The new cycle track at the Stafford House grounds will probably be completed in another month or so. It will measure exactly four laps to the mile and spectators will be able to watch the racing throughout. As the track is at present constructed, the riders are lost sight of for about a couple of hundred yards. A meeting of the Cycle Racing Committee will be held shortly, at which accounts for the late meeting will be closed, and programmes of future garrison and open meetings framed.

Not for a long time have the Amateur Athletic Championships at home been so singularly devoid of interest as was the case this year. For the smallness of the entries there may have been several causes, one, we do not hesitate to say, being that the venue was Northampton instead of London. It is impossible not to sympathise with the desire of the A.A.A. to foster athleticism in the provinces by holding the championships alternately in London, the North, and the Midlands, but if success alone were aimed at we have no doubt the metropolis would always be the scene of action. In so saying we have not the least intention of decrying the Northampton track, which is an excellent one in all respects, and was in such splendid condition on the 4th instant that everything was in favour of fast times.

As regards the class of the competitors two stood out by themselves, Duffy and Shrubb, as our readers have already learnt from our special telegram. The American gained his fourth consecutive triumph in the Hundred Yards, having each time done "evens." This is a record for the event, for, though C. A. Bradley proved successful on four occasions, he was twice two yards outside level time. The Georgetown University man may, therefore, be truthfully written down as the finest sprinter of the many who have taken part in this race. Running in his very best form Shrubb, in addition to repeating previous triumphs in the Four Miles, gratified his ambition by carrying off the Mile. He was fortunate in not having much to beat, for according to advices "Joe" Binks was overtrained. A noteworthy victory was that of the Oxonian, G. R. Garnier, in the Hurdles, for his time of 15⅕secs. has only been beaten at these sports by Kranzlein. The new event in the programme, the 220 yards, resulted in somewhat of a fiasco, for Wadsley, who would doubtless have won but for being shut in, was disqualified in his heat for jostling, while in the final Tremeer had to ease up owing to his shoe bursting. This gave the victory to the Small Heath Harrier, G. F. Brewill, while with Wadsley refusing to turn out for the Quarter, that event fell to C. McLachlan, of the Herne Hill Harriers. There was a new walking champion in E. J. Negus, of the Northampton A. C., while local talent had another turn when the veteran, S. J. Robinson, recalled former triumphs in the Steeplechase. The so-called "field" events were practically walks-over, and competition throughout was by no means so keen as is usual at this fixture.

The principal cycle race meeting in the London district on 4th July was the Polytechnic Racing Festival at the Crystal Palace track. The most important item on the programme was the match between four members of the promoting club and four selected French amateurs. The match was decided in four heats of one mile each so as to allow every rider to compete against each member of the opposing team, and the result was a decisive victory for the English team, who won by 14 points to 26. A. S. Ingram, who captained the Poly. men and won the first and third heats, was mounted on a Dunlop tyred safety.

The following warning to a player, who was to figure in a recent football match at Mandalay, was published by the local paper on the day of the match :—"A warning to A. Seth. Will Seth ask apology to the sufferers who were kicked by him on the football ground near the line, or he shall have a severe assault as revenge on the same place he did. Is it very polite to kick the subscribers? We Burmans don't care the crime if they are in rage. The onlookers shall see Seth's head broken instead of football match sooner." The writer of the warning, who omitted to sign his name of course, simply asked our contemporary to "publish the above, or you will hear Seth's head broken."

We agree with Sporting Sketches in the following remarks :—

"Although inundated with offers of photographs, we have steadfastly refrained from publishing any illustrations of the recent "great Motor Race" in Ireland. It is, perhaps, a matter of opinion, but how contests between machines of this description can be described as "sport" we altogether fail to see. As well might trials of speed between steam-engines or trans-atlantic steamers claim a right to the definition, which of late years has been in some danger of being considerably abused. That any good purpose is served by races of this description may seriously

General Notes.

THE Grand Master and the Knights of the Order of the Black Heart are giving a Fancy Dress Ball at the Town Hall, Simla, on the 18th August.

It is with regret we hear that as the result of a severe fall while playing polo Second Lieutenant A. L. Smeaton, 18th Bengal Lancers, died at Nowgong last week.

There has been heavy rain on the line between Palia and Indore of the Malwa section of the Rajputana-Malwa Railway. The line was washed away causing the derailment of an engine and eight wagons, and also capsizing three wagons.

Mr. C. R. Newton, Chairman of the Kurseong Municipality, died at the Eden Sanitarium, Darjeeling, last Sunday. Mr. Newton had had his arm amputated on Thursday on account of blood poisoning brought on from an insect bite. The funeral took place at Kurseong on Monday.

Congratulations to Bishop Whitehead of Madras, that popular divine and eminent wicket-keeper, on his engagement to Miss Duncan, the only daughter of the Rev. Canon Duncan, Vicar of Calve and Prebendary of Sarum Cathedral. His old friends in the Ballygunge Cricket Club wish him all good luck.

Mr. F. DeLassoe, British Agent with Sirdar Ayub Khan for thirteen years met with an untimely end at Copenhagen. In his room among a number of Oriental curios was a finely carved pistol which was always loaded. A friend, examining the weapon, accidently touched the trigger and the bullet lodged in Mr. DeLassoe's chest. After three days' suffering the injury proved fatal.

Lieutenants Plant and Rickford, lately attached to the Essex Regiment, have been charged with cheating by bogus cheques on Grindlay, Groom and Co. in favour of many prominent Bangalore firms. The prisoners were arrested in Calcutta and taken back to Bangalore. The Commanding Officer of the Essex Regiment has no objection to the prisoners being tried by civil power, so the District Magistrate has ordered their detention in military custody and will take up the case on the 13th instant.

The Sheffield Telegraph tells a good story from India:—An American globe-trotter, dining with a gentleman in Calcutta, was asked if Americans were interested in India. The American assured him that such was the case, and said, "One day I met a lady I knew in the cars, and I handed her a newspaper in which was a paragraph headed India and Lord Curzon." She settled down to read it with close attention. I remarked to her, 'You seem interested in that item about India.' 'Yes,' she said, 'I am. When that young man came out here and married Mary Leiter, I always said she would make something of him—and she has.'

Basing itself on the authority of the naturalist, Kropotkin, "Science Siftings" says that parrots are the cleverest of all birds. They have such a well-organised police system that no other species of bird ever ventures to attack them, and they invariably die of old age. The grey parrot is called the "bird-man" by the savages. This bird is not only intelligent, but extremely affectionate as well. If one of his mates is killed by a hunter, he will at once fly to the body, and, uttering loud cries of grief, allow himself to be captured without resistance. The grey parrot has even been known to die in one of these outbursts of violent grief.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 10th July 1903.

I MUST begin this week with an apology for a slip of the pen in my last letter by which I awarded the honour and glory of first place in the Irish Motor-car race to the Chevalier de Knyff instead of to the rightful owner, M. Jenatzy. When my careless mistake suddenly dawned upon me a few hours after my letter was posted, three reflections were my only consolation. First, that such an obvious mistake could mislead no one; second, that the chances were about a billion to one against M. Jenatzy ever knowing of the wrong unwittingly done him; and last—but by no means least—that even if he did know of it, he would probably not make an international affair of it. Nevertheless I hereby humbly apologise.

Desiring to do my small part towards cementing l'entente cordiale, and also to escort a country cousin whose appetite for sight seeing is voracious I sallied forth on Monday to "assist" in greeting Monsieur the President of the French Republic. The day was an ideal one for such a function—not too warm—and the stiffish breeze had at least the merit of showing off the flags and streamers to advantage. It is hardly likely that the decorations impressed M. Loubet greatly, though the general effect was bright and pretty enough. The crowd, which was nowhere great—four or five rows deep at most and in many places not nearly so much—was quite cordial and friendly towards President Loubet, and the great country he represents, but undoubtedly King Edward VII. was the personage whom most of the people had gone out for to see. It may be snobbish—though I doubt it—but it is an undeniable fact that no President excites anything like the interest and curiosity that are evoked by the sovereign of even a third-rate Power. It was amusing on Monday to hear the question asked on all sides after the procession passed, "What is the President like?" and the invariable answer, "Oh! I didn't see. I was looking at the King!"

That the French nation are laudably anxious that their President should represent their country with due dignity, is shown by the liberal sum (£24,000) voted by the Chamber to defray the cost of the visit. And certainly M. Loubet has not spared himself in the good cause. When one reads of his exertions in the 24 hours preceding his departure, one can only be humbly grateful for one's insignificant lot in life. Leaving town on a visit to Windsor before 9. A. M. on Wednesday, returning to a luncheon at the French Embassy, from which he went direct to the Review at Aldershot, and did not return to St. James' Palace until 8 o'clock. Then to dine at Lord Lansdowne's at 8-30—winding up with a ball at Buckingham Palace—and finally leaving Victoria on his homeward journey at 8-30 on Thursday morning, is surely a record performance for a middle aged gentleman; and one sincerely wishes him the repose he has earned.

The accounts of the miserable physique of a large proportion of the troops reviewed on Wednesday, does not make pleasant reading, though it does but confirm what has been apparent to the uneducated civilian eye for some time past. And to a civilian mind it seems only the inevitable result of many causes. Until barrack life is so ordered that it resembles in some degree the mode of life in the home of a self-respecting artisan, and until a man can take the King's shilling with a tolerable certainty that if he conducts himself respectably, he will, on returning to civil life after some years' service, be able to earn a decent maintenance, the Army is little likely to attract men (not boys) of the right stamp. The plight of many of our Reservists since the South African war, and the charitable appeals that have been rendered necessary, have not helped the recruiting sergeant. It ought not to be beyond the wit of man to find a remedy.

The Stage Coach Competition at Ranelagh last Saturday was interesting, one of the conditions being that the coaches and teams must have been driven regularly on the road since the opening of the season. The chief event was the competition for the Challenge Cup, for the best all-round turn out. For this eight coaches entered, the prize going to the "Tantivy" (Maidenhead and Henley). The second place was taken by the "Perseverance" (London and Dorking). Another interesting event was a driving competition down a bending course, and this was won by the "Telegraphs" (London and Hatfield), driven by a coachman who is said to have served his apprenticeship to the art on the box seat of the humble but necessary 'bus. The horn blowing competition was won by the "Perseverance." The objection made by Lord Tredegar—one of the judges—to the use of the bearing rein will be generally endorsed.

The ladies had it all their own way in the driving competitions at Hurlingham on Saturday, the men who had entered not even putting in an appearance. Mrs. Jack Gouldsmith was the fortunate winner of two first prizes.

The truth of the maxim that it is wise not to prophesy "unless you know" was brought home to us at Lord's on Saturday by the result of the University cricket match. There appears to have been no real foundation for the almost universal belief in the superiority of the Cambridge eleven, as they were outplayed from the first—their bowling being especially inferior. Mr. Evans' fine play contributed more than anything else to the victory of Oxford, but it was also largely due to the fine batting of Mr. Raphael, whose inclusion in the team, at almost the eleventh hour, was a decided bit of luck for the Dark Blues. The play of Cambridge, with one or two exceptions, was poor throughout. The result was too much of a foregone conclusion for the game to be an exciting one, but a good many spectators were on the ground at the finish.

An end comes to all things and among them to the Gaiety which closed its doors on Saturday night after a long career of prosperity unusual in ventures theatrical. For the memories of the older generation of players it will always occupy a niche apart, and recollections of Nellie Farren. Kate Vaughan, Toole, H. J. Byron, and a host of hardly lesser stars will always be associated with the old Gaiety, however brilliant and successful the new edition may prove. The performance of the Linkman, or Gaiety Memories by as many members of the original cast as it was possible to gather together, had its painful as well as pleasurable side, the gaps made by time being very obvious. Sir Henry Irving, himself a Gaiety actor in the far off ages, returned to assist in the farewell; and after the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" by Miss Florence St. John, in which the audience joined, the curtain was rung down for the last time. May the "New Gaiety" be equally entertaining and prosperous!

Of other matters theatrical there is not much to chronicle. Madame Réjane has appeared as "Nora" in the Maison de Poupée, which on the whole is not one of her most convincing parts. A Parisian Nora and Madame Réjane is essentially Parisian being an anomaly. There is a diversity of opinion as to the merits of her personation of Jacqueline in La Pasterelle (which by the way the Censor is supposed to have licensed in a fit of absence of mind). Some of the critics averring that it is one of her best parts, and others, that she over-acts it with a deplorable lack of judgment, and that Marie Tempest was infinitely superior in the past. When doctors disagree so violently who shall venture to pronounce!

There appears to be some ground for fearing that the Irish "patriots" balked in their endeavour to prevent a loyal reception being accorded to Their Majesties on their approaching visit to Ireland, may attempt a counter-demonstration. Should this be so, the result will probably be decidedly more exciting than those which follow the demonstrations from which we suffer in Hyde Park and Trafalgar Square, the "peace-at-any price" party not being numerous in that "gem of the sea." Here some interruption to traffic is about our most serious inconvenience on such occasions. There, it is to be feared broken heads (if not worse) will not be wanting. If broken heads there be it is devoutly to be hoped that some of them will belong to those who by speech and pen must be held responsible.

not exactly "agin the Government" as a whole, yet "agin" Mr. Broderick. It appears that in February last the War Office, with the laudable intention of reducing the expenditure of officers, issued a circular to Army tailors, accoutrement makers and such like, asking them to send in by March lists of cash prices for uniforms, etc., of regulation pattern, with a view to recommending the firms to officers; the understanding being that in all cases cash payment would be made. From the tenders sent in selection was made, and the names of the firms sent to Commanding Officers. And now comes the grievance! The War Office apparently ignores the existence of Army tailors outside London as no circulars were sent to either Edinburgh or Dublin. The Irish Daily Independent draws attention to this flagrant boycott of Irish industries, as well as to the hardship inflicted on officers in Ireland generally, and on those of the South of Ireland Imperial Yeomanry in particular in being compelled to journey to London if they wish to avail themselves of the more moderate prices. It is obvious that the result would not be very satisfactory to the pockets of the gentlemen in question.

The Henley Regatta concluded yesterday in brilliant weather—in fact it was exceptionally lucky in that respect all through. The attendance has been above the average, and yesterday especially the crowd was very great The race for the Grand Challenge Cup was intensely exciting, and but for the bad luck which has again overtaken Cambridge this year, in the illness of Goldie, the Leander Club would perhaps not have added another to its list of victories, which are now becoming a trifle monotonous. Most of us wish the pendulum to swing in sporting contests at all events, and there were many hearty wishes for the success of Cambridge. The race for the Thames Cup was a fine one throughout, and resulted in the victory of the Trinity College, Dublin, crew. The race between Magdalen College and Eton College was a rather tame affair; the Eton crew not being by any means up to the mark. On the whole it has been one of the pleasantest and most successful Henleys on record in spite of all the dismal forebodings at the time of the deluge.

Comical accounts abound of the effects of the working of the new naval scheme under which a marine officer keeps watch armed with sword and spy glass, and a naval lieutenant applies to a marine officer for leave to go ashore in ship's boat, and the conditions said to generally prevail bring back recollections of the Savoy in the old Gilbert and Sullivan (and palmy) days. To a landsman the serious part of the transformation scene is the middy taking the watch in the engine room. It is reported that the hair of some of the mechanical engineers has become prematurely grey in consequence of the state of trepidation in which they live—haunted by fears of what would result from a real danger occurring in the engine room with a middy officer of the watch. That the middies heartily dislike their new duties goes without saying, the stokehold not being the pleasantest of habitations, and they, themselves, being uncomfortably conscious that they hardly inspire confidence in those about them. No doubt things will shake down in time as they have a way of doing.

I have been studying Sir Oliver Lodge's "Lessons in Radium" in the hope of dissipating the fog that clouds my brain at the mere mention of what the newspapers generally allude to as "that marvellous substance." I gather from Sir Oliver Lodge that though he declines to prophesy (not knowing) he thinks its most practical application will be in the direction of medicine. There was a report the other day from Vienna, that it had proved effective in a case of cancer, but it was vague, and in any case the "cure" was too recent to be pronounced permanent. Dr. Finsen's tabulated list of cases on which the Finsen Light cure has been tried is encouraging. Out of 804 cases, 412 are pronounced "cured." Intervals varying from two to six years have elapsed since 124 of the cases were "cured," and in no case is there any symptom of a return of the malady. The remaining 288 "cures" are of more recent date, but up to the present there is no symptom pointing to a return. Dr. Finsen's reports are of strictly verified cases, and are extremely satisfactory.

Shikar.

AN UNPLEASANT NIGHT.

IT is now more than a couple of decades since three of us, namely, I., G. and self found ourselves shortly after sundown at S.—factory, where we had been asked by C. for a hare shoot. C. himself was neither a keen shikari nor a very good shot, though he always boasted of his doings among big game. He wrote us that he had been over the ground and had found the hares, like the Irishman's snipe, "fairly jostling each other" in the grass fields and chur lands that lay to the west of the factory.

S. was only an outwork or outfactory of the C—a concern and C. visited the place as occasion required. On account of our intended shoot, he had arrived the day previous to settle everything, so on our turning up shortly before sun set, we found that elaborate preparations had been made for our reception. After a peg and a bath, we made ourselves comfortable in long-sleeved chairs, and while sipping our vermouth, discussed the prospects of the morrow's sport. C. was very sanguine and swore that we should make a right royal bag. Not to be too late next morning, we decided to turn in early, so after a substantial dinner washed down with Bass' Pale Ale, we made our way towards our virtuous couches.

Unfortunately for us our sleeping quarters had been arranged in an adjoining room and the sequel will show what a night we had of it—a night the recollection of which can only be obliterated from my memory by death! Though C. used often to pay flying visits to S. he rarely spent the night there and if he did so he usually slept in what I shall call his main or state room and where he transacted his factory work, had his meals, etc. On the present occasion this room in question had been turned into what was styled the "dining room" and for bed room C. had a big room adjoining it cleared out and put in proper order. We found out afterwards that this room, which had been turned into our sleeping apartment, was really a sort of godown or lumber room used mainly for storing indigo seed and other grain and had not been occupied within the memory of the oldest factory servant! Had we known this before hand or had C. given us any hint regarding it we should certainly have fought shy of the place, but, alas! it was only bitter experience that revealed to us the true character of our bed chamber!

By 10 o'clock we were all comfortably settled on our couches, at least that was our idea at the time, but we had scarcely tucked in our mosquito curtains when I. shouted he could not sleep in a brightly lighted room, so the lamp had to be lowered and put in a corner of the room. Silence seemed to reign supreme now and everyone being more or less tired we soon found ourselves in the arms of Morpheus, but it was not for very long. I had barely been asleep for an hour or so, when I suddenly woke up bathed in perspiration and found the room in pitch darkness. G. then suddenly yelled out, that some thing had come down on top of his mosquito certain and he thought that the same thing was a snake as it was wriggling about. At an encouragement our host shouted out to us that whatever we did we were not to get out of our beds as one of his peons had been bitten by a cobra in this very room some eighteen months before. I. thought there was a match box on the teapoy near his feet, so he gently got out of bed and had not proceeded far when there was a tremendous crash of broken glass, I. in his endeavour to find his way had knocked over the teapoy with its load of glasses, bottles, etc. The safest thing for I. now, with all the broken pieces of glass and bottles about was to get back to his bed, which he quickly did. The scene that followed now and which lasted till dawn is difficult to describe. Hundreds, nay, perhaps thousands of bats kept flying round and round screeching, fighting and falling with a flop on our mosquito curtains. The rats too—and of which there must have been a goodly number about—attracted probably by the smell of our boots, kept running under our beds, climbing up the poles and racing round the slats above our heads. The heat in the meanwhile seemed to become unbearable and after shouting in vain for our servants, decided to submit to our fate as martyrs.

Next morning we got up fagged and tired after having spent what was certainly the worst night in my life. When inspecting our room or rather this second edition of Surajuddowlah and our friend C.'s black-hole, we found that those who had been put in charge to clear out the room and tidy it, had shut up the ventilators above the two doorways. The result was that its being now the end of March we were literally stewed in our own juice and to make matters worse the said ventilators being shut up prevented the bats making their usual exit and enabled them thus to enliven us with their company for the better part of the night!

Neither the strong cups of tea we had as eye openers nor the pegs that followed as revivers had much effect on our faded spirits. Limp and tired, it was all we could do, to swing our legs across our saddles and make a move towards the rendezvous. C. was right as regards his khubber about the hares. There had been a cyclone the previous October and a large number of babool trees had been blown down. The trunks and more substantial parts had been cut and removed, but the thinner branches owing to the amount of thorns about them, had not been yet removed and lay in heaps in places. Most of the grass had been cut, except where these babool branches had been stacked and from under which popped up the hares on every side, with the result that by 9 o'clock when a halt was made for refreshment 14 hares and a fair number of quail had been accounted for. It is wonderful how one's spirit is refreshed up after a little bit of excitement such as we had. All our fatigue and wearness had now disappeared and we felt as fresh and alert as if we had had the pleasantest of nights and the soundest of sleep! Though before we left the factory, the very sight of food that morning would have made us feel sick, we felt now that we could do justice to the contents of the tiffin basket, and cold fowl cutlets, sausages, and hard boiled eggs disappeared in rapid succession, washed down with Bass' Pale Ale.

After a smoke and a few minutes of rest, we made our way to some new ground, where C. said quail abounded. It was now rather too late in the day to rouse up the birds, specially as the grass was fairly high, so another couple of hours' shooting resulted in our getting seven more hares and about half-a-dozen quail. While we were going through some high grass, an immense boar was put up and I very foolishly gave him a couple of barrels of No. 6 shot. This made the brute pull up and for a second or two it looked very much as if he would charge and it was very lucky he did not do so, for we should not have had the ghost of a chance, for No. 6 and 8 cartridges were all that we had to offer him. We shouted for our horses, but they were left far behind, and by the time they had come up the boar had swam across the river.

We got back to the factory hot and tired, but a swim in the factory tank followed by a good tiffin made us feel at peace with all the world. Our beds having been brought out of the infernal region, we managed to do a little sleep. C. wanted us to stay over for the night, as he said some good shooting could be got in the kheel or marsh near the factory early in the morning. But we had had enough of it and firmly but politely declined to spend another night under his hospitable roof!!

RAOUL.

ADVENTURES IN THE SANTHAL HILLS.

YEARS ago when stationed in the Santhal hills I thoroughly enjoyed the free life in camp wandering from one small village to another, along bridle-paths shaded by the broad leaves of the teak and mohwa tree, passing dells, glades, and rippling streams as clear as water can be, with the occasional call of the eagle, kite, and jungle cock, and rustle of the grass occasioned by a deer or peafowl. Happy days of youth, everything was coloured brightly and health and happiness glided along, as you wended your way to a beat, on some hill where the Santhals had agreed to assemble for their periodical hunts. It's many years ago now yet I can recall the warm morning when the men of all the surrounding villages assembled for the annual grand drive of Pareshnath Hill, bordering on the grand trunk road near Doomerie. When I arrived I was welcomed by the headmen and village shikaris whom I knew, as most of them had accompanied me among the neighbouring hills for tiger and sambhur. This morning the assembled Santhals were armed with their national weapons—the bow, arrow, and spear; all stripped to the smallest amount of clothing imaginable, bodies greased to resist the sun; bright-eyed, strapping big men, ready for the fun to begin, be the struggle with tiger, bear, panther or boar: men who could creep and crawl through jungle on a par with the wild beasts themselves, were not likely to omit the search of dell or difficult recess where animals take up their abode.

The hill to be the scene of our operations was Pareshnath. Some 3,000feet high, densely covered with jungles, it was to be beaten in two immense beats; nearly five hundred men and boys divided and ascended the hill from opposite sides, lining the hillside to the summit. The arrangement occupied a couple of hours, then the beat commenced with a demoniacal howl a mile off, the best armed and tried hunters esconced themselves along the foot of the hill, which was connected by a strip of jungle to another chain of hills northward. I and my shikari, Edoo, were stationed in the centre of the hillside, where most of the dangerous animals usually came down. I took up my position on a rock some 20 feet high with plenty of small bushes, sufficient to hide me when kneeling. It was in the days of muzzle loaders, so I had two rifles and a double shot gun with men to load them if required. I had not been ten minutes posted when a herd of sambhur does came slowly through the trees, occasionally looking back and listening with their great ears at the distant commotion; then came a spotted stag to the left, he had miserable horns, so was allowed to pass. Presently there was a grunting noise nearly below me as pig went by, by this time I was getting excited as the shikari incited me to fire at every animal which passed. This I refused to do much to his disgust. It was well I did so, as in a few minutes I saw the bushes some distance off shaking, which denoted the advent of something bigger than pig. Presently out stepped a fine tiger coming at a sling trot, head well down, yet the movements were smooth and elegant. As he approached the crossing of the stream in front of me, some 20 paces away, he stood and looking back listened before making up his mind which way to go, this was my opportunity and I took advantage of it by putting a 12-bore bullet from the rifle through his heart. He subsided and rolled on his side gently, with his head just touching the water, looking as fine a prize for a young sportsman, as you could imagine, a rufus red colour with darkish stripes and snow white below with a head twice the width of a bicycle saddle, but much smoother. I had a very short time to admire him, when a fine old sambhur stag passed at a trot at some 60 yards. He received a bullet which brought him to his knees for the moment only, he recovering himself plunged into the jungle to his right and was lost to view. Pig and doe sambhur again passed, but now frightened and some of the poor creatures stuck over with arrows. The howling, laughing and yelling was now approaching nearer; animals of all sorts with birds were running and flying about in alarm, and adding to the din and confusion, animals knew not where to go, as they were by this time in a ring surrounded by the Santhals, so ran frantically for a few yards and stood, again turned and rushed back perfectly bewildered. A couple of bears came within 30 yards of me, one following the other. I fired at the leading one, he immediately turned round and furiously attacked his companion; they struggled and rolled over, grunting and making hideous noises. Presently the one hit gave in, then the other went round and round him like a Bantam cock does after his victory. I enjoyed the fun, but had to put a stop to it with a bullet, which settled their dispute. Shortly after this the beaters and hunters passed my post after inspecting the tiger and two bears. They went on and found the stag I had fired at still alive, so riddled him with arrows till he fell. It was now no use my remaining at my post, so I followed the rest and saw the massacre of numbers of animals of sorts from a distance and tried to rescue a man who came to grief with a bear, but was too late, as the animal after mauling the hunter had broken the line and disappeared. The beat was now over and the collection of the slain was in progress; the larger animals had to be skinned and consumed where they fell, therefore parties departed to spots known to them to perform the gorging process at which they are past masters. After a feed of half raw sambhur and pig meat, and a rest we all moved to the other side of the big hill, and the same performance was gone through, but on this occasion there was not so much spirit in the performance, as there was less likelihood of game owing to scarcity of water. I was stationed on one flank as I did not wish to shoot any beasts but of the dangerous species. I can't say I kept to my resolution as I could not resist knocking over a fine spotted stag at the commencement of the beat, and at the end I was rewarded by getting a panther after putting three bullets in him, the Santhals murdered some twenty sambhur does and chetul with fifteen pig; a few pea fowl and spurfowl were knocked over with stones, the tigers were absent from the hill barring the one I got, but bears were not wanting; they and the panthers walked through the beaters who appeared to have the greatest respect for them. Casualties on the human being side were one man severely mauled, two men wounded in the leg by arrows.

I had to pay my footing, so gave these grand savages Rs. 20, which sum was immediately sent off for ghuras of liquor, with which, and the flesh of the shikar, they regaled themselves all night, and I heard afterwards that they continued by the side of the carcases till only bones remained.

The old route up-country by the grand trunk road was well wooded from Raneegunge to Shergotty and afforded sport of all kinds: the rivers had fish and jungles plenty of game, even near the halting stations. Doomerie was a favourite place. On one occasion when returning from the Commissariat Officer's bungalow to the dâk bungalow at midnight with a bright moon shining I heard ahead of me the noise of a tin utensil rolled about and distinctly saw two young tigers playing with a empty beef tin like cats do with a ball, patting it from side to side and jumping about in high glee. They were so intent on their game that they omitted to see me standing behind a bush some 40 yards off. As they were in my way home I had to make a wide detour and glad to get in without seeing my young friends again. On another occasion when at Doomerie the Commissariat Officer rushed into my camp very excited and wanted me to assist him in destroying a bear which his men had marked down in a small conical hill a short distance away. I agreed and we got to the foot of the hill and found it a mass of rock and tangled jungle, so agreed to post ourselves one on each side a short distance up the hill, and let the beaters come towards us. I waited patiently but nothing appeared. Presently I heard two shots and a tremendous howling of a wounded bear, so made the best of my way towards the noise, I had not gone far when I saw my friend rushing along the side of the hill; he turned a corner behind some rocks and disappeared. I went up to the place, but could see nothing of him. Whilst standing still I heard a deep boom and then a scuffling noise, and a few seconds after out came a bear with his teeth fixed in the shoulder of my friend. The brute came to the edge of the ledge of rock and shook the body and dropped it. At that moment I fired and killed him. The beaters came up and we lifted the poor fellow who was unconscious, and carried him near water, stripped and cleaned the nasty wound on his left shoulder. He soon came round, and told us that he had wounded the animal and dropped his rifle, and pursued him with his revolver, saw him go into a cave and foolishly followed; seeing him on a ledge of rock he fired and had no recollection of what happened afterwards.

Fishing was one of our amusements. The rivers teemed with fish which took the bait well. We had to wade about to make a good bag. The scenery was pretty, as the banks of the river was covered with jungle to the water's edge. On occasion when with little or no clothes on I was intently engaged in my efforts to hook the wily fish, my notice was attracted by lapping behind me. I looked round and to my horror saw a fine tiger quietly drinking some fifty yards off between me and my clothes, the creepy sensation which came over me can be imagined but not described. I stood still with my eyes fixed on the brute, and was greatly relieved when he quietly retired into the jungle. The question was had he seen me and was he waiting at the edge of the jungle. The water was cold and the sun had set, night coming on. After waiting for some time I shouted for my men who were as usual a long way off; they appeared at last and brought me my clothes, and could not understand why I insisted on standing in the middle of the river. I made them follow me across before putting on my unmentionables. That night I was restless and nervous imagining stripes still round my camp.

Ho Kol.

BACK INTO KASHMIR OVER THE ZOJI LA.

AFTER getting my ibex and shapoo, I had intended to work back into Kashmir viâ the Suru Valley and Wardwan, trying for red bear at very likely places on the way. When I got to Kargil I changed my plans, and decided to go back without any loss of time, by the shortest way; that is by the regular route viâ Dras Matayen, and the Sind Valley. On my outward way I had found snow from below Sonamarg to Dras These four marches through snow assist considerably in making a shooting trip to Baltistan expensive I had eighteen coolies from Goond to Dras, and they cost Rs. 45-10; this was at the rate of Rs. 2-8 each (one man who had come further got an extra 10 annas). When the pass is practicable for ponies, it costs only Rs. 13-8 to take the same amount of baggage from Goond to Dras.

I found the grove of willow trees at Kharbu in full leaf, while along the road the wild roses were already in bud. In spite however of all these signs of spring coming at last, I was exceedingly glad of a fire at Kharbu when I got in. This Dâk bungalow is in the ravine close to the Dras River; it is eighteen miles from Kargil and twenty-one from Dras. Both Tashgam and Dras looked green and smiling, but there is a great dearth of trees, and the landscape, though perhaps refreshing after Ladak scenery, can hardly be called interesting. From Dras to Matayen is a short march of some thirteen miles (the book says twelve, but my timing makes it about thirteen). At this latter place although there was no snow actually round the huts it was everywhere else, and the date was the 7th of June, we were back in mid winter. I found that one of the Kashmir officials who was touring, had got all the available ponies, so that there was no choice but to go on the following day with the ones I had. As it was evident we should get into snow directly we left Matayen, and my animals were all well loaded, the morrow's march was clearly not going to be a pleasure. Matayen is a collection of miserable huts in a level plain. There is a small hut by itself, with a fire place, but windowless, and with a big beam crossing the centre, handy to knock your head against: this serves for Europeans. Two can sleep in this hut, but it is a close fit. I sent a villager out to gather me some wild rhubarb from the hillsides and had it stewed for dinner; it was not at all bad. My shikari woke me very early the following morning, but just as when we were ready to load up, it began to rain hard; we decided to wait a little and endeavour to start dry.

At 7 o'clock the rain had turned to snow, so we waited no longer, but loaded up and went off. For the first mile or so the road was along the Matayen maidan and free of snow; after that our troubles began. The snow was very soft and slushy, and every here and there were deep holes; it was therefore necessary for a pony to look carefully where he put his feet Two out of the six ponies declined to look, and the disasters these two careless ones met with were innumerable. Several times the animals when they collapsed, got their legs in so deep that they had to be unloaded and regularly lifted out. As may be imagined all this made our progress most slow and tedious, and it took us over four hours to do the six miles to Metsahoi. Beyond this point the snow proved very much harder and the other nine miles to Baltal only took the same time as the first six to Metsahoi. The regular road is still closed, although it is June, and the temporary path follows the nullah on the great mass of snow which still fills it, and hides the Sind River almost entirely for the first two or three miles of its course. On reaching the bottom of the great snow drift, and turning the corner which brings one into sight of the Baltal hut, I was suddenly, as though by the lifting of a curtain, in another land. A lovely smiling valley stretched away at my feet, from a foreground of luxuriant grass and green woodland to a hazy distance where a gleam of silver marked the river vanishing round a bend, between the meeting hills. The air was warm and languorous, and the grassy slopes were starred with blue and lilac iris. The Zoji La with its chilly winds, and piled up snow drifts, had vanished away; we were in the land of peaceful beauty where the only use of snow was to give the last artistic touch to the lovely landscape. Among the iris, here and there, were peeping yellow flowers. They were the homely dandelion, not seen for over three years. There is nothing like combining practical pleasure with sentiment, so I at once set one of my coolies to collect dandelion leaves to make dandelion spinach for dinner. The next day's short march to a village called Shutakarri, two miles below Sonamarg, was charming—grassy slopes covered with flowers all round us, with the Sind brawling along below the road. A tent pitched near Sonamarg with a girl outside in a short dress, with a yellow pig tail down her back, showed that people were beginning to leave their doongas to camp on the margs.

There was also a tent in the mouth of the big nullah which comes from the direction of Tilel, and joins the Sind two miles below Sonamarg. As this nullah is noted for red bear, the owner of the tent had probably come for them, and not to look at the buttercups and cowslips.

THE PROPOSED NEW SERVICE RIFLE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

Sir,—From what I have been able to gather the New "Improved" Lee-Enfield can hardly be pronounced a success nor is it in reality a new weapon. It is merely the old ·303 with a barrel reduced in length to 25 inches which makes it light, handy and especially suitable for mounted troops and with its barrel wholly encased in wood after the Swiss pattern, its "drag" trigger pull and adaptation to clip loading, it may be in some respects a better military weapon generally. The new weapon can, however, only be looked upon as a makeshift. The miserably weak Lee action originally intended to withstand the strain of the old black powder cartridge of large bore (·450) has been retained in the new rifle and its already clumsy magazine has been made still more so.

Even if from motives of economy it was considered necessary to continue the use of the present ·303 cartridge a new breech action strong enough to stand the strain of any of the modern high pressure military cartridges might have been fitted so that ammunition more powerfully loaded might have been used if necessary.

I believe the present cartridge was originally intended to have a muzzle velocity of 2,200 ft. secs., but its charge had to be reduced as the poor breech action was found to be too weak to stand the pressure given by such a high velocity and it was consequently reduced to 2000 ft. secs.

The Remington Company who manufacture the Lee Rifle in the United States in adapting it to small bore high pressure ammunition fitted the bolt with front locking lugs of the Mauser or Mannlicher type (used I believe originally in the old Terry breech loader nearly fifty years ago in England).

There is apparently no reason why front locking lugs of this kind should not have been fitted to the "Improved" Lee-Enfield unless they wanted to use up the old Lee actions in store.

The Americans in their new rifle which in calibre and weight of bullet very closely corresponds to ours have adhered to the calibre and bullet of their old arm, but have fitted the new rifle with a properly locked breech bolt and have thus been able to make use of a far more powerful cartridge, in fact the most powerful military cartridge—in the world—they have increased the charge to give a muzzle velocity of 2,300 ft. secs., thus enormously increasing the range and flatness of trajectory.

The proposed new short rifle, though more handy than the present long rifle, is said to be inferior in accuracy; this may be accounted for by its lighter weight giving increased recoil, its shorter barrel less velocity and by its shorter sight radius. The spiral of the rifling has been slightly increased in the new rifle. This has also increased recoil and to remedy this the bore has been slightly enlarged towards the muzzle. I see in the papers that the accuracy of the new rifle is not thought much of by marksmen and I am not astonished at it. I do not see how an 8lb rifle can be made to do as steady work on the target as one a pound and a half heavier. For a light rifle to shoot steadily at long ranges the bullet must be light and velocity high and to have a light bullet the calibre must be reduced, for instance the ·256 Mannlicher with its bullet of 60 grains less weight than the ·303 compares favourably and in fact is more accurate at 1,000 yards range than the ·303.

I think one of the most satisfactory rifles is the ·275 or 7 millimetre Spanish Mauser (used by the Boers). Its velocity is very high 2400 ft. per second in the long rifle and 2200 in the short Carbine. With this calibre and cartridge the recoil does not exceed that of the ·303 heavy rifle and good accuracy combined with flat trajectory at any range can be had. To give high velocity to a heavy bullet of 220 grains in a light 8lb rifle means some loss of accuracy, it also means a very heavy massive cartridge case and consequent increase in the weight of ammunition. I think therefore if a new rifle is to be issued and not merely a make—shift to use up the present pattern of ammunition that a rifle of about ·275 bore a clip loader of the Mauser or Mannlicher type should be adopted unless a good automatic action is in the mean time found suitable for ordinary military work which no doubt it soon will be.

THE COMMON KITE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I shall be obliged if you, or any of your readers, can tell me where the common kites go to in July and August.

I am acquainted with the districts of Rajshahi, Nadia, Murshidabad, and Birbhum, and in all of these I have remarked this annual exodus of the kites. They leave about 28th June and return about 20th August. Where they go, and what they go for, are to me mysteries. They obviously do not go to breed as they breed in the cold weather.

It has suggested itself to me that they may go to the coast at the break of the Monsoon to feed on shell fish, etc., thrown up on the beach by the heavy sea usually obtaining at that period. But if this be the case why do the fish-eating Brahmini kites remain in the districts?

The natives know of the migration of the Kites and set their eggs in June so that the chickens may be grown before the kites return.

THE SNOW PIGEON.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I read with great interest "Fleur de Lys'" note on the Snow Pigeon. He says he has never heard it utter a sound which is peculiar, as they have got a note, which, according to Mr. Finn, "is a repeated croak, not unlike a hiccough." He also goes on to say that "much as the bird resembles the domestic pigeons I have never seen it sweep the ground with its tail when courting but rather raise it." Has "Fleur de Lys" ever seen them courting like the common pigeon.

INDI AMBULANTES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I have the pleasure to announce that the day after the memorable walking contest between Messrs. Birkmyre Bros and Messrs. J. Thomas & Co. Mr. Archy Birkmyre of the former team asked his own office baboos to follow the lead and accordingly the General and Export Department baboos of the said firm have arranged two teams, five a side, for a competitive walk from Barrackpore Government House, south gate, to Shambazar Bridge, Calcutta side, a distance of about 15 miles. The walkers have been under training since then, but owing to unfavourable weather the date of the match was not fixed till the 1st August, Saturday next, when they intend to start at about 5-50 P.M., and reach to Calcutta at say 8-30 P.M., or earlier. [No doubt.—ED]. The European Assistants of the firm have kindly accepted to act as starter, timekeeper, and referees.

I take this opportunity of informing you that Mr. Birkmyre has offered three prizes to the first three winners [What ho! three winners in one race.—ED.] and has also very liberally undertaken to defray all expenses in connection with the said match. Full particulars will follow.

Kindly give the above little space in the columns of your reputed journal in its next issue.

Thanking you in anticipation,

MODUN MOHUN MULLICK.

DO BUTTERFLIES MIGRATE?

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Being no entomologist I enclose you two specimens of a butterfly (or what will be left of them after the postal authorities deal with this letter) for scientific identification and nomenclature.

I know it is an exceedingly common species and is met with almost everywhere in Bengal at almost all times. It breeds on all lime, orange, and citron trees and also on the bael tree, the young caterpillar varying from black to green, according to age, with a white collar. This afternoon at about 3 P.M. we began to get most welcome glimpses of the sun between passing clouds, it having rained fairly heavily since 2 P.M. on the 12th off and on. On taking a stroll at about 4 P.M. I was immediately struck by the large numbers of these butterflies flying or rather gently sailing from S.-S.E. to N.-N.W.

The following points appear extraordinary to me in this:—

(α) That the one species alone were about and all were coming from and going in the same direction at all altitudes as far as the eye could see.

(β) That they kept up this flight till after sunset, though they fell off considerably in numbers as it grew late as far as I could judge and a few stragglers alone were seen at dusk.

(γ) That they should be going along so extraordinarily slow seeing the normal flight of the butterfly is a fast gyratory action.

The rate of flight may be judged by the fact that I had no difficulty in knocking down a pair with a couple of strokes from an ordinary walking stick—a thing I would not back myself to do every day by any means.

H. R.

KERBA, BILASPORE, 16th July, 1903.

[The Post Office having treated the enclosures with a gentleness as welcome as it is rare we are enabled to identify the butterflies as Papilio Erithonius; as our correspondent remarks, a very common kind. Butterfly migrations, such as described, are by no means rare; in some districts they are of annual occurrence and have been frequently noted.—ED.]

GENERAL CONDITIONS.

1. W.I.T.C. Rules.
2. Course and Stable fees charged according to Poona Course Regulations, 1903.
3. Entrance money goes to the Fund.
4. The full advertised money will be given in every case, except in the case of a walk-over, when only half the advertised money will be given, and according to Rule 140.
5. No entries will be accepted unless accompanied by a remittance for the full amount of such entries. Cheques and drafts must be made payable in Poona in favour of the Secretary, W.I.T.C.

In W.I. Races the height, and whether Old or New Measurement, and in W.A. Races the age, must be stated.

New Measurement means ponies measured since 31st March 1899.

Entries must be made on forms which will be supplied by the Secretary, W.I.T.C., on application.

With less than 6 entries in bonâ fide separate interests, the Stewards reserve the right to declare any race or steeplechase void.

6. Mares and Geldings allowed 3lbs. in all races, except selling races and handicaps.
7. In all races other than selling races and handicaps, a landing allowance will be given to all horses and ponies landed in India direct from the country of foaling or from U.K. To Arabs landed on or after 1st July 1902, 6lbs. To other classes if landed on or after 1st January 1903, 3lbs; if landed after 1st June 1903, 6lbs. (not accumulative). The allowance to be reduced by 3lbs. on a horse or pony winning one race value Rs. 200 and upwards, and to cease on his winning two races of that value and upwards after arrival in India.
8. Unless otherwise specified, starting declarations for each race must be in the declaration box for that race, not later than half an hour before the time advertised for such race. The declaration must be in writing on an official form which will be supplied by the Secretary, and must state the name of the race, the name of the horse and weight to be carried, and the name of the Jockey, and must be accompanied by the amount due for Starting Sweepstakes (if any) for extra money for horses not struck out, for any fees due, and for the Jockey's fee for a losing mount if not already paid.

Omissions or errors in the Starting Declaration will render the owner or person making it subject to a fine at the discretion of the Stewards.

9. Every person running a horse in colours other than those registered in his own or assumed name, without submitting not later than two days before the race, a written declaration of the colours which will be used, will be fined Rs. 20 in respect of each horse so run. A declaration may be made of colours which will be used by the person making it throughout the meeting, in which case no further declaration will be required
10. All telegrams to be confirmed by letter.
11. All communications to be addressed to the Secretary, Western India Turf Club, Poona.

CECIL GRAY,
Secretary, W.I.T.C.

POONA, 1st February 1903.

The juice of the green pineapple is believed in Java, the Philippines, and throughout the Far East to be a blood poison of a most deadly nature. Health mentions it as the substance with which the Malays poison their kreeses and daggers, and as the "finger-nail" poison formerly in use among aborigine Javanese women almost universally. These women cultivated a nail on each hand to a long, sharp point, and the least scratch from one of these was certain death.

An emu is kept in a park in Sussex, and this bird is especially fond of pheasants' eggs. Being a special aversion of the gamekeeper's, this bird takes apparent delight in annoying him in every way. Prying about until he finds a choice nest of pheasant's eggs, he dispatches the dainty morsels instantly, thereby destroying the hopes of both keeper and hen. Every effort to break him of this habit has been unsuccessful. Once the keeper resolved upon a plan which he thought would, without doubt, prove effectual Having hard boiled a number of eggs, he carried them in steaming hot water to the field, and placed them before the ever-ready emu. Much to his surprise, the dish seemed to appeal strongly to the voracious appetite of the bird, for in a twinkling they were gone, a seeming look of wonder accompanying his grateful appreciation of this unusual attention.

THE TURF.

THE NEWMARKET MEETING.

THE concluding stage of the First July Meeting was witnessed by a small company. The sport was fairly interesting to the end. Backers again did pretty well, but in three instances they had to lay the odds Lady Help and Gower were mostly fancied for the Welter Handicap, but neither could keep pace with Blue Grass, who was permitted to start at "tens." It was the mare's fifth success this season. Lady Ormac took the Friday Plate, 115 guineas being sufficient to retain her at the subsequent auction. The Princess's Cup proved the good thing anticipated for Newsboy, who thus gained his fourth bracket, and the Ardvourlie filly landed the odds laid on her for the Fulbourne Stakes. The Ellesmere Stakes went to Wavelet's Pride, who cantered home, and sport concluded when Speculator easily defeatad Cossack (a warm favourite) for the Waterbeach Plate. W. Lane rode three winners.

THE FULBOURNE STAKES.—Of £620 10s., for two-year-olds; colts 8st 10lbs, fillies and geldings 8st 7lbs; winners extra. New T Y. C. (five furlorgs 140 yards).—

ALEXANDRA PARK JULY MEETING.

Such an attractive programme as that issued by Messrs. Pratt and Co. for the gathering at Alexandra Park on the 4th instant could not fail to draw large crowds to the pretty venue adjoining Muswell Hill, and it was manifest some time before the course was cleared for the initial event that the popularity of London's most central racing resort would be fittingly upheld. The Great Northern Railway Company always have their work cut out to deal with the abnormal traffic engendered by a meeting down Wood Green way and there was a continuous and heavy stream of holiday folk pouring northwards from the Metropolis from eleven o'clock onwards. The Members' Lawn—where the band of the Royal Marines enlivened the proceedings with a bright selection of appropriate airs - presented a gay and lively spectacle, and the public enclosures were filled to their utmost capacity. A strong breeze tempered the heat of the solar rays and rendered the atmosphere delightfully pleasant and a capital afternoon's sport was witnessed under most enjoyable conditions. There was a sufficiency of runners, having regard to the size and conformation of the course, and the going was in excellent condition. The feature of the entertainment was the success of the Duke of Devonshire's colours, which were borne to victory in three races, including the London Cup.

(Winner trained by Goodwin at Newmarket.)

BETTING: 2 to 1 agst Lucinda, 9 to 2 Rising Falcon, 6 to 1 Wise Rosie, 7 to 1 Newtown, 10 to 1 Wavelet's Pride 10 to 1 Muriel II, 10 to 1 Alp, 100 to 8 Lanoline, 100 to 7 Over Norton, 100 to 7 Happy Match 100 to 6 Pellisson.

Pellisson was the first to leave the paddock, and was followed in the parade by Wavelet's Pride, Lanoline, Muriel II., Newtown, Over Norton, Lucinda, and Wise Rosie, with Rising Falcon whipping in. They cantered in the same order, and the white flag was hoisted at 3-4. A capital start was effected at 3-6, Alp being the first to show in front of Happy Match Lanoline, Over Norton, Newtown, and Pellisson, with Rising Falcon next in advance of Lucinda and Wise Rosie, who hung fire last, for a quarter of a mile, when Lanoline and Happy Match exchanged places with Muriel II., Over Norton and Rising Falcon being in close attendance Turning out of the straight Happy Match resumed second place, closely pursued by Rising Falcon, Lanoline, Muriel II., and Pellisson, and on reappearing into view, half a mile from home, Alp was still showing the way to Lanoline, Muriel II., Newtown, and Happy Match, and, having made the whole of the running, won cleverly by a length; three lengths between second and third. Lucinda was placed fourth. Muriel II. fifth, Happy Match sixth, Wavelet's Pride seventh, Rising Falson eighth, Pellisson next, and Over Norton last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2mins 6⅗secs.

CRICKET.

OXFORD vs CAMBRIDGE.—Played at Lord's on 2nd, 3rd and 4th July Oxford won by 268 runs. The first day's play practically decided the result of the match, for while Oxford scored 259, Cambridge lost eight wickets for 126, and nothing short of a miracle could have saved them after this. There was nothing of any interest in the Oxford innings except the batting of Raphael, who played well all round the wicket, although his drives had something a little undecided about them; he kept the ball down well but hardly seemed to time it perfectly. He went in first, and was out ninth, only one other ball being bowled after his dismissal. His innings lasted for three hours and a half, and included thirteen fours; it was an innings of the utmost use to his side, for it was not played under the best of conditions, the ball getting up considerably at times. None of the other Oxford men seemed quite at home, and if Keigwin had only been in his usual form with the ball for Cambridge, the total might not have exceeded that of Cambridge. But, unhappily for his side, Keigwin, who had so often done well in the trial matches, was somewhat "off colour," and none of the other bowlers were very accurate. Dowson varied his pace well, but was by no means certain of his pitch; the slow ball with which he deluded MacIver was so very slow that one was reminded of the similar ball with which Alfred Shaw and Palmer so often met with success; it looks absurdly simple to spectators, but it sometimes completely takes a batsman by surprise. The Cambridge innings began at half-past four, and disasters came upon them at once. The batsmen showed excessive caution, for they found the bowling much more difficult to play than that of their own side had been Evans being particularly effective, and by five o'clock only 14 runs had been made, while three of the best men on the side were out, viz., Ebden Godsell and Mann. Dowson them came in, and at once adopted a different line of action. He did not wait to be bowled, but attacked the bowling, and after putting up two balls which, while they were not possible catches, were perilously near to being so, he played a bold game, which reminded one very much of that played by A. G. Steel in 1878, when another Evans, the uncle of the present Oxford cricketer, was working havoc among the Cambridge batsmen. Thanks to him the score began to show signs that it would not be altogether insignificant, and possibly if he could have found some other men to help him considerably, the fortunes of the game might have been changed. Bnt Keigwin alone could offer any steady resistance to the bowling. Dowson's fine innings was brought to an end just after he had reached his fifty, and it was an innings of which any man might be proud. Keigwin steadily kept up his wicket until the end of the day. Four overs on Friday morning were all that were required to finish the innings, and Oxford had a lead of 122, which they proceeded to increase rapidly. For the second time in the match, Findlay did nothing of note, and Raphael was not allowed to make another hundred, but when Carlisle and M'Iver got together, the bowling was collared for the fist time in the match. The two men made runs so quickly that when at last they were separated, they had put on 109 runs in a little over an hour, and had then placed their side in a very commanding position. Carlisle was the first to go, but MeIver did not survive him for long; their useful partnership had quite taken away any hopes Cambridge may have had of pulling the match out of the fire. The rest of the innings was only noticeable for the sound cricket played by Evans, who supplemented his good bowling by a first-class innings of 60, made in an hour and a half, and the determined hitting of Samson at the end, when his companions were unable to withstand the bowling. Enough had been done to render the task of Cambridge almost impossible of accomplishment, for in the fourth innings of the match they had to make 414 to win. This time Cambridge began their innings a quarter of an hour later than on the previous day, and in the course of the hour and three-quarters remaining for play they lost five wickets for 98, so that they still required 316 to win. As in the first innings, misfortunes came thick and fast, for Ebden, Mann, Harper, and alas! Dowson only made 7 runs between them. The first three wickets fell for 9 runs; the fourth with the total at 14. The outlook was hopelessly bad, but Godsell and Wilson made matters look a little better by adding 68 runs in five minutes under the hour. Just before time Wilson was bowled. There were very few spectators on Saturday, for the game was in such a position that if the remaining five batsmen had been Fry, F. S. Jackson, Jessop, L. C. H Palairet, and A. C. Maclaren there would have been small chance of victory for Cambridge on such a wicket. But there were no Frys and no Jessops in the Cambridge tail, and there was not even a final spark of interest in the remaining proceedings; for although Godsell has deserved well of his side when his innings closed, and although everybody felt that his strictly defensive cricket was the best game under the circumstances, it was not easy to become excited about it. Nevertheless his innings was a credit to the side, and under happier circumstances his stand of three hours might have been simply invaluable. He went in first and was out last.

GENTLEMEN vs. PLAYERS.—Played on 6th 7th and 8th July drawn. There was a very large crowd to witness the first day's play, which, as it happened, was not as interesting as it might have been. In the first place, the fielding of the Gentlemen, which is usually so brisk and businesslike, was often commonplace, though Warner and Burnup greatly distinguished themselves, while the batting of the Players was not very attractive, and the bowling of the Gentlemen somewhat commonplace. The Players, who were captained by Hayward, won the toss, and, although the stand for the first wicket produced 114 in an hour and thirty-five minutes, the two batsmen found that the bowling was by no means easy to deal with, for the wicket, while it was never really difficult, was not altogether in favour of the batsmen at first, and if any of the Gentlemen had been a Lockwood or an Australian, the chances are that the Players' innings would have been greatly shortened. As it was, Brearley alone of the amateur bowlers seemed to be likely to get many wickets, for it was certainly not one of Evans's days, and of the five other bowlers who were tried, only Dowson met with any success to speak of. Perhaps the first wicket partnership was the most attractive of the day, for both Hayward and Braund played very pretty cricket. At lunch time the score was 127 for Hayward's wicket, Braund being not out 65, and Tyldesley not out 2. Soon afterwards Braund was caught at mid-off by Maclaren, who, a few minutes later, when Tyldesley was rash enough to run for a hit to the same direction, threw down the wicket. Three wickets for 144. Then followed a long partnership between Denton and Knight, the latter being very anxious at first, and taking half an hour to play himself in before making a run. When he had settled down he gave a fine, but always cautious, exhibitio of the game, and was still at the wickets, with 98 to his credit, when stumps were drawn. As it was his first appearance in this match, his début was one of the most successful ever known. Denton played a lively, attractive, but somewhat lucky innings, for he was twice rather badly missed. Undoubtedly the innings of J. Gunn afforded more delight to the spectators than that of anyone else during the day, for he made 28 in little more than twenty minutes, making four 4's off an over from Bosanquet. A minute before the now customary interval for tea the Players were in a most satisfactory position, for with 274 runs on the board they had only lost four wickets. But Brearly then disposed of Gunn, and in a few overs after the game had resumed he dismissed both Arnold and A. E. Trott, so that it seemed highly probable that the innings would not last out the day. Then came a great and welcome surprise, for Barnes, who has never been seriously regarded as a batsman, came in to partner Knight, and finding the worn-out bowling of the Gentlemen to his liking, made hay of it. The two men became complete masters of the situation, and in about an hour and a half before stumps were drawn increased the total by 111 without being separated. Knight had been batting for three hours and a quarter. Total, 387 for seven wickets. There was a most disappointing display of cricket on the part of the Gentlemen on Tuesday. Their bowlers could make no more use of the wicket than on the previous day, but when their turn came to bat they found that it was another pair of sleeves, and they could make no headway against Braund, Hargreave and Trott. The last three wickets of the Players added very nearly a hundred runs to the overnight total, although Barnes was out after increasing his score by 1 run. But Knight and Hunter put on 57 for the ninth wicket before the former was out after batting for four hours and a half without making a serious mistake; his excellent innings included a 5 and eighteen 4's. Even now the innings was not ended, for the last two men quickly made 27 runs. In a very few minutes the Gentlemen had suffered two very serious losses from which they never recovered. Barnes began the bowling, but at the end of his over he was seen to limp, and soon left the field Slowly enough 14 runs had been made when Fry was bowled for 5, while Ranjitsinhji was magnificently caught just after lunch by Hargreave on the boundary at square leg off a fine hit. The total was now 39 for two wickets. After this misfortune none of the Gentlemen except Warner ever managed to feel comfortable, and although Dowson, Bosanquet and Evans each made between 20 and 30, one felt that they would not last for very long. Warner made most of the runs while he was in, and when, with the total at 86, he was caught at the wicket he had scored 51 in an hour and a quarter by very plucky cricket. For the most part the Gentlemen made their runs very slowly. They were so far behind that they had to follow on, and by the time that play ended they had made 74 for the loss of Warner, Fry being not out 41, and Ranjitsinhji not out 6. It did not seem at all likely that anything exciting would happen yesterday, for the Gentlemen had still 218 runs to make before they were level with the total of the first innings of the Players. But, as often used to happen in the days when a side had to follow on if it were a certain number of runs behind, the second innings was in marked contrast to the first. Fry and Ranjitsinhji became settled, found that the work of the previous day had taken something out of the bowlers, and took advantage of their opportunity. What would have happened if Ranjitsinhji had not been so lame that heaps of runs were lost is only a matter for speculation, but as it was, the wicket added 142 runs in a couple of hours to the overnight total of 74. Ranjitsinhji was then out for a brilliant innings of 60. By this time the Players had had almost enough of it, and they are not likely for some time to forget the experiences through which they had now to go. For when Maclaren joined Fry, their bowling was made to look even more simple than that of an ordinary weak club on a good wicket and runs came with almost amusing rapidity. Changes were in vain. The batsmen had got the upper hand and knew how to keep it. In a couple of hours the score had been increased by 200, and still the two famous cricketers went on, until when Fry had passed his second hundred and Maclaren his 150, the unfortunate Players were allowed to go in again. The partnership had produced 309 in about three hours and a half. For his 232 not out Fry was batting for five hours and three quarters, and his hits included thirty-two 4's. Naturally the latter part of his innings was easy work, but at the commencement of it his side was in an almost hopeless position, with the Players' bowlers in high feather. His innings was the highest ever made at Lord's in a match between Gentleman and Players. There was no chance whatever of dismissing the Players, but they were doubtless glad enough to have a rest.

ROWING.

HENLEY ROYAL REGATTA.

Henley Royal Regatta was brought to a successful conclusion yesterday in the presence of a largely-increased attendance. The first race of the day, the final for the Grand Challenge Cup, produced an exciting struggle, in which last year's winners suffered defeat by six feet, Leander winning by that distance over Third Trinity in 7mins. 9sec. I have wired you the results and here append details of the finals :—

(Time record, 6 mins. 51sec).

The Consuta was crowded when she left the raft, amongst others on board with the umpire, Mr. Pitman, being Mr. R. G. Gridley (hon. sec A. R. A), Mr. R. C. Lehmann (coach of the Leander), Mr Willis (coach of Taird Trinity, Mr. Herbert T. Steward (Chairman of the Commitee), etc. There was very little wind, and really no advantage in the station, when the crews came up to the stake boats where a slight delay ensued. Etherington Smith was the first to reply to the usual query by the umpire and promptly answered "No," and then Third were delayed a trifle. When eventually they got away, the wind had arisen somewhat from the Bushes, but Trinity were the first away, and led in the first ten strokes, but only by a couple of feet. The tally for the first minute was : Third, 11-21-40; Leander 11-20-40 As far as could be judged, they were absolutely level at the Temple, and, if anything, Trinity had the advantage at the half-mile, reached in 2mins. 29secs. After passing the Farm both were rowing 34 to the minute. At Fawley Court boat house the wearers of the cerise were only a yard in front, the time being 3mins. 26secs. Nelson once more spurted desperately, and almost led by six feet at the Grosvenor Club, and passing the mile (in 5mins. 22secs. had a slight advantage. The finish was extra ordinary, as in the last hundred yards Graham made one grand effort, and well backed up, just got up on the post where he won amid the most intense excitement and interest by six feet, the time being 7mins. 9secs.

Not for years has there been such a struggle, and from every point of view it evoked the greatest enthusiam, both winners and losers being applauded vociferously.

Magdalen started off at 10-21-39 in the first minute, Eton doing 10, 21, and 39. Before the quarter-mile post was reached Magdalen were nearly three-quarters of a length in front, and drew clear at the Farm. Coming up to Fawley, Magdalen were rowing easily 36, and passed the bouthouses in 3mins, 75secs., Eton then being four seconds behind. After this Magdalen never were really approached, and off the mile reached in 6mins 30secs were a length and a quarter in front. Eton, however, were not done with, and at Clubland once more spurted, but Rose was equal to the effort, and drawing away won a grand race by a length and three feet. Time—7mins 33secs.

There was very little wind when they were despatched on their journey. The Hibernians were first away, and, as yesterday, put in 22 strokes in the first half, the tally for the full period being 42 exactly. Kingston's time was 21 for the half-minute, and 41 in the full, but they rowed rather raggedly, and were led by half a length at the Temple. Near the Farm Dublin rowing 33 to the minute, came further away, Kingston's rate then being 33. The Irishmen's time at the half-mile was 2mins. 33secs., and they were then half a length in front. At Fawley Dublin were still half a length to the good, the time there being 3mins. 38secs. Approaching the Mile Post, Greene spurted, but passed that post in 5mins. 40secs. The Kingston men very palpably were beaten then, but, pluckily, they never let up, and Dublin only won by a length, after a grand race. Time—7mins. 37secs.

They both started at 20-39, but the Berliners were the first to show in front, and before half the Island had been traversed were half a length ahead. By the Farm the visitors had increased their lead to two thirds of a length, and, passing Fawley mark in 4mins 13secs, had an advantage of seven seconds. Both crews subsequently steered a grand course, but the Berliners were always in front, and won by eight lengths, in 8min 45secs. the victory being decidedly popular and well received along the river-front.

The Hollanders were the quicker away, and, splendidly steered by Lieut. Blusse, put in 22-43 strokes in the first minute, Nelson's time being 19-37. Half-way up the Island the Cambridge men settled down to business, and, rowing steadily 36-37, were level at the Temple. They were in front, almost clear, at the half-mile, reached in 2mins 44secs, and had a two-length advantage at Fawley, where they were clocked 3mins 48secs. Repeatedly Ferman spurted, but the Netherlanders could not make the slightest impression upon the best four ever seen in the Stewards' Cup. Third were three lengths to the good at the mile, where the time was 5mins 55secs, and then, slowing down, only paddled home, safely, the official verdict being a length and three-quarters. Time—8mins 5secs.

It was a grand race by Third, and they were at once, amid cheers, congratulated by the Netherlanders, who, in turn, were given a hearty and enthusiastic reception, and appreciated the cordial compliment paid them en route.

THE DIAMONDS (ten entries).

(Holder, F. S. Kelly, Palliol, Oxford).

Bucks : F S. Kelly, Leander R C., 12st 1
Berks : J Beresford, Kensington R.C., 9st 10lbs 2

Mr. Fletcher sent them off to a grand start, and in the first minute Beresford, who was the faster away, put in 10-20-38, the holder's rate meanwhile being 11-20-38. Before a quarter of a mile had been traversed Kelly, whom it was rumoured was going for the record, was half a length in front and in less than 30secs was clear. At the Rectory he had increased his advantage to two lengths and a half, and at Fawley was a good three lengths in front, his time then being 4mins 9secs, although he was also clocked 4mins 6 secs. The remainder of the journey was only a paddle for the Oxonian, who finished in 8 mins 41secs, Beresford's time being 9mins 11secs. It is some years since such a grand sculler has been seen, and his performance in the Wingfields for which he has entered, will be eagerly looked forward to. To beat Beresford as easily as he did after his great race in the Grand is a marvellous performance, and stamps the Australian, as being one of the greatest amateur scullers who ever sat in a boat.

Magdalen were the first to show in front, and in the first minute Monier Williams dipped in 10-18 35. University's rate being 9-18-36 Before the top of the Island was reached, University drew level and Magdalen, crossing over, it looked as if there would be a foul Willis, however, went back to the Berks side, and University assumed the lead, and were just clear at the half-mile in 2mins 54secs. At Fawley, passed in 4mins 3secs, they were a length and a quarter in front, and were then rowing steadily. At the Mile the time was 6mins 18secs for the leaders, and after this they had matters their own way, winning eventually by a length and a quarter Time—8mins 25secs.

As almatter of detail, is may be added that the races was witnessed by Rev. Hon. G. Denman who rowed for Cambridge in 1841 and 1842.

Kingston were first away, and were slightly in front at the top of the Island, where the Metropolitans took a very erratic course, and very nearly fouled the up-river men, who also were not blameless in the matter of clear steering At the half-mile London led by a few feet, and then again it looked as if there would be a foul. They had a grand race to Fawley, passed by Kingston in 4mins., 7secs. only a couple of yards separating them. Subsequently, London made one good effort to draw up, but Kingston had their measure taken, and, shaking off the last challenge near Clubland, came away, and won a fine race by a length and four feet. Time—8mins. 28secs.

ATHLETICS.

THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIPS.

With several of the holders standing down and the fields smaller than usual, the championship meeting decided on the County Cricket Ground, Northampton, on Saturday, fell rather flat. The lack in quantity was not, unfortunately, atoned for by the quality of those, speaking collectively, who took part in fourteen events, which, with preliminary heats and finals, kept the officials busy from half-past two until six o'clock. Two or three good things were done during the afternoon, but the sport, generally, was devoid of excitement and incident, and, to put it plainly, the fixture was, for a championshion gathering, a good deal below the average. Luckily, the weather was about all that could be wished. Perhaps the wind was slightly too high for the long-distance races, but the air was beautifully pure and clear, while continuous sunshine made matters pleasant for the goodly number of spectators who patronised the proceedings. The attendance, indeed, was said to be one of the best ever seen on the ground, reaching, as it did, close upon 8,000, and, with several local athletes as competitors, it goes without saying there was, at times, a good deal of enthusiasm. Details :—

100 YARDS RACE.

Heat 1 : A. F. Duffy (holder), Georgetown University, U S.A., 1 ; A. Hargreaves, Southport H. and A. C., 2. The American was quickest in his running and, drawing away stride by stride, he won comfortably by two two yards. Time—10 1secs.

Heat 2 : F. Rivers Nottingham Boots A.C., 1 ; Dennis Murray, Co. Dublin H., 2 ; J. A. Miller, London A. C., 3. The men were despatched to an excellent start. Rivers and Murray at once drew away from Miller, and, running a great race, were level twenty-yards from home. In the last few strides Rivers stayed best, and won by a foot ; a bad third. Time—10⅕secs.

Heat 3 : L. F. Tremeer, Polytechnic H., 1 ; H. Morgan, Salford H., 2 ; E. W. Smith, Northampton Alpine H., 3. The Londoner was away like a flash, and at the half-distance he led by a yard. This advantage he easily increased, and, with the race in hand, he won, pulling up, by two yards ; third one yard away. Time—10⅘secs.

Final Heat.

A F Duffy, Georgetown University U S A ...	...	1
F Rivers, Nottingham Boots A C ...	...	2
L F Tremeer, Polytechnic H ...	...	3

Directly the pistol cracked Duffy crowded on all steam, and, in his running at once, he was leading at the half-distance by a yard. This he increased to five feet in the next score, and in the end he won rather cleverly by two long yards ; three-quarters of a yard between second and third. Time 10secs.

The Scot won with ease at his first throw.

P O'Connor, Waterford A C	w o

S. S. Jones, New York A.C. (holder), and P. L. Lascelles, Cambridge University, did not compete, and O'Connor consequently walked over. In an exhibition jump he cleared 5ft. 8ins.

ONE MILE RACE.

A Shrubb, South London H	1
J Binks (holder), Highgate H	2
E L. Gay-Roberts, Oxford University A C	3

The Oxonian led at a slow pace, followed by Shrubb, with Binks two yards away last. After going a quarter, Shrubb drew up to Gay-Roberts, but almost immediately dropped back second. Binks, who was running easily, also had a feeler at Shrubb, who, at six hundred yards, put on the pace, and assumed first position. Gay-Roberts now began to lose ground, and at the half-distance Binks gave him the go by, and hunted after Shrubb. The last-named kept looking over his shoulder and, with the sound of the bell, Binks nearly drew level. At this point a desperate finish appeared in view, as Binks seemed to be easily holding the leader. Four hundred from home, however, Shrubb dashed right away, and, leaving Binks as if he were standing, he won all ends up by twenty yards ; Gay Roberts being a bad third. Time—4mins. 24secs.

120 YARDS HURDLE RACE.

Heat 1 : G R Garnier, Oxford University A C, 1 ; F W Gould, Newport A C, 2. A walk over, both being qualified for the final. Grainer, however, ran out and won by ten yards. Time—17⅖secs.

Heat 2 : A Trafford, Birmingham A C, 1 ; Patrick Harding, Dublin Civil Service R F C, 2 ; John Murray, Co. Dublin H, 3. Trafford was the smartest away and he took the first hurdle a yard in advance of Harding. The further he went the more he increased his lead, and in the end the Midlander won by five yards ; half a yard between second and third. Time—16⅖secs.

Final Heat.

G R Garnier, Oxford University A C	1
A Trafford, Birmingham A C	2
E W Gould, Newport A C	3
Patrick Harding, Dublin Civil Service	4

The Dark Blue was the first at his obstacles, and at the half-distance he was leading Trafford a yard and a half. The Brum made a great effort, but Garnier always had the foot of his field, and, clearing his jumps in fine style, he ran right through and won by two yards and a half ; three-quarters of a yard dividing second and third. Time—15⅖secs.

220 YARDS RACE.

Heat 1 : C. W. Fox, Highgate H., 1 ; G. F. Brewill, Loughboro' Corinths. A. F. C., 2 ; A. G. Kennedy, Rutherford College, O ; R. W. Wadsley (holder), Salford H., disq. An unfortunate scramble. Wadsley began very slowly and Fox made the running from Brewill When well down the straight Wadsley made his effort. He was, however, forced on to the turf, and trying again, upset Kennedy and finished second. Fox won, and Wadsley was disqualified and second place awarded to Brewill. Time—23⅖secs.

Heat 2 : L. F. Tremeer, Polytechnic H., 1 ; E. K. Kenyon, Manchester, A. C., 2 ; A. Hargreaves, Southport H. and A. C, 3 ; H. Morgan, Salford H., 0. After a fine start Tremeer began to draw away, but rounding the bend Kenyon got level with the Poly. man. Tremeer, however, was equal to the occasion, and shaking of the Mancunian he won a good race by a yard ; half a yard divided second and third. Morgan pulled up a score from home. Time—23⅖secs.

Final Heat.

G F Brewill, Loughborough A F C	1
L F Tremeer, Polytechnic H	2
C W Fox, Highgate H	3

E. H. Kenyon, Manchester A C, did not start, and Brewill, getting well away, soon showed in front. At the half-distance Tremeer drew up to the Midlander's shoulder, but Brewill had plenty left in him and, coming with a fine raking stride down the straight, he won cleverly by nearly two yards ; one yard divided second and third. Time—23secs.

Nicolson was again to the fore, and, quite overshadowing his rivals, he won handsomely with the fine throw recorded.

J H Bessell, Ranelagh H and L A C	0
J E Finnegan, Dublin Handdington H	0
C R Berry, Blackheath H	0
John McGough, Glasgow Bellahouston H ...	0

On settling down Blunden made the running from Ward with Kenyon lying third and Finnegan last. A furlong later the Blackheath harrier was four yards to the good, but, easing up, he led Kenyon by barely two yards. Coming round the bend for home the Manchester man shot past and took a four-yard lead. Then, when about 100 yards from home, he mistook the winning post and almost pulled up. Before he could get fairly into his stride again Blunden had resumed command, and, though thoroughly done up, he stayed home and won by five yards : ten yards between seconod and third. Only the four placed finished.

QUARTER MILE RACE.

C McLachlan, Herne Hill H	1
G W White (holder), Northampton Rodley H ...	2
E H Montague, South London H	3
C W Packford, Reading A C	4
R B Cowley, South London H	5

After going a few strides White took the lead, and came away from Montague and McLachlan, with Cowley last. At the half-distance Montague ran past and led into the straight, where, however, he gave way to White. The last-named appeared to have the race in hand, but, dying away in the last score, he was caught by McLachlan, who finishing strongly, won by three yards ; one yard between second and third. Time—52⅖secs.

TWO-MILE WALKING RACE.

E J Negus, Northampton	1
G A Bush, Northampton Institute H	2
T O'Gorman, Polytechnic H	3
W Martindale, Polytechnic H.	4
W Endean, Polytechnic H	5

At the mile the order was Bush, Negus, O'Gorman, Martindale and Endean. The last-named was never dangerous, but in the final circuit Bush and Negus had a great race. Three hundred yards from home Bush spurted past Negus, but when winning well he pulled up at the wrong post and Negus regained the lead and scored a lucky victory by fifteen yards ; about the same distance divided the next two. Martindale was fourth, a foot behind O'Gorman. Times : One mile, 7mins. 15secs ; two miles, 14mins. 44⅘secs.

E J Bricknell, Birchfield H	0
E H R Redfearn, Finchley H	0
F James, Herne Hill H	0

About the best race of the day, Nicholls and Russell made joint running for nearly a mile, closely attended by Robinson and Randall. A furlong later the last-named went to the front, but he lost ground at the water jump and gave way to Robinson. Nicholls now fell away slightly, and Russell went up to Robinson. For two laps the leaders ran stride for stride, but finally Robinson drew out when taking the water for the last time, and having most speed, he won by about a dozen yards. Nicholls was twice this distance away, third. Time—10mins. 58secs.

THE WEASEL.

Pigsticking.

THE LAST BOAR

With apologies.

"'Tis the last boar of the woods
All his female companions
Are speared and are gone.
Not a pig of his kindred,
No squeaker is nigh,
To grow such fine tushes
Or cock such an eye.

"I'll not leave thee, then, lone one,
Life's hazards to stem ;
Since thy wives are all sleeping,
Go, sleep thou with them.
Thus, kindly, I spear thee,—
To the dust bring they head,
For the mates of thy boarhood
Are speared and are dead.

"Ah, soon may I follow
When hunters decay,
And the family circles
Of pig die away ;
When sows are all speared
And squeakers are flown,
Oh! who would inhabit
The jungles alone?"

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

THE meet on the 18th instant was at the Kennels, when a small field turned out. A jack was started in Mills' Cover and led them over Ragman, through Jackal Shola, down below Monkey Shola, then to Leeds Shola, where he turned and going back to Monkey Shola went to ground. Another line was opened on near One Tree Hill and hounds ran him through Monkey Shola to Owl Crossing, where he went to ground.

On the 20th instant, hounds met at the Rifles Butt, and a couple of jacks were started from the nullah between Hanging Shola and Middle Covert. One took the direction of Aramby and hounds were stopped and when they were tried on the other scent it was found to be cold. A jack was started on the hill opposite Brooklands and away he went towards Newmarket, but crossing the stream in the Demon Valley made for Rocky Cover, thence for the Ghats and hounds finished him up in the open. They opened on a line below Wapshare's Hare Shola and crossing the Pykara Road near Windy Gap went into the Yemakal Valley, where hounds were stopped. On the homeward journey a jack crossed the Krurmund Bridle Path and hounds were immediately after him down the Krurmund Valley across the stream to Mr. Hodgson's Lodge past which he was lost in a big shola.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

FAIR Diana, Goddess of the chase, is in very truth turning a frowning face on this celebrated pack and what poor Colonel Sheringham or the members of the Hunt have done to incur her divine displeasure poor mortal man can never know. Certainly the humble scribe who pens these sorrowing lines wots not. For his pen is of wormwood and his ink of gall and the gallant Master must seriously be thinking of turning his pink coat to one of sack cloth and ashes. The worst of bad luck clings to hunting just now and yet another sportless day has to be recorded. Lakri Pul or the Wooden Bridge is never I am told a very popular meet owing to the diabolical going (big jagged stones covered with long grass on a hill—it sounds tempting, doesn't it ?) which few men with hunters worth more than a "pound a leg" care to batter them over. Nevertheless the popularity of the Master and ever springing hope induced quite thirty lovely women and brave men to put in an appearance in the grey dawn. The extensive sugarcane coverts have I am solemnly assured been in previous seasons a certain find even though their very expanse have occasionally rendered it as impossible to evict the varmint as ar Irish tenant. But jacks of this locality evidently considered it was not part of their mission in life to become amphibious on purpose to delight the blood-thirsty heart of a keen Master of hounds. Acre after acre of a slushy cane fields did hounds draw up to their hocks in mire at times with the most commendable patience and determination, but never a whimper raised a hope in rapidly depressing hearts. Wet covert and dry covert was tried with unvarying lack of success. Small game of many kinds but never a sign or symptom of the varmint that everyone desired to make the hero of the morning.

On and on past Kothrud Village even unto the limits of far off Warja, the field dropping off one by one or in little detachments, while the Master (one of the hard-bitten sort who never knows when he is beaten or at any rate refuses to admit it as long as he can so I hear) kept on in grim determination. But you can't kill a jackal if there isn't a jackal to kill and the bravest heart must yield to the inevitable, and it was past noon I hear when the Master in sorrow and anguish gave the orders for kennels. Presumably the continuous rain has driven jack from low-lying coverts to the hills. Certainly the complete destitution of so extensive an area was remarkable.

"My heart is sad" quoth the king "in that there is no tree in yonder field."

"My liege," responded the astute courtier, "the evil can be readily rectified by planting one there."

He that hath ears to hear let him hear.

* * * * * *

If the Indian Field keeps a supply of red ink let it be brought forth and laid on with a trowel, for truly I have a "red letter" day to record. So brilliant a run was it indeed and such a remarkably select few were there really 'in it" and up to the end of it that it has been with the greatest difficulty that I have been able to get, I trust, an accurate description, for, as a stranger in a strange land, my sources of information are not numerous and I find that here as in English hunting fields, it is those who go straightest that talk least and so it has been only by putting little scraps, gathered here and there together, that I have been enabled to build up the joyous song I have to sing. Lohogaon on a week day, on a rainy morning and after the sad series of practically blank days, was enough to make many hesitate as to whether a seven-mile hack to covert (half of it at least a bad country cart track) was good enough. Some I know answered the self-given query in the negative and sought solace in slumber. But there were a gallant score or more including I hear three ladies whose love of sport and confidence in the gallant Master never wavered, who while fearing the worst hoped for the best and for good or ill, met hounds on the outskirts of the village. Whatever was her grievance chaste Diana had clearly relented and wholly forgiven her faithful worshippers. So full was her divine pardon that she refrained from even straining their fidelity for a needless moment. For scarcely had hounds been thrown into the neighbouring cactus covert than a great burst of music proclaimed in joyous strain (doubly welcome at so long a silence of the merry chorus) that long suffering was at an end and sport once more before the eager field. No time for dalliance this. If the confirmed "coffee-houser" had one of his pet antiquated anecdotes on the tip of his tongue he was disappointed in the utterance. The fidgety horseman whose stirrup leathers never seem to be of the right length had either to start galloping in imaginary lop-sidedness and presumable misery or miss his start. All one had apparently time to do was to squash one's hat down and breath a fervent prayer. Ard Patrick let that thrice blessed jack be called, for a finer galloping jack never I fancy laid pad to Deccan country. No need was there for the Master to piteously entreat "Hold hard gentlemen, hold hard. Please give the hounds a chance." Everyone that morning had Colonel Sheringham's full permission to catch his mottled darlings who could. Ten minutes of the fastest going imaginable meant bellows to mend for many—and the first flighters began to get away from the crowd. The going was good enough I hear considering the previous prolonged rain, but ravines and water courses, hills, rocks and holes and an occasional soft bit made real galloping and keeping "with hounds" possible only to the select few who meant to be there and had horses fit to respond to that most commendable desire. Past "Temple Hill," leaving it well on the left and in among a range of hills—now over the brow—now sinking the vale this gallant jack led hounds and horsemen at racing speed. Never a falter, never a check—never a minute to get one's wind or make up a bad start. Past a hillock of sheet rock took the happy few close to a broadening of the far-famed Indryani river, forming with its overflow a dyke which most just escaped but into whose unknown depth one gallant little sportsman I am told plunged recklessly. Hounds were in front and he meant to be with them. Following the bend of the river hounds raced going in wonderful style I believe till eventually hounds threw their heads up on the river bank. A mistaken "view holla" raised false hopes for a brief moment, but there seems not the slightest reason to doubt that this dauntless jack braved the torrent of the Indryani. Seldom can hounds have deserved blood better and seldom has a jack better deserved his freedom. The time of the run varies I find from 30 to 35 minutes and a local sportsman tells me he works out the run as ending close to but on the opposite side of the river to (one of the several) Dhanora Villages and about three miles from Alandi, which I trust may enable keen sportsmen who missed this fine run to follow the line taken. In looking up past chronicles of my estimable predecessor, Mr. Sponge, I see that he was greatly averse to mentioning names in the belief that it encouraged the enormity of riding over hounds Since I am informed that such a tendency has not been apparent this year at any rate, I trust I may be committing no indiscretion if I place in honourable record the lucky and distinguished few whose great good luck and good horsemanship (not forgetting the gallant steeds that carried them) enabled them to see this run from start to finish. It gives me all the more pleasure since a lady was among the few. Those present when hounds threw their heads up at the river side were, I hear, Mrs. Beatty on her wonderful little mare, Colonel Sheringham, the Master, on a weight-carrying bay, who looked I am told and apparently must be "as clever as a man," Major England, R.A., on a useful looking brown, Mr. Armstrong, 1st whip, on a very handsome brown Australian that I am assured takes a lot of beating over a hunting country, and last on my list though, I gather, by no means last in the hunt, Mr. Graham, a keen young sportsman (attached to that very sporting regiment The Buffs) who on a raky flea bitten gray took full advantage of his light weight. A glorious run it must have been, and though I can pretend to know but little of Indian hunting, if the feelings engendered thereby even approach those of being in the first flight of an English run then indeed do I envy the lucky few whose names I have mentioned and even those who humbly followed after.

A run like this would have been enough for most hounds, but on the homeward journey and a long journey it was, hounds got on a line and ran at a great pace an ambitious pye dog joining their select throng—and eventually lost their jack in some garden land. But even this failed to suffice. Fate seemed determined to shower its blessings on the Master's head. For while jogging back to Lohogaon was met heading straight for hounds, and before he could remedy so great a tactical error was after a short burst rolled over and killed and who could deny hounds blood on such a day. Was I therefore exorbitant in my demand for red printer's ink.

BELLARY SKITTLE TOURNAMENT.

Third Day, Saturday, 18th July 1903.

LEICESTER REGT. vs. 14TH M. I.

First Chukker.—Up-and-down play at the start, in which the Leicesters had the best of matters, ended in a long shot by Puckle going through. Shortly after Puckle got in a fine run and scored a second goal, up and-down play closing the chukker. Score: Leicesters, 2 goals; 14th M. I., nil.

Second Chukker.—The ball was kept in midfield for some time, then Tronson got away and passing to Puckle, the latter scored. The 14th lost a chance at goal and the ball was taken back to their line, Tronson sending in a shot which went wide. Score: Leicesters, 3 goals; 14th M. I., nil. Teams:—

2ND MADRAS LANCERS vs. LEICESTER REGIMENT.

First Chukker.—Henderson took the ball to the other end, where, from a foul against the Leicester, a goal was scored. Then Colonel Younghusband scored a subsidiary and followed it up with a goal. Wheatley scored two subsidiaries. Score: Lancers, 2 goals 3 subsidiaries; Leicesters, nil.

Second Chukker.—Henderson opened by scoring a goal, then a combined run by Colonel Younghusband, Ballantyne, and Wheatley resulted in the last named scoring. Up-and-down play followed, a good run by Ballantyne ending in another goal. Another combined run resulted in Colonel Younghusband putting through. Score: Lancers, 6 goals 3 subsidiaries; Leicesters, nil. Teams:—

Final Day, 22nd July 1903.

The finals came off to-day, and resulted in a win for the 2nd Madras Lancers. They have played splendidly throughout, and not a single goal or subsidiary has been scored against them.

2ND MADRAS LANCERS vs. MUSKETRY B.

First Chukker.—Henderson led off with a goal, a free hit later resulting in a subsidiary. A second goal was put on by Wheatley and then play ruled up and down. A foul against the Musketry gave the Lancers a free hit and a subsidiary was scored, Wheatley adding another goal almost immediately. Score: Lancers 3 goals 2 subsidiaries, Musketry nil.

Second Chukker.—After some up and down play, during which Colonel Younghusband's pony came down, the Lancers got away and Wheatley scored, Henderson following up with a subsidiary. A bit later the same player put on a goal and the chukker ended with the score: Lancers 5 goals 3 subsidiaries, Musketry nil. Teams:—

Cycling.

CYCLING IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Friday, 10th July 1903.

THE seventeenth annual open hill-climbing competition of the Catford Cycling Club, held on 4th July at Westerham Hill, Kent, proved one of the most successful competitions of the kind ever held, attracting as it did, no less an entry than forty-seven. Last year's climb received an entry of thirty-two, and this at the time was considered good. F. S. Bale, last year's winner, repeated the performance of riding the hill in the quickest time, i.e., 4mins. 3secs., and thus winning the scratch race, whilst the handicap run in conjunction with the scratch race, fell to F. G. Elliott who received a start of eighty seconds. The scene of the contest is a long hill with a gradient as steep as 1 in 6 in places and although possessing a good surface is too formidable an ascent for the majority of riders to surmount. In last week's race no less than twenty-six riders made their maiden appearance in hill-climbing, twenty successfully climbing the hill.

Can an intoxicated person cycle? This question was brought up at the Pontypridd Police Court, when a man was charged with being drunk whilst riding a machine, the case against the defendant being that he rode through the streets of the town "bumping" persons with his cycle. The defendant stated that he was not intoxicated, and maintained that a man in that condition would be unable to ride. The Stipendiary thought otherwise, and imposed a fine of 10s. This calls to mind an incident which happened some years ago when cycling with our club. At a country inn we came across a farm labourer who had imbibed too freely of England's good old beer. He was in a talkative mood, and insisted on joining in our conversation. Of course things cycular proved the topic, and one of our men wagered that the labourer could not ride up a hill in the neighbourhood without falling. He took on the bet, and we proceeded to the hill in question to witness a scene which promised some fun. To our surpise, although the man could scarcely walk, he mounted the bicycle and rode up the hill with the greatest of ease.

The members of the committee who had the management of the Liverpool Cyclists Parade, have at last been able to give the figures of this year's collection. The task of opening hundreds of boxes and counting the contents, proves a heavy one, for the total of last year's collection was well exceeded. £442 was the sum collected on 22nd June, an amount which many of the local hospitals can well do with.

It is wonderful what a little money will do. The treasurer of the Ripley Road Menders' Fund,—a fund which is subscribed to by cyclists for providing an annual dinner to the labourers engaged on this popular highway,—has just issued his report in which the total receipts amount to £36 14s. 3d. By the help of good management he has been able to provide no less than 128 dinners besides giving away a matter of 64lb.s of tea to the wives of the road menders. There is a balance of £6 4s. 8d. in hand, from which it will be seen that this charity has been achieved on the small expenditure of £30 odd. From out of the fund, two road menders have been able to enter the Surrey Convalescent Home at Seaford, for rest and change.

The majority of accidents are undoubtedly caused through sheer carelessness on the part of certain riders who fail to exercise any reasonable care when cycling on public highways. A prevalent custom with such wheelmen is the habit of making use of the fast travelling electric tramcars for towing purposes. Only last week we referred to a fatal accident which occurred to a rider taking hold of the side of a car and in side slipping, coming in contact with the bogie wheels; and now we hear of an accident which occurred in South London, through two riders hooking themselves one on each side of a car. The conductor noticed their presence and immediately ordered them off, but in clearing the car one of the riders collided with a pedestrian and fell against the tram. Marvellous to relate he received but slight injuries although it was quite possible that the catastrophe might have proved fatal. It is a common trick of some riders to travel in this way, and if they are ignorant of the risk they run the sooner it is impressed on them the better.

Death has removed a well-known personage in the cycling world in Paul Hardy, the British representative of many foreign cycling papers. He had undergone an operation, and everything seemed favourable for complete recovery, when it was found necessary to operate afresh which the tried physique was unable to withstand. He represented the foreign press more commercially than on the literary side, acting as advertising agent in this country, and amongst the trade with which his duties brought him, he was highly respected, as well as by a large proportion of those interested in the pastime of cycling. To his relations and friends we offer our sincere sympathy.

The return match between the team composed of members of the Polytechnic Cycling Club and a team of French amateurs selected by the Union Velocipede of France, drew an enormous crowd of spectators to the Crystal Palace track on 4th July. The match was run on similar lines to those introduced in Paris when the English team visited the Frenchmen on their own track, that is, that each of the four riders in the French team should meet each of the members composing the English team. This necessitated four heats, in the first of which the English gained first and fourth positions, whilst in the three remaining heats they finished first and second on each occasion, thus winning the match by no less than 14 to 26 points. The French team was minus Herbert, Espeit takin his place.

The roll of membership to the Cyclists' Touring Club still continues to diminish, the July Gazette just published showing a falling of a matter of 4,000 members as compared with the corresponding period last year. The reduction is due to a falling away in the number of renewals, as during the first six months in the year the number of new members exceeded last year's total by 500. We cannot help thinking that there must be something very wrong in the management of the C. T. C., since the membership continues to decline in spite of the fact that cycling is more popular than ever. Year after year the members continue to fall away, and unless something is done to stay the stream, the C. T. C. will become a mere shadow of its former self, and but a grade stronger than many of the private cycling clubs.

FOOTBALL IN CALCUTTA.

THE I. F. A. SHIELD COMPETITION.

K. O. S. B.'s. vs. SOVA BAZAR.—The Borderers had out a strong team when they met Sova Bazar on the Rangers' ground last Friday. The Baboos were on the defensive throughout the game and were eventually beaten by four goals to nil. The Borderers got away at once and Cassidy scored their first goal. Play ruled very one-sided till the interval, but no further scoring took place. On resuming the Sova Bazar men secured a corner but nothing came of it and the ball was brought back to the other end, where from a penalty kick against the Baboos Byers put on the second goal. Massey added a third and Cruickshanks found the net once more just before time. Teams:—

K. O. S. B.—Atkinson, goal; Goldie and McDonald, backs; Stewart, Tait and Bradley, half-backs; Byers, Bruce, Massey, Cassidy and Cruickshanks, forwards.

SOVA BAZAR.—S. Mookerjee, goal; K. Mookerjee and C. Mullick, backs; M. Bose Deo and Laha, half-backs; Dass, Mitter, Bagchie, Roy and N. Bose, forwards.

Referee.—Sergt. Wallace, 93rd Highlanders.

A. & S. HIGHLANDERS vs. ROYAL IRISH RIFLES.—A large crowd assembled on the Highlanders' ground last Saturday to witness the match between the above champions. As was expected a great game was witnessed, and though the visitors were defeated by two goals to nil they made a fine fight. The first half saw the play very even, both teams had forced some corners add both goal-keepers had rendered good service so that when the interval arrived there was no score. On changing ends after a few minutes' level play the Highlanders made great efforts and taking the ball down bombarded the Irish goal. Elphick rushed out to save cleared and fell and the ball was banged in by Lockhart amidst the wildest excitement. The Irishman played up and tried hard to equalise, but the High-

DALHOUSIE.—Peake, goal; Anderson and Stimson, backs; Phelps, Wallace and Dalling, half-backs; Rosser, Smith, Watts, Woods and Stewart forwards.

Referee.—Mr. R. Remfry.

K. O. S. B. vs. HOWRAH.—Played on the Dalhousie ground on the 28th instant. The turf was slippery owing to the rain during the day and the game was rather a disappointing one. Howrah started the game and for some time had the best of it: Byers and Cassidy then got away but without success and fast and even play followed, the interval arriving without any score. On changing ends the Howrah men again attacked, but the Borderers soon got possession and Donnithorne was given plenty to do, a rush ending in Cassidy scoring. Tait and Byers each added a goal after this and the Borderers won as was expected. Teams :—

K. O. S. B.—Atkinson goal; Goldie and McDonald, backs; Stewart, Tait and Bradley, half-backs; Byers, Bruce, Massey, Cassidy and Cruickshanks, forwards.

HOWRAH.—Donnithorne, goal; F. Bennett and H. Bennett, backs; Morrow, Osborne and Sinclair, half-backs; Smith, Burns, Wood, Jackson and Kerr, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. R. Remfry.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

As was generally expected Sova Bazar proved no match for the K. O. S. B. when these two teams met to decide as to which was to qualify for the semi-final of the Shield competition, for although the Baboos played pluckily throughout at no period of the game did they look like winning and they eventually had to acknowledge defeat by 4 goals to love. The Borderers, for whom Massey, Cruickshanks and Byers reappeared, were represented by the strongest team they have yet placed in the field this season, and it was distinctly a good performance on the part of the losers to have only one goal scored against them during the initial half. During the second period, however, Sova Bazar were completely outplayed, and except for one or two fine individual efforts by Bagchi, their centre forward, they seldom crossed the half-way line. The shooting of the winners was very erratic and they were repeatedly penalised for the offside tactics of Cassidy and Bruce. Mukerjee, the Sova Bazar custodian, played well throughout, but he was especially conspicuous during the first half. During the progress of the League competition the opinion was often expressed that the combined forces of Howrah United and Burns would be found capable of lowering the pretensions of many of their rivals and such has proved to be the case by their latest victory over Dalhousie which was thoroughly well merited. The match was played on the ground of the Trades team and was keenly fought out from start to finish, but the home team gave yet another of their disappointing displays and appeared to be unable to cope with the speed of the forwards opposed to them. The only point was scored during the first half as the result of a stinging shot by Wood which Peake could not possibly have saved. After the interval Dalhousie pressed for some time but could not get past the brothers Bennett, both of whom showed a magnificent defence, and the long shots which were subsequently sent in by Rosser and Watts were easily dealt with by Donnithorne. Dalhousie have a fine set of players, but they have experienced a disappointing season, a result which I attribute to the constant reshuffling of positions which has been taking place ever since the opening of the football campaign.

An enormous concourse of spectators were present to witness the meeting between the 93rd Highlanders and their old rivals the Royal Irish Rifles, which took place on the ground of the former on Saturday last and resulted in a win for the local champions by two goals to love. The game, which was contested in a most sportsmanlike manner by both teams, proved extremely interesting during the initial half, as each side attacked in turn, and the interval arrived with the score sheet a blank. After the restart, however, the very pretty and effective combination of the Fort team proved too much for the weak defence opposed to them and both Lockhart and Mongomery found the net.

The Rifles were much the heavier team but they were deplorably slow and showed a decided lack of combination. Although Edmonson, their centre forward, did one or two good things, he was of little or no use to his side, and he will if he is well advised, retire from active participation in the game of which he was at one time such an able exponent. Hanrahan on the other hand played a magnificent game throughout and it was due to his efforts that the score against the Rifles was not much heavier. The winners played a good sound game throughout—the forwards were speedier than usual and their heading was very accurate, that of Montgomery being especially so. Both McLean and Mowat played rather below their usual form, but this was counterbalanced by the impenetrable defence of McGowan, Silcock, and Wallace.

The Medical College won the Trades Cup after a most exciting game against Seebpore by 1 goal to love. The College were much the heavier team, but the losers, who played a plucky and clever game, should with a little luck have equalised from the penalty awarded them in the second half. Williams, the Medical goal-keeper, saved extremely well on two or three occasions and Apear was untiring in his efforts for his side.

RUGBY NOTES.

Although the club known as the Armenian College Old Boys has ceased to exist the members have started afresh under the name of the "Armenian Rugby Football Club" and the team will be captained by Apear, who, I am told, will have a strong side under his control. The Armenian College Boys all know the game thoroughly, but they experience great difficulty in obtaining a heavy set of forwards, which is essential to enable them to cope successfully with such a side as Calcutta.

A splendid muster turned out for the first practice game on the Calcutta ground last Thursday and two full teams were procured. The ground was unfortunately heavy and the ball wet which militated against good passing, but the game was an interesting one by reason of the fact that so many new men were playing. Of these Brown and Dunlop amongst the forwards, Jacob at half, and the brothers Siddons at three-quarters showed promising form, whilst the younger Sherman gave indications of training on into more than a useful full back. However next week "Rugger" will be in full swing and I will then deal with the prospects of the various teams.

There was no love lost between the captain and mate of the brig, Pretty Pollie, so when each made an entry in his log referring to the other he was careful to draw attention to it, as sea etiquette demands. One day the mate's attention was drawn to an entry in the captain's log: "Mate drunk to-day." He protested that the term was altogether too strong. "It's the simple truth," said the captain, "and it stands without addition or alteration." Next day the captain's attention was drawn to an entry in the mate's log, which read: "Captain sober to-day." He was about to protest, but saw that the mate was waiting for him with his own retort, so smothered his wrath as best he could. "It never occurred to me before," he told his friends, "that a simple statement of fact could look so infernally insulting."

GOLF AT GULMARG.

THE Bogey competition by couples at handicap points fixed for last Tuesday, when Mrs. Vores and Mrs. Hunter Blair were to be "At Home" and generously intended to give the prize to the winner was unavoidably postponed owing to a sad occurrence in the death by overdose of sleeping mixture of Major Gough, one of the competitors.

The monsoon current from the Arabian sea has been busy finding out Kashmir's unceasing rain for three days and nights caused a general flutter among those who had houses and property down in Srinagar as the river flooded the whole country. The inundation was thorough, the city in many parts and Residency portion of the European quarters was under water, the only safe place was the Munshi Bagh, where the land had been providentially raised sufficiently to keep out the river from overflowing. Of course Gulmarg was not immune, the Polo ground and Golf Links suffered considerably, play would have injured the greens but no sooner the sun dried the greens, the Golf fever seized the community and away rushed some two hundred players of sorts impeding each other and using bad language. Unfortunately the fair sex decline to have a links to themselves so gather on the course and try to learn Golf with Sialkote made clubs, propelling the ball a few feet every stroke and blocking the good players. We all love the ladies anywhere but on the Golf Links, yet some of them are a real sporting bevy playing well and refreshing the men players with tea and cakes, the beginners are the nuisance.

The draws for Tuesday's Bogey handicap took place on Monday. Of course there was heartburning, as all could not draw the best players, or the nicest men. Competition commenced at 4 P.M. with 25 couples to do 13 holes against Colonel Bogey. Men drove off at the first ten over a rise 20 feet high down a drop of 100 feet towards the green guarded by a serpentine stream. The second shot was left to the ladies who did their best and many had the chagrin of seeing their ball riding down the stream which was in flood, then came Hades the ladies driving off, men managing to put the ball on the high ground above the green. The next stroke a hanging lie was fatal to many of the fair sex as the ball usually was deposited 60 feet below in a stoney torrent 20 yards from the green. Colonel Bogey was much too strong and fairly swamped the competitors. When the 13th hole was reached it was found that all had been beaten the best being Captain C. Davies and Miss Young, who were one down the next being, Captain Boyd and Miss Gunning two down. Mrs. Robertson, the donor, handed the prizes to the winner in her usual graceful manner.

Hockey.

THE MADRAS HOCKEY TOURNAMENT.

Madras, 23rd July.—Madras seems to be in a curious position both as regards Hockey and Football. As compared with Calcutta and Bombay, there is very little of either game played in the Presidency town and yet important tournaments in both these branches of sport are organised and run annually with much success. The Madras Gymkhana are practically the only exponents of both game, and for practice, and match purposes they are either dependent on themselves for games, or else on the British Infantry or Garrison Artillery that may happen to be quartered in Fort St. George. The Field Artillery at the Mount can also occasionally be trusted to provide a game. As a general rule the Madras Gymkhana, especially in Hockey, are too strong to permit of scratch local teams extending them. Under these circumstances it argues much for the generosity and sporting spirit of the Gymkhana that they are content for years to go on providing trophies and paying the expenses of tournaments, in which the honours have almost invariably gone to visiting Regimental teams. Hockey this year, mainly on account of the Delhi Durbar, at which there were two competitions, one for British troops, and another for Indian troops, has taken a great hold on the military, and with the exception of the Madras and Bangalore Gymkhanas, all the entrants for the Madras Hockey Tournament—the third which has been held—are military teams, namely, the Durham Light Infantry from Wellington, the Middlesex and Lincolns from Secunderabad, the Royal Warwickshire from Belgaum, the Essex from Bangalore, the Leicesters from Fort St. George, and finally a plucky little scratch team from the Queen's Depôt at Poonamalee.

Hostilities commenced on Monday last, the 20th instant, when four of the visiting teams tried conclusions, namely, Bangalore Gymkhana and the Essex Regiment on the M. C. C ground at Chepauk and the Durhams and Lincolns on the Engineering College ground close by.

The first of these attracted most attention because the two teams were old opponents on the playing fields of Bangalore, and up to date in matches between them the Essex have always had the upper hand. Curiously enough, however, their first meeting on an unfamiliar terre resulted in Bangalore winning quite easily by no less than four goals to nil. The ground was hard and very fast and it looked in capital condition; but it was apparent at first that it did not suit the players. The Essex never got accustomed to it and paid penalty to their opponents' adaptability to conditions and circumstances. Whatever may have been the position at Bangalore, in Madras there is no doubt that the best team won. The game in its first stage was pretty level, Bangalore crossing over with a lead of a goal—an easy and rather fortunate one secured in the opening exchanges. In the second half after commencing well, the soldiers went to pieces, and Bangalore getting used to the ground and their surroundings went straight ahead and playing a strong attacking game put on no less than three goals in the second half. Catty, their centre forward, was in brilliant form and he was well supported and backed up by Marsden, Ricketts, and Harvey-Kelly. Abbay and Pattison for the Essex were perhaps the two that did most to avert defeat.

The match between the Durhams and the Lincolns was also well worth watching for the reason that people were interested to see whether the present battalion were going to shape as well as their predecessors, the 2nd Battalion, which won the Cup in the two previous years. I had not an opportunity of seeing the previous winners' play; but the present team were tested highly in being pitted against the Lincolns who were I think the runners up last year; that being the case, they played a very great game when they emerged successfully from the struggle, a close and well fought one with a score of 2 goals to nil in their favour. They played no less than three officers, of whom Lieut. Green well in the centre of the forward division, was a tower of strength to his side and was exceedingly well supported by Malone and Fisher. Idlemache for the Lincolns did yeoman service, but his forward division suffered from a lack of combination.

On Tuesday the Leicester Regiment played the Queen's Depot, Poonamalee, and a "scrappy" game rather devoid of science, ended in a draw of 2 goals each. The match was replayed yesterday (Wednesday) when the Leiceters won by 2 goals to 1. The other match played on Tuesday was that between the Royal Warwickshire and the Middlesex. A remarkable game resulted in the two teams being level with 2 goals all at the end of time, and in the extra time which had to be played the Middlesex showed their better stamina and training by putting on no less than 3 goals in this time, and winning eventually by the comfortable margin of no less than 5 goals to 2.

The great match of the tournament, that between Madras and Bangalore, was played yesterday and a great game resulted in a draw of 2 goals each, the extra time was played during a shower of rain to decide the result. The match is worth chronicling in full, but as it has to be replayed again to-day I think I will wait and see what the result is. One thing is certain, namely, that the winners of to-day's replayed tie will be the winners of the tournament. The other tie to be played to-day is that between the Durhams and the Middlesex.

Swimming.

CALCUTTA SWIMMING CLUB.

Friday, 24th July 1903.

Another three lengths competition was put through at the Baths to-day. Only five starters turned out, and results were as follows:—

		Start.	Nett Time.
1	A L Cox ...	— 14 secs	1min 30⅘secs
2	W S J Willson	... 15 „	1 „ 32¾ „
3	A Stacey ...	... scratch	1 „ 19¾ „
4	H L Harvey	... 14 secs	not taken
5	K M Kennedy	... 5 „	1min 20⅘secs

The next event on the cards is a two lengths handicap on Friday, 7th August. This being the last race before the final meeting, it is hoped that entries will show up well. They have fallen off considerably of late.

It is not often one sees a dog in possession of a medal with six bars, but "Jock," the regimental pet of the 1st Battalion Scots Guards, stationed at the Victoria Barracks, Windsor, wears attached to his collar the South African medal, with a bar for each of the following engagements:—Belmont, Modder River, Drict fontein, Johannesburg, Difimond Hill, and Belfast, Jock joined the regiment in south Africa in November, 1899, and went through the war with the 1st Scots, returning with the men to England in 1902. Major Heyworth has charge of Jock, who is much though of in the battalion.

EXHIBITS.

The attention of members present was drawn to the splendid specimen of an Hamadryad now alive in the Museum. This dangerous snake was captured in the Travancore jungles by a member (Mr. Norman Davidson) who forwarded it to the Society. Another notable contribution exhibited was the head of the Arabian Thar (Hemitragus Jayakari) presented by Major P. Z. Cox, F.Z.S., of Muscat. This goat was discovered some ten years ago by a member of the Society, Colonel A. S. Jayakar, after whom it was named, and the head now exhibited is one of the few specimens which have been obtained. Mr. F. Gleadow, I.F.S., also exhibited the skin of a curious animal peculiar to the island of Mauritius, called the Tanrec or Feurac (Centetes ecaudatus). These insectivorous animals are almost tailless. Their food consists principally of earthworms, slugs, snails, etc. They burrow in the soil and are most evident in the warm season. They are greatly prized as food by the Malay creoles who organize poaching parties to catch them on moonlight nights digging them up out of their holes.

PAPERS READ.

Papers on the following subjects were read:—Kills by carnivorous animals, by W. A. Wallinger I.F.S.; Notes on Anopheles in Ceylon, by Major N. Manders, R.A.M.C., F.E.S.; The Trees and Shrubs of the Lonaula and Karla groves, by Prof. G. A. Gammie, F.L.S.; The Enemies of Butterflies, by Major C. G. Nurse, F.E.S.; and Curious Accident to a Kingfisher, by E. C. Cholmondeley, all of which will appear in full in the Society's Journal.

American Sport.

A BIG JACK-RABBIT DRIVE.

While in Europe the skin of the rabbit is a thing of value, and the total collection of skins a commercial industry rated at several million dollars annually, the animal in the North-West of this country is regarded as a pest, to be ruthlessly exterminated. It may be that the Pacific Coast States are now possessed of too much wealth to take the time to skin and market the thousands of rabbits slaughtered there, but it is expected that someone some day will start an industry to make the American rabbit a commercial object, elevated from a pest to a potential bank account. His skin and hair have uses and values proportionate to those of other animals. His flesh can be made to figure in cold storage warehouses and the canning industry. His hind foot, mounted with silver, has a value as a luck token among the superstitious. When every part of the bullock was put to a commercial value, the way was paved for the industrial future of the present despised jack rabbit. The following account of a jack-rabbit drive in Oregon is given by one of the participants:—

"When a schoolboy I thought it rare sport to jump up and down on a brush heap and, with other boys, 'pepper' a scared bunny as he scooted for safety. It was considered a great bag when we got several of the small rabbits, and perhaps a hare, as the result of one day's tramping. In 1890, in Mississippi, I was initiated in rabbit coursing on horseback, and learned how to 'knock over' a bunny while in motion without 'knocking off' the ears of the horse, which in the excitement one was liable to mistake for the game. It was not until I went to Pendleton, Ore., recently that I saw enough jack-rabbit slaughter to satisfy me for a lifetime, and I do not believe I shall have the heart to kill another bunny as long as I live.

"We started from Pendleton one morning on a special train of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company for the mouth of Butter Creek, where the drive was to come off. There were three hundred men and boys, of assorted ages and sizes, on the train. Those who missed the special train came a little later on an accommodation train, and were let off at Mile Post No. 199, about a half-mile from the centre of interest, or, perhaps, I should say, the community of interest. From Heppner and Ione, to the westward, another special train came with several hundred men and boys. Out of the bottoms of the Big and Little Butter creeks and the Umatilla came other hundreds in wagons, carriages, and varied vehicles, afoot and on horseback, until eight hundred men were assembled, in addition to a throng of sightseers, mostly women and children.

"The beginning of the drive and the slaughter pen were three miles apart. The latter, or death trap, was a corral, 100ft. square, enclosed by a closely-woven wire fence 8ft. high, and having arms a half-mile long extending in opposite directions to assist in driving the rabbits into the pen. At one o'clock the grand marshal stood up in his wagon and gave his orders as to the conduct of the drive. The Pendleton men were ordered to take the left wing, which the marshal personally commanded, as well as the centre. Heppner and Ione men were ordered to take the right wing under separate commanders; while the local men were ordered to the centre. All the horsemen were ordered to the extreme outskirts of a driving line of men two miles long. The driving line was V-shaped, the men being armed with all sorts of clubs. On a given signal the march began toward the slaughter pen. Eagerly and excitedly the drivers beat the sage brush. At first only a few bunnies showed themselves, but as the army advanced they became more and more numerous Those which escaped the clubs of the beaters sped with characteristic leaps toward the slaughter pen. When they attempted to leap through the line on a retrograde movement death from a club surely followed. Hundreds of dead bunnies marked the path of the invaders. As the army of rabbits approached the netting, followed by the army of drivers, the frightened bunnies leaped over each other, and in all directions, seeking to avoid the death-dealing clubs. With the loud yells of the crowd and roar of voices, the excitement became intense. The rabbits that had escaped up to the netting made frantic leaps to get into the corral. Here they were piled two and three deep, leaping over and on each other, and fiercely attacking the netting. Occasionally, by a giant leap a bunnie cleared the 8ft. fence and escaped.

"The scene within the corral as the clubbers entered dealing death blows was nauseating in the extreme. The rabbits, when wounded or dying, uttered their peculiar and pitiful cries. Some men clubbed away with fiendish delight, and others kept stolidly at it because of the necessity, as it seemed to them. Fully six hundred of the animals were captured alive and taken away for a live rabbit shoot. A few tender-hearted persons saved some alive, and liberated them at the first opportunity. Still others carried away many live rabbits to kill and eat when desired. Altogether, the rabbits slain and taken away alive amounted to thirty-five hundred. Personally, I took the part of spectator only, and that only to a limited extent.

"It is conceded that the rabbits are a menace to stockmen, and that their wholesale elimination is a necessity. They destroy the alfalfa, and where their numbers are large, clean the ground as a herd of sheep would do. It is only by the aid of these periodical drives that their numbers are sufficiently kept down to prevent the stock from starving. On the ground where the present drive took place it was stated that in ten days the rabbits would be as numerous as ever, and that another immediate drive would be a necessity, followed by still others. As soon as snow flies the rabbits desert the hills and flock to the protection of the sage brush of the lowland. It is then that the inhabitants plan the greatest slaughter. The propagation of coyotes is here protected, as the coyote is a natural exterminator of the rabbit. After the drive a free luncheon was served, and the people dispersed to their homes."

The Story Teller

THE WRONG CORPS.

WELL! good-bye, my boy; good-bye! Send us a line before very long: we shall want to know how you get on and all about the regiment. Take care of yourself and—Good-bye!

Old General Heaviside wrung the hand of his young hopeful walked several steps alongside the moving train, and, with a final wave of his arm turned away in search of the best-horsed hansom he could find, in which to drive from King's Cross Station to Pall Mall with the intention of a good long chat with two or three old cronies in the "Rag"—about my son Jack, you know. Just seen him off to York—joining the Southdown Regiment, the old 210th you remember them—the "Woolly lambs" we used to call 'em in the old days when they lay with us at Gurmpore. He'll make a good fellow, Jack will, yet. Bit windy in the head and collar and cuffified, but he'll turn out all right. You know, Eh what!

Meanwhile "my son Jack," as his fond parent called him, had not been long in making himself as comfortable as circumstances would permit. As soon as his father had turned to go, the dutiful son lolled back amongst the comfortable cushions, of the first class carriage in which he was, put his feet on the opposite seat, stuck his eye-glass in his right optic, shot his cuffs, pulled up his collar, winked with the utmost effrontery at a rather nice looking girl at the end of the platform—who, by the way, did not in the least appreciate his kind attention—and remarked "Haw!" He then lit a cigarette and feeling himself quite a modern Alexander Selkirk in a collar at least an inch and a half too high for him, gazed with a vacant stare at the buttons on the seat opposite.

After two or three minutes he yawned—mental effort was always a tax on his physical capabilities—and turned his eyes to look admiringly at his immaculate patent leather boots.

Yes, by Jove! he was a devil of a swell no doubt, this unjoined second Lieutenant of a line regiment. Unsympathising seniors might have called him a "scart," and considered him a mere excrescence, unshaped and unsightly, on the body of the gallant corps to which for one short month he had belonged, but ne-er seen. What did that matter! These same unsympathising seniors were not present to express their sense of the fitness or otherwise of things, and for the fleeting moment, the carriage was scarcely big enough to hold him His up and down collar was nearly as high as the roof, his little moustache—certain lively female cousins had called it a cricketer's, seeing there were only eleven hairs aside—was waxed and tipped into two little points with enough Pomade Hongroise to have made a miniature steeple of the hair of Absolom, had not that unfortunate gentleman previously fallen a victim to too great a cultivation of his locks; and what space was still unoccupied in the compartment was filled to bursting point by the amount of "side" the youth carried, which seemed quite to overcome a middle-aged gentleman, who had the misfortune to be a fellow-passenger, and compress him into the very farthest corner of the compartment.

But what young Jack Heaviside prided himself on more than aught else was the absolutely blank expression of his countenance. He thought it looked blase, and calculated to conceal, but at the same time to suggest, the most unfathomable wisd m. Unfortunately it left quite another impression on the rest of mankind with whom he came in contact; so much so, that instead of his usual ejaculation "Haw" one would expect that the most natural sound to come from his flaccid lips and proboscian nose would more nearly resemble "Hee-haw!" Up to the present time he had given no indication of having any brains at all: you don't require them when the Powers that be have been good enough to confer an honorary Queen's cad-ship on one. Had they not done so this lucky youth would not have been on his way to join any regiment at all.

The train passed through Finsbury Park, and young Heaviside's features assumed an assinine grin. On past Muswell Hill, and the grin remained. Then a fresh cigarette had to be lighted, and the labour involved in effecting this was too severe to admit of any more facial contortions

His fellow-passenger, a quiet, sedate-looking gentleman, asked most politely if he would mind having his window open.

"Haw!" said young Heaviside, with a look of "dash your impertinence—what do you mean by addressing your pelebeian remarks to me"—"what?

"I asked you if you would mind having the window on your side open. It's rather oppressive, don't you think!"

"Haw! Open it if you like."

The gentleman got up, moved across the carriage and did so. Possibly he thought the manners of the rising generation required a little mild correction, but he made no further remark and returned to his seat to study the pages of the Field whilst his ineffable companion remained wrapped in his own dignity and importance, alternately reading the Pink Un and looking at the pictures in La vie Parisienne Thus occupied the train bore them swiftly north-wards till they whizzed through Huntingdon, when the younger man relapsed into his former occupation of studying the wall opposite. This might have been interesting, and possibly was; but even the greatest minds cannot concentrate their thoughts upon one subject for ever, and before long the advertisements of the G. N. R. Company's hotels at various places along the line had ceased to attract. Besides the owner of the great mind—according to his own valuation of it—thought it was not fair to keep it all to himself. Some one else ought to be benefited by so much transcendent genius and have the privilege of conversing with so great a personage as he. The youth accordingly condescended to speak to his fellow-traveller.

"Haw! fine day—Ah!"

The gentleman very politely put down the periodical he was reading and cordially agreed with him.

"Haw! going fa—ar?"

His companion said he was going to York.

"Haw! So'm Ah."

This announcement did not seem to fill the quiet gentleman with any huge amount of wonder or delight. Unlike Angelo Cyrus Bantam Esquire, M. C. and general bottle washer of Bath, he did not hasten to inform the new comer that he was indeed an acquisition, or that his arrival was re—markable. In fact he took it so quietly that Jack Heaviside felt really quite hurt, and itched to impress this insensible clod with a due appreciation of his own magnificence: having thought for some time how he could best make the astounding and delightful announcement he at length remarked

"Haw! Yes. Ma wegiment's quartered there. D'ya know the place?"

"Yes,"—said his companion with a hastily concealed smile. "I have been near York for some time"

With true Sherlock-Holmes perspicuity Jack Heaviside immediately put his new acquaintance down as tiller of the soil—a grower of turnips—or in other words as a farmer in a well-to-do position. The train of reasoning would have been quite excellent had he followed it out: the neighbourhood of York was an agricultural one, his companion lived there, he was much too brown and healthy looking to have lived a sedentary life, and he had been reading the Field. Quite enough; no doubt the fellow was a rustic individual who used York as his market town; drove there once a week to dispose of pigs, sheep, and cattle, to return home at night with a small cargo of ribbons and such like, calculated to rejoice the heart of his buxom wife and half-a dozen blowzy daughters. What a treat it must be for a person like this to come into close contact with one of the garrison! So the youth commenced to instruct him in things military, and the older man got quite interested—as well he might. In this improving manner they reached Grantham, where the train made its first stop since leaving London.

"Haw!" said Mr. Heaviside—Ah think Ah must wefwesh the innah man. Not much in your line, but will ya have a whisky and sodah with me? ya'll find it a pleasant change from beer and-ah-cider."

This polite invitation given with such delicate tact was politely declined, so Heaviside went off alone in search of the refreshment room. There he met a former acquaintance whom he called "Mauh-die" in the person of one of the golden-haired nymphs selected by Messrs Spiers and Pond to grace their bar. Maudie, though haughty to a degree with the ordinary individual who visited her shrine in search of the succulent sandwich and the humble glass of beer, was charmingly free and easy with our hero, at whom she giggled and ogled until they had attracted the attention of every one in the room, especially that of the manageress who had a word or two to say to Maudie subsequently. Then the bell rang, and Jack Heaviside, having snatched a kiss from the tittering Hebe, swaggered back to the train as if he had just put down the entire purchase money for the station, line, rolling stock and bevy of barmaids included.

"Haw! d—d nice little girl in there; old love of mine ya know" was his first remark to his companion after his return. Pity Ah could not have taken her on with me to York yaknow—Eh!" and the graceless young idiot winked and simpered a simper which might have taken a prize at Colney Hatch. The quiet gentleman did not seem much interested in Mr. Heaviside's amatory affairs; in fact anybody but Heaviside would have been inclined to think he had somewhat of a contempt for them and found it hard to conceal. However the young man was not in the least cast down by his companion's want of appreciation, and immediately went on to his next remark.

"Ah spose ya go in for sort of farming—got many sheep!"

"Yes" was the other's reply given with a curious smile and a sharp look at his questioner. "I have what may be called my flock of—yes, sheep; there are nearly a thousand of them and I believe I am likely to secure a rather unique specimen this very day. But won't you tell me a little more about the Army! it is so interesting what you have to say about it, and I'm afraid my own little yarns about my 'flocks of sheep" would be hardly appreciated by you. Is your's the only regiment in York!"

"Haw! Ah blieve not, some other wegiment there: don't know much about them; shoddy sort of show: trades-union ya know."

It was evening when the train steamed into the long curved platform of the Cathedral town. Heaviside's companion, who had been dismissed by that polite youth with "Haw! good-night to ya, ma man," got his few traps together in a quiet methodical manner and disappeared, whilst our hero lounged about with at least six porters in attendance. Then he and the lighter articles of his kit were put in a cab, whilst instructions were given for the heavier things to follow after.

"Where to, Sir!" enquired the cabby.

"Haw! Officah's Mess of the 210th replied Heaviside in his most inflated manner.

"Right you are, Sir. H've you there in no time. Come up 'oss"

"Hit's the young h'earl of Guaner you've got on board, Bill!" Im, wots nephew to the h'arch-bishop o' Radely Ha Ighway h'own 'arf brother to the dookdom O Seving Dials. Take care of 'im; 'e 's preshus 'e is" shouted a a grimning porter as the cab drove off.

They rattled through the narrow Streets of York, Heaviside admiring himself in the little strips of looking glass in front of him, and losing no time in ingratiating himself with the female population of the town by staring hard at every girl he passed and winking at them if he managed to catch their eye. Oh! he was the devil of a fellow! York was all right now; he had come there.

When they got to the barracks and had found their way to the Mess, Heaviside got hold of a waiter, and with all the assurance in the world commanded him to show the way to the ante-room. The door was thrown open: Heaviside swaggered in and found two or three men taking things easily and trying as best they might to kill the half hour before it was necessary to dress for dinner.

The loungers greeted him, and perhaps looked somewhat enquiringly at the intruder. People dressed so ultra resplendently as Heaviside were not seen every day in the Mess of their particular regiment, besides it was somewhat late for an ordinary call

"Haw!" remarked Heaviside, with a more utterly ass-like ring in his bray than usual "Au've come to join."

Two of the men looked surprised, but an innocent looking youngster gave them a wind and said hurriedly, Oh yes, thats' all right. I've got a room for you next to mine."

Brooks, that innocent looking youth, went outside whilst Heaviside proceeded to ingratiate himself with the others. Brooks shortly returned and said that no doubt the new comer would like to tub and dress, as it was getting on for dinner time, and offered to conduct him to his room. As soon as the door had shut on their departure one of the men exclaimed—"What on earth does that chap mean by coming here; Come to join us, great Scot! To join us! We can't have got to that sort of thing yet, I hope. What does it mean!"

"Some devilment of young Brooks, old fellow. I expect it's going to be rather fun, so we'd better sit tight and see it out The youngster will be back directly and he'll tell us all about it".

Brooks did not keep them long in suspense. "Well, what is it young 'un" they asked him as soon as he returned.

"Dont you see the joke, you fellows!" shouted young Brooks between explosions of laughter. "Don't you see it? I've heard of this chap before from a brother of mine who knew him; and I heard only to day—when I was lunching with them—that he was expected to join the Southdowns—the 210th Foot. Well, he's come to join the 210th, that sort of idiot always does call its regiment by its ante-diluvian and generally forgotten number; it thinks its swagger. And the ass has joined the 210th; only instead of the 2 0 mud crushers, it's joined the 210th Lancers, and don't the 210th Lancers love that sort! I wonder how long he'll be before he tumbles to the fact that he's made a slight mistake and joined the wrong regiment. Sit tight, you fellows, and don't give the show away. He's dressing in Stanley's quarters who went away on ten days' leave this afternoon."

At five minutes to eight exactly that resplendent and exquisite young noodle, Jack Heaviside, had the most severe shock he had experienced for many a day. He had arrived at the ante-room door, which he threw open as if none but he had the right of entry, and strode in. Strode in! Well scarcely that. He made one swaggering step forward, and then staggered back as if he had received a blow in the face. His assurance was gone to the winds, his face paled, and his knees—not particularly strong ones at the best of times—knocked together and trembled under him.

"Why—why—" he stammered "I thought we wore red!"

Brooks went to his rescue and explained that the 210th used to wear red, but it has been changed. This was strictly true, but the change from red to blue had taken place fully one hundred years ago; there was no necessity to inform him on this point.

"Why—why—but the Army List puts it down "uniform red, facings white."

"Ah! it's really disgraceful how behind the times they are at the Horse Guards" remarked Orlebar, the senior subaltern.

But, but—my tailor told me it was red almost blubbered the stricken Heaviside. "He said the whole regiment got their things from him: he did indeed."

"Yes you know, that's a very common dodge of Army tailors,-said another sympathising individual. "They stick you with, one kit which is all wrong, and then you have to get another, so they get a double profit out of you."

"But what am I to do now?"

"Never mind"—said young Brooks "the Colonel isn't here, or he might have gone down your throat, spurs and all, so it doesn't matter for a night or two. You can easily get a new kit later on, if you require it."

That dinner was not exactly a source of pure unmixed enjoyment to one individual at all events. What those blue-jacketed well-set-up looking fellows thought about it need not be expatiated on: at any rate they were model hosts, and did their guest as well as the very ample resources of their Mess, kitchen and cellar would allow. It was the cellar part of the entertainment that mostly affected young Heaviside, so much so indeed that by twelve o'clock they found it necessary to kindly but forcibly conduct him to the room he occupied. They were on the whole extremely good to him: he certainly laid himself open somewhat by coming there at all, and a good deal more so by indiscreetly imbibing more liquid refreshment than his silly head could carry. He deserved a certain amount of ragging, and the opportunities were so great that they might easily, had they chosen, have made a zebra of him by painting his person with black streaks of ink without any resistance on his part, but they refrained. After all he belonged to another corps in the garrison, and it was for that corps, and not for them, to teach their new addition by some means or other, the way he should go.

Heaviside awoke the next morning with a very dim recollection of what had occurred the night before. Brooks' soldier-servant brought him some soda-water and recommended a strong dash of Worcester sauce to be followed by a cold bath. Both prescriptions seemed to do him good, especially the bath, after which he dressed and went to the mess for some breakfast. Everybody was very kind, asked him if he had slept well and seemed remarkably anxious to pay him polite attention. Two of the Subalterns took him in with them to breakfast where he played with various most excellent dishes without being able to do much justice to any of them. He wondered in a stupid dreamy sort of way why everyone wore a braided frockcoat and a couple of gold stripes on their overalls, but concluded that this was only another of these mysterious changes of uniform, which had made him so uncomfortable the night before. Somehow it all seemed very odd.

Presently a tall grey-moustached soldierly-looking man came in, accompanied to Heaviside's very intense surprise by none other than his companion in the train yesterday—the rustic individual, the grower of turnips, the proud owner of a thousand sheep. Heavyside looked at him with a horror-stricken countenance. "Who — who is that?" he asked.

Which! The one in uniform is our Colonel. The one in plain clothes is Colonel Chamberlain, commands the Southdown Regiment — the 210th Foot, you know. They are our neighbours here"

There was no more spirit left in him. Knife and fork fell from his nerveless hands, his jaw dropped, his eyes stared with wide open consternation. What the deuce had he not done that he ought to have left undone. This then, this quite individual, whom in his crass stupidity he had put down as some ignorant rustic, whom he had patronised in the most offensive manner whom he had been actively rude to, was Colonel Chamberlain, C B., V. C, commanding the regiment he had come to join. Visions of returning at once to the bosom of his family flashed before him, but one point must be cleared up first.

"Then what are you? he asked his immediate neighbour, rising from his chair preparatory to a rapid retirement elsewhere.

"we? oh we are the 210th Lancers", was the reply. Didn't you know?"

At that moment and before he could effect his retreat Colonel Chamberlain walked across the long room and came up to him. "You are Mr. Heavyside, I think, are you not?"—he said, offering his hand as he spoke. "We were expecting you at our quarters last night, but I am glad you have found some friends here already. If you care to come with me after you have finished your breakfast I will drive you over to your own domain."

What could Jack Heaviside do but murmur feebly and as for Colonel Chamberlain he was just, a right thorough-going trump. He had captured his very lost new lamb and bore him off with kindly solicitude, intent only on softening things for him, and giving him a chance to recover himself. Never a word did he let out to his officers—or to anybody else for that matter—what an arrant young idiot the last joined had made of himself. And the Lancers, seeing to what an abject state their unbidden guest had been reduced, kept silence on all material points which could have made things unpleasant for him, and only the mildest chaff on the confusion of regimental numbers and joining the wrong corps ever passed outside their own circle. The boy had learnt his lesson, and a few quiet words of sound advice from the Colonel during their drive, went well home. Three-quarters of Heaviside's swagger and idiocy were spoken off from that day forth, never to return.

Though not a very bright specimen, he is now quite a presentable officer of that fine old regiment the 210th Foot, and perhaps it is unnecessary to add that amid universal enthusiasm, there is nobody in the whole corps, who swears more stoutly by Colonel Chamberlain than Jack Heaviside.

GEOGE RAVENDALE.

The Garden.

GARDENING IN MIDNAPORE.

MELONS Cucumis melo, are as difficult to grow in Midnapore, as they are more or less so all over Bengal. But for the last two years, I have succeeded fairly well in raising melons. The modus operandi I have been using for these past two seasons is as follows, and is, I think, well worth trying. Take ten cart loads of alluvial soil from the bed of any river or stream, the same amount of coarse sand with small pebbles in it, if possible, five cart loads of well-decomposed stable litter, cowdung or any other suitable manure and one cart load of small ghooting or lime stone, mix and incorporate well with about the same amount of any ordinary garden soil. The soil thus prepared should be laid out in ridges 18 inches high, between which the seed should be sown and the plants trained over the ridges so as to be out of reach of moisture. The seeds should be sown six feet apart, half a dozen or so being put down together. When making these ridges care should be taken to see that the trenches between are properly sloped, so as to allow of easy 'rrigation.

The best time for sowing melons is from the beginning of December to the middle of the following month. The great mistake we generally makes out here when growing melons, is to sow the seeds too late. If the seeds be fresh and good, they should germinate on the fifth or sixth day. A good plan to force the seeds to germinate and to taste of their vitality, is to steep them in wet wood ashes, then wrap them up in plantain leaves. Seeds thus treated and if sound will usually sprout out in forty-eight hours, and as soon as they have done so, they should be put out. The worst of melon, is that they are, like all Cucumis, very apt to be preyed upon, by those small red beetles with black spots, Coccinello, a kind of ladybird. Sprinkling over the plants with wood ashes or Keating's insect powder are useful in their way, but as this sprinkling over has the effect of closing the pores of the leaves, it cannot very well be recommended. A better plan is to get a few small sized empty wine or any other kind of boxes, and to knock the bottoms out, over which pieces of leno or musquito nettings should be nailed down and the plants covered up with them. Plants so protected will grow up rapidly, and when 6 to 8 inches high, will be safe from further depradation, for though the beetles may reappear, they cannot do much more harm. When the plants are about a foot high, they should be trained on the ridges and should have the point of the shoot taken off so that several other shoots may branch out; the point of these should also be taken off until there are only a dozen of branches left. Not more than one or two fruits should be allowed to remain on each branch, and any new ones that appear should be pinched off. Water should be applied thrice a week, but as it is harmful to wet the plants and leaves, it should be poured in at one of the trenches, and if the sloping has been carefully attended to, will run right through Melons should never be taken up, until perfectly ripe, their signs of ripeness vary a good deal but generally the rich perfume and soft feel are very fair indications. The imported varieties, when ripe, show a soft ring near the stalk, so one should be careful to watch for such signs Most of the fruits exposed for sale in the New Market at Calcutta, have been taken up unripe, so cannot possibly be compared to a melon that has been allowed to ripen on the plant. But if one is not over careful, he is easily taken in by these fruit dealers who usually take a knife and boldly cut out a piece from one of the fully ripe and highly perfumed fruit they specially reserve for the purpose.

There are several varieties of melons grown by the natives of Bengal and most of these are grown on those large chars or new alluvial formations, which are such a feature of some of the bigger rivers in Bengal. But except perhaps in shape and colour all these melons are very much alike in everything else, in flavour, texture, etc., though they are to be recommended for their perfume and are not to be despised, when nothing better is available.

The best melons grown in India come from Lucknow, so seeds of some of the choice kind among these should be sown. I have been getting seeds of these for the past ten years from Mr. Gollan, Superintendent of the Government Botanical Garden at Saharunpore and the results obtained have been at least for the past two years very satisfactory. Among the imported kinds only the seeds of those sent out from America come to anything, and the following should be given a trial: Emerald Gem, Miller's Cream and Early Hackensack. The seeds of the above three kinds should be sown early in December, the plants do not seem to make much growth and one or two fruits is what each usually bears. But even this is well worth the trouble and labour spent in their cultivation, for the few melons one gets are unsurpassable for flavour, aroma, and texture, specially if one is lucky enough to succeed in raising what is known as Emerald Gem. As the melon, like other of its tribe—pumpkins, gourds, etc—has the female and male organs in separate flowers and sometimes on separate plants, hybridising the indigenous with the imported varieties would be well worth trying, as such hybrid would be sure to give better results than either of the two.

MUSTA D, Sinapi nigra, should be treated exactly as detailed for cress. The kind usually sown is from imported seed, the colour of which is a pale yellow. But what is known as country mustard and which has a dark blackish brown seed answers equally well for the purpose and what is more may be grown nearly all the year round. Mustard if cut when a couple of inches high will be found a valuable addition to salad and it is also well known for its antiscorbutic properties. Unlike cress mustard requires more light and sun and rarely succeeds well in boxes or pans, unless it is cut when very small, in which state it may be used for sandwiches.

"ZEBROIDS" FOR TRANSPORT PURPOSES.

THE "zebroid," to use Baron de Parana's convenient term for the hybrid produced by crossing the zebra stallion with the mare, is beginning to receive the attention to which those who have knowledge of its merits have always maintained is his due. It is reported that the German authorities in East Africa have started a breeding stud on the flanks of Kilimanjaro which is to be given up to the business of producing zebra mules for transport purposes: and it is the intention of those responsible for the project to make experiments in the shape of crossing the zebra with the donkey and to cross "both ways," with the horse and the mare, to wit. We believe that a similar experiment is on foot in Uganda, but the work, we imagine, is as yet in its infancy and there are no particulars available: perhaps our fellow-countrymen in Africa have deemed it wise to stay their hands until they can profit by their German neighbours' experience. The question of transport animals, it is needless to say, has been, and always must be, one of the first importance in Africa: and having regard to the increasing difficulty of procuring mules suitable for military work in this country, the German experiment may well be fraught with results of no small interest to us.

Professor Ewart, as everyone knows, has made a considerable series of experiments in zebra mule breeding, but the "Penycuik experiments," as they are generally called, were made with a scientific object in view rather than a practical: and if the zebra mules born in course of the attempt to prove or disprove the actuality of telegony, have been put to work for their proprietors' living nothing has transpired concerning their qualities as beasts of draught or of burden. For information concerning the zebroid we have to go afield to Brazil, where Baron de Parana some years ago began crossing zebra stallions upon horse mares and achieved a very considerable measure of success. The interest of his achievements is enhanced by the fact that he used mares of various breeds, Arabs, Norman carriage horses and even with the heavy breeds, Clydesdales, Suffolks, and Percherons. The supply of zebra in Brazil being apparently limited the Baron used the same Burchell's stallion in all the matings of whose results we have record. The produce of the several crossings presented many features in common. In the first place the young zebroids displayed none of their sire's disagreeable vice of biting; they were full of spirit, but at the same time were gentle and extremely docile, possessing extraordinary muscular strength in every case they followed their respective dams in size, make, shape, and pace. Their disposition, too, they took from the distaff side. This exceptional muscular strength is the first great recommendation of the zebroid: had this hybrid been lacking in strength it would have been futile to pursue the experiment and attempt its development into an industry: but since the zebroid whatever the breed of his dam was conspicuous for his muscle it only remained to Baron de Parana to select the mares. "It is only necessary to select the mare possessing the qualities desired in the offspring." The cross with the heavy mare resulted in a very large and powerful mule, but as we should of course expect, less heavy and massive than the dam. Crossed with the Arab or Norman horse, a taller and lighter mule was the result, fully as muscular as the zebroid dropped by the Clydesdale or Suffolk mare but more tractable (the Arab strain is apparent here) and more active.

The Baron has used these zebroids for such work in harness or saddle as their qualities and character indicated as suitable and was greatly impressed with their value. He professed himself convinced that the zebroid would prove an animal of great economic importance and would when its merits were recognised eventually displace the donkey-horse or horse-donkey mule for all the purposes for which the latter are now employed. It would be going too far to express entire concurrence with the Baron's sanguine view: but it must be frankly acknowledged that he has made out a case and a very strong case for creating the zebroid on a large scale and giving it a fair trial.

The Burchell's zebra has been used as a harness animal in South Africa and has proved a success within certain limits. They are quiet in the team, have better mouths than the ordinary mule, are stout and willing in the collar: from the African point of view also they have the great recommendation that they are susceptible neither to horse-sickness nor to the poison of the tsetse fly. The objection urged against the zebra is that he loses heart and spirit after a term of servitude. This objection applies to the zebra which has been caught when of full growth as we believe all the zebras used for harness work heretofore have been: whether a zebra foaled in captivity and taught from his infancy that labour was his portion remains to be discovered. It is reasonable to suppose that the animal which had never known freedom would be less susceptible to the depressing influences of hard work.

The superiority of the zebroid over its sire, so far as knowledge presently extends, lies in its greater muscular strength and in the ease with which its size and shape can be determined by the selection of mare. Beyond this point we are in the dark and only experience will tell us whether the zebroid possesses the qualities which distinguish his pure-bred sire: we have yet to learn whether the possession of one-half horse-blood will render him liable to that scourge of South Africa, horse sickness and to that other fruitful source of trouble the poison of the tsetse fly. If the sire's characteristics predominate in these respects, then indeed the African traveller and transport officer will have found his ideal beast.

We can hardly doubt but that the zebroid will have great longevity in common with the ordinary mule, a quality which goes far to give that animal his value. Beyond these matters it remains to ascertain whether the zebroid possesses the mule's hardiness, staying power and independence of luxury: whether he will serve for transport in a cold climate or whether his zebra blood will declare itself—when he is required, say, to take part in a cold weather campaign on the North-Western Frontier. The mule supply question is one of the most important that those responsible for the remount department have to consider and any experiment that promises solution of the difficulty must command our attention. The supply of zebra is, if the present system of protection be maintained, practically inexhaustible: the choice of mares of a class fit to breed zebroids is sufficient and there is nothing in the way of the new industry being developed on commercial lines. The zebra thrives well in this country and it would be well worth trying the experiment of crossing him upon a few selected country-bred mares with an eye to the production of a light and active pack zebroid.

have belied their appearance, but that's a mere detail —and we may take that as an indication that the campaign during the Extras is going to be a vigorous one. To one who has witnessed the growth of these "Extras" and the improvement each year in the class running at them, there can come only one conclusion, namely, that owners find it worth competing for two hundred rupee stakes and what they can get on with the noble army of fielders. The racing is described elsewhere, so that I have no intention of going over the same ground here, but one incident of the meeting is worthy of mention. The only entrants likely to have stretched Picture who, in the opinion of the touts, was bound to win the "July Plate," were supposed to be Fando or Five Up, and with both of these scratched at the last moment the new pony Picture was backed at 5 to 4 on, as if the public were accepting credit notes on the Bank of England. La Regina was next in demand, but the bulk of money was on Picture, even the owners having to accept a short price about their mare. The result was altogether unexpected, the despised Nancy Till, who was giving Picture 1st. 9lbs., winning easily from Madeira, so that even place money went astray, the favourite finishing third in a field of only five.

Paddy Melon promises to be as good in India as she was in the Colonies; but she owed her victory as much to Aga S. Shah's good riding as to her own pace. At the bend Ena went very wide and carried one or two others out. That Neera should have beaten Haydn proves that she is a clinker. This mare was imported by Mr. R. J. Hunter, the well-known shipper, and fell in her stall at Bombay cutting herself badly. Her pace was discovered by C. B. Mahomed, and now that she has got over running wide at the bend she has become a most valuable property. The other races do not call for special comment, the failure of Grey Fox being the item that cost backers a tidy sum.

Jockeys Carter and Johnson are returning to India from Australia and are expected here in a few days.

It is to be hoped that the visit of Dr. Willey to Delft Island will clear up the mystery shrouding the mortality of horses and stock. Our impression is that in some way or other venomous snakes have been introduced, for the carcases exhibit no trace of known disease, nor does the post-mortem help in elucidation. The stricken animal staggers, falls and expires. It will be a subject for regret should the place be abandoned, as the examination on selection showed it to be an ideal stock raising ground; open to the sea air on all sides, with good water and excellent grazing. Shaving the limbs down from knee and hock, with close microscopic examination of the skin, would detect snake punctures on them, while treating the muzzle and face in the same manner ought to decide this surmise.

An army of bandicoots is reported as advancing across Upper Burma in the direction of the Assam hills, the people fearing a repetition of the invasion of 1876-77. Sportsmen of ratting proclivities possessing smart terriers might find distraction from the ennui of the close game season in the North Cachar Hills We hear cats are at a premium in the frontier bazars, having gone up to two annas per kitten. To those who have never witnessed the march of these mischievous rodents the sight is worth going some distance to see. The column advances in close order several yards in width, spreading out when any cultivation is reached. When engaged in the work of depredation they appear to regard with stolid equanimity the gaps made in their ranks by the incessant swooping of eagles and kites who hover over them in flights, being equally indifferent to the sticks and stones of human pursuers. The cats and pies that hang on their flanks don't appear to trouble them at all; nothing impedes the march: hill tops and ravines are all the same to them and the main body, though reduced by many thousands, usually disappears into the asylum of the still heavily timbered ravines in the Garo hills, where they disappear. What becomes of them is a mystery, for they never put in an appearance in the plains, and certainly do not return by the same route as they advance.

Last week we extracted from our Allahabad contemporary a paragraph regarding the shooting of a tiger at Etawah; we see the hero of this little adventure has addressed a letter to our contemporary on the subject and this is what he says:— In your account of the "Etawah tiger" an inaccuracy has crept in which reflects on my conduct as a sportsman. You say that I gave up the chase and handed my rifle to my shikari to follow up the tracks of the wounded tiger. Such conduct would, I consider, be highly unsportsmanlike, not to say cowardly, for it would be exposing the shikari to risks which only I should be justified in taking. What happened was that after tracking the wounded tigress for some time she was put up and wounded again. As, however, she went off apparently "strong" I decided it would be better to stop following her up for some time, so as to give the wounds time to stiffen. I knew the ravine she had gone to, and thus there would be no difficulty in taking up the tracks again. No one at all followed up the tracks any further. A few hours later some cowherds on the high land saw the tigress lying under a bush on the slope, on the further side of a ravine. Information was brought to me and I started out at once, but, meanwhile, out of pure curiosity, one of the men climbed down the ravine and up the other side to the tigress and struck the ground with his lathi to see, as he said, "whether she was dead or alive." She had sufficient life to maul and bite him, and then rolled down to the bottom of the ravine where she lay. The other men rushed off to the forest jemadar, who, taking his master's rifle from the chauki, finished her off. I should be obliged if you would publish this, as I have never yet let a shikari finish off any kind of wounded animal for me much less a dangerous one.

Elephants and tiger appear to be much in evidence in the eastern districts. A lively tusker in the Ja'ai Subdivision of the Jaintia Hills, has immolated an unfortunate woman as also running amok generally among crops and houses. Any skikari flooring him will get Rs. 100 and be permitted to keep the tusks. This latter concession is a step in the right direction for retaining and selling these trophies and mutilating the skins of tigers deter many hunters from following up destructive animals; the spoils of the chase realising very much more than the paltry reward offered. A couple more frisky pachyderms apparently dominate the Mangaldai District, of whom we shall probably hear more when the autumn floods circumscribe their beats. A month ago a tiger made a sudden appearance among the leaf pluckers on a tea garden and the Tipperah man-eater who divides his attention impartially between the eastern portion of that district and the adjoining one of S.-W. Sylhet is still unaccounted for, having brought the total of his tale of victims up to 14. We suggest to the Assam-Bengal Railway authorities putting on cockloft carriages for the use of sportsmen, at least on the Brahmaputra line, in case of a repetition of trains being stuck up as happened last year on the Nowgong section, for elephants appear to be holding a congress in those wastes.

Here is an amusing dog story from Vienna:—

The owner of a dog was sued by an engineer, who claimed damages for a bite from the animal, which he stated had incapacitated him for work. He also denounced the dog as a vicious one. At the trial a veterinary surgeon who was called in tried his utmost to irritate the dog by teasing him, but the animal kept its temper.

The complainant then demanded that its owner should be turned out of court and the dog let loose among the audience. This was done after the animal had been muzzled.

The dog, however, continued to display the greatest good humour, holding up one paw after another, and wagging its tail. Finally it ran to the Judge, before whom it sat on its hind legs begging in a most pathetic manner. The Judge thereupon pronounced the dog to be a veritable lamb, and gave judgment for its owner, referring the complainant to the civil court.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—The chief attraction of the week has, of course, been the café chantant at the Gymkhana Club in aid of funds for St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Cathedral, and between two and three thousand rupees was, I believe, the amount gathered in, but past experience has shown that in amateur-run shows the expenses are so heavy that they make a sadly large hole in profits. I remember once—however, "let the dead bury their dead." Among the many attractions were high class music—a trifle above the ordinary soul perhaps, and some really clever conjuring by Mr. Branson. The time-honoured "wax works," the inevitable "Tommy Dodd" were among the many admirable side shows. Mr. Stewart, the well-known professional photographic artist, without whose artistic efforts no show in Poona seems to be complete, assisted by Major Beevor, R.A.M.C., who adds to his many and versatile accomplishments that of scientific photography of the highest order, provided an entertainment of the most enjoyable nature. An interval for refreshments (at exorbitant prices, readily paid) was followed by the Cake Walk, the ghastly form of motion which can please only by its abominable eccentricity. Mrs. Drake's song and dance, the Toy Monkey, from the Geisha, was extremely dainty, and was fully appreciated, and the demand for a repetition was irresistible. Captain Bayford, A.-D.-C., and Mr. Anderson made merry in the French Maid, and there was no doubt as to the audience being pleased, while to make certain of sending us away in a happy frame of mind Mrs. Drake, assisted by Mrs. Windle, Mrs. Prior, Miss G. Price, and Miss Izoz Pile delighted eye and ear with Keep off the Grass. And so to bed.

I am glad to see that our illustrious Municipal Fathers—to whom all reverence be due—are "taking steps to put a stop to the intolerable nuisance of led horses in Cantonment limits. One led horse is bad enough, more especially in the face of the fact that the Aryan brother with the strange perversity of his nature almost invariably leads on the wrong side; but when it comes—as it has come to the sand rides being occupied by incompetent idiots riding one horse and leading one on each side, it becomes more than a joke and positive danger. So while applauding the efforts of the Committee in a right direction, one would like to hope that their cogitations may bear fruit just a little before the very end of the season.

In a recent case in the Cantonment Magistrate's Court of Judicature a Zoroastrian declared that a certain distance was "about the length of a horse." Pressed to explain a trifle more explicitly he answered that he meant six yards! A nice "lengthy" horse that—standing over a lot of ground!

Quite excellent was the first day's "Extra" racing postponed from Saturday till last Wednesday—all the more enjoyable from a point of interest in that the somewhat heaviness of the going completely upset form and the calculations of the most astute turfites. One's only regret in seeing outsiders roll home is that our friends the enemy have such a needlessly (as it seems to us) good time, and when in our poverty we stand a-baking in this land of Ind, year after year, it is a trifle hard to see our friends the bookies' names in the Passenger List with unvarying consistency. Not but that they are excellent fellows.

Having fought the battle of the encouragement of closed racing (in moderation, and two races out of seven is surely moderation?) I would be more than human if I refrained from expressing satisfaction at the success of the two races of that description.

The Bangalore Horse and Dog Show opened on the 4th instant; full details in our next.

Run in a drizzle the Poona Second Extra Meeting was a great success and, despite the heavy going, form was well maintained. Picture has once more been beaten so that she cannot be quite ready, or her Colonial form has been exaggerated. She was, however, beaten by no mean antagonist for Key West has a record that is quite as brilliant as that of any pony of her class in India. Good old Beadsman once again showed that he can keep up his speed in the best company, and when the high-rated Kingston had pumped himself out at the five furlongs, the old one came away and won any how. To state that the fittest Arabs won their events is the quickest way in which to describe the victories of Mainawa Young Kohinoor, and Grey Fox. Details in our Turf Columns.

The Secunderabad Races have been postponed till the 15th and 17th instant owing to the recent heavy rains.

The following teams have entered for the Poona Junior Polo Tournament:—The Buffs, 2nd Lancers (Hyderabad Contingent), 3rd Bombay Cavalry, Oxford Light Infantry, Army Veterinary Class, 4th Lancers (Hyderabad Contingent), 1st Lancers (Hyderabad Contingent), Poona Gymkhana (Colonel Onslow's team), and Poona Gymkhana (Captain Davies' team).

The First Moonsoon Meeting has produced fair entries, and as in this case the races are all on terms there should be no great falling off in the number of starters. The Trial Hurdle race has attracted eight only, of whom we like Kittylea a good deal the best, though Corydon is looking A-1. and should run well.

Of the ten nominated for the Stand Plate, we think that Pearson's selected—probably Western Queen—should about land the stakes. As a second string we fancy Yellow Mantle. The July Plate should fall to Killnerin as she is carrying only 9-10 to Springlock's 10-10, which latter is a big lump to convey should the going be at all heavy. Sweet Talk should account for the Pony Trial Plate with Eileen as runner up, and in the Maiden Horse stakes there is, we think, nothing to beat Euryalus.

Athletic Notes.

THE annual Tournament of the Royal Western India Golf Club will be held at Nassik from September 14th to the 21st.

A. F. Duffy was running magnificently the week the last mail left England. At the Birmingham A. C. Sports on Saturday, the 11th July, he won the scratch hundred in 9⅘secs.

The Swimming races for the King's Cup created a good deal of interest at home. All three races were won by Englishmen, as will be seen from the details given in our London Sporting letter.

A poor old ped named Joe Spencer, ætat 85, is now engaged at the Kensal Rise Athletic Grounds, London, in the attempt to walk 10,000 miles in 260 days.

Commenting on our recent article on Football in Calcutta, the Rangoon Times remarks; "Well, whatever may be written of the game as played in Calcutta, we cannot find any grounds to complain of the conduct of the military teams which have played here for a good many years now, or of T.A. as a spectator. Officers still play in our regimental teams, and our soldiers do not misbehave themselves by howling at the referee: and let us hope we shall never have the bad fortune to witness it." Happy Rangoon!

The "Upstairs" and "Downstairs" babus of Messrs. Birkmyre Brothers brought off their walking competition last Saturday. Mr. Wilson started them from the south gate of Government House, Barrackpore, and they walked to the junction of Lower Circular Road and Park Street, Mr. Birkmyre acting as judge. The upstairs babus won, securing first, third, fifth, eighth and ninth places. The first man in was Lolit Kristo Mookerjee, who completed the distance in 2hrs. 55mins.

Yorkshire beat Surrey by an innings and 97 runs on the 31st ultimo, Worcester beat Sussex by an inninigs and 176 runs, Notts beat Kent by an innings and 36 runs, and Middlesex defeated Essex by seven wickets. The match between Lancashire and Gloster was drawn owing to rain.

The Chutter Munzil Club at Lucknow held a very pleasant regatta on the 1st instant. The regatta committee were "At Home" and the band of the Gloucester regiment enlivened the proceedings. The Grand Challenge Cup was won by the 48th Pioneers, Messrs. Andrew, Riddell, Boyce, Johnson, and Hewett, (cox.) who beat the Railway team—Messrs. Addis, Keelan, Cooper, Gardiner and Scott. (cox.) by one length.

The Gumti Plate was won by Capt Compton and Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Saunders (cox.), beating Mr. Addis and Miss Gordon, Mrs. Ross (cox.), by a length. Gould beat Hodgkinson easily in the Diamond Sculls. In the Silver Goblets Messrs. Craster and Barnes, Mrs. Ross (cox.), beat Messrs. Cooper and Gardiner, Mrs. Manson (cox.)

Messrs. Appleyard, Cooper, Ethridge, Burnaby with Mrs. Manson, (cox.), beat Messrs. Compton Boyce, Craster, Barnes, with Mrs. Ross (cox.), in the Scratch Fours.

The second attempt to arrive at a decision in the final for the I. F. A. Shield ended on Tuesday evening in a draw.

General Notes.

IT is quite on the cards, we hear, that the programme of the Viceroy's tour in Kashmir will have to be a good deal altered or modified on account of the recent disastrous floods there.

Her Excellency Lady Northcote gave a children's party at Poona, on the 28th ultimo, to which a large number of little guests were invited. They all went in fancy dress and were photographed. Tea was followed by a dance and games in the ball-room, Her Excellency taking part in the romps.

Messrs. Mason, Hill and Rogers accentuate their present big sale by the issue of The Calcutta Express, which, according to the title, is published pro bono publico, and in which we find no end of information connected with the firm's stock and business, judiciously blended with matter of wider interest—scientific, humorous, instructive and interesting. We congratulate the firm on its enterprise.

We cull the following advertisement from an esteemed mofussil contemporary:—

WANTED.

A Babu of a fighting class, who can speak and write English, to enlist as Artillery Driver.—Apply with references to Officer Commanding, 8th Ammunition Column, R.F.A., Jhansi.

In the event of the advertiser being suited, we would give something to be permitted to gaze on this unique specimen. The "ferocious dhoolies" and the "wild pergunnahs" may ere long have to resign the envied position they have hitherto held among India's warlike tribes in favour of the Urreebobberee or "babu of fighting class."

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 17th July 1903.

THINGS are a little flat here this week now that the French invasion—Presidential and theatrical—is over. President Loubet appears to have made an extremely favourable impression on those who came in contact with him. His simple dignity, ready appreciation of the attention shown him, and evident desire to see and do as much as could be crammed into his short visit, won a genuine liking.

The fact that on his visit to Windsor he was received at the station by Lord Cawdor, Chairman of the G. W. R., has given those remarkable people who delight in "curious coincidences" of the "history repeats itself" order, the opportunity of improving our historical knowledge. They inform us that on the occasion of a former French "invasion"—to be precise in 1797—an attempt was made to land a force near Fishguard, in South Wales. Two frigates and a corvette, threw 1,200 men on shore, and, leaving them to their fate, sailed gaily away and were speedily captured. The 1,200 invaders were "received" and induced to surrender by the Lord Cawdor of that day, great grandfather of the Lord Cawdor, who more than a century later, in happier circumstances, greeted the President of the French Republics, the guest of the English King.

The international contest for the Palma trophy at Bisley on Saturday was exceptionally interesting, the number of competitors being larger than has ever been the case before. Seven countries actually competed, the Russians, owing to a misunderstanding as to the date, not putting in an appearance The contest soon became virtually a duel—between our team and the Americans, and though our men made a plucky fight the Americans won by 15 points, Canada coming third with 37 points less than the English score. The Americans—shot with the improved Krag-Jorgensen rifle, with "aperture" sights—Our men using the Lee-Enfield, with the usual open sight—and expert opinion appears to be that the American victory was in no small measure due to the advantage conferred by the use of the "aperture" sight, which blots out the target except the bull's-eye. Truly the ways of our War Office are past finding out, for it is said that the use of this "aperture" sight has been urged on them for years, without success. The more optimistic of those present on Saturday afternoon hoped that the military powers that be may now reconsider the matter, but that, perhaps, is hoping too much. Both teams had their ammunition specially manufactured for the occasion. The British used a "special" make with cordite powder; the Americans the 300 Thomas bullet.

The goodfellowship and friendly feeling between the rival teams was very marked. That it should be so between our men and the teams from the United States, Australia, Canada, and Natal, goes without saying, but it was at least equally noticeable in the case of the Norwegians and French, and the good humour, brightness, and vivacity of the lastnamed, contributed in no small degree to the general enjoyment. It was a plucky thing for the Norwegians to enter the contest at all, accustamed as they are to shoot standing and at shorter distances. The French men, too, are unaccustomed to our long ranges, but as they frankly said, they "came to learn." The congatulations to the Americans were loud and obviously sincere.

The main provisions of the "Motor Car Bill" as introduced into the House of Lords by Lord Balfour of Burleigh, are as follow:—

1. Speed limit is abolished.
2. Reckless and dangerous driving "having regard to all circumstances" is to be severely punished, even though the actual speed be not very great.
3. Present limit of speed in Urban districts retained, but areas for lower maximum may be proclaimed by local authority.
4. All cars to be registered, and the numbers placed where they will be plainly visible.
5. All hired drivers must be licensed not as a guarantee of skill but for purposes of registration.
6. Penalty of £20, or three months' imprisonment, for the first offence. £50 fine, or six months, for the second.
7. Any one refusing name and address, or giving false ones, will be liable to penalties.
8. Maximum weight of car increased from 3 to 4 tons.

Of these provisions No. 3 excites a good deal of discussion. It is urged and with some reason, that under it the maximum rate of speed allowed will vary greatly according to the bias of the local authority, in adjoining districts, and that it will be difficult for drivers to inform themselves accurately on this point. Of No. 5, no one has a good word to say—and, indeed, it is not easy to enter into the minds of its drafters. Undoubtedly all drivers should be licensed, but if one class is to be exempt it is reasonable that it should be the paid driver, since we may presume he would not be paid unless he knew at least the rudiments of his business. The incompetent amateur is the terror, and as the Bill originally stood he is to be allowed to work his wicked will without let or hindrance. All drivers should be required, as in France, to show that they possess some knowledge of handling a car before they receive a license. And there should be a minimum age below which a license will not be granted.

The Bill was read a second time on Tuesday after a debate both useful and amusing. Lord Granby in contending that anyone driving a car—paid or unpaid, male or female—should be required to hold a license, was so strongly supported that Lord Balfour of Burleigh promised an amendment accepting the principle. The proposal that a license be not given without a test of competence was also strongly supported, but Lord Baltour of Burleigh was not inclined to accept it. To the ordinary mind it is difficult to see why the rule that applies to the owner of a yacht, should not apply equally to the owner of a motor car. Lord Camperdown in an amusing speech narrated the evil deeds that had come to his knowledge: his story of the policeman who on stopping a motor car for excessive speed at Strafford-on-Avon was induced to enter it and carried off to Banbury, seventeen miles distant, being especially good. Although Lord Balfour of Burleigh did not see his way to accepting many of the amendments pressed upon him, and which in the general opinion would greatly strengthen the Bill, there is no doubt that even as it now stands it will be a considerable check upon the "motor fiends."

It is said that the owners of "motor" broughams will much resent their carriages being registered and numbered; and that motorists are displeased that the Bill empowers magistrates, in specially aggravated cases, to imprison without the option of a fine—a particularly wholesome provision in view of the wealth of many motor-car owners. But it is a case of catch your motor before further steps can be taken, and that is by no means easy. Yesterday in Cranley Gardens a motor dashed past me in a cloud of dust, crossing the Fulham Road, a fairly busy thoroughfare, at the same rate of speed. If it had carried a number in figures a foot long, no one would have been advantaged one whit. I dont pretend to be much of a judge of speed, but that the rate was excessive was proved by the amount of attention the car excited as it passed. A few hours later I met it returning at almost an equally high speed. There is no doubt that motor-car legislation will be welcomed by the best class of motor-car owners, but unfortunately a large proportion belongs to a set that is certainly new and may be "smart," but whose manners and customs leave much to be desired. Motoring gives them the opportunity of exhibiting to an awestruck world those charming traifs which ordinary mortals (neither new nor "smart") associate with 'Arry and 'Arriet at 'appy 'Ampstead on Bank 'oliday.

The result of the Eton and Harrow match at Lord's on Saturday was decidedly popular as well as unexpected, as not only did the Dark Blues thoroughly deserve their victory, but it was felt that in the past fifteen years they have had their full share of ill-luck. Harrow was decidedly the favourite before the game began, and when they won the toss outsiders at least felt little doubt of the result. Another instance that it is unwise to prophesy unless you know! The Eton game was good all round—batting, bowling, and fielding—the special heroes being Hatfeild whose bowling was really remarkable, and Crankshaw, who made the first hundred that has been hit for Eton at Lords since 1896. I believe it is by no means an original remark, that however interesting the cricket may be at the Eton and Harrow match, the boys themselves are a long way the most interesting sight, but nevertheless I will repeat it. An element of mystery surrounds the average school-boy, which enhances the interest, even if it also inspires an uncomfortable awe. A ten-minutes' conversation with a boy between the ages of 14 and 17 is an ordeal from which the stoutest heart may shrink. He receives your remarks (and affects to agree with them) in the blandest manner, but with an air of critical detachment which makes you painfully conscious of the baldness and futility of your observations, and sets you pining for the moment of release.

The English world of letters has sustained a heavy loss by the death of Mr. W. H. Henley which occurred on Saturday night, at Heather Brae, Woking, at the age of 53. He began writing for the London Magazine in 1875, and in 1877 helped to found, and edited London, the journal in which most of his early palms appeared. In 1889, he became editor of the National Observer to which he also contributed largely, in addition to writing many critical articles for the Athenæum and Saturday Review. His personality attracted a band of brilliant young men who wrote for him when he edited the National Observer and the New Review, among whom may be mentioned Mr. J. M. Barrie, Mr. H. G. Wells, Mr. Arthur Morrison, the late Mr. G. W. Steevens, and many others. The four plays which he wrote in conjunction with R. L. Stevenson failed to appeal to theatrical audience, but his volumes of verse are probably destined to raise his name in the future to a higher pinnacle that it now occupies.

The theatrical news this week is neither important nor interesting. On Tuesday afternoon, "The Merchant of Venice" was performed at Drury Lane by a "Star" cast, for the benefit of the Actors' Association. Sir Henry Irving and Miss Ellen Terry appeared in their well-known characters, and as the cast also included Mr George Alexander, Mr. Charles Warner, Mr. H. B. Irving, Mr. Norman Forbes, Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Lionel Brough, Mr. Seymour Hicbe, Mr. Edward Terry, Miss Lena Ashwell, Miss Evelyn Millard, there can be little doubt that the result must be extremely satisfactory to the funds of the Association. Miss Terry's Portia was charming as ever, but for Sir Henry's Shylock I cannot say much. Formerly it certainly was one of his best impersonations, dignified and pathetic. It is neither now—only melodramatic and exaggerated. Both he and Miss Terry received a wonderful demonstration at the close of the performance, the cheering continuing for almost ten minutes.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell re-appeared as Paula Tanqueray at the new Theatre on Saturday afternoon, and proved that in this character she need not fear her foreign rivals. Mr. Arthur Bourchier has returned to the Garrick, and reappeared on Monday night in "The Bishop's Move." Miss Violet Vanbrugh is again the Duchess, and Mr. H. B. Warner the Bishop's nephew. Miss Jessie Bateman's impersonation of Barbara has distinctly improved, and altogether the piece ran with smoothness and ease.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

MY LAST SHOOT.

MAY 6th 1901.—Having bagged five tigers from this one place R., all within two miles of it, we hardly expected to find any more about anxious to take our kills; but the skins of those we had slain had to be dried, so we thought we might as well stay on a couple of days longer, especially as, beside the hope of bagging just one more tiger, we had fairly encouraging reports of bison and bara-singha in the neighbourhood. Accordingly to-day I was out very early and did a long round after bison, but with no results, not coming across anything but very old tracks. N. took it easy and did not go out at all. On my return to camp I found, as I expected, no kills reported; so N. and I both determined to enjoy life quietly in camp in the afternoon, writing letters, reading, and so on.

Camp R., 7th May.—We were both out early this morning in search of bison. N. did succeed in discovering some fresh tracks, but we have not a decent tracker amongst us, and so he soon lost the tracks in difficult stony and grassy ground. I saw no signs of bison, but came across a very fine solitary blue bull, whom I attempted to stalk and circumvent. I thought I had him "on toast," but he eluded me in some extraordinary way, and I have no notion to this day where he disappeared to. Later on I heard a bara singha stag belling some distance off. I took great trouble over the stalk, and, after walking to the sound of the bell for some time, found myself, in very noisy jungle, about 300 yards from the stag, who had a very decent head, though nothing brilliant. Very careful stalking brought me to about 200 yards from him, when he spotted me, and was off, to be seen no more. Thus ended my morning. At breakfast N. and I determined to move camp the next day to B. about ten miles off; and so, in the afternoon, having done with the R. jungles, we determined to have a general beat. It resulted, as usual, in nothing. I must say I am not a believer in this sort of beat, though I once got a tiger out of one; nor do I think it quite "sporting," but occasionally one is lazy enough to try such a beat, with almost invariably, I am glad to say, no result. These remarks I have thrown in, and of course I mean them to apply only to the antelope and deer tribes. The feline and ursine races are legitimate prey in beats.

Camp B, 8th May.—Changed camp to-day, a march of ten miles. N. worked through the jungles from camp to camp but saw nothing but a blue bull that he could not get a shot at. I was lazy, and rode the whole way, being met, about a mile from camp, by the zemindar and his retinue. An uninteresting specimen of petty royalty I found him to be, but, with great effort, I managed to keep the conversation going till we got into camp, and then I succeded in showing him, and all his following, what a rotten shot I could be at times. As we rode in, a herd of antelope was pointed out to me about 300 yards off There was a nice buck in the herd, and I determined to have him! Taking my rifle from the shikari I started off to stalk the herd, and in time got within 120 yards of the buck, unnoticed. It could not have been a simpler shot, but I succeeded all the same, in making a most egregious miss. The buck dashed off with his harem, but only for a few yards. Bang went the left barrel at him as he stood for a second, trying to find out who was disturbing him. Over him again! Another miss, by all that's holy! Now of course he turned and bolted for good, and I had nothing to do but walk back and face the crowd that had been watching the whole performance. The zemindar and my shikari had the cheek to rub it in a bit, and ask how I came to miss such an easy shot, but they found me uncommunicative, and so left me. No kill were reported to-day so, in the afternoon, N. and I determined to examine the country, each taking different lines. I saw nothing till it was nearly dark, when I saw a solitary doe antelope which I deliberately shot for the pot, we having had nothing but chickens for days. Had I heard N.'s shots I should not have killed this poor beast, for I should have counted on meat from him. N., as it turned out, had had two shots—one at a blue bull which was unsuccessful, and the other at a black buck which got away wounded, increasing darkness preventing N. from following it.

Camp B, 9th May.—We were both of us out early this morning in search of bison, of which we had received somewhat encouraging reports. I had barely left camp half an hour, and the sun was not yet up, when I spotted a bear feeding some 40 or 50 yards ahead of me. Advancing on tip toe, I got within 20 yards of him without his spotting me, and then let him have one, as he fled away from me, behind the off shoulder. He tumbled to the shot, but instantly picked himself up again, then wheeled to his left, and dashed off at speed. As he crossed me, at about twenty yards, I let him have the left barrel, on which he turned sharp, and came straight for me. I had an empty rifle in my hand and there was no time to reload, so there was nothing to be done but bolt. Luckily for me, just on my left there was a tall patch of grass I jumped behind this, thus getting out of sight of the bear, and made a clean bolt of it trying to reload as I ran. Before I had gone 15 or 20 yards I realized that the bear was not following me having evidently lost me, for I could hear him in the small patch of tall grass I have already spoken of, walking up and down and making most unpleasant noises. By now I had reloaded, and was prepared for my friend; and it was my turn, I now felt, to advance. I did so cautiously, as he could not be seen in the long grass; but now, it seems, Bruin's nerves failed him, for he left the grass suddenly and quietly, and I did not discover he had gone till one of my men spotted him making off some 40 or 50 yards away. I remember once writing to an Indian paper and saying I had never had a rough and tumble with a bear, and that I hoped I one day would, as I had never, up to date, found them show any fight. I will not write again in that strain, for I am sure that to-day I should have fared very badly, being unloaded, if it had not been for the cover from view that I got behind the grass. As it was, the adventure ended in nothing, for the bear and I never got on terms again. He bled most profusely, poor beast, and the tracking was easy, but slow, as he took me over the most awful country. Once I caught sight of him and had a long shot at him across a ravine, but missed. I followed on for miles, up and down hills with slopes that I could only negotiate on my hands and knees. Poor brute, I never came up with him, and eventually had to give him up as I was afraid N. might be waiting for me in camp to tackle a tiger kill which we hoped might be reported to-day. As it turned out, however, there was no kill, and I ought to have stuck to my bear. N. had had a disappointing morning. He came across fresh tracks of bison, but his trackers failed him directly the country became at all difficult, and eventually he had to give the job up as hopeless. Having no tiger to tackle we again, in the afternoon, prowled round in different directions. N., whose luck is out just now, again saw nothing. I came across a sounder of pig, just at the last, and blazed into the middle of it in the dark, without being able to see any sights. No result, which I was not sorry for. I only fired to try and get some meat for the shikarries and villagers. There is not much sport to be got here, so we shall move camp to M. to-morrow.

Camp M., 10th May.—A six-mile march for the carts by road. N. and I came by different routes through the jungle, but no shootable creature crossed our paths. On arrival in camp we found that one of the "garas" we had sent on yesterday had been taken by a tiger, so breakfast was hurried up, and preparations were made for a beat. When we got out and saw the ground, it looked an absolutely certain beat. Only one narrow nullah with steep sides to guard, and two guns to watch it! How could the tiger escape us? Well, I don't think he could possibly have done so had he been at home; but he was not at home when we called, and evidently had not been for a long time, judging by tracks, so once more a failure, has to be recorded. The tigers in these parts seldom seem to lie up near their kills. The Bygas are the cause of this, for whenever a tiger succeeds in seizing any of their cattle they invariably chip in for a feed off it themselves in the early morning. The tiger learns by experience that he will only get one feed of his kill, and almost always, therefore, leaves it for good towards dawn, after he has thoroughly gorged himself on it during the night. This, I am sure, accounts for so many of our beats being failures: and I find that several other men, who have shot in these parts, have met with the same disappointments over tigers, and they account for them in the way I do.

Camp M., 11th May.—Both out early, in different directions, exploring the new country. N. with the luck that is at present sticking to him, saw nothing. All I did was at the end of my prowl, to come across a herd of antelope with a fine black buck, possessing a better pair of horns than one usually comes across in this part of the C. P. I did a good stalk, but spoilt it by a poor shot at no great distance. Poor brute, I broke his off fore and he went off at a great pace into a long stretch of high grass in which, though I searched for two hours or more, I lost him. I would rather have missed altogether than see him go off in this miserable state. On returning to camp we found none of our numerous "garas" has been touched, so we decided on a lazy afternoon, only going out for a short stroll round about camp with our guns, one rifle apiece being carried for us by beaters, in case anything too large for a charge of No. 8 should turn up. I bagged a couple of green pigeons, and then we spotted, across the plain, a fine old boar slowly making his way into the jungles on the other side of it. Hastily changing guns for rifles we dashed in pursuit, I coming round behind him while N. dashed across to head him It was a most successful manœuvre, though it took some time to execute. Eventually I found myself within 80 yards or so of the pig, who was stern on to me, steadily feeding. I was just preparing for a shot, when bang went N.'s rifle, then bang again, and the pig was over, dead We had both, as it happened, come on him simultaneously, though each had been moving in ignorance, more or less, where the other was and where the pig was Quite satisfied with the result of the evening's stroll we now turned for home, but before we had gone many yards N. put up a barking deer at which he missed two or three running shots. I followed this up with a couple of misses at a hare, and then darkness put a stop to more sport. At dinner, an hour or so later, we were told that a tiger had, that evening, taken a cow out of a large herd of cattle grazing homewards close to where and while we were letting off our guns and rifles at the green pigeon, pig, etc. Such are the ways of the tiger!!

Camp M., 12th May.—This morning one of our "garas" was reported to have been taken by a panther, but N. who went to verify the report, found that the kill was the work of wild dogs, so nothing could be done with it. The carcase of the village cow that was taken by the tiger last night was found half eaten, but, as we half expected, the tiger's tracks led clean away into space, and there was no locating him, so, a beat being out of the question, it was settled that N. was to sit up over the kill. At about 4 o'clock, just as N. was starting, and I was meditating what I should do, some of our camp followers hurried up to say that a herdsman had that moment come in to say that a tiger had carried off one of his cattle in the open, about four miles away. I said, at once, that I would go with them forthwith and sit up over the carcase till dark, there being no moon. We were thus each provided with an evening's amusement. In my case there was no time to be lost, as I had four miles to go, then to find the kill, and lastly rig up the machan. N.'s kill was close at hand, with the machan already up, so there was no need for him to hurry, and he accordingly waited to see me off. It was a little after 5 when I was told I was nearing the spot where the cow had been seized, and was having the approximate spot pointed out to me, across the open plain, some 500 or 600 yards off, when suddenly I, and all my little party, saw a tiger leave the fringe of the jungle on the opposite side and walk right out into the maidan, as if making for the water which we knew to be in the middle of the plain lying between the two strips of jungle, by the edge of one of which we were walking, while the tiger had emerged from the other. He was a good 500 yards away, but I could see very clearly through my glasses all he was doing, for he was right out in the open with the setting sun playing full on him. He strolled slowly on, quite unconscious of us, and then suddenly up went his head, and in the next second he was down flat on the ground with not a blade of grass to cover him, for it had all been burnt only a few days before, and yet, in this position, he was hardly visible to me watching him through a pair of glasses. We soon saw what had upset him for we discovered a man walking along our path some 300 or 400 yards ahead. Mr. Stripes did not stay long in his prone position, but jumped up, and trotted off into his own jungle again, being soon lost to view. It was an interesting scene while it lasted. Looking through my glasses I now discovered a lot of vultures perched up in trees close to where the tiger had disappeared, so I at once made up my mind that his kill must be somewhere near them, and started across the plain to try and find it. The vultures, however, were not by any means close to the kill, and it was a long time before I discovered it some way off through the caw of a crow, and by walking to the bush I saw him fly out of. There, sure enough, was the kill, half eaten, with an excellent tree for a machan almost alongside. A good sign, I thought, none of the vultures coming down to the kill—it meant, without doubt, that the tiger was somewhere close at hand, probably watching everything I was doing. It was now 6 o'clock, and the sun was nearly down. I can't say I was very hopeful of success, but was determined to have a try. My men very soon had my machan up, and after giving them a few hasty instructions to make a bit of a show walking away so that the tiger might satisfy himself that we had all gone, I climbed up into it. I must mention that the local people all said I was dealing with a very bold tigress, in possession of two hungry young cubs. My view of the tiger across the plain did not lead me to think it was a very big one, so I thought they were probably right. However, I changed my mind a little later on. My men took some time disappearing from view, as the country was very open, but when, eventually, they were out of sight, out stepped a huge tiger from the jungle on my right: no tigress was ever that size I am sure. This was delightful. I had never had such a short sit up in my life. His Majesty was about 120 yards from me, broad side on to me, walking very leisurely in the direction my men had gone in, and I could have shot him quite easily But it never entered my head to fire at him at that distance when, as I thought, I had only to wait a few minutes and get him quite close to the kill. The light was still pretty good, and I could see his every movement quite distinctly. Slowly he marched after my men on and on, till at last I lost sight of him, and it began to dawn on me that perhaps I was not going to see him again. And, by Jove, I never did see him again. How I did gaze out in the direction I had last seen him, begging and praying him to return, but as I watched and watched, the shades of night fell faster and faster till at last I knew I had lost him! It was a bitter pill to swallow, but I don't think anybody can say I did the wrong thing. Surely you don't take a shot at 120 yards at a tiger when you expect, within a few minutes, to get him almost walking up to the muzzle of your rifle! My men did not come for me till it had been dark a long time, and I had a wearisome wait in pitchy darkness in consequence, thinking the whole thing out again and again. By the time I got into camp I found N. had finished dinner, and that I had a go of fever creeping over me. N. had had no luck either, never seeing a sign of his tiger. These confounded tigers neither lie up near their kills after the first meal, nor return to them for a second gorge, so it is hard to know how to deal with them. N. propounded a novel plan to-night of sitting up in a tree amongst a lot of grazing cattle, and then allowing them to gradually feed away, homewards, in the evening, leaving one poor victim behind tied to a stake within easyrange of the tree. I think we shall probably try this. We must get even with these cattle lifters somehow.

Camp M., 13th May.—Having shaken off my fever I asked N. to accompany me this morning and look up the kill I sat over last night, and if it had been again visited, to try and circumvent the tiger in a beat. As we expected, Stripes had never come near his kill again, so a beat was useless unless we could locate him We had, by the way, on arrival at M., picked up a new local shikari, Chandun by name. A right good fellow he turned out to be, young and with lots of go in him, a keen hunter, and a first-class tracker, and, above all, staunch in times of danger. We soon realized what a treasure he was compared with the other so-called shikaries we had with us, and both of us made him liberal offers of regular employment with good pay if he would but leave his hearth and home and return with us when the trip was over. But he had two wives, (he told us this with shame), whom, he said, he could not leave, though we assured him we would give him quarters large enough for himself and all his family.

And so it was that a really good shikari was lost to us after the trip was over. I hope if anybody ever comes across him again he will enlist him into his service, for he is too good to be lost. At present he is not spoilt, and so long as he remains as he is he will be a shikari well worth having. This long digression has taken me off the scent. What I really wished to do was to introduce Chandun to my readers, before I proceeded to explain the adventure he and I had together this morning. He was out with N. and myself on this occasion, and was the only man who could explain to us the lie of the country. He stoutly maintained that it was the tigress with cubs that had killed the cow, and that undoubtedly we shou'd find traces of her in a nullah which lay about a quarter of a mile off, and had water in it or, failing that, in another nullah across the maidan. N. and I therefore agreed to separate, and each search one of these nullahs. I took the nearer one, having Chote Khan and Chandun with me, while N. went across the plain with two other men to the distant nullah. N.'s search turned out to be a fruitless one, so it was a great pity, as it happened, that we had not gone to inspect the near nullah together. Chandun soon took me to a little pool of water in a secluded spot, and here we at once discovered comparatively fresh tracks of the tigress, and, not far off, of her cubs too.

I was then shown another little piece of water where, it was evident, the tigress was in the habit of drinking. It was plain I was in the midst of her haunts, and so, being on the spot, it seemed to me I could not do better than thoroughly examine her nullah, find out how it ran, and settle upon a plan of operations for a beat should she kill again anywhere near the nullah. I was doing this, moving along the top of one of the banks of the nullah, when Chandun suddenly touched me on the shoulder, and pointed excitingly down into the nullah, saying "Bagh, Bagh." Well, I looked and could see nothing. "There it goes," he said, "it's very small." There was a lot of grass in the bed of the nullah, and I could not, for the life of me, see what he was pointing out. I hurried forward in the direction he said it was going, but could catch no glimpse of it. Well, the long and short of it was, we none of us ever saw it again. I suppose it was one of the cubs. After a longish search for it, I concluded my inspection of the nullah and satisfactorily settled, in my own mind, how I would beat it if the tigress obliged again by killing This done, we turned for home, making our way back, this time, by the bed of the nullah. In the centre, the whole way down, was a strip of long grass, while the sides of the nullah sloped away upwards from the grass. I had practically gone through the whole nullah, and was nearing its mouth, opening on to the maidan I have already spoken of, when there was a fiendish roar from the opposite side, and down came a tiger, (the tigress no doubt), charging down the far slope at me and my men as we stood in the centre of the nullah with only the strip of grass between us and the infuriated beast. Chandun and Chote Khan, who were with me, both retreated a yard or two as if to bolt, but on my hurriedly whispering "Bagho mat, bagho mat," both, I am proud to say, stood like men just behind me. The story takes some time to tell, but really the whole thing was over in a second or two. The instant I saw the tigress charging down at me my rifle was up, but she was coming down in such leaps and bounds that I could not get on to her, and in less than no time as she reached more nearly to my level, the long grass between us hid her from view. How I should have stopped her if she had charged through the grass I don't know; but the actual crisis never came, for, in the next second, to my intense relief, I realized that she had funked at the last moment, and not pushed home the charge; and then I caught sight of her dashing away as hard as she could up the opposite slope again, but not in the direction she had originally come from. Aiming well in front of her, for she was going a great pace, I let fly, but she gave no answer, except a sort of lurch, and galloped on as hard as ever. I saw her once again, climbing the slope on my side of the nullah, after having crossed it some way up, and I suppose I ought to have fired again, but I lost the opportunity and she was gone for ever. I made certain I had hit her, but could never find any blood though I took her tracks on until the hard banks of the nullah made tracking impossible. Then I made my way back to where I had taken my shot, and searched high and low for the mark of my bullet on the trees and rocks she had dashed through as I fired, but no trace of it could be found. A miss I suppose it was, but I found it hard to convince myself of the fact. A weary trudge back followed, for the fever had come on again, and all I could do when I got back to camp was to go to bed. N. also took it easy this afternoon, reading and writing. We decided to move camp to-morrow morning to J., only two miles off, as Chandun held out great hopes of our getting bison there, and we should still be in easy reach there of the tigers that had so far defeated us at M. if they should again show up.

THE IMPORTED FEATHERED GAME OF THE NILGIRIS.

IN former years many sportsmen on the Nilgiris spent large sums of money in introducing pheasants, peafowl, partridges, guinea fowl, chickor, etc., etc., which were liberated in various parts of the district, but very little success has attended these efforts, inasmuch as they were spasmodic and no protection was afforded to the birds by legistation, consequently they were either shot or trapped within a very short time. The Nilgiri Game Association, however, undertook in 1890 or 1891, I am not sure in which of these two years, what it considered to be more systematic operations, but it is really regretful to say that up to date the Association has not achieved much.

After a few years' unsuccessful efforts the importation of feathered game was given up. With new blood amongst the Association members importations were resumed in a half-hearted manner, inasmuch as only a few kinds of birds were brought up and it was impossible to note any regular or sustained policy in the operations of the Association.

In 1891-92 chickor were obtained and turned out; but it is a pity these birds were not let loose in some one jungle spot instead of being spread over the district. In the following year a covey consisting of about fifteen was alleged to have been seen about ten miles away from this station near the Billical plantations; but since then nothing has been heard of them, and the Game Association did nothing afterwards.

A similar plan was adopted with pheasants, and in 1892 the Hon'ble Mr. H. Percival Hodgson, an ardent sportsman, and an enthusiastic member of the Game Association, brought up about one dozen of these birds for the Association, and was permitted by the Executive Committee to tend and care for them himself on his estate at Craigmore. Out of the dozen let loose only eight were accounted for in the following year, but three chicks were hatched out. Kartairy, where pheasants were also placed, was found to be too hot, so the big birds as well as the chicks were removed to Snowdon, where for a time they were found to be doing well. The hens laid as many as thirty eggs, but not fertile ones, consequently there was no addition to the pheasant stock. On the other hand the old birds died off, apparently when perfectly healthy for they were in splendid plumage when found by the game watchers. In 1896 there was only one cock and one hen left. Such unfavourable results led the Association to the conclusion that the experiments were hopeless, and that it would be more advisable to spend money on birds of the country than on European importations.

In 1896 a trial was made with country pheasants, kalij and koklass, but nothing came of it and with them the introduction of pheasants came to an end; the Association decided that they should not have too many irons in the fire, and should give up everything that had not proved successful, and confine themselves to what promised good results.

In the matter of partridges the Association acknowledged its obligation to those sporting gentlemen who, at their own expense, had endeavoured to benefit the district by introducing these birds. Mr. Percival Hodgson liberated some imported birds on his estates at Kartairy and there was reason to believe that they afterwards bred. Mr. Marc Clementson got up a dozen from Coimbatore, and set them free in the sholahs in Ootacamund. They evidently migrated to the plains for they were never seen again.

With peafowl the Association saw better prospects, for at one time these birds were plentiful in the country about Musnagadi and on the confines of the Mysore province, but in order to snare them the pardees, an indigenous class of bird catchers, was required, but they were not to be found.

The pardees, at one time, lived in the Mudumallai forest and their services were easily obtained by sportsmen; but the Forest Department being under the impression that they were destroying all the feathered game hunted them away, and since then they have entirely disappeared and nobody can say where they have gone to. With the disappearance of the pardees the peafowl also has disappeared, and there appears to be no hope that the Association is carrying out its long cherished intention of replenishing the Nilgiri District with this bird.

Guinea fowl were obtained in 1892 by the then Honorary Secretary of the Association at their own cost. The number of these birds in the years 1893 and 1894 was about three dozen, and the game watchers reported that they were all doing well. It was thought the only feasible way of propagating guinea fowl was by substituting its eggs for those of jungle fowl, and making the latter the foster parent of the guinea fowl chicks, but nothing came of the experiment, and the recent reports of the Association are barren of information on this subject.

The first allusion made to jungle fowl is in the year 1894, when the Honorary Secretary said that this indigenous game bird had increased very satisfactorily in numbers in all the big sholahs and elsewhere, except in the small and isolated sholahs, where they had become extinct in consequence of would-be sportsmen(?) shooting the female birds. It was proposed at a Committee Meeting to obtain a few couple of jungle fowl from the Berars in order to improve the indigenous breed, and after the difficulties and risks incident to the journey were fully discussed, it was resolved to procure a supply nearer home, and in the meantime to try an experiment with eggs, which, however, ended in a failure.

In 1897 some fifty strong and healthy birds carefully selected in Madras were brought up and set at liberty on these hills, and in the following year it was reported that the stock was increasing, but it was surmised that jungle fires were destroying many nests and chicks, and the protection of the hens was provided for by an extension of the close season for them. How far this was successful deponent sayeth not; but still importations of jungle fowl from the plains was continued, and some of the red species was procured from the Ganjam District. These were handed over to Sir Frederick Price, (who takes a very great interest in the Association) for breeding purposes. These were, however, subsequently handed over to Mr. Gordon Hadfield, the Honorary Secretary of the local Game Association and located at Snowdon, where fifty hybrid chickens were obtained and turned into the Sheffield, Tiger, and Governor's Sholahs, all three of which are closed to shooters.

A SUGGESTED NIGHT SIGHT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Like "A. R." I too am greatly interested in finding a really efficient night sight.

In these days of electrical inventions some expert should come forward with a small, portable, yet powerful electric battery and lamp able to throw a sudden bright light (on the gunner pressing a button) on to, say, a tiger on his kill, the lamp being hung on a convenient (or artificial) bough.

Though I have never tried the experiment for the want of an efficient battery and lamp, I am inclined to think that a very bright light being suddenly and unexpectedly thrown over an unsuspecting animal would take him by such surprise as to positively paralyse him for a time sufficiently long to enable one to get in a quick yet reliable shot at him with one or other of the various ball and shot guns now made, and these, if of reliable make, leave nothing to be desired for quick shooting and hard hitting at short range.

THE COMMON KITE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I have read with interest your correspondent "Swevtown's" letter anent the exodus of the common kites. I have noticed about here that they leave a couple of weeks earlier and return three weeks or so later, and not until the middle of September. A few, probably confirmed bachelors or old and sickly birds, may be seen all the year round.

It is true kites, like most other birds of prey, mostly breed in the cold weather, but though hundreds, nay perhaps thousands, of these kites appear here during the cold weather months, the nests that one comes across are few and far between. Certainly not more than 5 to 10 per cent. of the kites that turn up here appear to breed, so the bulk of them must have some other breeding ground probably among the Central Indian hills.

MIDNAPORE, 3rd August 1903. RAOUL.

The substitution of one horse for another in a race is a trick of the Turf that has more than once proved successful. But it was never more nearly effected than in the case of Ruby, the supposed winner of the Althorpe Park Stakes. After the race, which he won in a canter, he was taken back to the weighing enclosure, his saddle taken off, covered up with immense cloths, and immediately hurried away. The haste of the jockey excited some suspicion, but it was not until long afterwards that the truth was known. A horse named Brocket, who in the year following won the Royal Hunt Cup with 8st 5lbs., in the saddle, was taken down to Northampton, and placed in the next box to Ruby. When it came to the morning of the race Brocket was taken out instead of Ruby, and the latter slipped into the former's place. Pretending the horse was fractious, the jockey had him saddled at the post, so that previous to the race no one not interested in the swindle caught a glimpse of him, and after it was over he was too heavily swathed to be recognised.

CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA.

LOAN NOTIFICATION.

The Corporation of Calcutta are prepared, with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council given under Section 128 of Act III (B. C.) of 1899, to open a Debenture Loan for Rs. 30,00,000 (thirty lakhs) on the security of the rates, taxes, and dues imposed and levied under the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899.

2. The debenture will have a currency of (30) thirty years, from the 1st October, 1903, and will bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, payable on the 1st October and the 1st April of each year.

3. The form of the debentures will be that given in the Sixth Schedule of Act III (B.C.) of 1899.

4. No debentures will be issued for any sum less than Rs. 500, and above that amount debentures will be issued only for multiples of Rs. 100.

5. Tenders for the whole or any part of the above loan of Rs. 30,00,000 will be received by the Secretary to the Corporation, up to 2 o'clock P. M. on Saturday, the 29th August, 1903.

6. Each tender must be made out in the form annexed to this Notification, and enclosed in a sealed cover, addressed to the Secretary to the Corporation, and superscribed—"Tender for Municipal Loan of 1903-1904."

7. Each tender must be accompanied by an earnest-deposit in Government promissory notes, Calcutta Municipal Debentures, currency-notes or cheques, for not less than 3 per cent. of the amount tendered.

8. When a tender is accepted, the earnest-deposit, when made in currency-notes or cheques, will be held as a payment in part of the amount tendered, and will bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum from the date of acceptance of the tender, provided that the whole amount tendered is paid up in the manner hereinafter prescribed; but no debenture will issue for the amount of the earnest-deposit so long as the entire amount of the tender is not paid, but debentures may be issued for each instalment paid in full, the earnest-deposit not being included in any but the last instalment.

9. The earnest-deposits on tenders which may not be accepted will be returned on application, and no interest will be payable on such deposits. If an allotment after being made is not taken up, or the full amount allotted is not paid as hereinafter prescribed, the earnest-deposit shall be forfeited.

10. The rate at which a tender is made must be specified in Rupees, or Rupees and annas, but not in any fraction of an anna. If a rate containing a fraction of an anna is inserted in any tender, such fraction will be struck out, and the tender treated as if the rate did not contain such fraction of an anna. A tender in which the rate is not specified in Rupees or Rupees and annas will be rejected as null and void.

11. The whole amount of each allotment will be divided into three equal instalments as follows, payable into the Bank of Bengal:—

Instalment I—As near as possible to ⅓ payable on 5th September, 1903.

Instalment II—As near as possible to ⅓ payable on 12th September, 1903.

Instalment III—As near as possible to ⅓ payable on 19th September, 1903.

(Earnest-deposit is taken into account, if in Currency-notes or cheque, only in connection with the third instalment.)

12. Parties whose tenders are accepted will have the option of paying all or any of the instalments before the dates specified above, and will receive interest from the date of such payment.

13. Anticipation interest will be paid on all instalments from the respective dates on which such instalments are paid into the Bank of Bengal to the 30th September, 1903.

14. In the case of two or more tenders at the same lowest rate accepted, a pro rata allotment will be made, but no such allotment will be issued if the amount thus allotable on any tender is less than Rs. 500.

15. A minimum having been previously fixed, tenders will be opened by the Loans Committee of the Corporation, at 2 P. M. on Saturday, the 29th August, 1903, at the Municipal Office.

MUNICIPAL OFFICE:
CALCUTTA, 1st August 1903.

W. W. CUNNINGHAM,

POONA FIRST EXTRA MEETING.

Wednesday, 29th July 1903.

THE company which witnessed a splendid afternoon's racing to-day would have been a very much larger one had the weather gods been more propitious and not compelled the postponement of the initial meeting of the season from Saturday to a work-day. In this respect, however, history only repeated itself as the vagaries of the meteorological engineers caused a similar postponement last year. Rain had fallen heavily up to Monday, and the course was sodden, the going being anything but on top. This in a measure accounts for the poor time records, but it hardly accounts for the small difference of $\frac{2}{5}$ths of a second between the waler ponies and the Arabs, Paddy Melon winning in 56$\frac{1}{5}$, while Hamilton won in 56$\frac{2}{5}$. The time being correct, the walers must be reckoned a poor lot, despite Paddy Melon's rather brilliant Colonial record.

But to the racing in the order of events!

Flying Childers on recent Bombay form was selected to win the Maiden Arab Plate, and on paper certainly his chance looked colour-de-rose. Silvermane, who now keeps his legs well down when galloping, was, however, looked upon as a possible, while the Bedouins fancied Young Kohinoor. Musketeer, belonging to a clever stable and ridden by Robinson, was well looked after and altogether the race was considered a very open one indeed. The favourite never had a serious say in the issue, and Young Kohinoor judiciously ridden by Penton came gamely away when asked to and won easily from Silvermane.

Picture was expected in the July Plate to repeat the performance of her stable companion Olga who last year beat the second class horses at the Extras. She had been well tried and her maiden debut it was confidently expected would result in a winning bracket. But Nancy Till, despised and rejected by backers, caused a complete upset by winning from Madeira, an American mare with the favourite third and La Regina, in whose interest the stable scratched five up, who was fancied next best to the favourite last. It was wise of Mr. A. W. P., not to ask Fando to flounder through the mud with 10st up, and it was a happy stroke of luck that Nancy Till should carry his colours to the front. Picture having been beaten by Nancy Till, it remains to see how she will shape amongst the 14-2's on Saturday.

Aga S. Shah, despite his rather generous proportions, still aspires to G. R. honours and he rolled our money home safely on Paddy Melon—in the Amateur Plate. A five pot might have been landed on this race, but for the pony's Colonial dossier getting abroad during last week. That Tom King should have finished a head behind the winner in 14-2 waler class stamps him as a countrybred of exceptional merit.

The combination of Sanaiya and Robinson was looked upon as the road to fortune by backers; but Kour Saheb, who failed to justify the confidence on him at Bombay, carried too many guns for even the pony Nainara whose gallop was so good as to induce the stable to back him with some degree of assurance. For a new pony he ran well in the company he met.

A match, as I intimated in my notes last week was what the Lilliputs resolved itself into. Haydn if he were himself, should have won this but Veera, who is fitter than she has ever been, though left four lengths at the start, wore the gelding down steadily and won a good race. Much fancied and well backed, Erhan was not good enough to win the Closed Plate, which Hamilton won from start to finish, and so retreived a lost reputation. Erhan managed to be third only.

That Grey Fox with 7st 12lbs up should have lost the Arab Pony Trail Plate, was an indication that the Grey was clean "off colour" and it was hardly on the cards we thought that Tigris should beat Arabistan. Details:—

POONA SECOND EXTRA MEETING.

Saturday, 1st August 1903.

Several showers fell during the afternoon; not in sufficient quantities to make much difference to any one. The track was very soft; but, considering the heavy going, the times recorded were remarkably good.

The well-known Arab dealer Ali Talib and his brother have for years been the possessors of some of the smartest Arab ponies performing in Western India and their latest debutant, Nainawa, is a wonderful little grey who on the first day had the worst of the run and so just lost to Kour Saheb. On this running we all tipped him to win the "New Comers' Consolation Plate" which he was given. He was bumped by Najaffi near the stand and being thrown out of his stride, Najaffi won, but was subsequently disqualified, the Stewards upholding an objection for interference with Nainawa who was awarded the race. The fact that Nainawa was in the last race did not weigh with punters as the grey had had a hard tussle and Hermit was expected to make small beer of the field, but Nainawa came out again and won in the most decided manner the favourite failing even to get a place, although getting off well and having a clear course up the straight. After this exhibition Nainawa should be good enough to win even the Arab Pony Derby at the September Meeting and should be reserved, but the ways of the Arab owner are peculiar and I expect to see Nainawa a regular Saturday dish till he breaks down or chucks trying to win.

Grey Fox is an honest pony. He is a budmash at the gate, but he is wonderfully clever at making up lost ground. Despite his failure on Wednesday when "his coming" was deferred altogether, he was heavily backed this afternoon. Getting off in the ruck he challenged the leaders in the run home and won handsomely, but he really had nothing of much account to beat. It looks as if Picture must be associated with second classers in the future. She nearly caught Key West, and when she seemed done with came again; but Robinson kept Key West going and won though it was a bit near the knuckle at the finish. Mr. Percy Fischer is still in bed, so that he was not able to see his pony win.

Follow an Arab when he is in winning vein, and those who had this rule in mind had no reason to regret having backed Young Kohinoor: Arabistan with Heeroo up had the best following but finished behind the former, while Silvermane is getting nearer being first every time he runs.

Old Beadsman went out favourite for the "August Plate," but there was a lurking suspicion that Kingston would gallop away from everything, and so he did, but, alas only for five furlongs where he shut up and Beadsman romped home an easy and popular winner.

The closed race was considered a moral for Mistry but he got off badly in an indifferent start and only struggled into third place. Details:—

CALCUTTA COURSE CHAT.

LAST SATURDAY morning saw things more than usually busy on the course in view of next Saturday's actual trying of conclusions, and all of the strings in training, that intend having a look in, were hard at it.

I saw Mr. Dudley putting in a power of work, first with one and then another of the little lot of his connection, notably Mr. Curtis Hayward's Sylvia, and Mr. J. W. Orr's Dundonald. These are a likely pair for the amateur, and other races, within their class.

Mr. Bell-Irving on Naiades, and Mr. Wheeler on a bay put in a spin, and the former then went the Pony Course on Yule Tide, who negotiated all the hurdles in good style, finishing up well.

Next Moss Rose had a fling at The Captain, with Bond up, and the former went to the front at the last hurdle with a bit of a flourish.

Mulwalla (Smallman), and a chestnut, with an amateur up, went over the Horse hurdles, in which deal the former was finishing gradually alone. Bar the first two flights, Mulwalla put in sound work, and will want taking down when the colors are up. He's real fit, and reflects credit on Hard.

Loch Maree (Hard) and Mr. Galstaun on Gunmetal went the 5 furlongs fairly fast, the mare more than holding her own. Then our old friend and gay deceiver, Loch Arden, with Garratt, and Springlock (Hard) went a fast gallop, probably in view of the July Stakes, Loch Arden pulling double.

Kittylea went the jump course like an artist. She seems to quite like the illegitimate game, and will take a good bit of chasing when the question is being asked.

W. White and Fred Gerrard had a set-to with Little Doris and Reveillé, and Mr. Bell-Irving later on sent Metalwing a fast gallop. I also noted W. White on Mr. Bannerjee's Second Thought, trying conclusions with another, with Garratt in the saddle, while Syd White was putting through a number of Mr. Pugh's string, who saddle up away on the north side of the course.

Bloss and Syd White worked Wishart's string, from their old accustomed spot near the New Stand end. They have got the new hurdler Fairlight, but he's very backward yet. The rest are all old friends, and in such capable hands are well forward.

Mr. Dutton's Golden Tip was out putting in a bit of work.

Walker looks after Trollop, in Mr. Dass' interests, and the horse, as usual, is on the big side, but as he races thus best, its as well he is so. He is not intended for the early meets, so is not yet in fast work.

Mr. Dass himself puts in a few passing half hours with some of his old favourites, notably High Tide, and doubtless derives much pleasure from so doing.

Marwari was going along in his own peculiar style. He has his own way of going, but is not quite fast enough at present; he is, however, absolutely one of the soundest horses in India to-day.

Jack Spillain quite upset the popular opinion on the rigidity of the present hurdles, by carrying one completely away with him, after several attempts, when schooling an aspirant for jumping honors, as a wind up to Saturday morning's work. He however, I must admit, got well over the pony hurdles a few moments later. In fact, what won't be got over a jump, when Spillain is in the saddle?

From a glance at Frank Smallman's string the master's hand is apparent. As they are one and all in the tippest of tip top condition and he's got something to work with.

Harry Hard, too, has all his horses as forward and well looking as anyone could wish.

I notice from an exchange, that M. Trahan has picked up for India, the New Zealand three-year-old Northumberland, by Seaton Delaval-Campania, describing him as a very compact, powerful chestnut, full of quality, and who moves along nicely.

The weather on Monday and Tuesday was greatly against work on the Course, though it was open on Tuesday morning and a number of gallops were put in: High Tide went the Horse hurdles, and if he did not go particularly fast, he at all events made no mistake.

Gassima (Hard) and Loch Maree (native) went the five furlongs, as did also Not Yet and Florin; but the time was nothing, though in the latter spin the little mare could have gone away at any moment.

Loch Arden, with Hard up, put in a fairly good 5 furlongs, but was evidently not trying much.

Granny (Bond) and Miss Prominence went a spin, of which Granny had evidently the best.

Next the two Arabs, Bin Rishaid (Bond) and Pekin (native), had a set-to; and Lady Pronte (Bond) and Lord Lieutenant (Barrow) also did a bit of moderately fast work. The First Water colt, Shirley, and Euryalus put in some work; but taken all together, the morning was unproductive of anything startling, the constant showery weather driving everything to cover early.

Prince Soltykoff, although a Russian, has so thoroughly acclimatised himself that he would pass for an Englishman with anyone who did not know his nationality. Few more popular sportsmen at present adorn the Turf, and no colours are more gladly welcomed first past the post than the pink and black cap.

When the Russo-Turkish War broke out in 1878 the Prince was the recipient of not a little good-humoured "chaff" as to the necessity having arisen for a return to the land of his birth.

"Prince," a friend said to him one day, "you will have to join your countrymen in the war against Turkey."

"If I do," his Serene Highness gravely replied, "I shall have New Holland to take me onto battle, but Baife to bring me out."

Those of our readers who were racing at that period will remember that New Holland, though a glutton over a distance of ground, was terribly troubled with the slows; whereas the handsome little Baife was a veritable flyer out of the slips, and had no equal over half-mile courses.

THE TURF.

LINGFIELD PARK SUMMER MEETING.

THE Lingfield Park Summer Meeting almost invariably clashes with the Eton and Harrow match, but, notwithstanding that some of the leading lights of the Turf were attracted to Lord's to assist at one of the most fashionable functions of the season, the general attendance at Mr. Fowler's picturesque gathering was but slightly affected. The specials from London contained their full complement of passengers, and the Brighton and South Coast contingent was unusually strong. The local folk also made a brave show in the Members' enclosure—where the band of the East Surrey Regiment played a cheery selection of music—the fair sex almost outnumbering their male admirers. The stands and offices were nearly hidden from view by the rosevines, heavy with a profusion of blossom, and the vivid hues of the tent-like Japanese umbrellas erected on the lawn added to the brightness of the scene. Typical midsummer weather favoured the meeting. In town hardly a breath of air was stirring, but a gentle breeze tempered the tropical solar rays at Lingfield, and, though a "scorcher," the day was not unbearably hot. The ground was firm without being too hard, and, as usual at this venue, huge fields tried conclusions for most of the events and brisk sport was witnessed.

The glorious weather which had signalised the opening of the Summer Meeting here extended to the closing stage, and but for a certain sense of anxiety regarding the condition of the popular American jockey, D Maher who had met with a terrible accident the previous evening, the day would have been one of unalloyed enjoyment. Alarmist rumours were afloat early in the day, but happily these proved to be unfounded, and, though Maher's condition is doubtless critical, there are good grounds for hoping that a sound and vigorous constitution will serve to pull him through. The atmosphere, oppressive in London, was several degrees cooler in the Garden of Surrey, and, after the glare and dust of the Metropolis, the rustic environments and fresh verdure of the picturesque estate were refreshing to the eye and soothing to the senses. The band of the East Surrey Regiment again enlivened the proceedings with a tuneful selection of music, which was rastly appreciated by the large gathering. The attendance may have been equalled, but it is safe to say that it had never previously been exceeded, the half holiday folk making a prodigious show in the public rings, whilst the long rows of cosy lounge chairs on the lawn barely sufficed to meet the requirements of the members. In contrast to the previous day, backers succeeded in more than holding their own, and the entertainment passed off in enjoyable fashion.

NEWMARKET SECOND JULY MEETING.

No more unpretentious programme is issued by the ruling powers of the Turf than that of the Second July Meeting, which is ever the tamest of all the fixtures decided at head-quarters. Its duration is limited to three days, and the card each afternoon contains but half a dozen events, with hardly a race of more than passing interest amongst the lot. Indeed, but for the presence of the King the initial stage of the gathering would have been almost featureless. On the 13th instant, the High street seemed almost deserted. Few visitors had made the journey from town with the exception of the handful of intrepid journalists who had tried conclusions against the Jockeys and Trainers in the annual cricket match and met with a crushing reverse, and only a few idlers were to be seen eagerly perusing the latest bulletin, considerately affixed to Messrs. Simpson's window, regarding the condition of D. Maher, who happily appears to be progressing very favourably. The arrival of the morning trains from town considerably altered the aspect of the streets. A fair number of racegoers were astir by noon, and by the time the ball was opened behind the old Roman encampment, the muster all round quite reached expectations. The conditions could hardly have been improved upon. Thanks to the prevailing northerly airs the atmosphere was refreshingly cool, and never for a moment were there any grounds for the usual complaints on the score of the heat. The going was on the hard side, and fields ruled small.

(Winner trained by F Webb, at Newmarket)

BETTING.—11 to 8 agst Vergia, 3 to 1 Esquire, 6 to Long Glass 7 to 1 Extradition, and 100 to 7 any other (offered).

Won by two lengths; a length and a half between second and third. Long Glass, was fourth, Mulligatawny fifth, Cragthorne sixth, Mem Sahib seventh, Flordilice next, and Huelva colt last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min. 11⅘secs.

There was every indication on the 14th that the much-needed rain was imminent, and doubtless many devoutly hoped that the night would bring a prolonged downpour. A falling glass and overcast skies certainly pointed to a substantial visitation of the kind, but folks were doomed to disappointment, for with the exception of a shower which barely sufficed to lay the dust, nothing was felt of the threatened storm. The morning broke gorgeously bright, and the wind having veered round into the south-west, there was an appreciable rise in the temperature. The condition under which the early gallops were performed were delightful, and lots of keen spectators brushed the dew from the Heath in their eagerness to witness some of the most important spins, Rock Sand, who went a strong mile and a half gallop on the Racecourse Side, being the supreme attraction. Later the sales occupied the attention of buyers of bloodstock, but it was not a very enthusiastic assemblage that gathered at the ringside, and though two of Lord Rosebery's yearlings realised good prices, many of the others changed hands below their value.

It was a very near thing whether the two Newmarket July Meetings would pass off without encountering the hostility of the elements, but the weather underwent a change on the morning of the 16th and the last stage of the reunion was concluded under somewhat dismal conditions, inasmuch as the rain which set in after breakfast continued, lightly but steadily, throughout the day, only ceasing just before the penultimate race was decided. Messrs. Tattersall's Bloodstock Sales seldom extend to the final day of a July fixture, but such was the case to-day, and the most important business of the week, perhaps, was transacted at Park Paddocks this morning, when the horses in training of Mr. J. Lewis, a draft of Mr. J. R. Keene's, and five beautifully-bred animals the property of the King were submitted under the hammer. Happy Slave (1500gs), Sundorne (1050gs), Boss Roy (910gs), and Maori Chieftain (900gs) realised the highest prices, and money thus expended in ready-made racers was, doubtless, better invested than in yearlings, however well bred. With the exception of the Chesterfield Stakes no event of the first importance was down for decision, but there was only a slight falling off in the attendance, and the King was again present, remaining on the course until the last race had terminated to the satisfaction of the "talent," who did pretty well on balance.

THE CHESTERFIELD STAKES.—Of 830 sovs, for two year olds; colts 8st. 10lbs., fillies and geldings 8st. 7lbs; winner extra; Last five furlongs of B.M.

(Winner trained by J. Chandler, at Lambourn.)

BETTING: 3 to 1 on Fiancee, 11 to 2 agst. Piari, 20 to 1 any other (o).

In an excellent start, Fiancee, on the left, held a fractional lead of Bonnie Wee Thing and Hark, with Islesman, Galapas, and Piari in close attendance, till a quarter of a mile from home, when Islesman slightly headed Fiancee and Piari, but gave way inside the distance to the favourite, who won cleverly by a neck: a head separated the second and third. Hark was fourth, Bonnie Wee Thing fifth, and Galapas last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min. 4⅘secs.

BETTING: 5 to 1 agst. Ard Patrick, 7 to 4 Sceptre, 5 to 4 Rock Sand.

(Winner trained by S. Darling.)

Oriole made the running from Rock Sand and Ard Patrick, with Duke of Westminster last till rounding the bend for home where Ard Patrick went in front, and was joined by Sceptre. A magnificent finish resulted in a neck victory for Ard Patrick; three lengths divided the second and third.

CRICKET.

ETON vs. HARROW.—Played at Lord's on 10th and 11th July. Eton won by an innings und 184 runs. There can be no question that this match still holds its own, and that it shows no signs of waning popularity. After all it is the most important school match of the year, and even to the most blase cricketer there is left some interest in seeing what sort of players the best schools are turning out, and whether the old traditions are being observed, or are gradually giving place to more modern methods. But although there is perhaps more latitude allowed to individuality than there used to be, there is still somewhat too much of a similarity between the styles of the players, and it is seldom that anything unusual in the way of a style is seen Perhaps this is only natural, for after all, a cricketer, like an artist, generally copies somebody else until the time comes when he feels strong enough to go on in his own way. It is almost a matter of pure speculation as to which of the two schools is likely to win, for there is practically no chance of comparing their strength until the actual match between them. But it was rumoured that if the luck were even, Harrow ought to have an easy victory. There was nothing whatever on the first day to lead one to suppose that this rumour would be verified, for although they won the toss, the Harrovians quite failed to distinguish themselves with the bat, while their bowlers were thrown off their balance by the way in which they were treated by the first two Etonians. The Harrow batting was timid and too cautious by half to be successful, and runs came so slowly as to encourage the bowlers greatly. Wickets fell with some approach to regularity, and when 78 runs had been made six men were out. Crake and Foster tried to put a better appearance on the game by knocking up runs pretty, quickly but the total of the innings was only 115, and naturally enough excuses were made that it was a bowler's wicket. The Etonians adopted different tactics when they went in just before lunch, and in the course of three overs Nicholl and Crankshaw put on 24 runs. This satisfactory beginning was followed up afterwards by some extremely brisk and attractive batting, and the bowlers were never allowed a rest There was no hesitation about the methods of either batsmen, and any ball which looked as if it might be made use of was not left alone. In the course of three-quarters an hour the total was taken to 87, and then Nicholl, the Eton captan, was bowled for 44. If the Harrovians had been lucky enough to get rid of the next man quickly, they might have regained confidence, but Williams had come to stay. He and Crankshaw both took charge of the bowling which they hit to all parts of the field, and in the course of an hour they increased the total by 123. Crankshaw, who had just completed his hundred, was then bowled by Clutterbuck, his brilliantly hit innings having lasted for an hour and three quarters; it included sixteen fours. By this time their was nothing in the bowling to cause alarm to incoming batsmen; it was not even straight, and the consequense was that although the next three men did not do much their were several others who took advantage of the situation, notably Tod, who made his 59 in a little over an hour. The innings at last came to an end at five minutes to seven. It had only lasted for about four hours, but in that short time 425 runs had been scored, so that Harrow had to go in on the next morning against a a balance of 310 runs. Any hopes that Harrow may have had of saving the match were dissipated in the course of a few minutes on Saturday. Hatfeild, the slow to medium left-hand bowler who had been so successful for the Etonians in the first innings, created consternation in the Harrow ranks, and in the course of an hour six wickets were down for only 27 runs. The situation was more than desperate, when Baily and Bolton came together and made a defence which, under the circumstances may be regarded as heroic. For a time the tide of disaster was stayed, and while they were together they put on 101 runs. But their effort was too late to be of any value to the side except as an exhibition of pluck, and as soon as they were parted the bowlers once more gained the upper hand.

GENTLEMEN vs. PLAYERS.—The Oval Match played on 9th, 10th and 11th July, Gentlemen won by 54 runs. Although the Surrey committee had found the usual difficulty in getting really representative teams together, on account of so many of the counties being engaged, the sides for this match were decidedly strong, and very few of the men who played had no claims to take part in such an important game. It was pleasant to see W. G. once more turning out for the Gentlemen; as usual he acted as captain, while Hayward, as at Lord's led the Players. The good fortune to win the toss fell to the lot of the Gentlemen, and although some of them played very uninteresting—it might almost be said feeble—cricket, the total of the innings was by no means unsatisfactory. This was chiefly due to Beldam, Jessop, and Burnup. The value of Beldam's 89 to the side was enormous. When he began his innings things were going very badly for the Gentlemen, for W. G., C. J. B. Wood, and L. O. S. Poidevin were all out for 39 runs. But he was impervious to the attack, and although it was not his policy to hurry himself, there was so much firmness and absence of hesitation about his batting that his play could not but be admired. M'Gahey did not stay long enough to make his presence greatly felt although he was at the wickets for an hour and ten minutes, but Jessop for a delightful twenty-five minutes enlivened the proceedings immensely. Burnup came in, and at last, after commencing in rather a timid manner, he played up to his reputation, his innings being quite worthy of him at his best. He lost Beldam when the latter was getting very near his hundred, after batting for two hours and three quarters, during which he made no mistakes. Six wickets were now down for 177, so that the Gentlemen were doing none too well, and it was quite on the cards that the total would not exceed two hundred. But Burnup and Simpson-Hayward added 57 in three-quarters of an hour, and at the end Odell and Bradley made a valuable stand, the latter surprising the bowlers by knocking up 26 in twelve minutes. Burnup's fine innings of 77 lasted for two hours and a quarter The only bowler on the side of the Players who had a good analysis was Arnold. At the end of the innings a quarter of an hour remained for play, during which the Players scored 16 without loss, Hayward being not out 4 and Tunnicliffe not out 12. The very first ball on the next morning disposed of Tunnicliffe, and for a long time afterwards the Players dared take no liberties. Hayward was dismissed after taking an hour over his 16, and then Denton and W. G. Quaife put on 61 in an hour and-a-half for the third wicket. No one was quite comfortable with Bradley, who, being very fast, kept the ball a little short. At lunch time four wickets were down for 66 runs. Bradley getting rid of the last three men in five balls for a single run; he had bowled splendidly all the time that he was on. Quaife alone did himself justice; his innings of 79 was a masterpiece in its way. The Gentlemen began their second innings with a lead of 123 runs, and before stumps were drawn they had increased this by 128 for the loss of half their wickets. Beldam and Burnup again played fine cricket, but no one else could make any headway against the bowling. Grace and Jessop were together when stumps were drawn, the former with 4 to his credit, and the latter with 5. On Saturday morning Jessop made runs much more slowly than usual, not being in the best of health; he was out in trying to make a short run to Quaife at cover-point, and after his dismissal the innings came to a sudden conclusion. Dr. Grace was batting for an hour and-a-quarter for his 19 The Players had now to make 296 to win in about four hours and-a-half. There was some very slow cricket at the commencement of the innings, and as nobody ever became really settled, except Quaife, there was never much improvement in the rate of scoring. The first three men all fell to good catches by Poidevin in the slips. Nearly every man who came in made a useful score, and when half the wickets were down it was anybody's game But although Quaife played a very fine innings for the second time in the match, he could get nobody to give him sufficient assistance. He was out eighth for an exceedingly good innings of 72, and then the end soon came, Simpson-Hayward bowling his lobs with marked effect.

Some of the old-fashioned sort of owners have curious ideas as to handicapping, and nowadays we hear lots of growling about getting too much weight. Not so the Dutchman who owned Prince Monaco some years ago. He was in a handicap at Capetown, in which Marquis was given 9st. 7lb., and Prince Monaco 8st.

"Look here, Mr. Cloete," said the owner of the Prince, "what do you mean by giving my horse 8st? I know he is as good any day as Marquis, and you have the cheek to say he is a stone and a half behind him! Well, now you can scratch him—I am not going to have my horse insulted like this."

And scratched he was.

THE PHILADELPHIAN'S TOUR.

THE WARWICKSHIRE MATCH.—Played at Edgbaston on 9th and 10th July. Warwickshire won by seven wickets The visitors were unfortunate enough in this match to lose the services of their chief bowler, J. B. King, who strained his side after his second over. This loss handicapped them sadly, but they contributed to their own misfortunes by the weakness of their batting. In the first innings they could only make 112, and although they seemed to play Hargreave easily enough they could make nothing of Moorhouse and Field. In the absence of King, Cregar came to the front with the ball, and in taking eight wickets for 35 he did a brilliant performance. Fishwick, Charlesworth, and Rotherham, the old Uppinghamian, all played very attractive cricket for Warwickshire, who on the first innings had a lead of 41. Before stumps were drawn the Americans knocked off this lead for the loss of two wickets, and were ten runs on. Sharpless was not out 21 and Bohlen not out 25. On the next day Bohlen played a splendid game, but received very little assistance Thanks chiefly to him the visitors were able to give Warwickshire the task of making 151, but as King was unable to bowl for them, they cannot have had much hope of pulling off the match. As it happened, Warwickshire knocked off the runs without any difficulty at all.

THE WORCESTERSHIRE MATCH.—Played at Worcester on 13th, 14th and 15th July. Worcestershire won by 215 runs. The Americans not only had the misfortune to be unable to make use of the services of King and Lester, but soon after the Worcestershire innings commenced, accidents happened to Scattergood and Bates, whose places were then taken by Jordan and Graves. Thus severely handicapped they had but little apparent chance of coming out of the match with much credit and by the time that the first day's play was ended they seemed likely to be easy victims to Worcestershire, who had scored 388 against 71 for six wickets, of which Graves made 35. In the absence of King, who was, of course, very greatly missed Le Roy bowled very well indeed. In their uphill task the Americans showed the greatest pluck on Tuesday, P. H. Clark, Jordan, and Morris all greatly distinguishing themselves. But despite these fine efforts Worcestershire had a lead of 155 runs, and although they did not do so well in their second innings as in the their first, they were 313 runs on at the close of the day with four wickets in hand. After play ended rain fell heavily for hours, and the Americans were placed quite out of the running, although Graves, Haines, and Clark all played up most plucaily.

SUSSEX vs. HAMPSHIRE.—Played at Brighton on 9th, 10th and 11th July. Sussex won by ten wickets. No matter how badly the Hampshire men may have been doing, or how low they are in the championship table, they generally succeed in making Sussex go all the way. But their prospects of doing this were not very bright by the time that stumps were drawn at the end of the first day, for Sussex, who won the toss, had enjoyed themselves on a perfect wicket, and with only six men out had run up a total of 403. C. B. Fry and Vine helped considerably towards this satisfactory position by scoring 133 in an hour and three-quarters for the first wicket, most of the runs coming from Fry, who was again in great form. Relf and Fry then put on 124 in about an hour and a-half, and by the time that the partnership was dissolved by the dismissal of Relf, the bowling was about played out. Just before the tea interval Fry brought his score to 159, but after adding a single he was caught at short slip. He had been batting for three hours and-a-quarter, and except that at the commencement ot his innings he gave two tremendous chances of c and b in quick succession to Llewellyn, his batting was irreproachable, and the chances were of the kind which no man ever takes except by accident. It was not one of Ranjitsinhji's days, but George Brann was in great form and when stumps were drawn was, not out, 62. On Friday morning he increased this score to 111, thus making his first hundred of the season; he was at the wickets for two hours and forty minutes. Going in against the huge total of 492, the Hampshire men distinguished themselves, putting on 305 in the course of the day for the loss of seven wickets. The best and longest stand of the innings was that between Steele and Sprot; it produced 103 runs in an hour. Sprot was most aggressive at times and in the course of his fine innings he made 30 runs off two consecutive overs from Tate. Altogether he was batting for an hour and three-quarters. Unfortunately on Saturday, the last three men did not make enough runs to save the follow-on, and the result was disastrous, for although several men made a plucky effort to save the game there was time for Sussex to win by ten wickets. If the follow-on had been saved, Hampshire would in all probability have made an honourable draw.

ROWING.

THE WINGFIELD SCULLS.

Without the slightest trouble F. S Kelly (Balliol College, Oxford, and Leander Club) put the seal on his fame, and his right to be considered the greatest amateur sculler of the day—if not, indeed, of all time by defeating A Hamilton Cloutte, the previous champion, by no less than 1min 22sec over the University Course Putney to Mortlake (four miles and-a-quarter), yesterday evening. Rarely, indeed, could a race be more easily described, as from the first the Diamonds winner went away, and increasing his lead at every stroke won more easily than was the case on Tuesday his work throughout exciting the keenest admiration of all. Although the result was a foregone conclusion, there was a large crowd in the vicinity of the clubhouses and the race was followed by numerous admirers of aquatics who anticipated seeing the record (22min 50sec) made by C. V. Fox in 1900 disturbed. In this, however, they were disappointed, as Kelly was never pressed, and for the last mile had a nasty stretch of water to go through. At the same time, Cloutte rowed a good and plucky race all along, and he was the first to admit that he was not "in the same street" with his conqueror.

Kelly was the first afloat, and came out shortly after half-past five in a drenching downpour of rain, and at once paddled down to his station, the Surrey side. The Londoner followed five minutes later, rain still falling heavily. There was a delay at the stake boats, as the challenger's left scull got fastened in a huge piece of timber studded with nails, and he had some trouble in clearing, and then in avoiding the obstruction subsequently. When eventually they got away on level terms, the Leander man, as usual, dashed away at a rare burst, putting in 20 strokes to, Cloutte's 18 in the first thirty seconds. Before Messrs. Ayling's was reached, in a shade over a minute, he was two lengths ahead and had increased this lead a length when he passed Mr. Jno. H. Clasper's. Virtually the race, barring accidents, was then over, and as Kelly showed in every stroke that he was also a fine-water man, there was little to fear of this. At the half-mile the times were—

	M.	S.
Cloutte	2	16

Both were then rowing 32 to the minute, but there was far more power in Kelly's stroke than that of his opponent. The leader passed the steps in 2min 49sec, and was going further away. Shortly afterwards Cloutte ran clean over an oar marking the start for the Hammersmith Town Regatta, and though it did not injure his boat the shock could not have helped him in his stern chase. The times at the mile were—

	M.	S.
Cloutte	5	7

Both were then rowing 30, and still Kelly seemed to go further away. His time at the Crab Tree was 6min 16sec, and at Harrod's Wharf it was—

	M.	S.
Kelly	7	19
Cloutte	7	40

There was a large crowd on Hammersmith Bridge, shot by—

	M.	S.
Kelly	8	45
Cloutte	9	13

It continued to be a procession, especially when along Chiswick they encountered quite some lumpy water. At the Steps they were timed—

	M.	S.
Cloutte	14	54

Crossing over to the Meadows, they encountered a strong head wind, but here Kelly was going much the easier, while the Londoner stuck gamely to his task. They reached Barnes Bridge.

	M.	S.
Kelly	19	45
Cloutte	20	52

and were timed at the finish—

THE KING'S CUP.

The impetus given to swimming by the Prince of Wales's presentation of a cup to the Life-Saving Society last year is, perhaps, one of the most gratifying features connected with the sport of natation in the whole of its short history. It caused the aims and objects of that body to become even more widely known than ever, notwithstanding the fact that branches of the Society had already sprung up in almost every European capital, and in the most important British Colonies. It had been uphill work for the Society's workers previous to this, for, existing only on the amounts subscribed by its members, and all too few subscribers, it had been hampered in its progress. However, as a result of this, many friends were gained, and Jarvis, the English champion, won the cup. Then Mr. W. H. Grenfell, M. P., the acting president of the Society, approached the King on the matter of the presentation of a trophy, and was successful to such an extent that not only did His Majesty give a cup, but promised to be present at the Bath Club to witness the first race. It was decided that for this year the cup should be for swimming, the distances being 220 yards, quarter-mile and half-mile.

The 440 yards race was decided on the 10th instant at the Bath Club in the presence of a very big gallery which included Their Majesties and H. R. H. the Princess Victoria. Appended are details.

Halmay was smartest off the board, and trudging as if it were a sprint, at once showed the way to the other competitors. Billington lay behind him, with Wilson, of Canada, third, and de Cuyper fourth. At the end of the first length, Halmay led by a yard and-a-half, but it was early evident that he could not stay at such a pace. Billington, progressing in his usual method, gradually drew nearer, and after 100 yards took first place, the Hungarian having now lost all his steam. However, he was quite good enough to beat all the others easily In the meanwhile, Billington could hardly go slow enough to make a race of it, and in the end won by forty yards; the same divided second and third; and two yards third and fourth. Laurence D. Phillips, of Sydney, New South Wales, should have started but was too ill to compete.

The second and third races were brought off at the Highgate Bathing Ponds the next day when England again assisted her supremacy by winning all three events. It was generally expected that Jarvis would win the Half-mile, and this he did in quite his best style, the home second string finishing second, but the 220 Yards on the breast was thought to be an open affair, as in that particular branch of natation the Continental swimmers are, generally speaking, greatly in advance of Englishmen. However, in this event, Robinson, the captain of the Liverpool Club, practically an unknown man outside his district, was good enough for all the other competitors and won handsomely. Thus, England was first in all three events, and won the Cup Appended are details :—

The Englishman cut out the work at the start, and immediately took a yard lead of the two Swedes. He increased this as the race progressed, and at the turn was fully ten yards in front of Erikson and Norelius, who were swimming level, Robinson's time for the first lap being 1min 38 sec., and the Swedes 1min 48sec. From thence to the finish the Liverpool man forged ahead, and eventually won easily by thirteen yards, Norelius beating Erikson for second place by five yards. Thirty yards off Biscilici, of Italy, was fourth.

The race calls for little description, as after Halmay had taken a temporary lead, Jarvis drew up and went in front after fifty yards, a position he retained to the end of the race. Halmay kept in front of Curwen for a while, but after 150 yards the English second string came out and took second place, gradually increasing his lead to the end. The Hungarian swam with the greatest determination, and made a very fine show indeed; in fact, that he was the best of all the visiting swimmers there is no doubt whatever. Jarvis won by about 55 yards Curwen being 30 yards in front of Halmay, with Wilson 30 yards behind fourth.

POLO.

INTER-REGIMENTAL TOURNAMENT.

Nearly all London society journeyed to Hurlingham on Saturday the 11th instant, in order to witness the final tie of the Inter-Regimental Tournament, which carries the title of the Army Polo Championship, and the scene at the enclosure was one of the most brilliant in the history of the club. There was a fine array of coaches—some dozen or more—and from the tops of these an excellent view of the proceedings was obtained Grand weather prevailed, and the scene was charmingly picturesque, and one that will long live in the memory of those who were fortunate enough to be present. At four o'clock exactly the band of the Royal Horse Guardes, which was in attendance, struck up the opening bars of the National Anthem, heralding the arrival of Her Majesty the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales and their children, while a few moments later came the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Alexander of Teck, and the Duke and Duchess of Teck. Among other distinguished visitors were Field-Marshal Earl Roberts, Viscount Valentia, and the Earl of Haddington, who has apparently quite recovered from the accident that he met with while judging in the polo pony and hack show three or four weeks ago. As soon as the Royal personages had been conducted to their seats—the bandstand had been tastefully decorated and converted into a Royal box—the match was begun. The teams to meet in the final were: 17th Lancers—Capt. R. Carden, Major A. Tilney, Mr. A. Fletcher, and Col. Douglas Haig (back); Royal Horse Guards—Capt. the Hon. Reginald Ward, the Duke of Roxburgh, Mr. H. E. Brassey, and Capt. the Hon. Dudley Majoribanks (back) Umpires: Mr. C. Nickalls and Mr. W. S. Buckmaster. A fast game was fought out on turf that was in good condition. On the ball being thrown in the Guards broke away in the direction of their opponents' post. Mr. Brassey was ruled off-side, and the Blues paid the penalty by having to hit off from their own goal line. The Lancers took full advantage of this opportunity by keeping play in the quarters of their antagonists until Mr. Fletcher commenced the scoring on their behalf about five minutes from the start. Exchanging ends, the Guards bore down on the Lancers' goal, which was the objective of a smart fusilade, and at length the defence of the latter gave way to a shot by Capt. Ward, who ran the ball through a scrimmage. On resuming, the Guards were penalised for a foul, and subsequently for a "cross," but nothing came of either of the free hits, and when the bell announced the end of the period the Lancers were acting on the defensive. Returning to the field on fresh mounts, the star of the Blues appeared to be in the ascendant, for they were attacking hotly for some minutes, and it seemed only a question of time before the Lancers would again be forced to strike their colours. However, to such advantage were No. 3 and the back seen that danger was averted, and three-parts through the second bout the Lancers came racing down the field, and Capt. Carden gave them the lead, but from this point to the second bell the Blues had the better of the game, w thout being able to improve their position. Early to the third instalment Capt. Ward was given offside, and in consequence his team had to take the willow from their own end, and this resulted in the Lancers going further ahead, Capt Carden judicially riding up and placing the ball between the uprights after the opposing hacks had mis-hit. Thus at half-time the Lancers led by three goals to one. The subsequent play calls for little description. The Blues were continually doing the wrong thing, and their bad combination and hitting was the cause of their missing many good openings. Such a sorry exhibition did they give, indeed, that one failed to realise that this was the same team that gained such a handsome victory over the Inniskilling Dragoons on Thursday last. On one occasion Mr. Brassey rode clear of the field and managed to get another goal, but the point was disallowed through an infringement of the offside rule. This happened in the fourth stage, at which juncture the Lancers had the game well in hand, so well were they playing together. Before the close Major Tilney hit two more goals for his team, who were therefore successful by five goals to one. On the conclusion of the match the players on the winning side were invited to the Royal box, where the handsome trophy was presented by the Duke of Cambridge. A club quartette, constituted by Mr. Wright, Mr. W. Roylance Court, Mr Foxhall Keene, and Mr. Edward Ezra (back), next opposed Burlingame (California), represented by Mr. Walter McCreery, Mr. F. C. G. Menzies, Mr. F. Jay Mackay, and Mr. J. Lawson (back). Capt. F. Blacker umpired. Hurlingham soon took the lead, and won by 6 points to 4.

THE WEASEL.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

WITH what a capricious hand does wanton fortune cast her favours—at times with sordid parsimony, at others with thriftless prodigality. Day after day it was my mournful duty to chronicle a series of de. ressing days till the brilliant run from Lohagaum came like a beam of sunshine on the funereal gloom, and now I have two more excellent days sport to record.

Kalas Ford was the order of the day for the 26th and fired, presumably, by the soul-inspiring accounts of the previous day's gallop a largish field turned up. The weather itself was depressing enough to the keenest heart. A persistent drizzle all the way to the meet and, indeed, for the greater part of the morning which kept one cool—even if not dry—was completely forgiven and forgotten in the excellent sport enjoyed. The hour of meeting has, by the way, been altered finally from 5-30 A.M., to 6 in deference, I hear, to numerous suggestions and truly half a dozen miles or more away from home by the former hour "takes a bit of doing" when men have hard days and late nights to live through as one needs most in the Poona season, so that the Master's gracious compliance in respect to the hour of assembling has met with universal approval. But with 6 o'clock no law can be given to laggards, and on the tick of the hour the Master moved off first trying the river bank along to Kalasgaum. A pair of keen eyes detected the pad spoors of a jack in the mud of a nullah and hounds were laid with commendable promptitude and straightway owned to it. Across the Kalas Dighi cart track, with the Twin Sister hills for his point, the jack headed. But scent was fitful and galloping was as a natural consequence in snatches. But hounds worked the line out beautifully and eventually the jack, looking none too fresh, was viewed by one of the whips, and scent improving hounds ran a rare pace up to and round the brow of the hill. Here a chink diverted the attention of the greater portion of the pack, and seeing that any attempt to stop them must prove futile, the Master wisely determined to take whatever gifts the gods might send him and a delightful gallop was the consequence. Away along the slope (selecting after the instinct of its kind the dry head lands) the cheery little chinkara led hounds and field a merry dance over the dip of the hills and for Dighi Hillock and away to the direction, I hear, of a village called Charholi near the Indryani river. Then anticipating no doubt the danger of the torrent in front and relentless foes behind the sprightly little quarry ran a big ring heading back for his home pastures by the Sister Hills. Twice he lay up in water courses, but whether this was due to weariness or instinctive reservation of strength in view of unpleasant eventualities, I as yet know not enough of Indian venery to say. I am assured by men, whose opinions on sport I have learnt to respect, that a full-grown chink in health and condition takes a deal of catching by foxhounds in this country. One is on its native heath, while that most delicate of high-bred animals, the pure bred foxhound, can never, I gather, reach his highest form in this climate. Be that as it may, the merry little fellow who was the hero of this run, completely beat Colonel Sheringham and his hounds and made good his sanctuary on the smaller of the two hills. A gallant brave hearted little buck and no one can have been sorry that he won the life he ran so well to keep I am told that Colonel Sheringham has declared the ability of his hounds to run a full-grown chink down "fair and square" but others smile and shake their heads.

Meanwhile to return to the jack that set the ball a-rolling: it was said that the few couple of hounds who had resisted the subtle attraction and stuck to lawful business had killed their jack half way up the hill. But information was vague and a bit wavering, and whether they killed a jack or a hare or nothing at all was apparently an open question; surely an inspection and a sniff at hounds' muzzles would have put the matter beyond a doubt.

On the way home hounds got on to the line of another jack and an enlivening little gallop ensued for those that had not already had enough of it, but scent failed and hounds were wisely whipped off and taken to their cart.

How pleasant a task it is to chronicle success. Even the poor sporting scribe can write with a certain degree of confidence. For under such gilt-roseate circumstances no sword of Damocles hangs o'er his head turned grey with care, lest in writing truth he should wound the sensitive feelings of good sportsmen, and on the other hand a natural disinclinat ion to deceive, by honeyed "tarradiddles," a confiding public. And so it is with an easy conscience that I endeavour, for the benefit and edification of those who for one reason or other be it poverty, or an inordinate supply of adipose tissue, or slothfulness, or old age or saddest cause of all loss of nerve—when every fence seemed twice its size—to relate yet another most most excellent morning's sport with Colonel Sheringham on, the 30thJuly. The village of Harapsra on the Sholapur road was the meet and it took more than the little rain there was to keep a large field away after the previous fine day's sport. The fact that the Master was able to show twenty-four couple of hounds speaks eloquently to his Kennel management and a great matter for satisfaction and congratulation, more especially in a climate where I understand lack of knowledge in management leads to such disastrous results. Moving off through Harapsar, hounds were without delay thrown into some likely looking sugarcane in which it was, I believe, a fiver to a gooseberry a jackal would be found and the taker of odds would have had to provide the gooseberry before settling day for a whimper was followed by a joysome response and further confirmed by the soul-inspiring "ga-an-awai" of a watchful whipper in. The field had I believe been skilfully located and hounds slipped away with no fear of being ridden over at the start—that just horror of all Ma-ters in every land—and it was a case of catch em who can. Those who had failed to acquire the gentle art of "getting away" had little chance of repairing the error, for the pace was, I am assured, a cracker and the ground none too elastic—to say nothing of sticky. But there was little time to pick and chose for hounds were carrying great head and scent evidently of the "made to order" sort. After galloping between two and three miles the jack was viewed still going great guns. But so were hounds and they evidently meant having blood that morning, for running from a breast high scent to view they really never gave him any real hope of living to run another day. An intervening canal may have given him one faint flicker of hope, but hounds were on his brush and took no longer to negotiate the water than he did, and the water line was no line of sanctuary and this excellent jack only just topped the further bank when hounds rolled him over. Of those up at the time when the jack was killed I can only hear of the M. F. H. Mrs. Beatty on a bay mare (who generally seems to be there or thereabouts in a fast thing, and is, I have since heard, a wonderful, "lepper," and prize winner); Mr. Armstrong the 1st whip on a breedy looking brown waler mare; Mr. Todd, on a clever little Arab; Mr. Ross on a Varminty country-bred, while others came up at intervals with obvious signs of bellows for repairs.

After a rest, to let man and horse get their winds and the lucky "second horse" folk to change on to a fresh one, the Master moved on to 'coverts new.' A promising looking patch of sugarcane proved disappointing, but after drawing some jowari crops hounds owned to a scent and to the horror of all made for the railway line where a train was seen approaching and "the boldest held his breath for a while" in dread of some terrible calamity to the pack. The driver, however, rose to the occasion like a good man and true and slackened down, and what looked like being a nasty affair was happily averted. With a sigh of relief the field took up the running, hounds running a fair pace to the highlands of this part of the Deccan, and rough going it must have been I gather. A big hill found the field of two minds, some few would have it at all costs, while others skirted it. Away towards the Bapter Ghaut and changing his mind this stout rover bent towards a village called Peesoli as far as I could catch the name. The pace was fair and a timely check let many up who otherwise would have had to ride a stern chase. But the stoutest jack has still his work cut out to escape from Colonel Sheringham and his pack and 40 minutes was insufficient for the escape of this straight-necked one and he died a glorious death such as one likes to think all good jack wish to die. Several were up but no one went better in the run than Mrs. Stockley who, I hear, thoroughly deserved the brush which the Master presented her with, while Miss Anderson and Miss Low also were well up throughout the run. A fine hunting gallop and great hand work it must have been.

Cycling.

CYCLING IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Friday, 17*th July* 1903.

IT it some years now since we witnessed a match between a cyclist and an equestrian, but on reading of a similar event taking place in Yorkshire, our minds were carried back to the days when Jack Keen, on his high bicycle, raced round the old cinder track at the Crystal Palace, whilst the equestrian, with three changes of horses, galloped round the inner circle. But the Yorkshire match was of a different type. An engineer drove his old mare harnessed to an ordinary spring cart a distance of nineteen miles, against a cyclist who conceded him twenty minutes' start. It does not say much for the speed capabilities of the cyclist that the mare not only beat him, but beat him by the handsome margin of fifteen minutes. Although an old animal it could cover the ground, the nineteen miles occupying only 1hr. 32mins.

There is every promise of a capital race on 3rd August, when the Dibble Shield will again be put up for competition at the Crystal Palace. It is a six hour's event, opened to amateurs and which G. A. Olley has only once again to win to make the shield his own property. Tandem pacing will be allowed, and there is bound to be a keen struggle between two at least of the competitors, for there is little doubt that Meredith will be a starter, and after the somewhat personal correspondence which has been going on in the cycle press anent Meredith's win in the Carwardine Cup race there is every promise of a hard fought race. Olley is putting in some, very careful training for the race, and is bound to start a hot favourite.

Jimmy Michael, the famous pace follower, and record breaker, has returned to his home in Wales in order to take a complete rest. He has not been able to get over the effects of his bad spill in Berlin, and his present condition causes his friends considerable anxiety. Michael has made a great name for himself in the cycle racing world, and when under the charge of the late Choppy Warburton was the leading man at the game.

A seasonable warning concerning the riding of cycles on the sea-shore. One often reads of glorious spins at low tide along the hardened sands, but one very rarely hears of the results. Unless the machine is very amply mudguarded and gear-cased and carefully oiled and wiped dry after a ride on the sand, it will be found that the water which has been picked up and thrown in the bearings very quickly stiffens and corrodes the running parts, and, beyond this, there is nothing more fatal to plating than strong sea-air. Any cyclist who goes in for the enjoyment of a spin near the sea-side should be careful to see that his machine is thoroughly well guarded and that when he has finished the ride it is well oiled and cleaned.

The British Empire Championships were decided at the Celtic Park track, Glasgow, on 11th, July and favoured with magnificent weather, a very good muster of spectators put in an appearance. The racing too was good, and of an exciteable nature, the defeat of A. L. Reed in the fourth heat of the quarter-mile championship by R. S. Stewart particularly pleasing the Scotch element which mainly composed the body of spectators. The surprise of the meeting, however, was the fine display of riding achieved by the amateur crack, J. S. Benyon. This rider had never before been known to ride with such dash and judgment, he winning the quarter-mile and one mile events and finishing a good second in the five miles. The five mile championship was won by A. L. Reed who also gained second position in the one mile. The riding of A. S. Ingram was disappointing, he only succeeding in winning third position in the one and five miles' championships.

The Bill introduced by Lord Balfour of Burleigh on behalf of the Government, for the regulation of motor-car traffic, is not likely to satisfy either motorists or motorphobists. The latter section are already up in arms against the abolition of the speed limit, and they also clamour for the licensing of all drivers—owners as well as the paid chauffeur or mechanician. On the other hand, automobilists are dissatisfied with the draconic severity of the penal clauses, by which furious driving may be punished by imprisonment. Moreover there is a large majority amongst motorists who object to any system of numbering cars for the purpose of identification, for they hold that police persecution will be made more easy than it is at present. The great bulk of public opinion appears to be in favour of the Bill, though it is somewhat divided as to the total aboiltion of the speed limit.

With the growing popularity of trailers, more especially in conjunction with motor bicycles the question of brake power again comes prominently to the front, for it is essential in view of the increased weight of a trailer and passenger, that the braking power should be perfect and reliable. At present, brakes are made to actuate on the bicycle; but is it expedient to concentrate all the strain of retardation on the one machine; would it not be better to have a brake attached to the trailer as well? Such a brake might be treated as an emergency brake, to be used on exceptionally steep hills, and manipulated by the occupant of the trailer. We do not remember ever hearing of such a brake being fitted, but we feel sure that many ladies would take more kindly to the trailer if they were assured of security.

One wonders why it is that the special train for cyclists run on Sundays by the London, Brighton and South Coast Railway from Victoria, should receive such poor support from wheelmen, especially as cheap inclusive tickets for passenger and machine are issued to some of the finest spots in Surrey and Sussex. The advantage these trains offer cyclists, of bridging over great Suburbia, is sufficient, one would think in itself, to make the venture of the railway company a success, but we find that such is not the case, and the railway company intimates that unless they receive more patronage the service will cease after this season. We believe the train has not been sufficiently advertised; at least, not in the quarter where travellers are likely to hail from, for if it was generally known amongst London wheelmen, they would be bound to jump at the advantage offered.

Another accident to a cyclist through the careless driving of a motorist has occurred in Warwickshire, resulting in the wheelman sustaining three broken ribs besides bodily disfigurement. The victim was the general manager of a well-known cycle firm, and the accident occurred through the driver of the motor trying to cut through between the cyclist and a reaping machine, and in doing so, catching the back wheel of the bicycle with the splash board. We do not wish to brand motorists, but this we say, if certain members of their fraternity do not mend their ways, the whole body of motorists will be held in disrepute, not only by cyclists, but by all other members of the community. To give credit where credit is due, we would mention that in the accident under notice, the motorist drove the cyclist to his home and has since made numerous enquiries as to his progress.

FOOTBALL IN CALCUTTA.

THE I. F. A. SHIELD.

CALCUTTA vs. A. and S. HIGHLANDERS.—These teams ment for the second time on the 30th ultimo, their first encounter having ended in a draw. A huge crowd turned out last Thursday, when, after a splendid game, the civilian team had a sensational win by a goal to nil. Calcutta started the brel and rushing down forced a corner. A couple of shots well saved by Coventry and then the Highlanders got away, Buckley easily clearing. They came down once more but were checked by Todd, and the Calcutta men brought the ball to the Argyll's quarters, and when half time arrived were having rather the best of it. On resuming the Civilians went away at a great pace and after one unsuccessful attempt the ball was put through by Cooper, amidst the wildest enthusiasm. The Highlanders played up at this reverse, but the Calcutta backs and goal keep were "all there" and they were unable to break through. The Calcutta men kept their lead throughout the remainder of the half winning as stated. Teams.—

CALCUTTA F C.—Buckley, goal; Todd and Gillespie backs; Maunder, Fyfe and Pierson halves; H. Sberman Cooper (Jr.), Cooper (Sr.), V. Sherman and Stewart, forwards.

93RD HIGHLANDERS.—Coventry, goal; Wallace and Silcock, backs; McLean, McGowan and Mowat, halves; Pollock, Lockhart, Quin, Montgomery and Hegg, forwards.

Referee—Mr. Percy Wilder, I. R. A.

THE FINALS.

CALCUTTA vs K. O. S. B's—A huge crowd assembled on the Calcutta ground on Saturday to witness the finals for the shield. The charities amongst whom the gate money was divided should be considerably benefited. The game was a disappointing one and ended in a draw with nothing scored. The Calcutta men seemed off colour, did not put up nearly such a good game as when they met the Highlanders. The Borderers started the game, but Calcutta soon got possession and got away. They were stopped, however, and Byers made a pretty run, the Borderers losing some opportunities in front of goal. They forced a corner which proved abortive and the home team going away in turn obtained a corner. Fast and even play followed till the interval when both teams crossed over with a clean sheet. On resuming Calcutta went away, but the Borderers got the ball and a shot from Bruce went wide. Byers then went away and Calcutta had to concede a corner, and for a while their goal was menaced, but the Dum-Dum men were kept out. Then Calcutta had their turn, and when time was called they were pressing.

On Tuesday the match was replayed and once again no definite result was arrived at. The Borderers scored during the first half through Cassidy, and though Calcutta tried hard they were unable to equalise till well in the second moiety when H. Sherman found the net. Time arrived with no further score and extra time was played. Both teams strove hard, but were unable to add any more points and the game ended in a draw of one all. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Buckley, goal; Todd and Gillespie, backs; Maunder, Fyfe and Pearson, half backs; H. Sherman, V. Cooper, H. Cooper, V. Sherman and Stewart, forwards.

K. O. S. B's.—Atkinson, goal; McDonald and Goldie, backs; Stewart, Tait and Bradley, half-backs; Byres, Bruce, Massey, Cassedy and Cruickshanks, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. P. Wilder.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE high standard of football displayed by both the 93rd Highlanders and Calcutta in the two matches in which they were opponents, more than atoned for the general mediocrity which characterised the games in the earlier stages of the shield competition, and the excitement engendered by the meetings of these two teams expelled the fears which were at one time entertained that the absence of foreign competitors would cause the tournament to lose much of its interest. Two such splendidly contested and exciting matches have seldom, if ever, been witnessed in Calcutta, and there is no doubt that these two games have done more to increase public interest in "soccer" than any number of superfluous competitions would ever have accomplished.

However to commence with the first match of the semi-finals, viz., that between the K. O. S. B. and Howrah, which was played on the Dalhousie ground before a large crowd who were singularly lacking in enthusiasm, due probably to the very indifferent display given by both teams. Rain during the day had made the ground heavy and slippery, but not sufficiently so to account for the slowness of the game, during the first half of which the trans-Hughli team more than held their own. Wood, the Howrah centre forward, was responsible for some good work during this period, and his speed enabled him to repeatedly outpace the opposing backs, but his, and his colleagues attempts to shoot from long range proved futile and showed bad judgment in view of the heavy ball which travelled slowly and thereby gave Atkinson lots of time to clear. The interval arrived with no score, but after the resumption the Borderers had quite as much of the play as their opponents, and during the closing stages they proved themselves immeasurably the better team, eventually winning by 3 goals to love.

Many promising combined efforts on the part of the Dum-Dum forwards were spoilt by Cassidy who played a selfish game throughout and his "gallery" play seldom gained ground. Byers did not have many chances, but on the few occasions when he had opportunities, he proved fast and tricky and scored one of the goals, another being notched by Tait who is indefatigable and quite the best man in the back division. For Howrah, Wood, Kerr, and Smith were the pick of the forwards, but the latter, who is one of the fastest men in the team, was given little to do. Morrow was far and away the best of the backs, in both defence and attack, and his display in this match is the best he has given this season.

An enormous concourse of spectators turned out to witness the first meeting between Calcutta and the 93rd Highlanders which took place on the ground of the former on Wednesday the 29th ultimo. Through various causes the Premier Club were without the services of Cooper, Todd, Walker, and Crawford for whom the younger Cooper, Pierson, Gahan, and Baker were substituted, whilst the Fort team were at full strength. With their side so seriously weakened, few thought that the homesters would stand any chance of success against the redoubtable 93rd, but so magnificently did the substitutes rise to the occasion, that not only were the visitors kept at bay, but Calcutta had, if anything, the best of the game.

During the first few minutes the Highlanders, assisted by the fact that Calcutta were only playing 10 men, pressed and one or two dangerous rushes, combined with miskicking by Baker and Gillespie, looked ominous for the premier Club. Soon afterwards, however, Gahan was pressed into service and from that moment Calcutta settled down to a stubborn defence, with repeated flashes of brilliancy by the forwards. The match ended with the score sheet a blank, and Stewart, exercising his option, rightly declined to play extra time, and it was subsequently decided that the match was to be re-played on the following day.

On Thursday Calcutta were strengthened by the inclusion of both Todd and the elder Cooper in place of Baker and Gahan, but the Fort team were represented by the same eleven as on the previous day. On this occasion Fyffe played centre half and Gillespie returned to his regular place at back. Another close and intensely exciting game resulted, but on this occasion the Calcutta Club were undoubtedly the better team, the half backs and forwards especially proving superior to those of their opponents. The Highlanders played with a listlessness which gave the appearance of their being over-trained—the forwards lacked dash and both the half backs, McLean and Mowat, were quite out of form. Coventry, their custodian, was, on the other hand, at his very best—time after time he brought off seemingly impossible saves, whereas the goal which was eventually scored in no way detracted from his excellent performance.

For Calcutta all played well, but especial praise must be given to Fyffe, Buckley, the two Shermans, H Cooper, and Pierson. Of these Fyffe was without doubt the bright particular star, and the eventual victory of his side by one goal to love was in a great measure due to his untiring efforts and sound judgment, both when breaking up his opponents combination or feeding his own forwards.

The final on Saturday last between the K. O. S. B. and Calcutta was disappointing in the extreme, the standard of play being very poor in comparison with the match on the previous Thursday. The Borderers had their full team, but Calcutta had again to take the field without one of their regular side—Fyffe on this occasion being compelled to stand out owing to an injured foot. Gillespie filled Fyffe's place at centre half and Baker was again drafted into the team. The K. O. S. B. forwards played a much brighter and more combined game than those of their opponents, and the backs, especially Tait, tackled well and kicked with precision. Cassidy, renouncing his usual tactics, gave a very much improved display, and Cruickshank was noticeable for one or two dodgy runs.

Calcutta seriously felt the loss of Fyffe, as Gillespie, who it must be remembered was playing out of his usual position, was far from an efficient substitute, and this appeared to throw the entire team out of gear. Buckley, Pierson, the younger Sherman, and Todd were the only members of the team who played up to their usual from, Sherman, especially during the last ten minutes of the game, doing brilliant work.

A second attempt to arrive at a decision last Tuesday evening resulted in another draw with a goal each.

THE MADRAS HOCKEY TOURNAMENT.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MADRAS, 26th July. In my last notes on this Tournament, I dealt with the first half of the Tournament, and referred to the drawn game between Madras and Bangalore, two teams supposed to have the best chance of looking on at the finals. The drawn game was re-played on Thursday when another terrific stringgle ensued. Both teams played up all they knew, but Bangalore were the first to score and at one time led by 2 goals to nil. In the second half Madras managed to score and then made a supreme effort to equalise. Never at any stage of the Tournament has such splendid play been seen as during those five minutes. The Madras attack was fierce, vigorous, and, withal, scientific; but the Bangalore defence was capital, and Bangalore eventually emerged victorious by 2 goals to one. On the other ground—the M.C.C. ground—the 1st Durham L. I. made sure of a place in the finals by defeating the Middlesex Regiment by 2 goals to one. The game was a slow one and calls for little comment. On Friday the semi finals were played when Bangalore met the Leicesters. On form the result should only have been one way—Bangalore winners and the Leicesters no where. But in Hockey as in other things the unexpected often happens and in this match Bangalore, who ought to have won hands down, were in the end beaten and disgraced. In mitigation the only thing that can be said is that perhaps they were not as fresh as they might have been. Three hard matches during the four previous days was enough to take the fine edge of the temper of their team; but this does not sufficiently account for a team which on paper and on previous form during the Tournament were little than a scratch team gathered together at the Poonamalee Invalid Depôt. Where Bangalore made their great mistake is when they underrated their opponents. They started badly and when they scored their first goal they got worse. When the Leicesters who were playing doggedly and pluckily throughout equalised in the second half, Bangalore tried to put on a spurt, but the task was twice as difficult as if they had started with a rim. Result, the Leicesters held them safe and when time was called the result was drawn, the score being one goal all. Extra time was played when the Leicesters through Lieutenant Creagh, at once scored and made sure of the game by preventing the Bangalore team becoming at all dangerous to the short period left of the extra time. Bangalore lodged a protest against the first goal scored by the Leicesters on the ground that the ball was hit from without the hitting circle, and went through after touching the stick of a Bangalore back, but after hearing the umpire concerned, the Committee disallowed the protest. The finals were played yesterday between the Durhams and the Leicesters when the Light Infantry team upheld the prestige of the 2nd Battalion which won the cup in the two previous years of the Tournament, by beating the Leicesters by four goals to one. Thus ends the Tournament on the whole a very successful and interesting one. I would be the last to suggest that the best team has not won. The Durhams have done their work cleanly and well, disposing of their opponents in the three matches that they have played in no uncertain fashion. Where anticipations have been belied is in the absence of either Madras or Bangalore in the finals; and if the truth must be told the fault lies with those teams I have already criticised Bangalore's temerity in depreciating the Leicesters. Madras, however, were not such flagrant offenders. They could not afford under any circumstances to depreciate Bangalore, but if they had only played against Bangalore in the opening stages with one half of the endeavour they put into the game when there was a chance of pulling it out of the fire, there would have perhaps been a different ending to the Tournament. As matters stand, however, the winners of the Tournament were never tried against either Bangalore or Madras, two teams undoubtedly more worthy of their metal than the others they were called upon to meet.

THE INDIAN SNIPES.

BY F. FINN, B. A., F. Z. S.

THE WOOD-SNIPE.—Gallinago nemoricola, Blanford, Faun, Brit. Ind. Birds, Vol. IV, p. 285. Native names:—Ban-chaha. Napaulese.

This is a large snipe of dark appearance, with comparatively short bill, wings, and tail, the quill-feathers are broad and soft, and on each side of the tail are four very narrow feathers, though the middle pairs are broad; there should be eighteen tail-feathers in all. The upper plumage is a mixture of black and dull buff; the lower white, strongly pencilled with dark brown; the quills are plain dark brown. The bill is dark brown at the end becoming paler towards the base, the legs are grey passing into flesh-colour behind.

This is a big snipe being about a foot long; but the bill and wing are only about as long as in the common or fantail snipe, being about two and a half and five and-a-half inches respectively. The shank is rather long, nearly an inch-and-a-half from hock to toes. Altogether, in size, make, and colour this bird has an appearance intermediate between the Woodcock and the other snipes. It is not a common bird, and is confined to the Indian Empire, where in summer it inhabits the Himalayas between Dalhousie and Sikkim, at elevations of from six to ten thousand feet It is also found in the hills south of Assam, Manipur, and sometimes Burma as far as Tenasserim. In winter it occurs on the hills of Southern India, and a few casual specimens have turned up on migration in various localities—Calcutta, Russelkonda, Sirjuga. Once it has even reached Ceylon. But little is known of its movements, and as it is a shy bird and seldom seen, it may be more widely distributed than is supposed. It flies slowly and heavily, much like a Woodcock, and is easy to shoot; it is solitary, and affects swampy patches on the outskirts of jungle, lying very close, and rising reluctantly and in silence as a rule, though it appears sometimes to utter a hoarse croak. It does not seem to feed much upon worms, rather affecting grubs and other insects, especially small black beetles; small black seeds have also not unfrequently been found in its stomach. It is believed to breed in our hills, but the authenticity of the eggs hitherto attributed to it is questioned. Altogether, few of our game species need more study than this bird.

THE HIMALAYAN SOLITARY SNIPE.—Gallinago solitaria Blanford, Faun. Brit. Ind. Birds, Vol. IV, p. 290. This is also a big snipe slightly exceeding a foot in length, with a wing of six-and-a half inches, and bill two and three-quarters. The shank, however, is less than one-and-a-half, not longer than that of the Pintail Snipe, which on a larger scale, this bird much resembles.

The upper parts are a particularly mixed mottling of black, buff, and white, showing more of the last colour than most snipes; but the details of the markings are rather variable. The underparts below the breast are white, barred with dark brown on the flanks. The tail-feathers may be as many as two dozen or as few as sixteen, but in any case some of the outer pairs are stiff and narrow. Those pin-feathers are white with dark brown bars, whereas in the Wood-snipe they are plain brown. This point, with the longer bill and clear white belly, will easily distinguish the present bird from the Wood-snipe, with which it is frequently confounded. One has only to see specimens of the two, however, to observe the difference, the wood-cocky" look of the Wood-snipe being unmistakeable.

This is an East-Asiatic bird, ranging from Eastern Central Asia to Japan, with us it is found all along the Himalayas, and in winter has been got at their bases, at Kelat in Baluchistan, on the Garo and Khasi hills, and near Dibrugarh; once, even, near Benares and near Devala in the Wynaad. It probably often gets passed over as a big Pintail, which it resembles in its flight and movements; when roused, also, it goes off with a harsh screeching version of a common Snipe's call. It frequents open country, and feeds on grubs and insects. It breeds in the Himalayas, commencing in May; the males then soaring up with a sharp call, and coming down with spread tails and quivering wings, making a harsh buzzing sound. This is much what the common snipe does, but the noise made by the Solitary is shriller and louder, though it descends more slowly. It would be interesting to know what particular antics the Wood-snipe plays at this time. The eggs of the Himalayan Solitary Snipe are very characteristic of the species, being pinkish buff with blotches and spots of chocolate and purple. It seems that eggs formerly attributed to the Wood-snipe really belong to this species.

STRAY NOTES.

BEAVERS are said to be greatly on the increase in certain parts of Canada. The Secretary of the Tourilli Sporting Club, which holds land in the St. John's Country, Tanquenay

Quebec, says: "This year the increase has become alarming, and to-day innumerable lakes, streams, and rivers have been dammed by these hard-working and interesting animals. I may note a few remarkable cases, such as the damming of Lake George. This large sheet of water, 12 miles in circumference, has been raised four feet above its ordinary level. Tourilli River has been dammed at three different points, at one place 120ft. wide. On the west branch and many other points small streams have been dammed and our trails swamped. A large number of small lakes heretofore offering excellent feeding-grounds for caribou now present glistening sheets of water in lieu of long grass."

The report that eagles have been observed in the North of England has inspired the St. James's Gazette to relate several yarns concerning the strength of these birds. It must be said that ornithologists do not credit the courage or strength of the eagle, but there are several stories told which controvert these ideas. For instance, Sir Osbert Mordaunt's father was witness of a strange battle between an eagle and a stag, which completely dispels any theory that the ornithologist may put forward as to eagles not attacking large animals. The bird singled out from a herd one particular buck, which it succeeded in driving from the rest. It struck the animal repeatedly with its powerful wings, knocked it down, and finally killed it. Baron Schroeder witnessed a still more remarkable spectacle. An eagle attacked the calf of a hind, which was one of a herd in the Highlands. The cries of the little one were answered by its dam, which sprang upon the eagle and struck it repeatedly with its forefeet. Calf, hind, and eagle rolled headlong down a declivity, and the bird was dislodged from its hold and the kid rescued. But Sir Kenneth Mackenzie knows a more thrilling story than either of these for, according to report, an eagle was rent in two during a battle in his forest of Gairloch. Fixing its talons in the quarters of a roe, the bird was dashed against a tree, to a branch of which it endeavoured to hold, to stay the flight of its captive. The bird was halved in an instant.

A nesting swan, or one with cygnets, as most people are aware, is inclined to resent the intrusion of strangers, and sometimes their attacks can be really dangerous, as a correspondent points out. He says: "Some years ago I was swimming in a Sussex stream, when suddenly a swan swooped down upon me, and struck me a blow between the shoulders. Turning on my back to kick at him, I was dealt a blow above the breast-bone, the bruise of which painted my pectoral region all the colours of the rainbow. Had I not been near the bank, and able to seize the roots of an overhanging alder bush, and so scramble out, I should have most certainly been drowned. As I had previously driven this bird and his brood away from the place where I wished to swim, I do not desire to complain of his conduct; but merely to draw attention to his craft in concealing himself round the corner until I was well in the water, to the undoubted force of his blows, and to the need of caution when bathing near a brood of these powerful birds."

The Story Teller

THE PLUNGER.

PEOPLE said that Watson made a large sum of money, when his horse, The Plunger, won the Lawn Stakes. Well, and if he had! surely it was his own affair, but then they added, that he decamped with it all, leaving his numerous creditors lamenting it was really too bad. He that always was so anxious to pay them, never knew a man more so. I have seen him moved almost to tears when explaining to some more importunate member, that it was beyond his powers to square up. Now they are wrong, all of them, he did not win anything, the very reverse, he was therefore not in funds when he went, I think I should know, seeing that besides owning a small share in The Plunger (part of the near hind leg I believe) I had one or two horses training in the same stable, Gilders'. Let me tell the truth of the matter: Watson & Gilder from being owner and trainer, had in time become fast friends, and partners on the quiet. W. knew G. for what he was, a good fellow, a wonderfully clever trainer, a capable jockey, and straight, as much as any how as it is possible to be for a man who has to make both ends meet at the game. Only millionaires can run their horses to win every time. Well the stable got into a run of awful luck, good things just went down, horses out for a gallop won unexpectedly, I was hit myself. W. I know was in very low water. Desperate at last he and G. determined to risk the sea voyage and send two ponies down to C. where, providing no i l effects from the journey, they could not well lose They swept the board, and thanks to the fatuity of some people backing local animals, with an easily-made reputation, they got very fair prices, and won a good stake. And then with what was left of the money, after squaring up, The Plunger was bought. You see, he always paid when he had the money to do it with.

Poor old Plunger, a most sorry looking animal he looked when walked into the sale ring at Cook's auction. His shipper had refused several good offers for him, then came fever, and now he was going for what he would fetch, we got him very cheaply, and in Gilder's hands he soon began to mend, and once well he never gave an anxious moment. I remember well the day we tried him, one of those misty mornings it was, when the fog hangs late. G. rode The Plunger, and a native boy was on Bardley, a horse just rather more than useful. W. and I. stood at the Grand Stand, trying to make them out, when bang they came out of the mist, with a suddenness that struck one. The native boy was riding hard, G. sitting tight. The Plunger won anyhow. We knew then we had a real good 'un. Unfortunately early as we were out some one else had also been up betimes, seen the gallop, and told Bayers, a rival trainer with a reputation not altogether savoury. Had he only known we decided to make the Lawn Stakes our race! There were about 20 entries, but the only horse with any chance of beating us, and we thought it a small one, was a mare belonging to Bayers named Muslin.

The day came round on which our fortunes were to be retrieved. The P. was as well as could be and trained to the hour, we looked forward to success confidently. We picked up a bit on the first two races, and then came ours, we had a last look at the horse and then went to the ring. Judge of our surprise, disgust, and mortification, it meant so much, to find our animal a hot favourite. I could not understand it. I knew G never gave anything away, we had done nothing in public no one we fondly imagined had seen him do anything on the training track; then an idea struck me. Muslin, who on public form had a great chance, was out at tens, and I knew Mr. B. never let a good thing run loose, and to him I thought it must have appeared as such. What did this mean? Could they have seen or heard of that trial? I went to a bookmaker who was usually willing to give me any information he could, in confidence of course. "Who's backing our horse" I asked him. "Well" he said, "you need not say I told you," but it is "Bayers' man," and they are backing their own to be placed for a little, one of their games on I suppose. I saw the whole thing in a flash, they had seen the trial, knew we must win, and had got into the market before us. I found Watson at once, told him what I had found out. Never were two madder men, it was such a low down game. We neither of us ever cared about buying money and could not think what on earth we should do; then I offer no excuse for what I did, I acted on the spur of the moment; rushed out of the ring, found G just mounting, told him how things were, and said "For God's sake lose somehow, get left, anything." He nodded, he was standing in with us, and was I fancy a bit pushed himself, or he would never have done it.

I then flew back to the ring found W. and we proceeded to back Muslin, I for all I had. W. the same, with a great deal more he had not added. We must win we thought with our horse out of it. B. backing Muslin for a place showed he had the same idea as ourselves, namely, that only The Plunger could beat him. The starting bell rang in the "Tote," and we went to see the race, not a little excited, as you can well imagine. The P. did get left, more by accident than by design, I still like to think, for he whipped round the moment the gate went up I knew he was not much used to it G. got him round and started in pursuit so as to make a show of some kind. He seemed so absolutely out of it that I stopped looking at him, and followed Muslin intently. On they came, the mare going well, and lying very handy, as they came to the bend into the straight. I made sure she was going to win and looked to see what G. was doing. I almost dropped. He was overhauling his field at a tremendous pace. The P. seemed in fact out of hand. At the Cup starting post he was 5th, I saw G. had forgotten everything, in the pure love of riding a great horse in a good race. The next moment I had myself, and W. also, I think, for we both started to shout and yell, as if we wished for nothing better in the world than to win. Muslin's jockey was also riding for all he was worth, could not afford with his reputation to do otherwise in front of the stand With only a few yards to go, they were neck and neck, then G. with a tremendous effort got The P. in front. A short head the verdict was; we ran down the steps, led the horse in, shook hands with G. "By Jove" said W. "That was a great race, is'nt he a game one." "Yes Sir, better than I had any idea of." "Might win the Cup" began poor W. and then, I think, we both remembered at the same time, what this all meant. W. turned a little pale, and went on "But I am afraid G, old man, that this is the end." I'm beat now, been an ass, gone wrong at the end, or meant to any how, its all the same, and its got to be paid for, thank goodness there is the War, the blessed War, it s saved many a man now its my turn." We saw him off that night, G. and I, a passenger in a cargo boat to Durban. He soon got his commission and good luck to him, a better chap I never knew. Ah, well, I am a trooper myself now. Rum world is it not? Facilis descensus Averni.

The Garden.

"THE ORCHID JUNGLE."

OUR old friend, Mr. S. P. Chatterjee, the eminent florist, is a man of pleasant surprises. Few who visit his up-to-date nursery and gardens at Narcoldangah fail to carry away impressions of pleasurable astonishment at what is there presented for their delectation Years ago, with his orchid houses, his ferneries, palmeries, croton and foliage plant houses, his flower beds and all the surroundings of the modern, progressive florist, it seemed to us that Chatterjee had reached his limit. Not a bit of it: he went far afield and acquiring a very large piece of ground at Baidyanath on the E.I.R. transformed it into the lovely garden whence he draws his seemingly inexhaustible supply of roses, annuals and the choicer flowers that play such an important part in Calcutta's big society functions. A visit to Baidyanath some years ago convinced us that Messrs. S. P. C. & Co. had in the accomplishment of this enterprise, carried their business operations as far as they could go. Mistaken again! We now find "S. P." Senior bobbing up serenely at Mihijam, a picturesque spot a hundred and fifty miles from Calcutta and completely eclipsing all his previous efforts in the magnitude of the scheme upon which he is now busily engaged.

The "Orchid Jungle" is the appropriate name selected for the estate for orchids, even the rarer imported varieties, grow out of doors in a way calculated to turn green with envy the orchid raiser in less favoured climes. It faces the main road about 100 yards from Mihijam Railway Station (E.I.R.), is a mile in length and a mile and a half in depth, and the owner is in treaty for a another large slice of land which adjoins it. The estate is at present densely wooded, Sal, Mhowa, Sissoo predominating, and the value of the timber alone is considerable. It is on undulating ground with a gradual descent towards the north, and one of its chief features is the practically inexhaustible water-supply. A other is the extraordinary fertility of the soil in which almost everything grows as in the best parts of Ceylon. The very sticks put in to support plants often themselves begin to sprout! The climate is, even at this season of the year, pleasant, and in the cold weather it is downright bracing.

The view from one of the little hills on the estate is simply charming. The "Orchid Jungle" lies below with its refreshing verdure all around, its avenues opening up fresh vistas of beauty, its deep shady nooks, its cool grots and mossy dells with mountain streamlets trickling along sandy courses or tumbling over moss covered boulders into pools fringed with silver and other fern, and overhung with creepers growing in almost aggressive luxuriance. Here and there are level areas which suggest sites for fairy cottages; anon great mounds of rock, for the property is rich in stone; on some of the terraces under cultivation are rice, dall and other grain and seed crops. And the babbling of the brooks serves as an accompaniment to the "wild-wood notes of duty" from many feathered throats or the hum and chirp of the tiny workers lower down in the natural scale who seem to have an irresistible inclination to burst into song—and (collectors please note) Mihijam teams with insect life from the gaudiest butterfly to the humblest little beetle. On every side stretch the emerald rice fields terraced on the rising ground which away in the distance merge into the Sonthal hills with Panchkote well standing out from his smaller brethren and old Parishnath looming dimly in the far horizon towards Barrakur. And here and there we catch glimpes of the little river that winds among the valleys and further on runs into the Roopnarain.

Retracing our steps we climb up the slopes and find ourselves on the plateaux where Mr. Chatterjee's jovial, tireless Sonthal gangs work among the gay flower beds, the orchards and vegetable gardens, in which are raised some of the choicest varieties to be found in the catalogues of home and American seedsmen.

We have referred to the orchids: it would open the eyes of those who go in for them to see how they thrive here, and though large houses are being built for their accommodation, Mr. Chatterjee is confident that he will raise many kinds out in the open, in the nooks and dells aforesaid, with as little trouble and attention as are required by the commoner ferns. The resources of the "Orchid Jungle" appear almost unlimited—abundant timber and stone water galore, a rich, climate and other natural advantages specially suited to the operations of the florist—and in two years an immense amount has been accomplished. But much remains to be done and to this task Mr. Chatterjee intends to address himself closely for the next few years.

Here in this pretty spot he with labour will a free hand, backed by the experience his other enterprises have given him, and supplemented by the special knowledge imbibed in his travels. And some day he will create in distant Mihijam a sylvan paradise that may challenge Calcutta's Botanic Gardens while boasting certain features due to its peculiar natural advantages and which anything in Calcutta can never aspire to rival

MORE OF UGANDA.

MAJOR AUSTEN'S book was written with the object of describing the events of the Soudanese mutiny, which interrupted the work of exploring the country north of Mount Elgon, and the explorations which were continued after the outbreak was suppressed. We must confess that an endeavour to follow the operations of three distinct columns has not left upon our minds a very clear idea of the whole of the unfortunate and anxious business, comparable in some respects to the Indian mutiny on a small scale; but operations conducted abreast of one another by independent forces against a common foe are notoriously difficult to describe, more particularly we conceive when the writer's anxiety to render justice to his fellow-workers has to struggle with the vivid recollection of matters which came under his personal observation. Accepting the book as a contribution to the literature of travel in a region which must ere long become more accessible as Uganda proper becomes colonised we find in it much to interest us.

Whatever the traveller's mission in Africa sport is practically forced upon him and whenever graver considerations permitted the author took advantage of his opportunities. It is interesting to see that the policy of creating reserves is producing effect: on an early page Major Austen remarks on the abundance of game on the Athi plains, now a reserve, and shows that this same abundance is fully appreciated by lions which are both numerous and bold. Glancing at the same district on his return journey he says: "As we crossed the game reserve between Nairobi and the Atti River game was extraordinarily plentiful and apparently quite aware that they were on holy ground, for they were most confiding, and showed little signs of fear on the approach of the caravan." Having regard to the circumstance that this district lies on the direct route between Mombasa and the Lakes, and has probably been shot over as often as any region in Central Africa, this tameness of the game shows a wonderful readiness to realise safety.

Familiarity with man seems to have had the effect of inspiring the lion with contempt; their boldness appears to be something incredible. We can well understand a solitary sentry being bowled over, but only those who were engaged on the construction of the railway have a real knowledge of their extraordinary coolness and impudence. One anecdote is worth repeating to illustrate the "reign of terror" under which the unfortunate coolies lived:—

"While we were still at Mombasa a horrible scene was enacted at this small changing station (Voi). It appears that the wife of one of the employé's and her husband were occupying a small tent some little distance from the station when, during the night, a lion entered, seized her husband from his camp bed and dragged him out. Her screams attracted the attention of the sentry who fired, and the brute made off, relinquishing his victim. The poor woman then proceeded to bathe the mutilated head of her husband in a basin of water, when the lion again entered and literally lapped up the blood-stained water in the basin! She was so paralysed with fear that she could not utter a sound, and nearly lost her reason through the awful situation in which she now found herself. The lion was eventually driven off, but the wretched man had already been killed."

A curious incident which came under the immediate notice of Mr. Patterson, one of the railway officials who went to Uganda from this country indicates that the lion makes a strong distinction between white man and black. Mr. Patterson had been entertaining a friend at dinner and the friend left his quarters preceded by his servant carrying a lantern. The lion, a notorious man-eater, as he proved to be, attacked and knocked down the European ; then, apparently recognising that he had made a mistake, left him and secured the negro !

Dealing as it does, largely with the operations against the Soudanese rebels, (who were actuated by the idea of setting up a Mahomedan kingdom of their own in Uganda and not by any real or imaginary grievance) Major Austen's book necessarily differs a good deal from the ordinary run of books on African travel. It is full of adventure and incident and if not conspicuous for literary finish is eminently readable. We may doubt whether the vast game regions between Elgon and Lake Rudolf will be much disturbed for many years to come owing to the difficulties of feeding a caravan. If, as Mr. Austen says, it were possible to train a hundred men to live on roots, one could go anywhere in Africa ; it is the dependence of porters on cereals that circumscribes the explorer's scope of operations and in still greater degree the necessarily more leisurely work of surveying.

The protection of game over large areas coupled with the exemption of the lion must be fruitful of effect in the near future, and as the fertile regions of Uganda are brought under cultivation, the game regulations must, in the interests of the cultivator, be relaxed. Then, for a time at least, the country north of the Victoria Nyanza and the slopes of Mount Elgon will be a sporting paradise which, we need not fear, will be shot out. The vast "hinter land" offers a retreat to the game which when harried will change its habitat for districts whither man cannot follow it and carry on sustained persecution.

Sporting Notes.

THE first Monsoon Meeting provided a good day's sport in spite of the heavy going resulting from the recent rain. Fields were, on the whole, eminently satisfactory, and though, as is inevitably the case at the opening meet, the favourites did not in the majority of cases justify their support, still backers had not a bad day on the whole, as two warm favourites rolled home in the last two events ; while in the first a well-supported second favourite won by far enough to make her backers wish they had pawned their wardrobes to augment their investments. The finishes were not, for the most part, particularly exciting, and the closest of them—Springlock's win by half a length—might we think without difficulty have been extended had his jockey thought it necessary.

One or two of the starts were very ragged, notably the Pony Trial Plate and the Maiden Horse Plate, but the full acquirement of the art of starting a field of horses on level terms is, like the building of Rome, not accomplished in a day, and in justice to the starter it must be added that in the Maiden Plate he had two or three very unruly brutes to deal with. A good thing was possibly upset, however, when Sweet Talk was left ten lengths at the post.

Sweet Talk was the street corner tip for the first race, though we believe that her owner did not greatly fancy her chance in the deep going. Little Doris was also warmly supported, though there were doubts as to her behaviour at the start. It happened, however, that she got well away, was never collared, and won, pulling up, by twenty lengths.

A field of seven went to the post for the hurdle race, of whom Mulwala and Kittylea were most fancied. Some delay was occasioned at the post by the vagaries of Uma, who seems a bit of a mad horse, but eventually the flag fell to a good start and Dundonald and Bushey went to the front. At the first flight Bushey slipped as he took off, and crashing into the hurdle fell and broke his neck, death being instantaneous. From the stand it looked as though his rider were killed also, as the horse in falling rolled over him : but though a bit shaken no great damage was done. While on this subject we may once more endeavour to emphasise what we have alluded to so often before, to wit, the necessity of more cinders in front of the hurdles in this sloppy weather. We prophesied that neglect in this matter would result in grief, and now it has cost the life of a good horse.

A field of nine faced the machine for the Maiden Horse Plate, or rather it would be more correct to say that six faced the machine, while the remaining three declined to have any dealings with it whatsoever. One of these was Euryalus who had gone out a hot favourite, but whether his chance was as good as was supposed, he completely destroyed it by his display of temper at the post. Actress, who was second favourite at fours could get no nearer than fourth, the race being won very easily by Gassima with Oom Paul second and Sunshine third.

For the Stand Plate a hot favourite rolled home in Western Queen who won in a common canter by four lengths from Yellow Mantle, First Guide securing third money.

Only five went to the post for the last race which was won by the favourite Springlock, well ridden by Hard, the second favourite Altamas being half a length away. Kellnerin who was tipped in most of the papers as the probable winner, made no show, being last but one.

There is one little matter to which, on the representation of several race-course habitues, we would like to draw the attention of the executive of the C. T. C., and that is the absence of anything like proper shelter for the book-makers and punters. The present arrangements do not include any sort of light canvas or matting roof to protect the poor bookie working hard at his business or temper the burning rays of the afternoon sun to the sweltering investor. A temporary erection such as we suggest would be a boon to all and render still more enjoyable the comfort of the Grand Stand when the investments have been made and the field glasses are brought into requisition.

The Calcutta Subscription Rooms, for which the bookies and those who like their little flutter have to thank Mr. Atkinson, were opened last Monday with every promise of of success. They occupy the entire top flat of No. 7-2 Wellesley Place, are airy, light, and furnished with a careful eye to the requirements of those who will transact their business therein. The big hall, intended for the use of subscribers only, is liberally supplied with electric fans and lights ; writing and reading tables and easy chairs, etc., are handy everywhere ; there is a retiring room, an office and a public room in which those who do not belong to the rooms can settle their business with the book-makers, and altogether, from its central situation and the undoubted convenience it represents to layers and backers alike, the venture should be well supported. It has our best wishes for its success. Messrs. Atkinson and Co., Charlie Goldspink, J. Hamilton, J. Pymm, and R. Pymm were on hand ; and we are glad to learn that they are sanguine of accomplishing their end.

Tuesday morning saw some schooling on the Calcutta course, Altamas (late Lochaber) going a full school "on his lonesome," with Garrard up. He seems a fair lepper, but appears to want a little assistance from the "persuaders" in making up his mind. The Captain (Bond) and another (Hard) went a full school over the pony hurdles, the former falling at the last flight but one. Rumour has it that Bond dislocated his shoulder in the fall, but we trust that the damage may prove to have been exaggerated. Metalwing, Yuletide, Warrigal and Mocassin from Mr. Cowper's string were all sent along, the rest doing slow work. Moss Rose we saw go a sprint down the straight, looking very fit and well after her gallop on Saturday.

One or two of Garrard's lot were out spinning, but on the whole not much fast work was indulged in. The going was fairly good as regards the ground, but we devoutly trust that the weather will be deemed sufficiently settled to cut and carry the luxuriant hay crop on the monsoon course before next Saturday, said crop being now a foot or so high.

The Dacca prospectus is published among our Turf announcements to-day. The dates are the 7th, 9th and 12th January 1904, a month later than last year and a more convenient selection we venture to think. The programme follows the lines of last year in most respects and with Messrs. Garth and Holder as Joint Honorary Secretaries prospects of good sport and the usual excellent arrangements seem assured.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes :—A full description of the Bangalore polo tournament which has just been concluded with signal success, should appear in your issue of the 13th. A couple of curious points cropped up during the tournament, one of which at least will, I believe, go up to the I. P. A. for decision although it made no difference to the eventual result of the game in which it occurred. This point is as follows : A defending player can just save a goal but cannot clear. He saves the goal and in doing so scores a subsidiary for the attacking side Query—does the defending side in addition to the subsidiary against them incur a penalty for hitting behind their own line ? Many different opinions were expressed, but, on the whole, the "ayes" seemed to have it. The other point occurred in the match between the IVth Hussars and the Q. O. Sappers and Miners. "Off-side" was claimed against the Hussars and allowed by the umpire, but at the moment a Sapper who had hastily retired to change ponies during the progress of the chucker, was just coming on to the ground again, and from his position technically put the Hussars "on-side" again. Here the "noes" predominated over the "ayes," it being considered that the Sapper in question was, from a practical point of view, not in play. However there the question is, for polo players to consider.

A wire from Colombo tells us that the opening day of the August Meeting was a great success. The Governor's Cup was won by the favourite Gabelle, who beat Regalia by a neck, with Auster third. Herbert won the Omnium Stakes, Boverie the Lawyers' Purse, Tirah the Desert Stakes, Caloola the Bachelors' Purse and Bros the Griffin Derby.

The Finals in the Bangalore Polo Tournament came off on the 8th instant, the 4th Hussars beating the Carabineers "A" team by 5 goals and 1 subsidiary to 2 goals 4 subsidiaries.

The First Entries for the Poona Races and Steeplechases are most gratifying and judged by them we should see some first-class racing next month. A cursory glance through the columns of names reveals many new ones in every class. The big pots of the meeting will be contested by classic fields for India. In the Western India Stakes are Acetine, who ran second for the Viceroy's Cup a now much improved horse, and a host of old Cup rivals. Presbyterian is among the entrants and it is evident that he is to be trained over a distance ; his real forte, however, is sprinting, though he has put up a wonderful record over a mile at home. Milos will make his first appearance in this event, and it will be interesting to see how he shapes. Why is old Leonidas entered for this event ? In the other big horse events also several new names appear, notably Dr. Barnado, while the Sultan of Johore has entered those smart horses Myosotis and Pepper Corn, lately the property of Mr. Barney Allen. While there are a few new names among the horses, there are a very large number of ponies which have but recently been imported. Among these in the International Stakes are :—Tragedian, Russley Rose, and S. P. owned by Mr. Bass. And other new names appear in the Coronation Stakes, viz. :—The Clump, Golightly, Come Back, Rifleman and Pride of Dharamtolla, while one also notices Western Queen, Rezia and Good Chap among the recently imported ponies. The races for second-class English and Colonial horses have all filled well and the C.-B. races will provide some good racing. Mr. J. B. has been breeding from Nobleman at Poona. We shall see what this stock is worth when Noble Eye and Miss Ascot meet the Northern and Southern India C.-B.'s. These two are clean bred both sides, and if blood counts for anything, should gallop fast enough in any company, although only three-year olds which will give them a great pull in the weights. We expect the second entries will swell this class as we miss the names of Mr. Jack Scott's smart performers. With regard to Arabs their name is legion and all the Arab races have filled exceedingly well as indeed they always do.

The Governor's Cup, Poona Derby, etc., will be contested by very large fields and the pony events promise equally well.

We regret to hear of an accident to Captain Greville, Military Secretary to His Excellency Lord Northcote. While playing polo at Poona on the 4th instant his pony slipped and rolled over him. No bones were broken, but he had slight concussion of the brain and was badly bruised. We are glad to hear, however, that he is progressing favourably and was able to attend the Poona races.

Messrs. W. Newman and Co. of Calcutta have in the press a new edition of that excellent work The Anglers' Handbook, a volume of reference which no fisherman in this country can afford to be without. The compilation of a book of this kind embracing as it does the fishing to be had from Kashmir to Southern India and from Assam to Bombay is necessarily a serious undertaking; but if fishermen will only assist with information and suggestions, the value of the work will be much enhanced. Verb sap.

Madras is giving Calcutta a lead in a matter to which we have in this paper and elsewhere frequently drawn attention, namely, the destruction of our surplus pariah dogs. A lethal chamber experiment is being tried by the S. P. C. A. down there, and on this subject the Madras Mail writes as follows:

The temporary apparatus which the President (the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Boddam) has had constructed for the painless destruction of dogs, is in the form of a large wooden chamber, 36ft. long, 30ft. wide, and 35ft. high, lined with zinc. The chamber is closed all round except at the top, through which a cage, in which the dogs are previously placed, is introduced, and the door then closed. The chamber has been constructed for the purpose of experiment, but it is intended to build a permanent air-tight brick chamber as soon as the land is acquired for the Home for Lost and Starving Dogs. In fact the President has already had a large charcoal stove made for the permanent chamber, whose stove has just been constructed and is ready for use.

There are two modes by which dogs and other small animals may be put to death painlessly in the lethal chamber, namely, one by anæsthesia, which is death by sleep, and the other by asphyxia, which is death by deprivation of air. The former process is a very expensive one. The narcotic vapour is generated by boiling chloroform in a kettle and the vapour passed through a pipe leading from the kettle into the chamber. Before the dogs are placed in it, the chamber can be fully charged with the vapour. The dogs in the cage are then rapidly introduced and anæsthesia is induced in a minute, when the reservoir of the chamber is properly charged, and death usually occurs in three minutes.

The other process is the destruction of dogs by carbonous oxide gas, which is far cheaper than the former method. Charcoal gas is generated in a stove, and the gas passed through a pipe carried from the stove into the chamber. Some time after the stove has been burning, the dogs in the cage are put into the chamber through the door at the top, which is at once closed. In a very short time the dogs become insensible and cease to breathe, but the chamber is not opened for eight or ten minutes, in order to make sure that life is entirely extinct. The gas being heavier than the air, remains in the chamber and can be utilised again. This process has been successfully experimented with by the officers of the Society.

The Committee hoped to have been able to start the temporary Home by this time, but the subscriptions that have come in amount to only Rs. 2,315, which will hardly pay for the land alone. All dog-lovers, who have not as yet subscribed, are earnestly requested to do so, in order that the requisite sum of Rs. 5,000 may soon be subscribed, and the brutal practice of clubbing dogs to death in the public streets be stopped.

The cossetting and coddling of the so-called wild fowl in the British preserves, especially in the southern English counties, is credited with having generated a disease pretty closely allied to enteric fever in human beings, few sporting home papers being without reference to it. Opinions are divided as to the primal cause of the malady; some attributing it to deleterious ingredients in the artificial food so freely given in these days; others, though unable to account for the origin, maintaining that at any rate infection is spread by overcrowding. Probably both are to a certain extent right, for in the first instance though the foods supplied by reliable houses may be depended on, in these days of universal adulteration, a whole host of cheaper imitations have either been imported or concocted within the country, with much the same result attending similar frauds in the case of the celebrated Dobbin's greaves for dogs some seventy years ago, when it came to light that putrid offal and damaged meal was the cause of the "hound cholera" that nearly put an end to hunting throughout the United Kingdom. But when we read of shootings under 300 acres of woodland advertised for the coming 1st October with a guarantee of 6,000 birds, the overcrowding theory is well sustained. The sarcasm conveyed in Leech's cartoon of the "ferocious pheasants" might well apply in these days. We are not likely to be troubled here as to artificial food, but our acclimatisation societies bent on importing foreign game birds, should be on their guard against introducing infected stock.

A Fishing Society has been inaugurated in Nagpur, the first, in the annals of that town. The scene of action is the Ambajharry Lake and the Telinkheri Tank.

No one expected that the Chinese and Tibetian officials deputed to meet our's for settlement of issues on the frontier would be up to time; it is not in their nature. But from all accounts our officers will be able to beguile the weary monotony of waiting with a little shikar among novel animals and in a decidedly novel region, though the exertion of chasing the snow leopard or stalking the thar at an elevation of 15,000 feet may try both wind and limb. We trust for the benefit of future hunters the inevitable blue book will contain a chapter or two on the subject our readers are more interested in than what is certain to prove a dreary record of political dissimulation so characteristic of the "heathen Chinee."

The terrible accident which has led to the absence of D. Maher from the saddle deprived the riding of the week ending 17th July of a considerable amount of interest, and it is sad to think that so accomplished a horseman cannot follow his profession for some time to come. He has achieved a prominent position in the list of winning jockeys, in which his name is bracketed for sixth place with that of Watts, and they are included in the lot who have won 30 races or over. Lane continues to hold his place well, and is now (with 69) a dozen in front of Halsey, while Madden, who had the distinction of riding Ard Patrick in his memorable race for the Eclipse Stakes, is not far behind. The changes to record this week are few, but it may be noted that E. Wheatley, the Baumber apprentice, has gone a step or two higher in the weekly table appended hereunder :—

Note Book, dealing with the subject in The Sportsman to hand this week writes :—

"I never remember to have seen three horses more perfectly trained, and Blackwell, Darling, and Taylor had every reason to be proud of their respective charges. Ard Patrick had evidently done plenty of work since his triumph in the Princess of Wales's Stakes, and looked all the better for being considerably lighter than he was upon that occasion. When I write that Sceptre looked even better than she did at Ascot, I cannot give higher praise, and it is quite certain that Rock Sand has never been in quite such trim as he was yesterday. The last-named always easily held the premier position in the betting, but, whilst he and Sceptre shortened in price, Ard Patrick drifted out, until 5 to 1 was easily obtainable about him. The parade, which was led by Ard Patrick, and naturally brought up by Sceptre, was watched with the keenest interest, and I think that the filly went best, and Rock Sand worst, in the preliminary canter, though no attention was paid to the scratchy style of going of the son of Sainfoin, to which we are now thoroughly accustomed. I have written nothing about Duke of Westminster or Oriole, as both of them, though useful enough in their way, were out of place in a race of this character. The latter, however, carried out her mission of pace-maker in satisfactory fashion, although she might have gone considerably faster with advantage in the first half mile. Any shortcomings is this respect, however, were amply atoned for when they were once in the line for home, and the winner only missed breaking the record for the race by a fraction of a second. As they reached the bend, Rock Sand and Ard Patrick were lying close together, the former being slightly in advance, but, whilst he seemed to take a rather wide sweep, Mr. Gubbins' colt was beautifully handled by Madden, and obtained the advantage of the inside berth. More than a quarter of a mile from home Martin was hard at work on Rock Sand, and he soon dropped away, leaving the issue to the two four-year-olds. Opinions differed as to whether Sceptre ever got her head in front, and, at such a distance from the stand, it was impossible to decide this point with any certainty, but my own impression is that she never quite reached Ard Patrick, who always seemed to me to be going slightly the better of the two. A hundred yards from home all doubt as to the actual result was over, and although Ard Patrick only won by a neck, I think it was a clever one. The result of the race, as far as these two were concerned, was just what I anticipated, for I thought they would make a great fight of it, and Ard Patrick would just prove the better, but I fully expected to see Rock Sand a length or so in front of them, instead of three lengths behind. I hate to make excuses for beaten horses, but most of us who fancied the three-year-old would have liked to see Maher on his back. Up to the present time he has taken part in twelve races, of which he has won ten. He has never been beaten when Maher has been in the saddle, but on the four occasions when other jockeys have ridden him he has only won twice. This may be merely a curious coincidence, but it is quite certain that he never seems to gallop for anyone else quite as he does for Maher.

His Holiness the late Pope was at one time an ardent sportsman, and extremely fond of shooting. In the old Pecci Home at Carpineto, the favourite gun of the Pope is still to be seen. Of late years the infirmities of age prevented the Pope indulging in his favourite recreation, but up to two or three years ago he took a great delight in the netting of birds in the Vatican Gardens which are of great extent.

The efforts to domesticate the zebra seem to be meeting with some success in the East African Protectorate. A stockade was recently erected on the Morendal River, enclosing about 50 acres, and then some hundreds of natives surrounded a herd of zebras and drove them towards the enclosure. Twelve or so were got into the neck, and the rest charged back towards the beaters. Mr. Story himself guarded the prisoners. Headed back, the large herd got the wind of the smaller herd, and entered the neck at full gallop. Subsequent counts showed the number of animals to be 85; two foals have since been born in the boma, and the old and young are becoming wonderfully tame. They now frequently graze within a few feet of the tents in which the men are encamped, which have been pitched within the boma. Mr. Story says he believes that shortly they will be able to start the handling and breaking of the young animals.

The entries for the Second Calcutta Monsoon Meeting are highly satisfactory, ten being nominated for the August Plate, eleven for the Monsoon Plate, and twelve for the Fort Plate. Of the first, however, two are double entries for the Hunters' Hurdle Race and will probably go for the latter. Should they not do so the hunters' event will provide but a small field. Before the publication of the weights it is working somewhat in the dark to make selections, but given an easy burden we shall expect to see Corydon run well in the August Plate, though Altamas will very likely take some beating. In the pony jump race The Captain, if he stands up, is, we think, the quickest at the game and no doubt his mistake on Tuesday will instil a bit of caution into him. Should the going be deep, Moss Rose, unless very hardly dealt with in the matter of weight, will quite likely win. Clynder with any reasonable weight should be good for the Monsoon Plate, and in the Pony Plate Second Thought is, in our opinion, a bit better than anything.

Beeswing if in the right frame of mind should capture the Hunters' Plate and in the Fort Plate Euryalus, if he gets off, is, we think, bound to win and should he show temper Oom Paul is about the pick of the remainder.

Mr. W. Bell-Irving is, we are sorry to hear, down with a bad attack of diphtheria and his condition is causing his friends some anxiety.

Athletic Notes.

MR. F. S. KELLY, the winner of the Diamond Sculls, is shortly coming out to India on a visit.

Kent beat Essex by ten wickets on the 5th August; Worcestershire beat Warwickshire by nine wickets. Lancashire was defeated by Yorkshire by five wickets. Gloucester and Sussex drew; the match between Somerset and Middlesex ended in a win for the latter. Derbyshire beat Hampshire by an innings and 59 runs and Notts defeated Surrey by 118 runs.

Lancashire beat Derbyshire on the 7th instant by nine wickets.

Tyres are often supposed to be punctured when really the valve is at fault. To test same, inflate the tyre hard, immerse the valve part in water, if any air bubbles arise, take the valve in pieces, and replace the rubber sleeve with one of the valve tubes which will be found in the box of chalk packed in all Dunlop tyre repairing outfits.

The race for the Hoare Cup, will be held by the Calcutta Rowing Club at Kidderpore on Saturday afternoon. There are only two crews in it this year; but, as they are fairly level and have both got in about the same amount of work, there may be a good race. The crews are:

A.		B.
Coached by Mr. Power.		Coached by Mr. Burke.
H. W. Hales	Bow.	P. Blumenthal	Bow.
H. F. Maxwell	... 2	C. Killick	... 2
T. A. Tassie	... 3	H. Day	... 3
W. M. Crawford	Str.	C. A. Pearcy	Str.
Lt. J. P. Musson	Cox.	O. Williamson	Cox.

"B." has had bad luck in losing Stephenson, their stroke, who is now nursing a dislocated knee as the result of trying to play footer and train for boat racing concurrently; but Pearcy who fills his thwart is both hefty and keen, and will give those behind him a lively time down the course if we are not mistaken.

At the last Burma Athletic Association Council Meeting the protest of the Rangoon Club against the issue of the football match against the 70th Co., R. G. A., was considered. The grounds of the protest were that the Club was pressing during the last few minutes and that by the game being stopped five minutes before the proper time, through a mistake of the Referee, it was deprived of a possible victory. The Club wished the game to be replayed. After considerable discussion, it was decided that a telegram be sent to the Football Association in England asking it if any similar occurrence had come to its knowledge, and if so what was the usual procedure adopted in such cases and whether this match should be replayed or only the five minutes lost.

Our Bombay correspondent writes :—After nearly a month's continuous rain, we are now enjoying a spell of fine weather, and during the past few days we have had plenty of cricket and football. The Harwood Association Football League continues to be the centre of attraction, but the play shown in most of the games decided this week has not been of a very high order. In the early part of the week, when the ground was still in a very sloppy condition, the Bombay Gymkhana met the "B" team of the North Staffords. In several places the ground was practically under water, while frequent showers fell during the progress of the match. As a result good combination was out of the question, and play was of a very scrambly nature. From the outset the military players asserted their superiority, and had all the best of matters. In the first half they scored a couple of goals, and added a third during the second moiety, eventually leaving the ground winners by three goals to nil. Considerable interest was evinced in the game played off last (Saturday) evening between the "A" and "B" teams of the North Staffords. Both are well up in the league table, and this was the first time they had met. Naturally there was considerable rivalry, and a large crowd of spectators turned out in anticipation of witnessing a good game. And in this they were not disappointed, for it was one of the best contested games that has been seen so far this season in connexion with the League. Encouraged by the shouts of their respective supporters both teams played for all they were worth, and there were many exciting bits of play. Taken all round there was not much to choose between the two elevens, but the "A" team showed slightly the better combination, and eventually won. Another match played during the week was that between the Royal Garrison Artillery and the Telegraph Recreation Club. The result was an easy win for the gunners by seven goals to nil.

The chief topic of conversation in Bombay just now is the approaching cricket match between the Presidency and the Parsees, which is down for decision on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday next, and speculation is rife as to who will win. Encouraged by their previous successes in Bombay the Parsees seem fairly confident of victory, and personally, I am inclined to think they will win. There are many, however, who are of a different way of thinking, and I hope they may be right. At the time of writing neither team has been selected—four men have been asked and accepted for the Presidency, while three places remain to be filled in the Parsee eleven. The certainties for the Europeans are Mr. E. L. Sale, who is both batting and bowling well this season, and who will, I understand, captain the side, Mr. M. R. Jardine having intimated his inability to play. Then there is Mr. H. Cheetham, a reliable bat and a very useful bowler; Mr. H. C. John (Satara), who is selected for his bowling; and Mr. Walcott, the wicket-keeper. The other seven places will be filled after the test match, Civil vs. Military, which commences to-morrow. As to the Parsees, they will be represented by very much the same eleven as last year. They will, however, greatly miss the services of A. H. Mehta, who has always bowled with such success in these matches. The Gymkhana Committee have been at a good deal of pains to have the new pitch ready for the match and are hopeful that it will play well, but this, of course, depends on the kind of weather we have during the coming week.

The walking craze has reached Bombay, and a few evenings since about forty of the employees of the Bombay Improvement Trust turned out for a six miles walking race. The competitors were started in three different batches at intervals of five minutes, and some exciting finishes were witnessed. The first prize was won by Bapoobhai Bhimji Desai, who covered the distance in 1hr. 15mins. 15secs, the next to finish being Rustomji Sorabji in 1hr. 16mins., followed by Kumrudin Mirale in 1hr. 16mins. 30secs. and G. R. Date in 1hr. 18mins.

In the spring of 1865—the year famous for the triple victories in Guineas, Derby, and St. Leger of Gladiateur—a gentleman having won a "pony" at cards, asked the loser to back an animal named Planet for him with the money. The horse won and the "pony" was run into £300. Of this sum £200 was invested on Gladiateur for the Two Thousand Guineas, and realised £1,300; a thousand being subsequently placed on the same horse for the Derby, it produced £6,500, or over £8,000 in all. What a pity history has not told us why this fortunate individual did not continue his lucky run by supporting the son of Monarque for the St. Leger!

General Notes.

THE Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Bourdillon leave Calcutta for Darjeeling on Monday, the 17th instant.

We regret to hear of the death of Sir John Muir, head of the firm of Finlay, Muir and Co., Calcutta, at the age of seventy-five years.

Sergt. Stone of the 72nd Field Artillery, charged with assaulting and causing the death of a native driver, was acquitted at the High Court Criminal Sessions at Allahabad on the 5th instant.

With much regret we learn by wire of the death in London of Mr. W. B. Colville at the age of 52. He was well known, beloved and respected in Calcutta and his death will leave a gap not easily filled.

We regret to hear of the death at Murree of Mr. W. L. Holman. He was the oldest resident and one of the original founders of that station. His connection with India and the Punjab dated back to the annexation of the province.

Lady Curzon's "Bal Poudre" at Simla on the 6th instant was a great success. About four hundred were present, the ladies with wigs and powder and the men in mess dress. Unfortunately Lady Curzon was slightly indisposed, and only attended the dance for a brief period to welcome her guests.

We are sorry to learn of two accidents at Coonoor last week. Colonel McArthur was thrown from his horse and broke his collar bone in two places. Captain Caldbeck of the 4th Hussars also broke his collar bone, the result of a fall at polo. We are glad to say both sportsmen are doing well and will soon be about again.

Messrs. G. F. Kellner & Co have been very unfortunate with regard to their managers on the railway line the last week. Mr. Tums died at Ghaziabad of cholera, Mr. Ray, the Superintendent of the line, also died a few hours afterwards; while Mr. Johnston, the Manager of Dinapore refreshment rooms in trying to stop a fight between railway employés died from a kick which he received during the mêlée.

The Calcutta Amateur Dramatic Society continue to make a great success of The Dandy Fifth. The performance improves with every repetition and is quickly approaching amateur perfection. The principals have rubbed off all the "corners" since the opening night and, ably assisted by the chorus, make the piece go with a great swing. Some new songs have been introduced and the topical verses of Messrs Zimmerman and Matthew are vociferously encored. The Dandy Fifth continues to draw crowded houses and the season ought to be a most successful one for the A. D. S.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 24th July 1903.

I AM under the impression that at various times lately I have "grousèd" rather extensively respecting the weather and other untoward conditions, but having had my grumble out, I rested "aisy," and had no desire to search out the cause of these dispensations of Providence. I vaguely attributed the rain to spots in the sun, or to the moon having thought proper to "change" at an unpropitious hour, or to a rainy cycle having set in or to some other antiquated and utterly improbable theory. But there is no longer room for speculation, and it is not an enemy who has done us this ill-turn, but His Majesty King Edward VII. The Rock has discovered that the British defeat in Somaliland is the just retribution which has fallen upon this unhappy land in consequence of the King's visit to Pope Leo XIII.; and to the same cause the vicar of Christ Church, Burton-on-Trent, attributes many of our late afflictions. He gives a catalogue of the evils brought upon our unhappy land by this truckling to the "Scarlet Lady." The heavy rains which destroyed the crops; the snow in Kent on the 19th of June; the floods at Windsor, the residence of the King (but unluckily for poetic justice—also the residence of many innocent persons who suffered considerably from the flood while the Castle escaped scotfree). And His Majesty is not the only sinner! The Government, by buying out the Irish Protestant landlords, is preparing the way for "Home Rule and Rome Rule," and is already reaping the reward of its evil deeds. Associations are being openly formed for the purpose of defying the law, and resisting the payment of rates. A condition of affairs prevails that has had no counterpart for I am afraid to say how long, and "the greatest Government of modern times is tottering to its fall!" How truly satisfactory to be able to trace effects so clearly to their first cause!

The interest excited by the recent debate in the House of Lords on the question of physical degeneration seems to increase rather than decrease. It is devoutly to be hoped that the memorandum by the Director-General of the Army Medical Service will draw attention to the question as it affects the Army. It tells us that between 1893 and 1902, one man out of every three examined for enlistment was rejected by the doctors as medically unfit, and this does not include the large number rejected by the recruiting sergeant. Sir William Taylor suggests that the conditions of life among the very poor in towns (and it is from this class that our recruits mainly come) are responsible for this degeneracy. A few facts appear to be beyond dispute. One, that the physique of the upper and middle classes—especially of the women—is improving. The Bishop of Ripon said in the House that the average height has increased three-quarter of an inch in the last thirty years. Secondly that the physique of the classes below the artizan class is degenerating in at least an equal degree—the result of overcrowding, bad air, and not only insufficient but improper food. The Duke of Wellington says the average height, weight and health of the English recruit are decreasing, while the German recruit is improving, and he contends that "the old duty of personal service to the State, which was allowed to lapse during the period when nations were acquiring wealth, must be put in force again." The inquiry on the subject that the Goverment proposes to address to the chiefs of the medical profession is a step in the right direction and the result will be awaited with eager interest by most of us.

The chief theatrical events of the past week have been "farewells," and for the next few months those of us who perforce remain in town are left lamenting. Yesterday week Sir Charles Wyndham said "farewell" for some time to the theatre bearing his name. It is said that Mr. John Hare will probably occupy it in his absence. Last Friday night saw the end of the run of delightful Old Heidelberg but as Mr. Alexander has given up his projected tour in America he will re-appear at the St. James's early next year, the American loss being distinctly our gain. And on Saturday night Sir Henry Irving said "farewell to London audiences, it is said, for at least a year." Dante had been a most successful production from the pecuniary point of view, and has "caught on" with a class of playgoers whom it would seem hardly likely to attract.

Glittering Gloria produced by Mr. James Welsh, at Wyndham's Theatre on Tuesday night, evidently left those who were privileged to see it in a state bordering on delirium. I have struggled in vain to get a coherent account of the plot. I am assured there is not one—at least not one that it was possible to follow. Nothing but a series of most amusing and utterly improbable situations which left the audience helpless from laughter. All the accounts I have heard agree that the stage management was wonderful and Glittering Gloria a decidedly cheerful entertainment.

Shrewsbury is celebrating the five hundreth anniversary of its battle—chiefly memorable it must be confessed in connection with Falstaff, and Mr. Benson's company has been down twice, giving Richard II., Henry IV., and Henry V., in historical sequence. Richard II., is one of Mr. Benson's best parts—if not his very best, and the two other plays must have been interesting under the circumstances. Shrewsbury is one of the most fascinating of old world towns. In the days of my extremely gullible youth I used to look with great awe on a clock in the old Market Square which some one assured me was the identical one by which Falstaff fought an hour.

One begins to asks oneself how much of the London that one has known (and loved) will be left to us in a few years' time. I much fear it will be "improved" beyond recognition, and personally I resent the removal of my ancient landmarks. Passing the Piccadilly end of the Burlington Arcade the other day I felt there was something wrong—a sense of an unwonted gap—a strangeness—that bothered me for some minutes, until I realised that the old familiar newspaper stall in the gateway had departed, never to return. It was not an ornamental object—it had never been a useful one to me—yet a gentle, pensive regret stole o'er me when I realised that its place would know it no more.

I now read that the Improvements (?) Committee of that august body, the London County Council, have drawn up a report "on the proposed scheme for the widening of Piccadilly between Sackville Street and Piccadilly Circus at an estimated cost of £209,500." The Committee proposes to treat the work in four sections "having regard to the length of the leases in the property"—Section I, between Sackville Street and Swallow Street; II, between Swallow Street and Piccadilly Place; III, between Piccadilly Place and Air Street; IV, between Air Street and Piccadilly Circus. The report regrets that the Commissioners of His Majesty's Woods and Forests (to whom the free-hold belongs) have hitherto not seen fit to assist the Council in this scheme, out of consideration for the old occupiers in the thoroughfare. Now, however, that difficulty appears to have been surmounted, and if the Westminster City Council agrees to contribute the one-fifth of the total expense required by the London County Council, the sections between Swallow Street and Air Street will be dealt with within the next few months. The widening of that portion of Piccadilly is much to be desired, and is another step towards the completion of the scheme for a broad thoroughfare between Kensington High Street and Piccadilly Circus—the buildings between Walsingham House and the Green Parks having for some time past presented the properly desolate appearance that precedes being improved off the face of the earth. There is no special delight in being "blocked" in Piccadilly at intervals of every few yards, on a broiling June day, but all the same (being truly Conservative) I feel that the new, widened, improved, County Councilled Piccadilly won't be the Piccadilly of my youthful affections over which I utter my lament.

Clifford's, the oldest Inn of Chancery recently sold by auction for the sum of £100,000, was a most interesting relic, and its demolition is a cause for lament. It is, however, a satisfaction to hear that the beautiful 17th century woodwork and carving, ascribed to Grinling Gibbons, and now fitted in a room in the Inn, was purchased yesterday for the Victoria and Albert Museum for 550 guineas. The carving is of exquisite design, and is said to be the finest of its kind in existence. The set consists of a beautiful moulding, a chair rail, deep panelling, and a grand chimney-piece, carved with foliage and flowers.

"Black Michael" is generally credited with possessing an abundant and vigorous vocabulary when he desires to ban a foe, but should he feel "disposed" to bless a friend he will now not have far to seek for a choice assortment of complimentary epithets. He need only turn to the memorial lately presented to him by his admirer, "an Indian Prince. Never, surely, has there been a more comprehensive catalogue of virtues! Most of us are vaguely aware that "laying it on thick" is an Oriental accomplishment, but the memorialist must be gifted beyond the common. His memorial states that "your parental lordships" (i.e. B. M.) is a sagacious, intellectual, lustrious, (?) predominant, complaisant, refulgent, sumptuous, vivid, polite, cautious, receptive, upright, righteous, impartial, prudent, philanthropic, compassionate, gracious, merciful, benevolent, magnanimous, and inimitable blessed party"! The last, by the way, is rather an anti-climax after the magnificent adjectives that precede it, moved by these "lustrious" qualities the Oriental gentleman "palpitates to serenade" the object of his admiration by "touching the chords of my invaluable lute, the property of my ever-renowned grandfather."

defects. The first makes the provisions as to reckless driving applicable to all roads to which the public has access—not only to the public highways; the second requires any person driving a motor car to be licensed; and the third prohibits any person under sixteen receiving such a license. The question of a speed limit led to the most interesting part of the debate. Lord Camperdown, speaking with genuine feeling, advocated a maximum speed of 20 miles an hour, but although he was supported by Lord Kelvin, the proposal was rejected, on the ground that there are stretches on which that speed is not necessarily dangerous. It is to be regretted that the proposal to require a certificate of competence before a driver is licensed was considered impracticable by Lord Balfour of Burleigh. And it is much to be desired that something may be done to mitigate the nuisance, as well as the dangers caused by the motorists. In fact the appalling clouds of dust raised by the cars under certain conditions are not only a nuisance but a very serious danger on roads where there is even a moderate amount of traffic.

The death of Mr. Whistler last week at his house in Cheyne Walk, Chelsea, removes not only an artist of exceptional gifts, but an interesting unconventional personality. His thorough enjoyment of his numerous combats was refreshing, and his various law suits made entertaining reading, especially his own comments thereon. His genius was first made known to the general public by an exhibition of some beautiful Japanese pictures which had been painted almost 30 years before, and in the catalogue he printed all the adverse criticisms on them which he could collect. Of recent years he did comparatively little work, and came less prominently before the public. That "the gentle art of making enemies" had left him many friends was apparent at the funeral service last Tuesday.

The accounts from Ireland point to the visit of the King and Queen proving an unqualified success. The most interesting part of the visit, and the one most productive of far-reaching results should be the tour in the West, and though the time allotted to it will be short, the King may be trusted to make the best possible use of it.

Camp J., 14th May.—Marched here this morning, I riding the whole way in as I was a bit feeble from yesterday's fever. N. had quite an interesting morning. He began by sending in a doe antelope for the pot, which was much needed, supplies having been very difficult to get. We were obliged to do this now and then when supplies ran out, and preferred, on these occasions, if a shootable buck could not be found, to kill a young doe, rather than a young buck, the former sex being out of all proportion to the latter in these parts. I waited on in camp for N. for a long time. At last he turned up and told me what he had been up to. He had the famous Chandun to guide him, and, with him, soon hit off fresh tracks of bison which they followed, succeeding before long in getting in touch with the herd. N. did not at once, however, get a shot; and while he was jogging along in pursuit of the slightly suspicious herd, an old she bear with two fair-sized cubs emerged from a thicket, almost on top of him He lost no time in shooting the old lady, and tried to make his men catch the cubs, but they were rather too big to handle, and easily escaped from their pursuers. N. then followed on after the bison, hardly expecting to see them again after his shot at the bear which he now rather regretted. However, the bison appeared to have been little scared for he soon came on them again, managing this time to get a shot into the bull, (a chest shot I think he told me), which knocked him over and, as N. thought, settled him for good. But when he came to the spot where he expected to find the dead bull, lo and behold, he was gone. There was nothing to do then but to follow on his tracks, which N. did, till late in the forenoon, without success. He then returned to camp for some food, leaving again, after breakfast, to continue the tracking: but it was no good, the bull had got too long a start, and in the evening N. had to give him up. On his return to camp he came across and shot a decidedly fine blue bull. I practically did nothing this afternoon, preferring to take it easy and not give the fever another look in.

Camp J., 15th May.—To-day I persuaded N. to try, with the tigress that charged out at me on the 13th, the plan that he himself suggested for these tigers that we cannot get to revisit their kills. He gave his day up to it, like a man, though bison tracking would have been much more to his taste. We both, however, felt that it was our duty to make an effort to defeat this tigress; and as she (i.e., if the tiger I saw from my machan on the 12th is the one that tried to assault me on the 13th, which I doubt) had twice done me in the eye, it was certainly N.'s turn to have a go at her. He spent the morning selecting his tree, and having his machan tied up in it, commanding the mouth of the nullah I was charged in, and at 2 o'clock he sallied forth again from camp with a herd of cattle. Under cover of these cattle he got into his machan and had one of them tied within easy range of his tree in the nullah, while the remainder were kept grazing up and down near the mouth of the nullah, and over all ground that he could command. The day was very hot, with not a breath of air, and he had a very trying time in his machan; but though he did not get a shot he actually saw the tigress and proved that the plan was a good one. As the sun went down the grazing cattle were gradually withdrawn and taken tinkling home; and as they disappeared N. saw the head of a tiger some sixty yards off, up the nullah, looking wickedly at the poor beast that was tied up before him. But it was only for a second that he got this view, and what became of the tiger, or tigress, he never knew, for he or she never showed up again; and eventually when darkness came on, N.'s men turned up to help him down from his machan, and he returned to camp with a strong go of fever on him, brought on by the baking he had had in the sun. As wary as she can be is this old tigress. My day was a very uneventful one. I was after bison with Chandun both in the morning and evening. We found fresh tracks, but they crossed and recrossed so often that we got hopelessly mixed over them and eventually had to give them up as a bad job.

Camp J., 16th May—N. was very chippy all day with fever and did not attempt to go out. As for myself I sinned so disgracefully in the morning with bison that I dare not tell the tale. Suffice it to say that I was covered with shame when I had to return to camp and confess to N. the terrible mistake I had made. In the afternoon I was again a victim of an atrocious piece of bad luck with a tiger. When I got back to camp I was told that a tiger had killed a huge buffalo that morning right out in the open, not a mile from camp As N. was too seedy to go out, I said I would stroll out in the afternoon and sit up over the kill till dark. I confess I did not expect anything to come of it, but felt that I was bound to try it. The kill was right out in the open, a very large buffalo; evidently, by the marks, pulled down by a very big tiger. Near it were two small, but thick, trees, very little more than bushes. In one of these I had to put my machan, not more than four feet from the ground. I had with me Chote Khan, and a couple of local men, to tie up the machan. Sita Ram, N.'s shikari, also came; but when I got into my machan I told him I did not want him and that he had better go back to his master. Chote Khan and the other two men I sent to where a lot of cattle were herded for the night, only about quarter mile off I told them to come for me as soon as it was dark—there was no moon. It seemed to me a hopeless sit up; there was no jungle within half a mile, and the kill, as I have said was absolutely in the open. However, I sat on and did my duty like a man; and as the shades of night crept on watched and listened as keenly as I have ever done. It was almost dark, and I had raised my rifle to see if I could still take any sort of aim with it, when I heard a voice about 100 yards behind me, that I at once recognized to be Sita Ram's, calling out to Chote Khan to know if he had a lantern.

Just at the very witching hour of approaching night that one would expect a tiger, this shout came At the same moment I thought I heard a slight rustle under me. Then came another yell from Sita Ram, which was answered by a low growl from almost under me. There, of course, was the tiger! I never saw him, only heard him give this growl in answer to Sita Ram; and then, of course, he vanished into thin air; at all events I never saw him or heard more of him. It really was too exasperating. What brought Sita Ram back heaven only knows. N. never sent him to me and I never told him I wanted him again. It really was too bad! In another minute or two I ought to have had that tiger nicely on the kill. My feelings I cannot describe and the language I used when I got down from the machan I must not repeat, so there's an end of it.

Camp J. 17th May.—To-day, I am sorry to say quite unintentionally and through a misunderstanding, I took a line of country which should have fallen to N., and succeeded in bagging a very decent bull bison, which I should have been quite as pleased to see fall to N.'s rifle. There was nothing very exciting about the morning's work, though it was decidedly interesting to see Chandun worry out the tracks. We struck them at about 6 A.M., and I finally came up with the bull at about 10 A.M., so it was a pleasant morning's walk. For a long time it looked as if we should never have a look in, for the tracking was all with the wind, and more than once we saw by the tracks that we had been fairly close on the bull, and that he had moved on in a hurry, having evidently winded us. Eventually we had about half an hour's tracking up wind, and in that half hour I came up with him and got a shot into him about 60 yards off, behind the off shoulder which prevented him going far, though he wanted one or two more shots afterwards to kill him, poor brute. He made no attempt to charge. His measurements were:—From tip to tip, round the horns and a cross the frontal brow, 69¼ inches; from tip to tip straight across, 19¼ inches; widest spread, inside 27 inches; widest spread outside, 33 inches; girth of horns, 15½ inches. N., I regret to say, saw nothing. In the afternoon after a late breakfast I made one more effort, as we were moving camp the next day to circumvent our friend the tigress. I did not try any sitting up, but stealthily walked up all her haunts taking care not to be caught in the centre of the nullah again, but saw no sign of her. N. again was out of luck, and saw nothing in his evening stroll.

Camp U., 18th May.—Moved camp to day, a march of 15 miles for the carts, and 10 for us, taking short cuts on our horses. We did not attempt to shoot on our way and therefore had a very long wait at U. before our carts came in. While waiting for them we were shown the remains of what we were told was a panther kill. I sat up over the few bones that were left in the afternoon but saw nothing. We had very little doubt afterwards that I had been wasting time over a wild dog's kill. While I was sitting up N. took an evening stroll but saw nothing.

Camp U., 19th May.—Both out in the morning to explore the new country. Both back early in the hopes of hearing that one or other of our numerous kills had been taken. I saw no sign of game anywhere, while N. had the bad luck to wound and lose a cheetal stag. On returning to camp we were glad to find there had been a kill, fairly close to camp, so breakfast was hustled up and we got off with our beaters as soon after it as we could. This was another absolute certainty to look at, an ideal two-gun beat, each gun having an equal chance. However, no tiger turned up, and whether he was absent when we started the beat, as most of these tigers are, for they have learnt by experience that they gain nothing by lying up near their kills, the Bygas being much too fond of meat to give them a chance of a second feed, or whether we lost him through really bad beating I cannot say. But undoubtedly the beat was brought up disgracefully, and not at all as we had planned, and much good ground was left out. Anyhow, whatever the cause, we had once more to jog home disappointed and defeated.

Camp U, 20th and 21st May.—Uneventful days, both of them. We had merely stopped on in the hope of getting a tiger to kill, but none were so obliging. All we succeeded in bringing to bag during these two trying days was one green pigeon! A move to C, six miles off, was settled on for to morrow.

Camp C., 22nd May.—On my way here I shot a really fine specimen of a male wild dog, who insultingly squatted himself down on my path and declined to move. I am very much afraid my shot disturbed some bara singha that N. very unexpectedly hit off very shortly after leaving U. They were too wary for him and would not let him get within range. The same thing happened with some cheetal that he afterwards came across—nothing would persuade them to wait for a shot. On continuing his march to C., N. came across a wild dog (the place is infested with them), which he knocked over, though it picked itself up afterwards and managed to get away It was not worth following and N. left it to its fate. There is no doubt these brutes have spoilt our sport at U., for there are numbers of them about and very little sign of game anywhere. We found C. a most unpromising looking spot, and decided at once not to waste time over it, but to retrace our steps homewards by a slightly varied route. In the evening we took a stroll with our guns, and N. bagged two brace of black partridge, and a hare, while I missed everything I fired at.

Camp B., 23rd May.—Our leave was drawing to a close and this, the first of our return marches, brought it home to us that we must make the most of the few days that are left us. We had meant to encamp the village of B. but found that, owing to the proximity of large swarms of bees, it was dangerous to do so. The only alternative was to go down and camp by the river side, which we did, though I firmly believe we lost a tiger or two by doing so. The nullah, or rather river bed, showed fresh marks to-day of at least three tigers, and we were very hopeful, with all our garas out in likely spots, that we should find one or two taken the next day; but as the diary for the next few days will show, we never got one to take the proffered bait. In fact, after to-day, a fresh track of a tiger was not again seen by us in the river bed; and I feel convinced that our camp on its banks drove them all away. We worked our way here this morning through the jungles but saw nothing. In the evening we were out again exploring the very attractive jungles we were in. I missed an easy shot at a muntjac to begin with and later on knocked over a sambur stag with, I am sorry to say, a very small head. This is the second time I have shot sambur in May with horns in proper order and strange to say both were shot on the 23rd May, the first in 1898 and the second now. N.'s luck was out and he saw nothing. We were both caught in a very heavy thunderstorm this evening.

Camp B., 24th May.—Both out early. Jungles excellent, but neither of us came across anything owing, no doubt, to wild dogs, of which there are numbers about. On my way home I shot one, cut off her brush and left the carcase.

N. also saw numerous tracks of them about. Possibly they have had something to say to the departure of the family of tigers that was undoubtedly here when we marched in yesterday. Anyhow, whether it is the proximity of our camp, or the presence of the wild dogs, that have driven them away, they have all gone. In the afternoon we were out again and N. brought home a small bara singha stag that he had bowled over with a long shot, proving that there are a few of these animals about here, in spite of the protestations of the local people that there were none. In fact when N. shot his stag most of them pretended they had never seen such a beast before. My afternoon brought no fun, for I only saw a four-horned antelope at which I could not get a shot.

Camp B., 25th May.—We hung on here another day in the hopes of getting a tiger to take one of our garas; but no good came of it as far as Stripes was concerned. Master Spots I did come across as I will relate. I determined last night to give my whole morning up to the tigers and to try and discover what had become of them. I visited every kill and near the first one I found fresh tracks of a small tiger which eventually led into jungle, where, of course, they were soon lost. Why this tiger did not touch a kill I do not know, for he passed fairly close to two of them. Shortly after I had lost his tracks I heard monkeys yapping in the direction that he had apparently gone in. I walked to the sound till the yapping ceased, and I had then nothing to guide me; so what it was that disturbed my monkey friends I cannot say. I steadily and conscientiously went to every kill, seven in number, so before I had done I had covered a deal of ground. And then I turned and walked along the banks of a branch nullah up which the whole family of tigers had evidently gone three days before. It was a very tigery nullah, and I was quite prepared to find one enjoying a siesta, but that sort of thing does not happen every day, and it did not come off on this particular day. After finishing with this nullah I turned for home, and, on way back, heard monkeys yapping violently at something only a few hundred yards to my right. I invariably walk to this sound whenever I hear it, but never before to-day have I been lucky enough to come on the beat that was annoying the monkeys. To-day, however I had some fun. Walking stealthily towards the infuriated monkeys I at last got close enough to see them, and, to make out that they were really very angry with something immediately under them. Branches of trees were being violently shaken, and the well-known half cough, half bark, denoting rage and alarm, was echoing from every side when I spotted a panther making quietly off at a slow walk. He had not seen me and did not apparently suspect danger, so I rather foolishly tried to get closer to him, being hardly certain enough of making the shot good at the distance which then separated us. As far as I myself was concerned, I don't think he ever noticed me, for he let me get to a nice spot from which I intended to take my shot when he passed between two trees I had marked. My rifle was up, and he was coming nicely and quietly to the opening, when suddenly his head was raised and in a twinkling of an eye he was gone, and I had not fired! I was very disgusted, for it was my men who had spoilt the show. Instead of lying low when I went ahead they got impatient after a while, and determined to follow, and see what I was up to; and just at the critical moment exposed themselves to the view of the only too sharp eyed panther, and made a mess of the whole job. I was annoyed because I have so often explained to my shikari, Chote Khan, that I like to be absolutely alone when stalking, and the difficult work of getting up to a beast begins and he had in his excitement forgotten all my instructions on this particular occasion. I had a word of blame for myself too for not taking the first chance of a shot that was offered me. There was nothing for it now but to go home, and as we were within half-a-mile of camp I thought all shooting was over and handed my rifle over to Chote Khan. The monkeys were still coughing and barking, but I really did not think anything of this, merely putting it down to the fact that their tempers had not yet cooled down. However, there was something in it after all, for before I had gone a couple of hundred yards, leading the way and smoking a cheroot—(I was not in a Government fire preserved forest, good reader, believe me)—I suddenly saw another panther strolling along in the somewhat tall grass in front of me. Chote Khan saw me stop sharp, and hold out my hand for the rifle, and was alongside me with it in no time. But neither he nor Chandun had any idea what I had seen. Luckily for me, within a yard or too of me, there was a friendly antheap on to which I jumped to get a better view of my quarry. If it had not been for this antheap I doubt whether I should have been able to see him again in the long grass. As it was I got an easy shot into him at the back of the neck as he walked on quite unconscious of my presence. He fell over at once, but continued growling for some time in the long grass in which I could not now see him. However, he was but a small chap, and after firing one or too random shots into the grass where I thought he was, I walked him up and found him dead. I must now admit that I had never before believed in there being two sorts of panthers, for I have hitherto always shot the bigger chap measuring, as a male, from about 6 feet 9 inches to 7 feet 3 inches; but here was a full grown, fully developed, panther as shown by his teeth and claws, measuring only 5 feet 9 inches. He was no cub, or three-quarter grown panther of the larger sort, of that there could be no doubt. But what would account for his smallness I cannot say; unless there are two district jats of panthers, and I am bound to say, that before to-day I never really believed there were two jats. When I got to camp I found N. had shot a muntjac, and that he had wounded and lost a cheetal stag. In the afternoon he was out again and saw a blue bull, but declined to fire at him. I also went out in the afternoon with the express view of trying to find the kill the two panthers I came across in the morning were feeding off. Long before I reached the spot I heard the monkeys yapping away as furiously as ever, but was not lucky enough to see my first panther again, and, though I hunted high and low, I could find no trace of his kill. There are no tigers about here now, so we shall push on with our return journey to-morrow.

CRICKET QUERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDIAN FIELD.

SIR,—To settle a bet will you kindly let me know how many batsmen made two hundreds in a match in first-class cricket at home last year and whether C. B. Llewellyn, the Hampshire cricketer, hails from Australia or South Africa.

A. P. S.

A CRITIC CRITICISED.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—A most amusing article which appeared in The Indian Field some time back has just been brought to my notice. It is entitled "Sporting Pictures at the Royal Academy" (by our London correspondent). The writer is evidently a humourist—of sorts, and perhaps a sportsman; but the "expert eye" he mentions is that of a sportsman who is no longer an "expert" when confined within the walls of Burlington House.

It is a trifle astonishing that one of the two leading wild animal painters of the day, namely, Mr. Arthur Wardle should be dubbed a dog-painter! May I ask if this is the first Academy exhibition your correspondent has attended? Before he "does the show" again, I should like to recommend a course of Natural History—Lydekker might be useful. He writes "Jaguar (?)" so is apparently not clear about the identity of this animal; also he seems very hazy in his notions of a Siberian tiger, which happens in the picture to be a tigress.

However, apart from these merely technical shortcomings, your writer is quite a wag. He objects to animals being painted in a spot where they can be seen and would, I presume, prefer to see the mouth of a cave with a notice affixed: "Beware the feline within!"

He is touchingly sympathetic towards Mr. Wardle's unfortunate leopard who, he fears, if constrained for very long in his present attitude, will suffer dreadfully from cramp. I would suggest that your critic should, in future, turn his attention to the Bioscope. I sincerely hope for the sake of his tender heart, that there is no hitch which brings the works to a stand still, leaving some miserable horse poised on one leg.

A closer examination of Mr. E. H. Fischer's picture "Habet" might, in the matter of length of coat, relieve this same tender-hearted correspondent's fears as to the animal feeling the cold too bitterly. To my surprise, he takes a rather blood-thirsty turn and is not satisfied with the gory wound in the belly of the tigress (which by the way has as certainly not been caused by a bullet—badly aimed, or otherwise—as it evidently has been inflicted by the powerful horn of some opponent). It is truly a pity that he cannot get to the offside of the beast for, perhaps, he would find that sufficiently lacerated even for his own particular sporting taste.

It would be too flattering to take the article as serious criticism, but it does seem a pity that such sparkling wit should be founded on such meagre information!

LONDON, 20th July 1903. PORTAX.

[Our correspondent can very well take care of himself; but as he isn't here and our friend "Portax" may like to know on what he bases his claim to expert opinion we may say that the author of this particular criticism was a well-known big game shot in India and Burma, is the author of sporting books and jungle stories that have earned for him a reputation for close observation and knowledge of shikar and forestry. He is also, as the editor of one of the leading sporting journals in London, an accepted authority on sporting matters, and a well tried old Indian shikari, though he may not appreciate nature as presented to him at Burlington House, may have received impressions as the result of long stalks and patient vigils that paint and canvas can never satisfactorily convey. And if "our correspondent," after this, doesn't consider himself as liable to offer us some slight refreshment when next we meet we shall be surprised—ED.]

NIGHT SHOOTING.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—If "Ubique" goes through the shikar matter published in a contemporary of 30th May and of 6th and 13th June 1903, he will find that shooting with electric light has become a total failure. "Virgil," the writer on the subject, left no stone unturned to make the shooting a success with a ten horse power electric light, Out of six attempts in not even in a single one did he succeed, and in the majority of cases, the moment the light was on, the animal, far from being taken by surprise rushed off, before the shooter had time to level his gun.

First Meeting, Saturday, 8th August 1903.

THE afternoon turned out bright and fine and admitted of the inaugural meeting being held under conditions favourable to man and beast. There was a good attendance and the enclosures, betting ring, and refreshment booth presented busy and animated scenes throughout the afternoon. Honours were fairly easy between fielders and punters, for favourites did not have it all their own way and there were a couple of upsets. The course, after the rain of the two previous days, was of the real monsoon pattern, consequently times were not calculated to break the clock. Fields were good enough, but the starting, as we feared, was hardly what it might have been. A regrettable accident in the Hurdle Race ended in the death of Mr. Cowper's promising hurdler Bushey, ridden by Mr. Raban, who was lucky to get off with a bad shaking and a few bruises, seeing that his mount took a very bad fall and rolled over him. This and other matters connected with the afternoon's sport are dealt with in our notes; it will be sufficient to append details.

THE PONY TRIAL PLATE.—Rs. 400 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. For Arabs and C.-B.'s 14-1, and other ponies 13-3½ and under measured since 31st March 1899, which have never won a flat race value Rs. 500 or upwards. Above heights to carry 10st, W. I. Penalties.—Winners once 7lbs.; twice 10lbs.; oftener 14lbs. Allowance.—Arabs 14lbs. Five furlongs.

BETTING :- 6 to 4 against Little Doris, 6 to 4 Sweet Talk, 4 to 1 Moss Rose, 6 to 1 Comely, 10 to 1 Lucy Grey, 10 to 1 each Ben Rashid, Lord Lieutenant, and Pekin.

Totalisator paid Rs. 28 on the winner; Rs. 16, Rs. 17, and Rs. 69 for places.

Little Doris first and the rest nowhere. The much-fancied Sweet Talk was out of it from the start and the winner, making all her own running, won in a hack canter by ten lengths; half a length between second and third. Time—1min 12⅗secs.

THE TRIAL HURDLE RACE.—Rs. 750 to the winner, Rs. 150 to the second, and Rs. 100 to the third. A Hurdle Race for horses that have never won a Hurdle Race value Rs. 800 or over. C. W. BETTING :—2 to 1 against Kittylea, and Mulwala, 2½ to 1 Dundonald 10 to 1 Corydon, 10 to 1 High Tide.

Totalisator paid Rs. 49 on the winner; Rs. 24 and Rs. 21 for places.

Kittylea showed the way over the first jump with Dundonald and Corydon next and the rest abreast. Bushey slipped up at this hurdle, owing to the insufficiency of cinders on the take off side, and coming down broke his neck and knocked his rider out of time for a while. Kittylea led to the culvert when Dundonald got on terms and racing together till the final hurdle, the latter, nicely ridden, came away and won easily by several lengths. A bad third. Time—3mins. 18secs.

THE MAIDEN HORSE PLATE.—Rs. 400 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs 50 to the third, For Maiden horses. C. W. A. and C. Five furlongs.

Totalisator paid Rs. 21 on the winner; Rs 14 and Rs. 16 for places.

Altamas and Springlock were the first to show out and led them throughout the latter passing Altamas after the distance and winning by a length; a bad third. Time—1min. 8secs.

POONA THIRD EXTRA MEETING.

Friday, 7th August 1903.

THE specials were well filled, the attendance was large and the business brisk. Shades of the past! Swiftsure, at level weights, beat the one time great Veneda in hollow fashion in the first event: and Swiftsure was once a lady's hack. The other jump event was the next item on the programme and backers vacillated between Free Trade and Malice, but the winner turned up in Major Hazelton's Patrician, who was once considered only gymkhan form. She was vigorously ridden by Captain Randall of the 3rd Madras Lancers and his victory was as much due to the fine manner in which the pony was ridden all through as any thing else. Free Trade was well up in front and looked a winner till he felt the impost and went back to his field at the mile. To leaven the good with the bad backers were permitted a look in over the Monsoon Plate. A heavy shower fell as the field marshalled at the gate and of these Young Kohinoor was well backed; but the confidence with which Aga S. Shah supported his grey carried the public mostly in the direction of Achilles and game little fellow that he is the pony won nicely from Regret, who has improved wonderfully; any chance Young Kohinoor may have had was dissipated by a bad start and a stern chase with mud coming back at him. The splendid trial given by Money Spinner was evidently public property, as he was picked to win the Maiden Closed Plate, but his stable companion, Titus II, upset the pot after a well-ridden finish. Kour Sahib romped away from his field and won anyhow. It is not often that we get a ten to one chance in these days, and it is refreshing when such a one sails home, all unbacked as Propeller did in the Hopeful Plate. I prophesied that Stockbell would make up for Saturday's disappointment the next time she was saddled; and so she did, but it was a circumstance of regret that a recent accident on the polo field kept Captain Greville out of the saddle which, however, Mr. Meynell filled with distinction. The following are details :—

MAIDEN HURDLE PLATE.—Winner, Rs. 200; second, Rs. 100; third, Rs. 50. For horses which have not won Hurdle race value Rs. 200. W. A. and C. raised 28lbs. 1½ miles over 6 flights.

CALCUTTA COURSE CHAT.

THURSDAY and Friday were quite against anything like work on the course which, owing to the continued downpour of rain, was rendered very heavy, making things anything but pleasant for those horses fully loaded. But as this sort of thing is all in the game, one doesn't hear much complaining, sporting owners hoping by the time the convincing hour comes round that our old friend Sol will have panned it out a bit right for them. And so it turned out.

Saturday morning saw everything very early astir and the horses intended for the afternoon, were sent pipe openers, Smallman, as usual, being particularly busy, as was also Harry Hard.

Hard had Lucy Grey (one of Mr. Dass' string) out. "Who has not heard of Lucy Grey," but here I stop, as I may be anticipating, and spoil a good thing, as I have found grey horses—invariably good ones. The color is certainly not common among racers, but we have known them carry off the highest honours of the Indian Turf.

Mr. Rees' Oom Paul put in a bit of useful work, as did also Fred. Gerrard's little lot. With Mr. Pugh's and Wishart's, as is their wont, doing their work generally away from the gaze of the curious.

Saturday afternoon was certainly an ideal one and quite in the fitness of things, as a return to those who have to be out betimes of a morning to attend to business. I was glad to see that good sportsman and capable rider Mr. Dudley get home in the Hurdles in such good style with his old favourite Dundonald. Personally I thought there were others in the race that would have outpaced him at the finish, but I offer my congratulations on the win as also on the excellent bid for a further win made on Oom Paul in the Maiden Horse Plate. Mr. Cowper has much sympathy over the loss he sustained through the death of Bushey in the Trial Hurdles. His rider, Mr. Raban, had a lucky escape, as from the stand, when he fell it looked none too well for him, but he was pluckily soon about again, and went near getting a place a little later with First Guide. Like Joe Bagstock He's "tough Sir, devlish tough."

Mr. Harper handed us up a hot'un in Western Queen. Hard rode a real good race on Springlock in the July Plate, nursing the top weight judiciously, and winning nicely at the end. He also scored his second win with Gassima and in good style. Hard is generally at the top of the monsoon averages and again starts with two firsts and a second. This sporting stable is certainly doing a great deal towards raising the standard of monsoon racing by the quality of horses they run, and Saturday's racing would compare not unfavourably with many a more ambitious meeting.

There were also a goodly number of ring men at hand to oblige you when inclined to back your fancy, to say nothing of the throng outside, who must do a lucrative business, judging by their numbers, with all and sundry. I really do not remember seeing these popular races better attended than was the case on Saturday and the executive deserve credit for the good fare provided.

Pearson left on Monday evening, well pleased with his Western Queen little coup. He had bad luck over Dundee, who could not leave Lucknow, on account of fever; also through bungling in the name and entry of Eileen, which threw the mare out. He got home, however, with the Queen, and had another in the race also, that might about have won. This other one we may find nearly doing the trick in the Pony Hurdles next Saturday.

The S. S. Euryalus which arrived early this week brought up Dulcima, Idler, and the New Zealander, Northumberland, for the Kour Sahib of Patiala. Also Mr. Billy Griffiths' lot. They are quartered at the popular Tattersall's stables, Bhowanipore, and I am glad to see the lot landed well. But the Nawab of Dacca had real hard luck in losing his new purchase, Sandboy, who died just before the steamer arrived at Madras.

A couple of new jockeys, whose names I did not get, also came by the same boat, and were on the course, and are on hand for riding. One had a mount on Revellie from Gerrard's string, and a young son of M. Trahan was also down: he is a chip of the old block.

Tuesday morning was very lively. Wishart was particularly busy away on the Ellenborough: but it is difficult to get any count of the work. Syd. White also works Mr. Pugh's horses on the same course.

Metalwing went a nice gallop with a native up. Then Yellow Mantle (Smallman), The Captain (Bond) went the Pony Course; at the last hurdle but one from home in the straight, the latter clouted the hurdle heavily, causing him to peck badly landing Bond a nasty one He was picked up and driven to hospital with a dislocated shoulder.

Gerrard put Altimas for the first time over hurdles: he put in a by no means bad performance, and when he gets more used to the game he will have to be reckoned with.

Second Thought went a spin with W. White in the saddle, and Bond prior to his fall, moved Shirley a bit. Hard put in a fast five furlongs on Loch Arden, who went by as usual full of fire and pulling like anything. When the colors and the right weight are up our old friend will not be wanting, as he is as fit as a big fiddle.

Garrard sent Rezia the Pony Jump Course and he went it well. He will about win this race on Saturday. Bin Rashid and Lord Lieutenant put in fast work, as also did Euryalus.

Not Yet (Hard), Florin (Mr. Galstaun) and a native on My Fancy, went the 6 furlongs, the deal going to the first named.

Lady Froude and Granny put in a smart ½ mile. The latter is a nice mover, and I opine will run her sporting owner's colors well forward, at the first time of asking. Mr. Dudley went over the Horse Course with one that was not new at the game, and later on went a smart gallop with Oom Paul—nice goer this.

On Wednesday morning there was no fast work done, but all the strings in training were being exercised. Smallman had out a couple of new arrivals, Piper and Johnston, since Bond has been put out of it with a shoulder dislocated, as the result of yesterday morning's fall.

Among further new arrivals I noticed in the stand enclosure, M. Trahan, R. Bence, Carter, so that there will be more than the usual cross-country jockeys available, and as Carter has a mount or two on Saturday, calculations are apt to be upset at the hands of this very capable rider.

Placing horses before the weights are out, is a flight of fancy, as regards the handicaps, but apportioning their loads according to my lights I give you an idea of the way the results are likely to panout, on Saturday:—
The August Plate.—1 Dundonald, 2 Fairlight, 3 Kittylea. The Pony Hurdles.—1 Rezia, 2 Yule Tide or Yellow Mantle. The Monsoon Plate.—1 Mr. Galstaun's selected (Springlock for preference), with Altamas for a shop and Clynder. The Pony Plate—1 Not Yet, 2 Little Doris, 3 Perfect. The Hunters' Plate.—1 Sylvia, 2 Mr. Pugh's selected (Ladybird or Beeswing), 3 The Jewel. The Fort Plate.—1 Oom Paul, 2 Shirley, 3 Euryalus.

THE TURF.

SANDOWN PARK SECOND SUMMER (ECLIPSE) MEETING.

THE air, heavily charged with electricity, had been sultry and oppressive throughout the Eclipse Stakes afternoon, and the thunderstorm which seemed imminent broke over London with sudden violence shortly after midnight, accompanied by a torrential downpour. Nothing could have been more welcome after the recent drought, and the parched land absorbed the moisture greedily. The threats of further visitations of the kind during the day had their effect upon the attendance, which, though up to the average, looked scanty in comparison with yesterday. Sombre clouds brooded overhead throughout the afternoon and rain fell sharply at times, but it was not of long enough duration to interfere very seriously with the entertainment. An item of such value as the National Breeders' Produce Stakes was alone sufficient to invest the programme with intense interest, and, notwithstanding the fact that the last event fizzled out to a walk over, the spectators had good cause to be satisfied with the sport provided. The King again graced the scene with his presence but unhappily his two-year-old, Perchant, did not run up to expectations in the big race. Having regard to the numerous difficulties with which they were confronted, the stands in chaotic condition and the attendance on the first day nearly double what might have been anticipated, the indefatigable managing director, Mr. W. J. Compton, and his able assistant, Mr. N. A. Loraine, must be congratulated upon the successful issue of a meeting the counterpart of which may not be seen for many a day.

LEICESTER SUMMER MEETING.

The severe storms that visited the South and Midlands towards the end of last week came at a very opportune moment. Agriculturalists had already began to feel the effects of a three-weeks' drought, and the growth of the crops would have been considerably retarded had it lasted much longer. The beneficial effects of the copious rain upon the country generally were noticeable to a degree all along the route from London to Leicester, and at Oadby in particular the vegetation looks delightfully fresh the herbage on the course had attained a vigorous growth since being mown and the ground yielded excellent galloping. The public were early astir in the streets of Leicester on the morning of the 21st. The double execution of the two murderers Porter and Preston, for killing a policeman in the neighbourhood last May, attacted large numbers of the morbid minded into the main thoroughfares. They were augmented later by a stong force of metropolitan race-goers, further contingents arriving in due course from the Midlands and North. The muster by the time they foregathered in the enclosures was much above the average. The morning had been inviting enough, but it clouded over by mid-day, and there was a sprinkling of rain during a great part of the afternoon. It did not interfere much with the enjoyment of the proceedings, however, and runners being plentiful, the entertainment panned out satisfactorily.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S PLATE (HANDICAP)—Of 282 sovs. One mile and a quarter.

Won easily by three lengths; four lengths between second and third. Parramatta was fourth, Fits and Starts fifth, and King's Idler last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2min 8⅘ secs.

Leicester is falling into line with other go-ahead towns in the Midlands and North by laying down a new electric tramway system throughout the borough. The work is as yet incomplete, and some of the thoroughfares are in a state of chaos in consequence, but before many weeks are over the new service should be in general operation, and it will be interesting to see whether it exerts any beneficial influence upon the future attendances at Oadby. The threats of a stormy night were fulfilled to the letter, the wind howling dismally, attended by a torrential downpour. Had it ceased at daybreak, as at one time seemed likely, no harm would have been done, but, unhappily, heavy showers fell at frequent intervals during the morning, and to this doubtless the slightly diminished attendance on the race-course was due. The outlook about the time that a resumption was made was decidedly ominous, but the rain happily blew over by three o'clock, and during the remainder of the afternoon the weather was delightfully fine. The entries for the second stage of the meeting were in keeping with those of the opening day, the card containing no fewer than 162 names. The number of combatants was hardly commensurate with this huge aggregate, but runners were plentiful, nevertheless, and any lack of quality was made up for by quantity.

LIVERPOOL JULY MEETING.

There are no more staunch and liberal supporters of any racing venture than Lord Derby, Lord Stanley, and Lord Farquhar, particularly of the various gatherings at Liverpool, and it is bad luck that they should have found themselves under the necessity of scratching the whole of their combined fleet for this week's Aintree engagements, owing, it is understood, to an epidemic of pink eye in the stable. Mr Lambton's fashionable establishment levies heavy toll upon the prize list as regularly as the Liverpool fixtures come round and the summary elimination of all his charges will have a marked effect upon the meeting. Bistonian, the solitary survivor of the nine candidates who originally represented Stanley House in the Liverpool Cup, will thus be an absentee, and nine horses disappeared from the various events in yesterday's card.

THE PHILADELPHIANS' TOUR.

MATCH v. HAMPSHIRE.—Eleventh of the Tour Played at Southampton on July 16th, 17th and 18th. Abandoned.

It was a dismal day when the Americans began their match with Hampshire, and the heavy rain which fell in the early morning kept spectators away. Dr. Lester was able to take his place in the team again, but both King and Scattergood were still absent on account of injuries. When the visitors won the toss they batted on a very slow wicket, and owing to frequent showers there was so little play that when stumps were drawn at half-past three only 130 runs had been made for the loss of six wickets. The commencement of the innings was dispiriting, for before lunch six wickets were down for 60, and no one seemed able to play Llewellyn and Hesketh-Prichard. But when Cregar joined Lester he at once began to hit out, and chiefly by means of powerful drives he scored 50 in 25 minutes, and when play ended for the day he was not out 55, with Lester not out 19. On the next morning Cregar was out before he had time to increase his total, but Lester played a beautiful game, and as he received excellent support, the total was much better than was anticipated. Lester was batting for an hour and-a-half for a faultless innings of 67. For the rest of the day the Hampshire men made hay of the bowling of the visitors, and when Hill and Llewellyn got together they put on 105 runs in an hour. Hill's 121 was made in two hours and Llewellyn reached his hundred in two hours, being still at the wickets with 136 to his credit when stumps were drawn. The total was 372 for seven wickets. At a quarter past three on Saturday it was decided to abandon the game as there was no prospect of any play.

MIDDLESEX vs. LANCASHIRE.—Played at Old Trafford on 20th, 21st and 22nd July. Drawn.

Middlesex, the still unbeaten county, had rather the worst of the first day's play, for against the Lancashire total of 176 they had only made 81, and Warner, Moon, Beldam, and Macgregor were out. No rain had fallen at Manchester for some days, but the wicket was slow, and the bowlers generally had the best of matters. Several men played good cricket, but no one succeeded in getting anything like a command over the bowling. Perhaps the most useful innings of the day was the 34 not out of Findlay, for he kept up his wicket while the Lancashire tail were trying desperately hard to make runs. For Middlesex both Warner and Beldam did so well that they seemed likely to carry their bats ; they put up 68 for the first wicket in an hour and twenty five minutes. When stumps were drawn, E. A. Beldam, who on the strength of his fine performance at the Crystal Palace, was included in the Middlesex team, was not out, 0. He played a very strong defensive game on Tuesday morning and finding no one able to offer him any assistance carried his bat for 80, thus making a most successful début for his county under great difficulties. Rain began to fall as soon as the Middlesex innings was over, and there was no more play. Again during the night there was heavy rain and play was not possible until three o'clock, when Lancashire could do nothing on a sticky wicket against Trot and Hearne. But when their innings closed they had a lead of 106, and Middlesex had not time to make the runs, although, with only four wickets down for 64, they were in a fine position.

SURREY vs. SOMERSET.—Played at the Oval on 20th, 21st and 22nd July. Surrey won by 246 runs. In the gloomiest weather good progress was made in this match on Monday, although on account of the very bad light it was only possible to play for three hours and-a-half. At the end of the day there was not much to choose between the two sides, for against the Surrey total of 165 Somerset had made 42 for the loss of three wickets. The game began shortly after midday, but at the end of a quarter of an hour it was found necessary to cease operations until after lunch, as the light was about equal to that of a late November afternoon. Although on a difficult wicket the batsmen were uncomfortable when the game began, Somerset felt the want of Cranfield very much. With Braund in such fine form as he was and Cranfield at the other end, things might have gone badly with Surrey. As it was Hayward played a very steady innings, lasting for an hour and-a-quarter, while, at the critical time when it was a question whether the innings would not come to an abrupt conclusion, Walker once more showed determination and skill, and made an invaluable 39. Lockwood, who was in with him for some time, hit out boldly as soon as he left, and it began to look as if he would make 50 or 60, when, with the last man in, he was run out in an attempt to secure a short run. Braund, who bowled nearly all through the innings, had a splendid analysis, but Tyler, who reappeared in the team was not successful. Somerset went in to bat at about half-past five, but ten minutes before time stumps were drawn on account of the bad light. S. M. J. Woods was able to play again, and went in first. On Tuesday, Richardson was even more successful with the ball than Braund had been on the previous day, and although P. R. Johnson and Braund made a useful stand, none of the rest could do anything, and the total was 63 behind that of Surrey. All went well for Surrey until the last over before lunch, when Holland, who had hardly been at his best, was stumped off Tyler with the total at 72. Hayward was then not out 29. A long partnership followed between Hayes and Hayward, producing 139 in an hour and-a-quarter, the former, who made some brilliant hits, making 80 of them. There was no holding Surrey now, although Hayward was bowled for 88 after a stay at the wickets of a couple of hours, during which he made no mistakes, while he often punished the bowling severely. At the tea interval Dowson and Walker were together. These two men took advantage of the bowling being rather loose, and in thirty-five minutes they increased the total by 75. Then three wickets fell in the space of a few minutes, and seven were down for 313. But the innings was by no means over, for Clode and Lockwood scored even faster than Dowson and Walker, making 71 runs between them in half an hour. The result of all this rapid scoring was that Surrey were able to set their opponents the task of making 456 to win. Somerset had a few minutes' batting before stumps were drawn, and scored 10 without loss. The next day they made a plucky effort to put a good appearance on the game, and in this they succeeded, for although they were badly beaten they did well enough to keep up the reputation of their side for good play under difficulties. But what they badly wanted was a man like L. C. H. Palairet, capable at a crisis of making a score big enough to give his side a chance, and such a man was not forthcoming. But F. M. Lee greatly distinguished himself, while Samson, Johnson, Lewis, Braund, and Hardy all played good cricket. In both Somerset innings Richardson bowled admirably.

YORKSHIRE vs. NOTTS.—Played at Leeds on 20th, 21st and 22nd July. Yorkshire won by 164 runs.

In an unfortunate moment Mr. Jones, when he won the toss, decided to send Yorkshire in to bat. The result was that they scored 339 runs on a wicket which seemed likely to be much more difficult on the next morning. Five of the Yorkshire team were seen to great advantage. For the first wicket Brown and Tunnicliffe put up 75. Denton was missed directly after he came in, and he and Brown were together at lunch time when the total was 119 for one wicket. This was a very promising commencement, but directly after the game was resumed Brown was l-b-w for a beautiful innings of 57. After Wilkinson was dismissed Denton soon followed him ; his attractive innings of 69 had taken him an hour and forty minutes to compile. Smith and Lord Hawke were disposed of without difficulty, but Hirst and Rhodes added 68 for the seventh wicket in three quarters of an hour, Hirst for once playing a purely defensive game. The innings closed just before the time for drawing stumps. Notts soon met with disasters when play began on Tuesday, but Jones and Dixon both made a plucky attempt to put a better appearance on the game. Four men were out including Jones, for 75, but G. Gunn and Dixon made a long stand, shewing the greatest patience. At half-past three rain came down heavily, when the total was 154 for six wickets. After an hour and-a-quarter the game was resumed, and when the next wicket fell, 32 runs were required to save the follow on. If they were made Notts had a possible chance of making a draw ; otherwise they would almost certainly lose. But Dixon continued to bat splendidly and the innings closed for 202—that is to say only 137 behind that of Yorkshire. In their second innings Yorkshire had lost two wickets for 34 when stumps were drawn, and were thus 181 runs ahead. A lot of rain fell on Tuesday night, and the wicket yesterday was very difficult. Hence when his side was 227 runs ahead at lunch time, Lord Hawke declared his innings, feeling confident that Notts could not make the runs on the wicket against Rhodes and Hirst. Nor was he disappointed, for these two bowlers disposed of the Notts men in an hour and-a-quarter.

YORKSHIRE vs. WORCESTERSHIRE.—Played at Huddersfield on 16th, 17th and 18th July. Drawn.

In this curious match there was no play on the first day owing to rain, which began at about eleven o'clock, and showed no signs of cessation until after the luncheon hour. On the next day there was only a couple of hours' cricket, but a vast amount of progress was made in a short time Whatever may be thought of Rhodes as a good wicket bowler, he is unquestionably as skilful as ever when it comes to bowling on a pitch which suits him, while Hirst is almost as difficult at the other end. It was on a wicket which exactly suited both Rhodes and Hirst that the Worcestershire men had to bat, and they fared no better than did the Australians last year against Yorkshire bowling. With the total at 2, H. K. Foster was caught at mid-off; at 4 Arnold was stumped. Rhodes missed Wheldon 'from an easy chance of c and b, and Bowley was c and b by Hirst. At 11, Wheldon, after enjoying another escape, was, caught at short leg. Caldwell now hit a couple of fours off Hirst but after thus nearly doubling the score, he was caught at the wicket at 21. The next to fall was Gaukrodger, who was caught at slip with the total at 22 There were thus six wickets down. At 23 Pearson was bowled, and Bird caught at slip, and at 24 Wilson was caught at third man Nine wickets down. There was now a delay of three-quarters of an hour owing to rain, and then with the total unaltered, Isaac was bowled. At a quarter to six Yorkshire went in, and by six o'clock Tunnicliffe and Brown had passed the Worcestershire total By half-past six the total was 76 for one wicket. In the course of his fine innings of 38 not out, Tunnicliffe hit four 4's in an over off Arnold. About the only hope that now remained to Worcestershire was that rain might come to their assistance It was not until half-past four that there was any play on Saturday and then, Lord Hawke having wisely closed his innings, Worcestershire entered on their exceedingly difficult task of trying to play Rhodes and Hirst on a completely ruined wicket. For a time it was more than likely that they would not be able to hold out long enough to save themselves from defeat, and the first four wickets fell for eight runs. But Arnold and Isaac then got together, and by the most careful play added five more runs in the next half-hour, and enabled their side to breathe again, although they were by no means out of the wood. Wheldon and Pearson, after two more wickets had fallen, came together, and had the satisfaction of playing out time.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

FOR 3rd August Chinchwad station on the direct line to Bombay was the rendezvous. It is I am told a long seven miles from the heart of fashionable Poona, and as the day drew near it was interesting to hear at the Gymkhana and elsewhere, animated discussion as to whether (looking to the fact that the persistent rain we have been having showed no sign of ceasing and that some enterprising sportsman who had driven out to the scene of action reported miles of country in that direction unrideable) the game was quite worth the candle. It soon became obvious to the casual observer that several sportsmen were 'not for it.' One facetious young gentleman regretted that he kept his boat at Rosherville, not Chinchwad and that his parents had neglected to have him instructed in the art of natation in early youth. Another distinguished veteran opined that his old moke went best on the top of the ground and failed to put up record performances when the mud was much over his hocks. So distant a meet in such weather certainly did not gain universal approval, but nevertheless a good few staunch sportsmen whom neither storm nor rain, wind nor tempest could deter from the stern enslavement of sport turned up to meet the Master at the appointed hour which on "this occasion only" was fixed at 7-30 instead of 6, and a few moments' law was given to some who elected to come by train instead of hammering along the hard high macadamized route. A small patch of jungle (what a comprehensive word that seems out here!) was the first draw I hear; nor were fond hopes blighted for it was promptly apparent that bold reynard's Aryan prototype was "at home" to his Poona visitors, though not anxious to receive them. Coming out from "Home" it is strange to read in a local account (the descriptive eloquence of which I envy) of the 1st whip's whistle! and that the Master at once toos hounds to this peculair form of "hallos." But they seem to do a lot of strange things out here. The black brother beckons downwards and even Robins wear their hunting colour in the opposite place. But to cease the cackle and come to the hunting it appears that a jackal broke cover with a pariah dog coursing at his tag—(a nasty mean unsporting sort of trick to play a pal) and the hapless jack was evidently so run off his legs at the start that what might have been a good run was frustrated and after seven minutes over heavy going hounds tumbled the jack over, though whether the spoil-sport pariah met with the ignominious death his untimely interference merited history doth not record. Not a very exciting run I am told, but the luck was on the wrong side.

Nearly all the sugarcane coverts were I hear inaccessible as all the low-lying land was one vast slush of swamp and a horse is after all not quite a hippopotamus The Master consequently showed an obviously wise discretion in making for the upper ground and, after drawing a likely looking hill for foxes blank, drew down towards a nullah. Here hounds soon gave assurance of the recent presence of their "friend the enemy' and feathering gaily joined in glad chorus towards some village called Chincholi, where it was feared that the practically impregnable prickly pear was his intended haven. But a right sporting jack was this, for he scorned what would I gather have been safe harbourage from his foes and skirting the town made a wide sweep towards a big hill. Hounds were I am told hunting to admiration and a pretty sight it must have been, but for much of the distance horsemen had of necessity to ride cunning as any attempt to really ride to hounds was rendered futile owing to the sticky clay soil and it was on the well drained slopes only that horses could make any pretence of moving freely. A spry little chinkara offers cruel temptation, but only one couple I believe fell to its blandishments very creditable to discipline and a prompt 1st whip, indeed I hear on all sides that Mr. Armstrong's assistance is invaluable as he is I believe finely mounted and always handy for cases of emergency. Over some terribly heavy plough land—amounting almost to a quagmire and here hounds had to puzzle out the line and for a moment or two were at fault till a skilful lift by the Master put them on the line once more and away they raced for an adjacent hill where for some unaccountable reason the pack divided, luckily to unite on the further side and sinking the hill they ran to the nullah beneath and in the jungle land close by this very stout jack found safety, for Colonel Sheringham wisely considered hounds had had enough of running for one day bearing in mind the weary miles between them and kennels and stopped them. It was from what I can gather a good sporting run, the hound work being worth going all the way to watch, but the continuous rain and heavy going naturally prevented the run from being as enjoyable as it might otherwise have been and the consensus of opinion seems to be that the popular wish would more generally be met by avoiding such needlessly distant meets in such very precarious weather.

To make up for the remoteness of Chinchwad the ever-familiar Bund Bridge, equidistant from Poona and Kirkee, was wisely selected as the trysting place for Thursday, the 6th, and the consequent enlargement of the attendance was very pronounced and after all in all subscription packs here, I take it, no less than in "Merrie Englande" it is the majority and not the select minority that must be catered for. The river bank between the Bridge and His Highness the Aga Khan's palace, so well known to all of us who enjoy the balmy breezes of Yerowda (I naturally refer to those of us still resident outside the famous prisons walls) and indeed one of the landmarks of the surrounding country was the first draw, and after drawing the riverside reeds and rushes assiduously, hounds announced their appreciation of the grateful aroma in the nullah behind the palace demesne and shortly after a well known feather weight away on the left viewed away the wild rover as he slunk over the Ahmednagar Road and head for the distant hills, a very sporting line of country as I happen to know, though more suited to a Deccan hunter than an old English pede-strian as I know to my cost! A few couple of hounds had struck off the line a little before, unfortunately the main body of the pack could be holcked on and the leading hounds took a deal of catching. Right through (and for a time up) stoney glen (well dubbed in very truth) and away, still at a great pace bearing the heaviness of the going (and how horses travel at the pace I gather they do, over such innumerable rocks and holes is little short of a marvel) and straight for Lohogaon. Swinging left-handed Kalas of the ford was this good galloping jack's next point. Hounds were carrying a great head and the field were stretching out as pace and heavy going told on those not "hunting fit." Crossing the big gripe the jack struck away over the Alandi Road and made for the open, but from this point hounds were running to view and would take no denial and tumbled a real galloping jack after a most sporting twenty-three minutes. Throughout this capital little run few went better than Miss Low and Miss Anderson and the Master presented each with the usual mementos of the jack that had led them so good a gallop.

After giving all a much-required breather the Master jogged back over the latter part of the recent line to pick up, tailed off hounds. Approaching stoney glen hounds began to "feather" in unmistakeable hint of something being on foot—nothing more probable that one of the merry little silver foxes—whose acquaintance I greatly desire to make, but working industriously into some jowari crops a fine jack put matters beyond a doubt by showing himself. No straight traveller was this one and it weariers both scube and persuser to deal with the gyrations of "a ringer' (them dirty bellmen as I once heard a distinguished hun tsmen call them). Suffice it to say that the centre of his many circles was terminated in the midst of an appreciative pack A capital morning's exercise and some very pretty hunting on the part of hounds I am assured on all sides. Verily the luck has turned and Colonel Sheringham must be a happy and contented man.

THE BANGALORE TOURNAMENT.

THE Annual Bangalore Polo Tournament opened on Monday, the 3rd August, with a game between the Mysore Imperial Service Lancers and "B" Team of the Carabiniers. The tournament was continued on the 4th, 6th, and 8th instant, the semi-final and the final being played on the beautiful polo ground of H. H. the Maharaja of Mysore who presents the Cup for competition. With regard to the play on the opening day there was nothing very special to be noted. The Durham Light Infantry scratched to the Carabiniers "A" Team, and below will be found a brief account of the game between the Carabiniers "B" Team and the Mysore Imperial Service Lancers.

First Chucker.—The Carabiniers pressed for a minute, but Macquoid cleared grandly, and Anandji Kadm and Murad Beg went down the ground together and a subsidiary opened the Lancers' score. For the rest of the chucker, the Lancers were continually on the aggressive and Anandji Kadm scored a goal. Score: Imperial Service Lancers 1 goal 1 subsidiary, Carabiniers "B" Team nil.

Second Chucker.—Three subsidiaries were scored by the Lancers in quick succession, Anandji Kadm and Murad Beg being very conspicuous for them, and then Kennard relieved with a good run. Murad Beg, however, pulled him up finely in dangerous proximity to the goal and nothing more was scored, although the chucker was a long one. Score: Imperial Service Lancers 1 goal 4 subsidiaries, Carabiniers "B" Team nil.

Third Chucker.—Anketell Jones broke away with a fine run, but missed his final shot badly and the ball came back to the Carabiniers' end, where Nunjaraj Urs got a clear chance near the goal and easily scored. Score: Imperial Service Lancers 2 goals 4 subsidiaries, Carabiniers "B" Team nil.

Fourth Chucker.—The Carabiniers hit the ball behind their own line, and Anandji Kadm taking advantage of the situation which ensued, added another goal. The Carabiniers then made an effort, and play quickening they invaded for a while. But the Lancers were again out playing them when the chucker closed. Score:—Imperial Service Lancers—3 goal 4 subsidiaries. Carabiniers "B" Team nil.

Fifth Chucker.—For some time play ruled fairly even, but the Lancers were the more accurate and Nunjaraj Urs with a long shot only just missed the posts, a subsidiary accruing. Then the Lancers practically penned their opponents and before the chucker ended, both Macquoid and Nunjaraj Urs added goals, placing the final result beyond doubt. Score: Imperial Service Lancers 5 goals 5 subsidiaries, Carabiniers "B" Team nil.

Sixth Chucker.—Only a couple of minutes remained for play, and nothing more was scored, the Lancers winning easily as above described. Final score: Imperial Service Lancers 5 goals 5 subsidiaries Carabiniers "B" Team nil

Second Day, 14th August 1903.

On the following morning two matches were played and both produced some goodish polo, although in neither case was the result ever much in doubt. The first game was the best, the first Madras Lancers offering little resistance to the Bangalore Gymkhana. It was hard lines on the Lancers, however, that Captain Arnold their No. 1 was ill and his place had to be taken by a native substitute. Faunce and Popham worked hard but unavailingly for the Lancers, and Peel was brilliant for the Gymkhana. In the previous match all the Hussars were good, whilst the Queen's Own Sappers and Miners fought the match out most pluckily to the end. The ponies of the Hussars were, however, decidedly superior and repeatedly outpaced those of the Sappers, several of them being most handy into the bargain. Towards the latter part of the play the attendance was large, H. H. The Maharaja of Mysore and Sir Donald Robertson being on the ground, but the counter-attraction of the Horse Show, which was in simultaneous progress on the high ground, kept some people away.

4TH (Q.O.) HUSSARS vs. Q. O. SAPPERS AND MINERS.

First Chucker.—The Hussars pressed at once, the Sappers seemed bothered by the pace of their opponents' ponies, and from a pass by Bell, the Hussars Commanding Officer opened the score. Subsequently Bell got in a good run, and a long shot, which only just missed the goal posts and scored a subsidiary. The Sappers then invaded, but Barnes, a member by the way of the erstwhile 4th Hussars team which won the Inter—regimental Polo Tournament at Meerut, cleared finely and the chucker ended. Score: 4th (Q. O.) Hussars 1 goal 1 subsidiary, Q. O. Sappers and Miners nil.

Second Chucker.—Play was somewhat slow at first, but quickened up, and after a subsidiary Colonel Kincaid Smith again scored for the team from Secunderabad. They pressed for the remainder of the chucker, but were unable to score. Score:—4th (Q. O.) Hussars 1 goals 2 subsidiaries, (Q. O.) Sappers and Miners nil.

Third Chucker.—After some give-and-take play, Bell got in an excellent run, but a foul against the Hussars neutralised the advantage gained. Only a subsidiary was scored in a rather uninteresting chucker. Score 4th (Q.O.) Hussars 2 goals 3 subsidiaries, Q.O. Sappers and Miners—nil.

Fourth Chucker.—Irvine repulsed a determined attack by the Hussars, and shortly afterwards scored a good goal for his own side, Wagstaffe following suit amidst applause immediately after ends were changed. A subsidiary to the Cavalry was the only other score during the chucker. Score:—4th (Q.O.) Hussars—2 goals 4 subsidiaries. Q.O. Sappers and Miners—2 goals 0 subsidiaries.

Fifth Chucker.—The Hussars went off with a rush and a "dangerous foul" against the Sappers helping them barnes shot into the goal mouth. The shot was stopped, but the Cavalrymen returned to the attack and Colonel Kincaid Smith scored. This goal was followed by another from Bell, and then sticky play near the Sappers' goal prevailed until the chucker ended. Score: 4th (Q.O.) Hussars 4 goals 4 subsidiaries, Q.O. Sappers and Miners 2 goals 0 subsidiaries.

Sixth Chucker.—Only 2 minutes 25 seconds remained for play during which Bell from a pass by Neilson scored a final goal for the Hussars. Final score: 4th (Q.O.) Hussars: 5 goals 4 subsidiaries, Q.O. Sappers and Miners 2 goals 0 subsidiaries.

SECOND DAY.

BANGALORE GYMKHANA vs. 1st MADRAS LANCERS.

1st Chucker.—Even play in mid-field was followed by Popham putting the ball behind the Gymkhana line. Tufnell got away in a fast run, but was well stopped by the Lancer back, the Essex officer was not, however, to be denied and again getting well away scored a brilliant goal. After changing ends the Gymkhana still pressed and Gwyer scored with a beautiful slanting back-handed shot. Score: Bangalore Gymkhana 2 goals 0 subsidiary, 1st Madras Lancers nil.

2nd Chucker.—The Gymkhana still played well and Malet getting clear away ran half down the ground and scored the third goal for his side. Shortly afterwards, however, Faunce for the Lancers had a chance and on a remarkably fast pony left his opponents standing still and scored a fine goal. A vigorous retaliatory run by Peel and a final shot which narrowly missed closed the chucker. Score: Bangalore Gymkhana 3 goals 0 subsidiary, 1st Madras Lancers 1 goal 0 subsidiary.

3rd Chucker.—The Lancers for a time held their own, but their weakness at No. 1 was apparent, and Peel getting a fairly easy chance made no mistake in his shot. The Lancers were soon afterwards penalised for hitting behind their own line, and Peel again added to the Bangalore score. A fine run by Faunce which, however, was unproductive and a subsidiary to the Gymkhana were the only other points of interest during the chucker. Score: Bangalore Gymkhana 5 goals 1 subsidiary, 1st Madras Lancers 1 goal 0 subsidiary.

4th Chucker.—The Lancers made a great effort and Faunce and Popham were very conspicuous, but they were not well backed up. The latter, however, scored with a good shot, and after changing ends the same pair were dangerous for a time, in fact Peel only just cleared one shot. Then the effort died away, the local team came down again, and Tufnell scored a goal. Score: Bangalore Gymkhana 6 goals 2 subsidiaries, 1st Madras Lancers 2 goals 0 subsidiary.

5th Chucker.—Tufnell scored a goal which was an absolute "sitter" after several players had missed the ball, and then play slackened, an additional subsidiary to the Gymkhana being the only other point in a somewhat uninteresting chucker. Score: Bangalore Gymkhana 7 goals 3 subsidiaries, 1st Madras Lancers 2 goals 0 subsidiary.

THIRD DAY.

THE SEMI-FINALS.

Throughout the tournament six chuckers of five minutes each or thirty minutes' actual play, with intervals of three minutes between chuckers was the rule. The four teams still left in the tournament tried conclusions on the Maharaja's polo ground on Thursday, the 6th August. The Mysore Lancers made a most plucky fight against the Hussars, and although the fact that Captain Barnes was knocked out of time in the opening chucker was hard lines on the gallant "IVth," Lieutenant Lewin, who pulled off his coat and played in trousers with handkerchiefs tied round his knees, made such an efficient substitute that the handicap although it no doubt existed could not be described as a very heavy one. For the rest the Gymkhana were well beaten by the Carabiniers, the attendance was very large, the beautiful ground looked level and green as a cricket pitch—a great improvement on the dusty hog-back appearance presented by the Maidan ground in the former games. H H. the Maharajah. the Yuvaraja, the British Resident, and Lady Robertson were present, and the 6th Dragoon Guards dispensed lavish hospitality to their many friends whilst their fine band played an excellent selection of music. With the exception in fact of a strongish wind across the ground conditions were perfect both from a polo and a general enjoyment point of view. Captain Macquoid, D. S. O., was a host in himself for the Mysore Regiment. Details of play:—

4TH (Q O) HUSSARS vs. MYSORE IMPERIAL SERVICE LANCERS.

1st Chucker.—The Lancers attacked, but after some clever exchanges, the winners of the tournament at Meerut broke away and were only stopped by Herculean efforts on the part of Macquoid. Then an accidental collision between Barnes and Macquoid resulted in the former coming down and play was stopped for a few minutes. Barnes attempted to continue play but was unable to manage it and Lewin took his place at short notice, Colonel Kincaid Smith then opening the scoring with a really pretty slanting shot. A subsidiary had previously been hit by the Hussars and the score represented the play in the first chucker very fairly. Score: 4th (Q.O.) Hussars 1 goal 1 subsidiary, Mysore Imperial Service Lancers nil.

2nd Chucker.—There was nothing particularly striking about this chucker although some fast galloping took place and each end of the ground was visited alternately. Score: 4th (Q.O.) Hussars 1 goal 1 subsidiary, Mysore Imperial Service Lancers nil.

3rd Chucker.—During this chucker the Lancers had at least their share of the play, Murad Beg being especially good and Macquoid again and again checking the invasions of the Hussars in splendid style. In fact although playing at back he was almost ubiquitous during this chucker and did quite invaluable work. Murad Beg eventually got a chance and scored for the Lancers with a very fine long shot. A subsidiary to the Hussars closed a good chucker in which Lewin was most useful at back to his side. Score: 4th (Q.O.) Hussars 1 goal 2 subsidiaries, Mysore Imperial Service Lancers 1 goal 0 subsidiary.

4th Chucker.—Colonel Kincaid Smith scored a subsidiary which was very nearly a goal and then the Lancers were penalised for a foul. Even exchanges and another subsidiary to the Hussars, who as in their former game now began to outpace their opponents were the only other salient features of this chucker. Score: 4th (Q.O.) Hussars 1 goal 4 subsidiaries, Mysore Imperial Service Lancers, 1 goal 0 subsidiary 5th Chucker.—The Hussars, ponies were evidently the fresher and they came down with a rush. A desperate scrimmage took place in front of the Lancer goal and the ball was put through but by whom deponent knoweth not. The Hussars still pressed but nothing further was scored. Score: 4th (Q.O) Hussars 2 goals 4 subsidiaries, Mysore Imperial Service Lancers 1 goal 0 subsidiary.

6th Chucker.—The Lancers still worked like Trojans although only one minute and 21 seconds were left for play. Their opponents, however, were always with them and nothing further was scored. Final score: 4th (Q.O.) Hussars 2 goals 4 subsidiaries, Mysore Imperial Service Lancers 1 goal 0 subsidiary.

THE CARABINIERS "A" TEAM vs. BANGALORE GYMKHANA.

1st Chucker.—The Carabiniers at once went off with a rush and Swifte scored in the first minute with a fine back-handed shot which brought forth loud applause from the gallant "Carabs'" many supporters. The "Gym" goal was in danger throughout the chucker, but nothing farther was scored Score: The Carabiniers "A" Team 1 goal 0 subsidiary, Bangalore Gymkhana nil.

2nd Chucker.—The renegade Gwyer, who was playing against his own corps having been away in Bellary until just previous to the opening of the tournament cleared very cleverly on several occasions during this chucker, and the Gymkhana became the aggressors for a minute or so, but just before the chucker closed Dormer added another goal for the cavalrymen, this score being the concluding point of a fast run. Score: The Carabiniers "A" Team 2 goals 0 subsidiary, Bangalore Gymkhana nil.

3rd Chucker.—The Gymkhana played vigorously, and Tufnell and Peel were much to the fore. Dormer, however, again broke away for his side and travelling very fast added a goal to the score. After the re-start there was some determined riding off and Malet came down, but no damage was done. Fast even play, a pass from Dormer to Swifte, a good goal by the latter and a chucker which had gone considerably over time ended. Score: The Carabiniers "A" Team 4 goals 0 subsidiary, Bangalore Gymkhana nil.

4th Chucker.—Swifte got an easy chance and scored, and then the Gymkhana made an effort, Ker having a good deal to do at back and doing it well. Kirby's riding off was also a feature of this chucker, and a subsidiary was all that was scored during the remainder of the play, although both this and the previous chucker were so lengthy that ponies were fairly well baked before the close. Score: The Carabiniers "A" Team 5 goals 1 subsidiary, Bangalore Gymkhana nil.

5th Chucker.—So prolonged had been the two preceding chuckers that only 55 seconds were left to play, and a sixth chucker was entirely out of the question. Nothing more was scored in the short time that remained and the Carabiniers earned the right to meet the Hussars in the final with much ease. Final score: The Carabiniers "A" Team 5 goals 1 subsidiary, Bangalore Gymkhana nil.

THE FINAL.

4TH (Q. O.) HUSSARS vs. THE CARABINIERS "A." TEAM.

A record crowd tramped and biked and rode and drove out to the Maharajah's beautiful polo ground to see the final game of the Bangalore tournament on Saturday, the 8th August. Sir Donald and Lady Robertson and H. H. the Maharajah, were again present and His Highness was "At Home" in a beautiful marquée pitched on one side of the ground. Several drags were in evidence and whilst the whole of Bangalore society was present, the general public lined the sides of the ground four deep.

Captain Barnes was still unable to play owing to having strained his arm and broken a bone in his wrist in his fall in the opening chucker on Thursday, and Lieutenant Lewin again played back for the Hussars. With regard to the game, it cannot be said that the losers had the best of luck, although probably the best team won. Their back was off the ground when the first goal was scored against them and several of their subsidiaries went marvellously near the post. Still the Hussars played a good game, were better together perhaps than their opponents and towards the end of the play as in their previous games the excellence of their ponies told. At the conclusion of the play an adjournment was made to the front of the marquée, where Sir Donald Robertson said:—"Ladies and Gentlemen,—Before Lady Lobertson complies with the request of H. H. the Maharajah to deliver this cup to the winning team I ask to be allowed to say a few words and I promise you they shall be very few. To begin with I think we should all offer our cordiae thanks to H. H. the Maharajah of Mysore who came to the rescue in 1901 when the polo cups had been won outright by the Golconda team, and presented the very handsome trophy which has to-day been won by the 4th Hussars. We should I think also thank His Highness for allowing the Semi finals and the Final to be played on his beautiful polo ground which is perhaps one of the best grounds in India. (Hear, hear and a voice "It is the best".) The game to-day has been an excellent one and we must all congratulate our gallant friends the 4th Hussars on their well-earned victory. The losers—the Carabiniers—do not require our sympathy. They gave the Hussars a very good game and I think that two goals and 4 subsidiaries is a very good response to 5 goals and 1 subsidiary. (Hear, hear.) I have no doubt that when the Carabiniers get more used to India, they will improve even upon the excellent game they now play. (Hear, hear.)"

Lady Robertson then presented the grand cup given by H. H. the Maharajah to Colonel Kincaid Smith and the smaller cups to the members of the winning team, and with cheers for Lady Robertson, the Maharajah, the winners and losers, the Bangalore Polo Tournament of 1903 came to an end. Details of play:—

1st Chucker.—Play had only been in progress for a few seconds when the Carabiniers scored a subsidiary by an invasion in which Kirby was very prominent. Kincaid Smith then got away with a fast run but was pulled up by Ker and give-and-take play succeeded, which was followed by Dormer taking a pass from Kirby and missing his shot which nevertheless was not far wide as the chucker closed. So far the Carabiniers had had distinctly the best of matters. Score: The Carabiniers "A" Team 1 subsidiary, 4th (Q. O.) Hussars nil.

2nd Chucker.—Play opened at the Hussars' end, and the Carabiniers secored a scond subsidiary. From the bit out the "Carbs" returned to the attack but the game continued to be somewhat sticky. Neilson at length got away and Ker breaking a stirrup leather was forced to retire for a moment, and during his absence the Hussars scored a goal through the agency of Neilson. Ker's enforced absence being a distinct piece of bad luck for the local team. Hardly had play been re-started when Neilson again got away and scored another goal with a fine back-handed shot. The Hussars continued to be irresistible and once more a goal accrued to their score as the chucker ended, Colonel Kincaid Smith this time steering the ball through the posts. Score: 4th (Q.O.) Hussars 3 goals 0 subsidiary, The Carabiniers "A" Team 0 goal 2 subsidiaries.

3rd Chucker.—The Carabiniers gained ground, and amidst loud applause Lieutenant Dormer scored very cleverly for his side. The game improved, the players losing their initial nervousness and the hitting becoming more accurate. When the chucker closed, however, the Hussars were looking very dangerous. Score: 4th (Q.O.) Hussars 3 goals 0 subsidiary, The Carabiniers "A" Team 1 goal 2 subsidiaries.

4th Chucker.—The Carabiniers quickly cleared, but the Hussars returned to the attack and a grand drive by Colonel Kincaid Smith gained much ground. The same player shortly afterwards completed a point, in the negotiation of which the whole team could claim to have a hand. After change of ends the ball was taken behind the Carabiniers' line and then Swifte was responsible for a great run, play being transferred to the Hussars' end, but only a subsidiary resulted. Score: 4th (Q.-O.) Hussars 4 goals 0 subsidiary, The Carabiniers "A" Team 1 goal 3 subsidiaries.

5th Chucker.—The Hussars hit out, but the ball was returned and Kirby hit a goal for the Carabiniers to the tune of hearty applause. Restarting Swifte got away, but his stroke unfortunately hit the Umpire's pony and the effort was spoilt. The "Carbs" still played like demons and scored a subsidiary which narrowly missed the posts. Excellent play and vigorous riding off by both sides, of which the Carabiniers had rather the best followed and then Neilson got clean away with Ker in hot pursuit. He was not caught, however, and scored a very fine goal for the Hussars.

Score: 4th (Q.-O.) Hussars 5 goals 0 subsidiary, The Carabiniers "A" Team 2 goals 4 subsidiaries.

6th Chucker.—Two minutes and 10 seconds remained for play, and though the game seemed hopeless the Carabiniers continued to work very hard. The Hussars, however, were now playing a great game and scored an additional subsidiary, play soon afterwards ceasing and an excellent game and tournament coming to a close.

Final score: 4th (Q.-O.) Hussars 5 goals 1 subsidiary, The Carabiniers "A" Team's 2 goals 4 subsidiaries.

Racing.

IS THE HAVELOCK RACE COURSE (COLOMBO) A FAST ONE.

ON this subject the Times of Ceylon recently published some correspondence which is not without interest to Indian readers. Capt. A. Channer opened with the following letter:—

It may interest those fond of our race-course to know if it is fast or slow. In my opinion, which I know is upheld by very few racing men, the course in August (in normal weather) is a very fast one for a turf track. Taking as 5 feet from the rails to be the distance the winner runs, the distance travelled for the Governor's Cup is 1¼ miles and 35 yards. This race was won by Devoted last year in 2mins. 17secs., which is 15·32s., under even time, a very good performance. And if the Australian Turf Club Register is consulted it will be found that this time will win many valuable races in Australia, where the going is all on the top of the ground. The crabbe of our racecourse is the uneven surface; horses are galloping on the top of the land, and run into a surface like meadow land from before the six-furlong post to the ½ mile. They again get light going until round the home turn, when the last two furlongs goes deep to the winning post. This must lengthen and shorten a horse's stroke, and it makes it very difficult for the rider to clout his mount home scientifically, as a blind man can see a horse stopping if he gets the stick in the middle of his stride.

I trust next year the stewards will allow me to make the surface of the course even. It will cost between 400 and 500 rupees:—Yours, &c.

A. CHANNER.

31st July.

This elicited the following reply from a sportsman who has evidently given the subject some attention. He writes:—

The question raised by Capt. Channer is an interesting one, but one very difficult to prove consequent upon varying conditions in different places, such as, for instance, if the time list is to be taken as proof of whether a racecourse is fast or slow, and the quality and class of the horses engaged. But, taking Capt. Channer's letter as the basis of showing that the Havelock Course is a fast one, it is somewhat difficult to reconcile the two statements made in his letter. It is asserted that the performance of Devoted last year goes to show that the course is fast, as the horse ran 1¼ miles and 35 yards in 2mins. 17secs., and that this time is good enough to annex valuable races in the Colonies. He then describes the course as being composed of "going on the top of the land," "running into meadow land," "light going," whilst the last two furlongs "goes deep," and from these varying conditions of the course horses are obliged to "lengthen and shorten their stride." Now the obvious inference from such conditions must be that the course is not fast. Capt. Channer omits, by the way, to say that, in the latter portion of every race horses have to breast a steady rise in the ground.

Let us, however, hark back to the performance of Devoted. The time cannot be regarded, in comparison with many courses as fast. I have before me several Colonial Turf Registers, and quite an average performance is to cover 1¼ miles in 2mins 12 secs., whilst, as an example of first-class form, may be quoted La Carabine, who won over this distance in 2mins 9secs., carrying, it is true, 7st 3lbs.; but she had a field of good horses, to whom she was giving weight, behind her. Taking the time, therefore, of Devoted as against an average this shows the course to be 5 seconds slower, but, to make an equal comparison, we must allow far the extra 35 yards covered by the horse. This should represent a little over 17 yards to the second of time, so that a deduction of 2 seconds must be made, which gives Devoted's time as 3 seconds worse than the average, and no one knows better than a racing man what that implies!

Following Capt. Channer's line of argument, it will be interesting to compare here examples of speed on Indian courses with Colombo. I take the following at random, but, as I am acquainted with the course I have noted against them whether they are favourable or unfavourable to fast times:—

Calcutta a	Stand Off	8-13	1¼	mile	2-10⅘ = 19⅘	under
,,	Cherry	9-3	1	,,	1-13⅞ = 16⅛	,,
Poona b	Swiftsure	9-0	1¼	,,	2-13⅘ = 16⅘	,,
,,	Misrule	9-7	1	,,	1-15⅞ = 13⅛	,,
Bombay a	Loch Clieveden	8-2	1¼	,,	2-11⅘ = 18⅘	,,
,,	Beadsman	9-7	1	,,	1-14⅘ = 15⅘	,,
Colombo b	Devoted	9-0	*1¼	,,	2-17 = 15	,,
,,	Glenfield	8-0	*1¼	,,	2-19½ = 12½	,,
,,	Southern Cross	8-7	*1¼	,,	2-19 = 13	,,
,,	Boniface	9-10	1	,,	2-0	—even time

* in these 2 secs. allowed for the 35 extra yards. a—favourable: b—unfavourable.

The relative times of all other classes are much the same. For instance, I have seen a second-class horse cover 5 furlongs in Calcutta in 1min 3⅘secs carrying 8-2: in Bombay in 1min 2⅘secs carrying 9-2; and in Poona in 1min 5⅘ secs carrying 9-9. And a similarratio exists amongst the waler gallowys.

In the foregoing I have purposely refrained from mixing up the question of "class," but have confined myself to the points raised by Captain Channer, viz., as to whether the Havelock Course is a fast one judged by the performance of Devoted and the peculiar conditions of the course, which, by his letter, appear to prevail. And whilst it is one of the most delightful courses to be seen anywhere, whether from a spectator's or owner's point of view, it is not possible to regard it as a fast one.—Yours, &c.,

A.

Colombo, 1st August.

P. S.—Since the foregoing was written I have been informed that the distances of the Havelock Course were measured on the rails, instead of, at customary, a certain distance from the rails, and this may have something to do with the slow times.

THE BOMBAY GYMKHANA.

THE report of the Committee of the Bombay Gymkhana for the half-year ended 30th June states that:—

The total number of members of the Gymkhana is 2,165, of which 521 were resident on 30th June, 1903 Eighty new members have been elected during the past half-year, and 25 members have resigned. Fifty-four temporary members were elected during the half-year.

The following changes have taken place during the half-year:—

Cricket—Mr. A. H. S. Aston undertook the duties of Cricket Secretary in place of Mr. A. C. Rumboll, resigned.

Polo.—Mr. W. E. Crum accepted the post of Polo Secretary, on the resignation of Mr. W. H. Wilkinson, until he went home, when Mr. R. F. R. Cooke undertook the duties.

Additional Members.—Messrs. F. A. Prevost, H. E. E. Proctor and Marshall F. Reid accepted the invitation of the Committee to join them as additional members in place of Messrs. F. C. Macrae, A. Muirhead and W. E. Crum, who had left for England.

Cricket.—Gymkhana cricket, in spite of a reverse at the commencement of the season, has opened satisfactorily. The attendance at the nets has been good, and the ground itself has shown a remarkable capacity for drying after heavy showers. Owing to the large number of playing members, it was found possible on July 4th, to put three teams into the field. Since that date the Executive Engineer has kindly granted the Gymkhana the use of an addition cricket ground, so that if the requisite fixture can be obtained it is hoped that three teams will be regularly played. A corner of the ground, which has been renewed, was tried on July 4th, and an excellent pitch was procured.

Polo.—Polo has not been as well supported as could be wished but there are now a fair number of regular players, and it is hoped that the excellent condition of the ground this season will encourage more members to play.

The Polo Committee hope to hold a tournament in October in Bombay and to send a team to Poona for the Junior Tournament.

Racquets—The court was fairly well attended during the half year under report, the average number of players per month being nineteen. The annual Single Tournament was held during February, for which, unfortunately, there were only three entries. The Cup was won by Mr. E. S. Sandys, R. E. The usual monsoon repairs were carried out to the roof during May. The roof, however, is becoming harder to keep watertight every year, and some more permanent repairs will need to be carried out before the next monsoon.

Lawn Tennis was as popular as ever during the early part of the year and up to the monsoon, and the various tournaments were well contested. Mr. W. Reid won both the open (Singles) events, while Messrs Rumboll and Cheetham carried off the Doubles. The Committee have it in contemplation to provide an additional tennis court before the end of the rains.

Boats.—The boats have all recently been re-painted and are in excellent condition. They have not latterly been patronised as much as could be wished on account of the lowness of the water at ebbtide, but if Mr. Tata's Salsette Reclamation Scheme is carried out, the water should be greatly improved in character.

Golf.—The interest in the game has been more than maintained during the past six months and the number of playing members has increased. After the season's competitions were concluded, a number of team matches were successfully arranged, and an endeavour is now being made to get up home and home matches with outstations where golf clubs exist.

The results of the concluding competitions of the season were as follows:—

St George's Medal, scratch, won by Mr. Osborne Marshall.
Wimbledon Silver Cup, scratch, won by Mr. R. Aitken.
The "Forty-Two," handicap, won by Mr. E. F. Nicholson.
The Golfers' Cup, handicap, won by Mr. Osborne Marshall.

Football.—Practice games started in June under both codes. As regards Rugby we have only one club to play against, namely, the B. A. We have a heavy pack this year and ought to do well in the tournament which will probably be held during the last week of September.

Association Football.—A meeting of those interested in Association Football was held at the Gymkhana at the beginning of June, and was well attended, twenty-one members present putting down their names as playing members. So far three matches in the Harwood League have been played, of which two have been won and one lost, the team at this time being unfortunately disorganised owing to accidents, but with the season young and keenness displayed, it is hoped that the Gymkhana will have a successful season.

Hockey.—Twenty teams competed in the Aga Khan Tournament which is a record. The Gymkhana were defeated in the first round by the Elphinstone College after a draw. No one could have wished for a better struggle than we witnessed in the final between the Buffs and Cathedral Old Boys; and it was only after three hard games that the Buffs retired defeated by three goals to one.

Bowls.—Bowls have been fairly well patronised. The Challenge Cup was won by Mr. W. Reid; the runner up being Mr. J. D. F. Engel.

Many and wonderful were the tricks resorted to in olden times by owners and trainers anxious to deceive touts as to the true merits of their animals, when they have required to "know the time o' day" previous to having a plunge.

At Hambleton, some sixty years ago, a great deal of ingenuity was displayed by Harry Stebbing in outwitting the horse-watchers. Harry combined tavern-keeping with training horses, and very well did he find those occupations run in double harness. All the touts dealt at his establishment, and the wily trainer always saw that they were well served, though whether they were profitable customers is much to be doubted Whenever any of the touting fraternity had a successful time it was considered the correct thing for him to place a certain proportion of his winnings in a box kept for the purpose, which at certain periods was opened, and the contents, if sufficient, devoted to a dinner.

RUGBY IN CALCUTTA.

CALCUTTA vs. CASUALS.—These teams met on the Calcutta ground on the 7th instant, the home team winning by 8 points to nil ; neither side had their full complement of men, but a good game was witnessed. White and Lees played well for the visitors. their tackling being very good. Martelli and Siddons got over in the first half and the first try was converted. Nothing was scored in the second half, though the Calcutta forwards were constantly in their opponents twenty-five.

CALCUTTA vs. BALLYGUNGE.—This match was played on the Calcutta ground on the 11th instant, the home team having an easy victory by 20 points to nil. They had the best of matters all through, the three-quarter line giving a fine display. Martelli, the brothers Siddons, the half-backs and Berridge and Bishop were in especially good form. For the Suburban Team the brothers Sherman Bagshawe and Hemmingway tackled well. Martelli got over with the first try for Calcutta but the place failed ; the second try was scored by A. Siddons, but again no goal resulted. In the second half Berridge dropped a splendid goal. Then F. Siddons got over after some clever passing, his brother converting. Dunlop got in towards the end of the game and Siddons adding the extra points. Calcutta thus won by three goals (one drop and two tries (20 points) to nil.

CALCUTTA vs. CITY.—Played on the Calcutta ground last Saturday, the visitors winning by two tries to nil. Ewing got over in the first half and Williams made the second try just before time : neither was converted.

THE I. F. A. SHIELD.

THE FINALS.

CALCUTTA vs. K. O. S. B.'s.—These teams met for the third time on the 5th instant the venue being the Dalhousie ground and a splendid game resulted in a win for the local team by two goals to one. The Dum-Dum men were without Cassidy, but they played a great game. Calcutta got away at the start and had the best of the play for the first ten minutes, a neat bout of passing by A. Sherman, Binning and Cooper resulting in the last-named finding the net. Even play followed till a penalty against Calcutta gave Byers his chance and the teams crossed over with a goal each. The Borderers played up in the second half and a hard tussle ensued.

Calcutta, however, got away and Stewart sending across to Cooper the latter beat Atkinson with a fine shot.

The Borderers played up hard but were unable to score despite the fact that both Buckley and Todd were hurt. Calcutta thus won a well-deserved victory by two goals to one. Teams:—

CALCUTTA.—Goal, Buckley ; backs, Todd and Gillispie ; half-backs, Maunder, Fyfe, Pearson ; forwards, H. Sherman, Binning, Cooper, V. Sherman, and Stewart.

K. O. S. B's.—Goal, Atkinson ; backs, Go'die and Macdonald ; half-backs, Tait, Stewart, and Bradley ; forwards, Byers, Bruce, Massey, Doggart and Cruickshanks. Appended are complete results.

Old Sam Darling, the famous Jockey, and father of the present Beckhampton trainer, had a peculiar habit of closing one eye when he was saying anything particular. On one occasion he had backed a horse on some racecourse with a stranger for a couple of sovereigns, and on the following day he was asked for the money.

"Dear me!" exclaimed Sam, opening both eyes very wide indeed, as if astonished at the request. "I bet you two sovereigns!"

His interlocutor regarded him with a puzzled expression of countenance for a moment, and the said, apologetically—

"On! I beg pardon, sir ; the gentleman I made the bet with had only one eye. I must have made some mistake."

And he was turning away, when Sam, having enjoyed his joke, called him back and paid him the money.

GULMARG GOLF.

NUMBERS of people have had to run down to Srinagar to look after their property as the inundation has been unprecedential. All the old houses tenanted by Europeans have been swept clean away. Enormous loss of life and property has ensued throughout the valley.

Last Tuesday the men's Married vs. Single was played, which resulted in a win for the singles as they had a very strong side. Most of the men going in for the Championship of Upper India which is fixed to be played on 19th August. The favourites are MacAllan, Boyd, Hill, and Mitchell. For the ladies shield, Mrs. Davies, Miss Nicholetts, Miss McDonell, and Mrs. Kennedy. All four would give the best players among the men a lot of trouble to beat.

On Saturday, 1st August, there was a great tussle between the Married and Single "foursome's." For a long time there was no telling which was forging ahead, eventually the Singles ended by winning by 13 holes. Captain Boyd and Miss Nicholetts were 10 up against such strong players as Captain C. Davies and Mrs. Kennedy. R. Robertson and Miss Bond were 11 up against Captain Fenner and Mrs. Brownlow. The former year champions Captain Hill and Miss McDonell were beaten by Mrs. C. Davies and W. Mitchell There were 14 couples a side. Great number of the singles were disappointed as they could get no opponents among the married lot. The reason appears to have been the contest was 18 holes, which is very trying for ladies. If the usual 14 holes had been settled on the entries would have been five times as many.

Shows.

THE BANGALORE HORSE AND DOG SHOW.

THE Bangalore Horse and Dog Show occupied two days and the Judges and Honorary Secretaries worked hard. Captain Dougall, The Carabiniers, and Captain Marshall, Q. O. Sappers and Miners, occupying the latter two unenviable positions. The 4th and 5th instant were the dates of the Show and so numerous were the entries—so lengthy the proceedings—that I hardly know where to begin in my notes on the subject. If entries were numerous, the merit in the different classes can only be described as uneven, although undoubtedly excellent in some instances. It will perhaps be best to take each class separately and say a few words regarding it.

Heavy weight hunters then to begin with were disappointing and neither H. H. the Maharajah's Southern Cross nor Mr. Anketell Jones' Grand Duke can be described as typical weight-carriers. They were, however, superior to the company in which they were shown, and the better manners of the Maharajah's representative gained him first place Light-weight hunters were better, and the second horse was especially well balanced for his age. Major Birdwood may look forward to more than a few prizes with Yeoman, who is only three years old. The winner of the first in this class, Mrs. Sharpe Smith's Cocky is on the other hand a good old horse, but long past mark of mouth. Proceed we to pony backs where the first three were undoubtedly nice animals. It was a question of shape versus action with the first and second prize-winners, and action got it in Miss Brereton's Nutmeg, a grey mare which moved round the ring like a machine with Colonel Armstrong, the well-known G. R., on her back. Colonel Desaraj Urs has a rare shaped one in Doris, the second pony. In thorough-breds what could win but Great Scott, and numerous were the admiring glances which followed the grand horse as he paraded before the judges. He also won the prize for the best horse in the Show without difficulty. Wild Raven second in the thorough-bed class, is too well known to the Calcutta public, and equine fanciers in general to need description.

These notes are already assuming a considerable length and it is necessary to be brief. Upstart, another well-known performer on Indian race-courses, took the first in country-breds, but the second horse—a Kunigal farm-bred colt of Colonel Grant's which easily won the C.-B. event at the late Bangalore meeting, shows great promise and must improve. Tabba (Colonel Armstrong's) was the best of a rather moderate lot in cobs, and H. H the Maharajah won the prize for single turn-outs in horses. Pony turn-outs were good and showy, Captain Ward, Captain Bell, and Mr. Anketell Jones all swinging round the ring in great style and this brought us to the jumping for horses of which, sad to say, the least said the better. It was bad as a whole, and only moderate in the case of Mr. Kidd's Paddy and Mr. Anketell Jones' Grand Duke, a pair which the judges found some difficulty in separating. The event for the best turned-out men-at-arms, English and Native, produced some remarkable smart soldiers. Southern Cross and Royal Duke were first and second in cavalry chargers as in heavy weight hunters ; whilst Mr. Bushell's Cygnet and Mr. Robertson's Sally occupied similar positions in the class for infantry chargers. Ladies' saddle horses are always a pretty class, and Mr. Wace's unnamed exhibit ridden by Mrs. Tufnell was fairly easily first, Major Birdwood again scoring a second with his promising young horse Yeoman. Miss Brereton's Nutmeg gained another first in a good show of ladies' hack ponies, and the winner of the children's ponies was a picturesque little figure. A little chap of four summers, dressed in the uniform of the 3rd Madras Lancers, with a double row of medal ribbons, doubtless belonging to his father who has served the British Raj well, rode Ismail Khan's Sultan, and was lifted on to the table by the British Resident at the presentation of prizes, to receive a watch which he promptly dropped but did not damage.

This concluded the judging on Tuesday, and on the following day, Captain Claridge, 3rd Madras Lancers, began with a walk-over in the Tandem driving. Great was the competition in the single driving, Mrs. Tufnell scoring a most popular win with Captain Stirling's turn-out, and our well-known and sporting trainer Oscar Dignum beating Captain Morris after a tie for second place. Horse hacks were a numerous, but only a fair class, Colonel Daniell's Rosebud winning after much deliberation on the part of the judges from Yeoman, who thus scored his third second prize at the Show Polo ponies, Australian, English and Cape were a pleasant change from a considerable amount of mediocrity which had been apparent the day before, for they were a very fine class, and both Captain Kirby's Walty and H. H. the Maharajah's Dainty were as pretty as paint and as handy as the proverbial fiddle. Captain Kirby was again to the fore in the Arab and country-bred polo panies, winning with Pilsener, whilst that fine polo player, Captain Peel, R. H. A., came second with Bijli. This again was an excellent class and several were kept in the ring for a considerable time. Curiously enough the pony jumping was as a whole even worse than that of the horses, but in this event an exception must be made in favour of the winner Colonel Desaraj Urs' Countess, for the little mare is a great "lepper" and the popular Colonel also possesses a very fine pony in Ptarmigan, who was out and away the best of the Arabs, and also annexed the prize for the best pony in the Show. Captain Claridge, 3rd Madras Lancers, won the driving for teams, Captain Adams of the same gallant corps was second and Major Birdwood with a grand lot of browns was judged to have the best turn-out. Jutka ponies, in which licensed jutkas were driven by brave officers who sat within an inch of the pony's tail and carried a lady inside the jutka produced much amusement, and this remark brings my "ower long tale" of the Horse Show to a conclusion.

With regard to the dogs, some of the exhibits were excellent, notably Mr. Gale's pedigree fox terriers and Mrs. Hulke's ditto Airedales. Watson, the trainer, won two prizes with his really handsome Show dog Chinekee, that animal being first in the miscellaneous class and being also adjudged by public vote the handsomest dog in the Show. A similar vote was taken with regard to the ugliest dog in the Show and Mr. Ker's "The Sausage Dog" gained the distinction. Hounds only produced half-a dozen entries, Miss Brooke Leggatt winning with Prodigal and neither Bull nor Irish terriers were numerous, although Dr. Smeeth's Bogie, and Captain Cole's Mike were fair representative of their respective breeds. Finally in the class for country dogs and hounds, Mr. Irvine, R.E., won with a fine powerful black hound named Barbican, and with this remark, Mr. Editor, I will cease to occupy your space and tax your patience. Yet no—I must just mention some delicious little Pekinese dogs which were brought by Colonel Mackenzie-Kennedy from the siege of Tientsin. At least the parent dogs were found there deserted and scared to death, and a pup was adjudged the second prize in the miscellaneous class at the present Show. The father of this pup is dead, and the mother to this day cannot hear the sound of fire arms, owing to the thorough scare the poor little mite got at Tientsin. Details :—

THE HORSES.

CLASS I.—HEAVY WEIGHT HUNTERS (Horses)—A Cup presented by H. H. the Maharajah of Mysore.

H H the Maharajah's br aus g Southern Cross	... 1
R Anketell Jones's ch aus g Grand Duke ...	... 2

Judges.—Colonel J. P. Grant and Major Logan Home.

Judges' Remarks.—The Judges remarked that the class on the whole was disappointing. There was not much between the two prize-winners, but Southern Cross's superior manners turned the scale in his favour.

CLASS II.—LIGHT WEIGHT HUNTERS (Horses.—)A Cup presented by H. H. the Maharajah of Mysore.

Mrs Sharpe Smith's Cocky	... 1
Major Birdwood's b w g Yeoman...	... 2
H H the Maharajah's br aus g Bobs	... 3

Judges.—General Nixon, C. B.

Judges Remarks.—The Judges considered the class to be a fairly goodone. The winner was a well-known old horse who had carried off many prizes. With regard to the second, he was a wonderfully well balanced young one, showed great promise and had probably all his prizes before him.

CLASS III.—PONY HUNTERS.—A Cup presented by H. H. the Maharajah of Mysore.

Captain Kirby's b w g Watty	... 1

Judges.—Colonel Armstrong, Colonel Sprott and Major Birdwood.

CLASS V.—HACKS. (Horses.)—A Cup presented by Sir P. N. Krishna Murti, K.C.I.E., Dewan of Mysore.

Lieutenant-Colonel Daniell's Rosebud ...	... 1
Major Birdwood's Yeoman	... 2

Judges.—General Nixon, Major Kincaid Smith and Major Logan Home.

Judges, Remarks.—The Judges remarked that the class was a very fair one and there was some difficulty in discriminating between the first and second.

CLASS VI. HACKS (PONIES.)—A Cup presented by Colonel Georges.

Miss Brereton's g aus m Nutmeg	... 1
Colonel Desaraj Urs's bl aus m Duchess ...	... 2
H H the Maharajah's b aus m Doris ...	... 3

Judges.—Colonel J. P. Grant and Major Logan Home.

Judges, Remarks.—The Judges remarked that the class was fair ; the winner showed great action, especially from a hack point of view. With regard to the second her shape was very fine, but as a hack her action was hardly so good as that of the winner.

CLASS VI.—LADIES' SADDLE HORSES.—A Cup presented by Colonel Desaraj Urs.

Major Birdwood's Yeoman	... 2

A CHANGE OF IDENTITY.

A STORY OF SIMLA AND CALCUTTA.

IT was a miserably dull afternoon in the early autumn when a lady-like girl or young woman, for in these days it is not easy to draw any hard-and-fast line between the two, was the single occupant of a compartment in a corridor-carriage in a fast train running from Euston to Rugby. A new paper, not often seen in England outside the charmed circles frequented by Anglo-Indians, was on her lap open at the last page of the advertisements. After idly toying with the fluttering leaves she picked it up, scanned through the page rapidly, and finally fixed her attention on a somewhat unusual announcement. It ran as follows :—

"Wanted, in December, a governess for girl aged nine. Calcutta in cold weather; hills or England in the hot. Applicant must be able to teach German, French, music, including the violin, calisthenics and drawing; have a thorough knowledge of all the ordinary preliminary subjects and a liberal acquaintance with literature, history and higher mathematics. Must be active, energetic, and a horsewoman. Nobody brought up in India, or specially trained in any existing form of Education (Froebel's particularly objected to) need apply. K. c/o Messrs. Wrigley Broome and Co., Vine-Axe Street, E. C., or 21-4., Kiwardine Crescent, Calcutta."

"It might be some good" thought the girl, but it looks as if it were either a hoax or inserted by a lunatic. Some one with ideas perhaps like the old gentleman in "The Golden Butterfly"—only I thought they had no existence outside the pages of a novel. Let me think how I fit the advertisement.—"No training in any form of education"—that I certainly have not. Active?—well yes, energetic—not so bad. Good horsewoman? hum! yes, I think I'm all right there. Now what else can I do? German? French? I can make myself understood in Cologne and get about Paris without coming to actual grief. Sketch? I wonder if Phil May and water would be any good. Calisthenics? I thought they had gone out with the flood. Preliminary subjects? Depends upon what you consider as such. Literature, history, and higher mathematics? Well I could give most of the girls at Girton five pounds and a beating in those same subjects four years ago, and I can fiddle after a fashion. I wonder whether it will do? My attainments without certificates and my energies without training seem to be a drag in the market so far as obtaining employment at other than the wages paid to a third-rate cook; in this country at all events. Let us see what India may do—at any rate I'll try, and try she did as soon as ever she got to the little Warwickshire village where she had made her home since the death and general smash up of the estates of her father, well known in the Belvoir country as the racing squire of Blankburgh.

Constance Hunt's story was not an altogether unknown one among the offspring of sporting families. A clever girl naturally, she had had all the advantages in the way of education which could be given to the only child of fairly well off, but extravagant parents. The advantages offered had acted on an ambitious disposition, and caused certain vague longings for distinction, real distinction and not mediocrity in the paths of scholarship. The vague longings took form and in time led her to Girton where she was soon looked upon as one of their most promising candidates for honours in a future tripos. She was far from being a blue-stocking; her mental reckoning up of her capabilities expressed, in racing parlance, as to the amount of handicap she could give others, would effectively dissipate this idea and show that she was not unacquainted with the slang of a training stable, though to give her her due it was not very prominent. She had early set up as her motto the suggestive sentence Mens sana in corpore sano and her tall well knit figure, skill and activity in all out-door games, and her capacity for enduring any amount of fatigue and exertion showed that she pretty well realised it. Distinction in scholarship, however, was not to be. The death of her mother had called her to fill that lady's place at home, and living in a fool's paradise, she had every expectation of succeeding to the comfortable circumstances which she and all the rest of the world had ever associated with Blankburgh Manor. But heavy losses on the turf, necessitating mortgages on land highly over valued for days of agricultural depression, together with the wrong-going of several concerns in which he was pecuniarily interested, shares not fully paid up—made the squire's estate, when he broke his neck out hunting, an utterly insolvent one. Absolutely nothing remained for her but the interest, amounting to about fifty pounds per annum, on money held in deposit by Messrs. Wrigley, Broome and Co., which she had inherited from her mother, a member of a family well-known amongst the East India Company's administrators of pre-mutiny days. The change from the cheery-life of a well-kept country house to the very meagre establishment of two extremely maiden aunts, living entirely within the precincts of a narrow ecclesiastic society near a would be fashionable island watering place, was a fairly startling one; but the girl made the best of it, and rapidly won the hearts of her very sedate maiden relatives by her kindly disposition and cheerful unselfishness; though if they had told the truth they could not but admit that on first acquaintance they had been horribly shocked at the broad views and somewhat mannish disposition exhibited by their young charge. A bicycle was anathema Maranatha to them, and short skirts and—ahem—knickerbockers—the forbidden thing.

But the two maiden ladies were far from being well-off, and their neice felt that she was ever a burden to them, straining their slender pecuniary resources to the utmost. It was on this account that she felt she must do something towards earning her own living; and then the rub came in. A good education, but no certificates and no special training seemed an absolute bar to obtaining anything otherwise than on starvation wages. Schools would have nothing to do with her; true she could have had her choice of places as daily governess in the neighbouring town at twenty pounds a year and one meal a day. There were dozens of girls with comfortable homes only too ready to accept employment, such as this, giving them a little pocket money and a certain respite from home restraint; but Constance Hunt, considering that the labourer was worthy of her hire, absolutely declined to make herself a partner to any such artificial lowering in the educational market. It is to be wondered whether cheapness in this matter is true economy in the long run either mentally or morally. Still the fact remains that employment at a fair remuneration was not to be got, and heart-breaking work it was seeking for it.

It was a visit to Messrs. Wrigley, Broome and Co.'s offices which had placed "The Overland Budget," containing the extraordinary advertisement, in her hands, and it was another visit to those same offices which eventually caused her to be engaged as governess for the little daughter of James Cullen, Esquire, East India merchant.

What a multitude of objections the dear maiden aunts raised to the scheme, and how they fussed and worried over her outfit when they discovered that she was really determined upon going! A passage had been engaged for her by Mr. Cullen in the P. and O Athens leaving Tilbury for Calcutta towards the end of November, on which day she stood by the taff-rail watching the tender carry away her elderly relatives fussy to the last and weeping unrestrainedly at the parting with a curious tightening in her throat and a half-defined question at heart whether she was right in leaving them. For one foolish minute she felt as if she could cry out to them to take her off too and let the ship go without her. Then choking a sob she turned to go below.

"Why'Connie?" cried a pleasant enthusiastic voice. "What on earth are you doing here? Have you joined the noble army of Globe-trotters?"

The choking feeling relapsed, the tears went back to their fountain head, and wreathed in smiles Constance Hunt affectionately greeting a distant cousin, Frances Constance Hunton Browne, whom she had not seen for several years, and with whom she had kept up no correspondence.

The two girls had been firm friends at school, and had both gone to Girton the same time, but differences between their respective families had barred any other intercourse between them. They were singularly alike in many ways, displaying in form and feature the common ancestry from which they had come, whilst their mental capacities were very much on a par. The great points of difference between them were these: Frances Browne had completed what Constance Hunt had only begun; Frances Browne was a very wealthy young lady with the absolute disposal of her income, whilst Constance Hunt had practically nothing; and finally Frances Browne had a wealth of golden hair, whilst Constance would have termed her own mouse-coloured.

"And now Connie" said her vivacious companion as soon as mutual explanations had been exchanged: "the first thing to be done is to get a cabin together."

This was easily arranged; but the purser, good man, not knowing which was which, confused their names; and before long Constance Hunt was known throughout the ship as the wealthy Miss Browne, whilst pretty Frances Browne was looked upon as Miss Hunt.

"Connie" said Frances, who was as full of mischief as an egg is of meat. "I'm going to keep this up. I'm tired to death of being hunted and proposed to on account of my money. You shall have a turn of it and see how you'll like it, whilst I have a little peace and look on at the fun. It will be jogons; oh joyous!"

"Thank you; but I don't quite see it in that light" replied Constance "Sailing under false colours may be all very well for you in your position and no harm done.

but what about me? I have got a character for sedateness and mild demeanour to keep up at the other end of this voyage, and a practical joke like this would hardly tend to enhance it."

"But what does it matter? We can put things right before we get to Calcutta. And as for any trouble from admirers of your supposed five thousand a year, well, if you cant keep them in proper order and at arm's length, no one else can. Now don't be a spoil-sport, cousin mine, but keep up the gay delusion I do so yearn to be the 'poor' Miss Hunt, or the 'poor' anybody just for a change."

Constance Hunt was not proof against this pleading, and finally—somewhat after the young lady of Don Juan's youthful acquaintance—"saying she would ne'er consent, consented."

She had to admit that it was rather amusing this same masquerading. The promised admirers were not wanting from an elderly Commissioner in the C. P.—not that she had the wildest idea what that meant—to a junior assistant "in hides", which likewise conveyed no impression to her. It cannot be said that any of this devotion touched her particularly, and she certainly took good care not to engender any false hopes, so no serious harm was done to anybody, elderly, middle aged, or juvenile. Meanwhile Frances Browne—or rather Miss. Hunt as we must now call her—enjoyed herself immensely. The evening after leaving Colombo she came to her cousin and said, she wanted a serious talk with her.

"Well! what is it?" asked the assumed Miss Browne, when the two ladies had settled themselves in comfortable deck chairs well away from the rest of the passengers. "It is a new thing for you, my cousin, to want a 'serious' conversation—or, indeed, anything serious."

"But this is: and I have set my heart on it."

"And what is it?"

For sometime the lady with the golden locks remained without answering. Then with a little sigh terminating in a nervous laugh she said:

"No I can't give it up. It's no use, I can't."

"Being Miss Hunt."

"But you'll have to: it can't be helped. What on earth would be said if we get to Calcutta with two Richmonds in the field in the shape of two ladies called Hunt, and the mysterious disappearance of Miss Browne: how would you explain that?"

"But there'll be no mysterious disappearance. You'll be Miss Browne, and as such will join forces with Lady Lackcash who has never seen the original, whilst I go to the Cullens and begin operations as an instructor of youth."

"Impossible."

"Nonsense: it's nothing of the sort. The Cullens don't know you either." Why should not I do just as well?

"But it would be a case of personation, of regular fibbing, and obtaining money under false pretences. The Cullens have engaged Constance Hunt. That is not your name."

"Isn't it, my dear? I was under the impression it was, and I have seen documentary evidence in support of the fact. Cut out my first and last names—and there is no crime in doing that so far as I know—and Constance Hunt remains. I believe you also bear the very ordinary name of Browne amongst your Christian names, and if you apply the same process, what is to prevent you continuing to be Miss Browne?"

"For one thing because you are pledged to Lady Lackcash I am not. She has agreed to chaperone a certain young lady: if another is palmed off instead of her I should imagine that Lady Lackcash would have a very just cause of offence. Imagine my position if the fraud—for it is nothing else—were discovered!"

"It won't be discovered, and if it were I don't think it would matter much so far as Lady Lackcash in concerned. Listen, my dear, I'll let you into a little secret. It's all a matter of hard cash."

"What is?"

"Why Lady Lackcash chaperoning me. What else did you imagine she was going to do it for? She is a ferocious but convenient old woman with a taste for globe-trotting and a wonderful eye to the main chance. So long as my—or in this case your—rather more than fair share of expenses are paid and the additional sum of two hundred and fifty pounds quarterly in advance, it is my candid opinion that she would not mind chaperoning a convicted felon or a Hotentot. You may take my word for it that all this will be paid into her Ladyship's account with the utmost regularity. Result—she will be content, you will have a good time, and I shall be doing exactly what I want to do."

But it is impossible. The whole thing would be wrong, and how could we manage about our boxes and things?

This somewhat lame conclusion showed that the sham Miss Browne's determination was weakening, whilst on the other hand the would-be Miss Hunt's was every moment growing stronger. The temporary release from poverty and somewhat galling dependence had been very sweet; sweeter than Constance Hunt had realised until the time came to give it up, if give it up she did. The denouncement was put off and put off until they had almost reached the mouth of the Hooghly. One more like conversation and a few more persuasons had done the rest, and finally when they landed at Calcutta, Frances Browne was claimed by Mr. Cullen as the newly-arrived governess for his child under the name of Miss Hunt, whilst Constance Hunt was effusively welcomed by Lady Lackcash as the wealthy Miss Browne.

Mr. Cullen's establishment—as he was rather fond of calling it—was remarkable even amongst the best that the City of Palaces could boast of Himself a widower, he had persuaded an elder sister to keep house for him, an arrangement which suited that lady admirably and at the same time gave the master of the house unbounded satisfaction. Constance Hunt found everything extremely pleasant with the exception of her charge, who proved to be so spoilt and disagreeable a child as the East could produce. The touch of eccentricity evinced in the advertisement in the "Overland Budget" was soon further apparent both in Mr. Cullen and the lady who presided over his household. They had an absolute horror of all modern system of education, whilst at the same time hoping that Ella, the nine-year-old daughter, might prove to be a prodigy in all polite learning, science, and art. Hence the many and various accomplishments looked for in the new governess.

Constance Hunt, as we must now call her—the successful clipping of the first and last names having been dully effected—quickly settled down to work, and found it far from uncongenial. Though freed from the boredom of unwelcome suitors with—as she chose to look at it—half an eye on herself and rather more than one on her gold, she was far from being shoved into a corner kept out of sight, and treated with the scant sympathy or even lack of ordinary courtesy which so many girls in a like position have only too just reason to complain of. In fact matters went rather too much the other way. She was expected to dine as one of the family, go with them into society, and in fact be quite as much of a companion to Miss Cullen the Elder—and on almost equal terms—as governess to Ella Cullen, the younger. She found the child to be clever, but very 'scrappy' in her attainments so far and of a precocity she had never yet met. It was a fair-and-square struggle between them from the outset, in which eventually Constance Hunt did not not come off second best.

The great point she had to go upon in gaining the necessary ascendency over her wayward pupil was the child's great love of horses and her admiration for anyone who could manage them. Hitherto the succession of ladies who had acted as guide, philosopher, and friend had at the outset gained her scorn and contempt by their ignorance of the noble animal and their woeful attempts to drive even the little rustic cart with ordinary skill and safety round the maidan. When the child found that, if the slightest difficulty presented itself, it was far better to snatch the reins from her nervous companion and manage things herself, it is not to be wondered that she came to consider that she could do the same sort of thing in other matters; but with Constance Hunt it was altogether different. Never had Rory gone so well as he did on the first occasion the two had gone out for a drive together, and Rory was a waler pony with a decided will of his own

"Loosen the curb-chain, and take the kicking strap up two holes" was the quiet remark the governess had made almost immediately after the start. The English-speaking syce had demurred: The pony was harnessed according to custom and if otherwise treated would run away."

"Very well, then I'll do it myself'—and do it she did with a quiet adroitness which gained not only the syces respect, but the good will and friendship of the fretted Rory. Far from running away the pony ceased all these signs of irritation which had been so obvious when driven by less skilful hands.

Then again the first ride, which Mr. Cullen, Ella, and Miss Hunt had taken together, was a further revelation. A badly made habit of cheap stuff was what Ella had expected to see—for the child was an all-too close observer and knew what garments were workmanlike and what were not. But there were no signs of skimping economy in the turn-out Miss Hunt wore; from the soles of her neat patent-leather riding boots to the cut of her coat and sit of her tie everything was as smart, correct, and up to date as could be. A little spur twinkling on her left heel, her gloved hand holding a light, gold-mounted crop, and the easy grace with which she sat Sobersides and the light, caressing touch on his mouth made that exemplary but highly sluggish animal move and carry himself like a prouder horse than he had done for many a day.

"I must put you on a better mount another time"—said Mr. Cullen "I have had to use a good deal of discrimination so far, finding that 'absolutely quiet' was the first and only recommendation necessary for Ella's ladies."

They went down to the big tree on the race-course, saw some of "the Cup" candidates at work, and met many acquaintances of Mr. Cullen's, several of whom chatted with them, amongst others was a big good-looking man, riding a blood-like weight carrier of remarkable make and shape, who was doing escort to "Miss Browne." The cousins greeted each other warmly.

"Well Ridley"—said Mr. Cullen as the two gentlemen and Ella dropped behind—"who are you taking to see your string this morning?"

By the way where are your horses? I haven't noticed them this morning." "No" replied Ridley, answering the second question and ignoring the first. "I like them to get their work over early, and they have gone home."

"And how do you like being 'Miss Browne'?' asked 'the Governess' with a merry twinkle in her eye. "Is Lady Lackcash kind to you?"

"To tell you the truth;"—said Miss Browne—"that is about the only trying part of my share in the character. She is only two effusively kind. I wish she would not insist in kissing me quite so much in public, but I suppose she considers it is all in the bargain and that she must make full return for value received."

"Anything else to complain about?"

"Well, perhaps, it would be a little more comfortable if she would not advertise the fact of my supposed wealth quite so prominently. Every time I go out with her I feel as if a string of Sandwichmen were parading behind us with "Walk-up! Walk up! Walk up, and see Miss Browne! the five thousand pounder!!" in large letters on their backs."

"Oh I know the feeling! I know the feeling so well"—laughed her merry cousin. "Do you wonder at my wanting to get a little respite from it? It's always the same, always the same; and how the men's eyes positively glitter when they think of all that wealth which they may possibly obtain at the cost of taking a certain incumbrance with it."

"Don't you think you are inclined to take rather a jaundiced view of these matters? I mean cannot you imagine anybody finding you sufficiently attractive in yourself, without thinking of what you have? I can."

"No I cannot quite do that. The best I could imagine in my case, handicapped by the public knowledge of my belongings, would be that some one might act on the Quaker's advice "Doan't thou marry for munny, but goa whear munny is"—and that is not good enough for me."

"Then you mean that you will never marry?'

"I didn't say that; no I never said that—but I'll never marry any one who asks me knowing that I am well-off."

A light seemed to break upon her cousin. "I understand now" she said. "This masquerading on your part is in hope that Mr. Right may come along."

Oh, no! no! How can you say such a thing? At least I think not. It's too bad of you."

both Ella and Mr. Cullen, who just then turned and joined the ladies, were surprised to see how vexed and annoyed the new governess looked; but as the party broke up immediately Mr. Ridley and his companion making their way towards the Ellenburgh course whilst the others completed the circuit, the clouds very soon passed away and 'Constance Hunt' was her usual smiling self again.

"Who was the lady with Mr. Ridley?' asked Mr Cullen. "You seem to be well acquainted with her."

Miss Hunt told him that she was a distant cousin of her's who had come out to spend the cold weather with Lady Lackcash, and that they had made the voyage on the same steam-ship.

"That will be very nice for you said Mr. Cullen, and I hope we shall see a good deal of them whilst they are here. I will get Miss Cullen to call on them at the Grand" you say? Very well. By the way, this Miss Browne, is she not the great heiress that people are talking about?

"Oh this horrible advertising" thought "Constance." "But I'm out of it. Christmas week brought all the excitement of the best racing in India, and also, as a guest, Captain Geoffrey Strange of the 8th Dragoon Guards, a favorite nephew of Miss Cullen's. It cannot be said that Mr. Cullen regarded him with quite the same favorable eye on account of the young man's extravagance, impecuniosity, and somewhat rapid mode of living, but he had come down on ten days' leave to have a good time, and it behoved Mr. Cullen as a good host to see that he got it. The governess was at first scarcely remarked by this very exquisite young man, a circumstance which in her heart of hearts rather rejoiced Miss Cullen. She looked upon it as not only advisable, but almost absolutely necessary that her nephew should contract a wealthy marriage on the earliest possible occasion; hence the attractions exhibited by pretty governesses should not be too much regarded.

The good lady was in some ways considerably puzzled. From what she had heard from a sister at home who had done the interviewing and engaging, she had quite expected the new governess to be a striking girl, accomplished, and one who could do most things entering into the life of a vigorous young woman brought up in a good country house. But the girl's belongings amazed her; everything she had was so good, complete, and costly.

"My dear" she said on the evening after the Viceroy's Cup, where she had spent her time manœuvring to get Geoffrey Strange and the 'wealthy' Miss Browne to take an interest in each other, "how is it you have got such very nice things? I assure you there was not a nicer dress than your's in the paddock."

"Oh I don't know" was the reply. "They—they were just got."

'Yes, my dear but, but surely they must have been very costly; And you must excuse me, I was given to understand that you were not very happily circumstanced as regards pecuniary matters."

No—o: That's true "said the governess, meaning something very different to what Miss Cullen did. "But you see they were all got whilst I—I mean of course my near relatives—were solvent."

"Then they must have been solvent very lately" replied the elder lady shrewdly—"for your things are everything that is the fashion now."

"But you forget: they were made in London and—and Paris; and this is Calcutta. It must take a long time for things to get out here."

"Not so long as you seem to think. I assure you that dozens—well almost dozens of the frocks worn to-day were made in Paris a very few weeks ago. But there's another matter I wanted to speak to you about; only I have scarcely liked to and have put it off from day to day."

"Yes; what is it?"

"It's—its your hair, my dear?"

"My hair! Why, what about that?"

"It's—it's very pretty, you know—and suits you so well: but—but—I had been told that it was brown."

For one awful moment "Constance Hunt" thought that the game was up. Then the idiotic words of a comic song suggested rescue, but at a price which she felt must forfeit Miss Cullen's good opinion for ever.

"Washing Soda does it—and—and other things."

For one minute Miss Cullen seemed to regard her with what she felt rather than saw was stern disapproval. She was a sham, a worse than a sham, a painted Jezebel. The throwing out of such a suggestion had proved almost more bitter than admitting she was the wealthy Miss Browne. Then in nervous tones the elder lady spoke:

"Could you,—would you—do give me the recipe? It's simply wonderful!"

The relief was too much, and almost hysterical with laughter the governess promised to get something made up which she hoped might be satisfactory, but strongly suspected would not; and Miss Cullen went off full pleased at the idea of getting an article which really would improve those grey patches off her elderly head, which was to be no more bothered with troublesome questionings regarding Miss Hunt."

GEORGE RAVEN DALE.

At Windsor, some twenty years back, a good thing came untied in Hornpipe, who was beaten a neck by Acheron for a selling race. Among the company present was Sir George Chetwynd, who bought the defeated animal from his disgusted owner, Tom Brown, for £200. What Sir George saw in the race did not transpire, but his good judgment was afterwards made apparent.

Upon taking his new purchase home, the Leybourne baronet tried him to be a bit above the class in which he had been running, and entered him for a race at Newmarket. During the short time he had been in possession of his new owner he had made wonderful improvement. So confident was Sir George that he said to the commissioner who worked the stable investments, "It's good enough to put on what you like for yourself." That Sir George had not overrated the animal was shown by the way he smothered his seventeen opponents, beating them by six lengths.

The commissioner implicity believed in his patron, and resolved to put on a good lump; indeed, he was so busy that he was quite ignorant of the fact that the event was run upon the new T.Y.C., and the first intimation that the race had been run was received by him when he asked a bookie, "How much on the field?"

"No, thank you," retorted the layer, with a grin; "the favourite has already won in a canter."

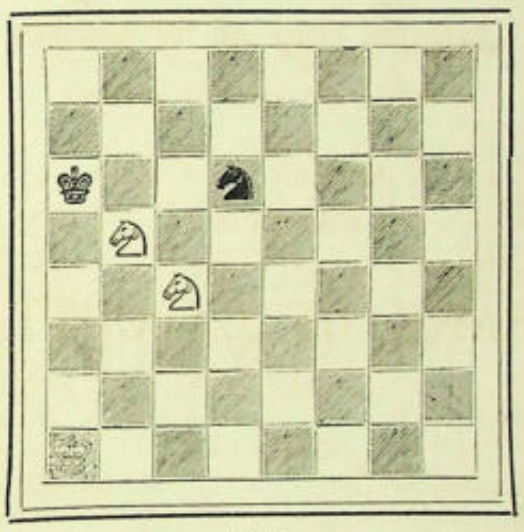
Poetry.

THE MOSQUITO.

I am the Almighty Mosquito,
I'm the Spirit of Evil let loose:
And I wage in my might one unendable fight,
Asking and giving no truce.
Man, he is pitted against me,
And I, I am pitted 'gainst man:
And though great is his size in his own little eyes,
He still is just where he began.

Oh I am the Essence of Fever,
I am the Soul of Disease:
And I reign in my pomp in my poisonous swamp,
Whence I issue my deadly decrees.
My minions go forth by battalions,
To slaughter and slay and destroy,
And the Scientist grave is my veriest slave,
And the Sage, in my hands, is a toy.

Commissions have sat to discuss me,
Bacteriologists toil
Through experiments deep in endeavour to sweep
My race from the face of the soil.
I laugh at each futile endeavour:
I scoff at each desperate plan:
And the War cry they fear they hear hummed in their ear,
While I wage my crusade against Man.



Let be! I will cry for no quarter.
I ask for no Court at the Hague:
Let them fight as they please—My weapon's Disease—
My Marshals are Fever and Plague.
Best becursed beast of my species—
Shall I care? Nay, to curses I'm used:
Be the fight short or long, I shall still hum my song
When the curses have gone home to roost.

BREEDING.

IN our issue of 30th ultimo we commented on "Fox Terrier Type"; it is now proposed to carry the subject a step further. It is supposed that the matter of type is settled and that the novice has made up his mind to breed in a small way. He has then to possess himself of, say, a couple of good bitches. He can purchase these in the country, as puppies, at a comparatively small figure; or obtain adults fit to breed at once at higher price. If he desire to make a beginning without delay, the latter will be the better alternative. The bitches should be terriers of good and guaranteed pedigrees, and, if possible, have themselves proved winners. The chances of breeding are so uncertain, even with the very best that money can buy, that it is sheer waste of valuable time to start operations except with the very best the owner can afford. Pedigree is essential, but not any pedigree. A pedigree may be a very bad as well as a very good one. It may indicate a splendid lineage or many a bar sinister. With the desired type of winning terrier borne in mind, it may or may not be very easy to decide whether the pedigree is satisfactory, but let it come from a reliable source. "Fly high" is a grand maxim in such cases. It may mean increased expenditure to purchase from a kennel of reputation, but it is worth it. If the bitches have themselves taken however in the ring, it is the more satisfactory. Improvement in any species of animal lies in breeding from judicious selections of the most valuable stock produced. It does not always follow, but obviously by breeding from masters of good blood, there must be a backward, rather than a forward, tendency. Such inferior specimens have thrown back to some undesirable ancestor in the race, and by breeding from them, objectionable points may be crystallised. The bitch may be the litter sister of a champion, but if she is in herself bad, there will be a tendency to reproduce her bad features. "Blood will tell" is a valuable motto, but there is another breeder's axiom in "like produces like." If the purchase of a valuable pedigree winning bitch means a prohibitive figure, it is better to use an indifferent terrier of real good blood, than a far better one of bad pedigree, or of no pedigree at all. The blood must be obtained, but if possible obtain both blood and merit.

The bitches being secured, the next step lies in the choice of a sire. If the purse is long enough for the purchase of a really good stud dog, a dog on the premises has many advantages. Long journeys for the purpose of service in themselves mean expense and frequently disappointment. Unless in charge of a reliable kennelman, there is always the risk of a misalliance,—the bitch may arrive too late, not be properly looked after, and all the other possible contingencies. But even if the owner possesses his own dog, he may often find it desirable to send his bitches elsewhere, to a still better stud terrier, or for the purpose of a suitable outcross. In choosing a sire, select the very best that can be had for love or money,—a terrier, a known winner, of the best blood, and who appears to have the faculty of throwing winning stock. The two qualities are not always combined. The largest prize winners are not invariably those who are the most successful at stud. Some stud dogs unable to win in the ring are remarkably prepotent in improving the value of the strain they represent on their progeny. They may be unable to win on account of some trifling or important defect. There may be, for instance, the defect of slight over-size. Many a good terrier, superlatively good in other points, is a trifle too large for show. The defect may be very significant if the dog comes of a strain notoriously large; it is then as bad a feature as any other disqualification, but a chance over-sized terrier of a generally nice-sized breed, and good in every other way, offers no objection. He may even be desirable for this reason to counteract a defect in the other direction. That is the main point to consider, is the fault an inherent one of that particular strain? If so, avoid such a stud dog as the devil is said to avoid holy water. Old Belgrave Joe, one of the pillars of the fox terrier stud book, was, owing to a defect in ear, debarred for exhibition; but the fault was not characteristic of his strain and he was a remarkably successful stud dog. Pickle II had a deformed foot and was highly patronised by all the best breeders of his day. But a dog with strikingly bad feet and of a strain remarkable for bad feet, with soft coat, or with large, full eyes, or broad chest, of faulty ear carriage, or coming from ancestors known to fail in such respects, should be scrupulously avoided. He shows in himself, in a marked degree, a distinct, inherited, objectionable feature, and is therefore likely to impress the fault on his offspring. Cæteris paribus, select the most successful winner, who is also a known success at stud; but remember that a dog may be a champion and of no value for breeding, and he may be disqualified for exhibition by some defect and yet a most valuable sire.

There is also the question of in-breeding. To secure a fixed type and adhere to it, in-breeding is essential. In-breeding intensifies pronounced merits if they exist, and also pronounced defects. To in-breed with inferior specimens must, therefore, be disastrous. The same course of action with super-excellent terriers is advantageous, if not carried too far. "Never be afraid of in-breeding, and never in-breed except when it is necessary" is a good axiom. The danger in India, in small kennels, and when there is a difficulty in obtaining fresh blood, is to over do the virtue. Therefore with a choice of two sires, equal in other respects, choose the least related. A really good, complete out-cross is most valuable. Having obtained it, it is simple to subsequently in-breed to any desirable extent. It must also be remembered that some strains stand severe in-breeding far more than others.

Moral qualities have to be considered as well as mere externals. The most perfectly-shaped terrier in the world will fail to score if it be constitutionally timid. Style and gameness in the ring are very important characteristics. A bold, gay-spirited terrier, who "asks for the money," as the phrase is, will often beat a far superior one, who refuses to show, and sulks or shivers with shyness with the tail between the legs. There is nothing so hard to breed out as shyness and nervousness, and such defects should be avoided as carefully as physical deficiencies. Speaking generally, the dam is the more likely to transmit her mental qualities, the sire his external features. A really game bitch rarely throws timid whelps; a nervous one will produce shy progeny litter after litter. The importance of breeding terriers who will not fail to make the most of themselves under the eyes of the judge cannot be over-estimated. Novices, who breed at random and with little forethought, may be surprised at their want of success; but they should remember that the eminent breeders of the day do not owe their reputation to mere good luck, they give the subject immense thought, and starting with the best materials, derive a vast deal of their good results from judicious meeting.

The bitch is in season, as a rule, twice a year, but it is not advisable to breed from her on every occasion. Once a year will keep a bitch in good health and not over tax her strength. An aim should be made to obtain litters at a suitable time for the puppy classes. Thus, if the most prominent show is at Christmas, puppies born in January stand the best chance. The definition of a puppy is a dog under twelve months of age, and the nearer that age, without exceeding it, the better the chance. The youngster has not only the advantage of more maturity when competing with younger puppies, but is also able to hold its own with the adults in the open events. With a Christmas Show, puppies born late in the year are too young to exhibit, and too old to appear, as puppies, at the succeeding show. A puppy exhibited at an unformed age, when all legs and wings, appears ungainly by the side of an older one. It is therefore a point to exhibit at a favourable period of life with the view to securing at a bound every possible honour in all events for which the exhibit is eligible. The subject of puppies is, however, one on which we intend to enlarge on another occasion.

Sporting Notes.

ANOTHER day in the mud for the Second Calcutta Monsoon Meeting, though the rain held off long enough to raise hopes that we should see some galloping on top of the ground. On the morning of Saturday, however, it came down in torrents and the going was consequently as heavy as the most inveterate sticker could desire. In spite of the weather, however, a good day's sport was witnessed and as monsoon backers soon get to know pretty well what candidates can act in the dirt, backers did not take much harm over the day, though one or two fancied good things ran very disappointingly. In the Pony Plate, Second Thought was served up a red hot favourite, but she could carry her big burden no nearer than fourth, the race being won very easily by her stable companion Reveille.

In the Pony Hurdles, Moss Rose was rightly supposed the best able to cope with the sloppy ground, and she never gave her backers an anxious moment as she won her race from start to finish. Had the going been firm, however, it is probable that two or three of the others would have finished in front of her.

In the Horse Hurdles, Dundonald was the most fancied, though not a few were backing Fairlight on the strength of his colonial running. The ultimately winner, Ladybird, was completely ignored by punters and sixes and longer odds could have been easily obtained about her. It is, of course, easy to be wise after the event and many authorities were subsequently busy trying to prove that Ladybird was what should have been backed all along, but we cannot see that had the going been a bit better she would have had a ghost of a chance, and even as it was we think her win a somewhat fortunate one, owing partly to S. White's fine riding and partly to a notion that Fairlight's jockey thought he had the race won at the last flight and took things just a little bit too easy. Dundonald ran a very much worse horse than on his last appearance, and, moreover, was not fencing too well.

The betting on the Hunters' Plate opened with Actress a strong favourite, but at the close she had gone out a point or two and Beeswing II was being more heavily backed. There was never anything else in the hunt, but Actress and Mr. H. Smith had a very comfortable ride, as the little mare was fencing perfectly and he had never to call upon her for an effort.

In the Monsoon Plate, Springlock's declaration having miscarried, Major Cook at 7st. 5lbs. was selected to carry the bulk of the public money, Altamas being next in demand. How Major Cook would have run is hard to say, as he was badly left at the post and never really joined his horses. Altamas and Metalwing were best away and the former quickly assumed the lead and held it to the distance, where Kittylea came with a run and won nicely by half a length.

Ten went to the post for the Fort Stakes, of whom Euryalus was most fancied. His behaviour at the post on this occasion was most exemplary and he got away with the leaders and going to the front led to the 2 furlongs, where Oom Paul drew up and obtained a slight lead. Hard, however, made an effort inside the half distance and a dead heat was the verdict. In the run off Oom Paul won somewhat easily.

We publish to-day under "Races to Come" the prospectuses of the Madras Winter and Umballa Autumn Meetings.

First Entries for the Dehra Autumn Sky Races are good, as will be seen from the list we publish further on. Second and final entries close on the 10th proximo.

This mail brought us the nominations for the Derby and Oaks of 1905. In each instance they are numerically well up to the average, but it is not a little singular that two of our leading owners, Lord Howard de Walden and Sir Blundell Maple, are each without a representative in the Blue Riband. It would seem, indeed, that last year the mares at the Childwick stud threw little else but fillies, for Sir Blundell is responsible for nine young ladies in the Oaks, for which the owner of the "apricot" jacket has nominated a daughter of Isinglass and Go Lightly and a filly by Love Wisely out of Sierra, both purchased at the Newmarket July sales. His Majesty is well represented in both races, and there is no doubt that a lot is thought of his two Persimmon colts out of Vane and La Carolina respectively. The first-named mare is an own sister to Flying Fox, which celebrity is responsible for several of those engaged, M. Blanc having entered a half-brother to Vinicius, and a colt by the same sire out of the Oaks, winner, Airs and Graces. The Duke of Westminster has nominated four young Ormes, three colts and a filly, in the Derby, and the last-named, it is of interest to note, is an own sister to Flying Fox; while the half-dozen standing in the name of the Duke of Portland are all highly bred, and whereas two of them are the produce of Oaks' winners, Ormsby, by Orme out of La Roche, is, if we mistake not, the first foal of his dam. One is glad to see among the subscribers to the race the name of the Earl of Zetland, for few racing banners have been more missed than the "spots of Aske"; while the fact that Mr. Henry Chaplin is responsible for a colt by Sir Hugo out of Mother Seigel suggests that it may not be long before at home they see the "all rose" of the Blankney squire again unfurled.

Friar Tuck, who ran third in last year's Derby and Leger, has been purchased for India and is now on his way out in the Kalibia. Special Telegrams and other announcements notwithstanding, we have the best authority for saying that the colt has been bought by Mr. J. C. Galstaun and not by Mr. Hamar Bass. Running under the Duke of Portland's colours in 1901 he failed to secure a place in the two engagements he fulfilled, and as a two-year-old did not show much promise. Last year his successes included wins in the May Plate at Kempton Park, the Coombe June Plate at Sandown Park, the Duchess of York Plate at Hurst Park and the Newmarket St. Leger Stakes, starting favourite in the last three events. He was twice placed second and twice third in the other four engagements he fulfilled, running a tolerable third to Ard Patrick in the Derby and to Sceptre in the St. Leger. He was beaten by First Principal in the October Plate at Kempton Park, there being no other runners; and he was an indifferent second to St. Windeline in the Ascot Biennial Stakes. Galopin—Substitute, has up to now been trained by J. Porter and on his English form and with his 6lbs. landing allowance in the Viceroy's Cup he ought to have more than a good look in. The Viceroy's Cup is gradually developing into a battle between three or four Titans of the Indian Turf, and it is more than probable that ere long the conditions of the race will have to be altered so as to give a chance to sportsmen other than millionaires.

It is with infinite regret and disgust we have to chronicle another instance of senseless brutality under the plea of testing the endurance of horses. Reuter tells us of an experiment in cruelty made under the auspices of the French military authorities, that, if true, should call forth expressions of execration from every right minded individual. The fiends who could urge a horse through heavy ground over the distance recorded till the poor brute dropped dead ought to be killed in a similar manner themselves. One would have imagined that the severe denunciations evoked on a former occasion of similar barbarity would have prevented any repetition, but the occurrence proves that savagery is still inherent in some of us.

A Horse and Dog Show will be held at Mussoorie on the 26th September, entries closing on the 10th proximo. There will be ten classes for horses and twenty-three for dogs.

The Wild Birds Protection Act, we are glad to see, has been declared applicable to the civil and military station of Bangalore.

We have received from Messrs. Cassells & Co. a complete volume of the Sports of the World, the first few numbers of which we had the pleasure of noticing some time ago. The volume is handsomely bound and the last few parts in every particular are up to the standard of the early ones, the whole forming an elegant and useful addition to the sportsman's library.

The letter regarding the destruction of game in Assam, which appears over the well-known signature of "Rekab" in our Correspondence columns to-day, will interest and distress sportsmen, while it is deserving of the special attention of the authorities and those who are strenuously endeavouring to bring about proper regulations for the general preservation of game in India. The wholesale slaughter of females and immature animals therein referred to is revolting to any real sportsman who must feel humiliated when reflecting that, while raising the outcry against the cruel and wanton destruction of animal and bird life by the ignorant and savage native, a great deal of blame should rightly be laid at the door of the very people who should set the example.

The elephant of Southern India has an unfriend in Mr. W. L. Edmiston, the Managing Director of the Madras Mule Breeding Company, Limited. While we are not disposed to accept all his arguments in favour of the removal of the protection now extended to these animals we consider there is a good deal in his remarks that invites careful consideration, especially in view of the periodical destruction and mischief caused up Assam way nowadays when the hathi either goes on the war path or plays his ponderous pranks. This is what Mr. Edmiston says in his letter to the Pioneer :—

Sir,—I wish through the medium of your columns to ask how long the Government of India propose to foster that most destructive and now practically useless beast, the elephant. The small revenues accruing to the State from the very few catches in each year cannot possibly meet one of the items to be set against his account, viz.—(1) the damage and devastation he works to forest growth: (2) the fearful havoc he works in cultivated lands: (3) the sacrifice of human life which can be recorded against him. With regard to (1) a long observation of elephant-frequented forest, extending over 25 years, has shown me that in trampling and treading, in tearing to pieces and uprooting, any one elephant must in one year do damage far exceeding his value, and as his average life is some 75 years, his existence on this one score alone is not justified. As regards (2) elephants have now so long been protected that they have in the last 20—25 years probably quadrupled their numbers, in Southern India at any rate, and now every village and hamlet near a forest they frequent must either submit to regular systemtic visits of devastation of their crops, or the unfortunate cultivators must themselves spend the whole night for weeks on end shouting, burning fires, beating tom-toms and blowing horns and rendering themselves unfit for work by day, or must pay others to do so. And then the brutes won't be kept out of the fields, seeming to know that they are protected and favoured. (3) The death-roll to be credited to elephants is serious indeed, many an unfortunate that one knows of being killed, besides the probably larger number we do not hear of. Now, I have within the last few years seen a printed slip of paper giving notice that sportsmen camping in the jungle should remember that (I forget the exact wording) they were not entitled to cut sticks for huts or firewood, or tentpegs, or toothpicks, or whatever it was. Any observant man, who is familiar with any elephant jungle, knows that one single elephant in the ordinary course of his 24 hours feed and amusement will do more damage than a sportsman would do in 12 months.

On what pretext, then, is the ugly brute fostered and protected and encouraged to increase in his hundreds? An absolute devastator of light forest, a cruel enemy and a curse to the cultivator near his haunts (which daily become wider) and a menace to human life, obsolete as a means of locomotion and (save the few employed in the Forest Department) obsolete for all practical purposes, bringing in practically no revenue to the State, becoming from long immunity from molestation daily more intrusive, fearless and destructive,—can any one propound or conceive a reason for his encouragement? Twenty years ago, it was a subject of remark and ridicule, that while the antediluvian depredators were fostered by the British Government (for whose benefit a very limited number were annually caught in pits and a good many more killed by the same device), they wandered off annually into Mysore, I speak now of those in Coimbatore and the Nilgiri Districts, there to be caught in keddahs and sold often to the British Government (I believe I am right in saying) and to others. Of late years keddah operations have almost or entirely ceased, and the elephants here do not wander so far away, but, in their increased numbers, put out into the open country now and are the more troublesome, and, of course, the more dangerous. I am, as Managing Director, running for the Madras Mule Breeding Company a breeding and farming establishment on a block of fairly open forest, leased from the Madras Government. Having one particularly fine area of harrialli I used every endeavour to scare the brutes away, putting up many big and noxious looking scare-crows. Most of these were pulled down and tossed about the very first night, and terrible damage done, not in eating mark me well, but in purely mischievous trampling and treading and general mess-making. Next morning I counted 27 elephants in one lot close to my dwelling place and saw these meet another herd which had been amusing themselves at the company's expense (as above stated). This latter herd, my people told me, numbered over 23. Here on one farm, at one time, were 52 of these useless pests, half having done, and half going to do, destruction. Why is this scourge permitted? And for how many more years are the useless loafers to breed and multiply and to be a wasteful, dangerous nuisance?

I do not advocate the extermination of the brutes, but I maintain that years ago the time had arrived when protection should have ceased, and that now there is every reason for a systematic reduction of their numbers—even for decimation—which would still leave more than are desirable to satisfy sentiment, the only possible argument for their existence. Not many years ago the then Governor of Madras, Lord Wenlock, had a distinguished guest stopping with him. This gentleman wanted to shoot an elephant, and I believe I am right in saying it could not be arranged by the Governor and he had to go to Travancore! It would be laughable were the matter not so serious Because once upon a time, long years ago, when these were few, and hundreds had been destroyed and were being destroyed, it seemed that elephants required protection (and then they were of some use and there was therefore some reason for protection); now there is no relaxation of the Protective Act, when they are all over the place, when their employment in almost any work has ceased, when, accordingly, their value to the State is nil and when they have but one rule in life—destruction.

In our Correspondence Columns will be found a letter in which the writer opposes the above views and suggests that India without elephants would be not unlike Hamlet with the part of the Prince of Denmark eliminated.

Some business has lately been done on the Viceroy's Cup—Friar Tuck at 4 to 1 and Carabine at fives. Other prices, as we go to press, are fives Great Scot, sixes Vasto, sevens Cretonne, tens and longer odds the rest.

We are glad to see, by the receipt of a very neatly turned out little volume which reflects credit on the Times of Ceylon office, where it was printed, that the Ceylon Turf Club has made a good start in the direction of preserving an official record of the races held under their rules. The. C. T. C. "Racing Calendar" now before us gives details of all the meetings which have taken place on the island between 1898 and 1902, and throughout there is evidence of careful compilation, though here and there certain details are wanting owing to the data hitherto available being more or less incomplete. Therefore the Club, in issuing this volume, neither hold themselves responsible for the accuracy of the contents nor is it intended to treat this volume of the Calendar as official; but in all future publications of the kind the Club will assume this responsibility and place in the hands of Ceylon sportsmen valuable and correct information.

The advocates of game sanctuaries in India should be encouraged by the success which seems to attend the introduction of the sanctuary system to certain parts of Ceylon. Writing of the operations conducted in the Southern Province Mr. Horsburgh, the Assistant Government Agent, says in his Report for 1902: "Perhaps the work most removed from routine was my visit of inspection in March to the game sanctuary. Much of the sanctuary was demarcated by a ten-foot cleared line. In the sanctuary I find game plentiful and fearless. Numerous herds of deer were seen! One herd at Pottana I estimated at about 200 in number. Buffaloes seemed to be doing well. Absolute proof of the strict preservation and undisturbed state of the sanctuary was furnished by the behaviour of the sambur.

"At one large open pool I came upon eight sambur lying and standing round it quite unconcealed, two fine stags being in the open in the middle of the shallow water. Nor did they betray any signs of fear at seeing us and hearing our voices. We showed ourselves in the open, talked to them, and had regularly to 'shoo' them away, whereupon they took their departure in a very leisurely fashion, stopping and looking back every now and then. This experience was repeated at other pools, in one of which the sambur were cheek by jowl with a herd of buffaloes. The Pallepotana abandoned tank has been restored, so as to hold up water for the increasing number of game in the dry season. Two more tanks were similarly selected for restoration. The condition of the game and of the sanctuary is steadily improving."

Mr. Brodhurst, the Government Agent, who visited the spot later, adds: "In August I visited the game sanctuary with the Assistant Government Agent. Deer and peafowl were seen in considerable numbers, and the way in which the deer trotted off a little distance and stood to watch us ride past shows that the deer are not molested. Pig were seen in large herds, and moved out of the way reluctantly as we approached. It would perhaps be as well to thin out the pigs, as all the available water is required for game. Some work has been done on the old tanks, but water is still scarce in the dry weather."

Our Poona correspondent writes:—

Lorgnette who has shown such marked antagonism (in that admirable little paper the Indian Sporting Times) to closed races on this side of India during the present season can apparently see but little good in the actions of the W. I. T. C. or its executive officers. Their latest delinquency in his eyes was their decision disqualifying Najaffi for jostling Nainawa. This is how Lorgnette deals with it. After referring to the unanimity of the Stewards and their promptitude in settling the appeal, he writes: It is all the more surprising that several very sound judges of racing who were seated near the writer on the top of the stand, put an altogether different interpretation on the incident and vowed that had Nainawa won, Southall would most certainly have lodged an objection. The italics are mine, but the last sentence is delightfully vague. The "sound judges" may possibly have been correct in their prognostication regarding Southall's supposititious objection, but happily it is on the decree of the executive and not on groundless objections that such matters are determined. Lorgnette then with somewhat questionable logic arrives at the following peculiar deduction: "Either those with good glasses on the roof saw what did not actually take place or that point of vantage is much better than the floor below. I incline to the latter belief." The disingenuous assertiveness of this argument is charming. The possibility of equally "sound judges of racing" with equally good glasses arriving at a more correct decision downstairs Lorgnette apparently cannot for a moment admit. But surely these are posibilities; and a deduction on faulty premises is never entirely convincing.

But out of curiosity let us turn to the Indian Sporting Times' reference to the race in question in the previous week's issue. There one reads: Certainly Najaffi was bumped on to the rails. Now at the time of the jostle the pony Daylight was between Najaffi and the rails! If therefore Lorgnette thought he saw Najaffi "bumped on to the rail" then one can only humbly hope that he will in future adopt a less exalted attitude!

Lorgenette's writings as a rule go to prove him so excellent a sportsman as well as gifted a writer that his active hostility in such matters is all the more a matter of surprise. In the subject of closed races (giving too attentive an ear perhaps to the greedy croakings of millionaire natives) he fell into the indiscretion of prophesying before he was certain! We may not unnaturally presume that the Stewards of the W. I. T. C. are not elected on the grounds of lack of intelligence, or ignorance or inexperience of Indian racing affairs and the large majority at least of the present executive have the reputation of not only not being large bettors but of not betting at all, and may therefore be all the more trusted to look after our racing affairs from an absolutely disinterested point of view. In Mr. Gray they have an adviser of ripe experience and great natural aptitude, with incomparable facilities for gauging the public feeling on racing affairs. It was a rash critic therefore who stepped in where an angel might discreetly "fear to tread." And the angel would in this instance appear to be the wiser of the two.

But apart from all this such determined radical opposition to constituted authority comes ill from a popular writer in a sporting paper. After all it is from the members of Clubs and Services (whose interests Lorgnette has of late assailed and not from the numbers of professional racing men that the racing clubs, all the world over, elect their executives.

With what prolonged period of personal Indian experience Lorgnette ventures to criticize the actions of the W. I. T. C. executive (the ever-increasing success of whose efforts renders most criticisms futile) I, of course, cannot say. But criticisms to do good must be accurate—and successful. Criticism based on incorrectness ceases to be impressive or effective. Lorgnette seems from his general writings to be far too good a fellow and excellent a sportsman to be made a "cat's paw" of by greedy and prejudiced advisers. The attitude of hostility he has of late adopted towards the "aristocracy of sport" does no good to sport in its highest form and naturally gives a good deal of offence, and there are, I know, many beside the writer of these lines who earnestly hope that so good a sportsman and brilliant a writer as Lorgnette will hesitate before continuing in his recently adopted attitude of hostility.

Everyone was distressed to hear that Captain Greville had met with an accident. It is always irritating to hear of a good sportsman who is ready to take the legitimate risk coming to grief in a silly sort of way and in the present instance Captain Greville was merely "tittuping" about the Polo ground when his pony came down and rolled over him with the result that that popular sportsman and G. R. received a slight concussion of the brain and was insensible for a sufficient number of hours to cause considerable anxiety. Luckily no serious harm seems to have accrued, but it was more sporting than discreet of him to be out and racing even as an onlooker so soon after so serious a description of injury.

Only a few days after Captain Rowlandson took a bad toss on a game of polo and was insensible (from concussion of the brain) for several hours. He was wisely taken to the Sassoon Hospital, where his many friends are glad to hear he is doing well.

It will be with universal regret that the Bombay Presidency will part with Lord and Lady Northcote. Though not as great a sportsman as some of his illustrious predecessors, His Lordship has always been keen on the encouragement of sport in others. His gentleness of disposition and Lady Northcote's generous charity in times of affliction have made them, however, very popular with all classes.

A real good old sportsman in the shape of Surgeon-General Price is shortly being lost to India. A keen polo player, one of the staunchest supporters of the Bombay and Poona Hunts and a first-class judge of horses General Price is of a truth one of the "hard bitten sort." His reference, at the dinner given in his honour, to it being "time for the old hound to kennel up" would have been very pathetic, but that all who know him feel that there is "a deal of life in the old dog yet."

Australia's gain is India's loss, for we can ill spare such promising G.R.'s as Captain Greville and Captain Meynell, both on His Excellency's staff. The former is a sportsman of the best description and we could well do with a lot more of that sort both as owners and riders and the latter could not well do more than win all the races he has started in and impressed every one by the neatness and quietness of his style which was artistic far above the average.

Everyone was glad too to see that well-known veteran G. R. Major Edwards have a win on his pony Daimyo, a big pot being upset thereby on the defeat of Money Spinner, who ran in unaccountably bad form.

In Captain Greville's pony Scattercash we probably see the future winner of big races. The other day he came out and upset the favourite from his own stable—rather a sad error since he was, it is said, absolutely unbacked and on the following Saturday with little money on him won in considerable comfort a mile W. A. race with such useful animals as Wild Fox and Magtoom behind him in 1min. 56secs—surely an excellent performance for a four-year-old fourteen hander in his first season.

In Russley Rose we were introduced to an Australian who from her appearance and début promises to be quite at the top of the 11-1 class. The secret of her excellence was well kept and the coup well-worked and the astute Parsee trainer Byramjee, deserves the highest credit for the condition in which he brought her to the post within so few months of her landing on these shores.

Among the few converts to the "crouch" system at present riding out here are the little English professional Melsom (Mr. Bass' lad) and that well-known G. R. Captain Randall. Both are, I hear, strong believers in it and indeed it is difficult to grasp how slowly it is being accepted by the leading professionals in this country since it is in such universal vogue in every other racing country in the world. Captain Randall, to everyone's interest, adopted it successfully in the hurdle race on Colonel Hazelton's Patrician crouching throughout except actually over the hurdles and again successfully on his own mare Blue Blood. Melsom's successes at Mysore and Bangalore are still fresh in one's memory and one only wonders why a system, the superiority of which is proved almost beyond possible doubt and which must be accepted as such out here in time is so long in coming into general acceptance.

Jimmy Robinson gave his many friends and admirers a start. Fando stumbling and rolling over on him after pulling up in the Midsummer Plate and it looked at first as if the popular jockey might be seriously injured. To everyone's relief it was found that he got off with a shaking and a slightly bruised ankle.

I suppose it would never do for mortal man to have perfection in this life. Everything with the race course now seems nearly as perfect as mortal arrangement can ensure. But the plagues of Egypt are upon us in the shape of flies and fleas! A fortune awaits the lucky wight who can relieve us of these pests.

Mr. Harry Yeend always brings us up something worth looking over and buying in the way of horse flesh ; but, taken all round, it is probable that the shipment he has just landed ex the Euryalus is the best he has yet put on the Indian market. Contrasted with many lots one sees fresh off vessels the horses now standing at "Newmarket Lodge," Ballygunge, have landed wonderfully well and in a few days they ought to be almost in show condition. There are among them many most attractive cobs, polo ponies and trappers 14-1, a few fast trotters with big reputations, a nice selection of paperchasers and other lots worthy of special mention and all of them thoroughly made. The first to arrest attention in the boxes close to the gate when we saw them last Thursday was a fine grey saddle and harness nag 14-1 and a good polo pony, too, we were told. Close to him was a trotting mare by King of Brontë, one of the standard American trotting sires ; she is described as very fast and one to go as straight as a bee. A nice mare by Wycombe—an ideal lady's hack—came next and in the next boxes were a couple of mares by Dandy II, whose get are reckoned among the best in Australia. Then came a little marvel of the " all heart and no peel " stamp, a cream roan pony named Dainty, a perfect picture in saddle, though we understand she shows even better in harness ; she is a big little 'un and carries herself like a big horse. A trotting mare by Honesty, another fashionable American sire, a light chesnut named Goldleaf, whose jumping qualifications include the ability to clear a pocket handkerchief held up at 4ft 2ins. and Snowy, a fine grey built on perfect lines, with tremendons quarters and thighs, a gee fairly bristling with good points, were among the many others we saw in their boxes or at exercise in the yard. They are all young and good looking, some as handsome as paint, and almost without exception they are remarkable for the quality they display.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Bell Irving is convalescent. He leaves for England early next month, and from an advertisement elsewhere it will be seen that he is disposing of his stable.

Athletic Notes.

THE Heavy Weight Boxing Championship was decided at San Francisco on the 14th instant, Jefferies beating Corbett in ten rounds.

Sussex beat Hampshire by an innings and 20 runs, Somerset defeated Worcestershire by four wickets. Kent was beaten by Gloucester by 219 runs and Lancashire beat Essex by 119 runs. The matches between Yorkshire and Derbyshire, and Notts and Middlesex were abandoned.

Jack McAuliffe is down in Colombo, where he recently gave a boxing and athletic display. After some exhibition bouts between soldiers from the Royal West Kent Regiment a fifteen-round contest between Pickering from Calcutta and Roberts of the West Kent was brought off. A good fight was put up, the Calcutta man getting the verdict.

As will be seen from the report included in our London Sporting Letter this week, for the sixth successive time J. A. Jarvis, of Leicester, has won the Long-Distance Swimming Championship, which was decided on Saturday, the 25th ultimo, over the usual course, Kew to Putney, a distance of five miles and sixty yards. Jarvis never had to swim harder for his victory, for, as was generally expected, Billington, of Bacup, a lad of eighteen summers, who has made marvellous progress during the past few years, gave him such a race, and at one time held such a long lead, that there were many critics who thought that the famed Leicester man had taken the pitcher to the well once too often. However, stamina and experience are of the greatest value in such a struggle of endurance, and gradually Jarvis drew up and eventually won rather easily. Still, it is satisfactory to know that at length we have a swimmer who can measure blades with Jarvis, and, but for an attack of cramp, it is thought that Billington might have won outright. Since this Jarvis has won the world's Championship held at Paris as wired out by Reuter.

The much talked of fight between Govia and Fisher was brought off at the Corinthian Theatre last Thursday. Mr. R. B. Naylor acted as referee, Messrs. C. Goldspink and Walker as judges and Mr. Frank Chapman as time-keeper. The heavy and muscle-bound Govia was no match for the lithe and active Fisher, who was all over his opponent from start to finish. He cut Govia badly over the right eye at the beginning and kept jabbing him on the wound. Govia tried hard to make up points in the sixth round, but it was his last effort and he retired after the seventh round, the verdict going to Fisher. The winner was in good form and has improved greatly since he knocked a soldier out in an exhibition bout at the Corinthian Theatre a couple of months ago. Three minor contests of six rounds were put through. In the first Connell beat Wilson on points, Pease and Denham, middle weights, next gave a good display, the bout ending in a draw, and Smith and Muldownie put up a game match, the former gaining the verdict.

The Annual General Meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Cricket Club was held at the Association premises on the 18th instant with Mr. J. F. Parker in the chair. The report of the past season was taken as read and the following office-bearers elected for the ensuing season : Mr. D. A. C. Cruden, Honorary Secretary ; Mr. H. J. Clarke, Captain ; Mr. F. A. Ratcliff, Vice-Captain ; and Messrs. M. Remfry, P. Willder, J. G. Martin, and D. M. Hamilton (Jr.), Committee.

The season will start in the middle of October and the returfing of the pitch is being taken in hand at once. The meeting closed with the usual vote of thanks to the chair.

Our Bombay correspondent writes :—Another Presidency match has been played, and, as I anticipated would be the case, the Parsees have once more proved victorious in Bombay. When cricket enthusiasts commenced to talk about the match two or three months ago the prospects of the Presidency appeared far from bright, and it looked as if great difficulty would be experienced in getting together any thing like a good eleven. Since then, however, quite a number of new players have come on the scene, many of whom have been showing excellent form in club matches. As a result the Selection Committee had no easy task, the claims of so many players to Presidency honours having to be considered. General satisfaction was expressed with the Committee's final selection, but it was felt that it was not a strong side either as regards batting or bowling and this was fully demonstrated by the result of the match. The Parsees had on the field practically the same team as last year, the only notable absentee being A. H. Mehta, the fast bowler, who has proceeded to England to qualify for Lancashire. On the opening day the Parsees batted first and ran up a score of 170, after which they dismissed the Presidency for the poor total of 69. In both batting and bowling departments the Europeans failed and the general opinion expressed when stumps were drawn was that the eleven was about the weakest that had ever done service for the Presidency. With the exception of Macdonogh and John none of the Presidency bowlers gave the Parsees much trouble, and when it came to batting they failed miserably. Had it not been for the splendid stand made by Cheetham, who was at the wicket nearly two hours for fifteen runs I am inclined to think that their innings would have been a record one for brevity in these matches. The bowling of K. M. Mistri was much too good for them—he captured seven wickets for 27 runs. As to the Parsee innings, the chief feature was the batting of K. M. Mistri, than whom it would be difficult to find a more finished batsman in India.

When play was resumed on Friday things looked none too easy for the Presidency, and it was felt that they would have to show very much improved form in order to escape a heavy defeat. Overnight the Parsees had, in their second innings, lost two wickets for 14 runs, and the third was not very long in going down. After this, however, Mistri and Colabawalla became associated, and the Presidency team were treated to a leather hunt, about 60 runs being put on before Mistri was out, having scored 40—he should have been out when he had only scored four, Weatherby dropping him at point. The innings eventually closed for 164, the Presidency being left with 265 runs to make to avert defeat. A feature of this innings was the bowling of Cheetham, who went on when the score stood at 90 and captured five wickets for 25 runs. We have always been accustomed to see Cheetham bowl slow breaks, but on this occasion he gave us all a bit of a surprise, going on bowling fast and in his first two overs captured three wickets for half-a-dozen runs. And here I might say that in my opinion the Selection Committee made one fatal mistake, and that was in not including in the team a really fast bowler as it was their attack lacked sting. They will do well to bear this in mind in connexion with the selection of the team for the Poona match next month, for it is a well-known fact that certain of the Parsee batsmen " funk " fast bowling. As to the Presidency's second innings, the start was a most disastrous one, four wickets going down for a dozen runs. Then, however, a grand stand was made by Weatherby and B. M. Carroll, the former of whom scored 66 and the latter 28, and eventually the innings closed for 116, the Parsees being left victorious by 149 runs. Weatherby's innings was a grand one—he didn't give a chance, and hit freely all round the wicket. As I have mentioned above, the return match will be played at Poona next month. In former years the Presidency have usually won up there, but I am rather doubtful whether they will this year. To do so they will have to show very much improved form.

The weekly mounted sports held in connexion with the Bombay Gymkhana always attract a lot of interest. This year they have started late, three or four postponements having been occasioned by rain. As it was, they commenced on Wednesday last, when a good programme was carried through. There was a large attendance of spectators and a very lively interest was evinced in the various events. The programme opened with a tent-pegging competition (horses), which was won by Mr. T. L. Roberts, Mr. H. S. Symons being second, and Captain Creagh third. A similar competition with ponies followed, and this was won by Mr. F. J. Rome, Mr. T. D. Moore being second and Mr. W. H. Scott third. The jumping competition was productive of some very good jumping, the winners being :—1st, Mr. F. J. Rome's Mischief ; 2nd, Mr. Spence's Crowbar ; 3rd, Mr. Johnson's Lothian. Mr. R. F. R. Cooke easily won the polo ball race. The programme wound up with a couple of scurries. In that for horses there were about a dozen starters, the race being won by Mr. T. L. Roberts' Reminiscence (Mr. S. M. McCausland up), while Mr. H. S. Symons' Surprise, ridden by Mr. Pooley, was second. The pony scurry also attracted a good entry and resulted as follows :—Mr. F. J. Rome's Mischief (Mr. S. M. McCausland); 2nd, Mr. O. G. Owen's Bunker (owner); 3rd, Mr. T. D. Moore's Squirrel (owner). The secretarial duties have this year been entrusted to Messrs. T. L. Roberts and A. Hill Trevor, and, judging by the success by which Wednesday's programme was attended, we may look forward with confidence to these weekly meetings proving as attracive as those of previous years.

A number of games have been played off in connexion with the Harwood Association Football League during the past week. The North Stafford's "A" team simply walked round the Telegraph Club, beating them to the tune of six goals to nil. On Wednesday evening the Royal Engineers played their seventh League match, and suffered their seventh defeat, the winning team on this occasion being the Bombay Gymkhana. From start to finish the latter had the best of matters, but the soldiers defended very pluckily indeed. In the first half two goals were scored against them, whilst just previous to crossing over the Engineers scored their first goal of the season in League matches. In the second half the Gymkhana scored one more goal, and left the ground winners by three goals to one. A game in which great interest was evinced, especially among the military element, was that between the R. G. A. and the North Staffords' " B " team. The teams were fairly evenly matched, and as a result a fast and particularly interesting match was witnessed, the Staffords eventually winning by one goal to nil. The Staffords' "B" team still heads the League table, with their "A" team second, and the R. G. A. third.

An explosion at the Joshi Ice Factory, Benares, on the 16th instant resulted in serious injuries by scalding to eleven people, three of whom have since died.

Many people in Bombay, members of the legal profession and volunteers specially, will read with regret of the death of dear old Fraser Hore, formerly a well-known Solicitor of the Bombay High Court and, as Major in the Bombay Volunteers, one of the most popular officers the corps ever had.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 31st July 1903.

GOODBYE to the season, 'tis over, as Praed or Mr. Locher—I forget which—said in the far off ages. The signs are unmistakable. And this week, what the newspapers call "the usual holiday traffic" has set in with severity. The railway stations are pandemoniums, especially Victoria, as there one has the din of the alterations in addition to the wild struggle with stacks of luggage, hordes of school-boys and girls, and their distracted guardians, and other presumably sane persons "on pleasure bent." Why any one who can by any possibility remain at home elects to travel the week before the August Bank holiday, is a mystery to me which I seem little likely to solve.

*** *** ***

A feeling seems to be general that in the season just passed away, unlamented if not exactly unsung, there has been rather more than a judicious number of entertainments for the benefit of charities—that in fact the thing has been just a little overdone. We all know that a number of deserving charities are much in need of funds; it is no less patent that the "charity which covers," etc., etc., is an extremely convenient (and becoming) garment, and that philanthropy smooths the upward, and oft times thorny path for many aspiring souls. One hesitates to accept the story, said to be well authenticated, of some ladies of good social position refusing to help a "charity" ball a few weeks ago unless they were paid, but undoubtedly in many cases the quid pro quo has been unpleasantly apparent.

Some years ago, for my sins, I was concerned in the arrangements for a bazaar—a "sale of works" I think it was called, in aid of some of the London charities. The function took place in one of the great London houses, for the opportunity of seeing which hundreds of people paid a substantial entrance fee. The wares included paintings, pencil sketches, leather work, poker work, embroideries, etc., executed by rich women of good social position and presumably given to be sold for the benefit of the before mentioned charities. Though the prices were—to put it delicately—above their market value, the things sold rapidly and in the innocence of my heart I congratulated one of the organizers of the sale on the fact—mentioning the sum I thought the charities must at least receive. The lady evidently much amused, explained that the charitable senders of the wares pocketted the price, giving a fixed percentage to the charities, and that this was a recognised arrangement. Whether it is a general one I am unable to say.

"Letters of a Diplomat's Wife" (Madame Waddington) make extremely pleasant reading. Madame Waddington accompanied her husband to Moscow, where he went as Ambassadar Extraordinary to represent France at the Coronation of Czar, Alexander III., in May 1883, and the first few letters give a vivid description of all she saw and did while there. The inner point of view from which she writes, makes the account specially interesting. Monsieur Waddington's English connection and training—he was at Rugby and Cambridge, and rowed in the Cambridge boat in the University race of 1849—and Madame Waddington's American nationality make it difficult, except for occasional touches, to realize that they were not English. They stayed a few days in Berlin en route for Moscow and it is easy to see that 1870 had not been forgotten, and when Madame Waddington remarks of a gentleman that "he is not at all Prussian" she evidently intends it to be taken as a compliment. Her satisfaction at the superiority of the French State "turn-out" over those of the other Embassies is amusing, as in one of the first letters, describing the arrangements for the Mission, she confesses that the horses for the gala crrriage, and also the coachman to drive them, have to be imported from England. The absolute effacement of the class between the Court and the people—the wealthy and well educated bourgeoisie—impressed her unpleasantly.

In the autumn of 1883, M. Waddington was appointed Embassador to England, holding the post until 1893,—and the letters written during these ten years give a very bright and pleasant account of her life in England and of the many people of note whom she knew, of the Jubilee of 1887, the death of the Duke of Clarence, and many other events, the inner history of which her position gave her special knowledge. The late Queen impressed her greatly by her dignity and simple straightforwardness, and it is easy to gather that although nothing of a courtier Madame Waddington was something of a favourite. One significant little story she tells. The Queen feared she had kept her waiting for an interview, but she herself had been kept by Mr. Gladstone; on which Madame Waddington remarked "what a wonderful man, such an extraordinary intelligence." The only reply Her Majesty vouchsafed was "He is very deaf"! From the Princess of Wales (Queen Alexandra) Madame Waddington appears to have received unfailing kindness, and she repeatedly alludes to her simple unaffected manner and charm. She gives a pathetic picture of her continued sadness more than a year after the death of the Duke of Clarence, when Madame Waddington had a farewell interview with her before quitting the French Embassy.

That the London, Brighton and South Coast Railway have at last begun to think of waking up is evident from the trial trip between Victoria and Brighton last Sunday, which beat all previous records. The doubling of the line between Streatham and East Croydon is completed, and on Sunday was used. The train—a light one—a couple of Pullman cars and a brake van did the journey down in forty-eight minutes, and the return journey in under fifty minutes. It is promised that with a heavier train it will still be done within the hour. When the line is quadrupled throughout it is to be hoped that the suburban traffic will benefit, and the present state of uncertainty as to the line on which trains may be expected to arrive, and go out will disappear.

It would be impossible to conceive a more gruesome, not to say revolting, production than Mr. Arthur Bourchier's adaptation of a tale by Edgar Allan Poe, under the title of The Soothing System, produced last night at the Garrick as a curtain raiser. The part of Mallard gives Mr. Arthur Bourchier the opportunity of exhibiting an undeniably clever piece of acting, but beyond that nothing is gained by presenting such a horror. Briefly the story is as follows: A storm drives two men, Austin and Trevor, to shelter in a private mad-house, the inmates of which have, so to speak, mutinied. Under the ringleader, who calls himself Dr. Mallard, they overcome their warders, and confine the doctor, gagged and bound, in a cell. In this state of affairs enter the two young men, who from the shrieks and groans proceeding from adjoining rooms, speedily come to the unpleasant conclusion that they have sought shelter in a madhouse. They are, however, curiously slow in doubting the sanity of Dr. Mallard, who enters, and whom they take to be the master of the house. Their composure is even not disturbed at once, when they are joined by a gang of maniacs, one of whom imagines herself to be a hen and another believes himself to be a donkey. All this time the storm increases, and the thunder grows louder adding to the horrible maniacal excitement which becomes uncontrollable. The demented creatures set on the visitors, who are on the point of being murdered, when relief comes; warders swarm in at the windows, with difficulty rescue Austin and Trevor, and overcome the maniacs. When this is accomplished they enquire for Dr. Fryer, the rightful master of the house. The visitors remember the groans they heard on first entering the house—a door is opened, and Dr. Fryer is discovered horribly injured but still alive. The acting of Mr. Arthur Bourchier as Mallard in the interview with the two visitors is a masterpiece of its kind, and the other parts—they can hardly be described as "characters"—are well filled, but the predominant feeling at the conclusion of the piece was one of genuine relief that it was over, and a determination that one would not see it again, except under compulsion.

Several announcements indicate that the theatrical recess will be a short one. Mr. Barrie's new play Little Mary is promised for 12th September at Wyndham's. Leading parts will be taken by Mr. John Hare, and Miss Nina Boucicault, the latter, an actress, who in her own line has few rivals. Early in September Mr. Cecil Raleigh proposes to produce The Flood Tide at Drury Lane. The piece is described as a "spectacular melofarce" and the scenery supplied by Mr. Collins is said to be of a sensational nature.

Mr. Benson has issued the prospectus of his dramatic school, and it is said to have been very favourably received. The school opens early next month, and instruction in fencing, dancing, elocution, etc., will be given by professors specially engaged for the purpose. Rehearsals will be superintended by Mr. Benson himself, who will award certificates. When the hopelessly unfit are sifted out, a number should be left sufficiently intelligent to profit by the systematic course of study promised, though it is not to a Dramatic School that we must look for actors of the first rank.

The Bill introduced by Mr. Pretyman in the House of Commons to reorganize the administration of the Royal Patriotic Fund will be welcomed by all who are interested in the well-being of our soldiers and sailors, is not too much to say that the Commissioners of the Patriotic Fund have totally misconceived the wishes of the subscribers whose money they have hoarded instead of applying it to the purpose for which it was given. At the present time the sum so accumulated amounts to a million and a quarter invested, in addition to a valuable estate at Clapham; and there is a general impression, which Lord James's Commission appears to think well grounded, that the aim of the Commissioners when inquiring into cases was rather to throw discredit on the applications rather than to seek out those really in need of help. Mr. Pretyman's Bill does not follow the recommendations of Lord James's Commission, but proposes to create a single body, to be constituted of a certain number of members appointed by the Crown, the Chairmen of all the County Councils in the United Kingdom, every Lord Mayor, the Mayors of every county borough in England and Ireland, and a certain number of co-opted members—some of the last to be representative of local funds.

This body, which would be called "the Royal Patriotic Commission, would meet once a year, and would appoint an Executive Committee, which would remain in office for a period of three years. The Commission itself would from the nature of its constitution be constantly changing. It is much to be hoped that the Bill will be allowed to pass this Session as a non-contentious measure. A member who spoke in support of it said with truth that the only way for such a body to get the public confidence was by administering its funds in accordance with the wishes and desires of those who subscribed them. At times when there were great calamities or great wars the public subscribed its money for particular objects, intending that the money should be exhausted completely on behalf of those for whom it had been subscribed and not that the resources should be husbanded, as had been done by the Patriotic Commission in the past."

of "Viscount Hinton," and the only wonder is that he was so ill judged as to bring it. If his story be correct that the late lord expressed his readiness to have an interview with him to discuss the position it is obvious that his weakness is responsible for a good deal of the annoyance and anxiety caused to his legitimate heir.

The service of four-wheeled motor-driven hansoms, promised in the early summer, is at last being placed upon the streets. How many are at present "in operation" (this seems to be be the correct phrase) I am unable to say, but I saw two in Piecadilly the other afternoon. I am told that they have 12-horse power petrol engines, are fitted with pneumatic tyres, are more roomy than the old hansoms, and by reason of their four wheels have greater stability. The fares will be the same as at present, and an improvement that will specially appeal to the lady passenger of economical tendency and timourous nature is that of punched tickets which will ensure that only the correct fare is charged.

The weather has much to answer for, and continues consistently unpleasant. It appears to be the one drawback to the perfect success of the King's visit to Ireland; it has done its best to spoil the Goodwood meeting, which from other causes would have been less interesting than usual, even given fine weather; and it prevented the cricket match Rugby vs. Marlborough being played to a finish. Marlborough has no reason to regret the draw, as Rugby had the best of matters from the beginning and would probably have won easily had the game been played to a finish. The prospect for holiday makers is at present anything but easy, and under the circumstances I cannot say I yearn for the country or sea side.

MARKET GARDEN CROPS.*

AT this the most opportune season we have received a pamphlet upon the Manuring of Market Garden Crops, the joint production of Messrs. Bernard Dyer and F. W. E. Shrivell, two well-known authorities in the agricultural world at home. The mere fact of the work being a reprint from the Journal of the Royal Agricultural Society stamps it as a text-book on the subject treated of. Running into 120 pages of closely printed matter, with tables of results obtained from easily procured manures, all of which are obtainable in this country, and further embellished with photographs the value of the several stimulants is brought vividly before the reader; technical jargon is avoided and were the brochure translated in to our vernaculars the usually apathetic native cultivator could not fail to be convinced of the advantages of stimulating his crops.

To those who are now preparing their ground for the cold weather vegetables in the plains the instruction will be found specially valuable, while residents in the hills will be astonished at the prodigious outturn obtained from the application of the several manures well within their reach, and though the cost of these at home, owing to their having to be imported, ranges as high in some cases as £10 per acre, it will be found on reference to the book, most of them can be had here for a tenth of that sum. The annual rainfall where these experiments have been carried out averages but 29 inches, so here our gardeners have a great advantage. It is impossible in the space at our command to make selections for extensive notice, but the book ought to be in the hands of every official in the famine tracts and could the ryot be induced to divert his animal manure from fuel to its legitimate purpose, used in conjunction with the easily procured constituents mentioned the supply of edible grain and vegetables might be quadrupled throughout the country. Published at the small price of one shilling we can recommend it to the notice of all, from the raiser of such homely products as figure on the bazar stall to the more ambitious cultivator of European fruits. To the commercial agri-horticulturist the treatise will be found specially valuable, and as it is the first of a promised series. Our readers should lose no time in putting themselves in communication with Mr. Shrivell. Thompson's Farm, Golden Green, Tonbridge, England, when we can confidently say they'll receive an uncommonly good return for the very trifling outlay.

Perhaps one of the most extraordinary contests ever arranged was that in which, in the year 1791, a horse was matched to walk a man, "fair heel and toe," a distance of twenty miles. As at that time there was a belief that no horse could compete against a man in fair walking, the odds were all in favour of the biped—a celebrated pedestrain of his day named Horsley.

His antagonist was a hack rejoicing in the not very euphonious title of Sloven; but, contrary to expectation the four-footed animal won somewhat easily, covering the distance in three hours and forty-one minutes. To those who would argue that a pedestrain of good class should have easily covered the distance in less time, it must be pointed out that at that period of history cinderpaths were very much in the womb of the future, and the roads in villainous condition.

Two years later the same animal took on another celebrated pedestrain, and again won, having walked twenty two miles in three hours and fifty-two minutes. This would point to the horse's superiority over man as a "walkist," but who would care to match a present-day quadruped against, say, the Polytechnic Harrier, Butler, on the Brighton Road?

A FEW DAYS' SHOOTING IN AN EASTERN DISTRICT.

THE following notes relate to a few days' shooting my friend B. and I had in March 1867. Several reports having been brought in of a number of tigers devastating the country in and about a place called Mohungunge, some 40 miles south-east of the station, B. and I arranged to have a try there, so collected and sent off 13 elephants with our servants, tents, etc. As we were about to start two baboos, who had lent us several of the elephants expressed a wish to go out and see the fun, we made no objection and it was arranged that they should join us. We reached camp early on the morning of the 14th March and after breakfast got into our howdahs and beat some jungles to the north of the camp, but saw only a few pigs. The following day was a blank one. On the 16th March we sent the elephants off at dawn to Patladoab chur, distant 5 miles south of the camp, where we heard that tigers were daily seen by the cowherds and where a cow had been killed a day or two before our arrival. After chota-hazri we started on our nags for Patladoab zemindari cutcherry, where we learnt that a bullock had just been killed close at hand: the khubereah stated that three tigers had attacked and carried off the bullock: this was great luck and we were soon in the howdahs, arranging guns, ammunition, etc.

Our friends the baboos had reached camp late the previous night and had arranged to be at Patladoab early in the morning. After waiting for them for some time we had given them up and were about to move on to the jungle when their palkees came in sight, followed by a howdah elephant. On their approaching nearer a curious structure of boards appeared on the top of the howdah, this turned out to be a folding lid which our friends had had fitted with hinges, straps, etc., so as to be able to pull it down over them in case the tiger should come to close quarters! It was carrying out this original idea which had prevented their reaching the camp till two days after ourselves.

The baboos having settled themselves, and everything being ready, we moved on to the jungle to the east of the cutcherry: it consisted of an immense stretch of heavy kassiah grass, with here and there a few wavy jhow trees. On nearing the spot indicated by the khubereah, who had accompanied us on a pad elephant, the grass was observed to move, and shortly after three distinct waving tracks were traceable a few yards ahead of the line: the grass got thinner and thinner as we moved on towards some low ground, and presently a tigress and two well-grown cubs walked leisurely into the open and stood looking at the advancing line of elephants. They were immediately in front of me and only about 40 yards off. I fired at the tigress and dropped her with a ball in the head stone dead. Both the cubs shared the same fate before they could turn. To my disgust the baboos (who began to think tiger shooting must be easy work) when they came up were so excited that nothing I could say could prevent their firing several balls into the animals as they lay dead.

In high good humour with ourselves and all the world we padded the brutes and moved on to try our luck again, but it was decreed that we had had sufficient for that day: crowds of people, young and old, followed the elephants home shouting for joy that their enemies were no more. At each village near the road a request was made that the elephants which carried the tigers might be allowed to go along close to the houses that the women might see their once dreaded foes. It was hât (market) day at Mohungunge, and on our reaching camp an immense crowd collected to see the spoil: almost every individual present appeared to have lost either a bullock or a cow, and to judge by the number of exclamations of "Ah, this 'sala ate my cow" each seemed to recognize his spoiler among the particular animals lying dead before him. The skins were speedily taken off and their carcases dragged to a distance. At dawn the next day not a vestige of meat remained on either of them: the jackals had done their work well.

The following morning (the 17th March) while we were yet at our chota-hazri, khubber came in of a couple of tigers having killed a bullock the previous evening in one of the jungles which we had beaten the first day. The howdahs were soon ready and the whole of the elephants were sent on ahead, we following shortly after on our horses. The place where the kill was said to be was a small chur on the banks of the Teesta River: the jungle was principally kassia grass and to the south end were a few thin tall jhow trees. We soon came on the kill and a few yards further two well-grown tigers were turned up. One of them managed to slip behind the line and got off for good, but on beating up towards the end of the jhow I sighted his companion sneaking along a short distance ahead of me: my luck of the previous day still stuck to me, and I brought her down with a single ball in the head. Having padded her we turned to look for her mate, but could see nothing of him; he must have got off clear to the heavy jungles on the next chur to the north. To-day's tigress was a young brute 9 feet 2 inches.

On the following day we had intended to have gone out after breakfast, but about 9 A.M. khubber came in of yesterday's tiger having returned to the kill, which by the bye had scarcely been touched when we saw it. The elephants were sent on at once and we hurried over breakfast and followed. The tiger presently slunk away off the kill, and after giving us the slip two or three times, by doubling back I bowled him over in some broken ground where a couple more bullets finished him. B., who had not up to this time had a single shot at any of the tigers killed, swore pretty roundly at my great luck in getting all the animals up close to me. While the tiger was yet being padded the tehsilder of the Mohungunge cutcherry rode up on a tat to tell us that a large tiger had about an hour before sprung out from some light jungle on a line of boatmen who were towing a boat up the Teesta River, but the malas all springing into the river escaped; this had happened within half a mile of the cutcherry. The padding operations were hurried on and we returned to camp, where all the pads were left, as we had to cross the Teesta River and evening had then set in, we learnt that one of the baboos (neither of whom had gone out that morning) on hearing of the tiger had gone out with a single elephant fired with the ambition to kill him all to his own cheek before the sahibs returned, but on seeing the beast in the jungle his heart failed him and calling out bap re bap without the sahibs it won't "hoga" he got out of the jungle as fast as he could and up into a jack tree, where we found him. The elephants crossed and the howdahs up we entered the jungle pointed out to us; it was a very small piece of scanty young jhow about 2½ft. high only, overlooking a high bank of the river. As we neared the end of the jungle, the tiger was observed crawling along on his belly some 40 yards ahead. B. quickly fired, but the ball striking him in the rump only elicited a roar and had the effect of making him take to the open sand; he cleared the right of the line at a gallop under a volley from us, and from the way he roared he must have got one or two more bullets into him; he, however, got safely into a little patch of very high jhow trees about 150 yards off. The elephants were put in side by side and touching each other, but we could see nothing, the jhow being a couple of feet over our heads as we stood in the howdahs we had not gone in ten feet when our friend charged B.'s end of the line and it was with difficulty he could make the elephant go in again. On their doing so a second charge was the result; this time the tiger seized the trunk of one of the elephants, but let go again on getting a random ball from B.; he next came at my end of the line: at his roar every elephant turned tail, and in a moment I found the brute clinging on to my pad behind. I managed to get a shot and knocked him off. None of the elephants could be induced to go in again, and while we were consulting what had best be done, the people from the village and the baboos from the tree called out that the tiger had slunk off to the low jungle where we had first seen him. More fool he to leave such a stronghold. We followed and were soon made aware of his presence by a charge. He could not, however, make it good under the volley with which we received him; he repeated the experiment three or four times in a most plucky way as we gradually drove him onwards, but each time he was more and more spent, having been severely wounded in several places, at last he dropped at the end of the jungle growling a defiance. We found him with his head hanging over the river bank where another shot finished him. He was a noble old brute and had fought gallantly, and great were the rejoicings at his death. Crowds came from the surrounding villages and the baboo came down from his tree to see his tiger. This turned out to be a very old tiger. He measured 10½ft., and was a very heavy animal.

I mentioned before that evening was setting in before we crossed the river, and when the tiger received his quietus the moon was well up and shining brightly. My friend B. had quite recovered his spirits and returned home that night after dinner in great glee with the gory hide of his gallant foe stretched out on the top of his cart, a ghastly spectacle. The baboos also returned home that night, having undergone more fatigue and sun in these few days than usually fall to the lot of their brethren in a lifetime. I remained on a few days longer and bagged one more tigress; she was a young animal and measured 8ft. 1in. I remained about three years in that district and shot over those same jungles two or three times each year, and though I never again came in for such luck as I had during the few days I was out with B., I got good sport and made some fair bags, of which I hope to send you an account on a future occasion.

MYSORE GAME AND FISH PRESERVATION ASSOCIATION.

ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1902-03.

GENTLEMEN,—I am pleased to be able to inform you that His Highness the Maharaja has kindly consented to honor us by becoming patron of this Association.

I am also glad to be able to report a certain amount of progress for the past year, but the difficulties are many—the large extent of country over which we endeavour to keep a watch, is too vast to be properly done by private individuals, but if all members of the association would help the executive with definite information of offences committed against the Game Regulation we should be able to do much more than has been done. It is a case of every man "his own Game-keeper" and I hope that all sportsmen will come forward and render assistance in preventing illicit killing of game and illegal destruction of fish.

Although several members have left the country, and one or two resigned, the actual number of members remains about the same as last year, and I hope shortly to be able to add the names of several North Mysore men.

Several cases of illegal fishing have been detected, and in some cases convictions obtained, but great difficulty is found in getting independent witnesses to come forward and give evidence. Information has been lodged against 16 unlicensed guns in Manjarabad Taluk, 5 in Belur and 48 in the Mudigere Taluk. A few have been seized.

No cases of illegal shooting have been detected, but I am sure from reports received that a lot of game is illegally destroyed, and captured. Evidence is to hand that the 2,000 skins and 100 live jungle fowl recently advertised for sale in the Madras Mail, came from the Mysore State. I hear that quite recently partridges and quail were brought into both Mysore City, and Hassan Town for sale, quite openly. I have to thank the Deputy Commissioners of the following districts for supplying us with some interesting information.

The following districts have not given figures asked for :

HASSAN, SHIMOGA, TUMKUR AND CHAMRAJNAGAR.

The association is pleased to note that the Inspector-General of Police, Mysore, has issued a circular to the Police pointing out their duties, in connection with the Game Regulation,

Our best thanks are also due to the local Sub-Divisional Officer, and to the local Police Inspector for his assistance, in enforcing the Regulation.

We are much indebted to the Madras Mail for their readiness in publishing complaints of breaches of the Game Regulation.

I regret to inform you that Government has not thought fit to entertain some suggestions we forwarded to them, re Game Regulation and Arms Act, and have not yet offered a reward for the destruction of wild dogs, though these pests are increasing and have lately taken to killing domestic animals (goats and calves) as over 20 head have lately been killed in West Mysore to my personal knowledge. Unless some steps are soon taken to destroy these wild dogs, game on the Ghauts will quite disappear. We hope Government will therefore immediately offer the necessary reward.

I also regret to inform you that the Deputy Commissioner has taken no notice of our suggestion (sent in nearly a year ago) to close all perennial streams against fishing (other than rod fishing) during the spawning season. But this has been done in the Kadur District. As regards the Eastward flowing large rivers till 30th November, viz., the Tunga and Bhadra.—Thos. Hunt, Honorary Secretary.

Proposed by Captain Foster and seconded by Mr. G. Gowans "That the report be adopted." Carried.

Mr. Gowans wished to say, "That in the opinion of all members present, game has increased and the Game Regulation has undoubtedly done good."

The officials having resigned, the result of the ballot for the coming year was as follows :—

A. R Park, Esq (President).

Committee { Captain Foster. / Mr. J. A. Harris. / " G. Gowans. / " S. H Dennis. / " H Lamb. / " Thos. Hunt (Honorary Secretary).

Proposed by Mr. J. M. Thomson and seconded by Mr. J. Robinson "That the open season for shooting hares be extended to 30th April." Not carried.

A vote of thanks to the chair closed the meeting.

THE breeding of that famous horse, Gladiateur, with whom our volatile neighbours across the Channel won the Derby in 1865, was largely the result of a fluke. In the Dangie stud there was an old mare named Miss Gladiator, who was considered a dame pas ser, and who was so useless that the head groom had given orders to let her run loose, in the hopes that the wolves, with which the adjacent woods were infested, would make a meal of her, and thus rid him of an unwelcome charge. But it happened that one of the stallions of the stud—Monarque—took a great fancy to Miss Gladiator, and the result of an unforeseen alliance between the pair was that one fine morning Gladiateur saw the light. The colt, if not quite of the orthodox make and shape according to the English theories of breeding, was big enough for anything, and that he was one of the greatest racehorses of all time will be admitted by those who are old enough to remember him when in training.

DESTRUCTION OF GAME IN ASSAM.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Now that so much is being written and printed and, to a certain extent, done towards the preservation of game in India, I think it is high time that some one pointed out how very great the amount of damage is that is done by Englishmen who call themselves sportsmen. During the last three years in Assam I have seen and heard so many instances of ruthless slaughter of cows, does and hen birds during the breeding season, that I have come to the conclusion that such indiscriminate shooting must, and does, have an appreciable effect on the game now obtainable.

A short time ago I was told by a man, with great pride, that he had shot four Florican, all females, in one day, and that he had found a nest with four eggs. As Florican do not pair it would not have mattered very much if he had shot four males, but I have no doubt that if he continues to be successful in his Florican shoots during the breeding season, that fine bird, already rare in Eastern Assam, will soon disappear altogether.

A small, but very successful, shoot was got up in April last by a thorough sportsman. His own bag consisted of one bull buffalo and one bull gaur. The rest of his party got two cows and a buffalo calf, three cow gaur and another half-grown bull.

A man from a different part of India, who has a great reputation as a sportsman, went out in custody of a local planter, a man who is really a sportsman, and killed two tame buffalo cows, one wild cow and calf, and three doe sambhur. These are only a few instances selected from many, but they suffice to show the kind of damage done by men who often really think that they are sportsmen.

The fact is Europeans frequently go out shooting buffaloes, etc., with the intention, honest enough to start with, of shooting only good bulls, but finish up by shooting at anything moving in the grass before they can even see whether it is a buffalo at all. Of course I am well aware that cow buff often bring a sudden death upon themselves by their over foolish conduct, but it is not to such deaths I refer. The cow gaur however, is practically never guilty of charging and there can be no excuse for the man who shoots one. The head as a trophy is worthless and the animal once shot is only so much wasted beef.

Globe-trotters are the worst offenders, on the whole, in the way of killing females and young : they are so keen on taking home trophies about which to brag, that they shoot absolutely wildly at everything in the hopes it may carry a head worth keeping. I know of noble sportsmen at home who have magnificent series of heads from various parts of the world. The Indian heads are, some at least of them, purchased : are all the others ? These same sportsmen have been after the game whose heads are represented and have doubtless slaughtered many, but when leaving for home have had to resort to purchase before they could show any respectable heads.

Gowhatty was formerly a magnificent game country, but has now been practically ruined by indiscriminate slaughter. Here, however, the state of affairs is due more to the huge drives got up by Rajahs and others to entertain sporting Lords, etc., handed over to them by the Government of India During these drives, in which the elephants may number anything from thirty to sixty, and from which every element of danger, and therefore of real sport, is eliminated, animals are slaughtered wholesale. Herds of buffaloes are actually wiped out. Rhino with, or even heavy in, young killed by the sheer weight of lead pumped into them, and herds of gaur lose more than half their number before they can escape into their hill retreats.

Of course the outside public see nothing of this. All that they hear is that the Rajah of So-and-So with my Lord This and the Hon. That, etc., etc., have shot 17 tigers, 20 buff, and 8 rhino ; but officials and planters on the spot know that game in the area worked by these so-called sportsmen has been practically exterminated.

It is to be feared that the very lack of danger in these shoots is an additional incentive to the titled globe-trotter to indulge in them. Some twenty years ago a crack shot was shooting deer in Assam in company with two young officials They were on pad elephants and presently came on a tiger: the crack shot, exclaiming that he was not such a d—d fool as to go after a tiger without a howdah, went home, and the two boys went on and got the tiger, whose skin now adorns the crack shot's palace at home. I wonder what his story is.

I have very little doubt that if every globe-trotter was made to shoot his first head of big game on foot, the race of titled and other globe trotting sportsmen would soon become extinct. The rush of an angry bull buff through the Ekra is far more awe-inspiring when one is on foot than when perched in safety on the back of an elephant ; the snarl of a wounded tiger hidden in dense scrub is far more conducive to care when one is on a level with the snarler than when one is practically out of his reach. A very few experiences of this kind would make sportsmen of men who have, at present, not the slightest claim to such a title, and would save the game itself from the gradual extermination now going on.

The amount of damage done, taken as a whole, by the swarms of native pot hunters and meat vendors, is, I admit, the greatest, but no number of native vendors ever ruin a country so completely as does one of these magnificent drives. And, whilst I agree that in regard to deer and small game these some native pot hunters and butchers do nearly all the damage that is committed by individuals, yet I think that the European non-sportsman works more havoc amongst buffalo and gaur. Again, as regards the practical extinction of the rhino, the extensive drives referred to above are almost alone to blame.

REKAB.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The Managing Director of the Madras Mule Breeding Company, Limited, writing from a place or region called Annikati Musuagadi, argues with no common energy that Government should cease "to foster and protect that most destructive and now practically useless beast, the elephant." This is very like a proposition to cease to have kings, who are most expensive and have become pratically useless. India without elephants is simply unthinkable. We have lost the pagoda tree, but we cannot afford to lose the elephant. Has Mr. Edmiston reflected that without his "ugly brute," or noble beast, as it is usually and properly called, the Delhi Durbar would have been impossible ? Take away elephants, and the Raja and the Badshah, glories of the Orient, would be things of the past, and would be replaced by private gentlemen like Their late Highnesses Dhuleep Singh and Patiala. The thing is simply unimaginable. As well might a millionaire propose the demolition of some ancient memorial because it obstructed the view from a palace he had erected. Mr. Edmiston's argument is purely utilitarian : the ugly and useless brute destroys young forest, devastates the cultivators' fields and occasionally kills a man. On the same principle, if the Viceroy lived like the American President, the money saved off His Excellency's establishment and retinue would pay for all the damage done by elephants. The truth is that our world has not yet sunk to the level where everything is sacrified to utility. Our higher ideal still is to eat to live, not to live to eat We cheerfully suffer inconvenience and part with our material possessions for the sake of gratifying that part of our nature which craves things far higher than meat and drink and show. We regret the mammoth, and have no will to see the elephant follow it. On the contrary, we desire the Government to take under its fostering protection the few remaining lions and the fast disappearing rhinoceros.

This enemy, or victim, of the elephant does not improve his case when he explains that he does not want the beast exterminated, but only its numbers kept down by the removal of the prohibition to shoot it. For the professed and attempted policy of Government is simply to prevent the numbers of the elephant from being so reduced that it will be a curiosity not available for purposes of pomp and display, instruction and wonderment. The idea is to capture a herd or two annually for sale or use ; and the reasonable occasion of Mr. Edmiston's complaint is that such khedda operations have almost ceased of late, so that elephants are multiplying to an extent that makes them a real pest in the neighbourhood of their haunts. Government has always permitted or encouraged the destruction of an elephant that was annoying villagers ; and once, we believe, in South-Western Bengal, where elephants are not captured, a small herd was disposed of. Accordingly, we may expect now that a catch will be ordered at Annikati Musuagadi, or a trustworthy sportsman be turned on there under strict observation of the Police and the Forest Department. Mr. Edmiston's graphic picture of the depredations of elephants where he lives calls to mind the experience of tea planters in Assam before the late Mr. Sanderson was appointed elephant catcher to Government. He says : "Every village and hamlet near a forest they frequent must either submit to regular, systematic visits of devastation of their crops, or the unfortunate cultivators must themselves spend the whole night for weeks on end shouting, burning fires beating tomtoms and blowing horns, and rendering themselves unfit for work by day, or must pay others to do so."

The Americans, most utilitarian of peoples, are making persistent efforts to save the few bison that still survive on their continent. There are movements in Europe to concert measures for staying the extermination of elephants and other large game in Africa. Let us in India not be less careful of the most picturesque inhabitant of our forests, the most characteristic animal of our country, and the most martial feature of our history.

Oom Paul, Shirley, and Firefly followed Reinzette at the start, but Euryalus and Oom Paul soon left the field and, after a rattling race from the distance, made a dead heat of it. Time—1min. 27secs. Oom Paul won easily by two lengths in the run off.

POONA FOURTH EXTRA MEETING.

Saturday, 8th August 1903.

FINE weather and excellent racing marked this meeting and six favourites out of seven events were first past the post. The first event was on recent running considered a moral for Najaffi, but he ran nowhere and Scattercash, who was not fancied, rolled home after a real clinking finish beating his stable companion, Rochester, in the run home. The public waited for a tip in the Intermediate Plate and they soon got it, for no secret was made of Russley Rose's chance of winning and she made a most creditable début, winning easily from Key West, who was giving away 1st 3lbs. Veera, who was fancied by some after negotiating the bend in reformed style went back to her old bad habit and came out badly at the turn, nearly falling in doing so. Miss Birnie ran third, but she is a weedy mare who got there by virtue of the 6st she was carrying.

With Kingston, Fitzeros and Fando, the disturbing elements in the summer plate not declared the spot to touch was Beadsman and he won when and how he liked. What a fine retriever of lost fortunes the old horse is! The forward running of Blue Blood in Bangalore made him an object of attention and he repaid the compliment by never giving his friends an anxious moment. There were only two really in it in the Desert Handicap and they fought the finish out splendidly, the race being either Musketeer's or Silvermane's till before the stand the latter cut the issue out of the pale of doubt.

CONSOLATION PLATE—Winner, Rs. 200; second, Rs. 100; third, Rs. 50. For Arab ponies 14 hands and under, new measurement, which have never won a flat race value Rs. 50. 14 hands to carry 9st. 3lbs. W. I. 5 furlongs.

POONA FIFTH EXTRA MEETING.

15th August 1903.

Saturday being a public holiday the attendance of local and Bombay sportsmen was very large and a fine afternoon's racing was witnessed, but it was not a favourite's day.

The first race was contested by four, but it was a foregone conclusion that Haydn would win and so he did and very easily too.

The public were disposed to believe that that arch rogue Greyleg had become an honest gentlemen and so he was backed with great confidence at ever shortening odds; but a surprise was in store, for Shah Jehan, who was but little supported, got alongside the favourite when he seemed to hold the race in safe keeping and immediately the pinch came Greyleg shut up. Kour Saheb ran a disappointing race.

The Bedouin Plate was a puzzler and few there were who believed that Scattercash could win. Adon's was selected to account for this race and he only just failed. Scattercash, however, won in a romp

It was really asking Paddy Melon too much to expect him to give two stone away to Patrician and so the race demonstrated, but the surprise packet was Saucebox, and I am firmly of opinion that if a strong finisher was up on the latter Patrican would not have got home.

With a Cup horse amongst commoners it was not surprising that Alix was rushed for in the ring, but there was always a good price obtainable as she looked pig fat and had both fore legs in cotton wool and bandages. Blue Blood made play to the distance and here Alix came away, but Misty came with such a rattle at the finish that Alix had to be fully extended at the end When just past the post Fando slipped and fell and gave Robinson a bad shock, but this popular horseman was fortunately not injured and rode in the next race.

Titus II must now be acknowledged to be a first-class Arab, His victories in the closed races were not looked upon as putting the Hall Mark on him but the company he met and squandered on Saturday was of more than average merit and he disposed of them very easily indeed.

The last race was worm and gallwood to punters. It was considered such a moral for Money Spinner that losers were prepared to get back their losses on the race. Money Spinner, however, was never seriously dangerous during any part of the journey to Diamyo, and Major Edwards' pony simply romped home. Alf. Hoyt had quite a day out steering four winners in an afternoon. Bennett and Williams are back and had mounts during the afternoon. Details:—

THE COLOMBO AUGUST MEETING.

Stewards:

Mr F C Allen	Mr A R A Heath
Capt R F K Gooch, ADC	Mr Herbert White
Hon A G Lascelles, KC	Mr H J Hadden

Judge.—Dr Craib
Timekeeper.—Mr C W Booty
Starter.—Mr F J Wright

First Day. Monday, 10th August 1903.

The success of the opening day encourages the hope that the meeting this year will eclipse its predecessors in most respects. There was a very big attendance, good fields and open issues, and Mr Beattie we were glad to see was busy and prosperous in his dealings with the punting brigade. The Governor's Cup was won by a hot odds on favourite in Gabelle, who was nicely ridden by Lansdowne. Ramshaw, Greenhalgh, Wiles and Southall also had mounts in this race, so that some of the best riding talent in the East was engaged. Mr. R. J. Farquharson scored a couple of wins with Tirah and Brose, both ridden by Ramshaw, the other riding honours were divided among the jockeys just named—one each. Details:—

Omnium Stakes.—Rs. 400, and Rs. 100 to the second horse. For maiden horses, 14 hands 2 inches and under. Weight for inches. 14-2 to carry 11st. 7lbs. 6 furlongs.

CALCUTTA COURSE CHAT.

LAST Thursday saw a lot of fast work being put in by the various stables, with Friday and Saturday on the easy side: in fact, the latter morning, in view of the racing in the afternoon, is generally passed in speculating on how things will turn out.

Tuesday gave us a nice cool morning for work, and every one was at it with a will. The first pair being Bin Rashid (Hard) and a native on Pekin, who put in a fast bit, followed by Clinder (Johnson), Euryalus (Piper), Shirley (native), who went a very smart 5 furlongs, the first-named having the call at the finish. The other two moved well, and when next they race, I expect Saturday's position to be reversed.

Loch Arden (Hard) went a quick 7 furlongs, and Major Cook and Churnside, with natives up, also did a spin. Next Smallman on Not Yet took a turn with Lady Froude (P. Morrison) and had very much the best of the 5 furlongs. Hard galloped Yellow Metal and Granny went a smart bit of work; the mare will not be wanting when the question is asked.

Trollop was shaken up over a distance, and is as big as ever. Metalwing (Mr. Raban) put in a bit of a gallop Mr. Galstaun on Gassima went 5 furlongs with Smallman on Springlock, in very good timing, considering the course. The deal looked pretty even, but of course the difference in weight would be sufficient to account for this: all the same, 'twas smart of Gassima to keep beside such a classy one as Springlock.

Kittylea went the horse hurdles and jumped, as is her wont, faultlessly. Loch Maree was dusted along 5 furlongs very briskly by young Morrison and took a good bit of pulling up. She seems pretty full of herself and probably is going to give her owner a turn.

Yuletide (Mr. Raban), Blair Athol (Mr. Evers), and Warrigal put in a quick spurt, the black being at the head of affairs.

Miss Prominence and Sea View were also out for a breather.

Then Syd. White went a bustler on Firefly, and Mr. Pugh went round on Ladybird.

Mr. Dudley had out Comely and Snapshot.

I was glad to see Bond on hand not much damaged, and he hopes to be in the saddle again on Saturday riding for Smallman. After his fall, he deserves a win.

There has been a change in Mr. Galstaun's stable, George Robinson being installed at the head of affairs, in view of poor Fordham's inability to carry out so important a position in his present unfortunate condition.

The brothers Jimmy and George Robinson will have a strong hand in the big events of the coming cold season, as they undoubtedly have the most classy horses in India to train and ride, and everyone wishes them and their sporting connections all the good luck that talent, energy, and money can command.

Penton has first call in Mr. Apcar's stable, and as he is one of the most capable riders in India, this popular stable, will, as of yore, be well in the forefront of the coming battle at Poona.

I notice all Mr. Bell-Irving's string are for sale as the owner is going home, owing to his late illness.

The string contains some real good performers, notably Yuletide, Naiades, Peeping Tom, and First Guide, etc, and those in quest of made horses, will have an opportunity of adding to their stables. Mr Bell-Irving is a very popular sportsman and I trust the trip home will set him up again.

Wednesday was occupied chiefly in slow work, and looking over the entries, which from their dimensions augur well for Saturday's racing, but of course until the weights are out it would be fruitless discussing the probabilities.

I had a chat with Mr. Pymm, who informed me poor old Marwarrie's racing days are done, it having been discovered at the Veterinary College that he had an affection in the bone of the legs. Mr. Pymm intends letting the good old warrior end his days in peace at the Pinjrapole. His other horse, Timekeeper, who was in the Vet's hand, with fever, is now out of hospital, and very ragged looking, but he is on the mend, and may yet put up a good race.

Hard has severed his connection with the Galstaun stable, and I understand is going to do some riding for Mr. Bannerjee.

LIVERPOOL JULY MEETING.

HOWEVER flattering an original entry for the Liverpool Summer Cup may be, the race seems fated to subside into a somewhat tame affair. This is in direct contrast to the Spring and Autumn experiences in the same direction, and, apart from the fact that the July Meeting here only extends over a couple of days, there is not the least doubt that the big race is adversely affected by the near approach of Goodwood. A more promising entry than that obtained for the race on the 24th could hardly be desired, such names as Wavelet's Pride, Friar Tuck, Templemore, Zinfandel, Ice Maiden, Cheers, Floriform, Lavengro, and Skiograph seeming to stand as a guarantee of a strenuous and spirited encounter, but the pen has been busy with all the above names, and a combination of portentous circumstances entirely altered the complexion of the race. The presence of the Mersey Stakes and Knowsley Dinner Stakes in the card augured favourably for the quality of the sport, but, unhappily, the fields were in no way commensurate with the strength of the entries, and the entertainment hardly did itself justice. Although precluded from seeing his own banner unfurled during the fixture, Lord Derby was present again with a small party, and by the time a resumption was made the company in the enclosures was well up to the average for July.

Mr Arthur James's Shellmartin, by Florizel II—Bentesta, 4 yrs, 7st 2lbs ...	J E Watts	0

(Winner trained by Cort, at Whatcombe.)

BETTING : 2 to 1 agst Captain Kettle, 4 to 1 Glass Jug, 9 to 2 Handicapper, 100 to 12 Noblesse, 100 to 8 Bushey Belle, 100 to 6 Scullion, 20 to 1 Selkirk, 25 to 1 Shellmartin, 25 to 1 Pain Bis, 33 to 1 Happy Medium.

The first to leave the paddock was Handicapper, and he was followed in the parade by Scullion, Glass Jug, Happy Medium, Bushey Belle, Noblesse, Captain Kettle, and Selkirk, with Pain Bis bringing up the rear. They cantered in the same order, and the white flag was hoisted at twenty-six minutes past three. The lot were despatched to a beautiful start three minutes later, Bushey Belle being the first to show the way to Handicapper, Noblesse, and Captain Kettle, with Happy Medium, who hung fire, a long way last, but on settling down, Bushey Belle made the running from Captain Kettle, Noblesse, Selkirk and Handicapper, with Pain Bis and Glass Jug next, Shellmartin being last except the tailed-off Happy Medium. Passing the six furlong post Selkirk dashed to the front clear of Captain Kettle, Bushey Belle, and Handicapper, these being clear of Noblesse, Pain Bis, and Glass Jug to the straight, where Noblesse and Pain Bis took third and fourth places, but a quarter of a mile from home Captain Kettle drew to the front, and, stalling off the late challenge of Pain Bis, who came with a rattle close home, won by half a length ; a length and a half separated the second and third Selkirk, a head behind, was placed fourth ; Noblesse was fifth, Glass Jug sixth, Scullion seventh, Shellmartin eighth, and Happy Medium and Bushey Belle the last pair. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2mins. 20secs.

THE MERSEY STAKES.—Of 680 sovs. for two-year olds ; colts 9st, fillies 8st 11lbs ; allowances, etc. Five furlongs and a half.

(Winner trained by Mr. Gilpin, at Newmarket.)

BETTING : 33 to 1 on Pretty Polly.

Pretty Polly jumped off with a clear lead, and, making the whole of the running, won in a canter by a length and a half. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min 11 ⅘secs.

GOODWOOD MEETING.

Like other outdoor carnivals. the success of a Goodwood Meeting is wholly dependant upon the weather, and a wet day is nothing short of a calamity. The meteorologists had sounded a note of warning as to the probability of the fixture being opened under damp conditions, and forewarned is said to be forearmed, but it was none the less highly disconcerting to find the rain pouring down in bucketsful early on the morning. The dismal outlook must have served to deter a large number o holiday folk from venturing upon the excursion, especially those who had to travel from London, and, having regard to the lack of shelter, it was not surprising to find the attendance below the average. For the fourth year in succession the King was unable to confer his patronage upon the ducal gathering. but the Prince of Wales was the guest of Mr. Arthur James at West Dean Park. and though the Duke of Richmond and Gordon was absent, the Earl of March entertained a select party at Goodwood House. Most of the big mansions in the neighbourhood extended hospitality to house parties of varying size, and preparations had been made on every side for an al fresco picnic on the luxurious lines characteristic of Glorious Goodwood. The breakdown in the weather, however, put an effectual damper on the festivities, and, so far as the initial stage of the reunion was concerned, the environments could hardly have been more miserable or depressing. A persistent drizzle fell throughout the afternoon, accompanied by an opaque sea froth which greatly interfered with the view of the racing, and there were times when the surrounding landscape was completely obliterated by the mist, and objects a few hundred yards distant were barely discernible. A lengthy list of scratchings yesterday had materially diminished the scope of some of the principal weight-for-age events, and fields to-day cut down to narrow proportions in more than one instance ; but the Stewards' Cup aroused intense interest, as usual, and, the going being no more than soft, no exception could be taken to the calibre of the racing.

THE GRATWICKE STAKES—Of 1,450 sovs., for three-year olds ; colts 9st., fillies 8st 10lbs ; penalties, etc. One mile and a half.

Few who were fated to be present on the opening day of this present Goodwood fixture will ever forget the miseries to which they were subjected. Of the utter desolation of the historical plateau it is unnecessary to expatiate. Happily a change of wind into the north-east during the night brought relief from the incessant downpour, and the second stage of the meeting was ushered in under vastly brighter conditions. The advent of the ducal reunion serves as a prominent landmark in the "Calendar," signalising as it does the close of the London season, but pleasant as are the associations of the time-honoured racing picnic, it is with a sense of regret that one realises the unwelcome truth that the summer is well-nigh spent, and we stand once more at the threshold of chilly autumn. There was quite a suspicion of the approaching "fall" in the atmosphere ; a succession of blinding rainstorms swept across the exposed uplands this afternoon saturating those who were out of reach of shelter in a few moments, and in the intervals between them the sun shone radiantly, but the air was cold withal and topcoats were in general use. The authorities had been at considerable pains to remedy the effects of the prolonged downpour the day before. Near the gates and turnstiles, where the turf had been trodden into mire ankledeep, hastily-constructed stagings were laid down this morning, and planks were requisitioned, so that ingress and egress to the stands was not attended with the difficulties and the discomforts of twenty-four hours previously. The muster in the enclosures showed an increase proportionate to the improvement in the weather. The Prince of Wales was again present, and a fashionable attendance gathered on the lawn, but summer toilettes were conspicuous by their absence and dark costumes and waterproof cloaks were the order of the day.

THE LAVANT STAKES.—Of 820 sovs, for two-year olds ; colts 8st 12lbs, fillies and geldings 8st 9lb ; allowances, etc. 5 furlongs.

The Goodwood of the 30th enjoys manifold advantages over the celebrations of a few years ago, not the least striking of which is in the matter of dress. Until a comparatively recent date the odious top-hat and tight-fitting frock-coat were de rigeur here, and nothing could have looked more incongruous amidst the sylvan environments of the so-called birdless grove and the simple upland scenery. The regulation attire of Bond Street is now happily almost a thing of the past in the ducal demesne, and straw hats and lounge suits, which harmonise appropriately with the surroundings, are generally worn. Much depends, of course, on the weather, and so far there has been little temptations to air flannel suits or the ladies' summer gowns during racing hours. There was another breakdown in the meteorological department yesterday evening, terrific thunderstorms visiting the neighbourhood, and a torrential downpour lasted far into the night. The barometer began to rise again towards dawn and the early outlook held out the promise of an amelioration in the conditions for Cup day. During the intervals of sunshine it was pleasant enough, but the atmosphere was decidedly chilly for July, and there were times during the afternoon when it was positively cold. Though the sky was dull and overcast, however, the rain happily held off.

Lured out by the bright morning, large numbers of local folk trudged up to the course from Chichester, and the char-a-banes did better business than on the previous days. Thus the muster all round was in excess of the opening stages of the fixture, without in any way challenging comparison with that of former celebrations when midsummer conditions prevailed. The Prince of Wales again graced the proceedings with his presence, and if the sport failed to reach a very high standard the entertainment was an interesting one nevertheless.

Won cleverly by a head; a bad third.

The weather was not very favourable when we made for the trysting-place on the 31st. Racing opened with the Two-year-old Selling Plate which produced a party of three, odds being laid on Airship, who had run second to Hymenæus at Newmarket. Airship now went a step higher, and from the end of the lawn had leaten Serenade, who was perhaps defeated through superior jockeyship. At any rate, the rider of Serenade did not shine. Mr. Henning gave 320 guineas for the winner. The Gordon Stakes cut down to small proportions, but a couple turning out, the brothers Cannon being pitted against each other. Odds were laid on Zinfandel, who ran clean away from his opponent, as on form bound to do It was no sort of a race at the finish.

The Chesterfield Cup brought out quite a nice field, and a cheer went up from the ring when Lady Help won. Money was piled on General Cronje, but he failed to bring off the Grateley good thing. That they betted on it admits of no doubt, and the public, to their sorrow, followed suit. Thay had to put up with the same penalty, for in the hands of Griggs, Lady Help scored in ready fashion. It was the first winner that G. Chaloner had sent forth at the meeting, so no one can begrudge him the victory, which was well earned. The report that Lady Help was not quite herself, received a flat contradiction in the result, for she galloped home alone at last.

THE GORDON STAKES.—Of 350 sovs, added to a Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each for starters, for three-year-olds and upwards; second to receive 30 sovs, and the third 15 sovs. Last mile and a half of Cup course.

CRICKET.

THE PHILADELPHIAN'S TOUR.

MATCH vs. MR. P. F. WARNER'S XI.—(Twelfth of the tour.) Played at the Oval on 23rd, 24th and 25th July. Mr. Warner's XI. won by 196 runs. It was a miserable day at the Oval when this match began, and although it was possible to play for three hours and a quarter the cricket was unsatisfactory. At the last moment, in the absence of G. W. Beldam and L. J. Moon, Mr. Warner included Tarrant, the young Australian professional, in his eleven. On the American side A. M. Wood had a rest for the first time during the tour, but J. B. King had recovered sufficiently from his accident to be able to take his place in the team again. The Americans did very well at first against a strong batting side, and when eight wickets of Mr. Warner's eleven were down only 98 runs had been scored. But from this moment the prospects of the home team became very much brighter. A. G. Archer and H. J. Stevenson came together for the ninth wicket and defied all the bowling with success, until they had increased the total by 60 runs in forty minutes, and the last two men put on 52 in half-an-hour. This completed the cricket for the day. On Friday considerable progress was made with the match, the home team having the best of matters when stumps were drawn, for with six wickets in hand they held a lead of 258. After heavy rain on the previous night, the ground dried slowly, and the game was not resumed until after an early lunch. For the rest of the day the sun was shining and the Philadelphians had much the worst of the wicket. Tarrant and Bosanquet began the bowling, and it was not found necessary to change them, as at no time during the innings of the Americans did any batsman obtain a command over the bowling. With a lead of 105 Mr. Warner's team went in again at ten minutes past four, and by the time that the day's play ended they had scored 153 for four wickets, Bosanquet being not out 53 and T. A. D. Bevington not out 27. Nicholls and F. W. Orr also batted well On Saturday morning runs were made quickly, and in the course of an hour and a half the total was increased by 121, and then the innings was declared closed. Bevington played particularly fine cricket, and was batting altogether for two hours for his 91. Stevenson again made a useful score. The visitors began their second innings at a quarter-past one, with 381 runs to make. They began very carefully, in the hope of playing out time, but it was evident almost from the first that this could not be done on account of the difficulty of the bowling. But Graves, Lester, Bohlen, Sharpless and Morris all batted very well indeed, and made a very plucky attempt to save the game

NOTTS vs. GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—Played at Trent Bridge on 23rd and 24th July. Notts won by an innings and 257 runs. Four hundred and fifty runs were scored by Notts in this match on the first day for the loss of three wickets, and the weak Gloucestershire bowling was tried to the uttermost. The wicket was in splendid condition, and from the first the batsmen had their own way, Jones and Iremonger putting up 107 in an hour and a half for the first wicket By the time that this partnership ended there was not much in the bowling, and W. Gunn and Jones proceeded to take advantage of this. In two hours and and a half they scored 235 runs in partnership, and during the last hour of the day Jones and G. Gunn put on 90 runs. It was a veritable case of flogging worn-out bowling. When stumps were drawn Jones was still unconquered, with 280 runs to his credit; G. Gunn was not out 33. In the night heavy rain fell, and Gloucestershire's chances of coming out of the match with credit was very small indeed. Jones did not add many runs to his overnight score, and was out just when a boundary hit would have brought his total to 300. He was batting for a little less than six hours. The remaining wickets fell quickly, and then Gloucestershire entered on a hopeless task. Jessop and Wrathall made a fairly good start, and Spry played a sound not out innings. For the rest there is nothing to be said. In the follow on Jessop made 25 out of 28 in twenty minutes, and M. Townsend, a younger brother of "C. L.," scored 28 by excellent cricket. But by far the best innings of the day was the 76 by Spry, who withstood the Notts attack for two hours and a quarter.

LANCASHIRE vs. ESSEX.—Played at Old Trafford on 23rd, 24th, and 25th July. Essex won by two wickets. In this match the ups and downs of fortune were very marked, and when six wickets had fallen in the Lancashire second innings on Saturday there did not seem the least chance that Essex would have a most desperate struggle before they could claim a victory. Essex had much the best of the game in its earlier stages, but the turning points of the game were a fine partnership in the Lancashire second innings between Hornby and Tyldesley, and some very plucky play by Sharp. On the first day Essex had by far the best of matters, for against the Lancashire total of 190 they had put up 116 for the loss of four wickets. Tyldesley and Eccles were the only two Lancashire men who particularly distinguished themselves, although most of the side made double figures. Essex lost Sewell and Fane quickly, but Perrin and McGahey once more came to the rescue of their side, and by very steady cricket wore down the bowling. When stumps were drawn McGahey was not out 32. On Friday morning he was in great form, although he had some luck, and after batting altogether for four hours and fifty minutes, he carried his bat for 144; he was two hours and a half in making his first 50 Several of his side helped him, notably Douglas and Mead, but for all that, his innings had not a little to do with the ultimate success of his side. With arrears of 133 to wipe off, Lancashire made a good start in their second innings, and when stumps were drawn were 26 runs to the good, with seven wickets in hand, and although this was hardly a winning position, it was by no means a desperate one. Tyldesley and Hornby put on 103 runs in partnership, the latter being not out 61. On Saturday morning Tyldesley's innings was soon brought to a conclusion, but Sharp, who was not out 5 overnight, proved a thorn in the side of the Essex men. He played a very fine innings of 72, and received most valuable assistance from several of his partners, especially Barnes and Cuttell. Essex had to make 199 to win in three hours and a quarter, and it was by no means certain that the runs would be made in the time, for few of the team are remarkable as being fast scorers. But in Sewell the county possesses the sort of man who is wanted on an occasion like this, and he set about the task of making the runs with determination, and as Perrin also entered into the spirit of the thing after Fane had been dismissed, the batsmen were always ahead of time. They put on 105 together in an hour and a half, and then Sewell's brilliant innings was brought to a conclusion; he had been batting for an hour and three-quarters, and when he left the game seemed nearly won. But with Perrin and McGahey together the rate of scoring fell off, and although as long as the two men were in partnership Essex seemed bound to win, the turn of the Lancashire men came soon afterwards, and it was seen that a keen fight was to be looked for. Lancashire fielded smartly, and their bowlers were on their mettle, so that runs came slowly, while wickets fell all too fast. It was thought that Douglas would be unable to bat, as he had injured his hand severely, but no doubt he would have gone in if called upon to do so, and as time went on, and the rate of scoring no longer kept pace with it, while every now and then a wicket fell the situation became intensely exciting. With ten minutes to go, and practically the last two men in—Mead and Young—Essex still required nine runs to win. But the issue was only left in doubt for three minutes, during which the required runs were made, and a splendid finish brought a victory for Essex by two wickets.

LONG-DISTANCE CHAMPIONSHIP.

In winning the Long-distance Championship on Saturday, the 25th instant, J. A. Jarvis, of Leicester, not only broke several records, but was for the first time for some years past extended. His friends may aver that he was always comfortable and never worried over Billington's lead, but the fact remains that the young Bacup swimmer pulled the Leicester man along in such a manner that at the finish Jarvis has put up the best time ever recorded for the race. 1hr. 3mins. 48⅕secs., which beats his own record of 1hr. 4mins. 17secs., made in the same event in 1900, by 28⅕secs. Now this performance, coming at a time when Jarvis is if anything a little slower than he was, only indicates what he would have done had he found an opponent capable of making a race of it with him in previous years. As a matter of fact, there appears to be little doubt that the long-distance time would have been reduced to under the hour. Other records that Jarvis made on Saturday was that of having won the race for the last six years in succession (as he had the mile) and taking his twenty-second A.S.A. championship. Whether there would have been a different ending to the race had Billington not been affected by cramp cannot be said; but even as it was the young Bacup swimmer displayed the fact that he is coming along in wonderful style, and promises to be a class in himself, just as Jarvis was. The manner in which he went along at the start of Saturday's race—as if it was a quarter-mile event—and maintained his pace for nearly three miles was remarkable. Then, however, he suddenly went wrong through being taken with cramp. He tried the back and overarm stroke but without avail, for opposite the Doves Jarvis drew level, and from that point had an easy journey home. Billington practically trudged the whole of the distance, an exhausting performance that indicates his staying power. However, it does not appear to be the stroke for the Long-distance Championship, particularly when there is rough water about.

CYCLING.

THE N.C.U. CHAMPIONSHIPS.—Interesting sport was provided by the decision of five N.C.U. Championships at Wakefield on Saturday, the 25th instant which were noteworthy for successes by London wheelmen. For the fourth consecutive year A. S. Ingram, of the Polytechnic won the Quarter-mile Amateur Championship, thus creating a record, while S. Jenkins, also of the Polytechnic secured the Quarter-mile, One Mile, and 5-mile Professional Championships. A popular victory in the Amateur Twenty-five-mile was achieved by Leon Meredith, of Paddington. Details:—

Quarter-mile Professional Championship (holder, T. J. Gascoyne, Wigan) (standard time, 32secs. ; time limit, 40sec.—Heat 1 : S. Jenkins, Polytechnic C.C., beat T. Williams, Havod, by four lengths in 33secs. Heat 2 : Bert Howard, Putney A.C., beat E. Barkway, Mardy, by two lengths and a half in 35secs. Heat 3 : T. James, Pontypridd, beat W. Rees, Llantrissant, by three lengths in 33½secs. Final heat : S. Jenkins, 1 ; Bert Howard, 2 : no third. T. James fell at 220 yards. Won easily. Time—33sec.

Quarter-mile Amateur Championship (divided into six heats ; holder, A. S Ingram, Polytechnic C.C.: standard time, 32secs ; time limit, 40secs).—Winners of heats : Bert. Andrews, Carmarthet (time, 33 ⅕secs); J. S. Benyon, Liverpool, 34 ⅖secs); W. H. Webb, Manchester (33 ⅕secs); A. S. Ingram, Polytechnic (33secs) ; S. Ledgett, Dearne (32sec) ; J. W. Longstaff, Sunderland (34 ⅖secs). Second round.—Winners of heats ; J. S. Benyon (time, 34 ⅖secs). A. S. Ingram (33 ⅖secs); R. W. Longstaff (35 ⅖sec). Final heat ; Ingram, 1 ; Benyon, 2 ; Longstaff, 3. Won by two lengths and a half ; two lengths between second and third. The issue was never in doubt Ingram riding finely throughout. Time—33 ⅕secs.

One Mile Professional Championship (holder, S. Jenkins, Cardiff ; standard time, 2min. 25secs ; limit time, 3min).—Winners of heats : T. Williams, Havod (time, 2min. 29 ⅖secs): Bert Howard, Putney A.C. (2min. 19 ⅖secs); S Jenkins, Polytechnic, w o. (2min. 41 ⅕secs). Final heat : Jenkins (holder), 1 ; Howard, 2; Williams, 3. Won by fifteen yards Time—2min. 27 ⅕sec.

Twenty-five-mile Amateur Championship.—Leon Meredith Paddington C.C, 1 ; Ledger, Dearne, 2; Giles, Derby Wheelers, 3. Meredith rode splendidly and won by a lap. Giles finished half a lap behind Ledger. Time—1hr. 5min. 14 ⅖secs There were fourteen starters, but before the half-distance all had dropped out except Meredith, Ledger, Giles, and Crowther (Leeds).

Five-mile Professional Championship.—Jenkins, Polytechnic C.C., 1 ; Rees, Llantrissant, 2 ; Howard, Putney, 3. Seven competed, and Jenkins won by ten yards ; five yards between second and third. Time—13min, 3 ⅕secs.

THE WEASEL.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

VERILY nothing succeeds like success. For some few weeks nothing went right. Scent was bad and jackals feeble. Now and for some time past there has been sport satis superque, a veritable hunter's elysium and the sole cause for anxiety among many ardent souls seems to be whether their limited stud, more especially when limited by the exigencies of Fate to an allowance of but "three legs and a swinger" (the latter item patched up for the occasion) will last out till the end of the season at the present sensational rate of progress. For one excellent day's sport followeth another in a manner delightfully monotonous and everyone dreads missing a morning lest they should just manage to miss the "run of the season." Thus it was that about three score and ten gallant hunters were ready to make obeisance to the Master at Harris' Bridge named in commemoration of that good all-round sportsman and excellent horseman. His Lordship of that ilk, whose name is still I find revered among the hard riders of Poona—a hard man among the hardest of both Poona and Bombay Hunts. With characteristic punctuality Colonel Sheringham moved off drawing the bank of the river at the further side of the Bridge. In a nullah leading into the river hounds soon proclaimed that a jack was on the prowl. Scent was a trifle fitful and the country varying. A rough and stoney stretch for less than a mile and the jack changed his point and steered across the Kalas Road. The pace began to warm up—a bit too warm indeed for some and the lengthening out process began to be apparent all the more so as soft ground found out the soft horses. Approaching Kalas the jack with a modest depreciation of his character wholly undeserved headed straight for Yerowda Jail. But the gloomy portals opened not to give him sanctuary from his pursuers and as an indifferent alternative he took temporary refuge in the horticultural efforts of the gentle prisoner. Nor was this wiliness unjustified for hounds were distinctly puzzled and required the assistance from the Master which always seems just a trifle hard luck on the hapless hunted one. Hopping over the boundary wall (of the garden, not the jail !) the Master no sooner got galloping then his gallant steed put her feet in a hidden trench and turned turtle and Colonel Sheringham to everyone's satisfaction got cheaply out of what might have been a nasty toss. Horses roll over like shot rabbits on such occasions, as well many of us have learnt to our cost. But the gallant Master is one of the hard bitten sort and with a shake, to see that no bones were broken, was up and away. But the end of this good jack was close at hand and bolting right among the horses in one final effort for escape he was bowled over. A very pleasant little hunt it was I hear, and if the pace was not consistently fast it was excellent hunting and the hound work was well worth the watching and from all I can gather many fail to appreciate this most beautiful part of hunting to the full. Half an hour as near as doesn't matter was the recorded time and the brush was awarded to Miss Low, who rode the hunt capitally throughout.

Many had had enough—certainly their horses must have, but a score or so blessed either with second horses, or very fit ones sungered for more sport and Colonel Sheringham is seldom inclined to say nay to such a suggestion. Back towards Harris Bridge was naturally the order of the day, for traps and the hound cart were there and any ravine or patch of cover between might hold a jack. On the Bhosri Road the 1st whip "caught the speaker's eye." For the 1st whip's charming little daughter and evidently a chip of the old block had viewed away a jack crossing the road. The Master never hesitated to accept the accuracy of the information nor was his confidence unplaced, for hounds promptly corroborated the little Diana's message. Straght over the Lohogaum Road this jack went racing away in a bee line for Stoney Glen near the Ahmednagar Road in an absolutely opposite direction to the hound cart and the various conveyances waiting at Harris' Bridge to take the tired hunters home But the pace was too good to think of such trifles. It was indeed a real cracker as long as it lasted and the going the best in this part of the Deccan. Green and firm and free from holes and stones one ardent sportsman assured an enraptured audience, while a few old stagers (who weren't in the run) smiled cynically and hoped they might come across this Brighton Down on the earliest possible occasion. My brief experience of Deccan's pastures has I must confess induced me to doubt the complete accuracy of the narrator's statement. But all the accounts I have heard agree that the pace left little to be desired. So good that no jack could stick it out and hounds ran from a burning breast high scent to view and drove this galloping jack into a large clump of prickly pear. What a curse it seems to be that every fence out here seems to be either prickly or poisonous, or both ! With such determined drive were hounds going that they raced through this treacherous covert and over ran their jack. Once more the Master's aid had to be called into play—it does seem rough, but all seems fair in Love, War and Hunting, and casting hounds back into cover—one scuffle and all was over. The jack became the "tatters of brown" and many of the hounds animated pin-cushions from contact with the pestilential prickly pear thorns A brilliant little run this evidently was and one to make even old and semi-stagnant blood go coursing through one's veins. Twenty minutes was the time, and none of them wasted Rendered all the more keen by the thrilling accounts of the previous day's sport, quite eighty or ninety, including several "habits" turned up at Holkar's Bridge on the 13th. The pleasing proximity of this rendezvous to both Poona and Kirkee also no doubt added to the popularity of it, for many have not the inclination to travel needlessly long distance and some who have the inclination have neither the spare means of locomotion nor the superfluous time at this busy season of the year when one needs must light both ends of the cand'le with an occasional match at the centre to melt the wax in the specified period. Under existing circumstances therefore these distant meets except for some special object seem somewhat senseless and since such excellent sport is obtainable nearer at hand they would from all I can gather by no means gain a plébiscite. The Master's first cast was along the river side in the direction of Kalas Ford when a jack was set going from somebody's garden enclosure and set his course for the Sister Hills. But I hear a little more law would have led to a bitter run. It is poor value always not to let one's fox get well away and this was fully exemplified in the present instance as the jack never had apparently a ten to one chance and what might have been a good hunt developed into a brief coursing match. Magnifique pentetre mais ce n'st pas la guerre. The brush was graciously presented to Mrs. Anderson. Drawing back towards the full-flowing Moola river, in some lantana (I trust I spell the unknown name correctly !) bushes and standing crops hounds feathering gaily owned to a line and after a little delay owing to lack of confidence on the part of the owner of the brace of eyes which viewed the jack away, hounds got on to it and some very pretty hunting ensued, nothing very fast apparently but interesting to those who knew enough to appreciate it. Scent was none too fulsome and hounds required all their skill and patience to work it out, the Master once at least coming to their aid. Over the plough lands scent held badly, but gradually forcing the jack towards the green slopes of the hills the pace freshened in a pleasant hunting gallop hounds ran into their vixen near Dighi Hamlet and Miss Fulton was awarded the customary memento of the chase—an enjoyable morning without approaching the brilliant.

Captain.—MR F E H POWER

Honorary Secretary.—MR W S BURKE.

Saturday, 15th August 1903.

THE race for the Hoare Cup was held this afternoon on the Kidderpore water. It was robbed of much of the interest that should attach to an important competition of the kind by the fact that only two crews entered—and these after strenuous efforts on the part of the Committee—and by the bad luck that dogged one of the crews who lost its stroke a week before the race and at the very last moment had to row a substitute for number two and, of course, their chances of winning had vanished before they came under the starter's orders. But they made a very fair show and are entitled to share the congratulations bestowed on the winners. The crews were :—

Maxwell's crew led from the time they struck the water, and, gradually drawing away, there was daylight between the boats after half the course was completed. Rowing with good length and in capital time the leaders ultimately won, without being pushed, by two and a quarter lengths. Time—3mins. 7½secs.

Headlong, the dam of Bumptious, had a peculiar history. After a disappointing career on the flat the mare was put to steeplechasing, and while taking part in a minor affair "between the flags" came to grief in company with another competitor, and broke one of her forelegs. Both the unfortunate animals were condemned to be shot.

Just, however, as Headlong was about to receive the coup de grace, a local farmer, who was standing by, begged hard for her to be spared, declaring that he was sure he could patch her up so as to breed a foal. The mare was accordingly handed over to him, and with unceasing care and the best possible attention, Headlong pulled through, and was sent to Brag, who was located at his owner's (Mr de Rothschild's) Northamptonshire seat, and his services given to the tenant farmer.

The produce of the union was Bumptious, whom Mr. de Rothschild purchased as a yearling, and may be his affection for the horse originated from the circumstances in connection with the dam which are above related.

Cycling.

CYCLING IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Friday, 31st July, 1903.

IN the history of cycling, the name of Mr. T. H. Woollen, the Chairman of the Birmingham Centre of the National Cyclists' Union during 1901-2 will occupy a prominent position, for few men have devoted such hard and honorary labours on behalf of wheelmen as he has. The recent concessions on the part of the railway companies with regard to the carriage of cycles and the acceptance of responsibility by them for damage or loss, is mainly due to Mr. Woollen's labours, and he stated recently, that during negotiations with the companies, he sent out no less than 6,000 letters and made over thirty special journeys to London. It is not likely that cyclists, who are as a rule generous and open-handed, would allow Mr. Woollen's services to pass unrecognised, and at the Crown Hotel, Birmingham, he was recently presented with an illuminated address and a handsome silver cigar case. He stated that railway companies fully recognised the grievances of cyclists, and that in time they would all be redressed.

The second batch of National Cyclists' Union Championships were decided on 25th July at Wakefield, and attracted an attendance of some 4,000 spectators, who were treated to some excellent racing, more especially by S. Jenkins, the professional, and Leon Meredith, the middle distance amateur. The four lap to the mile cinder track was not altogether to the taste of the Londoners, who were more accustomed to up-to-date paths, yet A. S. Ingram repeated his performance of the last three years of carrying off the quarter-mile amateur championship. The twenty-five miles amateur championship produced a field of fourteen starters, and after a fine race the winner turned up in Leon Meredith, who, it will be remembered, secured this year's race for the Carwardine Cup. In the professional championship the spectators were given some grand riding by S. Jenkins, who won the quarter mile, one mile and five-mile events in capital form.

Mr. S. F. Edge has addressed a letter to the Editor of the Autocar which, in fairness to the British tyre industry, should be widely circulated. He says, inter alia : "Re my tyres in the Gordon-Bennet race : There have been an enormous number of wild statements in reference to this matter, but I think it will be as well that the matter should be put perfectly correctly once and for all. First, I had no punctures. Secondly, my tyres were never torn to pieces or destroyed in any way. The whole trouble was that the beads of the 90 mm. tyres are not strong enough or large enough to stand the stress of a car running at eighty miles an hour. The actual tyres which came off are still quite suitable to use on racing cars up to sixty-five miles per hour, but not higher speeds. Unfortunately, no amount of practice either in England or Ireland prior to the race would have found this out, as it was not until very high speeds were reached that the troubles occurred, and this speed would not have been reached in practice on roads which were not kept for racing. When I won the Gordon-Bennett Cup last year I used an identical type of tyres, but my last year's car was not capable of developing the speed which my present one attains.

The team of amateur riders put forward by the Polytechnic C. C. possess the proud position of holding an unbeaten career, their matches against "All England" teams and teams representing the best amateurs of France, having always resulted in a victory for the Poly, boys. But at the Anerley Bicycle Club's meeting at the Crystal Palace, on 19th September, when they are matched against a team representing "All England," it is half expected that their splendid record will be broken, or anyhow, that they will only win by a bare margin of points. There are two or three good provincial riders about this year, who on the matter of speed are a match for Ingram, Reed and company, and who will be invited to ride in the English team. On speed they should win ; but, unfortunately, they lack the "head" work which is displayed by the London men, and on this score may fail to get placed.

M. Garin, who won the last stage of the Tour de France, from Nantes to Paris, and who also proved the winner of the contest when the total aggregates were made up, is said to have won no less than £240 in prize money in this event, besides bonuses, etc., he might have received. It was a hard ride, but still, the prize was worth striving for.

The liberties of dogs on the highways and the irresponsibility of their owners with regard to damage they may cause to cyclists, are both tending to become a glorious dream, and the day is rapidly approaching when the responsibility of dog owners will be fully recognised. Why dogs should have so long retained the privilege of scaring peaceful citizens on wheels by their wild rushes and snarling bark, it is difficult to perceive, but signs are not wanting to show that members of the canine family will have to mend their ways or else be a continual source of expense to their masters. A doctor at Newport, who had been brought over by a playful doggie belonging to a lady, prosecuted her for not keeping the animal under proper control. After hearing evidence against the owner, the magistrate inflicted a fine of 10s., and made an order for the dog to be in future kept under proper control.

While not approving of paced riding on the public roads and still less when the performance is that of a woman's we must nevertheless give credit where credit is due, and chronicle the meritorious ride of Miss M. Foster. The record she attacked was the fifty miles Southern Roads record of 2hrs. 38mins. 18secs. standing to the credit of Miss Palmer, and this she improved upon by no less than 24mins. 16secs., riding well throughout behind the pacing of a motor cycle. The unpaced time over the same course is 2hrs. 21mins. 42secs just made by L. Meredith.

As long as cycle thieves experience such little difficulty in disposing of their booty, so long must wheelmen run the risk of having their machines stolen and by the number of thefts reported recently, the risk is considerable. The ease with which thieves find unsuspecting purchasers is really surprising, and one cannot help thinking that in many cases the purchasers are aware that they are buying stolen property. A case just heard at the Notts Police Court, is typical of many. Two youths having gained possession of a couple of machines, rode from Lincoln to Newark, and there sold the machines, one to a man for 15s., and the other to a woman for 5s. Considering the machines were worth at least three pounds a piece, it is not surprising that the bench severely censured the man and woman for purchasing them at such a low figure.

CRICKET IN BOMBAY.

CIVIL vs. MILITARY.—This, the presidency trial match, was played on the Gymkhana ground on the 10th and 11th instant. The Military's first innings produced 60, but Lieutenants Carroll and Airy were the only batsmen to get into double figures. The Civil team replied with 119. Sinclair (30) Monteath (28) and Smith (17) did best. In their second innings the Military gave a much better display. They totalled 200 for seven wickets when and declared their innings closed. Lieutenant Faviell was in great form and played a splendid innings of 93 none of the other batsmen made large scores. An hour and a half remained for play when the Civil entered on their second innings and they managed to compile 51 runs for 4 wickets when time was up, the match thus ending in a draw. Of the Military trundlers Carroll and Wallinger were best, while Elliott bowled well for the Civilians. Score :—

PRESIDENCY vs. PARSEES.—This annual fixture, which usually occupies three days, was this year concluded in two, the 13th and 14th instant. The Presidency had five new players, while almost all their opponents had been in the team before. The Parsees went in first and at lunch had scored 117 for 5 wickets, K. M. Mistri playing a good innings for 56. They carried their total to 170 before they were all disposed of. The Presidency then went to the wickets and were all out for the poor total of 69. No one could play the bowling of K. M. Mistri, who took seven wickets for 26 runs. With quarter of an hour left the Parsees began their second innings and before time was up two wickets had fallen. On resuming the next day they took the score to 164, K. M Mistri and Raja being the chief scorers. The Presidency made a better show in their second venture, putting up 116 which included an invaluable 66 by Lieut. Weatherby and a well played 28 by Lieut. Carroll. The Parsees thus won by 149 runs. RUGBY IN CALCUTTA.

CALCUTTA vs. MR. GARDINER'S TEAM.—As the United Services were unable to put out a team, Mr. Gardiner got together a fifteen and played Calcutta on their own ground last Saturday. The visitors started and after some loose play Martelli got possession and put in a fine run but was brought up by Margery. Then Calcutta got going once more and some good passing by the three-quarters resulted in F. Siddons getting over. The place failed, but before half time A. Siddons and V Sherman had each crossed the line, F Siddons converting the former's try. On changing ends play was of a loose character, but after a series of "scrums" Jacob gave the ball to Martelli, who took it over the line. No goal resulted. Just before time Gardiner got over the home line and the place just missed Calcutta thus won by a goal and three tries to one try or 14 points to 3.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Rugby football in Calcutta is looking up—of that there is no shadow of doubt, no possible doubt whatever, and this satisfactory state of things is due principally to the large number of really capable players who have come out here since last season, and also to the strenuous efforts of one or two enthusiasts which has resulted in new clubs being formed whose recent displays show that the premier club will not have matters so much their own way as in the past.

Dealing with the Calcutta F. C. first it must at once be acknowledged that they have the makings of a really fine side, in fact the team should turn out to be stronger than they have had for many years It is unfortunate that their Captain, Newton, has been incapacitated from playing regularly, but should he eventually be unable to take the field there is more than an efficient substitute to hand in Dick whose tackling is both safe and forceful, whilst his kicking is in no way inferior to that of the Scotch International.

At half back they have been represented by Macdonald and Jacob. The former is a strong runner and clever at opening out the game for the men behind him, whilst Jacob has on occasions shown promising form, but his passing is terribly erratic. Both are, however, weak in defence and Legge will be sorely missed in this respect.

The three-quarter line is infinitely superior to that of last year and present appearances point to the final selection for these positions resting between the brothers Siddons, Dundas, Martelli, and Langdon, with the elder Sherman as possible eleventh hour choice. Both the Siddons have been playing a pretty combined game and as they possess pace and tackle well their retention in the team is almost assured. Martelli on the other hand has been showing some very in-and-out form—no doubt due to a weak knee, whilst Dundas, who is a very strong runner and a difficult man to hold, is far too prone to sticking to the ball. Langdon has only recently been tried, but he has made a very favourable impression—he takes his passes in good style and feeds his wing men with great judg-ment and discrimination. In the pack Calcutta have a heavy and hard working set of forwards, amongst whom Berridge, Hayward, Brown and McLead figure most prominently. They are, however, rather on the slow side and their footwork leaves room for improvement, whilst their tackling is weak in the extreme as they have not yet mastered the art of collaring low. The weak point about the team is the kicking and it behoves the executive to draft a good place kick into the team even such a course necessitates the inclusion of a forward who would not otherwise get his place.

Of the other Clubs, Customs and City are the most promising the especially the former inflicted a defeat on the premier club by 3 tries to 1 on the occasion of the return match between the two teams. This was a victory, moreover, which was fully deserved, as although Calcutta, who were not at full strength, held slight advantage forward this was nullified by the overwhelming superiority of the Customs behind the scrum. Rowe played a really fine game for his side at half-back, where he completely outplayed his vis-a-vis. Last season Rowe spoilt his play by offside tactics, but this was not the case on Friday last when his dodgy, cork-screw runs repeatedly gained ground and in one instance led to his scoring a clever try. In Templeton they are well served at back and they have a strong set of forwards who are well led by Fitzgerald. If the Customs show the improvement which is to be anticipated they will prove formidable opponents in the Cup Ties.

The City team are another combination who have defeated Calcutta and their victory was not without merit. At the same time it must be said that the methods employed by some of the City men are not calculated to result in the matches in which they appear being contested in the most amicable and sports-manlike spirit and this was unfortunately the case in their meeting with the premier club. However under the captaincy of Williams, who played an excellent game throughout, we have no doubt that unduly rough play and incessant "haggling" will be noticeable by its absence in future in which case the City should be able t give Calcutta an exceedingly good game in the return matches. Of the other new teams, the Casuals and Ballygunge have not yet settled down, but both Messrs. Whitie and Pope are to be congratulated on the success they have achieved in raising these two fifteens. The few matches which the Casuals have so far played have revealed a keenness amongst the players which augurs well for the future and when the team as a whole are thoroughly conversant with the game they should improve on their recent displays. In Whitie, Batho, Harnack, and Walsh they possess four sterling forwards, whilst outside the pack they have Goss and Mabert, both of whom will do well later on. Lees at full back kicks well, but requires experience. The half-backs, however, are both weak and it is in this department of the team where the Casuals require most strengthening.

Ballygunge have, up to the present, only played one match and the ultimate constitution of the team is therefore unknown. When Calcutta have finally settled on the side which is to represent them in the Cup Ties, Pope should not experience much difficulty in getting together a really strong fifteen capable of giving the premier club many good practice games, which, I understand, is the sole reason for which the Ballygunge team was started.

Hellyers, the well-known "London Scot," is shortly returning to Calcutta and we understand will appear in the ranks of the premier club, to whom he should on his Home form prove of immense service.

Two of last year's Calcutta three-quarter backs, viz., Bagshawe and Margery, appeared for Captain Gardiner's team on Saturday last, but neither had a chance of distinguishing themselves as they were so poorly served by their half-backs. Margery, however, tackled well as did Hemingway, who was also playing for the scratch combination, whilst Brown worked hard amongst the forwards. For Calcutta the elder Sherman gave a promising display at wing three-quarter, his strong running and passing being excellent. Dick played a good game at full back, his kicking especially combining a good length with precision.

GOLF IN GULMARG.

After the aweful inundation and heavy rainfall, we had a bright day or two to play for the Hill Vase, the first ties on Monday were lucky, Tuesday there was no play owing to rain. Wednesday the second ties plodded through water, it was compulsory to play otherwise no one in his senses would have played 18 holes, the putting on the green was impossible a mashie had to be used and the ball lifted into the hole Out of the 30 entries, Messrs. Milward, Carter, Young, and Captain Bois Johnstone remained in. As the contest was a handicap one, all the scratch men were knocked out, and unknown visitors indifferently handicapped remained, in the next round Milward defeated his opponent, and Young managed to scrape in against his, both played well, considering the state of the ground between the greens. In the finals Young's handicap points of 20 were too much for Milward's 14, both played well, Young winning by 6 holes, thus taking the handsome vase presented by Captain J. Hill.

On Friday afternoon twenty couples contended against Bogey for a prize offered by Mrs. Lavarton who was "At Home" on the 12th green, the ladies had to choose their own partners, the result was rather amusing, the good players had the gentle sex pleading to them and trying their best to touch their rougher hearts, the pretty ones conquering in the end regardless of skill in the game. Many unspoken blessings were showered on the fair ones who missed puts of a foot distance on the green, yet on the whole they looked happy, although a little smired with mud and in disarray owing to their strenuous exertions to be level with Colonel Bogey Ultimately the prize was won by Captain Pennington and Miss Morgan 1 up, the handicapping was very liberal in their case as both have been winners previously.

The championship meeting takes place between the 17th and 22nd. The contest will be between MacAllan, Boyd, and Hill, doubtful ones, Mitchell, Young, and Anderson.

The Garden.

GARDENING IN MIDNAPUR.

ONIONS, Allium Cepa, are one of the easiest of vegetables to grow in Bengal. There are two distinct varieties of them indigenous to the country and are known as the Patnai and Dessie, the former is mostly confined to the Northern Districts and is the big onion either of a silvery white or pale red colour. Some of the bigger ones of these "Patnai" average from 6 to 8 to the pound and are but 2½ to 3 inches in diameter. In shape it is mostly depressed globular, the flesh firm and sweetish; the red ones among this variety are usually more pungent than the white ones. What is known as "Dessie" is a small onion, uniformly pale red in colour, the flesh pinkish and very pungent. Of the imported varieties, the following may be given a trial, viz. Danvers Fellow Globe, White Spanish, Giant Rocca White Lisbon, and Red Zittau, though I fear the results obtained will not be found very satisfactory. The several trials I have made here have always given the same results; the seeds germinate badly and the plants made such slow growth that the hot weather usually set in before the bulbs had begun forming. Imported seeds, if first acclimatized in the hills, may succeed and give better results in the plains.

Onions delight in a light, loamy soil freely manured with poudrette, wood ashes, and any kind of decayed sweepings. It is very important that the manure should be well mixed with the soil and not applied too freshly. The proper time for sowing onion seeds, both of the "Patnai" and "Dessie" is from the middle of October to the beginning of the following month. The seeds should be sown in nursery beds raised 6 inches or so from the surrounding ground. After the seeds have been sown and well harrowed in, fine sand should be sprinkled over and the whole covered up with a layer of thatching grass or straw, to the thickness of 2 to 3 inches. Water should be daily applied with a watering can, having a fine rose. As soon as the seeds have begun germinating, which will usually be in 10 or 12 days, the straw covering should be removed. Fresh seeds only should be sown, as onion seeds lose their germinating power very soon. When the plants are 3 inches or so high, the ground should be loosened with a fine hoe, and when another inch or so bigger, should be planted out in rows, 4 inches apart the "Patnai" and 2 inches the "Dessie." The ground should be well prepared before and the soil thoroughly pulverized. The best way to do this is to have the beds, which should be four to five feet broad, running parallel to each other and the soil between them laid out in ridges 3 to 4 inches high The laying out of the ground thus will facilitate irrigating the crops, and the ridges between the beds will also facilitate the weeding and loosening of the soil without injury to the plants. Onions take 3½ to 4 months to come to maturity, so plants put out in November should be ready to be taken up by the latter end of February. As soon as the bulbs have begun ripening, the stalks should be bent over and any flower heads that may appear removed. Liquid manure will be found very beneficial, especially so in the case of the "Patnai," and the bulbs from crops thus treated will be found to have greatly improved both in size and flavour.

For growing in gardens I should recommend only the "Patnai" or some of the choicer kinds from the Deccan and Bombay. There is a kind of onion grown in the Deccan, which is not very unlike the pale red European variety. It is depressed globular, pale red outside, creamy white with occasionally purple streaks inside, and of a mild sweetish flavour, and altogether a very desirable variety. Onions, besides being grown from seed, are also often raised from off sets from bulbs, or the bulbs themselves, if small.

What are known as spring onions and which so often grace our breakfast tables when in season, are almost always grown from bulbs, and the smaller varieties from among what are known as "Dessie" are the best adapted for this. The proposition of bulbs to be put down will depend a good deal as to their size, but 4 seers or about 8lbs. will be found sufficient for a bed 16 by 8 feet and they should be planted in rows 3 inches apart each way. The soil should be well prepared and manured before. Ashes, especially that from cowdung cakes, and poudrette or sweepings of all, will be found the best suited With a little care spring onions may be grown very nearly all the year round. The earlier crops may be put down in August on raised beds and a succession of such crops should be put down once every three weeks or until the middle of February. Water should be applied as required, and the ground kept open by occasional loosening of the soil with a fine hoe. Some of the earlier crops should be ready to be taken up from four to five weeks from the time of planting and will then form a very pleasant addition to our breakfast table, as green food is scarce at that period.

It is not necessary to raise onions out here for culinary purposes as the natives grow vast quantities of them almost all over the country. Onion growing is one of the main features of those large chars, or new alluvial formations of the Ganges and other big rivers, and where, in places, miles upon miles of nothing but onion cultivation may be seen. The Bengal ryots have seldom recourse to manure relying mainly on the annual floods, that bring down a vast amount of silt to fertilize and renew their lands for them. Onion is one of the most paying crops in this country, and 35 to 40 mauds per bigah is nothing unusual for a char crop to give. The usual price at which the ryots sell their onions to the middlemen is from Rs. 1-8 to Rs. 2 per maund according to seasons, and as the expenses, including rent, never exceed Rs. 15 to Rs. 20 per bigah, the results obtained compare most favourably with other crops.

PARSLEY, Petroselinum Sativum, may be grown very successfully in Midnapur and with a little care and trouble may be kept in good condition all the year round. Any light soil of a sandy nature and sufficiently manured, will suit this herb. There are several varieties of parsley, but what is known as curled is the best flavoured and should be given preference to. Parsley may be sown any time in October after the rains are fairly over, but the seeds seldoms germinate till the thermometer has fallen by a few degrees. Sound fresh seeds usually germinate on the tenth or twelfth day, and as soon as the seedlings have set their fourth leaves the ground should be loosened with a fine hoe. As long as the weather remains cool, or until about the end of February, the plants may be left in the beds they have been grown in after which they should be transplanted either in boxes or pans for future use. The soil in these boxes should be of a friable nature and an admixture of coarse sand and small pieces of bricks and ghooting or lime-one will be found useful in keeping the soil sweet and preventing it getting sour. The boxes or pans in which the plants have been transplanted should be kept partly shaded, any verandah facing the north will be found the best suited for the purpose. Water should be applied as occasion may require and the ground kept open by constant loosening of the soil. Parsley kept under such conditions will keep good all the year round, and will always afford a plentiful supply of cuttings for germinating and flavouring.

THE PROFESSIONAL CRICKETER.

INTO the life, habits, and expenses of living of the professional cricketer we have lately been making some enquiry, of a correspondent (an habitué of the pavilions and dressing rooms of the county grounds all over England by the way) from home, and though perhaps as so very many mistaken ideas exist with regard to this individual let nobody run away with the idea that the "pro." is a man of wealth, unless he is a very frequent centurion, plays regularly for England and is in either Yorkshire, Lancashire, or Surrey, where the benefit means four figures for certain, for there are so very many calls on his purse that "the fiver" match fee soon vanishes in all out matches as the following list of absolutely unavoidable expenses shows:—

The pro's. expenditure starts from the moment he leaves his home as his county only pays his actual train fare or allows him a sovereign for every match beyond 100 miles giving him his ticket only up to that distance. Some counties pay fare everywhere whether the distance is 50 or 250 miles, so we will assume the latter rule in force in the county for which Smith, our "pro." for the purposes of this article, plays. Very well, Smith is playing for Surrey vs. Lanc. at Old Trafford on Monday, 10th June. His secretary informs him he is due at Euston 4-15 on Sunday afternoon for the journey north. Smith lives Richmond. He leaves his cricket bag packed at the Oval on Saturday to be driven to Euston with all the other cricket bags on Sunday afternoon and directly he says good-bye to Mrs. Smith at Richmond he begins to put his hand in his pocket, as follows:—

Ticket to Waterloo, say	0	0	8
'Bus to Euston [the probability is he has a cab which would cost him 2s. 6d.] ...	0	0	4
Cost of driving bag from Oval ...	0	1	0
Tea at Euston	0	1	0
Cigarettes or baccy	0	0	6
Sunday papers	0	0	2
Porter's tip	0	0	3
Ditto on arrival Manchester ...	0	0	3
Cab to hotel	0	1	6
Three days at hotel, including drinks at hotel only	1	10	0
Cab to ground first day and back third day	0	2	0
Porterage first and third day at ground...	0	0	6
Dressing room attendant	0	0	6
Waiters on ground	0	0	6
Luncheon drinks, three days ..	0	1	6
Extra drinks three days on ground ...	0	1	6
Ditto at hotel or elsewhere	0	2	0
Subscription to Benefit [this is of course an irregular expense]	0	5	0
Waiters, chambermaid, and hotel porter...	0	2	0
Theatre or music hall, three nights ...	0	6	0
Tram fares to and fro ground for three days except first morning and third evening	0	0	8
Cab back to station	0	1	6
Porter at Manchester	0	0	3
Ditto at Euston	0	0	3
Cab to Waterloo	0	2	6
Porter at Waterloo	0	0	3
Waterloo to Richmond	0	0	8
Porter at Richmond	0	0	3
Cab at Richmond	0	1	6
This leaves a balance from the fiver match fee of	£1	14	11

The above are only absolutely bare necessaries. The "pro." cannot possibly avoid, even if he would, a single one of the "tips," while the allowances our friend has made for extra drinks are really ridiculously low unless Smith is a teetotaler, for it by no means follows that all the extra drinks go down Smith's gullet. In the very noble cause of hospitality, not by any means lavish, Smith spends far more than the 3*s.* 6*d.* in three days that has been allowed him. Theatres and music halls at 2*s.* an evening are cheap and are assured by a necessity, otherwise Smith would only loaf the streets which, if tired from a day in the field, he naturally won't dream of doing, and if not tired from that cause he does not do in order to keep fit for the next day which may have a long innings or bout of bowling in store for him. Moreover 2*s.* an evening is better for him than three or four times that amount at billiards or cards or worse still in the bar of a four-ale pot house, where in bye-gone times a "pro." has perhaps been seen. Sometimes pelting rain adds to the expenses by quadrupling, and more, the train fares to and fro the ground cabs being a necessity to avoid a drenching that might bring in its wake rheumatism and stop Smith's career for the season, in which case even the £1-14-11 would not be his! we have allowed Smith but twopence worth of newspapers, whereas he spends at least that per diem and we have made no allowance for winning at cards as in fine weather no cards are played and in wet Smith usually loses so that source of income and expenditure is best ignored and is at any rate hardly a necessary.

Now let us take the home match. The fee is the same of course and from it Smith finds that in the home match he has to deduct :—

Return fare to the Oval for three days ...	0	3	6
Three lunches and drinks	0	7	6
Tip to dressing room attendant ...	0	1	0
Extra drinks for three days... ...	0	6	0

Say, roughly, four pounds, so that out of a week's cricket at Manchester and the Oval Smith for ten pounds received has £5-16-11 to show, of which home expenses, that are very little less while he is away, swallow at the very cheapest computation £1-10 leaving a profit of £4-6-11 for his week's cricket. Supposing though that from Manchester Smith had had to go on to Harrogate, his expenses there would have been as nearly as possible, the same as for the Manchester match in which case of the £3-9-10 remaining from the tenner received Smith would have sent Mrs. Smith £1-10 and would arrive at Richmond with £1-18-10 in his pocket to "put by" for the winter. These figures which are really most carefully compiled, a little more in one item being balanced by a little less in another, prove that the "pro." has to "watch it" very carefully indeed all the time, and that the five pounds per match that looks such a good thing at a distance is not quite all one's fancy paints it.

In the same connection it is a well-known fact, among professional cricketers, that one who goes to Australia on the £300 fee, washing and all travelling found, is very lucky indeed to come home with a third of that sum clear. While out there the whole team gets every ha'penny of its travelling expenses defrayed including, every penny for trams, etc., wherever each man goes, pleasure trips included and yet the outside exes are so great that the average "pro." gets through about £200 between mid-September and mid-April, and finds it difficult to avoid a single one of the exes that brings about this result. This we have from one who has made the trip more than once.

As regards other matches than inter-county the professional gets £10 for Players vs. Gentlemen and £20 for England vs. Australia, but out of this he has to pay all his travelling, board and lodging and lunch expenses, so that a test match at Old Trafford is a cheaper affair, therefore more lucrative, for Tyldesley than for Tate, who starts from some remote village near Lewes and has his "return" to Manchester to buy and at least two and half days' board and lodging to pay in Manchester out of the twenty sovereigns win or lose. Some counties pay differently to others. With some it is £5 lose or draw, £6 win, in fact with most it is this. With Middlesex the Surrey match is £5, plus £5 if won, a state of affairs prevalent nowhere else and probably only in Middlesex as they have practically no ground to pay for and maintain, but one secretary and are nine times out of ten a nine-elevenths amateur side, the luckiest county in England from a financial point of view. The question of talent varies too. Some shires give a sovereign for every fifty, a sovereign for every four catches at the wicket in one innings, a like sum for five wickets by the bowler, other counties, Yorkshire, Lancashire, Essex-Sussex, par exemple, go by marks which are given for fielding as well each mark being worth five shillings, so that often a 40 or even a 25 will earn two or three marks just as a good catch or three wickets opportunely taken mean money instead of only often neglected thanks. Talent money is paid in lump at end of the season, generally during the winter and nowadays collections on the ground for some rare or good feat are few and far between. This article should go some distance towards dispelling doubt in the matter of that really hard-worked individual the "pro."

Sporting Notes.

The third Calcutta Monsoon Meeting, in spite of the fields being smaller on the whole than in either of the two preceding days, provided a real good day's sport, in fact the best we have had so far. The going was heavy, as was inevitable after a week's intermittent rain, and this possibly contributed to the general inability of favourites to roll home. Taking the day through, the fielders must have had a good time, as even where favourites won there were other strongly supported candidates, while in the Kidderpur Stakes the books had practically a skinner. Wonderful to relate there were comparatively few grumblers over the apportionment of the burdens, and that they were well distributed was evidenced by the close finishes which resulted in four out of the six events. In one of these Kittylea, whom the handicappers were popularly supposed to have turned loose with 9-10, just failed to get up. At the same time, however, we cannot resist expressing mild surprise at Springlock being set to give Loch Arden weight over seven furlongs, and that he was quite unable to do this was shown by the fact that he was beaten to the world before they turned into the straight. The fields were all despatched on this occasion to very fairly level starts, but it is, of course, a very different thing getting a field of five or six horses away to handling an unruly crowd of ten or a dozen and in only one race on Saturday, the Pony Plate, did the field attain to double figures.

In the first race for which the starters numbered eleven, Second Thought and Perfect were most fancied, twos being obtainable about the latter. The gate rose to a fair start in which Snapshot and Lady Froude first showed to the front. At the turn there was apparently some jostling, but Perfect eventually came through and drawing away won very comfortably by two lengths, the two bottom weights, Yuletide and First Guide, dead heating for second place.

In the Hurdle Race Kittylea was considered to have been somewhat lightly treated in the handicap, but a considerable amount of money was forthcoming for Fairlight, who ended up favourite. It was a real good race and Carter handled Fairlight with great judgment, waiting patiently with him without lying out of his ground. Kittylea ran a good mare and had she come better round the turn into the straight she might, we think, have won. There is need of more judicious flagging at this turn and we would suggest that instead of the one drum, there should be three flags, as at present in order to get well round, it is necessary to go a bit wide and make the turn before coming to the drum, and in doing this there is always the risk of being bumped by some horse which has made a straight line for the drum.

For the Amateur Plate only four went to the post and as Sir Humphrey elected to add excitement to the proceedings by giving one of his "Wild West" exhibitions, the actual runners were reduced to three. Firefly had no difficulty in disposing of the other two and cantered in a winner by the length of a street.

Sweet Talk and Little Doris carried most money for the Small Pony Plate, but the latter after giving some trouble at the start, got away very badly and made no show. This was one of the best races of the day, as when Sweet Talk had her field apparently settled at the distance, Moss Rose dropped from the clouds and came with a great run, but just failed to get up. Until the numbers went up it was impossible for anyone save the "man in the box" to say what bad won.

For the Kidderpur Stakes, Loch Arden was made a red hot favourite, odds of seven to four and even two to one being freely laid on him. Indeed it was considered that there were virtually only two horses in the race, Loch Arden and Corick, Springlock being weighted out of it, Metalwing being popularly supposed to be all out of order, and poor old Svengali being palpably badly in want of exercise. The race while providing a complete surprise, was one of the best from a spectacular point of view. Springlock and Metalwing were best away, closely followed by Loch Arden and Corick. At the turn Springlock was leading by half a length, and running wide and carrying Metalwing out with him let up Loch Arden on the rails. As they came into the straight Springlock dropped back and Loch Arden assumed the lead, but Metalwing running gamely on under punishment, gradually wore down the chestnut and won all out by half a length.

In the last race Gassima was placed at the head of the betting, though money was forthcoming for Oom Paul, while many of the knowing division supported Shirley at fives. The latter got off well but seemed to die away to nothing on rounding the bend, and after a great race home Gassima, on whom Mr. Galstaun rode a strong finish, landed the verdict from Oom Paul by a neck.

On the whole a real good afternoon's sport, only marred by some instances of bumping and jostling which resulted in two jockeys being carpeted. We are always inclined to make allowances for unintentional jostling when the going is slippery and treacherous as it usually is in the monsoons, but from what we hear there has been rather too much of this sort of thing lately and it is just as well that some notice should be taken of it.

With a view to the two Monsoon Meetings yet to come we would like to suggest that it would suit owners and others better if the weights could be published rather earlier. There would, we think, be no objection to closing the entries on the Monday, instead of the Tuesday previous, which would enable the handicaps to be framed by Tuesday evening.

Snipe are fairly well in now. Round and about Calcutta several small bags were made last Saturday and Sunday, bigger ones at Midnapore and 12 couple were got at Chittagong on the 24th instant.

In the course of a series of interesting articles on the "Mechanism of Polo," which have been appearing in The County Gentleman, there is one on the measurement of ponies which we reproduce elsewhere and commend to the persual of those interested in the subject.

We publish to-day the first entries for the Lucknow Autumn Meeting: they are distinctly good. We remind our readers that second entries close on the 1st October.

We see from an announcement in a South African paper that Mr. Barney Allen, who will be remembered by many Indian racing men, is book-making again, and has made Durban his head-quarters. His bay gelding Caledonia ran in the Durban Turf Club Handicap of £1,250, one mile, and started third favourite at 11 to 2, but was unplaced.

Under the appropriate heading of "A Disgusting Scene at Nuwara Eliya" the Ceylon Observer writes:—From early down to 3 P.M. this afternoon, on the 14th instant: the southern end of the town was kept in an uproar by the natives who mercilessly tortured a fine sized buck with velvet antlers, which was hunted out of the forest by an unlicensed pack right into the streamlet flowing by the western boundary of St. Andrew's Hotel. The buck was first noticed by a Sinhalese lad who stated that it was chased down the cart road from the direction of the Ramboda Pass. The buck, when it got to the bridge 200 yards off Messrs. Paul Soris' shop, leaped into the stream, where it was hemmed in by the dogs who were successfully beaten off by two Tamils who happened to arrive at the moment. The news of the buck in the stream soon spread and a crowd of natives immediately rushed the spot and began to torture the animal in their efforts to drive it back into the forest. The buck stupefied by the yells of the crowd although whipped and battered with sticks, refused to move. The Police arrived on the scene about 10 A. M., and tried to keep the crowd away, but without avail. Ultimately they ordered the elk (Sambur) to be noosed and tied up with the result that it nearly broke its neck. On second thoughts it was liberated when it took to the stream again. At 2 P.M. Mr. Mooyart-Denison, who happened to come into town hearing the news, visited the spot, and tried to keep the Police at work among the crowd. Thoroughly disgusted with the sickening sight he went to the station and asked the Sergeant-Major to have the elk shot if it had serious injuries. Although the buck was only tired out the Police elected to follow Mr. Denison's suggestion and shoot it. A Police Sergeant fired at the beast from 15 yards and took three shots to kill it! Two shots were fired within three minutes of each other, and it was only in response to an appeal of a Ceylonese gentleman that a third shot was fired after about five minutes to relieve the sufferings of the buck struggling in the water.

Among our Turf news this week will be found a list of Trainers' lots at Poona.

The Poona Junior Polo Tournament should have opened on Monday, but the polo ground is not at its best after rain, and as the weather was not propitious last week it was impossible to get much practice and the ground ultimately became so spongy that the Honorary Secretary had to consult the Committee with the result that the Tournament had to be postponed till the 24th. Meantime the sloppy ground nearly caused two bad accidents. Captain the Hon'ble Greville, A.D.C., who leaves India with Lord Northcote, having had a nasty fall, but he was not hurt and was in the racing saddle again last Saturday, but Captain Rowlandson was not so fortunate. He is improving, but it was necessary for him to remain in hospital, where he still lies. Nine teams as I have already written have entered and some good polo should be witnessed. The increase in the entries is due to the H. C. Cavalry regiments now located in Poona.

The Naini Tal Polo Tournament will take place during the week commencing the 28th September, teams will consist of three players each and entries close on the 24th September. For further details we refer our readers to the advertisement appearing in our Sporting notifications.

Writing of jockeys remarks a home scribe. It seems somewhat singular that when they have horses on their own account they very rarely go in for anything like expensive stuff, yet one would think that most of them during their career have had practical experience of the futility of owning crocks, which are just as expensive to keep as the good ones. Sam Loates now poses as an owner, and his registered colours, slate with red collar, cuffs, and cap, are not quite beautiful, although they may be æsthetic. These colours were carried for the first time by the two-year-old Serenade in the Juvenile Plate at Brighton, in which she could only finish fifth. Entered to be sold for fifty pounds, Sam was glad to get rid of her for forty guineas.

Appended is the list of principal winning jockeys on the flat at home, compiled up to 31st July:—

Among Mr. Hamar Bass' recent purchases in England is the five-year-old' chaser, Auburn's Pride, by Hackler—Magnet. She has started in but two races this year—the Dunboyne Plate at Fairyhouse and the Maiden Plate of 500 sovs. at Punchestown.

It is yet a comparatively far cry to the close of the flat-racing season at home, but the publication of the entries for the important handicaps of the autumn which arrived by last mail emphasises the fact that a considerable part of it has run its course. Much interesting and exciting sport remains to be witnessed, however, and prominent features for October are the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire races, which fill a large place in the favour of the general sporting public and contribute lively chapters to the racing history of the year. The issue of the nominations is not awaited with the eagerness at one time displayed, when books were opened on both handicaps much earlier than is now the case, but they are looked forward to with no little curiosity nevertheless, and the lists supply topics for comment at a period when Turf matters are presenting a comparatively quiet phase. Though there has in recent years been stronger support accorded both the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire, they both come out very well, and, compared with a twelve month ago, the combined nominations on the present occasion total 211 against 214, the long distance race showing a slight decrease. As usual, French sportsmen have come forward in each handicap, and experience has shown that danger is frequently to be feared from the other side of the Channel. The following table supplies the figures in connection with the two events for this and several preceding years:—

The report of the New York Zoological Society for last year contains a very remarkable account of feeding a 25ft. python which refused to take food of its own accord. It appears that the snake had been suffering from canker of the mouth, which had been cured by a course of careful dressing and washing during a period of two months. On the completion of the cure the reptile refused food of all kinds. Accordingly four dead rabbits were sewed together with twine and forcibly pushed down the creature's throat at the end of an 8ft. bamboo until only a few inches of the pole projected from the mouth. When the bamboo was withdrawn the python showed signs of attempting to disgorge its involuntary meal, whereupon the fire-hose was brought into play, with the result that the reptile assumed a fighting attitude, and swallowed the rabbits. The process was repeated at suitable intervals during the following eleven months, when the reptile took to feeding itself. Recently, however, the old tendency to undue fasting has reasserted itself, so that when the report was written it seemed probable that recourse would once more have to be made to the forcible and decidedly original mode of feeding.

This is not an ordinary plague story, and I am not going to give you any harrowing details, says a writer in The Journal. But it is an incident which a popular jockey is not likely to hear the last of for a while. It appears that this well-known jockey, who finds it possible and profitable to take a trip home every year after the racing season closes, left in charge of a friend in Bombay, his holdall containing his racing kit, whip, colours, etc. When leaving England for Colombo he sent word to his friend to forward his valuable baggage in time to reach there for the race-week. When he landed in the spicy land, he enquired diligently for his outfit and at length discovered that an intelligent shipping clerk had consigned the package as "bedding." The authorities at Colombo, by whom Plague is always spelt in capital letters, did not hesitate a moment. Bedding from that plague-infested port of Bombay must be burnt immediately, and so the whips, jackets and other precious belongings were consigned to the flames. Whether we shall see this latest plague victim ride as many winners as last year I will not dare to prophesy, but if not, there will not be wanting those who will tell us that all his luck was in his whip.

It is expected that Danny Maher will make his reappearance in the saddle at the Derby Meeting, an announcement which will be received with much satisfaction by the admirers—and their name is legion—of this capable and courteous rider, who has probably been nearer death's door than many have supposed. Maher, who is an expert angler, was at Newmarket quietly recuperating, according to latest advices.

Their Majesties, it has been mentioned more than once, when a favourite horse dies, have its hoofs cut off and polished, the name of the favourite inscribed on each hoof, and these relics are preserved in one of the Sandringham harness rooms. Undoubtedly when space is of considerable moment the plan followed by the King is in every way admirable, and is sure to be followed by many who do not desire to go to the lengths of the noble owner of the famous horse Touchstone, who won, for the then Marquis of Westminster, the St. Leger of 1834. Before this race the chances of Touchstone proving to be the winner were regarded as so remote that the colt went to the post a veritable outsider, as can be gathered from the fact that the betting against him was at the long odds of 50 to 1, a fact, however, that did not prevent his beating Plenipotentiary, the winner of the Derby of that year, and coming in an easy victor by a couple of lengths in the "Derby of the North." Whether the Marquis felt especially grateful to the "outsider" for winning him his first St. Leger, or whether it was his after successes that endeared him to his owner, is immaterial, but that he entertained a great regard for the horse is certain from the fact that the skeleton of his famous colt is preserved at Eaton Hall to this day. It is interesting to note in respect to the skeleton of Touchstone that for several years in succession a wren, admitted through an unglazed window, is stated to have built its nest within the bony cavity of the defunct racer's skull. Touchstone is not the only horse thus preserved. At York Museum, for instance, there is to be seen the skeleton of the winner of the Derby and Oaks of 1857, the famous filly, Blink Bonny, who lost the St. Leger of that year notwithstanding the fact that her chances were regarded as so roseate that her owner did not scruple to invest £3,000 upon her for this one event.

The St. Leger, it may be mentioned, has been twice, and only twice, won three times in succession —namely, from 1786 to 1788 inclusive, by Lord Archibald Hamilton: and from 1827 to 1829 inclusive, by the Hon. E. Petre, whose last win was achieved through the agency of a colt called Rowton who won the race that proved to be the third of the four Legers in which Sam Chiffney, the celebrated jockey, had the misfortune to come in second, after a close finish. Rowton was trained by the celebrated John Scott, who had to his credit sixteen winners of the St. Leger, six winners of the Derby and nine winners of the Oaks, and on the decease of that horse he secured a relic of him in the shape of a shankbone, which he had fashioned into the handle of a carving-knife.

In the great horseshoe collection of Mr. W. G. Newbery, of Chicago, which comprises 500 examples taken from the hoofs of almost as many famous horses, there is a shoe of General Philip Sheridan's Winchester charger, a horse that became almost as well known in the American Civil War as the dashing cavalry leader who bestrode him. This animal is now mounted, and is to be seen in the War Museum at Washington, where he probably attracts far more attention than the relic of the greatest equine hero of all time. The remains of the horse in question, the never-to-be-forgotten Eclipse(who received his name, by the way, from the fact that he was foaled on 1st April 1764, on which day a remarkable eclipse of the sun occurred), whose bones fetched 100 guineas in 1860, are now preserved at the College of Veterinary Surgeons in Red Lion Square. Several relics in addition to the skeleton of this unbeaten horse and remarkable sire exist, of which perhaps the most famous is in the possession of the Jockey Club. In the May of 1832, William IV., having entertained the Club at dinner at St. James's Palace, whose mess-room boasts the hoof of Napoleon's charger, Marengo, which has been adapted for use as a snuff-box, produced, when the wine was on the table, a hoof of Eclipse which had been handsomely mounted in the centre of the gold salver, and forthwith presented the same to his guests. The hoof, which has a covering of gold on which is engraved a portrait of Eclipse, bears in front the Royal Arms raised in gold, and is supported by a pedestal of gold suitably inscribed. On the same day that the aforementioned Rowton ran his last race but one, it ended in a dead-heat, which had to be run off, for the Ascot Cup, the hoof, together with £200, presented by the King, and a £100 sweepstake, was raced for over the same course for the first time. For several years afterwards there was a race for the hoof by horses the property of members of the Jockey Club, who had the exclusive right to challenge for it: but with the accession of Queen Victoria the practice was discontinued. This is not the only relic of the famous sire in existence, for in addition to a pin with a horse's head, made from another of his hoofs, and a piece of his skin, covered with fine, light chestnut coloured hair, which is one of the treasured possessions of Lord Rosebery, a quantity of hair from his mane and tail were woven into the lash and wristband of the Newmarket Challenge Whip, a trophy (said to have been given by Charles II. as a prize) that is now seldom raced for.

Apropos of mounted hoofs, a very remarkable relic of a distinguished officer's charger was recovered from a captive Boer convoy in the course of the late war, and was afterwards exhibited at the Glasgow Exhibition two years ago. How the relic in question, which comprised the hoofs of Sir William Gomm's Waterloo horse and a bullet taken from his head, ever came into the possession of a Boer was not explained, and will probably remain a mystery. The relic, which was silver-mounted and fashioned to form an ink-well, bore an inscription to the following effect: "The hoof of Donnybrook, the charger of Major-General Johnstone, C.B., late 33rd (Duke of Wellington's) regiment, during great part of the Crimean campaign." The lid of the ink-well, it should be added, included the Crimean medal of the owner of Donnybrook, who evidently intended that his trophy should be unique.

When in 1899 the unfortunate French horse Holocauste had to be killed, having broken the pastern bone of his right foreleg in his attempt to wrest from Flying Fox the "Blue Riband of the Turf," the number of relics carried away from the course by the spectators, and the fierce demand for the same, entailed many a grey-coloured horse that had never visited a racecourse, except in the capacity of motive power to a travelling caravan, losing the best part of his tail and mane. It was, however, the irony of Fate that the hide of this celebrated racehorse should be used for boots. But if the advertisement that was displayed in a certain bootmaker's shop—which stated that the skin was to be utilised for human foot coverings, all orders for which should receive prompt attention—can be relied upon, a considerable number of people can (or could, for the footgear in question must be almost worn out by now) claim to possess a very remarkable relic of a famous racehorse.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—Things are somewhat dull after the busy times of the Horse and Dog Show, the Polo Tournament, the big race meeting and the cycle race meeting. Six events are announced for the second extra day's racing which takes place on the 3rd proximo, and it is to be hoped they will fill.

Captain Randall is here for a short visit, but returns to Poona almost at once, where, besides another win, I notice that he rode his very handsome mare Blue Blood to victory, subsequently selling her at a good price. Watson, the trainer, and Burns, the jockey, have followed the flight of the other racing people to Poona and only Oscar Dignum is still with us. He does not, he tells me, intend going to Poona this year—that is so far as his little string is concerned at any rate.

Trap-shooting began on the 21st instant and notwithstanding threatening weather a fair start was made. It being the opening of the season, however, the shooting mainly consisted of practice, although one handicap sweepstakes of four birds each was brought off, Mr. Cottrel Dormer of the Carabiniers winning with four really clever kills in which he never used his second barrel. Paperchases continue, notwithstanding that the going is now pretty heavy, for a good deal of rain has fallen; but although riders are keen and large fields the rule, I have not so far heard anything definite about the average cups which were hoped for. They will, however, become, I think, accomplished facts before long.

There have been few more enjoyable afternoon's amusements than that provided by Major Edwards and the officers of the gallant 3rd Queen's Own Light Cavalry by means of an admirably devised and charmingly executed programme of Gymkhana sports, an afternoon enjoyable even to those of us on the outskirts—for an excellent view could be obtained in the utmost of comfort from the Grand Stand just in front of and below which was the arena of sport. On the good principle that "if you want a thing done well do it yourself" Major Edwards himself performed the duties of master of the ceremonies—and no one had reason to repent of the decision.

A tug-of-war on pony back did not result in any prolonged contest—soft hands (and soft seats!) resulting in rapidity of results. The Diana Stakes attracted only three entries and it was early apparent that the saddling of obstreperous horseflesh is not ordinarily comprised in the curriculum of young ladies' seminaries. In due course of time Miss Doddington and Mr. Smith won with saddles girthed in a fashion which brought looks of scorn and contempt to the usually dull visages of the surrounding syces.

The Polo pony scramble was a capital event eminently calculated to test speed, stopping and cleverness, and I am afraid to hazard a guess as to the number of competitors. At any rate it had to be run in several heats, and eventually Mr. Shaw on Baby, a smart little grey Arab, cleverly beat Colonel Eccles' Lady Betty by half a length; not a very brilliant performance on the part of the latter racing pony.

Much amusement was afforded by the Geographical Knowledge Stakes which Mrs. Griffith and Mr. Marriott captured after a searching examination.

The Ladies' Nomination Scurry fell to the selection of Miss Doddington, Pomfret being landed a winner in Captain Casson's most artistic manner. In this three-furlong heat no less than 3 heats were necessary before the decider and there was some capital racing on the sand track.

Excellent lepping was next the order of the day, Mr. Boase's ubiquitous Dawn winning handsomely —a real useful all-round horse it is to be sure. While Mrs. Anderson's charming little waler mare Frida, piloted by Captain Hewlett, put the decision for pony jumping beyond a reasonable doubt and thoroughly deserved its first place.

A cotillion race in which a corresponding coloured ribbon had to be captured from a branpie was won by Miss Muir Mackenzie and Captain Casson. Mrs. Edwards kindly distributed the prizes and every one went away thoroughly pleased with a most pleasurable afternoon's sport and much kind hospitality.

Watson has arrived with Mr. Apear's illustrious string and naturally Great Scot was the centre of attraction and a marvellous fine horse he is, filling the eye wonderfully and apparently pleasant enough to ride. Very different to his possible rival Presbyterian, who seems a demon of the first order and no child's pony or old gentleman's confidential hack.

That clever and painstaking veteran trainer, Andrew Clarke has worked wonders with Haydn, who, from being a real hot handful, has become delightfully tractable and that her newly-attained amiability has not interfered with her speed was very apparent from the ease with which she romped in over her pet four furlongs, at which distance I fancy anything that can beat her is likely to occupy first place in the contest.

Clarke has, too, used magical influence with the little English horse Misty, who was, it is said, cast out by Charles Bleach last year in Bombay as worthless. Yet Misty was only just beaten over a mile by Alix and had the little black had more justice done him by his jockey the verdict would in my opinion have been reversed. A good performance for a "despised and rejected" "cast off" and one of which the old man may well be proud.

A vastly improved pony too is Patrician, and a more than useful one. His negociation of hurdles is as near perfection as doesn't matter and I shall be surprised if we have as yet seen his best form on the flat. As the aptly named little bit of blood is of the "trained by owner" brigade Colonel Hazelton may well be gratified with his amateur efforts.

I see that Mr. Bass has appropriated by purchase Captain Greville's well-known country-bred Tamring and the Australian pony mare Stockbell, a recent winner of a closed race at Poona. The former charming C.-B. is an awkward height and is completely exposed and must in all justice be fully taken care of by the weight allotter, while Stockbell has yet to show that she is of the lasting sort, so that at their advertized prices Mr. Bass can scarcely be said to have picked up bargains, though with careful placing both may possibly pay a share of their purchase money.

They will doubtless remain in their present stable under the care of Charles Bleach with whom Captain Greville must have every reason to be satisfied. Little accidents, as when Propeller was allowed to start almost if not entirely unbacked and came out and won handsomely and when Scattercash also won unbacked beating the stable selection, are liable to occur "in the best regulated families," but no one has the art of turning his his horses out more "cherry ripe" than this rising trainer who wins not only in his turn, but out of it, and the large number of horses and ponies entrusted to his charge testifies amply to his popularity as a trainer.

Every one was glad to welcome back to Poona Major-General Burnett, who has been on short leave to England. Few have, I believe, done more for the interests of the Western India Turf Club and his genial disposition makes him immensely popular with all creeds and classes.

I see that two or three misguided sportsmen have floundered into public print with the object of exposing the unjust cruelty of the handicapper—not to any one else but to each of them personally! Indeed if all one reads be true the name of Cursetjee should be added to the number of the Relentless Fates, and so many horses are "handicapped hopelessly out of it" that it is rather difficult to the non-racing gent to grasp how any horse can win, as from the mournful lucubrations of these sorrow-stricken owners one is led to believe that every horse in the race will drop down half way from sheer exhaustion at the crushing impost apportioned by the malevolent handicapper.

The ingenuous suggestion that each owner should be furnished with exhaustive reasons for the weight apportioned to his racing gee gee might, however, possibly not suit everyone's taste, for home truths are not always palatable. "Present company excepted" (needless to say) it is just possible that in his allotment of weights a handicapper is guided by a gallop which (inopportunely for those most concerned) he may have chanced to witness. Or he may in his simplicity think that getting left at the post or going curiously wide at the corner was scarcely calculated to display a horse's real form or that on a certain day when one of his victims ran ("beaten to blazes" as the owner would ostentatiously insist on) the poor horse might have been suffering from flatulency or a pain in his tummy—or jaw—or one of these places which in the opinion of the handicapper prevent the afflicted quadruped from being quite at his best on the occasion in question. The fact is that in Mr. Cursetjee the W. I. T. C. have undoubtedly the best handicapper in Asia. I imagine no handicapper has made fewer mistakes and he is certainly not likely, I would imagine, to fall into the mistake of imagining that horses that have shown form of highest class in England and Australia have been sent to Sunny Ind merely for change of air. That such horses must be handicapped on their top form is obvious, and personal appeals to the press, are not I fancy, likely to deter him or any handicapper from his sense of what is right.

The Calcutta Subscription Room seems to be increasing in popularity every week. The convenience to the public has been thoroughly demonstrated and we have no doubt that under the present vigorous and capable management, the membership by the end of the current year will be very large.

The wellk-nown horse steamer Argus collided with the steamer Mildura in Sydney Harbour on the 31st July and was so extensively damaged that she had to be beached on Goat Island. The Argus had on board a large number of horses for Singapore and Calcutta, also the Sultan of Johore and his followers. She was floated off a day or two afterwards and her cargo landed. No lives were lost.

A Hundred Years Ago.

(From "The Sporting Magazine" of 1803.)

At the late assizes at York a trial came on relative to a Turf affair. A match was to be rode by gentlemen only; but the person who won was not admitted to be a gentleman and the amount of the sweepstakes was therefore refused to him. On this the action was brought, and of course entirely turned on the question whether he was a gentleman or not. He had a verdict in his favour

This trial has occasioned as much conversation and "bad blood" in Yorkshire as if the fate of the whole county had depended on it. The counsel was rather at a loss what questions would draw forth the characteristics of a gentleman. The following may serve as a specimen:—

Q. Do you regard him, the rider, as a gentleman?

A. Not in the general acceptation of the word.

Q. Does he generally enjoy the sports of the field like other gentlemen, and kill game?

A. I suppose so: he takes out a license.

Q. Did you ever see him do a dirty action?

A. I never did.

Q. Do you reckon him a gentleman?

A. Aye, to be sure I do.

Q. You are a farmer I understand: does he not attend the markets like other farmers; and when there, dines with them at an ordinary, where the expenses seldom exceed two shillings per head?

A. Yes, he does.

One of the evidence (sic) in accounting for this person riding the horse, said that the rider did not pretend to be a gentleman: but that he had made a promise when drunk to ride the horse, and that he would sooner go home dead than break his word.

Here the plaintiff's counsel, in a half whisper, said, surely this is a little symptomatic of the gentleman, he seems to be the pink of gentility.

Another question was put to an evidence.

Q. What is his character?

A. He is a very honest man; but is neither considered by others as a gentleman, nor does he, I believe, consider himself so.

Q. Is it not very common in the country to call gentlemen by their Christian names?

A. We know of no such instances except where there is a great familiarity between the parties.

Such were the principal questions used to prove the characteristics of a gentleman in order to enable him to ride a match as a gentleman. The plaintiff's counsel, who made a very ingenious speech in the closing trial, laid down that "the strong leading traits, the striking features in the character of a gentleman were a good education, liberal manners, moral good conduct and independence of station"; and maintained that the gentleman in question had not been proved deficient in any of these and we heartily wish the same could be said of all gentlemen on the Turf.

The court crowded on this trial beyond any former precedent.

Athletic Notes.

THE following teams have entered for the annual Durand Football Tournament to be held at Simla from the 14th September:—Royal Welsh Fusiliers, 12th Lancers, Royal Artillery, Meerut and Jutogh, the Gordon Highlanders, the Black Watch, Simla Volunteers, Royal Irish Rifles, the New Club, Simla, Royal Irish Fusiliers, Old Cottoneans (from Bishop Cotton's School, Simla) and the Queens. The Hampshires, holders of the Cup, are unable to send a team.

A full report of the Madras B. C. hot weather regatta appears among our rowing news: in matters aquatic the M. B. C. are just now showing the other rowing clubs in India an example.

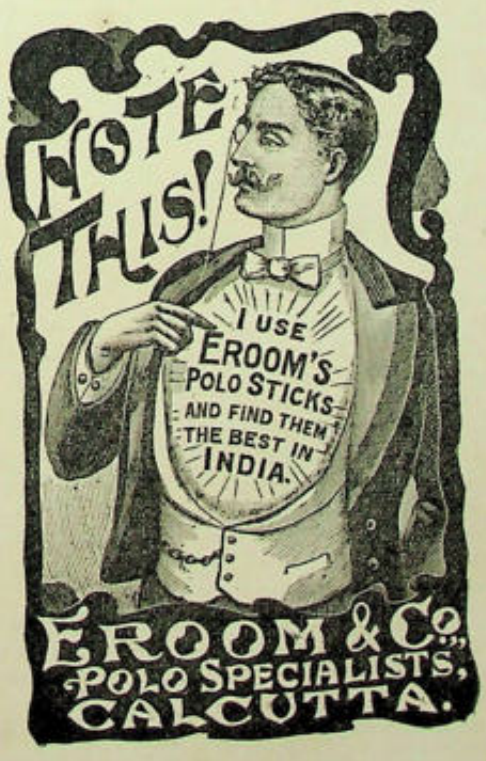
Alfred Shrubb ran the three miles at Horsham on the 3rd instant in 14 mins. 22⅘ secs. thus beating by 2⅘ secs. the previous world's grass record put up by himself.

Mr. R. M. Robertson of the Black Watch won the Gulmarg Golf Tournament by three up and two to play, Mrs. Davis was the lady winner with two up.

Warwickshire beat Hampshire by 132 runs on the 22nd instant and Lancashire beat Notts by five wickets. The matches between Middlesex and Sussex, Kent and Yorkshire and Somersetshire vs. Surrey were drawn.

There may be some Golfers in India who will hear with regret of the tragic death of Mr. W. G. Stewart, well known on the Preswick and other links. He shot himself at Troon in Ayrshire on the 6th instant.

Bicycle polo is going strong in Southern India. Last week a team from Bangalore visited Madras and after a very one-sided game the visitors won by 4 goals to nil. There were four chuckers of 15 minutes each. Mr. Oakley, of Bangalore, played a splendid game and was well backed up by Theagaraj. The Madras team were not in training and though they played hard were quite outclassed.



Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—There is a sort of hiatus in the athletic world here at present. That is to say nothing very big or energetic is being done, and cricketers of note especially seem slow at getting under weigh this season. Possibly when the continued showery weather which we are experiencing "lets up" on us, some good matches will be seen.

John Roberts, the billiard player, arrived in Rangoon from Singapore on the 23rd instant.

The return billiard match between the Howrah United Club and the Dalhousie Club was played on Saturday and resulted in a win for the United Club by three games to one. The United Club was represented by the same players as played on the last occasion, namely, Messrs. Barbour, Doran, Dyer and Ribbins, while the Dalhousie Club had Messrs. Baker, Hollis, Holwell and Mead. Baker beat Barbour easily by 42 points. The game between Doran and Holwell was a very even one, the Howrah man eventually winning by 9 points. Ribbins beat Mead by 38 points after an exciting game. Hollis was not up to his usual form and was defeated by Dyer by 45 points.

It is quite a long time since a century was put up in Indian cricket, but F. P. Colabawalla playing in the match between the Baronet C. C. and Bombay Gymkhana and visitors last week made a hundred not out, and Mr. Telang 101 in the Hindoos vs. Poona Gymkhana Match.

Corpl. C. Checkley of the Black Watch, well known at Indian Athletic Meetings, has been running at home lately, and, as will be seen from the report of the Army Athletic Meeting at Aldershot in our London Sporting Letter to-day, he was placed second in the three miles to Sergt. F. Moore, who beat him by three hundred yards in 15mins. 40secs.

In the Simla tennis handicap the Men's Doubles have been won by Captains Turner and Beynon, who beat Major C. Clay and Mr. Mitchell in the finals.

Our Bombay correspondent writes :—In another three weeks the Bombay Rovers' Association Football Tournament will commence, and I learn from those responsible for the arrangements that it gives every promise of success. Up to the present (23rd August) twelve teams have entered, six more are expected to send in their names, and there is every probability of the tournament extending over three weeks. To invest it with special interest, the Committee have decided to arrange a match before the tournament commences between twenty-two picked players from the different teams competing, and this will inaugurate the tournament, the proceeds of the match being devoted to local charities. Entries close on 5th September and the ties will be drawn two days later. Up to the present the following teams have entered: The Buffs, Poona; the Oxford Light Infantry, Poona; the Warwickshire Regiment, Belgaum; the Royal Scots, Kamptee; the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, Calcutta; the West Yorkshire Regiment, Quetta; the Cheshire Regiment, Quetta; the North Staffordshire Regiment, Bombay; the Royal Field Artillery, Kirkee; the Lincolnshire Regiment, Secunderabad; the Seaforth Highlanders, Nasirabad; and the Bombay Rovers, Bombay. The other teams expected to enter are: The Royal Artillery, Bombay; the South Lancashire Regiment, Jubbulpore; the York and Lancashire Regiment, Mhow; the Bombay Gymkhana, Bombay; the Calcutta Football Club, Calcutta; and the Essex Regiment, Bangalore. Last year the Cup was won by the Cheshires, who, it will be observed, have again decided to come all the way down from Quetta in order to take part in the tournament. Given fine weather, I have every hope of the tournament proving one of the most successful on record, for included in the above are practically all the crack military teams of India.

During the past week rain has once more interfered with play in connexion with the Harwood Association Football League, several matches having to be postponed. Monday and Tuesday were fine, but on Wednesday the rain came down in torrents and in a very short space of time both the Oval and Cooperage were once more converted into swamps, and rendered absolutely unplayable. The only match decided was that between the North Staffords' "B" team, who still figure at the head of the league table, and the Rovers. For my own part, I thought the military representatives would not experience much difficulty in adding another victory to their list. But such did not prove to be the case. The Rovers have this year secured the services of a number of new players, and now that they have become accustomed to each other's play they are a fairly strong combination. The match under notice proved to be a fast and well contested one, and there were frequent bits of bright play. The ball was rapidly taken from end to end, and the defence of both elevens was severely taxed, but proved safe. In the end the game resulted in a pointless draw. The next meeting between these teams will be looked forward to with interest. As I mention above, the North Staffords' "B" team still heads the league table with 15 points, their "A" team coming next with 11 points, while the Royal Garrison Artillery and the Rovers are bracketted third with 10 points each. It should be mentioned, however, that both the Rovers and the Staffords' "B" team have played ten matches, whereas the Staffords' "A" team and the R. G. A. have only played six and seven, respectively.

With the first Parsee Presidency match over and the second a month ahead, things in the local cricket world have quieted down considerably. Yesterday (Saturday) the Bombay Gymkhana played a drawn game with the Elphinstone College, whom the Gymkhana Reserves defeated only about a month ago. The Gymkhana had a strong team out, but with the exception of Cheetham, Lumsden, and Armes, they failed miserably in the batting department against the bowling of Vakil, who took seven wickets at a cost of 44 runs. With nine wickets down for 120 runs they declared their innings closed, Lumsden contributing 40, Cheetham 39 and Armes 18 to the total. Only a short time remained for play when the College went into bat, rain having interfered with play. When time arrived for drawing stumps they had lost ten wickets for 45 runs—the teams were twelve aside. For the Gymkhana Cheetham had the best bowling analysis, taking four wickets at a cost of 16 runs, while Lumsden took three for 14. The match ended in a draw greatly in favour of the Gymkhana. While on the subject of cricket, I have to refer with regret to the death of Major Horace Anderson, of the Supply and Transport Corps. The deceased left by the mail of the 15th, being then in a very critical condition, and died before the boat reached Aden, being buried at sea. He was a most useful slow bowler, and used to get a lot of wickets, whilst few cricketers took a keener interest in the game. He only returned from leave about nine months ago, and was a member of this year's Cricket Committee of the Bombay Gymkhana.

General Notes.

THE new Royal Indian Marine steamer, which is to replace that obsolete vessel the Clive, is to be called the Dufferin—a happy effort of nomenclature we think.

The news that Mr. T. R. Wynne will shortly return to Calcutta to resume the management of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, will be received with pleasure by his many friends here.

The Fancy Dress Ball given by the Knights of the Black Heart at Simla on the 19th instant was an immense success. The costumes were splendid and the function one of the most enjoyable and brilliant of the season.

The Rev. E. A. Copleston has been elected Bishop of Colombo and will be consecrated by the Metropolitan at St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta, on the 30th instant. The Bishops of Lahore and Nagpur will assist in the service.

That band of unconscious humorists, the Calcutta Municipal Commissioners, have given us something to laugh at in their draft rules for working of the Tramway. Those who have not had the good fortune to peruse this little effort are earnestly recommended to provide themselves with copies.

So far as Bangalore is concerned the case in which Lieutenants Plant and Rickford are charged with cheating is at an end. Lieutenant Plant was some days ago committed to take his trial at the High Court of Madras and Lieutenant Rickford was on the 21st instant awarded six weeks' simple imprisonment by Mr. L. Lloyd, I.C.S., the District Magistrate and Collector of Bangalore.

The following apart from being amusing shows what cheerful specimens there were in Government departments in South Africa just after the war: This one was a Captain of Irregular Horse—there are hundreds of 'em in every bar in the country—and at the time of the tale was in charge of that department in native affairs which makes marriages. Along comes Tommy Atkins and a Dutch woman wishing to be united in the holy bonds of matrimony. "Good enough" says the Captain, "bring me the marriage register." In this he enters the names, etc., makes them sign and thus sends them off a happy couple. Ten days later the lady turns up in tears.

"Well, what can I do for you" asks the warrior.

"Oh, Sir, you married me to a soldier 10 days ago."

"Well, well, what about that, ain't you happy?"

"No Sir. But that's not it, he's gone home; he's got another wife there!"

"Very sad, very sad; but I don't understand what you want now. What is it?"

"Please Sir, I don't want to be married to a man that already got a wife."

"Oh! is that all?" Boy bring me the register. This he gets, finds the entry, scratches his pen through it and remarks, "There you are, that's all right, you're married no longer." Divorce made easy indeed.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 7th August, 1903.

WHEN the hysterical gush of the daily papers has been discounted, enough solid fact remains to prove beyond doubt the com lete success of the visit of the King and Queen to Ireland. That a genuine—even if evanescent—feeling of personal loyalty has been evoked among the poorest class is vouched for by unprejudiced witnesses not likely to err on the side of sentimentality. And a still more valuable asset is the almost universal conviction among the peasantry that the King is a friend who takes a warm personal interest in their well-being. It is much to be hoped that the visit will be repeated without too long an interval.

It is satisfactory to note that some of the best of the weeklies are testifying against the exaggerated style indulged in by most of the dailies when reporting the public doings of the King—the outpourings on the occasion of his visits to Paris and Rome being flagrant cases in point. The loss of all sense of proportion from which the gentlemen of the press appear to be suffering is to be deplored. When from the humble pavement I have witnessed a Royal function—be it a State procession on the opening of Parliament, His Majesty going to welcome or speed a guest, a State visit to the City, or what not—I return thinking it has been a pleasant sight—His Majesty has been cordially greeted—perhaps not quite so much cheering as one would expect, but then people are too eager to see to remember to cheer. But when I open my paper next morning, I rub my eyes, and ask myself if this glorified demonstration, these rampantly loyal crowds this repetition of the days of Jubilee, can be the scene I witnessed only yesterday—if so, truly my eyes must have been holden that I saw not. That genius sees many things hidden from our meaner gaze is a truism, but verily X rayed vision must be needed to behold all that these reporting gentlemen set down. In the case of the Irish visit the hysterics do distinct harm, and to those who apparently imagine that a ten days' Royal visit will turn Ireland into a contented, loyal, and prosperous country we recommend the study of the King's eminently practical matter-of-fact speeches.

My curiosity was excited when in the Strand a fews days ago I saw three lines of differently coloured wooden bars on the north side of the roadway from the corner of Catherine Street to a point opposite Norfolk Street: marvelling much what these things might mean, I inquired and was told that the bars mark three alternative frontages of the Strand Improvement scheme, but whether they are placed there to enable the public or the L. C. C. to judge of their respective merits history sayeth not. The bar next the pavement marked, I was told, the frontage suggested by the Improvements Committee of the L. C. C., that furthest from it the frontage proposed by Mr. Hamo Thorneycroft, R. A., and the intermediate one that recommended by the Royal Institute of British Architects, and which they claim unites the advantages of Mr. Hamo Thorneycroft's scheme with the economy of that of the L. C. C.

If the L. C. C. plan is carried out there will be a bend in the north side of the Strand between the New Gaiety Theatre and the beginning of Aldwych which will cut off the view eastwards. Mr. Hamo Thorneycroft proposes that the thoroughfare should be straight, which would open up a fine view of St. Clement Danes and the Law Courts, but would necessitate the addition to the public way of land which is valued at £350,000. The British Architects propose a modification of Mr. Thorneycroft's plan which, though reducing the widths of the street would practically retain the view, at a cost of only £70,000 instead of £350,000. That both plans are superior to the original one of the L. C. C. is obvious, and that if Mr. Thorneycroft would secure such a striking thoroughfare through Aldwych to the broad Kingsway that it ought not to be lightly dismissed—but the economy of the august L. C. C. is apt to be ill-timed!

Landowners in and near London are to be envied. A small plot of land—less than a quarter of an acre adjoining Clapham Common—was sold the other day for £5,100. It was stated that the same property was sold about eight years ago for £2,700 and soon after re-sold to the vendor for £3,100.

I consider myself lucky in having heard the debate on the Motor Cars Bill on Tuesday which was not only interesting but also amusing in no slight degree. Mr. Long in moving the second reading, enlarged on the iniquities of the furious driver until it was evident that Mr. Balfour's conscience smote him as he recollected the evil deeds of his own chauffeur. After listening for some time with head bent and arms folded, he apparently suddenly recollected an important engagement, looked at his watch, and hurried out—the picture of conscious guilt. Mr. Soares, a Devonshire M.P., moved the rejection of the Bill in a most amusing speech. He drew a fearsome picture of the motor car with its blazing lamps and infernal din, rushing along the roads at night at a terrific pace; adding the prophetic warning "However quiet your horse may be, if there's a ditch handy you will be in it." He then lamented the charms of the country which under the motor terror have departed—not to return until a low speed limit is fixed. "No more happy children playing by the Road Side"—but kept indoors by careful mothers. No more "elegant balloon-like garments floating in the breeze after the weekly wash"—all dried indoors in consequence of the clouds of dust raised by the rushing motors and in consequence not so healthy in the wearing! Mr. Labouchere added yet another touch by his pathetic complaint that "old man as he was" he had "to skip and bound" out of the way of the cars driven at a reckless speed.

Listening to the debate one wondered to what distant bourne the friends of the motor car had betaken themselves. Its defenders might almost have been counted on the fingers of one hand, and after a debate of nearly three hours Mr. Long bowed before the storm and announced that the Government was prepared to give way on the questions of a speed limit, and test of competency before a license is granted. These concessions appeased Mr. Soares, who withdrew his amendment. Though the Bill was then read a second time its difficulties seem by no means over.

If the death of Mr. Phil May cannot be said to eclipse the gaiety of nations it at least deprives us Britishers of a fund of real enjoyment. No one has rendered the humours of the "Guttersnipe" so faithfully, and those of us who week by week have looked for his drawings in Punch the loss will be felt. If simplicity be the highest art, then indeed his must rank high and the unconscious pathos that underlay many of the amusing drawings added to their effect.

The agreement between the Government and the Cunard Company which was ratified without a division by the shareholders at their general meeting sounds a satisfactory one. By it the Government contracts to pay the company an annual subsidy of £150,000; and in addition to lend a sum "not exceeding £2,600,000" at 2¾ per cent. for the construction of two large and fast liners of the most approved modern type for the Liverpool and New York Service. Under the new agreement the mails will be carried at a higher speed than hitherto, the company being pledged to use its best ships in this service. The Cunard Company also undertakes that in future every new shareholder and every director shall be British. Also that the master, officers, engineers, and three-fourths of each crew shall be British subjects; and that all certificated officers (other than engineers) and not less than half of each crew shall belong to the R. N. R. The Admiralty also obtains the right to employ all Cunarders in war time, but since the ships are unarmoured the right would probably be rarely exercised. When the two new steamers are built in accordance with the Government requirements we shall once more possess liners equal if not superior to those lately built by Germany. As soon as it become known that German liners possessed the fastest, largest, and most comfortable steamers afloat trade naturally flocked to them, and that Britain should re-assert her ship-building supremacy is a matter for congratulation.

That tiresome, self satisfied person Mrs. Flora Annie Steel delivers her soul on the subject of "ladies' papers" in a recent number of the Saturday Review. She confesses that since she herself has entered the field of feminine literature the harsh propriety of a "regiment in India" which refused to admit ladies' papers to the ante-room of its officers' mess on the ground that they were not "proper reading" for the youthful and innocent British subs., has rankled in her breast. Poor thing! An unprejudiced mind is tempted to suspect that the exclusion of the papers in question was probably owing to their complete lack of interest rather than to their impropriety, but however that may be I can match Mrs. Steel's story of grandmotherly supervision of youthful morals by one for the truth of which I can vouch. A few years ago a lady of my acquaintance by no means elderly—neither prim nor puritanical—wishing to send a well-known "ladies' paper" to her brother, an officer in the Rifles, that he might see a full account of a friend's wedding, took the precaution of cutting out all the illustrated advertisements, to the end that his modesty might not suffer.

To return to Mrs. Steel, whose feelings, originally injured by the aforesaid Indian episode, were apparently goaded beyond endurance by "coming across" the dictum of a "well-known expert in such matters," to the effect that fashion and fiction constitute the only food that feminine minds are capable of digesting or that bring profit to the purveyor. Casting all dictates of prudence to the winds Mrs. Steel, on vengeance bent, sallied forth, and at an outlay of 10*s* 9*d* became the possessor of a copy of every ladies' paper published in the United Kingdom. That the literature was at least weighty is undeniable. Since Mrs. Steel complains pathetically that her purchase turned the scale at 11lbs. 5oz. the pernicious advertisement constituting four-fifths of the letterpress; not including what Mrs. Steel aptly call "the deftly inserted notices" that Lady So and So was "daintily gowned" by Madame Such-a-One. Having become possessed of her literature Mrs. Steel proceeded to read and digest it, and favours us with some of the deductions drawn therefrom. First, judging from the illustrations—that the crying need of the readers of the 6*d*. and 3*d*. papers, is the "Straight-fronted corset," and "the dainty blouse," that of the readers of the cheaper ones. The extreme regularity with which these desiderata vary according to the price, points in the opinion of Mrs. Steel to a "variety of economic morals"—a dark saying which I do not pretend to fathom. Whether the above deduction be correct I humbly confess myself unfitted to pronounce, but against another deduction, implied rather than openly expressed—that a woman who reads these "ladies' papers" is necessarily incapable of digesting any stronger mental diet—I humbly but energetically protest.

* * * * * *

The weather has been very favourable for the Cowes Week, and the racing on Tuesday for the King's Cup was extremely good. The victory of the German Emperor's yacht was too much of a foregone conclusion for the race to be exciting: and the match for yatchts exceeding 42ft. but not exceeding 52 was more interesting. Several motor launch races on the Solent are arranged; both small yacht launches and racing machines, and trials between steam and petrol-driven launches will probably be made.

* * * * * *

In spite of the interest expressed in the proposed mono-rail line between Liverpool and Manchester the scheme hangs fire, and the prospectus issued did not meet with sufficient support from the public to justify the promoters in proceeding to allotment. Doubts seem to have arisen as to whether the result could be as great as the sangaine hoped, and the ninety miles an hour done on the Brighton line the other day has opened the eyes of the public to the possibilities of our present lines. If the mono-rail system has all the advantages its admirers claim for it, more will be heard of it before 1906, the year in which its Act of Parliament stipulates that it shall be completed.

* * * * * *

Theatrical news this week is nil. The production of Emily adapted from David Copperfield at the Adelphi, is the only event of the slightest moment, and of that there is not much to be said. The first half of the play is good, when one takes into consideration the difficulty of adapting a story of Dickens' for the stage, but the second half is a hopeless muddle, and there was more than one instance of extreme carelessness in the presentation of the piece. The acting of Mr. Cartwright as Peggotty went far towards redeeming the many faults of the play, and Miss Ewell was excellent as Mrs. Gummidge.

Camp J., 26th May.—We are in touch again with our old friend the tigress that charged out at me without provocation. This is not the same camp J. as we were at when we were last after this tigress, but another J. rather closer to her haunts. We worked our way here through the jungles, but encountered nothing but a very stiff climb to the plateau we are now on. In the afternoon I devoted myself to the tigress, sitting over grazing cattle as N. did on a former occasion on which, it will be remembered, he caught a glimpse of the vixen. She did not, however, honour me with a visit this evening. N. did a stroll round in another direction, but with no success.

Camp J., 27th May 1901.—Both of us were out early this morning over bison ground. I could hit off no fresh tracks. N. came on recent ones of a solitary bull, but his trackers failed him in difficult ground, and he was forced to return to camp empty handed. In the afternoon we made one more effort to find the wily tigress that has defeated us so often. We walked up all her own particular haunts together, prepared at any time for a surprise charge, but the vixen had apparently decamped altogether, for no fresh tracks could be found of her anywhere. On the way back, close to camp N. shot a black buck with quite a good head for these parts. He was the same one I wounded on the 11th instant. It now appeared that I had broken his near fore on that occasion. Poor brute, would that I had missed him!

Camp J., 28th May 1901.—I pottered only this morning and got nothing, though I might have taken a long shot at a blue bull had I been that way inclined. I thought once that I heard a tiger, and as I made in the direction of his call, monkeys set up a fiendish yapping in front of me. After a good deal of stealthy walking and creeping, I got close up to them, but though they continued yapping, in ignorance of my presence, I could never find out what was disturbing them. When I got back to camp I found N. had failed to hit off any tracks of his bull of yesterday, and that he had returned somewhat disappointed in consequence. No kills were reported during the day, so there was nothing to be done but an evening stroll again during which I saw nothing, and N. failed to bag a barking deer. At dinner I received a telegram, by runner, ordering me to Simla forthwith. We certainly had not very much more leave left us, but it was rather annoying to have it spoilt in this way. I determined to commence my march homewards the next morning. N. decided to come with me as far as C., and then to stay on there for the rest of his leave.

Camp C., 29th May 1901.—We shot our way in here this morning by different lines, but did nothing. I got on the fresh tracks of a bull bison, but eventually lost them in long grass, and then jogged on to camp without firing a shot. N. saw nothing but a doe antelope which he knocked over for the pot: and very welcome she was, for we had had nothing but "moorgie" for some time, the buck shot on the 27th being quite unfit for food. In the afternoon the accounts of the trip had to be settled up before we parted the next day, so no shooting was done.

Camp B., 30th May 1901.—A wearisome march, 16 miles, by myself. Good old N. left at C. where I think he will get sport. After breakfast here I wrote many letters, amongst which was one to the little Raja at L. telling him that I would be at L. on the 1st June, and asking him, if the tigress that had defeated N. and myself on our way out was still alive, to make arrangements for a beat during my halt there.

Camp K., 31st May 1901.—An uninteresting march of 12 miles: nothing to shoot, and country most uninteresting.

Camp L., 1st June 1901.—A rather trying march of 15 miles. I was very hopeful to-day of being able to circumvent the tigress that N. and I devoted the 25th, 26th, and 27th April last to. She was known to live in the famous Chandennee Nullah, about 5 miles from L.: but on our way out we had made the mistake of actually encamping on this nullah with the result that she made tracks on the night of our arrival and we never got on terms with her. I was determined to make no such mistake this time, and, as this diary shows, wrote two days ago to warn the L. Raja that I proposed to encamp at L. but was ready, on the day of my halt there, to beat the Chandennee nullah for the tigress if he knew she was there, and would make the necessary arrangements. On arrival at the nullah I found no beaters, and nothing arranged for a beat, so I could only presume that the tigress was not at home. This was confirmed by one or two villagers I came across drawing their water from the nullah. They said the tigress had not been seen or heard of since N. and I had driven her away a month and-a-half ago. There was nothing to be done then but rode on to my camp at L. which I reached about eleven o'clock. It was a piping hot day and I was glad to get to my tent to tub and change before failing to at breakfast. At this meal I told my servants they could put away my rifles and gun as the shooting trip was over.

Breakfast over, I took myself to a book, and was fast becoming drowsy when a breathless messenger came running into camp, and was brought at once before me. His news was that not long after I had left the Chandennee Nullah for L., a few men were grazing their cattle alongside it, when the tigress sprang out at one of them, missed him, and withdrew at once into the nullah again. This was news indeed, and knowing the boldness of the tigress, and the excellent stronghold she had in the nullah, I felt sure that the herdsmen having disturbed her would make no difference, so I determined at once to make a bid for her. I knew the nullah well; it was very narrow, and crowded over with brushwood; no place to put men into when you knew there was a tiger there that had very little fear of men. So, without delay, I sent my compliments to the Raja, and asked him for once to bestir himself, and collect as many buffaloes at the nullah as he possibly could, and as soon as he possibly could. It was now one o'clock, and the heat was intense, and I knew the difficulty there would be in concentrating a lot of buffaloes for me at that time of day at a spot five miles away. But at the same time I knew the L. people were very anxious to be rid of the tigress, so I looked for help from them with some confidence. However, no body of natives will really hurry over anything, as we know from experience; so, having given all necessary orders, I returned to my tent for the mid-day siesta I had been deprived of, and which I was in need of, having been up since 4 A.M. I did not give myself too long a rest. At 2 P.M. my boy roused me, and a quarter of an hour afterwards I was in the saddle riding for the nullah. This I reached at about three o'clock. Not a sign of anybody but my shikaris with my machan and rifles, and the man who knew where the tigress was. He showed us where the old vixen had dashed out at his companion. Knowing this, and counting on her not having moved in the heat of the day, I proceeded to select a tree for my machan. This was no easy matter. The trees N. and I had occupied, when we beat for this tigress before, were now no good, one because it was too bare, and the other because it was full of red ants. These trees undoubtedly commanded the only two lines by which the tigress could come, but as they could not, on this occasion, be occupied, there was nothing for it but to go on a bit further and look for some other tree which would give a single gun some chance in the beat that was coming. After much searching I found one which commanded, in a way, though not very satisfactorily, the two lines which our old trees controlled. The command of the line of exit on my right was poor, but I did not bother so much about that, as I did not look on it as a likely line to be taken by the tigress. The second and important line, in fact the main nullah itself, ran close under my tree on my left, but was so overcrowded with brushwood that a shot was almost an impossibility. There was only one thing to be done, for I made certain the tigress would come this way, and that was to clear some sort of opening through the brushwood through which I could get a shot. There was not much time to spare but my few men and I worked hard, and in the end cut an opening big enough to give me, from my tree, a command for a few paces of the deep dark nullah below. It was past four when we had got this done, the sun was beginning to take a downward course on the west, and the intense and suffocating heat of the day was passing off. There was no time to be lost; but, much to my annoyance, when I got back to the road where I had left my pony, only a few buffaloes had arrived. I waited patiently on till 5 P.M., by which time I had collected about forty. I could not wait any longer: the evening was upon as; so with these forty I made my effort. Chote Khan, the shikari, had run the beat before and knew exactly what had to be done. Indeed, there was no difficulty about it: the buffaloes only had to be steadily driven through every bit of the narrow overgrown nullah, right up to my tree. It took a long long time to do, and I could realise, from my tree, what difficulties the herdsmen experienced in keeping their buffaloes to the nullah. Very anxiously I sat in my tree until past six—not a sign of a tigress anywhere. The sun was almost down, and the one open spot in the nullah in which I hoped to get my shot was black as pitch. The buffaloes were within 60 or 70 yards of me. Had she again defeated me this tigress? I could hardly think it. No, for there she was before me, standing under the very tree N. was in when we last beat this nullah for her, and the very tree that I had discarded for this beat because I thought it was too bare. She had come, as I expected, stealthily down the nullah to that point, and there she had jumped up on to the bank to see whether she had better continue on down the main nullah, or take the branch nullah which my old tree, now covered with red ants, commanded. She stood for a second, a grand sight in the fading light, broad side on to me, and I could have shot her as she stood, had I been ready for her. But though I was very much alert she had decidedly taken me by surprise by popping up at that point. I got my rifle up and had just drawn a head on her when down she dropped into the main nullah again. Now, I felt, I had her. She must come down it and past the opening I had made in it. Turning in my machan I therefore sat facing that opening with my rifle at the present. I could hear her now, quite distinctly walking through the water in the nullah, and coming steadily on in my direction. The sun was down and there was very little light left, but just enough for me to see her come to the opening and stoop to look up at it. All I could really see well was her white chest. Into this I aimed and fired without loss of time. There was a grunt, a great splashing of water, and then darkness and silence for a second or two. I did not know what had happened. I had very little doubt about my shot, but where was the tigress? There she goes, creeping back on the bank of the nullah, right back towards the buffaloes. Just a glimpse I caught of her, and no more—no time for a second shot. Night was now fast closing in on us, and it was not fair to ask any man or beast to go in after the tigress in that light, so I now yelled from my machan to the shikari to withdraw the buffaloes, and then to make a detour and come round and help me out of my machan. This he did in time, and when I got down from the tree I was not able to see the sights of my rifle. Nothing more could be done that night, that was very plain. So I withdrew from the scene with caution, and then assembled my herdsmen, and told them that I knew I must have mortally wounded the tigress, and that if they would come and help me the next morning with their buffaloes, we should probably find her dead. In any case, if she were alive, I would rid them of her for good. I knew I ought to be continuing my march the next day, in order to get to Simla on the date I had fixed, but I was sure no Commander-in-Chief in India would wish me to leave a wounded tigress behind me; and so that night, before I turned in, a halt for the next day was arranged, and an early assembly of herdsmen with their buffaloes.

Camp L., 2nd June 1901.—So keen were the petty royalty of this place, and their dependents on my getting rid of this troublesome tigress, that when I turned out at about 6 A.M., I found that everything was in readiness for me; buffaloes had gone on, an elephant was at my disposal, and everything ready. By 8 A.M. we were all out on the ground. First I went and looked up the spot where I had my shot; but no trace of blood, or tracks, could I find anywhere. However, I had no doubts about my shot of the night before, and I knew, too, that the tigress had gone back, not forward; so I put the buffaloes in about 200 yards back, and then went forward to await the tigress if she could move, which I doubted. The brushwood in and on the banks of the nullah was so thick that not a man could move in it, so I had no fear of any herdsman recklessly getting into danger; all the herdsmen had to do was to stay outside, and keep their buffaloes inside steadily moving forwards. I had not long to wait. Within a quarter of an hour the snorts from the buffaloes, and the yells from the herdsmen, told me the tigress was found. Then came a shot from my shikari who had my spare rifle, and who had asked my permission to take it with him with the buffaloes on this occasion. With every nerve strained, I awaited what I thought would now be the final rough-and-tumble with the tigress, but she came not. In her stead came the shikari, breathless with excitement. He said they had found the tigress, she was alive, but very badly wounded, and he had fired at her, and then bolted to tell me. She was still alive, he insisted; but apparently unable to move. Would I come and kill her? I did not understand the situation at all. How the deuce the shikari had got into the brushwood at all to fire a shot I could not make out; and why the tigress should allow him to come crawling through the thick undergrowth to take a shot was another mystery. Of course I went back with him at once to try and settle the matter. The few men that there were with the buffaloes were all well out of danger, clean away from the narrow nullah in which I could hear the buffaloes snorting, and splashing in the water. The shikari and I made our way towards these beasts, creeping and crawling through the undergrowth with the greatest difficulty. Before long I found myself close up to the buffaloes, and the shikari whispered to me that the tigress was just in front of them. A little more crawling, and I found myself opposite the tigress, she on one bank and I on the other, with the small nullah containing some 15 buffaloes, between us. I saw at once she was dead, but, to run no risks, fired a shot into her to make quite sure. Getting no move out of her at all I went across the nullah, and crawled up to her. I must say her body was still warm and limp, so she may have been just alive when my shikari fired his shot at her. If she was she must, I think, have been absolutely in extremis and unable to move, or she would never have let the buffaloes practically surround her, as they did, without a struggle: nor would she have let my shikari come up as he did. I am inclined to think she must have been dead before he came up with her. Any how, if that was so, she can only have died a very short time before. If she was not dead before he came up, she must have been so near her end as to be unable to move. The shikari's story to me was that she raised her head slightly and looked at him, and then he fired, scrambled back through the thicket as best he could, and doubled round to tell me. I am afraid he was rather excited when he told me this story, and we must not be too ready to accept it as absolutely correct. However, be the truth what it may, the Chandennee tigress was dead, and I was heartily glad, for she might have given a lot of trouble in that nasty little nullah. She was not a big one at all, in fact, very small, only 7 feet 7 inches straight measurement, and 7 feet 11 inches along the curves. She had been the mother of cubs, too, and was still carrying a little milk, but where her cubs were, I do not know. A wiry, active, vicious brute, she had been, doing a great deal of damage round Chandennee for many months back, and the L. Raja, and all the people of his little kingdom, were very grateful to me for having at last got rid of her for them. I afterwards spoke very severely and seriously to my shikari, Chhote Khan, for the reckless way in which he had crawled up behind the buffaloes contrary to my orders. But he will do the same again, next chance he has, I am sure of that. I had the tigress back in camp by 11 A.M., and after getting one or two very good photos of her, proceeded with the skinning operations without loss of time, as I was anxious not to lose another day. By the way, I forgot to mention that my shot of the evening before had entered the chest, and gone through the full length of the body, passing through all the vitals, so how the tigress lived through the night I don't know.

With the tigress ended my last shoot in India I grieve to say; and in my remaining forced marches home the sad thought was ever before me that my trusty old 500 and ten bore must at last part company with me. It is hard to have to turn one's back for good as far as one can see on all one's happy hunting grounds, and to pass to the hands of another the trusty weapons that have pulled me through in many a tight place.

I was delighted to hear, when I got up to Simla, that N. had bagged two more tigers and a bear after I left him. So our two months' trip altogether produced—

Eight tigers.	One blue bull.
One bison.	One black buck.
Two bears.	One muntjac.
One panther.	Two pigs
One sambur.	Two wild dogs
One bara singha.

Besides black partridge, hares, whistling teal, grouse, green pigeon, etc.—not a great "general" bag, certainly, but decidedly a good one as far as tigers were concerned.

Shooting.

CALCUTTA REVOLVER CLUB.

THE second long range prize competition was held at Milton Park on Saturday last. The shooting was with either hand and the range 50 yards.

The first prize was won by Mr. W. Boeckel.

Mr W Boeckel	...	...	...	30—1=29
„ M Mertig	...	...	...	28+1=29
„ J K Chase	...	...	...	28—2=26

The Gentlemen vs. Players match at the Oval in 1872 was won by the first-named. W. G. Grace on this occasion added 117 to the score, and this fact caused Robert Carpenter to Comment upon the hard work it had entailed.

"I've just about had enough of fielding for Mr. Grace this week,' said he; "but thank goodness in the next match I shall be on his side.'

At Lord's they played for England vs. Nottinghamshire and Yorkshire. Grace, as usual, batted first, and a couple of wickets down for 77 when he was joined by Carpenter. The Doctor was in fine form, and scored as rapidly as he ever did. There were no boundary hits, every ball was hit away, and at the end of an hour, when Carpenter was caught out at the wicket, they had put on a hundred runs of which the retiring player had made thirty-six. He had a fine reception, for he was over forty years old, and had played with a wonderful amount of fire.

"Well, old chap," one of the players said to him. "you ought to feel happy to-day."

"Feel happy!" retorted the batsman. "If I had been in much longer I should have died. Why, it's much harder work to be in with him than fielding against him. When you're fielding you do get a rest now and again, but when he's batting you never do!"

GAME SANCTUARIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The success that has attended the establishment of the game sanctuary in the southern province of Ceylon should prove an incentive to instituting similar places of refuge in India. Unmolested, furnished with good grazing shelter and water deer have multiplied in a most remarkble degree; the inspection report reads more like the narrative of a jaunt through a deer park at home: a herd of sambur having to be, what the writer calls, "shooed" out of the way. The true sportsman will hardly appreciate such domestication. Buffalo also have flourished in a like manner. I have not as yet seen anything published in regard to His Highness the Nizam's preserves, but presume equally satisfactory results have been attained there, injunctions in these matters being better observed in Native States than in British territory. I have no experience of the Singhalese buffalo, but have a pretty intimate acquaintance with his Bengal congener and should attempt "shooing" a herd of these somewhat aggressive bovines with considerable trepidation, being by no means sure that the response would not be a short "yek, yek," followed by a forward demonstration of very decided character. No mention is made as to the increase of the felidæ, but it may be assumed that, on the principle of "where the carcase is," etc, etc., they also have increased and multiplied: "shooing" in their case we would rather do by deputy, but as, except when on the war path, bagh and his brethren are of a retiring disposition, resort to that means of clearing the path would not perhaps be necessary. With such well-stocked larders we might wean such brutes as the Kordema tiger and others, from their partiality for human flesh, so Government aid in game preservation may reasonably be solicited on the score of humanity. Of selected sites far enough removed from cultivation there is no dearth and the dream I have frequently indulged in of well-stocked moors and deer forests seem within measureable distance of being realized, though it must be confessed we in Bengal would find game conservation a rather more onerous undertaking on account of the potshooter, and the frequency of grass and forest fires, but even these may be dodged or controlled, and India at no distant date may furnish genuine hunters with as good inducements as the pretty nearly exhausted deer preserves in Europe. From the outset, however, one may hope the drive and battue will be vigorously discouraged.

THE COMMON KITE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—"Raoul" is of opinion (vide his letter of 3rd) that the kites retire into Central India to breed at this time of year. Against this theory there are the objections that the kites are only away for seven weeks, and that the kites in Central India are reported to breed at the same time of the year as they do in Bengal, i.e., from January to April. It would be a matter of interest to many of those of your readers who live in the places where the kites congregate in the rains if they would give us the names of those places, and, if possible, what it is that constitutes the attraction.

I heard from Midnapur on 14th instant that Snipe had been seen; but the exact date was not mentioned. There are none here yet.

I saw Golden Plover on 10th instant and a Sandpiper on the 12th. I also saw five kites on the 12th instant, but they have gone away again.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The last number of the Ibis amongst its many interesting articles contains one that will arrest the attention of all ornithologists, not only on account of its merit—which is great—but because it initiates a departure in the custom of naming new species.

The article I refer to is that of Mr. Boyd Alexander on the Birds of Fernando Po.

In this article it will be seen that there are some 34 species bearing names given by the author; of these species the specific name of no less than 12 is the extremely simple one of poensis. This name, though it shows rather a lack of imaginative power, or perhaps merely the lack of knowledge of Latin and Greek, is, in itself, one to which no one can take objection. Of the remaining species, it is most amusing to find that no less than nine are called after relations of the discover and author. Of the remaining 13, 11 are called after friends, etc., but the majority of these are ornithologists or men of note, such as Sclater, Sharpe Shelly, Maxwell, etc.

I remember that some time ago a big man in Australia asked to have a certain bird named after his wife, much to the amusement of some ornithologists and to the indignation of others, but Mr. Alexander seems to have gone far beyond this and himself named the birds in honour of his relations.

He does not seem as yet to have named any after himself. Is he waiting for some more important discovery before labelling his own surname to it?

In the same number of the Ibis there are notices of two papers in the Proceedings of the U. S. Nat. Mus. which will interest Indian ornithologists.

The first of these is a paper on the Andamans and Nicobars, but this must be read in conjunction with certain other papers, such as Butler's in the Bombay Natural History Journal, which Mr. Richmond seems to have ignored. Thus Astur obsoletus will possibly turn out only to be A. butleri and other names may have to be suppressed.

The same remarks refer to the second paper on birds from Sumatra by the same author.

"Shooting at ordinary temperatures, the pressures registered gave an average of 12·87 tons per square inch chamber pressure, at a temperature of 140° Fahr., the standard reached was 15·93 tons, which is well under the service pressure of several of the ordinary express Cartridges.

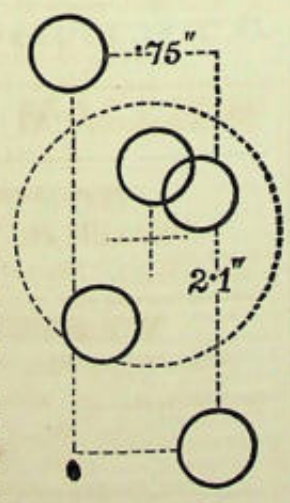
"COUNTY GENTLEMAN."

"The whole trial was of the most satisfactory character..... pressures were such as to leave a margin of safety to the shooter."



ABSOLUTELY SAFE.

"THE FIELD," May 9th, 1903.

"Messrs. Josheph Lang & Son, Ld., have been very prompt in submitting for our notice a rifle which has been chambered and regulated for firing the new No. 2 nitro cartridge.....A thoroughly sound and well turned out piece of work.....maximum of strength and ease of extraction. Very high velocities.....most marvellous run of uniformity. In fact, it would be extremely difficult to find an instance where equally well authenticated experiments have shown such satisfactory readings."

Five shots at 100 yards with the new No. 2 Nitro Cartridge, fired in a LANG Rifle. Centres of shot holes fell within 2·1 in. by ·75 in. Average deviation from point of mean impact ·7 in.

"THE FIELD." A fine piece of shooting.

Price from 20 Guineas.

Third Meeting, Saturday, 22nd August 1903.

IN spite of the heavy going the racing this afternoon was distinctly good, and the handicapping brought about some rare good finishes, favourites having a rocky time of it on the whole. The finish of the Pony Plate resulted in a win for Perfect, and a dead heat for second place between those stable companions First Guide and Yuletide; Second Thought who started favourite seemed to find the mud too much for her. A fine race and a capital finish was had the Ellenborough Plate which Fairlight with that clever professional Carter up and carrying 11 stone won from Kittylea, who was receiving 1 stone 4lbs. The Amateur Plate was whitteld down to a field of four, of whom Firefly was most fancied; but the race was not particularly interesting as Sir Humphrey chose to be in one of his worst tempers and disposing of his rider early in the race left only three in it and Firefly won easily. Sweet Talk won the Small Pony Handicap being very nicely, ridden by Mr. Deakin. A surprise was served up in the Kidderpore Plate when Mr. Raban brought Metalwing home after a good race with Loch Arden a red hot favourite. We congratulate Mr. Raban on the way he rode the winner; he has not had the best of luck in the Monsoon Meetings. Gassima won the Middleton Plate from Oom Paul, Euryalus filling the other shop. It was a day out for the G. R.'s who rode five winners out of the six races, Mr. Deakin bringing off a double events. Other features are referred to in our Sporting Notes. Appended are details :—

PONY PLATE.—Rs. 400 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. A High Weight Handicap for Arabs and C.-B.'s 14-2, and other ponies 14-1 and under. 6 furlongs.

POONA SIXTH EXTRA MEETING.

Saturday, 22nd August 1903.

THE tipsters, touts and know-alls were clean out of it to-day, recent rain having made the course so heavy as to seriously depreciate the chances of the top weights. As a matter of fact only one favourite won and that was in the last race when backers who were utterly disheartened over the succession of knocks they had received refrained from laying 2 to 1 on the aged but speedy Farewell.

The day's racing was remarkable for the fine lot of horses and ponies entered, but as most of the events were handicaps and the classy ones were well taken care of, and the going was not on top, no line can be got of their running.

Achilles with 9st. 7lbs. to carry over a mile appeared to be doing so easily as the field of four swept into the straight, but here he was challenged by Hakum, but the grey seemed to stave it off. Omerkhan, however, encouraged Hakum with whip and spur to have another try and riding a vigorous finish landed his mount a winner by a neck. Achilles responded to Robinson's call when challenged at the finish but the weight evidently told.

Grey Leg, despite his failure to win last Saturday, was well supported for the Lilliputs and he certainly on form should have accounted for the event, but Greyleg as usual failed when the pinch came. He raced up the straight with Hermit battling on with apparently a stout heart, but when Hermit stuck to him the grey gave way and lost by half a length. Kour Saheb was close up, third, but he is not running as well as he did at the opening meetings.

Olga, despite her owner's silly protest in the newpapers against the handicap allotted this mare, was evidently fancied as she went out favourite. The wise referred the chances of Malice, who for the course had just the weight to suit her. Min was overhandicapped and as a consequence the talent did not reckon her chances good. Wink was making a reappearance, and as his owner was present, looking quite himself after his recent illness, and the pony looked so well there was a bit of a run on him; but he was absolutely done with after leading at a rare bat to the bend. Olga then led, but Malice had the race in hand and won comfortably when sent to the front by Hoyt. Min came up nicely at the end, but it was too much to ask her to carry the weight in the sodden going closer than she did. How Tom Scott must have smiled when he saw the feather weight which was allotted to Malice and how she won!

The Cup presented by Lord Northcote was won by Captain Benn's Regret and I was glad to see Captain Casson A.-D.-C. to General Burnett filling the saddle in such an accomplished manner. Hamilton looked as if he would once more surprise his owners by winning, but he could not keep up the lead he had held up to in front of the Grand Stand.

Presbyterian made his debut on the Indian Turf in the next event. He looked big and well and behaved well in the paddock and at the gate. He drew a good berth, but as he has a reputation for flinging the hoof the other owners appealed to the starter and the English horse was placed on the outside. He was allowed to go out at 10 to 1 against—further comment is unnecessary. Beadsman, who was supposed to be "accommodated" was made an odds on favourite, but the young ones went too fast for him. The field hardly saw the way Roscommon with 6st. up went; he streaked away with Melson lying low on his neck and won easily from Blue Blood with Beadsman third and Spark fourth.

That Titus II could beat Money Spinner and Shah Jehan giving them both weight seemed incredible, but he ran a rare good pony and leading throughout won by a length from Shah Jehan, favourite third. Money Spinner after all seems to have been a trifle over-rated. The old sprinter Farewell after a long absence from the turf came out and won the Selling Plate. Details:—

THE COLOMBO AUGUST MEETING.

Fourth Day, Saturday, 15th August 1903.

THE August meeting was brought to a conclusion to-day in the presence of a large attendance, including Their Excellencies the Governor and Lady Ridgeway. The rain which had hreatened in the morning held off and the afternoon was a bright one. There were fair fields and good sport. Mr. Williams won the Fort Plate Handicap, the big race of the day, Afreet being brought in an easy winner. Mr. Farquharson secured the Military Handicap and the Open Handicap, while Silver One's victory in the Stewards' Handicap came as a surprise to most. The Colombo races have been a great success and Mr. F. J. Hadden is to be congratulated on his handicapping. Details:—

CALCUTTA COURSE CHAT.

LAST Thursday there was the usual amount of fast work put in, followed by a lull on Friday, with quick spurts on Saturday. Among those at it I noted more particularly Bin Rashid (native), Lady Froude (Bond) and Chernside (Piper) putting in some fast work, honours going to the latter. If he's anything like the Werribee Park Squire, whom he's named after, he's real good.

Then Yellow Mantle and Not Yet with P. Morrison and Hard up, respectively, went a smart spin.

Pekin and Granny were worked fast. The latter is running well forward.

Mr. Raban exercised First Guide with Mr. Deakin on another from this stable, I think Yuletide

Mr. Dudley had out Oom Paul and Snapshot.

Piper went three-quarter speed on Shirley. When this horse is at the top of his form I think his owner will get a return for his enterprise. Euryalus was also galloped by Smallman.

Major Cook was out with Johnston in the saddle. He looks an improving horse, but somehow he has never realized expectations.

Mr. Galstaun took a turn with Gassima, Mr. Creet has a real genuine racer here I know nothing that has come under my eye these monsoons, that can give this mare a point in appearance, and she's as good as she looks.

I must say the English horse appears to always carry the palm in the matter of good looks.

I saw Ramshaw in the enclosure, also Harry Ryder. The latter has just returned from Victoria and told me he was quite glad to leave, the cold being too much for him after 33 years of Indian life : the snow was bad enough, he said, but the frost was unbearable.

Denny Norton too I had a chat with. He has brought up a likely little lot of horses for the private market.

Ramshaw, P. Morrison, and Gerrard left on Saturday evening for Poona.

Harry Hard severs his connection with Mr. Galstaun's stable after the next meeting, when he will be open for engagements. He intends proceeding up-country and being steady, hard working and a handy weight he ought to command a fair share of riding.

Mr. Bannerjee I understand, has added Yuletide, to his string.

Monday, owing to the rain, was a blank on the course and on Tuesday, though the usual things were out for exercise, nothing in the shape of work was in progress ; in fact, the horses that have been battling for the past three meetings are put on the easy side, and some of them could do with a bit of rest.

Mr Raban was exercising Metalwing, and Hard and Morrison, jr., had out George Robinson's lot.

Bond and Piper were doing the same for Smallman.

A remarkable feature of Saturday's racing was the success of the amateurs. The pros. will have to look to it if they are to keep a hold on our little Monsoon meetings.

Walker has been taking a lot of trouble and care with Trollop. He looked very fit as he passed me with King, a new arrival from Singapore, in the saddle. This horse has not run yet this season, but will do so on the 12th September, and will be quite worth attention, as when others will be a bit stale, he will be the reverse, and I think you will see him giving Clynder and the best of them a warm time.

Wednesday morning was on the slow side, only exercise being put in.

Mr. Galstaun has very good accounts of his first string, all doing well ; Hoop Iron being so full of himself that the other morning he popped Jimmy Robinson out of the saddle.

Foster came out in charge of Friar Tuck, and as this capable hand landed Vasto well, he may safely be looked on to do the same by Mr. Galstaun's new importation.

Trahan has had the misfortune to lose Toketeo, a new arrival, the horse dying last night at the Bhowanipore stables.

Mr. Bell-Irving was in the enclosure, looking much better though naturally reduced. Metalwing, we hear goes to England.

Norton had a number of his new ponies under the standard yesterday morning. They are a real good looking lot.

GOODWOOD MEETING.

THERE are genuine grounds for regret that a concatenation of adverse circumstances combined to rob the present Goodwood celebration of most of its traditional glory. The fact that the King was unable to patronise the reunion, and that sickness and accident depleted the fields for the principal weight-for-age contests of many of the premier exponents of public form, exerted a deterrent influence upon the gathering, but these drawbacks paled into insignificance in comparison with the miseries of the weather, which would have sufficed to wreck the fortunes of any outdoor function. With such high-class juveniles as St. Amant, Huntly, Fiancée Vergia, Leucadia, Merryman, and Henry the First sporting silk during the week, no exception could be taken to the quality of the juvenile racing, and the sprint handicaps, as usual, aroused great interest; but the poverty of our present-day Cup form was flagrantly exposed, and there was a marked absence of three-year-olds of acknowledged merit. The inadequate nature of the stands was never more strikingly exemplified, and the Duke of Richmond and the Earl of March must be warmly congratulated upon their decision to replace the present buildings, which were erected as far back as 1829, by a modern and up-to-date structure before the next meeting comes round.

THE CHESTERFIELD CUP (handicap)—Of 627 sovs. One mile and a quarter.

(Winner trained by H. Sadler, at Newmarket.)

Betting: 6 to 5 on San Rose, 5 to 2 agst. Hammerkop, 10 to 1 each Florinda and Red Lily, and 100 to 9 Flying Ivy (o).

Won in a canter by three lengths; two lengths between second and third. Florinda was fourth. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2mins. 41½secs.

BRIGHTON AUGUST MEETING.

The opening afternoon's proceedings in connection with this meeting were not favoured with very favourable weather. There was a strong wind and rain fell at intervals, but although the attendance fell below the average, the company was nevertheless a numerous one. Sport maintained its interest throughout, and backers did fairly well. A year ago at this meeting Star of Hanover ran second in the Marine Plate, but on the third instant Mr Curtis's horse won the event, though only after a desperate finish with Patientia. The Brighton Stakes fell to Lucinda, last year's winner of this race, Rathburne being unplaced. By a neck Goggles secured the Ovingdean Plate, but Consequence gained a somewhat easy victory in the Hassocks Plate, subsequently being bought in for 210 guineas. The Henfield Plate was taken by Egmont, who afterwards changed hands for 260 guineas, the surplus of 160 guineas over the conditional selling price being shared by Mr. H. J. King, whose Amurath finished second, and the race fund. The Corporation Plate was won very cleverly by Angelic (her first bracket); and sport concluded when St. Medoc cantered home for the Alfriston Plate. Randall and Trigg rode two winners each.

THE BRIGHTON STAKES (handicap)—Of 437 sovs. One mile and a half.

Mr C Hibbert's b m Lucinda, by Sir Visto—Sister Lucy, 5 yrs, 8st, 4lbs ...	Trigg	1

BETTING: 6 to 4 agst Magdala filly, 11 to 4 Pegaway colt, 4 to 1 Wayfarer, 8 to 1 Angelic and 10 to 1 Chronos.

Won cleverly by three parts of a length; half a length divided second and third. Chronos was last throughout.

The second day's proceedings in connection with the Brighton August Meeting were favoured with fine weather, the sun shining brightly, and consequently the attendance showed a considerable improvement over the first day. The card again contained seven events, but the principal item the Brighton Cup, dwindled down to a match between Zinfandel and Imperator, although sixteen were left in out of an original entry of twenty-two. Those who desired to wager on the event had to lay 20 to 1 on Lord Howard de Walden's colt, who eventually won in a canter by six lengths and thus gained his fourth consecutive bracket. Two years ago O'Donovan Rossa captured the Sussex Stakes, this being his last victory prior to yesterday, when he secured the corresponding event, but after his recent performances he was little fancied. Wild Willow took the Rottingdean Plate, and the Rose Marjorie filly won the Stanmer Plate afterwards changing hands for 220 guineas. Venta, who landed the odds laid on her for the Juvenile Plate, was bought in for 450 guineas, the surplus of 400 guineas over the conditional selling price being shared by Mr. J. Buchanan (whose Claudius finished second) and the race fund. In June Mr. Bottomley paid 590 guineas for the filly. Other winners at the meeting were the Hilda mare and the Duke of Devonshire's Slowburn.

THE BRIGHTON CUP—Of 485 sovs, for three-year-olds; colts 9st, fillies and geldings 8st 11lbs; with allowances. One mile and a quarter.

(Winner trained by Mr. G. S. Davies, at Michel Grove.)

BETTING: 7 to 4 Indian Corn, 5 to 1 Tickets, 100 to 14 Patientia, 10 to 1 O'Donovan Rossa, 100 to 8 each His Lordship, Fosco, and Mimicry, 100 to 7 each Mountain Daisy and Hartfield, and 20 to 1 Albina.

Won by three parts of a length; a length and a half between second and third. Albina was fourth, His Lordship fifth, Tickets sixth, Indian Corn seventh, Fosco next, and Hartfield last throughout. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min 12 2secs.

Delightful weather prevailed for the concluding stage of this meeting on the 6th instant, the company was more numerous than on the two preceeding days, and sport ruled interesting throughout. Backers had a remarkably good time, five of the favourites rewarding them. Noblesse made amends for his display in the Liverpool Cup by capturing the High-weight Handicap, winning easily from Flying Ivy and All Hot, and, having been got into the right humour, O'Donovan Rossa followed up his success of the previous afternoon by taking the Southdown Plate, defeating Floriform by three lengths. After securing the Bramber Plate, Blue Diamond was bought in for 190 guineas. Mr. Peebles's Value made her début in this event and ran well only being beaten by three-quarters of a lengths. She is by Burnaby out of Philobelle. Heroury gained his fourth bracket by winning the Cliftonvile Plate, showing fine speed in the last quarter of a mile. Trigg had a couple of successful mounts.

THE CALCUTTA CUP TOURNAMENT.

The fifth, or semi-final, rounds in the Calcutta Cup Tournament were played yesterday at St. Andrews. The weather was fine, but the wind again fresh and strong. Five players were in the field, and two matches went the round of the green in the morning, Mr. W. E. Fairlie having the bye. Mr. G. P. Elwens and Mr. D. Anderson played square. The latter made the best of the play, was 2 up when the end hole was reached, and ultimately won by 4 up and 3 to play, and passed into the semi-final. Col Kinloch played Major Elliot, the former conceding 9 strokes. Notwithstanding this, Col. Kinloch stood 2 up when the end hole was reached. The homeward play was very close, but the Major failed to recover the lost ground, Col. Kinloch winning by 2 and 1. The semi-final in the afternoon was between Mr. Fairlie and Mr. Anderson, and was witnessed by a large company. Mr. Anderson had a couple of strokes. At first the advantage was with Mr. Anderson, and he was leading at one time by four, but Mr. Fairlie carried off the eighth and ninth holes, and was only two behind at the turn In the second half-round Mr. Fairlie made the better play, and had the match on level terms at the third green. He took the lead at the next green, and carried his advantage to the end hole, winning an interesting match by a hole. The finalists were thus Mr. Fairlie and Col. Kinloch, and the match was decided this morning when Mr. Fairlie won beating the Colonel by 4 up and 3 to play.

ATHLETICS.

ARMY ATHLETIC MEETING.

This meeting, commenced on Tuesday, was brought to a successful finish on the ground at Queen's-avenue, Aldershot, on the 5th instant. The weeding-out process, gone through on the first day, had left in all the good men to compete in the second series and the finals, and though it was a case of a runaway race in more than one event, the finishes, as a rule, were close and exciting, and a large and critical body of spectators took great interest in the proceedings. Nearly every taste was catered for, running events, field events, dancing, gymnastics, and mounted competitions being decided in different parts of the ground. The first day's proceedings had given the supposed "line" to ultimate results, but, as is often the case more than one good thing failed to come off, and here and there a surprise cropped up, which gave additional flavour to the sport. Details:—

100 Yards Flat Race (privates).—Second round—Heat 1: Pte. Cutts, 1st Yorkshire Regt., 1; Drvr. Braithwaite, Royal Horse Artillery, 2; Gnr. B. T. Jackson, District Staff, 3. Won easily by five yards. Time—11secs Heat 2: Pte. W. Sharp 2nd Royal Highlanders, 1; Pte. C. Greaves, 1st Royal Berkshire Regt., 2; Sapr. Redfearn, Royal Engineers, 3. Sharp was well ahead at the half-distance, but he only won by a foot in 10 ⅘secs. Final heat: Pte. Cutts, 1st Yorkshire Regt., 1; Pte. W. Sharp, 2nd Royal Highlanders, 2; Pte. Greaves, 1st Berkshire Regt., 3; Drvr. Braithwaite, Royal Horse Artillery, 4. A fine finish, won by a foot; same between second and third. Time—10 ⅘-ecs.

One Mile Flat Race (privates).—Pte. J. Cunnane, Guards Depot, 1; Drvr. Garaty, 113th Battery Royal Field Artillery, 2; Pte. A. Birtwistle 3rd Scots Guards, 3; Pte. Atkinson, 1st East Surrey Regt., 4. Garaty led until half-way round the last lap, when Cunnane went to the front and won easily by ten yards; two between second and third. Time, 4min 48sec.

100 Yards Flat Race (non-com. officers).—Second round—Heat 1: Lance-Sergt. T. Watkins, 1st Gren. Guards, 1; Bombr. W. H. Dew, 26th Battery R. F. A., 2; Corpl. J. P. Jones, R. M. L. Infantry, 3. Won by a yard; three yards between second and third. Time—10 ⅘secs. Heat 2: Corpl. Calder, 1st Dragoons, 1; Sergt. T. Quanne, 2nd Royal Irish Regt., †; Lance-Corpl. C. W. Greaves, 1st Royal Berkshire Regt., †. Calder got badly away, but finishing well he won by a short yard; dead-heat for second place. Time—11 ⅘secs. Final heat: Lance-Sergt T. Watkins, 1st Grenadier Guards, 1; Bombr. W. H. Dew Royal Field Artillery, 2; Corpl. Calder, 1st Dragoons, 3; Sergt. Quanne, 2nd Royal Irish Regt., 4. Calder again lost a lot at the start, and Watkins, quickest away, made all the running and won by nearly two yards; a close finish for second place was given to Dew. Time—10 ⅘secs.

250 Yards Flat Race (non-commissioned officers of over fifteen years' service).—Colr. Sergt. Oldfield, 1st Rifle Brigade, 1; Lance-Sergt. J. Chessher 3rd East Lancashire Regt., 2; Qrmr.-Sergt. W. J. Kain Gymnastic Staff, 3. A good finish, won by two feet; a foot between second and third. Time—29 ⅘secs. Fifteen ran.

Quarter-mile Flat Race (privates).—Pte W. Sharp, 2nd Royal Highlanders 1; Sapr. R. W. Redfearn, 4th Company Royal Engineers, 2; Bandsman W. Cook, 4th Royal Warwick Regt., 3; Pte. J. Ainsley, 2nd Coldstream Guards 0; Pte. G. Williams, 1st Grenadier Guards, 0. Sharp drew out fifty yards from home and won cleverly by four yards; one between second and third. Time—55 ⅘secs.

100 Yards Flat Race (officers).—Second-Lieut. L. Goodeve, 2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers, 1; Lieut. T. A. N. Bolton, 2nd York and Lancaster Regt, 2; Capt. W. E. T. Christie, Army Service Corps, 3; Second-Lieut. R. H. Osborne, 2nd York and Lancaster Regt., 0; Second-Lieut. J. Kelsall, 2nd Dorset Regt., 0; Lieut. W. L. Kirby, Royal Field Artillery, 0. A grand race, Goodeve just getting home by a foot; inches between second and third. Time—10 ⅘secs

120 Yards Hurdle Race (non-commissioned officers).—Sergt. T. Quanne, 2nd Royal Irish Regt., 1; Staff Sergt. Canlon, Gymnastic Staff, 2; Lance-Corpl. W. Greaves, 1st Royal Berkshire Regt., 3; Bombr. W. Culmer, R. F. A., 0; Sergt. Ryan, 2nd North Stafford Regt., 0; Sergt. Callier, 1st Dragoons 0. Quanne began to draw away from the start, but catching the last hurdle he only won by a few inches; a yard between second and third. Callier fell. Time—18 ⅘secs.

120 Yards Hurdle Race (privates).—Pte. C. Greaves, 1st Royal Berkshire Regt., 1; Pte. H. Ashman Guards Depot, 2; Pte. Doherty, 1st Irish Guards, 3. Greaves got in front at the fourth obstacle and won by three yards: the same distance between second and third. Time—19 ⅘secs.

Quarter-mile Flat Race (non-commissioned officers).—Corpl. Percy Calder, 1st Royal Dragoons, 1; Lance-Sergt. T. Watkins, 1st Grenadier Guards, 2; Acting-Bombr. W. H. Dew, 26th Battery R.F.A., 3; Corpl. L. Williams, 4th Rifle Brigade, 0; Acting-Bombr. F. W. H. St. John, R.F.A., 0; Sergt. Conroy, 1st Yorkshire Regt., 0. Watkins was again quick off the mark, while Calder flagged at the start. As a result the Grenadier led by four yards at the half-distance. Once in the straight Calder made his effort, and, drawing away, he won easily by five yards; a poor third. Time—54secs.

120 Yards Hurdle Race (officers).—Second round: Heat 1: Lieut. R. F. A. Hobbs, Royal Engineers 1; Lieut M. D. Bell, Royal Garrison Artillery, 2; Second-Lieut. C. Garsia, Army Service Corps, 3. Six ran. Hobbs and Bell ran a good race home from the half-distance, which the first-named won by a yard; twice as much between second and third. Time—17 ⅘secs. Heat 2; Lieut. E A. Steel, Royal Horse Artillery, 1; Lieut. J. L. Phillips Y Battery R.H.A., 2; Second-Lieut. J. H. Pardoe, 2nd East Yorkshire Regt., 3. Steel took his timber in excellent form and won in smart fashion by a yard and a half; a good third. Time—17 ⅘secs.

Lieut. J. L. Phillips, Y Bettery R.H.A. ...	1
Lieut. R. F. A. Hobbs, Royal Engineers ...	2
Lieut. E. A. Steel, R.H.A.	3
Lieut. M. D. Bell, Royal Garrison Artillery	4

Phillips began to draw away at the half-distance and he won a good race by a yard; third close up. Time—16 ⅘secs.

200 Yards Handicap (officers) (one yard start for every year's Army service over five years, under-age service not to count).—Col. G. R. R. Savage, Royal Engineers, 32½ yards start, 1; Col. G. D. N Leake, Royal Army Medical Corps, 30½, 2; Lieut. T. A. N. Polton, 2nd York and Lancaster Regt., scratch, 3; Lieut T E. Harty, Royal Army Medical Corps, scratch, 0; Second-Lieut L. Goodeve, 2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers scratch, 0; Lieut.-Col. H. N. C. Heath, 1st Yorkshire L.I., 16, 0; Capt. H. T. Cantan, Duke of Cornwall's L.I., 18, 0; Sir Claude de Crespigny, 30½, 0. Won anyhow by fifteen yards. Time—20secs.

Quarter-mile Obstacle Race (non-commissioned officers and privates).—Staff-Sergt. G. S. Brown, Gymnastic Staff, 1; Staff-Sergt. W. Palmer, Gymnastic Staff, 2; Sergt. G. T. Rose, R.M. L.I., 3; Lance-Corpl. Cummins, 1st Surrey Regt., 4. Brown negotiated some very stiff obstacles in excellent manner and won easily.

Flat Race (Half-mile Championship of the Army, Challenge Cup, to be competed for each year by officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Regular Army only).—Pte. S. W. Ince 1st Scots Guards, 1; Lieut. W. H. M. Freestin, 2nd Somersetshire L.I., 2; Capt. W. E. T. Christie, Army Service Corps, 0; Acting-Bmbr. G. J. P. Walker, 32nd Company R.G.A., 0; Pte. A. Birtwistle, 3rd Scots Guards, 0; Corpl. L. Williams, 4th Rifle Brigade 0. After going a quarter the pace told on the field and even thus early the race was confined to Ince and Freestin. Half-way round the last lap the Guardsman spurted in splendid fashion, and, drawing away stride by stride, he won by fully fifty yards, Freestin easing when pursuit was hopeless. Time—2min 4 ⅘secs.

BOXING.

CONTESTS AT WONDERLAND.—Crowded to its utmost capacity was the huge building known as "Wonderland," in the Whitechapel-road, on Saturday, the 1st instant, when Mr. Harry Jacobs, who now has the sole control, put on a huge programme to please the holiday makers. His efforts were fully rewarded by the large attendance, and as the show lasted without a break for quite three hours and a half, the spectators went away throughly delighted. The list contained the first series of a 9st Novices' the semi finals of a 9st 6lb competition, a ten-round contest, and four of six rounds' duration. The tit-bit of the evening was, however, the contest between the veteran George Dixon (America) and "Digger" Stanley (Fulham). The coloured boxer was not only the heavier of the twain, but smarter with the gloves, and in the end gained a well-deserved verdict. Every bout throughout the evening was stubbornly contested, and at times the excitement was intense. Still, the best of order prevailed. The officials were: Referees, Messrs. J. Fineberg and R. Josephs; timekeeper, Mr. Sol. Davis; seconds, C. Smith, Jack Farley, Geo. Corfield, Bill Natty, and McGeorge Harris; whip, Albert Dixer. Details:—

GEORGE DIXON beat DIGGER STANLEY.

There was great excitement when this couple entered the ring. At the commencement caution was the order, and nothing particular was done until half-way through the second round, when Stanley shot out the left, but Dixon soon retaliated and bit by bit gradually assumed the upper hand. In the third and fourth rounds the coloured boxer was much the smarter at infighting, and scored heavily, and, though Stanley subsequently improved, he could not catch the other on points, so that Dixon was hailed the winner. At the close the victor received a big ovation.

Dave Barry (America) beat Jack Kingsland (Paddington).—Starting off at a terrific bat, they fought with great gusto for three rounds. Matters then slackened down. Barry had the cleverer left, and, always keeping it going, he frequently jabbed it on the mouth. Kingsland boxed pluckily, but had to put up with defeat.

TEN-ROUND CONTEST.

Young Josephs (Aldgate) beat Bert Slark (Holloway).—Fairly well matched, the couple sparred quietly in the first round. At the second and third meetings, however, Josephs set about his rival in great style, using left and right with effect. Slark, however, was not to be outdone, and, never losing his head, quite held his own in the next three rounds, but in the sixth Josephs kept scoring heavily with the left, and frequently swung the right round on the side of the head. They kept hand at it in the final stages, but Josephs had a trifle the best of the scoring, and received the verdict.

9st 6lb NOVICES' COMPETITION.

SEMI-FINAL.

Jack Lett (Rotherhite) beat Bob Cambridge (Bermondsey).—Lett had his man beaten in less than a round.

Matt Lee (Canning Town) beat Walter Boyns (Peckham).—The latter was knocked out in two minutes.

The final takes place next Saturday.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

HOUNDS met on the 20th instant at the Kandal Cross Roads. They took up a stale line which led them to Blackmore Vale and thence to Newmarket, where they went away at a rare pace. Down Rawling's Nullah, to the left across it, below Bluegums to Governor's Shola which they went through coming out at the top and crossing the Krurmund, here a cloud came down on the field who lost the hounds eventually finding them beyond Karemmada Shola.

B.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

KONDWA, over beyond the Poona slaughter yards, is I find a meeting place which many hesitate to patronize. Many a good run has been recorded to take place in that part of the hunting country, but those with valuable horses or one eye lamb ponder seriously as to whether le jeu vaut la chandelle—whether with a long season before them even a good run is worth bruised heels and cut feltocks. For the going is I am told appalling—more rocks and stones than footing! A late previous night's entertainment added to hesitancy a further excuse and many well-known faces were consequently absent from the trysting place on the 16th. But Colonel Sheringham seldom if ever "plays to the gallery" and is ever as ready to agonize to show sport to the keen few as the mingled multitude. On the present occasion he had a strong pack out and at the tick of the hour moved off to draw the range of hills on the right of the village. An accommodating jack—returning "home with the milk" from his recent carouse on the outskirts of the slaughter yard—was soon aroused from pleasant matitutinal contemplations by a joyous acknowledgment of his presence in the shape of mellow chorus from his legitimate enemies, and nothing loath to respond to their invitation he led hounds and field a merry dance away over the hill tops. Past Beebeewari Hamlet in the direction of the famous Katruj Tunnel on the old high road to Mahableshwar "Tommy for leather" they went as hard as horses could lay shoe to ground a good deal faster indeed than most of the horses could and only a few of the top sawyers were "really in it" throughout—a fast thing it evidently was and after galloping for something under 20 minutes from find to end hounds ran their jack to ground in an earth where digging out was practically impossible and even Colonel Sheringham's well-known love for blood (as I am told) could not be assuaged and Master and hounds had to rest satisfied with the moral victory which indeed many good and true sportsmen prefer nine times out of ten to the annihilation (with odds of say 55 to 1 against!) of the game little galloping varmints who add one of the greatest of zests to the life of hunting men.

After giving "all concerned" the much-needed breather and flask proprietors no doubt a grateful "swig" the Master sunk the hill and drew the valley beneath, where in a little crop land near the country cart track another jack was scented and hounds at once set to business. But out in this "land of regrets"—and of sport—there is evidently a very important factor which comes into play to assist the weak and unprotected. For if nature endow jack with self-connecting scent it also provides for the occasional semi-destruction of that scent by that all-Powerful scavenger the Sun and by this time it was coming out in all its power and drying up the morning dew and with it the tell-tale scent. Hounds were obviously puzzled and worked it out in fits and snatches with commendable diligence and eventually threw up the sponge—or at any rate their heads—in token of defeat and since the Master was unable to solve the difficulty little Reynard and the Sun were proclaimed the winners.

Fearing the worst no doubt, but hoping for the best the Master then drew along homewards towards the range of hills on which is the well known Lloyd's Ride—the remains of what must have been a delightful scamper over the watershed of the particular range of hills, a grass ride being cleared away through the stones innumerable at a wonderful expenditure of energy—military prison labour in the "good old days"! I believe. But who the illustrious Lloyd was history also doth not record though many a blessing has been showered on his memory for this thoughtful act of his as they would indeed be to any one who with a like energy and public spiritedness would put into repair this token of his good deed. For it is I am told—though I cannot stray so far a foot—one of the pleasantest and airiest rides near Poona. On this hill side a sprightly little chinkara jumped up in front of hounds who lost no time in responding to the impudent challenge. I see that a local sporting scribe opines that hounds would have captured their light limbed quarry had not a brace of foxen diverted their attention. But my shikari friend still shakes his head and smiles and added (in a tone which appeared to me to savour of sarcasm) that when Colonel Sheringham and his hounds ran a full-grown healthy chinkara down, fair and square, might he be there to see! In the present instance at any rate the apparently rare distinction was not to be achieved for splitting on the brace one grey fox "beat for cleverness" his followers, while the other made good his retreat in a stony earth whence human skill was unavailing to secure his eviction. Evidently a most sporting description of morning and many of the faint hearted and lie-a-bed brigade must have deeply repelled their lack of keenness on this particular morning. It is ill to trifle with the humours of the chaste Diana. Pashan, over against the hill of Ganesh—the god who has the honour of giving name to the country seat of the Governor of Bombay, was the order of the day on the 20th and five and twenty souls, whose ardour the continual downpour failed to dampen was there for whatever sport the fates might send. The Pashan Vale in wet weather is I am assured, a vale of tears, a slough of despond, and followers of the Devon and Somerset from all one reads of their treacherous bogs would have felt quite at home as there were apparently several admirable imitations of those alluring horse traps. The rain was practically unceasing and that takes a little gilt off the gingerbread, I trow, however keen a man may be, especially when one feels one's brave horse struggling through the clay, valiantly but sobbingly. Even jacks seemed to think it too wet to run, for a brace were killed without affording much sport I believe. Then one was found seeking shelter in some guava gardens but a purling stream on one side—too broad for pleasurable negociation on such a day—and a somewhat unappreciative field on the other were Scylla and Charybdis to the hapless one and it was not till he was sore pressed that preferring the evils he wot not of to the very present terror of Colonel Sheringham's ravening pack he broken through the cordon towards the hills pointing for Kothrud. Slow was the pace though fast enough for most through the slush and mire and to vary the monotony of life the gallant Master successfully discovered a bog hole and was extricated with difficulty and the sporting 1st whip with a praiseworthy loyalty followed suit. Meanwhile hounds were pegging along and the field tailing off. It was not in this instance the "pace that killed" but the plough, and when hounds who had hunted with remarkable persistency eventually threw up their heads and acknowledged their jack's superior skill and stoutness, not more than half a dozen horsemen were really with them. One cannot from all I gather conscientiously call it a brilliant day, but hounds worked well and patiently and for the horses' sake one could have wished they had been able to travel on the top of the ground instead of fetlock deep in mire.

Polo.

THE MEASUREMENT OF PONIES.

THERE is no subject which is less understood by the general body of spectators of polo than that of the measurement of ponies. It is a very common thing to hear people say, as they look over some famous pony: "Yes, but you don't call that a pony. I am sure he is fifteen hands—quite a little horse." This, no doubt, is sometimes true, though not nearly so often the case as is supposed by those who trust only to their eyes, which are very deceptive in the case of the height of ponies, because in fact the horse has no fixed height at the withers. Height varies from day to day, even from hour to hour, and depends upon whether the muscular attachment of the shoulder blade to the withers is relaxed or in a state of tension. Thus the height fixed (14-2h.) is purely arbitrary, and has only a comparatively slight relation to the actual size of the pony. All it means is that since it is necessary to have some limit, and since for the purposes of the game it matters little what that limit is, a pony must be able to stand in a natural position under a fixed standard of so many inches from the ground. The reason why 14 2h. was fixed upon is because it is found to be about the average height of horses all the world over, and it is probably the size to which horses would approximate if left to grow up under natural conditions, and in a fairly favourable climate. When, therefore, we read in the rules of polo that the height of polo ponies is fixed at 14-2h. this must be interpreted by the bye-laws which affect measurement and registration.

It has been said that the existence of this rule has a tendency to induce people to endeavour, by means very doubtful either in their honesty or humanity, to reduce large ponies to the standard. Of course the difference in value between a pony which has the Hurlingham certificate and one that has not is very great. If two ponies are of equal excellence, the one that had a certificate might sell for hundreds, while one without brought tens only. Yet it is the fact that the pony is protected by the uselessness of many of the means employed to reduce him in height. You must not cut his feet down too much, or even run the risk of destroying his usefulness for ever by bringing on laminitis. It seems moreover, as though a pony did not always recover from the combinations of sleeplessness, starvation, and drugs which have been tried. We think, ourselves, that almost the only safe and effective method of making a pony measure his least is to give him a sharp gallop beforehand on a chilly morning. We say to measure his least, because the object is to have big ponies caught at their smallest moments. The present official measurer, who has the confidence of all pony owners and breeders, stated in a court of law the other day that the same pony will differ as much as an inch or more within a few moments. We wish to emphasise this because so many people think that there is something unfair about the way ponies are measured. Yet there is little or nothing of what is known to the Kennel Club as "faking," and is condemned by that body. The rule practically states that a pony in order to be allowed to play in matches must have a certificate that it is 14-2h. when measured by Hurlingham rules.

Let us describe the process by which a pony may be fairly brought to measure. The first thing to be done is to study the rules and bye-laws. These are most admirable, and it is difficul to see how this matter, which is so important to the game, could be better regulated. In the first place as little room for tricking or "faking" as possible is left. The rules only forbid methods obviously cruel and unfair. You may shave the hair on the wither, you may pare the feet down There is no allowance for shoes. This last is wise, for Anglo-Indians will recollect that the allowance of ¼in. for shoes was productive of, to say the least, temptations to pony owners. Then the pony has to be measured by the official measurer (a veterinary surgeon of high standing) who has absolule discretion as to whether he shall reject or accept a pony. Indeed, it is laid down that he is not to accept for measurement animals that have been improperly treated. But within these limits there is nothing to prevent a pony being prepared for measurement in a legitimate way. The first point to consider is that a horse measures larger, as a rule, when he is at attention, and in the condition known to grooms as being "a bit above himself." Therefore, if we have doubts about a pony measuring, it is well to prepare him by cutting down his corn, giving soft food, and taking care he has plenty of walking exercise. It is not a bad plan, and does, of course, no harm to walk a pony some distance to the place of measurement. Other things being equal, the animal is more likely to measure less if he is a little tired. Then it is well to recollect that a horse has a great dislike of the unknown. Therefore he should be measured constantly at home in the attitude he will have to assume in the box. After a time the measuring standard will have no terrors for the pony, and he will stand as directed without trouble, and without resistance. Then the measurer's task is made easy and the owner's heart made glad. A pony then can be taught to measure, and in the course of the teaching the owner will learn whether it is really somewhere about the prescribed height.

In most cases it will be found that the pony measures far more easily than is expected How few animals are rejected! The late Sir Henry Simpson said not more than three per cent. That was in the early days. We should doubt if there were as many now. Nor is it necessary to despair because a pony will not measure all at once. We know one case where a pony took five years to come under the standard. The last time he was sold (before measurement) he brought £35; now ten times that sum would not buy him. The Hurlingham certificate is everywhere accepted It is as necessary to the show pony as to the playing pony, since without the certificate no mare can be entered in the Polo and Riding Pony Stud Book

There is, however, one weak spot. No means have been found yet to make measurement compulsory. The rule is not everywhere observed. A pony can be sold at auction as a "good polo pony," and if it does not measure it cannot be returned. The buyer must ask for the certificate before buying; if he does not he has no remedy. A pony might occasionally play even in London tournaments, and, if no one objected—and objections are rare—might be sold as having so played. Yet it might have no certificate, nor any likelihood of obtaining one. Such a pony might win prizes at shows, since most judges assume that all animals sent before them are of polo height, and have, of course, neither the means nor the technical knowledge to discover the real height. Nothing is commoner than for an animal that has every appearance of being 15h. to walk under the standard as easily as possible, and to convict objectors of rash statements. If we have ponies to measure, the first step (as already stated) is to make them go under the standard at home, and then the owner must ascertain when and where the official measurer is likely to be in his neighbourhood. Naturally it is an advantage to attend a measurement as early in the season as possible, since animals about which there is any doubt should not be brought into playing condition until after they have been measured. Having arrived at the place of measurement the owner fills up, if he has not already done so, a form of description, and pays a fee of 10s Then the measurer ages the pony, since a life certificate is only given if the pony is five years old. If it is less a certificate is given for a year only. Then the pony is handed over to the official measurer, neither the owner nor his servant being allowed to touch him. The pony is taken into a box with a level floor where he can see nothing and hear as little as possible, and there, in the presence of the measurer and one member of the Polo Committee, the pony is carefully measured. The attendance of the third person is optional by the rules, but is usual, and we have attended many measurements and occasionally gone into the box. The pony is stripped, and stands as nearly square as possible on its legs, and the head is held in a line with the withers, parallel with the floor This position having been arrived at, often with some patience and manœuvring, the height is taken from the heighest point of the withers, from which the hair should be carefully clipped. It may be shaved, but of course, when this has been done it may suggest a doubtful case to the mind of the measurer. If at any moment the pony measures, and the measurer is satisfied it was standing fairly, the certificate is granted, and would be fairly granted even if it was, as perhaps it is, the only moment of its life that the pony would be 14-2h. We have dealt with this subject carefully and at length because it is one of the most important, the most generally interesting, and the least understood part of the mechanism of polo.—The County Gentleman.

THE MADRAS BOAT CLUB.

THE HOT WEATHER REGATTA.

THIS Regatta was held on Saturday, the 15th, on the pleasant reaches of the Adyar near the Adyar Club, when the Madras Boat Club which has its Boat-house in the compound of the former club, was hospitably "At Home" to the members of other recognised clubs in Madras. The Regatta this year was without the interest and excitement which attended the same fixture last year when the representatives of the Calcutta Rowing Club were present and swept the board. We have been favoured with a bountiful south-west monsoon this year, with the result that the Adyar was full and there were not the usual difficulties to be encountered when we have the river "choked" with shallows and sand banks. The weather fortunately was perfect cool and cloudy, and a large and fashionable gathering witnessed the racing, the preliminary heats in the most important of which had been previously decided. Captain Thomas George Rocastle Finny, R.I.M., acted as starter, while the judging was done by the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Benson. The events themselves call for little comment, as mishaps spoilt two of the three chief races In the Junior Sculls a foul took place and the race was left undecided, and will be rowed over again to-day (Monday). In the Club Fours the bow of Wellman's crew early broke his oar, leaving Wilson's crew to finish alone.

The preliminary heats rowed off during the week resulted as follows:—

The Cups and prizes were given away by Mrs. Jackson. The function was preceded by a speech from the Hon'ble Sir Arnold White, who tendered the hearty congratulations of all present to the Committee of the Boat Club for the very excellent Regatta which they had witnessed that afternoon. The good sport which they had seen was ample proof that rowing in Madras was still very much alive. He should also like to offer his congratulations to Mr. Wilson and his crew for the very sportsman-like way in which they won the Cup. What might have happened if bow of Mr. Wellman's crew did not meet with the catastrophe, he could not say. However, there was no use in speculating about the matter and it could not be denied that the crew which won the Cup was an excellent crew. As they were all aware the Cup was initiated about six years ago to encourage rowing in Madras. The idea was to discover and develop good material and to send teams and crews elsewhere to compete with other crews. He hoped that that idea would be fulfilled. Madras unfortunately had not been conspicuously lucky in rowing. He had just been told that some of those who took part in the contests of that evening were proceeding to Colombo to try their luck against the Colombo Club. He trusted that when the event came off the Madras crew would meet with success.

Three cheers for Mrs. Jackson, and three more for Mr. W. W. Paul, the Acting Honorary Secretary, brought a most pleasant evening to a close. The Band of the 28th M. N. I. played during the afternoon.

RUGBY IN CALCUTTA.

CALCUTTA vs. CUSTOMS.—Played on the Calcutta ground on the 22nd instant the home team being strongly represented. The Customs kicked off, but their opponents soon got possession and after some brilliant passing by the three-quarters Landon crossed the line, P. Browne converting. On restarting the ball was brought down and another try scored, W. Browne doing the needful with a splendid kick. Before the interval two more tries were registered, one of which was improved on. After changing ends the visitors played hard and some good work was done but they never got dangerous and Calcutta scored two more tries through Macdonald and Siddons. The place failed on both occasions and time arrived leaving them victorious by three goals and 3 tries (21 points) to nil.

CASUALS vs. CITY.—These teams met on the Rangers' ground on Saturday, the City team who showed superior combination winning by a goal and a try to nil. Nothing was scored in the first half, but in the second period Williams and Schaumberg both got over, Grieff converting the second try.

CALCUTTA vs. UNITED SERVICES.—Played on the Calcutta ground on the 25th instant, the home team having the best of it throughout. Within a few minutes of the start F. Siddons crossed the line, but the place failed. A clever double by McLeod resulted in a second try, no goal resulting. McLeod ran in with a third try shortly after. Good play by Martelli gained a lot of ground and Dundas getting possession ran over with the fourth try which he succeeded in converting. Play ruled more even in the second half and nothing was scored till near the end when Sherman got over the line, Dundas kicking a fine goal. Calcutta thus won by two goals and three tries (19 points) to nil.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE form displayed by the Calcutta team in their recent matches has to a great extent confirmed the opinion expressed last week as to their developing into a far stronger side than the wearers of the red and white jersey have had for many years. As the fifteen which is to represent the premier club has not yet been finally decided on it is impossible to judge of their chances of wresting the Cup from the Welsh Regiment who are the present holders, but there is no doubt, after last Saturday's match against the Customs, that a radical change will have to be made in the half-back line and it is the difficulty of satisfactorily filling this position which is at present exercising the minds of the Selection Committee.

The newly-formed Armenian Club have, by their excellent exhibition against a strong Calcutta team stamped themselves as a side who are second only in local football to the premier club. The result of this match, which was contested in the best spirit by both teams, was in the balance right up to the call of time and the victory of Calcutta by 1 goal to nil was hard earned and represents pretty accurately the superiority of the winners Calcutta have been defeated previously by both the Customs and City teams, but it must be remembered that on both these occasions the home fifteen was far from being representative, whereas against the Armenians they were almost at full strength.

The Armenians have the advantage over most local teams of being thoroughly conversant with the laws and science of the game, and although they lack weight in the pack this weakness is to a great extent nullified by the cleverness with which they use their feet and their splendid tackling. Outside they have in Apcar and Yackjee two of the speediest and cleverest three-quarters in Calcutta whose only fault is their tendency to kick too frequently. At half-back they, like most other clubs, require strengthening. Creet is one of their best forwards and the whole team play with such dash that, if they are lucky in the draw, will assuredly take them into the final for the Cup.

The meetings of the Customs and City was fraught with a good deal of interest by reason of the fact that both teams had previously defeated Calcutta, but the match was a scrambling one and the Customs' victory was entirely due to another fine display by Rowe, who scored two extremely clever tries as the result of long individual runs from the region of the half-way line. Maitland was also noticeable for his speed and dodging powers in addition to which his tackling is sound, if at times unnecessarily forceful. Fitzgerald as usual was conspicuous in the loose.

For the City Williams worked hard but was playing far below his usual form and the forwards were completely beaten by the opposing pack. The three-quarter backs are fast but have absolutely no combination and are seldom fed by the men in front of them.

Calcutta were, with the exception of Curtis-Hayward, at full strength on Saturday last when they played their return match with the Customs before a large attendance and with the ground in good condition a very interesting if somewhat one sided game resulted. Contrary to expectation the Customs were completely outplayed in every department of the game and it says much for their pluck that they stuck so perseveringly to their hopeless task to the bitter end. The Calcutta pack, in which Heilgers was included for the first time this season, played a magnificent game from start to finish Their footwork has improved considerably and the tackling if still somewhat high was sounder than in previous matches. Berridge led his men with consummate judgment and his efforts were well backed up by Heilgers, Brown and McLeod who were always in the van. P H. Browne was also very conspicuous in the loose.

At half-back Macdonald, who on this occasion was not opposed by Rowe, showed his abilities in opening out the game for the men behind him and his passing and running were alike excellent. His partner, Jacob, however, gave a terribly mediocre display and repeatedly spoilt splendid openings by sticking to the ball too long in addition to which his passing was of the daisy cutter order. This is not good enough for Cup form and I anticipate an early change in this position.

The three-quarters were at times brilliant, but on other occasions disappointing and this was especially so in the case of Langdon. This player has a splendid stride and a clever swerve which make him a difficult man to tackle, but he is inclined to hold the ball too long and repeatedly bores his wing man on to the touch line before passing to him which is a serious fault for a centre three-quarter. The elder Siddons is at present the best of the quartette and combines well with his brother who is fortunately possessed of the knack of passing inwards which Dundas must cultivate.

Newton, who made a welcome re-appearance at full back, was quite at his best. He had no tackling to do but repeatedly got his side out of difficulties by his cleverness, whilst his kicking showed an improvement on even his last year's form.

This "colt" by the way is now entering on his 25th year of rugger—prodigious !!

The school competition commences on the 2nd of next month and present appearances point to the ultimate victory of either the Armenian College or La Martinière. The latter will probably be the bigger and heavier lot, but the Armenians' knowledge of the game combined with the speed of three-quarters should give them the Cup.

The Casuals are not meeting with the success their initial appearance against Calcutta led one to expect, and this is to be attributed simply and solely to the fact that more than half the team have not yet mastered the game. However, with such an able exponent as Whitie to lead them, it should not be long before they improve on their present form and it is the general hope that the Casuals will be found amongst the entries for the Cup.

Calcutta have entered for the Bombay Rugger Tournament and present acceptances point to a strong combination being sent over, of which further particulars next week.

A GAY WEEK IN PALMANER.

THE district of North Arcot is fortunate in possessing a little sanitarium of its own on the edge of the Mysore plateau, greatly improved by a former Collector, Mr. Whiteside, who planted what are now fine banyan trees, laid out roads and in other ways left his mark upon the place. The present Collector, Mr. E. L. Vaughan, has been staying there for some little time and took the opportunity to give a Palmaner week. Most of the District Officers were able to avail themselves of the invitation, and arrived there on Saturday, 18th July. They were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan and Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins, and when their bungalows and the Forest Bungalows were full tents were pitched in the Collector's compound, where excellent golf links have been recently made. On Sunday two services were held, and on Monday there was an all-day picnic at Gungamachitzu, 13 miles away. The first part of the journey was made on horses, bicycles, or in jutkas, but the last four miles through jungly and hilly country gave an opportunity for walking which was seized by most of the party as the only alternative was to be carried in chairs. The walk ended in a drop in a wooded ravine with a deep still pool into which in the rainy season a magnificent waterfall leaps. After a bath breakfast under the trees followed. Various diversions occupied the afternoon and after tea when it began to get cool the return was made. The scenery alone was well worth the journey—ranges rising above ranges, here clad with forest, here wild bare scarred rock. Dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins and an impromptu sing-song followed. On Tuesday the Golf Tournament began—9-hole course; bogie 42. The chaplain distinguished himself by doing it in 97 amid wild excitement and loud applause. Dinner at the Collector's on Wednesday the bogie contest was concluded, Mr. Hawkins winning In the afternoon there was a Gymkhana in the grounds. The Missing Word Competition went to Mr. Bardswell, the Menagerie Race to Mr. Anderson and his goat, Mr. Loveluck's ram with its owner in tow arriving a good second. But the event was the Ladies' Race as the number of genuine ladies was limited, any one was admitted who could find appropriate costume and in consequence there was a good turn out. One or two new women were most lady like, but there were others who were reminiscent of Bow Street on Monday morning. Mrs. Vaughan and Mrs. Hawkins ran a dead heat for the ladies' prize and Mr. Anderson that for the Bow Street gang. After the race a fatigue party disinterred those competitors who had got bunkered at the jumps. Mr Tyler won the blindfold bladder fight after a triangular contest with the survivors of previous rounds Thursday was an an off day; Golf and Tennis and dinner at Mr. Hawkins. On Friday there was a paperchase on horse back Messrs. Tyler and Atkinson were the hares and over an 8. mile course with 7½ mins' start they won easily and the hounds faulted several times and followed false trails with beautiful fidelity. The first hound in was Mr Squire. In the evening Mr. and Mrs Hawkins gave a fancy dress dinner—among the costumes were Powder Puff (Mrs. Vaughan); My Sweetheart (Mrs. Hawkins); Orpheus and his lute (Mr. Hawkins) as a pensioned Madras Constable; a Knight of Windsor (Mr. Vaughan); a Mohammedan noble (Mr Anderson); a Madrassi boy (Mr. Bardswell); a Burman (Mr. Squire); Buffalo Bill (Mr. Williams); No Trumps (Mr Loveluck); French Chef (Mr. Althinson); the Nine of Hearts (Mr Jones) and Three Japs (Messrs. Tyler, Lane and Atkins). The first prize went to Powder Puff, second to the Burman.

On Saturday the Golf Handicap was won by Mr. Squire and the week terminated with a farewell dinner and concert at the Collector's bungalow.

Hearty votes of thanks were given to the hosts and hostesses and the party broke up amid loud cheers, choruses and the rattle of departing jutkas and bandies

Shows.

THE FIFTH MURREE DOG SHOW.

THE Murree show of 1903 was held on the 13th instant, and characterised as being a show entirely for dogs and not a Horse and Dog Show. The two functions were separated both for the sake of ground room and also to obtain more time for the judging, and walking round and seeing the exhibits after the awards. The date fixed was intended to avoid any clashing with the Mussoorie show of September and to enable exhibitors to attend both if desired.

The fifth show of this hill station, though not quite so large in entries as some of its predecessors, was particularly strong in fox-terriers, was patronised more than locally, was largely attended and was altogether a great success. Colonel Rattray and Mr. Goodwin judged the classes with conscientious care, but that will be alluded to in the details that follow. The show was held under the rules of the Northern India Kennel Association which offered three specials for competition, an open special for the champion of the show, a Limit for dogs which had never won a first prize, and a Novice open to novice dogs and novice members of the Northern India Kennel Association, no exhibitor to compete for and win more than one of the three. All three of the prizes were captured by fox-terriers. Mr. Lionel Jacob won the Best in show with his well-known winner "Roddy Owen," Mr Arden Close won the Limit with "Carrol" and Mr. Heseltine the Novice with "Cricket". Lieutenant-General Sir Bindon Blood presented a handsome cup for the Best Puppy, any breed in the show, and this was also won by a fox-terrier, Mr. Lionel Jacob's, "Cutty Sark :" the fox-terriers were quite inimitable.

The prizes were given away by Lady Blood. The officers of the 2nd Battalion, King's Royal Rifles were "At Home" on the ground, and all the arrangements were excellent. The local Honorary Secretaries were Mr. Heseltine and Mr. Culme Seymour. The awards are given below.

CLASS I.—SPANIELS.

2	Mr Price's "	Rob
Reserve,	Mr Crockett's Clumber	Nansen
V. H. C.	Rev. G. E. Hickox's Water Spaniel	Koko

A good level class in merit, but there was no exhibit in it of conspicuous show form. The spaniels were merely useful dogs of good working type, brisk, intelligent, and active, but not benchers. There was nothing approaching the form of home exhibits.

CLASS II.—SPORTING DOGS.

1	Mr W E Trotter's	Wavy-haired Retriever	Roger
2	Captain Harvell's	Gordon Setter	Don
Reserve,	Mr W E Trotter's	Wavy-haired Retriever	Rena
V H C	Mr. Pearl's	Red Irish Setter	Grouse

This was on the contrary a very good and strong class, containing two excellent retrievers, the dog beating the bitch in size, power, and head points, while the latter was better in quarters, coat, and action; a very good Gordon Setter; two Irish Setters, and a Pointer. Next to the fox-terriers, it was quite the best class in the show

CLASS III.—OTHER LARGE DOGS.

1	Sergeant Griffith's	Greyhound	Glitz
Reserve,	Major Reade's	Boarhound	Smut

A poor class, the winning greyhound was a nice one, but there was nothing else in it. The so-called boarhound was a fine, large, powerful animal, but apparently a cross bred creature.

CLASS IV.—IRISH TERRIERS.

2	Mr Lane's	Mikey

Irish terriers have usually been very strong at Murree, but the death of Major Rich has deprived the breed of one of its strongest supporters in India. The kennel of H. H. the Maharajah of Jhind was absent, and altogether the class was a very indifferent one. Shiela II is a real good bitch who will be heard of again, she is still in her puppy-hood. A good dog, Badger, the property, of Colonel Lund, did not turn up in time or he would have been a good second. There was nothing else of pronounced merit.

CLASS V.—WELSH TERRIERS.

1	Mr G Cookson's	Del Mawr
2	" Hopkins'	Ready II
Reserve,	Mr Abadie's	Tuffy

This class was also not so strong as when Mr. Lionel Jacob used to exhibit in it. It nevertheless contained some good terriers mainly of his strain. Del Mawr is a good and very typical bitch Second is also a first-rate terrier. The rest failed mostly in coat and colour points that require the attention of Indian breeders.

CLASS VI.—WIRE-HAIRED FOX-TERRIERS. DOGS.

1	Mr Lionel Jacob's	Roddy Owen.
2	Colonel Moody's	Maybole Peter.
Reserve,	Captain Hildebrand's	Baynton Turk.

Mr. Lionel Jacob's kennel is no longer what it was as he has disposed of all but a very few on his approaching transfer to Burma. He, however, exhibited his old veteran Roddy Owen in rare form and had no difficulty in securing the blue riband. Peter and Turk are both good terriers.

CLASS VII.—WIRE-HAIRED FOX-TERRIERS, BITCHES.

1	Mr Lionel Jacob's	Diva.
2	Captain Hildebrand's	Bayston Chrysanthemum
Reserve,	Mr. Heseltine's	Cricket.

The lovely bitch, Diva, never beaten in any bitch class, and in splendid condition, won easily; the other two in the mention quite good.

CLASS VIII.—SMOOTH FOX-TERRIERS, DOGS.

1	Mr Arden Close's	Casper.
2	Mr A C Stewart's	Lyons Surprise.
3	Rev Charles Stewart's	Wynnefield Core.
Reserve,	Mr Culme Seymour's	Carbon.

A very strong class, in which all last Lahore show veterans except Major Impey's kennel, fought their battle over again and with different results. Casper was put down in rare trim and won over that sterling terrier Lyons Surprise. Third was a new face, a nice terrier but a little bitchey in face and long in loin. Carbon has thickened since the Lahore Show.

CLASS IX.—SMOOTH FOX-TERRIERS, DOG, NOVICES.

1	Rev Charles Stewart's	Wynnefield Core.
2	Mr Arden Closes'	Cable.

This was a special class to give the Novices a chance, the winner has already been mentioned. Cable is a showy puppy, but too large in size, and not small enough in ear.

CLASS X.—SMOOTH FOX-TERRIERS, BITCHES.

1	Mr Arden Close's	Carrol
2	Ditto	Caress
Reserve,	Sergeant Miles'	Flossie

A class of very fair bitches, in which Mr. Close was successful.

CLASS XI.—OTHER TERRIERS.

1	Mrs Barnett's	Scottish Terrier	Zip
2	„ Barbell's	Lhassa Terrier	Donald

A small and poor class calling for no particular remarks.

CLASS XII.—FOX-TERRIERS, PUPPIES. DOGS.

1	Mr Heseltine's	Benjamin
2	„ Lionel Jacob's	Bikram

A very good class of smooth and wire puppies. First and second fell to a very smart pair, litter brothers, bred by Mr. Jacob by his Don't Go Bang ex Diva.

CLASS XIII.—FOX-TERRIERS, PUPPIES, BITCHES.

2	Ditto	Sally Lunn
Reserve,	Mr Heseltine's	Mona

Also a very interesting class and close competition. It is a question whether Sally Lunn should not have been first, but it was just a matter of opinion between all three in the mention, all daughters of Don't Go Bang.

CLASS XIV.—OTHER PUPPIES.

2	Mr C Cookson's	Del Mare
Reserve,	Colonel Lund's	Badger

A strong class. (1) was first in Class IV and (2) in Class V, all three good ones.

CLASS XV.—VARIETY.

1	Mr R B Skinner's	... Dachshund	... Simon
2	„ Lane's	... Poodle	... Tommy
Reserve,	Lce-Sergt McIn's	Dachshund	... Trilby

Here two Dachshunds, a Poodle, a Bull-dog, and a Pekinese competed. Simon was too good for his company. The Poodle was a very fair specimen. Rest outclassed.

CLASS XVI.—SOLDIERS' DOGS.

1	Sergeant Miles'	... Fox-terrier	... Flossie
2	„ Perkins'	... Fox-terrier	... Nimbo
3	„ Griffiths'	... Greyhound	... Glitz

A numerically very strong class, with also considerable quality, all three prize winners distinctly good specimens of their breeds, other good ones crowded out by the competition.

SPECIALS.

N. I. K. A. BEST IN SHOW."

Mr. Lionel Jacob's Fox-terrier Roddy Owen.

A keen contest between the first prize winners of classes. It was generally held that the same owner's bitch Diva should have won, but the judges appeared to fancy the wire-haired Roddy Owen and the smooth Casper of the competitors in the ring, and champion honours fell to the former.

N. I. K. A. LIMIT.

Mr. Arden Close's Fox-terrier Carrol.

N. I. K. A. NOVICE.

Mr. Heseltine's Fox-terrier Cricket.

The Limit and Novice Specials fell to two Fox-terrier bitches, the former a smooth bred by Mr. Close by Casper, and the latter a wire bred by Mr. Jacob by Champion Cackler of Notts ex Cara Mia

BEST PUPPY IN SHOW.

Mr. Lionel Jacob's "Cutty Sark."

The competition for the Cup given by Sir Bindon Blood for the best Puppy, any breed under 12 months, was very keen. It eventually narrowed down to a contest between Mr. Jacob's bitch and Benjamin the winner in Class XII, the former showed herself remarkable for a bitch and a small puppy, and on careful point judging obtained the award.

The Story Teller

IT would be difficult, perhaps, to defend the ethics of the affair but as this story only concerns itself with the true and veracious account of the doings of the two heroines who chose to exchange identity, ethics may go hang. The correct working of finances had been carefully arranged for between the two girls, all necessary cheques being drawn by the real Miss Browne and made over by her to her representative. The "acting" Miss Browne, therefore, had no lack of funds to carry on the campaign, and, thus fortified, she took her very fair share in all the amusements and social doings of India's cold, weather capital. She had ridden out as a looker on to a paperchase, and having duly observed events and taken counsel of Mr. Ridley and others, had formed the intention of "riding" on the next occasion with a view to seeing whether she could live with the first flight. Accordingly the following meet saw her ready for the fray, well enough mounted it is true, but wearing workmanlike garments of a rather out-of-date cut. People were beginning to remark that for so wealthy a personage Miss Browne hardly exhibited such fastidiousness in matters of dress as they would expect, and put her down as a bit of a screw accordingly. The same meet also attracted four members of the Cullen household, namely Geoffrey Strange—intent upon showing Calcutta sportsmen what Lucknow could do; Ella, her governess, and Mr. Cullen, the three latter as mere lookers on.

Mr. Cullen had kept his word about providing Miss Hunt with a better mount than old Sobersides, and she felt the animal she now rode might have carried her not without distinction in "The Shires" themselves. The whole turn-out was exceedingly classy, as slangular people would call it—and so thought Geoffrey Strange. Ordinary frocks and furbelows he had no particular eye for, otherwise he could not have failed, as he had done, to notice what a remarkable young person Miss Hunt was. Like Ella he was strongly biased by any one who excelled on horseback: "what a pity you are only going to look on" he said.

A large field had assembled, and "Constance Hunt's" mare in the delirium of so much company, began to get decidedly fractious. She knew the game and loved it ardently, so that when she found she was not intended to "go" her outraged feelings got too much for. Up and up she reared remaining poised for a large part of a minute. Her forefeet had scarcely touched earth when she went up again. "Take care! take care! let her have her head" cried Mr. Cullen in an agony of apprehension. "Can you manage the course? Then you'd better let her go."

And off they went. It was thus that Calcutta had the unique spectacle of an instructor of youth riding—as Whyte Melville's barmaid put it—"at the top of the hunt."

The first jump, it must be admitted was rather a chance affair, but safely over that the mare, finding that she was not going to be done out of the fun, allowed the firm light hand of her rider to control her and they sailed away, going comfortably and well pleased with one another. After some considerable distance had been covered "Miss Hunt" found her cousin in fairly close proximity, so she checked a little to allow her to draw up.

"Well dear" was the first remark "for a staid and sedate governess, wishful to keep in the background, I must say you are 'going it' not a little."

How could I help it? it was the mare's fault. She would go, and as I did not want to dismount hurriedly before all those people, the only thing was for me to go with her."

"Yes and as you are here you had better get on. It's no good waiting for me, my mount is about done with. Yours might be well up at the finish."

"Constance Hunt sped on and soon found she had very much diminished field to reckon with. She was of course ignorant of the country and had only a very vague idea of the correct line to follow, but luckily for her there were two very energetic individuals in front whose movements kept her right. About a quarter of a mile from home somebody a little behind her called out,

"If you will come along and follow me now, we can cut those two fellows down: they have bucketted their horses to bits."

Geoffrey Strange shot past her, and waking the mare up she followed in hot pursuit. They caught up and passed the labouring vanguard, leaving them hopelessly done for. Then Geoffrey eased up, telling her to go on, and "Constance Hunt" signalised her first ride in a Calcutta paperchase by coming in a comfortable first.

"What a ripping girl!" was Captain Strange's comment on the fact; and that evening, much to his aunt's disgust, the "wealthy Miss Browne" was entirely deserted by him for somebody with golden hair who he found danced as well and joyously as she rode.

Five months have passed and the scene has changed from hot muggy Calcutta to the light-hearted Capua of India, where have assembled those whose duty or inclination take them to the cool regions of Simla. Lucky people! Mr. Cullen alone in his large house in Chowringhee thinks enviously of their happy lot. Lady Lackcash and "Miss Browne" are at Peliti's: Ridley, busy with frontier tribes and difficult problems set by erring Natives States, may be found at the Club; whilst Geoffrey Strange professes to be much overworked by a two-hours a-day attendance at the Veterinary Class. At the close of the previous season he had vowed to have nothing more to do with Simla or Simla ways, yet here he was again on the flimsy excuse of a thirst for information he knew already. The card-room knows him not, the gay grass widows who had thought him so 'nice" a year ago consider that Captain Strange has wonderfully altered, is putting on side or become hopelessly slow, and have given him up as no use to them at all. He seems to have become curiously fond of children and surely no elder cousin was ever so good to a petulant bear as he was to Ella. Then the whisper went round—he was pursuing that designing governess.

All this was most perturbing to poor Miss Cullen in her pretty house near the Lakha Bazaar. "She is such a nice girl" she said to herself over and over again, "but it's impossible, quite impossible." Then she made up her mind to speak to her erring nephew about it.

"Geoffrey," she said, "you must go away from Simla."

"Yes, I know worse luck" he replied "when this class is done."

"No; no I don't mean that. You must go away at once."

"But I can't, the authorities won't let me. I'm on duty you know, and have to gain all the knowledge of mules and ponies I can" The dragoon twisted his moustache and looked rather sheepish: then he added: "And there's another which is much more important. I don't want to go."

His aunt fanned herself vigorously and felt she was embarking on a very forlorn hope, but she had no intention of quitting the struggle yet.

"That's just it" she said. "You wilfully mean to get yourself into an impossible position."

Geoffrey got up from the chair in which he was sitting and strolled across to the mantelpiece. The attack was developing and knowing the weak spots in his defence he wished to gain time.

"Tell me aunt," he said after a short consideration—"what do you mean by an impossible position"?

"Marriage with Constance Hunt. How can you with your tastes and—and—there's nothing but your own term expresses it—your "stoney-brokedness" ever hope to marry a penniless girl?"

"As for my tastes, my dear aunt, I thope to—in fact I have curbed them to a great extent. The stoney-brokedness will vanish in due course."

"But you will always be so miserably poor; your uncle will do nothing for you and life in a British cavalry Regiment with a wife and—and perhaps children—Oh Geoffrey! You can't."

"Yes, aunt," he said, "I can; but not in a British Cavalry Regiment. I've sent in my application for the Remount Department"

"You've done it!" cried the lady. "But no, it's not too late, you must get it back or refuse the appointment when offered. Oh Geoffrey you can't do it! And are you sure that Constance Hunt—she's a dear girl I know—are you sure that she would be suitable? putting aside the question of means altogether."

"About that I am quite sure."

"You have never spoken to her?"

"Yes, aunt, I have, frequently and in your presence You must have observed that, surely."

"Of course I don't mean that: how annoying you are. You have never asked her to marry you?"

"No."

"Nor—nor been foolish or kissed her?"

"Men don't kiss ladies they mean to make their wives until they have the best reason for knowing they may do so" said Geoffrey rather sternly. "I am glad nobody else asked me such a question."

She had still another card to play, the last and, as she felt in the young man's present state of mind, the most likely to prove effective.

"Her age Geoffrey! She is a good deal older than she looks."

"Yes she is twenty-six I believe: you told me so yourself."

"And—and—I hate giving another woman's secrets away; but Geoffrey she makes up."

"Nonsense! you'll tell me that Ella does next."

"But I assure you it's true. She told me so herself. She dyes her hair."

'Never' said Geoffrey with conviction. "No dye that was ever yet manufactured made hair look like that."

"But she does; she admitted it to me, and, what's more, she gave me the recipe and I've used it."

Geoffrey burst into a peal of laughter. Absolutely unable to restrain himself, he laughed and laughed again. Then he crossed over and kissed her. "My dear aunt," he said, "confess now, has it made any difference whatsoever? I see no change in you."

"No, Oh I'm afraid there is not."

Geoffrey took his departure, whilst Miss Cullen sat in her pretty drawing-room and hoped against hope that she had not precipitated matters. "It's so annoying and so impossible" she thought. "If only it was that rich Miss Browne, who is really a very nice looking girl. And then Mr Ridley would do so well for Constance: he's very well off and such a suitable age, but he will make himself miserable over Miss Browne because he cannot bear that people should think he is marrying her for her money; he simply dare not propose on that account. Oh dear! I wish I had the ordering of these matters: I'm sure I'd make them work out much better than they seem to be doing. And what I'm to do about Ella if Constance goes I don't know I'm sure."

It was at Sipi Fair, whither all Simla society had gone to lunch in the open, wander through the glorious woods and gaze curiously at the gaily dressed dark-eyed damsels sitting row upon row, where the final catastrophe dreaded by Miss Cullen occurred. All our acquaintances had been invited to partake of the hospitality offered by the Viceregal Staff and had made use of it. After the inevitable photograph had been taken, poor Miss Cullen had the mortification of seeing her nephew pair off with Miss Hunt and make their way towards the fair, now at its full height. They were overtaken and joined by Miss Browne, accompanied by the faithful Ridley. The four wandered round together, inspected the cheap trash set out to tempt the unsophisticated Aryan brother, made a few purchases, and passed on to get a closer look at the patiently sitting crowd of native women and girls.

"Poor things!" said Constance. "How long do they have to sit like that?"

"I suppose until somebody comes along and asks them to marry him" replied Geoffrey, whose knowledge of native manners and customs was limited. "It must be nearly as trying as the looking-glass figure in a Cotillon."

"Is that why they are all dressed in their best and wear so much jewelry?" asked Miss Browne.

"I suppose so." said "Constance" "Don't you know that man always goes where he can get most?"

The effect of this remark was rather curious. Ridley got very red in the face, Geoffrey became pale, and Miss Browne, without any doubt whatsoever, was furiously angry. "That's a horrid thing to say," she said and turned away followed by Ridley.

"I'm glad you said that" he remarked as soon as they were sufficiently far away not to be overheard. "Very glad."

"What do you mean?"

"Your disapproval of Miss Hunt's remark." He paused and then went on: "For a long time I have wanted to speak but have not dared. Yes I was an absolute coward, but your words have made me think you will not misconstrue my motives."

Miss Browne walked on rapidly; but like many another self-conscious man, when once started there was no stopping him. It came without further hesitation.

"I have the deepest affection—love for you, and I ask—"

The girl stopped and turned towards him.

'No Mr. Ridley" you must say no more. I—I have no right to listen. Believe me I—

"Feel highly honoured you would say" he broke in, speaking rather bitterly—"but decline—with thanks no doubt for the sake of politeness."

"No. No—not that indeed.' There were tears in her eyes as she spoke.

"Then what is it! Listen, please: hear what I have to say."

"Mr. Ridley I am a sham: my supposed wealth does not exist: I am almost a penniless girl."

"Then, thank God! that removes the one obstacle I dreaded. I don't know what it means, I don't care. I have ample resources of my own, and now—and now—

There is no need to say any more; fate had already settled matters for them, and though fate plays strange pranks at times, she is the best guide to follow. Ridley and Constance Hunt—to give her her correct name—felt they had no cause to complain, and Geoffrey Strange and the governess, when they rejoined the rest of the party, showed clearly that they too had some far from unpleasant understanding, between them.

They were alone in Miss Cullen's drawing-room, where that excellent but much-tried lady had left them feeling that matters had quite passed out of her hands, when Lady Lackcash's jampanis rattled her rickshaw up to the front door at a pace which absolutely amazed the portly sirdar of the establishment. Her ladyship descended with more haste than elegance and ran—actually ran, if one can apply such a term to a fourteen-stone lady of full habit through the little hall and into the room occupied by the happy twain.

"Oh my dear!" she gasped—"But how very, very naughty of you. I know all, and—"

"Oh Geoffrey!" cried the girl. "You didn't know! Tell me you didn't! But no: I'll trust you, I'm sure you didn't" and she took his hand in her's utterly ignoring the presence of Lady Lackcash, or the entry of Miss Cullen, who had come to see what all the disturbance was about.

"Know!" said Geoffrey much puzzled. "Know?" I only know that you are the dearest girl in the world and that I am the happiest man. What else is there to know?"

"Only that besides being the dearest girl in the world, your future bride—I think I must be right in calling her so—is quite the richest girl in Simla and I think I might say in India." Lady Lackcash positively beamed as she made this announcement. "Yes" she continued. "Constance Hunt and Mr. Ridley have told me all. They have settled matters for themselves, and now what are we to do?"

"Why! Land a double event over it like father did in the Viceroy's and Cooch-Behar Cup two year's ago" said the pert Miss Ella who had come in unobserved. "That's my advice"—

And in due course it was taken.

FLAT RACING IN ENGLAND DURING 1903.

I.—LINCOLN TO GOODWOOD.

IT is remarkable how eagerly the opening of the season at Lincoln is always looked forward to, and the year 1903 was not an exception to the rule by any means. The winter had been a mild one throughout, and it was known that trainers had taken advantage of the open weather to get their charges into form, and consequently a successful commencement with large fields was confidently anticipated. The antepost betting on the first great Handicap, the Lincolnshire, proved as usual but a snare and delusion when the result was known, although there were some spirited market movements, to afford subjects for conversation and to keep excitement up to a high pitch. One of the chief movements was that in favour of the three-year-old filly Our Lassie—daughter of Ayrshire and Yours—who hailed from C. Morton's stable, and was one of a lot of three accepted for by that astute trainer, the other two being His Lordship and Binocle. Early in March it was announced that these three had been tried together, the three-year-old having simply "lost" the others; and the public, anxiously awaiting some indication as to the "selected" of the stable, quickly appreciated the importance of the trial and Our Lassie was forthwith so heavily supported that in a few days the price came from 40 to 1 offered down to 6 to 1 wanted and the filly was installed first favourite. Meanwhile it became known that Lord Carnarvon's Mauvezin, the runaway victor in the last year's Goodwood Stewards' Cup, would be the one relied on by Grensil's stable, and the market spoke eloquently of the confidence reposed in him by his connections. Astute enquirers observed that it was exactly 20 years since an aged horse had won the Lincolnshire, and that Mauvezin was the only aged horse entered in the race, and they looked forward to history repeating itself. Others, and as the event proved, the lucky ones, were content to ignore all market quotations and the gossip from the stables and clubs and pinned their faith to "Over Norton", arguing that he was nearly 40lbs better "in" compared with Sceptre than he was then when in 1902 the crack filly beat him a short head for second place. The story of the race is soon told—how that all the first favourites were never in evidence in the actual race—how that Mauvezin's chance was said to have been "snuffed out" by being kicked in the ribs by Sceptre at the post—and how that Over Norton simply ran away from his field in such style that many of the cleverest judges refused to regard the "form" disclosed as in any way correct or reliable for future guidance—an opinion to which considerable support was given when a few days later Portcullis, second to Over Norton, was hopelessly beaten in the Doveridge Handicap also run over a straight mile by Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's five-year-old colt Kunstler.

Mention of the last-named leads to the remark how frequently the failure of one year is the success of the next, and, too, vice versâ; for in 1902 Kunstler was one of the worst "bogies"—a terror to go at home in his trials, he never showed to any advantage in an actual race, running six times without a single win, and yet in 1903 he wins four races "off the reel" over distances varying from 5 furlongs to 1 mile and a quarter. And later on at Doncaster May he wins the Spring Handicap and again at Ascot the Royal Hunt Cup at the long price of 33 to 1. Such another too was Fighting Furley, who, during the previous year, also ran in six races frequently heavily backed and only once got placed third in a field of six : whereas in 1903 he wins at first time of asking an important handicap like the Liverpool Spring Cup, and follows this up by running away from a field of a dozen smart horses in the £1,500 Queen's Prize at Kempton on Easter Monday.

The Liverpool Grand National created as much interest as ever, and there can be little doubt that in Drumcree the best horse won. His owner, Mr. J. S. Morrison, had for some time previous to the great contest been highly confident of success, a confidence which was equally felt by his trainer Sir Charles Nugent. Mr. Morrison is one of those genuine sportsmen who are ornaments to the Turf, and his liberality to celebrate the victory was appreciated by many. It was a race full of incident : out of 23 starters only 7 stood up at the end, and amongst them was the Grand Old Man of Steeplechasing, "Manifesto," who though 15 years old fought for and gained by a head the judge's verdict for third place, giving to Kirkland, who was fourth, eight years and nearly 2 stone. Truly this splendid son of Man of War—Vae Victis is a hero, and one could wish now that his labours may be finished and that he might be "on view" somewhere in the Metropolis. How many thousands who have watched or read of his performances year after year would willingly pay a few shillings to see him and may be to stroke his nose.

Newmarket Craven Meeting was held in bitterly cold weather with frequent blizzards of snow and sleet, but thoroughly interesting sport was witnessed, the usual surprises in the way of winners turning up from the "any priced division" occurring as they always do on the historic heath. It was very observable at Newmarket that the three-year olds were not nearly so successful as they were in the opening weeks of the season. At Lincoln Spring and again at Liverpool did the three-year olds repeatedly beat their elders in weight-for-age races as well as in handicaps, while the Northamptonshire Stakes run over 1 mile 5 furlongs on the 31st March fell to the three-year old filly Florinda, by Florizel II out of Wise Flower, at the long price of 20 to 1. No doubt these successes of the juniors were largely due to the open winter to which reference has already been made.

One of those extraordinary occurrences which from time to time turn up in racing was connected with the great Metropolitan Stakes run at Epsom on the 21st April, the course being a zigzag one of 2¼ miles. There were nine runners and a brisk market in the Ring proved that there were several fancied articles. The race was started without much difficulty, and Major Edwardes' Wavelet's Pride, a recent winner of 1,000 Sovs. Hurdle Race was first past the post by many lengths, his next attendant being the outsider of the party Liquidator, and the third horse the favourite Prince Florizel. No sooner were the horses past the post, than there were rumours that "something was up." This something soon took definite shape, and it became known that Trigg, the rider of Parody, who had run fourth, claimed the race on the ground that seven out of the field including the first three horses had gone the wrong course. Investigation showed that this was quite correct, but the judge having left the box when Parody passed the post, the latter was not placed fourth, and indeed there was no official recognition of the mare except as being in the "also ran" division. What was to be done? It was a pretty muddle, but the Stewards took what must on consideration be regarded as the only sensible course, namely, they decided that the race should be run over again later in the afternoon. But the misfortunes were not over yet, for at the second start, the new patent electrically worked "gate" would not act, and the permission of the Stewards had to be obtained to start the race in the old style. At last the field were despatched, but on this occasion only five were found ready to go the 2¼ miles a second time ; among them being the previous winner, who won again but by a short head only owing to his jockey easing his mount too soon ; but neither the second nor the third in the first race was among the starters the second time, and this caused a good deal of annoyance and disappointment to some S. P. place backers, while others had good cause to congratulate themselves on their "luck." It transpired subsequently that the course had not been properly marked, an omission which the Stewards quite properly dealt with by fining the Clerk of the Course.

The next day of course was decided the ever-popular City and Suburban Handicap, the field for which was this year much below the average in the way of class. In 1902 the field included a Derby winner (Volodyovski), an Eclipse Stakes winner (Epsom Lad), a St. Leger winner (Doricles), a Middle Park Plate winner (Floriform) and a previous winner of the City and Suburban (Australian Star). This year there was nothing at all approaching this class, as may be gathered from the fact of the weights having to be raised by 9lbs. owing to the non-acceptance of all the top weights. As with the Lincolnshire, so with the City and Suburban, the public eagerly followed as soon as a lead was given in the support of one candidate in particular, in this case again a three-year-old, Uninsured. This gelding trained at Netheravon by Fallon had one of the best records in the previous season, and the public were quick to appreciate the immense chance he had at the weights, and he was accordingly supported strongly to large and small money, and quickly became the favourite. Suddenly, however, there was a surprise, and almost on the eve of the race it was announced that "something had gone wrong," and the next day this was confirmed by the news that he had been scratched. Of the other fancied competitors, few were more frequently the subject of gossip and rumour than the French trained three-year-old filly Brambilla (half sister to Kunstler) who, it was believed in well-informed quarters, held a chance second to none. The field comprised 15 runners, rather less than the average, and the result was a victory for the French ; Brambilla, Valenza, Over Norton being the order in which they finished with the disappointing Pistol close up fourth. It seems that directly after this the winner went amiss, for the very next week at Newmarket she was heavily supported to win the March Stakes, but could not do better than finish fourth to Handicapper, who till now had not earned brackets since his sensational win over the same course in the Two Thousand Guineas of two years before—another of the numerous cases which support the principle so many go upon of "Horses for Courses."

A field of eleven runners contested the Two Thousand Guineas Stakes at Newmarket, among them being Sermon, the well-named son of Friar's Balsam—Listen, who had won in slashing style the forty-fourth Biennial Stakes at the previous Meeting and was consequently regarded by many as the danger to Rock Sand ; but he showed to no advantage whatever, Rock Sand winning in his usual style from Flotsam and Rabelais, thereby confirming exactly the two-year-old form. This colt of Sir John Miller's who had throughout the winter been far and away first favourite for the Derby, now became at once an odds on chance ; and if ever there was a triumph for the "Figure System" Rock Sand truly furnishes it. The learned writer in the Sportsman in his valuable articles in January wrote, after his review of the performances and pedigrees of the three-year olds, "Fortunately there is no need to worry very long over this, so far as the winner of all three events (i.e., the classic races of 1903) goes. Pedigree performances and individuality alike point to Rock Sand as almost certain, with ordinary health and luck, to win the two Thousand Guineas, Derby and St. Leger."

The start for the One Thousand Guineas was unfortunately quite a fiasco, not so bad indeed as in the case of the Wokingham Stakes of 1902, when some dozen or so horses were completely left at the post and some of those which did get off came back, their riders thinking it was not a start at all ; still the chances of Hammerkop were completely extinguished and Prince Soltykoff's Sun Rose also was terribly handicapped, though the latter ran through her field splendidly and only failed by a length and a half to get up to Quintessence, who by the way was one of the few unbeaten two-year-olds of the previous season.

It is frequently remarked that the Brocklesby Stakes winner rarely lives up to its early form, and this is a strong argument in favour of the views of those many good judges who hold that the youngsters should not be raced before Ascot ; but 1903 seems to be an exception to the rule, for the winner this year, Marsden, son of Orvieto—Virtus,—who won at 20 to 1 had no difficulty in carrying his penalty to victory in the Newmarket Two-Year Old Plate, and later on at Manchester June won the valuable Whitsuntide Plate ; while a few weeks later he ran a good third at Sandown with 9st. 6lbs on his back in the National Breeders' Produce Stakes of 5,000 sovs. The 1903 Brocklesby was also noteworthy in that it constituted a break in the run of luck with regard to this race of the Newmarket trainer Watson, who for the last five or six years had led in the victor ; this year the successful trainer being A. Sadler, junior, also of Newmarket, however, so that it is about time that a provincial stable provided the winner of the first two-year-old race.

The ill-luck of Kingsclere which was so persistent last year seemed to follow unabated into 1903, for in the Chester Cup the specially trained Throwaway (the sensational winner of the Liverpool Autumn Cup at 33-1 after a dead heat with King's Courier) could do no better than finish second to the 10-1 chance Vendale, hailing from Duke's clever stable. The latter half of spring is always a busy time in the Turf world and the Chester Cup was quickly followed by the ever-popular Jubilee Handicap at Kempton Park for which there was a useful field of 19 runners. The "talent" here were not wrong in their selection, the favourite Ypsilanti (third to Over Norton in the Lincolnshire) having little or no difficulty in winning, his nearest attendants being the disappointing Duke of Westminster and the Hungarian Hazafi, each of whom were among the 25-1 division. It was thought by some that but for another piece of Kingsclere ill-luck "the Duke" would have won, and there is no doubt he was rapidly overhauling the leader when, seeing a shadow or something of the kind, he gave a jump and threw himself quite out of his stride. Later on, however, Duke of Westminster was destined to make some amends by at last earning winning brackets in the Rous Memorial Stakes at Ascot, when he gave Flotsam 5lbs. and a two lengths beating, the only other runner being Royal Lancer ; and this was the first victory of Mr. Faber's unlucky 20,000-guinea purchase since his sale by Mr. Sievier.

The Derby of 1903 will be remembered for many things ; in the first place the field was numerically very poor, only seven runners going to the post, a number which only once before in recent years faced the starter, namely, in Ladas's year 1894. Then again the order in which they finished was an absolute confirmation of previous public form, and finally the presence of the French crack Vinicius gave the race the only piece of interest as a contest it possessed. Rock Sand, Vinicius, Flotsam, Rabelais was the order with the King's horse Mead fifth. There were many who hoped and almost expected the King's champion to win, the writer among the number : for it was observed that Rock Sand had never run a race of a mile and a half, whereas Mead had won the Payne Stakes run over that distance ; and further Rock Sand always appeared to need driving, though it must be admitted he invariably (except in the falsely run Middle Park Plate) was equal to the demand made on him. Undoubtedly he is a first-class colt, but no Isinglass by a long way, as the subsequent running in the Sandown Eclipse Stakes proved.

The weather at Ascot was for two of the days simply miserable, bitterly cold wind and rain being almost continuous, but still the meeting was a decided success. The three chief Handicaps provided benefits for the Ring by the success of little fancied candidates ; the Ascot Stakes falling to Genus at 20 to 1, the Royal Hunt Cup to the reformed Kunstler at 33 to 1, and the Wokingham Stakes to Glass Jug at 20 to 1. A friend of the writer's who knew as he said "nothing of horses" and was present at the meeting only as a social function, was lucky enough to have three bets only, these being a sovereign on each of the three winners named, the reason of his bet in each case being that he "liked the name." Truly is it better to be born lucky than wise, for the wise of one class would have left betting alone, and the wise of another class would have supported something with more promise of success "on the book". There were some rather unkind things said and printed too about Sceptre not running for the Gold Cup, and so allowing this almost classic race to fall to the Frenchman Maximum II, who had but to beat a poor class field, Rising Glass having completely gone off. But it had long been arranged that the daughter of Persimmon—Ornament—was to make her first public appearance in her new owner's colours in the Hardwicke Stakes on the following day, and it was only on the eve of the Cup that the English champion William the Third suddenly went lame. Mr. Bass is far too good a sportsman to merit anything that was said or even hinted, and the result can only be regarded as one of those unfortunate events that must from time to time occur.

Not for many years has there been such a race as the Eclipse Stakes of this year, and the hope of all those interested in racing matters that the three "cracks," Ard Patrick, Sceptre, and Rock Sand might be at the post fit and well was happily realised. Great was the excitement for weeks prior to the race and keen were the discussions and arguments by the champions of each of the cracks, for it was, of course, never even dreamt of that anything else could threaten the slightest danger to any one of the three. Sceptre and Ard Patrick had met but twice before, for the first time in the Two Thousand Guineas of 1902, when the mare beat the colt anyhow, and secondly in the following Derby when the colt won easily with Sceptre not in the first three. Clearly therefore there was something wrong in the form on both these occasions, especially as in the St. Leger Sceptre as easily beat Rising Glass and Friar Tuck as Ard Patrick had done in the Derby. What was their relative merit then? Again neither had ever met the three-year-old champion of 1903 and there was no line of form between the four-year olds and the younger competitor. Judges second to none would not believe that anything living could beat Rock Sand, while the beautiful Sceptre was not only a popular heroine but had on her side judges as good and competent, and as to Ard Patrick his recent victory in the Princess of Wales' Stakes showed that he had recovered from his illness which had kept him out of the St. Leger field. "All the world and his wife" turned out to see the race of the year, the day being favoured with the most glorious summer weather. They parade—they canter past—they are at the post and in a minute are "off"—the pace is made by the outsider of the party Oriole, stable companion to Rock Sand, who follows her with Ard Patrick close up and Sceptre as is her custom a bit slow in fairly settling down into her stride—round the bend they come, Ard Patrick being first round it with Sceptre, however, hard on his heels and Rock Sand lying handy—then Sceptre extends herself for her paralysing rush and at the distance heads Ard Patrick, "Sceptre wins" is shouted by thousands, but hardly are the words shouted than it is seen that Ard Patrick is equal to the terrible ordeal—a tremendous struggle almost painful to see and Ard Patrick wins by a neck, with Rock Sand three lengths away third, amidst the shouts of all, partisanship being entirely forgotten in the spectacle of the glorious struggle for supremacy. What a race to behold!

And here perhaps one may most appropriately break off the review of the first half of the year's racing, leaving the performances of the two-year olds to be considered after the decision of the Dewhurst and Middle Park Plates.

THE ST. LEGER BETTING.

London, Wednesday, 2nd September 1903.

The following is the betting on the most fancied horses this evening:—

7 to 4 agst Rock Sand.
8 to 1 „ Mead.
10 to 1 „ William Rufus.
100 to 6 „ Dazzling.

The French horse Vinicius is a doubtful starter.

Sporting Notes.

THE second entries for the Poona races are confined principally to Mr. Jack Scott's string; he has entered his C.-B's Saloon, Louis and Gentle Lady; his waler ponies Yankey Boy and Yardley and Forest, Secunder, Ritual and Up Guards. These entries were anxiously awaited and he has not disappointed us. The C.-B. owners were hoping against hope that his C.-B.'s would be conspicuous by their absence, but it was not to be. The other entries do not call for special mention, and the wonder is that some of them are entered at all. The additions to the steeplechases are not likely to increase the fields.

The Darjeeling Sky Races have been fixed for the 1st and 3rd October, the programme on each day comprising eight races.

The Mussoorie Horse and Dog Show will be held on the 26th instant at Happy Valley. All classes are being catered for as will be seen by the prospectus to be found further on.

We have received a copy of Volume XVI of that always welcome Turf publication the Australian Racing Calendar which deals with the racing of every registered meeting held in the antipodes from 1st February to 31st July 1903. Every detail that can be required is here given and it is again a pleasure to be able to congratulate compiler and publisher on the excellent results of their labours.

The Mysore Dussarah Polo Tournament has been fixed to commence on the 3rd proximo. First entries close on the 10th and final entries on the 25th instant.

The second meeting of the Murree Sky Races came off on the Gharial Race Course last Saturday, when a programme of seven events was put through.

Our Poona Correspondent writes:—The Poona Junior Polo Tournament is the excitement of the week, though naturally one does not look for a very high form of scientific polo and no very brilliant combined play was displayed by any team, though there was plenty of life in the proceedings throughout. It seems a pity, however, that it was not found possible to get it through without a wrangle which, saving under the most dire necessity, should be absent from a sporting contest of this description. After the Poona Gymkhana team had handsomely defeated the 2nd Lancers Hyderabad Contingent by no less than 5 goals and six subsidiaries to one goal the latter team lodged an objection on the ground, I believe, (1) that some of the ponies playing belonged to Captain Wilson of the 10th Hussars and (2) that more than one of the Gymkhana team, namely, Captain Davie and Captain Meynell had played in a first-class tournament.

Captain Wilson was originally selected to play in the Gymkhana team, but owing to the postponement had to return to duty. He, however, sportingly lent his ponies and as he was a member of the Gymkhana and there was no rule saying that ponies played must belong to the actual four men playing, this objection was rather frivolous and was promptly overruled. Regarding the second objection the point was whether the Quetta Tournament was a first-class one or not, and consequently whether Captain Meynell was qualified to play or not. To avoid further unpleasantness the Gymkhana team withdrew from the Tournament. But it was a pity those responsible for the selection of the Gymkhana team did not, in the face of the very clear rule on the point, satisfy themselves in the first instance as to the qualification of every member of their team and a still greater pity that the Hyderabad Lancers were not able to find it possible to lodge a protest before they had received so handsome a drubbing instead of after. Any little hitch of this sort must of necessity tend to mar the harmony of sport.

One hears a great deal of nonsense talked about the physical degeneration of the country-born, but I see in the local paper that at the Poona School's Athletic Sports a lad called Boardman threw the cricket ball 103 yards and one called Plunkett jumped 17 feet 3 long and 5 feet 1 high, while another youth under 16 named Hopkins jumped 4 feet 8 and one Clifford (also under 16) jumped 15 feet 1 broad. In the face of the above there doesn't seem much wrong in the present condition of country-born lads.

Among the evening excitements of the past week were the performances of the Dallas Company who have been considerably strengthened in talent since I last saw them and have been playing to crowded houses in the Connaught Institute; the ball given by the Oxford Light Infantry at the Gymkhana Club which was excellently done and the Fancy Dress Ball at Government House, a most "gorgeous function" in very truth, though after all one large Fancy Dress Ball is much like another. For every one woman looks entrancing and most of the men look idiots and most of them feel they do.

Poona is, of course, full of farewells to Lord Northcote. A banquet at the Club of Western India admirably done as usual, an evening reception at the Council Hall and Massed Bands and a Torchlight Tattoo on the Poona Gymkhana grounds. Looking back on it all one wonders when one slept or if one slept at all.

Taking advantage of a public holiday on Wednesday Mr. Gray slipped in an extra day's "Extra-Meeting" and the public fully showed their appreciation. The bill of fare contained two hurdle races, in both of which that useful horseman Penton rode the winners, riding an admirable race on that arch rogue Veneda who seemed trying to cut it all the journey, and on Malice upset the favourite, Aga Shamsudin's Funny with A. Hoyt up in the Pony Hurdles.

Mr. Artin's good little pony Little Joker (13-1½) is evidently coming back to his Bombay form as starting at 6 to 1 he comfortably disposed of a useful field of 14 handers.

Everyone was glad to see the hitherto aptly named Regret win the small Arab Handicap over a mile with such well-known performers as Oriental, Shaihoob and others behind him. As Regret was, I believe, a failure in professional hands and is now trained by his owner, Captain Benn has every reason to be proud at his performance.

Major Beevor, R. A. M. C., who previously had not been able to show us much of his quality as a horseman had a fortunate leg up on Misty in the Yerrowda Stakes, as Captain Casson, who had come to grief in the Pony Hurdles on Colonel Eccles' Pomfret and put his shoulder out again, was unable of course to ride. The impost of 11st. 10lbs. on so small a horse over a mile seemed rather a crusher, but what there is of Misty is all quality and Major Beevor riding an admirably patient race waiting handy till inside the distance came away and won fairly comfortably. A good performance on the part of Misty as he gave two pounds to the handsome Madeira.

It is not often one sees a two-year old Arab winning races over here, but Mr. A R. Amir's young colt easily disposed of his opponents over 6 furlongs. A handsome colt, but he scarcely looks like lasting through a long racing career.

Mr. Bass has lost little time in winning back some of his purchase money with Stockbell as she easily annexed the Closed Welter Stakes. Those who followed the often sound principle in G. R. races of backing the jockey and not the horse and consequently trusting to Major Edwards's riper skill made Matilda a hot favourite burnt their fingers, for with the perversity of Fate Matilda got off very badly and had to come round on the outside, while the novice getting off nicely on Stockbell, who seems as quick as a rabbit on her feet appropriated the rails and the owner of Sceptre had only to sit still and feel happy, while Stockbell did the rest. A wonderfully nice looking field of ponies it was for a closed race.

A thoroughly interesting day's racing was that on Saturday, the 29th. In the 1¼ mile handicap we were treated to a rare finish between Turkish Flag with Kamad up and Victory steered by Melsom. Well within the distance Turkish Flag looked all over a winner, but little Melsom kept pegging away on Victory and sitting down rode a most determined and strong finish and Victory answering gamely won a great race.

Then came one more objection, as in the Dwarf Handicap Little Joker and Greyleg were running a great race home when within the last 50 or 60 yards little Bennett on Little Joker began to ride a finish and the joker swerving out jostled Greyleg and it was obvious that an objection would follow. The Stewards upheld the objection giving the race to Greyleg and their verdict seemed to me the only one possible. Hard luck on Little Joker who was running a very game race, but rules are rules and must be upheld.

In the Closed Race for a Cup presented by His Excellency's Staff, Colonel Eccles' Rocket won quite comfortably with Southall up carrying an 8lb. penalty thereby. A good looking pony is Rocket and people were glad to see the gallant Colonel's luck take a turn.

But the excitement of the day was in the Horse Consolation Handicap over 1 mile, for right up the distance it was obvious that a great race was in store, for H. H. the Aga Khan's and Aga Shamsudin Shah's Carreewick (a beautiful looking mare) and that charming little quality horse Mr. Mill's Misty were having a terrific set to head and head and in the last few score of yards Mr. Pestonjie's Blue Blood came swooping down on the struggling pair and gaining on them at every stride. Past the post the three flashed in an almost perfect line and "the boldest held his breath for a while." A burst of applause greeted the judge's verdict—a dead heat between Carreewick and Misty with Blue Bood beaten a short head! One scarcely wants anything better than that and had the judge tripled them no one would have wondered.

The owners decided to run it off when Misty's superior fitness told and taking every advantage in his pull in the weights the little black led out from the start and won all the way. But the race itself was a triumph of the handicapper's art and Mr. Cursetjee had congratulations showered upon him.

A charming little mare in Western Queen won the Medium Handicap cleverly from Key West and Pride o' Dharamtala, 13-3¾ the winner is measured and none too well measured it would seem from her size in the paddock, where she seemed a veritable minnow among Tritons. A selling race won by Mr. Percy Fischer's Talisman brought a very interesting day's card to a close, the run off of the dead heat ringing down the curtain.

With reference to the recent controversy regarding the elephant in Southern India, referrd to in a recent issue, "Junglewalla" writes to the Madras Mail as follows :—

"Mr. W. L. Edmiston, writing to a contemporary on the above, which appeared in your columns on the 17th, is of opinion that the elephant is neither ornamental or useful, and protests against the law preventing the destruction of this most ingenuous animal. I shall give a few of the general uses of the elephant. An animal possessed of such strength and docility as the elephant must be useful wherever he thrives. In a country like this his services can readily be appreciated, large areas being covered by dense impenetrable jungle, immense marshy tracts, steep hills, deep ravines, and intersected by rivers, large and small. In the absence of waterways in a country such as described, he is more than useful, he is indispensable. Mules, ponies, and bullocks can travel along bridle-paths, and at times over very rough ground : buffaloes can drag timber, etc, over level ground, but an elephant can be ridden, drag timber, or carry a cart-load through dense pathless forests and over the worst ground. His immense size and weight enable him to make a fair track as he moves along ; and he can cross wide rivers, ford fast-running streams, carry men and baggage across swamps and heavy marsh land, penetrable to no other kinds of transport animal. On the back of an elephant, the engineer, forester, or surveyor is raised above the surrounding undergrowth, which otherwise would shut out his view in all directions, and thus can more rapidly form a conception of his surroundings. He can take with him heavy instruments, and strike across country in any direction he pleases. On the Anamalais (Mounstuart), the Wynaad and in the Malabar District elephants are very extensively employed in the timber industry : in fact, the industry may be said to depend in a great measure on the ability to procure elephant labour. The valuable timber is scattered over such extensive areas that it is impossible to construct sufficient useful roads of transport and timber slips, as it would be necessary to make a road or slip to each single or small group of logs ; and the great importance of having elephants for timber operations consists in their peculiar suitability to the work of collecting logs together over great stretches of hilly country. It is necessary to see some of these immense logs to understand the amount of labour required to drag them through jungle, over ridges, down ravines, to convenient spots. My experience of elephants as transport animals is, that thay are decidedly good. They are no doubt a destructive lot, and if cultivators wish to protect their crops, they should dig trenches of sufficient depth and width to prevent their intrusion, but not to make use of scarecrows to scare them away."

A home contemporary writes :—Reports from the moors indicate that the grouse-shooting this year in Yorkshire and over the North of England generally will be distinctly below the average. The weather in the breeding season was so bad that it prevented many eggs being hatched, while it carried off a great many of the young birds, as well as many old ones. Severe frosts late in April caused many eggs to be addled, and continuous wet weather after the birds were hatched destroyed many of the young ones before they came to maturity. These conditions were experienced on practically all the higher moorlands over the North of England, and in these shooting prospects are by no means rosy. The lower moorlands will afford better sport. On these, more than on the higher ground, the birds nested a second time, but the coveys are not so numerous as first broods would have been, and the birds will hardly be ready for shooting before the end of August or the beginning of September. The season is, therefore, likely to be not only relatively poor, but also rather late.

We regret to hear, says the Singapore Free Press, that Captain Allenby, 13th Madras Infantry, has had rather a serious encounter with a water-buffalo, which will put him on the sick list for some time. The circumstances appear to be that, on the 12th August, about half-past seven a party of the 13th Madras Infantry were out at field manœuvres in Alexandra Road, near where the camp of the regiment is fixed. On crossing a brick field, one of those huge black water buffaloes, used in Malacca and the Province for agricultural purposes and in Singapore for draught and field work, made a determined attack on one of the soldiers. Captain Allenby went to the help of the sepoy and appears to have belaboured the ungainly brute—one of two or three belonging to a Chinaman, and engaged in drawing clay—with the but end of a rifle. The animal then turned on Captain Allenby, charged him at a great pace, and tossed him. When he dropped, the buffalo continued to attack him, goring him badly with great ferocity. Captain Allenby managed to get hold of the brute's horns and his men immediately tackled the animal. Unfortunately they were not carrying their bayonets and had to resort to main force to drag off the buffalo, some hanging on to his tail, others to various parts of his body. Before he could be got away he had severely mauled his victim, who had to be taken back to camp on a stretcher. On examination his wounds proved to be somewhat serious—two ribs broken, and a wound penetrating the breast, and various injuries to the face and body. It is feared that it will be some time before he is able to return to duty. The escape seems to have been a narrow one. Docile to a degree to the smallest natives, these black buffaloes when angry are dangerous brutes to Europeans. It will be remembered that Mr. Walter Egerton, C. M. G., now resident of Negri Sembilan, suffered severely from a buffalo that attacked him some years ago in the Province. We believe there is a regulation requiring the wide spreading horns of this animal to be guarded by a bar of wood. It does not appear that in this case the horn guard was used, the animal being free to use the large pointed horns which are such a formidable weapon of offence. Captain Allenby will not have a particularly pleasant recollection of Singapore, this being the second accident that has befallen him, the former being a fall at Changi Bungalow, which hurt his head rather badly.

Corporal K. D. Curtiss, of the Royal Horse Artillery, Umballa, gives an interesting account of a recent shikar expedition by himself and a comrade in the Dun, where they obtained a tiger 10 feet 11¼ inches long, "properly measured," before skinning, and the larger of the two leopards 7 feet 11 inches. We got "stripes," he writes to The Morning Post, at Raiwalla, in the Dun, and the head forest guard there said that he had never heard of a longer one, but the brother of Raja Rumber Singh had shot one 10 feet 10¾ inches . . . . Several officers who have inspected the skin say they have never seen its equal. It has not a scratch on it and the claws and whiskers are all intact.

While waiting at Patri, near Lhaksar, four of us went to Shah Mahomed's tomb, some 12 miles off, for a few days' bivouac. The second morning, about daybreak, we thought we heard a stag calling close to where we were sleeping. So S——and I nipped out after him. I had kicked off my boots after a few moments, as I was making too much noise. On turning round the end of a big lump of currant bush I met a leopard on the same path about 30 feet off. S.——was on the far side of another patch of stuff, and the leopard was watching him, for he never heard or saw me till I shot. It was the chance of a lifetime, and I let him have it in the shoulder. S——rushed over to see what I had fired at, but I stopped him with "mind that leopard." The latter was stone dead, however.

Later I went up to Dehra Dun and got a special permit to kill carnivora there. We got into Raiwalla on the 19th June. On the 24th S——was up a tree on the river-bed near the edge of the forest about three-fourths of a mile from the station. He saw a big pair of feet, legs, and then the head push out of the bush ; he banged at it and knocked "stripes" down. The tiger picked himself up and sprang, but missed, and went off into the jungle. S——got down and found plenty of blood and a piece of bone as big as the end of one's thumb. We did not follow the tiger as it was near 6 P.M. but started after him the next morning early, finding plenty of blood, and traces where he had rested during the night. Finally we lost the blood, and had to crawl most of the time, so two of us covered S——and the forest guard who were doing the tracking. I left S——marking the lost blood and threw a circle round to the right towards where I could hear a monkey chattering in a tree. I found a small nullah about 10 feet wide and 7 feet deep. Following this up there was "stripes" lying head on in clear view some 50 feet away looking over his shoulder and snarling quietly at my dog. He saw us—(I had the head guard with me)—at the same instant that we saw him, he pulled himself together ; but I was lucky enough to hit him between the eyes and knocked him down (·500 express expanding bullet). He was dead in 10 minutes.

The bullet of the night before had struck over the left eye and blown the piece of bone from the skull out of the ear. He could not possibly have lived till sunset ; but I thought when I turned him up that I was justified in shooting as he looked so very much alive. I am afraid it took the edge off S——'s pleasure a bit, but he took it very nicely, and he has the skin. We found the tiger not more than 200 yards from where he was shot first.

Y——who had a camera then came up and "took" him as he lay. The next day after we had the skin tacked up, a Major Graham from Roorkee came to see him and took a shapshot of the skin as it was, and also measured the whipcord with which we had made shift to measure him. This officer made enquiries of the forest guard, so that you will be able to verify the correctness of the account.

[This tiger apparently beats the previous record, which stands at 10ft. 7ins., shot by Colonel Evans Gordon at Ramshai Hat, in the Bengal Dooars ; but the whipcord make-shift alluded to is incompatible with proper measurement we fear.—ED., I. F.]

The C. T. C. Official Measurer will class, age, and measure horses and ponies at Lucknow about 24th and 25th September ; Meerut, about 20th and 29th September ; Umballa, 30th September and 1st October ; and Rawalpindi, about 3rd and 5th October.

The Calcutta Light Horse held their fourth monthly tent-pegging competition, for the Challenge Bowl, on Tuesday. The Judges were Colonel Henry, Commandant of the Calcutta Light Horse and Captain Palin, Adjutant of the C.V.R. The result of the competition was Sergt. H. R. Cobbold first and Lce-Corpl. W. A. Miles second. The finals in the tent-pegging competition for the Beginner's Cup will be held next Tuesday.

Up to the time of going to press we have not seen the entries—if any—for the proposed Gymkhana at Tollygunge on Saturday, but we shall be surprised to learn that they are at all satisfactory. The principle of differentiating between a Gymkhana pure and simple—is all right in theory, and a very proper sentiment, but unfortunately in order to put it into practice, a sufficient number of enthusiasts have to be unearthed who are the proud possessors of animals which are not race horses but which they are willing to knock about in the present somewhat sultry weather, for the sake of a possible nine and forty rupees, coupled with as much honour and glory as they can get out of it. There may be a sufficiency of these public-spirited benefactors in Calcutta, but we confess to having misgivings on the subject. The only event we can see filling is the chase for paperchase horses, though we do not suppose that these will be very strongly represented as regards class, and it is possible that some sort of a field may be scraped together for the pony hurdles, but what hope the executive can have of filling the contest for the embryo warriors of Calcutta, we cannot, in the face of the complete failure of a similar event included in the first Gymkhana, for the life of us imagine. The maiden horse race might have drawn a few, but we hear a rumour to the effect that, with a wholly laudable desire to purify the atmosphere of the meeting, the "ring" are to be rigidly excluded, and if this be the case we fear that owners of promising maidens will require some additional inducement to gallop their champions, besides the nine and forty chips above alluded to. How would a laurel wreath, or a garland of marigolds to be hung round the neck of the victorious rider pan out? This we think should lend a fine old-world flavour to the proceedings, and do away with the repugnant idea of striving for filthy lucre.

As regards the remaining event for horses which have not been entered for a race within the memory of the oldest inhabitant, we cannot but think that, granted a field, this should prove amusing, but having regard to the rapidly shortening days, we would suggest that proceedings should open early as this event will probably—we believe it is a six furlongs—take some considerable time.

Athletic Notes.

SUSSEX beat Yorkshire by four wickets on the 26th ultimo. Lancashire beat Leicestershire by eight wickets and Gloucestershire defeated Surrey by 18 runs. The match between Essex and Hampshire was drawn and the match between Middlesex and Kent abandoned.

Middlesex beat Surrey on the 29th ultimo by an innings and 94 runs and thus wins the Championship. Kent beat Hampshire by an innings and 67 runs.

The South Indian A. A. willhold their public Gymkhana sports at the People's Park, Madras, on the 5th instant, when the usual programme will be discussed.

A Boxing Tournament, open to all garrisons in India, will be held at Wellington on the 3rd and 4th instant.

We hear that a boxing match of 20 rounds, catch weights, for Rs. 300 aside, has been arranged between Fisher and Bert Delaney. Articles have been signed and the fight will probably come off in three weeks.

Another fight is also on the tapis at Secunderabad. Drummer Smart, Middlesex Regiment, has challenged Private Bolton, Lincoln Regiment, for a purse of Rs. 200 to fight a fifteen two-minute round contest. The fight will take place on or about the 23rd instant.

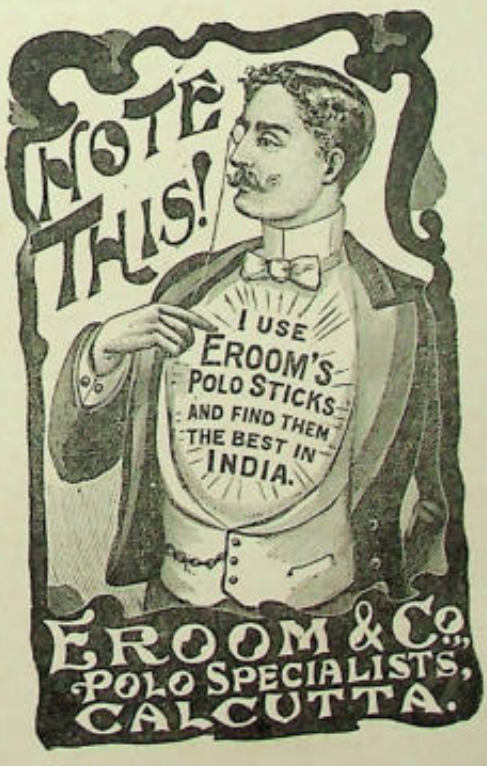
Mr. E. C. Deefholts, who has achieved a local reputation as a sprinter, left last week for England. It is possible that he will do some running at home, though on his Indian form it is hardly likely that he will figure prominently in the Championships and other big athletic meetings.

The Punjab Annual Rackets Tournament will be held at Murree towards the end of September.

The brothers Doherty won the Davis International Cup at Longwood, (America) on Saturday, the 8th ultimo defeating Wrenn and Larned (America). R. F. Doherty defeated Wrenn (6—4, 3—6, 6—3, 6—8, 6—4). H. L. Doherty defeated Larned (6—3, 6—8, 6—0, 2—6, 7—5).

At the Celtic Football Club Sports, Glasgow, on the 8th and 10th ultimo some new records were put up. Nicholson won the Hammer throwing by a throw of 153 ft., thus beating the Scotch record. D. Horgan won the Putting the Weight with 46ft. 1 in. T. Nicholson who was second with 44 establishing a new Scottish record. The High Jump went to C. Leahy with 5ft. 11 ins. and P. J. Leahy won the Long Jump with 22ft. 10½ ins.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—In another three weeks the return cricket match between the Presidency and Parsees will take place at Poona and the supporters of both teams are already looking forward to it with keen interest. The team by which the Europeans were represented in Bombay, three weeks since was admittedly the weakest that had ever done duty for the Presidency in these matches, but I am almost inclined to think that the team for the Poona match will be even weaker—most of the well-known players who have rendered yeoman service for the Presidency in recent years are no longer among us, added to which both Sale and Weatherby will be unable to play, the former having proceeded to England on leave, while Weatherby is under orders to embark for Somaliland almost immediately. This will be a big loss to the Presidency, as the Poona wicket is one on which both have always scored. For the Bombay match the Selection Committee experienced much difficulty in getting together anything like a representative eleven—their difficulties will now be increased, as this leaves two more places to be filled. I sincerely hope they will be able to unearth some good players from somewhere, but must confess that at the present moment the team's prospects of success are far from bright.



During the past week we have had plenty of cricket in Bombay, the principal match being between the Bombay and Parsee Gymkhanas, which was played on Wednesday. For this match the Parsees put a strong team in the field, but their opponents were by no means strongly represented and I was not a bit surprised to see them badly defeated. Looking at the constitution of the Gymkhana team the impression it made on one's mind was that it was very much of an experimental eleven—and the experiment did not prove a success. Knowing that the Parsees always put a strong team in the field for this fixture, one would have thought the Gymkhana would have tried to do likewise. But this was not the case—the team included three or four men who were absolutely out of practice, and the result was a defeat by over a hundred runs. Batting first the Europeans put on 51 runs for the first two wickets, but were eventually all out for 78. With the exception of Cheetham and Aston, who between them made 53 out of the total of 75 from the bat, the team failed miserably as a batting side. Pavri captured 5 wickets for 20 runs, while Bulsara took 4 for 18. The Parsees responded with 187, the chief feature of their innings being a dashing display by R. E. Mody, who scored 72. Bowling for the Europeans Coombs put up a very fine performance by taking six wickets for 35 runs—the analysis reads 15 overs, 5 maidens, 35 runs, 6 wickets. He is bowling decidedly well this season, and I don't think there is much doubt but that he will be asked to figure in the Presidency team for the Poona Match—in fact no little surprise was expressed at his non-inclusion in the team for the recent Bombay match, especially when a fast bowler was badly wanted. In a low scoring match yesterday (Saturday) the Gymkhana defeated the Islam Gymkhana by 14 runs—80 to 66. For the winner, Stileman, who is a recent arrival in India, captured six wickets for 14 runs.

Golf continues to go strong in Bombay, and on Sunday last the Gymkhana sent a team of six to play the representatives of the Pali Hill Gymkhana, whom they succeeded in defeating by a margin of 13 holes. Mr. W. P. Pechey was the only member of the home team who managed to win his match, going out in 38, being six up at the turn, and maintaining his lead till the finish. His opponent was Mr. L. Stansfield, who had bad luck on the putting greens. Messrs. C. M. Gray and T. D. Moore had a good game, the former being dormy two, but only winning on the last hole. Mr. H. G. W. Meikle proved much too strong for Mr. J. Beath, whom he defeated by eight up, while Mr. F. Greig easily disposed of Mr. S. S. Clarke by six up. Messrs D. Love and J. Carnegie were all even at the 16th hole, but the latter won both the 17th and 18th, and finished two up. Mr. H. Greaves beating Mr. E. Comber by the same margin.

Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Northcote and a large number of Civilians were present at the cricket match between the Civil Service and Government House held at Ganeshkhind on the 1st instant. The Civilians made 115 and their opponents 150.

We have to offer congratulations to Mr. George Brown on his having secured the Calcutta Swimming Bath Gold Time Badge for 100 yards. He swam the course on Monday, 31st, in 1min. 17½secs., being half a second within the time limit. His is the first attempt in the last 12 years to secure this badge, the blue riband of the bath, the only other holder being Mr. H. P. Henderson, who won it in 1891 in the excellent time of 1min. 12½secs. All honour to young Brown.

General Notes.

WE are sorry to hear that Lady Lawrence, wife of H. E. the Viceroy's Private Secretary, is seriously ill with a persistent attack of Malta fever and has been ordered home.

The Bombay Civil Service dinner was held at Poona on Tuesday night. The Hon. Mr. Fulton, second Member of Council, presided and His Excellency the Governor and Staff were present.

Calcutta has benefited by the will of the late Mr. W. B. Colville, who has made the following bequests:—£1,000 to the Bengal Masonic Association and £500 to the Building Fund of the new Masonic Temple. Mr. Colville has also left his books, bookcases, and pictures to the Tollygunge Club.

Mr. E. P. Stebbing's lecture on "The Study of Insect Life in India" delivered at the Royal Asiatic Society's rooms, Calcutta, last Tuesday night, was both interesting and practical and awakened in his audience a hope that a series of such lectures might be arranged embracing other forms of the animal life around us.

Messrs. Walter Locke and Co. have greatly extended their business this year and have now large engineering and electrical workshops from which they are prepared to turn out every sort of electrical fitting and accessory. We are reminded of this by the receipt of a copy of their recently issued advance catalogue.

Bridge players will be interested to hear of the advent of the "Lynx Bridge Scoring Tablet," a new marker which, from all accounts, is to save players all further trouble in totalling the scores, a business that is, at times, a weariness of the flesh to the majority of men. The "Lynx tablet" is a most simple contrivance of the true labour-saving order and so efficient is it that one almost expects it to do the addition itself. Messrs. W. Newman and Co. will probably have these novelties on view in a few days.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 14th August, 1903.

THE Law Courts are closed, the High Court of Parliament has scrambled through the fag end of its work with the expedition born of reduced attendance, and the grouse season is begun. These be the principal events of the week and the last seems the most interesting. Judging from the meagre reports so far accessible the season promises much better than had been looked for a few weeks ago: but accounts of disease are always to be taken with a grain of salt, there being an unconquerable tendency to exaggerate. I am told that the demand for shooting and fishing quarters north of Tweed for this year has exceeded that ever known previously; no explanation is suggested, but it seems possible that the Royal visit to Edinburgh opened the eyes of His Majesty's subjects to the fact that there is a country called Scotland at the other end of several railway lines, which country has a great deal to recommend it.

* * * * * *

The hearts of motorists are sore within them, for that, say they, the Government—this never-sufficiently-to-be-anathemised Government—has bewrayed them and sold them chained and bound unto their enemies: and that fine talent for vituperation which motoring develops in motorists and their victims alike is being more freely exercised in the papers than ever. Says one smitten advocate for the motor, "automobilism in this country will receive a blow from the Bill the effect of which it is impossible to exaggerate; (I am glad of it) "a year or two ago it might have proved fatal." (If only it had fallen a year or two ago!) "I think, however, that many people will be deterred from purchasing motors, while others who possess them will give up the struggle and wait for better times." So there is a gleam of hope for us non-motorists and horsemen after all. Meantime the motor hums and smells with an energy undiminished, enjoying I suppose the little day left it before the black night of operation of the new Bill. Did I ever mention in these notes the fact that numbers of houses on the Brighton road which used to be in keen demand at high rents now stand empty and crying for tenants at any price? Cause—the motors whose dust smothers houses and gardens and renders them simply impossible for human habitation.

* * * * * *

It is a thankless task to try and distribute the blame for that fearful disaster on the Paris Metropolitan Railway. The Managing Director attributes it entirely to the driver of the burnt train who, he says, disobeyed the printed instructions which require a driver to immediately isolate a damaged motor. Chamris, on the contrary, put out the fire on the machine with hand grenades (or thought he did) and tried to reach the terminus: with the result that the fire broke out again the moment fresh air at Barbes station gained access. As regards the length of the death roll the impression is growing that the victims had themselves to blame to a great extent: the officials warned them of their danger but they refused to leave the train till they got their money back. The guard Chedal started to drag them out by force and was roughly handled by the crowd which refused to believe in the existence of danger till the lights went out and the tunnel filled with soot-laden smoke. Had the unhappy passengers only listened to warning there is every reason to suppose they could have escaped. As it is eighty-four lives lost for three sous apiece!

* * * * * *

As a matter of course the horror has turned all eyes upon the Tube people asking whether a similar disaster is not possible thereon even as on the Paris railway. The assurances of the Tube authorities who have been interviewed are not quite satisfactory to my mind: the fact that the trains practically fit the tube as a piston fits its cylinder is a feature of our system which sticks in one's throat. Granting that the longest run between stations is 90 seconds, supposing a motor to break down and set fire to the train half way between stations, how are the passengers to get away? Through the train which is open from end to end, is the obvious reply: but then the way to safety in the station last left lies along the tube with that "live rail" which conveys the current. It is stated that "many of the cars are asbestos roofed and steel framed and have steel panelling outside"; but what of the others? 'Tis many days since I used the Tube, but the general impression I have of the interior of the cars is one of wood furnishing, etc., and I am by no means satisfied that the case for the invulnerability of the system is made out. On one point, however, I feel quite certain: and that is, if a train load of tube passengers be called upon to alight any day while the memory of the Paris holocaust lingers with us, nobody will wait for the refund of his twopence before he quits his seat. I doubt much if Londoners would have taken up that disastrously economical position in any event.

* * * * * *

We have not yet reached the exciting stage of the Humbert trial and some of us begin to doubt whether there is much to get at beyond revelations of credulity. Madame has so far conducted the case of herself and family with a torrential fluency that leaves her counsel Maitre Labori little to do. She will say nothing yet she declares: so long as she can hope for the arrival of the Crawfords with those millions she will not speak. The millions will come, she says, but perhaps the Crawfords will not; and if the Crawfords, whose name by the way is not Crawford, but something else known to none but Madame, do not come she will tell everything. Meantime the court proceeds to take evidence from witnesses who lent Madame money on the security of those shadowy millions and Madame calls the witnesses bad names. The striking feature of the affair is the supreme domination of Madame: she takes the gage of battle for the family into her own most competent hands and fights for all: the men sit dumb, a row of cyphers.

* * * * * *

There are to be two new theatres in Aldwych when that thoroughfare arises from the existing chaos of wrecked brickwork, dust and scaffolding. Mr. E. E. Saunders is the owner of one, and the plans for its interior have been passed by the L. C. C. Mr. Murray Carson will own the other which is to flank the Waldorf Hotel on its other side. On the other hand old houses vanish: the Gaiety of our youth now opens its most secret interior to the winds and the boards are up on the portico of the Lyceum. But this is no time to write of theatres when more than half the houses in town are shut. The list "under the clock" in to-day's Times gives the bill at eleven theatres and two music halls; and without effort I reckon up the names of fifteen houses of the first rank which do not figure there.

* * * * * *

Abuse, if applied with sufficient good will, is as valuable a stimulant as praise: I do not think a single good word has been said in print for that ghastly exhibition at the Garrick, save what Mr. Bourchier himself may have said; but it remains on and apparently will continue to remain on. Mr. Bourchier has claimed that "The Soothing System" will do good if only it "reduces the number of persons who like prying about lunatic asylums." People who enjoy the sensations offered by these institutions are not likely to accept the Garrick play as an alternative and how "The Soothing System" is to check a morbid interest it is difficult to understand. If Mr. Bourchier had said that it would reduce the number of people who go to the Garrick one could believe him: but then we should soon hear that the horrible production was "off."

Sophie Larkin is dead. The rising generation of playgoers do not know Miss Larkin, but hers was a name to attract, if not to conjure with, twenty and thirty years ago. She made her bow in London so far back as 1865, when she appeared at the old Prince of Wales's as Mrs. Pontifex in Naval Engagements. Her most memorable part, I suppose, was that of Clarissa Champneys in Byron's famous Our Boys; for the whole phenomenal run of the piece from its first night, 16th January 1875, till it was

The death of Dr. William Playfair is announced this morning. One of the most able and successful men of his profession his career for a long period of years was one of unchequered prosperity: then in 1896 came the sensational libel case arising out of Dr. Playfair's statement concerning Mrs. Arthur Kitson, a connection of his own by marriage. Opinion was sharply divided concerning his action, but we need not weigh the perplexities of the quarrel again at this time of day. The £12,000 damages which Dr. Playfair had to pay was a small matter to him; but the trial wrought him much harm as a practitoner and the anxieties contingent thereon affected his health. He never wavered in his conviction that he had done right in making the communication he did make to Mrs. Arthur Kitson's relatives: he told an intimate friend of mine whom he was attending professionally a year after the trial "under similar circumstances I should act in precisely the same way again."

The British Medical Association has published a report which it has drawn up dealing with the grievances of the Indian Medical Service, and suggesting remedies. Those interested in this matter will no doubt find full details in their professional journals and I need not lay your space under contribution to consider the subject here beyond remarking that the disabilities of which members of the Indian Medical Service have to complain have been weighed in a judicial but sympathetic spirit and that the remedies suggested are practical and deserve consideration by the authorities. As we learned from yesterday's papers, you are to enjoy the rule of Lord Curzon for an extended term, so the reforms may possibly be made under the régime which saw them started.

The Royal Commission on Alien Immigration has presented its Report: by some means the Report was presented to the press before it was presented to His Majesty's faithful Commons: whereat some of our legislators are naturally wroth; but that is a detail. Viewed as a whole the Report is strong and sane; the shipowners and those responsible for the cheap passenger services from continental ports won't like it, but a movement of this sort is bound to tread on somebody's tail. The Commission recommend that "undesirables," whether they come under that category owing to disease, pauperism or crime, be prevented from landing in this country and returned to that which produced them: that judges be empowered to order the export of foreign offenders after they have served their sentences; that certain areas (chiefly in large industrial centres) be closed against aliens. The last aims at reduction of overcrowding: it is notorious that some of the pauper immigrants who endue us with their unsavoury presence, herd together like rabbits in defiance of law, order, and decency. The Commissioners urge that such of their recommendations as can be put in force without recourse to Parliament should receive immediate effect; sure indication that they deem the situation a grave one.

Mr. Whitaker Wright was on view for the second time at the Guildhall on Tuesday: he was "in excellent spirits," greatly relieved no doubt by his escape from the troublesome formalism of American law and relegation to the tenderer care of British justice. He is allowed bail: his own recognizances for £25,000 and sureties in a like sum; this is the heaviest bail I can remember being required for a person in Mr. W. Wright's situation.

ONLOOKER.

What, it may well be asked, would a jockey of the present day think of the costume worn by the rider of Diomed, who won the Derby in the year of its institution, 1780? It consisted of a black velvet cap, with a long French peak, and a bow of black satin ribbon behind; a white cambric neckcloth of ample folds, tied at the back; a long coat with flaps and wide skirt, buttoning at the side; kneebreeches fastened with straps; white cotton stockings, and black leather Oxford shoes, with long tongues and silver buckles.

The inconvenience of riding a close finish over Epsom Downs in a long body garment, with tails streaming out behind, can well be imagined, and naturally led to a compromise. Necessity is the mother of invention, and some jockey—history neglects to give his name—hit upon the happy expedient of tucking his skirts inside his breeches. The next step towards the costume of the jockey of the present day was to curtail these annoying appendages.

Reviews.

AMONG the numerous publications issued by Messrs. George Newnes, Limited, few possess a better claim to consideration than The Handy Shilling Atlas of the World, a little volume that fits comfortably into the pocket, the while it is a marvel of clear printing. There are 15 world maps beginning with the hemispheres and going up through orographical features, climate charts to commercial products. Each of the contents are mapped as whole areas and taken separately by small sections and these are followed by a world's gazettier, alphabetically arranged and of much value as a reference. A really handy and useful booklet.

THE SELECTION OF THE PIANO.*

INTO a neatly got-up little shilling book, entitled "On Choosing a Piano, Mr. Algernon Rose, well-known in musical arcles at home and as a writer of books on music and kindred subjects, compresses all the knowledge that one can possibly want when approaching that important domestic problem, the purchase of the piano. Here we have the subject regarded from almost every point of view and the amateur is offered suggestions that should be extremely helpful to anyone unacquainted with the true inwardness of making a choice of an instrument that enters so largely into our socialities. The chapters are quite untechnical, are written in a style calculated to be understood by every reader, and if after a careful perusal of these pages a person cannot make up his or her mind on the subject we fear there must be no mind to make up.

On Choosing a Piano.* By Algernon Rose. London: The Walter Scott Publishing Co., Ld.

THE SECRET WAY.*

Mr. J. S. Fletcher, author of "When Charles the First was King," "Three Days' Terror," etc., puts into three hundred odd pages of very readable type an exciting novel entitled The Secret Way, which bids fair to recall Wilkie Collins's enthralling mystery of "The Woman in White" of one's younger days. Similarity in detail of the remarkably clever plot, there is absolutely none; but we have the story written in two books by different people, a prologue and an epilogue, while the motive for the murders so cleverly committed is the same—the attainment of large family property and great wealth. We have too the confidential family lawyer, the good and wicked aspirants to the hand of the expected heiress, the foreign villain, the professional and amature detectines and—though it seems scarcely fair to tell—the inevitable happy ending.

But this does not come until after the reader's excitement, interest and curiosity have been fully excited and as fully sustained: we have no intention of "giving away" the clever means by which the writer arrives at his conclusion. Suffice it to add that anybody who wishes to while away the tedium of a railway journey, a long afternoon when there is nothing to do, or the horrors of a sleepless night, cannot do better than invest in a copy of this interesting book.

The Secret Way.* By J. S. Fletcher. London: Digby Long & Co., 18, Bouverie Street, Fleet Street, E.C.

ANNE JUDGE, SPINSTER.*

A very different style of novel is the next that lies before us for review—Anne Judge, Spinster, written by F. W. Robinson, author of "Grand Mother's Money," etc.

From a few plain facts occurring in a dull little English village and with no greater element of romance than a weak-headed youth heir to some property and the oft-told story of man's deception and woman's folly, the results of which affect the whole tenor of the life of the bright and wholesome heroine, the author has woven a pleasant and readable story, the interest of which grows with each succeeding page. There is little or no descriptive matter in the volume; and it speaks well for the vigour and force of the writer's methods that he is enabled to almost entirely dispense with description, sustaining the reader's interest in his narrative and his characters by his simple but effective pourtrayal of most of the human passions—good, bad, and indifferent: and also by means of cleverly constructed, very easy and natural dialogue, leading the story on step by step. Anne is a charming character, and all our sympathies are in favour of her not retaining her undesirable cognomen. But so cleverly is the interest sustained that it is not until we turn almost the last page that we are certain of what her fate, as well as that of her clever and original lover will be. It is seldom that a plain unvarnished story of everyday life, told in what would be in the hands of a less clever writer almost an uncompromising style, appeals so much to the reader.

THE STORY OF NOTATION.*

The Walter Scott Publishing Company have issued in their Music Story Series, edited by F. J. Crowest, an erudite and interesting work yclept The Story of Notation. In these wonderful twentieth century times, when the study of music, even in its simplest rudiments, has been placed on a strictly scientific basis, the volume lying before us will doubtless prove of much value to students and others interested in its history. A laborious task the compilation of the volume must have been, for, as the author very truly remarks in his preface, "the roots of our modern musical system lie so deeply embedded in antiquity" that the tracing of them can have been anything but easy work. The author—Mr. Abdy Williams—has spared no pains in what has evidently been to him a labour of love, and all that modern research can achieve has been done to present The Story of Notation in a most exhaustive form. Valuable works at home and abroad have been consulted, and the result is very complete indeed.

Chapter II, which the author invites "those who may be alarmed at the lengthy and strange-looking words used by Greek musicians"—to skip, is not the least interesting, for it gives the origin and development of the ancient Greek notation, and the ancient names of various obsolete stringed instruments, as well as other valuable information; while one of the chief features of the work is its numerous illustrations of various forms of notation. The final chapter, as is only fitting, concludes the history of notation with the modern Tonic Sol-fa system. The value of the work—which may on application to the publishers also be obtained in superior leather binding, in which form it would make a splendid gift book—is further enhanced by a very fine steel engraving of Dolci's well-known picture of "St. Cecilia Seated at her Organ."

Shikar.

THE FIRST DAY OF THE SEASON.

One morning last week I was gladdened by the sight of my faithful shikari, who brought me the welcome news that he knew of a spot where I might pick up a few couple of snipe. He mentioned the exact number—eight couple—and strongly advised my going after them at once.

For many moons past had the "faithful one" been eating the bread of idleness save and excepting only one unsatisfactory day when he enticed me out on a fruitless search for hares. Now he was anxious to get to work again, and to enjoy the enhanced tullub which successful work brings.

My few preparations were soon made. A cartridge bag filled with the remainder of last season's eights, and the time table for last March hunted from its lair, for we were to travel "up the line" a little way, though nothing of course would induce me to say up which line.

Your snipe shikari is as close as any oyster, and wild horses could not stamp the secret of his hunting ground out of him.

Whilst my preparations were in progress a tap at the door was followed by the appearance of my old chum C. Would he come with me and assist in the slaughter of the innocent eight couple? It would be a nice way of passing the afternoon.

He agreed provided I would lend him a gun and cartridges.

"Right you are, and we'll meet at the station at 2-45 sharp."

Here we are at the station, good old C. looking as cheerful as anything, in a knicker bocker suit, pipe-clayed boots and a stick-up collar. What! got no change of togs with you? Didn't think it necessary? Tut! Tut!!

An enormous baboo obscures all view of the ticket office. He has had his body, half in and half out of it for the last ten minutes. Thank heavens he is not hopelessly jammed, but is now backing out counting his change.

Two first returns to——. No, nothing shall induce me to mention the name of the station—and a couple of thirds for the faithful one and his youthful ally who are freighted with the implements of the chase and a few extras.

Lucky we have the compartment all to ourselves, and now I can explain the mystery of my spare gun to C. It is a Winchester repeating shot gun and takes a bit of knowing.

"And mind old man if anything jams or you get mixed up with it in any way don't try to do anything, but wait till I come to you." The habitual cheerful smile on C.'s face fades away and is replaced by a haggard, anxious look which I don't like to see.

"Here we are. It's quite close sahib, just down the line and over the stile," and wonderful to relate it is quite close. What a treat it is to be in amongst the young green paddy once more. We keep to the little bunds and don't trample it. "How hot it is," say C.; he has shed his coat and I suggest that he doff his collar. It is hot, the water is hot, the sun is hot, and the air is hot, but there are clouds about and the promise of rain.

In which direction Oh, faithful one, shall we find our quarry? "To the right, sahib, and, and if not there then away across your canal, close to those distant trees."

To the right be it. Slow going this with each foot heavily weighted with the clinging mud. Still to the right. "I am sure," moans C. "that snipe never sit in such deep water as this." "Courage mon brave"; they are not here, therefore they must be over there beyond the canal. "These shikaries are such liars," says C. fretfully, and then adds irrelevently, "I know what it is, I generally eat about this time."

Far be it from me to have C.'s death at my door either from hunger or heat apoplexy. Return therefore to the station and in the wicker basket seek refreshments; perchance too in the station may be means of drying those sodden hose.

And now to cross the canal by the mud dam which I see to the left and that as quickly as possible for time flies fast. Whirr!! What is that—missed him with the first, but got him with the second, and there, by Jove, is another one. Mark him down near that long grass across the canal, and then to the dam. A little blue kingfisher sitting solemnly, half way across, looks askance at us and darts off to a twig hard by on the bank. What do you see boy there in the water? A snake sahib; a tiny head with two beady little eyes just above the water. It was near those tall reeds that we marked that bird down, and there will be others there. Here they are, five of them, three fly off across the canal and after wheeling round and surveying the ground, decide to pitch close to the spot where we flushed that first bird. Two they leave behind to grace the stick.

A little farther on we put up half-a dozen more and secure a couple of them. It is dull and overcast now with a little rain falling, the birds get up silently and go away low, close to the ground. Not easy shots by any means. "It's going to rain a lot," says the small boy with obvious truthfulness An inky black cloud is rolling slowly across from the eastward and already we can hear the sound of the rain. What a deluge, but I have on an old waterproof fishing jacket, which keeps out the worst of it and how deliciously it cools one down.

Back again over the mud dam; slippery mud this time, where the little kingfisher again looks as though he would like to dispute our passage and hardly consents to move out of the way. Two more birds at the first spot and then to the station, where C. awaits us refreshed and cheerful albeit with wet feet. Dry clothes, a smoke and back in the train with our three and a half couple. Not a big bag, but the pleasantest afternoon I've spent for a long while.

THE WATERMAN.

THE NILGIRI GAME AND FISH PRESERVATION ASSOCIATION.

THE Annual General Meeting of the above Association convened for Saturday last, the 22nd August, took place at the District Collector's Office room. The attendance of members was far from large, only about a dozen being present. The Collector, Mr. Mullaly, as President of the Association, took the chair, and Captain Packard, Assistant Adjutant-General, Royal Artillery, took his seat as the newly-appointed Honorary Secretary of the Association, vice Mr. Gordon Hadfield, District Forest Officer, who has resigned.

A draft copy of the Annual Report having been circulated previously to all the members, it was taken as read and adopted on the proposition of Sir Frederick Price.

Colonel H. S. Fitzgerald, Messrs. J. Longmore, C. E. Martin, and F. E. Barber were duly proposed, seconded and elected as members of the Committee.

A vote of thanks was recorded to Mr. Van Ingen, the local taxidermist, for a statement of number of heads shot down during the year under review. This statement contained only those heads that were sent to him for treatment, so that it was not a complete list. In this connection Captain Packard emphasised the fact that shooters are not at all disposed to afford any information as to the number and measurements of heads bagged by them, they seem also unwilling to specify locality of their shoot. It was suggested by a member that printed blank forms should be issued to all license holders to be filled in and sent to the Honorary Secretary. The member evidently was quite forgetful of the fact that every license as well as his own had such a form printed on the back of it. It was therefore agreed that sportsmen should not be pressed for this information, notwithstanding that it would be very desirable for the Association to have same.

The Honorary Secretary then read a letter from Mr. L. W. Wynch, Private Secretary to His Excellency the Governor, Lord Ampthill, Patron of the Association, expressing his Lordship's inability to be present at the meeting from press of work, and that Lord Ampthill had read the Annual Report with much interest.

Much amusement was caused when a member proposed and was duly seconded that all Putta license holders—natives—should have the barrels of their guns reduced to one foot in length as is the practice in the Punjab. Another member sotto voce suggested that the stock of their guns should be removed.

The President said that he was not aware what the practice was in the Punjab, but he would enquire, and place the result of his enquiries before the Association.

Veterinary Surgeon Herbert Brown proposed and was supported by Mr. Mackenzie, that only three black buck and four spotted deer be shot during a season by any one license holder. This was carried unanimously.

The raising of the reward for the slaughter of wild dogs from Rs. 12 to Rs. 25 was then discussed, and it was finally resolved to do so.

It was unanimously carried that the shooting of ibex during the next open season should be permitted.

En parenthesis I gather from the report that Lord Ampthill it very desirous of having a Nilgiri Saddle—back to his name. The report says that his Lordship and others have seen large numbers of ibex at various places on the Kundahs, therefore there is sufficient to warrant the re-opening of the shooting of ibex.

The maintaining of game watchers on the Nilgiri lower slopes was then discussed. Mr. H. Percival Hodgson said these men were useless and an unnecessary drain on the funds of the Association, adding that a few of the useful men might with much advantage be employed on the plateau. Sir Frederick Price was of the same opinion, but one of the members thought that the Wynaad license holders would object to this, and that its consideration should lie over sine die to give them an opportunity to have their say on the matter. Mr. Hodgson very appropriately remarked that they had an opportunity of being present at the meeting and to enter their protest, but, having failed to do so, they must suffer the consequence. On the proposition being put to the meeting it was carried by a majority.

A stormy discussion ensued against the proposal of the Director of the Government Cinchona Plantations to hand over to his department for the extension of cinchona cultivation certain sholas adjacent to what is at present known as the Dodabetta Cinchona Plantations. The meeting unanimously recorded a strong and emphatic protest against such a measure, which the President said he would in due course submit to the Government for its orders. The financial condition of the Association was reported to be satisfactory.

INFORMATION WANTED.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Will you or any of your readers kindly tell me—

1. Is there a "close season" for "Ghoral?"
2. If not, can a Municipality or other similar body frame and issue any rules to prohibit "Ghoral" shooting?
3. What is the actual date of beginning and ending of the "shooting season," particularly with regard to feathered game? Is it the same all over India, or different dates for the various provinces?
4. Please quote authority.

"A TALK ON TONGAS."

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The tongas on some routes, though excellent in other respects, lack the sloping portion of the roof, both in front and behind, which so effectually keeps out sun and rain; consequently, unless provided with water proof or overcoat the passenger is liable to find himself wet through in half an hour. In some parts of the country the pole of the tonga is attached to the cross-bar by means of a stout spring, which is a distinct advantage. In the case of tongas in which the cross-bar is fastened direct to the pole by means of a pin running through both, it allows the cross-bar to swing forwards and backwards horizontally; but entirely prevents any vertical motion. Therefore, when one or both of the ponies break into a canter, considerable shaking of the conveyance is experienced. This is almost entirely avoided by using the spring already alluded to; both vertical and horizontal motion being then possible for the cross-bar, to the comfort of the occupants of the tonga. Wooden cross-bars are preferable to steel ones; the latter making such a continual clatter, especially when the ponies' pace is increased beyond a trot.

In the matter of tonga-saddles, upon which the cross-bar rests, they might with advantage be lengthened, so as to reach farther back over the loins of the pony. Not only would the weight of the traction be then distributed over a larger surface, but the saddle would be less likely to tip up backwards when ascending a steep hill, or under any other condition where the load is temporarily increased. Some readers may assert that the girths, if properly adjusted, should prevent any tipping up of the saddle. The girths of a tonga-saddle would be found to fulfil their purpose better, if they be not both passed round the "girth" of the pony, just behind the elbow, as in riding-saddles. It is an advantage for one of them to be passed round the abdomen, as far back as possible, as in the case of camels and some commissariat mules; the other girth being fastened in the ordinary position behind the elbow. In the case of a badly shaped pony, whose measurement round the "girth" is considerably less than round the abdomen, the tendency of the tonga-saddle (with the existing method of fastening the girths) is to continually slip forward; with the result that girth-galls are of frequent occurrence. True, the crupper may be tightened to keep back the saddle; but this is generally only "robbing Peter to pay Paul," because a tight crupper galls as badly as a girth does.

In the old country, it used to be considered the proper thing when driving a pair, for the slower animal to be on the off side under the whip. This allows silent stimulation of the sluggard, without the horse on the near side being aware of the fact. The tonga driver does not realise this; as often as not, the pony which requires all the whipping is placed on the near side Consequently, in reaching over to punish him, the better animal hears the whip, and increases his pace too. Undoubtedly, in matching tonga ponies, colour is often considered before the more important question of quality.

The bitting of horses is an art unstudied by the Indian coachman. Only the other day, a poor little tonga pony was seen wearing a great military curb bit, with the reins fastened as low down as possible. Luckily, the curb-chain was considerably looser than to allow only the regulation "two fingers" under it, or the pony's jaw would have been in danger. A suggestion was made, and carried out, that the reins be fastened higher up, where the brass bosses had once been. The throwing up of the animal's head, in rebellion against such unnecessarily severe treatment, then at once ceased. Woe to the poor unfortunate tonga-pony which indulges in the vice of biting! He will assuredly be muzzled with a leather bucket, with two tiny holes in the side. Presumbly, the holes are for the animal to breathe through; but they are seldom over his nostrils, which are effectually compressed by the tightness of the muzzle. Quite recently, upon four different occasions, has the writer, seeing the distress of the almost stifled pony, given him instant relief by cutting two holes in the muzzle with a penknife: the holes being exactly over, and the same size as, the nostrils. In each instance this was done whilst the coachman and a small crowd of syces averred that the relieved pony, which was now able to respire freely, would worry something or somebody. It was briefly explained to them that biting is done with the teeth, and not the nostrils.

On some tonga routes more than others the ponies get too near the pole, to the extent of rubbing the hair off their sides. This can be prevented by increasing the distance of the inner upright pins of the cross-bar from the pole. The metal rod, which is fastened between the ponies' heads to keep them apart, should be attached to the nose band under the jaw and not to the bit. When fastened to the latter, the corners of the mouth become numbed by continual jerking of the rod, and guiding the ponies then becomes a matter of difficulty. The inner reins of most tonga-harness are permanently stitched at their junction with the outer rein, instead of being fastened by a buckle, and provided with holes for adjustment. Some ponies, when at work, tend to lean inwards with all their weight towards the pole; others, from the pole, outwards. In the former case, slackening the inner rein at the buckle, and in the latter, tightening it, gives the driver power to keep the ponies from wasting their energies by unnecessary force towards or from the pole, respectively. A short time ago, the writer was being driven behind a pair of tonga-ponies, which were both pulling sideways away from the pole, to the extent of almost doing "the passage" required in the riding-school. There being no buckle at the junction of the inner and outer reins, the simple expedient was adopted of tying a knot upon each of the inner reins; the coachman was then able to keep the ponies straight. "Honour to whom honour is due": the tonga-driver, whatever his faults, knows perfectly well that in going up hill the weight tends to be behind the vehicle; whilst, in descending, the opposite is true. This is why he sometimes puts a heavy stone in the back of the tonga, when going down hill.

RULES.

DOGS.

(Rules 1 to 13 Rules of the N. I. K. A.)

1. Every dog exhibited must be the bonâ-fide property of the exhibitor. But should a temporary owner be empowered, during the real owner's absence from India, to exhibit in his own name such entries will be accepted on the production of a Certificate signed by the real owner to the above effect.

2. Any dog declared by a qualified veterinary opinion to be suffering from any infectious or contagious disease shall be disqualified.

3. A dog found to be objectionably "faked" by the officiating judge, whose judgment is supported by the opinion of a local Sub-Committee consisting of at least two members, assisted by a Veterinary officer, shall be disqualified and debarred from future competition at any show supported by the Association.

4. For the meaning of "objectionable faking" members shall be guided by the rules of the English Kennel Club, for the time being.

5. The case of any dog disqualified under Rule 3 shall be reported to the Secretary of the N. I. K. A. by the local management for necessary action. The owner of such dog shall, however, be allowed a right of appeal to the Committee of the Association whose decision shall be final.

6. Any other objection than that allowed for in Rules 3 to 5 can be made to the Local Committee, the members of which shall be empowered to decide it, subject to the proviso that an appeal can be made to the Committee of the N. I. K. A. whose decision shall be final.

7. In all cases of objection or appeal, the objector and appellant shall be required to deposit a sum of Rs. 16 each which shall be forfeited if, in the opinion of the Local Committee or of the Association Committee, the objection or appeal is of a frivolous nature.

8 All cases decided by the Local Committee shall be reported in writing within one month to the N. I. K. A. Committee, for purposes of record.

9. Whenever possible, separate classes should be formed for separate breeds.

10. All judging at shows in any way assisted by the N. I. K. A. shall be public.

11. In every show held under the auspices of the N. I. K. A. at least one prize for members only shall be given.

12. No dog imported after 1st January 1900, or born in India after 1st January 1900, shall, if cropped, be eligible for competition at shows held under these rules.

13. The term "bred in India" shall mean "begotten and born in India."

14. Entries.—All entries must be made on the special forms provided for the purpose and entry fees must accompany the applications.

15 Entry Fees.—First entry fees Rs. 2, for each dog. Second entry fees Rs. 3, for each dog. First entries close on 14th September, second entries on 21st September, after which no entries will be accepted.

16. Registration.—All dogs including puppies unless already registered must be registered in the N. I. K. A. books; special forms are sent out with entry forms which must be filled in and returned to the Honorary Secretary, with the entries. The Registration fee is Re. 1 for each Dog, and must be sent with the entry fees. Dogs already registered in the English Kennel Club Books are registered free in the books of the N. I. K. A. on production of registration certificate. Unregistered Dogs will be disqualified.

17. Chains.—All dogs must be provided with a strong chain and suitable leather collar. Exhibits sent with chains unsuitable for the purpose will be liable to rejection.

18. Identification Cards.—All dogs must be accompanied with cards, securely fastened to their collars, on which are written their name as well as the names of their exhibitors, thus :—

CAPTAIN PICKWICK'S
Black Spaniel Gunshy.

19. Instructions for entry forms :—

(a). In the "Breed" columns it is not sufficient to state merely "Terrier" or "Spaniel," etc., the exact breed such as "Wire-haired Fox Terrier." "Cocker Spaniel" or as the case may be should be clearly stated.

(b). Puppies should be declared as in Rule 20.

(c). Pedigrees if given should be very brief. It will be sufficient to name sire and dam.

(d). Prizes previously won should be mentioned in the briefest possible manner.

(e). Exhibitors may state in the entry forms if their dogs are for sale or not which fact will be shown in the catalogues.

20. Puppies.—A Puppy to be eligible must be under twelve months of age on the 26th September, 1903. Such Puppies may compete in other classes and if so entered will require fees as mentioned in Rule 15 for each class, and the entries must be distinctly recorded in the entry forms.

The exact date of birth of all puppies entered in the "puppy classes" must be given.

21. There will be two classes (big and small dogs) for soldiers alone, if there are sufficient exhibits. These two classes alone are post entries, and a nominal charge of 4 annas for each entry will be made. Dogs entered in these classes need not be registered. Soldiers wishing to enter dogs in other classes must do so in the usual manner.

GENERAL.

1. Judging will commence as soon after 10 A.M. as possible. Exhibits not in their places when judging commences will be liable not to be judged. The order of judging will be determined by the Committee. The decisions of the judges will be final, unless there is any such misrepresentation or breach of Rules as to render revision necessary, a point which the Committee will decide. Judges are empowered to withhold a prize, or prizes, in any class, if in their opinion there is a conspicuous want of merit.

2. No animals other than exhibits, will be allowed on the ground on any pretext whatever.

3. The Committee reserve to themselves the right to refuse any entry without assigning a reason; and to exclude or remove any exhibit which, in their opinion, is not in a fit state for exhibition from disease, vice, or any other cause.

4. The above Rules are subject to addition or alteration at the discretion of the Committee. Should any question arise not provided for by the Rules of the time being, the decision of the Committee will be final. All Exhibitors will be deemed to have agreed to abide by the decisions of the Committee on whatsoever point, and it is only on this understanding that entries will be received.

5. The Northern India Kennel Association will present Special Prizes, the terms of which will be made known hereafter.

6. Any exhibit intended for sale may be claimed at the catalogue price. All such claims to be made to the Honorary Secretary who will register the sale to the first claimant. In the event of two or more claimants applying at the same time for the same exhibit, so that priority of application cannot be decided, such exhibit will be auctioned among the above claimants, no exhibit will be recognised as having changed hands until the show is over. Ten per cent. commission will be charged by the Show Fund to vendors of exhibits.

7. Safety of animals.—The Committee will be most anxious for the care and safety of animals sent for exhibition, or any other property entrusted to them; but it must be distinctly understood by exhibitors and all other persons, that the Committee will not be responsible for the loss, detention of or damage to any animals or other property whether arising from accident or other cause whatever, or from any act or omission of themselves, their officers, agents, servants or others.

POONA SEVENTH EXTRA MEETING.

Wednesday, 26th August, 1903.

THE going to-day was very far from being on top and there can be little doubt that in many instances it affected the results. Being a week day (though Gunputi holiday) the attendance was not very large, but those who were present were good patrons of the ring.

The most interesting incident of the afternoon was the presence of Mr. W. Bass, the owner of Sceptre, who has added to his string nearly all the Hon. Capt Greville's best racing ponies, and it was on one of these that Mr. Bass sported his own colours at the meeting. He did not get away any too well on Stockbell, who was made favourite, but he rode a patient race, and wearing [illegible] his field won with something in hand. Mr. Bass has now a string in training with Bleach and his colours should be [illegible]ominently this season.

The Horse Hurdles drew a large number of entries but only a trio contested the stakes, and of the Kour Saheb's pair Stoddart was preferred to Pope. That old rogue Veneda took the lead up the straight and won; he was showing indications of curling up when Stoddart rattled up behind him in hot pursuit, but Mr. J. B.'s candidate was humoured and got home right enough.

Scott was disappointed no doubt but he got substantial consolation in the next event, for which Funny was well supported by his stable and the public, but there was good money also for Malice. In the end the issue lay between these two and Malice, who has come on a great deal lately, held the chestnut safe at the finish and won as she liked. Once more did Good Boy beat Free Trade, who seems to be running much below the form expected of him by his connections.

That Little Joker of Mr Essayie's pops up serenely when least expected to do so, and he won the Futurity Stakes after a tight race with Moored and Kour Saheb. The latter was in most demand and with the services of that accomplished horseman Robinson was confidently expected to win; but he was giving away a stone and more to those who finished in front of him, and no doubt the softness of the going militated against his chances.

Last year The Robber ran some most sensational races at Poona, and as Pearson, who has just come back to Poona, turned him out in fine fettle he was backed equally well as Oriental, but whatever chance he had was dissipated by too much use being made of him at the start and the heavy weights being pumped by the pace in the sticky going; the light weight bobbed up and Regret won from Skylark, with Oriental third.

Clarke has a really handsome little son of Petronel in his charge and his patience with this black horse, which came out last year, has improved each time he has run this season. The way he came with a wet sail after Alix on the Saturday previous and caused her to be shaken up gave backers a good line to go on and he was supported pretty freely, a little money always being laid on Madeira. He is a slow beginner, but seems to have a rare dash at the finish and just as in his race against Alix he lay back till the entrance to the straight and then came with one long run and won anyhow.

It is not often we see a two-year-old Arab on the course, but Bendigo is an exception to this rule. His début was duly noted and he ran so well that his chance in the Consolation Plate was considered decidedly rosy, and so it proved. Of course, he was getting a big stick of weight off for age allowance, but he won with at least a stone and more in hand. Connaught ran quite up to his best form, but could get no nearer than third.

POONA EIGHTH EXTRA MEETING.

Saturday, 29th August, 1903.

The racing to-day was full of interest. Five handicap events had to be negotiated and it was not to be wondered at that even the cognoscenti took a bad fall, the bookmakers wearing a self-satisfied smirk at the end of the day's proceedings.

There was as much excitement as could well have been wished for, with an objection which was upheld and a dead heat which was run off. Besides this it was the last visit of H. E. Lord Northcote to the course and he was cheered repeatedly as he went away. He has been a good patron to sport in the Presidency and he must have been pleased at the hearty reception he received.

It was hardly expected that Money Spinner would start in the Novelty Plate, but when he was declared to do so there was money for him despite his recent failures and under Jimmy Robinson the grey retrieved his character by running bang up to his private gallops and won like a game 'un. In view of this his recent failures go to show that he must have been out of sorts.

Victory won the Melton Stakes and Second Dealers' Plate at Bombay two years ago and what very often happens to the newly landed Arab who performs this trick he broke down in one of his fore legs. He was sold as a polo pony and getting into Captain Dunbar's hands was patched up and once more put into training and won some small races up-country. The W. I. T. C. handicapper remembering his breakdown no doubt allotted him 6st. 7lbs. in the New Stand Plate and he just got home nicely from Turkish Flag II, but it was a tight finish after a mile and a quarter, the verdict being obtained by only a neck.

Another disappointer got the race when Greyleg won the Dwarf Handicap Stakes. He was a winner by virtue of being bumped by Little Joker, who was first home but disqualified for bumping the grey at the finish; this gave Governor third place which was very welcome to those who still follow the aged chestnut.

Oh what a fall was there when Rocket won the Staff Cup from the better fancied Duldul and Hamilton! These two ran exceedingly well till Rocket came with a rattle at the end and won his patient owner a race at last. Colonel Eccles has a lot of ponies of sorts with which he has shown great perseverance and Rocket's success must have been very welcome.

Undoubtedly the event of the evening was the Horse Consolation Handicap. Acetine was left in but was not declared to start and after the numbers went up Carreewick was installed favourite, but not before the jaunting brigade were quite sure Firecracker was not the selected of the stable. A grand finish was witnessed, the favourite and Misty under the whip came along in great style, stride for stride, and the excitement was so intense that hardly a word was breathed: then a new feature was altered to the pent up feelings of backers, for Blue Blood seemed to come from nowhere and from some points of the stand it looked like a dead heat between the three, but Carreewick and Misty only had dead heated and Blue Blood had lost by a short head. Both owners declared to run off and Misty won anyhow leading the whole way: I think now that the son of Petronel has showed such wonderful form it is time to bottle him up for the big meeting. His two-mile races on Saturday will not add quite to his good chances unless he gets a spell off the game of a week or two. When I saw him soon after landing last year he looked undersized, but Clarke has worked wonders in him and after all blood tells.

Tragedian was run up to the shortest of odds and in a handicap calculated to give the whole field an even chance. Western Queen, one of the light weights, won, but what a grand mare Key West is. Placed at the top of the Handicap as she was she looked like a winner till the lightly treated Western Queen wore her down. Key West was giving the winner 2st. 8lbs. and lost by only three-quarters of a length! Olga ran badly on the whole. Her stable is dead out of luck this season!

Buktawar and Sweetlips were most fancied for the Selling Plate, but Talisman, who had satisfied Fowler in a private trial, was backed with some confidence by his owner and won easily, Mr. Fischer buying him in for Rs. 875. And so ended a good day's racing with a rather bad Monday for some whose transactions on the nod were not all on the right side of the ledger. Details:—

THE NOVELTY PLATE.—Winner, Rs. 200; second, Rs. 100; third, Rs. 50. For Arab ponies 14 hands and under which have not won flat race value Rs. 50 or over. 14 hands to carry 9st. W. I. Ponies measured previous to 1st April, 1899, 7lbs. extra. 5 furlongs.

LONDON, Friday, 14th August, 1903.

LEWES SUMMER MEETING.

FAVOURED with delightful summer weather, a large crowd patronised the first day's proceedings at Lewes on the 7th instant. The card contained seven entries, and, although fields were only of moderate size, there were sufficient runners to make the sport interesting throughout, and backers did fairly well. The De Warrenne Handicap was notable for the remarkable performance of Sandridge, who, carrying only 3lbs. short of 10st, gave Clairetta 3st. 8lbs. and a three-quarters of a length beating, the distance (five furlongs and a few yards) being covered in the quick time of 60⅘secs. Santry made short work of the opposition in the Astley Stakes. It was only his second time out, he having previously run second to Montem in the New Stakes at Ascot Tiger, winner of the Juvenile Plate, was bought in at the subsequent auction for 270 guineas, the surplus of 220 guineas over the conditional selling price being shared by J. Thursby, whose Ben Davies finished second, and the fund. Other horses to gain brackets were Merry Andrew, Folle Farine, Maisie II., and Bellivor Tor, the last-named in the Nevill Welter Plate, upsetting the odds laid on Lady Drake.

THE ASTLEY STAKES.—Of 710 sovs, for two-year olds; colts 9st, fillies and geldings 8st 11lbs; with penalties and allowances. T.Y.C. (five furlongs and a few yards).

(Winner trained by C. Morton.)

BETTING : 7 to 4 agst Sundridge, 9 to 2 Le Blizon, 7 to 1 Mauvezin, 8 to 1 Clairetta, 10 to 1 each Orchid, Ardeer, Robino, and Arabi, and 100 to 6 Lady Macdonald

Won cleverly by three-quarters of a length ; a length and a half divided the second and third. Le Blizon, close up, was fourth, Arabi fifth, Robino sixth, Orchid seventh, and Ardeer last. Time by Benson's chronograph 60⅘secs.

In view of an early finish, racing started at 1-15 on Saturday, the 8th at Lewes, when twelve runners weighed out for the Coombe Plate. Again the weather was delightfully fine, and there was a large attendence to witness exceptionally interesting sport during the afternoon. Mr. Peebles started auspiciously with Milk Way II., and subsequently won the Mount Harry Plate with Value. The odds laid on Priam to win the Hamsey Welter were never in doubt, and backers made no mistake either in selecting Lord Carnarvon's Mountain Rose to win the Lewes Handicap. Supported at 11 to 10 on, Floriform gave Mr. Thursby his second winning mount for the afternoon, and then W Lane added to his winning list by landing Sir J. Blundell Maple's Newsboy home in the Priory Stakes.

THE LEWIS HANDICAP.—Of 447 sovs. One mile and a half.

Won by three lengths ; a length divided the second and third. Ministre was fourth, Racine fifth, and Voodoo last throughout.

KEMPTON PARK SECOND SUMMER MEETING.

There was a very good attendance at Kempton Park on the 11th instant when racing commenced, notwithstanding the decidedly threatening weather early in the morning. Seven events were on the programme, and, taken altogether, the fields were fully up to the average for this season of the year. The principal event was the International Breeders' Two-Year Old Stakes, and favouritism at once being shared by Melodious and La Joie colt at 6 to 4, the former had little difficulty in winning from the little-fancied Queen Beauty, the Irish colt being third. Eight runners faced the starter in the Apprentices' Plate, won by Abstainer, Shaun Rhu falling even to obtain a place. The Rose Marjorie filly upset a very fancied article in Bourton Hill for the Vauxhall Selling Plate, and Country Girl won the Shepperton Handicap Plate, backers again being at fault. Ronald easily landed the Feltham Selling, after which Noblesse continued her winning vein by accounting for the August Handicap, the day's sport being brought to a conclusion when Bellivor Tor won the Hanworth Park Maiden Plate.

Due doubtless to the inclement weather experienced on Tuesday, there was a decided falling off in the attendance at Kempton Park on the 12th when the meeting was brought to a successful conclusion in splendid weather. Again the executive placed a capital programme before their patrons, and throughout the sport was interesting, good fields being the order. The card comprised six events, the principal item being the valuable City of London Breeders' Foal Plate, for which seven runners weighed out. Unfancied was looked upon as the pick of the lot, but he failed to get a place even, and the winner turned up in Mr. J. R. Keene's American bred Surbiton. Mr. H. Bottomley opened a very successful afternoon by winning the Mortlake Two-Year Old Plate, as, following this, he accounted for the Princess Plate with Le Blizon and subsequently the Teddington Selling Welter with Fantastic. Fielders had much the worst of the deal when Wrinkles won the Maiden Two-Year Old Plate at 6 to 5 on and when Cappa White gave the followers of Fallon's stable a good win in the concluding race, the Sunbury Handicap.

CRICKET.

YORKSHIRE vs. MIDDLESEX.—Played at Leeds on 10th 11th and 12th August. Yorkshire won by 230 runs. This match was by far the most important of this week, perhaps of the whole season, for a great deal depended on the result. It did not necessarily follow that the side which was victorious would be champion county, but the winning side would gain a great deal. It was more important for Yorkshire to win than for Middlesex to do so, because a defeat would almost certainly have damaged their chances so much that they would not be able to recover their lost ground. Under these circumstances it was not at all surprising that a very large crowd should have assembled on the first day. Both sides were almost at full strength, although the absence of Hunt may possibly have made a great difference to Middlesex. Yorkshire had the good fortune to win the toss, but the wicket at one end helped the bowling a good deal. Runs were only made with difficulty, and the Yorkshiremen had to play a game to which they are hardly accustomed. J. T. Hearne was especially hard to deal with, but without much doubt he would have been much more effective if the Yorkshiremen had not been allowed to become accustomed to him; he was bowling for an hour and a half without a break before lunch, and for two hours and a half afterwards—four hours in all, which is assuredly much too long a time for any bowler to be used with the best effect. The scoring of the Yorkshiremen was, as a rule, very slow, and it took them practically the whole of the day, with the exception of a break of twenty minutes on account of the bad light, to score 263 runs. Tunnicliff played what was undoubtedly his best innings of the season and for the greater part of it he was seen at his best. He never hurried, and was at the wickets for two hours and ten minutes for his 77. Hirst's innings of 52 was chiefly noticeable for its restraint, and he very seldom played in his usual brilliant manner, but he adopted the best game for the circumstances; he was batting for an hour and fifty minutes. By far the best cricket of the day was seen during the partnership of Hirst and Earnest Smith; it produced 53 runs in half an hour. At the end of the innings Haigh and Hunter put on a most useful 42 runs in just over half an hour. Middlesex had to go in for about twelve minutes and Macgregor and E. A. Beldam scored seven runs without loss. Thus, on paper, there was very little to choose between the two sides, for with plenty of batting, Middlesex stood a more than reasonable chance of equalling the Yorkshire total. But as a matter of fact, with the weather very unpromising, their chances were not really as good as they seemed, although, as it turned out, there was no rain. Another large crowd assembled on Tuesday morning, and as it was composed entirely of Yorkshiremen, there was much rejoicing at the downfall of the Middlesex team against Hirst and Rhodes. In three-quarters of an hour five wickets fell for 30 runs. At the end of the innings Rhodes came with a rush and nobody could stand against him. The visitors' innings only lasted for a couple of hours. Yorkshire were leading by 174 runs, but Lord Hawke decided not to make Middlesex follow on. It was thought that there would very likely be some sensational cricket in the Yorkshire second innings after what had happened to Middlesex, but the team played even better than on the previous day, and at the close of play the total was 233 for six wickets, or 407 runs on, so that Middlesex were in a desperate position. F. S. Jackson played a magnificent innings on a wicket which was anything but easy, and Brown, Denton, and Ernest Smith all did exceedingly well. On Wednesday morning Lord Hawke at once declared, leaving Middlesex with five hours and a half in which to make 408 runs, or play out time. Jackson's unfinished innings, which was his highest of the year, was in every respect worthy of a great cricketer. Middlesex lost Moon before a run had been scored. But Warner and Beldam then played so finely that at one o'clock the total was 78 for one wicket. At 83 F. S. Jackson was put on for the first time. Every ball in his first over was difficult to stop, but Beldham played each one in masterly style until the last, which was just too good for him; he had batted in a manner quite worthy of his reputation. So far there was nothing to show that Middlesex might not at least play out time, but with the departure of Beldam the fortunes of the game veered round again, and from that moment Yorkshire were winning hand-over hand. But as long as Warner remained there was hope, for he was playing easily and well. Douglas was uncomfortable and was lbw to Jackson at 107. At 115 Lord Hawke made a splendid catch at point and thus Bosanquet was disposed of for six. Then came lunch, with Warner still going strong, and four wickets down for 120. In the second over after lunch Warner was bowled by Rhodes after playing a beautiful innings of 58 in two hours and a-half. Total 123. Things were nearly hopeless now, and although the tail did fairly well, nothing could stop the Yorkshiremen, who at four o'clock had the pleasure of gaining the first victory of the season over Middlesex. Jackson's bowling had a lot to do with the success of his side and all-round play in the match was so good that it makes one regret more than ever that he is not going to Australia.

MIDDLESEX vs. GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—Played at Bristol on 6th, 7th and 8th August. Middlesex won by 272 runs. On Saturday morning there was about as much likelihood that Middlesex would win this match as that Shamrock III. will carry off the America Cup, for Middlesex with four wickets down in their second innings were only 70 runs on. Again later in the day when Middlesex declared, their chance of winning seemed almost infinitesimal, for Gloucestershire had to bat on a good wicket with only two hours and a half before them. On the first day the play was fairly even, although possibly Middlesex had a little the best of the game, since they had made 245, and had dismissed Rice, C. L. Townsend and Wrathall for 72 runs. There was nothing at all remarkable in the day's cricket, for although nearly all the Middlesex team made a few runs, C. M. Wells alone made over 50. Even this innings was not quite as interesting as is usual when Wells is concerned, for the strokes were not always made with confidence, while defence was much more noticeable than defiance. On Friday C. O. H. Sewell played a good game for Gloucestershire, but the most attractive cricket of the day was shown by Langdon and Board, who, coming together with the total at 156 for seven wickets, were not parted until they had increased it by the same number of runs in a couple of hours, this giving their county the lead instead of leaving them with a long adverse balance, as at one time seemed very probable. Langdon, who, after playing himself in, hit with great determination, was at the wickets for two hours and thirty-five minutes. Middlesex had now to make 81 runs before drawing level, and lost Warner, Moon and Beldam before this was accomplished. But Douglas and Bosanquet greatly improved matters by putting on 76 in an hour for the fourth wicket. Bosanquet's share of these runs being 52. The total at the end of the day was 151, Douglas being not out 40, and McGregor not out 10. There was a surprising change in the fortunes of the game on Saturday, for Douglas played a wonderfully good innings, while MacGregor, who has so often made a useful score after going in over night to play out time, was seen to very great advantage. His partnership with Douglas produced 132 runs in an hour and three quarters. At lunch time Douglas and Wells had brought the total from 267 to 330, and Middlesex were 219 runs on with four wickets in hand. It began to look as if they would soon be able to declare but it was not until more than another hundred runs had been put on that the innings was closed.

Whether it was the fear of Jessop that had caused the Middlex captain to leave Gloucestershire to make 374 runs in two hours and a half, or a wish to allow Douglas to make his two hundred, or a feeling that it would be impossible to get Gloucestershire out on a good wicket in such a short time, matters not. In any case the innings was closed as soon as Douglas had made over two hundred. He was two hours and a quarter in scoring his first fifty, but made his runs much more quickly afterwards his entire innings lasting for five hours and a quarter. His partnership with Wells added 187 for the sixth wicket in an hour and three-quarters. Wells was seen at his best in this innings. Gloucestershire entered on their task at four o'clock, and it was nearly an hour later when the first wicket fell, so that no one on the ground dreamed that the match would be finished. But three men were out when the total was 51, and Jessop and Brownlee fell to two successive balls. Five for 58. This startling change was brought about by Bosanquet and Wells, who, when they once got a start, bowled with great judgment. Sewell did his level best to stem the tide of disaster, but by six o'clock Middlesex had gained a wonderful victory.

CELTIC F. C. SPORTS.

There was a large attendance at the sports of the above leading Scottish Football Club, held in Glasgow on Saturday, the 8th instant. A 100 Yards Invitation Handicap formed the chief attraction, and in this, in addition to A. F. Duffey and J. S. Westney, of America, there competed Dennis Murray, the Irish champion, and W. Murray, who won the Booth Hall Plate last week, R. W. Wadsley, and two Scots in J. P. Stark, of Glasgow High School, and J. Murray, of Saltcoats. The finish was a magnificent one, the High School sprinter winning by inches from Dennis Murray, whose namesake was a foot behind. Duffey ran disappointingly, as also did R. W. Wadsley, both being outside the first four. The "gate" and stand receipts totalled £780, and it is estimated that over 25,000 spectators were present. Chief results :—

One Lap Cycle Handicap (amateur).—Final heat : J.S.Benyon, scratch, 1 ; J. Threlfall, Southport, 12 yards start, 2 ; W. Smith—St. Andrews, 60, 3. Won by a length. Time, 38 ⅘sec.

International 100 yards Invitation Handicap.—J. P. Stark, Glasgow High School, 5½ yards start, 1 ; J. Murray, Saltcoats, 6, 2 ; Dennis Murray, Dublin, 3 ; J. S. Westney, Greater New York I.A.A, 2½ 0 ; W. Murray, Dublin, 4, 0 ; R. W. Wadsley, Los Angees, 3, 0 ; A. F. Duffey, Georgetown University, scratch, 0. All were away to a good start, except the little American champion, and the race resolved itself into a struggle between the limit men, with Westney coming up hand over hand. The three placed runners had only half a yard between them. Time —10secs.

100 Yards Flat Race Handicap.—Final Heat ; D. Murray, Dublin, 3½ yards start, 1 ; D. G. McCrae, N.A.C., 2 ; J. Anderson, Queen's Park. 3, 3 ; F. Watson, Deniston, 12, 4. The Irish sprinter ran splendidly, and secured a popular win by inches. Time—9 ⅘secs.

Half mile Flat Race Handicap.—A. Russell, Walsall, 40 yards start, 1 ; W. H. Mill, West of Scotland H., 30, 2 ; D. Hilston, S.A.F.C., 57, 3. Won by twenty yaras. Timed, 1min—57 secs.

High Jump Handicap.—C. Leahy, Ireland, 5ft. 11in., 1 ; R. G. Murray, Scotland, rec 2in., 5ft. 10 in., 2 ; P. H. Leahy, Ireland, 5ft. 8in., 3.

Putting the 16lb Weight.—Dennig Horgan, Banteer, 45ft., 1; Thos. R. Nicolson, Kyles Athletic A.C., 44ft., 2. In this the latter established a Scottish native record, the previous best being 43ft 3in.

440 Yards Flat Race Handicap—Final heat : G. M. Oliver, Jedforest, 12 yards start, 1 ; W. G. Wylie, Dunlop F.C., 14, 2 ; W. A. Hewetson, Motherwell, 23, 3. Won by a yard ; same distance between second and third. Time,— 51 ⅘secs.

Throwing the 16lb Hammer.—T. R. Nicolson, Kyles Athletic A.C.-53ft 1in. Dennis Horgan, Banteer, 124ft. 8in, 2. New Scottish record.

Long Jump Handicap.—P. Leahy, Ireland, 22ft. 10½in., 1 ; Con Leahy, Ireland, rec. 1in. 22ft. 10in., 2 ; R. G. Murray, West of Scotland H., ree 2ft. 6in 20ft. 11½in.

Five-mile Scratch Cycle Race.—J. S Benyon, Chester, 1 : A. E. Liddell. Newcastle-on-Tyne, 2 ; C. H. Threlfall, Southport, 3. Capital finish, won by a wheel. Time,—12mins 57 ⅕secs.

Another very successful supplementary meeting was held at Celtic Park, Glasgow, on the 10th instant, under the auspices of this club. Such was the interest in the meeting no fewer than six thousand people were present. The Open Hundred, which throughout produced some excellent running in spite of the strong wind, was won by Dennis Murray, the Irish champion, off three yards, who has had the unique distinction of pulling off two sprint handicaps at the same gathering, and the significance of the victories lies in the fact that the Sprint Handicaps of the Celtic Club are regarded as the most important of the Scotch season. A. F. Duffey, the American, took part in the race, but was only third in his heat in 10mins ⅘sec. In the cycle events, Benyon, who lost his connection at Leith for Copenhagen, where he is to represent England in the World's Amateur Championships, participated, but was unexpectedly beaten in the Three-mile Scratch by Threlfall, of Southport, while in the Two-lap Handicap, in which there were practically two races, the English crack, owing to the loafing tactics of the backmarkers, only got third. It is estimated that the drawing from all sources for the two days would fall little short of £1000. Details :

100 Yards Handicap,—Winners of heats : J Marshall, Stewart's, College, 10 yards start ; D. J McCrae, Edinburgh University 8½ ; W. Dodd., Stevenston. 10 ; A. Kerr, Bellahouston H, 8 ; J. C. Taylor, West of Scotland H., 8½ ; D. Williamson, Ayr, 13 ; J. Wood, Olympic H., 11½ ; J. Baxter, Shettleston 12; J. Cameon, Maryhill H., 8½ ; T. Dunning, Springburn H., 11; W. Johnstone, Garscube H., 12; A. Aitken, Ayr, 10½; Dennis Murray, Dublin, 3; M. Quail, Clydesdale H., 9; F. McCall, Ayr Parkhouse, 10; and T. Collins, Springburn H. 11; Final heat : Murray, 1; Marshall, 2; Aitken, 3. A grand race, the Irish champion winning by inches. Time,—10 ⅕sec.

Two-lap Cycle Handicap.—Winners of heats : Brownlie, East Stirlingshire, 40 yards start ; Ben Jones, Wigan, 40; J. Brook, jun, Stalybridge, 28; J. Benyon, Chester, Scratch; J. Thomson, Rutherglen Wheelers, 100; J. Somerville, S.C.U., 120 ; J. E. Gilchrist, Wishaw, 45 ; and R. S. Stewart, Pollokshaws, 40. Final heat: Thomson, 1; Somerville, 2 ; Benyon, 3. The limit men had matters all their own way, the backmarkers showing a disinclination to make the pace, and Thomson won easily. Time—1min. 19⅖ secs.

220 Yards Handicap.—Winners of heats : J. Wood, Kelburn, 15 yards start; W. Smith, West of Scotland H , 17; Thos Dunning Springburn H., 17; J. S. Westney, New York, 3; F. McColl, Ayr Park House, 16; J. Ramsay, Ayr, 18; A. Aitken, Ayr 17; W. G. Wylie, Dunlop F. C., 12 ; and T. Ramsay, Bellshouston H., 15. Final heat : Ramsay, 1 ; Wood, 2 ; Wylie, 3. Won by half a yard. Time—23⅖ secs.

Three-mile Cycle Scratch Race.—C. H. Threlfall, Southport, 1 ; J. S. Benyon, Chester, 2 ; J. Brownlie, East Stirlingshire, 3. Won by two yards ; a wheel between second and third. Time—7mins 31 ⅘ secs.

1,000 Yards Flat Handicap.—S. Kennedy, Garscube H , 34 yards start, 1; W. H. Mill, West of Scotland H., 35, 2 ; S. G. Young, Paisley H., 50, 3. Won by three yards ; five yards between second and third. Time—2mins 16 ⅖ secs.

H. Martin vs. one mile flying start and 1 mile standing start records created new Scottish figures, the times being 1min 8⅖ secs, and 1min 21⅘ secs respectively.

CYCLING.

A remarkable ride, even taking the most exaggerated form of artificial pacing into consideration, was accomplished on Saturday last at Charles River Park Track, Boston, by Ben Munroe, a young American pace-follower. In the concluding stage of a four-day race of one hour per day, Munroe, De Guichard, and Lawson faced the starter, and as the former announced his intention of going for the world's hour record a standing start was taken instead of a flying one as is generally the custom in paced races in the States, so that in the event of Munroe being successful the record could be officially recognised. Getting away quickly, Munroe soon secured a lead on his rivals and got inside records at five miles. Sticking closely to his work, and riding like an automatic machine, he succeeded in covering the remarkable distance of 49 miles 210 yards in the hour, as against Henri Contenet's previous best of 48 miles 1,222 yards, accomplished at the Parc des Princes Track, Paris, on July 5th. De Guichard finished second with a score of 47 miles 1,055 yards, and Lawson, who had trouble with his motor, third with 39 miles 176 yards. The total classification for the four days was: Munroe first with 190 miles, De Guichard second with 180 miles, and Lawson third with 150 miles. The track has a wooden surface and is five laps to the mile, being considered the fastest in the world. We are now gradually reaching fifty in the hour, which will no doubt be accomplished before the season closes, and our Paris correspondent informs us that Hall, the English representative, stands a good chance of being the first to perform the feat judging by his recent private trials. In competitions and record-breaking essays he, however, is very unlucky.

SWIMMING.

A.S.A. HALF-MILE CHAMPIONSHIP.

At Harold Park, Lowmoor, near Bradford, on Saturday, the Half-mile Amateur Championship was decided. There were five entrants, but only three faced the starter, viz., D. Billington, of Bacup (holder), Law, of Chadderton, and Shorthouse, of Salford. A good start was made with Billington leading the way. He kept a steady stroke, and when a quarter of the distance had been traversed he was four yards ahead of Low, with Shorthouse a yard further away. At the half-distance, Billington had increased his advantage to twelve yards, the position of the other two being unchanged. At the three-quarter mark Billington was leading by two dozen yards, and he won in easy fashion by about thirty-five yards in 13min. 10⅗secs. Low was second and Shorthouse third. Billington, it will be remembered, recently placed the One Mile Amateur Championship to his credit.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

Kees' Corner was the scene of the meet on the 22nd ultimo and hounds soon found at Druid. They ran their jack through Baikiel to the foot of Denmark Shola, where he went to ground but was routed out and killed. Jackal Shola was then drawn blank but hounds viewed near Rawlings' Shola and a sharp burst followed through Round Shola, Martyn's Shola, Shaw's plantation into the Yemakal Valley to Parson's Valley, where the jack was lost.

On the 27th ultimo the meet was at Sandy Nullah Toll Bar The swamp below the 6th milestone on the Pykara Road was drawn blank. Then hounds oponed on a couple of cold scents. Below Bracken Cover jungle sheep, sambhur, and porcupine were started so hounds were called off and Briar Shola and Gibb's Shola were both drawn blank. A jack was started below Staircase and gave hounds some good work. They hunted him over Staircase and Herbert Plantation and into Yemakal Valley where hewent to ground near Yemakal Shola.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

A FAIRLY large field assembled at the Canal Bridge on the old Satara Road to do honour to the Master and seek for sport on the 23rd instant, though the meet in question is not I gather one of the most popular. But the unexpected oft times happens and Colonel Sheringham has been showing such wonderful sport of late that lovely women and brave men fear to shirk a single day lest peradventure they should miss the enjoyment of bonne bouche and suffer the ignominy of being pointed at with the finger of contumely by more fortunate comrades.

The large nullah between the place of assembly and the far-famed hill of Parvati—crowned with its gleaming temple—was the first venture and one not without success, for a jack was soon afoot and streaked away for Dunkwadi. (May Fortune send I write these weird names aright !) Over the most appalling ground lay the line, rocks and stones, innumerable and steep hillocks in rapid succession with here and there a stone wall of very "warrantable" size and I heard of one hunter badly injured I believe over one of these Galway obstacles. Towards Ambegaum this hill jack led his field and the pace was too good, taking together with the nature of the ground for all save the first flighters who had most of this brief but severe little run practically to themselves, as I hear from one of the ruck that only a select handful really rode this hunt through from find to finish An effort on the part of the now pad weary jack to seek sanctuary in a field of standing crops was promptly frustrated be the relentless drive and vigour of Colonel Sheringham's killers—the peerless Poonas and killing Kirkees—and once more this bold Reynard faced the open But he had evidently grasped the sad fact that all was lost save honour and loth that his glorious end should be witnessed by but a few he circled round and back to the main body of the original who were performing the hapless duties of rear guard hereto fore and with one last dying request to the Master to bestow his brush on Mrs. Lucas, who has thus happily nicked in with the rest this good jack murmuring "I die that Sport may live" was rolled over and yielded up the ghost. A slice of luck for the straggler apparently and a trifle rough on those few who bore the heat and burden of the fray, though in such cases as some of us have known in days gone bye (may blest Providence be praised even for its memories) virtue has its own reward. I suppose there are greater joys on earth than being "alone with hounds." But I have seldom quaffed them. After breathing time, the Master moved on to try Katraj Ravine and one of the native whips in an agony of excitement announced that he had viewed a jack sneaking away in the distance. The Master lost little time in getting hounds on to the line—indeed for a moment or two they seemed to overrun it—a mistake which was promptly rectified—too promptly indeed, as before this a parently soft-hearted jack could make up his mind which way he had better steer his course hounds were on him and any further mental indecision or his part had of necessity to be deferred till he reached the coverts of the happy grounds. Some very likely looking country was then drawn without success and when the hound cart and private vehicles hove in sight the day was still young and sporting ardour unassuaged so the Master—ever ready to turn on the tap of sport to those who thirst there for—readily took the hint to try on and drew the country in the direction of Kondwa. On nearing the Solemn Towers of Silence where our Parsee friends go for their last journey on this earth of ours, a festive little chinkara jumped up to relieve the solemnity of the moment and led hounds a merry scurry and shortly after a brace of these sprightly little beauties sprung up and joined in the fun playing havoc with all discipline for the nonce and by the time order was resumed it was time to wend one's way homewards. Barring for the lucky few who snatched golden fortune by appropriating the first run when they got the opportunity it was not apparently a great morning's sport, but Fate gives to those who take and those who missed it had only themselves to blame. But for all it was a healthy sporting morning, for fresh air and exercise are better than physic and physicians.

Owing to the Fancy Dress Ball at Government House on the previous night only a small field saluted the Master at Aundh on the morning of the 27th, only one lady having, I am told, the energy to put in an appearance. The first move was made to some jowari fields which were, however, barren of jackals. Recrossing the nullah the Master drew a covert which has seldom failed in the moment of need and fortunately did not damage it's reputation on this occasion. After a few brief moments of anxiety a joyful whimper coming from the further end of the covert proclaimed glad tidings which were speedily confirmed by a burst of music from seventeen couple of deep-toned throats and a "gone away" from the Master set everyone agalloping to make up lost ground. The going was quite of the best until reaching a precipitous hill up those break-neck heights hounds raced at a pace which left no possible doubt as to their wonderful fitness. So steep was it that few reached the summit in their saddles, even the Master I hear doing a lead. On reaching the top the jack must have jinked left handed, a most unfortunate effort at wiliness on his part as a few couple of hounds a bit to the left cut him off and humbled him over in some long grass on the hill top. Time about 15 minutes, very fast to the bottom of the hill, but the rest of it as may be inferred somewhat of the mountaineering description. After performing the usual obsequies the Master sinking the hill drew along the river bank trying several lantana coverts on the way which to everyone's astonishment and disgust were drawn blank. Leaving the river side hounds happened on a jackal in a jowari crop and ran him into another standing crop, where he performed several circles before being again forced to face the open. A faint-hearted jack he must have been for running was evidently not to his liking. Whether he preferred natation I cannot say, but he made straight for the river. Any attempt at suicide was, however, frustrated, as before he could reach the flowing stream hounds ran into him in some long grass near the bank. The next move was to the Botanial Gardens, near the Ganeshchind back gates which, however, seems to have sheltered nothing more sporting than wild cats and after fruitlessly drawing this likely but disappointing covert the Master gave it up and made for home.

FIRST ROUND.

THE Poona Junior Polo Tournament has filled remarkably well this year, the presence of the Hyderabad Contingent regiments and a sporting veterinary class helping to swell the entries, while, the popular Buff's regiment has entered two teams.

Heavy rain caused a postponement of a week in this fixture and on Thursday last owing to a continued downpour it was feared that either a further adjournment would be necessary or that the reune would have to be changed to Kirkee, where the ground is not in such apple-pie order as that at Poona.

Proceedings opened, however, in king's weather and some excellent play was witnessed on Monday, 24th August, when the Veterinary Class, thanks to the brilliant play of Major Chesney, defeated the Buffs' B team and the Oxfords after tying with the R. F. A. won a keenly contested match after time had been extended and the goal posts widened in the opening phase of the chukker by Major Chesney they were unproductive. Score : Veterinary Class 1 subsidiary. Buffs nil. Time—6mins. 10secs.

Second Chukker.—A most determined attack by the Veterinarians just missed scoring and then the Buffs secured the sphere Beevor having the legs of his nearest opponents scoring a subsidiary and adding another off his own stick almost immediately afterward. Chesney, who had had one or two smart attempts to break loose nipped in the bud at length got away and scored a subsidiary, the chukker which closed soon after being a fairly even set to. Score : Veterinary Class 2 subsidiaries ! Buffs 2 subsidiaries. Time—11mins. 40 secs.

Third Chukker.—Some rather hot play before the Buffs' goal resulted from the restart and it was with some degree of luck that the Buffs cleared their country and carried the war into the Veterinary lines, here Chesney in attempting to clear gave Hawley an opening which the latter failed to take advantage of but he redeemed the mistake a moment later by scoring a goal and a subsidiary. The Veterinary bucked up and closed the chukker by scoring a goal. Score: Veterinary Class 1 goal 2 subsidiaries, Buffs 1 goal 3 subsidiaries. Time—17 mins. 3 secs.

Fourth Chukker.—The Buffs showed out in the attack and Beevor after one abortive attempt scored a subsidiary from a long range. Up and down play followed and then Chesney seized the ball and hitting out to Forsyth placed it so well that the latter was able to score a goal easily Score : Veterinary Class 2 goals 2 subsidiaries, Buffs 1 goal 4 subsidiaries. Time—22 mins 47 sec.

Fifth Chukker.—After some sticky play near the pavilion the Buffs scooped the ball out and invaded the opposite country ; after a few short exchanges Knight was given a chance and siezing it scored a subsidiary, the game ending soon after. Score : Veterinary Class 2 goals 2 subsidiaries, Buffs 1 goal and 5 subsidiries. Time—25mins.

OXFORD L. I.	R. F. A.
1 Mr Weatherby	1 Mr Martelli
2 „ Keyworth	2 „ McDonough
3 Capt Carter	3 Major Strange
Back : Capt Firth	Back : Major Geddes

Umpires :—Captains Harbord and Davie.

First Chukker.—As soon as the ball was thrown in Carter carried it away and despite the opposition scored a subsidiary. The Gunners cleared their country at once and a determined combined attack resulted in their No. 1 hitting a subsidiary. Up and down play of a non-productive character in which Strange was conspicuous ensued. Score : R. F. A. 1 subsidiary. Oxfords 1 subsidiary. Time—7 mins. 2 secs.

Second Chukker.—Some fast play up and down the ground with both goals jeopardized resulted in the Gunners making a somewhat good combined run down, but the ball was soon returned to Firth, who went away in great style and scored a goal. To this the Gunners replied with a subsidiary by Strange. Score. R. F. A. 1 goal 1 subsidiary; Oxfords 1 goal 1 subsidiary. Time 13mins. 2secs.

Third Chukker.—Some rather careless play got the Gunners penalised, but the Oxfords did not score from the free hit. After some fruitless runs Weatherby got possession and placed the sphere into the mouth of goal. The Gunners should have cleared but failing to do so Weatherby wheeled round and with a back hand scored a subsidiary and Strange closed the round by equalizing. Score : R. F. A. 1 goal 2 subsidiaries. Oxfords 1 goal 2 subsidiaries. Time—18mins. 12secs.

Fourth Chukker.—Now up, now down the field was the ball borne, misses being made by both sides, but the best efforts of Strange and Weatherby were useless and the chukker closed without any addition to the score. Score : R. F. A. 1 goal 2 subsidiaries., Oxfords 1 goal 2 subsidiaries. Time—21mins. 32secs.

Fifth Chukker.—A barren 28secs. play resulted in a draw.

Extra Chukker.—The Gunners were guilty of a dangerous foul and Carter with a good eye to his hit scored a goal. The Oxfords were now most aggresive and Weatherby showed up to advantage scoring a goal after one futile attempt. Mr. Donough, who had not shown up much in the previous chukkers now brightened up and after a fine run scored a goal and Strange was almost able to beat Firth when Weatherby paid him too serious attentions to allow of straight hitting. Geddes, however, who was not going to have the Gunners denied scored a subsidiary. Time—30 mins. Score : Oxford 3 goals 2 subsidiaries. R. F. A. 2 goals 3 subsidiaries.

On Tuesday two more games were played and the first of these was a somewhat one-sided affair, the Poona Gymkhana quartette proving far too strong for the officers of the 2nd H. C. Lancers and winning by 5 goals and 6 subsidiaries to 1 goal. Captain Davie, Royal Scots, played quite up to his old form and as back kept his country clear with great success, while Mr. Keighley of the well-known Central India Horse team and Captain Meynell A.-D.-C., did tremendous execution. Captains Harbord and Bird on the opposing side worked hard but without success for the opposing team but were not able to stem the tide of affairs.

Although the 3rd Bombay Cavalry won the other match by a fairly respectable margin the game was a most interesting and fast one, some really brilliant play being shown by both sides. Captain Alexander and Anderson were throughout conspicuous for the Cavalry, while for the Buffs Captains Hickman and Baker tried hard to make matters even. The weather was good and a large audience including Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Northcote were present to witness the play.

Umpires :—Major Edwards and Capt Hewett.

First Chukker.—The Lancers were quickest on the ball, but Davie pulled them up and the Gymkhana No. 1 carried the ball smartly in the opposite direction. Lambert tried to save disaster by Keighley would not be denied and scored a subsidiary and a moment later he scored another subsidiary. The Gymkhana bore down a moment later, while Bremner paid attention to Lambert, Bremner notched a goal. Score : Gymkhana 1 goal and 2 subsidiaries, Lancers nil Time—5 mins. 31 secs.

Second Chukker.—The Gymkhana were smartly in possession, but Birch pulled the ball out of the fire, not for long, however, was it kept out of the Lancers' goal, Bremner scoring. The Lancers then made two futile attempts to score, but the Gymkhana got hold of the sphere and Bremner having carried down passed to Keighley who scored a goal. Score : Gymkhana 3 goals and 2 subsidiaries Lancers nil. Time—11 mins. 42 secs.

Third Chukker.—The Lancers opened the attack strongly, Harbord being distinctly dangerous, but Davie managed to save and a moment later carried down himself and scored a subsidiary adding a goal in quick succession. Birch well backed up brought off a goal to which Bremner immediately replied with a subsidiary before the chukker ended. Score: Gymkhana 4 goals and 5 subsidiaries, Lancers 1 goal. Time—16 mins. 45 secs.

Fourth Chukker.—The Gymkhana were simply galloping over their opponents in this chukker, Bremner scoring a subsidiary at long range and later well supplied by Davie scored a goal. The period was all in favour of the Gymkhana. Score: Gymkhana 5 goals 6 subsidiaries, Lancers 1 goal. Time—22mins. 14 secs

Fifth Chukker.—Play was of a somewhat more even character, but neither side was able to add to the score. Which was : Gymkhana 5 goals 6 subsidiaries, Lancers 1 goal. Time—25secs

3 Major Edwards	3 „ Porter
Back : Capt. Alexander	Back : Capt. Barker

Umpires :—Col Onslow, R. E. and Capt. Hewett, C. I. H.

First Chukker.—The Cavalry were able to wear down the opposition by degrees and eventually through Alexander scored a goal. Up and down play of a very even nature followed, the goals of both sides being assailed but kept intact. Score: Cavalry 1 goal, Buffs nil. Time—5mins. 25 secs.

Second Chukker.—Anderson was very nippily away and scored. Restared the Cavalry attacked but the ball was immediately returned and Barker, who was able to run right down the field, scored a goal in fine style. The Buffs now pressed hotly and seemed like scoring again but for the fine way Edwards pulled the ball out of the fire. Score : Cavalry 2 goals, Buffs 1 goal. Time—10 mins. 57 secs.

Third Chukker.—The Buffs were quickly put on the defensive and for a time their goal was distinctly endangered ; a good combined run, however, brought relief and Hickman getting a good pass scored a subsidiary. The Cavalry put out their best efforts in the latter part of the chukker and their No. 2 hit a pretty goal. Score : Cavalry 3 goals, Buffs 1 goal 1 subsidiary Time—15 mins. 57 secs.

Fourth Chukker.—A foul marked the opening phase of the chukker, the Cavalry getting a free hit, but failing to score. Both backs were conspicuous during this period and Alexander crowned a fine long run with a goal. Score : Cavalry 4 goals. Buffs 1 goal 1 subsidiary Time—21 mins. 12 secs.

Fifth Chukker.—The last period nearly saw the Buffs' score increased, but neither side was able to get through. Score : Cavalry 4 goals, Buffs 1 goal 1 subsidiary. Time—25mins. Timekeeper—Major Murray.

SEMI-FINALS.

We expected to see two games in the Semi-finals played off on Thursday, but an objection was lodged against the Poona Gymkhana team (1) that some of the ponies played were not the property of the players and (2) that the rule of the junior tournament which restricts a team to only one member who has played in a first-class tournament was contravened. The Stewards were in position to decide point No 1 at once, but they were not qualified to decide the second point as it was not known definitely whether Mr. Meynell had or had not played at Quetta in an open polo tournament.

As a via media it was suggested that the personnel of the team should be altered and their match against the H. C. Lancers replayed or that some other player should be subsituted for Meynell in the Semi-final against the 3rd Bombay Cavalry.

The objection was settled on Thursday night by the Poona Gymkhana team scratching.

The Oxfords opposed the Veterinary Class in the Semi-finals as advertised and playing with great dash were able to make rings round their opponents. Major Chesney strove hard to keep the Vets from defeat, but the mounting of the Oxfords was superior and their combination much more effective than that of their opponents. The riding off of Keyworth was very plucky, while Weatherby fairly outplayed the opposing No. 2. The score of 5 goals and four subsidiaries to one subsidiary fairly represent the respective play of the two teams.

OXFORD.	VETERINARY.
1 Mr Keyworth	1 Capt Gresson
2 Mr Weatherby	2 Mr Forsyth
3 Capt Carter	3 Major Chesney
Back : Capt Firth	Back : Mr Kearsey

Umpires :—Col. Onslow and Capt. Hewlett.

1st Chukker.—The Vets opened well but got pulled up sharply near the Oxford's goal. Keyworth essayed a good run, but being baulked passed to Weatherby who failed to score. Major Chesney got on and galloped down in rare style, but danger was averted. Just before the period closed a foul against the Vets let the Oxford through and two subsidiaries were promptly registered. Score : Oxfords 2 subsidary. Vets. nil Time—5min. 10secs.

2nd Chukker.—The chukker opened disastrously for the Vets, Keyworth snatching the ball from the restart and scoring a goal immediately. Some good combination a little later gave Weatherby an opening and he notched another goal. Chesney now showed out conspicuously but was not well backed up, the Vets, however, after a mêlee before goal scored a subsidiary. Score : Oxfords 2 goals and 2 subs. Vets. 1 subs. Time.—12 mins. 3 secs.

3rd Chukker.—Aggressive methods by the Oxfords marked the opening phase of this round and Weatherby missed the goal by an ace, only a subsidiary accruing after a long run down the field. Carter was the next to break loose and scored a goal. The Vets made futile efforts to avert the disastrous tide of affairs and a combined movement gave the Oxfords yet another subsidiary. Score : Oxfords 3 goals, 4 subs Vets. 1 subs. Time—17mins. 7secs.

4th Chukker.—Some fast but badly directed play was witnessed for some time, till at length the Oxford back got away and scored a goal. Score : Oxfords 4 goals 4 subs, Vets, 1 sub. Time—22mins. 52secs.

5th Chukker.—Fast play mostly in favour of the Oxfords and ultimately while Keyworth paid great attention to Gresson, Weatherby secured the ball and had an unopposed and successful shot at goal. Score : Oxfords 5 goals and 4 subs, Vets. 1 sub. Time—25mins.

On Friday the H. C. Lancers met the 3rd Bombay Cavalry in the second game of the Semi-finals.

The game was a very fast one and the Cavalry had the best of matters throughout. The latter team changed positions, Alexander going No. 3 and Edwards back. Anderson (No. 2) and Alexander combined splendidly and did most execution. Do what the Lancers would they could not avert defeat, the Cavalry running out winners by 5 goals and two subsidiaries to one goal and one subsidiary.

The Cavalry combination was so good on Friday evening that it will be a good fight between them and the Oxfords on Monday in the Final. I am disposed to think that the Cavalry will carry off the Cup although it must be admitted that they are a shade less well mounted than their opponents, but when it comes to riding off I fancy the "Luskerwallahs" will come off victorious.

3RD BOMBAY CAVALRY	2ND LANCERS H C.
1 Duffadar Fazand Ali	1 Mr LeMarchant
2 Capt Anderson	2 Capt Birch
3 „ Alexander	3 „ Harbord
Back: Capt Edwards	Back: Mr Lambert

Umpires :—Captain Dane, Royal Scots and Captain Hewlett, C.I.H.

1st Chukker.—Alexander opened the Cavalry score with a goal and before the chukker closed the Lancers throughle Marchant equalised, but on the whole the Cavalry had the best of the exchanges. Score : Cavalry 1 goal, Lancers 1 goal. Time—5mins.

2nd Chukker.—Play opened with the Cavalry on the aggressive and Anderson scored a subsidiary, it might have been a goal, but for Birch's attention. For a time the Lancers pressed hard, but Alexander cleared the Cavalry country and ended by saving a goal. Score : Cavalry 2 goals 1 subsidiary Lancers 1 goal. Time—10 mins.

3rd Chukker.—After up and down play of a pretty even character the Cavalry broke away and Edwards and Alexander combining the latter added another goal to the score. Not long after Anderson became irresistible and notched yet another goal and further contributed to the score with a subsidiary. Score : Cavalry 4 goals 2 subsidiaries, Lancers 1 goal. Time—15mins. 40secs.

4th Chukker.—The Lancers pressed hotly and their No. 2 managed to score a subsidiary, but they were kept well engaged thereafter. Some rather up and down play resulted in Harbord scoring another subsidiary. The chukker was distinctly in favour of the Lancers. Score : Cavalry 4 goals and 2 subsidiaries, Lancers 1 goal and 2 subsidiary. Time—21mins. 20secs.

5th Chukker.—The Cavalry No. 1 went down in great style and passed to Anderson, but the effort was unproductive ; later the same player was able to hit a goal. Score : Cavalry 5 goals and 2 subsidiaries, Lancers 1 goal and 2 subsidiaries. Time—25mins.

The racing parson, if not as extinct as the dodo is rapidly passing out of existence, and though one may occasionally come across a "white-chokered" individual at Ascot or other of our most select gatherings, he is such a rara avis as to attract general attention. Even in his day he was not a favourite with his bishop, though there were, of course, exceptions.

A good many years ago now one of these jovial clerics departed in hot haste immediately after the sermon one Sunday morning, and the clerk gave out that there would be no service that afternoon, as the parson had gone to Lewes Races. That fixture then began on a Monday, and as the parish we are speaking of was in another county, and railways were not then in existence, he found it impossible to wait for the afternoon service.

Some busybody, being extremely shocked by the announcement posted off to the Bishop of Winchester, and with a very long face complained that there was no evening service, as the parson had gone to the races.

"And what of that?" inquired the bishop, coolly, showing none of that ecclesiastical indignation which his informant had expected.

"But he is going to ride," persisted the latter.

"Is he! Then I'll bet you two to one he wins," was the quick rejoinder.

PERHAPS the most magnificent contest which the Ascot Gold Cup has ever furnished was that which ended in a dead-heat between the Duke of Cleveland's Tim Whiffler and Mr. Merry's Buckstone in 1863. Tim Whiffler had been an extraordinarily good performer as a three-three-old, and was made favourite, both for the actual race and in the run-off. Yet, to the surprise of most of the onlookers Buckstone won the decider easily by a length and a half.

The result of the race was a mystery to most sportsmen of that day very few being in possession of the facts of the case, which were as follows: The weight both horses had to carry was 8st. 7lb., but the normal poundage of Tim Whiffler's jockey was 9st. 5lb., and for some time previous he had experienced great difficulty in scaling below that weight. Though not having any fraudulent intention, he was too lazy to waste, and he had such a high opinion of his horse's merits that he thought he could win even though thus heavily handicapped.

"But how how did he manage to pass the clerk of the scales?" will be asked. Well, he was smarter than that functionary, for the instant the register indicated 8st. 7lb., he cleverly dug his spur into the ground and lifted himself out of the chair.

Since that time it has always been insisted upon that jockeys shall be weighed out with their feet in the air, though one rarely hears of any anxiety on the part of either owner or jockey to carry more weight than the handicapper has apportioned.

RUGBY IN CALCUTTA.

CALCUTTA vs. CITY.—Played on the Calcutta ground last Thursday, the home team gaining an easy victory by a goal five tries to nil. The visitors started the ball and after some loose play in mid-field A. Siddons opened the scoring for Calcutta, no goal resulted, but it was not long before two more tries had been scored by Berridge and Landon The place failed on both occasions and half time arrived with Calcutta leading by 9 points to nil. On resuming the home team continued to have the best of matters and three more tries were obtained by Dunlop, Martelli, and Bell. The last was the only one converted, Calcutta winning as stated.

CALCUTTA B. TEAM vs. CUSTOMS.—On the Calcutta ground last Monday the home team had an easy victory over the Customs by two goals and two tries to nil. The visitors did not show good form, their combination being poor. After some loose "scrums" Rowe got away, but was brought up by Martelli and play transferred to the Customs' twenty-five Some good work by Ragshawe and Martelli resulted in the latter getting over, but the try was not converted. The Customs did not improve in the second half and the home team had it all their own way. H. Sherman crossed the line and Martelli did the necessary. Yule then scored a try; Martelli followed up with another which he converted, Calcutta thus winning by 16 points to nil.

CALCUTTA vs. BALLYGUNGE.—On the Calcutta ground last Saturday the homesters beat the Suburbans team by two goals and two tries to nil. In the first half the game was of a very scrambling nature. Ballygunge got away, but were brought up by Newton and Crawford getting possession crossed the line, Siddons converting. On changing ends F. Siddons scored two tries, the latter being improved on by A Siddons, who was credited with the fourth try from which no goal resulted. Ballygunge were unable to score and the game ended as stated.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE premier club have by their recent victories over Ballygunge, Customs, and City proved themselves far too strong for any of the local teams to tackle with any prospect of success, although the Armenian Club must be exempted until they have shown their capabilities in the return match with Calcutta, which takes place on Monday next. The match against the City, which was played on Thursday last, was a very one-sided affair and is worthy of notice only by reason of the continued feeble attempts at goal-kicking by the home team, who were only able to convert one out of the six tries scored!

There can be no denying the fact that Calcutta are sadly in want of a reliable goal-kicker as, is evidenced by their record up to and inclusive of last Saturday, which shows that out of 48 tries scored—a large proportion of which have been in comparatively easy positions—only 16 have been successfully converted. This unsatisfactory feature of an otherwise excellent team has no doubt been the cause which has led to a generous supporter, who does not desire his identity disclosed, presenting a cup to be competed for annually for place kicking, and it is sincerely to be hoped that this will result in an improvement being shown in this department of the game.

The competition this year takes place on Tuesday next, and present appearances point to several aspirants for the trophy, but in naming either France, Brown or the younger Siddons as the ultimate winner I don't think I shall be found wide of the mark

Despite the fact that Ballygunge were eventually beaten by sixteen points to nil in their match against Calcutta on Saturday last, the suburban club gave their formidable opponents a very hard game indeed, which must be considered especially meritorious, as they were playing one short throughout and were without Hayward and Harvey. In the pack they fully held their own, although a much lighter lot than Calcutta, which tends to show that several of the home forwards were not working too hard; whilst they were very little inferior at three-quarter back, but it was at half that Ballygunge were badly served, as Macdonald and Crawford completely outmanœuvred and outplayed the opposing pair.

Of the suburban forwards Browne, Voigt and Horncastle worked hard throughout, the latter being especially prominent in the loose; at half. Hemingway, who usually plays three-quarter, was no match for Macdonald, to whom he was opposed, but King did some good defensive work, his tackling and spoiling tactics often proving successful. Of the three-quarter backs Dundas and Bagshawe were most prominent, but they seldom had opportunities in consequence of the slowness of the men in front of them. Dick at full back was not at his best his fielding of the ball was very faulty.

For Calcutta Bell, Szczpanski, and Heilgers were always to the fore, as was Dunlop; but the latter has not yet cured himself of his tendency to play offside, whilst Heilgers was repeatedly penalised for "foot up" in the scrum. Crawford at half was a distinct improvement on Jacob, as although somewhat slow he appears to know the game and feeds his three-quarters judiciously. Landon at three-quarter gave a very indifferent display; he still sticks to the ball far too much and on Saturday quite starved his wing man, Sherman. In addition to this he must learn to run straight. Newton saved the side on many occasions by his clever feinting and long kicks, which invariably found touch.

The first big match of the season takes place on Saturday next when the following will probably be found doing duty for the respective teams:—

England.—H. Sherman, back; Landon, the brothers Siddons and V. Sherman, three-quarter backs; Williams and Crawford, or King half-backs; Berridge, Pell, Brown, Browne, Simpson, Harnack, Hilary and Szczpanski, forwards.

Scotland.—Newton back; Dundas, Dick, and two others, three-quarter backs: Macdonald and another, half-back; McLeod, Whitie, Heilgers, Dunlop, and others not yet selected, forwards. It ought to prove an excellent game, with England, who will be much stronger behind the scrimmage, ultimate winners by a small margin.

Everyone will be pleased to learn that the Casuals, who were again beaten by the City on Saturday, have, despite their bad luck, decided to enter for the Cup. Other entries up to date include Calcutta, Welsh Regiment, Customs, Madras, Armenian Club, West Riding Regiment, and City—so an excellent tournament should result.

As stated in my notes last week, the prospects of the premier club being able to send a strong team to Bombay for the Rugby Tournament appear very bright, as the following have all intimated their willingness to make the journey, if selected, viz :—

Back Dick; three quarter backs, Martelli, the brothers Siddons, Landon, Dundas and Bagshawe; half-backs, Macdonald, Crawford, and Legge; forwards, Berridge, Brown, Browne, Bell, Heilgers, Dunlop, Szczpanski and Hilary, with McLeod and Whitie as possibles. The pick of these ought to be capable of making a very bold bid for victory, and it is many years since Calcutta have had such a chance of lifting both Cups.

UPPER INDIA AMATEUR TOURNAMENT.

THE long looked for Gulmarg week has at last arrived and the anxious men and ladies gathered together to compete for the championship had their opening day on Monday, the 17th August. The first event commenced at 10-30 A.M., the sun shining brightly for a wonder, yet the greens were wet, and though the greens was deplorably squashy, owing to the recent heavy rain, first-rate drives and second shots stopped exactly where the ball fell. There was no run on the balls, the lofting iron was principally used to get out of the wet grass and mud. The very best players were puzzled and came to grief. The bunkers were torrents one was glad to escape. At the first green approach about the distance for a good drive was a villainous pathway used by baggage ponies going and coming from the south side of the Merg; the hoof marks were plentiful, in fact perfect traps for the Haskell ball, which was principally used. As the drive was over the hill and down the other side it was impossible to see where to direct the ball. Luck was everything to enable the player to get his second shot near the green. An indifferent hit lodged you in the meandering stream which guarded the front and right side of the green. At the back was a nasty drain for taking off the water; in dry weather this was a 4 hole, but on Monday it was anything between a 5 and 9 hole.

On Tuesday the contest was continued for anthor 18 holes, by that time the ground had got better, yet bad enough for unlucky men, as here and there it was swampy still, and many a good man had to play a stroke under great disadvantages. In the first round Captain Elsmie with a handicap of 14, showed up well with a net score of 80. Then came Captain Williams, and R. Robertson with 83 each. In the second 18 holes Captain Elsmie still played steadily and finished with the same score as he did the day before, total 160. There is little doubt that he played well. Being a stranger his play was not known, otherwise he might not have been so liberally treated in the handicap.

The ladies' handicap was played in the afternoon, each day 14 holes. In this instance the handicapping was indifferent, the good players had not a ghost of a chance against Miss Bond with 56 for 28 holes. There is no doubt there is very great difficulty in handicapping as all the ladies have a grievance; never mind how liberal you are to them. The Honorary Secretary I understand had a bad time of it when trying to do his best. The very great difference between a net score of 114 and 194 shows his exertions to please them all was not crowned with success.

The sun has been shining brightly for the last four days and drying up the links leaving the greens in perfect order, owing to the untiring exertions of Private Smith, the green man.

The first two to start were McAllan of the Cameronians, who won the Championship last year against Brown. the play was good at first, then McAllan fell off and his opponent improved and won by 6 holes and 5 to play. Capt. J. Hill, who won the Championship in 1901, had a bye as his opponent Crum scratched at the last moment. Mackenzie was too strong for Vanrenen. L. Robertson beat Major Curll 3 up and 2 to play. Carter beat Macmahon 9 up and 8 to play. General Anderson beat Holland. R M. Robertson of the Black Watch won against Captain Blois Johnson. Williams and Elsmie byes A. D. Anderson beat Colonel MacLean, Boyd beat Hunter Blair 1 up, Captain C Davies beat Young easily, Phelps beat Browne, Medley and Buist byes.

On the second rounds. Hill opposed Brown, both good men, long drivers; at the 15th hole Hill was one up, a hard drive placed him well over the river. Brown was unfortunately placed, but his second shot was a grand one on to the green. Hill went twenty yards to the left, but a mashie loft put the ball within 6 inches of the hole. Brown overshot the hole, and his next put was fatal as the ball moved as he struck at it and he had to try again and missed the hole. Hill holing out, the 16th tee shot placed Hill in a bad place from which he lofted into the river. Brown winning the hole, Hill was now 1 up and 2 to play. Both drove exceedingly well at 17th hole. Hill's second shot being six feet from the green. Brown slightly further off his mashie shot overshot the hole considerably. Hill by a carefully played loft lodged his ball within 6 inches of the hole. Brown missed his put and Hill won by 2 up and 1 to play. Mackenzie beat L. Robertson, General Anderson beat Carter, R. M Robertson beat Williams easily. A. D. Anderson and Elsmie fought it out well, being ties at the 18th hole. In playing off the tie Anderson won. Boyd beat C. Davies after a most exciting match on the last green. Phelps beats Browne and Buist beat Major Medley 4 up.

3rd Round.—Mackenzie played well and Hill seemed to be off his game so was beaten. R. M. Robertson went away from General Anderson and won easily. A D. Anderson was beaten by Boyd, who played good Golf throughout. Buist beat Phelps.

4th Round. R. M. Robertson in a masterly manner managed to beat Mackenzie, Boyd and Buist played well, and at last Boyd forged a head and won.

The putting with the new core ball was anything but good, all the matches were lost on the green.

The finals of 36 holes came off on Saturday between R. M. Robertson of the Black Watch, and Boyd of R. H. A both hailing from Musselburgh and St. Andrews, young fellows who played Golf when able to toddle, There was no resisting their steady play. The older players of renown had to make way for the youngsters and enviously watch from the adjacent hillock, how lads taught at St. Andrews can play. The first 18 holes was so evenly contested that there was not much to choose between the players. Most of the holes were done in 4 and 5; the long hole with its numerous pitfalls was an exception. The course was superb drying well after the recent rain. In the afternoon the last round was played and at the 11th hole Robertson was five up. Here Boyd made an effort and won hole after hole for four holes running by real good play. After a hard tussle Robertson won the next hole. Both drove well at the 16th, Robertson being on higher ground lofted across the river on to the green. Boyd failed in his lofting shot and dropped into the river. Owing principally to the bad tie this shot was fatal as it gave the hole to Robertson who ended the contest by 3 up and 2 to play, thus winning the Silver Shield and Championship of Upper India. Boyd played pluckilythrough out: Robertson in his quiet unobtrusive manner played accurately without show.

LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.

The Ladies commenced in the afternoon, the entries were few as the reputation as players of some of them kept the timid from trying their luck. Mrs. Laverton was beaten by Mrs. Williams 5 up and 4 to play, Mrs. C. Davies disposed of Mrs. Kennedy 7 up and 5 to play. Miss Morgan won against Miss Nicholetts, and Mrs. Vores beat the last year, champion Miss McDonell. In the Semifinals Mrs. C. Davies beat Mrs. Williams easily. Mrs Vores disposed of Miss Morgan after a hard fought battle by 2 up. In the finals the struggle was well maintained up to the last. The holes were won and lost alternately. As both played well till the 15th hole which was a difficult up hill one, it seemed when one of them made an indifferent shot, the other followed. At the 17th hole Mrs. C. Davies was leading by one. Mrs. Vores' drive at the 18th hole unfortunately lodged her ball on the road on the other side of the green, in a deep cut. An unfortunate penalty for a long drive, the mashie stroke was a failure, and she had to play again. Mrs. C. Davies cleverly approached the hole with her mashie shot and holed out in 3, and won the Silver Sheld and Championship for 1903.

Colonel and Mrs. J. B. Hutchinson were "At home" on the 18th green and all were most hospitably entertained. In the evening there was a big dinner at Nedon's Hotel, which did not satisfy the ladies as some were allowed to sit in the drawing-rooms. As no gentlemen were forthcoming to take them in, they had to follow and find their seats as they could. The lady champion was left in the cold till a sub had pity on her. One young Boer I understand amused himself by altering the names by which idiotic proceeding several ladies sat in a line together as also did several gentlemen.

There were numerous speeches made and the proceedings" wound up by a dance till midnight, when "God Save the King ended the tournament week.

One morning in the spring of 1848 a number of touts were in the tavern discussing the advisability of soon having a "celebration," when Stebbing, who was behind the bar, said that, as they had all been very respectful and had not given him away too much, he would add some money to the fund in order that a better spread than usual might be put on. In due course the dinner was brought off, Harry acting the part of host in fine style. After the cloth was removed, spirits were forth-coming, and the trainer voted a "good sort."

The following morning any amount of messages were received by the horse-watchers from their patrons inquiring why Flatcatcher had been backed so heavily for the Two Thousand Guineas. Ofcourse the touts were unable to give any explanation, and it was not until after Flatcatcher had won the Guineas that it was known the head lad and Basham, the jockey, had tried the horses while the dinner was in progress, and that Flatcatcher had gained a six lengths' victory.

CALCUTTA GOLF CLUB TOURNAMENT.

The earlier stages of this annual tournament do not call for much remark, but considerable interest was taken in the final tie between Mr. A. F. Simson and Mr. T. Drimmie which was played on Monday last and after a most determined struggle resulted in the narrowest of victories for the former. Mr. Simson, who has won several times before, is by far the strongest player in the club and was heavily penalised, with the result that Mr. Drimmie, pitching very well soon took a long lead. Mr Simson, however, eventually caught him up and after an exciting finish won by two points, the score being 42 to 40. Both men showed excellent form. The final tie was 42 up and all the others 21, and the following is the result of the various matches :—

First Round.

Mr. G. Gillespie (8) beat Mr. J. B. Warburton (12) scratched.
" T. Drimmie (3) beat Mr. W. D Stiven (scr).
" C. Engel (6) beat Mr. G. Pickford (9) scratched.
" W. T. Reid (scr) beat Mr. F. H. Stewart (8) scratched.
" J. S. Smith (5) beat Mr. D Drimmie (10)
" T. McMorran 6) beat Dr. W. Forsyth (6)
" A F. Simson —5 beat Mr. D. Pym (3).
" E. T. Plummer (9) beat Mr. B. O. Roberts (9)

Second Round.

Mr. T. Drimmie (3) beat Mr. G. Gillespie (8).
" C. Engel (6) beat Mr. W. T. Reid (scr).
" T. McMorran (6) beat Mr. J. S. Smith (5).
" A. F. Simson —5 beat Mr. E. T. Plummer (9).

Third Round.

Mr. T. Drimmie (3) beat Mr C. Engel (6).
" A. F. Simson —5 beat Mr. T. McMorran (6).

Final.

Mr. A. F. Simson —5 beat Mr. T. Drimmie (3)
by 42 points to 40.

THE VACCINATION OR IMMUNISATION OF DOGS AGAINST DISTEMPER.

IN the year 1896 Professor Lignieres discovered the specific microbe of distemper, termed a cocco-bacillus, or the Pasteurella canis, the common characters of which resemble those of the microbes of fowl cholera, equine influenza, swine-fever, guinea-pig destemper, white scour and lung disease of calves, &c. Following on this, Dr. Phisalix investigated a disease of the guinea-pig resembling canine distemper, and isolated a similar microbe which he afterwards cultivated in such a manner that he was able to vaccinate the guinea-pig and prevent the disease. After this, he applied the same method to the dog and during the last three years many thousands of dogs have been vaccinated in various countries, including France, Algeria, Alsace, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Switzerland, Great Britain and Ireland.

It reduces the liability to the disease from ninety to one hundred per cent. to five per cent., and the mortality from ninety or fifty per cent. to two or three per cent.

The principle of the method is that introduced by Pasteur in 1880 for fowl cholera and afterwards for anthrax and rabies, and by other authorities for black-quarter and many other microbic disease.

It consists in producing active immunity in a dog by injecting a series of virus-vaccines of various grades af virulence. These vaccines contain the living, but attenuated, microbe of the disease, and when injected at suitable intervals, a degree of resistance, proportionate to the dose or virulence of the microbe, is obtained. This kind of immunity, which is comparatively slowly produced and lasts a considerable time, must be developed before the onset of the disease. It is preventive, but can never be curative.

It does not cause the disease and is not injurious to those animals already effected, but, if properly carried out, prevents natural infection or contagion.

The first inoculation is made with a very mitigated or attenuated culture, called the first vaccine : fifteen to twenty-one days after this a second inoculation or vaccination is performed, this time using a more virulent or stronger culture—the second vaccine. For the majority of cases the two inoculations are sufficient However, in very sensitive animals, and in kennels where malignant distemper usually rages, a third inoculation may be deemed necessary. This third inoculation may be made either by using a larger dose of the second vaccine or by using a still stronger, or slightly attenuated culture—the third vaccine, allowing an interval of one to three months from the second inoculation.

The dose of the first vaccine is, for a puppy of six to eight weeks old, 2 cc.; of eight to twelve weeks, 2½ cc.; and over twelve weeks, 3 cc.

It should be injected under the almost hairless skin inside the thigh, after it has been previously washed with warm water and soap. The best kind of syringe to use is a Roux' sterilisable antitoxin syringe, which should be sterilised in boiling water before use. It should have a capacity of 3 to 5 cc., ent (a cubic centimetere is equivalent to 16·9 minims).

The dose of the second vaccine is from 2 to 3 cc It is to be injected, under the usual precations, fifteen to twenty-one days after the first inoculation, but under the skin of the opposite thigh.

If a third inoculation is decided upon, this may be done with either 4 cc. of the second vaccine, or 2 cc. of the third vaccine, one to three months, the latter preferably, after the second inoculation.

The vaccine should be freshly prepared and, after the bottle has been opened, used up at once. If it is not going to be used immediately it should be kept in a dark, cool place, such as a cellar, as light and heat cause it to deteriorate. Before use the bottle should be well shaken up, when it produces a light turbidity. I have used musty and mouldy vaccine without producing any swelling or illness.

Within a few hours after the injection there may be a slight feverishness, characterised by temporary loss of appetite and slight dulness ; also, there may be stiffness of the inoculated limb, especially if there is a swelling, which is to be desired, at the seat of the injection. Usually the animal is "itself" after a few hours. I have never seen any accident arise from the inoculation. Beyond the few phenomena above mentioned, it seems very harmless to dogs of all breeds, even including Japanese spaniels, toy Griffons, toy Pomeranians, &c, of all weights and of all ages, provided they are strong and free from disease or infection. Healthy puppies or adult dogs only should be vaccinated.

It should be adopted early, preferably at the age of two months, before the puppies are exposed to the risk of coming in contact with distempered dogs, or of being placed in infected quarters or surroundings. Although two months seems to be the most suitable age, dogs of any age may be vaccinated to advantage.

The vaccinated animals should be kept in a clean, warm and dry place, free from draughts, but well ventilated, and should have suitable food given them they ought not to be allowed to drink out of dirty pools, or eat filth or come in contact with other dogs, until at least a fortnight or three weeks after the second or last inoculation. The disease is not likely to be prevented if the dog is exposed to contagion during the vaccination period, or is already the subject of the infection at the time of inoculation. Baily's Magazine.

IMPORTED POULTRY FOR INDIA.

THERE has been a good deal of complaint lately about the unfair dealing of poultry exporters in England with Indian and colonial correspondents, inferior birds having been sent and charged for at exorbitant rates I therefore think it may be timely to point out that for people who want poultry for practical purposes—as opposed to fanciers' monstrosities—there is very little need to send home at all The indigenous mooreghee is certainly not the beau ideal of gallinaceous beauty, neither has it a brilliant laying record or an opulence of flesh ; but there are to be had birds of a much better stamp. From the Calcutta dealers can usually be procured "black China fowls" of a large size, which are simply the original "Langshan," a breed which the home fancy has now spoilt by breeding it ridiculously long on the leg. The Orpington, a good useful breed with a preponderance of Langshan blood in it, has clean short legs, whereas those of the Langshan are not only long, but slightly feathered. Many of the Chinese birds to be seen in Calcutta have clean legs, and these should be selected in preference, as feathers on the legs are useless and only harbour dirt.

For a cross with either this breed or the common country fowl the native game-cock or "Asel" should be employed. This bird is nearly the same breed as the "Indian game" so much kept at home, the latter being merely not bred up to the true indomitable spirit of the Asel, which sometimes exactly resemble it in plumage but is more compact in build.

The pure Asel hen is intolerably quarrelsome and the worst of layers, but the cock, with his very meaty figure, is a splendid cross for any breed deficient in flesh on the breast and a bird beaten in the ring will do well enough for this The jungle fowl itself, which can easily be tamed, is a fine table bird, but rather too small for use in the pure state, a cross between the jungle cock and black China hens should give a hardy well-shaped bird of a good useful size.

The Bussorah fowls to be had in Bombay are a very serviceable breed in build ; they much resemble the English Dorking, but have not the absurd deformity of the fifth toe ; they are of various colours, and often crested They are, I believe, good layers.

It is therefore pretty obvious that for general purpose fowls we need not go outside India ; non-sitting breeds are hardly wanted where incubators are hardly used, unless anyone yearns for an unusually large egg-yield, when the importation of some Leghorns, Minorcas, or Hamburghs might be desirable. But it should always be remembered that birds, so long as they are not cross-bred, need not be up to show form to be serviceable specimens of the breeds they represent, the practical utility of the various races interesting the show breeder very little if at all. The existence of the Asel in India where it has been known for about a century at least, shows that a pure breed can be readily kept up without exhibitions when bred for a practical purpose, even if this be the brutal sport of cock-fighting.

I believe it would be found that the old English fighting game now largely resuscitated, would be on the whole the best pure breed for India, if such a breed he much desired. It is in many cases a very fair layer and always a fine table-bird ; it is a good forager, and its extreme activity and courage will I bring it out of dangers to which an ordinary fowl would succumb helplessly. Cocks of this breed have been known with their natural spurs to kill a kite and even a fox ; and hens in defence of their broods have slain a rat, a rook, a hawk, and a weasel. An observer in Shetland found that the fighting game was the only breed of poultry which did well with them, being alone able to resist the hooded crows and ravens ; a cock on one occasion knocking one of the latter almost senseless, and teaching a much-needed lesson to a tame Bouxie or great Skua-gull, which bullied everything else.

The "black-red" game, of the Jungle-fowl colour, should be selected, as this is on the whole the hardiest and gamest type, and if there were need of fresh blood the jungly itself, which resembles the old game more than any other breed, might be resorted to for a cross, if the game were fairly large and of a good laying strain. It seems a great pity that in the East, the native land of poultry, a good indigenous domestic breed has not yet been raised, thought it could certainly be easily done.

F. FINN.

An incident which proves how widely owner and trainer may differ in their estimate of horses occurred in connection with the Derby of 1843. Amongst the animals engaged was one called Gaper, the property of Lord George Bentinck, who had formed a high estimate of the horse's powers. Not so his trainer, John Day, who thought so little of Gaper's abilities that he deemed it any easy of way "making a bit" by laying against the horse. This he did at long prices, until he found that in the event of the horse's success he stood to lose £40,000.

But "honest John" had to pay dearly for the liberty he had taken. The weight of money which flowed into the market from his owner and friends caused Gaper to take a front place in the quotations, and, imagining that Lord George had got Cotherstone and several of the other competitors "safe"—for the Danebury trainer invariably judged others from his own standpoint—he began to get seriously alarmed.

It was impossible to "get out" on anything but ruinous terms and in his predicament John Day went to Lord George and explained the dilemma in which he was placed. It says much for the terms on which master and man stood that his lordship, so far from resenting the action his trainer had taken, accommodated him with a bet of £30,000 to £3,000 about the horse, and though this made John a heavy loser, he was doubtless pleased to be made easy on any terms.

As a matter of fact, his perturbation was unnecessary, for Gaper ran like the moderate horse the trainer had always believed him to be, and Cotherstone, on whom Lord George also had a stake, won easily It may be mentioned that several attempts were made to "get at" the Northern horse, even to setting fire to his stable at Leatherhead, and many of the bookmakers of the time had good reasons to remember Cotherstone's victory.

FOX-TERRIER PUPPIES

THE subject of puppies forms no unimportan part of this series. With the advent of the litters, the owner's perplexities are by no means at an end. It has been assumed that he has started operations with two brood bitches. Roughly speaking they will come in season twice a year, and very probably very near the same time, but each will be bred from only once in the twelve months. If there happens to be the one big show in prospect, at which the owner desires to exhibit in Puppy and Produce Classes, both bitches can advantageously be permitted to breed at the same time of year. The owner will then have a larger selection, and can also face the troubles of rearing once and for all as far as that particular year is concerned. If, however, there are two or more shows to be considered, one bitch might be bred from in the spring and the other in the autumn to suit the particular circumstances of the case. The point is one in which the owner can suit his own convenience.

No trouble should be spared over the young stock, the extra time and expense needed is not great and will be amply repaid. Neglect may mean that the one really high-class show puppy of the batch turns out ricketty, badly nourished, or worse, and the whole season's operations have therefore been thrown away. It is perhaps needless to say that one show terrier is worth numbers of others which have just missed the mark, and many times over. All should be thoroughly healthy and strong to prevent any chance of disappointment. Any fox-terrier bitch in health will rear three puppies satisfactorily, most will rear four, five are apt to be troublesome unless the dam is a particularly good brood bitch, six puppies are usually more than any bitch will bring up well. A foster mother should be employed if necessary. The dams should be liberally fed; and if the milk supply is deficient, the whelps should be taught to supplement their source of nourishment with artificial feeding at, say, three weeks of age. Delicate puppies should be destroyed if not worth rearing, otherwise special attention should be paid to them. A puppy that starts life a little backward will, without help, continue to suffer in the struggle for existence. Its stronger brothers and sisters will obtain more than their share of nutriment, and for all that is known at that age, the one weakling may be the one plum in the basket.

It is not intended to enter into the numerous details of puppy rearing here, it is merely desired to indicate that every puppy reared at all should be reared well. The difficulties of selection are great enough without adding to them. If some of the puppies are sound and healthy, and others emaciated and pot-bellied with internal parasites, no just comparison is possible. All should be tended over their infantile troubles into a well-conditioned, level lot. There are people who say that too well-fed, too well-cared for puppies, grow too large. They should not be believed. There are far more puppies too small and weakly than the other way. A large, well-grown pup does not necessarily mean an oversized adult. There are also people who say that leigginess is promoted by over-exercise, this statement should be disregarded also. Let the whelps lead a healthy, natural existence; exercise, food and sleep, exercise, food, and sleep, in turn, and in abundance. Æsop has a pretty little fable of the fir and the crab-apple tree which has a wholesome application.

The puppies will go all sorts of ways as nature intended them, the one thing that the owner can do is to ensure that they are healthy. Selection will then come into play, and this is the crucial point on which so many breeders fail. There is no opportunity of "walking" numerous puppies in India as there is in England. The owner has to watch development under his own eye. The fewer the puppies he has, the more chance of doing each and all justice; but he may in error dispose of the best. If he keep them all until there is no shadow of doubt, they are perhaps too many to thrive, to exercise, to really look after well. Overcrowding increases the risks of distemper and many other evils. The motto should be, draft out as soon as possible to limit numbers, and never draft out until it is practically certain that the puppies have no chance of being show dogs. There are men who say that they can invariably spot the pick of the basket at six weeks of age, but these cock-sure gentlemen are rarely successful breeders. The experienced breeder recognises certain signs shortly after birth, he recognises certain features at weaning time, but he is always liable to hideous mistakes. Between weaning time and three months, little can be told. At that age puppies begin to give decided indications. At four months, they are cutting their permanent teeth, and whatever else is known, head points are fairly obvious. At six months, assurance is most sure, at eight things are pretty certain; but even then only to the experienced. A forward youngster, looking so promising, may easily grow too large and coarse after that age. A lean, and unthrifty-looking one may develop into quality lines almost at a bound. There is nothing certain with young puppies except the uncertain. It has happened over and over again that the one ugly duckling has proved the one swan.

Certainty becomes certain only when a defect has become so positive that it is past redemption. For instance, it is known that a puppy's ears can never become smaller than they are. If then, theyhave grown so large that they must be decidedly over-sized and objectionable, even at full age, it is obviously time to draft. Mouths slightly over-shot or under-shot may possibly right themselves at the time of the appearance of the permanent teeth: but if the defect is very pronounced, there is no hope, and such puppies can be disposed of at an early age. Large, portruding, and light-coloured eyes, and very soft, woolly coats are often early indications; but the matter of coat will frequently demand expert knowledge. Not only will too heavy a jacket be sometimes suddenly shed, and a light one come on almost with a bound, but maturity will work important changes, especially in the case of wire terriers. The jacket of a puppy, which promises to be almost perfect to the uninitiated eye, will sometimes grow far too profuse, while a scantily clad, but hard-coated youngster, will often be all that is desired in later life. Badly carried ears are a common feature in puppies, but temporary or permanent defect will depend in great measure on the precise nature of the carriage and the thickness of the leather. Experience is the only guide and even experience will make mistakes. Suffice it to say that a puppy with nice-sized, nice-shaped ears, not too thick in substance, should never be hastily drafted merely because the ears are not always correctly carried. They will as often as not, oftener in well-bred terriers, fall to the regulation drop in course of time. The first litter has often proved the turning point with bitches.

Too gay a carriage of stern is also an early indication. A ringtailed puppy will improve to some extent as the bone hardens, but if the defect is very pronounced there is little hope. A mean carriage of stern in a dog will often improve considerably in adult age when he begins to feel sex and pugnacity. The best tail carriage in the show ring is often a low and poor carriage at rest; and vice versâ a satisfactory carriage when a dog is trotting about will often be too gay a one under excitement. Actual deformity of feet and legs can be seen in early puppyhood, but the perfection of straightness of front is rarely shown by young puppies. Crooked legs will often become straight after extraordinary deviations from the path of beauty. The puppies which appear the best in this respect, with straight firm legs, toes perhaps very slightly turned in, will frequently become too wide in front, or out at elbow, or bossy in shoulder, or pigeon-toed, in after-life. The less taking ones, narrower in front with toes turned a little out, often develop into perfect conformation.

Character will also change as well as physical form. Usually the really bold whelps are plucky from the beginning; but it will happen at times that game, friendly puppies devolop into shy or timid adults, while a heavy, dull, uninteresting whelp smartens with age, and development of sex into the very best. Puppies grow and develop by fits and starts, in this direction or that, but rarely proportionately all over. The head will take a sudden fancy to develop, and everything else is at a standstill. The ears take a turn and stop. Then the legs, or perhaps the coat. The deceptions a puppy unwittingly practices are legion. It looks a picture one week and the owner is exulting. Next week, he is bitterly disappointed, everything seems to have gone the wrong way. In another fortnight, there are signs of marked improvement. Flying ears drop into position, crooked legs straight, an over-grown puppy stops growing and a lean one furnishes with extraordinary suddenness. A cobby little chap becomes all legs and wings, a tall, wiry youngster lets down and fills out and is completely transformed.

The less experienced the breeder, the longer must he bide his time. For that reason he has been recommended not to commence breeding on too large a scale. With a small number of puppies he can afford to be patient and study his early impressions. Everything comes in time to those who know how to wait. But there is one special point on which it is necessary to sound a note of warning. There are both early and late matured puppies. Those that arrive at early maturity will, as puppies often appear, at a great advantage compared to their more unformed brothers and sisters, but beware of them. That very early maturity is often in itself a pronounced defect. A puppy shaped like an adult is only too likely to still further furnish into a coarse cloddy terrier, and in a few months it may be clean out of the hunt. The lasters are rarely at their best at an early age. By all means exhibit the prematurely matured youngsters, and having won with them, sell them, the chances are they will not win again. For the permanent inmates of the kennel, select those built on quality lines and likely to last. The lasters will almost always be somewhat on the light, lathy, undeveloped side in their puppy hood.

Sporting Notes.

DINAPORE, we are glad to see, is holding an Open Gymkhana meeting on the 27th, 29th and 31st October, first entries closing on the 15th idem. From what we can gather at this early stage the meeting promises well, for ponies are expected from Jubbulpore, Allahabad, Lucknow, and other mofussil stations and we see no reason why a Calcutta contingent should not find its way to this meet.

The Tollygunge Gymkhana which took place on Saturday might have been described, in the words of the Leicestershire swell, as flat, dirty and unpleasant, the going suggested snipe ground, the attendance was mainly confined to Aryan brethren of an oily and unpleasant aspect, and the racing, with the solitary exception of the Maiden Horse Race, was such as to invite the kindly drawing of a veil over it The fields, as we predicted, were on the small side with the exception of the Charger Stakes for which no less than nine competitors got to the post. The pony race drew ten entries, but five of these were from one stable and were apparently entered out of a spirit of curiosity to see what weights would be allotted to them, as they were immediately afterwards struck out. Of the remaining five Mr. Evers' Blair Athol, nicely ridden by his owner, had no difficulty in disposing of his very moderate opponent and won in a canter by several lengths. The Maiden Horse race provided a close finish between Sylvia and Sunshine, resulting in a win for the former by a neck. The remaining events call for no comment.

In view of the principle, so often brought to our notice, that the object of a Gymkhana is to provide sport, and that nothing is, or should be, further from the minds either of the executive or of owners than the amassing of filthy lucre, we would respectfully suggest that the exclusion from the club grounds on these occasions of the large crowd of wholely undesirable natives who infest it, would not in any way lessen the enjoyability of the afternoon, and in view of the above-quoted principle, the loss of their gate money at three dibs ahead should not be a matter to be taken into consideration.

A full report of the Gulmarg Horse and Dog Show will be found further on.

That unfortunate craft Shamrock III, after having been boomed ad nauseam, has been defeated at every point by the Reliance and the America Cup remains in Yankee land. She was outclassed, outsailed and outmanœuvred all along and her exhibitions were consistently miserable and disappointing. Perhaps now these contests between America and the wealthy English provision dealer will be allowed to drop, though, of course, whether he wins or loses Lipton gets the full value of the advertisement.

The following horses have been purchased in Ireland by Mr. Paris :—Rathcoon, East Ferry, colt by Wild Sherry out of Leggan Hall's dam, and a colt by Wild Sherry.

As only five teams have so far been entered for the Poona Open Tournament which commences shortly the time for entries has been extended to the 8th.

Second entries for the Meerut Autumn Meeting close on the 15th instant.

Final entries for the Dehra Autumn Sky Meeting close to-day.

Mr. Harry Goldspink is on his way out to India in the Persia due to reach Bombay on the 19th September. He will attend the big Poona Meeting and then come on to Calcutta.

In drawing attention to Mr. Harry Yeend's new announcement made in our Turf columns to-day we might remind such of our readers who have not yet inspected his last shipment that they are missing a good thing.

The Bombay Polo Tournament for 1903 will commence on 12th October and will be held under the rules of the Indian Polo Association. Subject to the above the Tournament is open to any regiment, polo club, gymkhana, station or district in India. Any number of officers of Royal Artillery or Royal Engineers or of the members of the Civil Service in one Presidency may join in sending a team to compete. Two regiments of Bombay cavalry or infantry may also combine to send a team. No restriction as to the number of teams entered by any regiment, polo club, etc. The maximum number of ponies for any team shall be 16 only. The entrance fee per man of each competing team will be Rs. 10. The winning team will be entitled to the custody of the Bombay Polo Challenge Cup for twelve months or until the date of the Tournament in the following year, when it must be returned to the Bombay Gymkhana. This Cup is not to be taken out of India. A cup of the value of Rs. 500 and the entrance fees will be presented to the winning team, or if preferred, expended in the purchase of four Cups, for the members of the winning team. As the Railway Companies require a certificate from the Honorary Secretary certifying the number of players and ponies in each team, before granting the usual concession, the Secretary of each team is requested to inform him as early as possible (a) how many ponies his team intends to bring, (b) when the ponies will start for Bombay, and (c) when his team will start for Bombay ; and he will obtain a letter from the General Traffic Manager authorising the Company to carry the team and ponies on the reduced terms. It is requested that teams intending to enter will communicate as soon as possible with Mr. R. F. R. Cooke, Honorary Secretary, Bombay Polo Tournament. Entries will close on the 1st October. The Tournament will not be held unless four or more teams in separate interests compete.

Acetine, the property of Mr. Spooner Hart, the well-known Calcutta livery stable keeper, won the All Horse Stakes at Poona last Saturday, carrying 10st. 2lbs., and beating Corrie Roy (6st. 9lbs.) Altamas (7st.) and Fitzeros (6st 13lbs.) and seven other good ones including Hoop Iron (9st. 6lbs.) Evidently the big grey gelding is in form and if he continues therein we see no reason why he should not make a good show in the Western India Stakes in which, taking a line through last Saturday's race, he ought to carry 10st 7lbs. We append a list of his performances and by way of comparison those of Great Scot, leaving our readers to decide which is the better horse.

Our Poona correspondent writes.—The Cantonment Magistrate of Poona is dealing with the grave nuisance and indeed danger of led (or rather misled) horses and evidently "means business" and the move is one very much on the right direction. The most recent order on the subject is that all horses are to be led with the syce on the off side, with the obvious, and so far as it goes sound, object "that led horses keeping the 'rule' of the road" that is on the left will have their syces between them and road traffic. But horses from time immemorial have been led with the leader on their near side presumably so that the attendant may hold them with the right or stronger arm. Leading a horse with the left hand will I imagine come awkwardly to most men and it certainly seems a question whether a high spirited, restive and powerful horse can adequately be so held. It would almost seem preferable that horses should be led on the right side of the road with their attendants on their near side permitting the grooms both to be between their charges and the traffic and at the same time to use their right hand for leading and controlling purposes.

It will be remembered that last week a protest was lodged, and, at the time, sustained against the Gymkhana team in the Poona Junior Polo Tournament on the grounds that some of the ponies played by the Gymkhana team, though belonging to a member of the Gymkhana did not belong to any member of the team playing, and secondly that Captain Meynell having played in the Quetta tournament which it was asserted was an open one, he was consequently disqualified from playing since another open tournament player, namely, Captain Davie was already in the team.

A telegraphic reference to Quetta, however, elicited the fact that the Quetta tournament was not an open one and the objection on that score obviously fell to the ground, the only one remaining being the qualification of the non-playing member's ponies —a reference on which moot point has been made to the Indian Polo Association. As many tournaments are apparently now ceasing to be genuine open tournaments in the face of the decision barring native teams it seems clear that the rule regarding the qualifications of players in Junior Tournaments must also be revised.

Under the circumstances the Gymkhana team was reinstated and had consequently to meet the 3rd Bombay Cavalry who accepted the contest under protest pending decision of the Indian Polo Association on the pony qualification point.

The result of the meeting of the two teams in question was a most exciting game. The somewhat better combination, which was indeed only to be expected, on the part of the regimental team being more than compensated for by the individual excellence of Captain Davie and Captain Meynell, who were very prominent throughout with the result that at the end of the third chukker the scores stood : Poona Gymkhana 1 goal and 3 subsidiaries to 3rd Cavalry 0 goal and 4 subsidiaries. As may well be imagined the play in the fourth chukker was of the most dashing description and when a subsidiary to the Gymkhana was followed by a goal to the credit of the Cavalry the excitement was great and with the score at 1 goal and 4 subsidiaries all the time bugle sounded. There was clearly nothing for it but an extra chukker with widened goal posts. Soon after the commencement of play Major Edwards made a determined run up the ground and Duffadar Fazand Ali backing him well up failed to hit quite straight and missed the major point but secured a subsidiary and the Gymkhana failing to score during the allotted five minutes the Cavalry won a well fought and exciting game.

The final between the 3rd Cavalry and Oxford Light Infantry calls for few remarks as after fighting stubbornly through the first two rounds in which Mr. Wetherby particularly distinguished himself the Oxfords had to yield to superior force and were eventually beaten by 5 goals and 1 subsidiary to nil.

The Poona Ninth Extra Meeting afforded a thoroughly excellent day's racing—perhaps the best on the whole we have yet had. Proceedings unhappily commenced with an accident which might have had the most serious consequences but luckily turned out not to be as serious as it at first seemed. In the first race of the card in which eleven Arab ponies were competing and between the half mile and three-furlong posts when they were all in a cluster people in the stand were horrified to see two ponies roll over like shot rabbits and a further inspection showed them to be Kyam with Oomer Khan up and Sweet William with Jimmy Robinson in the saddle and it was with intense relief that both these fine horsemen were soon seen on their legs. The former got off cheaply, but Robinson was much knocked about the face and severely bruised. The cause of the accident was not I believe fully proved, but was attributed to a jockey in the race having come across one of the ponies in question, but such dangerous practices occur so quickly that probably even the jockeys who come to grief thereby cannot say for certain how it all happened.

That expensive pony Wink looked all over a winner in the Sydney Stakes, when Comeback—a wonderfully good looking pony—came swooping down in the last fifty yards and snatched the victory.

The wonderful two-year old Arab Bendigo added yet another win to his baby record, winning like a race horse, and it is to be noticed that his owner, the well-known Arab dealer Abdul Mohsen Amer, was running another two-year old "butcha" in the same race.

But the treat of the day was left for the All Horse Handicap over 7 furlongs in which eleven out of the twelve horses on the card accepted the handicapper's awards and what good reason owners had to be hopeful may be judged from the result. Fifty yards from home any one of seven or eight horses looked a winner and after a desperate finish Acetine, the top weight at 10st. 2lbs. beat Corrie Roy, the bottom weight, at 6st. 9lbs. by a short head just clear of Altamas at 6st. 12lbs. with Fitzeros 6st. 13lbs. alongside and practically the whole of the rest in a bunch close up. A truly wonderful piece of handicapping for which Mr. Cursetjee deserves unstinted praise. O'Neil on the winner and the native boy Kamad on Corrie Roy, who had none the best of the luck in the race, rode admirable finishes.

A good finish too was afforded in the "Captain's race," when that well-known horseman Major Edwards on Colonel Eccles' Pomfret just got home in front of Captain Randall on Colonel Hazelton's charming little pony Patrician for whom the distance was possibly not sufficiently far.

The well-known Arab importer, Ali bin Talib, annnexed the Small Arab Stakes somewhat easily with his handsome pony Moon, Victory being second and Aga Shamsudin Shah's Arabistan third in a field of thirteen little bits of Arabian blood.

Another closed race, a welter handicap for horses brought this very interesting day's racing to a close and once more we were treated to an exciting finish. Major Edwards' Runaway Girl, who had hitherto in her several efforts, shown nothing like racing form, winning like a race horse on this occasion in the masterly professional hands of Hoyt, who came with a great rattle at the end and just won from Ombree with Madeira a short length behind for third place.

Amongst the additions during August to the Zoological Society's Gardens, Regents Park, London, were the three following birds presented by Mr. E. W. Harper, F.Z.S.: one Himalyan Whistling-Thrush (Myiophoneus temminecki), one Malabar Whistling-Thrush (M. horsefieldi), and one Chinese Pitta. The first and last-mentioned species were new to the collection.

The following resolution appears in the Gazette of India on the mortality caused by wild beasts and snakes: "In the Home Department resolution, dated 9th September 1902, it was stated that the mortality among human beings reported to be caused by wild animals in 1901 had been greater than that reported any previous year except one since 1875. In 1902 the total mortality (2,836) from the same cause was considerably below 1901 (3,651). The number of deaths caused by hyænas was, however, 164 as compared with 26 and by other animals 713 as compared with 479 in the previous year. Deaths reported from snake-bite number 23,166 in 1902 compared with 22,810 in 1901.

Of the total number of deaths (1,046) reported caused by tigers more than half (544) occurred in Bengal, the largest number (65) being reported from Singbhum. In Hazaribagh the number of deaths from this cause rose from 31 in 1901 to 63 in 1902. The increase was due to the depredations of a man-eating tiger for the destruction of which a special reward of Rs. 250 was offered without a result. In Palamau of 43 persons killed the most were victims of another man-eater, for the destruction of which special rewards were also sanctioned. In the Central Provinces the number of deaths caused by tigers fell from 357 in 1901 to 185 in 1902. In Assam too the mortality declined from 88 to 63 and Burma from 72 to 49. The number of deaths in Madras and Bombay Presidencies rose from 83 and 28 respectively in 1901 to 99 and 46 in 1902. In the United Provinces the mortality was the same as in 1901, viz., 39.

The number of deaths caused by wolves fell from 403 in 1901 to 377 in 1902. There was a satisfactory decrease in the United Provinces which usually show the greatest number, from 285 in 1901 to 204 in 1902. The campaign undertaken against wolves in the Rohilkhund and Allahabad divisions met with a considerable measure of success and these animals have been almost exterminated from the Cawnpore District, where they used to abound. In Rohilkhund Division though the loss of life was still heavy a large number of wolves were destroyed and had a distinct effect in reducing the mortality.

Bengal as usual accounts for the largest number of deaths from snake-bite, the mortality in the Province amounting to 11,150 out of a total of 23,166 of the whole of British India. The number of deaths reported from the Patna Division alone was 3,258 and from the Presidency Division 1,617. In the United Provinces 5,110 deaths from the same cause were reported and in 1902 1,160, 1,123 and 1,304 deaths respectiveiy were reported in Madras and Bombay Presidencies, Burma, and the Central Provinces. The number of cattle killed by wild animals rose from 78,896 in 1901 to 80,796 in 1902, while the number killed by snakes fell from 9,123 to 9,019. In Bengal alone 24,777 cattle were destroyed by wild animals, while the figures of Madras and Central Provinces and Assam were 11,005, 14,135, and 15,372 respectively. The total number destroyed by tigers amounted to 30,555, leopards 38,211, wolves 4,719, and hyænas 2,387.

The number of wild animals for whose destruction rewards were paid during the year was 14,983 compared with 14,301 in 1901. The numbers of tigers, leopards, bears, wolves and hyænas destroyed were 1,331, 4,413, 1,858, 2,372, and 706 respectively. The amount of rewards paid for the destruction of animals was Rs. 1,00,987. The total number of snakes killed was 72,595 as compared with 70,289 in 1901, and the rewards paid for their destruction amounted to Rs. 3,529.

The number of licenses issued free of cost under the Indian Arms Act for the destruction of wild animals and the protection of crops was 9,006 against 8,840 in 1901, and the total number of licenses of this nature in force in 1902 including such as were valid from previous years amounted to 37,933 as compared with 41,249 in 1901.

From The Feathered World we learn that our old friend Mr. Frank Finn lately liberated twelve "golabi" mynahs (rosy pastors) in one of the London Parks, where they appear to be thriving.

Stringent rules have been made in Russia against the use of any drug on the racecourse, and the long period during which horses engaged in the races of the day have to remain out in the open under the eyes of the Stewards would appear to have minimised the field of action of the "doper." A Russian breeder, M. W. Klenewski, offers premiums of £100, £200, and £400 to any jockey, trainer, or owner who can give him such information as will permit him to criminally prosecute any person guilty of "doping."

Sir William Orr-Ewing, Bart., we regret to report, died the week the mail left, after a lingering illness, at his residence, Ardencaple Castle, Dumbartonshire, at the age of 55. He was the eldest son of the late Sir Archibald Orr-Ewing, M. P., and for many years held a commission in the 3rd Battalion, Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. He was keenly interested in sport, but was not so ardent a follower of racing as his brothers, Major J. A. Orr-Ewing and Capt. J. Orr-Ewing the former of whom died for his country in the late war. The deceased Baronet had no issue, and the title goes to his eldest surviving brother, Capt. Archibald Ernest Orr-Ewing.

Anent the crusade against the mosquito the following letter was sent by Surgeon-Major Ross to the Times of Monday, the 16th August:—

CAIRO, 10th July, 1903.

Dear Major Ross,—As the prevention of malarial fever is of the utmost importance to us in the Sudan, I have recently paid two visits to Ismailia to study on the spot the measures which, on your recommendation, are now being enforced for the destruction of mosquitoes.

The results have been remarkably successful.

The town is practically free from mosquitoes, which only a short time ago were very abundant. Mosquito nets can almost be dispensed with, for one can now sleep without being bitten, as I found from personal experience.

The operations you recommended are in full swing. Two marshy swamps to the north-east of the town have been filled up with sand, and a third, the largest, will shortly be dealt with. It will be drained by a pipe 22 centimetres in diameter to convey away the water. Other marshes to the south of the town have been filled up. At my last visit I saw a gang of 180 workmen busily employed in filling up pools, mowing the coarse grass and undergrowth and clearing the numerous small channels or branches in connexion with the main canal.

The foreman of works informed me that when the men first commenced operations they were much worried with swarms of mosquitoes towards evening, but that now they scarcely saw any.

Coincident with the destruction of mosquitoes and other larvae, malarial fever at Ismailia this year shows a most striking improvement. All medical officers employed there are agreed upon this. Statistics show that up to the present it is the healthiest year on record.

Dr. Pressat informed me that from 1st January to 30th June of this year there were only three cases of malarial fever in hospital, against 52 for the same period last year, and that throughout Ismailia there were 569 cases of fever from 1st January to 30th May 1902 (an average year), against 72 for the same periop this year. It is more than probable, moreover, that many of the cases were relapses from previous infection.

Bearing in view the remarkable diminution in malarial fevers that has attended the present operations against mosquitoes, it is more than probable that when they are completed, malarial fevers will have practically disappeared.

Yours sincerely,
R. H. PENTON.

The following are particulars of a suit which was filed in the Sub-Court at Ootacamund by Dr. L. J Bischoff against the Secretary of State through the Collector of the Nilgiris:—In consideration of Rs. 30 paid by plaintiff to the Collector, he was granted a license to hunt and shoot subject to certain conditions. By his proceedings, dated the 6th May last, the Collector illegally purported to cancel the license of the plaintiff on the ground that he had wilfully aided and abetted Mr. J. Van Ingen in shooting ibex within the Nilgiri game limits on the 29th March last. Plaintiff addressed a letter to the District Forest Officer, and received a reply, but was not allowed an opportunity to defend himself against the charges brought against him. Plaintiff puts the defendant to proof that he has committed any breach of his license or that he abetted Mr. Van Ingen in shooting ibex. He also puts defendant to proof of any right in defendant to cancel his license. Plaintiff pleads that he has, by the action of defendant, his servants, the Collector and the District Forest Officer and their subordinates been put to loss and injured in his reputation. The plaintiff prays judgment against defendant:—(1) For a declaration that the notice sent by the Collector of the Nilgiris (agent of defendant), dated 6th May, 1903, is void and of no effect; that the license is still subsisting, and that the plaintiff is entitled to have the same renewed. (2) For an injunction to prevent the defendant, his agent or servants from interfering with the rights of plaintiff under his license or a renewed license. (3) For Rs. 500 damages and the costs of the suit.

"Derg," writing to The Field about Indian bird markets, says:—

I found the market in Bombay a most interesting place about six o'clock in the morning. In the bird market may be seen all manner of birds for sale, some for food, and some as pets. In immense flat hampers covered with grass matting are quails and partridges of various species. A couple of native men or women sit with each hamper, in which there is an opening for the hand and arm to be thrust in for the birds, which they grasp as best they can (generally by a wing or leg), and, without delaying to change the first hold taken, the poor birds are tied in bundles of half a dozen and thrown across the hampers to the purchaser, generally a servant who markets for the well-to-do people. From what I saw in the markets in India it would seem that game must soon be exterminated in that country when taken in such large quantities and sold for such trifling sums. Quail are sold at eight for one penny; partridges for a penny each. Ducks of various kinds and peafowl may also be seen, while immense wicker-work hampers also filled with hundreds of diminutive little cage-birds of various sorts.

These generally go to Italy, though for what purpose I could not discover, probably for sale as cage birds. They sell also great numbers of mynahs, which are somtimes very good talking birds; but those that talk well command big prices, the ordinary, untaught mynah being worth but little. In Bombay market I saw a fine hawk, the largest I had ever seen. It was in the market for several days, and I thought of buying it, but on inquiry I learnt that a rajah had bought it. I have never seen one like it, and it should have been big and strong enough for a gazelle or a fox. I always make a point of seeing the markets in every place I visit, for there one may note the manners and customs of the native population and see the produce of a country better than anywhere else. The finest, cleanest, and most beautiful market I have seen is in Madras.

"Derg" is right enough about the fiendish cruelty of the native game vendors, but when he quotes prices he gets completely off the rails. Fancy partridge at 3 pice each, or 8 quails for the same sum, my masters!

Among the new boys who have come to Poona is Fred Manley, who can go to the scale at 7st. He was the most successful jockey who ever rode over the Kensington Race-course at Sydney and holds a fine record of winning mounts on ponies. He should be in fair demand once he exhibits his abilities here. He has ridden in South Africa for a time, but returned to Australia and after a season or two there has turned his attention to India.

The entries for the Fourth Calcutta Monsoon Meeting are fairly good, though whether the fields will be anything like proportionate remains to be seen, since there appears to be no little dissatisfaction at the handicapping; and we must confess that the adjustment of some of the burdens is beyond our humble comprehension. We are, for instance, curious to know why Twilight should be conceded 7lbs. by Actress, why Beeswing should be allowed only 12lbs. for a ten lengths beating by Actress on a former occasion, and why the bottom weight should be 9st. 7lbs. instead of 9st. In the Belvedere Plate too, Twilight appears to have been very leniently treated after the taste he gave us of his quality in the Sixth Extra Meeting last season. In the Zeerut Plate Granny is very well in at 8st. 7lbs., and we fully expect to see her in front when she is wanted. Not Yet, on the other hand, has been decidedly harshly treated, as her beating by Perfect, on the last occasion they met, looked to us like a good deal more than a 9lb. one, and the last time she met Shylock she beat him two lengths when in receipt of 7lbs. On this occasion they meet at a difference of 9lbs. in favour of Shylock, which is equivalent to allowing the latter 16lbs. for a two lengths beating. The September Stakes also presents problems. On the three occasions on which Autocrat and Naiades met last season the results were as follows:—Naiades (won) 6st. 11lbs., Autocrat (unplaced) 8st. 7lbs., Autocrat (4th) 10st. 6lbs., Naiades 9st. 7lbs., Autocrat (2nd) 10st. 4lbs., Naiades (3rd) 9st. From this it would appear that Autocrat is about a stone and a half in front of Naiades, yet on this occasion the latter is set to give him 4lbs. Again at Tollygunge Races last winter, Naiades and Kittylea met at 8lbs. in favour of the former, who won by a short head. On this occasion the difference is 4lbs. the other way. To us 12lbs. seems a liberal allowance for a short head defeat! Trollop also ran second to Loch Arden, the weights being Loch Arden 10st. 6lbs., Trollop 9st. 11lbs., Naiades (unplaced) 9st. 10lbs., but here we have Loch Arden 10st. 7lbs., Trollop 8st. 2lbs. From this we observe that we have two horses neither of whom have run since last season, one of whom is treated to about 18lbs. more than her last season's form warrans, while the other is let in at about 20lbs. below it! The reason for this seems to us to ask for some sort of elucidation. As regards probable results we plump for the following:—

Club Stakes	...	Twilight, Flamingo.
Belvedere Plate	...	Kittylea, Fairlight.
Zeerut Plate	...	Pekin, Moss Rose.
Pony Handicap	...	Granny, Perfect.
September Stakes	...	Autocrat, Kittylea, Kellnerin.
Entally Plate	...	Shirley, Euryalus.

TIRHOOT NOTES.

Mr. W. Marsham left the district for England on the 19th of last month. He was a general favourite throughout Behar, and a good all-round sportsman, and will be greatly missed by his many friends in the three districts.

Mr. E. Stevens returns again from England in October, and takes up his old appointment as Manager of the Rhuni Syedpore Concern.

Last month a boar on the Mhow dearas managed to do a considerable amount of damage, killing one native, and cutting several others. A party went out after him, but were unable to find him in the crops and jowah, though some days after Messrs. Marsham, Rawlins, Daubeny, and Fendall had the luck to put up another pig, which they killed after an excellent run.

While on the subject of pigsticking, the sport that two well-known "spears" in Behar and a young Civilian had at Barisal last cold weather is worth relating. They went out some thirty to forty miles from Barisal, roughed it in the jungles, and had three very good days' sport amongst the pig. The party out were K. H. M., W. M., two brothers, and G. They had a very scratch lot of ponies, their stud consisting of one 13-3 Arab, one 13-3 Waler, another 13-hand Waler and a country-bred. Twenty-two pig were killed in the three days, all of which measured anything between 29 inches and 31 inches.

The first day they were out they hadn't a single beater, they getting the pig by riding through the jungle, which consisted of thick tufts of grass, and wild holly. Two pig were found right out in the open country, another was found lying down, with some buffaloes grazing not twenty yards off him. Six pigs were killed this day, and if the horses hadn't been so done up, another half dozen could easily have been stuck.

The second day, after several hard gallops, another six pigs were added to the bag.

The third day the party tried for leopards in a jungle, about 200 acres big, cut up into three big patches; they were unsuccessful in finding leopards, but they turned out quite thirty pigs and killed ten, all of which fought well, and gave grand runs across the open. If they had only had a few more horses, they could have easily killed twice the number of pig; as it was, considering the few horses they had, they did very well, and had excellent sport.

I wish to make no remarks on the Bain case, the papers have already said all that is necessary on the subject, and the way in which the subscriptions have poured in for Mr. Bain's defence speaks for itself.

Writing as a planter, when the general public consider the isolated position of a manager, or assistant in a tea garden, or an indigo concern, they can then realise, to a small extent, the difficulties of his position, for he has to practically single-handed rule and keep order amongst a large number of workmen, and in some cases thousands of natives. He has to do this more or less merely by his prestige, and tact, and I consider it extremely creditable to the large number of English gentlemen in the two industries, that they carry out their duties so well. No planter is safe from a false case, and the danger and difficulties of his position have been increased a hundred per cent. by the support and encouragement the native receives from those who should be above such short-sighted policy. Any planter who is put upon his trial for an alleged assault on one of his native workmen is tried long before this, and condemned by the whole of the native press who have no fear of being brought up and punished for contempt of court.

If Government wish to ruin two of the most important industries in India, they are going the right way about it in encouraging the native to think that there is one law for them, and another for the white man.

If the planter does escape imprisonment, the native who has brought the false case against him loses nothing and risks nothing; he is a man of straw, and not worth the powder and shot of being proceeded against, while the planter, on the other hand, is practically a ruined man by the heavy law expenses he has been put to.

The Mozufferpore August Meet was a great success, though not as big as usual. Mr. W. Rawlins got a spill at polo, and broke a small bone in his arm, while Mr. J. A. Wilson had an unusual accident while playing polo. He, it appears, lost his stirrup and while bending forward to strike the ball under his pony's neck, he hit the stirrup, which swinging upwards gave him a nasty wound on the head.

Athletic Notes.

IN the Simla Tennis Handicap the Men's Doubles have been won by Captains Turner and Beynon, who beat Major C. Clay and Mr. Mitchell in the finals.

Ranjitsinji put up 204 in the match between Surrey and Sussex on the 5th instant.

Leon Meredith, the English 50 miles champion, won the 50 miles championship of the Southern Counties Cycling Union, of England, on a Dunlop tyred racer.

Duffy continues to run quite up to his form, putting up 10secs. for the hundred almost every time he competes. At the Belfast Celtic Sports on the 15th ultimo he won the 100 Yards Invitation Handicap from scratch in 10secs., a record for Ireland. In the 100 Yards Open Handicap, owing 1½ yards he won his heat in 10secs., but did not compete in the finals.

At the International Swimming Races in Paris on the 16th ultimo T. A. Jarvis, the English champion won the 500 metres championship, in 8 mins. 33⅗secs. Curwen was second, nearly a minute behind and Clavenot third.

The Trades assistants of Rangoon are going to have a walking match. A seven-mile course has been agreed upon and the race is fixed for the 10th October.

Some magnificent riding was seen at the Parc des Princes on the 16th ultimo, when the French cyclist, Dangla, succeeded in establishing a world's record for the hour, covering 81 kilometres 108 metres against Robl's record of 80 kilometres 663 metres. Tom Hall (England) was leading at the fifteenth mile, and was within four-fifths of a second of the record when his motor cycle pacer broke down. Dangla then passed him and made new records from 30 kilometres upwards.

The M. C. C.'s invitation to go to Australia has been accepted by the following:—P. F. Warner (Middlesex) captain, R. E. Foster (Worcestershire), B. J. T. Bosanquet (Middlesex), Hirst (Yorkshire), Rhodes (Yorkshire), Hayward (Surrey), Tyldesley (Lancashire), Braund (Somerset), Strudwick (Surrey), Arnold (Worcestershire), Relf (Sussex), Fielder (Kent), Lilley (Warwickshire), Knight (Leicestershire). Those who have declined the invitation are:—C. B. Fry (Sussex), Hon. F. S. Jackson (Yorkshire), A. C. Maclaren (Lancashire), G. L. Jessop (Gloucestershire), L. C. H. Palairet (Somersetshire), E. M. Dowson (Surrey), H. Martyn (Somerset).

Mr. E. H. D. Sewell, writing in the Athletic News in reference to native Indian cricket, says:—"I cannot close this article without alluding to the disadvantage whereunder native cricket labours and always will labour until the supporters thereof take the remedy which lies at their door. And that is professional coaching. Once every two or three years those who have the interests of native cricket at heart should secure the services of one or two good men from this country to be in India from mid-October to mid-March to coach according to season in different localities. For example the coaching should begin in Madras in October just when the season is beginning to get into full swing, as cricket is almost impossible there in March or even February. A month or six weeks there would leave the professional free to put in a week or ten days early in December in Poona, thence for six weeks to two months in Bombay, thence north to Aligarh from February to March, and so on. If two professionals made the trip so much the better, their stay might thus be longer at each pre-arranged centre. It is, of course, a question of finance, but that should be easily overcome if the proper people set to work as they have for next year's tour to overcome what is after all a surmountable difficulty."

Surrey beat Leicestershire by three wickets on the 2nd instant. The match between Kent and Sussex ended in a draw and the Players defeated the Gentlemen by an innings and eight runs.

General Notes.

A SEVERE shock of earthquake was reported at Rangoon on the 8th instant.

Lady Curzon's Children's Fancy Dress Ball is to be held on the 14th instant.

The Annual Dinner of the Calcutta Football Club will be held at the Saturday Club on the 19th instant.

We have to acknowledge receipt of a copy of Messrs. W. Leslie and Co.'s latest general catalogue, a well arranged, profusely illustrated and interesting publication.

The news of the death of Mr. Arthur Shanks, formerly a partner in the Engineering firm of Messrs. Burn and Co., Calcutta, will be received with regret by all who knew him.

Instead of the visit to Kashmir H. E. Lord Curzon will go on a trip in the Kumaon Hills to the Pindri Glacier, leaving Simla on the 25th instant and returning about the middle of October. The party should have some good sport during the excursion.

A sad drowning fatality recently occurred at Akyab. Three members of a picnic party were bathing in deep water when one of them, Mr. Wilson, went under. Messrs. De Silva and Pereira went to his assistance, but were unsuccessful and all three were drowned.

A farewell dinner will be given at the Calcutta International Shipmasters' Club, 2, Mango Lane, at 8 P.M., next Saturday, to Mr. J. E. Needham, of Messrs. Turner, Morrison and Co., Vice-President of the Club, who is about to leave Calcutta to join the Bombay branch of the firm.

Simla was the scene of a big fire on the morning of the 7th instant, when another old landmark disappeared, the Metropole Hotel being burnt and completely destroyed. The fire is supposed to have started in the gas room at 4 A.M. and quickly spread over the building. There was no loss of life, the twenty-two residents all getting away. The property was insured.

Chess players in Calcutta will be sorry to hear of the departure of Monsieur A. Frere, the Belgian Consul. He has been appointed Consul-General for Belgium at Pretoria, and will go home before taking charge of his new post. Monsieur Frere was the founder and President of the Staunton Chess Club in Calcutta and one of the finest exponents of the game in the city.

Last week Reuter wired us the news of the demise of Dr. William Hastie, Professor of Divinity at Glasgow and erstwhile Principal of the General Assembly's Institution at Calcutta, and who will ever be remembered for the prominent part he played in that filthy and disgusting case Piggott cs. Hastie and which did more to throw dirt on Scotch missionary work in this country than anything that has occurred since missions began to exploit this unfortunate country.

The Photographic Society of India gave an "At Home" in the hall of the Asiatic Society last evening. A hundred slides were shown, all of the most interesting description. Twenty-five were Japanese coloured views and types and the remainder were views and types taken in Calcutta, Darjeeling, South Africa and at the Durbar by members of the Society. The entertainment was a great success, and it is the intention of the Society to hold a series of these lantern exhibitions during the cold weather.

From the annual report of the London and Lancashire Life Assurance Company for 1902, we learn that the new Assurances under proposals received were 2,538 for £818,686, and deducting £133,882 for those declined and not completed, the policies issued were 2,211 for £684,804 giving a new Premium Income of £30,757 5s. 0d. The total Premiums received amounted to £283,421 11s. 9d., and after deduction of £8,635 2s. 7d. paid for Re-assurances, the net Premiums were £274,786 9s. 2d., being an increase of £10,304 over the previous year. During the present Quinquennium, the increase in the Premium Income has amounted to £43,036. The total Income of the Company was £340,594 5s. 3d., including £65,748 11s. 1d. from Interest and Dividends, the average rate yielded on Invested and Uninvested Funds being £3 19s. 1d. per cent. The claims by death with Bonus additions amounted to £105,050 11s. 3d., which is not only less than the amount reported for the previous year, but well within the expectancy. Those under Endowment Policies amounted to £25,322 17s. 0d. After payment of all other outgoings the sum of £133,566 4s. 7d. was added to the Funds, which now stand at £1,763,068 8s. 4d.

The Quinquennial Valuation has on this occasion been made on a stricter principle than that adopted five years since, when the Canadian portion was valued at 4 per cent. The whole of the Business has now been placed on a 3½ per cent. basis, thus further strengthening the Reserves and improving the general financial position of the Company. The net Liability under Assurance Transactions is £1,639,744, and the Life Assurance Fund £1,742,871, showing a surplus of £103,127. Of this Surplus it is proposed that £85,000 be divided as follows:—1. Proprietors' Share of Profits.—One-fifth of the divisible surplus, namely, £17,000, belongs to the Proprietors' Fund, less an amount of £1,397 to be contributed in terms of Clause 109 in the Articles of Association, which provides for an increased proportion of profits in respect of Policies issued subsequently to 31st December 1897, thus giving such Policies a nine-tenth share of the profits. It is proposed to pay during the current five years, in addition to the ordinary Interest of 2s. per share (equivalent to 5 per cent. on the amount paid up), a Bonus of 6s. 3d., making together 8s. 3d. per share, as against 7s. per share for the previous five years.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 21st August, 1903.

We who abide in town at this season find more to interest us in what is going on anywhere rather than in the metropolis which, it is hardly necessary to remark, is in a state of suspended animation. Those of us who could not rest happy without more convincing evidence of the progress of the America cup races than is supplied by Reuter and Dalziel have been able to follow the fortunes of the two yachts at Earls' Court or the Hippodrome. At the former resort the relative positions of Shamrock III and Reliance are illustrated by model yachts on a model course buoyed out on the ornamental water, the boats being moved by a clever arrangement of wires from time to time in accordance with the news received by cable. The Hippodrome catered for country cousins—who are present in vast quantities this year—with a seascape on which the "varying fortunes of the race" (copyright phrase) is indicated from time to time. The fact that the first race had been abandoned was notified last night by rocket signal from the Alexandra Palace—a red rocket and a green being sent up together. Would I were a country cousin to be dazzled by the marvels of London! The simple joy of it: a front seat on the 'bus top with guide book, opera glasses and informing 'bus driver to point out the Albert Hall, Apsley House, Burlington House, the Nelson Monument and the lions! The 'bus top is the recognised stall, dress circle seat or private box whence the country cousin views his or her London: and I gathered the other day that the omission of 'buses to pass Buckingham Palace affords ground for grave complaint in the Provinces: it is the only architectual "sight" which is not accessible from the 'bus top. Some day, when I have time and can find somebody to take me, I mean to visit the Tower of London, the Backwall Tunnel, the British Museum and Southwark Cathedral. I have been to St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey. Speaking quite seriously people who live in London know less about it than the country cousin. I remember some years ago how a man electrified a lunch party with the announcement that he had the day before been to the National Gallery: his audience learned with genuine interest that it was the most representative collection of painters in Europe. That a free show of pictures which is always open could be worth going for to see had never occurred to them: though a goodly majority had done their duty with interest in the galleries of continental capitals.

* * * * * *

The L. C. C. are not going to abandon their plan of establishing a steam-boat service on the river. Next season will see a Bill brought forward which will, we are told, differ materially from that recently rejected save in what the mere rate-payer may hold the material question of expense. The rejected one proposed a capital outlay of £258,000: the new one wants to spend £21,000. I doubt if the abatement will secure passage of the Bill: the bare fact that such reduction of the capital outlay has been found possible seems to indicate decided want of ordinary business capacity on the part of our City-aunts. Imagine a limited liability company asking the public to subscribe a quarter of a million and then calmly giving equal publicity to the discovery that it could do with £40,000 less. Would you apply for shares Editorjee? I wouldn't.

* * * * * *

Holbein has postponed his attempt to swim the channel till a more convenient season: and truly it had been little short of insanity to try it any day this week when the weather has been bad enough to discourage a channel steamer. So bad was it on Tuesday that an excursion boat had to put back to Boulogne after being as nearly as possible swamped. No harm was done unless you reckon decks awash and doors burst in by the seas, but the incident furnished the evening papers with what they have sadly wanted latterly, a sensational line for their contents bills.

* * * * * *

Macedonian affairs, the naval manœuvres and the Chamberlain fiscal policy practically monopolise the papers. The bird's-eye view of the first afforded you by Reuter is much clearer, I doubt not, than any narration I could evolve from the fog and chaos of disturbing report. It is most difficult to make out anything at once definite and reliable concerning the progress of events in Macedonia, but it seems clear that affairs in the whole Balkan peninsular are brewing up for a big and serious row.

* * * * * *

Turkey, as you know long ere now, hastily executed the murderer of the Russian consul at Monaster and his accomplice, doubled her offer of compensation to Madame Rostkowsky and proposes an expiatory mission to St. Petersburg. The Russian fleet which left Sebastopol in an unostentatious manner last week, has appeared in Iniada Bay and the Russian Ambassador has kindly explained to the Porte that the move is not hostile but only intended as a demonstration to hasten the acceptance of Russia's demands: let us hope the Unspeakable saw the difference.

* * * * * *

The Porte must be feeling a trifle befogged over "explanations" offered by the foreign ambassadors lately. I am curious to know how the Sultan regards Sir Nicholas O'Conor's explanation of Mr. Balfour's expression used in Parliament." "Prince Arthur" told somebody in the House that "the balance of criminality" lay with the Macedonian rebels; our ambassador was requested to tone down any elation officialdom at Stamboul might feel on hearing this by intimating that the language held by Mr. Balfour "was of a purely Parliamentary character being designed for purposes of esoteric debate." Esoteric debate is a thing at which the Sultan and his advisers are not half bad themselves, but whether they will recognise such nice distinctions among nfidel Westerners is another thing altogether.

* * * * * *

Touching the naval manœuvres there have been rather more breaks down than the mistress of seas can approve. The King Alfred, the fastest vessel of the "X" fleet, broke down twice and had to turn back unable to keep up: the Powerful came to grief too and had to bear up for Gib as best she might a complete cripple. The cruiser Diadem had to stop both engines for eight hours to repair defects, a delay calculated to impair her utility: the Illustrious had trouble with her boiler tubes which required the fleet to reduce speed for her to make things good. The Empress of India had to stop for nearly twelve hours to repair a mishap in the engine room and again the day after for a couple of hours to settle accounts with a defective air pump, and the cruiser Sutlej broke down. Having regard to the number of ships engaged and the fact that some of those named in the casualty list above were commissioned specially for the manœuvres, the tale of mishaps is less disturbing than it might have been: more specially when we consider the awful weather experienced by the "B." fleets: but should the Real Thing have to be faced presumably we shall have to commission vessels specially and take our chances of weather, and such mishaps as our own correspondents record may prove expensive. I have not included the Blake disaster with its accompanying loss of life: you would have had news of that by wire.

* * * * * *

The Chamberlain Fiscal Policy has furnished those who love "writing to the Times" with an invaluable text and some would-be political lights have been at exceptional pains to exhibit their want of understanding. Sir James Blyth took two columns of the Times the other day to expound his views on the value of bounties. It was a solemn and portentous letter fortified by figure and fact: but there was one fact wanting: the writer did not say where the money for his bounties was to come from. Passing over the host of small fry who engage in epistolary strife in small type, Sir W. V. Harcourt rushed into print falling violently foul of Mr. Chamberlain. The Times handled the Squire of Malwood rather unkindly in its leading article, but he was no doubt prepared for that. What strikes the simple mind in all this flood of rhetoric is nobody seems to realise that before you can buy food, dear or cheap, you must earn the money to buy it with ; and that protective duties will stimulate our manufacturers to the advantage of "hands." These high matters are out of my province I know ; but this looms so large even in social intercourse that it must be mentioned.

THE WESTERN DOOARS IN OLDEN DAYS.

AT the time of the Bhootan war and for some time after, Jalpaiguri, now itself a district, was a subdivision of the Rungpore District and the northern portion of the present Western Dooars was Bhooteah territory. In 1864 after the war the British frontier was considerably extended to the north and included some very fine shooting country. The neighbourhood of Ramsahai Hât which is I understand, now seldom visited by the larger wild animals at that time held rhinos, tigers, wild elephants, buffaloes, deer, etc., and afforded good sport to the officers of the native regiment quartered at Julpaiguri and to the civil officers both of that place and of the new Dooars District, the head-quarters of which had been established at Mynaguri, distant some 7 miles westward, and as there were then a large number of commissariat elephants kept there for military purposes, these through the courtesy of the officer in charge of them afforded every facility to sportsmen.

I was at the time stationed at Rungpore and my inspection duties took me periodically to Julpaiguri, so that I had on several occasions opportunities of joining the shooting parties got up on one occasion in March 1866. C., the Sub-Divisional Officer at Buxar and P., the District Superintendent of Police at Mynaguri arranged, a meet with me at the latter place. I had brought six zemindari elephants with me, P. had four Government elephants, C. had two others and we got six more commissariat animals which gave us a respectable line. Riding out in the cool of the evening from Mynaguri to Ramsahai Hât, where our tents were pitched, we learnt that a young buffalo had just been killed by a tiger close at hand. P. had had a recent attack of fever and did not care to risk sitting up at night in such a malarious place. C. and I, however, arranged to do so and sent men out at once to tie up a charpoy on the nearest tree to the kill and followed ourselves almost immediately. Fortunately a tree with a suitable protruding branch stood about 8 yards from the spot to which the tiger had dragged the buffalo's body, and on this and a bamboo laid across it to an other branch, the charpoy was securely fastened, it was about 10 feet from the ground and only accessible by climbing a bamboo placed against it and steadying oneself against the trunk of the tree, not a very easy matter. Seated, however, after some trouble with blankets under and our guns alongside of us we dismissed the men who had accompanied us with directions to return with pad elephants if they heard shots. It being too early for dinner and not knowing how long we might have to remain out we had taken the precaution to bring some biscuits in our pockets and a bottle of tea each.

It was a bright moonlight night and from our post we could see the hill clearly as it lay in some low grass, which, however, had been well trodden down when the tiger had dragged the body into it. We soon began to find our vigil an uncomfortable one owing to the closeness of the air and the attention of the mosquitoes and other insects which abound in those parts, but for their buzz all was still around, occasionally a sambhur might be heard calling in the distance, and once or twice we heard a suspicious cackling of underwood as if some animal was moving about, but the hours passed slowly and we were both getting drowsy and tired of our enforced silence and somewhat cramped position. I had my back against the trunk of the tree and sitting with my gun across my legs, fell into a doze, a touch of C.'s hand on my knee, however, presently roused me and I saw he was looking intently and pointing in the direction of the kill, just then a slight rustle in the grass told us some animal was a foot close to it, and in another moment a large tiger's head and shoulder showed out clearly in the moonlight. C.'s ready gun was levelled in a moment and a ball knocked the animal over, he rolled about on the ground roaring loudly, but C.'s second ball through the head finished him. all this had happened very quickly, and almost before I had completely recovered from my drowsiness. We remained sitting quietly on our charpoy till the men arrived with the elephants, when having padded the tiger we tramped home and fell to on a good supper about 11 P.M., and then to bed.

The following morning after having had the tiger skinned and taken some breakfast, we took the elephants out to some heavy swampy jungles three or four miles to the west of the camp which were reported to be frequented by rhinos. In the distance to the north lay the lower ranges of the Himalayas thickly wooded to the summit, but our road lay through the vast forests below. As we passed peacocks and jungle fowl constantly rose around us and occasionally a pig startled from his grass lair would rush by, or a sounder of sows and their young. We presently reached our ground and put the line into a long narrow swampy piece covered with long grass, in places over our heads in the howdahs and studded with large trees, the ground was very heavy and the elephants made but slow progress. Here and there the grass had been cleared or trodden down by buffaloes or rhinos wallowing, and water lay in pools whence divers storks and other water birds rose flying off with wild cries as we roused them. After we had beaten about ½ a mile several large animals rushed round the right end of the line near P.'s howdah elephant and a cry of "Bhainsa" (buffaloes) was raised, the line turned at once and beat back over the same ground. As we approached the end of the swamp three buffaloes suddenly galloped out into some open ground in front of my elephant on the left of the line, and stood looking at us, and I was able to get a fair shot at a fine bull, bringing him down on his knees ; he, however, recovered himself and immediately charged down, but being again badly wounded turned and attempted to make off; he, however, dropped a hundred yards away to rise no more and was then given the coup de grace. His companions had in the meantime got away into some distant heavy jungle, we therefore turned and began again beating down the swamp. A little beyond the spot where we had turned up the buffaloes a sudden rush in front of C. in the centre of the line warned us that something large was again afoot and a short distance further on two rhinos broke back between P. and C. The elephants in that part of the line were very excited and restive imparting their fears to the whole line which resulted in a great deal of squealing and trumpeting ; they were, however, gradually got round and the swamp was again beaten back, but near the end of it both the rhinos charged at a gallop, one behind the other and passed through the line under a volley from C. and myself, but though we used heavy bore rifles with hardened bullets they did not appear to be much the worse.

The elephants which had again got very excited were at length with some trouble brought round to beat up after the animals. This time they stood so still in the high grass that without knowing they were so close we had actually passed them when they suddenly came down on the line from behind and one of them rushed into a small pad elephant striking her on the side and ripping her up behind her fore leg with his large side tooth bowled her clean over. P.'s Goorkha orderly Bagbeer, who had been mounted on her, was sent flying with his gun and the rhinos passed gaily on. The elephant was bleeding badly from a deep cut 8 or 9 inches long and the orderly was badly bruised and presented a very comical appearance, having dropped into a deep muddy pool. Both were unfit to proceed further and were therefore sent back to camp. The line followed the rhinos on through the swamp for about three miles, and though they were heard and sighted again several times we never came up with them again and had to return to camp picking up my buffalo on the way and only getting in at dusk. We had had a hot day and were glad of a bath, dinner, and early bed.

BRIDGE QUERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—A point cropped up in the formation of a Bridge table, on which I would ask for an opinion, as the rules do not seem quite definite on the point.

A table was complete with 6 players, with a seventh man waiting to come in. At the end of a rubber, one of the players, who was out by rotation, left. Has the seventh man an equal right to cut into the next rubber with the two who had previously formed the complete table, and who had been sitting out the previous rubber? Further, had it been one of the players who was in by rotation, who left, what are the seventh man's rights in that case?

BRIDGE MANIAC.

[In the first case, he has no right to cut in, the 5th and 6th players complete the table. In the second case, he can take the place of the man retiring.—ED.]

CURLEWS AND SNIPE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—For the past three days, that is, from the morning of the 1st instant, vast number of grey curlews, Numenius Arquatus, have migrated south. The first of these winged wanderers begun their passage over my place between 2 and 3 in the morning and continued passing over at intervals for nearly a couple of hours ; exactly the same thing happened on the morning of the 2nd, but on the 3rd the birds were much later coming and begun passing over shortly before dawn. A score or so of the more tired or hungry ones pitched in a pool of water some 300 yards from the factory, but were off again before I could get anywhere near them. While thus migrating the birds seemed to be calling constantly to each other, their cru-weé, cru-weé sounding clear and distinct in the still night air. All these birds were evidently making for the sand banks and mud flats of the Roopnarain and which lie only a short distance from here, as the crow flies. These curlews seem to spend the best part of the year among those countless creeks and mud flats that are such a feature of the country 50 to 60 miles south of this. Hundreds of these birds may be seen on their favourite haunts well into April. Most of the curlews that migrate to Bengal from their distant northern breeding grounds, spend fully eight months here. For the past two years, the birds begun flying north homeward between the 20th April to the end of the month and this year they passed over the factory on the 22nd and 23rd April. One of the most interesting sights on the Roopnarain is to watch the curlews, sand pipers, stilts and others watching for the bore to come in. They seem to know by instinct of its coming. No sooner is the wall of water in sight, than the excitement among the feathered hosts increases and as wave after wave dashes or rolls over the shelving banks, they hover over, every now and then darting down to secure a dainty morsel or run after the innumerable little crabs that come up with these bores.

Snipe promise to be very plentiful this year, and owing to the short rainfall, suitable and favourite resorts, should be much more concentrated. The first snipe this year, were marked down by my man on the 17th August, but having just got over a bout of fever, I could not go out. I went out for the first time the day before yesterday (the 2nd) and got 8½ couple snipe and 1 blue winged teal. I might have got a few more birds, but had to bolt back owing to the awful heat. All the snipe, except one, were pintails and I was surprised to find them in such poor condition, as there ought to be plenty of good feeding at this time of the year.

WHAT ARE VERMIN?

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—That the destructive instincts man has inherited from his savage ancestors continue down to the present day no one can deny, permeating as it does all grades from the brat with his catapult up to the fowler with his choke-bore or the mightier nimrod with the heavy bone smasher ; and despite all endeavours it will probably endure for all time, or until absolute dearth of fish, flesh and fowl compel abstention from killing for mere killing's sake. To whatever country we turn comes the universal complaint of the gradual extinction of the wild denizens, plentiful enough within the recollection of middle-aged men ; facilities for travelling to and in the earth's remoter regions and almost daily advance in the perfecting of arms of precision tending to intensify the evil towards the inevitable result, unless very much more stringent means than those hitherto adopted are resorted to, to arrest it. True the several Governments, at the instigation of true lovers of Nature, are framing rules for the conservation of the more useful types, but those indiscriminately labelled, or libelled, under the name which heads this paper are left out in the cold the crusade against them being conducted much on the principle of "giving a dog a bad name," yet it must be apparent that in thus stigmatising numerous members of the animal kingdom, their merits and usefulness are too much overlooked, for that everything in life has its particular mission is an axiom handed down from the dimest historic times, so that, while the several game preservation societies devote their endeavours chiefly to the nobler animals some little attention may well be accorded to those of lesser note whose usefulness is too seldom acknowledged.

No doubt reptiles, from their generally repulsive appearances, come in for the least consideration, yet all have some sphere of usefulness, from the huge voracious unsightly mugger of tropical rivers down to the tiny little lizard who scuttles about our houses. What, for instance, in this country, would become of the carrion (animal and human) that comes floating down the river were it not disposed of instead of surging backwards and forwards to contaminate the water? Ascending in the scale of saurians think for a moment of the enormous amount of insect life each contributes to keep under. Snakes again come in for an undoubtedly unmerited share of condemnation, the most venomous are as a rule sluggish in their movements until interfered with, only becoming aggressive under provocation, while it must be allowed that we ourselves in tolerating rank vegetation and accumulations of débris among our surroundings afford them the asylums they affect. It must also not be forgotten that the harmless snakes far outnumber their less desirable compeers, rats and mice can be more effectually hunted from a dwelling by the introduction of the lattter han by the entertainment of the pampered domestic cat. There is certainly an ingrained horror in most human minds about snakes, probably of superstitious origin, but let any one calmly consider the good they do and carefully study the individual beauty most display and he will cease to wonder at the pronounced revulsion that is manifesting itself in their favour (also that it should be confined to their dead skins) but the majority of mankind regard snakes as objects to be immolated wherever found.

Birds again, until very recently, were regarded by the uneducated agricultural classes as their worst enemies and though it is quite within the range of probability to have too much of a good thing the good they accomplish from the little twitterer up to the fierce Imperial eagle or scavanging vulture will be found to far outbalance the evil they are generally credited with. One has but to watch the small birds flitting from blossom to blossom and note the hosts of minute insects they pick out; the crow, intrusive, thievish and impudent as he is were he to absent himself from any tropical city would render it uninhabitable in a week, the same with the kite and most jays, though the latter levy toll pretty freely on fruit. The vulture's business needs little dwelling on, and though the nobler bird mentioned, indents on unprotected domestic animals, stoats and the lesser cats poachers furnish the real bulk of his larder. The Oriental yokel has no better friend than the egret, who stalking familiarly behind the ploughman, rids the freshly turned up soil from grubs, worms, snails and such like. The fish-preying birds likewise cannot said to be altogether meer pirates as they rid the streams and bheels of the larger finny tribe that create such havoc among the more tooth-some.

I have enumerated but a few of what are regarded as vermin, or objectionable creatures "Varmint," presumedly a corruption, is usually reserved for reynard, but yet at any rate in these days when he is becoming scarce, owing to the spread of cultivation he may be said to have been passing out of the category of the term, at least in European countries, in many of which he is being preserved; out here he and his congener the "jack" may be so classed though truth to tell the latter's misdeeds are amply balanced by his good ones. What constitutes the fox a true member of the vermin fraternity is his marked predilection for cleaner feeding, while jack, if any thing, prefers garbage and other objectionable matter. Fortunately for the sportsman, but not for himself, jack is quite numerous and fecund enough to bear thinning, so while giving him (metaphorically) a passing pat on the head for his undoubted useful qualities we nevertheless leave him under the ban. The genuine foxes in India, are of two kinds, the big one of the plains and diminutive little fellow found in the lower hill ranges, and while not advocating persistent persecution of either, to give them their due they do little harm and afford good enough sport, but still that does not exonerate them from sharing in the obliquity of the term. Leaving out the larger animals that trample on crops, such as elephants, buffaloes, and deer, while according the big carnivora, the wolf and wild dog a class to themselves, we come down to the lesser or true vermin tribe yet many of these admit of being whitewashed to a certain extent, such as the mungoose. In the poultry yard or dovecot his presence is decidedly undesirable and though his pertinacity and cunning as a hunter after feathered ground game must be admitted as proven against him, we ought not to omit taking into consideration the extenuating circumstances that he keeps under the vast multitude of snakes making no distinction between the noxious or innocuous, while the number of eggs of these reptiles he destroys entitles him to consideration. Again, the rat and bandicoot he specially selects for prey, for it is on record that when the invading host of the latter swept so destructively cross North Burma and the countries to the west of it in 1871-72, irregular packs of this, their inveterate foe, hung on their flanks making short work of stragglers, so this agile little ferrit is not so black as he is painted. But can anything be advanced in favour of the stoat whose ways are as evil as his odour. The little beast is no true hunter but simply lies in wait for his victims, preferring ground game as a rule, but on spotting a nest climbing up to it, seldom content till he has sacrified both birds, chicks or eggs to his lust for blood; reckless in his appetite he merely indulges in the tit bits to obtain which his path is marked by wholesale destruction. Let him be anathematised. The wild cat, though certainly a poacher of the most determined character, has the redeeming quality of being just as much "death on rats" as on poultry or rabbits so his offences will well bear condonation and, moreover, he is seldom found in well-wooded spinnies which form the best breeding grounds for our best feathered or furred ground game, preferring to hang about the outskirts of civilisation. The civet is a bolder marauder and no doubt causes considerable loss, and I know of nothing that can be cited in his favour excepting, perhaps, that he has not the gormandising traits of the others, and divides his attention equally between fowl and fish, seemingly preferring the latter when he can get it; take him all round, he may be a varmint but a mild one. The badger I cannot include in the opprobrious list, though writers and hunters do so, most likely adhering to the term from its being handed down from those times when the animal was numerous enough to afford sport in those countries where systematic persecution has since well nigh annihilated him. The otter, in Europe, has come to be classified as vermin and hunted as varmint, simply because the human fish poacher with his nets and weirs has deprived him of his chase of natural food, but as we have not yet gone the same length in India in exhausting our fish supply, though in certain parts we are doing our level best to do so, the otter may be excluded from the list of the maligned, albeit here he is more gregarious hence more destructive than in those countries where it has been bestowed upon him. In conclusion ere hastily condemning so called vermin we ought to weigh their merits and demerits with impartiality, giving the devil his due and when in doubt accepting the Scotch verdict "not proven."

WANTED POPULATION.

A large area of culturable land is lying uncultivated in the Bhilsa and Eesagarh District of Gwalior State for want of sufficient population; most of the land is black Mar which is without irrigation fit for wheat growing in years of ordinary rainfall; in some districts the land is either Padua, Dumat, or Rankad; but it is fit for growing wheat by means of irrigation.

The cultivators who come to settle from outside and cultivate the land, will be given the following concessions:—

(1.) That the cultivator who cultivates 100 bighas of land will be given occupancy right in the land and he will have to pay rent one anna less in the Rupee than the rent ordinarily paid by other tenants.

(2.) That the cultivators who cultivate more than 100 bighas of land will be given Zamindari Huq in the land, i.e., he will have to pay rent according to the settlement rates which will be fixed at the time of the settlement.

(3.) That the cultivator who populates a village and cultivates 1,000 bighas of land, will be given Zamindari Huq in the village and that a well for drinking purposes in the village will be sunk, if necessary, by the Durbar at its own cost.

(4.) That any cultivator who desires to populate one or more depopulated villages may apply for special concessions which will be granted by the Durbar.

(5.) That the cultivator who takes Patta of the land is bound to bring ¼ of the land under cultivation within the first three years; ½ within the six years; and the whole of it excepting the land under houses and that reserved for grazing, within ten years from the date of the Patta.

(6.) That the cultivator shall be charged nothing for the land which he brings under cultivation for the first six years; that one-half rent will be charged for the next three years: and that full rent will be charged thereafter.

(7.) That the cultivator will be charged nothing for timber which he takes from the forest for building houses and making implements for cultivation; that the new settlers will be charged no Sayar taxes on timber for six years; after that ½ anna Sayar tax per cart of timber will be charged.

(8.) For any further particulars application may be made to the Subha of the District of Bhilsa and Eesagarh or to the Secretary Board of Revenue.

RULES.

DOGS.

(Rules 1 to 13 Rules of the N. I. K. A.)

1. Every dog exhibited must be the bonâ-fide property of the exhibitor. But should a temporary owner be empowered, during the real owner's absence from India, to exhibit in his own name such entries will be accepted on the production of a Certificate signed by the real owner to the above effect.

2. Any dog declared by a qualified veterinary opinion to be suffering from any infectious or contagious disease shall be disqualified.

3. A dog found to be objectionably "faked" by the officiating judge, whose judgment is supported by the opinion of a local Sub-Committee consisting of at least two members, assisted by a Veterinary officer, shall be disqualified and debarred from future competition at any show supported by the Association.

4. For the meaning of "objectionable faking" members shall be guided by the rules of the English Kennel Club, for the time being.

5. The case of any dog disqualified under Rule 3 shall be reported to the Secretary of the N. I. K. A. by the local management for necessary action. The owner of such dog shall, however, be allowed a right of appeal to the Committee of the Association whose decision shall be final.

6. Any other objection than that allowed for in Rules 3 to 5 can be made to the Local Committee, the members of which shall be empowered to decide it, subject to the proviso that an appeal can be made to the Committee of the N. I. K. A. whose decision shall be final.

7. In all cases of objection or appeal, the objector and appellant shall be required to deposit a sum of Rs. 16 each which shall be forfeited if, in the opinion of the Local Committee or of the Association Committee, the objection or appeal is of a frivolous nature.

8. All cases decided by the Local Committee shall be reported in writing within one month to the N. I. K. A. Committee, for purposes of record.

9. Whenever possible, separate classes should be formed for separate breeds.

10. All judging at shows in any way assisted by the N. I. K. A. shall be public.

11. In every show held under the auspices of the N. I. K. A. at least one prize for members only shall be given.

12. No dog imported after 1st January 1900, or born in India after 1st January 1900, shall, if cropped, be eligible for competition at shows held under these rules.

13. The term "bred in India" shall mean "begotten and born in India."

14. Entries.—All entries must be made on the special forms provided for the purpose and entry fees must accompany the applications.

15. Entry Fees.—First entry fees Rs. 2, for each dog. Second entry fees Rs. 3, for each dog. First entries close on 14th September, second entries on 21st September, after which no entries will be accepted.

16. Registration.—All dogs including puppies unless already registered must be registered in the N. I. K. A. books; special forms are sent out with entry forms which must be filled in and returned to the Honorary Secretary, with the entries. The Registration fee is Re. 1 for each Dog, and must be sent with the entry fees. Dogs already registered in the English Kennel Club Books are registered free in the books of the N. I. K. A. on production of registration certificate. Unregistered Dogs will be disqualified.

17. Chains.—All dogs must be provided with a strong chain and suitable leather collar. Exhibits sent with chains unsuitable for the purpose will be liable to rejection.

18. Identification Cards.—All dogs must be accompanied with cards, securely fastened to their collars, on which are written their names as well as the names of their exhibitors, thus :—

Black Spaniel Gunshy.

19. Instructions for entry forms :—
(a). In the "Breed" columns it is not sufficient to state merely "Terrier" or "Spaniel," etc., the exact breed such as "Wire-haired Fox Terrier." "Cocker Spaniel" or as the case may be should be clearly stated.
(b). Puppies should be declared as in Rule 20.
(c). Pedigrees if given should be very brief. It will be sufficient to name sire and dam.
(d). Prizes previously won should be mentioned in the briefest possible manner.
(e). Exhibitors may state in the entry forms if their dogs are for sale or not which fact will be shown in the catalogues.

20. Puppies.—A Puppy to be eligible must be under twelve months of age on the 26th September, 1903. Such Puppies may compete in other classes and if so entered will require fees as mentioned in Rule 15 for each class, and the entries must be distinctly recorded in the entry forms.

The exact date of birth of all puppies entered in the "puppy classes" must be given.

21. There will be two classes (big and small dogs) for soldiers alone, if there are sufficient exhibits. These two classes alone are post entries, and a nominal charge of 4 annas for each entry will be made. Dogs entered in these classes need not be registered. Soldiers wishing to enter dogs in other classes must do so in the usual manner.

GENERAL.

1. Judging will commence as soon after 10 A.M. as possible. Exhibits not in their places when judging commences will be liable not to be judged. The order of judging will be determined by the Committee. The decisions of the judges will be final, unless there is any such misrepresentation or breach of Rules as to render revision necessary, a point which the Committee will decide. Judges are empowered to withhold a prize, or prizes, in any class, if in their opinion there is a conspicuous want of merit.

2. No animals other than exhibits, will be allowed on the ground on any pretext whatever.

3. The Committee reserve to themselves the right to refuse any entry without assigning a reason; and to exclude or remove any exhibit which, in their opinion, is not in a fit state for exhibition from disease, vice, or any other cause.

4. The above Rules are subject to addition or alteration at the discretion of the Committee. Should any question arise not provided for by the Rules of the time being, the decision of the Committee will be final. All Exhibitors will be deemed to have agreed to abide by the decisions of the Committee on whatsoever point, and it is only on this understanding that entries will be received.

5. The Northern India Kennel Association will present Special Prizes, the terms of which will be made known hereafter.

6. Any exhibit intended for sale may be claimed at the catalogue price. All such claims to be made to the Honorary Secretary who will register the sale to the first claimant. In the event of two or more claimants applying at the same time for the same exhibit, so that priority of application cannot be decided, such exhibit will be auctioned among the above claimants, no exhibit will be recognised as having changed hands until the show is over. Ten per cent. commission will be charged by the Show Fund to vendors of exhibits.

7. Safety of animals.—The Committee will be most anxious for the care and safety of animals sent for exhibition, or any other property entrusted to them; but it must be distinctly understood by exhibitors and all other persons, that the Committee will not be responsible for the loss, detention of or damage to any animals or other property whether arising from accident or other cause whatever, or from any act or omission of themselves, their officers, agents, servants or others.

Pressure about 12 to 13 Tons per sq. in. compared with 16 to 18 with the old 450 Cordite Cartridge.

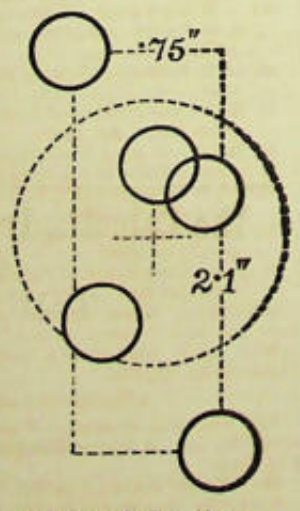
"FIELD," May 9th, 1903.

"A most marvellous run of uniformity.....Extremely difficult to find an instance where equally well authenticated experiments have shown such satisfactory readings."

"FIELD" April 18th, 1903.

"Shooting at ordinary temperatures, the pressures registered gave an average of 12·87 tons per square inch chamber pressure, at a temperature of 140° Fahr., the standard reached was 15·93 tons, which is well under the service pressure of several of the ordinary express Cartridges.

"COUNTY GENTLEMAN."



"The whole trial was of the most satisfactory character..... pressures were such as to leave a margin of safety to the shooter."

"THE FIELD,"
May 9th, 1903.

"Messrs. Josheph Lang & Son, Ld., have been very prompt in submitting for our notice a rifle which has been chambered and regulated for firing the new No. 2 nitro cartridge.....A thoroughly sound and well turned out piece of work.....maximum of strength and ease of extraction. Very high velocities.....most marvellous run of uniformity. In fact, it would be extremely difficult to find an instance where equally well authenticated experiments have shown such satisfactory readings."

Five shots at 100 yards with the new No. 2 Nitro Cartridge, fired in a LANG Rifle. Centres of shot holes fell within 2·1 in. by ·75 in. Average deviation from point of mean impact ·7 in.

"THE FIELD." A fine piece of shooting.

POONA NINTH EXTRA MEETING.

Saturday, 5th September 1903.

THE card opened with the Little Consolation Stakes and for this the issue was expected to lie between Silver Fox and Mooreed. The latter has been running on and his two recent performances certainly inspired confidence. There was money going for Buktawar and Kyam, but whether they had any chance one cannot say as a rather serious accident occurred at the three-furlong post. Sybarite ridden by Melsom crossed Kyam and brought him down, Robinson, who was on Sweet William, being immediately behind, also fell and was knocked out of time for a while and received a slight kick from one of the ponies, his mouth being hurt but not seriously, and though a bit shaken he rode in Mr. Gaulstan's colours in the next race. Omerkhan escaped without a scratch and both ponies got off scot free.

To return to the race Silver Fox led at the distance, but Mooreed full of running, came out in front of the stand and won by a length.

For the Sydney Stakes Key West was looked upon as being exceedingly well handicapped for the company and was accordingly freely supported at prices ranging from 2 to 1 to even money. At the end there was somewhat of a rush for her stable companion, Wink. Min and Tragedian were the next best backed, but only for small amounts. The result in some respects resembled the performance of Key West and Wink just twelve months ago. At the distance Wink, who had led all the way, appeared to hold everything safe, but Comeback came with such a rattle that although Wink was shaken up he lost by half a length. Whether he would have won if he was taken along at the distance is an open question, but he certainly appeared to be galloping within himself till the sudden call came. Key West ran a good third. Comeback has run and won among horses in Australia and is evidently returning to form.

Scattercash was well named. In the New Arab Stakes he had pride of place in the betting ring and was freely backed at even money but failed to show up at all. The two-year old colt, Bendigo, however, was a cut above his field and galloping over them all went to the front in the straight and won as he liked.

The event of the card was the All Horse Stakes. Quite a parade of blood was seen when eleven of the twelve figuring on the programme were saddled. Acetine, though carrying a certain amount of flesh, looked ready enough. Carrying 10st. 2lbs. to-day in a smart field he came through when asked and won like a race horse. I saw him after he was taken to the stall and unsaddled and he was chewing lucern unconcernedly and was not warmer than he would have been after an exercise canter. For the race Ayrdale was picked out the best handicapped horse.

Altamas ran a solid race from start to finish, but had to put up with third place. Hoop Iron looked a bit dry in the coat, while Glen Albyn is manifestly not quite ready. Alix, who was run in cotton wool and bandages, was heavily backed for place, but was never in it. Corrie Roy's running was an eye-opener, but I expected Fitzeros to fill the place the former did at the finish.

Such a fall was there, when Pomfret won the Service Stakes, but Major Edwards' riding did it for he just lifted Pomfret past Patrician by a neck in the last two strides. Moon received no uncertain support for the Small Arab Stakes, but Arabistan was always the better favourite. Moon won from Victory, but if the latter had got through earlier he would have upset the pot. Moon, Victory and Arabistan were the choice of backers and they finished up in front of the others.

Running on 28th August with 10st. 2lbs. Runaway Girl ran third to Misty 11st. 10lbs. and Madeira 11st. 8lbs. To-day she was carrying the light impost of 8st. 7lbs. and her owner thought that with the services of a professional she would stand a good chance. The public, however, were on Ombree to a man. A fine finish was witnessed, Runaway Girl winning from Ombree by a neck. Capt. Randall on the latter riding a fine finish. Details :—

BANGALORE SECOND EXTRA MEETING.

Thursday, 4th September 1903.

The second extra day's racing in Bangalore cannot be described as a brilliant affair, for the attendance was sparse and at no time during the afternoon was the enclosure even fairly filled.

Favourites won in four races out of five, and Lancer was well backed in the Scurry so that if punters could have got prices they should have had a good time.

One pony won during the afternoon which will be worth watching next year and that was King Cobweb. He is on the improve all the time, and was simply a butcha so far as racing went when he cut up so badly at the late Bangalore meeting. When he won on Thursday he seemed to think the whole affair rather a lark. Events and results :—

THE NOVICE PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs 25. For ponies which have never won a flat race of the value of Rs. 50 or over. 3 furlongs.

Mr Strickland's b aus m Rosamund, 9st 9lbs,	Mr. Saunders	1
Mr C P Graham's ch aus m Shot Silk, 11st 7lbs	Owner	2
Lieut-Col J. Desaraj Urs' br aus g The Peer, 9st	Narrainswamy	3
Mr N B Abbay's b aus m Pompadour. 11st	Mr Knight	0
Major Lawless' bk aus g Black Michael, 10st	Owner	0

BETTING : Evens Rosamund, 2 to 1 agst Shot Silk, 3 to 1 The Peer, 4 to 1 each Black Michael and Pompadour.

The Peer led for two furlongs when Rosamund came through and won without an effort by three lengths ; a short head between second and third. Time—43 secs.

THE CUBBON PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 25. For horses. 5 furlongs.

Major Hamilton's ch aus g Rubicon, 9st 7lbs	McQuade	1
Major Vans Agnew's bk aus g Gaylad, 9st	Mr Saunders	2

BETTING : 2 to 1 on Rubicon and 6 to 4 on Gaylad.

Rubicon made all the running and won by a length, but his jockey had to wake him up in the last few strides. Nevertheless he had a good bit in hand.

Time—1 min. 10⅖ secs.

THE STEWARDS' PLATE—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For Arab ponies 14-1 and under. 6 furlongs.

Mr R Moss King's b a h King Cobweb, 9st 7lbs	Mr Saunders	1
Capt R M Bell's g a h Superb, 9st 7lbs ...	Major Lawless	2
Mr O Dignum's g a h Defendant 8st	Pacha	3
Capt R M Bell's g a h Essex, 10st ...	Capt Tatam.

BETTING : 3 to 1 cn King Cobweb, 6 to 4 agst Superb, 2 to 1 Essex, and 4 to 1 Defendant

Defendant made strong running until the home turn, where he died away and King Cobweb came through, jockey and pony looking round them as if to ask what all the bother was about. The winner is a young, good and improving pony. Time—1 min. 30⅖ secs.

THE SCURRY.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For ponies. ½ mile.

Capt Dougall's ch aus g Lancer, 10st 6lbs ...	Owner	1
Lieut-Col J Desaraj Urs' b aus m Momao, 8st 10lbs	Santali	2
Mr C P Graham's ch aus m Shot Silk, 10st	Owner	3
Capt Tatam's ch cb m Filigree 9st 7lbs	Mr Saunders	0
Mr R L Kindersley's br e m Freda, 9st 4lbs	Major Lawless	0
„ H West's ch aus m Firefly, 8st 8lbs ...	Meah Jan	0
„ W P Allardice's g aus g Sardine, 9st ...	McQuade	0
„ Strickland's ch cb m Whitefield, 6st 2lbs	Marie	0

BETTING : Evens Momao and Firefly, 2 to 1 each Lancer, Filigree and Freda, 4 to 1 Sardine and 8 to 1 Whitefield.

Lancer led throughout from Momao and no important change took place in their positions, a fair race resulting in favour of Lancer by three-quarters of a length; two lengths between second and third. Time—55⅖secs.

THE POLO SCURRY—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25.

For bonâ fide polo ponies 14-1 and under which have never won a flat race of the value of Rs. 100 or over. 3 furlongs

Lieut-Col J Desaraj Urs' br aus g The Peer, 11st 3lbs	Capt Dougall	1
Major Lawless' bk aus g Black Michael, 12st 11b	Owner	2
Mr A M Swifte's b aus g Light Heart, 12st 7lbs	Mr Saunders	3
Mr D Ker's bk cb m Black Maria, 9st 9lbs	Meah Jan	0

BETTING : 6 to 4 on The Peer, 2 to 1 each agst Light Heart and Black Michael and 3 to 1 Black Maria. Black Michael led from The Peer, but when it came to racing the latter won easily by half a length, with Light Heart two lengths behind Black Michael. The latter pony is fast but does not like a distance. Time—43⅘secs.

Saturday, the 5th September 1903.

Originally given for the 27th of last month, and postponed because of the weather, the 5th Open Gymkhana of 1903 came off on Saturday last. The day was sticky in the extreme and the skies threatening; nevertheless there was a very good attendance. They had got out a very attractive card of five races, all of which had filled well, and the sport was good. The best race of the day was the last, in which Mr. Symon's Chaffinch just got home by the shortest of heads. There were one or two bookies there, but there was no sensational betting; indeed, I heard of one case when a bet of Rs. 50 on a horse sent his price from evens to two to one on! That, however, is neither here nor there; it was a most successful show and the thanks of Lucknow are due to Mr. Norwood, the Honorary Secretary, who arranged it all. The following are the results:—

THE RAILWAY PLATE.—Rs. 32 to the winner and Rs. 10 to the second. For English and Australasian ponies 13-3½ and under and other ponies 14-1 and under, that have not won a race of any description since 1st January 1903. English and Australasian ponies 13-3½ to carry 11st., C.-B. ponies 14-1 to carry 11st, Arab ponies 14-1 to carry 10st. W. I. 2 furlongs.
