to completely exterminate or even to alter this feature, but merely to cause its temporary disappearance.

The same principle applies to every character, and it can be seen that there is little chance or luck in the matter. Once it is known which characters are dominant, which recessive, the course of inheritance can be foreshadowed with a fair amount of certainty when differing forms are crossed.

When two animals both have the same characters, i.e., both have, say, prick-ears, their progeny will of course, have prick-ears, and so on.

The only rather more complex cases in which chance really plays a minor part are those in which one parent is already what we may call cross-bred or composite in respect of certain characters. Thus, we may have dogs which are called white, and which are mainly white to the eye (but carry pigment in eyes and nose if not elsewhere), but in whose germ cells colour units always lurk. On crossing these with colour quite remarkable and diverse results often occur, much to the astonishment of the owner, who does not realise that the cross has caused the re-awakening of dormant and hitherto unrecognised colour units in the white individual.

To give an example of colour crosses, grey in horses is a dominant colour, and if a grey mare is crossed with a brown horse a grey foal is the result. If this filly is mated with a brown, however, a proportion of her progeny, approximately half, will be brown, because half the colour units in her germ cells will be grey, the other half brown, and when one of the former meets the brown of the sire the colt will be grey, when one of the latter it will be brown. Therefore, although we know grey is dominant, it is rash to prophesy that a colt will be grey unless the antecedents of the mare are known, as if she is a half-bred in respect of her colour it is just a matter of chance which colour is transmitted by her at a certain mating. We know that out of a number of matings she will produce approximately equal numbers of colts of each colour, but it is impossible to do more than guess which will arrive in any particular year.

In breeding dogs ,then, it is obvious that strict analysis is the only method by which inheritance can be predicted and controlled. It is no good looking at an animal as a whole; it must be picked to pieces point by point, and a mate chosen which, when picked to pieces in the same way, proves itself to possess as many as possible of the same good point. Each point in which two animals differ leads to the progeny being half-breds, i.e., unstable in respect of such characters. What they inherit may be desirable points or may not—observation (experiment) will alone prove which are dominant—but in any case instability will have been created, and it is more or less luck or chance how inheritance will proceed in the future. When the breeder has succeeded in building up a strain in which like has been mated to like for at least three generations, then he may be sure that by continuing to in-breed his strain and mate the like together he will be able to produce puppies of the same pattern with almost mechanical regularity.

Although at the toss of the halfpenny it is chance which side comes down uppermost, yet if one continues to toss that halfpenny a great number of times the probability is that each side will be uppermost an approximately equal number of times. So it is in breeding together animals which are in any way cross-bred. It is just chance what combinations of the units occur at any particular mating: but in the end we know that certain definite combinations are bound to occur in definite ratio, and that though we cannot prognosticate that we get a certain thing at a given moment, yet if it fails this time it is a 2 to 1 (or some other proportion) chance that it occurs next time.

Hitherto the great failing of the average breeder has been in the grasping of the importance of treating each point as a separate entity in heredity. He mates a good headed dog bad shoulders with a bad headed bitch with good shoulders and thinks he has paved the way to the production of champions in the most scientific manner. If he does breed anything good it will truly be a matter of luck. The correct mating would be a good headed bitch to the bad shouldered dog (if a dog with both good head and shoulders were not available), as then the head, at any rate, would be retained in the next and subsequent generations. In mating, also, too much attention must not be paid to relationship. Provided always the constitutions are sound, mate together those animals which suit each other, irrespective of whether they are very near relations or not related at all.

"Smith," said the grocer, severely, 'did you charge Mr. Jay for that basket of peaches?"

"Yes, sir," the clerk replied; "I think I did, sir."

"Well, charge him again," said the other.

The Naturalist.

A PUIR WEE THING.

The weasel is one of the best hated members of the vermin tribe. Who has a good word for the "puir wee thing!" Like a flash of gold and black and white, delicately blended, silently it darts across the country road or the ride in the wood. Again, it hustles in and out of the hedges so quickly as to resemble a momentary smudge. I have seen many a weasel bolt from a hole and a corn rick, but I have never seen one killed with a stick, nor have I ever come across a dog quick enough to snap the little creature up.

A Deadly Rider.

Have you ever seen it, through a powerful field-glass, crossing a meadow of a summer's evening on the scent of brer rabbit? At first it literally gallops along at an astounding rate. As soon, however, as it catches a glimpse of its prey it is down as flat on its belly as the proverbial pancake, covering the remaining distance in spasmodic rushes and leaps. Finally, it hurls itself on the rabbit's back and buries its teeth, which are set closely together and are as sharp as the sharpest needles, in the victim's neck. What artifices bunny may employ to try and rid itself of its deadly rider, whose weight it will hardly feel, but whose teeth and claws will grip it like a spiked vice! It may roll over and over, spring high in the air, rush through the thickest, and in and out of its burrow. But, do what it will, it will be only energy wasted. The chances are, however, that terrified to stupefaction, the creature will offer no resistance, but squatting low, with ears laid back and brown eyes bulging, and quivering in every muscle and limb, quietly suffer its life blood to be drained.

On the Trail of the Rat.

The weasel is not gregarious in its habits, but in accordance with the saying which tells us that it is the exception that proves the rule, it will occasionally assemble in small packs of from six to about a dozen, and set out on hunting expeditions. Often miles will be covered in the course of a few days, while the vermin will give tongue and behave in no other manner than as a pack of highly-trained hounds. On the trail of the rat the weasel is ever cautious and slow moving. For, strong and fearless as the little thing is, its presence does not terrify the rat to a state of immovable stupidity. No sooner does the latter's keen nostrils tell it that Mr. Weasel is on its track than it is running "like mad"; that is to say, unless it happens to be a female with young. But run it never so fast, the weasel is pressing it hard in no time. Up and down the hedgerow, into the burrows by one hole and out by another, the pair madly race, the weasel swift of foot, the rat slow in comparison and clumsy withal, the former endeavouring to bring the rat to close quarters, the latter straining limb and brain to make good an escape. At length, overcome by exhaustion and terror, the rat acknowledges itself practically vanquished by suddenly turning and, with uplifted tail, up-turned gums, and arched back, facing its now certainly unconquerable foe, squealing pitifully. No fight worthy of the name follows. Not hesitating for a single moment, the weasel "rushes in," and seizing its victim by the throat, the two lie locked together, motionless and silent—that is, save for the sound of the weasel drinking the rat's blood.

Feminine Pluck.

The rodent with young invariably presents a bolder front, and fights fiercely to the bitter end. As she lies within her burrow with her little blind, pink-skinned offspring the weasel does not rush in upon her and try to take her by surprise. That would be an impossibility. It enters the hole with the greatest caution and stealth. But rarely indeed has it advanced more than a few inches before it sees Mrs. Rat, half squealing, half growling, coming forward to meet it. The weasel, however, does not begin the attack; the rat, over-anxious for the safety of her family, is always the aggressor. Again and again she darts at the weasel's throat. The latter, conscious of its superiority, receives the attacks with sullenness and an air of indifference, nimbly dodging and drawing back.

Beads of Fire.

But dodge it never so quickly, not for the smallest fraction of a second does the creature ever take its eyes, which in the darkness of the burrow and the night resemble two small beads of fire, off its frightened, frenzied, inferior antagonist. It would be fatal to do so. Patiently and keenly it is watching for its opportunity, which never fails to come. The rat darts again and again, and yet again, her rage increasing with each attack. At last, provoked beyond endurance at finding herself unable to either close with her foe or to ruffle its temper, she literally throws herself between his teeth, gnashing madly and squealing horribly. What is the result? Quicker than the lightning scuds across the plain, the weasel's teeth are meeting in the rat's throat. Loudly the rodent screams, and desperately she writhes and struggles. In less than five minutes, however, she is as dead as the proverbial door nail, and her blood has been drunk. But not as yet is the weasel's thirst satisfied. Deeply and quickly it dips into the burrow to make a search for its victim's family. All the mites, naked and such babies as they are, have fled. Some are shivering amongst the decaying leaves in the hedgerow, some have crept away into the moist fields, some have slipped into a mole's pipe. But quickly all are discovered, and in turn all suffer the fate of their hapless parent. Then up into the hedges the weasel nimbly runs and attacks the small birds asleep with their heads beneath their wings. Almost every small creature is the weasel's prey, but rats and mice in particular. Indeed, it has been known to even attack and kill the hedgehog.

Solution to Problem No. 67.

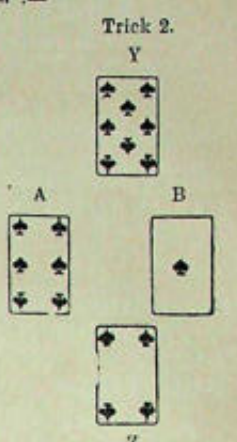
B is marked with no more diamonds, and has probably led from queen, knave, 10, etc., in hearts, Z has to think how he can go game. He can make two by cards by establishing a diamond in dummy, but to get out must win a third trick in hearts or a second in spades. Now it is practically useless to lead the knave of spades and finesse, because A would not cover with a single honour, and it is long odds against his holding two, and the 9 being with B, which is the only distribution which would enable Z to make two tricks in the suit. But if it is led by B he has a much better chance of doing so. Z should put on the king of hearts, therefore, and return the 8, letting the trick run up to B. If B wins, as he must, he will then have to lead up to a tenace in hearts, open clubs up to great strength, or lead a spade; and if, as is probable, he chooses the third alternative, Z puts on the 10, and has a fair chance of establishing his suit, when Y's trick in diamonds will not be wanted.

Problem No. 68.

Score: A. B. 24, Y Z. 24. Z deals and declares hearts. Y's and Z's hands are as follow:—

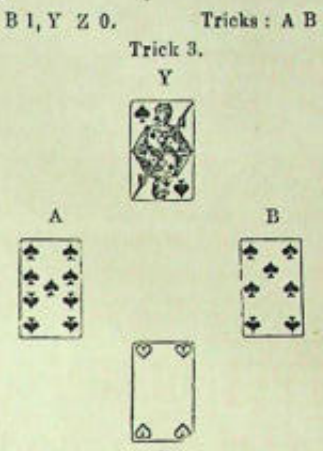
Y's Hand (Dummy).—7, 6 hearts; 7, 6, 5, 4, diamonds; queen, 10, 7, 3 clubs; knave, 8, 2 spades.

Z's Hand (Dealer)—Ace, queen, knave, 5, 4 hearts; king, 3, 2 diamonds; ace, 6, 5 clubs; 4, 3 spades.



The first three tricks are as follow:—

Trick 1.



Tricks: A B 1, Y Z 0.

Trick 2.

Tricks: A B 2, Y Z 0.

Trick 3.

Tricks: A B 2, Y Z 1.

How ought Z to play the hand, and why?

ORIENTAL BIG GAME NOTES.

Apparently the last word has not yet been spoken with regard to the maximum height attained by the Indian gaur, or "bison" as sportsmen prefer to call the creature. Blanford, in the "Fauna of British India," stated that, so far as he could ascertain, anything over six feet is very rare indeed; the biggest measurement he quotes being 6 feet 1½ inches, given on the authority of Sir Walter Elliot. We have, however, recently seen a letter from a sportsman in Madras, in which it is stated that such dimensions are frequently exceeded in Mysore and the Lower Nilgiris. Indeed in the opinion of the writer of that letter bull gaur in the south of India run very much larger than in the Central Provinces and Kuch Behar, although they may have somewhat smaller heads. As an example he gives the measurements of an old herd-bull shot by himself, which is stated to have stood no less than 6 feet 10 inches at the shoulder, and 6 feet 11¾ inches at the highest part of the hump; his total length being 9 feet 5 inches and the length of the tail 2 feet 8 inches. He was a very old animal, remarkably thin, and carried in his shoulder an old 12-bore rifle bullet which could not, however, apparently have much affected him at any time.

Now without in any way reflecting on the honesty and good faith of the sender of these particulars, what we want to know is whether these measurements were made in the proper manner by means of a tape held perpendicularly between standards, or whether they followed the curves of the body. If they were taken, with care and exactness, in the orthodox manner, we have apparently indisputable evidence of the existence of 7-foot "bison." Till, however, we have absolute assurance that the measurements were taken with the strictest care and attention according to the orthodox method, we must preserve a judicial scepticism in the matter. Possibly these lines may come under the notice of the writer of the communication in question, in which event we trust that he will communicate directly with this journal.

In this place we may refer to a letter which appeared in our columns of 9th April last recording the death of a spotted tsaine in the Wong forest of Siam. The writer of that letter, Mr. A. A. Porter, describes the whole head, neck, body, and the upper portions of the limbs of this animal as being profusely dotted with small white spots of the approximate size of a two-anna piece; the ground-colour of the head being nearly black, and that of the body very dark brownish bay. It is added that reports have for some time been current with regard to the existence of spotted wild cattle in the Wong forest.

Needless to say, no such animals are at present known to science; and if the whole of the tsaine in the district are really white spotted and at the same time purebred, it is practically certain that we have to do with an undescribed race of Bos sondaicus. On the other hand, white spotting in an animal of this description is very suggestive of a cross of domesticated blood; and before admitting the existence of a truly wild race of spotted tsaine, it is necessary that we should be assured of the freedom of these animals from a domesticated taint. The proper place for the investigation of specimens, if the creature be purebred, is, of course, the Natural History Museum at South Kensington, where a head and skin would be most welcome.

Before leaving the subject of wild cattle we cannot refrain from mentioning that in the article on prehistoric Indian beasts published in our issue of 4th June our esteemed correspondent should have told his readers that Bos acuticornis and its immediate relatives are the extinct representatives of the modern anoa or dwarf buffalo of Celebes. He should also have described the so-called Capra sivalensis as a tahr (Hemitragus) and not as a wild goat, while he should also have referred to the extremely interesting fact of the occurrence of a near ally of the takin among the Siwalik fauna.

The mention of takin reminds us that a new race or species of this most remarkable ruminant has recently been described from the Chinese province of Sze-chuen; its claim to distinction being founded on the uniformly light grey colour of the coat. In this respect the creature presents a very striking contrast to all the takin previously known from Sze-chuen and Eastern Tibet, in which much of the hair on the head and fore-quarters is bright golden yellow. This animal was discovered by Mr. Mason Mitchell, the American Consul in Sze-chuen, who states that it lives in the same country as the yellow takin, from which, however, it keeps quite apart, and differs in being for the most part solitary, instead of going about in small herds.

It is a great pity that English sportsmen do not, or cannot, except occasionally, visit Kansu and Sze-chuen, as the sport must be good, and these are almost certainly more new races, if not species of animals, awaiting discovery. The curious thing about the fauna of this part of North-Western China is that it includes representatives of what were till quite recently regarded as exclusively Malayan types. Some time ago, for example, Mr. Lydekker described from this region a variety of the bruang or Malay black bear, while more recently he has named a race of the golden or bay cat, a species previously known to range from Borneo to the Eastern Himalaya.

Reverting to the letter relating to the Nilgiri and Mysore bison, it may be mentioned that the writer refers to the small size of the antlers of the sambar of that district as compared with those from the Central Provinces, although the two animals have approximately the same bodily stature. Antlers of 35 inches are, it is stated, but very rarely obtained now-adays in Madras. This suggests that if we had sufficient specimens for comparison, it is not improbable the Nilgiri sambar would prove to be racially distinct from its more northern representative.

While on the subject of deer, we may refer to a letter which appeared in our issue of 9th April where the writer mentions what he regards as a small deer of unknown species killed by himself in Siam. It is, however, clear from his description that the creature referred to is not a deer at all, in the proper sense of that term, but rather one of the elegant little hornless chevrotains, or miscalled mouse deer.

In conclusion we may allude to a point connected with elephants which may be worth the attention of the Imperial or Provincial Governments. It is a well-known fact that both in India and Ceylon tame elephants very rarely breed. On the other hand, in Burma, they do so less uncommonly, while we have reason to believe that in Siam events of this nature are still less unfrequent. Now an elephant calf was recently born in the Zoological Gardens at Copenhagen, of which the male parent at any rate was a Siamese animal. This suggests that if a few male Siamese elephants were introduced into the Indian kheddas, calves might be produced much more frequently than is at present the case. The experiment surely seems worth trying, for if tame elephants could be induced to breed it is probable that not only would the progeny be much more docile and easily trained than are wild animals, but that, at the same time, a considerable saving in the matter of capturing and taming the latter would accrue. It is not for a moment to be supposed that sufficient tame elephants could ever be bred to render unnecessary the capture of wild ones, but if an appreciable percentage of the supply could be raised in captivity, the Government exchequer would certainly benefit.

An indignant wearer of "obstructive millinery" at matinees writes to the Telegraph to say that men smoke in theatres, and as what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, she refuses to remove her duck of a hat. Vanquished in the matter of matinee hats, the dear ladies now threaten London playgoers with mountainous coiffures. So we await the bold manager who will order "all detachable hair to be removed before the rise of the curtain."

A millionaire lay dying. He had lived a life of which, as he now looked back on it, he felt none too proud. To the minister at his bedside he muttered weakly.

"If I leave £50,000 or so to the church will my salvation be assured?"

The minister answered cautiously:

"I wouldn't like to be positive, but it's well worth trying."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The entries for the fourth Tollygunge Gymkhana next Saturday are again more than a bit above the average and the Jiu Jitsu Stakes with a list of 22 horses is to be run in two divisions, the weight being reduced to 11st. 7lbs. It will take a bold man to prophesy the winners out of this lot and they ought to be two good sporting events.

The July Plate and Nullah Cup will be difficult to handicap (the weights are not out at time of writing) as Meprise in the one and Idle in the other stand out so far from all competitors that if they get reasonable allotments very few of the others will be able to find jockeys. Except for these two stars the fields will be fairly easy to bring together and they should both provide real good races.

The Monsoon Trial Plate will probably be very interesting and we like Eljin the best if she is fit. It is interesting to see Watchfire's name again in a list of entries. A year ago he was reported absolutely unsound and useless for saddle purposes, and here he is again out for a sprint race with a heavy-weight on top. They say he is quite fast too for 4 furlongs and may be well in the running at the finish.

The entries for the first day's Monsoon meeting close on Monday, but work is not at all far advanced in most cases as the almost incessant rain has prevented the course being opened often enough for galloping and trainers have had to do most of their sprinting across the centre. A fair amount of schooling has been done, but a lot arranged for Tuesday morning had to fall through owing to the rain. Foy has been showing up well and with a bit more schooling will take a lot of beating in the open class. Mr. Galstaun is reported to have Hoop Iron in work and it is said that the famous Long Tom is also going to reappear on the scene next month sound and well once more.

As we have had such a lot of rain before hand there should be a chance of getting better luck on the actual race days than last year, and if only the weather will be a little kind the prospects for the season are very bright, as there are lots of horses in training, though jockeys to ride them are a little scarce at present.

Mr. Heywood, the trainer, is just back in Calcutta looking well and all ready for the coming fray.

H. J. Butters, a successful light weight Australian jockey, will shortly be in Calcutta, where he has been engaged to take part in the forthcoming Mosoon meetings. Butters turns the scale at 6st. 7lb.

Writing on the 3rd instant, our London correspondent says:—"Bob" Sievier, editor of the Winning Post, once owner of Sceptre and player of many extraordinary parts in life's comedy, was arrested, on the 27th ultimo at Sandown, just after the second race had been run, on a charge of blackmailing proferred by Mr. J. B. Joel, the wealthy South African sportsman. The actual charge was as follows:—"Threatening Mr. J. B. Joel to publish certain libellous and defamatory matters touching him, and for proposing to abstain from publishing defamatory and libellous matter for the purpose of extorting from Mr. J. B. Joel the sum of £5,000, contrary to the statute."

Sievier, of course, denied the charge, was whisked off to town between two detectives in his own motor-car, was remanded at Bow Street and brought up next day before the beak, who refused the application for bail. The luckless Joel and his family, as readers of Sievier's publication may be aware, have for many moons been the victims of gross attacks and to the surprise of many no action had been taken. Mr. J. was biding his time. When Sievier declared he had in his possession the warrant for the arrest of Mr. J. issued in South Africa in 1884 and a woodcut depicting the said J. between two murderers and demanded £5,000 to keep them out of print, it seemed to the victim of this lengthy persecution that the time had arrived. Through one Mills, Sievier seems to have committed himself on paper and it is alleged he went further into the mire in conversations overheard by witnesses, all in connection with the alleged attempt at blackmail and Mr. J. deeming the iron was sufficiently hot struck it promptly—and his enemy was delivered into his hand. At the first day's hearing the crowd of sporting men in Court was prodigious and the interest taken in the case exceptionally great, for the accused has as many unfriends as friends. The facts here set out were spoken to by Mr. Mills and the case adjourned, the Magistrate refusing the application for bail. Ere these lines are in print it is possible you will know the result by wire: as the case stands at present it looks as if Sievier is in a rather tight place.

A RATHER foolhardy exhibition was given by a Mr. Buckland on the last day of the International Horse Show at Olympia. The day before, as the result of a fall riding one of Mr. Winans' horses, he broke his foot across the instep. He had it reset, and with the foot encased in plaster of Paris rode all Mr. Winans' horses in the finals for the Jumping Championship next day! Folly such as this should have been prevented, but Mr. Winans professed himself quite unable to persuade his jockey from his purpose, and the show officials refrained from interfering. Some might call this wonderful pluck; others would consider it colossal stupidity.

NAMA, the native jockey, met with an accident while exercising an Arab pony at Poona on the 17th instant. His stirrup leather appears to have broken and the pony getting out of hand tried to clear the rails. Nama was thrown and sustained a a fracture of the left leg.

OUR London sporting letter to-day gives details of some important athletic events. The London Athletic Club summer meeting, the Scottish Championships, the big swim from Richmond to Blackfriars, won by Jarvis, and Holbein's fine 50-mile swim, the Lawn Tennis Championships, and some interesting golf and polo. Jarvis finished a mile in front of the others in 3 hours 36 minutes 24 seconds, a magnificent victory, though his time was over ten minutes slower than that of last year, when he won the race. But there was a strong head wind and very choppy water the last part of the journey. There was a big entry which included several women and, as will be seen by the details of the race, two of them did well. Kearsley finished second, but Jarvis's race was not with him; it was with E. Beaurepaire, the young Australian long distance champion. Neck and neck the two swam together for mile after mile, and it was only when within a few hundred yards of Hammersmith Bridge that the Titanic contest ended. Beaurepaire was beaten, but like a great-hearted athlete struggled on until, seized with cramp, he sank. There was a dramatic and exciting scene, and Beaurepaire was only rescued through his attendant diving from the boat in his clothes and getting him into safety. After this Jarvis went on like a motor-car, and the race was over.

Jarvis swam with a powerful overarm side stroke, and Beaurepaire used the trudgeon, a much more fatiguing method of propulsion. Kearsley also used the overarm, and P. L. Ooms, the Dutch champion, who finished second last year, and was third this time, like Beaurepaire relied upon the trudgeon. Nearly all the others used the side stroke, or overarm stroke, and Miss Armstrong the breast stroke, for the greater part of the journey.

MONTAGUE HOLBEIN, old time cyclist and long distance swimmer, is a marvel. On the 30th ultimo, by way of preliminary to his next attempt to swim the English Channel, he swam fifty miles in the Thames and established a record. When he started from Greenwich a bitterly cold east wind was blowing, but when he entered the water it seemed to have no effect upon him. He jumped off from a small row-boat at 3-49 A.M., and reached Charlton in 32mins., Woolwich Arsenal in 47mins, and Barking in 1h. 17mins.

Off the Tripcocks the water became very rough, but he gamely struggled through, and reached Northfleet, 19½ miles at 8-45. Here the tide failed and he turned back, arriving at Barking after 8hs. 43mins. swimming. Blackwall Point—thirty-nine miles—was reached at 2-18 P.M., and Deptford at 3-30. Here the tide turned again and the last stretch was entered upon, the objective being Woolwich Arsenal Pier. This was reached by the swimmer after 13hs. 47mins. swimming, and as an eye-witness puts it "anybody seeing him climb the ladder lowered from the tug in attendance would never have dreamed that he was returning from a fifty-mile spin in rough water." Details will be found in our London sporting letter.

THE Cambridge Olympic eight were in some danger of losing their stroke the other day. Two days before Henley opened Mr. D. R. C. Stuart was in a punt on the bridge side of Marsh Lock. He was accompanied by a lady and gentleman, and was attempting the rather risky task of paddling the punt up against the strong stream of water overflowing Marsh Lock Weir. The punt began to ship water, and was quickly overturned by the varying currents. The lockkeeper ran across the weir, and several collegians rendered assistance. The lady was saved by a man stretching himself full length on the ground whilst someone held his feet. Everything in the punt was lost, including Mr. Stuart's purse, containing a substantial sum, and his glasses.

HARRY VARDON, the golfer, was the victim of a burglary last month. While he was playing a match at Barnet practically all his valuable and unreplaceable Cups and Medals were looted. Rough luck.

OUR readers have had the final results of Henley in our special cable: in our London letter to-day will be found full details of the doings of the first three days. The outstanding incident of the second day was the unfortunate foul which deprived the veteran Blackstaffe of his win; but for this it is more than probable he would have come out on top in the final. In his race with Stuart he was winning easily, prior to reaching Grosvenor Club, but he kept his boat too near the centre of the course. At this juncture Stuart was coming along with a fine spurt, and he would have brought his craft practically level with that of the Vesta man. Blackstaffe either did not realise the pace at which his opponent was travelling, or else he had some other motive for keeping nearer the Berks shore than was really necessary. At all events, he undoubtedly prevented the brother of the Cambridge stroke from making any headway. Stuart did not make any appeal to the umpire at the time of the occurrence, but he signified his intention of not finishing the race to the bitter end by slackening to a steady paddle. It is regrettable that a race should be won or lost under such circumstances. There was no apparent reason for Blackstaffe to scull in the middle of the course. He had only to keep pegging steadily away to make sure of victory.

THE race between the Yale and Harvard Universities' eights over a four-mile course was rowed on the 25th June. Shortly after the start one of the Yale men broke an oar, whereupon both crews stopped and returned to the starting point. The result eventually was a victory for Harvard, the Yale stroke collapsing after 2½ miles had been rowed. Yale finished with only seven men. Stroke was transhipped to a launch.

and many good bouts were witnessed, while the Assemby Rooms were crowded on each night. The officials were :—

Referee.—Major-General Kitson, C.V.O., C.M.G. Judges.—Lieutenant Findlayson, Royal Artilery; Lieutenant Burnard, Leinster Regiment. Timekeepers.—Colour-Sergeant Vaughan, Glosters, and Sergeant-Instructor of Musketry McMullen, R.I.F.

Results of the finals were as follows :—Boys.—Boy Sissons (Glosters) beat Boy Grimes (R.I.F.) Feather Weight Private Hibbard (Glosters) beat Private Reilly (R.I.F.) Light Weight Private Smith (Glosters) beat Private Cox (Leinsters). Middle Weight.—Lance-Corporal Arnold (Glosters) beat Private Burgin (Leinsters). Heavy Weight Private Hetherington (Leinsters) beat Private James (Glosters) Three-round Contests—Private Gent and Lance-Corporal Atkinson. (Glosters) Six-round Contest Private Roberts (Glosters).

The results of important cricket matches in England during the week were as follows :—

Sussex beat Somersetshire by an innings and 211 runs.

Worcestershire beat Gloucestershire by 225 runs.

The match between Kent and Lancashire was abandoned.

Hampshire beat Philadelphia by an innings and 36 runs.

Yorkshire beat Notts by 140 runs.

Warwickshire beat Northamptonshire by an innings and 52 runs.

The matches between Middlesex vs. Surrey and Leicestershire vs. Essex were drawn.

Middlesex beat The Philadelphians by seven wickets.

Yorkshire beat Gloster by an innings and 95 runs.

Kent beat Worcester by an innings and 36 runs.

Rain spoiled the remaining matches. Those between Surrey and Lancashire, Kent and Middlesex, and Warwick and Leicestershire were abandoned without a ball being bowled owing to the rain.

Some play was possible in the match between Yorkshire and Essex, but this was also eventually abandoned.

The matches between Gloucestershire and Northampton, Sussex and Hampshire, and Somerset and Worcester, were drawn.

At the end of last month interesting evidence was again given before the Select Committee of the House of Lords to whom has been referred the bill intended to limit the killing of birds of bright plumage for millinery and such purposes. Lord Avebury presided.

Mr. J. A. Barrett, legal adviser to the United States Embassy, gave an account of the United States' law relating to the importation and killing of plumage birds. There had been some prosecutions, but the law could not be effective until there was some international agreement.

Mr. Charles Ryan, representing the Commonwealth of Australia, and also a member of the Ornithological Union of Australia, stated that egrets were being seriously diminished in number, and in the central parts of Australia had been almost exterminated. It was an extremely shy bird, and the only time it was possible to shoot it was while it was nesting. The number of birds of paradise was also rapidly diminishing and the lyre bird would soon be extinct.

Captain Albert Pam, who has travelled largely in South America, said egrets were being slaughtered in very large numbers. They were mostly shot, but were often suffocated by lighting sulphur fires underneath trees. This was done in the neighbourhood of the Amazon and Orinoco Rivers, where the people were a cross between negroes, Red Indians, and Portuguese. (Laughter.) He did not think the restrictive State law in New York had diminished the sale of these beautiful birds judging by what one saw walking down Fifth Avenue.

A new aspect of the question was raised by Mr. Marston, editor of the Fishing Gazette, who asked the committee to add to the bill a clause allowing the importation of some nine foreign birds whose feathers were used in the preparation of salmon, sea trout, and other artificial flies. If that were not allowed about 1,000 skilled men and women workers would be thrown out of work, and the dressing of these flies would probably go to the Continent and America. The amount of plumage material used in the manufacture of these flies was so small that it could not possibly affect the existence of the birds.

Mr. Leafe, of Messrs. Farlow and Co., gave similar evidence, and stated that those engaged in this trade were quite ready to give a guarantee that the feathers imported for their purposes should be used for no other.

Colonel W. L. B. Coulson, "the otter's friend," has again come to the front with a strongly worded protest against otter-worrying which appears in a home paper to hand by this mail. To hundreds of sportsmen who have hunted big game in Indian jungles, undergone the physical strain or taken the risks the pursuit of big game usually entails, to those who have pitted their shooting skill, their woodcraft, and their powers of endurance against the instinct, cunning and ferocity of the larger carnivora or other dangerous animals the hunting of a wretched little creature like an otter—hardly bigger than a large tom cat with a gang of men, a pack of dogs, plus sticks and staves must always seem an unattractive and unprofitable business. We do not decry otter hunting in the abstract; in a country like England where the beasts of the chase are few the otter is fair game, but there is reason to think that he is often accounted for in ways that do not conform to the average man's notions of fair play. The following excerpts from the Colonel's article explain his attitude :—

We condemn the Spaniards for their national "sport," the bull-fight, but are not many of our methods of finding pleasure and recreation infinitely more barbarous and cowardly? Skill and pluck are required in the matador, though he may, and does, safeguard himself as much as circumstances will allow. As long, however, as we continue to treat any animals as we do hares and otters, the less we say about English courage and superiority over the Spanish the better.

The otter-worry is peculiarly odious and cruel because it is as a rule a very prolonged affair. Though the spear, happily, is done away with, poles remain and prodding is freely indulged in. The plucky little creature is too often subjected to an amount of cowardly prosecution, accompanied by an almost inconceivable lack of ordinary chivalry. Those engaged in the ghastly revel seem to become virtually maddened by it. Language fails to convey properly to the mind the awful inhumanity that far too often is present at the final scene.

The following graphic account, written by an eye-witness, may help to bring out the true nature of the insensate cowardice and savagery that too often mark the end of the poor, intelligent, and, in many respects, useful otter :—

"We had," writes this gentleman, "found an otter in the morning, and it was supposed that it had taken refuge in the 'clutter' of rocks above the pool. Accordingly, men with long spiked poles, aided by terriers, are endeavouring to dislodge it. Suddenly another otter, much larger than the one we had been hunting, emerges from this retreat and dashes into the water. Instantly the pool is surrounded by excited hunters. A man stands at the adit-head, blocking the way of escape. The water is alive with swimming hounds, while others stand baying on the banks. I catch sight of a small, dark face and large brown eyes for one moment above the surface of the pool. Again and again at ever-shortening intervals I see that face appear and disappear. I can never forget it—that wild, scared face, and the terror of those hunted eyes! There is no possibility of escape. Hounds and 'sportsmen'—yes, and 'sportswomen' too—surround the pool, and the only exit is effectually guarded.

"Only one thought possessed me—that of sickening compassion for this poor, beautiful, hunted creature. Men, and good heavens! women, too, seem frenzied with the desire to kill. No thought of pity seems to dawn upon their minds. So at length, amid yelling men and baying hounds, the wretched 'beast of the chase' is forced, for dear life's sake, to try the desperate shift of taking to the land. Vain hope indeed. Scarce twenty yards of flight and hounds roll her over. What a lesson for the young! Thus is the rising generation taught to be gentle and compassionate, and to love 'all things, both great and small.'"

It is sad and humiliating to reflect how quickly those addicted to tormenting otters and other creatures revert to abject terror when there is a chance of their being injured themselves. I have witnessed this over and over again in the case of tigers in the Indian jungles, and not infrequently with deer. Some years ago I happened to be with a party on a fishing expidition in the Canadian backwoods. One of our number, a young fellow over 6 feet in height, elected to lie in wait for deer on the banks of a river. We shortly heard two shots and then screams for assistance. I, with another, ran to the spot. Our friend had wounded a deer hardly bigger than a goat. The creature ran towards him. He had thrown down his rifle and attempted to climb a tree. He then rushed up to his neck in the stream, yelling for help. We put the deer out of its misery. Our friend then came from the water and exclaimed. "The brute; it made for me!"

A successful operation has recently been carried out on a lioness at the Calcutta Zoo. A piece of walking stick, which was found firmly imbedded in her palate, was removed by Mr. Bose, the Assistant Superintendent of the garden. It is supposed that some one had poked her with a stick and she had snapped at it. There are ever mischievous persons who delight in annoying the animals at the Zoo despite the prohibitory notices.

To many of our readers whose arms have probably needed the application of a soothing dressing after a day's sport under an Indian sun, the following lines may recall painful memories :—

I've suffered from the toothache,
And an earache I have had;
Cucumbers, too, have given me
A pain I thought was bad.
I've had my share of suffering,
To leaven Nature's charms;
But I've known no meaner agony
Than just two sun-burned arms.

I've gone through all the tortures
Of a chilblain and a boil;
I've had a burning fever
And a cannon's quick recoil
Has singed my face and whiskers;
But these were merely charms
To the torment I have suffered
With a pair of sun-burned arms.

Our Bombay correspondent writes :—Instead of being, as was the case a couple of years ago, on the point of becoming an affair of the past, there has been a complete revival of interest in the weekly mounted sports run by the Bombay Gymkhana on the maidan opposite the club. We have had more than our share of rain up to date and last Wednesday the ground was in none too safe a condition, it being, in fact, surprising that no accidents occurred in the jumping events.

Throughout the programme entries were very large and most of the events had to be run off in heats. Jumping for ponies came first, and amongst a smart lot Messrs. Weyman and Christie were bracketed first with Mr. Owen Symons third. In ths horse division an oft-times winner, Mr. Stileman's Lux, gave a capital exhibition, deserving the verdict from Messrs. Savile and Dunkley.

A field of about ten competed for the Substitution Race in which they had to ride a given course, exchange mounts and return. One wondered if the conditions were fully understood as nobody seemed in any sort of a hurry to save his mount being last; the owner of the last horse in to win, this proved to be Mr. Barraclough's, Messrs. Dunkley and Saxby next.

The Fishing Stakes for Ladies was hotly contested, Mrs. Rumboll shining as usual and leading all the way, though Mrs. McCausland made a race of it at the finish after having dropped the cork from her hook, a fact of which onlookers were ignorant till afterwards. Mrs. Haigh and Mrs. Cutbush finished next.

Run off in heats, the ladies' nomination, Treasure Trove Stakes, proved exciting. The men had to ride a course with chatties full of bran in which coins were concealed. These the ladies had to find, when the men returned. Eventually Mrs. Piggott and Mr. Saxby won from Mrs. McCausland and Mr. Barraclough and Mr. and Mrs. Nash.

We wound up with the two scurries in both of which there were good finishes, Mr. Owen Symons just staying Mr. Weyman out in the pony class and Mr. Thacker getting home a neck in the horse event from Mr. Griffin on Mr. Rommel's Good Luck.

The Bombay Harwood League has now reached the half way stage and, despite the heavy rain we have had, very few games have had to be postponed. With a well-covered stand protecting onlookers from the rain, there is always a very fair attendance, however leaden the sky, and it strikes one that these stolid Bombayites are coming out of their shell a bit and on occasion actually applaud.

It is not within my ken that a civilian team has made any sort of a bid for first place in the League table, and now, for the second time, it is practically a foregone conclusion that the Royal Scots "B" and "A" will be top, and probably the other military team, the R. G. A., next.

The Bombay Gymkhana last year made a really capital show and eventually finished second, but Ward at back and Kennedy at centre are badly missed. Some radical changes will have to be made for them even to secure a position for themselves half way up. On Saturday they met the Y.M.C.A., who are showing up very well this year. They are quite a young set of players, but keen and plucky, are rare hustlers, though unfortunately very weak near goal. Considerably faster, they frequently broke clean through the Gymkhana defence but, after having decidedly the better of the first half, could not score. The second was very even and both frequently failed miserably in front of goal till a good centre from the left saw the Gym's inside left, put in the only goal of the match.

This was the Y. M. C. A.'s second game of the week, as on Wednesday they had given a great display against the Scots "B" who only got through once, and that just before final time. It will be remembered that towards the end of last season young "Charlie" Kelly came into notice as a back, and now he is quite the mainstay of the team. Realising their weakness at shooting, he frequently takes a turn forward, but though carefully "fed" he is as carefully marked. The two Templetons also are carrying out the promise they gave, Rose is resourceful as ever in goal and the Brewin brothers seem to have added to their pace. If they could only improve their shooting, I should tip them to remain fourth, where they now are.

Though their players are much the same as we used to see in the Y.M. C. A. and Rovers' ranks which have consequently been weakened, one is glad to see the Commercial Gymkhana doing so well. Their only game this week was against the Scots "A" and even with such an opposition they were decidedly unlucky. The one goal of the Scots was a hard volley by Bolton which would have been saved but for the greasiness of the ball. Like the Young Christians they are a hustling lot and it speaks well for a civilian team that they can stay the whole journey.

Another game fight was that put up by the Telegraph against the Scots "B", but here the signallers failed badly in the last few minutes when the one goal against them was supplemented by three more. They have much the same team as last year, though Greene's pace is missed on the right wing and it is a pity a good goal-keeper cannot be found so as to allow Edie to go forward again.

Always well matched, the R.G.A., and Scots "A" played a most exciting game on Tuesday, when honours were easy right up to within the last five minutes. Just after Kennaway had scored from off side Hewes from the extreme right sent in a smashing cross shot which went home. Another followed by Kennaway from a penalty for foul against the right back. Whereas the R.G.A. are a bigger team and play hard throughout, what the Scots lose in weight and pace they make up for in neatness and knowledge of the game. Their "B" team containing many of their Cup players are decidedly stronger and cannot deserve anything in the way of adverse critism as very seldom are they extended anything like to their full.

We have not seen the Rovers out this week, and it scarcely seems fitting that the club which runs the famous tournament should figure at the bottom. This as explained before, is due to many of their old team having gone over to the new Gymkhana.

A Jewish vendor of ready-made clothing had been repeatedly remonstrated with for Sabbath trading. One Saturday, when all his goods were well displayed and ticketed, the Rabbi appeared, and again rebuked him for doing business on the 7th day. "Business!" cried the offender. "It isn't business; it's charity, look at the prices!"

London Week by Week.

Friday, 3rd July 1908.

Few Londoners, I should imagine, can remember a more brilliant Trooping of Colour than that witnessed last Friday on the King's official birthday. There were a good many demonstrations of public loyalty, military splendour and naval activity—the latter finding expression chiefly in blank cartridge—but the doings at the Horse Guards formed the central ceremony of the day. His Majesty, with the Prince of Wales on his right and the Duke of Connaught on his left, rode at the head of the distinguished cavalcade which wended its way through Whitehall: needless to say the cheering was unbounded. The Queen was a spectator from a window at the Horse Guards and, of course, the trooping was carried out with the usual pomp and circumstance. In addition to the activity at Aldershot, Portsmouth, Chatham, Devonport and the Curragh, Ministerial rejoicing found vent in banquets. The Prime Minister gave a full-dress dinner at 10, Downing Street, at which the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Fife were among the guests. Afterwards a brilliant reception was held at the Foreign Office, and among the 4,000 guests were the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, Prince Arthur of Connaught, Prince Christian, and Princess Henry of Battenberg. The Police, too, shared in the full-dress parading and displayed a wealth of Coronation and other medals quite refreshing to behold. And throughout we had glorious weather.

The International Horse Show at Olympia came to an end on Saturday. It was by common consent voted a prodigious success as a show, and what is equally comforting to say it was a very great financial success. The total attendance was well over three hundred thousand! It is not to be wondered at that the directors are able to announce that there has been profit sufficiently large to enable them to endow the cause of horse-breeding. They have already offered gold cups to all the forthcoming colonial and foreign shows and more are to follow: let us hope the Tollygunge Club executive may hear of something to their advantage in the near future. Already plans have been discussed for next year's show and improvements and novelties have been promised.

The Indian Cheeroot long ago established a firm hold on the affections of English smokers. A few years ago Bewlay's and perhaps one or two other tobacconists offered them as novelties; now every cigar shop of any pretentions stocks most of the leading brands, and "Bahadurs," "Flor de Dindiguls" and Mrs. Middleton's "Burmas" take high rank among London's "weeds." But behold a possible rival from north of the Tweed! Scottish cigars have made their appearance and the Commons having just passed a bill allowing tobacco to be grown in Scotland we may soon expect to see the Caledonian "regalia" a trial of which, let us hope, will not make the consumer "stern and wild." When the bill was read for the third time, prior to its submission to the House of Lords, the virtues of the Scottish cigar were fervently praised by Mr. Alpheus Cleophas Morton, the Radical member for Sutherland. He took a cigar from a bag, and held it up between his fingers. "There!" he exclaimed, proudly, alluding to the Caledonian specimens, "They are as good as can be grown in any country." Nearly 120 speeches were made in the five hours' sitting and some of them were distinctly witty.

Mr. Hobhouse suggested that the members who wished to introduce it were not anxious to smoke it themselves, but were keen on supplying it to their friends.

The Evening News has dropped into poetry as thus:—

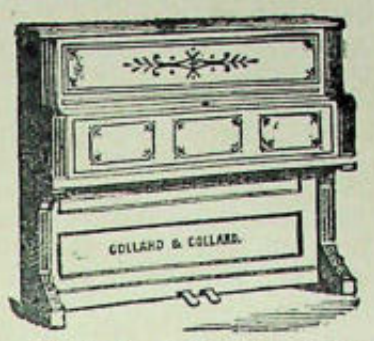
O, Caledonia, stern and wild,
I cannot quite resist the thought
That even thou hast grimly smiled,
At seeing thy tobacco bought
For luckless Southron chiels to smoke.
It was, indeed, the grimmest kind of joke,



Ireland has raised tobacco, too,
And patriots have smoked the same,
Pretending what their country grew
The very hightest rank might claim.
And this the Saxon might concede
For it was truly very rank indeed.

But Scotland's sons go not so far
To gain their own commercial ends;
They do not smoke the Scotch cigar;
They rather give it to their friends.
And those who try it murmur, "Please Reserve these tortures for your enemies!"

matrimony lead through its portals and now comes a seventh romance which has led to much iterviewing of Mr. Seymour Hicks, the actor-manager. From shop girl to baroness is a long step, but pretty Miss May Gates has achieved it and she is now the wife of Baron von Ditten, nephew of the Norwegian Minister Plenipotentiary at Berlin. The lady had been on the stage about three years. Prior to that she was a show-room girl at Jay's, in Regent Street. With good looks, a fine figure, and a wealth of glorious hair, she was persuaded to leave shop-life for the stage. She was at once a distinct success in the "Catch of the Season" at the Vaudeville, where she was one of the greatly admired "Gibson Girls." Later she figured on the programme of "Blue Bell" as one of the Bow Bells, her name in the piece being the very quaint one of "Dinner Bell." In the "Beauty of Bath," Miss Gates played the part of the "Hot Bun," one of the dozen beautiful girls who, it will be remembered, were termed the twelve Bath Buns. In "The Gay Gordons," in which she made her last theatrical appearance, she was down on the programme as "a guest." In no case had she many words to memorise. She had to look well, and she did well. Now she would appear to have done better.

THERE has been a recrudescence of activity among the prurient minded persons known as the "Shamed Innocents Society." Not long ago their clamour in connection with a certain half draped female stone figure over the entrance to an Insurance Office in the Strand resulted in the substitution of something that the L. C. C. and the P. M. P's. had to pass ere permission to erect it was given. Now the British Medical Association is in trouble. The hoarding has just been removed from their fine new stone hall in the Strand and lo! there are entirely nude figures on the façade. The harmful and demoralising spectacle has evoked an outcry from the class of people who love to dwell on this subject and while amazement and indignation is their portion—if they are to be believed—the rest of London is amused. The figures are so high up on the building that the average man in the street would hardly distinguish them; but following the example of the scandalised old maid at the seaside who, by the aid of a pair of powerful binoculars, could distinctly discern bathers on the distant beach, the P. M. P's. have satisfied themselves that there is nudity and that is sufficient for them. The wonder is that London editors can lend their columns to such drivel; but its a funny age.

I HAVE no doubt your readers will have heard ere this letter is published the result of the prosecution of Mr. Robert Sievier by Mr. J. B. Joel. A paragraph in your "Sporting Notes" gives you details of the case. I may add that the proceedings at Bow Street were of a most extraordinary character in respect of the enormous crowd of sporting people who literally fought to gain admittance to the court during the hearing. The court was soon full, but a little later it was ascertained that it had been decided that the case should be taken in the small court upstairs—known as the Extradition Court. The rush from the court was as exciting as the struggle for admission had been, and there was a scene of confusion, such as has seldom, if ever, been equalled in a police-court. To the average man in the street it looks as if the accused had been "served up on toast," but there are many who think he will come out of it all right. The case being sub judice comment is barred. He was remanded, bail being refused, and is to come up again next Tuesday.

THE Ditchers' Dinner was held on Tuesday night at the "Criterion" and was in every respect a success, though one would have expected to see a good many more present considering the number of old Quai Hais in London and the big contingent of eligibles now home on leave. Mr. Arthus Wallis' C.I.E., presided and among those present were Messrs. C. F. Larmour, T. W. Spink, Walter Davies, W. T. Spink, R. D. Newing, J. S. Middleton, H. Elworthy, C.I.E., from Calcutta, and Mr. G. F. Fillington and E. Clarke from the Punjab. In the course of an excellent speech the chairman touched on the unrest in India and expressed surprise at the fact that while there had been meetings of loyal natives who condemned the policy of the disaffected party, no meeting in support of the Government had been held at the Calcutta Town Hall by Europeans. Verb. sap.

In ideal weather conditions the Actors' Garden Party was held on Tuesday at the Botanic Gardens. Regent's Park. It was estimated, roughly, that nearly 15,000 people were present, and to judge by the way they patronised the attractions and, the strawberries and cream, the Actors' Orphanage Fund, in aid of which the fête was given, must have fared splendidly. It was a wonderfully animated scene—the pretty dresses and the charming wearers, the trees, flowers, lawns, tents, marquees and bands, and on every side a never-ending medley of music and talk and laughter. I thought I caught a distant glimpse of Mr. and Mrs. "Danny" King, late of Calcutta. Her zeal in the cause of charity has, I see, just been rewarded with a Kaiser-i-Hind medal and she has well deserved the distinction I am told. But what of those who have helped her so loyally for years in concert, bazar and playhouse, and without whose hearty co-operation her kindly efforts would not have gone very far? The presumption is that they will not be forgotten and that next New Year's Day it will positively rain K.-i-H. medals in Calcutta.

The late Mrs. Craigie (John Oliver Hobbs) was probably personally known to some of your readers. She was a guest at Government House, Calcutta in Lord Curzon's time. A tribute to her memory was last Wednesday unveiled by Lord Curzon. It is in the form of a bronze medallion portrait, an uncommonly good one by the way, erected in the library of University College, London, at which, as Pearl Craigie, she was a student from 1889 to 1902. In a glowing tribute to her, Lord Curzon said that he once received from her a letter written in Greek iambics, surely a novel feat in twentieth-century correspondence. Mgr. Browne, who is editing the correspondence of Mrs. Craigie for publication, quoted an extract from a letter which he had received from her written on the day before her death:—

I have not the smallest wish to marry; even if I were a widow to-morrow there is nothing now in marriage which calls me. If I had an illusion or so it might be different, but I have pulled through the worst years and the supreme difficulties, difficulties of Loneliness and society not the least of them I don't feel these any more.

Here are a few brevities that may interest some of your readers:—

A capital muster of nineteen was attracted to the first meeting of the Four in Hand Club in Hyde Park last Saturday, and it was cheering to see among the members the Earl of Ancaster, the veteran president. Much interest was taken in the meet judged by the big attendance of the general public.

The ineffable Mister Keir Hardie continues his amazing antics. He is offended at not being asked to the King's garden party, apparently because he thus loses the chance of refusing, and thus demonstrating how unsnobbish he is! He says "the incident will not be allowed to pass without a challenge." Will the Hon'ble Members really send his seconds to the King?

Sir Arthur Havelock, Governor, in succession of West African settlements, Trinidad, Natal, Ceylon, Madras and Tasmania died last week and was buried at Torquay on Monday last.

Henley regatta opened on Tuesday with a fine entry, in lovely weather, and with excellent prospects: but long ere these lines are in print I shall have wired you the complete results. It struck me that the attendance was distinctly poor on Tuesday and Wednesday; some aver that Henley is not its old self this year. I prefer to think that many are reserving themselves for the greater Henley—the Olympic Regatta at the end of this month.

The suffragists have become a nuisance now. At first the public regarded their proceedings with amusement if with a certain amount of disapproval; now the populace are actively hostile. This was plainly shown last Tuesday evening when the women raided the Houses of Parliament, broke the Premier's windows and otherwise misconducted themselves. The hostile onlookers pelted them with garbage, booed and hissed them and actively assisted the four or five hundred policemen on duty in effecting arrests. The affair ended in what was little short of a riot. Thirty were convicted next day at Westminster and sentenced to terms of imprisonment from a month to three months as an option to being bound over—all but one elected to go to jail.

The Victoria terminus has at last been completely opened to the public, though much in the way of detail and decoration has yet to be done. The new station covers nearly 16 acres, is 320ft. wide and 1,500ft. long. There are 2¼ miles of platform, covering an area of 40,000 square feet.

It has taken seven years to build, and has cost over a million pounds.

THE VAGRANT.

An Alabama man, meeting an old darky formerly in his service, put to him the usual question:

"Well, Jed, how are you to-day?"

"Tol'able sah, tol'able!" cautiously replied Jed. "Ah'd be all right, sah, if it wa'nt fer de rheumatism in mah right laig."

"Ah well, Jed, we must'n complain," said the questioner. "We're all getting old, and old age does not come alone."

"Old age, sah!" was the indignant protestation of Jed. "Old age ain't got nuthin' to do wid it, sah. Heah's mah other laig jest as old, an' dat's sound an soople as kin be!"

Review.

THE PISTOL AND REVOLVER.*

IN every description of pastime the attention to details, no matter how minute, is frequently the means by which an individual is elevated from a state of mediocrity to one of expertness. This stage of specialism is usually the outcome of lengthy and occasionally bitter experience, the top rung of the ladder of fame being only reached after many backslidings.

Revolver and pistol shooting as an amusement have gained in popularity to a marked degree during the last few years; but, though many excellent books have been published on the subject of rifled and non-rifled weapons, both, past and present, the same cannot be said in regard to the lesser firearms.

The Pistol and Revolver has, therefore, appeared at an opportune moment.

When the President, United States Revolver Association; Director and Life Member, New York State Rifle Association; Captain, American Team Second Franco-American International Revolver Match; Chairman, Revolver Committee Manhattan Rifle and Revolver Association, places the results of his wide experiences on record in book-form, the shooting public will anticipate something first-class. The Pistol and Revolver will certainly not give rise to disappointment. The author has, as his object, the supply of practical information. He has succeeded thoroughly in his aim.

The first 54 pages are devoted to the most noteworthy weapons and ammunition that figure on the market and further contain some useful comparative statistical tables.

In revolver and pistol shooting the position of the firer is one of supreme importance. The author has gone the best way to illustrate such by reproducing photographically the poses adopted by the crack pistol shots of America. The beginner is amply catered for and the construction of shooting galleries receives due attention.

The Pistol and Revolver instructs and at the same time interests the reader. It is written in a plain, attractive, useful, and straightforward style, is free from cumbersome technicalities, and is as easily comprehensible to the novice as it is to the expert. The value of this pocket compendium (7" by 5") is largely enhanced by the introduction of a series of excellent illustrations. Mr. Himmelwright has scored a highest possible.

A RED LETTER MORNING.

THE sun was already some way above the horizon, as I started out from my camp to visit the buffalos which I had tied up the previous evening. The villagers had reported that a tiger had been in the neighbourhood a few days prior to my arrival, but there was no very definite khubber and I hardly expected a kill. It is my invariable practice to personally see the buffalos tied up, whenever possible, and to visit them in the early morning on the chance of finding the tiger on or near the kill. On three previous occasions I had actually come on the tiger thus, but had not succeeded in getting a shot. On one occasion, after cautiously approaching a kill, without seeing any sign of the tiger, I signalled to the men who were behind me to come up. They had just reached the dead buffalo beside which I was standing, when suddenly we were startled by a loud wongh! and a large tiger sprang up within twenty yards of where we were standing. After a hearty meal he had gone to sleep behind a rock and had failed to hear our stealthy approach. At this time I had never bagged a tiger, and as there were a number of trees and bushes which might have intercepted the bullet, I did not think it advisable to risk what would have been only a snapshot.

It is hardly necessary to say that the sportsman must rise betimes who would thus find the tiger on his kill: it is also necessary to tie the bait so securely, that the tiger cannot drag it away into thick jungle, where there would be no chance of a shot. On the occasion which I am describing, the premonitory symptoms of an attack of malaria had caused me to leave my tent at a later hour than usual, and even if I found a kill, I had not the slightest reason to suppose that the tiger would still be near it. The buffalos, six in number, had been tied up along the bed of a nullah, about a mile from camp. It was the month of November and there were still frequent pools of water along the nullah. The first five buffalos were found standing where they had been left the previous evening. The sixth had been tied at the junction of two nullahs. Just below the junction the bank rose almost perpendicularly to a height of about forty feet; at the foot of the bank was a pool of clearest water. The opposite bank was only about six feet above the bed of the nullah and was covered with dense jungle. At the spot where the two nullahs met, a spit of land ran into the sandy bed, about breast high, covered with short green grass. This spit concealed the buffalo from anyone coming along the nullah, until he was within some twenty or thirty paces of it.

By the time I reached this spot it must have been about 8 o'clock, and so little did I expect to see anything worthy of my rifle, that I was carrying my shot gun on my shoulder. My orderly with my rifle was just behind me, and was followed by two or three villagers, who had come to take back the buffalos.

As I approached the spot where the two nullahs met, a tiger cub about the size of a small leopard, dashed round the corner and scampered up the sandy bed towards me. It was within ten paces of me, when it saw me, and made off as quickly as it had appeared. Quite expecting to have the tigress on me at any moment, I turned to seize the rifle. My orderly seeing me turn, interpreted my action by the light of his own feelings, and likewise turned to run! Fortunately I was close to him and had seized the rifle before he had gone more than a few paces. I at once stepped behind the spit mentioned above and stood motionless. I soon caught sight of the cub sneaking off among the bushes. As I watched it make off, I suddenly became aware, without quite knowing how, that the tigress was standing on the bank of the nullah, not thirty paces from me and looking straight towards me with open mouth! She was almost entirely concealed in the dense undergrowth, and all that appeared to me was an indistinct vision of a great striped head and a quivering lower jaw. My heart beat a trifle faster than usual as I raised the rifle to my shoulder. I knew that I must either kill the tigress dead or be prepared to stand a charge—no very pleasant prospect, seeing that my antagonist was a tigress with cubs and stood on higher ground than myself.

As I brought the sight to bear on the tigress, I saw that I could not be certain of killing her with a single shot as her head was almost entirely concealed. I now quickly realised that so far the tigress had not seen me: she was looking for her cub, and as only the top of my head appeared above the bank, she had failed to make me out. She was uttering a soft throaty call, and presently, after what seemed an age, she turned and walked broadside on, along the bank of the nullah. Even now it was impossible to fire: I could only just make out an indistinct movement through the thick undergrowth, and every few yards, when the tigress stopped to look for her cub, I completely lost sight of her. As she moved along, still uttering her low call, she gradually got further from me, and I began to fear that I was not going to get a shot. Several times I had raised my rifle, but only to lower it again. At last the tigress stopped and raised her head, still calling to the cub. She remained thus with her head raised, and though only a portion of her head and neck were visible, I could see that the bullet would have to pass through nothing more substantial than leaves in order to reach its billet.

All that has been related took place in a very short space of time, but the delay had steadied my hand. It was plain that unless I took the chance that now offered the tigress would probably get clean away. The neck of a tiger, half seen through the leaves at thirty or forty paces distance, is no great target, and when, at the shot, the tigress disappeared from view, I could not tell whether the bullet had struck the mark. I now had time to look round for my men and was surprised to see them sitting unconcernedly in the nullah, not fifty yards away, as if there had not been a tiger anywhere in the neighbourhood. As none of the villagers had ever seen me until the previous day, I thought this rather a remarkable instance of their confidence in the prowess of the white man. As I could see absolutely no sign of the tigress, I sent my orderly back to camp to fetch my elephant, and waited with what patience I could muster until his return.

The elephant had had no experience of shikar, and the uncertainty as to what she would do if the tigress was still alive lent an additional excitement.

As we rode up the nullah to the spot where I had last seen the tigress my eyes were gladdened by the sight of a striped form lying motionless. A shout to my men brought them at full speed to the spot, and we were soon gathered round the dead tigress, which was of course pronounced to be of the largest size.

The elephant paid not the smallest attention to the brute and raised no objection to having it padded. It was a triumphal ride back to camp, and great was the jubilation of the villagers at the sight of their fallen enemy.

Of the cub nothing more was seen at the time, but two months later, two cubs, which undoubtedly were the offspring of my tigress, were killed by the villagers with bows and arrows. The skin of one which I obtained measured 5 ft. 7 in., and it was a matter of some surprise to me that a cub of this size should have been able to maintain itself for so long.

Fishing.

AN ANGLER IN THE ANTIPODES.

II.

My previous paper was commenced with the small trout and splendid scenery of the St. Patrick's river.

I now proceed to speak of the larger trout and his romantic surroundings at Cressy. This little township is within easy reach of Launceston by rail and coach. It is situated in the midst of rolling uplands of plough and pasture which closely resemble the lands of many an English county.

The only feature that detracts from the English appearance of this part of the country is the fact that the houses are for the most part made of boards and roofed with shingles or corrugated iron. These structures are for the most part painted in bright browns or red and give the villages and farmsteads the appearance of being made of cardboard. The monotony of the landscape which I have described is relieved by mountain ranges in the distance. The most imposing of these masses of mountains is known as the Tiers. On the top of the Tiers are a couple of lakes, one of which, the Great Lake, is celebrated for the huge size of the trout which are caught in it. There are three fishable rivers in this neighbourhood. The largest of these is the Macquarie—a deep sluggish stream clogged with weed and mud beds. It is full of trout, eels and perch. On a suitable day dozens of trout of noble proportions may be seen jumping out of the water in the long reaches. These fish run up to 5 and 6 pounds weight. The river is not very suitable for fly fishing except from a boat. This is due to the fact that the deep fringe of rushes and weeds on its banks render it difficult to cast and still more difficult to play a fish. The local residents use a spinner or a worm—generally, I grieve to say, the latter—and are by no means particular as to the size of the fish they keep. I noticed one local celebrity in the angling line who had fish of not more than 4 or 5 inches long in his basket.

On this river, as on all the streams in Tasmania, the grasshopper is a deadly lure. As I stated in my last paper the gentry who go dopping for trout with this bait regard themselves as "fly fishermen." Personally I only spent one day on this river. I caught nothing though I played and lost a whopper.

The Lake river, a stream which joins the Macquarie a few miles above Cressy, provides much more satisfactory fishing.

I spent several good days on this river. My average bag for the day was about half a dozen. This total does not include anything under three-quarters of a pound. I caught several fish of from 2 to 2½lbs. and a large number of pound and pound and a half specimens. I must have returned four fishes for every one I kept.

The fishing on this river, though far from poor, would be much better than it is if it were not so terribly poached. The pools at its junction in the Macquarie are visited by a crowd of worm fishing anglers every Sunday and holiday. Higher up where the water is shallower, tickling is extensively practised.

There is another form of poaching of which I was told, though I had no opportunity of seeing it put in practice. The poacher is armed simply with a long stick. Having marked a trout he hits at him and drives him to another cover. The fish is poked or beaten out of this in the same manner. Thus the game proceeds till the tired trout comes into water which is shallow enough to admit of his being killed by a blow from the stick.

I am told that it takes a very short time to tire and kill a trout in this way.

It is a great pity that the Tasmanian Angling Association does not make some attempt to stop these practices. Even if a bailiff or watcher were provided simply to see that all the worm fishers carried licenses much good would be done. As it is the great majority of them fish without a license.

The third stream in this neighbourhood is known as Bumby's creek. It is quite close to Cressy.

I spent two afternoons on it. The first yielded three fish in the first half hour and nothing afterwards.

The three fish scaled 1½ to 1¾ and 2¼lbs. respectively.

My second day resulted in a blank as far as I was concerned though my companion secured a nice 2½-pounder on a small Devon spinner. On a suitable day this little stream affords excellent sport, and the fish in it run big.

On offdays I shot rabbits which in this neighbourhood are so plentiful as to be a pest.

There are also a few duck about and plenty of plover. The bird shooting, however, compares very unfavourably with that obtainable on the average Indian jheel.

After the fishing season, i.e., from the 1st May—quail shooting commences and in some grass the stubbles in this locality give splendid sport.

A word as to the accommodation. I and my companion put up at Russell's hotel. It is a small country inn, but very comfortable. The proprietor, Mr. Russell, is an excellent host and a first-rate sportsman. He puts his horse and trap at the disposal of fishermen staying at his hotel. This concession is a very valuable one in a locality where a conveyance cannot be hired under 15s. or a sovereign a day.

The food at Russell's is excellent and the terms—2 gs. a week—are very moderate.

I can confidently recommend all anglers visiting Cressy to put up at this inn. Before finishing my description of the sport in this neighbourhood I must speak of the fallow deer which are obtainable a few miles from Cressy. They are being shot out; but are still fairly numerous, though very shy. I spent one day after them but saw only does

The beautiful bronze wing pigeon is to be found in the same country as the fallow deer. This bird affords very pretty shooting as it rises promptly and flies fast.

Two or three days' camping in the bush near Cressy should yield one or two stags and a decent bag of bronze wings. In my next paper I propose to deal with the celebrated fishing in the Great Lake—the rumour of which reached me while I was still in India.

AN OFT-REPEATED NAME.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I am now making acquaintance with a third Ouse. The present one is the Yorkshire Ouse, a more important river than either of the two others I have known. Those streams were the Ouse which winds its charming way past the old-fashioned town of Huntingdon, and the Sussex river, on the banks of which stands Lewes, a very similar sleepy county town. But pretty and noted for their fishing, as those other streams no doubt are, they cannot for a moment compare in interest with the historic Ouse which flows through the heart of the ancient city of York, and whose placid waters have reflected in turn, the stockades of Ancient Britons, the earthen ramparts of Roman Camps, the wooden walls of Saxons, and the castellated stone fortifications of the Middle Ages.

In 1065, Tostig and Harold Hardrada, King of Norway, marched on York and fought a fierce battle against the Northumbrians under Edwin and Morker at Fullford just outside the city walls. The Danes were victorious, and four days later the city surrendered to them. Hearing of the defeat of his adherents, the English Harold came north by forced matches, re-occupied York, from which the invaders had withdrawn, and then overtaking the Danish army at Stamford Bridge, utterly defeated them: Harold Hardrada and Tostig both being killed in this battle Harold was, however, in his turn defeated and slain at the decisive battle of Hastings, and York for the third time in the course of a few years, fell into the hands of the victorious side.

The formidable fortifications by which the city was protected during Norman times, saved it more than once from pillage in the troublous Middle Ages. Once the Scots would have certainly sacked York, had it not been for her sturdy stone walls. In the fights and forays, around this capital of the North, which followed one another in endless procession through those stirring centuries, the broad deep channel of the Ouse must have proved a leading strategic feature. The Normans erected a large dam to the South-east of York thus flooding about 120 acres of low-lying ground, and thereby protecting that side of the city with a large lake. This great sheet of water used to be called the "King's Pool," and formed an important source of fish supply for the numerous priests and monks of the town. Among the old archives one constantly comes across records of gifts of fish, such as pike and bream, to various ecclesiastics, etc., from vivario de fosse, as the pool was called in the Latin of the period. The King's Fosse has long been dry, no doubt to the better health of the city.

In the Ouse, however, are still left many descendents of the fat bream, which used to swim in the waters of the great pool: and so effective are modern arrangements for preventing the pollution of rivers, that one may see dace any day rising right in the middle of York.

A few miles up stream at Poppleton, the river is charming, and full of all kinds of coarse fish. Only the other day I was peeping over a steep bank at the fat chub below, and looking forward to the opening of the fishing season a few days hence.

THE TURF.

BIRMINGHAM.

THE weather was fine at Bromford Bridge on Saturday, the 27th ultimo, without the oppressive heat experienced on Friday. As usual, it was the minor ring which provided the bulk of the attendance, and here business was brisk; but in the chief enclosure the effect of the clashing with Sandown was most marked. Although large fields turned out for the majority of the events, nothing of a sensational description has to be recorded; and owners, having found out long since that it is next to impossible to obtain an equitable price about an animal on the course, owing to the restricted market, usually patronise the starting-price offices. Details:—

NEWMARKET.

IT was warm here to-day, what is described in these latitudes as "torrid" but what I expect you good people in India would stand much of without getting tired.
Considering how hard the going is getting all over the country, the course fresh and green, was in most tempting condition for galloping, a fact that accounts for the good fields that came to the rescue after small musters had been presaged overnight. I wired you result of the July Stakes: there were but five runners, and Battleaxe just managed to beat the Kings' horse. Details:—

THE STRENUOUS LIFE IN INDIA.

Is It Possible?

A want of energy and whim are characteristi traits of the white population in tropical and semi-tropical countries. It is a well established fact that this unfortunate condition is in a very large measure due to insufficient nourishment; to want of a diet that shall sustain the system under the increased demands upon the powers. Not only is the appetite feeble, but the food supplies also leave much to be desired in both quality and nutritive power as compared with the products of the temperate zone. Hence one often feels at a loss to know how to combat the depression and languor consequent on what may fairly be termed an improper diet supply. It follows therefore that the ideal remedy for physical exhaustion must be one which feeds the hungry tissues with a nutrient that is easy of assimilation, and at the same time enriches the blood and tones up the nervous system. This much-to-be-desired remedy is found in Sanatogen, the wonder-working food tonic.

Sanatogen is a scientific combination of two distinct elements, the one nutritive, the other tonic The nutritive element is presented by pure milk albumen—the body building food, demanded constantly by the body for the repair of its tissues. Without a due supply of such food-principle, life would not continue.

The tonic element is represented by Phosphorus. The latter is an all-important constituent of the brain and the nervous system. But hitherto it has been impossible to administer this vital principal so that the nervous system could take hold of it. Dr. Andrew Wilson, the well-known medical author, writes:—"Sanatogen has solved the problem of administering Phosphorus in precisely the form in which the tissues can readily seize upon it and appropriate it to their various needs." The medical profession in Great Britain and India entertain the highest opinion of Sanatogen, which is amply evidenced by the fact that over 7,500 physicians have written in praise of it. This and the written attestations of very many distinguished men and women, whose names are well-known in the community, conclusively establish Sanatogen to be the pre-eminent recuperative and restorative.

The Rt. Rev. William Sinclair, D.D., Archdeacon of London, writes:—

THE CHAPTER HOUSE,
ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL,
London, E. C.

"Sanatogen appears to be an admirable food for invalids and those who suffer from indigestion"

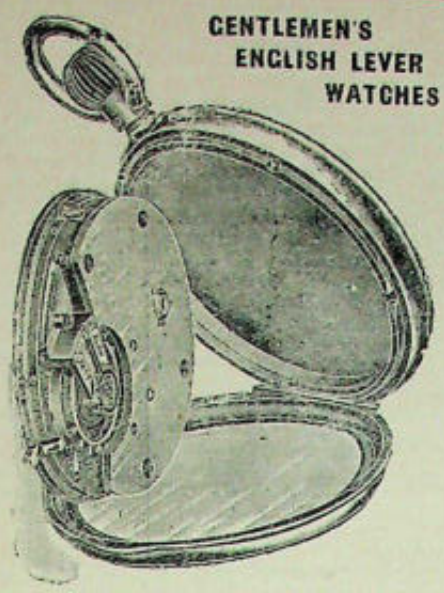
William Sinclair

Unlike other tonics the use of Sanatogen does not derange digestion but actually assists enfeebled appetite and strengthens the digestive organs. Its tonic effect is marvellous, and if taken regularly for a short period the feeling of being run down will be replaced by brightness, mental alertness, and healthy vigour. It differs also from other tonics in that its effects are permanent.

Mr. C. B. Fry, the celebrated cricketer, writes:—

GLENBOURNE MANOR,
WEST END, HANTS.

"Sanatogen is an excellent tonic food in training, specially valuable as a tonic during the periods of nervous exhaustion commonly called staleness, to which men who undergo severe training are liable. I have recommended it to many of my friends."



C. B. Fry.

There is no doubt that Sanatogen is the ideal food for invalids and convalescents. It can be borne by the weakest stomach when all other food is rejected It is powerfully effective in all those cases where through illness, or overwork, or climatic conditions, the system has become debilitated. For the nervous and the dyspeptic, Sanatogen restores, naturally, sound digestion, healthy vigour, and the elasticity of well-being.

Sanatogen, which is a fine white powder, is packed in bottles, and can be obtained from all chemists.

An engrossing booklet containing matter of vital importance to well-being in the Tropics has recently been issued. It is from the pen of a physician long resident in India and is entitled "How to keep well in India." It should be in the hands of all desirous of knowing how to get well and keep well. A copy can be obtained free of charge from Messrs. Smith Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, from whom also Sanatogen can be purchased.

Four Miles.—T. Jack, Edinburgh Southern H., 1; J. B. McLagan, Edinburgh Northern H., 2. Five ran. Won easily. Time—21mins. 52·2/5secs.

Quarter-mile.—Lieutenant W. Halswell, Edinburgh H., 1; J. D. Dickson, Edinburgh University, 2. Five ran. Won by 6 yards. Time—50secs.

L. A. C. SUMMER MEETING.—A very fine programme was arranged for our premier club's meeting at Stamford Bridge Grounds on Saturday the 27th ultimo; indeed, there was quite an international flavour about the entry, and the leading event of the day was a relay race in which the L.A.C. were opposed by a team of representatives of Colonial and foreign visitors who have been selected for the Olympic Games next month. With such excellent all-round sport, one was sorry to note such a poor attendance on the popular side, and, all told, there cannot have been many more than 2,000 present. Details:—

100 Yards Challenge Cup.—E. H. Montague, 1; H. S. Harmer 2, L. J. de B. Reed 0, L. F. Tremeer (holder) 0. Won by half a yard. Time—10·4/5secs.

One Mile Challenge Cup.—F. A. Knott w.o.

100 Yards Handicap.—Heat 1: R. Kerr, Hamilton, Canada, 1 yard, 1; C. G. H. Bellamy, Croydon (unattached), 7, 2. Won easily by 3 yards. Time—10·1/5secs. Heat 2: S. Abrahams, L.A.C., 3½, 1; K. Lindberg, Swedish champion, 1½, 2. Won by a foot. Time—10·2/5secs. Heat 3: J. A. Weller, L.A.C., 6, 1; W. H. Gunton, L.A.C., 3½, 2. Won by a yard. Time—10·2/5secs. Heat 4: R. E. Walker, Natal A.A.A., S. Africa, 2, 1; R. S. Herslinger, Polytechnic H., 7½, 2. Won by half a yard. Time—10·1/5secs. Heat 5: R. J. Dunn, L.A.C., 4½, 1; F. Heyes, L.A.C., 6½, 2. Close finish. Time—10·1/5secs. Heat 6: A. Abrahams, L.A.C., 4½, 1; D. S. Buddo, Montreal A.A.A., Canada, 5, 2. Won comfortably. Time—10·2/5secs. Heat 7: L. J. de B. Reed, L.A.C., 2, 1; S. W. P. Walpole, L.A.C., 7½, 2. Won by a yard. Time—10·3/5secs. Heat 8: G. A. V. Connolly, S.L.H., 7, 1; J. C. Brooks, L.A.C., 5½, 2. Won by 3 yards. Time—10·2/5secs. Second Round.—Heat 1: Kerr 1, Walker 2. Won by 1½ yards. Time—10secs. Heat 2: Connolly 1, Dunn 2. Won by half a yard. Time 10·1/5secs. Final: Kerr 1, Walker 2, Connolly 3, Dunn 4. Walker got well away, but Kerr was early into his running, and finishing well, won by quite 1½ yards; ½ yard. Time—10·4/5secs.

150 Yards Boys' Handicap.—G. Murray, 73 yards, 1; E. A. Parker, 100, 2; Ivor Lotinga, 84,3. Won by 4 yards. Time—13·4/5secs.

Throwing the Discus.—A. E. Flaxman, L.A.C., 102ft. 8½in., 1; W. E. D. Henderson, L.A.C. and O.U.A.C., 100ft. 9in., 2; K. Lindberg, Sweden, 95ft. 8in., 3.

120 Yards Hurdles' Challenge Cup.—W. A. Knyvett 1, E. E. Leader 2, O. Groenings 3. Close finish. Won by a foot. Time—16·2/5secs.

International Relay Race (London A.C. vs. Colonial and foreign Olympic team men—for eight medals, presented by Mr. H. A. Mears).—This was a grand contest. In the first furlong R. Kerr, Canada, beat A. E. D. Anderson comfortably in 22·1/5secs., fast time; R. E. Walker, S. Africa, held the same advantage from H. S. Harmer in the second section, and V. Duncker, S. Africa, although "crocked," managed to keep E. H. Ryle off in the third furlong; the fourth, however, was entrusted to H. St. A. Murray, New Zealand, who is by no means a fast sprinter, and A. Abrahams, L.A.C., well beat him. From now the advantage lay with the club. L. J. Sebert, Canada, made a big effort to catch J. B. Densham, but failed, and the same might be said of D. S. Buddo, Canada, against Tremeer, although the latter had very little in hand at the post. However L. J. de B. Reed held a three yards lead of F. Lukeman, Canada, at the start, and sent E. H. Montague off just in front of Knut Lindberg, Sweden, who made a grand effort to pass the L.A.C. man, but failed, and was beaten just over a yard. Time—3mins. 5·1/5secs. The official times were:—220—22·1/5secs.; 440—45·2/5secs.; 660—1min. 9·2/5secs.; 880—1min. 32·1/5secs.; 1,100—1min. 55·2/5secs.; 1,320—2mins. 18·4/5secs.; 1,540—2mins. 42·1/5secs.; finish—3mins. 5·1/5secs. However, a special watch on Montague made the last furlong a deal faster than recorded, and the third seemed a bit faster than 24secs.

Throwing the Hammer.—E. E. B. May, L.A.C. and O.U.A.C., 122ft. 5in., 1; W. E. B. Henderson, L.A.C. and O.U.A.C., 104ft. 2; A. E. Flaxman, L.A.C., 101ft. 10in. 3. R. H. Lindsay Watson failed to get in a legal throw.

440 Yards Hurdle Handicap.—Heat 1: G. F. Crump, Blackheath H., 18 yards, 1; D. A. Stupart, South Africa, 0, 2; H. S. A. Murray, New Zealand, 0. The latter fell at the first hurdle, and again came down over the second, where he retired. Stupart led over the last flight, but could not finish. Heat 2: O. Groenings, L.A.C., scratch, 1; C. Stanfield, H.H.H., 8, 0. The latter led all the way, and looked like winning, but brought down his last hurdle. Time—59·4 5secs. Heat 3: J. B. Densham, L.A.C., scratch, 1; G. A. V. Connolly Blackheath H., 20, 2. Densham won easily. Time—62·1/5secs. Final: Groenings 1, Densham 2, Crump 3. won by 3 yards; 15 yards. Time—59secs.

Standing Broad Jump.—L. H. Stafford, L.A.C., 9ft. 10½in., 1; G. H. Barber, Central Y.M.C.A., Toronto, Canada, 9ft. 10½in., 2; N. L. Lockton, L.A.C., 9ft. 7½ in., 3.

300 Yards Handicap.—Heat 1: W. H. Gunton, L.A.C., 9 yards, 1; C. G. H. Bellamy (unattached), Croydon, 19, 2. Time—31·2/5secs. Heat 2: W. F. Paulton, Blackheath H., 23, 1; A. Goodall, L.A.C., 29, 2. Time—32·3/5secs. Heat 3: J. F. Lintott, L.A.C., 11, 1; S. W. P. Walpole, L.A.C., 21, 2. Time—32·2 5secs. Heat 4: S. J. Marshall, Blackheath H., 17, 1; G. S. Abrahams, L.A.C., 5, 2; L. J. Sebert, Varsity A.C., Canada, ran from the 3 yards mark, and just failed to catch Abrahams. Time—32·1/5secs. Heat 5: E. H. Flatt, L.A.C., 17, 1; A. B. Horner, L.A.C., 14, 2. Time—32·1/5secs. Final: Gunton 1, Marshall 2, Flatt 3, Paulton 4. The back-marker came round at a rare pace, and won by 3 yards. The others were very close, and there was some doubt as to the placings. Time—51·1/5secs.

1½ Miles Handicap.—R. J. Hammond, Cambridge H., — yards, 1; E. M. Dahl, L.A.C., 50, 2; R. A. Illsley, Belgrave H., 115, 3; F. Church, Ranelagh H., 150, 4. E. F. Vowles (205) led for three laps, when A. W. Martin (165) went in front, but half-way round the fifth lap Hammond came out as if he had just started running, and took a — yards' lead in no time, looking round every few yards, he won with plenty in hand by 20 yards; 30 yards. Time—6mins. 52·4/5secs.

600 Yards Race.—E. H. Montague, L.A.C., 1; Alan Patterson Sheffield United H., 2; E. H. Ryle, L.A.C. and O.U.A.C., 3; H. E. Holding, L.A.C. and O.U.A.C., 4. Also ran:—C. Stanfield H.H.H., F. Heyes, L.A.C., D. S. Buddo, Montreal A.A.A., Canada, J. L. Tait, West End Y.M.C.A., Canada, J. Parkes, West End Y.M.C.A., Canada. Stanfield slipped away first and led at a good pace for 300 yards, when Patterson went by, and, striding all out, was only caught by Montague, who made a fine effort up the straight, in the last two strides. Won by half a yard; 3 yards; 2 yards. Time—1 min. 12·4/5secs.

SWIMMING.

LONG SWIM IN THE THAMES.—The race for the Weekly Dispatch Gold Cup was held on Saturday; every bridge and point of vantage along the long course was crowded, and those who incline to the opinion that swimming is unpopular with the British public must have been agreeably surprised at the enthusiasm exhibited on all sides.

The start took place from Richmond Lock in the presence of a great crowd at exactly 2·35, and when the swimmers sorted themselves out, Jarvis (England), Beaurepaire (Australia), and Kearsley, of Wigan were seen to be leading.

At Isleworth Church, Beaurepaire (first) and Jarvis had left Kearsley behind. The Australian was using the crawl stroke and Jarvis his famous right overarm, a stroke which he maintained throughout the swim.

In Zion Reach commenced a splendid struggle between the Australian and the Englishman that lasted for some five miles, the men swimming "neck and neck" for nearly an hour and a half, first one and then the other gaining a slight lead. The crowds on the Surrey side, which had walked with the men for some way, urged the Englishman on with cries of "Go on, Jarvis."

All this time Kearsley was well maintaining his position as number three in the race. Behind him, about half a mile, came Ooms. At Brentford Dock, representing half an hour's work, there was still nothing between the leaders. Then the Leicester man took the lead, but at Kew Bridge, which was lined with spectators, Beaurepaire was ten yards ahead in 46mins. dead. Kearsley followed through about 50 yards behind Jarvis.

By the time Minson, the Frenchman, had given up through cramp. About a thousand yards further on—viz., at Kew Railway Bridge—the order was unchanged there being but thirty seconds between the leaders, with Kearsley, still third, coming on slowly but surely. At Standon Green Jarvis had caught his man, and they again swam level, with Jarvis a stroke perhaps ahead. Hawes at this stage was fourth and Ooms, the Belgian, fifth.

It may be mentioned that except for a strong head wind the conditions had so far been ideal for the great contest. Outside the "Ship," at Mortlake, that finishing post of another great sporting event, the crowd was large and cheered itself hoarse at the splendid Anglo-Australian fight. Barnes Railway Bridge saw the same order of things prevailing. Jarvis just coming through first by a foot from the Australian.

Kearsley still came next, eighty yards behind, and then Ooms, second last year, Hawes, Maas, Knight, Lines, Cliverd and Busby. Miss I. B. Armstrong, of the Kingston Cygnets, was leading the ladies.

At Chiswick Church Jarvis had gained some yards' lead, and shot Hammersmith Bridge in 1hr. 37mins. 43secs., both bridge and shore being crowded. Some 400 yards, however, before this point was reached Beaurepaire had to be taken out of the water suffering from cramp, one of his attendants pluckily diving in to save him. At the time of this occurrence he was ten yards behind the Englishman.

The order of the others at this period was: Hawes (4), Maas (5), Knight (6), Meijer (7), Lines (8), Busby (9), Tooley (10), Clilverd (11), Searle (12), Sheldrick (13), Brown (14), Cohen (15), Doigney (16), Rice (17), Hunt (18). Miss Armstrong was still the first lady, her place being twenty-third, with Miss Smith, the heroine of last year's event, the next swimmer on the list.

Putney reached and over half the course negotiated, Jarvis had gained a long lead from the Wigan man, and was reported as going strong. "Jarvis still leading" was the cry at Wandsworth Bridge, where he was over three minutes ahead of Kearsley. It was, of course, now a stately procession of one, Jarvis's time at the various bridges being: Battersea, 2hrs. 29mins. 5secs.; Albert Bridge, 2hrs. 4mins.; Chelsea, 2hrs. 53mins.; Vauxhall, 3hrs. 7mins.; Lambeth, 3hrs. 15mins.; Westminster, 3hrs. 20mins.; Charing Cross, 3hrs. 27mins.

He reached the finishing post of H.M.S. Buzzard in 3hrs. 36mins. 24secs. amid round after round of cheers from a packed embankment. The winner throughout used his famous right overarm stroke, his leg work also being splendid.

The time, of course, was not so good as last year, but then it must be remembered that this time the competitors had to contend with a strong wind that held both themselves and the tide back. The second man, Kearsley, did not arrive till nearly six minutes later, but he had swum a splendid race. Ooms was third.

The placings and times of the most successful of the swimmers were as follows:—

OXFORD VS. CAMBRIDGE.—Held at the Bath Club, Dover St., Piccadilly, on Monday. In the swimming events honours were easy and the polo resulted in a draw. Details:—

50 Yards (two lengths).—J. V. Fiddian, Emmanuel Cambridge, 1; I. Mavor, Sidney, Cambridge, 2; W. A. Bailey, St. John's, Oxford, 3; W. A. C. Goodchild, Balliol, Oxford, 4. Fiddian was last away but at the turn was level with Bailey, and, drawing away, won by inches; 2 yards. Time—29secs. Points: Cambridge, 3, Oxford 7.

440 Yards (18 lengths).—J. T. Lattey, Christ Church, Oxford, 1; C. F. Verrall, Trinity, Cambridge, 2; K. G. Harper, Wadham, Oxford, 3; D. Pritchard, Caius, Cambridge, 4. At six lengths Lattey got away from Verrall, and at half distance led by 6 yards, finally winning by a length; Harper, who swam very strongly in the last six lengths, was 8 yards away. Time—6mins. 47·1/5secs. Points: Oxford 4, Cambridge 6.

100 Yards (four lengths).—J. V. Fiddian, Emmanuel, Cambridge, 1; P. H. Harper, Oriel, Oxford, 2; W. A. Bailey, St. John's, Oxford, 3; K. M. Ward, Emmanuel, Cambridge, 4. At two lengths Fiddian led Harper by a foot, and at the last turn there was still very little between them, but finishing the stronger Fiddian won by 1½ yards; 2½ yards. Time—2·4 5secs. Points, 5 each—a draw.

Team Race (seven lengths).—At the first length Lewis led by a yard, but Portway got in front at two lengths, giving Mavor the advantage by a yard, which he increased to 1½ yards. This Barr improved to 2½ yards, and Fowler concluded the fifth length 3 yards ahead. At the sixth length Grice-Hutchinson still led by a yard, and though Jenkins ran into the side, the last named won a good race for Cambridge by a yard. Time—1min. 45·2/5secs.

Cambridge.—J. W. Smyth (Pembroke), D. Portway (Downing), I. Mavor (Sidney), J. H. Barr (Christ's), C. H. Fowler (Trinity), R. E. Grice-Hutchinson (Trinity), E. E. Jenkins (King's).

Oxford.—V. A. Lewis (New), R. S. Seacombe (Keble), C. H. Mellows (Brasenose), E. A. H. de Tiel (St. John's), R. S. Findlay (Balliol), W. A. C. Goodchild (Balliol), J. T. Lattey (Christ's Church).

Polo Match.—Cambridge opened from the deep end, and poor combination of their forwards enabled Goodchild to score. From a penalty, Grice-Hutchinson equalised, and following some cross play Fowler swam down and put through in the corner, while just on half-time Mavor, unmarked, added a third. Half-time:—Cambridge, 3 goals; Oxford, 1. In the second half Goodchild added another for the Dark Blues from a pass by Lattey, and a little later the Oxford custodian saved grandly from Barr. Goodchild added another for his side, and on resuming Fowler retired. Oxford also withdrew a man. Nothing further being scored, the result was a draw of 3 goals each.

Cambridge.—J. W. Smyth (Pembroke); C. H. Fowler (Trinity) and D. Portway (Downing); I. Mavor (Sidney); R. E. Grice-Hutchinson (Trinity), J. H. Barr (Christ's), and E. E. Jenkins (King's).

Oxford.—R. S. Seacome (Keble); V. A. Lewis (New College) and E. A. H. de Tiel (St. John's); J. T. Lattey (Christ Church); R. S. Findlay (Balliol), W. A. C. Goodchild (Balliol), and C. H. Mellows (B.N.C.).

HOLBEIN'S SPLENDID SWIM.—On the 30th June Montagu A. Holbein corrected the prevailing notion that his career as a long-distance swimmer is over. His remarkable performance proves, if any proof were wanting, that he is quite as good as he was nine years ago, if, indeed, he is not better. There need be no doubt now with regard to another great effort by Holbein to swim the English Channel. He left the water strong and well, and perfectly fit to swim out the third tide.

There was a dead nose-ender when he plunged opposite Blackwall Point, at 3·48 A.M. In half an hour, there was a moderate tide. Holbein swam at the rate of two yards a stroke on his back, the method he adopted the entire journey. The weather was dull, but the water Holbein described as beautiful and warm. He passed the Faraday telegraph boat in 28mins., and was off Charlton (2½ miles) 4mins. later. Opposite Woolwich Arsenal, the time was 47mins. 30secs., at the Galleons the time was 1hr. 4mins., and at Barking Creek 17mins. The Southern outfall was passed in 1hr. 40mins., and he took his first drink at the expiration of 2hrs. Long Reach was headed in 2hrs. 38mins. Here the water was very rough, but in another 15mins. fined down.

Holbein was now making splendid progress, and shot past the training ships Arethusa and Worcester at Greenhithe in 3hrs. 9mins. The Exmouth reformatory ship at Gray's was left behind when the watch read 4hrs. 17mins. The tide now slackened considerably, and the labour became hard for the swimmer. At 5 o'clock he was at the top of Gravesend Reach, about a mile from Gravesend. It was now very evident that he could not swim the remaining mile, as the tide had turned. Accordingly, at 11mins. past the fifth hour, he turned with it, and commenced the homeward journey. With the wind blowing him up the river, and the sun tempered by a refreshing breeze, Holbein's task was by no means disagreeable. When he had been 6hrs. in the water, his stroke was as vigorous as when he started. His progress up the river was steady, and very regular. He turned occasionally, but only for a few seconds, on his chest, and chatted good humouredly with his friends. The wash from the steamers did not harrass him, and at the end of the eighth hour he was swimming vigorously. At this juncture he commenced to take solid food, in the shape of small sandwiches.

Having to swim 31 miles on the flood, it was obvious that a third tide would be needed to complete the fifty miles, despite the fact that the conditions, water, and atmosphere, were distinctly in his favour. He was at Barking Creek in 8hrs. 43mins. The temperature had risen to 67 degrees, and Holbein remarked: "This is glorious weather." In 9hrs. 15mins., he was abreast the Arsenal, and in 10hrs. was near the corner of Blackwall Point, whence he started. He was very cheerful, and ate several sugar sandwiches. The water was a miniature sea. In 10hrs. 29mins. he was swimming past Blackwall Pier, which was lined with spectators. Greenwich was left behind in 11hrs. 15mins., and Deptford cattle Market in 11hrs. 50mins. Holbein had now completed 42 miles. He was taken to the buoy, then round the eddy, and on the next tide. Time—11hrs. 54mins. Forty-three miles occupied 12hrs. 12mins., with the wind dead against him, and the water very rough, but there was no diminution in his speed, and at Woolwich Arsenal he completed 50 miles in 13hrs. 47mins. with a splendid spurt, and left the water strong in voice and warm in body, two great indications of perfect freshness and fitness. The distances are calculated as follows: 19½ miles down, three beyond it on the return ney, and eight miles back again.

GOLF.

FRENCH OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP.—Some exceedingly interesting golf was witnessed in this tournament, which was brought to a conclusion on the links at La Boulie last Sunday. The conditions of play are similar to those which obtain in the British Open Championship, viz., 72 holes by strokes. The result was a popular victory for J. H. Taylor, the famous Mid-Surrey player, with an aggregate of 300. His victory was mainly the result of his magnificent play in the third round, when he went round in 71.

Arnaud Massy and C. H. Mayo, the young Burhill professional, tied for second place, each with 304, and James Braid finished fourth with 305. The following is the full return of the rounds:—

CYCLING.

N. C. U. CHAMPIONSHIPS.—A very representative gathering of English and foreign riders, the majority of whom have been selected for competition in the Olympic Games in July, competed at the Stadium last Saturday afternoon, and the onlookers, who witnessed some fine riding in the three N.C.U. championship events, formed one of the biggest crowds yet seen at the Shepherd's Bush arena.

The quarter-mile was the first event, and this saw C. B. Kingsbury turn the tables upon his vanquisher of last week, Leon Meredith, in the preliminary contests. In the final Kingsbury was himself beaten by Vic Johnson, of the Birmingham Rovers, who came with a dash in the home straight, and won easily in 30 2/5secs. In this race M. Schilles and M. Auffray, of France, competed the former winning his heat, but being unplaced in the final.

Kingsbury was in grand form, and won the mile championship, after a desperate race with M. Auffray, whom he beat by a very narrow margin in 2mins. 41secs.

The five miles championship saw Ben Jones, of the Salford Harriers, winning from A. J. Denny, after another splendid contest, M. Schilles being a good third. Time—14mins. 22secs. Kingsbury, who was making a good show in the final, had the misfortune to puncture.

During the afternoon F. D. Venter, the South African champion, fell heavily on the cement track. It was found that Venter had sustained a severe shaking and several bad bruises, which may keep him out of the saddle for some little time to come.

A one-lap (660 yards) open handicap went to E. R. Sims, Bristol South C.C., from the 23 yards mark, in 43-4/5secs.

POLO.

INTERESTING MATCHES.—Saturday was a very big polo day, important matches being decided at all three London clubs. At Hurlingham the annual match for the international challenge cup attracted a very large attendance. Contrary to expectations the very strong England team of Captain Herbert Wilson and Messrs. F. M. Freake, W. S. Buckmaster, and P. W. Nickalls (back) had by no means a walk over, for the Ireland representatives—Major A. M. Rotdieram, Mr. John McCann, Captain Hardress Lloyd, and Mr. P. P. O'Reilly (back)—played very much better than they did in the Olympic cup final, with the result that England only retained possession of the cup by the narrow margin of 5 goals to 4..

The last tie in the third round of the inter-regimental tournament, which also took place at Hurlingham, was a one-sided affair, the 11th Hussars easily beating the 1st Life Guards by 9 goals to 3, and so qualifying to oppose the 20th Hussars in Wednesday's semi-final.

The junior championship at Roehampton ended in the victory of the Magpies, who were Captains G. Bellville and J. F. Church and Majors G. W. Hobson and K. MacLaren. They beat the Beauchamp Hall team by 5 goals to 3, and so obtained the holdership of Mr. Hazard's challenge cup.

At Ranelagh the open challenge cup, held for the last four years by Roehampton, was won by the Ranelagh team of Captain L. C. D. Jenner, Mr. F. M. Freake (who had earlier in the afternoon played for England against Ireland at Hurlingham), Mr. F. A. Gill, and the Duke of Roxburghe (back). They beat Rochampton in the final by 6 goals to 3.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS CUP.—The final between Old Marlburians and old Harrovians, played at Roehampton on the 29th June, resulted in a win for the O. Ms by 4 goals to 3. This was pretty much in accordance with the general run of the play. The Marlburians took some time to settle down, and at the end of the second ten found themselves two goals to the bad, both these points having been the result of some good hitting by Mr. Walter Jones. But the Marlburians had decidedly the better of the third stage, first Mr. C. D. Miller and then Mr. Sheppard getting through for them, so that the score was two all at half time. Major McLaren, who was not quite in his best form, had hard luck with a particularly good stroke in the fourth period, the ball striking a pony just when it had seemed certain to go through the posts. In the next ten a mistake by the Harrow back let in Mr. George Miller, who left the ball so well placed for Captain Jenner that the latter had easy work to score. Major Hobson equalised five minutes from the finish, and then came the deciding goal, which has already been alluded to. Teams:—

OLD HARROVIANS.—Mr. W. J. Jones, Captain E. D. Miller, Major G. W. Hobson, and Major K. McLaren (back).

OLD MARLBURIANS.—Captain L. C. D. Jenner, Mr. G. A. Miller, Mr. E. B. Sheppard, and Mr. C. D. Miller (back).

Umpire:—Mr. W. Hockliffe.

INTER VARSITY MATCH AT HURLINGHAM.—On the 29th ultimo, Cambridge showed distinct superiority in this annual match and won by 6 goals to 1.

Even play marked the opening period, but the Light Blues were attacking persistently in the second, and they had let several good chances slip by before Mr. Pickersgill, receiving the ball from Mr. Digby, began the scoring. In the third ten Oxford spoilt more than one fine opportunity by the faulty direction of their hitting, and soon their opponents turned defence into attack, and before half time had put on 2 more goals. Thus Cambridge were leading by 3 goals to nothing, and Mr. Loder gave them a further advantage in the fourth period. Oxford got their solitary point at this stage, and the last 2 goals of the match were both hit by Mr. N. Loder, who should, in due course, make a valuable member of the Old Cantabs' combination. Teams:—

OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—Mr. S. Fremantle, Mr. R. S. Hudson, Mr. H. Loder, and Earl of Leven and Melville (back).

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—Mr. F. Wingfield Digby, Mr. J. Pickersgill, Mr. N. W. Loder, and Mr. B. C. Pearson (back).

Umpires:—Mr. C. Nickals and Mr. I. B. Jarmay.

SHOOTING.

THE GUN CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP.

THE annual contest for the Gun Club championship, with £50 and gold medal added, shot for in connection with a £10 sweepstakes, at 20 birds, 10 at 28 and 10 at 30 yards rise, occupied chief attention on the 29th ultimo, but only ten sportsmen, including two visitors, tried conclusions. Baron de Pallandt, one of the oldest members of the club, and a most consistent shot, secured the lead at the fifteenth round, and maintaining his advantage to the finish, headed the score with 19 kills out of 20, and won the first prize, consisting of £100 in specie and gold medal. Mr. F. Hodgson Roberts, who was second last year, occupied a similar position on this occasion, and he received £30, with 18 kills out of 20, while third award, £10, was shared between the Hon. Percy Thellusson and Mr. Powell, 17 out of 20. The other competitors were M. G. Lawton (France), Mr. D. J. Bradley (America), Mr. H. J. Roberts, Mr. V. Barker Mr. Clarge, and the Hon. F. Erskine. The winner shot with a gun by James Purdey and Sons, of South Audley Street, and Mr. Roberts and Mr. Thellusson weapons by Messrs. Boss and Co., of 73, St. James's Street. Interest then centred in a £5 handicap sweepstakes, to which twelve gunners subscribed, and Mr. Clarge (31½ yards) and Mr. Lorenzo Henry (26½) tied at the seventh round and divided £36. The last-named also shared the proceeds, £33, of the subsequent event, a £3 poule de series, with Mr. H. J. Roberts (29). The minor competitions—a series of £2 sweepstakes, at 30, 32, and 36 yards rise—resulted in the success of Mr. D. J. Bradley, Mr. Lawton, Mr. H. J. Roberts, and Mr. F. H. Roberts.

LAWN TENNIS.

THE CHAMPIONSHIPS.—This lengthy tournament ended on Wednesday, 1st instant, at Wimbledon. The gent's and ladies' finals, the day before, played in the best of fine weather, were absolutely tip-top. As far as one can guess, no lady could have beaten Mrs. Sterry, and only three men—and those at their best—could have beaten A. W. Gore, though it was a pity that he slung that excellent Slazenger racquet of his twenty miles high when he won. Gore certainly deserved his win, because he won, but Roper-Barrett was unfortunate not to bring it off. Gore is now champion for the second time.

Mrs. Sterry opened rather badly against Miss Morton, her back-hand shot, which the purists say she overcuts, being inaccurate. Miss Morton played well from the start, however, and got 4—1. Then Mrs. Sterry got going, and volleying well and showing great activity, won the set 6—4. Mrs. Sterry thus won the last five games in the set, and Miss Morton only scored five points in those five games.

Mrs. Sterry went on to 3—love in the second—making a run of eight games—and then Miss Morton came again. She got to 4 all, and should have won the ninth game, but missed a sitter rather unluckily. Mrs. Sterry won that game and the tenth and the championship.

A. W. Gore started in tremendous form against Roper-Barrett, setting a hot pace, placing finely, and keeping a fine length. He took the first two sets easy (6—3, 6—2), and looked an easy winner, for Barrett was clean off it. The latter, however, made a great effort in the third set, and after being led 2—0, made it 5—2, and won the set 6—4. Gore lost his length in the fourth set and Roper-Barrett, coming up on anything the least bit short, won 6—3. Barrett's net play in this set was delicious; Gore seemed nervous and made a lot of mistakes.

The last set was a great fight. Gore led at 1—0, 2—1, 3—1, and should have been 4—1, but made two bad shots, and lost the game. Barrett won that one and the next two, and might have made it 5—3, but didn't. Gore got to 4 all, and won the last two, and so won a grand game.

The struggle for the Doubles final was watched by a big crowd, for a fine game was expected from such evenly matched pairs as Messrs. A. W. Gore and H. Roper-Barrett and Messrs. A. F. Wilding and M. J. G. Ritchie drew a big crowd. For a time Messrs. Gore and Barrett were completely outplayed, their opponents losing only the fifth game in the first set and the second and sixth in the second set, and with such ease did they make their progress that only one game was at "deuce." Up to this point Mr. Barrett had failed to show his proper form at the net, and Mr. Gore's drives had been usually stopped with clever drop-volleys. On the other side, Mr. Wilding had shown great brilliancy in driving across and down the sides of the court, and Mr. Ritchie made few mistakes.

An extraordinary change came with the beginning of the third set. Messrs. Gore and Barrett won all but the third game, and the second game in the fourth set was the only one in which Messrs. Wilding and Ritchie were successful. Mr. Wilding was quite off his game and Mr. Ritchie showed less steadiness than before; while on the other side Mr. Barrett had found his customary daring methods of killing the ball and Mr. Gore's hard hitting become more effective.

Two sets all was an interesting position, and both pairs braced themselves for the fifth and deciding set of the rubber. Here the play reached a high standard, and so even was the contest that 2 all, 3 all, 4 all, 5 all, 6 all, and 7 all were called. Then Messrs. Wilding and Ritchie won a love game, and after 30 all in the last game a bad stroke by Mr. Gore placed them within a stroke of the match. A clever toss by Mr. Ritchie into the right hand corner of the court gained the winning ace and the rubber.

Appended are complete results:—

GENTLEMEN'S SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIP.

Final Round.—A. W. Gore beat H. Roper-Barrett (6—3, 6—2, 4—6, 3—6, 6—4).

LADIES' SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIP.

Final Round.—Mrs. Sterry beat Miss Morton (6—4, 6—4).

GENTLEMEN'S DOUBLES.

Final and Championship Round.—A. F. Wilding and M. J. G. Ritchie beat H. Roper-Barrett and A. W. Gore (6—1, 6—2, 1—6, 1—6, 9—7).

OPEN MIXED DOUBLES.

Final Round.—A. F. Wilding and Mrs. Lambert Chambers beat H. Roper-Barrett and Mrs. Sterry (6—4, 6—3).

ALL-ENGLAND PLATE.

Final Round.—O. Kreuzer beat V. R. Gauntlett (6—3, 6—4).

Two commercial travellers, while in a train, got into an argument over the action of the vacuum brake. It's the inflation of the tube that stops the train," declared the first traveller. "Wrong, wrong," shouted the second. "It's the output of the exhaustion." So they wrangled for an hour. Then, when the train arrived at the station, they agreed to submit the matter for settlement to the driver. That gentleman listened with an attentive frown to the two travellers' statement of their argument. Then he smiled, shook his head, and said: Well, gents, ye're both wrong about the working of the vacuum brake. Yet its very simple and easy to understand. When we want to stop the train we just turn this were tap, and then we fill the pipe with vacuum."

THE OOTACAMUND HOUNDS.

Tuesday, 7th July.—Gartree Hill, 12 noon. There was no sport at all to-day, the country was hard and dry for want of rain, a most unusual thing for the time of the year.

Friday, 10th July.—Kennels at 12 noon. The Master and Whippers-in of the Ootacamund Hounds issued invitations to a large number of people to witness the judging of the puppies imported and locally bred. Three handsome prizes were presented. A Silver Cup presented by His Excellency the President of the Hunt, for the walker of the best puppy dog or bitch bred at Ootacamund. A Silver Cup presented by the Master for the best puppy bred at Ootacamund of the opposite sex to that awarded the President's Cup. Third prize, presented by the Whippers-in of the Ootacamund Hounds for the third best puppy bred at Ootacamund of either sex. Two Silver Cups presented by the Master, will be sent respectively to the walker of the best dog and bitch puppy imported from England, 1908, being eligible to compete for puppy prizes.

His Excellency the Hon'ble Sir Arthur Lawley judged the puppies. The imported dogs came first on the list, five couple from his Grace the Duke of Buccleuch, M. F. H. and seven couple from the Puckeridge—E. D. Barclay, Esq., M. F. H. Valesman, a good looking dog (Duke of Buccleuch's) was awarded the first prize, while Crawford (also from the Duke of Buccleuch's) got a reserve. Next came the bitches, 6 couple, from the Duke of Buccleuch's and two from the Puckeridge. Calve (Puckeridge) taking the prize, and Vanity (Duke of Buccleuch's reserve. Lastly came the country-bred puppies, 5 couples, 3½ dogs and 1½ bitches, these were an extremely good looking lot, and did their respective walkers great credit. Wellington, walked by Mr. E. Irvine, was awarded the President's Cup and Wrinkle the Master's Cup. The Whippers-in Cup was taken by Whimsical, walked by Mr. Harloe Irwin.

After breakfast His Excellency proposed the health of Mr. E. Irvine and all others who had walked puppies, who, though unable to take part in and enjoy the sport, yet unselfishly gave their support to the hunt. Mr. Irvine replied in a few suitable words and thanked His Excellency and others. After the healths of Mr. Harloe Irwin, Captain Lyndsdale, Mr. and Mrs. Leech had been drunk, photographs were taken by Messrs. Penn and Burke of the meet, which was well attended. Mill's Covert was drawn blank, we then drew along and over Bagman; an out-lying jack was viewed near Pearl Crossing, pointing for Blue-gums. He led the pack a merry chase down the right side of Bluegums and along the bottom of Porlock and over the ridge into Governor's Shola. Near Sheffield Corner hounds were puzzled by another line. The Master cast them round without success. Drawing round by Andy Plantation, hounds, picked up a line near Gaylad Shola, but were unable to make much of it. A jack was viewed by his Excellency near Dante's Spinny, the pack ran him through the covert to above Bilanjikod Mund, and on into Walhampton Shola, where they lost the line: the Master came to their assistance and cast them forward along the spur, when they hit it off again and carried it over the bog and stream with a failing scent, into a shola not named, near Mekod Mund. A founder of pig caused some trouble, and a good deal of amusement to two members of the hunt who indulged in a little pigsticking, taking turns with the hogspear carried by Mutheral. The Master took hounds over the Krurmund Path and drew down the Yemmakal Valley, where more pig were afoot, as it was late in the afternoon and a thick misty rain coming on we trotted on to Yemmakal Shola, and drew along the lower part of it to just below Duff's Earth, where his Excellency viewed three jack near the Yemmakal stream. Hounds went off at a great pace across the stream and up to the right into Bacon Wood, where the pack divided, a few couple going off with one jack into Chemmund, the main body of the pack turning sharp back to the right and up the fine path outside Bacon Wood with their jack only just ahead of them they hunted him along the grass hill below the Pykara Road into Lower Briar and along the new road for a short distance and then dived down the ravine and along the Yemmakal stream and turned up towards Duff's Earth, where they swung back to the right and marked him to ground in a watercourse leading into the Yemmakal stream. Kitty, the terrier, bolted him out of this and hounds chivied him back across the stream below Bacon Wood into Bungalow Shola and out over the ridge above Wenlock and back into Bungalow Shola and Bacon Wood, where he made good his escape.

Saturday, 11th July.—Toda Coffee Shop at 12 noon. Toda Coffee Shop Shola was first drawn from the west, a jack was viewed leaving it on the Kengodu side; the Master took hounds across and laid them on. They went off at a good pace, through Kengodu Shola to the right, crossed the bog and carried it on into Kengodu Mund Shola, where they lost it. Another line was picked up near Boar's Copse and carried into Toda Coffee Shop Shola and over the ridge into Khed Shola, in which hounds were unable to own to it. Road Shola was next tried, but it only held riot in the shape of sambur; some of the young puppies getting on to the line of a hind and hunting her across the Pykara River, up a mountain on the other side.

A couple and a half, had in the meantime, hunted a jack and marked him to ground near Chemmund, out of which the terrier was unable to dislodge him. Drawing the west corner of Chemmund, hounds picked up a line outside the covert, just then a jack was viewed slinking down below the Toda Mund. The pack pushed him out of the bottom into the open. Taking a line for One Tree Hill the jack fairly raced down to the Yemmakal stream; crossing over, he tried he lower part of Yemmakal Shola, where hounds checked for a short while but recovered the line again and turninge to the right crossed the Kabbolkod stream and ran up th hill and over a ridge between No Man's Land and Irwin Clump, then swung right handed down the steep hill side to the Yemmakal stream and sped up the far side into Dormer. Doubled back to the left at the bottom of the shola and made as if for the Yemmakal stream again, but turned sharp to the left and marked their jack to ground in a large mass of rocks in the bed of a stream leading down from Chemmund. He was bolted out of this and made for Chemmund with Kitty and the pack close on his brush. They drove him through Chemmund into Dormer, and out at the bottom where he went to ground only to be hunted out at once by Kitty. A short spurt of a quarter of a mile, and he tried another earth, out of which Kitty bolted him, but seing hounds close at him he turned and tried to regain the earth, but was grabbed by Valesman at the mouth of it. It was now almost dark, and a thick mist and rain coming on, so hounds were taken back to kennels.

Tuesday, 14th July.—Umbrella Tree at 12 noon. A jack had been viewed in the swamp below the Connemara Road, close to the meet. On being thrown into the covert below the swamp hounds at once gave tongue and went off to the right; crossing the road they headed for the ghauts, where they lost him on the big hill overlooking Kulhutty. The Master cast them round without success. Rocky was drawn, but did not hold. As hounds drew Hanging Shola, a jack was viewed going away over the top into the next shola. The Master took the pack over and they at once owned to the line and fairly raced down by the landslip into some potato fields below Brooklands, up over the Segur Road into Brooklands, across the Demon Valley stream and up the slope of Rocky, where scent failed, and they could make nothing more of it. We then crossed over the Municipal Stream to Newmarket, and drew along the downs to the head of the Sandy Nullah stream, where hounds picked up a line and carried it into Staircase Shola to the right: turning to the left they came out by the centre side, and streamed down the hill into Round Shola, in which they charged on to a couple of sambur. The jack in the meantime made his escape down to the Sandy Nullah stream and on into Bluegums. Drawing back in the direction of home, a jack was found on the top of Bagman; the pack was almost on top of him as they chased him down to the Blackmore Vale, and up lefthanded past Pearl Crossing, and to the right of the Rallywood Toda Mund and swung to the left along the cart road on to the Krurmund Road, then to the right again along the road to Sheffield Corner and on into Governor's Shola. They ran the road through Governor's Shola at a tremendous rate; turning off it up to the left, just short of Hungerford Estate and came out at the top, crossed the Krurmund Path and skirted over the top of Lady Lawley's Shola. Sweeping round to the right above Pichal Mund and along the right side of Parson's Valley, below the Krurmund Path, to Lanar Shola, in which they doubled back and ran their jack to ground in a watercourse in a small shola to the west of Pichal Mund, where they killed him. The mist was very thick and made it most difficult to follow hounds.

Thursday, 16th July.—Rees' Corner at 7-30 A.M. It was a delightful morning after yesterday's rain, a large number attended the meet. Drew over Long Swamp to New Covert and on to the west side of Bagman, where a brace of jack was viewed. Getting on to the line of the one on the left, hounds went off at a tremendous pace; racing him down to the stream and up the side of Newmarket, to the left of Point to Point Tree, as they topped the ridge, they swung to the left, and headed for Bluegums, which they skirted over the top and ran down the side of it on to the ridge. They pushed their jack out through the lower side and long the stream at the bottom, to just above the Sandy Nullah Stream, where they bent to the left, and ran into Governor's Shola by the Toda School. Hunting well together they hustled him through the thick scrub, over the road and up to the top of the hill and down the other side to Andy Plantation. Running the cart track for a short distance they turned lefthanded up the hill above Tiger Shola and tumbled down the side of it to the right of Swamyar Bluegums, over some cultivated fields in the Nanjanad Valley, and finally ran him to ground in an earth above the stream near Dharma Tope. The terrier, Kitty, was unable to dislodge him, so he was left to give us another good run some other day. A very good jack. Baikie was next tried, a brace of jack made off out of Druid, on to the Krurmund Road above Long Swamp and pointed for Bagman: one turning to the left, and led hounds a merry chase, through Jackal and to the left of Monkey into a small shola near Dudley, out of which they hunted him right handed into Monkey. On the far side of Monkey he doubled back over the top of Monkey into Dudley and on into Druid, where he ran hounds out of scent.

Football.

I. F. A. SHIELD TOURNAMENT.

DALHOUSIE vs. GORDONS.—These teams met last Saturday on the Dalhousie ground; the game was a hard fought one but play was poor, and there were several incidents which marred the sport. Both goals were visited in turn and the ball was up and down the field till Mackay opened the scoring for the Gordons. Dalhousie next missed a fine chance and the soldiers pressed for the rest of the half. On changing ends Barnett equalised from a free kick for a foul. Gibson scored a second goal for the Dalhousie shortly after with a long shot. Thereafter the home team attacked but could not get through again. Close on time however the Gordons scored and the game ended in a draw—2 all.

In the replay on Monday last Dalhousie were handicapped by the absence of Wright, Gibson and Dalling, for whom Whyshall, Montgomery and Murdoch played as substitutes. The game was well contested throughout and the military eventually won by the narrow margin of a goal to nil. The first half was pointless but Middleton scored for the Gordons in the second period. Teams :—

DALHOUSIE.—Hendrie, goal; Stevens and Dunn, backs; Storrie, Lees and Headle, half-backs; Murdoch, Whyshall, Holley, Montgomery and Burnett, forwards.

GORDONS.—Insch, goal; Montgomery and Aitken, backs; Harper, Graham and Spence half-backs; Galletly, McNoughton, Mackay, Middleton and MacDougall, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. A. R. C Miller (C.R.A.)

CALCUTTA vs. WEST RIDINGS.—The drawn game was replayed on Saturday last when Calcutta won by 3 goals to two. O'Shea and V. Cooper were again absentees, Taylor and Nicholls playing instead. Calcutta started off with a rush. Chadwick saved at the expense of a corner, but a minute later a pass by Sherman enabled Lee to score. Even play followed. The Ridings forced a corner, but could not improve on it. Kingcome and Oliver shot wide and then the soldiers broke away and a miskick by Nicholls let in Rowe who scored. Another abortive corner to the Dukes closed the first half. On changing ends fast play ruled up and down. Then the soldiers attacked and lost chances. At length Oliver got possession in the Ridings' territory and passed to Kingcome who put Calcutta ahead. On resuming Calcutta rushed the ball down and Fyfe scored a third goal. But the Ridings played up to the end and Thomas scored just on time. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Dods, goal; Gahan, and Nicholls, backs; Macdonald Smith and Taylor, half-backs; Crawford, H. Sherman, Fyfe, Lee, Kingcome and Oliver, forwards.

WEST RIDINGS.—Chadwick, goal; Kenchatt, and Grady, backs; Finch, Morris, and Andrews, half-backs; Ryan, Thomas, Rowe, Minnory and Hulyer, forwards.

Referee:—Mr. A. B. Rosser.

HIGHLAND L. I. (holders) vs. KING'S ROYAL RIFLES.—"B" team having scratched "A" team H.L.I. met the Jubbulpore team on the Customs ground on Monday, the holders going under by 3 goals to one. The Rifles got away at the start and a good passing run ended in Moore scoring the first goal. The visitors continued to press and were awarded a free kick for hands against O'Rourke. Evans took the kick and beat Lees. With two goals against them the Dum-Dum men played on the defensive and kept the Rifles out for the rest of the period. The Highlanders made vigorous efforts on resuming but the attack had no sting and Mitchell disposed of all the shots. At length Collins got away and passed to Devlin who rushed the ball through. The H.L.I. continued to attack after this success till Pickering got the ball and ran down. Arnold received it and transferred to McCulloch, who found the net with a fine shot. There was no further scoring, the Rifles winning as stated by 3 goals to one. Teams :—

K.R. RIFLES.—Mitchell, goal; Hanson and Evans, backs; Liney, Jones and Ward, half-backs; Arnold, Maddox, McCulloch, Moore and Pickering, forwards.

H.L INFANTRY.—Lees, goal; Tait and Renton, backs; Scevity, O'Rourke and Collins, half-backs; Collins, Patterson, Devlin, Innes and Duncan, forwards.

CALCUTTA F.C. vs. CUSTOMS.—These teams met on the Calcutta ground on Monday last when the home team were defeated by 2 goals to one after a poor game. McCready drew first blood for the Customs shortly after the start and there was no further scoring in the initial period. On changing ends Calcutta attacked and Sherman equalised. Continuing to press Calcutta were unable to score. Once the ball appeared to have crossed the line but the Referee disallowed the appeal for goal. The home team lost several chances: up and down play followed, and then Marsden gave McCready the ball and the latter player got away and scored another goal. The efforts of the C.F.C. were fruitless and the Customs won as stated. Teams :—

C.F.C.—Dods, goal; Gahan and Wright backs; Taylor, O'Shea and Crawford, half-backs; H. Sherman, Fyfe, Lee, Kingcome and Forster, forwards.

Referee:—Mr. A. E. Cooper (C.R.A.)

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

NEVER has any Shield Tournament been so ruthlessly spoilt by the weather as this year's, and if this is to be taken as a sample of the climatic reception which up-country teams must expect who can blame them for staying away. We have seen the King's Own go down on a wet, greasy ground, when given good turf and a fine day they might easily have been still figuring in the competition. The West Ridings also would undoubtedly have beaten Calcutta at the first time of asking had they been playing on a dry ground. The King's Royal Rifles are the only outside team left in at the time of writing and a military final next Saturday seems almost certain.

THE first meeting between Calcutta and the West Ridings found the Civilian team in a greatly weakened state. V. Cooper, the mainstay of the defence, had injured himself on the previous Saturday and his substitute was anything but adequate. The inclusion of Fyfe in the forward line worked all right on Tuesday, but it was evident that his football days are past. In fact Calcutta were extremely lucky to make a draw of the match, one of the West Ridings' shots hitting the side post with a terrific bang and rebounding into play. Meeting again on the following Saturday Calcutta just managed to win by three goals to two, and here again the soldiers had the worst of luck. The pluck which enabled them to put on a second goal almost as the referee was whistling "time" earned the admiration of all. The West Ridings played a clean gentlemanly game all through and introduced to Calcutta one of the finest half-backs ever seen here, to wit "Darky" Andrews, who, despite his unfortunate proneness to injury, must have opened the eyes of some of our local football enthusiasts. It is hoped that the bad luck they have experienced will not choke them off coming down to have another try next year, and if they do they may rely on the heartiest of welcomes from the great number of admirers they have gained during their short stay in Calcutta.

HAVING disposed of the military team Calcutta were fairly sanguine of getting past the Customs. The match was played last Monday and, as far as the C.F.C. were concerned, disgusted everyone. One would really like to know if Calcutta has ever during this season put out the same team for two consecutive matches. Of course it is very nice to have such heaps of Talent in the Club, but those who are responsible for the selection of the teams that have done duty for Calcutta this year can scarcely be congratulated. They chose this match with the Customs for a really remarkable change by putting in Wright to share the back defence with Gahan. Now Wright has played exactly two games of football this season, once for the Bank of Bengal against the Exchange Banks and once for the Calcutta Reserves. Therefore he can hardly have been so fit as to merit inclusion in a Shield team. Wright has played brilliant games in this position, but he would be the first to admit that he was not up to Shield form last Monday.

THE Customs thoroughly deserved their win of 2 goals to one. They have shown very consistent form throughout the season and have steadily continued to justify their promotion from juniority. They soon found the weak joints in the Calcutta armour and Macready's two goals would have done credit to a centre forward twice his size. The whole story of the match may be summed up in the fewest words:—Calcutta hesitated and were lost. They seemed to be able to do nothing right, and the policy of waiting for the ball to roll to their feet was one which the Customs were not slow to take advantage of.

DALHOUSIE ought to have beaten the Gordons last Saturday, for they had the military team in a most excitable condition towards the close of play and had they kept cool they ought to have scored a third goal at least. The Gordons were all over the place, the left half throwing in from the right wing and vice versa, then running across to take up positions again. In the replay on Monday the Gordons just managed to bring off a 1—0 victory, but this time Dalhousie were very much below par. The absence of Gibson may have affected the forward line, though this is problematical. Although there has been a lot of grumbling at the I.F.A. for making Dalhousie turn out again on Monday, the Secretary of that Club deserves all praise for having got his men together in accordance with Rule 10, failure to comply with which would have been equally disastrous. It was pointed out that Calcutta got an extension of four days in their match with the West Ridings, but there was ample time for this and, moreover, Calcutta made up for it by playing Customs on the following Monday.

THE defeat of the H.L.I. by the King's Royal Rifles was perhaps the biggest surprise of all Monday's matches. This at once stamps the K.R.R. as a team out of the ordinary and if they figure in the final, there will be a very general desire to see them win. What happened to the H.L.I. is not clear, but they must have been very much off their game as is shown by the score of 3—1 against them.

SOVA BAZAAR having failed to turn out against the Rangers last Monday have been disqualified by the I.F.A. Council and the match awarded to the Rangers. There appears to have been misunderstanding on both sides, but Sova Bazaar's misunderstanding was less easy of explanation, so Rangers won the day. Although this decision may be considered very hard on a native club and not calculated to promote good feeling, the fact remains that it will teach teams a lesson in punctuality. Sova Bazaar could have found out about the match had they tried, but they chose to think—thinking is always a dangerous game—that the match would not be played on Monday. The Rangers and the referee turned up to time on the Sova Bazaar ground and finding no opponents—lodged a protest claiming the game, which was duly upheld.

THE Calcutta Reserves have at last covered themselves with glory by winning the Suburban Shield, beating the E.B.S.R. by 1—0 in the final round last Monday. The competition and pot hunting season is now in full swing and it is no difficult matter to count as many as twenty different football matches on the maidan the same evening. Barring draws, the final of the Challenge Shield Tournament will be played as a Charity Match on the C.F.C. ground on Saturday next.

The Horse.

ENGLISH RIDING AND THE ART OF JUMPING.

WHO has not in youth sought, with bent head and knitted brows, carefully to form the copy head-line, "The horse is a noble animal"? Years, with their saddening experiences, have led most of us to modify that glowing conception of the creature so wondrous in beauty and strength. Nay, some hold he is essentially a most silly animal, requiring as careful handling as a child. For all practical purposes our characteristically-sentimental proverb is, perhaps, of less value than that of the Arab, who says, "Treat your horse like a friend; use him like an enemy." These moralisings have been prompted because I lately spent two days at the International Horse Show at Olympia—that exhilarating and delightful exhibition organised for "the friend of man" and his patrons, writes the war correspondent of the Daily Telegraph. There Lord Lonsdale and his associates have got together, from home and abroad, all that is gracious and best in quality and training, from dwarf "Shelties" to leviathans standing over seventeen hands high. "No more greasy-smelling motors for us," said two excellent lady friends. "This is all too beautiful, and we are going to use the carriage in future. We don't care if the world goes back. It is far jollier as it was." The same ladies, with thousands of others of their own and the sterner sex, were ruffled, and then enchanted to find that the gallant contingent of foreign officers were apparently bearing away the palm from our own people in the riding and jumping exhibitions. "Why," some of them openly declared, "we never thought mere foreigners could sit their horses so magnificently and do things like that." But, softly, softly, everybody; let us, with candour, consider this matter.

MEN AND HORSES.

Certainly the foreigners, riders and horses, have once more fluttered and astonished our traditional insular faith that we possessed the best horses and the cleverest horsemen in the wide world, Australia and America not excepted. Have, it is asked, the British horse and rider to be relegated to some secondary position by the march of civilisation and events? Have we lost the equine sceptre and our seats in the saddle at the same time? That is not quite so, not even as much as was the case when we temporarily lost the blue riband of speed in ocean travel to the Germans. Perhaps it is, on the whole well for us that these startling surprises should come along occasionally, lest we grow too slack, resting upon bygone attainment. The world still moves, and in peace, as in war, victory is to the vigilant, the strenuous, and untiring. It is within everybody's knowledge that in recent years the foreigner has begun to turn out some of the fleetest racehorses upon the Turf, and our neighbours are raising a race of most capable jockeys. America also has caused our horsey men inward qualms and searchings, because of her equine stock and jockeys, and she has produced an unparalleled breed of trotting horses. Time was, on that side, when Kentucky and blue grass produced the finest specimens of the human race and horseflesh in the whole created universe—Sirce! But things have changed even in the go-ahead western world, and there are States that fairly vaunt themselves as needing no odds to-day from Kentucky or Virginia in equitation or flat-racing. It is the old story: however placed, men and nations must be ever on the alert, wherever the pace be set, at home or abroad, or they will be dumped amongst the "have-beens."

There are points, although they are not all good ones, in the wonderful perfection the foreigners have attained in making horses high-jumpers, as well as in their style of bestriding their mounts for that special purpose. The saddle, which does not materially differ from our own, is placed in the usual position, but the riders, as a rule, use very short stirrups and take the grip between the knees and the ankles—a sort of Tod Sloan seat, except that they don't sit over the horse's shoulders. And this, further—there is sound reason for congratulation that, neither in the quality of our horseflesh nor in the courage and style of our English riders, is there the least cause for bewailing. It would be an ungracious slur cast upon most courteous visiting foreign officers to suggest, as I have heard indiscreetly put, that theirs is but trick riding, something in the circus and conjuring line. The training required for the prodigious jumping feats, though it may be of little or no apparent immediate practical utility for a charger or a hunter, still has this value, that it discloses more than was commonly thought can be achieved in teaching the horse how to use his legs properly when he makes a supreme effort to clear an obstacle. For the foreigner the situation is not as with ourselves. For eight or nine months in the year, often continuously, he trains his mount to jump, and nothing but jump, so that it may be entered in the "Concours Hippique" competitions. With them, the "Concours Hippique," or Horse Show, is a great institution for displaying the cavalier style of riding and the qualities of his charger as a big jumper. These "Concours Hippique" displays have grown to be their sport, their pastime, for participants and onlookers, just as we stick for intense enjoyment to hunting, racing, and polo. Poets may declaim for or against it, but in the open playing-fields of England there are still more real victories wrought in the loom of Fate for us, as a race, than in walled enclosures or "Concours Hippiques."

A KNOWLEDGEABLE STEED.

The quests for food and fun, cravings common to men, are not to be disregarded, and so they on the Continent go their way, and we pursue ours. They have their "concours" and "raids militaires," and we not unwisely cling to the approved customs of hunting and polo for exercise and play. Whether we have not developed the better horseman, and the all-round, more valuable steed, need scarcely be seriously doubted, despite the glamour of the brave and picturesque riding and jumping seen in Olympia. Our efforts, and they have not been unsuccessful, tend to turning out the clever horse "across country—"a knowledgeable beast," such a one as I rode in South Africa, that went warily, and never put foot in or tumbled over the ant-bear holes. And our cavalry-men and hunting-men have chosen, and acquired a seat in the saddle best adapted for all practical purposes, though, mayhap, quite different from that of many Americans and Mexicans, or riders in "Concours Hippiques," and elsewhere, when displays are made of prancing circus barbs, or a conjurer performs upon horseback in the ring. A nimble, hugh-jumping horse, cleverly ridden by an expert equestrian, however taking to the eye and the fancy, is not everything desirable in man and animal, for neither would probably appear to advantage if sent to gallop across country, save in Leicestershire or parts of Devon. I am not begging the question, for that is the gist of the whole matter · and it need not be doubted that if our cavalrymen and huntsmen bestowed something of the same special training upon our best horses for taking part in "Concours Hippiques," they could quite hold their own with all comers, and likely enough with a "bit in hand." Although we have not in this country trained horses in the severe fashion for these popular Continental, splendid, showy displays, yet, after all, there is a wrinkle to be learned, and English gentlemen and jockeys have made note.

ENGLISH AND OTHER HORSES.

Capability, staunchness, intelligence, and the perfection of type are the qualities British breeders and trainers have sought to produce in all classes of stock. And by their own force of character, unaided by Government or authorities, they have succeded so well that the English horse is still to-day the acme of his species. Foreign Powers have bought of our best, and they continue to do so regularly, for their studs as well as for their armies and purposes in civil life. It is another national asset, our English breed of horse, due to heritage and climate, open to the foreigner to buy as freely as to the native born. Whilst our military authorities, for whom the outside price is fixed at £50, can give no more for a cavalryman's horse, the Germans and others do not hesitate to pay double that sum, and so snap up the best, in Ireland and in England. A very distinguished cavalry general avers—and the fact is known to others—that at the present moment the Kaiser's Guards are better mounted than the troopers of the King's Household Brigade, the Life Guards and "Blues." Nay, it is said that on the whole the German troopers are better horsed than the British Regular cavalry. British officers of high standing declare that certainly owing to the better class of horse, the German Guards could ride longer and farther in a day or a week than our own Life Guards or Horse Guards. Not a particularly creditable state of things for a great and rich Empire, owning the finest horse-flesh in the world! I am aware that this is not pleasant yet it may be most profitable reading to those inspired with the desire that the nation shall not be left behind in the race, when we might be foremost by strength of wit and endeavour. Earl Carrington, in his official position as President of the Board of Agriculture, is making a splendid effort to improve the breeding of suitable horses for various purposes in England; for he, as others, has found that the mere giving of money prizes is not enough, nor is it the wisest mode to maintain the high standard of general excellence. Other times, other manners; for, what with foreigners carrying off our picked beasts, and their Governments, as in Germany and Italy, devoting great practical attention to horse-breeding in their own countries, our interests must no longer be overlooked by our authorities.

HEREDITY.

We seem to have clung much too long to the "blessing" of prize-giving for breeds at shows. The Italian Government, whose riders and horses have been so distinguished at Olympia, have bettered that mode by sending round to 5,000 farmers and others for free service the noblest steeds of their stables. Soon they will more than quadruple that service, to the improvement of the breed of horses throughout Italy. The continuance of heredity, if not among men, at least in horse kind, is well marked and acknowledged. And a broader rule, too often overlooked, applies to the "noble animal" as much as to man, viz., that the association of a low type of man with the work of the breaking or training results in turning out a hopelessly bad horse. Those who have had to ride or drive horses broken in by violent-tempered, semi-civilised men, will know what is meant. Even when a good horse passes under the control of a person of faulty temper, the animal deteriorates. A horse of quality is ordinarily a high-strung, nervous animal, requiring the most painstaking handling. This all seems remote from the subject, but not to those who, having been to Olympia, ask, How is it that the foreigners get their horses to jump so much neater and higher than the English-bred animal? Simply because they have been trained for this specialised sport of high-jumping. The Military Tournament apart, English horses are rarely made to show off their qualities within four walls, as at Olympia. Untrained for the peculiar class of jumping, unused to the gorgeous moving scene of colour, and the thunderous applause within a building, they were distraught, and showed off badly in every respect at first, even at the mound, almost the easiest of the jumps to a knowing horse. For instance, there is a Leicester breeder who possesses four splendid hunters, but in Olympia they were nowhere, although any one of them would more than hold his own across country with the best of the "jumpers" from the Continent. And in the latter half of the Show, the English horses, ridden by British officers and huntsmen, quite held their own, winning even first prizes in the jumping displays. It was a small matter alleged against our people, that the riders did not always bestride their own nags but those belonging to other owners. But the same applied with equal force to many of our dashing foreign visitors.

THE HIGH-JUMPER'S TRAINING.

Where our busy cavalry officer gives a few hours to practising his charger at jumping, the foreigner preparing for the Concours Hippique devotes weeks and months on end. For show purposes in jumping, perhaps the foreigner's "seat," grip from knee to ankle, and not between thigh and knee, as with us, is the more theoretically perfect. He can swing to and fro more readily, and his weight is less likely to incommode the horse in the jumping. But any swerving or shying of the animal, as must occur at times in open fields, would dislodge the rider much more readily than an English horseman. We do not think it right to show so much daylight between the saddle and the rider. Continental horses —and many, if not most, of those ridden at Olympia, are British born or of our stock's strain, except the French steeds—are trained with untiring care. Several hours a day, week in and month round, are devoted to teaching them how to take off, how to land, and how to clear their legs. For the "Concours Hippique," as in Rome, sometimes horses are made to jump over fifty times a day. To get the animal properly to lift, or curl up, his fore-legs, a rope is pulled as he rises to his jump. As he is often thrown by that device, he acquires the habit in time of pulling his feet very closely up out of the way; and, again, that he may not let his heels hang or drag in clearing any obstacle, as so many of our English horses do, a bar is suddenly sprung up. This he receives a sharp reminder each time that his hind legs are in the way and must be lifted higher to clear the jump. Everyone who has been to Olympia must have admired how neatly and smartly, as a rule, the foreign horses manage their legs in jumping high or low obstacles. As a Kent hunting man, who rode the course at Olympia, said: "They are clever, these foreigners; they have devoted more time to training than we have cared to afford, for this sport is not 'balled' for us; but as it seems to have caught the public fancy, see what we'll do next year. We have been content to let our English horses bore through and break fences where they could pass, because that took less out of them than this high jumping. I have seen them training their jumpers abroad, and particularly in Italy; these horse athletics or gymnastics have become a popular passion. The Italian King and all his Ministers are doing all in their power to improve the breed of their horses."

The British fashion of saddle and mode of riding remain still the pattern for all excellence, just as the English-bred horse is unrivalled amongst the equine species. We have need to change neither our horsemanship nor our strain and stock. The urgent prayer is for more of both. It has been a delight to see so many foreign officers engaging in these displays, and they may rely upon it that, if they will again favour us with a visit, the British cavalry officers and huntsmen will show them something more of the marvellous capabilities of the well bred and trained English horse, both charger and hunter.

The Naturalist.

A NATURALIST IN THE N.-W. HIMALAYAS.

PART XI.

I HAD long wished to spend the winter months in the low hills which border on Kashmir and had great hopes of collecting various finches and chats, long ago I had been very successful whilst working in the valleys of the Jumna, the Tonse, and other rivers and hoped to do equally well on the Jhelum and Kishan-ganga.

Last January I put my head-quarters at Domel on the Jhelum Valley Road and sent my naturalist-collectors to work in the vicinity, they worked chiefly between 1,500 and 4,000 feet above sea level, the results were poor, whether this was due to the mildness of the winter for no snow fell, or whether the birds do not find suitable food and move to still lower altitudes I cannot say, anyway the number of species to be met with was very small.

Of the Finches the best find was Hume's hawfinch (Coccothraustes humii) not far from Kohalla, and also in the Kishan-ganga Valley, we came on small parties of these birds during the end of February and in March. The common rose-finch (Carpodacus erythrinus) and a few of the Emberizina were occasionally to be seen, the white-capped bunting (Emberiza stewarti) was fairly common. Of course, the eastern meadow-bunting was plentiful, and a single specimen of the ortolan bunting (Emberiza hortulana) was shot, this bird is very rare in Kashmir the only other specimen I have got was secured not far from Somajar. Oates tells us it is "a rare visitor to Gilgit, where this species has been obtained in May" as far as I know the ortolan bunting is seldom to be found even on the borders of the Indian Empire, but in a list of birds sent to me by a collector this species were all marked "Turkistan." Amongst the chats nothing was done, of the birds which are comparatively rare in Kashmir we got the Upland Pipit (Orrecorys sylvanus). The Indian grey shrike (Lanius lahtora) which I was surprised to find at an altitude of 5,000 feet, the Himalayan pied-kingfisher (Ocryle lugubris) was found, also the white-breasted kingfisher (Halcyon smyrnensis).

Of the smaller mammals there was almost a complete dearth, this might be due to the large number of cats, every hut seemed to have a cat. Regarding sport, there were a few number of chukor and black partridges and a few hares and some Kalij pheasants. It was curious to see the interest taken by the villagers in the shooting, they followed one about and seemed to be never tired of watching the retrievers work, particularly. If the bird fell far down in a ravine men would stand intently watching the whole proceeding, and would then come and say they had seen chukor in a certain field or that there were partridges in such a piece of grass, but the villagers never seemed to care to come out and beat for game. Pigs were plentiful and a few gooral and barking deer were in the low jungle. It would be of little use to try for any sport without dogs.

I was glad to get back to the main valley of Kashmir before the end of March and to set my men to work at the last of the collecting trips they are likely to make in these parts: not because they have made complete collection, but because some of the birds and rodents are so extremely rare that they are not worth the expense of looking for, after several years of steady work it is seldom that any specimen really required can be got.

I wonder if any of the readers of the Indian Field has collected a series of the two griffon vultures (Gyps fulvus and Gyps himalayensis). We are told in the key to the species,—vide the Fauna of India Birds, Vol. II, that the third primary is longest in fulvus and the 4th in himalayensis, but is this constant? In two specimens obtained this year the fifth primary was the longest, in another the second, and I have often found the third and fourth to be almost exactly the same length in several birds.

The bill of the mountain bird is longer than is that of fulvus, the size larger. I do not imply that these species are one and the same as was originally considered to be the case, but after examining a very great many it does not appear that the third or the fourth primary are always the longest. Since I have been in Kashmir I have collected a large number of eggs of both species and have found very few that are at all blotched or streaked with red or brown, by far the greater number are with or greyish white. I have found the griffon vulture breeding in the cliffs bordering on the main valley of Kashmir and in the lower ground, and as a rule the Himalayan griffon more inside the hills and generally at higher altitude. The eggs can be found in most years from about 10th March to early in April, the difficulty is not in finding them, but, in getting at them, for both these birds select very abrupt cliffs as their nesting places.

The wood owls are easily reared and when able to fly take very good care of themselves, spending the day in the trees and coming to be fed before dusk but as winter approaches they become wilder and if left loose leave for the forest.

STRAY NOTES.

THE so-called waltzing performance of the ostrich is familiar to all in South Africa but few outsiders have ever heard of it.

It consists of a rapid whirling movement sometimes one way, sometimes another, the wings spread out and alternately elevated and depressed.

It is a fascinating sight when indulged in by a large flock. First one bird will dart forward and begin the circular movements; another will follow and then others, until the entire flock is careening around in the mad whirl. Some will continue until they drop exhausted, or, apparently becoming giddy, stumble and fall.

The South Africans have the following theory of the significance of this playful activity:—

The wild ostrich can protect himself against lions and leopards in no other way than by flight. When chased by a beast of prey the ostrich, starting to run, twists and turns in curious fashion, and jerks so quickly from side to side that no beast would be likely to have time to set himself for a spring in one direction before the bird had changed his course.

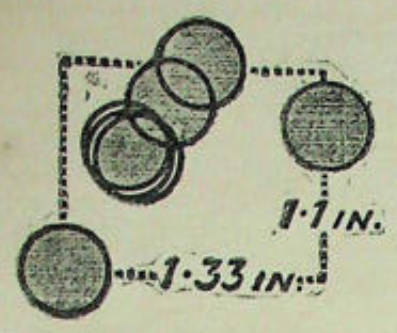
Ostriches thus pursued have been seen to stop at full speed, turn as if pivoted, and flee again in almost the opposite direction. Probably no other animal can do this.

The South Africans believe that the instinctive waltzing movement of the ostrich is useful in perfecting the bird in the art of suddenly twisting and turning, which is most likely to assist it to elude its natural enemies, the larger carnivora.

I HAVE a few sittings of pheasants' eggs under barndoor fowls in coops, writes a correspondent to the Field, but instead of lifting the hens off and on, I have no door to the coops, which allows them to choose their own time for coming off.

A cock pheasant persistently annoyed the fowls, going into the coops and bullying them off their eggs. After he had smashed sixteen eggs, I saw him from a window, and cut one of his legs off with a ·300 rifle. One would have imagined he would have forsaken the neighbourhood of the coops; but no, in ten days he was back again (the leg having sealed where cut off), and at his old antics, when a shot gun was requisitioned to dispatch him.

THERE is no very great difference between the wild horse and wild asses and zebras. They are distinct "species," but will breed together and produce "mules," which in rare cases appear to be themselves fertile, although this is doubtful. The inner causes of the infertility of mules are not really known or understood. Nor, in fact, do we know really and experimentally what are the causes of fecundity and of infecundity in normally paired animals, including mankind. It is of the utmost importance to modern Statecraft that this subject should be studied, and there is a great field for experimental inquiry. A clear mark of difference between the horse and the other species of the genus Equus (namely, the Asiatic and African asses and the zebras) is found in the curious wart-like knobs on the legs, which are called "chestnuts" or "mallenders" or "sallenders." These warty knobs appear to be the remains in a "dried up" condition of glands, such as are found in the legs of deer in a similar position, and secrete a glairy fluid. In newborn colts they sometimes exude a fluid, and also more rarely in adult horses. The fluid attracts other horses (probably by its smell), and also causes dogs to keep quiet. The horse has one of these wart-like "chestnuts" above the wrist joint (so-called knee) on the inner side of the fore-leg. And so have all the asses and zebras. But the horse has also a similar "chestnut" on the inner side of each of its hind-legs below the heel-bone, or "hock." This hind-leg chestnut is absent in all asses and zebras. This difference between the horse and ass can be tested on any roadside by their own observation. The hind-leg chetnut is also absent in certain breeds of ponies from Iceland and the Hebrides. Its presence and absence are interesting in connection with the disappearance of the face-gland or pre-orbital gland in all recent horses, asses, and zebras.



THE absence of living horses, or of any kind of ass or zebra, from the American Continent, when first colonised by Europeans in the sixteenth century, is a very singular fact. For we find a great number and variety of fossil remains of extinct horses in both North and South America. It seems possible that some epidemic disease swept them from the whole Continent not very many centuries before Europeans arrived—for there is evidence in South America of the co-existence there of peculiar kinds of horse with the "Indian" natives. It is even alleged that Cabot, in 1530, saw horses in Argentina, which were the last survivors of the native South American species. And it is also said that the Araucanian Indians of Patagonia have a peculiar breed of ponies, which may be derived in part from a native South American stock. What is quite certain is that in the great cave of Ultima Speranza, in Patagonia—from which the hairy skin, dried flesh and blood, and unaltered dung, as well as the bones of the giant sloth mylodon were obtained—a great number of the horny hoofs and the teeth of a peculiar horse were also found some eight years ago, and are preserved in the Natural History Museum, together with the remains of the giant Sloth. The condition of these remains is such that they cannot be many centuries old. The animals appear to have been contemporaneous with an early race of Indians who made use of the cave before the arrival of Europeans. A skull of one and a skeleton of another of the peculiar extinct South American horses (called Onohippidium and Hippidium), which survived until a late period in Patagonia and may possibly have been seen by Cabot, are shown in the Natural History Museum. Their bones are found in the superficial gravel and sand of the pampas.

A CORRESPONDENT of a German contemporary gives the following illustration of the habits of the otter. He had hidden the body of an old hare which had been killed by a mowing machine in the high grass close to the banks of a river. When out trying to get a shot at a duck in the evening he noticed a larger otter plunge into the water close to where the hare's body lay. On examining it he found that its head and shoulders were missing, having apparently been devoured by the otter. There is a popular belief that the otter feeds exclusively on fish, but this is far from the truth, as otters will, as we can vouch for, catch and devour rabbits, wildfowl, poultry, rats, and other small animals.

A NATURALIST who has made a close study of bird-life disputes the idea that birds instruct their young in nest-building. "Hundreds of birds," he says, "are made orphans in infancy without ever having had a lesson in building nests. No; the truth is nest-building is an inherited instinct, and the real reason why captive birds are such bunglers in making nests when supplied with the materials is not that they have had no parental instruction, but simply that their natural instincts have been blunted by captivity. Another fallacy, in my opinion, is the idea that birds have to teach their young to fly. If that were true, birds who were orphaned before being taught would never be able to fly at all."

THRILLING adventures with lions and other beasts of prey, and hairbreadth escapes from the fangs of poisonous serpents, have been told and retold, so that the very thought of these creatures is synonymous with danger; but few imagine that there are many species of birds which are almost or quite as dangerous to limb, and even life. Teeth and antlers are lacking among birds, but they have other means of offence and defence which are fully as efficient. If caught unarmed by an infuriated ostrich or cassowary, a man would indeed have short shrift. One sidewise kick from the terrible claw of the former, or a straight-ahead rip with the four-inch toe of the latter bird, and he would be killed instantly. The thighs of these birds are as thick and as muscular as those of a horse, and they are incomparably lighter and quicker on their feet, the mincing, dainty pace of an ostrich hinting of powers of speed which any horse might envy. The cassowary's kick starts from about the height of a man's face, the bird leaping upward and slightly forward as it strikes, and full two hundred pounds of bone and muscle back up the stroke. If struck fairly, a man would be almost cleft in twain. Even a glancing blow has been known to break a leg and disable a man for weeks.

Luckily for their keepers in zoological gardens, these birds are easily confused when excited, and run hither and thither, kicking out aimlessly, otherwise many men would now be dead who have only a stiff arm or a scar or two to show as a result of the bird's attack. No matter how furiously an ostrich attacks, a man can guard himself with ease if he keeps his head and uses the ostrich shield skilfully. This indispensable instrument resembles a pitchfork in appearance, with two tines which are made of wood and covered with short sections of ordinary garden hose. When the bird rushes up, the man simply holds out the instrument so that the neck of the ostrich is held between the two tines. Unable to get closer, the bird does not kick, or even if it should the blow is spent harmlessly in mid-air. The neck is the only vulnerable point at which the man could hold back the bird for an instant. The three hundred pounds of sheer weight would bear down the puny form of the keeper instantly; but with the neck in the cleft of the fork the bird is helpless and dances about in fury.

The Story Teller.

REGGIE'S RUSE.

"You aren't even a good soldier!" roared General Sir Anthony Hawksley, K.C.B., to his son. "You rely on your sergeant——"

"You always say, sir," put in Reggie, "that Sergeant Hockaway won Inkerman."

"So he did!" bawled his father. "Did I deny it? But that doesn't excuse your being prompted by Smith on parade."

"I'm sorry, sir. But this scarcely applies to the payment of my tailor's bill."

"That's where you want to rely on me."

"I thought you might——"

"Pay up your debts for the fifth time? And it's always your tailor. I've paid him five times already. D'you lack ingenuity, too?"

"Of course there are other sums, too."

"So that with equal truth you might ask me to settle your tobacconist's account?"

"I'm desperately hard up," confessed Reggie candidly.

"I can't sympathise with you."

"You won't help me with—with a loan?"

"No! I wonder you've the face to ask it!"

"So do I," murmured his son under his breath. He pulled out his cigarette-case and selected a cigarette with precision. "Then I won't detain you," he said aloud.

"Good-bye, my boy," answered his father. "I hope next time you come on the same errand you'll invent a more plausible excuse.

"Thank you for the suggestion," muttered Reggie politely, "but I don't think I'll come any more. Anyhow, you wouldn't like me to deceive you, would you."

"Frontal attacks rarely succeed," observed Sir Anthony sagely. "As a soldier you should have known that. Although the result would have been the same, I must confess that I would have been gratified to observe a spirit of military perception in your campaign against me."

"It was hardly a campaign," returned his son. "I was negotiating for a loan."

"Diplomacy, then; you've said it!" cried the General triumphantly. "Instead of which you blunder in like a raw recruit, blurt out a request for money, and retreat directly you are defeated."

"I'm drawing off," said Reggie politely, "in good order. Good-bye, sir. I'm sorry we couldn't agree. Good-bye."

"Good-bye," growled his father, and turned back to his letter-writing.

* * * *

Uncle Tom Hawksley was a good uncle. That at least was the opinion of his nephew Reggie of the 50th. But there are limits to the generosity of even the most indulgent of avuncular relations, and Reggie, pressed as he was, would not apply to his uncle; nor when the latter offered a loan (a polite fiction for an absolute gift) would Reggie take it.

"No," he said. "Thanks awfully, Uncle Tom, but it can't be done. In fact, it's not done—couldn't do it. I've sponged on you enough. But I honestly think the Governor might stump up fifty or so."

"Is it the last time?" queried his uncle.

"Yes."

Reggie caught Tom's eye and flashed a little.

"Honestly, yes," he repeated. I've often said I'd go slow and pull up and all that, but now I promise it. On my honour, Uncle Tom, if I get out of this, I won't get deep in debt again."

"I believe you," said Tom Hawksley. "You aren't a bad lad, Reggie; you've just played the ass, like myself and your father and all the old fogies. Oh, how I wish I could play the ass again!"

Reggie smiled at his uncle. "Can't you suggest any way to get it out of the old boy?" he queried.

Tom Hawksley shook his head. "Don't know," he muttered. "Tony's obstinate; always was. Don't know, Reggie."

There was a long silence between the two. "I give it up," confessed Tom at last. "Come out to lunch, Reggie, and if a plan occurs to me I'll let you know. Let's talk of other things. Anything been heard of Hockaway yet?"

"No. The Gov. advertised everywhere. He's afraid he must be dead. He'd be an old man now if he still lives."

"Probably died in abject poverty," said Tom, "like most of the heroes of England. Too proud to write to your father, and probably never saw the papers. Your father has regretted losing sight of him for years."

It was after lunch over coffee, cigars, and two tiny glasses of liqueur that the idea came to Reggie. It fired him. The magnitude of it, the danger of it, the cheek of it, appealed to him.

"I've got it!" he cried suddenly.

The long grey cone of ash on his uncle's cigar fell dismally over that gentleman's coat.

"Got what?" ejaculated Tom testily.

"A plan," said Reggie eagerly; "now, you might call it cheating. So I'll explain that he told me he hated frontal attacks. He advocated strategem. He shall have it. I feel justified. One night when he has just finished dinner old Sergeant Hockaway will be shown in. A paper has been shown him; he is old and starving; he dreads 'The House'; his old superior officer is moved almost to tears, but he takes his cheque book and presents his old comrade-in-arms with a substantial present."

"Oh! I say. Come!" expostulated his uncle. "That's fraud—that's a criminal offence."

"It would have been if the Gov. hadn't spoken to me as he did. But he advocated it, Uncle Tom. He asked for a trial of wits. Well, he shall have it."

"It's risky, Reggie."

"All the better."

"I can't say I like it."

"I don't ask you to take any part in it. I shall go to a costumier—Hugo or someone—get the right outfit, and be 'made up' by him as an old man of about Hockaway's age. The Gov. can't see very well, and I'll go in the evening."

"But Reggie! . . . I say! No, look here—I can't countenance it!"

"Would you betray me?" asked Reggie sternly.

"I'm in a hole. . . ."

"Then you'd best do nothing. Inaction is all I ask of you. I know you won't give me away. Look here, Uncle Tom, I'll see to it that your name doesn't appear at all in this. I'll never betray your prior knowledge. Won't that do?"

"I suppose it must," sighed his uncle, but for all that he parted with his nephew in a very thoughtful frame of mind.

* * * *

General Sir Anthony Hawksley, K.C.B., had finished his dinner. The reading-lamp with its green glass shade threw a powerful beam of light upon Kingslake's "History of the War in the Crimea." His glasses were on his nose, his pipe between his lips; the fire was warm, and the book heavy. The General nodded; indeed he fancied he dreamed, when the door opened and the maid announced: "Sergeant Hockaway."

But the film passed away from before his eyes as he grasped the old man's hand.

He said as much to Sergeant Hockaway as he sat the old soldier down in the great chair opposite him.

But the General was acting. For two days before his brother Tom had called upon him. Tom was obviously ill at ease, and Tom beat about the bush, but at last the General had arrived at the truth. His face turned a dull red when he learnt the escapade that Reggie contemplated.

"The deceitful young dog!" he had exploded at last.

But by degrees his brother had explained some things away and smoothed matters over. He reminded the General of his own advice, and he also reminded his brother of his own youth and its attendant scrapes.

The General began to look upon his son in a more favourable light. But he was not well-off; indeed at the moment he was hard-pressed for ready money himself. Tom Hawksley went on. He told his brother how Reggie had refused his proffered gift, and then he come to his own scheme.

"Pretend to be taken in," he advised his brother, "then give him this. Don't say it's from me. Add whatever you can spare yourself. I believe it will pay. Reggie will feel he has played a low trick on you. You must simulate the greatest joy at seeing old Hockaway—Reggie will suffer from remorse. 'Twill be a good lesson for him. I don't think he will get into trouble again."

All this interview came back to the General as Hockaway sat before him. The General smiled grimly to himself as he noticed the snow-white hair, the lined face, and the bent back of his visitor.

"Overdone!" he muttered to himself; then smiled again as Hockaway drew on the glove he had removed on entering. "Hands not easy to disguise," he added, admiring his own perspicacity.

He led the conversation back to the great battle. He could not resist the temptation to catch his son tripping. But Reggie, he saw, had evidently learnt his lesson thoroughly, and his father was secretly delighted at his son's mumbled answers and the intimate knowledge of the battle he displayed.

But Sir Anthony longed to see his son's face when he should present the notes. He drew them out of his pocket and laughed silently to himself as the man before him took them with quivering fingers.

"Fifty pounds!" the old soldier faltered.

"Aye, I wish it could have been a hundred," returned Sir Anthony cheerily. "Now, sergeant, I must say 'good-night.' I'm an old man and I go to bed early. I hope I shall see you often again."

"My home's in Liverpool," answered Hockaway. "I only saw your advertisement by chance. I thought you was dead, General, that I did! Faith! I'm glad to clap eyes on you again afore I dies."

Sergeant Hockaway saluted his officer stiffly, thanked him again, and left.

"Liverpool, that's a good touch," said the General. "That's so I won't make any inquiries if he doesn't turn up any more. Cunning dog!"

Sir Anthony picked up his book and fixed his glasses once more on his nose.

"Hullo! back again, Hockaway? What's the matter?"

"I wondered if you'd know me," said the man in a cracked and quavering voice; "seems you do, General Hawksley."

The truth dawned on the General in a trice. What a coincidence! Here was the real when only that moment the sham had left the house.

"My staunch old comrade!" he roared, getting out of his chair; "so you've come at last! I've searched for you for years. Time's getting short, old friend! We're in the front rank, you and I—in the firing line. Well! well! we mustn't repine."

Once more the General's mind wandered back to the stirring past. But this time he sought corroboration and the filling-in of forgotten memories. Sergeant Hockaway's memory was defective. The General stared at him suspiciously. Then suspicion took form; his jaw fell; his hands clutched at the arms of his chair. He leant forward and stared at the old soldier. His trembling hand shot up and seized the other's grey locks; and in a moment a wig hung from his fingers, and Reggie's black head showed up in its stead.

Sergeant Hockaway still lives in Liverpool but never again has he called on General Hawksley.

Reggie Hawksley, second lieutenant the Queen's Own, owes his tailor a long bill, and is still very hard up.

His father is trying to forget the Crimea and everything connected with it.

Of pawky humour the late "C.-B.", says Mr. T. P. O'Connor had an almost inexhaustible fund, and a fair specimen is given of the kind of thing he used to say: "When he formed his Ministry he issued an order that all Ministers should surrender their directorship of public companies. There were some exceptions, and two of these were Mr. Hudson Kearley and Mr. Lough, both chairmen of prosperous provision and grocery companies in which tea was the chief article of consumption. When Campbell-Bannerman was pressed as to exceptions, he replied that, of course, a Minister could not be expected to give up a family directorship or a directorship in a philanthropic institution. 'Is the sale of tea philanthropic business?' asks the persistent Unionist questioner. 'That,' replied Campbell-Bannerman, promptly, 'depends on the tea.'"

The Veracious Verger: "In the far corner lies William the Conqueror; behind the organ, where you can't see 'em, are the tooms o' Guy Fox, Robin 'Ood, and Cardinal Wolsey. Now does that guide-book, as I see you 'ave in your 'and, tell you who is lyin' 'ere, sir?"

The Sceptical Tourist: "No, but I can guess."

Travel and Adventure.

THE FAIR CARRAVANNER.

In the course of the last two years many hundreds of inquiries for touring caravans have passed through my hands, and I have gained a very fair idea of the caravanner, both in actual practice and in embryo—who he is and from what class he springs, writes Mr. Bertram Smith in the Daily Mail.

Nothing has struck me so much as the great preponderance of ladies among the number. Of seventeen parties that I started last season upon their way, three consisted of ladies alone, two of men alone, and of the other twelve in the majority of cases there was, so to speak, a lady at the helm. Were it to depend upon male support alone, I think the pastime of caravanning, which is now making so great and rapid strides, would very soon almost cease to exist.

There are many daughters who "hope to persuade father to take a caravan for the summer"; and there are many men whose wives "have made up their minds to have a caravan tour" who write to me. Further, the interest in the subject is by no means confined to the athletic girl with the hockey stick in search of new fields of adventure. There are many who undertake the whole conduct of the campaign, harnessing and driving the horse, and negotiating all the difficulties of the road. But there are also many who are by no means prepared to rough it, who are willing to delegate the outside work to husbands or brothers, or perhaps to a groom, and enter into all the pleasures of the march and the camp without too grave a weight of responsibility.

INVALIDS AND HONEYMOON COUPLES.

I always remember gratefully an heroic little old lady whom I tried to persuade to abandon her projected tour, in consideration of her many infirmities, but in vain. Through the wettest part of the miserable summer of 1907 she travelled valiantly on—lying down for the greater part of the way on one of the beds—and covered no fewer than three hundred miles in the course of a month. I think she set out with many misgivings, but she was triumphantly enthusiastic at the close, and I hope she may have many a good tour yet before her.

Caravans are extremely popular with honeymoon couples. These are not, perhaps, quite so practical as other people, and are apt to break down at some distant point, and send entreating wires asking for new harness, or another horse, or the key of the larder. But they are generally on the lookout for a caravan early in the following summer.

It is not at all uncommon for children to be of the party, and I know of one little girl of six who is diligently trying, on the strength of a tour last August, to persuade her father to buy a caravan of his own.

The truth is that caravanning, under modern conditions and in a modern caravan, is admirably suited for ladies, and especially for mixed parties. A party of men alone generally prefer to go a step further in the direction of freedom—and discomfort—and camp out. A caravan is a shade too cumbrous, too elaborate, and too comfortable. They do not feel at home in the duties involved of setting the table and making beds, and their cooking is often restricted to a frying-pan and a methylated spirit lamp. They are alarmed by the appearance of a caravan stove, with its full equipment of pots and pans. They do not care to be surrounded by what they do not fully understand, or to have to ask at every turn "what this is for."

MAN'S VEHICLE, WOMAN'S DWELLING.

On the other hand, there is something about the fresh dainty interior of a well-fitted caravan, with its bright curtains and carpets and inviting beds, that naturally appeals to the feminine mind. One need never grow tired of dusting or sweeping where the space is so small, and it is a pleasure to make a bed that is so narrow that one can reach comfortably across it! Then the miniature housekeeping that is necessary—which is more than half a joke—never assumes the proportions of a responsibility, and to cook on the turf on the leeward side of the caravan as the dusk is falling is a positive delight. Finally, the hundred and one little contrivances of the interior—flap-tables, and "railway" racks, and folding washstands, corner cupboards in the roof, and chairs that fall against the wall—are lost upon the ponderous mind of men. To him a caravan is essentially a vehicle, but to his wife it is, above all else, a dwelling.

There are few caravans large enough to accommodate a mixed party with any comfort, and it is customary either to carry a tent for the men to sleep in or to take two caravans. The latter plan is much the more satisfactory. The best arrangement of all is to have a large van in which the whole party can dine and the men can sleep, and a smaller van where the ladies sleep. If room can be found for the kitchen also in the larger van, the smaller one's kitchen can with much profit be converted into a bathroom.

If the party consists of ladies alone it is well to have a groom or driver, who sleeps in a tent close at hand and is prepared to do all the rougher work.

DUTIES DIVIDED FOR MIXED PARTIES.

Mixed parties, as a rule, work very harmoniously together so long as they are carefully constructed at the outset and everyone has a clear conception of what he or she is in for. The poor lady who was found in tears because her morning cup of tea was not brought to her bedside has a long way to go before she develops into a satisfactory caravanner. The duties of the day naturally divide themselves, all the outside work falling to the men and the housework to the ladies. In this way there should be an expert in every department. There is often a little misunderstanding as to whose office it is to wash the dishes, and I have known instances where they have accumulated through several meals while the point was being debated. Much the easiest solution will be found in bribing the small girl who may be passing down the lane. Provided with an ample supply of hot water, she will generally make short work of them. Two pence is the current market rate of pay for this service. It will generally be found that the male section of the party is willing to black boots or peel potatoes, or even clean fish, without a murmur.

This order of things is, however, very often reversed. On a caravan tour, as in every other undertaking, real merit is bound to come to the top, and marked gifts, irrespective of sex, must have their scope. The tour may start with a carefully compiled list of office-bearers, and every member of the crew may set about his duties manfully, but one often finds that when the caravan returns many things have been readjusted. I do not remember finding a man in charge of the housemaid's work, but I do know one who revealed so great a genius for cooking that I found him at the end of a week in absolute charge of the kitchen, with two scullery maids acting humbly under his directions. And one often finds a lady driving the horse.

There is no doubt at all that caravanning is at its best with a mixed party. Unless they are young and strong, and well up to their duties, ladies are hardly capable alone of carrying out a tour. But in every way caravanning is well suited to their sex, combining as it does a reasonable amount of comfort with a pleasant atmosphere of adventure. And if the men of the party decide for a change to go for a tour alone I can assure them that, in addition to many other obvious disadvantages, they will find the caravan a vastly less comfortable place to dwell in than they had thought it to be.

MOTOR MEMS FROM ENGLAND.

ORIGINAL AND OTHERWISE.

LONDON, Friday, 26th June 1908.

It is of interest to learn that there was recently supplied an 18-h.p. Thornycroft car to the order of Lieutenant-General R. S. S. Baden-Powell, C.B., and this is now in use by him in connection with his military duties. The car is fitted with a back-entrance on the off-side only, and a comfortable couch is fitted on the inner side, enabling the car to be used for sleeping purposes. Alongside the driver's seat is a large box fitted with two drawers and leather pockets for papers, maps, etc. A cushioned seat for the orderly is provided in front of this box, the seat also containing a useful tool-box. Inside the car is a writing-table, and a luggage-carrier. Cape hood, half-glass wind-screen, and electric light complete an interesting equipment. The car should prove of great value for military inspection purposes, and is likely to be adopted by other officers. The body was specially built to the design and personal instructions of General Baden-Powell by Messrs. Meler and Son, of Redhill, and is now in use by its owner in the north of England.

PROBABLY not many are aware that the firm of Lorraine Dietrich hold more victories for 1908 than any other motor-car manufacturers. The following are a few of the most important events in which they have successfully competed, and it is proof of the consistency in the running of the car:

World's 30-mile record at Brooklands.
The Mar del Plata (Buenos Ayres) 300 kilometre race.
Flying Kilometre at Nice.
Pardue Bovolenta. Isotta Fraschini 1st and 2nd.
Climbing of la Turbie by a 24-h.p. Lorraine-Dietrich.
Briarcliff Race (United States), 400 kilometres. Isotta Fraschini 1st.
Bucharest Race.
Competition of Vedette Squadron.
The Targo Florio. Isotta Fraschini 1st.
The Paris to Moscow 300 kilometres in 83 hours without a stop.

It should, perhaps, be stated that the Isotta-Fraschini cars are the Dietrichs made at their Italian factory.

WHEN purchasing a new car, or doing up an old one it is always well to consider whether the tyres fitted are large enough for the work they have to do. The mere alteration of rims to take a larger-sized cover is a small job, and inexpensive at that, and the increased comfort and immunity from puncture is well worth the extra expense. It is quite easy to calculate the right tyres to fit by finding out the load per wheel which has to be carried, and then consulting the tyre makers' catalogue. Some people are under the impression that tyres of large diameter when fitted on the steering wheels are apt to affect the steering and to make it more difficult. As a matter of fact, this is only the case if the tyre is under-inflated; if it is inflated sufficiently, no trouble will be experienced.

The fitting of tyres with a large diameter certainly tends toward greater resiliency, more comfort, less shock to machinery, and more economical petrol consumption.

TRADE trials are unnecessary, and, moreover, they are now a source of unhealthy competition. The manufacturer gains nothing in being successful, unless he counts it gain to have subject, matter for his advertisements, of questionable value, provided without effort. In other words, if to-day he thinks the R.A.C. certificate brings him business, to-morrow he is alive to the delusion. What we want in the motor world is clean sport without trade interference or alliance. The best of British sportsmen would back up the Motor Union if a purely sporting contest was organised for next season, or better still, this season, if the officials of the M.U. get to work at once. It would be sport of the right sort, and do more for the home industry, if a classic amateur road contest were organised immediately without the interference of and not subject to restrictions imposed by the trade.

AT Brooklands, on Saturday, 27th June an end was brought to the great trial promoted by the Royal Automobile Club, when the remaining classes were put to the 200 miles race. The first car to be started was the Beeston Humber in Class F, which, having lost 14mins. 37-4/5secs. less than the Talbot during the road trial, left that much before the latter. The Talbot, however, proved the speedier car, and won the class in the net time of 3hrs. 50mins. 38-2/5secs. The Beeston Humber was second in 4hrs. 8mins. 40-3/5secs., the Coventry Humber (penalised 33mins. 42-1/5secs.) third in 4hrs. 18mins. 18-3/5secs., and the Panhard (penalised 41mins. 56-1/5secs.) fourth in 4hrs. 3mins. 21-4/5secs.—the second fastest net time for the class. The Adler showed a fine turn of speed in Class G. It started with a penalty of 45mins. 19-4/5secs., the first away being the Beeston Humber. The former, however, travelling at over 60 miles an hour, proved an easy winner in the net time of 3hrs. 10mins. 29-3/5secs. Second place went to the Nagant Hobson (penalised 49mins. 3-3/5secs.), net time 3hrs. 37mins. 4-4/5secs., and third place to the Deasy (penalised 54mins. 2-2/5secs.), net time 4hrs. 6mins. 15-2/5secs. At two o'clock, which was the time limit, the Beeston Humber had covered about 153 miles. In Class H., Ison's Daimler led the Armstrong Whitworth by nearly a lap at the end of 63 miles, but at a 112 miles the former had to stop through a damaged propeller shaft, and the Armstrong Whitworth won anyhow in 5hrs. 34mins. 21-1/5secs. The Rolls Royce had 61mins. 48secs. advantage of the Deasy in Class K, and in that time covered 19 laps. In the end the former won by nearly 15 laps in the net time of 3hrs. 43mins. 55-3/5secs. Deasy had covered a little over 60 laps when the time limit expired. Classes J and L were each a walk over for an Ariel car. Captain Johnstone's Zedel, the Shamrock, Lorraine, Dietrich, and Thornycroft, which, owing to the time lost on the road, could not participate in the races, were made to cover three laps at speed.

THE consistency with which the Daimler headed Class H. in Hill-Climbing tests was one of the features of the 2,000 Miles Trials. In all, there were ten timed hill-climbs, and premier position was taken in each by a 38-h.p. Daimler.

Appended is a list of these hill-climbs:—

Hill-Climb.	Car.
Cairnwell	Daimler	Fastest time.
Cairn-o'-Mount	Daimler	Fastest time.
Trinafour	Daimler	Fastest time.
Glencroe	Daimler	Fastest time.
Fintry	Daimler	Fastest time.
Dunmail Rise	Daimler	Fastest time.
Kirkstone Pass	Daimler	Fastest time.
Shap Fell	Daimler	Fastest time.
Harley Hill	Daimler	Fastest time.
Broadway Hill	Daimler	Fastest time.

SOME fast speeds were accomplished on Saltburn Sands last Saturday the 28th June, when the Yorkshire Automobile Club carried through an interesting programme. Mr. A. Lee Guinness, on his 200-h.p. Darracq, accomplished a speed of 121·6 miles per hour, which is just a shade faster than Marriott's flying kilometre record of 121·57 miles per hour, but fails against the record speed of 127·65 miles per hour for a flying mile, also by Marriott, on a Stanley steam-car. Mr. Guinness easily beat his own Yorkshire record of 111·8 miles per hour, established at Saltburn last year.

THE serious accident to a motor car at Beachy Head the other day emphasises the necessity for all motorists to fit their cars with some appliance which can satisfactorily cope with a petrol conflagration. A car ran backwards by the edge of the cliff, and hung suspended, its hind wheels over the cliff—its front wheels on the cliff, the weight of the engine and the support of the exhaust pipe and footboards keeping it in position. The petrol tank at the rear being full, and the car being at an angle, some petrol flowed on to the tail lamp, and this at once ignited. Now, had an efficient extinguisher been fitted on the car, these flames could have been put out, and very little damage would have been done. As it was, the footboards were destroyed, and the car toppled down the cliff on to the rocks three hundred feet below, the car being totally wrecked. A car can be set on fire by a variety of causes, and an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure—Verb. Sap.

CHUKKER.

SHE'D never before been to a football match and was looking on with interest while the Essex and East York men were struggling for victory and her husband explained. She thought the game rough, but he assured her that was nothing at all. Presently, however, something happened that quite upset her. Rigby of the Essex had got the ball and was racing down the centre with it, when 'Shoot, shoot!" shouted some of the soldier spectators—and she turned and fled through the member's enclosure and the exit therefrom and then down to her carriage which she saw a hundred yards away. People looked up surprised and her husband jumped up and was after her. He got up to her just as she got into the carriage and stepped in after her. "Gurh!" he said briefly to the driver and then looking at her anxiously he asked, "What's the matter, dear!" And she buried her face in her hands, and carried "Oh John, I couldn't stop and see them shooting that nice young fellow!"

HENLEY REGATTA.

Henley Royal Regatta found the clerk of the weather in a particularly gracious mood, and the famous carnival has seldom been favoured with more charming conditions. For all that, the picturesque course was not crowded on any of the four days, but the reasons for this are not far to seek. In the first place no foreign crews were competing; then the first-rate oarsmen did not take part in the fixture, having other fish to fry in the shape of the Olympic Regatta, and many rowing enthusiasts, who would otherwise have helped to turn what Charles Reade termed "the dullest town in Europe" into one of the gayest, were postponing their annual pilgrimage until the more important international struggle. Compensation for the absence of the rowing stars was found in the large entry from Oxford and Cambridge colleges, and from the Metropolitan clubs, an entry which will give experience and knowledge to many of those junior oarsmen, who are really the lifeblood of the rowing world. Nothing would do more good to rowing generally than a win by a Metropolitan club in the Grand or Stewards as was common twenty years ago. In those days a College crew had to begin by beating London or Thames before they had the remotest chance for either of the crack events. We should also like to see the provincial clubs taking a more prominent part at Henley. Time was when the Royal Chester Rowing Club could furnish an eight capable of capturing the Grand Challenge Cup, and when a Burton crew established a record over the Henley course, but these achievements are not being emulated by the present generation.

A feature of this year's regatta was the splendid display of the Eton eight. The boys did more racing than any other crew and they were the first in the history of the famous school to win a heat of the Grand and the Ladies on the same day. Considering that one of their number was only sixteen years of age the performance was remarkable. This was only the third time that Eton had reached the final of the Grand Challenge, and that they did so on this occasion was all the more commendable as they were handicapped by losing their stroke through illness at the beginning of the week. Arbuthnot, their bow, was moved to stroke, and a substitute put at bow. Arbuthnot, though weighing only 9st. 8lb., strokes with consummate skill, and never hurried the heavy men behind him. He should be heard of again. The conditions were favourable to good times, nevertheless credit is due to Magdalen College, Oxford, for winning the Stewards and Visitors' Fours in record time. In the former they were paced by a speedy Thames crew, and got over in 7mins. 27½secs. on the Berkshire side, which is faster than any four-oared crew has ever done the distance in the history of Henley Regatta. The Moseley crew of 1893 did the course in 7mins. 34secs., and 7mins. 30secs. was achieved both by Leander against New College in 1897, and by Third Trinity against Winnipeg in 1904. Magdalen's time in the Visitors' Cup was 7mins. 30secs. (previous best time in this race having been 7mins. 37secs. by New College, Oxford, in 1898).

Owing to the absence of foreign competitors little was heard at this year's Henley of the vexed question of style. The English and Belgian styles were, however, tested in the seventh heat of the Grand Challenge Cup, between Eton and Thames, and resulted in one of the most interesting events of the regatta. Thames, rowing in the Belgian style, though with blades only seven inches deep as compared with the eight-inch blades used by the Belgians, rushed off with the lead and were a quarter of a length ahead at the end of the first mile. Eton rowing a long clear stroke stuck to their work, however, and gradually wearing their opponents down won by three-quarters of a length. Thames are said to have gained in speed by adopting the Belgian style, but the fact remains that Eton demonstrated the superiority of the orthodox English swing.

While on this subject reference may be made to the opinions expressed by Mr. R. C. Lehmann, M. P., in a book he has just issued entitled "The Complete Oarsman." Mr. Lehmann in discussing Mr. Vander Waerden's explanation of the Belgian theory of rowing does not discover in it anything adverse to the accepted doctrine, except that body swing is not very strongly insisted upon. In an appreciation of the Belgian crew that won the Grand Challenge Cup in 1906 and 1907 he says :—"When I compare this style with that of a first-class English crew (for example with the Leander crew of 1905, which defeated a Belgian crew in the first heat by a length and three-quarters), I note only one serious fault and that is the comparative shortness of swing fore and aft. All other essentials are there. A genuine swing might entail greater exhaustion, but it would also increase pace as it did in the Leander crew I have mentioned, by no small amount."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The wind up meeting at Tollygunge last Saturday was a real first class show blessed with fine weather and good going. Eight events were got through with commendable promptitude despite fairly big fields, and though there were no really close finishes the racing was bright and interesting. It was very much Mr. Tremearne's "day out" as he rode two winners, Dynamite and Furlong, a second, Sir Ulric, and a third, Lily. More power to him. The books had a much better time than of late as only three favorites, Killarney, The Padre and Harmony, got home and there were a good many others backed in the last named race. However, no one ought to grudge them a small look in as they have had a very bad time in the first three meetings.

The Steeplechase was divided into two parts, and it is curious to note that division I., which was supposed to be for the top sawyers, took 7½secs. longer over the course than division II., which was won by that wonderful pony Killarney with 9st. 5lbs. in 2mins. 55secs. It will be difficult to handicap her in the amateur pony hurdle races these monsoons. Indeed, they will almost need a separate class for her and Envious, as at present there doesn't seem to be anything else going within 2 stone of them. However sufficient for the day, etc. To revert to Tollygunge and the Pony Hurdle Race which started the game. Emerald unfortunately didn't turn up, leaving nothing seriously to contest with Dynamite, and it is hard to fathom the reason why the public made favorites of Lily II with 12st. 12lbs. up and Nimrod. Moreover, so it was and from 5-2 to 3-1 could be obtained about the ultimate winner at any time. Nimrod made all the pace but could not last it out and Mr. Tremearne was able to come through and win very comfortably by 1½ lengths.

Five of them went out for the Nullah Cup, division I. Idle a hot favorite and Boolara backed for a little also. The latter made all the running followed by Matsumata and Yulgibar, who was pulling hard until the hurdle up the back, when he began to tire ; Dalgai came up at the bend and they were all pretty well together at the last jump, from where first Boolara and then Yulgibar fell back beaten. Dalgai crashed right through the hedge and almost stopped, but Mr. Evers got her going again and raced home with Matsumata to be beaten by half a length at the end. Idle, who had been lying right back, came past the tired out Boolara and Yulgibar and finished third.

The Novice Cup, which followed, was the biggest upset of the day as Schoolboy was backed down to even money and was considered a dead cert while Moachim's supporters were also very sweet on his chances. The favorite, however, was very wayward, running right off the course at the bend, and the 20 to 1 outsider, Peter, beat Moachim easily by a length. He was nicely ridden by Mr. Morris, whom we do not remember to have seen out before.

The second half of the Nullah Cup was a very good race. Lily went off at a desperate rate followed by Mermaid and Ruby, the others keeping back. The leader did not jump so well as usual, finding the pace too hot for careful lepping, and she twice very nearly came it. After they got round the bend Killarney and Diablo began to move up and the pony coming away in fine style won comfortably from Diablo by 2 lengths, Lily beaten for second place by half a length.

The Monsoon Trial Plate was a great race. Teehee was favorite, but was clearly out of his class and was probably mostly backed by the "uninstructed public." Blix was considered a very good thing by her supporters and her defeat must have been a considerable disappointment to them. The whisper also went round at the last that Sir Ulric was "hot stuff" for the race and he was backed from eight and twos down to fours and evens. Altogether it looked a fine open race, and so it proved, as when they came near enough to distinguish they were all pretty close together, Moira leading from Blix and Sir Ulric. The latter was travelling the fastest of the three and in a fine finish Moira just gained the verdict by a neck from Sir Ulric, Blix third a head away.

The biggest field of the day was for the July Plate, eleven ponies lining up. The veteran Mr. Hutchison, who was riding races when some of us were in our cradles, donned silk again after many years to steer his pony Lovelock in this race and was pleased to find that his wind was as sound as any of the young 'uns, finishing the mile race without a puff.

It seemed to tickle the fancy of the other competitors, however, when, Mr. Gresson fined the C.T.C. Secretary fifteen rupees for arriving late at the post, and there was a huge roar of laughter in which Mr. Hutchison joined, "the schoolmaster caught tripping." The field was despatched to a bumping, jostling start. Furlong, who had filled out a good deal and was looking much better than at the last meeting, made his own pace and won easily, but they must have been a pretty poor lot behind him for Kipper, who is very little use for more than 4 furlongs, was able to finish second, 3 lengths ahead of Bandyleg. The two Jiu Jitsu races were both won by favorites, Mr. J. Main (the owner of Furlong) coming home on Harmony with a smile like the rising sun on his always cheerful face in the first and Mr. Behrens steering The Padre to victory in good style in the last event.

The entries for the first Monsoon Meeting are very disappointing. The Pony Trial Plate has not filled, the Maiden Horse has but 5, the Trial Hurdle Race and the Stand Plate only 8 each and the Summer Plate with 12 and the Amateur Plate with 22 are the only two events which are likely to bring out good fields. Of the latter three of them are duplicate entries. The race looks to be between Teehee and the pony Envious if they go for this one. They are both of them in other races, however, and if they stay out for them Seditious should about win. The Maiden Horse Plate appears to be a good thing for Pallas and the Trial Hurdles for Foy or Riverside. The Stand Plate will be a gift for Flower Girl unless Envious elects to start in which case there should be a good fight between the pair. We don't see anything standing out in the Summer Plate and it is likely to be the best race of the day. We hope to see much better entries next week for the handicaps, and it is expected that Mr. J. D. Scott and Captain Holden will have some going later on.

Our London correspondent is disappointed at the poor support accorded the Franco-British Exhibition by those who cater for the sportsman—the gunmakers, athletic outfitters, fishing tackle makers and all whose business is more or less intimately connected with rifle, rod and hound. Sporting exhibits, save for five honourable exceptions, are practically non-existent and the reason appears difficult to find. There is one big English gunmaker to the fore, Mr. Charles Lancaster, and he may certainly be congratulated on his magnificent display of the latest and best weapons; but where are our other old friends. Messrs. Hardy Brothers, of Alnwick, and Messrs. Farlow exhibit fishing tackle and their attractive stalls are besieged by visitors one is glad to hear. Messrs. Eley's ammunition is in cheerful evidence—a really handsome exhibit, apart from the special merits, which lure the sportsman to it. Lastly Messrs. Ayres, Limited, make a grand show with a big collection of their sports and athletics requisites. 'Bus! Our correspondent has failed to find a single other genuine sporting exhibit.

Writing of the training for the Olympic Games at the London Stadium on the 9th instant, Sporting Life says:—"Yesterday afternoon there must have been over 200 athletes on the ground at times, prominent among them being the United States team, who have not lost much time in getting to work. A glance at their athletes in their practice was sufficient to show that they are indeed a splendid lot of men. Particular attention has been paid to the division, who will be showing up in the Field events, and that young giant, Ralph Rose, took the eye as one of the finest specimens of humanity we have seen. He makes the burly Flanagan, of Gaelic fame, look small, and one need not feel surprised that he holds a weight-putting record. Then the jumpers are a fine crowd, and the way some of them tackled the pole jump was an eye-opener even to the Swedes, who themselves have a champion at the game in Soderstrom. Their track men did not do much serious work, but one who took the eye was J. D. Lightbody, who has twice proved successful at the Olympic Games in the 1,500 Metres. His style does not belie his name.

"Among the arrivals of the day were the Norwegian team, and they, too, are a fine-looking lot of young fellows. In a conversation with Mr. John Falchenberg, who, besides being a Discus representative, is a vice-president of the Norwegian Football Association, we gathered that the Norsemen do not expect to beat many records or perform in a very prominent manner, but have come over with the very sporting view that the Games deserve support from every country that believes in the value of athletics, and they hope to make a decent show in the Field events and Gymnastics, and at the same time carry back with them a knowledge of the styles and tactics of champion athletes which will assist in the development of Norwegian sport. To all such athletes we must surely accord a hearty welcome. Among them are record holders in E. Larsen (Hop, Step, and Jump, 46ft. 1in.), A. Halse (Putting the Shot, 39ft. 10in., and Javelin, 176ft. 1in.), and our informant, Mr J. Falchenberg (Discus, Free Style, 129ft. 2in.).

"Among all alike—Americans, Colonials, and Continentals—the Stadium is a matter for wonderment and delight. They have never seen a ground like it, and in many instances can scarcely understand how we have managed to get such an arena set apart for sport. All, too, are delighted to find that they are welcome to train there until the Games commence, and that they have to all intents and purposes a free run of the Exhibition grounds, so that in their leisure hours they may find an opportunity for amusement without leaving the neighbourhood of the track."

The ceremonies connected with the opening of the Olympic Games must have been interesting and impressive to judge by the following advance notice which appeared in a London paper on the 10th July:—

When the King has seen the procession of international athletes and opened the fourth Olympiad at the Stadium next Monday afternoon, the international battles for athletic supremacy will immediately begin.

At Monday's opening ceremony, in addition to King Edward and almost the whole of the Royal Family, there will be present the King of Greece, the King of Norway, the Crown Prince of Sweden and the Ambassadors and representatives of every other nation competing in the games.

Meanwhile the competitors, wearing the athletic costume, caps, and badges prescribed by their various associations, will assemble outside in companies and enter the Stadium at the two ends, each company bearing its national standard. The companies will form into line in the middle of the arena, where they will stand while the King declares the games open.

They will then wheel off into column of companies in fours and march past, giving the military salute and dipping their flags as they pass the royal box. The procession will then pass out, and the programme of the games will open with gymnastic displays.

The entertainment ceremonies in connection with the games start on Saturday with a reception of the competitors at the Grafton Galleries.

Twenty-one nations have chosen the flower of their athletes to compete at this magnificent festival.

Great Britain has more entries than any other country. Turkey would have been unrepresented, for the Turks are not fond of exercises, but a pressing invitation to the Sultan's subjects not to stay in the cold resulted in the sailing of one man, a valiant wrestler, who comes to dare the world's best amateurs.

Day by day in the Stadium, where nearly all the teams have arrived, the training of the army of international champions goes on. Runners are sprinting and practising at the distances, the discus and the javelin, the hammer and the shot are sent flying through the air, brown-skinned Swedes dive gracefully from the high iron platform into the long bath, cyclists race round the cement track, jumpers leap heights and lengths, and in their dressing-rooms wrestlers tussle strenuously on their mats.

London has never seen any such series of superb athletic contests as are to be held for two weeks from next Monday. About 2,100 competitors are entered.

In the athletics distances are metrical, translated into yards on the programme for English and American convenience.

The wrestling classes are in pounds, translated into kilos for the benefit of our foreign friends.

The following are the athletic events :—

110 metres (109·3 yards).
200 metres (218·6 yards).
400 metres (437·2 yards).
800 metres (874·4 yards).
1,500 metres (1,639·5 yards).
110 metres Hurdle (120·2 yards).
400 metres Hurdle (437·2 yards).
3,200 metres Steeplechase (3,497·6 yards).
5 miles Run (8,047 kilometres.)
10 miles Walk (16 kilometres)
Marathon Race, about 25 miles (about 40 kilometres).
Standing Broad Jump.
Standing High Jump.
Running Broad Jump.
Running High Jump.
Hop, Step, and Jump.
Pole Jump.
Throwing the Hammer.
Putting the Weight.
Tug of war. Teams of eight.
3 mile team race (4·8 kilometres) (5 to run, 3 to count).
3,500 metres walk (3,825 yards).
Throwing the discus in the free style, and as at Athens in 1906.
Throwing the javelin in the free style or holding it in the middle.
Relay race, 1,600 metres (1,749·8 yards).

The cycling races are :—

One lap, 660 yards (603·491 metres).
1,000 metres (1,093·6 yards).
5,000 metres (2·88 miles).
20 kilometres (12·427 miles).
100 kilometres (62·135 miles).
Pursuit Race. Three laps (1,807 kilometres). Teams of 4 to start. First 3 to count in each heat.
Tandem Bicycle, 2,000 metres (1·24 miles).

The fencing is with the epee sword, the sabre and foils, the latter for display only.

The contests with the duelling sword and the sabre are for individuals and international teams of eight, out of whom four fencers are chosen for each series.

The Gymnastic games are :—

1 Individual Competitions. Voluntary Exercises.
1 Horizontal Bar, swinging movements.
2 Horizontal Bar, slow movements.
3 Parallel Bars, slow and swinging movements.
4 Rings, steady.
5 Rings, flying.
6 Pommelled Horse, quick movements.
7 Rope Climbing.

The Swimming Fixtures.

100 metres (109·3 yards).
400 metres (437·2 yards).
1,500 metres (1,639·5 yards.)
High Diving. From 5 and 10 metre boards, firm take off.
Fancy Diving. From 1 and 3 metre spring boards.
200 metres Team Race (218·6 yards). Teams of four.
200 metres Breast Stroke (218·6 yards).
100 metres Back Stroke (109·2 yards).
Water Polo. Teams of seven.

The wrestling is in the catch-as-catch-can style and Graeco-Roman.

The former bouts are limited to fifteen minutes, and in bantams (up to 119lb.), feathers (133lb.), light (147lb.), middle (161lb.), and heavy (over 161lb.). There are three weights for Graeco-Roman, in which twenty minutes will be allowed for each bout. The weights are light (up to 147lb.), middle (161lb.), and heavy.

Pigeon flying and the cult of the "homer" seemingly grow steadily in public favour in England. On the 9th July the "Pigeon Derby" was held and many of the birds, flying from Nantes (France) made velocities of over fifty miles an hour. Of course, the conditions were extremely favourable. Of 7,513 starters, released at 5 A.M., over 4,000 were timed in well before 4 P.M. and several were in Lancashire by 2 P.M. One of Mr. Lord's birds covered the distance at an average speed of 1,423 yards per minute. Good going! The previous best speed in the race was a velocity of 1,140 yards per minute, made by a pigeon owned by a Mr. Dobson, of Milnthorpe, in 1904.

When the last received mail left London, there was much disquietude as to the probability of England failing in her duties as host to the 2,500 foreign athletes going over the Olympic Games. Lord Desborough had asked for £10,000 and it was apparently very doubtful if it would be collected in time. In this connection the Spectator wrote:—"Lord Desborough, the president of the British Olympic Council, has a letter in the Daily Mail of Thursday appealing for funds to entertain the numerous foreign visitors who are coming to take part in the Olympic Games. The council have so far appealed almost in vain. They have incurred already an outlay of £8,600 in the organisation of the games, and towards this only £2,840 has been subscribed. As for hospitality to our guests, there is not a penny with which to provide it. The receptions, excursions, and dinners which had been planned by the council have all had to be abandoned, and the council faces the prospect of being able to do nothing whatever. This is certainly not as it should be. Athletes are coming from almost every civilised country in the world, and it is certain that if we visited their countries in similar circumstances we should be entertained most generously. That has already been the experience of the Englishmen who took part in the Olympic Games at Athens. There money was granted by the State; but here, where we boast of leading the world in the principles of amateur sport—which implies good-fellowship if it implies anything—the £10,000 for which Lord Desborough asks ought to be subscribed voluntarily and at once. Could there not be an amicable levy on the athletic clubs throughout the country?

"Touchstone" on this subject contributed the following lines to a London paper:—

The picked athletes of all the world
Were flocking to our strand,
They all had heard much talk about
Our hospitable land,
And wondered what diversions
Its proprietor had planned.
They thought they saw him waiting there
To grasp them by the hand,
Like a fine old English gentleman,
One of the olden time!

But John was thinking deeply
In an unaccustomed way.
He said, "It's most annoying
Having people come to stay,
For British hospitality
Has surely had its day;
And if I ask them out to dine
They'll think I ought to pay.
Like a fine old English gentleman,
One of the olden time!"

He is pondering the subject,
But the time is creeping on.
His only chance to play the host
Will very soon have gone.
He may call himself a sportsman;
They will call him "Miser John,"
And nevermore by all the world
Will he be looked upon
As a fine old English gentleman,
One of the olden time!

Full details of the Amateur Athletic Association Championship meeting will be found in our epitome of English sport this week. Most of the best athletes of the world were present, eleven countries were represented and some extra fine performances and a record or two were put up. Never before had such a numerous and classic entry been received.

Mr. F. W. Prike, of Calcutta, was to have competed in some of the sprint events, according to recent advices; but the absence of his name from the reports indicates that for some reason, which has not transpired, he was not able to carry out his ambition.

Mr. W. A. Knyvett, of the Bengal Police, a well-known hurdler and high jumper on this side of India, was on hand, however, and ran in the 120 yards hurdles but without success though he got a standard time medal. This is the second time India has been represented at this meeting; the first was in 1902 when Mr. N. G. Pritchard showed up fairly well in the hurdles, 100 yards and quarter mile.

In all no fewer than twelve of the thirteen champions of last year who defended their titles suffered defeat, a quite unprecedented happening in the championships. Even in the two miles walking race, usually a set sort of event, a change was made. It was merely reverting to the old order of things, though, when G. E. Larner, of Brighton, very easily outpaced his field and won by 30 yards in 13mins. 58 2/5secs., a time that is only a fraction of a second outside the championship record.

Mr. Blackstaffe, who, but for his disqualification in Heat 3 of the Diamond Sculls, at this year's Henley, would doubtless have contested the final, is one of our very foremost scullers. In addition to gaining the Blue Riband of the Henley Regatta, and other big events, he has won the Wingfield Sculls (amateur championship of England) on four occasions, and has eight times carried off the London Cup. In a recently published article on Henley and sculling he says:—"Training is no joke, I can assure you. I myself am forty years of age, so I should know; for it is an axiom that the older a man gets the stiffer must be the training he undergoes. For this year's Henley I have been in training three months. Two years ago, when I won the Diamond Sculls, at my tenth attempt, my weight was correct—11st. Last year, when the winner—Captain W. H. Darrell—beat me by four yards—I was 9lb. too heavy. This year, at the time of writing, I am 11st. 4lb., and hope to dispose of the superfluous before the dawning of the eventful day. Of course, it is fatal if a man really slacks. During the past 365 days I suppose I must have rowed over at least some portion of the course between Putney and Mortlake on 300 of them. That was as it should be. But, alas! during the three holidays at Whitsun I threw Henley to the winds and just enjoyed myself, with the result that I put on 7lb. in weight. My trainer, when he saw me, looked furious, but said he would soon reduce that. On the Tuesday evening he made me put on two pairs of knickers and four sweaters, and go for a stiff run. To speak mildly, I perspired freely. And when I returned home, it was to find myself 4½lb. the lighter.

"Some races—even in the Diamond Sculls—are, as the Yankees say, 'pretty much punk.' You amble easily along, with nobody within yards of winning distance. But a fine hard, ding-dong race is a very different affair. You don't see the people, you don't hear the shouts. You just pull—pull—pull. You get a red-hot poker down your throat, and, vowing that you'd give up twenty years of life for one long drink, you always aver that this shall be your last race. But you go on pulling, straining every sinew, glorying in the battle. And when the race is rowed it doesn't much matter whether you've come in a narrow first or a fine second. You have had a splendid race, and within five minutes you feel another man."

The negotiations which were set on foot for another international inter-'Varsity eight-oared race between Cambridge and Harvard have fallen through, for this year at any rate.

After beating Yale, Harvard challenged Cambridge to a race at Henley at the end of the Olympic Regatta. Considering the training and rowing they have already done this season and the further practice and racing that they will have before the Olympic Regatta is decided, however, the Cantabs have felt it judicious to decline the friendly encounter for the present year.

Another attempt to swim the English Channel has failed. As will be seen in our English Sporting Letter, Jabez Wolffe, tried again on the 6th July, made a fine struggle for it, but, being driven back by the outgoing tide, had to give up when a mile and a half from the French Coast. He declares now that it cannot be done from England, though, of course, it has been accomplished.

A London journal recently told the tale of three swells who drove up to Romano's in a taxicab, and the first to alight asked the driver what the dial had registered. "Four bob," said the chaffeur, at a guess, and the swell gave him 5s. The man sniffed scornfully at the extra shilling, and said, "'Ope you can spare it! Swelp me, but we're breedin' a prime lot o' silvertails now. For two pins I'd put another bob to this and take on all three o' yous, one down another come on." "What a bit, then," said the paying swell, "and we'll pay you to drive up to a quiet spot, and then see what you can do with the raw 'uns." As the trio entered the cafe for a nip each the doorman, a bit of a bruiser, said, to the taximan, "You seem to be lookin' for trouble to-night" "Oh, I can take that bunch an' mop the street with them quicker 'n they can get up to cop it." "Oh, yes," said the old man, "you're great on the skite, I know, but don't you come out again without plenty o' raw beef and the arnica bottle. Y'see the cove that paid—an' paid you well—may pay you better, for he's Mr. Corri, champion fighter of the Stock Exchange, the one just behind him is Jerry O'Shea, who laid out four hooligans for mauling a lady cyclist last week." "Yes," said the listener, now very much interested, and who may the square-shouldered little cob be? Somethin' very prime, I s'pose?" "Well, he's poofy fair, too," said the other. "Leastways, he's a visitor from Canada, an' his name is Tommy Burns, and"—but the revengeful man had suddenly remembered an appointment to go and sit up all night with a friend who had died the year before, so he was round the corner before his friend could say, the Right Honourable Jack Johnson!

In a fast and desperately-fought battle, Battling Nelson knocked out Joe Gans on Saturday, the 4th July, at San Francisco, thereby winning the light-weight championship of the world. Nelson is of Danish origin, and one of the most stubborn and enduring fighters; Gans is a negro, probably the cleverest and most experienced boxer the ringmaster has seen in America in recent years. Gans was deemed invincible. Once already he had defeated Nelson. The betting was two to one in favour of the negro champion.

During the first few rounds Gans seemed to be the superior, peppering the Dane's hard head and body at will. Nelson fought like a madman, never stopping for a moment. In the third round Gans had Nelson down, but in a moment the Dane had risen up, and returned the assault with increased fury.

For a dozen rounds there was cruel, merciless hammering, both men exhibiting marvellous endurance and even cheerfulness. In the thirteenth round Nelson was administering tremendous punishment, and the negro was almost worn out by the punching of his opponent. The negro still managed to stop many blows, but his returns lacked their usual sledge-hammer force.

Nelson had the negro at his mercy in the sixteenth round, and in the seventeenth landed a blow on his ribs which brought the black to the floor. The arena was in an uproar. Gans lay prostrate for a moment, and then slowly dragged himself to his feet, completely exhausted, but game to the core. The Dane set himself firmly on both feet, and sent over a stinging right to the jaw; Gans toppled forward, and rested on his hands and knees. At the count of nine, Gans once more arose, although his knees hardly had power to support him. Nelson shot his right to the body, and once more the negro fell, unable to rise again.

The white man's triumph evoked much cheering. Gans has for years been the idol of his black fellow-countrymen, who lost heavily by his defeat.

The trustees of the British Museum are finding some difficulty in filling the position of Keeper of the Department of Zoology at South Kensington, which was formerly held so ably by Sir E. Ray Lankester.

They have accordingly found it necessary to insert the following advertisement in the Press—a somewhat unusual proceeding in connection with an appointment of this character:—

British Museum (Natural History).—Applications (by letter only) are invited for the post of Keeper of the Department of Zoology. Salary £800 per annum. Applications (accompanied by testimonials) should be addressed to The Principal Trustees, British Museum, London, W.C., and be received not later than Thursday, July 16.

(Sgd.) E. Maunde Thompson,
Director, British Museum.

The fact of this advertisement having already appeared several times seems to indicate that the best men are not being attracted to the vacant post. Small wonder!

We have to acknowledge receipt of a copy of the fourth edition of a well turned out, complete and useful little book, to wit The Austro-Hungarian Hotel and Health Resorts Guide: it is published by the Continental Guides Co., Clun House, Surrey Street, Strand, London. Such of our readers who may contemplate travelling in the two countries with which it deals would find the book of use we have no doubt.

By scoring 38 points out of a possible 49 with a single-barrel rifle, Mr. Walter Winans, who is to represent America at the Olympic Games, has broken the world's record for shooting at the 110 yards range at a running deer at Bisley.

It seems very possible that Dr. E. M. Grace will play little, if indeed any, more cricket, remarks a London scribe. The old injury to his knee is again troubling him, so that he can only just manage to get about, and, in consequence, he has retired from the Thornbury eleven, for which he had played for thirty-five seasons. His bowling had continued to meet with such success that it was hoped and expected that he would be able to keep up the game for many more years. During his wonderful career he scored 76,705 runs and took 11,959 wickets. As recently as 1905 he took 303 wickets and in the following year 352, but last season, when 208 catches were missed off his bowling, the number fell to 212. Now that he has more leisure at his command he may feel inclined to pen his reminiscences. Mention of "The Coroner" reminds me that "W. G." is still a great power in club cricket. On 26th June, when playing at the Crystal Palace for London County against Whitgift Wanderers, he took seven wickets and scored 111 not out. His youngest son, C. B. Grace, made 68 in the same innings, and he and his father put on 100 runs under the hour. Two days before "C.B." had scored 128 for Past vs. Present Students of the Engineering School at the Crystal Palace.

The following are the results of the important cricket matches played in England during the week:—

Warwickshire beat Somerset by 161 runs.
Sussex beat Lancashire by six wickets.
Notts beat Essex by eight wickets.
Surrey beat Hampshire by nine wickets.
Middlesex beat Lancashire by 150 runs.
Kent beat Surrey by 206 runs.
Gloucestershire beat Notts by sixty runs.
Essex beat Derbyshire by six wickets.
Sussex beat Worcestershire by ten wickets.

The match between Yorkshire and Leicestershire was abandoned.

Messrs. John Rigby and Co., the well-known firm of English gunmakers, who have for over forty years carried on their business at 72, St. James Street, London, S. W., have now moved into more commodious quarters at 43, Sackville Street, Piccadilly.

Indian Motors Ld., although quite a new firm, only having started business in January last, are forging rapidly to the front, and if they continue doing such good business as they have lately, they bid fair to become the premier Motor Car Company of Calcutta. The following is a list of the six cars which they sold during the last fortnight. (1) 12-14 H.P. "Singer." (2) 28-36 H.P. "Daimler." (3) 15-20 H.P. "F. I. A. T." (4) 15-20 H.P. "F. I. A. T." (5) 14-16 H.P. "Argyll." (6) 12-14 H.P. "De Dion." The "Daimler" car was purchased by H.H. The Maharaj Kumar Rameswar Narain Singh of Padma.

The Madras Hockey Tournament was concluded on the 25th instant, when the Leicester Regiment carried off the cup for the second year in succession, defeating the Madras Cricket Club by a goal to nil.

The hot weather regatta of the Madras Boat Club will be held on Saturday, 29th August, when the following programme will be discussed:—Junior Pairs, Challenge Fours, Poona vs. Madras, Tub Race, Junior Sculls, Senior Pairs and Senior Sculls.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—Things looked none too well for the mounted sports on Wednesday when a sharp shower of rain fell in the early afternoon, but things cleared up and the Marine Lines ground was in very fair condition at the time of starting. As usual, there was quite a good attendance and the interest taken is a compliment to the Honorary Secretaries.

Tent-pegging for horses and ponies came first, and the former event went to an old hand in Captain Mackie with Carter placed second, whereas the latter went to Owen Symons with Pratt second.

The Affinity Race, in which pairs rode to a given spot, changed mounts and returned, proved a good win for Mrs. Rumbold and O. Symons who beat Mrs. McCausland and Barraclough comfortably with Captain and Mrs. Nash a good third. The Obstacle Race was interesting from the fact that riders found no little difficulty in persuading their mounts to go through the paper obstacle which lay between two other jumps. This again Owen Symons won from Captain Mackie and Reid.

No easy job was the Barebacked Bending Race, but the various competitors negotiated it successfully, Barraclough winning from Major Pitman and Scott. The ladies were asked to do a bit of carpentering in the Nomination event, the gentlemen having to carry four bits of wood and nails out of which their partners were to make squares. Here again Mrs. Rumbold scored with Boothby as a partner, Mrs. McCausland and Barraclough next.

Lastly came the usual Scurry, ponies, which Graham won on Ayscough's "Little Flick" from Griffin on "Arbitration" and O. Symons on "Ortolan."

By permission of Colonel Mead and Officers, the Band of the 116th Mahrattas played throughout the afternoon and did much towards making the meeting the success it was.

Monday on the Cooperage is a Rugby Football day, but as usual a merely passing interest is being taken in this code, and with only about ten players out a game which was a sort of cross between the two codes was indulged in. Spectators gradually filed away in disgust, and unless some serious steps are taken the much-feared decline of this game will indeed come about.

Turning to the Harwood League, the ground was in capital condition on Tuesday, when the Rovers turned out to meet the R. G. A. and a closer game than anticipated was seen. It was an admirable example of how luck can assist one side, as the military team should have scored at least three times during the first half. They pressed hard almost throughout, but somehow could not get through. The game seemed likely to end in a pointless draw, but that sort of thing could not last and towards the finish, from a mix-up after a corner, the R. G. A. at last broke through. Just on time they supplemented this with another and thus won by 2 goals to nil.

The Rovers made a good fight throughout, but were apparently outplayed though they have improved by amalgamating with the R. I. M. Dockyard. They play hard and last well, but their combination is very poor and every pass went straight to an opponent. The others were without their usual centre, Reynolds, with whom the score would undoubtedly have been larger.

There was a much better exhibition of the game on Wednesday when the Bombay Gymkhana met the Royal Scots B. though it was always pretty certain that the latter would win. They did win too, but the civilians contested every inch, and both goals scored might with a little luck have been saved. Ward was back again to partner Morris and he is quite the backbone of the team, whereas they have their old halves back in Haines, Bussey and Rollo; the last still being inclined to foul and being penalised more than once. The forwards still lack combination and do not keep their places, the wings in particular losing chances by not keeping well up. The Scots' forwards played their usual pretty, short-passing game and Finnigin at half and Foster at back were as difficult as ever to pass.

Whereas the military teams are practically sure to finish in the first three places, I think the Commercial Gymkhana will prove themselves the best of the civilians. They met the Scots B. on Thursday and gave a really good account of themselves, though they eventually lost by the substantial margin of three goals to nil. In this they were distinctly unfortunate, the first goal in particular being a bit of really hard lines. The goalkeeper had actually saved and cleared a shot when the referee blew his whistle thinking the ball had gone through, and then had to bounce it in the very goal mouth, Parkes scoring from the ensuing scrummage. Ley, the right back, was paying more attention to the opposing left wing than the referee was, and, tackling him more vigorously than necessary, was penalised within the penalty area, Lakin scoring. Presumably getting desperate after these two bits of hard luck, Ley was again soon after pulled up for another foul; the custodian saving only for Wright to get on in an easy position and lodging a third goal. All three goals were shot within a few minutes of full time, and in the ordinary course of events the game would have ended in a pointless draw as, especially towards the end, the Commercials were doing quite their share of attacking. Because, probably, one is so accustomed to see the Scots sweep everything before them, they always seem to get the benefit of the doubt on occasions when the referee has to use his judgment, and in this case the luck was decidedly in their favour. The Commercials have a distinctly strong side, and with a little more understanding amongst their forwards should extend even the Holders whenever they meet them. Their defence is strong, and some improvement in their wing forwards would see them making a strong bid for first place. Playing their usual steady game, the Scots were hard to pass, but often as their wings were pulled up for off-side, it was not often enough.

Friday's was one of the poorest League games we have seen, being between the Rovers and the Government Telegraph. The latter were certainly under the disadvantage of being a man short all the time and two short for most of the first moiety, also by no means having their best men out. Their forward line suffered most, and the bulk of the work fell on Holman's shoulders, but their defence was strong and on the whole they had rather the better of the game. There was no improvement in the Rovers since they last turned out, they are very slow in getting away with the ball and their passing is anything but accurate. During the previous game people found cause for complaint in the refereeing, and this time again it was scarcely all that could be desired; for instance when a man jumps to avoid getting the ball straight in the face it is surely no cause for a free kick, and there were other instances which go towards proving that we are in need of good referees. To return to the game, it requires but very little description, being of a give-and-take order throughout, Asplin putting through for the Telegraph in the first half and Morley equalising for the Rovers in the second with a really good one. The game ending in a draw, gives the Rovers their first point in the League table.

It was quite a different thing on Saturday when the Scots B met the R. G. A. and a really excellent exhibition was given by the former, who quite outplayed their opponents. It was considerably more of a one-sided game than expected though the Artillery made a game attempt and it was their stubborn defence that called forth more of an effort from the Scots, who were consequently seen more in their true colours than usual. The evening was quite ideal for football and an exceptionally large and appreciative audience turned out to see the Scotchmen earn a verdict of 3 goals to nil. There was one unfortunate occurrence, the sending off the field of the R. G. A. right back, who apparently resented the referee's warning after twice fouling Parkes, who was too clever for him.

The Scots' forwards were indeed a treat to watch and the sound play of their halves resulted in the opposing forwards being seen at a distinct disadvantage and far from as dangerous as they promised to be on recent form. Ross, McIntosh and Parkes in particular shone, the combination generally being perfect, and, pressing as they were practically throughout, they would have scored more goals had it been necessary. The Artillery showed some of their true form in the opening exchanges but once things settled down they were given but little chance.

A bit of bad luck to the Artillery was the first goal scored, as it was their own left back who headed the ball into his own goal, but there was no mistake about the other two. The second was shot by McIntosh after a clever run by Ross, and the third came after half time also by McIntosh, who on several occasions came within an ace, Ross also being brilliant in the latter stages. Reynolds was again an absentee from the losers' forward rank and had he been present maybe they would have been successful in securing the goal most people thought they deserved.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—Some excellent sport is being provided this season by the Poona and Kirkee Hounds, and a successful and long run last Bye-day ended in the brush being presented to Mrs. Ditmas.

On Tuesday the best run of the season so far was enjoyed, it being both fast and long. The meet was at Yerowda on a perfect morning with a very fair number out to enjoy the sport. Near the octagonal tank a Jack was put up almost at once and set a tremendous pace towards the Kalas road. He made for the Sister Hills, and up them hounds followed in hot pursuit only to be robbed of their quarry at the top, where he went to ground. It had been an invigorating run of about half an hour and one that was muchly enjoyed despite the fact that the quarry escaped.

The seventh milestone on the Bombay road was the rendezvous at 7 P.M. on the 23rd, when a good field was out and a Jack soon put up at the eighth milestone. Nearing the Sister Hills hounds went after a deer and were consequently stopped, and when another Jack was put up precisely the same thing happened again. On the way home another went away and was given chase at such a pace that he was not expected to last long. He, however, proved a game 'un and crossed the Bombay road and the railway, on as far as the river bank. Near Chinchwad the railway was crossed again and here the field lost hounds who themselves lost their quarry later on.

The Olympic Games are over and the results of the contests in the Stadium will be awaited with great interest. Certain meagre details have, however, come to hand and from these we learn that America won the 1,500 metres race, the Marathon race and throwing the hammer, Flanagan creating a new record in this last event. The Marathon race was won by an Italian Dorando, who entered the Stadium first but was so exhausted that he fell three times between the entrance and the goal. He was, however, disqualified on the ground that he was assisted into the Stadium and the race was given to Hayes, the American, who had finished second. The first British competitor to finish came in twelfth. Dorando's performance made him very popular and all sympathised in his hard luck; Queen Alexandria gave him a special cup. R. E. Walker, the South African, won the 100 metres race in 10⅘ secs. and came in for a tremendous ovation. Of British successes we have few records. G. Larner won the 3,500 metre Walk and Voight the 5 miles flat race. The 400 metres went to Lieutenant Halswell. It was in this race that a regrettable incident occurred, Carpenter, the American representative, being disqualified for fouling. The affair has led to much discussion, and it will be interesting to read the true facts of the case when the English papers arrive.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 10th July 1908.

Last Friday was the hottest day we have had this year. On every side one heard of the "heat-wave" and its many attendant inconveniences and occasional fatalities. Everything in town was scorching, and even in the country conditions were not much better; the glare was really very trying and the malignant motorists seemed to derive a fearsome joy from sending the dust sky high. An old Calcutta friend likened the Bayswater Road to one of the roads on your maidan on the day of the last Extra Meeting in March, and he declared the heat was about the same. The sun temperature that day rose from 110 degrees to 127 degrees, so there was legitimate cause for grumbling. Then at night came the worst thunderstorm I have ever experienced in England—"the most violent of recent times" according to my paper. The thunder crashed and roared just as it does in India and the lightning was incessant and appalling for nearly two hours. The number of places damaged by the electric current made a list thirteen inches long in a Sunday paper and there were seven persons killed. After this three moderately pleasant days and again the heat wave.

London teems with Americans, it is estimated that about ninety thousand have come over this summer. One sees their curious hats, leather belts and brilliant ties, their long locks and aggressive boots everywhere. The Yankee—as seen in London—seems to have learned to overdress and to have neglected all else, certainly he speaks English no better than he did half a century ago. Of course, there were "Independence Day" celebrations last Saturday, and in spite of a gloomy day and a very wet evening they waved their flags, were noisy and demonstrative in all places and under all conditions. No one was killed I am happy to say—I note that in America they slew 50 and injured 1,150 during the peculiar rejoicings which take the form of explosives, crackers, fires and pandemonium yelling. In London our visitors from over the herring pond provoked laughter and were withal fairly peaceful.

The American Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid held a reception at Dorchester House, Park Lane, in the afternoon. Among the 3,000 or 4,000 guests were the Prime Minister and Mrs. Asquith.

In the evening Mr. Whitelaw Reid was the principal guest at the Independence Day banquet of the American Society in London, at the Hotel Cecil. Replying to the toast of his health, he referred to the Presidential election in the United States as "coming out all right."

The coming introduction of penny postage between Great Britain and America would, he said, enormously stimulate intercourse and intimacy between the two countries.

Wherever Americans meet together all over the world, Independence Day produces striking oratorical flights. At the anniversary banquet of the American Chamber of Commerce, on Saturday, Mr. Francis Patrick Murphy, of New York, delivered a characteristic speech. Here are some extracts, as reported in the New York Herald:—

In these distressing times nothing succeeds like looking successful. You have all the evidences of prosperity, as if you belonged to that class of people who have more trouble to digest food than to get it.

All nations claim that Americans especially take their pleasures sadly, but at least they perform their duties gaily. Some of the pleasantest countenances in our streets are seen in carriages going to a funeral.

A delirium of virtue is sweeping through our country. The New York Legislature prohibits betting on horses, and the New York aldermen state that women shall not smoke cigarettes in public. It is a critical case—no betting on horses and women taking to tobacco. Both ways, what is to become of the "race"?

The King and Queen were at the opening of the new offices of the Royal National Pension Fund for Nurses on Saturday last, Her Majesty performing the ceremony. Over two thousand nurses were assembled in the Embankment Gardens facing the site of the building, which stands at the foot of Buckingham Street, Strand, on the spot where once stood the house of Peter the Great. Replying to the address, on behalf of the Queen, His Majesty had many good words to say of nursing as thus:—

"It has now happily long been recognised that in the alleviation of pain and sickness good nursing is of supreme importance, and that it is in the interests of the community that measures should be taken to obtain skilled and efficient nurses in increased numbers, and to procure for them such advantages and prospects as will retain them in the profession.

"In no career has more unselfish devotion been shown than in that of nursing, and it would indeed be hard if those who spend the best years of their life in acts of self-denial, in attending the sick bed, and administering to the wants of those unable to help themselves, should be condemned, when age has diminished their capacity for work, to poverty, if not actual want."

Sweet are the uses of advertisement! This reflection must have occurred to most people who were astonished spectators of the "Silk Hat Parade" brought off by certain enterprising hatters—not of Wonderland, but of Bond Street and its neighbourhood.

The demonstration has been organised by the silk-hat manufacturers of London to give ocular proof of their contention that the silk-hat is unrivalled as the headgear for social functions and generally "correct" wear. It may be mentioned that the manufacturers have been perturbed lately by signs of a decline in popularity of the silk-hat.

Messrs. Lincoln and Bennett's representative ventured to assert that "there is no headgear so becoming and dignified as the silk-hat. The carelessness of many men in respect of what they wear upon their heads is regrettable. A bowler, a felt hat, or a straw hat never has that 'appearance' in the London streets which is gained by wearing a well-made silk-hat." So five hundred immaculately dressed hatters' assistants, all in the shiniest of toppers (all "four ounces and perfectly ventilated") marched through the Franco-British Exhibition moving the panama and bowler wallah to laughter or tears according to their temperaments. Next please!

Many of your readers who know that clever amateur actor and playwright, Major Fraser of "Cingalee" fame, may be interested to read of the recent action brought against him by Mr. Hayden Coffin, the actor-singer. Mr. Daldy, for Mr. Hayden Coffin, said his lordship would probably remember having tried the action known as the "Cingalee" case three years ago, which lasted several days. That was an action by Captain, now Major, Fraser, against Mr. George Edwardes to recover damages for having taken a play of his, altered it, and produced it under the title of the "Cingalee." The result was a verdict for Major Fraser for £3,000 damages, which were subsequently reduced by consent in the Court of Appeal.

In the course of the case some evidence suggested that Major Fraser's introduction to Mr. George Edwardes, which had been given by Mr. Hayden

Coffin, had been given for a valuable consideration. It was really the introduction of an old school-fellow. Mr. Coffin was indignant about the suggestion, and he brought the present action—which was in form, to recover one-third of the £3,000 damages—in the hope that if it were shown he had no right to recover it would prove conclusively to the public that he had not entered into the arrangement to give the introduction for a reward.

Mr. Coffin admitted he had no right of action or any claim of any sort against Major Fraser for any share or commission, and Major Fraser admitted there was no suggestion of any remuneration for the introduction.

Mr. Justice Darling: It seems to me such a complicated way of arriving at such a simple result.

Mr. Daldy agreed that was so, but Mr. Coffin felt that the impression which had got about ought to be corrected in a public way.

His Lordship: Well, I suppose he has done that now. Everybody seems satisfied that in introducing Major Fraser Mr. Coffin did it as a matter of friendship, and not for reward, and anybody who thinks differently has no ground for his opinion.

The action was accordingly dismissed and Mr. Hayden Coffin is presumably satisfied with the advertisement.

We have no lack of original dancers, graceful, beautiful and daring—Miss Maud Allan, La Belle Ortero, Mdlles. Odette, Valery, and others—but by popular acclaim Miss Isadora Duncan puts them all in the shade. This latest classic danseuse sprang into Continental fame about seven years ago, but it was not till last Monday night, at the Duke of York's Theatre, that she found the footlights between her and a London house. If British acknowledgment of her genius was somewhat tardy, the reparation was generous enough. Call followed call on the fall of the curtain.

For a dancer to hold an audience spell-bound for two hours by the magic of the language of the human body is no mean achievement. The music interpreted by Miss Duncan's rhythmic steps was the dances and choruses from Gluck's "Iphigenia in Aulis," which gave her the fullest opportunity for the display of her wonderful gifts. According to one critic "Miss Duncan's wondrously beautiful movements recall the masterpieces of Greek sculpture—from the Niobe (in the Chœur des Pretresses) to the prancing horses of the Parthenon frieze (in the Danse des Sythes) and of the Italian Renaissance. The whole range of Miss Duncan's movements, which are not only rhythmic in themselves, but symmetrical in their orderly sequence, contains nothing that is not exquisite in its beauty."

Mr. Robert Sievier came up again before the beak on Tuesday, the proceedings being watched by hundreds, the Court was thronged while outside was a crowd which cheered him loudly on his arrival and departure. Two new felony charges were added to those on which he was originally arrested. The cross-examination of Mr. Mills was extremely severe and certain remarkable admissions were made by him which encourages Mr. Sievier's supporters in the hope that he will yet come out of it all right. The proceedings terminated in the remand of the accused, bail being again refused: he came up again to-day, with what result I was unable to ascertain, though I have kept this open to the latest safe hour for posting.

There are some new and decidedly good things just now at the Alhambra. Somehow one does not usually associate Germans with humour, but there is any amount of that quality about Robert Steidl, who made his first appearance in England at the Alhambra on Monday night. He is a versatile comedian, with a genial, confiding manner, and he should prove more popular than the majority of foreign artistes, for the reason that he gives most of his performance in English.

He gave five "turns" of various kinds, and each was warmly received. Among other things, he delivered a very amusing imitation of an old-fashioned street organ, and of a violin solo, and he sang his songs with point and vivacity. The Alhambra programme is altogether very strong this week, with the delightful new Franco-British divertisement, "The Two Flags," still at the head of the bill.

Those who take after the Fat Boy in Pickwick and like their "flesh to creep" must have had a surfeit of such entertainment at the Court Theatre matinee on Tuesday, where a gruesome, lurid and heart-string clawing bill was provided in aid of a children's hospital! With the house plunged in darkness proceedings opened with "The Anarchists," a tragedy in one act, by Mr. Rowan Orme, a sombre little play possessing, however, certain dramatic possibilities. Bolstered up by an exceedingly clever piece of acting on the part of Miss Esme Beringer, who received something more than adequate support from Mr. Godfrey Tearle, the piece proved fairly effective. "On the East Side," by Christopher St. John, followed, a play which, with its old emotional undercurrents and its extraordinary views of life, can only be spoken of as perplexing in the extreme. On the other hand, it gave occasion for some excellent, if rather lurid, action by, in particular, Mr Herbert Grimwood, Mr. O. P. Heggie, Miss Auriol Lee, and Mr. Harcourt Williams. Third in the programme stood "The Sentence," another "tragedy in one act," by Mr. Rowan Orme.

Tuesday, 1st September, has been chosen for the first performance at the St James's Theatre of Mr. Jerome K. Jerome's new play taken from his story, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." The action of the piece is laid in a Bloomsbury boarding-house kept by one Mrs. Pennycherry, and the interest is mainly centred upon a "paying guest" known simply as "the Stranger," whose influence upon the other boarders effects some extraordinary transformations of character and habits. Mr. Forbes Robertson is to play the stranger, his charming and talented wife is to have a part which it is said will present her in a totally new key; and a fine cast has been assembled for the venture. Mr. Forbes Robertson living, as he does, in Bedford Square, has probably absorbed much of the necessary atmosphere.

After an interval of a couple of years the opera of "Fedora" reappeared on the bill at Covent Garden on Monday night. It provides pleasant entertainment, if it fails to convince through its lack of dramatic action and true atmosphere, and it must be admitted that the Company handled it rather skilfully; and it was beautifully mounted. In the name part Miss Cavalieri sang much more powerfully than when first she appeared as Manon, and moves as gracefully. Yet with all her pleasant voice and attractive bearing her Fedora is dramatically not very convincing. The role of Loris is not easy—but Mr. Garbin, who now made his first appearance in London, did wonderfully well with it. It is notoriously difficult for a newcomer to "find out" the house at once; and it may be that consequent nervousness affected Mr. Garbin's voice in the earlier scenes. But there is no denying its great power and strength, and the masculinity of his performance developed as the play was unfolded, so that he reaped his full share of applause at the curtain-falls. Mr. Scotti was an admirable "diplomatico," de Siriex by name, who sang "La Donna russa" in excellent fashion; Madame Lejeune was the cheery chatterbox, Olga; Mr. Zucchi, the sole representative of the original cast, was again Desire; and Mr. Marcoux and Mr. Gianoli were capital as Cirillo and Gretch respectively.

A creature named Agamya Guru, who said he came from Kashmir and claimed to be "The Holy Man of the East" and further had the audacity to assert that he was worshipped and revered throughout India, and was an old personal friend of Max Muller, has just been sentenced to "four months hard" for indecent assaults on two English girls. His dodge was to advertise for typewriters and when applicants turned up to subject them to outrage, helped thereto by five "disciples" male and female, who herded with him in a house in Hampstead. I had the curiosity to attend at the Marylebone Police Court on Wednesday and was just in time to hear him sentenced. He is over sixty, if a day, a heavy-jowled, bloated, and as lecherous and depraved looking a scoundrel as the worst bazaar in Calcutta could produce. His get up in huge crimson turban and rainbow hued choga was a curiosity in costume for a Hindu ascetic as he claimed to be. Of course, he is an imposter, equally, of course, he deserved much more than he got, but we don't appreciate the enormity of this class of crime as you do in the East worse luck!

Colonel Sir Harold Deane, K.C.S.I., Chief Commissioner and Agent to the Governor-General in the N. W. P., died in London, on Tuesday, after a serious operation. Sir Harold was the son of the late Rev. Henry Deane, rector of Hintlesham, Suffolk, and was in his 55th year. He began his military career in the 54th Foot in 1874, and first saw active service in the Afghan campaign of 1879-80, in which he served with the 1st Punjab Cavarly. He took part in the actions of Ahmed Khel and Urzoo, was mentioned in despatches, and received the medal with clasp. After serving some time as Punjab Commissioner, he was appointed Chief Political Officer with the Chitral Relief Force, for which he was nominated C.S.I., and awarded the medal with clasp. He remained at Malakand as Resident for Dir, Swat, and Chitral until 1897, when he served with distinction in the North-West Frontier disturbances. Sir Harold was Political Resident in Kashmir in 1900 and 1901, and in the latter year received his appointment as Commissioner in the North-West Provinces. He was gazetted K.C.S.I. in 1906. He married, in 1880, Mary Gertrude, daughter of Major-General John Roberts, of the Indian Staff Corps.

The Vagrant.

The chief clerk of the U. S. Post Office Department several months ago sent to all the postmasters in the country a list of questions asking for certain information to be used in the preparation of the Government Blue Book, which is published every two years. One of the questions in the list was:—

"What are you marital relations?"

The object of this particular question was to find out whether the postmasters are married, single, widowed or divorced. But some of the rural postmasters did not understand, and Mr. Chance naturally received several answers in which the persons addressed endeavoured to give a clear and lucid explanation of the status of their married life.

One postmaster said his domestic affairs were "fine and dandy."

Another not so fortunate replied, "Fairly middling."

A third filled in the blank space with one word, "H—ll."

A RECORD OTTER HUNT.

Look! If that's not the spur of an otter, I'm a Dutchman! exclaimed my friend M. to me one morning as we were jogging along the bank of the Klip River on our Basuto ponies after an impromptu game of polo on the ground which to-day, I believe, forms the playing-field of the Rand Polo Club.

In a moment I was out of the saddle and examining the patch of grey mud which my companion had pointed out to me. Yes; there could be no doubt about it, the pad-prints were those of Master Lusta and upon searching the banks of the stream a little lower down we discovered the half-eaten remains of a yellow-fish, which had probably afforded him a breakfast that very morning for the fish had not been out of the water many hours.

"Tell you what, D.," went on M., as he puffed out a great cloud of rank Boer tobacco smoke until the pure morning air simply reeked of "burned rags," "we'll get together a bobbery pack, and have an otter hunt; I'm simply wasting to see a little hound work of some sort."

I agreed that the suggestion was excellent, but wondered the while where the material for the pack was to come from.

"Oh, don't worry your noble head on that score," remarked M., as we cantered across a wide stretch of veldt which lay between the river and our bungalow. "We'll go into town this evening, and if we can't borrow dogs, we'll steal 'em" (he spoke quite seriously), "and if we can't get together a pack by borrowing and stealing, hanged if we won't buy up the Dog's Home. I saw the catchers net some devilish vermint-looking curs in Commissioner Street yesterday, and you may bet that old pony of yours against a tickey" (3d)—"you won't stand to lose much, for he's twenty years if he's a day—that there will be no lack of dogs awaiting their turn in the lethal chamber, poor devils," rattled on my mercurial companion as he cast a covetous leer at my pony, Bushman, who, although somewhat aged, was as good and clever a little animal as ever looked through a bridle.

"I should hate to offer you old Bushman for thirty any way, M., for I know you'd jump at the offer, and I should lose the best pony I ever threw leg across."

That same evening M. and myself rode into the golden city, and having dined at the club, my friend proceeded to try and borrow a dog from every man with whom he had a "nodding acquaintance."

"Well, Ive got a pointer," or "You may have my setters," were the kind of replies made to M.'s cool request. But in most cases the owners of the dogs would, after consenting to lend their setter, pointer, or retriever, as the case might be, ask, "What do you want the dog for—korhaan?" "No, otters." "Otters be d——d, you can't have him for that kind of game," and away would go the dog's owner in a huff. We—or rather M.—managed to "bag" two and a half couple from different members of the club, namely, a bull-terrier (blind of an eye), one Irish and two fox terriers, an ancient spaniel (he went on three legs by choice), and a powerful skewald animal, of doubtful breed, which was promptly christened "Window-shutter."

After leaving the club we visited the stables of the principal horsedealer in the place, who promised to bring as many dogs as he could commandeer to the "meet," which, by the way, was to take place at a certain small hostelry on the bank of the Klip River, the hour of five o'clock being fixed, for, as many of our readers are aware, the South African veldt holds practically no scent after the heavy night dews have been dissipated by the hot rays of the sun.

Bidding the worthy merchant in horse-flesh "good evening," we walked down Commissioner Street until the Dogs' Home was reached. It was now nearly nine o'clock, and the Dutchman in charge of the Home did not appear over-pleased at being disturbed by a couple of "verdammte rooineks." A golden disc, bearing the effigy of Oom Paul, gave us the entree to the kennels, however, and ten minutes later we were being towed up the principal streets of Johannesburg in the wake of a spotted weasel-like Kaffir dog and a powerful half-bred Airedale terrier, which subsequently proved herself to be the best of the whole pack.

"We'll call this a day's work, D., for I'm about tired of dog-catching for one evening,' said my companion, as we discussed a long schooner of iced lager beer before we set out on our ponies homewards. The idea of calling it a day's work appealed to me amazingly, for, to tell the truth, I had become heartily sick of the very sight of a dog since the Kaffir cur had started to tow me from the Dogs' Home.

On the evening preceding the important fixture, men of all sorts and sizes, accompanied by dogs of many breeds and colors, from stately mastiffs down to weasel-bodied Kaffir mongrels (pointers, setters, and sporting dogs generally, were conspicuous by their absence), began to turn up at our modest four-roomed bungalow until we were at our wits' end where and how to accommodate them for the night, while the "pack," which was kennelled pro tem in the stables behind, set up a perfect pandemonium, howling and fighting like so many devils incarnate. It is a poor heart that never rejoices, however, and having despatched a couple of natives with a four-wheeled buggy to bring in all the available chairs (i.e., empty barrels and boxes) from a neighbouring store, M. and I set to work to prepare a huge iron pot of stew from a fine blesbok which my friend had shot a few days before. Our thirteen guests sat in the stoep smoking their after-dinner pipes, and discussing the prospects of sport on the morrow over a glass of Scotch whisky, and M. and myself were placing "shake-downs" for them, when Tom P., the jovial huntsman of the then lately imported pack of English foxhounds, which was kennelled a few miles away, rode up to the bungalow with a couple of old hounds.

"Good evening, gentlemen; the Master's compliments, and he sent old Amazon and Guardsman for you to try: I doubt neither of 'em have ever seen an otter since they were whelped, but they took kindly enough to both jackal and buck," said Tom, before burying his nose in a long sleeve of "Bass."

"It's very good of Mr.—— (M.F.H.), and I hope you will lend us a hand to-morrow, Tom."

"Well, gentlemen, I've only been out with otter-hounds once in my life, and that was a good many years ago; but as it's an off day with me to-morrow, I should be glad to hunt with you, was Tom's reply; and as the nights were fine and dry, he elected to take up his quarters on the stoep that night.

The first bright spears of the sun were beginning to bathe the summits of a distant chain of low-lying kopjes in a golden flood, when old Mamba, our Swazi servant, awoke the slumbering echoes of the bungalow by playing the devil's tatoo on a kettle, saucepan, or other instrument of torture. Very soon every man was out of the blankets, and a general rush was made for the little bathing-place which M. and myself had made by deepening a small willow fringed spruit or brook that ran at no great distance from the bungalow, and which formed our matutinal place of ablution in fair weather and in foul.

It was well that we laid in a goodly store of provisions, for our guests by this time numbered no fewer than twenty-two hungry men, nearly half of whom had either hacked or driven out of Johannesburg long before sunrise, amongst them the wife of the horse-dealer mentioned earlier herein, a keen little Irish sportswoman, who informed us in the richest of brogue, that "Sure if she had a five-pound note for ivery drag she'd seen with the King's it's a warm woman she'd be that day indade."

The expression on Tom P.'s weather-beaten face when we took him round to inspect the "pack" which was playing up merry hades in the stables, would have been worth a "Jew's eye," to Finch Mason, and no fond mother ever hugged her offspring closer in passing through a mob than did honest Tom his couple of aristocratic English foxhounds, when that canine rabble tried to strike up an acquaintance with them. "Ware cur dog, Guardsman." "Come in, Amazon." "Get out, you ugly yaller varmint" (as he took a flying kick at one of the Kaffir dogs which had evidently fallen violently in love with old Amazon). "Dear me, I never set eyes on such a lot o' rag-tail devils in all me born days," cried Tom in dismay, as he whipped off the nondescript "pack" from his beloved hounds. Gad! they were a lot of devils, in very truth, as I, their huntsman, was bound to confess.

No sooner had the noble animals been released from durance vile than two and a half (I stick religiously to hunting technology) of the twelve and a half couple (including the three-legged spaniel started off across the veldt in a bee-line for Johannesburg, while the Kaffir mongrel and his late companion in distress—the half-bred Airedale bitch—commenced a battle royal on the stoep to decide which of them should retain possession of a shoulder of blesbok that had been commandeered from the breakfast-table by the former. With much yelling and cracking of thongs a couple of men galloped off to try and turn the fleeting deserters back. They (the deserters) divided forces, however, and the gallant whippers-in only succeeded in capturing the ancient spaniel which, as before mentioned, carried a hind leg up by choice. No use in crying over spilt milk, or rather sped curs, however, and having coupled what remained of the "pack" with pieces of old reins and rope, off we trotted for Dick Sullivan's saloon, where we found some twenty fresh recruits waiting to be initiated into the art of otter-hunting.

It was now a good half-hour after the appointed time, and away we all started to the river, with the exception of one or two thirsty souls who remained in the bar for a second or third nerve-binder, possibly fearful that the excitement of the sport in hand would prove too much for them.

Just before the bank of the stream was reached a hare sprang from her form in a patch of rank grass, and away across, the veldt she sped with the coupled, yapping curs, scrapping and falling over one another like so many boys in a sack race, in their anxiety to get on terms with Mistress Lepus Carpensis, who, with one lug laid down and the other pricked quietly lopped over the arid plains as though she rather enjoyed the fun. Suddenly the air was rent with, "Ware hare, ye varmints: 'ware riot, dang your blood! Ye ought to know better, ye fools, after all the larning ye had in the old country," etc.

The staid old couple of foxhounds, suddenly seized with the rioting fever of the canine rabble, had—probably for the first time in their lives since puppyhood—broken away from the astonished and outraged huntsman, and across the veldt they raced in the wake of the hare, their deep, bell-like voices almost drowning the yapping of the struggling rabble of cur-dogs.

Still rating and cussing, Tom jumped on to the pony of one of the field, who, owing to a great breadth of beam had been granted permission to ride to "hounds," and off he galloped in pursuit of Amazon and Guardsman, as if his Satanic Majesty was behind him, while the rest of the field—including M. first whip, and myself—laid into the pack with hearty goodwill. At length we had them in hand again, and five minutes later the banks of the river were being drawn; one-half, led by the Airedale, working the right and the other half the left-hand side. For perhaps forty minutes nothing wearing fur or hair was moved, then suddenly one of the Kaffir dogs made a rush into a patch of scrub that grew down to the water-edge, and out bolted a meerkat, which led the pack a merry burst across the veldt for quite a minute-and-a-half's duration. Then with a flirt of his tail, as though to wish his pursuers "goodbye," he disappeared into his burrow, which ran for many feet under the surface of the hard-baked earth. Some little time was wasted in getting the pack to the water again, but finally they were whipped back to draw for the legitimate quarry, the Airedale, after feathering round a growth of dry rushes for a few moments, gave a whimper, and away along the bank she drove, with the whole canine rabble—barring the foxhounds, which, possibly mindful of the trouble they had already got into through running the hare, refused to work a yard of the trail, but kept religiously at their huntsman's heels—yowling and yapping for all they were worth.

The fun was fast and furious while it lasted, and the manner in which the man of weight rode to the flying pack and wheezingly cheered it on—in spite of antbear earths, meerkat holes, and other horse-traps, with which in parts the veldt was honeycombed—was refreshing to see. "Hounds" very soon came to a check, however, at the junction, a narrow but very deep spruit of the river.

Thinking it not improbable that the otter—I knew the quarry to be an otter from the working of the dogs—had taken to the smaller stream, I took the Airedale bitch and half-a-dozen of the most likely of the mongrels (amongst them the "Kaffirs," which, although wild as hawks), possessed wonderful scent, a short distance along the spruit, while M. tried forward with the remainder.

The old bitch proved herself a rattling good worker, and along under the shelving bank she hunted until, with a whimper, she was on the trail again and going hell-for-leather, with the others close in her wake.

With a "halloa" to the rest of the field—only three of whom had accompanied me—I "footed it" for all I knew to keep on terms with my "flying hounds," which ran eagerly enough, and at a pace which proclaimed a breast-high scent.

Suddenly a loud "hien gaze," from a youngster whose long legs enabled him to pass every one on the field, caused me to put on a spurt, and looking forward I saw a fine otter running under the far bank of the stream, about three hundred yards ahead of the leading dog.

In spite of the pitiable pack of mongrels I was hunting, every nerve in my body quivered with excitement; and how I longed for a few couples of good English otter-hounds at that moment. On and on ran the gallant animal, now on the level veldt, now under the steep bank of the narrow waterway; and now those weasel-barrelled Kaffir mongrels begin to press him, and the old Airedale bitch is no laggard. The spruit widens out, and the quarry takes to the water. The dogs are puzzled at the sudden disappearance of their game, enabling M. and a few of the field to bring up the rest of the yapping, howling pack. "Chain the stream below! there he blows!" cries the leggy youngster, who comes rushing towards us pointing to a chain of air-bubbles which rise to the surface from below the turbid stream. The youngster, a West-countryman, and no novice at the sport in hand, is right. The otter finds he has made a mistake in leaving the main stream, and is trying to double back to it under cover of water.

In a moment half a dozen of us were up to our breasts in water, hand in hand, and with our feet moving from side to side to stop the gallant amphibian's passage. The motley pack are now yapping all round us, some on the bank and some in the water, amongst the latter the three-legged spaniel.

"Look out! here he comes!" shouts some one from the bank, as a volume of bubbles rise to the surface, not a dozen yards away.

"Gad! he touched my leg!" cries the centre man of the chain, in a half-scared manner. A great swirl of churned-up water as the otter, frightened by the moving legs, turns, tells us that the "middle-link" does not err in the statement.

"There he blows!" and begad old three-legs has him, but the old spaniel's collared him too far astern, and the otter, turning, fastens on to his canine enemy, and the pair disappear from view into the oozy depths of the stream.

"For Heaven's sake, save my dog!" cries the weighty horseman, as he rolls himself out of the saddle, and commences to run up and down the bank, as though debating within himself as to whether he should dive into the spruit and rescue gallant old "three-legs."

Suddenly the leggy youngster jumped into the stream, and as the tip of the otter's "pole" appeared above the surface of the water, he had it; and the next moment, with a great swing, both dog and otter lay gaping on the veldt, for neither had released their hold, and both were too done to show further fight.

It was not without a feeling of repugnance that I saw my bobbery pack worry the last spark of life out of their gallant quarry, but were I to say that I did not enjoy my first and only otter-hunt on a South African Klip River I should scarcely speak the truth.

KENNEL QUERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Can you or any of your readers inform me if the following facts are possible—: A pure Fox-terrier bitch had as a kennel companion a Spaniel dog. Before the bitch came on heat the Spaniel dog was removed, and the Fox-terrier bitch was subsequently lined by a pure Fox-terrier. The resulting litter was found to contain a Spaniel strain, and it is said that the reason that this Spaniel strain appeared was owing to the fact that this Spaniel dog had been her constant companion and playmate, though he had had no sexual intercourse whatever with her. Is this possible?

and shooting parties should never go without a few jars of LEMCO. They take up very little room, and most sportsmen would no more think of leaving them behind than setting out without ammunition. Not only is LEMCO exceedingly useful for soups, entrées, and gravies, but it is a fine medical comfort, and a splendid fever preventive and restorative.

Absolutely pure and safe, and will keep for any time.

"The Globe."

Anything that tends towards the humane side of the veterinary surgery is especially acceptable, and it is therefore a gratifying fact that a special kind of absorbent dressing for curbs, splints, etc., is quite taking the place of the cruel ancient custom of "firing" horses. Particularly among jumpers not 25 per cent. are absolutely sound; in fact "legs" are the main trouble of trainers. No better proof of the advantages and efficacy of the newest system is the case of Engineer, who broke down completely and had two terribly bowed tendons. Still by its use he was patched up sufficiently to now be perfectly callous and to have won two sprint races on the flat, and to be jumping hurdles successfully, a task which strains horses' legs and tendons terribly. Another remarkable case was that of Manifesto who was simply cured by such dressings the year he won his last Grand National. Prince Albert's Grand Sefton Steeplechase victory was exactly similarly brought about, but in this case the horse had a scale on his knees half-an-inch thick.

R. Marsh, the King's trainer, was also solely by its use able to avoid recourse to the firing iron, and to get Cynical through two good races despite his knee troubles. There is hardly a trainer of the present day who is not now being won over to the very natural advancement in veterinary surgery in unison with all medical matters pertaining to the human being. Moreover Ebberzine does not cause a horse to lose his hair on the dressed joints and its use cannot be detected afterwards for it does not blister, blemish or in the least arrest the horse's regular work—it is in fact a powerful absorbent, not a vesicant, so that it penetrates into the parts dressed, which no firing iron can possibly reach. It surpasses blisters also inasmuch its use can be continued. It is really remarkable what a very large percentage of knee troubles occur in large horses, much more so than with their tendons pasterns and feet. Mr. E. Cooper-Smith is not unnaturally proud of this product of his practical experience after full 40 years' association with all the chief racing establishments in Great Britain.

"The County Gentleman."

It is always a pleasure to hear of any remedy calculated to alleviate the sufferings of that best friend of man the horse. And in this connection we are pleased to draw attention to Cooper-Smith's "Ebberzine," an excellent absorbent dressing which is now used by all the principal trainers and a large number of hunting men, who find it invaluable for many ailments in horses. *Pass-Cora Powders, too, are an excellent Tonic Astringent for horses' legs, and strengthens strained tendons and ligaments, besides bracing up weak legs.

"Sporting Times."

In respect of Sore Shins I hear that Mr. Cooper-Smith's absorbent dressing "Ebberzine" has been used with most beneficial results, and it has the great advantage that its application does not interfere with the work of the horse, and, moreover, leaves no blemish.

"Oldham Standard."

"OF INTEREST TO HORSE OWNERS."

Ebberzine, a special kind of absorbent dressing, is quite taking the place of "firing horses," and has been the means of several remarkable cures.

"Chilian Times."

Ebberzine and Pass-Cora have recently attracted a good deal of attention in this country and are already used in the chief racing stables and by many members of the Valparaiso Polo Club this season, one of whom by use of the Pass-Cora Powders was able to play a pony all through the season that he had hitherto despaired of keeping sound. The few trainers in Chili that have already tried Ebberzine are delighted with it, and have been anxiously awaiting fresh consignments ordered out from England. Everyone who keeps horses in Chili should give these two really famous remedies a trial and we are certain they will not regret it.

"The Badminton Magazine," April 1908.

"When a veterinary Surgeon produces Testimonials from Mr. Gwyn Saunders Davies, Col. Hall Walker, Mr. Arthur Yates, Capt. L. H. Jones, Mr. George Thursby, Richard Marsh, Sam Darling, W. Nightingale, Joseph Cannon and others who are universally recognised as masters of their profession, the articles referred to need no further recommendation. This is the case with Mr. E. Cooper-Smith's dressings 'Ebberzine' and 'Pass-Cora.'"

PASS-CORA.

The Famous Tonic Astringent Lotion.

Pass-Cora Powders make a Tonic Astringent (bracing) and Antiseptic Lotion and should always be used in the FIRST stage of Sprains to Ligaments and Tendons. Excellent for Filled Legs, Weak Legs Windgalls, and Fleshy Legs, and cures Chafes, Collar Wounds, Sore Backs, Sore Shoulders and Wounds and Cuts of all descriptions It is invaluable for after playing on hard ground, keeps the legs from swelling, makes them hard and cures bruises.

FOR DOGS.

It speedily allays Skin Irritation, cures Sores, Mange, Ecxema, etc, and strengthens Weak Legs.

Price 1/- (in England) per Powder or in boxes of 1-dozen. 11/6, with full directions.

EBBERZINE.

The Celebrated Powerful Absorbent Dressing.

Does not stop work or leave any blemish.

Ebberzine produces a good scurf and does not blister Its action, unlike that of blisters, can be kept up since as soon as the scurf is off it can be applied again and again till the part has been absorbed It is a speedy cure for Sore Shins, and should be used immediately they are detected; also it is the very best absorbent that has ever been known for Splints, Spavins, Ringbones, all Bony Enlargements (especially in the knees), Curbs, Thoro'pins and Capped Hocks, and for chronic Thickening of Tendons and Ligaments (in the FIRST stages of Thickening of Tendons and Ligaments use Pass-Cora Lotion). Ebberzine is also an excellent dressing for Sore Throats, Injured Muscles, Fluids under the Skin, and for arresting the growth of Side Bones, and for all ill-conditioned wounds is far superior to ordinary caustic Ebberzine should always be used after Broken Knees to take away the thickening.

Price in bottles, with full directions, 4/9, 8/9, 12/9 (England).

THE TURF.

ALEXANDRA PARK.

THANKS to the efforts of the executive during the drought, and the early morning deluge, the going at Alexandra Park on Saturday was in capital order, and fields panned out well. After such a week as the First July, backers and layers were well content to leave the scene to the Saturday half-holiday people, and the attendance after all fell very short of last year's muster, though a goodly company filled the members' enclosure. Details:—

APPRENTICE PLATE—Of 100sovs. 1¼ mile and 110 yards.

NOTTINGHAM.

Sunday night's rain had a beneficial effect upon the Colwick Park course, which next day rode very well indeed considering the sixteen days' drought. Trainers with no misgivings upon that score, sent their horses in fair numbers with the result that fields ruled of average strength. For the opening day the crowd that visited the park was far more numerous than usual, especially in the minor enclosures, and there were several hard-fought out finishes to lend interest to the day's proceedings. Details:—

A Remarkable Book ON THE Preservation of Health.

The French have a particularly happy phrase which, literally translated, means "The Joy of Living." It conjures up in the mind's eye a picture of buoyant health and happiness which appeals with particular force to the jaded Anglo-Indian. Yet there is no earthly reason why the residents in the Tropics should not share that exhilaration of well-being with our sprightly Gallic friends.

That is exactly what a physician long resident in India now comes forward to show in a timely and fascinating publication with the very tempting title "How to keep well in India," a title that will find a sympathetic echo in every heart from Calcutta to Bombay and from Peshawar to Madras.

How to keep well in India is so easy, too, if you only know how. And this the doctor proceeds to tell us in such a breezy style that after reading it we feel that we possess the master key to health.

The author plunges right into his subject by first telling us frankly that many make the fatal mistake of attempting to regulate life on the European plan. There is hope and cheer in the declaration that "it is absurd to suppose that the European cannot live and enjoy fe in the Tropics."

After the quaint paradox that "your stomach is only half a stomach in India," he dwells upon the necessity for supplying the stomach with something rich in that element which goes to build up the nerve health and without which there can be no bodily health, viz., phosphorus. And it is equally essential, the writer says, "that we should supply this substance in an easily digestible form, for the stomach is, as we have heard, a low-power one."

"It is here," declares this medical authority, "the tonic food called Sanatogen comes in as an aid to diet. It is so easily digestible that patients in the acute stage of enteric fever are constantly being fed on it, and it administers the vitalising substance upon which the vital forces actually depend, and in such a manner that the hungry tissues can seize upon them and adapt them to their various needs."

There is the solution of the whole problem. And then a grave note of warning is sounded by this expert. Digestive disorders are the frequent forerunners of enteric fever and dysentery. "In this connection," says the doctor, "it must never be forgotten that we live not on what we eat but on what we absorb."

After pointing out the special milk dangers in India, he says:—"In Sanatogen we have a substance which is milk and yet is better than milk. Milk," he observes, "consists roughly of Casein and water. The Casein or nitrogenous part is made the basis of this new nerve food Sanatogen, which is almost universally recognised by medical men as the scientific food."

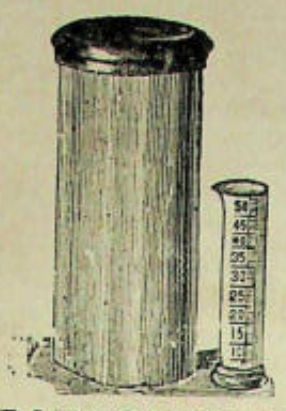
"In Sanatogen," he goes on to say, "we have 95 per cent. of Casein combined with 5 per cent. of phosphorus, the combination supplying the most powerful known substance for both stimulating and feeding the nerves."

He proves conclusively that with its high nutritive value Sanatogen forms at once an almost perfect and complete diet for the low-power system of the average Anglo-Indian.

He quotes, amongst others, the testimony of the famous Dr. Ewald, of the University of Berlin, who declared after an extensive series of experiments with enteric patients treated with Sanatogen that: "The inference to be drawn from our experiments is that Sanatogen, on account of its ready absorption and its perfectly non-irritant character, may be used with great advantage for increasing the nutritive value of a given diet in all cases of physical weakness, as well as in the acute stages of all those maladies accompanied by rise of temperature, and particularly in enteric fever."

His graphic pen brings home to us most forcefully how Sanatogen is a better tonic than alcohol: how it is indispensable in low fever, Dysentery, Malarial Fevers, and he concludes with some most profitable advice which every Anglo-Indian should read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest.

His points are pregnant with significance. To take only one of the many rich nuggets contained in this gold mine of information: "Don't be conquered by the debility which supervenes on most tropical ailments and allow yourself to drift into the 'interesting invalid' condition; you may be interesting to yourself but you will be but a bore to others."



And then he goes right on to tell us how to shake off the deadly debility.

"How to keep well in India" is absorbingly interesting throughout: plain, straightforward, and to the point. It should be in the hands of all desirous of knowing how to get well and keep well.

A limited number of specimen copies of this interesting booklet will be distributed free of charge and can be obtained from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO., CALCUTTA, who also stock Sanatogen.

On Wednesday we looked to be in for a regular soaking, wet day, as the morning drizzle strengthened into a downpour which seemed like lasting. Between one and two o'clock the rain ceased, and the sky cleared, but when racegoers had got together the mist thickened to windward, and the wind lashed the rain across the course again, fortunately from the back of the stands. The attendance necessarily suffered, the prospects of a wet day keeping many intending visitors at home. Details:—

ROWING.

HENLEY REGATTA.—I wired you last Saturday the results of the finals the day before. It now only remains to give a few more particulars. The heat was intense, a light breeze off the Berks shore being almost imperceptible. There was a splendid attendance, and the scene on the course was brilliant. The weather beat all records, the nearest approach being at the regatta of 1887.

The programme was made up of the eight finals, and three splendid races were witnessed. Before lunch Magdalen won the Stewards' Cup, as expected, but London gave them a great race to Fawley, and but for hitting the piles just after would probably have got closer. The Magdalen crew was neat and fast, and was identical with the four that won the Visitors' and Wyfold last year.

Christ Church beat Eton in the Grand fairly comfortably, this being the first victory of "the house" in the big event. Eton lacked fire, and were plainly feeling the effects of their five previous races during the Regatta.

A magnificent struggle for the Ladies' Plate roused great excitement. Jesus and New were in opposition, and the latter went off at a tremendous pace. Jesus got on terms just after passing Fawley, and, rowing in great form, won by three-quarters of a length. The victory of Jesus saved Cambridge from drawing a blank this year.

After lunch Thames led off by beating their old London rivals in the Wyfolds. London steered very erratically, but Thames were undoubtedly the better crew.

Alexander McCulloch won the Diamond Sculls, as expected, but Stuart gave him a great race for a mile. McCulloch was the runner-up last year, and now Captain Darell has retired he is undoubtedly the best sculler we have. He will represent England in the Olympic sculling.

The Thames Cup final produced another magnificent race between two Oxford colleges, Wadham and the Christ Church second boat, who were stroked by the two lightest strokes rowing at the Regatta. There was nothing in it for a mile; then Wadham drew out and won by a bare length. This is the first Wadham success at Henley since 1849.

The Christ Church pair won the Goblets easily, and as a grand finale Magdalen brought off a double event by winning the Visitors' Cup with the same four that won the Stewards' earlier in the day. They created a new record for the former event, their time—7mins. 30secs.—being 7secs. better than the previous best. Oxford did splendidly this year, and won six events out of eight, counting McCulloch as an Oxonian. Details:—

Christ Church went away with 42 strokes in the first minute to Eton's 41, and at the top of the Island had their canvas in front. The "Boys" hung on manfully, and Christ's Church had failed to increase their lead at the quarter mile. "House" went away near the Farm, and had half a length in hand at the half-mile. Between this point and Fawley—time, 3mins. 26secs. they had added another half-length. The "Boys" were beginning to show the effects of the hard work, but, nevertheless, kept pluckily at their task. They spurted near the mile, and went up slightly, but the "House" were rowing comfortable, and finished one and a half lengths ahead in 7mins. 10secs.

DIAMOND CHALLENGE SCULLS.

Bucks Station—A. McCulloch, Leander Club, 12st 5lb 1
Berks Station—A. A. Stuart, Kingston R. C., 10st 8lb 2

Stuart quickly gained the lead, pulling a few quick strokes, the record being 11 for the quarter, 20 for the half and 33 for full minute, McCulloch's figures were 10, 18, 33, but his strokes were rather more powerful. Stuart steered very closely to the piles up the Island, but never actually touched them. At the quarter-mile the Kingston man was leading by half a length, but McCulloch was going up fast over the next quater-mile, was leading by a quater of a length at the half-mile, and was ahead at Fawley, reached in four minutes dead. Both men were sculling well, but from the three-quater-mile post the race was finished, and it was merely a question as to how much the Leander man would lead by. He won easily in 8min. 25sec.

Each crew went off at the same rate of striking 37 to the minute, but Magdalen steered rather badly at first. They, however got a lead of half a length at the quarter-mile, but Jesus had taken a little out of them at the half-mile. Fawley was reached in 3mins 41secs. The Oxford four went ahead fast, and there was a length and a quarter clear at the mile, Jesus coming along in the wash of the Magdalen boat, which won easily in 7mins. 30sec.— a record for the Visitors' Cup.

SWIMMING.

THE THAMES CHAMPIONSHIP.—The long-distance swimming championship from Kew to Putney was won last Saturday by Springfield, of Australia, Radmilovic, the previous holder, being second. The race took place in wretched weather, the rain falling in torrents, while the lightning flashed in a terrible manner. It was so obvious to the spectators a long way from the finish as to who would win, that a great deal of the interest was taken out of the race.

Of the thirty-four entries for the perpetual challenge cup presented by the late Mr. J. Innes, thirty started on the journey from Kew to Putney.

H. Taylor, of the Chadderton S.C., before the start was the favourite choice for first place, and he, F. E. Beaurepaire, and Springfield, of the Valley Club, Brisbane, Queensland, soon singled themselves out. Springfield 400 yards from the start took the lead, followed by Taylor and Radmilovic, the latter being twenty yards behind Taylor. At the Polytechnic Boat House Springfield led Beaurepaire by two yards, Taylor being third.

At the Queen's Head Hotel Taylor commenced to overhaul the leaders and passed Beaurepaire, but the pace set by Springfield was much too strong for him. Fifty yards above the White Hart Hotel Taylor was compelled to give up, having cut his knee.

At Barnes Bridge Springfield had increased his lead of Beaurepaire to eight yards, Radmilovic, eighty yards away, being third, followed by Judd, Darnton, Booth, Monk, Knight, Savage, Warren, and Furber.

At Chiswick Eyot Springfield had increased his lead to 40 yards, Beaurepaire being second, and Radmilovic 100 yards behind, third. At this time Radmilovic seemed to be having a bit of a bad time, while, Springfield, who was swimming superbly, gradually increased his lead, just below the West End Rowing Association's headquarters. Beaurepaire had to give up owing to a bad stitch.

After this Radmilovic seemed to improve and commenced to make up ground, but this was only for a time, and after a few minutes Springfield commenced to go away again, and finishing with a strong, steady stroke, won by just over 200 yards, his time for the journey being 1h. 10min. 57sec. His time at the different points were: Grove Park, 6min. 45sec.; Ship, 13min. 45sec.; Chiswick Church, 34min. 13sec.; Hammersmith Bridge, 47min. 37 2-5sec.; Harrod's, 51min. 19sec.; Waldens, 57min. 29sec.

The second man to arrive was last year's winner, Radmilovic, whose time was 1h. 12min. 42sec., Judd being third in 1h. 17min. 37sec.; Savage fourth, 1h. 17min. 58sec.; Darton fifth, 1h. 18min. 48sec.; Knight sixth, 1h. 19min. Booth seventh, 1h. 20min.; Warren eighth, 1h. 20min. 2sec.; Monk ninth, 1h. 21min. 31sec.; and Furber tenth, 1h. 22min. 25sec.

ANOTHER CHANNEL FAILURE.—Wolffe's latest attempt at the Channel swim last Monday, ended, as all previous attempts, with the exception of Captain Webb's, have ended, in failure. He was forced to leave the water when but a mile and a half from the French coast, after having been thirteen and three-quarter hours in the water.

At eight minutes past four in the morning, Wolffe, who seemed in the pink of condition, entered the water from the South Foreland.

He was accompanied by the yacht Sea Wolfe, which carried a considerable party, including doctors and several well-known swimmers, and her skipper, Captain Birchfield, was piloting Wolffe till within a few miles of the French shore, where it was arranged that Pilot Duteste, who has a splendid knowledge of the French coast, should take up his duties.

At 10-45, still swimming strongly, he was eight and a half miles out in the direct line for France.

At intervals other swimmers took the water and swam with him, and from the Sea Wolfe came the enlivening strains of the bagpipes.

The next dispatch was at 12-15. It announced that Wolffe was then in mid-Channel and swimming strongly.

The weather conditions still remained magnificent, and Wolffe said that he was quite warm, though the water temperature was low.

At 2 P.M. it was reported that Wolffe had continued to make splendid progress, and was two-thirds of the way across.

The heat, however, had become intense, and the swimming had been compelled to wear goggles, but he showed no signs of exhaustion.

When about a mile and a half from the French shore he met the full force of the outflowing tide, and, as despite his efforts he was carried back into the Channel, he reluctantly relinquished the attempt and left the water.

ATHLETICS.

THE A. A. A. CHAMPIONSHIPS.

THE Amateur Athletic Association's forty-third annual championship meeting was held on the 4th instant at the Stadium. The attendance, comparatively small at first, gradually grew to upwards of 22,000, and among those who witnessed an afternoon's magnificent sport were the Crown Prince of Sweden and Prince Albert of Wales. The weather, although overcast, was dry until near the close of the sports, when rain fell heavily for a few minutes.

With a record entry of 254, including many of the British, American, Canadian, South African, Swedish, and New Zealand representatives for the Olympic Games, the championship meeting was of more importance than any which had before been held. Although only one champion, T. R. Nicholson, the hammer thrower, was unable to defend his title, only one, viz., Con Leahy, in the high jump, retained his honours. Some fine performances were accomplished during the afternoon, but the best was undoubtedly that accomplished by S. P. Gillies, of the New York A.C., one of the American Olympic team, who, throwing from a seven-foot circle, won the hammer thrown at 164ft. 5½in. The British record was, previously 163ft. 4in. by J. J. Flanagan, accomplished from a nine-foot circle, in the championship of 1900 at Stamford Bridge. Gillis, it might be mentioned, is Canadian born.

Another Kanuck who performed splendidly was Bob Kerr, the sprint champion of Canada, who will represent the Dominion at the forthcoming Olympic Games. He won both the 100 yards, in even time, and the furlong championship in hollow fashion, in 22-2/5secs. The last event of the day was the pole jump, and once more success went to the Dominion, E. B. Archibald winning with the best performance accomplished in the championships of 12ft.

Another championship best was the 19mins. 47-1/secs. in which the sturdy little Voigt, of Manchester, won the four miles. In the quarter-mile Halswell, the Scot, regained the honour which he won in 1905 and 1906, but did not defend last year.

W. A. Knyvett, of the Bengal Police, competed in the Hurdles; but was knocked out in his heat. F. B. Prike of Calcutta, who was to have competed in some of the sprints, did not put in appearance. Details:—

100 Yards (no standard).—Final heat; R. Kerr (Canadian Olympic team), 1; R. E. Walker (South African Olympic team), 2; J. W. Morton (holder), West of Scotland Harriers, 3. Won by a yard; a few inches between the next two. Time—10secs.

120 Yards Hurdles (standard, 17secs.).—Final heat: V. Duncker (South African Olympic team), 1; O. Groenings (holder), Polytechnic H., 2; H. St. A. Murray (Pioneer Club, New Zealand, and Polytechnic H.), 3. Duncker defeated the holder after a neck-and-neck race by half a yard. A foot between second and third. Time—16-1/5secs.

220 Yards (No standard).—Final heat: R. Kerr (Canadian Olympic team), 1; L. J. de B. Reed (S.L.H. and L.A.C.), 2; J. P. George (holder), S.L.H., 3. The issue was never in doubt. Kerr won by five yards; a yard divided Reed and George. Time—22-2/5secs.

Quarter of a Mile (standard, 52secs.).—Final heat: Lieutenant W. Halswell (Edinburgh H. and L.A.C.), 1; E. H. Montague (holder), Surrey A.C., and E. H. Ryle (Cambridge University A.C. and L.A.C.) dead-heated for second place. Halswell went away eighty yards from the tape and won easily by six yards. Time—49-2/5secs.

Half-mile (standard, 2mins. 1sec.).—Final heat: T. H. Just (Cambridge University A.C. and L.A.C.), 1; J. R. Fairbairn-Crawford (holder), M.C.C. and West of Scotland H., 2; J. W. Monument (Darlington Harriers), 3. Just led throughout and beat the holder by eight yards. Time—1min. 58-1/5secs.

One Mile (standard, 4mins. 30secs.).—H. A. Wilson (Hallamshire Harriers), 1; J. E. Deakin (Herne Hill Harriers), 2; F. A. Knott (South London H.), 3. G. Butterfield (holder), Darlington Harriers, took the lead about 120 yards from home, but Wilson came with a splendid spurt and won by ten yards from Deakin, who had drawn away from Butterfield. The latter, who was passed by Knott, walked in about sixth. Time—4mins. 20-1/5secs.

Two Miles Walk (Standard, 15mins.).—G. E. Larner (Brighton and County H.), 1; E. J. Webb (Herne Hill H.), 2; R. Harrison (holder, North Shields), 3. Larner took the lead in the second lap. His first mile occupied 6mins. 51-2/5secs., and he eventually won in 13mins. 58-2/5secs., as against Webb's 14mins. 5-2/5secs.

Four Miles (Standard, 21mins.).—E. R. Voigt (Manchester A.C.), 1; A. J. Robertson, (Birchfield H.; A. E. Wood (Essex Beagles), 3. A. Duncan (holder), Salford Harriers, was leading at two miles in 9min. 50-2/5secs. Wood led when the bell rang. Shortly afterwards Voigt put on a grand spurt which took him quickly to the front, and, finishing at top speed, he won by thirty yards. Ten yards separated second and third. Time—19mins. 47-1/5secs.

Two Miles Steeplechase (No standard).—R. Noakes (Sparkhill, H.), 1; A. Russell (Thomson-Houston A.C.), 2; W. Grantham (Salford H.), 3; J. C. English (holder), Manchester A.C., never looked dangerous. Russell led most of the way, but was closely attended by Noakes, who showed a great turn of speed in the run home from the last hurdle and won by five yards. Time—10mins. 35secs.

High Jump (Standard, 5ft. 7in.).—Con Leahy (holder), Dublin, 5ft. 11in., 1; A. Hedenlund (Swedish Olympic team), 5ft. 10in., 2; O. Groenings (Polytechnic H.), and W. C. B. Henderson (Oxford University A.C., and L.A.C.) tied at 5ft. 9in. for third.

Long Jump (Standard, 20ft.).—W. H. Bleaden (Oxford University A.C.), 22ft. 3½in., 1; D. Murray (holder, Dublin County H.), 21ft. 8½in., 2; Lieutenant J. H. Pattison (1st Essex Regiment), 21ft. 2in., 3.

Pole Jump (Standard, 10ft.).—E. B. Archibald (Canadian Olympic team), 12ft., 1; B. Soderstrom (holder, Swedish Olympic team), 11ft. 10in., 2. A. de Petrofsky (Racing Club de Bruxelles) and C. Silverstand (Swedish Olympic team) tied at 10ft. for third.

Putting the Weight (Standard, 36ft.).—Denis Horgan (Irish A.A.), 44ft. 7in., 1; T. Kirkwood (holder, Bellahouston Harriers), 43ft. 11¾in., 2; H. K. Wieslander (Swedish Olympic team), 39ft., 10½in., 3.

Throwing the Hammer (Standard, 110ft.).—S. P. Gillies (New York A.C.), 164ft. 5¾in., 1; Denis Horgan (Irish A.A.), 131ft. 3in., 2; R. H. Lindsay Watson (Cambridge University A.C.), 110ft. 10½in., 3. T. R. Nicholson (holder), West of Scotland H., did not compete.

on the New Zealand Club's course at Byfleet on Saturday the 4th instant. He beat Mr. H. J .F. Badeley, clerk, House of Lords, by 12 holes up and 11 to play—the easiest win in the history of the competition.

Mr. Partington played rather above 9 handicap form, and Mr. Badeley, giving his opponent five strokes in each 18 holes, never had a chance.

Mr. Oswald Partington, who had never previously appeared in the final of the tournament, is member for the High Peak division of Derbyshire. He was born in 1872, and thirty years later he married the Hon'ble Clara Isabel Murray, daughter of Lord Elibank.

Mr. Badeley, who ran for Oxford against Cambridge in the Inter-'Varsity sports ten years ago, won the competition in 1901 and again reached the final in 1906, when he was beaten by Mr. F. H. Newnes, M.P.

PROFESSIONAL TOURNAMENT.—The feature of Wednesday's play in the Southern Qualifying Section of the News of the World £240 tournament, on the Bushey Hall Club's links, was the remarkable recovery of Harry Vardon in the second round.

Play was over 36 holes, and at the end of the first eighteen holes Vardon seemed to stand a poor chance of being among the fourteen players to qualify for the match play stage of the competition, which takes place on the Mid-Surrey Club's course on the 6th, 7th and 8th October. His score of 79 was six below the leading return, and there were twenty-four competitors above him.

A rather curious incident occurred during Vardon's second round. Under the impression that he was out of bounds at the ninth, Vardon played another ball, but on his caddie going for the first ball it was seen that it was within bounds. The caddie had picked up the ball, but Vardon, in rather a dilemma, replaced it, and continued playing with it.

After much discussion it was resolved that Vardon would have to be penalised two strokes, but, this notwithstanding, he qualified.

Arnaud Massy played splendid golf for his rounds of 75 and 69. About his only piece of luck was at the fifth hole in the second round. There he topped his second shot, but ran through a bunker, reached the green with his mashie, and holed a long putt for a 4. It is a remarkable fact that going out he took only one putt on each green except the eighth. There, after getting out of bounds from his second shot, he registered a 5. Coming home he was again out of bounds at the twelfth, and he required three putts at the fifteenth, but a round of 69 represented wonderful golf and beat Braid's competition record for the course by two strokes. The figures were:—

Out	...	4 4 3 3 4 4 4 5 4—34
Home	...	3 4 5 5 4 5 4 3 2—35—69

Massy secured the special prize of £10 for the best score for thirty-six holes.

Nobody played better through the green than Tom Vardon, who did two 73's. His second shots up to the hole were faultless, but he had no luck in the putting. He did not get down a single putt of any length, although he lipped the hole more than once.

Braid, J. H. Taylor and Jack Rowe scored 147. Taylor missed two short putts in the morning. Rowe did his afternoon round in 72, despite the fact that he was twice out of bounds at the eighth hole.

Appended are the scores:

A. Massy, La Boulie	...	73—69=142
Tom Vardon, Sandwich	...	73—73=146
J. Rowe, Royal Ashdown Forest	...	75—72=147

POLO.

THE ROEHAMPTON CUP.—The final on Saturday the 4th instant found the Leopards opposed to the Old Cantabs and the latter had to put up with a beating of 6 goals to 3. Perhaps it was their successful start which put such swing and confidence into the Leopards' work. Before the first change of ponies they were three goals to the good. Captain de Crespigny hit their first with a kind of "blaze-into-the-brown" shot, the ball travelling right through the crowd of players. Two minutes later Captain Jenner picked up a well-judged pass from his No. 2, and found the mark with a lofty drive; and just before the bell rang Captain de Crespigny scored again with an exceptionally powerful stroke at long range. He was at the very top of his form on Saturday. In the second period the Leopards once more did most of the pressing, but there was no alteration on the board and the Old Cantabs were gradually improving as they warmed to their work. During the third ten, in fact, they were better together than at any period in the match. The effect was shown in the score, for they were only a goal to the bad at half time, Mr. Buckmaster having accepted a chance offered by a clever centre by Captain Bellville, whilst not long afterwards the latter carried the ball down the field at top pace and left it where Mr. Freake could easily tap it through.

Yet in the second half of the game the Leopards never looked like being seriously threatened. Captain de Crespigny shot their fourth goal; and Mr. Barron, adopting the fatal policy of attempting to meet the ball, let Captain Jenner romp clean away, so that the last-named made the board read 5—2. In the fifth ten, it is true, the Old Cantabs gained a cleverly worked-for goal, Mr. Buckmaster putting the finishing stroke to a fine effort; but in the last period the issue was placed beyond doubt when Captains Jenner and Wilson carried the ball down, and fairly rushed it through. Victory went to what was undoubtedly the better side on the afternoon's play.

Teams:—

LEOPARDS.—Captain L. C. D. Jenner, Captain H. Wilson, Captain C. C. de Crespigny, and the Hon'ble Ivor Guest (back).

OLD CANTABS.—Captain G. E. Bellville, Mr. F. M. Freake, Mr. W. S. Buckmaster, and Mr. E. W. Barron (back).

Umpire:—Mr. G. A. Miller.

TENNIS.

THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP.

E. JOHNSON, the challenger of C. ("Punch") Fairs for the tennis championship of the world and £200 a side, had little chance of victory when the two men entered upon the final stage of their best of thirteen sets on Saturday the 4th instant. The play on the two preceding days of the match had gone so much in favour of Fairs that it was necessary for Johnson to win five sets off the reel, while Fairs needed but of Fairs winning the deciding game after "two all," "three all," "four all," and "five all," were called. Johnson from the outset adopted a hard-hitting game, his attack on the dedans and the grille being so fierce that Fairs never settled down to his usual accuracy of stroke. Details:—

First Game.—Fairs placed the return of the service into the net, and Johnson hit the ball out of court. Then one latter scored off the foot of the tambour and into the grille, and successfully defended chase worse than 3.

Second Game.—After "3 all" Johnson won chases worse than 2 and second gallery.

Third Game.—A straight force, for the dedans by Johnson made the score "30 all." Then Fairs killed under the winning gallery, and Johnson lost chase 4 and 5.

Fourth Game.—After Johnson had found the grille chases last gallery and hazard side better than door were laid down. "Thirty all" was called, and Fairs made consecutive shots into the grille and the winning gallery.

Fifth Game.—"Deuce" was called twice. Fairs twice found the grille, and Johnson won after making good shots off the tambour, and into the winning gallery.

Seventh Game.—Fairs won after being five times at "cantage," "deuce" being called 7 times. "Punch" forced the dedans twice and the grille once, and Johnson the dedans and the winning gallery.

Eighth Game.—Again was "deuce" called seven times, Johnson, who won, successfully attacking the grille twice, and the winning gallery once. Fairs twice found the grille and twice killed the ball under the winning gallery.

Ninth Game.—Fairs led at "40 love," but "deuce" was recorded three times before he won. Johnson boasted into the dedans, and twice scored into the grille, and Fairs last two strokes were into the dedans and the grille.

Tenth Game.—Johnson returned the service, into the dedans, and Fairs found the winning gallery. Then Johnson gained three strokes on the floor.

Eleventh Game.—Fairs killed under the grille, and Johnson found the grille. The latter returned into the net, and with a boast off the main wall Fairs went to within a stroke of the match. Johnson won chase better than two, but Punch killing the ball under the grille, won the game and the set. The sets were:—

Grey marked the match.

OXFORD VS. CAMBRIDGE.—Oxford, by means of her representatives, the Hon'ble C. N. Bruce (Winchester and New College) and R. Walker (Charterhouse and New College), won the doubles tennis match at Lord's yesterday with some ease, ending up a little over an hour's play with 3 sets to 1, or 21 games to 13 to their credit, outplaying and outgeneralling the Cambridge representatives, J. N. Buchanan (Charterhouse and Trinity) and A. de Rothschild (Harrow and Trinity), at all points of the game. The quality of the tennis shown may be judged from the statement that neither of the Oxonians played up to his best form.

With regard to the actual play, it is not necessary to say much. In the first set the Light Blues secured only the third and seventh games, neither finding his form until near the end. Buchanan, however, laid down, chases of "worse than a yard," "better than a yard," and "worse than 2," but the Oxonians generally managed to win these, either on the floor or by successful shots into the dedans. Both of the games which fell to Cambridge were only won after vantage had been called, Buchanan in each case killing the ball by delightful strokes just skimming the net.

The second set went to Cambridge at 6—3, the Oxonians capturing but the first, fifth, and seventh games. Buchanan throughout volleyed well, but a distinguishing feature of his play was the manner in which he returned and generally killed the Oxonians service. Rothschild at this time laid down quite all epidemic of good chases, "better than half a yard" being of the number. But this proved merely a flash in the pan, for with the call of "one set all" the Oxonians began to bestir themselves. As a consequence, the third set provided the best tennis of the afternoon. Oxford won the first game, Cambridge made it one all. The Dark Blues secured the next, but their opponents again made matters equal in the fourth. These last three were all vantage games. Then the Light Blues obtained the lead at 3—2, and again at 4—3, Buchanan doing the work for his partner and himself. Cambridge were now done with, however, and Oxford took the next three games, and with them the set.

The fourth set calls for no comment, Cambridge winning only the fourth game, though through the dogged perseverance of Buchanan all the others were strenuously fought, especially the fifth, in which deuce was called no fewer than four times, and the seventh and last when it was called twice.

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HOUNDS.

Saturday, 18th July.—Glenmorgan Tea Estate 12 noon. A howling gale, thick mist and rain drove in our faces as we approached the bungalow. Needless to say no attempt was made to draw this part of the country! So back we trotted, a long weary three miles to Toda Coffee Shop. Road Shola was drawn blank, but we hoped for better luck in Khed or Wenlock, but were doomed to disappointment. Covert after covert was tried without success, not a jack was there to be seen or found. Hounds feathered on a line now and again only to throw up almost at once. It was not till quite late in the afternoon that they at last touched the line of a jack at the bottom of Rallywood. With a joyful burst of music, the pack moved off at a good pace and led towards Jackal, leaving this on their left they crossed the Krurmund Road and swung to the left along One Tree Hill. Short of Bakie they wheeled to the right and ran into the bottom of Monkey, then to the left over the stream and along the fields below Rugby and away to Dharma Tope, short of which they recrossed the stream and rose the hill to the right, pointing for Kuruthugalli Shola. Hunting well together, they pushed their jack through the top of the Shola left handed, in and out of ravines, down to the bottom and up again. For about an hour and a half they chased him round and round in a circle between Kuruthugalli and Sambur Shola, almost on the same line every time. No sooner had we scrambled our way up to the top, then down we had to come, slipping and sliding only to see the pack rising the hill once more. After about half a dozen laps round the stiffest and roughest country he could find, this wily jack at last succeeded in running hounds out of scent over a well trodden field. It was late and a thick mist coming down, so a start was made for home. It was a hard day on horses. The field was quite a small one.

Monday, 20th July.—Brooklands 7-30 A.M. It was a rough damp morning, a high wind blowing from the south-west. We have had lots of rain, which makes the going very greasy. Brooklands was drawn blank, so we moved off over Treble Crossing up Bagman to Mill's, which was also blank. In Jackal a jack was afoot, and led hounds smartly to Rallywood and there pointed round the right of the hill to Bluegums, short of which he turned right handed and ran along the top of Newmarket to above Point-to-Point Covert. Swinging down righthanded to just above Treble Crossing, he kept along the east side of Bagman and then over the shoulder to the west side, leaving Bluegums and Porlock on his right, to above Sheffield Corner where he ran round the hill and down the left of Sheffield Plantation into Leeds Shola and round to the left into Monkey, which held another jack. The pack split up, one lot going off down the Nunjanad Valley and the other into Bakie. The latter chased their jack through Bakie and Dendron Belt along the hill between Fairlawns and Porcupine, down to the head of the Nunjanad Valley, where they lost him. On coming back to Bakie, the second whip appeared with the rest of the pack. The Master then drew back by Rallywood and Rawlin's Nullah to Lawley's Course. Just below Schmidt's Clump, hounds spoke to a line, which they hunted slowly up on to the ridge to the right of Staircase Shola and down the other side on to the road and disappeared in a thick fog that enveloped the whole country, nothing could be seen or heard of them.

Tuesday, 21st July.—Melkaval Village at 12 noon. This village is situated in the Nunjanad Valley, a little to the south-east of Porcupine Shola. The Master drew down the Valley and found a brace of jack in the swamps below Dharma Tope. The pack got on to the line of the one on the right, which led them up the slope by Kuruthugulli shola on to the ridge at the top. Leaving Middle Bit Shola on their right, they sank the hill, into Pug Pits. Much time was taken up in getting hounds out of this dense shola, which is the haunt of every kind of wild beast. The weather was most unpleasant, thick mist and driving rain, accompanied by a high wind. It was late in the afternoon before we moved off to draw nearer home. Outside Bakie hounds picked up the line of a jack, which led them a merry chase before being run into and killed. The field was quite a small one.

Thursday, 23rd July.—Municipal Crossing at 7-30 A.M. A jack was found on Lawley's Course, swinging lefthanded down the hill he crossed the Sandy Nullah Stream above Gold Mine Crossing and rose the slope of Newmarket. Bending to the right, he took a line through the middle of Rawlin's Nullah and pointed for Bluegums, but skirted the covert righthanded down to the bottom. Here a brace of jack jumping up in front of hounds, the pack split up and had to be stopped. The Master then drew the small covert near the Potato Field in which hounds spoke to a line, and a jack was viewed stealing away up to the road and on into Rallywood. He was pushed through this over the Krurmund Road to the left of Monkey, where hounds ran into and rolled him over in the open. Having broken him up, hounds proceeded to draw along the slopes of Newmarket, along the Sandy Nullah Stream. Just above Gold Mine Crossing, Captain Edwards viewed a jack on the ridge above, the pack was laid on his line as quickly as possible, they went off at a great pace along the top, then tumbled down the west side to the Sandy Nullah Stream, crossing below Schmidt's Clump and keeping to the left of it they rose the hill into Staircase, through which they pushed him out at the top and raced him down back Staircase, into the Devil's Dyke, and on into Yemmakal Shola, where they lost him. The pace was very fast throughout this run and after climbing over the top of Staircase horses had had enough of it.

I. F. A. SHIELD CHALLENGE TOURNAMENT.

Semi-finals.

Rangers vs. Gordons.—These teams met in the semi-final round on the Calcutta ground on the 22nd instant, a poor game ending in favour of the Military. The first half was devoid of score, both goals were visited in turn, the Gordons losing chances with erratic shooting and their splendid defence preventing the Rangers from getting through. After the interval the attacks of the soldiers were rewarded with two goals scored by Foreman and McDougall. The Rangers were unable to respond and were thus beaten by two goals to nil. Teams:—

Rangers.—Margrett, goal; E. Minet and J. B. Minet, backs; Cornish, Cody, and Skempton, half-backs; Davis, Little, Gault, Postence and Cornish, forwards.

Gordons.—Insch, goal; Aitken and Montgomery, backs; Harper, Gallelty and Graham, half-backs; McNaughton, Middleton, Mackay, Foreman and McDougall, forwards.

Referee:—Sergeant Hounsell (C.R.A.)

Customs vs. King's Royal Rifles.—This match on the Dalhousie ground last Friday resulted in a win for the Customs by two goals to nil. The Civilians gave an excellent display. They had the best of the opening round. The Rifles failed to score from a penalty kick and then the Customs got away and L. A. Smith scored the first goal. Even play followed to the interval; on changing ends the Rifles pressed, but the weak and erratic shooting of their forward line let them down on several occasions. Then the Customs once more took up the attack and McCready registered their second goal, the game ending as stated. Teams:—

Customs.—Furtado, goal; Anderson and Goldsmith, backs; Maitland, L. H. Smith and Marsden, half-backs; Echlin, Berkley, McCready, L. A. Smith and Fitzpatrick, forwards.

K. R. Rifles.—Mitchell, goal; Hanson and Evans, backs; Robinson, Jones and Ward, half-backs; Arnold, Maddox, Cahill, McCullock and Pirkering, forwards.

Referee:—Mr. A. R. C. Miller (C.R.A.)

Final.

Gordons vs. Customs.—One of the biggest crowds on record lined the ropes at the final game in this tournament on Saturday last. It was an interesting and even game throughout though play was never brilliant. The result was a win for the Gordons by 2 goals to nil.

The Customs took the offensive at the start, they forced a corner and Berkley shot over and misied a good chance. The Customs continued to attack till play was transferred by Montgomery to mid-field where the halves were prominent on both sides. A foul against the Customs let in Foreman, but his shot was cleared by Furtado. The Customs again pressed and both Smiths put in shots which were disposed of by Insch. Even play for the rest of the half, the interval arriving without score.

On crossing over the Gordons showed improved form. They attacked vigorously, the ball was centered and Anderson in attempting to save headed the ball into his own net. The Customs seemed to loose heart and thereafter their play was considerably below form. McCready lost a good chance of equalising and Gordons pressed for the rest of the game. Hands against Marsden gave the soldiers a penalty kick and Montgomery beat Furtado. Final score: Gordons 2 goals, Customs nil. Teams:—

Gordons.—Insch, goal; Montgomery and Aitkin, backs; Harper, Graham and Spence, half-backs; (Capt.), McDougall, Foreman, McKay, McNaughton and Gallelty, forwards.

Customs.—Furtado, goal; Anderson and Goldsmith, backs; Maitland, L. H. Smith and Marsden, half-backs; Captain Echlins, Berkley, L. A. Smith, McCready and Fischer, forwards.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The final round of the Shield Tournament, played last Saturday, virtually brings to a conclusion one of the dullest football seasons on record and there can be few who will regret the termination of the sodden and stodgy series of games which have characterized this year's competitions. It has been a constant work of agony on the part of "Referee" to find anything interesting to comment on in this column and it is with a sigh of genuine relief that he prepares to lay down his pen and hope for better times in 1909.

When the King's Royal Rifles beat the H.L.I. by 3 goals to 1, a military final was generally anticipated and the odds were inclined to be in favour of the Jubbulpore team. But the Customs refused to be left out of the reckoning and served up another surprise by qualifying to meet the Gordons in the supreme test. The Customs have been the solitary oasis in the desert of football since they received promotion to senior honours and all credit attaches to them for their remarkably plucky exhibition both in the League and in the Shield. Macready has proved himself quite the most capable centre forward in Calcutta despite his handicap in weight and height and has received noble assistance from the Gemini Smith. If the Customs can only manage to steer clear of the disintegration, which has been the ruin of more than one civilian club this season, they are destined for even greater success than that which has attended their efforts this season.

THE King's Royal Rifles deserve a word of praise for their consistent performance throughout the Shield Tournament. Playing a dogged determined game with frequent glimpses of brilliancy they earned the admiration of all who saw them and of all who had the pleasure of playing against them.

THE Rangers met the Gordons in the semi-final round, and a mournful game ensued. The Gordons played fancy tricks all through the first half and time was dangerously near before they realized that some points were necessary if they were to win. Dropping gallery antics they set about in earnest and soon had two goals to their credit. The whistle blew soon after and left the Gordons to meet the Customs in the final.

THE final round of the Shield Tournament was played as a Charity Match on the C.F.C. ground last Saturday before a very large crowd, though there would probably have been twice as many present had Calcutta been playing. The Customs had the hardest of luck to lose by two goals, one of which was headed through his own goal by Anderson and the other being scored from a penalty kick given for "hands" inside the area. The Gordons, win cannot be described as a very popular one, though it would be extremely unfair to disparage a team that has so conspicuously proved itself to be a winning combination. On the whole it was a very tame final indeed and all the excitement seems to have been centred in the Dalhousie ground where Donnybrook Fair was in full swing with umbrellas substituted for shillelaghs. The daily papers have described the scene with varying degree of lucidness so there is no need to refer to the matter here. Mr. Walker has very wisely suspended the Trades Cup competition until the I.F.A. Council has pondered over the matter. If we are to take our cue from Bombay, we shall have to play football under martial law over here, it seems, with a bullet for the first man that fouls, and cavalry to keep the ground with drawn swords.

THE C.F.C. are making arrangements to send a team to Bombay in September next to compete in the Rovers Tournament. In view of the sad mess which Calcutta has made of the past season, it is useless to discuss the policy of this step. Of course everyone would be glad to see them retrieve their reputation by turning up trumps in a foreign country but it is asking good deal of them. Crawford, O'Shea, Gahan, V. Cooper, MacDonald Smith, H. Sherman and Forster are likely starters. Provided they can get a full team—it is difficult to say what a representative team would be—they will leave here on 6th September.

AND now it is for "Referee" to resign in favour of the Rugby Scribe. The tall posts are springing up and the Jerseys are being aired. It has been a sorrowful soccer season. May the Rugby people have better luck.

THE MADRAS TOURNAMENT.

LEICESTER REGIMENT vs. 89TH CO., R.G.A.—This game opened the tournament on the 20th instant. It was a very one-sided contest, the Leicesters were never called upon to show their real form but they had matters their own way all through and ran out winners by 9 goals to nil. Save for an occasional run down and short spell of attacking the Gunners were kept on the defensive all through the first half and the Leicesters got through and scored 4 goals. On changing ends the Artillery pressed but lack of combination lost them chances and they were once more penned in their own territory. Murphy (2) Braddell, Sale, Buckley added to the Leicesters' score and they won as stated. Teams :—

LEICESTERS.—Goal, Whittle; backs, Liddell and Findlay; halves, Whitemore, Bellwood, and Geary; forwards, Buckley, Herd, Murphy, Braddell, and Sale.

89TH R.G.A.—Goal, Davies; backs, Rhodes and Hawkes; halves, Nelson, Hines, and Challis; forwards, Hamaben, Stephens, Hands, Noyes, and Osborne.

Referees :—Messrs. A. E. Sargent and H. G. Ogden.

MADRAS C.C. vs. MADRAS VOLUNTEER GUARDS "B."—Played on the 21st instant, heavy rain interfering with the play. The Volunteers put up quite a good fight but had to acknowledge defeat by 2 goals to nil. The M.C.C. were the first to attack, it was not long before Sargent opened the scoring. The Volunteers were kept busy defending thereafter but the M.C.C. did not get through again till shortly before the interval Harrison scored their second goal. On crossing over the Volunteers showed improved form and had rather the best of the exchanges but they were weak in front of goal and were unable to score. The M.C.C. looked like adding to their score when they forced a couple of corners but these proved abortive and the game ended. Madras C.C., 2 goals; Madras Volunteer Guards "B," nil. Teams :—

MADRAS C.C.—Goal, P. W. Partridge; backs, J. McIver and A. J. Leech; halves, A. Fraser, R. C. M. Strouts, and R. Killick; forwards, A. H. Steele, A. E. E. Sargent, A. N. J. Harrison, F. L. Coles, and C. Christie.

MADRAS V.G.—Goal, Fitzgerald; backs, Calder and F. Pacheco; halves, Leplar, Corner, and Grey; forwards, R. Pacheco, Scott, Cherry Cornwall, and King.

Referees :—Messrs. Down and Braddell.

SEMI-FINALS.

LEICESTER REGIMENT vs. MADRAS VOLUNTEER GUARDS "A."—An excellent game was witnessed when these teams met in the Semi-Final match on the 22nd instant. Play was very fast at the start and both goals were visited in turn. Then the Leicesters pressed and obtained three corners in quick succession. None of these were improved upon but the Leicesters continued to attack and after a great struggle Campbell cleared and the Volunteers carried the game to the opposite end where Scott drew first blood. The Leicesters rushed down on resuming and Murphy equalised. The military team attacked for the remainder of the period but nothing was scored. On changing ends fast and exciting play was witnessed at both ends but neither could score till at length the soldiers again attacked and after Campbell had got the ball away Braddell beat him with a good shot. The Volunteers made great efforts to get on terms again but without success and the Leicesters won by 2 goals to 1. Teams :—

LEICESTERS.—Goal, Whittle; backs, Liddell and Findlay; halves, Whitmore, Bellwood, and East; forwards, Batt, Murphy, Braddell, Buckley, and Sale.

MADRAS V. G. "A."—Goal, Campbell; backs, A. Laybourne and B. Laybourne; halves, Scott, Allen, and Ricketts; forwards, Blake, Young, Henessy, Markar, and Higham.

Referees :—Messrs. Gordon Fraser and Ogden.

MADRAS C. C. vs. 11TH BRIGADE R.F.A.—Played on the 23rd instant, an interesting game ending in favour of the Madras C.C. by 2 goals to nil. They got away shortly after the start and Christie scored the first point. Give and take play followed but neither team gained any advantage till the M.C.C. once again invaded the Gunners' territory and after Heygate had disposed of several shots he was at length beaten by Harrison. Crossing over with 2 goals against them the Gunners played better but lost chances through erratic shooting. Some exciting incidents occurred in front of both goals but the ball was cleared on each occasion and the game ended without further score. Teams :—

MADRAS C.C.—Goal, Partridge; backs, McIver and Leech; halves, Fraser, Strouts, and Killick; forwards, Steele, Sargent, Harrison, Gillon, and Christie.

11TH R.F.A.—Goal, Heygate; backs, Evans and Williams; halves, Gilkes, Forde, and Worrell; forwards, Shephard, Brown, Nolan, Young, and Flack.

Referees :—Messrs. Down and Braddell.

FINAL.

LEICESTER REGIMENT vs. MADRAS C.C.—These teams met in the final on Saturday last, the Millitary winning as expected though the M.C.C. gave them a hard game. The opening exchanges were rather tame, then both teams warmed to their work. Madras got away and a good centre was not taken advantage of. The Leicester next attacked but all their efforts met with no success. Both goals were visited in turn but the custodians were not to be beaten and the interval arrived without score. Fast and level play opened the second half. Both teams attacked and then the Leicesters pressed and though the backs kept them out for a time Murphy at length got through and opened the scoring. Open play followed and though the M.C.C. made great efforts they were unable to penetrate the Leicesters' defence. Shortly before time a hot struggle in front of the M.C.C. goal ended in Braddell putting through. The game was thus won by the Leicesters by 2 goals to nil. The Hon. Mr. Justice Miller congratulated the winners and Mrs. Miller handed the cup to the captain of the team. Teams as before.

THE INDIAN PHEASANTS AND THEIR ALLIES.

CHAPTER I.—INTRODUCTION.

TAKEN as a whole, no family of birds is of such general utility to mankind as the Phasianidæ, belonging to the order of game-birds, the gallinæ (hens) or Rasores (scratchers) of scientists. No less than four species—the fowl, guinea-fowl, turkey and peacock—are domesticated in the full sense of the word, while several species of pheasants are reared artificially either as ornaments or for sport. In India these birds are of special importance; the country contains an unusual variety of species and genera, and the sport they at present yield could be much improved by better protection given to the birds. For none need assistance in the struggle for existence more than game-birds do; other animals appreciate their flesh as well as man, and their habit of breeding on the ground renders them peculiarly liable to fall a prey to terrestrial vermin. Moreover their limited powers of flight render it impossible for them to range far and wide in times of famine, and hence they are liable to perish from want just as beasts do. On the other hand, their speed of foot and habit of frequenting cover secures them to a great extent against birds of prey; and their resident and omnivorous habits render it easy for man to encourage them to any extent by means of artificial feeding. Thus, on the whole, they are easy birds to cultivate, and the encouragement of a good stock should be one of the studies of every forest officer. For not only are the birds useful for food and as affording a healthy recreation, but they are of service in a forest by destroying many noxious insects and by turning over the leaves and surface-soil in their search for this and other food. In addition to insects, some will eat mice and young snakes, so that they are good general vermin-destroyers; and though they devour much seed and grain, their own utility as food secures their being kept from increasing to such an extent as to be a pest themselves.

There is another aspect from which game-birds are worthy of attention from a utilitarian point of view. They carry, as a family, far the most beautiful plumage of any group of birds; I speak after examining many specimens dead, and a few alive, of the long-celebrated Birds of Paradise. Not only the peacocks but several of the pheasants far excel all of these both in general brilliancy and in the individual plumes which go to make up their splendour; while the tiny humming-birds can never enter into competition with such large species as are the pheasants and their kin. Now, as humanity has always been constant to feathers as a means of decoration, it seems to me that the systematic cultivation of the more brilliant game-birds as plume-producers would pay very well; such cultivation has been profitable in the case of the ostrich, where it entails much more trouble and expense, to say nothing of positive danger from the powerful males.

Better than all, in my own private opinion, is the importance of game-birds as an adjunct to scenery. Although less imposing than the birds of flight, the graceful form and conspicuous size and colours of many of the larger species make them some of the best of ornamental birds; indeed, the peacock is the oldest "fancy" bird known, and is still admired where the cultivation of domestic monstrosities has not corrupted public taste. And if it has been worth while for humanity, all these centuries, to foster a bird which admittedly has many faults, for its beauty alone, we may surely plead for an extension of protection to all our finest species, even if they had not solid qualities to recommend them.

Having said this much in attempted justification of game-birds as a subject for study by the most practically-minded, I may proceed to the characteristics of the family, all of which may be easily verified on the first chicken that comes to hand.

The head is notably small for the size of the bird, with a small beak, short and stout, with the upper outline arched; the nostrils are roofed over on the inner side by a gristly scale; the mouth is wide, running back nearly below the front of the eye, (N.B.—The beak is to be measured from this point, called the gape, to the tip). The neck is long and the body stout and heavy; the wings are short, concave, and rounded, the pinion-quills or flight-feathers not projecting noticeably in repose in any species; the legs are powerful, the shanks stout and generally covered in front with a double row of large scales meeting in a zig-zag seam; the toes are four in number, three spreading ones in front, united at the base by a short web, and a much smaller one behind, set on at a higher level than the rest. The tail varies very much; in the fowl and many other species it is vertically folded in repose, but it is often flat like any ordinary bird's.

Internally, the birds of this family are noteworthy for their large crop or food-receptacle in the gullet, and powerful gizzard or grinding-stomach; their breast-bone is also remarkable, being so deeply cut into at each side by two great notches that hardly any of the body of the bone is left, and it presents, when cleaned, the appearance of a narrow central portion bearing the deep keel, and a somewhat V-shaped projection on each side.

The Phasianidæ are as uniform in their habits as in their structure, the common fowl being a fair type of all. They are, however, not all polygamous like him, nor do they all roost on a perch in the same way. Neither are all of them provided with spurs—a weapon, by the way, confined to this family. But all feed on what they can get—seeds, green-food or small animal life; all trust to their legs before their wings, and fly violently rather than strongly, generally with alternate flappings and sailings; and all rigorously avoid bathing, choosing instead to roll in sand or dust to rid themselves of dirt and vermin. They are very endurant of cold, three out of the four domestic species coming from hot climates, and yet bearing the English winter well; but those which inhabit temperate regions are generally very intolerant of heat. Our hill pheasants, for instance, cannot bear the hot weather in the plains. All the species usually nest on the ground and lay pale eggs.

The young of these birds, as everyone knows, can run soon after birth; they are clothed in soft down marked with brown and buff stripes. In their first feathering they most resemble the old hen, but may be known by their pointed quills. So, if none but cocks showing the full feathering are shot, one is sure of plenty of hens and young cocks to carry on the breed, and thus any number of males may be secured for food or feathers with no deterioration to the stock, but rather to its advantage; for in these so often polygamous birds a large proportion of males is a distinct disadvantage for breeding, as one is often sufficient for several females, and a larger number means much domestic discord.

In dealing with the various genera and species in detail, I shall follow the scientific nomenclature employed in Dr. Blanford's fourth volume on the Birds in the Fauna of British India series. I shall also adopt the genera therein employed: and it is a great help to the beginner in ornithology that the said genera or groups of species in the game-birds are so well defined, as will be seen later on. Some of them are, indeed, recognized by popular names:—thus, we speak of the "peafowl" and "jungle-fowl" for the species of Pavo and Gallus respectively. But under the general names of pheasants, partridges, and quails, several very distinct genera are classed in each case. However, it seems best in a work

A GOOD START IN LIFE.

Mothers should early realize how essential good health is for the success of their child in after life. A badly nourished baby generally means an undersized child, wanting in stamina and vigour. If unable to nurse your baby, you must give the substitute that most closely resembles human milk. No farinaceous or starchy food or unmodified cow's milk is permissible to a child under 6 or 7 months of age. The "Allenburys" Milk Foods are so prepared as to remove the difference between cow's milk and human milk, and they are as easy of digestion as the natural food of the child.

The "Allenburys" Foods are alike suitable for the delicate and robust, and, when used as directed, form the best means of rearing a child by hand. The No. 1 Milk Food may be given alternately with the mother's milk without fear of upsetting the child or causing digestive disturbance. The dreaded process of weaning is thus made easy and comfortable both to the mother and child.

intended for beginners to maintain these popular distinctions, if only for the sake of convenience.

To commence, then, with the most familiar birds of all:—The jungle-fowl are distinguished by their combs, fleshy ridges of skin running from the base of the beak up the forehead; these are very small in the hens, but always discernible, and at once mark off all our three species of jungle-fowl.

The peafowl are at once separable by their crest and great size; the shank is five inches long or over, none of the other members of the family having it as much as five inches. The cock Argus comes nearest, but he has a very different tail and no crest.

The peafowl are at once separabe by their crest and great largest quail having a closed wing of under five inches, whereas all birds with a wing over this length may be reckoned as patridges, it being understood that the term merely refers to size.

The real difficulty lies in separating the partridges and pheasants, which make up the bulk of the family.

Pheasants are generally large birds (never under eighteen inches long), with the tail as long as the wing or longer; when it is shorter, the difference is not more than two inches, and it only reaches this in the Tragopans and Monauls.

Partridges are almost always much smaller than pheasants, with proportionately much shorter tails; two partridges, the snow-cocks, are bigger than many pheasants, but they have the true partridge short tail, about three inches less than the wing.

The smallest members of this family have the widest distribution, partridges and quails being found almost everywhere, the latter being especially widely-spread. The pheasants, except where artificially introduced, do not occur outside of the continent of Asia as a rule, one species only, the common or Colchian pheasant, occurring in Europe. The peafowl and jungle-fowl are confined to the warm regions of South-Eastern Asia. Africa is held by the guinea-fowls, and North and Central America by the turkeys.

The boundaries between the different species and genera are settled by the right of the strongest; at any rate, in England it has been found impossible to have guinea-fowls, or golden or silver pheasants wild along with common pheasants, since the last are not able to hold their own with these birds. When two closely-allied species of Phasianidæ meet they interbreed and fuse, and what with this hybridism, and the tendency of some species to throw off sports, or "aberrations," as students of butterflies would call them, the family is a remarkably interesting one, as it undoubtedly shows better than any other the methods of evolution still actively in progress.

CHAPTER II.

Peafowl and Jungle-fowl.

As these two genera are so well known and so easily recognized, it is just as well to begin with them, although they have no special relationship to each other beyond belonging to the same family. But it is always best to proceed to the unknown from the known, and a consideration of the generic and specific characters of these familiar birds will prepare us for the study of the other groups of the family.

It is often stated, even by high zoological authorities, that genera have no real existence in nature, but are only the invention of naturalists for cutting up the numerous species into manageable groups, the species themselves being presumed to be real enough. This notion is entirely fallacious. A genus is or should be a group of species, each of which more closely resembles all the other species of that group than it does any other species outside. This being so, a genus is just as real a thing as the species of which it is composed, and this is obvious enough in the rare cases when the separate species and the whole genus each have a popular name. For instance, it would be absurd to admit the existence of the carrion crow, our old friend the Indian house crow, the raven, rook, and jackdaw, and then say that the genus "Crow" or Corvus in scientific language, which includes all these, did not exist except in the imagination of naturalists. A "crow" is a big (more or less) black bird of certain physical attributes, and most people recognize the existence of the genus before they know the species.

In the case of the birds now under consideration the characters of the genera are particularly well marked and recognizable. To take the peafowl first. By "peafowl" we understand birds having the general characteristics of the Pheasant family as described above, with the addition of certain peculiarities of their own—large size, small heads with bare faces, and crested, long necks and legs, and, in the males, the upper tail coverts, or feathers of the lower part of the back, of a loose filamentous texture and of enormous length, reaching several feet beyond the tail itself, which is of quite ordinary structure. The males are spurred, and sometimes the females also.

Peafowl are polygamous in their habits, several females associating with one male, who displays himself to them by "spreading out his tail," i.e., erecting and spreading his upper tail coverts with the tail braced up behind. But this gesture is common to hens and young birds also under any excitement, and it is very doubtful whether the peacock knows what he looks like, in spite of his age-long reputation for pride. And, although peahens are known to display marked preference for particular cocks, it has never been proved that they choose the most beautiful. So there is a great deal to be made out even about these familiar birds.

Peafowls are lovers of trees, on which they roost at night, and like many game-birds, prefer to be near water. Their flight looks less laboured than that of other birds of this tribes, as their large wings flap comparatively slowly, but they cannot sustain a lengthened flight, and may even in some cases be run down. But they are very strong on their legs, and run remarkably well. They have the reputation of affecting the vicinity of tigers, and it would be interesting to know the reason of this. It is impossible that the same locality suits both creatures, and that the birds, from their very fear of the tiger, are led to keep near him in order to be informed of his movements, which certainly interest them, as they are always very wary birds.

The note of the peacock has always been cast up to him as a defect, but it is really not an unpleasant call when heard far enough off; and it has evidently given him his name in several languages, the Greek Taos, French Paon, German, Pfau, Dutch Paauw and Hindi Mor, all distinctly recalling the well known note. Another point against these birds is their destructiveness in gardens; but against this may be set the great virtue that the peacock is well known to destroy small snakes, even of poisonous species. Moreover peachicks are excellent for food, although the old birds are too tough for anything but making soup of. The genus Pavo is only found in South-east Asia, and comprises two species, of which by far the best known is our familiar Indian bird.

The Common or Indian Peacock.

Native names:—Mor, Manjur, Hind.; Taus, P. Landuri (the female), Mahr Manja (the female), Mania (the female), Uriya; Mabja, Bhotanese; Mong-yung, Lepcha; Moir, Assamese; Dodc, Saro; Myl, Samul; Nimili, Telegu; Nowl, Mouara, Cingalese.

In this species of peafowl both sexes possess a crest formed of feathers webbed only at the tips, so that each is like a little fan with a long handle; moreover the bare skin of the face is white, and the female's plumage is altogether different from the male's, even allowing for the absence of the train.

The cock's head and neck are of a lovely rich greenish blue: his upper back golden green with black edgings, making the feathers look like scale; the train or long tail-coverts, green changing to copper-red, with blue-and-purple eye-like spots; the real tail is brown, and wings are pale dun or creamy buff with irregular black bars, except the pinion-quills which are bright chestnut, and the nearest secondary quills which are black. The under parts are black with a green gloss, except the thighs, which are light drab.

The hen has a chestnut head and white throat. Her general colour is drab, with the quills and tail darker, and the lower part of the breast buffy white; the neck has a strong green gloss, as has also the tip of the crest.

Young cocks are at first like hens, but have a certain amount of black pencilling; their chestnut quills will also distinguish them at once. They are three years in coming into full colour.

Both sexes have dark eyes and dark horn-colour bills and feet. A fine cock may measure more than seven feet to the end of his train; the real tail is twenty inches in length only; and the closed wing about two inches less. The shank will be about five and three-quarter inches long, and the bill nearly two from the gape.

The hen is a little over a yard long, and has a proportionately shorter true tail, this being only thirteen inches, and the closed wing sixteen; the shank about five only.

This is the peacock par excellence, for although confined as a wild bird to India and Ceylon, it has been domesticated for many centuries, and is known all over the civilized world.

It does not ascend the Himalayas, as a rule, over 2,000 feet, though it may range above 5,000 on the Nilghiris; which makes it somewhat remarkable that it can bear the English climate in winter without protection.

In many places it is held sacred and found in a semi-domesticated condition, this being the case in Sind, Guzerat, Cutch and Rajputana. In any case, it is to be hoped that this magnificent bird will be spared as much as possible by sportsmen everywhere, since for its peculiar beauty it has no rival, save the even more magnificent bird next to be described. described.

Peafowl are not so quarrelsome as most of this family, for several are not so quarrelsome as most of this family, for usually lay, in the rains, about half-a-dozen eggs of some shade of buff, and nearly three inches long. The nest is of course usually on the ground, but has been met with in elevated situations, and it is worth knowing that the eggs are delicious eating.

Buff varieties of this peacock have been met with in the wild state, and in domestication it is sometimes white or pied, and at times produces a most remarkable variety, the Japan or black-winged peacock (Pavo nigripennis of Sclater). In this form the cock's wings and thighs are black, the former being glossed with blue and green; the pinion-quills remain chestnut. The hen of the variety is white, grizzled and splashed above with black, with a black tail, and with chestnut pinion-quills like the cock. The legs in both sexes are dirty white, not dark as in the normal form. The variety is distinct from the egg, the chicks being white, though the young cocks soon show dark feathers. Were it not known definitely to originate, in either sex, as a "sport" from the ordinary tame peafowl, this variety would certainly be ranked as a good species, since as a general rule it breeds true, and even though smaller and weaker, ultimately swamps the original type when all breed indiscriminately together in domestication.

It is said to have once occured wild in India, and any specimens procured should be carefully preserved. It cannot be expected to be common, since its colour in the females and young is much against it as an inhabitant of our jungles.

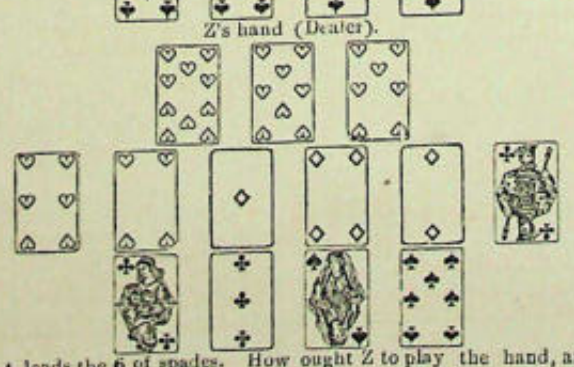
Solution to Problem No. 68.

Practically Z's only chance of winning the odd trick, and game, is to find the adverse trumps evenly divided, and, this being so, it is useless to think of finessing, as at the best Y can only be put in once. At trick 4, therefore, Z should lead the queen of trumps, losing a trick to the king. Then, if the opponents go on with spades, Y can ruff, which is a distinct advantage; while the lead of a diamond from A will be equally helpful. On regaining the lead, Z must take out two more rounds of trumps, and can they lead ace and a small club, finessing dummy's 10. If led through in diamonds, he must make a bid for the trick with his king, while if the suit is not opened by the other side he can lead it to himself if he gets dummy in with a club. Clubs are not likely to be opened by B, but if A leads a small one Y can put on the 10.



Problem No. 69.

Score: A B, 14; Y Z, 14. Z deals and declares hearts. Y's and Z's hands are as follows:—

Y's hand (Dummy).

Z's hand (Dealer).

A leads the 6 of spades. How ought Z to play the hand, and why?

MOTOR MEMS FROM ENGLAND.

Original and Otherwise.

London, Friday, 10th July 1908.

The feature of the Brooklands meeting on the 4th July was undoubtedly the first ladies' race ever held at Brooklands. There were five starters out of the seven entrants, ranging from 6-h.p. cars to 40-h.p. cars. When the cars assembled in the paddock the lady drivers were surrounded by an interested crowd, and much comment was made as to the probable winner. The first car to be started, 1min. 45secs. ahead of the scratch car, was the 6-h.p. De Dion, driven by Mrs. Roland Hewitt. This car started off very slowly, and the 17-h.p. Sunbeam did little better. The Arrol-Johnston, driven by Miss Christabel Ellis, had the misfortune to stop soon after the start, and thus allowed Miss Muriel Thompson on the Austin "Pobble" and Mrs. Locke King on the Sizaire to get ahead. The Austin "Pobble," which had a lead of three seconds in addition to three miles, managed to get ahead of the Sizaire, and easily beat the other competitors. It was an extremely interesting match, ending in a win for Miss Muriel Thompson by about 20 yards, the Arrol-Johnston being about 200 yards ahead. The speed of the winner was well over fifty miles an hour. Results:—

First Heat of Third All-Comers' Handicap Sweep-stakes.—Sir George Abercomby on a 58-h.p. Fiat, 1; Mr. T. Faulkner on a 24-h.p. Mercedes, 2; Mr. A. F. King on a 30-h.p. Mass, 3. There were eleven starters, and Sir George won by 100 yards. Mr. A. F. King was about a mile to the rear.

Second Heat of Third All-Comers' Handicap.—J. Keele on a 41-h.p. Weigel, 1; H. J. Nalder on a 35-h.p. Berliet, 2; Sir Duncan Hay on a 41-h.p. Daimler, 3. There were eleven starters in this race, and Mr. Keele won by 300 yards; only ten yards separated the second and third.

First Heat of July Trophy.—Mr. J. Bullough on a 44-h.p. Junior, 1; Sir George Abercromby on a 58-h.p. Fiat, 2; Sir Duncan Hay on a 41-h.p. Daimler, 3. The winner had a start of 11secs., the second 33secs., and the third 42secs. The winner led by fifty yards, with the third 200 yards behind.

Third All-Comers' Handicap.—Final: Sir George Abercromby on a 58 Fiat, 1; Mr. T. Faulkner on a Mercedes, 2; Mr. J. Keele on a Weigel, 3. The race was a grand one, and Sir George Abercromby came in an easy winner fifty yards to the good. The race for the second and third positions was extremely close, scarcely more than half a length separating Faulkner and Keele.

Ladies' Bracelet Handicap.—Miss Muriel Thompson on the Austin "Pobble," 1; Mrs. Locke King on a Sizaire, 2; Miss Christabel Ellis on an Arrol-Johnston, 3.

July Trophy Handicap.—Second heat: Mr. T. Faulkner on a Mercedes, 1; Mr. O. S. Thompson on an Austin, 2; Mr Nalder on a Berliet, 3; Mr. Moss on an Arrol-Johnston, 4.

Match.—Mr. J. W. Stocks on a 25-h.p. De Dion, 1; Mr. S. F. Edge on the Napier "Firefly," 2. Mr. Stocks won by one length.

July Trophy.—Final: Mr. T. Faulkner on a Mercedes, 1; Mr. O. S. Thompson on an Austin, 2; Sir George Abercromby on a Fiat, 3. There were 100 yards between the first and second, and the same distance separated the second and third.

The French motor "Derby" at Dieppe, the Grand Prix for heavy cars, was marred last Tuesday by an accident which caused the loss of two lives. A Panhard and Levassor car, driven by Cissac, assisted by a mechanician named Schaube, overturned while running at a terrific speed and crushed both occupants to death.

The car was the last but one to start. It was sent off a few minutes after 7 A.M., and all went well for the first eight rounds of the circuit. Cissac had nearly completed the ninth round, his car had been steadily gaining in speed, passing many of those which had preceded him. After taking a dangerous turn at Londinieres he rushed at the tremendous speed of between ninety-eight and ninety-nine miles an hour along the "straight" from Sept Meules to Eu.

Suddenly a tyre burst. The car skidded violently at an angle of 45 degrees across the road, dashing with tremendous force against two stout young trees. So frightful was the impact that both trees were snapped clean in two at a height of 2ft. from the ground. Diving into a field the car made two complete somersaults and stopped bottom upwards.

An eye-witness of the tragedy named Martin gives this narrative: "I was standing about twenty yards away in a field of mown clover watching the cars race past. A few minutes past one a car that came dashing along suddenly gave a loud report like a pistol-shot, and in an instant slanted across the roadway into two tall trees. It was as though a huge shell from a cannon had struck the trees, for both instantly snapped off near the ground. Next I saw the car overturned in the field a few paces away. It happened in an instant."

Another accident, fortunately less serious, occurred to a Weigel car, driven by two Englishmen, Mr. Harrison and Mr. Coleman. The car, which bore the ill-starred number 13, was going round the curve at Eu when it ran into a balustrade and collapsed. Mr. Coleman almost by a miracle escaped injury, but Mr. Harrison was picked up bleeding from injuries to the face and hands and complaining of internal pains. He was removed to the hospital at Eu.

The race, ten rounds of the course, or about 477 miles, resulted:—

		Car.	Time. h.	m.	s.
1	Lautenschlager ...	Mercedes (German)	6	55	43
2	Hemery ...	Benz (German ...	7	4	24
3	Hanriot ...	" " ...	7	5	13

The winner's average speed was just under 69 miles an hour. Last year Nazzaro won over the same course in 6hrs. 44mins. 58secs., an average of 70½ miles. To-day he led at the end of the second round, but afterwards broke the crank-shaft of his Fiat. Hemery continued the race after an injury to the eye, caused by a stone breaking his glasses.

Of forty-seven cars, twenty-three finished the course, including two Austin cars, the only English competitors to do so. They were driven by Mr. Moore-Brabazon and Mr. Resta, and finished fifteenth and sixteenth.

The great international tour is over, and the competitors are unanimous in asserting that it is by far the most arduous trial which has yet taken place in this country. Out of the forty-six competitors which started, thirty-six managed to reach the final stage at Brooklands. This is not at all bad when one considers that the majority of the cars which fell out were defeated by Auntree Hill, a hill with a gradient of 1 in 4 at an "S" turn. No one had anticipated that a hill of such exceptional severity would be included in the route, and consequently several cars were somewhat overgeared, with a view, no doubt, to the speed test at Brooklands. The climatic conditions were just about as bad as they could possibly be, so it is all the more creditable to those cars which did manage to get through to the final speed test.

The best all-round performance was undoubtedly made by the Vauxhall in Class E (cars up to 20-h.p.). This car had only 77 minutes spent in replenishing tanks, etc., on the road, practically an hour less than any other car, and averaged the exceedingly good speed at Brooklands of 46 miles per hour. In class C, the Cadillac car, driven by Mr. Bennet, although it was one of the cars which took part in the standardisation test and had not been touched since, won easily. In class F there was a great race between the Humbers and the Talbot. One of the Humbers had a lead over the Talbot on the road part of the trial of over 14 minutes, but the Talbot, by means of superior speed, just managed to pull it off on the track. Other cars which ran constantly well were the Ariels, Deasys, Rolls Royce, Armstrong Whitworth, De Dion, Nagant, Hobson, and Adler. The last-named, although only 30-h.p., averaged over 62 miles per hour on the track, the highest speed attained irrespective of class, and also did exceedingly well on all hill climbs.

THE DRAFT SHOOTING RULES FOR THE UNITED PROVINCES.

We heartily welcome the "Draft Shooting Rules" which appeared in our issue of the 25th June, as a step in the right direction, and gratefully thank the author in the name of the general body of sportsmen, for the time and labour he has spent on them. We accept the draft as a "balun d'essai" to test the prevailing currents of public opinion on this subject, and as an exposition of the broad principles which at present guide the responsible authorities of the Provinces concerned. The time and trouble bestowed on the subject betray the true sportsman.

In our issue of the 4th June we referred to this subject, and urged certain points on the attention of the public. We are gratified to see in how many instances our suggestions have been anticipated by the Draft Rules before us. Our present task is thereby lightened to a very great extent. The points which we laid stress on then, are briefly these :—

(1) The revision of the Rules now in force.
(2) The circulation of a new draft among out-side sportsmen, for comment and suggestions.
(3) That the Game Preservation branch of the Forest Department should be placed on a more satisfactory footing.
(4) An increase of subordinate Forest Department, with special reference to game preservation.
(5) That the limits of shooting blocks should be rigidly fixed.
(6) The publication of maps showing shooting blocks generally, and of each single block, for the use of sportsmen.
(7) That the number of heads which may be shot in each block should be fixed at the beginning of each season ; the details to be then published for the information of all classes of the sporting public.
(8) The fixing of time limits of licenses.
(9) The preparation of a separate annual report on game preservation, by Divisional Forest Officers, and its publication as soon as possible for the information of the sporting public

In modification of (2) we would now suggest that local committees be convened within a reasonable time after the official publication of Draft Rules, for finally threshing out details. These committees should not be entirely official. There are well known sportsmen in all parts of the Provinces who would willingly help in this matter if personally appealed to. From our experience of human nature, as exhibited among the general body of Indian sportsmen, it is vain to hope for any general expression of public opinion on game preservation though it appeals so strongly to them individually. To hear sportsmen holding forth on this subject when two or three of them are gathered together, creates regret that so much knowledge, shrewdness, and valuable experience should be wasted in a stream of words, just for the pleasure of the passing moment. For this reason we are not sanguine that any general opinion will be elicited by the publication of these Draft Rules in a sporting paper. There will, of course, be comments, dissents, objurgations, and groundless accusations at all places of resort where sportsmen most do congregate, but the flow of words—and the imbibing of whisky pegs—end without any practical results. Our suggestion is that small committees be assembled by official invitation at convenient stations, the rules thoroughly discussed by them, and suggested additions and alterations be submitted to Government. Members should, of course, be selected from every class, not excluding the native sportsman and the zemindar who certainly has a right to have his say.

With reference to (3) and (4), we would advocate the appointment of one subordinate as a game-keeper, in each Forest Range, to be under the control of the officer in charge, whose duty it would be to watch the game in the shooting blocks, and make himself thoroughly acquainted with the increase or decrease of game therein, and the destruction caused by larger carnivora and wild dogs. He could also be employed in effecting the destruction of the latter, and when the open season begins he could offer help and advice to sportsmen, whose movements and actions he could at the same time keep under observation. There are no officials in Forest divisions, at present, who are responsible for the performance of these duties. As regards (5) the delimitation of shooting blocks should be effected as early as possible, in the interests of the public, of officials, and of game animals also. The system in force in the Central Provinces, which has worked satisfactorily for years, is a good example. At present, shooting blocks may extend from five miles to twenty at the discretion of the Divisional Forest Officer. The outsider is puzzled to find that at one period he is given a block which he cannot possibly hunt within the licensed fifteen days, while on the next occasion he is given only five miles of the same country, which he can thoroughly work over in a couple of days. He naturally becomes suspicious and feels aggrieved. A judicious marking off of blocks after due consideration is given to the surrounding circumstances of each, would be a much better arrangement.

As regards (7), the number of heads which may be shot in each block should be fixed by the Collector, the Conservator of Forests, and the Divisional Forest Officer, in consultation, and their decision should be notified as soon as possible, for the information of the sporting public.

As regards (8), the Draft Rules suggest that the issue of licenses should be annual. We would suggest that the time limit be for the season only, i. e., from the 15th October to the 15th June, with intermediate shorter periods, and that the cost of licenses should vary from Rs. 50 for the whole season, to lesser amounts for shorter terms.

If the authorities will give our suggestion as to the discussing of Draft Rules by local committees due consideration, and will act upon them, there will be no grounds left for discontent and baseless accusations. We consider it hopeless to expect any assistance from sportsmen in general, by any other means, as we have already waited a month since the publication of the Draft Rules, and have received no opinions on the subject from any direction.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

Racing is proverbially a sport of surprises and its happy knack of tickling its patrons by turning up the unexpected was demonstrated most successfully at Calcutta on Saturday. The probabilities were a lot of processional finishes, bad going and poor sport generally and many kept away from such a dismal outlook. The result was a series of well contested races, good going on both hurdle and flat tracks and excellent sport all round, and the comparatively small attendance enjoyed themselves immensely. The Town Band played a selection of lively music during the afternoon, which helped to keep things merry.

The bookmakers were relegated to the corridor at the back of the central stand—a very good position for life, on the ground that she had previously been to get at without being thrust too obtrusively in the way of those who prefer race meetings without that element. They did not have a very good day on the whole even though only two favourites won (unless Flower Girl scores on the objection) as the winners were all well backed except Idle, who pulled off the last race with very little money on and enabled them to get a bit on the day.

The objection is in the Stand Plate, which was won by Rosette, Flower Girl an odds on favourite being second. Mr. Galstaun the owner of the latter pony, alleges that the winner is really an animal called Parody—not Palladium as was at first stated—who was warned off at a licensed meeting in Australia for life on the ground that she had previously been racing at unregistered pony meetings and of suspicious practices. Even if all this is correct it is still uncertain whether the supporters of Rosette will lose their money as some say that the time of the disqualification was only two years and it has now expired. The Stewards have cabled for full information and the result may be expected to be announced in about a week's time.

The totalisator by the way beat the books for prices all through the day except in the Fifth Race, though the latter had probably laid much longer odds to those who got on early and owners had in most cases got a good packet on with the fielders at fair prices. In the place betting, however, the books were much the better as the tote results paying on 6 runners were naturally very poor.

The Maiden Horse Plate was the first item and all five went to the gate. Pallas and Tehee were most fancied, the former being the absolute favourite. Mr. Galstaun's mare led right into the straight, but Pallas collared her there and Hard, riding a good finish with his hands just managed to beat the other on whom Fraser put up an excellent race, by a head. Lady Thirza, who changed hands just before the race and became the property of Messrs. Marshall and Maxwell, ran uncommonly badly and seems to have gone off a good deal since the Tollygunge Gymkhanas. Sparkle, the country-bred, was looking uncommonly fit and was right with them for 3½ furlongs, but could not keep his end up in the finish.

A field of seven started for the hurdle race. Foy and Merry Elsie were both well backed and Riverside was also fancied a bit for a place. Merry Elsie dished up her chances by her bad jumping and Gee did uncommonly well to get her round at all, as many jockeys would have been unshipped at the second hurdle, which the mare hit uncommon hard and almost fell. Despite this she kept in front till the fifth jump, after which she was done with, knocked out her by faulty fencing and Foy, who had been with her most of the way, went out and standing away from the last one in grand style won comfortably by three lengths from Riverside II. The latter ridden by Mr. Barrow, hurdled really well, and much belied the bad reputation he has been given by the gossips. Old Trencherman also ran a good race—we are sorry to say his last. On Tuesday morning he went for a gallop on the flat with young Howie up, and on leaving the course through the exit by the jail fell heavily and died, probably though a burst artery. This horse, of whom great hopes were once held—indeed he started in the Viceroy's Cup in his first season out here—never struck form in this country and has been a great disappointment to his owner.

After the hurdles another field of five went out for the Stand Plate. Flower Girl an odds on favourite, was beaten easily by Rosette, who came away from the field at the home turn and won by two lengths with a good deal in hand. The eventual result of the race, of course, depends on the decision of the C.T.C. in the matter of the objection. The pony Gladsome, who is a newcomer, showed up very well for a bit and is a good looking sort, of whom more is likely to be heard when racing fit.

The Amateur Plate I. was the best race of the day as the whole field got away well and Craigendarrie, Envious, Dangar, St. Rule, Bonita and Moachin were all running in a bunch to the distance from where Envious, Dangar, St. Rule and Bonita went on ahead and after a fine struggle Mr. Barrow just managed to shove Bonita's head in front of Envious at the finish, three-quarters and half a length, respectively, separating St. Rule and Dangar, the third and fourth. These two were hot favourites for the race and though Bonita was well backed, she stood at various prices from fours to sevens right up to the end.

The Summer Plate had the best field of the day with ten starters. Eljin, a hot favourite, and Silphoe, Mercedes, The Cingalee also well backed. The Cingalee jumped out in front and leading the whole way won easily in a canter from Mercedes, who came from a long way back with a fine rush. Mulison just got the better of a good fight with Silphoe for a place.

The Amateur Plate II. which finished the programme, was a great upset. Regina's connections thought her an absolute certainty and she was backed down to 2 to 1 on, Seditious being considered the only danger. Idle, who is being trained in the same stable as Regina, was considered too unfit to have much chance and they all preferred the mare, so that it was a great surprise when Mr. Bletsoe brought Captain Fraser's horse in a winner by three-quarters of a length from the favourite. Even the owner had, but a ticket on the "tote" on his horse which, however, brought him in the handsome dividend of Rs. 612, and everyone was glad to see him score his first win, in Calcutta.

The entries for Saturday are all good except in the Maiden Horse race, which has fallen through.

They will have to divide the Amateur Hurdle Plate if all the animals are to start as there are only a dozen or at the most fourteen G.R.'s in Calcutta who ride over hurdles and can get near 11st. against 18 likely starters. Lady Gold, Idle, Dangar and Matsumata are about the best in the race.

A good many of them were out schooling on Tuesday morning. Seditious and Musette went together pretty fast the whole course both fencing well, and Mr. Barrow had hard work to hold the former back to his companion between the hurdles. Lily and Idle went together over three flights giving a lead to Dalgai; they all fenced well though Idle tried to run out at the second. Mr. Hutchison's mare showed a great deal of improvement over her performance at Tollygunge. Lady Gold and Blue Bell II. did a good school and Mr. Evers took Reha and Killarney in turn for fast schools: both jumped well, but the latter in particular took the eye with her clean speedy lepping. She went over five flights in first class style, moving very fast between though tiring slightly at the end. This mare is likely to put a great fight against the invincible Envious on Saturday. Prince Morefield piloted Lady George over a couple both jumping stickily. The track was not open for galloping on account of the rain.

In no quarter of the globe are skin diseases, mange, eczema and other equine and canine troubles more rampant than in India. The vet in his practice, the owner in his daily contact with the occupants of his stable or kennel needs not to be reminded of the fact. A big advertisement in another part of the paper declares to all whom it may concern that, at last, complete success has rewarded the efforts of the Ebberzine Pass-Cora Company, of Midhurst, Sussex, who now place within the reach of dog and horse owners remedies the action of which a century ago would have secured for them unenviable and profitable reputation as magicians of the highest order. Whenever, in the kennel irritation is manifest, wherever a pink patch appears, dab on Pass-Cora and await the surprising and satisfactory result with absolute confidence: that's the ticket. Or, is it trouble in the stable, are there sprained ligaments and tendons, filled legs, windgalls, chafes, sores or wounds, Pass-Cora again proves the best tonic and astringent ever known. The manufacturers assert this, and they are backed up by hundreds of glowing testimonials from men whose names rank high in the racing, hunting and polo world. We have before us pages of them, and we quote from a home authority as follows:—

"No better proof of the advantages and efficacy of the newest system is the case of Engineer, who broke down completely and had two terribly bowed tendons. Still by its use he was patched up sufficiently to now be perfectly callous and to have won two sprint races on the flat, and to be jumping hurdles successfully, a task which strains horses' legs and tendons terribly. Another remarkable case was that of Manifesto who was simply cured by such dressings the year he won his last Grand National. Prince Albert's Grand Sefton Steeplechase victory was exactly similarly brought about, but in this case the horse had a scale on his knees half-an-inch thick.

"R. Marsh, the King's trainer, was also solely by its use able to avoid resource to the firing iron, and to get Cynical through two good races despite his knee troubles. There is hardly a trainer of the present day who is not now being won over to the very natural advancement in veterinary surgery in unison with all medical matters pertaining to the human being. Moreover, Ebberzine does not cause a horse to lose his hair on the dressed joints, and its use cannot be detected afterwards for it does not blister, blemish, or in the least arrest the horse's regular work—it is, in fact, a powerful absorbent, not a vesicant, so that it penetrates into the parts dressed, which no firing iron can possibly reach. It surpasses blisters also, inasmuch its use can be continued. It is really remarkable what a very large percentage of knee troubles occur in large horses, much more so than with their tendons, pasterns and feet. Mr. E. Cooper Smith is not unnaturally proud of this product of his practical experience after full 40 years' association with all the chief racing establishments in Great Britain."

Then there is Ebberzine, a special kind of absorbent dressing, which effects marvellous cures and is rapidly displacing the old fashioned "firing" for horses' legs. The principal English trainers loudly sing its praises, hunting men extol its virtues. It is also put up for human use, and as a cure for rheumatism, gout, sprains and the many and various ailments which yield to liniments and embrocations it has proved effectual, quick-acting and safe. For further particulars our readers are referred to the advertisement itself. These remedies are procurable from the Indian Agents, Messrs. Plomer and Co., Lahore, Treacher and Co., Rangoon, and the Army and Navy Stores.

The Simla Dog Show, is fixed for the 26th September. From promises of support received the entries are likely to be large. Intending exhibitors can obtain full particulars from the Honorary Secretary, Mr. R. P. Farr.

A dog worth his weight in gold is a somewhat unusual animal to meet. But a dog valued by his owner at twevle times his weight in gold must be seen for his existence to be believed.

Such a dog, however, was on view last month at the Pekin Palace Dog Association's smart show at the Botanic Gardens. His name is Champion Chu-erh of Alderbourne, and he carried off first prize in his class. His owner, Mrs. Ashton Cross, values him at £6,000, and he weighs just 8½lb. This makes him worth £44 2s. 4d. an ounce. Gold is worth about £3 18s. an ounce, and allowing for the difference in the troy and avoirdupois ounce this little dog is valued at just twelve times his weight in gold.

"I have refused £5,000 for him, and he is worth more to me in actual money, not counting the affection I have for him," said his owner. "He is three years old, and the sweetest thing in the world."

The next highest-priced dog in the show was Tchin-Ouen, of Alderbourne, who owns Champion Chu-erh for sire. He was not competing, though he is for sale. He weighs 3½lb., and Mrs. Ashton Cross will sell him for £1,000.

Next to these in value comes Buddha, bred and owned by Mrs. M. Kingham, who asks £100 for him. He weighs 5lb., and gained a first prize at the show.

The introduction of the Pekinese breed into this country is quite a romance. When in 1860 the British entered the Palace of Pekin the officer in command discovered that the Dowager-Empress had committed suicide. Around her bed were about thirty of the "sacred" dogs. Four of them were smuggled on a British ship, and one was given to Queen Victoria. All the Pekinese in Engalnd trace pedigrees from these animals.

Behold a new dog! At the recent annual show of the English Ladies' Kennel Association in Regent's Park there was benched a litter of five pups, born in quarantine, and of parents descended from stock which has been known for centuries in the Pyrenees.

The species is practically unknown in England, and the dogs are not the least like any classes known to English fanciers. A little sharp ridge of bone at the back of the head and a black eye are the points relied on as tests of purity of stock by the people of the Pyrenees.

The dogs, which grow to the size of St. Bernards, are as gentle as a St. Bernard, but are incomparable both as watch dogs and sheep dogs. The colour is white, dappled with mouse and tan; a rim of the darker colour always encircles the black eye and gives the dog a quaint and wise air of meditation. Their introducer is Mrs. Van Ness. It would be safe to prophesy a rage for the species, and the Ladies' Kennel Association, not for the first time, will prove a pioneer.

Details of the Intervarsity Cricket and Tennis, as given in our London Sporting Letter to-day, show that the athletic contests for the academic year are in favour of the Dark Blues by a point. Thus, as for the past two years, they leave off with a slight lead. They are indebted to the Hon'ble C. N. Bruce, the Winchester and New College athlete, who carried off both tennis and both racquet matches, besides figuring well in the cricket and golf matches. He and K. G. Macleod must be regarded as the two best all-round men at either seat of learning. Macleod has obtained his full Blue for cricket, athletics, and Rugby, and is the second man to achieve that distinction. The Hon'ble Alfred Lyttelton represented his Alma Mater at more pastimes than any other man, but in those days Blues were only awarded in one or two of the leading games.

Fine weather enabled a regatta to be brought off at Naini Tal, on the 25th ultimo, and a jolly afternoon was spent. The programme opened with the Mixed Fours which was won by Mrs. Hogg, Miss Macdonald, Messrs. Wood and Rouse. The Novice Sculls, which came next, was won by Mr. Towle, who beat three others. Five entered for the Ladies' Single Scull Race, Miss Young coming in first. The Tug-of-War in boats attracted a large entry and was won by the crew composed as follows:—Mrs. Hogg, Mrs. Coningham, Miss Winby, Mr. Rouse and Captain Dundas. The fifth event was the Blind Man's Holiday—in canoes—lady and gentleman—(the latter blindfolded) to hunt for and break a floating balloon. Fourteen couples entered, won by Mrs. Ley and her partner. The Hockey Race brought the proceedings to a close—gentleman standing in a canoe, to knock a floating polo ball round a buoy with a hockey stick. This was won by Mr. Hollins.

The Civil Service week at Naini Tal, has been fixed to begin on the 21st September.

On the 15th instant, in honour of his twenty-five years' captaincy of the Yorkshire team, Lord Hawke received a testimonial at Leeds. This testimonial was one from lovers of cricket from all over the world, for it is not only in England that Lord Hawke's influence on cricket has been felt; he has been a great tourist and has played cricket in nearly every part of the globe. For Yorkshire he has scored ten centuries and has made over 13,000 runs.

The gifts were presented during the luncheon interval with the testimonial which had been subscribed for by lovers of cricket all over the world. The presentation was made by Lord Wharncliffe, and consisted of jewellery and old china, which the Yorkshire captain had himself chosen. The articles included diamond tiara, old Worcester desert service, Worcester dinner service, silver soup tureen (George III. period, date 1817), and pair of Purdey guns from the general fund, and silver teapot, cream and sugar basin (George IV. period, date 1821) and silver teapot and stand (George III. period, date 1802) from the players. The total, subscribed very largely in small sums, amounted to £1,842. Later in the year a banquet is to be given to Lord Hawke, at which the County Committee, who have subscribed liberally to the general fund, will present him with three pearl studs as a personal memento.

"Last week I think I told you of the parlous condition of the Olympic Games hospitality fund and of the strenuous efforts being made to get in, in ten days, the £10,000 appealed for by Lord Desborough and his colleagues, writes our London correspondent on the 17th instant. The situation has been nobly saved for within that period, the Daily Mail fund reached the large and satisfactory total of £12,000 so now we shall be able to do our athletic visitors well."

In our English sporting letter will be found details of the preliminary stages of the great Olympiad at the Stadium. The opening ceremony by the king was greatly marred by the atrocious weather—it had rained the whole of the preceding night and poured in torrents till nearly half the ceremonial part of the programme was over—but the two thousand representative athletes went through with it. Even the rain and the poor attendance could not detract much from the novel and striking scene when the entire body of competitors paraded with their banners and National colours.

Golf on the roof, putting green in a billiard room, such are the latest developments of the game in London! A home exchange writes:—

"Aerial observers may see on the leads of a large house looking over Regent's Park a sort of huge cricket-net and rugs of cocoanut matting. In another large house in the neighbourhood the owner, who is a member of the House of Lords, has turned out his billiard-table, stretched matting over the floor, and perforated five round holes.

Both these strange spectacles are indications of the still increasing prevalence of the golf habit. The net on the leads is for practice at driving; the billiard-room is converted into a putting green.

A new and striking example of the habit was exhibited in the Royal Botanic Gardens, when the School of Golf, suggested a year ago, opened its term.

The chief apparatus of the school consists of nets and putting greens. The beginners, under the personal instruction of professionals, are almost completely encircled by netting, but they strike a free ball, and can tell whether it is sliced or pulled.

For the advanced golfer 40-foot nets, stretched on telegraph wires and gigantic telegraph posts, are provided, and it is calculated that a good player can safely drive at the net from a distance of forty to fifty yards. No regular links are provided, but there is plenty of room for short approaches.

Indoor nets will be fixed up in the glasshouses for wet days; and professionals—J. H. Taylor is one of those greatly interested in the scheme—will do exhibition driving on special days and explain the mystery of the notorious "locked grip," practised by all, Taylor, Vardon, and Braid.

The annual tournament of the Royal Western India Golf Club, at Nasik will occupy the week beginning 7th September, when the usual full programme will be discussed.

The Cadet Challenge Cup and Elliott Shield competitions, two of the minor tournaments of the Calcutta Association football season, were concluded during the week. The Calcutta Boys' School won the Cadet Cup, beating St. Xavier's College by two goals to one, while the Presidency College won the Elliott Shield for the fith year in succession with a 4—0 victory over the Madrassa. The final in the Surma Cup competition, between the H.L.I. Reserves and D. Co. Gordons, which was postponed owing to the unfit state of the ground on Monday, will be played to-morrow evening.

The fracas during the Dalhousie-Mohan Bagan match in the Trades Football Cup Competition was discussed at a meeting of the I.F.A. Council on the 29th ultimo. It was decided to replay the match with a referee appointed by the C.R.A. Smith, the Dalhousie player was suspended for this season and Bejoy Bhaduri was exonerated of the charge of foul play. The match was to be played on Saturday last, but the Dalhousie team scratched.

We regret to hear of a fatal accident in Fort William on Monday evening. Private Alexander Sims of "E." Company Gordon Highlanders while playing as goa keeper in a friendly football match was struck in the stomach by the ball which was shot at goal. He kicked the ball away and immediately after fell to the ground. Prompt assistance was rendered and he was carried to the Garrison Dispensary where the Assistant Surgeon pronounced life to be extinct. The post mortem examination held by the Police Surgeon showed death to be due to heart disease

More "howlers" from the schools. "Bigamy is when a man tries to serve two masters." "A lie is an abomination in the sight of the Lord, but a very present help in time of trouble." "The liver is an infernal organ of the body." "The bowels are five in number, a, e, i, o and u." "The Priest and the Levite passed on the other side because the man had been robbed already." "Soldiers live in a fort; where their wives live is called a fortress." "A buttress is the wife of a butler." "A schoolmaster is called a pedigree." "Filigree means a list of your descendants." "The wife of a Prime Minister is called a Primate."

Appended are the results of the important cricket matches played in England during the week:—

The match between Surrey and Sussex, and Hants and Worcestershire were both drawn.

Yorkshire beat Derbyshire by an innings and 131 runs.

Lancashire beat Essex by 272 runs.
Surrey beat the Philadelphians by 122 runs.
Essex beat Northamptonshire by eight wickets.
Kent beat Hampshire by nine wickets.
Middlesex beat Gloucestershire by two wickets.
Yorkshire beat Lancashire by 190 runs.
The match between Sussex and Notts was drawn.

A Duars correspondent writes:—Last week I was at a neighbouring garden when news was brought in that two baby elephants had been washed up by the river. Some coolies who were out picking leaf close to the banks of the Naura River, saw vultures near the river and going up to them discovered the carcases of two young elephants. We went down to inspect and saw the babies, the smaller 6 to 9 months and the other 9 to 12 months old. As often happens in these parts the young play about some distance from the old cows and these two must have tried to swim and been carried away by the river which has been in flood.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—So often does it rain throughout the day and stop in time for football in the evening, that one must not perhaps grumble if, as on Tuesday, the reverse sometimes occurs. The game on this occasion, as it happens, was always more or less a foregone conclusion, and the result was not affected by the wet state of the ground consequent on the downpour we had soon after starting. The fact remains that it took the gilt off the gingerbread, and even the players showed a distinct lack of interest.

Experience has taught us that whenever the Scots "B" play in a League fixture we need expect nothing in the way of excitement as to the ultimate winner, and this time they always had the Y.M.C.A. well beaten. After playing a defensive game in the first half and crossing over for the second two goals to the bad, the young Christians made a game bid and but for continually slipping up would have scored. As it progressed they apparently began to lose heart, and the concluding period was literally a walk over for the military. In the first half McIntosh and Wright scored, and in the second Parkes (2) and McIntosh brought the score to five nil.

The Scots are concluding their fixtures this week as on Monday they start for Poona, where a tournament is being held.

Throughout the day on Wednesday it rained so persistently that the various maidans were literally swamped and there was no chance of any sport at all. Football was out of the question, as also the Mounted Sports.

Thursday saw the weather clear up a bit, but both the Cooperage and the Oval were in a fearfully slushy condition. On the latter the Y.M.C.A. gave the Rovers a fairly bad beating in a practice game, which was more or less of a mud-lark, whereas a very mediocre game of "rugger" was played on the Cooperage.

Being a purely Gymkhana knock-about between "whites" and "stripes," the result can be of no importance. I must, therefore, postpone a criticism of the players, though judging by the talent at their disposal they should be able to turn out a smart fifteen before the end of the season.

It is reported that the Scots having been called out on duty for the riots, the "B" team will be unable to fulfill their League fixtures this week and will, in the bargain, not compete in the Richardson tournament at Poona.

A batch of the Scots having been, however, relieved from duty on Friday morning, the day's fixture was carried out, the "A" meeting the "B." The ground was in good condition and with the sky clear, an excellent game was witnessed.

Both the teams were some men short and had to play new hands. During the first half, "A" had throughout the better of the exchanges, but weak shooting prevented them from opening their account. In the succeeding period, again "A" were mostly the aggressors, but failed to score. Ten minutes to time, from a splendid pass from the "B" outside-right, Wright, the inside, G. Ross, by a long cross-shot from over a distance of thirty yards, sent the ball between the "A" posts. There was no further scoring on either side.

This match ought to be considered as one of finest exhibitions of soccer ever witnessed in Bombay and credit must be given to G. Ross and Wright of "B" and Girdwood and Kennoway, also forwards, of the "A" for their skilled play. The greatest excitement prevailed during the match and the lucky win of "B" decides the fate of the cup and gold medals in their favour, they having won all the thirteen games they have played. One fixture more they have, i.e., with the Rovers, and victory there is a certainty.

On Saturday, the match was between the Bombay Gymkhana and Commercial Gymkhana. An old footballer friend of mine foretold that the result would be a tie. "The Bombay Gymkhana" he said, "have a good defence while the Commercials possess an excellent training; the latter will have the better of the game, but a weak man at the goal, will give the Bombay Gymkhana their opportunity to equalize." His predictions came true. From the commencement, the new team were pressing, but the first goal was notched by the Bombay Gymkhana. The Commercials replied with two, the first moiety ending thus in their favour. During the second half, they had again the better of the issues, but the Bombay Gymkhana defence successfully kept them at bay. While at the other end, the outside left, Moir, by a neat shot equalized, although the goal-keeper could easily have prevented this goal had he been a little active. At final time, the board showed two goals all.

Good football was again the order of the day on this occasion, and party spirit running very high, the game was watched with the closest interest and the attendance was a record one.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—The Poona racing season can scarcely be said to have opened under pleasant conditions as, after some doubt as to whether the course would be fit enough, the rain came down at intervals throughout Saturday afternoon. A very large number were present on the course and punters had a poor time of it, rather a change for a day in which seven out of eight were terms races.

Several improvements have been made in the changing rooms and telegraph office whereas a new stand has sprung up on the lawn to which those who are indulging in refreshments can go instead of tearing away up the big stand.

First on the card was the five furlong Midget Plate in which Sir Jamal and Plassy fought for favouritism in a field of nine. Neither of these two got away well whereas Sabah streaked away to the front from Silver Stream and Rajput. Plassy made an effort at the bend but soon fell back when Sir Jamal and Calcutta came only to find Killorn with a good hold on Sabah, winning comfortably.

No less than twenty went for the Arabian Plate with Dhafer favourite at 5 to 2 and Ashroff, Moonim and Devon next in demand. Dhafer getting a very bad start was never in it, Hadee leading Arabian Flag who took his place at the bend only himself to fall back when Ashroff and Melbourne put in a strong run only for Sialkot to come full of running on the outside and win comparatively easily.

The New Comers' Plate had to be divided and the first found fifteen with Prince Chestnut favourite till a very strong call came for Afreed. Voucher cut out the pace followed by Disguise, and, coming up the straight Afreed came at them and wore them down, when Killorn flashed up on Fairfield and snatched a narrow win.

As for the second division of this race, there were fifteen and it was all one could do to get even a bet of any sort on Mountain King though quite a rush came for Mutlag. Kamad got a useful break on the favourite but not content with this urged him on till he held no less than seven clear lengths It had the effect of killing Malik Jaman but it was clear at the finish that this mode of procedure nearly spoilt his own chance, as after appearing to be winning easily he had to be shaken up to narrowly stay out Special and Murzook.

Thirteen actually started for the New Stand Plate for horses which have not won Rs. 1,100, over five furlongs. Prince Lyon in preference to Master Theo was all the call till Lachlan, Byramjee's selected, came into the betting and wound up equal favourite. Alruna went out in front followed by Prince Lyon who, coming into the lead in the straight, easily stayed Lachlan and Master Theo out.

The Arab Pony Trial Plate of five furlongs was an open betting race with Bay Middleton and Creditor in most demand till good money came for Mint, presumably on his improved Mysore and Bangalore form, and made him favourite. Grey Rose led out from Bay Middleton and Shanwar and on entering the straight it was evident the old champion had everything well beaten, easily staying out Shanwar and Mint.

A surprise was in store in the Summer Plate of seven furlongs for horses, the only handicap. Admiral Crichton was made favourite, and not even runs on Lachlan and Mallinyook could shake him. Melsom was first away on the bottom weight Spirea, and increasing his lead to about eight lengths literally cantered home, Clear Artist beating the favourite for second place. Mr. Beaumont bought Spirea from Mr. Hutchins barely a fortnight ago for Rs. 1,000, and though the mare started at tens had, I believe, a very good win.

Lastly came the Desert Plate of half a mile, a closed race, which found Ramah, a new pony who won in Bombay, favourite. Gendarme led out from Mirdas who in turn led after the bend only to see Mr. Beaumont on Minx take the lead at the distance and win easily with Sher third.

For some time prior to last Bye-day there had been no rain in Poona, but the going then was very good nevertheless and a biggish field had an enjoyable morning's sport after meeting at the fifth mile stone on the Alandi Road. The Yerrowda nullah was first tried and from the end near Kaas a Jack was soon afoot. He went away at a great pace in Lohogaon direction and then made for Temple Hill. Shortly before reaching it, however, he was pulled down and the brush was presented to Mrs. Quin, the mask to the Hon'ble Mr. Cameron.

On the way home another was put up and gave a fast run along the river, to be put an end to in the Jail Gardens. This brush the Master presented to Mrs. Gordon.

On Tuesday the meet was at the sixth mile stone on the Ahmednagar Road and, with a short interval, which came conveniently during the run, a fairly good morning's sport was enjoyed in the slush caused by heavy showers of rain, which fell before the meet and came to accompany the field on the return journey. After drawing the valley and the sugar came fields near Lohogaon blank, hounds at last got away after a game 'un who eventually gave them the slip. He led them past Wagholi Hill and on to the river when he turned and saved his brush in the valley near Temple Hill. Another fast but short run was obtained on the way home, and here too, the quarry escaped.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 17th July 1908.

A dull, dismal and depressing week! There are practically no topics agitating the public mind at the moment. A few tawdry pageants, "Bob" Sievier and the Fisher-Beresford bickerings supply the biggest head-lines to the purveyors of silly-season stuff; no big gooseberry or sea-serpent, apparently not a single alleged theft of an actress's jewels! The weather has been atrocious and on Monday, London experienced something like the deluge you good people associate with the burst of the monsoon. It came down in torrents all Sunday night and continued so to do till past 3 o'clock next day. The number of inches recorded is comparatively infinitesimal—in Lower Bengal, when the rain god means business, you will possibly get more inches in forty-eight hours than we get in six months; but then you have ways of making yourselves tolerably comfortable on such occasions; in London we have not. I cannot conceive a more miserable place than London on a really wet and windy day in summer; it always reminds me of the Buddhist "hells" depicted in the Ceylon dagobas where fire, ice, snow, water, boiling oil and other uncomfortable things await those who have strayed from the narrow and difficult path that leads to Nirvana.

* * * * * *

The rain practically wrecked the opening of the Olympiad at the Shepherd's Bush stadium. The scenic effects were completely spoiled, the march past, the royal arrivals and the attendant ceremonies were conducted in a downpour that ought to provide enough and to spare of colds and pains for the two thousand odd athletes clad in zephyrs and shorts as also for the adventurous umbrella and mackintosh contingent, who sat it out and whose "grumbling grew to a mighty rumbling" as the day wore on and the skies showed no pity. Yet the programme was carried through to the bitter end. Lord Desborough acted as M. C. His Majesty declared the Olympiad open, there was royal standard hoisting, national anthem playing, and cheering. Details of the doings in the arena I leave to the compiler of your weekly summary of English sport, who in rain coat and brolly was trying to note results in a soppy note book when I left him to his fell work.

There was another scene of wonderful enthusiasm at the Savoy Theatre, on Tuesday night, when "H.M.S. Pinafore" was revived. Gilbert and Sullivan opera never won more favour than it has done since the revivals were begun at its original home last year. The faithful have gathered loyally round the old banner, converts have flocked to it, and the amount of applause was astounding. Every number was encored, and every member of the cast was rewarded with a storm of approval, and it was long before the audience were content to depart for their homes.

Dear old Rutland Barrington, back in his original part of Captain Corcoran, was as drolly dignified as ever, and Mr. Henry Lytton, another link with the old Savoy, played Dick Deadeye perfectly. But if Mr. C. H. Workman is not one of the old brigade, he is easily first in popular favour now, and it is safe to say that the part of Sir Joseph Porter has never been more richly humorous than it was in his hands last night. Every point was made, every line of song or patter was turned into a gem of humour. Altogether an artistic performance. Miss Elsie Spain sang charmingly as Josephine, Miss Jessie Rose was delightful as Hebe, and Miss Louie Rene was very successful as Little Buttercup, while Mr. Henry Herbert did justice to the words and music of his songs as Ralph Rackshaw.
music of his songs as Ralph Rackstraw.
a whole was anything like so strong as some of the casts that interpreted Sullivan's sparkling music and Gilbert's wit in the old days, but all the company, from the chorus upwards, were filled with the right spirit, and it would be impossible to imagine an audience more highly delighted than was the audience at the Savoy last Tuesday night.

Every lover of good journalism will genuinely regret the demise of The Free Lance, which—proud of its traditions under her distinguished husband's editorship—Mrs. Clement Scott conducted with courage and with well-merited honour since his death. As its name implies, The Free Lance was distinguished by its refreshing candour, its sturdy independence, and an alertness and brillancy characteristic of its charming and talented editress. Recently, Mrs. Scott had the valuable co-operation of Mr. J. T. Grein, but even this combination failed to bring the success it deserved.

After a prodigious amount of dirty linen washed in public the Joel vs. Sievier case on Tuesday reached the stage of commitment for trial of the accused, who was liberated on bail of £20,000 amidst cheering! We shall have a few days' respite from newspaper reports of what Sievier eats, smokes, reads and does in "chowkey," what he wears in Court, how he looks, smiles, breathes and sneezes. I suppose the purveyors of this class of news know their public or it would not be recorded; but it is very trying nevertheless.

Doggy men and women were introduced to a brand new dog at the Ladies' Kennel Association show last week, to wit a curiosity from the Pyrenees and of size and shape somewhat after the type of our old familiar friend the St. Bernard. He is white with tan markings and the quaint mouse coloured rim round each eye gives him an owl-like air of wisdom which is specially attractive. His eye is black and he has a sharp bony ridge at the back of the skull —the sort of accentuated parietal ridge, which suggested the horned jackal to some imaginative persons in India years gone by. With the prevailing craze for oddities—even in Canines—it is quite possible this dog will ere long be frequently benched at our shows.

I came across a good specimen of the Afghan greyhound at this show. I remember having seen a couple long ago at Routlege's annual depot in Calcutta, what time that fascinating personality was at his best as a dealer in rare stock. The specimen I saw at Regent's Park, had a fine, dense coat of woollywhite fur; his face was brown with tan eye spots, his ears pendant and his general appearance suggesting anything, but a sporting animal. Yet, I believe, these dogs are sometimes used for what passes as coursing in the kingdom ruled by His Highness the Amir. I was amused to note his price—£1,000. I have heard of them going for less. Quarantine restrictions notwithstanding, it might pay some enterprising people in India to ship a few to England: they can be had in the bazaars of the North-West at something like Rs. 50 each I hear.

I attended a balloon meet the other day: it was my first experience of the kind and will probably be my last. It was at Hurlingham and the business on hand was the contest for the Hedges-Butler Challenge Cup for a long distance race. But Messrs. Boreas and Aquarius took a hand at the game and between them held every trump. How it blew, how it rained! A few aeronauts of extra intrepidity started off in a perfect gale on their own account, for the organisers of the race decided to abandon it. These ultimately descended at various places and their rate of travelling was anything from forty to fifty-five miles an hour. The most amusing item of the afternoon was an unrehearsed effect in which a monster balloon of 50,000 cubic feet capacity and about seventy engineers, policemen, odd men and spectators had a tug-of-war, the humans emerging victorious after a struggle which provided sixty laughs a minute.

Pull how they might, the balloon's capacity to rise seemed even greater than the united strength of so many persons. One moment nearly a score of men would be sprawling on their backs under the car, and the next instant they would be lifted clear of the ground.

All this time the three aeronauts were in the car, ready for their adventurous trip. The situation, however, became so critical that it was found necessary to pull the cords of the "ripping" valve with a view to deflating the balloon at once. In less than a minute the monster became an inert mass lying harmlessly on the greensward.

Balloon meets teem with excitement and humour, but (as the bo'sun said of the sherry) you "don't get much forrarder," at any rate on a damp and boisterous day.

The "death trap" has hitherto been peculiar to the crossings in the big thoroughfares of the City and East End. Apparently the unenviable monopoly is no longer theirs; the West End can now claim to have the danger at its doors and, judging from recent correspondence in The Times, Pall Mall affords as short a cut to kingdom come as any place in London. I quote the following from a daily paper:—

"Clubland" is much perturbed, and it is likely that strong representations on the subject will be made to the Home Secretary and the police authorities at an early date.

Pall Mall has undoubtedly become one of the danger-spots of London. The traffic at its three principal points is enormous. A census of the vehicles passing at the western end, near St. James's Palace, in five minutes—4-0 to 4-5—yesterday afternoon—gave the following results:—

Cabs ...	... 254	Carriages ...	... 38
Motor-cars ...	... 51	Vans and carts	... 17

This gives a total of 360 vehicles, or seventy-two a minute, passing in six different directions. There is no street refuge until Waterloo Place is reached. Here from 4-20 to 4-25 the figures of passing vehicles were:—

Cabs ...	... 116	Carriages, etc.	... 28
Motor-cars ...	... 22		—
Motor-omnibuses	... 7	Total	... 192
Horse-omnibuses	... 19		—

Opposite the Carlton Hotel from 4-40 to 4-45 no fewer than 218 pedestrians were delayed in crossing, so confusing and at times dangerous was the traffic.

An official at one of the clubs named said: "The question is not new, but feeling is growing. The traffic is making Pall Mall less frequented by pedestrians. At times it is most difficult to cross the road. We certainly ought to have more refuges between Waterloo Place and St. James's Street. I have seen many hairbreadth escapes lately. In fact, Pall Mall is fast becoming the best place in London for the unwary to get killed."

"London's Desert," in other words the abomination of desolation known as the island site in the Strand where it abuts on King's Way, is exercising the minds of the many who desire a city beautiful and resent a Colossal rubbish heap enclosed by offensive hoarding in the heart of Central London. In the sweet by and bye there will be buildings and other signs of civilization here; meanwhile why endure this amazing wilderness of mud, rank weeds, tinpots and scrap iron? Various schemes for temporarily beautifying the site have been lately offered to the London County Council and promptly rejected. A scheme of converting it to a garden was put aside on the score of expense.

With a view to discovering some effective, but inexpensive scheme. The Evening News has sought the opinions of several leading architects and surveyors. If the resultant suggestions are not distinguished for their originality, this is due to the fact that the London County Council has declared its unwillingness to spend much money on any proposal made.

The architects who were consulted agreed that the hoardings should be removed, that the site should be levelled out, surrounded with low railings, and covered with grass. The cost of this scheme, they said, would be trifling.

Of course the Council would lose the comparatively small sum paid by advertisers for the use of the hoardings, but perhaps this loss might be made up by letting the grass-covered site as a grazing ground for sheep!

* * * * * *

One of the most noteworthy enactments of the London County Council at a recent weekly meeting passed almost unnoticed at the time, since public attention at the moment was taken up with the visit of the French President. This was the decision of the Council to accept the offer of the fabric of Crosby Hall from the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China on condition that it be re-erected on the site of More's Garden, Chelsea, in accordance with the plans and proposals of the Executive Committee of University Hall, Chelsea. The inability to save Crosby Hall from demolition had been regarded as a national calamity; its rebuilding ought at least to be a matter of equal interest. In any event of re-erection, two conditions had been laid down by the Chartered Bank and the London County Council; the first of these was faithful reproduction upon a site deemed suitable in all respects; the other accessibility to view by the public at all reasonable times, without charge or fee. In the adoption of the Chelsea site these conditions have been fully complied with, the first by the choice of Mr. W. H. Godfrey as architect for the re-erection, Mr. Godfrey having assisted under the general supervision of Mr. Philip Norman in the preparation of the monograph on Crosby Hall, just published; and the second by the admirable adaptability of the site itself and the connection it will have with the settlement of University Hall, Chelsea, already in existence there under recognition of the University of London. This site admits not only of faithful reproduction of the old Hall, but of Crosby Place quadrangle, and is the one spot of all others which Sir Thomas More himself would surely have chosen for his City home.

Mild amusement has been caused by the appearance, in the House of Lords, of a visitor attired in an Irish kilt. He was introduced by Mr. Hazleton, a Nationalist M. P. The kilt and vest were saffron coloured, the coat black and the shoes buckled, a dress to which the Black Rod took exception and a correspondence has begun between that worthy old gentleman and the member, which promises to develop somewhat of humour. I quote the M. P.'s last epistle:—

House of Commons, 15th July.

Dear Admiral,—I am sorry the Black Rod standard of manners is so low that you have not replied to my last letter.

Why do you object to kilts, anyhow? You don't even wear trousers yourself, and as for the rest of your costume, it is hardly a model of conventional austerity, is it?

Even if you are opposed to the Celtic revival, why be so rude about it? Of course, you are an admiral, and I see from the papers that there is an epidemic of rudeness among admirals. I thought, however, they kept it for one another.

Can't you be satisfied with reducing the livery of Parliament to the level of a fancy dress ball without trying to reduce its courtesies to the level of the Channel Fleet?

If you must be a dress reformer, and object to kilts, why not begin with the King, who, as you ought to know, wears kilts on his Highland holidays?

I am, dear Admiral,
Yours,
Richard Hazleton.

P.S.—If you object to the Celtic costume the next time I introduce a visitor wearing it, I shall have to take a more serious view of your conduct.

The Prime Minister of Nepal—without whose august presence no social or official function seems complete just now—has, be it noted, been made a K. C. B. We may shortly expect an invasion of appointment hunting Indian potentates I presume.

The first statue of Queen Alexandria has been erected; it was unveiled by the Earl of Crewe last week and it stands in the grounds of the London Hospital, an appropriate site having regard to the fact that Her Majesty has taken a deep personal interest in the good work carried on there.

Lord Crewe said that when they looked at the record of those who had been consorts of the Kings of England he did not think one of the illustrious list had been so completely enthroned in the hearts of the nation as Queen Alexandria. It was surely a good thing that in these surroundings of sorrow and suffering and hope and courage there should be erected this abiding memorial of those qualities which she possessed and which adorned our common humanity.

* * * * * *

The Keir Hardie-Windsor Garden Party incident continues in disgraceful evidence. The other day, addressing his precious constituents on the subject he used language that richly deserved a sound horse whipping. He has the support, of course, of creatures of his kidney. At a Socialist demonstration in Victoria Park a few days ago, W. Thorne, Labour Member for South-West Ham, made a blackguard attack upon the King, expressing the aspiration that "there might soon be no room for Kings or Queens" and polluted the air with more revolutionary drivel. What a pity it is the stocks and the whipping post have gone out of date!

Another little bit of old London will have gone ere these lines are in print—I refer to Fulwood's Rents, Holborn. In the shallow basement of these buildings was said to have been the original of Fagin's "Thieves' Kitchen." In the Elizabethan period, Francis Bacon lived in the building, which was later a resort of the infamous Jack Sheppard. Now it is "stolen" itself by the authorities to be handed over to its executioners.

The Vagrant.

Review.

THE JOURNAL OF THE BOMBAY NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY, VOL. XVIII, NO. 2.

We always enjoy receiving this journal as it always contains some fresh and interesting information and beautiful illustrations. The frontispiece to the present number depicts the Sheldrake (Tadorna cornuta) and is done by Mr. H. Gronvold. The only fault which we can see in it is that it does not show the difference in the sexes plainly enough, the chestnut on the male not being sufficiently bright. This is probably the lithographer's fault, as we have lately had the pleasure of seeing an orginal painting by this artist and it was perfectly done. A notice slip is inserted telling us that four more plates will appear to complete Mr. Stuart Baker's series on "Indian Ducks and their Allies, viz." the white-winged Wood Duck (Asarcornis scutulata), the Pink-headed Duck (Rhodonessa caryophyllacea), the common Whistling teal Dendrocygna javanica) and the Smew (Mergus albellus). We consider it a pity that all the remaining geese, ducks, etc., are not to be figured especially as these articles and plates are being published in book form so as to be available for every sportsman or naturalist whether a member of the Society or not and also because this will probably be for many years to come the standard illustrated work on the subject. This would have meant bringing out some fourteen more plates and would have enhanced the price of the book by some five or six rupees, but it would have been well worth it as in its present form it cannot be said to be complete. Now that the Society are undertaking useful work of this kind we should like to see them bringing out a series on the remaining game birds of this country and they could not do better than obtain the services of Mr. Stuart Baker to do so. We should then have a couple of books which would supersede Messrs. Hume and Marshall's now rare publication. We believe the publishing of the present book on ducks has been a great success and we are certain it would be the same with one which would include our phensants, partridges, quail, snipe and other waders.

The first paper we come to is Part VI of Major Wall's "Popular Treatise on the Common Indian Snakes." This important subject is being excellently dealt with by this well-known ophiologist and we are glad to see that his articles on the "Poisonous Snakes of India and how to Recognize Them" has been published in book form. We hope the Society will see fit to do the same with the present articles. This number treats of and depicts the Golden Tree Snake (Chrysopelia ornata). This is a variously and handsomely coloured species which Boulenger divides into eight-colour varieties, a ninth being added by Wall. As its name implies it is an arboreal species but has also been found inside houses. The snake has the marvellous ability of being able to spring or "fly" and Flower mentions having seen one "take a flying leap from an upstairs window, downward and outward on to a branch of a tree and then crawl away among the foliage. The distance it had jumped was measured and found to be nearly eight feet." This snake has many attainments and according to Professor Owen "They can outclimb the monkey, outswim the fish, outleap the jerboa and suddenly loosing the coils of their crouching spiral they can spring into the air and seize the bird upon the wing."

The same author has two other articles on snakes found in Assam. In one of which he describes two new species which are also figured in an uncoloured plate.

Major R. G. Burton broaches an interesting subject when he writes on the drinking habits of wild animals. As he says, there is a great deal of misconception on this subject and if only the sporting members of the Society would record their observations many fallacies would be cleared up. Sir George Hampson gives us a further instalment of his "Moths of India." It has now reached Part X of Series III, and probably will drag on for many more numbers. This paper will not interest the general public very much, as it is highly scientific.

An interesting point on the Oology of the Cuckoo has been cleared up by Mr. Stuart Baker and Major Magrath, the latter having obtained a blue oviduct egg of the common cuckoo (Cuculus canorus). Other interesting bird papers are "Notes on the Birds of Thandiani" by Major Magrath, "Local Bird Migration in India" by D. Dewar, I.C.S., "A further List of the Birds from Chindwin, Upper Burma" by C. Hopwood, I.F.S., and further notes on Birds of the provinces of Kashmir and Jammu and adjacent districts by Colonel A. E. Ward. The first paper includes nearly a hundred species which is very good considering the country under observation only extended for five or six miles along the ridge of the hills.

A new feature in this number is the arrangement of the miscellaneous notes. Formerly these were published according to the date on which they were received, but in this number they are arranged according to the subject, such as mammals, birds, reptiles etc. This is a much greater convenience than the old way and we see no reason why the whole journal should be arranged on this principle.

Mr. Lydekker has a note on that curious looking animal the Bhutan Takin which is proved to be distinct from the Takin of the Mishmi Hills. He names this new species Budorcas taxicolor Whitei.

The bird notes are not so many as usual but are all interesting. Mr. Hopwood has been fortunate in taking several good nests such as those of the great-eared night jar. (Lyncornis cerviniceps) and the Blackcapped Kingfisher (Halcyon pileata). He also gives us some information on that doubtful species of Mr. Oates, viz., the Burmese Spot Bill (Polionetta harringtoni). He doubts the validity of this species and we agree with him. Another interesting note is that by Captain Powell Connor of the I.M.S. on Humes' Bush-Quail (Microperdix manipurensis) in captivity. He was fortunate enough to secure a female alive and keep her alive for nearly a year and thus was able to study her habits and give us much interesting information about this little known species.

REMINISCENCES OF SOME LEOPARD HUNTS.

I.

A study of Vol. I. of the Royal Natural History will show that three distinct species of leopards are found throughout the length and breadth of our Eastern possessions, exclusive of what is commonly known as the "hunting leopard." This latter animal, though belonging to the family of the Felidae, is now classed by zoologists as pertaining to a separate genus to that of Felis. Of the true leopards by far the most common is Felis pardus which is met with north and south, east and west. The second species is Felis uncia, the ounce or snow-leopard, whose habitat is the dreary uplands of Tibet. Third and last of the recognised Indian leopards is Felis nebulosa or as the term implies the "Clouded Leopard." The huntin leopard or cheeta, Cynoelurus jubatus, would seem at first sight to be closely allied to his abovementioned spotted congeners, but the fact that his claws are only partially retractile, and that his upper flesh-tooth consists simply of a trenchant blade has placed a gap between these spotted depredators that can never be bridged.

Let us first turn to a consideration of Felis nebulosa or the clouded leopard. This cat is by no means ubiquitous. Starting from Bhutan and Sikhim in the Eastern Himalayas it can be traced through Assam, Burma, to the Malay Peninsula and on to the islands of Borneo, Sumatra and Java. Concerning the habits of this beast practically nothing is known. Any information that has been gleaned has emanated from native sources, and is in consequence not reliable. One fact has, however, been fully established, namely, that this feline is fully gifted with arboreal propensities, preying on birds and the smaller mammals in his leafy retreats, and even sleeping on the branches of trees. It would seem that Felis nebulosa cannot be overabundant. For three years the paths of duty and of pleasure directed my footsteps through some of the vast tracts of big-tree forest in Burma proper and its confines. I was also brought into personal contact with many well-known big game hunters in the land of Pagodas, sportsmen whose everyday life was passed in the solitary glades of these limitless woodlands, yet in no single instance can I record an encounter with a clouded leopard.

It may be assumed without much hesitation that this feline inhabits only the densest of forest areas, never trusting its life in the more open tracts. The chances, therefore, of a meeting are proportionately small. In the hot weather, when the forest-fires clear away the undergrowth, and only those trees adjacent to water retain their verdure, the lairs of this large cat must perforce become greatly restricted. It is more than probable that in this season the clouded leopard migrates into the ever-green forests upon the higher slopes of the hills. In such spheres fear of detection or molestation by man is practically non-existent, for in the majority of instances these regions of forest land are impenetrable without the aid of an axe or other weapon. The other necessities to a feline's life are also present without having to wander far afield, namely, shade and water, and the quantity of food in these altitudes is also far greater than would be procurable in the sun-baked and parched-up regions of the terai. There can be no doubt that one great factor that causes this animal to be so rarely encountered is its arboreal habits. The hunter, when in quest of four-footed game, instinctively keeps his attention rivetted on his immediate surroundings at his own level. Danger is looked for in the grass and bushes. The gaze seldom ranges upwards. It will thus be readily comprehended that a quadruped, even of such large dimensions, crouching along a branch would in all probability escape detection provided it did not move. It would be a natural conclusion to suppose that when faced by such a peril as the presence of man, its best possible means of avoiding discovery would be by remaining perfectly motionless. It is by reason of this practice that, it may be taken for granted, many a hunter has passed within a few paces of a clouded leopard without there being the slightest indication of its close proximity. There is yet another circumstance which indicates that safety is sought for in absolute immobility rather than in flight. The chequered light thrown by the sun's rays through a mass of foliage would entirely blend with the markings on the fur of one of these creatures as it lay as if paralysed along some gnarled branch. Lydekker says:—"The ground-colour of the fur varies from greyish to yellowish-brown, passing into whitish beneath ; the markings on the body taking the form of narrow vertical stripes and blotches of black, which form large irregularly arranged patches." A better case of harmony with natural surroundings could hardly be produced.

The ferocity of the clouded leopard would appear to be by no means highly developed. As a dangerous antagonist it would probably not bear any comparison with Felis pardus, but if cornered there is nothing to say that it might not attack its molestors with equal fury.

During my jaunts through these huge forests, both in the terai and in its adjacent hills, pugs of leopards have frequently been encountered, but whether such have been the work of Felis pardus or Felis nebulosa it was impossible to determine, though in the majority of instances the imprints must have been those of the former species.

Let us now pass on to a study of Felis uncia or snow-leopard. Like Felis nebulosa the habits of this fine cat are very little known. The reason for this deficiency in knowledge is not far to seek. The snow-leopard inhabits the elevated plateau of Central Asia, seldom being found at lower altitudes than 9,000 feet above sea-level, and roaming up to mountains 18,000 feet and over. Up to comparatively recent times the habitat of the snow-leopard, owing to its extreme inaccessibility and also to the reluctance with which the Government of India gave permission to cross the Tibetan border was rarely visited by spotsmen, hence the opportunities of obtaining any reliable information were exceptionally meagre. As years roll on, and with the cooperation of sportsmen, there is hope that many interesting facts may be brought to notice. Owing to the character of the country over which this creature holds sway any systematic attempt to bring about its destruction must be regarded as a total impossibility. Its slaughter at the hand of a white man is a gift granted very sparingly by the fickle hand of Dame Fortune. When in actual pursuit of Ovis hodgsoni or Ovis nahura the case might arise in which an ounce was also stalking the same herd or individual ram unaware of the movements of another hunter. Such an opportunity would be one of extreme rarity, but it would present the best means of becoming the happy owner of such a highly-prized and valuable pelt. Should a sportsman happen to come upon the carcase of some mountain sheep, whether wild or tame, which had fallen a prey to the rush of some snow-leopard, it might be brought to bag by judiciously sitting up over the dead body. But once again the element of luck is entirely in predominance. The writer had the opportunity of visiting Tibet on two separate occasions. The tracks of the snow-leopard were encountered not more than half a dozen times during both periods of leave in those lofty altitudes. A specimen of the animal itself was never seen. One afternoon when scouring the hillsides in search of burhel, a herd had been espied, some lying down others grazing in a deep rift caused by some mighty convulsion of Nature. We had been observing this flock from a place of concealment on the tip of this cleft for some considerable time, trying to elucidate the best path to follow to get within range without disturbing the quarry. Of a sudden it was noticed that the entire herd was in headlong flight in our direction, and to my intense chagrin passed 500 feet or 600 feet below and out of shot. At first I put down the cause of the panic to the fact of the game having obtained our wind. In these high elevations the breeze cannot be depended upon for a single instant. It will whirl down a gully, strike a sheer face of rock, and fly off at a tangent.

In this particular instance the guide, who knew those regions as well as the confines of his own village, and could read the signs like an open book, stated positively that the stampede was the work of some prowling snow-leopard. The originator of the scare, however, never came into view. There can be no doubt that Felis uncia is possessed of a cunning, one might almost say, intelligence, that equals even if it does not exceed, that of its tawny-skinned cousins, for if this trait were not fully developed, its very existence would be jeopardized. It may be accepted without demur that the ounce invariably takes up a position above its intended victim, from which coign of vantage it can watch, its prey without fear of creating an alarm.

The mountain sheep that roam these uplands as a general rule suspect danger from below, in consequence so keen a look out is not kept on the slopes above. There can be little doubt that the snow-leopard has inherited this knowledge and applies the lesson instinctively. Yet the task of circumventing its prey is no light one, and patience must be the leading factor in this feline's character. Felis pardus when on the war-path can creep to within a few feet of its quarry screened from sight by every bush and tuft of grass. Not so the ounce. An open slope may intervene between the marauder and its prey, unadorned by the smallest vestige of cover. Attack to be crowned with success must be sudden and unexpected at comparatively close quarters, for given a fair start the burhel would soon shake off its spotted pursuer. One false move would sound the first note of alarm in place of the anticipated death knell. Frequently the snow-leopard must have to wait patiently for hours, just beyond striking distance, for the crucial moment to arrive.

It may be taken for granted that the sense of sight is far more fully developed in the ounce than that of smell or hearing. On the Tibetan plateau, where the atmosphere is so rarified, and where the vision is unobstructed by foliage, a moving object can be detected with the naked eye at distances well over a mile. Sight, therefore, must play an important part in the existence of the snow-leopard. On the other hand with Felis pardus sight is quite a secondary sense. On most occasions it will be found that the latter feline will either scent the quarry or hear it moving before it comes into view.

Of Cynoelurus jubatus the writer has had no personal experience. Owing to this beast forming part and parcel of the hunting establishment of every native of high degree, its habits and customs are well known, comment on such would therefore be superfluous.

REMARKS ON DRAFT SHOOTING RULES FOR THE U. P.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Will you kindly allow a little space in your paper for a few remarks on the Draft Shooting Rules for the U. P. published in your issue of the 25th June. The draft shows signs of having been prepared with great care, and in the main the amendments, expansions, and alterations in the original rules suggested therein, make for a marked improvement. The interests of the public have been considered, while the proposed restrictions on excessive game destruction appear to be entirely sound and desirable. At the same time there are a few points which might perhaps be reconsidered and modified, and these are as follows:—

1. In the explanation to Rule 5 it is stated that the object of the rule is to limit the power of the conservator, and that "District officers know, or should know, as well as any Forest officer, when and where sanctuaries are necessary." Surely this assertion is open to question. Even if the District officer is a sportsman, he could hardly know as much on this subject as the officers of a department whose particular business it is whether sportsmen or otherwise, to be acquainted with such matters, and who are always, more or less, on the spot. Reading between the lines, the suggestion appears to be that in the event of a difference of opinion between Conservator and District officer, that of the latter should carry the more weight, in fact, the inference is conveyed of the infallibility of the omniscient civilian, as against even the specialist.

2. The explanation to Rule 6 suggests that the Conservator is likely to act unfairly unless his power of control is checked by the District officer! By all means let the suggestion stand that the Conservator should consult the District officer, especially as the former is after all to be the controlling officer in the matter of dividing the forests into shooting areas, etc., but could not this suggestion be made without showing the usual jealousy of the civilian, in the aspersion thus cast on the Conservator? Can it be asserted that District officers in charge of Districts containing forests are invariably impartial in matters pertaining to sport? Again, further on in the same rule, a paragraph should be inserted limiting the number of visits of exempted officers, or rather the number of visits during which they may shoot or hunt, in any area, to enable an equitable division to be made to include exempted and non-exempted persons. In the last paragraph of the same rule it is suggested that tigers and panthers should be included in the list of dangerous or noxious animals for whose destruction no limit should be fixed. Surely these two predacious species should be protected to some extent since they help in keeping down those herbivorous animals, which cause such destruction to crops, and those which are worn out and unfit for use in propagating their species.

3. In Rule 8 (c), it should be provided that animals wounded in zemindari lands may be followed into reserved forests, under the same restrictions which govern the pursuit of animals wounded in one area, into any other area. Cases of this sort have been known to occur, in which friction has arisen.

4. In Rule 8 (g), provision should be made for encamping within reasonable distance of shooting grounds, and the camping grounds should not necessarily be fixed at places on public roads.

5. Rule 8 (h), should provide that the special permission therein suggested, to shoot small birds and animals, should only be given on a signed declaration that they are to be shot for bona fide purposes of natural history, with due penalties for breach of observance of the declaration. The number of birds and animals thus shot should be fixed. This is desirable to prevent excessive shooting for sale purposes.

6. The latter part of Rule 8 (j), will, I think, be generally condemned as unsound. I mean that portion of it which provides for appeal to the Commissioner when the sportsman and the Divisional forest officer disagree as to the number of elephants, etc., which the applicant for a license wishes to take into the forests with him. The procedure involved would entail vexatious delay at the commencement of a shooting expedition, and the sportsman's time is limited. The object of the suggestion is admittedly to check the power of Forest officers, and to ensure that the appellate authority should be "independent." From the context it is clear that the word independent is meant to be read as impartial, but in matters of sport are we to accept it as an indisputable axiom that the Commissioner would be absolutely impartial. He probably has some interest in sporting matters, and after all he is only human. The aspersion on the fairness of the Conservator appears uncalled for. A much more simple arrangement would be for the applicant and the Divisional Forest Officer to consult and decide on the number of elephants which might reasonably be employed for the occasion, leaving it open to the applicant to bring the matter to the notice of the Conservator later on, if he felt aggrieved. The Conservator might surely be trusted to bring his officers to book if they impose unfair restrictions, and to prevent them from doing so. Moreover, what special knowledge would the Commissioner possess, which could guide him in coming to a right decision. Surely the Forest officers know their own business best.

7. In Rule 8 (k) an error seems to have crept in. It is proposed that a charge of 8 annas per diem should be levied for the actual number of days when the permit holder is present. This is evidently intended to mean the number of days when the elephants are present. This appears, from the contest, to be the intention, and this view is supported by the wording of the explanatory notes printed after the rules. The proposed reduction of the charge, from Re. 1 to 8 annas, is reasonable up to a certain limit, say five elephants. Above that number an enhanced fee should be charged on account of damage done to the forests.

8. Rule 8 (m) and (n) an invidious distinction appears to have been made between persons, who should pay in advance, and those who should pay afterwards. The argument in favour of the distinction is sound, but anything that savours of an exception in favour of certain classes is to be deprecated, and the rule might be that all should pay in advance, and obtain refunds later; when admissible under the rules.

9. Rule 8 (o) suggesting the entry of all animals killed, on the permit, when returning it, is distinctly sound. This was arranged for under the old rules also, but the entry is frequently not made and the Forest officers record is thereby left incomplete. A penalty for non-compliance should be imposed under this rule.

10. It would be advisable to fix the number of birds to be shot on a license in Form C. as described in Rule 10, as winged game is getting scarce. This could be done by an alteration in Rule 6, without leaving the matter to the option of the Forest officer.

11. The soundness of the suggestion made under the same rule seems open to question, in the matter of issuing licenses in Form A. to one class of persons during the first half of the month, and to another class during the second half. By this arrangement the general public, which is composed mainly of officials, who do not belong to the District, would be at a disadvantage, owing to their not being always able to fix their dates accordingly. Moonlight nights also, are necessary for machan shooting. The proposed rule claims to give equal facilities to all, but this is just what it would not do, since it is far easier for the exempted person to make his dates fit in, than it is for him who is not exempted. The restriction as to number of heads to be shot, and the closing of all shooting in the rainy season, provide sufficient protection and periods of grace for the game, and distinctions of the kind proposed are liable to cause misapprehension. The question immediately suggests itself—why should the second halves of months be preserved for a limited number of local officials and exempted persons, while the general public has to take its chances in the first halves? Let all have equal chances throughout each month of the season.

12. The appointment of a forest subordinate official to accompany permit holders, as suggested in Rule 11, is an excellent idea, which might perhaps be improved upon by making this compulsory in all instances, instead of optional. He should be paid by the permit holder, and looked upon as an assistant, not as a spy or obstructionist.

The note on Rule 12 proposes as a doubtful alternative in case of applications clashing, that precedence should be given by seniority in rank. Surely in matters of sport all men are equal, and the poor subaltern or other junior officer should have equal consideration with even the Commissioner, Member of the Revenue Board, or other high official, who can, as a rule, fix or alter his dates more easily than the junior man. The only exceptions should be in the case of a Viceroy, a Lieutenant-Governor, or the Commander-in-Chief.

13. The permit in Form A. to be granted to certain persons under the first part of Rule 12, should be for the season, and not an annual one.

14. Under Rule 12 (c), the number of elephants should be fixed in every case. Two elephants for the permit holder, and one for each sportsman with him, would seem a reasonable limit. This would prevent battue shooting, with elephants as beaters, which causes much damage and would be confined to a favoured few officials.

15. The register maintained under proposed Rule 15 should be open to inspection by the public generally, on application to the District Forest Officer, and not to the Commissioner only.

16. Appeals against District Forest Officers' refusal to grant permits, etc.,—(proposed Rules 16 and 17),—should lie to the Conservator, and not to the Commissioner, who is not an executive officer.

In conclusion I have only to say that I am not a Forest officer, and that any suggestions I have made are free from bias in any direction and are only intended to be in the general interests of sportsmen of all classes.

A SHORT while ago there was started a movement to have the kilts of a certain one of the British "Highland" regiment discarded in favour of ordinary trousers. The colonel gave orders that a census of the regiment be taken, in order to ascertain the wishes of the men themselves. The colonel is a descendant of a long line of Scotch lairds, and strives earnestly to uphold the old traditions. The sergeant who took the census of the regiment finally appeared with his report. "All the men, with the exception of three, are in favour of the change, sir" he said. "Indeed?" the colonel said. "Tell me the names of these three true clansmen. They shall be promoted." "They are, sir," he said, "Patrick Doolan, Hans Steinbreneer, and Moses Isaacs."

HEALTHY LIFE IN INDIA.

Punch's old and trite, but nevertheless, true saying—"Is Life worth living? That depends upon the liver" applies more to Anglo-Indians than to anyone else—only those who suffer know how very much more. And yet there is no reason why this should be so, why a man should not be just as fit in India as in the home country. The majority of those who come out do not regulate life in accordance with the climate and changed conditions of tropical countries. To be well and to keep well requiries the greatest care and discipline. In a country like India, where the extreme heat makes so enormous a difference to the functions of the human body, it is essential to life, that the requirements of the body should be regulated with more than ordinary care. But if we keep the digestive organs healthy and the nerve machine in good working order, one can be as well and healthy on the Bund as in Piccadilly. And we can do so, for medical science has evolved a substance that, whilst easily digested, contains in happy combination the two vital properties for nourishing the body and for stimulating and feeding the nerves.

Sanatogen, the nerve food is almost universally recognised by medical men as a true scientific food. Readily digestible—so much so that its use in the acute stage of typhoid fever is practised by many physicians—with a high nutritive value, almost every atom of it being absorbed and assimilated, rich in that necessary element of all the tissues of our body—phosphorus—Sanatogen forms at once an almost perfect and complete diet for the low-power system which most Anglo-Indians possess. Used in time it will prevent that devitalisation of nerves and indolence of digestion, respiration, circulation, etc., which all dwellers in tropical climates know and dread so much.

Mr. Hall Caine extols its virtues:

Whitehall Court,

London, S. W.

"My experience of Sanatogen has been that as a tonic nerve food it has on more than one occasion done me good."

Hall Caine

Even when one of the numerous insiduous tropical diseases has gained a foothold, Sanatogen, according to medical testimony, is a power with which to dislodge the foe, if scientific theory and actual practice in the case of enteric and other fevers have any weight at all. The author of a paper in the "Indian Medical Gazette," December, 1906, entitled "The Maintenance of Health in Tropical Climates," states this opinion: "For residents in tropical climates, suffering from general debility, the best and most readily assimilable food is a combination of casein with glycero-phosphates. This cannot be prescribed as an ordinary mixture, pill or powder, but for some years past I have used the preparation known as Sanatogen, which is composed of 95 per cent. of pure casein and 5 per cent. glycero-phosphate of sodium. I have used Sanatogen on a large scale and have every reason to be satisfied with the results obtained."

This is only one of over 7,500 written endorsements from physicians in Great Britain and India. If any further proof were required it is to be found in the vast numbers of letters from distinguished men and women, who have themselves derived benefit from the use of Sanatogen.

Madame Sarah Grand, the distinguished authoress, writes:—

10, Grove Hill,

Tunbridge Wells.

"I am glad to be able to tell you that Sanatogen has done everything for me which it is said to be able to do for cases of nervous debility and exhaustion. I began to take it after nearly four years' enforced idleness from extreme debility, and felt the benefit almost immediately. And now, after taking it steadily three times a day for twelve weeks, I find myself able to enjoy both work and play again, and also able to do as much of both as I ever did."

Sarah Grand

Sanatogen which is a fine white powder, is put up in bottles and can be obtained from all chemists.

An engrossing booklet containing matters of vital importance to well-being in the Tropics has recently been issued. It is from the pen of a physician long resident in India and is entitled "How to keep well in India." It should be in the hands of all desirous of knowing how to get well and keep well. A copy can be obtained free of charge from Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, from whom also Sanatogen can be purchased.

From G. A. R., Bettiah Champaran:—"I was suffering with diarrhoea, with which I was attacked nearly nine months ago, and all known remedies were greedily taken down by me, but to no avail, when as a last resource I tried your 'Essence of Papiya.' My digestive organs which were considerably deranged are now as right as possible; the distressing symptoms attendant on indigestion have now almost entirely left me and I heartily thank you for the preparation, which through the intervention of a Kind Providence you have successfully brought before the public."

From Mrs. E. L. M., Asansol, E. I. R.—"I had very bad Dyspepsia. My food used to turn rotten and sour in my stomach, and I used one bottle of Essence of Papiya and now I am sure I could digest a brick, it has thoroughly cured me of my Dyspepsia, hence I have so much confidence in your medicines. You certainly deserve credit for introducing such a medicine to poor suffering Dyspeptics"

You may certainly publish what I have said about your Papiya Essence.

From Mrs. Elizabeth Wagentreiber, Delhi:—"With much pleasure and many thanks I beg to acknowledge the benefit I derived from your far famed 'Essence of Papiya.' I suffered from Dyspepsia in a most painful form, and found great relief after taking the first two bottles, and continued to take four more. After the sixth I felt so much better that I left off taking it regularly, but if at any time, I feel the old pain and symptoms returning I immediately take another bottle of the Essence. I am now able to eat more and can change my diet without fear of what were to me most dreaded attacks of indigestion."

THE TURF.

HAYDOCK PARK.

IN spite of the unpromising weather outlook, sportsmen turned up in strong force at Newton-le-Willows on Saturday last, but a pitiless downfall could not but fail to damp the interest in the day's proceedings. The quick change from hard to holding going had the effect of turning form upside down, and this was most marked in the Old Newton Cup, wherein the favourites were easily vanquished by an absolute outsider in Blundella, who ran clean away from her opponents. Details :—

WILLOWS WELTER HANDICAP—Of 200sovs. 1 mile.

NEWMARKET.

MONDAY'S wet spell raised fears that the summer was going to be broken up, but instead of this proving the case the recent rains had only freshened things up, and the country looked bright and green in the beams of a July sun on Tuesday, the 14th instant. Amidst his round of strenuous duties, His Majesty happily found time to enjoy a short respite at this, one of his favourite meetings, and his welcome presence ensured a large and influential gathering of society in the delightful members' enclosure. Handy trains were well patronised, and the business portion of the community was strongly represented. The course was a bit holding, but fields panned out well. Details:—

Rain on Wednesday night was heavy enough to disturb the soundest sleepers, and after a dull morning it came down again when business began and continued throughout the afternoon's sport, making a most unpleasant finish to the second July gathering. His Majesty had the gratification of seeing his fine filly realise the expectations her private spins had raised and the acclaim of his last success with Slim Lad at Sandown could not be compared with that which greeted the victory of his Majesty's filly on Thursday, enthusiasm being electrifying. The going was naturally heavy and getting worse each hour, but the chalk soil and oldworld turf kept it from getting cut up or slushy.

LAWN TENNIS.

THE OLYMPIC CHAMPIONSHIP.—Mr. M. J. G. Ritchie, in winning for the British Isles the Olympic Gold Medal on Saturday, the 11th instant, established his reputation for consistently good and steady play during the whole of the present season. The softness of the court, although it played wonderfully well, considering the severe strain it has undergone in the past three weeks, was by no means suited to Mr. Froitzheim's style of play, and on the day he certainly met his master. The match throughout was mainly a base-line game, and consequently somewhat tedious to watch, neither man caring to risk coming to the net for a "kill"—probably a wise course, as both were playing with deadly accuracy off the ground. Mr. Ritchie started well and won the first two games. He should also have taken the third when leading 40—15, but the German champion took this, and subsequently led at 4—3 for the first and only time in the match. Mr. Ritchie won the set at 7—5, and finding that "long bowls" was the game to win, wisely stuck to that style of play throughout.

The second set went to the Englishman at 6—3, the short set being due to an unusual lack of accuracy on the part of Mr. Froitzheim. In the third set Mr. Ritchie led at 5—1, and was three times within a stroke of the match before he won at 6—4, Mr. Froitzheim making a game attempt to pull the match out of the fire and taking three games running. The rests were very long at times, many of them consisting of over twenty returns.

Mrs. Lambert Chambers, as was generally expected, proved too good for Miss Boothby. The latter lady had a chance in the second set, when she led 5—4, but Mrs. Chambers won it at 7—5, and as she had previously taken the first set easily by six games to one, won the gold medal. Miss Boothby became possessor of the silver medal, having reached the final without playing a match. Mrs. Winch walked over for the bronze medal. It is to be regretted that none of the foreign ladies whose entries were received have followed the example of their countrymen and shown England what great strides the game has made all over the world.

The final of the Doubles furnished by far the best game of the day and, although Messrs. Hillyard and R. F. Doherty won all three sets, advantage games were played in every one. Messrs. Ritchie and Parke might have turned the tables on their opponents in every set played, and it was anybody's match right to the finish. Mr. Hillyard showed greatly improved form; Mr. Doherty, too, proved as good in emergency as of old.

From the tennis point of view, the Olympic Tournament has been a distinct success, and no one could have wished to see better exhibitions of the game than those given during the week.

The Lawn Tennis Association entertained the competitors at dinner on Saturday night at the Cafe Royal, when the foreign and colonial speakers were unanimous in their appreciation of the play and hospitality they had experienced over here. Details:—

Gentlemen's Singles.—Final Round.

M. J. G. Ritchie (British Isles) beat O. Froitzheim (Germany) by three sets to love (7—5, 6—3, 6—4).

Bronze Medal.—W. V. Eaves beat Rev. J. Richardson (South Africa) by three sets to love (6—2, 6—3, 6—3).

Ladies' Singles.—Final Round.

Mrs. Lambert Chambers beat Miss D. Boothby by two sets to love (6—1, 7—5).

Bronze Medal.—Mrs. Winch.

Gentlemen's Doubles.—Final Round.

G. W. Hillyard and R. F. Doherty beat M. J. G. Ritchie and J. C. Parke by three sets to love (9—7, 7—5, 9—7).

Bronze Medalists.—Messrs. C. H. L. Cazalet and C. P. Dixon.

GOLF.

J. H. Taylor Equals Record.—The historic course of the Royal Blackheath Club on the 14th instant the scene of an interesting professional tournament, arranged by Mr. Richard Winch. James Braid, J. H. Taylor, Harry Vardon, and Tom Vardon of Sandwich, were the competitors. Taylor, maintaining the fine form which had carried him to victory at La Boulie and Lancaster, won the stroke event, in the morning, and in so doing equalled two records. The Blackheath course consists of seven holes, and in medal contests three rounds, or 21 holes, are played. Taylor's score of 30 for the last seven holes, equalled his own record for the round, while his total of 96 tied with the record for the 21 holes from the back tees, this previous best being also his own. Taylor, indeed, played some of his very finest golf. It should be mentioned that Mr. A. S. Johnston, one of the leading members of the club, has done 95 in a competition, but not from the back tees, so that it is difficult to compare the performance with the professional record. Details of the scores:—

Taylor.—First round: 3 4 5 6 6 5 6—35; second round: 2 4 4 6 5 4 6—31; third round: 2 4 5 5 5 4 5—30—Total, 96

Braid.—First round: 3 4 4 5 6 4 6—32; second round: 4 4 4 5 6 4 5—32; third round: 4 5 4 6 5 4 5—33.—Total, 97.

Tom Vardon.—First round: 3 4 4 5 6 4 6—32; second round: 3 5 4 6 5 4 5—32; third round: 3 5 5 6 6 3 5—33.—Total, 97.

Harry Vardon.—First round: 3 5 4 5 6 5 6—34; second round: 3 5 4 5 6 4 6—33; third round: 3 5 4 5 6 4 5—32.—Total, 99.

In a four-ball foursome in the afternoon the brothers Vardon beat Braid and Taylor by one hole. The feature of the match was the splendid form of Tom Vardon, who had most to do with the success, although Harry played a lot of good shots including one over a hut and some very high trees at the sixth hole. Scores:—

H. and T. Vardon.—First round: 3 4 4 5 5 4 5—30; second round: 2 4 4 5 5 4 5—29; third round: 3 4 3 5 5 5—28.—Total, 87.

Braid and Taylor.—First round: 3 4 5 6 5 3 5—31; second round: 3 5 4 5 5 4 5—29; third round: 4 3 3 5 5 3 5—28.—Total, 88.

POLO.

The County Cup Final.—If the ground at Hurlingham on the 11th instant had been just a trifle on the hard side, the match between the finalists—Wirral and Salisbury Plain—would have been played under ideal conditions. The teams were wonderfully well matched, and Wirral owed their 3 to 2 success not so much to any marked superiority in their play as to the fact that the luck of the game went a shade in their favour. Time after time Salisbury Plain came very near to the mark, and, on the whole, they did more attacking than the winners did.

The best player on the field was Mr. F. W. Wignall, whose defensive work was much admired. Next to him Mr. Lockett was most conspicuous on the winning side. In the third ten he was struck with the ball just as it was rising from a tremendous drive by Major Bulkeley-Johnson. As though shot, Mr. Lockett dropped from his pony, but, fortunately, the ball had hit the front of his cap, and he was only momentarily dazed.

After Mr. Lockett had hit Wirral's opening goal nothing was scored until the second period, when the same player again found the mark with a capital drive. Then Salisbury Plain assumed the offensive, but the attackers could not open their account until midway through the third ten, when Mr. McCombie accepted the easiest of chances. At halftime Wirral was leading by 2 to 1, and at the fourth stage were going strongly, Mr. Lockett putting on a third point. Five minutes from the end Salisbury Plain scored as the result of a lofty drive by Captain Long, and this led to an exciting finish. Teams:

Salisbury Plain.—Mr. W. McCombie, Capt. W. Long, Mr. M. Borwick, and Major C. Bulkeley-Johnson (back).

Wirral.—Mr. T. Royden, Mr. G. G. Lockett, Mr. S. L. Watson, and Mr. F. W. Wignall (back).

Umpires:—Major K. McLaren and Capt. E. A. Fagan.

SHOOTING.

Olympic Contests at Bisley.—America, who led the way at the start of the day's shooting, their total of 1,291 giving them a ten-points' advantage over the United Kingdom, won the Olmpic rifle shooting at Bisley on Saturday.

At the 800 yards distance Lance-Corporal Fulton (Queen's Westminsters), one of the first to finish, distinguished himself by keeping to the bulls'-eye throughout, and making the highest possible—75.

Shooting at the next distance, 900 yards, the best range total was again that of the Americans, who, scoring 405, also continued to hold the best individual score and the highest aggregate.

Britain's range score for the 1,000 yards was 383, bringing the aggregate for the United Kingdom to 2,496; but this was hopeless against the Americans, who, thanks to their remarkable consistency, finished with 399, making their aggregate 2,531. The other totals were: Canada, 2,439; France, 2,272; Sweden, 2,213; Norway, 2,192; Greece, 1,986; Denmark, 1,909.

The revolver match of sixty shots each man at fifty yards was fired off during the day. America won with 1,914 points; Belgium, with 1,868, were second; and the United Kingdom with 1,816, third.

The United Kingdom won the miniature rifle team, competition with 771 points, Sweden being second and France third.

TENNIS.

Oxford vs. Cambridge.—The Hon. C. N. Bruce (Winchester and New College) experienced no difficulty in placing the singles contest in the inter-'Varsity tennis match to the credit of the Dark Blues at Lord's yesterday. By virtue of pretty and effective tennis Bruce outplayed his opponent, J. N. Buchanan (Charterhouse and Trinity, Cambridge), at all points of the game, finally winning a somewhat hollow victory by 3 sets to love (18 games to 5). Bruce, in contradistinction to his play of the day before, was, after the first two games, which went to Buchanan, right on the top of his form. He was very deadly with his service, and gave Buchanan few opportunities of getting in that powerful return which he used to effect on the previous day. It was really a match between tactics and hitting.

Immediately Bruce lured Buchanan into adopting this latter style of play whatever chance the Light Blue representative might have had vanished. Bruce's defensive play was very resourceful, and Buchanan found the utmost difficulty in beating him. The Oxonian took no risks. Steadying himself after the first two games, he gave little away, and his calmness was in marked contrast with the impetuosity of his opponent. Bruce's main attack was, as usual, directed on the buttresses, and his play for the openings was only exceeded in point of merit by the splendid accuracy of his floor game. He paid Buchanan many short chases, whilst he repeatedly won those of his opponent. In short, he gave quite one of his best displays. Buchanan, perhaps, deserved a better fate. For a comparative novice he certainly showed remarkable form; he possesses a capital eye and the natural gift of return. What he needs most of all now is practice and study of the finer points of the game.

He judges his own position with regard to the ball excellently, but his intentions are much too obvious. His service needs much attention. Bruce being provided with innumerable opportunities from it for getting into the dedans or laying down a good chase. Buchanan's volleying, too, was quite poor compared with his exhibition of the same stroke in the doubles. On yesterday's play Bruce would have beaten practically any of the 'Varsity tennis strings of recent years.

The actual play needs little detailed description. After Buchanan had won the first two games Bruce secured the next five. Buchanan then took the eighth, but Bruce, winning the ninth to 15, secured the set at 6—3. In the second set the Cantab secured only the third game, and in the third set the fourth; both sets being taken by his opponent at 6—1. Seven of the games were vantage games, whilst six were won to 30.

ATHLETICS.

Ireland vs. Scotland.—In dull and breezy weather 8 000 spectators witnessed the international athletic match between Scotland and Ireland at the Exhibition Sports Ground, Edinburgh, on Saturday, the 11th instant. Details:—

Half-mile Race.—G. N. Morphy, Ireland, 1; R. Burton, Scotland, 2. A great race, won by inches. Time—2mins. 4/5secs.

100 Yards Race.—P. J. Roche, Ireland, 1; J. P. Stark, Scotland, 2. Won by a good yard. Time—10 2/5secs.

Throwing the Hammer.—C. Walsh, Ireland, 162ft. 7in. 1; T. R. Nicholson Scotland, 161ft., 2. Murray, Ireland, competed. Walsh also threw 169ft. 6in., beating the Scottish record by nearly 7in., but the referee decided that his feet crossed the line, and the throw was declared void.

220 Yards Race.—R. C. Duncan, Scotland, 1; P. J. Roche, Ireland, 2. Halwell did not run, having slightly strained his side. Won by a yard. Time—23 1/5secs.

One Mile Race.—H. T. Jamieson, Scotland, 1; G. N. Morphy, Ireland, 2. Won by 3 yards Time—4mins. 34secs.

High Jump.—C Leahy, Ireland, 6ft. 1in., 1; T. J. Ahearne, Ireland, 5ft. 10½in., 2.

Putting the Weight.—Dennis Horgan, Ireland, 45ft. 10in. 1; T. Kirkwood, Scotland, 43ft. 8in., 2.

120 Yards' Hurdle.—T. J. Ahearne, Ireland, 1; C. E. Kinahan, Ireland, 2. Won by half a yard. Time—16 4/5secs.

Quarter-mile Race.—W. Halswell, Scotland, 1; D. Dickson, Scotland, 2. Robb also ran. Won easily by 12 yards. Time—51 4/5secs.

Broad Jump.—T. J. Ahearne, Ireland, 22ft. 5½in., 1; W. H. Bleadon, Scotland, 21ft. 7½in., 2.

Four Miles' Race.—J. Murphy, Ireland, 1; S. Stevenson, Scotland, 2. Won by half a lap. Time—20mins. 46 4/5 ecs.

Ireland thus won the 100 yards, half-mile, 4 miles' hurdles high jump, long jump, hammer and weights, and secured the match by 8 events to 3, Scotland winning the furlong, quarter-mile and mile races.

THE FOURTH OLYMPIAD.

"I declare the Olympic Games of London open," said the King on Monday afternoon, standing at the front of the royal box in the vast Stadium at Shepherd's Bush.

The trumpeters of the Household Cavalry blew a fanfare, the Royal Standard was run up by two blue jackets in a conspicuous central position beside the swimming-tank, and 30,000 people of a score of nationalities cheered joyously.

The long parade before the royal box, each nation's competitors grouped behind a national banner, which was dipped to salute King Edward, was brilliantly successful.

Two thousand athletes, the pick of the manhood of the world's nations, graced by the inclusion of twenty-three lady gymnasts from Denmark, formed an army the like of which no previously athletic display in the history of the world had witnessed.

The order of the nations was as follows: Belgium, Bohemia, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Holland, Hungary, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Finland, the United States, South Africa, Canada, Australia, and Great Britain.

Especial cheers greeted the Danish girl gymnasts, the huge Greek who carried his country's banner, and the neat Italians with their black coats and white knickers.

Many officers of the Swedish army who are competitors wore their full uniforms.

Generally speaking the Germans and Bohemians were dressed entirely in navy blue, and carried white straw hats, and the Norwegians and Swedes wore white flannel trousers and singlets.

The Americans, for the most part, wore everyday costumes, and the Australian swimmers were conspicuous for their splendid figures as they marched past in "university" swimming costume.

The Britishers included almost every recognised sporting costume, from swimming to fencing. The Canadians and South Africans passed with their hands at the salute.

Many British swimmers wore mackintoshes over their costumes. The mechanical high-stepping movement of the Germans was much remarked upon.

The King and Queen showed their keen appreciation of the spectacle, and even fine weather could not have made it more impressive.

Of all the subsequent proceedings, the gymnastic display by the Danish girls was the most captivating. They looked charming in their cream blouses and short divided skirts, with brown stockings and shoes.

They gave a demonstration of physical exercises in unison, and then jumped over a vaulting-horse in perfect style.

Loud and continuous cheering rewarded them as they left the arena.

The American competitors, who occupied seats in the competitors' stand, favoured their own compatriots, whether they won or lost their heats, with vociferous college yells and cheers.

The proceedings were marred by the weather. It had rained heavily all Sunday night and continued so to do till well on into Monday afternoon, with this exception the inauguration was absolutely successful. Appended are the day's results.—

WATER POLO.

Belgium beat Holland by 8 goals to 1.

English athletes again held their own at the Stadium on Thursday, when the events were contested in, a continuous drizzle, and, at times, a downright deluge of rain. It was cold and miserable, and spectators found it absolutely impossible to work up any enthusiasm, in spite of the fact that sport was again exceedingly interesting. Details:—

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HOUNDS.

Saturday, 25th July.—Stoneridge at 12 noon. The meet this morning was preceded by a large breakfast given by Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, at the Club Annexe. Only hunting people were invited and about sixty sat down to a most excellent meal. The rain came down steadily and I am afraid Mr. Penn did not get a very good photograph of the field, for which purpose we vainly endeavoured to groupe ourselves at Stoneridge, in a downpour. A long trot along the hard high road brought us to Rees' Corner, the Master drew down by Dairymaid and on into Baikie. A shrill "tally ho" from the hill top above Druid, brought Master and hounds at a gallop, hounds picked up the line between the road and Long Swamp, carrying it across the Swamp, they ran very fast, as if for Pearl Crossing, but bent to the left and ran into their jack on the edge of Jackal Shola. We then drew along the downs to Beadnell's and round by Bracken, where hounds feathered on a line, but were unable to do anything with it. In the bog below Wenlock, however, they started running in earnest, coming out of the covert below the Pykara Road, they led past Brooksby to Wapshare's Hare, through the latter and on to the ridge above, along which they raced at a great rate. Leaving Patrick Shola on the left they crossed the Pykara Bridle Path and swung left handed round the hill into Hearty Shola through which they drove him and over the bog at the bottom, then rose the hill and dipped into Hamlet, and out at the top skirting Bracken, and sinking the hill to Fuddler's Shola, they crossed the bog, and bending left handed ran up the ravine into Wenlock, in which they hunted about for a time, but were finally beaten. It was raining hard all the time and a thick mist coming on the Master drew towards home, viâ Bockey and Brooklands without result.

Monday, 27th July.—Sheffield Corner at 7-30 A.M. It was a very wet rough morning and there was barely any scent at all. We had too short runs, but hounds were unable to do much.

Tuesday, 28th July.—Beadnell's at 12 noon. The Master threw hounds into covert, a little to the right, above the bungalow: a jack was afoot at once and led hounds up the hill to the Toda Mund where he was headed by a Toda boy. He doubled back, and crossed into Hearty, to the right of the Mund. Coming out at the lower end, he went away over the bog, through Hamlet, up the far side, and along the wire fence then sank the hill to the right of Warwick Shola and crossed the Badanakod Stream, below the Toda Mund. Bending left handed round the hill he dived down into the Dunsandle Tea Estate. Still keeping to the left, he turned sharp up a steep and rocky hill thickly covered with dense scrub, and only the roughest of cattle tracks to scramble through, if one wished to keep with hounds. The Master was the only one anywhere near hounds at this point. There was a thick white fog when hounds started running, and those of the field who did not get a good start were left hopelessly out of this merry little chase. The field was a small one.

Thursday, 30th July.—Fairlawns Bridge at 7-30 A.M. A raw cold morning, very cold wind, and scent was poor. The Master drew up the valley from Ursula to Dreadnought and then on to Baikie. On the ridge above Druid, the 2nd Whip viewed a jack, hounds were at once clapped on, they travelled at a fair pace over the top of Jackal and along the Krurmund Road then turned left handed into Monkey. Coming out at the bottom, they turned up Denmark Hill to the right of Baikie and over the top of Porcupine to Ursula, where scent, never very good, failed altogether. A long and unsuccessful draw over the downs brought us to Brooklands, in which hounds spoke to a line, but the instant they carried it out of the covert, they were unable to own to it. On being thrown in again from the East side, they touched another line which they puzzled out over the ridge and up the bog below Bingham and across to the Golf Links, but were unable to make anything more of it. We are sorry to hear that after Saturday's hunt, one hound returned to Kennels badly mauled by a panther, and that another is still missing.

PYKARA.

"I TELL you," said one man to another as they emerged from the corridor of a concert hall, "I envy that fellow who was singing."

"Envy him?" echoed the other. "Well, If I were going to envy a singer I'd select somebody with a better voice. His was about the poorest I ever heard."

"It's not his voice I envy, man," was the reply; "it's his tremendous courage."

SECUN DERABAD NOVICES TOURNAMENT.

13TH HUSSARS vs. BOLARUM GYMKHANA.—The tournament opened on the 30th ultimo after many postponements. The above teams met in the first game the Hussars eventually winning by 3 goals to 1.

First Chukker.—Sticky play at the start was followed by a vigorous attack on the Gymkhana goal. The ball was got away, however, and the period ended without score.

Second Chukker.—A penalty against the Hussars was not taken advantage of and after a spell of mid field play the 13th got away and Captain Hodgkinson drew first blood.

Third Chukker.—The Gymkhana pressed but the ball was cleared, even play followed and then the Hussars got through and scored again. Bolarum returned to the attack and Harbord scored.

Fourth Chukker.—The Hussars attacked and Rees scored. They kept up the attack but Evans got away to miss in mid field. No further scoring, the 13th winning as stated by 3 goals to 1. Teams:—

The BEST Diagram made before the Editor of the Field with a Rifle of this bore.

"FIELD," March 23, 1907: ". . . A very valuable advance has been achieved, and Messrs. Lang are to be congratulated on their enterprise in so promptly bringing forward a rifle and cartridge complying with the two most pressing demands in sporting rifles, viz., a weapon to take the place of the prohibited ·450 and a cartridge which shows an advance in flatness of trajectory, with a diminution of recoil and pressure."

SPECIAL NO. 2. ·360 BORE.
VELOCITY 2,150 ft. sec.

Eight shots at 100 yards with open sights from Lang double barrel ·360 No. 2 nitro express rifle, using right and left barrels alternately. Centres of shots contained in parallelogram 2·15 in wide by 2·2 in. high. All the shots cut a circle 2·1 in diameter.

Made By the Editor of the "Field."

"FIELD": "A trial series produced a remarkably fine group of eight shots fired alternately from the two barrels. . . . A very fine performance for a double rifle, very hard to beat. Shooting was conducted in a manner somewhat out of the ordinary routine, that is to say, the shots were not fired by a professional expert, but by one who had enjoyed no previous opportunity of acquainting himself with the idiosyncrasies of the weapon."

CALCUTTA RUGBY LEAGUE.

CALCUTTA vs. DALHOUSIE.—Played on the Calcutta ground on Saturday last the home team winning by a goal and 5 tries (14 points) to nil. Play was in favour of Calcutta all through Whitely almost scored at the start and from a five yards scrum that followed Candler handed out to Arthur who got over with the first try the place failing. Whitely crossed the line before the interval, the kick being again unsuccessful. In the second half, Siddons scored a try and Oliver converted and Kerr obtained the fourth try from a forward rush.

HIGHLAND L. I. vs. UNITED SERVICES.—This match was played at Dum Dum last Saturday the H. L. I. winning by 3 goals to a try—15 points to 3. The Services had the best of the opening exchanges and Lieut. Cunningham scored a try which was not converted. Then the home team improved but though they made great efforts they could not score and the United Services led at the interval. On changing ends the Highlanders kept up the attack and Lieut. Alstone got over, Tait adding the extra points. Some good passing by the H. L. I. backs a little later enabled Lieut. Lilburn to cross the U. S. line, Tait once more converting. The Services made some good runs and were very near scoring on several occasions. The Highlanders again took the ball down and Metcalfe scored the third try. Tait kicked a goal and the H. L. I. won as stated.

CALCUTTA vs HIGHLAND L. I.—A scrambling game on the Calcutta ground on Tuesday evening ended in a win for the home team by two tries (6 points) to a dropped goal (4 pts). The H. L. I. led at the interval, Clarke dropping a goal; but on changing ends Calcutta got over twice. Burnett getting possession from a wild kick and crossing the line with the first try and Arthur getting over with the second. Both attempts to majorise failed.

DALHOUSIE vs. UNITED SERVICES.—Played on the Dalhousie ground on Tuesday evening the home team winning by a try to nil. It was a very evenly contested game throughout, the only point being scored by Allen who received the ball from Holly after a good run.

THE GREEN PEACOCK.

Pavo muticus, Blanford, Fauna Brit. Ind., Birds, Vol IV, page 70.

Native names:—Daung Udaung, Burmese; Marait, Salain Susia, Karen; Burong marak Malay.

In this species the hen, except for the absence of the train, closely resembles the cock; the crest in both sexes is longer than in the common peafowl, and composed of feathers webbed all the way down, but gradually broadening from the root upwards, and with rounded tips; the bare face also is blue above and yellow below; moreover the present bird is a little larger.

The cock's plumage bears a general resemblance to that of the common peacock, but differs strikingly in the neck, being bronze green, the feathers being of a scale like appearance. Moreover, the wings, except the chestnut pinion-quills, are black with a blue and green gloss, and the thighs black, as in the blackwinged variety of the common bird. The hen has the same bronze-green neck and dark glossy wings and the train is replaced by feathers of a more ordinary length coarsely pencilled with buff, instead of green as in the cock, and the train is replaced by feathers of a more ordinary length and texture, though reaching to the end of the tail; these are golden green with irregular coarse pencilling of buff.

Young birds are like her, but show some buff edgings to the feathers.

This species extends from Chittagong to Java, being the ordinary peafowl of Burma, but it is local and not abundant in most places, though it is so in some parts of Upper Burma. Little is known about its breeding. In captivity it has crossed with the common peafowls, the hybrid, judging from a young male in the British Museum, exhibiting a mingling of the colours of the parents, but in its crest following the common species exclusively.

The only other peacock hybrid I know of is that between the common peacock and the guinea-fowl, a specimen of which was figured in the Field recently, and was noticeable as lacking both the train and crest of the one parent and the helmet and wattles of the other; this seems to be the usual result of such remote crosses.

The jungle fowls are birds of a very different type, and also stand much alone, although they have an obvious affinity to the ruffed pheasants, to be mentioned later. Their characteristic points are the comb, large in the cocks and small in the hens, and the vertically folded tail, the undersides of the feathers facing each other. These characteristics apply to both sexes; the cocks alone, however, have the two central tail feathers long and curved, and are furnished with long and sharp spurs, besides differing altogether from the hens in colour. Jungle fowls, except that they carry their tails low, much resemble tame fowls of rather small size, and are thus very easily recognizable; the various species are very distinct from each other, and only four in number; three of them occur in our limits.

The jungle-fowl are fond of cover, and roost on trees at night, a habit which the tame fowl has retained. His habit of crowing at night is, however, an original invention on his part, for which mankind used once to thank him, but now, alas! legally indicts as a nuisance.

Jungle-fowl are often found in pairs, though a cock naturally likes to have a harem if possible, and they are very hard fighters. The cocks show off by slanting themselves over to one side, as is constantly seen in the tame fowl.

THE RED JUNGLE-FOWL.

Gallus ferrugineus.—Blanford, Fauna Brit. India, Birds, Vol. IV, p. 75.

Native names:—Jangal-murgh (cock), Jangli-murghi (hen) Hindi: Ban murghi, Hindi; Kukar, Kukra, Bankukar, Beng.; Ganja (cock) Uriya; Pazok-tohi, Tang-pling, Lepcha; Nag-tee-ja, Bhotanese; Bir-sim, Kol; Gera gogor (cock), Kuru (hen), Gond; Taukyet, Burmese; Kura, Chittagong.

In this, the best known species and the ancestor of all our tame poultry, the face is naked in both sexes, though less in the hen than the cock, and there is a flap of skin below the ear, the "ear-lobe" of poultry-fanciers. The wattles, fleshy flaps of skin on each side of the throat, are usually wanting in the hen, whose comb is also very small. Even in the cock the comb, which is of the notched "single" type so familiar in tame fowls, is not so large a one as is carried by these latter.

The cock's plumage is black below and orange and red above, the neck and rump being covered by long, loose-textured feathers called "hackles" by fanciers. The tail, which has long curving upper tail-coverts hanging along each side of it, is glossy deep green, and the wings are a fine study in the arrangement of plumage, being deep glossy red, dark metallic green, black, and chestnut, put together in a diagrammatic manner most useful to ornithological students, for the major wing-coverts, the small feathers along the front edge of the wing, are black, the median, red, the major, metallic green, forming a conspicuous bar; while the primaries or pinion quills are dingy black with paler edges and the outer halves of the secondaries or fore-arm-quills are cinnamon. Thus by getting hold of a tame cock which shows the jungle-fowl colours, and such are not at all uncommon, one may master several technicalities with great ease.

After breeding the cock casts his long neck hackles and tail feathers, the neck becoming clothed with a short black feathering. It is somewhat remarkable that no such change takes place in the tame fowl, even in India.

The cock is well over two feet long, with a wing about nine inches and shank three inches.

The hen is brown above, the colour being produced by a very fine pencilling of black and buff; below she is a plain reddish brown. Her neck, which is covered with short hackles, is streaked with black and gold, and the side feathers of the tail are black. It is a curious fact that few tame hens are coloured exactly like this.

The hen is about seventeen inches long, with a wing just over seven and shank about two and a half inches.

Young cocks, as usual, are much like the hen at first. The comb and wattles are red, and the face reddish flesh-colour; the beak dark brown, eyes red, and legs slate colour. The ear-lobes are usually white in Indian specimens and red in those from further east, which also tend to be redder in plumage.

This species ranges from India, through Burma and the Shan States, to Siam, Cochin China, the Malay Peninsula and many eastern islands; but its precise natural range is not quite certain, as, being the ancestor of domestic fowls, it is apt to give rise to feral or secondarily wild races, owing to the escape or intentional liberation of tame poultry. It especially frequents low elevation on hills, and likes cover near cultivation; and in such places it often interbreeds with its tame descendants.

The voice of this bird is just like that of the tame fowl, but in the case of the cock's crow the resemblance is to that of the Bantam breeds, the last note being short. It breeds from March to June, laying up to eleven pale buff eggs in a rough nest on the ground. The eggs are small, scarcely exceeding two inches in length.

The red Jungle-fowl is practically confined to the region where the sal-tree (Shorea robusta) grows; so much is this the case that an isolated wood of this tree, near Panchmarhi in the Denura valley, is occupied by this species, although the gray jungle-fowl (Gallus sonneratii), presently to be noticed, holds all the territory round about. The reason for this would be a very interesting subject for inquiry, and no doubt some forest officer will be able sooner or later to afford a solution of the problem. The red jungle-fowl is a very hard fighter, and no doubt sal jungle has some special attraction which makes him keep it to himself. In a domesticated state this species is found, as everyone knows all over the world where it can be got to live, and its endurance of cold is most remarkable considering its tropical origin.

Many breeds have of course been raised from it by the selection of variations in shape and colour, but India seems to possess no particular breed except the fighting Aseel and the long lanky Chittagong, the "Malay" of home fanciers. Both of these are characterized by very small combs and wattles and short glossy plumage, which in the cocks often resembles that of the wild bird, but in hens apparently never or very rarely. The Aseel, however, is short and sturdy, not lengthy in make like its relative.

With regard to the foreign breeds now being imported, I should advise any of my readers who is starting to keep such fowls, to avoid all the feather-legged and five-toed varieties, such as the Brahma, Cochin, and Dorking, such monstrosities of structure sadly handicapping a fowl's usefulness. In Calcutta there can generally be obtained excellent black China fowls, the "Langshan" of the fancy at home. This is a large bird of somewhat the Cochin type but less clumsy, and with very little feathering on the legs; many imported birds, in fact, having none. This is an excellent general utility fowl, and personally I should never trouble to send home for stock while such can be had in the country.

THE CEYLON JUNGLE-FOWL.

Gallus lafayettii, Blanford, Faun. Brit. India, Birds, Vol. IV.

Native names:—Weli kukula (the male), Weli kikili (the female), Cingalese; kala kodi, Tamils of Ceylon.

The cock of this species bears a strong general resemblance to the red jungle-cock, but is orange-red below as well as above, the breast feathers being glossy and pointed very like hackles, in fact. The secondary quills of the wing are also purple-black instead of chestnut.

The throat and most of the rump-feathers, which are not so long and hackled as in the continental bird, are glossy violet, and the tail has a purple rather than a green gloss.

The comb also in this species has a yellow patch in the middle; the face and wattles are darker, and the legs are yellow instead of slate-colour.

The hen is quite as different in her way from the red jungle-fowl hen; she is of much the same partridge-brown hue above, but has no distinct hackle on the neck; her wings are boldly barred with black, and her underparts not cinnamon, but mottled black, brown and white, becoming lighter further back. Her legs are yellow like the cock's. She has no wattles, and is feathered on the face.

Young cocks are redder above and darker below than hens. The size of this species is about the same as that of the red jungle-fowl, except that the cock's tail is longer; the hens, on the other hand, appear to be shorter in this species.

The Ceylon jungle-fowl is confined to the island "where every prospect pleases;" but the parts thereof that especially gratify the tastes of the bird are the northern jungles and the southern hills. There seems to be a good deal of variation in the breeding season and also in the number of eggs laid, which is given as from two or twelve by different authors. There is nothing noteworthy about the appearance of these eggs.

The crow of the Ceylon cock is very different from that of the rival chanticleer of India, being two syllabled and commonly rendered as a call to one "George Joyce." A Ceylon planter, however, told me recently that the general opinion now-a-days was that the bird's friend's name was "John."

The cock is a gentleman of somewhat Don Juan-like instincts, and apt to intrude on the domestic happiness of village roosters without the excuse that the red jungle-fowl can offer of community of descent.

THE GREY OR MADRAS JUNGLE-FOWL.

Gallus sonneratii, Blanford, Faun. Brit. India, Birds, Vol. IV, p. 78.

Native names:—Jungli muryhi, Hind.; Komri, Mt. Abu; Pardah Komri, Gondhi; Ran-kombadi, Mahr.; Kathe kozhi or koli, Tamil; Adavi kode, Telugu; koli, kad koli, Canarese.

This species also is much of the same size as the red jungle-fowl, but in the cock the tail runs very distinctly longer, and may measure as much as a foot-and-a-half long. The tail-coverts, however, are not long and curved as in the red jungle-fowl, nor are there any hackles on the rump.

The general colour of the cock is dark grey, the feathers having white shafts and grey edges, the wing-quills and tail are purple black, and the neck feathers and those of the upper back and flap of the wing are tipped with sealing wax-like spots, orange on the wing and golden yellow on the neck. These curious tips are formed by a coalescence of the barbs of the feathers into a horny plate, and are found in a few other birds not at all allied to this family. There are rudimentary spots of the kind on the rump feathers, and a tinge of red on the flanks.

The bill is horny colour, comb, wattles, and face red, the "ear-lobe" being indicated by a fold of skin; and the legs are usually said to be yellow, but in fine cocks they are salmon-colour. The cock moults his hackles after breeding like the red jungle-fowl.

The hen, which has a very small comb and no wattles, is of a partridge-brown above with no distinct hackles, and white beneath with black edges to the feathers, getting narrower further back; her legs are dull faint yellow, and her comb a very dull red.

This bird, which is very striking in appearance and much admired by everyone who notices it, is confined to Southern and Western India, inhabiting hilly jungle and ranging even to the tons of the Nilgris and Pulneys. "It is found, says Dr. Blanford, "near the eastern coasts as far north as the Godavari, and in the Central Provinces its limit is some distance east of Sironcha, Chanda and Seoni. It is found throughout the Nerbudda valley west of Jubbulpore, and in parts of Central India and Rajputana, as far as the Aravalis and Mount Abu, but no farther to the northward or westward. It is met with near Baroda, but has not been observed in Kattyawar." In spite of the local intrusion of the red jungle-fowl into the grey's territory, mentioned in the account of the former species, it will be seen that on the whole their habitats are very distinct. But of course they meet occasionally. Jerdon says that near the junction of the Indravati with the Godavari he heard both species crowing within a few yards of each other, and shot one bird which was an undoubted hybrid—a remarkable fact, for hybrids between such distinct species as these are rare in nature.

Hybrids between this jungle-fowl and common poultry are not, however, very difficult to obtain in confinement; they are more or less fertile, and one skilful fancier at home found that his crossed birds bred any way, indiscriminately, so that they showed practically no sterility. This being the case, it is possible that some of the tame fowls in the South of India have grey jungle-fowl blood; but the traces would soon be lost, as the beautiful gold-spangled hackle tends to disappear even in the first cross.

I may here venture to reprobate the attempt to introduce the red jungle-fowl into the Neilgherries. I have every sympathy with acclimatisation when reasonably conducted: but considering that the grey jungle-fowl is in the Neilgherries already, I think the introduction of the red is a great mistake. For, in the first place, it may probably not succeed, because if the red jungle-fowl could thrive in Southern India it would have got there already; or if it does, it will lead to the grey species being mongrelized or driven out by the red, if the latter prove the stronger bird, as it probably is; if, on the other hand, the grey prove the stronger, there will be a certain amount of interbreeding, and the red will be crossed out and go to the wall. In any case it would be a great pity to lose the Madras jungle-fowl, which is quite unique in its way, and needs protection and cultivation, as a good many cocks are killed for their skins, which are in considerable demand among salmon fly-dresses and makers of ornamental feather work. This using of birds for feathers is an very well, as I pointed out in the introduction, but it needs careful regulation, and I sincerely hope that sportsmen and forest officers in India will do their best to preserve and encourage this bird.

The grey jungle-fowl differs very much in voice from the red bird and its poultry-yard descendant; but as authors say, the crow is very hard to describe, sounding more like a cackle, and the bird does not flap his wings before uttering it. Birds I have seen in confinement had a peculiar alarm-note when approached, sounding like "koorchy-koorchy," quite different from the cackle of the common fowl.

The breeding-season of this bird varies, being usually from March to July, but on the western side of the Neilgherries it is from October to December. The eggs number from seven to thirteen, and are buff-coloured and laid as usual on the ground with sometimes a few dry leaves below.

On account of its beautiful and distinct appearance, the sport it affords—for it is a wary bird—and the value of its feathers, this would be a good species to acclimatize outside India wherever there is a warm dry climate. Thus it would be excellently suited for turning out at the Cape, or in Australia or California; such extension of the habitat of a desirable bird where it does not interfere with another equally desirable, being in my opinion really justifiable acclimtization.

Apropos of this I may mention that the only remaining species of jungle-fowl, the green jungle-cock of Java and other eastern islands, ought certainly to be acclimatized somewhere—the Andamans, for instance, or some of the West Indies. This beautiful bird is mostly black, with an orange patch on the wing, and a ruff of round-tipped bronze green feathers instead of the usual neck hackle. He has no ear-lobe or wattles, but an expansible dewlap rather like a turkey's, and his comb is not notched. It and the dewlap are most exquisitely coloured with puce and pale blue, with a yellow patch on the latter; and the face is flesh-colour, often flushing to scarlet.

The Story Teller.

THE GREAT CLAN TARTAN MYSTERY.

At Whitsuntide I found myself in Edinburgh, a city I have loved from boyhood and have visited many times. To me the joy of Edinburgh consists very largely in those little symbols of race and tradition which everywhere meet the eye, in contrast with the undecipherable masses of London. For this reason I am delighted at the sight of a tartan, whether it be a man's tartan necktie, a girl's tartan blouse, or the great displays of clan tartans in the shop windows of Prince's Street. When the shop tartans are named my interest is doubled. At the same time I have been oppressed by a certain mystery in clan tartans, and on this occasion I resolved, like Rosa Dartle, to ask for information.

By a happy chance I met a young commercial gentleman, attached to a great tartan manufacturing house, who had forgotten more about tartans than I shall ever know, and his remarks contributed greatly to my enlightenment.

Noticing my interest in a large display of tartans in a glass case, all of them labelled with clan names, this young gentleman approached me with the remark that I might be interested in tar-r-tans.

I replied that ,as a Londoner, one of my keenest pleasures in roving the streets of Edinburgh was to identify by their tartan adornments—be they blouses or neckties—the men and women of many an old and gallant clan whose deeds had awakened the harp as the wind moves the corn, and whose on-rush of bossy shields down many a star-forsaken glen had been terrible as the levin hurled from the cloud on the blasted oaks of Duvranna.

He said that he ought really to have had notice of my coming, but that he could well believe that such an occupation was most delightful, and also highly instructive, to a Londoner not accustomed to the daily sight of tar-r-tans.

I said that I had made some little study of tartans, and had now arrived at a point when without much difficulty I could pick out a Leslie here and a MacPherson there, a pretty Macleod mounting a Portobello tram-car, or a stalwart Macneill of Barra bicycling to his office; and that only that morning I had been interested to observe by the number of Black Watch tartan dresses in Prince's Street how many wives and daughters of the officers of that gallant regiment had tripped down from the Castle to do their shopping.

He said that in his opinion only a Londoner could appreciate Edinburgh like that, but that, speaking with the most perfect candour, he thought that the recreation I had described might be carried too far, inasmuch as he had known cases where the wearing of a one-and-elevenpenny tar-r-tan necktie could not be accepted as a full and accurate statement of a man's pedigree; and that as to the Black Watch, he thought it right to mention that the regiment was now in Ireland, but that its absence had not, so far as his firm's experience went, lessened the demand for their tar-r-tan as a thoroughly serviceable dress material.

I said that these remarks caused me no little surprise, as they seemed to imply that it was possible for a person to enter a shop in Prince's Street, and, without producing a birth certificate, be supplied with a tartan of some gallant Highland family whose cradles had been rocked from time immemorial among the everlasting hills; and that, speaking as a Londoner, such transactions appeared to me to be likely to make Sir Walter Scott uneasy in his grave.

He said that he thanked me for my reference to the posthumous feelings of Sir Walter Scott, but that I was probably not acquainted with the very satisfactory turnover of the trade in tar-r-tans; that as to the Black Watch tar-r-tan he would ask me to consider that, just as the regiment was prepared to go anywhere and do anything, so it was the constantly expressed opinion of the ladies of Edinburgh that its dark-hued tar-r-tan would go with anything and do anywhere; but that for his part he thought there were brighter tar-r-tans that made equally good walking skirts, and were superior for fancy goods; and that he conjectured I might not have seen Darwin's "Origin of Species" and other gift books bound in the tar-r-tan of Macintosh of Macintosh.

I said that he was destroying one of the few illusions which I had put by for my old age; and that I was now constrained to believe, in spite of cherished sentiment, that a Scotchman who by descent had no claim to Highland honours might wear a made-up tie which would lead me to address him as Mr. Macbeth.

He said that he could conceive that such a misconception might happen to me on any afternoon about seventeen times between the Waverley Steps and the Mound, more especially in the height of the American season, and that, speaking for himself, he was prepared to take a share of the responsibility, inasmuch as he represented a firm whose turnover in tar-r-tans was enormous, and who were, in fact, prepared to produce any tar-r-tan.

I said that he was the most informing man I had ever met; that the beauty and freedom of the Highland costume had appealed to me from earliest childhood; and that he had put into my mind a thought which I dare not utter in the city of Edinburgh.

He said that they would produce to order any tar-r-tan.

I said that it might be I had underrated my claim to wear the Highland kilt and its beautiful accessories; that I could not forget that I had read half the Waverley Novels, and knew a man who had read them all; that I had only yesterday travelled through several Highland glens in an exposed char-a-banc; that I had once spent a Sunday in Glasgow without specific reward; that I had known the Tottenham Court Road Highlander for twenty years, and Dr. Neil Munro for five, and that I held them both in the highest respect.

He said that his firm was prepared to fill an order for any tar-r-tan.

I said that the preparedness of his firm touched me more than I could say; that I had been a busy man, and had never founded anything, not even an English Free Library; that the bought of founding a family tartan, and taking it to London, was most uplifting; but that I realised the great mathematical difficulties which must beset the production of a new tartan.

He said that they were prepared to produce any desired tar-r-tan.

I said that as our conversation had proceeded so far, and had made us more like brothers than anything else, I would no longer conceal from him that my thoughts had run a little upon a tartan that should combine, without infringing, the best points of the Royal Stewart, the Clergy, and the Hunting MacNab.

He said that the tar-r-tan I had in mind was one which it would give them great pleasure to produce.

And there, for the present, the matter rests. I am to drop him a postcard.

PRINCE DE SAGAN is telling this story about Ysaye, the violinist "A millionaire bootmaker invited Ysaye to dine with him last year in Nice. After dinner the millionaire brought out a violin and asked Ysaye to play. The musician bit his lip, but taking the instrument he played several beautiful morceaux. Afterwards in Paris, Ysaye invited the millionaire to dinner in his turn. There was a distinguished company present. After dinner, as they were all at coffee in the salon a servant brought the host a pair of old boots. Ysaye took the boots and handed them gravely to his millionaire guest. 'But what am I to do with these?' the guest demanded, holding the boots awkwardly in his lap beside his cup. Ysaye smiled vindictively and flung his long lock behind his ear. 'In Nice,' he said, 'you asked me after dinner to play for you. Now I ask you to mend these boots for me. Each to his trade, you know.'"

THE MENAGERIES OF EUROPE.

With the view of obtaining hints for the improvement and development of the establishment under his own charge, Captain Stanley Flower, Director of the Zoological Gardens at Giza, Cairo, was instructed by the Egyptian Government to undertake an inspection of the various public and private menageries of Europe. The results of this tour of inspection, which took place in 1907, have been published at Cairo as an official paper, and contain a large amount of matter interesting alike to naturalists and to the general public. The programme of the tour was very comprehensive, so that the inspection included not only zoological gardens and menageries of all kinds, but likewise several vivariums and many museums.

To refer to Captain Flower's account of many well-known Continental museums and zoological gardens would occupy more space than we can afford, and would likewise be somewhat lacking in interest. We shall, therefore, content ourselves with brief notices of a few of the less well-known zoological establishments, both Continental and British.

In the introductory portion of his report, Captain Flower mentions that during his holiday in Europe he saw only 7 live specimens of the Orang-utan, whereas no less than 36 Chimpanzees, came under his notice. He also observes that lions were twice as numerous in the menageries he visited as tigers, as he saw just over 120 of the former to a little under 60 of the latter.

He adds that the total number of polar bears in captivity must be large. On the 11th July, he saw Mr. W. Hagenbeck's troop of trained animals in Buche's Circus, Hamburg, where, apart from domesticated animals and monkeys, there was one black bear, and no less than 63 polar bears. He describes it as a wonderful sight, although it was more marvellous still to see all these bears turned into one enclosure with Mr. Hagenbeck and his assistant, Mr. Kruger, calmly walking about amongst them.

As regards other establishments of special interest, Captain Flower observes that on the northern slopes of the foot-hills of the Harz Mountains, in the main street of the picturesque old town of Alfeld-on-the-Leine, stands an unpretentious, but artistic building bearing the simple name-board "C. Reiche." Within, and beyond in the yards, stables, and poultry-runs, is housed one of the most important trading menageries in the world, famed not so much for the magnitude of its trade, but as having supplied the public zoological gardens of Continental Europe with so many of their rarest exhibits. Indeed, the Zoological Society of London, appears from time to time to have been indebted to Mr. Reiche for help in obtaining otherwise unprocurable animals, generally so far as could be ascertained, at very moderate prices.

Mr. Reiche does not, however, restrict himself to wild animals, but deals largely in singing canaries, the trade in which must be colossal. Captain Flower states that according to the information supplied him over 100,000 cock birds reared in the Harz passed through Mr. Ruhe's hands during 1906, while a large business is also done in other small cage-birds.

Several wealthy gentlemen in various parts of the Continent, have private zoological gardens or menageries of their own. Among establishments of this nature visited by the author of the report is one maintained by that excellent naturalist, Mr. F. E. Blaauw, at his beautiful country seat of Gooliust,'s Graveland, near Hilversham, Holland. So long ago as 1900, Captain Flower, by the kindness of the owner had been privileged to see this menagerie, and in 1907 he was glad to be able to accept Mr. Blaauw's welcome invitation to revisit the establishment. The native wild birds add to the attractiveness of the Gooliust estate; in July golden orioles were whistling in the trees, while the number and comparative tameness of the herons was remarkable.

The mammals, seen to great advantage in large green paddocks, included 5 American bison, 5 banting, a beautiful herd of 6 blesbok, a pair of waterbuck, three elands, 8 white-tailed gnus, 6 or more great kangaroos and about a dozen bennett's wallabies.

Considering that the white-tailed gnu and the blesbok appear to be extinct as truly wild animals, the interest of Mr. Blaauw's menagerie is of the highest. One great event of the tour was a visit to Mr. Carl Hagenbeck's establishment at Stellingen. Captain Flower reports that marvellous progress has been made in these new Zoological Gardens during the last two years, and their energetic and experienced founder, and his two sons, have every reason to be proud of their work, and thoroughly deserve the success that is already theirs. Captain Flower strongly urges that everyone interested in the subject should personally visit the Stellingen Tierpark and form their own judgment. Personally he considers the view of the grounds from the restaurant as unique and interesting as any sight in Europe; interesting not only for the actual spectacle of garden and animals, but for the vast amount of careful forethought and practical knowledge of landscape-gardening and menagerie-technique that have necessarily been expended to bring about the result, a result on which Mr. Hagenbeck may be heartily congratulated. His scheme was vast and ambitious, but is now an accomplished fact.

Besides this grand panorama, the report also directs attention to a few of the many other features of this wonderful place. Firstly, the Japanese garden with its pretty pond and valuable antique bronze ornaments; secondly, the Reptile House, where the animals are very well exhibited, as the light enters the house from above the cages, and not from above the visitors, and where the service-arrangements for the large snake-cages are unusually practical and simple; thirdly, the collection of horns and antlers mounted on the walls of the restaurant, the specimens exhibited, comprising according to Mr. Hagenbeck's catalogue, many of great rarity or extreme fineness. Perhaps least known of all the establishments referred to is Captain J. A. M. Vipan's private collection of live freshwater fish housed in two special buildings in the garden of his Northamptonshire seat, Stibbington Hall, Wansford, near Peterborough. The contents of this collection are of so great scientific interest, and the success of the owner in keeping the fish alive and healthy and also in breeding them so remarkable, that Captain Flower thought it worth-while to give a complete list of the species he saw on his visit in June 1907, together with some notes which Captain Vipan was kind enough to give him while exhibiting and explaining his treasures.

The temperate aquarium is unheated, except in winter, when the water is kept just above freezing-point; this building containing 14 species. On the other hand, in the hot aquarium the water in the tanks is maintained at a temperature of from 75 degrees to 78 degrees Fahrenheit; 30 species being shown in this building. Among the rarities are specimens of the mail-clad bichir family, Polypteridae: —(Polypterus) from the Gambia, and likewise sterlets (Acipenser) presented by H. I. M. the Czar of Russia.

We must conclude our narrative of this interesting report by a reference to Captain Flower's summary of the extent of the natural history collections in the British Museum and of Mr. Rothschild's Museum at Tring.

Of birds in the national collection there are over 400,000 specimens, including nearly 100,000 eggs. "The bird collection of the British Museum must indeed be of priceless value, as it contains the material on which was founded the 'Catalogue of Birds,' being a description of all the known species of birds in the world."

The approximate numbers of specimens in other groups in the year 1904 were:—

Reptiles	36,000
Batrachians	15,000
Fish	73,000
Insects	1,018,000
Arachnida	31,000
Myriopoda	9,000
Crustacea	36,000
Mollusca	473,000
Echinoderms, Corals, etc. ...	62,000

At Tring Park, Hertfordshire, the Hon'ble Walter Rothschild, maintains his unique private zoological collection, which in June 1907, Captain Flower had the privilege and pleasure of visiting in the company of the founder and the curator, Dr. Ernst Hartert. The vast number of specimens, not only valuable for themselves, but also for the scientific data recorded about them, brought together in the lifetime of one man, and he still young, is wonderful; but more wonderful still is the extensive and accurate knowledge, which Mr. Rothschild has of all these hundreds of thousands of specimens. Among mammals there are particularly fine collections of anthropoid apes, zebras and antelopes, and particularly noticeable specimens are the white rhinoceros, the stuffed okapi, the stuffed giraffe, from Angola, with completely spotted legs, thus markedly different from all the Sudan giraffes, the head and upper part of the neck of another Southern African giraffe, showing the absence of the frontal horn, and the stuffed head and neck of a reticulated giraffe from Somaliland.

In the bird room Captain Flower was informed that 186,000 birds' skins are preserved: apparently the richest collection of birds in the world, with the exception of the British Museum (which possesses about 300,000 skins). The series of birds-of-paradise at Tring is considered by experts to be the best in the world; while the great auk is represented by a stuffed specimen, a skeleton, and two eggs.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The decision on the objection in Stand Plate was announced on Saturday—a good deal quicker than had been anticipated. The Stewards uphold the objection lodged againstRosette, late Parody, and the race is awarded to the second, Flower Girl, Little Dolly and O. K. being placed second and third. All bets on Rosette have been declared void and all monies invested on her will be returned. The Pony is disqualified from racing under C.T.C. rules in perpetuity.

The decision as regards the bets is made no doubt on the "you can't lose if you can't win" principle, but the books contend that the backers of Rosette had a chance of winning as there was no certainty that an objection would be laid and think that the settlement that has been made presses very hardly on them. However, things of this sort are always rough on someone and rightly or wrongly the racing world as a whole thinks that the layers can afford to stand it best so they have to bear the brunt. No doubt they will take it out of the punting brigade once or twice before the end of the season.

The Second Monsoon Meeting was a great success. Four hurdle races figured on the card and they were all good to watch—fair fields in three of them all pretty jumpers and one dead heat and three close finishes. What can a sport—loving public ask more? And when we add that the winner was the favourite in three cases and second favourite in the other it is odds on that a great majority of people went home very well pleased with the day's outing. Messrs. Barrow and Evers divided the honors between them. The former scoring in the first two, while the light weight won the third and dead heated in the fourth with Captain Fraser. On the flat Murdison won two out of the three events and now has the remarkable record for the two meetings of five rides and four firsts. We advisedly don't say wins as one of them was on the unfortunate Rosette.

The weather kept nice and fine and there was a much better attendance than on the first day—the going also was not at all bad considering what a lot of rain there had been during the week and the hurdle course in particular was excellent.

Matters began with the open hurdle race for which, owing to a series of misadventures, there were only four starters. Riverside was an odds on favourite from the beginning and the others were hardly backed at all. Pennant again gave a little trouble at the post, but got away well this time at the fall of the flag. Musette was quickest away with him and the two led over the first few jumps, Riverside II. hung back to old Parole for a bit, but then going after the others he overhauled them gradually and passed on the outside at the home bend. The three jumped the last hurdle almost together, but from there the favourite went on and though Pennant stuck to him much better than was expected from his last week's performance he won fairly easily. Old Parole seemed to have gone off a bit from the first meeting and ran a very bad last.

There were seven starters for the Amateur Hurdle Plate I., out of whom Seditious was a strong favourite, Queen of Hearts and Lady Gold the only others backed. Moachin, who is a fast improving horse, showed the way for the first seven furlongs, Seditious well up. After the jump by the Monsoon Stand Seditious was leading from Lady Gold, Diablo and Queen of Hearts. The little mare then began to put on the pace and came up with the others at the last jump, from which she passed Lady Gold, Diablo and forced Mr. Barrow to ride his hardest to win on Seditious by a bare neck. Lady Gold three lengths behind.

There were again seven out for the Pony Hurdles. Envious who was giving 6lb. to Killarney, was thought to be an absolute "sitter" even though Mr. Seiger's mare was showing a great deal of improvement.

The race was a pretty one to watch as they were all together to the fifth hurdle, Killarney, Pineal and Lady George leading. After this Envious went after them; she lost ground at the bend, but soon made up and passed the tiny black who was under the whip. She then went on to chase Pineal, who was hard at Killarney, but travelling the fastest of the three, her effort was too late and she could only finish third, two lengths behind, Smallman's mount. The latter could make no impression on Killarney who won, possibly with a little in hand, by half a length.

The Amateur Hurdle Plate II. had six starters, Bonita favourite and Idle also well backed as the two were rightly thought to be in a class by themselves. Bonita, who takes a very strong hold, was away off to the front chased by Myolene. Idle, who occupied a very nice position throughout, went up to the leader at the fourth hurdle and from thence home there was a rattling fine race, between the pair, the Judge being unable to separate them at the finish, the others had tailed off to nothing. Matsumata third six lengths away and Myolene dead beat some lengths behind her.

This finished the hurdle racing for the day, and the flat brigade started their turn with the Monsoon Plate, Division I.

"Cingalee, Cingalee, I've set my heart on a Cingalee," was the tune ringing in everyone's head and they backed the mare, who rejoices in that name, to two to one on and then were not satisfied, though Mercedes and Silphoe also had good support. The favourite did not keep her supporters long in anxiety as getting away well with Silphoe and Eljin, she forged away from them after the first three furlongs. Mercedes, who is a very slow beginner, came through at the home turn, but though going very fast could not overtake the other mare, who won easily by a length and a half "amidst the rejoicings of the multitude."

Seven ponies started for the Pony Plate. Solace who is looking very well a strong favourite at even money, Moria also well backed. The whole field got away pretty much together, but after two furlongs the favourite went right away from them and won very easily. There was a good fight for the places, Moria, who came strongly at the finish just beating Flower Girl by a short head for third place and running within half a length of Primrose who was second.

The last race of the day (Monsoon Plate, Division II.) gave a victory to Mr. A. N. Dass, who backed his horse, Mulison, to win him a nice little packet and pulled it off successfully. Murdison took him out to the front from the word "go" and won easily by two lengths from the favourite Cyril. There was a very long delay at the start of this race caused by Forest Light, who sulked and would neither canter, trot nor walk up to the gate. He wasn't very much use either when he did get there as he managed to get off slowly and would not gallop a yard, finishing last by half a furlong.

The entries for next Saturday are again quite good. As usual the Amateur event—a handicap hurdle race for horses—heads the list with 26 entries, and will presumably be divided. The open hurdle race is much better this time and to the agreeable disappointment of everyone has eleven entries and is likely to produce a very good race. The Kidderpore Plate has 20 entries, the Selling Race 14 and the Pony Plate 13. There are only 5 duplicates so good fields may be expected throughout.

There has not been much schooling done this week Viking and St. Rule have both been out, the former jumping clumsily and the latter much too big. At this time of year a race once a week is enough for most of them.

Cain (Mr. Corbett), Ruby (Mr. Turner) and Pardon (Mr Evers), went out together Wednesday morning, the first pair went over three flights only in good form and then Pardon went on by himself, but tired a good deal at the finish. St. Rule (Mr. Evers), Dougall (Mr. Bletsoe), and Dalgai (Mr. Levetus) did a school over four fences, the last named hit the third one rather hard and stopped. St. Rule jumped well, but a bit big.

The Calcutta Light Horse are holding a sporting gymkhana on Tuesday next the 18th, (a whole holiday) and hope to see a very large muster of their friends. The events include a jumping competition ball and bucket, one or two items for ladies, etc., etc. These are always very jolly little shows and any one who goes is sure to have a good time.

The Novices, Polo tournament, at Secunderabad, ended on the 7th instant, in a win for the 13th Hussars, who beat the Royal Fusiliers by 3 goals to 2.

"I wired you the result of the Eclipse Stakes," writes our London correspondent, but I was unable, in the limitations of a telegraphic message, to describe the unseemly scene which followed the victory of Mr. J. B. Joel's horse. The recent criminal prosecution of Sievier by Joel has done one thing at any rate; it has established the fact that the accused enjoys a deal of popularity among a certain class who go a-racing. The utterly unsportsmanlike reception of Your Majesty's win was an unmistakable proof of this fact. The result of the race was a big surprise we know; but the discreditable demonstration, which occurred as Mr. Joel's horse passed the post and returned to the paddock, was a still greater one to the respectable contingent in the enclosure. Happily such occurrences are very rare on English racecourses. Booing, hooting, hissing and expectives, not unmixed with the profanity common to this class of barracker, were loud and continuous as the horse was seen to be winning and on his number being hoisted the outburst was renewed with astounding savageness.

The following report of a dog case, culled from a home paper, opens up a few legal and commercial reflections and presents a rather uncommon picture of pathos and humour surely:—

"After taking a pomeranian dog to Alfred Westworth, a Sydenham veterinary, and paying him 3s. 6d. to have it poisoned, Herbert Leppard, wholesale jeweller, of Hatton Garden, discovered the animal running about the street.

Finding that Westworth had sold the dog for £1, Leppard sued him at the Greenwich County Court for £30 3s. 6d. as the value of the animal and damages for its detention.

The defence was that Westworth originally intended to destroy the dog, but that when he took it into his surgery "the little chap" looked up into his face and the defendant had not the heart to kill it.

The judge ordered the dog to be given up to the plaintiff, or, with the alternative, the defendant to pay £5 for its value."

The day the last received mail left London the great Marathon race was decided and was finished too late to admit of our correspondent getting the result. Pending receipt of complete details, it may interest our athletic readers to have an idea of the route over which the race was run. It covered twenty-six miles and was from Windsor to Shepherd's Bush finishing up with one lap of the track at the Stadium.

Over seventy picked runners, representing seventeen different nations, started from Windsor Great Park at half-past two. The following countries were represented in the race, the figures following the names showing the number of runners:—

Canada (12).	Greece (2).
United Kingdom (12).	Austria (2).
United States (12).	Denmark (2).
Sweden (7).	Belgium (1).
Holland (5).	Russia (1).
South Africa (4).	Finland (1)
Australasia (3).	Bohemia (1).
Germany (3).	Hungary (1).
Italy (3).

For the first few hundred yards the course was down hill over the rough-paved road of Windsor down to the bridge over the Thames. On through Eton to Slough the track was almost dead level, than a railway gradient or two, the most noticeable feature of the road being its tortuousness.

At the fifth mile, shortly before the "Crooked Billet" was reached, a large body of cyclists were anxiously awaiting the runners' arrival. Each competitor was allowed the assistance of two cyclists to minister to his needs. As each man came up, his own particular cyclist fell in behind him, only drawing up to him when any service was required.

Nine miles from the start the town of Uxbridge was reached, and here there was a large crowd, as it was possible to see them go through the town, and then by jumping on an electric tramway-car get back to the Stadium in time to see the finish.

After leaving Uxbridge the track became a little more undulating, and eleven miles from Windsor came the pretty village of Ickenham and then Ruislip, Eastcote, and Harrow followed in quick succession. Harrow Hill was not climbed, but the lower road was taken to Sudbury. From Wembley it is an easy five miles to the Stadium, the road being mostly downhill. On reaching Willesden Junction the main road was left, and the route lay down Old Oak Lane, Old Oak Common Lane, across Wormwood Scrubs, and down Ducane Road to the entrance of the Stadium.

The route was kept by the police of the different counties through which the runners passed, and there was a contingent of ambulance men to attend to any casualties that might occur.

Being adherents to the old-fashioned "beef and blasting" theory as applied to training for athletics, we and those who believe in the meat-eaters' creed, may be considered to have scored a triumph in the recent remarks of one of the most famous medicos of modern times. We read that a slashing attack on the modern idea of eating sparingly and seldom in order to ensure good health was made by Sir James Crichton-Browne in his inaugural address to the annual Congress of the Royal Institute of Public Health, which commenced its sessional work at Buxton last month.

Sir James made a speech which will delight the heart of the meat-eater. It was a sad blow for the vegetarians, and a triumph for those who still pin their faith to red beeksteaks.

Medical men of high authority, said Sir James, were preaching not merely a simplicity of diet, but a degree of abstemiousness that would hitherto have been regarded as dangerous. The campaign against overfeeding was all very well, but we were going too far in the other direction.

He criticised adversely the declaration of Professor Chittenden, that the average man could do with one-half of the nutriment that he at present takes.

The energy and vitality of successful races might almost be measured by the degree in which animal flesh entered into their diet. Japan's sudden jump into the front rank of the nations coincided with the abolition of the old regime under which meat-eating was prohibited.

The consumption of animal food among the best people in Japan had vastly increased, and the Anglican Alliance was now typified by the popularity of the beefsteak with mustard and Worcester sauce.

It was clear that animal food had played a decisive part in human evolution, and that the craving for it had largely contributed to the advance of civilisation. The culture of the Greeks, not less than the courage of the Spartans, was assuredly nourished on a diet into which animal food entered liberally.

Himalayan sportsmen who know—and detest—that weird inquisitive spoil sport, the Kiang, may be interested to hear that in the middle of July a kiang was born at the London Zoo, the first of its kind to be born in these gardens.

As our readers already know that marvellous sculling veteran, H. T. Blackstaffe, won the Wingfield Sculls, and the amateur championship of the Thames, on the 17th July. This was his fifth victory in this race, a record beaten by only one sculler as far back as the fifties. Full details of the race appear in our London sporting letter to-day.

At the annual meeting of the Calcutta Y.M.C.A. Cricket Club, held on 5th instant, the following officers were elected for the coming season:—Captain, F. H. Reynolds; Vice-Captain, H. G. Pooler; Secretary, J. Grant; Ground Secretary, P. Vanspall; committee, W. Dyer, B. A. Joyce and G. D. Wallace.

The postponed final game in the Surma Cup Football tournament, was played on the Caledonian ground, Calcutta, last Friday, when the Highland L. I. Reserves beat "D" Co. Gordon Highlanders by two goals to one.

The Gibbs Hockey Cup tournament at Bangalore was concluded last week and was won by "A" Company B. R. Volunteers.

Entries for the Durand Football Tournament do not close till to-morrow, but so far a dozen teams have already sent in their names, which include the Lancashire, Fusiliers, 17th Lancers, 15th Hussars, 12th Lancers, Black Watch, the Queen's, Shropshires, Connaughts, Gordons, Royal Sussex, King's Royal Rifles, and Gloster Regiments. The Cameronians, the holders of the trophy have not yet entered.

There is talk of a boxing contest at Simla, on the 5th September, when Jack McAuliffe will meet Issy Cohen, for the light-weight championship of India, and a purse and side wager of Rs. 5,000. The contest to be one of twenty rounds. The principals have met twice before at home. In 1895 McAuliffe won in 17 rounds at the Continental Hall, Liverpool, and on the second occasion he won in 14 rounds at Ginnett's Circus, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

The Vicar had purchased an old second-hand car.

His sister was asked by some friends at a garden party what the make was.

She didn't know. Thought it might be a Humber or a Rover. "Oh!" broke in Phyllis—"Is it not a "de Dion." "Oh, of course," cries the Vicars' sister, "it's a 'te deum' a 'te deum!'"

Collapse of the folk. Later on she was asked what the horse power was. The reply was "I don't know but four can get in quite nicely."

Kent beat Sussex by an innings and ten runs.

Derbyshire beat Hampshire by 126 runs.

Gloucestershire beat Essex by 48 runs.

The matches Worcestershire vs. Warwickshire and Leicestershire vs. Northamptonshire were drawn, and Surrey vs. Notts and Somerset vs. Middlesex were abandoned.

Hampshire beat Kent by one wicket.

Gloucestershire beat Warwick by 60 runs.

Surrey beat Middlesex by an innings and 29 runs.

Worcester beat Lancashire by nine wickets.

The matches Essex vs. Sussex and Leicester vs. Derby were drawn.

The Australians have accepted the Marylebone Cricket Club's invitation to visit England in 1909.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—There was again a game of Rugby Football on Monday, upon which I do not propose commenting, being a Gymkhana "pick up" of a free and easy sort.

On Tuesday we continued with the usual Harwood League games, this one being between the Bombay Gymkhana and the R.G.A., and quite an exciting one it proved, as the result was in doubt till within three minutes of full time. Except for a few breaks-away by the Gymkhana, the Artillery pressed throughout the first half, and indeed throughout the second, but it was the civilians, who led at half time thanks to a penalty, which Sim successfully converted on the very stroke of the interval whistle. Some ten minutes after the resumption, however, the R.G.A. had the satisfaction of equalising. This occurred after a fine pass by the left wing, who throughout played a pretty game, the right wing, Hewes, putting through. The Gymkhana continued to offer strong resistance, and everything pointed to the game ending in a draw till with just three minutes to go there was a desperate struggle in front of their net ending in Baley scoring the winning goal.

The game ended in the way it should have done, as the Artillery pressed continually and one or two alterations in their team has decidedly strengthened them. It must be mentioned that a few minutes after starting a heavy shower of rain fell and wet going always seems to favour military teams, who keep their feet better. The Gymkhana forward line is distinctly weak, especially on the right, and time and again when Moir broke away on the left there was nobody there to accept his passes which should have meant goals. In another respect they were inferior and that was in charging men off the ball, a ruse in which their opponents are strong, though Ward gave back a bit more than he got as usual. There is another thing too which the Gymkhana should note, and that is the position which their halves take up, they left such a long gap between themselves and their forwards that the opposing halves had all the time they wanted to judge their passing. Whereas the R.G.A. showed improvement, there will have to be a deal of change in the Gymkhana forward line before they can expect to score many goals.

Probably the most remarkable game of the League was seen on Wednesday, when the Commercial Gymkhana met the Government Telegraph, for the fact that such a complete change came over it after changing sides. The former were strong in the running for top place amongst civilians, and everyone was confident of their superiority over the set of youngsters they were now meeting. The first half could not have been much more one-sided than it was, and it was only what people expected when lemon time arrived with the score three nil. Osborne was first to open for the Gymkhana and narrowly missed a second, which eventually came from a penalty which Ley shot. The third came after a combined run, Woolley putting in. One or two of these might have been saved, but the new custodian, Mercer, was a bit at sea and only in the second half did he show that he will be useful to the side. He had a busy time for ten minutes after restarting, but then the Telegraph played quite a different game, their forwards combined really well, putting plenty of dash into their work, the defence also playing less like beaten men, and from then it was they who were doing all the pressing. A free kick against them was well returned by Edwards, who played excellently, and Holman getting on shot a neat goal. The second also came from him after a pass by Cowper, and the third by Cowper himself after a really brilliant run. Spectators were in a great state of excitement as less than five minutes remained for play as they kicked off again and the Telegraph came down to attack. Quite a first-class bit of combination promised to end in the winning goal, and Holman had the ball just in front when Ley dashing up all arms was responsible for a foul, which being within the circle gave the signallers a penalty, which Edwards converted giving the custodian no chance. The whistle for full time followed immediately and the winners came in for quite an ovation, which they certainly deserved for a very plucky fight against a big deficit at half time. Forty out of sixty minutes were all in the Gymkhana's favour, but their backs after that were completely demoralised and the forwards, who have improved, were not given a chance. Edie coming out of goal did much towards strengthening the Telegraph forwards, and if they can continue to combine as they did in the second half they will be dangerous to any of the civilian teams. The ground, by the bye, was in excellent condition with very little wind but, peculiarly enough, all seven goals were scored at the Band Stand end.

I do not intend to encroach much upon your space in a description of Thursday's play, as not only did the R.G.A. beat the Y.M.C.A. very easily, the latter being a man short all the time, but it was a poor exhibition of the game. The ground was very heavy and at half way on the far side there was a miniature lake, as also in front of the northern goal; the game being on the Oval. It was in their forward line that the youngsters were at such a disadvantage, the quartette including Green, who has not played any sort of sport for some years, and the others also played with no confidence. The Artillery were consequently in clover, and won by no less than five to one; Southcote (2), Bailey (2), and McGarry scored for them and Green for the others.

Even worse was the game on Friday between the Commercial Gymkhana and the Rovers, only a small crowd turning out in anticipation of this and partly, of course, because of Mail day. A couple of drizzles during the game did not tend to improve matters, and altogether it was a poor affair to watch. The redeeming feature of the Rovers' play was their defence, backs and custodian doing really well, but their combination was so weak forward that they never even looked like scoring. The commercials were without several of their usual men and several positions were changed about; Ley, for instance, went forward and played excellently with Chapman more than usually safe at back, and the man in goal having nothing to do. To dismiss the game in a few words, the Commercials won comfortably by two goals to nil

The greatest interest centred round Saturday's game, being a sort of preliminary fight for the silver medals. The R.G.A. with eleven games played have 14 points, while the Royal Scots "A" with 8 games are at present third in the table with 11. An unfortunate drizzle and an adverse wind frustrated a scientific display, but it was a very vigorous contest. Throughout the halves, the teams played a hard game to secure points, but excellent defence at both ends would not give a chance; and the admirers of the two sides, who mustered in strong numbers, could not have wished for a more favourable result than a pointless draw. The Gunners were the heavier of the two and their shooting was accurate, though the inside left was a bit low. Mr. Walton refereed on this occasion and had frequently to haul up players for fouls, but he cannot be said to have been a success, for many offsides and other offences passed by unnoticed by him, and interested spectators were very prompt with derisive cheers. There was a large attendance, despite the inclement weather.

Though it rained pretty hard in the morning, the Marine Lines ground was in very fair condition for the Mud Sports on Wednesday, and during the afternoon a good number were present. The 116th Mahrattas' Band was in attendance and the fourth meeting may be said to have been as much of a success as the previous ones.

The programme opened with the jumping competitions none too safe on the unfirm going, and no award was made in the pony event, but in that for horses Stileman again won with Christie second.

Some amusing events were on the programme and not least of these was the Tantalus Stakes, in which competitors had to ride to a given spot, dismount and take an apple out of a basin of water with their teeth and return with the apple in their mouths. In the first heat Nash, Weyman and Andrews were home first, and in the second Scott, Boothby and Barraclough. The final saw the same three win in the same order, who won the second heat. The Ladies' Excelsior Stakes provided that they should ride to where their syces stood and loft a golf ball over a low screen and then return. This was a good thing for Mrs. Rumboll, who must have a very considerable lead for the Aggregate Cup, which if she wins, she will thoroughly deserve.

Terms of the time-honoured V.C. race need no description, and this was won by Scott, with Symons and Christie next.

A splendid opportunity to wipe off an old score was provided in the Living Aunt Sally, the men having to ride to their partners protected by fencing masks on the top of which were stuck clay pipes. The ladies' tasks were to knock these pipe off—there were no casualties! Mrs. Cudlip and Boothby won this with Captain and Mrs. Nash second and Mrs. Greenfield and Scott third.

Owing to poor entries in the Scurries, there was a sort of mixture, which Griffin won on Ayscough's Little Flick followed by O. Symons on Lux.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—The meeting of the Foxhounds, on 6th was Dighi, when about 50 members were present, the spot being a favourite one. Finding a jackal in a nullah not far from Dighi we rode all we knew to keep with hounds as they ran in a northerly direction with the Alandi Road on their right until, nearing the low country, they killed their jackal in the open. The brush was presented to Mrs. Mundy. Drawing again towards the south another jackal was found and he took us over much the same line of country utilised, when, a few weeks ago, we travelled these miles in 10¼ minutes. To-day horses were again at full pressure when traversing the country between the Alandi and Nasik Roads. Crossing the latter with Bhosari Village on our left hand we ascended the slope to the plateau on the west. An empty saddle testifies to what might have been a severe fall. But the pace was too good to enquire! Onwards, still going westward, we noted with satisfaction that the dreaded "Vale of Tears" was still wide on our left. The country, although holding in places, was quite negotiable—no jackal or fox could last long before hounds at the pace they travelled to-day. After 3 miles without a pause the jackal lay up in a kopji, was put out of it at a view and was bowled over in a neighbouring stream. Mrs. Beatty was awarded the brush. Amongst those out we noticed Mrs. Gordon, Mrs. Meyer, Mrs. Mundy, Mrs. Beatty, Mrs. Rowlandson, Mrs. Anderson, Miss George, Mrs. Ditmas, Miss Forbes, Mrs. Furze, Mrs. Morris.

A spell of fine weather in the middle of the week gave promise of firm going for Saturday, but more rain on Friday and on the day of the races itself saw a very heavy course made worse by more during the afternoon. Once more punters failed to get the better of the enemy on the whole, though they began well with the Sungam Plate, of ten furlongs, over six flights for which Lamrock was better fancied than Balayeuse and Umutbee. The rain falling at the time fairly hard was all in favour of Lamrock and, as one might expect from so steady a plodder, he was not in the hunt till turning the last bend. Up to here Vocalist had held a clear eight lengths, jumping well for an initial attempt, and was first passed by Umutbee, who having Balayeuse beat locked all over a winner. Here, however, the favourite came very strong and in a great finish Northmore got him home by a neck outriding Mr. Charrington, who but for his finish, rode a capital race.

Numerous scratching left only eight out of eighteen competing for the five furlong Lilliput Trial Plate for which Creditor and Young Gazelle were equal favourites from Plassey, Shanwar and Sabah. From a good start they raced well together to the bend where Young Gazelle was leading from Plassey and Shanwar. All was well with the leader past the distance, in fact and within a few lengths of the post, when Dhondi came with a tremendous rush on Betty, and, catching up at every stride, only fell short by a nose after being out of the race as near home as the distance. The result of this is that the jockey could not have been more severely dealt with by the Stewards, and is not likely to be seen riding again. It would have been no surprise to the writer had something of this sort occurred in connection with the last race but one.

The August Plate of five furlong saw only two seriously backed, Ianthe and Mozart, the former firming to a warm favourite after the rush for the latter had abated. Peculiarly enough Master Theo was put up as a starter and then withdrawn as Melsom was too indisposed to ride. The race itself was one of those run-away affairs, Wise Bird streaking away and leading from pillar to post from Rustile, Mozart and Ianthe. Byramjee's stable do not often allow one of theirs to expose form almost unsupported especially when one, such as in this case, loses Killua in a spurt. She is undoubtedly a flier and will improve.

A good betting race, the Karli Plate of six furlongs, had Sir Jamal for favourite from Ashroff, Mumbra, Amood and Salanic, but once more the little bay had to put up with second place. Ashroff made the running to be passed by Sir Jamal at the bend and he by Amood, who won fairly comfortably, Mumbra coming late into third place.

Though Minnie and Russley Rose shared favouritism for the Medium Pony Plate, of five furlongs, the race eventuated in a match between Koko and Virballa. The latter was lucky to get a three-length break, Koko passing her before long. Down the straight there was a desperate race, Virballa just squeezing home by a nostril with Young Ferguson riding an excellently judged race and finish.

Very open betting in the Welter Plate, of six furlongs, left Arabian Flag, Mumbra and Come Soon a bit better fancied than Deenar and Winter, Colaba's price expanding when a run came for Come Soon. It was quite a good race, Come Soon, Winter, M.V.O. and Arabian Flag being bunched at the bend. Come Soon then came away, but nearing home Southall came along on Mumbra and won comfortably from M.V.O. and Come Soon with Arabian Flag a close fourth.

Lastly, the mile Arab Trial Plate, had Nooman as a very strong favourite from Gold Mint, and Dhafar in a field of eighteen. Ashroff was out a second time and going out to the front held a ten-length lead at the half mile where Dhafar was after him. Then, however, Sialkot took up the chase and gradually Ashroff began to come back till a hundred yards from home he was caught and passed; Sialkot confirming his last win in great style. Poseidon just placed, staying out Nooman, who came through late.

The Calcutta Rowing Club Regatta will be held at Behala, on Saturday next, commencing at 4-30 P.M. Preliminary heats will be rowed on the two previous days.

London Week by Week.

(From Our Own Correspondent).

Friday, 24th July 1908.

How little likely to interest your readers has happened this week may be judged by the fact that the piece de resistance has been the final stages of the Olympic Games: beyond these there is little for me to write about I fear, and even here I shall be trespassing on your sporting letter writers' ground if I venture further than a reference paragraph. As I post this budget the great event of the meeting—the Marathon race—will be just finishing; and I hope and believe the victory will go to a Britisher. The yelling Yankees approached these games in a spirit of cocked-suredness delightful to behold; they had it all cut and dried, had the result of most things mapped out with the eagle screeching on the top of everything. And the British press played up to them, taunting our athletes with being outclassed by Americans, Colonials, and even Continentals and predicting defeat and disgrace all along the line. These Jeremiahs have their answer in the following figures, which show the position of the competing nations this morning, with Old England very much on top—where she ought to be—the Yanks a poor second and the rest nowhere:—England, 33 firsts; America, 18; Sweden, 5; France, 3; Canada, Germany and Norway, 2; Belgium, South Africa, Finland, Italy and Hungary, 1 each. In the actual "Stadium" events, the pure athletics, England has 18 firsts, 16½ seconds, 10½ thirds, while the United States have 14 firsts, 8½ seconds, 5½ thirds. But, doubtless, you print full details of the week's doings in the usual place.

The Exchequer comes in for a heavy windfall by the death of the Duke of Devonshire. The estimate of over £2,500,000 and perhaps nearly £3,000,000, recently given in The Daily Telegraph as the sum upon which the death duties will ultimately be charged in respect of the whole of the late Duke's estates, seems likely to be justified. The figures at present entered at the Probate Registry as the valuation of the estate evidently do not include the value of the whole of the real estate which passed at his death, and probably do not include any part of it. The value of the "net personalty," which will include leasehold estate, is given as £1,070,132, and the gross value of the estate, which may or may not include the real estate, is entered at £1,164,960, leaving a balance of only £94,828, which sum obviously cannot represent the valuation of Chatsworth and the Derbyshire estate, Bolton Abbey and the Yorkshire estate, Lismore Castle and the Irish estate, Compton Place and the Eastbourne estate, or Chiswick House and the Chiswick estate. It seems to be likely that the gross value of the estate in this instance means at present the gross value of the personal estate only.

"You are a liar, a thief and a swindler. You live by swindling, and to my knowledge have lived by swindling for twenty years." This is what Sir Timothy O'Brien, Bart., the well-known cricketer and sportsman, said to the Hon. Alexis C. Burke Roche, brother of Lord Fermoy, at a meet of the Dulhallow Foxhounds. The hon'ble gent was naturally annoyed and he has begun a law suit against the hard-smiting cricketer which evoked exceptional interest in Irish society while it lasted. Sir Timothy pleaded justification. In cross-examination the plaintiff admitted that he had little or no means and lived by horse-dealing! The plaintiff had got through his examination and people were eagerly looking forward to what Sir Timothy was going to put forward when the case collapsed. The defendant had tried to nobble a juror it seems, so the judge discharged the jury and issued an attachment against Sir Timothy for contempt. We await the next move with interest for the Middlesex cricketer is a strong fighter and considered in the slander case he was going breast high.

The craze for Conferences has not yet died out. Looking around for something on which to confer, some bright genius has proposed that next May there should be held in London an Imperial Press Conference. He writes:—"The representatives of the newspapers of the British Empire have never yet found the opportunity of making acquaintance with one another and exchanging views on those political and professional topics in which they are interested.

"A serious attempt is now to be made to attain this end. It is proposed that at the end of next May the editors of the principal newspapers of the British Empire beyond the seas shall be invited to this country as the guests of the Press of Great Britain. It is hoped that the invitation will be accepted by the most influential journalists of the self-governing States of the Empire, by those of India and the other Imperial Dependencies, and by those of the Crown Colonies.

"Guests and hosts have alike much to learn from this mutual intercourse, which should lead to a better understanding by home journalists of the Dominions beyond the seas, and a closer realisation, on the part of the visitors, of the political, social, and industrial conditions which prevail in these islands."

But somehow I fancy we shall not be cheered by the sight of Indian Editors, at any rate, jostling each other in the rush to attend the proposed I. P. C.

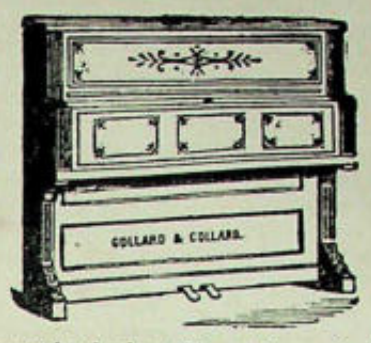
The answer to the question "How is a nation to be made stronger" seems to be—"make all the women gymnasts." At least that is the reflection which occurred to most of those who witnessed the very fine display given by the Danish ladies at the Stadium last week. It was a demonstration of the Paul Petersen system, now included in the curriculum of every Danish school. The objects which the authorities have in view are the improvement of the health and strength of the nation, the complete emancipation of the women from their more or less enfeebled state of past generations, and the attainment of flexibility of body, beauty of figure, and grace of deportment.



Three hours of gymnastic exercise a week is required to be taken by children between the ages of seven and fourteen. Thereafter the practice of gymnastics is left to their own individual inclinations, but so great a love for this form of exercise has generally been inculcated that wherever possible it is usually kept up, and a great many private and State gymnasia are in existence. Great stress is laid upon deportment. Those who witnessed the manner in which the twenty-two Danish ladies in the Stadium carried themselves, their fine physique, and the precision with which they went through their complicated movements could not fail to be impressed.

That a system which can produce such physical equipment is one fraught with lasting good to a nation admits of no doubt.

The latest attraction at The Empire is a tabloid melodrama called "After the Opera," a French adaptation by Miss Norah Keith, and a clever one too. The episode on which the piece is built up is of the hot and strong order as may be gathered from the following brief sketch of the plot. Returning to their house in Park Lane after a performance at the Opera, Lawrence Devas and his handsome young wife are accompanied by a certain Captain Gordon Forest, of whom, as one quickly perceives, Lady Lulu Devas is far more enamoured than she is of her elderly husband. The latter, summoned away by wire on urgent business, leaves her, little suspecting that as soon as his back is turned her admirer will emerge from an ante-room in which, at Lady Lulu's instigation, he has concealed himself. Left alone the guilty couple are disturbed by sounds just as the wife, after a passionate outburst, has flung herself into her lover's arms. Convinced that it is her husband who has trapped them, she persuades her companion to escape by the window. But, as it happens, Nemesis awaits her, not in the form of a jealous husband, but in that of a dastardly burglar, who promptly strangles her for the valuable jewellery she is wearing. Deftly enough, it is contrived that the fugitive captain is seen escaping from the house, that the husband, having missed his train, returns to find him explaining matters to the police, and that, upon the discovery of the murder, he seeks, goaded by jealousy, to fasten the crime on the unhappy lover. In the French original the latter, realising that the game is up, blows out his brains, but the adaptor, out of consideration, doubtless, for the feelings of English audiences, has brought about a less tragic, and, less logical denouement.

Mr. Robert Pateman is the wronged husband, Miss Evelyn D'Alroy, the frail wife, Mr. Chas. Bryant the erring, but repentent villain, and the trio acted with abundant spirit and achieved a well-deserved success.

Another American invasion! A syndicate from across the herring pond, consisting of Messrs. Henry Iles, H. F. McGarvie, Frank Bostock, and Joseph Menchen, in alliance with several English capitalists, is going to run next year at Earl's Court an Anglo-American Exhibition, on Coney Island lines. There every new and absurd contrivance for dragging cents out of the pockets of the American worker and his women folk finds its way soon after its invention; and thence, if popular, it travels over all those States, which are now plentifully bespattered with "Amusement Parks," framed more or less on Coney Island lines. The Scenic Railway at the Franco-British Exhibition is a typical product of Coney Island; and it is the biggest "proposition" in the way of a profit-maker at Shepherd's Bush. Its owner, Mr. Henry Iles, declares that it paid back the £20,000 spent on building it within six weeks of the start; and it is literally coining money now.

The London hooligan is making himself unpleasantly conspicuous again. Many outrages have recently been reported, among the latest that of which Sir W. S. Gilbert was the victim. Last Friday as Sir William was stepping into a cab on leaving the opera, he was presented with a violent punch on the nose, in exchange for which somebody evidently wanted his watch and chain. Sir William says his assailant was a young man about 20 years of age, and, although the author of "Pinafore" can put half a century on those years, he is not the man to take a drubbing lying down. Without waiting for the verdict of the jury, and following Sir Joseph Porter's excellent advice to the British tar whose fist should "be ever ready for a knock down blow," he proceeded to administer summary justice to his attacker, and a well-delivered right hander on the face caused the hooligan to make a rapid departure without securing anything in the way of a memento of the occasion save, perhaps, extensive ecchymosis of the optic. Sir William Gilbert was for following his foe, but the usual gang was in attendance, and anything in the way of an attempt at pursuit was frustrated.

Poor Mr. Kipling has a good deal to answer for one way and another; now it has been suggested by a magistrate that he is responsible for a Cambridge undergrads' exhibition of vandalism. Four young sparks recently painted and feathered a statue of Hercules and had hardly had their laugh at the effect when they were hauled before the beak. They admitted, paid costs of cleaning Hercules, donated £10 to the funds of the local infirmary and apologised. In allowing the case against them to be withdrawn, the Bench advised these young men in future "not to make too close a study of Rudyard Kipling's classics!"

A true bill has been found against Sievier by the grand jury at the Old Bailey and his trial begins next Monday, before the Lord Chief Justice.

B. last Tuesday and, addressing His Majesty, he said:—"I return to Nepal, strengthened in my loyal support of British rule in India, and more than ever convinced of the cordiality and wisdom of good relations between the Government of Nepal and the Government of India."

[Wah, Wah!] Incidentally it may be mentioned the newly demonstrated one has contributed £1,500 to "deserving charities," as set forth in an advertisement in the papers. Benevolent institutions of sorts are anxiously looking out for the advent of the next Indian big pot on titular distinction intent.

"In the making of many books there is no profit" to slightly misquote the sayings of Solomon. At least one is led to this conclusion on reading the announcement that "David Christie Murray, of 4, Lancaster Road, Hampstead, novelist, journalist and playwright, who died 1st August last, aged sixty, left estate valued for probate at £50."!! Makes one think doesn't it.

THE COMPLETE OARSMAN.*

A perusal of this, the best book Mr. R. C. Lehmann has yet contributed to the oarsman's special library leads to the reflection that, at any rate for some time to come, probably the last word has been written on the subject. The volume could not have been written by anyone whose name would carry more weight and authority than that of Mr. Lehmann, and both author and publishers are to be congratulated on the happy results of their collaboration. All that is worth knowing about the art on which he writes so much in so pleasant a style is known by Mr. Lehmann, and he has unquestionably put his best work into the pages of "The Complete Oarsman," there being ample evidence that he has made unreserved calls upon his great storehouse of acquired facts and vast personal experience. And one of the most valuable recommendations of such a volume as that before us is that it does not contain the theories of a doctrinaire, but the fruits of ripe experience, keen powers of observation, and the reflections of a master hand in every department of which he treats. When it is further pointed out that the author has treated his subject in an all-embracing manner, enough has been said to make our opinion clear that everybody concerned with rowing must add this work to their bookshelves, for their library will be incomplete until they do so.

The volume contains nearly 400 pages, and it is admirably arranged as to parts and chapters. The four parts are (1) historical and introductory, (2) the art and mystery of oarsmanship, (3) famous crews and memorable races, and (4) the control and management of the sport. These titles broadly indicate the scope of "The Complete Oarsman," and the author may claim to have achieved the object he set out to accomplish: "To give such an account of oarsmanship as will enable a reader not only to understand how the sport is organised and pursued, but also to obtain a grasp of the principles on which, in its highest manifestations of skill and endurance, it is based." Scattered throughout the pages of the book are opinions which meet with ready acceptance, and there are others which will be hotly challenged. "Rowing, though at Oxford and Cambridge it still maintains its ancient pre-eminence among the outdoor sports suitable to healthy and vigorous youth, is not a 'popular' exercise," but there is compensation for this lack of popularity in the fact that "Of all our great sports, none is, I think so completely free from the sordid taint of professionalism and money-making. Its amateur standard is high, and there is no difficulty in maintaining it."

So far so good, but the author is guilty of a lapse when he gives currency to the remarkable statement that, "In view of what has happened in other sports, and particularly football (in one branch of which amateurism has practically been extinguished, while in the other branch it is seriously menaced), it would be in the highest degree unwise to relax the rule which has kept amateur oarsmanship free from all such detrimental influence." It is true that these sentences are quoted as expressing the views of the advocates of the status quo with regard to the amateur rower but is it not a mistake to assert that any responsible person has even suggested amateurism in Association football has been practically extinguished? On the other hand, it was never more popular, and there is no sign of decadence in a sport which has 10,000 or 11,000 amateur clubs, and approaching a half million of players. This is a book on rowing and rowers, and as such it will rank as a classic. The merits of "The Complete Oarsman" elicit admiration, and the value of the letterpress is greatly enhanced by a comprehensive series of beautifully-produced illustrations.

A MOUNTAIN SHEEP HUNT IN TEXAS.

In a recent number of Sports Afield appears a graphic description of a mountain sheep hunt in the Diablo mountains beyond Van Horn, written by James R. Harper, Judge of the Thirty-fourth District Court. The story loses none of its piquancy by the long deferred publication. Such a hunt would be impossible at the present time, as the game laws of Texas protect these fast disappearing denizens of the mountains. The story follows:—

On the night of 28th September, 1902, the Western Union messenger boy handed me a telegram from Van Horn, El Paso county, Texas, which read, "Come to-morrow. Am all ready for the trip. Beach."

I arrived promptly at noon and at the depot met my friend. He, being a man of few words, said: "Eat your dinner and the ponies will be ready." Before I had fairly finished dinner, the Mexican boy announced that all was ready. I had to delay the game for a few minutes while I changed my rig for a hunting costume and strapped my 30-30 Winchester on the saddle; then off we went at an easy canter, such as the Texas pony alone knows how to assume when there is hard riding to be done. After two hours we came to a range of high precipitous mountains, apparently rising right out of the level plain an undoubtedly the work of volcanic eruption, from which the other half had been broken and thrown into space or sunk to fill the crevice, leaving as rough looking a cluster of granite-capped peaks as one would care to see, much less to climb. After tying our ponies with long lariats, so they could graze on the grass so abundant in all that part of the country, we began the ascent—peering into and searching with eye and field glass every cap-rock, overhanging cliff and crevice for the wary animal. Up and up we climbed, often on hands and knees, and then up a precipitous wall, shoving our rifles ahead of us when a foothold and a handhold at the same time were at a premium. Though we hunted until sundown, not a sheep was seen nor a sign less than two weeks old. This was repeated the next morning, with the result that old signs showed plainly that they had not been in that section for many days—not since the last rain a month before. This demanded a conference, the minutes of which would show the following resolution:—

"Whereas, the sheep aforesaid have gone out of this section, up the range, it is unanimously decided that we will follow them and camp on their trail until we get blood."

A wagon was now hooked up and a Mexican driver secured and directed to go to a point ten miles on and strike camp for the night. And away we went again on the trail—for "meat" this time, as we expressed it—but in fact with slight hope in the heart of either of us of ever getting it. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday passed with the same story—Gone out, but where? This was becoming serious; so Thursday night, when the usual auspicious moment arrived, I refused refreshment and stood pat on it. The old veteran almost dropped dead—a thing unheard of, said he. "No, sir," says I—"not another drop until we get fresh meat in the frying pan; and neither will I wash my face, for there is something wrong here. Luck is against us. No sir! not another drop until the venison steak is in the pan!" Then the old fellow entered into the spirit of the occasion; his bright old eyes began to dance; a hearty handshake followed; the bottle was put back in the grub box with a lingering look; we gritted our teeth and all that part was ended. I had good reason to believe that he "renigged" on me later, but not one word was uttered by me to indicate that I knew or suspected; for the blood was not so warm and free in the veins of the old veteran as in my own and a little "for the stomach's sake" was good for him. Luck comes to all who faithfully and conscientiously observe the signs and labour diligently; but the old dame came nearly waiting too long in this case, for on Friday, after a hard morning's riding and climbing and the usual disappointment, we were caught on top of the highest peak in a hard storm of sleet and cold rain. Wet through to the skin, and after trying many different shelters in vain for protection, we finally faced the storm and went back to our horses, got the saddle-blankets and spread them over a pinon bush, and, getting under this rudely improvised tent, started a fire, before which we dried our clothes and got the chill out of our bones. Then once more we mounted our horses—only to return to camp with the same old story, completely dejected. That night after we had rolled up in our blankets we laid out the route for the next two days, Saturday and Sunday—agreeing that if we did not find them by Sunday night we would give it up and go home and wait until near Christmas before trying it again. Saturday morning we rolled out of our blankets at the first sign of day, the signal coming from the old man. "Get up, Judge—we get sheep to-day." And his words, carelessly uttered, were indeed a prophecy.

We were soon in the saddle. The Mexican was directed to camp at the windmill fifteen miles on for the night and was further instructed to closely watch the mountain side as he drove along for a smoke—"For if we kill a deer, we will set fire to a dagger plant and the smoke will indicate the point to you." Sure enough, while riding toward the canyon where we had planned to put in the day, we suddenly rode up to within fifty yards of three blacktail bucks. We were out of our saddles in a jiffy and both opened fire. My first bullet brought down a fine fellow with five points. We soon had him behind the saddle and went on our way, singing "Johnnie, fill up the bowl!" We were soon at the highest point to which our ponies could climb with safety. We tied one, hobbled the other, and fired several dagger plants as a signal to our Mexican, and then on up the side to the most precipitous peak we had yet hunted—namely, Victory peak of the Diablo mountains (named after the famous Apache chief Victoria, who with his band of warriors was at one time surrounded by a company of U. S. soldiers upon this very peak.) It was thought that the red men could not escape; and after waiting five days the captain sent up a scouting party to ascertain their exact whereabouts. But the signs plainly showed that the whole band had rested a few days and then gone on across the canyon—horses and all—where it seemed impossible for white men to go, even with scaling ladders. This mountain peak juts out prominently for about a mile into the level plain, being connected to the main range by a very narrow neck which separates the two canyons lying on either side. The side of the mountain below the cap-rock is almost entirely barren of vegetation—nothing growing there save an occasional Spanish dagger and now and then an evergreen bush, called the desert evergreen. Up the side of this vast granite peak is one solid rock shelf after another, extending the entire distance around its face. These shelves are some 200 yards apart, being cut in two by arroyos or draws starting from the top of the peak and running to the bed of the canyon far below. By noon we had climbed on to sure footing on the first saddle of the ridge and turned to look back out on to the plains below for the wagon—wondering if our Mexican would see our signal and come for the deer. While standing there, my friend said, "Judge, what would it be worth if I should show you a bunch of sheep on this mountain side for a dollar?" I said, "Yes—a quart of the best in El Paso." While saying this, we both turned and looked up. It was yet a full mile to the top of the peak, almost straight up. Almost with the same breath that had offered the quart, I said, "There they are now!"—my eyes having rested upon them almost instantly upon turning around. And truly they were in all their grandeur, about 1,000 yards away, on a level with and looking directly at us, eleven in all, as we found on bringing the glasses to bear upon them—five big horns and six does and fawns. It was plain to be seen that they had sighted us and that all they now required was to make up their minds that we were enemies, when they would be off like the wind. Down we slowly went out of sight behind the dagger plants, flat on our faces, to there remain in the hot sun for a full hour, until the least weary watchman had ceased to be suspicious and had grazed quietly out of sight over the range in the draw beyond. While watching, we had many boyish wrangles as to who should have the glass. My friend wanted it because I could see better and I wanted it because I had never seen one before and he had seen and killed many. One of us would look while the other stuffed down crackers, cheese, etc., and poured water on top of it from the only canteen we had brought along. After they had passed out of sight, hurried plans were devised for getting a shot. Should we go over the mountain and come over above them? Or go down the side into the canyon below and then up, so as to get them when they tried to run up the steep mountain side? But we found serious disadvantages in all these plans and finally decided to stay on the bench that ran on a level around the mountain to them—thus enabling us to have a good chance at them either way they might run, as well as saving us the hard work of climbing up and down the steep mountain side, which we would have to do if we undertook to stalk them by any other route. We then began to slowly creep around the mountain toward the spot where we had last seen them.

After we had proceeded a short distance the old gentleman decided that the canteen we were carrying (which contained all the water we had with us and all we could hope to get until we reached camp that night) was making too much noise, as it was dangling from the neck, hitting a rock now and then or his gun; and so, instead of leaving it where we then were and returning for it later, the old gentleman in his excitement impulsively poured all the water out and the next thing I noticed he was dangling an empty canteen along and making more noise than before; but he tightened it around his waist as we scrambled on around the mountain side over loose rock, prickly pear and Spanish daggers, carefully testing every footing before we played our weight upon it, for nearly an hour before we came to the spot where we had last seen them. Nowhere could they be seen. Almost out of breath, yet scarcely daring to breathe, we sat down, feeling that they had heard us and had scampered away—I especially feeling that we had done very badly to act so blunderingly, after finding such a fine bunch of sheep. I whispered to him that I wished I had taken a shot from where we had first seen them. We sat there, whispering our different impressions as to where they could be and searching the mountain side and canyon with the field glass, when suddenly the old veteran reached over in an excited way, yet slowly, and took the glass from my hand. As soon as he sighted, my eyes took in at once, some 350 yards away across the draw, the head and horns of one of the old bucks, peering as cautiously as a mouse over the sharp backbone directly at us. Passing the whispered word, "Don't move—not even a hand!" he sat there and directed his glass at the wary peeper. What was to be done? Would he come over or would it be best to try a shot at him where he was? We sat there nearly an hour, as still as it was possible to be under the circumstances, scarcely daring to straighten a cramped leg or remove an aching arm or muscle, while that big horn gradually edged over on top of the ridge in sight to his shoulders. Then came an old doe and then the head of a this year's fawn—peeping as slyly as its bright and intelligent little face apparently could—and then the whole herd followed one after the other, until the last one of them stood all huddled up together on top of the ridge—the biggest and oldest buck being the last to join the band. Age and experience had undoubtedly taught him to be extremely cautious. All were standing with rigid muscles as stiff as statues, with necks gracefully bowed and eyes distended, bright and piercing, as could be seen with the glass—all eyes being focused on us in a strenuous effort to penetrate the mystery of the strange two-legged creatures who had come within their domain without invitation. We were undecided what to do. We knew that it was a long shot and a very doubtful one, because of its being across the arroyo and so far that the glasses were necessary to make them appear of normal size. After several minutes of whispered conference, they became restless and apparently were making ready to run off up the backbone toward the highest point of the mountain. Then it was that I said, "Let's shoot and then make a run across the arroyo to the ridge where they stand and try to get in a parting shot before they get out of range."

At the word "Shoot!" we both fired. The rifles cracked so near together that we could not tell whether more than one had fired. Over the ridge—out of sight in the twinkling of an eye—went the whole bunch; and down the side of that arroyo the old man jumped as nimble as a boy of 16—forgetting his age, his broken hip of only one year before, and evidently intending to make a new 400-yard sprinting record. I was not so quick to act, for I was undecided whether to go with him or up the mountain side toward the top to an elevated spot whence I might see them more clearly. Whilst still standing there, undecided as to which course I should pursue, there came back from the high mountain peak peal after peal of echo, which seemed to roll and reverberate from the monster mouth of that great canyon to the utmost confines of its granite-capped peaks and back again, as if the very vitals of the earth had been jarred loose, and with it the whole band whipped back on our side of the ridge—apparently straining every nerve to escape from the awful monster coming from the other direction. Then began the quick, accurate firing that laid low four out of five of those big bucks, one of which had horns measuring over 17 inches in circumference and 38 inches in length, outside measurement. As we stood there watching the balance of the band clambering away, some up and some down the canyon, I gave the old-time rebel yell again and again, to relieve the pent-up feeling of elation so seriously threatening to choke me, and my friend dryly remarked, "That sure calls for refreshments, Judge."

NOTES ON RIFLES, ETC.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The London S. A. C. have just brought out a new peep-sight for the W. O. pattern miniature rifle to meet a demand for a cheap and serviceable sight of this description. It is somewhat like the ordinary Lyman sight, small and neat in appearance, and is fitted with most ingenious and simple contrivance for giving wind-guage to the peep-hole. Its small price 5s. (7s. 6d. with the wind-guage) is a great recommendation. The sight would be suitable for other rifles. As made for the miniature rifle it is graduated to 200 yards for the ·22 long rifle R. F. cartridge. The peep-hole is left purposely small but can be enlarged as required. A fairly big peep-hole is usually better than a small one.

The W. O Rifle is extremely accurate with ·22 Long rifle cartridges of a good make such as are used by most rifle clubs. The Cayennite cartridges of British make seem to be quite as good as the best American or German cartridges—they have a very slight report and of course are smokeless like all modern ammunition.

The original pattern of W. O. miniature rifles had double extractors but of late owing to certain alterations made to avoid the consequences of burst rims and escaping gas these rifles have been fitted with a single extractor—which very often fails to extract the long cases. This failure to extract is a great nuisance as the rod has to be continually used to push out the fired cases. Of course in such cases the magazine—when one is used—is useless. The little magazine on some of the latest pattern miniature rifles holds five rounds of "long rifle" ammunition and is loaded before it is placed in position in the rifle. If used for shooting small animals etc.,—it would be better to carry a few magazines ready filled. For target practice it would have been better if the magazine had been made to contain eight rounds—for the "sighter" and seven shots usually allowed at each shoot.

These little rifles are much used by miniature rifle clubs and are handy little weapons. They are very suitable for use as rook rifles etc. Another weapon of extreme accuracy, much favoured by Miniature Rifle Clubs and very well adapted for teaching a military style of target shooting is the converted Martini. It is the old military M. H. rifle fitted with a ·22 R. F. barrel and its sights altered to suit this cartridge. Of course it is heavy—but its small price 24s. to members of Rifle Clubs, ought to enable every one in the country to learn to shoot with a rifle of full weight.

It may be objected that practice with small rifles having no recoil or report to speak of is useless for teaching men who would have to use high power arms. This is I believe quite a mistaken idea if one can shoot straight with a miniature rifle at short range. There is a very tittle to learn with a full power rifle now-a-days as the recoil etc., of modern small bore Military rifles is comparatively trifling: not like it was in the days of the Snider or Martini of our younger days. When a careless hold resulted in a bruised cheek and shoulder and was apt to render a nervous man gun-shy for some time after.

The Rifle Clubs are doing a great deal of good and thousands of men and youths who a year or two ago did not know one end of a gun from the other have been taught to shoot straight enough for all practical purposes by the aid of the miniature rifle and air rifle. The latter are by no means toys. They are of course not as accurate as the ·22 rifle but they are quite good enough to learn to shoot with—and the latest kinds—the B. S. A. and the "Britannia" of No. 3 size—(·250-bore) are powerful enough for small animals. I was told by a gunmaker that some of his customers used them regularly for shooting rabbits. As the muzzle velocity of these air rifles is said to be over 500 foot seconds, I can quite believe in their power. As regards the latest type of small bore rifle, the improvement has been almost entirely in the direction of higher velocity. Some ten years ago we were quite contented with a muzzle speed of 2000 foot seconds—which was just above the limit of the highest speed obtainable with black powder "expresses." Then the Mauser and Mannlicher with their more perfect actions came in with speeds of 300 or 400 feet per second in excess of this and the latest idea has been to cut down the weight of the bullet and increase its driving charge till now it is possible to obtain the enormous speed of 3000 foot seconds as given by the ·280 bore Ross Eley cartridge with a light bullet of 140 grains. I see splendid results were given by this cartridge using a 180 grain bullet at the Bisley Meeting a day or two ago. I suppose with a muzzle velocity of some 2800 feet per second with a "Ross" rifle of the kind adopted by the Canadian Government.

The American team too used a rifle intended to give a muzzle speed of 2700 foot seconds with a pointed bullet of 150 grains though for the Olympic match in which they were so successful at Bisley they used pointed bullets of 180 grains with a moderate speed of under 2200 foot seconds only against our 225 grain pointed bullets with rather greater velocity.

But whereas the new American (short) rifle can, owing to its strong breech fastening of the mauser type, propel bullets with speeds up to 3000 feet per second with safety our rifle approaches the limit of safety when it is made to shoot a charge giving not much over 2250 feet speed.

This is due to our obsolete breech action which ought to have been scrapped years ago when the new short rifle was thought of. The Canadians have scrapped their ·303 Lee-Enfield. We ought to follow their example. Surley we can afford it, and have a new rifle—not an unsatisfactory compromise—thoroughly up-to-date.

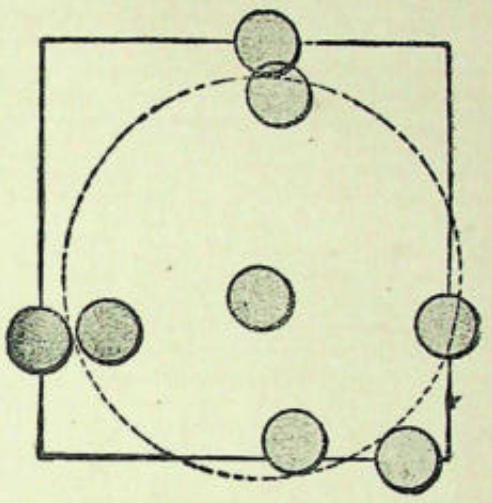
LANG



New No. 2 ·360 Bore

In comparison with the ·400/·360 the muzzle velocity of this new Cartridge is approximately 230 F.S. higher, and although the charge is increased the same low pressure, viz., 14 tons, is maintained. The increased velocity coupled with the extra weight of bullet and consequent greater striking energy gives one a rifle that has practically the stopping power of a ·450 or ·500 Black Powder Express, and is consequently an ideal weapon for deer stalking and for shooting heavier forms of non-dangerous game; moreover, in consequence of the importation of the ·303 into India being prohibited, it is well worthy the notice of Sportsmen in that country who desire to have a weapon in which is combined High Velocity, Flat Trajectory, Great Striking Energy, Minimum Recoil, and in which, through low pressure, a greater margin of safety is given and the risk of jamming reduced to a minimum.

VELOCITY 2,150 F. S., Striking Energy 3,280ft. lbs.

The accuracy is of the highest order, as will be seen by the accompanying diagram made by the Editor of The Field and not by a professional expert.

VELOCITY 2 250 ft. sec.

This cartridge as originally designed did not in our opinion, come up to a sufficiently high standard, and in consequence our expert visited Messrs. Kynoch's works, and in conjunction with their experts conducted a series of experiments extending over three weeks, ultimately designing the bullets now in use from this popular rifle.

J. L. & S. therefore confidently claim that in collaboration with Messrs. Kynoch they were the first to introduce the ·470, and as evidence submit the following extract from the Field, and illustration of the actual diagram made before the editor of that journal.

"FIELD," 23rd March 1907: ". . . . A very valuable advance has been achieved, and Messrs. Lang are to be congratulated on their enterprise in so promptly bringing forward a rifle and cartridges complying with the two most pressing demands in sporting rifles, viz., a weapon to take the place of the prohibited ·450, and a cartridge which shows an advance in flatness of trajectory, with a diminution of recoil and pressure."

"The Globe."

Anything that tends towards the humane side of the veterinary surgery is especially acceptable, and it is therefore a gratifying fact that a special kind of absorbent dressing for curbs, splints, etc., is quite taking the place of the cruel ancient custom of "firing" horses. Particularly among jumpers not 25 per cent. are absolutely sound; in fact "legs" are the main trouble of trainers. No better proof of the advantages and efficacy of the newest system is the case of Engineer, who broke down completely and had two terribly bowed tendons. Still by its use he was patched up sufficiently to now be perfectly callous and to have won two sprint races on the flat, and to be jumping hurdles successfully, a task which strains horses' legs and tendons terribly. Another remarkable case was that of Manifesto who was simply cured by such dressings the year he won his last Grand National. Prince Albert's Grand Sefton Steeplechase victory was exactly similarly brought about, but in this case the horse had a scale on his knees half-an-inch thick.

R. Marsh, the King's trainer, was also solely by its use able to avoid recourse to the firing iron, and to get Cynical through two good races despite his knee troubles. There is hardly a trainer of the present day who is not now being won over to the very natural advancement in veterinary surgery in unison with all medical matters pertaining to the human being. Moreover Ebberzine does not cause a horse to lose his hair on the dressed joints and its use cannot be detected afterwards for it does not blister, blemish or in the least arrest the horse's regular work—it is in fact a powerful absorbent, not a vesicant, so that it penetrates into the parts dressed, which no firing iron can possibly reach. It surpasses blisters also inasmuch its use can be continued. It is really remarkable what a very large percentage of knee troubles occur in large horses much more so than with their tendons pasterns and feet. Mr. E. Cooper-Smith is not unnaturally proud of this product of his practical experience after full 40 years' association with all the chief racing establishments in Great Britain.

"The County Gentleman."

It is always a pleasure to hear of any remedy calculated to alleviate the sufferings of that best friend of man the horse. And in this connection we are pleased to draw attention to Cooper-Smith's "Ebberzine," an excellent absorbent dressing which is now used by all the principal trainers and a large number of hunting men, who find it invaluable for many ailments in horses. Pass-Cora Powders, too, are an excellent Tonic Astringent for horses' legs, and strengthens strained tendons and ligaments, besides bracing up weak legs.

"Sporting Times."

In respect of Sore Shins I hear that Mr. Cooper-Smith's absorbent dressing "Ebberzine" has been used with most beneficial results, and it has the great advantage that its application does not interfere with the work of the horse, and, moreover, leaves no blemish.

"Oldham Standard."

"OF INTEREST TO HORSE OWNERS."

Ebberzine, a special kind of absorbent dressing, is quite taking the place of "firing horses," and has been the means of several remarkable cures.

"Chilian Times."

Ebberzine and Pass Cora have recently attracted a good deal of attention in this country and are already used in the chief racing stables and by many members of the Valparaiso Polo Club this season, one of whom by use of the Pass-Cora Powders was able to play a pony all through the season that he had hitherto despaired of keeping sound. The few trainers in Chili that have already tried Ebberzine are delighted with it, and have been anxiously awaiting fresh consignments ordered out from England. Everyone who keeps horses in Chili should give these two really famous remedies a trial and we are certain they will not regret it.

"The Badminton Magazine," April 1908.

"When a veterinary Surgeon produces Testimonials from Mr. Gwyn Saunders Davies, Col. Hall Walker, Mr. Arthur Yates, Capt. L. H. Jones, Mr. George Thursby, Richard Marsh, Sam Darling, W. Nightingale, Joseph Cannon and others who are universally recognised as masters of their profession, the articles referred to need no further recommendation. This is the case with Mr. E. Cooper-Smith's dressings 'Ebberzine' 'Pass-Cora.'"

Ebberzine produces a good scurf and does not blister. Its action, unlike that of blisters, can be kept up since as soon as the scurf is off it can be applied again and again till the part has been absorbed. It is a speedy cure for Sore Shins, and should be used immediately they are detected; also it is the very best absorbent that has ever been known for Splints, Spavins, Ringbones, all Bony Enlargements (especially in the knees), Curbs, Thoro'pins and Capped Hocks, and for chronic Thickening of Tendons and Ligaments (in the FIRST stages of Thickening of Tendons and Ligaments use Pass-Cora Lotion). Ebberzine is also an excellent dressing for Sore Throats, Injured Muscles, Fluids under the Skin, and for arresting the growth of Side Bones, and for all ill-conditioned wounds is far superior to ordinary caustic Ebberzine should always be used after Broken Knees to take away the thickening.

Price in bottles, with full directions, 4/9, 8/9, 12/9 (England).

THE STRENUOUS LIFE IN INDIA.

Is It Possible?

A want of energy and whim are characteristic traits of the white population in tropical and semi-tropical countries. It is a well established fact that this unfortunate condition is in a very large measure due to insufficient nourishment; to want of a diet that shall sustain the system under the increased demands upon the powers. Not only is the appetite feeble, but the food supplies also leave much to be desired in both quality and nutritive power as compared with the products of the temperate zone. Hence one often feels at a loss to know how to combat the depression and languor consequent on what may fairly be termed an improper diet supply. It follows therefore that the ideal remedy for physical exhaustion must be one which feeds the hungry tissues with a nutrient that is easy of assimilation, and at the same time enriches the blood and tones up the nervous system. This much-to-be-desired remedy is found in Sanatogen, the wonder-working food tonic.

Sanatogen is a scientific combination of two distinct elements, the one nutritive, the other tonic. The nutritive element is presented by pure milk albumen—the body building food, demanded constantly by the body for the repair of its tissues. Without a due supply of such food-principle, life would not continue.

The tonic element is represented by Phosphorus. The latter is an all-important constituent of the brain and the nervous system. But hitherto it has been impossible to administer this vital principal so that the nervous system could take hold of it. Dr. Andrew Wilson, the well-known medical author, writes:—"Sanatogen has solved the problem of administering Phosphorus in precisely the form in which the tissues can readily seize upon it and appropriate it to their various needs." The medical profession in Great Britain and India entertain the highest opinion of Sanatogen, which is amply evidenced by the fact that over 7,500 physicians have written in praise of it. This and the written attestations of very many distinguished men and women, whose names are well-known in the community, conclusively establish Sanatogen to be the pre-eminent recuperative and restorative.

The Rt. Rev. William Sinclair, D.D., Archdeacon of London, writes:—

THE CHAPTER HOUSE,
ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL,
London, E. C.

"Sanatogen appears to be an admirable food for invalids and those who suffer from indigestion."

William Sinclair

Unlike other tonics the use of Sanatogen does not derange digestion but actually assists enfeebled appetite and strengthens the digestive organs. Its tonic effect is marvellous, and if taken regularly for a short period the feeling of being run down will be replaced by brightness, mental alertness, and healthy vigour. It differs also from other tonics in that its effects are permanent.

Mr. C. B. Fry, the celebrated cricketer, writes:—

GLENBOURNE MANOR,
WEST END, HANTS.

"Sanatogen is an excellent tonic food in training, specially valuable as a tonic during the periods of nervous exhaustion commonly called staleness, to which men who undergo severe training are liable. I have recommended it to many of my friends."

C. B. Fry.

There is no doubt that Sanatogen is the ideal food for invalids and convalescents. It can be borne by the weakest stomach when all other food is rejected. It is powerfully effective in all those cases where through illness, or overwork, or climatic conditions, the system has become debilitated. For the nervous and the dyspeptic, Sanatogen restores, naturally, sound digestion, healthy vigour, and the elasticity of well-being.

Sanatogen, which is a fine white powder, is packed in bottles, and can be obtained from all chemists.

An engrossing booklet containing matter of vital importance to well-being in the Tropics has recently been issued. It is from the pen of a physician long resident in India and is entitled "How to keep well in India." It should be in the hands of all desirous of knowing how to get well and keep well. A copy can be obtained free of charge from Messrs. Smith Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, from whom also Sanatogen can be purchased.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY OF IT.

From T. W. GEARY, JR. EXR. P., CALCUTTA, 30-5-95. "Just a line to inform you of the efficacy of your medicine. I had been a great sufferer from severe attacks of Diarrhœa and Dysentery for the past three and a half years, and had tried all kinds of Medicine, but only to give me relief for the time being. Only about a fortnight ago I heard of and tried your Catechu Mixture and I must say I found it a most wonderful medicine, for two or three doses have completely cured me. Thanks be to God and to your invaluable remedy, I am now as well as possible. You can make what use you like of this.

From MISS E. A. L., LUCKNOW. A friend of mine before going to Burma last year gave me a bottle of Catechu Mixture for the relief and cure of diarrhœa. As it has done me so much good, I will feel much obliged if you will send me a bottle of it.

From T. OTTER, ESQ., DISTRICT SURVEYOR, NELLORE.—Please send per V.-P. Parcel to be sent by Train addressed as below 2 bottles of Catechu.

I have to state that your medicines are very effectual and I have great faith in them. They are worth their weight in gold. You can make use of this statement as you please.

MRS. K. ELLIS, MEERUT.—Please send to my address 1 bottle Restringent Mixture and 1 bottle Catechu. Both these preparations are invaluable and I never will be without them.

THE TURF.

SANDOWN.

THOUGH not so muggy as on Friday, it was more like January than July, with April showers thrown in on the last day of this meeting. The King and Prince Christian were again present, and were greeted by another brilliant company in the pretty paddock, the umbrageous shelter of which was very welcome to the fair sex, whose dainty toilettes otherwise would have suffered. The attendance all round was again a large one, and the executive can be congratulated on the success achieved. Details:—

LIVERPOOL.

Signs of the decadence of the season which ends next week at Goodwood, were palpable at Liverpool on Wednesday, when the attendance, despite an excellent card, was the smallest seen for years. The weather was perfect with a bright sun and blue sky triumphant over one or two threatening invasions of rain clouds, while the course was in excellent order. Though fields fell short of the usual standard, they were redeemed by class and finishes, for the most part, were closed and exciting. Details:—

ATHLETICS.

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

THE great show at the Stadium was continued last Friday in weather that can only be described as "filthy." Yet some magnificent things were done—notably G. E. Larner's ten mile walk and fresh record. As Great Britain also won the cycle pursuit race, two further points were gained in the aggregate of victories. America did not win an event and England led by 7 events to 4. Sweden, with the javelin and team gymnastics gained a couple of points, and was a good third, with three victories. Germany won the back-stroke swimming race, and scored her first victory in the Games. Details :—

Heat 2.—Great Britain (I.) beat Great Britain (III.)

England swept the board at the Stadium on Saturday last, and out of eight events, not including the archery, won six outright, and only lost the discus to America. Germany won the fancy diving, but England had not a representative in the final of that event.

The Stadium was splendid sight. In spite of the wet weather, there was a grand crowd, every part being fairly well patronised, and the enthusiasm as the Union Jack went up after each fresh success was another answer to those who say we take our pleasures sadly. The events finished were.

There was some excellent sport on Monday, the 26th instant, and in the afternoon the multitudinous heats of the 100 metres (109 yards 11 inch), the 800 metres (874 yards 15 inch), 400 metres hurdles (437½ yards), flat races, and the 100 metres swimming race provided splendid racing for a capital crowd.

In the seventeen heats of the 100 metres the Americans did some fine things, and J. A. Rector won his race in 10⅘secs., or perhaps a shade faster. But this equals world's record. Details :—

Tuesday was America's day at the Stadium, and the weird yells of her partisans rent the air time and again as the sprinters won their heats. And it reached a climax when Sheppard ran home in the 800 metres flat race from E. Lunghi (Italy) in Olympic record time, and also beat the half-mile British amateur record in 1min. 54secs.

America also won the high jump, through H. F. Porter, who cleared 6ft. 3in. and beat Olympic record of 6ft. 2⅘in. by J. K. Baxter at Paris in 1904. England's nearest thing to a victory was getting a couple of wrestlers into the final of the catch-as-catch-can middle-weight. Details :—

ROWING.

THE WINGFIELD SCULLS.—There were two challengers for the Wingfield Sculls (Amateur Sculling Championship of England) this year, viz., H. T. Blackstaffe (Vesta R. C.) and R. C. Bourne (New College Oxford), runner-up for the Oxford University Sculls, so the holder, J. de G. Edye (Auriol R. C.), acted up to his suggestion that the challengers' heat and championship heat should be combined, and the race was rowed on the 17th instant noon over the University course, from University Stone at Putney to the second post above the Ship at Mortlake on the flood tide. The form of the Oxonian was an unknown quantity on the Thames, except in practice, and the race was looked upon as a duel between Blackstaffe and Edye, with Bourne simply out for experience, but the result, as far as the second place was concerned, was a surprise. Details.—

(Centre Station) H. T. Blackstaffe, Vesta R. C., 11st 3lb.	1
(Surrey) R. C. Bourne, New College, Oxford, 10st 5lb. ...	2
(Middlesex) J. de G Edye, Auriol R. C., 12st 2lb.	3

On the whole, the conditions turned out better than were anticipated, and might be described as about normal. All the competitors were shown up from Cutters, Bourne having Dr. Sheard, the well-known London coxswain, as pilot; Blackstaffe, J Berresford, an old opponent from the Thames R. C.; and Edye was mentored by Guy Rixon, of the Kingston R. C. Mr. St. George Leslie, who won this race in 1904, acted as umpire from the steam launch La Bourgeise, which carried a much larger company than usual.

At the signal, Bourne, who seemed rather nervous, got very slowly away, and only pulled 27 strokes in the first minute, against 34 by Blackstaffe and 31 by Edye. Blackstaffe went to the front in the first half-minute, and gradually improving his position, was two lengths ahead at Craven Steps—50secs. Approaching the mile post, Bourne was showing improved form, but the positions were unaltered. Blackstaffe's time was 4mins. 55secs. for the distance. Bourne continued to creep up, and forged into second place just before reaching Hammersmith Bridge, when the times of the competitors were: Blackstaffe, 8mins. 52secs.; Bourne, 9mins. 6secs.; Edye, 9mins. 7secs. From this point the issue was never in doubt, and the only further excitement caused was half-way up the Devonshire Meadows, when Bourne almost ran ashore. Blackstaffe maintained his position with comparative ease, and won by several lengths, Bourne almost as much in front of Edye.

	Chiswick Ch.	Barnes Bridge.	Finish.
	m. s.	m. s.	m. s.
Blackstaffe ...	... 11 48	20 32	24 48
Bourne ...	... 15 13	21 0	25 22
Edye ...	... 15 25	21 22	25 53

Blackstaffe sculled with all his old judgment, and finished fairly fresh; Bourne deserved every credit for a first showing over the course, while Edye explained his somewhat featureless display by the statement that his left arm had "gone" early in the race.

LAWN TENNIS.

THE INTER-COUNTY FINALS.—The finals of the inter-county competition were contested in beautiful weather and on courts that were adequately elastic. As a result of the rallies watched by an interested gallery, both the men's and ladies' cups will find a year's sanity in London. The male tournament was close enough to be inconclusive almost to the finish, for at the end of the second round both counties had won three matches. A timely win for Mavrogordato and Simond (reshuffled into partnership overnight) over Stoddard and Hay raised the hopes of Middlesex, and when Green and White, by crisp and dogged volleying, triumphed over Boucher and Blake the verdict was known. Results.—

A. H. Green and X. Y. White (Middlesex) beat E. S. Wills and S. V. R. Drapes (6—0, 6—0) beat A. F. Stoddart and A. Hay (6—3, 0—6, 6—3), beat J. M. Boucher and A. W. Blake (6—3, 2—6, 6—4). A. L. Bentley and G. F. Fowler (Middlesex) lost to Stoddard and Hay (11—13, 0—6, lost to Boucher and Blake (4—6, 6—8), lost to Wills and Drapes (6—2, 7—6, 3—6). T. M. Mavrogordato and G. M. Simond (Middlesex) lost to Boucher and Blake (6—2, 2—6, 6—1), beat Wills and Drapes (8—6, 6—4), beat Stoddard and Hay (6—4, 7—5). The net result gave Middlesex a victory by 5 matches to four, 12 sets to 10, and 111 games to 108.

The ladies' final between Cheshire and Surrey had not the same element of excitement, though the issue was not decided in favour of the Southern shire until the third round. Details.—

Mrs. Sterry and Miss E. G. Johnson (Surrey) beat Mrs. Heatley and Miss Walford (6—0, 6—4), beat Miss Cressy and Miss H. Fletcher (6—9, 6—3), beat Miss Garfit and Mrs. Walton (6—4, 7—9, 6—3). Mrs. Tuckey and Miss Bosworth (Surrey) lost to

LEGISLATORS vs. LAWYERS.—In the annual contest between the Bar Golfing Society and the Houses of Parliament, at Woking, on Saturday the 18th instant the Bar proved successful by 9 matches to 3. Mr. A. J. Balfour was unable to play in the singles, but he took part in the foursomes in the afternoon, when he and Mr. H. W. Forster defeated Mr. Ernley Blackwell and Mr. T. F. Dawson-Miller, after a very exciting game on the last green. Another successful pair for the Houses of Parliament were Lord Dalhousie and Mr. F. H. Newnes, who beat Mr. H. W. Beveridge and Mr. J. E. Otto. Each side secured 2 games in the foursomes but the Parliamentary representatives were outplayed in the singles only one of their number, Mr. H. J. F. Badeley, who beat Mr. Otto, winning his match. Details.—

Two young ladies on the promenade had been watching the vessels pass, through a telescope lent them by an "ancient mariner." On handing the glass back, one of them remarked that it was a very good one.

"Yes miss," said the old tar; "that, ere telescope was given me by Lord Nelson."

"Good Gracious! Why, Nelson has been dead over one hundred years."

"Well I'm blowed," remarked the salty one, "'ow the time do fly!"

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HOUNDS.

Saturday, 1st August.—Briar Shola 12 noon. There was heavy rain all night and the greater part of the morning, but cleared about 11 A.M. Scent has been decidedly indifferent of late, and jacks have made themselves conspicuous by their absence, preferring, no doubt, to lie snug in their earths during the day, and steal forth at night. Hounds drew over the Dartmore Vale to Wenlock and Khed, without touching a line, then on through Bungalow Shola and Bacon Wood, down the Yemmakal Valley, to below Duff's Earth, when a jack was viewed by Colonel Desaraj Urs slinking into covert. The instant hounds threw their tongues the jack popped into an earth. The terrier was put in and after a lengthy wait was successfully bolted. Taking a line down to the Yemmakal Stream, he crossed over and led through the lower corner of Bacon Wood into Bungalow Shola, with hounds close on him. On finding no friendly earth to take refuge in, he doubled back into Bacon Wood. Coming out of this on the far side, just below the Pykara Road, he made a bid for Lower Briar, through which he was rattled. Crossing the Back Staircase Road, he kept above it for a short distance, then turned left-handed up Back Staircase; sweeping round to the right he sank the hill into the Devil's Dyke, and rising the ridge set his mask for Duff's Earth, which he found had been stopped by the terrier bogs during his temporary absence and the pack had him before he had time to seek shelter elsewhere. A good deal of country was drawn without finding again.

Monday, 3rd August.—The Umbrella Tree at 8 A.M. There were signs of a break in the weather, the sun showed himself for a few minutes, and the wind was not quite so rough. Scent had also improved. Hounds found outside Hanging Shola, the jack led straight for the ghauts; crossing the Connemara Road, he went away over the hill above and dived down into a large shola, overlooking the Segur Ghaut; but instead of making his escape down the slopes, he turned left handed over the Segur Road at the head of the ghaut, and climbed up the ragged side of Matanad Hill. About half way up, he swept round left-handed and ran into a patch of dense scrub near Toda Cathedral; hounds checked for a time, but on being thrown into the covert a brace of jack quitted it on the east side, one leading hounds to the left round the foot of Matanad Hill, and then dived down into Cathedral Shola and got to ground about half a mile below. The Master then trotted back and drew Hanging Shola, from thence to Brooklands and Toda Cathedral and round to the north of Rocky. A jack was viewed above Karimuli Mund, pointing for Rocky Covert; he led hounds at a great rate through the covert and sank the hill to Demon Valley Stream, short of which he turned left-handed and rose the slope to Toda Cathedral; leaving it on the right he raced for Waterfall Shola with hounds in full cry close on to him; without dwelling, he ran through the edge of the Bluegum Plantation and swung left-handed round the hill down to the Waterfall River, up the other side through a small shola near a Toda Mund (without a name) and on into Beadnell's; coming out at the corner to the left above the Shola Road, he managed to beat hounds in the stream which runs down from the Barber's Shop, into the Waterfall River. There were only seven couple of hounds on the line of this jack, the rest being left in Waterfall Shola, hunting another jack round the covert. Later on a jack was viewed near Rallywood; he led hounds at a tremendous pace through to the left over Pearl Crossing, and rising the slopes of Bagman ran right over the top and down the other side to Elmhurst Corner, where he beat hounds by going to ground in an old water course under the bend of the road.

Tuesday, 4th August.—The meet this morning was held at Fernhill by kind invitation of H. H. the Maharaja of Mysore. The court below Woodstock was first drawn; hounds threw their tongues on a line, and hunted it round about, but were unable to do much with it. In Denmark they found a jack that led them through Ursula down to Fairlawns Stream and up into Cairn Hill, they hunted him out of Cairn Hill into Woodstock, through Dairy Maid back into Denmark, where he saved his mask by climbing up the hollow trunk of a tree from which it was impossible to dislodge him. The next find was on the hillside between Jackal and Rallywood. The pack being close on to him. When found they pushed him through Jackal to the left over the Krurmund Road into Dudley and on into Baikie, turning left handed over Denmark Hill past Porcupine, and leaving Dendron Belt on the left, they swung round right-handed down to Ursula and then to the left to Denmark Plantation, in which they eventually lost him.

The jack that gave the run of the day was found on Newmarket near Gold Mine Crossing. Hunting slowly at first, hounds gradually warmed to it and travelled at a fair pace along the bog to Rawlins' Nulla, where they turned up left-handed and then to the right as if for Bluegums, but bent to the left again over the top of the hill and dashed down to Ralleywood, through it to Jackal, and out at the far side and back into Rallywood. Coming out by the Potato field they turned left handed round the top of the hill and raced down to Sheffield Corner up into Tiger Shola where he led hounds round covert, up and down and round about till he finally beat them. The meet was well attended.

"A" had the advantage at the start and scored a goal in each of the first two chukkers, then "B" put on a spurt and Captain Clarke scored after a couple of excellent runs. "B" had a chance of drawing level but it was missed and "A" attacked for the rest of the game. They scored again and won as stated. Teams :—

FINAL.

ROYAL FUSILIERS "A" vs. 13TH HUSSARS.—The final game was played on the 7th instant. There was a small attendance owing to the threatening weather and the ground was not in good condition, nevertheless both teams gave a good display and an even game ended in a win for the Hussars. They were the first to score through Mr. Hind and the same player added another goal in the next period. In the third chukker the Fusiliers played up and Cope scored. Then the Hussars got away and Hind once more augmented their score. The Fusiliers made great efforts thereafter and just on time Wilson scored. The Hussars thus won by 3 goals to 2. Teams :—

Racing.

A DERBY 2,300 YEARS AGO.

THE most brilliant, certainly the most thrilling, of all the events in the old Olympic games was the chariot race, writes Norman Gardiner in a home paper.

The chariot used was a light racing car with only room for the driver to stand upright, drawn by four horses harnessed abreast. The chariot had already ceased to be used in war, but the chariot race goes back to the days when the Homeric chieftains, like Boadicea's warriors, went to battle in chariots.

The old war chariot was, of course, a far more substantial vehicle—a two-horse chariot. The chieftain was accompanied by a friend or young kinsman as charioteer, in whose charge he left his chariot when he dismounted to fight, remounting again either for flight or pursuit. Such were the chariots in which the earliest races were run.

The chief occasion of a chariot race would be the funeral of some great chieftain. All the neighbouring chieftains were bidden to the gathering, and the dead man's sons or friends offered rich prizes for their competition. Homer has left us an immortal picture of such a race at the sports held by Achilles in honour of his dead friend Patroclus. The description is too long to quote, too great to mutilate, but one or two points may be of interest.

Five prizes were offered, including a slavewoman "skilled in fair handiwork," a six-year-old mare, and various tripods or cauldrons of metal. For the five prizes there were five competitors. In Homeric sports there is always a prize for everyone. The course was a sort of double point-to-point, from the funeral pyre to a withered tree-stump in the distance and back. The track, like most Greek roads, was not of the best. In one place it followed the course of a dried-up stream, and part of the road had crumbled away, and here a disagreeable incident occurred. A youthful competitor adopted the tactics of a modern omnibus-driver, who forces the omnibus in front of him on to the kerb. By thus "boring" the veteran Menelaus, he forced him to check his horses from fear of an accident, and succeeded in passing him. But Homeric warriors were true gentlemen; the young man apologised for his youthful impetuosity, and the older man generously forgave him.

Then we have the first and, as far as I know, only instance of betting on the Greek turf. As the chariots came in sight, two of the spectators quarrelled as to which was leading, and one of them offered to back his opinion by wagering a tripod or cauldron. The bet, however, was not taken.

The Hippodrome where the horse-races took place, was a bare, sandy stretch some half-mile long and 200 yards broad surrounded by an embankment on which the spectators sat or stood. At one end was the starting place, and down the middle of the course were two pillars about 400 yards apart, which alone marked the track round which the chariots and horses raced. In the later Roman circus these pillars were joined by a low wall, but such an arrangement was not known in Greece. It is a curious instance of Greek conservatism in sport, due perhaps to its connection with religion, that the Greeks never improved on this straight course, with its sharp, awkward turns at each end, either for the foot-race or the horse-race. The idea of an oval course never occurred to them.

In early days the chariots had started in a line, but in the fifth century a most elaborate form of starting gate was introduced. It consisted of a triangular structure, the sides of which were 400 feet long, with the apex pointing down the course. Along the two sides at even intervals were a number of boxes or stalls, with a rope stretched in front of each. In these boxes the chariots or horses were placed, the places being decided by lot. When the trumpet sounded for the start the ropes in front of the pair of chariots nearest the base were withdrawn. As the first pair drew level with the pair in front, the next ropes were withdrawn, and so on, till the whole field was fairly started.

Then the excitement began. The chariots had to race twelve times round the course, turning at either end round the pillars. Everything, of course, depended on obtaining an outside place and securing the lead at the turn. The fields were large: ten chariots was quite a usual number; in one case we hear of forty, though we can hardly suppose they all ran in one heat. What a sight it must have been to see them, as they dashed away from the start and rushed down the straight, all eager to obtain the advantage at the turn at the farther end! And then, as they neared the pillar, the excitement grew yet more intense.

If from the point of view of times and records the old Greek course was unsatisfactory, from the spectator's point of view it left nothing to be desired. Tattenham Corner is an awkward turn, and it is a grand sight to see a large field sweeping round it into the straight. But Tattenham Corner is child's play to the turn of the Greek course, and the Greek chariots had to make the turn twenty-two times in a race. It is no simple matter to drive a team of four horses round a pillar at any time without losing pace or making an overwide sweep. The Greek charioteer practised with movable posts like those used by the artillery in the Military Tournament, and in their pictures we often see these pillars upset. But what skill and nerve it must have required to negotiate such a corner in a race with ten or more other chariots! Naturally, disastrous collisions were frequent. In the field of forty which I mentioned only one chariot is said to have survived; at which one is hardly surprised, if they raced all together.

There were many other races in the Hippodrome introduced at various times into the programme: a pair-horse chariot race, a mule chariot race, races for teams of colts, horse-races. The jockeys in the latter were boys, who rode naked and without saddles. But, great as was the splendour of these events, they never attained the popularity of the purely athletic contests. This was partly due to the fact that horse-racing was necessarily the sport of the rich tyrants and nobles. As Greece increased in wealth the love of horse-racing grew, and the horsy young gentleman of the fifth century was a favourite butt of the comic poets. Athletics, on the other hand, were thoroughly popular; there everyone competed on equal terms, and money played little part. Moreover, the owner did not as a rule drive or ride his own horses; and though he took the olive crown, the victory was largely due to the skill and nerve of the jockey.

Women, who were forbidden even to appear at Olympia during the festival, were yet allowed to enter their chariots for the race. A notable woman victor was Cynisca, the sister of the Spartan king Agesilaus. The latter, so the story goes, observing that his subjects were becoming inordinately addicted to horse-racing to the neglect of athletics, persuaded his sister to enter for the chariot race at Olympia in order to show the Spartans that such a victory did not depend "upon any extraordinary spirit or ability, but only upon riches and expense."

CALCUTTA RUGBY LEAGUE.

RANGERS vs. GLOSTERS.—Played on the Dalhousie ground last Saturday, a very one-sided game ending in a victory for the Glosters by 4 goals and 8 tries (44 points) to nil. In the first half Bartlett, Murray, Parnell, Baylis, Smith and Millwater crossed the Rangers' line and two of these tries were converted. On changing ends, Rogers, Baylis, Lovell, Robbins, Parnell and Smith scored and the extra points were added on two occasions. Teams :—

GLOSTERS.—Russell, back; Bartlett, Smith, Rogers and Lieutenant Parnell, three-quarters; Murray and Millwater, halves; Hopcroft, Travell, Wilson, Baylis, Lovell, Organ, Robbins and Strong, forwards.

RANGERS.—J. B. Minet, back; Wheelock, Cody, Bennett and Palmer, three-quarters; Young and Williams, halves; Sterling, E. Minet, Hume, McNeill, Hume, Nicoll, James and Gault forwards.

Referee :—Mr. E. Martelli.

DALHOUSIE vs. H.L.I.—These teams met at Dum-Dum on Saturday last and a well contested game ending in a win for the H.L.I. by a goal to nil. The Dals played substitutes for three of their regular players and were further handicapped by the absence of Dunn who was injured and had to leave the field during the second half. The only try of the match was scored by Henderson after a fine dribble. Tait added the extra points. Dalhousie was very near scoring on more than one occasion after the interval but they were always pulled up and the game ended as stated.

CALCUTTA vs. UNITED SERVICES.—On the Calcutta ground last Saturday the home team beat the Services by 3 goals and a try (18 points) to nil. Calcutta pressed at the start and McLeod nearly scored. Then the Service three-quarters got away but Schaumberg tackled well and the game was brought back to the U.S. twenty five where Arthur got over. Burnett added the points and shortly after Sherman got through. The kick failed and Calcutta led at the interval by a goal and a try to nil. On changing ends play ruled even for a spell, then Sherman once more got possession and crossed the line with a try, which Arthur converted. Towards the close of the game McLeod receiving from a line out ran in with a fourth try. Arthur was again successful with the kick and Calcutta won as stated. Teams :—

C.F.C.—Schaumberg, back; Sherman, Siddons, Reid-Kay and Burnett, three-quarters; Arthur and Candler, half-backs; Kerr, McLeod, Harvey, Donald, Dick, Studd, Birch and Fraser, forwards.

U. SERVICES.—Ker, back; Speller, Carr, Bocquet and Slater three-quarters; Beddy and Cumine, half-backs; Chase Cunnyngham, Bruce, Fraser, Hands, Buckley, Fowler and Layard, forwards.

Referee :—Mr. T. C. Manders.

AN IDEAL INVALID FOOD IN HOT CLIMATES.

'Allenburys' The DIET

A PANCREATISED MILK AND CEREAL FOOD.

The "Allenburys" Diet is a complete food, being manufactured from milk and wheaten meal, both ingredients being largely predigested. It is most palatable and easy of digestion, and can be made in a minute, the addition of boiling water only being necessary. Whilst acceptable to all as a light nourishment, it is especially helpful to Invalids, Dyspeptics, and the Aged.

For Travellers by Sea or Land this complete Food will be found exceedingly valuable.

CALCUTTA vs. GLOSTERS.—Played on the Calcutta ground on Tuesday, the home team winning after an exciting struggle by 2 tries (6 points) to a penalty goal (3 points). The Military attacked during most of the first period, but the Calcutta backs were in good form and the soldiers could not score. The interval arrived without score, but on changing ends Calcutta opened with a vigorous attack and Arthur picked up and crossed the line with the first try. Dunsterville failed to place a goal from a difficult angle. Soon after the civilians again pressed and Burnett got over with the second try. This was not improved upon and on resuming the Glosters tried hard to reduce the margin. Offside against Calcutta enabled Lieutenant Tweedie to drop a goal from the free kick. The rest of the play was mostly in favour of Calcutta, but there was no further scoring. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—J. Schaumberg, backs; J. S. Longbottom, J. R. Kay, H. Siddons, and A. M. Burnett, three-quarters; C. G. Arthur, A. S. Candler, halves; F. S. Kerr, J. McLeod, H. Donald, A. R. Birch, G. E. Dunsterville, F. G. Kennedy, A. C. Earp, and W. Fraser, forwards.

GLOSTERS.—Russell, back; Lieut. Parnell, Smith, Rogers and Lieut. Tweedie, three-quarters; Murray and Millwater, halves; Hopcroft, Wilson, Bailis Robinson, Ford, Strong, Travell and Lowell, forwards.

CALCUTTA SWIMMING CLUB.

PLATE DIVING COMPETITION.—Only four turned out for this event and with perhaps one exception the diving was absolutely wretched. The winner was J. V. Watkins who in two dives totalled 13 plates, not overgood but brilliant in comparison with the efforts of the others. Results :—

		1 Dive.	2 Dives.	Total.
1. J. V. Watkins	...	5	8	13
2. A. Munro ...	...	5	4	9
3. J. A. Munro	...	5	2	7
4. R. Donaldson	...	4	1	5

Twelve plates were thrown in for each dive.

"No ma'am," said an Irish maid of much experience, as she returned to a registry office the other day. "I didn't arrange anything with that family. I didn't like the looks of their cat."

"Of their cat!" repeated the owner of the office, in amazement, "why I'm sure they wouldn't keep a cat that was in any way dangerous."

"Not dangerous, no ma'am, but a restless unhappy-looking creature that didn't speak well for the family," replied the girl. "I always judge a family by their cat—if they have one A family that can't make its cat happy is one to make any servant miserable."

The Story Teller.

TALE OF AN ANAGRAM.

LETTER I.

Mr. Thomas Brown to Mr. Henry Robinson :

DEAR HARRY,—

Hip! Hip! Hurrah!!! Awfully glad to see your name in the winning list this week. Just think of clearing £123 17s. 4d. in one "anagram." And such a rotten one, too, old boy. Of course you'll have a bust up over this. I'm writing to tell Bill, and we'll hold ourselves in readiness to help you celebrate the event whenever you like. Hearty congrats.—Yours,

TOM.

LETTER II.

Mr. Henry Robinson to Mr. Thomas Brown :

MY DEAR TOM,—

Thanks for your congratulatory letter No doubt you and Bill will think me very strange, but I am not going to have a "bust up" as you call it to celebrate my winning an "anagram" by perfectly fair means. I cannot see why all my friends should expect a treat at my expense simply because my anagram, received the just reward of its merits.—Your truly,

H. ROBINSON.

LETTER III.

Mr. Thomas Brown to Mr. William Jones :

DEAR BILL,—

You should see the letter I've had from Harry. It seems we're not to share the plunder in any way. He's shirty about something. But I hate meanness, and have thought of a ripping way to pay him out. I've written to every charitable institution I've ever heard of telling them Harry has come into a fabulous sum, and is anxious to subscribe to everything I could put a name to if only they will call personally upon him, and explain their wants. If he does n't emigrate in less than three months I'm not—Yours ever,

TOM.

P. S.—I've just written a line to say he's anxious to defray entirely the cost of the new steeple on the church near his diggings.

EXTRACT FROM LOCAL PAPER.

"We must all heartily congratulate our esteemed fellow townsman, Mr. Henry Robinson, on his becoming possessed of a huge fortune, running, it is stated on good authority, into six figures. Mr. Robinson has gained the applause of all by celebrating his accession to wealth by many charitable actions, prominent among which is his generous offer to defray entirely the cost of rebuilding the steeple on our beloved parish church. Few young men in Mr. Robinson's position would have made so worthy a use of their wealth, and it gives us much pleasure to state that we have Mr. Robinson's authority to request all who are in charge of charitable funds to apply to him for pecuniary assistance."

LETTER IV.

Mr. Thomas Brown to Mr. William Jones :

DEAR OLD BILL,—

Such larks! I went to see Harry yesterday. You can't get near his door for callers—they've got the police outside to regulate the traffic! Fact!! And letters!!!

The poor old chap has sent notices to all the papers contradicting the report of his money, but they won't believe him and don't print them. I never saw a man in such a state; he can't go out for fear of being mobbed, and can only take exercise up and down his back yard after dark. I never thought it would be such a big thing.—Yours ever,

TOM.

LETTER V.

Miss Evelyn P. Smith to Mr. Henry Robinson :

DEAR MR. ROBINSON,—

As we are quite unknown to each other you will no doubt be surprised to hear from me, but I have read of your many acts of charity and should very much like to make your aquaintance. I am—like yourself—in possession of almost fabulous wealth—I was sole heiress to my uncle, Elias P. Smith, the Oil King—and know what a barrier it is to the forming of real friendships. My aunt joins me in cordially inviting you to spend the next week end with us at our little houseboat, The Money Bug, at Cookham.

Looking forward to what I hope may be a sincere pleasure to both of us. I am, yours very truly,

EVELYN P. SMITH.

LETTER VI.

Mr. Henry Robinson to Miss Evelyn P. Smith :

DEAR MISS SMITH,—

In answer to your very kind letter, I must inform you that the reports as to my sudden accession to a huge fortune are entirely unfounded. I have never been left so much as a lock of hair in my life. If you are afflicted with wealth in half as great a degree as I am supposed to be, you have, dear lady, my sincerest sympathy. Since the ridiculous reports of my money became common property I have had no peace, no happiness, no pleasure, except the receiving of your very kind letter.

I have never done any of the charitable actions attributed to me, and were I to accept your invitation I should be acting under false pretences; so I must regretfully decline.—Yours sincerely,

HENRY ROBINSON.

LETTER VII.

Miss Evelyn P. Smith to Mr. Henry Robinson :

DEAR MR. ROBINSON,—

My aunt again joins me in begging you to accept the invitation of my last letter. We are both dying to meet you and think the modest way you discount your charity and position is just great.

With best wishes.—Yours very truly,

EVELYN P. SMITH.

LETTER VIII.

Mr. Henry Robinson to Mr. Thomas Brown :

DEAR TOM,—

Don't come over on Saturday. I've an invitation from an American girl, who seems as insane as the rest of my correspondents, to spend the week-end with her and an aunt at Cookham. I have accepted, as I feel I shall go mad if I stop here.

Shall go to the railway station disguised as a policeman to escape detection.—Yours truly,

HARRY.

LETTER IX.

Mr. Tom Brown to Mr. William Jones :

DEAR BILL,—

In answer to yours about Harry, the old chap is still staying with those Americans. He writes to say he doesn't know when he'll be back—they seem to have taken to him wonderfully.

From what he writes I should say the girl's ripping.—Yours,

TOM.

LETTER X.

Mr. Henry Robinson to Mr. Thomas Brown :

DEAR TOM,—

Just a line to say I was married this morning to Miss Evelyn P. Smith, and sail this afternoon in Evelyn's own yacht for our honeymoon in the Mediterranean.

Am enclosing cheque for £123 17s. 4d. for you and Bill to have a "bust up"—I quote you again—"to celebrate the event."—Yours very truly,

HARRY,

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

The great Olympic Games in London have emphasised the fact that the United Kingdom no longer enjoys a monopoly of proficiency in sport. Foreign athletes in the past have sat at the feet of the Britishers gaining all the knowledge they could; they have learnt their lesson well, and it would be futile to deny that in some branches they have bettered us. A glance at the result of the Games in the Stadium shows that the United Kingdom stands at the top with a total of 23 firsts, 20 seconds and 12 thirds, while the United States of America comes next with 18 firsts, 11 seconds and 10 thirds. This style of reckoning, however, does not suit the Americans. Their commissioner, Mr. James E. Sullivan, in a telegram to President Roosevelt said: "In the athletic section representing the world's championship, the track and field athletes of the United States won fifteen first prizes out of a possible twenty-seven, scoring more firsts than the other athletes of the entire world. On the basis of five points for firsts, three for seconds, and one for thirds, the United States athletes scored 114½ points. Great Britain and Ireland combined 66 1-3."

On analysing the returns we find that the general result is that the United Kingdom won six of the distance competitions, viz., the two walking races, the three miles team race, the 3,200 metres steeplechase, the five miles, and the 400 metres. Against this total the Americans count an equal number, viz., the 1,500 metres, the 800 metres, the 400 metres hurdles, the Marathon race, and the 1,600 metres relay. But in the other athletic competitions the Americans proved an easy first. They won the five jumps, viz., the high, the long, the standing high, the standing long, and the pole jump. They also won the hammer throwing, putting the shot and the discus throwing. Thus in the athletic events, while the United Kingdom and the Oversea Dominions scored eight points in the Stadium athletics, the Americans scored fourteen. The moral, of course, is that if English athletes are not to sink to the level of mediocrity they must adopt more scientific methods of training and organisation. That the old country still possesses the material there can be no doubt—this was amply demonstrated in the cycling and swimming contests—what is required is a more rigorous attention to detail. One of the greatest surprises in the Stadium was the magnificent victory of Walker, a slip of a lad, aged 19, from South Africa, in the 100 metres run. The Americans were confident of their ability to carry off this event, but their champion, Rector, found more than his match in Walker, whose time was 10mins. 4-5secs. Another disappointment for the Transatlantic visitors was the equally creditable success of Kerr, a Canadian representative, in the 200 metres run. Against these, however, must be set America's triumph in the 1,500 metres run, which England had great hopes of winning, and the feeble display of the United Kingdom in the Marathon race.

A regrettable feature of the Olympic contests was the discreditable tactics resorted to by the American contingent. From first to last they grossly accused the British officials of unfairness, and the cry was taken up by a section of the American press with accentuated bitterness. This is the sort of thing which has been shown up in the Yankee yellow press in big type:—"Instead of British fair play our men encountered British foul play," "Foul play causes England to lead in the Olympiad." Two instances of American ideas of playing the game may be given. One has reference to the tug-of-war between Liverpool Police and U.S.A. The struggle had barely commenced, when, with ridiculous ease, the Liverpool men pulled their opponents off their feet. The reverse was so little to the Americans' liking that they at once retired, but how did they take their defeat? Why, they trumped up a charge against the victors of wearing "heavy boots with iron shod heels." This childish protest was, of course, overruled, the facts being that the police wore their usual boots, which were entirely in accordance with the regulations laid down. It is significant that when the City of London Police team, who won the final, offered to pull the disgruntled Americans in their stocking feet the challenge was not accepted. The scurrilous American press seized upon the libel on the Liverpool police with avidity. One journal charged them with wearing "heavy spiked boots," and elsewhere in the same issue it elaborates the accusation into one of wearing "Steel plates on their soles, and cleats on their heels!"

An incident that aroused still further indignation among the English spectators was the fouling of Lieutenant Wyndham Halswelle, of the Highland Light Infantry, in the final of the 400 metres run. The Americans, it may be mentioned, had boasted loudly that this event was a gift for them, but when Mr. Halswelle won his heat in the record time of 48mins. 2-5secs., they began to look glum. The judges remembering that the American rules allow one competitor to "bore" another, and recalling that by these tactics Barker, the Australian, had been deprived of winning the same race at Athens in 1906, very wisely stationed two of their number at a bend in the track about half way. To follow what occurred it is necessary to understand the positions of the four starters in Mr. Halswelle's race. Carpenter, U.S.A., had the inside berth, Halswelle second, and Robbins, U.S.A., next, with a coloured man, also of U.S.A., on the outside. Approaching the bend an extraordinary manœuvre was seen on the part of Carpenter. There was every reason why he should keep the inside berth, but as he came round the bend he veered to the outside of the track, while Robbins drew inside. In that swift curve Carpenter could have had only one purpose, and it was obvious to everyone. Running close in front of Halswelle, he stuck his right elbow out and "bored" Halswelle. Halswelle shot out his arm and shouted a protest as he ran, but Carpenter persisted to the end, and keeping Halswelle behind on the outside finished first, Robbins on the inside berth being second and Halswelle third. The judges very properly broke the tape, declared the race void and disqualified Carpenter. The impressions of the spectators, it is important to note, are borne out absolutely by photographs of the competitors' footmarks on the track. The Americans, while admitting that Carpenter had a habit of swinging wide at bends, were furious at his disqualification and gratified their resentment by refusing to take part in the final. Halswelle was thus compelled to walk over. When the plucky little Italian, Dorando Pietri, came in first in the Marathon race the Yankees objected to him on the ground that he was assisted to the tape. The protest was a good one, for it is generally admitted that, but for the help given him he would not have reached the finishing post. The result was that the British officials, in the spirit of fairness that characterised all their decisions, awarded the race to Hayes, U.S.A. But did this silence the American grumblers? No; they churlishly complained that it should not have been necessary for them to have entered a protest, and that the judges should have acted on their own initiative. All this goes to show that the Americans are better athletes than they are sportsmen.

ALL sorts of things had happened to the small bookmaker since (discerning legislative rocks ahead) he had joined his anguished wife in running a village shop that professed to sell everything: but fresh trouble overwhelmed him when the Vicar's daughter, who was going to recite the "Pied Piper" at a tabbies' evening, came in to buy the book. "Do you keep Browning?" she asked, imperiously. "M'no, miss," he answered, scratching his head, "but we've got some jolly good blackin' whenever you're wantin' any."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

IN spite of the unpropitious weather on Saturday we had another really good meeting with some very exciting finishes, including a dead heat in a hurdle race for the second week running! The water stood on the course in regular puddles, but it was too wet to be at all slippery and most of the horses jumped well, and the only casualty occurred to Leading Lady, who hit the last fence in the open hurdle race and after staggering on for a few lengths without recovering her balance properly fell over in the mud, luckily without damage to Howie, who was riding her. Mr. Evers had a great day out, riding two wins and one of the firsts in a dead heat and Murdison did not fail to secure his usual victory, bringing Spec successfully home in the last race. The punting brigade had a pretty successful afternoon, as most of the winners were very well backed.

As usual the open hurdles was the first race on the card and a field of seven went out for it. Musette opened favourite, but then money came steadily on Merry Elsie and Ynyslas till at the close they all three stood at about 4-1. Musette "beat the flag" and was away at the start with a ten lengths lead, with Dangar and Merry Elsie quickest behind. The latter mare had improved a lot in her jumping, thanks to the patient schooling she received from Gee and settled down to her work in good style. Ynyslas and Leading Lady lay next. Pennant got away very badly and lay a long way back with Riverside all through the race. Musette kept the lead till passed the monsoon stand, when Ynyslas moved up to her and the two jumped the fifth hurdle together. Musette fell back after landing, Merry Elsie and then Dangar passing her in turn. Merry Elsie caught Ynyslas at the last hurdle and after a great race home the judge gave a dead heat between them.

THERE were nine starters for the Amateur Hurdles No. I, and Lady Gold was a hot favourite. Seditious and Matsumata were also fairly well backed and there was a good commission on Wake Up bringing her from 12 to 1 down to 6 to 1. Matsumata and Killarney jumped out in front, the others going over the first two in a crowd. Then Seditious showed out and held third place, Lady Gold and then Idle and Wake-Up just behind. At the jump by the old monsoon stand Lady Gold and Wake Up caught Seditious and then passed, Killarney and Matsumata jumping the fifth ahead of them. Matsumata came on again for a bit but could not keep with the leaders and from the bend the race lay between Lady Gold and Wake Up. A fine fight resulted in a victory for the former by a neck. Wake Up's jumping has much improved since the cold weather and she went for her obstacles as straight as a dart. They say too the mud suits her better than the dry going.

WE were glad to see Mr. MacGeorge back in the saddle again "after many days" and he donned silk once more to ride his horse Galley Slave, who was made favourite for the Selling Race, alas! to run nowhere. Queen of Gems and Regina were also handsomely backed. Regina, who is very quick on her legs, was away best and got the rails, Bouquet and Warstripe next to her. The latter didn't stay with them for long and it looked as if it would be a race between Regina and Bouquet till passed the distance when Queen of Gems, who had been lying fourth, came between them with a tremendous rush and won, hard ridden, by two lengths. She was well ridden by Butters, the new light weight jockey, whom we congratulate on his first score here.

THE Amateur Hurdles No. II was reduced to seven starters, as the three top weights shirked the heavy going. Dougall a good sort of horse, who has done very little racing, was backed on the report of a good school he had done with St. Rule and because Mr. Evers was riding and Ruby and Roland were also very well supported in the betting market. Pardon was standing the other way round when the flag fell and cantered round the course a furlong behind everything. Boolara led at first but Roland soon took up the running and kept ahead of them till past the old monsoon stand, where he tired away. It was apparent from there that only Dougall and Ruby were in the race at all. They took the fifth and sixth jumps almost together, but then the favourite went away and won comfortably by five lengths.

THE CINGALEE was favourite out of the 12 started for the Kidderpore Plate, but Mercedes was also very heavily backed, and there was money forthcoming for several others. Lord D making the most of his light weight jumped off in front with Clynder, Flotsam, The Cingalee, Pallas, then Mercedes. Coming down the straight Lord D was rallying and it looked as if Flotsam and Pallas would both beat him. He kept moving on from them, however, and finished second to Mercedes, who came out with a fine rush and won comfortably by a length.

FOR the Pony Handicap Plate, Little Dolly and Primrose opened favourites. Then Spec was well backed and brought down to a fairly short price, and a few good bets were taken about Piccaninny. There was a very good start from which Piccaninny soon showed in front. Spec came up second at the bend, and the leader feeling her big weight in the heavy going Gee had to sit down and ride her all the way down the straight, but could not keep up with the other, who going ahead from the distance won pretty easily by a length. Fraser made a great effort to bring Primrose up into second place but was just beaten by a neck by Piccaninny.

THE entries for the Fourth Monsoon Meeting (22nd August), which we publish elsewhere, are again extremely good and should produce excellent racing. Belvedere Plate 24, Maidan Plate 10, Amateur Jumpers' Plate 19, Oriental Plate 20, Amateur Hurdles 17, Entally Plate 16. (It was a good move making this for horses that have not won Rs. 200 instead of Rs. 50 as originally drafted.) There are a dozen duplicate entries altogether, making a nett total of 94 or over an average of over 15 a race which is very good.

A SHILLONG correspondent writes:—The programme of the Shillong Autumn Meeting has now been published. There is only one race worth more than Rs. 180 to the winner so it is not likely that Calcutta owners will consider it worth their while to send their animals the perilous journey of seven days, which it takes to reach the summer capital of the New Province. This meeting has no race longer than six furlongs. On the first day there are two open 14-1 races and one open race for 13-3's. It is the same on the second day. There are very few ponies summering up here this year, and not a single one from Calcutta. At present there are in the station, Mr. C. H. Holder's Glenlea, Repute and Topsy III., Mr. Allen's Ivy II., Mr. Rankin's Ladybird, Mr. Lynch's One and Only and Mr. P. L. Faulkner's Eileen Alannah and Shepherdess. Mrs. Ward's Circus Boy is in Calcutta and will be seen out in the Monsoon Meetings. He will probably be found to be fairly useful.

THE continued controversy regarding the starting gate in England has aroused considerable interest and discussion in the Colonies, and particularly in South Africa, where the gate has been in almost universal use for the past twelve years. A representative of the Sporting Life had a chat on the subject with Mr. E. A. Halliwell, who has for 15 years acted as starter in various parts of South Africa.

Which do you consider the better—the walk-up or stand-still start? was the first question asked. I do not agree with the walk-up start, Mr. Halliwell replied, because if you have such a start you might as well revert to the old method of the flag. My system is to make the good horses stand still, the restless and vicious ones I put behind, leaving an opening for them to come up. When the bad ones come up in line, and are about a length behind those already standing still, the signal is given, and in 99 cases out of a 100 I get the field off like men off the mark. I consider that about a length when a horse is on a slow move is a fair allowance to make as against those horses which are standing up to the tape.

The character of the gate has, of course, a great deal to do with the success or otherwise of a start?

Yes, decidedly. Personally, I have a strong objection to any gate whose action causes the tape to fly in front of the horses. In England, I understand, such a gate is in use, and in my humble opinion this is a great mistake, and I am not speaking without a good deal of experience on the point. Formerly, such a gate was in use at Turffontein at Johannesburg, but on my suggestion it was changed to the gate now employed there. The great merit of this particular gate is that it has only one tape—obviously an advantage; for the less a horse sees the less fear is instilled into him. But a greater merit still is to be found in the fact that the machine flies up so quickly and noiselessly, the tape going over the horses' heads, and in a seventh of a second is at rest again. The machine is perfectly noiseless.

I understand that in England they have a platform for the starter. If that is the case, said Mr. Halliwell, it is in my opinion most undesirable. At Turffontein the starter is practically hidden from view, only his head and shoulders being visible, so as not to frighten the horses. The lever is so placed that the jockeys cannot see the starter pull it. I think the lever is preferable to the electric button. What is the rule in England as regards starting? It lays down that every horse must start from a stand. In my opinion this is a moral impossibility; because in nine cases out of ten you cannot get your field to stand still. In South Africa we have what is in my opinion a very much better rule, for it gives the starter discretion to start his field either from a standstill or a walk, and in this I think lies the whole secret of a successful, even start. Of course, your starter must be a man well up to his work—quick of eye, and must not hesitate a fraction of a second once he has the field in line or as near so as possible.

The Joel vs. Sievier case ended on the 30th ultimo, in a verdict of not guilty. As our readers are aware Joel, the wealthy Jewish racehorse owner, alleged that he had been persecuted for a long time in the columns of the Winning Post, and that in June last Sievier had attempted to blackmail him in respect of £5,000. Sievier was arrested and ultimately tried before the Lord Chief Justice, the case culminating, after a four days' hearing, in a verdict of not guilty. Our readers are in possession of the facts elicited at the preliminary proceedings. When the case came on at the Old Bailey Sievier made a statement in his defence differing in every important particular from the evidence given for the prosecution by Mr. J. B. Joel, Mr. Bendon, and Mr. Mills. He declared that it was on his own initiative that Mr. Bendon went to Mr. J. B. Joel to secure him a loan, and that he did not know to whom he had gone. Two months afterwards Mr. Mills asked him to keep Mr. J. B. Joel's name out of his paper, and he undertook to do so. Mills then said he thought he could get him a bit of money, and he replied that he would have no money in connection with keeping Joel's name out. Witness was at the time seeking to obtain a loan, and Mills said he would try to get it for him. Mills afterwards told him he had rung up Mr. Joel, who would lend £2,500.

The loan from Mr. Joel was to Mr. Mills, and Mills was lending witness the money; he would not have taken it from Mr. Joel. The letter stating that he would publish nothing further about Mr. Joel was given at Mr. Mills' request, as "it would put him well with Joel." There was no connection between the letter and the money. Afterwards Mills told witness that he had been able to get a loan of £5,000, instead of £2,500 and added, "You can have this £2,500 as a present." Witness replied, "No such thing. I will have no such present." Sievier denied absolutely that he was in the telephone-box with Mills, or that he ever made any offer to Mr. Joel.

The defendant was put through a severe cross-examination by Sir E. Carson, and declared that Mr. Bendon and Mr. Mills had grossly perjured themselves. He could suggest no reason in the first case, but he had no doubt Mills was conspiring against him. The witnesses for the prosecution were alleged to be liars of the first water, cowards and blackguards. The keenest interest was taken in the trial and in the end, to the liveliest satisfaction of a very numerous body of admirers, the jury found in favour of Sievier. The reception accorded to the accused as he left the Old Bailey was riotous in its enthusiasm.

Jules Gautier, the famous swimmer, has many remarkable feats to his credit, but he never did anything more wonderful than his swim through London on the 29th ultimo, with his hands and feet manacled. Gautier is by no means a young man, having been born on 9th October, 1856, and standing 5ft. 4½in., he weighs 12st. Prior to this his principal performances were, under similar conditions, in 1888 swimming from Westminster to Cherry Garden Pier, 3½ miles; won the long distance championship of France in 1878; from Putney to London Bridge in 1889, occupying 2hrs. 8mins.; in July, 1904, from Putney to the Tower; and last year, Richmond to Putney in 2hrs. 54mins. On the 29th July he started from London Bridge and got as far as Richmond Railway Bridge —15 miles 7 furlongs—in 5hrs. 37mins. 45secs. Truly a prodigious feat under the conditions.

Our London sporting letter gives complete results of the Olympic Games and interesting details of the Marathon Race. The finish for the latter provided a veritable tragedy. Signor Dorando Pietro (Italy) was the first man to enter the Stadium dead-beat to the world, but determined to "get there" somehow. He began stumbling along the track, but soon fell; recovering he proceeded and fell again and was helped to rise by an official; he fell twice more, the last time within a few yards of the tape, he was assisted to his feet and steadied while, in a condition bordering on unconsciousness he staggered up to it and collapsed for the fifth time. Hayes (U.S.A.) was next man in, then Hefferon (South Africa). The American, of course, protested on the ground that Dorando had been helped and though sympathy with the plucky Italian was universal, the judges had no course open to them but to admit the protest and disqualify the man who finished first. The friends of Hefferon hastily lodged a protest against Hayes for having had some help on the journey; but, with true sporting spirit, the South African, directly he heard of it, insisted on its being withdrawn, declaring that he had no idea of trying to win a race on such a plea. The official decision was as follows:—"That in the opinion of the judges Signor Dorando Pietro would have been unable to finish the race without the assistance rendered on the track. And so, therefore, the protest of the United States is upheld, and the second, Mr. J. Hayes, is declared the winner, the protest made by the South African team being withdrawn." There therefore remains nothing more to add save sympathy with the Roman in his terrible disappointment and regret that the officials to blame allowed their enthusiasm or pity (or whatever it was) to cause them to forget the rules they should have been the first to enforce.

And this reminds us that the judging left something to be desired. No one ventures to impugn the fairness of the awards; but on at least three occasions the judges and officials exhibited an ignorance of their duties which resulted in direct disaster and endless discussion. The first was where a judge while a cycle race was on, collided with the Belgian who was leading, damaged man and machine and robbed the injured man of a certain victory! The second instance of incapacity was in the final of the 400 metres race in which Carpenter, the American, deliberately fouled Halswell, the Enlishman, crossing him as they were finishing and jobbing him in the chest with his elbow. The judges declared it "no race" and also disqualified Carpenter! ! This double-barrelled decision was altogether wrong: it should have been one or the other and having regard to the circumstances the disqualification of Carpenter was obviously the only proper course open to the officials. The Americans declined to run the race over again and Lieutenant Halswell walked over for it next day—a fiasco. The third and culminating contretemps was the assisting of Dorando Pietro, to reach the tape in the Marathon Race. The Italian may or may not have been able to struggle home without such help, but the idiotic interference of the officials has left the question in doubt for all time. It has done more than this. By affording excuse for complaint it enabled the American to win on a protest, a completely unsatisfactory result, and one which all sportsmen—the Americans themselves included—must deeply deplore.

But in all other respects the Olympic Games, were eminently successful. An analysis of the positions of the competing nations, published in our London Letter, shows Great Britain occupying the position rightly hers—"on top." Long may she continue there.

It is not to be wondered at that poor "Dorando," as everybody calls him, came in for sympathy from all quarters and in various forms—some grateful and comforting, others possibly embarrassing. Her Majesty the Queen presented him with a magnificent gold cup as a solatium and a souvenir. The A.A.A. possibly take the lead in opening a subscription wherewith to purchase him a replica of the trophy he morally won. Several subscriptions have been started, Sir Conan Doyle (whose vivid description of the finish was the best published) has started a fund which had reached £300 and was "swellin' wisibly" when the mail left. The Italian waiters in London, led by the staff at Romano's, have come down handsomely. He has had three offers of marriage: ladies have flung him jewels and trinkets as he passed by. So it will be seen he has found many friends in his misfortune.

Sir T. Lipton, of tea and yachting celebrity, was anxious to patch up the ill-feeling, which arose out of the disqualification of Carpenter in the 400 metres race connected with the Olympic Games and offered a £100 cup to be run for between the American and Lieutenant Halswell, the winner. Neither man was "having any," however.

The Jam Saheb of Nawanagar gave visitors to the Oval a glimpse of his old form last month: he evidently finds English cricket a deal more attractive than native state management. Playing for Sussex against Surrey on the 28th July, he made 200. Earlier in the season at Lord's against Middlesex he scored 153 not out, and 78 in the second innings. Ranjitsinghji had at the end of July an average of 46 for twenty-three innings and had scored close on a thousand run in first-class cricket this season.

H. Green, who started from Land's End at 8 A.M. on Monday, the 27th July, on an attempt to beat the Land's End to John O'Groats record set by T. Peck, who did 2 days 22hrs. 42mins., arrived at John O'Groats at 3-50 on the morning of the 30th idem. Green covered the journey in 2 days 19hrs. 50mins., beating Peck's time by 2hrs. 52mins.

"W. G.," as usual, appears to be the cricketer most marked down by the autograph-hunter, and in this connection an amusing story is going the rounds. The "Old Man," upon being invited by a little girl of ten summers or so to hand over his signature upon a visiting-card, remarked, "But I gave you one yesterday." "I know," replied the little maid; "but I've just swapped that for three Bishops'."

Two members of the Sussex team in Cox and Vine have been engaged by Ranjitsinghji, to come out to India in November. This will make their fourth cricket season in succession, for last winter they were with the Maharajah of Cooch Behar. Doubtless the Sussex authorities carefully considered whether it would be advisable to grant permission for the two players to again accept such an engagement, seeing that it would mean that by the commencement of next season they would already have been playing almost without a break for two years.

Angling in the sea with rod and line—which is distinct from sea fishing with nets and hand lines—is becoming every year more general in England and all those places round the coast, which can offer good sea angling are finding the advantage of this novel attraction.

It is rather unfortunate that at most of the seaside resorts within easy reach of London on the south and east coasts the fishing, especially from the piers, jetties, rocks, and beach, is rarely of much account until the best of the summer and autumn is over. It is for this reason that so many visitors who are obliged to take their holidays in August and September get disgusted with sea fishing. If they can stand the expense and motion of boat fishing they have a far better chance, but to sit on a pier all day and catch a few crabs is not exciting, whereas from the same spot a few weeks later they may be getting capital sport.

To give an idea of the extent to which sea angling as a sport has increased within the last twenty-five years or so it is only necessary to mention that during that period associations for promoting sea angling have been established at Great Yarmouth, Lowestoft, Southend-on-Sea, Herne Bay, Ramsgate, Deal, Dover, Folkestone, Hastings, Eastbourne, Brighton, Bognor, Ventnor, Weymouth, etc. The members of these associations number some thousands.

Sea-angling festivals and competitions are arranged by all these associations, and they frame rules and regulations dealing with such important matters as boatmen's charges for boats, baits, etc., get certain parts of piers and harbours set apart for anglers, arrange with railway companies for reduced fares, and generally do all they can to attract the angling visitor and improve their own sport.

Some freshwater anglers are inclined to look down upon sea angling, but this arises mainly from ignorance of the fine sport which at certain times and places is to be had, such as fly-fishing for bass from a boat, the best "fly" being a silvery little bit of soleskin made like a whitebait. To take these game fighters on fly, rod, and tackle in a stiff breeze is most exciting sport.

A curious sight was recently witnessed on the banks of the River Helmsdale, in Sutherland. A salmon, estimated to weigh between 20lb. and 30lb., was seen floating on its back and struggling in the water. On closer inspection it was seen that a large eel had entwined itself about the salmon's tail, and was holding it in a vice grip. With the eel round its tail, the salmon was helpless in the water, as its only means of propulsion was rendered useless. Such fights, it is said, are by no means uncommon, and the eel generally comes off victorious.

The unanimous opinion at St. Andrews seems to be that the amount subscribed as a memorial to "Old Tom" should be utilised in the first place by placing on some suitable building overlooking the St. Andrews Links a bronze medallion of the old man of golf, and, in the second place by endowing a bed in the St. Andrews Memorial Cottage Hospital, to be named the "Tom Morris bed," to be primarily available for golf professionals, club-makers, and caddies. The money subscribed is evidently to be spent on most praiseworthy objects, and it is hoped that the total amount will be £1,500, to enable the Committee of the Fund to carry out their excellent intentions.

The Junior Polo tournament, for which fourteen teams have entered, opened at Poona, on Monday, when three games in the first round were played. The Poona Horse beat the Northampton Regiment by ten goals to nil; the Blue Bottles beat the Bombay Gymkhana by 7 goals to 1; and the 26th Cavalry beat the Mounted Infantry by 6 goals to nil.

On Tuesday the 38th C.I. Horse beat the Onlookers by 5 goals to one: the Royal Engineers beat the Royal Artillery, Kirkee by 4 goals to 2: the Worcesters beat the Divsional Staff by 4 goals to 3 after playing an extra chukker.

The following are the complete entries for the Durand Football Tournament:—Mountain Artillery, Sirhind Brigade, 12th and 17th Lancers, 15th Hussars, 1st Queen's, 1st Northumberland Fusiliers, 1st Lancashire Fusiliers, 1st Camerons, 1st Gloucestershire Regiment, 1st Royal Sussex Regiment, 2nd Battalion Black Watch, 2nd Royal Berkshire, 2nd King's Shropshires, 2nd King's Royal Rifles, 1st Durham Light Infantry, 2nd Gordon Highlanders, 1st Royal Irish Rifles, 1st Connaught Rangers, Simla Volunteers Club, and Bishop Cotton School.

The Poona Horse Show is fixed for Thursday and Friday, 24th and 25th September.

The following are the results of the important cricket matches played in England during the past week:—

Somersetshire beat Hampshire by seven wickets.

Nottinghamshire beat Northamptonshire by ten wickets.

The matches between Yorkshire and Middlesex, Surrey and Sussex, Kent and Essex, and Derbyshire and Lancashire were drawn.

Worcestershire beat Gloucestershire by an innings and 108 runs.

Derbyshire beat Nottinghamshire by 36 runs.

Kent beat Somersetshire by an innings and 114 runs.

Yorkshire beat Surrey by seven wickets.

Gloucestershire beat Warwickshire by ten wickets.

Philadelphians beat M.C.C. by 25 runs.

Hampshire beat Northamptonshire by 115 runs.

The matches between Sussex and Worcestershire and Middlesex and Lancashire were drawn.

A regatta was held at Naini Tal on the 8th instant and was up to the usual successful standard. Entries—save in the Mixed Doubles, which fell through—were good and excellent sport was provided. Scratch fours opened the programme, Mr. Peake's crew being victorious. The second event was the Isaak Walton Stakes—lady to hook and land three floating fish, each separately. Won by Miss Marr and Mr. Hollins. The Grace Darling Stakes attracted 27 entries. Lady in a P. and O. had to rescue a crew consisting of two ladies and two men. Miss Winby gallantly rescued Mrs. Grove, Mrs. Robinson, Messrs. Towle and de Bensen. The Ill Assorted Couple Stakes in which partners were separated in different the ladies being invited to interfere as much as possible with those who rowed, was won by Miss Mare.

More "howlers." "An unclean spirit is a dirty devil." "Poetry is when every line begins with a capital letter." "The principal part of the eye is the pupil, the moat, and the beam." "Bacteria is a kind of chair for invalids." "Lava is stuff they put on your face at the barber's."

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—With the fine weather we have had for a few days recently flannels have been brought out again and the various clubs have been busy. Of the more important matches that between the Bombay Gymkhana and Islam Gymkhana created no little interest on Saturday. It was interesting for the fact that E. E. Coombes was seen in great form and established a new bowling record for the Europeans with seven wickets for seven runs.

Going in first the home team were found in scoring vein and Captain Turner played a very sound innings of fifty, Milne, 44, infusing more spirit into the game as also Commander Vines, who hit out as usual in his unfinished innings of 21. With 5 wickets down for 154 they declared.

Only with three exceptions the Islam score was a series of blobs and they could only muster 22. Coombs and Milne bowled unchanged, the latter taking 3 for 15.

Tuesday saw the Gymkhana engaged in a game with the Parsee Gymkhana, and a most exciting affair it proved to the large numbers lining the latter's ground. It being a one day match a first innings result was expected and thus with time enough for a second a double dose of excitement was provided. Though everything pointed to a good wicket it was quite a bowler's day, the scoring all round being low.

It fell to the Parsees to take first knock and except for J. D. Mody, 29, Divecha, 15, and Dubash, 10, they could do no good and were all dismissed for 93. Coombs took 5 for 27, Clarke 3 for 25 and Milne 2 for 24.

Captain Turner, 20, and Lieutenant Townend, 32, began well for the home side, but the rest fared badly except for Commander Vines, 19. Eight wickets fell for 88, and as it was thought that the first innings would decide onlookers sat with bated breath for the last wicket, five being wanted which Coombs and Clarke hit off.

In the Parsee second innings six wickets fell for 21, but then Divecha, 33, and Dubash, 15, again came to their assistance and the next fell at 54 and at 74 for nine they declared, this being their only chance. Milne took 5 for 23 and Clarke 3 for 30.

The same pair again opened well for the home side, Turner making 13 and Townend 20 and Sanderson carrying his bat for a careful 13 partnered by Hearson, 15, 67 was reached and the Parsee total passed for the loss of five wickets. For the visitors Madon was the most successful bowler with 4 for 38 and 3 for 29, Antia taking 3 for 23 and 2 for 19.

The Elphinstone C. C. of Bombay travelled to Poona for a two-day match against the Gymkhana there and with fine weather on Wednesday there was every prospect of good sport. Fortunate in winning the toss the visitors went in to make an excellent start. Warden, 55, and Dhanwalla, 45, looked like staying in all day and Meherhomji followed with a characteristically fast 21. Towards the end Davar, 12, Dubash, 10, and Irani, 10, helped to bring up a respectable total of 180.

During the remaining time Major Arnold and Captain Lucas were got rid of cheap and stumps were drawn with only 24 on the board.

A disappointment was, however, in store as it rained so much on Thursday that no cricket was possible and the match, was abandoned.

Mud sportites on Wednesday were favoured with a fine day and a large number turned out to witness an interesting programme of well contested events to the tune of the 116th Mahrattas. Presumably the Secretaries thought the tent-pegging good enough to warrant their making it for swords, but it was scarcely a success. There was no award in the horse class and in that for ponies the only one to carry was Owen Symons, Major Kilkelly touching on each occasion and Boothby getting third.

The Musical Chairs event was well contested, Mrs. Rumbold and Mrs. Cutbush joining in with the men as there were insufficient ladies to make an event of their own. Naturally enough there was a distinct inclination to infringe the rule about cantering, but it proved exciting nevertheless. Ash eventually won with the two ladies next in the order mentioned.

The Missing Word Competition called for a colossal effort on the part of a local poet, and the following lines in all probability could tell a tale of many sleepless nights:—

There's a little wee piece of green maidan
Which is one of the prides of Bombay
Where the lads and lassies foregather
To change a dull evening to gay;
And the sports which are ever most famous
Are those which no .....can stay.
So here's to our Wednesday evenings
On the beautiful sward of Bombay.

May be it's not surprising that nobody guessed the correct words to be "Mounted Sports," and the award had to be given to the next best which came from Mrs. Cudlip and Haig with Mrs. Rumbold and Boothby next.

Following came the Pony Scurry, which Major Kilkelly won easily from Griffin and O. Symons.

Proceedings wound up with the Balaclava Melee which for want of sufficient sticks had to be decided in heats of three, and took so long that the final has been postponed to the next meeting.

Though the Cooperage has been in good condition at the early part of the week we saw nothing startling in the way of skill as was expected when the Commercial Gymkhana met the Scots "A" on Tuesday. The downfall of the Scots "B" in Poona, apart from the fact that they were a man short most of the second half, was in my humble opinion due to a large extent to staleness, and signs of this can be seen in the "A" team. It is all very well for a team to be always at it, and that the military can find more time to practise than civilians is undoubtedly a great advantage, but there is such a thing as overdoing it. There has, I fear, been less of that feeling of unanimity amongst the Commercials than one would like to see, and one cannot but feel that there is a tendency towards carelessness in the way they play. In this particular game they made a very game fight of it in the first half, which was pretty even, but in the second they quite lost their dash and apparently gave the game up for lost. It is a great pity this sort of feeling exists as the new Gymkhana gave great promise and with the material at their command they should have been well in the running for the silver, if not the gold, medals.

As mentioned, the Scots were not at their best and the kudos of a fairly easy victory rests on Kennoway. Always clever, he was now positively brilliant and scored a goal in each of the halves. McConnan scored the first goal and the only one of the civilians went to Elliott, who headed in after a hard drive by Ley. Though the Scots scored only once in the second half it was almost entirely in their favour.

Those who watched the game on Wednesday between the Bombay Gymkhana and the Rovers had a very slow and monotonous time of it as from beginning to end it was a scramble, and not even the fact that the referee ignored no end of infringements one might be excused for merely taking a passing interest in the proceedings. One must, however, give the Rovers credit for having improved as their forwards displayed any amount of energy if not of science and their backs have to be thanked for saving defeat with a man in goal, who made but one mistake and saved no end of very difficult shots. The same remarks may apply to the others as their custodian gave his usual finished display and Ward was always handy at back with the halves doing their share of work, but the forwards were very poor, did not combine and would not emulate the example of energy set by the Rev. Mr. Burnett. It was he, who scored their only goal, though it was a lucky one, passing through the custodian's legs in the confusion of a scramble. This was late in the second half and all was thought to be over, but the Rovers pluckily came up and there was no mistake about the shot with which their centre, Farell, equalised. The Gymkhana were hot on the scent again and a shot by Ward, who went forward, was miraculously saved as the whistle went for full time leaving the match drawn. It was a great surprise, but on the play the Gymkhana would have been lucky to win.

On Thursday the game was on the Oval between the R.G.A. and the Government Telegraph, and an interesting event it proved during the first half. So well have the latter team always stayed and pulled games out of the fire at the last moment as with the Commercial Gymkhana, that it was a great surprise to most that on this occasion they should quite unaccountably go to pieces in the closing period after leading and having the better of the first half. Their forwards were quite like their old selves, combining excellently with no end of dash and the defence all round showed the same spirit and they gave the R. A. a busy time; so busy that but for the sterling defence of Watts they would have had more than that one goal which Edie shot after a brilliant bit of combination, to the good. Their left wing was always inclined to be offside and was consequently pulled up more than once. In the second half, however, this was not the case as he hung about amongst the backs. I suppose he fondly imagined that this hurt the referee's feelings but he hurt his own side much more and a suitable punishment would be to leave him out in future.

To return to the game, about half way through the second half a sudden change came and once the military had equalised they literally walked over their opponents. The first goal was a bit of luck as the shot by Cummings from the right would have gone out on the left had Nicholas not tried to bring off a gallery volley and thus diverted it into his own goal. McGarry shot the second easily, but the third again was lucky as had Taylor not blocked the custodian's view Gillett's shot would not have gone in. Cummings and Southcote adding more the military won by five to one. They are a very much improved team, but this comes I fear too late to give them much chance of the silver medals.

There was quite an exciting game on Friday when the Commercial Gymkhana and the Y.M.C.A. met on a perfect ground, but before only a fair attendance owing to it being mail day. The result came as a matter of great satisfaction to nearly everybody, as whereas the youngsters played a thoroughly sporting game the new Gymkhana men cannot be said to have done so. Throughout they were repeatedly being hauled up for foul play and off-side, and though Sergeant Dow was eminently fair in his decisions the resentment they showed was in itself unsportsmanlike.

The weakness of both teams lay in their forward lines though in the latter stages the young Christians made up for lack of science with energy. Both half divisions, however, were strong and Jaeger was to a large extent responsible for the Y.M.'s win well assisted by McMullen, and Hotz and Osborne for the others were always handy. As to the backs, Kelly and Chapman were respectively very sound.

In an even first half the Gymkhana were first to score through a bit of luck as C. Templeton diverted a centre into his own goal through the same fault that most civilian backs have of crowding into their own goal. Half way in the second moiety the Y.M. equalised through Dowling neatly heading in one of the excellently placed shots of Jaeger, and, as mentioned, the winning goal came from a penalty shot which Kelly took successfully. Thus ended a game in the description of which one very reluctantly has to mention the unusual behaviour of a civilian team.

There was no League game on Saturday, the football authorities generously giving the use of the Cooperage for a Charity Rugby Football match. The institution to be benefited was the Indo-British Institution and the Bombay and Poona Gymkhanas came forward to provide the amusement. It could not be called a great game, but it was not a poor one too. Bombay were on the attack from the commencement and out of a three-quarters move, Ward scored a splendid drop-kick. Again pinning the visitors to their 25, Blair was rewarded with a try, which Ward converted. At half time, score was 1 drop goal and 1 place goal—total 9 points in favour of the home team. During the second half, Poona tried to reach their adversaries, but failed. Bombay, on the other hand, secured two tries through Moir and Ash, but both were not converted. At full time, score was: Bombay Gymkhana 1 drop goal, 1 place goal and 2 tries—total 15 points against Poona's nil.

This is the first Rugger match of the season, the previous ones being all practice games, and defects there were plenty. Poona were handicapped by playing three substitutes and this fact must account for their bad defeat. On the home side, the forwards were not up to much, while the Poona advance guard controlled the scrum throughout. Bombay possessed brilliant halves in Ash and Blair and their three-quarters, though playing up well, would have done better had they extended themselves. They showed a tendency to crowd a bit too much. Wilson, the right half of the visitors, played pluckily, so too Bremner and Salano, the inside three-quarters, and there were responsible for many a creditable save. The Bombay public mustered in pretty strong numbers and the Institution must have secured a pretty large gate; but it would have been larger, had there not been greater attraction of races in Poona. A few students of the institution were on the grounds with the box, but it is doubtful whether they secured much.

We would draw the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Karachi Port Trust, appearing further on anent the final issue of 14 lakhs of the 4 per cent. debenture loan 1906 of Rs. 45 lakhs.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—Poona people could scarcely believe their eyes when glimpses of the sun were procured last Sunday and Monday, and with no rain to speak of the race course was in tip-top condition for the Third Extra on Tuesday. It being a holiday a large number came up from Bombay besides those who stayed over from Saturday, so that there was a very big attendance and big business in the ring; punters at last getting the better of the exchanges.

The two new pony races were divided and provided us with eight events, which began with the first of the Hopeful Plates. Devon and Colaba were first in demand till a run came for Merrily and at the last moment a rumour went about that the other one of the stable, Meazer, would literally walk home and he wound up a hot favourite. He seemed well in the running to the bend, where England was cutting out the pace, but that was the last of the favourite and it was up to the second string to come out and win fairly comfortably from Colaba and Viceroy.

The second division later on was always considered a "moral" for Ajeel, who disappointed when so confidently backed in Bombay, though quite a few took a chance on Jehangir in case of accidents. These were lucky, as after being in front to the bend Ajeel fell away to Jehangir and Grey Rose and failed to answer when called upon. Jehangir moved like a race horse and had but little difficulty in staying Grey Rose and Changiz out.

Divided also was the Little Beginners' Plate in the first of which Sir Askar, of practically the same stable as Ajeel, was backed for a ton of money, but he too failed miserably and could also not get a place. Orby cut out all the running, but as usual found five furlongs more than he can do and at the finish had to cry second best to Lassa, on whom Taylor rode as good a race as he did on Merrily.

In the second division there was again an upset for the favourite when Special was all the rage with plenty of money for Gwalior and Murzook. Godolphin and Good Morning made the pace to the bend where Gwalior came up and took the lead, and only past the distance could Special get through to find it too late.

Only six were left in after scratchings for the Midsummer Plate of six furlongs with Posco favourite till Tom Scott showed confidence in Mozart, who displaced the mare. It was no sort of a race as Posco had matters all her own way and won as she liked from Lady Metal and St. Patrick. It was disappointing to see Mozart run so mulishly after coming on so well at the end of his last race.

The Club Plate, a closed race, naturally saw Yuba installed favourite after his fourth place behind Prince Lyon and ahead of Lady Lomond at exactly the same difference of weight. Plenty of money, however, came for the latter and she won very comfortably from the word go, Yuba just getting third behind Tete-a-Tete.

Bay Middleton was taken out of the Telegaon Plate in favour of Vedas and Maimoon, but nothing could shake the public confidence in Mint. Hermit and Vedas made the pace to the bend where they were joined by Maimoon and Darby, but at the distance Mint came through very strong and fairly easily stayed out a late run by Mumbra, who is showing very much improved form since his initial run this season.

Eight started for the Monsoon Plate, a mile race for horses, with Prince Lyon a very hot favourite despite a strong run on Lachlan at the last. Spirea made the running closely followed by Sir Galahad, Prince Lyon and Lachlan. Rounding the bend the two fancied ones went to the front and Dulcimer was seen to be moving up. The colours of the first two were confusing and many were calling out the favourite whereas it was Lachlan who came away down the straight well in hand, to win pulling up from Dulcimer, who put in a very fast run and would have probably been dangerous had he not laid so far out in the early part. Hill, who rode an excellent race and has at last had a chance of showing his worth, had all he could do to keep his seat as he broke his stirrup and then could not pull up, Robinson going after him, and both jockeys came in for quite an ovation on entering the paddock. Peculiarly enough after his previous run they had decided to put Lachlan over the sticks as being useless on the flat.

It was disappointing after two fine days that the rain should come down hard throughout the morning on Saturday and again gave us a sprinkling in the afternoon. With the heavy going the public did no good, but with the winning owners backing their own some of the books were fairly hard hit. Mr. Newton, a big Arab pearl dealer, did not fall far short of a lakh in his wins over Hadee and Sirur, both at long odds and for cash—he deposited a useful pile of tickets with the Secretary for payment the next day.

Though sand was liberally laid down at the jumps, the favourite, Lord Boyne, and Vocalist came down in the Tallyho Plate. Dormant went away with a six length lead as usual, his tail flying round like a windmill. The muchly fancied Killeevan came at him near the bend and all was thought to be over, but Dormant went away again and after an exciting race stayed Balayeuse out. The native lad on Dormant must be given credit for a nicely judged race.

Hermit and Darby were warmly backed for the Midget Handicap with money for Scimitar, Sir Jamal and Gafal, Yatim made the pace hot with a substantial lead and this was the cause of Darby's defeat as after chasing the leader he failed by a head when Sir Jamal came through on the rails with a well merited win after consistent running.

Fit as she was known to be, the public soon "cottoned on" to the fact that Mother Goose was very liberally treated in the Old Stand Plate, and though Mallinyook was well backed she started a hot favourite. With Coquette left, Oakton made the running to the three furlongs where the favourite went out to win as she liked from Mallinyook and Apology. It was amusing to hear Mr. Galstaun's shapely new colt, Black Wolf, whinnying during the race.

A bad upset followed in the Lanowli Plate of a mile, a good betting race with Precious, Moonib Pasha, Sialkote and Dumra in demand. We have at last got the strength of Sialkote, who ran about sixth and was having a fling, in fact none of those fancied placed. Meerjan, Brigand, Hadee and Ashroff went to the front and Bendigo joined in when Brigand fell back; Ashroff coming into the lead at the half mile. There was promise of a good race at the turn, but Hadee going easy won with a good bit to spare.

The five furlong race for old Arabs, the Welter Plate, found Mumbra on his improved form, a hot favourite from Betty, M.V.O., and Minx. Sabah almost unsupported, however, repeated his performance in the first race of the season and led from pillar to post. Had Mumbra, however, had a better run and had not been forced to come wide at the bend I fancy the good thing would have come off.

Seven started for the Pony Race of six furlongs and both in the ring and in the race it was a one horse affair. Koko was backed to even money from Virballa at fours and had the latter well beaten at the bend. Encourage made an effort from the distance but the brown won pulling up by three lengths.

The divided Novice Maiden Plate, of five furlongs, came last, a great run on Mutlag making him favourite from Muddaries in the first in a field of fifteen. Mutlag got away well and holding a clear lead surprisingly shut up at the bend where Good Chance came at him. Silver Stream next made a bid and looked likely till Killorn, coming along on Muddaries, had everything well beaten.

In the second eleven started with Elector favourite from Light and Viceroy. Sirur, however, taking a good start went away from Light and having Viceroy and Hasty Jack set when they made their efforts won with Yussuff looking round—this was Mr. Newton's second win after Hadee.

We race again Wednesday and I'm sure no farmer prays more for rain than do the Books.

London Week by Week.

(From Our Own Correspondent).

Friday, 31st July 1908.

Throughout the week the holiday rush has progressed right merrily, practically all the long distance trains had to be duplicated and every great port of egress from the city has been a scene of perpetual animation. And the weather has been magnificent, not only in London, but in almost all parts. From summer resorts all round our coasts come reports of a great influx of visitors by train, motor-car, and steamboat. At Cowes the numbers are considerably larger than last year, and the Royal Yacht Squadron clubhouse has been particularly busy. The Pevensey Pageant has largely added to the throngs at Eastbourne. Saturday was the concluding day of the pageant and among the visitors was Mr. Rudyard Kipling, whose poem, Sussex, was sung to a special setting, and proved a popular feature of the pageant.

The London season, which grows shorter every year, came to an end with the departure of the King and Queen. A dozen years ago it used to last three or four months, now it barely holds out two. But this year it has been one of exceptional brilliance, and it has been made so by the keen interest displayed by Their Majesties in the international, political, municipal, social and sporting life of their subjects and visitors. With the memories of the finest June of the century in our minds; with an Ascot which was specially designed to display the glass of fashion and the mould of form; with a successful Henley; with a Horse Show which drew to its arena the best horseflesh and the finest horsemanship of two hemispheres; with a succession of outdoor entertainments ranging from the Temple Flower Show to Speech Day at Eton, and from a record balloon race to the garden parties of the Pan-Anglican Congress—not one of which was spoilt by rain; with the Exhibition and the Olympic Games; with the recollection, also, of the assemblages called forth by the greatest of the world's Churches, and of the presence in London of a larger and more cosmopolitan gathering of people of all nations than ever before has been witnessed here—what other entertainment could now be devised which would not be like an anticlimax of all that has gone before? Truly the season "has expired of an excess of its own brilliance" as a brother scribe happily puts it.

Although the majority of the playhouses are now closed and making advance preparations for their new plays in the autumn, the impression prevails that five of the eleven pieces now being performed nightly will next midwinter be attracting as large audiences as any of those that we are to see for the first time next September and October. The five plays that will certainly run through next winter are, "The Merry Widow," "Jack Straw," "Mrs. Dot," "Havana," and "The Flag Lieutenant." Last year several plays that got through the summer with good results ran through the autumn, until long after Christmas, and some of the five now mentioned will do even better.

* * * * * *

The opera season which closes to-night will boast of a greater number of performances than were ever given before in any one season at Covent Garden.

The Opera Syndicate publishes no figures, but it is admitted that "the season ending has, both artistically and financially, been a great success." The receipts at each performance at Covent Garden, if all its seats were paid for, would amount to £1,250.

The number of performances given, including the gala and two matinees, is eighty-two, and, as the expenses average £1,000 per day, the receipts must have averaged considerably more than £1,000 a day in order to have placed the syndicate in the happy position in which it finds itself.

Between £90,000 and £100,000 will very probably be a fair estimate of what London paid for grand opera at Covent Garden this summer. Are we getting more musical? These figures seem to be the best reply to the question.

As I write the Olympic Contests have entered upon their last stage, the boat racing at Henley which began on Tuesday and ends late this afternoon. But for all practical purposes the Games were over at the Stadium last Saturday when the Queen presented the prizes and national anthem singing and flag waving heralded in the darkness. The fourth Olympiad has been an undoubted success in point of its magnitude, the completeness of its arrangements, the number and representative character of its competitors and the marvellous quality of its performances, world's records having been broken wholesale. It teemed with noteworthy incident, it strengthened some popular beliefs and shattered some erroneous impressions. But alas! there have followed in its wake much international envy, hatred and uncharitableness and it would appear that international differences are subtle things not to be healed by collecting half a hundred fleet footed young men from different points of the globe and setting them to run from Windsor to Shepherd's Bush par example. Ever since the conclusion of the sports the papers have been flooded ad nauseum with outpourings of comment, while the foreign press has indulged in criticism anything but flattering to British susceptibilities. I allude more particularly to the American and French papers. We can do nothing right for the Yankees. After all one ought not to be surprised: they approach athletics in a spirit totally different to ours, their ideas of fair play and chivalry are not ours, their methods are absolutely different to ours, their noisy demonstrations when successful border on the fiendish, their misrepresentation and spite when defeated are wholly lamentable. They may learn in time let us hope. As a contemporary puts it.—"If our judges give a decision against an American athlete, America publishes the open secret of their venal conspiracy. If their word is in his favour, the American Press depicts our British people as raging with currish spite against the victor." However, it will pass; we are sustained by the comforting reflection that Great Britain has come out on top of the pole as, no doubt, your sporting correspondent will tell you elsewhere.

To the relief of most people the Joel-Sievier case ended yesterday. We had it served up ad nauseam for nearly a mouth; the papers devoted pages per diem to it, much other matter being compressed to brief paragraph proportions in order to make room for it; nothing else seemed to provide matter for conversation in every place and among every section of the public. As a witness remarked it was "a dirty business" before it came into court and the wholesale mud slinging, which ensued made it still dirtier when it went before a jury. Joel charged Sievier with blackmailing him, Sievier in his defence charged Joel and his witness with conspiracy and perjury. Four days were devoted to the hearing, and in the result Sievier was found not guilty, and the verdict was received with unbounded satisfaction by his numerous admirers. To-day he is a popular idol; those who witnessed the frantic ovation accorded him as he left the Old Bailey yesterday could have no doubt on this score.

The fate of the Crystal Palace hangs in the balance, unless speedy action is taken it may ere long fall into the vandal hands of the speculative builder. Therefore, an effort is to be made immediately to secure the Palace and its grounds as a national institution, "in perpetuity for the health, education, and recreation of the English people." This decision was arrived at a few days ago at a public meeting at the Mansion House, presided over by the Lord Mayor of London, and a committee was appointed to carry it out. Mr. Schenk, the chairman of the Crystal Palace Company, estimated that a sum of £500,000 should be sufficient to acquire the whole freehold as a national possession, and to leave a sum for complete restoration of the structure, with a margin of working capital. Of complete restoration it certainly stands in crying need, a recent visit disclosed change and decay in almost everything, the dirt and squalour inside and the desolation outside were appalling.

* * * * * *

The Licensing Bill is doomed they say, nevertheless a demonstration of enormous proportions took place last Saturday in Hyde Park, and, led by little Mr. Winston Churchill, made considerable clamour in favour of it.

The vastness of the multitude was most impressive; some observers thought it as great as on the occasion of the historic Suffragist march; no fewer than 150,000 people, according to impartial calculators, surrounded the twenty platforms. An immense section, marshalled on the Embankment with bands and banners, had marched through Piccadilly.

Order prevailed everywhere. The police had taken precautions, after their experience of the interference with the women's demonstration, to prevent any attempt to frustrate the temperance pronouncement, and each platform had near it a contingent of constables, mounted and foot. The enthusiasm was almost wholly with the promoters of the meeting, who had provided one hundred and twenty speakers.

Mr. Churchill used the budget as a weapon; he solemnly warned the Peers, and in a brief address which was admittedly slashing and determined he managed to rouse feeling to the highest pitch. He also created an interesting precedent: hitherto, I believe, no Cabinet Minister in office has ever spoken at a Hyde Park demonstration. But in spite of all this our old friend Bung and his "ruined friends" seem likely to be destined ere long, to drink the health of the House of Lords. Sad, isn't it?

THERE died on Tuesday, the 28th instant, Sir Thomas Stevenson, senior scientific analyst to the Home Department, a "master of poison mysteries" and a veritable witness of doom to the poisoner. For nearly thirty years he acted as the official analyst in all the more important murder trials in which the victims died as the result of the administration of poison and his damning evidence frequently sealed the fate of the prisoners. Such cases as those of Mrs. Maybrick, Neal Cream, George Chapman, Edward Ball and Walker Horsford occur to one when the name of the late medical expert is mentioned.

We are told to expect, at any moment, the birth of a new penny Liberal morning paper: evidently somebody has money to burn.

THE VAGRANT.

Review.

BRIDGE FOR BEGINNERS.*

THIS little book published by Thacker and Co., of Bombay, is got up in a very concise and neat form, and if carefully studied the young player will derive a great deal of benefit and information from it. The different variations of the game are easily classified, so that he can readily get information on any point that he desires, and the advice given by the writer, who is evidently a player of some experience, seems to us on the whole to be sound. Of course, in Bridge there are so many things which are a matter of opinion that it is only to be expected that on some of the points which he lays down, we should not agree with him, but we should say that the general principles are quite sound and that a young player would get considerable benefit from carefully studying the book. After all no book on Bridge will make a player unless he has experience and application. We would particularly draw attention of readers of this book to the last chapter on "Etiquette."

"JUST ONE'S LUCK."

WE had just had a ripping gallop and the boar had fallen to Jones' spear. We were trekking for camp and breakfast, three of us mounted and jogging back lazily to camp, content with our morning's sport, and hungry with a great hunger. Poor old Smith was trudging along in the rear leading his pony, which limped along painfully, head hung low, and looking fed-up with life in general. A treacherous hole in the grass had brought both steed and rider down. The rider came off free, but for a shaking—the pony alas—it looked like a bad breakdown. Such, however are the fortunes of the chase. We were jogging along to camp intending to send Smith out another pony for him, to ride home on, and a syce to lead back the cripple.

And so we jogged along—suddenly a faint view halo in the rear struck on our ears. Looking back we saw Smith and his steed halted and Smith gesticulating madly and evidently pointing to something which we could not make out.

To canter up to him did not take a minute. He pointed out a string of five or six dark forms slinking along the side of a slight rising ground a good three-quarters of a mile away.

They might be pig, and yet they might not. At the distance one could not define them clearly enough, to name the quarry. Robinson produced from a wallet attached to his saddle some patent folding binocular he had picked up somewhere in the city and commenced opening it. This spy glass was a source of much fun to us, for as a rule by the time the necessary adjustments had been made, and the focus obtained, the object under observation had usually passed out of sight. Up went the glasses—"Oh, yes I see—hang! they're just gone down the hill out of sight" exclaimed Robinson. "Late as usual" we all cried out.

"D—in it all! you fellows you never give a fellow a chance."

The animals, whatever they were, had descended into the valley or nullah, that lay between us and the rising ground.

"Well you had better get forward and see what they are," said Smith.

We were just on the point of starting off in pursuit, when Robinson whose eyes had still been rigidly glued to his glasses, cried out—"Oh! here they come."

"No, only cows after all." he said in a disappointed voice, a second later. "By jove, but the cows are galloping, there must be something after them. A half second later we saw rise from the valley the six dark forms, galloping after the cows. "There they go"—we all shouted in unison.

"Wolves by Jove," shouted Robinson, who had focussed the flying pack and held them in his glass.

"Oh, heavens, said Smith," "what a chance of gallop and here's my pony gone dead lame. Just my luck."

"Shall we ride," I cried, tightening my grip on spur and rein.

"No, no, wait," said Robinson, who was Captain of our little party—our ponies are not fresh enough after this morning's severe gallop to run down hungry wolves. Let's wait and see what happens."

In obedience to our leader's instructions we curbed our impatience and waited and watched.

The inevitable happened—it always does—otherwise it would not be the inevitable. The cattle full of green fodder were no match for the wolves.

A calf feebler than the others lingered behind—a spurt, a rush and three wolves were rolling on the ground with the calf.

The mother cow hearing its infant's last call, halted, turned and charged the wolves.

Shaken for a moment in the moment of victory by the furious form of the attacking mother cow—the wolves left their prey. But their work had been too well done. Hamstrung and with gaping throat the calf could do nothing, but bleat piteously. The mother gazed horror struck at the gory calf, the smell of blood reached her nostril. At that moment the wolves baulked of their food, gathering up courage rushed all together at the cow. It was too much for her. She turned and with tail erect with one bellow of terror, fled towards the fast receding herd.

The wolves satisfied at the cow's departure, turned to the dying calf and threw themselves upon it with fury, which spoke of much hunger unsatisfied.

Robinson watching with an experienced eye said quietly to us.

"Wait boys till they have had their fill—it will equalise chances between our ponies and them and we may have a chance of getting one."

So we sat and waited impatiently.

Jones', country-bred mare, all nerves and fire, smelling battle afar off, was longing to be in the thick of it. She would not stand steady a moment, pawed the ground with a fore leg, longing to be off, wheeled round, stood up slightly on hind legs and showed by her cock-ears and bright shining eye that she knew what was coming. Her eagerness to join in the fray was extraordinary. Bought out of an ekka, where the drudgery of life must have been terrible to one of her spirit and fire, she was the best Rs. 120 worth of horse flesh ever light weight rode after pig.

Dark specks, appearing from the four corners of the earth soon showed out, as vultures rushing through the air with a swishing noise of wings, hurtled themselves on to the ground in the near vicinity of the fast disappearing corpse. In less than ten minutes from the death no less than thirty huge vultures and the six wolves were wrangling and fighting over the calf. Another ten minutes, and the wolves withdrew, leaving the vultures struggling with skin and bone—meat there was none left.

Away strolled the wolves, with a satisfied air, licking their chops, discussing among themselves the best place to get a cool drink at and the shadiest spot to lie up in.

"Now," said Robinson.

With a plunge that nearly unseated her rider, the country-bred mare was in her stride, and leading by two good lengths. As we neared the wolves the ding-dong beat of galloping hoofs reached their ears—they stopped, halted and looked at us for just one second.

Then the pack scattered and each taking his own line fled for dear life realising Nemesis was at their heels, a Nemesis that was not playing the game—a Nemesis that had them at a disadvantage. "The big fellow, the big chap," shouted Robinson. Away we went at the heels of the big fellow. A sheet would almost have covered us as we raced along, our eyes glued to the big fellow, who seemed to glide away from us. Country-bred waler and Arab strained each nerve in keenest rivalry. We each felt between our thighs our mounts were each putting forth his best effort. To ask more would be to be left, should the stern chase prove a long chase.

And still the dog-wolf seems to glide away in front of us—half a mile gone—a mile left behind us and still he held his place.

"By jove, he is tiring" shouted Jones, yes, surely he was nearer, surely his gallop was not so free and true.

"You're right," yelled Robinson, "now bust him for all you are worth and don't let him get his second wind or you'll never put spear on his back." A touch of the spur, a tightening of the reins, and away streaked Jones and I—the country-bred and the Arab going neck and neck closer—every stride brought us closer.

The grey wolf heard, a glance across his shoulder, his long fair foam flecked, his wild eye full of fight.

With a tremendous effort he shot away from us left us as standing—but it was a last effort of a beaten animal.

With a rush we were on him. Jones struck at him. The dog-wolf jinked and saved himself.

We both rushed past and Robinson the heavy weight, pounding up in the rear, cut in on the jink and secured first spear.

By the time Jones and I had turned and come back we found the wolf, badly speared, had taken refuge in a big corindah bush.

We all dismounted, leaving our panting steeds, went in and finished off the dog-wolf, who had given us such a fine gallop. A two miles gallop if not more.

But for the fact that we galloped the wolf hard on a full stomach I believe we should never have come within spear length of him.

Poor Smith, who first spotted the wolves—what did he say—"Just my luck."

MOTOR BOAT WANTED.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Would any of your readers with personal experience kindly oblige me with advice as to what is the best style of motor boat for shallow and swift rivers; and where obtainable? A small boat to hold four or more, for a river which when swollen (i.e., in the rains) has a current of perhaps six miles an hour is required; but should not draw more than 12 to 14 inches, for use in the dry weather. The only boat of the sort I have seen advertised is a turbine (American boat) with 12 inch draught, but the engines do not give sufficient power.
