Sport in England

(FROM THE HOME PAPERS.)

LONDON, Friday, 7th July 1911.

THE TURF.

ALEXANDRA PARK.

THE occasion of a Saturday afternoon's sport was eagerly seized by the vast population that finds its Alps in Hampstead, and also by sportsmen from the Southern suburbs, and the result was shown by the densely packed rings and enclosures, the congested state of Tattersall's Ring, and the goodly company company, which included many prominent patrons of the national sport, in the members' enclosure, in which, as usual, the fair sex was numerously represented

The going, on which every care had been bestowed, was excellent, thanks to recent rains, and the morning's arrival list, including 24 horses from Newmarket, assured good fields after a poor beginning. More delightful weather could not have been ordered for the occasion, and taken all round, the fixture proved a huge success. Results:—

What to do if Your Horse Pulls

THE KEY TO HIS MOUTH IS A RENSUM REIN.

Sir Gilbert East, Bart., wrote:—"You have found the key to my excitable mare's mouth. I have now the pleasure of riding an animal chock full of life, with complete control." . . . . . .

You have three courses open if you own a puller. You may go on using him, to your great discomfort; you may sell him, to your loss; or you may cure him, if you know how. I am a veteran horseman with a reputation to lose, and I stake it upon the assertion that in my "Rensum" Pamphlet I will show you how, for £1 1s. (the cost of a "Rensum" Rein), you may, without severity, cure the worst puller. The Pamphlet will prove to you that by a new method you may turn a confirmed puller into a snaffle bridle hunter, or polo pony. The "Rensum" Pamphlet will also show you how you may cure a rearer, kicker, or other vicious horse.

H. S. RENSUM, The Cottage, Yardley, Worcestershire, Eng.

WRITE TO ME

That I may advise. Describe your horse's fault and I will send you the

"RENSUM" PAMPHLET free.

If you order a Rensum Rein, with it will be sent, the fully detailed instructions for making or re-making a mouth on the simple Rensum method which cannot fail.

I prefer to use the "Rensum Rein" on the easy half moon "Rensum Bit." The Rein and Bit together I will send for 2 guineas and a half . . . . .

POLO.

INDIAN TEAM vs. RANELAGH.—There was a very large attendance at the Old Ground, Ranelagh, on Tuesday, when the Ranelagh Club met the Indian team.

The latter played splendidly together, and at times showed magnificent horsemanship. The outstanding figure was undoubtedly Captain Shah Mirza Beg, who played a game of sustained brilliance throughout. He scored the initial goal of the match in less than a minute from the start, and rapidly put on two more—both fine efforts. Belville responded for Ranelagh and the same player with a fine bit of work gave Jenner the opportunity to notch a second point.

Play continued fast and full of incident, Mirza Beg putting another goal to his credit with a clever back handed shot. Ranelagh pressed hotly after this, and as the result of a prolonged attack Romer Lee reduced their arrears For a time the home team appeared likely to draw level, Jenner, who was splendidly mounted, being prominent in some fast attacks, but Chunda Sing at back was in capital form, and with the pressure relieved, the Indians broke away, and Ranjit Singh made the scores 5—3.

Jenner made a grand run, but Chunda Singh again frustrated the attack, saving almost on the line. Immediately following this escape Mirza Beg broke away, and notched a sixth goal. From a nice open advance Jenner put on a fourth for Ranelagh, but the Indians quite held the upperhand in the concluding stages, and a seventh goal was put on by Chunda Singh. Mirza Beg was continually on the ball, and added an eighth, the final score being:—Indian team, 8; Ranelagh, 4 Sides:—

INDIANS.—Captain Ranjit Singh, Captain Shah Mirza Beg, Major Bhairun Singh, and Colonel Chunda Singh.

RANELAGH.—Captain L. C. D. Jenner, Major P. D Fitzgerald, F. A. Gill, and Major H. Romer Lee.

ATHLETICS.

THE A.A.A. CHAMPIONSHIPS.—These were decided on Saturday afternoon at Stamford Bridge before an attendance of about 12,000. Among the spectators were the Crown Prince of Sweden and Prince Arthur of Connaught.

The foreign competitors were even more successful than had been anticipated. F. L Ramsdell, the Pennsylvanian holder of both the 100 yards and the 220 yards titles, came over to defend them, and curiously enough, he again managed to win both by extremely narrow margins. At the shorter distance he won from our best sprinter, V. H. A. d'Arcy, of the Polytechnic, by inches only in 10⅕secs. after the latter had got all the worst of the start; and in the furlong race the American disposed of Halbaus, the Canadian sprinter, in much the same way as he beat E. W. Haley last year—by a foot only, in the fine time of 22⅕secs.

A notable foreign victory and one which was certainly anticipated was that of the Olympic half-mile champion, H. Braun, of Munich, who, although not accomplishing very fast time (1min. 59⅕secs.) beat a fine field, including G. A. Wheatley, the Australian representative, and J. M. Hill, the English holder.

The mile race was perhaps the most exciting of the afternoon. P. J. Baker, the Cantab, led for best part of the distance, after which J. L. Tait, another member of the Canadian Empire team, took up the running, followed by D. F. McNicol, the Scottish champion, and E. Owen. McNicol got away in the last fifteen yards and won a fine race by nearly two yards in 4mins. 22⅕secs., Tait being second and Owen third.

The quarter went to F. J. Halbaus, the Canadian, who won by four yards from W. T. Wetenhall, of Cambridge and L.A.C. in 50⅕secs.

At four miles there was quite a surprise, for W. Scott, Broughton Harriers, was a strong favourite. Well as he ran, however, there was one better in H. Kolehmainen, a Swede, who hung on the leader's heels throughout and beat him in the sprint home the time being 20mins. 3⅕secs.

In the two miles walk H. Muller (the German) and W. Dumbill were disqualified after passing the post first and second, and the race was awarded to H. V. L. Ross, the well-known long-distance walker. Owens, of the Herne Hill Harriers, who finished fourth, was placed second, and Yates, of Salford, third.

R. Noakes, winner of the two miles steeplechase in 1908 and 1909, recovered his title in this event, though he did not have to meet the holder, J. C. English.

Coming to the field events, G. E. Putnam, the Oxford Rhodes scholar, threw the hammer 147 feet 7½ inches; P. Kirwan, the Irish holder of the long jump, won again with a leap of 23 feet 5½ inches from R. Pasemann, a German, and S. S. Abrahams, L. A. C., who both cleared over 23 feet. Pasemann accomplished two other fine performances, taking the pole jump, in the absence of the holder, K. de Szathmary, at 12 feet, and the high jump at 6 feet from T. J. Leahy, of the Irish A. C., who is reputed to have done 3 inches better in practice than his 5 feet 11 inches J. Barrett, another Irishman, put the weight 43 feet 5 inches.

A great race was run in the hurdles between K. Powell, of Cambridge and L.A.C.; P. R. Phillips, who is still at Cambridge, and Mr. Meunier, a French competitor. The verdict was an inches victory for Phillips and inches again for Powell against the Frenchman.

As a summary, the United Kingdom won six of the events, Germany and America three each, Canada one and Sweden one; seven holders did not defend their titles, three were beaten and three retained their honours.

GOLF.

THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP.—By beating Arnaud Massy in the replayed tie of the open golf championship at Sandwich on Friday Harry Vardon, emulated the feat of James Braid, who was the only other golfer who had won the title on five occasions.

Massy, the Frenchman, who was entered from St. Jean de Luz, polished his golf in Scotland, and while there acquired the stolidity of the race, made a game fight, but towards the end was so steadily losing ground that he retired a hole from home. Vardon was carried shoulder high from the seventeenth hole, and given an ovation.

As the result of the previous play, Massy and Vardon headed the list, each with a total of 303 for seventy-two holes.

On Friday the men met over thirty-six holes, and from the start the contest assumed a ding-dong character. After a while, however, Massy showed a tendency to pull, and Vardon generally had the greater length.

The game was level at the turn, however, where both had a score of 36. Massy took the lead for the first time at the tenth, but at the next he overran the hole and Vardon drew level.

The seventeenth was disastrous for the Frenchman. He stopped his second into a bunker and then found the long grass; was short with his approach and missed a holeable putt. Vardon promptly put his ball down for 4 and took the commanding lead of five strokes. The Englishman's advantage was the same at the end of the round, the figures being: Vardon 74, Massy 79.

In the afternoon Vardon at once advanced his lead by a stroke, but at the next Massy got it back, and at the third the Frenchman again reduced his deficit.

From this point Massy seemed to deteriorate in all departments of the game. He was in trouble at the seventeenth hole, and, being hopelessly in arrears, shook hands with his opponent and retired.

ROWING.

HENLEY.

THE four days' racing at Henley opened on the 5th instant with an interesting card of fifteen heats. The weather was delightfully fine, and the attendance much above the average for the first day.

Six heats were rowed off before lunch. The Goblets heat furnished a surprise, Garn and Thompson, the holders being easily beaten by Cadbury and Hellyer, a neat pair from First Trinity. This disposed of the only entry made by Leander this year.

Another winning crew of 1910 went down after lunch, Anglian being badly beaten by London in the Thames Cup. Anglian had practically the same crew as last year, but they rowed in lifeless fashion. The best finish of the day was seen in the succeeding heat, Clare (Cambridge), after leading all the way, being very nearly cut down by Thames, who were only beaten by 2 feet.

Ottawa won their heat in the Stewards' Cup against London. The latter had a very useful four, stroked by Higgins, the ex-Oriel Blue, and they made a good fight for the best part of a mile. The Canadians lasted well, and, rowing beautifully together, won by nearly two lengths. Results :—

Another glorious day brought a big crowd to Henley yesterday, and some years have elapsed since the course presented such a brilliant scene as when the Canadians defeated the Belgians in the afternoon amidst a scene of great excitement and enthusiasm.

Two races were rows-over, Caius scratching in Visitors' and Wyfold's owing to their bow oarsman having damaged his shoulder.

Interest centred in the heats of the Grand Challenge, the Magdalen and New race opening the card. This produced a wonderfully fine race. New rowed the same crew that went to the head of the river at Oxford with Bourne at stroke, but Magdalen had strengthened their crew by putting in four famous Old Blues. They averaged over 12st. 10lb. per man.

It was a great race, but Magdalen's superior stamina told and taking a quarter of a length lead in the first minute they kept it all up the course. Bourne spurted repeatedly, but could not get up, and Magdalen had won the race when the New coxswain steered his crew into the booms opposite the enclosure, enabling the holders to win "just clear."

Jesus, Cambridge, beat Thames comfortably, but there was another magnificent battle when the Canadians met the Belgians. It was the most sensational race seen at Henley for many a long day. Both crews rowed a desperately fast stroke, the Belgians leading slightly over the first half of the course.

Canada then got a lead of a few feet but the boats were level at the mile post. Pulford called on his men for a spurt at the enclosure, the Belgians tried to reply but they cracked up and to the intense astonishment of the crowd, stopped opposite the grand stand absolutely rowed out, Ottawa finishing alone amidst rounds of cheering.

The Stewards' Cup heat between Thames and Magdalen was disappointing. The Magdalen men were palpably tired after their gruelling race in the Grand, and they made no show at all. Thames rowed beautifully together, and had their rivals settled before Fawley. To-day Thames and Ottawa should qualify for to-morrow's final, and it should be a great race.

In the Diamond Sculls Von Gaza, of Berlin, the only foreign competitor, went down before Evan Dewar, of the London R. C., a promising sculler, who has been trained by "Bosey" Phelps. The German kept a slight lead for half a mile, but Dewar then went ahead, and at the mile post von Gaza was done with. Results :—

Dynamo Car Lighting

The first to introduce electric lamps for cars we are again the first to introduce a system of dynamo car-lighting which is at once the most thoroughly practical and economical proposition yet placed on the market.

The bugbears of previous systems are conspicuous by their absence. The important improvements have been the means of attaining a considerable increase in efficiency and reliability. A striking feature that compels admiration is the extreme simplicity that dominates the whole system.

Altogether the system is a triumph of British Engineering skill and workmanship.

THE OOTACAMUND HOUNDS.

In spite of the very wet and windy weather experienced on Saturday last, 8th instant, when the meet was at "Briar" midday, an excellent afternoon's sport was enjoyed. Drawing down the Yemakul Valley a jack was soon found. He crossed the nullah below Secretary Shola and the Yemakul Stream near Devil's Dyke, heading for Chemmund, running on in full view to Denny Nullah, where he evaded his pursuers for a bit, until a cast forward put them on the scent again, when they hunted close at his brush to Piccadilly Circus, where he was lucky enough to find a policeman—I mean a porcupine—which put hounds off for a moment and enabled him to get to ground. A second jack was found in Ginkarai Boz and hunted round Triangle to the Falls Road, where he ran for a long way in a ditch followed by hounds in single file, then through Devil's Dance to Toda Coffee Shop Shola and by Beasters to Maharaja Shola, where he went to earth. A very pretty hunt.

Monday, 10th.—At Lake End a fairly large field assembled, which included His Excellency Sir Aurthur Lawley, the Misses Lawley, Colonel and Mrs. Gordon-Price, Mrs. Hugh Clerk, Mrs. Sam Browne, Miss Atkinson, Sir Murray Hammick, General Mercer, Mr. Colin Mackenzie, Mr. Beckley, Major Thompson, Mr. Davidson, Mr. Rice, Major Shanahan, Captain Annesley, Captain Lambton, Captain Elwes, Mr. and Mrs. A. Y. G. Campbell, Mr. Gwynne, and Mr. Whitton Brown, etc. Finding soon and scent lying strong we had a merry little burst in the teeth of the gale to the Dartmoor Vale, to Bluegums, thence by Brick Kiln crossing right handed through Rallywood to Edwards' Shola: then the mist and driving rain blotted out all view of hounds which getting ahead of the field were also lost to sound: they were eventually found near Balkie, by which time the hunt was up.

Thursday, 13th.—Another soaking wet day, when hounds met at Brooklands. Not finding there, we moved past the golf links to the Pykara Road, and on Newmarket viewed a jack—splendid going it was from here along near the Governor Shola Road, above Monkey and on to Balkie; thence he headed for the Kruremund Road, where hounds soon after got on to the line of a fresh jack which ran to the Rugby Tea Estate and then round the hill near Melkavi Village, striking the Avalanche Bridle Path, to Woodstock, where he got to ground in some inaccessible rocks. Another jack was found, but as he would not leave the neighbourhood of the tea garden the Master stopped hounds and we returned home.

Saturday, 15th.—Those who had the good fortune to be out with hounds had two of the very best runs. One jack gave 1¼ hours of the fastest, taking a practically straight line north to south of the whole map and finishing up near Avalanche, where he died bravely. It is with much regret I cannot give a more descriptive account of the run, being absent. The Bangalore racing week took away many of the usual hunting lot. This and other local causes, to say nothing of a very heavy burst of the monsoon, have caused hunting fixtures to be postponed, but there is to be a meet this morning at Sandy Nullah Toll Bar and another to-morrow, Sunday, at Sultan's Shola.

Football.

I. F. A. CHALLENGE SHIELD TOURNAMENT.

GREAT excitement has prevailed since my last notes, and never in the history of Calcutta football have such enormous crowds been present at football matches. In the Rifle Brigade and Mohan Bagan match last week the attendance of spectators was the largest on record, but this was eclipsed last Monday when the champion Indian team appeared in one of the semi-finals, their opponents being the 1st Middlesex from Dum Dum. At an early hour of the morning the lower classes of natives had their huge boxes and tables arranged, and the unemployed were on the ground as early as midday, while the hundreds of Babus—who had travelled from as far as Burdwan, Diamond Harbour, Jessore and numerous closer stations—came and took their places, and before 3 o'clock there was scarcely standing room left. A vast sea of eager, excited faces thronged the galleries, tables, and boxes about twenty to twenty-five deep fringed the ground, and the attendance on the Dalhousie ground last Monday reached nothing short of forty thousand. Calcutta beat the R.G.A. in the third round by 2 goals to 1, but it cannot be said that the Reds' display enhanced their reputation at "Soccer." In the last League encounter between these teams Calcutta gave a decidedly better show. While Calcutta and the Gunners were fighting on the former's ground, there was a great battle on the Dalhousie ground between Mohan Bagan and the Rifle Brigade. Last year the military won, but on this occasion the Indians ran out winners after a terrible hard tussle by a goal to nil.

Thursday saw the third meeting between the Royal Scots and the East Yorks. This game was the one the I.F.A. Council had ordered to be replayed, but it is the first time that a referee's decision has been questioned. Many a referee has blundered but the rule distinctly states that the referee's decision shall be final. There were grave doubts about the penalty kick awarded to the East Yorks. The venue was the Calcutta ground, but the huge crowd were disappointed at the poor showing of the Scots. The East Yorks won by 2 goals to nil and had their shooting been accurate they would have won by a larger margin. The Durand champions never seemed to have exerted themselves, and before the match I was informed by one of the Scots that they didn't think they would win. On Thursday's play the East Yorks were undoubtedly the better side, but as some of the Scotchmen took matters so easily we are in doubts as to which is really the stronger combination and this will not be cleared until the Simla tournament comes off. The East Yorks on Saturday took tea with the Moslems, whom they beat by 7 goals to 1 and the point that the Moslems scored was a consolation prize.

Monday the Dalhousie ground was the Mecca of all football enthusiasts, the occasion being the semi-final between Mohan Bagan and the Middlesex. The football was not of a scientific order, but both teams had to go all sixteen annas and the game eventually ended in a draw of one all.

It is not always that the best side wins, and when the East Yorks got into the final by beating Calcutta they certainly were not the better team. In the tournament the East Yorks have had a large share of luck, and as they have got over two of the strongest combinations the Shield looks a certainty for the Fyzabad team, unless Dame Fortune is, on the final occasion, going to turn her face on the Yorkshiremen.

During the first half the game was fast and interesting, both sides having their equal share of attacking; but during the second moiety Calcutta simply monopolised the game, and it was only on rare occasions that the East Yorks broke away. During all this anxious period Creesey proved his worth, the little goalie saving many shots in marvellous fashion, but with all the pressure the civilians brought to bear, there was hardly any cohesion at the finish of their attacks and at times the shooting was most erratic. The Yorks backs mis-kicked often, and had the Calcutta forwards made the best use of their chances they would have won. Lee, the left full back of Calcutta, also mis-kicked on several occasions, but Sherman always came to the rescue. The only goal of the match was netted in the last minute of the game and was due to faulty play on the part of Pooler and Lee. Haywood netted the ball, and the shot would have beaten any goal-keeper. Last evening Mohan Bagan and the Middlesex met in the replay and the final is to take place on Saturday.

THE BOMBAY HARWOOD LEAGUE.

ON Monday the 24th the Bombay Volunteer Artillery met the R.G.A. from Colaba. The Volunteers played a man short all through the first half and lost their goal-keeper, who retired injured in the second moiety. Despite these disadvantages they put up a good fight and were only beaten by 2 goals to nil. The next day the Y.M.C.A. played the Telegraphs and only just beat them by a goal to nil, the point being scored a minute before time. Wednesday's game was between the Bombay F. C. and the Byculla Railway Institute. The former had matters all their own way, the absence of their regular goal-keeper being a big handicap to the Railway team, who had to acknowledge defeat by 6 goals to nil. On Friday the Bombay Gymkhana and the Bombay Volunteer Artillery took the field, the Gymkhana winning comfortably. Saturday's game between the Royal Warwicks and the R.G.A. drew a big crowd, but turned out a disappointing match. In the first half the Gunners played exceptionally well and had the better of the exchanges. The interval, however, arrived without score, but in the second half the Artillery absolutely collapsed and play became very one sided, the Warwicks doing as they liked and scoring 7 goals without response.

MOTOR NOTES.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, 7th July 1911.

AN exceptionally interesting programme has been arranged for Brooklands on Saturday, 8th July. The inter-'Varsity race for motor-cycles between Oxford and Cambridge will be decided during the afternoon, and the American record holder for motor-cycles, Mr. Jake de Rosier, will attempt to lower the present world's best times for the short-distance records. The above events are only a small portion of the Motor Cycling Club's programme. The club championship for motor-cycles and cars for the Harry Smith Gold Cup and the Albert Brown Trophy will also be decided. Flying by the Brooklands airmen should weather permit. The admission to the track has been fixed at the nominal amount of 1s.

THE Prince Henry Tour, to which reference has already been made in other "Notes" will start at Homburg, where the cars will assemble on Tuesday next. On the following day the whole party will proceed to Cologne, a distance of 146 miles. On 6th July, Munster will be the stopping point, 113 miles, and on the 7th, Bremerhaven, 159 miles. They will embark from Bremerhaven on the evening of that day, and arrive at Southampton on Sunday, 9th July. On Monday, 10th, they will drive to Leamington; on the 11th, to Harrogate; on the 12th, to Newcastle-on-Tyne; and on the 13th, to Edinburgh. The 14th will be spent in seeing the sights in the neighbourhood of Edinburgh. On the 15th, the motorists will drive to Windermere, and Sunday, 16th, will be spent in the Lake District. On the 17th, Shrewsbury will be the stopping place; on the 18th, Cheltenham; and on the 19th, the tour will concludes at London.

A METHOD of rusting up a cracked cylinder and thereby closing a leak is to use sal ammoniac. Take ½ lb. of pulverized sal ammoniac; mix it with ½ gallon of water and boil. Pour this into the cylinder jacket and let it stand overnight. Drain this out on the following morning and allow the jacket to stand idle for a day, during which time the rusting to fill the crack should take place. Plain ammonia has been used, but not with so great a success. When used a pint of pure ammonia is mixed with a pint of water, or double quantities if desired, and the jacket filled. It should be allowed to stand for a couple of days at least, when the jacket is drained and an opportunity left for the rusting to take place.

ONE of the most interesting incidental features of the Boulogne Light-car Race was the number of aviators, active or retired, who had something or other to do with it. There was Henri Rougier superintending the weighing; Hanriot, the ancient of Paris-Vienna and father of the youngest certificated airboy in the world, driving a Peugeot—as it turned out with the same ill-luck that befell him in the great classic event—Duray, who drove an Excelsior; Wagner, whose flight enthusiasm soon cooled; Delpierre, who has so far exploited the Cote two-stroke motor for aviation; and others who assisted with their presence and patronage, for most of the personalities in the Paris flight, as well as motoring world, came to see the race. Koechlin, however—the entrant of the other two-stroke car—is no relation of the aeroplane maker of the same name.

IN every section the applications for space at the Olympia Show next November have greatly exceeded the amount available, so that the success of the exhibition is assured and the public will find the greatest variety in the exhibits displayed. This year there will be a new section, that of the carriage builders. In the past carriage building firms, of course, exhibited, but side by side with the motor builders. This year, however, they will be grouped together in a special section.

MEMBERS of the Colonial contingent of His Majesty's forces who were visiting London for the Coronation, amongst other experiences made a journey to inspect the B.S.A. Company's works at Small Heath, Birmingham, on 16th June. After being conveyed from the railway station to the works in a fine fleet of Daimler cars, they journeyed in the same cars after luncheon to Warwick Castle, where afternoon tea was provided by Lady Warwick, a very enjoyable and instructive day having been put in by the group of military men.

THE astounding growth of the membership of the Royal Automobile Club continues unabated, and at the last meeting of the Committee no less than 191 candidates were elected members, including 19 to "new" Life-membership. The roll of members now contains 6,611 names. We should think it would not be long before a halt is called by limiting the number, and increasing materially the entrance fee or subscription or both.

ON the initiative of M. Archdeacon, a fund was raised some time ago to provide a memorial of the pioneer work in connection with the motor car carried out by M. Leon Serpollet. A commission was given to the sculptor Jean Boucher, and he has produced a very fine statue. The artist has shown M. Serpollet standing on the footboard of one of his early cars, and in a very clever manner has succeeded in giving the idea of steam. At the front and side of the car are figures in the modern garb of motorists rendering homage to the inventor. The plinth bears the simple inscription "Leon Serpollet, 1858-1907."

IT is of interest to learn that the Indian Government have ordered 30 Darracq cars of the popular 15 h.-p. four-cylinder-ed type for official use at the forthcoming Coronation Durbar at Delhi. The Darracq enjoys an excellent reputation in India, and doubtless this accounts for its selection for such an important ceremonial.

IN this country automobile clubs in the provinces progress steadily—and some have languished away. Where, however, the members encourage the Committee by attendance at the meets and other gatherings arranged by energetic officers and kindly hosts, success is assured. The same thing occurs in the Colonies. We have just seen the annual report of the Automobile Club of Victoria, which records a net membership of 580, to which number it has grown from 523 in 1910, 399 in 1909, 192 in 1908 and 162 in the first year of its existence, 1904. The club has lately been much engaged in defending members against prosecution which verges on persecution, and while they do not complain greatly of the terms of the Act under which they live, they regret the way in which it is administered by the police, who are apparently not very different to those of the southern counties of the Old Country. In other features—roads improvement, annual outings for crippled children, entertainments to distinguished visitors to the colony, and car trials—the programme might have stood for any British club.

AVIATION NOTES.

MR. GRAHAM GILMOUR was selected as third man in the British Team for the Gordon Bennett race at a committee meeting of the Royal Aero Club on Tuesday. He will probably fly a British monoplane. The representatives previously chosen were Mr. G. W. Hamel, Bleriot monoplane, and Mr. Alec Ogilvie, Baby Wright biplane. The race takes place at Eastchurch, Isle of Sheppey, to-day (Saturday), starting shortly after half-past eleven. Messrs. J. Radley, J. Valentine, and O. C. Morison will be appointed reserves if their machines are on the ground by ten o'clock on Friday morning and provided they give notice to the secretary at the ground before 10 A.M. on that date. The French representatives will be M. Leblanc (Bleriot monoplane) M. Nieuport (Nieuport monoplane), and M. Chevalier (Nieuport monoplane).

A FRENCH inventor has recently taken out several patents for a very simple course-director which, it is claimed, enables an aviator to note his direction, and even his deviation, in any kind of weather, so long as no fog exists. This apparatus consists essentially of a camera with its lens pointing downwards so as to project upwards a view of the landscape on a horizotal plate of ground-glass in the upper side. Over this is mounted an oblong wooden hood, into which the aviator looks, containing a downwardly-reflecting mirror set at an angle of 45 degrees—at its front end, an electric bulb, and on the rough side of the ground-glass plate a compass, over which a long wooden movable pointer projects over the plate. Marked legibly on the glass plate, and under the long end of the pointer—which can be set to a desired course and fixed so as to move with the compass needle—is a long black line, coinciding with the aeroplane's line of flight. Thus the aviator can see a picture of both the landscape beneath and the pointer in the mirror, and noting the angular relation of the pointer to the black line on the glass, can check the angular deviation from the desired course, while lateral deviation or drift can, of course, be detached by the movement of objects in the pictured landscape towards or away from the black line on the glass.

THOSE who write so glibly of the magnificent support which the French Government gives to aviation, as represented by military airmen, will doubtless be interested to learn its exact value. Flight is, of course, the subject of extra pay for officers and men, and to show how judiciously and with what nice appreciation of the military merits of one flight and another that extra pay is apportioned it may be premised that an aerodrome flight in a calm is as well rewarded—if it be as long—as the most difficult cross-country performance. Which is naturally encouraging; but let us see further. Time alone counts, and for how much we note from the fact that an officer is paid five francs and a private three francs for a five kilometre flight, and no more, if it be twice as far in a given standard time. So after all it seems as if the best that can be said for this "model" (?) government is that it appreciates the value of aviation sufficiently to buy aeroplanes in sufficient numbers. The devotion to duty of Frenchmen has done the rest to bring the aviation corps in their army up to its present strength.

THE annual aeroplane race for the Grand Prix of the French Automobile Club, which is to be held next month, will this year take the form of a series of flights to and from certain towns in France the daily starting and finishing point being near Paris. Three courses are proposed—Paris-Roubaix-Paris, with a compulsory stop at Amiens; Paris-Le Mans-Paris; and Paris-Dieppe-Paris. The A. F. C. is devoting a sum of £4,000 to the prize fund, which will be supplemented by prizes offered by the authorities of the towns visited. It is proposed that the winning machine shall be purchased by the A. F. C. and presented to the French military authorities.

PROVISIONAL regulations for the organisation and employment of the new Air Battalion recently raised at Aldershot, a portion of which is now on Salisbury Plain, have been issued by the Army Council. The Army Council regard the new unit as one of the most valuable means of obtaining information at the disposal of the commander of an army. The Air Battalion will not, however, replace the other means of acquiring information, such as the action of cavalry, of the three arms, of agents, etc., but will be used in conjunction with such services. The presence of troops, if in the open, can be observed in clear weather at an altitude of from 5,000 feet to 6,000 feet within a radius of four to six miles from the aeroplane or dirigible; when nearer the earth objects will be rather more easily distinguished but a shorter time in view, and the area is restricted. Dirigibles will be exposed to considerable danger from artillery fire when lower than 4,500 feet or within a range of 5,000 yards, and from rifle or machine-gun fire when at a height of less than 3,500 feet or at ranges under 2,000 yards. Against aeroplanes it is thought that the fire of field artillery will rarely be effective at 4,500 feet or at a range of 4,000 yards and upwards, whilst reasonable security from the fire of small arms may be expected when 5,000 feet from the earth or at ranges of 2,000 yards and over. High speed movements in curves, and frequent changes of direction and elevation are suggested as means to reduce the probability of being shot.

The Horse.

BY JOHN GILPIN.

CHAPTER VII.

"MAKING" A YOUNG HORSE.

THE beginner may find himself in possession of a horse that is green and disobedient, or he may like to undertake the making of a young one for himself as soon as he has gained confidence in the saddle.

The methods herein described, though not those of the high school riders, are all that are required for the education of the polo pony or charger. The best means of teaching them manners and of bringing them under discipline is to drive them in the long reins. These may be cheaply made of webbing, the webbing used on native bedsteads, doubled to half its width and sewn lengthwise along the edge to keep it so. With these should be used a halfmoon snaffle with large rings, and a leather or rubber disc about four inches in diameter should be placed on the snaffle on each side of the mouth to prevent the rings from bruising the lips. A jointed snaffle is not suitable for this purpose. A short leading rein, a bit of webbing about a foot long with a knot at the end will do, should be attached to each ring of the snaffle. The reins should be each about 25 feet long. They should be separate so as not to catch in anything and to admit of one of them being released in an emergency, and they should have a knot at the end to prevent their slipping out of the hands. The method of using them is quite simple though a little practice is required to use them to the best advantage. The horse should be saddled, the stirrup irons firmly bound to the girths with strong twine, and the reins passed from the snaffle through the stirrup irons to the driver's hands. Or a driving pad can be used and the reins passed through the shaft tugs. The driver should not be behind the horse but to one side and, by keeping the rein nearer to him shorter than the other, should cause the horse to walk round him with its hind feet following in the tracks of its forefeet. If the horse is circling to the right the right rein will thus be held a good deal shorter than the left which will come from the stirrup iron round the horse's quarters and above his hocks to the driver. This outer rein should not be allowed to be slack as if it is the horse will throw its quarters out and will then be getting no value whatever from its labours. If the horse refuses to move at first a sycee may lead it on. He should be on the opposite side of the horse to the driver and should from time to time let go of the short leading rein to see if the horse will continue to advance by itself. As soon as he does so the sycee may be dismissed with. Sometimes, but very rarely, with a very green horse, it is necessary to have the rein next the driver coming straight to him from the horse's mouth. The outer rein should pass through the stirrup iron as in the former case. This entails passing the reins into and out of the stirrup irons every time the horse is turned round and is therefore very troublesome. After a few lessons however the newest horse will go with the reins as at first described. As soon as the horse walks quietly to one hand he should be halted, turned about, and circled on the other rein. This is effected by drawing in the outer rein and giving out the inner one, great care being taken to see that the latter is paid out very smoothly so as not in the least to jar the horse's mouth as he turns. This is of the first importance. If the horse gives trouble when turned, as they often will at first, the sycee may again assist. If the horse shews the slightest sign of resisting authority by putting his head up a standing martingale attached to the noseband should be employed. This should be so arranged that the horse can raise his muzzle to the level of his withers but no higher. By the end of the first lesson the horse should be walking fairly kindly to either hand and turning round and halting when required. Each time the horse is turned it is well to use the word of command Change (i.e. from one rein to the other) as the signal to turn is given with the reins. The horse will connect this word with the act of turning and it will come in very useful when driving the horse later at the canter. Two short lessons a day are better than one long one. One does not want to tire a young horse out and repetition fixes the lessons in the horse's memory, his strong point.

If the horse plays up much he should be kept on as small a circle as possible. If he is too green to circle close to the centre the driver should move on a smaller concentric circle still keeping him on a short rein. The shorter the reins the greater the control always. If he pulls turn him smartly about until he gets tired of trying to rush, but be careful not to get straight behind him with both reins of the same length as he then has you at a disadvantage and may try to break away. If the reins were not separated he would probably succeed, but even under disadvantageous circumstances you can always hold him by letting one rein go and hanging on to the other. In driving with the long reins as in riding one should never have the horse at the end of a straight arm. The elbow should always be bent so as to ensure plenty of play. If the horse tries to break away and you are forced to abandon one rein, which should only be done as a last recource, pass the hand holding the remaining rein behind your body, grasp the rein with the other hand in front of you so as to make the rein follow the curve of your body, and lean back. I will defy any horse to get away under these circumstances. If on the other hand your hand is in front of you and your arm straight the horse can pull you on to your nose and depart at his leisure.

If, instead of pulling, the horse tries to stop we should instantly make a movement as if to get behind him, shew him the whip, and shout at him. If we remain where we are in the middle of the circle it is just as easy for the horse to run backwards as forwards. Any tendency to get behind the bit should be checked instantly. There is no greater vice than jibbing and none harder to cure once its practice has become established. Be careful then that the horse is always up to his bit and watch carefully for any tendency to hang back with a view to overcoming it immediately. If you keep the horse up to his bit you will not have much trouble, but if you are contented to let him loaf round the circle as he please she can stop and play up whenever he chooses to do so. This should always be remembered.

In a very few lessons it will be found that the horse will circle to either hand at a trot without putting up any fight whatever. I like a horse to fight at first. The result is only to shew him that he is helpless and the sooner he realises it the better. When he shews fight the best way of overcoming his temper is to turn him outwards about until his hocks ache. He should be kept turning for twenty or thirty times and then tried at his lesson again. If he still resists, the discipline should be repeated. Every time he tries to pull he should be turned sharply round. He will soon desist. We should be very careful that a horse knows what we want him to do before punishing him. He should not be asked to do difficult things until he is quite perfect at the easy ones. By trying to proceed too quickly we only lose time and we should only proceed to such complicated exercises as passaging when we have secured the unquestioning obedience of the horse in the simple lessons. A horse has not begun to learn anything until he will halt directly he is required to do so. If he will not halt rug his mouth lightly.

A horse should early be taught to rein back and the exercise should be repeated daily. It is of great value in collecting a horse and getting his hocks under him and can be taught without difficulty with the long reins as soon as the horse has learned to halt. The command should be given "Rein Back" and a gentle pull should be made at the reins like the pull one would use to uncork a bottle of '65 port. The pull should be a little, but very little, stronger on the rein on the side of the leg we wish to move first, at first the more advanced of the forelegs, afterwards the leg opposite to that which moved last. The instant the horse steps back the pull should be relaxed entirely and he should be allowed to halt. If he continues to step back after the tension is relaxed he should be sent up to his bit like a shot with a crack or touch of the whip. He must never be allowed to act on his own initiative. If the horse will not move his feet but only leans back when the pull is given an assistant may touch the leg we wish to move below the knee lightly with a switch or whip. This will make him move it. If he is obstinate and starts serious fighting turning him about as recommended will make him obedient in almost every case. In any case he must never be allowed to remain the winner of a fight or we shall be able to do nothing with him in future. It is for this reason that we should be very careful not to ask the horse to do more than we can explain to him. We cannot force a horse to do what he does not know how to do and are sure to get into trouble with him if we try. Fortunately the horse has very little intellect and does not always realise what he is fighting about so that it is quite possible to begin a fight on one point and to finish it by conquering him on another, but at the same time we cannot be too careful and quiet in introducing him to new work.

Passaging in the long reins should be begun very gradually and a very slight divergence from the straight should content the driver at first. It is hard to get the horse to understand that you want him to move without either advancing or reining back. By being content with a little at first you will soon get him to understand that there is an alternative. To obtain a slight amount of passage the outer rein should be slightly shortened so as to turn the horse's quarters slightly into the circle and his head a little out of it. His forefeet will thus describe a circle slightly larger than that described by the hind feet. The divergence from the true circle may be small as you please in the first lesson and should be gradually increased until you get the full passage in which the horse moves sidewave to the right or left, the fore and hind feet making parallel tracks and the following feet passing in front of and clear of the feet on the side to which he is passaging. If the feet do not pass clear the pace is not being correctly executed. The horse should be taught to turn his face slightly in the direction to which he is passaging but this is more easily accomplished in the riding school when mounted than in the long reins. Directly the horse obeys he should be allowed to walk quietly round as a reward. Do not go on worrying the horse to repeat once he has obeyed until he has had a respite. He will soon realise that he has done well and that the respite is the result of his obedience.

One of the hardest things in connection with the long reins is to get some horses to canter properly in them. They want either to rush or to trot. As one's object is to get them to canter as slowly as possible the temptation to break into a trot is too great for the less active horses and they sometimes give an infinity of trouble. Whips are all very well as long as the sight and sound of them will get what one wants out of the horse, but blows with the whip are worse than useless except when a horse strikes out at one. Then he should be hit instantly, as he strikes, on the offending leg. A sharp touch of the thong may do all that is required, but if a horse resists on being whipped the probability is that the more you whip him the worse he will get. Certainly this is the case with mares, and for the reason that mares take punishment so unkindly I am strongly of opinion that a man should not undertake to break in a mare until he has broken in a gelding or two. If a flick about the hocks will not make a horse canter, it is better to put the whip away and make up one's mind to a long and weary bit of work. Some horses will canter if a second man follows them with a whip, some have to be mounted before they will canter at all. Generous, well-bred ones rarely give much trouble, and an impetuous horse is always easier to break and to ride than a slug. At first the horse may be allowed to canter rather too fast if he wants to and he should not be discouraged by being swung round if he pulls a little. By degrees he can be induced to canter more slowly without breaking by reducing the size of the circle, and when we have taught him to canter slowly we can teach him to change his legs when turning without going back to a trot. Here the value of the word of command "Change" which the horse has been accustomed to from the beginning comes in. The horse will soon learn to canter with the inward leg leading when you have got him to canter in a small circle. This he will do for his own convenience and comfort. The object is to get him to change on to the other directly he gets the signal for change of rein. One can haul him round so sharply that he must either change his leg or run the risk of a fall, but that is not a wise thing to do as one may sprain his fetlock and injure his mouth. If he has been taught always to turn at the word "Change" he will naturally go outwards about, also at the canter on hearing the command and getting the aid. He should be well up to his bit in these lessons or he may break back to a trot in order to change. As the horse is turned at the canter for the first few times the driver should take a pace or two towards him so as to give him plenty of rope and room to turn in. This will not be necessary later when the horse learns to turn quickly and well. Even if the horse does not change his leg in turning at first he will soon learn to do as the turns are made more quickly as it conduces much to his own comfort and safety. If he does not change his leg he is apt to cross his legs and fall. It is very important that the horse is cantering correctly and not playing up during this lesson, and the slower he is going the better so long as he is up to his bit. He will soon learn to change at the word of command without waiting for the aid. When the horse will canter slowly in a small circle, change his leg when he turns at the canter, rein back freely, and passage to either hand without protesting, all of which can be taught him in quite a short time if too much haste is not made, his education is nearly complete so far as the long reins are concerned, it only remaining to teach him to jump. This will be treated of later. The horse is ready for the riding school and, even if he has never been mounted in his life, is obedient to the rein and is capable of being ridden.

The great advantage of this system of breaking is that the horse is never in a position to gain the mastery over the man as he may easily be if his education is begun by mounting him. He may then fling his rider off or run away with him. In the long reins he can neither get away from the man nor throw him down and must give in in time. He can be driven up to things he is afraid of and held there until he gets used to them. He cannot shy away from them. If he is afraid of the whip he can be held in the long reins while he is gentled all over with it until he no longer resents it. To hold the horse in this way the driver should be standing just opposite the stirrup and about five feet from the horse with a firm even feel on both reins. The horse can do practically nothing. This holding of a horse and gentling it all over with things it does not like gives it an idea of helplessness as nothing else does and makes it quiet, obedient, and unapt to shy. The horse should be well advanced in his long-rein training before this gentling is undertaken as the more he is convinced of his helplessness before hand, the less he will fight when the whip is run over him.

THE VALUE OF BIRDS.

A GREAT amount of trash has been written and talked about the supreme value and importance of birds, and how without their presence horticulture and agriculture would be impossible. It has been stated, for instance, that without the assistance of birds to clear off caterpillars and other injurious insects it would be absolutely impossible to cultivate small fruits such as raspberries, gooseberries, and currants. The utter fallacy of this is demonstrated by the practice now prevalent in England of growing raspberry canes and currant and gooseberry bushes in bird-proof wire enclosures. In a large number of cases, at any rate, these fruits are grown in enclosures of this nature without any undue trouble from insects, and in a manner which would be quite impossible were they not artificially protected. The reason, of course, is that the ravages of bud-destroying birds, such as the pernicious bullfinch and greenfinch, are completely stopped, as is also the eating of the unripe fruit by birds of many kinds.

On the other hand, there is no doubt that very many kinds of birds are of the greatest value to the farmer and gardener, while others are serviceable to the fruit grower, on account of the enormous quantities of noxious insects and weed-seeds they consume. To these must be added the services of hawks and owls in helping to rid the country of unmitigated pests like weasels, stoats, and field mice. Of even greater value as an economical asset are game-birds and the members of the vast hosts of the plover, snipe, and duck tribes, as these not only afford a practically unlimited supply of wholesome and delicious food, but likewise yield endless enjoyment and healthy exercise to thousands of sportsmen throughout the world, while the revenues derived from sporting licenses form no inconsiderable item in Government budgets. Neither must such birds as storks, adjutants, and vultures be left out of the reckoning, on account of their value as scavengers; while serpent-killing eagles and secretary birds have a large claim on our consideration from the number of noxious reptiles they destroy.

Americans, who nowadays are both highly scientific and extremely practical, have realised these facts more fully perhaps than any other nation; and with characteristic energy and promptitude are endeavouring to make the best practical use of them. Unfortunately this was not always so with the result that in many districts the bird population of the country has been seriously, and in some instances irretrievably, reduced.

During the last few years the Biological Division of the United States Department of Agriculture and various Audubon Societies have specially devoted their efforts to shore-birds, game-birds, and woodpeckers as factors of high economic importance; and it is to the researches in connection with the two latter that we desire to direct the attention of our readers in the present article.

Although by no means one of the largest, a game-bird of special value in the United States is the so-called Virginian quail, locally known by the homely name of Bob-white. An American writer states that "as a destroyer of weeds, Bob-white stands pre-eminent. Mrs. Nice gives a list of 129 weeds, the seeds of which are eaten by this little gleaner. These seeds are digested and the germs thus destroyed. The number of seeds taken by one bird at a single meal varies from 105 seeds of stinkweed and 400 of pigweed to 5,000 of pigeon-grass and 10,000 of lamb's quarters; while the number taken by one bird in a day varies from 600 of burdock to 30,000 of rabbits foot clover. Dr. Sylvester Judd concludes that the Bob-whites of Virginia and North Carolina consume annually, from 1st September to 30th April 1,341 tons of weed-seeds, and that from 1st June to 31st August they eat 340 tons of insects.

"If we take as our measure the quantity of weed seeds and insects eaten by captive quail we find that a family consisting of two adult birds and ten young would consume 780,915 insects and 59,707,888 weed seeds in a year, in addition to their other food."

The annual loss due to insects in the United States reaches one billion dollars, and the injury caused by weeds is estimated at seventeen million dollars a year.

Experiments show that Bob-white can be reared in captivity and absolutely domesticated. Dr. Hodge of Clark University, has reared flocks of young birds under their parents, under hens, and with incubators, and has demonstrated that they may be given their liberty and will return to the hand when called. The Massachusetts Commissioners on Fisheries and Game reared about four hundred Bob-whites in confinement in 1910. They use incubators and brooders, as well as the natural method. This work requires only experience and knowledge of the methods of controlling the diseases of these birds to make it practicable on a large scale. Eventually, it will be possible to raise Bob-whites in large numbers on game farms, and to keep a stock over winter in captivity, with which to replenish the coveys whenever severe winters deplete them.

Such is the value America attaches to its most widely spread game bird, and such are the means adopted for increasing its numbers.

Turning to woodpeckers, it has to be mentioned that, owing to the demand for wood-pulp as a source of paper, the forests of the United States are in danger of extermination in the near future, unless special means are taken for their protection. At present they suffer, apart from forest fires, chiefly from the depredations of wood-boring beetles; and the sole natural enemies of these are woodpeckers, of which the country possesses a large variety. Tables have been published showing the quantities of different kinds of insects consumed by the various species, from which it appears that two kinds are of special value as beetle-killers. Certain other kinds, it is true, do some damage by devouring the soft layer inside the bark of growing trees; but, as a whole, this group of birds is of supreme value to the forester, and special means are accordingly to be taken for their protection.

Now, has not all this, it may be asked, a particular interest for India? We read in the reports of the Indian Forester from time to time of the destruction inflicted on our Himalayan and other forests—which some day at any rate will be an asset of incalculable value by wood-boring beetles and other insects. But do we find that special measures are being taken for the encouragement and protection of woodpeckers?

Again, are the authorities fully aware of the value of our Indian game-birds, especially resident species like black partridge and florican? We ask these questions in no carping spirit, but merely as a respectful enquiry whether Government, in view of what is being done in other countries, consider that adequate measures are being taken for the protection of the more valuable elements of the Indian bird fauna.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The Goodwood Meeting, 1911, cannot have been particularly remunerative, to followers of the favourites in the three principal events at any rate, for in the Stewards' Cup Braxted won at 25 to 1, in the Goodwood Plate Ignition won at 40 to 1, beating an odds-on favourite in Pillo and in the Goodwood Cup Kilbroney, who was third favourite to Bryony 5 to 2 and Yellow Slave 7 to 2, got home at 4 to 1. For the 6-furlong Stewards' Cup Braxted was not quoted in any of the ante-post lists and Sunningdale was first favourite at the end of last week with Runnymede, Vesta, Romney and Borrow all better backed than any of the three placed ones Braxted, Great Surprise or Mercutio. Although Sir Thomas Dewar's three-year-old was not "expected" at Goodwood, he had a far from bad two-year-old career, and he has also scored recently over this distance, having won a fair race at the Newmarket Craven Meeting. Braxted by Forfarshire out of Sillabub has the following record of win and place performances to his credit:—Won Knavesmire Maiden Plate, 5 furlongs, at York, beating San Nicolas and Cellini; second to won Wellington Plate, 5 furlongs, Epsom; second to Borrow in the Great Kensington Two-year-old Plate, 5 furlongs, at Sandown; won the Elton Two-year-old Maiden Plate, 5 furlongs, at Stockton; won the Glasgow Nursery, 5 furlongs, at Doncaster; won the Great Yarmouth Two-year-old Plate, 5 furlongs, beating Sallie of Navarre filly and St. Amaranthe; second Imperial Produce Plate, 6 furlongs, at Kempton to Prince Palatine, Meleager, St. Anton, etc., being behind him. This year he won the Crawford Plate, 6 furlongs, at the Newmarket Craven Meeting, with 7st. 5lb., beating Elmstead, 6yrs., 8st. 10lbs., and Canonite, 5yrs., 9st.

He was unplaced in the Battleyany Plate, 5 furlongs, at Lincoln won by Stolen Kiss, 8st. 6lb., from Master Hopson, 9st. 1lb., and Syce, 8st. 1lb., Braxted's weight upon that occasion having been 7st. 5lb., and he was unplaced in the Great Surrey Handicap, 5 furlongs, at Epsom to Minehead, 7st. 3lbs.; Syce, 7st. 6lb., and Poor Boy, 8st. 12lb., his weight in that race being 8st. 3lb. In the Stewards' Cup he had 7st. 5lb. and Poor Boy 8st. 7lb.

Great Surprise, the runner-up, is owned by Mr. H. Rhodes and is a three-year-old by Avidity or Fariman out of Armorel and did not win as a two-year-old, but this year he has scored and he won the Beaufort Handicap, 5 furlongs, at Manchester, with 7st. 2lb., beating Newcastle II, 8st. 2lb., and The Tower, 8st. 13lb., Master Hopson who was fifth, handicapped at 9st. 3lb., and he ran second with 7st. 11lb. in the 6-furlong Salford Borough Handicap to that good colt of Mr. Whitney's Whisk Broom who had 8st. 11lb. and only beat him a length and a half after Great Surprise had made all the running. Sir W. Cooke's "chestnut or grey" filly, to quote her description, Grey Spinner, 6st. 2lb., being third. The time was very hot as it is recorded as 1min. 11⅗secs. Great Surprise's weight in the Stewards' Cup was 7st. 7lb.

Mr. Charlie Hibbert's Mercutio, who ran third, is an own brother of the winner and is chiefly distinguished as being the victor in this year's Linconshire Handicap in which race with 8st. 4lb. he defeated Brandimintine, 6st. 5lb., and Mr. Joel's smart four-year-old Spanish Prince, 8st. 5lb. Dalnacrag, the recent Liverpool Cup winner, started favourite but finished down the course. Last year Mercutio ran second in the 6-furlong Victoria Plate at Lingfield, 8st. 7lb. to Elmstead, 9st., Louvigny, 7st. 8lb., third; he won the Derby Welter Plate, 1¼ mile, 8st. 8lb., beating Morena, 8st. 8lb., and St. Felicien, 7st. 13lb., Tangaroa, 10st., fourth, and the Perkins Memorial Plate, 1 mile, at Newcastle, 9st. 4lb., beating Newcastle II, 7st. 10lb., and Purleigh, 7st. 2lb.

The result of the Goodwood Plate, about 2 miles 3 furlongs, must have been a facer for backers, as they were laying the odds on Pillo, who looked very like it after his recent win in the 2 miles Northumberland Plate, in which he defeated such good ones as Kilbroney (Metropolitan winner) and Cardinal Beaufort. So that no one could reasonably expect the unknown three-year-old ridden by an almost equally unknown apprentice to be a source of danger; but such is the uncertainty of the Great Game that he not only won, but dusted the floor with the lot of them, coming away at the finish and sailing home four lengths in front of the favourite. Ignition by Fowling Piece out of Varna is owned by Mr. H. Bonas and had 6st. 3lb. in the Goodwood Plate, Pillo's weight being 8st. 5lb. Ignition was ridden by R. Stokes who is apprenticed to Mr. T. Jennings.

At the end of last season it was virtually decided to send Pillo to the stud and at the end of the present one he will probably join the rest of Mr. James Buchanan's stallions at the Lavington Park Stud, Petworth, Sussex. He is a very nicely bred one as he is by Rasburn (St. Simon—Mowerina) out of Golden Horn (Bend'Or—Yashmak). Yashmak by Mogador—Disappointment by Macaroni—Ethel by Ethelbert—Idyll and is a No. 8 on Bruce Lowe's figures. He won three times in good company as a two-year-old. As a three-year-old he ran ten times and won five races, his victories, including the Great Northern Handicap, 1½ miles, beating Hanover Square, Turbine, etc., the Durdans Plate, 1½ mile, beating Duke of Sparta, Hayden, etc., and the Gold Vase at Ascot which he won by two lengths from Wuffy. That year he was never once out of a place. He did not run as a four-year-old. As a five-year-old he only scored once, namely, the 1 mile 5 furlong

County Cup at Ayr Races where he had nothing against him. This year his recent victory, the 2 mile Northumberland Plate, already referred to, made him look particularly "peas in the pot" at Goodwood and that his worth was not overestimated on that occasion is proven by the victory of Kilbroney in the Goodwood Cup, 2½ miles, thus endorsing the Metropolitan form of Lord St. David's horse and proving that Pillo's Northumberland Plate win at only 5lbs. the better of the weight was no error, even though he only got there by a neck.

Mr. H. Whitworth's Cardinal Beaufort, who had 7st. 10lb. in the Goodwood Plate, is a John O'Gaunt horse out of Kate Dougal and his recent form is above referred to in the note on Pillo. Last year his principal achievement was the Great Northern Leger, 1 mile 5 furlongs, in which he beat this year's Ascot hero, Willonyx, at level weights and he also won the Gordon Stakes at Goodwood beating Sanctury and Marajax.

The Goodwood Cup, 2½ miles, run on the Thursday was, as already noted, won by Kilbroney after a great race with Martingale II. whom he beat a head. The relative weights were Kilbroney 9st. 3lb. and Martingale II. 7st. 4lb. Kilbroney is by The Wag out of Innismakil and has had a distinguished career this season. Prior to his Goodwood success he had been out four times and his 1911 record is shortly as follows:—He ran unplaced with 8st. 4lbs. in the Hainton Plate, 1½ miles, at Lincoln, won by Bagotstown, 7st. 10lbs., from Victory, 6st. 10lbs., and Dartoi, 7st. 5lbs. Then he ran second in the Babraham Plate, 1½ miles, Newmarket, with 7st. 9lbs. to Facet, 7st. 9lbs., the race being run in a heavy snowstorm, and at the next attempt he won the Great Metropolitan, 2 miles 2 furlongs, at Epsom, his weight being 7st. 11lb. from Bagotstown, 7st. 6lbs., and Clannish, 6st. 9lbs. He was fancied for the Chester Cup, 2¼ miles, run on 3rd May, and in which he had 7st. 4lbs., but he finished down the course to Willonyx, 8st., Toyshop, 6st. 10lbs., and Anchora, 7st. 5lbs. Last year as a three-year-old Kilbroney won His Majesty's Plate, 1½ miles, at Cork Park, Ireland, being the only place in the United Kingdom where these old Kings Plates are still run, the money being given in the way of premia to stallions in England, Scotland and Wales: he was second in the Irish Derby Stakes, 1½ miles, at the Curragh to Aviator; he won His Majesty's Plate, 2 miles, at the Curragh, beating St. Michan and Octocide and he was second in the Curragh Cesarewitch, 1 mile 6 furlongs, to Garinish Island, Killaidan Park being third.

Martingale II by Martagon—Simoom is a three-year-old filly owned by Lord Cadogan and she never ran as a two-year-old and has not been prominently before the public this year either until this Goodwood performance.

Mr. P. Nelke's Yellow Slave is a bay mare by St. Serf out of Croceum and she ran very well last season as a three-year-old. She was third in the Trial Stakes, 7 furlongs and 166 yards, at Ascot to Whisk Broom and Dean Swift; she won the St. George's Stakes, 1 mile 3 furlongs, at Windsor, beating Rosedrop (the Oaks winner) and St. Felicien; she won the Park Hill Stakes (St. Leger course) at Doncaster, Rosedrop and Pernelle being immediately behind her; and she won the Newmarket Oaks, 1¾ mile, Winkipop, Glacier and Facet being the other runners. She was evidently fancied considerably for this race and was only a point and a fraction longer odds than Bryony, the three-year-old bay colt by Martagon out of Princess Florizel by Florizel II, who started favourite. Bryony ran five times as a two-year-old without once getting into a place.

The second day of the Calcutta Monsoon Meeting was like its precursor run under very adverse weather conditions, no rain worthy the mention having fallen all through the week and the course was consequently as hard as upon the previous occasion and the temperature only a little less fierce. There was a light breeze blowing across the course, but the sun was shining his hardest and there was not a cloud even the size of a man's hand. There was, and there is, no reliable sign of the missing Monsoon at the time of writing and extreme measures have been suggested for simulation of the missing rain. Something will have to be done to water the courses, both jump and flat, to counteract the present state of affairs if we are to have any horses left to race, and we endorse a suggestion made in the Statesman that the cold weather grass course should be used until conditions improve. Racing on it under the present weather conditions could do it no possible harm and it must be admitted by even its most enthusiastic admirers that the much-advertised sand course is altogether unsuited to dry weather such as this. The hurdle course ought also most certainly to be watered by artificial means if heavy rain does not come to the rescue for it is unfair to ask owners and jockeys to risk serious injury jump racing on going that is quite as hard as a metalled road. The cold weather course, where the hurdle races are run, is prepared and is also watered, but the monsoon course is so built that moisture drains off it, as of course it is necessary that it should be, and in consequence in dry weather the clay soil binds to the consistency of bricks.

These disadvantages apart, the racing of last Saturday was of decidedly better class than that on the opening day and there were several of the contests that provided a good deal of excitement and interest. Things did not roll by any means backers' way, but despite several hot favourites getting beaten the Ring asserted that they did not get back their losses over the previous week, a mild way of admitting that they did not exactly lose! If the fielders made no money on such an afternoon as last Saturday then all that can be said is that it is never possible for a layer to make money and it must be a very poor game to play—no prizes and all blanks! Scratchings at the last moment were in some cases very numerous, as much as 50 per cent. of some of the fields being struck out, and we can hardly express surprise, for it is asking for trouble to race horses in such weather and on such going. The Sand Track Handicap Division I stood top of the list and on all public form, when Scotch Girl, Little Meg and Saloon were struck out, there was only one in it, Bird of Freedom. It was obviously the stable's best as Mr. Evers put his riding boy up on Proprietor and rode Mr. Ballantyne's mare. Proprietor went out quite friendless, there being one ticket on him in the tote (taken by Mr. Hoffmann the well-known photographer) and the horse was on offer at twelves and threes, win and place, in the ring up to the last. The home gallop, we understand, made him out to have no chance at 7lb. with Bird of Freedom and consequently Mr. Evers' treated the chestnut's burst away to the front with scorn till the true state of affairs dawned on him, namely, that the leader was not coming back to him. His desperate effort on Bird of Freedom was then too late and he missed it by three-quarters of a length. The tote paid Rs. 1,188 on the winner.

For the July Hurdle Plate Craigendorrie, who was in on 2lb. better terms to Tommy Daw than the previous week, was in warm demand all through. Everyone of course knew he must be very dangerous if he could be relied upon to get over these very stiff and uncompromising obstacles without a mistake, but after his inferior performance on the first day it was a somewhat big "if." The horse is not a good jumper yet and, in our opinion, is due another fall or two before he will learn his job. He fenced none too kindly on Saturday and he hit the last flight again very hard, but got it at the right moment on this occasion and it did not throw him out of his stride. When he came he smothered Tommy Daw and we compute it that he gave him a 10lb. to 12lb. beating on top of his 7lb. concession at the very least. Captain Charrington rode a particularly nice race. Foy has obviously not regained his old form, as he was hopelessly out of it all the way and Maisonette cannot tackle it on such adamantine going. The time for this race, 2mins. 57⅘secs., is a record for this present course.

A LOT of money was done in over Miss Clare in the Pony Handicap as she was backed as though it were a certainty for her. She looked like a winner till close home and then Sidonia came and tackled her and at the finish won very stylishly by a length. The winners S.P. was "eights" and 6 to 4 a shop and there was not a great deal of money for her even at these prices. Murmur seems to have lost any form that she may have had, for a pony that could hand a speedy thing like Fadgie 5lbs. and a beating last season ought to be good enough to be up amongst them here, but she was never really in the hunt. She will obviously have to be avoided till she shows some signs of returning to form. May Kenley ran better than she did the previous week and she is due to win very soon we should say.

THE Amateur Hurdle Plate was nothing more than a cake-walk for To Kalon, who was never seriously pressed till "Mr. Bryan," eased her after jumping the last one and allowed Reinforcement to very nearly catch him. The mare could have won by ten lengths, or anything you like to put it, as she had them all beaten a good four furlongs from home. The race was not slow as 3mins. 1sec. is very warm for hunters over this course and about seven seconds better than the average time, so it is hardly to be wondered if the other ones could not get near the leader till she was eased!

THEY made Saloon a hot favourite for the Monsoon Plate and he was backed down to 6 to 1 straight-out and 2 to 1 a place. The gallant old country-bred never showed any ability to get to the head of affairs and the real battle developed between Winsome and Elpis, the judge being unable to divide them. The owners decided not to run it off. Scotch Girl bolted at the start and went quite half a mile before she was stopped.

THERE was another close finish in the Fort Plate, for which Isabella certainly had every right to be made favourite when Mahoney Boy's number was missing from the frame. She ought also in our opinion to have brought the money home, but in a close finish Beaumont outrode R. Morrison and won cleverly on Lasso. The last race was an uninteresting contest as it was a certainty for Captain Brough's clever-looking bay horse and Mr. Evers could hardly hold Mahoney Boy back slow enough for the poor class that was opposed to him. He won with at least 21lbs. in hand. Details appear elsewhere.

THE entries for the third day of the Calcutta Monsoon Meeting to be run on Saturday next do not introduce us to many new features and are very much the same lot as ran last week. The most satisfactory feature about them is that there are not so many double entries as was the case in last week's card and consequently we may see slightly better fields. At the time of writing no announcement has been made as to whether another race is to be framed as provided in the prospectus or whether the Stewards intend to divide any of the races. The only one that lends itself to division is the Amateur Hurdle Handicap provided a guarantee could be obtained from owners that there would be at least half a dozen runners in each division. The class in this race is so widely divergent that it will be difficult to handicap them en bloc and ensure a good race.

In the Open Pony Hurdle Handicap there are nine and here Shannon Lass stands out by herself and is sure to get a "parcel." Loch Lily in our idea is the most dangerous to the top-weight and if the handicapper takes anything in the way of a liberty with her on the strength of her having only won so far in the closed class she will in our opinion surprise some of us if she is sound enough to start. Wal, Bandy Leg, Spec and old Solace are all bound to be near the top of the weights, but if Shannon Lass has to give the best of them no more than 12lb. she will still in our idea be well on.

THE horses in the Rs. 1,500 race, the Kidderpore Plate, are the same old lot with one or two additions, the most notable new comer into this division being the so far unbeaten Mahoney Boy and we shall not be at all surprised to see him do a bit more than hold his own if he has any sort of advantage in the weights. It is a mistake, of course, to allow two wins in inferior company to cause us to place too high a value on him, but if we were handicapping him we should put him a very few pounds behind a mare of the class of Elpis and then expect to see him beat her. The distance is more suited to Wise Hawk than to any other horse in the race and he will run well over 7 furlongs if he gets a weight that suits. But Mahoney Boy is the danger to anything that may aspire to win, for if he is anything of the same class as Warrayure he is a hot order for monsooners. The Selling Race has only drawn a small field and we take it that Mr. Evers' stable ought to be able to win it as they have three out of the seven. Abet is the best of the others. There is not a very high class field in the Entally Plate for horses that have not won Rs. 200 and Levi is possibly as good a horse as there is in the crowd unless Captain Charrington's Politesse, late Lady Polite, is any use.

WE note that Mr. McKerrow, who is well known in coaching circles at home and also is well known in commercial circles and Calcutta, has bought two horses, one of them being the four-year-old Victo by The Victory out of Muriel II., who has won over 5 furlongs on the flat and the five-year-old hurdler Once Again, late Jeanne la Folle, who won both last year and this season over hurdles. Once Again is by Sir Visto out of Isaura. Both these horses are at present at Bangalore.

OUR Poona correspondent writes:—After an unusual spell of dry weather, an occasional shower came down on Saturday afternoon, when we opened the Poona Racing Season. Major Hughes is in charge of affairs, which suffices to show that everything will be as it should be despite the absence of Mr. Grey. There was a very fair attendance and, though the sword of Damocles hangs over all apertaining to racing here, we are promised a good season. Most of the jockeys have returned from their travels, but some have yet to come and with them we shall expect some fresh blood.

There were seven races on the card and results went rather against the public, though it was a day of terms races, which was rather surprising.

Two of the new Arab races gave us the best things of the day, the first in the opening race, when Brazee, who proved himself in Bombay to be in the first rank, ran against a lot of second-raters. The race was never in doubt, as he lay handy to Pendil till well into the straight, where he came away as he liked.

The other was Money Gold in the seven furlongs, but he did not win by any means as easily, and only better staying powers got him there from Burgomaster. The former made all the running and only won after being under the whip all the way down the straight, whereas the other appeared to be well within himself at the turn.

An upset occurred in the first division of the first mentioned race, Rangoon, Vazir and Electric being the fancied ones, but all failing to get even a place. Fairplay made the running and was responsible for interfering with the two former ones as he swerved across the course. Upright benefited as he got through on the rails and stayed out Sweden.

Amongst old ponies in the sprint Rajput was thought good, but the stable later showed preference for Asbroff, whereas Mudkoor was not neglected. A good deal of stable money went on Zoolphokar, late Siriska, and it was a run-away win. He had Creditor settled at the turn, and after that was able to stave off challenges by the favourite and Mudkoor.

In the same way, although he was not favourite, Famous brought home a good win for his connections. Jehangir and Meazer were most in demand, but the former could not stay out and the latter ran disappointingly. Famous came into the lead from Grand Duke at the turn and from there was able to hold him very safe.

Two races were carded for big horses. Lord Carlyon on form standing out in the sprint, but he never really flattered. Croat took such a long lead that it seemed improbable that he could be caught. At the distance however he shut up, being in want of work. This was the favourite's chance, but he could not answer, and it was left to Huka to come out and win with a good deal in hand. The winner I think was the only one really fit.

Coat of Arms was the pick in the seven furlongs, and we anticipated something of his sensational performance last year, but this did not materialise. He made the running, but a furlong from home he began to go out and Gallileo cutting in on the rails was able to beat him home. The actual favourite as a matter of fact was Pincher, but he ran much below expectations.

The day was distinctly bad for punters, but the Season is quite young yet.

THE annual meeting of the subscribers to the Bombay Hunt was held at the Bombay Gymkhana on Wednesday, 26th July, with the Master, Mr. R. W. L. Dunlop, in the chair. The report of the Committee for the season 1910-11 was adopted and the accounts passed. The thanks of the hunt were offered to Mr. R. W. L. Dunlop for the able and successful way he had hunted the hounds during the past season, to Mr. A. L. S. Roberts who had audited the accounts and to Mr. J. Crawford for having acted as Veterinary Surgeon. The following gentlemen were elected (with power to add to their number) to form a Committee for the season 1911-12:—The Hon'ble Sir Henry Procter, the Hon. Mr. W. L. Graham, Mr. R. W. Harter, Mr. A. E. Lord and Mr. A. R. Burney. The Committee were empowered to appoint a Master and an Honorary Secretary. A unanimous desire was expresed that Mr. R. W. L. Dunlop and Mr. Alister Forbes would fill these posts for the coming season. It was also proposed that a pack of hounds up to 30 couple be purchased and that the Committee be empowered to make all necessary arrangements in connection therewith.

OUR London Sporting Review this week gives fuller details of the concluding days of Henley than those published in our special telegram on the 13th July. Other items of interest are the athletic meeting between Yale and Harvard and our 'Varsities and the wrestling match between the unconquered Ahmud Bux and Cherpillod, said to be the best wrestler on the continent. The friends of the big Swiss were considerably discomfitted when the dusky pulcan put him on his back in four minutes and ended the contest. Cherpillod declared the winner had used a jujitsu hold to effect his downfall, the referee stoutly denies this; but be this as it may, the native was all over his man from the outset and before two minutes had gone every one could see the white man had about as much chance as a snowflake in Hades.

RECENTLY a pocket-knife was found in the gullet of a silver hake in Manchester Fish Market. On the haft was engraved the name of R. W. Mason, of Ripon, who has just identified the knife. Mr. Mason, who was formerly Superintendent of Telegraphs at Manchester Post Office, was on a trip to St. Petersburg thirteen years ago and accidentally dropped the knife overboard in the North Sea.

IN consequence of the outbreak of foot and mouth disease at Hounslow, the staff at the London Zoological Gardens are having a rather anxious time and stringent precautions are being taken to prevent any infection being communicated to the animals. A space over which visitors must pass is kept moistened with disinfectants, and the feet of camels, elephants and various animals are treated with similar liquids. The food supply is also carefully inspected, no fodder from the Continent being admitted. The Gardens are now in splendid condition and there are few pleasanter ways of spending an afternoon than in a stroll round or in watching the birds and seals disporting themselves in the rock pools.

THE world's professional sprinting championship over 130 yards between J. Donaldson, the holder, A. B. Postle (Queensland), C. E. Holway (America) and A. A. Taylor (N. S. Wales) was abandoned owing to the breakdown of Donaldson. A new race was, however, arranged between the other three runners and brought off at Sydney on the 7th ultimo. It was a splendid race, Postle was quickest away and at 60 yards held a two and a half yard lead of Holway, Taylor third. Then the American began to go up to Postle and came abreast

Appended are the results of important cricket matches played in England during the past week :—

Yorkshire beat Sussex at Leeds by 281 runs.

Essex drew with Lancashire at Leyton, but gained a first innings victory.

Middlesex beat Worcestershire by ten wickets, at Lord's.

Surrey beat Derbyshire by an innings and 214 runs, at the Oval.

Middlesex beat Essex by an innings and 211 runs.

Warwickshire beat Yorkshire by 198 runs, at Harrowgate.

Kent beat Surrey by four wickets, at Blackheath.

Notts beat Gloucestershire, at Nottingham, by 289 runs.

Lancashire drew with Sussex, at Eastbourne, but won on the first innings.

The All India team's match against Durham was continued on Wednesday the 26th ultimo when the visitors completed their first innings for 239, five runs behind the county score. Kanga made 78 and Salamuddin 85. Durham went to pieces in their second innings and were all out for 87. The Indians replied with 95 for two wickets, thus winning the game by 8 wickets. The match with Northumberland opened at Newcastle on Friday. The Indians went in first and made 352, Meheromji scoring 117 and Warden 116. Northumberland were all out for 296 in their first venture, the visitors thus having a lead of 56 runs. Going in again the Indians scored 103 and the county replied with 162 for nine wickets, thus winnings by one wicket.

The Indians are now engaged in a match with the North of Scotland, which began on Tuesday. The home team batted first and were all out for 158. At the end of the first day's play the visitors had scored 193 for two wickets, Meheromji being 116 not out.

The one mile English Swimming Championship was held at Berwick on the 1st instant and resulted in a win for H. Taylor, Chadderton S. C., T. S. Battersby, Wigan S.C. was second and Hatsfield third. Time—23mins. 3$\frac{1}{5}$secs., a world's record. Taylor won the mile in 1906 and 1907 and was third last year. Battersby won in 1909 and was second last year when Beaurepaire won.

The Rugby season has begun in Calcutta and the first of the League fixtures take place on Saturday. Five teams have entered for the senior League—Calcutta, West Ridings, East Yorks, United Services and Nomads—and six for the junior League—Calcutta B, United Services B, Police, Rifle Brigade, Customs and Old Xaverians.

The final of the I.F.A. Challenge Shield Tournament attracted a record crowd to the Calcutta Football Club ground last Saturday and amidst scenes of indescribable enthusiasm the Mohan Bagan team beat the East Yorks Regiment by 2 goals to one. The native team played a good game and won fairly on their merits and no sportsmen can grudge them their victory—a victory which has been the cause of immense rejoicing among the Bengalee population of Calcutta.

The Cadet Challenge Cup Football Tournament was brought to a conclusion in Calcutta last week when St. Xavier's College met La Martiniere in the final and beat them by two goals to nil. St. Xavier's won the cup the year of its institution in 1894 and were again successful in 1906 and 1907. La Martiniere have won it on seven occasions in 1895, 1896, 1897, 1902, 1904, 1905 and last year ; St. James' School and the Armenian College have each three victories and the Calcutta Boys School one.

We publish further on details of the fight for the Light Weight Championship of the World between Owen Moran and Ad Wolgast. It was a great contest, from all accounts, remarkable for its fierce rallies and tremendous hitting. Wolgast retained his title, knocking Moran out in the thirteenth round. The Englishman though beaten had put up a gallant showing. Mat Wells, the Light Weight Champion of England has, we hear, challenged Wolgast.

Arnst and Pearce met for the World's Sculling Championship on the Parramatta River on the 29th ultimo when Arnst retained his title, winning by four lengths in 19mins. 46secs. Arnst won the title from Webb in December 1908, and has defended it successfully on four occasions since then. In June 1909 Webb made an effort to regain the Championship but was beaten. The next year Wheich challenged but without success ; and four months later Arnst beat Barry the English champion on the Zambesi and now comes the news of his victory over Pearce.

The Sarma Cup Football Tournament was brought to a conclusion on the Rangers' ground on Monday last when the Rifle Brigade "B" team beat the Rangers "B" team by 5 goals to nil.

The Nasik week, during which the annual tournament of the Royal Western India Golf Club takes place, begins on the 11th September, the usual competitions being down for decision.

The third weekly mounted sports meeting of the Bombay Gymkhana was held on the 26th ultimo in ideal weather and an enjoyable afternoon was spent. The jumping competition opened the proceedings : fourteen competed but the standard was poor, there being no fewer than nine refusals. Mr. Lodge's Asbestos was placed first, Mr. Pearson's Buccaneer second and Mr. Priestley's Seagull third. Tent Pegging by half sections came next and was a good display, eventually won by Messrs. Meikle and Wintle, Messrs. Gair and Reynolds second. Only two competitors came out for the Ladies' Spiral Race, in which they were to ride in and out of poles, and Mrs. McCausland beat Mrs. Reynolds. The Mounted Infantry half section race came next ; one of the half-section to lead two ponies or horses, on foot, unsaddled, to his companion who waits for him with the two saddles forward at a mark, saddle their horses and ride the course to a certain point, exchange saddles, saddle up and finish together. Captain Haynes and his partner finished first but were disqualified, Messrs. Pearson and Baird getting the verdict, with Mackenzie and Moulton second. The chatty race brought out a big field and produced a lot of merriment. Only two finished, Meikle first, Knight Bruce second. The Egg and Spoon affinity competition was won by Captain and Mrs. Adair, with Miss Spence and Mr. Briggs next. An excellent finish was witnessed in the Polo Scurry which wound up the proceedings, the result being—

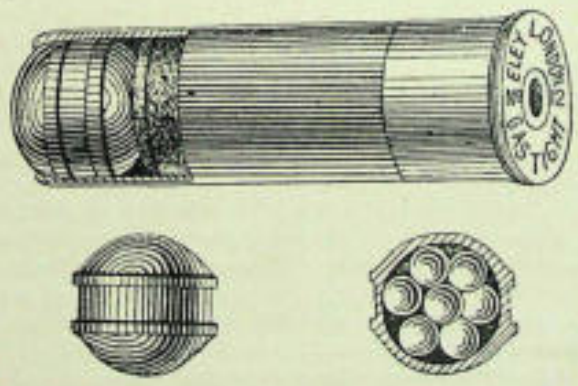
Messrs. Kynoch have just brought out a new bullet, which they call the "Destructor." It is designed for shooting soft skinned animals with ordinary shot guns and may be used in both cylinder and choke barrels. The accuracy is much superior to that usually obtained with bullets of this type. They break up splendidly on impact and it is almost impossible for an animal to escape if hit. The bullet consists of 16 lead pellets or slugs in a lead case: weight 490 grains : calibre ·730 in., length ·730 in., loaded with 3 drams black-powder or smokeless equivalent. Messrs. Manton and Company are agents in India.



There was a good attendance at the Grand Opera House last Saturday evening, when excellent sport was provided by the Boxing Club of the Rifle Brigade. A programme of six events was put through—all of them genuine contests—and though there was not much science displayed there was lots of hard slogging, and all the competitors went all out to win. Four six round contests comprised the first part of the entertainment the Rifle Brigade and Middlesex Regiment coming together in each case and the Riflemen winning all along the line. The first brought together Rifleman Price and Corporal Panton, who started off at a great pace which only lasted three rounds, but they were both standing up at the end of a hard slogging bout, Price gaining the decision on points. Rifleman Rogers and Private Newman then held the ring. There was little to choose between them at the end of the first round, but in the second Rogers, who showed really good style, was all over his opponent and had him "down." He took the count till seven when "time" saved him, but he did not come up for the next round, retiring in favour of Rogers. Corporal Smith, the Sandow man, then met Private Sullivan. Smith punched his man when and how he liked. Sullivan went down half a dozen times and was eventually counted out, the bout lasting about a couple of minutes. Then came the fight between Corporal Bingham and Private Anderson, which had been much looked forward to. Anderson, on previous form, made a poor showing against the hard-punching Corporal. He clinched repeatedly and the contest was a disappointing one. Bingham failed ta bring off the knock out but was declared the winner on points. After the interval Gunner Turner (70th Company R. G. A.) met Private Wootton of the Middlesex. The latter proved himself a very clever boxer and after he had slammed the Gunner all over the ring for a couple of rounds the fight was stopped and the verdict awarded to the Middlesex man. A ten round contest between Gunner Goodman, 77th Company R.G.A. (erstwhile of the Rifle Brigade) and Private Sly of the Middlesex brought the proceedings to a close. The pair had met in Darjeeling recently when Sly had won on points and he won again on Saturday night. The first round was slow, but they warmed up in the second and third, Sly landing most often. The fourth round was in favour of the Gunner and in the fifth there was little to choose, but in the sixth Sly evidently decided to bring matters to a close, for he forced the fighting and soon had his opponent at his mercy. He drove him to the ropes and knocked him out. The tournament was exceedingly well managed, the arrangements were tip top and the events carried through without a hitch. We are in the midst of what is described in the boldest type on the contents bills as a "Terrific Heat Wave." Personally I am enjoying it and I dare say my readers gasping in a break in the rains, which should be due in Calcutta while I pen these lines, would cheerfully exchange what they've got for what we can offer them just now. One thing is certain, sport and exercise are booming at the moment; records at Henley and Queen's Club bear out the old adage that "the hotter the day the faster the time," while big scores at cricket are the rule.

And this is the time of year when the ordinary Englishman can give the freest rein to his sporting instincts. In the winter we have, it is true, shooting and hunting, but these sports are not for the impecunious many. Football also survives in a fashion, but unhappily it is rapidly becoming a mere spectacle, and is in any case not suited to those who have left their early manhood behind. But in the middle of summer, especially a summer such as we are now enjoying, the opportunities for healthful recreation, even for the smallest purses, are practically unlimited. Tennis, cricket, boating, swimming, and half a dozen other summer pastimes are in full swing. We cannot all play at Lord's or row at Henley or annex championships at Wimbledon, but, if keen enough, we can at trifling expense generally manage to get a place in a village cricket match, make up a four at lawn tennis of a sort, or hire a boat for a strenuous hour on the river. We have been told by the ultra-serious minded that this so-called "craze for sport" is turning us into a degenerate race. As a matter of fact, in these days, when there is hardly any need for us to take the slightest exercise in going about our ordinary business, the active participation in sport has become a real necessity. Formerly, in the days before railway trains, motor-cars, and tubes, people found all the exercise they required in riding and walking. Nowadays, riding is a luxury, walking a distasteful superfluity—to most people. Hence the need for games, and cheap games. For the more the poorer classes are enabled to play cricket and lawn tennis, boat and swim, the better it will be for the community at large.

Posing as Ajax defying the motor car a cheery optimist—one William Stanley Shaw—has undertaken to abolish the evil smelling thing altogether. "The motor is the menace of modern life," declares Mr. Shaw with fine determination. I am decided on its absolute extermination. I appeal to all lovers of little dogs and children, to lovers of the horse, to lovers of the road. No compromise! I want no one associated with me in this great movement who is fainthearted or willing to compromise. It is to be a clean sweep for motor traffic.

"Less than twenty-five per cent. of the population own motors, and those few tyrannise over the rest of us. Their tyranny exasperates the parents of children who are injured or killed. It exasperates the owners of pet dogs. It exasperates the owners of property. All this exasperation is cumulative. It is a spoke which is leading to the hub of revolution. It must be stopped.

"I propose to rally all people who agree with me, and we shall form a national Horse and Foot League, with the object of restricting the use of our roads to horse and foot traffic exclusively.

"I shall first compile a list of all children or adults injured or killed by motors. Then we shall carry this issue into politics, and shall oppose all candidates for Parliament who are not with us. In this way we will get a majority in the House of Commons, and pass a Bill making it a criminal defence to drive a motor-car or motor-bicycle on any public road.

"I know I shall meet much opposition. My wife likes nothing better than a taxicab ride. I do not know what she will say when she finds out that I am starting this campaign. But I am determined on it for the national good. I have no personal grievance. I am entirely detached in my attitude. But I am resolved to fight the motor to the end." I am afraid he will be left fighting.

The mania for odd and grotesque patents is an old one. It is satirised by Dean Swift in his account of the ridiculous inventions of the Academy of Lagado; and before Swift's day, Mr. Pepys records his experience of a new musical instrument called the "Arched Vyalls," in which the performer played on a keyboard, and caused a piece of parchment to be drawn across the strings of a kind of violin.

But here is a patent a few days old which quite outdoes the mechanism that the diarist saw and heard and (I think) disliked. The patent comes from Manchester, and > Relates to a device or means for producing harmony from old meat tins or other discarded tins, and consists in forming on the bottom of the tins either raised pimples or indents, or both, according to the note that is required to be produced when the tin is struck with a stick. A number of these tins are placed in an inverted position in a board preferably covered with a fabric, and a solo or duet can be played by the performer or performers striking the tins corresponding to the notes required with a stick held in each hand.

One knows that a disposition to make a frightful noise is part of the heritage of Adam, and every child has practised on old meat tins, to the terror of all peaceful folk. But this inventor from Manchester takes a natural failing and tries to make of it a systematic and organised vice.

From the law courts this week we got an echo of the ghastly Crippen Case. It may be remembered that after the little fiend was sentenced to death John Bull published an open letter to him calling on him to confess. This was followed up by Crippen's confession and great was the sale of the Bottomley rag, though most of us were convinced there had been hanky panky somewhere. Now it turns out that this idiotic "confession" was nothing but a concoction by the notorious Arthur Newton (Crippens Solicitor) and the man Bottomley. The Law Society prosecuted Newton who on Wednesday was sentenced to be suspended from his practice for twelve months. Judgment was delivered by the Lord Chief Justice and Justices Darling and Bankes. The first named found Newton guilty of professional misconduct, and passed some scathing remarks on his audacious mendacity. Mr. Justice Darling put his finger firmly on the spot when he said that quite independently of the conduct of the solicitor in making improper use of the privilege granted to him by the Secretary of State, it seemed to him that the case disclosed a very grave state of things, absolutely inconsistent with public advantage. Crippen was obviously guilty; nobody could deny that. He was defended by subscriptions contributed by newspapers, among them being John Bull. The whole of the circumstances which had come into the case had satisfied him that Crippen was not from first to last defended, as he should have been, purely with a view of defence and nothing else, but he was used very largely for the purpose of making copy for the newspapers, and he had not the slightest doubt that the reason why the newspapers subscribed money was that that copy should be obtained. For a solicitor to lend himself to that kind of practice was to his mind a very grave offence, although he would not say that that alone would be professional misconduct. But Mr. Newton did a great deal more.

The evil of the matter must, proceeded his Lordship, be patent to anyone who considers it for a moment. Even the greatest criminal is entitled to have his case taken from first to last with the sole view to his interests, and not for the benefit of other people—journalists or others. When the wretched man had been sentenced to death, and had unsuccessfully appealed to the Court of Criminal Appeal, and had been taken back to the prison without the slightest hope of reprieve, even then he was not allowed to pass the remainder of his days in peace and penitence.

That newspaper contained a letter, and every effort was made that Crippen should get the letter, and the solicitor aided the newspaper proprietor in that. I will not read the whole letter, but this appeared in it, continued his Lordship, "Brother, how came you to do it? What demon possessed you? Relieve your burning brain by confiding all to me?" Why should he confide to the confessor? Simply for the purpose of obtaining for the newspapers that which would re-imburse them for the money they had subscribed, with profit. As Crippen did not receive that letter, the supposed reply was a fabricated document, made up in the office of John Bull. The whole circumstances of this case to my mind are inconsistent with decent conduct of those who took part in the proceedings. One happens to be a solicitor. He must be punished. The others are not within the jurisdiction of this Court, but to my mind they should be punished also. This sentence, if it errs at all, errs on the side of leniency.

What a pity the Editor and Proprietor of John Bull could not be dealt with by this Court; how much more will the public stand from Horatio Bottomley? "Chiefly fools" the sage of Chelsea called us did he not?

The death is announced of the Dowager Lady Outram, widow of the late Sir James Outram, the Bayard of India, who co-operated with Havelock in the Relief of Lucknow.

She was in her ninety-ninth year and survived her husband forty-eight years. They were cousins, and were married at Bombay in 1835.

When the Mutiny broke out Lady Outram was conveyed on horseback by her son from Aligarh to Agra, passing through the insurgent sepoys as they were looting the cantonments.

After ten long, weary years of enquiry and research, the Royal Commission on tuberculosis crowned their efforts with the publication of the exhaustive report which made its appearance yesterday. For a few days our papers will be flooded with the subject—even paper-bag cookery, which recently displaced standard bread in the garbage columns of most of the dailies—will take a back seat. The Commission establishes what a good many of us have known for long years, namely, that man is notably susceptible to consumption communicated from the cow.

Deaths of young children from consumption are to a "considerable amount" due to drinking cows' milk.

The Commission therefore urges that regulations regarding milk and meat must not be relaxed, but, on the contrary, enforced throughout the kingdom to give us better security against infection. We are, it says, inadequately guarded against the danger in milk from infected cows.

That is undoubtedly so, but it will be little use looking after the milk until we have tackled and thrown the difficulty of keeping our utensils even decently clean. Let any one take a careful look at any dozen of the big milk-cans that come into London by rail in their thousands daily and he will either be lost in wonder as to how we survive the fifth or will there and then rigidly exclude milk from his dietary. Then the meat. What is the use of waxing more vigilant over the matter of meat inspection when we permit Chinese pork to be imported by the shipload.

"The Girl who Couldn't Lie" was produced on Saturday at the Criterion. The fact that Mr. Keble Howard's play does not belong exactly to any known category is no objection to it; the author recognises that it is off the track, calls the work "an eccentric comedy"—nobody will deny the correctness of the term "eccentric." The question arises whether the eccentricity—which, of course, is not necessarily a good thing in itself—results in any novel dramatic effects of value. It is not possible to give a very confident answer of a favourable character. 'The Girl Who Couldn't Lie" can hardly be called a morality play, but text-book farce. "Be not over righteous" is the author's text, and he is not remarkably ingenious in preaching it. We are introduced to a middle-class country family, the Huegalls, father and mother of six children, all save one—the heroine—drawn rather cleverly, with neat strokes of a humorous character. We meet the family at breakfast, and Pauline, the second daughter, is late. When she comes down she announces that she has made up her mind that it is her duty to speak the truth upon all occasions. The announcement does not terrify the family at first, but friction soon arises, for her idea of telling the truth is not merely to abstain from falsehood but to go out of her way to express her opinion in brutally candid terms of everyone about her. When she has told her father that he is a weak-minded coward and a snob, her mother that she is a liar and bully, her sister Arabella that she is plain and stupid, and so on, there is a handsome family row. Matters grow worse when she has an interview with her fiance, Basil Marsh, and tells him offensively what she thinks of him. The first act closes rather effectively by her suddenly opening the folding doors of the breakfast room and showing him the whole family eaves-dropping during their interview. After this, the author has some difficulty in keeping his play on foot. We see Pauline causing a hubbub by telling truths to an ultra farcical collection of women who form a sewing party. A little later she turns upon Uncle Peter, a vulgar, choleric old oncle a heritage of the family, and nearly drives him into a fit; then, since Basil is not prepared to marry her at two days' notice, she goes out into the world to seek her fortune.

In the third act we have the family in the breakfast room during the evening, discussing the fate of Pauline, who has been away for a quarter of a year. During this act, the stage is darkened four times, and at the back are presented scenes illustrating Pauline's adventures. The first shows an episode in a boarding house, where she tells the truth energetically and creates a row. In the second we see her as nursery governess, uttering home truths to her mistress; the third presents her as companion to a rich, selfish woman, who gets a severe lesson from Miss Pauline as to her faults. In the last we behold the despair of the girl, in a garret, beset by poverty. After these episodes Pauline returns to her family, humbled by hunger and fatigue and declares that her mania for truth-telling was due to priggishness, and that she is determined to behave reasonably ever afterwards. Everybody, including Basil Marsh, but excluding her sister Arabella, who had been angling for him, receives her with open arms. Old playgoers will think of poor Gilbert's once-famous comedy "The Palace of Truth," in which similar effects to those aimed at by Mr. Howard were attained by forcing the characters to tell the truth under a spell, and intensified because they did not know they were telling the truth, but thought they were uttering polite fibs. There is the distinction that the older dramatist had no intention of enforcing any moral and also possessed a sense of the stage, which is not very strongly marked in "The Girl Who Couldn't Lie." A weakness of the new play, and a very serious one, is that the character of Pauline is not at all individualized. She is a mere non-human piece of machinery for obtaining certain dramatic effect: the effect of this is rather serious upon the play, for although Miss Muriel Pope played the character cleverly and agreeably, it was impossible to take any interest in such a merely lay figure. Uncle Peter is drawn with some skill, and, thanks partly to clever acting by Mr. Edmund Gwenn, was very amusing; and several members of the family were entertaining, notably Mr. F. Dyall, Miss Marie Illington, Miss E. Steddall and Mr. E. Breon. The other members of a long cast, including several talented people, were able to make no great impression.

It must be admitted that the theatrical season, which is fast drawing to a close, has not been a particularly prosperous one. Since the beginning of the year some thirty new plays have been produced and of these only four are still holding the stage, while not more than half-a-dozen have been able to boast a three months' run. In addition, two managerial experiments which might have been expected to command public approval, have failed, and in neither case is there any indication of a disposition to renew operations.

Although Sir A. Pinero's "Preserving Mr. Panmure" lasted for three months it can hardly be said to have secured a run commensurate with the reputation of the author, yet as things go, it must be numbered among the season's successes. Mr. Besier's "Lady Patricia" was also able to hold the stage for a quarter of the year, a record easily beaten by Mr. Mason with "The Witness for the Defence," and by Messrs. Laurence and Mouillot with "The Popinjay;" each ran nearly five months. So far no other plays of the season have equalled these two in duration, but "Baby Mine," which was produced on 22nd February looks like making the record for 1911. Four other pieces that give every indication of maintaining their popularity are "Passers By" which had its premiere on 27th March, "A Butterfly on the Wheel," produced on 18th April, "Kismet," which unfolded its charming Eastern pictures on 19th April, and "Fanny's First Play," which is proving a genuine Shaw success.

Ten days was the limit of the shortest run of the season, that being the fate of "Half a Crown" at the Royalty, and two other works only managed to hold out a fortnight—"One of the Dukes" and "Margaret Catchpole." Three weeks saw the end of "The Crucible" and "Playing With Fire" (that will be the life of "Above Suspicion" at the Haymarket); and a month sufficed for "The Master of Mrs. Chilvers," "Is Matrimony a Failure," and "Mr. Jarvis." Five weeks was the limit for "All that Matters," and six for "Bardelys the Magnificent" and "Loaves and Fishes"; nor did the somewhat lurid attributes of the much paragraphed "A Fool There Was" secure for it a run of two months. This is a record which no one can regard with particular satisfaction.

OUR TEETH

Has no one been struck by the fact that, in spite of the regular daily cleansing with tooth soaps and pastes, the teeth, and particularly the back teeth, frequently become decayed and hollow? Is not that a convincing proof that tooth-soaps and tooth-pastes are entirely inadequate for the purpose? Our teeth are not so obliging as to decay only in places where we can conveniently reach them with the tooth-brush. On the contrary, it is just in those localities which are difficult of access, such as the backs of the molar teeth, the interstices between the teeth, hollows and cracks, that the decay and destruction of the teeth appear most frequently, and are most likely to occur. In consequence, if anyone wishes to preserve his teeth intact—that is to say, to keep them healthy—this can be effected in one way only: by daily cleansing and rinsing the mouth and teeth with the antiseptic dentifrice Odol. During the process of rinsing this preparation penetrates everywhere, reaching alike the hollows in the teeth, the interstices between them, and the backs of the molars. Odol destroys the microbes and arrests all bacterial and fermentation processes which attack the teeth. It follows that everyone who uses Odol regularly every day takes the greatest care of his teeth and mouth that scientific discovery has up to the present time made possible.

EAST AFRICAN BIG GAME.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Times contributes an interesting article on the big game of British East Africa, where measures of preservation were instituted sufficiently early to save it from the devastation which wiped out the vast majority of the great herds formerly existing between Table Mountain and the Limpopo. The abundance of game cannot continue indefinitely, but it is positively astounding to-day, says the writer.

One of the finest game districts is that part of the country which lies to the north-west of Mount Kenia. Here a huge loop is formed by the Guaso Nyiro, a river which takes its rise on the densely-wooded slopes of the great solitary mountain, and after joining the Guaso Nerok circles eastward to lose itself finally in the Lorian Swamp. Within the loop itself the country bears a strong resemblance to the South African veldt, while more to the east it becomes arid, red soiled, and rocky. In a single morning in the first of these two divisions it is possible to see, not merely an enormous number of animals, but also a great variety of species. Zebra and the common kinds of antelope such as the oryx beisa, Grant's gazelle, and Thomson's gazelle, are there in their hundreds; small bunches of the largest of all antelopes, the eland, are met with; jackal sink away across the plain; ostriches are dotted about here and there and seem to recognize that they are secured from molestation by special ordinance; hydrax or rock-rabbits occupy the stony kopjes; a dik-dik, or little anteolpe about the size of a hare, is in striking contrast to a rhinoceros, which lies like a fallen log asleep under a bush or stands, a black dot in the distance; and, strangest of all sights, occasional herds of giraffe may be seen among the scrub moving until disturbed with stately dignity and turning into ungainliness itself when they run; their long necks seesaw, their tails swing, and their legs seem always in their own way.

In the arid region to the east less game is found, but two species, which are met with in few other places in the world, geronuk and Grevy's zebra, have their home there. Geronuk are very shy and graceful antelopes, with unusually slender necks; they are not unlike miniature giraffe, and seem to need little or no water, but browse on trees, resting their forefeet against the trunk, and do not graze. Grevy's zebra is much larger than Burchell's or the common zebra and more delicately striped. Both these animals are extraordinarily local, and in a few miles one's camp is moved beyond their range. Leopards are everywhere, though they are too wary to be often seen, and no one can guarantee the sight of a lion; innumerable instances are on record of the way in which some sportsmen have hunted for months without seeing a single one, and others have run into a band in one of their first days out. It is common enough, too, to follow a herd of elephant for weeks without success. In East Africa they have been hunted so much that they are not often to be caught in the open: unlike the rhinoceros, who has never learnt not to blunder into view at the scent of danger, the elephant has a full appreciation of the power of the modern rifle. At the first intimation of an enemy in the neighbourhood the herd are apt to start on a long undeviating march, covering 30 miles a day till they have reached the safety of the retreat for which they were heading. Most of the hunting has to be done under the most dangerous conditions possible; the sportsman has to follow their trail through a tangle of brushwood or bamboo, which is almost impenetrable to him and yet offers no obstacle to the huge beast he is pursuing; and the African elephant has learnt not only wisdom, but also the desire for revenge. The writer's companion was deliberately hunted in the forests round Meru by a herd of elephants, who suspected his presence, and owed his life solely to the lucky chance of finding in the undergrowth a tree large enough to withstand them.

Of the other dangerous animals many give first place to the buffalo. The menace of the rhinoceros lies only in his vast stupidity; he is not dangerous except in bush country, when he bursts out suddenly and moves very fast and with uncanny silence. The charge of a leopard is incredibly swift, and he springs from one enemy to another, but unless wounded he will invarably try to slip away. A lion's chief danger is in his unexpectedness; no one can prophesy what he will do; some let themselves be killed without a struggle, but, if a lion charges, death alone will stop him. This last is also true of the buffalo and the buffalo alone chooses his ground. The elephant and the rhinoceros have only two senses for purposes of defence; their scent and hearing are wonderful, but they are very short-sighted; the buffalo has very keen sight as well. In a herd buffalo will seldom or never charge over standing men, but no beast in the world is more dangerous than a wounded bull. He rounds on his trail and will stand motionless for hours, concealed in a thick place of vantage, with the sure instinct that he will be followed; his cunning is matched only by his immense vitality. A few years ago the herds of buffalo were decimated by the scourge of the rinderpest, but now they are increasing again so fast that in Uganda they have been taken off the protected list, and in East Africa two bulls, instead of one, may be shot by the holder of a license.

All the game is rigidly protected. No one may shoot without a license, of which there are three kinds, the traveller's, the resident's, and the sportsman's. The traveller's is cheap and only allows the killing of a few of the common antelope; the other two are identical, but the sportsman is, justly enough, made to pay far more than the resident. A schedule informs the license-holder of the number of each species he may shoot, and this is varied from time to time under the supervision of the Game Warden. No trophies may be exported without his sanction after a return of the animals killed on a trip has been filled in, so that as close a check as is possible in such a country is placed upon indiscriminate slaughter. To kill an elephant one must not only be a license-holder, but must also take out a special license of £10, to kill a second, an additional license of £20, though this latter sum is refunded if a second is not killed. Any tusk weighing under 30lbs. is confiscated by the Government unless good cause is shown to the contrary, a rule which practically protects all cow elephants, whose tusks rarely average above 15lbs. To kill a giraffe a further special license is required, and only one bull of the rarer antelopes, such as the splendid greater kudu, roan, sable and eland, is allowed. Besides all these restrictions there are two immense game reserves, in which nothing, not even lions and leopards, which rank as vermin, may be shot without a permit and this is seldom given; and there are also minor reserves for certain animals. The eastern boundary of the Southern Game Reserve, a tract of country about the size of the British Isles, is formed by the line of the Uganda Railway, and travellers can always see the ordinary kinds of antelope grazing in security close to the train, and can sometimes catch a glimpse of a lion or a giraffe. Such are the measures which are now in force to prevent the decrease of the game, but the interests of game preservation and of colonization must of necessity prove antagonistic in the end. Lions, for example, were more numerous round Nairobi, which lies by the Southern Game Reserve, last year than in any previous year, and those settlers who have farms in the neighbourhood naturally have a grievance. What has happened in South Africa must one day happen here. The sportsman, if anything, increases the wealth of game; by killing the old bulls which carry the best heads, he benefits the herbs, and the death of a single lion more than counterbalances a host of antelope trophies. It will not be the sportsman, but the tide of cultivation, which will eventually diminish the game by rolling it back from the areas of fertility and confining it to the inaccessible and unprofitable regions. This, however, cannot be for many years yet, and though some beasts such as the rhinoceros, are surely, doomed to extinction, it is a comforting thought to all who love the wild life that its present abundance is being watched over and protected in so complete a manner.

UNIQUE HUNTING METHODS.

ONE afternoon when I was quite a small boy living in the heart of the Australian bush, says a writer in the American Boy, a black fellow, his wife and their two children were camped near the creek which ran through our farm. They had just arrived and were both tired and hungry.

So the black fellow walked down to the edge of the creek, and had a look around. Soon he saw a pair of wild turkeys, or bustards, feeding quietly along a wide open space and about 800 yards away. Now, wild turkeys are very good eating, but they are very shy birds and difficult to get near.

The black fellow had no gun, but had three boomerangs, four spears and a club called the nulla nulla. I watched him carefully to see what he would do. He took the three boomerangs and the nulla nulla. Then he broke several branches of a neighbouring tree and swam quietly across the creek. On the other side he skirted around the edge of the clearing, getting as close to the turkeys as he could under cover.

I soon lost sight of him and kept my eyes on the turkeys. After about a quarter of an hour I suddenly noticed well out on the clearing a bunch of shrubbery. Watching it carefully, I saw that it was gradually approaching the birds. It never moved except when the birds had their heads down feeding.

At last it got so close that the turkeys noticed it, but beyond a good stare they paid no further attention to it. Nearer and nearer it approached until it was only about twenty yards away. Then with a jump that made me start the black fellow sprang up from behind the boughs, and running into the birds threw his boomerang at them. He seemed to hit both of them, but one flew away all the same. The other one, however, was disabled and the black fellow soon finished it off with his club.

It is the fashion to speak contemptuously of the intellect of the Australian blacks; certainly in some respects they are very deficient. I never met one, for example, that could count more than five, and most of them can only count up to three. But, as hunters, they are extremely skilful, very patient, and possessed of a great fund of knowledge regarding the habits of the game they pursue.

I have seen them catch ducks in much the same manner as the turkey was caught. The hunter, with a bundle of reeds, or other aquatic vegetation, slips quietly into the edge of the lake or lagoon or river, and either wades or swims, with the vegetation on his head, noiselessly up to the ducks. Then, one after another he quietly but swiftly pulls them under water, where he strangles them and attaches them to his belt

It would be thought that the ducks would either call out or flap their wings, and so alarm their mates; but the black fellow does his work so smartly that the duck is underneath the water before it has time to do anything.

The kangaroo is stalked in quite a different and rather a peculiar manner. Finding where there is a kangaroo, feeding alone if possible, the black fellow crawls as close as he can to him. His weapons this time are two spears. When there is no more cover he waits until the kangaroo has its head down and is nibbling the grass. Then he stands up beside a tree and in full view of the kangaroo but absolutely motionless.

The kangaroo looks up, but seeing nothing moving, resumes feeding. The black fellow then takes a few slow and very cautious steps toward the animal, dragging his two spears carefully through the grass with his toes. The moment the kangroo stops feeding he becomes immovable, standing, with his hands at his side, like a thin black stump.

This strategy goes on for perhaps twenty minutes, at the end of which the black fellow is probably within ten yards of his prey. Then, like a lightning flash, he bends for his spears, and one after the other they are flung quivering into the flanks of the kangaroo. The animal bounds off, but the black fellow follows confidently, as he knows that before the second mile is covered the kangaroo will be exhausted.

This is the usual way in which the kangaroo was taken. Occasionally, however, it was killed with a boomerang. The kangaroo has a very thin skull, and if the boomerang hits it on the head it drops instantly.

The boomerangs I have been mentioning do not return to their owners, as all boomerangs are so often stated to do. Boomerangs used for killing game or in war just go for the object aimed at; and whether they hit or miss they never come back, but end their course just like any other missile. The returning boomerang is really a toy, and is specially constructed. It is made and used by the same black fellow that uses the game and war boomerang.

Perhaps the most ingenious of all their schemes is the manner in which they net ducks. A creek is chosen which has, as creeks usually do, short bushy trees along its banks. Between two of these trees, on opposite sides, the blacks stretch their light, home-made net, at a height of ten or fifteen feet above the water. The net is managed by two black fellows, one on each side of the stream, who have hold of the top controlling cord. Until the critical time, the net is allowed to sag well down.

A few yards down the creek a third black fellow is concealed in the reeds. Two or three others then make a detour of perhaps a mile or more and strike the creek again. Then they walk back along the creek toward the net. At once whatever ducks are on the creek fly up and, as is their invariable custom, follow along the course of the creek, but about 100 yards or so in the air.

Soon they come toward where the net is waiting. Just at the proper time the black fellow who is hidden in the reeds gives the loud, shrill cry of the duck hawk, at the same time hurling his boomerang into the air. Like so many arrows the terrified ducks dive down for the shelter of the trees and dart along only a few feet above the water.

At the same time the net rises in front of them, and they dash into it. Sometimes the whole flock of a dozen or more is caught at once, and it is rarely that the stratagem is altogether unsuccessful.

FAIR GIRL—"My father made his fortune when he was a young man. Would you like to know how he did it?"

Gallant Youth—"Not particularly; but I would like to know if he still has it."

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN once joked about the American fondness for titles.

"You all know of the colonel," he said. "who got his title by inheritance, having married Colonel Brown's widow? But I once met a general who got his title neither by inheritance, nor by service nor by anything you could mention."

"General," I said to him, "how do you come by this title of yours, anyway?"

"Why, sir," said he, "I passed my youth in the flour trade, and for twenty-seven years was a general miller."

"I know another titled man—Judge Greene."

"Are you, sir," I once asked him "a United States judge or a Circuit Court judge?"

"I ain't neither," he replied. "I'm a judge of horseracin.'"

BRIDGE QUERIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I shall be grateful if you will kindly through the medium of your columns indicate the correct rulings on the following cases :—

(1) A and B are partners against X and Y at Auction Bridge—A has the declaration at one no trump.

Y, who sits on A's right hand, leads the knave of clubs. Is his a lead out of turn or only an exposed card? May A call a suit from X, whose turn it is to lead, or must he be content by saying "You may lead any suit except the clubs." This error is constantly cropping up at Auction Bridge and the ruling appears ambiguous with the consequence that opinions vary as to the penalty that may be exacted.

(2) A and B are partners in a game of Auction Bridge against X and Y.

A has the final declaration at one in hearts.

B after the declaration is decided and fixed leads a card instead of X, whose turn it is. This deceives Y, who sits on A's right hand, and he (Y) being thrown off his guard and thinking it is X who has the declaration puts his whole hand on the table.

Who is the offender and what is the penalty, and against whom?

Is B to be considered dummy before X has led a card, and if so are Y's cards to be considered as all exposed and liable to be called by A. I shall thank you for a solution of these problems and sign myself

"ENQUIRER."

CUTTACK, 25th July 1911.

[1. Y's lead is a lead out of turn and A can call a suit from X.

2. Such a position is almost inconceivable and is not provided for in the rules specifically. Strictly speaking Y's hand is all exposed and the cards can be called by A, as because B makes a mistake it is no reason why Y should make one also. In actual play, however, as A might have tried to prevent such a situation arising, we cannot think he would like to benefit by an obvious misunderstanding for which his partner was primarily to blame.—ED.]

A MALIGNANT BEING.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Not long ago instances were related in the pages of the Indian Field, which would seem to support the theory that there exist beings of low mental calibre, whose main diversion is to make themselves offensive to mortals. Many people indeed are of opinion that imps of this kind are the cause of the strange happenings at spiritualistic seances. Much of what occurs at these meetings is no doubt due to systematic trickery on the part of swindlers who find spiritualism a paying profession. Nevertheless behind all the chicanery there remains something strange and inexplicable. The idea that jeering fiends are amusing themselves immensely at the expense of foolish folk, who believe they are communicating with their dead relations, is a distinctly good one.

I know of a case of haunting, so strange, and so absolutely authentic, that it seems well worthy of being related here. A certain family have an estate in Somersetshire: unfortunately I can hardly give their name, or the name of their place, for people do not care to have it blazoned abroad, in these prosaic days, that they have been ignominiously driven out of their house by an unpleasant being, who apparently wants to keep it to himself.

The peculiarity of this ghost is that it uses considerable violence at times to the unfortunate people who encounter it. One of the family happened to be a midshipman on a cruiser, which lay in port, within easy distance of the paternal mansion. The boy told his commander about the ghost, and the commander who was a big powerful man of 14 or 15 stone, was so interested that he determined to spend a week end at the house in order to see whatever was to be seen. So the Lieutenant commander went off one Friday accompanied by the midshipman and another middy friend. The two middies slept in one room, and the commander in the one where the ghost used to be seen most.

Nothing happened on Friday night and nothing on Saturday night either. Then the Commander began to jeer the middy about his family apparition, for on Monday morning they had all to go back to the ship. However on Sunday night the commander woke up and saw a figure standing at the foot of his bed. He lent right forward and let out at it with his fist as hard as he knew how. His hand was seized and held fast and he then let out with the other. The other hand was also seized, and then with one great heave the commander was torn from his bed headlong over the foot on to the floor. The crash of the fall woke the Middies who rushed in from the next room to see what had happened. This was by no means the only case in which people suffered physical violence from the apparition.

A friend of mine, author of the "Haunted Houses of London," who is greatly interested in all this sort of thing, went down with two other men and a dog and spent either two or three nights, I forget which, in the haunted house. On one night, he saw an indefinite sort of figure, nothing more. On the last night, my friend himself saw nothing, but suddenly experienced a feeling of intense cold, as though an icy draught had found its way into the room. The dog first began to growl in a frightened sort of way, and then its growling changed to terrified whimpering. The two other men both saw a tall luminous shape. They had no light in the room. It looked like the armless trunk of a man. On the top was a white, dead looking face, with the skin drawn tight. The face had no eyes. One of the two men was so terrified that he yelled to my friend to strike a light and with the light the thing vanished. In this case there was no attempt at violence.

An old lady, who knows the haunted family well, assured me that an eldest son had been imprisoned, with numbers of other Englishmen in France, by Napoleon, at the beginning of the nineteeth century. That meanwhile the father died and the second son seized the estate. Later on the eldest son got away from France and came over to England, where he was murdered by his brother. After the death of the bad brother, the ghosts of both used to appear in the house, but they were quite ordinary ghosts, which did no one any harm. One ill-advised day the family called in the assistance of the Church to lay the ghosts. The spirits were duly exorcised with bell, book, and candle. The result was that the ghost of the good brother was driven away, while the bad ghost became physically violent, instead of remaining an ordinary peaceful apparition.

This story can be taken for what it is worth. It is probably the invention of people in the neighbourhood who wished to account for the haunting on orthodox lines.

My friend who spent the two or three nights in the house quite scouts the idea of the apparition being connected with any human being. He says it is merely a malignant being of low intelligence, which never has, and never will be human.

Fortunately the long-suffering owners of the estate have another house on the same property where there are no apparitions. The haunted one has been proved by frequent experiment to be quite uninhabitable.

TESTIMONIAL FROM SIR SAMUEL BAKER,

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty o health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

Truly yours, (Signed) SAML. W. BAKER.

Visitors to Newmaket yesterday faced the same scorching weather from start to finish, but monotony was saved by the extra strength of the easterly wind which on Wednesday rose to half a gale, and made it very pleasant resting in the shade yesterday. The going has held out well, and fields again returned a good average. Results:—

WINCHESTER CARTRIDGES SHOOT WHERE YOU HOLD

WINCHESTER

.22 Short and .22 Long Caliber Rim Fire Cartridges.

If you want to use .22 Caliber Cartridges that shoot when you want them to and where you point your gun, and strike a good, penetrating blow, buy the time-tried Winchester make, having the trade-mark "H" stamped on the head. They cost but a few pence more a box than the cheap, unreliable kind, and they are shillings better. Winchester .22 Caliber Cartridges are loaded with Black and Smokeless Powder. Those loaded with Smokeless Powder have the celebrated Winchester Greaseless Bullets, which make them cleaner to handle than any other .22 Caliber Cartridges. Special powder, made according to carefully determined and tested formulas, is used in loading all Winchester Cartridges, and every bullet is swaged by special machinery, which makes them uniform in size, weight and density. This modern method of manufacture, coupled with a rigid system of tests, makes Winchester Cartridges better than any other brand on the market. A trial will convince you.

ROWING.

HENLEY.—On Friday last, after one of the most exciting day's racing ever seen at Henley, the finalists sorted themselves out. We had all the thrills of an aeroplane touching the water of the course; a dead-heat in record time in one heat of the Goblets, a great race between Magdalen and Canada in the Grand, and many other exciting finishes. It was wonderful racing in wonderful sunshine on a course which has never looked gayer or brighter in the history of Henley Regatta.

We had two great races in the morning's programme in the semi-finals of the Grand. In the first of these Magdalen beat the Ottawa eight after a race nearly as exciting as that seen on Thursday between the Belgians and Ottawa. All the way it was a ding-dong struggle. Striking forty-one in the first minute against forty by Magdalen, the Canadians got a slight lead, but the Magdalen men, rowing beautifully together, soon got up, and the crews were level at the island.

Magdalen were a quarter of a length ahead at three-quarters of a mile, and at this point went away, and although Ottawa made a gallant effort just before reaching the stands, Magdalen always had their measure, and going away again they won by two lengths, in the fast time of 6mins. 55secs.

This is only 4secs. outside the record put up by Leander in 1891, and by New College, Oxford, in 1897. The Belgians were keenly interested in this race, as Ottawa had beaten them on Thursday, and also in the other semi-final, as the Jesus crew had won the great race in Belgium a few weeks ago.

In the second semi-final London pushed the famous Cantabs for the first mile. Then they cracked, and Jesus going away won by one and three-quarter lengths in 7mins. 2secs.

Eric Powell sculled well in his heat of the Diamonds against N. M. Bruce. Bruce caught a "crab" opposite Phyllis Court. Kinnear paddled away from Dewar in the other heat.

The Eton boys had a big cheer when they went down stream for their heat in the Ladies', and a bigger one when they came past the winning post, from University College (Oxford), three or four lengths in front, in 7mins. 1secs.—time which equals their own record for the race in 1897.

In a great race for the Thames Cup, Twickenham beat Emmanuel College (Cambridge) by a third of a length. The Ottawa four were beaten in the Stewards' by Trinity Hall (Cambridge), and thus the last of the overseas entries disappeared from the regatta, and the finals were all English to-day.

The Ottawa four had rowed in the eight against Magdalen earlier in the day, and to quote an authority, "rowed tired."

Aeroplane Bristol No. 7 arrived just after 5 o'clock, and manœuvred up and down the course. The airman touched the water twice, to the delight of the crowd and the consternation of the officials, as the race between Kingston and London in the Wyfolds was in progress at the time. But it was only beautiful manœuvring, and for quite half a mile the plane was within a couple of yards of the water.

The excitement of the day was continued in the first of the semi-finals for the Goblets, in which the two Thames pairs rowed a dead-heat, in time which beat record by 7secs. Logan and Nought led all the way and it was only on the post that a great piece of rowing by Cloutte enabled the other pair to get up for a dead-heat, Cloutte and Beresford are old men as athletics go, their combined ages. I am told, being eighty-three. Stamina told, and they expressed themselves as willing to row off last night. Afterwards, however, they tossed up, and Beresford won. Results.—

The regatta wound up gloriously on Saturday—the results were sent you by wire for your issue of the 13th July. Never has there been such a Henley from the point of view of weather or racing. In the four days the sun blazed fiercely on the river, and all the conditions were favourable for fast times, with the consequence that the racing was far and away above the average.

Records were beaten time and again, and any athlete will tell you that the sunnier and crisper the weather the greater capacity he has for physical exertion over short distances. Henley proved this up to the hilt, and the slight following wind had no more to do with the records than the crisp, clear, light air which had no clogging effect on the lungs.

Saturday's finals gave us some good racing. Jesus in the final of the Grand made a great fight of it for Cambridge for a long way with the splendid Magdalen crew from Oxford, but could not sustain their effort, and in the end Magdalen won by two lengths and a quarter in 7mins. 2secs.

Similarly Eric Powell, who is a master at Eton, gave W. D. Kinnear, the holder of the Diamonds, a great race for a long way, and both men were tremendously baked at the finish of a race sculled in the splendid time of 8mins. 14secs.

Indeed Kinnear was so dead beat that he was doing little more than move his arms at the finish, and perhaps Powell was the fresher of the two scullers.

Eton have a crew of crews this year, and their victory in the Ladies' Plate from First Trinity, Cambridge, was won by a long two lengths in 6mins. 56secs., time which has only once been beaten by an eight since 1897, and that was by Magdalen in their heat in the Grand with Ottawa on Friday.

And what a nice lot of boys the Etonians are will be apparent from a perusal of their weights. Boy for man they were more than equal in weight to the First Trinity crew opposed to them, and as they pulled like a machine past the winning post the big crowd congregated there took up the roar which had come up the stream, and shouted themselves hoarse for Eton-n-n-n.

The crew was as follows, and for a trained eight of schoolboys does not show any sign of the national decadence the croakers are always so pleased to talk about:—

TENNIS.

OXFORD v. CAMBRIDGE.—Both tennis matches have fallen to Oxford this year and in neither contest were Cambridge able to win a set. At Lord's on Friday the Dark Blues won a love rubber in the Doubles, while in the Singles on the following day the Hon. J. Manners (Balliol), the Oxford first string, defeated the Cambridge first string, the Hon. A. Windsor Clive (Trinity), with scores of 6—3, 6—0, 6—2, the match being all over in an hour and a quarter. Manners was very quick on his feet and got nearly everything back, while his attack on the dedans gained him a number of strokes.

The Oxonian quickly gained a lead of 3—love in the opening set, but Windsor Clive then improved in his play and making some excellent strokes on the floor won three of the next four games. In the eighth game the Cantab at 40—15 was twice within a stroke of making the score 4 all. He not only lost this game, however, but the next eight games also, Manners's sequence taking him to 1—love in the third set. Windsor Clive then won a game, his only success afterwards being in the sixth game.

The record of matches now is:—Doubles: Cambridge, 33; Oxford, 19. Singles: Cambridge, 35; Oxford, 17.

WRESTLING.

AHMUD BUX v. CHERPILLOD.—The much discussed wrestling match between Ahmud Bux (India) and Armand Cherpillod (Switzerland), which took place at the Oxford Music Hall on Monday afternoon, was sensationally brief and not a little disappointing. From the point of view of the public it was a fiasco, and will tend to make professional wrestling in this country less popular than ever; it may hasten its death as an attraction. At the end of four minutes' wrestling, Bux, with an arm lock and body press, gained a fall, and as the Swiss, who protested that a jujitsu hold had been used, refused to go on, the Indian was declared the winner.

An uproar followed, but happily there was no serious trouble. What the audience wanted to know the moment that they realised the contest was at an end was why Cherpillod had decided to retire, but it was not until after an exhibition by two members of the Indian troupe had been given that they learned that "Cherpillod retires hurt."

There was a noisy disagreement as to whether Bux had wrestled fairly. Mr. Gilbert Elliott, the chairman of the National Sporting Club, who was the referee, told a representative that "Bux wrestled absolutely fair in my estimation from first to last. If you bar what Cherpillod complained of you might as well bar wrestling. I may say I have had a wide experience of Japanese wrestling, and I repeat that in my opinion Bux did nothing contrary to rule or calling for interference from the referee."

The opinion of those who watched the wrestling closely was that Bux was clearly the master, and without the least doubt is a remarkable wrestler, as he proved himself to be in his recent contest with Maurice de Rias at the Crystal Palace. Yesterday afternoon, once Bux got to grips with his man it was pretty obvious that there was little hope for Cherpillod, who, despite his physical strength, was a easy prey for Bux. The pity was that the Swiss had not it in him to show what the Indian could really do.

ATHLETICS.

YALE AND HARVARD v. OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE.—Oxford and Cambridge just managed to beat Harvard and Yale in the sports on the 11th July at Queen's Club by the odd event, 5 wins to 4. The only fly in the ointment of a very fine performance—if one may use such a tangled expression—was the fact that the hammer was won by an American for England.

It was the first event of the day and won by G. B. Putnam with the fine throw of 151 feet 8 inches C. U. Childs, of Yale, was second, with 140 feet 10 inches.

The hurdles resolved themselves into a race between the Americans. J. B. Cummings pinched a yard at the start, but G. A. Chisholm caught him at the third hurdle, and finally won easily, in the fine time of 15⅘secs. The high jump was another match between the Americans, and W. Canfield won.

The half-mile went also to America, after a fine race. Anderson challenged Preble and looked like pulling the event off, but his leg apparently went and Preble won in the fine time of 1min. 56⅖secs., a splendid performance.

Macmillan got away badly in the hundred, but came with a terrific burst thirty yards from home, got level with twenty yards to go, and increased his lead right away to the worsted. The long jump went to America, who were then two up, with only three events to go. The American spectators at this point were full of joy.

The Americans do not, as a rule, stay well, and the two-mile race was obviously a match between Gowan-Taylor and Porter, both of Oxford, after the first mile. Gowan-Taylor won a great race, his superior strength beating superior style.

Our Varsities had still to win the last two events, and the quarter was looked upon as the crisis. J. H. Stewart, of Yale, set a terrific pace, and coming round the last bend, looked a certain winner. He had gone too fast, however, to face the wind in the straight and F. G. Black (Cambridge), running very strongly, won easily in the fine time of 49⅖secs. Macmillan was second.

The mile was, therefore, the decider. The Harvard three were real triers, but the pace set was too strong for them. When P. J. Baker made his effort only W. C. Moore, of Oxford, could live with him. He hunted Baker home, but could only get a good second, far ahead of the opposition however. Results:—

Throwing the Hammer.—G. E. Putnam (Oxford), 1, 151 feet, 5 inches; C. C. Childs (Yale), 2, 140 feet 10 inches; P. Cable (Harvard), 3, 137 feet 10 inches; H. J. Bower (Cambridge), 4, 130 feet 6 inches.

120 Yards Hurdles.—G. A. Chisholm (Yale), 1; J. B. Cummings (Harvard), 2; P. R. O'R. Phillips (Cambridge) 3; Macdonald (Oxford), 4. Won by three yards; same Time—15⅘secs.—a record for the sports between the rival universities. Previous best was 15⅘secs by Fox, of Harvard, in 1899.

High Jump.—W. Canfield (Yale), 5 feet 11⅞ inches, 1; A. C. Barker (Harvard), 5 feet 10⅞ inches, 2. Subsequently in an exhibition jump Canfield cleared 6 feet 0⅞ inches.

Half-mile.—R. M. Preble (Harvard), 1; G. L. R. Anderson (Oxford), 2; H. Jacques (Harvard), 3; L. F. Taylor (Cambridge), 4. Won by five yards. Time—1mins. 56⅘secs.

100 Yards.—D. Macmillan (Cambridge), 1; F. A. Reilly (Yale) 2; C. U. Thatcher (Yale), 3; D. Lange (Oxford), 4. Won by a yard and a half. Time, 10⅘secs.

Long Jump.—R. J. Holden (Yale), 22 feet 9¼ inches, 1; J. R. Kilpatrick (Yale), 21 feet 9¾ inches, 2; M. J. Sasskind (Cambridge), 21 feet 5 inches, 3; D. A. L. Hartley (Oxford), 21 feet 1¼ inches, 4.

Two Miles.—E. G. Taylor (Oxford), 1; C. H. Porter (Oxford), 2; P. R. Withington (Harvard), 3; W. F. Ryan (Harvard), 4. Time, 9mins. 29⅘secs. Won easily.

Quarter-mile.—F. G. Black (Cambridge), 1; D. Macmillan (Cambridge), 2; J. H. Stewart (Yale), 3; H. W. Kelly (Harvard), 4. Time—49⅘secs.

One Mile.—P. J. Baker (Cambridge), 1; W. C. Moores (Oxford), 2; H. P. Lawless (Harvard), 3. Time—4mins. 27⅘secs.

THE OOTACAMUND HOUND.

THERE was no hunting after Monday, 17th, until Friday, 21st, when hounds met at Sandy Nullah Toll Bar, a larger field than usual assembling. Another wet day, the driving rain and mist preventing much enjoyment of sport, but hounds brought off quite a good hunt. A cub was unfortunately chopped up on the way to draw Beadnell's Shola, which as usual harboured a jack; he ran past Hearty to the Pykara Bridle Path, and right handed through Bracken to the tea at Somerdale; crossing the estate in front of Mr. Antram's bungalow, then skirting Water-fall Shola, he ran in the direction of Barber's Shop over the Pykara Road to Herbert Plantation and Stokes Shola, where hounds divided, and the mist coming down very thick most of the hounds were lost, a few couples only marking down the original jack to earth, from where he was got out and killed.

Saturday, 22nd.—A lovely day, and a most agreeable change after three weeks of wet. We met at Sultan Shola at noon, a small field turning out. Drawing down the Nadanhad Valley, a line was picked up near Kabbalkad Mund, but the jack soon went to ground, and on the terriers being put in two jacks were bolted and both eventually killed after short runs. A move was then made in the open towards the Pykara River, where hounds got on to a line and worked it back through Eastwood to where the first jack was killed, but going on he gave a short run before going to ground and meeting the fate of his brothers. A fourth jack was found near Denny Nullah but gave no run. Near Chemund Nullah hounds spoke to a line and with some assistance from the Master they carried it right handed across the Pykara Road to below Hearty and thence over Windy Gap to Bacon Wood and the Yemakal stream, where hounds got him. Four jacks in one day is, I believe, a record with the Ooty hounds.

Monday, 24th.—Lake End at 7-30 A.M., only saw a small master. A jack was soon found near Newmarket, which ran for Beadnell and through Somerdale towards Tola Coffee Shop, from which point your scribe could take no further proceedings in the run and regrets therefore he is unable to furnish any further account.

Football.

I. F. A. CHALLENGE SHIELD TOURNAMENT.

THE nineteenth I. F. A. Challenge Shield Tournament terminated on Saturday, and the season will be a memorable one. It is the first time that an Indian team has annexed the prize, and it is the first time on record that such excitement was present and such an enormous crowd witnessed a final. Indeed the scene was an indescribable one and eclipsed all other football tournaments that have ever been held in the country. Mohan Bagan are entitled to their hard-earned victory, having prior to the final beaten St. Xavier's, Rangers, Rifle Brigade, and the Middlesex from Dum Dum, after which they eventually knocked out the East Yorks, who had beaten the Royal Scots and Calcutta, but their success hardly calls for the fuss that has been made in the daily press anent their victory. As there is little stirring at this time of the year and as columns must be filled the I. F. A. Shield Tournament and Mohan Bagan have afforded much "Copy." Mohan Bagan became a force in Calcutta football in 1906 when they beat the Medicals, then holders of the Trades Cup, and only a few days prior to this the Medicals had beaten Calcutta. The Indian team followed up their success by retaining the trophy during the next two years and, having established a record in this competition by thus annexing the prize three years in succession, they relinquished the junior trophy and entered for the Shield in 1909. In their first year in the senior competition, after beating the Y.M.C.A. by four goals to nil, the Indian team lost to the Gordon Highlanders (the holders), the Scotch regiment eventually retaining possession of the trophy. Last year too Mohan Bagan were beaten in the second round, but they put up a splendid fight against the Rifle Brigade, who won on the Calcutta ground by the narrow margin of a goal to nil. The Bengalis never gave up heart and so Mohan Bagan made a third bid for the much-coveted trophy and with the exception of Ghosh, their centre forward the team was identically the same that played last year. In the first match against St. Xavier's no idea could be formed of their strength, as in addition to having two substitutes, Mohan Bagan took the field one short and to make matters more confusing the refereeing was very poor and after a wretched game Mohan Bagan, who played the cleaner football, won easily by three goals to nil. Then the Rangers, Rifle Brigade, and the Middlesex from Dum Dum, were all beaten in turn and the primary cause of the defeats of the two military teams had been to a certain extent weakness in front of goal and also to some of their players having lost their tempers. But Saturday's game was played in a thorough sporting spirit and rough and dirty play was conspicuous by its absence, and this was only to be expected, as the East Yorks always play in clean sporting manner, and in spite of all the howling by the natives outside the enclosure, the Fyzabad men never lost their heads and their fine example should be followed by some of our civilian and military players.

The final of the Shield has with two exceptions been always played on the Calcutta F. C. ground, which is the best in the city and a crowd of fully fifty thousand people witnessed the game. The arrangements were all that could be desired and Mr. T. J. C. Davis, the Joint Honorary Secretary and Messrs Crawford, Stimson, S. N. Bose, and Father Power, who assisted him are to be congratulated on the decided success which attended their efforts. Indeed the tournament was the greatest and most successful ever held in Calcutta and the gate receipts amounted to Rs. 6,914 which has beaten all previous records. The game which was very fast, tremendously exciting, and full of interesting incidents, resulted in a win for Mohan Bagan by two goals to one after the East Yorks had scored first. There is not much doubt that the better side won, but one cannot help saying that Calcutta were most unlucky in not being in the final. With the exception of Grimshaw, who was too weak to play owing to a bout of fever both teams were at full strength. The weather and ground conditions were all that could be desired and a little after 5-30 the great game commenced.

Jackson beat S. Bhaduri for choice of ends, but as there was no breeze the winning of the toss was no advantage. Mohan Bagan kicked off and from start to finish the game was played at top speed. While the Indian players treated the spectators to some excellent footwork the Yorks indulged in a lot of head play. Both goals were visited in turn and both custodians had to handle, but at half time there was no score.

On resuming after the usual respite it looked as if the military would score, but, as is generally the case with soldiers too, much passing and hesitation in shooting lost them some fine openings. The Yorks were at length rewarded, "hands" against one of the halves just outside the penalty area giving Jackson an opportunity of scoring a splendid goal. Great cheering followed and most people were almost certain that the military would win, but Mohan Bagan and S. Bhaduri the captain had to be reckoned with and after a brilliant individual run Bhaduri beat Cressy, amid a scene of the wildest excitement. Two or three minutes elapsed when the same player paved the way for a second goal, and the East Yorks unable to respond were beaten by two goals to one. The sides were :—

MOHAN BAGAN.—H. Mookerjee, goal; Sukul and Chatterjee, backs; N. Mookerjee, Gupta and Bhattacharjee, half-backs; S. Bhaduri, B. Bhaduri, Ghosh, Sirkar and Roy, forwards.

THE BOMBAY HARWOOD LEAGUE.

THE Government Telegraphs and the Bombay Volunteer Artillery met on the Cooperage on the 24th ultimo, a poor game ending in a pointless draw. Play was uninteresting and spiritless throughout. Tuesday's game between the Bombay Gymkhana and the Byculla Railway Institute attracted only a small attendance. The Gymkhana was always the superior team and eventually won by 5 goals to nil, but this margin might have been larger had their shooting been less erratic. The Bombay F.C. played the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday the 26th. It was a very fair game in spite of the fact that the Bombay F.C. played a man short throughout. The Young Men did most of the attacking and ran out victorious by 3 goals to 1.

Lawn Tennis.

THE TORPID STATE OF THE GAME IN ENGLAND.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—Now that all 1911 lawn tennis championships at Wimbledon are over, it is well to consider one or two points that bear heavily on the welfare of the game.

Year after year protests are made against the gross unfairness of allowing the holder of the title to "sit out" during the preliminary stages, calmly awaiting the man who qualifies to meet him by playing a strenuous match during nearly every day of the fortnight over which the meeting lasts.

Those who judge lawn tennis from what they have seen in the parks or the smaller suburban clubs may possibly think that it is not a hard or trying sport. Never was a greater fallacy. Championship lawn tennis is a game that makes a severe call on the most perfectly trained athlete.

Roper Barrett's breakdown at Wimbledon on Saturday when called upon to play A. F. Wilding, the holder, emphasises the injustice of the system.

During his progress to the challenge round Roper Barrett met and defeated, among others, J. C. Parke, A. E. Beamish, T. M. Mavrogordato, and C. P. Dixon, all first-class men. In addition to this, he had to play events in the men's doubles and the mixed doubles.

The holder, on the other hand, was only called upon once—when he defended his title of double champion with M. J. G. Ritchie—before he had to face the challenger.

It was like asking upon a man who has just won a Marathon race to run a 100 yards sprint.

A champion is presumably a man who has beaten all others. The holder of the title at Wimbledon merely has to defeat one whose vitality has been sapped by a series of hard fought matches, while he himself is fresh and well.

It is opposed to all the principles of fair play, and the system must go.

If the pathetic spectacle of little Roper Barrett battling against the call of worn-out nature brings about this change, then he will not have suffered in vain.

Another thing that must give pause to all those who have the true interests of English lawn tennis at heart, is the woeful conviction that has been forced on everybody that there is nothing to be hoped for from the younger school of players.

English lawn tennis is in a bad way. This must be admitted by the most hardened optimist when he sees men like Roper Barrett, Gore, Dixon, and Ritchie—veterans all—still gallantly holding the fort for England, solely because none of the younger men are capable of doing so.

They cannot do so always, and in a few years' time will be forced to retire in consequence of the inexorable march of years.

But there is no one to take their place, and as he gazes anxiously forward, striving hard to find some one worthy to take his place in the fighting line, the lawn tennis enthusiast has sorrowfully to shake his head and admit that there are none. The future for English lawn tennis is very black, and there is no sign of a silver cloud on the horizon.

And what emphasises the nakedness of the land is the great advance made by Continental players. They reached their highest mark this year, when Max Decugis and A. H. Gobert won the title of doubles champions by defeating the holders, Wilding and Ritchie, and no one can deny that they deserved their victory.

The foreigners are rapidly adapting themselves to grass and are beginning to defeat us on our own ground, and if anything is safe to prophesy, it is that it will not be long before the boards in the Wimbledon pavilion bear the name of a foreign holder of the lawn tennis championship.

Whenever an extra large crowd was seen round a side-court during the meeting, it was safe to guess that a foreigner was playing. Not only are the nearly as effective as our players, but they are infinitely more exhilarating to watch.

There is a snap and go about their play which is sadly lacking in that of our men. When an English pair meet every one knows exactly what will happen. The play is on old stereotyped lines. The same strokes are repeated time after time. There is a great lack of imagination in English lawn tennis, as exemplified by the younger men. It is flat, stale, and unprofitable.

These Continental players are a pure delight to watch. No one who was privileged to see it is ever likely to forget the game between the Frenchmen, Decugis and Gobert, and the Germans, Rahe and Kleinschorth. Each player knew what he had to do and did it promptly, brightly, and effectively. They were in the right place at the right time. In short, they were efficient. And, after watching them, several people wondered whether the fact that all four of these young men were members of nations that had compulsory military service had anything to do with it.

There is no desire to belittle English lawn tennis. We are still in the forefront of the nations in this sport, but we are being rapidly overhauled, and there are no young men who can hope effectively to fill the breach which must be made sooner or later by the retirement of the "old guard."

Those who are concerned with the true welfare of English lawn tennis should take to heart the words of King George, "Wake up, England!"

JOHN FERGUS O'HEA, the artist tells a rather amusing story of Irving. When Irving paid his first visit to Ireland he was called upon by O'Hea, who wished to make some lightning sketches of the great actor. Having made a few thumbnail portraits O'Hea said:—

"May I ask, Mr. Irving, if you can give me a photograph. It may assist me in completing these sketches."

"Certainly," replied Irving, producing a couple of dozen photographs of himself; "you can have which you like."

O'Hea chose a photograph, and then, as he was taking leave, said, "Will you add to your kindness Mr. Irving, by signing this photograph?"

"With pleasure," said Irving; and taking up a pen he wrote across the foot of the photograph: "To my very dear friend—" He paused, and turning to O'Hea, asked in the charming manner which all lovers of Irving will recall with a sigh "What name did you say?"

Boxing.

THE LIGHT WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE WORLD.

AD. WOLGAST vs. OWEN MORAN.

THE following details of the fight for the World's Light Weight Championship appear in Boxing.—

Round 1. Moran went off at a great pace and wasted very little time in preliminary sparring. Wolgast was quite ready to meet him and joined in some fierce exchanges as soon as they got near each other. Owen got his left home to the face and blocked Ad's return. For the first few seconds it almost seemed as though the Englishman would be able to make a scientific battle of it and win on that tack, but Wolgast kept boring in, so Owen had to use both hands in the effort to keep the champion out. The work of both for such an early stage was singularly fast and there was very little to choose at the bell.

Round 2. They left their corners at express speed and tore into each other at once like men possessed. Wolgast was hitting from every possible angle and though Moran's blows were as a rule straighter, they weren't so very much more accurately delivered. Owen was finding the face frequently with his left, while Wolgast was hammering away at the body. Not that Owen neglected this objective, but he was finding it less easy to get home there, as Ad seemed rather disposed to offer his head, seeming to rely on his skill in ducking it and so taking his opponent's punches high up. Quick, however, as Wolgast was, he could not succeed in avoiding all the Englishman's deliveries, and a sudden rush by Owen, which drove the German back almost on to the ropes, caused a distinct rise in the challenger's stock. A fierce left hook found Wolgast's eye, while a savage right hander in the ribs made an obvious impression. Adolph, however, took this unflinching, and fighting toe to toe he gradually forced the little Briton back again to the centre of the ring. They battled across and around with the utmost vigour and determination, and both were showing signs of punishment when they returned to their corners, without there being much to choose between them.

Round 3. Moran was clearly trying to force the pace as hard as he could, but so far he had found Wolgast his equal in both speed and cleverness. Those who had expected the Englishman to shine as a scientific boxer were somewhat disappointed, not with his showing, be it said, but simply because strive as he would, he could not establish any marked superiority. Wolgast displaying unexpected brilliancy in this department. Owen was certainly getting his left home to the face with marked frequency, and was deservedly catching the eye with his work in this direction, but Wolgast's heavy body hitting and fierce hooks to the head were plainly so powerful that the Englishman had somewhat the worst of the deal on the meeting, though from the loud cheering of his supporters this opinion was clearly not a universal one.

Round 4. Owen had got home pretty frequently on Adolph's right eye, and the German showed this when he came up for the fourth time. Another fierce left hander on the same spot didn't tend to improve the champion's vision, but the latter made a furious rush which, driving Moran before it, almost sent him through the ropes. There was a fierce rally and Owen slipped cleverly out of danger. Some very fierce and fast slogging on both sides saw Moran well holding his own, while yet another tremendous left hander on Wolgast's damaged optic almost put the shutters up. The fighting was growing faster every moment, both men hitting as hard and fast as they could. Wolgast was driven slowly backwards, fighting all the way, and then Owen with a sudden punch drove his man before him and a terrific right-hander in the stomach almost sent Ad through the ropes. The champion clearly realised that he had to pull out all he had, and joined issue in some terrific battling, but the round closed slightly in the Englishman's favour.

Rounds 5 and 6. The pace was, if anything, faster than ever. It was slog, slog all the way with first one and then the other getting the pull. They were rushing each other in turns and while there seemed to be very little to choose between the pair, Wolgast's supporters were growing more confident. It was plainly impossible for the battle to continue long at the pace at which the men were travelling, and with the German's great and deserved reputation for staying power, his friends felt that things were bound to come his way before long. Moran again had a shade the better of the fifth, but Wolgast evened matters up in the next session, although in neither instance was there much to choose between the men.

Round 7. Moran put on a big spurt for this and for a time carried the battle to the champion, but the latter soon recovered and came back at his man like a tiger cat, the hitting on both sides being if possible fiercer than ever. Each in turn drove the other on to the ropes, and both were hitting at the body with all the force they had. Wolgast would lower his head and pump both hands to the stomach and ribs for all he was worth, frequently hooking them up and over to the head with any amount of power behind. While if Moran's prettier style was catching the eye more, it was quite evident that Wolgast's terrific hitting must soon tell its tale. Moran, it is true, was going a shade faster at this stage and was perhaps landing more frequently, but save for that tremendous punch he had put on Wolgast's eye, had not made much appreciable difference on the cast-iron German.

Round 8. There had been very little between the men when this opened. Moran was possibly ahead on points, but Wolgast, who had had his eye lanced, seemed as fresh as ever, while there were several indications that his fierce and powerful hitting had had its effect. Owen's speed was slackening and he wasn't so quick as he had been. Hitherto he had been dancing in and out like a cat on hot bricks, when he had not been standing up toe to toe, while Wolgast had moved after him on both feet and had been slamming in his punches from every conceivable angle. Owen was swinging too more than he had been doing and one commenced to fancy that he had shot his bolt. Still, he kept a useful in determined fashion and though he had the worst of the meeting, this being by far his worst round to date, the issue was still doubtful.

Round 9 saw Wolgast go further ahead, some very hard hooks to the head and jabs to the body weakening the Englishman considerably. Owen was a badly battered man when he went to his corner, and one or two fans at the ringside were commencing to wager that the contest wouldn't last ten rounds.

Round 10. Owen came up, however, as gamely as ever, if obviously tired, for the next session and more more started pumping lefts into Wolgast's face. The champion appeared to disregard these, as he did Moran's swings, and, working in close, got his right going in great style, both with straight drives to the body and fierce hooks to the head. Owen tottered once or twice under this punishment, but recovered well and though he looked less like a winner than at any previous stage of the combat he was always ready to join in the hitting.

Round 11. Moran had survived the half way house, and the knowledge that he had done so appeared to put new life into him, for he came up for the eleventh time almost as fresh as when he started. He had had a bad time but had got over it and at once proceeded to apprise Wolgast that the end was still some distance off. He tore into the champion straight from the bell, slinging his left as he came.

REDDITCH, ENGLAND.

It took effect near the jaw and as Wolgast went back Owen drove the same fist home hard to the nose. Adolph came back fiercely and there was a rare rally near the centre of the ring, the champion hammering away at the Englishman's body while Moran's left worked like a piston rod, hailing blows to the face. For a time Wolgast seemed to be holding his own, despite the punishment he was receiving and then Moran hooked both hands hard home to the jaw. This shook Wolgast and before he could recover another fierce right hander landed on the same spot, forcing him to cover up and make use of the ring for a space. Moran, however, kept closely after his man and hitting hard with both hands went well ahead. This round was clearly Owen's.

Round 12. Wolgast looked in rather bad shape when he came up for this, but he joined at once in a fierce slug fest. Owen, however, had got on top, if only temporarily, and had no intention of losing his advantage. Crowding on all the speed he could he tore into his man and failed away at him as hard as he could. A fierce right hook to the mouth, following a body blow that had brought Moran's head forward, deprived the Englishman of a tooth, but the Brum didn't seem to mind this in the least, as he never slackened up in the slightest. This round also went to Moran and there was no doubt that Wolgast had been in a fight when he returned to his corner.

Round 13 and last. The result looked to be singularly open when the men came up for what was to prove the final session. This was the thirteenth round, the which had always proved so lucky for old Bob Fitzsimmons, but which was to prove a fatal one for Bob's little compatriot. Wolgast wore a very dogged look as he left his corner and was evidently fully appreciating the seriousness of the situation. Owen on the other hand, came up jauntily and the two got together at once starting off to slug as fiercely as at any previous stage. Moran hooked for the head and sent home a straight left for the face, Adolph returning the compliment with two terrific rights to the stomach. The blows sank right home and Owen, dropping his hands, stood stock still for a second. Wolgast saw his opportunity and drove home another right-hander to the same spot. The Englishman tottered and sagged at the knees. He was going down. Quick as a flash the German whipped home a fierce left hook to the jaw. Down went Moran like a log to be counted out.

The kind-hearted old gentleman, in silent pity, gazed at the moody convict.

"My good man," he said at length, "this prolonged solitude that lies before you improve the time by making good resolutions, to be carried out on your release."

"I'm going to learn to drive a motor-car, for one thing," said the prisoner.

The other smiled approval.

"A truly laudable desire," he said, "to master a pleasant and lucrative business."

"Yes," said the other, "if I had learned it before I'd have got away all right in the car that I was sent here for stealin'."

A child of strict parents, whose greatest joy had hitherto been the weekly prayer-meeting, was taken by its nurse to the circus for the first time. When he came home he exclaimed:—

"Oh, mamma, if you once went to the circus you'd never, go to prayer-meeting again in all your life."

The Horse.

By John Gilpin.

CHAPTER VII.

"Making" a Young Horse.

It is now time that the horse should be put through all his lessons mounted in the riding school. It is not very likely that one will be asked to break in a horse in India that has never been backed. All Countrys breds and Arabs are ridden when quite young and nearly all Walers have been backed either in Australia or at the Indian port of landing. Still, one sometimes comes across a horse that declines to be ridden and the way to deal with him is this:—Tie his head to his tail and draw his head round so that he can only walk in a circle. If you pull it too far round he will fall down but it should be pulled round a good way. A short leading rein should be attached to the outer side of the bridle and an assistant should hold this to prevent the horse from running round too fast and to stop him when necessary. If he goes round too fast he will get giddy and fall. A surcingle should be put round the saddle outside the rope joining head to tail. This when tightened draws the rope to the horse's side and enables the rider to sit in the saddle in comfort. It is extraordinary how soon a horse realises his helplessness when tied up in this way. He should be allowed to walk round and round in his circle and should be occasionally stopped and sent on again until he shows by halting and going on when he is told that he is no longer fighting. He may then be carefully and quietly mounted, he can do nothing, and should be led until he becomes accustomed to the weight upon his back and no longer resents it. Then the rope may be let out a few inches at intervals until his head is free. If at any stage he plays up the rope can be tightened again. He is not likely to fight for long. Fortunately horses requiring such drastic treatment are not very common now-a-days. Young horses, in fact any horses that are "curly" when first mounted, should be saddled about half an hour before they are required. A cold saddle suddenly pressed down on the back by the rider's weight has been the cause of many a fall. Wait until the saddle has had time to warm up before mounting. Avoidable falls do no good to either man or horse, the latter especially getting harm from the knowledge that he can put a man down. A horse should never be given the chance of playing the fool while he is in breaking.

The ordinary method of mounting is not suitable to young horses I think. The best method is to take the reins in the left hand and to take hold of a lock of the mane in the left hand and to take hold of a lock of the mane about half way down the neck with them, or to rest the hand holding them about half way down the neck if the mane is hogged. The right hand should be on the pommel of the sadle instead of on the cantle. If the cantle is grasped the hand must be moved to the pommel before the rider can sit down and if the horse make an unexpected movement at the moment the hand is moving the rider may lose his equilibrium. It is better to take hold of the pommel at first. Mr. Fillis, the great school rider, takes the left snaffle rein in the left hand and the right rein in the right hand. He is therefore able to control the horse's movements even while mounting. He has the reins just so tight that he can lightly feel the mouth while grasping the mane with his left and the pommel with his right hand. If the horse is inclined to swing his quarters away from you the right rein should be felt more strongly than the left, and the left more strongly than the right if the quarters are swung in towards you. If the horse will not stand, take the reins in the left hand and also grasp in it the cheek and brow pieces of the bridle where they join, and take the pommel in the right hand. The horse can only walk round you as long as you hold the bridle thus and is very easily mounted. A bad horse can be made quite quiet to mount by means of the halter twitch to be described later.

When mounting care should be taken that the toe does not touch the horse's side until he has been taught not to resent pressure from it. The rider should rise slowly on the stirrup, pause for a moment to be sure that the horse is steady, and then pass the leg smoothly over and sit down quietly in the saddle. A young horse should be mounted and dismounted several times in succession until it stands quite steadily to mount. Obedience in this respect should be insisted on. When in a saddle the rider should allow the horse to stand still, or make it do so, for a minute or so before moving off and when he does start should do so very quietly. To leap at a horse and come down with a bump, like a monkey getting on a dog, and then to move off at a fast or uncollected pace will unsteady any horse, even an old stager.

The young horse should be mounted first in the school, if there is one, and should be walked quietly round it. It is important that he should be kept moving forwards. He cannot do any thing very serious as long as he is going to his front. If he runs backwards he should be turned round, and to turn a horse round and round is a very good defence as long as he is trying to rear or buck. He cannot rear if his hind legs are moving. The horse that has been well schooled in the long reins is not likely to make any fuss as long as the rider sits very quietly and does not ask him to do anything much until he has got used to the weight on his back. It is good to have a trained horse to lead the young one at first as he is almost sure to follow quietly. The first lessons should be short to avoid any danger of hurting the young horse's back or galling him with the girths. A young, soft horse galls very readily. As soon as the horse carries his rider quietly he may be ridden in large circles and turned from one rein to the other, a trained horse going in front if available.

The young one should be taught to do his riding school work in the breaking snaffle first. When he works well in the snaffle he can be bitted. The curb chain should be loose at first and gradually tightend as the horse becomes used to it.

At first a rein should be taken in each hand and no attempt should be made to ride with both the reins in one hand until the horse obeys the two-hand aids.

For the first few days the horse should be put through his lesson in the long reins before being ridden and should not be mounted until his back is down. This saves any amount of fighting and trouble.

The horse should be made to walk out in the riding school and a slow school walk should not be adopted until the horse has acquired the habit of striding out freely. The school trot and canter are necessarily slow paces so as to ensure handiness and control. The horse should be quite steady and correct in his turns and circles at the walk before he is asked to do them at the trot, and at the trot before he is promoted to the canter. In all turns the outer leg should be applied more strongly than the inner one which should be used to keep the horse from passaging away from the outer leg and to preserve the pace. The preponderance of pressure will vary at every turn. The two legs are used to keep the horse on the course chosen and to keep him right up to his bit and enough pressure for that purpose must be used. The idea of the leg aids is that the horse can be taught to give way to a spur, whip, or pressure applied to his side. Hence if I wish my horse to pass to the right I, in addition to the other aids, apply my left leg to his side. If he tries to pass to the right and I do not wish him to do so I "hold him up" by pressure of the right leg. If he takes no notice of the pressure I apply the spur. By drawing back the leg before applying the pressure I affect the haunches more than the forehand. An intelligent appreciation of these principles will soon enable the beginner to use his legs with great benefit to his control over his horse. Again the application of one's weight has a great deal to do with horsemanship. If I wish a young horse to passage to the right I lean over to the right. This has the effect of upsetting his equilibrium and he puts out a leg to restore it. But my weight is all on his right shoulder so it is easier for him to pass his left leg across than to move his right, and this is exactly what I want him to do. As my right rein pulls him to the right, my left rein pushes his neck towards the right, my weight pulls him over to the right, and my left leg pushes his quarters towards the right he moves to the right in one piece. I lean forwards if I wish my horse to advance or to increase his speed and I lean backwards if I wish him to stop. In the same way when avoiding a horse along a man "goes with his horse," that is to say that he leans forward a little and allows his weight to lengthen the horse's stride by throwing his centre of gravity further forward. If my horse is galloping and I wish to stop him I lean further back and I oppose my weight as much as possible to the forward thrust of his quarters, letting my weight go further back instead of further forward at each propulsion, and thus make his limbs act as a mechanical disadvantage. A horse who is always ridden in this way will slacken his speed as soon as the weight is thus opposed to him and, if not excited, will pull up without any further aids. It is by such means that the young horse must be controlled and educated in the riding school. If no regular school is available a Manege marked out on the grass of the local maidan is all that is absolutely necessary. The size of a full school is sixty yards by twenty. The width should not be materially reduced but the length need not be more than forty yards for a small number of horses. The main points are that the Manege should not be too large and that it should be remote, if possible, from traffic or from anything likely to distract the horse's attention from their work.

The turns and circles in the school at the walk and trot are extremely simple but none the less great care should be taken to see that they are correctly executed before going on to the work at a canter. If it is a polo pony that is being trained he should not be worked at the trot once he has been promoted to cantering work as a polo pony should not be encouraged to trot at all. For chargers a great deal of the work should be at the trot as it looks very bad if a charger breaks on parade when the regiment is trotting. When the horse is first started at a canter cane should be taken that he leads with the leg which is next the middle of the school. If your left side is next the wall you are said to be on the right rein because from that position all turns must be made to the right. When you are on the right rein your horse should be leading with his off foreleg. To make him start off with this leg we should first collect the horse and get him well up to his bit at a walk. To do this we must press him up with the legs. Then we carry the hands a little to the left with slightly more tension on the right than on the left rein and at the same time apply extra pressure with the legs the left leg pressing harder than the right and being drawn a little further back. These are the correct aids but sometimes the horse will disobey them and start off on the wrong leg, "cantering false" as they say in the schools. If this occurs pull him up, steady him at the walk, and set him going at again. As soon as he starts correctly make much of him and after a turn or two round the school let him walk for a little. This should be practised on both reins until the horse will start with whichever leg is required of him. If he disregards the drawn back leg opposite to the side from which the lead is required the spur should emphasise the pressure. Having obtained the lead with the proper leg we should keep the horse from changing without orders by maintaining the feel on the inner rein and the pressure by the outward leg, and should keep the horse on a rather small circle. To change from one rein to the other correctly so as to make the horse change its leg as it turns we should act as follows. Say one is circling to the left, feeling a little should be leading over slightly to the left, feeling both reins but the left one rather more strongly than the right, the right leg drawn back and feeling the horse as much as the particular animal requires, and the left leg preventing the horse from passaging to the left. One wishes to change on to the right rein and to make the horse change his leg at the same time, so, simultaneously, one makes the following movements just as the horse completes one of the strides. One slightly increases the feel on both reins transferring the major pressure from the left rein to the right one, carries the hand holding the reins a little to the right, throws the weight of the body over to the right by leaning over to that side, and applies the drawn back left leg. The right leg should hold up the horse and prevent it from overdoing the turn. A little practice will shew the beginner the moment at which these changes of aids should be made. They should come the instant one stride is completed so that the change is made between that stride and the next. In a short time the horse will change at a mere suggestion of the aids if he is kept in practice, and I have had a horse that would canter a figure of eight with the correct changes of leg by means of the leg aids only, the reins lying on his neck. After the horse has learned to change correctly on the turn he should be taught to change without diverging from the straight line. This is done by giving the signal for the change and by holding him up with the inner leg so as to prevent his turning as he changes. This requires a little skill and the beginner should be au fait at the changes on the turn before undertaking it. The horse, too, should be well advanced for this practice excites raw horses a good deal for some reason or other and even trained ones are apt to increase their pace when first instructed in it. If the horse becomes excited pull him back to a walk, steady him, and start again.

In the riding school the pace should be a very collected one. Eight miles an hour is the maximum for the riding school trot or canter but the slower the canter the better. By degrees the horse can be got back to a canter of five miles an hour and some very well shaped ones can be taught to canter four. These last can be taught to perform any military riding school evolution whatsoever. It is this very slow canter which collects a horse and gives him a mouth and carriage. It cannot be attained all at once but it comes by degrees and with it come manners and handiness.

I have heard people say:—"Why should I teach my horse to canter slowly? I don't want to canter slowly." This shews an entire misconception of the idea of schooling. The idea is not to make a horse slow but to make him handy. If you cannot collect your horse your control over him is limited to getting him to go more or less where you want him to at more or less the pace you prefer. With a schooled horse you put him exactly where you choose at exactly the pace you demand of him provided that it is within his powers. The idea that schooling will make a horse a slow hack is wrong. A tournament polo pony is not troubled with the slows and he has had schooling enough. No horse will canter at five miles an hour unless he is made to. It is tiring to his backs and rearing muscles. But the thoroughly schooled horse will go at any pace desired by his rider on the slightest hint. He will stop by word of command or on the exhibition of the proper aids and will turn "on a sixpence" while your unschooled horse requires as much room to stop in as a goods train and as much room to turn in as an omnibus.

The beginner will find it tiring enough to get a slow canter out of his horse at first. If he does not send him well up to his bit by leg pressure he will drop into a trot. The constant use of spur or whip to keep the horse up to his bit is a mistake. Pressure of the legs is the proper aid and the spurs should only be used if the horse disobeys the pressure. When they are used they should be applied just behind the girth and should be left so that the horse may not require the application again for some time to come. They should be used to inflict punishment for neglect of the leg aids rather than as aids in themselves. The high school riders have to use them as aids as the difficult feats they demand from their horses can only be obtained by means of the spur, but for all ordinary riding purposes a well-bred active horse will often go for a year at a time without needing a touch of them. Spurs should always be worn when pigsticking as they often help to twist a horse out of a pig's way, but it should be remembered that some horses will stop and lean against a spur pressed into them and so get cut by the boar. A quick jab and not a prolonged pressure is what is required.

A short man should use short-necked spurs. His legs are so close to his horse's sides that with a long-necked spur he may touch the horse unintentionally. On the other hand a man with long legs will hardly be able to reach the proper spot, just behind the girths, with a very short spur.

In the riding school the whip is used but little as all the aids are given with hand and heel. In breaking a horse for a lady to ride the pressure of the whip should be used instead of that of the right leg in all the school exercises, otherwise its use is confined to tapping a leg to make the horse move it or to exercise on foot such as making the horse circle round the breaker who holds his head. This last exercise is used to teach the horse to pass away from the whip instead of leading against it as raw horses are apt to do.

The improvement from day to day in a young horse while going through the riding school is generally marked. He may seem no better at the end of one lesson than he was at the beginning of it but, if he is being worked in the right way, he will be more amenable on the next occasion. If a horse is rough and troublesome I like to put him through his lesson in the long reins first and then try to get him to repeat it mounted. If he is still troublesome back he goes into the long reins, is turned outwards about seven thirty times, and is then put through his lesson again. He rarely refuses to repeat it when mounted after this discipline provided he clearly understands what is required of him. Patience and equanimity are of the first importance combined, of course, with firmness. If a horse finds that you will put up with nonsense he will give you plenty of it. If you do not bully him a bit he will bully you.

Now work should always be taken in hand at the end of the school and cessation of work should reward obedience. It is better to repeat a lesson at frequent intervals than to go on worrying a young horse with it after he has obeyed. Often a young one will take say four paces at the passage and fight at the fifth. He must then be fought with until he gives in and unnecessary friction and ill feeling is caused, whereas had the breaker been satisfied with three or four paces and made much of and dismissed the horse there would have been no trouble in the next lesson.

To succeed we must take up new work only after making sure of what has already been taught and must be quite sure that the horse understands what is required of him and that our aids are correctly given. Obedience should always be rewarded with a pat on the neck given instantly.

As I have said I am against striking mares and it is not necessary to do so if full use is made of the discipline of the long reins. To cure coltishness in a gelding a good licking with a stout stick is considered good practice by some. If you make up your mind that the horse requires punishment go at him so vigorously as to frighten him. Shake him up with the reins, spur him hard just behind the girths, "shout" into his ear, and lay into him. You should endeavour to scare him out of resistance. If a horse starts rearing or bucking he is certainly the better of a thrashing but the thrashing should, if possible, be administered by a man behind him with a whip or cane rather than by the man on his back. The horse will try to get away from the man behind him and to do that must stop rearing or bucking. His readiest way of getting rid of the man on his back is to buck him off. "Shouting at" a horse that shews signs of stopping to play up or of cutting a fence is sometimes efficacious.

The whip should not be used heavily to urge a horse on. The least touch of it should suffice for this purpose and if it does not the spur is the proper aid to use. After an application of the spur a threatening movement of the heel will probably suffice. If the horse is regularly whipped he will fear the whip and probably also the sword, spear, and hunting crop. A horse should be trained to fear nothing that his rider carries or uses, but this result can hardly be attained if the whip is used with severity. If a young horse is punished for naughtiness such as trying to bump his rider off he knows what he is licked for and takes it like a man if he is not knocked about at other times. I cannot repeat too often that this does not apply to mares which will not put up either with the whip or spur to any great extent. It is for this reason that the great school riders never attempt to break in mares for their work.

A horse should not be whipped for stumbling. He should be collected with bridle and leg pressure and then kept "awake." To hit him is bad because fear of the whip makes him start forward before he has collected himself after stumbling so that he is very likely on rough going to scramble, stumble again, and fall.

It is also bad to hit a horse for shying. He will only shy worse next time, and will dislike the object he shied at more than ever once he connects it in his mind with a thrashing. A horse tries to look at a thing he is afraid of preparatory to clearing out if it should prove to be dangerous. He therefore tries to turn his head towards the object and his quarters away from it. The rider should frustrate his efforts by drawing his head gently away from the object and pressing with the outer leg to prevent him from swinging out his quarters. He should not be roughly forced up to anything he is afraid of but if he can be induced to go quietly up and smell it so much the better. In the long reins he can be driven up to anything, and it is a good plan to drive the young horse within sight of street traffic in them until he gets used to it.

The young horse should always be ridden in a standing martingale until his mouth is made, and afterwards if he tries to get his head up. Many Arab polo ponies would be unplayable but for the martingale.

Running reins are of great value when first riding young horses. They can be made of folded scrap like the long reins. They should be attached to the front Ds or to the girth tags of the saddle, passed through the rings of the bridoon, and brought back to the hand. They are to be used in addition to the other reins and only if required to keep a horse's head up or to make him bend his neck inwards or to either hand, or to prevent his running away. With them a horse cannot get his neck down to buck. If a horse is very stubborn in refusing to bend his neck the running reins can be turned into side reins by being secured to the saddle when tightened sufficiently to make him bend his neck a little. He may then be led about or may be left to play with his bit for a time. With the side reins a snaffle with a bunch of keys tied to the middle of the mouthpiece gives good results as the horse plays with the keys and thus mouths himself.

But all these appliances are required in exceptional cases only. The long reins and the reins and the riding school will make almost any well bred and well shaped horse pleasant to ride. Breeding is half the battle or more. Personally I never keep a horse which is not thoroughbred. Horses that are not fast enough to win are often to be picked up for a mere song from racing stables and make far and away the best mounts for a poor man provided he is a moderate weight and has the skill, time, and patience to teach them manners. They are, of course, hardly beginners' mounts to start with but they must be real bad ones if the methods of training mentioned above do not bring them to hand at last. They should first have a dose of physic and when well cleaned out should be put on to soft food and not ridden for a month or so in order that they may grow fat and lazy and that their mouths may become tender. They should then be put into the long reins and gradually broken as though they had never been ridden before in their lives. Just as much care should be taken as with a colt. I have broken lots in this way and have never had a failure, though I must admit that I get them as quiet as possible to begin with. The worst I ever tackled had not been ridden for eight months and was as wild as a hawk when I got her. She is now a trained Cavalry charger, but she was nearly six months breaking of which the first two were entirely in the long reins, and she was a year in the riding school before being finally dismissed. At first she bucked, pulled, and shied very badly, but when I sold her she was quite quiet and a grand hack. Another of mine will do her riding school work without a bit in her mouth being guided by reins buckled to the rings of the halter.

A minister was assigned to a small parish in England not long ago, and upon his arrival found his new field of labour all that could be desired, with the exception of old Bill Johnson. Old Bill was very much addicted to looking upon the wine when it was red, and the new minister at once announced his intention of bringing him to see the error of his ways.

"Well, of course, we know you mean right, parson," one of the elders said, slowly stroking his white beard; "but it would be a mighty bad thing for the place if old Bill was to quit drinking."

"Why, what do you mean, brother" the puzzled minister asked.

"Well, parson, it's like this," the elder explained. "There ain't a more convincing talker nowhere than old Bill. Every time he gets drunk and sobers down he gets somebody to sign the pledge with him and the other fellow pretty nearly always keeps it."

Page—"Please, sir, I want to give notice to leave."

Old Gent.—"Tut, tut! What's the matter with you boys. That will make four of you I've had in two months."

Page—"Well, sir when you have pages you must expect leaves."

LIVING BIRD PHOTOGRAPHY.

ALTHOUGH we do not range ourselves on the side of those amiable enthusiasts who affect to believe that the rifle will one day give place to the camera, and that the stalker of big game will be content with pictures instead of the trophies of his quarry, there can be no doubt that the photographing of living animals in their native haunts has a great future. What can be done in this way among big game is admirably shown in Captain Stigand's well known African book, and likewise by Mr. Kearton's East African Photographs. To photograph big game animals in their native jungles is, however, an expensive and difficult, not to say dangerous, matter, involving great preparations, the fitting out of special expeditions, and the sacrifice of a vast amount of time.

On the other hand, live bird photography involves comparatively little preparation besides the acquisition of a suitable camera and a thorough practical acquaintance with all the details of out-door photography. Moreover, much work can frequently be done within a distance of a mile or so from the artist's own residence, if not indeed within the confines of his compound or garden, so that spare hours can be conveniently utilised. Of course in the case of the rarer and more shy denizens of the woods and swamps longer expeditions and a much greater expenditure of time and trouble are necessary ; and in no instance can satisfactory results be attained without considerable practice, combined with unlimited patience and attention to details.

In the British Isles, of course, a vast amount of work in the way of bird photography has already been accomplished, and there is scarcely a species of which pictures have not already been obtained. In India, on the other hand, the ground is comparatively untrodden, and there are probably hundreds of more or less beautiful species which have not yet "posed" to the camera. To those who may be inclined to take up an interesting pastime of this nature—which might in many cases be made to yield some financial return—we can cordially recommend Mr. Beetham's little work, Photography for Bird Lovers, which although primarily written for workers at home, will in the main, with suitable allowances for local conditions, serve the purposes of photographers in this country.

Very properly, the author does not pretend to teach his pupils the art of photography, with which he presumes them to be thoroughly and practically acquainted ; and he therefore contents himself with pointing out the type of camera best suited to the purpose, and indicating some of the more ordinary kinds of accessory apparatus likely to be required.

After having done this, Mr. Beetham starts at once on the practical aspect of his subject, commencing with nest-photography, which, as he insists, ought to be the first line of study for the beginner. For, as he observes, "it is obvious that if we cannot make a really satisfactory picture of a nest, an operation which can be performed at our own time and leisure and without the hindrance of a screen, it is nothing short of presumption to attempt the portrayal of a sitting bird."

"The variety of type of subjects in nests," he adds, "is enormous, and there is ample scope here to acquire that general handiness and adaptibility which are the prime factors in all bird-work. These subjects will serve to show how the kind of result desired varies in a marked degree according to the subject; sometimes a soft, almost flat negative will best render the idea of protective colouring, while at others a brilliant one may be required to bring out the markings of the eggs, the materials of the nest, or some other special point of interest. But the aim in every case should be to reproduce the subject as faithfully as possible."

In many cases, at any rate, the picture should not be restricted to the immediate neighbourhood of the nest, but should include a considerable proportion of the surroundings, in order to convey an adequate idea of the nature of the country in which the species breeds. This is more especially the case where the nest is made amid rocks, on the shore, by the side of a lake or swamp, on an open moor, or by the seaside.

From the nest and eggs there is, of course, an almost imperceptile transition to the young birds, which should next claim the attentions of the beginner however. Here the operator is at once confronted with much greater difficulties than any previously encountered, from the obvious fact that he has to do with active in place of still life. Their are, however, great differences in the behaviour of young birds when brought face to face with the camera, some being just as obliging as others are annoying.

"It is always," observes the author, "a great mistake to handle chicks unless absolutely obliged to do so. If they have already left the nest of their own accord, it is well to take them just as they are found, even though it may be difficult and occupy much time, for once they are frightened it is long before they settle down and become themselves again; and even when at length they are apparently at ease, they readily take alarm again, and look scared and gawky."

When, after having passed through his experiences with nests and young to his own satisfaction, the beginner turns his attention to the adult birds, he will find that there is more than a single mode of procedure. The first of these is stalking—a method applicable to two classes of birds. "In the first group may be placed those birds which, through their tameness, lack of fear, or downright stupidity, allow us to approach them closely. For the most part these are sea-birds, which choose for their home the lofty cliffs, or the less bleak and inaccessible parts of the coast. In the second group may be included such birds as allow of our approach, not because of their indifference, courage, or imbecility, but because their instinct tells them—particularly during the breeding season—to "lie low" in hiding, in the hope that they will be passed by unnoticed. These, unlike the former, are most certainly alarmed at our presence, but rely for safety on concealment rather than on flight."

The second type of wild-bird photography is by the concealment method, under which heading is comprised the great bulk of the operator's work. In the words of the author, this is real bird-photography, the other branches of the art being merely secondary. "Certainly it is, by this method that most of those delightful pictures portraying the intimate home life of our shyer birds are obtained. But it is not only for the excellence of its pictures that this method is to be upheld, it has another and perhaps greater attribute: it affords a lengthy and uninterrupted opportunity for studying the habits and actions of birds at such close quarters, and under such favourable conditions, as were never thought possible before the advent of the hobby.

"No branch of the work is more varied in its methods and adaptations, but there is one fundamental idea—to hide ourself and camera, either together or apart, as near as possible to the nest and then to await in quiet the bird's return.

"There are two quite distinct principles of working, differing much in their methods and advantages. The first, which may be termed the double method, is to conceal the camera close to where the bird is expected to appear, while the operator is in turn hidden separately at some convenient distance. The second or combined method is for the photographer to hide himself and the camera in the same screen."

To follow the author into the details of these methods of working, would, of course, be quite out of place: and for such information we must refer our readers to the book itself, which ought to be in the hands of every owner of a really good camera.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

We still continue to race under great disadvantages in Calcutta owing to the want of proper rain and the hot stifling weather which more nearly approximates to what we are used to in the end of September and the early part of October than the far from unpleasant climate of the earlier part of the monsoon. A few showers have fallen and have made the sand gallop better than it was a little while ago, but the hurdle-race courses are still iron-bound and consequently dangerous both to horse and man. Added to this we have a particularly robust brand of "hurdle" in Calcutta and as these flights have now been up for some considerable time and have got well bedded into the hard ground, they are rendered absolutely rigid and a good deal stiffer than any of their kind in any part of the world excepting, perhaps, the French ones at Auteuil. They are in fact young steeplechase fences about 3ft. 8ins. high and are fashioned out of a very strongly made sheep hurdle reinforced with a fronting of thick brushwood bound on and kept in place by another "false" three-barred hurdle in front. There is therefore a double set of rails with a strong brushwood fence in between, the brushwood running up to about six inches only above the top bars of the hurdles. The Calcutta hurdle is built with an extra long foot on it and the uprights are as thick as the posts of many posts and rails. The nett result is an obstacle that is perfectly rigid and which at the present moment a horse has about as much chance of going through as he has of going through a stone wall. We are all for abolishing flimsiness and we think this pattern of hurdle is well worthy the attention of other racing executives, but at the present moment with the ground in such a cast-iron condition we think it would be a good plan to have the hurdles taken down and then put up again after slightly loosening the soil in which they stand. The average hurdler will give the obstacle a friendly rap now and again and in England and elsewhere it will give and will not turn him over unless he jumps bang into it: in Calcutta a horse that hits them either comes down or is sent staggering for several strides after he lands and it knocks a tremendous lot of steam out of him. But as a rule even a slight mistake will mean a fall as things are at the moment and a fall on ground that is as hard as the high road. We have only had six hurdle races so far this season and there have been five very heavy falls which, considering that the fields have been very small, is a high percentage. If the going were soft this would not signify in the least, but we are racing under quite abnormal conditions. Under the circumstances and as the supply of jumpers is distinctly limited our suggestion for making these obstacles slightly less rigid may be considered worthy of the Stewards' attention. There were three heavy falls on Saturday last and they were only non-productive of "results" by sheer good luck, but in each case both the horses and the men who rode them were severely jarred and shaken, as was only natural meeting the ground at the speed they were going. Both Queen of Hearts and Suffragette came down in the Amateur Horse Hurdle Race but neither Mr. Pierson nor Mr. Bletsoe sustained more than minor injuries, both however sprained their shoulders and Mr. Bletsoe put a thumb out, and when Spec fell with McNeilage in the Open Pony Hurdle Race both of them were very sore after it but luckily fell clear of one another.

The afternoon was in addition to these accidents by no means free of other incident and in the first race on the card, the Club Plate for ponies and in which both Sidonia and May Kenley were equally fancied, the latter was beaten, but the Stewards considered it necessary to hold an enquiry. The subsequent explanation has, we believe, been deemed quite sufficient and personally we must confess that we saw small reason for any suspicion, for May Kenley, in spite of an allowance of 11lbs. could not improve upon her previous Saturday's form and was well beaten. We did not think that 11lbs. would bring the pair together and we should be inclined to think that even a 16lb. allowance, or if, in other words the pair had met at level weights last Saturday, Sidonia would still have won. As far as the other two runners were concerned, Portland and Lionel, they might just as well have not been in the race at all as they were both absolutely outclassed.

Six out of the seven left in went for the Open Pony Hurdle Handicap, Shannon Lass being the absentee. They were probably very wise not to knock a good one about on such hard going with a big weight up, but as things went she must have won. Major Crawley came down a few days before and was, we believe, to have ridden the mare himself. Major Crawley was at one time in the front rank of cross country G.R's at home and he can go back to a good long time—one of his best exploits having been a win at the old Croydon course, where despite the fact that his horse's bridle came off in a fall at the last fence, he caught him—by the tail first of all and then by the stirrup leather—got aboard again and keeping him straight with his whip, won his race! Major Crawley was then a subaltern and was one of a lot of very hard-riding Corinthians who blossomed about that time.

With Shannon Lass out of the way there was a strong set at once made in favour of Spec and they came at him hot and strong both ways till a slight revulsion set in favour of Bandy Leg and more money coming in for Mr. Walker's pony his price quickly shortened, till the ringmen were betting 2 to 1 each of two 4 to 1 bar two and a wager of 30 to 1 the outsider Ormley was booked to small money. The race was full of interest, particularly to those riding in it, and some of the jockeys said afterwards that they had rarely experienced such a rough passage, both Ormley and Albatross, according to the complainants, being the culprits. Ormley, Spec and Bandy Leg were out in front all the way and were joined at the home turn by Albatross who came on full of running from the second last fence and was up amongst them going to the last one. It was here alleged that Ormley interfered with all three of the others and brought Spec down. Ormley got clear and won by half a length only from Bandy Leg and Albatross who dead-heated. The jockey of Albatross promptly lodged an objection against the winner for a cross at the last fence, but as jumping rules do not take any notice of crosses at fences and only of crosses on the flat the objection was thrown out. Ormley ran very green and Barker who rode him has not ridden much in public, though he is a very plucky lad and did very well on this unschooled one and there is no doubt that he was in a measure answerable for the scrimmage at the last fence, though he was not the only offender. This race it is worth while noting was run two seconds slower than when Loch Lily won over this course in 2mins. 38secs. on identical going on the first day. Ormley who ran in that race was never in the hunt and jumped badly. He showed considerably improved form in this department on Saturday last. He is owned by the popular German banker Mr. Gutschke, the owner of Wise Hawk, and is a promising little jumper. He now, however, goes out of the amateur class where on this running he would have been very dangerous next Saturday.

Despite prognostications to the contrary a fairly good field came out for the Amateur Hurdle Handicap, Pacific, Levi and To Kalon being the only three out of the eleven left in who declined the contest. Here again there was an upset of calculations, as Jaffa Girl was much fancied and next to her Reinforcement, who had run up to To Kalon the previous week. Fame, the ultimate winner, was at eights all through the piece and also at longer odds. Jaffa Girl beat herself jumping and tired away to nothing just before the last one and Fame, who was lucky to get through on the inside, had no difficulty in defeating Reinforcement and The Comet. The rest were all well beaten, Queen of Hearts and Suffragette fell as already recorded. Fame's last performance over a jump course was when he ran third in March this year in the Indian Grand Military Chase at Meerut, 2 miles, to Councillor and Confederation, to both of whom he was giving weight away, but there was not much behind them and Captain Ormond Winter's Confederation was about the best one in the race. Confederation won twice at Umballa, beating our old friend Jasper, at one time owned by Major H. N. Holden and subsequently by H. E. Lord Minto and he had also won over hurdles at Pindi in January. Fame used to be owned at one time by the late Mr. Rothschild of Calcutta and must now be a somewhat venerable old party. He won in very good form however and was nicely ridden by young Mr. W. Thomas, a son of Mr. William Thomas and the only one amongst the Young Brigade who has shown any real promise. He sat nice and still on the horse and rode a quiet patient race.

The Kidderpore Plate was a scene of more disaster for the followers of the favourites, as the much-fancied Mahoney Boy, after giving his backers a very uncomfortable moment when he got away badly and then started to make his run, got home a short head from Craigendorrie only to lose the race by his jockey Mr. Evers being unable to draw the weight by a pound and a bit. Craigendorrie and Mahoney Boy were level in the betting and there was money for both of them right up to the end. Mahoney Boy got away very badly and at one time it looked as though victory was quite out of the question, as Craigendorrie had a commanding lead from all the others at the home turn and Mahoney Boy was then not in sight. When he got going, however, he came up hand over fist and just got up as we say. How the short weight came about is one of those things no one can quite tell and we can only suppose that a small 1lb. cloth must have been left out when the horse was being saddled as Mr. Evers was scarcely likely to waste during the race. Great was the disappointment of Mahoney Boy's backers: but the race affords us proof of the fact that this horse is quite as good as everyone thought that he was. He showed a great turn of foot at the finish and the time of the race, 1min. 34secs., on the sand, is not bad and is nearly four seconds faster than the time for this race last year on very similar going when Tana won with 9st. defeating True Love 10st. 5lb.

The Entally Plate was booked a good thing for the top-weight Politesse, late Lady Polite, and who was racing over hurdles last year at the "Parks" and she had no difficulty whatever in winning from Levi and Lah, who finished close together and close up to the winner who however was hard held. In this race they first of all went for Levi and he was going very well in the market till one bookmaker ventured to open his shoulders and hit out at Politesse and then a change speedily came o'er the spirit of the dream and the money poured on to the mare. It was a good thing evidently and is a bit too good for the hunters it had opposed to it!

The Selling Race was a runaway victory for Proprietor who won all the way, his better-backed stable companion Bird of Freedom never being able to get on terms. There can now be no doubt as to which is the better of this pair though the previous week's contest left it in doubt. They were at level weight last Saturday week and Bird of Freedom, who got off badly, was beaten three-quarters of a length. Last Saturday Proprietor was giving the mare 5lb. and she could not get to within closer distance of him than three and a half lengths. After the race when Proprietor was put up for sale there was some brisk bidding and eventually the horse passed into the possession of Mr. J. D. Scott at Rs. 1,700 or Rs. 950 over the upset price of Rs. 750, the fund therefore benefiting to the extent of half the surplus and the owner of Haloya to a similar degree. Proprietor is looking much better than he has done ever since he has been in India and having struck form we shall probably bear from him again ere long. Details of the racing appear in our usual columns.

The Perth (W. A.) Sunday Times has the following news of J. Trenoweth, the well-known Australian steeplechase jockey who was in India last season:—"The well-known jockey 'Joe' Trenoweth, who was disqualified by the stipendiary stewards for two years at the recent Kalgoorlie meeting and who vainly sought a hearing by the appeal board, has sued the W.A.T.C. through Messrs. Haynes and Co. Yesterday morning the legal firm aforesaid served a writ on the chairman and committee of the W.A.T.C., claiming damages for wrongful disqualification, and an injunction to prevent the committee from further proceeding with the disqualification or publishing the same. Messrs. Parker and Parker have accepted the writ on behalf of the Turf Club." It is not very often that these means are adopted to obtain a reversal of the decision of a body of turf legislators, in fact we cannot call to mind a single case of its having been done within our memory.

In addition to the mare Cherry Hackle that Mr. Galstaun has entered at Poona he has recently bought another one of very much the same class, Brogue by Symington out of Goody Two Shoes. Symington comes of one of the outside families, No. 20, but he is a very nicely bred one all the same as he is by Ayrshire No. 8 out of Siphonia No. 20 who is by St. Simon No. 11 out of Palmflower (The Palmer—Jenny Diver). This mare Brogue won once last year as a two-year-old, the Fairfield T. Y. O. Plate, £100, ½ mile at Stockton, but her best performances are this year, as she has shown that she can get over a distance of ground and they say she is just the sort of mare that will win one of our principal handicaps at the back end of the Calcutta season. She started business this year by winning the 1 mile Three-Year-Old Handicap (£164) at Alexandra Park and with 8st. 4lb. defeated Chateau Vert 8st., who was a strong favourite, and Phereneus 8st. 6lb. She then ran third at Birmingham in the 6 furlongs Packington Three-Year-Old Handicap with 8st. to the filly by Cornstalk out of Sagittari 7st. and Avaran 6st. 3lb. and last of all second to the four-year-old Wavebird 8st. 13lb., her own weight 7st. 4lb. in the 2 mile Durham Plate at Hurst Park, Betoi 8st. 3lb. third. Wavebird only won a short head and it was shortly after this that Brogue passed into Mr. Galstaun's possession. She has, we gather, been already shipped from Liverpool by an Anchor Liner along with one or two others the names of which have not so far been mentioned.

Mumford is reported to be on his way out with about a dozen "of all sorts," but nothing of much note so we gather.

In the Poona first entries there appear several names of newly imported English horses amongst them Mr. Galstaun's now three-year-old Cherry Hackle, Mr. R. R. S.'s Dumella, Mr. F. M. Garda's Lady Erica, Mr. A. S. Oomer's Matiyela and Eva, H. H. the Kour Sahib of Patiala's three Bull's Run, Hamara and Chestnut Park, also a pony Spring Daisy (14-1¾), Mr. Goculdas' Boat Song and Borgie (14-2) Mr. Heath's Elster. The principal of these are Cherry Hackle, Dumella and Matiyela but none of them are of any very great class and can only be said to be fair plating form. Cherry Hackle is a three-year-old bay filly by Cerasus—Rose Hackle and she won four small races of no importance last year out of six appearances and she was only once out of a place. Her record is as follows:—Won the 5 furlongs Hopeful Stakes, £98, at the Curragh, beating Borgie (since measured as a pony) and Mistral Girl; won 5 furlongs two-year-old Selling Plate, £92, Phœnix Park, beating Go Back and Cup of Tea; won 5 furlongs Hopeful Plate, £66, at Tralee, beating Kilshane and Lady Fitz; won 6 furlongs Maryborough Stakes at the Curragh, beating Oregon and The Witch; second 5 furlongs Nursery Plate, Baldoyle, to Rifle.

Dumella is a four-year-old chestnut colt by Persimmon—Princess Mary and last season he won the 1 mile Richmond Plate, £416, Hurst Park, beating Salamanca, Wood Nymph, Hackler's Glow and Abattis; he ran third in the Great Foal Stakes at Newmarket, 1¼ miles, to Thalia 7st. 12lb., Yellow Slave 8st. 9lb., Dumella 8st. 12lb., Cardinal Beaufort 8st. 9lb. fourth. This may be taken to be a fairly good performance considering what Yellow Slave and Cardinal Beaufort have subsequently done. He dead-heated for the 1 mile Autumn Handicap at Birmingham with Atropia who was giving him 2lb.; Roedean third.

Matiyela is a four-year-old chestnut colt by Chaleureux out of Throstle and last season he won the 1 mile 3 furlongs Packington Maiden Plate, £100, beating Cartoon and William Cope; he ran

The entries for Saturday's racing in Calcutta, the fourth day of the Monsoon Meeting, are very good and are not marred by an inordinate number of double and treble entries, though in one race, the newly-framed Strand Plate, out of the 27 entered 13 are otherwise engaged. But as of these thirteen a good number will probably declare in favour of this event we shall still have a big enough field to warrant a division and we suggest that the following would be a very equitable one : Division I :—Mahoney Boy, Scotch Girl, Little Meg, Bird of Freedom, Ocean, Mallinyook, Culverin, Politesse, Saloon, Proprietor, Lasso, Annahean and Isabela. Division II :—Lah, Levi, Farthing Bun, Lady Thirza, Frank, Moira, Vylands, Asteroid, J. E. A., Pacific, Fleeting Felicity, Sidonia, Dooneen, Velodia. The Ellenborough Hurdle Plate has ten in and there are the materials for a very interesting contest with Craigendorrie, Tommy Daw, Maisonette, To Kalon and Foy for the handicapper to juggle with. When Craigendorrie beat Tommy Daw on the second day he was getting 7lbs. from Mr. Walker's horse and we compute that he gave Tommy Daw quite a 10lb. beating on top of this difference therefore leaving Tommy Daw at 10st. 13lb. we should if we were handicapping put Craigendorrie in at least 11st. 9lb. or preferably we should drop the scale down and put Craigendorrie 11st. 10lb. and Tommy Daw 11st. 0lb. Mount Dane did not run so we should probably leave him where he was or, taking into consideration his poor display on the flat last Saturday, put him in between Craigendorrie and Tommy Daw. Maisonette was so badly beaten that we should be tempted to take a big lump of weight off her. She was getting 7lb. from Tommy Daw last time. We should now give her 14lb. on a dry day and only 10lb. on a wet one. Foy would have to be on the same mark though as we consider he has lost all his form we should be inclined to take a liberty with him. The Amateur Pony Hurdle Handicap has eight in and Chas, Charge, Lola and Marconi are the best of them. The Belvedere Plate has 16 in and the Oriental Plate 10, almost all of these the old six and eightpences we have seen running already. The Second Pony Handicap has eleven and they are a good lot taking them all round. Sidonia, Miss Clare, Albatross, Mandeville, Shannon Lass being about the best of them.

We much regret to learn the news of the death of Mr. Harry Goldspink, the well-known bookmaker, who up to a few years ago was a very regular attendant at the Calcutta big meetings, but who of recent years had made Bombay and Western India his principal hunting ground. When double and treble event betting was legalised by the C. T. C. Mr. Goldspink used to have a monopoly of this business, but when it was banned he transferred his affections from Calcutta to Bombay. Mr. Goldspink was one of the oldest members of the Ring in India and was a great favourite. His cheery voice and his inexhaustible fund of wit and repartee will long be remembered and his death at the Sassoon Hospital, Poona, last Saturday, will come as an unwelcome shock to a very wide circle of racing friends all over India, and also in Australia.

We publish further on the first entries for the Army Cup, the Civil Service Cup and the Calcutta Turf Club Steeplechase to be held at the Lucknow Spring Meeting of 1912.

On account of the proposed visit of H. M. King George V., the dates of the Calcutta Races, First Meeting, have been altered to 23rd, 27th and 30th December 1911 and 3rd January 1912 and the dates of the Tollygunge Steeplechases have been altered to 6th and 11th January 1912.

Our Poona correspondent writes :—Heavy rain the previous day and night made the course fairly heavy for the Second Extra on Saturday, when there were again seven events and the exchanges more or less even. Amongst new arrivals is Mumford with a batch of horses from England, Penton and Ramshaw as well as another jockey. Bratton, who was out in the jump race. One of the sensations of the day was a disqualification for bumping, which happens so soon after the warning given to the jockeys during the week that it stands as an example, though there was no sort of suggestion of foul riding.

The day opened with the Sungam Plate, a mile and a half jump race, for which Circassian's Best seemed to be the class, though considerable confidence was placed in Bachelor's Knot, a chestnut we have not seen out before. The favourite made all the running from War Cloud and the one mentioned, but just when she seemed likely to win she broke down at the last jump, leaving Bachelor's Knot to hold War Cloud safe. Fresh from successes in Secunderabad, Utopian ran fairly well, and would have done better but for a blunder at the last jump but one.

Next the Captains' Plate, a half mile sprint with a field of six, and Tofic Pasha a class on his own. Daulat was thought to have a chance, then plenty of place money came for Brindley, but neither of them could even place. Daulat made the early running, but from the bend home Tofic Pasha was the only one in it. Dilerjung finished determinedly and beat Daulat for second place.

In the Arab Trial the old public favourite, Precious, was expected but Famous' recent easy win could not be overlooked, and he started nearly as short, with Tajilmulook next in demand. As things turned out, the race rested between the latter pair, who put too long a gap between themselves and Precious for him to make good. They were right away on their own five furlongs from home, and at the turn Famous was seen to be going easy, with the result that he was able to go away almost as he liked. Precious was a bad third and supposedly wants work.

The horse sprint seemed to be a very open race, but we soon had the favouritism settled for us, as a big commission came for Ruby Tin. He was said to have put up a wonderful gallop, and was thought so good that there was rather lukewarm support for Solution and Pincher. The favourite as a matter of fact soon passed Solution and Gallileo and led to the turn, but before the distance he began to show signs of distress and as they further approached the post he began to drop out of it, leaving Solution to stave off a hot finish by Lovania.

Obviously the Karli Plate rested between two, Mudkoor and Jehangir, but the race itself was not such a foregone conclusion. Azzad and Fado saw to the pace and as there was a fair crush at the turn Mudkoor may be said to have been lucky to get through so well. He came into the lead at about the distance, and was all out to keep in front from Zuffer Beg and Jehangir, who had had none too good a journey.

Several G. R.'s were out in the Welter Plate, in which the betting was pretty open between four, Mysore, Hyder Beg, Ghalyum and Burgomaster being the order on the boards. From the start Mysore took a slight lead from Hyder Beg, Macedonia and Young Japan next. As they entered the straight Hyder Beg drew up and palpably had the other beaten. Near the post danger threatened from Burgomaster along the rails, but he was just beaten, though the finish was erratic all round. An objection was lodged for bumping, and after rather a long wait the winner was disqualified.

The real upset of the day was left to the last race, one in which the winner seemed to stand out in Zoolphokar, who had won against a better class the last time. How uncertain even the best things are was made evident when the favourite was badly left. Saeed, Happy Land and then Ordinary made the pace, but so fast did Zoolphokar make up his ground that he was leading at the distance. It had been too much for him, however, and in the last dash Nasibdar came with a rattle to pip Ordinary on the post.

It drizzled again as we left the course, but we had to be thankful that during the racing it had been fine.

The Jockey Yussuff has had his license suspended for one month by the stewards of the W. I. T. C. Yussuf was carpetted on a charge of crossing in a race at the first extra meeting at Poona.

While giving Zoolphokar, one of Ali bin Talib's string, a gallop over the track at Poona last Friday, Ahmed the jockey was badly thrown over the rails and sustained severe injuries.

The Poona Horse Show will be held on the 8th and 11th September. Major J. H. M. Davie has undertaken the duties of Honorary Secretary and the Executive Committee consists of the following :—Surgeon-General Sloggett, C.B., C.M.G., Colonel H. F. M. The tournament rules of the Western India Football Association will be observed. Entries close on the 9th September 1911 and ties will be drawn on the 12th September 1911. All teams entering are entitled to send representatives to the drawing. Entrance fee, Rs. 20 for each team. Further particulars and information may be had on application to T. D. Parry or F. Hogan, Joint Honorary Secretaries.

The All-India cricket team scored a decisive victory over the North of Scotland. They made 401 for the loss of four wickets and declared, in response to 158, the first innings total of the Scottish team, who only compiled 104 in their second venture and were thus beaten by an innings and 139 runs. Meheromji made 150 and Salamuddin was not out with 120 to his credit. The Indians met the Scottish Cricket Union at the week end at Galashiels. Batting first the Indians were all out for 195, Ferguson, the fast Scottish bowler, taking 5 wickets for 36. The Scotch team made 250 in their first innings. Rain delayed the match but the Indians completed their second innings for 165, leaving their opponents with 111 runs to make to win. They scored 68 for three wickets when stumps were drawn and the match ended in a draw.

Appended are the results of important cricket matches played in England during the past week :—

Kent beat Sussex, at Brighton, by an innings and 129 runs.

The match between Leicestershire and Derbyshire at Chesterfield was abandoned owing to rain. Leicestershire led on the first innings, thus scoring three points.

Yorkshire beat Notts, at Hull, by 225 runs.

Warwickshire drew with Hants at Southampton ; Warwickshire winning on the first innings.

THE Simla Open Tennis Singles championship for the Plomer trophy will be played in Simla from 2nd to 7th October next.

MR. F. SELOUS, the well-known big-game hunter, has been awarded a gold medal by the French Academy of Sports. It is said that Mr. Selous is the first Englishman to receive such a distinction.

AN extraordinary occurrence took place recently in British East Africa, where a young Dutchman named Postma, only 21 years of age, succeeded in killing seven lions and wounding two others with ten shots and in the short space of ten minutes. Mr. Postma had been sent with a waggon and oxen into the Guasno Nyiro district and was accompanied by two natives. At dawn, Postma and the waggon reached a little stream known as Deep Dale, where no sooner had the oxen been turned loose than they were attacked by nine lions. In an instant Postma jumped on to the waggon, caught up his rifle, a ·350-bore, and opened fire on the marauders, who had already dragged down and killed one of the oxen. Less than ten minutes later three lions and four lionesses lay dead on the ground, the nearest but fifteen yards away. The remaining two, badly wounded, had made off.

So far the following teams have entered for the Durand Football Tournament, which opens at Simla on the 18th proximo:—The Lancashire Fusiliers, the King's Royal Rifles, the Royal Scots, the Black Watch, the Artillery Brigade, Roorkee, the King's Own Lancasters, the King's Own Scottish Borderers, the Gordon Highlanders, the Highland Light Infantry and the West Ridings.

THE Cup presented by Mr. T. McMorran to the Calcutta Golf Club for competition among members having a handicap of 5 or more has been won by Mr. J. M. Annan. Fifty-seven entered for the competition and some keen contests were witnessed. Mr. Annan has also annexed the McNair Cup and the Cleek Competition this season.

ANOTHER successful mounted sports meeting was held by the Bombay Gymkhana on the 2nd instant in excellent weather. The polo ball race was the first event down for decision and brought out seven competitors, Messrs. H. G. Meikle and W. Graham winning their heats. In the final Mr. Graham finished first. The musical chairs competition, which came next, attracted twenty-one entries and had to be decided in two heats, the first four in each taking part in the final which was won by Mr. C. T. Tomes with Mr. Meikle second and Mr. Baird third. Mr. Tomes placed another win to his credit in the next event, the Balaclava Duel, emerging victorious after a fierce struggle with Mr. H. F. Lodge. The Pre-Raphaelite Stakes was responsible for some very artistic efforts by the ladies. Mrs. Shanks had to draw a cat and came in an easy winner with Mr. E. G. Pearson; Mr. and Mrs. Priestley were second. The horse scurry brought out a field of six, the verdict being as follows:—

Mr. H. Thomson's Biscuit ...	...	Owner 1
Mr. Kuhn's Twister ...	...	Mr. Rommel 2
Mr. L. L. Bamber's Olivette ...	...	Owner 3

EVERYONE interested in British polo will be glad to learn that a second attempt to regain the American International Cup is to be made next season. An important development is the offer of the Duke of Westminster to take over the American International Polo Cup Recovery Fund and ponies. The offer has been accepted by the Hurlingham Club Committee, who have decided to issue a challenge to the American Polo Association to compete for the International Cup in America during the season of 1912.

This generous action on the part of the Duke of Westminster relieves the Hurlingham Committee from the necessity for appealing to the sporting public for further money on behalf of the Recovery Fund. From £5,000 to £10,000 would have been essential for the success of next season's enterprise if it were to be carried out under the same financial conditions as obtained this year.

The Duke already owns a superb stud of ponies, and when the best of the Recovery Fund ponies—Energy, Machine, Excelite, Wagtail, Nutmeg, Pretty Boy, Velocity, etc.—are added to them, the stud will be worthy of comparison with that owned by Mr. Whitney.

There does not seem likely to be any scarcity of suitable players when the England team comes to be made up next season. Captain Hardress Lloyd, Captain Leslie Cheape, Captain Herbert Wilson and Mr. Noel Edwards will probably all be available again and an Anglo-Indian player, Captain R. G. Ritson, whose brilliancy has been one of the features of the London season, will also be eligible for the team.

Altogether England's prospects of regaining the trophy are brighter now than they have been at any time since 1909.

AT Batliwalla's Theatre, Bombay, last Thursday, a big gathering assembled to witness a series of boxing contests, the chief event of which was a 15-round match between Inspector Melville (10st. 10½lb.) of the Police and Baker (10st. 8lb.) for the middle weight championship of Bombay and a purse of Rs. 500. This was a very disappointing fight, Melville winning easily. He established a lead on points in the first round and was always on top in the subsequent rounds. In the fifth Baker was sent to the boards but he came up again for the sixth and continued to be receiver general. At the end of this period he gave in on account of a broken thumb. Sergeant Champan, late of the R. H. A., has challenged the winner for the Bombay middle-weight championship, provided a suitable purse is forthcoming. Three other contests were put through during the evening. Private Hastings of the Warwicks beat Wallace in the second round of a 4-round contest: Volunteer Easdon, B. V. R., beat Volunteer Major, G. I. P. R., in a 6-round bout, and a keen and hard fought 10-round match between Lance-Corporal Cranbrooke of the Warwick and Sergeant Nolan of the Dublin Fusiliers ended in a win for the Irishman on points.

OWEN MORAN claims that the punch which finished his battle with Wolgast was a foul one, but the Referee would not allow it at the time. Moran is not discouraged and says he is sure he can whip Wolgast. He has challenged the German champion to another contest but the contest is not likely to take place before the end of the present year. Meanwhile Wolgast will be far from idle. Packey McFarland is said to have signed articles with him and Matt. Wells is also stated to have done the same. Freddie Welsh is on his track and "Knock out" Brown is also keen on another battle with Wolgast. McFarland and Wells, from all accounts will find it a difficult task to make the required weight.

BOMBARDIER WELLS and the coloured champion, Jack Johnson, have been matched as will be seen from the details given in our epitome of English sport this week. The fight may be held in the Stadium in the last week of September. The announcement has evoked a good deal of criticism in the London sporting press, for the opinion prevails that Wells would have been well advised, in his own interests, to wait a little longer before he essays the task of meeting Johnson. The Sporting Life writes:—It goes without saying that we regret that Wells should have been led into the blunder of his life. Three weeks ago the suggestion for a contest with Johnson was brought to us by one associated with the English heavy-weight champion, and we discountenanced it and strongly advised Wells personally not to listen to the proposal.

As will be observed from extracts we give below from several contemporaries, we are not alone in the attitude we have taken up.

Our view is dictated neither by antipathy to Jack Johnson or Wells, nor by any desire to pursue a "dog-in-the-manger" policy. Even the contemporary at whose office the "match" was made says:—"Of course, many will be prepared to look upon the match as bad for Wells." We confess that we are one of "the many" referred to.

For Wells as a man and Wells as a boxer we have a great admiration. We believe he had a great future before him. His own true friends, however, will not seriously suggest that in a real contest, as distinct from an exhibition, he has the slighest chance against Jack Johnson, and if Wells himself has any such idea he has more vanity than we gave him credit for.

Nominally, the "contest" is a 20-round one. It will actually last just as long as Johnson cares to spin it out. We have no doubt Wells will try, and try very hard, but the outcome of the meeting is a foregone conclusion.

"Well," say Wells's apologisers, "but what does it matter? There is nothing really at stake. Wells will not lose the heavy-weight championship of England or the Lonsdale belt, and he will get a big sum."

In our opinion there is a great deal at stake. We do not think the "deal" Wells has entered into will do him any good in his future career. That is a purely personal matter, although in our admiration for Wells we attached some importance to it.

There is one point, however, of even greater moment. The sport does not gain by "matches" of the Johnson-Wells character. Foregone conclusions are not contests, and there is nothing to recommend them from a sporting point of view. We believe that English boxing will suffer by Wells attempting a task of which he is totally incapable. In two years, perhaps, after he has had further experience and after he has developed, there might have been a chance. Johnson by then, moreover, may not be the boxer he is now. In any case Wells had everything to gain and nothing to lose, except the money, by waiting, and he would have consulted the interest of true British boxing if he had taken the advice we offered him three weeks ago.

No doubt all the wiles of the showman's art will be used to boom the "match" as a "great one." For the meeting to be a financial success £8,000 and something more has to be got. The public, if they are interested, may provide it. That is the public's lookout.

But we trust for the sake of British boxing in particular and for the welfare of the sport in general, there will be no rubbish written about "the white man's hope." The sentiment borders on the ridiculous when applied to the Johnson-Wells "contest."

Our Bangalore correspondent writing on the 5th instant says:—"It never rains but pours." The last seven days in the station have been full of sport of one kind and another. On Saturday last there was cricket at the Gymkhana, in which a Club eleven defeated an eleven from the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway by 103 runs in a single innings match, the Gymkhana scoring 182 to 79 of the visitors. At the St. Joseph's College the boys played a match against the Departmental and Staff Club, which resulted in a win for the College eleven by 74 runs. Scores:—St. Joseph's College 154, D. and S. Club 80.

At the Golf Links the Annual Bangalore-Kolar match was played off. Only six couples went round the course, which was two rounds of 12 holes each. The visitors were pretty rusty at the game and all of them were beaten by the homesters. I was unable to get the scoring cards but the following were the couples:—J. G. Tait and Morris-Davies, Captain A. T. Henderson and Barrett, Captain Cochran and Bocquet, Geldard and Marden, Palmer and Keene and Brown and Taylor.

The Ricketts' Hockey Tournament (Bangalore Rifle Volunteers) was brought to a conclusion on the same day when the final was played between teams from "A" Company and St. Joseph's College "A" team. It was a very even match throughout and it was only in the last few minutes of the play that the game was decided, Hebberd netting the ball for the College; this was the only goal in the match and the College won. This is the seventh year in succession that the College has successfully competed for this trophy, a record any educational institution may well be proud of. The officers of the B.R.V. were "At Home" on the occasion to a select company of friends and the Band of the Corps provided some good music. Mrs. Barton, wife of Major Barton, presented the Cup to the Captain of the winning team and Major Barton, the Officer Commandant, spoke a few words of congratulation to the winners, while he expressed his sympathy for the runners up. The usual cheering brought the Tournament to a close.

Tuesday was a gala day with the 2nd Battery, Royal Artillery, when they celebrated the 151st Anniversary of the Battle of Minden by holding their annual mounted and dismounted sports. A feature of the day was the wearing of roses by the officers and men of the Battery on this day. This had its origin from the fact that the battle was fought near a rose garden. A lengthy programme of sports was gone through both in the morning and afternoon. There was a fairly large attendance in the evening notwithstanding Tennis in the Cubbon Park and the funeral of Mr. J. Weir. The Open Mile Race was won by Bombardier Sturgeon of the 8th Battery, Matheson and McDonald of the Cameron Highlanders getting second and third places respectively. The Open Mile Race for Indian Infantry was won by the 2nd (Q.O.) Sappers and Miners. Section Tent-pegging, open to the Garrison, was won in fine style by "A" Squadron of the 14th (King's) Hussars, the 10th Ammunition Column Section running the winners very close. The Officers' Tent-pegging attracted quite a large number of competitors, over twenty of them going down. Eventually the winners were found in Mr. Welsh, R.F.A., and Mr. Geldard, R.F.A. The Lloyd Lindsay and the V.C. Race (with real dummies) were other interesting events. The riders on one horse in the latter were thrown on the return journey, one of them got off with a shaking and the other was sent to Hospital, but fortunately has sustained no serious damage. The Band of the Cameron Highlanders provided some good music during the afternoon and the officers of the Battery were "At Home" on the grounds to a select company, including Mrs. and Miss Hugh Daly. Captain Taylor, Commanding the Battery, and B.-S.-M. Packham, who ran the programme, are to be congratulated on the successful manner in which they carried it out, especially as this was the first appearance of the Battery in the field since their arrival in the station in the earlier part of the year. Mrs. Massy distributed the prizes.

On Wednesday and Thursday all roads led to the south-east gate of the Residency within the grounds of which the annual Horse Show was held. The weather was kind on both days and the attendance up to the average of any previous year. A detailed report appears in another column.

Friday afternoon saw the end of the Gymkhana Tennis Tournament, at which Mrs. Daly gave away the prizes. There was a record attendance of European and Indian spectators. I send you a separate report of this.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 21st July 1911.

The Heat Wave has come and gone. We have ceased to speculate on the end of all things, we no longer read of plethoric persons suffering in various degrees from simply being "overcome" to making work for the undertaker: indeed as a heat wave the visitation was but short-lived for a good old north-east wind sprang up and blowing steadily for days settled the business decisively. Still we are having wonderful weather; this is the twentieth day in London without rain—ne'er a drop. What do you think of it?

Compared with the state of affairs in New York, our spells of unusual heat are quite tolerable, but a summer such as the present, which bids fair to prove exceptional, always finds the poor Englishman unprepared.

He can hardly believe his senses when the sun shines fiercely upon him for more than two consecutive days. He goes about town wiping his brow, and remarking sapiently that it is hot; his friends wipe their brows in sympathy, and observe that they think it is hotter than yesterday, and that, in their opinion, it will thunder before long.

Here and there a genius dons a suit of white; here and there one, with the fine old sea-dog spirit, will brave the desperate adventure and rush off to take tea in Kensington Gardens; but on the whole enterprise is curiously lacking. It needs probably another ten degrees. At eighty in the shade we are merely limp; at ninety we should realise that something must be done; things would happen right speedily; we should deck our streets with embroideries of dainty little tables; we should eat, drink, and be merry in the open air.

And then, being England, it would rain.

Everybody is out of town, and of news which I attempt to purvey there is none save, the chronicles of His Majesty's journeys around his kingdom and the doings of the Margate peacocks which, declining to be caught, have eluded the snares of their captors for many days and have furnished more or less light reading for the papers. People who never forget a face are rather a bore. But we like it when animals remember us. Also, birds. Generally, it is difficult to know whether a bird does recollect you or not: and we have little to guide us in our investigation as to how long and in what degree a bird will recognise the appearance of a human being with whose features it has once become familiar. Lately, however, an interesting sidelight on this absorbing topic has been supplied by the gardeners of the park at Margate. These gardeners are trying to catch the peacocks aforesaid whose destiny it is to be removed from the gardens and deposited with a bird-fancier. "It is my belief," says one of the pursuers pessimistically, "that we shall not catch them for another fortnight. They know us all by sight now, and we don't stand much chance with them until they have forgotten us." This cuts both ways, of course. It is wounding to one's self-esteem to be forgotten by some bird whom one had come to look upon practically as an old college chum. On the other hand, suppose you offend a peacock? At the end of a fortnight he is looking on you as a rather attractive stranger. How different from the elephant, who waits fifty years until he meets again the person, now a respectable old gentleman, who in his boyhood offered him (Mr. Elephant) a red pepper sandwich, and gets the half-Nelson on him with his trunk. Give us the short-memoried peacock.

Mr. Kipling has broken out afresh—this time as historian. Twenty-three poems by him are the most striking feature of "A History of England," written for boys and girls by Mr. C. R. L. Fletcher and Mr. Kipling, with some fine pictures by Mr. Henry Ford, and just published by the Clarendon Press.

Mr. Kipling's verses are a metrical synopsis of English History, from the days when

> Norseman and Negro, Gaul and Greek,
> Drank with the Britons in Barking Creek, down to the days of Dreadnoughts and aeroplanes and the "monstrous nine-decked city" on the seas.

It is a book for children with many human touches which make the dead past live again. A chronicle of events, it also gives some real notion of the daily life of our forefathers—as, for instance, in the following reference to Norman William's time.

"Washing was almost unknown. Even in the King's household, while there were hundreds of servants in the cooking departments, there were only four persons in the laundry."

The language is refreshingly unconventional for a history book. Thus, Henry III. "was frightfully extravagant, and a natural though not intentional liar." "Edward II. was a most impossible person."

The humour of Mr. Graham Moffat is excellent good stuff. Without any subtlety or strangeness of flavour, it is always titillating, and the more you have of it the better you like it. Its methods and its effects have the simple force of being perfectly natural. Even the obvious jokes are irresistible when it is obvious that the characters must inevitably have made them. With a perfect ignorance of the village life of Scotland in the present or the past you may dare swear that "Bunty Pulls the Strings" is a wholly vivid reflection of it. In commending the play on its coming to the Haymarket there is little need to say more. The play is altogether alive and altogether Scottish. Its plot is of no importance, but its characters are delightful. If you want illustrative comparisons you had best turn, not to Mr. Barrie, as some have suggested, but to Scott when he was not working in "the big bow-wow" style or to Galt. The method is much more objective than Mr. Barrie's, and the effect much sharper. As for the acting, it is perfectly adapted to the play, rich in vigorous character and fun. Its fruitiest humour comes from Mr. Watson Hume as the wooden fiancé of the admirable Bunty. To hear him remark that "It's a fine day" is to discover new depths of melancholy. In the drill style Mr. Graham Moffat himself is admirable, and there is a notable piece of muddleheadedness from Mr. Sanderson Moffat. The graces of Bunty are piquant in the person of Miss Kate Moffat, who makes a rare piece of work in her blending of charm and tenderness with a touch of the hard practicality that belongs to the managing woman. There is also Mr. George Tawde's scapegrace and two neat oldish maids by Mrs. Graham Moffat and Miss Jean Turnbull. Mrs. Moffat also deserves our gratitude for the delectable crinoline frocks. "Bunty" is preceded by "The Touch of Truth," a little play in which Mr. H. M. Walbrook, without much ingenuity of plan or distinction in writing, makes mildly amusing the old idea of an actor acting a part off the stage. It is played with much discretion by Mr. Jerrold Robershaw and Mr. John Deverell.

It is a thousand pities that Strauss did not get hold of the story of "Thais" before Massenet. It is just the theme for him. It calls aloud for the same treatment as "Salomé" and "Elektra"—unflinching realism and unbridled musical expression. At any rate it is no subject for a composer whose intensive note of passion rises no higher than the prima ballerina's high leap, and whose chief artistic aim seems to be to lull the senses with sweetly flowing melodies and ear-catching rhythms.

True, England saw Massenet's opera at Covent Garden for the first time last Tuesday night, seventeen years after its production in Paris, and therefore little discredit attaches by its shortcomings to the composer of that inspired little failure of a later date, "Le Jongleur de Notré Dame." For operatic taste, like battleship types, changes rapidly nowadays. What is new one season is obsolete the next.

In "Thais" the drama is filtered slowly out till no action is left, and the tragedy is honeyed with blithesome, cheerful strains that unconsciously bear out the opera's misnomer, "lyric comedy."

But what a chance there is in Anatole France's story of the monk and the courtesan for the modern lyric dramatist! Strauss would have wrung the last drop of passion from the great conflict of emotions that follows the asignation made by Thais with Athanaël—Thais on the one hand fighting for love, the monk on the other battling for a soul. The man wins. The woman renounces all the vanities of her former life and the world in general, and retires to a convent.

But apparently there was only enough goodness between the two for one person. For no sooner is the one redeemed than the other feels the virtue has gone out of him. The gospel of Venus had not been preached in vain. The man is now all for love, but, breaking into the convent and declaring his passion to the dying Thais, finds she is all for Heaven, spiritually and actually.

There is much beautiful music in "Thais," however, and one can only marvel at Massenet's boundless melodic resources. But it is the music of a good ballet (there is a fine one in the opera), always spontaneous, often sensuous, but never passionate or dramatic, never even devotional.

If Mme. Edvina, as Thais, were more the voluptuous being of one's imagination she would be out of perspective with the rest of the picture. As it is she is beautiful and refined in her wickedness, and therefore in keeping with the unconsciously restrained expression of the work. She sings splendidly.

M. Gilly's Athanaël is a good, forcible piece of work, like the rest of his impersonations this season. But the superficiality of his heroics would convince no one but French opera-goers of the last decade. The chief tenor part—for the monk's is written for a baritone—that of Nicias, Thais' lover, was well sung by M. Darmel.

The popular musical successes of the piece which do little credit, of course, to the work as an opera, are the ballet [illegible] the "Méditation religeuse," which is played [illegible] lowered curtain in the second act.

"Mr. Cyril Maude sawn in two at every performance" yelled the old-time showman with gusto, and exquisitely gowned ladies and gentlemen in irreproachable raiment flocked in to the gory scene. Mr. Maude was dying half hourly to make an actors' holiday, and Mr. Bruce Smith, the scene painter, banged the drum with zeal, determined that his old friend should not pass away neglected and in secret. In consequence, many thousands of shillings will go to swell the funds of the actors' orphanage. This was one of the many side-shows at the actors' garden party held in the Botanical Gardens last week. It provides one of the few opportunities of the year to see actors and actresses at play, and the velvet lawns were thronged with beautiful women in gowns of rainbow radiance, and with gentlemen who are "dukes" and "princes" behind the footlights. The attendance eclipsed all records, and the man who counted the takings mopped his brow, for fifty modes of coining money for the Orphange were in operation.

Witching daughters of Eve, with baskets of chocolates slung from their shoulders, roamed among the 14,000 guests, selling their wares at famine prices. Miss Marie Löhr sat embowered in roses; she and her band of dainty assistants were ready to pin a nosegay in the coat of any gentleman for half-a-crown. Her only rivals were a couple of pseudo costers in red and black striped jerseys, who drove a donkey barrow through the grounds and sold fruit and flowers.

In another place the leaders of the dramatic stage were wrestling by twos in some strange variation of golf. They were growing very hot and excited over it, and the spectators rocked with laughter. There were various delightful ways of assisting the funds, but none appealed with quite so much charm as the task of eating strawberries and cream in the bower of Miss Lilian Braithwaite. In this way many pounds were contributed.

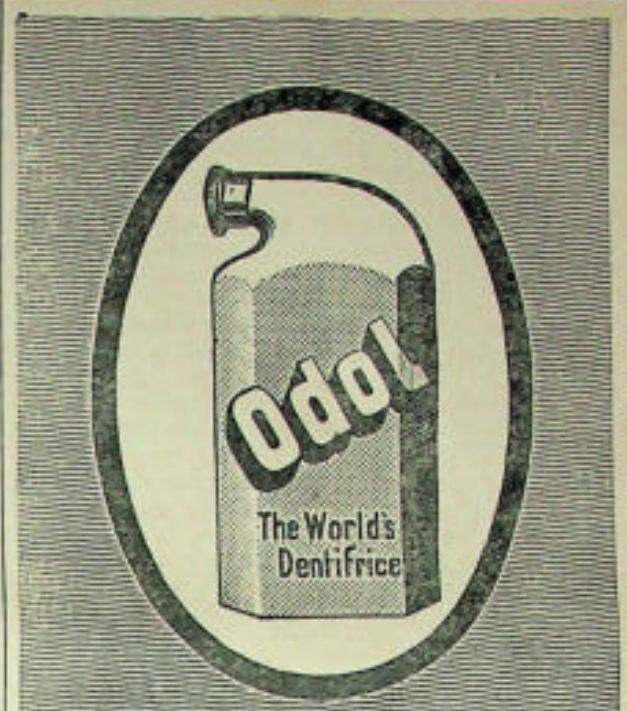
LETTERS ON SHOOTING.

BY BALDATCHA.

Letter No. VI.

Dress.—Some people go out shooting in any sort of kit. This is I am convinced a mistake. Have your clothes a gosling green—as like the facings of the old Fifth Fusiliers as may be, or of any other art green that looks like the grass of a jhil. Cover your sola topee with the same material and you will find that you will get many a slashing overhead bird that would not otherwise come your way; for, noticing a gap amongst the conspicuous line of coolies, and taking your crouching figure for a pile of weeds or grass until too late, many a wily snipe and many a teal and duck barking back will gladden your heart with that prettiest and most coveted of shots—a rocketing bird. It is not necessary or desirable to have thick clothes for shooting in the plains. The Indian mills at Cawnpore and Cannanore make an excellent shikar drill of a greeny heather tint. This as to tint and texture is exactly right. Extra warmth can be added in the shape of a cardigan jacket or sweater, when one is having lunch, or for the walk to the trap. Many lives would be saved and much illness avoided if that golden rule was never neglected, on which old hands are so strong, namely, to change to dry clothes, socks and boots, after a good dry rub down, as soon as exercise is over.



The most obvious way to prevent decay is to remove the particles of food which cling to and remain between the teeth after eating, and it is clear that this can only be done by means of a liquid antiseptic dentifrice and mouth-wash.

Odol is the preparation to use, for a few drops mixed in a tumbler of water will form an emulsion, which will thoroughly cleanse and purify the oral cavity, destroying all injurious bacteria nesting there. Odol penetrates the interstices between the teeth, and impregnates the mucous membrane of the mouth, exercising its antiseptic powers not only during the brief period of application, but for hours afterwards.

CAWNPORE.

The most comfortable style of coat for shooting is undoubtedly the Norfolk jacket, made with two outside large pockets for cartridges, and a watch pocket. Above the side pockets have six stalls on each side, made to fit your cartridges exactly, and sufficiently deep and well made to prevent them falling out when you stoop; on the right side put only two or three of these stalls and see that when the cartridges are in them they do not interfere with your gun as it moves up and down from the shoulder, or it will get scratched. A flap over these stalls on the right side is a sound addition. In thtse stalls always have ready some duck and geese cartridges, and in the watch pocket carry a couple of rounds of ball cartridge for emergencies. It is perfectly amazing how men will lose chance after chance at teal, duck and geese, because they have no large shot cartridges to hand ready to slip in at once. When birds are coming up they shout for the coolie with their duck cartridge bag, but by the time the required ammunition has been received the game is in the next parish, and many birds on the jhil have been frightened to fits.

The best sun hat is perhaps that known as the Cawnpore Tent Club Helmet. It is difficult nowadays to get real "sola" pith hats, but it is well worth while to take a little trouble to procure one. The ordinary hat is made from paper, and refuse of sorts, and is a heavy, vulgar thing compared with the real article, which is made from the pith of a plant found in marshes in inundated provinces—and called a crack jaw Latin name, to wit "Aeschynomene aspera" and is extremely light. Since hearing of the experience of an engineer, who had suffered from a bad sunstroke and was a martyr to sun headache, until the happy thought occurred to him to treat his head as if it were a photographic plate, I have always had my shikar hat and coat supplied with a red or orange lining. The shooter in question never suffered again from headache caused by the sun, and was able to stand any amount of exposure after he cut off the actinic rays from his head and spine. Black is equally satisfactory—a tip worth knowing in this country. It is also asserted by those who have used it that a black lining is still more efficacious as a sun ray trap.

The material called "twill lining for shirts," made by the Indian mills, is a most excellent substitute for flannel shirts; it is much lighter, is very absorbent, and never becomes like a deal board under the ministrations of the native washerman, as do the garments made of flannel. For shooting, tennis, cricket and racquets out here, and at home in hot weather, it is A1. and just the thing. It is also very inexpensive. A really comfortable soft pair of shooting boots (not shoes) with good bread welts and thick socks are necessary. Breeches and leather gaiters complete the turn out. Gaiters are much more comfortable than "putties;" they are cooler and afford protection against thorns and from snake bite. Occasionally one comes across snakes out shooting, and there is always the off chance of treading on one, so it is as well to be prepared. It is not so very long ago that a young Bengal Cavalry officer lost his life from the bite of snake—which by the way was never seen. He was walking dressed in flannels and was wearing tennis shoes with a couple of guns who were beating for partridges close to the camp, the regiment being on the march at the time. It is folly to take unnecessary risks in such matters and the possibility of meeting snakes is real. A brother officer A. C. heard a yelp from his cartridge coolie walking close to him and was just in time to cut off a cobra's head with a charge of snipe shot, as it was standing on its hind legs and going to strike at the paralysed coolie. The snake was in a dry patch in the celebrated "Subaltern's" jhil, Bareilly. Cobras occasionally lie out in such situations. I have had no accidental adventures of an exciting kind with snakes. I once trod on a chequered snake—a reptile by the way that is provided with two hollow poison fangs of the orthodox pattern, but only manages to secrete sufficient poison to damage small creatures such as rats and frogs. My friend—who is assaulted by naturalists with the name of Tropidonotus piscator—somewhat of a misnomer as regards his habits, if an amateur may venture to say so, had a mud fish apparently stuck fast in his maw, which he was engaged in eating when I interrupted him. With the vindictiveness of this particular species he lashed out at me, but only hit my gaiter with his fish. Still there is always the possibility of enraging a cobra or a viper and it is silly to expose one's life to needless hazard.

It cannot be too often repeated that it is absolutely essential in this country to change one's wet things as soon as exercise is over, and to put on an extra garment as the sun goes down,—after it has gone down may be too late. The number of men is large who deliberately make themselves seriously ill, or accommodate themselves with quarters in the cantonment cemetery, that dismal and often uncared for spot, because they will not take this simple precaution. The grave digger's cry is "Still they come."

However, let that pass, and we get to the question of food and drink. Have a good breakfast before you start and let your lunch be a light one and go in for a cup of tea and toast or a piece of cake after you have finished shooting and changed. Some men take a weak peg or a bottle of light hill beer at dinner and drink no fermented liquor before sundown. Others like beer or a peg at lunch. Many experienced shikaris touch nothing at all but non-alcoholic drinks and thrive upon them splendidly. A "refresher" that many people love is fresh lime juice and soda. Angustura bitters and lemonade is another favourite, but whatever your pet tipple is let it be very weak in alcohol and don't take much of it even then if you want to do yourself justice to the end of the day.

If the day is very hot and you perspire freely it does no harm but the reverse to replace lost moisture with aerated water or lemonade, etc., or cold weak tea. Whisky or any sort of alcohol is not good for this purpose, in fact it is bad. On no account touch water unless you carry Captain Nesfield's excellent iodine tablets, which are tasteless and kill all and every germ, and sterilize the vessel as well in which the water is placed.

On going to lunch do not rest your gun against a tree or a rock, stone, etc. It is maddening to have one's gun barrels dented and the gun jarred by being knocked over by a dog or a coolie, and no small number of guns are thus damaged. Place your gun flat on the ground with a rug, coat, etc., underneath it, and unless a thunderbolt falls on it no injury can result. I have seen more than one interval for lunch end in disaster to guns carelessly disposed of by easy-going [illegible]

THE LATE MR. JAS. B. FERRELL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

Sir,—Might I ask you to bring to the notice of any contemporaries and friends of the late Mr. Jas. B. Ferrell, named in the near past, and not without reason, "The Grand Old Man of the Indian Stage," that his remains lie in an unmarked grave in the Cemetery at Sewri, in this City.

Mr. Ferrell's connection with the Stage in India was a long and honourable one and on this score alone his memory deserves a better fate.

In private life he was a most genial and intelligent companion. Freemasons of Calcutta might also call to mind that he was a persona grata in several leading Lodges, while in earlier days he regularly contributed (I believe) to their Charities.

Might I ask you to go further and receive any donations towards the immediate object in view, viz., the erection of a headstone which will cost anything over Rs. 150. "Let them be well used, for they are the abstracts and brief chronicles of the time."

TESTIMONIAL FROM SIR SAMUEL BAKER,
The Famous Nile Explorer.

Newton Abbot, Devon.

Dear Sirs,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty o health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

LONDON, Friday, 21st July 1911.

SANDOWN.

THE Sandown executive fought hard against the drought, and their efforts, though puny against the force of Nature, had kept the course green, and we may especially congratulate them on the good state of the five furlongs straight, the most trying course for its distance in England, art having improved upon Nature to a commendable degree. That the occasion last Friday was an important one was suggested by the big attendance, and yet, if figures prove facts, the L. and S.W. Railway staff say that they conveyed more passengers on the same occasion last year. Be that as it may, Society was in great force. The further enclosures were crammed, and on the far side of the course the people stretched in a long line from the number-board almost to the half-distance. A great company, assembled to do justice to a great occasion; and, outside the big race, interest was keenly upheld from start to finish. Results:—

LIVERPOOL.

The bereavement that has plunged the House of Stanley into mourning prohibited any party from Knowsley on Tuesday, and to a great extent threw a gloom over the meeting, as we have rarely seen the county stand so sparsely attended; and except in the cheap enclosures the muster was short of the average for a Liverpool July. Fields, too, showed a falling off, though some good sport was enjoyed, and the care that has been taken to keep the going green was evident when the course was contrasted with the burnt-up state of the grass in the open. After the summer weather of the past week the temperature was cold enough for a great coat, as the high wind whistled keenly across the estuary of the Mersey; but fortunately it blew on the back of the stands. Results:—

Rain had been bearing up across the Atlantic for some little time, and on Wednesday morning announced its arrival at Liverpool with a spitting on the pavements, but did not come down in any force till about noon yesterday, when the long-expected downpour made umbrellas welcome at Aintree. The attendance was a fairly good one so far as the holiday-makers were concerned, the fame of the cup bringing a strong muster to fill the cheaper rings. Results:—

ALL-INDIA vs. LEICESTER.—At last the poor Indians have broken their long series of crushing defeats. Meeting the weakest team in the Championship they bucked up wonderfully and won by 7 wickets. Kanga, Meheremji, and Shivram did well with the bat and Balu and Salam-ud-din bowled effectively. Score:—

GLOSTER vs. SURREY.—Played at Bristol and left drawn. Jessop was seen at his best on the second day. Going in at a time when his side looked like being beaten the captain hit up 139 out of 170 in an hour and a half. After a quiet start he settled down to rapid and determined hitting, sending the ball to all parts of the field with delightful freedom. He reached his 50 in thirty-five minutes, and, scoring still more rapidly, completed his hundred in an hour. Dismissed at length by a splendid right-hand catch at deep square-leg he had hit two 6's and twenty 4's in his characteristic display. Score:—

INDIANS vs. SOMERSET.—Perhaps the prevailing Lower Bengal weather conditions had something to say to it, but when the Indians met Somerset this week they showed the best form they have put forward during their visit and after quite an exciting finish managed to beat their opponents by the margin of one wicket. Bajana and Shivram made most runs for the winners and the Indian bowling and fielding were at times almost class. Score:—

POLO.

THE CORONATION CUP.

SUCCESS OF THE INDIAN P. A. TEAM.

IT was unfortunate that, for a variety of reasons, Eton and the Royal Horse Guards were unable to take part in the competition for the King's Coronation Cup at Ranelagh. These defections left the 4th Dragoon Guards, winners of the Inter-Regimental Tournament, and the Indian Polo Association team to compete for the handsome trophy, and the match took place at Ranelagh on Saturday before one of the largest gatherings seen at a polo match in London this season. It was regretted that the Indian team was not fully representative of native polo talent, but the three English officers who, with Capt. Shah Mirza Beg, comprised the team, are all members of the I.P.A. Col. Chunda Singh was to have played back, but he sustained a rather severe injury while taking part in a match at Roehampton recently.

The game resulted in a very easy victory for the Indian team, for though the Dragoons played well at times, they were always fighting a forlorn battle. In the first minute of the match Capt. Leslie Cheape scored for India and Mirza Beg, doubling delightfully for position, scored a second with a grand shot. A fine forward shot by Capt. Lockett enabled Mirza Beg to add a third. There were no goals in the second period, when the Dragoons played better and missed two good chances. Good work by Ritson enabled Mirza Beg to get a fourth goal in the third period, and the Indian team is to be congratulated upon playing a capital game throughout. He was always ready to grasp the situation and place himself to the best advantage, and his wrist work was delightful. He and Capt. Cheape, one of the America Cup challenging team, played fine polo, as indeed did the whole side, for Capt. Ritson was often brilliant.

What to do if Your Horse Pulls

THE KEY TO HIS MOUTH IS A RENSUM REIN.

Sir Gilbert East, Bart., wrote:—"You have found the key to my excitable mare's mouth. I have now the pleasure of riding an animal chock full of life, with complete control."

You have three courses open if you own a puller. You may go on using him, to your great discomfort; you may sell him, to your loss; or you may cure him, if you know how. I am a veteran horseman with a reputation to lose, and I stake it upon the assertion that in my "Rensum" Pamphlet I will show you how, for £1 1s. (the cost of a "Rensum" Rein), you may, without severity, cure the worst puller. The Pamphlet will prove to you that by a new method you may turn a confirmed puller into a snaffle bridle hunter, or polo pony. The "Rensum" Pamphlet will also show you how you may cure a rearer, kicker, or other vicious horse.

H. S. RENSUM, The Cottage, Yardley, Worcestershire, Eng.

WRITE TO ME

That I may advise. Describe your horse's fault and I will send you the

"RENSUM" PAMPHLET free.

If you order a Rensum Rein, with it will be sent, the fully detailed instructions for making or re-making a mouth on the simple Rensum method which cannot fail.

I prefer to use the "Rensum Rein" on the easy half moon "Rensum Bit." The Rein and Bit together I will send for a guinea and a half.

WINCHESTER

.401 CALIBER

The Trigger Controlled Repeater

This new Winchester is all that the big game hunter's heart could desire. It is reloaded by recoil, and has a detachable magazine which enables it to be fired a series of shots with great ease and rapidity without the sacrifice of accuracy. Although the cartridge it handles hits a harder blow than the .30 U. S. Army, it is compact and light to carry. In the sureness, strength and simplicity of its action, and in its hitting power, no other recoil operated rifle approaches it.

Ask your Dealer to show you one or send to him for a circular describing this new rifle which has strength and power plus.

A good gallop by Major Mathew-Lannowe enabled Capt. Hornby to get a goal for the Dragoons in the fourth period, when Mirza Beg just missed after a fine long gallop. Ritson scored a fifth goal in the fifth period, and Cheape a sixth. Two more came in the sixth period, Cheape and Mirza Beg scoring, and in the last period Ritson and Beg brought the India total up to ten, while a rally by the Dragoons produced goals from the sticks of Wiart (2) and Hornby. BOXING.

Bombardier Wells vs. Jack Johnson.—Jack Johnson and Bombardier Wells have been matched for the heavyweight boxing championship of the world, and will meet in London for a purse of £8,000 on or before 30th September. The agreement binding the contest was signed by both men at the offices of the Sportsman on Saturday, and a deposit of £2,000 lodged with the stakeholder.

Since Wells gained such a decisive victory over Ian Hague in the contest for Lord Lonsdale's belt, he has been looked upon as the most likely of all white men to win back the world's championship from the coloured race; but it was thought that Wells would have been given more time to improve his physique before meeting Johnson.

After carrying all before him in Army boxing in India, Wells came to England and was at once spoken of by Mr. Eugene Corri, the well-known referee, as the most likely candidate for heavyweight championship honours.

Since then Wells has met nearly all the best English and Colonial boxers, and only once has he been defeated. That was when inexperience brought about his downfall before Gunner Moir at Olympia. This contest taught Wells a lesson, and he at once entered upon a long course of physical culture. The improvement was such that against Flynn three months later he gained an overwhelming victory after the contest had gone the full twenty rounds.

Even more decisive was his victory over Ian Hague for the English championship, but the opinion of good judges at that time was that Wells required at least two years' experience and training to enable him to meet Johnson with a prospect of success.

Johnson has not been seen in the ring since his memorable match with Jeffries at Reno, Nevada, but has kept himself fairly fit during his music-hall engagements. Wells is also touring the halls—in a dramatic sketch, and his mornings are occupied by careful training.

Wells, who stands 6ft. 3in., will have a trifling advantage with Johnson in height, but in the more important matter of weight the balance is with the coloured champion.

Every sportsman will wish Wells success in the great task he has undertaken, but one cannot help feeling that he would have been better advised to gain more experience before meeting such a formidable opponent.

LAWN TENNIS.

The Army Championships.—At Queen's Club, West Kensington, on Saturday, the two Army Championships were concluded. A. R. F. Kingscote played well against Captain E. D. Young, his ground strokes being very good, and won quite easily. The two pairs in the final of the Doubles, were evenly matched, but Major Puckle and Captain Berger, the holders, tired towards the end. The close volleying on all hands was excellent, but a weakness was shown in dealing with overhead strokes. Results:

The Army Singles Championships.—Final Round: A.R.F. Kingscote, R.G.A., beat Captain E. D. Young, 1st Devon Regiment (6—3, 6—2).

The Army Inter-Regimental Doubles Championship. Round 3 (concluded): Captain E. D. Young and Captain Goodwyn, 1st Devons, beat Captain Davidge and H. F. Trail, The Worcester Regiment (6—4, 7—5). Semi-finals: Major Puckle, D.S.O., and Captain Berger, Army Service Corps, London, beat Major Gillespie and Captain Wright, Army Service Corps, Bulford (6—3, 4—6, 7—5); Captain E. D. Young and Captain Goodwyn beat T. A. Whyte and H. E. Lane, R.G.A. (6—1, 6—3). Final Round: Captain E. D. Young and Captain Goodwyn beat Major Puckle and Captain Berger (holders) (6—4, 5—7, 2—6, 7—5, 6—1).

MOTOR CYCLING.

A Record round the coast ride.—One of the most remarkable rides in the history of motor-cycling—a performance which easily eclipses the "End-to-end" jaunts of various riders—has just been accomplished by Mr. Harry Long on a 3½-h.p. Triumph machine. Mr. Long left London last month on an attempt to ride round Great Britain as nearly as possible by the coast, and has arrived back in town after successfully traversing the route. The actual distance covered was 5,048 miles, and the journey occupied thirty-two days. While this gives an average of 157 miles a day—in itself no mean performance to maintain daily for so extended a period—the merit of the ride lies more in the difficulties and hardships encountered and overcome, and if Mr. Long were to recount his experiences on this wonderful ride in full material would be provided for a volume of respectable thickness. Suffice it to say, therefore, that the most notable of many mishaps befel him in the Western Highlands, where he skidded on a patch of muddy road and was thrown over a precipice. His fall was arrested by a ledge some twenty yards below the road surface, and as his machine fortunately did not accompany him over the edge he was able to continue his ride. It says much for the reliability of the modern motor-cycle that Mr. Long experienced no mechanical trouble throughout the journey, especially as the machine has travelled 21,000 miles with its owner in the saddle since the beginning of the year.

Perhaps the splendid time made by Mr. Lang on his arduous ride is partially accounted for by the fact that he had previously covered the greater part of the route on a pedal cycle, so that he had more idea of what to expect in the way of roads, what measures to take, and what to avoid than if he had approached his task without previous knowledge of its difficulties.

Hunting.

THE OOTY HUNT.

The continuance of unusually good sport leads one to look for a cause other than mere luck, and it would seem to lie in the admirable way hounds are worked by the Master and Whips. Major Duff's intimate knowledge of the country and the fact that he is always with hounds attribute no doubt to the success of the pack this season. All honour to him therefore.

On Monday, 24th July.—We had the best run perhaps that has been known for several seasons. The meet was at Lake End. A jack was started from Mills Covert and ran at a cracking pace towards the Sholur Road, past Somerdale, through Antram Shola, thence to Bracken and Fuddlers, on to Khed, where a welcome check occurred. Soon recovering the line they ran it to Chemund and Temple Shola towards Cascades, along the edge of the Yemakal Stream and thence up the ridge on No Man's Land, where the jack got to ground, and hounds were cheated of blood. Only a very few of the field lived through this hot paced run.

Thursday, 27th.—Brooklands 7-30 A.M. A jack was found in the home covert and ran to the top of Rockey, thence to the Toda Cathedral and through Timman's plantation to the edge of the ghât, where hounds had to be stopped. After some delay in collecting them we trotted off to Sandy Nullah and on to Lawley's Course. Near Gold Mine Crossing a jack was viewed, and hounds were soon put on his line which they carried at a great pace through the Alley in Staircase Shola and on to Stoke's Shola and Fife's Nullah, after which they headed for Yemakal Hill and ran round in a circle back to Fifes' Spinney, hounds being soon after stopped as they had got separated.

Saturday 29th.—A cold showery day; the meet was at Avalanche Finger Post at noon. After some delay in following a cold scent we started a jack from near Gartree Hill; he was joined by another and the brace ran together uphill to South End where they divided and so did hounds: the main body of the pack rattled their jack across to Hookham Snivey, and thence to the Nanjanad Valley and to top of Hardtake hanging where hounds threw up. It was some time before the rest of the pack were recovered from South End, and then the county along Dangar ride was tried. A jack was viewed on Andy's bog which hounds hunted up to Hecuba Hill: after giving a fair run he went to ground below Minehead from where he was got out and killed.

The programme of the Hunt Races and Point to Point Events is issued. The dates fixed are 20th and 23rd September respectively.

CALCUTTA RUGBY NOTES AND COMMENTS.

So long as "Soccer" continues to be played in Calcutta it appears as if little or no interest will ever be taken in the Rugby game, and the only time—a very short time—when any impertance is attracted to the game under the carrying code is when the Rugby Challenge Cup ties are in progress, and then only will the people attend in large numbers, and a little enthusiasm is shown. Surely three months of "Soccer" is more than sufficient for the season, and if the various illegitimate competitions were put a stop to, the school boys and the young men who enter for these paltry trophies would naturally turn their attention to the Rugby game. The "Soccer" season now starts in the first week of May and it continues up to the end of September, but if the I.F.A. Council were to enforce a rule that all "Soccer" competitions must be stopped by the first week of August, this done would be the means whereby the supremacy of Rugby football may be recovered. It is also a pity that a Rugby trophy is not presented for competition to bona fide school boys to be played on the same lines as those which govern the Cadet Cup—an age limit tournament—for the majority of the present day Calcutta school boy have no idea of Rugby football, the schools having dropped the game four or five years ago. It is true St. Xaviers has a Rugger team; but most of their players are either ex-pupils while some of them are outside rs—men who have not seen the inside of the College. Since Mr. Caddell left the Customs the Riversiders have taken little interest in the game, and although the Customs annexed the junior League Cup and the Gloucester Cup last season only two of their members have so far turned out to kick the oval ball. Their ground is now being dug up to improve their cricket pitch, and as the Measurers have yet got their Association posts up, I fear the Junior League will terminate in a fiasco.

It is pleasing, however, to be able to state that the Rifle Brigade are taking much interest in Rugger, and under the captaincy of Mr. Durham the side is sure to do well in the junior competitions. On Monday the Rifles beat the United Services "B" by a try to nothing, and had the forwards on the winning side not kicked so hard in the "loose" the Fort regiment would have won by a larger margin. The Measurers, like the Customs, are also conspicuous by their absence, and this is due to Mr. Knox being out of India. It is a shame that Mr. A. M. Burnett, the Honorary Secretary of the Rugby competitions, and the members of the Calcutta Football Club are not getting better support from the Customs and Measurers clubs, and if the heads of those departments will only turn out occasionally and put things straight, all will be smooth sailing hereafter.

The prospects too in the Senior League are also not very rosy, for although the entries were few we were anticipating keen competitions, but even in this respect there has been much disappointment. As Dalhousie are not playing this year it was thought that the Nomads would have a very strong team, but to be beaten by 14 points by a scratch team of the Services and by 27 points by Calcutta, who are not nearly as strong as they were last year, clearly proves the Nomads to be a very moderate side indeed. Several of last year's players have not turned out; but let us hope, for the sake of the good old game, these men will sportingly come out and assist the Nomads once more. It is very sporting of the East Yorks to come all the way from Fyzabad to take part in the League, this being their third appearance in this competition, but the West Ridings, who entered, are not likely to be seen here until next month. The "Dukes" are at present in Bombay and in a friendly against the Gymkhana the Yorkshire team won by a fairly large margin.

Calcutta beat the East Yorks in a friendly last Saturday by a converted try to nil and on Tuesday the "Red and Whites" beat the Nomads in the League by 3 goals and 4 tries to love. Calcutta tried several new men, and of these Langley at half appeared to be the pick. Elderton, who was very seedy last year and had to stand out in the big tournament, will, I am glad to say, be strong enough to play this season. Against the Nomads, however, he was an absentee. R. C. Cumberlege, who years ago represented Durham and who also played Rugby for Calcutta some six years back, has returned to Calcutta after an absence of three years. Mr. Cumberlege is a fine referee

THE BOMBAY HARWOOD LEAGUE.

On Monday, the 31st ultimo, the Y.M.C.A. played the R.V. Artillery and a poor game was the result. The Volunteers were two short throughout and though they struggled bravely they could not stop their opponents, who beat them by 10 goals to nil. The next day the B.G.A. and Telegraphs met on the Cooperage and another uninteresting and onesided affair was witnessed, the Gunners defeating the Telegraphists by 11 goals to nil, scoring 4 goals in the first half and the rest after the interval. Wednesday's game between the Bombay Gymkhana and Bombay F.C. was well contested throughout. Neither team was at full strength, but both played hard and the result was a draw of 1 goal all. On Friday the Byculla Railway Institute were to have met the Royal Warwicks but the Railway team scratched, giving the soldiers a walk over. The B.G.A. and Bombay F. C. came together on Saturday. The early stages of the game were marred by the wretched state of the ground owing to heavy rain during the afternoon; it improved before half time, but the play was never up to standard, the Gunners winning a poor game by 3 goals to nil.

BANGALORE GYMKHANA TOURNAMENT.

This Tournament, the progress of which was somewhat retarded in its early stage by wet afternoons and in its later stage through other sporting events, was at last brought to a successful close on the evening of Friday, the 4th instant, when Mrs. Hugh Daly presented the prizes to the winners. The striking feature of the Tournament was the excellent play of the Indians and their victories over those from whom they have learned to play the game. Ranga Rao, the winner of the Gent's Open Singles, is a student of the Maharajah's College at Mysore and not more than 21 years of age. He played a very consistent game throughout, working his way into the finals from the first round. The runner-up, T. P. Subbarayan, is a member and champion of the Rai Bahadur A. Naraimsawmy Moodaliar's Union, in the C. and M. Station of Bangalore: he also played steadily throughout the Tournament, but he is getting old now and plays with eye-glasses, which is a disadvantage. The semi-final between him and Krishnaswmi Moodaliar was a remarkably pretty match; in fact, it was quite an exhibition game. Another victory for the Indian players was in the Gents'

Ever since the inception of electric lighting for cars, the famous C.A.V. head, side and tail lamps have been recognised as the standard by which to judge other makes. Open Doubles, in which Ranga Rao and Moorthi Rao defeated Rev. Mathers and Captain Ogilvie. In the other open event, Mixed Doubles, Mrs. Eagles (Bowring Institute Club) and Mr. E. Perkins (Telegraph Club) met Mrs. Chitty and Captain Forrest of the Gymkhana Club in the final. The first named couple lost the odd set, a result which might have been different had Mrs. Eagles played in her usual form in the first set. In the Handicap Matches, which were open only to members of the Gymkhana and United Service Club, Forrest and Kemble worked their way up into the final of the Singles and after a hot and protracted contest, lasting for 35 games, Forrest defeated his opponent by 3 sets to "love." The Mixed Doubles was won by Mrs. Lenox Conyngham and Mr. Palmer, who beat Mrs. Connor and Captain Forrest by 2 sets to "love," both couples starting at scratch. The final in the Gent's Handicap Doubles had not been played off up to Friday, owing first to Major Standage's professional engagements preventing him from being present and then Captain Forrest had to play in the final of the Mixed Open Doubles on Friday afternoon. The match was played off subsequently, when Forrest and Ommanney beat Standage and Johnston 14—12, 6—3, 6—4. Some splendid play was brought out by both sides in the first set, which ran to 26 games. Standage and Johnston fell to bits in the remaining next two sets and were beaten as stated.

It is a great pity that the ladies do not come to the front in these tournaments among themselves and show us what they can do. All the matches (open and handicap) for ladies' Singles and Doubles fell through for want of entries.

The greatest interest and enthusiasm was evinced by Indians, both players, and non players in the open matches; they came in strong force to witness the play and on Friday there was a record attendance of both Indians and Europeans. Captain Forrest, R.A.M.C., who ran the show, is to be warmly congratulated on the successful manner in which he got it through, with the assistance of his Committee, comprising of Major Hudson, D.S.O., I.M.S., Captain Ommanney, 75th G. I., and Mr. Geldard, R.F.A.

When Theodore Hook was once travelling by coach, there were but two inside passengers—a very pretty but delicate-looking young lady attended by a homely looking maid. The coach stopped for twenty minutes to allow for dinner. Hook returned first to his seat, the maid next. During the absence of her young mistress, Hook said to her in a tone of great concern, "Your young lady seems very unwell?"

"Yes, sir; she suffers sadly."

"Consumption, I should fear?"

"No, sir; I am sorry to say it is the heart."

"Dear me! Aneurism."

"Oh, no, sir; it is only a lieutenant in the Navy."

2. Cleansing the Rubber is perhaps the most important process in the preparation of the raw material. Dirt, stones, pieces of bark, leaves, foreign substances of many kinds become deposited in it; and before the rubber is fit for rolling and mixing every particle of these impurities must be removed by a long process of very careful washing.

MOTORING NOTES.

LONDON, 21st JULY 1911.

FEW are the motorists who have taken up motoring—as a pastime—suddenly. As a rule mild interest in the subject has been followed by casual study of motoring literature; then friends in possession of cars have been called upon to supplement what technical information has already been digested by practical data as to driving difficulties, cost of upkeep and so forth. This, of course, also applies in great part to those who wish to motor but prefer to delegate driving duties to a paid chauffeur, but at the moment I am dealing more particularly with the would-be motorist who wants to drive his own car—and to do so upon economical lines. Many of my motoring friends have begun their experiences behind the steering wheels of second-hand cars and there is a great deal to be said in favour of this procedure. Beginners are almost sure to make mistakes, and some driving errors may considerably depreciate, in a very short time, the value of a new car.

CONGRATULATIONS to the Deasy car in accomplishing its recent 15,000 miles' run under R.A.C. observation on Brooklands track. The trial started on 12th April and a distance of 300 miles was covered each day, and the whole accomplished without any voluntary stop at an average speed of 34·71 miles per hour, the most extraordinary part of the run being the low petrol consumption, the car averaging over 23 miles per gallon.

AN interesting experiment in connection with a forced march by two columns of the Glasgow Highlanders was recently successfully carried out by Major J. S. Matthews. By providing one column with Argyll chassis and the other with one chassis (all vehicles being in the "rough" and not specially arranged or fitted for carrying troops) it was easily demonstrated that by the aid of such motor transport, carrying only a fifth of the force at the time, the whole force could be taken over a given distance in the time necessary for ordinary marching conditions, and, further, that every man arrived at the objective fresh and fit for immediate action.

THE tour organized by Prince Henry of Prussia in order to celebrate the Coronation of King George V. was continued in England last week and, as in Germany, glorious weather characterised the start. The cars were all successfuly landed, though as one watched the work and saw the angle at which the cars in the smaller holds had to be slung, one was tempted to wonder if the work was as successfully accomplished as it appeared to be on the surface. Prince Henry as was his wont, donned a suit of overalls and busied himself with the preparation of his car, having a wash on the quayside afterwards in a basin of water brought by his chauffeur. As one watched him, there appeared to be no room for doubt but that he takes a real, personal and sporting interest in the welfare of his car, and everything which required attention received it at his hands, and there is not any doubt but that he sets a splendid example to all the other competitors some of whom are not so keen on doing what is usually termed "the dirty work."

QUITE a good lot of entries have been received for the race meeting at Brooklands on Thursday, and it is interesting to note that there are a fair proportion of more or less new hands among the entrants. On the other hand one is sorry to see that several familiar competitors will not be taking part. There are twelve entries for the private competitors' handicap, fourteen for the senior short handicap, and a baker's dozen for the veterans' race, which it may be remembered is reserved to comparatively old cars which are still capable of 60 miles an hour. The junior long and short handicaps have produced sixteen entries each, the senior long handicap a dozen, while eleven are in for the sprint race. It must not be forgotten that racing on this occasion starts at 12 o'clock noon instead of 2 o'clock. At 2-55 P.M. there will be a parade of the cars taking part in the Prince Henry tour.

H. M. CONSUL at Buenos Ayres (Mr. A. C. Ross, C.S.), having been requested recently to draw the attention of the proper authorities to the severe local restriction of the overall width of motor vehicles in that city of 1·80 metres (about 5 feet 11 inches) interviewed the Traffic Officer of the Municipality on the subject. This official pointed out that the narrowness of most of the streets of Buenos Ayres make it quite impossible for the authorities to admit as a rule vehicles with a greater width. The ordinary width of a street in Buenos Ayres is never more than 20 feet and as there is a tramway line of 4 feet 8½ inches gauge in every important street, there is only room left for two vehicles to pass one another; if a wider gauge were allowed the traffic would be completely obstructed. From time to time special permits have been given for special cars of greater width, but these have caused so much inconvenience and have been so obstructive to the traffic that no fresh permits are now being given, and those previously granted are being allowed to lapse. In order to obtain a modification of the Municipal regulation it would be necessary to make representation to the Municipality in the customary form, but it is very doubtful whether the regulation would be altered. H. M. Consul understands that a considerable number of commercial motor vehicles of a width in accordance with the Municipal regulation are being imported into the country. The restriction applies only to the city of Buenos Ayres. In the country districts a wider gauge is allowed.

THE London County Council at its meeting on Tuesday last week decided to apply for 10 mile speed limits in parts of Finchley Road, Belsize Road, College Crescent and Upper Avenue Road, adjacent to the junction of these thoroughfares at Swiss Cottage; West Hill and Swains Lane, Highgate; Buckingham Palace Road, near Victoria Railway Station, and Grosvenor Place, near Hyde Park Corner; Streatham High Road and Tooting Bec Gardens. It will be remembered that the Council recently decided to apply to the Local Government Board for a 10 mile limit over a portion of the Hammersmith Road and a 5 mile limit at Hammersmith Broadway. Although most people who are acquainted with the nature of the traffic at the last named point (which is considered by the police to be the most dangerous spot in the London traffic area) will agree that strict regulation is necessary there, the A.A. and M.U. are opposing the whole of these applications on the ground that having regard to the continually varying traffic conditions existing in London, an arbitrary speed limit is not sufficiently elastic for proper regulation of vehicles using the streets of London and that the provisions of Section 1 of the Motor Car Act, which provide that a motor car shall not be driven at a speed or in a manner dangerous to the public having regard to all the circumstances of the case, will, if not properly enforced, be amply sufficient for the protection of the public. And certainly some of the limits are—well, the limit.

THE well known motor expert, Mr. William J. Dredge, left London last month for Calcutta. He is said to have taken with him a number of motor car diagrams suitable for the Coronation Durbar. He has been specially chosen for this undertaking by a congress which was held in London just before he left for the motor races at Clacton.

AVIATION NOTES.

MRS. SCOTT, the wife of Captain R. F. Scott, the Antartic Explorer, has executed a bronze statuette of the late C. S. Rolls, which is now on view at the galleries of the Fine Art Society. Mr. Rolls is shown in aviation dress standing in an attitude which is considered to be very characteristic. The statuette has been highly approved by Lord and Lady Langattock, who consider it to be an excellent likeness. The figure without the base is 19 inches high.

THE Gordon Bennett cup has been regained for America by Mr. Weymann, and the great speed contest of the year has again been won by a French machine. This time, however, it is not a Bleriot that triumphs, but a more recent make of machine, the Nieuport, which has become notorious lately by reason of the high speed it has attained. It held the record this year for some time until Vedrines made extraordinary time on a Morane; but the Nieuport again beat this last month by flying about 62 miles in forty-six and a half minutes, the fastest speed during that time being about 81 miles per hour. This was achieved by M. Nieuport himself. He also piloted one of his machines in the Gordon Bennett, but was beaten by just over three minutes by Mr. Weymann. The competition took place at Eastchurch, the grounds of the Royal Aero Club, the course being 25 laps of the aerodrome, that is about 94 miles. The winner's time was 71 mins. 36⅘ secs. Second place was one by M. Leblanc, who made such a good fight for the cup last year in America, on his Bleriot, his time being only a little under two minutes more than Mr. Weymann's. Although far behind these records Mr. Alec Ogilvie made a splendid flight in every way on his "baby" Wright machine, putting up an average speed of over 51 miles an hour.

I MENTIONED in my "Notes" on the European circuit last time the fact that a British machine had taken part in this remarkable contest. Curiously enough, although there was also one Englishman, he did not fly the English machine. Mr. Valentine was flying a Deperdussin aeroplane, while the Bristol machine was piloted by M. Tabuteau. The latter is well known as the first aviator to cross the Pyrenees and also as holder of the world's endurance record, he having remained in the air 7¼ consecutive hours. Bristol biplanes are manufactured by the British and Colonial Aeroplane Company, which has flying schools on Salisbury Plain and at Brooklands. If there is no striking originality in the design of the Bristol, there is certainly good workmanship in its construction. There is, however, more than one type of Bristol, though all, except the new monoplane, adhere pretty closely to the original design. Of the military type biplane our War Office has ordered four, while so well approved was the machine at the recent show at St. Petersburg that the Russian Government has ordered eight. The one used by Tabuteau is of a somewhat new type, since it has a monoplane tail. The same machine was used throughout the circuit, and though it won no prizes it has at least proved itself a formidable rival even to the admittedly faster monoplanes, while in England it beat the other competing biplanes.

JUST as a cloud, rather bigger, and decidedly blacker, than a man's hand, appears in the Eastern Sky, and Morocco assumes importance as a potential storm-centre, we have the best demonstration of the possibilities of air craft that the short history of dynamic flight has ever given us. Forty-three competitors upon various types of aeroplane set out from Paris upon the most ambitious flight attempted so far. Seven of them completed all the seven stages, which ran by way of Liege, Spa, Utrecht Brussels, Roubaix, Calais to London. Eleven actually crossed the Channel. Ten arrived at Hendon and left again for Paris by way of Shoreham, Dover and Calais. On the day of their departure from Hendon and as if specially to impress the significance of the matter upon the newspaper moulders of public opinion they arrived in flocks instead of as in past fashion in ones and twos.

IN his speech at the opening of the Brighton, Shoreham aerodrome about a fortnight ago, Mr Arthur Wingfield quoted the proximity of that ground to the sea as one of its advantages, and though the winds that occur around the coast render such a position of mixed blessing, no one who has followed the recent developments in aeronautics will be inclined to differ from the general statement. Mr. Wingfield, in making this claim, referred only to the increased sense of security afforded by practising flying over water instead of land, but there is another aspect of the case. The rapid strides made by the hydro-aeroplane in the United States and on the Continent have already led to orders for several machines in this country to be fitted with floats. Everything has gone to show that the amphibious machine has vast possibilities of development and usage, and if this is so elsewhere, how much more strongly does it apply to this island country. Considerations such as these, to our mind, make the aerodrome by the sea an undertaking to be encouraged strongly, the more so because, as the hydro-aeroplane becomes of more and more importance, the objection against the sea winds will become less and less with the development of fuller stability in aeroplanes in general.

WM. T. DAY.

Shows.

THE BANGALORE HORSE SHOW

THIS Show was opened in the grounds of the Residency on the morning of Wednesday, the 2nd instant, and was brought to a successful close on Thursday evening with the presentation of prizes by Mrs. Daly. H. H. the Maharajah of Mysore and the Hon'ble Colonel Hugh Daly, C.S.I., C.I.E., gave their patronage to the Show, which was run by a strong committee, all of whom are well known in sporting circles.

The management was fortunate in being able to secure the services of the following gentlemen to officiate as Judges at the Show :—Colonel Aubrey Jones, 20th Deccan Horse; Colonel W. E. Beevor, C.M.G., R.A.M.C.; Colonel E. B. Butler, S.V.O., 9th (Secunderabad) Division; Colonel R. C. Stephen, 14th (King's) Hussars; Major C. H. Gough (Officiating Director-General), Army Remount Department; Major G. H. Badcock, Superintendent, Remount Depôt, Hosur; Major E. G. Thompson, 17th (Duke of Cambridge's Own) Lancers; Captain V. F. Jackson, 27th Light Cavalry (Cavalry School, Saugor); and Mr. Oscar Dignum. Besides these there were other Judges for special events, such as shoeing, etc.

In consequence of the entries being so numerous (quite a record for Bangalore) the management found it impossible to arrange the classes in such a manner as to allow owners to personally show their exhibits in every case; but it was found possible to arrange the classes in such a way as to prevent horses and ponies from being required in the two rings at the same time, and exhibits were allowed to be shown by others than owners whenever it was necessary under the foregoing circumstances. Under the Rules, Classes I. and II. (heavy weight hunters, horses) and V. and VI. (thoroughbred horses and mares) were amalgamated and Class XXIX. (licensed hack gharries) cancelled, for want of sufficient entries.

The weather kept clear throughout the day, with a scorching sun, and the attendance was up to the usual average both morning and evening, the visitors to the show including the Hon'ble Colonel Hugh Daly with Mrs. and Miss Daly, the Yuvaraj of Mysore, and a fairly large number of ladies. There was also a good attendance of cavalry and artillery men, while the 20th Deccan Horse and Mysore Imperial Service Lancers were strongly represented. The arrangements on the grounds left nothing to be desired, except a tent for Press correspondents, these "poor devils" having to sit or stand in the sun the whole time and not even being allowed inside the ropes to get a few "tips" from the Judges for "copy." It is hoped that this omission will be rectified in future years. There were two rings in which the judging was carried out, and two other rings outside the ropes for "collecting" the animals so that no time was lost between the events.

On the first day eleven events were judged in the morning and six in the afternoon, the jumping competitions taking up most of the time. The principal winners of the day were Colonel Desaraj Urs, Commanding Mysore State Troops, Colonel Stephen (and Mrs. Stephen), Mr. Mocatta, and Captain Mewburn, of the 14th (King's) Hussars. The British officers' jumping was superb and was carried out under repeated rounds of applause, led by T. A. from the far end of the ground and taken up by the spectators in the first enclosure. The officers of the Royal Engineers (Q. O. S. M.) were "At Home" during the afternoon and the Band of the 2nd (Q. O.) Cameron Highlanders provided the music. Following are details of the card :—

Second Day, Thursday, 3rd August.

The morning was cloudy and pleasant but it failed to attract many visitors to the Show, the ladies being conspicuously absent. This was no doubt due to the dance given at the United Service Club the previous night. However, the Judges, competitors and exhibits were all there and business began punctually at 7-30, when the country-bred horses and ponies entered in Class VIII. were led into the ring to go under the keen scrutiny of the Judges. The winner of this class was found in Mr. A. Hamud's Pearl, a fine bay, Harebell from H. H. the Maharaja's stables securing second honours. There were something like 50 entries in Class XV. for pony hacks, but several of them were scratched. The Judges did their work with great patience and deliberation and finally made their award in favour of Mr. Fetherstonhaugh's Chatter. In the class for hackney horses, the Yuvaraj's Brigadier was an easy first and Captain Mewburn scored a place win with Porthos. Classes I. and II., light and heavy weight hunters (horses), were amalgamated and judged, the result being another success for the Yuvaraj with his Brigadier. The show of Arab polo ponies was very good, the 14th (King's) Hussars' stables sending in no less than 11 candidates out of 23 that were entered. This went to Mr. Bruce (14th Hussars) and the Yuvaraja's name went up again for second prize, which was well earned by Dauntless. The same number of polo ponies (other than Arabs) were entered in the light weight class, the judging of which occupied so considerable a time that most of the people had left the grounds before the verdict was given. Mr. Nicholson's Beresford was the winner in this class, Gulval and The Nut being placed second and third respectively, while the Yuvaraja's Mystery was "highly commended." Colonel Desaraj Urs' M.V.O., having very sportingly offered a special prize for half section jumping by British officers, this event was got off also. Captain Mewburn and Mr. Darley (14th Hussars) came out with flying colours, their performance being loudly applauded by the spectators. Mr. Palmer and Mr. Welsh (10th Ammunition Column) were the next best.

Judging was resumed in the afternoon, the first competition being in Class XXV. for the best turn-out (single horses or ponies). There were seven traps on show and Mrs. Simpson's with Chance between the shafts, caught the public eye first. Colonel Desaraj Urs. had made a post entry just a few minutes before the bell rang for the event, and when he entered the ring in his handsome trap with Hebe, this showy animal at once became the admiration of all. It took the Judges some time to decide between Chance and Hebe and it was not until Major Badcock had himself driven both of them owners that the verdict was given in favour of Chance. But we had the gratification of seeing the order reversed in the next event, Class XXIV. when Hebe secured the red rosette, Chance taking the blue. Considerable interest was evinced in the Show of thoroughbreds, of which there were some fine specimens. In the pony class, Mr. Dada's Nyria was given the palm, Master Priam from the Maharaja's stables and Mr. Mocatta's Lady Wrangle getting second and third places respectively. The horses and mares were grouped in one class and judged together, and it must have been gratifying to Mr. Apear to see his Koonowla win this. The next were jumping competitions, and there was some very good jumping too. Another event which took some critical judging was the Four-in-Hands. There were five of them from local Corps and Major Badcock brought in his from Hosur, but he was not competing for a prize. The 14th Hussars' drag tooled by Captain Astley, who had Mrs. Stephen with him, was much admired; "O" Battery showed both their drags, Mr. Palmer handled the ribbons of a splendid four and Mr. Welsh was in the box of the other; Captain Ley drove the 20th Deccan Horse drag and the Ammunition Column drag was in the hands of Mr. Alves. Major Badcock, who had Mrs. Badcock up alongside of him, after showing his splendid four-in-hand to the best advantage, mounted the box of the Hussars' drag and put the horses through a severe test. The same was done with Mr. Palmer's drag and the result was a verdict in favour of the Gunners, which elicited tremendous applause. Before the last event on the programme was judged there was some more jumping. The Yuvaraj had very sportingly offered a prize for the highest jumper, and this was won by Private Lyne, "B" Squadron, 14th King's Hussars, whose charger cleared 5 feet 11 inches. There was quite a big crowd of excited mammas, papas and nurses in the ring when the children's ponies were being judged. There were four little misses and four young hopefuls on their mounts and somebody at the ropes suggested that all should get prizes. Little Miss Hudson's Dandy Dick secured the verdict and this concluded the judging.

The closing function of the Show was performed by Mrs. Hugh Daly, who gave away the prizes. With the exception of the prizes in the competition for the troops, which was in money, all the other prizes took the form of silver cups in a variety of handsome designs, most of which came from Barton's. After the distribution was over, the Hon'ble Colonel Daly came to the front, and on behalf of all thanked the Committee, the Secretary, and the Judges for the success of the Show. He congratulated Captain Henderson in having been able to secure the services of such an able co-adjutor as Captain Jackson and in collecting together such an able body of Judges in whose decisions they had the utmost confidence. They were favoured with fine weather on both days, and they had had good sport, particularly in the jumping. His only regret was that H. H. the Maharaja was not present. The Committee had found it quite impossible to hold the Show earlier, when His Highness was here, but he hoped that in future they would be able to arrange for it being held while the Maharaja is in residence in Bangalore. (Applause.) With cheers for Mrs. Daly and the Judges on the call of Captain Henderson, and cheers for the Secretary, the Show closed, to be written down as the biggest one of its kind held in the station.

A REMARKABLE AVIATION FEAT.

LIEUTENANT CONNEAU, the French naval officer, who has won fame in the aviation world as "M. Beaumont," won the Daily Mail's £10,000 prize for the 1,010 miles air race round England and Scotland. He covered the distance in 22 hours 28 minutes 18 seconds, at an average speed of over 45 miles an hour.

Vedrines, another French aviator who finished second, lost the race by 1 hour 9 minutes 47 seconds. His machine also had performed the journey without injury or replacement. Vedrines had really flown faster than Beaumont, but he twice lost his way, and a descent in the wrong place at Bristol cost him the race. British competitors fared badly owing chiefly to breakdowns, and the remaining twelve starters all met with disaster, although, fortunately, the event was not marked by a fatality or serious accident.

The race has demonstrated in most emphatic fashion the great advance which aviation has made since Paulhan flew to Manchester last year. Even if it had ended once more at Manchester and if there were no more of it to be recorded, it would be a great achievement. Two aviators have made a long and most difficult journey. They have conquered obstacles which would have seemed insuperable a year ago. They have flown quite without the elaborate preparations for guidance which were found necessary in the London to Manchester flight, and they have faced weather conditions which would have put an end to any idea of flying less than two years ago.

In other words, the aeroplane is coming into its kingdom. As yet it is a long way from that reliability which alone can give it any more than a spectacular and rather haphazard, military value. The accidents which have put so many competitors out of the running in the present contest is sufficient witness to that, just as the success of Beaumont and Vedrines is witness to the possibilities of the heavier-than-air machine.

The progress up to the present has been very similar to the progress of the motor car in its early days. Most of us remember well enough what distressful, unreliable things those first motors were. They broke down at all times and places. The one thing certain about them was their uncertainty. They panted and puffed along our roads and made themselves hated by everyone. To be enthusiastic over motoring in those days was a difficult business. But we all know what motoring is now.

As it has been with the car, so, there is every reason to believe, it will be with the aeroplane. Its engines are, of course, immeasurably in advance of the engines of the early motor cars, but no one believes that the last word in this respect has been said yet. And in the other details of construction there is ample room for improvement, above and beyond what has already been done in this direction. Every month something is being learned, some fault is being found and remedied. The aeroplane is growing very quickly, and the rapidity of its progress in the past encourages one to hope for its future. But we have a long way to go yet.

At present far too much depends on the man in charge of the machine for aviation to be practised by any but a very few. Very special powers and a very high measure of skill are required to make a successful pilot, and so long as flying remains the preserve of so small a body, it cannot have any great practical value. But already it is becoming easier, as machines are improved, and we cannot doubt that as time goes on it will become easier still. The possibilities of the gyroscope in this respect have not yet been fully explored.

Of course, the sport is tremendously costly. A great deal of the finest work is needed to turn out a sound aeroplane, and, certainly, nothing but the finest work can be admitted when a man's life may depend at any minute on the strength of a single wire, a single piece of wood. The engines, too, are marvels of workmanship, and they cannot be made cheaply yet. But in time, as more of them are made and their manufacture is better understood, it is likely that the price will come down, though it is certain that many years must pass before they can become so cheap as to make an aeroplane worth its cost for any practical purpose.

In the meantime, however, it is forging ahead very rapidly. It has made more progress in a couple of years than any invention of recent memory. Aviators have gained enormously in skill, in confidence of themselves, and in confidence in their machines. Accidents continue to happen with distressing frequency, and, from the nature of things, they are apt to be very terrible. But when the number of aviators at work is considered the ratio is not so high as it sometimes seems to be and there is hope for the future.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The announcement of the suspension of D. Maher by the stewards of the Leicester Meeting for an unsatisfactory explanation of his riding of Lord Rosebery's chestnut colt Sallust in the Tower Plate at that meeting has naturally caused as much sensation here as it has most probably done in all other parts of the world where racing men are gathered together and, as the local stewards have considered it necessary to send the case up to the Jockey Club, it is presumably deemed to be of sufficient gravity to merit punishment which they themselves could not inflict. The stewards of the Jockey Club are Lord Derby, Lord Villiers and Captain Greer. Up to the week ending the 22nd July Maher was head of the Winning Jockeys List, his score then being 60, F. Wootton 58 and C. Trigg 55. The week following that however saw an alteration in these positions and Wootton came up with a rush and headed the list with 68 and C. Trigg also beat Maher by one, his score being 63 against Maher's 62. Maher has been more than once very adversely criticised, but this is, so far as our recollection serves us, the first time that he has been "on the carpet." His handling of Lemberg in the St. Leger last year, in which that heavily-backed horse finished third to Swynford and Bronzino, was very strongly commented upon in more than one quarter, as it was said that with a long straight run-in and no crowd to interfere with his giving the horse plenty of sea-room to make his dash, his getting "pocketed" behind the winner was absolutely inexcusable. Others again said that Maher was the victim of a skilfully baited trap set by little Frank Wootton, who taking stock of the rival's position, deliberately opened out from the rails luring Maher into the belief that he could slip through before Wootton was aware that he was coming. The moment, however, that Wootton heard Lemberg coming up he closed in again and as Bronzino was then up on Swynford's outside Maher was very neatly and completely boxed. The public howled and said all manner of things, as they almost invariably do when a well-backed one is beaten, but whatever was the true story of that race there is no getting away from it that a jockey of Maher's vast experience attempting such a very hazardous and unnecessary thing was "amateurish" to say no more. In this most recent affair there is a direct accusation of crooked riding and the upshot of the reference to the Jockey Club will be awaited with keen interest.

The up-to-date advertising methods of the Blackpool (Clifton Park Club) Summer Steeplechases now in progress, they having commenced on the 1st August, are worthy of the notice of the Stewards of other places where it is desired to cause steeplechasing to flourish. Whole pages of such widely read sporting papers as the Sporting Times, the Sportsman, the Winning Post, etc., etc., have been taken and the fullest use made of the press as an aid to success. Extracts from the many favourable comments on the excellent arrangements which prevail are published: full details of the railway arrangements and of the very substantial amount in prize money which is offered, also of the many free advantages which are given to owners in the way of stabling and accommodation of lads and stable servants travelling with horses engaged at the meetings. An extract from the Sunday Chronicle concerning these up-to-date meetings is of interest and is to the following effect:—

"Think of it—steeplechasing in the summer, with no fear of postponements through the ground being too hard to race upon. Across in France the richest prizes of the steeplechasing season, the Auteuil Hurdle Race, the Grand Steeplechase de Paris—these and many more of the most valuable prizes of the Turf are decided in the summer months. Why, with every advantage in the way of ideal going—a loamy, sandy turf that can never get hard—should not we show our Gallic neighbours that here in England, at breezy, bracing Blackpool, we can provide the best sport of its kind—not in the cold, dread winter months, but in the beautiful days of summer?

"Lord Lonsdale, Sir Peter Walker, and dozens of other getlemen who stand for the best there is in sport heartily supported the idea, and now to-day at Squire's Gate there is what can truly be called a perfectly ideal racecourse.

"Honestly, I can see nothing but success for this big scheme. The enterprize has not stopped at the erection of fine stands and the laying out of a fine racecourse. These are as nothing unless the horses—and the best horses—come, and if the entries for the inaugural meeting are any criterion—and the acceptances prove their worth surely—we shall have sport at Blackpool such as we rarely see in this country. There will be racing at Blackpool on eight days this year, and for those eight days stakes of the total value of no less than £15,000 are offered! Everything is in favour of Blackpool; a model course, splendid entries, and every convenience for all."

On this course they do not despise the aid of artificial watering and the numerous wells in the vicinity make this easy. The conditions on this course are, probably, very much the same as those which confront us in India and yet they have been successfully overcome and where the water-supply is abundant, as it is in most places in India and particularly in Calcutta, we should never be in the unhappy position of having the going too hard. At Blackpool the first thing that they arranged for was an artificial "rainfall" to make the going soft and springy and the next thing they took care to do was to make the prizes worth winning, there being a £1,000 steeplechase on every day of the meeting and two £2,000 chases on some of them. In France the added money in jump races far exceeds that given in any other part of the world and last season's meeting approximately £200,000 was run for all over France in steeplechases and hurdle races. At Auteuil £2,000 and £3,000 chases are not uncommon and there are numerous £1,000 chases and a big £1,000 hurdle race for gentleman riders. Last year one owner nearly topped £50,000 in stakes and there were others who won over £20,000.

The fourth day of the Calcutta Monsoon Meeting was run on Saturday last under slightly improved weather conditions, the few showers that had fallen during the week preceding having done a little towards softening the surface of the ground, but rain is still badly needed, as there is a lot of leeway to make up and the ground has not really had any chance to get properly softened. Artificial means might easily have been employed, but they have not been. There was light rain during the afternoon but not sufficient to make things unpleasant and it was a change from the blazing glare of the three preceding days racing. The stands and paddock were fuller than they have been heretofore and there were several visitors from up-country, including one or two owners, Colonel A. Young, Major Eustace Crawley, Captain Houston, Mr. Miles, etc., etc. The racing was only moderately good and the division of one of the events, the Strand Plate, did not justify itself; in fact, where there are so many double and treble entries it is asking for two bad fields instead of one good one to cut a race in half. It is a different matter where there are not many double entries and it is more or less a certainty that there will be seven or eight runners in each, but the other thing is apt to produce two inferior contests, as it did last Saturday and on the second day of the meeting, when the Sand Track Handicap was divided and gave us one field of four and another of six. In the amateur hurdle races for instance a division might well be arranged oftener than it is for there are numbers of horses that have no chance at all against the better class, but whose owners are deserving of every consideration since they, in a true sportsmanlike spirit, enter and run their horses with no hope whatever of anything coming back. A Lame Duck Hurdle Race for all the honest but slow hunters who have no pretensions to being able to gallop would be a great success. Horses like Desmond, Sauce, Dooneen, The Comet, Wait for Me, Pacific, Velodia, Black Prince, Goldstream, Cairo, etc., are all humble supporters of the general entertainment, "supers" in the piece, who have no chance of "getting a shop" whilst they are put in the same cast as the leading lights and even a Consolation event hardly meets the case, as it is not a good policy to bar a winner merely because he is a winner. We think that there is plenty of material for several hurdle races for the top and the bottom class amongst these "amateur" horses and we hope during the succeeding days that are to come the Stewards will make an effort to give the "lame ducks" a chance.

On Saturday last we began racing at 3-15 P.M., the Oriental Plate, a 7 furlong flat race, being the first item for discussion. With Mahoney Boy scratched the public rushed to get on to the other one in Mr. Evers' stable, Scotch Girl, who has nothing very much to recommend her and is an undersized English mare Mr. Evers bought out of Piper's stable at the beginning of the year. Bird of Freedom changed hands after the entries and appeared on the card as Mr. Jack Scott's. She had the South American jockey Ruiz up and Mr. Scott's orders to him were, we believe, not to spare the steel or the whalebone. The recipe proved a correct one for this ungenerous jade found that stopping was a painful business and for once decided to gallop, leading all the way and defeating Isabela from whom she was getting 10lbs. The winner finished the reverse of generously. Scotch Girl was a moderate third. The winner, it must be noted, carried 4lb. over her handicap so that this brings her concession from Isabela to 6lbs. only.

The second Pony Handicap looked a good thing at the weights for Sidonia especially when Miss Clare was found to be a non-starter and Mandeville also declined the combat. The danger according to the public was Shannon Lass, Major Crawley's little steeplechaser, but Albatross was the real factor that had to be reckoned with and her good performance over hurdles coupled with her form on the flat in the cold weather (vide Calcutta Eighth Extra Meeting, Presidency Plate, 4th March 1911) made her look decidedly a "possibility." In this last-mentioned race Hopscotch won with 9st. 11lb. and Albatross 6st. 11lb. was second and she was getting 13lbs. from Sidonia whom she beat three-quarters of a length for second place. On the present occasion she was getting 23lbs. from Sidonia, actual weight carried, as Albatross put up 6lbs. overweight, so that the handicapper was very considerably out in his calculation for he put them at 29lbs. when Albatross had upon the last occasion that Sidonia met her beaten the latter at only 13lbs. Why this concession of 16lbs.? Albatross won by three lengths easily and there was no necessity for her jockey to indulge in a perfectly useless exhibition with his whip.

In the Ellenborough Hurdle Plate a good field of eight turned out, Tommy Daw being the only non-starter of the nine left in. Craigendorrie was leniently treated and the criticisms of the handicap proved to be amply justified as he won comfortably at the finish from To Kalon who had certainly from 7lb. to 10lb. too much. Mr. Pugh's mare made a very gallant fight of it all the way to the last flight, where her rival's longer stride and superior pace began to tell and once they landed on the flat it was all over bar the shouting. Simonturn ought to have been third as she was made too much use of in the earlier part of the race and, known to be a non-stayer with a fair turn of foot, it was quite the wrong plan of campaign to go out chasing the two top-weights. The pace was hot enough in all conscience and was only a little slower than that of the July Hurdle Plate on the second day on a drier course. On that occasion Craigendorrie won in 2-57¼ with 10st. 6lb.; on Saturday with more than a stone extra, namely, 11st. 9lb., he got home in 2-58⅗ and the distance is about 1½ miles, possibly a bit more as they run it. The horse was ridden on this occasion by Williamson, the newly-arrived steeplechase jockey from Australia, and he exhibited excellent form. His strong finish on Craigendorrie over the last fence was all the more meritorious as he broke the bar of his saddle early in the race and rode from the second fence onwards with only one iron. Williamson is a well-known performer in Australia and has ridden in the last thirteen Flemington Grand Nationals though he has never had the luck to win one. Northmore rode a very fine plucky race on the loser and it was not the jockey's fault that To Kalon did not win.

The Amateur Pony Hurdle Handicap drew seven runners but only six were in it, as Chas was at his old games and refused to join his horses, the starter after giving him every chance, sending the field away without him. In future it is intended, so we believe, to mount him in the paddock and ride him down to the post. This we should say would be a better plan as he obviously objects to his jockey being put on board at the post. They made Charge a good favourite on the strength of his form on the flat and a good school he had gone with Lola during the week, also probably because Mr. Evers had secured the ride on him. There was very little else backed though the bookmakers reported money for Lionel at the last minute. Marconi, of whom the handicapper seems to be unduly fond, was friendless and quite rightly, as he was in about a stone too high on his previous performance. The race was run at a very strong pace, Minnie being responsible for it, but two fences from home both she and Charge jumped into it and, pecking badly, got rid of their riders. A commentator, who viewed the race from the safe vantage of a seat in the stand, said in a daily paper that Lionel interfered with these two ponies and brought them down by crossing them. This is entirely incorrect. Lionel jumped the obstacle perfectly straight and was between the two ponies so that he cannot, as this knowledgeable critic says, have "crossed" them both! Lionel won by twenty lengths. He was getting 2st. 3lb. from Marconi, who finished second, and had won his race a good three furlongs from home. We are interested to see how the handicapper appraises this second defeat of Captain Gourlie's pony. For a twenty lengths beating in a fairly and squarely fought out race he only puts Lionel up about a stone and a half. At level weights Marconi would be badly handicapped.

The big disappointment of the day was Atropine who on his Lucknow form against Longchamps was given a big chance in the Belvedere Plate, but he was left at the post and Northwood despite 5lb. overweight won every yard of the way. Royal Colours was second, hotly hunted home by Wise Hawk to whom she was giving 5lb.

A very small field went for the Strand Plate, Division I, and Mahoney Boy, Politesse, Scotch Girl, Proprietor and Bird of Freedom, all of whom hail from the Circular Road establishment, being struck out, Saloon was backed. The poor old horse has had about enough of it we should say and was one of the first beaten, Mallinyook winning all the way.

The Strand Plate, Division II, was also a bloodless victory, Farthing Bun, who started favourite, making all the running and winning unchallenged by one and three-quarter lengths. Between them out of 25 races so far run at these meetings Messrs. Evers' and Scott's stables have won 15 races, a record that it would be difficult to surpass.

We race in Calcutta again to-day and again on Saturday and though it will be impossible to include to-day's results in this issue we append our selections for this afternoon :—

The entries for Saturday next the sixth day of the Calcutta Monsoon Meeting are very good and in all six races reach double figures. There is again a liberal amount of jump racing and with the greatly improved going caused by the recent rain we ought to witness some excellent sport. There are ten in the Dalhousie Hurdle Handicap for horses, twelve in the Amateur Consolation Hurdle Plate, sixteen in the Autumn Plate, 6 furlongs ; twelve in the Assaye Plate, 6 furlongs ; thirteen in the Consolation Plate for horses, 5 furlongs ; and eleven in the Goomtee Plate, 7 furlongs. In the open hurdle race, the Dalhousie Handicap, there are three horses that have not appeared over the sticks at the Monsoon Meetings this season, Idle, Politesse and Isabela. The two former have both been out over obstacles before, Idle in India and Politesse in England, where her game was hurdling ; but Isabela will be making her début in this class of adventure. She was jumped on Tuesday by Randall and considering that she had never seen a hurdle before she did well, only getting into one of them and nearly unshipping her pilot, who favours the short stirrup over fences. Isabela is, of course, quite unpractised, but if she takes to jumping well she will be decidedly useful, as she has plenty of pace. In the Amateur Consolation Hurdle Race one at any rate of the dozen is probably not going to be eligible to start as a result of this afternoon's operations. In the Autumn Plate Mandeville, whose trainer is evidently tired of seeing him top of the pony handicaps, has made his appearance amongst the horses. As to the rest we have all the old lot plus Model Knight, a big gelding owned by Colonel A. Young. In the Assaye Plate for ponies the only new-comers are Major-General Pilcher's Pompadour and Stella II. There is no particular feature about the Consolation Plate for horses but in the Goomtee Plate Mr. W. T. Miles has White Heather who has not so far run at the meeting.

His Highness the Maharajah of Cooch Behar's horse Fidelio and another one have arrived safely in Bangalore.

In addition to F. Wootton several other jockeys are said to be coming out from home this season and the names of S. O'Donoghue, Rickaby and F. Templeman are mentioned.

It is said that Mr. R. S. Sievier is sending out some horses and also a jockey, but no details are obtainable.

Our Poona correspondent writes :—We have had more than our share of rain this week, and on Wednesday our preambles on the course were interspersed with dashes for cover. This did not however interfere with the sport, but punters nevertheless had rather a thin time of it. The day was not without incident, another jockey was fined for delaying the start, this one being Taylor, and in the last race there was an objection on the grounds of wrong ownership. It was lodged some twenty minutes after the race so that the deferred result of it does not effect cash bets. Kuhn and Bennett were fresh jockeys seen riding, and I noticed L. C. Hoyt on the course.

There were a couple of good things with which punters had to content themselves, one of these being in the first race, in the shape of Bachelor's Knot. I remarked last week that he was a promising horse, and he being backed down to odds on never left the race in doubt. Lady Lomond had quite a number of supporters and made the running for a time, but she is not perfectly ready yet and failed to stay. Second place, as in the previous jump race, went to War Cloud, followed by Sans Souci, a breedy little English mare, but a lazy one who was a good way out of her ground at the half mile.

On his shewing with a good class last time, Zuffer Beg appeared to be as good as anything in the first division of the Lohagaon Plate, but Mezahim was better fancied, Fado next. None of these gambles materialised, Fado flattering for some time. As they began to race Young Thara came up and though Fado's stable companion Pendil made a game effort, the former got there in a good race.

The pony race on Bombay form pointed to Leo Grande, but Mr. Galstaun's pair were known to have done well on the track and the weight of money which came for Village Girl made her eventually a quarter point better favourite than the chestnut. The race of course rested between the two, but Leo Grande had no chance of catching the other as she assumed a long lead of about ten lengths and won on her own. Leo Grande finished second, but Waimoho finished in a manner which speaks well for her future and Borgie is likely to do better when fit.

Quite the best finish of the day occurred in the mile for newly landed Arabs, Hyder Beg being favourite in a good betting race from Terror and Aga. Hyder Beg was well up all the way, Hoojax making the pace, but neither were in it when it came to the finish. As they faced for home Aga was in command with Terror close on him, and they raced neck and neck for the last furlong. Terror took a very slight lead, and in a great finish got there by a neck.

Considerable interest was taken in the Medium Plate and the market took some time to settle down. When it did Gallileo was rather shorter than San Remo, Huka carrying a good deal of stable confidence, but not much public money. The last named ran another great race, leading all the way and holding San Remo when the latter put in his run. Black Douglas came well at the finish and looks like carrying out the promise he gave in Bangalore.

Being the only one left in of that stable, Tachreet was backed down to an even money chance for the second division of the Lohagaon Plate, Brazee, Ashroff and Lookman the others getting support. Bay Middleton made the running, then Lookman shot through with Woolwinder and the former got there before Tachreet could make his presence felt. It was a great performance with 9-10 up, even better than the stable anticipated.

Last came the worst upset we have known for some time, the extent of which may be imagined when it is said that the only Tote ticket realised Rs. 1,278, this being held by Mrs. Dyson. Sir Albert was favourite but failed to stay, the second fancy being Sweden who was getting there all right when Kimberley put in a very fast finish and beat him. An objection was lodged for wrong ownership, but at a meeting on Friday this was overruled.

After a very liberal dose of Monsoon weather, it was perfect on Saturday for the fourth Extra and the attendance must have been the biggest so far. The card was also a most interesting one and there were some close finishes thrown in, whereas the punters had about their share of the exchanges with the 'enemy.' Mr. Apcar and trainer Watson have put in an appearance, but none of this stable have been out yet.

As regards the card, the first race was the Novice Plate, divided, and a good thing presented itself in Dilkush, though the presence of Evans on Ordinary made the latter a better favourite. An outsider in Baloz made the running and performed well all through, but he had no chance with Dilkush, who caught him at about the distance and won in hollow fashion. Little Laffy this time got his place, Ordinary just missing, and another disappointment was Secretary, who was never prominent. The Stewards had Brown the jockey up over his riding of Red Monk and expressed themselves dissatisfied and cautioned him about future riding.

Turning to the other division, the same stable were expected to win with St. Anthony, but this went down, though the pony got his place. An unknown quantity in Kharaman was well backed, as also Vazir, and these two fought it out. Vazir got all the best of the start with Clever Boy, and his connections had the satisfaction of seeing him stave off St. Anthony's challenge, but as he did so a very apparent danger threatened in Kharaman. It was a most exciting finish and the latter only got there through a better bit of riding by Brown.

Again the Welter Plate provided a cert in Tofic Pasha, the field being reduced to four. Little Sanaya was with the favourite for some time but could not stay, and it was left to Electric to chase Tofic Pasha home—a very hopeless chase!

A good class was seen out in the Monsoon Plate, Ferguson having no less than three in it, so that when it was heard that Cherry Hackle was the pick of them there was a great rush. Towards the end the keenness about the mare wore down a bit and good money came for Black Douglas and Metal Boy. It was a sensational race, Tangaroa jumping out in front to make the running closely followed by the favourite, Comet, Watch Tower and Metal Boy. As they turned the bend Cherry Hackle left her stable companion and when she held Metal Boy it was thought a good thing. Near home it was realised that Black Douglas was gradually creeping up and finishing strong. He caught the others at the beginning of the Stand, and staying them out won a good race. The last few yards were too much for the youngster, and there is no doubt that the winner is turning out a great horse after his Bangalore promise.

Easily as Famous and Tajilmulook beat him the last time, the support for Precious in the Satara Plate was full of confidence and he started a good even money favourite. The ten pounds difference on Famous made more of a difference than might have been imagined and it was no sort of a race. Artist made most of the running, and at the half mile Tajilmulook and Famous came up to him. The latter led into the straight, but here Precious had made up all his ground and once he came all was over.

Ten went out for the Old Stand Plate, and from the start of betting the general opinions favoured Coat of Arms, San Remo and Hilarity also expected. Sholto made all the pace right up to the distance, Oakton and Ballymaclure in turn being beaten. At the turn San Remo was running second and Coat of Arms was close up on the outside, but seemingly beaten and under the whip. Hilarity was promising at one time, but could do nothing with the front two, San Remo passing and holding Sholto safe. Ramshaw thus won the two horse races, and has to be congratulated.

Three were picked out in the Arab Novice, Bushoosh being a very decided favourite from Young Japan and Guinea Merchant. In thinking that the race rested between the three we were right. Bushoosh made all his own running, but on entering the straight was under the whip. Guinea Merchant came at him first, then Young Japan came with a well judged run and pipped them both.

O'Neill had a spill, the saddle slipping on Ruby Tin, but he got off without serious injury.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—A meeting of members of the Mysore Province Homing Society was held recently in their office premises, East Parade, when the Honorary Secretary, Mr. G. F. Edwards, presented his annual report for the past season, ending with the 31st ultimo.

Races were successfully flown last year during the months of July to November including five races for young birds up to 204 miles and a Championship Race for single nominated birds, for a distance of 245 miles. Five races for "any age" birds were flown up to 501 miles. One hundred and seventy-four birds were put into training for the Young Birds' Races and 105 for "Old Bird" Races. And although the weather was exceptionally bad for racing during the early part of the monsoon, the losses of birds were under 5 per cent., a great improvement on previous years, showing that member are acquiring a better knowledge in getting their birds into condition. The report goes on to say that all the races were carried out successfully and without any hitch; and the Honorary Secretary desires to place on record his appreciation of the valuable assistance rendered the Society by the stationmasters of Bangalore City, Hubli, Gadag, Telgi and Hotgi. Competition was keen in all the races, only a few minutes, and in several cases seconds only, dividing winners and placed birds.

The following is a provisional programme which has been drawn up for races to be flown this season:—

Young Birds—24th August, Bangalore to Birsandra, 74 miles; 31st August, to Arsikere, 104 miles; 7th September, to Kadur, 125 miles; to Shivani, 150 miles; to Davengere, 204 miles; to Haveri (no date fixed yet), 245 miles. (Produce Championship.)

Old Birds—28th September, to Haveri, 245 miles; to Gadag, 327 miles; to Telgi, 414 miles; to Hotgi, 501 miles; to Poona, 625 miles.

The Central Assault-at-Arms for the Bangalore, Madras and Southern Brigades including the station of Bellary, opened here on Wednesday morning (9th) and concluded late this evening. The programme was a lengthy one of 64 events, providing for four classes of competitors, viz., British Officers, British Troops (including Volunteers), Indian Officers and Indian Troops (including the Imperial Service Lancers). A strong Committee and Executive with Lieutenant R. L. Palmer of "O" Battery, R.H.A., as Honorary Secretary, was responsible for carrying out the programme in which they were assisted by quite an army of competent judges. Things have gone very well indeed, except that the events, once they started, were not brought on according to the timing in the programme, which considerably delayed the work, especially in the mornings, when competitions were in progress till 12 noon sometimes. This is due in some measure, to the want of a separate officer as Ringmaster and it is hoped the omission to appoint one this year will not be repeated.

The Tournaments and other competitions were held on the South Parade maidan and thousands of all classes of people congregated in and around the enclosures every afternoon to witness the tamasha going on in the arena. The morning's events did not attract many people, as the best things were reserved for the afternoons, when we have the band and all sorts of "displays," such as Musical Rides, Trick Riding, Vaulting on Horseback, Artillery Driving, Club Swinging, Highland Dancing, etc., etc.; and "At Homes" by the officers of one or other of the Regiments in the station, at which a large number of guests, especially the fair sex, congregate and partake of the hospitality of their hosts.

Besides the money prizes offered to the troops, to be won by them in each event, there were prizes offered for the Best-Men-at-Arms in each class, or in other words, a sort of Championship. The marks are given in the proportion of 4, 2 and 1 respectively for every first, second and third prize won and are counted only in the mounted and dismounted events (separately) in which arms are used. Similar Championships were given for British and Indian Officers; Messrs. Barton, Son and Company are presenting a Cup for the British Officers' Championship and Messrs. Krishnish Chetty and Sons are giving one for Native Officers.

In the Mounted events (British) the 14th (King's) Hussars have done well, but considering their small numbers, the 10th Ammunition Column deserve credit for the way they show up on the winning lists.

The British Tug-of-War this year was not up to much, the Cameron Highlanders having it all their own way. The best pull was between the 81st Pioneers and 83rd Light Infantry, which lasted for 6mins. and 50secs. The Sappers pulled over the 83rd Light Infantry in the final after a fairly hard struggle of about 3mins. 30secs. In the Escalading Race, the time of the British winning team was 20-1 5secs., the winners in the Indian section doing it in exactly the same time. The Gymnastics by Instructors was very good, but rather protracted; there were no entries from non-Instructors. All the combats, mounted and dismounted, were hotly contested and the Championship for the Best-Man-at-Arms, was wrested from Carnegie, who had won it for the past three years, by Goddard of the same regiment (14th Hussars). For the Dismounted Championship, the winner, Sergeant Cameron of the Cameron Highlanders, had not much work to put in. Mr. Palmer, of "O" Battery, R.H.A., who was leading at noon to-day for the British Officers' Championship was displaced by Captain Henderson, 27th Light Cavalry, this afternoon, when he took first prize for Riding and Jumping. Resildar Amir Muhammad Khan, of the 20th Deccan Horse, was never in danger of losing his Championship, nor was Sowar Mir Abid Ali of the same corps troubled about anybody beating him. The 119th Infantry have done well in finding the best man in the dismounted events.

A word of thanks is due to the Honorary Secretary for the excellent arrangements he made for accommodating spectators to view the tamasha and to those who provided the many displays, although there was nothing novel in them. Mrs. Hugh Daly presented the prizes at 6-30 P.M., and there was great cheering during and at the close of this pleasant function.

The 14th (King's) Hussars have made a big thing this year of their annual Boxing Tournament, by throwing open some of the events to All-India. The Tournament has been in progress since Tuesday night and will close to-night or on Monday night, so I hold over a report of the same for your next issue.

Several years ago it was suggested that a fine model of a racehorse should be taken as the stamp for the sculptor in place of the impossible type of horse used as a mould, the why and the wherefore of the latter not being very clear.

Artists have designed curious animals when depicting certain racing scenes, and engravers have accentuated the types, but the sculptor has got into a curious groove, and no break-away from the conventional has been attempted until the last few years. Instead of the stocky, unicorn-headed impossibility, two or three years ago it was asked that a model in stone or bronze should be erected on Newmarket Heath, and, with a little encouragement, it might have been.

There have been several remarkable types of horses seen on racecourses during the last few years. Among these mentioned previously were Zinfandel, Sarcovino, Bachelor's Button. Since then we have seen Slieve Gallion, Black Arrow, and especially Spearmint—all beautiful animals. Swynford is a real good looker, and so was Neil Gow.

Probably many owners have their fancies as to good looks, but in view of the possible revolution in the design of horses for statuary, there should be no difficulty in settling on a definite type.

Some little time back there was a long discussion in the English papers in which a sculptor who has many examples of his art in various European capitals took part. He was interested in the topic referred to above, and declared that he had broken away from tradition, and would be prepared to become "quite unorthodox" if he found it acceptable. What should be done is for some notability to be immortalised in bronze and the design of the horse taken from a thoroughbred.

A model from one of the great racehorses might show the horse too fine drawn, and if the horse were left until some time after he retired he might appear too "stallicny. The right moment would be, say, a very few weeks after a great animal had been turned out of training or in the winter, when a horse had been eared up.

There is sufficient local patriotism for racing in certain English towns to immortalise certain great horses with or without a rider. Putting aside Newmarket, which could do with two or three bronzes, surely Doncaster is essentially a town which could support the above suggestion, considering such a large contribution to the municipal funds comes from the profits of racing.

There might be a distinctive landmark on the highest part of Epsom Downs and one at Ascot, while at Goodwood, if properly placed, it could be seen a hundred miles away. Perhaps there is too much difference of opinion elsewhere to hope for much extension of the idea, but perhaps His Majesty would erect a statue of Minoru at Newmarket or Windsor, and Mr. J. B. Joel offer one of Sunstar at St. Albans

Possibly, in the future, Sir C. Assheton-Smith might give one for the paddock of Aintree and Mr. Hall Walker one to York, considering the number of times he has won the Gimcrack Stakes. Future generations would be educated, and many places beautified.

Another Bisley has come and gone and the King's Prize went to Canada. The victory of Private Clifford was as generously welcomed as are all triumphs at Bisley. When he entered on the final stage he brought up no very big total—there were six competitors ahead of him. But the training at long ranges which Canada affords, in a way impossible in this country, told at the greater distances, and, shooting very steadily, Private Clifford won by six points. All that Lord Kitchener said about the National Rifle Association in presenting the prizes will be endorsed by those who have been at Bisley. Each year there is a real effort to bring the various competitions a little nearer to the actual conditions of possible need. The shooting this year did not show that almost mechanical accuracy which at one time threatened to deprive shooting competitions of interest. The alternation of success and failure in the King's Prize was typical of most of the shooting. Neither the Silver Medallist nor the Bronze Medallist was successful at the long ranges. And that is as it should be if Bisley is to retain the splendid uncertainty which makes it a training not only in shooting, but in stability of nerves and coolness of head.

We see that Dr. E. M. Grace, the well-known cricketer, left estate of the gross value of £6,533, with £4,884 net personality. The money goes to his widow for life and on her decease it is to be divided among his three sons.

Woolfe, the swimmer, is a trier if ever there was one. Twenty times in all he has tried to get across the English Channel without success and after each failure he has returned to the business as fresh and determined as ever. Twice has he got within a mile of the shore, his last disappointment being on the 21st July when, after an effort lasting nearly fifteen hours, he had to give it up when within a mile of St. Margaret's Bay. Details of the swim will be found in our epitome of English Sport this week. Woolfe says he will have yet another go in the near future: if Captain Webb's great achievement is ever to be equalled surely this stout-hearted fellow is the man for the job.)

To the average Indian sportsman, with his standing camp, his cook, his servants, and cheap cartage arrangements, the tabloid meal would probably make no special appeal; but it is different in other countries where the "dessicated dinner" has its attractions. Nowadays a man can carry a neat parcel, weighing 10 ounces, in his pocket and be perfectly provisioned for a day. The packet contains 2 ounces of kedgeree for breakfast, 2 ounces of ration biscuits for lunch, and 4 ounces of military stew for dinner. The Daily Telegraph explains that this compression is obtained by a new process: the stew is cooked and then dried by a secret method till it looks like a few chips. When required it is warmed in water, and the chips and dust take on not only their original appearance, but their primal flavour and nourishing power.

The Bayne-Blauvelt Bill to prevent the sale in New York State of all wild American game has passed the Assembly unanimously and is now law. The provisions will astonish game preservers on this side. Stated briefly, the new law absolutely prohibits in New York State, at all seasons, the sale, or importation for sale, of any species of American wild game, save hares and rabbits, those rodents having been declared a pest to fruit-growers. No longer is it possible for ruffed grouse, pinnated grouse, any American quail, woodcock, snipe, or any American shore-bird, wild goose, brant, or wild ducks of any species to be sold in the State of New York, no matter where they may have been killed. The Bayne law provides, however, that certain species of game that can be reared successfully in captivity and killed by hand may be sold and consumed, under certain restrictions. It is provided that anyone who wishes to breed and rear game for sale may procure a State licence for 50 dollars, under which he may breed, rear and sell under official tags the following species:—elk, white-tailed deer, mallard duck, black duck and Old World pheasants of all species. All these must be killed and marketed as the law directs, in a manner which will not permit the substitution of any wild game for domestic game. Everything killed is officially tagged, and the metal tags must remain in place until the game is sold and served. In addition to the above, the law provides for the importation and sale under tag of the following Old World species:—European red deer, roe-buck and fallow deer, Scotch grouse, black game, black plover (lapwing), European red-legged partridge and Egyptian quail. The five species of European birds last named were included at the instance of the game dealers, and their presence in the Bill was strongly objected to by the supporters of the measure. It was declared, however, by the chief manager of the campaign, that "the Bayne Bill loses none of its force or virtue for the protection of American wild game; and so long as Europe is quite indifferent to the sale of her game, why should we worry about the five European birds." This game-protection Bill had the strong support of the most prominent game associations, sporting clubs and zoological societies in the States, and it was introduced to prevent the continued wholesale slaughter of wild birds and animals by "pothunters" for the New York markets.

That the man who adopts flight by artifice is in constant peril we all know; that nature's "aviators" are not always safe is proved by a rather startling experience mentioned by the Glasgow News as having befallen the driver and fireman of an express train on the run from Carlisle to Glasgow the other night. As the train was speeding through a lonely part of the South of Scotland, there was a sudden heavy blow upon the round outlook window of the locomotive cab, the glass broke and shattered inside, the fireman, who was struck, having a narrow escape from serious injury. What had caused the damage? An examination of the footplate disclosed the body of a large owl—dead as a door nail, it need hardly be added, after an impact so violent as to smash the thick glass of the engine look-out.

An amusing story is recorded by the Frankfurter Zeitung of a curious adventure which befell the fish in the River Dill at Dorlar. The fishermen noticed for some days that their prey were behaving in a very curious fashion. Some of them were swimming backwards, others sideways, and others up and down—all in such different ways as to suggest they were drunk. Investigations showed that they were, as a matter of fact, badly intoxicated. The explanation is no less curious than their behaviour. Two millers, whose mill was on the river at Dorlar, had recently converted it into a yeast factory. They do not belong to the yeast makers' syndicate, and sell their yeast at a lower price than is asked elsewhere. But in order to be able to do this they have been obliged to avoid the dues on alcohol, which is a side-product of the making of yeast. The alcohol thus unsaleable had, therefore, been thrown into the river, and in such great quantities as to have a demoralising effect on the river's inhabitants.

Now that a man has shot the Horse Shoe Falls at Niagara in a steel barrel, sustaining no other injuries except a broken leg, we can safely recommend this pastime to all those who are in need of a pastime that is healthy and do not care if it is rather slow.

Two athletes well-known on Indian tracks took a prominent part in the British Army Championships at Aldershot last month. Major E. O'Brien not only won the 120 yards hurdles event; but was clocked at 16secs., which is a record for the meeting. Lieutenant G. E. Dunsterville, of the Devons, was placed third. This fine athlete is the son of Colonel K. S. Dunsterville who in the early days of the Bengal Presidency Athletic Meetings used to show some of them the way.

The Elliott Shield Football competition was won last week by the Scottish Churches F. C. who beat the Presidency College by 3 goals to nil. The Presidency College were the Shield holders and had won the trophy from 1904 to 1908, the Scottish Churches being victorious in 1909.

The All-India cricket team met the Scottish Counties at Perth and batting first scored 165. Their opponents replied with 210. The Indians compiled 218 in their second innings and the Scottish Counties going in again scored 174 for eight wickets, thus winning by 2 wickets. The Indian team then went over to Belfast where they met the Northern Cricket Union. The Indians had first lease of the wickets and put together 324, Meherhomjee 96, Salamuddin 64 and Jayaram 57 being the chief scorers. They then dismissed all their opponents for 26: Balu taking 5 wickets for 9 and Salamuddin 4 for 11. Following on the Northern Cricket Union could only make 65 and the Indians won a remarkable match by an innings and 233 runs. Balu has now taken 100 wickets during the tour.

Appended are the results of the important cricket matches played in England during the past week:—

Surrey beat Notts, at the Oval, by 316 runs.

Northants beat Leicestershire, at Northampton, by seven wickets.

Middlesex beat Sussex, at Brighton, by three wickets.

Essex beat Derbyshire, at Derby, by seven wickets.

Gloucestershire beat Somerset, at Bristol, by 227 runs.

The following matches were drawn, the teams placed first winning on the first innings:—Hants vs. Kent, Warwick vs. Worcester, and Yorks vs. Lancs.

Essex beat Notts, at Leyton, to-day by an innings and twenty-six.

Middlesex beat Surrey, at the Oval, by an innings and twenty-four.

Lancashire beat Kent, at Canterbury, by nine wickets.

Leicestershire beat Yorkshire by an innings and 20 runs.

Northants beat Sussex, at Northampton, by 138 runs.

Worcestershire beat Somerset, at Taunton, by seven wickets.

Warwickshire beat Derbyshire, at Birmingham, by 165 runs.

Hampshire drew with Gloucestershire, at Southampton, but led on the first innings.

Surrey beat Leicestershire, at Leicester by an innings and 31 runs.

Kent beat Somerset, at Taunton, by an innings and 225 runs.

Sussex defeated Hants, at Horsham, by seven wickets.

Bill Squires and Bill Lang, the two heavy-weight Australian boxers met for the third time at Brisbane last week, when Lang knocked Squires out in the fifth round. Squires was once the Australian champion and till he met Tommy Burns at Colma, California, in July 1907, he had only been once beaten out of 18 contests, twelve of which had been secured by the knock-out route. Tommy Burns disposed of him in one round and then Jack Twin Sullivan beat him in 19 rounds at 'Frisco, and Jim Flynn beat him in six rounds at Bakersfield. He then met Jem Roche in Dublin and won in four rounds. Matched again with Tommy Burns at Neuilly in June 1908 he was again outed, this time in 8 rounds, and a third encounter, a couple of months later, in Sydney, once more ended in Burns' favour, the fight going 13 rounds. Squires next met Lang in Sydney in February 1909 and lost in the 17th round. A second meeting in January 1910 also ended in a win for Lang, the fight going 20 rounds. Bill Lang took up the game in 1905 and of nine fights during his first two years in the ring he won five, drew one, and lost three. He then met Jack Johnson in Melbourne and was beaten in 9 rounds. His next eleven battles were all victories and then he ran up against Tommy Burns in Melbourne in September 1908 and was put out in 6 rounds. He next beat Jim Griffin, knocked out Bob Fitzsimmons in 12 rounds, and was twice victorious over Squires. Another match with Tommy Burns in Sydney in April last year went the full 20 rounds, the verdict going to Burns, but the opinion of many was that Lang was at least entitled to a draw. He fought a 6 round no-decision contest with Al Kaufmann at Philadelphia in September last year and then went over to England where he appeared in two fights. The first was with Sid Burns, whom he beat in twelve rounds; the other with Sam Langford and the negro got the verdict, the Australian being disqualified for a foul in the sixth round. Returning to Sydney he met Jack Lester, Tommy Burns' discovery, who only stayed out 6 rounds, when he was disqualified for going down to avoid punishment.

Doubtless our old friend Reuter has long since wired you the result of the big air race round the United Kingdom and told you how "Beaumont," the French naval officer, and Vedrines, the French mechanic, made a fine duel of it, the first named winning the Daily Mail prize of £10,000 and the second being awarded a consolation prize of £200.

The race started from Brooklands at 3 p.m. last Saturday and the finishing points for the various sections in which it was flown were Hendon, Edinburgh, Bristol, Brighton and back to Brooklands—1,010 miles in all. Seventeen started, including three Englishmen, but all but two broke down or retired for various reasons before completing the third stage.

Perhaps some of your readers who take an interest in aviation may find food for reflection in the following figures giving the distances and "Beaumont's" times. He won by little more than an hour—a remarkably small margin for a course of 1,010 miles.

In flying as in most other departments of human endeavour, practical experience counts for a very great deal, and it is not therefore surprising, even if it be a little disappointing, that the lead in the reliability contest should have been taken by the two representatives of France, whose neck-and-neck struggle has been watched with tense excitement by the whole nation, indeed, by the whole civilised world.

Both "Beaumont" and Vedrines are born airmen. Strong of nerve and hard as nails their pluck is only equalled by their skill, but beyond these qualifications they have had the immense advantage of having been competitors in other long distance flights, and they have evidently made splendid use of their opportunities for gaining experience.

Everything, then, goes to show that apart ev[en] from physical endurance, which is largely the res[ult] of training, knowledge of the particular kind [of] work demanded in covering long distances acro[ss] strange country is essential. The sum total of thi[s] knowledge is rapidly increasing, however, and as the machine grows almost daily more reliable through ceaseless experiment and improvement, so the airmen get more used to what but a short while ago was a strange element.

Thus the men and their machines advance together, and the understanding of the latter by the former becomes more and more perfect. If anyone had said a year ago that this circuit of over 1,000 miles with its compulsory descents at controls and its hours of rest, would be covered in four days he would have been scoffed at by all but a few of his kind. Who shall say what another year may bring forth, for the advance is likely for a time to be more, and not less, rapid than in the past. I well remember the day when I saw my first motor-car, a creature like a great bath upon wheels, a toy for a skilled mechanic. Not such a long memory is that car halted in Whitehall while its driver probed amongst its steel guts. But nowadays, though I know [no] more of machinery, the taxi-cab takes me where I will. If "Beaumont" can take himself to Edinburgh to-day, flying easily, there will come when some successor of "Beaumont's," some arrogant mechanic very like a taxi-cab driver, will take me up and fly with me across the Channel or over the Pyrenees, registering his fare upon a dial.

Our rule in India and the great and hopeful "industrial revolution," the spread of credit banks and agricultural co-operation, the immense advance and increase in population and manufactures, the fine prospects of a good harvest, and the suppression of the opium traffic—these great things and not "scenes," were the features last Wednesday night when the Indian Budget was unfolded by Mr. E. S. Montagu, the Under-Secretary for India.

There was a cutting rebuke, of course, to the safe sedition-mongers of the type with which the Government is plagued in India and in the House of Commons.

"So long as there are men who lurk safely in the background and instigate outrage," said Mr. Montagu, "so long outrage will continue."

The Under-Secretary told of the coming glories of the great Durbar, and made every hearer want to go and see it. He said about 100,000 persons would see it, and about a million would enjoy themselves on the great pleasure plain.

"It is not the first time an Emperor has been crowned at Delhi," said the Under-Secretary, "but it will not be necessary on this occasion to decapitate 500 thieves as a part of the ceremony, to terrorise the perverts." The sacrifice of "500" made many members laugh. They thought he said 500 "peers" not "thieves."

The Indian census was a strange and wonderful thing, and had been carried out with an expeditious speed that shamed Whitehall. The population of India was:—

In 1911	...	315,000,000

The provisional figures were got out in nine days—in sharp contrast with the seven weeks it took in England. This was due to the great and earnest army of voluntary workers.

These workers had resource, too. They had to fight weird ideas. During one census certain tribes became convinced that the enumeration was nothing but a preliminary to their being sold as slaves. The officials found it necessary to invent "a plausible hypothesis" to replace this idea, so they said a bet had been made between the Empress Victoria and the Czar of Russia as to which had the larger number of subjects, and the reputation of the Empress was at stake, so it behoved every tribe to return its full number of people. It worked excellently.

There were rumours about reducing the army in India, but Mr. Montagu announced that the military forces would be kept up to a standard sufficient to maintain defence and peace.

He ended on a note of hope and a word of caution against hustling the Orient.

"A million pounds is to be spent on the Durbar—a meaningless display," snarled the pestilential Keir Hardie. This person wanted the King's visit to be signalised by letting all the political criminals out of gaol!

Judd-street has sunk in my estimation. It has been writing a letter to the Evening News declaring that it does not like the music of the bagpipes! It seems that a detachment of Scots Guards, returning from Edinburgh, went through Judd-street "squealing," and the writer of the letter says:—"Judd-street behaves liberally to street organs. But if Sandy Smith, the piper, depended on Judd-street he would not earn the price of salt for his porridge." All I can say is, that I am very sorry for Judd-street's poor taste. I am no enemy of the piano-organ—I have often admired the effects produced by the jangling notes jarring with the thunder of a heavy van, the shrieks of children, and the clatter of milk cans—but one cannot compare these bizarre noises with the noble and antique appeal of the Dorian piper.

There are some plays which never grow old. And it is a notable fact that the great majority of them are melodramas. The probable reason is that good, wholesome, robust melodrama has that about it which appeals to all generations, because it appears to humanity itself—obvious sentiment, obvious humour, and rousing scenes of action! So it is with W. G. Wills's "A Royal Divorce." It is a good many years since the piece was produced, but its revival at the Lyceum last Wednesday night by Messrs. Walter and Fredk. Melville showed that it retains a remarkable freshness and vigour. The story of Napoleon and his affairs, indeed, got straight to the hearts of the audience, who received it with all the enthusiasm of a brand new play.

One of the chief reasons of an emphatic success was the excellence of the acting. First among an admirable company stood Mr. Frank Lister. A better Napoleon one could not wish to see. The character as it left the hands of the author was none too clearly defined, but Mr. Lister breathes life into it, strengthens the characterisation, makes it real and convincing and arresting. A splendid piece of character acting, finely conceived from every point of view.

Miss Ethel Warwick, tender, sincere, emotionally powerful, was exceedingly effective as the Empress Josephine; and that capital actress, Miss Edyth Olive, gave a strikingly individualistic rendering of Marie Louise.

"Sally Bishop." Mr. Temple Thurston's dramatisation of his novel, produced at the Prince of Wales' this week, is not a great play, but it will not be easily forgotten. We are accustomed to accept the easy assertion that English acting is a thing of small account, not to be compared with the acting in the French and German theatres, but last night Miss Agnes Thomas in "Sally Bishop" proved that the art of acting flourishes triumphantly in London. The actress made the play remarkable.

Her part was very human—a woman strong, humorous, plain, fighting the world alone, and Miss Thomas played it magnificently. Her reading was clear, comprehensive, perfect. Every mood was felt and reflected. Every line was spoken for all it was worth. Into a scheme that was mainly artificial and theatrical Miss Thomas, with Mr. Thurston's aid, for his, of course, was the conception of the character, brought a note of reality. She was genuine flesh and blood.

The story, as told in the play, concerns the love of Sally Bishop, a typist unlucky enough to work ten hours a day for John Hewitt Traill, a well-to-do barrister. Traill is unconventional. He does not like the "smart set"—which, by the way, surely disappeared at least five years ago—and he also, which seems inconsistent, dislikes the idea of marriage. So he persuades Sally to live with him in his commodious rooms in Saville-row.

After a while Sally annoys him and he leaves her and becomes engaged to Miss Standish Roe. But when he discovers that Miss Standish Roe has also had adventures, and when Sally for love of him tries to commit suicide by shutting the windows and turning on the gas, Traill repents of his "unconventionality" and determines to marry Sally after all.

It is all very sentimental and very improbable, but the play is not without ingenuity, and it has scenes—particularly in the first act—that are really delightfully amusing. Moreover, it contains Janet Hallard, and Janet is played by Miss Agnes Thomas.

There is a promoted bank clerk who appears for a few moments who is a sheer delight, and here again Mr. Thurston is lucky in his cast, the part being played with restrained but irresistible humour by Mr. A. W. Baskcomb. Miss Daisy Markham plays Sally with considerable intelligence, and Mr. Dennis Eadie is the Traill, as the programme announces, "by arrangement with Messrs. Vedrenne and Eadie." Mr. Eadie is a very clever actor, and it is a matter for congratulation that Mr. Eadie has allowed Mr. Eadie to appear in "Sally Bishop."

It is a bold experience to produce a new play in this weather and at this time of year, but it should be an experiment that succeeds—if only for Miss Thomas' sake. Moreover, it is quite a good entertainment.

AN AWKWARD ENCOUNTER WITH WILD ELEPHANTS.

Thanks to the rigid enforcement of the rules for their preservation wild elephants are still comparatively numerous throughout the Terai and are often the cause of serious loss to the cultivator owing to their fondness for visiting his rice fields, from which he is almost powerless to drive them, as well as a source of danger to the sportsman and his followers. As a rule the females are more or less timid and harmless even when they have a young one at foot, but old tuskers, even though not "must" or habitual rogues, are often most ill-tempered and aggressive, ready to charge human beings, bullock carts and even tame elephants, whether male or female, at sight.

Not long ago towards the end of the cold weather I was doing a quiet and solitary shoot in the Terai with two elephants only, both females. One of these was a very quiet and reliable animal, perfectly steady under fire and willing to face anything, while her mahout was a first rate man at his work and as keen as mustard. The other was a very small, young and timid beast, fit only to take part in a quiet beat or carry harmless game, and her mahout was young and inexperienced. One morning expecting to see nothing more formidable than a sambur stag, or perhaps with great luck a leopard, and intending to beat over some rather broken and precipitous ground along the outer spurs of the foot-hills I dispensed with the howdah and had a pad only put on the staunch elephant. My orderly sat on the pad behind me, while the small elephant carried the local shikari. We left camp about 9 A.M., but saw nothing for some time. We then beat across a low plateau pretty thickly covered with bush and scrub jungle with large trees at intervals, a very likely-looking spot indeed for a herd of sambur at that hour of the day. I carried my ·256 Mannlicher loaded with hollow-pointed bullets in my hand, my second weapon being an ordinary hammer 12 bore, loaded with smokeless powder and "Lethal" bullets, which my orderly held ready to hand to me at a moment's notice.

Under my directions the small elephant was going along parallel to my elephant at a distance of about sixty yards, and was only visible to me at intervals when we happened to be crossing a ride or passing through a more than usually open bit. We were pushing along very quietly so as not to "jump" any game that there might happen to be about too suddenly, when all in a moment there was a tremendous crashing on my left as if a large herd of sambur had broken away in great alarm. I could see nothing however, not even the other pad elephant. I whispered to the mahout to urge his elephant forward into more open ground ahead in the hope that a stag might cross in front of us, and then suddenly there was a terrific trumpet some distance away to our left front and the next moment I saw a big tusker, stained all over a dull red with earth which he had evidently been wallowing in or throwing over himself, going away from us diagonally, like an express train with his trunk stretched out in front of him. We could hear his ponderous feet striking the hard ground like a steam hammer in rapid succession, and I never realised before that an elephant could ply his legs so fast or get over the ground at such a pace. In about a minute he disappeared over the edge at the far end of the plateau, a few more crashes seemed to die away in the distance and then there was a dead silence.

We stood still for a minute or two listening for any indications of what had become of the other elephant and its riders and then moved cautiously over towards the spot where we had last heard them. We could see or hear nothing for a while but then came on the shikari standing bareheaded on the ground and looking decidedly dazed and dishevelled. He seemed much relieved to see us and proceeded to give us his version of what had happened. He said that they were going quietly along on their elephant when suddenly some wild elephants rushed away to their left and at the same time the big tusker, whom we had heard and seen, charged straight down on them from a distance of about twenty yards without the slightest provocation. Thereupon the shikari, thinking that he would certainly knock their small elephant completely off her legs and very likely injure her seriously and kill both her riders, with extraordinary presence of mind sprang off the pad to the ground in order to draw the infuriated tusker's attention on to himself, while the small elephant wheeled sharp round and bolted incontinently. The tusker then turned on the shikari, but the latter dodged round trees and bushes and after a minute or two the tusker gave the job up in disgust and with a furious trumpet of rage turned right about face and went off in the headlong manner already described. The shikari had lost his shoes, cap and blanket in the scrimmage and for some mysterious reason none of these could ever be found again and had in the end to be made good by me!

This was the shikari's account of the affair and he was at once hailed as a hero by my mahout and orderly, though how far they really believed all he said would be difficult to say. I had my suspicions however and felt very little doubt that what had really happened was that the tusker had charged without provocation in the manner alleged, but that the small elephant at the very first sight of him had wheeled round in terror with such violence that the shikari had been shot off willy nilly almost in the tusker's path, retaining sufficient sense and activity however to get up at once and bolt behind the nearest tree. Failing to find him at once and being almost as much frightened as angry at the sudden disturbance, the tusker had quickly come to the conclusion that a strategic movement to the rear in pursuit of his harem would be the safest policy and had retreated accordingly.

We then took the shikari up on to our pad and started to look for the other elephant. We had little difficulty in following up the tracks she had left in her mad flight, but we had gone fully a mile and a half on the way back towards camp before we came up with her quietly standing in the forest with her mahout on her back waiting for us. The mahout explained that she had, as already related by the shikari, turned and fled at the very first sight of the big tusker and that he had been quite powerless to prevent her or pull her up sooner than he did, though I could hazard a shrewd guess that he had been far from an unwilling participant in this retreat. However there was nothing more to be said or done and so we went on beating in another direction and eventually returned to camp.

On the whole, however, I came to the conclusion that we had all come very well out of the business. If the tusker had pushed his charge home he might easily have damaged the small elephant badly and killed one or both of her riders, and on the other hand if it had happened to be my elephant which he had charged things might have been still worse, for both elephant and mahout would have had the courage, or more correctly perhaps the fool-hardiness, to stand the charge in all probability, and though I might have got a fair frontal shot as he came on us at a favourable angle the odds against my knocking him over or turning him with my small bore rifle and hollow-pointed bullets would have been enormous, and most likely the only result would have been to infuriate him to such a degree that he would not have been satisfied till he had pounded the lot of us to jelly and very possibly killed the elephant also. Looking at the matter in this light I thought it best to say little or nothing more to any of the actors in the drama and paid up the cost of replacing the shikari's lost belongings without a murmur.

SMALL BORE GUNS AND THEIR CAPABILITIES.

"Baldaycha's" series of excellent letters on small bore guns have been a great pleasure to read. Possibly however he carries his enthusiasm for the 28 further than most of us are inclined to do. It must not be forgotten that the featherweight 12 bore, with suitably reduced charges, will be found equally suitable for snipe and quail, and that the difficulty as to ammunition will be less. When one proposes to the average Indian sportsman that he should load his own ammunition, one is putting forward a very strong argument against a weapon for which such a course is needful; nine people in India out of ten, will not be bothered with loading their own cartridges at any price. I remember having written many letters in praise of certain American rifles, ammunition for which (suitably loaded) was not obtainable in India; and you, Mr. Editor, in your comments, pointed out that sportsmen would not except they were cranks like myself, use rifles for which they had to cast bullets and reload the shells. The same thing applies of course to the shot-gun, though in somewhat less degree, for re-loading shot cartridges is not quite such a troublesome business as reloading rifle cartridges.

I can thoroughly bear out all "Baldaycha" says as to the astonishing powers of the 28. I knew a man who used one regularly for driven grouse and his expenditure of ammunition ran to many thousands of cartridges in each season. Similarly I shot with a man in the United Provinces, who used a 28 bore entirely for snipe, quail, and so on, while he preferred a larger bore for duck. One constantly meets too men who shoot with intermediate bores, twenties and sixteens. The latter guns has in fact had quite a vogue lately.

As to still smaller bores than the 28, I can speak with great confidence having devoted a great deal of time to exhaustive experiments with ·410 and ·360 shot-guns.

"Baldaycha" in his letter No. IV., which appeared in the Indian Field of 29th June, makes a slip in comparing the weight of charge of a ·410 with that of a 12 bore. The charge varies of course not directly as the diameter of the bore, but as the cube of the diameter of the bore. To take a familiar example, the 6 inch gun, which is exactly half the calibre of the 12 inch gun, takes a projectile of just one-eighth the weight, i.e., 100lbs. as compared with 800lbs. A half cubed is equal to one-eighth. The ·410 is in fact somewhat heavily charged as compared with a 12 bore.

The ·410 must be very carefully loaded in order to obtain the best results. For some reason Schultze powder suits it peculiarly well, and I should strongly recommend that nothing else be used in the gun. As "Baldaycha" very rightly says, a quarter of an ounce of shot is the proper amount for the ·410. I do not however at all agree with him as to wadding. The wadding is of the utmost importance in causing proper combustion of the small charge of smokeless powder. The felt wads should be of the very best quality and must fit the cases tightly. A thin card wad under the felt wad is all that is necessary, and a thin card over the shot. The turn-over should be a firm one, but not too deep. The best charge for the ·410 is 9½ grains of Schultze.

I speak with great confidence as regards these details, having spent much time patiently patterning these guns and testing their penetration with every conceivable charge. The shot used should be chilled. As to oiling the shot, it certainly does slightly improve the pattern, but the difference between oiled and unoiled shot is not very great.

French chalk carefully shaken in among the shot, increases the density of the pattern from 5 to 7 per cent.

The great trouble with the ·410 is that very little interest is taken by gunmakers in this bore. Consequently most of the ·410 guns for sale are miserably shooting weapons. Most careful and patient boring is necessary with these small bores in order to get really good and regular shooting. My own ·410, a home-made one, has two barrels, one full choked, the other with a very slight constriction at the muzzle. The full choked barrel will put 70 per cent. of its shot, or a little more, into a ten inch circle at 15 yards from the muzzle. To give this in plainer form, the gun when loaded with 9½ grains of Schultze and 66 pellets of No. 6 chilled shot (270 pellets to the ounce), will, at 15 yards from the muzzle, put an average of 47·6 pellets in the 10 inch circle. If anyone who possesses a ·410 of the ordinary kind, will test his gun with the above load, he will be astonished to find how very far short the ·410 of commerce falls, from what can be achieved with this bore.

Equally good, in a smaller way, is the tiny ·360 shot-gun, with its load of one-fifth of an ounce of shot and seven grains of Schultze. I find this latter kills big rats with great certainty, using No. 3 chilled shot. It is also very useful for sparrows, while I have repeatedly killed starlings at twenty-five yards with it.

For the closest possible shooting, such size of shot should be used as will fit in the muzzle of the gun in exact layers.

In conclusion I would impress on anyone who contemplates investing in a small bore, be it 28, or ·410, to make a point of seeing the gun patterned with proper loads, and to absolutely insist that the gun should make even patterns, without large blank spaces, or an undue amount of clusters. To get a good shooting small bore, it will be probably necessary to go to a gunmaker who makes a speciality of boring twenties and twenty-eights.

"Fleur-de-Lys."

SPORTSMEN AND GUNMAKERS.

It is a good many years since I laid lance in rest on behalf of big-game shooters in the pages of the "Snaffle Papers." Much of what I wrote, then, is, by the light of present-day experience, obsolete. I am glad, however, to read there that I then maintained that the all-round rifle of the future would be a high-velocity weapon of about ·400-bore—a calibre I was then already using, and one to which I have, practically, adhered ever since not, however, without excursions into the territory of other bores (I hope the reader will not class me with these, for my most egotistical opening) sufficient to enable me to speak of them by the light of experience.

Looking back over the dozen and more years which have elapsed since this book was published, nothing strikes me more than the little change which has been made in sporting rifles during that period. The old grounds for quarrel remain, nevertheless. Taking up at random a few numbers of the Field, I find them one and all advertising similar weapons—those of immense muzzle velocity and extraordinary flatness of trajectory. Now, where can such weapons be of practical value? Obviously, only on the African plains, for there are few places in India where such a rifle would not be a danger to human life. As for hill-shooting, I do not consider these ideal weapons for this purpose. Moreover, in perfection they go beyond the sportsman's requirements. Some of them are advertised to only require one sight for all ranges up to three hundred yards. Well; but let the owners of them aim at an animal, say even as large as a fallow-deer, at 300 yards. Accurate sighting becomes an impossibility, as the foresight covers the whole animal. The gunmaker will tell you, and truly, that a telescopic sight will remove this difficulty. But does not the combination of these two things—the rifle which makes distance-judging practically unnecessary, and the telescopic sight—do away with all that makes the joy of stalking? There are few animals which cannot be approached, with a modicum of care on the part of the man with the gun, within a quarter of a mile. Well, then, with the user of one of these rifles the fun is over. All he has got to do is to put his telescopic sight a little high up on the shoulder of his victim and press the trigger. No smoke, no recoil. I often wonder whether the modern sportsman ever pauses to think of what we, his predecessors, had to put up with—we who tramped over the Indian plains with our ten and twelve bores (rifles, bien entendu) and loosed off seven or eight drachms of Curtis and Harvey in tropical jungle. Only in one thing did we, I think, have the best of it; we did not get the miss-fires we read of so often now, especially in books on trans-Himalayan sport. We may have loaded our own cartridges—we did, in fact, as a rule—but they supported extreme heat and extreme cold with equally satisfactory results when required. However, in this respect things have improved. Messrs. Westley Richards were, I think, the first to bring the merits of Axite to our knowledge, and it is a powder which has done me good service in combination with one of the ·275-·303 rifles of the firm in question.

Now I have another charge to bring against gunmakers, and it is that of late years they have unnecessarily multiplied the bores of, and the cartridges used with, sporting rifles. It is true, there always were too many, because though rifles were practically limited, except for the biggest game, to ·450's and ·500's, we all remember the sorrows we had experienced in finding that our ·450 did not take by any means the same cartridge as Jones' ·450, or that our ·500 required a tapered case, whilst Smith, the store-keeper at the place we stopped to complete our supplies, only stocked the bottle-shaped variety. But now the differences seem to have run mad. Turning over at random half a dozen numbers of the Field, I find rifles of the following calibres advertised:—·275, ·280, ·295, ·318, ·333, ·350, ·401, ·404, ·425, ·465 and ·470. So that a dozen sportsmen armed with new-fashioned rifles serving more or less the same purpose could meet and find themselves incapable of supplying one another with cartridges. Moreover, what difference is there in calibre between a ·275 and a ·280, between a ·401 and a ·404, between a ·465 and a ·470? To my mind this sort of thing is indefensible; and we must remember that most of the commoner bores—·256, ·303, ·400, ·450 and ·500—are omitted from the list given above.

Americans, who are, above all things, sportsmen—I mean those Americans who are big-game shooters (or, as they would say, "hunters")—do not go in for these fancy calibres; nor do their gunmakers venture to offer them to their customers. The mention of Americans naturally makes one think of their favourite weapons—repeating rifles—though, by the way, most English riflemakers produce sporting rifles with magazines nowadays. Now, I have written before against this class of weapon, and I still think that to "jump" your game by clumsy approaches and then to "pump" lead after him till your magazine is empty is not sport. A rifle of this class should not be entrusted to the young or excitable; and, if the game be of that class which goes in herds, the result of so entrusting it will be victims of the wrong sex or of inferior quality. But, on the other hand, in what Thackeray's footman called a "boitereation" with a big cat—tiger, leopard, jaguar—or with a bear, such a weapon may be of very considerable use.

The very last word in rifles of this class is the invention of the ingenious Mr. Browning, whose fame has been so spread through the land in connection with the "Sidney-street siege," and an extraordinarily clever last word it is. To describe the mechanism is altogether beyond a mere sporting writer, but it may suffice to say that, as in the former weapon, the well-known Browning pistol (the sale of which has run into millions), the recoil is utilised to eject the cartridge-case and bring up a fresh cartridge from the magazine. Five shots can thus be fired without moving the rifle from the shoulder. I must confess that I had some doubts as to what I was going to receive when I went in for one of these weapons, and was agreeably surprised to find the rifle a nice looking and well-finished weapon. It weighs just over eight pounds, and, being under three and a-half feet long, is a very handy tool for mounted work. Unlike many factory-made weapons, it has a sufficiently long and a well-bent stock. It is naturally only made in one calibre, but this is a very good all-round one (·355).

This is not the place to enter into the result of trials and it will therefore suffice to say that I find it very accurate at all practical sporting distances. The only objection I could make to the rifle, as sold, is that the sights are not sufficiently far apart—a drawback I remedied by fitting a "Snaffle" sight on the breech end of the body, thus obtaining a distance of about twenty-six inches between sights, which is ample. I think that the production of this weapon is one in which the gunmakers have very much considered the wants of the sportsman; and that the Browning rifle is an article likely to be included in most sportsmen's equipment. It is all that anyone can want for European sport, and just the handy little weapon to carry oneself on the march in Africa or India.

It is, perhaps, rather a saddening reflection that our own gunmakers should not have the credit for its production. There is, however, one class of weapon in which there have been notable improvements of late years, and that is in the shot-and-ball gun, which really serves its purpose admirably, as now made.

In shot guns we hear of few novelties during the last decade. It is true the ever-ready Mr. Browning has also invented an automatic weapon of this class; but, although I believe 50,000 of these have been sold, I have yet to see one amongst an English shooting party. A recent change has been made by some makers in the position of the barrels, which are by them placed together vertically instead of horizontally as usual. I believe the idea is sound and practical.—Snaffle in Shooting Times.

"But, Bertha, how did you make the acquaintance of your second husband?"

"It was quite romantic. I was out walking with my first, when my second came along in a motor car, and ran him down. That was the beginning of our friendship."

Doctor (who has been taking a patient's temperature). "Now, my good woman, how do you feel?"

Patient (eyeing the thermometer with considerable awe)—"Much better, thank ye. Sure an' that's a wonderful thing that can help a body so quick."

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

THE TURF.

HURST PARK.

WHAT the Liverpudlians complained of as heat last week was as the cooling-room compared to the hottest sudatorium of a Turkish bath at Hurst Park on Friday last. Fortunately, a slight breeze came to the rescue, or it would have been too hot for virile mental or physical exercise under a blazing sky. The going had been well taken care of, and looked all the greener by contrast with the parched surface of the Hurst, and fields averaged well under the circumstances. Results:—

A lull in the wind on Saturday caused a rise in temperature and gave us a taste of midsummer at Hurst Park. Nature, however, was more kind later on, as a south-west breeze made its welcome presence felt, and tempered the great heat to some degree. The attendance was a good one, and, considering the hard state of the training grounds, fields ruled well, the white clover studded course giving good going. Results:—

GOODWOOD.

Another false alarm of a long expected thunderstorm was given by wet pavements in Chichester on Monday evening, but the haziness of the sky seaward and landward was not due to the sea fret that grows until its drenching powers last out all protection, as visitors to Goodwood know to their cost. It was more a gauze-like haze reaching far inland that suggested heat, and another scorching sun, shrivelled pasturage, ripe crops, and dusty thoroughfares. The thanks of race-goers generally are due to the L. B. and S. C. Railway authorities, the C.C.C., and the Goodwood philanthropic folk connected with bore and hydrants for the laying of the dust on the approaches from Chichester, which otherwise would have been an inferno, as suggested by the way the trees and hedges were powdered like a Christmas cake by previous traffic.

If Goodwood is not be saved as a first-class meeting by the increased value of its stakes, to meet the requirements of modern racing, it at least will never suffer in public patronage. Great disappointment was caused by the unavoidable absence of the King whose well-deserved holiday was so ruthlessly spoilt. However, Society, which had mustered in force to meet him, made the best of it, and very good best it was under the shelter of marquees, Japanese tea-houses, tents, huts, and every description of rustic shelter.

The lawn was well filled, Tattersall's, of course, was in full swing, and, thanks to the reasonably cheap excursions from London, so were the further rings—a good attendance all round.

Singular to say, the course, after the long spell of drought, afforded good going, owing to its long growth of grass and united roots, that make a soft bed under the turf, while the full force of the sun is checked in the morning hours by the shelter of the belt of trees that culminate in one of the loveliest gallops in England—Lord Geo. Bentinck's drive. Results:—

It is surprising that the English climate has lasted nearly a month under torrid conditions without a thunderstorm, and that when the break occurred about six o'clock on Wednesday morning it should not have been of more violent character. Anyhow, it took a wide range, embracing the uplands as well as Chichester; and after half an hour's aerial bombardment the fighting forces died away, but left a long, steady summer rain, that gave the parched ground a real good soaking.

It was not to be expected that the attendance would rival Tuesday's, but the members' lawn, presenting a pretty English picture by the cool tints of the ladies' frocks was again well filled by a representative company, but the assemblage did not strike us as up to the old average when the occasion was known throughout Sussex as the Stakes day. Results:—

ATHLETICS.

THE ARMY ATHLETIC CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The fifty-second Army athletic meeting began at Aldershot on Wednesday. With heavy rain beginning some six hours earlier, and continuing until after 11-0, the going in the first two two or three events was not of the best but scorching sunshine followed, and if the times in the afternoon were not close up to record, then the fault was not with the track.

The rain had another useful aspect. The whole of the First Division had received orders for field operations, which were cancelled because of the weather, and the officers and men were thus enabled to enjoy the meeting from which otherwise they would have been practically barred.

The great surprise of the meeting was the defeat by the Leinster Regiment of the 87th Battalion R.F.A. in the Championship tug, the losers being a long way below their tournament form. Thereafter, however, the runners kept pretty well to public form. The best finish of the day was seen in connection with an officers' event, the half-mile, in which Lieutenant Smith, of the Coldstream Guards, apparently beaten 10 yards from home, came again, and beat Captain Liddell, of the "Tigers," by less than six inches.

One piece of sportsmanship must be recorded of the competitors in the men's three miles. By some means the whole of the runners had not been warned of an alteration in the time of the race, and the men who came to the mark proposed a postponement in order that the absentees should have their chance, a proposal which was accepted by the committee. Results:—

Putting the Shot (Non-commissioned Officers and Men).—Lance-Sergeant D. Carr, 1st Black Watch (Royal Highlanders), 41ft. 7in., 1; Corporal Lamont, 1st Gordon Highlanders, 38ft. 1in. 2; Private N. Macdonald, Depôt Scots Guards, 37ft. 5in., 3.

High Jump (Non-commissioned Officers and Men).—Driver E. G. Lockton, Personnel Ordnance College, 5ft. 4¼in., 1; Army Schoolmaster F. T. Cornelius, Corps of Army School, 5ft. 3¼in., 2; Bombardier R. T. Jackson, R.A., Shoeburyness, and Corporal F. Patterson, 1st Leicester Regiment, dead-heated for third place, each at 5ft. 2¼in.

Officers' One Mile Race.—Lieutenant T. Wheeler, 1st the Buffs, 1; Lieutenant H. B. Hughes, Royal Engineers, 2; Second-Lieutenant E. H. T. Broadwood, 1st Norfolk Regiment, 3; Lieutenant W. A. Stirling, Royal Field Artillery, 4.

Officers' Quarter-mile Race.—Second-Lieutenant G. L. Brown, 4th Middlesex Regiment, 1; Lieutenant M. C. C. Harrison, 2nd Royal Irish Regiment, 2; Second-Lieutenant V. A. Cecil, 1st Hants Regiment, 3.

Officers' Half-Mile Race.—Second-Lieutenant A. F. Smith, 3rd Coldstream Guards, 1; Captain C. G. Liddell, 1st Leicester Regiment, 2; Second-Lieutenant E. H. T. Broadwood, 1st Norfolk Regiment, 3.

Three Miles Race (Non-commissioned Officers and men).—Private Love, 1st Coldstream Guards, 1; Lance-Corporal Daly, 2nd Connaught Rangers, 2; Corporal Wright, 4th Royal Fusiliers, 3.

The meeting was brought to a conclusion last evening with the presentation of prizes by Mrs. Lomax, wife of Major-General Lomax, commanding the 1st Division. The meeting was a memorable one, for not only was a record reached in the matter of entries, but three new records were set up, Major E. O'Brien (Indian Army) winning the hurdle championship in 16secs., and Corporal Usher (2nd York and Lancs Regiment) the 100 yards and quarter-mile in 10⅕secs. and 51s-cs. respectively a very fine performance. The York and Lancaster, furthermore, carried off the relay-race championship, and did well in other events. Results:—

100 Yards.—Corporal Usher (York and Lancaster Regiment), 1; Lieutenant Blakeney (Royal Sussex Regiment), 2; Corporal Southam (A.S.C.), 3. Won by inches in 10⅕secs.

Quarter-mile.—Corporal Usher (York and Lancaster Regiment), 1; Lieutenant L. G. Brown (Middlesex Regiment), 2; Cadet Greer (Royal Military College), 3. Won easily by 10 yards in 51secs.

Half-mile.—Sergeant Heaver (Lincoln Regiment), 1; Lieutenant Harrison (Royal Irish Regiment), 2; Lieutenant L. G. Brown (Middlesex Regiment), 3. Won by inches in 2mins. 5⅕secs.

One Mile.—Private Love (1st Coldstream Guards), 1; Corporal Hutson (Royal Sussex Regiment), 2; Cadet Hon. H. Alexander (Royal Military College), 3. Won by 7 yards in 4min. 35⅘secs.

Tug-of-War Final.—1st Leinster Regiment beat 2nd Coldstream Guards.

GOLF.

HARRY VARDON BEATS GEORGE DUNCAN.—The members of the South Herts Club, at Totteridge, set aside Saturday as a day on which to honour their famous professional, Harry Vardon, who recently gained his fifth victory in the open championship. Below the Union Jack outside the club-house the Jersey flag was flying in token of the fact that Vardon was born in Jersey, and the champion, after taking part in two matches before a large number of members and friends, was the recipient of a presentation in commemoration of his fifth triumph in the premier event. The gift which consisted of a handsome clock and a cheque for £82, subscribed for in the club, was handed to Vardon by Mr. Walter Greenwood, the captain, and a pleasing feature of the proceedings was the presentation to the champion by Mrs Bull, on behalf of the lady members, of a case of pipes.

Mr. Greenwood eulogised the performances of Braid, Taylor, Herd, Duncan, and other professionals, but said he could not help thinking that Vardon was the greatest golfer the world had ever seen. He referred to the spirit of friendship and sportsmanship which prevailed among the professionals, and which was a model even for amateurs. Vardon had been with the club for nine years, and a better man and golfer they could not desire. If he went away for a week, he was up at four o'clock in the morning when he returned, directing the work on the course. The speaker had been told that Vardon often missed short putts, and he had received the assurance of the champion that such was the case. He could only say that it was a merciful dispensation of Providence, because in other circumstances he failed to see how anybody else would win anything.

Vardon suitably acknowledged the presentation.

The match in the morning was a single between Vardon and George Duncan. Vardon played almost faultless golf, going round in 69, and winning by 4 and 2. The game was square at the seventh, but the champion secured the eight and ninth holes, and so turned 2 up. As evidence of the length which the men were attaining, it may be mentioned that at the fifteenth a hole of 500 yards, Vardon was nearly on the green with a clock shot from the tee and a mashie; while Duncan was over the green with a drive and a mashie. Duncan halved this hole by lofting a stymie with his own ball six yards from the hole and Vardon's two yards nearer. He was left 3 down, however, and, losing the next hole, he was beaten. The approximate scores were:—

The former holed a chip shot to win the eleventh and another to halve the twelfth. Vardon again played fine golf, and his side, after being dormy 3, won as stated. The best-ball scores were:—

SWIMMING.

THE SWIM THROUGH LONDON.

The annual swimmers' "Marathon," was decided on Saturday in the Thames. The race was over the usual course, from Richmond Lock to the Victoria Embankment, a distance of about 15 miles, but there was an absence of public interest by comparison with former years. This was chiefly due to the early start and the fact that under the new A.S.A. rules ladies could not compete. Of the 22 selected, the absentees were H. Taylor (Hyde Seal), H. W. Busby (Zephyr S. C.), and E. J. Foreman (Daily Telegraph). The absence of Taylor, who wrote regretting his inability to turn out, robbed the race of a good deal of interest.

From the start the holder, T. S. Battersby, drew right away, and, without unduly exerting himself, won very easily. At the start the tide was very slack, but later it came down at a great pace, and considerably assisted many of the competitors. G. F. Rice, who gained second place, was responsible for the only surprise, for he had had to retire from the last two important events in which he competed. Last year he finished fourth, over 28min. behind the winner, but on Saturday his time showed great improvement. Blatherwick again finished third, after having a bad attack of cramp in the later stages of the race. The prize list included a gold cup for the winner, silver cups for the next three men, and gold medals for the next three. All the other competitors, except Walton, took bronze medals for finishing within one hour of the winner.

WOLFF'S TWENTIETH CHANNEL FAILURE.—For the second time in his lengthy experience Jabez Wolff, the Glasgow swimmer, has come within an ace of swimming across the English Channel.

After a really magnificent effort of nearly fifteen hours' duration he was compelled to reluctantly abandon this, his twentieth attempt shortly before midnight last Friday, when within a mile of St. Margaret's Bay.

Like many other aspirants for Channel honours, Wolff got into trouble, as was anticipated, on the shoals around the Varne Buoy. He had thought to swim clear of this dangerous spot, but the tide was too powerful, and drifted him across. Still, he gamely struggled on, and eventually forged his way through the broken water; but it had set him out of his course, besides severely taxing his powers, the effects of which he felt a couple of hours later.

Encouraged by the glorious night and perfectly calm sea, Wolff stuck manfully to his task, gradually drawing nigh his goal. At the time the flood tide had finished running he was nearly as far as the Goodwins.

Here Wolff encountered a return ebb tide, but this proved a trifle too much for him. He saw, with the strong current between him and the shore that it was useless to continue and, acting under the advice of the pilot and the accompanying party, he decided to abandon his attempt. He showed no signs of excessive fatigue, and was quite warm; but, although naturally terribly disappointed at his failure when success had been so very near he expressed his intention of having still another attempt.

The scene during the later part of the swim was a weird one, as with the powerful searchlights shining fourth from the Dover fortifications and illuminating the Channel for miles round and playing on the little party, Wolff appeared to be swimming in day-light. The temperature of the water during the swim was registered at 66 degrees.—higher than it has ever been since Webb's great achievement, when the conditions were almost identical.

ROWING.

DOGGETT'S COAT AND BADGE.—This annual race was decided on Monday over the usual course, from London Bridge to Chelsea, and won by W. Fisher, a young Milwall waterman. H. D. Hardee (Greenwich) was second, Albert Hughes (Poplar) third, Arthur Johnson (Putney) fourth Frederick Nett (Horseley-down) fifth and T. J. Nelham (Richmond) sixth.

Hardee led out, with Nelham second, but before Waterloo Bridge Hughes had taken second place. Fisher made up a lot of ground in the next reach, and at Westminster Bridge (reached in 11min. 14secs). he was a good second to Hardee. The latter kept his lead until reaching Pimlico, where Fisher spurted and went in front. The Milwall man finally beat Hardee by three lengths in 26mins. 28secs.

Hunting.

THE OOTY HUNT.

Monday, 31st July.—A morning of mist and drizzle when we met at Sheffield Corner. A brace of jacks was started from below Governor Shola. Hounds divided, the main body being followed up to the top of Staircase and thence above Martyn's Shola to Fife's Nullah and via Devil's Dyke across the stream to Yemakul, hounds soon after throwing up near Godfrey's Shola. After getting the pack together they were taken down Sandy Nullah stream and another brace of jacks was found on Newmarket, one of which was hunted over Lawley's bog to the Pykara road and then up to Staircase again. Scent not being good here, hounds were at fault and could not pick up the line. Just as a move was being made for kennels a jack was started and we were taken for the third time up Staircase; after chasing him as far as Briar scent gave out.

Thursday, 3rd August.—A large field turned up at Sandy Nullah toll bar. A fog came down before Beadnells was reached and delayed us a bit. A short run followed as far as Kengodu hill when the fog came down thicker than ever and hounds had to be stopped. Drawing Hearty Shola a jack was viewed which went away by the top of Hamlet to Wenlock where a check occurred; the line being recovered we ran by way of Pykara hill to Piccadilly circus, turning back through Temple shola to the river, and after another detour lost him again, but got on to his or another line by making a cast at Jackson's crossing, whence hounds ran at full cry up to Kengodu, where they divided, and on the mist becoming thicker the hunt was declared off for the day.

Saturday, 5th August.—Toda Coffee shop at noon. A cold drive out the numerous crowd in motors found it. Drawing the triangle we went to the left of Waterfall road and found a jack near Tuval Mund which turned down and crossed the road above Robert's shola when he went to ground. A cub was chopped on the way to draw Plague shola. A long draw by the banks of the Pykara stream followed and then up the Yemakul stream to Denny Nullah where a jack gave us a short gallop before going to ground in safety. Bacon Wood proved no good, but a jack was found near Cox's bog which gave a run back through Warwick and Patrick to Toda Coffee shop, down to the Pykara road and so to ground like the others, where he was left. It being then nearly 5 P.M. nothing more was done but a move homewards.

SPINNING FOR MAHSEER.

We think our "Angler" Spinner No. M615 Gmounted with Extra Strong Mahseer Hooks and "Tiger" Wire is the best; but many fishermen (including Mr. H. S. Mr. Thomas speaks highly of this Spinner on Page 69 of "Rod in India."

CALCUTTA RUGBY NOTES AND COMMENTS.

WITH the match between Calcutta and the West Ridings declared "off" owing to the latter having scratched from the League, the Tykes being in Bombay, there was not much interest attached to last Saturday's game. Indeed, all real lovers of Rugger can sympathise with the members of the Calcutta Football Club who after all their efforts to prevent the game from dying out in the city have not received the support they deserve. It was pleasing, however, to know that the Customs have at last made an attempt to turn out; but Rugby is played by fifteen men and not eight. Williamson, undoubtedly their best player, is unfortunately on leave at present and Rowe, in his day an excellent half, retired from the game last year. The Customs however could, if they liked, get together quite a decent junior team, but they lack a Cadell or a Nind at the head of affairs. Maitland, Rowe, Kerr, Devereux, L. C. Smith, J. Anderson, Dempster and Fredricks are all old players; but on Monday these were all conspicuous by their absence. Edwards, the old Gloucester Regimental player, I am glad to say, is yet keen on the game and MacDonald, who only took to Rugger two seasons ago, are the only two that have turned out regularly for some practice. However, it is to be hoped for the sake of sport that these men will be induced to play within the week. It would be preferable to see the Customs make an effort to retain the Gloucester

Junior Rugby League Cup than waste their time taking part in the Lakshmibillas Soccer competition. As the Customs however have come into the final let us hope this competition will finish this evening.

The Rangers have started a Rugby team and we wish the Club every success, but this will probably further weaken the Nomads. As the Rangers club is always run on satisfactory lines it is to be hoped they will get good support, and it only requires our local schools and colleges to again take to "Rugger," and we may see a revival of Rugby football. I am sure old players of the Calcutta Football Club who have retired from the game will be only too glad to coach the Medicals, Armenians, La Martinière and Doveton Colleges who now do not play Rugby. Father Power and Mr. Andrews are taking interest in St. Xaviers, but the team is much too light when pitted against the Services and Calcutta second strings.

The East Yorks' first game was against the United Services on Saturday; but the former on the evening's play were lucky to win by a dropped goal to nil. The sides were very evenly matched, but there was nothing brilliant in the play. With Lieutenant Hardiman on the sick list, the East Yorks' third line was weakened, as was their forward line. Bladen, one of the best scrummagers, had to be taken out of the pack to play "three-quarter." It is true Bladen kicked the goal but he lacked speed and did not take his passes cleanly. There were a few decent bouts of passing witnessed by the Services "threes," but although they were good to watch, they were not effective, the ball generally being taken across the field with not much ground being gained. The U. S. forwards also did not pack well, but Trenchard, and Walker were very prominent for individual work. The East Yorks tackled splendidly in the first half during which period they were on the strict defensive. After ends had been changed the Fyzabad team were able to hold their own and their forwards wheeling the scrums and dribbling in a body were often dangerous. Pitman, however, was to blame for the goal scored against his team for he had plenty of time to kick into touch instead of hanging on to the ball. The East Yorks were to have played Calcutta on Tuesday, but the latter postponed the match for a day and they met last evening. The Rifle Brigade beat the Police by four tries to love on Monday and the meeting between the Fort team and Calcutta "B" will be of much interest. Calcutta have lost the services of Arthur, Reid Kay and Kerr but R. C. Cumberlege has donned the red and white jersey once more. The old Durham county player shaped remarkably well in a practice game last Thursday; but I fancy he will find it hot work when he has to face players of the Morris-Wilson type. For the big tournament next month, in addition to the West Ridings the Madras and Bombay Gymkhanas may also come over.

MARK.

THE BOMBAY HARWOOD LEAGUE.

THE game on Monday, the 7th instant, was between the Bombay Gymkhana and the Telegraphs and play was fast and interesting throughout. The Gymkhana played ten men only but this did not prevent them winning. Half time arrived with the score one all, but on changing ends the Gymkhana put on three more goals and ran out winners by 4 to 1. The Warwicks met the Y.M.C.A. on the 8th and beat them by 4 to nil. The Young Men put up a good fight in the first half and the soldiers were only able to score once, but in second moiety ends the Warwicks had the most of the play and won as stated. On Wednesday the Warwicks met a team selected from the civilian teams appearing in the League. There was a large gathering on the Oval ground and weather conditions were excellent. The Warwicks were always the better team, but the civilians played hard throughout and the game was not uninteresting. The soldiers scored four goals in the first half without response. On crossing over the civilians scored twice and it was not till close on time that the military once more asserted themselves and put on another goal, thus winning by five goals to two. On Friday the Telegraphs met the Bombay Football Club on the Cooperage and were beaten by a goal to nil. Saturday's match was between the Y.M.C.A. and the Bombay Gymkhana, a very even game being witnessed, though the football was not of a very high class. Each team had scored a goal in the first period, but the Gymkhana put on two more after the interval and the Young Men had to admit defeat by three goals to one. Appended is the League table up to and including the 12th instant :—

Lawn Tennis.

THE "MAIGANDADEVA MUDLR" MEMORIAL TOURNAMENT.

THIS Tournament at Bangalore has been instituted by the Members of the Rai Bahadur Arcot Narainsamy Mudlr's Union to perpetuate the memory of the late Rai Bahadur A. Maigandadeva Mudaliar, the founder of the Union. The competition is open to all gentlemen players, for doubles, for which two cups, valued about Rs. 50 each, are offered to the winners each year. This is the first year of the Tournament and it is pleasing to see that the number of Europeans who have entered is quite as large as Indian players. There is no doubt that a larger number of first-rate players would enter if the Tournament were more widely made known in and out of Bangalore. All but one or two of the competitors in this Tournament were playing in the recent Gymkhana Tournament. Our readers will remember that U. D. Ranga pulled off the open singles as well as the open doubles with Seshiwara Rao for his partner. A few details of the games in the later stages. Subbarayan and Moonisawmy met Rev. Mathers and Captain Ogilvie in the finals on Wednesday the 9th instant; a very interesting match was expected, but when half way through the second set a heavy down pour stopped the game with Mathers and Ogilvie leading by 1 set and 3 games to "love." The Europeans offered to forego the previous day's score and the match was started afresh on Thursday the 10th. Some really good tennis was played by both sides. The Indians, however, lost mainly by keeping too far out of court while Mathers and Ogilvie were playing at the net and either smashing or dropping the ball just over the net. The result was a win for the Europeans although it took them all their time to win by 3 sets to 1.

The Horse.

BY JOHN GILPIN.

CHAPTER VIII.

RIDING SCHOOL COURSE.

I GIVE here an example of an ordinary school for two or more horses. The course should not be strictly adhered to as horses soon learn the order in which the commands are given and obey them without waiting for the aids. Every effort should be made to prevent the horses becoming what the school riders call routiné. For instance if a horse changes his leg before receiving the aids, even if a change of leg is required, he should be put back again on to the other leg. Riders should have this explained to them and a wide latitude should be allowed them to fall out of the ride if necessary for this purpose. No doubt the ride looks better if all are in their places and work together and when the ride is for the instruction of recruits who are riding trained horses uniformity should be insisted on. When, however, the ride is for the instruction of the horses everything else should be subordinated to this object. It is best that a trained horse should lead the ride and another be in rear if sufficient horses and riders are available. The ride should fall in outside the school facing the entrance, and should be numbered off from the right.

Ride, File in.	No. 1 advances followed by the others in order at half a horse's length distance, files into the school, and proceeds round the school left side to the wall or on the right rein, going well into the corners.
Leading File, Circle.	The leading file guides his horse in a circle of the diameter of the width of the school, the remainder following.
Leading File, Change.	The leading file turns sharply across the middle of the circle and on reaching the other side turns to the other hand and proceeds round the circle in the opposite direction to that formerly taken. The remainder follow. Repeat an odd number of times so as to go large on the left rein.
Go Large.	The leading file proceeds round the school as at first, followed by the remainder.
Down the Centre.	The leading file, followed by the rest, turns down the middle of the school and turns to the same hand again on reaching the end.
Leading File, Left Incline.	The leading file inclines across the school at an angle of about 50° followed by the remainder. They are now again on the right rein.
Right Turn.	Each turns his horse sharp to the right and crosses the school, keeping careful dressing, and on reaching the wall turns to the right again. Repeat until done correctly.
Circle Right.	The whole, keeping their dressing, turn out into school and describe a half circle of a diameter of half the width of the school. This brings them to the middle of the school where they cover the rear man who is now in front. They follow him until he gives the signal with his head when all continue the circle together until they reach the wall of the school again. They then proceed in the original direction. The signal to continue the circle should be given by a jerk of the head towards the side of the school directly the horses have taken four paces down the middle. Repeat until properly performed.
Right Incline.	Each inclines his horse and proceeds across the school keeping the dressing so that all arrive at the side of the school together. They are now on the left rein.
Ride, Trot.	All trot off together.
Circle and Change.	As Circle Right save that on approaching the side of the school the whole change on to the left rein together and proceed round the school right side to the wall.
Circle and Change.	As from the right rein reversed.
Ride, Canter.	All canter together with the off fore leading as the ride is on the off rein.
Leading File, Change.	As at the walk. Repeat till on the left rein, the horses should change their legs at the middle of the circle and so come on to the other rein.
Go Large.	As at the walk.
Down the Centre.	As at the walk.
Half Passage.	The whole half passage across the school together endeavouring to reach the other wall at the same time. In the half passage from right to left the weight of the body should be well over to the left. The left rein should be used so as to lead the horse across the school by carrying the left hand well out to the left, the right rein should press against the horse's neck, the drawn back right leg should press the horse hard, and the left leg should be used to steady the horse as requisite. On completing the half passage the horses should be made to change their legs as they now come on to the right rein.
Short Figure of Eight.	As from the right rein reversed.
Serpentine.	The leading files describes a serpentine course from side to side down the school and back again making his horse change his leg in the middle of the school at each change of rein. The remainder follow.
Ride, Walk.	All the horses should be brought to the walk together.
Ride, Left Turn.	As above and as the ride nears the side of the school.
Ride, Halt.	All halt together and remain at attention.
Make much of your Horses.	All pat their horses on the neck in time, one long beat and two short ones.
Rein Back, March.	The whole rein back together, two steps back and a momentary halt, two steps and halt, two steps and halt, etc., etc.
Halt.	The horses should be halted instantly and should not be allowed to back another inch after the order.
On the Haunches, Right about Turn.	The horses should be turned in such a way that the forehand circles round the hind feet which should not leave their ground. To effect this the weight of the body should be thrown back and to the right. The right rein should lead the horse round the pull being out to the right and not back towards the rider. The left rein should press against the horse's neck. The drawn back left leg prevents the horse from throwing his quarters to the left while the right leg keeps up sufficient pressure to prevent the horse from stepping backwards. At first this turn should be made in two parts, first right turn and then right turn again. It is not easy for the horse to learn and like all the other turns must be taught with a rein in each hand before the horse can be taught to do it by the reins in one hand. The horse should on no account be hurried as the turn cannot be made at a fast pace without moving the hind feet off their ground.
Rein Back, March.	As above.
Rein Back, March.	As above.
Halt.	As above.
At a Canter, Forward.	All canter off together and turn to the same hand to which they last turned, in this case the left, on reaching the side of the school.
Ride, Walk.	All walk together.
Down the Centre.	As before.
Take one horse's length distance.	Those in rear check their horses until the man before them is a horse's length ahead. Keeping them in the middle of the school the following may be given.

Halt. On the forehand, Right about turn. Forward. Halt. On the forehand, Left about turn. Forward. Halt. On the Centre, Right about turn. Forward. Halt. On the Centre, Left about turn. Then letting them proceed round the school, Head to the Wall, Right Pass. Forward. Head to the Wall Left Pass. Forward. Tail to the Wall, Right Pass. Forward. Tail to the Wall, Left Pass. Forward.

When the horse has passed in all the above he may be taught to circle in the corners of the school, the circles being gradually made smaller and smaller and the horse sent right into the corner so that he has to make almost a square turn. This is very difficult and may be regarded as the end of the horse's education. Few horses do it well.

HINDU ANIMAL AND PLANT PHENOLOGY.

Western meteorology recognises the fact that the time of the reappearance of certain forms of animal life indicates the nature of the coming season of vegetation and that the time of departure of these gives an idea of the severity or mildness of the coming season. It also recognises the practical benefits to be derived from a careful study of plant phenology and that the whole of plant life is affected by the immediate past and the current meteorological conditions. Animal and plant phenological observations have been raised to the level of a scientific study in Sweden, England, the United States and other Western countries, and at the present moment, when drought is producing profound anxiety in many parts of India and supplications for rain are being sent up to the gods from numbers of temples and fanes and shrines in the country, it may be of interest to point out that, from very ancient times, the Hindus have claimed to be able to forecast weather conditions by means of animal and plant phenomena. Their methods may be deemed empirical, but the people have as much faith in them as the farmers of old in Europe had in their weather proverbs and maxims which are, in the main, as Mr. Frank Waldo remarks, the impressions of some people of reputed wisdom in such matters. An old Hindu author states that judging from the growth of the fruits and flowers of trees and plants, we may determine beforehand what articles can be had cheap and in abundance and what crops will thrive. He then proceeds to enlarge on the text, and we are told that if the sanlam tree should bear fruits and flowers there will be a bumper harvest of white rice. The tree referred to is presumably one of the fragant, yellow flowered Shorea, the seed of which ripens in the beginning of the rains and the wood of which is considered sacred and is hence burnt in temple worship. The growth of the banyan indicates a good crop of barley, that of the rose-apple a good gingely crop, that of the madhoocam or mohwa, a good crop of wheat, that of the mountain ebony tree a good crop of cotton and that of the black mardha, a good mustard crop. Best of all though is the healthy growth of the sacred peepul tree, since it is the blessed harbinger of the flourishing growth of all crops. The blossoming of the sacred neem foretells a season of prosperity, but the growth of the Indian oak is a warning of drought, the blossoming of the variegated mountain ebony a sign of destructive fires and the thriving of the catechu a premonition of the approach of famine. On the other hand, there will be good rain should the white mardha tree thrive and prosperity should the mango thrive.

Indian plant phenological observations go very much deeper, however, than are indicated by the few instances quoted above, and from the growth blossoming and fruiting of trees and plants, the Indian phenologist of old claimed to predict the thriving or otherwise of elephants, horses, cows, goats, etc., and the abundance and cheapness or otherwise of diamonds, gold, silver and other precious substances. The growth of the red lotus is held to indicate the prosperity of rulers, that of the blue lotus the prosperity of ministers, that of the globe amaranth the prosperity of merchants and that of the Indian water-lily the prosperity of priests. The dancing girl has not been forgotten in these phenological data, and we are told that the blossoming of the sarsaparilla plant signifies prosperous times ahead of dancing girls.

The animal phenology of the Hindus is no less esoteric, varied or profound. Among indications of coming rain are some that are at once simple and staggering. If children should in play blow through their mouths or if birds sing or play in the dust or in water, there will be rain and all crops will thrive. Something very much more intelligible is the belief in parts of Southern India that when a brown crane cries on the wing, it is a sign of a coming shower. In the same region, there is a belief that the large kingfisher comes in advance of the rain and when this bird is found near private tanks and pools, the peasants look out for rain. The departure of rain and the return of fair weather is associated with several animal, bird and insect life phenomena; for instance, when spiders weave their webs on the grass, this is looked upon as a certain indications that no more rain need be expected. Another indication of the withdrawal of the rains and the arrival of a long spell of fair weather, such as is necessary at harvest time, is the appearance of a certain species of large blue butterfly. Indeed, this butterfly is known in some parts of the country as "the harvest bird"; should a swarm of a certain species of small ants be found crawling up a wall or other eminence, with their eggs in their months, it is an indication that rain is about to descend. There are numerous other instances of animal, bird and insect phenology to be met with throughout India, and it would perhaps be worth while to make a collection of all these scattered data. In the bulk, it may only be empirical but it cannot be altogether devoid of meteorological as well as ethnological value.

KADIR BUX ON WOMEN.

The fact that English families grow smaller and more small
Is a menace to our Empire and 'tis right that we should all
Seek the reason which induces wives of low and high degree
To have one baby only—and one cause occurs to me.
They do not wish to run the risk of bringing up a string
Of Modern Girls who live in Clubs and Scorn the Wedding Ring—
More impudent and useless in their misanthropic spleen
Then any other woman that the world has ever seen.
With her parents she is selfish, disobedient and rude,
She spends their money freely but she shows no gratitude;
They trust that she may marry so thy grudge her no expense
But the Modern Girl despises man, to wed "has too much sense."
In her club she smokes and gossips with her heels upon a chair,
And the stories that she spreads abroad would make her mother stare.
She dines at two pounds ten a head, in most expensive "duds,"
Then goes to Hall or Opera with other female "bloods."
She girds her loins, this suffragette, to punish for man's sins
Policemen and War Ministers by hacking at their shins,
Breaks windows—her variety nor age nor custom stales—
And, as she will not pay her fines, pays visits to the goals.
There resolutely she declines "to like it or to lump it"
And as she will not eat her food the warders have to pump it.
Can we wonder when we see these girls and hear their raucous cry
That effective steps are taken now to limit the supply!
This thing is growing truly to a scandal and a shame.
For East and West the Nations now jeer at our country's name.
The Indian thinks of days gone by when Bentinck first suppressed.
Female infanticide in Ind, and makes this barbed jest:—
"If instead of here forbidding, you had ta'en this practice Home
You might still have bred male children and had peace in days to come."
But they see, and all must see it, for 'tis patent to the eye
That a nation fades to nothing and its glory can but die
When 'tis ruled by ugly widow, man-starved girl and fierce old maid
Though its Empire be spread world wide and its sunshine never fade.
When we press chivalrous treatment of their women on the East
And preach female education (which they don't want in the least)
Then they turn and point the finger and they cock the eye of scorn Saying:—"In our homes we're masters, nor are women here forlorn.
Each woman has a husband and sufficiency of babies
And little time for those attacks of imitation rabies.
We do not like the sample that you offer to our view
So instead of taking your advice we'll give some hints to you.
Keep your girls at home in quiet until old enough to wed
Let their mothers aye be with them, or a trusty maid instead.
They will learn that marriage brings emancipation from the cage
And will marry him their parents bring when of sufficient age.
When married do not let them seek the fatted calf to kill it
But give them a big nursery and take good care they fill it.
So will they be contented all and happy in their homes
As never single woman is who solitary roams
Hunting the world for pleasure, seeking to make a name—
Let her seek her joy in babies, in a grateful husband's fame.
To that end she was created—a companion to man—
Let her therein seek her pleasure for find it there she can.
As daughter, wife and mother, with her father, man, and boys
Let her humbly thank her Maker—and for ever cease from noise."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The news so far wired to India concerning the Leger is of a negative description and the only indications that we have as to how things are going are the odds obtainable locally at the various S.P. betting establishments in Calcutta. Messrs. J. B. Beattie and Co. signify their willingness to lay the following prices now and there are any number of bookmakers in India with whom S.P. wagers can be negotiated. The latter investment is undoubtedly the safer form, for, so far removed from the scene of action as are people in India, it is impossible for them to be in the same position of advantage as the speculator who is on the spot and who has the best and latest information at his command. Messrs. Beattie and Co's prices on Saturday last were as follows:—

2 to 1 King William (Lord Derby) G. Lambton.
4 to 1 Sunstar (Mr. J. B. Joel) Morton.
5 to 1 Lycaon (Mr. J. B. Joel) Morton.
10 to 1 Prince Palatine (Mr. T. Pilkington) Beardsley.
10 to 1 Tootles (Captain F. Forrester) Lewis.
12 to 1 Seaforth (Mr. D. McCalmont) Persse.
12 to 1 Pietri (Mr. L. de Rothschild) Watson.
12 to 1 Fancheur (Baron de Rothschild) in France.
12 to 1 Bannockburn (Mr. J. Hallick) Hallick

Sunstar has since this of course been scratched.

Longer odds the rest. We publish these quotations merely for what they may be worth and they must of necessity merely represent one bookmaker's book in the race. Better odds may be and possibly are obtainable in London. Mr. Charles Harding does not publish his quotations but he executes commissions in London, all messages at sender's risk, either antepost or S.P. The only news concerning the race which arrived by the last mail was that Morton was very doubtful about Sunstar and that the dry summer and consequent hard going on the gallops at Letcombe Regis, where Mr. Joel's training quarters are, had been all against one of such doubtful soundness as this year's Derby winner. This foreboding has proved correct as Sunstar is now reported to have broken down and is to be sent to the stud forthwith. The report that Sunstar had thrown out a splint after Epsom is denied and the trouble was not that but his joints and he is said to be a horse whose forelegs are so bad as to almost amount to malformation. From the very beginning of the year he has been ticketted doubtful and that he would be very unlikely to stand much hard work and the bucketting he was given in the early part of the year was not best calculated to suit one that was inclined to be infirm. He had three races in more or less rapid succession, the Guineas, the Newmarket Stakes and the Derby, and after the last of them he hobbled back to the paddock and has not been fit for much since. Hard going to a horse with infirmity such as his, was naturally all against him. Whether Sunstar had run or not our own belief is that in Lord Derby's fine son of William the Third he would have met his match. King William was very slow in coming to hand, but he has given unmistakeable proof of his quality since his outing in the Derby and there is every ground for believing that he is little, if anything, behind what Sunstar was on the day that the latter colt won the Epsom classic and, that being so, his chances of success at Doncaster on the 13th proximo cannot be lightly computed.

The two days racing in Calcutta last week have been the best so far witnessed this Monsoon season, the greatly improved going under foot being in no small measure accountable for the better sport that has been witnessed. The change in the weather has been very welcome, for until about a fortnight ago we raced under conditions that were extremely trying to both man and beast and there was little enjoyment to be had out of it either by the active participant or the spectator. We have had a fair number of up-country visitors down and the majority of them stayed over the three days racing but some have now gone back to return to us a fortnight hence: some also are leaving after Saturday next. Amongst our visitors have been Colonel A. P. Young, Major Crawley, Captain Charrington, Captain Houston, Mr. W. T. Miles, Major Ramsay Gordon, Captain K. Robertson, Mr. Platt and some few more. Although our visitors have won a few races the last two days of the meeting have not been very profitable to some of them and they have left any winnings they previously may have collected, behind them. On Thursday last fields were better than on Saturday, the defections on the latter day being more or less expected as owners were chary about asking horses to race again so soon and with our strictly limited supply of material smaller musters were inevitable. On Thursday last half the card was taken up by jump racing as out of the six races three were over obstacles a circumstance that tended to very considerably heighten the interest in the proceedings.

The first race on Thursday was the Mediocre Handicap, for which, when both Politesse and Proprietor were found to be absentees, there was only one to back, Colonel Young's Atropine, who won at the spring meeting at Lucknow when he on one occasion defeated Longchamps and Royal Colours at six furlongs and on another Longchamps and Winsome at a mile. He subsequently also won at the Meerut Spring Meeting, beating Prince Lyon and Sacricomar over 7 furlongs in the Railway Plate. Crossbred went out a very hot favourite on that occasion but could get no closer up than fourth. Atropine won very easily on Thursday as Scotch Girl could make no impression on him and Bird o' Freedom, who got away well and led for about three furlongs, deliberately "cut it" the moment that she was collared. She is evidently not yet inclined to mend her ways and is an arrant jade.

The Clive Hurdle Race produced a field of eight and a remarkably fine race between the favourite, Idle, Maisonette and Mimicry. Maisonette, who found the softer going considerably more to her liking, did not begin to gallop until about two fences from home, but when she started she made no mistake about it and came up hand over fist catching Idle in the last few strides only and winning by a neck; Mimicry a similar distance away third, April Fool only half a length behind the latter. Tommy Daw ran very disappointingly and was never really with his horses for any part of the journey. In this race a nasty accident occurred, Noonet coming down on the flat at a greasy part of the course. Randall, who rode her, had his right leg dislocated at the hip joint and all the thigh muscles of his left badly lacerated. He was at once removed to hospital in the horse ambulance but his injuries are so severe that it is feared it will be some months before he is able to ride again.

The Second Amateur Hurdle Race followed next. Fame, on whom the owner, Mr. W. T. Miles, was up was installed a warm favourite, as he had been by no means badly treated in the handicap. Disaster, however, overtook him at the last obstacle which he jumped into and turned over and the finish was fought out between Levi, Farthing Bun and Jaffa Girl, the former winning by a length very well ridden by Captain Charrington. Fame would not have won in any case as when he came down he was a beaten horse and had no chance of catching the leaders.

The favourites were not in luck in the Second Open Pony Hurdle Handicap, Spec and Albatross, both of whom had run well in the previous race for this class on the third day of the meeting, being well supported, as also was Ormley, who won the First Open Pony Hurdle Race. The winner turned up in Shannon Lass, who was not greatly fancied by her connections and who went out at 7 to 1. Captain Charrington had the mount and, riding a very well-judged race, came at the leaders at just the right moment and won very comfortably at the finish by three lengths from Ormley who had made most of the running. Albatross ran very disappointingly and lost a lot of ground at the turn and also did not jump in the best of form. Spec, too, did not run up to expectations, as he finished two and a half lengths behind Bandy Leg who was third.

There was some very close betting over the August Plate for which Craigendorrie finished up favourite at two's and Wise Hawk and Mallinyook were level at 3 to 1 each, Light Metal at 5 to 1, the outsider Carnival at sixes. Wise Hawk won very easily and, coming to the head of affairs three furlongs from home, had not much difficulty in holding Mallinyook and Craigendorrie in check, scoring in good time for the sand course, 7 furlongs, 1-35⅘ by two and a half lengths.

ESTABLISHED 1742.

A GOOD field went out for the Giant Pony Handicap, Shannon Lass being the only absentee out of the thirteen coloured in the card. They made Mandeville a warm favourite with Murmur and May Kenley next choice. Mandeville came into the straight with a slight lead of Murmur and Moira, May Kenley lying just behind them. There was a very fine race and J. Davis rode a slashing finish on May Kenley, just beating the favourite half a length on the post ; head and neck between the third and fourth.

ON Saturday last we again raced in very pleasant weather and the attendance was consequently larger than we usually have at these meetings. There was a card of six races, two of them being over hurdles, but in neither jump race were the fields good, in fact the largest field we saw out was ten for the 14-2 race and the next largest was one of eight that went for the Autumn Plate a 5 furlong handicap for horses. In the first race, the Goomtee Plate, there were three from Mr. Scott's stable and when both Proprietor and Bird o' Freedom were scratched, Politesse was in very strong demand, finishing up at 5 to 4 and level money in some places in the Ring. Captain Charrington's mare was lucky to win as it looked all over when Isabela caught and headed her right in front of the stands, but Ruiz shook Politesse up and by strong jockeyship managed to get on level terms again. The judge failed to divide them, though many people thought that the challenger had won.

THE Dalhousie Hurdle Handicap only produced five runners and with Politesse out of the way it looked and subsequently proved good goods for To Kalon. Idle was next choice and ran well till two fences from home where the pace began to tell on him and he dropped back beaten, Tommy Daw then going out after To Kalon who had led all the way, but Mr. Pugh's mare never came back to him and won in good style by two lengths.

FOR the Amateur Consolation Hurdle Race the field dwindled to a quartette and of the eight left in Reinforcement, who was badly treated in the handicap, Dooneen, Pacific and Desmond were struck out. Jaffa Girl was undoubtedly best in at the weights though Frank was the dangerous quantity. Jaffa Girl jumped into the first one and Cairo, who was the only one to go out after the winner, nearly fell twice. The jar stopped Jaffa Girl and Frank won after leading all the way carrying top-weight. He won with at least 10lb. in hand over and above his handicap. There was no semblance of a race and Frank won by two lengths easily.

THE Assaye Plate for 14-2 ponies came next and from the moment operations opened Moira was made favourite, her chances being considerably enhanced when it was disclosed that that strong jockey Williamson was to have the ride. Nevertheless she was lucky to win, for if Ruiz had not got blocked on Shannon Lass when he was wanting to get his run, Major Crawley's little mare would have won. She was coming up very fast indeed at the finish and was very unfortunate not to get clear sooner. Mandeville and Cyclone were both close up but Murmur, whom we should have expected to see where Mandeville was, finished in the ruck. The severe race she had on the Thursday was accountable for her position ; Moira on the other hand wanted a gallop to sharpen her up.

BACKERS made no mistake over the next race as Wise Hawk held command of the market all through. The bookmakers would not open out against Sacristan II who, if he had been half himself, would have been a certainty at 2st. from the top weight. Atropine and Northwood were also backed but the former ran very badly and it was about a furlong beyond the latter's best distance. Wise Hawk won comfortably, a late rush by Carnival and Light Metal who with Northwood were locked together, not being of any avail. Northwood made most of the running and was fancied by the stable, but it was all over with him the moment Wise Hawk got to him.

THE Consolation Plate for horses was the upset of the day as Simontura who had been well tried, so it was said, was made a very warm favourite and started at level money ; Dooneen, the only other one backed, was very badly beaten two furlongs from home and the finish was fought out between the unreliable J. E. A. and Distillery, the gelding by Maltster, the judge being unable to divide them. The owners agreed to divide.

A GOOD deal of correspondence has been flooding the columns of a Calcutta daily paper headed "The Usury Evil" but which has had to do principally with the Calcutta Monsoon Races. The sum and substance of all this somewhat venomous ink-slinging has been a complaint against certain owners who, to the detriment of the gentry who patronise the numerous betting establishments in the town of Calcutta, have entered several horses for each race and have not been so kind and considerate as to let profanum vulgus know their intentions as regards running them. This has naturally upset the composure of those persons who indulge in double and treble event betting, a form of wagering that the Stewards of the C.T.C. very rightly prohibited on the Calcutta course some years ago since it was the means of creating false prices to the detriment of owners. An owner has every right to enter his horses for as many races in a card as they are qualified to go for and it is a piece of gratuitous impertinence on the part of the brigade who are anxious to forestall him to manufacture a grievance out of it. In some of these letters the writers have even had the effrontery to go so far as to say that the owner should be compelled (presumably at the time of entry !) to declare with which horses he means to start for each specified race and with which he means to win ! Such an unheard of proposition has never, we wot, been put forward in any place in the world where racing is carried on and the writers in the journal in question have consequently made themselves supremely ridiculous. There is no rule in India as to declarations to win corresponding to the Jockey Club Rule 139, Part XIX., at home and even if there were these soi-disant "sportsmen" would hardly be satisfied, as the Jockey Club rule merely provides that such declarations should be made at scale a quarter of an hour before each race. This would not suit the forestaller and the double and treble event bettor, as his declared object is to have the market all to himself and to be in possession of this information considerably earlier in the piece. A more futile suggestion it has seldom been our lot to encounter. We are also told that the interests of these "sportsmen"—save the mark—are not being looked after by either the Stewards or the Press, by which is presumably meant that horses are being pulled with impunity and no notice is being taken of it ! These "sportsmen" somewhat overreach themselves. It is easy however to understand the reason for their chagrin and their motives for spreading themselves in the columns of the print which is advertising their supposed "grievances" ! ! If anyone has a grievance it is the prophets whom these correspondents revile, for the double and treble entries render the thankless task of "picking them" considerably more difficult.

JUST as we go to press we hear that a big shipment of about 40 race horses is on its way to India and amongst them are several horses for "Mr. Holmes." A four-year-old jumper named Blenheim Orange by Count Schomberg out of Sweet Blenheim is stated to be amongst "Mr. Holmes" lot.

OUR Poona correspondent writes :—Again we were fortunate enough to have fine weather on Thursday for the Fifth Extra, when in a liberal card of eight events there were some most exciting finishes as well as a steeplechase. In this there were a couple of falls, but Captains Fell and O'B. Butler got off without injury. H.H. the Kour Saheb of Patiala was present, and his arrival here was signalled by a win in the sprint.

To take the card in order, we started with a Closed Race, in which Tofic Pasha was just as well treated as formerly over a longer distance, which he has proved himself capable of going in the past. He was out just behind Good Shot, but Captain Tomkinson then eased him behind a compact field. Good Shot ran a good race in front and had Dilerjung and Little King settled, but in the straight he had no sort of chance with Tofic Pasha, who was hard held when winning by a length.

The two bad upsets of the day came about in the divided Hadapsur Plate, the first having Tachreet for a warm favourite from Jehangir, Lookman and Ashroff. Lookman first showed out but then Solitaire went off followed by Ashroff. The latter led before the bend from Jehangir, who then passed the grey and looked promising, but at the distance Dumra loomed alongside and was apparently going the better. Tachreet made his effort here but to no avail, as Dumra stayed him out comparatively easily.

An attempt was made by this stable to make up for a reverse, with Mudkoor, Woolwinder, Zoolphokar and Mutrood being next best fancied. Aden made the pace and surprised most people by running on and beating Woolwinder out of a place. At the turn Prime Minister came into the lead, but when Mudkoor showed handy all seemed well. He, however, was shut in and eventually just failed to catch the outsider, thanks to a strong finish by Robinson. C. B. Mahomed thus caused the two upsets of the day as trainer.

Famous stood out so much on his own in the long race that odds of twos on were laid, Grand Duke and Well Done fancied by some but mainly for places. Though his former tactics were not resorted to Famous never really left the race in doubt. He waited behind Grand Duke, Shawcutt and Hoojaz, who were bunched at the five furlongs. Here the favourite drew up second to Grand Duke and a gap separated these from Hoojaz leading the rest. At the turn Famous was in the lead and with a good hold on him was easing up when passing the post, though only half a length to the good of Hoojaz, who came again well past Grand Duke into second place.

Having already shown us that he is fit, Sholto stood out on his own in the Beginners' Chase, War Cloud being the only other quoted under tens. It was never any race at all after reaching the Grand Stand, as here the only dangerous one fell, War Cloud coming down, but we were glad to see Captain Fell rise soon after and walk back. Sholto was thus left with a long lead, and to cut it short, eventually won pulling all the way by the distance. Farewell ran up second a mile from home, but at the last jump Small Scotch was up close to him. A good race promised for second place, but the pony pecked and came down, Captain O'B. Butler remounted and finished third, also distanced, as was Xerxena, who I should mention was bad at the gate and got hopelessly left.

Though there were only seven left in, the Summer Plate was a good race, Bonny Boy being at once established favourite, though as the betting wore on a good deal came for Malmsey and some for Chivalry. In the favourite's interest, Hoppner went to the front, but with very little to spare from Malmsey and Chivalry, Bonny Boy leading the others. As they turned for home Hoppner dropped back, leaving Malmsey the lead. He was holding Chivalry safe when Bonny Boy came outside and here again Poole was able to go away again after a very nice race. This is the first time Malmsey has shown true form since his arrival.

A better race even was the mile and a half, Black Douglas being the better fancied of Ramshaw's pair, whereas Hilarity was very well backed. Devereux was credited with having put up a good gallop, found some support and got the best of the start, Black Douglas being last out. At the mile San Remo had a clear lead and Black Douglas here ran past Devereux into second place. San Remo began to fall back at the half mile, Black Douglas going into the lead, followed closely by Hilarity. In the straight a grand fight was seen, Hilarity drawing on the favourite and gaining a very slight advantage. Black Douglas, however, once more showed his finishing powers under punishment and coming again secured the verdict by a head.

Finally the Lilliput Novice, in which on his strong finish last time Mishriff was made favourite. Grill, Noomas (late Sir Albert), Mexico and Ordinary shortened for a time but all expanded again on more money for the favourite. It was a splendid start, and they ran well bunched to the turn, where Noomas shot out, but from the distance Mishriff came through at a great pace and won with some ease.

Out of the seven events carded on Saturday for the Sixth Extra Meeting we might almost say that five favourites won, two comparatively long price ones coming to the bookmakers' assistance. Four of the races were for English and Walers and we saw a tip-top class out, but most of them were not tuned up and we look forward to seeing a classy big meeting. Ames arrived by last mail, as did the English jockey, W. Bullock, and the owner Mr. Garda.

So many were left in the Strangers' Plate that it was divided, and the day began with a bit of an upset for the casual punter. It was an open betting race, Vazir and Burg about level at 7 to 2 and Rare fours. The last of these as before failed to stay, but the other two ran well and Vazir once again looked all over a winner when he had his former rival Kaharaman settled. This time, however, there was another to come and blow Vazir out, this being Little Laffy, who just got there in a desperate finish and there can be no doubt that there was not a stayer in the race.

In the division it other looked any odds on Kimberley, who had Brown up this time, and no better class to meet than when he last won. Pendil was well backed, but never really flattered, Kimberley passing Secretary on entering the straight and winning as he liked. Baloz again stayed on well and Yussuff Pasha came with a rattle which promises well for the future. This is the fifth time Brown has won the last race on the card.

There were on paper only two in it in the Welter Plate, Sholto and Bright Metal, the former a shade the better favourite, Mafoota coming in for quite a bit of money also. A stone was a big lump for Sholto to give a very fair horse like his chief rival and it proved too much. Pressure kept us waiting some time, and though she was first out of the gate and then followed Boomey she was done after half a mile. Here Sholto, Mafoota and Bright Metal in order came next to the leader, who had shot his bolt at the last turn, Mafoota drawing up close to Sholto as they faced the straight. In turning, Boomey went wide, Bright Metal taking advantage of this, and Hill still had something in hand when winning decisively. Sholto is now the property of Captain Kenworthy, who comes fresh from his Secunderabad successes.

Nine went out for the open six-furlong race and from the opening of betting Cherry Hackle was heavily backed. Pincher and Metal Boy also supported fairly freely. It was never much of a race all the way, as Cherry Hackle was first away and never looked like being headed by anything. Bachelor's Knot followed him for a time, then Pincher, Haut Park, Metal Boy and Gallileo fell in behind the leader. Metal Boy made a game effort in the straight, but it was hopeless as the favourite, still full of running, won by a fair margin.

Though again Precious was not in, the mile and a half for Arabs attracted a great deal of interest and was keenly followed round. Young Salanic and Artist were first to claim attention in the market, the former then shortening to favouritism. Merrily and Parliament next in demand to the two. Young Salanic has always been run out in front, and he and Doojan were soon clear in front of the rest, the others headed by Meazer, Merrily, Artist and Young Japan. At the five furlongs they began to close rapidly on the leaders, who were beaten at the half mile, Merrily going out in front from Parliament, Young Japan and Artist. Of these Parliament was first beaten, then Young Japan and at the distance Artist shot away clear in front. It was all over, but Sir Visto came with a wonderful run into second place in front of Brigand, who stayed very well. An enquiry was subsequently held concerning Young Salanic, the explanations being accepted by the Stewards.

The classy race of the day was of course the August Plate, for which ten started including such as Mayfowl, Tangaroa, Last Call and Cattaro, all of which looked well but the latter pair in want of work more than the others. Being in at a nice price, Black Douglas was installed a firm favourite, Huka and Tangaroa next in demand. First out of the gate, Tangaroa was followed by Crossbred, Huka, Mayfowl and Black Douglas without any long gaps. The order remained much the same with the exception of Crossbred, who dropped out. They put on the pace from the three, where Huka was close on the lead and Black Douglas just behind them. In turning for home, Huka went out a bit and Black Douglas slipping through between the two went away to win easily what had promised to be a good race. Tangaroa ran on second though eased, whereas Mayfowl finished very strong and dead-heated for third place with Huka.

Nine ponies faced the starter in the Sydney Plate, and one of Mr. Galstaun's was again made the medium of a gamble, Runaway Girl going out favourite in preference to Wild Boy, who was only nibbled at, Encourage being made a close second from Pantry Girl and Evening Herald. Presumably in his stable companion's interests, Wild Boy went away from the start to make the pace solid from Puss, Evening Herald and Runaway Girl. As they passed the three Encourage ran up into second place followed by the favourite, and as they turned the bend these put in their runs. Runaway Girl could, however, make no impression on Encourage and on the other hand had no chance with Robinson, who went on with quite a deal up his sleeve.

Perhaps earlier than most people anticipated, the Bombay Government's decision as to the bookmaker question has been made public, this on Saturday morning, and needless to say the reply to the W.I.T.C. Stewards caused no little stir amongst the whole racing community. Cut and dried, a letter which leaves nothing in doubt gives us to understand that from 1st June 1912 there are to be no bookmakers allowed in this Presidency, that Government approves of the Tote and that they do not mean to interfere with the number of races per season in the absurd manner at first suggested. This is all to be done by means of proper legislation, so we may sit back and submit to the inevitable. We are doomed to put up with the machine once and for all, unless the very improbable happens—i.e., a Governor sufficiently sporting to undo the damage.

The pros and cons have been too thoroughly gone into when the question was first mooted to need explanation now, but the whole business has met with universal discontent. No outcry can, however, do any good and we can only deplore the fact that we have a Governor who thrusts upon us a state of affairs contrary to the wish of a very large majority of the public. The Stewards have had their hands forced, and we can at least commend them in that their tact has warded off the danger of a limitation of the number of days racing.

This will undoubtedly take the edge off the keenness owners have shown in buying the best stock to import here and much of the good racing has done will be nullified. We may get straighter business—perhaps—but one would put this down more to the sharpened energy shown of late by the Stewards than to anything else. Taken all round, it is a great blow, and if racing continues to flourish it will be something of which the W.I.T.C. will have reason to be proud.

The full letter is as follows :—

With reference to correspondence on the subject of betting on the Bombay and Poona racecourses the Government have given their best consideration to the views of the Western India Club as set forth at the Conference of 31st ultimo, and I am now to explain the final conclusions of the Government on all points raised in order that the club may have ample time to make arrangements for coming changes. The Government now find that it will be necessary to legislate in respect of all proposed changes, and it will not be possible to effect these changes merely by coming to an agreement with the Club. It is intended to undertake the necessary legislation in the ensuing cold weather and to bring the amended law into operation from about the 1st June 1912. In these circumstances, and in order to remove the hardship which the stewards have represented, there will be no interference with the number of race meetings on the Bombay course during the ensuing cold weather, but all the changes will be introduced simultaneously for both places as well as for the rest of the Bombay Presidency from June 1912. The Government are glad to learn that the stewards are in agreement with them about abolition of bookmakers and substitution of totalisator. It will be strictly enforced against all bookmakers from June 1912. The Government propose to take the power to grant licenses on such terms as they deem fit to the stewards of any turf club or race meeting, authorising them to set up and work totalisators on racecourses under their control, and betting by means of totalisators so licensed will be legalised. The license will fix the number of days in the year in which totalisator may be used on the racecourse.

When the amended law comes into force it is the intention of the Government in the first instance to license totalisators for fifteen days in the year on Poona racecourse and on Bombay racecourse. In subsequent years should the Government decide to alter this number of days ample previous intimation will be given to the stewards.

The only other point on which Government think it likely that terms would have to be imposed is with regard to the minimum stake to be received in a totalisator. It is understood that Rs. 3 is the minimum for the totalisators worked by the Western India Turf Club at present and Government will agree to this amount. As the Government now find it necessary to effect by means of legislation all the arrangements for the restriction of betting it is no longer necessary to consider the offer made to the Western India Turf Club in my letter No. 70M-3035, dated 23rd May 1911. But I am directed to say that when the new arrangements have been brought into force the Government will be ready to help the Western India Turf Club to secure a longer lease of the Bombay racecourse.

MR. A. A. APCAR has accepted the invitation of the Western India Turf Club to become a steward of the Poona Races.

THE great victory achieved by the ten-year-old Dean Swift in the Chesterfield Cup at Goodwood (for details see our London sporting letter) was a splendid termination to a brilliant and remarkable career, for the old horse is not to run again in public. To use the words of J. B. Joel, the owner, "He has done enough, and he shall now end his days in peace in the comfortable paddock I have arranged for him."

In winning the Chesterfield Cup, amidst a scene of great enthusiasm, Dean Swift ran his sixty-second race, and scored his twelfth success. By Childwick out of Pasquil, he was foaled in 1901, and during his career has won the very useful amount of £9,630.

THE Jockey Club has completely exonerated Maher from the charge preferred against him by the stewards at the Leicester Meeting on the 11th instant.

AD WOLGAST and Freddie Welsh are to box 20 rounds for the Light Weight Championship of the world at Vernon, on the 30th November. Wolgast to get 13,500 dollars, win, lose or draw with privilege of 47½ per cent. of gate receipts and 51 per cent. of receipts from moving pictures. Welsh 5,000 dollars and 49 per cent. receipts from moving pictures. Weight 133lb. at ring side, 2,500 dollars forfeit to be posted. Either Eddie Smith or Jack Gleason will referee.

A YOUNG Frenchman, Charles Oviom, successfully rowed from Boulogne to Folkestone on the 1st instant in a light outrigger skiff only 8 feet long. He left Boulogne at 10-30 A.M., accompanied by a small tug, and in spite of a strong flood tide he was sighted from Folkestone about 5 P.M. He landed at 5-45 P.M. amid the cheers of a large crowd.

THE cricket match between the All-India team and Woodbrook began on the 15th instant. Woodbrook batted first and made 278, the visitors replying with 255. The South African player Faulkner took five wickets for 87. On going in again Woodbrook compiled 231, to which Morrow contributed 110. The Indians were left with 255 to make to win, but were all out for 219. Warden scored 89.

APPENDED are the results of the important cricket matches played in England during the past week :—

Warwickshire defeated Lancashire by an innings and 40 runs at Birmingham.

Gloucester beat Worcester by an innings and 69 runs at Cheltenham.

Middlesex drew with Yorkshire at Bradford, and gained a first innings victory.

Nottinghamshire drew with Derbyshire, at Nottingham, and won on the first innings.

Surrey beat Leicestershire, at Leicester, by an innings and 31 runs.

Kent beat Somerset, at Taunton, by an innings and 225 runs.

Sussex defeated Hants, at Horsham, by seven wickets.

Worcester beat Hants, at Worcester, by eight wickets.

Kent beat Gloucestershire, at Cheltenham, by an innings and 94 runs.

Lancashire defeated Middlesex, at Manchester, by 83 runs.

The match between Surrey and Yorkshire at the Oval was abandoned, owing to rain. Surrey scored three points.

Warwickshire beat Leicestershire, at Hinckley, by an innings and 54 runs.

WHAT science may do in athletics is illustrated by the reduction of the time for swimming a mile to 23mins. 35⅕secs., on Saturday, the 29th July, vide details in our London sporting letter. Four minutes have been taken off the mile record in eight years, and by eight successive steps. Swimming is one of those ancient sports in which it seems unlikely that the men of to-day would be physically better than their forefathers. Brains have counted in swimming, however, as in other sports. New methods of progression have been invented. First, there was the single over-arm stroke, then the double over-arm or "trudeon," which was more powerful, and then the "crawl," in which arms and legs seem to be engaged in a mad fury of splashing water. That last came from America, and with it Mr. Daniells covered a hundred yards in less than fifty-six seconds. We shall see other changes in styles, and he would be a rash man who would predict that new records will not be created almost continuously, for we are understanding progression in the water better and keen minds are working out its problems.

EIGHT Grands Prix in three years is a magnificent achievement of which the Lemco and Oxo Company have reason to be proud. Eight Grands Prix in three years! And these high honours have been awarded to their famous products Oxo and Lemco solely on their merits in open competition in such world-renowned exhibitions as the International Exhibitions in London, Brussels and Buenos Aires, and the Franco-British and Japan-British Exhibitions in London. Having ourselves had experience of the purity, strength, and intrinsic goodness of the products themselves we can well understand the motive of the judges in awarding them such high insignia of merit. Since their foundation, as far back as 1865, the policy of the Liebig Company has never changed. They exercise complete control over the making of their products, from the growing of the grass to the bottling up of the extract. They have always owned their own farms; they have always reared their own cattle; they have always, by exercising the strictest supervision throughout farm and factory, ensured the world-standard quality and absolute purity of their products.

ON 29th July on the Parramatta River Richard Arnst rowed Harry Pearce for the sculling championship of the world and £500 aside, the first named being the holder of the title. The water was smooth with a light breeze in favour of the scullers, and the tide also assisted the rowers. Both men were in perfect condition the champion rowing at 13·3 and Pearce at 12·10. W. Beach was the referee, and N. J. McDonald judge.

Arnst won the choice of stations, but took midstream with Pearce on the north side of him. Pearce soon had a slight lead which he increased to a length on the first minute's rowing. At two minutes Pearce was two lengths in front. Arnst continued at a slow rate of stroke and at three minutes there was a length and a half between the boats. At four minutes Arnst came up and drew level, but Pearce spurted hard nearing Blaxland Point and Pearce on the inside, was entitled to the water. Arnst knew this and coolly dropped back to allow Pearce to get clear. The mile was reached in 5mins. 35secs., a record for the distance. Arnst then came up fast and drew level and soon afterwards took the lead, not to lose it again, although Pearce rowed a great and game race. Putney (1½ miles) was passed by Arnst in 8mins. 39secs., with a lead of two and a half lengths. Two miles was passed by Arnst in 11mins. 50secs., with a lead of four lengths and at Cabarita it was five lengths. One Man Wharf was passed in 17mins. 15secs. and Arnst was still 10secs. in front. There was no final spurt, and Arnst won by four lengths in the fast time of 19mins. 46secs. This is a record for the championship on the Parramatta but the scullers started a little below Ryde Bridge.

There was a large attendance both on the water and ashore, and the gate money will be the best for several years past. After the race Arnst showed signs of distress, but he rowed a fine contest and did good work.

THE Munich city authorities have decided to put a tax on cats, and the charge is to be five marks per head. Each licensed cat will be required to wear a collar with a metal check and number similar to those worn by dogs. Every cat found without a collar after a certain date will be arrested by the official cat-catchers. In addition to being a source of revenue, the tax is announced to be a protection to singing birds, as well as a preventative of unseemly noises at night. A similar tax might, we think, be introduced into many of our towns where night is made hideous by the vocal exercises of cats engaged in love or war. Cats, too, in country places would be more appreciated and looked after if a tax had to be paid.

A SEA tortoise fossil discovered on the slope of Mount Baldy, near Los Angeles, California, is estimated by Dr. Hector Alliot, curator of the South-west Museum, of Los Angeles, to be 400,000 years old. The fossil was found 3,000 feet above sea-level and 50 miles from the coast. It is the most ancient fossil that has been found in the Western Hemisphere. The owner of a bee ranch found the fossil as he was seeking a rock to hold down the lid of a hive. Seeing a shell protruding from the ground, he dug it up and it proved to be the fossilised remains of the sea-tortoise. The specimen is nearly 30 inches in diameter, and weighs 100lb. Hundreds of large petrified clams were found embedded in the shale near the tortoise. Dr. Alliot, describing the history of the tortoise, says: "It swam in the seas when California and all the territory west of the Rocky Mountains was a mile under water. When the great subterranean upheaval occurred which brought the present Pacific Coast into existence, the tortoise undoubtedly perished. Then, already petrified, he was rolled and ground in glacial period ice for thousands of years, and was finally deposited at the place where the discovery was made."

HEAVY rain in the forenoon of Wednesday, the 16th instant, did not promise well for the Bombay mounted sports to be held on that date but it cleared up in the afternoon and in spite of threatening clouds the meeting was successfully put through. Fields were small but the sport provided was excellent. Five half sections turned out for the jumping which was won by Messrs. W. L. Graham and W. Priestley with Messrs. Spence and Baird second. The bare back bending race brought out six competitors, Mr. Knight Bruce winning from Mr. W. Moulton with Mr. Meikle third. The Heads and Posts came next. Riders had to travel over a figure 8 shaped course, take four jumps with sword at the slope, thrust at "heads on posts" on both flanks, a tilt at the ring with the sword and thrust at a "head" on the ground before the last jump. Several good displays were given Mr. Moulton getting the award, with Mr. Brodrick second and Mr. E. G. Pearson third. The V. C. race was run off in two heats of four, Messrs. Pearson and Knight Bruce putting up a good finish in the first, but Mr. Moulton won the second very easily. The final went to Mr. Pearson. The Menagerie Stakes a ladies' nomination was the next event, Mr. Pearson scoring a win partnered by Mrs. Shanks; Mr. Knight Bruce and Miss Barlow second. The Pony Scurry which wound up the proceedings gave Mr. Pearson his third win of the afternoon.

London Week by Week.

FRIDAY, 4th August 1911.

THOSE who were clamouring for rain had more than they desired in the extraordinary storm which burst over London about an hour after I posted you my letter last Friday afternoon. It was a combination of wonders. Out of a sky in which the sun was still shining, there came a thunderstorm of extraordinary violence, a deluge of rain, mixed with clear hailstones of uncommon size, and a wind which seemed to change its direction every minute, stripping the trees of their leaves and whirling them aloft. An inch of rain fell in some twenty minutes, and the temperature dropped nearly twenty degrees. The outburst lasted for a very short time, but it did great damage in many directions, flooding some of the underground railways, cutting down trees, and breaking water-pipes. Yet Paris, which has been hotter than London, had a worse experience of lightning, and nine men were killed on the roof of a building at Rouen. Our weather seems still capable of surprises although to-day we are back in the glowing heat of this extraordinary and uncommon summer. Even with two thunderstorms in a week we are not entitled to speak of the breaking of the drought.

TURKISH baths are recommended as being highly refreshing during this hot weather. And I learn from a friend that at a certain Turkish bath he frequents he was invited the other night to have his teeth cleaned. "Teeth cleaned!" said he, in surprise. "That's a thing I usually do for myself." "Ah, you can't do it as we can," said the manager insinuatingly. "Let us do it for you. It's a speciality we have just introduced." So, as an experiment, he submitted, and shortly afterwards came out with a broad smile and exhibited two dazzling rows of pearls.

And, gazing at that brilliant dental display, it struck me what a very convenient world it is we live in nowadays—a world where everything is done for us. A man goes to a Turkish bath and has his chin shaved, his head shampooed, his teeth cleaned, his nails manicured, and his corns attended to. He is taken in hand and bathed, and to save him the exertion of taking exercise is given twenty minutes' massage—which they say is equal to a three-mile walk.

Then he fills his patent self-cleaning pipe with a cartridge of tobacco—an exact pipeful measured off for him by the manufacturer—and inserts it with a patent filler. He lights it with a pocket self-lighter which saves him the trouble of striking matches—and is bowled home in a taxi-cab which tells him the exact amount of the fare. Truly an ingenious and accommodating world.

The bathing season is now on, and its most popular form is the sea dip. But it is stated that only one in ten of our bluff island race of sea dogs is able to swim. And in view of numerous boating and bathing fatalities it is urged that every Briton should learn. But it is a bit late to advance such a suggestion as that. We are used to having things done for us, and it isn't likely that we are going to all that trouble. What we want is something that can be brought in a bottle to rub ourselves with and prevent us from sinking. It ought to have been supplied long since. Why on earth doesn't the Government do something in the matter?

"ALL's well that ends well" will be the reflection which will probably occur to the friends and supporters of ex-cadet Archer Shee the victim of the Osborne College Scandal. After weary months of suspense and ceaseless agitation on his behalf, he comes out on top and the Admiralty have now paid him the sum of £7,120 for costs and by way of compensation for his wrongful dismissal from Osborne three years ago.

The circumstances of the case were such as to reflect no particular credit on the authorities concerned. The boy was tried and convicted in the first instance on evidence that no jury would for a moment have accepted. His parents were treated with singular arrogance. They were not informed of the charge against him until he had been condemned, and even then little attention was paid to their remonstrances. Finally, their first attempt to lay the case before the law courts was defeated on a technicality by the Crown, and it was not till they had had recourse to the Appeal Court that their petition of right was permitted to be heard.

As the result of that petition, the boy was completely vindicated, and the cruel wrong inflicted upon him and his parents was acknowledged. But further reparation was obviously demanded in the interests of justice. His education had suffered and he had been excluded from the Service which he had adopted as his profession in life. It was impossible for him to go back to the Navy, as two years had intervened between the date when the accusation against him was first made and the date at which it was withdrawn. It is only due to Mr. McKenna, the First Lord of the Admiralty, to say that the moment he realised that a supreme wrong had been inflicted he showed a perfect readiness to give all the satisfaction that was in his power. If there has been long delay in paying adequate compensation, those who understand the methods of our Government will be rather inclined to find the cause in the penuriousness of the Treasury than in any reluctance of the Admiralty officials to make atonement. Justice is done at last, and all is well.

LATELY we have been hearing rather more of Horatio Bottomley and his business methods than we care for. Hardly had that iniquitous matter of the Crippen letter and the part his paper John Bull took in it, been relegated to the dustbin, the only proper receptacle for such unsavoury matter, when we find him once again in Court. This time it was a little matter of £57,000 which the daughter of a Mr. Master, retired Indian Civilian, wanted him to disgorge. The facts are very simple. Mr. Master, over 80 years of age, met Bottomley who had expressed his desire to recoup Mr. Master for his losses in some of Bottomley's companies. They met several times, and in the end Bottomley had £57,000 of poor old Mr. Master's money and Mr. Master had a large number of worthless or unsaleable shares, most of them in the John Bull Investment Trust and Agency, a company which Lord Justice Fletcher Moulton described as "from first to last a sham." Those are the simple facts. Well the case occupied some days in the hearing. Bottomley was called all the swindlers in creation by the Counsel for the plaintiff, and in the end a verdict was given against him and he was ordered to refund £50,000. Of course he appealed and now the appeal has been dismissed, three judges making some scathing comments on the "horrible story."

Lord Justice Fletcher Moulton said:—

The statement by Mr. Ritter, plaintiff's counsel, that Bottomley always kept outside the criminal law was bad taste, but to say that a remark like that took away the fairness of a trial seemed to him to be an exaggerated view.

Lord Justice Buckley, referring to Bottomley's sale of 25,000 John Bull Investment shares at 30s. each, described it as the most dramatic detail of the most horrible story. He doubted whether the true enormity of these transactions ever reached the mind of the jury.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams, who differing from the other two judges, thought Bottomley should have a new trial—remarked to that person—

I want to say, as far as I am concerned, that the only opinion that I expressed that was favorable to you was merely on a point of law.

Bottomley has stated that he would appeal to the House of Lords for a new trial. He expressed surprise that their lordships should ask him to pay £50,000 into court with a view to stay of execution. Perhaps their lordships remembered that Bottomley had offered to bring this sum into the court below within seven days. That was a month ago, and as poor Mr. Master found out, much happens in a month.

London is a place of many surprises even to those who know it best. Even one little corner of it is hard to understand. There are many who boast that that small circle of which the centre is Covent Garden has no secrets for them, but they were astonished beyond measure by the aspect of the house last night. On the 31st of July after Goodwood, with a very high thermometer, there was a huge audience, remarkable for its nature no less than its size. For mid-June it would have been brilliant. There was a surprising number of well-known habitues in the stalls and boxes, and in a grand tier box, not far from the stage, sat Mr. Asquith.

It almost follows as a matter of course that it was the Russian Ballet which worked this wonder. The conquest of London by the dancers is complete, for good or for evil. An announcement, which gives furiously to think, was made the other night to the effect that the Ballet had been engaged for the autumn season, and that Ballet would be given on alternate nights with German opera. Consequently the season will last eight weeks, instead of four as originally planned—and thus we shall have two opera seasons in full swing for the greater part of November and December, instead of for a few days in November.

The programme of the evening showed the dancers at their best—and it was excellently devised for contrast. Between "Cleopatre" and "Scheherazade" came "Les Sylphides"—and it is hard to believe that the dancers who move with such airy passionless grace to the music of Chopin are the same who are stimulated to such violent emotions and such unbridled frenzy by the music of the Russians.

Here we have the secret of their triumph. They do feel what they are doing; they dance as if it were a matter of life and death to them. They do not simper at their friends in the stalls; they are not thinking when they will get away to supper, or wishing a tiresome task quickly over. They are as excited as any of the audience. It was the general opinion that they danced and mimed with more zeal and energy and charm yesterday than ever before, and the audience was tremendously enthusiastic. Mme. Karsavina and M. Nijinsky had to repeat their fascinating dance to the C. sharp minor Waltz of Chopin in "Les Sylphides," and the Bacchanale in "Cleopatre" was nearly encored. The orgy in "Scheherazade" and the scene of carnage were tremendous. A further hearing of "Scheherazade" confirms the impression that musically it is the best ballet the Russians have brought with them. It is music of real full-blooded strength. The music of "Cleopatre" is just as clever, but has not the same grip somehow, except Glazounoff's Bacchanale. Possibly the fact that it is a mosaic has something to do with it, although it seems homogeneous enough.

Incidentally, it suggests the reflection that if we had a ballet by six British composers it would be impossible to find a team which would pull together half as well. With Mr. Holbrooke at one end, Mr. Tovey at the other, we should have as much variety as one ballet could stand. In all seriousness, however, we have several composers who ought to be able to write admirable ballet music, and if the Russian dancers are to become a permanent institution here, would it be too much to hope that they may one day dance to music of British birth?

The Vagrant.

"What are you doing here," said the farmer to the tramp, who had just got over the wall in time to escape the bulldog.

"Sir," answered the tramp with dignity; "I did intend to ask for something to eat, but now, in the interests of humanity, I beg of you to feed the dog."

"Would you say I was bald?" asked the hairdresser's customer, truculently.

"Well, sir," replied the diplomatic barber, "without going so far as that, I can confidently inform you, on the best authority, that in a general way there is plenty of room at the top."

Review.

THE HIMALAYA.*

Major Bruce is a fortunate officer to have been able to spend so many years in India at high elevations, combining with service and leave the mountain travel and exploration which he evidently loves. The routes marked on his map show how widely he has traversed the Himalaya, from the Hindu Kush on the north-west frontier, in Chitral, Gilgit, Baltistan, Kashmir, Ladak, Chamba, Kangra, Garhwal, Kumaon, Nepal to Darjeeling and Sikhim to the north-east. He purports to show the great contrasts between the people, country, life, etc., of the different districts within this extensive range, but this object might have been pursued with greater fulness. Some of the people, the Nepalese for instance, and Baltis, among whom his path lay, are described sufficiently, but this can hardly be said of all the races with whom he came in contact; and, after all, the hill races have many points of similarity, wherever they are located. The Sikhim authorities will not like his remarks on the condition of that country. Major Bruce did a certain amount of climbing, as he makes constant references to glacier work, crevasses, moraine-hopping, step-cutting and roping together; he did not, however, attempt the highest mountains which he was near, Nanga Parbat, for instance, and he wonders whether it will ever be climbed; it is probably as difficult a mountain as there is to tackle, some 27,000ft high; the late Mr. Mummery and two Goorkhas were partly successful, but lost their lives by some accident. Major Bruce draws the line at 20,000 feet; everything over that he counts as first-rate and therefore unpleasant. Below that line there are many good climbs to be obtained; and he clearly found more delight and satisfaction in the second-grade valleys, and the far more beautiful and attractive country than the great bare mountains and valleys of the farther ranges. As it was, he experienced danger enough from avalanches, one of which nearly caught him; also, from the rope-bridges over running water, which he much disliked.

The difficulties of mountain travelling begin with the transport. He has some sound remarks on the necessity for tact, sympathy and understanding kindness, as well as considerable assistance in the matter of extra food and clothing for the indispensable coolies. Food is often another trouble as local supplies are often unattainable. Mountain sickness may attack even the strongest. "At great altitudes one's power of digestion are under any condition, low, and altitude and fatigue combined cannot be ignored by anyone without bad results." He also hated, and naturally, having sometimes to ride "down a slope as steep as a house with the pony's forelegs wobbling at every step, and with an inadequate saddle." Among the pleasures of mountaineering he gives a very high place to the exhilarating "rapid standing glissade." But in the final chapter by Mrs. Bruce, on Camp life in the Hills, much more can be read of the charm of such expeditions, on some of which she accompanied her husband. The return to Nature, the open-air life, the novelty, the movement, the freedom, the glories of the scenery, the snows, the valleys, the forests, the flowers, the healthiness of the exercise, the interest in the people—are all appreciated by her, without any high-falutin. Her advice as to equipment and commissariat, subjects on which Major Bruce also has something to say, should be very useful for future travellers in such regions. He is enthusiastic on the merits of the thermos bottle: "What a blessing is a thermos bottle. Undoubtedly the thermos is one nail in the coffin of the great mountains." This is a curious turn of expression, but Major Bruce is not a scholar, and does not aim at style: sometimes he is a little difficult to follow. For instance, on the subject of "Moraine-hopping" he writes: "When beginning in the early morning as a destroyer of respectable language it beats golf hollow, by midday tears, by evening a hopeless dumbness." He is clearer when he treats of sport. His account of it in Gilgit—"no better sporting country in the Himalaya and Hindu Kush"—should attract sportsmen: "Ibex, markhor, and oorial and shapoo, snow leopard, and red bear are all obtainable, while the chickore partridge shooting is quite excellent in places." He tells a good story. Two days after his arrival at a camp a middle-aged young lady sent a message to him that since she had seen him on his arrival she had been ill. "I was very much hurt, I allow. . . . I said, 'But I can't do anything.' She said, 'Wash your face and let me have the water.' So we got some water and soap, and she sat on a rock to see that there was no deception. The water, or rather the decoction, was then put into a long tumbler, and she then and there drank it all. What is more, the next day she sent word that she was quite cured."

As a record of Himalayan expeditions Major Bruce's book should inspire and guide those who have time and taste for mountain-travel in India. It does not pretend to be an elaborate treatise; it is indicative rather than exhaustive; the small scale of the map renders it impossible to show anything like detail. The illustrations of the mountains, especially the long panorama of the Eastern Himalaya and other pictures of particular peaks, give a very good idea of the magnificent scenery.

Fishing.

SUMMER TROUT FISHING.

The Skell and Laver, on which I get occasional day tickets through the kindness of a member of the Ripon Angling Club, are typical bushy Yorkshire becks, which can really only be fished to the best advantage with waders. When however one has a railway journey of an hour and a half each way and a stiff walk to and from the station as well, such wearying encumbrances as wading stockings and brogues are not to be thought of, and one just does without them and makes the best of things. The early summer of 1911 has been an extraordinarily dry one, weeks of brilliant sunshine without any rain worth speaking of. This, although very charming, is by no means an ideal condition of things for the trout fisherman. The streams everywhere are at their very lowest and brightest, and it is a problem indeed to get a fly on to the little water that is left without being terrifyingly visible to its finny denizens.

The other day we did have a day of steady rain, so directly afterwards I went off to see what could be done. The baked soil had so completely sucked up the rainfall, that the Skell and Laver seemed to have benefitted but little. The trout were however rising, and owing to the lowness of the water there was much bare shingle below the banks, and by crawling along this it was possible to to remember that of all the duties which we owe to ourselves for health and comfort's sake, the proper care of the teeth is one of the most important.

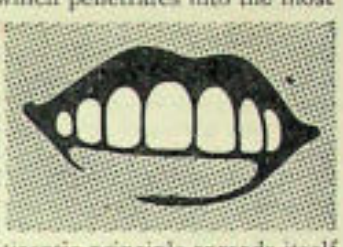
One should realise—and recent investigations have proved it again and again—that the condition of the teeth has far more influence upon our general well-being than most of us suppose. The protection of the teeth, however, can only be considered as sufficient when the tooth-destroying substances which are the causes of fermentation and decomposition, and which renew themselves in the mouth daily, are also daily destroyed.

As everyone must acknowledge after a little reflection a special care is needed to keep the mouth free from these harmful substances.

To a certain extent the tooth-brush will be useful for the removal of the impurities from the teeth, but only to a certain extent, as with the brush the surface alone of the teeth can be reached. But as the injurious bacteria are located everywhere—in the mucous membrane of the mouth and especially in the corners and folds where the brush cannot reach—one must use besides the tooth-brush, the liquid and antiseptic dentifrice Odol, which penetrates into the most hidden places of the mouth and destroys all harmful bacteria.



It is on account of its unique properties that Odol especially excels all other mouth-cleansing preparations. After the mouth has been rinsed with Odol its active antiseptic principle spreads itself with all-pervading effect over the entire oral cavity, the microscopically minute antiseptic element maintaining its influence for hours.

It is this lasting effect, this precious and transcendent quality which no other dentifrice or mouth-wash possesses, that gives to daily users of Odol the absolute assurance that their mouths are permanently protected against the processes of fermentation and decomposition, which, if not guarded against, inevitably destroy the teeth.

get a fly to some of the runs and pools without making oneself too conspicuous. Very fine drawn gut and two small flies were the order of the day. The inevitable Water-hen Blos was the stretcher and a Greenwell's Glory the drop. The breeze, which was down stream, made matters rather more difficult, for when creeping along the shingle with lots of trees all round, it is out of the question using the ordinary backward cast, which would cause endless entanglement. The tail fly must only be drawn back gently along the water and the line flicked forward in Spey fashion. This cramped mode of casting deprives one of a great deal of that forward driving power which is so essential in getting out a fly against the wind. However the stream makes many a bend, so in some places I had the breeze on the beam instead of dead ahead, and then was able to cast easily enough. The numerous trees had their advantages too, for they shaded much water which would have been otherwise hopelessly bright. As may be imagined, under the circumstances, the smaller trout were the ones which rose. Many a time I would distinctly see the flash of a golden side under my fly without any subsequent breaking of the surface. This showed how the trout often came up half way as the fly floated over them, but turned away again before actually reaching it. Their keen eyes spied the fraud in the crystal water before it was too late. Happily for me all the fish were not so long sighted, and every now and then there would come the ring of a genuine rise and my line would occasionally tauten deliciously in response to the lifting wrist. My first 3½ ouncer soon came flapping into the shingle at my feet. His sides were a perfect harmony in gold and scarlet. The wild mint that I love best to put at the bottom of my basket was nowhere to be found, so I had to be content to make him a coarser bed out of the broad leaves of coltsfoot. A merciful tap on the head was not forgotten, for though fish are said not to feel much, I am sure it is better to kill them at once instead of leaving them to die slowly of suffocation.

The Ripon trout run just about the same weight as the little Rain Quail which many of the readers of the Indian Field will soon be beating up out of the weed patches and monsoon grass. What a pity that one cannot have both together and eat them one after the other at dinner, when the day is done!

An English stream in summer abounds with life. The noisy anxious sandpiper flits hither and thither, in an agony lest the innocent angler should have designs on its skilfully hidden nest. Coots and Moorhens squatter away across the brook and dive out of sight into the willow fringe along the opposite bank. More unwelcome are parties of fat ducks from the neighbouring farms, which regularly take possession of certain pools and quack angrily at the fisherman who dares to trespass on their domain. As a matter of fact I think ducks do the trout little harm; they are not quick enough to catch such agile fish, and certainly the trout themselves take little notice of them, for I have constantly seen fish rising steadily close to a flock of noisy ducks. The Laver runs through highly preserved shootings, and one occasionally puts up an old hen pheasant and her brood; the chicks just big enough to fly, and looking for all the world just like the quail I was talking about a moment ago.

After getting two more trout the same size, I come to a very favourite spot where a nice deep stickle runs between thick fringes of low willow on either bank. Here I can stand upright, and with one foot on a flat stone look round a clump of osiers and command the whole length of the run with an upstream cast. First with a short line I throw to the lower and nearer end of the stickle, and as my first cast falls on the water two gallant rises come together and two trout are hooked at once. They meant business too, and are well hooked; a minute later and the brace of plump beauties are drawn safely ashore. Two more like them, but this time one by one are taken from the higher part of the run with a longer line.

And now in a little wood, where the water glides deeply under a high bank opposite, I set myself to try for a bigger fish. The stream is wofully shrunk and narrow, and I have to crawl painfully upwards, foot by foot, over damp and knobbledy shingle. I have no leather knee pad either, a very necessary adjunct for this sort of work, and as the Scotch would say "Its mighty sore on the knees." However the uncomfortable crawl is at last accomplished, and I find myself opposite a shady glide, only some seven yards away, and there quite unsuspicious a nice trout is steadily taking every natural fly that floats over him. Gently I draw out just enough line to reach, and flick my fly towards this fish. A wandering gust spoils this first attempt and the fly falls a couple of feet too low. I allow my line to go downstream and gently draw up and try again. This time the Water-hen Blos falls about a foot above the desired spot. There is a breathless moment of expectation; the fly floats on its way; now it is over the fish. Will he come? Yes there is the longed-for ring; the fly vanishes, the rod point is raised, and a fat half-pounder is plunging and leaping at the end of the gossamer gut. There are roots and snags in plenty close at hand, so the trout is carefully drawn a little down stream to clear water, where his struggles are soon over, and he is pulled on to the shelving shore.

So the day goes on, a trout here and a trout there, now and again a too adventurous cast results in a Water-hen Blos being left in a tough withy; but there are plenty, plenty more like flies in the box, and it is only by running risks that one can get fish.

The end of the day sees me with a couple of dozen nice trout, but the half pounder whose capture I have described is the only really sizeable fish of them all. Had there only been less sun and more water no doubt the basket would have held several like unto him.

LETTERS ON SHOOTING.

BY BALDATCHA.

Letter No. VII.

Odds and Ends.

Keeping Cartridge Cases, Wads, etc., etc.

The best plan is to have one's cold-weather ammunition out fresh and fresh from Home and there is no better way of keeping cartridges, powder, etc., from damp than a hinged zinc box made with little clip pins or clutch fastenings inside a well-made deal box fitted with hinges and a good lock and fastened as well with screws. A box of this description costs only a little more than the terrible zinc-lined or tin-lined packing case, which has to be cut open and is a ragged-edged gaping, untidy beast ever afterwards. Zinc has apparently the property of keeping away damp. As these boxes accumulate, they come in very handy for other things than ammunition. For the voyage out from home waterproof paper is fastened along the edge of the zinc cover, and the ammunition cannot be reached by damp sea air. It is advisable not to keep nitro powders from one season to the next, and one's surplus snipe cartridges are usually expended on quail. Sometimes cartridges kept over the hot weather and rains shoot well the next season, but this is not always the case. The powder too one gets in this country is not to be relied upon, and if one is obliged to get it out here it is as well to go to a European firm and ask them to send you your supply from their latest and freshest instalment from Home. When ordering Schultz from Home, the smallest quantity that can be imported with advantage is fifteen (15) pounds, so it is as well for two or three friends to combine and get out their supply together. I have always kept a reserve of cartridge cases in hand of 1,200 or 1,500 cases with wads sufficient to fill at least double that number. These cases and wads are first used at the commencement of the next season so the turn over is continuous. Personally I always get my ammunition from the Army and Navy Stores, Westminster, to ensure it being fresh, and this is far more satisfactory and economical than employing the stores out here, and one does not run the risk of disappointment. During all the years I have dealt with the Victoria Street Stores, I do not recollect ever having to make a complaint. The gun department is most excellently and efficiently run, and all the employes are so painstaking and obliging that it is a pleasure to have dealings with them. In a very damp or white-ant infested station a very effective stand can be made for gun cases, ammunition boxes, etc., by utilising empty beer, whisky or champagne bottles. Have a square frame made of battens of any convenient length, width and thickness and let the four ends of long sides project. Into these projecting ends holes are made for the necks of the bottles and you have a capital stand which absolutely defeats the white ant.

Cartridge Bags, etc.

These should be of the best leather obtainable, Willesden canvas makes a good substitute and lasts longer than the ordinary red canvas.

The flap should cover the whole opening and come over the ends as well so that no damp can get inside, nor the pilfering finger of the coolie penetrate. Always take out a liberal supply of cartridges, and in addition to this invariably carry a reserve bag to hold at least 200 cartridges more. This reserve bag should be fitted with several partitions, and two of the large partitions must hold at least the above number of cartridges to be carried over and above the estimated requirements of the day, one is then ready for all emergencies, and should birds be unusually plentiful there is the ammunition to take full advantage of the pleasant surprise. The unexpected sometimes occurs and to be always prepared for it is wise. One never knows when one may come across large numbers of birds and it is disappointing to lose a great opportunity for want of ammunition.

A good size for the reserve cartridge bag will be found to be 15 by 9 by 6½ inches. Into this a couple of hundred cartridges can easily be placed, and there will be room in the other compartments for some duck or partridge shells as well as for the odds and ends that should always remain in the bag. Then when an unexpected vein of luck crops up, as it sometimes will, there is ample ammunition to enjoy to the full the opportunity, and the feeling that one is prepared for all eventualities is not unpleasant. It is disappointing to lose a rare opening for want of a little forethought and arrangement which our "Aryan" friends euphemistically call bandobast. Besides these extra cartridges the bag will probably contain a Lauder Brunton snake lancet with permanganate in the handle, price, eight annas. A small bottle of Calvert's Carbolic Acid crystals for wasp and hornet and bee stings. A tiny drop of acid on the finely sharpened end of a match or piece of stick applied to the puncture made by the sting—or bite if it is a centipede in question—removes the pain instantly and instead of having to stop shooting when one is stung, or because the line has been attacked by hornets or bees this simple remedy enables one to go strong ahead. The minute drop must only be applied to the puncture itself and not to the skin round it. The smallest children can be treated in this way and begin at once to run and play about as if nothing had happened. For hill shooting or whenever blistered feet are likely or possible a small bottle of white of fresh egg should not be omitted. This is a marvellous remedy, and often in the Himalayas it is impossible, at the beginning of the season especially, even when the feet and socks have been soaped, to avoid blisters, and to be able to go on shooting in comfort, with all the skin off the tops of one's toes, is a very great matter. Take off boot and sock and apply a little of the white to the parts affected, soak a little lint in it and tie round the sores, and by the time you reach home, having in the meantime forgotten all about your troubles a new skin will have already commenced to harden. This is a very old wrinkle, and, like oiling the shot, by those who try it, is never forgotten or omitted. A spare knife with corkscrew, a pair of folding scissors, a pair of tweezers for thorns and splinters, a little rose-wood pad of tools, and turnscrews for small and ordinary screws of your gun, (beware of the rubbishy things usually supplied in the gun-cases,) a spare extractor—one being always tied firmly to the cartridge bag in general use, and a housewife with the ordinary needles, thread, etc., and with some silk and a couple surgical needles. A roll of sticking Meades plaster, some twine, boracic powder, "Homocea" matches in a damp-proof box, or a flint and steel, and any other little conveniencies that appeal to one should always be found in the bag. A note-book and pencil should never be absent, and a roll of bandage and a little lint will complete the outfit. It is very little trouble to collect these things and once obtained it is extraordinary what a difference they make when the unexpected occurs. Every one goes a-fishing well provided against possible accidents and contigencies, but few take thought for the untoward when going shooting. A small padlock, a snap lock for choice, which can be opened by sliding the projection to one side and has a key as well, is usually sufficient to puzzle the coolie carrying it and to secure the contents from these clever petty-larceny boys. A good long strap passed twice round the bag has a very deterrent effect. The sling should in all bags be a wide one and should pass underneath and along the bottom of the bag. It is false economy to be unprovided with sufficient cartridge bags for the different kinds of cartridges taken out for the day. It makes for comfort and satisfaction if one is well found in this respect. These minor details which take time to describe and look alarming on paper are simple and easily met. Do not forget with some ostentation to count the cartridges in your expense bag before your coolies, or at any rate make it clear to them that you have done this and know exactly how many cartridges you have brought out.

Should you unexpectedly find yourself in need of ball cartridge—having none—the following dodge will enable you to use your gun as if it was loaded with bullet. Take a cartridge (loaded with No. 6 or No. 4 shot for choice) and with your pen-knife make small cross slits along the outside round the base of the felt wad. The uncut portion will hold the cartridge together until the moment of firing, when the upper half will fly off like a shell. Panthers and other large beasts can be dropped dead by this method with No. 6 shot. The mess it makes inside an animal is tremendous.

(9) Sticking Plaster, Lint, small tin or bottle permanganate potash.
(10) Turnscrews, Captain Nesfield's Iodine tablets for purifying water.
(11) Roll of Bandages, Homocea, Boracic acid powder in bottle.
(12) A few rupees and some small change.

This looks a very formidable list but the articles take up little room and once put into the bag are always ready for emergencies.

Should it be ever necessary or rather unavoidable to leave one's gun to the tender mercies of the bearer or boy it must be frequently examined, as nothing but constant and watchful attention will prevent the native from either neglecting the gun or trying unholy experiments with brick dust or sandpaper, in order to put a "palish"—always be it noted where polish was never intended. The native too cannot resist fiddling with the locks and pulling off the triggers, so it is a good plan to always keep snap-caps in the barrels. On no account allow any one but yourself to use a wire brush, throw far out to sea the steel wire brush, and keep the brass one under lock and key to be used by you alone. Much mischief is done by these wire brushes as most gunmakers can testify. It is a pity that soap and hot water is not used now-a-days for cleaning breech-loaders. What a splendid state it kept the old muzzle loaders in. The writer has in his possession a muzzle-loading gun that is known to be over a hundred years old. Not very long ago it was carefully overhauled by a London firm who reported that its barrels were in grand order and exhibited a wonderful state of preservation. This, as the gun has taken at least three trips to India since 1837 and has in its day seen much service both at Home and out here, must in a large measure be attributed to the affects of soap and water. The gun in question has killed many tigers and was converted to the percussion principle over fifty years ago.

BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS,

GOUT, RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, NEURALGIA

TESTIMONIAL FROM SIR SAMUEL BAKER,
The Famous Nile Explorer,

Newton Abbot Devon.

Dear Sirs,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

Fourth Day, Saturday, 12th August 1911.

THE meeting was brought to a conclusion with a card of eight events this afternoon and good sport was again provided for the wind-up. Mr. Torrington had started the meeting well, but did little on the second and third days. To-day, however, his luck was again in the ascendant and he carried off four races, Santoinette winning the Fort Plate Handicap with Black Buck from the same stable second, Firefly won the Kempton Handicap, Annis Pasha the Carlyon Stakes, and Ngakapa the Military Handicap. The Roberts' Cup gave us an upset in the victory of Messrs. Murray and Bayly's Lahuk, the pari-mutuel paying Rs. 2,832 on Rs. 10 tickets for a win.

Immediately after the race for the Fort Plate Handicap Firth the jockey was summoned before the Stewards of the Turf Club, who held an enquiry into his riding of Black Buck. We hear that as the result of that enquiry Firth has been suspended until some time in November.

What to do if Your Horse Pulls

THE KEY TO HIS MOUTH IS A RENSUM REIN.

Sir Gilbert East, Bart., wrote:—"You have found the key to my excitable mare's mouth. I have now the pleasure of riding an animal chock full of life, with complete control."

You have three courses open if you own a puller. You may go on using him, to your great discomfort; you may sell him, to your loss; or you may cure him, if you know how. I am a veteran horseman with a reputation to lose, and I stake it upon the assertion that in my "Rensum" Pamphlet I will show you how, for £1 1s. (the cost of a "Rensum" Rein), you may, without severity, cure the worst puller. The Pamphlet will prove to you that by a new method you may turn a confirmed puller into a snaffle bridle hunter, or polo pony. The "Rensum" Pamphlet will also show you how you may cure a rearer, kicker, or other vicious horse.

H. S. RENSUM, The Cottage, Yardley, Worcestershire, Eng.

WRITE TO ME

That I may advise. Describe your horse's fault and I will send you the

"RENSUM" PAMPHLET free.

If you order a Rensum Rein, with it will be sent, the fully detailed instructions for making or remaking a mouth on the simple Rensum method which cannot fail.

I prefer to use the "Rensum Rein" on the easy half moon "Rensum Bit." The Rein and Bit together I will send for a guinea and a half.

What to do if Your Horse Pulls

THE KEY TO HIS MOUTH IS A RENSUM REIN.

Sir Gilbert East, Bart., wrote:—"You have found the key to my excitable mare's mouth. I have now the pleasure of riding an animal chock full of life, with complete control."

You have three courses open if you own a puller. You may go on using him, to your great discomfort; you may sell him, to your loss; or you may cure him, if you know how. I am a veteran horseman with a reputation to lose, and I stake it upon the assertion that in my "Rensum" Pamphlet I will show you how, for £1 1s. (the cost of a "Rensum" Rein), you may, without severity, cure the worst puller. The Pamphlet will prove to you that by a new method you may turn a confirmed puller into a snaffle bridle hunter, or polo pony. The "Rensum" Pamphlet will also show you how you may cure a rearer, kicker, or other vicious horse.

H. S. RENSUM, The Cottage, Yardley, Worcestershire, Eng.

WRITE TO ME

That I may advise. Describe your horse's fault and I will send you the

"RENSUM" PAMPHLET free.

If you order a Rensum Rein, with it will be sent, the fully detailed instructions for making or re-making a mouth on the simple Rensum method which cannot fail.

In order to use the "Rensum Rein" on the easy half moon "Rensum Bit." The Rein and Bit together I will send for a guinea and a half.

SWIMMING.

ONE MILE CHAMPIONSHIP.—The Amateur Swimming Association's one mile championship, open to the world, was decided on Saturday in connection with the gala at Berwick. There were four starters, and the result was as follows: H. Taylor (Hyde Seal) 1; T. S. Battersby (Southport), 2; J. G. Hatfield (Middlesbrough), 3; William Foster (Hyde Seal), 4. Taylor and Battersby soon drew away from their young rivals. The former led by two yards at the second turn, and increased his advantage to four yards during the next two lengths. Battersby gradually reduced his leeway, and was level at the eighth turn, but Taylor, who was champion in 1906-7, forged ahead again, and won by ten yards in 23mins. 35½secs, beating Battersby's record of 24mins. 1 2-5secs. Battersby, who did 23mins. 45 2-5secs., also beat his previous best.

Other events at the gala resulted as follows:—

50 yards Local Handicap.—E. T. O'Riordan, 1; A. Erskine, 2; C. Russell, 3

THE CALCUTTA CUP.

THE first two rounds of the Royal and Ancient Club's match-play tournament for the Calcutta Cup were decided on Monday on the new course at St. Andrews in beautiful weather. Several of the fifty-seven entrants scratched, one of the most noteworthy absentees being Mr. H. W. Forster, M.P., who was drawn against Colonel J. Grant. Mr. F. M. Richardson, the holder of the trophy, won both his matches easily. The results in the second round were:—

Rev. A. R. F. Hyslop 2 beat R. S. Pettigrew (9) by 2 up and 1 to play.
J. A. Miller beat Kendrick Henderson by 3 and 2.
Dr. Sloan beat Captain Aitken by 2 up.
Captain Foster and J. H. Blackwell halved.
J. N. Inglis beat J. W. Laidlay by 4 and 3.
F. M. Richardson beat Lieut.-Colonel Oswald by 3 and 2.
W. E. Fairlie beat Rev. Lee by 2 up.
Major-General Hammersley beat A. le Maitre by 7 and 6.
H. Boyd beat Captain MacAllan by 5 and 3.
A. Oldham beat Fleming Crooks by 1 up
A. Muirhead beat J. Inglis jun., by 4 and 3.
Professor Paterson beat Lieut.-Colonel Livingstone by 3 and 2.
W. Bertram beat A. Drysdale by 4 and 3.
The Hon. W. F. North beat F. E. Dubs by 2 and 1.
Colonel D. D. McIntyre a bye.

In beautiful weather the tournament was continued on Tuesday on the new course at St. Andrews. The previous day's rain had considerably improved the greens.

F. M. Richardson (scratch), who won last year, was beaten in the third round by J. N. Inglis another scratch player. Richardson took the lead at the second hole, where his opponent missed a very short putt, and, winning the seventh in a fine 3, led by two holes at the turn. Inglis secured the short thirteenth in 3 to 4, and squared at the sixteenth with a 4. Inglis took the lead at the seventeenth, where Richardson duffed his short pitch into a bunker. The eighteenth was halved in 4, so that the holder of the trophy was beaten by 1 hole.

W. E. Fairlie plus 2 could not give 9 strokes to Major-General Hammersley, who won by 4 and 3. Appended are the results:—

THIRD ROUND.

Rev. A. Hyslop (2) beat Colonel MacIntyre (10) by 5 and 3.
Dr. A. Sloan (5) beat J. Miller (15) by 2 and 1.
Captain Foster (9) beat J. H. Blackwell (scratch) by 3 and 2.
J. N. Inglis (scratch) beat F. Richardson (scratch) by one hole.
Major-General Hammersley (7) beat W. E. Fairlie (plus 2) by 4 and 3.
H. L. Boyd (scratch) beat A. C. Oldham (6) by 10 and 1.
A. C. Muirhead (3) beat Professor Paterson (11) by 3 and 1.
W. Bertram (6) and Hon. W. F. North (3) halved.

FOURTH ROUND.

Rev. A. R. F. Hyslop beat Dr. A. T. Sloan by 1 hole.
Captain Foster beat Mr. Inglis by 3 and 1.
Mr. Boyd beat Major-General Hammersly by 2 and 1.
Mr. Muirhead beat Mr. Bertram by 3 and 1.
Hon. W. F. North, a bye.

Delightful weather prevailed yesterday, when the fifth and sixth rounds were decided.

One of the most interesting matches of the day was that in the fifth round between two left-handed players—the Hon. W. F. North and the Rev. A. Hyslop. The former received one stroke allowance at the eleventh hole. The match was a very close one, there being seldom more than one hole between the players. In the end the contest ended all even, and both players qualified for the semi-final.

The match between H. L. Boyd (scratch) and Captain Allan Foster (9) opened with three halves, but Captain Foster, who holed a fifteen yards putt at the sixteenth, proved successful by 4 and 2. Results:—

FIFTH ROUND.

Hon. W. F. North (3) and Rev. A. R. F. Hyslop (2) halved.
Captain Allan Foster (9) beat H. L. Boyd (scratch) by 4 and 2.
A. C. Muirhead (3) a bye.

SEMI-FINALS.

Rev. A. R. F. Hyslop beat Captain A. Foster by 7 and 5.
A. C. Muirhead beat the Hon. W. F. North by 5 and 3.

ONCE a year Mrs. Toodle visited her great-aunt. As Mr. Toodle was left to look after himself, his good spouse pictured him wandering about the house after matches, studs, articles of clothing and such like domestic oddments, and she gave him plentiful instructions—which he hardly followed—and told him to write if he found himself in difficulties.

One day she received a wire:

"Where's my straw hat?"

She replied:

"Dear George.—I think I put it on top shelf of the oak chest in the second-floor front bed-room. If not, it may be under the hall-table, or in the small black trunk in the attic, or in the white box under the bed, or in the spare room.—Your affectionate Mary.

"P. S.—Perhaps, after all, I changed it at the door for some ferns."

GYMKHANA vs. KOLAR GOLD FIELD C.C.—This annual fixture came off at Bangalore on Saturday the 19th instant. The weather was fine and the pitch in splendid condition. The visitors went in first and made a big stand for 227 runs of which Watters compiled 51, Wilkins 43 and Bocquet 31, Pritchard adding a useful 24. The home eleven were very short of bowlers, Mitford doing most of the trundling and looking worn out towards the end of the innings. The Gymkhana did not enter on their innings without some misgivings as to their strength in the batting line, but fortune favoured them and from the second wicket, thanks to Mitford's fine batting, they led their opponents. Mitford and Fraser made a stand for 68 runs and later on Fowler and Russell playing in partnership knocked up 102 runs between them. Fowler was next joined by Clarke and they ran out the required number of runs and the Gymkhana came out winners by 30 runs and 3 wickets. This is the best game yet played in the present season and nobody who has watched the poor batting and bowling of the Gymkhana reckoned on their coming off with flying colours to-day against such an eleven as the Kolar Gold Field C.C. put in the field. CALCUTTA RUGBY NOTES AND COMMENTS.

WITH the exception of the East Yorks the forward play of the teams competing in the Rugby League has been of a very indifferent quality. Of course not much can be expected from the Nomads, who are practically and have invariably been a scratch side, but better things were expected from Calcutta. In the C.F.C.'s present pack there is a lack of cohesion and thoroughness, the play as a consequence being of a scrambling order and good foot work is lacking. The work of the United Service's forwards too is of a loose, uncertain description but in Walker, Trenchard and Connor the Services have three excellent forwards. Of the Calcutta scrummagers Studd is the pick of the eight and Richmond is also a hard worker. Dempster and one or two more who played last year have fallen off considerably and this is all due to want of practice. If the old club is to be expected to render a better account of itself, there must be more interest shown and larger numbers must turn out for practice. When players are not keen they cannot hope to succeed. For the last few years a team does not get more than six or eight games in a season, and of an evening when a club is not engaged one does not nowadays see more than a couple out for practice so that unsatisfactory results are not to be wondered at. In the old days—the days when Calcutta beat such strong combinations as the Welsh Regiment, the Buffs, Worcesters, City and Suburban and the Black Watch (civilians)—at least twice a week, fifteen or twenty players would turn out to "punt about" but now-a-days except on match days scarcely half a dozen are seen out. The only lot to be seen kicking the oval ball every evening are the East Yorks. The Calcutta players are yet possessed of fine physique and are generally bigger and heavier than the ordinary Tommy, but for want of condition, they cannot last and in the end get badly beaten. It is to be hoped that more interest will be shown by the civilian players, and that between this and the big tournament next month the men who are to represent Calcutta, the Services and Nomads will turn out for practice.

The first half of the Senior League programme was concluded on Saturday, each of the four teams playing three games, and so far the East Yorks are leading, having won all their games—a fitting reward for their keenness. The Services on Saturday's form appear to have the best chance in the return matches, but the Yorks will want some beating.

The Rugby Challenge Cup will have to finish up by the 25th September the latest, as the Madras Tournament is fixed to start on the 2nd October. Calcutta will most probably send a team to the Southern Presidency and the side should be quite a good one including as it will the pick of the United Service players. The Madras Tournament promises to be a very attractive one as in addition to Calcutta and Bombay, Ceylon are to be represented and the West Riddings also intend competing. There is a rumour that a combined team from Lucknow will take part in our competition next month and will be mainly composed of officers of the 8th Hussars, the King's Own Royal Lancasters and the Highland Light Infantry. The Oriental Sporting and Mohan Bagan, I am glad to say, have made a move in the right direction, both having started Rugger teams, and if the local European schools and colleges will follow suit in a few years there should be a welcome revival of the game in Calcutta. St. Xavier's boys are making good headway, and although the pack is too light, against less heavy opponents the Park Street boys can be depended upon to hold their own.

The East Yorks beat Calcutta by the narrowest of margins—a goal to a unconverted try but on the play the military deserved to win by a larger margin. Just before the close Miller got over with a fine try but this was disallowed and a five yard scrum order instead. On Saturday the Services and Calcutta match was very interesting up to the last ten minutes. Each side pressed in turn but the fine defence of the U.S. backs—the tackling, picking up, and strong punting of Pitman, the full back, in particular prevented Calcutta from scoring. Jenkins, however, had two good openings of getting in, but he seemed to have lost his head at the most critical moment and still lacks experience. In the last ten minutes of the game Calcutta had their line crossed no fewer than three times, Connors getting over with the first try, while Leonard, the left three-quarter, got the next two All the tries were actually made through the fine play of Walker—his fine dribbling and picking up enabling the backs opportunities of handling the ball. Pyne and Jenkins made poor attempts to tackle Leonard. The place-kicking by Pitman, however, was poor, not one of the tries being converted.

The same evening the East Yorks beat the Nomads by two goals and two tries or 16 points to nil. Appended is the Senior tables :—

THE HARWOOD LEAGUE.

THE Garrison Artillery met the Volunteers Artillery on Monday the 14th instant. The Volunteers played only ten men and a one sided and uninteresting game ended in a win for the R.G.A. by 8 goals to nil, 5 in the first half and 3 after the interval. The Royal Warwicks continue their victorious career. On Tuesday in spite of a plucky defence by the Telegraphs, the soldiers had matters all their own way and ran out winners by 11 goals to one—the Telegraph's solitary point being the result of a nice individual effort by Milne. The Gunners played the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday, the military having the best of the exchanges and winning by 7 goals to nil. On Friday the Byculla Railway Institute met and defeated the Telegraphs by 3 goals to nil. Saturday's game was between the Bombay F.C. and the Royal Warwicks and anticipations were realised when an interesting display was witnessed by a large crowd. Play was fast throughout and the civilians were first to score, Templeton putting through. Inskip equalised shortly after and just before the interval, Ensor gave the military the lead. The Warwicks had most of the game in the second-half but neither team could score again and the soldiers won by 2 to 1. Appended is the League table to Saturday the 19th (inclusive).

Michelin Tyres in the Making.

No. 3. A Careful Examination at every stage of the process of manufacture should be made by the maker who wishes to produce only the best article. There must be no working along the "near enough" lines; everything must be "absolutely right." This can only be ensured by keeping the strictest watch and making the most searching analyses in order to discover any possible defects. 15

TENNIS AT BANGALORE.

THE "Raju Mudaliar Memorial Tournament" was brought to a most successful close on the evening of Thursday, the 17th instant, when the final match was played between A. R. Kesava Mudaliar and T. V. Kuppusawmy Naidu, in the presence of an immense crowd of Indian gentlemen and students of this station as well as from the city, and also a few Europeans.

There can be no keener Tennis enthusiasts in all India than the members of the B.B.A.N. M's. Union, and that they can hold their own against some of the best Englishmen in these parts has been demonstrated in the recent Gymkhana Tournament as well as in this one.

The final match on Thursday was worth going a long way to see. Kesava Mudaliar was the favourite, but he disappointed his contingent rather unexpectedly, Kuppusawmy's win in the semi-finals against Subbarayan was also a very great surprise. The result of this match was a victory for Kuppusawmy by 3 sets to 1. The following are results of his :—

MOTORING NOTES.

LONDON, 4th August 1911.

THE Prince Henry Tour of 1911 is at an end, and has undoubtedly been a brilliant success from the point of view of bringing the German and British nations into closer touch, and of dispelling many wrong impressions one of the other. As for the result of the tour, looking at it as a reliability trial, we regret that that we are not able to state more than that the match was won by the British team, on behalf of whom Prince Henry's trophy is now held by the R. A. C. Both the German and British clubs were anxious that the competition should in no way form a ground of advertisement to the makers of motor-cars. Consequently the contest had to be regarded purely as a team one, all comment on individual performances being discouraged. We feel sure that the competitors, or at any rate the majority of them, would have liked a report as to how they got through the tour, while the record of the performances of the different cars would have been of interest and service to the motoring public. All that can be said is that sixty-one of the sixty-five cars which started survived this ordeal, and that of the British team not a single car fell out on the way.

A MATTER that worries many motorists and intending motorists is the question as to whether it is better to have a single-seated body or the ordinary tonneau (i.e., double-seated body) fitted to their cars, irrespective of the wisdom of fitting a light body on a chassis spring to carry a heavy tonneau. For economical motoring there is no doubt the single-seater, which can be made to carry three people, is a long way better that the tonneau. The saving in tyres alone being very considerable, for it is the lateral strain and the additional weight of the extra passengers and body over the back tyres that causes fifty per cent. of the tyre troubles met with on the road.

ALTHOUGH it seems but a day or two ago that the Commercial Motor Users' Association held its annual parade, and with such unparalleled success as was duly chronicled herein, the C.M.U.A. is a real live body, and has already had under careful consideration the conditions to govern the sixth annual fixture of the kind, which will be held in June, 1912. Entries will be invited and the general conditions issued approximately on 15th September, and the list will close on 1st January 1912. Late entries, however, may be received up to within a month of the parade on payment of a fine. The garage, drivers, and vehicles of the entrants will be inspected by an engineer appointed by the Association. The inspection will commence on 1st January, and will consist of a visit to the garages, a general viva-voce examination of the drivers, and an inspection of the vehicles under their working conditions. Marks will be allotted for the driver's personal qualifications, the total mileage, weekly mileage and age of the machine, the nature of the work, the intensity of the work, and the general condition of the vehicle due to the driver and not due to the owner or due to the construction. It is proposed, if the necessary arrangements can be made, to give the drivers a number of tickets for some popular exhibition as near as possible to the parade centre; if not, the non-winning drivers will receive a small sum of money by way of consolation. The Association is endeavouring to arrange for the parade, which will be a short one, to be held in an open space where all the vehicles can be collected together, and numerous prizes will be awarded.

A VERY convenient device to save the rim when a cover gives out, and one is compelled to drive home without a tyre, can be made of two thick leather straps the width of the channel, and a piece of rubber belting the width of the rim, all riveted together in such a manner that when placed around the wheels the straps will occupy the channel, and the belting will project over the edges of the rim to protect it from stones and gravel wear. The ends of this extemporaneous tyre may be held together by the halves of an ordinary hinge riveted to the ends, and when in use held together by a wire nail in the place of the original rivet, the end of the nail being bent over with the pliers to retain it in place.

AT the last meeting of the committee of the Automobile Association and Motor Union, 1,396 new members, including 390 motor-cyclists, were elected. These numbers constitute a fresh record in the history of the Association. The new members include many prominent and well-known motorists.

NEW metals appear to be all the vogue. The "Autocar" describe one called "atherium," which is almost as light as aluminium, and has a tensile strength of 16·66 tons to the square inch, against 8 tons in the case of aluminium, while its elastic limit is 35·712lbs. per square inch. It is said to make good, sound castings, and to work well in rolling and turning. Clean screw threads can be cut, and it can also be soldered, forged, and welded. It does not tarnish or corrode, and withstands the action of sea-water. Certainly if these claims are true, it is a very remarkable metal.

AVIATION.

THE event of the week, not only in aviation and motoring circles, but also to the populace generally, has been the aeroplane race for the Daily Mail prize of £10,000 which commenced at Brooklands on Saturday last. Of the thirty entries only twenty actually started—the defections being due to a variety of causes—while of this number only seventeen got clear of the racing track. Those who failed to get away were Wynmalen, having trouble with the engine of his Deperdussin monoplane, Lieutenant Porte on a similar machine, and F. Conway Jenkins on a Blackburn monoplane, both of these latter falling without seriously injuring themselves, but badly damaging their machines. Once the aviators were despatched, the interest was transferred to the aerodrome at Hendon, twenty miles away, this being the end of the day's journey. At the latter place an equally large crowd of spectators had assembled. So far as the great prize was concerned the race came to an end early on Wednesday afternoon with the arrival of an end early on Wednesday afternoon with the arrival of Beaumont at Brooklands at eight minutes past two, he being followed one hour and eleven minutes later by Vedrines. The struggle between the two experts had been particularly keen: leaving Bristol within two minutes of each other, Vedrines was the first to reach Brighton: he had, however, to make a longer compulsory stop than Beaumont, who restarted at 1-28 P.M., he being welcomed at Weybridge by Lord Northcliffe. The total amount which has been contributed for M. Vedrines now stands at over £2,000 including the solatium of £200 presented to him at the close of the race and the £183 2s. collected for him by the Financial Times

Homicide by aeroplanes is a new type of crime made possible by the extended use of the heavier-than-air machine. The technical definition of the crime is "homicide by imprudence," and two persons have already been convicted of it in France. One of them M. van den Heuvel was sentenced to pay a fine of £2 to the State and to pay the widower of a woman killed by his machine £200. The accident occurred at Issy-les-Moulineaux. The woman was walking along the public footpath and was knocked down by one of the wings of the airman's machine. M. Baillod, another airman, who ran his machine into a crowd of people, killing a young girl and injuring three other persons, was sentenced to pay £8 fine and spend one month in gaol. However, other law suits instigated against M. la Gatinerie and M. Blanck in the higher French Courts, following accidents in which their machines seriously injured persons who were watching the flights, have been dismissed on the grounds that aviation is still in its infancy, and that airmen have to contend with the forces unknown and uncontrollable. The Court held that it was in no way able to establish when an airman should be considered incompetent, and that lack of proper precautions could not be proved, because the Court was not sufficiently informed to say decisively what precautions should be taken. The decision in one of the cases ended with the statement that the public certainly should be protected against such accidents, but that in the absence of laws and regulations responsibility could not be fixed.

Some good flights were made from as well as at the Hendon aviation ground last week. Early in the morning Mr. Grahame-White flew over on one of his Farman biplanes to the Ranelagh Club at Putney, and motored back. In the afternoon he flew across again on another Farman, taking a passenger, and on alighting in the Ranelagh Club grounds ascended and made two demonstration flights. In the evening the two Farman machines were flown back by Mr. Grahame-White and Mr. C. Hubert, the former taking the military biplane and the latter the ordinary type. At the aerodrome, Mr. H. Barber, on his Valkyrie, gave demonstrations of the stability of his machine by flying with his hands above his head. Then, rising to a height of 3,000ft., he made off across country, and did not return until he had been beyond Harrow.

I am informed by the Secretary of the War Office that the well-known aviation expert, Mr. H. Barber, has generously offered to present to His Majesty's Government four Valkyrie military monoplanes, with a view to encouraging aviation in the naval and military services. Two of the machines will be allotted to the Royal Navy and two to the Army. Mr. Barber has also offered to the Government his services as a designer, constructor, and pilot, as far as his time permits. Mr. Barber has attached no conditions whatever to his gift, but as he points out that the design particularly lends itself to the fitting of combination floats and wheels, the Navy might certainly well reconsider the decision not to employ aeroplanes, as recently announced by Mr. McKenna in the House.

The first cross-country aviation race in Russia commenced at St. Petersburg on Sunday last, eight competitors, all Russians, starting for Moscow. The route was through Novgorod and Valdai. Only two aviators, both on Bleriot monoplanes, traversed half the distance without mishap. The remainder either abandoned the contest or came to grief, one pilot being fatally injured. The race was concluded on Monday, the winner being Vassilieff, on a Bleriot.

Boxing.

THE 14th (KING'S) HUSSARS ALL-INDIA BOXING TOURNAMENT.

The 14th (King's) Hussars, who will be leaving Bangalore in November next, held their annual Boxing Tournament in their Regimental Theatre from the 8th to 12th August, both days inclusive. The entries were unusually large this year, owing to competitions being provided for men from outside the Bangalore garrison, in which the stakes offered were worth winning, and the dates fixed for the Tournament having been made to fit in with the central assault-at-arms meeting, a full attendance was assured. The Theatre was filled night after night, the audience including many officers and civilians well known on the Bangalore Turf, who evinced great interest in the fighting. The arrangements made by the M. C. were all that could be desired, although the management must have had some difficulty in squeezing in the thousand odd enthusiastic people who went to see the show night after night. Lieutenant Thackwell of the 81st Pioneers, officiated as Referee, Lieutenant Fowler, 2nd (Q. O.) Cameron Highlanders' and Lieutenant Tarrant, "O" Battery, R.H.A., were the Judges Captain Pridgeon, of the 14th (King's) Hussars did the clocking, and Sergeant-Major Austin (14th Hussars) made an excellent Ring Master.

Saturday night (12th) saw the Tournament brought to a successful close by Lieutenant-Colonel R. C. Stephen, Commanding the 14th Hussars, presenting the prizes to the winners. The results of the judging and passing remarks on the fighting are given below.

Six Round Contests

Corpl. S. S. Hayward, 14th (King's) Hussars, vs. Pte. Charlotte, Oxford and Bucks Light Infantry.

First Round.—When half way through the fight Hayward floored his man, but Charlotte came up to time and the fight continuing, Hayward pinked his adversary and had a lead when time was called.

Second Round.—This was a hard fought round, Hayward getting in some good blows.

Third Round.—Hayward went for his man and had him on the boards several times, the pace being too hot for Charlotte.

Fourth Round.—Charlotte was nearly finished in this round, but the call of "time" saved him: he received a severe pommelling all through.

Fifth Round.—Hayward walked round his opponent and again knocked him about considerably, but Charlotte lasted out.

Pte. Strickland, 14th (King's) Hussars, vs. Pte. Retson, 2nd Black Watch.

A good fight to the finish there being hardly anything to choose between the two. Towards the end, Strickland put in some smart work and won on points.

Strickland has the reputation of being the Light Weight Champion of South India, while Retson won the Welter and Middle Weights at Poona, 1910-11.

Pte. O'Dowd, Sherwood Foresters, vs. Pte Lyons, 14th (King's) Hussars.

First Round.—The men merely tapped each other lightly, neither gaining any advantage.

Second Round.—Lyons put in some quick work but was sent to the floor just on the call of time.

Third Round.—O'Dowd now forced the fighting and got in several hard blows.

Fourth Round.—O'Dowd returned to the attack and a fairly even fight resulted.

Fifth Round.—O'Dowd again assumed the aggressive and punished his opponent severely.

Sixth Round.—This was a more even round, but the Judges disagreeing, the Referee decided the match a draw.

O'Dowd won the 9th Division Championship Belt in 1910 and has a great reputation in this station.

Lce.-Corpl. Sheppard, Leicesters, vs. Corpl. Byrne, 14th Hussars.

First Round.—A series of counters, Sheppard warned for striking with arm.

Second and third rounds were uninteresting, Sheppard obtaining the verdict.

Pte McVean, Black Watch, and Pte. Plant, 7th Dragoon Guards.

First Round.—Plant rushed his opponent repeatedly with the object of pushing him on to the rope. This put McVean out at first as he evidently seemed at a loss to know what to do. But he presently found a way out of his difficulty by meeting Plant's rushes with swinging blows with his left, and the end of the round saw McVean leading.

Second Round.—Plant continued the same tactics with similar results.

Third Round.—McVean put himself on the defence and occasionally got in a blow that met Plant in his rush.

Fourth Round.—Plant still continued his old game and the Referee had to caution him.

Fifth Round—An uninteresting encounter.

Sixth Round.—While Plant was still carrying on his pushing McVean, now and again got in a whack. If the match was anybody's, it should have gone to McVean, and no little surprise was exhibited when the Referee gave his decision in favour of Plant.

Open Feather Weights.

Pte. Lyons, 14th (King's) Hussars, k.o. Pte. Plant, 7th Dragoon Guards in the third round.

Plant is the winner of the Bantam Weight Championship of the 9th Division, 1910-11; he also knocked out Muir in the first round of a six-round contest at the Cameron Highlanders' Tournament in June last.

Blake being unable to fight, owing to indisposition, the match went to McCann.

Pte. Bell, H.L.I., beat Pte. Lowry, Connaught Rangers, on points, a decision which caused no little surprise.

This was a rather disappointing fight. Bell led throughout and the contest was decided in his favour.

Sly is Light Weight Champion of India and winner of the Locke Elliot Belt, 1910-11. Makins was runner-up in the light weights at Poona, 1910-11.

Pte. Donovan, Dublin Fusiliers, beat Pte. Coote, Connaught Rangers. Coote retired in the third round.

Final.

Pte. Sly, 1st Middlesex Regt, beat Corpl. S.S. Hayward, 14th Hussars.

First Round.—A good set to, Sly proving himself the better of the two. Hayward was floored in the last few seconds of the bout, but came up in 9 seconds; Sly resumed the offensive once more but "time" was called before he could do anything.

Second Round.—Hayward was put forced to defende again and avoided direct attacks.

Third Round.—Sly got Hayward down again early in this round and not coming up to time, Sly got the victory.

Pte. Grant, Seaforth Highlanders, beat Pte. Taylor, Cameron Highlanders, on points.

Pte. Blake, Norfolk Regt., beat Pte. Stevens, Cameron Highlanders, on points.

Pte. Grant, Seaforth Highlanders, beat Pte. Mann, King's Dragoon Guards, on points.

Final.

Pte. Grant, Seaforth Highlanders, beat Pte. Bolesworth, Leicesters. AN INSECT-EATING VIPER.

TILL a comparatively recent date it was assumed that all the viper tribe, with the exception of the member of one African genus, bring their young into the world alive ; but it is now known that the Himalayan mountain viper lays eggs, and that the same is the case with an allied Tropical American species. Moreover, it has hitherto been supposed that all vipers feed upon vertebrate animals, and more especially those belonging to the warm-blooded classes. This supposition has received a rude shock by the discovery that a viper inhabiting Bosnia and Herzegovina subsists almost entirely on insects, and more especially grasshoppers, of which it consumes enormous quantities.

This has been attested not only by the evidence of local observers, but likewise by the examination of the contents of the stomachs of a large number of individuals, which were found to consist almost entirely of the débris of grasshoppers. An unusually large specimen of the species—which usually attains a length of about eighteen inches—exhibited such a remarkable swelling at the middle of the body, that it was hastily assumed to have swallowed a mouse ; but it soon after disgorged its meal, which proved to be a ball composed of the wings, legs, and other remains of about a hundred grasshoppers.

Nevertheless, in spite of this insect diet, the Bosnian viper retains the poison-apparatus of its kindred in a fully developed state, thus apparently indicating that its insectivorous habits are a special adaptation which has not been in existence sufficiently long to have brought about a modification in the dental apparatus. The reptile seems, however, to be already one stage on the way to lose its venom-apparatus, for it is stated, on the evidence of trustworthy observations, to show but little tendency to bite, so that it can be handled without fear of danger, confining itself to hissing, and making a semblance of biting, but with the mouth closed, and never really making use of its weapons of offence except when seriously injured. Indeed, one gentleman who kept about a score of these vipers in captivity for some time asserts that he could put his hand into the cage and touch all the snakes without one of them showing the least tendency to bite. Whether the venom has lost any of its deleterious properties, or whether it is secreted in the same abundance as that of other vipers, does not appear to have been at present ascertained.

In this connection it is interesting to notice that a nearly allied viper inhabiting some parts of Lower Austria, and subsisting mainly on mice and lizards, is reported to have a similar harmless disposition ; boys having been seen to play with these snakes without being bitten, and no case of snake-bite being recorded in the districts where they abound.

It has been suggested that, were it not for its retention of the venom-apparatus, the Bosnian viper might be employed for the destruction of grasshoppers in countries where these insects inflict serious damage on crops ; and in view of the rare use made of these weapons, there seems no valid reason why these vipers should not be utilised for such a purpose. In South Africa and other countries afflicted with the visitations of locusts, the Bosnian viper might prove a godsend, if introduced in sufficiently large numbers.

The special reason, apart from the general interest attaching to its habits, that we have devoted an article to the Bosnian viper is in the hope that it may induce those of our readers who may have the opportunity to ascertain whether any of the smaller Indian vipers—especially the arboreal kinds—may not have similar insectivorous habits.

In conclusion, we may perhaps be permitted to direct attention to the ignorance of the habits of snakes displayed by some members of the more highly educated classes in England. As an instance of this, we may refer to a sermon delivered a few months ago in a village church distant only some five-and-twenty miles from London. During his discourse the preacher had occasion to refer to the scriptural account of serpents, when he remarked that a reptile which first of all crushes its victims in its slimy coils and then proceeds to give the coup de grace by biting them with its venom fangs, is one of the most terrible creatures that can well be imagined. And, of a truth, this would be so but the preacher unfortunately forgot that pythons and boa—constrictors are not endowed with the poisonous properties of vipers and rattle-snakes; and it is a mercy that they are not!

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The market on the St. Leger, although the scratching of Sunstar has made that race a considerably more open question, is not very brisk and according to Reuter's report the only three that are being backed are King William, Lycaon and Prince Palatine, the prices quoted in London on the 25th instant being as follows:—

11 to 8 agst. King William (Lord Derby), Lambton.
4 „ 1 „ Lycaon (Mr. J. B. Joel), Morton.
6 „ 1 „ Prince Palatine (Mr. T. Pilkington), Beardsley.

The telegrams to other Calcutta papers agree as to the favourite, but quote Lycaon at 5 to 1. The Handicap also prices a very large number of other horses, some of which can have no possible chance and a number of which are not in the least likely to start. Those at longer odds than 12 to 1 we need not at present mention, but those at shorter prices than this are given as follows in the Handicap wire:—

8 to 1 Tootles (Captain F. Forrester), Lewis.
12 „ 1 Seaforth (Mr. D. McCalmont), Persse.
12 „ 1 Pietri (Mr. L. de Rothschild), Watson.
12 „ 1 Fauchour (Baron de Rothschild) in France.
12 „ 1 Bannockburn (Mr. J. Hallick), Hallick.

The favourite has shown such markedly improved form this season, a far greater improvement than any other three-year-old, that it is difficult to go past him. King William's form in the Ascot Derby Stakes (1½ mile), in which race Phryxus was not able to make him gallop, capped as it was by his excellent performance in the Princess of Wales' Stakes (1½ mile) at Newmarket, when he finished a good third behind Swynford 10st. 11lb. and Lemberg 10st. 4lb., his own weight 8st. 13lb., must place him top of the three-year-old form, and all being well make the Leger out a far better thing for Lord Derby this year than it was last year with Swynford. They have trying tackle of such high quality in the stable that it is competent to them to be able to find out to an ounce how King William stands. His present price is, we think, the best possible indication that this information has been obtained and that it is in every way satisfactory. Mr. J. D. Allison of the Sportsman says that Prince Palatine's form against Mushroom, who beat his head off at Newmarket, can be safely disregarded, and that he places Mr. Pilkington's colt 10lb. to 12lb. in front of Bannockburn, who, however, beat him in the one mile Ascot Biennial Stakes in which the weights were Bannockburn 9st., Prince Palatine 9st. 12lb., the former winning a head, and that he is considerably better than Phyrxus. But does this advance things very much when all is said and done? Phryxus cannot be classed with King William on the Ascot form and Prince Palatine has not shown any form that entitles him to be considered as far in front of that horse as is King William! Mr. Allison, however, is not fond of King William and is trying hard to demonstrate that both Prince Palatine and Lycaon might easily beat them. He is worth quoting concerning Lycaon's chances, for he is writing on the spot, having seen Mr. Joel's second string recently perform:—

"Lycaon, who will now carry Mr. J. B. Joel's colours, is a very good one all the same, and it is to be remembered that but half a length divided Stedfast and Lycaon in the Two Thousand Guineas. At that period Stedfast was really the more forward of the two colts, for he had already had a race at Liverpool. Nothing, however, except seeing it proved in public, will ever satisfy me that King William is better than Stedfast, and from that point of view why should not Lycaon beat King William. Lycaon, by Cyllene out of La Vierge, who, apart from what he has achieved this season, had good credentials as a two-year-old and might have done even better but for some trouble having been experienced with his feet. Even so, he established himself as something more than useful at Goodwood when he gave 7lb. and a hollow beating to the Isinglass—Sceptre filly in the Ham Stakes, and it was only after a desperate finish that two days later Wrinkler—then at the top of his form—beat him a head, with St. Anton—all at even weights—third a length and a half away for the Prince of Wales' Post Sweepstakes. That running, however, was turned upside down, as far as he and Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's colt were concerned, in the Champion Breeders' Foal Stakes at Derby, and further deterioration was notable at Newmarket, when Wrinkler, though himself beaten by Hair Trigger II., defeated him far more easily than at Goodwood in the Boscawen Stakes. This was probably attributable to the trouble above referred to, though he wound up with a better show in the Dewhurst Plate, for which King William (8st. 9lb.) and Phryxus (8st. 9lb.) dead-heated a neck in front of Atmah (8st. 7lb.), while he, carrying 8st. 13lb., was fourth, close up, after a slow beginning. All through the winter Lycaon, and, indeed, all the Letcombe Regis horses, did extremely well, but I hardly think he was, though considered to have greatly improved, classed on the same platform with Sunstar."

The point, however, is in our opinion that to beat King William in the Leger Lycaon will have to be "on the same platform" as Sunstar, for we take it that the Derby winner would not have been any closer to Swynford and Lemberg at those weights in the Princess of Wales' Stakes. Lycaon recently won the Gratwicke Stakes, beating Lord Falmouth's Quebec, a victory that counts for very little. The market quotations are, as we say in our opinion, the best of straight tips, for with so much in the way of good trying tackle at his command it is almost impossible for Mr. George Lambton to make any mistake about the Leger candidate's chances.

We have been hearing such a lot of late in the columns of the daily press about the evils of the Turf and the wickedness of racing owners; of pulling and readying; of stewards and pressmen who do not do their duty and, as to the latter, who purposely put the public on to "dead 'uns;" and much more in the same hysterical strain, that it calls to mind something that went on in England in the year 1905. In the Badminton there were numerous articles from numerous people, who confined themselves, however, to a discussion upon "readying" and dishonest practices, and there were as many people who said that racing ramps were on the increase, as said that the turf atmosphere was a great deal purer than it used to be in the "bad old days." Probably neither of them were right and that things were just the same: neither better nor worse. These correspondents, however, discussed a perfectly legitimate grievance, and their demand that those who pulled horses should be chastised was quite justified. It is, however, a totally different matter when irresponsible correspondents demand that an owner should be debarred from entering his horse for as many races as he pleases and leaving them in that race up till the last moment, because, forsooth, it interferes with the ante-post betting operations of a collection of persons who are anxious to be first in the field and get the best of the market.

We so often hear the howl of the disappointed after a favourite has have beaten, demands for the hanging of the owner, trainer and jockey: abuse of the stewards for not doing their duty, and so forth, that we will quote some very sensible words which were written in the Badminton Magazine in 1905 in reply to one of Mr. A. E. T. Watson's correspondents, who said that, bar eleven trainers, all the rest were arrant rogues and robbers. This correspondent wrote:—"I am not prepared to either uphold the views of 'Nestor' or to dispute them; but since you ask for my opinion I can say, qualifying my remarks with what goes before, that I have seen what 'Nestor' would call honest owners running their horses out to the bitter end, under crushing weights, in race after race till not only the horse loses heart, and will race no more, but the owner also. A jockey who would persistently punish his horse in a hopeless stern chase, would be bringing brutality into the sport which should not be permitted. A horse is not a machine and cannot be depended upon always to show the same form any more than a man can at cricket, golf or any other game. Horses are often run before they are really fit because it is impossible to get them fit at home. These are generally lazy horses that want a great deal of work, and one or two races will often improve them 7lb. to 10lb. Then there is the contrast to this, a horse which requires no work at all, and shows his best form in his first race; besides trainers have to run their horses in all conditions and at all distances before they can tell what suits them best, unless they have at home some suitable trial tackle to tell them this. If all this be borne in mind and due consideration be given to the difference in the going, the difference between one course and another, the difference between the capabilities of one jockey and another, the place a horse is drawn in at the start, the luck of a good start or not being bumped in the race, and finally the pace at which the race is run, surely we must admit that there are many chances against a horse consistently showing the same form. * * * * * * * Is it not possible that the grumbling which 'Nestor' has overheard emanates from the disappointed punter? I am inclined to believe that much of the bitterness which is expressed is caused by the loss of money in betting and comes from men who do not own horses—men who as a rule follow the market—who regard an owner as a good sportsman if he never wins a race and call him a sharp if his horse happens to win when they have not backed it, or say the horse 'is not out' if they lose their money."

The italics in the foregoing quotation are our own and are peculiarly applicable to the situation which has been "manufactured" in Calcutta! Whenever we hear of anyone making remarks of the kind that are catalogued in the quotation set out above we feel tolerably sure that he has not backed the winner, that he is blaming everyone, the owner, the jockey, the trainer, the tipster, the stewards, anyone or everyone, except his own lack of judgment. We do not say nor do we attempt to make out that the turf, whether it is Newmarket, Calcutta or Timbuctoo, is a place where things are never done "on the cross," because it is very well known to everyone who has had anything whatever to do with racing that they are, but there is always this proclivity to raise the cry of "Wolf" whenever any favourite goes down, or whenever the unexpected turns up. As to the contention that the "punter" has a right to dictate to owners as to whether they shall or shall not leave their horses in races till the very last moment that the conditions permit, or whether they shall enter a horse for more than one race at a meeting or on any particular day of a meeting it is too ultra-farcical to merit serious consideration. The owner who backs a horse ante-post does so at his own risk; if he does not like the risk and has fallen in he has his own remedy—an S.P. wager!

The Calcutta First Monsoon Extra Meeting was run on Saturday last and we now race no more till Saturday week, when the Second Extra is to be run, and there is a Third Extra advertised for the following Saturday. After this we shall probably find that the Stewards will consider that there is not sufficient inducement offering to continue racing, though the matter rests entirely with the owners, who have but to demonstrate that they are prepared to fill races and even to suggest the composition of the card for the executive to readily meet their wishes. The eighth day of the Monsoon Meetings last year took place on the 24th September. This year it is proposed, so we gather, to ring down the curtain on the 16th of that month. Entries for the Second Extra, to be run on the 9th September, close at 6 P.M. on Monday the 4th proximo. Some of our up-country visitors Scott amongst others are leaving us, but two stringe, Beedham's and Bond's, which were said to be leaving, have now decided to remain on and see the season out.

The racing on Saturday last was of moderate quality, fields being small and the majority of the victories easily gained. The weather was the reverse of pleasant, as the afternoon was very close and steamy. The courses were in excellent trim, as, all through the week we had had fairly good rain and on Friday night there was a heavy shower, which did all that was needful. Scratchings on the day were numerous and, so far as one stable was concerned, their horses were purposely left in as a mark of contempt for all the unjustifiable attacks which have been made on them in the columns of a Calcutta daily paper. Several horses that were not running were sent to the course purposely, as it has been found that a good deal of information has of recent times been leaking out through syces and riding boys, and these measures were adopted, and quite justifiably adopted, to defeat these unauthorised intelligencers! In the Sobraon Handicap with which the card opened there were nine acceptors but only four ran. Shannon Lass was a good favourite all through though there was also a fair amount of money for Sidonia. Shannon Lass showed such good form against Moira last week that her selection was quite justified. It was a close thing between three of them, Sidonia winning by a head from Albatross, who was a neck in front of Shannon Lass. The time, 1min. 36secs., was very good for this course. Albatross pulled up very lame.

There were then three hurdle races straight off the reel, the first of them being the Amateur Hurdle Handicap, for which Pilot, a horse that has only run in gymkhanas and in paperchases till now, was made a warm favourite, quickly displacing Reinforcement, who was at first fancied. Pilot's friends evidently knew what they were at, as he won all the way. We do not think that even if disaster had not overtaken The Comet two fences from home the verdict would have been otherwise. The Comet collided with the wing of the fence and came down, the unfortunate horse being practically disembowelled. Mr. Tanner was badly shaken but got off lightly all things considered. The Comet will probably have to be destroyed, as although veterinary aid was quickly to hand he is very badly injured. The horse, however, is still alive and no symptoms of peritonites have so far appeared. Pacific bolted in this race, his owner, who rode him, losing his stirrups over the first obstacle. He finally was deposited, but he was not hurt.

When Craigendorrie's name was found missing from the frame the Serpentine Hurdle Handicap was booked a good thing for Idle, and so it proved, as he never was far away from the front and Levi, who ran second, was never dangerous.

The Amateur Pony Hurdle Handicap was an equally bloodless win, for Lola led throughout and very successfully cut down Lionel from whom she was getting 11lb., Marconi, a moderate third, 11st. 10lb. The pace was fairly solid for the class, 2mins. 40⅘secs. not being bad going for paperchase ponies over a long 1¼ miles.

The Ekbalpore Plate was a cake-walk for Northwood, who was chucked into the handicap. There was a slight demonstration in favour of Proprietor, but it came to nothing and there can never have been any real doubt as to what would win. Northwood had it all his own way and was never challenged.

There was a grievous upset over the last race, for which The Witch was made a very hot favourite on the strength of a private gallop. She was badly beaten and Farthing Bun came out and won with top-weight. This was Mr. Evers' fourth winning ride, a very good afternoon's performance.

We much regret to hear of the serious condition in which H. H. the Maharajah of Cooch Behar is. A report of H. H.'s death was published in certain Calcutta papers.

A marriage has been arranged and will take place in the ensuing cold weather between Mr. G. B. Deakin, a Steward of the Calcutta Turf Club, and Miss Wheeler. Our heartiest congratulations.

The last mail brought news of the death in Paris, from Bright's disease, of that king of plungers John W. Gates, millionaire, American financier, and turfite, and commonly known as "Bet-You-a Million Gates." As a gambler Gates was, in his own words, "the limit." He would gamble in stocks, on racehorses; on anything. He was probably the world's greatest plunger. Originally he was known throughout America as "Moonshine" Gates. Years afterwards, however, he shed the appellation of "Moonshine," to become known the world over as "Bet-You-a-Million" Gates.

He burst into prominence as a plunger on the American Turf some sixteen years ago, being then associated with "Boots" Darnell. So heavily did he bet that the leading American Turf authorities always regarded him with considerable disfavour, a fact, however, which did not disturb "John W's" equanimity in the slightest.

Upon one occasion he played a trick upon the American ring which the surviving members of that body will not forget for many a long day. Gates had a horse entered in a selling plate which "on the book" had about as much chance of winning as Kel d'Or had of relegating Sunstar into second place for the Derby. Gates, however, had reason to anticipate that "the book," so far as this particular animal was concerned, was likely to prove unreliable, and prepared to speculate accordingly. Now, the American ring having previously received several stinging raps over the knuckles, were beginning to fight rather shy of Master John, and he recognised the fact that if he attempted to "go down the line" himself he would be taking 10 to 8 (there is no such price as 5 to 4 in America) long before he reached the end.

He accordingly arranged to have agents stationed near all the principal bookmakers right down the line, with instructions to back the horse at a given signal—the raising of Gates' hat. During the early stages of the wagering Gates was quiescent, but at length Joe Ullmann tempted him into betting £10 on the colt, which Gates remarked was "all the lobster was worth with the saddle thrown in."

Of course, the whisper got about that "Bet-You-a Million's" colt was "no good to-day," and before long the blackboards indicated that practically any price was obtainable about the alleged "lobster," and at that moment—Gates raised his hat. Instantly the pencillers were overwhelmed by orders for the "lobster." Wads of notes were thrust into the hands of half-unwilling and wholly flustered bookmakers, and in a very few minutes Gates' colt had been backed to win more money than perhaps any selling plater before or since his day. The horse won easily.

Gates, of course, was one of the most conspicuous of the American invaders who swooped down upon England's shores in the days when Sloan and the Reiff boys were in the heyday of their fame. The magnitude of his operations came as something of an eye-opener even to the English ring, and there can be little doubt that the Yankee plunger gave the pencillers a rare shaking upon more than one occasion. His tremendous plunges on Royal Flush were his most conspicuous exploits in England, and he is credited with having won quite £100,000 when the old horse completed the double of the Royal Hunt Cup and Stewards' Cup in 1900.

One thing can be said for the late gambler, and that is that he paid twenty shillings in the pound when he did have a bad time, and did not bolt from the country, leaving his debts of honour unsettled, as did several of the American gamblers. It was the dirty trick served him by the Americans which more than anything else brought about the death of the late R. H. Fry. During their run of luck the Yankees hit Fry desperately hard week after week, and undoubtedly drained the bookmaker's great resources to a terrible extent. Then when they came to experience the inevitable bad time they simply departed for America, taking their loot with them and leaving nothing but unpaid debts of honour behind them. This Gates scorned to do, and among the many names which were against unpaid accounts in Fry's book his was not one.

The Seventh Extra and, incidentally, the last one before the Big Meeting, came off on Saturday and the card was full of incident as well as interest. To begin with the previous day, almost every owner in the Season Maiden Plate had protested against a field of thirty-one and threatened to scratch unless the Stewards divided it. Probably in view of the recent agitation anent too much racing, no concession was made, and as a result only two started, Baloz and Good Shot. The former was made a warm favourite, led all the way, and won comfortably.

As may be expected, the chief incidents occurred in the Steeplechase, and I regret to report that the outcome of one of them was a broken leg to Captain Meynell. It was a very unlucky fall, not occurring over a jump, but on rising out of a dip in the course, War Cloud stumbling and falling, leaving his rider unconscious to be wheeled away in the ambulance. Captain Fielden and Mr. Kenworthy came down, both at the same jump, when in front, but these were more fortunate. The latter was momentarily stunned and subsequently dazed, but was later seen not much the worse for his spill.

To turn to the card, the event following the match mentioned was the Military Plate, in which Bachelor's Knot, on the case of his last win, was made an odds-on favourite from Lady Lomond and Cowslip. For a start, Better Luck was badly left and came back lame, Deputy and Rolling Stone making the running. At the turn Lady Lomond joined them and soon after assumed command, but again failed to stay. Cowslip came up fairly promisingly with Rolling Stone, but nothing had a "look in" with the favourite, whom Captain Meynell had very well in hand.

There was a very large and classy entry for the Midsummer Plate, which had to be divided, and in the first portion there was a very strong run on Britannia. Sixes bar one was quoted on the boards, the next best being Pincher, Metal Boy, Forfeit and Ballymaclune. A dozen started and it was a field of good-looking ones, but want of work was evident in many cases. Two of these were Lady Portland and Grevillea, who were well up at the start, the former leading from Sequent. At the half mile Pincher drew up second with Forfeit handy, but Britannia was noticed about sixth and not going well. At the turn Pincher drew out into the lead and held Forfeit and Metal Boy safe, but Ballymaclune put in an appearance later on the outside. The Irish hurdler finished very strongly under the whip, and, though it seemed very improbable he could do it, he just got up and won by a head on the post. This is another win for Ramshaw, and the stable got on at a long price.

A description of the Steeplechase as it was run may prove of interest. In the ring Sholto was made an odds-on chance though there was very good money for Mauser and some for War Cloud, the only other two being barely considered. One of these, Damson, was never in the hunt, falling back from the start and being on his own behind all the way. Farewell originally led, but soon gave way to the other three, Sholto and Mauser going off in front. At the six furlong dip War Cloud came down. Passing the stand, Farewell was over a dozen lengths behind the others. As they turned on the left Sholto went a bit wide and Mauser was right up to him, but the jump at the nine furlongs was the end of both. Sholto was slightly in front, but not rising sufficiently found the double fence too stiff to get through and came down, to be shortly joined by Mauser. This stripped the race of any interest, leaving Farewell a long way in front of the only other, Damson, and he increased his lead to half a mile when passing the post.

A good field of eleven went out for the mile and a quarter Mofussil Plate, Hilarity warming to an even money favourite, though at one time it looked as though San Remo was to occupy that position and a strong commission came for Obo. Hilarity was unfortunate enough to get away badly, the pace being made by Lancasterite, followed by Bright Metal, Gallileo and Obo. This order remained till at the last turn the two in front gave way to the other two, Obo cutting through on the rails. These indulged in a grand race from the distance and here Hilarity put in an appearance on the outside. She gradually made up her ground, and the excitement was intense. A few strides from the post Gallileo was slightly in front, but in the last dash Hilarity just got up and dead-heated, Obo a mere head behind them and Bright Metal keeping on into fourth place. It was the finish of the season and opinions were very much divided before the numbers went up. I regret to say Eva broke down in her off-fore and had to be dismounted near the stand.

Something of an upset occurred in the Arab race over the same distance, when Famous in a field of thirteen was backed to odds-on, Cockeye at fives, then Artist and Well Done. Terror and Dojan made the running, then Well Done shot to the front, but he also stopped on entering the straight. Sir Hugo and Artist were prominent, but here Cockeye shot through and, with Famous in trouble, had everything well beaten. Merrily came up well and just beat Sir Hugo out of a place behind Artist.

The second division of the Midsummer Plate included our very best stayers, and though Tangaroa was fancied he was not as well backed as Paul Pry and Soultline in that order. Beau Vive was first on his legs, but then Paul Pry led slightly in front of Master Theo and Lord Merv. As she passed the half mile, Tangaroa drew up second on the outside and they rounded the bend with Soultline handy. The front two were at it head and head, and a tremendous finish was promised, but at the lawn Soultline came alongside and going so easy that the result was obvious. He won in grand style, and even those who did not back him had to admire such a performance under a steadier of 9st. 12lb.

The last race rested between three, Creditor, Kimberley and Zoolphokar, backed in that order. Zoolphokar led out but was passed by Creditor, only to repass him at the turn. There Kimberley crept through along the rails, but after a good fight Zoolphokar was able to stay on and win.

These are the days when howlers, like the sea serpent of old, begin to make their appearance, The Schoolmaster adds the following collection to the list:—

The chief industries of Belgium are raising Ostend rabbits and Brussels sprouts.

Cherubims were angles on the Ark.

The van of the army is the carriage they put the wounded men into.

Typhoons are well-watered plains in the north of China.

Lollards were lazy people who always wanted to rest up against something.

Canton contains so many streets, that you may wander about in them for days and never see daylight again.

Ship-money was the Unwritten Law.

Tonnage and poundage was a tax on all liquors made by Parliament.

The following are the results of important cricket matches played in England during the past week:—

Lancashire defeated Essex, at Blackford, by an innings and 64 runs.

Gloucester beat Northants, at Cheltenham, by 79 runs.

Surrey beat Kent, at the Oval by 9 runs.

Hampshire beat Yorkshire by six wickets at Portsmouth.

Middlesex drew with Notts, at Nottingham, but led on the first innings.

Surrey beat Sussex, at Brighton, by eight wickets.

Worcester beat Somerset, at Worcester, by 187 runs.

Middlesex beat Hants, at Lord's, by an innings and 107.

Lancashire drew with Leicestershire, at Manchester, but led on the first innings.

Kent beat Yorkshire, at Canterbury, by ten wickets.

Notts beat Derbyshire at Blackwell by six wickets.

Warwickshire defeated Northamptonshire by an innings and 33 runs at Northampton. Warwickshire thus win County Championship.

RAIN delayed the start in the match between the Indians and Sussex at Brighton on the 21st instant. The County batted first and were all out for 158, Bulsara taking 5 wickets for 30. The visitors replied with 138, Mulla hitting up 54 in twenty minutes. Sussex scored 149 in their second innings and left their opponents with 170 to make to win. They scored 23 for one wicket when play was stopped owing to bad light: next day, however, they took the score to 159 and were thus beaten by 10 runs. The last match of the tour was against Gloucesters at Bristol but rain again interfered with the start and play did not begin till the afternoon of Friday last when Gloucestershire went in and made 251 for 9 wickets. They only added one more run to this total on Saturday. The Indians then went in and scored 364, Meheromjee batted for two hours and compiled 102 without a chance; Shivram made 88 and Salamuddin 50. Gloucester put up 379 in their second innings and declared—Roberts 150 not out, and Jessop 59 being the chief scorers. The Indians made 74 for eight wickets and thus succeeded in drawing the match.

This brought the tour to a close and the result—played 23 matches, won 6, lost 15, and drawn 2 cannot be looked upon as satisfactory. The Indian team was not a very powerful combination and the programme of their tour was rather an ambitious one. Further they were unfortunate in meeting the better County teams at the beginning and their early defeats must have been very dispiriting. Appended are the results of the tour:—

THE Australian mail brings the following details of the fight between Bill Lang and "Boshter" Bill at Brisbane on the 9th instant:—

The encounter drew an enormous attendance to the Stadium. About 30,000 people paid for admission. Lang was the favourite at 4 to 1 on, and offers to lay Squires at 3 to 1 found few takers. The referee was George Imner. Squires received an ovation. It was announced that the battle was for the championship of the British Empire.

In the first round Squires drove a straight left to Lang's left eye, and caused a red mark. In a clinch Lang broke the skin on Squires' forehead. Lang fought heavily for the body.

In the second round Squires commenced to force matters, and Lang appearing angry at the applause for his opponent, drove the Tamworth farmer to the ropes, and burst one of his ears with a savage right punch. Squires had to clinch to save himself.

In round three Lang scored with a right to the jaw. Again Squires clinched, and Lang, stepping back, sent a solid left to the mouth. Both men were covered with blood from Squires' ear. The latter's eye was also swollen.

Round four saw Lang open cool and aggressive. The bout was a warm one, with Lang's extra weight was telling.

In the fifth round Squires stepped in and drove a left and a right to Lang's face amid a roar of applause. Lang then dropped for seven seconds. Up again, he measured his opponent with a right to the jaw, which brought Squires down on his face. As the referee began to count the towel was thrown in from Squires' corner, and Lang was declared the winner.

THE weekly mounted sports held by the Bombay Gymkhana on the 23rd instant were put through successfully in spite of the wretched weather. The jumping event which opened the programme attracted a small entry, Mr. E. G. Pearson winning among the men and Mrs. Priestley among the ladies. Six sections competed in the Lloyd Lindsay competition but only one fulfilled all the conditions within the time limit: this was composed of Messrs. R. G. Kennedy, A. Sturrock, W. Moulton and A. D. Shanks. Tilting at the Ring and Tent Pegging was substituted in place of the Balloon race for ladies and some good performances were witnessed. Mrs. McCausland and Mr. T. Moore were first, Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds second and Mrs. Priestley and Mr. Meikle third. Tent pegging in half sections came next and this was won by Messrs. T. Moore and R. A. Spence, with Messrs. Knight Bruce and L. Graham second. The Whistling Coon Stakes produced the usual melodious efforts and was won by Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Pearson, with Mrs. McCausland and Mr. L. Graham second. Seven ran in the Open Scurry and in a good finish Biscuit beat Hermes by half a length. The latter was, however, disqualified for starting too soon and the following was the official order:—

Mr. G. C Thomson's Biscuit (20 yrs.) ...	Owner 1
Mr. H. Tremearne's Harkaway (10 yrs.) ...	Owner 2
Mr. E. G. Pearson's Buccaneer (ser.) ...	Owner 3

THE third annual Sind Lawn Tennis Championship Tournament was held at Karachi from the 14th to the 19th August and the Honorary Secretary, Mr. L. O. Ogbourne, and his committee are to be congratulated on the success which attended their efforts. Everything went through without a hitch, the entries were larger than those of former years and good play was witnessed throughout. The Singles championship was won by Captain Rendall, the Punjab champion, who disposed of last year's winner, Captain Turner and Messrs. Penny, Crawford and Hudson, without losing a set. Partnered by Mr. Crawford, Captain Rendall also won the Doubles championship, this couple defeating Messrs. Hudson and Allen in the final after a good game. Mrs. Marshall and Mr. Chetham won the Mixed Doubles. They met and defeated the strongest couples in their half of the draw and eventually faced Mrs. Hulsat and Captain Turner in the final. Mrs. Marshall and her partner won the first set 8—6, lost the second 0—6, and won the third 6—1. An exhibition match between Mrs. Marshall and Miss Warburton wound up the tournament. Miss Warburton owed 30. It was a great struggle: Mrs. Marshall won the first set at 7—5 and with the score at 6 all in the second the light failed and the match was called a draw. The presentation of the prizes by Mrs. Younghusband brought a most successful tournament to a close.

SIX teams entered for the Gulmarg Polo Tournament this year and play commenced on the 14th August when the Gymkhana "A" team beat the Gymkhana "B" team by 5 goals to 2: and the Frontier Force Infantry team beat the Rawalpindi team by 4 goals to nil. On the 16th instant the Frontier Force Cavalry team met the Gymkhana "C" team and beat them easily by 6 goals to nil. The Frontier Force Cavalry having drawn a bye in the semi-finals, the Gymkhana "A" team then played the Frontier Force Infantry and were beaten by 3 goals to 1. The final was decided on the 18th when after a tough match the Frontier Force Infantry beat the Frontier Force Cavalry by 2 goals to nil. Teams were:—Frontier Force Infantry—1, Mr. N. H. Prendergast, The Guides; 2, Captain Ames, 52nd Sikhs, F. F.; 3, Captain Campbell, The Guides; and Major Buist, The Guides, back. Frontier Force Cavalry—1, Mr. H. M. Hankin, The Guides; 2, Captain McConaghy, 25th Cavalry, F. F.; 3, Mr. D. K. McLeod, The Guides; and Major F. Davies, The Guides, back.

THE entries for the Durand Football Tournament closed on the 26th instant; the following twenty-one teams will take part:—2nd Battalion Black Watch, the Royal Scots, 1st Lancashire Fusiliers, the West Riding Regiment, the 3rd and 4th Battalions, 60th Rifles, K. O. Scottish Borderers, 2nd Gordon Highlanders, the Highland Light Infantry, the King's Own (Lancaster Regiment), Artillery Brigade, Rurki, East Yorkshire Regiment, 18th Royal Irish Regiment, 2nd Battalion Royal Fusiliers, MADRAS.

13th Hussars, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, South Lancashire Regiment, 5th Mountain Battery, 2nd King's Liverpool Regiment, North-West Railway Volunteers, Simla Volunteers. The tournament opens on the 18th proximo.

The Ootacamund Hunt Races originally fixed for the 20th and 23rd September are now to be held on the 16th and 20th idem.

Owing to the paucity of entries the Committee of the Madras Boat Club have reluctantly decided to abandon the Hot Weather Regatta.

The members of a Cambridge University swimming class were recently the victims of a novel experience, which, while proving the characteristic gallantry of the undergraduate and the efficiency of the class in the art of life-saving, also provided a humorous sequel. The class were industriously practising the Sylvester methods of restoring an apparently drowned man at the bathing sheds on the River Granta's bank.

Their work appeared greatly to interest a daintily dressed lady and a companion in a Canadian canoe, as they repeatedly passed up and down the river. Suddenly the canoe upset and the occupants were struggling in the river. The class to a man plunged in to the rescue of the lady, but left her male companion to get out as best he could. Mr. Sanden, the instructor, and a powerful Egyptian student, the latter a poor swimmer, were the first to reach the lady, in whose embrace they became so entangled that their attempt to practise the "release thrust" failed.

Down all three went and remained under water so long that a tragedy seemed inevitable. At length, however, all three reappeared and were speedily helped to the bank. With much trouble the lady was lifted out. Her rescuers were all amazed at her great weight, the absence of flowing tresses, and her evident muscular development. Then, as they were preparing a practical application of their restoration drill the "lady" sat up and revealed herself—Mr. A. G. Taylor, a swimming and boxing half-Blue and one of their examiners. He had merely devised a practical and impromptu test.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 11th August 1911.

"What Manchester thinks to-day, the world will think to-morrow," we are occasionally reminded by arrogant Midlanders. There may or may not be a grain of truth in this, but it is certainly and mournfully true that what Manchester did but a few weeks ago, London is doing to-day. We have caught the strike fever, and apparently we have caught it badly. Nasty horrid men called dockers, lumbers, lightermen, stevedores, carmen and a horde of "casuals" to the number of 125,000 are out on strike and the port of London is blockaded. Meat markets and fish markets are either closed or in a condition of stagnation and, naturally, prices have gone up by one hundred per cent.

The gutter press is revelling in the strike and the opportunity has been seized to start a famine scare. We are solemnly told that a food famine is imminent and that every article of food will be either unobtainable or will be retailed at its weight in gold. If I believed these hysterical scribes, I should be writing this letter under the settled conviction that to-morrow's dinner is held up at the docks. The docker will not unload it, the wholesale dealer's porter will not handle it, the carman will not bring it to my shop: therefore I must expect to hear that my shopkeeper in the very near future will regret that he cannot execute my esteemed order. The gutter press aforesaid, strives to assure the masses that when the strike strikes harder, Londoners of every class will wince to the dint. But I think we shall pull through and continue to talk politics and holidays and weather much as usual and as though no cogwheel were loose in the complicated machinery of our National Economy, as though we shall never fail to pull out a dinner in exchange for our coin in the slot.

If you ask for a reason for this indifference, I refer you to the thermometer. Ninety-six in the shade, on the honour of Negretti and Zambra! When the mercury is so high, we Londoners may reasonably be excused for caring but little for the day after to-morrow's dinner. It is to us as to-day's dinner is to the sea-sick passenger. The imagination will not rouse the appetite for a saddle of mutton that may or may not be served two days hence. Yes, on Wednesday the temperature in London at 2 P.M. was 96·7 in the shade, our best effort to emulate Calcutta for something like seventy years. I shall not be sorry to see some rain, real rain, one of these days; the numerous account of fatalities are not cheerful reading, for over and above the deaths directly due to the heat are the appalling number of drowning cases. The Britisher will always venture on the water to row or paddle when the mercury rises higher than usual and seventy-five per cent. of him can't swim you know.

As if it were not hot enough in the West End on Wednesday night, the Carlton Hotel must catch fire, spreading Sirocco blasts around, terrifying hundreds of guests, destroying much pretty furniture and fittings and roasting one poor soul in a bath room. The fire began about seven o'clock in the evening and as a result of the excitement and crush, the performance at His Majesty's Theatre could not be given. Happily the fire was checked in time to prevent any serious danger of this great structure being involved.

I don't often read the men's fashion columns, but I happened to glance at one the other day which imparted the interesting information that "Quietly and without any pomp or ceremony we are celebrating the centenary of the trouser." There seems to be a tinge of regret or reproach in that reflection that we are celebrating it quietly. There may be enthusiasts among us who think it ought to be celebrated with glees and madrigals, with trumpet fanfares, and with roll of drums, winding up with a grand display of fireworks.

But quietly is good enough for me. I am not desirous of pomp or pageantry to celebrate our first assumption of the nether garment. I do not consider trousers an adjunct to England's glory or a gem in Britannia's crown. For they owe their origin to drink. The plain, brutal fact is that they were first adopted by George IV., to hide his gouty legs swollen by brandy punch and port wine.

On the authority of Keir Hardie, "some day we shall return to the Roman toga." I cherish noble memories of the late Wilson Barrett in the Roman toga, and I feel that, apparelled in this glowing garment, most of us would look far more impressive than in sordid trousers.

Surveying the amusements of the young, dear reader, you may have noticed that very few, if any, of the little girls nowadays carry dolls. The wooden or waxen effigy of an infant that was once universally hugged by the small of the feminine sex has become a back number. This significant development will strike consternation into the bosoms of those persons who are agitated about the falling birth-rate.

And I doubt whether even a free distribution of dolls throughout the kingdom would revive the moribund maternal instinct. A little girl of twelve has just competed with men in a swimming race in Paris for the World's Championship. That's the stuff the children of to-day are made of. They have neither time nor inclination to humbug about with such silly tomfoolery as dolls. They are out swimming or riding bikes or learning jujitsu. And the melancholy result, for which we have gradually had to prepare ourselves, is that boys are in demand as domestic servants.

At a conference in Belfast Dr. Eric Pritchard had something to say about the birth-rate. He declared that "the national industry of infant production and infant rearing is muddled." That is a picturesque phrase—"national industry of infant production." There is a fine wholesale, retail, and for export sound about it suggestive of huge factories and the latest machinery.

But let Dr. Pritchard clear his mind of illusion. Our national industry is not infant production. It is cotton. And there is something pathetic in the simple earnestness with which that conference called for "better and larger babies." Better and larger babies, forsooth (!) Beggars can't be choosers and before long the birth-rate enthusiasts will have to consider themselves lucky if there are any babies born at all.

Brooding, as one does, almost incessantly on the follies of our fellow-men, one has frequently been struck with the unnecessary trouble and inconvenience caused by the theatre queue; and one is glad to see that a move has now been made—only in Australia, it is true—to abolish it. The municipal authorities of Sydney have decided that the queue system cannot be allowed to continue. It is, we read, "a nuisance to pedestrians and a cause of serious loss and inconvenience to shop-keepers." It is also stated to be "absurd and anomalous." Why the practice of making the public cluster outside closed doors ever started we cannot imagine. Presumably it was supposed, that, if admitted without anything to distract their attention, they would fill in the time by damaging the theatre. There need be no fear of this, for there is no more orderly member of society than your pittite and galleryite. He is there to see the show, and he is going to run no risk of being ejected before it begins. One uniformed official could control an entire pit. We fail to see why a theatre queue should be regarded by the police as different from any other crowd obstructing the pavement. It is just as inconvenient to pedestrians. It would be another matter if the pit and the gallery doors always opened on to quiet side streets, but as quite a number open on to the Strand and other main thoroughfares, rendering these almost impassable of an evening, it seems time that London followed Sydney's excellent lead, and did away with the queue.

This reflection on the taking of a leaf out of the book of more progressive countries again arises when we think of progressive India. With what glee I pointed out the other day to a Londoner (one of the sort who has never been off his own cabbage leaf, you know) how the Indian Census enumerators had accounted for a little total of something like three hundred and fifteen millions in fourteen days, while it took seven weeks for their British confrères to account for their little lot—and then they got it wrong somehow! I always maintain that the Indian postal and telegraph arrangements—with the "urgent" and "deferred" systems for messages, the offices practically always open for business, the really hourly delivery of letters in such places as Calcutta, the V.-P. P. system, the half-anna postage, etc., etc.,—are leagues ahead of the old-fashioned methods we seem so absurdly proud of here. And here we are again. London has just announced an aeroplane post and is obviously quite elated over its, forgetting the fact that she is merely following the example of India. Am I not right in saying that the aerial mail experiment which was tried there some months ago was quite successful. The other recent instance of emulation by St. Martin's-le-Grand is the selling of stationery at face value. The Indian Post Office long ago reduced the price of postcards to the value of the stamp. There was very good reason for this, seeing that hundreds of thousands of postcards are sold in India singly.

I regret to announce the death of General Sir Robert Cunliffe Low, G.C.B., which took place last night. Sir Robert Low was born in 1838, the son of the late Sir John Low, and at the time of his death was Keeper of the Crown Jewels, to which post he was appointed in 1909. In 1854 he entered the Bengal Cavalry, and in the Indian Army he served through the Mutiny, being present at the sieges both of Delhi and Lucknow. He took part in the Afghan War and was Chief Director of Transport in the march from Kabul to Kandahar. In the Burmese Expedition of 1885-88 he commanded a brigade, and in 1895 he commanded the relief force of the Chitral Expedition. From 1898 to 1903 he was in command of the forces in the Bombay district.

The distinguished officer was noted for his splendid gift of organisation, to which the success of Lord Roberts's famous march was in no small measure due. Lord Roberts himself declared that the rapid march to Kandahar "could not possibly have been successfully carried out had my transport not been in such admirable condition."

With the Chitral Expedition, of course, Sir Robert Low's name was upon everybody's lips. But he arrived in England entirely unnoticed, and several weeks elapsed before his presence at home was recorded in the newspapers.

His first public appearance after his return from the expedition which he conducted with such conspicuous ability was at the annual dinner of the Alpine Club, at which function he told some excellent stories of the simple mountaineers through whose country his force had marched.

These men were very curious about the telegraph wires, and a local headman was sent to Sir Robert Low to inquire what the things meant. They were for sending messages, he said. The headman retired, but two days later returned: "the English," he said, "were deceivers He had had most careful watch kept to test the truth of the statement about the messages, and nothing had come along the wires at all!"

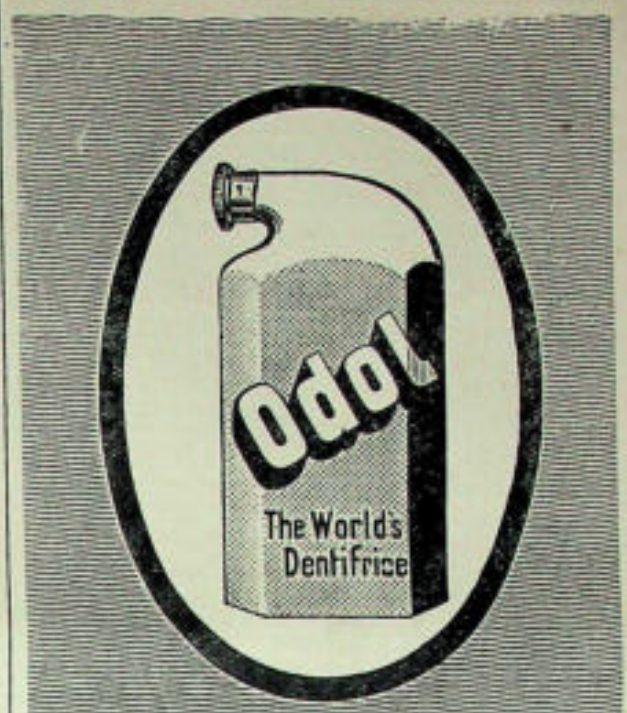
Fishing.

THE IDIOSYNCRASIES OF TROUT.

It is one of the merits of those pastimes which we designate as sport, in distinction to those which we call games, that into most of the former the idea of competition does not enter, except incidentally, observes Mr. Horace Hutchinson in a London contemporary. We are obliged to accept racing, which is always in the category of sport, as an exception, and there are also "athletic sports," specially so called, in which the competition idea is of their essence. But in the majority of the greater sports, such as shooting, hunting, and fishing, any notion of emulation is only quite secondary. Men may, and do, "shoot jealous," "ride jealous," even "fish jealous," but the very fact that we stigmatise them with the special mark of jealousy indicates that it is not a sentiment which commonly comes into these sports, and conveys the very just criticism that it ought not to come into them. He who really deserves the name of sportsman engages in these pursuits for the amusement that they give him, not for the sake of proving himself better than his neighbour. Nevertheless, by way of comparison, there is no crime in estimating the relative abilities of men at any one of these, and it occurs to me that it would be an interesting form of competition, which might teach us much, if we could set down on a good trout stream two anglers of whom the one was a past master at the art but knew nothing of the stream, while the other was only a moderate craftsman but had an intimate knowledge of the water. It would be curious to look into the baskets of the two men at the end of the day and see which had made the bigger catch.

The comparison would not be quite fairly instituted if the one who had the master's skill was well acquainted with neighbouring rivers and rivers very like in character that to which he was being introduced for the first time. In that case the conditions would not be sufficiently strange to him to make the handicap an equal one, for it is hardly to be doubted that in neighbouring streams flowing through similar country the trout develop very similar habits, so that the knowledge of the river that he did know would help a man very much in conjecturing the habits of the trout in the other, which he did not know. That would not make the competition fair. On the other hand, it is not necessary to take the case of a man who has had no acquaintance with any other streams than those which come from the chalk, and must perforce be fished with the fly when it is dry, and to set him down to compete in a fast-flowing Scotch or Welsh river with one who knew it intimately. That, on the contrary, would be giving too much advantage into the hands of the man of local knowledge. The comparison that it would be interesting to make would be between an angler of fine skill who possessed a good working acquaintance with wet-fly streams in general, and one who was much less finished in the art but had learnt, by long experience, the ways and the wiles and the lurking places of the trout of his own familiar river.

It is more than likely that there are a great many good all-round fishermen who do not realise how different the habits of trout are in different, though seemingly very similar, streams. They differ in a variety of ways, in the lures they take, in the manner in which they rise to the fly, and, above all, in their favourite places for lying in wait for it to come to them. There is, as we all know, a difference between the fish of the same river at different times of the year and at different states and temperatures of the water, but besides this the trout of some rivers show a penchant for certain positions, demanding of the angler a certain mode of showing them the fly, and it is the knowledge of these idiosyncrasies which gives the man who lives on the river's bank such an advantage over the stranger. Anglers, it is not to be doubted, have their idiosyncrasies likewise, and these are probably determined largely by the success which Fortune has sent them in this sport which, above all others, seems to be in the hands of that most capricious goddess. It may be that the one man has acquired a mode of throwing the fly which causes it to float down in the most natural manner to those fish which have stationed themselves in that part of the water which is well known as "the lang of the stream." For my own part, I have to confess that it is a portion of the river which, in all parts of Great Britain, I have fished diligently with conspicuously little result. Doubtless it is my own lack of skill which is to blame, for there are those—Scottish anglers, I think, especially—who speak of finding it very productive. Personally I have had most of my modest share of success in little backwaters and still places just out of the main current, where, as it seems to me, the big fish have generally taken up their quarters. For this reason, when I come to a strange stream I am always on the look-out for nooks of this kind, and pay them a particular attention, but very likely I should do a great deal better if I cast the line of invitation—so frequently declined, without thanks—elsewhere, and it is extremely probable that one who knew the stream



Look after your teeth! If you don't they will fall into decay and you will lose them, and probably your health into the bargain. There is no excuse for neglect when for a small outlay you can be sure of keeping them in good condition and perfect beauty.

Odol is unique as a mouth-cleansing preparation, for it exerts its antiseptic and refreshing influence not only whilst using it, but for hours afterwards.

Being liquid it penetrates all cavities and interstices in and between the teeth, and impregnates the gums and the whole lining membrane of the mouth, providing a safeguard and preservative for the teeth such as no other dentifrice can possibly do.

It is this lasting effect that gives to daily users of Odol the absolute assurance that their mouths are permanently protected against the processes of decomposition, which, if not guarded against, inevitably destroy the teeth.

would know too that these are not where the good fish are to be found. I confess to this idiosyncrasy in order to show how easy it is to form predilections of the kind and how probable that other anglers are similarly guided, or misguided. We all know that a favourite lie for fish is under the bank against which the wind is blowing, whither it carries the flies. There are times and seasons when fish are to be found in that situation in every river, but besides that there are certain rivers in which it is there, and, it is hardly too much to add, there only, that you will find all the fish. Those who know these rivers well adopt one way of fishing to serve them almost all through the year and in almost all conditions of the water, throwing against the bank and letting the fly fall off the bank into the water. It is in this way, as they maintain—and the success of their practice justifies the statement—that the food commonly comes to the fish on these rivers. Of course the dodge is no new one; it is perfectly well known as a mode of letting the fly fall lightly and naturally, but it is not on many streams that is to be looked on as the recognised and most approved way of offering the fish the fly. It will be understood that I am writing now of the trout of the wet-fly streams—not but what in these nooks and back-waters of which I speak it is not well now and again to float a dry fly over the fish—not of those where no self-respecting fisherman ever offers a trout a fly otherwise than floating on the surface, and where no self-respecting fish is ever supposed to take one below the surface. (I may confess, with shame, and in parenthesis, a scepticism whether a few of these chalk-stream trout are not caught now and then below the surface, and whether a few more might not occasionally be taken if the fly were more often so offered to them. This, however, is rank heresy.) What I set out to say, before this confession of heterodoxy, was that it does not appear to me that there is the same difference between fish in different streams that come from the chalk as there is in those which flow from less limpid sources. I may be quite mistaken, and it may be a mistake due to my inadequate acquaintance with these priceless rivers, but it is the view to which a certain small experience has led me. Is there not, after all, a greater family likeness—properly to be called so, since all owe their origin to a common parentage in the chalk—or at least a less accentuated difference between these rivers than between the many various and delightful streams which flow through merry England and Scotland and Wales out of all kinds of soil? I think so; and this perhaps may be the reason why the chalk stream fish have formed their life habits more on one common and constant plan. As a rule the food in these streams is so plentiful, the hatch of fly so abundant, the way in which it is conveyed along the placid surfaces so wide and equable that the fish, when they go out to feed, have only to station themselves anywhere in the broad flow of the river. They do not need to make a nice choice of their restaurants; they find their meals brought to their mouths on the great highway of the river. Still it is true that the big fish keep the choice stations. I perceive that I am filling the highway too full of rising fish. But yet there is truth in the comparison and in the contrast. At least, I believe that there is.

A FRESH breeze from the south tempered the fervid heat of bright sunshine that brought visitors to Lewes from all parts. The attendance was a capital one, the members' enclosure being well patronised and the rings filled, while the road brigade mustered in force. As might be expected towards the end of the week, fields were of but moderate proportions. Frank Wootton rode four winners and was once second and once third. Results :—

SANDOWN

As a general rule, the weather attending a Sandown Meeting is of the best, and Monday's was no exception, the sun shining brilliantly all day, and in the absence of wind the heat was torrid. Such a wonderfully strong attendance, putting the "Eclipse" day in the shade has not been seen for many a day, the space between the two courses, from the two big elms halfway to the motor garage beyond the mile winning-post, being packed by people, who overflowed the silver rings and filled a lower enclosure that embraced the steeplechase course finish, while traps galore were drawn up on the far side of the course. The specials were crammed, and thousands came down by tram and motor. Results :—

BIRMINGHAM.

After the showers of the two preceding days a dulness prevailed, and the heat moderated to cause apprehension of a wet opening to this fixture on the Bromford Bridge track, on Monday but fortunately for all concerned the weather in the early forenoon resumed its former brightness, and the afternoon's proceedings were carried through under delightful conditions. The recent rains appeared to have done the course a lot of good, and the thick herbage rendered the going much above expectations. Results:—

For the conclusion of this fixture the weather was gloriously fine, although probably a little too tropical for the comfort of the majority of those who assembled. Though fields were not large, they were of average strength, and the proceedings provided enjoyable sport.

Before racing commenced, a fire broke out and threatened to do serious damage to the railings which enclose the course. In consequence of the inflammable nature of the wood, the flames spread rapidly, but timely assistance came, and they were subdued after some forty feet of the palings had been destroyed. In the forenoon the grass on the inside of the course became ignited, but this proved of little account, as it was soon beaten out. Results:—

KEMPTON PARK.

Kempton, with its forest timber and its plantation, generally comes as a haven of rest. It follows the turmoil of Epsom, and Tuesday came as a restful foil to the heat, hurry, and excitement of Bank Holiday at Sandown. With the card judiciously restricted to half a dozen events, a start was made at two o'clock, by which time a small company, compatible with the off-season, had assembled, the members' enclosure being almost as bare as at Esher, with society out of town. The going was good, and fields averaged remarkably well. Results :—

GOLF.

CALCUTTA CUP TOURNEY.—The Royal and Ancient Club's twenty-seventh annual tournament for the Calcutta Cup was completed on the new course at St. Andrews last Friday, the finalists being the Rev. A. R. F. Hyslop and A. C. Muirhead. The latter was in receipt of one stroke, but, after an interesting match, he was beaten by 2 and 1. The winner is the warden of the Glenalmond College. For five years he held the gold medal of the Royal Perth Club, and is an ex-captain of the Stanmore Club.

At the first hole Muirhead was bunkered from his approach shot, but, running down a long putt, he effected a half in 6. At the fourth Hyslop took no fewer than four putts from a distance of ten yards, and the receiver of odds took the lead in 5 to 6. Muirhead also won the short fifth hole, where his opponent was bunkered, but Hyslop secured the next four holes in succession. Muirhead drove into whins at the sixth, and at the seventh he played a poor second shot. Hyslop turned with a lead of 2 up.

The tenth was halved, but Muirhead secured the eleventh and drew level at the fourteenth. A good half in 4 at the fifteenth was followed by another win for Hyslop at the sixteenth, who eventually won as stated.

SWIMMING.

WOMEN'S SWIM THROUGH LONDON.—Out of an entry of eighteen, sixteen female swimmers started from Richmond Lock on Saturday on a swim through London to Blackfriars. The absentees were the two Maoris.

At Hammersmith Bridge the positions were:—Miss Olive Carson (Leicester), leading; Miss Vera Neave (Enfield), being second; Miss Ethel Shipley (Leicester), third; Miss Florence Trustler (Shepheard's Bush), fourth; Miss Emily Ong (Holloway), fifth; Miss Florence Bott (Clapton), sixth.

The first swimmer to reach Putney Bridge was Miss Neave, who was followed by Miss Carson, about six yards behind; Miss Shipley being third, Miss Trustler fourth Miss Ong fifth, and Miss Kathleen Roberts sixth.

The leaders at Westminster were Miss Neave and Miss Carson. The former maintained her advantage to the end, winning by 250 yards from Miss Carson. Miss Shipley was third.

First prize was a gold cup, and the second a silver goblet. The course is 14½ miles long.

Hunting.

THE OOTY HUNT.

OWING to a dry spell of weather for the past fortnight hunting has been at a discount and news is therefore scanty. In spite of the hard going and almost total lack of scent, a large field turned out for the Meet at Sheffield Corner on Thursday morning, 17th instant, comprising Miss C. Lawley, Major and Mrs. Thompson, Mr. Harrison, H. H. the Maharaja of Mysore, Colonel, Mrs. and Miss Butler, Colonel, Mrs. and Miss Gordon Price, Mrs. Dennistoun, Mrs. Sam Browne, Miss Phipps, Miss Irwin, Miss Hammick, Sir John Woon, Colonel Roe, Major Shanahan, Mr. Colin Mackenzie, Mr. H. E. Clerk, Captain Lambton, Captain Annesley, Mr. R. H. Campbell, Captain Clarke, Captain Waring, Colonel Molesworth, Miss Glanville, Miss Walker, Mr. Cammell, Mr. Hammick, Mr. Roe, the Zemindar of Sivagiri, Mr. A. Y. G. Campbell, Mr. Nicholson, Captain Jarvis, and Mr. Smith.

After drawing the bog below Ace of Spades and various sholas, a jack was viewed near Heseltine's nullah making for the hill towards Krumaud path. Hounds being put on to the line could not make much of it until Saltan Shola was reached, from where they ran stronger through Nanjanad Valley. At the Pig and Whistle they ran into a sounder of pigs which split up the pack, but the leading hounds carried the line to the top of the Mysore ride and by Tripod to Governor Shola, where they were stopped. After spending a long time getting hounds together we had another short run from Governor Shola to Lady Lawley's Covert, and then scent failed. Returning by Sawling's nullah three jacks were found one of which was hunted across Newmarket down to Sandy nullah stream and on to Staircase, thence back to Bluegums, where hounds threw up.

Saturday, 19th.—In the absence of rain matters were worse in the matter of scent when we met at Toda Coffee Shop at noon. Finding near Gonakarimund the hunt was carried through Devil's Dance to Karalmund Shola, thence by Road Shola and Dormer to Chemund Hill, but the going was so hard here hounds were stopped. Until good rain falls further hunting will have to be discontinued I fear.

FLAT-RACING IN ENGLAND.

LINCOLN TO GOODWOOD.

Now that the sun has once more set on the Glories of Goodwood we can see that the optimistic prophecies in relation to the Turf for the Coronation year were not without foundation, and have been partially, if not wholly, realized. No doubt the Coronation itself has been one factor in the success of the Summer Meetings, in that it was the primary cause of the surpassing brilliancy of Ascot, which was even reflected to the minor meetings of that time. We have seen a better class of horse than for many years, sprinters such as Sunder and Hornet's Beauty, stayers like Lemberg, Swyaford, and Willonyx are, I think, beyond the average, while the big handicap winners, Bachelor's Double, the three-year-old Mushroom, Rochester and others are at the top of the tree in their own class. Moreover we have welcomed into the ranks of owners King George, and his support of our national sport is of inestimable value. It seems that the mantle of the father has fallen on the son, for even in the early days of his reign he has ingratiated himself into the hearts of all his subjects. Of this there can be no doubt in the mind of any one who has seen the ovation that has invariably accompanied a success of the Royal Colours. The more King George becomes known to his people the more will they find that he fills that blank which was left in these islands by the death of his revered father, a blank which the nation at one time thought would never be filled.

TREACHER & CO., LD.,

BOMBAY and POONA.

We must congratulate our new Sportsman King and ourselves that he has already won races with Pintadeau and Dorando and trust that these successes may be harbingers of greater ones to come. The King, too, has taken an active interest in Racing, for immediately the year of mourning was over he graced Newmarket with his presence, and paid a delicate compliment to Kempton by occupying the Royal Box at the Jubilee, no doubt remembering the sad event which caused the abandonment of this race last year. The Derby saw him too and the State Procession at Ascot, on both of which occasions he was accompanied by Queen Mary. May he long be with us, a bulwark to our Sport.

But to come to the main object of these notes—the history of a half-year's racing, we must deal first with Lincoln, which opened the ball in the last days of March. Perhaps never before has a Lincolnshire Handicap been awaited with greater interest than that of 1911. A winter of unusual mildness had given every trainer a chance to have his charge ready, while a superabundance of meetings "over the sticks" with the same crocks competing weekly, if not daily, had created a feeling of ennui, which would be dispelled by sport on the Carholme. The early speculation on the first of the Spring Handicaps was both genuine and heavy; Mercutio, Spanish Prince, and Helot were always to the fore in the market, and in the end carried a deal of public money in addition to stable commissions. A record field of thirty-two turned out with Spanish Prince top weight at 8st. 5lb. The number of the field was not the only record connected with the race. For a big handicap I should say the start was a record bad one, not more than four or five horses being given chances to win, even if they were capable of doing so. How galling it must be to a trainer who has spent months of care in getting his horse fit, coupled with the anxiety those months must bring with them, to find that in the end his labour is all in vain through his horse's chance being snuffed at the post. The Jockey Club persist in refusing to give the walk-up start even a trial, which could only have a beneficial effect, for either it would prove a success, in which case its adoption could be taken into consideration, or it would prove a failure, which would effectually silence the mouths of those who are so outspoken in its favour. Perhaps the worst sufferer in the Lincolnshire start was Mr. Sievier's Helot, to ride whom O'Neill had purposely travelled from France. The horse carried a heap of money each way, for Mr. Sievier, the whilom owner of Sceptre, is one of those owners who make no mystery over their horses and plainly told one and all the chance his horse possessed and the reason of the foundation of his hopes. Would that there were more owners of his calibre, a sportsman for sport's sake, but alas these are and will ever be outnumbered by the mystery-mongers. Yet Helot was given no chance because of the vagaries of another horse, Vigilance to wit; badly off and bumped is the record against his name, and he could not have won had he been a steam-engine. This incident of one horse spoiling a whole start is by no means rare, and it is an extraordinary thing that the starter does not on each occasion of continued fractiousness at the post order the delinquent to the rear. He has been specially empowered to do so by the Jockey Club, and for the life of me I cannot see why a horse should not suffer equally from the fact that he is a poor or bad-tempered starter, as from the fact that he is a poor or bad-tempered finisher. Now-a-days the fractious starter often gets the best of it—he is humoured in fact, and the tapes often fly up when he is on his toes.

But to return to the Lincolnshire. In the result the well-backed Mercutio carrying Trigg at 8st 9lb. in the saddle won from the lightly weighed Brandimintine with Ringstead up, and Spanish Prince. So the six-year-old son of Forfarshire and Sillabub at last won a race worthy of the good opinion his former trainer, poor Couch, had of him. The horse was such a source of bitter disappointment to him, not once but again and again through ill-luck, that there is no doubt that he was one of the causes of Couch's mind becoming unhinged, whereby he took his own life. Mercutio is now the property of the popular book-maker owner, Mr. Charles Hibbert, who it is said brought off a fine coup; he certainly caused some sensation by laying Spanish Prince very heavily and retaliating by an equally bold support of his own candidate.

The grand National Steeplechase at Liverpool was certainly not an edifying spectacle. Out of a field of twenty-six, including two previous winners in the Frenchman Latteur III and Jenkinstown, no fewer than 25 fell, and the winner Glenside, by St. Gris out of Kilwinnet, a gelding which one would pass by as a poor class hunter could scarcely crawl home and only with the greatest difficulty negotiated the last fence. At twenties he was not entirely neglected in the market for he had shown some good form at Sandown, and he would have been at a shorter price but for the fact that he had lately been suffering from a dry cough. Moreover his jumping is not pretty, for being one-eyed he takes his fences crab-like, that is sideways. One cannot go into raptures over him—but there is many a good word due to his runner-up Rathnally, as good a chaser to my mind as any previous winner of the race, with the possible exception of Manifesto and Cloister. He carried the substantial, that is substantial for a six-year-old, burden of 11st. and without a shadow of doubt the race should have been his. He was considered a certainty by his connections, a certainty bar accidents—but accidents were not barred. Second time round he was well placed and running smoothly on the right of Caubeen, who suddenly refused and boring to the right literally bowled over Rathnally like a nine-pin. His jockey, Chadwick, remounted the gelded son of St. Put and Alana and went on in pursuit, but one cannot afford to come down in a Grand National, and all he could do was to struggle into second place, thereby making up a lot of ground. What different parts a horse can play in a race or in a man's life! Mercutio, as I have mentioned, proved the end of his former trainer, and then wins his next owner a fortune, while Caubeen in last year's National brought down his stable companion Glenside and this year makes up for this contretemps by downing Glendaide's only dangerous opponent. Such is racing. Rathnally is still young and he has time to redeem his ill-fortune, which in the able hands of Coulthwaite he is likely to do. The National must not be left without a word of praise to the amateur jockey who steered the winner, Mr. J. Anthony. Mason could not ride, owing to a bad accident and his place in the saddle thus fell by chance to Mr. Anthony, whose first National mount this was. He rode with great skill, but as he approached the final fence his heart must have quaked, for it was just as likely that his horse would lie down in the ditch as get over the fence, so completely done was he.

Save to record that Newbury maintained its reputation for plethoric fields there is little to note of the Spring fixture there. Situate as it is in the heart of the Midland training quarters, Mr. Porter's venture has from a business point of view proved an undeniable success, but to the racing enthusiast it is not all beer and skittles. Fields of twenty-five to thirty runners, some of whom in racing parlance "out for an airing," are not uncommon, and a race then becomes more in the nature of a lottery, and the continued success of outsiders and upsets of form go to prove my argument. Here Royal Tender gave us a foretaste of his quality in winning a good class three-year-old handicap. This son of Persimmon and Tender and True trained by Lewis is a real good colt and one with whom the Netheravon confederacy are likely to work one of those big handicap coups for which they have such a penchant—it may not be yet awhile, for he is not likely at present to be leniently treated by the handicappers. The resuscitated Rochester by Rock Sand out of Caparison took the Spring Cup with over eight stone in the saddle for Lord Durham, who hardly meets with the success he deserves. For many years a Steward of the Jockey Club no one has worked harder for the benefit of the Turf, and no one's word carries more weight than his lordship's. Although not a cripple, Rochester all last year suffered from leg trouble and was never half the horse he is now. The luckless Mustapha took part in this race and was backed into favouritism, only to prove once more, just as he did later in the City and Suburban, a broken reed. Being born under an unlucky star, he has always performed a little too well in repeatedly running a good second with the result that he figures a little too high in the handicap. What a fortune he must have cost his stable and the public by his continuous failures to quite catch the judge's eye!

In my notes of last year I drew attention to my belief that Common had at last given us a son worthy of his sire in Mushroom and the events of this year have proved my contention up to the hilt. He opened his season by a stylish win in the City and Suburban, from Demosthenes and Bronzino. Carrying seven stone, a substantial burden for a three-year-old so early in the season, he was equal favourite with the luckless Mustapha at fives, and in the hands of Huxley easily justified the publicly-expressed confidence of his trainer, Butters. Such a convincing performance did he give that regrets were generally expressed that his name did not figure in the Derby but later running hardly leads one to believe he could have followed in the footsteps of his sire and gained classic honours. True he carried off the March Stakes at Newmarket over ten furlongs and then won from Greenback on an objection for crossing but the Gold Vase at Ascot showed the colt up in a somewhat different light and proved he possessed a will of his own, for he ran clean out of the course, while his admirers met with another shock when he could only get third to four-year-olds Spanish Prince and Sundor over six furlongs at Goodwood when in receipt of 11lbs. and 14lbs. for the year. Mushroom is, I should say, a really good class handicapper with a nice turn of speed and a fair stayer, so that he is certain to win other laurels so long as he does not fly at too high game. The tale of the City and Suburban would not be complete without an account of the part played therein by William Rex—a four-year-old by Count Schomberg out of V. R. If I make no mistake, this is one of the stars of the Netheravon stable presided over by Lewis. He came with a bound to favouritism only to drift out to sixteens on the day, and ran accordingly. He looks good enough to win anything and I have seen him lead his field a merry dance for more than half way in more than one race. His last performance was in the Goodwood Stewards' Cup and was akin to his earlier efforts. His day will come and with it another coup à la Christmas Daisy. Kilbroney's Metropolitan Stakes recalls Kilwarlin's St. Leger. The son of The Wag and Inniscarkil was left fully a hundred yards when the tapes flew up, and so hopeless did his chance appear that the fielders with raucous voice shouted "100 to 1 Kilbroney." The shout seemed to nerve him to action, for away he went and admirably ridden by Winter, who did not hurry his mount to make up the lost ground, he gradually overtook his field and robbed Bagotstown and Clanrish of the spoils. A genuine stayer is this colt of Lord St. David's and lucky into the bargain, for by a short head did he carry off another thousand pound handicap, and by a similar margin won the Goodwood Cup from Martingale over two miles and five furlongs.

The Kempton Jubilee being the last of the Spring handicaps generally produces but a small field, valuable as the race is, for by that time many a horse has shown that the weight allotted him in January would not be the same if allotted in May. The field contained two certainties. The Story and Dandyprat, the latter of whom had not been seen out for more than a year, but, as so often happens, the two certainties both came undone for Bachelor's Double was found at his best and won very easily in spite of 8st. 11lb. in the saddle. The Story, I think, was beaten on his merits but not so Dandyprat, whose leg trouble reasserted itself to the extent that he was pulled up, having collapsed just as he was taking a prominent position after rounding the bend.

Upon this year's classics I do not intend to dilate at great length. How Sunstar won the Derby from Stedfast and Royal Tender has already been described in the columns of the Indian Field, and his success in the Two Thousand, where Lord Derby's colt was also second in front of Mr. Joel's second string Lycaon, was but a foretaste of his Epsom triumph. It will be of more interest to state the position of the son of Sundridge and Doris as regards the coming St. Leger. A good colt, as good as most Derby winners but not on a par with the best, under ordinary circumstances the St. Leger would be his, and at the present time he would be a strong odds on chance instead of being on offer at 5 to 4, as is now the case. The price is ominous but the reason is not far to seek, viz., the colt's legs. That he faltered when nearing the winning post at Epsom and then pulled up lame is common knowledge, but this lameness was not so serious as is generally believed. Having a splint on the inside of his off foreleg, the colt hit it in running and the pain caused him to go lame temporarily, though in a few hours the trouble wore off. It seems he is in the habit of so hurting himself in this way, a fact which does not favour his chance. Since Epsom he has not been seen on a course and has been enjoying a holiday at Mr. Joel's stud farm at Childwickbury, though with the St. Leger only some six weeks off he has now returned to Morton's care at Wantage to undergo his preparation for the last of the classics at Doncaster. The going there must now be like a road and all against a colt possessed of such rounded joints and crippled legs, so that unless rain comes to soften the Wantage gallops there is a daily risk that Sunstar will break down. If any think of supporting the Derby winner I strongly advise them to await the issue of the coming weeks—Verb sap. With Sunstar out of the way, there would seem to be a clear course for Lord Derby's King William, who is now admittedly Stedfast's superior, for he is not likely to meet anything better than Prince Palatine, Lycaon or the miler Bannockburn. Furthermore, should any accident place King William hors de combat, the house of Stanley can fall back on Hair Trigger II., and the late form of the daughter of Fowling Piece and Altear tends to show that she would make no mean understudy.

Of the winners of the One Thousand and The Oaks, Atmah and Cherimoya, the latter is far the more shapely filly and far the better stayer. The property of Mr. Brodrick Cloete and trained privately by C. Marsh at Newmarket, she sprang a race surprise on the racing public, when on her initial appearance on the Turf she galloped over Tootles and Hair Trigger in the Ladies' Race at Epsom, and won in a common canter. Those connected with her do not gamble and were content to pick up a little at thirty-threes and twenty-fives, in spite of the fact that they were fully aware that they possessed a really smart filly in the daughter of Cherry Tree and Svelte. Atmah is by Galeazzo out of Mrs. Kendal, and seems to have gained her Newmarket success through being a filly that comes early to hand, for in her three subsequent performances she has been beaten pointless by fillies who then figured well behind her. She is in the St. Leger but can stand no chance; the name of Cherimoya seems missing from the entries—more's the pity for there is no saying how good she is.

I always think that the interest which the true lover of racing takes in the sport of kings is two-fold. There is the interest that one takes in a carefully framed handicap, to solve the problem and perhaps back your fancy—the excitement the contest produces—the joy of speculation—the unravelling of the problem, of which our solution is more often wrong than right. But there is a deeper interest that appeals to our sentiment, and gives rise to worthier thoughts, as one watches the growing generation of two-year-olds, notes their breeding and recalls the efforts of their sires and dams. Except in rare instances, for example the heroic struggle of a top weight to overcome his burden, one is apt to pass over the breeding of handicap winners, knowing full well that it is weight more than breeding that decides the issue. In the case of juveniles it is not so; their burdens are in the main uniform. Moreover one marks their build and points, their resemblance to their forebears and who their forebears were. So far no two-year-old stands out a giant among dwarfs, and this year's crop are best described as a goodly batch and up to the average. Taking a general survey I should put my finger on White Star, Lom, and Lomond as the best of the colts, with Jingling Geordie and Hall Cross not far behind them. White Star, the property of Mr. J. B. Joel, and, of course, under the care of his regular trainer Morton, is by Sundridge out of Doris, and therefore full brother to Sunstar, in whose footsteps he seems very likely to follow. Mr. Joel has been somewhat lucky in the breeding of these colts, for he had all but decided to sell their dam when a sentimental reason, the fact that she was the namesake of his daughter, led him to keep her for the paddock. Making his debut at Epsom he won the Woodcote Stakes by a head from Halberd and Lomond at level weights, and then, after running unplaced in the Coventry Stakes at Ascot, a race in which he was hampered, he took the July Stakes at Newmarket, following this up by a very stylish performance in the Molecomb Stakes at Goodwood.

The feature of the juvenile racing this year has been the regular successes gained by the youngsters in the charge of Butters at Newmarket. Considering that he had some 40 under his care it was likely that he should discover some useful horses among them, of whom Lom may in the end prove the best. He is a bay colt, the produce of the mating of Gouvernant and Tempete II., and though he is not yet fully matured he holds out great promise with the patience which he is sure to meet with at the hands of his painstaking master. Against two defeats, on both of which occasions he ran very green, he has but one success in the Soltykoff Stakes at Newmarket, but there are further laurels in store for him. I would again repeat, he is not being hurried. Lomond, by Desmond ex Lowland Aggie, is trained by Wootton at Epsom and after two defeats added lustre to his name by winning the New Stakes at Ascot from a smartish field with Jingling Geordie second at level weights, beaten a length. As in the case of Lom so too with Lomond patience has been the order of the day, no doubt largely due to the fact that the drought of July has rendered the turf by no means suitable to the tender hoofs of youngsters. Perhaps Lomond's best performance was in running the useful Jaeger to a neck when giving him 11lbs.—no mean performance this considering Lowland Aggie's son had been taking things easy and Jaeger was cherry ripe after two wins. Mr. Buchanan, who has lavished so much money in bloodstock, but has never reaped his deserts, is the owner of the curiously named Jingling Geordie by Santry out of Merangue. On form he comes out but little behind Lomond, though he has not met with the best of luck in running, as for example when second to Adula filly, still he credited his owner with the Lavant Stakes at Goodwood. That he will prove a more fortunate animal than Mr. Buchanan's whilom two-year-old crack Mountain pple is the sincere wish of all. Hall Cross is another son of Desmond, from Altesse who has shown good form, while Lord Rosebery is as usual possessed of smartish youngsters in Clodius, a son of his Derby Winner Cicero, and Wrack by Robert le Diable. I had almost omitted Sweeper II., the off-spring of Broomstick and Ravello who took a good race at Ascot and another at Goodwood—he seems level with the best but as I said before, no youngster stands out by himself.

So much for the colts—what of the fillies? Here three stand out by themselves, Lady Americus by Americus out of Palotta, who, with two wins to her credit, including the aristocratic Coventry Stakes is yet unbeaten, has great speed but it will be a surprise if one of her blood should ever be of any use beyond five, or at the most six furlongs. A brighter future is probably in store for Lord Falmouth's Bellisle, a daughter of Isinglass and Virginal, trained at Kingsclere by Waugh. Bred to stay, it is very likely that in her we have seen the Oaks winner of 1912, for she too is unbeaten and has twice made a representative field look very "small potatoes." Third comes the un-named filly by Spearmint out of Adula who polished off a smart lot of juveniles at Sandown including Jingling Geordie.

Another side of Racing that has appealed to our sentiment has been the struggle between two honest good horses, Lemberg and Swynford. A triple contest between the Derby and St. Leger winners of last year seems to have at last settled the question as to which is superior, in the favour of Lord Derby's son of John o' Gaunt. At their first meeting they met at level weights in the Epsom Coronation Cup and Lemberg proved successful by three-quarters of a length over one and a half miles, but in the rich Princess of Wales Stakes over a like distance, Swynford in receipt of five pounds took his revenge of Cyllene's son by a length and a half. This left the Eclipse Stakes as the decider, and here they again met at evens, but the altered terms made no difference, in fact Swynford won more easily than at Newmarket, though it is only fair to add that the stable knew that Lemberg was not at his best. Differently bred as they are, what a valuable addition they will be to our list of sires! Still I hear that Lord Derby intends to give Swynford another season in training in the hope that he will set the seal on his fame by winning the Ascot Gold Cup.

The only fault that could be found with Ascot was the terrible hard going, but this is no new thing with regard to the Royal meeting. Every artificial means of improving the course has been resorted to, with the result that there is a better herbage to lessen the jar to horses' legs, but such means have not succeeded in overcoming the effects of a long drought. His Majesty accompanied by Queen Mary proceeded in state, and the Royal Enclosure was thronged with Indian potentates and the nobility of England—the brilliancy of the scene and the grace of toilettes of the fair sex, enhanced by their personal charms, will certainly never be surpassed. The triple success of Hornet's Beauty, a gelded son of Tredennis and Hornet, created great enthusiasm. A beautiful mover, he revelled in the hard going and as his hoof lightly touched the turf he seemed almost to fly, so easy was his action. Were he and Sunstar to meet over six furlongs the son of Tredennis would probably be favourite and justify his favouritism into the bargain. Many may wonder why he was ever unsexed. I believe in his early days his temper was really bad and the operation was chosen instead of the greater evil, a bullet. In Hornet's Beauty and Sunder, who continues his victorious career, we have two as smart sprinters as have been seen for many a day.

Interest in the Gold Cup waned when the parched state of the ground was responsible for the withdrawal of Lemberg and Swynford, which left but a field of six, with Charles o' Malley, the only horse of any class, to contest the greatest race of the year. Still victory fell to an honest horse, and to a good sportsman, in Mr. Howard's Willonyx, a four-year-old son of William the Third and Tribonyx, who had already taken the Chester Cup and Ascot Stakes. Believing him to be a genuine stayer, as in fact he is, his trainer Darling had entered him on the off chance, somewhat to the surprise of his owner, who after the race gracefully presented the Cup to Darling in acknowledgment of the care bestowed on the colt in preparing him for his triple success. The Hunt Cup proved once more a snare and delusion to backers, as was likely to be the case after two warm favourites had won in 1909-10, namely, Dark Ronald and Bachelor's Double. With the help of the public the Whatcombe stable backed Cigar into favouritism, whose starting price was the ridiculous one of 5 to 2. When looking a little jolly, Cigar had run a good race at Newbury when second to Royal Tender with 12lb. the worst of the weights, and there is little doubt that he is a good horse and one day will prove it, but at Ascot he looked drawn and overdone, so that it seemed a case of :—

"Striving to better oft we mar what's well."

Rumour asserted that the son of Morganatic and Smoke, who is a three-year-old, is the equal of Mustapha at evens, and if this is the case he will certainly win races, unless he is the equal of Mustapha in luck! Anyhow in the race in question he was beaten pointless by Moscato, who at 16 to 1 brought off another coup for Taylor's stable, with Long Set second and Spanish Prince third.

The Newmarket July meetings call for no comment, but a contemporaneous event, the sale of Sceptre, then the property of Sir W. Bass, cannot fail to be of interest. So far the record price for a brood mare was reached by Flair at 15,000 guineas and this record was not disturbed by the daughter of Persimmon and Ornament, whose produce hitherto have been of no great account. Twelve years old, Sceptre is not yet an extinct volcano and is believed to be in foal to Cicero; should this produce be a colt—her previous offspring were all fillies—a goodly proportion of the 7,000 she now fetched is likely to be returned to her present purchasers, Messrs. Tattersall. The very fact of her breeding, aristocratic as it is, does not enhance her value, for she is manifestly not a fit mate for sires of St. Simon blood. Mr. Somerville Tattersall is to be congratulated in that his purchase of the mare ensures that she will complete her span of years in these isles, and his refusal of a sum greater than that he gave for her, and that too from her whilom owner, Mr. Sievier, tends to show that he is well satisfied with his bargain. To Sir William, Sceptre had been a successful investment, for the price at which he bought her, viz., 25,000, is a good deal less than the 34,000 which the mare and her offspring have returned to the popular Baronet in stakes and sale money. At the same sale Sceptre's first foal, Maid of the Mist, in foal to Torpoint, fetched 4,500, but her other two foals, Maid of Corinth and Coronation, were sold some time ago to go abroad. Another well-known horse that has recently changed hands is Your Majesty, the St. Leger winner of 1908, whom Mr. J. B. Joel sold privately to a well-known breeder in the Argentine, where he will be of greater value than here, for there is a goodly number of St. Simon's sires standing in England, so that the expatriation of one of his grandsons is not a matter of very deep regret.

No more will be seen of the gallant chaser Cackler. When doing a school just before the Grand National he broke his off foreleg, and since every effort to restore him has proved unavailing, Sir C. Assheton-Smith mercifully had him destroyed.

Goodwood in the last days of July fell a little flat, due partially to the absence of the King, who cancelled his visit to the Duke of Richmond owing to the political situation created by the Parliament Bill with the Peers, and partially to the prolonged drought. Not that the latter had rendered the going at Goodwood really bad, for this is never the case owing to the velvety nature of the turf on the ducal Downs, where the lapse of centuries on virgin soil has produced a herbage very different from that produced by the skill of man. Still the heat of July, a record month for sunshine and lack of rain, had reduced the various training gallops into an impossible condition, with the result that trainers had found it out of the question to give their charges sufficient strong work to get them ready.

The levelling of the ground at the starting post for the Stewards' Cup, which in spite of its poor value (a paltry 500 is added to the stakes) maintains all its old popularity, has minimized the luck of the draw, which as a rule decided the race. The low figures, that is, those drawn next the rails, formerly had an uphill start, and a couple of years ago a horse so drawn had his chance of success practically snuffed before the race began. Now the high figures, on the stand side, have but little advantage, a fact proved by the places drawn by the leading trio, viz., 2, 4 and 3 Joyner's three-year-old, Borrow and Mercutio, were very much fancied, but the former started badly and was baulked by Sunningdale, while the Lincolnshire winner had a little too much weight in 8st. 12lb. The winner Braxted, a 25 to 1 chance, would have been more fancied had it not been for a somewhat poor display some ten days before at Ayr. Moreover he is not a colt always to be depended upon to do his best, though he has speed when he chooses to display it. Here he was caught in the right mood and was leading when half the distance had been covered, and never being headed he stalled off by a neck the challenge of Great Surprise, who was backed at the last down to ten to one, with Mercutio third. Young Winter rode Mr. Dewar's colt with great skill and is rapidly taking his place as one of our best jockeys. He is sorely needed and so are others like him. The Plate, once called the Goodwood Stakes, run over two miles produced an even greater surprise than the Stewards' Cup, when Ignition, the outsider of a field of 6 at forty to one, galloped in lengths ahead of Pillo on whom slight odds were laid. A glutton for work is Ignition, and the further he goes the more does he enjoy racing. The old-fashioned Goodwood Cup, still started by means of the flag instead of the gate, is now fallen from its high estate of the past, when the best horses competed for the prize—now it fell to Kilbroney, a fair class handicapper and small, but what there is of him is all grit. In taking the Chesterfield Cup old Dean Swift made his last appearance in public. Everyone, especially the ladies, looked upon him almost with affection, and from more than one pair of fair lips did I hear the exclamation, "the dear old Dean." Ten years old Mr. Joel's warrior retires after running in sixty-two races, to a life of peace in a special paddock prepared for him at Childwickbury. Epsom, where he won two City and Suburbans, was his favourite battlefield, but he was dear to every crowd. Much as one regrets that he can never give us a chip of the old block, still with his twelve wins, sixteen seconds and ten thirds right well has the old fellow won his otium cum dignitate.

CALCUTTA RUGBY NOTES AND COMMENTS.

As the Bombay Rugby tournament will commence on Friday the 1st September and will not conclude until the 9th the West Ridings cannot be expected here until the evening of the 12th. The cuties are fairly good, already three outside teams having entered and probably a picked team from Belgaum may also take part. The Bombay Gymkhana have not got a very strong side, having twice this season been beaten by the Dukes, but the Leicesters are, I am informed, slightly stronger than they were last year and the team are confident of lowering the colours of the Ridings.

Calcutta have made a few improvements in their team, and for the first time on Saturday Abbott an old Scottish International, assisted the club This is Abbott's third season in Calcutta, but although he has refereed in several matches he had not played in a single match. Fisher was tried at back in place of Pyne, but against the Nomads he had absolutely nothing to do so one could form no definite opinion as to his qualifications as a back. At left three-quarter in a couple of League matches Fisher appeared to be strong in attack but no opportunity was given to judge of his defensive play. Victor Sherman who played right three-quarter was certainly an improvement on Jenkins. If Burnett turns out Abbott who is an excellent forward will go into the pack and then Calcutta will be infinitely stronger than they are at present.

The East Yorks having failed to beat Calcutta, the League Cup will probably go to the United Services as on recent form, the latter look like beating Calcutta again. But the game is sure to be a really good one and there will be very little to choose between the two sides. At forward, half and three-quarter, Calcutta and the Services are very evenly matched but at full back the United Services hold a decided advantage. Pitman was seen to great advantage against the East York's forwards when the teams met on Saturday, but the same remark cannot be applied to Fisher the Calcutta back. The latter's picking up for poor, his kicking lacked length and his tackling was not nearly so good as that of the Services' back. The Fyzabad forwards, however, did not take advantage of the weakness of Fisher's defensive play for on two occasions when the York's forwards had rushed the ball past the C.F.C. "threes" they made the fatal mistake of kicking too hard over the Calcutta line with the result that once the ball went dead in goal and on another occasion Fisher being in a more favourable position was able to touch down. Such openings presented to the West Riding's forwards would, in nine cases out of ten, have resulted in tries The Nomads are getting no support, and although there are at least five really good Rugger men who are not playing, yet somehow they have not joined this club. A. S. Apear could very well get the two brothers Creet and Peters to join the Nomads—three exceptionally strong and clever forwards. Then there are Edwards, Macdonald and Rowe of the Customs who would all strengthen the side. The brothers Creet and Peters have played a lot of soccer this year and as they are only a few miles away from Calcutta they would always be able to turn out on match days. With the addition of these six men, the Nomads could hold their own against any local combination. It is for the want of proper management and utter lack of interest that a team in Calcutta cannot be found—one capable of holding their own as did the City and Suburban twelve years ago. All prejudice should be put aside where the interest of sport is concerned.

Before giving the results of the weeks matches I should like to say a word of the excellent refereeing of Mr. A. M. Burnett. The refereeing in Rugby has, I am glad to state, invariably been of a high standard and although in the League matches and in the big tournament, C.F.C. members generally supervise the games, their decisions have always been of a most satisfactory character. Most of them have the principal qualities required of a referee viz., experience, firmness, quickness of decision, and above all they show no favour to either side. This year in particular Burnett has given a good illustration of what qualities a referee, should possess. I am sorry the same remark cannot be applied to some of the referees who officiated with the whistle during the Hockey and Soccer seasons.

The East Yorks vs. Services match on Saturday produced a fast and open game, and interest was maintained to the end. On the whole the Services enjoyed the larger share of the game and deserved their hard-earned victory—a goal from a try to a dropped goal or 5 points to 4. In the initial half Bladen dropped a goal and midways through the second half Captain Walker got a try for the United Services which Chase converted.

The same evening Calcutta beat the Nomads by three goals and three tries (24 points) to nil. In the first half Abbott (2) Cumberlege and Cunningham got over the Nomad's line. Cumberlege was successful in placing three goals. After ends had been changed Cumberlege and Cunningham got over but no goals resulted.

The East Yorks and Calcutta match resulted in a draw each side scoring an unconverted try. Victor Sherman got over in the first half when the C.F.C. had most of the play, but after ends had been changed the Yorks showed much improvement and Mason eventually equalised matters. Both places were from difficult angles.

THE BOMBAY HARWOOD LEAGUE.

THE Bombay Gymkhana met the R.G.A. on the 21st instant, and a keen and well contested game was witnessed. Play was very level throughout, the Gymkhana scoring a victory by the odd goal in three, their winning point being registered from a penalty kick for hands, an award which met with considerable adverse criticism from the soldier spectators. The Royal Warwicks and the Bombay Volunteer Artillery took the field on Tuesday, the 22nd, the military turning out an entirely new team, their usual representatives being engaged in the Harris Tournament at Poona. Though not up to the standard of their first team the Warwicks had the best of the game throughout and eventually beat the Volunteers by 5 goals to 1. The Byculla Railway Institute played the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday and to the general surprise the Railway team were victorious by 2 goals to 1.

On Saturday the postponed match B. F. C. vs. B. V. A. finished with a victory for the former by 2—0 after a very level game. This brought the League to a close, final placings being as follows :—

THE HARRIS TOURNAMENT.

THE Harris Football Tournament opened on the Ghorpuri ground at Poona on the 21st instant, when the Royal Warwicks met the Norfolks in the first game The Bombay champions obtained a couple of abortive corners at the start but thereafter play settled down and was very level, till shortly before half time when the Warwicks got away and scored the first goal. They continued to press till the interval and kept up the attack on changing ends, a second point rewarding their efforts five minutes after recommencing. The Norfolks were kept busy defending for the remainder of the game. They got away towards the close and forced a couple of corners but these could not be improved upon and they retired beaten by 2 goals to nil. On the 2nd instant the Dorsets met the R.F.A. from Kirkee. The Dorsets had the best of the exchanges during the opening moiety and scored twice, the first from a free kick for hands. Rain interfered with play on crossing over, but the Dorsets were not to be denied and notched a third goal. The Gunners played up pluckily but all their efforts to reduce the margin were unsuccessful and they were defeated by 3 goals to nil. The Worcesters met the Lincolns on the 23rd instant and a stout struggle was witnessed. The Worcesters had the best of matters in the first half and led at the interval by a goal to nil. But the second period was very evenly contested and the Lincolns managed to equalise—the score being one all when time was called. The game was continued and in the extra time the Worcesters scored the winning goal Thursday's match was between the Loyal N. Lancs and the Durhams, the N. Lancs winning by 3 goals to 1. They opened the scoring shortly after the start and held this advantage up to half time After the interval play was fairly level, till the Lancs got away and forced a corner from which they kicked another goal. The Durhams were next prominent and registered their only point, but before the close of the game the Lancs got away again and scored.

The first match in the second round was played on the 29th instant, when the Warwicks took the field against the Dorsets. The latter had the best of the opening exchanges, but their opponents soon settled down and some fine combined play ended in their scoring a goal. They continued to press till just before the interval when the Dorsets put in a couple of abortive runs. After the usual respite the Warwicks took up the attack once more. They got a corner which was not improved upon, but not long after they scored a second goal. The Dorsets tried hard to get on terms but without success and they had to admit defeat by 2 goals to nil.

Boxing.

ENGLISH CHAMPIONS.

EVEN in the last days of the old Prize Ring the Englishman was still unquestionably superior to all his rivals in the art of self-defence with nature's weapons only, success in which depended in that age of cold common sense almost as much on a man's wrestling ability as on his skill in fisticuffs. It is just possible that England's supremacy in the finest of personal pastimes might have lasted even to the present moment if wrestling had not been ruled out—to reappear in the form of clinching—under the new and mitigated code which was universally accepted when a revival of interest in prize-fighting took place. Under the good old rules we might still possess the world's heavyweight championship; cross-buttocking permitted and the gloves laid by, we would cheerfully back Gunner Moir (who has been Hackenschmidt's wrestling partner) to beat even the artful and artistic Johnson, to say nothing of the "white man's-hopes" that are appearing so plentifully on the other side of the Atlantic.

As things are, however, boxing is clearly a cosmopolitan profession and England to-day can hardly even claim to be primus inter pares in the production of first-rate professors of the science and art thereof. First of all the Irish American threw his queer hat (with a dirty clay-pipe stuck in the hat-band) into the ring and so effectually demonstrated his right to challenge the plain Englishman's supremacy that a Celtic name seemed for a decade and more the most necessary item in the modern boxer's equipment. Then the negro arrived, and so manfully has he played his subdued part that to-day there are four copper-coloured heavyweights—Johnson, Jeannette, MacVea, and Sam Langford—each of whom is more than a match for the best white boxer living. More recently, the American citizen of European ancestry has proved himself a formidable glove-fighter. Among German-American boxers the most prominent are Attell, Wolgast, Harry Lewis, and Papke, each of whom claims the world's championship in his division. As yet the Oriental, who has shown himself such a strong and skilful wrestler, has not dropped his turban into the arena. But he may do so at any moment. And already almost every European country is producing competent pugilists: France, for example, possesses in Moreau and Carpentier two absolutely first-rate boxers, and one hears of good men coming on in the Scandinavian countries and in Germany, while several Italians have done well in the American ring. England taught America the game and America is teaching the rest of the world. It is a notable fact that Paris, where there is a real enthusiasm for boxing, will have nothing to do with English teachers of the art. There, and elsewhere on the Continent, they are thought to be the advocates of antiquated methods.

CONCERNING AMATEURS.

As far as amateur boxers are concerned, the supremacy of England is still unchallenged. Our amateurs are better than those of America or any other country, and there are a great many more of them. The easy victories recently gained by a team of English amateurs, when they met the champions of the United States and of France at New York and Paris, proved this, if proof were necessary. The team in question was not fully representative; it was entirely made up of men who distinguished themselves in the A. B. A. Championships, and it must be remembered that many of our very best amateurs hold aloof from the annual competitions at the Alexandra Palace because of late years the "shamateur" or professional in the making has been far too prominent there. There can be no doubt that there and other amateur competitons provide an excellent training for the boxer who intends to make the game his profession. In the customary three-round contests he learns to box at the greatest pace of which he is naturally capable, and the edge of his ability is not taken off by a series of lengthier affairs when he is a growing lad. If all our professional champions had the amateur's pace and fire, as well as the experienced prize-fighter's knowledge of defensive tactics and of the tricks of the trade, they would make a better show against the American experts.

To return to the original discussion, the arrival of the cosmopolitan prize-fighter has affected the situation in several ways. It is true that the methods of the cosmopolitan boxer are often unsportsmanlike to a degree. With far too many of the American experts it is an axiom of ring-craft that nothing is illegal unless the law (in a "biled shirt," as they say) has cognizance thereof; they look on hitting, the use of the elbows, hitting with the heel of the glove or with a bony wrist, throttling an opponent in clinches, etc., as perfectly justifiable provided the offence escapes the eye of the referee. Boxing is not, and never has been, a gentleman's diversion in America; the professional boxer there, whose only patron is the crowd, has never associated with the leaders of Society (as the heroes of the old Prize Ring, those glorified clodhoppers, did in England), and has not been taught the elements of sportsmanship. The wonder is that he is so often a sportsmanlike antagonist a clean fighter, and a scorner of mean advantages like McFarland or Stanley Ketchel in his day, or Jeffries in his prime, or almost all the first-rate negro pugilists. It is not the first-rate but the second-rate boxer who employs foul tactics; and the writer, who has seen many championship contests on both sides of the Atlantic in the last 20 years, cannot recall a single instance in which the issue was determined by the taking of unfair advantages.

As often as not the American fighter of complex ancestry is a species of freak, physically speaking, not so obviously, perhaps, as the living skeleton or the fat lady but he belongs to the category of dime museum types. Papke and Wolgast have the round cast-iron German head which will stand any amount of hammering; furthermore, they have the low, nervous organization of the extreme phlegmatic type, and can stand pain as well as a Red Indian, or even better. Both have a natural punch of amazing severity, and win their fights by addressing it to the place where it does the most damage—in the case of an English opponent to the stomach, which, perhaps because England has always been a land of good living, seems to be the weak point in the national physique. "Battling" Nelson, another boxer who was impervious to ordinary punishment, was a fish-like personage; his heart beat more slowly than that of the average man, and even at the end of the hottest round his skin was icy-cold. All the negro fighters are, of course, abnormal in physique as compared with the average European; their skulls are unusually thick, their chins are not pointed, and their nervous systems are not easily shocked. The more highly-organized Englishman is at a disadvantage when he meets these fighting machines of un-English flesh and blood in the ring. The more reason why he should not allow traditional ideas to prevent him from adapting his style to the solution of new and tough problems such as were unknown before the advent of the cosmopolitan glove-fighter and are still much misunderstood. If he will only act on the adage fas est et ab hoste doceri he may yet administer sound thrashings to his Boeotian and Barbarian rivals who at present have rather the best of the argument.

THE SHORTENED WEAPON.

As long as it is a question of out-fighting the traditional English style is good enough. The straight left is still the best device for keeping an opponent outside; when an opening presents itself the direct hit reaches its mark more quickly, though with less force, than the vertical or horizontal "haymaker" or swing, in which the fist is really bowled at the other man's head. But the cosmopolitan boxer with his cast-iron head, whose chin has been left behind in his family bush, cannot be kept out by hitting or breaking ground; and, unless his English opponent is conversant with the modern science of in-fighting, he will sooner or later be broken up and beaten by a series of body blows. In actual warfare the nation with the shorter weapon has almost always prevailed; the short, thrusting sword of the Roman legionary, for example, was more than a match for the Macedonian pike or the Celtic claymore. Even so in these latter days the boxer whose strategy it is to get inside and pound away at close quarters has the advantage, and deserves to have it. It is the half-arm hit, the severity of which can be much increased by wrist-play, that counts for most in the modern game; and, what is more, that which lands on some useful part of the body is more damaging in the long run than the abbreviated punch to the head.

The English professional, whose chief idea is to work for the head at a respectful distance, will be knocked out as Sullivan was by Papke and Moran by Wolgast—whenever he meets the cosmopolitan expert who dispenses with mere prettinesses. Sooner of later he will have to take the count; sooner rather than later if he has not the capacity of enduring a pounding in the stomach—a form of endurance that may be acquired by practice and by experience and by special exercises for strengthening the middle-storey muscles. The fact that the new style is uncouth and unfamiliar to English eyes, long accustomed to the open and graceful methods of the academics, must not mislead us into believing that it is unscientific or necessarily unfair. Otherwise we fall into the foolishness of, say, the academic critics of Bertrand's system of fencing. Our champions are apt to forget that fighting is far and away the best preparation for fighting. They keep their form under a glass case, whereas the American champions are always taking part in six or ten round no-decision affairs, which add to their experience (which is the root of all ringcraft) and keep the keen edge on their impressionistic artistry. In most parts of the United States it is illegal to name the winners of such contests—the moralists, who have shut the referee's mouth, hoped by so doing to lessen the severity of such affairs, but the very reverse has happened—and the only way in which a boxer can score a palpable win in defiance of the police regulations is by knocking out his opponent. Accordingly the no-decision meetings are full of hard, fast fighting, and those who engage in them learn this great lesson—never to lose the opportunity of a decisive advantage.

THE PRESENT POSITION.

At the present moment we have half-a-dozen champions of England, each of them the holder of the Lonsdale Belt in his division, who form as good a team as we have ever possessed in the last 20 years. They are Digger Stanley (bantam class), Jem Driscoll (feather weights), Matt Wells (light weights), Young Joseph (welter weights), Jim Sullivan (middle weights), and Bombardier Wells (heavy weights). Of these six Driscoll is in a class by himself; he prefers out-fighting, but is equally good at inside work and it is impossible to put a finger on any weakness in his style, unless the possession of a temperament not absolutely imperturbable be accounted as such. Like Gans, called the "Old Master" in his day, he is a type of the natural genius which practice has made perfect. Young Joseph is the weakest of the six: he is a pretty boxer and a gentlemanly fighter, but is not very robust, and lacks the indispensable punch. Digger Stanley, who is an adept at inside work, is well worth his place in the team, though hardly as good as Bowker was in his prime. Matt Wells is not only a very fast and scientific boxer, but also a sturdy fighter with a punch, and he has little or nothing to learn about infighting. He is shortly to meet Wolgast but will have some difficulty in making the weight; one hopes for the best, while fearing the worst. It is in the middle-weight and heavy-weight divisions that cosmopolitan America's superiority is unquestionable. With more experience Sullivan could make a brave show against the best American middle-weights (there are better men coming on than Papke), but he is too high-strung and too susceptible to body-blows to win a world's championship. As for Bombardier Wells, he is as fast and as clever at out-fighting as any heavy-weight living, and he has the power of wrist-play which adds sting to the straight forward English punch. But though his body satisfies Euclid's definition of a line, he may be said to wear his stomach on his sleeve in a manner of speaking, and it is very doubtful whether the modern science of physical culture, though it can work wonders, will perform for him the miracle of curing this ostentatious weakness. But, while he lasts, he will be able to give the best of the iron-jawed negros and cosmopolitan fighting-machines a lively quarter of an hour, and when he comes to his full strength he will always have a chance of upsetting the odds. His amazing pace and piston-like left, with its effortless punch, must now and again put the most formidable antagonist off his game (the outpaced fighter often goes to pieces for a time), and cause him to leave the opening for a decisive stroke—and we already know that Wells is too quick-witted to miss an opportunity. But it is a thousand pities that he has been matched against Johnson during his novitiate. Champion of England though he be, Wells is merely a magnificent novice, a youth of 22 whose muscular system is unfinished, necessarily deficient in constitutional strength and stamina, and a trio at the inside-work of which the negro, a fighter born and made, is among the greatest of living masters—as uncannily clever, indeed, as Gans or any other of the little men of his race. It will be 2) to 1 on Johnson; it would be infinity to nothing but for the fact that the negro may not think it necessary to train seriously. If he goes into the ring with the fat which he has collected since the Reno affair, and Wells can keep out of danger for ten rounds (which would be a great achievement, all things considered), then the utterly unexpected might happen.—The Times.

The Horse.

BY JOHN GILPIN.

CHAPTER IX.

JUMPING.

As soon as the horse is obedient in the long reins his education in jumping may begin. There is no better obstacle for the first lesson than a round log or the body of a fallen tree. This was recommended long ago by Dick Christian on the grounds that the horse cannot get a leg into it or break it, and must peck over once he goes at it. If such a log is not available a bamboo lapped round with straw ropes, plastered with mud, and whitewashed may be used. At first it should be laid on the ground in the circle in which the horse is accustomed to be exercised and he should be driven over it in the long reins. If he jumps over it or steps over it without making a fuss, well and good. In subsequent lessons, which should follow immediately on the ordinary work in the long reins while the horse has the sense of discipline still strong on him, the bar may be raised a little daily. If he will not cross the bar at first, even when the whip is cracked behind him, the crupper leading rein may be utilised to take him over. To make this, take a long rope and double it. Knot the two together about a foot from the doubled end and again about thirty inches further up. The loop at the doubled end is put over the horse's dock, the two loose ends are passed from behind through the rings of the snaffle, and the knot thirty inches from the loop rests on the horse's back and prevents the rope from dangling about his sides. The breaker should take the loose ends in his hand and walk forward without looking back. If the horse hangs back he finds a drag at the root of his tail and almost always follows at once. He may be accustomed to the use of the crupper leading rein early in his training. It is a capital contrivance for sharpening up a horse which is lazy when led, and is most valuable for inducing a horse to go into a horsebox or steamer. I am indebted to Captain Hayes for my knowledge of it.

As soon as the horse jumps the bar freely he should be schooled over other obstacles. It is a good plan to have three jumps, say a bar, a bank and ditch, and a hurdle, in a large circle. The breaker can then walk round a smaller concentric circle and drive the horse over them. If the horse tries to rush his jumps he can be turned about just as he starts to rush. This will soon teach him to go up to his fences in a temperate and balanced way. It is of the very first importance that the reins should not catch in the fences and thus give the horse a jab in the mouth. A plan to avoid this is to have a smooth arch of bamboo at right angles to the fence between it and the breaker, the middle of the arch at, and higher than, the fence. The reins will slip up one side, over the top, and down the other side without jarring the horse's mouth. As the horse should not be allowed to rush in approaching his jumps so also he should not be allowed to rush after landing. The reins must be very carefully handled as the horse lands for if he gets a jab in the mouth then he is very likely to refuse the jump next time.

When the horse does his lesson in really good style he may be sent round with a man on his back. At first the breaker should have the long reins and drive the horse as before. The rider can take hold of the breastplate to maintain his balance if necessary. If the horse goes well thus the ordinary reins may be put on and the horse ridden over the jumps in the ordinary way. It is a curious thing that we may drive a horse in the long reins backwards and forwards over the same jumps in the long reins as much as we please and he will not get tired of it, in fact he seems to like it, but as soon as we begin to ride him over jumps we find that he will get sick of continually jumping the same thing and will very likely refuse it. We should therefore take the horse afield as soon as possible. It is a good plan to take him in the long reins for a walk in the evenings and to put him over any likely obstacles we see. As soon as he gets clever at them we can ride him over them. He should be taken first at small places until he gains confidence. He should be allowed to take his time over them at first as he may get frightened if hustled.

It is better to let the horse judge his own distance at the jumps than to try to judge it for him. The majority of good performers leave their horses alone for the few strides preceding the jump leaving the whole thing to the horse. I do not mean that they give the horse an absolutely loose rein, but that they endeavour to convey to the horse no instructions as to how he is to jump, simply that he has to get over. Horses ridden in this way soon learn to look out for themselves and jump very safely.

Another school of riders handle their horses right up to the jumps and those of them who have very good hands and nerve succeed very well. The drawback to this system is that there are two chances of a mistake instead of one—the man may err as well as the horse. On the whole I think that horses accustomed to be ridden in the manner first described are the freer jumpers. The second method is more suitable to a cramped country.

Tom Assheton Smith, the greatest rider of a hard-riding generation, liked to put his horse at a big jump at a slight slant. It enabled the horse to judge his distance better he thought.

When coming up to a fence that one can see through it is always the best plan to put the horse at the thickest and ugliest part of it. He is more likely to jump it clean. If your horse jumps through his fences make up one with a stiff bamboo rail hidden near the top of it and drive him fast right into it with the long reins. The heavier the toss he takes the less likely he is to jump through his fences again.

A horse should be encouraged to change his feet on banks. At first many horses are inclined to fly them but they will soon learn to change their feet on the top if they are taken slowly up to them in the long reins. Care should be taken that the banks over which a young horse is schooled are perfectly sound. If he has a fall through putting his feet on a rotten bank it will delay his education. A horse should have plenty of pace on at a big ditch, but he should not be sent at it so fast as to risk his galloping into it before he sees it. Dick Christian, in one of his mimitab'e lectures, laid it down that "A horse don't go to jump his farthest by bein sent too fast at his fences," and again, "Take a good hold of your horse's head going up to your fences; the longer you hold him the farther he'll go," while Assheton Smith used to say "If you see a man going a hundred miles an hour at his fences you may depend upon it that man funks." (I quote from memory).

High timber and banks should be jumped slowly as a rule. The higher the horse raises his forehand before springing off at them the less is the effort required from him and his rider. If the horse is going very fast he can only get over a really high fence by standing well away from it and jumping very big. Efforts of this kind are all very well as long as the horse is fresh but he cannot be expected to continue to jump in this style for forty minutes with hounds. A horse should not be asked to jump bigger than is necessary so that he may have something in reserve if a really big fence and ditch is met with. Some horses jump timber best from a trot.

Ordinarily a horse should stand well away from his jumps and land well past them. Timber is an exception except where there is a ditch with it. Such a combination is fortunately rare as it stops a good many people.

The beginner will probably be surprised at his horse's performance the first time he rides him to hounds or pig-sticking. He will find that the horse excited and keen is a bigger and better jumper than he judged him to be during the time of schooling. With the pace on, and the excitement of meeting other horses and the hounds to spur him on, it is extraordinary the ease with which a good and well-schooled horse covers a country which one would feel inclined to look at twice in cold blood.

A good deal of the rider's part in jumping may be expressed in negatives. Don't interfere with your horse at his fences. Don't keep a strain on the reins while the horse is in the air or is landing. Don't lean forward as the horse is coming down. Don't take hold of the horse's mouth with a jerk of the reins after landing. Don't interfere with your horse if he stumbles on landing but sit back and leave his mouth alone. Don't forget your balance.

A beginner is apt to think only of his grip and to squeeze the horse so hard as to loose his own position in the saddle when going at his first few jumps. He should remember that no amount of grip will do without balance. He should keep his shoulders behind a line drawn through his seat perpendicular to the ground (not to the horse's back), and his feet a little forward rather than back. I do not believe much in rule-of-thumb methods but one tip which may be useful to some is this:—While going up to your jump, sitting as described in the chapter on "Seat," look up at the sky immediately above your head. This will take your shoulders about the right distance backwards, and when you look to the front again, keeping your shoulders where the upward look put them, you will not be badly placed on your horse for the jump. Once you find the position you will wonder wherein your initial difficulties lay. They lie in balance as is the case in bicycling, skating, swimming, and, if we only remember it, walking and running. Above all things keep the arms and loins flexible.

The beginner must remember that Indian going is very hard as a rule and very trying to a horse's legs. He should therefore indulge himself in the joys of jumping with moderation when the ground is hard and should take advantage of the improved conditions consequent on a shower to give his horse a schooling gallop. He should not forget to put bandages or boots on his horse's forelegs when schooling for fear of overreaches, and that it is the tired horse, as a rule, that breaks down.

Where the schooling fences are under the breaker's control the landing should be softened by a good dressing of tan or stable manure to save the horse's legs from jar. Coarse sawdust, shavings, elephants' dung, etc., are all useful for this purpose and so is old thatch.

Shows.

KASHMIR HORSE SHOW.

THE Annual Kashmir Horse Show was held at Gulmarg on the 17th August under the patronage of H. H. Sir Pratab Singh Bahadur, G.C.S.I., Maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir, Colonel Keith Erskine, C.I.E., Resident in Kashmir, and Sir David P. Masson, Kt., C.I.E. The Committee consisted of Colonel Egerton, Queen's Own Corps of Guides, Colonel Lang, 5th Cavalry, Colonel Gilbert, D.S.O., Royal Sussex Regiment, Colonel Lachlan, R.F.A., and Major Elsmie, 25th Cavalry, F.F., and the arrangements were in the hands of Major Ferguson Davis, C.I.E., D.S.O., 53rd Sikhs, F.F., as Secretary. The Show was a big success; entries were larger than at previous shows, the arrangements were excellent, the weather conditions perfect and the attendance a large one. The Frontier Force were "At Home" on the grounds and H. H. the Maharajah's band played during the afternoon. Appended is the list of awards:—

THE servants were abed, and the doctor answered the bell, himself. A coloured man stood on the steps holding a large package. "Is Miss Matildah, the cook, at home, sah!" asked the man. "Yes, but she has retired," returned the doctor. "Can I leab dis fo' her, sah." "Certainly," said the doctor. He took the bundle, from which flowers and were protuding, and after bidding the man good night carefully carried it to the kitchen, where he deposited it, paper and all, in a pan of water. The doctor thought nothing more of the affair until he heard Matilda's angry voice raised in conversation with the maid. "Ef I had de pusson heah," cried the cook, "dat put mah new spring hat in diser dishpan, I'd scald 'im for sho!"

THE EXPANSION OF THE "ZOO."

DESPITE the vast improvements in the London Zoological Gardens effected during the last few years, to which an article was devoted in our issue of 11th May, the authorities are by no means satisfied to rest content with what has been accomplished already. On the contrary, according to an apparently inspired article in the Times of 26th July, they have in view a scheme to lay out some portions of the Gardens after the fashion inaugurated by Mr. Carl Hagenbeck at Stellingen, and thereby permit the animals to lead a more or less complete open-air life amid surroundings which will permit their being seen by the public in something approaching their natural conditions.

The old-time fetish that tropical animals, when removed to temperate climates, require to be cossetted and nursed and kept in small and highly heated cages, has been knocked on the head for ever. For not only is such treatment totally unnecessary in order to preserve the health of the animals, but it has precisely the opposite effect; since such hot stuffy dens form ideal nurseries for all kinds of mischievous germs, and thus tend to produce the very opposite effect to that which was intended.

For years past Mr. Hagenbeck has been steadily developing his system of displaying his animals amid landscapes constructed to imitate as nearly as possible their natural surroundings, till he has attained the most remarkable and successful results. As is stated in the Times article, "he has shown how it is possible to lay out a wide artificial hillside on which not only do several separate groups of animals roam in apparent freedom, being confined only by sunk ha-has, but visitors pass freely along several hidden pathways, seeing the beasts, but out of sight of each other. Were this idea applied to a new site created by adding a fresh grant of land to that lately given, the public in Regent's Park would have an uninterrupted view of the whole of the beast-inhabited landscape as far as the highest crags which formed the background of the whole picture. Inside the Gardens visitors on the successive hidden pathways would in the same way see everything that lay in front of them on the open side and be concealed from their fellows on the other. Safety is secured by the width of the ha-has bounding each enclosure, and by an overhanging bank or line of rock; and this arrangement clearly requires a good deal of room, especially in the case of animals that can spring."

The proposal is a most attractive one and there is not the slightest doubt that it ought to be carried out. The difficulty, of course, comes when we have to consider ways and means, the two main desiderata begin more land and more money. And here we at once begin to tread on dangerous ground, for if the general public supplies these, it is quite certain that it will require a quid pro quo; most likely in the way of free or cheap admission, under certain conditions and at certain times to the Gardens.

The Zoological Society, as most persons are aware, is a private body, deriving a large portion of its income—and that the most stable portion—from the entrance fees and subscriptions of its Fellows. At present a large slice of the income is spent on scientific publications; and if the funds were to receive a national subsidy, there would very likely be difficulties in regard to the continuation of this item of expenditure. The Fellows, too, would be loth to relinquish their privilege of being the regulators of admission to the Gardens on Sunday.

In addition to a financial contribution, the public would also have to be asked to cede to the Society a considerable slice of ground adjacent to the south and western sides of the present Gardens for it is an absolute certainty that the alterations contemplated cannot possibly be carried out without such an accession of territory.

The Times suggests that "it might be possible for an arrangement to be reached by which the public were admitted on Sundays at a cheap rate to the half of the Gardens containing the new panoramas and the most popular beasts, while Fellows retained the right of sole entry to the other half, including the neighbourhood of their private building. The wide and increasing popularity of the 'Zoo' makes it probable that, if it were developed in the manner suggested, the right of Sunday admission would be generally regarded as more than compensating for the loss of the open park-land. Only by some such arrangement does it seem possible to secure the space essential for the maintenance of the work of the 'Zoo' in a way worthy of its national position, without prejudice to other claims."

Whether this would prove quite a satisfactory solution of a difficult and delicate problem may perhaps be doubtful; but, at any rate, it indicates the lines on which a settlement might be reached. And good will and a spirit of give-and-take on both sides, there ought to be no very serious difficulty in arriving at a satisfactory compromise. It must, however, be distinctly borne in mind that the essence of a compromise consists in each side giving up something which they value, and not, as is too often the case, that one side must sit still and yield all along the line, while the other seizes and enjoys the whole of the concessions.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The only feature about the Leger betting since last week is the shortening of Lycaon's price from 4 to 1 to 5 to 2. The favourite, King William, is at the same price, 11 to 8. Prince Palatine's position is also unchanged as he is still quoted at 6 to 1. All the others that were quoted in Calcutta last week have gone back. Tootles, who was at 8 to 1, is now quoted at 10 to 1. Pietri has gone back from 12 to 1 to 16 to 1 and the Frenchman, Faucheur, from that price to more than double the odds, his present figure according to the wire to the Handicap being 25 to 1. We doubt whether there was ever any justification for his being quoted at so short a price as 12 to 1. Seaforth is still quoted at 12 to 1, but Bannockburn, who was also at this figure last week, is now at 20 to 1. All these quotations and these fluctuations above noted go to show that it is very unwise for people so far removed from the scene of operations as this to back horses ante-post. It is obviously impossible for betting information in India to be of any real value unless it is wired daily, or we might almost say hourly, and consequently the wise speculator, who may have a special fancy he wants to back, will have an S. P. wager. Reuter's telegrams are not always a reliable guide and even the special wires to our contemporaries are not always up-to-date enough to give a really reliable guide to the market odds obtainable. The Handicap's quotations are given for what they are worth and as indicating prices which a firm of bookmakers was ready to lay in Calcutta on Friday last and nothing beyond this:—

11 to 8 agst. King William (Lord Derby) Lambton.
5 to 2 agst. Lycaon (Mr. J. B. Joel) Morton.
6 to 1 agst. Prince Palatine (Mr. T. Pilkington) Beardsley.
10 to 1 Tootles (Captain F. Forrester) Lewis.
12 to 1 Seaforth (Mr. D. McCalmont) Persse.
16 to 1 Pietri (Mr. L. de Rothschild) Watson
16 to 1 Bachelor's Hope (Mr. A. Lowry) Persse.

The rest of the quotations cannot at present have any special interest for anyone and until some indication is given of the probable starters the less advertised they are the better. The race is run a week hence and so far as the indications go the field does not look as if it would be a very big one. Mr. Joel is stated to have a very good opinion of Lycaon and is chronicled as having stated that he would beat King William wherever the pair finished in the race. This may be, we fear, an over-sanguine estimate, for even granting that Lycaon may be a much-improved colt, the present favourite's good public form this season cannot be disregarded and Lycaon has not shown as much brilliance in public as his rival. Mr. J. D. Allison, the "Special Commissioner" of the London Sportsman, gives Bachelor's Hope some sort of a chance on the strength of his victory in the St. James' Palace Stakes in which he very easily defeated Cherry King and Deluge, but the distance of this race is only a mile and it is not therefore, we should be inclined to think, any very reliable indication as to what he might do at Doncaster. Bachelor's Hope is a chestnut colt by Tredennis out of Lady Bawn and was defeated three times this season before he won this one mile race at Ascot, his three efforts being when he ran fourth in the Mount Felix Plate, 1 mile 60 yards, at Sandown to Bannockburn, Maxima and Deluge: eighth immediately behind Bannockburn in the Derby; and fifth in the King's Stand Stakes, 5 furlongs, at Ascot won by Hornet's Beauty. His public form is not therefore very encouraging and we do not see that his success in the St. James' Palace Stakes advances things very much. Mr. Allison, however, is a non-believer in the present favourite and every week his notes contain something new that he thinks may beat him. Cherry King is another one to which he gives an outside chance. He is trained by Charles Marsh and is by Cherry Tree—Fine Lady and earlier in the present year he won the Addleston Maiden Three-year-old Plate, 1¼ mile, at Kempton, beating Martingale II and John o'Lorne, but this does not make him out a Leger winner and public form is, after all, what we like to see. Mr. Allison says that Cherry King "has done a lot of good work" and is being specially readied for Doncaster. Our own idea is, however, that there is only one horse in the race that has given any really solid public assurance of merit and that is King William.

Pillo's success in the Great Ebor Handicap, 1¾ mile, at York was foreshadowed as being within the range of practical politics by his victory on the Northumberland Plate, 2 miles, at Newcastle in which he beat Kilbrony who was giving him only 6lb. and also by his being greatly fancied for the Goodwood Plate (2 miles 3 furlongs) in which he was beaten by the outsider Ignition. He nevertheless started at a very nice price, 100 to 12 being obtainable about him right up to the start. He is recorded as having had no difficulty at all in beating Major J. D. Edwardes' Claretoi who was ridden by Whalley and started at a very outside price and Mr. W. Astor's Mirador who was only a short head behind Claretoi. Pillo is a six-year-old by Raeburn out of Golden Horn and is owned by Mr. James Buchanan of Epsom Lad and Black Sand fame. Mr. Buchanan's first successful speculation in race horses was Little Red Rat, and shortly after that he, in 1901, bought Epsom Lad from Lord Rosebery and with him won over £20,000 in stakes alone, his victories including the Princess of Wales' Stakes, Eclipse Stakes and Kempton Park Stakes. Black Sand won Mr. Buchanan the Cesarewitch and the Jockey Club Cup. Mr. Buchanan then trained with Major Edwardes but Robinson has had his horses of recent years. Pillo ran well both as a two-year-old and a three-year-old, in the later season winning the Great Northern Handicap, 1½ mile, beating Hanover Square, Turbine, Old China, etc.; the Durdans Plate, 1½ mile, at Epsom and the Gold Vase (2 miles) at Ascot in which he defeated Wuffy. He therefore gave evidence early in his career of his capacity to stay. He did not run at all as a four-year-old and last season he was out six times and only won once. He ran second to Procope in the Burton Welter Plate, 1½ mile, at Derby, also in the Caledonian Hunt Cup, 1 mile 5 furlongs, at Ayr, to Avernus, the only other runner, and was beaten a head. At the same meeting he won the County Cup, 1 mile 5 furlongs, beating Dinnet and Slounston. Later in the year at Manchester he ran second in the Delamere Handicap, 2 miles, to Clarenceux, Eey Falo was third, Golden Lily, Last Call next, and six others ran. It is in contemplation to send him to the stud at the end of this season and beautifully bred as he is, as he gets St. Simon one side and Bend Or the other, he is bound to make his mark. He is bred to stay as his dam Golden Horn is out of Yashmak by Mogador by King Tom by Harkaway out of Pocahontas and Yashmak's dam Disappointment is by Macaroni. Golden Horn is by Bend Or (Doncaster—Rouge Rose) and therefore gets such great mares as Ellen Horne, Alice Hawthorne (dam of Thormanby) and Pocahontas in her pedigree. On the sire's side also Pillo gets the great jument base ladies in much profusion and Martha Lynn, Mrs. Ridgeway, Merope (dam of Flying Duchess dam of Galopin herself by Voltaire out of Velocipede's dam), Pocahontas twice, etc., and it would be difficult to fault him as a sire for stayers. Mr. Buchanan has his stud farm at Lavington, Petworth, Sussex, and amongst other stallions already there he has Black Sand (Melanion —Sanda) and Diamond Stud (Diamond Jubilee—Dame d' Or).

The matter of the Bombay Government's interference in the control of racing in Western India and also of the private affairs of the W.I.T.C. has advanced a step or two further during the past week. The W.I.T.C. having failed to obtain any satisfaction from the Government of Bombay and finding all their submissions and arguments met by an uncompromising negative have taken the matter up to the Imperial Government and have also appealed, under advice, to the Secretary of State for India in Council. The W.I.T.C.'s memorial to H.E. the Viceroy, protesting against the contemplated legislation to control racing reached Simla on the 28th August. The Stewards have appealed on two main points: (1) the curtailment of the racing dates, (2) the Government control of the Club's totalisators, but they have also very fully and very ably set out their case and shown what small consideration the Stewards were accorded by the official deputed by H.E. the Governor of Bombay to meet them. The Stewards have concurred with H.E. Sir George Clarke as to the desirability of abolishing bookmakers or, at least, they have not opposed him but they have further urged that "bucket-shop" betting, i.e., betting off the course over which the W.I.T.C. have no control should likewise be abolished. The Stewards do not say so in so many words but we gather that their private opinion is, that if these "bucket-shops" were done away with and betting on the race-course by bookmakers were continued, enough would have been done to check the "demoralising effect" upon the population of which H.E. the Governor has spoken. Everyone knows of course that racing in India will not thrive without the bookmaker, for there are very few owners who can afford to race and not bet, and if we kill the owner, we kill racing. The totalisator is not a means of betting that is of any avail to the heavy bettor and the reason is that the ready money betting public pace H.E. Sir George Clarke is not a sufficiently large one to make totalisator dividends big enough to be remunerative. In the case of an outsider winning the advocates of that system of gambling have their opportunity of pointing with pride to the long price the machine lays to a Rs. 10 note, but these coups come very seldom and the average price to a moderate stake is poor indeed. This thing has been tried in Calcutta and proved a rank failure and it is not likely to be any more successful in Western India where the race crowds are not any bigger, if as big as we get here. The Stewards of the W.I.T.C. in their submission to the Local Government pointed out in a very able and succinct note how well controlled was the Ring. To quote their note :—

"The following are our measures for exercising control over betting in our enclosures.

(1) Every bookmaker has to apply for a license before he can bet, and such license is only granted after a careful examination of the applicant's credentials.

(2) Betting is not allowed previous to the commencement of a day's racing. To ensure this each bookmaker's book is sealed before the racing begins, and at the end of each race, every column in each book is again stamped, with a view to the prevention of bogus bets being subsequently included.

(3) At the close of a day's racing, all bookmaker's books are submitted to the Secretary's office where a close scrutiny is made of all the betting. The surest proof of any 'ramp' is to be found in the betting, especially if bets have been 'booked' in contradistinction to cash bets.

(4) Bookmakers, in order to claim recovery of debts through the medium of the Stewards, must report their defaulters within one month of the close of any meeting, and such defaulters are posted and warned off if their debts are not discharged within a further two months.

"This is a decided check on reckless gambling. In the first place bookmakers are not prone to bet heavily with persons of limited capital, and the fact of all defaulters being warned off is an equal restraint on the other side in the same direction.

"The proof of the absence of any unlimited gambling may be seen in the very few cases of defaulters which occur and the majority of these settle in time.

(5) Cash betting only is allowed in the 2nd Enclosure.

(6) Bookmakers making bets on credit with officers of rank junior to a Major in the Army or Captain in the Navy cannot, in the event of default, claim the protection of the Stewards.

(7) All betting disputes are carefully considered by the Stewards.

(8) Any suspicion of malpractice on the part of bookmakers, such as collusion with Owners, Jockeys and Trainers, etc., is dealt with promptly and summarily by the Stewards.

(9) Any persons betting and suspected similarly of collusion with Owners, Jockeys, Trainers, etc., are warned off. Quite lately we have dealt in such a manner with a gang of punters from Australia.

"It will be seen that so far as the Turf Club is concerned within its own powers and limits, its control is sufficient and is very strictly carried out. Indeed, it may be safely asserted that the Western India Turf Club has laid down stricter rules to control betting and carries out its supervision of the same in a more drastic manner than any other existing Turf Club."

THERE are, however, a good many owners in Western India as the W.I.T.C. say who are opposed to the bookmaker and think that to punish him for his often very cramped prices he should be cast forth and given a term of banishment. On the question of control, however, the Stewards make out a very strong case. However as they have given in to Government on this question there is nothing to be gained in labouring the point further so far as Western India is concerned.

THE chief points are those which are first enumerated, the curtailing of racing dates and the claim put in by Government to "run" the W.I.T.C. "totes." Curtailment of the racing dates is the proceeding which, to our, mind is the least justifiable. The Government have failed to prove any single one of their contentions and have declined to reply to the argument put forward by the Stewards.

"Supposing" said the Stewards "that the main idea is to put down gambling, why is racing proposed to be cut down to 20 days in all, why should we not be allowed 30 days, or even why should any be permitted at all. It appears to us that this measure has been inconsiderately conceived and without any regard to facts or such interests as are involved."

The point has been taken that if stopping gambling is the main thing for which H.E. Sir George Clarke is "out gunning" he somewhat stultifies himself by bringing in an Act to legalise it! This is a truly Gilbertian proceeding! What difference is there between one form of gambling and another? Are the people who play bridge and poker for high points to be left out or the people who gamble in the share market, or in any other one of the many forms in which gambling goes on? This great Janus Act will be a masterpiece of inconsistency!!

THE Stewards of the W.I.T.C. have every right on their side again in protesting against Government Control of the totalisators. The Government have said that they claim absolute right to say when, where and for how long betting by totalisators shall continue. This means that they claim to at any moment, step in and stop it altogether without a word of warning! In such circumstances it is hardly to be wondered if the W.I.T.C. demur. What guarantee have they that after having gone to the expense of purchasing the new type of machines, erecting the necessary buildings and so forth, Government will not render all this expenditure nugatory by stopping the machines? None whatever that we can see! The W.I.T.C. also very reasonably ask for one year's time within which to effect this very radical change in the system of race-course betting. To this request the Government have returned a curt refusal and have said that the new regime will come in force from June 1912. To again quote the Stewards' reply :—

"If Government insists on an acceptance in toto of its original terms, we can but give our opinion that the result will not only be a refusal but an amount of friction and discontent as will subsequently be very hard to smooth over. Perhaps it would be as well for us now to give our views of the original Government letter, so that there may be no misapprehension as to how it is likely to be received. The letter opens with statements regarding racing, betting and gambling which are not founded on fact and in support of which no evidence is furnished. We can show that although the Government states that it has for a long time past been considering the serious state of affairs, they have never in any shape or form approached or consulted with the Stewards as to how far the evils they complain of really exist, what measures the Turf Club takes for the management of such matters within its own jurisdiction, or what proposals, if any, the Stewards might wish to suggest towards an improvement of affairs. On the contrary, the Governor in Council, without taking any expert opinion such as we could offer him, proceeds to dictate terms to the

This policy of "obey or we shoot' is against all principles of fair play and we shall be surprised if this view is not taken by the higher authorities before whom the whole matter has now gone up.

THE S.S. Itonus with horses from Australia arrived in port on Tuesday afternoon and discharged her cargo at the docks.

WE much regret to learn that when War Cloud fell with Captain Meynell at Poona this popular soldier G.R. broke a leg. It is most unfortunate as it will, we fear, spoil the whole of the coming winter season for Captain Meynell. We wish him as speedy a recovery as the circumstances will permit.

THE entries for the Calcutta Monsoon Second Extra Meeting will be found at a later page. The lists are good ones and show that there is plenty of vitality still, but whether the Stewards will be constrained to extend the season beyond the Third Extra, already advertised, we are doubtful. The recent rain has given us the good going that we were entitled to expect earlier in the years and it is cooler now in September—the worst month in the whole year!—than it was at the so-called commencement of the rains.

CAPTAIN ORMOND WINTER, the well-known G.R., is coming to race in Calcutta this cold season, having been appointed to the command of the field battery at Barrackpore on attaining his majority. Captain Winter's many friends in this part of the world will be very glad to welcome him in their midst.

THERE was no racing in Calcutta last Saturday but the Annual Mounted Sports of the Calcutta Light Horse on the Ballygunge Maidan filled the gap very successfully. There was a large crowd of spectators and the proceedings were carried through without a hitch. Entries were big and all the events keenly contested while the excellence of the arrangements reflected much credit on the committee. The jumping competition which opened the programme was a very good show, only a few points dividing the leaders at the finish. Mr. Murray won on Desmond from Mr. Wilson on Swashbuckler and Mr. Mitchell on Juba. The Bucket and Ball Race was won by Miss Jenkins and Mr. Ballantyne with Miss Binning and Mr. Walker second. Miss Jenkins scored a second win later in the afternoon when she was partnered by Mr. R. A. C. Pugh in the Chatty Race. The Tournament Stakes—Gentlemen to take peg with a lance, lady to break a chatty—was won by Miss Binning and Mr. E. A. Souter. The V.C. Rescue Race was a test of horsemanship and proved a good contest, Messrs. Radmore and Allen won from Messrs. McLean and Marshall by two lengths. Seventeen came out for the Musical Chairs eventually won by Mr. Steele-Perkins. A Barebacked Race brought the proceedings to a conclusion, Mr. Bletsoe winning comfortably.

OUR Poona correspondent writes:—Though the opening event saw only three runners the rest were not at all bad, there being but few omissions. The occasion was the beginning of the Big Meeting, which was favoured with fine weather, but the attendance was not as large as we generally expect. Mr. Cecil Gray arrived by the mail on Friday and has returned to his duties, there being also newcomers from Calcutta, to fill up the gap in racing there.

The Yerrowda Plate, though only a hurdle race, did not come off without a fall. Two of Mr. Apear's were in, Sequent and Royal Scotland, both being out for the first time over jumps, and being the better stayer the latter was made favourite, Realm being the outsider. Sequent was made the pacemaker, and at the early jumps Royal Scotland appeared to gain. He was, however, rather impetuous at the take-off, and nearing the six furlongs he scarcely rose at all, coming down with fortunately no injury to Hayhoe. Sequent was full of running all the way, and though he allowed Realm to head him at the five he eventually won fairly hard held.

It was rather surprising to find Majesty left out of the Lilliputs, Abdul Malik being the stable supporter and of course being backed down to half money, Creditor and Rajput next at sixes with a nibble at Bay Middleton, who might have run close up but for getting a bad start. Happy Land showed them all the way to the turn, Creditor, Rajput and Abdul Malik being in pursuit. As they turned Creditor took over and his stable companion Sharar drew up outside, but just before the distance Abdul Malik was steered in between them, got through, and won comfortably. Rajput ran badly, but at the finish Bay Middleton came up for third money, there, however, being no place betting for three.

Next came the other extreme, round the course and distance, and one of the best things one could find on paper seemed to be old Precious, he being at odds on, Famous 9 to 2, Valens sixes and Tajilmulook eights. To begin with, the race was run slow, and this partly accounts for the bad upset. Urgent went out to make the running clear of the rest till in the straight, and may be said to have run one of his best races. Famous followed to the mile, where Valens passed him, Merrily handy, but the last named fell away from the five furlongs where the front two each had a clear lead. A furlong later Tajilmulook, who had been alongside Precious in the rear, began to move up, and as they turned he, Valens, and Urgent were practically level in front of Precious, Famous having dropped back and pulling up lame. A shout went up for Precious, but Tajilmulook never allowing him to get within striking distance won more comfortably than anyone could have anticipated.

The race of the day was, of course, the Trial Plate, there being fifteen runners with the exception, unfortunately, of Soultline. On recent running Tangaroa might reasonably have been a hot favourite, but after the first rush on him there came one for Cherry Hackle, who started at evens with Hilarity next shortest at sevens to these two. Aborigine, Cattaro, Last Call and Punt represented class, but none of them appears quite ready, the first and last of these being nearest fit. Dumella, who had to be led to the post, and Valiant gave a deal of trouble, the latter being badly left as he deserved! Tangaroa was first out, and, as he was never headed and won cantering, the race needs little description. The order of the first three, in fact, was unchanged all through from the first few strides onwards, Hilarity and Cherry Hackle following the leader, and next being Aborigine and Crossbred. Crossbred passed Aborigine in the last furlong, but could not disturb the first three.

In the mile and a quarter for new Arabs we were supposed to have a good thing in Aga, Steward giving nearly a stone being second in demand, Terror at sixes and the rest tens and more. The early running saw Dawood Beg take a clear lead, Burgomaster, Money Gold and Baloz prominent next, and at the mile Terror was with them. Mysore at the five led for a spell, but was passed by Terror and Money Gold, and at the bend Aga coming outside was hailed as the winner, Terror, however, held him safe and in a last burst was just able to keep to the good from Dawood Beg and Money Gold, the stable second string thus beating the favourite.

The same stable had a similar experience in the next, the 7 furlongs Maiden Plate, when Singer proved no better than Vazir, the two having no sort of chance with Abdul Malik, who was once more made an odds on chance. He drew none too good a position, but after Ashroff had led out, he shot away and came over to the rails a clear three lengths in front. Vazir, Ashroff, Order and Solitaire followed in line and joined by Mutrood at the half mile ran thus to the bend. Here Singer was seen outside but going none too well, and could only dead heat with Vazir badly beaten by Abdul Malik, who thus won both his races easily. This also gave Brown his second win, further strengthening his position at the top of the list, gained in the preceding extras.

HAZZA, the jockey, has had his license suspended for infringement of the rules relating to training work on the course.

JOCKEYS Northmore and R. Fraser have arrived from Calcutta, also the bookmakers Harding and Ducasse, but the latter will return in time for the 9th, though continuing business here.

THE Seventeenth Annual Horse Show of the Tollygunge Club is fixed for Tuesday, the 2nd January 1912.

THE Bombay Mounted Sports, which were to have been held on the 30th ultimo, had to be abandoned on account of the wet weather.

MR. LIONEL O. MUNN has won the Irish Amateur Golf Championship beating the Hon. Michael Scott by 7 up and 6 to play. Mr. Munn has now won the Irish Open Amateur Championship three years in succession: this year, last year and the one before that, a feat no other Irishman has ever accomplished. He is almost certainly the best amateur in Ireland at the present time, and is the great hope of the Emerald Isle in the matter of its golf.

A TEN-ROUND contest between Matt Wells, the British Light Weight Boxing Champion, and "Knock Out" Brown, a prominent American light weight, at New York on the 30th ultimo. The Britisher completely outpointed his opponent and eventually knocked him out.

THE last English mail brings us news of the death of Tom Thomas, ex-middle-weight Boxing Champion of England. He crossed the Great Divide on Sunday, the 13th ultimo, carrying with him the affection, esteem and admiration not only of his fellow Welshmen but of all who ever knew him. Thomas was born at Carncelyn Farm, Penygraig, South Wales, in 1880, and had a splendid record in the prize ring. He appeared at Wonderland in 1905 with an unbeaten record to meet Harry Shearing whom he knocked out in 3 rounds. He continued his victorious career and up to November 1910 he had fought 15 more contests and won them all, beating among others Charlie Wilson, Jack Costello (twice), Pat O'Keefe, Fred Drummond and "Tiger" Smith, the last named being well known in India some years ago. He was the holder of the Lonsdale belt for middle-weight championship of England but lost the title to Jim Sullivan who beat him on points in a 20-round contest at the National Sporting Club in November last. A return meeting was talked of but never came off and Thomas met Bandsman Rice in February this year. He seemed to have lost all his form for after having the worst of the deal he was disqualified on a foul in the eighteenth round. Thomas might have been even more famous had it not been for the persistent and repeated attacks of his life long enemy rheumatism, which frequently hampered his training.

REUTER wires the defeat of Hackenschmidt by Gotch in a match for the wrestling championship of the world at Chicago on the 4th instant. Gotch gained two successive falls, the first in fourteen minutes by application of the leg hold, and a new chancery hold. The second fall occupied 5 minutes 30 seconds, and was gained as the result of the toe hold. After the match Hackenschmidt said it had been a fair contest and that the best man had won. He was sorry, he said, that he could not make a better show.

MANY of our readers will remember Mr. C. R. D. Pritchett, who made such a big bid for the Lawn Tennis Singles Championship in 1910, only being defeated by Mr. F. N. Warden after a strenuous match in the final. Last year in company with Mr. C. J. Glenny he won the Gentlemen's Doubles at the Scottish Championships and, as will be seen from our English sporting letter this week, he again got into the final of the Doubles with Glenny, but was on this occasion defeated by Messrs. Clements and Dunlop.

MESSRS. W. LESLIE AND CO. of Calcutta have just issued a small Motor Car list which will be of great interest to intending purchasers. It represents at the moment most of the cars they have in stock, and each car is detailed. The object of the list is to let the up-country buyer know what he is buying without Calcutta inspection. All cars are brand new this year and the Chassis specifications are shewn on the overleaf. Messrs. Leslie and Company will be pleased to mail lists to all applying. They perhaps now carry one of the heaviest stocks of Motor Cars in India for trade purpose and the two makers for whom they are the sole agents need no recommendation, as the names "Belsize" and "Hotchkiss" are world renowned.

SNAKE-CATCHERS are men of valour and resource They handle a boa-constrictor twenty feet in length as easily, or almost as easily, as they handle a black snake. It is in Sumatra that they capture the pythons, and they accomplish it without much difficulty. They generally wait, if possible, until the snake is gorged, when he may be relied on to lie dormant for three or four months, and during that time to care very little what is done to him. If the catcher cannot wait for the snake to gorge himself, a box with the carcass of an animal in it is left in the jungle. The python butts the animal with his head, and then curls himself around it in the box. It is then secured and dumped into a bag or into another box suitable for shipping. These great reptiles have no intelligence whatever. When one gets loose the man grips its neck with both hands in a peculiar fashion, puts his foot on it a little lower down and has it under perfect control. But the grip has to be just the right kind, or it is a sad case for the hunter.

THE idea that wild animals in a state of captivity should be kept in an atmosphere corresponding to that of its native environment has received something of a shock at the hands of Dr. Chalmers Mitchell, Secretary of the Zoological Society. The climate, he says, from which a mammal or bird comes has the smallest possible relation to its variability in captivity. Both have the power of maintaining their internal temperature at a normal rate that varies within a narrow range notwithstanding the temperature changes in their surroundings. Not only can they endure considerable cold, but they are actually favourably affected by rapid and even considerable changes of temperature. All the cases of the successful treatment of mammals and birds in captivity are, he has found, those where the creatures had no artificial heat at all, or had constant access to the open air from their warmed shelters.

A HORSESHOE has always been regarded as lucky. Why? It is crescent shaped, and horses have always been looked upon as luck bringers, iron being regarded as a lucky metal. A horse's hoof placed under the pillow is yet regarded as a specific for any diseases in country places. We noticed the other day a curious intimation that Messrs. Mackie and Company, Distillers, Limited, the Proprietors of the famous "White Horse" Whisky, will supply a horseshoe of a White Horse free to anyone applying for same.

London Week by Week.

FRIDAY, 18th August 1911.

THIS is a tale of woe. Beyond the general strikes, the lawlessness in many of the big centres of trade and commerce, the frequent reading of the Riot Act, the idiotic attitude of the unwashed and submerged and the struggles of the representatives of "for-an-order" to protect life and property, I have practically nothing to write about. Mob law prevails. Every one is, or is apparently about to go, "on strike"—from Railway hands to jam factory girls—and discomfort reigns supreme. To my readers in India all these matters probably have no particular interest ; but to millions over here they loom large in the common task and daily round. You will have heard something about it over the wires, but I must enlarge on it a little, for it is practically the only straw available for my weekly brick !

Hardly had those quaint and smelly creatures the Billingsgate fish porters and the carmen, whose capers I referred to last week, condescended to return to work, ere the Liverpool and Manchester ruffians began rampaging. London was saved from a famine and our daily bread seemed tolerably safe ; but now the threatened general railway strike comes along to disturb us. Personally, I can afford to remain absolutely cool under railway strikes and short provisions ; I have no occasion to travel and have always my cycle in reserve if the worst happens, while the shortage in beefsteak and bacon is not apt to worry one whose long residence in the East, and much jungle experience, has taught him to sustain life fairly well on other staples on which there is not likely to be a run. I have provisioned my little garrison with food stuffs the average Britisher wots not of and I can hold out almost indefinitely against short commons and inflated prices and keep smiling while my neighbours are in the depths of depression. But this by the way. The fact remains that we are having a very bad time and to trace it back to its real cause, we must surely admit that it all comes about by a weakening of authority, a Government cursed with labour members, and the deplorable policy of putting the common herd out of its place by educating it, by encouraging jackdaws to strut in peacock's feathers and asses to don lion's skins.

To my mind, so far as in my poor, uninstructed way I am able to project it to the survey point, it is the all-round weakening of authority in every form that is the feature of our present emergency. Upon the maintenance of constituted authority all order and all liberty rests. You cannot weaken any girder in the complex cantilever system of a bridge without weakening the whole structure. You cannot weaken any portion of the system of authority, social, political, or religious, without loosening the whole structure. When the constitutional prerogative of a King is assailed by his Ministers, there is a general relaxation of the interrelated organisation, and the vanboy defies the authority of his master. When the House of Commons weakens the authority of the Second Chamber, it weakens also its own authority over the people whom it is its task to govern. When a Minister applies to high politics the low appeal of violent and angry vituperation, he sets in movement forces that express themselves in violent deeds about dock gates. The vengeful spirit introduced into the national politics sinks down and down, through the series of smaller interests, till it expresses itself in the curses and threats and violence of a mob at a factory gate.

Deliberation and debate, compromise and conciliation, respect for the opinions and interests of others, are disappearing from parliamentary politics, and in our present Labour conflicts we find the men of discussion and negotiation, the real Labour leaders, who are capable of urging the claims and just rights of the labourers with some regard to the rights and necessities of the employers, displaced by the men who have no capacity beyond that of inciting revolt. When the Government, in order to conciliate one rebellious section, accepted the dictatorship of Mr. Redmond, they justified and occasioned the revolt of another section that established the dictatorship of Mr. Tillett. Cattle raiding in Connaught and the overturning of provision wagons in Bermondsey, are similar manifestations of the force upon which rests the new dictatorships to which the Government of Great Britain have surrendered.

When no man knows, least of all any one of the strikers or any one of the "leaders" who have become the followers of every side-wind, what is to happen next, it is impossible to write with any confidence of the general industrial situation. Every optimist is entitled to hope for the best. Every prudent person does wisely to prepare for the worst. Labour is utterly out of hand, and the strike mania, allied with the worst kind of hooliganism, is threatening a positive state of rebellion in all the great cities. The whole sorry business has now passed the limits of any ordinary industrial dispute, and no public sympathy is now enlisted on the side of the wage-earners who will neither work nor allow others to work. The gross intimidation which is the worst feature of these strikes has cost the strike movement any sympathy which may have belonged to it. It is no exaggeration to say that half the men who have struck have been compelled to leave their work by sheer terrorism. In case after case the men wish to go on working and earning their wages under conditions with which they are perfectly satisfied. But they are forced to "strike" because they are overawed by the threats of the pickets which do their "peaceful" persuasion at the bidding of paid agitators under the sanction of a disastrous law. Thus freedom has been openly mocked and individual liberty has been suppressed to the undoing of the community.

Ideal weather marked the inauguration of the Twelfth in most districts last Saturday morning, and the season promises to be a good one. In the Annandale district of Dumfries-shire, where some of the best moors in the South of Scotland are situated, sportsmen were early astir. The moors in this district have seldom been better stocked with grouse, the weather having been altogether favourable for young birds, and a record yield is predicted by the keepers.

Not for over twenty years have the prospects been brighter in Central and North Perthshire. Throughout the season all kinds of game have done well, and the grouse wintered better than they have done for years. They nested three weeks earlier than usual, the hatching-out was good, and now a splendid stock of birds is on the moors. There are no signs of disease and barren birds are few. The hills are in grand condition, and by lunch time the early sportsmen had secured good bags.

Despite a severe thunderstorm overnight, the weather cleared early on Saturday morning, and sportsmen were soon abroad on Vale of Leven and Loch Lomond side of the moors. The birds are reported more numerous than last year.

Sport opened on the Aberdeenshire moors under rather dull conditions as regards weather, but the prospects of good bags are hopeful. The hatching season was the most favourable for years, and as yet there has not been the slightest sign of disease. Among the earlier consignments were boxes from Balmoral shootings to Buckingham Palace. The rush to the moors has been almost unparalleled.

Reports from the Derbyshire moors are excellent. The birds are more plentiful than for many years past, but the season has made them wild and more difficult to approach than is usually the case. The number of guns in the Peak district is far in excess of last season.

The Twelfth opened throughout North Wales in splendid weather, the sportsmen were out early on the moors, where the birds are unusually numerous, strong on the wing, and in excellent condition. Rarely has the season opened with such brilliant prospects. Lord Penrhyn and large parties shot over the moorland around Bettws-y-coed and the Arenigs and in various parts of Carnarvonshire and Merionethshire. The Earl of Powis and a large party had good shooting on the extensive moors of Montgomeryshire, which were shot over last year by King George. In Denbighshire there were large parties, including those of Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, Colonel Wynn Edwards, Lord Kenyon, Lord Harlech, and Lord Trevor.

On the South Yorkshire moors sportmen generally preferred to suspend opening the season till early this week, and Saturday witnessed a very inactive Twelfth. Where shooting took place the conditions were ideal. Though the birds were slow in rising they were strong and provided fine sport.

"Wonderland" a Whitechapel boxing saloon which held an unique position among London's amusement halls was destroyed by fire on Saturday afternoon. Only the bar, in the immediate front of the building facing the Whitechapel Road, remains of the famous hall. The boxing stage, on which "Pedlar Palmer" so often appeared in his palmy days, and the whole of the main building fell a prey to the flames, which also did considerable damage to the adjoining East London Palace of Varieties.

Latterly "Wonderland" has been a picture palace on six nights of the week, and this fire is stated to have had its origin in an explosion in the lantern-box during a cinematograph rehearsal. A burst of flame followed, and in a few moments the first floor balcony was a mass of flames. In response to a district call, a force of 140 firemen with 12 steamers and 3 motor-pumps were quickly battling with the flames.

By this time, however, the roof was falling in and the first floor of the adjoining music-hall was on fire, while a strong south-west wind was threatening to carry the flames across narrow Whitgate Street to a huge Rowton House block. On the other side of "Wonderland" another large block, the Great Eastern buildings, were also in danger. In the result, fortunately, the damage was confined to "Wonderland" and the East London Palace. The total damage is estimated at £15,000.

"Wonderland" has had a strange career. Originally a Volunteer Drill Hall, it subsequently became a Menagerie. Fifteen years ago "Pedlar Palmer" opened it as a boxing saloon. Many famous fights have taken place under its roof.

BIG GAME SHOOTING IN UPPER BURMA.

In the preface to this book, Major Evans deems it fit to make a few remarks as to why he considered it necessary to publish a work on shooting in Upper Burma. We don't think any apology was due and consider there is room for many more works of this nature, as although Major Evans writes most fully of his adventures with the various animals he has come across, yet different men have different experiences and hold different views and unless these various views are aired we can never hope to get a thorough knowledge of the habits, etc., of our game animals. It is through such men as Sanderson, Forsyth, Kinloch, Evans, Burton and Inverarity that we already know so much about the larger game of this country, if other sportsmen naturalists would only come forward and give us their experiences we should know more about the drinking and other habits of which as yet our information is very meagre.

In the book under review much information is given about the elephant, gaur, banting and thamin, but unfortunately the author had rough luck with rhino, never having seen one in a wild state; but we trust at some future date, he may be more successful and that we will see in a second edition of this work full notices of the various rhino obtainable in Burma.

Major Evans is quite correct in what he writes about the height of elephants, their attaining to over 10 feet in stature. Mr. Robinson of the Forest Service shot one at Sakna which measured 10 feet 3 inches at the shoulder. The measurements of the forefeet were:—Right forefoot 5 feet 1½ inches and left forefoot 5 feet ½ inch. The tusks of this elephant weighed 97lbs. Taking these authentic measurements into consideration and from Major Evans' measurements of the forefoot of his big elephant, we have no doubt the latter measured between 10 feet 8 inches and 10 feet 9 inches. On elephant, gaur, etc., the author advocates the use of a double barrel high velocity ·400 rifle taking 60 grains of cordite or its equivalent in axite, preferably the latter and carrying a ·400 grain bullet, solid nickel for elephants and taking shots at bison, etc., and with soft nosed bullets for shoulder shots at the latter. The weapon Mr. Robinson killed his large elephant with was a ·577 express but he believes in still heavier weapons for this kind of game. There is no doubt that a heavy weapon must give a greater shock to the animal struck and if he is not crumpled up by it, he is fairly put hors de combat simply by the force and pure weight of the missile. Major Evans, however, proves the efficacy of his favourite weapon and doubtless it is a much handier one to carry and wield than the heavier bore, but naturally often requires more shots to take effect. In this chapter on elephants as well as in others much useful information is given as to the time of year and what districts the sportsman should go to get good sport with the various game, this should save the intending visitor much time and trouble.

A most interesting part of this chapter is that which deals with rogue elephants. The author doesn't consider a rogue any more dangerous to tackle than any other; the only difference being that a rogue charges on sight, which, as he says, allows one an opportunity to put in a good head shot. Herds are, if anything, more dangerous, as one has to look out for squalls from cows with calves and in a stampede there are so many more animals to contend against. He advises, should a herd charge down on one, to either get behind a bamboo clump if handy, or if in the open to stand perfectly still; this latter method, however good though it doubtlessly is, will require more nerve, we fancy, than the ordinary man is blessed with. Rogues, he considers, become rogues on account of some wound, either caused by a bullet or other means, and it is the continual and nagging pain which makes these animals morose and savage and no doubt this is the case.

The gaur (Bos gaurus) is in Burma, we are told, principally a hill animal, and the author notices, as do other writers, the great ease and speed with which this animal can ascend or descend steep places. He goes deeply into the interesting subject as to why some animals lead a solitary life and as his theory appears to be a most plausible one we give an extract.

"It is not in the nature of things to suppose that a magnificent bull in his prime. . . . can be ignominiously driven from a herd. No, he gets ousted when a youngster by the lord of the herd. Thereafter he goes on his own, and in the course of years, when he feels his strength, he may rejoin the herd. . . . . for the time being. He in his turn, may be instrumental in turning out one or more youngsters to a solitary existence, and perhaps has a ding dong battle with the erstwhile leader of the herd and ousts Alec. When the breeding season is over, he resumes his solitary life, having got to like it. . . . . " This certainly seems to explain why both young animals and animals in their prime should both be found in a solitary state, though he does not believe that these animals, except when old age tells, continually live in this state.

We are also given an instance of a young bull which having evidently been driven out of his own herd, took up with a herd of domesticated mithun, knowing that he could easily dispose of any bull of that species, which tried to interfere with him. Blanford gives August and September as the usual breeding months in the peninsula of India, but Major Evans considers May, June and July as the season in Burma and that eleven months for the period of gestation is more or less correct.

One of the most interesting chapters in the book is that on the Banting (Bos sondaicus) or Tsaing of the Burmese. These animals are said to be extremely shy and keen of sight and hearing. They keep more to the plains than the gaur but are all the same no mean climbers. As with bison, solitary Tsaing are also to be found and the reasons given for the former taking to this mode of life also apply to the latter. Much of Major Evans' success both with bison and tsaing was due to his terrier "Dot," who was a staunch ally and never at fault when this game was at hand. She would take no notice of deer or other small game but when near bison or tsaing, to quote the author—"Absolutely mute, she quivers all over with suppressed excitement, standing with uplifted paw and staring hard in the direction from which she gets the scent."

The chapters on rhino, tiger, Malay bear, Burmese serow and Malay sambar are exceedingly short. Re the former, the author advises the sportsman to beware of going, if his time is limited, after rhino with only scant information as to the exact locality which holds them and we strongly advise him to take this good advice and save much disappointment. His experience with tigers and leopards was slight and the habits of these appears to be the same all over India. He however notes a most peculiar noise emitted by two tigers which was similar to the trompeting of an elephant and was evidently made by a pair courting.

We can confirm what the author writes about the sore on the sambar's throat having noticed it ourselves and always put it down to the rubbing of his throat against a tree. According to the author it is caused by a parasite for he doesn't believe in the rubbing theory, but if the animal doesn't rub that particular spot how is it that he always gets a sore there. It would be most interesting to know what causes this parasite to attack that special place as it does in all wild animals of this species irrespective of sex or age.

The deer which will most interest the reader is the Brow Antlered deer (Cervus eldi), the thamin of the Burmese, it being the typical deer of Burma. This deer is rarer now than it used to be and this is to be accounted for by their being indiscriminately shot at by everybody either white or black. We would strongly advise the powers that be to peruse this chapter, as Major Evans goes into a lengthy dissertation on the game laws and what they should be with regard to this special species. Everybody would deplore the extinction of this fine indigenous species but unless something is done to remedy the present state of things, a deer which used to be abundant will soon be as scarce, as the Kashmir stag (Cervus cashmirianus) is in that country. According to the author, the usual way of shooting these deer is from a bullock cart, of which they have no fear. When legitimate stalking is had recourse to they are found to be wily animals and well worthy of the trouble necessary to get within range. This is a plains animal and the jungle it most frequents is zebu jungle a stunted species of plum, on the leaves and berries of which they feed greedily."

The chapters on tracking, rifles and ammunition, and camp equipment give much useful advice and coming from a sportsman of Major Evans' standing are worth being carefully perused and acted on. There is also an appendix of shooting localities with the game likely to be come across in each and also a glossary of Burmese words which will prove most useful. The illustrations of horns and mounted heads are excellent. When we state that the work is published by the well-known firm of Messrs. Longmans Green and Company we need say nothing more in praise of its general get up. We strongly advise all our readers to invest in a copy.

HUNTING THE MOUNTAIN LION.

On the 4th of November, 1907, my partner and I started out from Revelstoke, B. C., to locate a new trapping ground. Having been in the Selkirk Mountains for some years, we decided to get into some country where there was less snow. So we struck out for the Osoyoos district, about one hundred miles south-west from Revelstoke by railroad. From there we took a stage forty miles east, and made for the north fork of Cherry Creek, a good-sized stream bordered with giant cedar trees and Douglas fir. We left the larger portion of our supplies with an old placer miner who had been working on the creek since the early seventies and pulled out with a hundred-pound pack apiece, about five miles up the creek, where we pitched our first camp. No snow had fallen up to this time, and we hadn't seen any signs of fur or game except numerous tracks of deer.

The next day we started out to look over the country for more signs. We hadn't gone very far before we saw a great many signs of bear. Thorn-apple trees on all sides were broken down where the bears had been feeding on the thorn-apples. We paid very little attention to these signs, because we were satisfied the bears had "denned up" for the season, but we decided to return to the settlement and bring in some grizzly bear traps so as to have them ready for the spring, when the bears should come out of their dens.

The next day we saw many signs of beaver and a very large dam that was not quite completed, but, with a long close season, we left them alone. The next day we took another direction, and from the start saw old and freshly eaten carcases of deer. By examining the ground around we came to the conclusion that they must have been killed by wolves or mountain lions. Neither my partner nor I had ever trapped a mountain lion, and things began to look brighter when we thought of the 7 dollars 50 cents bounty the British Columbia Government pays for each lion. We made up our minds to build a cabin near by for the winter and try our luck. We saw a couple of ermine, and that was a pretty good sign of more fur being in the neighbourhood, and in the three days' travel we saw about twenty black-tailed deer, so we were sure of all the fresh meat we wanted. We started to pack in a few things we needed right away from what we had left with old Billy the placer miner, and began work on the cabin.

Everything went smoothly for a couple of days when it began to rain and snow a little. This kept up for about a month, and we could do very little work on the cabin. If we got wet we had to go to bed wet. Our tent was very small, only 6 by 7, and as our wearing apparel was limited we could do very little but sit around the camp and call the weather pet names. By this time we had shot four deer, and presently the weather improved so that we could get on with our work. Everything went well till we started to chink the cabin. My partner, W. Andrews, was making the door, and I was splitting up some timber for chinks. When trying to split a very thin piece of cedar, the axe slipped, and I made a very bad cut on my wrist about two inches long, the axe striking the bone and then glancing down. That put a stop to the building operations. I pulled back the flesh, but it wouldn't stay altogether. It left a gap of about a quarter of an inch. We went over to our camp to size up the situation. The first thing we found was that we had no salve of any kind, so we decided that my partner should sew up the cut. He got out my needle-case for the flesh needle and some thread, but the needle that I had packed hundreds of miles on my back for the last ten years was gone—the only time in all that period that I needed it. There was nothing in that line but two buckskin needles, and they were almost as thick as baled hay wire. We took one of them, however, and, putting it into the fire, bent it into shape. Then my partner, who was more of a wood butcher than a surgeon, began to sew me up. His work was fierce—at least, it felt that way—but in about half an hour he said "There you are; just as good as ever." I sent him out to look for some soft fir gum, with which I smeared the cut and pasted on a piece of cloth.

After a venison lunch, Andrews decided to go over a short line of traps we had set upon a small stream. There was nothing for me to do but stay in camp, so after he left I rolled up in the blankets and began to think the situation over—not a very pleasant situation, either: no cabin built, bad weather setting in, and I badly crippled.

I hadn't been lying there more than a couple of hours when my partner came back. I think he must have been running, for he pushed back his hat and rubbed the perspiration from his forehead, jammed his hand down his pack sack, and pulled out an ermine. I asked him if that was all. "Well, no," he said, "I guess not! The grizzly trap is gone." By this time I began to get interested.

"Did you follow the trail?" I asked.

"Yes," he replied; "it went down a hill, and I followed it until I got to a thicket."

"Did you see what was in it?" I asked.

"No," he said, "I didn't go any further, and I won't go alone."

We talked it over, and I agreed to go with him the next morning if I felt able. We came to the conclusion it must be a mountain lion, but were very much surprised that he could pack off a seventeen and a-half pound trap and a hemlock sapling about twenty feet long and five inches thick at the butt which we had for a toggle. We were satisfied he could never get out of it, no matter how big he was. After supper we sized up our fur—seven ermine, one otter, one mink, and two lynx, and probably a mountain lion in the morning—not too bad considering the weather and the number of traps we had set. We went to bed early in preparation, I with my wrist aching very badly.

Luckily, I had brought my camera along, and, though but a novice at the business, I was very anxious to have a good, clear day, so I could take a snapshot. However, when we awoke in the morning it was cloudy, and a fine rain was falling. After waiting awhile to see if it would clear up, I strapped on my 45 Colt's six-shooter, not being able to use my rifle, and started out. We took a round-about way to where we had some poison out for wolves, which were very numerous about here, and discovered one of the baits gone, but could find no wolf near by; so we headed for the big thing, and got there after a half-hour's walk. Sure enough, it was just as described. The ground was torn up, and a blind man could almost follow the trail. Small trees an inch and a-half through were chewed in ribbons. It looked more like the work of a grizzly to me than anything else I had ever trapped, not having trapped a mountain lion before. We went down the hill to the thicket where my partner had quit the trail the day before. Here we paused for a moment, when Andrews got behind me and said, "After you, my dear Alphonse!"

We followed the trail for about fifteen minutes, around trees, over and under logs, and through a swamp, keeping a sharp look-out all the time, as the brush was very thick. As we were nearing two large cedar trees, a terrible scream rent the air. I think there were at least eight million goose pimples on my back at once! When I looked round, I saw my partner holding on to his hat with both hands to keep it from falling off. I got down on my hands and knees, and could see a huge mountain lion, about fifty feet from us, looking round one of the trees. He was gone in an instant, but how many people there are, who, while taking the greatest pains to keep their bodies clean, yet neglect the most important part—their mouth and teeth. This is much to be deplored when it is considered that the teeth have such important functions to perform, the chief of which is the proper mastication of the food, on which the conduct of the digestive organs so largely depends. If, therefore, the teeth are not kept clean and free from decay, the food which should go to nourish and strengthen the body cannot be digested as it should be. How do we set about attaining this desired end? The problem has been solved in an absolutely satisfactory manner, by rinsing the mouth with the antiseptic dentifrice Odol, which is the best dentifrice and mouth-wash that science has yet invented, and the only one recognised by the scientific world that will protect the teeth from decay, and which acts not only during the time of application but for hours after use.

showed up again shortly between the trees. I could then see that he was well caught in the trap, and I walked up to him. When we got near to him he began to spit at us just as a cat does when it shows fight. He opened his mouth several times, showing a good set of teeth. It was too dark where he was to take a photo, for it had begun to rain and snow a little again. However, I snapped two pictures of him in the trap, and then shot him through the heart. He died almost instantly, without a groan.

We took him out of the trap and packed him in a more favourable place for a photo. He was very heavy, weighing at least 175 pounds. After taking a snapshot we skinned him, and next day stretched the skin. It measured six feet wide and nine feet long. The Government, as I have said, pays, 7 dollars 50 cents bounty on mountain lions, and I think it is little enough considering the number of deer, beaver, and other game they destroy. No doubt one of these animals will kill more deer in a season than twenty hunters.—CHARLES H. DEUTSCHMANN in Rod and Gun in Canada.

LETTER No. VIII.

DOGS FOR INDIAN SHOOTING.

In the hills for pheasant and cock shooting, dogs are indispensable, and in the plains they can be made very much more useful than is generally admitted. Order that excellent book from your book-seller, "General Hutchinson's Dog Breaking," Murray & Co., and train your dog by it and you will have a great and added interest in your shikar. English dogs are all very well in the hills but are, as a rule, too delicate for Indian wear and tear in the plains. They must summer in the hills and often afford more anxiety than sport and pleasure. A mongrel—called the pie-dog in common parlance—makes a useful and excellent shikar dog. He is very hardy, has a capital nose, is very affectionate and does not lack character. Most of the training under General Hutchinson's plan is carried out in your house, and as kindness alone is used, the progress made is remarkable, even by the smallest pup. Many a pleasant half hour is spent in preparing your pupil for the field, a great part of the training taking place as you have your tea and toast in the morning. For hill shooting a strong, coarse, long legged dog is the best, as he stands the extremely hard work much better than any short legged variety, and will not be so tuckered up by having to cut his way through the interwoven masses of dead broken fern, etc., as will his short legged companion. It is a good plan to have four such dogs if possible and to use a couple turn and turn about. Each dog must have a broad iron collar as a protection against leopards, and it is good to always have a couple of ball cartridge handy as well as a rifle. As soon as a dog is collared by a leopard all hands should give chase shouting their loudest after the brute, this will usually induce him to drop his prey; as a rule the leopard kills his game by holding its neck in his jaws and thus suffocating it. The process takes three or four minutes. If your pursuit is prompt, your dog will come back to you fearfully cowed, with two big fang holes in his throat and smelling horribly of leopard. The holes should be washed at once with antiseptics, and above all, kept open until all discharges cease. If this latter precaution is not observed, the head will swell up to an enormous size and the dog must die of blood poisoning. The wound should be treated on the ground. Here your reserve bag and its contents comes in (as it does if your dog is cut by a pig). In this event if the bowels have not been cut they will protrude. Place the dog on his back, hold up the bowel until the contents have run back, then replace inside the wound, apply boracic acid powder (not carbolic) sew up into single stitches and have the dog carried home in a blanket strung on a pole. Keep the wound clean with antiseptic and the dog will recover.

Many dogs unless specially trained to acknowledge woodcock and solitary snipe, pass over these birds in a very disappointing manner. So as soon as possible break your dogs into these birds and encourage them to find and retrieve them, making a great fuss over their success and rewarding them handsomely for good work. They must also be taught to leave khakar (barking deer), musk deer, as well as monkeys and apes and pine martins severely alone. Many a fine dog has paid the penalty with his life for chasing these seductive animals, and given the skulking leopard his chance.

All burrs and spear grass seeds must be removed from dogs' coats as soon as possible. The latter are said to cause the death of sheep in Kulu and often result in very nasty sores and abscesses. If the great advantage of having a good retriever—be he fox-terrier, mongrel or any more orthodox description of dog—was fully realized, most men would engage in the pleasant pursuit of snipe, quail, partridge and duck much better equipped, and few lost birds would mar the delights of a good day's sport. For snipe when birds are lying well, and for lost birds a good dog is invaluable. I have shot over dogs for many years and it is extraordinary the numbers of birds they get for one, birds which would otherwise not be added to the bag. The feeling that one has left behind not a single dead or wounded bird ungathered adds very much to the pleasures of retrospect. A dog is, of course, invaluable for retrieving duck and geese, but it is very desirable before sending your dog into strange waters to be quite sure that no muggers inhabit the tank, river or jhil. It is a dreadful nightmare to see a snub-nosed brute of a saurian sailing fast towards your favourite dog, who will in all probability, if he catches sight of the reptile's head, make straight for it, despite your frantic efforts to attract his attention to you. The only course under these circumstances is to run away from the water's edge shouting to your dog. It is very little satisfaction to put a bullet into the mugger's brain after waiting for a shot, it may be for days, after your dog is lost to you, lost because you omitted to take proper care of him.

Many lives are sacrificed every year to the weeds that float, often under the surface of the water, in many tanks and jhils. No duck or goose is worth risking one's life for, or that of one's coolies. It is never justifiable to send a man or even a dog into a such water however innocent looking and often the shooter loses his life in attempting to save the coolie who should never have been allowed to go into the water. If you do get into weeds your only chance is to paddle like a dog. No, the game is not worth the candle, leave your bird to be blown in shore by the wind, and detach a man to wait for it, but lose the bird altogether rather than risk life. Beware of weeds and quicksands, said an old shikari to me, and neglecting his advice, I was once nearly done for in some fasan, and I have known many lives cut off for want of a little needful self-restraint.

Until one sees how simple a matter it really is in General Hutchinson's book, it is natural enough to regard the training of a dog as a very intricate and tedious business, to be only undertaken by keepers. A very short time is all that is necessary to impart the absolutely needful information, which will enable your dog to "Drop," to the shot, or, when he comes on birds, or when your right arm is held up, to obey a wave of your arm to give him his direction; to understand what "Tobo" and "Dead" mean; and with even this very limited amount of education he is a most useful and valuable aid. He comes to take the greatest pleasure and pride in retrieving and in all his other accomplishments. Under the most excellent and benign rule of the old general, he will prove daily a more intelligent and delightful companion and friend. A more easy or useful system could not have been devised, and that it is based upon the soundest principles no one who has experience of it can for a moment doubt.

TESTIMONIAL FROM SIR SAMUEL BAKER,
THE FAMOUS NILE EXPLORER.

Newton Abbot Devon.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

Truly yours, (Signed) SAML. W. BAKER.

It was worth getting up with the lark to enjoy a really cool experience at Nottingham on Tuesday. The breeze did not sink to rest as the sun began to roast us again, but remained to give a pleasant tinge to another bright afternoon, when with the holiday folk back to work, the attendance of the public was not so strong as on Monday, and the muster in Tattersall's and the club enclosures about the same. The hard going all over the country found it's perhaps direst outcome here, as it was early known that the card was virtually reduced to four races. Results.

What to do if Your Horse Pulls

THE KEY TO HIS MOUTH IS A RENSUM REIN.

Sir Gilbert East, Bart., wrote:—"You have found the key to my excitable mare's mouth. I have now the pleasure of riding an animal chock full of life, with complete control."

You have three courses open if you own a puller. You may go on using him, to your great discomfort; you may sell him, to your loss; or you may cure him, if you know how. I am a veteran horseman with a reputation to lose, and I stake it upon the assertion that in my "Rensum" Pamphlet I will show you how, for £1 1s. (the cost of a "Rensum" Rein), you may, without severity, cure the worst puller. The Pamphlet will prove to you that by a new method you may turn a confirmed puller into a snaffle bridle hunter, or polo pony. The "Rensum" Pamphlet will also show you how you may cure a rearer, kicker, or other vicious horse.

H. S. RENSUM, The Cottage, Yardley, Worcestershire, Eng.

WRITE TO ME

That I may advise. Describe your horse's fault and I will send you the

"RENSUM" PAMPHLET free.

If you order a Rensum Rein, with it will be sent, the fully detailed instructions for making or re-making a mouth on the simple Rensum method which cannot fail.

I prefer to use the "Rensum Rein" on the open half moon "Rensum Bit." The Rein and Bit together I will send for a guinea and a half.

Polo.

THE POONA OPEN TOURNAMENT.

Central India Horse vs. Poona.—The tournament opened on Monday last in the presence of a large gathering of spectators. The Central India Horse were too strong for the scratch team representing Poona, but the game was a hard fought one nevertheless. The final score was 9—5 in favour of the Central India Horse and they will meet the Inniskilling Dragoons, the only other entry, in the final this afternoon.

First Chukker.—Play was fairly evenly contested and the chukker closed without score.

Second Chukker.—Poona showed up at the start of this period but the Central India Horse cleared and Muhammad Bahadur got away but missed the flags. The Cavalry team continued to press and Fraser drew first blood. Very soon after Lucas equalised and Conker put Poona further ahead.

Third Chukker.—Play was in midfield till Fraser got away and equalised. Thereafter a sustained attack by the Central India Horse resulted in two more goals, scored by Fraser and Hewlett.

Fourth Chukker.—Fast galloping up and down. The Central India Horse hit a goal. Then Summers scored for Poona but before time was called Fraser added to the Cavalry team's score.

Fifth Chukker.—In this period Poona scored through Lucas, while Fraser and the Jemadar added to the regiment's score.

Sixth Chukker.—The Central India Horse hit a goal and Summers replied with one for Poona, who continued to play up but without further success, time being called with the score: Central India Horse, 9 goals; Poona, 5 goals. Teams:—

INTERNATIONAL POLO.

The following article, which we reproduce from the Breeder's Gazette (America), is written by a famous Texas authority on breeding, Mr. Wm. Anson. His views will be read with interest by all who are devotees of Polo.

"You have asked me for my impressions of the ponies used in the recent International Polo matches," writes Mr. Anson. "The term 'polo pony' is a survival of the days when the game was played on little fellows about 14 hands high. Neither in size, conformation nor breeding can the name apply to the mounts of the 20th century polo player. They are not even dwarf horses. They are full-sized horses on short legs, from 15 to 15½ hands high, low-striding, long-reaching blood horses up to 1750lb. or more, and capable of maintaining steeplechase speed for eight minutes without a pause.

"In England, where the 14-2 rule is supposed to be enforced, they use larger ponies than in America, where it is ignored. To be played in an English tournament a pony must possess a height certificate issued under Hurlingham Rules of Measurement; at five years old they are supposed to be full grown, and are registered for life. Many of their ponies come from Ireland, and most of these are bred by small tenant farmers owning one or two blood mares. The offspring, from a thoroughbred sire, get little grain, and generally have to pick up their own living. They are consequently backward and stunted. At five years they are measured and certified for life. Then they are put on good English oats, and commence to grow, possibly to a height of 15½ hands, but they still remain certified 14-2 polo ponies. It must be remembered that any 15 hand horse can be made to measure 14-2 at Hurlingham, and also that English Horse Shows do not recognise Hurlingham certificates as proof of height.

Wonderful Horseman.

"These big horses are not easy to play, and it is only the very best of them, such as we have seen on this side, which can be ridden with any degree of comfort. Many of the big handsome English ponies seen in ordinary tournament matches are bullheaded and hard-mouthed to a degree. English polo players as a class are wonderful horsemen, and they play ponies which would not be tolerated on this side. The members of the International teams were all heavy men and strong, but several times I noticed them using both hands to pull up, and in one or two cases they had to do some pretty hard jerking also.

"Mr. Edwards, who showed the best form on the English side and hit all the goals they made in either match, rode two genuine 14-2 ponies Pigeon, which alone of all their mounts showed indication of pony blood, and a small chestnut thoroughbred horse, a bright sorrel, the kind of animal one pictures when reminded that a one-time Grand National winner was only 14½ hands high. Mr. Edwards told me it was a tremendous relief to get on these ponies after riding the bigger horses. From what he said (and his ideas may be fairly accepted, since he was the most brilliant forward player of either team), there is no doubt that, while it may be necessary, on account of speed and weight, to use horses over 15 hands, their increased height and size are otherwise a detriment to the individual who uses them.

The Difference!

"Comparison between the English mounts of the two teams is uncalled for—a mere matter of the longest purse, a public subscription in England, the liberality of individuals in America. The American ponies used by Whitney's team were as good as the English ponies; had they not been they would have been left in the stables. About nine were used in the first match, and out of a total of nineteen ridden in Friday's game, seven were American-bred. Of these, three came from Texas—Conover, Whiterock, and Kingfisher—and four from California—Hobson, Miss Hobs, Bertha, and Polly. I spent an hour with 'Larry' Fitzpatrick, Mr. Whitney's manager, on Friday morning, and he showed me his best ponies, those which he expected would be ridden in the afternoon. On the day following the first game, a member of the English team had very kindly showed me all their match ponies, which were in Mr. Duncan's stables near Hampstead. On Sunday evening I had an opportunity of seeing their reserve ponies at Cedarhurst.

"On his active list Fitzpatrick places five California horses, the three Texans mentioned above, also Mohawk, one Virgina thoroughbred, one Australian, and two Argentines, besides the English ponies. Some of the California horses all of which are thoroughbreds or near thoroughbreds, showed to me strong indications of quarter-horse blood. I suggested this to Juan Fuentes, who came East in charge of some of them, and who had trained them. He told me that my surmise was correct, and said that I would find it to be so if I would communicate with their breeders. I am aware that well-bred Californians have been coming East for a good many years, but the success of this lot will, to my mind, inaugurate a new era in the selection and training of the very highest-class polo ponies in America. Fuentes has been quite successful with some of these ponies. He educates and trains them according to the Mexican method; he dispenses with the bit altogether, fastening his reins instead to the nose-band of a 'bosal.' I have ridden marvellously handy ponies in south-west Texas trained by Mexicans in this manner, but have never seen polo ponies so filled.

Milburn's Greatness.

"The Californians are of much the same type as the English horses, perhaps a trifle lighter in bone with a little less substance and quality. There are a number of the same class of racing-bred small horses in the West, especially in Texas; they are always put on the track at two years old, however, and so made unfit for polo. I saw one such Texas pony, Booger Red, win a six-furlong Galloway race at Belmont Park on Thursday; he was smaller than many of the polo ponies and could probably have distanced most of them in a straight race. There can be no possible profit to the dealer in handling such horses for polo at present prices, and it cannot be done except by men who are sporting enough and rich enough, to devote money to the purpose for their pleasure. Exceptions prove the rule, and while Fuentes may have successfully trained one or two ponies which had been raced, it is not generally possible to make them fit for fast polo. They may be taught to turn well and to act perfectly in a cantering game, but they will always take a lot of stopping when it comes to a fast straight run. Most of the ponies which are now taken East for polo have been broken and ridden for cow ponies, and so are fairly easy to handle.

Mr. Whitney's Trainer.

"A factor of extreme importance to the Americans, to which very little attention has been directed, was the marvellous condition of their horses. There is no doubt that Fitzpatrick is a perfect wizard. Being in England just after the 1909 matches, I heard and read a good deal of comment on his methods and the condition of his animals: both were a revelation to the English. It was most intensely interesting to go round with him on his morning inspection, which he had very kindly put off so that I could get to see the ponies stripped. This was quite a favour because, on the day of an international match, the horses are as carefully guarded and handled as so many Derby candidates. As we came to each animal he had something to say about its nature, its stable manners, its habits, or its peculiarities, showing an intimate knowledge and sympathy which only a true horse lover can appreciate. And after the match was won, when the victorious four were being feted, when the trophies had been presented, when Governor Dix was extending his congratulations, this man, who had such a large share in the victory, stood in his shirt sleeves on the edge of the crowd, leaning on a polo mallet, unnoticed, but with a look of infinite content on his countenance."

Athletics.

ARE BRITISH ATHLETES DECLINING.

Any pretence of unconsciousness or indifference to recent events in the world of sport would be the merest affectation just now, observes "Old Blue" in a London sporting contemporary. The Old Country has been badly hit in all-round international competition of late years, and every thoughtful sportsman has to acknowledge the fact. Severe criticism has followed, while British athletes are feeling their pulses and wondering whether the diagnosis that they are suffering from general break-up can be correct. Critics vary in class and opinion very considerably. Some harp upon the "physical degeneration" theory, which, after all, is only shallow talking. One can only mistrust the state of mind which boldly makes the assumption.

A Passing Fluctuation.

Those critics are right who attribute the apparent decline in British sporting supremacy to one of those passing fluctuations which are natural to all matters mundane. The vicissitudes of nations in sport, like those of clubs, are very like the throw of the dice-box—one year you have a plethora of talent, the next a positive dearth of it. Sporting history teaches us that no nation of athletes has ever maintained an unbroken standard of high excellence. Unsuccessful seasons have intervened between the seasons of prosperity, and so they will to the end of time. What is more, the records show that at the very moment of apparently national decline in matters sporting, a distinct revival has set in!

Now, I maintain that these periods of sporting success and sporting reverses are really good for sport as a whole. Some people talk grandiloquently of the hereditary instincts of Englishmen; and so far so good. But does heredity count for more than anything else? If we can defy one circumstance, we can defy another, and then what becomes of the fluctuating-period theory? But everybody knows we cannot defy or control circumstances. I will go further, and insist that continued sporting supremacy is apt to pall as much as continued defeat.

It is not my wish to dogmatise, yet I boldly affirm it is a good thing England does occasionally play second fiddle in international sport. This implies keener competition generally, greater equality in individuals, and, above all, a universal devotion to sport and pastime. A sporting monopoly is just as fatal to the true sporting spirit as slackness, physical degeneration, and all the rest of it. This fact should be realised to the full by those critics who argue that we are fast going to the dogs unless we preserve absolute invincibility.

Insular Prejudices.

This brings one to the important question: "Are we going the right way to preserve, not invincibility, but a generally recognised supremacy? Are we not too conservative in our methods, our ideas, and our opinions of other nations' improvements? Take rowing, for instance. Until just lately what is known as the English orthodox style had attained the dangerous position of a pompous monopoly. Its exponents assumed it to be infallible until—well, the Belgians and Canadians proved the contrary in no uncertain fashion. If the traditional style of English oarsmanship needed modification, as very many insisted—why should not all prejudice on the point have been dropped at once? The suggestion might, at least, have been received with an open mind. A continuance of this bigoted prejudice, evinced to-day in divers quarters and clubs, is bad for sport, bad for oarsmen themselves, and certainly bad for future international events. Happily, wetbobs are fast escaping from the ruts in which they have allowed themselves to drift far too long. In other words, numerous clubs are now testing various styles of rowing, etc., to manifest advantage. May their example be followed generally!

MORE OPPORTUNISM WANTED.

Or take modern boxing. Our erstwhile supremacy has been badly threatened of late years, owing mainly to the same cause—a slavish devotion to a certain style, which compares unfavourably with that which kept British boxers at the top of the tree for so long a period. In the phrase of that great authority Mr. A. F. Bettinson, "they have discarded their own style," with disastrous results. What is worse, as in the case of foreign oarsmen, other nations have—unconsciously, perhaps—absorbed and put into practice that very style and those very methods which once made British boxers and oarsmen the superiors of all others in the world. They, in fact, were not above trying experiments! Can we blame them? Not a bit of it.

We have only ourselves to blame for not having taken opportunity by the hand also, Instead of that, we have (nationally), wrapped ourselves in a cloak of grim reserve, as it were, and simply refused to acknowledge either our mistake or our rival's enterprise. And the outcome? The sporting impetus which thus urged on our friends and rivals to learn even from an enemy enabled them to beat us at Henley, Hurlingham, the N. S. C., Lord's Stamford Bridge, etc., But this apparent decline in British supremacy by no means implies lack of skill on our part. It must rather be attributed to a lack of opportunism. That is to say, it behoves us now to think out the principles of certain sports again from the beginning, and re-apply ourselves to the mastering of them. In that case we shall win again, and win often. But—mark the reservation—the days of absolute British invincibility are gone, never to return.

A DISPUTED FACT.

Many may dispute the last assertion, yet what are the facts? Nations which formerly "flirted with games"—in the immortal distinction of Squire Osbaldeston—now play with real skill. Nations who were outside the sporting environment a decade or two ago now figure prominently at the Olympic Carnivals. The majority of world's championships are now held by athletes of other nationalities! All this is instructive, and it behoves us to bestir ourselves if we hope again to attain a generally recognised supremacy in most sports and pastimes. We must drop our sporting conservatism, for one thing. As in every other walk or gallop of life, that is, we must be constantly examining our methods, and constantly testing possible improvements, and that, too, with an open mind.

This is an express-speed sort of age, and what were considered the best methods twenty, thirty, or forty years back may no longer be the best now. If, after experiments, we find other methods and styles more adapted to modern requirements, we must have no scruples in adopting them at once. Only thus shall we be able to hold our own in international fray with even a fair share of success, for we are faced with the further fact that the average of skill in games seem to be much higher in our Colonies and abroad than in Great Britain.

CRICKET IN BOMBAY.

BOMBAY GYMKHANA vs. POONA GYMKHANA.—This match was begun on Monday, the 28th ultimo. Rain fell all the forenoon and a start was not effected till 4 o'clock when the Bombay Gymkhana, having won the toss, elected to bat, Brooke and Watts opening the innings. Watts was caught in the second over but Stileman joined Brooke and they took the score to 27 by cautious play. Halliley succeeded Stileman and gave two chances which were not accepted. He then settled down and hit hard. At 63 Brooke was caught and Phillips came in, play closing for the day with the score at 65. Rain spoiled the game again on Tuesday, and all hopes of a decisive finish to the game were abandoned. Bombay continued their innings and ran their score to 201 for 7 wickets when they declared. Halliley and Phillips not out overnight made 28 and 24 respectively, Mackenzie was responsible for 56, Purcell 29, Sanderson not out 11 and Reed not out 7. The Poona team sent Tillard and Auret to the wickets and they hit merrily, scoring 63 in an hour before the partnership was dissolved, Tillard being succeeded by Haughton. The score was taken to 99 when Haughton was caught and 7 runs later Auret was sent back. Tennant and Powell then

CALCUTTA RUGBY NOTES AND COMMENTS.

AFTER a hard battle the United Services, by beating Calcutta on Saturday, won the League Championship. Although the match did not produce Rugby of a high class, it was exceedingly interesting from start to finish, and at the close a general opinion prevailed that the Services were the better team. The weather and ground being all that could be desired, the game was a fast one, but the passing of the men in the respective third lines was poor, Leonard on this occasion being off colour and could neither pick up nor take his passes correctly. Calcutta were without Studd and Abbots, but Burnett turned out and was once very prominent for a good sprint. Just before the game finished, however, he was dangerously tackled by one of the U.S. players whose boot got Barnett on the forehead and cut the Calcutta man badly. The try scored by Chase was well deserved, and the player was not slow in taking advantage of the opening presented to him. Chase got the ball from the centre line about the middle of the field and the Calcutta three-quarters were anxiously waiting for him to pass the ball to his threes. Chase was quick to notice this, and running through himself planted the leather right under the bar. However Fisher made a poor attempt to tackle his man and against a full-back like Newton Chase would certainly never have scored. Todd from a favourable position had no difficulty in adding the extra points and Calcutta were beaten by a goal (5 points) to nothing. This victory enabled the Services to win the League Cup. The U.S. will have a stronger side in the big tournament next week, but the West Ridings should beat any of the local combinations very comfortably.

The Dukes must be quite as strong as their supporters could wish them to be when they registered two goals and three tries against the Bombay Gymkhana on Monday—in all the Gymkhana had their line crossed no fewer than five times while Bombay could not score a single point. The Dukes have in their matches scored 54 points against the Gymkhana recently while the latter have not got one point to their credit. This will go to show that the Tykes are exceptionally strong both in attack and defence.

The Calcutta Rugby Challenge Cup tournament which starts next Wednesday will be a purely local one, for with the exception of the West Ridings no other outside teams are likely to come.

For the Gloucester Cup the entries will be larger, but the Customs (hoblers) will be conspicuous by their absence. In the days of Messrs. Cadell and Nind the Customs would be made to turn out for Rugger. I hear the Riversiders are going to do great things in cricket, but I have my doubts. In the junior competition Rangers, La Martiniere, St. Xaviers, Orientals, Police, Services "B" and the Rifle Brigade are all certainties. The Medicals may enter.

BOMBAY RUGBY CUP TOURNAMENT.

LEICESTER REGIMENT vs. COLABA GARRISON.—This game opened the tournament on Saturday, last year's runners up beating the scratch team from the Garrison by 5 points to nil. The winners were not up to their best form while the Colaba fifteen showed that with practice they would develope into a good team. The opening play was of a scrambling description till at length the Leicesters got away and Dooley was nearly over. Up and down play followed till the interval which arrived without score. On resuming the Colaba threes were conspicuous for some good work but they could not get through and play was transferred to their territory where the Leicesters obtained a penalty kick for offside. Nothing resulted and play was very level till ten minutes before time Martin crossed the Garrison line and Hougham added the extra points. Nothing further was scored and the game ended in a win for the Leicesters as stated. Teams :—

LEICESTER REGIMENT—Hougham, back; Lieut. Longbottom, Canfield, Dooley and Cooper three-quarters; Gregory and Atkins, half-backs; Witham, Lieut. Weir, Norman, Green, Brewin, Martin, Twigg and Buxton, forwards.

COLABA GARRISON.—Lieut. Elliott, back; Parsons, Lieut. Walker, Lieut. Lenion and Mr. Dermott, three-quarters; Lieut. Montgomery and Lieut. Randall, half-backs; Lieut. Wordsworth, Lieut. Chapman, Lieut. Peram, Lieut. Dible, Shepherd, Anderson, Sabun and McConaghy, forwards.

THE HARRIS TOURNAMENT.

THE second game in the semi-finals was played on the 28th ultimo when the Worcesters met the Loyal North Lancs. The first half was very level, both goals were visited in turn but neither team could score and the interval arrived with a blank sheet. Play re-opened very level but after a smart shower of rain the Lancs began to assert themselves. Following an unsuccessful shot at goal they got a corner and from the kick the ball was netted. They continued to press and a second goal, the result of a long shot, was next recorded. The Worcesters were kept on the defensive for the rest of the game and before time the Lancs scored again and ran out victorious by 3 goals to nil.

The game between the Royal Warwicks and the Loyal North Lancs brought the tournament to a close on the 30th ultimo. The game was hotly contested throughout. The Lancs rushed down at the start and registered a goal. The Warwicks worked the ball back but an unproductive corner was the result. A second corner shortly after was not improved upon but they kept up the attack and at length equalised. They were not long on terms for before half-time the Lancs got away and scored. On resuming after half-time the Warwicks pressed hard: they obtained two abortive corners and were nearly through on more than one occasion. The Lancs relieved and play opened out, the ball travelling up and down the field. Both teams were playing at the top of their form but could not get through. At last shortly before time the Lancs netted a third goal and on resuming got on a fourth. The Warwicks could not reply and the Bombay champions had to retire defeated by 4 goals to 1. General Barter gave away the Cup and medals and in the course of a congratulatory speech he said he was especially pleased to have to hand the Cup to the Loyal North Lancs as the regiment had fought in his Brigade in the South African War. The tournament throughout had been well contested. Those teams which had travelled from long distances to compete, had only to remember that if they had lost they had played with good spirit and in good fellowship. He asked that the generous donor of the Cup, Lord Harris, should not be forgotten, and that three cheers be given for his Lordship. Three cheers were raised for General Barter and Lord Harris.

MOTORING NOTES.

London, 18th July 1911.

The heat of the present summer has aroused the motoring world to some of the disadvantages of the torpedo or boat-shaped cars which are becoming the most popular types on the road. These enclosed patterns, in which drivers and passengers sit practically buried to the neck, are exceedingly hot and close. As yet no efficient means of ventilating them seems to have been devised, and although various suggestions on the subject are being put forth they do not seem to take practical shape. The comfort in general of a torpedo body is not to be denied, but it is certainly not suitable under present conditions for a scorching day. Here is a good field of work for the designers of bodies. Many of these, we believe, are engaged on experiments not only in regard to ventilation, but with a view to controlling the air eddies set up by the car, which are so frequently a source of discomfort. We have not yet arrived at the ideal open body, but the progress already made is encouraging enough. Anybody who looks back upon the comparatively slow progress made in carriage design in a century will realise the greater inventiveness which the motor car has stirred in the last ten years. In no direction has the change manifested itself more quickly than in public utility vehicles. The taxi-cab of to-day is an enormous advance, so far as its coachwork is concerned, upon anything that was on the streets even three years ago.

The Automobile Association has again evidenced the essential difference between it and other motoring bodies by its decision to distribute 10,000 reflex rear light signals among cyclists in order to induce their general adoption as a safeguard against overtaking motor-cars at night. This will involve the expenditure of about £1,000, but in all probability it will turn out to be the most economical method of securing the end in view. Motorists complain that cyclists are inconspicuous at night, and in danger of being run over. But the suggestion that these reflex signals—optical arrangements which reflects the light from the motorist's own lamps back through a red bull's eye—should be voluntarily adopted by cyclists was met with such bitter opposition from most cyclists and the cycle press that only compulsion appeared to remain. The A. A. and M. U. has turned the obstructing cyclist's position very neatly. The chief objection urged by them was the expense involved. Well, here are 10,000 signals to be given away free to applicants. Either of two effects appears likely. The value of the little fitment will so appeal to cyclists that their scruples will be overcome, and voluntary adoption result, or the inconvenience and danger of having only a section of the cycling public using them will compel the authorities to compel universal adoption in the interests of cyclists themselves. It does not seem possible that the experiment can have no subsequent effects unless the signals are not sufficiently efficient to justify the A. A.'s enterprise—a view which our personal experience does not endorse.

The recent hot weather has proved extremely trying both to motor-cars and to their drivers. The mortality among tyres, too, has been exceptionally high, remarks the writer of the motoring notes in the Birmingham Daily Post Wise were those drivers who used their tyre pressure gauges early in the morning before setting out for the day's run, and as a result of this examination adjusted the pressure so that it was a few pounds below the normal. The lack of this precaution caused many burst tyres as the pressure inside them rises very rapidly when the thermometer is in the eighties and nineties. The prolonged drought caused the roads to be very loose, with a result that tyres have been badly cut, whilst the need for more tarred roads has been rendered very evident.

Motor traders have this week been interested in the action brought by Mr. S. F. Edge against Mr. Harvey Du Cros claiming a declaration that he was entitled to one half of the profits direct and indirect, which had been made by Mr. Du Cros in respect of the Panhard and Levassor Agency, the Gladiator Agency, and the Panhard Repair Works. The hearing, which commenced at the Law Courts on Monday, was expected to last some days, but was amicably settled on Tuesday, when Mr. Du Cros agreed to pay a substantial sum for breach of agreement, and Mr. Edge withdrew all imputations of fraud.

The legal department of the Royal Automobile Club has recently given an opinion that a car which is travelling along the road at twenty miles an hour—at the legal limit of speed that is to say—may not obstruct the passage of a vehicle travelling more quickly. I greatly doubt whether that view would be upheld in the Law Courts. No man is compelled to stand aside in order that a breach of the peace may be committed by another. The right of use of the road must be controlled by the laws, which lay down a limit of speed. Use of them at a greater speed cannot be insisted upon, and is an illegal act. In other words, there cannot be obstruction when a vehicle is already travelling at the full legal limit of speed. Any test case on the point would probably be disastrous to those who are contending for the right of passage. In general the point will not arise. There are cantankerous motorists, as there are cranks in every other walk of life, but fortunately they are few, and it is very seldom that any man on the road will refuse to give way to a vehicle which is travelling at a higher speed than that at which he himself wishes to proceed, even if his speedometer conveys the fact that he is at the maxim allowed by the law.

In the work of taking apart the mechanism of a car great care should be taken to so arrange matters that no mistake may be made when the time comes to put the parts together again. When gears are unmeshed which have to do with the timing of the valves, they should be so marked that they can be remeshed in the same relation. The usual way of accomplishing this is to mark the tooth of one gear of a pair and the two teeth of the other gear, between which this tooth meshes. If the caps are taken off any bearings or bushes are removed it is essential, unless the exact manner in which they should be replaced is perfectly obvious, that these parts should be so marked as to permit of no doubt. The mixing of the halves of split bushes from different pairs of the same sizes should be guarded against, and the confounding of upper and lower halves should be avoided.

It is hardly conceivable why Mr. A. A. Godin does not charge for the catalogues of Ducellier Lamps. They are chock full of information for the motorist, and are of special value to those who have any lighting trouble. A number of unsolicited testimonials form a most interesting preface, and

The last word in dynamo car lighting by the firm who had the first word on the subject.

We had the first word in electric car lighting when we originated specially designed lamps for car use nearly ten years ago. Determined to maintain the lead we have designed and perfected after the most searching tests, quite regardless of expense, the new dynamo lighting outfit. It effectually represents the last word in car-lighting systems.

The whole system is characterised by extreme simplicity, exceptional lightness and compactness. This is supplemented by a great increase in efficiency and reliability. Complete, the plant is a tribute to British ingenuity, skill, and workmanship.

AVIATION

As was recorded in my last notes, the Daily Mail 1,010 mile aeroplane race round England resulted in a victory for Lieutenant Conneau ("Beaumont") on his Bleriot monoplane, by the bare margin of 1 hour 9 minutes, his flying times for the whole journey being 22 hours 29 minutes as against the 23 hours 38 minutes of Vedrines on his Morane monoplane. On Thursday the 27th ultimo, Beaumont had the honour of being received by the King at Buckingham Palace, to whom he gave a detailed account of his flight. On the following day a luncheon was given at the Savoy hotel, when Lord Northcliffe presented Beaumont with a cheque for £10,000, being the prize offered by the Daily Mail, and also one to Vedrines for £200 as a solatium. The latter will also receive about £800 as a result of the benefit at the Hendon Aerodrome organised by Mr. C. Grahame-White on his behalf, on Sunday last, and which was attended by between ten and eleven thousand spectators. Vedrines flew from Brooklands on his machine, and created some surprise by appearing at Hendon, after stripping off his overalls, fully dressed for the dinner which was given in the evening at the Crystal Palace by the Council of the Festival of Empire. Almost directly afterwards Beaumont gave a series of exhibition flights on behalf of his rival, which was followed by others by Mr. Grahame-White, on his "baby" biplane, and later by Vedrines himself. The Financial Times also organised a collection on behalf of Vedrines, which has realised nearly £200, while Mr. Jas. Elliman of "embrocation fame" has also sent him a cheque for £1,000, so that Vedrines although he did not win the coveted prize of £10,000 has now benefited to the extent of over £3,000.

An interesting and highly successful experiment in sending wireless messages from an aeroplane was made in France on Sunday last. The military aviators, Lieutenant Menard and Captain Brenot, in a Maurice Farman biplane specially fitted for the purpose, sent a message from the point where they were flying somewhere above Rambouillet, about thirty-one miles from Paris to the receiving station at the Eiffel Tower, from which it was safely delivered at its destination, the Ministry of War. The wireless telegraphy apparatus in the aeroplane weighed just over 46lb. and the spark which causes the air waves was produced by a magneto driven by the motor of the machine.

Mr. Harold Piffard who has taken his new invention, a hydroplane-aeroplane to Shoreham, launched his machine in the sea on Saturday last. His purpose was solely to test its balance, and the experiment was most successful. Although six people mounted the plane, it exhibited great buoyancy, and the collapsible air-bags with which it is fitted were only partially submerged. The machine is fitted with E.N.V. 40 horse-power engine.

The Government has been so much abused from time to time for its apparent neglect of aviation that it is worth while to call attention to the exceedingly valuable report of the year's work of the Advisory Committee which has been issued in a single volume at six shillings. Here the Government is revealed as a supporter of careful and scientific experiment of a kind that is most valuable in its results. In this column it has been pointed out that we have almost reached the limit of practical advance on the lines of rule of thumb practice. The practical airman has done wonders. He has solved the chief difficulties. Incidentally he has disproved the theories of the scientists. It may be recalled that the late Lord Kelvin laid it down that an aeroplane which would carry a man and be mechanically propelled would not be able to lift itself into the air. Every schoolboy knows better than that now. Lord Kelvin's results were obtained by means of small models, while practical experiment has shown that the laws which seem to govern the action of small models cease to operate when machines of large size are built. Here there is at work some new law which was not contemplated by the scientists, but is illustrated every day by the larger birds which sustain their weight upon a wing area which is almost ridiculously small when compared with that of the insects and the smaller birds. In ascertaining to what extent results obtained from models can be made to forecast the possibilities of larger aeroplanes excellent work has been done in the Government laboratories.

Mr. Perkins has asked the Under-Secretary for War if it was proposed during the present Session of Parliament to initiate any legislative proposals for the better protection of arsenals, military camps, powder magazines, and fortifications, against aerial alien espionage. Colonel Seely replied that the subject was receiving the consideration of the Government, and the measures required to provide the necessary security would be taken at the earliest possible date.

A proposal has been laid before the Paris Municipal Council by M. Alpy providing for a sum of £2,000 to be used to encourage inventions of life protectors for aviators. Alpy believes that some appliance or device can be found by means of which in case of serious accident, the life of the aviator could be saved. As it happens now, fatalities usually occur by the aviator being struck and killed by parts of the motor or machine falling on him or by his being pitched out of his seat. Helmets of special leather have already been of considerable use in protecting the head, but what is required is protection of the entire body.

There was a strong wind at Brooklands on Monday, but Mr. S. F. Cody made two flights in competition for the Manville prize. With a passenger he flew for a total of 41 minutes 15 seconds. Mr. C. H. Pixton on his Bristol biplane won the aggregate time flight competition with approximately 1 hour 43 minutes. Mr. C. H. Raynham on Mr. A. V. Roe's biplane being second with 1 hour 29 minutes. M. de Montalent made a splendid flight on his Breguet biplane. With a passenger he ascended to a height of 4,875 feet, which is stated to constitute a British height record for a passenger flight.

Some interesting experiments were made off Cherbourg last week with a view to ascertaining whether a submerged submarine is visible from an aeroplane flying above it. In his first experiment the aviator Aubrun had no difficulty in discovering while flying on his Deperdussin monoplane, two stationary submarines the whereabouts of which had been indicated to him. In his second experiment he succeeded in finding a submarine which was cruising on a course unknown to the aviator and was only showing its periscope. It appears to have been established that the whole of a submarine is visible to an observer in an aeroplane at any altitude within 3,000 feet, whereas an aeroplane becomes invisible in the periscope of a submarine as soon as it has risen to a height of 1,500.

Valentine one of the competitors in the Daily Mail 1,010 mile aeroplane race, reached Brooklands on Friday of last week after making the full circuit on his Deperdussin monoplane. Cody also arrived at Weybridge on Saturday last after completing the full distance on his biplane.

Friday, 1st September 1911.

The Committee of the Calcutta Swimming Club are to be congratulated on the success which attended the annual autumn meeting held at the Baths last Friday night. The entertainment was the best we remember to have seen for many years while we think we are correct in stating that the attendance of spectators was the largest on record. The programme was carried through without a hitch, some fine finishes were witnessed in the swimming events and the display of diving was really excellent. Sir Richard Harrington was present and gave away the prizes. Appended are results:—

A Lesson had been given on the composition of minerals of different kinds, and after it was finished the schoolmaster put a few questions to the class, to test how far they followed his teachings.

"Now, children," he said, "can any of you tell me what a diamond is?"

"Carbon" was the prompt reply that issued from every throat in the class.

"Yes, the teacher explained, "a diamond is pure carbon, but you must remember that coal is also carbon. That was taught in our lesson. Wasn't it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, then, how could you be sure to tell the difference between the two kinds of carbon?"

"Ask the price" lustily piped a little fellow in the front seat, who will most likely make his mark in business some day.

The Vicar: "And how is your son who is so musical getting on in London?"

Mrs. Muggins: "Sure I think he's gettin' on splendid. He do write and tell me he's conductor now."

"Really!" I am pleased to hear it. And what band does he conduct?"

"He didn't say; but he said he conducted from Hammersmith to Waterloo."

The Naturalist.

SCENT GLANDS OF ANIMALS.

In the Proceedings of the Zoological Society, Mr. R. J. Pocock gives the result of his investigations of the scent glands of various animals. The well-known musk of the musk deer is a familiar example. The keenness of scent in most animals suggests that these scent glands must play an important part in the lives of those possessing them. It has been suggested that their use may be that of keeping the individuals of a species together by enabling them easily to recognise each other. The result of Mr. Pocock's studies inclines him to support this view. At the same time he considers that there is much evidence to show that preorbital glands have a sexual significance, at least in part. At any rate, it is probable that in every case each scent gland tells its tale to other members of the same species.

That the same scent may prove useful to the enemies of a species by enabling a carnivorous animal to track its prey more readily or the latter to steer clear more easily of its devourers must be supposed to be accidental from the point of view of natural selection. On the other hand, it might be suggested that a strong scent, like a brilliant colour, might be of the nature of a warning. And it is believed that the strong scent of certain species of deer does protect them from the attacks of serpents. There is also room for a theory of "mimicry" in scent, for there are quite a number of animals and plants which "imitate" the scent of the musk deer. A familiar wild flower of our hedges, again, the Hound's tongue, smells strongly of mice.

In some animals the scent glands are pockets occurring in the feet. And Mr. Pocock suggests that these are remnants of certain interdigital clefts. These have been reduced in the course of evolution in order to strengthen the feet. In some animals they have been entirely lost, but in others the course of evolution has specialised them as scent glands. Other scent glands are held to have arisen from simple thickenings of the skin and enlargements of sebaceous and sweat glands.

Scent also appears to play an important part in the lives of insects, and in a discourse given by Dr. Dixey at the Royal Institution some interesting facts regarding the scent of butterflies were given. There are in this country three common species of white butterfly. One of these is distinguished by certain greyish-green streaks on the under surface of the hind wings, and is hence known as the green-veined white. If the upper surface of one of the wings of the male of this species be brushed with a camel's-hair brush a strong agreeable odour like that of the "lemon-plant" will be perceived. The scales thus brushed from the wing, in fact, are scented. Those from the under surface, however, are not, nor are those from any part of the wings of the female.

When the scented scales thus brushed from the upper side of the wings of the male are examined under the microscope, they are found to be of two kinds. There are the scales of ordinary shape, and among them others of a special form. These latter are described as somewhat heart-shaped, with a long footstalk ending in a nearly circular disc, and tapering to a point at the other extremity. At their pointed ends they carry plume-like structures. Under the microscope these latter seem to be minute tubes, often open at their free extremities. These plume scales are absent from the under-sides of the wings of the male, and from all parts of the wings of the female. They are evidently scent scales.

The upper surface of the wings of the male of the smaller cabbage white also yield scented plume scales. But in this species the scent is fainter, and sometimes almost imperceptible. The perfume also is different, suggesting sweet-briar rather than lemon. In the large cabbage butterfly the plume scales are also present, though of a different shape and of a much less perceptible perfume. In fact, it is said that anyone with ordinary powers of smell may examine a large number of these and find no smell at all. It is, however, undoubtedly present in some, and is like a faint whiff of violet powder. The scents of certain related species of African butterfly are likened by Dr. Dixey to sweet-briar, sweet-pea, etc.

Some butterflies, on the other hand, have disagreeable or even repulsive odours. In some cases it has been shown that these disagreeable smells originate in patches or tufts of specialised hairs or scales. But in no case apparently are these like the plume scales which emit the flower-like perfumes. Another peculiarity is that while the sweet scent are confined to the males, the disagreeable ones are shared by the females, and may indeed be stronger in the latter. As regards use, it is suggested that the unpleasant odour may be associated with a nauseous flavour, and would thus be a protection from insect-eating enemies. And as the safety of the female is of more importance than that of the male, the fact that the former has often the more repulsive odour is held to confirm this view.

The sweet flower-like perfumes must be explained otherwise. These are usually, but not always, found in the male alone, and when present in the female commonly weaker. Dr. Dixey thinks that there is no doubt that, as Fritz Müller suggested long ago, these scents are employed by the males in courtship as a means of attraction. It is also suggested that they may likewise serve as means of recognition between individuals of the same species, but whatever explanation be finally adopted, the study of this scent scales in various species of butterflies offers a tempting, and as yet largely unexplored, field of investigation for entomologists.—The Globe.

THE RESTRICTION OF FIELD SPORTS.

The "humanitarian" faddists are once more on the warpath. They have succeeded in putting down the Royal Buckhounds and are dead against stag-hunting in any form, except where the animals are really wild. They have also succeeded in stopping rabbit-coursing, which was, perhaps, not a very high class of sport, and the loss of which few educated persons will seriously regret. Now they are going for otter hunting and have employed a writer of the name of Joseph Collinson, who has previously distinguished himself by a work entitled "How Sealskins are Obtained," to make the best case he can for the prosecution. This he has done in a pamplet entitled "The Hunted Otter," which is published in Kingsway, London, by the Animals Friend Society at the very moderate price of two pence, post free.

In one repect we entirely agree with Mr. Collinson, namely, that otter hunting should be prohibited during the time the bitches are heavy in cub or have cubs in their holts. It is only fair that at such seasons the creatures should have a respite from pursuit.

But this is a very different thing from prohibiting otter hunting altogether. One of the complaints is, that the animal is hustled and hustled by the hounds without cessation from the commencement of the chase to the finish. From the humanitarian point of view, we should have thought this was the very best thing that could possibly happen; for it is perfectly well ascertained that when an animal is in a high state of excitement, its recks little of wounds and pain. Tommy Atkins, when his blood is up, is a sufficient example of this well-known trait!

That cruelty and pain must and do occur in an otter hunt, we freely admit, although we would urge that all possible efforts should be made to mitigate them as much as practicable. Cruelty is, however, an inherent feature in nature, for what can be more inconceivably cruel than a fox tearing a live partridge to pieces? And why, therefore, should man be so squeamish about wounding such animals as he considers to be vermin or objects of sport, or both together? And, after all, we cannot see where the alleged cruelty in otter hunting comes, in many instances. Take, for instance, the following extract from the Field :—

"The River Otter has been very productive of sport this season, and although we have met three times on the first draw of the river, we have never drawn more than a mile of water always finding near Rocky Weir. Strict orders by the Master to let the otter go where she liked resulted in seven hours and ten minutes' sport. Hounds, as usual, were put to water at Otterton Bridge, drawing up. Along the road hounds dashed across the river and put an otter out of a patch of brambles. The Master saw the otter creeping across on the bottom of the river, and quickly doubled his horn. A glorious scent being on the water enabled hounds to drive the otter up and down at a great pace, never allowing her a moment's respite. Just fifty minutes after being found she landed, racing along the cliff, down again through an orchard, up under the hedge, and up the next cliff, to a fox earth. For fifty-five minutes she kept little Jenny busy, and not until a tool was used would she bolt. The digging had the desired effect, and out went our otter and fell headlong over the cliff to the rocks below. It looked as if our sport was over—but no; with a shake off went our quarry again, giving us a fine turn below the Rocky Weir. Here in the rough water she kept hounds busy as from side to side of the pool she went, crossing over the weir head and swimming up the long reach above, then back and over the weir again, hounds being hurled under into the pool below by the rush of water. After a fine turn of an hour the otter made up over the weir and to the end of the pool, crossing two stickles, and into a 9-inch drain-pipe. Here it looked as if it was the end of all things, as no terrier could go up for the amount of water. The otter was, however, flooded out, hounds being taken well away for fear of chopping her as she bolted at the lower end, knocking away the turf and going down the river. Hounds were called on, when our otter took to the cliffs again, and into still another fox earth. Paddy, however, evicted her after thirty minutes, the otter racing along the cliff side, and then to water again. One hour's good sport in the river followed when our dodging friend again sought shelter in a huge badger earth. Hopes of a kill seemed lost, and our large field dwindled. Paddy, however, was game for a tussle underground, and after an hour's work bolted this cunning old otter. This time, however, she got caught by three hounds, and they gave her a pretty good shaking ere she broke away. The hunt, which had been so fast, now got much slower, as our quarry tired. She started hide-and-seek measures, going from some weiring to a rabbit earth. She was shifted repeatedly until she got into another fox earth, where she had to be dug out, getting killed just before reaching the river." This is cited in the pamphlet as an instance of gross cruelty; but if this is cruelty so is fox-hunting, and if the latter is abolished, then good bye to one main source of British pluck and endurance.

Much special pleading is indulged in to prove that the otter does little or no harm to fishing; certain testimony being adduced to show that these animals feed largely on water-rats and snails, and to a great extent leave fish alone. Credat Judæus, for any naturalist that has studied the peculiar formation of the back teeth of an otter, will not have much doubt as to what kind of prey they are intended to hold any break up. The testimony given in such authoritative works as Bell's "British Quadrupeds," either from ignorance of their existence by the author, or purposely, is ignored.

But it is little use arguing with people who see cruelty in everything, and who do not quote evidence when it goes against their case! And it may be that in course of time we shall hear that the tiger is a gentle and much maligned beast which ought to be protected at all costs and that pig-sticking is a crime of the deepest dye!

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

Mr. J. B. Joel has at any rate commenced the Doncaster Meeting well, as one of his Sundridge colts (the Doris colt) White Star has annexed the Champagne Stakes (5 furlongs 152 yards). White Star is an own brother to Sunstar and out of his four previous appearances he has won three—a very good record and calculated to still further enhance the already high reputation of his sire. At his maiden appearance he won the Woodcote Stakes (6 furlongs) beating Halberd and Lomond in the clinking time of 1min. 9⅘secs.; he was unplaced in the Coventry Stakes (5 furlongs) at Ascot to Lady Americus, Kempion and Tonypandy; he won the July Stakes (5 furlongs) 140 yards) at the Newmarket First July beating Melody, whom he again defeated last Tuesday and Sweeper II. ran third; and he won the Molecomb Stakes (6 furlongs) at Goodwood hard held by a length from Flanders and Outram. He is certainly a worthy son of his father and it might easily be that in him we see the winner of the Derby of 1912.

The following excerpt from a note in The Australasian in commenting on the racing statistics of Victoria and New South Wales should give the Indian buyer something to think about:—"The Indian buyers can no longer get a good horse in Australia. The horse may be here, but with such good stakes to be won at home he cannot be bought at the price Indian agents are prepared to give. Yearlings have never brought such prices as they are bringing now, and this notwithstanding that something like 600 were catalogued for the Sydney sales alone. In years gone by a fifty-guinea fee was as much as the very best sires would command in Australia. Now Maltster fills at 200 guineas. All this shows how we have progressed in the last few years. There is one matter in which we have fallen off, and it is not a matter to grieve over. There is not the heavy betting there was in the old days. Le Loup and First Water were each backed to win the Melbourne Cup about 30 years ago for £80,000. It would be a hard matter to back a horse to win £30,000 for a Melbourne Cup now, and the Cup is still far and away the best betting race of the year."

The eight clubs in and near Sydney disbursed last season £96,553 gross, that is to say without deducting the amount subscribed by owners in entrance money, forfeits, etc. The three racing clubs round Melbourne paid away £100,000 in stakes, this also including the amount subscribed by owners. The V.R.C. and the A.J.C. however, give back to owners the amount paid in entrance money and forfeits in the form of sweepstakes, but the V.A.T.C. and Williamstown keep all they can get in the way of contributions from owners. These facts, however, notwithstanding the Australian owner has not a great deal to complain of as the amount of entrances and forfeits bears a very favourable comparison to the amount of the stakes he races for. In India, for instance, entrance money, etc., is far higher proportionately to the value of the stakes; we have less racing and expenses of upkeep are by no means light. Jockeys' fees also are higher in India than they are in either Australia or England. In this country jockeys are entitled to full fees (i.e., Rs. 100 win, Rs. 50 lose on the flat and Rs. 200 win, Rs. 100 lose over obstacles) in all races of Rs. 200 and upwards. On the flat in England a jockey is entitled to £5-5 for a winning mount and £3-3 for a losing mount and over obstacles the fee to a winning jockey of a steeplechase or hurdle race of the advertised value of 100 sovs. is £10-10 and for a losing mount £5-5 and in all races of a less value than 100 sovs. £5-5 and £3-3. To this must be added the travelling expenses and £1 a day living expenses, but as in India most of the jockeys an owner engages are-men on the spot at the big centres this does not occur. The high riding fees press hardly on owners who put up jockeys in small races of which there are a great number in India. For instance, there are a number of small Rs. 500 races and we will take it that on an all-round average it costs an owner Rs. 16 to start his horse (at Calcutta it is only Rs. 10), but if on the flat it means Rs. 116 and 10 per cent. to the trainer as his perquisite, i.e., Rs. 166 in all and if over fences Rs. 266 before the owner touches anything. For a smaller stake than Rs. 500—and there are any number of such races—the owner has a still thinner time.

As to the impossibility of now getting a good horse at a reasonable figure in Australia that has been well known for some time past. Australia is now so prosperous and everyone has so much money that they do not care whether the stranger within their gates buys their horses or not. If he chooses to give them any figure they ask, he is allowed to have a horse; if not he can do without! The Australian breeder and owner of blood-stock is, of course, not to be blamed for selling in a market that is ready to his hand and where he can and does get substantial profits, and so long as he can go on getting these prices he is, of course, perfectly entitled to do so.

In England the Indian buyer has recently been experiencing the same difficulty, but this is plainly his own fault, for if he will go into the market in the middle of the flat racing season he cannot expect to get his horses cheap, or comparatively so. In Ireland this summer an Indian owner said that Mayfowl's win in the last Viceroy's Cup had upset the market altogether, as horses that could have been picked up for the proverbial old song have now acquired a greatly enhanced value in the seller's eyes.

The result of the extraordinary general meeting of the members of the W.I.T.C. on the 9th instant convened for the purpose of considering the course of action to be adopted with reference to the proposed legislation of the Government of Bombay with reference to gambling, the control of the W.I.T.C. totalisator and the curtailment of the racing dates in Bombay and Poona was a unanimous endorsement of the action of the W.I.T.C. stewards' action and a decision to send the matter up to the Government of India in the form of a petition from the members of the club en bloc. The stewards had already placed their views and their protest before the Government of India and the members have now by general vote backed those views. The petition has been ordered to be sent up through the usual channel, the Provincial Government, who will record its views upon the resolutions of the members of the W.I.T.C. and the final decision rests with the Government of India. This is at any rate something gained and it is very probable that the aspirations of the Bombay Government to establish an absolute dictatorship over turf affairs in Western India will not entirely succeed!

This affair is apparently being made a personal matter by H.E. the Governor of Bombay, who has signified his inability to accept the hospitality of the Stewards of the W.I.T.C. on Governor's Cup day. H.E. the Governor of Bombay has also signified his inability to attend the races in Poona on that day thereby for the first time breaking a custom that has been preserved by H.E.'s predecessors in title. H.E. the Governor of Bombay, of course, is a perfectly free agent as to who he shall or shall not lunch with on any day or days in the year, but we regard the incident as unfortunate to say nothing stronger." It is also announced that H.E. Sir George Clarke owing to his fears that Lady Clarke's health may not stand another hot weather in India, contemplates retiring before the full term of his office as Governor of Bombay expires. Sir George Clarke's retirement was rumoured some little time ago so that possibly there is no correlation between this announcement and the announcement that it is probable that the Imperial Government are favourably considering the representations of the W.I.T.C. Stewards.

The Calcutta Monsoon Racing season 1911 comes to a close on Saturday next the 16th instant and we shall then have had nine days' racing, or one more than is usually the case at this time of the year. The experiment has been tried this year of condensing the dates and we had six days' racing all within the space of three weeks, the object being to attract outside support and we think the Stewards may justly say that the experiment has been a success. It would have been even a greater one had we not at that period of the proceedings been inflicted with a heat-wave and a total cessation of the badly needed rains. The consequence was that many visitors with their horses hesitated to start for head-quarters owing to the great risk of travelling horses in such terrific heat as was then prevailing. At any rate sufficient encouragement has, we think, been obtained to justify the repetition of the present year's arrangements. Beedham, J. D. Scott, Norton, Bond, Gee amongst the trainers from outside came down and amongst other racing visitors we have had Colonel A. P. Young, Colonel M. R. H. Wilson, both of whom ran horses at the meeting, Major Eustace Crawley, Captain Robertson, Captain Charrington, Captain Houston, Mr. Miles, Major Mussenden, Mr. Blacklock, Mr. Hart, Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Shillingford, Colonel F. A. Smith, Mr. McCall, Mr. L. S. Platt, Captain Brough, Major Bennett, Captain Thellusson, General Pilcher present either in person or through their representatives throughout the meetings. Many of our up-country visitors have, it is pleasant to be able to record, been successful and Colonel Young, Major Crawley, Captains Charrington, Robertson and Brough, Mr. Hart, Mr. Sullivan, General Pilcher, Mr. Platt, Mr. Miles, Mr. McCall, Major Mussenden and Mr. Blacklock, Colonel M. R. H. Wilson have all shared in the spoils. Calcutta cannot afford to do without the support of outside stables in the autumn whatever may be the case in the cold weather and it is therefore to be hoped that the results of their expedition this autumn will induce our up-country friends to come back to us next year. If things go as Sir George Clarke desires that they should go in Poona next autumn, we shall not be surprised to see the emigration eastwards of one or two of the Western India strings and there is now no reason why they should not be able to do both Calcutta and Poona in comfort, as our dates have been arranged so as not to clash with the Poona big meeting. But in any case the new arrangement of our dates is, we think, bound to attract the stranger within our gates and the more we see of him the better we shall like it. Competition is as good for racing as it is for trade and had not the elements been so unpropitious as they have been we should have had even better sport than has been the case.

The racing has been good on the whole, and though the jump racing has been productive of one or two bad falls most of the wounded are now all right again. Randall's fall was the worst, but accidents are only to be looked for when there are contests over stiff obstacles. The only "incident" of the season—if it can be called an "incident" is the stupid agitation which was hatched by interested persons who signed themselves "Sportsmen" in the columns of a daily paper of this city. These gentry, whose only claim to be members of the racing public is that they attend race meetings for gambling purposes and for no other, had the effrontery to presume to dictate to owners as to in how many races they should enter their horses and as to when they should strike them out, the trouble being that the forestaller was seriously hampered in his nefarious operations by certain owners entering their horses for every race in the card for which they were qualified and leaving them in till the very last moment permissible. This mystified these "sportsmen" of the get-rich-quickly brigade and consequently we were treated to a series of very stupid but very offensive letters. The motive underlying the agitation was so palpable that the shrieking asseverations of the writers that they were the champions of the right and the purity of the turf carried no weight and merely showed the writers up for what they were. It is an unfortunate thing that in all big racing centres you almost invariably get this undesirable class, the only wonder in our own case being that a newspaper could be found ready to extend the hospitality of its columns to such poor trash as appeared therein.

The statistics of the season must necessarily be held over till next week's issue, as the figures if published now would be incomplete. Mr. A. N. Das was leading the Winning Owners up to last Saturday and bids fair to come out top for the third time on record. Mr. Das is the only local Bengali gentleman who races and is very well liked in racing circles, as he is a genuine sportsman and races for the love of the game itself. It is therefore always a pleasant thing to be able to congratulate him and this we hope to be able to do on next Thursday morning! Mr. Evers, Mr. J. D. Scott, Mr. Gutschke are next closest up. Mr. Evers is leading in the Riding Statistics and Mr. J. D. Scott heads the list of winning trainers so far, and these positions are not likely to be seriously interfered with by anything that may happen on Saturday next.

The racing at the Calcutta Second Monsoon Extra was as good as it could be expected to be, though in some cases the fields were decidedly attenuated. There is ample evidence that the season is being brought to a conclusion not a moment too soon, as the attendance was very poor indeed and the stands were only about a quarter full, a large number of people having already left Calcutta in anticipation of the impending autumn holidays. Next Saturday the muster will probably be even more sparse. There were three jump races to enliven the card, but in none of them did the fields rule large. Proceedings commenced with the Moderate Pony Handicap for which both Gilliflower and Lacrosse were well supported when Murmur's number was not hoisted. Lacrosse probably carried the most money, as she was backed also in a good many doubles, her trainer declaring his intention of starting her for the pony hurdle race also. There was a very close race and Gilliflower won by three parts of a length all out.

The Second Division of the Combination Hurdle Race only brought out five of them and Suffragette finished up favourite in the ring. Lab was fancied in some quarters and on his form on the flat against Politesse and Levi he was certainly entitled to consideration. He is not, however, a very generous horse and he looked to us to deliberately cut it when he found the pace getting too hot. Suffragette led all the way.

The Mediocre Pony Hurdle Race was rather a chapter of misfortunes. Bandy Leg, the favourite, found 11st. 12lb. too much for him and was never very dangerous. Lacrosse, who was well backed, ran out at the second best fence and Charge, who was then left in front, jumped into the last one and dislodged McNeilage, who is a patron of the short stirrup over fences. It may answer over flimsy obstacles, but over stiff things like these hurdles here, which will not give at all, it is bound to cause disaster, and it has more than once this season. Stella II. then went on and won easily from Lionel and Marconi.

There was a pretty race for Division I. of the Combination Hurdle Race between Blix, who won and Pacific, the former getting home by two lengths. Nothing else was really in it, Frank being the only one who could keep within hail of the leaders.

For the September Plate Atropine started actual favourite in the ring, but both Light Metal and Northwood beat him in a very close finish. Atropine was coming up hand over fist at the finish.

The last race, the Moderate Plate, was the upset of the day, as a 15 to 1 chance Pilot got home and did so moreover in very convincing form. He had won at the previous meeting over hurdles and is a very fine stamp of horse up to any amount of weight and big enough to make the biggest place look small. He ought to be more than useful over Tollygunge in closed chases this season and he seems to have pace enough to win in even better company than that. Details of the racing appear in our usual columns.

The result of the St. Leger will, we fear, arrive to us too late to make comment possible in this issue. The feature of the betting market during the past week has been the steady advance of Prince Palatine, though the favourite, although he showed a tendency to go back, hardened again at the end of last week and on Saturday and Monday was at 11 to 8 at which price he stood before the demonstration in favour of Prince Palatine developed. On Monday, 12th, his price in London was 13 to 8, Lycaon 5 to 2 and Prince Palatine 4 to 1, the only other one mentioned being Pietri at 100 to 8. Mr. Joel was evidently backing his opinion for on no other grounds can we see the justification of Lycaon's advance.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—No rain to speak of having fallen between the first and second day, all conditions were ideal on Wednesday, and we could not have wished for a much better day's racing. There seemed to be a larger attendance, but punters did not score as anticipated in a card of all Terms races bar one. Only in one race was there a really small field, but in that case class made up for a deficiency of numbers as did the finish. Things have livened up considerably after a very quiet time during the Extras, but some of the Calcutta visitors are returning at once.

The books gave us a bit of a knock in the opening race when practically all the money paid out on the winner went to the owner. Lookman was at first favourite, but later Mudkoor passed him on the lists, Damra the only other really considered at all by the public. There were only seven starters, but not one of those mentioned could even bring in the place money. Evans rode a splendidly judged race on Zinfandel, who was first out but then gave way to Grey Falcon. The latter being palpably "big" ran surprisingly well and held his own when tackled by Lookman and Mudkoor, but near home Zinfandel came through along the rails and had them all well set. Last week a dog caused some anxiety by running out on to the course, and this occurred again, Mudkoor being the one to suffer, but it is ridiculous to suggest that it cost him more than second place.

A field of nine ponies went out for the handicap, and favouritism was in the balance for a time, till eventually Leo Grand firmed and Borgie in preference to Evening Herald was established second favourite in a fairly open betting race. It requires but little description as there was really only one in it, Leo Grand and Koko being out in front from Evening Herald. At the turn the last named went wide, letting up Borgie, and Koko was done. Borgie got the better of Encourage and staved off a late run by Ngakapa, who comes with Mr. Torrington's horses from the Land of Spices, but had no hope with Leo Grand, who won pretty well as he liked.

Next came the important Poona Plate with only four runners, Soultline always favourite, but plenty of money for Hoppner, in receipt of 24lb., Paul Pry at tens and Valiant any price. There was some delay, then all but Soultline streaked away, Paul Pry showing a nose in front and on settling down he and Hoppner were level, Soultline passing Valiant with daylight between himself and the front two. As well as being poorly away, Soultline had to come outside the other two at the turn, Hoppner getting the shortest journey, but at the distance the favourite looked good. He was on terms as they came up for the final dash, but Hoppner responding gamely left the judge unable to decide. It was a desperately exciting finish and there are not a few who thought Hoppner the winner, though, of course, an angle is most deceptive.

On his three wins, the Criterion certainly looked a soft thing for Black Douglas, steady money reducing him to odds on, though support for Gallileo prevented the former from warming to very short odds, Huka and Five Crown just nibbled at. We were not prepared to see the favourite so well up, he following Socialist in front of Gallileo, who had for a time been the pace maker. Convent Girl gave some promise but did not take part in the finish, Haut Park being the only one to make a show beyond those mentioned. Once well into the straight, Black Douglas as usual was under the whip, but we were not kept long in suspense, as Kuhn subsequently had only to keep him going with his hands to win, Gallileo outstaying Haut Park. For a first appearance, Socialist ran remarkably well, and will not be neglected in future.

Once again the public showed their confidence in the old idol, Precious, though he was meeting Tajilmulook at 9lb. worse terms than when beaten on Saturday. They presumably expected a solid run race and the shorter distance to tell in the top weight's favour. Valens ran game, but the race really rested between the other two. The order at first was, Company, Guinea Gold, Brigand, Well Done, Urgent, Braganza, Valens, with the great rivals last. At the mile Guinea Gold went clear in front, then at the five Valens led, Tajilmulook drawing up and turning the bend level. A little later Precious came through, but Tajilmulook once more went away. It was a pretty race, and there is no doubt the winner is better than he has ever been before.

Finally the Arab Pony Derby, for which naturally Abdul Malik was made favourite, but actually started less hot than when the betting opened, owing to money for Zoolphokarr. An indifferent starter, Zoolphokarr was fortunate enough to get fully two lengths to the good when the barrier went up, but well within the furlong Abdul Malik had passed him, by no means a wise move. As they neared the bend, Zoolphokarr drew level and they ran neck and neck, Kimberley behind them. A furlong from home Zoolphokarr had the other palpably set and, with nothing else to beat, won more comfortably than even his connections could have expected.

The first part of the Big Meeting came to a close on Saturday, a day remarkable for hot finishes and good racing, the attendance being good and the rain that fell being scarcely noticeable. Punters had a really bad time of it, as only in one race can they be said to have really scored. There were no falls or untoward incidents, the only fresh notice being to the effect that Brown, the jockey, was fined for not weighing out when third on Paul Pry on Wednesday, as well as being severely cautioned; the same also applying to the trainer, Byramjee Rustomjee, for not seeing his jockey weighed out.

To go through the card in proper order, we made a start with the Grand Annual, a hurdle race of two miles over nine flights in which five ran. It was difficult to get a line at all, the betting consequently being open—5 to 2 the field, Royal Scotland and Sholto at that price and Sequent threes. Sequent, Sholto, and Royal Scotland was the order to the first jump, which the last-named took badly, and continuing to lose lengths at each fence was never in it. Realm pecked badly, opposite the stand, then he and Mauser ran up to the leaders. At the six furlongs, however, the former pair were left on their own level. From the half mile Realm began to make up ground, Sequent again in the lead, and at the last lep all three were level. For such a long race the finish was excellent, all under the whip, and the old horse, Realm, got the better of the other two near home. He won all out by less than a length, and Sequent was only a head in front of Sholto, a very fine handicap.

The scratching of Wild Boy should have simplified matters in the International Plate for ponies, but as a matter of fact it did not prevent practically everyone getting into the cart. Byramjee had three in, a rush first coming for Waimoko, only for him to expand again on the right money going on Leo Grand, who warmed to evens; the third, Encourage, was only nibbled at, Runaway Girl on the betting was considered the danger She ran well for about six furlongs out of seven, Encourage making the pace all through.

The latter was under the whip at the distance, but, finishing on, had the mare settled and held Leo Grand safe when he came through from the ruck.

A very close finish was seen in the Novice Plate of ten furlongs when Obo and Gallileo met again over the same distance as before, and, on the strength that he would improve, the former was made favourite. Lancasterite's stable also confident. The race rested between the three, Absentee making the running as far as the last bend, where Lancasterite just showed to the good of Gallileo and Obo in that order from the rails. They ran practically level down the straight, Obo being first to claim a lead, and got home by only a head after a game finish by Gallileo, who is showing up better of a bit of a distance. Hamara was fancied, but gave trouble at the gate and lost ground there, eventually failing to stay, but she is a likely sort.

Next came the Poona Derby, round the course, and a field of twelve lined up opposite the stand, Cockeye being a warm favourite from Artist, Sir Hugo, Regent and Zainulmulook. It was a good start, Cockeye and Ghalyum getting the worst of it, Meazer making all the running clear in front in the favourite's interests. Terror, Regent and Artist were handiest for the first half mile or so, then Sir Hugo and Cockeye drew up to them. Five furlongs from home the favourite ran second, and soon after passed his stable companion, Thaboor and Dawood Beg creeping up outside. When they faced the straight Thaboor was about level with Cockeye, and after a grand race head and head the former got his neck in front, Dawood Beg beating Artist for a place with the latter making up a deal of ground in the last two furlongs.

The start was from the same place in the next, this being the Aga Khan Cup with all ten on the card starting, Last Call being the medium of a big gamble and next Black Buck, Hilarity, Mayfowl and Black Douglas. It was a perfect start, Aborigine making the running to the nine furlongs, where Cattaro took over, he being passed at the six by Coat of Arms, Black Buck and Dumella here dropping back and Black Douglas coming into second place followed by Hilarity and Last Call. As they reached the bend Last Call was palpably all out, Hilarity drawing up to the leader on the rails and Black Douglas outside. These two looked like again making a great fight of it, but at about the distance Coat of Arms began to run out, threw Black Douglas out of his stride and left Hilarity to win. It was a good race, but one would have liked to have seen what difference the interference made.

There were no less than sixteen in the sprint, the Autumn Plate, which perhaps accounts for the failure of fancied ones, as there was a crush at the bend. Lord Merv made all the running to the bend, where he, Grevillea, and Watch Tower had had enough, Solution running up with Aquatic and Socialist. Once in the straight, however, it was no race, as Aquatic went away as he liked and The Cockatoo, finishing well, failed to catch the other two. It was a very easy win, and as Aquatic has only recently been handed he should continue now to improve.

Lastly the Wanowrie Plate, and on his Pony Derby win Zoolphokarr was, of course, favourite, being in receipt of an extra four pounds from Abdul Malik, next being Rajput and Jehangir. It was a magnificent race, but Zoolphokarr after being up at the bend took no part in the finish. Majesty cut out the pace, then left Rajput and Jehangir in front. A desperate race ensued for the last two furlongs between them, but a few strides from the post Abdul Malik found a lucky opening, shot through and snatched a head win from the dead-heaters, a better judged race thus made all the difference.

Our London correspondent writes:—"I wired you on the 23rd August that J. B. Joel's Derby winner, Sunstar, had given way in his St. Leger preparation, and that he was forthwith retiring to the stud. Sunstar's breakdown, though not entirely unexpected, is to be regretted, for everyone was hoping that the trouble which manifested itself during the race for the Derby would be overcome by rest and careful treatment, and that the son of Sundridge would be able to run in the St. Leger, and add his name to the list of winners of the "Triple Crown." This there seemed every prospect of his doing, for on the running at Epsom he appeared to have the beating of all the possible competitors at Doncaster, and all doubts as to his staying the course had been set at rest. By Sundridge out of Doris, Sunstar was bred by J. B. Joel in 1908. His first appearance on a racecourse was in the New Stakes at Ascot last year, where he finished fourth to Seaforth, Nerestan, and Sandal. He then won the Exeter Stakes at Newmarket First July Meeting, beating Canvasback a neck. A defeat by St. Nat followed in the Lavant Stakes at Goodwood, but he next ran away with the International Foal Stakes at Kempton Park in which Ilia, who was second, was in receipt of 12lb. In the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster he was beaten by Pietri and Wrinkler, and in the Hopeful Stakes at Newmarket First October meeting ran a dead-heat with Borrow.

This year Sunstar proved himself far in advance of any of his own age. Coming out first for the Two Thousand Guineas, he won in a canter from Stedfast, with his stable companion, Lycaon, third, while in the Newmarket Stakes he had no difficulty in beating the moderate opposition, odds of 100 to 15 being laid on him.

Shortly before the Derby all sorts of wild rumours were circulated concerning the horse, some even going so far as to hint that efforts would be made to prevent him winning. How he won is now, of course, a matter of Turf history. Notwithstanding the fact that he broke down a furlong from home, he ran on gamely to the end, and actually increasing his lead in the last 100 yards, finished two lengths in front of Stedfast, with 24 others behind the pair. He was ridden in his races this year by the French jockey, G. Stern.

A recent issue of the Racing Calendar contained the entry for the Derby and Oaks of 1913. The great Epsom race closed with 328 nominations, including 28 made in Paris and 34 in New York. In next year's Derby, it may be incidentally remarked, 364 horses are engaged; in the race which Sunstar won last June there were 374. In 1902 there were 286, and ten years earlier 206. Though the number for 1913 is thus somewhat smaller than for the previous two years—there were 315 in 1909 it must be regarded as handsomely sustained.

His Majesty has five in the race—Anmer (Florizel II.—Guinea Hen) named after the productive partridge ground which is a portion of the Sandringham Estate—Flitcham (Desmond—Sweet Vernal), another Sandringham partridge beat—and unnamed sons of Thrush and Pearl of the Loch, Spearmint and Laodamia, and Thrush and White Lilac. Year after year the same owners, with very few accessions to their ranks, are found responsible for the Derby and Oaks entries, and many of those whose names reappear have already gratified a breeder's ambition by winning classic races. Mr. Waldorf Astor, who took the One Thousand Guineas with Winkipop, has an own brother to her, Pilliwinkie, in the Derby of 1913, as well as a son of Troutbeck. Of those who have won the Derby already, Mr. Fairie contents himself with one chance the year after next—Chaunt, by Chaucer—Bona Dea. Mr. J. B. Joel has five sons of Sundridge, including an own brother to this year's winner Sunstar and to his promising two-year-old White Star, with in addition a son of Bachelor's Button. Mr. J. W. Larnach has put in a son of Jeddah, who created one of the greatest surprises in the history of the race by winning in 1898; and a couple of others, by Orme—Victoria May and Marco—Eileen Asthore. Major Eustace Loder hopes to produce a son of Spearmint and Auspicious, together with Maitre Corbeau, by Gallinule—Lutetia, an own brother to French Partridge, whose career was not particularly inspiring. The Duke of Portland has seven engaged, three being sons of William the Third, who failed by only three-quarters of a length to win the Derby of 1901, which fell to Volodyovski. Lord Rosebery, who has taken the great race on three occasions, has entered five, two sons and a daugther of Cicero, a chestnut colt by Bachelor's Button—Chelandry, and one by Santry—Valve. Mr. Leopold de Rothschild has entered six, one a son of his Derby winner St. Amant, and two by St. Frusquin, who came within a neck of victory when beaten by King Edward's Persimmon. For the rest, Mr. W. Hall Walker, whose colours have been seen comparatively seldom of late, has entered no fewer than eight, three by his horse Count Schomberg and one, Abbot's Moss, by the grey hurdle-jumper Friary, the dam being Mother Siegel, and the colt therefore half brother to Minoru.

By defeating England in the preliminary singles contest America has secured the right to meet Australasia in the International Lawn Tennis competition for the Davis Cup. Larned (America) beat Dixon (England) 6—3, 2—6, 6—3, 3—6, 7—5. McLaughlin (America) beat Lowe (England) 7—5, 6—1, 4—6, 4—6, 6—3. England, however, won the doubles match Dixon and Beamish beating Bundy and Little (America).

The cricket match between the Gentlemen and the Players at Scarborough last week was drawn, the Players leading on the first innings.

Of the many curious captures made from time to time by anglers few can have created more surprise at the moment than the catching of a stickleback when fishing for sea trout. On Saturday, 5th August, Major James Platt was fishing from a boat in Loch Durinemast, on the Glenmorven estate, when he hooked and landed a stickleback on a Silver Doctor. What the stickleback could have been about is a mystery says a correspondent of the Field. Possibly in the pugnacious manner they have, it intended to drive away the intruding monster—represented by the fly—and then stopping suddenly, was impaled by the hook. At any rate it has found a place in the game book under the heading of "various."

Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen

Merits Every Good Word ever spoken in its praise.

To say a Fountain Pen is reliable, does not make it so. To say a Fountain Pen is the best, does not make it so. But when hundreds of thousands of people constantly affirm that a certain Fountain Pen is absolutely reliable, and is without a doubt the best, then one may be quite sure the pen possesses exceptional merit.

People started praising Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen twenty-six years ago. To-day, in its perfected form, Waterman's Ideal enjoys the whole-hearted support of millions of writers. No, it is no exaggeration—millions. Over a million Waterman's Ideals were sold last year—also the year before. Could you wish for stronger evidence of the quality of the Pen?

New rules under the Indian Forest Act (1878) to regulate the shooting, trapping or killing in any way of urial in reserved and protected forests in the Attock, Jhelum, Shahpur, and Mianwali districts, are notified in the current Punjab Gazette. This notification cancels all previous shooting notices relating to these forests, except notification No. 76, dated the 7th May 1891, which will remain in force.

The draft rules are as follows:—

1. The shooting, trapping or killing in any way of urial is absolutely prohibited except under license to be granted on payment of a fee of Rs. 20 by the Deputy Commissioner of the district concerned, provided that the Deputy Commissioner may delegate authority to grant licenses to the Forest Officer of the Division.

2. The following rules will govern the issue of licenses:—

(a) One person will not ordinarily be allowed to shoot more than 2 male urial in one shooting season, i.e., from the 16th September to the 14th March inclusive.

(b) No male urial having horns less than 23 inches in length may be shot.

(c) A license will not ordinarily be granted for a period of more than 10 days.

(d) An application for a license will not be considered more than one month before the date on which the lincense is required.

(e) All licenses are issued subject to the conditions printed therein.

(f) In the absence of any further notice which may be issued by the Conservator of Forests, Punjab, persons requiring licenses should apply to the Deputy Commissioner of the district concerned.

3. The total number of urial which may be shot in any district during each shooting season will be settled by the Conservator of Forests, Punjab, in consultation with the local officers.

4. Gazetted officers serving the Punjab Government when on tour within their district may shoot without obtaining a license, provided that:—

(i) They do not visit any block at the time when it has been assigned to another licensee.

(ii) They are bound by the shooting rules in all other respects.

5. Deputy Commissioners of the districts specified may exempt individual landholders in the possession of arms-licenses from the operation of these rules.

Details of an attempt to rear ostriches in Germany by Mr. Hagenbeck, the famous zoological expert, are given by the American Consul at Hamburg. He states that the Hagenbeck ostrich farm at Stellingen, near Hamburg, was founded three years ago, and is growing rapidly in importance as well as in size. It was Mr. Hagenbeck's theory that the ostrich, although a native of tropical or hot countries, would thrive in colder localities, and as a result be stronger in health and grow a heavier coat of feathers. During the three years that the Stellingen farm has been in existence, this theory has been proved to be correct, although for reasons to be explained the enterprise has not been commercially successful, aside from its value as the adjunct of an important amusement enterprise. In South Africa and in other warm countries ostrich feathers are plucked regularly at the end of every nine months, this being the usual time required for the bird to grow a new coat, but in Hamburg, owing to the cold weather, the feathers can be plucked only in the spring of the year, the birds being housed in the winter months, except on days of sunshine, and always at night. During these housing periods the feathers become broken, and while they are still of value they are less so than feathers plucked in good condition at the right season. Apart from this, the general health of the birds is all that could be desired, the rate of mortality being extremely low.

An adult male lion, recently caught in the forest near Benguella, on the south-west coast of Africa, and presented to the King, arrived at Southampton one day last week. His Majesty has presented it to the Gardens of the Royal Zoological Society in Dublin, and arrangements had been made to reship it to Dublin at once, but on account of the dock strike this was found impossible, and the Zoological Society of London agreed to take charge of it temporarily. Accordingly the Society's van went to the East India Dock to bring back the lion, and the driver, who is one of the staff at Regent's Park, was not interfered with. It was found, however, that the very large case in which the lion had been shipped could not be taken on the van, and Messrs. Pickford agreed to provide a two-horse trolley on condition that the Society's vanman should drive it at his own risk. The case was accordingly transferred to the trolley, and the vehicle, with its unusual burden, emerged from the dock gates, escorted by policemen. The strikers made a hostile demonstration, objecting to Pickford's van being used, and the trolley was stopped. Angry men swarmed over it threateningly to upset it, but the lion saved the situation by roaring, and the policemen, recognising the effectiveness of this reserve force, pulled up the canvas cover which protected the iron bars in front of the cage so as to display its occupant to the crowd. The strikers, like the cowards they are, quickly abandoned their intentions, and the lion proceeded on its journey in peace.

The Mounted Sports held by the Bombay Gymkhana on the 6th instant were sparsely attended owing to the miserable weather; the going was very heavy but the programme was put through nevertheless. A start was made with the jumping for horses which was won by R. A. Spence, with H. F. Lodge and E. G. Pehrson second and third respectively. Tilting at the Ring and Tent-pegging for men was won easily by L. Graham, with R. A. Spence second and A. L. Reynolds third. The Affinity Bending race came next—lady and gentleman holding a ribbon will ride the bending race course: knocking a ball off a post or letting go the ribbon will disqualify. Mrs. Reynolds and H. G. W. Meikle, 1; Mrs. McCausland and T. Moore, 2; Miss Shuttleworth and Knight Bruce, 3. Knight Bruce won the Musical Chairs after keen competition, and the programme wound up with the Aunt Sally Stakes—men to ride the course to their ladies and don a hat which the lady has to knock off with tennis balls, man to ride back to winning post. Mrs. McCausland won easily partnered by H. G. W. Meikle. The usual scurry fell through owing to lack of entries.

The Upper India Amateur Golf Championship of 1911, was recently held at Gulmarg and won by Mr. C. Campbell, 74th Punjabis, who carried off the Amateur Championship of India at Calcutta in 1905. The conditions were 18 holes match play, with 36 holes in the final round. Mr. Campbell had an exciting struggle in the final round with Mr. R. G. Gardiner, 25th Punjabis, who had won the championship at the last two meetings. They were all square when the 36th hole had been played and Mr. Gardner was beaten on the 38th green.

The final in the Poona Open Polo Tournament was played on the 7th instant when Maharaja Sir Partab Singh's cup was won by the Central India Horse who beat the Inniskilling Dragoons by 8 goals to nil. The Dragoons, who had won the cup in 1909-10, were handicapped by the absence of Mr. Burnham.

For the fifth year in succession the Bombay Rugby Tournament has been won by the 1st West Ridings Regiment. They beat the Leicester Regiment in the final last Thursday by 2 goals (1 penalty) to nil. Details further on.

The following will represent the Parsees against the Presidency in the big match which begins at Poona to-day:—Dr. M. E. Pavri (captain), Messrs. J. P. Canteenwala, S. F. Madon, M. B. Wacha, K. B. Mistry, R. E. Mody, S. M. Chothia, D. K. Kapadia, D. D. Driver, P. D. Chothia, and M. D. Parekh. Reserves: Messrs. P. D. Kapadia and M. D. Umrigar. Umpire: Mr. J. L. Bilimoria. The Presidency team will be as follows:—Major A. Douglas (captain), Major J. G. Greig, Mr. H. L. Simms, Mr. F. R. R. Brooke, Mr. R. E. Cooper, Major W. M. Southey, Captain E. D. Tillard, Captain N. M. Kington, Mr. C. A. Tennant, Captain P. D. Green, Captain Armytage and Captain J. A. Yates.

E. Barry met Fogwell, of New South Wales, in a race for the English sculling championship between Putney and Mortlake on the Thames on Monday. The Australian led early in the race and was two lengths to the good at Harrods, but thereafter Barry easily overhauled him, and passing his opponent was soon six lengths ahead. This lead he increased to ten lengths and then slackened down, eventually winning by three and a half lengths and thus retaining his title. Time—22mins. 14secs.

The Imperial Cricket Conference at a meeting in London on Monday last approved all arrangements recommended by the Board of Control with regard to the triangular matches and county matches with Colonials. The meeting also altered the date of the test match between England and Australia at the Oval from 22nd to 19th August, so as to allow of the match being played to a finish. Lord Harris and Lord Hawke represented England at the meeting, Mr. W. Findlay, Australia, and Mr. H. D. G. Leveson-Gower, South Africa.

Jack Lester, the American heavyweight boxer, meet Bill Lang for the heavyweight championship of Australia at Sydney on the 9th instant, the verdict going to Lester on points at the end of the twenty rounds. It will be remembered that the pair had meet previously last May when Lester, Tommy Burns' discovery, had been disqualified, the referee deciding that he had gone down to escape punishment in the sixth round. Lester explained afterwards that his arm was paining him badly and that he really stumbled. A return battle was arranged, which has resulted in Lang losing his title.

During the past thirty-six years numerous attempts have been made to emulate the exploit of Captain Webb who swam across the English Channel, from Dover to Calais in 1875. The names of Holbein, Wolff and Burgess stand out prominent among those who have made the most meritorious efforts. On two occasions Wolff and Holbein have been within an ace of success, when their attempts have had to be abandoned owing to unfavourable tides. But on Wednesday last Burgess put the crown on his several previous efforts by accomplishing the feat. Reuter informs us that Burgess entered the water at the South Foreland Lighthouse at 10-30 on the morning of the 5th, and landed at Cape Grisnez at about 10 A.M. the next day. He started with a powerful stroke and made great progress. There was a heat at the start which later developed into a dense fog, and there was no news of the swimmer for eighteen hours. The water was beautifully smooth, and there was a strong spring tide. He came ashore in a dead calm sea two miles east of Cape Gris Nez, the actual landing being witnessed by a Customs officer and a semaphore signalman. He returned to Deal in a motor boat and was given a great ovation. Congratulations have poured in upon him and His Majesty has also sent him a message. We await full details of the remarkable swim before comparing it with Captain Webb's feat.

Exit "The Drought." The long spell of glorious sunshine is at an end. Ah! Those fifty-seven merry days which will make the memory of the summer of 1911 very precious, a cherished recollection to be pulled out and talked about years hence when climatic conditions do not exactly fit in with our arrangements or conduce to our comfort. To-day the sky is of the old familiar, dismal London colour, the rain has washed out the last tint of blue, all is pallid grey. Underneath it we are in London again and already discontented. A little more and we might have changed into the likeness of Neapolitans, who in long months of unbroken sunshine become so virtuous that they must needs organise themselves into Associations for the practice and support of crime—Mafia and Camorra—lest life should lose its savour. Here in London, now that the rain has fallen, there are three murders, a revolting case of assault on a girl and one of fiendish cruelty to an animal already reported in the newspapers. Soon London will be herself again.

* * * * * *

Doubtless the enterprising Reuter has told you over the wires of "the drought." Drought quotha? There was no drought in London, my masters. Our reservoirs were full. The water-carts drove out: the taps answered every turn: the pitcher never went in vain to the fountain. Londoners complained, and with reason, of their clothes. Very few of us males have Tussore silks in the wardrobe and if we have, unlike your "Vagrant," we have not the courage to wear them! The starched collar was a burden: the tall hat and black coat made a walking pillory for those whose trade must be followed in that sad uniform. Many found that their houses were not built for a warm climate, that their heavy-handed cooks were serfs to tradition, lacking the seasonable touch.

But who complained of the weather? Who railed against that sun which, day after day, warmed us generously to the bone? We knew, we Londoners, that our winter is full six months long. We do not need the warning of those tumbling leaves for a reminder that, before the boughs are bare, we shall be huddling to the fire again. When the black days come, when the cold winds blow, how gratefully shall we remember the golden July, the golden August. "Drought" will not be our word for that kindly memory.

Well, that rash and scandalous enterprise the railway strike is said to be over; that is to say, it has been "officially" declared at an end. Experience teaches us to be shy of official announcements in matters such as these, and it is more than likely that ere long we shall have fresh trouble. The men have gone back to work in nearly all the centres, and we are now told that we may expect to hear of a "settlement" in the near future. The net results, so far, appear to be these. The companies have gained:—

(1) An immediate and full resumption of traffic.

(2) The reference of "any question of representation" to a Commission.

(3) A promise of legislation to enable them to increase their charges to meet any addition in the cost of labour due to improvement in the conditions of the staff.

(4) A prospect of lasting peace (!) through the promise of both parties to abide by the findings of the Commission.

The advantages secured to the men under the agreement may be summarised thus:—

1. Reinstatement of all men locked out at Liverpool and elsewhere.

2. Reinstatement of all strikers without any penalisation.

3. A face-to-face talk between representatives of the companies and representatives of the trade unions, which the men describes as "recognition" for the purposes of this dispute.

4. A speedy inquiry into all grievances regarding the working of the Conciliation Boards, including the question whether "recognition" should be conceded.

5. An immediate speeding up of the work of the Conciliation Boards pending the inquiry, and the setting up of special conferences regarding employees not included in the scheme of 1907.

* * * * * *

One serious question remains, however, to which the representatives of the men will find it hard to discover an answer satisfactory to the general public. Why did they not accept on Thursday the offer of a Royal Commission when on Saturday, after causing heavy loss and great inconvenience to millions of innocent persons, they are ready to refer all outstanding matters to a Special Commission of Inquiry? The public will not be favourably impressed with the methods of Trade Unionism if it is not until the whole country has been disorganised and disastrous riots leading to loss of life have been fomented that its leaders will consent to an impartial investigation of the grievances they allege. The only satisfactory feature of the whole disastrous episode has been the clear proof it affords that strong measures designed to preserve order can be promptly devised and satisfactorily enforced. But for the presence of the military in sufficient force at all the danger points this strike might have taken a very different and far more violent course. As it is the difficulties are not wholly at an end since the Manchester men refused by an over-whelming majority to accept the terms agreed in London. That refusal may be reversed on second thoughts based on a clearer knowledge of the actual text of the agreement, but the instinctive rejection of peace by a large body of the men bodes ill for the future. Among the knotty points that the Commission will have to consider is the means of ensuring that agreements once signed and ratified are loyally observed by the men. The breach not only of their legal contracts but of their moral obligations by the railwaymen will not heighten the respect paid to agreed settlements throughout the Trade Union world. Though the danger and damage to the public threatened by a prolongation of this particular dispute has been avoided, the general unrest continues, and no one can say with any certainty where the next overt manifestation may be expected. If the great strike is ended, still rumours of strikes fill the air. Just as undue exaggeration of the effects of this dispute for sensational purposes was greatly to be deprecated, so undue optimism at the truce may be equally dangerous. All the elements of disaffection that have shown themselves during the last tumultuous week continue. Repressed for the moment, they may reappear at any time. The trouble must be thoroughly investigated, and the remedies adopted cannot end with patching up a few formulated differences of opinion. No nation can survive in the struggle of the modern industrial world if Capital and Labour carry on an internecine feud within its borders as fierce as that which brought the free cities of Italy to ruin.

* * * * * *

The effects of the fifty hours dislocation of railway traffic have been so vast that it is only possible to make a rough calculation of the loss in life and wages which has accompanied the strike.

During two short days thousands of pounds have been lost to masters and men, thousands of tons of perishable food have been wasted, the price of food has advanced from 25 to 100 per cent., and, owing to the closing of works and factories, an army of workers have been thrown idle.

Here are some approximate figures as closely gauged as possible of the effect of the two days' strike:—

People killed	19
Injured	450
Arrests made	300
Troops called out	50,000
Special constables	6,000
Passengers affected	6,000,000
Loss to companies	£700,000
Loss to employees	£200,000
Loss on goods traffic	£300,000
Loss in dividends	£200,000
Miles of rails affected	53,972

There is hardly an industry which has not suffered more or less from the strike. The inability to get raw material and to despatch goods has resulted in scores of cotton mills being closed in Lancashire, and in the northern counties and Wales thousands of miners have been thrown idle as the result of the railway war.

Ogre" looks somewhat formidable, but your modern ogre is a very different sort of being from "the man-eating giant of fairy tales" who figures so largely in nursery lore. The present day type—how have the mighty fallen!—we regard as rather a kindly and genial personage, whose bark is very much worse than his bite. And, as, in Mr. Jones's forthcoming comedy, the part is to be played by Sir George Alexander, it is fair to assume that the ogre, represented by him, possesses few of the attributes of his terrifying predecessors. The new piece, in short, is best described as a domestic play; the principal character is nothing more romantic than the typical father of a twentieth-century family, and the story deals with the ordinary troubles of every-day life. The first Act takes place in London, and the second and third in the country. In addition to Sir George, the cast includes Miss Kate Cutler, Miss Gladys Cooper, Miss Iris Hawkins, Miss Loverett, and Miss Ricimer, together with Mr. A. E. Matthews, Mr. C. M. Hallard, Mr. Sydney Valentine, Mr. Owen Nares, Mr. Arthur Royston, and Mr. E. Vivian Reynolds.

By reason of its novelty and of its unusual proportions, the greatest interest is attached to the promised production at Olympia, to be presented, probably on Christmas Eve, by Messrs. F. H. Payne and C.-B. Cochran, under the direction of Professor Max Reinhardt. Preparations are already well afoot, and it is safe to say that so stupendous a spectacle has never yet been witnessed in this country. Mr. Ernst Stern, who, at the Deutsches Theatre in Berlin, superintends the lighting effects and the pictorial details of all productions, came over to London to study the conditions at Olympia, and subsequently constructed a 10 feet model of the place, which was duly despatched to Professor Reinhardt, in order that he might make his plans accordingly. Mr. Stern it was who designed scenery and costumes for "Sumurun" and "Lysistrata," and he will undertake the same work in connection with the Olympian show, for which the whole of the vast arena will be pressed into service.

About two-thirds of the space will represent the interior of an Early Gothic cathedral, built up, with solid pillars and roof, in the most elaborate fashion. On each side are the seats, to the number of 10,000, provided for the accommodation of the spectators, who will thus look down upon the animated and realistic picture below. At the west end of this mimic cathedral are enormous iron gates, which when thrown open, reveal a picturesque view of the Rhine Valley, with a glimpse of the distant hills. Winding down these a procession of villagers and priests, presently to pass into the cathedral, makes its way. At the east end of the building there are again massive gates, supposed to lead into an adjoining nunnery. The greater part of the action of the piece, which is simple, but at points strongly dramatic, takes place in the cathedral; but a touch of lightness is given to the proceedings by a village festival outside the cathedral doors.

The author of this "wordless mystery drama" is Dr. Karl Vollmoeller, a young German writer, who has already done several Greek adaptations for Professor Reinhardt. The period chosen for the story is the end of the twelfth century, and the dresses, consequently, will practically be of a like design to those used in "Faust." The leading female character is a nun. The part will probably be played by a famous French pantomimic artist with whom negotiations are now in progress. The two chief male personages are a knight and his troubadour, to be represented by a couple of well-known German actors. The crowd, which forms an important factor in the evolution of the drama, will include no fewer than 2,000 persons, whose movements are to be directed and controlled by Reinhardt himself. The music, by Humperdinck, is to be a very special feature, and of a character both lay and ecclesiastical. One scene represents a children's Christmas festival, and it will easily be understood that the opportunity thus provided him will be eagerly seized upon by the composer of "Hansel and Gretel."

"ALPINE PASTURES."

THE month is May, the time, that glorious hour before the sun rises over the distant snowcapped giants which are already changing from a dull silvery gray to the most delicate tint of pink.

The last, monotonous but not unmusical, notes of Hodgson's night-jar are wafted up from the fringe of trees far below you, visible only in the form of a dense black mass, mingled with the clatter of kitchen utensils and the clearing of throats and coughing, which is always the sign of a waking camp in India. As you roll over to steal a few more minutes' sleep, with the sound of laboured breathing and blowing in your ears as the general help whom your cook has engaged, vainly struggles to rekindle the dying embers of last night's bonfire, into a respectable blaze, the loud call of the Koklass pheasant is heard and you are warned that this is no time for sleep and if you are to be among the haunts of the "bhurrel" (the Blue sheep) before they have left their grazing grounds, you must waste no more time in sleep. Your dressing and toilet in a "shikar" camp are of the simplest, and before your faithful "factotum" has got your tea and toast ready, you are dressed and sitting before the blaze and watching the kettle simmering.

It is still dark in the valleys but up on the "alpine pastures" the dawn is breaking and the plaintive "Lip ya, lip ya" of the Himalayan snow cock can be heard among the rocks, all round and above the camp.

A hurried chota-hazri and you are off up the hill, with your pet rifle carried by the shikari behind you, and ere the sun has topped the neighbouring crests, you are safely ensconced behind a huge boulder which shelters you from the cutting breeze and yet affords you an excellent view of the country around, which you carefully scan through your glasses. At last a wee grey dot moving among the rocks, far above, catches the eye and as it gets accustomed to the distance, a solitary ewe is revealed, making her way leisurely from boulder to boulder. This is the sentinel and following the line she is taking, your glasses soon pick up a herd of some 15 sheep, some still browsing, one old ram, standing on the very pinnacle of a large pointed rock, spying out the land, and a couple of young lambs carrying on a mimic war, lazily watched by their admiring parents. First of all the one takes three or four paces back, then getting upon his hind legs, he runs forward on two legs and charges his opponent, lowering his head as he comes down on all fours again, when within a foot of the other. No. 2 receives him with head bent, and so they stand for a few seconds, then retreat and this time it is No. 2's turn to attack, and so the play goes on

Those that are browsing, however, do not seem at ease, and you notice that every now and again heads are raised and one or more come to the edge of the little plateau and gaze over into the valley below, in spite of the fact that the old ram still stands stationary on his rock and the sentinel some 50 yards below has given no sign of alarm.

There is no reason for their uneasiness, it is not exactly alarm, and you are at a loss how to account for it. They could not have got wind of you as the wind blows straight down the hill, a fact you were careful to notice before you took up your position, and they certainly have not seen you, so what can it mean? One thing, however, is certain and that is, that you dare not attempt a stalk till the last of them has gone over the spur behind them, for in their present uneasy state of mind not an object could stir without it being observed, so you resign yourself to a long and weary waiting.

No, long it may be, but never weary, for the sun is well over the hill tops and a glorious panorama unfolds itself. On your right and as far as the eye can reach, range upon range of great waving mountains and serried peaks, snow fields and perpendicular cliffs: barren slopes and dark green forests of spruce and fir, or the light green birch and maple, with a fitting background, formed by the furthest range, its virgin snows mingling with the thin fleecy clouds miles and miles away. Below you is a green stretch of soft turf liberally sprinkled with flowers of every shade and colour, which is bordered by a fringe of juniper and stunted birch and rhododendron, now one mass of pink and white, for these altitudes are too high for the crimson variety, and below that again the dark forest line, extending down for miles till the haunts of man are reached, the dwellings looking at this distance, like a colony of grey-brown ant-hills.

As you fill and light your pipe, you are at peace with the world, and while keeping one eye on the "bhurrel" above, you have ample leisure to watch the antics of a tiny wren that skips about among the rocks beside you and from time to time looks at you with its tiny wee black beads of eyes, curious to know what man could have to do here. Anon, a mouse-hare jumps on the stone before you, pricks his ears, sits up on his tailless haunches and carefully goes through his morning ablutions, rubbing his pink paws first over nose and eyes, till the head, ears and neck all have their turn, when he stops to listen, and just then becomes aware of the presence of a trespasser on his little domain, and scuttles off into a crevice to re-appear again a few minutes later. A flock of snow-pigeons fly past at a tremendous pace to their feeding grounds, and the cheery note of the red-billed chough, fills the air, "kreu-kree-kree kreu kree" "Oh, isn't this lovely," he seems to say, and the remark is taken up by a score of little black throats, that whirl about in the air, cutting the most extraordinary capers in the clear blue sky. A lammergeyer sails gracefully over the plateau just above the sheep and satisfied that none of them are bleeding or likely to die just yet, he begins circling, and without one single movement of those long wings, and without the least exertion rises higher and ever higher till he soars over the ridge above and drops into the next valley. Peace and quiet reign supreme and all the inhabitants of this mountain top appear to live in harmony.

Alas! the marauder who is to strike terror within their little hearts is not far off, and you realise that something is amiss in the feathered world too, as you see the choughs all rise up together and begin ringing into the clear blue sky. They are no longer playing with each other, stooping and rising as the mood seizes them, but ascending on steady wing, as if to get beyond the strike of some foe.

You look cautiously round, above and below and soon discover the cause. There, just above your camp are seen two dark specks, a shade darker than the trees against which they can be seen, and as they approach, you can clearly see a white patch on either wing, and another on the tail of one, while the other is of a uniform dark brown almost black, and only a lighter shade on the head. These are the dread Dung-shoorah of the shepherd, or the golden eagle, aptly called "the monarch of the feathered tribe." The one with the white patches on wings and tail is slightly the larger bird, so you put her down as a young female in her first plumage, and the other an old tiercel. Not a flap of their wings and yet every turn they take finds them a hundred feet higher than the last, and the only movement perceptible to the eye, is a slight twist of the tail, every now and again. Up and up they come, till when straight over your head you notice their heads are ever on the turn, watching every inch of country beneath them. Suddenly a scared snow-cock rises with a whirr and a frightened scream, and is instantly followed by the tiercel who is nearer to it, at the time and he in turn is pursued by the female. The chase is of short duration, as the eagles had the advantage, and were in full stoop, before the cock was able to get up his pace. The tiercel, however, missed but as he rose to make his point, the female was up to the cock and a pair of relentless talons had it safely in their firm grasp.

But what of the sheep in the meantime, as it is now getting late in the morning, and all self-respecting bhurrel should have chosen the spot for their mid-day siesta. They have moved up a little way up the hill but do not appear to be in any hurry to settle down for the day. At last they round the spur, and even the rear-guard has vanished, and you prepare to follow, but look hard at the 2,000 feet of a hard climb before you, ere you make up your mind to tackle it. There is no need now for any particular caution as the herd is well on the other side of the hill. Climbing is not an unmixed blessing in this rarified atmosphere and your progress is slow, but at length you reach the crest and peer over a rock, taking great care to show as little of yourself as possible. After a few minutes you are rewarded and again see the herd, but still on the move. What can it mean? Slowly you watch them go along the contour of the hill, across the ravine, and along the opposite side, and still very much on the qui-vive. The way they have now taken is almost an impossible one to follow, being a succession of land slides and rocks which the least movement would set going and hurl you down the slide, with a miniature avalanche on the top of you. Even as the sheep go over, you can hear great boulders being displaced and go hurtling down the hill side to the nullah below.

The only course open to you now is to go along the spur you are now on, climb another 100 feet or so and take the next spur from where it joins the one on which you are. Up you go, more than ever determined to be even with the herd that has given you such a tramp, but before you reach the top, you have to cross a patch of snow which has not melted yet, some 300 yards long by 100 broad and this suddenly gives you the whole clue, regarding the uneasiness of the bhurrel. There straight before you are the tracks of the ounce or snow-leopard but not very fresh. They make a good deep impression, which shows that the snow was soft at the time when he passed, so therefore it must have been late on the previous evening and just after the sun had left the place. Had they been made while the sun was on them, and the snow soft, even if they had not been quite obliterated, by the melting of the snow, they would certainly not be clear, as the water would have filled up the toe prints, and freezing during the night have made the pugs uneven, which they were not. On the other hand, as it freezes in these altitudes as soon as the sun goes down the snow would be too hard to take an impression, so it must have been made last evening, and the leopard by now might be 20 miles away. However, it was enough for the bhurrel, who must have got some scent of him on the tainted air, and as there was not the least chance of their composing themselves to sleep that day, there is little use of trying to follow them into the next district, so you get on the lee-ward of a sheltering rock and start on the sandwiches and cold tea your man has sent with you.

That done your faithful pipe is again requisitioned, while you smooth out the greasy old newspaper which formed the outer covering of your frugal breakfast, and read of events which took place three months previously, and gradually a drowsy feeling comes over you and you find yourself in the arms of Morpheus and in your dreams watch the sheep still grazing and the little lambs at play.

From your dreams you are rudely awakened by the individual beside you who informs you in a stage whisper, with his eyes staring out of his head, that he has seen a bhaloo. Following his gaze, you spot a brown speck moving on the green hill-side some half a mile above you, and your glasses reveal a huge brown bear, which has left his lair rather early in the day, to make up for his long winter fast.

You hand over your rifle to your shikari and taking your alpine stock you proceed to lessen the distance between friend Bruin and yourself and 20 minutes finds you in the next ravine to that in which you last saw the bear, and on the same level. Cautiously you top the next spur and peer over, to find him still turning over stones, in almost exactly the same spot as when you first set eyes on him.

He is not in the least suspicious, and as the wind is just right and is not likely to give you away, you can make yourself comfortable, and amuse yourself watching him through your glasses at under 50 yards, and seeing what he is after. Very deliberately he puts up one massive paw, and getting his long white nails under a stone, turns it over, and looks beneath it, but this one yields nothing and he goes on to the next, but picks up a mouthful of grass (the wild carrot) en route.

FISHING.

The next is a boulder that takes some shifting, and is apparently deeply embedded in the earth, but old Bruin's forearms are equal to a good deal and he uses both arms this time, gets his claws well under it and pulls towards him and out comes the stone and goes rolling down the hill from between his legs. This spot seems to cause the bear some anxiety, for he looks at it and then walks off to one side, and slowly puts his huge paw over it and lifts up a long white looking thing on the tip of one nail, but it is not edible and he drops it and carefully smells the place. This satisfies him, and he sets to work to dig in right earnest, and in a few minutes the whole of his head is out of sight. His hind legs subside under him and he squats down to do the rest of his work, and you can hear deep grunts and heavy breathing emanating from the hole he has made. Suddenly something disturbs him and he pulls his head out with a jerk, gets up on all fours and with his nose well up in the air, his little beady eyes rolling from side to side in their sockets, takes stock of the surrounding country and satisfies himself that there is no danger lurking and returns to his digging. He is now, however, alarmed and hardly has his head disappeared when it is again withdrawn, and this time he sits up on his tail, ears cocked and his nose well on the move, but again the wind tells him nothing. He is, however, not quite satisfied, and is distinctly worried about something, but seemingly cannot himself make out what has alarmed him, and he gets away from his hole and starts moving slowly along the hill-side and towards you, so it cannot be you that has anything to do with his suspicions. Suddenly a gust of wind from the back almost blows your hat off and confirms bhaloo's worst suspicions and he stands straight up on his hind legs, and looks straight at you with unseeing eyes, and if you mean to be the proud possessor of that lovely coat you have no time to lose for he will be off in another second. You have already drawn a bead a little to one side on that huge chest and pull the trigger. Over he goes, clean on to his back, then picks himself up and rushes madly down the hill, but only a few yards are covered ere he tumbles on his head and lies still to move no more.

To skin him there and then is a long and tiresome process, so you cut down a few branches of juniper, enough to cover him and proceed to camp whence "coolies" will be sent up to bring him down bodily, while you enjoy a hot cup of tea and feel thoroughly satisfied with your day's shikar.

Dear Sirs,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I am no longer free an attack of Gout.

PURGEN

A DOCTOR in SOUTHAMPTON (ENGLAND), writes:—
"I have been prescribing PURGEN for some time, and in every case it has given great satisfaction. I have taken it myself and found it an excellent aperient."

"THE LAXATIVE OF THE FUTURE."

PURGEN acts surely, gently and uniformly, without causing any irritation or pain, and its effect does not wear off by prolonged use. PURGEN is not absorbed by the system. It has no action on the liver or kidneys, and it does not produce flatulence, nausea, depression or other disagreeable symptoms usually associated with aperient medicines. PURGEN is an especially valuable medicine for the delicate, for invalids and for children. Made up in small tablets of agreeable flavour and sold in boxes only.

Sold in Three Strengths:—
"INFANT" (for young children); "ADULT" (for "train-ups"); "STRONG" (for invalids and chronic constipation).

English Price: 1/- per Box.

STOCKTON.

THE Railway strikes caused the abandonment of one or two race meetings and the postponement of others. In the latter category came Stockton which made a belated opening yesterday and in spite of this handicap came more successfully through the first day's ordeal than may have been expected. A comparatively large crowd of folks on holiday from the neighbourhood paid course entrance, but in the enclosures the company was small. Tattersall's was sparsely attended, and with little money in the market prices, as will be seen below, were cramped. The going was in remarkably good order, and fields panned out well; while though a mist surrounded the Clevelands and rain spat at intervals, the afternoon was pleasant enough. Results:—

WINCHESTER

.405 CALIBER REPEATING RIFLE

THE DREADNOUGHT OF THE JUNGLE.

The .405 Winchester fears nothing alive. It is powerful enough to stop any animal, no matter how big or how dangerous. Its 300-grain, soft-point bullet has a ton and a half of energy, and when it strikes, it mushrooms and delivers the whole of this tremendous energy with terrible shocking effect. There is an immediate collapse—the animal drops as though struck by a thunderbolt. The rifle holds five of these cartridges, which can be fired in rapid succession. Its action is reliable and strong, and its shooting straight and true. As a big-game gun of exceptional power it has no peer.

SWIMMING.

A CHANNEL ATTEMPT.—Fred. Record, the Medway champion swimmer, made a plucky initial attempt to swim across the Channel on Saturday. Starting from Cape Grisnez at 2·55 P.M., in a heavy sea, Record swam strongly, and made a fine course. The bearings taken at the end of nearly nine hours' swimming showed that the nearest land was the South Foreland, eight miles ahead. The Rochester man had, therefore, covered about thirteen miles on his course, directly across Channel, whilst the driftage had been less than six miles. Record was not greatly exhausted by his effort, and stated his intention of trying again.

HALF-MILE CHAMPIONSHIP.—The English A. S. A. half-mile championship was decided at Walmersley, near Bury, on Saturday. Five entries had been received, but the event was robbed of a deal of its interest owing to the absence of T. S. Battersby, of Southport, who seemed the only one likely to beat the mile champion, H. Taylor. J. G. Hatfield, of Middlesbrough, was the only non-starter, and Taylor forged ahead from the start. After covering a furlong Taylor led Foster, of Bacup, by a yard, with Morris, of Blackburn, third, and Loft, of Hollinwood, a long way behind fourth. Swimming in fine style, and going further away, Taylor eventually won by 45 yards. Result:—

H. Taylor (Chadderton), 12mins. 5 3-5secs.	... 1
W. Foster (Bacup), 12mins. 40 4-5secs.	... 2
T. Morris (Blackburn), 13mins. 40 4-5secs.	... 3

Won by 45 yards; 60 yards between second and third.

GOLF.

BRILLIANT GOLF BY VARDON.—Harry Vardon, the British champion, won the 72 holes stroke competition for the open golf championship of Baden-Baden on, the Baden-Baden course on Saturday. Vardon had his victory practically certain at the end of the first half of the contest. With rounds of 71 and 72 respectively on Saturday he won easily with an aggregate of 279. This was nine strokes better than that of his nearest rival, Alexander Herd.

Thirty-six players entered for the event, but there were several notable absentees. Amongst those who were unable to play were Arnaud Massy, the French and British exchampion; Rowland Jones, Wimbledon Park; Fred. Robson, West Surrey, and George Duncan, Hanger Hill. The best single-round score on Saturday was accomplished by W. E. Reid, Banstead Downs, who went round in the morning in 68. This was one stroke more than Vardon's competition record for the course, which was accomplished on the preceding day.

Harry Vardon, South Herts	...	69	67	71	72—279
A. Herd, Coombe Hill	...	70	72	74	72—288
W. E. Reid, Banstead Downs	...	73	77	68	74—290

SOUTHERN CYCLING CHAMPIONS.

STRIKES notwithstanding, there was a capital attendance of spectators at the annual championship meeting of the Southern Counties' Cycling Union at Herne Hill on Saturday.

Victory in the mile championship went to E. Ryan, a young Polytechnic rider, who has improved in remarkable fashion since the season opened. He rode a well-judged race and coming away in the straight at the right moment, beat F. V. Chandler, of the Kentish Wheelers, by a length, in 2mins. 53secs. F. H. Harman, of the Putney A. C., was only beaten for second place by inches.

Some brisk racing was witnessed both in the preliminary heats and the final of the mile tandem handicap. The deciding heat went to a very speedy pair R. H. Clarke and H. J. Akers, of the Polytechnic and Brookdale Clubs respectively, who received a start of 90 yards. The time 1min. 38 1-5secs. was distinctly good.

In the mile junior team club championship the holders of the title—the Paddington C. C.—were defeated by the Polytechnic team the Oval team being third. The winners secured three of the four heats, which were decided on points.

There were only five starters for the fifty miles championship, and these included C. H. Bartlett, the holder of the title. Not only did he win the race, despite the fact that a heavy storm broke over the track at half-distance, but the Olympic champion succeeded in beating the N.C.U. record for the distance by 7 2-5secs. His time for the fifty was 1hr. 43mins. 57 4-5secs.

The half-mile handicap resulted in a victory for A. G. Oakes, of the Polytechnic C. C. (35 yards start). Oakes was hunted along the straight by A. Alden, of the Imperial Wheelers (55 yards), but the Polytechnic boy won on the sprint cleverly by a wheel, and half a length further off was W. H. Andrews of the Putney A. C. (50 yards). Time, 59 2-5secs.

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

Ooty, 7th September.

HERE as elsewhere in many parts of India the cry is for rain. During the past three weeks a great number of the hunting fixtures have had to be abandoned owing to the hardness of the going on the downs and also, to a lesser extent, to the lack of scent. A few showers have given hopes of resuming sport but they have been too light and partial to effect any improvement.

Hounds were taken to Sheffield corner on Wednesday 30th August, where the going was tolerably good, but a heavy mist came up directly after starting, and when it lifted the Master made a long draw, but hounds did not find again.

A larger field turned out at Sandy Nullah the next day and enjoyed a very pleasant morning's hunting: it was a long time before hounds found: from Morgan's Shola a jack was started which ran to Jackson's and over the Pykara Road near Kariamund Shola, through Dorner to Piccadilly, thence to Chemund, where a check occurred: a caste forward brought hounds on the line again which they carried past Bungalow Shola to Wapshare; crossed the Pykara Bridle Path, past Hamlet to Somerdale, then up left handed to the Bluegum Avenue where they lost their jack. After collecting hounds Cox's Bog was drawn and soon another jack was viewed which gave a run of fully 45 minutes over much the same country ridden the reverse way. It is a pity that hounds did not kill after their two hard bouts.

On Saturday, 2nd September, the meet was at Sultan Shola at noon, and though the going was very hard, scent lay fairly well, hounds running fast over a good line past Mekodmund and Lancer Shola into the Parsons, Valley Here they divided, the main body running on to Nunjanad, but the going was so hard and dry here hounds had to be stopped. A long and fruitless draw spun out most of the afternoon, but on the way back a jack was started from Bacon Wood and run to Hero whence he doubled back and then tried another line in the direction of Yemakul but scent gave out here and as it was late hounds were taken home. A very little rain has fallen this week but not enough to do any good, so there has been no hunting since. With the Point to Point events so close, 20th instant, it is earnestly hoped that a good downpour may come soon and make the going softer.

POONA OPEN TOURNAMENT.

Final.

CENTRAL INDIA HORSE vs. INNISKILLING DRAGOONS.—These teams met in the final on the 7th instant in the presence of a large gathering of sportsmen and others. The Inniskilling Dragoons, who had won the tournament in 1909 and again last year, were greatly handicapped by the absence of Mr. Burnham, who was laid up with fever. His place was taken by Mr. Teulon. Mr. Bowen had also had fever a short time previously and was not at his best. Nevertheless the Dragoons put up a determined game, but were outridden by their opponents, who eventually won by 8 goals to 1.

First Chukker.—The Dragoons were prominent at the start and scored from a scrimmage. They got away again shortly after but Todd cleared and transferred to Fraser, who put the teams on terms. The C.I.H. then attacked and after repeated efforts they scored another goal through the agency of Fraser.

Second Chukker.—The C.I.H. pressed and Hewlett hit a goal. Up and down play followed till the Dragoons were once more forced to defend. They got away once or twice but were on the defensive for the rest of this period, another goal being scored by the C.I.H. in a melee.

Third Chukker.—Midfield play till Vincent got away, but his shot at goal went wide. The Jemadar was next conspicuous for a good run, but his effort was also unsuccessful, and the period ended without score.

Fourth Chukker.—The ball travelled all over the ground in this chukker and play was very level. Mahomed Bahadur put in a good run and scored the fifth goal for the C.I.H.

Fifth Chukker.—The Inniskillings were kept busy defending throughout the period, and the Jemadar scored another goal.

Sixth Chukker.—The Dragoons got a run but were driven back to midfield where there was a stout struggle. Then Fraser got away and added to the C.I.H. score. The Dragoons were on the defensive on changing ends and before the close of the period Todd had sent between their flags, the C.I.H. thus winning by 8 goals to 1. Teams :—

QUETTA OPEN TOURNAMENT.

23rd Cavalry vs. 13th Lancers.—This was the first of two games in the opening round played on the 4th instant. The Lancers played a plucky game throughout and though the Cavalry won by a big margin play was fast and interesting.

First Chukker—The 13th pressed and nearly scored in a scrimmage. Then the 23rd got away and after an unsuccessful shot by Gannon, Egerton slipped through and opened the scoring. Up and down play closed the period.

Second Chukker.—Midfield play till the 23rd got away. Kirkwood made a good attempt but it went wide. Soon after Gannon scored and after a couple of abortive runs by each side Egerton got on and added to the Cavalry score. Mayne was next conspicuous for a good run but his final shot was unsuccessful.

Third Chukker—The 13th pressed but Connell's shot hit a pony and Gannon getting the ball took it down and scored. Fast up and down play for the rest of the chukker.

Fourth Chukker.—The 13th were kept on the defensive for a spell but they were able to frustrate all attempts on their flags. They then put in a good run and hit a goal, which has disallowed for offside. The 23rd were next prominent and Paske scored.

Fifth Chukker.—The 23rd pressed throughout and registered four goals in spite of a spirited defence.

Sixth Chukker.—The 13th attacked but could not get through and the ball returned to midfield. A couple of runs by the 23rd followed but the chukker ended without score, the 23rd Cavalry winning by 9 goals to nil. Teams :—

Gymkhana vs. Essex Regiment.—This was a well contested game, the Gymkhana eventually winning by 4 goals to 3. Hallowes and Neave were most prominent for their respective sides.

First Chukker—Both goals were visited in turn till Wilson got away and drew first blood, up and down play closing the chukker.

Second Chukker—The Essex pressed and Neave was responsible for several good runs, the ball eventually going out behind the Gymkhana line. Hallowes and Wilson then brought it down and Wilson notched a second point for his side.

Third Chukker.—The Gymkhana attacked hotly and Greer scored. They were penalised for a foul but the penalty hit was stopped. Barlow got possession in the closing stages and scored the first goal for the Regiment.

Fourth Chukker.—Neave ran the ball down and hit a goal for the Essex. Up and down play followed and Neave narrowly missed scoring again. The Gymkhana then took up the attack and Hallowes eventually hit another goal.

Fifth Chukker.—Up and down play. Neither team could score.

Sixth Chukker—Both goals were visited and then Neave got through and put on another goal. The Gymkhana were next conspicuous, but the Essex cleared and made desperate efforts to get on terms during the closing stages. Nothing came of their efforts and the game ended with the score : Gymkhana, 4 goals; Essex Regiment, 3 goals. Teams :—

Royal Welsh Fusiliers vs. Senior Staff College.—This game closed the first round on the 6th instant and was not a particularly interesting affair; the Staff College made a poor show and were eventually beaten by 10 goals to 3. Johnson and Thomas were most prominent of the Fusiliers while Torrie stood out from among the losers.

First Chukker.—The Fusiliers pressed throughout and had numerous shots at goal—only two of which were successful.

Second Chukker.—The Staff College attacked but were driven back and Johnson scored from a penalty. The Fusiliers kept up the pressure and Johnson scored another goal.

Third Chukker.—The Staff College rushed down and after Torrie's effort had been cleared Muirhead got possession and scored their first goal. The Fusiliers attacked during the rest of the period and Ormrod and Johnson augmented the score.

Fourth Chukker.—Johnson got away and hit a goal. Muirhead was responsible for a good run, but his final effort went wide.

Fifth Chukker.—The Fusiliers got on and scored and Johnson put on yet another goal shortly after. Towards the end of the period Torrie got through and scored a good goal.

Sixth Chukker.—The Staff College were conspicuous for some good play and Torrie added another goal. Fast up and down play followed, the Fusiliers putting on a further point. Final score :—R. W. F., 10 goals; Staff College, 3 goals. Teams :—

Semi-Final.

23rd Cavalry vs. Gymkhana.—This was the first of the semi-final games on the 7th instant, slow and sticky play ending in a win for the Cavalry by 6 goals to 3.

First Chukker.—Play ruled up and down throughout the opening chukker. Both teams missed chances of scoring and the period ended blank.

Second Chukker.—Kirkwood got through and hit a goal for the 23rd who continued to press. The Gymkhana got away once but were driven back again and Gannon put on another goal for the Cavalry.

Third Chukker.—The Gymkhana had decidedly the best of this period. They did all the attacking and scored twice, O'Hara and Wilson being responsible for the goals.

Fourth Chukker—The 23rd rushed down and Gannon hit two goals in quick succession, the Gymkhana being on the defensive till just before time when they got away but shot wide.

Fifth Chukker.—The Gymkhana attacked but play was eventually transferred to the other end where the Cavalry hit a goal in a scrimmage.

Sixth Chukker.—Play was fast and exciting in this period. Both goals were visited in turn and at length O'Hara scored for the Gymkhana. Then the 23rd ran down and Paske scored, the Cavalry thus winning by 6 goals to 3. Teams as before.

Staff College Junior vs. R. W. Fusiliers.—The second match was between the above teams and the Fusiliers were expected to win comfortably but to the general surprise they were never in it and the Staff College outplaying them at every point ran out victorious by 10 goals to 2. Ward played a splendid game and was well supported by Cunningham while Johnson was most conspicuous of the Fusiliers.

First Chukker.—The Fusiliers opened well and the most of the attacking but several shots were unsuccessful and the Chukker ended without score.

Second Chukker.—The Staff College then asserted themselves and quickly put on 3 goals without response.

Third Chukker.—Continuing to press the Staff College scored twice—Cunningham putting through from a penalty and Black being credited with the other point. The Fusiliers had one abortive run.

Fourth Chukker.—Play was of a more level character in this period. Both goals were visited and each team scored once—Thomas opening the Fusiliers' account and Ward adding to the College score.

Fifth Chukker.—The Fusiliers put in a good run but their final effort failed. Then the Staff College attacked once more, Cunningham hit another goal from a penalty and Black also added to the score.

Sixth Chukker.—Johnson put in a good run and scored for the Fusiliers. Thereafter the Staff College did all the pressing and Black and Fisher were credited with a goal each. Final score :

OFFSIDE IN INDIA.

The suspension of the offside rule has raised a brisk controversy amongst polo players in India writes T. F. Dale in the Polo Monthly. By the younger players the change has been welcomed; but it is not popular with the No. 4 players, almost generally the older and heavier men. This opposition is much more important in India than in England, because among the older players are men of higher army rank, and consequently of considerable influence. But no doubt in the long run youth will be served, and this rule will cease to exist. The origin of offside in India, as in England, was an attempt to put a stop to the tendency of forward players to hang back in order to snatch the ball and make a dash for the goal. Some players did undoubtedly do this, and in the first Hurlingham rules this was called "sneaking," and it is explicitly stated that the rule, as it stood in the earliest copy of the Hurlingham rules I know of, was framed to discourage this style of play. As the game was played in those early days, when each player was more independent than he is now, and combination was less perfectly understood, no doubt there were players who gave way to the temptation. There was considerable competition to get hold of the ball, and it was not unknown for selfish players, particularly in civilian games, to take the ball from a player on their own side as well as from their adversaries. In regimental teams the discipline was better, and selfish play was discouraged, if not entirely suppressed. But, nevertheless, so far as I can trust my own recollections of polo, without offside in India there was a kind of tacit understanding that forward players should not hang back to steal the ball away. On the other hand, we had many an exciting race for a ball when No. 1 and the opposing back both turned sharply on it and raced towards the goal in order to obtain possession.

Offside made its appearance first in India (at all events in those clubs under the West of India Polo Association in which I played) as an optional rule. "Shall we play offside or not?" was a question I have often heard asked. The answer was sometimes in the negative, because we were accustomed to the tactics of the older game. So far as I recollect, when the offside rule became general, which was after the return of the troops from Afghanistan, it brought about a complete change of tactics. Backhanders took the place of the old plan of taking the ball round. No. 1's first, and in some teams his only, duty was to hang on the back to ride him off and hamper him in every possible way, in order to clear the way for No. 2. This player, mounted on the fastest ponies, and chosen as the strongest and surest striker of the team, had by far the best of the fun. Back and half-back existed to hold the ball up for him, and the No. 3 and the No. 1 to clear the road. No player was more often out by himself, no player had more glorious opportunities of galloping with the ball, nor had anyone such chances of hitting goals, nor a stronger temptation, not always resisted, to gallery play.

The coming of offside also led to a much harsher style of riding off, and at one time, especially with young players, and with imperfectly schooled ponies, accidents, sometimes serious, were the result. This led to the restraining rules against foul play, and to the establishment of umpires. The military authorities in India interposed, and ordered that at all events important matches should not be played without the presence of a responsible umpire in the field. Yet in those days, especially in garrison games, when ponies and players were comparatively few, a great many matches were played without an umpire in the field. It is only quite recently that good umpiring has been the rule and not the exception on Indian and English polo grounds.

Under the offside rule the best players were at "back," as a matter of course, and it was recognised that to have a good back was more than halfway to securing the victory. But as the rules became stricter, and penalties more stringent, gradually No. 3 became the most important place in the field, and at the same time the backs developed a certain adroit trickiness which enabled them frequently to put the No. 1, and sometimes the No. 2, offside. In a large majority of cases, when the forwards were offside, they had committed nothing but a technical offence. They had tried to snatch no unfair advantage, and offside was often claimed as the result of dexterous tactics on the part of No. 4. These tactics were most profitable: they paralyzed the attack of the offending side, besides often subjecting them to a heavy penalty. There were players in England who were clever at this, and in India "old soldiering" was brought to the level of a fine art. But its effect upon the game was disastrous. Polo became more and more a duel between the backs. The forwards were discouraged, some teams even went so far as to advocate sending No. 1 into the game without a stick at all, and polo became a game of defence, instead of, as it ought to be, a game of attack.

These rules and tactics suited the older and heavier players, and encouraged and exaggerated the fault of dwelling on the stroke. The value of quickness on the ball and rapidity of striking was demonstrated in India by the long series of victories won by teams of native players. For years no English team could win a tournament against the best of the native players. Those of us who saw the old 12th Bengal Cavalry Corps team—Hira Singh, Gurdit Singh, Chunda Singh, and Captain Charles Gough—gallop round a first-rate English cavalry four, realised the value of the rapid certainty of their strokes. But it took us many years to see where the fault lay, and needed two American Cup victories to drive home the lesson.

But to return to India. No one who has had experience in Indian polo can doubt the immense value of the instantaneous correspondence of thought and action of will and stroke which the game with no offside encourages and inculcates. The Indian game lends itself to pace, the Indian ground is faster. The late Colonel Gordon Renton always held that polo in India was better and quicker than in England and I have no doubt that a very short experience without offside would make play in India unrivalled for pace. But the real advantage of this recurrence to what is, after all, a more ancient form of polo, is the encouragement which it gives to the younger players.

Unless I am mistaken, there has been a falling off in Indian as in English polo during the last few years, and this is the more serious, inasmuch as a falling off of polo in India will certainly be followed by a decadence in horsemanship.

Tea and Coffee Merchants to H. E. LORD HARDINGE, Viceroy of India.

Hog hunting and other forms of sport are unquestionably harder to obtain in India than they were. Even there the motor car and the bicycle have, to a certain extent, displaced the horse, and in polo remains the last hope of retaining the habit of skilled horsemanship which was a second nature to many men in the Indian Service. Even on the frontier the railway covers a considerable part of the roads which in my time were impracticable except for horses.

Polo, then, has a greater value now than ever in the training of Indian cavalry officers and, indeed, of the officers of other services, than it had when we followed the game some fifteen or twenty years ago. I have ventured elsewhere to define polo as the true cavalry spirit in its leisure moments and, if this definition is a sound one, anything which encourages young players to take to polo and gives them a prominent, or even a leading position in it, is for the good of the game and the players. The late Moray Brown used to say that polo was a game of tactics, and in this, as in so many other things in regard to sport, he was right. Yet it is not a game only of tactics, but a school of dash, of pace, and rapid seizing of passing opportunities. It is possible to have too much of a good thing, and polo tactics were hampering the game in England and going far to strangle it in India, and for this reason we must hope that offside and many of the penalty rules will cease to hinder the development of the game.

There is one argument in favour of the older rules which is much insisted upon by their advocates. The suspension of offside will, they say, make polo more expensive because it is a greater tax upon the ponies. The finest back in English polo, Captain Lloyd, is credited with the opinion that this is not the case. He is said to think that polo without offside is, to say the least, not harder on the ponies than where that rule is enforced, and I have long thought that experience would prove his view to be the right one, provided, of course, that the periods are of reasonable length. The old sharp turning was really harder on the ponies than the gallop and easy swing round, which is the characteristic of the present game. I cannot see, either, that pace has much increased; but then the best teams have for a long time gone as fast as their ponies would carry them, and it is difficult to see where additional speed can come in. Two players, however, for whose opinion everyone must have the greatest respect, have told me that ponies cannot come out quite as often in the course of a match when there is no offside. The obvious reply to this is that, if it is so, then periods of play should be shortened. In all except first-class matches there is what we may call a dead period in every polo match when the energies of the players are exhausted and they can no longer sustain their efforts.

I suspect that it is not so much the ponies as the players on whom the no offside game is hard. When the man is tired the pony wearies too very quickly. Every hunting man and every polo player knows what a relief it is to change on to a fresh horse or pony, and how it gives new energy to the rider to feel the spring of a fresh animal under him. In this way it may possibly be true, as one player suggested to me as his own experience, that he wanted three ponies where two had sufficed before. But of course we must not expect any change to bring with it unmixed advantages, or to be free from at least some hitherto unexpected inconveniences. What we have to consider is what is best for the game of polo for its present prosperity and its future prospects, and all that I remember of Indian polo, and much that I have heard of the game in that country, leads me to believe the abolition of offside has become a necessary reform. The suppression of offside is perhaps necessary to the successful working of the handicaps, and the handicap is likely to be as useful to Indian polo as we have already found it to be here; but that is another subject and cannot be dealt with now.

CALCUTTA RUGBY NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE entries for the Calcutta Rugby Challenge Cup Tournament this year are very poor, in all six teams having entered, and out of this small number the Leicesters have unfortunately scratched. The Madras regiment were to have played the Nomads in the first round, and the latter will now meet the United Services on Friday. It is also a pity that the East Yorks were recalled and in all there will now be only four matches. However, the West Ridings have never failed to put in an appearance, and the Rugby champions of India arrived on Sunday evening from Bombay after having beaten the Bombay Gymkhana and the Leicesters.

The Rifle Brigade were to have entered for the Gloucester Cup, but as the East Yorks were called back the Fort regiment very sportingly filled the vacancy caused by the Fyzabad team, and all sportsmen wish the Rifles success. It is only one team that can win the prize, but the Rifles are certain of rendering a good account of themselves. The best match of the season takes place on Saturday, when Calcutta and the West Ridings will meet. Calcutta were third in the League, it is true, but the club was never able to put out a representative side in the competition just concluded. F. S. Kerr and Turnbull have done remarkably well in the last two matches, and with Brown, Armitage, Studd, Taylor, Currie, and Dempster the pack will be the strongest any local team can put out. The halves are not exceptionally clever and the three-quarters too are not very brilliant, but on the whole the team will be a very strong one, and with a little luck there is no knowing what may happen. Brown played a wonderful game when he represented his country on Monday, and but for his brilliant dashing play Scotland would not have won by so substantial a margin.

The Services are certain of coming into the final, and the match between them and the West Ridings will also produce a fine struggle, but the Dukes, on the displays given in the League by our local teams, must retain possession of the trophy. With the exception of Lieutenant Kidd, who will play in the pack, and Private Dennison, the full back, the other thirteen players are all old faces. Wilson and Morris will play in the half back line and a better pair could not be found. Wilson, who is again captaining the team, informed me that the Bombay Gymkhana have a very fine team, but the men are sadly in want of more practice.

The Old Crocks match against the present team of the C.F.C. on Saturday was a very enjoyable game, and so well did some of the veterans play that three are to represent the club against the West Ridings on Saturday. The youngsters won by a goal and three tries (14 points) to nil, but they really had nothing to compliment themselves on their victory. Some of the men playing for the Old Crocks had not kicked a ball for four or five years, and yet during the first two chukkers the elder gentlemen had as much of the play as did their opponents. Thornhill, F. S. Kerr, Turnbull, and Miller showed to great advantage for the Old Crocks. For the winners Armitage and Kingsford were always prominent, but the latter must learn to give his passes more accurately.

The England and Scotland match last Monday was something of a failure, and a more scrambling game would be difficult to imagine. There were some brilliant individual efforts, however, but the combination all round was poor. The tackling, as is generally the case on these occasions, was vigorous, and there is little doubt that the better team won. Scotland won by two goals (1 dropped) and two tries to a goal, or 15 points to 5. Lieutenant Hardiman's try for England and Brown's try for Scotland were the two best scores of the evening. Turnbull's drop goal was also a magnificent item of the match.

Among the junior teams there has been a marked improvement, and I am sincerely glad to see that the Medicals have at last turned their attention to Rugby. The Medicals beat Mohun Bagan for the Gloucester Cup last Monday by a goal and two tries to a try and on Tuesday the Services "B" in the same competition beat the Police by four tries to one. It is, however, a great pity that the Customs and the Mensurers were not able to enter. Both the Clubs are lamenting the losses of their sporting officials. The Rangers and La Martiniere are also showing interest in the game.

THE BOMBAY RUGBY CUP TOURNAMENT.

WEST RIDINGS vs. BOMBAY GYMKHANA.—The Cup holders met the Gymkhana in the first of the semi-final games on the 4th instant, the soldiers winning by 19 points. Despite the large margin the game was interesting throughout and the Gymkhana line was only crossed once in the first half, when Thomas got over in an easy position but the place kick failed. In the second half the Duke's were seen to great advantage. Their opponents could make no headway and the soldiers got over four times. The first when Thomas received from a throw out and ran through unopposed, grounding between the posts for Wilson to majorise. Wilson, Morris and Thomas were credited with the other tries, Morris converting Wilson's score. The three-quarter play of the military was a treat to witness and another prominent feature was the fine throwing in from touch. Final score:—West Ridings, 2 goals 3 tries (19 points); Gymkhana, nil. Teams:—

WEST RIDINGS.—Dennison, back; Thomas, Turner, Newton and Firth, three-quarters; Wilson and Morris, half-backs; Hirst, Widdup, Bootland, Shaw, Robinson, Brayshaw, Lieutenant Kidd and Lister, forwards.

BOMBAY GYMKHANA.—Lewin, back; Rowsell, Findlay, Morrison and Hungerford, three-quarters; Finr and Byrne, half-backs; Watkins, Kemp, Shanver, Ryall, Geddes, Kendall, Hudlam and Haughton, forwards.

LEICESTER REGIMENT vs. DURHAM L.I.—This match was played on Tuesday the 5th instant when the Leicesters were victorious by 18 points to 3. The game was not a particularly interesting one, play being almost entirely confined to the forwards and the Durhams were not up to the standard of their opponents. The Leicesters pressed from the start and Corfield got over, the try being unconverted. This was followed by a try credited to Cooper, Wittle adding the extra points. The Durhams then got away and aided by a little luck they managed to get through, Reid scoring. The place failed. The Leicesters continued to press and Martin was next prominent, dropping a neat goal. Save for an abortive run by the Durhams the rest of the play till the interval was a series of scrums in midfield and the Leicesters led at half time by 12 points to 3. The Durhams opened well in the second half but were soon driven back and a good run by the Leicesters third line ended in Hyde crossing the line. The place kick was unsuccessful. Up and down play followed till shortly before time the Leicesters made a mark and Wittle kicked a goal. The remaining play was uninteresting and the Leicesters were left winners by 3 goals (1 drop 1 mark) 2 tries (18 points) to a try (3 points). Teams:—

LEICESTER REGIMENT.—Hougham, back; Wittle, Corfield, Atkins and Cooper, three-quarters; Gregory and Hyde, half-backs; Witham, Lieutenant Weir, Norman, Green, Breuin, Martin, Twigg and Buxton, forwards.

DURHAM LIGHT INFANTRY.—Davies, back; Maclachlan, Lodd, Alexander and Turner, three-quarters; Macbeth and Vincent, half-backs; Jones, Bone, Reid, Dodds, Moones, Fitzgerald, West and Vesey, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Kemp (Bombay Gymkhana).

Final.

WEST RIDINGS vs. LEICESTERS.—A big crowd witnessed the final game in the Tournament on Thursday last when the West Ridings and Leicesters, who contested the final last year, came together once again, the Yorkshire men repeating their victory of 1910. It was a keenly contested match and there was no scoring till the second half. The West Ridings pressed at the start and missed a couple of chances of scoring from "marks." Then the Leicesters got away and Hyde made a good attempt to drop a goal, the leather hitting the crossbar and rebounding into play. The Duke's carried the game to the other end again but could not get through and vigorous play followed up and down the field, the interval arriving without score. On resuming play was in midfield for a spell. Then the game was opened out and the Yorkshiremen rushed away. Morris was brought down almost on the line. Five yards scrums followed till Morris again got possession and got over with a try, Wilson majorising. The Leicesters made tremendous efforts to score and a keen struggle was witnessed but in spite of all their stout play they were driven back. A free against them enabled Wilson to kick a goal and the game ended shortly after in a win for the West Ridings by 2 goals (1 penalty) 8 points to nil. Mrs. Mayne gave away the Cup to the winners at the conclusion of the game and Mr. F. R. Cadell made a short congratulatory speech. Teams:—

WEST RIDING REGIMENT.—Dennison, back; Turner, Firth, Newton and Thomas, three-quarters; Morris and Wilson, half-backs; Brayshaw, Shaw, Widdup, Bootland, Robinson, Lieutenant Kidd, Hirst and Lister, forwards.

THE LEICESTER REGIMENT.—Hougham back; Cooper, Corfield, Wittle, and Atkins, three-quarters; Hyde and Gregory, half-backs; Lieutenant Weir, Witham, Buxton, Twigg, Martin, Green, Norman and Brewin, forwards. Results:—

UPPER INDIA AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

THE Amateur Golf Championship of Upper India was held at Gulmarg from the 30th August to 2nd September and was the eleventh meeting of the series for the two handsome challenge shields presented in 1901 by H. H. the Maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir. The favourites for the Men's Championship were Mr. R. G. Gardner, who had won the title in 1909 and retained it last year, and Mr. G. Leslie Smith, the runner-up in 1909. The latter was, however, knocked out in the second round and the final brought together Mr. Gardner and Mr. Colin Campbell, who won the Amateur Championship of India in Calcutta in 1905. It was an interesting contest. Gardner was 6 up at the end of the first round, but in the second round Campbell made a great bid and squared the match at the 15th hole. Gardner won the 16th, the 17th was halved, and Campbell won the 18th, making the match all square once more. Going on to the 1st hole, the 37th of the match, this was halved, but Campbell won the next hole and the Championship. Appended are the scores:—
