(FROM OUR OWN SPORTING CORRESPONDENT)
LONDON, Friday, 21st August, 1903.

THE TURF.

ROYAL WINDSOR AUGUST MEETING.

THE disagreeable change in the weather, and the continuous downpour of rain materially affected the attendance at Windsor on the 14th instant, and the proceedings were quieter than usual, although, with two exceptions, fields ruled fairly large and the sport generally interesting Backers started rather unfavourably when, in twelve runners for the Club Two-Year Old Plate, they laid 9 to 4 on Copthorne, who did not even get into the first three. The judge was unable to separate The Convict and Mrs. Peggoty in the Romney Selling Plate, after which fielders for the third time in succession scored when Claqueur and Gayboy finished in front of Childwickbury. Notwithstanding his previous defeats, followers of W. Lane pinned their faith to him once more in the Clewer Plate, and on this occassion the good thing came off, as Irish Gal made all the running and won by a length. Chant accounted for the Forest Handicap and backers' cup of misery filled when, in the Manor Plate, with four runners, they failed to select the winner, Minie, the favourite, being beaten by three-quarters of a length.

There was a decided improvement in the weather at Windsor on Saturday, the 15th, when the concluding stage was entered upon, although there were still evidences of the previous day's gale, which very probably affected the attendance also The programme was confined to six events, and, with one exception, the fields ruled faitly large, especialy in the Two-Year Old Selling Plate, which brought out fourteen runners. Business was resumed with the Flying Handicap, and backers started none too well in selecting Shenfield for favouritism, as the colt was not even placed, the winner turning up in Goodrest, the mount of K. Cannon. Fielders again were on the right side when, in a large field, odds of 11 to 8 were laid on Rightful, as he also was beaten out of a place. Maid of the Mint filly a 20 to 1 chance, winning by a length. Papola and Aquascutum were the fancied pair for the August Handicap at "twos," and, after a pretty finish, the first-named won by a length. Following up this success, Mr. W. M. G. Singer accounted for the Slough Heavyweight Selling Handicap with Phylloxera, who gave K. Cannon his second winning mount. W. Lanes bad run of luck seemed to follow him in the Meadow Welter, as on the favourite, Cheriton Belle, he could only get second to Pure Gold, and then the meeting terminated when Scullion easily won the Rothschild late, starting at evens.

STOCKTON MEETING.

The weather was delightfully fine at Stockton on the 19th and in consequence the attendance was large. Backers began badly by standing the veteran, Deep Sea, who had to give way to Fiorino, for the Norton Plate; but in the Stockton Stewards' Handicap they did the right thing over Martaban, though it was a very close finish between the winner and McMayne. Mr. Rothschild's Bass Rock performed very poorly in the Hardwicke Stakes, which after a rare tussle between Mousqueton and Sweet Duches filly, ended in favour of the former by a head. Only a quartette stripped for the Great Northern Leger, Lady Help, in receipt of 10lbs, from William Rufus, being a firm favourite. The race proved a match between this pair but Madden, riding very strongly defeated the filly in clever style. The biggest field of the day was seen out for the Mandale Selling Handicap, Trigg on Erroll winning for Mr. Eustace Barlow. The sport terminated with the popular victory of Sir Edgar Vincent's Midshipman in the Lambton Two Year Old Stakes. Madden had three winning mounts in the course of the afternoon.

The executive of the Stockton Meeting had every reason to congratulate themselves on the successful close of the proceedings on the 20th, as, with good weather, the attendance was fully up to the average. Six events were down for decision, and backers made no mistake when they selected La Joie colt to win the Thornaby Two Year Old Selling, and they followed up this success by supporting Mr. King's Mimiery in the Middlesbrough Welter. The odds of 9 to 4 on Dumbarton Castle were never in doubt towards the finish; but Rosglas, a 6 to 1 chance, gave fielders a good turn when he won the Billingham Selling Handicap. Ethelbruce won the Wilton Welter Handicap, and Orme Shore brought the day's sport to a close by landing the Elton Two-Year Old Plate.

CRICKET.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE vs. KENT.—Played at Cheltenham on 13th, 14th and 15th August. Gloucestershire won by 219 runs. For once the Gloucestershire team ended the first day's play with more than a reasonable prospect of gaining a victory, although the members of the team must be so used to defeat that they could hardly have felt very confident. Cheltenham had escaped the rain which fell in most parts of England, and the wicket seemed a good one. Thanks to steady play by Rice and Wrathall and a useful innings by C. L. Townsend, Gloucestershire began well enough, and when C. O. H. Sewell was joined by Jessop for the fourth wicket the total was 87. Jessop was in brilliant form, and in the course of twenty minutes before luncheon the score was increased by 41, of which Jessop claimed 32. After lunch Jessop still continued his brilliant play, while Sewell took every opportunity of scoring. It was not until the partnership had put on 102 runs in a little less than an hour that Sewell was dismissed for an excellent innings. Jessop was out for 62, when only two more runs had been made. He scored his first fifty out of 81, and his 62 out of 102, and he was batting less than an hour. Just before Sewell was out the score stood at 189 for three wickets, but when eight were down it was only 228. Roberts and Dennett added 30 for the last wicket, the former making two-thirds of the runs. When Kent went in Roberts followed up his useful batting by bowling so well that the total was only 49 when half the men were out, Roberts taking the whole of the wickets in eleven overs for 15 runs. Afterwards Day and Hutchings put a better appearance on the game, and without being parted added 38 runs to the total. When the day's play ended Kent had made 87 for five wickets. On Friday no one except Day and Hutchings did much for them, and the innings ended 127 behind. Before stumps were drawn Gloucestershire had increased their lead by 146 for the loss of four wickets, and were thus in a very strong position. Wrathall was dismissed before a run had been scored, but Rice and C. L. Townsend then brought the total to 67. Rice, as usual, played a strictly defensive game, and was half-an-hour before he made a run. Nor did Townsend score very rapidly, and when he was dismissed he had been at the wickets for an hour and three-quarters. But both men played good cricket, and their stand was most useful. Jessop and Langdon stayed together until stumps were drawn, the former being not out 42, made in three quarters of an hours, and the latter not out 11. On Saturday Jessop was out almost as soon as play began, and Langdon did not last long. But W. S. A. Brown and Board made useful scores, and when the innings came out to an end Kent, with four hours and a quarter before them, had to make 348 to win. At lunch time the total was 37 for two wickets, and afterwards there was some slow cricket. But Gloucestershire always seemed to have a fair chance of getting the Kent team out in time, they were able, comfortably enough, to claim their first victory of the season. Burnup played a very sound not out innings.

SOMERSET vs. WORCESTERSHIRE.—Played at Taunton on 13th, 14th and 15th August. Somerset won by 4 wickets. On the first day of this match the play was so even that an interesting finish was to be looked for. Against a total of 186 Somerset scored 148 for the loss of 7 wickets. By far the most noticeable feature of the day's cricket was the splendid batting of L. C. H. Palairet, who was in brilliant form on a difficult wicket. He was batting for an hour and fifty minutes for his 97, which included twelve 4's. When he left the total was only 147 ; he made 70 out of the first hundred. While he was in with Lee some very attractive cricket was shown, and in the course of thirty-five minutes the pair increased the total by 61 runs. On the Worcestershire side H. K. Foster played a fine game, and the tail did very well indeed, notably Carson. On Friday it was not possible to begin play until three o'clock, and then the three remaining Somerset wickets fell for an addition of 6 runs, so that Worcestershire had a lead of 32. But Cranfield and Braund were in great form with the ball when Worcestershire went in a second time, and, with the exception of Caldwell, who carried his bat nearly through the innings which lasted about an hour and a half, nobody could play them. In the end Somersetshire had to make 105 to win, and in the course of the forty-five minutes which remained for play they lost three wickets for 39. On Saturday they had some anxious moments, but succeeded in pulling off the match with some ease.

BOXING.

THE HEAVY-WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP.

There is more than one reason why the contest decided at the Yosemite Club, San Francisco, on Friday, 14th instant, between the two Californians, Corbett and Jeffries, was looked upon with a deal of suspicion. To begin with, there was not a penny staked by either side ; then the match was made in the most amicable manner, notwithstanding the old story about the men being deadly enemies ; further, there were the "funny" bets that Corbett would not last until the tenth round was reached—which he just did—and lastly, the remarkable physical disparity both in age and weight that existed between them. A reference to the appended table will indicate this :

JEFFRIES.

	Height.	Weight	Neck.	Chest.	Waist.	Biceps.
	ft. in.	lbs	in.	in.	in.	in.
Age.
27	6 1	215	17½	43½	35	16

CORBETT.

	Height.	Weight.	Neck.	Chest	Waist.	Biceps.

In fact, on paper, Jeffries had nothing more nor less than a gift, for who could have expected Corbett to make any better show than he did when the pair last met at the Seaside Club, New York, in May of 1900? Then "Pompadour" Jim made the running, was by far the cleverer, and would have won easily on points, but, after twenty-three of the twenty-five rounds had been fought, he was put out with a hard left-hand swing. If Corbett wanted a lesson he had it, and as he does not lack intelligence, he probably remembers what happened then. Besides he is experienced enough to know that no boxer—no matter how clever he be—can give away 2½st in weight and ten years in age. These reasons alone indicate that the match was nothing more or less than a gate-money affair, and from the reports to hand, it appears to have been highly successful. Ten thousand people were present, and it is said the takings amounted to 54,000dols., which would make even the loser's end of the pool more than the Post Office Savings Bank would accept as a single deposit. The most remarkable thing in connection with the contest was its attractive powers. Sportsmen from all parts of the American Continent were drawn to San Francisco to see the fight, notwithstanding the fact that Jeffries was a strong favourite at 5 to 2 on, and that there were not a few who said that it was all arranged for the "pictures." According to the reports of the contest, Corbett appears to have made several attempts to get in a good punch below Jeffries's heart, but, although landing on several occasions, he lacked the power necessary to shake the Herculean Californian. He clinched a deal and in the eighth round made a fine spurt, only to be beaten to a standstill in the tenth from several heavy swings on the body. Jeffries, it is said, was very quick on his feet, evaded his opponent cleverly, and all the time was reducing his man by swings on the body. Occasionally he hit low and the crowd called 'Foul!" but the referee, Mr Graney, let the affair go on until the end came, and Corbett, for the second time, was beaten by Jeffries. The latter is not yet one of the "has-beens," although at boxing men are veterans early in life. However, it is to be hoped that, at all events, "Pompadour" Jim will now forsake the ring for his second love—the stage. He has now quite a number of lost battles to his account, and thus may not prove such an attractive star as when he was undefeated ; but still, as he has plenty of "side" and is a good talker, he will no doubt be able to explain away these reverses

The light showed Jeffries alone in his class. He has never been in better condition or lighter on his feet, and his improvement in speed and skill astonished everybody. Corbett has lost his old-time speed, while the few blows he landed in the first part of the fight lacked sting. Corbett's physical condition, however, was all he claimed for it. He stood many of Jeffries's blows without wincing and came back with swinging rights and lefts, of which many landed. He was game to the end and made a number of facetious remarks, such as 'Watch him trying to knock me out!' or "Go ahead' knock me out!' At such times Jeffries only grinned and went at him harder than ever. Corbett did not keep away, but clinched at every opportunity. He also did some clever ducking, but from the first it was a hopeless case for him. He was the favourite in the galleries, and every blow which he got home was greeted with cheers.

In the first round Jeffries feinted, while Corbett stepped lively. Jeffries swung over his adversary's head, and a clinch followed. They were slow in breaking away, when Jeffries put a light left to Jim's ribs. Corbett got in a blow over Jeffries's heart, clinched, and put a hard right on Jeffries's body. They were careful in breaking, and Jeffries forced his man across the ring. Corbett then landed two rights over the heart. Jeffries laughingly exclaimed, "Ah!" It was evidently Corbett's plan to attack Jeffries's heart, for all his best blows were directed there.

In the third round Corbett had to run to avoid a rush. Jeffries gave indications of forcing matters and fighting in. In the fourth round the referee stopped the fight to look at Jeffries's glove, which had burst, thus giving Corbett a breathing spell. Hard fighting followed, Jeffries repeatedly landing hard swings, amid calls from the spectators that Jeffries was fighting foul. Corbett slipped to his knees from a left in the stomach.

In the fifth round Jeffries again scored on the stomach. Corbett looked tired when the gong rang, and there was no force behind this blows. Corbett went down for 9secs with a left on the chin in the sixth. It was a rough round, and ended with Jeffries chasing his man round the ring.

In the eighth Corbett staggered Jeffries with a blow on the nose and fought fiercely, sending in half a dozen good blows n the face. It was Corbett's round, and he was cheered wildly.

In the ninth Jeffries rushed like a mad bull. The faces of both men showed lumps. Corbett's fancy boxing tactics were useless against his burly antagonist, whose savage swings landed and began to tell. Corbett, however, kept cheerful, repeatedly taunting Jeffries with, "You can t knock me out!"

In the tenth round Jeffries stood straight up and came after his man without hesitation. They exchanged lefts to the face and then Jeffries got in his vicious stomach blows. After it was ended Corbett appeared to be suffering pain, and a chair was brought for him. When he had rested a minute he got up and shook hands with Jeffries, saying, "Jim, you beat me fairly. You stand alone. No one can touch you."

The fight was witnessed by 10,000 persons in the Mechanics' Pavilion, this being a record attendance in this country. The gross receipts were 54,000dols. The betting just before the fight was 2 to 1 in favour of Jeffries. Fitzsimmons was Jeffries's leading second.

THE WEASEL.

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

THE meet on the 3rd instant was at Golf Corner in drizzling rain. A line was crossed on the way to Jackal Shola, but the jack headed towards Bagman, and hounds were called off. A jack broke out of Jackal Shola on arrival at the place and made for Druid, then by Denmark Shola to the Bridle Road to below Cairn Hill, where hounds were stopped. Ballywood was next drawn blank. But a jack was viewed on Lawley's course and away they went after it ; over the course to Staircase, on the top of which hounds divided. Some made for Martyn's Shola and returned to Staircase, where the jack went to ground. The others with a fresh quarry got into the Yemakal Valley, the jack going to ground near Chemund.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

EVERY tide must have its ebb ; one cannot expect the full tide of prosperity always, and I am sorry to have to briefly chronicle a turn in the several weeks' wonderful good sport enjoyed by the above excellent pack. Three days' hunting were there this past week (for the Master generously chucked in a bye-day), but results were, I gather by no means up to the previous high standard, which indeed obviously could not last for ever, however desirable such a state of affairs must be. On the 30th August the meeting place was Chinchward station, outside the ten mile radius for dwellers in Poona and Wanowrie, though convenient for the gunner settlement in Kirkee. But even the distance failed to choke off several keen sportsman from the capital proper, and a fairly large field put in an appearance. On the previous occasion on which hounds met at Chinchward I remember that it was reported to me that the regular sugarcane coverts and surrounding land was practically under water and wholly unrideable. On this occasion luckily (or possibly unluckily) it was not so, for from all I can learn there was an abundance of jackals, but at the same time alas a superabundance of cane coverts. Hounds worked with wonderful patience and perseverance I believe, but the morning was spent in hustling jacks out of one patch only to see them pop into another in proximity, and hounds were eventually taken home without diminishing the plenteous supply of foxes at Chinchward. But such a plethora should mean great sport later on, if only it is the custom to cut the sugarcanes before hunting for the season ends.

The bye-day meet late in the morning was fixed for His Highness the Aga Khan's Palace near Yerowda, but only a few, I believe, availed themselves of the Master's well meant act of grace. A brace of jack were found during the morning, but were evidently lying up for their midday siesta and, like many of us feel at times, "could'nt run to save their lives," and both were run into after all too brief runs, and the Master then decided to take hounds back to kennels.

Kirkee Railway Station was the cynre for the 4th, as owing to the intermediary bye-day the meet was altered from the regular Thursday to Friday. Considering the handiness of the trysting place the number of sportmen who put in an appearance was not, I hear, very great. Some sugarcane stretching from the station to the Botanical Gardens outside the back gate of Government House demesne was drawn blank. Nothing daunted the Master then threw hounds into the Botanical Gardens, an almost certain find, but to general dismay even this safe harbourage was drawn blank too, and it was not till reaching a small patch of cane on the out skirts of the enclosure that welcome music proclaimed that the eagerly songht varmint was discovered. But the joy was short, lived, for just as hopes of a run must have risen high in many a sporting breast, the jack ran into a large jowari field close by, from which strived they never so keenly hounds were unable to evict him. Once the jack I hear made a bid for the open, but was evidently headed, for he turned back and frustrated in this one half hearted bid for freedom confined his further efforts to repeated evolutions in the crop till eventually the inevitable happened, and he was massacred in the thick of the crop. Most determined hunting on the part of hounds it was I am assured. A move was next made in the direction of the Bamburda hills and in some sugarcane another jack refused to break cover and paid the life penalty. Not a great day's sport, but it was no fault of hounds, whose work was, I am told, worthy of all praise.

SCARAMOUCH.

For the guidance of those taking part in the competition for the original Newmarket Town Plate, the following "orders of the day" were devised in the reign of Charles II.

One of the rules is worded as follows : " Every horse that rideth shall be bridled, saddled, and shod, and his rider shall weigh twelve stone, fourteen pounds to the stone, and every rider that wanteth above one pound and a half after he hath rid the heat shall win no plate or prize."

Another rule says : "Whosoever doth stop or stay any of the horses that rideth for this plate or prize, if he be either owner, servant, party, or bettor, and it appears to be willingly done, he shall win no plate, prize, or bets."

Moreover, "Every rider that layeth hold on, or striketh any of the riders, shall win no plate or prize."

Another rule confers on the judges the following power : "Any of the judges may call any of the riders at the end of any of the heats, and if he be found to have fraudulently cast away any of his weight, and want any more than his pound and a half, he shall lose the plate, prize, and stakes."

One more extract from these rules will suffice : "Whosoever winneth the plate or prize shall give to the clerk of the course twenty shillings, to be distributed to the poor on both sides of Newmarket, and twenty shillings to the clerk of the race, for which he is to keep the course plain and free from holes and cart roots."

Polo.

POONA JUNIOR POLO TOURNAMENT.

THE Poona Junior Polo Tournament has been won by the representatives of the 3rd Bombay Cavalry and well do they deserve their victory. They were put through a pretty severe ordeal and came out on top owing to their dashing play.

A most regrettable contretemps occurred during the course of this tourney and its recurrence should be guarded against in the future. The Bombay Gymkhana having won the first round, exception was taken to the fact that they played some of Mr. Wilson's (10th Hussars) ponies, he not being a member of the Poona Polo Club. An objection was also lodged under the rules of the junior tournament against the team playing more than one member who had played in a first-class tournament, it being alleged that Mr. Meynell, A. D. C. to the Governor, had played in a first-class tournament, Capt. Davie being the other.

On the score of riding ponies not belonging to the club the Committee were prepared to decide at once. Mr. Wilson was to have played in the Poona Gymkhana team and his ponies played in the practice games, but he himself went to Mhow and so he did not become one of the selected quartette. Under these circumstances the objection to the ponies was overruled, but the other point was referred to Quetta But while the answer was awaited the Poona Gymkhana appear to have declared the withdrawal of their team. This being the case the H. C. Lancea team which had been beaten by the Gymkhana was revivery and a match was played between them and the 3rd Bombay Cavalry as a semi-final. The latter team playing with good combination won and expected to make their next appearance in the final.

This was not to be, for a reply having been received to the effect that Mr. Meynell had not played in a first-class tournament at Quetta, it was notified that the Gymkhana would meet the Bombay Cavalry in the semi-finals.

There was a team which had scratched, revived. Once scratched it was to say the least a most peculiar proceeding to reinstate the Gymkhana team and it was distinctly hard lines on the 3rd Bombay Cavalry who had won the semi-finals to ask them to play it over again.

They objected strongly and eventually decided to play under protest stating that they would reserve their right to refer the matter to the Indian Polo Association.

The game was a very fast one and also a very even one, the game at the end of the fifth chukker being no one's. An extra chukker with widened goal posts however, resulted in the Cavalry winning by the narrowest of margins. This was most undoubtedly the best and fastest game played in the tournament.

The finals did not provide such a close game as was anticipated. It was feared that the Oxfords would lose the services of Weatherby, who was booked to sail on Wednesday, but the S.S. Ramses departure was deferred and so the Infantry team was represented at its full strength. Despite their two hard games the Cavalry ponies carried their tails jauntily and were as nippy as ever. For a time the exchanges were fairly even, but after the third chukker the Cavalry simply made rings round their opponents and scored freely, the Oxfords seldom having a chance to attack, being kept well occupied in clearing their country from the successive attacks of Alexander and Anderson.

For the victorious team chief credit must be given to Captain Alexander, who played a fine galloping game throughout the tournament. His hitting was very clean and generally he played a dashing game. Captain Anderson also did well, while Major Edwards as back most successfully cleared his keep even when most hotly assailed. The 3rd Bombay Cavalry have shown themselves good exponents of the game and they should stand a good chance in the open tournament. In Poona the junior tournament often kills the open fixture. Let us hope that will not be the case this year

SEMI-FINAL.

POONA GYMKHANA	vs.	3RD BOMBAY CAVALRY.
1 Mr Keighly, C I H		1 Duf Fazand Ali
2 Capt Meynell A D C		2 Capt Anderson
3 ,, Bremner, R E		3 ,, Alexander
Back : Capt Davie, Royal Scots		Back : Major Edwards

Umpires :—Lieut-Col Onslow, R E, and Capt Hewlett, C I H.

1st Chukker.—The Cavalry opened the attack. Anderson making a smart run down and scoring a subsidiary. Play remained in the Gymkhana quarter and only the sound defence of Davie saved scoring and later Keighly notched a subsidiary Some reckless play resulted in a free hit to the Gymkhana and Davie just missed the goal but scored a subsidiary. Another foul against the mounted arms gave Davie a second free hit but Alexander saved disaster. Chukker in favour of Gymkhana ; Cavalry a bit two eager. Score: Gymkhana 2 subs., Cavalry 1 sub. Time—5mins. 9 secs.

2nd Chukker—Fine up and down play opened this round the Cavalry making a splendid run down, while the Gymkhana a little later made a smart a sweep down the field, but neither effort was productive of scoring. Later Meynell by a brilliant individual run scored a subsidiary. Thence onwards the Cavalry prevailed and scored two subsidiaries through Edwards and Alexander. Score : Gymkhana 3 subs., Cavalry 3 subs. Time—12 mins 2 secs.

3rd Chukker—Rough play on the part of the Cavalry gave Bremner a free hit for goal, of which he did not fully avail himself. Alexander receiving the ball from Edwards scored a subsidiary and then the Gymkhana team combining with great effect crowned their efforts with a goal. The Gymkhana distinctly held their opponents up after this till the bell sounded. Score : Gymkhana 1 goal 3 subs., Cavalry 4 subs. Time—17 mins. 2secs.

4th Chukker.—The Cavalry opened with great determination and for a spell the Gymkhana were kept actively engaged in defending their country. No score, however, resulted till Bremner scored a minor point, wild riding followed and a dangerous foul against the Gymkhana was the closing feature of this round. Score : Gymkhana 1 goal 4 subs., Cavalry 4 subs. Time—23 mins. 12 secs

5th Chukker.—Some smart passing by the Cavalry gave Anderson possession and he equalised amidst the wildest excitement. Score : Gymkhana 1 goal 4 subs., Cavalry 1 goal 4 subs. Time—25 mins.

Extra Chukker.—This necessitated an extra chukker of five minutes with the goal posts widened. After some quick play the Cavalry got hold of the sphere, and Edwards fed Fazand Ali nicely with the result that the latter scored the winning point as nothing was scored after the subsidiary struck by him, though the Cavalry were distinctly dangerous on more than one occasion thereafter. Score : Gymkhana 1 goal 4 subs., Cavalry 1 goal 5 subs. Time—25 mins.

2nd Chukker.—Gallop and attack as they would neither side could score, but the Cavalry certainly held the upper hand. Score: Cavalry 1 goal, Oxfords nil. Time—10 mins. 10secs.

3rd Chukker.—Alexander swooped the ball from the throw in and added a minor to the score. The Oxfords now bucked up but were soon stopped and some neat combination on the part of Edwards and Alexander resulted in the latter adding a goal to the score. Score: Cavalry 2 goals 1 sub. Time—15 mins. 23secs.

4th Chukker.—The Cavalry attacked strongly and Anderson was able to break through the defence of Davie and scored a goal. The Oxfords now looked like scoring, but despite two well-directed attacks were prevented from scoring. Later the Duffadar broke away and notched a goal. Score: Cavalry 4 goals 1 sub, Oxfords nil. Time—21 mins 36 secs.

5th Chukker—Playing for all they were worth the Oxfords were unable to stop their opponents. Anderson scoring a goal and the Cavalry keeping up the attack harrassed the Oxfords till the call of time. Score: Cavalry 5 goals 1 sub. Oxfords nil. Time—25 mins

At the end of the game Sir Robert Low handed the Cup to the winners, congratulating them on their victory.

THE GULMARG TOURNAMENT.

The Polo Tournament commenced on Monday, the 24th August.

Owing to the unprecedental weather and the uncertainty as to whether the Polo ground would be fit for play or not several teams withdrew and the members went away, no practice being possible till a day or two before the date fixed for the tournament so only 6 teams came to the scratch. The first game was between Royal Artillery vs. Bengal Cavalry.

At the commencement it appeared as if the Cavalry were going to walk away. Fortunately it was not the case as the Royal Artillery played up pluckily kept pace with their opponents till they were 4 goals 3 subsidaries all. There was little or no combination, each man appeared to do the best he coulc for his side The play was not brilliant. Capt. Smith, Bengal Cavalry, was good and hit well. Anderson backed him up and acquitted himself satisfactorily. No. 4 was the weak one. For the Royal Artillery Murray was prominent. There was too much missing and loose hitting when there was a chance of making a goal: in the 3rd chukker the Cavalry forged ahead, then the Royal Artillery caught them up but failed to keep their position. The fifth chukker settled the question as the Cavalry made three goals in succession, and the game ended: Bengal Cavalry 8 goals and 5 subsidiaries to Royal Artillery 4 goals and 3 subsidiaries.

Umpire—Capt C. Davies.

The next game was between the Q. O. Corps of Guides and Kashmir Club A team. This was a runaway game as there was no holding the Guides in check, they got 3 goals and 1 subsidiary in the first chukker, three goals in the second chukker, two in the third chukker without anything for the other side in the fourth chukker. A team got 1 goal, and 1 goal in fifth chukker against 4 goals and 2 subsidiaries by their opponent. Buist and Hodson were a host in themselves. Davies and Hay were not wanting by any means. If the Guides had liked they might have piled up any number of goals. Last year the Guides' Subaltern team was beaten by the 4th Dragoon Guards, so this year the Guides sent a senior team who from their play appear irresistible. Guides 14 goals 4 subsidiaries to 4 goals.

The best game was that between Punjab Frontier Force, and Bengal Cavalry team, there was little to choice between them, both played good polo. Muspratt showed up well, hitting strong and true and was well backed up by Anderson. It was give and take throughout the sixth chukker. Captain C. Davies, a good all-round man, came to the front, and Henslow backed him up. The attacks at goal were well delivered and the defence on both sides good. If Davies made a goal for his side, Anderson or Muspratt would respond with one for their side. It was a game well worth seeing. At the end of the sixth chukker the P. F. F. had 4 goals 4 subsidiaries to the Cavalry's 4 goals 4 subsidiaries. The goals were then widened for another chukker to decide the tie. Good play ensued in the middle of the ground, but Davies at last took the ball to the goal and scored. Again the fight was desperate till the P. F. F. were not to be denied. They passed their adversaries time after time and again secured a goal. Worsley and Peck backed up Davies and Henslow well, Muspratt and Vanrenen doing their best to avert defeat. The chukker ended with another goal. P. F. F. 7 goals 4 subsidiaries to Cavalry's 4 goals 4 subsidiaries.

The game between Kashmir B team and Guides was not interesting as the Guides playing well heaped up goal after goal, lathough Lee and Featherstonhaugh did their best, being well backed up by Major Macan. The sixth chukker ended: Q. O. Guides 7 goals 2 subsidiaries to 2 goals 4 subsidiaries.

The finals were played between the Q. O. Guides and P. F. F. team, a real good game ensued. The Guides had a very strong team, well organised and drilled and accustomed to play together. The P. F. F. were well mounted, but owing to the recent heavy rain had had little or no practice together, so were at a disadvantage. Buist, a very strong hitter, seldom failed, and Hodson a sure No. 4, were a host in themselves, especially with such good players as Captain F. Davies and Bruce Hay. The first chukker ended by Guides getting two goals against 1 subsidiary by P. F. F.

In the second chukker the P. F. F. got a goal and 1 subsidiary, the Guides could only manage one subsidiary. The third chukker was hard fought at last. Davies hit a goal for the Guides, and Henslow secured a subsidiary missing the goal by 6 inches. The Guides got the ball and Hay made a subsidiary. The 4th chukker showed good play the P. F. F. were very unlucky, making three subsidiaries in one of them. The ball struck the goal post. Captain F. Davies secured a goal and 1 subsidiary with the greatest difficulty. Fifth chukker was a hard fought one, both sides seemed to be getting tired. At last Hay made a good back hander and passed the ball through the goal. In the sixth chukker time was short but the play was good. The P. F. F. worked hard and hit past the goal. The Guides closed the chukker with one of Buist's hard hits. Thus ended the contest for the Challenge Shield. Q. O. Guides 6 goals 5 subsidiaries, P. F. F. 1 goal 6 subsidiaries.

In the evening the prizes were given away by Mrs. Colvin. The Guides walked off with the large silver challenge shield, and a miniature shield for each of the team.

POLO AT LUCKNOW.

AFTER many postponements, due to the state of the ground, a start was made on Monday, 31st August, in the Polo Tournament for a cup presented by Colonel Humphery, who is shortly retiring from the command of the Gloucesters. Only one tie was finished on Monday, that between the 6th Bengal Cavalry and the East Surreys, which resulted as follows:—

6th B. C.		East Surreys
Mr Craigie		Mr Stafford
Mr Craster	beat	Mr Robinson
Capt Newnham		Capt De la Fontaine
Khubi Ram		Mr Storey

By 5 goals 2 subs. to 2 goals.

The Cavalry had a fairly easy task, as the East Surreys were a more or less untried team; a little more practice, however, will do a lot, and this team should be heard of again.

On Wednesday, two ties, begun on Monday, were finished, the competing teams being the Gunners vs. the Gymkhana, and the 5th D.G.'s vs. the Gloucesters.

The following were the results:—

R. A.		Gymkhana.
Mr Armitage		Mr Fremantle
Mr Stanley	beat	Mr Baker
Major Baikie		Capt Gardner
Col Massy		Col Reid

By 4 goals 3 subs. to 3 goals.

The Gunners, who were without Colonel Massy, on the sick list, pressed hard the whole game. But for Colonel Reid, who played a splendid game, the defeat of the Gymkhana would have been very much heavier than it was.

5th D. G's.		Gloucesters.
Mr Pankhurst		Mr Richmond
Major Stuart	beat	Mr Symons
Mr Head		Mr Sweedie
Capt Clay		Mr Ruck

By 3 goals 3 subs. to nil.

The Gloucesters were hardly up to form in this game, and the 5th walked round them.

5th D. G's.		R. A.
Mr Pankhurst		Mr Stanley
Major Stuart	beat	Mr Armitage
Mr Head		Major Baikie
Capt Clay		Col Massy

By 5 goals 2 subs. to 1 goal 4 subs.

Although they were playing their full team on Friday, the R. A. did not succeed in making much of a game of it against the 5th D. G's.

TOURNAMENT AT BANGALORE.

A tournament is being held on the American system of scoring. Seven teams have entered. The game consists of three five-minute chukkers and the team with the greatest number of won games wins the tournament.

On the 1st instant Carabiniers B team (+5) beat the Mysore Imperial Service Lancers (+3) by 11 goals to 9.

The R. A. and R E. Team (scr.) beat the Mounted Infantry (+7) by 8 goals and 3 subsidiaries to 7 goals.

The Rovers (+9) beat the Durhams (+7) by 14 goals and 1 subsidiary to 11 goals and 3 subsidiaries.

On the 3rd instant the Magpies (+7) defeated the Carabiniers A Team (+4) by 8 goals to 5.

The Durhams (+7) beat the Carabiniers B (+5) by 7 goals and 1 subsidiary to 6 goals and 1 subsidiary.

The Rovers (+9) beat the R. A. and R. E. Team (scr.), neither side scoring.

The Mounted Infantry (+7) beat the Imperial Service Lancers (+3) by 9 goals to 6 goals and 2 subsidiaries.

FINAL.

X. vs. Y.
(To be played on the 19th September.)

ENGLAND vs. SCOTLAND.—This annual match was played on the Calcutta ground last Saturday and resulted as was expected in a win for England. The ground was heavy and consequently "scrums" were very frequent. The Scotchmen kicked off and Macdonald got away, but was brought up and the English forwards getting possession a pass from Browne to Landon resulted in the latter crossing the line. Siddons adding the extra points. Loose play followed till Williams got away with a good run and passing out to Landon the latter got over once again. Siddons did the needful and the interval arrived with England leading by 2 goals to nil. In the second half play was very scrambly and "scrums" the order of the day. Siddons and Browne each scored a try, the former's being converted. The Scotchmen were unable to score and England thus won by 3 goals and a try (18 points) to nil

CALCUTTA B vs. ARMENIAN CLUB.—These teams met on the 7th instant on the Calcutta ground, the home team playing thirteen men and the visitors having one short. The game was contested in midfield at the start, then the Armenians got away and Dundas passed to Yakelee, who scored their only try. Peters failed with the place and loose scrums in the home "25" followed. Berridge relieved by finding touch and from the line out some fine passing by the Calcutta backs resulted in A Siddons getting over. No goal resulted, but play ruled very fast, Martelli doing good work. On resuming after half-time the home team invaded the visitors' "25" and were awarded a free kick for off side. Dick dropped a splendid goal. The Calcutta back division continued to give good exhibitions of passing and the three quarters taking the ball down Walter crossed the line. Martelli converting Calcutta thus won by two goals (one penalty) and a try, (11 points) to a try (3 points).

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE meeting between Calcutta and a scratch team representing the United Services furnished one of the best games of the season, both from a player's and spectator's point of view. The play was principally confined to the forwards, but there was a welcome absence of those continual scrimmages which are so monotonous, and both sides played a fast loose game. The scratch team had the valuable services of that fine forward Curtis-Hayward, who played a sterling game throughout, and the ultimate defeat of the premier club was largely due to his efforts. McLeod, Macdonald and F. Siddons were not playing for Calcutta, who otherwise had a good team, though they were outplayed in every department of the game, but especially so at half-back, where Arundel and Crawford combined well and gave the Service three-quarters innumerable chances, of which they generally availed themselves. A pretty bout of passing initiated by Crawford resulted in Landon getting through, but on being stopped by Newton he handed to Thomson, who scored the first try, which Brown failed to convert.

After the interval P. H. Browne picked up from a loose rush and dashed over with a try, which he converted and thus the premier club led by two points. Subsequently, however, Curtis-Hayward scored twice and thus enabled his side to claim a hard but well-earned victory.

Besides the players already mentioned, Browne, Szczepanski, and Stevenson were very noticeable, the tackling of the last mentioned being especially fine, while Maxwell kicked and tackled better than we have yet seen him. For the losers Berridge, Browne, and Simpson in the pack and Martelli and Dundas outside the scrum worked hard, but the forwards, as a whole, are not a hard-working lot and unless they improve in this respect will find themselves beaten when they have to meet a heavy team of hard scrummagers.

The success which attended the United Services in the game against Calcutta has led them to form a club of their own and they have entered, what promises to be a strong fifteen, for the Cup. This means that neither Browne, Landon, nor Crawford will be available for Calcutta, which undoubtedly will appreciably weaken the team and consequently their prospects of success are not so rosy as they originally appeared. However they have lots of good material to fall back upon, and if defeated will only succumb after a hard struggle.

The annual match between England and Scotland came off before a good attendance on Saturday last, but the team representing the Land o' Cakes was weakened at the last moment by the failure of such men as Caw and Watson to turn out, and this, combined with the strength of the Englishmen, resulted in a somewhat one-sided game. The English forwards, who proved faster and cleverer than the opposing pack, invariably obtained possession of the ball and consequently gave their outside men innumerable opportunities, of which Landon, Siddons and Williams made full use—the former, who scored three times, being in rare form. Macdonald and McEwan, who represented the Scotchmen at half, played a good defensive game, but the former was too well marked by Williams to become dangerous, and McEwan's want of condition was very noticeable during the second half. Of the forwards Curtis-Hayward was far and away the best on the field, but he was well backed up by Berridge, Harnack, and the two Browner. Heilgers, Dunlop, and Whitie played well for Scotland, but the best display was given by the Soccer International Fyfe, who was constantly conspicuous for clever dribbling and hard round tackling. It is a pity he does not play more regularly as he has all the makings of a really brilliant forward. Dundas and Newton were the best of the outsides, but it was in this department of the game that England showed immense superiority.

The accident to Curtis-Hayward on Saturday last will prevent him from playing again this season, a stroke of desperately bad luck both for him and for the Calcutta team, to whom his absence will make an incalculable difference, as it is quite impossible to adequately replace him.

The draw for the Cup Ties may be considered to have panned out satisfactorily, as although the United Services and Calcutta should have no difficulty in defeating Calcutta United and Customs respectively, the meeting of the two sides, which will probably take place on Saturday next, should furnish a rare struggle. I anticipate that the advantage forward will rest with Calcutta, but that the Service halves, Arundel and Crawford, will prove a better combination than McDonald and McEwan who, it must be remembered, have only played together once this season.

At three-quarters the teams will be fairly evenly matched. Landon is playing a fine game, but the same remark applies to Martelli, who has improved wonderfully since his first few mediocre displays. Dundas will be opposed by Bagshaw and there is nothing to choose between this pair, but the Services do not appear to have anyone capable of coping with the combination of the brother Siddons, and this weakness should give the premier club the victory, but only by a small margin.

The following are the Calcutta teams as finally selected :—

A team.—Newton, Dundas, Martelli and the brothers Siddons Macdonald and McEwan, Berridge, McLeod, Heilgers, Whitie, Browne, Dunlop, Bell, and Dick.

B team.—H. Sherman, Walker, Glanley, Hemingway, and Morbey, Jacob and King, Harvey, France, Black, Black, Horncastle, Vick, Piercey, and Knox Ord.

The Armenian Club should defeat the "B" team of Calcutta, although the probable inability of Yackjee to play, in consequence of an accident, will weaken their side, and the Welsh should not experience much difficulty in disposing of the City. Madras are probable non-starters, which will give the West Ridings a walk over in the second round, but their meeting with the Welsh in the third round should be one of the best matches of the Tournament. Present appearances point to the United Services or Calcutta having to meet the Welsh or West Riding Regiment in the final, but as neither of the military teams have arrived, criticism of their capabilities must be held over till next week.

Rugby football in the local schools and colleges must be at a very low ebb if the entries for the Cup presented by the premier club is to be taken as an indication, as only two teams were found to be willing to "do battle" and the standard of play was poor in the extreme.

The Armenian College eventually won easily and deservedly so, as the Martinière boys showed a respect for possible damage to their limbs which was not commendable. The winners infused considerable dash into their game, but their passing was erratic and kicking weak—in fact the team as a whole was far below the standard of previous years.

In view of this fiasco it would be as well if the conditions of this tournament were so altered as to insist upon a minimum number of entries being obtained—failing which there should be no competition.

C. F. C. PLACE KICKING COMPETITION.

The place kicking competition for the Silver Challenge Bowl was brought off on the Calcutta ground last Tuesday. The conditions were to kick from five different positions at each goal. Eleven competed, Messrs E. Martelli and C. G. Newton tying with five goals each. They tried again and once more placed five goals each. At the third attempt however, Mr. Martelli placed four goals in succession, his opponent only securing one out of four. Mr. J. G. Dixon, president of the Club, presented the cup to Mr. Martelli at the conclusion of the competition. Scores :—

TOURNAMENT AT LUCKNOW.

ON the 17th of August, writes our correspondent, was begun a Tennis Tournament under the auspices of the Mahomed Bagh Club. The many delays and postponements have naturally caused public interest to flag; they have also, I believe, nearly turned the unfortunate Honorary Secretary's hair grey; it has, I must say, been very rough luck on Captain C. W. Compton, the Honorary Secretary; he has worked like a horse at getting the thing up, and the weather has been dead against him the whole times Still, it says volumes for his determination and energy that he has succeeded in bringing it to completion.

Shows

THE GULMARG HORSE AND DOG SHOW.

WE have a large number of lovers of the friends of man, so the horse and dog show was well attended, and the entries considerable. Some of the exhibits were handsome well set up animals. Class I.—Heavy weight Arab Polo ponies. Mr. Furse's g g. Big 'Un was decidedly a fine creature and took H. H. Raja Sir Amar Singh's prize, the Resident's prize went to Colonel Littledale's g.g. Peter, as the judges decided he must have been the best in Class II. Light Weight Arab Ponies. Chan Chal, b aus g, belonging to Captain Boothe, was the fancied one of the crowd. The judges came to the same conclusion and gave him the Maharaja of Baroda's prize. In Country-bred Pony Class Captain F. Davies' b g Dragon came to the front for Sir Amar Singh's prize, although Mr. Barron's g. g. Blue Grass was liked by good judges outside the ring as well.

The ladies' hacks came next. It was a nice sight to see the graceful way some of the Gulmarg roses sat their horses, all radiant, till politely asked to leave the ring. What brutes the judges must be to have the hearts to depress that sweet smile and turn it into a pained forced smile when the wearer is ignobly thrust out from the competition, disappointed but unconvinced. after a great deal of consultation and shrugging of shoulders Victoria, a br c b m, was selected and carried off the Hon'ble D. P. Masson's prize. From the 20 competitors, the outside crowd fixed on Starlight ir roan m, a well-known handsome mare, well ridden. Gentlemen's hacks came next. A number of fine animals came before the judges and the verdict went for Shah II, although ir roan m Starlight, appeared to be the better animal.

Among the weight, carrying hacks Mr. Furse's b aus g No Name was decidedly a fine animal and deserved Major Kay's prize. Jumping for hacks was not well contested. Mr. Newland on his b aus b Sir Garnet had it his own way, and took Major Macan's prize.

DOGS.

Dog judging is not acquired in a day Judges are usually procured and appointed because of their position in society, not because they know the points of a dog, on this occasion there were some lovers of the dog who judged by appearance and did well.

Sir Amar Singh's prize fell to Mr. Cooper's Scamp, a well-made intelligent looking smooth-haired Fox-terrier. In Class II —Rough-haired Terriers Ailsa, an Aberdeen, terrier, belonging to Mrs. Pirie was awarded the first prize Major Henderson's Bobby was a good second. The Maharaja of Baroda's prize was difficult to judge as there were so many good ones to be selected from : at last Captain Thoyt's Mollie got the blue ribbon.

Some good sporting dogs appeared in Class IV. Mr. Warburton's Hubert, a smooth-haired retriever, was given Sir Amar Singh's prize. Class V. Variety Large Dogs was poorly attended. Colonel McLeod's magnificent Borzai, Czar, could not be approached by the others, so came in an easy first.

Dachshunds showed up well with their elongated bodies and misshapened legs. Their beauty consists in their ugliness. Mr. Henderson's Nap and Mrs. Robertson's Alphonse ran neck and neck, the verdict went for Nap, a personification of ugliness, but the sweetest creature going according to the ladies.

The prize presented by Major Bruce for puppies under 12 months went to a wire-haired fox-terier called Elsie belonging to Major Stewart.

Variety small dogs, prize presented by a small dog, was exceedingly difficult to settle, but Dainty Dudley, a wee Pomeranian, belonging to Mrs. Pirie walked off with the blue ribbon, and thus ended the show for 1903.

CLASS I.—SMOOTH-HAIRED FOX TERRIERS.

1	Mr. Cooper's	... Scamp	... 1st prize.
2	Capt Panet's	... Victor	... 2nd „
3	Mr. Featherstonhaugh's...	Jess	... 3rd „

CLASS II.—ROUGH-HAIRED TERRIERS.

3	Mr. Pike's ...	„ „ Daisy De Vigt,	3rd prize.

SMITH, JONES AND ROBINSON.

"THANK Heaven ! we are really off at last, said Robinson as the train glided noiselessly out from Howrah station. The "we" referred to was a trio of three young subalterns—more correctly speaking of three very young second-lieutenants of a British Infantry Regiment, young in years, in experience, and quite new to India. Our combined service in the glorious East did not amount to twelve months all told. Our knowledge of the language was limited to a vocabulary of perhaps twenty-three words, which we could sling off pat at just the right or the wrong moment, as it might happen, without much thought or trouble. Our experience of Indian travel was represented by a three and a half days' journey by rail from Bombay to Dum-Dum. Our idea of the coinage of the land we were in, was limited from annas two, the smallest sum a whiteman should handle (because coppers—dirty coppers—were a sure source of carrying contagion from small-pox, leprosy, plague and another half-a-dozen deadly and filthy diseases common to India), to the whole rupee or dib—the largest sum that should ever be thrust upon a blackman all at once. Our faith in ourselves was unbounded : our hope was great as the world is wide, and our charity was of the home decription centred in our own selves, because we were members of that well-known society—the stoney-broke.

Well with all these advantages in our favour, our combined experience—for two heads are better than one, ergo three are better still—our knowledge of travel and bundobast—our collective faith, hope, and charity, we three were off on a ten days' tiger shoot—in the Central Provinces—and we were really off at last as Robinson had remarked. The trio consisted of Robinson, Jones and myself—my name is Smith by the way, I come of the well-known family of Smiths, a family known for its extensive and world-wide ramifications and for its very old pedigree. A pedigree traceable back to the days of Noah—all records previous to that date were lost in the flood—but we are content to leave it at that. An unfortunate break occurs in the pedigree about the time of Moses and Pharaoh. The cause of the missing links in the chain of the Smith pedigree, is due to the fact that the Israelites had no straw left to make paper with. When paper again became plentiful, the genealogical tree was continued, but during this paperless period—men's memories being short in those days—a series of outshoots to the original old tree had sprouted out—all the many ramifications of the hyphened-Smith had sort of grafted themselves on to the parent stem, and nowadays it's hard to know if one is a true Smith, or only a grafted on hyphen-Smith.

Jones also has—at least so he says—a pedigree as old if not older than the Smiths. This is of course absolutely absurd, as there is no mention of any Jones having entered the Ark at all. The Smiths entered under the name of Shem, which name they, that is, Mr. and Mrs. Shem immediately changed on leaving the Ark and coming to a strange land, to Smith, just to baffle pursuit from any creditors or duns that might just possibly have escaped from the drowning effects of the flood. Jones' theory that Japhet was the alias under which old man Jones entered the Ark is absurd. Who could possibly make Jones out of Japhet, or Japhet out of Jones. The funny thing is Jones is not really Jones but Jones is pumpkin-Jones He dropped the pumpkin and the hyphen when he joined the gallant 115th Foot grinders but he still signs himself Q. P. Jones, and he is very particular too about his P's and Q's I can tell you.

Well, Robinson is a strange case—heraldic lore is double Dutch to him ; he has no love for things mediæval, he scorns armour and laughs at knights-errant. If you ask him about his pedigree he says, says he, "I know my father and my mother (lucky lad !) and my grandfather and grandmother were at my christening, and I don't care a tinker's cuss who there was before them" Yet he plays a good strong game at Bridge, and generally manages to win too. Well, we three ; Smith, Jones and Robinson in the order of our pedegrics, had been at Wellington College together and in the same house ; we had struggled into and squeezed out of Sandhurst at the same time ; and funniest of all had all three been gazetted to the same regiment out in Dum-Dum : we had sailed out together and now here were we three going out on a tiger shoot together.

Robinson's remark "were off at last" was really a sigh of relief and we all joined in heartily in the "Thank Heaven."

We were travelling second class, and had secured a compartment to ourselves. We were jolly glad I can tell you, no officers came down to see us off—we should certainly have been court-martialled in the Mess Room for conduct unbecoming an officer of the gallant 115th Foot grinders in that we had deliberately travelled second class. It was a case of mere neccessity. We each respectively and severally were enjoying from a grateful country the enormous and generous screw of rupees twohundred and two only per mensem. A ridiculous sum to ask any gentleman to live on as an officer of the 115th Foot Grinders should.

However as we needed every dib we could get together for the destruction of the denizens of the forests, we made up our minds we would travel second and not waste our substance by filling the coffers of a Railway Company—a mere company of common carriers.

Our battery was as light as our cash was scanty. Jones had a double ·500 express, and a 12-bore choke shot gun. Robinson and I had each a 12-bore cylinder shot gun, that carried ball, with three and a half drams of powder. Our confidence in our own three selves individually, and collectively, was so great that we would I believe have collectively armed with revolvers only, have faced the angriest tiger afoot, and not considered it a great thing worth talking about.

At the junction where we breakfasted at ten o'clock a very amusing scene took place. The departure whistle had gone, and Jones and I had hurried away from the refreshment room to our compartment. Robinson with a huge plate of curry and rice before him, and an appetite not half satisfied kept his seat swallowing against time, but with an eye on the train waiting to see it move before, he left his food. Slowly the train glided out of the station, and we saw Robinson rushing hatless down the platform after it. Jones shouted out "where's your hat." Robinson heard, hesitated a moment, looked back towards the refreshment room. It was too far to go back. He glanced forward and his mind was made up, and he rushed on towards the compartment. As he passed the station master, a stout Eurasian—he deliberately snatched the Cawnpore Tent Club Helmet off his greasy head, clapped it on his own, rushed on, and gained the safety of our compartment—the amazed station master in full pursuit. Jones and I were convulsed with laughter. Robinson banged the door, to leant out and shouted to the panting station master, who was trying to signal the train to stop—"you'll find my hat—a bran new one—in the refreshment room—keep it—thanks for yours."

Yes, there was no room for doubt—Robinson was a man of action.

On Friday morning we reached the end of our railway journey. Here we were in reality hundreds of miles away from Dum-Dum—yet we were still officially at Dum-Dum and would remain there too till Monday next. What a ripper our adjutant was.

We had now an eighteen-mile drive by bullock cart, to the jungles at the foot of the range of hills over in the east there. Here we had permission to shoot within a certain area. Jones had a relative in the Forest Department down in these parts, who had put us on to this place, and had lent us a few forest guards to help us. This jungle sahib's name was something—Hyphen-Jones, and unfortunately he could not join our camp as his Boss-Conservator wanted him elsewhere on inspection duty.

It was lucky for him he didn't join our camp—our camp consisted of one eighty pound subaltern's tent, two camp beds and one waterproof wolsley valise. We took it in turn to sleep on the floor in the waterproof valise, so we managed to get two nights in bed regularly during our campaign.

The man who slept in the valise was generally awake a good hour before those who lay in luxury in the beds—and busy too, combing things out of his hair, picking things off, and gently rubbing various bumps that had risen during the night. Yes, a wolsley valise may be waterproof but there it ends.

Jones had told us all about his Forest Department cousin—the fine Government supplied camp he travelled with, the elephants, the shikaris, etc., and we were congratulating ourselves on joining his camp, for he had written to Jones saying he would be here.

A letter at the station met us saying he was called away on duty. It was a blow to us I can tell you. Arrived at our camping ground we were assailed by four forest guards and half-a-dozen very black natives (who we afterwards learnt were Gonds or jungle men) with news of tiger, and our chance of shikar. We all rather fancied ourselves in Hindustani, but I must confess we were fairly non-plussed by the babel of tongues going on here. At last calling up Mohammed Khan, Jones' kitmutgar, who had undertaken to act as cook to the expedition, and who knew a "leetle Engleesh," to act as interpreter, we found out that tiger and game was plentiful, and kuzoor ke nasib se, ham log ko bahut bakeish mileage. This sentence seemed to be the pith of the whole talk and argument—whatever it meant.

That afternoon we went out in the vicinity of our one tent camp, and got a few green pigeons, and a hare for the pot As we had to shoot for meat, Jones said, we should take sitting shots until the pot was full,—before sporting shots were risked. Alas poor hare—taken at a disadvantage, your legs availed you nought.

That night after a scratch dinner—dinner is always very scratch the first night in camp—Robinson by the light of a lantern read aloud from a book he had purchased at Howrah railway book stall, called a "Collection of Hints on Tiger Shooting." They were most useful. (1) Fire either between the eyes or behind the shoulder—the brain or heart are thus reached. (2) The neck shot is deadly if the jugular artery is severed. (3) Never advance on a tiger who is lashing his tail from side to side—he means business. (4) If walking up a wounded tiger always try and get up from behind instead of in front as he is less likely to see you then.

Full of these hints we retired to couches and dreamt tigers, at least the man in the waterproof valise did. I heard him myself yell out at least twice in the night, that something had got him. It must have been a tiger.

Next morning we sat down to a substantial breakfast previous to starting out to shoot the myriads of tigers that the forest guards stated dwelt in the immediate vicinity of your camp.

F. Madan, Calcutta and Darjeeling.

We none of us knew exactly how many pellets of number eight chilled shot goes to an ounce and an eighth but that hare which was our pièce de resistance, certainly carried anything from five hundred to a thousand pellets. Certainly Calcutta gun-makers are liberal with their shot charges, judging from our breakfast dish, and poor Bunny must have caught every grain of lead in Jones' deadly cartridge. He (Jones) weakly confessed to having fired point blank at 15 yards. We others at once dubbed him a murderer, and refused to speak to him again during breakfast, but it was more due to the pain in our teeth, caused by stepping on lead pellets so to speak; and the constant and severe measures constantly needed to lever out shot from the crevasses of our teeth that kept us silent, rather than any real feeling against Jones the murderer.

That big bill I ran up six weeks later in the hooks of a well-known Calcutta tooth plugger—which by the way hasn't been settled up yet—was largely due to Jones' hare. However it will be all the same a hundred years hence. Breakfast over we footed it off with an army of coolies who were coming to beat for us so we were told.

Five miles we footed it through a magnificent jungle and then reached a narrow deep ravine, full of dense jungle undergrowth with here and there enormous trees standing out above the undergrowth jungle—a small stream bubbled down the centre of the ravine. Here the head shikari, commanding silence by placing a finger over his lip, led us quiety down into the ravine.

The coolies all remained on top. We were all three given places to sit in up rather comfortable trees, and our guns handed up to us. Again signalling to us that absolute silence must be maintained and pointing out to us the direction the beat was coming from, away slipped the shikari as noiselessly as a ghost. We could see each other plainly from our points of vantage. We all loaded up and looked forward in the direction the tiger might be expected to come from, with an intenseness of expectation that was hard to bear. Would he come out soon now, to be polished off by our deadly guns. Gradually we tired, looked forward less expectantly, grew drowsy, nodded our heads, closed an eye, and before long were all three. I firmly believe, dosing in our trees. At least, I knew I was—and I very nearly fell out of my perch, as I looked with a start to hear a long yell start suddenly about a mile away down the jungle. What the devil was up? I looked at Jones and Robinson and saw they had heard it too. They were both looking well ahead, and grasping their weapons in a nervous grasp.

Again that long drawn yell—yes, of course it was the coolies beginning to beat—but what a long way away they were.

Well they gradually came nearer and nearer, and their shouts grew less and less. Now and again they would suddenly all yell and shout together, as if they had seen, and been started, by some animal breaking cover. Poor devils how they managed to keep on shouting at all, in that fearful heat, was more than I could make out. Why sitting quietly in my shady tree I was parched up and had to keep licking my own tongue as it were, to keep my mouth moist. I hadn't a shout in me I knew well.

Presently a quiet, but distinct, pit-a-pat, pit-a-pat could be heard advancing over the dry leaves.

It must be one of the tigers surely and coming along steadily.

Yes, there was the glimmer of the yellow coat, pushing softly through that long grass just a glimpse—nothing more. Pit-a-pat, pit-a-pat.

Yes, there he comes, he must cross that open piece now—up goes the 12-bore, a glance along the line, and Jones and Robinson were also covering the spot with their trusty weapons. No, he could not escape us.

Pit-a-pat Pit-a-pat, and out walks a stately peacock, in full plumage. Down went our weapons, we glanced helplessly at one another—anyhow thank heaven we were all in the same box—we had had all been taken in.

Away flew the peacock, in great alarm over our heads, having with those sharp beady eyes spotted all three of us, the moment he stepped into the open. The beat came on, some pig, and a couple of cheetal, rushed under our trees, but we refrained from shooting, as we had agreed to shoot nothing but tiger our first day out after them.

Surely the wary beasts must be following in the tracks of the pig and deer.

On came the beaters, we could make out their faces—in two minutes they were all crowded under our trees jabbering like monkeys—every jack man talking, and devil a one listening at all to all that was being said. We listened hard, but it might have been Dutch or Hebrew for all the good it did us.

We had four more beats in this manner and tramped a lot of country that day; and arrived back at our camp about 6-30 in the evening dead beat and weary. We had several chances of firing at deer and pig, but refrained.

After dinner we got up the shikari, and got Mohammed Khan the English-speaking kitmutgar to explain we had come out to shoot tigers, and not pigs, and that "no tiger no bakshish," was our motto.

Next day we trudged out again in another direction, but took our interpreter with us; this was a great help to us, but we suffered for it at dinner time, as Robinson's servant who was commandeered as cook had absolutely no knowledge of the culinary art, beyond chuppattis and soup.

Arrived at the ravine we were to beat, an old grey-haired Gond pointed out some fresh tiger tracks—this filled our hearts with boundless joy. We held a consultation, and decided only to shoot at tigers again—he was undoubtedly in the jungle, with so fresh an indication of his presence before our eyes how could we doubt it. At breakfast, we had decided to fire at all and every living thing that gave us a chance.

The beat was over, but no tiger showed. A magnificient sambhur passed, giving an easy shoot—his head must have been anything from 40 to 50 inches, and massive too.

At the sale of Mr. Blenkiron's yearlings in 1864, there was a great deal of competition between the rival owners, Mr. Henry Chaplin and the Marquis of Hastings. Few who were at Eltham on that glorious June day expected to see the sensational incidents that arose owing to the career of one of the animals sold there.

Among those present was Mr. James Merry, who purchased a fine colt named Marksman for a thousand guineas. The next animal to be led into the ring was a colt by Newminster out of Seclusion, and for him there was some spirited bidding, the Marquis and Mr. Chaplin eventually having matters between them. With competition so keen, Mr. Tattersall did not waste any time, and when Mr. Chaplin offered fifty guineas more than his rival, the auctioneer soon settled it.

"A thousand guineas! One thousand! For the last time one thousand guineas!" Mr. Tattersall looked round to gain breath, and catching the Marquis' eye, said, "Surely, my lord, you do not mean to let him go!"

Without replying the nobleman turned away, and the colt became the property of Mr. Chaplin. What a difference it would have made to the Marquis had he but offered a few more pounds, or even given the auctioneer a little encouragement to wait, when somebdy else might possibly have joined in what had resolved itself into a duel, for the animal was the sensational Derby winner of 1867—Hermit. It seems curious that the two animals who followed each other in the catalogue, and who were sold for the same price, should have run first and second for this coveted Epsom prize.

Mr. Chaplin in after years said that the best friend he ever had in his life was Hermit; while he often asserted that the same animal was a better property than all his farms put together.

The old grey-haired Gond came up and said the tiger track led out of the jungle in the direction of a ravine a mile away Away we went. Silent as the grave we climbed into our trees.

The beat began, was over, and again fruitless, as far as tiger was concerned. Just then a villager came running up, saying a tiger had killed a cow near his village last night, and had dragged it into a neighbouring ravine. Would we come?

Would we come—what a silly question to ask! Hadn't we come all the way from Calcutta to bag a tiger, and would we not go a mile or two more in our quest?

Off we all went—again a fruitless beat. We saw the carcase of the cow—the villager hadn't lied. But we were clean out of luck. The head man of the village said he knew of a likely ravine where tiger had often been killed by sahib log before—would he guide us? Guide on old man, we said. The trudge there was longer than we had expected—a good three miles and mostly along an open unshady, dusty road.

At last reaching the jungle's edge, we sat down to rest a few minutes. In fact we were all pretty done, though we would not admit it.

Chatting quietly, we found we were getting all very sceptical about the existence of these tigers. "I don't believe there's a tiger within a hundred miles of us" said Robinson. "I wouldn't be too sure" said the ever-cautious Jones, "the books all say they turn up when least expected." Oh bother books, said I, "were not shooting by book."

"Chalao sahib," said the shikari and we started off.

Robinson was on the right of the line, and a shady, but very thorny tree, had been pointed out to him to climb into. After-events proved he had not climbed, but had lain down in the shade at the root of the tree.

Jones had a comfortable armchair class of tree, in the centre of the line; and I was perched on top of a big rock about fifteen feet high. After ten minutes in the sun, sitting on a black trap rock, as hot as a furnace I felt persuaded that the deep and grateful shade at the foot of the rock was the spot for me—and down I went.

In front of me was an open slightly rising ground 30 yards long and beyond I could not see. Oh, it was delightfully cool. I immediately recalled some verse—it is in Psalms I think it is, about "the shadow of a mighty rock in a thirsty land."

I quite agreed with David, it was delightful, and remembered the Sunday school teacher—such a pretty girl she was too—telling us, that in Asia and the East, daily illustration of Biblical quotations could be found everywhere. The beat began—I distinctly remember the first yell—and then well I must have slept or dozed I suppose—how long I do not know.

I remember waking suddenly quite wide awake and looking straight to my front. Great Heavens, what is that monstrous yellow sun rising over the edge of the open rising space in front of me.

A second, and the head and shoulders of a huge tiger came to a halt, and stared at me—and I can truly say I stared back. In fact I was fascinated, frightened, mesmerised I know not what. My eyes never left his face. Swish, Swish, the angry tail went, from side to side. The charm was broken, I had seized my trusty 12-bore, up to my shoulder it went bang.

A roar, good Lord the earth shook surely, and open mouthed the tiger sprang straight at me.

Bang! went the second barrel, the gun was still at my shoulder, and over I fell in a dead faint. I awoke presently to find Robinson pouring water down my throat, and Jones fanning me hard, and by heavens to find the tiger within five yards of me. I shuddered, and fainted again. I soon came round, and a nip of brandy steadied my nerves. My luck was tremendous—the second barrel had gone through the wide open roaring mouth, and broken the vertebræ of the neck, and the tiger had fallen stone dead, within five yards of where I lay in a dead faint. Good old 12-bore, you saved my life. Then Robinson and Jones now told their yarns of what had happened.

Robinson sceptical, like myself, about the presence of tigers in the beat, had lain on the ground, his gun resting on a stone in front of him, a lighted cigarette between his lips, had watched his front, and dozed alternately, for seconds at a time. He suddenly woke from a short dose, conscious of the presence of an animal. Looking slightly to his left, he beheld a tiger, seated on his haunches, watching him, or the smoke from his cigarette, as a cat watches a mouse.

The tiger was about thirty-five yards off. Fascinated, Robinson watched the great cat without stirring a muscle. The cat stood up suddenly, glanced around, and swished her tail from side to side.

Remembering the axiom laid down in the book on tiger shooting, he had purchased at Howrah railway bookstall, that a tiger that waves his tail from side to side means business. Robinson didn't hesitate for a fraction of a second, but with a [illegible] legged it up that thorny tree like a lamp lighter, regardless of thorns, torn clothes, or anything except a desire to be [illegible] above that "business-meaning-tail."

The yell, [illegible] frantic efforts of Robinson to climb faster than nature, had [illegible] meant him to do, so frightened the tiger that he gracefully [illegible] tired, and passed along in front of Jones, giving him, however, no chance of a shot through the dense undergrowth and he came over to my end of the line.

As its head appeared over the horizon, I awoke, and the rest you have already heard.

Next day we spent in camp, resting ourselves, skinning the tiger, and making a holiday of it generally.

As soon as the skin was off the tiger, the servants, forest guards, Gonds, chamars, and village hangers on nearly had a free fight over the carcase. We discovered they were squabbling for the fat, to which they attached medicinal virtues, and rare powers. We ordered all the fat to be collected and promised to divide it all among the servants, etc.; that those who worked well should receive some fat but that the lazy scoundrels should get nothing. We had three more days' shooting before we had to turn our steps to the railway homeward bound. Neither Robinson or I ever dreamt of sitting on the ground again. Robinson bagged a tiger, and Jones a panther and a cheetal, and we all returned to Dum-Dum as happy and proud of our trophies as any fond mother could be of her first-born.

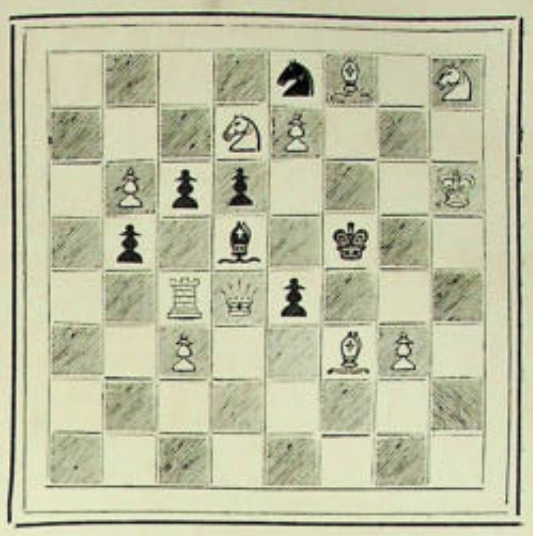
At the railway station, we had to borrow fifty rupees from the station master, which he lent us with great reluctance. However we promised him a bottle of tiger fat as interest on the loan; which promise gladdened his heart so much that I believe he would have lent us another fifty, had we asked for it. His last word to us, as we steamed away were: "and please Sir don't forget the tiger fat you sending me, remember Sir, I am childless married man—may God bless you gentlemen!"

We returned the fifty rupees on arrival at Dum-Dum, and having no tiger fat handy we concocted a special brew, which consisted of two pounds best mutton fat boiled down with two ounces croton oil. Anyhow the mixture was guaranteed to blister any skin it was applied to, and we sincerely hoped the station master only intended it for external use.

We procured a label from the hospital "for external use only" and pasted it on to the bottle as a precautionary act. We do not know whether the station master is still childless, and still blesses us kind gentlemen, but we only hope he did not take tiger fat internally—anad we didn't make enquiries.

We wrote a joint letter to the Collector of the district, when we shot our tigers, and claimed the Government reward and at the end found out we were not much out of pocket over our ten days' shoot.

We had certainly done it on the cheap—but there was a good deal of discomfort.



Before we go shooting again we hope to have done that Examiner of Languages in Calcuta in the eye, over the higher standard, and be able to sling the bat about ourselves a bit.

An acquaintance developing into something akin to affection is by no means unusual between horses and other four-footed animals, and it is related of Charles XII., winner of the 1839 St. Leger and other important events, that he conceived so great a liking for a grey cat which attached itself to him that he was never happy when it was out of his sight. If after returning from his exercise gallops, puss was not waiting to welcome him. "Charles," whose nature was the reverse of tractable, did not fail to testify his displeasure, and the stable attendants generally had a warm time of it. Whenever the horse was sent away to a race-meeting the cat always accompanied him, this being an occurrence of sufficient rarity to merit special mention.

When taken out of the stable to run for the great event at Doncaster the horse kept looking wistfully behind him, and finally, after going a short distance, stood stock-still, and refused to move a step further. All at once it occurred to the lad in charge of him that he wanted his pet, and finding that no persuasion would induce him to proceed he ran back, fetched the cat, and placed her in the muzzle which hung at the saddle-bow, and without which Charles XII.'s equipment could never be considered complete. As soon as this was done, and pussy placed where he could see her, the horse gave a neigh of delight and proceeded quietly on his journey.

When he had won the race and was taken to his stall he gave a low whinny, which was the usual sign for his feline favourite. Up jumped the cat on his back, purring as though congratulating him on his success, and then, and not till then, did he begin to quietly munch his corn.

At night puss invariably slept with him, and in the portrait of Charles XII., which John Henning has left to perpetuate the memory of a really great racer, Grimalkin has not been overlooked.

THE AMERICA CUP.

THE home papers brought by last mail contain full descriptions of the races sailed for the America Cup up to the abortive event of Thursday, 26th August. The two completed races had, as we all remember, gone in favour of the Reliance, while the two which were declared "Undecided," owing to the lack of wind and consequent inability of the yachts to finish within the time limit, were not so far as they went, indicative of promise for Shamrock III. It is clear from the graphic and minute reports of the races telegraphed from New York to the English papers, that the American boat was not only better in light airs, as the critics predicted, but in the stiff breezes which it was thought would show the Shamrock at her best. In the first decisive race, that of Saturday, 21st August, it was recognised that the American boat was the faster whether beating or in running before the wind. It must be allowed that Shamrock was unlucky : the winds on that day were fitful and partial, and favoured the Reliance both on the outward and homeward run : the Shamrock, it is true on the homeward stretch, got the benefit for a few minutes of a wind which did not reach the Reliance in her leading position ; but on the whole the American boat was more fortunate than the challenger. The difference, however, was not enough to explain away the success of the Reliance ; the race 15 miles out to windward and 15 miles home before the wind was sailed under conditions calculated to fairly test seamanship and design of boat. Both skippers put in some smart work, but there can be little doubt as to which is the more able sailing master. The quarter of an hour between the firing of the preliminary gun and the starting gun was spent in keen manœuvring for the weather berth, and when the signal to go was given Barr, as on the abortive race of the preceding Thursday, crossed the line five seconds behind his opponent in the coveted position. After sailing about five miles Wringe put in a stroke of sailing craft which is described as "perhaps the finest display of rapid judgment coupled with profound skill in seamanship that has ever been seen on the America Cup course" ; he seized his chance when the favouring winds had left the Reliance and pushing Shamrock to windward fairly blanketted her. He sacrificed the temporary advantage thus gained by a mistaken move soon after and with Reliance pointing better and travelling faster, it was seen to be her race. The visitors had hoped that Shamrock would show her adversary a clean pair of heels running before the wind, but in this they were disappointed ; no sooner were the yachts round the mark and fairly set with all canvas drawing than it was seen that the superiority of Reliance before the wind was even greater than in beating. Better seamanship was shown on board the American boat in coming round the mark ; Barr had his sails changed, balloon jib and spinnaker out in fully half a minute less than Wringe's crew performed the manœuvre ; but that done the conditions of the race left little scope for seamanship. All the skippers had to do was to hold their boats dead before the wind, and thus this latter part of the race was a fair test of the relative merits of construction. The greater spread of canvas Reliance could show was of course to her advantage, but making all allowances, there could be no doubt as to which was the faster boat. It was agreed that the Herreshoffs had shown sound judgment in conceding time allowance for the purpose of securing larger sail area ; in other words a 2,000 square feet of canvas proved a better investment than 1minute 57 seconds. Reliance won, on corrected time, by 6 minutes 52 seconds, having crossed the winning line 9 minutes before Shamrock.

The second race, that of Tuesday, 25th August, is considered to be the best bid yet made in the whole series of contests for the Cup, Reliance only beating Shamrock by 54 seconds, allowing for the circumstance that the challenger lost 25 seconds at the start. This, in accordance with the usual programme, was a thirty-mile race on a triangular course. The chief points to be noted on this race are that Shamrock was wearing a new mainsail which enabled her to hold more wind than the previous sail. Reliance sported a new jib, but it does not seem to have given her any advantage. Reliance again showed her superiority in pointing in light winds. Barr showed that he could hold her nearer the wind than Shamrock could manage : with a six-mile breeze Reliance proved the better, but when it freshened to 10 miles an hour Shamrock was steadier than her rival and sailed faster. On the first leg, though Reliance rounded the mark two minutes (excluding 25 seconds gained at the start) ahead of Shamrock there was no question which had done the better work ; it was Shamrock's race so far and her backers could find nobody willing to give a shade of odds. Then came an extraordinary and inexplicable collapse on rounding the first mark the yachts ran before the wind : Reliance had done better than Shamrock under these conditions in the first race, but now the defender simply went away from her it was a mere procession, Reliance travelling nine seconds per mile faster than Shamrock. No suggestion is offered to account for Shamrock's loss of form ; nothing was wrong so far as seamanship could discover ; with the mysterious perversity of inanimate things she would not travel through the water. On the third leg she recovered her temper and sailed admirably save for a mile or two when she lost form again for a time. It would seem certain from the accounts of the race that had she sailed with any consistency at all she must have won this second race. Opinions were divided as to whether Barr's superior handling of Reliance on the first leg or Shamrock's unaccountable fit of sulks on the second leg cost the challenger the race ; but she came near enough to success to arouse hope. The race of Friday, 28th August, was called off, Reliance being yet a mile from the winning line when the time limit of 5½ hours expired. Reuter has given us news of the subsequent event, but it is of interest to glance at the particulars of this abortive race. It seems tolerably clear that although the wind was light and therefore favourable to Reliance, Barr felt, after the previous race, that he could not afford to let the challenger reap the benefit of her time allowance : by his manœuvres behind the starting line after the gun had been fired, he crowded Shamrock away from the line until after the two minutes' grace allowed by the rules had expired, then seized his opportunity and made a dash for it. It was a distinctly clever plan and was carried out with exceptional skill. The result was to produce a start practically identical with that made under R. Z. S. conditions under which a yacht benefits by the time gained in crossing the starting line first. Shamrock, completely outmanœuvred, crossed the line 61 seconds later, thus reducing her time allowance to 58 seconds : she was hopelessly out of it in the lighter wind and the seamanship on the American boat was again apparent. Had the wind freshened up for the homeward run instead of dropping as it did, there is not the least reason to think that the challenger could have recovered the time lost on the outward journey she rounded the mark 12 minutes 32 seconds after Reliance.

We have been beaten again and we can only explain by admitting that the American is the better boat, that the American is the cleverer sailing master and that the American was the better drilled crew. The inconsistency of the Shamrock's performance in the second decisive race is at once disheartening and mystifying. Her failure to travel before the wind on that day as she had done in the preceding race is apparently not to be explained by any shortcomings on the part of Wringe and his crew, for there is little scope for seaman-ship under such conditions of sailing. Shamrock on the whole, had a fair share of what were supposed to be the most favourable weather conditions ; she has failed to justify her backer's hopes, but at the same time she has made at least one good bid for victory and that on the occasion, so far as full reports show, when the Reliance also was seen at her best. The very narrow margin by which the American boat won the second decided race shows how wonderfully little there is to choose between the two racing machines : apart from that inexplicable quality of "sulking" which Shamrock exhibited at so unfortunate a juncture the Irish boat would seem to be but little, if at all, inferior to the Reliance. Where superiority was displayed was undoubtedly in the handling of the latter yacht : it is stated that some differences of opinion arose between Wringe and Mr. Fife during the second decided race, but both, very properly, refused to allow outsiders to share such differences of opinion if it existed, and in the circumstances there is nothing to be said on the subject. The work of the American crew was smarter than that of the Irish boat when opportunity permitted an estimate : this was only another instance of that close attention to small details which distinguishes the American in all sporting matters, as we found occasion to remark in these columns in another connection some weeks ago.

Sporting Notes.

THE Calcutta Fourth Monsoon Meeting could not be held last Saturday afternoon, six inches of rain having fallen during the twenty-four hours preceding the hour fixed for the first race on the card. The meeting will be held next Saturday, weather permitting.

The Calcutta track was open for fast work on Tuesday and most of the strings had a few representatives galloping. Loch Arden went a nice five furlongs alone, moving in grand form. Oom Paul (Mr. Galstaun) and another covered the same distance at a useful pace, First Guide (Mr. Raban) and Mocassin (native) went a working gallop over five furlongs, but neither were extended. Pekin and Yellow Mantle, ridden by Bond and Hard respectively, went over four flights of hurdles. The former is looking well and is jumping a lot quicker than formerly. With his light weight he will have to be reckoned with on Saturday.

Yuletide (Hard) and Blair Athol (Mr. Evers) went a full school at a fast pace, Blair Athol having somewhat the best of it. This is a much improved pony and shapes well at the jumping business. Apropos of the postponement of last Saturday's meeting we hear growls from several owners as to no steps having been taken to inform them of the postponements. Indeed we hear that not a few race horses actually turned up at the course in the afternoon. Considering how very few owners, comparatively speaking, there are who are interested in these moonsoon meetings, it does seem as though it would not have been too big a job to send round and let them know. In these days, however, there is rather a tendency to regard the owner as merely the very humble servant of the racing public at large, and the punter in particular.

As will be seen from an advertisement appearing in our Turf Notifications the Official Measurer of the C. T. C. has altered the dates of his upcountry tour which will now begin at Lucknow about the 24th instant, and end at Umballa about the 6th October.

We publish elsewhere second entries for the Dehra Autumn Sky Races.

Government is opening a Veterinary Institute in Madras under Veterinary Major Gunn, Superintendent, Civil Veterinary Department, and a special concession is to be made in favour of Eurasian candidates, who will not be required to produce a matriculation certificate as a test of educational fitness. Tuition will be free, and Government offer ten scholarships of Rs. 10 per month. The course extends over three years and passed candidates will start on Rs. 50 to Rs. 75 per month.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes :—Paper-chases continue weekly, but as there is no account kept at present of the winners with any view to average cups, it is not necessary to write at great length on the subject. On the 8th instant, however, when Colonel Sprot and the officers of the Carabiniers were "At Home" to their friends, Miss Sprot most appropriately arrived home first in the horse-chase, Colonel Sprot himself and a young officer of the corps—Mr. Christie—riding quite a desperate finish for second place which was hardly definitely decided. I still look forward to an average cup.

A decided innovation in the polo way is in progress here at present, in the shape of a skittle polo tournament on the American system. No less than eight teams have entered and as may be imagined the tournament provides any amount of play, whilst judicious handicapping renders the matches interesting. The combined team of the R. A. and R. E. are at scratch the Imperial Service Lancers receiving 3 goals start, and the remaining teams various allowances according to their capabilities. The tournament is doing much to popularise the game in the station and is, it would seem, an example that might well be followed elsewhere. In a match which remained drawn—an usual event in polo—½ a win was allowed to each team.

The R. A. and R. E. are a decidedly strong lot and are doing well in spite of having to concede points to all other teams, but the "Rovers" are my choice for ultimate winners. They are all four Essex officers, and comparatively new to polo and consequently receive the liberal start of 7 goals, but they have lots of dash and have won all their games to date. The Carabiniers have two teams entered, but they have not done much at present, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Swifte's team contains three of the men who lately made so good a fight with the 4th Hussars in the Bangalore Tournament. Put briefly the state of the tournament at present is as follows :—

One of the most important things for women to realize when they commence to ride is that ten, twenty or forty lessons will not make experienced horsewomen of them. Riding should be considered an art as well as a sport ; and I do not think any rationnal persons would think of calling themselves finished singers, pianists or painters after ten or twenty lessons. Then why should riding be easy to learn—when it is not only difficult, but, if not learned properly, dangerous?

Any woman possessed of the normal amount of courage has every chance to become a good horsewoman. She will not have the advantage of years of youthful practice, but close application will do much and she can always bear in mind the true saying, that "Horsewomen are born, not made."

But being one of the "born" is not enough. It is a great thing to have the material there ; yet a strictly "ready made" rider is a bad thing. A certain knowledge of form and detail is necessary to produce a finished horsewoman. We have been asked many times of late our opinion of women riding astride. I think that in some cases, as in games, it is permissible, even advisable ; and some women hunt that way. In polo, for instance, where so much depends upon getting away quickly, riding straight, and rapid turning, the advantage of a leg on each side of a horse must be great. Yet it is worthy of notice that women who played the best polo in Aiken last winter played in a side-saddle.

Many people have an idea that riding astride is safer than the side-saddle ; that there is less danger of being dragged and more chance of escape if a horse falls. But with a safety skirt and safety stirrups, there is no chance of dragging from a side-saddle. Then, too, women are not usually physically adapted for a man's saddle ; their legs are not long enough or strong enough to get a good grip astride.

The more plainly one dresses for the saddle the better. Safety skirts should always be worn. These are made in two different ways. One is practically nothing but an apron, and gives the effect of a skirt when in the saddle, but is awkward when one is dismounted. The other is more convenient. It is more like the ordinary habit skirt, but has an open seam, which is provided with fasteners permitting it to be closed when off the horse and readily opened preparatory to mounting.

No other skirt should be worn beneath the habit skirt. Plain, close-fitting underclothes add greatly to one's comfort in the saddle. Balbriggan drawers, such as boys wear, and socks are best. Stockings are bad, as they often wrinkle and chafe, and elastics sometimes interfere with the circulation.

A Swift Automobile once swept proudly past a Tired Cart Horse. "Hello, Old stick-in-the-Mud!" it called, tauntingly. "Back to the Bone-yard, you Dead One!" So saying, it disappeared in a Cloud of Steam. A little further down the Pike, the Tired Cart Horse came upon the Swift Automobile, now busted. "Aha!" said the Steed, with a Horse Laugh, "who is Stick-in-the-Mud now? You are indeed far from your Happy Home." While the Cart Horse was thinking up other Biting Sarcasms of this Nature, they hitched him up to the Damaged Vehicle, and he was compelled to yank it laboriously to the stable, fourteen miles away on an Up Grade. This fable teaches us that it is wrong to gloat over the downfall of our enemies, until we are sure they can't no longer injure us.

We are just now, writes our Lucknow correspondent on 13th September, having the usual lull before the storm. The only thing fixed for the next month or so is the Annual Regatta which takes place on Thursday and Saturday of this week and Tuesday of next week. A very good programme has been arranged, and, with any sort of luck, the affair should be a great success. The events are as follows :—(1) Race for the R. E. Challenge Bowl, for four-oared crews representing Regiments, Volunteer Corps, Clubs and Departments quartered or stationed at Lucknow. (2) Pair Oars. (3 Double Sculling for Gentlemen with Lady Cox. (4) Single Sculling. (5) Scratch Fours. In addition to the Challenge Bowl, prizes have been offered by Major-General Black, Commanding the District, Mr. Pope, the Traffic Superintendent, Oudh and Rohilkhund Railway, and Mr. Smythe, of the local Brewery.

I said just now that we were having the lull before the storm. Towards the end of next month we shall get the storm with a vengeance. The Sky Week marks the beginning of the cold weather season, and then there is no rest even for the good, until the end of March. Those who are catering for our amusement this year evidently believe in making a good beginning for the Sky Week, we are promised three days' polo, two days' racing and a horse show, the programme for which last is just out. There are fourteen classes, which I give in full for the information of your readers. Class I. For all hacks and chargers, 14-3 and over. Class II. Arab Polo Ponies 14-1 and under, heavy weight class. Class III. The same, light weight class. Class IV. Country-bred Polo Ponies, 14-1 and under, heavy weight. Class V. The same, light weight class. Class VI. Waler and imported Breed Polo Ponies, 14-1 and under. Class VII. Brake and Team driving competition (open to Regiments and Batteries) only one team per Regiment or Battery allowed—best of two drives. Class VIII. Trappers, single harness. Class IX. Jumping competition for horses, 14-2 and under. Class X. The same for ponies 14-1 and under. Class XI. Ladies' Hacks, to be ridden by ladies. Class XII. Turn out, single harness, to be bonâ fide property of ladies and to be driven by owners. Class XIII. For the best horse in the ring over 14-2, open to winners only. Class XIV. For the best pony in the ring 14-1 and under, open to winners only. I think the above list will give most of our local sportsmen a chance.

I had hoped to have been able to send you the result of the final of the Polo Tournament, played off here for the Cup presented by Colonel Humphery in time for last Thursday's Indian Field ; but the weather has again been against us, and, though it was begun on Monday, the rain came down in the middle and play had to be abandoned for the day. On Monday the VIth Bengal Cavalry, who were meeting the Vth Dragoon Guards, had rather the best of it, and scored two goals one subsidiary to the one goal of their opponents. On Wednesday they were again the better form and added one goal one subsidiary to their score, thus winning the Cup. The VIth Dragoon Gards had distinctly bad luck in the way their men kept on getting seedy On Monday there were two changes in the team, Pankhurst and Major Stuart being absent, and Brand and Stott taking their places, then Wednesday found Captain Clay down with fever ; Major Stuart, who was better, playing for him.

From right along the lower northern hills between the Indus and Irrawaddi, news reached us of indications of an early setting in of winter on the higher ranges. Snow falling so early as this with the volume of the big rivers already diminishing is abnormal, while the descent of bears and leopards from their summer resorts point to a plethora of those creatures, all indicating a good shooting season. How matters are faring among the water fowl on their breeding grounds on the far side of the Himalayas we have yet to learn, but the appearance of such harbingers as snipe, widgeon and even teal on the jheels and in the centre of the Gangetic delta promise an equally early advent of geese and duck. Altogether the season has been an unusually favourable one for game propagation in the hunting regions of India proper, for we have every reason to infer that similar hopeful conditions have prevailed in the rest of the peninsula south of the latitude of the Vindhya range. No great floods or extensive forest fires have been reported, so that breeding must have gone on under the best conditions. Crop prospects on the whole are satisfactory, hence the usual legitimate food, jungle fruits, seeds which suffer as equally from deficient rainfall as their prototypes, having been as abundant, together with the insects luxuriant foliage begets, have nourished plenty of ground feathered game. The outlook for the Indian sportsman for his shooting season is far more promising than that of his European compeer, for very doleful tales are to hand as to the havoc wrought on moor and in spinnies by the long continued inclement weather of the northern spring and summer, as also the increasing ravages of the new disease specially affecting pheasants—entritis. Predatory creatures have no doubt shared in the advantages of the mild Indian weather since April, so there should be ample opportunity for those anxious to secure trophies without resorting to wholesale slaughter. With this probable wealth of game, it is to be trusted that no relaxation of the close time or other restrictions or regulations will be permitted, as although game will be more than usually plentiful it must be remembered that the young are still as immature as in ordinary seasons. In the têrai east of Darjeeling heads of the older stags of each kind will be in their prime for the next six weeks; we hope that those essaying shooting during the coming pooja outings will confine themselves strictly to these; all full does killed before the middle of January in Northern India means the death, by premature weaning, of fawns, the same applies to feathered ground game, and were licenses granted only to such sportsmen as can restrain themselves previous to the 15th of the month mentioned, we should not have to lament the indiscriminate slaughter of "innocents" that now goes on from the first setting in of the cold weather.

The following is the betting on the Viceroy's Cup:—Friar Tuck 4 to 1 against, Great Scot and Carabine 5 to 1, Acetine 7 to 1, Vasto and Cretonne 10 to 1.

The Calcutta Light Horse held the last tent-pegging competition of the season on Tuesday. The best aggregate scores were: Troop Sergeant Major Westmacott with 54 points and Trooper Touch with 53 points. The former thus holds the Challenge Bowl for the year, and the Cup for the runner up goes to Trooper Touch. Trooper Ching won the Beginners' Cup with 44 points

Athletic Notes.

WE HAVE to remind our readers that the annual meeting of the Calcutta Swimming Club will take place at 4-30 P.M. on Saturday, 19th current.

The Bath building is being prepared for the entertainment and electric fans are being fitted above the ladies' gallery. Light refreshments will be provided free of cost.

The programme comprises a two lengths handicap for members. There were eighteen entries for this and preliminary heats were put through on Tuesday. The final should afford a good race.

The next item is a 100 yards scratch race for soldiers. Preliminaries were swum off last evening.

The great event of the day, the six lengths handicap for the Viceroy's medal has unfortunately only drawn five entries, of which two will probably be absentees owing to the Rugby final. This leaves three only—a miserable entry as compared with the other races. The other events are eight lengths team race for which the entries are the Swimming Club, the Calcutta Football Club, and the Seebpore College teams, also a water polo tournament, in which the Swimming Club will meet the Seebpore boys. We should back the Swimming Club to win both these events. In addition there will be a display of diving and fancy swimming and a comic event consisting of a two lengths race in clothes with a tall hat on and an umbrella, the latter to be kept open. It is no easy work to swim two lengths in clothes leave alone the umbrella, and as there are about 20 entries and all will be in one heat the event should prove fairly exciting. The Club Committee have worked hard to make the meeting a success, and it is hoped the show will be as well patronised as in former years.

The Annual Athletic and Sporting Meeting of the Bombay Gymkhana will be held in Bombay during the week—26th to 31st October.

The following are the results of the drawing in the Durand Tournament:—

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—Three Bangalore Rugby football players accompany the Presidency team to Calcutta, namely, Messrs. Rolland, Robinson, R. A., and Bailey, R. H. A. Of these the first two are forwards and the third a very fast and nippy three-quarters, who may prove dangerous to the C. F. C.

The 58th Battery R. F. A were beaten in the first tie for the Madras Command R. A. football tournament by "G" Battery R. H. A., the score being 3 goals to nil. The 31st Battery have beaten the 25th Battery in Bellary and are expected here shortly, for finals and semi-finals will I hear be played in Bangalore this year. But if the 55th Battery from St. Thomas' Mount are anything like what they were two years ago, they will take a lot of beating.

Cricket prospects continue only fair, although the weather is at present a disturbing element—literally speaking—in the game. Bangalore has always produced good cricketers, but at present we want a really good fast bowler badly—not an uncommon want in higher class cricket than is usually seen in Indian stations. One curious circumstance may be mentioned as regards Bangalore cricket. We nearly always possess a cricketing General officer commanding, and General H. B. McCall's sound innings just before his retirement are still well remembered. In fact I have heard it quoted as a proof of the absurdity of the compulsory retirement system that a man who would field all day in the sun and make forty or fifty runs afterwards should be considered too old for further service.

Yesterday saw another decidedly notable achievement here by a General Officer. Going in first with Major Hayes, for the "Rest of the Gymkhana" vs. "R. A. and R. E." General Nixon, C. B., scored 59 runs and was second out, putting on in partnership with Major Hayes, 112 runs for the first wicket. And the bowling was not bad either, Captain Barstow and Mr. Robertson have been well known in Bangalore for a goodish while. More power to the country which breeds men who remain athletes when descendants of other nations are thinking only of arm-chairs and card-tables.

We remind our readers that entries for the Calcutta Rowing Club Regatta close on Saturday evening. The Dinghy race has so far drawn but two entries, there are, as far as we are aware, no entries for the Senior Double Sculls, and for the Senior Fours there are in practice but two crews composed as follows:—

D Carvill bow	A Cochran bow
W C Burke 2	H R Pilcher 2
J C Buchanan 3	W D Braithwaite 3
C V Green str	A V Venables str

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—The chief attraction just now is the Bombay Rovers' Association Football Tournament, for which fifteen teams have entered from various parts of India. The first match in the opening round was played off on Friday, but the Committee hit upon the happy idea of inaugurating the tournament with a charity match, on Thursday evening in which the opposite sides were the Bombay Presidency vs. All India. The former team consisted of the pick of the players in the teams which have entered from the Presidency, the other eleven being composed of players from other parts of India. As was only to be expected combination was not always of the best, but, considering that the players were practically all strangers to each other's play, a very interesting exhibition of the soccer code was witnessed. The sides were very evenly matched and at half-time the score stood 2 goals all, All India eventually winning by 3 goals to 2. The tournament proper commenced on Friday evening, when the Buffs, who are now stationed at Poona met the Bombay Rovers. The latter is a much improved team, and very early in the game gave evidence that they were not so weak a combination as many people appeared to think. The opening half was fairly evenly contested, the Rovers, if anything, having rather the best of matters. In the forward line they showed better combination than their opponents, while their half backs fed them well and experienced little difficulty in breaking up the combination of the Poona players' front rank. The Bombay players had chances of scoring on two or three occasions, but failed at the critical moment as a result of some of their forwards showing a tendency to stick to the ball too long. At half time the teams crossed over with a blank scoring sheet.

In the second half quite a change came over the game and it was soon apparent that there was only one team in it—and that was not the Buffs. The game had not been resumed five minutes before Rodwell twice sent into the Buffs' net, greatly to the delight of the civilian team's supporters. Encouraged by this success, the homesters played up strongly—again and again their forwards carried the ball close up to their opponents' goal, the military backs repeatedly letting them through, and, but for erratic shooting, they should have scored on several occasions. Three or four times the Buffs broke away, but only to be speedily driven back again, and they had to do all they knew to keep the Bombay players from increasing their lead. For a time they were successful, but eventually Tyler dribbled close up and sent in the Rovers' third goal. From now to the end the Bombay players continued to hold the upper hand, but there was no further scoring and they eventually left the field victorious by 3 goals to nil. The Rovers had asserted their superiority in every department of the game, and were unlucky in not winning by an even larger margin. The game on Saturday evening was between the North Staffords, stationed at Bombay, and the Lincolns, who have come down from Secunderabad. The result was a pointless draw. The game was a very fast one, both ends of the ground being visited in rapid succession. The passing on both sides was very pretty, while the head work, of which there was a lot, was neatly and well directed. It would be difficult to say which side showed the better combination, but certainly the North Staffords showed up to more purpose towards the end of the struggle.

While on the subject of football, I should like to briefly refer to the forthcoming Rugby Tournament which is to be held under the auspices of the Bombay Gymkhana, and which gives every promise of being one of the most successful of recent years. The last three or four tournaments under Rugby rules have been only productive of a small entry, and consequently the event has lost much of its interest. Thanks, however, to the efforts of Mr. P. J. Arnot, the energetic Honorary Secretary, a capital entry has been secured for this year's tournament and we are looking forward to seeing some interesting rugger. The teams which have entered are: The Welsh Regiment (holders of the Cup), the Gloucesters (from Lucknow), the Buffs (from Poona), Bombay Garrison, Calcutta F. C., Madras Gymkhana, and Bombay Gymkhana. The Welsh have won the Cup for eight years in succession, but they are not likely to have such an easy time this year, although in the end I shall expect to see them once more victorious. On the 19th of this month the Bombay Gymkhana team leaves for Madras to play in the tournament there, but I am afraid they will be unable to take over their strongest fifteen, a number of men finding it difficult to get away. Last year a visit was made to Calcutta, and from the teams mentioned above, it will be observed that the latter are now returning the compliment.

Turning to cricket, I regret to hear that little real enthusiasm has been evinced by the general body of Indian cricketers up to date in the scheme to send a representative native Indian cricket team to England next year, and I for one sincerely hope that all who can afford to do so will come forward with their subscriptions, and that, too, without delay as there is not much time left to the Committee to complete the arrangements for the visit—by the middle of November, at the latest, definite information must reach the secretary of the M.C.C. that the team is coming in order to allow him to arrange fixtures. Up to date something like

Rs. 15,000 have been either subscribed or promised towards the subscription fund and the guarantee fund, and several gentlemen have promised to contribute to one or other of these funds, but have not yet stated to what extent. As regards the players who are likely to compose the team, all with the exception of K. M. Mistri have signified their willingness to make the trip, and in Mistri's case the Committee are not without hope that arrangements will ultimately be made which will allow that brilliant all-round cricketer to join the team. Considerable interest is being evinced in the forthcoming match at Poona between the Bombay Presidency and the Parsees. The Presidency Selection Committee's difficulties have not decreased since the Poona match and I for one am none too sure that the Europeans will repeat their Poona success of last year, when they won by four wickets.

After several postponements occasioned by the inclemency of the weather, mounted sports were held in Bombay on Wednesday. A good programme had been arranged, but owing to a late start darkness interfered with it being carried through to a finish. Five or six half-sections competed in the tent-pegging (horses or ponies), and after close competition Mr. R. F. Cook and Lieutenant R. S. Scott were placed first, with Messrs. S. M. McCausland and A Sidney Galtrey bracketted second with Messrs. F. J. Rowe and T. D. Moore There were a good many competitors in the jumping competition for horses, which was won by Mr. Spence's Lippy (Mr. McLachlin up) with Mr Rowe's Mischief (owner) second, and Mr. Stovold's Red Lithtie (owner) third. Lippy took all the jumps in capital style, the result being never in doubt. The Skittle Lloyd Lindsay (by sections) was won by Messrs. Johnson and Carnegie. The programme wound up with a horse scurry (handicap), which resulted as follows: Mr. T. L. Roberts' Reminiscence (Mr. S. M. McCausland) scratch 1st; Mr. A. Sidney Galtrey's Under Housemaid (owner) 10yards., 2nd; and Mr. McLachlin's White Heather (owner) 10yds., 3rd. Reminiscence, who had the better of a poor start, won by half-a-length, the others being some distance behind.

It is rumoured that Lady Curzon may go home in a few weeks' time for a change. It is also probable that Lady Lawrence, who is improving after her attack of fever, will accompany Her Excellency.

Sergt. Swayne of the Governor's Band at Poona attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat last Friday. He had had fever for several days, but no motive for the act can be assigned. He is at the Station Hospital, Kirkee, in a precarious condition.

From the Report of the Sixty-Seventh Annual General Meeting of the Northern Assurance Company, held at Aberdeen, on Friday, the 12th day of June last, we learn that the premiums received in the Fire Department last year amounted to £960,365 15*s.* 9*d.*, showing, in comparison with the premiums of the previous year, an increase of £107,438 4*s.* 6*d.* The losses incurred amounted to £470,336 9*s.* 5*d.* or 49·0 per cent. of the premiums. This is the lowest ratio which has been experienced by the Company since the year 1878.

During the year 1,051 Policies were issued for New Life Assurances, amounting in the aggregate, after deduction of Re-assurances, to £352,217. Of this sum £192,142 was for Endowment Assurances payable at death or on the attainment of a specified age, and £7,525 for Ordinary Endowments payable at a fixed date. These new Assurances yielded Annual Premiums amounting to £13,793 15*s.* 4*d.* and Single Premiums amounting to £73 16*s.* 2*d.* The total income of the year (including Interest) was £393,950 6*s.* 8*d.* The claims amounted to £269,265 10*s.* 9*d.*, of which the sum of £46,807 3*s.* 2*d.* was for Endowments and Endowment Assurances payable during Life.

The funds of the Life Department now amount to £4,109,816 9*s.* 4*d.*, showing an increase for the year of £108,086 5*s.* d.

The Directors have during the year set aside and earmarked special securities as the absolute property of the beneficiaries of the various Life and Staff Funds. In the Accounts of the past year, therefore, there will be found for the first time special Balance Sheets for:—Participation Life Branch, General Life Branches (Non-Participation, Endowment Certain and Annuity), Staff Funds, in addition to the General Balance Sheet of Fire and Shareholders' Funds. The Securities allocated to the Life and Staff Funds were transferred at the lowest market prices. The surplus, which on re-valuation was found to exist, has been devoted in the first instance to writing down to the market value any securities in the Company's books standing above the same at the close of the year; the balance remaining has been set aside as an "Investment Reserve Fund."

The total amount proposed to be distributed amongst the Shareholders for the year 1902 is £96,000, viz:—Dividend of £1 per share paid in December last £30,000, Dividend of £1 10*s.* 1 per share to be paid now £45,000, third instalment of 4*s.* per share of Life Bonus £6,000, Bonus of 10*s.* per share £15,000.

London Week by Week.

LONDON, Friday, 28th August, 1903.

THE bulletins of Friday and Saturday from Hatfield prepared us for the news which reached London about ten o'clock on Saturday night. After lying unconscious for some twenty-four hours Lord Salisbury died shortly after nine o'clock on Saturday evening; and with his death closes a great political chapter. Others in our time have enjoyed wider popularity in the vulgar sense, but no man has enjoyed in the same degree public respect and confidence. Beginning his public career fifty years ago as Lord Robert Cecil he had neither money nor the desire to win popularity: he had the prestige of a great name, but that had stood him in small stead with the personal qualities which made him. A great man in the best sense of the phrase he was able to take comprehensive views and grasp large issues: a brave one, he cared nothing for applause from those whose right to express opinions he always more than doubted. His career and the position to which he attained is as significant of the intelligence of the masses as it is proof of his own abilities: never pandering to popular outcry, never lending ear to the voice of an hour, never acting on impulse he gradually drew to the front as the man on whom the country could safely rely. In a word he was a statesman among politicians.

He was a man of action rather than of speech: he appealed to his countrymen's heads rather than their hearts. As an orator I suppose he is scarcely entitled to rank at all: it is long since I heard him speak and I have forgotten the purpose or occasion of the address, but the manner of it remains vividly in mind. There was no rhetoric, no flourish; manner and voice alike impressive, but impressive, because the speaker was obviously sincere and had no thought for effect. That was the keynote of Lord Salisbury's character, sincerity; and though the electorate took its time to recognise it, to Lord Salisbury the electorate turned in time of stress or need; whether to meet peril from without when storm was brewing or to "clean up after Gladstone" at home.

In one respect Lord Salisbury's methods might well stand as an object lesson to smaller men. Once within the gates of Hatfield he was no longer a public man: he held that private life should be private life and the morbid curiosity of an inquisitive public was never gratified by the smallest glimpse of the home life of Hatfield House. The personal paragraphist had to leave Lord Salisbury alone, and the seclusion in which it was the late premier's pleasure to live in his own home was one of the minor factors which contributed to his dignity and prestige and the respect he commanded. So it was to the last: no unseemly gossip to make sensational "Last Scenes" filtered down the back stairs to eager reporters. What the public have the right to know it knows: and the only point the sensationalists have been able to make is that the passing bell which announced the death by an undesigned coincidence tolled for as many minutes as Lord Salisbury had years instead of the prescribed hour. He is to be buried at Hatfield on Monday: quite privately.

The Royal Commission on the War have issued their Report, and perusal of the same leaves one with such feelings as he, I perpend, must experience who drives across a bridge and hears it fall in ruins behind him. The Commission did not deal with the military operations themselves: they quote opposing opinions as to the proper strategy given by Earl Roberts and Lord Wolseley and, remarking that their body was not so constituted as to permit them to decide between two such authorities, proceed to deal with the military preparations. If one were to sum up the ten columns of the Times into which the Report is digested into a sentence, that sentence must be "nothing was foreseen and little was ready." The much abused Intelligence Department comes out of the fire unscathed: insufficient staff and scanty means notwithstanding, it did obtain very fairly accurate information concerning the Boer resources in men and arms and as to the feeling in the Republics. In February 1896 Lord Wolseley, on general grounds of expediency, urged a small addition to the forces in South Africa a regiment of cavalry, a battery of horse artillery and two battalions of infantry; and by the end of 1897 the force had been further increased to about 9,500 men and 24 guns: and there it stopped till July 1899 when Lord Wolseley suggested the despatch of 10,000 men.

Space forbids my going into details—unless you can spare a whole issue of the Indian Field for the purpose. The Commission say that official records and evidence establish "the main fact that for at least three years before the outbreak of war the Intelligence Department of the War Office had been fully aware of the warlike preparations of the Republics." Lord Lansdowne's answer to the charge of non-preparation is that "it was not expedient to ask Parliament for a large sum of money and make open preparations which might have precipated a crisis." Lord Lansdowne's position as Secretary for War was to say the least singular: the important papers of the Intelligence Department were "never officially communicated to him." He seems first to have heard of them officially from Mr. Chamberlain! So we held on. The root of the trouble appears to lie in the organisation of the War Office and its dependence upon political considerations. Apart from the latter the Commission are at no pains to conceal their view that there is a dangerous lack of cohesion and unity of purpose among the Department in Pall Mall. What the several departments were doing on their own accounts we do not know: what they were not doing this Report tells us and astounding reading it is. Those responsible for clothing were too busy attending to gold lace and buttons to care for minor matters: hence I suppose the fact that there was no reserve of khaki clothing: 40,000 suits were made in the spring of 1899 to be condemned by the medical authorities as too thin. Says Sir Henry Brackenbury, a witness:—

All my difficulties have arisen from the fact that the troops sent out to South Africa had to be entirely reclothed from head to foot before being sent out. In the infantry the blue helmet had to be replaced by a white helmet, and the red serge frock by khaki drill. After embarkation had commenced the khaki drill frock was discarded for khaki serge. After manufacturing the khaki serge had commenced, a new pattern frock was ordered; that had to be discarded, as contractors objected to it, owing to difficulties of manufacture. Tweed trousers had to be replaced by khaki drill, afterwards changed to khaki serge. Even the boots had to be changed, as the foreign service boot differs from the home service boot. In cavalry and artillery there were the same changes in helmets and frocks as in the infantry; cloth pantaloons had to be replaced by cord pantaloons, knee boots had to be replaced by ankle boots and puttees. Similar changes had to be made for all services—Royal Engineers, Army Service Corps, Army Ordnance Corps, &c. I submit that a system such as above described is eminently unpractical, and unsuited to the requirements of an army which is maintained to enable us to make war.

Concerning arms, etc., we heard a good deal at the time. It is now admitted that there were 200,000 reserve rifles in stock and that 25,000 were issued before it was discovered that these were so badly sighted that they shot 18 inches to the left at 500 yards. Of 157 million rounds of small arm ammunition 66 millions were Mark IV, otherwise had expanding bullets and were not available under the Hague Convention. The ammunition pouches would not hold cartridges and scattered it around: the Wallace spade proved too weak to be useful. There was no stock of horse shoes or mule shoes: but having regard to the fact that we lacked both horses and mules so badly, this need hardly count. Nor need we deplore the fact that we possessed a reserve of 80 (four score) cavalry swords, in view of Sir John French's and General Baden-Powell's opinions that our cavalry sword is "the very worst that could possibly be used" and "perfectly useless as a sword or anything else." The most disturbing passage in the whole Report is the significant intimation that it "contains all that can be published with due regard to the public interest." Agreeable reading isn't it? The Report practically confines itself to pointing out defects and shortcomings—a formidable task conscientiously performed—and leaves the Government to find remedies: a more formidable task: but four of the nine Commissioners have set their hands to a recommendation of the most sweeping character, which is that there should be established "a complete scheme of national military education in national cadet schools" whereby every healthy boy of 17, not a sailor or member of a volunteer corps, should have to serve for a term in a school ordered on military lines. Lord Esher adds indeed that "this is the only alternative to conscription." Matters relative to the riding and shooting of our men in South Africa hardly come within the scope of these notes: the remarks of witnesses are instructive.

There appears to have been one man and only one in the whole political world who foresaw what was coming in South Africa and at the same time was fully alive to the danger and strove for all he was worth to awaken the responsible authorities to a sense of the position. Of course it was Mr. Chamberlain. One cannot read without child-like wonderment the letter he wrote—officially as Secretary for the Colonies, mark it—to the Secretary for War in April 1897—observe the date please, nearly 2½ years before the war broke out, and again in May 1898. He saw the danger clearly: had his finger on the colonial pulse: realised what effect initial success or reverse must produce: and he "rubbed it in" with no sparing hand. If Mr. Chamberlain needed a character as a statesman and not as a politician it is writ here. The pity of it! We have so little use for statesmen in these days while wanting them so sorely. Forgive the paradox.

The disappearance of the lady doctor, Miss Hickman, is beginning to attract wider attention. Briefly, the lady attended to her patients at the Royal Free Hospital on Saturday morning, 15th August; arranged to see casualty patients at six in the evening—and vanished: literally vanished, as nobody saw her leave the hospital and nothing has been seen or heard of her since. The police have taken up the case and are said to possess a clue; but meantime the lady's relatives freely air their conjectures concerning her fate in the papers. One theory is that she has been stricken with sudden loss of memory and has forgotten her own name and identity; such things have occurred. Another idea is that she is detained by Jesuits, "a prisoner of the Catholic Church" (the lady's father started this notion). Another relative believes she has been made away with by low class Italians: she was fond of Italians and all things Italian and was much in the quater where Italians live. The fact remains that a young, healthy, eminently sane and well balanced young woman of fine physique has completely disappeared from the midst of London. The thing is strange.

Well! The Humbert trial is ended—ended in smoke so far as sensational revelations are concerned. Madame kept her end up bravely diffusing around her the atmosphere of penetrable mystery for no earthly reason apparently but to stimulate public curiosity and keep eyes upon herself. Maitre Labori could hardly have relished the task he undertook and the Regnier story fell deplorably flat, chiefly I suppose because nobody believed it. Madame has no right to complain. She had a glorious good time at other people's expense for twenty years and she does not pay too heavily for it with five years' solitary confinement. As a swindle the Humbert career has been a classic; for sheer daring it stands alone. Mons. Regnier whom Madame would have had the world believe comprised in his own person "the Crawfords" was the man who was mixed up with the Bazaine affair, you will remember. He took refuge at Ramsgate with no pretensions whatever to wealth; on the contrary his women kind had to turn their hands to work and established a laundry on the profits of which the family lived. The laundry is still going, but has long since passed into other hands.

All the world is assembled in Dublin this week to talk horse. They have a capital entry for this year's show, 1,400 against last year's 1,300 and the young classes, a friend writes me, are particularly strong; but the Horse Show rank as a society function and its success in that sense depends not on entries, quality or the lack of them.

The estate of "Sam Lewis," who combined in himself the apparently hostile callings of moneylender and philanthropist, has been revalued at over two millions and a half. Sam Lewis was happily described by the perverted text "He that lendeth to the lord giveth to the poor." The peerage would agree.

I heard the other day that the Committee of one of the Ladies' Clubs in Dover Street have removed from the members' list at one fell swoop no fewer than fifteen names: not all names of nobodies.

A few odds and ends from the theatrical world must be condensed. Dan Leno is very much better and was to leave Camberwell House for Boscombe early this week: his programme is to rest there, then go abroad for a time and, on his return home, do nothing till Drury Lane pantomime rehearsals come on. Lord Anglesey is starring the provinces with his own company: he was at Lichfield a day or two ago and gave The Marriage of Kitty, taking the part of Sir Reginald himself. The performance is well spoken of, but chief admiration is lavished on the furniture which is from Anglesey Castle. The Marquis' adoption of the stage altogether is I suppose only a matter of time. There is a rumour of concerted managerial action to make an end of the matinée hat: if I ever went to matinées I should seek out the pioneers of the movement and offer my aid: having but an academic interest in the matter I content myself with a benediction on wisely directed effort.

AN ELEPHANTS' DANCING GROUND

(Copyrighted.)

KIPLING, in one of his delightful tales, 'Loomi of the elephants' I think it is, refers to native rumours that elephants not only dance, but have regular dancing grounds where they meet for saltatory exercise. One would think they were the last creatures on God's earth to be accused of a predilection for the "light fantastic" yet after all why not? I have known even the Government secretariat capable of getting into a playful humour.

Doubtless Kipling heard of the idea from Sanderson, the kheddah man with whom I believe he was acquainted but even Sanderson himself never saw one of these grounds. I do not remember any mention of his having done so in his book "Thirteen Years Among the Wild Beasts of India," nor did he ever tell me he had, often and often as we have talked "elephant" together and discussed this very subject, which he said he had heard of. I think then that I am perhaps the only European who has seen such places. After all said and done, if what I saw were real dancing floors, they looked very ordinary sorts of places, and there is not much to indicate to the ordinary observer the exciting scenes which take place there, any more than the dirty, fusty smelling empty theatre by day discloses the brilliant scenes to be witnessed in it night after night. After all "The play's the thing," but not being able to show you that, I do the next best and show you where it is played. It is very probable that the theory holds good "once a dancing ground, always a dancing ground,' and as far as I see there is no reason why some enthusiastic naturalist, who has a little money and unlimited time at his disposal should not witness one of these so-called dances. They are held but four or almost five days' march from the old abandoned subdivisional headquarters "Ruma" of the so-called 'Bohmaung's circle" in the Chittagong Hill Tracts. I shall be pleased to give any one any further information as to how to get there, and in fact every detail should they care to ask you for it. The country swarms with game, so that even if they were not lucky enough to see a dance they could get good sport, and baskets full of orchids in the Ramagiri khall, besides other rare plants. For the present, however, I shall just give a few extracts from my diary which are is twenty years old. In those days a patrol of frontier police left Polityc. our most eastern frontier stockade, once a fortnight for "Dalukmai," a frontier police station in the Arakan Hill Tracts, there was no regular path, the sepoys just cut the jungle where needed, blazed a tree here and there and built a few lean-to-sheds of bamboos thatched with wild plantain leaves at the end of each day's march. Their duties were simple, they were to report if they saw any signs of Shekdoos about, or any village being built, or any joom being made within sight of the patrol line. Well one March I accompained them and here are my diary extracts.

15th and 18th March.—Started from Ruma for Polityel distance twelve miles. Got a brace and a half of hil, partridge, and a jungle cock on the way. Halted for breakfast at the stream, saw a lot of fish spotted like English trout. The orderlies Madoo Ram and Gour Singh got thirty-two; they waded into a pool which was but thigh deep and feeling about with their feet would suddenly reach down and bring one up 'I do not know how they managed it, I tried, but was a dismal failure. This pool they had dammed up, up stream, and then they, after some time, frightened the fish to the lower shallow outlet: over this a coolie with a dao stood and as each fish tried to dart past, it was cut and captured. Found a new fern here. Arrived at Polityc at twelve o'clock. In the afternoon collected several dendrobiums, angulatum, Parishii, gigantium, cruminatum and fimbriatum.

16th March—Started for Dalukmai, and halted at Koorookpalla sheds. No water between this and Poly. The patrol line passes along the mountain ridge leaving the lake Rhenkyang Khyne in the valley to the left. There is a long descent after a few miles out, and then a stiff climb. Arrived Koorookpalla about 4 P. M. Water good. On the way Madoo Ram put up a brood of Polyplectron pheasants. I did not notice what he was at, and when he shouted "Sir, sir, look under the bush. I did so without in the least knowing what I was to look for. The next moment a great big something flew right at my face so I loosed off my gun not knowing what it was, and blew the plucky little hen pheasant to feathers. We have got two of the chicks alive. Came across some sambhur, but failed to get a shot. After reaching Koorookpalla the men found a porcupine. I had some curried. Pottered about after reaching camp shot imperial pigeon, two jungle fowl and two and a half brace partridges. Saw a number of Polyplectron.

17th March.—Left Koorookpalla at dawn. First part of March all up hill; arrive at Dâná sheds at 11-15. A.M. Went on, arrived at Phool Bâsa at 2-30 P.M. Ataram (one of the five sepoys of the patrol) went lame. This was a most delightful march. The first part all trees, no undergrowth with a carpet of Nature's own weaving. For a hundred yards or so one would be tramping over a bed of yellowish golden brown fallen leaves. These would abruptly change farther on to one of flaming red ones; these after a litt e giving place to warm coloured brown ones. In and out, over and under these, played coveys and coveys of hill partridges. Bagged six, could have got treble that if I had tried. Elephant tracks far more numerous than yesterday's, but all old. Came on fresh sambhur tracks. Madoo Ram and coolies formed a small beat; posting me up a ravine they thought the animals would make up. I got a shot at about ten yards and smashed both shoulders, but my 8-bore rifle is too heavy for snap shooting and the others were off before I could slew round for a second shot. Rest of the day spent skinning and cutting up the stag.

18th March.—Started shortly after dawn. The men and coolies appeared to me to have spent the night feasting off that sambhur. The road to-day is one long ascent, all through beautiful park-like bamboo jungle. Clumps of bamboo are scattered about thinly, under foot is withered doob grass almost knee deep. It must have been magnificent feeding ground in the rains and elephants had evidently made the most of their time. Everywhere their tracks are seen in some places broad, hard-beaten paths have been made. Suddenly we dropped into the Ramagiri stream, along this were a few trees and bushes. Saw fresh rhino tracks, but the police wish to push on so up, up, up we go: again through bamboo jungle. There is positively no undergrowth. One could drive a coach and four round and about those giant clumps but for the steepness of the ground. At the top a magnificent view bursts on one. A tremendous valley stretches away to the east. Range after range of hills trend away on either side of it clothed in deepest forest or bamboo. The naik in charge of the patrol pointed out to me three dots over the frontier. They were doubtless houses. Now no villages should have been there and the men with me strongly suspect they may turn out to be the beginning of a Shendoo war village. Two men were told off to scout. A little further on we came upon curious open spaces. one space was at least about five hundred yards long by about thirty broad. It was perfectly level, not a particle of jungle growth on it. It appeared to have been cleared, and tramped. and pounded upon till it looked as hard and as bare as the floor of a native hut, or threshing floor. My coolies said this was where the elephants danced. that further on at Noonapani I would see where they ended the dance in the must pool From this place we walked along an elephant road fully twenty feet broad, others of nearly equal breadth branched off from it in all directions. Then we came to the steep part of the descent. Here the path narrowed, and passed between huge rocks, which I could hardly believe a fairsized elephant could squeeze between, and yet there were signs that it had been done. Midway down, there were sudden drops, like giant steps, from three to four feet in depth. How the elephants negotiated these I cannot imagine. An hour's journey from the top, brought us to the bottom Here we came upon a saltwater pool. The elephants appear to have held high revel here, for everything has been splashed with blue-grey mud. This is Noonapani, the second dancing place of the elephants.

We passed to the sheds, about twenty minutes' march farther on. Arrived there at about a quarter to one o'clock. Naik very anxious got my coolies to help cut and construct a rough chevaux de frise of pointed bamboos round our sleeping place, advised making up half loads in case of a surprise and a bolt being needed. After a bit of a rest I went back to the salt pool. This is just at the bottom of the steep descent. It is nearly circular in shape, being about twenty yards in diameter, nine or ten feet deep, at one side which was much more shallow than the other. A large rock jutted out from the water. In the centre a salt spring bubbled up causing the pool to overflow into a neighbouring fresh water stream. The water was very thick and muddy. Boulders had evidently been moved away on the hill side, for on that side they formed a sort of outer ring between which and the pool the ground had not so much as a blade of grass on it. It had been stamped hard and level. On all the other three sides the ground had been cleared of all but the largest trees and these had been stripped of all branches within eight to ten feet of the ground. A broad belt of ground right round this pool had been stamped as hard, bare, and level as a tennis court. Beyond this belt again elephant tracks covered the ground overlapping each other for hundreds of yards, but there was this difference that within the belt all was smooth beyond it, the ground was much cut up and rough like a muddy country road after herds of cattle have passed over it. Interspersed with the elephants' footprints I discovered several rhinoceros footprints, and numbers of gaur marks and sambhur What is most curious is that within the hard beaten level belt of ground, everything has been smothered in blue-grey mud. To a height of ten or twelve feet the tree trunks, every one of their branches or rather stumps of branches, every boulder on the hilly side and every boulder bordering the belt had been covered with this wash of blue grey mud, not merely casually here and there but most carefully every surface of everything within the belt, rock ground or tree trunk had been as completely covered as though a human being had painted them, and the height on the trees was kept nearly level also even to the hill side being splashed to nearly the level of the trees. I cannot and will not believe that this is the work of elephant but my men say it is. There was not a sign of any elephant being about the place then. I and Madoo Ram and one of the police went up stream to meet our two scouts, we put up a bull gaur. He was standing in the stream when first sighted. Madoo Ram and I crept across a bend and as he passed up the stream bed I got a bullet in rather far back of his shoulder : he pitched forward, but before he could pick himself up I had smashed his spine with my second barrel. Such a piece of luck I've not had for many a day. It was getting late, the coolies came and took what meat they wanted. I had the head buried. Our two scouts came in ;-they had not seen the slightest sign of Shendoos nor indeed of any one or anything except traces of previous patrol parties.

So much for my diary, beyond saying that I got a good lot of orchids and came across a tree, the bark and wood of which smelled like camphor. There is not much of general interest in it. I got to Dalukmai and had a real good time.

What is an elephant's dance, when and why is it indulged in ? These are subjects on which were I to give all the various tribal ideas, I should fill volumes and my space being limited I can but touch upon a few of them here. Take the second query first. All versions are agreed that these dances take place the day, or night before, the day or night after and on the night of the full moon. Some say they take place every month throughout the hot weather only. This I very much doubt, because our frontier police, who, as I have I think said before, patrolled that line twice a month would have known more about it. What appears to one a more reasonable idea is that, these so-called dances occur but once, or at most twice a year. and this is in fact what the Imaemis assert. Driven from the hills and higher grounds by want of water. in the cold, and hot season's elephants are then confined to the vicinity of such streams as do not dry up and these are not many consequently large numbers collect together, and it is either when they first so collect, or just before they begin to disperse on the arrival of the rains that the dances take place. The more prevalent belief is that they take place only at the latter time, and as I have stated on the night previous to and succeeding as well as on the full moon night itself.

Now for query number three. Why do elephants dance ? Not from mere exuberence of spirits surely ? Of all living animals, the elephant is the least likely to be seized with the insane desire to try and captivate his mistress's affections by pirouetting on his off hind toe, by a neatly cut "pigeon's wing" or joining in the giddy reel, though like the circumlocution department he may be good at a double shuffle. Neither do these exercises take the form of fights. for all the tribes agree that it is not on these occasions that the stronger males are called upon to prove their superiority. From all accounts the function is of a two-fold nature

Firstly the females surround the larger males, and force them, should resistance be shown, into taking, not only an annual saline bath, but a saline draught as well.

How absurdly English this sounds. Drinking the waters at bath eh ?

Secondly, after having submitted to or been forced through this indispensable annual course of waters the larger males proceed to choose (subject I suppose to limitations) their party for the next season, which not only consists of such females as he may consider desirable, but also of such younger males as is considered necessary for the safety and well being of that particular domestic circle. There is a curious point about the choice of such. It is not the old tusker the leader of the small family party who chooses them, but it is the females who do so at least so my jungle folk have always told me, and it is a well-known fact that the African as well as the Indian elephant prefer the attentions of the adolescent male to those of a more mature growth. Though contrary to the general customs of animals it should not be surprising to us "humans", for do we not see the same thing in every hill station in India.

The above mentioned annual course of waters internally as well as externally is said to be a specific against must, that temporary madness which now and again seizes the elder males. There may be a good deal of truth in this, for as the tribesmen say who ever heard of a wild elephant going must. There are rogue elephants of course, but they are not must ones, nor can the two be in any way confused, neither are they cause and effect : the one is a disease, the advent of which is easily foretold by experienced mahouts, the other mere sullenness of temper, without disease at all consequent on being sent to Coventry by his kind for some lapse of manners. I would carry the argument still farther than my jungle friends, and say, that even if there has been such a thing as a must wild elephant, may it not be due to his having evaded the annual course of saline waters, and hidden himself like a dirty boy, the while portly Mrs. Elephant hunts around with her companions exclaiming from time to time "Drat that boy I know, he's sickening for must, and now he goes and slips away just when he knows right well he ought to be having his bath and drinks."

Though I would not go so far as to accuse him of mere frivolous light footedness, yet Mr. Elephant, like most other persons with a reputation for extreme respectability is a bit of a humbug. He is by no means the domesticated austere, "cold dinner and black clothes on Sunday" sort of gentleman in reality that he would like us to believe, but rather of the "Detained-in-town,-important-business,-dont sit-up-for me" sort of individual. As a matter of fact his affections are fickle, and he swops best girls every second or third year, at least I am told that it is very rare to find all the same females under the same lord three years in succession. After all I may be doing the old gentleman an injustice, and this may be more his misfortune than his fault. Yet I don't know, it is ever safe to trust a fellow who always goes about in loose baggy pantaloons as he does. To my idea there is something very human about Mr. Elephas Indicus. He is like a big baby, both in form and action, with all the vices of the man about town, concealed at various points about him. A perfect bruiser with his own sex but a lamb with his women folk. Fancy his being driven to his annual course of waters !

It may be that Mr. Elephas Indicus is more loyal than he is given credit for and like other great personages feels it his duty to give a birthday ball, whereas with us humans, the young ladies of the race are placed on view, and trotted out for selection by the other sex. Well, if we, who are, according to Tennyson, "The first of things" do this, how shall we blame Mr. Elephas for following our example. Though for his own sake I do hope to goodness that, he will stop there and not follow up the imitation by supplying thirty shilling champagne to his guests, as it is averred was once done by the head of a province. It is however, just these little failings of the great, that, so to speak, brings them down to our own level. It shows them to be but human after all, without which the rarified atmosphere of their excessive altitude would be unbreathable. Sed tamen amoda quaeramus seria ludo.

We now come to the first query. What is an elephant dance ? That it is something more than an ordinary gathering, is certain from the smoothly beaten ground. A mere concourse of elephants would not necessarily flatten out the ground to the smoothness of a tennis court. on the contrary if it was at all soft, it would tend to cut it up very considerably. Therefore the only conclusion left for us to come to is that the ground has been designedly levelled and smoothed It is self-evident that it is not a mere every-day dip in a salt water bath, else why do such numbers resort to it, at the same time to take it in company. Why should not each family party come up by themselves to the bath ; and like "Sairy Gamp" of immortal memory take their dip or drink when so "disposed" in the privity of their own domestic circle. Why is every object so carefully splashed with the blue clay wash, mind not merely daubed in places here and there, or on one side but entirely and carefully covered with it to a certain level ; and how in the name of all the gods and little fishes was that level kept comparatively true ? What, however, is the use of idle speculation ? I could ask a dozen "whys" but there is no satisfactory answer. To accept the tribesmen's tales as true would be absurd, yet to reject them as not having the slightest germ of truth would to my mind be nearly as foolish. Tales such as these generally have a kernal of truth in them, no matter how small, or overlaid with embroidery and I am of opinion that at certain times, whether monthly, annually, or less often, elephants do congregate in vast herds of many hundreds for some occult reason, in purshance of which they designedly level and smooth larger or smaller areas of ground, deliberately denuding such places of all vegetation, rocks, or stumps lest they should interfere with certain unknown manoeuvres. That this obscure purpose which brings them together, must of necessity be of very short duration, is sure, because even the most dense jungles could not supply such immense numbers with food within the immediate vicinity of such meeting places for more than a few hours, and it is well known that unlike his African cousin, the Indian elephant will not travel long distances for either food or water, preferring to keep close to both.

As to the precise nature and details of the functions gone through at such gatherings opinions differ, and as I have not been able to interview any actual eye-witness I must fall back upon the hearsay stories told me by different tribesmen. I will now recount one such, though it may be far from reliable, it may yet prove interesting as a tribal superstition. As the smaller water courses dry up with the cessation of the rains, straggling families of elephants join one another on the larger streams, and as with the advance of the hot weather, these in their turn dry up, herd after herd are brought together wherever water in sufficient quantities can be found.

From every part of the country these, in every sense of the word, gigantic herds close in as near the dancing ground as the water supply will permit ; whence they send scouts to it, who meeting there fix a day for the great gathering. Having met at the time appointed. the larger females are said to take charge of the whole proceedings. The males that are old enough to, or are likely to go must that year, and this they appear to know from instinct, are separated from the rest and surrounded by a cordon of the larger females, who have need of all their blandishments to keep their prisoners in good humour. The rest of the females form round the pool packed dozens deep close as they can stand in a ring round it but some distance from it, thus forming a living barrier of heaving swaying flesh, save at one point where a lane is left between them, extending up to the imprisoned males. At a given signal, three or four of these are driven down this lane into the salt bath by an escort of females. There they are ducked and punched for a while, to an accompaniment of shrill trumpeting accentuated by the rhythmic stampings and swayings of the younger females. One or two steps right, one or two steps left. The younger males on the outside striving to break through and rescue their elders. Meantime, the elephants to be bathed are protesting all they know. Round and round they rush pursued by their attendants, on they are shoved out, they clamber trumpeting and spurting the salt water in the faces of the surrounding throng, in the hopes of making them flinch and of so breaking through. It is all, however, useless. They are hustled into their bath again till they have undergone the regulation procedure and only then are they released. Batch after batch are treated in this way till all are bathed. All who are satisfied with their existing family party then depart ; but there are young males to be promoted from second in command to heads of families. There are the young females who since last season have reached the marriageable age, lastly there are such animals as wish to change their mates. These all proceed to the other flat ground. The females are ranged more or less in lines, too deep, tail to tail and here they keep up in perfect unison a rhythmic swaying as was done at the pool. The males needing partners, the while walking round, and in some (evidently) pre-arranged order making their choice by touching trunks. The young lady so selected leaving the swaying line at once. So all are apportioned off to each other, and the huge pachyderms depart. Such is one account. To my mind it is far from satisfactory and while doubtless adding much to what really takes place, fails to account for what does, namely, the level plastering of the trees which I myself saw. I cannot now give the other versions in detail, there are, however, two other beliefs amongst the tribesmen which I must just mention. The first is that elephant dance over a place where they have buried their old and ailing members which instinct tells them are near their end. The dancing being to level down and harden down the earth so that no beast of prey can dig it up.

The second other belief is that these dances are to celebrate the first coming together of such females as have but just attained to puberty, with a male. It is averred that such meetings are always held in public within a ring of females which is necessary to prevent the bride escaping, since that young person is by no means a consenting party and has always to be pretty severely coerced before she can be brought to accept the attentions of her lover. Such are some of the alleged reasons for the dances, as for the rhyme ; well with humblest of humble apologies to the manes of the late Lewis Carroll I submit the following :—

You must take a course of waters, said the Koonki to the male,
As she punched him in his tummy and hauled him by his tail.
Too salt, too salt her lord replies, the matrons then advance,
Will you, won't you, will you, won't ye.., won't you join the dance.
Really you can't imagine how horrible is must.
Your head is filled with megrims and you feel as if you'd bust,
The oftener you sip my dear the merrier you'd prance.
But don't get drunk, curl up your trunk
And come and join the dance.
Will you, won't you come and join the dance.
You must dip a little deeper said the matrons to the males,
You look so very shop-worn, they'd reduce you at the sales.
You are keeping us all waiting, sister, cousins, aunts.
Go hitch up your pants dear elephants and come and join the dance.
Will ye, nill ye, "silly Billy" come and join the dance.

CONCERNING SHOT SIZES.

IF it were generally admitted by sportsmen that 20 bores were better than 12 bores, writes "X" in the Country Gentleman they would, nevertheless, not be much used. Shooting has now arrived at a point at which a man individually no longer organises war against the game. It is done by a variety of circumstances acting on, and being in their turn reached upon by, a number of individuals, not all of them shooters, and in order to change our present habits in respect to gun gauges we should have to convert not only ourselves but every one of our shooting acquaintances also and simultaneously. Shooting outfit is no longer a question only between the man and his loader. Each man at some time of the year may now be required to take 50lbs. weight of ammunition on to the field with him. This has to be arranged for by the host or his head keeper, and it is not everywhere across the moors that the ammunition cart can travel. The keeper in charge has done his share in such circumstances if he brings up enough ammunition to the shooting line, and he is not to be severely blamed under such circumstances if Lord A. gets Mr. B.'s supply, and the latter is accommodated from the magazine of the Duke of C. But if the ducal cartridges happen to be 20-bores one shooter in the line will not be happy ; most of the birds will naturally stream over the unhappy man who cannot shoot for want of cartridges, they always do, and there is never any time to regulate matters by a trot up the line of butts. Time and tide wait for no man, and the drive is started punctually by the watch, and in the absence of wireless telegraphy, cannot be delayed. It is the ruin of a drive to be cut off butt and seen by the grouse when the drive has begun, and it is almost equally so to be in the butt and not to shoot. The grouse, like other objects in nature, take the line of least resistance, and will escape in clouds over the unguarded butt. The same thing to a certain but less extent applies to cartridge loads as to guns. Good shots will probably do well with any ordinary load, but the man in search of an excuse who is supplied with Schultze powder instead of his favourite black (there are such men still), or who gets a supply of No. 5 instead of No. 7, will be completely put out by the change. He will, in his own figurative language, never be able to hit a barn, except from the inside, with such beastly stuff. Of course it is all fancy, or most of it ; of course, too, it proclaims the second-rate shot to be put off by such trifles, but there are many instances of it all the same However, that is their own look out, the circumstances will not be taken into account if the excuse maker has to tread eighty per cent. of the empties into the peat for the sake of his own self-respect, and avoid the kindly eyes of neighbours who have been much too busy to count anybody's shots but their own, but are never too occupied to take a friendly interest in the proportion of dead grouse and empty shells lying almost side by side. The unfortunate who can never hit much except when he has everything in his favour will generally have but a short shooting existence where an ammunition cart is required. This will be so however he may attempt to disguise the fact of his muffishness, and succeed once in a way in doing so. He may be a Duke and then his vitality will be longer, but only on the cutlet for [cutlet] principle. The majority are not Dukes, and perhaps because of it most people still have the right to apply their individual preferences to their orders for cartridges. Some there are who attempt to advocate small shot for all round the season work ; but I, who am an out and out advocate of a light load and No. 5, protest that small shot is the worst enemy to the game preserver, and also to the cruelty to animal society as well, or would be so to the latter if they attend to things that are practical by preference.

Why I say that there is cruelty in using small shot is on two grounds, one of which is pretty generally admitted when it is argued that two No. 7 pellets are better than one No. 5, although the latter goes in further. But to leave for an instant the question of smashing, which is all in favour of big shot, I want to attach an idea that is as general as a maid-of-all-work : it is that small shot gives the best pattern. Nothing is further from the truth it ought to do so perhaps, in theory, but in practice it does not. A vast lot of precious time has been expended before white-washed targets in the unprofitable task of counting pellet marks, but the choice made of sorts of shot for trial is not, as a rule, different enough in size to get at any useful principle—the principle that governs these things.

It would take hundreds of thousands of discharges and counted targets to arrive at the principle of variation if the tests were made say with shot pellets varying no more than Nos. 6 and 7. But go to a smaller size in one direction, and to a bigger in the other, and you instantly discover the trend of differences of results. Broadly speaking there is a much larger percentage of wildly scattered pellets when small shot is used : that is to say, for every reduction of the size of shot pellets there will be more chances of wounding. I will not say fewer chances of killing, because that so much depends upon the distance the game is away, and whether it is coming at the shooter or going away from him.

Probably the best experiments with small shot ever carried through to a definite and instructive conclusion, were those undertaken at the instance of the French Government some years ago. These experiments proved beyond question that the smaller the size of the shot pellets the greater was the inaccuracy of their flight ; and that many more pellets became mere stragglers than when large shot was used. The Frenchmen went to work in a totally different direction from that which had led, and misled, Englishmen for many years ; and in doing that they shed new light, which has taken a long time to illuminate our own sphere of action.

To our neighbours it appeared more necessary to discover the size of the circle necessary to embrace a certain percentage of the shot pellets, at various distances, than it did to count the pellets within an already measured space. By this means they discovered the great superiority, by percentage differences, of big shot over small in the matter of pattern ; and until then it was not really suspected what an enormous difference in target area there was necessary, say, for catching 75 per cent. of No 9, as against 75 per cent. of B.B. shot. It is not only a loss over the longer ranges such as might be expected but at near distances also the small pellets require a much bigger area to catch 75 per cent. of them on the target. Indeed the differences are so great even at 33 yards range that the area of No. 9 on the target from a choke bore is bigger than the area of B.B., with a cylinder bore at the same distance. The figures given by the French Governmental authority for 33 yards are as follows :—The diameter of the circle enclosing 75 per cent. of the load with B B., shot is 2·2 feet ; with No. 9 it is 3·3 feet. Then at 55 yards range the difference is even more startling, being 4.6 feet for B.B. shot and 9.2 feet for No. 9 shot. At greater ranges the diameter practically doubles for small shot. All the above facts apply to the choke bore. With the cylinder there are even more differences, thus :—At 33 yards the respective diameters for the same 75 per cent. proportion of pellets are, for B·B. 3·1 feet and 4·2 feet for No. 9. At 55 yards, 5·2 feet for B·B. and 10·8 for No. 9 shot.

The application of these figures is in the direction of finding the area of the circles and the number of pellets to each square inch, and then by multiplying that number by their respective remaining energies at the distance. But probably this letter is already too long, and sportsmen, who all hate wounding like poison, will understand that when you count the shot pellets in a 30-inch circle at 40 yards you have not thereby necessarily learnt much about the patterns of shot guns, and how they are effected by different sizes of pellets.

The Sixth Monthly Prize Meeting was held at Milton Park last Saturday. The shooting was with the left hand and the range 20 yards. The shooting started somewhat later than advertised and was interfered with by bad light.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Can you or any of your readers tell me when Henley Regatta was started and whether at the first regatta the Grand Challenge Cup was rowed for ;

T. H. W.

[The Royal Regatta was founded in 1837 with the Grand Challenge Cup. A Town Cup was given in 1840, which developed into the Thames Cup in 1868. The Stewards' Cup dates from 1842, the Diamond Sculls from 1844, the Ladies' Plate and the Silver Goblets from 1845, and the Wyfold Cup from 1847.—ED.]

THE CALCUTTA TRAMWAYS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Is there no chance of the Calcutta Tramways Company being able to take any measures for the comfort of their European passengers ? I am aware that from a purely commercial point of view the native traffic probably pays at least as much as the European ; but I cannot but think that it is the duty of every Englishman to assist, as far as may be, in counteracting the effects of the grandmotherly legislation—to call it by no worse a name—which has converted the Bengali from a harmless and respectable type of native into an offensive and dangerous nuisance. In these days of pusillanimous subservience to the "Exeter Hall division" on the part of the authorities, an Englishman is expected to put up with any insult from a native and should he retaliate by giving the latter the hiding which he so richly deserves, legal proceedings are the inevitable result. The knowledge of this valuable fact has rendered the manners of the average Bengali offensive beyond description, and until the authorities acquire either a better sense of proportion or some courage of their opinions, the only thing to be done is for Europeans generally to avoid coming in contact with any natives in Calcutta, other than those in their own employ, or under their jurisdiction, who of course know better than to display their latent desire to be impertinent.

One of the places, however, in which it is impossible to avoid contact with the Bengali, and one in which he is to be seen at his worst, is in the electric tram. The tram is a quick, cheap, and but for this objection, a pleasant means of reaching office, but at present, at office hours in the morning and evening, it is so overrun with babus as to be practically impossible for any one else. The babu, knowing that no European will willingly share a seat with him, invariably takes a whole seat to himself, and it is no uncommon sight to see a tramcar with each seat occupied by one fat, smiling babu with a rank cheroot between his betel-stained teeth, and a crowd of Europeans standing on the platform outside for whom, but for the abovementioned manœuvre, there is really ample room in the car. The other morning I actually saw a car, half of every single seat of which was occupied by a native, while a lady was standing on the platform outside in the sun ! Needless to say not one of them had a sufficient semblance of manners to offer her a seat. Now I think that without standing to lose anything by their patriotism, the Tramway Company, who I know are doing all in their power to render the new service popular and efficient, might do something for the comfort of the European portion of their passengers. The nuisance is chiefly confined to (roughly speaking), three hours a day, namely, from 9-30 A.M. to 11 A.M. and from 4-30 P.M. to 6 P.M., and I would suggest one of the following expedients.

1. That between those hours the first class fare be doubled, i.e., 4 annas instead of 2 annas. This, I am confident, would not deter the greater portion of the business men from using the cars, but would reduce the native traffic without reducing the receipts.

2. That between the above hours a certain number of cars should be made up of two first class cars instead of a first and a second class, and of this the front car reserved for Europeans.

3. That in each first class car the two front seats on each side should be reserved for Europeans.

I am, of course, unable to say which of these suggestions is likely to be the best from an economical point of view, but I am inclined to favour the first, that of raising the fares during the hours in which there is a "run" on the cars. At any rate it is high time that something were done, and I trust that the Company may see their way to some such arrangement.

With apologies for encroaching on your valuable space.

CALCUTTA COURSE CHAT.

AFTER an enforced absence from the course, I was agreeably surprised and rewarded for my energy in getting down this morning (Tuesday) by being one of a few early birds to see a couple of interesting—not to say instructive—trials.

The first was a battle royal between Oom Paul (Galstaun) and Springlock (Rees) over the five furlongs, in which the former laid the latter out cold. The position of the riders affords ample food for reflection, or reading between the lines for those blessed with a second sight vision, but I only possessing an ordinary pair of optics, and—blinkered at that, give up the riddle and give you the trial just as I saw it. The timing, too, was good, so that when putting it on next Saturday, be sure you read the puzzle aright.

The next attractive bit was Blair Athol (Pugh) and Yuletide (Hard), who went the hurdle course a cracker, and the way the former jumped, and went away from the speedy black just as he liked, was a revelation. Had I not seen this trial, I would not have believed the deal could have ended as it did, and I don't think one need look much beyond the fashionably named flyer to land their little bit safely on Saturday.

Shirley (Piper), Major Cook (Bond), Seaview (native) put in a quick 6 furlongs, the first named holding the others safe. Seaview appeared to be blowing. First Guide (Raban) had the best of a 5-furlong fast flutter with Mocassin (native).

Kellnerin went a quick gallop, with Bloss up, in nice taking style, followed by Flashlight (native). Granny (Piper) took the change apparently out of two others from Smallman's; but I thought the hollow-backed one could have gone to the front if required.

Fairlight (Carter) went quick work on the flat. This perfect jumper requires no jumping to keep him in mind of his work, though when Twilight is on the job, as he probably will be on the 19th, he'll require all the beating. Even Fairlight can give him little if indeed he can do it at all. Gunmetal (Galstaun) and Royal Artillery (native) went a merry burst, with the amateur always in command.

Syd. White had out Heather from Wishart's. The Bloater's appearance and going attracted a good bit of notice from those who are supposed to spot a good thing at sight. Pekin (Bond) had the pull over Yellow Mantle (Hard) in a Pony Hurdle set-to, the Arab jumping in downright good style. Autocrat (Bloss) was exercised 12 annas, and there are many of opinion a win for him is quite near at hand.

Loch Arden (Hard) went his 5 furlongs as he does all his trials ; but when it comes to a tight fit at the finish, the ears go flop back and your coin's in the air, or the bookie's pocket, more correctly.

Mr. Dudley had Sylvia out for a gallop, but in clothing, and considering the closeness of the morning, the horse must have been uncomfortably warm.

Not Yet went in her own kittenish quick style, with Mr. Galstaun in the saddle, and if it is dry, the next time our little lady friend foots it out, a few dibs invested will repay the outlay, I think, as she's not the class to run three times in such company unplaced.

There are good reports of Petridge, who is now in first class fettle, thanks to Mr. J. D. Scott's care and attention, which gives Mr. Bass a double string to his bow—and what a pair of strings they are too—one being a son of the far famed Carbine, a representative of the flower of Australian and English equine blue blood.

THE TURF.

HURST PARK AUGUST MEETING.

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that the weather was wet and disagreeable overnight, the surroundings were fairly comfortable when a start was made on the 21st at Hurst Park, the sun coming out brightly. Taken altogether, the attendance was fairly good and few could complain of the fields or the quality of those engaged. Six events were down for decision, and backers started well in selecting Mr. Randall's Miss Bryant as she won by a length and a half. The little-fancied De Lacy accounted for the Surrey Welter, and, following up this success, Lord Howard de Walden won the August Two-Year Old Plate with Long Glass. Lord Alington's colours were seen to the front when You Go Off won the Riverside Selling Plate, the favourite, Mr. H. Bottomley's Lady Voter, being third. Cappa White easily landed the odds in the Park Plate, and the day's sport was brought to a conclusion when Mr. C. D. Marnes's Guilty won the Apprentices's Handicap Plate.

THE AUGUST TWO-YEAR OLD PLATE—Of 443 sovs ; colts 9st, fillies and geldings 8st 11lbs, with penalties and allowances. Five furlongs.

Lord Howard de Walden's b c Long Glass, by Isinglass—Hautesse, 8st 7lbs ...	M Cannon	1

(Winner trained by Beatty.)

BETTING : 2 to 1 agst. Helter Skelter, 9 to 4 Heronry, 5 to 2 Long Glass, 10 to 1 Chelys, and 20 to 1 any other.

Won by a neck ; three lengths separated the second and third. St. Kilda was fourth, Chelys fifth, Marmontel sixth, Ozone seventh, and Sir Tammany last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1 min. 6⅗ secs.

The feature, of course, of Saturday's programme at Hurst Park was the Match between Mr H. Bottomley's Le Blizon and Mr. S. B. Joel's Sundridge. Odds of 7 to 4 were laid on the younger horse, but he really never had a chance with Le Blizon, who won as he liked at the finish. It is doubtful if the going affected the result, and undoubtedly the Wantage representative could never under the circumstances give the weight away to Le Blizon, who was admirably ridden, Hare, jun., fully justifying his selection to ride by Mr. Bottomley. Business started with the Walton Handicap, for which Portcullis was served up a warm favourite at "twos." Mr. Brassey's horse, however, was well beaten at the distance by Wet Paint, who carried Lord Marcus Beresford's colours successfully. Love Charm won the Hurst Park Lennox Plate, and Cloten gave fielders another good turn by winning the Earlsfield Welter. Mr. Fry's Alice Holt won the Summer Selling Plate and Mr. H Lindemere's Mrs. Hawkins the Two-Year Old Selling Plate, after which the meeting concluded when Billet Doux secured the Maiden Two-Year Old Plate, starting favourite at 6 to 4 against.

THE HURST PARK LENNOX PLATE—Of 1,725 sovs, for three-year olds ; colts 9st, fillies and geldings 8st. 11lbs., with penalties and allowances. One mile and a half.

YORK AUGUST MEETING.

Although the weather was rather unsettled and threatening in the morning at York on the 25th, by noon the sky had cleared, and when racing started matters atmospherical were all that could be desired while the Knavesmire gave little ground for complaint to the most captious follower of racing. The sport, too, was interesting and fully up to the average throughout, a feature being the successful reappearance on a course of the popular American jockey, D. Maher. The card comprised seven events, and backers started badly when they selected Winnipeg to win the Nunthorpe Stakes, as Mr Craig's representative could only get third to Court Belle and Pantheon. As many good judges anticipated, Flavus won the Middlethorpe Handicap Plate, and then in the Bradgate Park Selling Plate the favourite, Tin Soldier, had to put up with second place to Rather Warm, ridden by Maher. After a close finish Hammerkop accounted for the Yorkshire Oaks, after which Maher rode his second winner, Cinquefoil, upon odds of 5 to 4 were laid in the valuable Prince of Wales' Plate. Although backed at 6 to 4 on, Jno. Osborne's Roover Crag failed to get into the first three in the Lonsdale Welter, and the day's proceedings were brought to a close when Orme Shore won the Badminton Plate by a head from Kibrit.

Prince Soltykoff's Bonnie Wee Thing, 8st 4lbs	Halsey	0

(Winner trained by Blackwell).

BETTING : 5 to 4 on Cinquefoil, 3 to 1 agst Topiary, 10 to 1 Hands Down, and 100 to 8 any other.

Won easily by a length ; three lengths divided the second and third. Rosalba, close up, was fourth, Bonnie Wee Thing fifth, and Almscliff last throughout. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min. 4⅗secs.

As on the opening morning, the weather on the 26th was rather unsettled and threatening at York, but before proceedings were resumed it cleared, and when racing started there were no appearances of rain. This may have had a slight effect on the atttendance, which, however, as usual for the Ebor Handicap, was of large proportions. Again the sport was of an interesting character, but backers must have been given a substantial reminder of last year's York generally, as not one first favourite got home in the seven events on the card. Business started with the Clifton Plate, and in a field of nine runners Mixed Powder, the mount of Maher, was looked upon as the pick of the lot, but he could only get second to Isle of Man. Fielders fared equally well when Richmond, the fancied article in the Rous Selling Plate had to occupy a similar position (second) to Cockatrice, who started at 10 to 1 and, in the hands of W. Lane, won by a length. Cock of the Roost having easily won the Duke of York Stakes the way was made clear for the Ebor, for which as he had been generally anticipated, thirteen runners weighed out. At the close Throwaway was made a good favourite at 7 to 2, and at a point longer odds McYardley was most in demand. The pair fought out the finish, but after a great race McYardley lasted the longer and won by three-quarters of a length, this being Madden's fourth win in the event. Catgut, ridden by K. Cannon, upset a warm favourite in Melodious for the Convivial Produce Stakes, and, Madden putting a second success to his credit by the aid of Eon in the Falmouth Selling Plate, the day's proceedings were brought to a close when Reckitt, starting at "eights," won the Londesborough Plate.

(Winner trained by Gilbert.)

BETTING : 7 to agst Throwaway, 4 to 1 McYardley, 100 to 112 Cliftonhall, 10 to 1 Seahorse II., 10 to 1 Prince Florizel, 10 to 7 Orbel, 100 to 8 Mardonius, 100 to 8 Wavelet's Pride, 100 to Likely Bird, 100 to 7 Preen, 100 to 7 Florinda, 20 to 1 Parody, 20 to 1 Thremhall.

The first to leave the paddock was Seahorse II., and he was followed in the parade by Prince Florizel, McYardley, Thremhall, Orbel, Mardonius, Florinda, Cliftonhall, Wavelet's Pride, and Throwaway, the last pair being Preen and Parody. They turned and cantered in the same order and the white flag was hoisted at 3-20. A capital start was effected five minutes later, the first to show in front being Florinda from Cliftonhall, Wavelet's Pride, Seahorse II., and Prince Florizel, with Likely Bird next in advance of McYardley, Mardonius, and Orbel, the whipper in being Throwaway for a quarter of a mile, when Preen struck into the heels of Orbel and fell, and Likely Bird drew out with a clear lead of Florinda, Orbel, and Seahorse II., and Wavelet's Pride, with Prince Florizel, and Mardonius, heading the remainder. So they ran till six furlongs from home, where Orbel took second place behind Likely Bird, their immediate attendants being Florinda, Cliftonhall, Seahorse II., Wavelet's Pride, McYardley, and Prince Florizel, till a quarter of a mile from home, when Throwaway dashed to the front, followed by Cliftonhall and McYardley, and the latter coming with a wet sail inside the distance, won cleverly by three-quarters of a length ; two lengths separated the second and third Likely Bird was placed fourth by the judge, Cliftonhall was fifth, Florinda sixth Orbel seventh, and Parody eighth, Mardonius next, and Seahorse II., last. Time by Benson's chronograph 3mins 2secs.

THE CONVIVAL PRODUCE STAKES—Of 490 sovs, for two-year olds. Five furlongs.

Mr L de Rothschild's ch f Catgut, by Lactantius—Catkin, 8st 2lbs ..	K Cannon	1

Mr C T Pulley's Lester, 8st 2lbs ...	Miller	0
„ T W P Rivise's Rosebury, 8st 13lbs ...	Fagan	0

(Winner trained by Watson.)

BETTING : 5 to 4 on Melodious, 6 to 4 agst Catgut, and 100 to 8 any other (off).

Won cleverly by a head ; six lengths between second and third. Lester was last.

Having been threatened with rain and unsettled weather on the first two days at York, the closing stages of the meeting fully justified the anticipations earlier made that rain would fall before the last race, as the curtain was rung down in a regular downpour. Naturally these circumstances and the fact that the Ebor was over very materially affected the attendance, which however, was still large, in view of the Gimcrack and Great Yorkshire Stakes. The card comprised six events, and business was resumed with the Stand Selling Handicap, for which fourteen runners faced the starter. Still in bad luck, backers selected Chain Mail to win, but the filly was not even placed. Madden continued in the winning vein when he landed Wild Night Again in the Harewood Handicap Plate, and then, Mr. J. Cannon's Chamois having accounted for the Lowther Selling Handicap, the way was paved for the historic Gimcrack Stakes. Exactly a dozen went to the post, and at once Andover and Barbette were chosen as the pick of the lot, and justified the confidence reposed in them by finishing first and second, although the actual favourite, Andover, failed to get home. In the Great Yorkshire Stakes Firmilian, ridden by W. Lane, made all the running and won by three-quarters of a length from Lovat, after which Mr. L. Brassey's Wild Oats, in the hands of K. Cannon, brought the proceedings to a close by winning the Fairfield Plate.

CRICKET.

SUSSEX vs. YORKSHIRE.—Played at Brighton on 24th, 25th and 26th August. Sussex won by four wickets. So heavy was the rain on Sunday night and the early hours of Monday, that play in this important match did not begin until just after four o'clock. Even then it was only possible because of a high and drying wind, and the well-known quickness of the Hove ground to recover from the effects of wet. The Yorkshiremen won the toss, and played such a deliberate game that when a storm broke over the ground after the game had been in progress for fifty five minutes, only 22 runs had been scored. The rain put an end to play for the day. Ernest Smith was not out 5, and Tunnicliffe not out 11. There was a full day's play on Tuesday, of which Sussex had decidedly the best. For a time Ernest Smith and Tunnicliffe were in such good form that, although the pitch was very difficult, they each seemed quite likely to run up a big score. But when once they were parted the end came with startling rapidity, not a single man except Whitehead who made 8 runs, being able to make anything of Cox or Tate, the latter having the fine record of six wickets for 31 for the innings. From the way in which the Yorkshire bowlers made the batsmen uncomfortable when Sussex went to the wickets, it did not seem at all likely that the Yorkshire total would be exceeded. So difficult were they to play that Fry and Vine took twenty minutes to score the first half-dozen runs between them, while Killick was in for twenty minutes without scoring. When play was adjourned on account of the bad light the total was only 17. Lunch was then taken, and when play was resumed Rhodes dismissed Vine at 24, and Ranjitsinhji at 25 ; Vine was at the wickets an hour for his nine runs. With four wickets down for 25, P. H. Latham and Brann came together, with encouraging results for Sussex, for before they were separated they had increased the total by 59 runs in an hour and five minutes. Both played splendid cricket, Brann occasionally making a fine drive. Eventually he was bowled by High after playing an invaluable innings of 43 in an hour and a half. Relf also played well, and the last two men, Tate and Butt, put on 21 runs. Yorkshire had to go in against a balance of 60, and lost Brown for six runs before the day's play ended, so that their prospect of success were by no means great. Yesterday Cox and Tate were again in great form, and before Yorkshire drew level, Tunnicliffe, Denton and Hirst were all out. Then Wilkinson was bowled, and five wickets were down for 63. Meanwhile Ernest Smith had been playing a great game, and he received very useful help from Rhodes. But when the innings came to an end Sussex only had to make 37 to win. The task seemed almost ridiculously easy, but when Fry was bowled without scoring and Killick dismissed with the total at 6, things did not look very well. Ranjitsinhji and Vine brought the score to 18 by lunch time, so that only 24 runs were now required. When Ranjitsinhji was bowled at 25, Sussex seemed to have the game in hand, but the Yorkshiremen never despaired, and it was not until six wickets had fallen that Sussex could claim the victory. Vine's innings of 20 was, under the circumstances, a magnificent effort.

PEDESTRIANISM.

REMARKABLE RUNNING BY LEN HURST.—Len Hurst, the celebrated professional long-distance runner, accomplished a fine performance at Brighton last evening, when, on the track at Preston Park cricket ground, he made a successful attack on records over twenty miles up to twenty-five. The magnitude of the task he undertook can be understood when we state that the previous figures have stood for twenty-two years, they having been made by George Mason at Lillie Bridge in March, 1881. The figures for that occasion are appended :—

For yesterday's event, Mr. J. T. Hulls was timekeeper and referee, whilst the arrangements were made by Mr. Perry Wylde, of the Two Brewers' Hotel, Ponder's End. The conditions were all in favour of Hurst, as though the sky was overcast, it remained fine. Very little wind was felt, and the track was in splendid condition. Unfortunately, the attendance fell short of expectations, not numbering more than five hundred, and the meeting must, therefore, have resulted in considerable loss to the promoters, as a heavy price had to be paid to the Brighton Corporation for the use of the ground.

Gunmaker Birmingham, England.

Punctually to the advertised time, half-past four Hurst toed the mark, and was sent on his journey. For the first five miles he was paced by Tom Olliver, of Brighton, who kept him hard at work. Subsequently Len's brother Joe took a turn, in company with Charles Munroe, on a bicycle, but the greater portion of the work in this direction was done by Olliver, who, with only a couple of rests, kept with Hurst during twenty miles of the journey. For the first fifteen miles, Len kept well outside Mason's figures, but subsequently he went exceedingly well, and, keeping an unbroken stride, he got inside them at the twentieth mile. He afterwards left them well in the rear, and ultimately beat Mason's twenty-five mile record by 2mins 58secs. He finished very fit, and, needless to state, met with a big reception. Hurst's mile times were:

The Amateur record stood at 2hrs. 33min. 44secs by G. A. Dunning at Stamford Bridge, 25th December 1881.

CYCLING.

The delegates of the International Cycle Union resolved yesterday evening to annul the amateur two kilometres race for the championship of the world. The final heat between the Englishmen, Benyon and Reed, and the German, Engelmann, will be run off at Amsterdam on 30th August or 6th September As the German Union has prohibited Engelmann from racing again, the Council of the German Union has been telegraphed to the effect that Germany will be excluded from the International Union should the prohibition be maintained. Engelmann will be disqualified should he refuse to race. In the latter case the race will take place in England.

RECORD RIDE BY MISS M. FOSTER.—When Miss Maggie Foster, who is without doubt one of the finest lady cyclists, announced her intention of going for her own Brighton and back record, and had a schedule worked out to 5hrs. 45mins, or nearly half an hour better than her time of 6hrs. 23mins, 58sec, made just over six years ago, the task was thought impossible. A few, however, who have witnessed her work on the road and track thought otherwise, but were not prepared for time being beaten by 50mins 50secs. The favourite starting point, viz. the "Old Man's," Coulsdon, was adhered to, and shortly after 4 A.M., in a chilly atmosphere Miss Foster with G. Foster pacing on a "Bat" motor cycle, started on her journey. An exceptional run was made to Hyde Park and back (30 miles), in 1hr. 22mins, Miss Foster beating her previous time for this part by 14min, and the men's time when on the same record attempt by 3mins, having so early gained 12mins, on her schedule. Crawley was passed 2hrs. 7mins, from the start, with 13mins, better than the time sheet, and the Brighton Aquarium where some refreshment was taken, was timed at 3hrs. 21mins, from the start. The journey back to Coulsion, where cyclists innumerable were waiting to see the finish, was soon accomplished, although the ride was not without certain exciting incidents. Miss Foster, who was riding a B.S.A. spring frame cycle, with Constrictor tyres reached the starting point, having covered the 101 miles in the extraordinary time of 5hrs. 3 mins 8secs. or 50mins 50secs. better than her record made in August, 1897. The time was taken by W. L Woolveridge and A. J. Ockleford.

THE WEASEL.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

AFTER the extraordinarily fine series of runs straight off the reel enjoyed by the above illustrious pack, my sad task last week of recording three runless days was so depressing that it was with anxious expectation I awaited the verdict of the sportsmen whose graphic description of the various days help me to pen my humble chronicles, and it was with a sense of heartfelt relief that I viewed beaming faces which anticipated the welcome news of an exceptionally brilliant run. The sixth mile stone on the Ahmednagar Road was the place of assembly—a very favourite meet I hear it is, safe for a run if there's a jack in the countryside and rare sporting going. It was therefore not surprising that despite recent disappointments a large field turned up, fearing the worst, but hoping fervently for the best, and vowing libations (from hunting flasks) to chaste Diana, goddess of the Sport of Kings and the Image of War, if she would but deign to vouchsafe to her faithful followers in the Deccan a straight-necked jack. Nor did they plead in vain For Her Divinity provided a jack so huge and such a phenomenal galloper that some of the field still aver that it was one of Mowgli's brethren—one of the galloping grey wolves of which there are more than a few still in these parts.

Jogging along a brace of miles on the hard high road the Master threw hounds in to a likely sugarcane patch near the eighth mile stone and hearts sank when the horn's mournful note sounded the "drawn blank." Grasping the gravity of the moment and feeling that after three blank days the field were yearning for a gallop Colonel Sheringham gave the order for an extended line to avoid the chance of an outlying jack slipping up one of the numerous small ravines unobserved. After going a short distance in open order one of the field viewed away a frolicsome little buck chinkara, which with an earnest desire to make everyone concerned as cheery and merry as itself jumped up in front of hounds and bounded off gleefully. Failing the Simon Pure, the Master promptly accepted what gifts the gods might send and clapped hounds on to the line Scarcely had he done so when a jovial brewer view holloa'd the genuine varmint sneaking away, and Colonel Sheringham grasped the state of affairs in a flash and the discipline and handiness of hounds and the promptitude of the first whip were, I am told, a treat, for with wonderfully little delay the Master had the entire pack on to the line of the fresh quarry. Handy as ladies' maids indeed must hounds have been, since over twenty couple were out that morning. But scant time was afforded for panegyrics, for away streaked the pack at racing speed and men had to sit down and ride all they knew to live with them. Away towards a neighbouring hill near the village of Kesnand and across the Ahmednagar Road they flung along with relentless drive and horses, saving the first flighters, tailed off in the most pitiable way in the first mile, testifying to the pace. Twenty-five minutes of the fastest gallop of the season I am assured it was when the rare stout, galloping varmint led hounds to the bottom of the hill without once having run to view. Hot foot they raced straight up the hillside so steep that no one had the heart to put horses at it and "dismount and lead" was the order, and by the time any one got to the brow hounds were out of sight in the valley below. After an interval hounds returned to the Master's horn and a hound had a bite mark on the muzzle from which a deduction was drawn that hounds had killed. A search, however, failed to discover the mangled corpse and an old and seasoned shikari, whom I have the privilege of knowing, gives it as his opinion that everything points to the opinion of the few who insist that hounds were running not a jack but a Deccan wolf. Jackal or wolf, it was a great run and a veritable red letter day in the annals of the hunt.

Truly luck follows luck. The exceptionally brilliant run from the Ahmednagar Road sixth milestone was followed by another excellent day on Thursday, the 10th. The favourite meet of Kalas Ford was the one on the card and a cloudy sky and a slight drizzle presaged a good lying scent Drawing along the banks of the river hounds soon began to feather briskly, and confirming the hint raced off to a breast high scent with a joyous burst of melody and the pace was quite of the very best. On they galloped in the direction of the illustrious Two Sister Hills, hounds going I hear with a great drive which was quite irresistible. This sprinting jack found it so, and after taking a fleeting shelter in some standing crop he vainly tried to evade his relentless enemies in a pool of water. "Tear 'im and eat 'im" was the order of the day and hound tore him to bits with such gluttonous fury that it was with difficulty Colonel Sheringham could save the usual trophies A rare keen lot of hounds they are and a treat should be in store for hound lovers lucky enough to get them when the Poona Hunting Season comes to an all too early conclusion.

But the little bonne bouche above related was not all the good luck in store for the lucky folk out that morning. A couple of hounds had gone off on line of their own and to these the Master now turned his attention. Keen eyes viewed the first whip a long way off and the Master grasping that something worthy of special attention going on forrard lifted hounds with little delay, when the pack at once owned to the line so carefully worked out by the truant couple aforesaid. But where the remarkable coincidence comes in is that two or three men who got a view declare unhesitatingly that it was on this occasion at any rate a wolf and not a jackal. A great run ensued and those who shared in it are loud in its praise. Up hill and down dale, rock stones and nullahs with ever and anon a stretch of splendid turf going to swing along over. Naturally the field began to tail out, but hounds kept pegging along, wonderfully well together I hear. Over a ridge of hills and down into the level below towards the village of Chobisa and into some standing crops which gave this Aryan lupus his life, for after patient eager hunting hounds had to give it up. Hard lines on them, and it would be most interesting to see how Colonel Sheringham's beauties would tackle a grey wolf. Doubtless they would not be found wanting. It was then found that the run had finished up close to Alandi on the Indryani, eleven miles from home. A rare fine run and lucky indeed were those who ran it.

SCARAMOUCH.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

The meet on the 7th instant was at Sandy Nullah Toll Bar and the weather was all that could be desired. The swamps below the 6th milestone on the Pykara Road and Dattmoor Valley were drawn without success. Wapshare Hare Shola was also blank, but at last the hounds started on a scent above the river in the Yemakal Valley and the jack provided a good run. He made first up the valley, then turned left handed to Yemakal Shola past which he was caught after a sharp burst, the hounds sticking to him all the way.

Cycling.

CYCLING IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Friday, 28th August 1903.

A REVOLUTION in the cab traffic of London may be shortly expected. The London Express Motor Service announce that in the course of a few weeks fifty motor cabs of a handsome and serviceable type will be placed on the streets. The car is petrol driven by a two-cylinder engine of 12-horse-power and has three speeds. The car is rather larger than the existing horse-drawn cab, and there is more room inside The driver sits in front of the passengers, but at one side, and there is an additional drop-seat next him, which can be utilised when wanted. The front can be raised or lowered by the passenger by a spring attachment, and there is a distance indicator, so that disputes can be avoided There is room for luggage in a boot at the back of the vehicle, and also on the floor by the side of the driver.

A few years back when the cycle trade was under a cloud, a great demand for ladies' cycles set in, and in many cases this proved the salvation of manufacturers, pulling them through the terrible "slump," and saving many firms from "going under." Now, however, the cycle makers report a drop in the output of ladies' bicycles, and the reason is said to be that ladies cannot endure the increasing discomfort which they are forced to endure through the rapdid passage of motor-cars and motor cycles. There may be some ground for this statement, but perhaps another season for the decrease of lady cyclists is that some of the ladies have themselves abandoned the bicycle for the fiercer joys of motoring.

A wonderful ride by a woman, Miss Maggie Foster, has just been accomplished. Shortly after 4 A.M., on the 25th, in a chilly atmosphere, Miss Foster, paced by her brother, G. Foster, on a motor bicycle, started on her journey in an endeavour to break her own Brighton and back record. An exceptional run was made to Hyde Park from Coulsdon (30 miles) in one hour 22 mins. Crawley was passed in 2 hours 7 mins. from the start, and the Brighton Aquarium was timed at 3 hours 24 mins. The journey back to Coulsdon was soon accomplished, where a hugh crowd of cyclists were waiting to see the finish. Miss Foster covered the 104 miles in the wonderfully fast time of 5 hours 33 mins. 8 secs., or 50 mins. 50 secs. better than her record made so long ago as 1897.

We should imagine it would be impossible to procure a better tyre than the Dunlop, which is vulcanised by a special process. By this method of manufacture, the bugbear of tyres developing boils through the dust and dirt of the road finding its way into cuts in the cover is efficiently overcome. Owing to the principle of construction, the Dunlop tyre is exceptionally durable, and will undergo an extraordinary amount of rough usage.

In many out-of-the-way districts in the country accessibility to the various railway stations is often very difficult, entailing long drives by car. For the convenience of people living in remote parts of the country, the Great Western Railway have decided to establish road motor-car services as feeders to the various railway stations. Between outlying villages and small towns in different parts of the country, needing improved travelling facilities, these vehicles will furnish links. A beginning has been made with a road motor-car service between Helston and the Lizard, and has proved so successful and is being so well patronised, that many more cars are in course of being placed on the roads for the convenience of the public.

A rider relates his experience of a puncture gained in a very peculiar manner. He was spinning along at an ordinary speed when suddenly a little furry brown animal darted from an embankment and ran across the road right in front of his wheel. At once an ominous hissing sound proclaimed a puncture, and the rider got off to examine his tyre, and there sure enough were the marks of the little creature's teeth through both sides of the tyre and tube alike. The little animal had actually bitten through the tyre in its dying moments.

At Coventry, Henry Godfrey, labourer, Kingfields, an ex-artilleryman, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment for stealing a bicycle, of which he was bailee. Prisoner hired the machine, but did not return it, and induced another man to sell it. Prisoner on being sentenced struck the dock-rail violently, knocking the wood-work in, and exclaimed "Oh, good God, and for an innocent man!"

Two charges of stealing bicycles were heard against John Williamson, at Manchester. The prisoner obtained possession of one bicycle from the shop of a dealer on the pretence that he required it in order to fetch a deposit for two other machines which he had instructed the dealer to make. The same day the bicycle was pawned. A week or two later the prisoner suddenly vanished from a house, where he had been staying, and took with him another bicycle, which he also afterwards pawned. A further charge of stealing a suit of clothes from a tailor's shop was preferred against the prisoner, who obtained the clothes by first ordering a suit and then asking for one for temporary wear. The magistrate sentenced him to a month's imprisonment in each of the three cases.

CRICKET AT HOME.

A MEMBER OF M. C. C. sends us the following notes on the match between Surrey and Middlesex, and on "Lord's" topics generally :—Whatever may be the result of the match at the Oval between Middlesex and Surrey, it can hardly be claimed by the most enthusiastic Lordsman that his men displayed championship form in the opening stages. At the time of writing there is every appearance of a wet night—and with a glass as steadily unsteady as we have had of late, the probabilities, of course, are all in favour of "streaky" weather. Wherefore Middlesex undoubtedly hold a fairly strong position. For this they are indebted almost entirely to G. W. Beldam, who, I suppose, has rarely, if ever, displayed such extreme caution. Altogether on Thursday afternoon he was at the wickets for 265 minutes, and in that time saw the score taken from 3 to 228, of which his own share was 112. From time to time he was somewhat freely "barracked,"—but it is nonsense, as I heard some remark, to talk of "Oval form," the Lord's crowd is on occasion every whit as bad—and, of course, there is every excuse for spectators to show their impatience now and again.

But to return to Beldam. Unquestionably his play was tedious in the extreme to watch, but what else could he do? He is never a forcing bat, and with Warner, Moon, and Douglas all gone if ever there was a time to keep his wicket up at all costs it was then. As to the dismissal of the three for 13 between them, it was simply a case of bad cricket. The ground was slowish, and Richardson jumped up a little occasionally, but so far as I could see there was no earthly reason for so feeble a show. No doubt the Middlesex men lately have not had much match practice, but nearly all the while that the match ground at Lord's has been under water, very possibly a fact that has had a great deal to do with deciding the championship, play has been possible at the nets on the practice ground, and one would have thought that full advantage would have been taken of this. But Richardson bowled for 105 minutes on Thursday straight away, and had about 20 to 30 runs made off him, ball after ball on the off being let off through the batsmen hitting over or under, and generally mistiming him.

Besanquet looked like getting some runs till Strudwich took him very smartly on the legside, and it is to be hoped that if a similar incident occurs in Australia that this gentleman will retire to the Pavilion with a trifle more alacrity and a little less obvious dissatisfaction than he displayed at the Oval.

As a matter of fact, I should doubt very much if Besanquet—good and useful all round man though he be—will ever be wanted in any of the five Tests. Indeed, I look on him as about the weakest of the fourteen going out, though I shall be only too delighted to find myself quite wrong in this estimate, and to see him add still further to his reputation; for on sentimental and private grounds I would rather he came off than any man in the team. To my mind, though he is lacking in "class," he is about as dangerous a man now playing against second class bowling and fielding, and every now and again his bowling has accounted for a veritable collapse. He is, however, a most uncertain catch and casual fieldsman—and—well, I do not want to labour it but to my mind quite out of place in a representative team. As, before said, however, no one will be more gratified than the writer of these prognostications prove entirely beside the mark.

There is more talk—and I do hope it will eventuate in action—of the M.C.C. Australian team meeting a Rest of England side on 17th September and following days; and the venue suggested is—don't laugh—Lords! But then, of course, everybody knows that when once the cricket season proper is over, we shall really get a little cricket weather! early morning dew, and long shadows at 5 o'clock notwithstanding.

CALCUTTA SENIOR RUGBY CUP.

1ST ROUND.

CALCUTTA vs. CUSTOMS.—The Tournament started with this match on the 9th instant played on the Calcutta ground. The visitors were quite outclassed by their opponents who were the heavier team, and who displayed better combination. The Customs kicked off and rushing down Maitland receiving from Rowe got over with a try, Anderson adding the goal points. But Calcutta soon got together and the game till the interval was in the Customs' half. Dundas scored two tries and Whitie registered a third which Martelli converted. The teams changed ends with Calcutta leading by 11 points to 5. The home team continued to have the best of matters throughout the second half and except for an occasional rush by Rowe or Templeton the visitors were never dangerous. Newton dropped a splendid goal from half field and the brothers Siddons and McEwan each crossed the line, Martelli doing the needful on each occasion. Calcutta thus won by 5 goals (1 drop) and 2 tries to 1 goal (30 points to 5). Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Newton, back; A. Siddons F. Siddons, Martelli, and Dundas, three-quarters; MacDonald and McEwan, half-backs; Pope, Berridge, Dunlop, Simson, Dick Whitie, Heilgers, and Brown, forwards.

CUSTOMS.—Andersons back; Maitland, Templeton, Harris, and Wilson, three-quarters; Rowe and Shave, half-backs; Codd, Price, Farlam, Hogan, Fitzgerald, Harcourt, Petly, and Arratoon forwards

Referee.—Mr Browne.

UNITED SERVICE vs. CALCUTTA UNITED.—Played on the Calcutta ground last Thursday, the United Service team winning by 28 points to 5. The Services kicked off and at once showed their superiority, a dribble by McLeod resulting in a try. The place failed as did nearly all the place kicks owing to the greasy state of the ground and ball. Landon was the next to cross the line after a smart bout of passing. Bagshawe and Margery added tries, Arundell converting the latter's. McLeod and Crawford also got over with tries, McLeod adding the major points to Crawford's try. The interval arrived with the Services leading by 22 points to nil Play was very scrambling during the second period and the Calcutta United showed up better. Porteous got away and registered a try which McKay converted with a fine kick. Then the Service's team got command again and Landon and Margery put on two more tries, neither of which were improved upon. The Services thus won by 2 goals and 6 tries (28 points) to 1 goal (5 points) Teams:—

UNITED SERVICE.—Maxwell, back; Bagshawe, Landon, Margery and Stebbing, three-quarters; Crawford and Arundell, halves; Gardiner, Szczepanski, McLeod, Walker, Richie, Bruce Thompson, and Stevenson, forwards.

CALCUTTA UNITED. Boo, back; King. Platts, Vears and Reynolds, three-quarters; F. Hamilon and Porteous, halves; Seth, Grosser, Rozario, McKay, A. Hamilton, Piggott, David and Rowels, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. O. Rowe, Customs.

WELSH REGT. vs. CITY F. C.—These teams met on the City ground last Tuesday and a hard game resulted in a victory for the Welshmen by 14 points to nil. The home team played hard but were lacking in combination; however they got away on several occasions and were twice unfortunate in not scoring. The Welshmen were the better team and in the first half got over the line with two tries, Daly and Thomas being credited with the points. Neither try was converted, but in the second moiety Daly and Morgan added two more tries, Doble placing a fine goal from the second. The Welsh thus won by a goal and three tries to nil.

WELSH REGIMENT.—Williams, back; Mr. Montgomery, Jones, Harper and Morgan, three-quarters; Daly and Watts, halves; Gibson, Doble, Jones, Davis, Thomas, Floyd and Bartlett, forwards.

CITY.—Lees, back; W. Cunliffe, Schaumberg, Warden and Michael, three-quarters; Williams and Grieff, halves; Ewing, F. Cunliffe, Le Strange, Platts, Street, Stedwell, Johnstone and Sarkies, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Martelli, C. F. C.

MADRAS vs. WEST RIDINGS.—A great deal of interest was taken in the meeting of these foreign teams on the Calcutta ground last Tuesday. The West Ridings proved themselves a good team and superior to the Madras men who were not strongly represented. The military took the game to the Madras "25" at once, but Cattell relieved and got in some good runs. The Madras men time after time worked the ball to midfield, but it was returned and after several scrums near the line Beaumont scored the first try for the West Ridings; the place failed, but before half time Oates had added a second try, no goal resulting. On resuming scrums in midfield and punting exchanges were the features of the opening play. Madras got away and a good run was spoiled by a knock on, Beaumont then got a pass and with a fine run crossed the line with a third try. S. Smith registered a fourth soon after and Highlands converted, the West Ridings, thus won by a goal and three tries (14 points) to nil. Teams :—

WEST RIDINGS.—Quin, back; Beaumont, Harrison, Flaherty and Highlands, three-quarters; Reeves and Halgate, halves; Lieutenant Gribbon, Riley, S. Smith, Robinson, J. Smith, Lester, Oates, and Garwin, forwards.

MADRAS GYMKHANA.—Paris, back; Bayley, Haughton, Allan and Robinson, three-quarters; Cattell, and Rickets, halves; Barret, Johnstone, Glauville, Rolland, Braithwaite, De Gruchy, Buckly and Hutchinson, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. R. Connew.

SECOND ROUND.

CALCUTTA A vs. UNITED SERVICE.—Played on the Calcutta ground last Saturday, a fine game resulting in a win for the home team by two goals and a try to nil. The United Service men had a strong team out but Calcutta were without Curtis Hayward, Berridge and McEwan. Whitie kicked off for Calcutta and after some hot scrums the home pack forced their way down, Cooper getting over with the try, Martelli added the major points with a fine kick. A free to the visitors for offside against Bell gave them no advantage and play ruled midfield. Then the Service three quarters got away but Newton saved. Good play by Martelli and Cooper brought the ball back and a free was conceded to Calcutta, Newton just failing to place the goal. On resuming after half time the home team attacked and Cooper once more crossed the line; Martelli took the place which went wide. The United Service men played hard and Dr. Wilson was conspicuous Landon and Bagshawe nearly got through but were brought up by Newton. Crawford next came away but was collared. Cooper relieved and the home three-quarters took the ball to the visitors 25, where from some hot scrums Whitie picked up and got over with the third try. Martelli kicked a grand goal and Calcutta were left victors by 13 points to nil.

CALCUTTA.—Newton, back; A. Siddons, F. Siddons, Martelli and Dundas, three-quarters; MacDonald and Bell, halves; Whitie, McLeod, Dick, Heligers, P. H. Browne, Cooper and Pope, forwards.

UNITED SERVICE.—Maxwell, back; Bagshaw, Landon, Margery, and Stebbing, three-quarters; Crawford and Arundell, halves; Gardiner, Szczpanski, McLeod, Walker, Richie, Bruce, Stevenson and Dr. Wilson, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. R. Connew.

ARMENIAN CLUB vs. CALCUTTA "B" TEAM.—A large gathering witnessed this match on the Calcutta ground on the 14th instant. Neither side were at full strength, but the visitors were the quicker team and eventually beat their opponents by a goal and three tries to nil. The Armenians took the ball into the Calcutta "25" where several scrums took place, the visitors losing some opportunities through bad passing. An attempt at a drop by Joakim failed and the home team took the ball back to midfield. But the Calcutta "25" was again invaded and A. S. Apcar ran over with the first try, Staynor failing to add the major points. On crossing over after the interval the Armenians took the ball down and from a scrum near the home line H. Apcar put the ball over. The place again failed, but the visitors returned to the charge and Peters scored the third try, Simmons placing a good goal. The Calcutta men then pressed, but lost some chances from weak passing. A. S. Apcar then got possession and a fine run resulted in another try. No goal resulted, and time was called with the Armenians victors, as stated. Teams :—

ARMENIAN CLUB.—Mathews, back; Joakim, Gregory, Simmons, and A. S. Apcar, three-quarter backs; H. Apcar and Manuk, half-backs; Peters, Staynor, P. John, S. John, Akone, Matine, Vardon, and Micheal, forwards.

CALCUTTA "B" TEAM.—Sherman, back; Hemmingway, Granley, Morley, and Stevens, three-quarter backs; Park and King, half-backs; Clayton, Harris, Knoxord, France, Vick, Langford, Black, and Horncastle, forwards.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE "Lover of Football" who presented such a handsome Bowl for place kicking must have been more than satisfied by the amount of interest the competition engendered as well as by the close and exciting nature of the contest. The attendance was quite as large as generally assembles for even a Rugger Cup Tie match and amongst the competitors were to be found all the best place kickers of the Calcutta F. C.

The kicking, however was poor in the extreme as both Martelli and Newton, who tied for first place could not do better than 5 goals out of a possible 10, whilst those who were considered to have the best chances of winning the trophy, viz., France, C. M. Browne and Dick, were exceptionally disappointing. Nervousness was largely responsible for many poor attempts, but on several occasions, notably in front of goal, great carelessness was displayed as to placing the ball which could not result otherwise than in failure.

Martelli's win was a very popular one, but the honours rest with the veteran Calcutta Captain Newton, who only succumbed after a ding-dong struggle in which the excitement was maintained right up to the winning kick.

The Rugby competition started in very promising fashion on Saturday last with a keen, close and hard-fought game between Calcutta and the United Services which resulted in a win for the former by 2 goals and 1 try to nil.

Neither side was at full strength as the Services were without that fine forward, Browne, whilst both Berridge and MacEwan were unable to assist Calcutta owing to injuries

The game was principally a forward one and both packs appeared very evenly matched. In the tight packs the Services had the better of the argument, but the premier club were vastly superior in the loose and it was this superiority that eventually won them the match.

CALCUTTA.

Despite their victory the Calcutta display was far from encouraging. As I have had occasion to remark before, they have far too many men amongst the forwards who shine in the open to the detriment of honest hard work in the scrum, and there can be no more convincing proof of this than last Saturday's match in which the heavy Calcutta forwards were repeatedly beaten in the tight scrimmages by men who were appreciably lighter and who had not had the advantage of playing together on more than a few occasions. McLeod, Heilgers, and Dick worked very hard throughout and Whittle on most occasions was seen to be doing his share, but Cooper's brilliancy in the open was quite neutralised by the fact that he was little better than a "passenger" when real hard work was required.

Macdonald and Bell at half had few opportunities, as the ball was seldom heeled out to them, but the former was not at his best as he failed to make openings for the men behind him and passed erratically, whereas Bell, who is essentially a forward, proved slow in getting the ball away. Thus hampered by their forwards and lacking combination they proved no match for Crawford and Arundel who both played a really fine game, when the former somewhat spoilt by sticking to the ball too long.

The three-quarters on both sides had very little to do, but Landon and Bagshaw were most prominent for the Services and had they been kept going would assuredly have broken through the Calcutta defence. Martelli played his usual sound game for the winners and Dundas was conspicuous for some dashing runs and clever fielding, but the elder Siddons again failed to maintain his reputation and seldom gave his brother a chance which he could profitably have done on more than one occasion. Both the full backs, Newton and Maxwell, were good and Wilson, Stevenson and Szczepanski were the pick of the Service forwards who all played a hard dashing game throughout.

Prior to the above match Calcutta had met and easily defeated the Customs, in the first round of the competition, by no less than 30 points to 5. The game commenced in startling fashion as soon after the kick off the Customs ran down and from a loose rush Maitland obtained possession and scored after a clever dodging run. The home team, however, soon pulled themselves together and from this point had matters entirely in their own hands. The Calcutta forwards packed well and heeled cleanly and both McDonald and MacEwan did all that was required of them most satisfactorily, and this resulted in several pretty bouts of passing by the three-quarters. Both Rowe and Maitland were prominent for strong running and hard tackling and Petly and Fitzgerald worked well in the pack, but the team as a whole were clearly outclassed by their heavier and cleverer opponents.

The other match in the first round between the United Services and Calcutta United permits of little or no description, as the Services scored almost when and where they pleased and even easily ran out the easiest possible winners by a large margin. The Calcutta United men showed plenty of pluck, but they had only a very crude knowledge of the game, whilst their tackling was entirely the reverse of the accepted style of hard and low.

In consequence of several men being held in reserve for the Calcutta A team, in case of accidents, the side which represented the B team of the premier club against the Armenian Club on Monday last was a very poor one and at no period of the game did they look like beating their opponents. The Armenian's played a scrambling game and one much below their usual standard, but the individual cleverness and pace of their three-quarters, notably Apcar and Joakim, combined with the weak tackling of the Calcutta three quarters, enabled them to cross the line on four occasions. For Calcutta Hemingway, King, Horncastle and Vick played best, but the general display was feeble in the extreme.

The Armenian Club have now to meet the Calcutta A team in the semi-final, and it is to be hoped that Yackjee will have sufficiently recovered from his accident to assist them. At the same time Calcutta should not experience much difficulty in winning although the Armenians may be relied upon to play a hard game of which their splendid tackling and kicking are the principal features.

Everyone was pleased when the news went round that Madras had, after all, been able to raise a team for the tournament, but they were somewhat handicapped by their inability to arrive before Monday morning as they were thus unable to have any practice matches before their meeting with the West Riding Regiment, which took place before a large concourse of spectators on Tuesday on the Calcutta ground. The game which was very fast throughout went in favour of the military from the start, their forwards, although somewhat on the small side, quite outplayed the Gymkhana eight both in the packs and loose work. Madras were unfortunately unable to bring their full side, and their weakness was especially noticeable amongst the forwards where the brunt of the work fell on five or six men. The West Ridings on the other hand are in the pink of condition and atone for their lack of weight by considerable dash and clever footwork. The half-backs are as fast and resourceful a pair as any team could wish to possess, whilst the three quarters combine great speed with a thorough knowledge of the game. The only fault to be found is a certain amount of hesitancy in running together with a tendency to pass high and forward.

The opening item was the result of a clever opening by Oates who handed to Beaumont, and the latter after kicking over the head of the opposing back just managed to score a somewhat lucky try. Shortly after this Oates himself got over and neither of the tries being converted the military led by 6 points at the interval. After the restart Holgate got the ball away to his partner who handing to Beaumont enabled the speedy winger to register a third try. Madras broke away on several occasions subsequently, Buckley being prominent for a good individual effort, but they lacked combination and failed at the critical moment. Another try to the West Ridings from a forward rush was the last score of the match and they thus qualified for the semi-final by 14 points to nil.

For the winners Oates and Beaumont were the pick of the back division, whilst Holgate appeared to be more reliable than his partner Reeves. The forwards all played a hard untiring game and if they can hold the heavy Welshmen, when the two teams meet on Thursday, I shall expect them to prove superior outside the scrimmage.

Haughton, who is possessed of great pace, played a great game for Madras, and Cattell showed good defence, but the inability of the Gymkhana forwards to obtain possession of the ball gave the outside men little or no opportunity for showing their capabilities.

Contrary to expectation the City put up a good game against the Welsh Regiment who eventually won by 1 goal and 3 tries to nil but the match was marred by a lot of unnecessary foul play on both sides, especially during the last quarter of an hour. The combination of the Welsh was considerably below the standard of previous years, whilst their tackling, though rather too robust, was decidedly uncertain. Doble was as usual noticeable for good work out of touch, but the men were slow in breaking up, and the footwork showed room for improvement. Watts and Daly were clever as usual, but found Referee Martelli more than a match for some of their "tricky" tactics. Morgan was the pick of the three-quarters, who, with the exception of one brilliant bout, did not show to particular advantage.

The City Captain, Williams, played a really fine game for his side—his defence and generally spoiling tactics being quite first class. Grieff worked hard but would improve his game by appealing less frequently, a fault which is very prevalent with the entire team.

THE DURAND TOURNAMENT.

ROYAL IRISH RIFLES vs. WELSH REGT.—This, the opening match of the Tournament, was played at Simla on the 4th instant. The ground was very heavy and slippery after the recent rain, but the Irish seemed quite at home and beat their opponents by five goals to nil. They started off and rushed the ball into the Welsh territory where a shot at goal failed. The Welsh worked the ball back and play ruled even for a while. Then the Irishman once more invaded the opposing half and notched their first goal. After half time, the Welsh goal-keeper was kept busy, and for the first part saved in great style. Then the Irish scored two goals in succession. Harcourt played a grand game for the Welsh, but all their efforts were useless and the Rifles returned to the charge and netted two more goals before time was called. Teams:—

ROYAL IRISH RIFLES.—Elphick, goal; Fisher and Hanna, three-quarter backs; Craig, Morris, and Heggarty, half backs; Connolly, Lewis, Edmond, Rose and Smith, forwards.

WELSH REGIMENT.—Adams, goal; Simon and Garlick, three quarter backs; Smith, Llewelyn, and Lieutenant Harcourt, half-backs; Richards, Robinson, Lieutenant Mathias, Shipstone, and Moss, forwards.

BLACK WATCH vs. SIMLA NEW CLUB A.—Played at Simla on the 15th instant, a grand game resulting in a win for the Black Watch by two goals to one. The play was very fast and all the goals were secured in the first half. The New Club team showed fine form, the backs and goalkeeper doing good work. The Black Watch were frequently penalised for offside. In the second half both teams worked very hard, but no further scoring took place, the Black Watch winning as stated.

FOOTBALL IN BOMBAY.

BOMBAY PRESIDENCY vs. ALL INDIA.—This match was arranged by the Bombay Rovers' Association Football Committee in aid of the Nurses' Fund of the European General Hospital and was played before a large gathering on the 10th instant. The players were picked from teams entered in the tournament and a good game was witnessed. Up and down play opened the match and then the All India Territory was invaded and a corner forced: nothing resulted and All India taking the ball down Hogg found the net. Kelly equalised for the Presidency almost immediately and play ruled even for a spell. Then All India were penalised before their goal and the ball was put through from the free. The Presidency did not hold their advantage long for their opponents soon got going and Ratcliffe put them on even terms just before half time. The second period was fast and exciting, both teams trying hard to get the lead. At last the All India forwards took the ball down and registered a third goal. The Presidency were unable to add any further score. All India thus winning by three goals to two. Teams:—

BOMBAY PRESIDENCY:—Goal, Sheldon (Cheshires); backs, Coyne and Cadman (B ffs); half-backs, Cooke (R. A. Colaba); Dewhurst and Rancail (West Yorks); forwards, Jarvis and Gaffney, (Cheshires); Hartley (R. A. Colaba); and Kelley and Richmond (R. F. A. Kirkee).

ALL INDIA.—Goal, Haig (Seaforths); backs, Thomson and Stephens (Seaforths); half-backs, Rant (Royal Scots); Burton (Lincolns) and Mowatt (A. and S. Highlanders); forwards, Colthart and Macmillan (Royal Scots); Ratcliffe (Lincolns), Hogg and Montgomery (A. and S. Highlanders).

The Story Teller.

A LITTLE DOPE

IT is true that American trainers are apt to be candid up to a certain point, after which they shut up like a knife, and words do not trickle from them as water undoubtedly trickles (in wet weather) down a ditch. Their gas is quickly turned off at the meter. Men may come and men may go leaving no address since implacable creditors are best dealt with in shadow at a distance from their emporium; yet, in gusts of confidence, we may easily say not only what is untrue but also what is inimical to our vital interest. Trainers from American are careful to avoid that betise.

One of them affirmed: "You must study and understand a horse's character before you need expect to dope him properly, because—and this represents a secret of the business—what suits one horse may not suit another at all. It is a question of temperament. Besides"—he lowered his voice, for he was reaching the end of his tether—"there is the right dope and the wrong dope, and if you happen to make a bit of a 'bloomer' at the critical moment, you may be walked off the course by your ear."

"Let the punishment fit the crime," I replied, having naught more bitter to say, "and instruct the criminal to play for safety the next time out."

So our subject was dropped at that; it was too exciting and exhaustive for a prolonged discussion. Truth is difficult to get at even when there is no profit to be made by dealing in the opposite commodity. Some men seem born to become liars; at least, what else they lived for is not apparent after they are dead. Many sporting reticences are also commendable, while trainers do well—it is their natural instinct—to think twice before they speak once and then say nothing. Why sigh, indeed for the wings of a dove when one has the soul of a serpent? Fortunes are not made in that way.

Anxious, however, to win a little cash at a respectable meeting, or lose my solitary nest-egg, I attended in that capacity, and fluttered about like a distressed infant who has nothing to suck at, his bottle having been "pinched." My heart felt sinking. Naturally nervous where money is concerned, even if I have a trifle in my pocket to be going on with, I glanced round for friendly faces. One I saw; it was winking—both eyes were doing so, their animation being intense. They belonged to my confrere, the American trainer. He had a mare running.

"Can I place my final pound sterling on your bonnie steed this day?" I asked, quivering in every limb.

"There is no law to prevent you," he rejoined, "but, all the same, I advise you to go and sit in a corner and have a whisky-and-soda to your own cheek and rumple what is left of your hair."

"As bad as that, eh?"—thus I countered—"and you don't mind whom you put away if his shooting-iron is rusty. It is a good job for you that I haven't got mine here now. Your life has been forfeited many times, and it might be destroyed on this occasion if I were duly armed."

"You couldn't shoot a hole through a pat of butter," he said, "before it melted in your mouth."

But I must confess that I did not feel satisfied with that ungracious utterance. Here was, peradventure, an opportunity to back a winner, to addle or hatch that solitary nest-egg which I had been carrying about in a secret job for some time with that object in view, and, alas! the fates promised to be perverse.

Still, I did not intend to be immured without making a bold dash for liberty and wealth. The fœtid atmosphere of poverty is not, pardieu, appreciated by a sportsman who has trodden the primrose paths of dalliance with sheee in his sky-rocket, if I may be permitted to use that phrase without alienating the affections of old and new friends who will have my "best and latest" from the seat of war. They are regarded as fine judges when the others are in bed.

Accordingly, as to the mare owned by this Yankee expert, I consulted another professional of British nationality in the same line of business, because a pound sterling requires a lot of investment when one does not know where the next half-sovereign is coming from. If there is a delay in transmission, results may be awkward as estimated from a culinary point of view.

"I do not know what to make of her," said the native oracle, waving his arms. "She seems to be suffering from a state of considerable excitement. Why, if she were in love she could not behave herself in a more ridiculous manner. But"—he grinned ecstatically—"it is not love."

"More like drink!" Such was my comment. "Three squirts a penny, and bring your own syringe."

"Come and look at her closer" advised the other, judicially, "ere you dare to bet, and then tell me what are your prospects of knocking lumps off the Ring in your next encounter."

"It is like asking for a fall," I exclaimed, with a doleful mien, "and, by Jupiter! I'm pretty sure to get it."

"You cannot name the odds," he asseverated, solemnly; and thence we proceeded, at the rate of about four an hour, to inspect the rhapsodical creature.

"Step out," urged my associate, sportively, "or we may be too late to enjoy the festivities. If you could move your feet as well as you can move your tongue, no walk to Brighton would be safe from you."

"Do not mind leaving me behind," I remarked, in a purring tone. "I am accustomed to applaud the entertainment, whatever it may be, from a back seat amongst the sawdust."

The mare was a perfect picture—of agitation. Physically and cerebrally, she seemed to be in a vehement state of protestation. Her eyes were starting out of her head, she could not stand still, her perspiration was profuse, continuous. In sooth, one could not only see, one might hear, the drips that fell from her on to the asphalte floor of the stall in which she was being saddled. It was rather a sensational experience.

Men looked at each other with amazement depicted on their face. A small punter nudged his neighbour, saying: "Why! Heaven bless us! she's got it a treat, don't ye think? The 'stuff' fairly down on her to-day, and enough 'speedy dose' inside to intoxicate an elephant."

"Yes, yes," murmured the other desperado, rapturously—"cocaine, digitalis, nitro-glycesine, and so forth. She ought to come whirling down the course like an explosive bomb let loose by a mistake of the dynamite authorities."

"We must go and back her at once," commanded the small punter, as though he were a field marshal intent exclusively on plunder. "If we wait much longer she may go off or blow up by reason of her own tremendous—ah!—exercitation."

"No time like the present," responded the second villain, "when we have the money. When we have it not, fools may whistle us, and we shall be fools not to go; but"—he chuckled egregiously—"wise men are sure to give us a miss in baulk."

Meanwhile, the American trainer was busily engaged in saddling his mare. He paid no heed to the surrounding throng. His features might have been carved in wood for anything he cared; he was capable and deft in all his movements; he did not notice anything remarkable in the situation; and surreptitiously he winked at me over the mare's back just as if I were an ordinary citizen. It was too bad for him to minimise the force of my individuality in that way. Not being able to endure the strain of such discomfort, I sidled up to him, with a sort of three-pence-for-two pence gait, and began, "Can I have my—"

"Corns cut, old chap," he chipped in. "Why, certainly, and the sooner you have them done the better for all parties concerned."

"My one golden moidore, the last of the bunch," I went on, pathetically—"can I invest it on your representative now without being compelled to emigrate a little later? I don't wish to go alone or to pay my own expenses."

"There is as yet, no Act of Parliament which forbids you to back horses for more than you can afford to pay in twice," he answered. "But, if you will take my advice on this occasion you will mount the stand and chew gum till you are removed as an insanitary obstruction."

Then his jockey came; the proceedings acquired a more lurid interest. I forgot all about wagering in the excitement of that moment. The riding orders were explicit.

"You had better get on in this stall," said the trainer, "and when I lead her out don't put your feet in the irons and duck your head. She is slightly—er—hot."

Thus instructed, the jockey smiled—he might have been doing it for the last time by request—and he prepared to duck accordingly. Not an instant too soon was he, for, once started, the mare jumped with a huge bound out of that stall, whence her trainer also darted, to save his skin, like an eel. She jumped again just as wildly in the paddock, being taken on to the course by her indomitable manager as if she were a tiger at the end of a string and he was afraid of the string breaking. He had rope enough to hang her, assuming that she proved too terrible for human government. His expression was that of a man having a glorious time at the expense of his neighbours.

"I'd better lead her to the post" he said to his jockey when they were opposite the stand. "She is a bit er—light headed."

We shall be all day getting there," grumbled the rider. "Loose her, and I'll take my chance."

Loosed she was in the most soothing manner practicable under such circumstances when the pantomime began. She bounded into the air as before like a hurricane, and ran away at top speed. Her pilot was powerless to stop her. For about two miles she continued to gallop hell for leather, as we may say without irreverence, so that, when eventually she allowed herself to be pulled up, she was stone beat to the world. There had been plenty of time for her dose to evaporate.

Taken to the starting-point, however, in a more or less exhausted condition, and while still labouring under the influence of a curious prostration which was certainly premature, she jumped off with the others, but that was all. She made no sort of show in the race. It was run at a smart pace, and when the half-distance was reached she was tailed off. Fiascos of various kinds have I seen during a fatal experience in connection with the Turf, yet never have I been more thankful than on this occasion to think that my antepenultimate coin of the realm (the other was unpassable) had been retained for future service. An inspiration of the gods, no less.

After the coutretemps recorded, when guileless people talked irresponsibly about dope in the paddock, all the American trainer said was this: "I ought to have led her to the post."—Sporting Sketches.

We wish our young readers would take up hand B. and make the deductions as the game proceeds. It is an instructive hand, and will well repay an attentive study simply to notice how much may be known if you will only take the trouble to observe.

NOTES.—1. B. knows A. has led from 5 Spades. 2. B. now knows that the Spade left in out of his partner's hand is the 5, and that it must be in X's hand. It can't be in A.'s hand or he would have led it, nor can it be in X.'s hand or he would have played it, and by these observations he can make certain the 5 is with Z. 4. B. now knows that X. has led from 5 diamonds, that A. has no more, and that he probably has Qn, and one other Heart. He cannot have more than Qn and another unless he has Kg Qn, which is very improbable. If he had Qn and 2 other Hearts he would not have played Kv 2nd hand. Therefore, practically, B. knows that A. has Qn and another, that X. has the 4 and 5, or 3 and 4, and that Z. has Kg 10 to 8. He must also know that A. has 4 trumps and his hand is therefore almost as plain to him as if he were playing dummy 5. A. knows that Z. has not more than 3 trumps.

EXPERIMENTS IN THE FEEDING OF HORSES.

HORSE masters in this country are little concerned with abstruse questions relating to the various values of foods suitable for their animals: and when we consider how limited is the choice of food open to us there is no reason why we should occupy our minds with considerations which lie outside the pale of practical politics. In any country the relative values of foods as fuel to maintain the equine engine at full working pressure is of comparatively small moment to the private owner: it is of no moment to the racing man because it has long been decided that the best old oats and the finest hay cannot be beaten by any other commodities; and it is of little account to the non-racing horse owner who measures the merits of their diet by the condition of his horses. In large establishments, however, it is otherwise: in the stables of large carrying companies in Europe and America, where economy is imperative and saving by centimes is reduced to a science, the question "How can the horse be most cheaply fed" has for many years past occupied general attention and has afforded the text for numerous experiments. It is understood that by the words "most cheaply fed" we mean fed with due regard to efficiency: it would be poor economy that saved 5 per. cent. on the forage bill at the cost of 10 per. cent. in muscle and working power. The matter those responsible for large studs of horses have to decide is how to combine the cheapest diet with the highest working condition: and the question is one that possesses an interest of its own. The United States Department of Agriculture whose industry in such matters is unceasing has recently published an exceedingly instructive and interesting Report on the various experiments in horse feeding which have been made from time to time in America and also in England, France, and Germany.

If we do not attempt to follow the details o these experiments it is merely because they are of necessity expressed in chemical terms which to the average man are unfamiliar: we must be content to glance through Dr. Langworthy's pages and reap such items as appeal to us. Indian corn or maize as most people know, is over a large area of the States the staple food used for horses: that grain of recent years has been much used in large stables on the Continent and in England, but for some reason, or none, there was a strong prejudice against it: in private stables in England the objection to maize remains, the conservatism of master and man revolting from the idea of feeding a horse on the same diet as a hen. It is an article of faith with us that wheat is unsuitable for horse's food. American practitioners, not content with any sort of experiment, have been putting wheat to the test at North Dakota Experiment Station. "Unground wheat was poorly digested and it was therefore believed undesirable to feed it as a sole grain ration. When wheat was added to a ration of bran and shorts in equal proportion no advantage was gained. On the basis of tests reported, bran and ground wheat in the proportion of one to two was considered a more satisfactory grain ration for horses at light work than whole oats." Evidently the case for or against wheat deserves retrial at the hands of those who may find themselves obliged to seek a substitute for oats, grain or paddy at any time.

We do not know whether any enquiring spirit has served up a feed consisting, partly or wholly, of cotton seed in his stable : cotton seed meal has been tried in New Hampshire as a constitutent in an experimental mixture and the mixture containing it proved the least satisfactory as "it was not relished at first by the horses :" apparently the experiment was not pursued beyond the stage of accustoming horses to the mixture. At another experiment station a mixed ration containing 2lbs. of cotton seed meal was given to horses daily with satisfactory results : but when the proportion of cotton seed meal was increased to 3½lbs. daily "the results were not so favourable": it would be interesting to know what were the remaining constituents of this mixture : the withdrawal of 1½ of oats, barley or bran, in favour of an equal quantity of cotton seed meal might make all the difference to the horse. The experiments made with a cotton seed diet appear to have been carried tarther on mules than on horses : at the Louisiania stations certain mules were educated up to the pitch of eating 6lbs. of cotton seed meal per day : this was the maximum quantity it is desirable to give a mule.

Perhaps the most interesting experiments made were those with molasses : though it should be said that the value of molasses as horse food has long gone far beyond the experimental stage on sugar plantations in some parts of the world. In one case a stud of a hundred draught horses which were worked ten hours a day drawing heavy loads at a walk were put on a molasses diet : the ration consisted "night and morning one quart of molasses diluted with 3 quarts of water and thoroughly mixed with 6lbs. of cut hay of good quality, 1½ quarts of corn meal and 2½ quarts coarse bran. In addition they were fed 5 quarts of dry oats in the middle of the day and 11lbs. of long hay at night." The report adds that during the fourteen months the experiment had run, the horses gradually improved in condition and gained in weight : their coats became sleek and glossy and they did the same amount of work : the general health of the horses was excellent " and cases of acute indigestion or spasmodic colic very rare though formerly quite frequent." A noteworthy point in connection with this diet is that "in general no disturbance was observed in changing from an ordinary to a molasses ration." As we have said the value of molasses has been recognised for some few years : so long ago as 1898 the Agricultural Gazette of New South Wales recorded the practice on a sugar estate in the Fiji Islands : no fewer than 400 horses were fed daily on a ration which was, after careful trial, fixed at 15lbs. of molasses, 3lbs. of bran and 4lbs. of maize, with green cane tops in addition. Dickson and Malpeaux also made a similar experiment in France, gradually substituting molasses for oats until a 15½-lb. ration of oats gave place to one consisting of 13½lbs. of molasses and 2lbs. of oats. As an appetiser a preparation of molasses has recently been "pushed" by the proprietors : and we are informed it has been found to give the most satisfactory results with shy and dainty feeders. A curious experiment made in Denmark in the stable of a Copenhagen milk company deserves mention : a mixture of dried blood and sugar beet molasses was tried, with what results we are not told.

The objections to the use of molasses are obvious enough ; it attracts flies and other insects to the disturbance of the horse : the horse, biting at himself between mouthfuls as horses do, soils his coat or clothing and makes work ; and lastly the task of mixing it thoroughly with finely chopped grass must entail a good deal of extra work and delay in feeding. These objections were insisted on in Porto Rico, where a number of army horses were for a time put on a molasses diet : but apart therefrom the results have been uniformly good in every case where the stuff has been tried : the horses improve in condition and health.

Various fruits, fresh and dried, have been used on occasions in the stable, but as fruit of any kind would only find its way into the horse's dietary when there happened to be an excessive supply on hand, it scarcely comes within the scope of practical horse mastery. We are informed that in California, fruit, especially prunes and other dried fruit, is sometimes used when the market is overstocked or cannot be profitably sold, and that horses eat them with relish. This is not surprising ; the Arabs frequently feed their horses on fresh dates, according to General Daumas and the animals thrive upon them. At the Arizona Experiment Station the husks of almond were tried as food : they were found to be fattening ; but almond husks we imagine are unlikely to come into any market as a staple for horses.

Some of the most practical and not the least interesting experiments were those which sought to determine the relative values of hay and grain.

A ration of 20lbs. alfalfa hay without an allowance of any grain was found sufficient to maintain the weight of a 1,400lbs. horse provided he did no work : when put to hard work the animal barely maintained his normal weight on 33lbs. per day : when the work demanded was "very severe" 40lbs. proved inadequate, though this was about the most the horse was capable of consuming. The upshot of this experiment was to indicate that better results could be secured by restricting the hay allowance to 20lbs. and giving a ration or grain equal in value to the 20lbs. of hay knocked off, though this might provide only litt'e more than 3½lbs. of oats.

We have found in this "bulletin" many proven statements, which are calculated to disturb long standing ideas on the subject of stable treatment. We had grown up in the unquestioned conviction that if one thing were more wrong than another it is to water a horse after instead of before his feed : but here we find one Professor Tangl of Budapest recording experiments which shatter our long nurtured views mercilessly. The professor was moved to ascertain when the horse might be safely watered and his subjects were dieted on "different mixtures of corn, oats, hay, and straw" : the only condition which varied in his experiments was the time of watering. The gist of results so far as was observed was that the time of drinking had no effect upon the digestibility of a ration of grain and hay. When hay only was given there seemed to be a slight advantage in watering before feeding. In general horses may be watered before, during or after meals without interfering with the digestion and absorption of food. All these methods of watering are equally good for the horse and each of them may be employed according to circumstances .....although all methods of watering are equally good, it is not desirable to unnecessarily change from one method to another : animals or at least some of them appear to be not altogether indifferent to such a change. Professor Tangl seems to have watched the subjects of his experiments very closely and some of his notes are very interesting to the practical horseman : for example a change in the time of watering : from before to after the feed or vice versâ, was followed by a certain loss of appetite which continued for some days—until, no doubt, the horse became used to the change ; the horse ate as much, but took longer over his feed and ate with less avidity. A feature to be noticed was that the time of drinking produced marked effect on the quantity of water drunk. The horse drank most if his bucket were given him after he had fed : and he drank least if the water were given before his feed.

This pamphlet is full of interest and sheds valuable light on some points of stable economy which are not sufficiently well understood.

Sporting Notes.

IT is not unusually the case that the last two meetings of the Calcutta monsoon season furnish the best sport, and this was emphasised by a real good day's racing on Saturday last. The fields were satisfactory, and the finishes for the most part close. A drawback to the afternoon, and one which we think had a deteriorating effect upon the "gate," was the early start. The first race might, with great advantage, have been timed for three-quarters of an hour later without any risk of the last race being run in the dark, and if, as we hear, the idea was to admit of the public attending both the races and the football match which was to take place later on, we think that the idea was a misguided one. It is not often, in our humble opinion, that the same person is sufficiently keen both on the sport of racing and the game of football to rush from one to the other, so that not many, we think, were induced to attend the races by the possibility of being in time for the match subsequently, while, we do not doubt, that the early start, deterred not a few from attending the races at all. Another point to be noted—is that at this time of year owners are naturally not anxious to gallop their horses in the full heat of the day, if it can be avoided.

If, however, the attendance was poor, the racing was excellent, and in two events out of the six it was impossible to tell, until the numbers went up, what was the order of the placed horses. The ring should have had a good day, as only two favourites got home, and in both those events favouritism was practically divided, while three races were annexed by rank outsiders.

Proceedings opened with the Pony Plate, for which Perfect and Second Thought were almost equally fancied. The winner, however, turned up in Mocassin, who won from end to end, though had Second Thought not been badly left at the post, the result would probably have been in doubt. Be that as it may, Mocassin gave us a real taste of his quality, and by beating ponies like Perfect, Second Thought, Reveillé, and Granny, in the very creditable time—considering the going—of 1min. 13 secs., conclusively proved that he is a good deal better pony than many people supposed.

For the Club Plate Actress and Firefly practically divided the popular fancy, and it is more than probable that the former would have won, but at the second flight she parted company with her jockey, and galloped off the course. Firefly then went to the front, but was overtaken at the culvert by the somewhat erratic jumping of Sylvia, who gradually drew away and romped in on her own. This is a smart mare, but she seems to go the first three-quarters of a mile or so before it dawns upon her that there are hurdles in the way.

The best race of the day was undoubtedly the Belvedere Plate, for which a field of four faced the starter. Fairlight was rightly judged the plum and was freely backed ; Dundonald was also strongly supported, while Twilight was considered by a large section to be a good bet at threes. The owner evidently fancied him from the fact of his being reserved for this event, instead of going for the Club Plate, which he could probably have won. To our mind, however, the horse was not looking too grand as regards condition, though to be sure, he is not one of the big sort at any time. The race was a real good one from a spectator's point of view, as at the penultimate flight all four were within a length of one another. In the last few strides, however, training told, and Fairlight just struggled home by a neck from Lady Bird, Twilight being half a length away.

The Pony Hurdle also provided a great race, only half a length dividing each place. Yuletide and Moss Rose were both backed down to short odds, while the remaining three all carried money at fives and sixes. Blair Athol and Moss Rose shot out to the front, Yuletide whipping in over the first two flights. On the Ellenborough side Yuletide joined the leaders and from there a great race home ensued, Moss Rose and Yuletide being ridden out over the last two flights under the whip, the last named's speed on the flat enabling her to snatch the verdict by half a length. Yellow Mantle was thrown out of her stride somewhat at the turn, or she would, in all probability, have given a better account of herself.

For the September Stakes Springlock was backed as though the money was being merely lent on good security, but the lightly weighted Oom Paul had him stone cold at the distance, winning comfortably by a length and a half. It being Oom Paul's first appearance in this class, the handicapper could not well do otherwise than allot him bottom weight, but he has now shown himself to be well able to hold his own with the top of the Monsoon lot.

A further surprise was served up in the Entally Plate, which was won by Sunshine, neatly handled by her owner, and who started at the nice price of sixes. A hot favourite was taken down in Shirley, who has run a most disappointing horse throughout the Monsoon meetings. Details will be found elsewhere.

The following letter regarding the running of Mocassin and First Guide appeared in a daily contemporary last Monday :—With reference to a somewhat unfortunate incident at one of the late Tollygunge Gymkhanas, mention of which appeared at the time in your paper—yesterday's racing provided a sufficient object-lesson in the harm which may be done by officials at unregistered fixtures. The case, as your readers may remember, was a practical expression of opinion on the part of the Gymkhana Executive to the effect that of two ponies belonging to the same owner, one was stopped in order to allow the other to win. am always inclined to accept opinions of this kind made in reference to a Gymkhana with the proverbial pinch of salt, inasmuch as it is seldom or ever worth an owner's while to run the risk of loosening his horse's teeth not to mention other disagreeable contingencies for the sake of the wealth he is likely to amass at a Rs. 49 meeting, and in this case particularly the motive for the alleged "ramp" was hard to find, since much the same price was obtainable about either candidate. The point, however, to which I wish to draw attention, is the reply which the owner is said to have made on being questioned as to the running of the two ponies, which was that if anyone was anxious to run the race again and back the loser, he was perfectly willing to allow them to put up any jockey they chose, and was himself only too willing to play the part of bookmaker, and lay them the odds. Even this tempting offer failed to convince the august body of Stewards that a "ramp" of a fraudulent nature had not been brought off.

In view of yesterday's racing, however, it appears to my humble comprehension that the only course now open to the Tollygunge Stewards is to admit that their opinion was, to say the least of it, misguided. When the question of recent form—a subject which I note with regret does not receive the attention which it deserves from racing authorities—is gone into, it becomes sufficiently plain—as those connected with the two ponies asserted at the time—that the relative weights carried by them at the Gymkhana would require to have been reversed in order to affect any alteration in the result. On that occasion First Guide was handicapped to give Mocassin 1st 6lbs. Mocassin won easily. Since then First Guide has run very consistently throughout the Monsoon Meetings, being placed three times, and only just missing a place on the fourth occasion, and I do not think that even the most prejudiced punter could suggest that on any one of these occasions he was not run on his merits. On Saturday last Mocassin, in receipt from him of 8lbs. only—not 1st. 6lbs.—won his race by four lengths easily, First Guide just failing to get a place. In view of the class of pony—including Second Thought, Perfect, Granny, Not Yet, Reveille, etc.,—running, I take it that First Guide, who ran a close fourth, can scarcely be said to have been stopped in favour of Mocassin on this occasion, and taking this—as all who saw the race must take it—to be a fair exposition of the relative form of the two ponies, it seems to me, as a disinterested observer, that the least the Tollygunge Executive can now do is to offer an apology to the owner concerned for the unpleasantness which they have caused him by their want of insight.

In conclusion, I would add that a considerable experience of Gymkhana racing in India has borne in upon me with some force the truth of the old aphorism that "a little knowledge is a dangerous thing." There is, as a general rule, a greater proneness to suspect fraudulent practices at Gymkhana meetings—where the majority of those concerned are usually, so to speak, amateurs, playing at being racing men—than there is in any number of big meetings, where thousands of pounds may be dependent on the issue of a race. In buying horses, we all know that the less a man knows the more certain he is he has been swindled, and so it is with racing. But where the trouble comes in, is that the mass of the general public who know and care little of racing almost invariably regard the mere fact of an enquiry being held as tantamount to a proof of fraudulent practice having taken place. It is on account of this public prejudice that the responsibilities of stewardship should not be lightly treated.

With apologies for encroaching at such length on your space.—Yours, etc.

FAIR PLAY.

We reproduce the above letter with some degree of satisfaction, firstly, because we are in entire accord with the remarks of "Fair Play" as pertaining to a matter of racing ethics; and secondly, because at the time of the incident at the Tollygunge Gymkhana which gave rise to no inconsiderable pother in certain quarters, we were of the minority which held to the opinion that the Stewards of that funny little meeting had only opened their mouths to put their foot in it, so to speak. It appears from Saturday's racing that the minority were right, and that the Stewards, as frequently happens in the case of Gymkhana Stewards, were—well, slightly off the rails.

The Meerut Autumn Polo Tournament will be played concurrently with the Meerut Races, the dates being the 11th, 13th and 16th November. It is to be held under I. P. A. rules and entries close on the 1st October and 8th November. Other details appear in the advertisement further on.

The following are the first entries in the Mysore Dusserah Polo Tournament:—Mysore Imperial Service Lancers "A" Team, Mysore Imperial Service Lancers "B" Team, 6th Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers), 1st Durham Light Infantry, Mysore Gymkhana, and Bangalore Gymkhana.

The final programme of the Sonepore Gymkhana Races is out. The dates are the 2nd, 4th and 6th November, entries for each day closing at the overnight lotteries. There are six items on the cards for the 2nd and 4th, and seven on the last day, all of Rs. 49.

Further particulars are to hand concerning the death of Cowell, the well-known jockey. A Bombay contemporary says:—"He developed an illness, and heart trouble supervening, he died, on Tuesday night at Watson's Hotel. Mrs. Cowell only arrived from Australia on Monday morning last, and the greatest sympathy will be felt for her. Cowell was a remarkably fine horseman, and for courage and hard riding he had no equal in India. He was a wonderful judge of pace, and made few mistakes. Formerly he rode for Mr. Apcar of Calcutta, then for H.H the Kour Saheb of Patiala, last season for H.H. the Aga Khan and Aga S Shah, and was this season engaged by Messrs. M. Goculdass and Ananji Nanji."

Friar Tuck, Mr. Galstaun's new horse, arrived in Bombay on the 16th instant by the steamer Khalibia. The horse is in excellent condition, for which credit is due to B. Carr, who came out in charge of him.

The conditions of the Great Northern Handicap, which will be run during the Rawalpindi Spring Meeting, are published among our Turf notices to-day.

We commend to the careful attention of Poojah holiday-makers the notice of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway regarding the Puri trip, which appears among our notices to-day. The railway people have made every effort to cater for the public, and if their enterprise does not meet with the reward it deserves, all we can say is the Calcutta public are unable to appreciate a good thing when it comes their way.

Commenting on the retirement of Ard Patrick from the racing track, the Sportsman writes:—"During his career on the Turf Ard Patrick, who is by St. Florian out of Morganette (Galtee More's dam), won six races and lost five, crediting his owner with 26,616sovs. Of this sum he won 2,666sovs. as a two-year-old, 7,480sovs. as a three-year-old, and 16,470 sovs. during the present season. Mr. Gubbins bred the colt, and that he has done well by him is a point upon which he must feel thoroughly satisfied. Ard Patrick, however, is a grand horse and comes of a rare family. At the stud he will, in all probability, greatly enhance his reputation.

"It may be interesting to give the amounts won by other noted horses during their racing careers: Isinglass won 57,455sovs., Donovan 55,153sovs., Flying Fox 40,096sovs. Persimmon 34,706sovs., Orme 34,626sovs., St. Frusquin 32,960sovs., Ormonde 28,265sovs., Galtee More 27,019sovs., Velasquez 26,385sovs., and Ladas 18,516sovs."

Mr. H. Nugent, the well-known English G.R., met with a fatal accident while riding in a jump race at Ostend on the 31st ultimo. Red Dragon fell with him in the Full Cry Hurdle Race and kicked him so severely in the head that he never regained consciousness. The deceased was son and heir of Sir C. Nugent, of Cranborne, and for several seasons had ridden with much success in England and on the Continent. He had not always escaped serious spills, however, but being exceedingly enthusiastic over the sport, he was ever eager to reappear in the saddle when his condition permitted him so to do. In March of this year he received a fracture of the collar-bone through the falling of Bird Call in the South-Western Handicap Steeplechase at Sandown Park. He had previously been engaged to steer Drumcree in the Grand National later in the month, but owing to his injuries, Percy Woodland took his place, and it is now ancient history that Mr Morrison's gelding won in brilliant style. In the following month Mr. Nugent had sufficiently recovered to be able to don silk once more, and had the mount on Sweet Sounds in the Jubilee Handicap Hurdle Race, Manchester, on Easter Tuesday. Misfortune succeeded misfortune, the horse coming to grief, and again inflicted a broken collar-bone upon his rider. This was on 14th April, and on the 25th of the same month Mr. Nugent was again seen in the saddle at Sandown Park, where he rode Drumcree in the International Steeplechase, won by Gonsalez. During 1902 Mr. Nugent had eighty-eight mounts and rode twelve winners, and early this year he gained a further thirteen brackets. In 1901 he rode twenty winners out of a possible ninety-four; in 1900 eighteen out of sixty-five, and in 1899 four out of fifteen. He had the mount on Drumcree in the "National" of 1902, failing to gain a place, but in the previous year Drumcree, then the property of Mr. O. J. Williams, carried him into second place behind Grudon. In the Grand National of 1900, Mr. Nugent rode Hidden Mystery, who started a slightly better favourite than Ambush II., and upon this occasion he experienced the hardest of hard luck. When going well, and to all appearances a winner, the riderless Covert Hack crossed his track and brought the favourite down, though fortunately on that occasion Mr. Nugent escaped injury, and although the victory of the Prince of Wales's horse was a popular one—it could not well have been otherwise—there was a good deal of sympathy for the young gentleman jockey. The deceased had also ridden—and his services had been in much request—in Ireland and on the Continent, and, no matter how well his father loved to turn out a winner, his pride in the jockeyship of his son was always pronounced.

From the English sporting papers to hand by this week's mail one sees that Lane's advantage in the winning jockeys' list is being gradually reduced by Madden who, on the 28th August, was only 12 points behind, as per accompanying statement.—

Our Lucknow correspondent informs us that there will be an Extra Sky Meeting held there, probably on the 10th and 12th of next month.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—The Skittle Polo Tournament on the American system has been in abeyance for a few days owing to heavy rain. Some really excellent games are taking place, but they are so numerous naturally that to report them all in full would occupy far too much space. The combined R.A. and R.E. are a splendid team, and although conceding heavy odds to most of the other competing sides, they will come out well at the finish. The "Rovers" maintain their lead and are more than likely to prove the ultimate winners. Two close games took place on the 19th instant, when the Rovers (+ 7 goals) played the Mounted Infantry (+ 6 goals), and the R.A. and R.E. (scratch) met the Imperial Service Lancers (+ 3 goals). In the first match the Rovers added a goal to their start and won by two goals, but the Mounted Infantry were somewhat unlucky, having all the best of the play throughout the game though they were unable to score. The two best sides in the tournament met in the next game, and although the R.A. and R.E. put in two goals in the opening chucker, they failed to score in the second, the natives adding a subsidiary. Another goal accrued to the combined services in the third chucker, and nearly four minutes were left for the fourth and last. Shortly before time the R.A. and R.E. scored a fourth goal and just won by a narrow majority.

The state of the tournament at present is as under:—

	Matches played.	Won.	Lost.
"The Rovers" (+ 7 Goals) ...	4	4	0
Imperial Service Lancers (+ 3 Goals)	6	3½	2½
R.A. and R.E. (Scratch) ...	5	3	2
Durham L.I. Novices (+ 7 Goals) ...	6	3	3
Colonel Sprot's Team (+ 5 Goals) ...	5	2½	2½
"The Magpies" (+ 7 Goals) ...	4	2	2
Mounted Infantry (+ 6 Goals) ...	6	2	4
Mr. Swifte's Team (+ 4 Goals) ...	4	0	4

Our Poona correspondent writes:—Arma virumque cano. Of warriors and their deeds of skill and daring at the Presidential Assault-at-Arms I sing, and I would that my humble grey goose quill could, with a due regard to brevity, adequately describe but a portion of the wonders of valour and dexterity one witnessed. Among the items which left an impression on the mind of the casual observer must rank the wonderful tent-pegging of the Hyderabad Contingent Lancers, whose 1st and 2nd Regiments were respectively 1st and 2nd in the competition. A section which takes all four pegs four times running (one run being at half pegs!) naturally takes a bit of beating. Some of the tugs-of-war too (usually a dull enough performance) created intense excitement, and for two teams to heave at high pressure for over eleven and a half minutes before one had to give in, naturally excites admiration for the training and human endurance which afforded such a spectacle. The item which appealed mostly to the gallery was, of course, the "Riding and Jumping" competition for British officers, and excellently though the well-known local horse Dawn jumped and admirably as Mr. Boase rode him, the public vote would probably have bestowed the award to a horse not even "placed."

The one sad item in an otherwise thoroughly enjoyable and admirably run show was the fact that it was the last of its kind which that gallant old soldier, General Sir Robert Low, would attend in his official capacity.

Amateur theatricals are frequently the butt for facetious critics, but little fault could be found with the time honoured "Pantomime Rehearsal," admirably staged by the Buffs in their Regimental Theatre, that popular regiment whose early departure all deplore, entertaining their friends to the play and supper two nights running. Captain Drake is an old theatrical hand, and under his stage management matters were not likely to go wrong. Mrs. Drake and Miss Smith played charmingly throughout and their songs and dances were quite delightful, and if one has to single out one of the male dramatis personæ for special mention one cannot ignore Mr. Slacke's admirably clever interpretation of Lord Arthur. One left with nothing but pleasant memories.

That popular and fine horseman, Penton, is down with fever, and was unable to ride at the last extra meeting. He is however, I hear, doing well and everyone hopes will soon be about again and riding some of his artistic finishes.

The annual ball of the members of the Club of Western India was, I believe, a brilliant success, though the heavy rain did all it could to mar proceedings by interfering with the garden illuminations and cosy corners. It did not, however, prevent everyone from enjoying themselves and keeping things going till the early hours of the morning.

The Poona Gymkhana cricket XI had two proud days when they were able to successfully thump the rival Gymkhana from Bombay, but I fear things look none too hopeful for the Presidency match.

In the finals of the Quetta Polo Tournament the 9th Lancers beat the Station team by 13 goals 11 subsidiaries to 1 goal 2 subsidiaries.

There is perhaps nothing particularly striking about the handicaps for Saturday's Monsoon Meeting. In the City Plate Fairlight has been penalised 4lbs. for his win last week, and we shall expect to see him win again. Dundonald seems to have been somewhat hardly treated in being conceded only 1lb. for his beating by Fairlight, but it was generally supposed that he was somewhat unlucky on that occasion. The Outram Plate seems to us to be pretty good for Twilight if he elects to go for this, and not the open event, but of course Actress' performance last Saturday gave us no clue as to how she would have finished. Failing Twilight, we think she should about win this time. In the Rampart Plate, Yuletide is penalised 5lbs. for her win, and this may just put Moss Rose in front of her. As to Shylock one has not much to go by as regards hurdling, but we think that Moss Rose and Yuletide will both finish in front of him. In the Plassey Plate, Granny is very well in at 9-10 and should, we think, beat them all except perhaps Little Doris, who is somewhat an uncertain quantity. Oom Paul has to carry 1st. 7lbs. extra for his win on Saturday, but we think he will do it successfully. Of the rest Flashlight has been rather kindly treated, and will certainly run well. The Harrington Plate might fall to Bob Sutton if he were really fit, but we fancy his preparation is hardly forward enough, and we prefer Sunshine who, we think, will carry her extra 8lbs. to the front all right.

The Poona Open Polo Tournament opened on Tuesday with first game between the 4th Hussars and the Baroda team, which proved an easy victory for the Hussars by 16 goals and four subsidiaries to 2 goals and 2 subsidiaries. In the second game, the 3rd Bombay Cavalry versus The Remnants, a more even match was witnessed, the Bombay Cavalry winning by 4 goals and 3 subsidiaries to The Remnants' 3 goals. The finals will be played on Thursday. Full reports in our next issue.

The Bombay Mounted Sports last week were brought off in splendid weather, but other attractions militated against large entries. The programme opened with tent-pegging by half sections, which was won by Messrs. Fisher and Moore, with Messrs. Rome and McCausland second. The jumping was not of a very high order, and Mr. Johnson's Lothian, ridden by Mr. McLachlan, had rather an easy win. The black jumped cleanly though somewhat slowly. Four started for the Victoria Cross Race, which was won by Mr. Rome, Mr. McLachlan second. The Horse Scurry was won by Mr. Symons's Surprise from 25 yards. Mr. Galtrey's Under Housemaid came with a fine rush at the finish, but failed to catch the winner by two lengths. The Pony Scurry brought out a fair field and resulted in a dead-heat between Mr. Moore's Squirrel and Mr. Cooke's Conductor.

TIRHOOT NOTES.

Mr. C. MacDoland, of Dowlutpore, is down with enteric fever, and has been extremely ill for some time; the latest reports are more reassuring; and it is hoped, very shortly, that he will be convalescent again.

A large number of people have left the district for the Puja holidays: Mr. and Mrs. Webb, Mr. and Miss Rawlins, and Messrs. Barton, Watson, Staley, and Heycock have gone to Almorah; Mr. and Miss Wilson, of Mozufferpore, and Mrs. MacLeod have gone to Darjeeling; while a great many more have gone up to Mussoorie.

Mr. StoneWigg comes out from home in October and takes over charge of Gungowlie Factory from Mr. F. Needham; Mr. E. Stevens also returns in November and relieves Mr. Urquhart at Rhuni Syeapore, and Mr. Percy Hudson returns about the same time, taking over charge of Piarapore Factory from Mr. W. Rawlins.

A little meet is being arranged at Somastipore in October, there being a parade of "D" Troop, under the command of Captain F. Needham. There is some talk of a dance and a gymkhana, and of course there will be the usual polo and tennis.

The indigo prospects for next year are extremely grave for a large number of factories in the district, as the rainfall of some concerns has only been 16 or 17 inches since the beginning of the year, against a rainfall of 40 and 50 inches in other years.

A curious case of a dream being fulfilled to the letter is thus narrated in his famous 'Reminiscences" by William Day:—

A mare called One Act, which he trained for Mr. Parker, had been beaten in the Palatine Stakes at Chester by Theodora. The pair were both engaged in the Cup, and in consequence of One Act's defeat she receded in the betting from 5's to 20 to 1; but the trainer had such confidence in the mare's staying powers that he was sanguine of her ability to turn the tables on the longer course and begged her owner to back her heavily.

The night before the race William Day dreamt that One Act won, beating Theodora after a good race, and that he turned to William Goater, the latter's trainer, and said, "I think I've won," to which Goater replied, "You know you have." They then walked together up the course, and presently Goater added, "And you've done me out of the best stake I ever stood."

Next morning Day related his dream to half-a-dozen gentlemen who breakfasted with him at the inn where he was saying. After saddling the mare he stood by the winning-post to witness the race, and as soon as the contest was over he inquired of the judge what had won. "One Act," was the reply.

Strange to say, William Goater was standing by his side all the time, though he had not noticed him; but as he turned round to go and meet the mare he found himself face to face with him. Together they walked up the course, just as Day had seen them in his dream, and as they did so Goater remarked—"I stood more money on mine to-day than I ever did before in my life. You've done me for a big stake."

Athletic Notes.

THE Mussoorie Hockey Tournament has been fixed to begin on the 5th proximo. Fourteen teams have entered—a much larger number than was expected.

There are five entries for the Secretariat Football Cup at Naini Tal. The Depôt meet the Volunteers on the 24th instant. The winners will play the Band, while the Boys' Diocesan High School are drawn against St. Joseph's College. The winners of these two matches will meet in the finals.

It has been openly stated, and we believe the fact to be established beyond question, observes a home paper, that the cycling ranks have of late suffered serious depletion by the inconsiderate use of the highway by motorists. Many remedies have been suggested for the evil, but it seems probable that nothing short of the total prohibition of the motor-car on public roads would satisfy some people. So drastic a remedy is, of course, quite out of the question, and cyclists, who for nearly twenty years have themselves had to fight the battle of intolerance, should be the last to suggest it. The motor has, in popular parlance, "come to stay," and cyclists must make the best of it. The lot of the wheelman must inevitably improve under the new Act, but while every safeguard is now placed in the hands of the non-motoring public—save that of insistence upon the ridiculously reduced limit of speed for which some folk clamour—it is idle to hope that any material reduction of the maximum about to be permitted will be brought about in the near future. The tendency will ever be in the other direction. It therefore behoves all well-wishers of the pastime of cycling, and particularly the fair sex, to recognise that they must so school themselves by an effort of the will to pay no more heed to the motor-car that may happen to pass them at twenty miles an hour than they do to the horsed vehicle which progresses at half the pace. Of the two, the motor is by far the less dangerous, and where the driver possesses the instincts of a gentleman he will not be slow to appreciate the fact that his speed should never be such that he is compelled to cling to the crown of the road, and so "shave" the humble pedestrian or the still more helpless cyclist. Furthermore, he will recognise that the God-sent monopoly he arrogates to himself when at curves and corners he ignores the rule of the road, and places others in bodily peril, is his no longer. Where he is minus these instincts, it will be for us to see how far they can be drilled into him by force majeure. Meantime it rests with the cyclist to set a good example by giving the motorist free passage, and otherwise observing the golden rule.

It has several times been stated during the past year that G. L. Jessop is about to retire from the captaincy of the Gloucestershire eleven. The report has again come to the front, and it is said that although Jessop will cease to be captain next year, he will still play occasionally in first-class cricket. Business responsibilities are given as the reason for his decision.

The last regatta of the Calcutta Rowing Club for the current season comes off on Saturday next. There are four items on the programme—Senior Fours, a race over half a mile in pair-oared tubs, Senior Double Sculls over the full course and a dinghy race of a quarter of a mile, and should there be sufficient daylight left after the decision of these four events, there will be scratch fours over the usual course, but for which, on this occasion, entries must be sent in by Friday evening.

The entries are as follows.—

W D Braithwaite, bow
H R Pilcher 2
A V Venables 3
D Carvill bow
W C Burke 2
J C Buchanan 3

DINGHY RACE.—¼ MILE, 5-50 P.M.

The following heats will be rowed on Friday, leaving only the final for decision on Saturday:—

Heat 1.—L. R. Carter vs. C. A. Pearcy.
Heat 2.—L. G. Waller vs. G. Ward.
Heat 3.—J. A. Tassie vs. H. R. Pilcher.
Heat 4.—Winners of Heat 2 vs. Winners of Heat 3.
Heat 5.—A bye.
Final heat.—Winners of Heat 4 vs. the drawers of the bye.

Owing to various circumstances over which local oarsmen have, apparently, no control, the preparation for this regatta has been of the sketchiest description. But though we may not expect exceptionally good form, we shall probably see keen competition and close finishes.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—The Madras Command R.A. Football Competition is now in progress here, and although there have not been many entries, games have been close. The four teams which were left to play the semi-finals and finals were "G" Battery, R.H.A. (Bangalore), "L" Battery R.H.A. (holders), Secunderabad, the 31st Battery, R.F.A., who had sportingly come from Belgaum, and the 52nd Company, R.G.A., from Madras. Of these the holders beat the Garrison company fairly easily by 4 goals to nil, their long passing game proving very effective. In the course of this game a corner-kick went straight into the goal without being touched, a decidedly unusual incident. The 52nd Company whilst playing a good plucky game and being especially good on the defensive, did too much dribbling and wasted time where the ball should have been parted with at once.

The other semi-final was hardly a pleasant game. The 31st Battery, R.F.A., had all the worst of it, but deserve every possible credit for the plucky way in which they defended. McAdam, their centre forward—and captain—scored the only goal of the match during a brief period of pressure by the Field Battery, and the referee allowed the point. "G" Battery, however, protested, on the ground of "hands," and the match was ordered to be played again. There seemed to be some doubt whether the 31st would play, but they eventually did so, and moreover scored the first goal in the opening half. They tired in the second moiety of the game, however, and "G" Battery won a minute or two before time by 2 goals to 1. But in connection with the game there is a word to be said. Protests are allowable although the decision of the referee—to my personal knowledge he was a most capable one—is generally sufficient for most teams. But when teams sportingly come in from outstations to compete they should certainly not be hooted at as the 31st Battery were when they played the second game. If I were asked my opinion I should say they played by far the fairer game of the two teams. Fouls against "G" Battery were frequent, there was more than one deliberate trip, and whilst esprit de corps is all right in its way, a spirit of fairness and sport ought at the same time to prevail amongst soldiers. That section of the Bangalore Garrison which was to blame will easily be recognised by Bangalore readers. The final between "G" Battery and "L" Battery will be played on Wednesday next.

The Calcutta Senior Rugby Cup was won last Saturday by the West Riding Regiment from Darjeeling, who defeated Calcutta in the finals by a goal and three tries to a try. The winning team showed themselves a strong one with a thorough knowledge of the game.

On Tuesday evening, at the Dalhousie Institute the men of the 93rd Highlanders gave a boxing entertainment, the proceeds of the sale of tickets going partly towards the building fund of the Soldiers' Institute, shortly to be started in Calcutta, and partly to the Queen Victoria Memorial School at Edinburgh for the sons of soldiers and sailors. The extraordinary hour of 7-30 P.M. having been fixed for the opening of the programme, civilians were of course conspicuous by their absence, but there was a full soldier audience and taken all round it was an excellent show. The programme opened with a club swinging display and was followed by the feather-weight contest. Pte. Bailantyne beat Pte. Wilson, Pte. Stevens beat Pte. Clarke, Pte. Brash beat Pte. Scott. Pte. Stevens beat Pte. Brash in the finals. In the finals of the middle-weights Corporal Mackey beat Pte. Conway, who retired after one round. Pte. McNiff and Pte. Gordon next fought a ten-round contest, at the close of which they were judged equal. Two extra rounds were fought, Pte. McNiff getting the verdict. The ten-round contest between Ptes. Anstruther and Brisland was won by the latter, Anstruther withdrawing after two rounds. The entertainment was brought to a close with the six-round feather-weight contest between Ptes. Lamie and Miller for a Silver Cup presented by Messrs. John Dewar and Sons. This was won by Pte. Lamie.

General Notes.

DURING his visit to Alwar, His Excellency the Viceroy will probably instal the Maharaja on the gadi and make a shooting trip to Ramgarh.

It is stated, and the news will be received with general regret, that Mr. F. W. Latimer, C.I.E., Assistant Private Secretary to His Excellency the Viceroy, retires in March next.

We hear that Captain W. Drysdale, Royal Scots, is engaged to be married to the eldest daughter of Mr. J. W. P. Muir Mackenzie, I.C.S., Secretary to the Bombay Government.

A sad accident happened during a thunderstorm at Mussoorie on the 15th instant. Miss Nunn was killed by a flash of lighting while in the act of opening a door.

A sad shooting accident took place at Darjeeling, on the Lebong rifle range last Tuesday. A Private of the West Riding Regiment was killed by the ricochet of a bullet which struck him in the head.

Messrs. Ahmuty and Co. have sent us a copy of the latest edition of their Catalogue and "New Century" General Price List, which in matters connected with machinery and all the appliances common to the various branches of their business, ranges from steamers and engines to rat traps and needles. Of special interest to our sporting readers is the section devoted to camp and travelling requisites.

By means of a very neat contrivance the "Lynx" Tablet goes far to assure agreement of Bridge scores at the close of a rubber. The "Lynx" column in fact so admirably keeps the units in their proper place that addition of the scores of a protracted contest, from being irksome and vexatious, is rendered delightfully easy. A rubber that extends to a dozen hands or so is always troublesome of calculation, but infinitely more so when the scores are in irregular column. "Lynx's" ingenious, yet commendably simple, device surmounts the difficulty. In a word, the "Lynx" Tablet is addition made easy. To Messrs W. Newman and Co. very high praise is due for its elegant get-up. It is excellently printed in fashionable blue and the paper is luxurious. We can confidently aver that the "Lynx" Tablet is fully equal to the best London productions of its kind.

LONDON, Friday, 4th September, 1903.

PEOPLE are literally streaming back to town. I suppose the unspeakable weather is washing them home to their places of abiding: if so, it is quite in accordance with the unfitness of things that September, so far, should be gloriously fine and excessively hot. The partridge season has not opened very well, judging by the growls of friends and the newspaper reports: but nobody expected much after the spring and summer which have been inflicted upon us. I do not know when I have seen so few birds exposed for sale in the gamedealers' shops, nor when the price has been so high, 9 shillings a brace. These be the town dwellers' means of estimating the merits of the season, and no doubt it is as true a measure as exists.

Our poet laureate appeared in Monday's Times with In Memoriam verses on Lord Salisbury, who on that day was buried without pomp or circumstance at Hatfield. The verses signed "A. A." appeared at the head of one column and, perhaps for convenience of comparison, a poem of equal length signed Harold Begbie was printed at the head of the next. Instead of making any remarks on the two sets of verses, I clip a stanza from each. This is from A. A.'s offering :—

"Less loud and vehement"
Never were his quest or choice :
All He cared for was assent
Whispered by the still small voice,
And being loved and understood
By the just, and wise, and good.

The first line is a quotation from Measure for Measure. Here is a stanza from Mr. Begbie's :—

He was our stubborn heart, our steadying mind,
Our brain when faction's rhetoric was loud,
He was the eye of England none could blind
With dust of eloquence. He was too proud
To sweep his crown of state before the crowd,
Too strong to stumble with the driven herd,
Sullen he held his way, the fact behind the word.

"Sullen" was not perhaps quite the word to choose ; but regarding these two examples simply as poetry, which do you think the better ?

We hear a great deal about "Passive Resistance" in these days. Meritorious people who object to the latest thing in Education Bills refuse to pay the rate, to the end that they may be summoned and be made the victims of a stern magisterial decree under which seizure of such of their goods shall be made as will by their sale satisfy the rate collector. If these brave martyrs smile through their tears, the unregenerate who curse Education Bills and pay rates to save themselves trouble must I imagine smile through their sneers. This is the sort of farce that is enacted : Rev. George Mannington, pastor of the New Malden Congregational Church, refused to pay the rate and the police distrained on certain unspecified articles of property. These were "put up" by the auctioneer before a crowd of 300. The auctioneer's assistant emerged from a shed with the distrained goods, which were not unfastened from their covering of brown paper, and before the crowd had quite realized it the lot was knocked down, without any preliminary announcement, to a Mr. Goodall, an acquaintance of the auctioneer, for £3 19s., the amount required by the distress, and subsequently resold by him to Mr. Mannington at the same figure." Sweet the uses of cheap advertisement !

I hope now that we are arrived at the end of the newspaper dispute between Mr. H. Quilter and the Editor of the Magazine of Art. The former upheld the theory that the late James McNeil Whistler hated the Royal Academy with a deep undying hate, and the latter declared he didn't : as if it mattered two straws one way or the other : and for weeks the controversy has been raging with increasing acrimony. Now enter Mr. Luke Fildes, R. A., with the statement that about twelve years ago Mr. Whistler "sounded" him as to the chances or prospects of his election to the R. A., and left Mr. Fildes "under the distinct impression that, could it be arranged, election would be most acceptable to him." Now let us hope this vital matter may be allowed to rest, though the silly season is not yet far spent.

The mishap to the P. and O. special last Friday would have deprived you in India of a goodly share of your newspapers. The fire broke out in the van which carried bags described as "printed matter," and of these 35 were completely destroyed and an equal number were charred. People on the Bombay side would seem to be the greatest losers as it was the Bombay van in which the fire occurred. How it happened has not yet been discovered.

The lost lady doctor has not turned up yet. It has been asserted on one side, and as stoutly denied on the other that, there had been some difficulty between Miss Hickman and the authorities of the Hospital ; but nothing whatever has transpired to throw any light on the mystery.

With the 1st September matters dramatic began to wake up again. "Fancy dress melodrama" was the verdict passed upon The Cardinal, the new piece at the St. James', cautiously described by its author, Louis Parker, as "A Play." Melodrama it is pure and simple, all the four acts of it, and by no means new melodram at that : but judge of the story. Guiliano de' Medici (Mr. A. S. Homewood) loves Filiberta (Miss Nina Lindsay), daughter of the rich merchant, Bartolomeo Chigi (Mr Fred. Volpé) : Filiberta is willing and B. Chigi is willing : and so is Cardinal Giovanni de Medici (Mr. Willard), whose sanction we gather is indispensable. There is, however, an obstacle in the person of Andrea Strozzi (Mr. Herbert Waring), who is an outlaw enjoying Papal protection. Andrea loves Filiberta, and when Mr. B. Chigi refures him his daughter's hand, Andrea "stapped him in the powels" like Taphershon of old. Then conscience-stricken, he goes and confesses, selecting with great want of consideration the Cardinal to hear his bloody tale. His choice if accidental was unfortunate, because Guiliano, the Cardinal's brother, is soon after arrested on the charge of murdering Mr. Chigi. Andrea, absolved, having gone gaily off to the wars. Here is our Cardinal in a quandary and a quandary which paniful as it is, does not affect his benevolent smile (a smile of the most bland appears to be part of a Cardinal's outfit ; perhaps the result of wearing the Red Hat). Guiliano is tried and condemned and is awaiting death when Andrea turns up again.

* * * * * *

Andrea's conduct under these circumstances is simply disgraceful : he rejoices openly in Guiliano's condemnation and is deaf to all the Cardinal's appeals to his better nature : for he knows the Cardinal will never violate the secrets of the confessional. Being a far seeing villain, however, he reflects that the Cardinal is a hot favourite (pardon the expression) for the Papal chair when it shall be vacated by the present Pope : and that as Pope, the Cardinal could make things hot for an outlaw. He consents to confess and save Guiliano on the usual terms : Filiberta would consent, or says she would, but my own feeling is that she knew her prelatic uncle's views. He takes high ground of course and thunders. thunders is the word, No. Then the Cardinal at ease with his conscience, incubates a plan. He cannot denounce Andrea ; but he can hide witnesses behind the rich tapestry and lead Andrea to speak of his crime in their unsuspected presence. So planned so done, and all ends happily for everybody except Andrea, which of course is perfectly melodramatically right and proper.

* * * * * *

The piece was vociferously applauded from the cheaf seats : less vigorously from the stalls, though Mr. Willard's representation of the Cardinal was a good, dignified and satisfying piece of work save in one respect. To carry out his scheme with Andrea he simulates madness ; and to be brief he does not do it well. It was not convincing madness : and the situation was not stengthened by the circumstance that there was no reason why he should pretend brain-sickness at all. A really deep, clever Cardinal could circumvent Andrea without resort to such shallow trickery : and if Andrea had been only half sharp he would have suggested that a Cardinal liable to fits of insanity was certainly no proper candidate for the Papacy. Mr. Herbert Waring was about the wickedest villain you could find in or out of the criminal records of all nations. A black black villain without a redeeming ray, we should all have gladly seen him hanged drawn and quartered on the stage, but that so through a villain would be an irreparable loss to melodrama. The Cardinal and Andrea do practically all the work : Filiberta has little to do save look anguished and pathetic but does that very prettily.

Mr. Esmond's new comedy "Billy's Little Love Affair" was cordially received at the Criterion on Wednesday night. There is some smart and witty writing in it and the piece "goes :" but there is a lack of refinement about the whole affair which leaves an unpleasant after taste. The scene is laid at a country house where Mr. Greaves (Mr. Sam Gothem) and his elderly middle class wife (Miss Florence St. John) entertain the "best society:" but the interest of the business centres in a flat in Victoria Street where Mr. Greaves had a "pre-matrimonial establishment." We get pretty sick of that flat before the curtain fall ; but that liason of Mr. Greaves only indicates the tone of the play. The "best society" talkes the most outrageous scandal about their host and each other : it includes one lady Duncan (our sympathies went out to Miss Granville in respect of the flaming wig she wears, hall-mark I presume of the stage adventuress) the evil genius of the piece who for the sake of mischief is trying to create a breach between "Billy" otherwise Miss Wilhelmina Marr (Miss Eva Moore), and her young man Jack Freer (Mr. Allan Aynesworth). I don't feel inclined to go through the plot, if the scheme can be called a plot. I should like the play better if Mrs. Greaves (who does not, by the way, look "elderly," observed a little reticence about her young husband's "carryings-on:" if Lady Duncan proclaimed her character or the want of it, less brazenly ; if the Hon. Mrs. Herring could open her mouth without revealing scandal from the servants hall ; if—but the "ifs" are many. Harlesdon Manor in a word wants a thorough spring cleaning hostess, guests and all. It is difficult to rake up a shred of sympathy with anyone, though I did feel for "Billy" a rather giddy but innocent little flirt of whose character that appalling Lady Duncan and Co., "do their damnedest" (I quote from the play please) to make hay

Lord Wolseley's "story of a soldier's Life" is to be published next month by Messrs Constable. The late C.-in-C. does not, it is understood, bring his reminiscences up to date or anything like it : he byings his book to a close with the end of the Ashanti compaign of 1874. The work which has been attracting most attentionl atterly is Mr. Charles Booth's final volume on Life and Labour in London. This book has been the work of a life time and will stand as the most careful and important enquiry into the home life and conditions of the working classes in town ever put together. The feeling it leaves with the most sanguine and sympathetic reader is one of utter hopelessness. All the manifold evils appear to spring from the massing of people in streets whereby a new race is arisen : and the worst features of the situation are that these masses "only want to be let alone" while the crowd, the unget-atable crowd, grows denser and more inaccessible every year. One asks, what will London be a century hence ? Imagination boggles at the idea of London in A. D. 2003.

Mr. Montague Holbein is entitled to sympathy for his failure to accomplish his channel swim on Tuesday ; but it is not quite clear why his advisers prevailed upon him to leave the water when he was still going so strongly and felt quite fresh. It appears that when within four miles of the French coast, having been then 17½ hours in the water, an exceptionally strong tide carried him up-channel in such wise that ere long the nearest coast was eight miles distant ; and it was held an obvious certainty that the swimmer could not hold his own against the current. Having regard to the pluck, endurance and resolution Mr. Holbein displayed last year I should have thought he would keep going to the last gasp ; but doubtless he saw reasons to save his strength.

* * * * * *

A few weeks ago some ingenious, or ingenuous, newspaper man solemnly recorded as a fact that Mr. Rothschild had paid £1,000 for a new flea to add to his entomological collection. Mr. Bowdler Sharpe wishes the statement to be contradicted ; the market price of rare fleas is much less than £1,000. Mr. Bowdler Sharpe once heard of a new and curious flea which was valued at ten shillings,but whether by would-be seller or eager purchaser he does not say. The point to be made, however, is that persons in haste to be rich would be ill advised to forsake their present vocation, however humble, to catch fleas : became the usual price of any flea, coming from any part of the world is only 3d. or 6d. at most. It is to be hoped that this statement will check misguided industry and, in the words of the advertisements "prevent disappointment."

ONLOOKER.

Tom Parr, who owned a particularly showy animal called Glendusk, that had been successful in a sprint race on the classic heath, was offered £2,700 for it by Lord Hastings, who became the purchaser, but without the knowledge of his trainer, John Day.

This was on the eve of departure from the meeting. Without a moment's delay Parr sent the horse on to Day's stables and returned to London.

The sight of the animal was the first intimation the trainer had of its being bought.

Suspicious that something might be wrong, after examining it, Day struck him rather sharply across the belly with a stick he held in his hand, which made the colt cough violently, consequently causing John Day to see what he had suspected, that the animal was broken-winded.

As early as possible the next morning John appeared at Lord Hastings' residence

He was informed by the servants that his lordship was not to be disturbed on any pretext whatever ; but John Day was not the man to be put off.

"Go at once and say that it is John Day, and that I won't leave till I do see him," expostulated the trainer, rather impatiently. The servants, seeing that he was stubborn and meant being so, at last acceded to his request and dared to brook their master's anger.

However, in a few minutes John was ushered upstairs, and the result was that the bargain was to be no bargain.

John was there just before Mr. Parr, who arrived at ten o'clock to receive his cheque for the sale of Glendusk, which, however, was reduced to £200 and the horse back. The £200 was given as a solatium to Parr's feelings, and he accepted it, thinking, doubtless, the law would give him no more with such a connoisseur as John Day against him.

Shikar.

A PLEASANT TEN DAYS.

I HAD not been out from home very long when my desire to do a shoot was fired by A——whose delightful accounts of grand days and big heads gave the novice an idea that you only had to go a mile or two to get anything in the way of big game, and that the small game were only too anxious to run up against one. After one of his 'bukhs" I broached the subject of a Christmas shoot in his company and to my joy he consented. By his advice I invested in a cheap 12-bore and a good ·500 express, both of which arrived just a few days before our trip was to take place. My previous experience of shooting had been confined to a heavy trudge over hilly country after partridge, with an old gun borrowed from a farmer, and I spent the whole of my time gloating over my new possessions and pictured myself wiping the eye of my old sporting friend A——in the near future.

At last the eventful day came and we started for H—— eight miles away. Here we had breakfast and then started for a shoot. We had some twenty beaters and a shikari apiece and whilst walking to the first beat A——gave me all sorts of "tips" and admonitions and laid the most particular stress on the necessity of carefully noting where the other guns were placed. I found out afterwards that he had once been peppered with No. 4 by a youngster like myself. Our shikaries at last placed us in position and the beat commenced. Five minutes passed and nothing came out and I was beginning to get a bit tired of the strained position which I maintained from a sort of feeling that it was the right thing to do. A shot to my left from A——again put me on the qui vive and the sound of something running across my front over the dead leaves set me dancing about in a state of uncontrollable excitement, with the result that when I did see the animal, a jungle sheep, slowly crossing about thirty yards ahead, I took a hurried aim and missed with my ·500, and took a wild shot with my left barrel at a partridge That was all I saw of that beat and perhaps it is just as well it was so, as the sound of A——'s shots coming in quick succession raised my excitement to the highest pitch. A——'s little flutter came to an end soon, however, and going to where he was, I found him with a young jungle-sheep and four or five jungle fowl. We wasted no time, but started off straight away for the next beat. A——very considerately refraining from asking any question as to what I had seen or done. By the time we had been placed for the second beat my feelings had calmed down a bit. We were placed in beautiful positions, each at a corner of a clump of jungle about two hundred yards in length and we had a good clear view for a hundred yards or so in three directions. The beaters had to go round a long way so I thought a smoke would do me good and help to soothe my nerves. Before we could hear any sound from the beaters a sambur stag came leisurely out of the jungle straight in front of me. I was determined not to miss him through over-eagerness so took a long deliberate aim and gave him the right barrel and hit him just a little far back, but over he went and I rushed in and gave him the left barrel before ce could get up again, and that finished him. All my honfidence seemed to have returned now and I went back to my place as happy as a king. This sambur proved to be the only thing in the beat with the exception of a few jungle fowl and a hare of which we accounted for five and four respectively between us. We now had a rest and some lunch and decided to have no more beats that day, but just to form line with the beaters and walk up the jungle homewards. We had some three and a half miles to go through fallow fields with thin grass and small clumps of jungle and our tactics proved most sucessful as we bagged fourteen partridge, five harves and two pigeons. The sambur's head proved to be a very ordinary one, but as it was the first animal bigger than a hare that had ever fallen to my gun my satisfaction was out of all proportion to the value of the trophy.

For three days more we had the same sort of shooting, making each day quite enough of a bag to content us and then we started off for Y——for two days after bear. Y—— was a small village half way up a rocky hill covered with forest with a thick undergrowth and was supposed to be swarming with bear and the villagers predicted the very best of sport. We decided to have a beat in the first day and then try a day's tracking. Long before dawn we were partaking of a good solid chota hazri and never did hot coffee meet with greater approval. Just after daylight we arrived at the nullah it was proposed to beat first and after a stiff climb we gained our places on either side of a narrow, wooded gorge with steep sides. The beaters were extended in a fan shape below us at the mouth of the ravine and for some time we could see them advancing and closing in as the mouth became more and more restricted. Just as they got out of sight their shouts told us that there was game afoot, and we were immediately all attention. A——and myself could see each other and were in fact only some hundred yards apart. It was not long before I could see A——'s shikari making signs that he could see something and A——also evidently saw it as he brought his rifle to his shoulder. It was, however, soon brought down and then A——began to signal me that there was a brute just below him and as far as I could make out going in his direction. Not a sound could be heard, but my shikari was on the look-out and shortly after touched me on the elbow and pointed to the jungle on the opposite side of the ravine just below A——'s feet, but nothing could I see. It was only when the beast moved that I made out a bear crawling slowly up towards A——. His back was towards me and he offered a beautiful shot, but I was afraid A——might consider this his shot and was going to let the beast go, but my shikari was so frantic that I let the bear have the right barrel and got him fair between the shoulders and he rolled with a crash to the bottom of the raving By this time A—— had had a shot at a huge she bear which stood up only about four paces off him His shot knocked her over, but she was up again in a second, and charged him, but he was ready for her and stepped aside giving her the left barrel in the flank as she rushed past. She stumbled to the shot, pulled herself together again and made a dash for liberty, A——shouting to me to have a shot at her. She was some hundred and fifty yards from me and I hardly expected to hit her, but let drive and almost at the moment I fired she fell dead, I congratulated myself on my shot. A——'s attention was now taken up by another bear which was trying to bolt out at the side and after plugging there bullets into her, he got her. Nothing more was seen in this beat so I went down to the bottom of the ravine and found my beast stone dead. Off I then went to where A—— was, expecting to be congratulated on my long shot at his first bear, but to my disappointment found that I had not hit it at all, but that she had died from the effects of A——'s two shots, both of which had to'd.

We shortly after this came across another village, the inhabitants of which were keen to turn out and beat and our shikaries suggested that we should take every able-bodied man there and beat the whole of a hill side at once, under which conditions he promised us some good sport. The idea seemed good, though a couple more guns would have been an advantage. However we decided to post two natives with our 12-bores to act as stops and they agreed to the proposal. Half an hour's walk took us to our places, but the beaters had to go much further so we expected a wait of an hour at least, and sat down together under a tree Not long after we had sat down A——nudged me and pointed out a panther apparently stalking something about fifty yards off to our right front, and he very generously motioned me to take the shot. I made again the mistake of firing too quickly, but luckily hit him through the spine with my first shot and with the second got him through the head. Hardly had the sound of the shots died away before there came a tremendous crashing straight from the front and two bears appeared, both of which A——got with a real good right and left, both of them falling dead.

We now parted and took up our respective positions and shortly after heard the distant shouts of the beaters. Not until the beaters were fairly close, however, did we hear or see anything. I heard A——fire two shots, followed by a great hubbub and then got a shot at a bear racing down the hill side and was lucky enough to bowl him over and shortly after wounded another, but he made off towards A——, who finished him. I could hear A——apparently doing well and in fact he got there in that beat. It was now getting late so we decided to make for camp after an excellent day, in fact A——himself admitted it was far and away the best place for bear that he had come across in his fifteen years' experience. Little wonder that the unfortunate villagers were so keen on our shooting there and we got the promise of such a large number of beaters for the next day that we gave up our former intention of going out tracking. On reaching camp we had dinner and turned in at once as we were to start at the unholy hour of 3 A.M., with a five-mile ride to the day's ground.

Next morning on arrival at the rendezvous we found quite an army of beaters, over a hundred and fifty having turned up. Big beats were again the order of the day. In the first beat close to the village absolutely nothing appeared and then we crossed the valley for a beat over the slopes of the main hill. It took the beaters an hour and a half to get into proper position and we were not ready much before them, with a stretch of about three miles of country between us. There were tracks of bear all over the place and we looked forward to a good day's sport. My place was high up the hill with A——a little lower down and the absence of undergrowth made it possible for us to see one another. We had not to wait long. A she bear with two cubs came out just between us and we both fired almost simultaneously. A——'s bullet found its billet in the beast's flank, but mine was a disgraceful miss which got one of the cubs in the hind leg which it broke. The old mother was badly hit, but the pandemonium which the cub raised, roused her to action and she came for me but was too weak and knocked out to more than crawl and a shot through the head finished her. A—— s shikari collared the wounded cub and A——gave it a shot in the head to finish it. The other bolted. All the luck seemed to come my way, three bears coming out and giving me easy shots which even a novice could not miss, though I am sorry to say that bad shooting caused me to use eleven bullets over them. A——got nothing until the beaters were close up when he bagged one out of a couple that appeared and wounded the other. It was evident that the wounded one was badly hit, so we followed it up and after a mile's tramp came across him lying under a tree with hardly a kick in him and one shot finished him. The only good bit of country now remaining was some three miles off in an opposite direction to our camp, so we decided to stop and got back to camp fairly early. After a tub and a peg I turned in for a sleep, but A——was too keen a sportsman and went out with a couple of men for a stroll with his gun. He was not out long, but managed to pick up a few jungle fowl and a pheasant which was a welcome additiont o our larder.

We put in a couple more days at H——before our leave was up and had some very fine sport with the jungle sheep, partridge and jungle fowl. Nothing struck me more than the way in which A——avoided in any manner touching in the way I had shot, etc., and at length I asked him why he did not criticise "My dear boy," he said in reply, "I can see for myself that you are satisfied with your performances and that you are gaining in confidence. If I wished to put you out of conceit with yourself I could do so and could find many little adverse criticisms, but were I to do so, in the first place you would probably not believe me and in the second I should destroy that confidence in your own powers which is so essential to a man who intends risking his life after big game. There is only one little bit of advice I wish to give you and that is, "when you have had a fair amount of experience don't presume on your knowledge and give advice unless it is sought and above all don't criticise too severely the budding sportsman." The real experience that you get from a week's shooting is better than the boiled down experience of a man who has spent ten years at it, but combine the two, viz., personal experience and that of a veteran sportsman and you have the ideal." Those were his opinions and now after some years of personal experience I can fully endorse them and wish that the author of them were still amongst us and able to enjoy another ten days.

Fishing.

EASTERN FISHING FOR THE POOJAHS.

TO those to whom the rod is a more alluring implement of sport than the rifle or spear, the Assam-Bengal Railway affords facilities now for reaching some of the finest fishing waters that have hitherto only been open to such as have been able to afford a long holiday. By leaving Calcutta by the mail train the Munnipore frontier of Cachar, with its 20 miles of sparkling rapids running down each side of the Kalanaga range, can be reached on the evening of the third day; if arrangements are telegraphed on to Silchar to have boats, etc., in readiness; or still better, sending on all impedimenta, such as servants and tackle, and riding from the station to Luckipore, a good twenty-four hours can be saved. The fisherman can then take his choice, either confining operations to the reach between Tipai and Jeerii mooks, cross the range fishing down the eastern reach within the little State, or up from Tipai: even the smaller stream of the Jeerii itself will not fail to satisfy the less ambitious, though as the waters of this are not so clear as the main Barak the unexpected is very likely to happen, and he who trolls for the two or three pound basha may suddenly find himself involved in a struggle with a forty or fifty pound masheer. Yet I recommend both light and heavy tackle being taken, for one is pretty safe with a trout rod at the mouths of the smaller affluents. From Luckipore up the enormous quantity of insect life along these rivers induces fish to flock to them in numbers in this and the following month, when lepidoptera hatch out, and as the steam vessels ply not above the frontier bazar, there is nothing to interfere with the fisherman, but otters and the lesser kites; it being too early in the season for weiring the stream and there is still too much water for the driving and spearing by cresset light. In fact, on these particular waters these poaching dodges are not so much resorted to as lower down on the northern side of the Surma Valley. A light gun may be taken, though there is not much in the way of fowl offering in Eastern Cachar at this season, and though it may be admissible to pot a stray jungle cock, firing on hens with their immature broods should be tabooed. The small ravine deer come out along the churs jutting out from the range, but the projah excursionist should pin his hopes and anticipatious for the two months on the rod. In casting or trolling for the lords of the water, it is almost unnecesary to say that very strong tackle is needed, for though veritable monsters remain up here throughout the cold weather September and October are the months par excellence for masheer fishing. The Lallong, Jetinga, Goomrah, Loobah and Hari are all marked on the map, but with the exception of the two last their upper reaches run through tea gardens so the mouths afford the best grounds for the fisherman Choice of bait depends a good deal on the weather, which at this season is generally cloudy so that good brilliant flies or bright spoons will prove most successful for the big fellows, but almost anything will be taken by the small fry in the lesser streams. In all cases the operator must be prepared to be much bothered with his bait being snapped at by little piscatorial poachers, but as a rule the huge catfish has gone down stream by this time and the gar does not put in an appearence till later on. The Loobah is well worth whipping above the tea gardens of that name, but trolling is more recommended between the coolie lines and the main river (the Surma). If time permits the Jaintiapore rivers, the Hari and Noagong will prove very satisfactory, but the fishing grounds being high up under the hills previous arrangements as to houses are necessary. Putting up in the Bhurghat village you are safe enough, but either in tent or basha near the famous rapid just below, you are pretty certain to receive a night call from one or other of the curious cat tribe so a gun should be taken, and as there is an obstreperous hathi, knocking about the sub-division it will be as well on either of these streams to carry half a dozen Bengali bombs in case he turns up. Jaintiapore is best reached from the Sylhet station and those limited to time had better proceed there by rail and road, for the steamer service is rather tedious affording nothing of interest en route. Such as can make a month of it may vary their programme by jaunts to Terriah, Darrang, to the east of the latter place, or the stream coming out through the Shella gorge, but all information can be had on the spot and there is never any dearth of voluntary assistants provided a due share of the days' spoils are distributed: a little decent potteen also helps the wanderer in these parts. Young otter kittens can be captured this month in their dens and all the hill men are exceedingly cute in tracking them. The half-drained bheels will furnish nothing till well into November, but the usual ten days or fortnight's outing should be entirely devoted to the rod.

A CRITIC CRITICISED.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The letter of "Portax" in your issue of 13th August seems to betray injured feelings: and he shall have a few lines in reply. I take his plaints in order. In the opinion of many good judges Mr. Wardle is at his best in the dog pictures he paints and draws, with such fidelity, skill and sympathetic knowledge. I wrote "the jaguar (?)" because, after considering the picture alone and with an eminent naturalist who chanced to be present, some question remained in our minds concerning the species. "Portax" says it was a jaguar: very good.

Touching the picture of the Siberian tigress the canvas was "skied," and, as even invited visitors to Burlington House are not allowed to carry step ladders, I had to survey the work from the floor. I accept "Portax's" correction concerning the sex of the animal: and beg leave to follow him up on his own ground; it will be interesting to see where he gets to if we give him his head. He says "It is truly a pity that he (that's myself) cannot get to the offside of the beast, for perhaps he would find that sufficiently lacerated even," etc., etc.: and this follows the parenthetical statement that the wound in the belly of the tiger "has as certainly not been caused by a bullet, badly aimed or otherwise, as it evidently has been inflicted by the powerful horn of some opponent." Very well; not possessing an eye of such penetrative power that I can see what is on the other side of a painted tigress, I accept "Portax's" authority for it that the worst damage was done on that side; and regard the small hole whence blood trickles, which I could see, as the point where that powerful horn came right through. Now the question arises, to whose head was that powerful horn attached? "Portax" is reticent on this point; but it must have belonged to something. Was it a dong? Mr Lydekker and other authorities, I think, indicate Northern Tibet as the limit of the wild yak's distribution: it seems very unlikely then that a wild yak was mixed up in the affair. Artistic license, I conceive, would stop short of importing a musk ox from the New World for its purpose: with the better reason, inasmuch as it is wildly improbable that the most pugnacious musk ox would on any terms engage in combat with a tigress if afforded the chance. There is no other horned opponent on which we can fix responsibility for the injuries of that tigress: no wild one at least: and the only course open to us is to send to the nearest settlement and borrow a cow. A cow then has strayed far, far away into these Arctic wilds (and what on earth she went there for "Portax" only knows) has had some unpleasantness with a tigress and has held her own. Nay, more; has so severely lacerated the tigress on the offside that the tip of her powerful horn came through the skin of the near side, making a hole which might be mistaken for a bullet wound. The title of the picture remains for explanation and this is easily forthcoming. Who habet? Surely it needs no great imaginative effort to conceive in the unpainted foreground: the cow triumphant but calm, exclaiming, with timely reminiscence of its Latin grammar, "Habet."

I suppose I ought to have thought of all this before I wrote that article: but I was not then in possession of the facts of the case and honestly thought it was a bullet wound from which the tigress was suffering (it really did look exactly like one: I should say the tip of the cow's powerful horn would fit a ·500 express) and that it was a man who with more confidence in the effect of his shot than circumstances justify, exclaimed "Habet!"

Now, having contributed my share of thunder to a teacup storm in penitent mood, I subscribe myself

POONA TENTH EXTRA MEETING.

Saturday, 19th September 1903.

PROCEEDINGS opened with the All Horse Hurdle Handicap and for this Milburn had been ticked off for some days, but on the course Gaulme was in strong demand and went out first favourite with Altamas on the strength of his recent performance against Acetine (who, by the way, is still the property of Dr. Spooner Hart), next in favour. Altamas led to the second Hurdle where Gaulme took command and from that point he had his field at his mercy. Milburn looked like getting second place, but Madera came strongly at the finish and landed second money for Lieutenant-Colonel Hazelton.

Of a field of nine, only six faced the barrier in front of the Stand, for the Pony Hurdle Handicap and Funny had pride of place in the betting lists, his most serious opponent Malice having been scratched. There was always money for Beryl and Good Boy, and Patrician was well backed for place. At the first Hurdle Funny pecked badly but Hoyt pulled him together and let him go easily after the field which Patrician led. Two hurdles from home Good Boy was fast catching the leader, but he rapped the hurdle and lost ground. Meantime Funny was creeping up, and just before the last hurdle caught Patrician and won very easily, the victory being accorded loud applause A. Hoyt rode a most judicious race on the winner.

A veritable Chinese puzzle was the 'Nursery Handicap" and if anything Sanaiya was firmest in the ring at 3 to 1, but Nijaffi, New Moon and Kour Saheb were also freely supported. A grand race was witnessed. Flying Childers, who has proved a disappointing investment to his owners, was quickest away, but he was soon done with, and New Moon heeled affairs, but up the straight Clever Boy came along at his top hotly pursued by Mooreed who just managed to dead heat with the leader with New Moon a good third. The owners decided to run off and the issue of this was productive of a contretemps. Clever Boy won though Mooreed was expected to head him, and the owner of the latter promptly lodged an objection, alleging that the ownership of Clever Boy was not as stated on the card. Only one name, it was alleged, was mentioned, the co-partner not having been mentioned when entering. The Stewards decided to enquire into this and give their decision on Wednesday. A splendid field marshalled for the "Sandown Stakes" for which Beadsman did not go out as he was carrying top-weight and the going was far from being on top. The stable considered Swiftsure was good enough to annex the stakes for them. Miss Windsor and Fitzeros, the bottom weights, were greatly in demand, while the improved form of Blue Blood was responsible for his large following. Spark was the tip of the Man-in-the-Know, but after leading to the bend the big horse was disposed of and Swiftsure looked a winner from Roscommon, but Blue Blood came with a splendid rattle between these two and won easily from Swiftsure.

A field of ten contested the "Consolation Stakes" Connaught being the better favourite than Najeed or Musketeer. The cognoscenti seemed to overlook that faithful little chestnut, The Robber, who won all the way, beating Selim and Wild Fox, while the favourite was nowhere.

The country bred, Lady Betty, was looked upon as a cert for the Little Welter Plate, and she would most probably have won, but for the fact that she bolted wrong way round the course for three furlongs and when taken back to her field gave trouble at the gate and finished absolutely last.

With Metalgia out of it Olga, considering the weights and the state of the course, was expected to beat Key West and was backed accordingly, but there was also money for the latter and some for Western Queen. Miss Birnie had the fine galloping weight of 6st, and she streaked along ahead of her field all through, Olga having to be content with second place with Key West third. Details—

RACING IN AUSTRALIA.

THE S. A. J. C. SPRING MEETING.

SOUTH AUSTRALIAN DERBY.—Of 10sovs. each, with 250sovs. added ; second horse 50sovs. and third 25sovs. out of the stake One and a half miles.

£834-10—Sir Rupert Clarke's b c F J A by Wallace—La Tosca, 8st 10lbs ... W H Ross 1
£253-15—Mr F W Allen's b c St Vincent by Carlyon—Lady Doris, 8st 10lbs H J Morrison 2
£53-15—Mr J Perry's b or br c Ben Hur, by Zalinski—Nemesis, 8st 10 lbs ... J Mc-Donald 3
£56-15—Mr J Bowen's b c Rifler, 8st 10lbs ... ... W Lake 0
£123-5—Mr R H Crawford's Trustee Blackler's Estate b f Equality, 8st 6lbs S Willis 0

Amount in totalisator, £1,322. Dividend for £1 tickets, £1-8.

Just as the barrier flew up St Vincent was on the inside, then Rifler, and F J A with Equality, on the outside. Ben Hur led past the judge's box, from Rifler, F.J.A. and Equality, with St. Vincent last. Equality took up the running and led out of the straight from Ben Hur, Rifler, F.J.A. and St Vincent the quinted galloping in Indian file. Willis allowed the Fulham Park filly to stride along, and at Elder's she must have been quite 10 lengths in front of Ben Hur and Rifler, then came F.J.A. with St. Vincent last. At the end of another furlong Equality had stolen a break of 15 lengths from Rifler, Ben Hur, F.A J., and St. Vincent. Running past the milepost the filly must have been almost 20 lengths in front of the others who were headed by Ben Hur. Passing the seven, F.J.A. had run up second, and he was gradually reducing the gap on the leader. Six furlongs from home Equality was only half a dozen lengths to the good of F.J A., a length further back following St. Vincent, then the others a couple of lengths astern. At the five furlong Equality was four lengths in advance of her field F.J.A. was wearing her down. Before reaching the half mile post he drew right on to her, while St. Vincent was also in her wake. Passing the three furlongs F J.A. assumed command and led St. Vincent by a couple of lengths while Equality was next, then Ben Hur and Rifler. F.J.A., going comfortably, was first into the straight from St. Vincent, Equality, Ben. Hur, and Rifler. Coming down the home stretch F.J.A. held his own, and won hard held by three lengths from St. Vincent. In the last stride Ben Hur just pipped Equality and thus finished third half a dozen lengths behind St. Vincent, Rifler was last. Time—2mins. 42⅘secs.

THE TURF.

GATWICK AUGUST MEETING.

ALTHOUGH the weather was dull at Gatwick on the 28th ultimo, it was an agreeable change from that experienced the previous day at York, and was taken full advantage of by racegoers, the attendance being fairly large. The card comprised six events, and a start was made with the Addiscombe Plate, which brought out the good field of twelve runners. Bridal, the only previous winner of the lot, was looked upon as the best business, but the winner turned up in the American-bred filly by Meddler out of Victoria IV. Although she had never sported silk before, on the strength of her home reputation Sister to Rose Blair was an odds-on favourite for the Norbury Plate, but could only get third to Lottie Hampton colt and Orange Leaf filly. The Kite Handicap produced a little excitement, as when entering the straight the leading trio, La Napoule, Lancewood and Incantation bolted, and two jumped the rails cleanly. Claqueur, who had been fifth, then went on and won by two lengths. In the Selhurst Selling Plate Puerto became fractious at the post, and, unseating Madden, bolted, after which the little-fancied Deseo made all the running and won by two lengths, the favourite, Lady Voter, having to put up with third place. With odds of 11 to 8 on Le Blizon brought a shade of relief to backers by accounting for the Plantation Mid-weight Handicap, but they wound up badly when one of the outsiders of the party, Ray, won the Moderate Plate.

THE NORBURY PLATE—Of 176sovs. for two year olds. Five furlongs.

(Winner trained by Mr Davies.)

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Sister to Rose Blair 5 to 2 agst the Pegaway colt, 7 to 1 the Orange Leaf filly, 10 to 1 the Lottie Hampton colt, and 100 to 3 any other (offered.)

Won by three-quarters of a length; a length between second and third. Pegaway colt was fourth, Whirlpool filly next, and Juvenis last throughout.

For many months to come backers will have good cause to remember the Gatwick Meeting which was brought to a close on Saturday, the 29th ultimo. Throughout the two days only two first favourites were successful, and the winners for the most part sprung from the friendless and unpriced division, the "talent" experiencing a series of rebuffs the like of which they have not encountered during the present summer. Seeing that the value of the prizes offered by the executive barely exceeded the minimum prescribed by clause 156 of the Rules of Racing, it was hardly to be expected that the quality of the competitors engaged would soar above mediocrity, but many of the races were stoutly contested, and some brisk sport was witnessed by a big holiday company. The conditions showed some improvement upon those of Friday, and the sun shining forth brightly throughout the proceedings, the afternoon was all that the most exacting devotees of the sport of kings could have desired.

Won by three-quarters of a length; a head divided the second and third. Acrostic was fourth, Parramatta fifth, La Napoule sixth, Pure Gold next, and Sweet Dixie, last throughout. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2mins. 14⅘secs.

DERBY SEPTEMBER MEETING.

Really summerlike weather was at last experienced at a race meeting when that at Derby, a decidedly popular re-union, opened on the 1st instant, and the result was a fairly large attendance, while, with the going naturally in excellent condition, the sport was fully up to the average and admittedly enjoyable, although backers continued on the wrong side of the book. The card comprised seven events, and with one exception there were good fields no less than twenty-two horses coming under the starter's orders in the Friary Nursery. Business started with the Hartington Plate, and fielders scored when the 10 to 1 chance, Gower, won a great race by a head, the favourite, Orbel being third. Eon, who was purchased at York after winning the Falmouth Selling Welter, accounted for the Chaddesden Selling Welter, but to retain the colt Mr. Elphinston had to bid 370 guineas, a very substantial margin thus accruing to the fund and the owner of the second. Notwithstanding a big field, Camphor justified the confidence placed in her by easily winning the Nursery Plate, and then Andover won the Champion Breeders' Biennial Foal Stakes, being favourite at "twos" and ridden by Mornington Cannon. The Shipley Hall Selling Plate went to Fallon's stable by the aid of the little fancied Bourton Hill and, Carburton having won the Portland Plate, the day's proceedings were brought to a close when White Webbs, a son of Trenton, credited Mr. W. C. Whitney with the Belper Plate.

(Winner trained by J. Porter.)

BETTING: 2 to 1 agst. Andover, 11 to 4 Lady Angela, 9 to 2 Topiary, 8 to 1 each Irritant and Challenger, and 20 to 1 any other (offered).

Won easily by a length and a half; three parts of a length between second and third. Lady Angela was fourth, Orgueil fifth, Irritant sixth, Challenger seventh, St. Hilda eighth, Fruit Picker next, and Pace Egger colt last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min 2secs.

The vagaries of the weather experienced this season were fully exemplified on the 2nd at Derby, when, in direct contrast to the previous morning, the outlook was anything but propitious, rain having fallen early and the surroundings generally being cheerless from an atmospherical point of view. The sport, however, was fully maintained, and, if anything, up to the average, although once more fielders had all the better of the argument. Again the card compromised seven events, and in selecting Rightwell to win the London Selling Plate, backers were at fault as the little-fancied Imola won easily. Kilteel accounted for the Kedleston Plate and, Shy Lady colt having given the followers of S. Darling's stable a good turn, the way was paved for the valuable Champion Breeder's Foal Stakes. Only five runners faced the starter, and Rondeau justified his place at the head of the quotations by making all the running and winning by five lengths. Lottie Hampton colt, one of the outsiders of the party, won the Devonshire Plate, Aversion the Spondon Selling Plate, and the day's proceedings were brought to a close when W. Lane, on Childwickbury, a 100 to 7 chance, got home in the Chatsworth Plate.

Won by half a length; a neck between second and third. Dean Swift was fourth, Odor fifth, Pintail filly sixth Plembieres seventh, Tamasha eighth, Moggs colt ninth, and Kilt II, last. Time by Benson's chronograph 1min. 7⅗secs.

There was very little improvement at Derby on the 3rd instant from an atmospherical point of view, but before the concluding stage of the meeting was entered upon the weather cleared and the race passed off most satisfactorily. Six events were on the card, and with one exception the field were fairly large, while generally the sport was fully up to the average. Business was resumed with the Selling Nursery, for which eleven starters went to the post. Backers selected Goya, but, as has been the case invariably of late, were wrong, the winner turning up in Little Sprout. Robino won the Rangemore Plate, and Drumsboreland, also a fancied article, the Abbots Hill Selling Plate. O'Donovan Rossa, after many disappointments, won the Peveril of the Peak Plate and, Palace Yard having accounted for the Elvaston Nursery, Firmilian won the King's Plate and gave backers a little consolation in winding up the meeting.

BETTING: 4 to 1 against O'Donovan Rossa, 4 to 1 Muriel II., 8 to 1 Conroy II. 100 to 12 Pollion, 10 to 1 Achaicus, 10 to 1 Rayleigh, 100 to 8 Bachelor's Button, 100 to 8 Littleton, 100 to 7 Sankence, 25 to 1 any other (offered).

When the tapes were released Sankence hung fire, and the running was made by Rayleigh, on the right, from O'Donovan Rossa and Pollion in the centre, with Flying Ivy on the left and Muriel II. next in advance of Morgendale and Achaicus, Sankence being the whipper in for about three furlongs, when O'Donovan Rossa drew to the front, and, coming away by himself, made the remainder of the running from Rayleigh and Muriel II. and won in a canter by five lengths; three-quarters of a length divided the second and third. Morgendale was fourth, Salute fifth, Ballantrace sixth, Conry II. seventh, Achaicus eighth, Flying Ivy ninth, and Littleton last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min. 41⅘secs.

CRICKET.

GENTLEMEN vs. PLAYERS.—Second match played at Scarborough on, 31st August 1st and 2nd September. Players won by an innings and 8 runs. With Fry, Ranjitsinhji, and L. C. H. Palairet engaged 1 in county matches, and other men, Maclaren and Jessop for example, not available, the Gentlemen's team could by no means be considered representative. On the other hand the Players although not at their strongest had a powerful team. On the first day's play the Gentlemen had much the worst of the game, for although they scored 200, which in these days is a formidable total, the Players put up 98 for the loss of only two wickets. The Gentlemen lost their first three wickets for 16 runs, W. L. Foster being in for half an hour for his three runs, but F. S. Jackson and P. F. Warner then played fine cricket with the result that during their partnership they put on 54 runs in an hour. For his 27 Jackson was batting for an hour and ten minutes. Warner still continued to play a beautiful but exceedingly patient game, and he survived until he had made 79 in three hours. It must be admitted that the cricket played by the Gentlemen as a whole was not of the attractive kind which is usually associated with Gentlemen's teams. But if the spectators had suffered for the greater part of the day, they were rewarded by seeing some very lively cricket when the Players went in for an hour and ten minutes. Tunnicliffe played a particularly pleasing game, and made his 39 in three quarters of an hour, his score being made up of eleven singles and seven 4's. The Players were seen to great advantage on Tuesday, the only man who failed being Thompson. Tyldesley was in splendid form, and made 79 in an hour and three quarters, his partnership with J. Gunn yielding 81 in less than an hour. Hirst again played admirable cricket, and later in the innings Rhodes set about the task of making the 76 runs which he required to complete his thousand for the season, and met with such success that before he was out he had the satisfaction of accomplishing the feat. The Gentlemen had to go in against a balance of 24, and in the three-quarters of an hour remaining for play scored 68 for three wickets. Yesterday, whatever chances they may have had of making a good fight, were spoilt by the rain, which delayed play until a few minutes past one o'clock. Nearly every man on the side made a useful score, and the tail played up so well that it was quite on the cards that the game would be drawn. But the bowlers always had slightly the best of the situation.

SWIMMING.

THE CHANNEL SWIM.—To emulate the great performance of the late Captain Webb, who, on 24th and 25th August 1875 swam the English Channel, was the ambition of the once famous cyclist Montague Holbein. Four times has he tried and failed, and now a disappointed man he says that he will make no further attempt. Everything appeared favourable when he started from Dover on Tuesday evening, for the wind had dropped away to nothing and the sea had subsided with remarkable suddenness; in fact, when he entered the water there was what is known as a flat calm. Through a perfectly still night he made splendid progress, so much so that at one time he was travelling too rapidly. Side stroke and back stroke alternately carried him nearer the French coast, and when day broke he replied cheerily that he was quite well and confident. A message came through that, barring accidents, he could not fail, and those that accompanied him were congratulating themselves on having witnessed a performance upon which not the slightest shadow of doubt or suspicion could be thrown. However, at the moment when everything appeared to be settled came the disappointment which eventually caused the swim to end in failure. He was then as fresh as could be expected, and had already been within four miles of the French coast. However, he met contrary tides, and was swept back towards Dover. For four hours he tried to fight nature, but then had lost four miles, and was eight miles off the coast. It was no use going on, and when told that he could not possibly reach France he left the water, after having swum about forty miles in 17hrs. 20mins. This condition speaks for itself, when it is mentioned that Holbein clambered into the tug unassisted. He did not want for attention throughout his swim, for he had the best of advice and was taken through a perfect course. Had luck attended him yesterday, the story of the swim would have been written in a different manner, and the word "success" largely used. Doubt has often been expressed whether Captain Webb ever did swim the Channel, but as there are men alive to-day who were with him on that occasion and say that he did it, and fairly too, it is wrong to question the feat. However, in the face of Holbein's carefully-prepared efforts, the grand physical condition of the swimmer, and his great pluck and determination, it is remarkable that Webb, who did not take these precautions, succeeded where the once famous cyclist failed.

LAWN TENNIS.

THE DOHERTYS IN AMERICA.

H L. Doherty and R F. Doherty scored in overwhelming fashion over the American tennis experts at the Meadow Club (Southampton) Tournament. The English tennis champions between them won both the finals in the Singles and Doubles. In the Singles H. L. Doherty defeated William A. Larned, the American champion, in three sets by the score of 6—1, 6—2, 6—1. In the Doubles the Doherty brothers defeated William A. Larned and Beals C. Wright by the score of 6—1 6—3, 6—1. The play of the Englishman never reached the topmost flights of brilliancy exhibited at times by their opponents, but they were cool and calculating under all circumstances. They made few errors, and in this respect made a strong contrast with the American players. Larned scored a number of phenomenal pases against the little Doherty in the Singles match, but his work at the close was weak, and Doherty took the points at will. Wright made a heroic effort to take a set in the Doubles contest, but H L Doherty placed the ball to the sides and crosscourted so cleverly that the Americans were outplayed in all the games.

The scores in the Singles were:

		Pts.	Sc.
First Set.
H L Doherty	4 7 11 7 4 2	4—39	6
W A Larned	2 5 9 5 2 4	2—29
Second Set.

W A Larned	2 0 1 3 4 4 1	1—16	2
Third Set.
H L Doherty	4 4 4 1 4 4	4—25	6
W A Larned	2 2 1 4 0 1	2—12	1

		Pts.	Sc.
First Set.
Doherty Brothers	4 4 4 4 2 4	5—27	6
Wright and Larned	2 1 0 2 4 1	3—13	1
Second Set.

Wright and Larned	2 4 0 4 4 1 1 2	2—20	3
Third Set.
Doherty Brothers	0 4 4 6 5 4	5—28	6
Wright and Larned	4 0 2 4 3 0	3—16	1

On the following day W A Larned met R F Doherty in an exhibition match in the Singles. The American was in much better condition than on the previous day against H. L. Doherty. Each man worked hard for the points, and there was an abundance of brilliant play. The final score was 6—3, 6—4, 6—4 in favour of W. A. Larned.

Both the Doherty and their partners were defeated in the Mixed Doubles in the morning. The only one of the Englishmen to retain his place was Harold S. Mahony, who was paired with Mrs. Handley.

GOLF.

THE OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE TEAM IN AMERICA.

Chicago exchanges of 18th August contain the following: The team of Oxford and Cambridge golfers to-day won the honours in the first of the contests in the West, defeating L. T. Boyd's All-Western team on the links of the Chalcago G. C., at Wheaton, in the best-ball foursomes, three to two, and winning the singles competition by the score of eight to three. In the latter event, Louis N. James, Walter E. Egan, and B. F. Cummins were the only home representatives who succeeded in defeating their British rivals.

H. Chandler Egan and Norman F. Hunter furnished the most exciting match of the contest. Five hundred enthusiasts who watched the play saw Hunter complete the 6,032 yards course in 71, breaking all records, either amateur or professional. Mr. Hunter won his match handily by four up, going out in 35 and coming home in 36, but Mr. Egan was not disgraced, for he returned 76, which is one better than his former record, and only one stroke worse than the record of 75 made yesterday by G. H. B. Ellis, of Oxford, and equalled early to-day by P. W. Leathart, of Cambridge. Not even Harry Vardon, who made the course in 74, played such remarkable golf. Mr. Hunter's feat of clipping off eleven strokes from the difficult "Bogey" score appeared so brilliant that the victory of the Englishmen seemed a secondary matter. The record-breaking card read:

Out: 5 4 4 4 4 3 5 4 4 2—35
Home: 3 4 3 5 4 5 4 4 4—36—71.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

HARAPSAR is never I gather one of the fashionable meets, and this is all the more remarkable since it is one of the closest and allows the lie-a-beis an extra half hour. But the covers are apparently none too reliable and when a jack is accommodating to remain at home out of compliment to his distinguished visitors from the Fytchley and elsewhere, he generally makes, wisely enough, for the rocky fastnesses of Gibbet Hill (ominous name) and the apparently inaccessible heights of the Kartruj range. These were presumably, therefore, the disturbing influences which prevented more than a fairly large field from coming to seek sport on the 13th September: certainly fewer than the recent brilliant runs might have led one to anticipate. Passing through the village, the Master having strategically posted his field on the high road, proceeded to draw somewhat extensive sugarcane fields on the right, but the "Not at Home" box was on the gate post and after half an hour of the most careful and patient work on the part of hounds, uninteresting enough it must be confessed to the field who could enjoy but little of the cover work, Colonel Sheringham had to sound the drawn blank, and rejoined the expectant and admirably patient members on the road. Crossing this and eschewing cane cover on the further side the master drew some likely looking spinneys and patches of crop near the canal, and after some anxious minutes the ever acceptable hint of good things in the shape of feathering sterns set blood a-tingling once again. On reaching a country cart track near a jowari field all doubt was at once dispelled and hounds settled to business at a very fair pace. Hard indeed rocky, was the going and to a great extent lacking the charm of variety peculiar to better portions of this hunting country, but very enjoyable I gather for all that. Towards the Southern Mahratta Railway line and stopping short of it the jack led hounds for some distance parallel to it. But hounds were beginning to press cruelly close, and feeling that fleetness and vigour were failing him he made one despairing effort at his inherent wiliness for darting under a timely culvert under the line he doubled sharp back over it. An admirable idea, but faultily executed, or else hounds were a trifle too clever. For his ruse scarcely spared him a minute's grace and he had scarcely cleared the line limits when hounds tumbled him over. A very excellent little quarter of an hour, I hear, it was and thoroughly enjoyed by all. After a few minutes to "fill the bellows" the master drew several likely sugarcane fields, any one of which ought to have held a jack, but sugar was not in request that morning. Not even a patch from which a galloping jack was evicted and afforded a capital run some little time ago. But all was blank and the heat was getting oppressive and the master wisely drew on towards Saswad Station, seven miles from Poona, where the hound cart was waiting. A very pleasant little morning and it must have fully repaid all those keen souls whom neither sheet rock nor stone-clad hills can daunt.

The Club of Western India Ball was naturally enough a greater attraction than most even of the keenest hunters could well resist, and though I hear of a few ardent souls who changed straight from their dress clothes and finery into their hunting toggery, this fine sporting instinct was not, it must be admitted, followed by very many, and the meet at the sixth mile-stone on the Ahmednagar Road was, needless to say, somewhat sparsely patronized.

"The best of all ways to lengthen your days

sang the immortal Tommy Moore, but when the petty pilfering amounts to wholesale appropriation of the whole twelve hours and merges night into day and day into night, the process is more calculated to result in a shortening than a lengthening of our existence. One cannot burn the candle at each end and in the centre very long—without the demolition of the candle. But Colonel Sheringham, who holds I believe to the strict creed of the never dying Jorrocks that there is no colour like scarlet, no sport like "untin" was doubtless gratified to find even a score of just souls waiting to do him homage. The master sympathizingly gave a few minutes law to any straggling "ball dancer" who might take a little extra to awake to the solicitations of a faithful mental, and then moved off and drew towards the Lahogaum Tank. Over an hour was spent in futile efforts to find, during which hounds worked I hear most zealously, and indeed I hear on all sides of their wonderful keenness. At last dampened spirits were rewarmed by the gladsome music from melodious throats, but the jack was a liver-hearted brute, who hadn't even the pluck I gather to run for his life and after a brief spurt surrendered ignominiously and met a nobler death than he deserved. After this, for the best part of another hour, a series of sugarcanes and jowari fields were drawn blank when (to every one's relief it must have been) in a big patch of sugarcane near the hill of Wagholi a brace of jack were found at home, and after some splendid hound work in cover one was forced by press of existing circumstances to face the open and hounds were soon on his line in answer to the trusted summons of the master. A fast little burst of a couple of miles over "mixed" going ensued when he was, I hear, headed by some cattle and herdsmen and doubled right back for his home in the sugarcane field. But hounds would take no denial, and were I gather greatly incensed at such unsporting conduct on his part, and after determined hustling for several minutes once more forced him to take refuge in flight then this quaint minded varmint thought he couldn't follow a better line than his previous effort, and ran virtually the same line over again! Once more he was headed by the same cattle and once more frustrated in his obvious effort to make good his sanctuary in some prickly pear, went back once more to his happy home in the sugar (home sweet home in very truth) whence hounds were unable to force him again. It must have been splendid work on the part of hounds, but they never wearied I believe of the monotonous back and forward hunting the jack insulted them with, and were marvellously fresh after what must have been a most trying morning's hunting. I cannot vouch for the correctness of this account, as so few were out that it has been with the utmost difficulty I have been able to gather scraps here and there and weave them into this plain, unvarnished tale. I hear the pack has sustained a serious loss in the departure of Major Chesney of the XVIIIth B.I., who has acted as one of the whips throughout the year and whose experience with hounds in India and zeal in sport must have been of considerable assistance to the master throughout the season.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

THE meet on the 14th instant was at Sandsay Nullah Toll Bar. The swamp by Preston's Crossing was first drawn and hounds started a jack which, after a couple of hundred yards, proved to be a sporting pariah dog. Below Wapshare's Hare Shola hounds followed a stale line as far as the old Pykara Road where scent failed. Bracken cover was next drawn and produced a brood of porcupine. The Yemakal Valley was the next place, and a jack was put up. He gave the field a curly run and went to ground. The Master put in the terriers, and having dug him out had him killed STATION vs. JACOB'S HORSE.—The latter team had to play a substitute at back and were beaten by 8 goals and 3 subsidiaries to 3 goals and 1 subsidiary. In the first three chuckers they failed to score, their opponents leading by 3 goals and 2 subsidiaries. In the fourth chucker Jacob's Horse scored a subsidiary, but the Station team put on 5 more goals, and though their opponents added 3 goals to their score they were quite outclassed and beaten as stated. EIGHTH MOUNTAIN BATTERY vs. SECOND BOMBAY LANCERS.—These teams met on the 15th instant, when the Lancers simply ran away from their opponents, eventually winning by 14 goals and 3 subsidiaries to 1 goal 1 subsidiary. The Battery failed to score till the 5th chukker, when they notched a subsidiary; their opponents, however, had scored with great rapidity and were leading by 10 goals and 2 subsidiaries. In the fourth chukker they put on no less than six goals. The Gunners played a sporting game, but were quite outclassed, they scored one goal towards the end, but the Lancers had all the best of it and ran their score to 14 goals and 3 subsidiaries before play closed. LUCKNOW ANNUAL REGATTA.

LUCKNOW, 20*th September.*

THE Lucknow Annual Regatta began on Thursday in fine but very steamy weather. There was, says our correspondent, a fair attendance, but September is not a popular month here and ladies are but few. Racing was continued on Friday and Saturday, and will be again to-morrow, the final day being Tuesday. I append the results arrived at so far and hope to let you have the rest in time for your next issue.

THE SMYTHE CHALLENGE CUP.

1st Heat.

E H Burnaby beat N F Addis.

Addis got away with a good lead, but could not keep it, and Burnaby eventually won fairly easily by 5 lengths. Time—2mins. 16½secs.

2nd Heat.

L G M Harcourt beat A Fremantle.

Harcourt had all the best of it, and won, as he liked, by four lengths. Time—2mins. 21secs.

Semi-Final.

H N Hutchinson beat E H Burnaby.

Won easily (by more than six lengths). Time—2mins. 11⅘secs.

A De V Maclean beat L G M Harcourt.

A good race ended in Maclean beating Harcourt by a quarter of a length. Time—2mins. 25secs.

THE POPE CHALLENGE CUP.

1st Heat.

L G Ionides, F O'Neill, Mrs O'Neill (cox) vs. W Appleyard, A De V Maclean, Mrs H D Lawrence (cox)

Mrs Lawrence's pair scratched.

2nd Heat.

M E Johnson, C J Boyce, Mrs Ryves (cox) beat R C P Blyth, A H Radice, Mrs Wallace (cox)

A very exciting race, rowed when it was already dark. Mrs Ryves' boat won by three-quarters of a length. Time—2mins. 5secs.

L G Ionides, F O'Neill, Mrs O'Neill (cox) vs. M E Johnson, C J Boyce, Mrs Ryves (cox)

Rowed on Saturday. Mrs. O'Neill's boat passed the winning post a couple of feet ahead. Mrs. Ryves' pair, however, put in a claim for a foul: this being upheld by the Committee, the race will be re-rowed to-morrow (Monday).

THE ANNUAL FOUR OAR CHALLENGE CUP.

This Cup was wrongly described by me in last week's Indian Field, as the "R. E. Challenge Bowl," my authority being the official programme. As a matter of fact the original Cup of this series was presented by the 18th Hussars and it should be properly described as "The Annual Four Oar Challenge Cup."

1st Heat.

P N Craigie		R C P Blyth
C Hodgkinson		R J Gray
G Craster		R M S Gardiner
J P Barnes		R H Radice
C Newnham (cox)		H Spear (cox)

Not a very exciting race. The Gloucesters were outclassed altogether, and the VIth B. C. won, without distressing themselves, by three lengths. Time—2mins. 35secs.

2nd Heat

L M Miller		D H Keelan
W Appleyard		N F Addis
P B Stafford		A Gardiner

At a small regatta held here last month these two crews had a tremendous fight in the semi-final, the O.R.K. winning by the narrowest of margins. Naturally, therefore, great interest was attached to their meeting on Thursday. Another very good race was the result, and the East Surreys, after a splendid struggle, got their revenge, beating the O.R.K. by a length and a half. Time—2mins. 52⅘ secs. For the benefit of those of your readers who are not good at conundrums it may be as well to mention that the O.R.K. is a compound title, indicating that the crew is composed of men in the Oudh and Rohilkhund and the Rohilkhund and Kumaon Railways.

THE GENERAL'S CHALLENGE BOWL.

Semi-finals.

VITH BC (No. 1)	beat	O & R RY
G Craster		A Gardiner
J P Barnes		H Cooper
H N Hutchinson (cox		R F G Scott (cox)

VITH B C	beat	48TH PIONEERS
P N Craigie		M E Johnson
C Hodgkinson		C J Boyce
C H Cordeux (cox)		W A Gover (cox)

Won by a length and a quarter. Time—2mins. 3⅕secs.

A MATCH.

OLD BEDFORDIANS.	beat	OLD HAILLANSHREWINCHESTERS.
A H Radice		A Gardiner
Mr E Johnson		H O Parr
C J Boyce		H Cooper
J P Barnes		L G Ionides
C H Cordeux (cox)		R F G Scott (cox)

Won by three lengths. Time—2 mins. 52⅕ secs.

In conclusion it will suffice to say that the Regatta has been an unequivocal success, and that all Lucknow should be grateful to the Committee, and more especially to Mr. Cooper, the Honorary Secretary, for their efforts to help us to pass this weary month of September. On Saturday, by the way, the O. and R. R. were "At Home," and the band of the VIIth Rajputs were present.

Cricket.

BOMBAY GYMKHANA vs. HINDU GYMKHANA.—These teams met on the 15th instant when the Hindus had an easy victory by 127 runs. They went in first and put up 202 runs. Dandekar (58 not out), Mehta (43) and Date (41) being the chief scorers. The Gymkhana fared very badly and were quickly disposed of for 75. Armes and Aston being the only ones to get into double figures. Score:—

THE DURAND TOURNAMENT.

QUEENS vs. WELSH FUSILIERS.—The match between these teams at Simla on the 16th instant resulted in a win for the Queens by three goals to love. They got away at the start and Stolworthy getting possession banged the ball into the net. The Welsh played up and made great effort, but after some fast and level play the Queens once more netted the ball from a melée a third goal being registered just before half time. The Welsh tried hard to score in the second period, but their shooting was poor and the combination of their opponents superior. The Queens had several shots at goal, all of which were saved, and no further scoring taking place, the game ended as stated.

ROYAL IRISH RIFLES vs. GORDONS.—This match was played on the 18th inst. and resulted after a grand game in a win for the Rifles by a goal to nil The Gordons had to play a spare man in place of their goal keeper. The game began by the Irish taking the ball down into their opponents territory and four corners were secured no score resulting. The Gordons then had a turn and the Irish custodian had to save on a couple of occassions. Fast and rough play closed the half without any score having been registered. The Gordons had the best of the opening exchanges in the second moiety and the Rifles' half was invaded; the Gordons claimed a hand-ball in front of goal but it was disallowed and the Irish getting away, Edmonston, their centre forward, scored with a fine shot. The Highlanders tried hard to equalise but were unsuccessful the game ending as stated. Teams.—

ROYAL IRISH RIFLES.—Elphick goal Fisher and Hanna backs Craig, Morris, and Walker half backs. Savage, Lewis, Edmondston, Rose, and Smith forwards.

SIMLA VOLUNTEERS vs. JUTOGH R. A.—Played on the 21st instant, the Volunteers winning by three goals to nil. The Gunners were a heavy team and had not the quickness of the Volunteer forwards who were very nippy. Both teams played well, Marsden and Taylor doing good work for the Simla team. The Artillery goal-keeper played a good game and saved well several times. Teams :—

ROYAL IRISH RIFLES vs. R. A. MEERUT.—This match was played on the 22nd instant before a large crowd and resulted after a fast and exciting game in a win for the Rifles by three goals to one. Soon after play commenced the Irish rushed down and scored. The artillerymen played a hard game, but the Rifles were faster and their passing was better. The game was very rough and fouls frequent. The Irish put on two more goals at the end of the second half.

SECOND ROUND.

QUEENS vs. BLACK WATCH.—These teams met on the 19th instant and after a splendid game, the Queens were victorious by two goals to nil. Soon after the start, the Queens rushed down and drew first blood then the game ruled very even, both goals being visited in turn. The Black Watch had bad luck in not scoring several times. Hot struggles took place and before the Black Watch goal and the Queens nearly got through, but the Black Watch goalkeeper did yeoman service, and kept them out till near the end of the match when a second goal was registered

CALCUTTA SENIOR RUGBY CUP.

SEMI-FINALS.

ARMENIAN CLUB vs. CALCUTTA A. TEAM.—A good game was looked toward to on the meeting of these teams and spectators were not disappointed on the 16th instant. The game was the Calcutta ground, the evening a fine one and the attendance good. The visitors were not fully represented, but they played hard and an exciting game resulted in a win for Calcutta by two goals and two tries to nil. Calcutta kicked off and after some loose play the home three-quarters got away and F. Siddons scored, the place failed. Tight scrums followed till the home backs again got going and smart play resulted in F. Siddons once more crossing the line. No goal resulted and play till the interval was very even. On crossing over the Calcutta forwards did some good work and Heilgers scored a try which Martelli converted. Exciting play followed, neither team getting much advantage till near the end the home forwards took the ball down and a good dribble ended in Browne scoring. The goal was placed by Martelli and Calcutta thus won by 16 points to nil. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Newton, backs: A. Siddons, F. Siddons, Martelli and Dundas, three-quarters; MacDonald and McEwan, halves; Pope, Berridge, Dunlop, Dick, Cooper, McLeod, Browne, and Heilgers, forwards.

ARMENIAN CLUB.—Mathews, back; A. S. Apcar, Simmons B. Gregory and Joakim, three-quarters; Russell and H. Gregory, halves; Peters, Staynor, Akone, T. John, Vardon, Martin, S. John, and, Manuk, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. E. Connew.

WEST RIDING REGIMENT vs. WELSH REGIMENT.—These teams met on the Calcutta ground last Thursday, when, after a fine display of Rugby, the West Ridings beat their opponents by eight points to six. The winners showed themselves the better team and in spite of the score had the best of matters throughout. The Welsh got going immediately and a smart bout of passing resulted in Morgan scoring a try, Watts failing with the place. They were soon back in the Ridings' "25" and Harper transferring to Morgan the latter once more got over, no goal resulting. From this point the winners had the best of the game and they had hard luck in not scoring on several occasions. On changing ends the West Ridings worked the ball down and breaking through Gaff crossed the line. Highlands converted the try. The game was now exciting and both teams played hard, but from some good dribbling Beaumont picked up and got in after a grand run. Highlands failed with the place. Play ruled fast and exciting till the close: the West Ridings had the best of it, but no further scoring took place, the Ridings winning as stated. Teams.—

WELSH REGIMENT.—Williams, back; Lieutenants Montgomery, Davis, Harper and Morgan, three-quarters; Daly and Watts, halves; Gibson, Doble, J. Jones, R. Jones, Davis, Thomas, Floyd and Bartlett, forwards.

WEST RIDINGS.—Quinn, back, Beaumont, Harrison, Green and Highlands, three-quarters; Reeves and Holgate, halves; Mr Gibbon, Gaff, S. Smith, Robinson, J. Smith, Lester, Oates and Garwin, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. E. Connew.

THE FINAL.

WEST RIDINGS, vs. CALCUTTA.—A large gathering was present at the meeting of these teams on the Calcutta ground last Saturday. As was expected, a fair game was played the military eventually winning by a goal and three tries to a try. When the ball had been started, the West Riding forwards got possession, and dribbling it up Gaff rushed over with a try. The place failed and from the drop out the home forwards got away, and took the ball to their opponent's line where Siddons ran over with a clever try. Martelli failed with the kick. Exchanges and scrums followed, and after the home team had the game in their favour for a time the military forwards once again got going, and taking the ball down in grand style a second try was scored. Garside being credited with the point. Highlands converted and the West Ridings crossed over leading by 8 points to 3. In the second half the military forwards gave fine exhibitions of dribbling, while on the Calcutta side Newton gained lots of ground by good punts. From scrums in midfield the Riding worked the ball down and Riley scored a try. Highlands failed to add extra points, but Lieutenant Gribbon scored another try, the place again failing. No further scoring took place, the visitors winning as stated. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Newton back: A. Siddons, F. Siddons, Martelli, and Dundas, three-quarter back: MacDonald and Legg, half-backs: Berridge, McLeod P. M. Browne, Whittie, Cooper, Heilgers, Pope, and Dick forwards

WEST RIDING.—Quin, back: Beaumont, Harrison, Green, and Highlands, three-quarter backs: Reeves and Holgate, half-backs; Lieutenant Gribbon, Gaff, S. Smith, Robinson, J. Smith, Oates, Riley and Garside. forwards.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

ALTHOUGH Calcutta registered 16 points without response from the Armenian Club when these two teams met in the semi-final round of the competition, the game was far from being one-sided, and general praise was bestowed on the losers for the plucky manner in which they fought a losing battle. The heavy Calcutta forwards, amongst whom Heilgers, McLeod and Browne were most noticeable, had the better of the tight packs, but the Armenians were superior in the loose work during which they often gained much ground. Outside the scrimmage there was little to choose between the two teams, but the Calcutta half-backs, despite much offside play by Apear and Gregory, often got the ball away to the men behind them, and with the premier club's three-quarters in form a lot of pretty combined efforts resulted. The brothers Siddons gave a much improved display on this occasion their tackling being especially sound and hard. Martelli was as usual safe rather than brilliant, and gave Dundas opportunities whenever possible—the latter's tackling is weak however and he fails to pass back—both faults which should be easily remedied.

Apear and Joachim were very prominent for the Armenians but the former played a very offside game and must consider himself lucky that he was not more often penalised—a remark which also applies to Gregory. Peters was far and away the best of the forwards and played a really excellent game throughout; he works hard and defends pluckily and should in time develop into a very fine forward.

When the Armenians are able to put a heavy pack into the field their chances of winning the Cup will be second to none, as the tackling and kicking of the entire team leaves little room for improvement.

The match between the West Riding and Welsh Regiments produced one of the finest and most exciting exhibitions of football that have been witnessed in Calcutta for many years. Both teams were full of confidence, and that their confidence was not misplaced was proved by the narrowness of the Yorkshiremen's victory by 8 points to 6. It was a case of the West Ridings' superiority in the pack being pitted against the cleverer methods and combination of the Welsh outside the scrimmage, and this was fully realised by both teams, but after the first few minutes the winners, who were trained to the hour, seldom allowed their opponents to obtain possession of the ball, and thus the speedy Welsh three quarters were little better than spectators of the tussle between the rival packs.

The match started in sensational fashion as almost immediately after the commencement of operations Daly, the "ever-green" Welsh half, gathered the leather cleverly in his opponents' twenty-five, and passing out to his three-quarters enabled Morgan to score a nice try, which Watts failed to convert. A similar manœuvre shortly afterwards resulted in a further addition of three points to the Welsh score, and thus after about ten minutes' play the "Ridings" were six points to the bad. Then a complete change took place and the Yorkshireman attacked fiercely, but they were met by a stubborn defence and half-time arrived with the Welsh still leading.

After the interval the Taffies showed signs of distress, of which their opponents were not slow to avail themselves, and well led by Gribbon and Oates the Yorkshire pack carried all before them. The first try to the ultimate winners came from Beaumont, who following up a kick from one of his forwards beat Williams for pace and grounded the ball far out, but a magnificent kick converted, and thus a point only separated the two teams. A magnificent struggle ensued, but it was plain that Welsh forwards could not maintain the pace and were consequently outmanœuvred. The second try to the West Ridings followed from a forward rush, and this not being converted they led by two points, but intense excitement ensued shortly afterwards as the Referee gave a free kick to the Welsh for a most palpable off-side on the part of one of the Yorkshire half-backs almost in front of the posts which it seemed impossible for Watts, who took the kick, to miss, but he blundered badly and the call of time shortly afterwards left the West Ridings well deserved winners of a splendid match.

Where all played well for the winners it is difficult to select any one for special praise, but Gribbon and Oates of the forwards, both half-backs, and Beaumont were most noticeable for hard and untiring work, whilst the kicking and coolness of the full back saved his side on more than one occasion. For the Welsh Daly played a very fine game as usual, but Watts was very poor and appears to have lost his cleverness and resource, and the team certainly requires new and younger blood. After recent exhibitions during the Soccer season I feel that mention should be made of the sportsmanlike qualities displayed by both the military teams which has gained for them a warm welcome when next they are able to appear in Calcutta football.

The final between Calcutta and the West Ridings produced very poor football, and consequently a most disappointing game, in which the military showed themselves much superior to the local champions, especially in the pack where the premier club's forwards seldom obtained possession of the leather with the result that the ball only reached the three-quarter backs on one or two occasions. The Ridings adopted the same tactics as won them the match against the Welsh and these proved eminently successful. Calcutta, on the other hand, had more than one "passenger" amongst the forwards and these men, who were included for their brilliancy in the loose, were not given opportunities of displaying their prowess, and consequently were little better than useless.

Newton had an immense amount of work, most of which he accomplished satisfactorily but he was never supported and was therefore veritably a "last line of defence." The three-quarters had little or nothing to do, but Martelli was badly at fault on one occasion and the kicking of the brothers Siddons was weak. Dundas, on the other hand, played better than he has yet done this season, and a try should certainly have resulted from an opening made by him in mid-field. The half-backs, of whom Macdonald was the better, both played hard, but Legge repeatedly fumbled badly. Heilgers was the pick of the forwards, but was well supported by Berridge, McLeod, Pope and Dick, on whom most of the hard work devolved Whitie, on the other hand, was a great disappointment, as although occasionally prominent his "winging" tactics were far too much in evidence. Cooper, as I anticipated, was a complete failure and until he learns how to enter a scrimmage and does more work will not be worth his place in any representative team.

The West Ridings again gave a splendid exhibition of forward play, in which their ability to control the ball in the scrimmage is the principal feature. The hard and determined tackling of the forwards was also very noticeable and with a better three-quarter line they would be a first-rate team. The failure of the Calcutta men to win the Cup was undoubtedly a great disappointment, which we hope will be atoned for in Bombay, but there can be no two opinions as to the West Riding Regiment thoroughly deserving the success they have achieved.

Swimming.

THE CALCUTTA SWIMMING CLUB.

THE Calcutta Swimming Club brought their season to a close on Saturday, the 19th instant, with their usual autumn entertainment. Despite the counter attractions of the Rugby Final and the Calcutta Monsoon Races, the attendance at the Baths was very good, and the fair sex turned out in great force. Arrangements were everything that could be desired, and the entertainment passed off from beginning to end without a hitch, thanks to the Honorary Secretary, Mr. Willson, and his able staff of stewards. Electric fans were fitted up for the occasion, and light refreshments were supplied during the interval. The prizes were given away by Miss Elworthy.

The six lengths handicap for the Viceroy's Medal was annexed by Mr. H. L. Harvey who, with 35 seconds start, managed to win by a good margin. We should have preferred to see the scratch man Geo. Brown win, and it seems rather out of the way that this event, the principal item on the year's programme, should be annexed by the limit man with 35 seconds start. It is high time the conditions of this race were changed—at present it is a farce in which the best man is very much out of it. Let it be, as it ought to be, a scratch event, and let the best man win. Appended are results of the different events:—

FIRST EVENT.

Final Heat		Start	Nett Time.
1. W. Govan	...	... 7 secs.	... 49¼ "
2. A. L. Clarke	...	... 11 "	... 56 "
3. G. O. Rushton	...	... 8 "	... 54¾ "
4. C. O. Walker	...	... 9 "	... 55¾ "

SECOND EVENT.

100 yards (3 lengths) for soldiers.—There were 17 entries for this item, mostly from the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, but for reasons best known to themselves, 13 men failed to put in an appearance. Results:—

			Time.
1st	Pte Pollock	A and S Highlanders	1—22¼.
2nd	" J Morrison	do	1—24.

THIRD EVENT.

Six Lengths Handicap.—1st prize the Viceroy's Medal.

		Start	Nett Time.
1st	H L Harvey	35 secs.	3—25
2nd	G Brown	scratch	2—58¼

Also swam—E P Jones—35secs. Did not finish.

Brown was much fancied for this event, but did not swim up to expectations. After overhauling Harvey for 5 lengths, he fell off in the last, the effort having been too much for him.

FOURTH EVENT.

This consisted of a display of driving and fancy swimming by Messrs Rushton, Harrold, Walker, Brown, Clarke, Jones, Henderson and Miller. The items were much appreciated.

FIFTH EVENT.

Eight lengths team race for a Challenge Cup.—(Holders: The Calcutta Swimming Club).

The Swimming Club repeated their performance of last year in 3mins. 20½secs. defeating the Calcutta Football Club team whose time was 3mins. 23½secs. The winning team was composed of Messrs. H. P. Henderson, A. R C. Miller, Geo. Brown and H. L. Harvey.

SIXTH EVENT.

Two lengths Comic Race.—Competitors to be fully dressed with top hat and to carry an open umbrella. A. R. C. Miller romped in an easy first, carrying his umbrella in his mouth—the second prize falling to H. L. Harvey. The get ups were most ludicrous, E. P. Jones fairly taking the cake.

SEVENTH EVENT.

The meeting wound up with a Water Polo match between the Bath and a team of Seebpore College boys, in which the Bath proved victorious by 5 goals to 2. The game was well contested, and the College lads deserve great credit for the fight they made. The prizes were then presented: Geo Brown securing the aggregate cup for the season, and the meeting closed with three cheers for Miss Elworthy and three more for the Honorary Secretary.

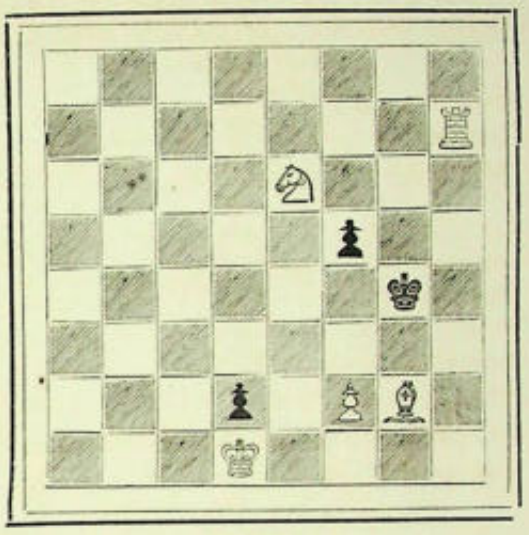
The Story Teller.

A DEAL IN ELEPHANTS.

WE had got back to camp very tired, very thirsty and exceeding wet, for had it not rained torrents most of the afternoon. However a good supper, cooked God knows how as it was still pouring a regular deluge, a few stiff pegs and we were once more restored to a happy and contented frame of mind. We had some toddy after turning in and under its confiding influence Watson told me of his deal in elephants.

"I had," he said, "from one reason or other got into pretty low water down in Burma; didn't in fact know where my next meal was going to come from when I was lucky enough to get a billet as transport rider on the Boundary Commission. The pay was not exactly great, but the possibilities were immense. It was such an easy thing for mules, pack and all to disappear over the khud and mules fetch a very fair price and for rum and eatables Atkins was a good market, although I must say I never rushed him, the reverse rather. I dropped more than one keg of rum where I knew it could be found by hands that wouldn't enquire very particularly a[illegible]where it came from. I had made quite a bit when the transit[illegible]le discovered that mules were rather expensive, elephants, [illegible]ne to the conclusion, would be very much better and cheaper. [illegible]earing this I said that I thought I could procure some quick[illegible] and cheaply, the commission was all I really had in my mind's eye then. They humbugged about a bit as usual, but at last I got permission to see what I could do. I precious soon had half a dozen really good beasts. I went up one morning to report t[illegible]is and found the officer commanding transport and two other office[illegible] at breakfast, at least that meal was on the table, they didn't seem to have much appetite for it and were evidently trying ha[illegible]d to sober up on the hair of the dog that bit. It didn't seem to occur to them that I might also want a brandy and soda and the oversight made me annoyed, so that I told them pretty sharp that I'd got the elephants would they care to look at them."

"Oh! indeed" said the officer commanding transport, I suppose they are really good animals, quite-er tame I trust."



"The very best and quiet as new-born babes I said. One of the other officers evidently just out from home said he'd like to see the elephants. I was asked to walk them round in front of the tent. They did not come out, afraid of the sun on their brandy-besodden heads I suppose and a brilliant idea suddenly struck me. I walked 'em round twice I did and damned if they didn't pass the whole lot twice over. I therefore had 12 elephants taken on the strength, whereas I actually had only 6. So far so good, but how to account for the six that were non-existent beat me hollow. I puzzled my head the whole day and could see no way out of it and went to bed with the problem still unsolved. I did not sleep just exactly soundly as you may imagine and very early in the morning I was awakened by a devil of a row down in the elephant lines. Never heard such a racket in all my life, what with the mahouts and coolies yelling and shrieking for all they were worth, elephants trumpeting and lights dancing about all over the place it seemed a regular pandemonium. The brutes had stampeded. Of course only six were recovered and after scouring the country for nearly a week I came in and reported this to a very glum transport officer indeed. I did not mind. I was Rs. 12,000 to the good and a jolly good holiday at home I had. It was a lovely summer, a good Derby, a glorious Henley and as for Ascot and Goodwood, well, but what's the good of thinking of it all. A rogue you say? Ah, well, they all make a bit. I was fortunate enough to do rather better than most. Good night old boy, hope we have a decent day to-morrow. He was soon snoring the snore of the innocent and just. I lay awake and wondered if he had solved the problem in the early hours that morning. I expect he did though he did not say so mind you. He always was modest.

THE CALCUTTA MONSOON RACES

THE Monsoon Races of 1903 have been fully up to the standard of recent years; since, that is to say, the added money in the open races was raised considerably and horses of the class of Springlock were set to earn their corn bills by a win at the Monsoon Meetings. It is satisfactory in this connection to note that the C. T. C. still cater largely at these meetings for the paperchase class of horses and for the G. R's. Privately trained nags have been much in evidence also, and such artists in the pigskin as Messrs. Deakin and Dudley have shown that they can hold their own with their professional brethren in the open races. The handicapping has not always given satisfaction and Fairlight's three successive wins over the sticks with 11st., 11st., and 11st. 4lbs. after he had run second at the Second Meeting with 10st. 12lbs. suggests a certain amount of leniency on the part of the handicappers.

Honours all round amongst the animals that started must be given to little Moss Rose, for she not only showed, as usual, that she can get home when the ground is holding, but at the last meeting she put up a win against smart ponies like Little Doris, Lady Olive and Sweet Talk when the going was more in their favour than in hers. She had already run a good second to Yuletide in the Pony Hurdles too. Six starts this monsoon season has she put in, and she scored two wins and four seconds in that little lot! When Mr. McCall takes the little lady off the Turf she will be well worth sending to the stud in Ireland, where they can breed good ponies and horses too.

Fairlight amongst the timber jumpers and Oom Paul on the flat stand out prominently. The latter looks like turning out a very useful performer, and the way he took Euryalus down in the slush after their dead heat at the Third Meeting showed promise of staying powers. Mr. Galstaun had bad luck with Gassima, who although she was running amongst a poor lot as a rule, took Oom Paul's number down at the Third Meeting over 5 furlongs with 10st. on her back. She would have been there or thereabouts at the Fourth or Fifth Meeting, but for her accident. In the Paperchase class Mr. Paris held a strong hand with Actress and Fairlight, and, thanks also to Kellnerin's win last Saturday on the flat, this good sportsman got more of the loaves and fishes than he has had of late years. Mr. Pugh also did well with two wins, and that rising young G. R. Mr. Evers scored two wins on his own mare Sunshine.

Amongst the ponies Yuletide did well with two wins over sticks, but on the flat there were no performances to call for special notice outside those of Moss Rose already dealt with. Western Queen came here for the First Meeting and won the Stand Plate over 5 furlongs very easily, but this was only a breather before she went across to run under W. I. T. C. rules and we saw no more of her.

We append the usual tables showing winning owners, successful trainers and winning jockeys. There was some new talent in evidence amongst the pros riding, but no budding Tod Sloans disclosed their form. Carter amongst those we knew before stood out prominently for his masterly riding of Fairlight and Bond deserves a pat on the back for the very neat way in which he landed Moss Rose a winner last Saturday in the race—a real Morny Cannon swoop it was. Amongst new G. R's hats off to Mr. Harold Smith whose riding was a treat to see. What price the famous telegram "unmounted men preferred" if Sir Redvers Buller had seen Mr. Smith nursing a winner home as we have?

Sporting Notes.

THE Calcutta Monsoon season was brought to a close on Saturday and a real good day's racing we had to wind up with. Fields were fairly satisfactory and the attendance was not much less than usual. The early part of the afternoon promised well for backers as four favourites rolled home one after the other with pleasing regularity, but on the last two events calculations were badly upset.

The ball was opened by three hurdle races in succession, and we are of opinion that though the jump events have filled well on the whole throughout the five meetings, still it is possible to have too much of a good thing, and to see, meeting after meeting, the same four or five horses running over the same distance under practically the same conditions acquires after a time a flavour of monotony, while the one or two races which are crowded out by the timbertopping would probably have filled better. Another point is that if we are to have three jump races, it would be well to sandwich them in with a flat race or two, and beginning in the middle of the day there can be no need on the score of light to put all the hurdles first.

Four faced the flag for the Outram Plate, Actress being a hot favourite at a slight shade of odds on, Firefly next in demand at threes. The latter made the pace hot from the start, but failed to quite stay home and Actress caught her in the straight, winning comfortably by a length.

The Pony Hurdles produced another great race between Yuletide and Moss Rose. The former was a shade shorter in price, 3-4 being laid while twos were obtainable about Moss Rose. The start was delayed by the vagaries of Rezia and Blair Athol, and when the flag fell the former went out at 6 furlong pace over the first three flights. Yuletide lay last to the new stand, but then drew up to Moss Rose and a great race home resulted in a half length win for Mr. Mackellar's mare. Hard rode a great race, and the result was largely due to his powerful finish, as at the big tree turn he was already hard at work, and it looked a bob to a biscuit on the chestnut.

In the City Plate, Fairlight gave us a real taste of his quality by coming right away from his horses at the culvert and winning with great ease. Carter was taking no short head risks on this occasion.

For the Farewell Handicap Kellnerin, who had been tenderly treated with 8-8, was rightly considered a "cop": that this was a correct estimate was proved by the way in which she cantered in four lengths in front of Naiades and Flashlight, who had a dust up for the place money, ending in favour of Naiades by a neck. Betting was a shade of odds on Kellnerin, while Naiades and Flashlight could be backed at fours and fives.

The street corner tip for the Harrington Plate was Invincible, who was reported to have smothered Kittylea in a shake up. Whether this was so or not, he made no show in the race, though a break away, in which he galloped a couple of furlongs, may have prejudiced his chance. All the same we are inclined to think that the best horse won in Sunshine. Invincible went out at 2 to 1 as did Shirley, Sunshine at 3 to 1, Euryalus 4 to 1 and any reasonable odds the rest.

The best race of the day was afforded by the Plassey Plate, where Moss Rose gave us another of her short head finishes, but on this occasion the short head was on the right side. Little Doris led from the start to well within the distance, when just as she looked all over a winner, Moss Rose came with a magnificent run and just snatched the verdict on the post. This was no mean performance coming after a close race over a mile of hurdles and shows what a real good little bit of stuff she is.

Congratulations to the Hon'ble Mr. A. A. Apcar on his success in the Western India Stakes with Goldsmith. A full report of the race appears in our Turf Columns.

The half-yearly General Meeting of the members of the Western India Turf Club will be held at the Poona Race Stand at 8 o'clock next Saturday morning.

The ridiculously named Pride O'Dharamtala has been renamed Pet Girl by her new owner.

Fordham, the trainer, is now reported to be a physical and mental wreck, the paralytic stroke from which he is suffering having affected his brain. There is a suggestion that Indian turfites should come forward with monetary help, for the poor fellow is now practically a pauper and the only thing that seems possible is to make some arrangement whereby he may be enabled to end his days peacefully.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—Consequent upon counter-attractions there was not such a large attendance as usual at the weekly mounted sports held on Wednesday in connection with the Bombay Gymkhana, and for the same reason the entries for the various events were somewhat poor. As per usual, the programme opened with the tent pegging competitions. In that for ponies the entries were not very numerous, and more pegs remained in the ground than were taken. The winner was Mr. T. L. Roberts. The competition with ponies was won by Mr. S. M. McCausland with Mr. T. D. Moore second. There were five entries for the Cheroot and Umbrella Race, which was productive of no little amusement. The winner was Lieutenant Armes. The Whistling Coon Stakes was secured by Mr. T. D. Moore. As is usual with these weekly sports, the programme wound up with a couple of scurries. In that for horses the winner was Mr. McLachlan's White Heather (Owner), ten yards start, who beat Mr. Elwin Neame's Jude the Obscure (Owner), 30 yards start, by half a length, the latter having headed the field until nearing home. Mr. J. F. Pooley's Musty Lass, 25 yards, was third. The pony scurry was easily won by Mr. R. F. R. Coombe's Conductor (Owner up) from scratch, the second place being filled by Mr. Gray's Florican (Mr. Alstan) 10 yards and the third by Mr. Rommel's Charlie (Owner) 35 yards start.

was rather a surprise to hear in reply that in India hunting goes on every day, and all the year round, but when one realises the varieties of climate in the different parts of this huge country it is easy to believe this statement to be a fact. There is no doubt, however, that fox hunting, or, more correctly speaking, jackal hunting with foxhounds, is a most difficult business in India, owing to the bad effects of a hot climate upon imported hounds. Here and there hound breeding in the country has been tried with more or less success, and it is generally considered that Indian bred hounds, though proverbially lighter in bone than those bred at home, are better able to stand the climate than those imported from England, and news which reaches us from Poona tends to confirm this opinion. The Poona and Kirkee hounds are now in the midst of work, hunting in this district being carried on during the rainy season from mid-June till the end of October, the pack consisting of about thirty couples, partly imported and partly bred in India by Colonel Sheringham, the master, of whom an Indian contemporary writes, "No man in India is more competent in the management of a pack of hounds in kennel or in the field." It is to his untiring energy and zeal that much of the last three seasons' success is due, whilst the keen and generous support given by every member of the hunt adds a cheeriness and good fellowship to the sport which many an English field might envy. Hounds suffered severely in the early part of the season, for though the monsoon broke at about the usual time, the rain was rather light and for a week or two after hunting began the heat was so intense that the already early hour of the fixtures, 6 A.M., had to be arranged half an hour earlier, in spite of which heat apoplexy, with two fatal results to imported hounds, caused the master much anxiety. By mid-July, however, the steady daily downpour had much improved climatic conditions, and though now and then the going was too heavy to be pleasant, scent was everything that could be desired. Hounds, both Indian bred and imported, were in rare hunting trim, and clinking runs of seventy and forty minutes have frequently taken place. The Deccan "jack" is a stout hearted fellow, and when fairly gone away, making for distant hills, he requires first-rate hounds and a hard riding field to keep up with his pace. The Poona ladies are invariably well to the front, and several of them have this year earned the chief honour of the chase in runs which have stopped all but a few of the best.

As will be seen on reference to our list of Indian racing fixtures, the Rawalpindi Autumn Meeting has been postponed from the 8th and 10th December to the 5th and 7th January next. This has been occasioned by the clashing of the winter manœuvres of troops. The closing dates of entries have also been changed to the 20th November and 12th and 28th December.

The finals in the Poona Open Polo Tournament were played on Thursday and resulted in a win for the 4th Hussars, who beat the 3rd Bombay Cavalry by seven goals and two subsidiaries to three goals and four subsidiaries.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—Of the Parsee Presidency Cricket match the least said the better for one's shattered feelings. The more creditable performance of the Presidency in their second effort was, after all, but poor consolation for their pitiable performance in their first endeavour when on an admirably true and easy wicket the eleven picked champions of England's honour failed to notch one hundred runs—the majority indeed failing to show any pretensions to style. Nor was the Presidency failure in batting redeemed by superexcellence in the other departments of this queen of all games. It is of course easy to be noble when you're winning comfortably, but this should not debar one from appreciating the sporting way in which not only the Parsee XI but the Parsee crowd took their easy victory. It created a most favourable impression and was a most healthy sign of present good fellowship. By far the better side in all branches of the game won, and won with ease. But they were "good winners" and it robbed defeat of much of its bitter sting and has certainly welded good feeling all the stronger between East and West. It is to be noted that the first Parsee individual century in these contests was made in this match, while, to everyone's genuine regret, a second Zoroastrian player failed to achieve the mystical three figures by one mark only.

The paucity of entries for the Senior Polo Tournament though not altogether unexpected was naturally a matter for extreme regret, and the decision to exclude native teams which caused so much discussion at the time cannot be looked on accordingly as justifying itself by the test of results, and those who strongly opposed it have weighty arguments on their side for future discussion, and it is very much to be hoped that an absolutely open tournament may be decided on next year. As things were it was but natural that the Poona public should rejoice at the very decisive victory of the local champions, the 3rd Bombay Cavalry, over the 4th Hussars. They won fairly easily, chiefly by superiority of shooting, and their victory is all the more creditable since the Hussars were undoubtebly the better mounted team of the two. But dashing polo as it undoubtedly was, one could not help feeling all the time that it was not polo in its highest and most up-to-date scientific form. And we hanker after that at least once a year.

The second day of the big race meeting must be classed as an unqualified success. Big fields, excellent racing, and thrilling finishes. What more can the heart of sportsman require? And to make perfection doubly perfect the weather was fine (though a trifle sultry) and the management beyond cavil.

In the Pony Derby a sight of both public and stable money went on Grey Leg, who even in Jimmy Robinson's tender care could get no nearer than third, and that rare little chunky bit of blood and substance (all concentrated in 13-1½!) was very admirably ridden by the elder Hoyt.

Our old friend Brigand annexed the Dealers' Plate without any great effort, and then a comparative outsider in Corrie Roy upset the much fancied Spark in the Criterion, a feat of which Captain Randall, his trainer, has every reason to be proud.

In the Western India Stakes—the plum of the day—the booking fraternity had another bean feast. the red hot favourite Acetine, who had been in everyone's mouth all the day, failing to achieve even minor distinction, and Goldsmith, who was once at "seventeens," vigorously ridden by little Bennett got the best of Loch Clievedon with old Tubal Cain close up. Everyone was delighted to see Mr. Apcar successful, even though not the absolute owner I believe, and Watson has added one more laurel leaf to his already sumptuous wreath.

But how shall my poor pen do justice to the Poona Derby. Thirteen horses all in a cluster after a mile and a half and a dead heat for first "in three places"! That was indeed worth travelling many a mile to see. Sandow (8-10, ridden by the younger Hoyt), Bay Middleton 7-11 (steered by his more accomplished brother) and Adonis 7-5 (with O'Neil's services) were the blessed trio who afforded us so great a treat. In the run off "blood" told the inevitable tale, and though it was a race all the journey, Bay Middleton had the best of it in the final tussle. Truly a great race.

In the International Stakes one probably looked on the best lot of ponies in the universe and if I assert that in Yankee Boy one looked on absolutely the champion pony of the world, I doubt if many will gainsay me. When one considers that the bottom weight Miss Birnie only a week ago won with such ponies as Olga and Key West behind her and that in the present race she carried 6-0 and failed to get a place, while Yankee Boy with 9-10 won with comparative comfort keeping that beautiful sweep of stride to the very end, one begins to appreciate what manner of pony Y. B. must be. and one also learns the lesson of how practically impossible it is to bring a smasher and a second rater together. But while being wrapt in admiration of Jack Scott's wonder, one should not lose sight of Russley Rose's great performance in running second with no less than 9-4 to carry. And we have probably not seen her at her best yet by a long way. So excellent a day's racing was it that I verily believe even the losers went home with a joyous heart even though with a chastened spirit and a lightened banking account.

Vice Admiral H. B. Woolcombe writes to the Field as follows about an ancient quadruped named Charley :—

SIR,—It may interest many of your readers to hear of an old horse, 34 or 35 years of age, still going strong and sound, and doing useful work. "Charley" was bought at St. Mewan, Cornwall, by my brother, the late Rev. G. L. Woolcombe, when rector of that parish, in the middle of 1872 as a four-year-old gelding, so he was probably foaled in April or May, 1868. Charley was driven on country clergyman's work to 1889, when, with my brother, he moved to Hemerdon House, where he was much used, first as one of a pair and latterly in a small four-wheeler for five or six years. Then the horse went to the Home Farm for light work, which included a weekly journey to Plymouth in a spring cart, seven miles each way; this he still continues to do and makes nothing of it. The horse is of a most friendly disposition, and has always made his own pace in a very hilly country.

In a footnote the Editor of The Field says :—We lately saw, in a provincial coach, a horse 28 years old running near leader. He worked a stage of about five miles out and home, went well up to his bridle, and was not once touched with the whip.

Dr. and Mrs. Workman have lately done some tall mountain climbing in the Himalayas, according to the reports which reach us they have beaten the records for their respective sexes. Our Allahabad contemporary gives the following details:—Starting from the highest of three snow camps 19,355 ft. at 3 A.M. on August 12th Dr. and Mrs. Bullock Workman and guides ascended the final cone of the first peak, over steep ice slants rising at an angle of 65 degrees and reached the summit which measures 21,770 ft. in four hours. Beyond this peak an elevated snow plateau extends from which rise two higher snow mountains After half an hour at the top for scientific observations the party descended the north side of the mountain a few hundred feet, and crossing a connecting snow arete ascended peak No. 2, the summit of which was reached at 10 A.M. The sky was cloudless, and there being little wind it was possible to take accurate hypsometric readings which since carefully compared with readings of the mercurial standard barometer at Skardu taken there at the same hours, fixes the height of this second peak at 22,568 ft. Mrs. Bullock Workman thus broke her own record twice by 770 and 1,567 ft. respectively. While she and one guide remained on this summit, Dr. Workman and the other two crossed a reach of snow fields and ascended to 23,394 ft. on fixed peak 24,486 ft., thereby gaining the world's record for men, which has hitherto been held by the climbers of Aconcagua 23,083 ft., the highest peak of the Andes.

Athletic Notes.

THE Colombo Rowing Club are holding a regatta during the Christmas holidays and we see it stated that the Madras Boat Club has been invited to send down representatives to compete. A general rumour has got afloat that the Calcutta Rowing Club are also sending down a crew or crews, but this is absolute invention ; the getting together and trainning of a crew durig the winter months in the capital of India is practically impossible.

The finals for the Gentlemen's Singles in the Poona Open Lawn Tennis Tournament was played on the 21st instant and resulted in a win for Mr. Reid. A great game was witnessed, Reid beating Major Betham by 6-2.

The first Annual General Meeting of the Calcutta Football Club will be held at the Saturday Club on Tuesday, the 13th October, at 9-30 P.M.

A report of the Autumn Regatta of the Calcutta Rowing Club appears in our issue of to-day. The only item on the season's programme which remains to be decided is the Senior Single Sculls for the Power Challenge Cup, which will probably be brought off early next month.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—During the past week interest has been fully maintained in the Rovers Association Football Tournament. Every evening the ropes round the Cooperage have been lined by large crowds of spectators and the various games have been followed with keen interest. In some of the matches in the first round, played last week, the form displayed by a number of the teams was not of a very high order. As regards the past week's play, however, the majority of the games have been productive of capital exhibitions of the dribbling code and all of them have been keenly contested. The first match of the week was between the Cheshire Regiment from Quetta, who had drawn a bye in the first round and who won the cup last year, and the North Staffordshire Regiment, who had accounted for the Lincolns in the first round of the Tournament. Play throughout was of a fairly even character, and a good deal of enthusiasm prevailed among the spectators. On the whole, the Quetta players showed slightly the better combination, and this enabled them to score the only game of the first half. During the second moiety the Staffords made strenuous efforts to draw level, but mistakes at the critical moment spoilt a number of chances, and eventually the Cheshires secured another goal. This was all the scoring, the holders of the cup being thus left victorious by two goals to nil.

The greatest surprise of the tournament occurred when the Bombay Rovers met and defeated the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. The game was a very stubbornly contested one, and on the whole the Calcutta players showed slightly the better combination, but, on the other hand, I have rarely, if ever, seen the Rovers play a better game—not during the last two or three years at all events. The opening half was fairly evenly contested and the teams crossed over with a blank scoring sheet, and a similar state of things prevailed until close on the call of time, when Rodwell sent into the Highlanders' net amidst great enthusiasm. During the last few minutes the Argylls did all they knew to equalise, but the Rovers defended in grand style and eventually left the field victorious by one goal to nil.

The meeting of the Warwicks and the York and Lancs Regiment was productive of another very evenly contested game. The teams were most evenly matched and, though the Warwicks' passing was perhaps the better, the York and Lancs were smart. During the opening half the Warwicks secured a lead of one goal. The second moiety was productive of play of a very interesting character, and, at the same time, most exciting. Soon after the resumption the Yorks and Lancs drew level and then each side secured a second goal. After this both sides made strenuous efforts for supremacy and eventually the Warwicks put in their third goal, and consequently won by three goals to two.

Play in the semi-final round commenced on Thursday evening, and in the ordinary course, should have been concluded on Friday. The round was, however, productive of a great fight between the Rovers and Royal Scots, these teams having to meet no less than three times. On Thursday evening the score was one goal all, on Friday it was two goals all, and it was not until last (Saturday) evening that the Royal Scots managed to obtain the verdict by two goals to one. It was one of the biggest tussles in the annals of the tournament, and there was a record attendance of spectators to witness the third encounter. On Thursday the Rovers hardly displayed such good form as when they defeated the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders in the second round, but at the same time they came very near winning. On the occasion of their second meeting the hopes of the home supporters rose very high, for play had not been in progress long before they sent in a couple of goals. As the game progressed, however, the representatives of the Thistle played up strongly and eventually drew level, another drawn game resulting. It must be said, however, that the Rovers were not blessed with the best of luck, for when they were still leading by a goal they had their centre half ordered off the field in consequence of his having taken upon himself to address certain remarks to the referee.

In consequence of this second draw, the final, which was down for decision last (Saturday) evening, had to be postponed, and the Rovers and Scots took the field for the third time. During the opening stages of the game the homesters had the best of matters, and soon obtained the lead, Rodwell, who has scored 9 out of the 11 goals secured by the Rovers during the Tournament, banging into the net. Before the arrival of half time, however, the Scots had drawn level. In the second moiety the Kamptee players had rather the best of matters and eventually won by two goals to one. As I have previously mentioned, it had been a grand fight, and I understand that with a view to celebrating it the Rovers Committee intend to present each member of their team with silver medals. The second game in the semi-final round was contested by the Cheshires and the Warwicks. The former soon obtained the lead, but a few minutes later the Warwicks drew level. After this, however, the Cheshires had much the better of the argument, and at half time led by three goals to one. The second moiety was more evenly contested, each side scoring a goal. The Cheshires were thus left victorious by four goals to two.

The Tournament was brought to a conclusion on Monday evening when the Cheshire Regiment from Quetta won the cup for the second year in succession, defeating the Royal Scots, Kamptee, by three goals to nil. Throughout the Quetta players had the best of the game, but on several occasions the Scots came near scoring. At the outset the Cheshire's goal was bombarded, but the defence was safe and the attack soon repulsed. After this the Cheshires warmed to their work and at half time led by two goals. They put in a third soon after the resumption and continued to have the best of matters, winning as stated. At the close of the game Mr. Justice Russell, President of the Club, congratulated the Cheshires on having won the cup a second time in succession, and said they had given a splendid exhibition of soccer. The Rovers he said had received permission from Government to erect a pavilion on the ground, and he hoped it would be ready before next tournament commenced. Mrs. Russell then handed the cup to the Captain of the Cheshire team, each member of which received a gold medal, while the members, of the Royal Scots team received silver medals as runners up.

The finals in the Durand Football Tournament was played on the 26th instant and resulted in a win for the Royal Irish Rifles who beat the Queen's by a goal to nil.

With the match between Surrey and Sussex, as reported in our London sporting letter this week, the county cricket season came to a close, and while Middlesex have for some time past been pretty sure of the championship, Sussex may also be congratulated upon having made a distinct advance. Their position in the table is almost entirely due to the batting of their two cracks, C. B. Fry and Ranjitsinhji, the former's achievement in putting together an aggregate of 2,683, with an average of 81·30, being, considering the nature of the present cricket season, probably without an equal in the history of the game. Whereas Fry stands out by himself at the head of the averages, Ranjitsinhji is nearly as far in front of the rank-and-file, and would probably have done very much better but for the lameness with which he was troubled during a great portion of the summer. In the Gentlemen and Players' match, for instance, he was quite unable to do himself justice, though to his stonewalling tactics on the second afternoon the eventual triumph of the amateurs was in no small measure due.

A LAY OF THE THAMES.

Who took their principal delight
In shouting at me, day and night,
In language other than polite ?
The Coaches.

Who fattened me on endless steak,
Forbade tobacco, toast, and cake,
And roused a thirst I could not slake ?
The Captain.

Who loudly laughed to see us pass,
As, in the bows, there groaned, alas !
A shapeless, palpitating mass ?
The spectators.

Who watched me, brutally elate,
Inclining much to overrate
The need for shouting, "Bow, you're late !" ?
The cox.

Who swore they ne'er would row a race
Till Bow took off his ugly face,
And someone else had filled his place ?
The rest of the crew.

Who will row Bow in next year's Eight,
Strive, gasp, perspire, and objurgate,
Lose temper, self-respect, and weight ?

A boxing match for a purse of Rs. 200 between Drummer Smart of the Middlesex Regiment and Private Bolton of the Lincolnshire Regiment was decided at Trimulgherry on the 25th ultimo. It went seven rounds, Smart having it his own way throughout and knocking out his man very neatly.

The Madras Boat Club arranged a series of races last Saturday against crews chosen from the members of the Bombay Gymkhana who were in Madras for the Football Tournament. The Bombay men were disappointed in the non-appearance of some of their crew, but their places were filled and the race for the fours carried through. Madras soon took the lead after a good start and had no difficulty in winning by a length. The Bombay men showed very poor form, but they stuck to it gamely to the end. The crews were

General Notes.

DR. James Robert Wallace, President of the Imperial Anglo-Indian Association, died at his residence, 50, Park Street, Calcutta, on Sunday, the 27th ultimo, after a long illness.

The result of the special performance of The Dandy Fifth by the A. D. S. at the Opera House on the 19th instant in aid of the Hospital Nurses' Institution was most satisfactory. Mr. Wallis-Whiddett, the Honorary Secretary and Treasurer of the A. D. S., being able to hand over to the Secretary of the H. N. I. a cheque for Rs. 1,004.

His many friends on this side of India will learn with deep regret of the death, on Monday evening, of Mr. O. H. Dickinson, of Messrs. Sanderson & Co., Calcutta. He succumbed to exhaustion after an operation for abscess of the liver, having been ill for some twelve days only. "Oliver," as he was known to his intimate friends, and they were many, was in private life one of the very best of fellows and in business was regarded as a very able man and an ornament to his profession. His social popularity was largely due to his genial kindly nature, the sort that takes all things as they come with the same sunny disposition. No man, moreover, ever lived or died in Calcutta of whom it could more truly be said that he never did another man a bad turn or said an unkind thing behind another man's back. He took his last illness uncomplainingly, with no thought of railing at ill fortune, and his friends will be glad to know that he passed away quite peacefully at the end.

A rather amusing story is told of poor old George Fordham. One night, during a Newmarket meeting, the conversation of a number of sporting men after dinner turned upon the difficulty of judging how horses were going on that wide course. One very confident gentleman, however, declared that he was never puzzled, that he always knew what the jockeys were at, even George Fordham, who, though he often kidded other people, never kidded him, as he was up to all his larks. George, who was present, said nothing. The next day, however, he rode in a match with Tom Cannon. The two ran very wide, and as they came within a hundred yards or so of the winning-post Fordham turned and looked over his shoulder. Seeing this, our confident friend shouted, "Twenty to one on Fordham!" "I'll take you," answered several voices. In another moment Tom Cannon's number was hoisted and Mr Confidence dropped upon for a pretty stiff amount.

"What the devil were you doing in that match?" he inquired, when, a few hours afterwards, he encountered Fordham. "I saw you looking over your shoulder and made sure you were rolling in."

"Oh! yes, of course, don't you know," answered George, with a twinkle in his eye; "but don't you see, I wasn't looking for Tom. I knew from the first he'd beat me easy, don't you know. I was only looking at a little dog."

And the confident gentleman is chaffed about that "little dog" to this day.

London Week by Week.

LONDON, Friday, 11th September, 1903.

A GOOD deal has been said lately in one place or another about the physical deterioration of the lower classes in our big towns. It is averred that the average factory "half timer" or boy of twelve to fourteen has neither the height, weight nor stamina of his father when the latter was twelve or fourteen years old: also that the teeth of the rising town generation are very indifferent. The statements made to this effect have been hotly contradicted, but the Government takes the matter as sufficiently serious to deserve official enquiry, and a Committee of seven under the chairmanship of Mr. Almeric Fitzroy has been appointed to undertake preliminary investigation. What the father of the modern East End boy was like when he was young I do not know; but I do know that if you go into the slums east of the Tower and kindred purlieus you will believe you have found a different race of man from that dwelling west of, say, Charing Cross. I believe in the deterioration theory myself simply from casual comparison of the true East End type with the ordinary country town and country type. It is one of the many evil results of massing people in huge towns.

Our glimpse of summer last week was soon dispelled. On Friday evening about seven, a thunderstorm which had been brewing up the whole afternoon, burst in earnest and for three hours London enjoyed or endured a tropical storm. It was the heaviest rain I have seen this year: I thought perhaps my opinion might be biased by the circumstance that there was not a cab nor a seat in a 'bus to be had between Piccadilly and South Kensington, whereby I had to walk home and undress in the bathroom: but the meteorological authorities confirm my impression that it was at all events one of the heaviest deluges vouchsafed us this year. The Underground Railway was flooded west of Earl's Court; but that appears to be its normal condition this year after rain.

Tuesday's Times contained Lord Roberts' Special Army Order concerning officers' mess expenses. It repeats the prohibition of extravagance: enjoins commanding officers to see that their messes are ordered on lines which allow the juniors to reap the full benefit of the advantages recently conferred by the financial concession recently made; instructs General Officers to make careful periodical inspection in the interests of those of moderate means, and shadows forth the consequences which may befall commanding officers who do not keep down extravagance. It is well meant and let us hope—hope I say, not expect—will be productive of valuable results. By a coincidence, perhaps undesigned but certainly unfortunate from the undesigned but certainly unfortunate from the War Office point of view the same Tuesday's Times on another page sets out a column and three-quarters "by a Military Outfitter" on the enduring topic of changes and variations in uniform. The Military Outfitter leads off with a list of nine changes which have been made since the dress and equipment of officers were "completely remodelled" in February 1902. He—but there, I am sick of this interminable tale of drivelling ineptitude and man millinery. Let's talk about something else.

A very sensible, and what I hope will prove a paying, enterprise has been started in London. My eye was caught a few days ago by a big red sign outside a newsagent's "Kelleys' Post Office Directory may be seen within." I did not want a Directory at the moment, but the sign was new and roused curiosity (I know, I know! You think I had in mind that chaste excuse for refreshment "Post Office Directory kept Here" displayed in the windows of half the pubs. in London. So I had, and could not for the life of me imagine why a respectable newsagent was falling into line with the publican and the sinner). It turned out to be a new automatic machine: the Directory is kept in a convenient box, you put in your penny and you consult the Directory. To prevent two or more unprincipled persons from sharing one pennyworth of Directory, the contrivance obliges the legitimate consultor to keep the hand on the cover of the book: take your hand away and Directory shuts like a plethoric rat trap, that is to say ponderously but firmly. The "Automatic Directories" is being run by a syndicate.

I have seldom heard such a roar of laughter in the street as I did in the Strand a day or two ago. By some accident a motor car took fire in the street and blazed up bravely: somebody I suppose pulled the nearest fire alarm, but at all event the scene was invaded by a horsed fire escape panting to be useful. The incongruity of the thing tickled the crowd as one man and you might have heard the laughter on the Surrey side of the river. Mention of motor cars suggests that the London General Omnibus Co. have started or are about to start motor buses on the street: I saw one last week labelled "Private Party": it was a clumsy and ugly caravan with wheels six inches wide on the tyre, indicating its weight. The watchful police have made huge bags of motorists during this last fortnight; the latter seems to think that the New Act consists of one clause and one only, to wit that making 20 miles an hour the maximum speed. I hope somebody will ask in Parliament for a Return showing the number of convictions for excessive speed since the Act was passed: it would be interesting too, to know by how much the Exchequer has profited in fines.

Katie Seymour died on Monday. For some time past she had been suffering from an internal disease and her place on the stage had been unfilled. Katie Seymour, otherwise Mrs. Harry Athol, made her bow from the stage when she was seven years old in a pantomime at Nottingham. She first appeared in London at the old Opera Comique, Joan of Arc, and soon migrated to the Gaiety when one may fairly say the mantle of the late Kate Vaughan fell upon her. For eleven years she enjoyed the devotion of the Gaiety and the Alhambra, stalls and gallery alike. She was one of the most spirited dancers we have ever had and had a genuine and lively sense of humour. She was only thirty-three: a short but brilliant career.

My ideas concerning Richard II whose first night was last night (at His Majesty's) have hardly had time to crystallise yet. Dazzled by its magnificence, for it is very magnificent, one came away impressed with the sense that one had seen something very fine indeed, and yet with certain twinges of dissatisfied enquiry. The Tournament scene at Coventry is wonderful and all the more so because there is not any tournament: nor could there be without mingling circus with drama. Bolingbroke's entry into London (a Tableau after Act II) shows us how the thing ought not to be done and convinces us that the absence of a tourney in Act I Scene II was right. The character of Richard II suits Mr. Tree and he makes the unfortunate king a dignified and pathetic figure whose defects of character win sympathy rather than inspire impatience. Miss Lily Brayton was simply admirable as the Queen, and Mr. Oscar Asche more than satisfied as Bolingbroke. Mr. Lionel Brough as the Gardener made one of the hits of the evening, his performance stands out in one's memory with suspicious distinctness; suspicious because one feels that a gardener should not loom so large in the mental retrospect. I suppose that as I write the subconsciousness that Richard II is a spectacular rather than an acting play is developing itself into definite shape, and yet there are scenes that remain with me and are likely too: the abdication and leave taking with the Queen in Westminster Hall, above others: the dungeon scene in Pontefract Castle was well done, but we have seen the same sort of thing too often to be deeply impressed by it. Spectacular describes the play I think; the glitter and glories, the gorgeous dresses and clever manipulation of crowds keep their place: but I shall go again, I think. The reception of the piece was most enthusiastic.

Messrs. J. J. Dilley and Lewis Clifton's Tom Pinch is rather superfluously described as "a dramatisation of Certain Incidents in Charles Dickens' novel 'Martin Chuzzlewit.'" Mr. Willard produced it at the James' on Saturday taking the title rôle himself and did it as well, I imagine as it is possible to do the character. The impression the play leaves on one (apart from the carking sense that until one shall arise to invest a stage with the indescribable "Dickens' Atmosphere," dramatisation of Dickens is a vain thing) is that the only stage-fit character of the playwrights' selection is Mr. Pecksniff. That great man is admirably represented by Mr. Frederick Volpé: it was a really capital piece of acting and one that satisfied the exacting student of Dickens. If Mr. Pecksniff outshone all the rest it is because Pecksniff is an actable character and the rest are not. Mr. Willard made the best of Tom Pinch, his simplicity, kindliness of heart and transparent honesty : but to ask a football or a dupe to fill the rôle of hero is asking too much : and Tom Pinch, however much we may appreciate his virtues in print does not appear to advantage on the stage for the sufficient reason that he has so little to do. Mark Tapley (Mr. Ernest Stallard), Charity (Miss Joan Blair) and Mercy Pecksniff (Miss Alice Lonnon) were in capable hands, but Mark Tapley is too essentially a Dickens' creation to be divorced from his native atmosphere, and to say he was not convincing is to speak too mildly. It remains to remark that the adapters presuppose an exhaustive knowledge of the novel on the part of the audience : he who did not know his Martin Chuzzlewit and know it thoroughly must be puzzled and perplexed by the allusive character of the dialogue.

Saturday also saw the production, at the Comedy, of The Climbers, an Original Modern Play in Four Acts by Clyde Fitch. It is an American play and the several Acts take place in New York and on the Bronx River which I believe is a summer resort of New Yorkers. The piece lacks something of coherency and much of back bone, but Mr. Fitch has distinctly good ideas of characterisation, he has humour and sense of the dramatic. Perhaps it will fairly describe The Climbers to say it shows that the playwright has it in him to write a really good play. The opening scene is decidedly promising. Mrs. Hunter (Miss Kate Tyndall) and her family are just returned home from Mr. Hunter's funeral. The widow, devoting one eye to tears and the other to the main chance deplores deceased till the will is read and shows her penniless, then "slangs" him freely and frankly : then she rouses herself to sell, at a profit, the new Paris gowns, weeds make useless to her. Oh yes, there is promise in the first Act. But the play does not centre on Mrs. Hunter. The central figure is Richard Sterling (Mr. Sydney Valentine) son-in-law of the widow : a man who would be honest if he could, but has not the strength of character either to resist temptation to go a little, and yet a little more, astray or to be boldly criminal. Mr. Valentine's conception of the part was as good work as he has done : Richard Sterling might so easily have been made utterly despicable and all through the play to his death (very characteristic of a weak man this business) you can't help a feeling a contemptuous pity for him. Sterling has muddled away his wife's money, has drifted into embezzlement and seems to be awaiting the verdict of fate. Mrs. Sterling (Miss Lily Hanbury) and her friends, particularly Edward Warden (Mr. Reeves Smith) spend nearly the whole of two Acts trying to keep him from ruin ; but Sterling contrives to estrange wife and friend Warden (who adores Mrs. S. ata perfectly respectful distance) and drifts along till suicide is the only resort left him. So he suicides after excellently planned hesitation and dies with a certain resigned dignity which leaves us half sorry for him as a man who, with will power, might have "climbed" to success. You may not have supposed from this bare outline of it that The Climbers is amusing ; but it is. There are some capital situations and stage business and much clever writing, but Mr. Fitch is just a little too fond of crossing his t's and dotting his i's. He seems always explaining things in unnecessary asides, and does not leave enough to the intelligence of his audience.

I have been dipping into Mr. W. E. Adams' "Memories of a Social Atom." The author was a printer or compositor and he had his wits about him and has collected a lot of good stories about people whose names we all know. When Vizetelly ran the Illustrated Times, a weekly long since dead and gone, G. A. Sala was one of his most popular contributors : but like a good many other popular writers he was notoriously unpunctual with his "copy."

Vizetelly had more trouble with George Augustus than with any other of his team. When copy was wanted from him, he had to be hunted from one haunt to another. He said himself that he always found a printer's devil alongside his boots in the morning. It happened on one occasion that he was locked in a room at the office with a pot of porter and a packet of cigars till he had finished an article that was required at once. But a more serious difficulty arose later. Sala was writing his story, "The Baddington Peerage." Nothing could induce him to keep up to time with the instalments. At last Vizetelly hit upon an effective device. An announcement was put in type that the Editor would no longer apologise for the failure of the author to supply the continuation of the story, that he was tired of chasing him through all the taverns of Fleet-street and the Strand, and that he was now resolved to let the reader know with whom the responsibility for the lapse really lay. A proof of this announcement was sent to Sala, with an intimation that it would appear in the ensuing issue of the paper unless the copy of the next instalment of the novel was in the hands of the printer by a certain hour.

Sala was never too late again.

I like this of the late Frederick Tomlins.

One morning, when Tomlins was editing Douglas Jerrold's Newspaper, he found his office door locked and no office-boy on the premises. The boy appeared at length, and explained that he had been up all night. 'It's this way, sir,' he said ; 'my uncle was hung at the Old Bailey this morning, and although we weren't on speaking terms with him, I thought, as one of the family, I ought to go and see the last of him.' 'Quite right,' replied Tomlins, 'never neglect your family duties ; but when another of your relations is to be hanged, please to leave the office key under the mat.'

Mr. Andrew Carnegie contradicts the statement that he is negociating for the purchase of the field of Bannockburn to save it from the builder. "Statement without foundation. No use for battle-field" he wires. It certainly is not a suitable site for a Free Library. Reuter will have told you of Mr. Astor's gift of £20,000 to the Cancer Research Fund. It is money wisely bestowed.

DEDICATING his collected essays in book form to our ubiquitous friend the Indian crow, D. Dewar, in Animals of No Importance, brings to our notice in rotation the several forms of birds, minor animals and sundry insects with which we are most familiar. Commencing with a glance at what the fortunate sea-going Poojah excursionist may see in and upon the waters in the Bay of Bengal and Indian Ocean, we are reintroduced to the several creatures who force their company upon us in the various districts of India. The long sojourner in the land will find no great novelty in the pages, though on perusal he may in future regard his tormentors with a more lenient eye from having their amusing idiosyncrasies brought more prominently to notice but the book will certainly interest intending visitors or those residing in climates free from the obtrusive but, nathless, generally unappreciated samples of natural history. All have some redeeming qualities though the writer prefers to dwell upon the opposite side of their characters. There is no pretence at scientific classification, but simply allusion to traits from the comical point of view. We commend the brochure specially to the tourist, for it will tend to beguile the long railway journey, as also enable him to study such companions as he may be forced to associate with, whether he appreciates their attentions or not.

THE COMING OF THE COLONIST.

In The Coming of the Colonist the writer seeks to prophesy that, the descendants of the mother country's expatriated children will at no distant date outshine their forebears and take the lead in the future of the Empire. Without actual repetition, it is the old vision of Macaulay. New Zealander gazing on the ruins of London Bridge revived. Welding the several Colonies into one homogeneous whole is regarded as an impossibility. The gist of the writer's contention tending in the direction that each offshoot nation founded by Great Britain will set up for itself bound for a generation or two by sentimental ties to the parent, but which ties will become fainter and fainter as time goes on. Though not without interest to reflective readers, the work is too far advanced for most people of the present day.

SPORT IN THE HIMALAYAS.

THE Serow (Nemorhædus bubalinus) is one of the shyest animals of the Himalayas seldom seen in the open, and then, as a rule, only early in the morning and never far from his lying-up place, which is usually under an overhanging rock in some dark, sunless ravine, or in an old scrub-grown landslip close to wooded precipices. Or, he will make his home in a dense clump of ringall bamboos, wild indigo, or any impenetrable thicket, but always near some precipitous ground, down which he dashes on being alarmed. His home is so well guarded by crackling sticks, brittle leaves and thickets that it is almost impossible to track a serow to his lair ; the best and most patient "still-hunter" cannot manage it, and when shot the serow is usually either driven, or caught in the open very early in the morning.

I made my first acquaintance with serow some years ago in Gurhwal. I was returning, from a day in the forests, down a steep hillside and my guide suggested a short cut through a patch of ringalls and indigo that grew thick among the oaks and rhododendrons, when suddenly, about 4 P.M., we heard a funny noise—half scream, half whistle—close on our right, then there was a crash and a big brownish coloured animal went crashing through the thicket and across the steeps beyond ; a snap shot at him as he was crossing an open space some sixty yards off had no effect but to splinter a rock about a foot above his back, in a few seconds he was out of sight.

For some years after this I did not see a serow till one morning when walking up a ravine in search of Kalij and Koklass pheasants, my little cocker spaniel roused one from an indigo thicket above me. The serow gave his uncanny whistle, bounded out of the thicket, and stood on a rock about sixty yards above me glaring down at the spaniel who was baying him. I wished I had taken a man with me carrying my ·450 rifle and I could have got a shot, but by the time I had reloaded with a ball cartridge and closed the breech of my gun the serow had given another harsh, discordant whistle and was off along the mountain side.

I remember a serow that lived in a clump of ringalls, right on top of a grand hill called Lankra, over 10,000 ft. elevation, and I roused him on three occasions without getting a shot. The first time I had come up the hill to camp near the top with a friend who was going up by another way, and I was strolling along gun in hand, on a sheep path below a big brake of ringalls; two men were beating the brake for Koklass pheasants, and a man carried my rifle behind me. A crash above me on the right made me quickly exchange my gun for my rifle and I ran forward to see a fine serow, for an instant, as he dashed down the precipices beyond. A few days after, I left camp at dawn, and made my way towards the ringall brake, some half a mile away, and had not gone far before a serow appeared, the same one I believe, for he went crashing through the forest up to, and through the ringalls, and down to the cliffs beyond, without my getting even a snap at him.

Three years afterwards I visited this hill again, one morning at the end of December, and in company with a Gurhwali went cautiously towards the ringalls intending to try and drive the serow. I was to get round in view of the precipices and wait for the beast to appear while my man was to drive him out : but, in some way the serow heard, or winded me as I was creeping cautiously round, and in an instant was crashing out of the thicket and away down across the khuds below. My men with the tent and equipage saw him from below, as he crossed the path in front of them on his way to the wild precipices beyond. I never got this animal, as on trying for him a fourth time I was informed he had been shot by a sahib about a month before I went there, the sahib having caught him in the open early in the morning, and dropped him in his tracks.

My first serow I got on a hill called Tanpore, on the same ridge, but rather lower than Lankra. I was camped some 3,000 ft. below Tanpore, and started before dawn one morning in November to go to the top of this steep, sugar loaf shaped mountain, which rises to a height of about 9,400 ft. It is one of those hills that the natives are superstitious about, they don't like to accompany sahibs on such hills, being afraid some accident will happen, and on this occasion my spare-weapon carrier nearly fell over a precipice. My guide, from a neighbouring village, had persuaded me not to try for game on this hill as "it was haunted by a Shaitan, and no bullets would go straight." Up we went, and I must say that I missed three easy shots at goral. "It is no use," said the guide, "the goli never has any effect on animals on Tanpore Pahar."

On getting up to the steep part near the top, I took my gun, as I thought my shots at the goral had scared all animals from the vicinity, and I might get a shot or two at Monaul pheasants. We came to a very steep bit and the guide said : "The sahib-logue can't go on places like this, there will only be an accident."

"Go on up," I said, "and I will pass you up my gun," and the man was up like a lamplighter. I passed him the gun, and was just starting to scramble up myself, hanging on to wiry tufts of grass and twigs, when I heard the sound of a scuffle behind me, looked round and there was my man, Dewan Sing, slipping down the hill, hanging on to my rifle, turning round, grabbing at what he could. The good fellow never let go the rifle, but stuck to it and kept his head, and luckily was brought up by two small rhododendron trees that grew right on the edge of a sheer precipice of 60 or 70 ft., but for those young trees he must have gone over. How he slipped was that the rock he happened to be standing on slid from under him, his left big toe nail was taken off from the root and the poor chap was in great pain, but as intent as ever on accompanying his master to the top of the mountain. The guide had now joined us again, and tried to stop us going, but after a rest and Dewan Sing had bound up his toe with part of my handkerchief, we started again and got safely to the top. I went round a spur on the right, a little way from the summit, and saw a serow standing facing me on another spur, about 180 yards off. It was an awkward shot, as the sun was just above the serow and the foresight appeared to dance in the glare as I took the 150 yards sight of my old ·450, rather full, on to the serow's chest, and fired. When the smoke caused by 4 drams of black powder died away there was nothing in sight, missed again I thought, and the guide said "It is no use sahib," but I told him to hold his tongue, and we went round to where the serow had stood; there we found a lump of gelatine-like stuff which showed that the poor beast had been hit in the foot, and just round the corner we came on him limping along, about 120 yards off, and a shot through the shoulders finished him off. "You have broken the spell now sahib," said the guide.

He was a fine old serow with thick horns, right 10¼ inches, left 9¾, very black in colour with not much red about him, but well grizzled on his sides and quarters.

Apparently, an animal hit in the foot by a bullet cannot go any pace, but must proceed at a walk. I have known the same thing happen to a goral that was hit in the foot, and like the serow could not go out of a walk, for some reason or other the poor brute must put his foot to the ground. It must be awful pain, and no time should be lost in getting in a shot that will drop the animal dead.

A serow after being roused from his haunts, scared, or even fired at will almost always return in a few days, that is why, in March 1900, I fear a serow that I hit with a ·275 Mauser and split bullet, got away to some dark ravine and died, as he has never returned to his haunts there. I came on him early one morning on an open place, about 150 yards, and am certain that I hit him twice, from the way he behaved, but there was no blood to track him by and I never saw that serow again

I don't believe in a smaller bore than the modern cordite ·360 or ·350 for Himalayan sport; the ·303, ·275 and ·256, are too small, although many animals are bagged with these small bores, but many are lost, owing to there being no blood trail. The ·360 is the very best weapon for Himalayan shooting, being light and handy, extremely accurate and very deadly. I am writing of the ·400/360, with a charge of 40grs. of cordite, and 310grs. solid, soft-nosed bullet; the ·375 with 40grs. and 320grs. bullet, would be practically the same. A single ·360 need not weigh more than 7lbs., and with the falling-block action, Farquharson's, or a modification of it, is very handy and quick. A double ·360 of about 8½lbs. weight, with 26 inch barrels, appears to be the best weapon of all for Himalayan shooting.

Shortly after losing the serow hit with the ·275 I saw two serow going up a ravine and missed the leading one with a downward shot at about 200 yards with a ·500 express. My old setter got me my next serow, nearly a year later. I was going down a wide nullah looking out for Koklass pheasants, with the dog working spaniel like about 20 yards ahead of me, when I saw him sniffing at something below him, not standing as he would to game-birds, but winding, and with his tail waving from side to side. I quickly made out the head of a serow about 50 yards straight below me, glaring up at us from the oak scrub, and in an instant I had snatched my rifle from my man in exchange for my gun. A quick shot with my ·450 loaded with Rifleite took the serow in the throat, but it galloped about 100 yards before rolling over dead. This proved to be a female with horns only about eight inches long.

A few months after this I got a serow, high up in the birch forest just below a glacier; this, unfortunately, was also a female with not over good horns. She was lying under a rock, among some birch bushes when I came over a ridge, within 150 yards range, and killed her with a shot from the ·360 cordite. It is nearly impossible, or quite impossible, to tell male serow from female, even at short range, they are alike in colour and size, and the horns of the female often as fine, or finer, than the male. A friend of mine killed two female serow in the outer hills of Kumaon, one with 12½-inch and one with 12-inch horns: these are the finest horns I have seen.

I, not long ago, killed a very old male serow who at some time had both his horns broken off at the base: he was in wretched condition, covered with boils and had a big swelling on the throat. I was glad that I came on the poor old beast and ended his life with a deadly ·360 bullet; but old, tough and diseased as he was, he was eaten by some cowherds who had their camp near.

My last serow I got in December 1901, on some cliffs inhabited by tahr. I started early one morning to look for tahr among the precipices to the east of the stream, on the banks of which my tent was pitched; a wild, rapid torrent fed by a glacier on the south side of the great snowy range. We had got about 1,000 ft., or more, up the mountain when I noticed a dark object in an old landslip on the other side of the stream. My men said it was a tahr, but my binoculars showed it to be a serow. The animal was lying under a big grey rock in a thicket of scrub, at about the same elevation as we were; so we went down to the river again, crossed it higher up by a convenient tree that had been thrown across by a landslip and proceeded to stalk the serow. On getting up to the place I trod on a dead ringall, concealed by leaves, snap went the ringall and immediately the serow jumped up and gave two or three discordant whistles. I moved on slowly and catching a glimpse of the serow's neck in the bushes, fired. Two serow made off, one from below me plunged down into the ringalls, and the one I had fired at dashed off straight to some precipices beyond. We found blood and followed it to the edge of these precipices across which the serow had galloped, and looking ahead with my glasses I saw him standing on a rock on less precipitous spurs, about 500 yards off. There was no attempting to follow him, so we got back to the stream again, and passing the camp we got up beyond and cautiously approached the place where I had seen him standing. But, we could not see his serowship, so I looked across to the other side, where I had left a man lying down to signal the animal's whereabouts, and with my glass I saw the man pointing his hand to his right, then I saw the serow going slowly back along the way he had come, about 200 yards off. I waited till he appeared to be above a small plateau, and then fired with the 200 yards sight taken full. Bang, the serow plunged forward and went into a clump of cypresses about 20 yards further on and there he disappeared for a minute, or so; then we saw him rolling, slowly at first, but increasing in momentum, he crossed down from rock to rock a good 500 ft. We went down and found him with horns smashed, the right about an inch from the tip, and the left almost at the base. A pity, as his horns would have measured about 10 inches. He was a fine male, in his prime, with the best skin I have ever seen on a serow. My first shot had gone in and out of the skin in front of his chest, not disabling him, but causing the blood to flow; the second shot took him full behind the right shoulder, but he had energy enough left to get among the cypresses, from which he rolled down the khud.

Such is my experience of serow, a wary animal, with capital sight, A 1 powers of scent, and wonderful hearing. He is generally called an ugly beast; but to my thinking he is a handsome animal, especially about the fore-quarters, and he has a fine, bold, dark brown eye, his hind-quarters are ugly and drooping. There is little of the goat about the serow, except his surefootedness; he is solitary in his habits, more than one female is rarely seen with him. I have never heard of more than one female being seen with a male, and there is no goaty smell whatever about a serow; in fact, he smells like extra strong rabbit. I know an old tea-planter in Gurhwal who has kept a male serow for over 18 years, and the hut the animal lives in smells as if scores of rabbits were kept there. These animals become quite tame if taken young, and become attached to their masters; the tea-planter referred to above takes his animal for a walk every evening; the brute is, however, suspicious of strangers, especially natives, and has frequently charged and knocked them over. With his master he is like a lamb, and sleeps on a bench in a kind of stable. If his master appears at the barred window he jumps from the bench and with all four feet together stands on the narrow window ledge with his nose thrust through the bars. He is a fine specimen, with horns over 10 inches and is the old planter's only pet.

Serow are still plentiful in Kumaon and Gurhwal, and from their shy habits and the ground they frequent are likely to remain so.

HOLLAND'S NEW NITRO PARADOX

MESSRS. Holland and Holland recently asked us (The Field) to inspect and see shot a new development in their well-known system of Paradox ball gun. For some time past they have been conscious of the need for adapting the Paradox for the shooting of smokeless ball cartridges. This development has been called for by the widespread recognition that is accorded to smokeless powders as used in shot guns. The reduced recoil and the great advantage of smokelessness, especially when shooting in tropical countries, provide ample justification for modernising this well-known weapon. As pioneers of the combination ball and shot gun, which has proved of so much value to sport-men in all parts of the world, Messrs. Holland and Holland may be congratulated upon having succeeded in constructing a Paradox gun which, while retaining the excellent shooting with both shot and ball for which the old weapon was so well-known, has the advantage of shooting a smokeless ball cartridge which not only gives an increased velocity, but does so with a decrease of recoil of some 20 to 25 per cent., which is a very important matter in these, comparatively speaking, light weapons.

The Paradox submitted for our examination is a typical specimen of its class. It weighs 7¼lb., and it handles and balances like a shot gun of the same weight. Just to make sure that the weapon was thoroughly effective for the firing of shot charges, a number of sporting cartridges were fired at the plate, and well-distributed patterns, averaging about 140 pellets on the 30-in. circle, were obtained at 40 yards.

We were fortunately in a position to make thoroughly complete tests of the ballistics of the nitro cartridges used. The mean velocity obtained over the usual 20 yards range worked out at an average of 980ft. per second, this being slightly in excess of that of the old black powder ones. We made a number of comparative experiments to arrive at the relative pressures, with the result that the new cartridge, in its normal condition, gave practically the same pressures as those charged with black powder; but Messrs. Holland and Holland in their new gun have provided sufficient metal at the breech to allow for the increased pressures that might be developed in hot, dry climates.

Beyond satisfying ourselves that the velocity and pressure conform with the established requirements for ball cartridges of this character we did not go, as it is not in this direction that special advantages are claimed. Certainly the extra velocity is of advantage in lowering the trajectory, but, on the other hand, Messrs. Holland have been careful not to develop the cartridge too much in this direction, as they wish to avoid interfering with the use of black powder from the same rifle with indentical sighting. The results of our target experiments showed that although the elevation required for the black powder cartridge is somewhat higher than for the nitro, the difference is not material, so that black powder may be used if required.

Our readers will be especially interested in the readings of comparative recoil which we have been able to obtain. To get at the absolute value of recoil as given by the two cartridges we made use of an apparatus which had just been completed for another purpose. We must, for the time being, postpone special reference to its characteristics, and it will, therefore, be sufficient to say that we suspended the Paradox gun from two cords, leaving it absolute freedom of recoil. It was fired in a way that avoided any movement of the gun as a whole, so that the motion caused by the firing was recoil and recoil alone. A fitting was attached by which electric contacts were operated in the course of the backward travel of the gun. These contacts were placed a suitable distance apart, and the time occupied by the gun in recoiling over the known distance between them was measured by means of a chronograph. The records of recoil velocity so obtained represented the absolute recoil of the freely suspended gun, and the readings were converted by means of the well-known formula into foot-pounds of energy. A series of five shots was fired with each kind of cartridge, and the result are presented herewith :

BLACK POWDER CARTRIDGES—Bullet, 735grs., Powder, 84grs.

Velocity of recoil.		Total energy of recoil.
16·82 „ ...	...	35·202 „
17·00 „ ...	...	35·959 „
16·97 „ ...	...	35·842 „
17·10 „ ...	...	36·382 „

SMOKELESS CARTRIDGES—Bullet, 735grs.; Powder, 26grs.

Velocity of recoil.		Total energy of recoil.
15·25 „ ...	...	28·948 „
15·19 „ ...	...	28·721 „
15·17 „ ...	...	28·645 „
Average ...	...	28·774 „

In arriving at the total energy of recoil a calculated correction was made for the amount the gun was raised in the course of its backward travel in the manner of a pendulum having approximately a 7ft radius. No correction was considered necessary for the weight of the extra fittings attached to the gun, these being the same in both cases and amounting only to 4oz., which, with the metal still to be removed in finishing the arm tested, make a total of 12oz. The above figures establish the fact that with the smokeless cartridges the recoil is 23 per cent. less than with black powder, notwithstanding the increase of velocity registered. We then fired a large number of smokeless powder ball cartridges at 50 and 100 yards range, the right and left barrels being fired alternately. The diagrams obtained were, as far as accuracy was concerned, very much the same as from the old black powder cartridges. At 50 yards the largest was a remarkably fine one, all the eight shots fired being in a 2-in. squire At 100 yards range a number of 5-in. groups were made, one of which is herewith illustrated. The chief advantage gained in using a ball and shot gun is, of course, that the weapon that produces these results can be handled and is handled, exactly like an ordinary shot gun, thus enabling the shooter to take a snap-shot at a tiger with much the same confidence and facility with which one would shoot at a bolting rabit. At the same time, many experienced sportsmen consider that the heavy bullet fired from this class of weapon is more effective and has a more certain stopping power than the lighter bullet fired from an Express, especially when used against soft-skinned dangerous game such as tiger. Hitherto the nitro Express rifle has given the sportsman the advantage of a smokeless cartridge. Now that the Paradox is shown to give thoroughly satisfactory results with a smokeless charge, the sportsman will probably take to it with renewed eagerness, in view of its dual power to serve alternately as a shot gun and as a rifle for soft skinned game.

BRIDGE QUERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INDIAN FIELD.

SIR,—Would you kindly settle this dispute which occurred at a Bridge Party.

"A" and "B," and "Y" and "Z" are partners. It is "A's" time to deal. The cards are ready for dealing when suddenly "A" is called away from the table, for a few moments. During his absence "Y" picks up the cards and deals them, when "A" returns he finds the cards dealt out and examines his cards. He leaves it to his partner "B" who therefore declares "No Trumps." The game is played out to the end, "A" and "B" scoring 3 by tricks and 30 for aces. After the score is recorded upon the Scoring Block, "Y," who dealt the cards, claims a misdeal, for the reason that there are only 3 cards played in the last trick, "A" being one card short in the deal. Owing to this neither side could come to any agreement about the matter. Would you oblige by stating your opinion of how the proceedings should have been correctly settled.

THE POONA RACES.

First Day, Wednesday, 23rd September 1903.

THE first day of the Poona Races proper provided a splendid spectacle.

The racing was of the first water and the public on the whole were able to hold a bit of silver for their next encounter with the bookmakers. There were two items of special interest during the afternoon—the Trial Stakes, which was looked upon as a gift for Acetine, and the New Stakes, which was won by Russley Rose. Acetine showed what he was capable of accomplishing at the Ninth Extra Meeting and as a consequence he went out a piping hot favourite at 3 to 1 on. But the stable owning Russley Rose worked a clever commission. This pony is owned by a Parsee who races under the nom-de-course of "Mr. Kelso" and he has been very fortunate in his investment. He owns the bay Australian sprinter Kelso and in Russley Rose he possesses a most valuable racing asset. When Russley Rose made her Indian début a few weeks ago the "good thing" was kept exceedingly dark and the stable I believe were able to get back her purchase money at the first time of asking. This afternoon the stable had the great Indabba in and the public plumped for the latter and then changed their allegiance to Rifleman who went out a firm favourite. Meantime the connections of Russley Rose backed her bit by bit till she went out at 6 to 4 against and she put the issue beyond the pale of doubt before the distance post was reached.

To take the events in their order the country-breds paraded for the Breeders' Plate were a classy lot and looked very fit. If anything Gentle Lady was on the big side and it was surprising, considering she was carrying top weight, 10st. 7lbs., that she was so warmly supported. Upstart, who has improved since he ran in the pony ranks, was next fancied and he won with comparative ease, having his field beat to the world a long way from home. The Nobleman filly, Miss Ascot, was running for the first time and ran very green, but with the feather weight of 6st. up should have shown up better : if the c-b's bred by "Mr. J. B." cannot put up a better performance than this his breeding operations at Poonamust be reckoned as an expensive hobby. His younger stock, however, may be better as he put old Nobleman to more breedy mares lately.

Veera, Cocos, Hadyn : shake them up in a hat, back the one you draw, was the advice to punters about the Stand Plate, but as a matter of fact Haydn, who has returned to his Colonial form under Clarke's methods, went out first favourite at odds on and won his race, but he was fast stopping, and if there was a few more yards Veera would have snatched the verdict. It was lucky for Mr. Hunter that he was able to secure the services of Robinson, who rode a well judged race.

For the Maiden Stakes Bay Middleton, who ran so well at Bombay, was considered an absolute. He was carrying a weight to suit him and so was freely supported, but the lightly weighted Surjumal brought off another of his surprises by beating the favourite who was dead heated by Moona. This was somewhat of a shock to backers, the winner having been neglected at odds varying from 6 to 10 to 1. It was a great race to witness and Melsom opened his Poona meeting programme by riding a very artistic and strong finish.

The event of the evening was of course the Trial Stakes. Acetine looking big and strong somewhat dwarfed his competitors in the paddock. A grey horse always looks bigger and more prominent than a dark horse, but Mr. Hart's gelding is a big slashing horse, and how he gallops. It was Stand Off's own distance, but the stable was not sweet on his chance and the yellow and green stable was not putting any very great trust in Loch Clieveden. Acetine was put down to carry 8st. 7lbs., but it was ascertained by wire from Australia that he was not obliged to carry any penalty and he had only 8st. 2lbs. up. Taking command at the bend he squandered his field and won in a canter anyhow.

Mameluke may safely be described as the best Arab racing horse to-day. He has won the Governor's Cup and other big events with tons of weight up and his handicap in the Aga Khan Plate seemed a crusher. Yet he was equally supported with Arthur. The latter has had a leg and wore a bandage, but despite this the little champion was well backed. Mameluke was well nursed and won in the end somewhat easily from Hyderi, who ran a good race throughout.

The New Stakes brought out the creme de la creme of waler ponies and it was a pretty sight to see them circling in the paddock. All looked fit and well. Rifleman was picked out to win, but Russley Rose was quietly backed and perhaps carried as much money. Min also received a fair share of support. Entering the straight Russley Rose was sent to the front and won by three lengths with comparative ease.

Second Day, Saturday, 20th September, 1903

(By Special Telegram.)

The second day saw a record attendance discussing a programme of six events in all of which large fields were sent out. To take the biggest race and with it the most surprising upset of the day first. Acetine on his recent running was picked out as a "cert" for the Grand Western India Stakes and went out at 6 to 4 on. Tubal Cain was not without a following, while Up Guards and Loch Clieveden were also supported. Mr. Apcar's representative was not nibbled at to any extent, despite his light impost the public little dreaming that the winner would turn up in Goldsmith. Always in a good position throughout the race the failure of Acetine must have been a great blow to those who believed the race as good as over for him and his Cup price will now expand. Ali made the running well, but was disposed of the lead by Trenton on entering the straight and here Goldsmith and Loch Clieveden were shaken up with Tubal Cain close after them. Acetine under the vigorous call of O'Neil being unable to make an impression upon them. Goldsmith securing the race won easily from Loch Clieveden, who beat Tubal Cain by three lengths, the favourite being fourth. The time recorded was excellent for the Poona course. The next race of special importance was the International Stakes. Yankee Boy has proved himself a great pony and that he should have been able to carry top weight (9st. 10lbs.) and finish in front of a classy field in the time he did seems to justify the opinion that he is the best pony of his inches which has ever been brought to the country. We must not forget, however, that Russley Rose, who won on Wednesday, put up a splendid performance against Yankee Boy, with 9st. 4lbs up as she was giving away an inch in height.

The Poona Derby went to Bay Middleton. He was the best of the Arabs landed last year and won the two big events open to him at Bombay in February. That he is a rare good 'un was proved, for he ran a neck and neck finish to Adonius and these two and Sundown dead heated for first place! A dead heat of three horses is a rather rare performance, but I recollect it occurring last year and on that occasion strange to relate the owner of Bay Middleton owned one of the dead heaters (President). The run off was expected to result in the victory of Bay Middleton and so the issue proved for Bay Middleton won by a length.

Another important Arab event was the Pony Derby and a big field contested thus. Little Joker lasting out best under the whip won by half a length.

So much had Brigand gone off of late that he was not much fancied, if at all, for the Dealers' Plate. Gallant, who has done well in the past over the distance, was best supported but he ran badly. Brigand had to fight Shaiboob for the victory and he won by only a neck, Rose an indifferent third.

Firecracker, who was favourite, failed to win the Criterion, a race specially designed for second raters. An absolute outsider, Corrie Roy, won by a neck from Spark, who was second favourite.

THE ARAB PONY DERBY.—Rs. 2,500, out of which second receives Rs. 500, and the third Rs. 300. For Arab ponies 13-4 and under, old, and 13-3 and under, new, measurement—maidens on 1st January, 1903. Above heights to carry 8st. 12lbs. W. I. Penalties.—Winners since 31st December, 1902, of a race value Rs. 900 or over : once 4lbs ; twice, 7lbs : oftener 10lbs. Six furlongs.

Third Day. Monday, 28th September 1903.

(By Special Telegram.)

A splendid day's racing with favourites in winning vein. Two popular wins were those of Swiftsure and Achilles, while little Ptarmigan again proved himself the fastest half mile Arab Pony on the Indian turf, winning the Lilliputs from pillar to post easily. Selpme made quite a record : he burst the tapes of the starting gate, and a start having been made in the old fashioned way by the flag, and the running being up to his form, Selpme won as was confidently expected by the South Indian contingent Gaulme accounted for the Grand National in fine style his jumping was good and the pace was too much for the others. Vedette fell at the stone wall, broke a leg and had to be destroyed Captain Randall rode Veneda second in this event and won the Pony Chase on Patrician. Funny was favorite, but had bad fever and only ran second. There was a big attendance, brisk betting and ideal weather. Details :—

THE TURF.

SANDOWN PARK SEPTEMBER MEETING.

WET and unpromising weather in town on Saturday morning had the effect of considerably curtailing the attendance at the Esher enclosure, and the sport, while generally interesting, hardly reached the level anticipated. The meeting of Kroonstad and Countermark in the September Stakes was a feature of the afternoon, and the trainer of Countermark was, after the defeat of Lord Ellesmere's colt at Liverpool, sanguine of success. Kroonstad, however, gave the 5lbs. away in hollow style, and the three lengths by which he won could have been increased at his jockey's pleasure. Lancashire not being sent for the Michaelmas Stakes, Santry had an easy task, and those who cared to back the son of Gallinule and E. P. had to bet extravagant odds. Sonnetta proved the good thing her second at Kempton the previous day made her out to be for the Selling High-weight Handicap, and it cost 320 guineas to buy her in. Several of the entrants for the North Surrey Handicap had had experience over hurdles, and a couple that had won "over the sticks"—Karakoul and Communist—fought out a desperate finish, the first-named just getting home by a short head in the hands of Madden.

THE DONCASTER MEETING.

The only thing wanting on the Town Moor on the 8th instant to render sport thoroughly enjoyable was fine weather. There were plenty of runners in the various races, and the attendance was of large dimensions, the presence of His Majesty no doubt greatly assisting in swelling the number of visitors. There is a large amount of stand accommodation at Doncaster, and the rain caused them to be well filled during the afternoon, but, notwithstanding the conditions atmospherically racing was of high standard throughout, and backers about held their own. As to the going, it proved in capital condition, though a further downfall would make it on the heavy side for the last of the "classics" the next day.

The principal events on the card were, of course, the Champagne Stakes and the Great Yorkshire Handicap. The first-named race (for two-year olds) has been won by horses whose names will long be remembered in connection with the Turf. Beeswing was successful in 1835, Flying Dutchman in 1848, Lord Clifden in 1862, Cremorne in 1871, Kermesse ten years later, Minting was successful in 1885, Ayrshire in 1887, and La Fleche in 1891, while other winners of the Champagne Stakes have been Ladas, Velasquez, Come Chick, and last year Rock Sand. This year's winner, Pretty Polly, has not as yet tasted the bitters of defeat, having won all her four engagements and the manner in which the daughter of Admiration ran away from her field stamps her as being a filly of considerable merit. Sceptre, by the way, only managed to finish third to Game Chick in the corresponding race of 1901, but whereas the latter has since been a failure, Sceptre's performances are too well known to need repetition. The Great Yorkshire Handicap saw the locally-trained Cliftonhall once again in winning humour. He had previously carried off the Northumberland Plate, and his victory on the Town Moor was no less popular than was the colt's success at Gosforth Park.

The Champagne Stakes.—Of 1,010 sovs. for two-year olds; colts 9st, fillies 8st 11lbs. Red House in (five furlongs and 152 yards).

(Winner trained by Mr Gilpin, at Newmarket)

Betting : 11 to 10 agst Pretty Polly, 6 to 4 St Amant, 8 to 1 Cinquefoil, 33 to 1 any other (o).

Pretty Polly, on the inside, jumped off in front of Cinquefoil on the right, and St. Amant in the centre, with Hands Down last, and, making the whole of the running, won in a canter by a length and a half from Lancashire, who took second place when fairly in the line for home; two lengths separated the second and third. Hands Down was fourth. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1 min. 11 1-5secs.

THE GREAT YORKSHIRE HANDICAP PLATE.—Of 975 sovs winners extra. Old St. Leger Course (one mile six furlongs 132 yards).

(Winner trained by W. I'Anson at Malton.)

BETTING: 8 to 4 agst Cliftonhall, 4 to 1 Lady Help, 6 to 1 Joshua, 8 to 1 Lovat, 10 to 1 Prince Florizel, 10 to 1 Scullion, 100 to 8 Caro, 100 to 7 Genius, 20 to 1 Wavelet's Pride, 20 to 1 Gourgaud.

Cliftonhall was the first to leave the paddock, and he was followed in the parade by Genius, Scullion, and Lady Help, with Joshua last, Gourgaud going straight to the post. There was a tedious delay caused principally by Genius, who kicked through the tapes and stopped to kick just after the barrier was raised, taking no further part in the race. Lady Help was the quickest away and led, clear of Wavelet's Pride, Gourgaud, Prince Florizel and Joshua, with Lovat next and Caro last for half a mile, when Joshua took second place, with Gourgaud, Lovat, Wavelet's Pride, and Prince Florizel next and Cliftonhall dropping into the rear. So they ran till five furlongs from home, where Lady Help was beaten and Lovat drew to the front, followed by Wavelet's Pride, Cliftonhall, Joshua and Gourgaud, but Cliftonhall, taking second place in the straight, joined issue with Lovat at the distance and, wearing him down in a few strides, won very cleverly by a length: six lengths between second and third. Gourgaud was fourth, Joshua fifth, Prince Florizel sixth, Scullion next and Caro last. Time by Benson's chronograph 3min. 7⅖secs

Changeable weather was experienced at Doncaster on the 9th, where the last of the 'classic' races of the season was crown for decision. During the early morning the rain clouds of the previous day were scattered by a very boisterous wind, though before racing time had arrived there were one or two sharp showers. Then the sun appeared, but the afternoon was not altogether favourable to outdoor exercise, the wind again giving way to dark water-laden clouds. The sales occupied the attention of sportsmen during the morning, a Flying Fox filly fetching a large figure. The attendance in the afternoon was worthy of the St. Leger day, the presence of the King more than counteracting the effects of the threatening weather on intending visitors, and when the principal event of the day was reached the crowd on the Town Moor was perhaps as large as any seen there. As anticipated overnight, five contested, the chief item, although originally 208 entered, but of the race little need be said. Rock Sand was never threatened, and eventually won in a canter in very smart time. Odds of 5 to 2 were freely laid on the colt, second in request being Mead, but the latter could not do better than carry the Royal colours into third place behind William Rufus. It was Sir James Miller's first St. Leger, and also D. Maher's first win in the old-established race

THE ST. LEGER STAKES—Of 25 sovs each, for three-year olds; colst 9st, fillies 8st 11lb; the second received 300 sovs and the third 100 sovs. Old St. Leger Course (about one mile six furlongs and 132 yards). (208 subs.)—Closed 17th September 1901.

(Winner trained by Blackwell at Newmarket.)

BETTING: 5 to 2 on Rock Sand, 7 to 1 agst Mead, 10 to 1 Love Charm, 100 to 9 William Rufus, 200 to 1 Persistence.

The first to emerge from the paddock was Rock Sand, who was followed in the parade by William Rufus, Persistence and Mead, Love Charm bringing up the rear. They turned and cantered in the same order, and it was 3-16 when the white flag was hoisted. Two minutes later the lot were despatched to an excellent start, the first to show in front being Persistence, who made play from William Rufus and Love Charm these being clear of Rock Sand, with Mead whipping in to the top of the hill, where Rock Sand took second place with William Rufus and Love Charm side by side next four lengths in advance of Mead. On reappearing in view a mile from home Rock Sand took a slight lead of Love Charm, Persistence and William Rufus, but at the Red House Persistence dropped away beaten and Mead took close order with the others. He became second five furlongs from home, but was passed later by William Rufus though neither could ever get near Rock Sand, who made the remainder of the running and won in a canter by four lengths; a length and a half divided the second and third. Love Charm was fourth. Time by Benson's chronograph 3mins. 9⅖secs. Value of the stakes, £4775

TATTERSALL SALE STAKES.—Of 730 sovs, for two year's old colts 9st, fillies 8st 11lb; penalties, etc. Seven furlongs.

Lord Penrhyn's b c Peroration, by Persimmon—Pannonia, 8st 9lbs	W Lane 1
Sir E vincent's ch c Orgueil, 8st 9lbs ..	O Madden 2
Mr T Jennings's b f St Mindred, 8st 6lbs ..	Hardy 3

(Winner trained by Cole, at Exton.)

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Peroration, 2 to 2 agst Orgueil, and 8 to 1 St. Mindred.

Peroration jumped off with a clear lead of St. Mindred, and though Orgueil took second place after going halfway, he failed to make the slightest impression on Peroration, who made the whole of the running, and won in a canter by five lengths; a bad third.

Miserable weather was associated with the third day's proceedings on the Town Moor, rain falling sharply during the greater portion of the time of racing. Fields ruled large, and before sport terminated the going was considerably softened by the downpour. The principal item on the card, the Portland Plate, brought out a field of twenty-two, and included many of the speediest horses in training. But for the rain the race would have been a very pretty affair, but not many spectators cared to view the proceedings under the circumstances. Master Willie showed some of his old temper and in company with Earl's Seat practically remained at the post, the winner being found in Sir J. Blundell Maple's French-bred colt, Nabot, whom he purchased for 2,500 guineas after running third to Ballantrae in the Cambridgeshire last year.

THE PORTLAND PLATE—Of 1,035 sovs; winners extra. Red House in (five furlongs and 152 yards).

(Winner trained by W Waugh at Newmarket.)

BETTING: 9 to 2 agst Nabot, 7 to 1 Chacornac, 8 to 1 Out o' Sight, 100 to 12 Earl's Seat, 100 to 9 Grave and Gay, 100 to 6 each Mauvezin Speculator, Skyscraper, Lady Smith colt, Gun Club 25 to 1 any other (o).

Owing to the vagaries of Master Willie the start was delayed twenty-one minutes, and when the barrier was rased he was left at the post, together with Earl's Seat, who stuck her toes into the ground and refused to budge. Chacornac and Nabot were quickest off, but, after going a furlong, Lady Smith colt showed the way to Nabot, Chacornac, Speculator and Bachelor's Fancy, with Jennico, Goldrush, Verus, Out o' Sight, Grave and Gay, and His Lordship in close attendance, till fairly in the line for home. Nabot then took up the running from Chacornac, Speculator, and Lady Smith colt and won easily by a length; a neck separated the second and third. Lady Smith colt, a head away, wast placed fourth, Grave and Gay was fifth, Out o' Sight sixth, His Lordship seventh, Bachelor's Fancy eighth, Fariman ninth, Cossack tenth, and Master Willie last.

THE ALEXANDRA PLATE (handicap)—Of 435 sovs; winner extra. Last mile and a half on the Old Course.

(Winner trained by W. Robinson, at Foxhill.)

BETTING: 11 to 4 agst Courlan, 7 to 2 Alderman, 6 to 1 Patron Saint, 7 to 1 each Whistling Crow, Shellmartin and Roseburn, and 100 to 8 each agst Ancaster and Monitress.

Whistling Crow led from Ancaster, Patron Saint, and Roseburn for a short distance, but on settling down Ancaster showed the way to Patron Saint, Whistling Crow, and Alderman, these being clear of Courlan. The whipper-in was Shellmartin to the straight, where Courlan drew to the front, followed by Whistling Crow and Alderman, and, making the remainder of the running, won in a canter by two lengths; a like distance separated the second and third. Roseburn was fourth, Shellmartin fifth, Ancaster sixth, and Patron Saint last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2min. 32secs.

To-day's racing included the Doncaster Cup which I have already wired to you. I append details:—

THE DONCASTER CUP.—Of 1,000 sovs (a Cup value 200 sovs and the remainder in specie) added to a sweepstakes of 10 sovs each 5 ft; the sweepstakes to be divided between the second and third. Two miles, over the Old Course.

Wavelet's Pride got off in front of Valonza, St. Emilion Blue Grass St. Maclou, and Kroonstad, with Oriole last, but after running half a mile St. Maclou took second place, with St. Emilion third and Valenza next. Half a mile from home St. Maclou dropped right out and Wavelet's Pride won easily by two lengths; a short head divided the second and third, Kroonstad was fourth, Valenza fifth, Oriole sixth, and Blue Grass, who broke down last. Time 3 mins. 35secs.

SURREY vs. SUSSEX.—Played at the Oval on 3rd, 4th and 5th September. Drawn. For the first two days of this match the weather was all that the most enthusiastic cricketer could desire, while the wicket was so good that batsmen had at last a really good chance of showing their best points. Under these circumstances it was a considerable advantage to win the toss, and when Sussex went in first it was generally thought that they would at least keep in for the rest of the day. Nor was expectation disappointed, for not only were the two star batsmen of the team in their best form, but Vine played one of his best innings of the year, and Killick and Brann both played fine cricket. Surrey were trying a new right-hand medium-paced bowler named Rushby, but on such a day no bowler however good, had much hope of distinguishing himself and Rushby's chances of coming to the front could not be estimated with any approach to accuracy. He met with no success, but on the other hand he did no worse than other bowlers. In the hour and a-half before luncheon, which, as in the Leicestershire match, was taken at half-past one, Vine and Fry sampled most of the bowling that Dowson (captain in the absence of Walker) had at his command and scored 95 runs, Fry's share of them being 58 and Vine's 37. Except that the rate of scoring was somewhat quicker the same state of affairs continued for some time after lunch, neither batsman ever being at a loss, and both making some delightful hits. Another hundred seemed in store for Fry, when he slightly misjudged a ball from Lees, and was caught at slip for 81 out of 153 made in two hours and a half. Some of his drives were very effective, and one of them nearly killed Vine, who could not get out of the way of it. With Killick as a partner, Vine was missed when his score was 86, but it was not until he had made 104 in three hours and five minutes that he was disposed of; he and Killick had put on 56 for the second wicket at about the rate of a run a minute. Ranjitsinhji arrived at the fall of Killick's wicket at 209, and at 220 he was joined by Brann, who remained with him until the end of the day, the unfinished partnership adding 112 runs to the total in an hour and forty minutes. Ranjitsinhji was absolutely in his best form, and the eight or nine thousand spectators had a delightful time while he was at the wickets. Brann also played as well as ever. The total at the end of the day was 332 for three wickets, Ranjitsinhji 66 and Brann 49. On Friday there were as many spectators as on the previous day and they had an opportunity of seeing Ranjitsinhji play one of his most brilliant innings. Everything that he did was graceful, and he timed the ball with perfect accuracy; he seemed to do just as he liked with the bowling. Meanwhile his partners for the most part played excellent and steady cricket, wisely contenting themselves with keeping up their end and allowing him to do most of the scoring. He and Brann put on 122 for the fourth wicket in an hour and three-quarters, and in about the same time Newham helped him to increase the total by 141. At lunch time, when it was thought that he would declare the innings closed he had made 160, with the total at 483 for five wickets. He decided not to declare, possibly reasoning that as Sussex could not go up a place in the championship table if they won, it was better to make absolutely certain of a draw, and possibly thinking that he might as well bring his own score up to 200 while he had the chance. Be this as it may he continued his innings until he had made his second hundred. He was at the wickets for just over four hours and a half and his hits included eighteen fours.

With the total at 600 and the time a quarter to four the innings was at last closed. Surrey had been at the wickets for an hour and a quarter when owing to the bad light play was abandoned for the day with the score at 96 for the loss of one wicket. Dowson and Bush made 50 in half an hour and were not parted till the score was 59. Captain Bush was not out 44 and Hayward not out 11. Despite the heavy storm on Friday night it was found possible to resume the game at about one o'clock on a very slow but not very difficult wicket. Both Hayard and Captain Bush played very well indeed, and it was not until the total was 161 that the latter was caught at the wicket for a most useful and well-played 78, which had taken him two hours and ten minutes to put together. Hayward followed him when 22 more runs were made after playing an exceedingly good innings. Holland and Hayes made another fine stand, and it was evident that the the game must end in a draw. Later in the day Lees and McDonell both played good cricket, and altogether the Surrey men greatly distinguished themselves.

LANCASHIRE AND YORKSHIRE vs. REST OF ENGLAND.—Played at Hastings on 7th, 8th, and 9th September. Lancashire and Yorkshire won by 87 runs. Strong teams had been got together for this match by Mr. William Carless, the honorary secretary of the Week, but of those originally chosen C. B. Fry cried off on Sunday night, while Jessop Spooner and Findlay were unable to play. Lord Hawke, for the ninth time in succession, won the toss, and thus did excellent service to his side, who, on a fairly easy wicket, ran up the useful score of 255, and got rid of Hayward before stumps were drawn, with the Rest of England score at 27. The best stand of the day was made by Tyldesley and Denton, who put on 100 runs together in the course of an hour and a quarter, by most attractive cricket. Rhodes made 31 in three-quarters of an hour, and then remained at the wickets for twenty minutes more without increasing his total. The last wicket put on 32. On Tuesday it was soon found that Rhodes and Haigh knew how to make use of the wicket, but Beldam kept up his end for an hour and ten minutes for a useful 18, and Ranjitsinhji played superb cricket for two hours and twenty minutes. During his partnership with Dr. Grace, who played exceedingly well, 50 runs were scored in half-an-hour, of which he claimed 28. Despite the fine play of these three men, the Rest had a balance of 82 against them, and before stumps were drawn this was increased by another hundred runs, while only three men of the combined counties were out. Tyldesley and Dnton again played a very fine game, and while they were together for an hour and five minutes put on 89 runs. Tydesley was then caught at the wicket for a splendid 51. In the night there was a gale and heavy rain. All the tents were blown down and much damage was done to the wicket. The rain left off in the morning and the wicket dried in. time for the game to be resumed at ten minutes past two o'clock, when the counties continued their innings until they had added 25 runs to the total. Denton carried his bat for a beautiful innings of 53. The Rest of England, who had much the worst of the wicket in their first innings, now had hardly any chance of saving the match against such bowlers as Rhodes and Haigh, and although Hayward, Vine and J. Gunn all played a great game, the result was almost a foregone conclusion.

THE N. C. U. CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The final of the N. C. U. Championships for the present season were decided at the Crystal Palace on Saturday and the racing was keenly appreciated by the spectators, who numbered over 5500. As most of our finest amateur riders were competing in the three events, viz., the Mile (Single) Championship, the Two-mile (Tandem) Championship, both London Centre, and the Fifty-mile (Single) Championship, open to all, it was not surprising that considerable interest was taken in the proceedings, but few were prepared for the downfall of the previous champions. The fine form in which A. S. Ingram has been in lately was again seen in the mile race, when the holder of the 1897 event beat A. L. Reed, who has held the championship for the last three years, after a splendid race. Again, in the tandem event, Ingram and Janson got back their title by beating A. L. Reed and H. D. Buck, the race being a grand one, and as in the mile the win was most popular. It was quite natural that the meeting of Leon Meredith (the holder) and G. A. Olley in the Fifty-mile Open Championship was a great attraction, but there were others in the race, and a dark horse was found in W. J. Pett, of the Southern C. C., who won easily from Wills. It was unfortunate that both G. A. Olley and L Meredith did not complete the journey, as the finish would have been most keen. As regards the arrangements, everything was perfect, and the Hon. Secretary, W. Mitson, deserves great credit for his work, specially in keeping the enclosure clear.

The chief officials were: Judge, James Blair; umpires, A. J. Wakeford, H. W. Ansell T. G. Matthews, V. Waterhouse, J W. Bidley, W. Phillips, A. Vickers, and H. B. Scott; pacemaking marshal, J. C. P. Tacagni; lap scoring marshal, S. R. Noble; timekeeper, G. Pemhroke Coleman; starter, Robert Cook; steward, H. Hollands. Results:

R Janson, Polytechnic	3

At the bell Ingram led with Janson second and Reed third. Half-way round the last lap Ingram sprinted with Reed following, and a grand race to the line resulted in a win for Ingram by a few inches, Janson being half-a-length behind. Time—2mins. 42⅘secs.

TWO-MILE AMATEUR TANDEM CHAMPIONSHIP (LONDON CENTRE).

PREVIOUS WINNERS.

1898 E J Callaghan and F Burnard	1901 H S Chambers and F G Crowley
1899 A S Ingram and E Janson	1902 A L Reed and H D Buck
1900 A S Ingram and R Janson

Time standard, 4mins. 5secs. Time—limit, 6mins.

Heat 1. A. L. Reed, Polytechnic, and H. D Buck, Anerley (holders) 1, G. H. and W. C. Le Grys, Silverdale, 2; H. C. Rouffler and G. Perkins, Shaftebury, 3; A. Cordery and W. East, Paddington, 4. The Le Grys started away, but for four laps Cordery and East led the string. At the bell the brothers Le Grys were again in front and led up to the final straight where the holders challenged and eventually won on the line by a few inches; a length between second and third. Time—4mins. 4⅘secs. The first and second teams were inside standard time. Heat 2: A. S. Ingram and R. Janson, Polytechnic, 1; T W. Hobcraft, Anerley and Borough Polytechnic, and G. Cooper, Borough Polytechnic, 2; C. C. R. Down, Queen's, and A. Kelly, Polytechnic, 3. The latter pair led at the bell, but Ingram and Janson soon went in front and won by two lengths; four lengths between second and third. Time, 4mins. 16⅘sec. Heat 3: G. L. and O. J. Hopkins, Anerley, 1; J. Draper and F. G. Elliott, 2; C. Cole and F. A. Nasler, Polytechnic, retired. The brothers Hopkins secured the inside position at the bell, and won by a length. Time, 4mins. 5⅘sec. Heat 4: A. J. Cherry and G. J. Calder, Polytechnic, 1; R. J. Rattray and C. Harding, Havelock and Putney, 2; C T. Woodman and E. McDonough, Putney, 3; A. J. Tickner and A. Draper, Putney, 4. The teams each shared the pacing up to the last lap, where Cherry and Calder got away and won by a length and a half; half a length between second and third. Time, 4mins. 16⅘sec.

FINAL HEAT.

A. S. Ingram and R. Janson, Polytechnic	1
A. L. Reed, Polytechnic and H. D. Buck, Anerley (holders)	2
G. L. and O. J Hopkins, Anerley	3
A. J. Cherry and G J. Calder, Polytechnic	4

Reed and Buck were first away, and led for a lap, when Ingram and Janson made the pace for the next circuit. The Brothers Hopkins then took a turn, and at the end of the fourth lap Cherry and Calder led. At the bell Ingram and Janson went in front, and in spite of Reed and Buck's effort won by two lengths; a length and a half between second and third. Time—4mins. 42-secs.

NATIONAL CYCLISTS UNION FIFTY MILE CHAMPIONSHIP.

PREVIOUS WINNERS.

1895 C G Wridgway	1899 G F Payne
1896 W H Bardsley	1900 H Payne
1897 A J Cherry	1901 W B Dudden
1898 Harry Chinn	1902 Leon Meredith

Time standard, 1hr 45min.

The starters were Leon Meredith (holder), Paddington; G. A. Olley, Anerley and Polytechnic; A. B. Wills, Putney; F. T. Burgess Paddington; E. S. Montgomery, East Surrey; H. J. Harding, Polytechnic; C. Cole Polytechnic; H. Harvey, addington; W. J. Pett, Southern; J. E. Hobbs, unattached; W. W. Saunders, Bedford C. and A. C. At the start Cole's tyre gave out and he lost half a lap, Wills, Harding, and Pett leading at the first circuit, when the pacing teams came on. For two miles Pett was in front of Montgomery and Meredith, Harvey and Hobbs being tailed off, while Cole was lapped. The next three miles saw Wills, Pett, and Meredith leading the field, Meredith being without pacing and at five miles Montgomery was dropped. From this point to fourteen miles Pett kept the lead, with Meredith, Olley, and Wills in close attendance. At fifteen miles Meredith had his pacers on and took the lead, Pett, Olley, and Wills, in the order named, being close up. Meredith kept the lead up to twenty-one miles and covered the eighteenth mile in 1min 58⅘sec when the pace seemed too hot for Olley, who got off and lost nearly two miles before he remounted. In the twenty-second mile Pett made an effort and tried to get away, as Meredith was without pacing, but the holder hung on, with Wills close up. At the end of this hour Wills led with a distance of twenty-seven miles 283 yards, Pett being second and Meredith third. This trio kept together until the thirtieth mile, when Meredith punctured, and although quickly on a fresh mount broke a pedal and retired for good after covering thirty-one and a half miles. This robbed the race of considerable interest and left Pett and Wills to fight out the issue. With the exception of Wills getting in front at forty miles, Pett led to the finish, and although this couple were close together at the Bell, Pett sprinted away and scored a popular win by over a hundred yards, Wills slowing up at the finish. The final placing and times were:

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

DAPURE Manor, formerly the seat of Governors of Bombay, but now known best to our good friend Thomas Atkins as the spring from which wells forth the most excellent beer which rejoices his honest soul, is a fairly distant meet (albeit on the trunk road) for all saving residents of Kirkee, and bearing in mind that one has, these days to live at high pressure every hour of the day, the respectable number that assembled there on the 20th September testified to a confidence in both the sporting nature of the country and the aptitude for showing sport on the part of the master, not forgetting implicit confidence in the good hounds that have shown such wonderful hunting powers (often under most disadvantageous circumstances) throughout the past brilliant season Phomme propose, but items will occur at times to upset the apple cart. On this occasion it was a "spyt" on the river which rendered any attempt at fording futile. It had been I hear the intention to hunt some very sporting country on the further side, but yeilding to the inevitable the Master, after a brief respite to stragglers who might have found rising at 5 o'clock difficult work after getting to bed at 2 (which appears to be about the average night's rest of "fashionable Poona"), proceeded to draw the home coverts of the Manor. These, generally I believe a sure harbourage, proved on this occasion unavailing and after half an hour or more's careful hunting the Master had to call hounds out of covert and move on. The Pauna river, swollen high by recent rain, obviously refused right of way to the further shore, so it was a case of Hobson's choice as to locality and Colonel Sheringham set hounds to business on reaching a likely nullah further down the Nasik road and hounds soon testified to the presence of their friend the enemy. But proof of the necessity for bringing hunting to an all too soon end in the hunting country became manifest, for there were crop lands on all sides and no true sportsman in any country ignores the rights of the cultivator (and none I am assured are more solicitous for their feelings than Colonel Sheringham). The jack evidently was making his point for the Two Sisters—the well known landmarks that have offered safe sanctuary to many a jack—but he was headed off by some cattle and a herdsman and changed his course in the direction of Kalos. He was, however, none too stout a jack and after about a quarter of an hour of hunting (which would have been more interesting had there happily been less crops) he was tumbled over in some high grass near a well, the brush being presented to Miss Low, who went well throughout on her very useful little pony. A move was next made to a nullah in the direction of the Lohegum country track and hounds en route feathered with animation. One of the native whips gave his assurance that the varmint responsible for these expressions of joy on the part of hounds was a jungle cat, but on the vehement assurance of the landlord that his palet of jowari held the Simon Pure the Master, yielding to the farmer's solicitations "proceeded to, verify his references" when hounds substantiated the whip's declaration by polishing off a wild cat of gigantic proportions. The Aryan Pussy seems indeed to have been in force, as on reaching the originally intended nullah another feline tempted them to illegitimate indiscretions when an opportune new holloa from the far side of the ravine at once recalled them to a sense of stern duty and answering without a second's hesitation to the Master's horn they were soon on the line of a jack making a bee line for Dighi. After a smart sprint he just saved his brush from the leading hound into some gigantic jowari. Through this a couple or two of hounds hustled him and away on the far side. Meanwhile the body of the pack had got on to a second jack which crossed the hunting line and the skill of the first whip was called into play in getting them on to the original jack, while the staunch few couple had driven ahead at a rare pace. Across the Nasik road they went but the sun was by this time getting unpleasantly hot, and wisely solicitous for their welfare the Master gave orders to whip them off after a very sporting little run of, I believe as near twenty minutes as doesn't matter. A capital morning's sport it seems to have been with actually calling for a supply of red letters to chronicle it. The season, alas is growing to a close. Only a couple more meets are advertized though it is just possible that yielding to public entreaty Colonel Sheringham may manage an extra odd one or two. Any sportsman requiring drafts need certainly from all I gather travel further than Poona to find rare working hounds, wonderfully biddable and the picture of health and condition, everyone tells me.

That savoury spot the slaughter yard was the place of tryst on Thursday, but despite the sad fact that it was the penultimate meet of the seasen proper a very select field only accepted the invitation, but those hard bitten souls who did certainly had no cause to regret their energy. The Master had a large pack out, over 25 couple, and most of them the right sort, and as the morning promised to be sultry no law was given and a move was at once made to the Stony heights to the right of Kandwa village, the plateau of which often, I believe holds a jack loafing back to his mountain fastness after regaling on the delicacies of the slaughter yard. Hounds soon owned to an evidently somewhat stale line and worked it out with their characteristic patience and determination till getting on better terms with it they ran gaily enough and hunting with irresistible persistency though a series of hillocks, dips and crop land they ran their jack to ground in an earth on the other side of a hamlet called Bibby. Lacking a hunt terrier one dashing little hound took this responsible duty on himself and taking no denial hauled the jack out by the scuff when he was demolished without further ado. After this some rugged country behind Kandwa was drawn when just as hounds hit off a line a tantalizing little pussie aspired to red currant honours and tempted hounds for the nonce from the path of rectitude. They are, however, I hear on every side as handy and biddable as the proverbial Lady's maid and a temporary indiscretion is rectified with the least possible delay. Taken back to the original legitimate line hounds promptly work up the thread of the narrative and worked it out with wonderful cleverness for scent by now owing to the sultriness was none of the best. At a nice hunting pace they went and a brace of keen eyes viewed the varmint in some pass near the lake side from which hounds running with a great drive soon compelled him to make for the open and steering between the two bits of water he laid his line past Katruj and over the old high road to Satara. Up the hill sides and through a lot of standing crops hounds drove him without mercy, their work being I am told a treat to witness and such as none but a phenomenal jack to stand up against. A good jack he evidently was and a whopper, but Colonel Sherringham and his loyal ones take a lot of beating when they mean business and business they meant on this occasion and running from scent to view hounds put matters beyond any further doubt and rolled this good jack over on the edge of small jawari field. Hounds were so death keen with the lust for blood that it were all the Master could do to save the customary trophies, presenting the brush to that good sportsman and hearty supporter of the Hunt Colonel Vyvyan of the Buffs and it will I am sure be a pleasant reminiscence of one of the best of the many fine runs he has engaged with this pack. The Mask was presented to Mrs. Beatty than whom (on her well-known little bay) none I hear went better throughout the run. Forty-five minutes of a real hunting run it was over a somewhat rough and timber country and the way hounds worked afforded the utmost pleasure to all who knew enough to appreciate it. The lazy lie-a-beds certainly seem to have missed a right good run.

POONA OPEN TOURNAMENT.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

POONA, 23rd September 1903.

AS usual the Junior Polo Tournament, held so soon before the open fixture, affected the latter and after all only four teams entered and of these the Baroda team was making its debut and the Remnants had not played much together prior to the match. The only two pucca teams therefore who were expected to have a say in the issue were the 4th Hussars and the 3rd Bombay Cavalry. I think the Poona executive must be now perfectly convinced of the undesirability of holding the Junior and Senior Tournaments so close to one another.

The 4th Hussars disposed of Baroda so easily that the public was disposed to believe they would win the tournament although it was confidently expected that the 3rd Bombay Cavalry would stretch them. The Remnants just managed to get beaten by the 3rd Bombay Cavalry. When therefore the Hussars and Cavalry met in the final on Thursday the former were the favourites, but though they played a great game and galloped all they knew were not able to avert defeat, the 3rd Bombay Cavalry scoring with great success and winning the tournament with a good margin to spare. The difference in the score must not, however, be taken as an indication of the difference in the merits of play as the Hussars played brilliantly at times and had the hardest luck in not scoring. The 3rd Bombay Cavalry may well be proud of their success in Polo this year and last, and their appearance in the Bombay Tournament next month may be crowned with yet another victory

FIRST MATCH.

The young Baroda team were somewhat at a discount and it was soon evident that in their practice matches they had never had a well drilled opposition to knock up against and give them the necessary experience Again the players did not stick to their places, and as a consequence the combination of the 4th Hussars was too much for them. The Prince of Baroda played a fine galloping game, he was well mounted and worked very hard, but was not receiving the support he should have from the members of his team.

The Hussars showed fine form, and as all contributed to the victory, it would be invidious to signal any particular play out for special mention. The score was 16 goals and 4 subsidiaries to 2 goals and 2 subsidiaries.

4TH HUSSARS.	BARODA STATE.
1 Mr Neilson	1 B N Gaikewad
2 Col Kincaid Smith	2 Prince Fatesingharo
3 Mr Bell	3 Sirdar Taj Mahomed
Back: Major Hoare	Back: Janardon Sadashiv

Umpires · Capt Hewlett and Capt Mathew Lannowe.

1st Chukker.—Baroda was first in possession, but Kincaid Smith deprived them and scored a subsidiary. A feeble attempt to force play by Baroda was followed by Bell and Hoare, each scoring a goal and a subsidiary, and two more goals were notched before the chukker closed the Baroda team being outplayed at all points. Score: 4th Hussars 4 goals and 2 subs, Baroda nil. Time—7mins. 14secs.

2nd Chukker—The Hussars took charge of affairs at once Bell playing dashingly added two more goals to the score at once, and later the score was still further enhanced by the Hussars, but a little variety was lent to the game by the Baroda team getting a goal off a good run down by Prince Fatesingharo. Score: 4th Hussars 8 goals and 2 subs, Baroda 1 goal. Time—12mins. 14secs.

3rd Chukker.—The Prince put in two or three good runs, then the Hussars took up the running again and scored two more goals and a subsidiary. Kincaid Smith and Bell being responsible for the scoring. Score: 4th Hussars 10 goals and 3 subs, Baroda 1 goal Time—17mins. 18secs.

4th Chukker.—A combined run down by the Hussars was checked and the Prince and Janardan combining well scored a goal. A piece of pretty play between Hoare and Neilson resulted in a goal and later another was added. Score: 4th Hussars 12 goals and 3 subs., Baroda 2 goals 1 sub. Time—22mins. 18secs.

5th Chukker—Up and down play barren of results. Score: Same as above. Time—29mins. 43secs.

6th Chukker.—The Baroda team played up a bit, the Prince galloping hard and hitting well scored a subsidiary to which Hoare replied with a goal. Score: Hussars 13 goals and 4 subs, Baroda 2 goals and 2 subs. Time—35mins.

7th Chukker.—The Hussars had the best of matters and scored three goals, while their opponents could not even stop them. Score: 4th Hussars 16 goals and 4 subs. to 2 goals and 2 subs. Time—40mins

SECOND MATCH.

The Remnants met the 3rd Bombay Cavalry on the same Tuesday afternoon and the spectators were treated to a really interesting game which at the end of the sixth chukker was a chance of a draw, but in the last the Remnants were quite outplayed. Considering they were a scratch lot and were opposed to a well drilled team like the 3rd Bombay Cavalry the Remnants did very well indeed and it was most sporting of them to enter. Captain Davie and Geddes played exceeding well for the losers, while for the victors Alexander and Wogan-Brown, who despite having recently had fever, put up fine performances. The score was 3rd Bombay Cavalry 4 goals and 3 subs, Remnants 3 goals.

3RD BOMBAY CAVALRY.	THE REMNANTS.
1 Mr Denning	1 Mr Grenfall, 60th Rifles
2 Capt Wogan Browne	2 Mr Barrett, 15th Hussars
3 Capt Alexander	3 Major Geddes, R H A
Back: Daffadar Aliyar	Back: Capt Davie, R Scots

1st Chukker.—Play opened fast, the Remnants getting possession, but being deprived the Cavalry gave Davie trouble and after a lot of up and down play Alexander scored a goal. Score: Cavalry 1 goal: Remnants nil. Time—3mins 37secs.

2nd Chukker.—The Cavalry were most aggressive, but Davie cleared well and a free hit for crossing gave him an opening from which he would have scored but for the Cavalry back. Alexander then got on and scored a minor point. Score: Cavalry 1 goal 1 sub, Remnants nil. Time—15mins 19secs.

3rd Chukker.—Running the ball down Browne form a pass saving a subsidiary and Alexander improved on this by notching a goal. The Cavalry made a warm and continued attack on the Remnants' goal, but were kept out successfully. Score: Cavalry 2 goals and 2 subs, Remnants nil. Time—21min. 2secs.

4th Chukker.—The Remnants opened well and Grenfell scored their first point and, playing well, they prevented the Cavalry from making more than a subsidiary. Score: Cavalry 2 goals 3 subs. Remnants 1 goal. Time—26mins. 22secs.

5th Chukker—This was a fairly even bout and each side scored a goal, Alexander and Grenfell being the successful betters. Score: Cavalry 3 goals and 3 subs, Remnants 2 goals. Time—32mins 12secs.

6th Chukker.—The Remnants opened with great dash, scored a goal and kept their opponents hemmed in. So well did they play that the chance of their winning seemed very rosy, but only one goal was notched. Score: Cavalry 3 goals 3 subs. Remnants 3 goals. Time—37mins 17secs.

7th Chukker.—Fast play was at once initiated and after a fine run down Wogan-Browne placed the ball nicely for Aliyar, who patted it through just before the bell sounded. Score: Cavalry 4 goals and 3 subs to Remnants 3 goals.

Umpires.—Captains Hewlett and Lannowe Mathew.

THE FINALS.

A splendid contest was witnessed and the 3rd Bombay Cavalry certainly deserved their victory Their combination was excellent, and being as well mounted as the 4th Hussars, they were able to get the best of matters. The Hussars were somewhat unsuccessful when before goal, but this was due to the fine defence of the Cavalry back For the winners Captains Wogan Browne and Alexander rendered yeoman service and for the losers Colonel Kincaid Smith and Major Hoare were most conspicuous. Throughout a galloping game was witnessed and the interest of the spectators was well maintained from first to last.

3RD BOMBAY CAVALRY.	4TH HUSSARS.
1 Mr Denning	1 Mr Neilson
2 Capt Wogan-Browne	2 Col Kincaid Smith
3 Capt Alexander	3 Mr Bell
Back: Daffadar Alyarkhan	Back: Major Hoare

1st Chukker—The Hussars scooped the ball and got well into the Cavalry keep, but the pressure was relieved and after one or two good runs the Cavalry opened the score with a goal shot by Wogan-Browne, who later notched a subsidiary. Score: 3rd Bombay Cavalry 1 goal 1 sub, 4th Hussars nil. Time—6mins 15secs.

2nd Chukker.—Soon after the restart a foul was given and Bell and Kincaid Smith combining scored a subsidiary Later Hoare by a persistent attack on the opposite goal at last beat the back and scored a subsidiary. The round was all in favour of the Hussars. Score: 3rd Bombay Cavalry 1 goal 1 sub, 4th Hussars 1 goal 1 sub. Time—12mins 15secs

3rd Chukker.—The Hussars came up full of running and almost immediately scored a minor point through Neilson. They kept up the advantage but could not score and Denning getting on notched a goal for the Cavalry. What should have been another goal for the latter was only a subsidiary dribbled in by the Cavlry back. Score: 3rd Bombay Cavalry 2 goals 2 subs, 4th Hussars 1 goal 2 subs. Time—17mins. 15secs.

4th Chukker.—This was a fast and somewhat even period, the Cavalry opening with a goal hit by Denning, then the Hussars became aggressive and saved a subsidiary and yet another before the chukker closed, in the later stage the Hussars had the best of matters, but failed before goal Score: 3rd Bombay Cavalry 3 goals and 2 subs, 4th Hussars 1 goal 4 subs. Time—22mins 59secs.

5th Chukker.—Though the Hussars were most pressing, but again their inability to crown their efforts before goal was manifest. The Cavalry were not able to break away, but a foul against the Hussars brought relief and Wogan-Browne turned it to effect by scoring a goal and the same player a moment later scored another goal. Score: 3rd Bombay Cavalry 5 goals and 2 subs, 4th Hussars 1 goal and 4 subs. Time—29mins 22secs.

6th Chukker.—The Hussars broke away, but were pulled up, but Hoare returned and shot the ball between the flags and after some hot exchanges Bell put up yet another goal for the Hussars, who certainly had the upper hand in this round. The excitement amongst the spectators was intense. Score: 3rd Bombay Cavalry 5 goals and 2 subs, 4th Hussars 3 goals and 4 subs Time—34mins. 26secs.

7th Chukker.—A fast game was at once initiated and after two quick runs up and down the field a melee occurred before the Hussars' goal and Wogan-Browne pulled the ball out and scored a goal. Short runs by either side was followed by a fine combined run. Browne and Alexander passing smartly and scoring a goal all in favour of the Cavalry. Score: 3rd Bombay Cavalry 7 goals 2 subs, 4th Hussars 3 goals 4 subs. Time—40mins

After the game General Sir Robert Low, who retires this week, presented the Cup to the winners and in doing so complemented them on their victory and the 4th Hussars on the good fight they made against their opponents.

QUETTA TOURNAMENT.

SEMI-FINALS.

WEST YORKSHIRES vs. STATION.—These teams met on the 16th ultimo and a good game resulted in a win for the Station by 8 goals and 3 subsidiaries to 5 goals and 2 subsidiaries. The Station had the best of the first two chukkers and scored two goals 2 subsidiaries to their opponents' 1 goal. In the third chukker the Station put on 3 goals, but Stephen for the Yorkshires played hard and added 2 goals and 1 subsidiary. The Yorkshires were unable to score till the 6th chukker when 2 goals and 1 subsidiary were put on, the Station score at this point was 8 goals and 3 subsidiaries. In the last chukker neither side scored, the Station winning as stated. In the winners' team Price and Lash were best while Marten was most conspicuous for the Yorkshires. Teams:—

WEST YORKSHIRES.	STATION TEAM.

9TH LANCERS vs. STATION.—The final game in the Tournament was played between these teams on the 19th ultimo. As was expected the Lancers had an easy win. The Station team worked hard and did good service, but were outplayed by their opponents. Both teams lost some good opportunities, but there was plenty of galloping and some fine exhibition of hitting. For the Lancers Jackson and Willoughby were most conspicuous and Price in the Station team. The Lancers scored 13 goals 11 subsidiaries and the Station 1 goal 2 subsidiaries. Teams :—

Saturday, 26th September, 1903.

The nor'-wester of last Friday afternoon rather upset the programme of this regatta as it was found impracticable to row off any of the heats in the Dinghy Race which was thus left over for this afternoon and caused the abandonment of the Scratch Fours. One race, the Senior Double Sculls, was decided late on Friday evening, Messrs. Green and Hossack winning in a paddle. The Senior Fours was not a pretty race to watch, but those who had seen the rather desultory preparation of both crews considered that they might see a tight race: this they did, Green's crew winning by a length and a quarter, though it is probable they could have won by more, for they finished much fresher than their opponents. The losers made a very plucky attempt to get level at the bend, which was a slight error in judgment, for if it had been timed just a little later when they had got fairly into the straight the above verdict might have been reduced. As it was the effort subsided about thirty yards from the winning post and the crew went by the pontoon in very ragged style. The half mile tub race was not devoid of incident, for in the first attempt at a start Tassie, who stroked the boat which eventually won, broke his oar and when at length another oar had been provided those on the bank saw some wonderful feats performed therewith including the grand culminating crab as they passed the judge.

Carter might have won the Dinghy Race, but decided to scratch in the final heat after his race in the Tub pairs, and Tassie thus won a double event, as did Messrs Green and Hales, whose visits to the prize table were accompained by the usual friendly tumult. Details:—

Green's crew had the best of the start and putting them in hard drew a head. Half way down the big reach they struck a bit of rough water, but were soon out of it; nearing the bend they were a length to the good, but rounding it Cochran's crew put on a splendid spurt and were coming up fast, but they died away at the white house and Green's crew keeping it lively came in winners by a length and a quarter. CRICKET AT POONA.

PRESIDENCY vs. PARSEES.—The return match between the Presidency and the Parsees was played at Poona on the 21st, 22nd and 23rd instant. The Presidency team were weak as batsmen, while their opponents had their strongest eleven out, so it is not surprising that the Parsees again won. The Presidency went to the wickets first, but were soon disposed of for the poor total of 97. Cheetham 30, Campion 29 and Smith (14) being the only men to get into double figures. Kapadia took 6 wickets for 27 runs. The Parsees then went in and when play closed for the day had made 184 for four wickets. Meherhomjee played a good innings and had hard luck in just failing to complete the century. On the next day the Parsees put up 325 before they were all out, Daruwalla who was not out 58 overnight carried his total to 113, playing a great innings throughout. Pavri added a useful 45. The Presidency did better in their second venture and at the end of the day had made 192, Cheetham 69 and Faviell (48 not out) being the chief scorers. The innings closed for 222 the next day, Faviell not out 66. Score:—

GOVERNMENT HOUSE vs. MR. PATELL'S XI.—On the 24th ultimo these teams met at Ganeshkhind in a single innings match which resulted in a win for the Government House side by 6 runs. Mr. Macdonough bowled excellently for the winners, his analysis showing eight wickets for 64 runs; for the Parsees Talpade took 6 wickets for 62 runs. The batting was fairly good though nothing of individual brilliance was put up, Messrs

Mead and Wilson made 31 each for Government House and Commissariat made 36 for the losers. Score:—

AN OLLA PODRIDA.

The English cricket season proper is over. It has been a much worse season than last as regards the weather, and even the most experienced batsmen with but one or two notable exceptions have found rungetting difficult in nine out of ten innings. Of new cricketers discovered there have been few, if any, the most prominent being H. Strudwick, the Surrey wicket-keeper, K. L. Hutchings, a young schoolmaster, who played for Kent in August, Langford, a right hand medium pace bowler for Hampshire. Of known ones who excelled themselves or came on a lot, E. G. Hayes, Surrey, S. F. Barnes, Lancashire, J. Gunn, Notts, W. Rhodes as an all-rounder Yorkshire, are the best known. Of those who have fallen off no mention need be made since with some it is a case of age, with others but a temporary divergence from the path of consistent excellence C. B. Fry appears to make batting more and more of a science each year, but he too is fallible witness 0 and 4 b Hirst both times in his second Yorkshire match, 1 and 1 in the second Worcestershire match b Wilson both times [0 and 174 in the first Worcestershire match], while he never gets runs easily against Essex, though he may make them in some number against Lancashire, who up to July looked like making a big bid for championship honours. Indeed so good are they in the field considering they now possess but one bowler, Walter Mead, that only one century has been hit against them and that by T. S. Fishwick of Warwickshire not a faultless effort. Every other county has had from 3 to 16 or 18 hundreds hit off their attack.

But to the youngsters. Strudwick needs no description since he was first choice for Australia and is well worth that honour.

K. L. Hutchings is an old Tonbridgian who might before long play for England. Gentlemen honours await him early. He is of the free type that hits the ball every time. Possesses some perfect racquet shots to the on-side and is a good field in addition to his usefulness with the willow. Has just gone to America in the Oceanic with the Kent team for a brief tour, and judging from the gale at the moment of writing will get a pretty good shaking up off the south and sou' west of Ireland.

Langford despite some excellent analyses at the start, will not, I opine, set fire to the Solent. Novelty has probably helped him to a good few wickets, for he is at best but a good length trundler who occasionally unconsciously "swims" the ball a bit. A bowler must be seen on some genuine plumb wickets before he can be judged and his style of bowling only looks like playing men in on the true wickets we all hope to see again in England some-day. For, all said and done, cricket must have fine weather even if tremendous scoring follows The monotonous drip, drip, drip from a leaden sky, or a damp day and a muddy ground is aught but cheering for players of a game that necessitates clean white flannel kit and depends for its very existence on brightness. Even if not actually raining nobody will come to see the chance of a few hours' cricket to be driven away. Now and then the rain and sun together bring about a sporting finish, but cricketers and crowd alike prefer a full day's leather hunting—say what the croakers will about tall scoring. And that is why everyone longs for a fine summer again, but as England is in for ten years wet and we've only had two so far it is advisable for good Anglo-Indians contemplating furlough, etc, to wait until the spring of 1912.

By which time quite likely there will be a lot of difference in the status of amateur and professional cricketer, seeing that to-day so many of the latter are the social superiors of some of the former. Not that the great body of the admittedly paid element cares one jot which gate it goes out of on to the field of play, but here and there are cases that owing to the behaviour and mannerism of the individual himself are anything but popular. As to amateurs' expenses I cannot see what that has to do with any but the payer and payee. If the Hastings executive choose to offer a given amateur first-class hotel exes, first-class return fare from Hastings to the amateur's home in the North er to where he is going in Scotland for his holidays although prior to the Hastings match said amateur may have been playing at Brighton, what does it matter to any one but said amateur? The writer has known of an amateur whose acquintance with a first-class railway carriage or hotel has only been from the station platform, or top of a penny bumper, but who nevertheless played as an amateur and "drew the hard" right enough The executive if it considers such a man good enough will play him whether as a ten guid professional or first-class amateur with first-class exes throughout and hang the exes, and why should it not? Every individual or body can spend its shekels as it likes surely. It is common knowledge that the poor amateurs gets more out of festival cricket than the pro. does and the writer could give a case of a professional at a festival who actually paid out of his own pocket after receiving the usual match fee before clearing exes. This ought not to be, but is so.

There may very easily be a thorough-going into the paid mateur question this winter—may be, for it is not certain but that wiser counsels as to the advisability of letting sleeping dogs lie will prevail. If the question was gone into in the interests of purity of amateur sport there might be unpleasantness in more quarters than one.

THE MADRAS RUGBY FOOTBALL TOURNAMENT.

MADRAS vs. BOMBAY.—This tournament commenced on the 23rd ultimo, when the Madras and Bombay Gymkhanas met to decide which is to meet the Welsh Regiment, the holders of the Cup in the finals. The tournament was to have commenced on the 22nd, but the seductive pleasurers of Calcutta were evidently too much for four members of the team who went to play in the tournament there, with the result that they did not return until Tuesday evening, the 22nd instant, too late to play in the match announced for that evening, and the tournament had to be postponed for a day, which as things turn out make it very rough for Bombay. If they win the lie with Madras they will have to play the finals on Friday evening, as they are due to leave Madras on Saturday. This as things have turned out will force them to play matches on three consecutive days; because the first tie has resulted in a pointless draw and the two teams have to fight their battle again to-morrow.

The weather was c ear, but heavy rain during the night turned parts of the Island ground into a morass, from which the water was being baled in buckets before the game commenced. The result, therefore 4 what with a greasy ball and a slushy field was that the game degenerated almost from the outset into a rough-and-tumble scramble, most of the work being done in the "scrums" and by dribbling. When it came to opening out and passing and running the greasy ball and treacherous ground frustrated anything like fast play. A detailed description of the game under these conditions is out of the question. There was nothing noteworthy done, and though extra time was played not a point of any sort was scored. Bombay did the pressing for the major portion of the first half twice forcing the home team to touch down in self-defence. When Madras did get away they did so to some purpose and put in a very strong attack. Worke passed to Haughton, who crossed the Bombay line; but the try was disallowed as the ball reached Haughton from a pass forward.

In the second half Madras took a hand at being aggressive and scrimmaging and dribbling down the left forced Bombay into their own "twenty-five" whence by some smart kicking and clever passing they frequently managed to transfer the ball. Two muffed bits of passing in front of the Bombay goal spoilt two very possible chances that the home team had of scoring, and when Simpson and Worke tried by short rushes to get through on to the goal line they were pulled down. Before time was called Barret dribbled the ball over the Bombay line, but it was kicked beyond the ropes.

Nothing was scored during the extra time, and as I have already said the match ended in a draw without a single point being scored. Appended are the names:—

SEMI-FINALS

QUEENS vs. SIMLA VOLUNTEERS.—Played on the 23rd the Queens winning by 1 goal to nil after a fast and exciting game. Play throughout was of a high standard, both sides giving a good exhibition. The first half was devoid of score, but in the middle of the second period the Queens scored their goal. Marsden, the Simla goal-keeper, was in fine form and gave a great display saving brilliantly on several occasions.

ROYAL IRISH RIFLES vs. QUEENS.—These teams met in the finals on the 26th, when an enormous crowd witnessed a splendid game in which the Rifles won by a goal to nil. The field was in fine condition and a great struggle took place. The Queens got the ball away first and forced a corner which they failed to improve upon. Up and down play in which both teams were seen to advantage followed—the passing and heading being a feature. A corner to the Queens and one to the Irish both proved abortive, then just before half time Edmonston, the Irish centre forward, got away and with a clever run down the field banged the ball into the net. In the second half the Queens had the best of matters and the Irish goal was frequently threatened, the backs and goal-keeper having an anxious time. They were in an ace of scoring on several occasions but missed owing to poor shooting and failing to equalise the Irish thus won by a goal to nil.

THE NASIK GOLF WEEK.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

THE Annual Meeting of the Royal Western India Golf Club was held on the Nasik links from 14th to 21st instant. A large number of members competed, including visitors from Bombay, Poona, Deolali, Jalna, Dhulia, Mhow, Ahmednagar and Mount Abu. The links were in fine condition, as they always are in rainy weather. Rain interrupted the play on two afternoons, but the full programme was got through. The following is a list of the chief prize winners:—

GENTLEMEN.

THE PRESIDENT'S CUP.—Capt. Leman, Deolali, 87.

THE R. W. I. GOLF CLUB CUP.—The eight best scores in the qualifying competition were as follows:—Major R. Anderson 86, Mr T. B. Fry 86, Capt Armstrong 88, Col. Carter 90, Mr. Jones 90, Mr. Meikle, 90, Capt. Leman 91, Mr. R. C. Wroughton 91. These eight players played for the Cup by match play, and in the final Captain Leman beat Major Anderson by 1 up after a most interesting game.

THE BOMBAY GYMKHANA CUP.—Mr. R. B. Stewart, Nasik and Captain Marshall, Deolali, tied for this at 93 less 10, and on, replaying the tie Mr. R. B. Stewart won the cup.

THE NASIK GYMKHANA CUP was won by Major Walker Kirkee, with 90 less 7.

THE SCRATCH FOURSOMES were won by Capt. Armstrong and Mr. Jones of Mhow.

THE HANDICAP FOURSOMES were won by Col. Onslow and Major Young of Poona.

THE CLUB'S SILVER MEDAL for the best score done during the week was won by Col. Carter, Mount Abu, with a score of 84.

LADIES.

THE BOMBAY BANGLE was won by Mrs. Shaw of Bombay with a score of 89 less 10.

THE MATCH AGAINST MRS. BOGEY for a prize given by Mr. J. J. Heaton, was won by Mrs. R. Anderson, Poona, who was 2 up on the 18 holes.

THE LADIES' FOURSOMES were won by Mrs. R. Anderson of Poona, and Mrs. Northcott, Deolali.

THE PRESIDENT'S PRIZE was won by Mrs. Luck of Nasik, who was 2 up to Mrs. Bogey.

CAPTAIN LEMAN'S CONSOLATION PRIZE was won by Mrs Carter of Mount Abu, with a net score of 41 for 9 holes.

THE CLUB'S SILVER MEDAL for the best average of three rounds was won by Mrs. R. Anderson of Poona, with an average score of 40.

THE ALLIED PAIRS, for a prize given by Mr. R. B. Stewart was won by Capt. and Mrs. Northcott of Deolali.

Besides the above there was a large number of handicap sweepstake competitions both for ladies and gentlemen, for all of which there were large entries.

The new Club House with residential quarters near the Home Green is fast approaching completion, and as the links are to be still further improved in the near future it is hoped that players will come from all parts of India to next year's meeting. The Nasik climate is delightful at this time of the year, and Nasik is easily accessible from all parts. Any golfers who would like to try the Nasik links are recommended to apply to the Honorary Secretary for information.

HOCKEY IN DACCA.

DALHOUSIE H.C. vs. THE NAWAB OF DACCA'S HOUSEHOLD.—Saturday, the 26th instant, was the climax of a most enjoyable outing on the part of the D. H. C.

At the instigation of Mr. Wharton, His Highness the Nawab has introduced Hockey to Dacca and the best team there is one composed of members of the Nawab's family. Entirely ignorant of the game a few months ago, this team has made surprising progress and for nearly an hour on Saturday they taxed to the utmost the resources of the D. H. C. There is excellent material in the team and under the tuition of Mr. Wharton and with the hearty support of the Nawab we look forward to seeing them competing for the Belghton Hockey Cup.

After the teams had been photographed by Mr. Kapp, they took their places on a perfectly-appointed field,—surface like a lawn, spectators, (amongst whom were the Nawab and all the elite of of Dacca society, native and European), comfortably seated, and sky cloudless.

Mr. Wharton got the best of the opening bully, but Emery securing, sent the ball to the left wing who at once took the ball into dangerous quarters and centered, only to hear the referee's whistle going for "sticks." This evidence of superabundant energy was manifest throughout the game on the Dalhousie side and was in marked contrast to the way in which the Dacca team used their weapons. "Sticks" had been so impressed upon them that they were over-careful and their strokes lacked force. Nevertheless they played a hard-and-fast game and were time after time dangerous. After the first five minutes the ball visited every part of the field in turn and there was not a dull moment. The Nawab's forwards, led by Mr. Wharton, K. Noruddin and K Hafez, though met by good play by Luckhurst and Emery often got down the field and tested Margrett, Bushby and Napper most severely. As in the Nawab's team, so with the Dals., it was the centre forward and combined left wing that oftenest put their team into a "goal-getting" position; and this was no easy task as K. Ismail played a clinking game and was well supported by his fellow halves. Only one fault could be found with this line,—when once the Dalhousie forwards got past them they did not follow to assist their backs.

The first goal was scored at the beginning of the second half. Evans passed to Parry, Parry took it on and centered: Cuthbert transferred to Wheeler who returned it and a brief mêlée in front of goal was ended by a good shot from Parry. Ten minutes later, the Nawab's team obtained their revenge. In warding off a fierce attack by the Nawab's team Napper by left-handed play incurred a "penalty" and from the bully Wharton scored a goal.

Time was called with the score "one all" though an excellent shot by Mr. Wharton nearly made it "two one" and though Cuthbert, Wade and Parry each failed to take full advantage of fairly easy chances.

Extra time was played. No score first half, but a great change came in the last five minutes. The Nawab's team were incapable of further effort and in three short minutes Dalhousie scored three goals, the finishing touches of which were applied by Wade, Cuthbert and Emery. Thus ended (4-1) a most pleasant game, in which Dalhousie beat a good set of sportsmen and doughty opponents.

Mrs. Nicholl on behalf of the Nawab of Dacca presented to the winning team a splendid Cup and to each individual a silver medal. The Nawab was evidently delighted with the game and pleased that his kinsmen did so well against one of the best teams in Calcutta. Teams :—

Nawab's Union Club.—Goal, Duloo Meah : backs, K. Farroo Meah and K. Hingoo Meah : half backs, K Badiruddin, K. Ismail and K. Yosuff, : forwards, K. Amirullah, K. Mosqur, A. H. Wharton, K. Noruddin, K. Hafez.

Dalhousie.—Goal, E. H. Napper : backs, P. Margrett, F. E. Bushby ; half backs, P. J. Luckhurst, W. J. Emery P Street : forwards, T Parry, W. J. Evers, D. M. Cuthbert, G. H. Wade, P. Wheeler.

Referee.—G. Cook (St James's). Linesmen, J. Chaplin and K Abdul Karim.

The Naturalist.

BIRDS OF LUCKNOW.

Common Indian Nightjar [Caprimulgus asiaticus].

This nightjar is not common, at least neither the late George Reid, nor myself, nor any one else that I am aware of have found it so. It appears to delay until the "shades of even" have fallen before it flits out after its food.

Horsfield's Nightjar [Caprimulgus macrurus].

Commoner than the last, and like it a permanent resident, though I have not yet found its nest. It is somewhat local in its distribution.

Cuckoo [Cuculus canorus].

Reid, in his "Birds of the Lucknow Civil Division" mentions two instances when he came across this bird, and the Rev. Harry Menzies, Civil Chaplain, told me he heard it on one occasion.

Himalayan Cuckoo [Cuculus saturatus].

In the Birds of the "Fauna of British India" series this species is recorded as having "been shot in the cold season at Lucknow." Beyond this I can find no other instance of its having occurred here.

Indian Cuckoo [Cuculus micropterus].

I shot one single specimen of what I believe was this bird in the spring of 1895. Unfortunately the skin was lost. I have never come across it again.

Common Hawk-Cuckoo [Hierococcyx varius].

Popiya (H.) Brain-fever Bird [Anglo Indians.]

The Brain-fever bird is I fancy a permanent resident, but I am not quite sure. Its well-known call, which to me at any rate is not nearly so exasperating as that of the koel, is heard from early January until the end of the "rains." It breeds presumably in babbler's nests. On 23rd March 1896 I found an egg in a nest of Argya malcolmi which I am morally certain belonged to this cuckoo.

Indian Plaintive Cuckoo [Cacomantis passerinus].

Reid has included this bird on the authority of Mr. Adamr I am almost certain, however, that the species does not occur with us.

Pied Crested Cuckoo [Coccystes jacobinus].

Popiya ; Kala popiya (H) Shah Bulbul [La Martinière boys].

Reid gives it as his opinion that this bird is a permanent resident I once saw a single individual in some dhak jungle in November 1901, but with that exception, I have never seen it before June, or after September. Its egg, of which I have been shown a few, though I have never taken them myself, is a very spherical glossy dark blue, and is laid usually in the nests of Crateropus canorus.

Indian Koel [Eudynamis honorata].

Koel, Koéli (H). Quailie [La Martinière boys]. I disagree with Reid as to this bird being a permanent resident, at any rate universally. I have only twice seen them in the "cold" weather, once in November, and once in February. My impression is that they migrate eastwards, but I do not know. Possibly some find their way to the Central Provinces.

As every one knows, the koel lays its eggs in the nest of the crow. With us the nest chosen is that of Corvus splendens, as the young of Corvus macrorhynchus are hatched by the time the koel arrives in Lucknow. It is curious to notice how persistently this bird is pursued by the house-crow, while the larger black variety passes it by without noticing it. That these results are sometimes serious for the koel, I have good proof On the 21st June this year, as I was riding with Major Newnham, the Cantonment Magistrate, near the Moti Mahal, Lucknow, our attention was called to a little native child, who seemed to be poking a wounded bird on the ground with a stick. On coming up we found a hen koel with a wound under the wing, which incapacitated her from flight. In answer to our questions, the lad said that a few minutes before a crow had been chasing the koel, and had struck it, whereupon it fell down. I see no reasons for disbelieving the child, as it was practically impossible for him to have wounded the bird, even had he wished. The eggs, which are distinctly corvine in appearance, measure 1·38" × ·89." I have found 2 koel's and no crow's eggs in a nest, 3 crow's and 2 koel's, 4 crow's and 1 koel's, and so on. Reid records 1 koel's and no crow's (three times), 1 (hardset) crow's and 2 koel's, 1 (fresh) crow's and 3 koel's, and argues that this goes to show that the female koel ejects the crow's eggs from the nest before depositing her own. Personally I preserve an open mind on the subject.

Sirkeer Cuckoo [Taccocua leschenaulti].

Brown-bird [Martinière boys].

This species though not numerically abundant is widely spread over the district It is frequently found in dhak jungle in which there is a good deal of grass and undergrowth. It also occurs in mango and babool topes in both of which I have found its nest. The breeding season is chiefly confined to the rains, though I once found a young bird in a nest in April, and have taken one or two eggs in April and May. The nest is a pad of sticks and fresh leaves, and is not domed as is that of the next species. The eggs, usually three or four in number, are white with a chalky exterior and average 1·43" × 1·09". This bird is very found of running, which it seems to prefer to flying. When it runs it lowers its head and raises its tail until head, body, and tail are in a straight line, and it can easily be mistaken for a rat or mongoose. Its flight is weak, but not undulating. I have never that I can think of heard this bird utter any note.

Common Coucal [Centrosus sinensis].

Mohok (H.) Crow-Pheasant, or Mohawk [La Martinière boys.]

The crow-pheasant, with its rich black and chestnut plumage, and its sonorous "hoop, hoop, hoop," is a common and permanent resident.

It is to be found in almost every tope and jungle, and in patowal grass, etc. The nest is a huge ball of grass and leaves, with a hole at the side, and is placed in some thick mango or other tree or in a clump of patowal grass. The eggs, which are laid in June July, and possibly August, are like those of the previous species, but rather larger and more spherical. They average 8·38" × 1·14".

Large Burmese Paroquet [Palæornis indo-burmanicus]. Pahari Tota (H).

Both the late Mr. George Reid and Mr. Benjamin Aitken have told me that this bird occurs here in September, in which month I am never here. I have not examined Reid's skins, but I fancy they will prove to be P. nipalensis.

Rose-ringed Paroquet [Palæornis torquatus]. Tota (H). Parrot [La Martinière boys].

A common and permanent resident doing considerable damage to the crops, but the feather trade has, I understand, thinned them down considerably The bird is by no means bad eating, but, when feeding on the berries of the neem, should be avoided, as the flesh is then bitter. It breeds in February and March, a few laying as late as April. I have been unlucky with its eggs, and have found few nests. On 3rd March 1903, I took three hard set eggs from a hole in a decayed branch of a mango, 8 or 9 feet from the ground. The hen sat very close, and, though I cut out the nest hole so as to expose her to the sky, she refused to budge, and we had to lift her off. The hole resembled that of the green barbet and was unlined, save for a few stray bits of parrot's down. Reid found the nest chiefly in the jamin, but I have come across them in most cases in mango, pipal, sheshum, and neem trees. The eggs are pure white and glossless, and measure about 1·19" × ·91".

Western Blossom-headed Paroquet [Palæornis cyanocephalus.] [Lalsira Tota H].

A permanent resident, but not nearly so numerous as P. torquatus. I have never found the eggs, but I have been told by the boys of the college that they have been taken once or twice in the Residency grounds, and Reid got four fresh specimens in a pipal tree on 15th April, which averaged ·98" × ·80". The bird seems much more numerous in the "rains," from which I think it must be locally migratory. Its cry is far less harsh and discordant than that of P. torquatus.

Barn-Owl [Strix flammea]. [Ulu H].

Grass Owl [Strix candida].

Reid thought he saw this owl near Rahimabad, and Anderson recorded it from the vicinity of the Chowka and Gogra rivers, but I have never met with it myself.

Short-eared Owl [Asio accipitrinus].

Very common in certain localities during the cold weather. It seems to be more or less gregarious, and more than once, both in dhak jungle and in grassy land interspersed with babool trees, I have put up "coveys" of 10 or more. Often too have I seen it sitting on the bunds between the gram fields. It is more or less diurnal in its habits.

Mottled Wood-Owl [Syrnium ocellatum].

This fine handsome owl is not common, but occasionally I have met with it single or in pairs in large mango topes. It is a permanent resident, but I have never found its nest. This owl and all the big owls, are often called "Ghughu" by the natives, and, according to Reid, this species is also known as "Khuska."

Brown Fish-Owl [Ketupa zeylonensis].

Not very common, but a permanent resident. I once found a nest in a hole at the top of an old pipal tree by a large jheel near Rae Bareli, about New Year's day. It contained one young bird, and a dead teal—one which doubtless we had wounded.

Rock Horned Owl [Bubo bengalensis].

Fairly common in nullahs and ravines. The eggs of either this species, or the next, have been shown me, but I have not yet found the nest myself.

Dusky Horned Owl.

A fairly common and permanent resident, frequenting mango topes, and, according to Reid, having an especial preference for big tamarinds. All these large owls fly comparatively well by day, and never seem to have any difficulty in making their way through the trees, if they happen to be disturbed. On one occasion Reid found quite a collection of all these three big owls in some huge pipals and tamarinds surrounded by bamboo jungle in a deserted fort. These owls make many very curious noises at night, and the natives affirm that to hear them hoot near a dwelling foretells a death. They also utter a kind of deep sigh which is very startling when heard close by one's head in some dark lonely grove.

Scops Owl [Scops giu].

Collared Scops Owl [Scops bakkamœna].

This pretty little owl is I think a permanent resident. It is commonly found in bamboo clumps. It seems stupid and difficult to flush in daylight—at any rate I stood and stared at one of these little beggars for some two minutes, or more, at a distance of about two feet from my nose. It sat there blinking away, evidently much puzzled at the apparition that had disturbed its slumbers, but it never flew away, and I left it where it was. I have never found its nest, but the boys say that the eggs have once or twice been taken Spotted Owl [Athene brama].

Khukusat, Kasuttea, Ulu (H).

This little owl is a perfect nuisance in the breeding season, with its disreputable squabbling. It seems to delight in washing and rewashing it dirty linen in public from sunset to sunrise. It breeds in holes of trees and buildings in March and April. Sometimes the eggs, white of course and averaging 1·25" × 1·04", are laid on the bare wood, but usually there is a certain amount of lining—grass or feathers.

Jungle Owlet [Glaucidium radiatum].

Kaiakasut [H].

According to Reid a common resident. I have but rarely met with it, but, as it is a great skulker, perhaps I have overlooked it.

Brown Hawk Owl [Ninox scutulata].

Another "common and a permanent resident," according to Reid, but I have only seen it once or twice, though, being very nocturnal in its habits, it is not often met with. One that Reid shot cried like a hare. I have never taken the eggs of either of these two last species.

BOMBAY NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY

A MEETING of the members of the Bombay Natural History Society was held at the Society's Rooms on Thursday, the 24th ultimo, Mr. R. C. Wroughton presiding.

New Members.

The Honorary Secretary mentioned that during this year 142 new members had joined the Society, but more were still required, and it was hoped that members would still continue to try and induce others to join.

The election of the following new members was announced :—Mr. T. Malcolm (Berhampur) ; Capt. E. A. Fagan, (Alwar) ; Mr. B. H. Brooke (Bombay) ; M. F. Sikes (Badulla, Ceylon) ; Captain W. Lethbrige, I. M. S. (Muscat) ; Mr. G. Wapshare (Ootacamund) ; Surgeon-General G. W. B. Hay, I. M. S. (Ootacamund) Mr. L. K. Martin (Buldana, Berars) ; Mr. G. B. de Mowbray (Maskeliya, Ceylon) ; Mr. C. P. Hodgson (Ootacamund) ; Captain C. Swan (Ootacamund) ; Sir Frederick Price (Ootacamund) ; Mr. C. Mullaly, I. C. S. (Ootacamund) ; Major F Vans Agnew, R. A. (Wellington, Nilgiris) ; Captain N. S. Coghill, I. A. (Radhanpore, Gujerat) ; Mr. J. C. Hollwood (Kyaukse, Upper Burma) ; Mr. W. S. Burke (Calcutta) ; Mr. H. P. W. Macnaghten (Bombay) ; Captain E. G. W. Pratt (Bombay) ; Captain D. C. Kemp, I. M. S. (Cuddalore, South Arcot, Madras) ; Mr. J. H Irvine (Mussoorie) ; Honorary Secretary, B. A. Mess, Boorkee (Boorkee) ; Mr. W A. Mertz (Myitkyine, Upper Burma) Major W. S. Bannerman I. M. S. (Bombay) ; Mr. B. V. Kelly (Naumauk, Katha, Upper Burma) ; Major A. F. Mackenzie, M. V. O. (93rd Highlanners, Calcutta); and Captain E. W. Harris (Vizianagram).

The Honorary Secretary acknowledged receipt of the following contributions since the last meeting :—

The Journal.

The Honorary Secretary mentioned that the next number would be issued during October, and would be found to contain some exceptionally interesting papers. The Committee were also glad to announce that a very valuable series on the "Snakes of India" (with coloured illustrations) written by Captain F. Wall, I. M. S., would shortly commence, and the plates were now being prepared at home. They also had in view a series on the "Common Butterflies of India" by which the butterflies of the plains were referred to This series would also have coloured illustrations, and as Mr. E. H. Aitken had kindly promised to write some of the letter-press, it would be certain to be interesting and as attractive as all his writings are.

Papers Read.

The following papers were then read : The Food and Poison of Centipedes, by W. D. Cumming ; Notes on the Nidification of the Indian Rain Quail, by B. H. Heath ; Curious Accident to the Common Swift, by M. D. Mackenzie ; On the Collections in the Society"s Museum, by E. Comber|Part X.

After explaining the purposes for which museums are established, which may be divided into two heads, viz., the diffusion of instruction and amusement among the mass of the people and to afford the opportunity for scientific research, under which latter head the Society's museum of course falls, Mr Comber pointed out the danger of museums and the collections they contain being allowed to deteriorate into the condition of a mere accumulation of rubbish, unless they are properly taken care of, arranged, and catalogued. In laying stress upon these points he mainly relied upon quotations from the words of the late Sir William Fowler, who was for many years in charge of the British Museum (Natural History) and who had a larger experience of the management and arrangement of Museums than any one else in the whole world. Mr. Comber pointed out that the very life of a museum depended on its curator, which in the case of a Society such as this, was a work that had to be divided amongst a number of its members since the Society was not in position to employ a properly qualified and salaried official. More than half its funds if were expended on the publication of its journal through which alone it was possible to bring the work of the Society before its members, scattered as they are over nearly the whole world. He then referred to the already vast amount of work that fell upon the Honorary Secretaries, and appealed to members resident in Bombay to come forward and give a helping hand to the Society's museum by taking some department under their special charge, as has been the system in years past. Through one circumstance or another the Society has lately lost or is losing the assistance of several of its most enthusiastic resident members such as Mr. E. H. Aitken and Mr. R. C. Wroughton, and unless others—even if less experienced—will come forward the work of the Society must inevitably suffer. The Society has up to now not succeeded in filling the vacancies caused be the departure of Captain A. J. Peile, R.A., and Staff Surgeon Basstt Smith, R. M., who so ably controlled the departments under their case. Mr. Comber then briefly reviewed the collections in the museum, pointing out where they were weak and required a helping hand to bring them into order, so that they may be of the greatest use to the members. Without this being done much really valuable material was lying waste, never being brought before the world of science. He ended with a further appeal to those present to use their influence with other members to come forward and give a helping hand.

The meeting then ended with a vote of thanks to the authors of the papers, all of which will appear in the journal.

A SHATTERED EDEN.

THERE are some men (we all know one or two such) who seem so happily constituted, so securely armoured against the blows of fortune, that their destiny—their decorous and triumphal march through existence—offers no salient point to the curiosity of the biographer, no probable addition to the collection of chroniques scandaleuses. Such an individual—happy in having no history—seemed my friend Parslow. Possessed of a moderate fortune, sufficient for comfort and not enough to tempt him into extravagance, blessed with health and a charming wife, his career appeared likely to run its predestined course of uninterrupted and felicity.

I ran across Parslow the other day in the Strand. I thought I should have recognised Parslow anywhere. Not many men possess that air of bovine contentment, that sleek rotundity of contour, that slightly exasperating expression of nil admirari. No doubt it was owing to the absence of these distinguishing characteristics that I almost passed Parslow without recognising him. That I did not do so entirely was due to the somewhat sickly grin with which he greeted my stare of half recognition.

"Coming my way?" he asked, after he had chatted for a few moments. "No," I began, "I think not. I'm—"

"Come on," he said, taking me by the arm; "I rather want your advice. Not that it will be of much assistance, I'm afraid" he added.

I disengaged my arm gently but firmly. "I have a particular appointment in the City," I said, coldly. "Good-day, Parslow."

"Now look here, Martin," he said, persuasively. "I'm not joking. I really do want advice, and I know you're a level-headed fellow. You can spare me half-an-hour."

I could have spared him the whole morning, my appointment in the City being apocryphal, but the sensation of being courted was novel and pleasant, and I played with it. "I'm afraid not" I said, doubtfully, "unless you're sure you won't keep me longer than that."

"Oh! very well," said Parslow, to my secret disappointment. The fact is, his dejected appearance and air of mystery had aroused my curiosity. "I suppose I'd better consult Doubleday."

Doubleday is Parslow's solicitor, and knowing how sedulously Parslow avoided anything which would be likely to disturb the even tenour of his existence, the hint of possible litigation piqued my curiosity."

"After all," I said, "I don't like to refuse you if I can be of any assistance and no doubt—"

"Come on, then," said Parslow, taking my arm again. "We'll go in here," he continued, turning into a quiet wine bar, and motioning me to a seat in the corner.

"Nothing wrong at home, I hope?" I ventured, after a pause during which Parslow appeared uncertain how to commence his confidence.

He nodded slowly and emphatically. "Life has been hell to me for a fortnight, Martin!" he said, violently.

"You don't mean that!" I murmured, rather weakly, my fancy reverting to the pictures I had seen of the tortured sinners at Drury Lane Theatre.

"I do," he replied. "I've had a devil of a time"—the expression was no doubt appropriate, but I couldn't help smiling—"ever since Ascot. What are you grinning at?"

"I beg pardon," I stammered: "I was thinking of something else. Ever since Ascot, you said. The weather was beastly, certainly, and the way outsiders kept popping up—"

"Pooh!" interrupted Parslow. "Every horse might have been buried in the mud for all I cared. Do you suppose I'm worrying about that? I wish to Heaven, Martin, the course had been flooded I wish the meeting had never taken place."

"You'd better start at the beginning, Parslow," I suggested, rather alarmed at the violent manner in which he was emphasising his strictures by banging his glass on the table; "I've only got half-an-hour."

"You know our home, Martin," said Parslow, quieting down suddenly. I nodded. "No pleasanter house that I know," I murmured.

"It was, Martin," said Parslow, gloomily, "up to a fortnight ago. A little Eden," he sighed, "without the serpent."

"I can't imagine 'The Nook' with a serpent," I said, half banteringly, as though to expose the absurdity of the notion.

"There are two," groaned Parslow.

"Oh! come," I said, "two serpents, Parslow!"

"Brindell—you know the fellow—is one," went on my companion, "and Mrs. Lovegrove is the other."

"Brindell hardly gave me the impression of taking an ophidian part," I said; "and as to the lady, I don't think I know her"

"Thank your lucky stars Martin," said Parslow. "You'd have fallen a victim."

"Very likely," I said, humbly. "At any rate," I went on, philosophically, "two serpents are better than one. What have they been doing?"

"What haven't they been doing!" sighed Parslow. "Between them they've wrecked my life Yes, yes, I know," he said, noticing my glances at the clock. "The tale isn't a very long one. You must know, Martin," he went on, "that Mrs Lovegrove has only been in our road for a month. A short month, too, but what a deuce of a commotion she's raised! For months before her arrival my wife and Mrs. Brindell never spoke to each other; just glared over the garden wall and did mean things behind each other's backs. You know the sort of things women do."

"I know," I said: "chuck slugs over the wall and snip off overhanging branches, don't they?"

"Just so," said Parslow, "and engage each other's discharged servants. Well, Mrs. Lovegrove hadn't been in the road a week before they were calling each other 'dear,' and kissing each other—my wife and the Brindell woman, I mean. That describes Mrs. Lovegrove sufficiently, doesn't it?"

"A peacemaker?" I queried.

"Pooh! laughed Parslow. "A deucedly good-looking woman coming from the Lord knows where, with a new dress for every day in the week and not a woman amongst her visitors, the result being that all the other women in the road made up their quarrels and united in hatred of Mrs. Lovegrove and suspicion of their husbands. A peacemaker after a fashion," he admitted, with a grin. "Well, unfortunately, perhaps, for me, Mrs. Lovegrove was our next door neighbour, the Brindells being her neighbours on the other side, and I don't mind admitting that I had spoken to the lady once or twice—quite casually, you understand. Being neighbours, I could hardly help that, could I?"

"Well," I said, as Parslow paused for my opinion, "go on."

"Brindell, however," went on Parslow, "absolutely threw discretion and decency overboard. He lay in wait for her at the nd of the garden, gave her flowers and—"

"What were you doing to see all this?" I asked, severely.

"Gardening," replied Parslow, "I couldn't help seeing it, man. It was disgraceful, and at last I don t believe there was anybody in the road, with the exception of Mrs. Brindell, who wasn't aware of his infatuation. Well, Ascot week arrived, and my wife and Mrs Brindell suggested that Brindell and myself should take them down on Thursday—the Gold Cup day. To my surprise, Brindell objected on the score of the weather, and the projected party fell through. On my honour, Martin,' continued Parslow, earnestly, "I had no idea of going down by myself I left home at the usual time, saying I was going to town on business. I meant it, and yet somehow or other on Thursday afternoon I found myself, just before racing, at that accursed place. Almost the first person I ran against was Brindell, who appeared as surprised at seeing me as I was at discovering him.

"'You here, Parslow"?' he exclimed looking rather confused.

"'Why not?'" I replied. "I never said I was not coming You're the last person I expected to meet, though. So you changed your mind? Well, we'll see the racing together, eh?"

"'I'm not alone, old boy," said Brindell, grinning sheepishly.

"'Mrs. Brindell with you?' I asked, rather surprised.

"'Er—no,' replied Brindell. 'The fact is—look here, Parslow, you're not the chap to give me away—it's Mrs. Lovegrove.'

"'You must be mad!'" I ejaculated—'stark, staring mad. What can have induced you—'

"'Who's to know?' said Brindell, defiantly. 'Come and have a chat with her.'

"'No, thank you,' I said, coldly; 'I'll leave you to the enjoyment of that.' Well, I left him and wandered away, determined to give Mrs Lovegrove's dangerous neighbourhood a very wide berth. As luck would have it, however, just before the start for the Cup I felt a hand grasp my arm timidly, and looking round I saw the very person whom I had done my utmost to avoid."

"Did you speak to her, Parslow?" I asked, as the speaker stopped in his story.

"What could I do?" returned Parslow. "I got away as soon as I could, however, and after racing was over hurried to the station without seeing anything more of either the infatuated Brindell or Mrs Lovegrove."

"Of course you told your wife all about it as soon as you got home?" I said.

"Ah! Martin, would to Heaven I had,' groaned Parslow. "I might have done it then without much danger. But the very name of Lovegrove was poison to her, and I funked it. In short, I never said a word about having been to the meeting."

"I see," I said. "Somebody saw you, and—"

"Nobody saw me," broke in Parslow. "At least—let me finish my story.

"On the following evening Brindell called at our place with his wife. It was evident that she suspected nothing of his intrigue, and he had the cheek to join in the conversation, which, of course, turned on Mrs. Lovegrove, with the basest insinuations. His cynicism revolted me, and I had the greatest inclination in the world to refuse his offer to accompany them to a variety theatre for which he had purchased four tickets. However, my wife and Mrs. Brindell insisted on my going, and at length I gave in.

"It was late when we entered the theatre, and as we took our seats the auditorium was in darkness, owing to the next item on the programme being a series of biograph pictures. I suppose Brindell was as unsuspicious of danger as I was, but when the announcement of 'Ascot—Scenes on the Course—The Race for the Gold Cup' appeared, I glanced at him apprehensively. He caught my eye and raised his eyebrows nervously. The first picture was that of the Royal Procession, and then—shall I ever forget it!—in the very foreground of the next appeared—"

"Brindell and Mrs. Lovegrove?" I interjected.

"Mrs. Lovegrove and myself?" groaned Parslow. "That infernal picture was taken at the very moment when Mrs. Lovegrove had passed her arm through mine. She was smiling, and upon my word we looked as though we were on the most intimate terms. I heard that unspeakable ruffian Brindell snigger; I caught Mrs. Brindell gasping 'Well, I never!' whilst my wife gave a shriek which startled the house, and fainted."

"Terrible luck, certainly, Parslow," I said, sympathetically, as my unfortunate friend finished his narrative—"terrible indeed! What on earth did you do?"

Parslow shrugged his shoulders. "I did my best to explain matters, of course; but what chance had I? Had I told my wife I had been to Ascot at first, I might have smoothed things over. As it is—"

"Poor old chap!" I said. "But didn't Brindell come to the rescue?"

"He?" cried Parslow, bitterly. "He was likely to do that, wasn't he! The only person who might have exonerated me was Mrs. Lovegrove. I begged my wife to see her, to call upon her—"

"Yes," I said; "that was the only hope, I suppose."

"The next morning," continued Parslow, "the news spread that Mrs. Lovegrove had disappeared from the neighbourhood, and with her went my last hope of rehabilitation. Everybody in our street has been to see that horrible picture, of course; and, seeing it, who could believe in my innocence? Tell me, Martin, is there anything to be done?" he asked piteously.

I shook my head. "I must to go the City, old fellow," I said. "I'll think things over a bit, and see if I can contrive any way out of it"

Parslow wrung my hand gratefully and I left him I haven't thought of anything to help him yet, however.—S. Sketches.

The Theatre.

THE DANDY FIFTH.

SATURDAY night witnessed the final performance of the Dandy Fifth by the Amateur Dramatic Society, and if anything were wanted to emphasise the unqualified success of this bright little piece, it was forthcoming in the reception accorded by a crowded house The Dandy Fifth while not, perhaps, calling for any very high standard of acting, is not, however, an altogether unambitious piece for an amateur company as it demands good singing, good dancing, and any amount of go, or what our Yankee cousins term "vim," to carry it through successfully. All these three desiderata being amply forthcoming, the success of the piece was assured, the more so perhaps in that it is one which, granted bright and clever rendering, will stand repetition. This is a not unimportant point in a case where, as is inevitable at this time of year in Calcutta, a full house must after the first night entail a majority who have already seen the piece at least once. The most attractive feature about the Dandy Fifth is—as should always be the case in opera bouffe—the music. The whole secret of musical comedy lies in the composition and rendering of the lyrics. The musical composition of the Dandy Fifth is too well known to require eulogy, and the rendering on this occasion was excellent.

It almost invariably happens in a company of amateurs that there are one or two who are, so to speak, in a class by themselves and the present was no exception to the rule, Mrs. Wakefield as "Polly" and Mr. Zimmerman as "Sergt. Major Milligan' are—but for the unfortunately necessary adjunct of the electric punkah over head!—calculated to delude the listeners into believing himself once more in the little village on the Thames, and occupying a stall at the dear old Gaiety, now alas demolished. Mr. Zimmerman's reputation with Calcutta audiences is so great that it is enough to say that in the Dandy Fifth he was seen at his very best, in order to convey the idea that the character of "Sergt. Milligan" left nothing to be desired. Too much on the other hand, cannot be said in praise of Mrs. Wakefield's dainty dancing and her bright, spontaneous rendering of her difficult part. "Polly" is no easy character to undertake, but Mrs Wakefield was more than equal to it, and the charming daintiness which she imparted to her conception of the part combined with her really admirable dancing and singing was worthy of the London stage As regards the rest of the company, Mrs. Anderson's fine voice made the most of her very effective songs, and Mr. Mathew as the Colonel's sister showed considerable talent for low comedy. Mr. Whitie made the most of a somewhat 'stiety' part and Mr. Webber struggled fairly successfully with the awkward character of the Colonel. Mr. Mason as Claud Duval has a good voice, but at times he seems to suffer from a certain self-consciousness on the stage, though he was quite good in the fancy ball scene.

The chorus did their work admirably, the sextette in the second act being particularly taking. The piece as a whole redounds to the credit of Mr. Zimmerman's stage management, and though on Saturday we were not seeing it for the first—or second—time, we still regret that we are not to have an opportunity of seeing it again. Can we say more than this?

(a) This move is better in the Knight's than in the Bishop's Gambit, quite safe, and should lead to a draw if White were so inclined

(b) 4. P to K 5 is inferior, Black replying 4....P to Q 3, &c. 4. P takes P. P to Q 4; 5. P to Q 4, B takes P; 6. B takes P, leads to a drawn variation, with which White does not seem satisfied.

(c) 7. B to B 4 would be followed by Q to K 2 with advantage.

(f) 12. P takes P would have equalised the game. Perhaps the White allies were not justified in excepting more at the expense of a pawn.

(g) Better would have been 13 B to Kt 5, ch, K to K sq; 14. R to K sq, ch followed by Kt to B 3. In any case, it would have prevented Black from developing the K R. The attack instituted with the text move seems less forcible.

(h) Obviously forced If 16. . . . . K to B sq then 17. B to Q 6, &c.

(i) 17. R to K sq, ch, K to B 2; 18. R to K 7, ch K to Kt sq; 19. B to K 5, R to B ch, K takes P; 20. R takes R, Kt to B 7, might have been an interesting alternative. The text move is a sign of relaxing the attack, and Black gets the upper hand gradually. The rest may pass without comment. The White allies made a gallant stand up to seventy odd moves, but we have shorn the game of its useless ending.

FOOTBALL REFORM.

WITH the opening of the football season at home, come into force the new rules which the International Board and the Football Association have after much cogitation devised for the purification of the game: and those who watch the progress of the League matches will be of one opinion concerning the necessity for the steps that have been taken. The degeneration of the game is not the development of a season, it has been in steady progress now for a considerable number of years ever since professionalism became paramount and the "gate" became of such vital importance to the existence of the great clubs. The new legislation, while it applies of course to all games played under Association rules, has been made necessary not by the methods of the ten thousand and one school and local clubs, but by the methods adopted by members of the teams which compete in the League Championship. In such matches, as in the county cricket matches, we should be able to look for not only the best, but the fairest play: the League match should furnish the enormous crowds of interested spectators with an object lesson in Association football. If it ever filled this praiseworthy purpose it has long ceased to do so, and the lesson it read, if it read any, has been to show how far rules may be broken in spirit if not in letter by those who make a profession of the game.

It cannot be expected that men of the class from which football professionals are drawn should continue to regard as a game that on which they depend for their livelihood. When a man's wages, his £2 per week, or whatever it may be, depend upon the value of the services he can render to his team or his employers; when feeling runs so high as it does in the midland and northern towns of England; when employers and partisans alike are careful to turn the blind eye on practices of more than doubtful legitimacy; and above all, when an empty treasury craves the substantial "gate," we should be something more than sanguine did we look for the observance of such a standard of sportsmanship as we seek, and find, in other popular pastimes organised on a large scale. The extent to which foul play has been carried of recent years has amounted to a crying scandal. Success, we know, palliates most offences, and it would be astonishing did we hear of club committees dismissing a man whose play, doubtful though it might be, rendered him a tower of strength to the team. Foul play in such a player is, with business-like charity, attributed to the offender's exceptional keenness; and keenness in so good a cause as the club's success in the League Championship matches obviously covers a multitude of sins, which in the purer atmosphere of a school football field would bring the sinner to seasonable grief.

It is always a matter for regret when it is found necessary to surround a good game with new restrictions: hard and fast regulations have necessarily a cramping effect by creating offences that call for the intervention of the umpire or referee and checking the rush of the game. The Football Association was for some considerable time in doubt concerning the policy of recognising the "pro" at all: but circumstances were too strong for it, and when it passed its resolution that professionalism should be "legalised under stringent conditions" the law-givers of the game seem to have foreseen the troubles that were to follow. Whether they foresaw the full consequences of recognising a professional element we very much doubt; had they done so it seems exceedingly improbable that they would have permitted the insertion of the thin end of so formidable a wedge between football as then played on the one side and the code of rules which had theretofore sufficed upon the other. To go back on the resolution that recognised professionals and placed them under a comprehensive code of rules for themselves, would, we conceive, be impossible: like a certain eminent politician, football club committees are adept in the "manufacture of loopholes" and, as has been shown frequently ere now, there are many ways of attaching a player to the club team other than the straightforward method of paying him a fixed wage as a professional. It was a common thing in former days, and no doubt the practice still exists, for an employer of labour, who happened to take an interest in football, to find a place in his factory or business, and on his pay sheet, for a man whose chief, if not only, recommendation was his excellence as a half-back or forward. The club for whom he played gave him nothing; and thus a team consisting entirely of masked professionals might be put into the field to play a team of unquestioned amateurs. Under these circumstances the authorities were practically helpless; and they took at least the straightforward course in legalising the professional player.

The new rules which have been introduced to curb the "keenness" of the "pro" are at once comprehensive and drastic. Under the old Law (No. 9) it was laid down that "in no case shall a goal be scored from any free kick" with the familiar reservation as to Law 13. The new Law makes a radical alteration in the potential value of the free kick: in other words, exacts a much higher penalty for certain infractions of rules which had previously been penalised by a free kick off which a goal could not be scored. A goal may now be scored direct from a free kick given outside the penalty line for any of these offences (1) Charging an opponent from behind, (2) Handling the ball, (3) Holding an opponent, (4) Jumping at an opponent, (5) Kicking, (6) Pushing or (7) Tripping an opponent. All these offences were penalised by the granting of a free kick from which a goal could not be scored, under the old Law; but the professional player has been at such pains to show that the advantages procurable by violation of rules may be so much greater than the disadvantage inflicted upon his side by the free kick, that a higher penalty was become necessary if the Law were not to fall into contempt altogether. A goal cannot be scored from a free kick for the following offences:—(1) illegal throw in from touch, (2) being off side (as defined in Law 6), (3) charging the goal keep, (4) goal keeper (a) carrying the ball more than two steps, (b) handling the ball in his opponents' half, (5) when a ball is thrown up a player touching it before it reaches the ground, (6) corner kick, (7) goal kick. The new alterations also give the referee a latitude of discretion which should make for the regeneration of the game. It will have occurred to football players already that a penalty kick under the new Law may be worth risking: the authorities recognise this and enact that the referee may refrain from putting the Law into force in cases where he is satisfied that by enforcing it he would, by stopping the game, give an advantage to the offending team. The post of referee has for long been an unenviable one: the new Law adds to his responsibilities in no small degree, for it is easy to imagine circumstances in which the necessarily prompt decision as to stopping play or overlooking an offence in the interests of the injured side, may be extremely difficult. It is however the lot of referees to suffer, and we doubt not they will "suffer gladly" in the interests of fairer play. Offside play we must note is dealt with more stringently: the player who whether by accident or intention is offside may not touch the ball and may not in any way whatever interfere with an opponent or with the play.

The necessity for the radical changes we have sketched is regrettable, but the usages of the professional in big matches have made them indispensable if the game were not to degenerate past redemption. Made in the interests of what we will call public football, the League series of matches, they will do nothing to handicap or cramp the game on grounds where it is fairly and honestly played. The regimental club and school team that plays the game in a sportsmanlike spirit will not feel the effect of the new legislation at all: it has been designed to meet the urgent needs of a certain section of players upon whose doings unfortunately a large measure of public interest centres. We say unfortunately, for without the stimulus of public interest the game would never have reached the condition it is now sought to amend.

Poor George Fordham, the most popular jockey, perhaps, that ever crossed a saddle, was a bit of a wag in his way, and a goodly volume could be filled with his sayings and doings were anyone disposed to take up the task of his biography.

George had been engaged to ride Digby Grand in the City and Suburban, the Epsom course, over which he had finished a good fourth to Doncaster, Kaiser, and Gang Forward in the Derby of the previous year, being considered particularly adapted to the little black, whose connections were very sweet on his prospects.

Now, Digby Grand was, as everybody who went a racing at that time will well remember, a bit of a thief, and for the purpose of infusing the requisite amount of Dutch courage into him Mr. Y. B. Graham, his owner, had provided Woolcot, the trainer, with a bottle of rare old port from his own cellars Fordham was assisting Woolcot to saddle the horse, and the trainer was upon the point of administering the contents of the bottle when George seized it and put it to his lips.

"Prime stuff this," he said, smacking his lips unctuously; "pity to waste it on him, ain't it? Just taste it."

Woolcot did as he was directed, and the bottle passed from one to the other until every drop of the port was consumed, and thus poor Digby had to go without his draught. He won his race, however, so that, as was the case with the "Jackdaw of Rheims," after the priest had given the curse, "nobody felt one penny the worse."

THE Governor's Cup at the Poona Races last Thursday was won by Connaught, a complete outsider. Full report further on.

In the Dasehra Polo Tournament for the Maharaja's Challenge Cup, which began in Mysore on the 3rd instant, the Bangalore Gymkhana beat the Mysore Gymkhana by 3 goals to 1 goal 2 subsidiaries. The Mysore Imperial Service Lancers' team then beat the Carabiniers' first team by 3 goals 5 subsidiaries to nothing.

The American Team visiting Bisley for the Palma Match brought with them, and exhibited a very ingenious machine for teaching aiming, known as the Sub-Target Gun Machine. The machine exhibited was adapted to the U.S.A. Krag rifle, and consisted of a strong stand with a parallel frame attached to the rifle. The frame has nicely fitted joints and is so counter-balanced that the weight of the rifle only is felt when aiming, and the rifle does not receive any support from the machine. On pressing the trigger the sub-target is released electro-magnetically and instantly comes back against a needle which is controlled by the aiming of the rifle. The machine can be set by the Instructor to the greatest nicety, and it records the aim of every shot. This is certainly a most ingenious machine, and is far the best thing we have yet seen for teaching aiming.

As will be seen by an advertisement appearing in our columns to-day the Mhow Polo Tournaments have been postponed owing to the continued prevalence of plague in that station. They will probably be held, however, early in December.

In our Turf columns will be found a programme of the extra races which have been added to the Dacca January meeting.

The Gymkhana at Darjeeling was greatly marred by bad weather. There was a poor gallery and proceedings commenced an hour late owing to the rain. The first event was down to be run off in pairs, but had to be conducted separately. The tent-pegging was won by Mr. Wellesley and the tilting by Mrs. Lane Long. There were six entries for the Chatty Race. All but Mr. Pickering failed to lift their chatties on their poles owing to the slippery state of the ground: in spite of being pursued by the others, who endeavoured to break his chatty, Mr. Pickering managed to get home safely. Six ladies competed in the Aunt Sally competition. Mrs. Welsh was the best shot, hitting Mr. Gall (Aunt Sally) several times, and being declared the winner. The missiles thrown were tennis balls from a distance of fifty feet. For want of sufficient mem-sahibs in the Wand Race the coupling was as follows:—Mrs. Lane Long and Miss George, Messrs. Gall and Wellesley, Messrs. Pickering and Trench, and Messrs. Edwards and Maclaine. The last named were the only pair who kept together. The Heads and Post competition was won by Miss George and the Cockade Fight by Capt. Travers, Mr. Healing and Mr. Thompson. These two events were hidden in the mist, and the Soldiers' Race, which was to conclude the programme, had to be abandoned owing to the darkness. Mrs. Trench gave away the prizes.

The Darjeeling Horse Show on the 5th instant was largely attended, His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor being present and distributing the prizes. A nasty accident occurred in the jumping competition, Mr. Metcalfe falling over a hurdle and breaking his arm. The Championship Cup was won by Miss Shillingford's Gazelle, this pony also taking the prize in the class for Australian ponies. The prize for polo ponies was won by the Maharaja of Cooch Behar's Glory, the Maharaja's Mermaid taking first place in the class for Ladies' Hacks. The prizes for children's ponies were awarded to the Misses Bourdillon. Mr. Andrew's Bridegroom won the Arab pony prize and Mr. Hutchison's Kazee the prize for Bhutia ponies. The jumping competition was won by by Mr. Jones' Speculation.

The two gymkhanas held at Simla on the 3rd and 5th instant were brought off in perfect weather and proved very successful for which Captain Wigram deserves a word of praise. On the first day there was an attractive card of six events. The first event was a half mile handicap for ponies 14-1 and under. Mr. Milvain's Storm won easily with Flashlight second; the other runners being James, Cuba, Crazy Jane and Kilfinane. Twenty-one competitors entered for the open tent-pegging, Captain Wigram winning and Colonel Cookson second. The Ladies' Trotting Race round the course brought out eleven ladies, Mrs. Younghusband winning easily. Mrs. Couchman taking second place. The fourth event was the Hack Stakes, a Ladies' Nomination Race. This was won by Colonel Baring's Dingo ridden by Captain Wigram and nominated by Lady Elliott. Mr. Milvain's Storm, owner up, nominated by Mrs. Carthew Yorstoun, was second. The Lloyd Lindsay came next. Gentlemen and Ladies in pairs to dismount at a given spot, break two bottles, remount and finish course. Best time to win and prize to the lady. Seven couples competed, Mr. Ruthven and Miss Steven winning by 12 seconds from Captain Wigram and Mrs. Buck. The half mile race for maiden Arab and C.-B. ponies was won by Captain Wigram's Wainfleet, Captain Ruthven up, by four lengths from Colonel Brazier Creagh's Young Prince Mr. Milvain, who rode Samuel in this race, came down heavily and was lucky in escaping with a severe shaking.

The second day's programme opened with the hitting the polo ball. Captain Wigram won with Major Atkinson second. The Ladies' Nomination Race produced a good finish, only half a length separating each of the three first ponies. Mrs. Couchman's Olive ridden by Mr. Couchman, was first, Mrs. Carthew Yorstoun's Storm second, and Lady Elliott's Dingo third. Eighteen couples entered for the third event. Captain Wigram nominated by Miss Patterson was the only one to drop both balls in the bucket successfully. The race for ponies over a 600-yard course was won by Captain Armstrong's Floradora ridden by Mr. Ruthven. Picking off the polo ball for Ladies was run off in two heats. Mrs. Buck won the first and Mrs. Atkinson the second. In the finals Mrs. Buck won easily. Seventeen ladies started in the Go as You Please Race which was won by Mrs. Perkins with Miss Steward second.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—The "chase day" of the big meeting provided an excellent afternoon's sport, none the less enjoyable in that the crush was not quite so great as usual I think. The Poona Grand National attracted a field of eight and one could not fail to be struck both with quality of the horses concerned and the form in which they negociated their fences (as the result of careful schooling) as compared with previous years. A piece of cleverness on the part of the horse and brilliancy on the part of the rider was witnessed at the big fence opposite the grand stand when Pope steering a crooked course close to the obstacle greatly interfered with Veneda, who got close under his jump and as near as possible came a purler on landing, Captain Randall "saving" in a wonderful manner—fully appreciated by the cognoscenti as was his finish on a beaten horse, just getting the better of Pope by a neck for second place. Gaulme, who, like the other placed horses, fenced quite faultlessly throughout, winning somewhat comfortably. Vedette while going strong and well over-jumped himself at the big fence on the Wanowrie stretch fractured his leg and had to be put out of further suffering by a friendly bullet. Bad luck for Mr. Westropp, who had advertised the horse for sale after the race.

The respectable field of ponies on the card dwindled down to a mere trio for some reason not wholly accountable. The general idea being that owners funked Aga Shamsudin Shah's gallant little horse Funny. If this was really so the shirkers had a sad lesson of experience. Colonel Hazelton's Patrician and Mr. Fischer's Good Boy undismayed by the terrors of Funny's reputation and his very easy win over the sticks a short time previously, came to the post and prettier fencing than was exhibited by all three it is scarcely possible to imagine. Without the semblance of a mistake the trio negociated the somewhat formidable course, Good Boy showing the way most of the journey till crossing the road for the first time when Captain Randall wisely made use of Patrician's staying powers to force the pace. But it was "anybody's race" till getting on the flat for the run in when Patrician staying best won by about five lengths from the redoubtable Funny, Good Boy being about the same distance behind. It then became public property that Funny had been off colour (and his feed) for two or three days previous to the race.

Aga Shamsudin was, however, recompensed for this defeat by the victories of Swiftsure and Achilles and the wins were all the more popular since they afforded that brillant horseman Jimmy Robinson opportunities of breaking his recent run of bad luck. Rain looked like spoiling the "Cup Day," but Mr. Gray's proverbial good luck came to the rescue and the torrents of rain cleared off in good time, though it completely upset all form and left backers thoroughly mystified and gave the bookies a bean feast. In no race more so than in the Cup itself when Ali bin Talib's handsome, though hitherto disappointing colt, Connaught, who was at one time at "twenties" came out and won, with the first string of the stable third, the brace being separated by Sandow.

In the County-bred race the Booking Fraternity got another plum by the win of the Mysore outsider Philistine and Southern India scored a further success by the easy victory of the blood little Ptarmigan whom age does not stale.

Seldom have I seen in Poona a more ingeniously devised or better carried out show than the Venetian Fête at which the gallant 20th Bombay Infantry entertained their friends at the Sanjam Temple on the night of the 30th September to commemorate the capture by that distinguished regiment of Bushire in the year of grace 1856. The picturesque old temple on the river's bank was transformed into a veritable fairy land, while the show proper took place on the further bank. There the regiment accompanied by the Band performed a "Demon Drill," a most weird performance, which was followed by a lighted dumb-bell display by several hundred men, the effect of which was extraordinarily effective. Then came the piece de resistance—the attack and eventual capture of the illuminated fort of Bushire by illuminated gun boats, one of which was blown up and burnt to the water's edge. The whole performance was wonderfully clever and afforded the most obvious proof of extraordinary patience in preparation and discipline in execution and Colonel Kettlewell and his officers must have the satisfaction of feeling that they were responsible for quite one of the pleasantest and assuredly the most original entertainments of the season. Not the least interesting "side show" was a venerable old warrior of well over four score years, who was actually at the taking of the genuine fort and has stuck to his loved "pultan" ever since. He was attired in the uniform he wore at the time and surrounded by the captured Persian standard and by the colours carried by the 20th into action. Sustained on either side by two stalwart Sikhs the old gentlamen held quite a levée. It was past midnight when the guests began to leave after one final "sip and a smack" of the many good things provised.

An altogether gorgeous performance too was the Domino Ball given by the "Knights of the Round Table" at the Gymkhana—the one drawback being the absence through illness of one of the hosts and most genial of all true knights, Colonel Clery Hill, whom all wish a speedy recovery. And what time the latest of the bidden guests got back from the knightly revels to the unromantic realities of an Indian bungalow far be it from me to record.

It has been once again my good luck to be present at the Horse Show, which is now a yearly institution at the capital of the Deccan and adds one more pleasure to the enjoyable time of those of us who find ourselves in Poona for the big meeting. Last year Lieutenant-Colonel Bull was at the head of affairs, an "old parliamentary man" at such matters, and after his management the vacancy was a difficult one to follow in, no doubt, and the public owe a deep debt of gratitude to one who was good enough to step into the breach. Under such circumstances it would be ungracious to say more than that the absence of the guiding master-hand of previous years was not unapparent. The enjoyable mornings' practising (for a few days beforehand) over the jumps and driving track, which were I remember so greatly appreciated, was this year not provided and, indeed, up to the last day or so before the day of the show no one seemed to know where the exhibition was to be held. these circumstances the unadvertized alterations in the nature of the jumps gave rise to a certain amount of heart-burning and dissatisfaction. So "trappy" an obstacle as a bushy "in and out" was rather trying to horses who had never previously had opportunities of schooling over it. Nor did the substitution of a flimsy little grass hurdle for the regulation stone wall give rise to any special commendation from either competitors or public, and this is an innovation which may well be remedied in the future. The lateness in beginning on each day (more especially on the second) and the numerous long delays were somewhat wearisome, but apart from such minor details, not unnaturally consequent on a novitiate, this show must be looked on as a great success so far as the numbers and quality of the animals were concerned.

In that most popular competition of all with the public—the jumping—Mrs. Anderson's delightful little Australian mare Freda never gave the other ponies an outside chance, as in Captain Hewlett's quiet handling she jumped in faultless form. In the Horse competition on the following day Captain Young's useful cob Topthorn, without being a very stylish performer, made no errors and the decision of the Judges falling on Griseline (who had at her first effort sent the top rail of the post and rail flying) to go round again with Topthorn for first honours, gave rise to a murmur of disapprobation—indeed in the light of her serious mistake over the timber the public evidently failed to grasp how she was selected for even a place. Such, however, are the fortunes of war. Nothing struck me so much as the vast increase in the number of good performers in the harness classes as compared with the previous year. The comic element of the show was provided in the tandem class wherein one pair (and previous winners too I believe in other hands) gave an immensity of trouble more amusing to the public than I imagine gratifying to the owner. But such harness performers as Sultan, Modesty, Hero, Molly and Mary, and the ponies Pallas, Topthorn and Dolly Varden are a pleasure to look at, let alone handle, and would take a deal of beating anywhere in India. Looking back on the Show generally I find that the chief honours rest with two ladies. Mrs. C. A. Beatty (a very straight goer I believe with the local pack) had quite a field day with the prizes. With her charming Australian horse Vladimir she secured the Light Weight Hunters; the Hacks over 14-2; the Ladies' Hacks and put the final seal to these fine performances by winning the Champion prize for the Best Horse in the Show. A beautifully mannered horse shown in excellent condition and admirably handled. The same lady also won several prizes with her country-bred mare Vigilance, a well-known performer evidently, as she secured the M. F. H.'s special prize as the best hunter regularly hunted with the Poona and Kirkee Foxhounds. In the pony division Mrs. Anderson's lovely little mare Freda (already alluded to) added to her jumping prize those for Hunters 14-2 and under and Ladies' Ponies 14-2 and under, successes which were thoroughly deserved. The prize for the best Polo Pony was awarded to Major Edwards' handsome grey Arab Iron Duke. Very handy and a magnificent mover. Some very pretty team driving was afforded and greatly enjoyed by the public, and after a protracted competition, in which all but two teams were eliminated, that amateur artist, Captain Hunt, out-drove Major England's very handy and biddable team. Mrs. Younghusband distributed the prizes (and very handsome ones they were, obtained I heard from the Goldsmith and Silversmith Company) and so came to an end a very enjoyable show, for which Captain Young earned the gratitude of the sporting public.

The Naini Tal Polo Tournament proved a great success and was eventually won by the Gymkhana. Five teams entered. The first match between the 5th Dragoon Guards and the Civil Service A team resulted in a win for the latter by seven goals and two subsidiaries to one goal and three subsidiaries. In the second game the Gymkhana beat the Civil Service C team by three goals and two subsidiaries to one goal and three subsidiaries. The game between the Civil Service A and B teams ended in a win for A by eight goals and 4 subsidiaries to two goals and two subsidiaries. The finals were played on the 2nd instant and resulted in a win for the Gymkhana who beat the Civil Service A team by five goals and two subsidiaries to two goals and four subsidiaries. The winners were represented by Captain Stracey, Mr. Symons, and Major Stainforth, while Messrs. Pearson, Lash and Berthoud formed the Civilian A team. The trophy, a handsome silver bowl, was presented to the winning team by Lady Gaselee.

Last week Lord Ampthill, Hon. Victor Russell and Captain Thompson having received khubber of a tiger near Krurmund in the Nilgiris, went after him. Two beats proved unsuccessful, but the third brought out master stripes who fell to the Hon. Victor Russell.

We have received from Messrs. Lyon and Lyon, the well-known firm of gunmakers, a copy of their annual illustrated catalogue. Sportsmen will find lots to interest them in this well got-up volume in all appertaining to shooting, sporting and athletic gear.

Athletic Notes.

WE offer our congratulations to the Calcutta Football team on their success in the Bombay Rugby Tournament. They gave good exhibitions in both their games defeating the doughty Welsh Regiment by 2 goals to nil in the semi-finals, and beating the Glosters by 2 tries to nil in the finals. All played well and Martelli's place kicking in the Match vs. the Welsh was a feature.

Our Naini Tal Correspondent writes:—The Naini Tal Autumn week has been in full swing and great have been the festivities. The cricket match between the Gymkhana and the Civil Service ended in a hollow victory for the former by an innings and 31 runs. The Gymkhana went in first and assisted by useful scores from Messrs. Harris (47), Hope (41), Ian Campbell (33) and Knowles (30) took their total to 229 before they were dismissed. The Civil Service could do no better than 78 and following on had lost seven wickets for 63 at the conclusion of the day's play. The innings closed for 119 next day, Boas 31 not out and Holmes (24) being the chief scorers.

The three races for the Baker Russell Challenge Cup were sailed on the 29th and 30th ultimo and 1st instant. The Wave, with Mr. Coode at the helm, obtained five marks and carried off the Cup, with which went a handsome silver bowl presented by Mr. Aikman. The Coya, sailed by Captain Becker, was second with ten marks; the Spray sailed by Mr. Wilmer, and the Shamrock by Captain Coldstream tied for third place with eleven marks each.

The Hockey match between the Civil Service and the Gymkhana came off on the 29th ultimo and provided a very exciting game. In the first half each team scored a goal, but on crossing over the Civilians began to show their superiority and putting on two more goals ran out winners by three goals to one.

The Tennis tournament was brought off successfully. In the first round of the Ladies' Singles Mrs. H. H. Sharpe beat Miss Anson and Mrs. Lewis beat Mrs. Ingram. Mrs. Lewis beat Miss Eastwood in the semi-final and in the finals, playing against Mrs. Sharpe, Mrs. Lewis won in fine style by two sets to love. In the Gentlemen's Singles Mr. Knowles beat Mr. Holmes, Mr. Brereton beat Mr. Ingram, Colonel Anson beat Mr. Harris, but was beaten by Captain Hutchinson the next day. Mr. Brereton beat Mr. Peters, and Mr. Knowles beat Mr. Hutchinson. In the finals Mr. Brereton beat Mr. Knowles by three sets to love. In the Gentlemen's Doubles the Gymkhana beat the U.P. Police and the R. A. M. C. beat Cooper's Hill. The next day the C. S. beat Fyzabad Club, and also the I. M. S., and the Gymkhana beat the R. A. M. C. In the finals between the C. S. represented by Messrs Peters and Tretund and the Gymkhana represented by Capt. Robertson and Mr. E. Knowles the C. S. team won easily by 3 sets to love.

The Rampur Football Challenge Cup was won by St. Joseph's Seminary who beat the Band of the 5th Dragoon Guards by two goals to nil after a very hard fought and exciting game.

The regatta was held on the 1st and 3rd instant and a large attendance and glorious weather were features of the two days. The Bulrampore Pairs brought out but two entries. The Cooper's Hill pair—Messrs. Rouse and Wood coxed by Mrs. Leete beat the C. S. Boat.—Messrs Gillan and Hutchinson coxed by Miss Rothwell. The Civilians got away with the lead, but their opponents caught them and won by two lengths. In the Senior Sculls the first heat was won by Mr. Coode, who beat Captain Tillard by two lengths; in the second heat Mr. Rouse beat Mr. Hutchinson by four lengths and in the finals Mr. Coode beat Mr. Rouse by three quarters of a length. The P. and O. Paddling Race was won by the Misses Meares and Messrs. Dyce, Gale and Goodfellow. Miss Elliot (bow), Mr. Tillard (2), Mr. Courthope (3) and Miss Elliot (str) Mrs. Leete (cox) won the Mixed Fours.

Three crews entered for the Rampur Fours, which was won by the Coopers Hill boat manned by Messrs. Tillard, Coode, Rouse and Wood (str.) Mrs. Leete (cox.) The four-oared race between the Civil and the Military was won by the latter by two lengths. The crews were:—Military—Captain Ross, Captain Hodgkinson, Captain Tillard and Mr. Boyce (stroke); cox, Mrs. Porteous. Civil—Messrs. Hutchinson, Gillan, Coode, and Wood (stroke); cox, Miss Rothwell. The Mixed Double Sculls brought out two crews, Miss Elliott and Captain Tillard steered by Mrs. Porteous, winning after a hard race.

Besides these there have been subscription dances, "At Homes," and garden parties, and last, but not least, "Our Flat" performed at the Assembly Rooms to a crowded house on the 30th ultimo. The piece was a great success. Mr. Ferguson was unable at the last moment to play and his leading part was taken at short notice by Mr. Crofton Wilmer and very ably performed. Mrs. Beresford made a great success as Bella and other parts were well sustained by Mrs. Shewring and Captain Becher.

Our Bombay correspondent writes: After a fortnight's football under Association rules the Rugby tournament opened on Tuesday evening and has been continued during the week. This tournament, which is held under the auspices of the Bombay Gymkhana, is no longer the attraction which it was some years ago and comparatively little interest is taken in it. A few years since it was a very popular annual event, but of late interest in the "rugger" code has much diminished in Bombay, and now Association is all the rage. Both last year and the year before only four teams entered for the Tournament, which had been won for eight years in succession by the Welsh Regiment. From what I was told a month or so since I was in hopes that the tournament of 1903 would be the means of reviving interest in the "rugger" code in Bombay, for it was thought that the entry would be a much larger one than has been the case in recent years. These hopes have not, however, been realised, for the original entry only totalled six, and of these one, the Madras Gymkhana, scratched in consequence of not being able to raise a team to come across this side, while the "gates" have been considerably smaller than was the case with the Association Tournament. Both Calcutta and Bombay drew byes in the first round, and as a result of Madras scratching the Welsh Regiment secured a walk over. Consequently there was only one match in the first round, the competing teams being the Gloucester Regiment, from Lucknow, and a team representing the Bombay Garrison, which was mainly composed of officers. This match came off on Tuesday evening, and resulted in an easy win for the Lucknow visitors by two goals, one penalty goal, and two tries to nil. The game was far from an interesting one, being of a very scrambly nature and mainly confined to the forwards. In the matter of weight the Gloucesters held a big advantage which they might have turned to better account than they did. As it was, their forwards rarely let the ball out of scrum, and consequently their back division was given few opportunities. It was a series of forward rushes, scrums, and line-outs, good passing being conspicuous by its absence.

The following evening the Gloucester Regiment met the Bombay Gymkhana, and the result came as a surprise to most people, the homesters being beaten by eight points to three. It is true that the Gymkhana were not at full strength, but after the poor form shown by the soldiers the previous evening it was very generally thought that the homesters had a fairly easy thing on. As it turned out, however, the Lucknow team showed much improved form, and by half time it was pretty evident that the Gymkhana were a beaten team. At half time the visitors led by a try to nil, and eventually ran out winners by a goal and a try to a try. During the first fifteen minutes of the game the homesters had the best of matters, and should have scored. On a number of occasions the forwards let the ball out of the scrum, but the Gymkhana half-backs were painfully slow, and when the ball did occasionally find its way out to the three-quarters there were only feeble attempts at passing, and it always broke down before much ground had been gained. On paper the homesters had a speedy three-quarter line, and consequently the Glosters played a purely forward game, their ups making the best use of the slight advantage they held in weight, and the half-backs who were far and away a better pair than the Gymkhana two, resorting to sporting tactics, and making no attempt to open up the game. As a result play was not of a very interesting character, forward rushes, scrums, and line-outs following each other in rapid succession. The Gloster forwards lasted better than the Gymkhana eight, among whom Arnot, Moore, and Turnbull were the best. Of the home half-backs the least said the better—they were painfully slow. The visiting pair were much the smarter, and it was undoubtedly due to the advantage they held here that the Glosters won. Of the three-quarters there is practically nothing to say, except that, as usual, Ward, of the Gymkhana, was head and shoulders above the rest. Both backs were safe, and Bird, the home custodian, played a really brilliant game.

On Thursday evening we saw far and away the best game of the tournament, the opposing teams being the Welsh Regiment (the holders of the Cup) and the Calcutta F. C. In the past the Welshmen have had matters all their own way in Bombay—they first entered for the tournament in 1893 (the year after they arrived in India) and were then beaten in the semi-final by the Gymkhana by the narrow margin of one drop goal to nil. The following year, however, they brought a stronger team to Bombay and defeated the Gymkhana by six points to nil. This success they repeated the following year, and in 1902 they secured the Cup for the eighth year in succession. As a result of this long run of successes and the ease with which the Welshmen have always won, many teams fought shy of entering. This year, however, the Welshmen are not so strong as they have been in the past and at last they have had to acknowledge defeat in Bombay. The match was a splendidly contested one, and Calcutta thoroughly deserved their victory by 2 goals to nil. The game was mainly confined to the forwards, and consequently there was none of that brilliant passing among the Welsh backs that we have been accustomed to see in the past, while the Calcutta line were only set going on very few occasions. Nevertheless it was a brilliantly contested game, and there can be no doubt but what the best team won. Both full backs played a sound game, Maxwell, the Calcutta custodian, being very sure in fielding the ball, while he often gained much ground by his kicks to touch. Williams, the Welsh back, also played well, and fearlessly stopped a number of rushes by the Calcutta forwards. As to the three-quarters, neither line had very much to do. During the whole game the Welsh did not get in one good round of passing. The Calcutta quartette were only fed on a few occasions, and then made the most of their opportunities. They were a speedy lot, and ran and kicked with judgment and it was on a couple of the very few occasions that the ball was sent out to them that Calcutta's two tries were scored. Daly and Watts did not appear to be as tricky as of old, and Macdonald and Arundel were quite a match for them. The forwards were fairly evenly matched in the scrum, but in the loose the Calcutta eight proved themselves to be the speedier and cleverer pack.

The final was played off yesterday (Saturday) afternoon under conditions which were not so favourable as prevailed in the matches played earlier in the week. During the whole of the previous day and the early part of Saturday very heavy rain was falling, and consequently when the teams took the field, in the presence of a fair attendance of spectators, the ground was in a very heavy condition. Those who had seen the teams in previous matches were fairly confident that the game would be somewhat of a runaway affair for Calcutta. This did not prove to be the case, however, Calcutta only winning by six points to nil. During the first half play was mostly confined to the forwards. In the matter of weight the soldiers held the advantage, but when the ball came out into the loose the civilians soon proved themselves to be the faster and cleverer pack. It was not until play had been in progress for some time that Heilgers carried in Calcutta's first try, which Martelli failed to convert from a somewhat difficult angle. After this the Glosters made a big effort to score, but half-time arrived, the Calcutta men leading by a try to nil. Soon after the re-start the Calcutta halves attempted to open out the game and the forwards heeled out. The ball was sent out to the three-quarter, but the slippery state of the leather militated against anything like accurate passing, and, consequently, very little ground was gained. During the latter part of the game Calcutta were only playing fourteen men, owing to Macdonald, one of their halves, having had the misfortune to break one of his legs just above the ankle. Despite this, however, they attacked strongly, and eventually carried in their second try, which was not converted. This was the full extent of the score, Calcutta thus winning the match and the Tournament by two tries to nil.

The Bombay Gymkhana cricket team brought their season to a close on Thursday, with a match against the Y. M. C. A. When the season opened things looked very promising, but the hopes which were then held out have not been realised, and as has been the case for some years now, the number of games which have been lost are in excess of those won, while, as usual, a large number have been drawn. They have suffered defeat at the hands of both the Parsees and Hindus, while in the annual match with Poona they made a very miserable display. Mr. Aston, the energetic Honorary Secretary, has worked extremely hard, and the hearty thanks of all cricketers are due to him. As usual, H. Cheetham has been the mainstay of the team, he having been in excellent form with both the bat and the ball. Mr. Aston, too, has batted well, and it is a pity that he did not play more frequently in the early part of the season. Several other batsmen have rendered good service at times, but, taken all round, the batting of the Gymkhana has been weak, and there have been cases during the season in which the eleven has been dismissed for very poor totals. In the bowling department Cheetham has done good service, while Coombs has the best average. I have never seen the latter bowl better than he has done this season, and he has been of the greatest service to his side. Another promising bowler is C. G. Stileman, a new comer to the country, who I shall expect to see capture a lot of wickets next year. As to Thursday's match it resulted in a draw, the Gymkhana scoring 187 for the loss of 7 wickets (innings declared closed) and the Y. M. C. A. 93 for 3 wickets. The feature of the match was a capital innings of 73 (not out) by Aston.

Our Darjeeling correspondent writes: Darjeeling is always full during the poojah week, but this year the station is simply crowded with holiday makers from Calcutta. The slip on the railway was speedily cleared so passengers experienced but little inconvenience, the railway authorities making all arrangements for transhipment on the first day. The weather has been pretty fair, though Darjeeling at the beginning of October is never blessed with good weather. However the round of amusements was not much interfered with on this head and the week has been very full and complete. The club dances were most successful and the performances of the "Three Little Maids" and the "Magistrate" first class. Bumper houses rewarded the efforts of the A. D. S and a variety entertainment in aid of the Diocesan School Building Fund found the Town Hall crowded to suffocation. Tennis tournaments, Cricket matches, the sports of the two schools, the Races, and the horse show have all contributed to the enjoyment of those on pleasure bent. On the 2nd instant the walking matches were brought off, the competitions being most popular. The course was from Sonada along the Cart Road and vid the Mackenzie and Auckland Roads finishing on the chourasta, a distance of somewhat over ten miles. The approaches to the finish and the chourasta itself were crowded, everyone being most enthusiastic. The soldiers' walk was won by Carolan in 1hr. 40mins. 30secs. Peckman second in 1hr. 42mins. 45secs. Bailey third in 1hr. 43mins. Birch fourth in 1hr. 43mins. 10secs. Watson fifth in 1hr. 45mins. The last man completed the distance in 1hr. 55mins. Sixteen started in the Civilians' walk viz. Ansell, Hefferman, Carey, Oakley, Tiffi, Armstrong, Barrett, Birch, Dunne, Phillips, Moffatt, Pedler, Shea, Apcar, Rowlands and Clarke. Dunne was first in 1hr. 39mins. 36secs. Armstrong second in 1hr. 41mins. 37secs. Barrett third in 1hr. 45mins. 21secs. Rowlands fourth in 1hr. 45 mins. and 55secs. and Birch fifth in 1hr. 47 mins. 35secs. The Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Bourdillon were present at the finish, His Honour distributing the prizes to the successful competitors.

The Colombo Rowing Club held their Annual General Meeting at the Boat House, Slave Island, on the 29th ultimo, Mr. G. Hathorn, the President, occupying the chair. The accounts were passed and the election of office-bearers proceeded with. Mr. Hathorn and Mr. Julius were re-elected President and Vice-President and Captain respectively. The following were elected to serve on the Committee:—Messrs. J. H. Garrett, A. Alers Hankey, W. T. Highton, J. Scott, M. Simpson and E. R. Williams. Mr. Hanna was re-elected Honorary Secretary and Mr. Porteous re-elected Honorary Treasurer.

A gash or cut in a tyre should at once be attended to, otherwise the cut will become distended and perhaps difficult of repair. It should be at once plugged up with an effective repairing composition such as the Dunlop cover stopping. A portion of it inserted into a large wound in the tyre forms a homogeneous mass, and effectually seals it, preventing the cut from becoming further distended, and preserving the fabric from the deteriorating effects of damp. It is indispensable to cyclists and motorists.

The finals in the Walter Locke Football Challenge Shield at Rangoon resulted in a win for the Royal Fusiliers from Mandalay who beat the 70th Co. R. G. A. by a goal to nil.

G. L. Jessop, the Gloucestershire cricketer, and L. R. Roose, the Stoke and Welsh goalkeeper, have signed forms to play football with the Reading team in Southern and Western League matches.

By order of the King an extensive cricket ground is being laid out in the private grounds of Windsor Castle for the Royal Household Cricket Club. New turf is being laid down, and a handsome pavilion is to be built and furnished; in fact, the ground is to be made as complete as possible.

General Notes.

WE are glad to learn that Major-General Barrow is recovering fast. He left Bombay last week en-route to England on three months' privilege leave.

His Excellency the Viceroy, accompanied by Colonel the Hon. E. Baring and attended by Captains Baker Carr and Keighly left Simla on Friday, the 25th ultimo, and will return on the 15th instant.

We regret to hear that Mr. J. B. Cecil of the firm of T. S. Cecil and Co. of this city was killed at home on the 4th ultimo. The unfortunate gentleman when biking in a narrow lane in North Wales, collided with a trap, the shaft of the latter piercing his side.

A carriage accident took place at Simla on the 1st instant. A brake with two horses belonging to Lord Kitchener when being exercised went over the khud near Boileaugunge Bazaar. The native driver and one horse was killed and the other horse seriously injured.

Calcutta theatre goers will hardly recognize the Theatre Royal which has been renovated by its proprietor, Mr. Stephen. The stage has been refloored and enlarged and the auditorium greatly improved. Punkahs and ventilators render it cool and comfortable. Mr. Stephen is to be congratulated on his enterprise.

The officers of the Government of India P. W. Department secretariat are giving a farewell dinner on the 21st October at the United Service Club, Simla, to Messrs. Maclean, Director-General of Telegraphs, Spring, Secretary of the Railway Branch, Madras, and Walker, Under-Secretary in the General Branch of the P. W. Department, all of whom are about to retire from the department.

A really good story is told of a bookmaker, who, having been "hit" very hard, was in want of another "thou." to settle on the following Monday.

Knowing his wife's diamonds would easily realise that amount at "Uncle's," he accordingly "borrowed" them and proceeded thither, when the following dialogue took place:—

Husband: "I want you to lend me £1,000 on this suite of diamonds. You can knock out the stones and replace them with imitation ones for a short time."

Uncle: "Very sorry, sir, but we did that for your good lady the other week!"

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 18th September 1903.

SIR NORMAN LOCKYER'S plea for an adequate supply of Universities, put forward in his presidential address to the British Association, has been attracting a good deal of attention. I did not refer to it last week for the perhaps insufficient reason that it struck me as Utopian if not slightly wild; Sir Norman's method of presenting his case perhaps led the average person to raise his eye-brows, for the parallel between a strong navy and a multitude of Universities does not seem quite justified by the purpose of each. Do we really want larger opportunities of Higher Education in this country? Sir Norman Lockyer asked for a trifle of eight more Universities twenty-four millions sterling for their endowment: these increased facilities for taking degrees were, he was understood to think, indispensable to the maintenance of England's place among the nations, commercially speaking. When the first of that supply of Universities is founded and the curriculum made plain to us, it will be time to criticise. Presently I fail to see that more Universities would strengthen our place among the nations more than a few new training stables would improve the stamina of the British thoroughbred. Extraordinary thing, isn't it, the number of intelligent people who believe a donkey will turn into a horse if you keep him long enough in a stable.

The political clouds have been brewing up all the week and this morning to pursue the simile, comes a flash of lightning that makes us blink. Mr. Chamberlain resigns. The position is of the most curious. Mr. Chamberlain believes that changes in our fiscal policy are necessary: but recognising that it would not be expedient for the Government to press them, resigns. Mr. Balfour believes that changes in our fiscal policy are necessary: but recognising that it would not be expedient for his Government to press them, doesn't resign. Regarded only as a political stroke Mr. Chamberlain's resignation is a move so bold that his enemies must be surprised into respect: but is it a political move? Is it not quite of a piece with his severance from the G. O. M. and with his whole career? If the country could not follow Chamberlain there was only one thing Chamberlain could consistently do, and he has done it. He cannot fail to gain enormously in public confidence by laying down office, and his resignation will do more for the cause he has made his own than all the speeches ever made. The sensation caused two days ago by Mr. Balfour's pamphlet has been quite eclipsed. That pamphlet was sold out two hours after Longmans opened their office in the morning and there was a queue of people on the pavement outside, fifty yards long, waiting for it.

But the Upper Ether of politics is not for me; nor for you. What has agitated me to-day more than all the fiscalities (?) in this little, little world of mine is the question, what degree of intimacy justifies gastronomic experiment upon a friend? The action of the memsahib gives rise to this nice conundrum which in marital language would be expressed "Who the deuce dare you ask to dinner when you can't trust the cook?" Ah me! Aforetime was hour and place when one asked people in to dinner and recked naught of these matters: when dinner for four under the elastic conjury of the cookhouse expanded into a sufficiency for ten: which dinner if bad was a matter of course; if good a matter for envious gratulation. When—but pardon; I feel the influence of the mofussil bungalow closing about me and realise that this is not the point of view he who may read me will adopt.

An announcement in Saturday's Times caused a mild sensation. "C. R. Warwick" wrote from the Midland Hotel, Manchester, to say that he, in the sacred cause of science, had liberated 14 healthy rattle snakes at Blarney Castle, Co. Cork. Whether this letter was a hoax (whose point it must be allowed is not very clear) or the record of a real achievement by a real idiot has not yet transpired: and having regard to the reception accorded Mr. Warwick's announcement by people less scientifically minded than himself, it is unlikely we shall ever hear the truth. The Cork folks perhaps need not greatly disturb themselves; he were a robust rattlesnake who survived a week of such weather as has been lately vouchsafed the south of Ireland in common with the rest of these islands.

Items indicative of the effects of Thursday night's storm followed fast on one another's heels during the early days of the week. London escaped fairly easily; a few big elms in Kensington Gardens came down, and a few more were discrowned leaving unsightly trunks. In some streets, broken slates and tiles were at a discount and a few overhead wires were brought down: but on the whole we have nothing much to complain about. Those curiously constituted people who for fun go down (by excursion train) to the sea in ships had a rough time of it. A hundred of these enterprising excursionists left Eastbourne in a shilling steamer for Hastings on Thursday afternoon; the steamer could not come near Hastings pier so pitched her seasick way back to Eastbourne; it was then become too rough to get alongside there and the hundred miserables felt no firm ground till they got to Dover at 6 A.M. on Friday.

Soldiers are growling loudly and as it seems to the outsider with fair reason. A few months ago the War Office with great flourish of trumpets announced certain concession in the matter of necessary mess furniture; but of course it could not possibly give anything with one hand unless they took something away with the other. Heretofore when out on manœuvres officers have been supplied with tent-boards which can hardly be considered a luxury in this country, more especially in such weather as this. Some wiseacre decided that officers must supply tent-boards this year at their own expense. The result has been that men elected to sleep in the mud unless they would apply for a medical certificate. For myself I think I would rather pay the required eighteen pence demanded for tent-boards than contract rheumatism; but my sympathies are entirely with the soldier who is the victim of these idiotic "economies."

It is far too soon to guess what, if any, will be the outcome of the War Commission's Report. From all one hears there is a tendency on the part of soldiers to favourably regard the establishment of an Army Board on the lines of the Admiralty Board. By the way the four massive volumes containing the evidence and Report are in enormous request; Blue Books are seldom light reading, but I am told that the evidence sheds such illuminating side lights on incidents of the War that it is better reading than any novel. I ordered a copy of the Report weeks ago but cannot get it; "the foreign demand has been so great." I believe it. How our potential enemies must hug themselves when they read Sir Henry Brackenbury's story of peddling ineptitude and folly in high places!

One definite result there has been. They who study the Gazette must have noticed the heavy crop of militia resignations latterly. This is the outcome, I am told on reliable authority, of Lord Roberts' statement that the militia officers in South Africa were a continual source of anxiety to him. Also I am told the Gazette does not represent the real state of affairs; that so indignant are the militiamen that more resignations have been sent in than the authorities can accept without literally demanding the "old constitutional force" of officers. I give figures for what they may be worth; he said, this Man Who Ought to Know that over six hundred resignations are awaiting the acceptance of those who shrink from accepting them. Uneasy lies the head that wears its hat in the War Office.

The publisher of "The Burden of Proof or England's Debt to Sir Redvers Buller" evidently does not find that this 120 pages of special pleading moves off with celerity; as one or two parcels of books which have come in from different booksellers lately have contained a copy of it with "Price Sixpence" crossed out and no reference to it in the accompanying bill. It is not for the man in the street to sit in judgment on Sir Redvers Buller, or any other General but I do not think the fulsome laudation of the "average observer" who writes this book is likely to win admirers for its subject; more especially when the writer is at pains to fall foul of everyone else who was, or was supposed to be, inimical to Sir Redvers.

"Melo-farce," I take it, just about describes Mr. Cecil Raleigh's The Flood Tide produced last night at Drury Lane. There was a publican and a sinner named Champion (Mr. J. H. Barnes) who had made enough money out of his public house to let his son Jack (Mr. Robert Minster) accept his commission in the 1st Royals (!) Jack won his V. C. as a private, but his soldierly qualities do not save him from being ragged: had Jack possessed a little more common sense he would have refrained from flaunting pa's pub. in his comrades' faces. Jack has sound financial reason to venerate the house of his birth: the others naturally haven't. This is the plot as far as I could follow it: the story, like some rivers, loses itself in the illimitable scenery. Four acts of three scenes each, and such scenes! Drury Lane really out-sceneried itself in the Flood Tide. Real deck and furnishings S. S. Bolivian: Real Palmarium, Metropole Hotel, Brighton: Real Ragging Scene; Real Railway Platform: Real Train; Real Paddock (Kempton Park) Five Horses; Real Flood, and so on. Jack Champion married his commanding officer's daughter in the end, but the story is the last thing one thinks of. There is a lot of good comic business for which Mr. Weedon Grossmith as a commercial traveller masquerading as millionaire is chiefly responsible. Indeed if we were less weighed down with scenery and relieved of a good deal of washy sentimentality, the thing would be a rattling farce with the clever fooling for which Mr. Raleigh has found so much scope. He seems to have laid himself out to burlesque the regular scaled pattern Drury Lane play and to have pulled up short when confronted by a sentimental situation as something too sacred to be touched: the result is a rather curious agglomeration of matters that were assuredly never meant to be threaded on the same string. It was received with rapture, however, and after all that is the main thing.

My Lady Molly was two hundred nights old on Wednesday. Mr. H. H. Davies' Cousin Kate reached its hundreth night this week and is going strong as indeed it deserves. I went to see the piece again a few nights back and liked it even better on improved acquaintance. The same playwright's Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace takes a fresh lease of life at the New next week. Mr. Haddon Chambers' The Golden Silence is promised for next Tuesday at the Garrick. J. M. Barrie's Little Mary, a play for which he has had much difficulty in finding a title, appears at Wyndham's on Monday; and a week later Pinero's Letty is to make her curtsy at the Duke of York's. This last is described as a drama in four acts and an epilogue; a "play with a purpose" probably. A new American Comic Opera is billed for 1st October at the Avenue, too, so you see there is plenty of work in store for the conscientious first nighter. By the way Mdme Rejane returns to us in October

The "Passive Resister" seems to practically monopolise the attention of the Police Courts in London and the country and the "movement" is growing. At Willesden on Monday the bench had to deal with 300 cases. The daily average at courts in country towns averages about 30 cases. If one could feel that "passive resistance" were not simple and solely organised political agitation where it is not adopted as a means of cheap personal advertisement, one might take the sorrows of the pseudo-martyrs more seriously. There is more comedy than tragedy in the business: and when an otherwise sane magistrate appears in answer to summons in his own court and refuses to enter the dock, we reach the domain of farce. The only people who profit by the "movement" are the auctioneers who do their work under police protection.

Chaos, purposeful chaos, is before Buckingham Palace: the works preparatory to building the memorial arcade, or whatever the correct architectural term may be, are in progress. A slice has been pinched out of the top of St. James's Park and earthworks are being carried thirty or forty feet into the lake to carry the new public road from Buckingham Gate into Birdcage Walk. Also a semi-circular piece, marked now by displaced lengths of iron railing, is to be bitten out of the Green Park to accommodate the corresponding curve of the arcade. It is difficult for the untaught eye to detect any flaw in the stone courses which have already been laid, even with the aid of the public design.

Yet another novelty in automatic machines. On the Underground yesterday I discovered a new machine which supplies you with a pocket handkerchief, plain a penny, hemstitched (whatever that may be) two pence; also cake of Best Old Brown Windsor a penny. The pocket-handkerchief idea is by no means a bad one, having regard to the frequency with which that indispensable gets itself left behind; but the scheme opens up a wonderful vista of possibilities. The time approaches, no doubt, when we shall be able to buy a complete outfit in railway platform automatic machines. It would not be half a bad plan to apply the penny in the slot system to the fire alarm post: it would help to make an end of the street amusement of false alarms, which are epidemic from time to time.

Mr. Spencer made his air-ship journey yesterday from the Crystal Palace. For about quarter of an hour he was tacking and yawing high above St. Paul's to the admiration of stationary traffic and crowded streets, but he evidently could not get the machine round to face the wind and had to continue his flight to Barnet where he lighted in safety.

Mr. Whitaker Wright made his eighth and final appearance at the Guildhall yesterday: as you no doubt know at this moment, he "reserved his defence" and was released on bail to appear at the Old Bailey. Counsel for the prosecution wanted that matters of bail to be investigated, but the point was not pressed. The action of the prosecution was rather unusual I understand, but then the case is not an ordinary one.

ELEPHANT CATCHING 35 YEARS AGO.

IN years gone by, before the Government of India had organized its present large kheddah establishments for the capture of wild elephants, many zemindars and elephant merchants in the eastern districts of Bengal kept trained koonkee elephants and annually took out Government licenses for carrying on their operations in Assam, one of their favourite hunting grounds being about the Garo Kills to the east of the Brahmapootra river. In those days I used to shoot a good deal on the churs of the above river and frequently had several of these koonkee elephants out with me for that purpose, and having seen a great deal of elephants and learnt to handle and drive them myself. I was greatly interested in the tales told me by the koonkee mahouts of their method of catching wild elephants, and determined to try and see something of this sport myself. Consequently, hearing one cold season that six koonkees belonging to a couple of zemindars of my district, whom I knew well, were to be sent across the Brahmapootra to catch elephants, I got three weeks' leave and arranged to go with them. Giving the party four days' start to enable them to get to the river before me, I dawked out the 45 miles and crossed with them at Chilmari, where I left my horses. I had brought only a pal with me for the sake of lightness, and as the koonkees were all heavily laden with chains, huge ropes and the cooking utensils of the party, besides food supplies, I had with me two baggage elephants, on one of which my servant rode with my pal and traps, while I rode the other, a small pad elephant. On the east of the big river we passed through dense jungles and over hills, and pitched our camp about 12 miles inland in a lovely valley, down the centre of which ran a small hill stream, while on either side, about two miles distant, were hills thickly wooded to their very summit with deep glens running up them, and here and there a small waterfall. Beyond these to the east still higher hills with precipitous rocky cliffs were visible, and altogether the scenery was wild and striking. There were no human habitations nearer than the river we had crossed, and there was not a sound in the forest. As we reached our camping ground about 3 P.M., the stillness around was most impressive till broken by the chatter of the men unloading their elephants. Fuel and charrah having been collected and the elephants tethered in a circle, my pal and the men's gunny shelters were erected in the centre. At sunset the valley became very chilly and I was glad to get into my warm bed after an early dinner. As the night drew on I listened to the distant howls of the jackals and the barking of deer, but gradually fell asleep to be awoke, however, very shortly by a disturbance among the elephants. Some large animal having passed near one of them for some time they kept on trumpeting and screaming, but presently settled down to shredding and chewing their charrah. At sunrise I was up and eagerly enquiring of the men what was to be the order of the day. It was settled that four koonkees were to be sent out in different directions to search for traces of wild elephants, and as shooting was strictly prohibited lest any elephants that might happen to be in the neighbourhood should be frightened off, I decided on going out on one of the koonkees, taking some sandwiches and cold tea with me. We came across several places which had evidently been used as shelters by wild elephants, the trees having been knocked down and a space about 30 or 40 yards each way more or less cleared, but the charrah and dung lying about were all old and it was evident no elephants had been there lately. We explored valley after valley for miles round and all returned to camp at evening unsuccessful and thoroughly tired out with our long day's trudge. We had seen tracks of elephants, tiger, deer and pig in abundance, and had put up several deer and pig, but there was nothing to show that any elephants were there about the neighbourhood. We, however, searched again during the next two days, when it was thought advisable to remove the camp farther east, and on the fourth morning we started for a spot 10 miles off, known to some of the mahouts, who three years before had made a most successful haul of elephants there. Crossing the first range of hills and winding in and out among others, we camped about midday on a small hillock clear of jungle about two miles from the nearest of the higher hills before mentioned. The scenery here was bolder and even more striking than that at our last camp. In front was a sheer rocky precipice probably between 300 and 400 feet high, down the broken rugged face of which fell a sheet of water, a clear leap from the top of fully 100 feet, it then broke into several small streams, rushing round and over boulders of rock, and again re-uniting lower down in one vast volume, it finally fell into a deep pool at the foot of the hill. The wonted stillness of the forest was continuously broken by the noise of this waterfall, which after a short time became to me oppressively monotonous and wearying. The camp was pitched and charrah collected for the elephants, and the men settled down to prepare their own food, when suddenly towards sunset we were all startled to hear the shrill piping of an elephant apparently not far off. It was too late to think of going after him then, but the circumstance raised our hopes for the next morning, though the night passed quietly without any further signs. Before dawn the men had cooked and partaken of a meal and were ready by 7 A.M. for a start, my two pad elephants being left in camp to collect charrah for the party. Each koonkee had brought out at least three men and four some and only two being required on each animal for the purposes of the chase, some 15 men, including my servant remained in camp. The koonkees were almost invariably females, as male elephants would usually fight with other males which they might be employed in catching. They went out barebacked, a single rope usually used for fastening the guddees being passed round their necks, along the ridges of their backs and then round and under their tails. Over these a quantity of very thick strong ropes were wound round and round their girths to be handy for fastening any elephants that might be caught Two of the koonkees had small guddees and instead of ropes each carried on these a thick chain, about 20 feet long, which being very heavy they were only to follow the party, keeping them as far as possible in sight without joining in the actual chase. The men employed on the koonkees on these occasions were not their regular mahouts, but professional elephant-catchers called "Phoondaites." One sat on the neck of the koonkee and the other crouched on the back near the tail, which he sat facing, steadying himself by holding on to the tail rope, and each carried an iron "Gujbagh." All koonkee elephants had raws established on either side of the root of the tail, this being the place where the nearmost "Phoondaite" constantly prodded his animal to force the pace. I, of course, could not hope to keep my seat on the bare back of a koonkee and had therefore had a very small guddee. 3 feet × 2½ feet, specially prepared, which was girthed for me on a very fine animal named "Paban Peary." The mahouts and Phoondaites had been greatly opposed to my going with them and had strongly objected to their masters on the subject, but promises of baksheesh and a subsequent friendly bearing towards them on the marches out had put matters right. On starting we moved leisurely and silently along the valley northwards, constantly on the alert for any signs of the animals we were after, and about 10 A.M. heard a short distance ahead of us the sound of branches being broken, a slight wind was blowing in our faces and our animals began raising their trunks and sniffing the breeze, their pace was slackened and we moved very cautiously. One koonkee was sent on to look about and her Phoondaites shortly signalled that they had sighted a herd. When we came up we saw about 100 yards ahead, a middle sized tusker and two large females with a small butcha, they were quietly stalking along; sometimes grazing on the long grass and sometimes pulling down and stripping the bark off the branches around them. The Phoondaites now arranged among themselves that my animal and another koonkee named "Luchmi" were to take the tusker while the other two took the female with the butcha. We then moved on two to the right and two to the left, but the herd did not perceive us till we were within 50 yards of them, the two females then shuffled off with the butcha to the right trumpeting loudly, the tusker, however, stood still eyeing us and endeavouring to get our scent with his raised trunk; he stood perfectly still and allowed Luchmi to come within 3 feet of him when he suddenly wheeled round and with a shrill pipe rushed off after the two females, which in the meantime were being closely followed by the other koonkees and we started in pursuit of him at our best pace for some distance. The jungle was tolerably clear and the ground good, but gradually the tusker in his endeavours to shake us off led into broken ground and ravines, when it was as much as I could do to hold on at all and at the same time dodge the trees and shrubs. We rushed among our quarry, turning to the right headed for a small stream to the east which we splashed through at a great pace and scrambled up the opposite bank, we after him; here we lost sight of the other elephants, which had run on southwards and the tusker continued his flight at a furious pace, helter skelter, through or over everything in his way, apparently utterly regardless in his panic where he went, we following about 20 yards off, the Phoondaites incessantly plying their "Gujbaghs" all the time to urge their animals to greater exertions. Though this appeared to be cruel work, it was necessary. After running some 4 miles the tusker appeared to be tiring and a bit blown, and we gradually got nearer to him. Suddenly he stopped dead short, turning half round towards us with his trunk in the air: we almost ran past him, but our well-trained animals were round in a moment, one on each side of him and began feeling him all over with their trunks when he returned their advances, which he apparently liked and began coquetting with them. The two earnest Phoondaites who had each undone and let down an end of his thick rope, then quietly slid down behind their own animals and getting under them each slipped a noose of his rope round a front leg of the tusker, who unable to see the men tried to feel with his trunk to find out what was wrong with his feet, and to shuffle them about, but "Paban Peary" at once twisted her trunk round his and pulled it aside. The tusker appeared to like her attentions and stood still. He had, however, managed to shuffle his left foot free and it was only again noosed with some difficulty, in the meantime another thick rope had been deftly slipped over his neck by "Luchmi's" driver, it being fastened a few feet lower down to the other rope girthed round her. While the koonkees engaged his attention the Phoondaites carried their ropes fastening his feet to a tree about 15ft. off to which they secured them. "Luchmi" then began dragging at the rope round the tusker's neck while "Paban Peary" pushed him towards the tree from behind with her forehead, what with coaxing, pulling and pushing they managed in half an hour to get him up to about 6 ft. of the tree and the ropes, which had been gradually shortened by the Phoondaites as he approached, were then again secured by them as they hid behind the trunk, carefully keeping out of the tusker's sight. They and the koonkees then withdrew a few paces. The tusker at first stood perfectly still for a short time looking at them, and then made a sudden rush forward, but was brought up short on to his knees by the ropes round his feet; he struggled violently but to no purpose, the stout ropes held well and presently one of the elephants with a chain came up and the three koonkees were then again brought up to him and gradually, though with much difficulty, the chain was fastened round one of his hind legs and secured at the end to a tree. The koonkee that had first arrived was then despatched back to the camp to bring up the rest of the party, it was then midday, but they all turned up by evening, and I was glad to get a bath in the river close at hand for I was aching all over and felt a good deal bruised with the violent ride I had had. As I sat in front of my tent door some 25 yards from the tusker, it was most amusing and at first rather exciting to watch his constant violent struggles to free himself, for it appeared to be impossible that the ropes could hold him. He would first rush forward, almost coming down on his head when brought up short by the ropes, and then getting up he would strain backwards on them with all his might. When he got very violent "Paban Peary" was brought up carrying in her trunk a good thick branch about 6ft. long with which she proceeded to belabour his sides, he at first turned partly round and attempted to get at her but she soon quieted him for the time. Throughout the night he trumpted and squealed loudly, struggling periodically and some of the men had to watch him constantly. He was given no food that night or the next day, and the second evening he was to all appearances considerably subdued. On the second morning some charrah was thrown to him, the men could not go near him except on a koonkee, and even then he would try and pull them off her back, but the koonkee would always foil him by seizing his trunk with her own. The day after the capture one of the Phoondaites of the other two elephants found us out and said they also had succeeded in running down the big female with the butcha; they had had a comparatively short run as she had been greatly impeded by her anxiety for her young one. She was tied up about 2 miles off, so some spare men were sent to the spot as it was necessary to have men constantly at hand. I also rode across on a pad elephant to have a look at the pair. The mother was a very fine animal standing over 8ft. high, heavily built with a broad flat back and short thick legs which are the peculiarities of the Assam breed. The butcha, a male animal, was only about 3½ft. high and the Phoondaite considered him to be about 4 or 5 months old. He was a most comical little beast, constantly on the move, his legs and trunk seemed to be never still for a moment. It was impossible to get up to him as he always evaded all attempts by rushing under his mother's stomach while she looked savagely round at any one who approached. Both mother and butcha were continually trumpeting and squealing. As nothing further could be done for a few days towards taking more elephants, no great harm could result from the reports of a gun, I therefore amused myself the first day by taking a pad elephant along the crest of a spur leading up with a tolerably easy slope to the top of the high hills which overlooked our second camp, I there found myself on a plateau of some extent, beyond which were higher hills from which ran along a rocky bed, a considerable stream, the drainage of the higher hills, terminating in the waterfall before mentioned, from the side of this latter I had a magnificent view of the surrounding country. Tier upon tier of thickly wooded hills broken by head lands and ravines, with undulating and partially wooded valleys between, and innumerable streams glistening in every direction, and the Brahmapootra like a silver streak miles away westward in the distance, the country beyond checkered by ever varying masses of light and shade, and again beyond all the dim blue horizon. The fall itself was a grand sight, not often seen or to be easily forgotten, the immense volume of water as it fell on the rocks 100ft. below threw up clouds of spray which had a most beautiful effect, further down the water breaking over and between the rocky boulders rushed madly on to the pool below, from which it overflowed and ran down the valley over a rocky bed forming further on the river near our then camp. Turning homewards I put up on my way down a fine young boar, which I shot and took on to camp for the men, all of whom being Rajbunshees appreciated the flesh On the succeeding day I sketched our captives in various attitudes of struggling, as also the camp, and shot a few partridge for the pot. On the fourth day after the capture, about 9 A.M., some of the men while out for charrah with one of the konkees came across fresh tracks of and then sighted a herd of elephants quietly browsing along the banks of the stream some two miles from camp, and information being sent in all the koonkees were at once got ready and started. I again rode "Paban Peary" as she was by far the easiest mover of all our animals. We came on the herd about half a mile from camp and found there was one large male, a muckna, with five females; they unfortunately scented us at some distance and became very uneasy; though they had not then seen us, they began trumpeting to each other, piping and squealing, then suddenly turning round made off at a great pace. After going some 300 yards the muckna swung round and faced us, and the females also pulled up a few paces further on. We were then advancing as fast as possible; the muckna had his head raised high with his trunk in the air, and his ears spread out and looked as if he intended to charge; it was an anxious moment, but our koonkees continued to advance rapidly and when we were within 25 yards of him the Phoondaites shouted and he turned to the left and bolted, trumpeting loudly, the females following him. As we went along it was arranged that the muckna, which appeared to be a sulky and probably a dangerous brute, was to be left alone, and two of the females were singled out and told off to the paired koonkees. The one selected for "Paban Peary" and "Luchmi" was a very large handsome brute and evidently a good mover, the other was a somewhat smaller animal. The Phoondaites at once endeavoured to separate them from the herd and at last succeeding in heading them both away westward up the valley, the rest of the herd continuing their course to the east The two females kept pretty well together, now one in front and then the other, as each in turn was impeded by obstacles. Nothing stopped them, over stones and rocks, through grass and scrub jungles, between and under trees, they dashed along, and I had some very narrow escapes from branches. The koonkees, however, managed usually to avoid them as far as possible under the guidance of their drivers. Faster and faster we sped along mile after mile when both the wild elephants made a sudden rush to the right and broke back over nearly the same country we had come along, but by this time they were evidently getting done up, and we gradually got nearer to them. Presently we found ourselves at the river near the foot of the waterfalls, the elephants dashed in and then kept along the bed for some distance, when suddenly the one my koonkee was after stopped short and faced us, but as soon as we got within a few feet of her she wheeled about and was off again, but was evidently quite blown. The other elephant had scrambled out of the river and again dived into the jungle, followed by her pursuers. In the meantime our quarry had stumbled against a snag in the river bed and before she could recover herself the two koonkees were on either side of her handling her trunk and sides: she was too tired to resist, and the Phoondaites quickly slid down and slipped their ropes round her feet. On this she attempted to bolt, but "Luchmi" shuffled in front of her, and she was only able to edge a few feet nearer the bank of the river, which just there was some 8 ft. high; there was fortunately a large tree handy immediately under it, and the ropes were quickly secured to it. She now remained quite passive with the koonkees standing on each side and touching her; she tried frequently to feel the ropes about her feet, or to get at one or the other of the drivers, but the koonkees always interrupted her trunk with their own. From our position with relation to the waterfall, we judged we were then only about 3 miles from camp, so one of the Phoondaites was despatched there to bring more men and my pad elephant. He came back with them in a couple of hours and as I was then thoroughly tired out and very hungry, I returned to camp leaving the men to secure the captive with which they would have to remain out for the night. When I got to camp nothing had been heard of the rest of the party; they, however, came in after dark and said that one of their koonkees having got the pointed root of a tree into its foot was lamed, and they had therefore been obliged to abandon the chase, so I turned in after an early dinner. The following morning I had a look at the tusker tied up a few feet from my pal he had been very noisy at night, but was taking kindly to his food and apparently making the best of his situation, but was of course not yet safe to approach. I then went to take a look at the animal we had caught the previous day: she was a regular beauty, standing about 8½ft. high with a grand forehead and legs. The men had had rather a rough time of it with her during the night as she had become very obstreperous and had had to be well thrashed, when I came up, however, she was quite quiet. In the afternoon I rode over to see the other female and butcha, both were considerably tamed, but of course still unapproachable and the mother had taken to eating the charrah supplied to her. I remained with the camp two days longer shooting and sketching, but as my leave was then drawing to a close I had to leave the party and return to my station Some 2½ months later they all returned also, having, however, caught only one more animal, a small female. I saw them all march along, the captured animals each tied by a rope round the neck to a koonkee and though they had not till then submitted to being ridden, they allowed themselves to be handled, and were quietly disposed to the Phoondaites who, however, never approached them without having a koonkee close at hand. One tusker, two large and one small female and a butcha amply paid the koonkee owners, the animals being all sold at the following Sonepore Fair by which time they had been broken in and fetched good prices Previous to the Bhootan war of 1864, elephants had been very numerous and very cheap throughout the Eastern Districts, Rs. 200 to Rs. 300 being an ordinary price then for good animals, and every petty landholder had one or more, but during the war from neglect and hard work there was a great mortality among both the Government commissariat animals and those lent to or hired by Government, so much so that prices rose at once and ranged from Rs. 400 for a small butcha 4ft. high, to Rs 1,500 or Rs. 2,000 for a large animal and these prices continue to rule to the present day. The large hauls made by Government kheddahs during late years and the prohibitive charges have completely done away with the old method of catching wild elephants, and it is, I believe, now seldom if ever employed.

RAJAH.

CARE OF TACKLE.

THERE are some phases, and occasionally unpardonable ones, in the general "make up" of an angler, which usually indicate his temperament and the lines he is apt to follow when he goes a-fishing and in the care of his tackle. There is the impetuous, enthusiastic angler who dashes into the planning of his first outing, and into the stream when he gets there with the glow of the sport radiating, as it were, from every pore of his body, thoughtless of every condition except that of being afield and of catching fish. His reel, rod, and water gear are all awry, for he has given little thought or attention to his tackle during the winter, and is often compelled to buy a new outfit, though the old one would, with care, have lasted several seasons. One of his companions on the outing, it may be, is of a more sedate turn of mind but not less sensitive to the enjoyment of his environment and pastime. One of his striking characteristics may be noted in the extreme care with which he tests his leaders before attaching them to the reel line, and the precise lining of the rings and guides of his rod. His entire impedimenta is in perfect order; the click of his fly reel emits no jar or rattle, but is perfect in cadence and in smoothness of action. His rod is straight as an arrow, and its ferrules are bright, and fit into each other with exactness, never becoming metal bound. He has taken good care of his tackle during the off months of winter; and it would be well if all anglers followed his example, not only because of the economy of it, but in the increased pleasure of a projected fishing trip. For the benefit of the careless ones, a few practical directions on the care of tackle are here given.

The Rod—A well-made split bamboo or wood rod should last for years if proper care is taken of it. Each joint, after a day's fishing, should be wiped dry very carefully and bent into shape, if it has a set, before putting away; and a drop or two of sperm oil should be rubbed over the rod before going out again with it. When laying a rod aside for the season, it should be carefully examined and all damages repaired; the ferrules and bands should be thoroughly cleaned and new plugs fitted to the joints. Take the rod apart, wipe the joints dry, and lay them away in their case in an apartment where the temperature will be dry and uniform, not over 50 degrees. If a case is used do not tie the strings or bands too tightly; this would be likely to bend the tip and second joints. Under no circumstances let the rod stand near the chimney or furnace flue, and the other extreme of cold in a garret or outbuilding should be avoided. Changes of temperature destroy the pliancy and stiffness of a rod. To insure the continued equal distribution of strength the rod should be laid flat on the floor or a shelf, instead of being stood on end in a corner, and under no condition should it be left jointed and hung on pegs.

The Reel—Should be taken apart, thoroughly cleaned, and then oiled slightly. Put the parts together, and place the reel in a dry drawer or closet of moderate temperature

Lines—All lines should be reeled off and stretched from end to end on a sunny morning, and left in the air for a few hours They should then be overrun lightly with a bit of woollen cloth or chamois to remove any taint of mildew or other matter, and then be wound upon the reel, but not too tightly. If frayed portions are discovered, the line should be condemned, and the good parts kept for miscellaneous uses, which will be found frequent enough.

Leaders—Will keep for years if laid away in a dark place, where it is not too warm or too damp, but they should be tested before using, and stand a strain of four pounds for bass or trout and at least seven pounds for salmon.

Flies—The best thing to keep flies in is a pasteboard box, tightly and closely wrapped in a newspaper. They will then need no moth preventive. There is a moth-proof tin box sold by tackle dealers which answers a good purpose. An old angler recommends a flat cardboard or other box, with a thin layer of wool or wadding, upon which the flies are placed, covering them with a piece of cardboard, which, by means of corks at the corners of the box, is prevented from pressing on them. This cardboard box is then placed in a tin box.

Fly Books—Should be perfectly dry and wrapped tightly in in a newspaper. If placed in a cardboard box, which is also wrapped in a newspaper, they will be doubly protected.

Hooks—Do not stick their points in cork and stow them away, for if the atmosphere is slightly damp, or the cork not absolutely dry, rust will occur. The best plan is to wrap the hooks in oiled paper (kerosine is good) before putting them away for the winter. Bait-boxes and creels shou'd be thoroughly cleansed with warm soda-water, and when dried it is well to sprinkle them with a little carbolic acid, or a wash of carbolic acid soap can be used.

Shooting.

I.

THE one thing necessary to good shooting is concentration of all the faculties on the object aimed at. You will become conscious of the position of the gun barrels without looking for them or at them. You must look at the bird with both eyes and focus it clearly. A good shot will appear to foresee an erratic movement on the part of the bird, so quickly does he adapt himself to the altered circumstances.

The object of the beginner should be to make the strain of aiming last as short a time as possible. You should never put up your gun until you have made up your mind that the moment to fire has come. When the gun comes up you should, if necessary, correct your aim with a slow, steady movement of the left hand, without twitching, and fire the instant your barrels point to the place where the bird will be when the shot have covered the intervening distance. It is very seldom that a bird goes away so directly level with the shoulder that you should aim directly at it.

Flying-foxes are good things for you to begin on. When you can hit straight ones go to the trees where the bats feed. They generally circle round before pitching. When you have learned to calculate, and allow for the curve as well as the pace you will have taken that great stride towards good shooting—a realization of what the game is doing and the angle of its flight.

If a bird is crossing, the gun should be brought up with a slight swing in the direction in which the bird is going. Therefore if two birds are crossing you in the same direction take the rearmost bird first, even if it be the nearer. It is very difficult to kill a crossing bird if the gun is swung to meet it, and it is seldom necessary to try this shot. The impetus given by the swing with the bird, even though the lateral distance traversed by the muzzle of the gun be only six inches or so, will tend towards the avoidance of the common fault of stopping the gun before pulling the trigger. N.B.—The action described here is very different from that terribly dangerous habit some men have of following a bird's flight all over the country with the muzzles of their guns, trying to "get on to it." Such men should be prosecuted under Section 336 of the Indian Penal Code.

Make a rule as to which you will take if several birds rise together, and stick to it, it will pay you immensely in the long run and you will not stand undecided at the sight of a big wisp or covey, nor will you be tempted to brown it. As young shots are generally, for obvious reasons, put on the left of the line practise taking the left hand birds of each wisp. In any case when shooting with another man you must take the outside birds, i.e., those furthest from your companion. Remember that a bird flushed by your companion is his to fire at until he has missed it, or, by aiming at another or not raising his gun, declined it. Should you in your haste fire at such a bird at the same time that he does, and the bird falls, the bird is his no matter though you are quite certain that he missed it and you killed it Strict attention to this rule makes jealousy out shooting impossible. I am of course supposing that my reader has sufficient self-control to walk straight to his front in the line given and not to edge in so as to encroach on his neighbour's beat. No man will ask to shoot with him men who break such elementary rules of courtesy, and beginners will have to depend on others for the bulk of their sport in most instances.

SNIPE.

If one is ploughing through mud after snipe and not hitting them one is apt to get angry or disgusted. That does not help matters. Sit down for a few minutes if there is anything to sit on. I like to have a mohra (wicker stool) with me. Turned upside down it makes an excellent basket for the cooly who carries your change of clothes and refreshments; and the right way up it is a comfortable seat for you even if you are in water.

When you go on again, if birds are plentiful (it pays even if they are not), aim carefully at one or two birds with an empty gun until you feel "on them." It helps, too, to overcome the feeling of hurry which a snipe is so apt to cause in a beginner. Then repeat to yourself "Forward and high, Forward and high," until you find you are getting on to your birds. I have found this method of "suggestion" most useful, and others to whom I have recommended it tell me the same.

Nearly all snipe when flushed rise in their flight, though the rise may be small. The charge of shot that misses a snipe usually passes behind him, or under him, or both. It is impossible to describe to a beginner just how far he should shoot in front of a crossing bird. It all depends on the pace, distance, and angle at which the bird is moving. If you can get hold of a clay pigeon trap it will teach you this; and it has the advantage that you can set it again and again at the angle that puzzles you until you master it. If you cannot get the use of a clay pigeon trap the best plan is to take your gun whenever you go for a stroll out of the station and shoot at every bird that comes within range. You can of course work out the problem mathematically. Your shots travel roughly 400 yards a second, and your bird may be taken as travelling at 40 miles an hour (unless it is a frightened duck). Having worked out your problem as to how far you should shoot in front of your bird you will still have the difficulty of recognising that exact distance 40 yards away.

As a man tires towards evening he is very apt to undershoot his game. He will recover to a certain extent his aim if he realizes what is wrong, suggest "forward and high" to himself, and, if very tired, takes a rest and a drink of cold tea or soda water.

On a dark day one finds it very difficult to focus the birds clearly. Hence the bad averages made under such conditions. Another cause of poor bags on dark windy days is the wildness of the birds, which on these days sleep lightly, if at all. In a cyclone I have known them to lie like stones, unwilling to face the storm; but as a rule in cloudy and windy weather few birds will rise within 30 yards of the gun and great numbers will rise out of shot. At such times they usually fly low, and in bheels it is practically impossible to define them clearly against the brown water weeds. In green rice they are easier; and easier still if they have to cross open water. Therefore in bad weather such grounds should be chosen if available.

The effect of wind on the flight of snipe is a matter of controversy. Some maintain that snipe invariably rise, and fly, against the wind, and that therefore it is advisable to advance directly down wind upon them. Others declare, Mr. E. B. Baker amongst them, that the up wind flight is a myth. My experience is that it is the natural habit of snipe to rise against a strong wind as they thereby obtain a mechanical advantage, but that when they have been a good deal fired at their object is to get away from the gun let the wind blow whence it list. A great disadvantage attached to walking down wind in bheels is that the sound of the splashing of one's feet in the water is carried directly by the wind to the birds, who thus rise at a greater range than they would otherwise do. Another disadvantage of walking down wind early in the season is the great heat felt when walking through heavy going with the wind behind one. I think the best plan when shooting alone is to walk down and across the wind with one coolie up-wind, and two or three coolies down-wind of you. With two men out the gun should be at each end of the line, save for one coolie down-wind of the down-wind gun who should be the better shot. The up-wind gun will get more crossing shots than the other, and a crossing bird is easier to hit than one going away. It presents a larger target, is more readily defined, and its jinking from side to side does not materially affect the position. I walk down wind to snipe to get a low sun behind me or because I cannot help it, otherwise not In bheels one usually has to get to snipe as one can. Deep water, stretches of dry ground, etc., regulate the direction of the advance more than do the wind or even the sun. To have the sun in one's face during the short days, when he does not rise high in the sky, is tantamount to having a bad average. The brown water-weeds glisten in the sun. Away go a cloud of snippets, and "scape, scape," goes a snipe amongst them. The whole lot are represented by a mere glitter of swiftly moving wings. The odds on the snipe as against a good shot are at least two to one; as against a bad shot, all Lombard Street to a China Orange.

This brings us to the question of what degree of skill one may arrive at. It is hard to put a limit to the skill of the few great shots. They miss very little. In the ricefields early in the season, when the majority of the birds are pintails, an ordinary good shot should miss very few, certainly not more than one in four, and, in form, he will often kill his dozen or fifteen without a miss. Later in the season, in the bheels, the matter is different. Three kills for five shots is then good shooting provided all fair chances are taken and all shots counted in a long day. Of course one may sometimes do better and a good deal better, but as an average it is good enough. On big bheels, on dull windy days in December and January two birds for five cartridges will be a fair average, and there are days when the man with an average of one in three has reason to feel himself not disgraced. I remember one afternoon of gales and clouds when my companion, talking over a bag of 29 couple we had made, said that he regarded every bird we had killed as a fluke! They certainly were difficult.

In February and March the light in the bheels improves and the birds become more concentrated as the water dries up. The shooting should then improve too, and the averages be the same as in September. In these averages I count all cartridges not brought home as fired, and I only count birds actually on the stick.

Remember one most important rule. Do not speak yourself or let any of your men say a word while amongst snipe. My custom is to whistle a snippet's call to attract attention and then signal a change of direction or for the reserve ammunition as the case may be. Snipe may lie within 10 yards of you when you are firing, but a word will put up every bird within hearing, and their ears are good.

When a bird is shot the coolie in whose front it falls should mark the spot, and, when the line comes up to it, should quietly pick up the bird. No one should step a yard in front of the line for any purpose whatever.

To keep your line of coolies straight it is a good plan to instruct them that whenever you halt on an ail (ridge between fields) they are to do the same. You can thus correct the dressing without a word. A curse yelled at a coolie will do your sport more harm than any fault, except yelling, that he can commit.

If you come across people working in the rice or bheel it is well to hand your gun to a coolie, having first of course drawn the cartridges, until you are past them. They will only put you off your shooting, and may get hurt, if you try to shoot past them. A man is safe from No. 9 shot at about 175 yards.

LORD ROBERTS ON RIDING.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The Commander-in-Chief has spoken out with no uncertain sound in his remarks upon the riding of young cavalry men, indulging in rather a sweeping condemnation of the lack of that physical sympathy that should ever exist between horse and rider. In fact Lord Roberts asserts and medical authority endorses what he says that, from neglect of early training during the proper period for development, the muscles necessary to ensure the rider forming as it were part and parcel of his mount acquire a rigidity that takes months to overcome or rectify, thus our cavalry recruits though they may come up to the standard in all other respects cannot be sent upon active service for months after joining, from inablity to ride as the modern soldier should; thus in cases of emergency the rapid raising of an efficient cavalry force to replace or fill the gaps in the one at the front would be next to impossible. No reflective person can doubt the truth of these deductions and they certainly are serious enough to merit attention far outside the circle of responsible authorities. None too soon the Government of this country has realised the advisability of raising a local horse supply of useful as opposed to ornamental animals, suitable for the lighter weights of the coming cavalry man, but not so much attention has been devoted to the latter himself and though commendable encouragement has been, and is being, given to gymnasiums and outdoor sports for our soldiers, the attainment of the requisite flexibility in the particular muscles alluded to has not been so well kept in view as it should have been. Mr. Atkins may be as bold upright as the typical, obsolete ramrod, able to march long distances on his own feet and rush a breech or stockade with all the precision or élan of his predecessors, but he still rolls in the saddle sticking out his toes—so says the great critic—like Mr. Punch's historical "infantry adjutant" for months after joining. If these defects in the cavalry regiments proper—and the high authority of one who has had half a century's experience of the saddle is indisputable—how much more marked are they likely to be when our infantry are in ducted, as all agree they must now be, into the art of riding. Mere ability to "stick on" with or without clutching the pommel will not suffice in these days, for the soldier needs all his hands, so the sooner he is taught like the majority of our irregular native levies, to guide his mount solely by knee pressure the better; he certainly will not be able to accomplish this if the thews and sinews of knee, thigh and calf are effete, though the biceps for wielding his weapons or hanking at his steed's mouth may be in prime enough order. Pending the organisation of permanent training studs at all our garrison centres—which could be handed over from one relief to another, acquirement of the proper saddle grip should form part of the daily drill. Much good would accrue in this matter were every cantonment furnished with a swimming bath; most are, I am aware, so provided, but recourse to it is optional, though it should be otherwise, as a medical paper in recently dwelling upon the subject pointed out how greatly swimming conduced towards bringing every muscle into play, though this alone would not quite suffice Admitted that in most gymnasiums there are blocks to simulate a horse's back vaulting thereon forming part of the routine instruction, in all cases, however, these are mere stolid unyielding blocks quite inadequate for imparting that centaur-like connection and sympathetic confidence that should exist betwixt man and steed. It will probably be four or five years ere we can reckon upon our breeders being in a position to supply even reasonable wants in the way of mounts of uniform height and stamina, but there is no reason why the training of riders should be postponed or neglected; meanwhile there are plenty of animals to be had for preliminary training, and as the recent campaign in South Africa proved, horsemen in future troubles will be called upon to act either individually or in small parties, instead of large compact bodies so that want of uniform appearance on parade is no longer of the same importance as in the bygone days when military tactics demanded the charge of huge phalanxes.

THE POONA RACES.

Fourth Day, Thursday, 1st October 1903.

BEING "Dassera" day and a bank holiday there was a big attendance at the races to witness the Cup run for, two specials being run for the conveyance of Bombay sportsmen. A most unfortunate and extraordinary thing for this time of the year occurred, inasmuch as heavy rain fell for over one hour just prior to proceedings opening and rendered the course very slushy. The top weights as a consequence were at a discount and horses and jockeys had a baptism of mud.

The Acting Governor, Sir James Monteath, was received with all the usual ceremony of Cup Day, a tiffin at the Club of Western India being held at 2 o'clock. The Governor was "At Home" on the lawn and dispensed liberal hospitality.

The first event down for discussion was the C.-B. race, the Merchants' Cup and for this Gentle Lady, despite being placed at the top of the handicap, would no doubt have been supported were the track dry; as this was far from being the case Ames was put on Saloon and the public accepted this as a declaration that Mr. J. D. Scott intended to win with Saloon, who was promptly backed at even money and the brave Knights of the Pencil were soon declining to lay this handsome C. B: they would have, as circumstances turned out, been wiser to have taken more money about it as Saloon slipped up and fell half a mile from home and came home with the field with an empty saddle.

Light weight told and Colonel Grant's Philistine won from Lady Newbrook with Upstart third. So far Philistine, who carried only 6 stone, has not done much, but he is a well shaped dark chestnut and unlike the angular Kunigals and other Madras Presidency country-breds he takes more after the Arab in compactness. Ames, I am sorry to report, broke his collar bone in the fall with Saloon. This is doubly hard luck on Mr. J. D. Scott, as he not only lost the race but will be deprived of the services of his smart jockey for the rest of the meeting.

For the Lawn Stakes old Governor, as he was let in easily by the handicapper, was made first favourite, but money was always ready for Ptarmigan and Mint; these three carrying the bulk of the public investment. Farewell and Oriental too were modestly supported. The outsider Galib ran a good pony. He made all the running and was only beaten in the last few strides. Governor did not have a good run and being shut in up the straight was unable even to get placed. The speedy Ptarmigan came like a lion at the finish and won easily by a length. This gray Arab is undoubtedly the best sprinter of his class running to-day.

Of course it was not likely that Beadsman would be asked to negociate the mile in the Stewards' Purse when he also figured on the card for a race over his own distance—six furlongs. Swiftsure's recent performance and the confidence with which the Aga Khan and his cousin backed Swiftsure gave the public a good hint and they took till the horse's price contracted to six to four against. Misty was, on his extra meeting form, well supported and Altamas on his second to Acetine was also not friendless. It was quite an easy victory for Swiftsure, who won a long way from home, and won in a canter by five lengths. Gnullo and Fitzeros did a lot of the running, the latter failing to place, while Gnullo was second, old Jack O'Lantern third and Misty fourth. The place occupied by Jack O'Lantern reminds me that this old horse has been a stout performer in the past and with the weight of years that he should be able to head horses like Alex, Altamas and Fitzeros shows there is go in the old horse yet.

But is it not time both this and the other "Good old has been" Leonidas were pensioned off and trainers trouble them no more. I am told that Leonidas pines for work, but he can get enough of that off the course surely.

With a carefully planned handicap it must be very disgusting the framer of it to find that wet weather has taken an unexpected hand by making a re-adjustment of the weights by putting extra weights on the hoofs.

This is just what occurred in connection with the Governor's Cup race. Despite the heavy going so much is Mameluke the superior of the Arab horses running now that the public accepted him at 3's although he had been allotted top weight. Hyderi, Gallant and Bay Middleton were each backed to win a fair amount. Regret ran a great race, but too much use was made of him and he was done with at the bend. Sandow, Mameluke, and Gallant were all together in the run home, and it was soon evident that Sandow held Mameluke on whom the weight was telling quite safe. But Ali bin Talib's spirit was not crushed, for his second string, Connaught, who was carrying, only 6st. 5lbs., came out gamely at the finish and won after a tight finish by half a length! Kamad, the feather weight native boy, earning his second winning bracket. Sandow was second and he is evidently going to turn a good long distance horse at last. Hyderi was third, his stable companion Bay Middleton nowhere and Gallant third.

Malto, Harpist, Beadsman and Peppercorn are all reputed good over six furlongs and the public could not easily settle on a favourite, but ultimately as the stable money was up Beadsman was backed freely, while almost all the others received support. Roscommon was smartest out of the slips, but at the distance the whole field except Corrie Roy got into a bunch and a few strides further Beadsman headed his field slight by with Loch Clievenden close up. An exciting finish was witnessed, the chestnut just beating Beadsman by a head in as fine a struggle as has been witnessed at the meeting. Malto, who must have found the going too sticky for his liking got third place. He is a little horse and does better on springy course. Milos evidently has not returned to his Australian form nor has Peppercorn, who Mr. Barney Allan brought to this country with a great reputation as a sprinter.

As none of Mr. J. D. Scott's ponies were saddled for the Coronation Stakes Colonel Baring's English pony Golightly was given out as the tip and this pony went out favourite. Min was next in demand, while Rifleman, Russley Rose and Minimus were accepted at 5's A grand race was witnessed between Russley Rose and Rifleman ; these two separated themselves from the rest of the field and raced neck and neck for the winning, post, the mare wearing her opponent out and winning by a neck. An excellent performance this and it is evident that against the best 14-2's this 14-1 mare will be able to more than hold her own. She was bought without any flourish of trumpet as was the case with Picture and Byramji the trainer has to be congratulated on the splendid manner in which he has prepared her and given her owner the opportunity of getting her price back on her first appearance and back her substantially since. Min was probably stopped by her weight 9st. 11lb and Minimus is meeting a better class than he did before. Metalgia has evidently gone off as he has not been able to put in a decent run up to date at Poona.

(By Special Telegram.)

This meeting which was postponed on Saturday owing to the heavy rain was run off to-day in ideal weather. Fields were large and good racing was witnessed, three favourites rolling home to the delight of punters. Oriental won after a tight finish, Veera put up a good performance in the second race, Haydn nowhere. The October Stakes was an upset, the little fancied Gum winning under 7 stone, and another South India horse won the next event, Trenton beating a classy field. Sandow after two seconds carned a bracket in the Winners Handicap and Gentle Lady, despite top weight, proved her title to champion C. B. Governor caused some surprise by winning the last race anyhow for Mr. Fischer. Details:—

Honorary Secretary.—MAJOR R W FULLER, R G A.

First Day, Tuesday, 29th September 1903.

THE first day of the meeting opened under favourable conditions, fine weather and the course, though heavy, looking its best. The stand and enclosure were well dressed and looked most inviting. The attendance, however, was only fair, Dehra and Mussoorie are evidently not a sporting community, the absence of British troops in garrison accounting for this. The Secretary had an up hill game to play with the poor support obtainable from the local residents. The racing on the first day had a gloom cast over it, by an accident in the hurdle race. Mr. Holford's pony galloped into a hurdle and gave his owner a severe fall. Mr. Holford was carried away unconscious and is in a precarious condition not yet having regained consciousness.

The racing on the whole provided close finishes and the handicapping brought out some upsets. An unusual occurrence happened in the Polo Scurry. This race was started from the 2-furlong post, and had to be run over a second time. The starter and riders all being strangers to the Dehra course did not find out the mistake in time, though it was quite obvious to the people in the stand. Through an error the 2-furlong post was marked 2½ furlongs. Details.

First Day, Thursday, 1st October 1903.

CAPTAIN Welsh and the executive are to be congratulated on the pleasant and successful meeting just accomplished. The weather on both days fortunately proved fine, and there was a good attendance each time. Everything passed off well, without hitch or accident, and backers perhaps got a trifle the best of the deal with "the enemy." Mr. Shillingford must have been very wroth at the way his well-bred mare Ringlet cut up in all her races, had she started kindly she would have accounted for the lot. Mr. Price had an equally bitter experience the first day with The Swell. He cut the course in the Lieutenant-Governor's Cup, and in the Cooch Behar Cup he nipped round just as the flag fell. Flora won her races in gallant style, having the assistance of that fine horseman, Captain Travers, who comes out with the best winning average at the meeting. The lotteries were well supported at this meeting, there being no less than four on the Lieutenant-Governor's Cup, which at every meeting proves the most popular event. The Rajshai Cup did not fill, and it will possibly not again find a place in the prospectus, as its terms and conditions do not apparently appear to take on. The following are the results:—

NOVICE STAKES.—For a cup value Rs 49. For Arabs and C. B's. 14-1 and under and others 13-3¾ and under that have never won a stake, value Rs. 40 or over. Arab and C.-B's. 14-1 to carry 12st. and others 13-3¾ to carry 12st. 6lbs. W. I. ¼ mile.

H H Maharajah of Cooch Behar's ch c bg Vodki, 9st 6lbs	Capt Travers	2
Miss G M Shillingford's br aus m Gazelle, 12st	Mr Metcalfe	3
Mr Jones's br aus m Dolly, 10st 10lbs ...	Mr Corbett	0

BETTING: Evens Vodki, 3 to 1 Gazelle, 4 to 1 Zulu Girl, 5 to 1 Dolly.

Lotteries:—Tickets Rs. 200, evens Vodki, 3 to 1 Gazelle, 4 to 1 Zulu Girl, 5 to 1 Dolly.

Zulu Girl was quickest off the mark and keeping in the van all the way won very easily.

LHASA PLATE.—For a cup value Rs. 49. For all Bhutia donies. 13-1 to carry 11st. W. I. Previous winners of Rs. 40 or over, once 7lbs., twice 14lbs., three times or over 21lbs extra. 1 mile.

Mr Kingin Kosi's d b g Ruckpa, 9st 4lbs	Mr Corbett	1
Mr Mackie's g c g Comet, 10st 9lbs ...	Mr Pickering	2
Mr A Green's g b g Tommy, 9st 4lbs ...	Mr Metcalfe	3

Mr K Shempa's g b g Bahadur, 8st 9lbs	Mr Chater	0
Mr Jetmull's g b g Jack in the Green, 11st	.....

BETTING: 6 to 4 Bahadur, Evens Comet, 5 to 1 Ruckpa, 10 to 1 Tommy, 20 to 1 the others.

Lotteries:—Tickets Rs. 200. Comet Rs. 75, Bahadur Rs. 70, Ruckpa, Rs. 40, Overseer Rs. 10, Jack Rs. 10, TommyRs. 5.

Comet was the first to show in front, but he was soon displaced by Ruckpa, who kept ahead and won a good race by a length.

DESERT STAKES.—For a cup value Rs. 49. For Arabs and C.-B.'s 14-1 and under that have never won a stake value Rs. 50 or over. 14-1 to carry 11st 7lbs. W. I. ¾ mile.

Mr A J Sillingford's b cb m Ringlet, 10st 8lbs	Mr Metcalfe	1
Mr C J Pickering's ch a h Ronald, 10st ...	Capt Travers	2
Mr F Chamberlain's b cb m Zulu Girl, 10st	Mr Chater	3

BETTING: 2 to 1 on Ringlet, 3 to 1 Zulu Girl, 6 to 1 Ronald Lotteries:—Tickets Rs. 200, Ringlet Rs. 90. Ronald Rs, 10, Zulu Girl Rs. 10.

Ringlet was very fretful at the post and it was some time before the starter could get her into line. When they got away, however, she immediately dashed to the front and won without being pressed by either of the others.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR'S CUP.—For a cup value Rs. 49 presented by H. H. the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. For all ponies 14-1 and under that have never won a race value Rs. 500 or over. English and Australasians 14-1. 12st 2lbs; Arabs and C. B.'s 14-1, 10st. 4lbs. W. I. Penalties—Winner of a race value Rs. 200 or over, once 5lbs, twice 8lbs, oftener 10lbs. Mr A A Price's b aus g The Swell, 9st 4lbs	Mr Corbett	0
Mr Metcalfe's b aus m Norah, 9st 8lbs ...	Mr Byrne	0

BETTING: 6 to 4 each Dabchick and The Swell, 3 to 1 Flora, 4 to 1 Zanzibar, 15 to 1 Olga, 20 to 1 Nora.

Lotteries:—Tickets Rs. 200-200-200-200, Dabchick Rs. 105-90-75-75, The Swell Rs. 95-95-85-85, Zanzibar Rs. 60-60 55-55, Flora Rs. 45-25-20-15, Olga. Rs. 20-15-15-5, Nora Rs. 10-15-10-10.

The Swell when going well ran out at the turn near the stand, letting up Dabchick with Zanzibar handy, and Flora waiting behind the pair. At the last turn Dabchick dropped back beaten and Zanzibar went on with Flora improving her position. Down the straight Flora challenged and a determined finish resulted in her getting the verdict by half a length.

POLO SCURRY.—For a cup value Rs. 49. For all polo ponies that have played regularly in the Darjeeling and Jalpaiguri districts during the current season. ¼ mile. Best of 3 heats without dismounting. Catch weights over 11st 7lbs.

BETTING: 5 to 4 on Quicksilver, evens Norah, 5 to 1 Chieftain.

Lotteries:—Tickets Rs. 200 Quicksilver Rs. 75, Noralks. 85, Chieftain Rs. 60.

Quicksilver won both heats in a canter, Norah was easily beaten in the run off for place.

THE COOCH BEHAR CUP.—For a cup value Rs. 49 presented by H. H. the Maharajah of Cooch Behar. For English and Australians 13-2½ and under and Arab and C. B's. 14 hands and under that have never won a race value Rs. 50 or over. Arabs and C.-B's. 14-0 and others 13-2½ to carry 12st. W. I. 5 furlongs.

Mr Jones's br aus m Dolly, 11st 2lbs ...	Mr Metcalfe	1
Mr F Chamberlain's b cb m Zulu Girl, 11st 5lbs	Mr Blackmore	2
Mr A A Price's b aus g The Swell, 11st 11lbs	Mr Corbett	3
Mr Pickering's Johnnie Girl	Owner	0

BETTING: 3 to 1 on The Swell, 3 to 1 Zulu Girl, 10 to 1 Dolly 12 to 1 Johnnie Girl.

Lotteries:—Tickets Rs. 200, Swell Rs. 90, Dolly Rs. 15, Zulu Girl Rs. 10, Johnnie Girl. Rs.15. The Swell nipped round at the start and extinguished his chance in the race. Zulu Girl as usual was quickest off, but the distance proved two great for her, and Dolly had no difficulty in wearing her down and winning by a couple of lengths at the finish

GARRISON STAKES.—For all ponies 14-1 and under, bonâ fide the property of Officers of the Garrison and to be ridden by the same, that have never won Rs. 40 or over. 14-1 to carry 12st 7lbs Arabs and C.-B.'s allowed 24lbs. W. I. 5 furlongs.

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Flavia, 7 to 4 Stella, 5 to 1 Bobbie, 12 to 1 Johnnie Girl.

Lotteries:—Tickets Rs. 200, Flavia Rs. 60, Stella Rs. 45, Bobbie Rs. 50, Johnnie Girl Rs. 15.

Stella showed at once in front, but her rider mistaking the distance finished a round of the course too soon. Flavia went the proper distance and won by several lengths from Bobbie, Johnnie Girl ran out.

THE FRED ARCHER PLATE.—Rs. 20 to the first and Rs. 10 to the second, for all Bhutia ponies that have been regularly hired out in the station, to be ridden by N-C. O.'s or men of the Garrison. Catch weights 11st 7lbs 5 furlongs

About a dozen started for this race which provided the usual amusing finale to the day's doings.

Second Day, Saturday, 3rd October 1903.

CHOWRASTA HANDICAP—For a cup value Rs. 49. A handicap for Arabs and C.-B's, 14-1 and under, others 13-3 and under, that have never won a stake value Rs. 40 or over. ¼ mile.

Mr Liebenrood's br ch g Landwind, 10st 7lbs ... ... Owner 0

Starting from the saddle between Bagman and Municipal Hill the course was round Jackal Shola, Sandy Nullah Toll Bar, leaving it on the right and thence home. They raced together to Jackal Shola, where Major Campbell went on above Rallywood, the others crossing at the bottom of the Shola. At the Toll Bar Mr. Mackenzie and Captain Kay were leading. They had taken the upper track and reached the galloping track at the Brick Fields path. Then Captain Fife and Major Campbell took the lead with Mr. Liebenrood close up. The last-named fell near the Toll Bar but a great race home took place. Captain Fife was passed by Mr. Mackenzie on the bend above the Old Pykara Road, but Major Campbell was many lengths ahead on Bengal and won easily. Time—15 mins. 20secs. Totalisator paid Rs. 4.

THE MEDIUM STAKES.—Rs. 150 to winner and Rs. 50 to second. A steeplechase for medium sized horses 15 hands and under that have been regularly hunted with the Ootacamund Hounds during the current season. Master's certificate to accompany the entry. THE TURF.

DONCASTER SEPTEMBER MEETING.

OF late years the Doncaster Cup, the principal event on the concluding day of the meeting, has not attracted very large fields; indeed, we have to go back to 1843 to find a greater number of competitors than faced the starter for the Cup on the 11th inst. In that year Alice Hawthorn defeated nine opponents, but the largest field since then has been eight. Twelve months ago William-the Third easily landed the odds of 10 to 1 laid on him, but only a couple were opposed to him. Yesterday's runners were fairly representative of class, favouritism resting with St. Emilion, but Wavelet's Pride, who has had a full share of racing this season clearly demonstrated that he had not trained off, as had been suggested, and won easily from Throwaway. The Cup is another of the very old-established events run at the St. Leger Meeting, having been in existence for upwards of a century, and it has been won by many noted horses.

THE DONCASTER CUP.—Of 990 sovs (a cup value 200 sovs and the remainder in specie); weight for age, penalties, etc. Two miles, over the Old Course.

Major J D Edwards's b h Wavelet's Pride, by Fernandez—Wavelet, 6 yrs, 9st 7lbs	D Maher	1
Mr F Alexander's b c Throwaway, 4 yrs, 9st 4lbs	M Cannon	2
Lord Carnarvon's b c St Emilion, 3 yrs, 8st 4lbs	J H Martin	3
Mr E L Heinemann's Valenza, 5 yrs, 9st 9lbs	O Madden	0
Lord Howard de Walden's St Maclou, 5 yrs, 9st 5lbs	J Cain	0
Lord Penrhyn's Blue Grass, 5 yrs, 9st 2lbs	W Lane	0
Lord Ellesmere's Kroonstad, 3 yrs, 8st 11b	Halsey	0
Lord Rosebery's Oriole, 3 yrs, 8st 11b	Lyne	0

BETTING: 3 to 1 agst St. Emilion, 4 to 1 Throwaway, 9 to 2 St. Maclou, 100 to 15 Valenza, 7 to 1 Wavelet's Pride, 10 to 1 Kroonstad, 100 to 7 any other.

Valenza led the parade from Throwaway, Oriole, Blue Grass, and Kroonstad, with St. Emilion last, and they cantered in the same order. They were despatched to an excellent start, without a moment's delay, Wavelet's Pride settling down with a slight lead of Valenza, St. Emilion, Blue Grass, and St. Maclou, with Kroonstad next and Oriole last This was the order till turning out of the straight, when St. Maclou took second place, the pair being clear of St. Emilion and Valenza, with Kroonstad and Throwaway side by side last. So they ran to the straight, where St. Maclou lost his place, and St. Emilion and Throwaway took second and third positions, but neither could make the slightest impression on Wavelet's Pride, who held the lead from beginning to end and won easily by two lengths; a short head divided the second and third. Kroonstad was fourth, Valenza fifth, Oriole next, and Blue Grass last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 3mins. 35secs.

THE DONCASTER STAKES—Of 680 sovs, for three-year olds; colts 8st 12lbs, fillies 8st 9lbs; penalties and allowances. One mile and a half, over the Old Course.

Mr J H Houldsworth's b c Eoscene, 8st 5lbs	M Cannon	2

(Winner trained by J. Dawson, at Newmarket.)

BETTING: 100 to 7 on Kroonstad.

Eoscene settled down with a two-length lead of Kroonstad to the distance when the favourite drew to the front and won easily by a length and a half.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S NURSERY PLATE (handicap)—Of 885 sovs; winners extra. The Sandall Mile.

Lord Carnarvon's ch f Missovaja, by Chesterfield—Diamond Agnes, 5st 8lbs	McIntyre	1
Sir J Miller's b c Chanter, 7st 11b	Miller	2
Sir E Vincent's b c Midshipman, 7st 7lbs	W Lane	3
Mr A M Singer's c by Matchmaker—Lottie Hampton, 7st 9lbs	Boardman	0
Mr A L Duncan's Extradition, 8st 8lbs	Maher	0
Mr R H Henning's Camphor, 7st 12lbs	Janck	0
Mr J Davis's Romer, by Black Duck—Theobroma, 7st 13lbs (car 8st)	W Halsey	0
Mr C T Pulley's Flying Star, 7st 11lbs	Hardy	0
Capt J Orr Ewing's Wrinkles, 7st 7lbs	O Madden	0
Mr R W Burrow's Palace Yard, 7st 11b (inc 7lbs ex)	Wheatley	0
Lord Savile's f by E Diable—Cissy, 6st 10lbs	Plant	0
Mr W C Whitney's f by imp Goldfinch—La Flecha, 6st 10lbs	Compton	0
Mr A McMicking's Farthinghoe, 6st 10lbs	Trigg	0
Mr D J Jardine's f by Galloping Lad—Echo, 6st 4lbs	Heppell	0
Mr John Osborne's Flamston Pin, 5st 12lbs	East	0
Mr J C Dyer's c by St Hilaire—Moggs, 6st	Griggs	0
Mr T B Miller's Plato, 5st 9lbs	Pratt	0
Mr J Watson's Whinbloom, 6st	J Jarvis	0

BETTING: 11 to 2 agst Whinbloom, 6 to 1 Missovaja, 7 to 1 Wrinkles, 10 to 1 each Camphor, Romer (Theobroma gelding), Chanter, Farthinghoe, and Echo filly, 100 to 9 Lottie Hampton colt, 100 to 8 Flamston Pin, 100 to 7 each Flying Star and Midshipman, 100 to 6 Plato and 20 to 1 any other (o).

Won by two lengths; a head separated the second and third. Lottie Hampton colt a neck behind, was placed fourth, Camphor was fifth, Flying Star sixth, Romer seventh, Farthinghoe eighth, Wrinkles ninth, and Extradition last. An objection to the winner on the ground of crossing was overruled.

THE PARK HILL STAKES.—Of 1,110 sovs, for three-year-olds; 8st 10lbs each; penalties, etc. Old St. Leger Course.

Lord Falmouth's b f Quintessence, by St. Frusquin—Margarine, 9st 3lbs	Randall	1
Major Eustace Loder's b f Hammerkop, 8st 13lbs	J H Martin	2
Mr J A Miller's b f Murich II., 8st 10lbs	Maher	3
Mr J B Joel's Our Lassie, 9st 3lbs	M Cannon	0
Mr L Brassey's Red Lily, 8st 13lbs	Lyne	0
Sir E Paget's St Hylda, 6st 9lbs	W Lane	0

(Winner trained by J. Chandler, at Lambourn.)

BETTING: 7 to 4 agst Our Lassie, 9 to 4 agst Quintessence, 7 to 2 Hammerkop, 8 to 1 Muriel II, and 10 to 1 any other.

Quintessence settled down with a clear lead of Red Lily, Hammerkop, and Our Lassie, with Muriel II last to the straight. Then Muriel II. took second place, but gave way to Hammerkop, who failed to make any impression on Quintessence, and the latter, after making the whole of the running, won in a canter by four lengths; a length and a half between second and third. St. Hylda was fourth and Red Lily last.

CRICKET.

THE CHAMPION COUNTY (MIDDLESEX) vs. REST OF ENGLAND.—Played at the Oval on 14th, 15th and 16th September. Drawn. Clad in overcoats, and shivering in a cold wind, some four thousand spectators were so much interested in this match as to put in an appearance at the Oval on Monday, a typical autumn day, although the summer is not yet supposed to be over. On the Rest of England side seven members of the M. C. C. australian team were making their final appearance in English cricket before starting on their adventurous voyage, but Fry, Maclaren, and other well-known players were not to be seen in the combination, which while it could by no means be considered representive, was wonderfully strong for the time of the year, when it is generally very difficult to induce men to play. The good fortune to win the toss fell to the lot of Middlesex, who at the end of the day's play had no reason to be dissatisfied with their position, for they had scored 230 runs on a slow wicket against bowlers who are considered particularly formidable under such a circumstance, and had dismissed two of their opponents for 58. At the commencement of their innings Middlesex did so badly that Warner and Moon were both out when the total was only 16, the latter being dismissed by a brilliant catch at square leg by Rawlin, who was fielding as substitute for Ranjitsinhji. But Beldam and Douglas completely altered the appearance of the game, and before they were separated 94 runs were put on in an hour and three-quarters. Three wickets for 110. Bosanquet carried on the good work and the score was increased by 56 in less than half-an-hour, chiefly by his attractive batting. Beldam was then dismissed after a stay at the wickets of two hours and a half for 57, an innings which had a great deal to do with the good position of his side at the end of the day. When he was once disposed of the bowlers began to take the upper hand and the last six wickets only added 64 runs. In his fine innings of 56, which lasted for a little more than half-an-hour Bosanquet hit eleven 4's, his driving being brilliant in the extreme. The only bowlers who met with success were Braund and J. Gunn. When the Rest of England went in they lost Hayward before a run had been scored, but Hayes and Tyldesley put on 49 for the second wicket. The weather was more pleasant when the game was resumed on Tuesday, but it was still very cold. It was soon seen that Middlesex had a good chance of coming out on top, for Arnold and Hirst both failed. Nor was Ranjitsinhji much more successful; he was not himself, and it took him nearly three-quarters of an hour to make his 12 runs. He left at 89, and at the same total Tyldesley was caught at point for an excellent 44. Six wickets were now down and the outlook was very bad for the Rest of England. When J. Gunn and Lord Hawke also failed and eight wickets were down for 99, Middlesex looked like winning with the utmost ease. But Braund and Rhodes then came together and played such good cricket that at about the rate of a run a minute they scored 69. Thanks to their plucky effort the Middlesex lead was not as great by any means as it promised to be. During the partnership between Rhodes and Braund, Trott, in stopping a very hot return of the former, hurt one of his fingers badly and had to retire. When Middlesex went in again Warner was in great form He and

Moon put up 54 for the first wicket and things looked uncommonly well. At five minutes past five, when stumps were drawn because of the bad light the total was 130 for one wicket, Warner being not out 73 and Beldam not out 25. Middlesex were thus 176 runs to the good. Yesterday morning both batsmen played excellent cricket, and made runs pretty fast. They were in no difficulties with the bowling, and they might very likely have remained together until it was time to declare if Warner had chosen to play carefully. But towards the end of his innings he hit boldly, realising that now was the time to make runs as quickly as possible. He had been at the wickets for about three hours when his fine innings came to an end. Most of the rest of the batsmen sacrificed their wickets in endeavouring to score fast, and at 254 for eight wickets the closure was put into force. Beldam still survived, having been at the wickets for two hours and three-quarters for an invaluable 88; when he began his second innings he still required 30 runs to bring his total to a thousand. The Rest of England now had to make 301 runs in three hours and a half, and there was just a sporting chance that they might succeed in doing this. As in the first innings, Beldam dismissed the first batsman of the Rest for 0, and lunch was taken with the score at 4 for one wicket. Afterwards Hayward and Tyldesley batted extremely well, and the second wicket partnership produced 85 runs. Tyldesley was then dismissed for a beautiful innings of 60, which brought his figures for the season to 1955. The innings had now been in progress for about an hour and twenty-five minutes, and at this rate of scoring a victory was quite out of the question. The only question was whether England would play out time, and although Hayward was soon dismissed after playing a patient innings of 39, Hirst and Ranjitsinhji played so well that a drawn game was assured. But Middlesex deserve the greatest credit for making such a brilliant display against a very powerful team.

ATHLETICS.

SOUTH LONDON HARRIERS' MEETING.

Certainly the finest meeting of the year was that brought off by the South London H. at the Oval on Saturday afternoon. A wonderfully fine programme of ten events, containing the names of quite the cream of the amateur talent, was decided, the series of very fine performances that took place giving unbounded delight to the spectators. It was quite like old times to see such a crowd at a club meeting, and gratifying in the extreme to those who arranged matters. However, the circumstances were quite exceptional, for it is but rarely that so many of the top sawyers are out at one meeting, and therefore the number that passed through the gates does not indicate that there has been a revival of interest in athletics, although one would like to write it. Everything was put into the shade by the wonderful performance of Arthur Shrubb, who broke the amateur record for two miles in grand style, and quite brought down the house.

The officials were: Judges, flat events, A. J. Fowden (S. L. H.), Gordon C. Innes, C. Val Hunter (L.A.C.), T. G Nicholson (president S. L. H.) and J. Lemonnier (Racing Club de France), cycling events—J. Blair (N.C.U.); judges for walking, A Smith (president, Birchfield H.), J. E. Fowler-Dixon (S.L.H. and L.A.C.), E. Knott (S.L.H.), and E. Ion Pool (S.L.H.); starter, C L. Lockton; time-keepers, J. E. Fowler-Dixon, F. Wyhern, W. W. Alexander and S. K. Holman; clerk of the course, E. R. Parsons; hon. treasurer, C. W. R. King; hon. secretary, E. Gravin; hon. assistant secretaries, M. G. Dunlop and C. D. Comrie. Details.

(Handicapper F. W. Parker, L.A.C.).

Alfred Shrubb, S L H, scratch	...	1
W G Collins, Essex Beagles, 190 yards start ...	...	2
F. H. Hulford, Herne Hill H., 225	...	3
G. Still, Highgate H, 170 ...	...	4
E. R. Small, Blackheath H., 280 ...	...	5
W. J. Clark, Essex Beagles, 170 ...	...	6

Also started: J. Binks Highgate H., 145; yards start; W. Delaney Highgate H., 145; W. H. Boulton, Stoke and Salford H., 150; J. E. Smyth, Highgate H., 100; J. G. Coughlin Essex Beagles 170; J. H. Bessell, Ranelagh H. 175; H. Nott, Polytechnic H., 185; F. F. Judson Blackheath H., 105; T. Hampson, Herne Hill H., 215; F. James, Herne Hill H., 215; S. W. Fowler-Dixon, L.A.C., 135; J. E. Fisher, Blackheath H., 245; S. E. Hall, S.L.H., 270; G. H. Hawkins, Essex Beagles, 275. As will be seen from the starts Shrubb was set a record-breaking start. They kept their roder for the first laps, the South Londoner gradually drawing up to Binks, who at the end of a quarter-mile retired. After this Hulford, of the Herne Hill H. with 225 yards start took the field round at a cracking pace, with the result that they dropped out rapidly. All this while Shrubb was gradually making up his ground, but was still some way behind the leaders at the mile, when the order was Hawkins (Essex Beagles), Small (blackheath H), and Hulford. After this the last-named again went in front. Smyth of the Highgate H. having taken second place, with Collins third at the end of a mile and half. It was then that Shrubb, who was lying fifth, made his effort for running like a hare, and pulled out by two of the runners who had waited on the track for him, he passed all with the exception of Hulford, who, at the bell, was twelve yards in front. Going along the champion outstripped his pacemakers, but still had hard work to cut down Hulford, who faltered 200 yards from home, and was passed by Shrubb. Amidst thunderous applause he passed the post a winner by thirty yards from Collins, the Essex mile champion, who beat Hulford, for second place, by ten yards. Shrubb's time was 9min. 17secs, just ⅗sec. inside world's amateur record both for grass and cinder.

A capital race was seen, the men keeping well together and maintaining a fine pace. The majority walked fairly, and the judges had little trouble. At the end of the first mile the first six were in a bunch, Herbst (St. Mary's H.). Upton (Northampton Inst.) being together, the clock denoting 6min. 2⅗secs. after this Cole and Enden sirgled themselves out, and had a capital race, which ended in the Polytechnic man getting in first, but his disqualification followed. Cole, who took first prize, was a yard and half behind; four yards dividing him from Timms. Time, 14mins 8⅕secs.

INTERNATIONAL RELAY RACE (1 mile level).

Four men from each team. First man ran 880 yards, second 22 yards, third 220 yards, and fourth 440 yards, each passing on a flag or club colours to the next man or team.

South London H: E H Montague, J W Merton, C D Comrie, and R B Cowley	1

Reading A C: R C Young, D Walker, L J Twort, and C W Packford.	0

The Haddington H (Dublin) did not start.

The six men that finished arrived home in the following order: R. B. Cowley, S. L. H., 1; S. Hurdsfield, Birchfield H., 2; J. B. Densham, L. A. C., 3; F. J. Paveley, Highgate H., 4; J. T. McAuslan, West of Scotland H., 5; A. E. Janes, Herne Hill H., 6. The 880 yards men went away at a rare pace, the first quarter being finished as follows: Schofield (Birchfield) Delaney (Highgate), Mill (West of Scotland), and Ward (L. A. C.). However, after this Montague put in a magnificent piece of work, which took him clean in front and gave a ten yards lead to the S. L. H. when the colour was passed on to the next man. Mill still lying second, with Schofield third and Ward fourth. Comrie and Morton, the S. L. H. men, had still further added to the lead at the end of three-quarters of a mile when Brewill, Birchfield, was second, Binks, Highgate, third, and Tremeer, L. A. C., fourth, and eventually Cowley carried the S. L. H. colours home an easy winner by twenty yards; fifteen yards dividing second and third. The times of the first three teams home were: S. L. H., 3mins 39⅘secs; Birchfield H., 3mins 43secs; L. A. C., 3mins 46⅘secs. Neither the French team nor the Reading A. C. finished.

Bryant, of the Hampton H., led at the half mile, with Sercombe, Blackheath, and Bond, Essex Beagles, lying second and third, at his shoulder. At the bell he still held his lead, but could not sustain his pace and soon dropped behind. In the meanwhile Fairley, who had always been near at hand, went after Payne, who had gone up from fourth place, and passed him 100 yards from home, winning by eight yard; five yards divided second and third. Time, 4min 21⅘sec.

THE WORLD'S 220 YARDS CHAMPIONSHIP.

B. R. DAY vs. R. W. WADSLEY FOR £200. One of the most important foot races decided for many years took place on the 16th instant at the Rochdale Athletic Grounds, the scene of so many historic path events. The contestants were R. W. Wadsley, of London, and B. R Day, of Edinburgh, who had signed articles to run 220 yards on level terms for the world's championship and £200. Both men are famous ex-amateurs. In fact Wadsley was making his first appearance as a professional. He has been for several years the best English runner at all distances from 100 yards to 440 yards, having won the English Championship at both the distances named, as well as the recently instituted 220 yards Championship in which event this year the Londoner, however, suffered disqualification. At a quarter of a mile Wadsley was the world's champion, for he twice defeated Maxwell W. Long, the world's record holder at the distance. Wadsley was only married so recently as 5th September and this was his last race in this country, for on Saturday he and his wife sail for America, where Wadsley is settling down in Los Angelos, California. Day, though not quite of the class of Wadsley as an amateur, was nevertheless the Irish champion at the middle distances up to a quarter of a mile, and is undoubtedly one of the fastest men Ireland ever produced. Since joining the professional ranks he won the famous Powderhall Handicap last year, and last month, in a match for £300, he defeated W. Growcott, the brilliant Cheshire pedestrian in decisive style. The match was of a thorough sporting character, and was arranged at Blackpool, where both men happened to be staying. The stakers were deposited and all arrangements made in very quick time. Day, as usual, was trained by Robert Cryer, the diminutive Rochdale pedestrian, who has such a good record, and he was backed by Mr. James Southworth, the old Blackburn Rover. Mr. Sawcross, of Hyde, supported Wadsley, who had been looked after by his old mentors, Saunders and Smith, of Blackpool. The evening was perfect, for there was not a breath of wind, and the track was in splendid condition. There was very little betting to start with Day was installed a warm favourite, as much as 3 to 1 and 7 to 2 being asked about his chance, whilst odds of up to 4 to 1 were laid against Wadsley. Day won the toss for choice of position, and took the inside. He was the quickest into the running from a perfect start, and, though Wadsley held him for thirty yards, the race was a mere procession afterwards. Day quickly established a three-yard lead, and had so much in hand that fifty yards from the tape he looked round at Wadsley, who was pounding away hopelessly in the rear. This look round was almost fatal for the Irishman, as he seemed to stumble slightly, but, recovering himself splendidly, he drew still further ahead, and won easily by five yards, Wadsley easing up when he saw pursuit was hopeless. The time was 23secs dead. The performance stamps Day as a real champion. Mr.. W. L. Sinclair, of Manchester, was the referee, and John Hepplethwaite starter.

GOLF.

THE OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE TEAM IN AMERICA.

New York exchanges of 3rd September contain the following:—The stronger the team the American golfers put up against the Oxford and Cambridge team the easier it seems for the Englishmen to win. The All-Eastern side, which included Boston, Philadelphia, Oil City, and Pittsburg, in addition to the best of the local talent, were beaten on Saturday in an International match at Garden City by the Oxford and Cambridge golfers by 12 to 13 points. They won the four ball foursome matches in the morning by 4 to 1 points, and the single match in the afternoon by 8 to 2 points.

The captains of the respective teams, John L. Low and Walter J. Travis, played together in the afternoon, and their match carried the gallery. The Cambridge man proved too much for Travis, and beat him by 3 up and 2 to play.

Low started off at a pretty lively gait, winning the first four holes in succession, and led by 5 up at the sixth hole, although he was only 3 up at the turn. He was 4 up at the tenth and 3 up at the eleventh, the remaining holes being halved Their cards were:

Low	4	3	4	4	4	5	7	5	5—41
Travis ...	5	5	5	5	4	6	7	4	4—43
Low	3	6	4	5	5	4	4		—31—72
Travis	4	5	4	5	5	4	4		—31—74

Findlay S Douglas played a strong game with J. A. T. Bramston and beat him by 4 up and 5 to play.

Their cards were:

Douglas ..	4	4	4	7	4	6	6	5	5—44
Bramston ..	5	3	6	5	5	5	7	6	5—47
Douglas ..	4	4	3	6	6	4	6	5	3—41—85
Bramston ...	4	4	4	6	6	4	5	5	4—42—89

Norman F. Hunter had all the best of his match with F. J. O. Alsop, whom he beat by 4 up and 3 to play. Their cards were:

Hunter ...	5	4	4	8	4	5	4	4	4—42
Alsop	4	5	5	6	5	5	6	6	6—47
Hunter ...	4	6	4	6	4	6			—30—72
Alsop... ...	6	5	4	5	5	5			—31—78

Only two of the matches were won by the Americans, the other winner beside Douglas being George T. Brokaw, who beat D F. Ranson by 4 up and 3 to play.

In the morning Walter J. Travis and A. G. Lockwood were pitted against Norman Hunter and J A. T. Bramston, and as they are four of the strongest players in the combination, the match was regarded as the event of the day, and despite the rain and wind, a fairly good-sized gallery followed the foursome over the links

All played excellent golf, considering the weather conditions, as their best balls were under the "Bogey" of the Course The Englishmen, however, were the more fortunate, and they won the match by the narrow margin of 1 up.

They started off in a spirited manner, and the first six holes were halved in rapid succession. In fact, seven of the first nine holes were halved, each side winning a hole, and honours being equally divided at the turn. On the homeward journey the Englishmen won three holes and the Americans two. They were all even at the twelfth hole and again at the fifteenth

The match was really won on the fifteenth hole by Norman F. Hunter, who played magnificent golf in the face of a strong wind, and reached the green, 422 yards, on his third shot and won the hole in 5 to 6. The next two holes were halved. Scores:

Hunter and Bramston.	4	3	4	6	4	4	5	4	5—39
Travis and Lockwood.	4	3	4	6	4	4	6	4	4—39
Hunter and Bramston.	4	4	3	5	5	5	5	5	3—39—78
Travis and Lockwood.	3	5	3	6	5	4	6	5	3—40—79

The other four ball matches resulted as follows:

T. Mansfield Hunter and John L. Low beat Findlay S. Douglas and Charles B. Macdonald by 2 up and 1 to play; G D. Barne and D F. Ransom beat F. J. O. Alsop and E. M. Byers by 2 up and 1 to play; Dr. D. P. Fredericks and George T. Brokaw beat H. B. G. Ellis and P. W. Leathart by 1 up; H. W. Beveridge and C H. Allison beat F. C. Reinhart and H. B. McFarland by 4 up and 3 to play.

The team match resulted as follows:

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

HOUNDS met at the 7th milestone on the Pykara Road on the 28th ultimo and a grand run took place in fine weather, though some thought the heat rather trying. Briar Shola was first drawn, and it was not long before a sporting jack got away and gave the field a good run. He made for Wapshare's Shola, crossing the spur below Windy Saddle, ran round the Shola and made the Yemakal Valley his point, going over Windy Gap. On reaching the valley, he turned at the stream and went to ground near Yemakal Shola, where he was left. The Yemakal Valley was drawn without success, and turning back the Pykara River banks were next drawn. While in the valley a large wild cat was started and provided a little excitement, but poor pussy was doomed, for the hounds got her. At the river a jack was viewed in the water making for the other side. Hounds were after him at once and the field had to follow. They crossed at a ford lower down and were soon on the line. The jack headed for Marlimnud, then turned and went down the valley, running parallel to the river for a couple of miles. The pace was a "cracker" and after a great run Master Jack was pulled down about a mile from the Pykara Bungalow.

On the 1st instant the meet was at Golf Corner, and in spite of the damp morning a large field turned out. Hounds owned to a scent in the swamp above Pearl Crossing, but were called off as the jack headed towards Baikie. The next draw was from Bagman to Mill's Cover, and though hounds spoke to a scent it turned out they had been running counter. Between Bluegums and Rawling's Nulla they got on a line which led them into Bluegums. Here he was lost, but the pack hit it off again and did some pretty hunting in cover. The quarry broke away on the Pykara side and made for Governor's Shola, first going through Porlock and past the Tola Mund. Hounds followed him well for a while, but they eventually threw up below the 4th milestone on the Krurmund Road.

Cycling.

CYCLING IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Friday, 18th September 1903.

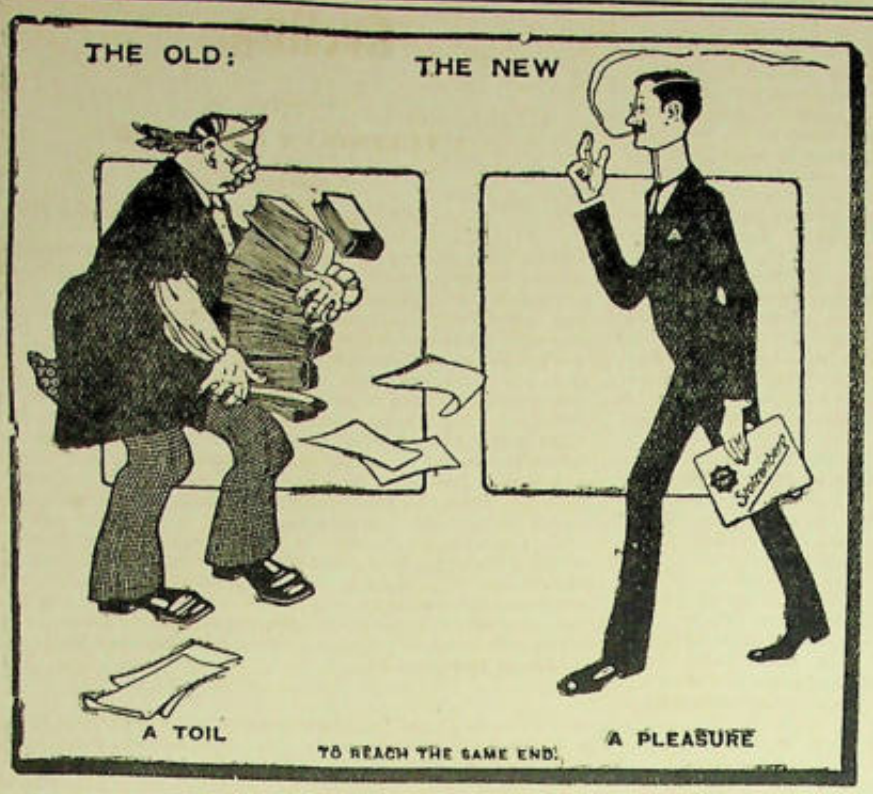
Some very interesting trails as to the dust-raising characteristics of motor cars were recently held at the Crystal Place, and no doubt in the expectancy of discovering that the build of cars was largely responsible for the amount of dust raised, a number of people interested in motoring watched the tests. The track was covered at certain parts with a plentiful sprinkling of flour, and cars of various build were driven over at speeds varying from twenty to thirty miles an hour. But the results did not reveal anything that was not already common knowledge. High built cars of the American type raised as much dust as low cars, and cars standing stationary over the flour with their engines running at full speed scarcely stirred up any. It was noticed that cars which had mud guards carried well down to the ground raised the most dust, but this was only to be expected and had always been generally acknowledged. It was clear that the build of a car made but little difference, the dust being raised by the wheels, and this being so, it would appear that the only way to overcome the dust nuisance would be by removing the dust from the roads either by the use of special material or metal, or by giving the roads a dressing of some substance that would consolidate or bind the dust.

"Wake up, England" was the advice of the Prince of Wales, and in many directions one can discern a movement indicating that the old country is arousing itself to the requirements of the twentieth century. In many ways, although not in all, America can teach a very striking lesson to those who are inclined to learn; and to give an example in one interesting to cyclists, we would mention the practice in that country of carrying bicycles on the tram cars. For some time wheelman have been endeavouring to induce the British companies to do likewise, but with poor success; carrying bicycles on tramcars was an innovation, and innovations are not in the British line. The Huddersfield Corporation, however, are awake to the times, and have decided to make arrangements for cars to carry four bicycles a-piece. The bicycles, which will be carried at owner's risk, will be accommodated at the end of the cars on swing brackets. There is little doubt that the venture will be a success.

In an article appearing in the Fortnightly Review, Mr. G. J. Holyoake the social reformer, gives the following amongst other interesting experiences of his early days. "Dr. Church, of Birmingham was the first person who in my youth contrived a bicycle and rode upon it in the town, which excited more consternation than a South Cottean with his beard. He was an able physician, but his harmless innovation cost him his practice. Patients refused to be cured by a doctor who rode a horse which had no head and ate no oats Now a parson may ride to church on a bicycle, and people think none the worse of his sermon."



A new and magnificent electric brougham has just been delivered to the Prince of Wales, H. R. H will use it for town use, but for long and fast rides he will as hitherto utilise the motor car, of which he has quite a stud. The electric Coupé is a natty little four-seated affair, which hangs low on springs so as to give the maximum amount of ease. The driver's seat is low, so that the occupants of the carriage have a good view through the glass panel in front. The wheels are fitted with solid tyres, and the batteries have more cells than ordinarily in order to give more power and speed. The body of the carriage is beautifully upholstered, while there is a detachable basket for luggage on the roof.

During the year, the shrewd Germans have turned their attention to alcohol-driven motors with a view to producing the spirit themselves instead of importing petrol from America. Now a suggestion comes from Mr. R. J. Mecredy, the leading Irish automobilist, that with the growing of beet and potatoes for the production of alcohol, a motor car race should be run next year in Ireland in which alcohol must be used in place of petrol. Such an experiment would be peculiarly adaptable in a country like Ireland, where the production of raw spirit is one of the staple industries of the country. Although there are serious objections to a race—indeed, the idea is almost impracticable—the Automobile Club might very properly hold a series of trials with alcohol-driven motors. There is no doubt a great field for a new industry, both in Ireland and England, if alcohol were to be used instead of petrol.

The championships of the National Cyclists' Union for 1903 have now all been decided. the only rider to secure more than one event to his credit being Syd. Jenkins, the professional, who accounted for the quarter, one and five miles professional races. The following list gives the amateur championships and their respective winners. Quarter-mile, A. S. Ingram; one mile, void, the time limit having been exceeded; five miles, A. L. Reed; twenty-five miles, Leon Meredith; fifty miles, W. J. Pett. Ingram was the only rider to retain his title. He has always been a good championship rider, having won the quarter-mile for four years in succession and the five miles for three years in succession, 1898, 1899 and 1900.

What promises to be a very interesting amateur event is the team race between four members of the Polytechnic Cycling Club and four riders representing the Rest of England, down for decision at the Crystal Palace to-morrow. The Poly. team will consist of Messrs. Ingram, Reed, Cherry and Janson, and the All England team Messrs. Benyon, Marnie, Edmonds and Wills. Team races of this kind are a very good form of competition, because in them a man has not so much to consider his own personal success as the success of his team as a whole. The Poly. team, however, are past masters at team racing and the All England men will have to ride remarkably well to out manœuvre them.

The public, who now and again read the accounts which appear in the daily press of terrible motor car accidents, may be pardoned should they entertain the idea that motoring is one of the most dangerous pursuits anyone could follow, since the accounts are invariably exaggerated, and, in some instances, entirely unfounded. As an instance of how these accidents are manufactured and extensively circulated we would mention a little affair that occurred in the West End of London. Three ladies were driving in a car when the chain slipped the cogs and rather than wait about while the chauffeur did the necessary repair, the ladies called a cab and drove away. The car was quickly put right, and the man drove it into a garage. Presently a police inspector looked in and enquired after the ladies. He said he had not witnessed the accident, but had been told that the ladies had been thrown out and carried away seriously injured. When informed of the facts of the case, he smiled, and muttered something about "more good copy for the press."

THE M. C. C. TEAM.

LESS than a week after these notes leave England the majority of the first M. C. C team to Australia will have started on their long journey—and well they need the comparative rest of a long sea voyage, for the majority have been in harness right up to the finish. Some are going overland, but most prefer the sea trip. It is neither here nor there to compare the lot with past teams, opinions must differ about cricketing ability, and my own is that the side is inferior to Maclaren's last, albeit Hirst and Rhodes are going. Tell it not in Gath, but the former does not leave England the "terror" he has been the past two seasons. He is not bowling so fast, but may put on full sail when he gets there, as perhaps he was taking matters rather easy towards the end of the season recognising Yorkshire's championship chance gone and looking to it that his dicky leg did not "give" again owing to the exigencies of the coming tour. Rhodes has not many terrors for the Australians, and so this pair do not, on paper, counterbalance the absence of Maclaren The Old Harrovian on Australian wickets is worth very nearly half the best batsmen of this M. C. C. lot. The captain does not go out with anything like the full approval of the English cricket world, but that is not his fault, and so all the more honour will be his if he returns successfully. He certainly possesses all the self-assurance necessary for a good leader and there is to be sure a "Come on yersilf sez I" air about that hitching up of the breeks action of his while at the wicket that augurs well. He is unfortunately not a smart field and never bowls. There are useful batsmen of the slow and sure order in the seasoned Hayward, the painstaking to a precise degree Knight, the all-round Braund, and, when necessary, Tyldesley. Arnold too gets his runs at a moderate pace. The only genuine hitter is Bosanquet, quite the most ungainly hitter too now in cricket, but very effective on the on-side particularly with a curious over-the-left-shoulder shot that the wily Cornstalk will surely not be long in "stopping." Hirst carves his runs from all parts of the joint and places his pulls to beat the best place field when he is getting runs. One feature of the side is the nippiness between wickets, Knight Arnold, Braund, Tyldesley, Rhodes and Hirst being especially smart in this respect, but the sooner the side get to know the habits of Knight the fewer will be the run-outs. Not that they do not one and all know about his restless desire to snatch every sort of run, but knowing about such a little trait in a man's cricket character by no means ensures perfect safety in running. Unfortunately Knight is particularly fast between wickets, assumes all his mates are the same and seems to presuppose misfielding on the part of his opponents on well nigh every occasion he attempts a shortish run. But this he counterbalances by never changing his mind, if its "Come on" at first its never that agonising "N—no—go—come on—go BACK!" every cricketer knows so well. Knight is in fact a cricketer A. N. Hornby would have delighted to be in with, or Sammy Woods when he was a bit younger and nippier, not that he can't "go" now by any means, but say what anyone may the dash and life and "go" of young twenty is a different thing to the well meant efforts of just turned and middle-aged thirty. "Tip" Foster one can only write about from memory of past form and suffice it to say that if he reproduces that "down under" English cricket wants no more. His two centures in his first and only Gentlemen vs. Players at Lord's has not yet been forgotten. On dit G. W. Beldam goes as fifteenth man in his place of R. H. Spooner, who would have had to forsake Lancashire cricket for next season had he gone this trip; such were evidently his employers' terms, and he quite rightly remained loyal to the county which to all intents and purposes has got him his present billet. Beldam is without cavil a a good painstaking bat, the man to keep an end going while others score, but he is out of place in the field on a test match side, being but ordinarily good—too stiff and slow for highest honours. He bowls it is true, but just about that much known to cricketers as—a bit. His lure is the off-side ball temptingly tossed up and "going away" a bit, but he also bowls a slightly faster swerver that starts about the pads and finishes on the off stumps. Cornstalkia knows all that by heart though and as for those tossed up slows they will likely assist batting figures should they ever be much required. He is unfortunately Middlesex, so they may be! The stumping could not be improved upon Lilley's 'head' counterbalancing Humphries' (Derbyshire) extra youth and agility, for Dick Lilley is not what he was and not, most cricketers hold, in the first three with the gloves in England to-day

Well bon voyage and may the luck turn. A representative side never has and NEVER WILL leave England for Australia under existing conditions and many a stronger side to look at on paper has done badly out there, whence the few who favour this selection deduce that this will do well. May they be right, and the passengers on the side be as useful as the A. Bs.

The South Africans will be over here next season. Lord Hawke having undertaken to arrange their programme, so that it behoves whoever is working the team from India on your side to decide matters definitely. A very warm welcome awaits the Indian team, quite the majority of cricketers being in favour of the trip, for which let us hope the English climate will be on its best behaviour.

MADRAS RUGBY FOOTBALL TOURNAMENT.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MADRAS vs BOMBAY.—This match was replayed on Thursday afternoon, the 24th instant, and resulted in a victory for the Bombay team by one goal—scored on the call of time —to nil. The conditions under which the match was played were even worse than on Wednesday. It had rained heavily during the night and the weather continued wet and showery until past midday when fortunately it cleared; but though the evening was fine the ground was even in a worse condition than the previous day, and these conditions were reflected in the play. Passing and running and all the characteristic and attractive features of the Rugby game were at a discount and the game degenerated into a scrambling contest, varied by scrummaging and dribbling. The two teams turned out at about 5 P. M., quarter of an hour late, the delay being due to an attempt to remove some of the water from the worst part of the field. Madras started the ball but Bombay attacked at once, working the ball by dribbling and loose scrimmaging down the left wing. Getting into close quarters, the first bit of passing moved and it looked as if Ward was going to score for Bombay, but Faris collared him and Bombay almost immediately afterwards lost a very good chance of scoring from the field. Madras were penalised for a foul within their own "twenty-five" and Bombay elected to take a place kick. An almost certain goal was missed, the ball being too greasy and slippery for accurate pace kicking. Madras scrummaging strongly worked the ball out and except for a pretty, but ineffective, run by Layard, nothing was done, the game degenerating through no fault of the players into pure "mudlashing," and half time was called with nothing scored.

Crossing over Bombay started the ball, but for a long time the game was even more unattractive and devoid of skill than in the past period. Bombay contented themselves with holding Madras at bay and it looked very much as if the position was going to be complicated by another draw. Madras once relieved the pressure and came out and being awarded a penalty kick, essayed a long shot at goal, with very poor results. They were better able to hold their own in the scrimmages and were quietly pushing the Bombay men back when an exchange of long kicking by the backs took place which proved disastrous for Madras. Faris missed a punt into touch and the Bombay forwards were on him and two brilliant bits of passing, right across the field and back again, took place with the result that Ward got through unopposed and grounded the ball behind the goal post. The kick—an easy one—was taken by Arnot, the Bombay skipper, and the try was duly converted into a goal. The whistle sounded immediately afterwards and Madras were robbed of an opportunity of retrieving their fortunes. Bombay thus won by 1 goal (5 points) to nil. Appended are the names of the teams :—

BOMBAY GYMKHANA.—Back Lieut Bird, three-quaters, D. H. Brand, C. M. Ward, Lieut Lyon and L. Scott; halves Bromley and Lieut Robinson; forwards Lieut. Turnbull, C. W. T. Elsworthy, Lieut Sarson, W. R Rutherford, Gray Ryge, Lieut Sneyd, Lieut McEnery and R J. Arnot (Capt).

MADRAS GYMKHANA.—Back, Lieut Faris; three quarters C. W. Lyard, Lieut Haughton, F. E. L. Work and R. Simpson halves, Capt Cattell (Capt) and C. Moresby; forwards, O. J. Sykes, L. H. Deane, Lieut. R. E. M. Barrett, A Davies, F. H. Wilson, H. Prendergast W. H. Johnston and S. C. Probyn.

THE FINALS.

BOMBAY vs. WELSH REGIMENT.—Having disposed of Madras on Thursday, the Bombay team met the formidable Welsh Regimental team on Friday in the finals The magnitude of the task before them was aggravated by the fact that two hard-fought preliminary games must have taken some thing from their first freshness, while the Welsh had nothing of the sort to contend against. The weather was perfect and the field of play dry though heavy in parts. The result was that the standard of play exhibited was of a much higher order The Welsh always play an attractive game, but it was good to see Bombay always get an opportunity of showing form that they were prevented from doing under the conditions in the earlier stages of the tournament.

The Welsh kicked off, but the opening period of the game was almost all in favour of Bombay. Owing to the Welsh being too anxious to start they were more than once penalised for kicking the ball out of the "scrum." Bombay got away both times from the penalty kicks, but were forced back and then the Welsh three-quarters gave their first characteristic exhibition of swift and accurate passing; but the Bombay tackling at this stage was equal to anything and it resulted in nothing. Bombay then broke away, a forward getting the ball from the throw in, carried it with a "dodgy" little run into Welsh ground. But they did not maintain the attack long. The soldiers intercepting a pass came down with a good combined rush and soon had the Bombay men in difficulties. They twice touched down, but the relief from the kick out was only temporary, and the Welsh were again very pressing in their attentions, which soon after were rewarded, Walls, getting the ball from a clever pass, crossed the line and scored a try. Doble took the kick but failed to improve the score. The Bombay team broke away, Arnot starting them on their journey to the Welsh goal with a fine long kick. Some good passing by the back division resulted in Ward getting into proximity to the Welsh goal. Finding he could not get through, he tried to drop a goal but failed Another attempt to score a goal from the field by Bird failed narrowly and half time was called with the Welsh leading by a try, (3 points) to nil. In the second half, as anticipated, the Bombay men's troubles began. They made a brief show at starting, and almost immediately after there ensued a period of scoring which soon put the result of the game beyond any doubt, if any existed in the minds of the spectators. Morgan, the speedy three-quarter, followed up a long kick and depriving Bird of the ball before he could return it, scored a try which Doble again failed to convert. The Welsh continued pressing and a fine bit of passing was spoilt by a throw forward. Jones then got the ball and a tricky little run carried him in front of the Bombay goal, where a judicious pass to Morgan ended in that player getting in and grounding the ball behind the goal posts. The kick—an easy one—was taken by Watts and a goal was scored. Morgan again circumvented Bird and prevented him returning a long punt, and after some scrummaging near the Bombay goal line, Lieutenant Montgomery, the Welsh skipper, tried to get in but was pulled down. Shortly after, however, Doble did the needful and Watts scored another goal. Bombay now got away and their last expiring effort was a splendid bit of passing from which Scott went in and scored a try. Arnot took the kick, a very difficult attempt and failed. The Welsh now took advantage of Bombay's slackness and from some very loose play near the Bombay goal Thomas went in after jumping over the man who tried to tackle him. Doble again tried the kick but failed to convert and the game ended in a run-away victory for the Welsh by 2 goals and 3 tries (19 points) to 1 try (3 points). Appended are the names of the teams :—

Bombay Gymkhana.—Back, Lieut. Bird; three-quarters, D. H. Brand, C. M. Ward, Lieut Lyon and L. Scott; halves, V. Bromley and Lieut Robinson; forwards Lieut Turnbull C. W. T Elsworth, Lieut, Sarson, W. R. Rutherford, Gray Ryge, Lieut. Sneyd Lieut. McEnery, R. J. Arnot (Capt.)

Welst Regt.—Back, Pte Williams; three-quarters, Lce-Corpl Morgan, Ptes. Davies and Jones and Lieut Montgomery, halves Ptes. Watts and Daly; forwards Ptes. Floyd. Bartlett, Jones, Thomas Gibson, Davies, Lce-Corpl Jones and Corpl. Doble.

After the match Mrs. Benson presented the Cup to the winning team, Mr. Justice Benson addressing a few complimentary remarks to both teams. Referring to the defeat of the Welsh at Calcutta by the West Ridings he regretted that the former would not have an opportunity at the Bombay Tournament of retrieving their reputation.

BOMBAY RUGBY TOURNAMENT

Gloster Regt. vs. Bombay Garrison.—This the only match in the first round of the tournament was played on the 29th ultimo and resulted in an easy win for the Glosters by 3 goals (1 penalty) and 2 tries to nil. They started off by invading the Garrison territory and obtained a free kick for off side. Holder placed the goal. Loose play in which the Glosters had the best of it ended in Parsons crossing the line. The place failed, but they got going once more and Parsons scored another try, Holder converting. On crossing over play was very slow, the Garrison were playing up better and held their opponents. Then from a scrum Holder got possession and put on another try for the Glosters. The place proved unsuccessful. Shortly after the Glosters got their fourth try through Frost and Holder adding the major points they won as stated by 19 points to nil.

Semi-Finals.

Gloster Regt. vs. Bombay Gymkhana.—These teams met on the 30th instant, when a good game ended in a win for the military by a goal and a try to 1 try. Play was very even during the first half, though nothing very brilliant occurred. Arnot had hard lines in a missing a drop at goal. Just before half time Coldrich of the Glosters got away and registered a try which Holder failed to convert. On changing ends, the Gymkhana played hard and Ward was not long in equalising. Arnold failed with the place. The Gymkhana played up and gave some fine exhibitions of passing. Ward and Langhorn being most conspicuous. At last from a scrum the soldiers scored their second try, Mason touching down Holder converted. The home team tried hard to get even but were unsuccessful.

Calcutta F. C. vs. Welsh Regt.—The Welsh Regiment were to have met the Madras Gymkhana in the first round, but the latter having scratched they played Calcutta in the semi-finals on the 1st instant. The game was a splendidly contested one, Calcutta eventually winning by 2 goals to nil. The first part of the game was very even, scrums and line outs being the order. Calcutta then gained some ground but were driven back. Morgan of the Welsh left the field at this juncture having injured his knee. Working the ball down Calcutta forced the game and Landon got over with the first try. Martelli added the major points on crossing over. Calcutta pressed hard and gained a lot of ground, Morgan who had returned to the field relieved and the Welsh twice got into their opponents' 25.

Then Calcutta got going and rushing down A. Siddons crossed the line. Martelli again converted. The Welsh made several attempts to break away, but Calcutta held them and the game ended in a victory for the civilians by 10 points to nil.

The Finals.

Calcutta F. C. vs Gloster Regt.—The heavy rain that fell in Bombay on the 2nd and 3rd had rendered the ground almost unplayable and when these teams met last Saturday brilliant football was out of the question. The game was started by Calcutta who immediately invaded their opponents' territory. A penalty against the Glosters gave Calcutta a free—the kick just going wide a few feet. Even play followed, neither team being able to gain much ground owing to the state of the ball. At last Heilgers got away and with fine dribble got over. Martelli failed to convert from a difficult position. The Glosters pressed hard when the game was resumed, but though Calcutta had a hard job they held their own. Then they played up and had the best of matters till the end. Macdonald had the misfortune to break his leg above the ankle while collaring and was taken off the field to hospital. Then Calcutta got going once more and a second try was scored, Martelli failing to add the major points. Teams:—

Calcutta Football Club.—Back: Maxwell; three-quarters: A. Siddons F. Siddons, Landon and Martelli; halves: Macdonald and Arundel; forwards: Stephenson, Crawford, Berridge, Dick, Szczepanski, Whittie, Watson, and Heilgers.

Gloster Regt.—Back: Pte. Scales; three-quarters: Lce.-Corpl. Edwards, Pte. Holder, Lieut. Tweedie and Pte. Lister; half-backs: Lieut. Blyth and Pte. Coldrich; forwards: Sergt. Bull. Ptes. Dance, Bennett, Mason, Berry, Morris, Parsons, and Frost.

Very remarkable instance of a tout's accuracy of observation occured in connection with the St. Leger of 1838. It was in the bar parlour of the Swan and Talbot, at Wetherby, on the Saturday night before the race, that Jim Stokes, a somewhat notorious frequenter of the training grounds, was asked what would win the forthcoming Doncaster event.

"Don John," was the prompt reply, "and Ion will be second, Cobham"—mentioning one of the leading favourites at the time —"will break down at the end of the white rails at the Intake turn."

"But how can you say that so positively?" persisted his interrogator. "What are your reasons for asserting that Cobham will break down?"

"Because," rejoined Jim, "Cobham has bad forelegs. He hasn't had a fast gallop for many a long day, and consequently is as fat as a bullock. Depend on it, he'll never reach home."

And it turned out exactly as the prophet predicted, with the exception that Cobham broke down just inside the distance instead of at the turn.

SOUTH INDIAN A. A. TOURNAMENT.

This Tournament has been in progress during the last week, when some good exhibitions have been given. The entries were good, the light weights filling best. Large attendances graced the proceedings on each night. Lieutenant R. St. C. Houston, A.V.D., acted as Referee, while the Judges were Lieuts. Groves, R.G.A., and Lovering Durham L.I Mr. J. Duncan officiated as timekeeper. Details of proceedings on the 26th, 28th, 29th, 30th ultimo.

Bantam Weights up to 8st. 4lbs.

C.C. Suaris (M.V.G.) beat Pte. Bown (1st Lieecsters). The first round was an even round, but Suaris had the best of the second : at the end of the third the Judges were undecided and an extra round was fought, Suaris getting the verdict.

Dr. Carne, (55th Batty. R.F.A.) beat A Rodgers, Bangalore R.V. A very uninteresting bout, hardly any fighting being done. Carne received the verdict.

Feather Weights up to 9st.

Pte. Elliot (1st Leicesters) beat Pte. Turner (1st Royal Fusiliers). Hard fighting throughout, Elliot having decidedly the best of matters.

Pte. Davey (1st Royal Fusiliers) beat H. Nurse (Madras R. V). Davey had the best of the two rounds, the Judges stopping the fight and giving him the verdict.

Pte. A Elliot (1st Leicesters) beat C. M. D'Costa (M. V. G.) The first round was very even, but Elliot had rather the best of the second. He rushed in the third round and got in some good ones the Judges deciding in his favour. Pte Davey (1st Royal Fusiliers) beat Pte. Bown (1st Liecesters). Both fought very hard. Bown tried to rush his opponent, but Davey fought coolly and won easily.

Light Weights up to 10st.

Lce.-Corpl. Bainbridge (1st Durhams) beat Pte. T. Hall (1st Liecesters) at the end of three hard-fought rounds. The Judges were undecided and an extra round was fought, Bainbridge getting the verdict

Pte. Harris (1st Durhams) beat Lce-Corpl Cunningham (1st Liecesters). The Judges were again undecided at the end of the three rounds during which some heavy hitting had taken place. An extra round gave the fight to Harris.

Pte. Smith (1st Durhams) beat Pte. Milton (1st Leicesters). Smith was a hard hitter and Milton received some punishment. Smith got very winded towards the end but kept going and obtained the verdict.

Gnr. A. C. Chapman (G. Batty R. H. A.) beat Gnr. E. H. Brady (55th Batty R. F. A). Both fought well and the verdict was undecided at the end of the three rounds. The extra round was fought and Chapman got the decision.

Lce-Corpl. Bainbridge (1st Durhams beat Pte) Smith (1st Durhams) Some hard hitting was witnessed and they put up a good fight, Bainbridge getting the verdict.

Lce.-Corpl. Sanderson (1st Leicesters) beat R. W. Suaris (M. A. V.) The first round was a good one, but both got very winded in the second and Sanderson attacking hard in the last round got in frequently and was given the fight.

Pte. Harris (1st Durhams) beat Gnr. Chapman (G Batty. R. H. A.) Chapman had the best of the first round, but Harris got level in the second and forcing the fighting got in again and again, the Judges deciding in his favour.

Middle Weights up to 11st 4lbs.

Gnr. Lacey (58th Batty. R.F.A.) beat Pte. T.-Hall (1st Leicesters). A good fight, the result seeming very level : the Judges decided in favour of Lacey.

Pte. Jones (1st Royal Warwicks) beat Gnr. Lacey (58th Batty. R.F.A). Lacey played for a knock out, but Jones was on the alert and got in again and again and obtained the decision.

Lce.-Corpl. McGill (1st Durham) beat Dr. Alf. Dawson (P. Batty R.H.A.) McGill nearly knocked his man out at the start. Then Dawson was warned for holding the Judges stopping the fight in the second round and giving it to McGill.

Shows.

THE MUSSOORIE HORSE AND DOG SHOW.

The above show took place on Saturday the 26th ult. in the Happy Valley, and in spite of threatenings of rain on Friday evening, the weather proved lovely, and consequently the attendance was large. The morning was devoted to the judging of the dog section, and the afternoon to the horse classes. The dogs were comfortably benched on wooden benches arranged in a semi-circle at the Pavilion end, and three spacious rings were roped off in front At 10-30 the judging commenced, and as the rings were well served all classes were finished by 1 o'clock, the specials being left to the afternoon. The Judges were Lieutenant-Colonel Rennie, Variety Hounds and Coursing Dogs: Mr. Clifford Batten, Spaniels; Captain Baldrey, Variety, large and Bull Terriers; Major Impey, Irish Terriers and Wire Fox Terriers; Mrs. D. Ffolliott Powell, Variety small and Griffins; Mr. Bush, Setters, Dachshunds, Airedales, Smooth Fox Terriers, Chow-Chows, Eastern Dogs. Taken all round the judging was consistent, and the awards carefully made, which left very little for exhibitors to grumble at, though we did hear of one who was much disappointed because his 9 weeks old Maltese Terrier had had no card in a class of maturer puppies of 10 and 11 months. The thanks of all are due to the Honorary Secretaries, Captains Baldrey and Bannerman, and to the energetic committee-men, Lieutenant-Colonel Rennie and Major Barry, for the excellency of the arrangements. The following are the classes and awards :—

DOGS.

Class I.—Variety Hounds. 1st Maharaja of Jind's St. Bernard, Jind Leo the Great, 2nd Mr. Woodward's Deerhound, Jan Luath; also shown, the collie, Tricksey Lass, who is too small, and has very bad ears and the Dane, Greta, who was a very poor specimen. The rest were cross-breeds.

Class II.—Coursing Dogs. 1st Maharaja of Jind's Greyhound, Jind White Berry; 2nd Mrs. Jackson's Rampur Hound, Sambhur. H. C. Maharaja of Jind's Greyhound, Jind Squire. Sambhur is a better specimen of his breed than Jind White Berry is of his, and should have been first. We understood he was put second, as there was a small abrasion on his stern.

Class III.—Setters. 1st Mrs. Condon's Gordon Setter, Countess. H. C. the same owner's Don. Both are nice dogs, and when furnished the pup should easily beat his dam.

Class IV.—Spaniels. 1st Mr. Devenish's Black Cocker, Jet; 2nd Lieutenant-Colonel Hathaway's Black Cocker, Ebony, Reserve, Mrs. Walter's Cocker, Bess. V. H. C. Mrs. Condon's Field Spaniel Zulu. A good class, and the tussle for the first place between Jet and Ebony was very keen; both are typical dogs, and the placings might be reversed by another judge without detriment to either.

Class V.—Dachshunds. 1st Mr. Batten's Kader Friepan. H. C. Captain Kelly's Margaret. Kader Friepan is a very nice dapple, and rather swamped Margaret.

Class VI.—Variety, Large. A nasty class to judge, two very poor bull-dogs, and two fair Poodles.

1st Maharaja of Jind's Poodle, Rags. H. C. Mrs. Rendall's Bull-dog Joe. The Poodle, Jind Tatters, was spoilt by light eye, and was rather weedy.

Class VII.—Bull Terriers. 1st Mr. Elmore's Loharu; 2nd Miss Rennie's Turk. Loharu has a good head, but is weak in bone, bad in quarters, and carried his tail over his back. Turk is a pup of great promise, and might well have been first. Freda, a good bitch, was overlooked.

Class VIII.—Airedales. 1st and 2nd Maharaja of Jind's Rockferry Coronation, and Rockferry Don; 3rd Mrs. Powell's Karari Rebel. V. H. C. Gipsy Consort. A very good class Coronation appeared easily first, but Don's coat, which is wavy, might have put him under the still immature pup, Karari Rebel.

Class IX.—Smooth Fox Terriers. 1st dog, Maharaja of Jind's Delarey; 1st bitch, Majoor Impey's Ida. 3rd Major Impey's Vonolel; H. C. the same owner's Indian Maid. A good class. Delarey, who has a bad skull, and is rather out at elbows, was nearly beaten by Vonolel. Ida is a beautiful quality bitch, and easily beat her dam, Indian Maid.

Class X.—Wire Fox Terriers. 1st dog, Mrs. Powell's Wellingboro' Gamble; 1st bitch, Mrs. Powell's Wellingboro Bloom; 3rd same owner's Dusky Kitty. H. C same owner's King Rudolf. A good class again. Don't Go Bang, the Lahore winner, was sent out for being lame, he was also in very bad condition. Both Topsy Bristle and Humberstone Thistle, were put back for damage to the eyes. That nice bitch, Jind Sweetheart, might well have gone over the over-coarse King Rudolf, Mr. Harris' Carlo and Colonel Muir's Rhoda, are good and worthy of mention, but they were shown with coats on them like sheep.

Class XI.—Irish Terriers. 1st dog, Jind Brodick; 1st bitch, Jind Brookville; 3rd Jind Blowhard; H. C. Rev. C. Stewart's Wynnefield Sheila. All were good dogs and correctly placed.

Class XII.—Chows. 1st Mr. Reiffenstein's Boxer; 2nd Miss Cameron's Mandarin H. C. Mrs. Thurman's Anchoragh Satan. Not a very strong class. Satan was the best in coat, and quality, but had drop ears, which put him back.

Class XIII.—Eastern Dogs. 1st Mrs. Jackson's Rampur, Sambhur; 2nd same owner's Banjara Shujanli; H. C. Mrs. Tate's Pekinese Nellie. Sambhur is a splendid Rampur, Shujanli a real good specimen of that little known breed, the Banjara. The Pekinese Nellie was also good. Another Pekinese, Rosie, was a little too long, and had not such a good head as Nellie. The Lhassa Terrier, Fluff, a good specimen, was in poor condition and was shown with a litter of pups. Altogether quite one of the best classes in the show.

Class XIV.—Variety, Small. There was no doubt about the variety, as the class contained a Scottish Terrier, 2 Maltese Terriers, 2 Schipperkes, 2 Griffons, a pug, and a Portallock Terrier (?). 1st Mrs. Thatcher's Maltese, Geisha; 2nd Mrs. Condon's Pug, Judy; 3rd Captain Lindsay's Scottish Terrier, Ben Sheil; H. C. Maharaja of Jind's Schirpperke, King Cole. This class we did not think quite correctly placed. The Scottish Terrier should have been first followed by King Cole, and Geisha, or Fairy Queen, though the latter was out of coat. The pug was too small, and wanting in pug qualities. The Griffons were not of the correct kind known as Griffon Bruxelois.

Class XV.—Braces. 1st Mrs. Powell's Wire Fox Terriers, King Rudolf and Wellingboro' Bloom; 2nd Major Impey's Smooth Fox Terriers, Vonolel and Ida; 3rd Maharaja of Jind's Irish Terriers, Jind Brodick and Blowhard; H. C. Maharaja of Jind's Airedales, Rockferry Coronation, and Don. Here again we could not agree with the Judges, the placings should have been, the Airedales, Smooth Fox Terriers, Irish Terriers, Wire Fox Terriers. It is a mistake to judge by "matchings," each dog should be individually judged against the others.

Class XVI.—Puppies. 1st Major Impey's Smooth Fox Terrier, Ida; 2nd Rev. C. Stewart's Irish Terrier, Wynnefield Sheila; 3rd Mrs. Powell's Smooth Fox Terrier, Karari Major Quintus; V. H. C. Miss Rennie's Bull Terrier Turk.

POONA, 1st October 1903.

THE Poona Horse Show this year under the guidance of Captain Grafton Young I. M. S., has been one of the most successful ever held. The entries have been numerous, the class of horses exhibited excellent and the awards above cavil. In some instances the public disagreed with the Judges, but then they always do.

The saddle horses were a more than average good lot, while the Harness classes were quite up to the best exhibited in the Bombay and Poona Show rings. Of course the prize most coveted is that given for the horse which in the opinion is the best horse in the Show and this award was given to Mrs. C. A. Beatty's Vladimir. This hardy horse was given first prize in the Light Weight Hunter class and being well handled by his owner were shown to the best advantage. He was also given the red rosette for Ladies' Horses ridden by ladies and among Hacks over 14-2 also secured first honours. Mrs. Beatty is always well to the fore at the Poona Horse Show and this year has had a fair share of the prizes, for besides Vladimir's prizes Mrs. Beatty also carried off the Cup for ladies' ponies with Vigilance.

The Charger class was well represented. So long had been the process of judging in past year that it materially interfered with the completion of the programme; this time, however, the process of selection was somewhat simpler. The winner turned up in Coronet owned by Colonel Carter with Captain Crawford's Waverly second in the class for English and Colonial Chargers. Major Edwards' Benarth took premier honours in the Arab and C.-B., class in which division second honours went to Captain Harbrid's Armean both showy animals but somewhat wanting in steadiness.

The Hack classes saw useful lots paraded and in most cases they were well handled. In the Arab and C.-B., class under 14-2 Vigilance was placed first. This is a showy C.-B., a fine mover and hunts splendidly, consequently the award was very popular. In the same class other than Arabs and C.-B.'s a fine lot of animals were exhibited and the Judges' verdict fell on Mrs. R F. Anderson's Freda, a pony that carried off more than one red rosette at the shows; he has form, action and pace and stood out alone in this division. The prize for Hacks over 14-2 as already stated went to Vladimir.

The Polo Pony class taken collectively were the best collection of animals on show. The 3rd Bombay Cavalry Polo Club's Starlight, well shaped and showy animal, was given a well-deserved award. In the Heavy Weight division Major Edwards' Iron Duke was placed first. He is a pony of fine bone and substance and exceedingly handy and so good is he all round in point of general quality, manners, etc, that the Judges give him the prize for the best polo pony in the show. In the jumping competition for ponies Mrs. Edwards's Freda and Mrs Grafton Young's Topthorne tied, but in the run off the former won. Mrs. Young, however, had the gratification of seeing Topthorn beat the horses at jumping, his lepping being excellent. In the Hunter classes we missed Colonel Bull I. M. S., who returns to India this week. In the division for Light Weights Major Young's Squire won, but we have seen his betters in the ring. For hunters under 14-2 Freda received the award and this same mare also won as a lady's hack in the 14-2 class. The best hunter hunting with the Poona and Kirkee Hounds was adjudged by Colonel Sheringham to be Mrs. C. A. Beatty's Vigilance "and so say all of us."

The driving classes must next be reviewed, and taking the ponies first Aga S. Shah's Ironmaster, a grey C.-B., lately owned by Captain the Hon. F. C. Greville and an old favourite of the show ring, was certainly far ahead of the others shown in the matter of shape and action, but after being trotted round twice or three times he was turned out on the plea that his entry was late; the prize went to the less stylish C. B. Sir Laddie, a grey Arab named Diamond securing second honours.

The Single Harness class for Waler and English ponies, Mr. Powell's Pallas carried off the red rosette for shape and style. Mrs. Grafton Young's Topthorn being second: this blue roan has fine action and is one of the best all-round ponies exhibited in recent years in Bombay and Poona.

In the Single Harness class for horses over 14-2 Mr. Tata owns a fine dark brown hackney which was exhibited in Bombay at his debut in a very smart hamsom cab but the cab and band combined was too much for Sultan's nerves and he was fired out by the judges for his impetuous behaviour. Steady work has done him good and at Poona he beat the many times winner, Modesty. Had the latter, however, had the services of Mr. C. Arthur Ellis, who has carried off five first prizes when tooling her she might have beaten Mr. Tata's horse as she did in Bombay, as it was she secured second honours and a bay waler, unnamed, owned by Mrs. Edgerley, was placed third.

A goodly show was made by the pairs in double harness. Nine pairs paraded and of these Mr. Anandji Nanji's Black Russian mares, Mary and Molly, defeated the same owner Modesty and Hero. For three years the latter have beaten thes former and the defeat of the English pair by the Russians was somewhat unexpected, perhaps there was something in the driving.

Last year no teams were shown where as on this occasion four teams were ringed. Of these the best handled certainly were the Remount Depôt's (Ahmednagar) coach to the skilful handling of the ribbons of which by Captain Hunt the victory was due I can not say that the winners were a well matched quartette as to colour, but they team well together considering they had but recently been put to tram work. The R. H. (Kirkee) team had a fine pair of chestnut leaders and bay wheelers and ran the winners close, but Captain Hunt is a splendid whip as is well known throughout India and he carried off the red ribbon.

The prizes were distibuted by Mrs. Younghusband and cheers were called for her and for Captain Grafton Young on whom the mantle of Colonel Bull as Honorary Secretary had fittingly fallen.

Some years ago that well-known jockey-trainer, Robert Wyatt had an interest in a horse called Lord Lincoln. He was going to try him for a race at Croydon, and wanted to blind the touts, a scheme which he effected in the following manner :—

Wyatt went to a butcher in the town, and told him to have a sheep killed at a certain time, and he would be there.

True to his promise, he turned up with a bladder, which he had filled with the blood, and put in his pocket. He then mounted his horse, and rode off to the Downs, where Lord Lincoln and other horses were waiting for the trial.

Wyatt rode Lord Lincoln himself, and as he pulled up he undid the bladder, and let the blood run down the horse's face and nostrils. Knowing where one of the touts was stationed, he took the horse as close as he could to him. The tout naturally thought the horse had broken a blood-vessel, and wired away to that effect; but Lord Lincoln, ridden by Robert D'Anson, won his race in a canter.

THE HOME OF THE TIGER.

TWO parts of the London Zoological Society's Proceedings are now to hand, and contain some papers of great interest to Anglo-Indian zoologists.

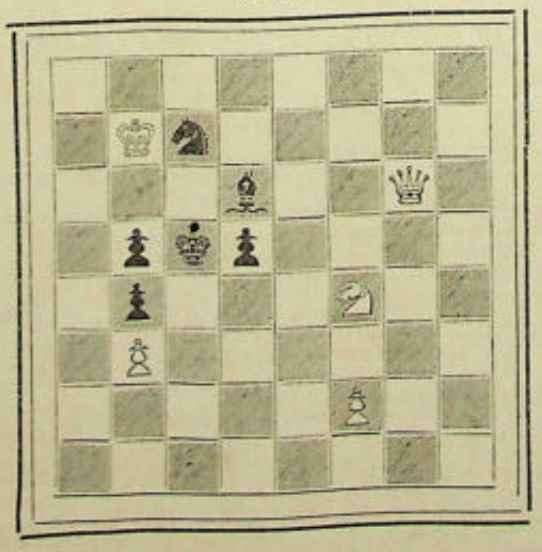
A paper read in February by Colonel C. E. Stewart, C. B., C. M. G., C. I. E., on the Original Home of the Tiger, gives some facts which will come as a surprise to a good many people who have considered "Stripes" as a characteristically Indian beast. It is true that many must know by this time that tigers are common in localities in parts of Asia far from India, even in cold climates, and that the tiger under the latter conditions grows a thicker coat. But Colonel Stewart goes further, and believes that this beast is as much a northern immigrant into Bengal as we are ourselves, having been originally a purely northern animal. He thinks, in the first place, that there is no Sanscrit word for the tiger; and that in the Assyrian monuments, where the lion is constantly portrayed as a beast of chase, the tiger does not occur. Moreover, Greek historians do not mention the tiger as an Indian animal. Thus the inference from archæology and history tends to show that the immigration is a recent one. The present distribution of the animal, which is most numerous in the colder part of its range, even in the semi-arctic island of Saghalien, and is absent from Ceylon, certainly points to a similar conclusion; and to this may be added the fact well known to observers, that the tiger is sensitive to heat.

The last argument, which Colonel Stewart does not mention, must, however, be used with caution, for it certainly will not hold water if applied to birds.

On the other hand, in next month's meeting, Mr. J. L. Bonhote announced that a Sanscrit scholar had told him that a word (eyâghra) did exist denoting this animal; but he did not wish to contest the position Colonel Stewart had taken up as to the tiger's northern origin, but merely to point out that the immigration was thus shown to be less recent than might have been inferred from the arguments above given from this point of view. It may be doubted, however, whether a pure scholar is a fit person to decide whether any particular word denoted a particular animal; we must not forget that the learned authors of Liddell and Scott's Greek lexicon hopelessly mixed up the sacred ibis of Egypt with the scarlet ibis of South America; and the remaining arguments taken together certainly remain very strong, for the name may, even if correctly identified, have been applied to the animal as an exotic, known by repute or kept in the menageries of ancient rajas.

In any case, the northern origin of the tiger effectully upsets the theory that he acquired his stripes by "natural selection" so as to become assimilated to bamboo jungle!

THE HABITS OF THE HOOLOCK.



At this same February meeting was read an interesting paper by Mr. G. Caudler, dealing with some aspects of the habits of the Hoolock gibbon (Hylobates hoolock), a very familiar animal to many people even in Calcutta, owing to the presence for several years in the Alipore Zoo of a male of this species in complete liberty. Mr. Caudler, who has observed both feral and tame specimens, thinks that the troops work their territory systematically for food, as a tea-garden is plucked, as they will be away for a week from a place, and then re-visit it; and he is inclined to credit them with the possession of some sort of Government system. They evidently dislike a renegade, for a tamed but free Hoolock does not revert to a wild life, although he may constantly hear the calls of the wild ones. He seldom in such cases appears to use his voice, although, both in the Calcutta and the London Zoos, the caged specimens are vocal enough. Experiments made by Mr. Caudler showed that the Hoolock has no notion of swimming which, taken in conjunction with the similar inability of man unless taught, and the fact that the Hoolock walks on his hind feet, seems rather significant, although anatomists do not allow the Hoolock so close a relationship to our noble selves as is granted to the bigger (and nastier) anthropoids—the gorilla, chimpanzee, and orang-outang. It may be mentioned that the young, at all events, of the orang has been shown to be similarly incapable in the water. With regard to the gait on the ground of the Hoolock, I think that Mr. Caudler somewhat exaggerates the animal's awkwardness, and those I have seen did not carry their arms "upwards," but simply bent enough to keep them clear of the ground. No doubt, however, the attitude varies at times, or in different individuals. Some years ago the London Zoological Gardens had a chimpanzee which habitually walked on her hind legs only, instead of using her knuckles also in the ordinary manner of the species. Habits are not so easy to dogmatize about as structure, which is probably why they are not admitted as a "scientific" subject by the ordinary professional naturalist who has at all costs to display superior knowledge.

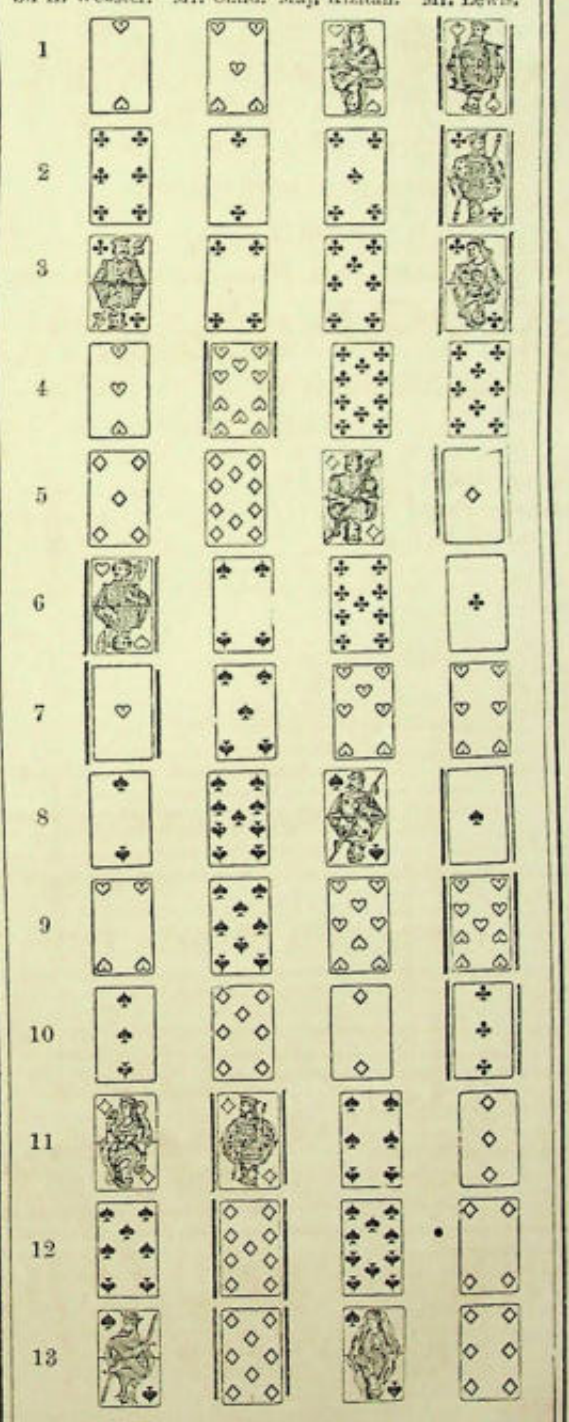
7 A leads Clubs 4; won by B.
8 B leads Hearts; won by A.
9 A leads Diamonds Ace; B discards Heart.
10 A leads Diamonds 2; B trumps.
11 B leads the thirteenth Club.
12 & 13 A makes two Hearts.



1 If at trick 1, X pass the Knave of Spades, it wins.
2 A leads Spades 2; won by B.
3 B leads Clubs 10; won by A.
4 A leads Spades 3; won by B.
5 B leads Clubs 9; won by A.
6 A leads Clubs 4; won by B.
7 B leads Diamonds; won by A.
8 A leads the winning Diamond? B discards Hearts.
9 A leads Diamonds 2; B trumps.
10 B leads the thirteenth Club; if Z discards Diamond, A discards Hearts Knave, and, B leading Hearts, A make Hearts Ace, Queen and Diamonds 7; if Z discard Hearts, A discards Diamonds and makes his three Hearts.

If Z does not cover the first lead of Clubs, A and B still make thirteen tricks; for B's 10 wins, and he continues the suit when A wins, leads Clubs Ace, and then the small trump.

In consequence of the Franco-German War, several horses belonging to foreign owners were sent over to England to run. One of them was a French colt named Filibustier, who made his dèbut on the English Turf in a race which was generally voted a good thing for an animal ridden by Tom Cannon. When at the post the Danebury horseman asked his foreign rival if Filibustier was any good.

"He's not much behind Blue Gown," was the reply.

Cannon did not openly comment upon this unexpected revelation, but when the flag fell he called out "Good day!" The force of Tom's sarcastic remark was soon apparent, Filibustier winning in a canter.

THE WILD WHITE CATTLE OF ENGLAND.

IT seems that the end of the famous remnant of the English wild cattle is approaching. As most people know there remained a few years back but four small herds of the animals which in Saxon times roamed the greater part of the Kingdom as far north as the Clyde, in those days virgin forest and park land. The Cadzow herd in Lanarkshire remains, the Chillingham herd in Northumberland, and the Lyme Park herd in Cheshire: but that which for six and a half centuries has been known as the Chartley herd is now on the very verge of disappearing. Five years ago the cattle in Chartley Park numbered nearly fifty: no inroad of cattle plague or other decimating influence has been at work during the last five years; the herd had evidently reached that minimum below which a species cannot survive, for the number of cattle now existing is about a dozen. This rapid decline was only what might have been expected once the rubicon of numbers was reached; the owners of the Chartley cattle had jealously conservative ideas concerning the purity of blood and to those ideas it would seem the herd is likely now to be sacrificed. The distinctive mark of the Chartley cattle is the possession of black-tipped ears which are held the badge of highest purity; that of the Chillingham red-tipped ears, and as it was considered undesirable to mingle the two strains, the weaker goes first. The propriety of an exchange of blood was, we believe, actually discussed at one time between Earl Ferrers and Lord Tankerville, with the view of establishing a Chillingham bull at Chartley and a Chartley bull at Chillingham: both herds must have derived benefit, nay, a new lease of life, from such an exchange, but it never came off; and inbreeding has done its inevitable work in the Staffordshire Park The Lyme Park herd went to the wall as long ago as 1884: jealous preservation of purity had given waytoobvious necessity: a bull from the old Gisburne herd was tried and then a Chartley bull with better results; but it was too late to save the survivors. Before the Lyme Park cattle disappeared a young bull was sent to Chartley by the late Lord Newton, but for some reason it was not considered desirable to use him and he was added to the list.

It will be interesting to see how much longer these famous descendants of Bos Urus will remain in the land of the living: the deterioration among them is already sufficiently conspicuous. The size of the beasts is small; it would be permissible to argue that their size, by comparison with improved domestic cattle, was never great, but it was, we have been told, the opinion of the late Lord Tankerville, who took a keen interest in his herd at Chillingham that the size of the animals had decreased within his own recollection; and the Rev. J. Storer in 1874 remarked upon the size of the Chartley cattle.

The average weight of Chillingham bulls killed between 1862 and 1889 was 560lbs: of the cows 420lbs: of the steers 570lbs: and inasmuch as it is not a remarkably heavy shorthorn steer that scales 2,000lbs. on the weighbridge, we can form our own idea of the relative bulk of the two. It is a curious thing that the reproductive power of the Chartley cattle should have remained to them when the effects of centuries of close inbreeding were apparent in the wasting disease which has latterly destroyed them. Mr. Prince Sheldon, the well-known veterinary authority, states that some of the beasts suffering from this disease went furiously mad and were shot in the interests of the survivors and those whose duty is to tend them. Had these "animated skeletons covered with white haired skins" been allowed to live the probability is the final extinction of the herd would have come earlier, the mad bulls goring their doomed fellows to death.

Notwithstanding the antipathy displayed by the white cattle to domesticated animals, an antipathy which is a part of their wild nature, experiments in cross-breeding have been made through the female line. With the assistance of the late Lord Tankerville selected beasts from the Chillingham herd were crossed with shorthorns; and endeavour was made to use the wild bull on the shorthorn cow, but it was soon discovered that the only means of continuing the experiment to a practical issue was to reverse the policy of mating, and three wild heifers were captured and mated with a chosen shorthorn bull. The result was somewhat singular: for several years the experiment was delayed by the fact that only bull calves were born. This circumstance, in view of the theory that the tendency of either sex is to reproduce the opposite, has interest in connection with other points remarked in the shorthorn white progeny. The reports on the half-bred steers both by the naturalist and the butcher are worth noticing. The butcher said he never cut up a better fleshed animal than a three-year half-bred, and pointed out its excellence in the quantity of lean meat on the best part of the loins, ribs etc., and, with a satisfaction we can well understand, the particularly small percentage and lightness of the bone. The size and weight of the cross-breds showed marked increase and they inherited from their shorthorn sire the peculiar shorthorn talent for "laying on beef." In all other respects the half-breds followed their dams; they had all the vigour and stoutness of constitution of the Chillingham at its best; they retained the white coat, but the black nose became flesh coloured or mottled, and the fringe of hair on the ear became wider: and they retained all the characteristics of wild cattle in their active gait and their temperament. In short the high antiquity of the white asserted itself most powerfully over the shorthorn influence: to this superior prepotency due to high antiquity and long fixed character, we may perhaps attribute the recurrence of birth of bull calves: the white dam's influence was the stronger and the bull calf was the result. The circumstance that a cow calf was, after six years, dropped by one or more of the white cows, bears out the theory rather than contradicts it: the vitality of the dam would have become impaired with advancing age and also to some extent to her altered existence from freedom to captivity. The half-breds and their descendants it may be added were never allowed to join the herd in Chillingham Park, nor were the three cows selected to lay the foundations of the experiment. Lord Tankerville being guided by the opinions of Rütmeyer and other high authorities who attribute the "deterioration and practical extinction of the wild herds of Great Britain, in other cases, to the injudicious interference of man."

Which suggests that injudicious interference may take more forms than one. If we can conceive such a thing as the sudden disappearance from Great Britain of man and his works in the shape of fences, bolts and bars; whereby the remaining white cattle should find themselves at liberty to intermingle with domestic cattle, what would be the result? From experience gained in Australia we may conclude that it would not be long before the domestic cattle reverted to the feral state and having so reverted might hope to win the goodwill of the breed which has never known servitude. It seems highly improbable that the white cattle would continue jealously to "keep themselves to themselves;" it is only reasonable to suppose that if left for a few generations, our carefully stud bred herds would interbreed with one another and the whites; with the ultimate result that one breed of cattle marked by local variations would in the remote future be found in the British Islands.

It has never been suggested, so far as we are aware, that there ever existed in the British forests two distinct breeds of white wild cattle, one distinguished by black-tipped ears, the other by red. These differences we may well suppose are purely local, though from the fact that when the black tip has been crossed with the red the progeny has the black tip, that is, the original colour. The remaining examples of the white cattle are descendants from a common parent and there can be no objection to crossing members of the Chartley and Chillingham herds from the "purity" point of view. The question that arises is whether it is not now too late: the use of a bull from Chillingham might, by the infusion of sorely needed fresh blood save the Chartley herd from extinction and we trust that a mistaken idea of "purity" may not be pursued till it results in the extinction which would throw the Chillingham and Cadzow herds upon their joint resources. Small herds from which new blood is vigorously excluded must, in course of time, die out.

It has frequently been said that George Fordham "stole" more races than any of his rivals. Often if a stable-lad held a place that the Demon wished to have, he would shout out to the boy to pull out of the way, and times out of number the "bluff" was successful. Yet if a youthful rider wanted a little advice or encouragement Fordham was always willing to give both.

Even Fred Archer—who probably knew more about the art of jockeyship than any man who ever lived—owned that the little man's method of riding a race was more than he could understand.

"I can generally tumble what the other jockeys are up to,' said the Tinman: "but I could never tell what Fordham was doing."

Sporting Notes.

ONCE more has the Bombay Polo Tournament fallen through from paucity of entries. The Bombay fixture lost prestige many years ago, but owing to heroic efforts last year the tournament was revived and some fair play was witnessed. Alas ! this year of four teams which promised to come only one remained on the list. The Baroda team were asked to enter, but as they had played in the Open Tournament at Poona they could not see their way to enter and the support of other teams being nil the Bombay Polo Tournament of 1903 will not appear in the Polo Calendar. Mr. Cook, Honorary Secretary, for Polo, Bombay, is to be sympathized with as he worked hard to get entries.

Mr. J. B. has purchased Malice and Alix and this may be taken as an indication that he intends to still further improve his stud farm stock at Poona. Nobleman is a fine stockgetter and put to Alix who won a number of big races in Australia, the result should be excellent. The C.-B.'s from the Maneck Park stud running at the Poona races this year did not show up, but the younger stock are bound to do well.

Colonel Beaver has purchased the English horse Galley Slave by Prisoner—Grecian Bend. The horse has arrived in Poona and should do well over sprint courses. He has run second at Hurst and Sandown Parks, but his best performance was a dead heat for first place with Mug at Lincoln in the Brocklesby Handicap 5 furlongs on 24th March last. The time records, however, are poor compared to Kelso's 1min. 2secs. for 5 furlongs and Peerage's similar record. Galley Slave's dead heat was 1min. 5secs. and the horses which beat him in the other two races mentioned improved very little on this poor time. Galley Slave, however, may do well in this country as he s only a four-year old and ought to go on iimproving.

Mr. T. L. Roberts, who has for some years been interested in the Bombay mud sports and mounted and athletic meetings, has had the misfortune to lose his fine horse Reminiscence from anthrax. This horse was a splendid looking beast and showed great pace, winning two scurries easily. Mr. Roberts is not one to sit and grieve : he has bought the chestnut Australian Maroney, who is a winner of eight or ten races on the flat and over sticks in the Colonies, and as he is a slashing big horse the investment is likely to prove a good one.

The Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders leave Calcutta to-day by the R. I. M. Steamer Hardinge for Bombay whence they proceed to Poona. The 93rd are good fellows and were favourites in Calcutta. Their place will be taken by the Royal Lancaster Regiment which arrived on Tuesday and have been under canvas on the maidan. The new comers look a hard bitten, work-a-day lot and we expect they will show us some sport as soon as they get into their stride.

At the annual half-yearly general meeting of members of the Western India Turf Club held at Poona on the 3rd instant the following gentlemen were present :—Stewards : Major-General Burnett, C. B., C. A. B. Beatty, Esq. and A. D. Younghusband, Esq., I. C. S. Members : H. H. Aga Khan, Aga S. Shah, H. N. Alexander, Esq., Hon. Mr. A. A. Apcar, General Elliot, Major England, Lieutenant-Colonel Hazelton, Major Murray, Pallonjee Nusserwanjee, Esq., J. S. Slater, Esq., Captain Templer and S. A. Wahed, Esq. Major-General Burnett was voted to the chair. The accounts for the year ending 31st March 1903 having been submitted and passed the usual vote of thanks to the chair closed the meeting.

The appeals entered by certain owners of winners of classic races in Russia against their ruling off by the Stewards of the respective Jockey Clubs for having contravened the Rules of Racing by drugging, or causing to be drugged, horses running in their colours has been heard by the Imperial Stud Book Committee. In the result the opinions of eminent veterinary authorities were not accepted as conclusive, and the owners of the horses in question, well known on the Russian Turf, have been reinstated, while the trainers have had a limit put upon their terms of suspension.

First entries for the First Meeting, Calcutta Races, and Tollygunge Steeplechases close on the 2nd proximo : in regard to this and other matters connected with our big cold weather fixture an advertisement appears in our Turf columns to-day.

The Sydney Referee writes :—"Another good 14-1 pony in the four-year old gelding Chieftain (Scots Grey—The Gem) has been sold at a high figure to go to India, his purchaser being a Bombay sportsman. Chieftain is the best of his class racing here now, and has shown himself capable of holding his own with ponies bigger than himself. His performance in a 14-2 handicap at Kensington, when he carried 8st. 2lbs, and cut out 4½ furlongs in 58 secs., being a particularly good one."

Melsom, the jockey, has been punished by the W. I. T. C. Stewards for foul riding at the recent Poona Meeting and his license has been suspended for a couple of months.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—No less enjoyable than its forerunners was the fifth day's racing. Backers started promisingly with a win of that popular combination Aga Shamsudin Shah, Jimmy Robinson and Oriental—a beatifully artistic bit of riding on the jockey's part, quite in that talented professional's best form, and if any of the few croakers who talk of Robinson having lost some of his old brilliancy backed their opinion by laying Oriental they assuredly received a shock to their system. "It was the riding did it" as a celebrated sporting poisoner exclaimed when he received his death sentence on the result of forensic skill on the part of the counsel for the prosecution. It was certainly the riding did it on this occasion.

But the bookies got most of their own again in the next race when a hot favourite in Cocos just went down beaten a neck by Veera after a great finish.

The cognoscenti found it hard to spot the winner in the Winners' Handicap and Mr. Cursetjee had certainly set everyone a difficult puzzle. On the face of previous fine performances at the meeting public acclaim was eventually for Mameluke with Hyderi and the gallant little Gallant (going terribly short and snatchy by the way till he warms up) coming next in popular estimation. But Sandow, who in Bleach's knowledgeable care, has become such a vastly improved animal should certainly not have been forgotten in the face of the great form he has shown of late and admirably riddenby A. Hoyt won handsomely with Gallant second and Hyderi third. So the knowing ones were not so far out after all.

In the Oriental Stakes Walgrove was in everyone's mouth and carried a lot of stable and public money with old Tubal Cain, looking wonderfully well, second in estimation and Goldsmith, who ran so good a horse the other day in the big race, third. But it turned out jam for the booking brotherhood, for when it came to a finish Trenton and Ailie had it all to themselves, the former getting the judge's decision by a short head.

Once again, undeterred by the previous knock the intelligent and enlightened public would have nothing but Dr. Bernardo (a by no means fascinating looking roan Englighcolt) on the strength of some dark gallop that had leaked out. The fact that he had to be accompanied to the post by a stable pony could not have added to his backer's confidence and when he eventually got badly left and was seen to receive but little assistance coming down the straight his partizans had to gulp down their grief at another good thing gone astray. Mysore, for by no means the first time at this meeting, provided the winner in the not very elegantly named Gum, who in O'Neil's hands won with comparative comfort.

In the Turf Club Cup, a handicap for country-breds over 1¼ miles the incomparable Gentle Lady, who must have been a bit short of work or wind in her previous efforts and who is, I take it, one of the loveliest as she is assuredly, quite the best country-bred ever seen on an Indian race course, gave the public yet one more taste of her quality as with 10st. 6lbs she won in a nice exercise gallop from Upstart.

How that wonderfully consistent old retriever Governor with 7st. 4lbs. over his pet distance was allowed to run riot in the betting at ten to one, or more it is difficult to imagine, but to those who treated his oft-proved capabilities with contempt he taught a sad lesson, as in a field of a baker's dozen, including such brilliant little Arabs as Achilles, Ptarmigan, Grey Fox and others of that class he won with consummate ease. And then, all too late, the clever contingent wondered how they had come to overlook his claims. A great day for book-makers it must have been.

The last day of the big meeting was an extremely interesting one and the bookies started with a bonne bouche in the Lilliput Handicap, Ptarmigan, Governor and other fancied ones going down before the rank outsider of the party Dispute. Then came the Grand Annual Chase wherein the public made no mistake in making Rickshaw favourite, though the honours of the performance undoubtedly rested with old Pope, who before the race passed into the possession of the Madras sportsman, Major Logan Home, and giving 2st. 3lbs. to the winner failed to catch the judge's eye by a short neck only. Veneda with the services of Captain Randall was much fancied, but from the first fence it was apparent that the fetlocks which attracted the attention of the public in the paddock were attracting the attention of the horse in the country. Instead of jumping in the perfect form of which he is capable he messed every fence till he warmed his poor old joints about the seventh fence where he was a long way behind and could never again reach the leaders.

In the pony jump race the public went for Beryl, on what grounds was not apparent, with the useful Patrician in second request, while a few knowing ones remembering Good Boy's excellent show on a previous day and noting his light weight on the present occasion and that same weight being A. Hoyt did not let him run quite loose. To the surprise of all that usually "Patent safety" Patrician taking off a stride too far from the second obstacle pecked very badly on landing after hitting the fence hard and Captain Randall could not get back, Hoyt meanwhile making every use of his nice galloping weight led the field a cracker, Good Boy jumping beautifully and evidently revelling in it and the favourite Beryl was cooked to a turn before reaching the last hurdle on the run in where she took a dive, Good Boy winning with ludicrous ease and pulling double.

The same brilliant little horseman having shown the public how he could perform "over the big fences" next proceeded to assert his supremacy on the flat by winning cleverly on Money Spinner belonging to Colonel Kavanagh of the 10th Hussars and trained by Aga Shamsudin Shah, after which Jack Scott provided the winner of the 5 furlongs Poona Handicap in Forest, very neatly and quietly ridden by Bond, who was taking Ames' place, while the latter jockey's collar bone is undergoing the processing of healing.

In the Commissioners' Purse over 6 furlongs Russley Rose proved once more what a really brilliant little mare she is and if there is a better pony in India at the present moment it can only I take it be Yankee Boy. That astute and very successful trainer Charles Bleach only just failed to work a brilliant coup with Mr. Bass' S. P. Had it come off the bookies would, I believe, have taken a somewhat severe knock.

Here is a good tip for horse owners troubled with flies in the stable or elsewhere—use "So-Bos-So" or Kill Fly, an excellent American preparation to which our attention was recently drawn in Bombay. On the measuring platform it is much used in Western India and is very highly spoken of.

Mr. Goff's Oberon, we regret to hear, died at Poona last Friday of fever following an acute attack of liver. This is a piece of hard luck in which the owner will have general sympathy.

The Polo tournament at Shillong proved very successful and was carried through without a hitch. Four teams entered. The first match was between the Regiment and the Tadpoles, the former winning by 8 goals and 4 subsidiaries to 2 goals. The Regimental team was composed of Captain Ward (back), Majors Row and Murray and Mr. Grant, while Major Moore (back) Major Gurdon and Messrs. Franklin and Reid represented the Tadpoles. The second match between the Butterflies and the Civilians was won by the latter by 5 goals and 3 subsidiaries to 5 goals. Mr. Henniker (back) and Messrs. Kershaw, Donald and Monahan played for the winners and Captain Rushton (back), Messrs Clifford, Carr and Sanders for the Butterflies. In the finals the Civilians beat the Regiment by seven goals to 3 goals and 2 subsidiaries. Mr. Sanders took Captain Ward's place in the Regimental team, the latter having met with a slight accident being unable to play. The match between the visitors and Shillong was won easily by the homesters.

Sir Humphry de Trafford and party will soon arrive in India and hunt, as usual, in Behar during the cold weather. Our London letter gives some details of the recent sale of his horses in England.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—Notwithstanding the serious recrudescence of the plague in the capital of the Mysore province, the sporting functions which took place during the Dassera festivities were very successful. H. H. the Maharaja is following the traditions of his house and is a sportsman by instinct as he is clearly showing. That he presented the magnificent polo cup annually competed for at the Bangalore tournament is a matter of history and he has now not only presented another cup which was played for at Mysore lately, but himself played in "A" team of the Imperial Service Lancers and played right well. In the opening rounds of the Dassera tournament Bangalore Gymkhana beat Mysore Gymkhana by three goals to one goal and one subsidiary, "A" team Imperial Service Lancers beat the Carabiniers by three goals and five subsidiaries to nil, and "B" team Imperial Service Lancers beat the 1st Durham Light Infantry by 3 goals to 2 goals and 2 subsidiaries. It may be mentioned that H. H. the Maharaja was personally responsible for a goal and a subsidiary, and it was pleasant to see the enthusiastic manner in which the crowd cheered him. That the young ruler of Mysore is a most popular personality with his subjects as well as with European residents in the province, is a "plain unvarnished fact."

In the semi-final the Bangalore Gymkhana, a powerful combination which included three well-known players from the R. E. beat "A" team of the Imperial Service Lancers fairly comfortably, scoring three goals and one subsidiary to their opponents' one goal and one subsidiary, and although the other team of the Lancers made a better fight in the final, the Gymkhana were still too good for them, and won the tournament outright, beating their last opponents by three goals and four subsidiaries to two goals and one subsidiary. The winning team was composed as follows: 1 Mr. Irvine, R. E. 2. Mr. Wagstaffe, R. E. 3. Captain Marshall, R. E., and (back) Major Hayes. The Cup was subsequently presented to the winning team by Mrs. Fitzgerald, Mr. Maconochie, I.C.S., congratulating them on behalf of H. H. the Maharaja, who—said Mr. Maconochie—hoped there would be further competitions next year. His Highness personally called for cheers for the Gymkhana team, and cheers for the Imperial Service Lancers were given in response.

The Bangalore hounds are being resuscitated under the perseverance and energy of Mr. Bernard Hawkins. For several years Mr. Hawkins has gone to considerable expense in this direction, but various mysterious diseases, I believe in the nature of lung complaints have baffled him. At present, however, there are some ten couples in the kennels, Mr. Fisher, A. V. D., hunts them, Captain Adams, 3rd Madras Lancers, acts as whip, and a fair amount of sport is being shown. The great difficulty in Bangalore is that in the dry weather the ground on the plateau is so hard and stony that scent will not lie, whilst now that the rains are just abating and there is a fair amount of moisture about, the crops are so high and extensive that it is next to impossible to get jacks or foxes, for these are the more numerous of the two in the district, to leave cover and give a run. Notwithstanding this there have been several good gallops, and the fields rule fairly large, many ladies gracing the meets with their presence. Amongst other keen and good lady riders here, the names of Mrs. George, Mrs. Hawkins, the Misses Sprot and Mrs. Randall, though the latter lady is at present away, may be mentioned. Mr. Hawkins deserves success for the strenuous pluck with which he has sought to promote sport in the district.

The snipe are "in" as they well may be with the abnormal fall of rain we have had, indeed one or two keen sportsmen got odd birds a month ago. The conditions for "sniping" in Bangalore vary from those in Madras or indeed most other places that I have been in. Once they are in a few birds can always be got, the bags naturally increasing as the season progresses. But during nearly the whole season snipe-shooting here means a good deal of walking, and whilst it is more satisfactory to get the birds up in couples or leashes than to flush them by dozens in the only bit of snipe-ground for miles, it still as aforesaid means exercise. The reason for the above is that there is little or no flat ground in the district—it is all undulating and hence the birds lying on the higher ground when there is a lot of water out gradually descend to lower levels as it dries up. In Madras, on the other hand, when there is much water out it is practically useless to go after the long bills for the ground is all alike and until it dries a bit, there is nowhere for the snipe to lie.

On the 6th instant a bright little Gymkhana race meeting took place in the capital of Mysore, this like the polo tournament being in connection with the Dassera festivities. H. H. the Maharaja gave further proofs of his sporting instincts by presenting two cups and running something in almost every race on the card. The progamme included a lady's nomination race and a race open to officers' chargers of his Highness' Bodyguard. Four times the Maharaja's horses and ponies came home, and twice the young Yuvaraja who is almost as popular in the province as His Highness steered them to victory. A sporting family my masters, a sporting opening to a promising epoch in the history of Mysore. And was there ever a sportsman from the village poacher at home to a Maharaja in India who was not a good fellow?

The Polo tournament was the great attraction during the Maymyo week and large gatherings attended the matches. Seven teams entered. The Waters Babies drawing a bye in the first round. The first game was between the Military Police and the Maymyo Gymkhana. The Police team was a strong quartette and won very easily by 10 goals and 5 subsidiaries to one goal. The winners' team was composed of Captain Purvis, P. Smith, Gordon, and Barnett (back), the Gymkhana being represented by Messrs. Hope, Cuffe, Lloyd and Captain Gabbett (back). The second match was between the Kokine Club and Monywa, a very even game resulting. The Kokine Club put on a goal and a subsidiary in the first chukker and in the next two brought their total to 3 goals and 4 subsidiaries, Monywa made only one goal and the last chukker being pointless the game ended in a win for the club. The teams were: Kokine Club, Messrs. Hutchinson, Fell Shearme and Warwood. Monywa native, MagieKhan, Algie and Harrington. The last match in the first round was between the Royal Fusiliers and Magwe, a good game resulting in a victory for the Fusiliers by 2 goals 6 subsidiaries to 1 subsidiary. Magwe was represented by Messrs. Drurie and Murray and two military policemen, while Captain's Annesley, Johnstone Gordon and Fisher comprised the Fusiliers team.

The marked satisfactory effects of establishing a close time for deer in Ceylon, to which we had occasion to refer a few issues back, are fully corroborated by Mr. Egerton Bracken, an English sportsman who has recently terminated a successful shoot in the island; he mentions that, had it not been for the close time, he could have brought in two cart loads of deer! We cannot sympathise with him in his implied disappointment, but the very observation should induce the authorities to strictly exact the limit of heads one shikari is permitted to acquire.

The latest development in "murderous millinery" is the garnishing of ladies' hats with stuffed bullfinches, the exhibition of which in a Liverpool shop window has called forth a strongly worded but justifiable protest from a correspondent of the London Standard, the writer appeals to all the women of England to boycott establishments where such displays of savagery take place. The Act relating to immolation of mere bright plumaged birds wants expanding, or our soberly attired little songsters may share the fate of their more attractive compeers.

Small country authorities are following the lead of the larger Governments in the matter of game preservation, as we read that the powers that be in Watkins country, N. Y. State, have strictly prohibited the shooting of quail and partridge for two whole years, the incessant potting of what we should call the cockney sportsman, threatening the extinction of

To Lane and Madden the contest for leading place in the winning jockey list at the close of the season has been for some time confined and the last-named during the week ending 19th September took a considerable step towards reducing the advantage of his rival. Now that Madden has reached his "century," interest in the doings of the pair will increase, though, with the lead of ten he now possesses, Lane holds a possition able to stand a vigorous assault. The only jockey within hail is Halsey, who is at 82, and Trigg in turn is (with 61) a long way in advance of M. Cannon and Watts. Alterations necessary in the scores of other prominent riders are few as the result of the week's racing, but it may be noted that H. Jones has brought his to 20 as will be seen in the following table.

We find our remarks regarding the extermination of game by the rajah-conducted millionaire shooting parties in certain parts of India echoed in a letter written by "Gaur" to The Field which reached us last mail. In concluding an interesting letter on Indian Bison Tracking this correspondent remarks:—

"What possible amusement it can be to drive buffaloes, bison, sambhur, everything, and anything with a huge line of elephants up to guns on other elephants I fail to see. It has been, and is being done on a large scale yearly, by a neighbouring Rajah, who entertains for the purpose guests of all nationalities, often pressed upon him by Government, I believe. Forest Department laws and rules are broken, and the benefit to anybody is small. Big game is more or less exterminated, and rhino, buffalo, and bison are now being protected. Tea garden clearances have a deal to answer for so have many Europeans on them, who not only allow natives to shoot, but often lend a gun for the purpose. Such things are incredible, but perfectly true. Let Government strictly put down the big drives for big game. Let any European be fined who lends guns to natives, and have a close time strictly enjoined; but give passes to those few Europeans who are really keen shikaries—there are very, very few—allowing them to kill, say, two bison a year if they can, or two buffaloes or rhinos. This would encourage these men to protect game and put down the night shooting by natives from machans, which goes on over salt-licks and in beds of rivers."

With all this we most cordially agree.

Snipe are very plentiful round and about Calcutta just now. Last week end some good bags were made at Kanchrapara, Mudunpore, Belgatchia and out Budge-Budge way, besides which some respectable stick loads were brought in from stations on the E. I. R. and Bengal Central lines. One local sportsman got 60 couple to his own gun and two guns at Kanchrapara got 80½ couple.

"Lynx" has, we understand, lately been the fortunate recipient of very flattering letters from "Badsworth" and Lord Brougham and Vaux on the subject of his "Bridge Topics." Our Bridge-playing readers need hardly be reminded that "Badsworth," who, by the way, is reputedly one of the finest players in London, was the author of the brilliant treatise which launched Bridge on its marvellous career so that praise from such a quarter is praise indeed and more especialy when it is borne in mind that "Badsworth's" views in several important particulars cannot be in consonance with those of "Lynx." To Lord Brougham belongs the credit of having introduced Bridge to the notice of the Portland Club, at the time the redoubtable stronghold of Whist, and so to Englishmen all the world over. These eulogies invest "Lynx's" work with a conspicuously enviable cachet and he should indeed be proud of them. For ourselves, we may say, they are eminently gratifying as irrefutably confirming the very favourable opinion expressed of "Bridge Topics" in these colums last July. We felicitate our reviewer on his judgment and "Lynx" on his success.

Athletic Notes.

TWO more races were sailed at Naini Tal last week. The Ormsby Cup was won by Spray, nicely handled by Mr. Barclay in 1hr. 22mins. 40secs. The handsome trophy, presented by that good sportsman, Mr. C. H. Byrne, was brought off on the 7th instant and resulted in a win for Violet with Infant second.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—Another programme of mounted sports was successfully carried out in connexion with the Bombay Gymkhana, on Wednesday evening. The competitors were more numerous and the attendance much larger than was the case at the last weekly meeting, when, of course, there was a counter-attraction in the football tournament then in progress. But we have now said "good-bye" to football until the next monsoon, while the cricket season is fast coming to a close. Consequently people are on the look out for something to do of an evening, and these weekly mounted sports are the chief attraction. The programme arranged for Wednesday was of an attractive character, and a keen interest was evinced in most of the events. As usual, the programme opened with the tent-pegging competitions. In that for horses there were five competitors, but Mr. H. S. Symons was the only one to take the two pegs and thus won easily. That for ponies attracted a larger entry and competition was very keen, the form shown being an improvement on recent sports. The final issue was fought out by Messrs T. D. Moore and S. M. McCausland, who were sent down no less than three times before the judges were able to come to a decision, Mr. Moore being placed first. Some half a dozen contested. The Cucumber Cutting competition, which was won by Mr. S. M. McCausland, with Mr. T. D. Moore second. Then came the most amusing event of the evening—the Indian Waterloo Cup (for terriers only), for which a dozen or fifteen terriers of all sorts and conditions lined up. Unfortunately, however, some of them were totally unconcerned at the frantic movements of their owners at the other end of the course, and took matters easily, while a couple paused near the starting post to settle a little private dispute. The winner turned up in Mr. MacLachlan's fox terrier Jock. As usual, the programme wound up with a couple of scurries. In that for horses there were seven starters, and the handicapping produced a good finish between the first three, Mr. A. Sidney Galtrey's mare Under Housemaid (scratch) beating Mr. Pooley's Musty Lass (20 yards start) by a neck, while Mr. Alston's Neptune (scratch) was well up for third place. Quite a big field turned out for the pony scurry which was won by Mr. Henderson Gray's Florican (5 yards start), Mr. F. H. Owen's Banker (25 yards) being second, and Mr. R. F. R. Cooke's Conductor (scratch) third.

During the past week a number of competitions have been carried out in connexion with the Royal Bombay Golf Club—it has been the annual Golf week. The programme arranged was similar to that of previous years. On Monday and Tuesday a scratch competition by Bogey play, on Wednesday and Thursday a scratch and handicap competition combined by medal play, and on Friday and Saturday foursomes by handicap play. The course was rather longer than for some years, and every endeavour was made to utilise such obstacles as existed, while screens were freely brought into play. The results of Monday and Tuesday's play showed that the Bogey score had been fixed somewhat low. On the first day's play Mr. L. Stansfield led, being two down, followed by Mr. Osborne Marshall three down, with three other players four down. On the second day's play Mr. Stansfield and Mr. Marshall were each two down, and the others were more. Mr. Stansfield thus won the first prize, Mr. Marshall the second, and Mr. Carnegie the third prize, the latter being four down on both days. The others who made returns were Messrs. J. Stiven (9 down), Mr. H. S. Jacob (11 down), Mr. D. H. Brand (11 down), and Mr. C. M. Gray (14 down). In view of the fact that there was diversity of opinion with regard to the Bogey score fixed an analysis of the nineteen cards handed in shows some interesting results. In the first place at no hole was Bogey beaten by any player by more than a stroke; not a single player won the 1st, 3rd, 5th or 8th holes, while at the 3rd only on three cards was the hole even halved with Bogey. Bogey had lost the 2nd, 4th and 6th holes only on one card each, while to all the players put together Bogey only lost 11 holes, and 9 of these were won by the three players who came in 1st, 2nd and 3rd, respectively. All this would tend to show that the Bogey score was rather too low, as the competitors were quite representative of Bombay golf.

On Wednesday and Thursday the competition was by medal play, with prizes for the best scratch and handicap scores. On the first day Mr. Osborne Marshall led with a score of 43 for the nine holes, closely followed by Messrs Pechey, Gray and Jacob with 44 each. On the second day, although one or two players improved on their Wednesday's play, the scores generally were high. For the scratch event Mr. Osborne Marshall came in first with a score of 90 for the 18 holes, followed by Messrs. Gray and Meikle with 91.

The last two played off for second place, when Mr. Gray won. For the handicap prize Mr. Jacob returned scores of 44 and 48, which, with his handicap of 4, made him 88 net. Mr. T. W McLachlan, with 51 and 49=100—12=88, tied with Mr. Jacob for the first prize. Messrs. Gray and Meikle tied for the third place, but as they had each taken a prize in the scratch competition they were ineligible for a handicap prize, and the third prize in the handicap consequently fell to Mr. Colin Macfadyen.

The concluding competition took place on Friday and Saturday when play was for foursomes by handicap Bogey play. There was every promise of some good scores being made, considerable attention having been paid to the links, and every effort made to roll out the hoof marks made on Wednesday evening while the mounted sports were in progress. Just as play was about to start, on Friday, however, down came the rain, and in a very short space of time large portions of the links, including several of the greens, were under water and on some of the putting greens putters were at a discount, a mashie being the club most required. On Saturday, however, the course was in nice condition. On the first day Messrs. Miller and Brand led, being one down, followed by Messrs. Pechey and Greig two down: but on the second day the latter couple improved on their play and were one up, while the former couple fell off. Messrs. Pechey and Greig thus took the first prize, and Messrs. Miller and Brand the second. This brought to a close a very successful week, much of the credit for which is due to the genial Honorary Secretary, Mr. Osborne Marshall, who was untiring in his efforts to ensure success. As usual, however, the competitions have only been contested by Bombay players, the efforts of the Committee of the R. B. G. C. to attract golfers from other stations having again proved unsuccessful.

The Bengal Cyclists Association, we believe, will offer no championship events this year. Last year's display in the wheel races, following on the poor exhibitions of the previous year, and the certainty that the public interest in cycle racing has vanished, have influenced this decision quite as much as the fact that the B. C. A. has come to the end of its funds. We believe the P. A. Meeting programme will contain no cycle races next year; these items were only left in last year after much discussion as to the advisability of retaining them, with what result we all know.

The Chakrata week at Mussoorie was a great success. The cricket match was of course the big event, the homesters beating Chakrata by nine wickets—a full account will be found in our Cricket columns. The visitors won both the singles and doubles in the tennis tournament, Capt Dyer and Mr. Chisholm beating Mr. E. M. Ashworth and Captain Turner by two sets to one in the doubles and Captain Dyer beating Mr. Ashworth by two sets to one in the singles. Mussoorie won the rackets doubles, Majors Hobbs and Montresor defeating Messrs Hayhurst and McConaghey by by three sets to love. But in the singles Chakrata won, Hayhurst beating Hobbs by 3 sets to two. The hockey match ended in a draw of 4 goals each. Hayhurst won the Billiards singles, but Mussoorie represented by Lieutenant-Colonel Carey and Mr. Campbell beat Hayburst and Cadogan in the doubles. The week was brought to a conclusion on the 26th with a dinner at the club.

The final in the Harris Football Tournament was played at Poona on the 12th instant, the North Staffordshire Regiment defeating the Cheshires by one goal to nil. Details in our Football columns.

The Charity Association Football match at Rangoon was played on the 3rd instant, the contesting teams being the civil and the military. A good game was witnessed, the civilians winning by three goals to two. In spite of bad weather there was a good attendance and the gate realised Rs. 806.

The Dinapore Hockey league began on the 6th instant and is now in full swing. Two games were played off on the opening day. The K.O.S.B's. beat the 73 R. F. A. by a goal to nil after a fast and exciting game. The match between the officers 5th B. L. I. and Khagole resulted in a victory for the former by 4 goals to one. On the 9th instant the K.O.S.B's. met the Surreys and a good game ended in a draw of two goals all. The Surreys were leading at half time by two goals to one, but the Borderers put in some hard work in the second half and equalised matters. On the same day the 73rd R. F. A. met the officers 5th B. L. I., the gunners winning by a goal to nil after a hard struggle.

The last event on the programme of the Calcutta Rowing Club for this season is the Senior Sculls for the Power Cup; it will probably be contested on the 14th proximo in the new Clasper best boats that have just been landed.

A crew of Calcutta oarsmen stroked by Mr. L. Bagshaw have challenged any one in the C. R. C. to row them half mile in sliding seated tub fours. The challengers will probably be, Messrs. Bagshawe, Maxwell, Crawford, and Landon. We believe a crew composed of Messrs. Green, Tassie, Burke, Jr., and Wilson have accepted the challenge, and the race will probably be rowed on the 31st instant.

At the Midland Automobile Club's hill-climbing competition, held on Sunrising Hill, Warwickshire, Eng., the fastest time was made on two cars owned by Mr. A. J. Holder. Both of the cars were fitted with Dunlop tyres.

The 10 kilometres (6 miles 376 yards) motor cycle championship of the world, held in Paris, was won by Maurice Fournier, riding a four-cylindered machine fitted with Dunlop tyres, the time for the distance being 5 mins. 55⅕secs., over a mile a minute.

A motor-car tour from London to the capital of the Highlands, Inverness, constitutes a run not to be lightly undertaken by the most enthusiastic of motorists. Yet an absolute non-stop run over the 601 miles between these places has to be recorded. This remarkable achievement, which dwarfs anything else in the way of non-stop runs ever before accomplished in England, stands to the credit of Messrs George and William du Cros, who drove a new three-cylinder 8-h. p. Panhard and a new type 10-h. p. Panhard car respectively.

Mr. Loxton Hunter acted as observer, and from the start from the Automobile Club, Piccadilly, on Tuesday morning last week, till the arrival at Inverness on the follwing evening the Panhard engines ran continuously. The weather encountered in the Highlands was shocking, snow and sleet rendering the climbing of the Grampians most difficult.

Two matches played by the English Rugby team touring in South Africa resulted in a defeat and a draw for the Britishers on the 22nd August; they were beaten by the Transvaal by three goals to one and three days afterwards they drew with the representatives of South Africa with two goals each. The English team is composed as follows: E. M. Harrison (back), G. F. Collett, R. T. Skrimshire, L. L. Greig, and G. I. Davidson (three-quarter backs), J. I. Gillespie and P. S. Hancock (half-backs), Mark Morrison, W. P. Scott, F. M. Stout, A. Tedford, T. A. Gibson, W. T. Cave, Joe Wallace, and R. S. Smyth (forwards).

General Notes.

SERGEANT Ward of the 6th Dragoons was found drowned in his bath at Bangalore on the morning of the 7th instant.

During the recent floods in Secunderabad the Boat House, which was one of the sights of the city and had yet to be completed, was completely wrecked.

The new building of the Bahauddin College at Junagadh was struck by lightning during a heavy storm on the 10th instant. One of the walls was damaged and two boys were stunned by the flash.

A heavy storm at Agra on the 9th instant caused much damage. Houses collapsed and the Taj also suffered, the central dome having sprung a leak just above the sarcophagi of Shah Jehan and Moomtaz-i-Mahal.

We have the pleasure to acknowledge receipt of a new edition of Messrs. Mason, Hill and Rogers' catalogue, a publication in which our fair readers will find much to interest them in prospect of the coming "season."

His Excellency the Viceroy accompanied by Colonel Baring and Captains Baker-Carr and Keighley arrived in Simla yesterday from their recent trip, the sport during which has proved rather disappointing.

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor accompanied by Mr. E. L. Hammond, Private Secretary, arrived in Calcutta last Saturday from Darjeeling. Mr. Bignell, Commissioner of Police, Calcutta and Mr. Walsh, Deputy Commissioner, Darjeeling, came down by the same train.

Captain J. D Allison, Secretary of the Calcutta International Shipmasters' Club since its foundation, 13 years ago, was last Saturday afternoon the recipient of a cheque for Rs. 1,600, as a testimonial for his past services to the club. Mrs. Allison was presented with a silver tea service.

One of the big functions during the Naini Tal week was the marriage of Miss Rothwell, niece of Sir James and Lady Digges La Touche with Mr. E. J. Maldon, I. C. S., which was celebrated on the 5th instant. The wedding was largely attended and was the social event of the season.

At last Calcutta has made a practical effort to get on terms with Bombay in respect of its hackney carriages. Last week 150 gharries of the new pattern required by the recent regulations were presented for licenses and after a very careful scrutiny 50 only were passed. Good! This looks like the thin edge of the wedge of improvement, though we are still a long way behind Bombay with her comfortable rubber-tyred, well horsed victorias and clean clad drivers.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 25th September 1903.

THE times are quiet and uneventful. We wait for the ministerial situation to straighten itself out with indulgent patience for nobody seems to care much what happens. The St. James' Gazette appointed Ministers to fill the vacancies and, the club coterie thought, did it very well: but the King has not been pleased to confirm the appointments made from Whitefriars Street, preferring apparently to see what his Prime Minister has to say on the subject. Meantime, it would seem as though every back door and scullery in Downing Street and Whitehall were haunted by alert reporters, for the comings and goings of messengers betwixt London and Balmoral and the Continent are chronicled with feverish speculation and the air is heavy with rumour and contradiction.

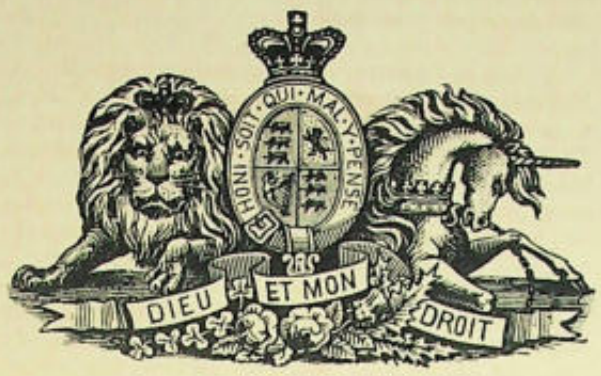
There are the beginnings of a not very edifying quarrel between Sir Archibald Hunter and Admiral the Hon'ble Hedworth Lambton. The General in his evidence before the Commission on the War spoke contemptuously of the practice made by the naval guns at Ladysmith: it was so bad, he said, that he offered to do better with the assistance of pupils from the Ladysmith girls' school. The Admiral, to whom these remarks were read by one of the Commissioners, retorted that General Hunter merely showed himself excessively ignorant; that a soldier was no judge of naval gun practice, fire with field guns and shrapnel being a totally different thing from fire with the long 4·7 naval gun. He admitted that the carrying power of the naval guns varied as much as 500 or 600 yards between the cool of the morning and the heat of the afternoon owing to the inconstancy of the cordite: but he claimed that the practice was, notwithstanding, brilliant: and he wrote to the Admiralty officially, demanding unreserved apology from General Hunter. General Hunter replies that the Commission asked for opinions and he had given his opinion: and that, so far as he is concerned, is the whole matter.



* * * * * *

No doubt that is the whole matter: but I doubt if it be an end of the matter: the Lambtons are not men who sit down tamely under offence and nobody doubts but there is a good deal more to come before the end is in sight. The Admiral, whose attitude and language are dangerously temperate, attributes General Hunter's criticism to lapse of memory. Sir Archibald's memory certainly plays him tricks; he said in his evidence that on the occasion of the big fight on 6th January 1900 at Ladysmith Sir George White was ill in bed; a statement which took away the breath of his hearers.

Some of the remarks and opinions of Mr. Plowden the police magistrate who is "reminiscing" in an evening paper, excite comment. He declares himself opposed to capital punishment on the ground that the maintained annual averages of murders and executions prove its futility. He considers that if death were an effectual punishment it must long ago have stamped out the crime of murder. It is curious reasoning. Is it possible, by fear of consequence to stamp jealousy, cupidity and temper from the complexity of the human character? It appears to me that it would be equally reasonable to object to punishment of every kind on the ground that they have not stamped out the offences for which they are awarded.

Sir Humphrey de Trafford's sale took place on Wednesday at Leicester. Sir Humphrey is going to spend the winter shooting in India and the sale of his big stud of show horses, hunters and ponies has been looked forward to as he had announced his intention of making a "clean sweep", only two of the lots having a reserve put on them. Red Cloud and Red Ruby, show ring favourites, went for 1,050 and 1,000gs. respectively, but the crowd was more interested in the working hunters. Sir G. Greenal, Master of the Belvoir, got by do means a dear bargain in Raven at 300 gs.; Sir Patterson Nickalls got Light Heart for 260gs. and Mr. Fernie got a nice one in Rifleman for 250gs. The polo ponies sold well and the bidding was brisk in several cases: Pale Face and Grisel brought each 180gs. Snowball 130gs. and Diamond 120gs. There were a tremendous lot of well-known people in the crowd: it reminded one of Lord Lonsdale's sale a while ago.

It is not very clear to which silence the title of Mr. Haddow Chambers' New play refers to as Golden. all the leading characters exercise a silence more or less, but generally less, discreet in course of the four acts. The working out of the plot is not particularly convincing and the piece would not suffer if a good deal of dialogue which does not forward the action were cut out. Randolph Carlingby, artist (Mr. Frank Mills) is in love with Olivia Mills (Miss Jessie Bateman): she is rich and Randolph is poor and he, high-souled man, therefore will not propose. Randolph's brother Tom's wife is Olivia's sister; and Mrs. Tom (Miss Dorothy Grimston) anxious for Olivia to marry, muddles out a plot to make Randolph believe Olivia's fortune has been dissipated by a notorious solicitor. Olivia, albeit, unwillingly agrees to be silent as to the truth (silence No 1). Mrs. Tom Carlingby takes her friend Lady Arlington into confidence, keeping back only the name of the man who wants to marry Olivia (silence No 2). Lady Arlington is all eagerness to forward a scheme for Olivia's happiness, but in the next act she discovers that the man who is to be lured to Olivia's feet is Randolph, and she is "gone on" Randolph herself. She has a husband who deserted her, but Lady Arlington has for long been contemplating an appeal to him not to oppose the proceedings she wishes to take to obtain a decree nisi to the end that Randolph may marry her. Of course she has told nobody anything of her affection for the artist (silence No 3). In the third act, Mrs. Tom blunders into success by telling the tea table that Randolph has confessed his passion for Olivia: Lady Arlington drops her teacup with the shock, but determines bravely to stand aside for Olivia's benefit. Randolph has a tête à tête with Olivia, but having an "understanding" with Lady Arlington doesn't propose (silence No 4). Eventually Lady Arlington tells Randolph she doesn't care for him and the situation is clumsily smoothed out for the Randolph-Olivia wedding. It is one of those plays which depends for its progress on unnatural omissions on the part of the characters: which would be abruptly cut short in Act I by the briefest access of straight forward-dealing or elementary common sense on the part of one of the principals. Hence its failure to satisfy: and it did not satisfy. The subordinate characters were far more acceptable. Sir Charles Wallford (Mr. Kenneth Douglas) as an empty-headed gilded youth was exceedingly good, and his interview, per telephone, with his formidable mother when he engages himself to a ballet girl was really comical. Randolph's man Patsey Giles (Mr. Webb Darleigh) ex-pugilist with a gift of quip and taste for snatch of song also helped the piece along bravely. Miss Jessie Bateman played Olivia with force when the author gave her a chance.

Being at the Garrick the appearance of the Golden Silence heralded the appearance of a letter from Mr. Bourchier to the press to explain why the Times had taken no notice of the play. Mr. A. B. Walkley, you may remember, was refused admittance to that dubious treat The Whitewashing of Julia in the spring. When Madame Rejane's manager sent the usual invitation to the Times for her series of French plays at the Garrick, when the Whitewashing of Julia was finished, the Times returned the ticket saying that it would not notice any play at the Garrick so long as that theatre remained under the present management. That is the situation: the Garrick made an outcast of Mr. Walkley, who personifies the dramatic instinct of the Times and the Times makes an outcast of Mr. Bourchier, who personifies the Garrick. And the world rolls round much as usual.

* * * * * *

I have not been to see the Japanese play at the Tivoli and the account furnished by my authorised agent is a little mixed: whether this be the fault of the agent or the play or both I am unable to say. It appears to hinge upon a bad dream which attacked Mr. Basil Torrington's Japanese wife by reason of her omission to dine one evening: she dreamed that Mr. Torrington was untrue to her and that she stabbed him: and just when the dream is growing unpleasantly realistic Mr. T. comes home whistling the whistle of the just and demands a meal. My agent is not sure whether Miss Pilar Morin who acts O Mat San, otherwise Mrs. Torrington, is Japanese or not; but has no doubt concerning the Japannédness of the scenery, the dress and the stage atmosphere. The piece was very heartily received and my agent, rather huffily, tells me I'd better go myself.

* * * * * *

The Moody-Manners Company's prize of £250 for an opera has been won by a Mr. MacAlpin, organist and choirmaster of a Presbyterian church in the suburbs. The opera was produced at Covent Garden on Tuesday night, and though there were certain minor defects often noticeable on first night of any play, The Cross and the Crescent went well and was cordially received by a fairly full house. The story is based on Coppée's Pour la Couronne and lacks nothing of dramatic power to commend it to the competent librettist. The Wagnerian influence is rather obvious in much of Mr. MacAlpin's music and where Wagner is not paramount there is much both harmonious and tuneful. I need not, I imagine, say much about the "book;" the scene lies in Bulgaria, time fifteenth century, main theme the slaughter by his son of the father who would betray his Christian country to the unspeakable Turk to the end that he may receive the Bulgarian crown from the Sultan. Son safeguards with silence his father's dishonour and en route to the scaffold is stabbed by an adoring Greek girl who then stabs herself. The story in opera, unless it be Gilbert and Sullvian's, does not count for much and I only say thus much of it to afford an idea of the scope Mr. MacAlpin enjoys for dramatic composition. We shall hear of him again I make no doubt.

* * * * * *

It has been a busy week at the theatres. Thursday night saw the production of Mr. J. M. Barrie's Little Mary at Wyndhams. The keynote of the piece is something similar to that of The Admirable Crichton as its purpose is to convey a lesson to the "Upper Ten" who, Mr. Barrie appears to think, habitually over-eat themselves. Perhaps this is screwing his moral down too closely; but when the "Uncomfortable Play" as the author calls it, came near its end and Moira Loney, whose cures are the talk of the town, told Lord Carlton that "Little Mary" is "Stomach," nobody and nothing else, I felt justified of the opinion that the genial playwright held over indulgence at the table the chief shortcoming of those born in high places. It is a curious play: a sort of "miracle play." The Prologue shows us the back shop of Mr. Terence Reilly, chemist, in a very small way of business. Enter Lord Carlton with a prescription for nervous headache: the Earl introduces himself to Moira Loney, addressed by the children as "mother:" and Moira tells him that Grandpa, Terence Reilly aforesaid, will cure him. Terence is an Irishman who loves the "best set" of English people and pines to work them good. He is writing a book in which he has set out what is the matter with them and the remedies: curtain falls on the completion of said book.

* * * * * *

Act I reveals the court yard of Lady Plumleigh's county house. Her daughter Lady Milly is ill: the best doctors can't cure her and her anxious mother has sent for Moira Loney, who in the seven years which have elapsed since the Prologue has made a great reputation as a quack healer under the soubriquet of the "Stormy Petrel." Lord Carlton is around but doesn't remember the "little mother" of the chemist's back shop: he introduces her to the doctors who have called to see Lady Milly and they insult her as a quack. Act II shows the results of Moira's prescriptions or treatment. Lady Milly is up and about: the school-boy, Earl of Plumleigh, has ceased loafing and works like a brick: Lord Rolfe, son of Earl Carlton, has begun to consider the paternal wishes even to the point of breaking off his engagement with Eleanor Gray the actress. Act III centres on the admission wrung from Moira that the "Little Mary," her invisible aide, is "Stomach," and that her reliance is on Grandpa, the fruits of whose life are written in those three large manuscript folios we saw completed in the Prologue.

Whether the audience took in the whole moral of the play and approved it: or whether the perpetual play of wit and good-humoured satire won their suffrages. I need not try to decide. I have my own opinion and it is distinctly in favour of the latter. The play was admirably acted. Mr. John Hare had a rapturous welcome when he appeared as Lord Carlton: Mr. Henry Vibart did well as the Irish chemist, but learned his Irish in Glasgow I should guess; Mr. Eric Lewis was very good as Sir Jennings Pyke, the swell doctor. Honours of the evening though distinctly went to Miss Nina Boucicault, who grasped the character of Moira with conspicuous success and made it a real creation.

It is long since so serious an English mountaineering fatality has occurred as that of Monday afternoon on Scawfell. Mr. R. W. Broadrick, one of the masters at Fettes, Messrs. Stanley Ridsdale, A. E. W. Garrett and H. C. Jupp, it seems tried, under the guidance of the first named, to climb Scawfell Pinnacle by a route never before attempted; other parties attacking the summit by other routes, all intending to meet on the top. How the accident occurred can only be a matter of conjecture, but Messrs. Webb, Slade and Preston, who composed one of the other climbing parties, passed on their return home along the base of the precipice which forms one face of Scawfell Pinnacle and there found 30 or 40 feet from the rocks, Messrs Broadrick, Garrett and Jupp dead and Mr. Ridsdale dying. They were roped together, and the rope was so tangled that it was an undertaking to cut Mr. Ridsdale free from it. The men had fallen, it is supposed, from a height of about 400 feet sheer and were frightfully mangled. Mr. Ridsdale, whose back and legs were broken, survived for about five hours after being found; as far as could be gathered from him, the man who was leading fell, and the jerk produced the inevitable result.

As I close my letter this week a friend comes in to ask if I have heard that Mr. Barrett, the head man of Pears Soap is going to challenge for the America Cup with a yacht, unbuilt of course, but to be named Bubbles: and have I heard that the "boss" of Bovril, Ld., also contemplates a challenge. I had not heard either rumour nor have I seen it in print: but the suggestion of converting the America Cup race into a means of trade advertisement has nothing improbable in it. The reason why these two eminent firms do not come yet into the open and throw down the glove, is because an unnamed lady in Scotland (rather vague this) is understood to contemplate challenging.

'SPORT ON THE BLUE NILE

"TROPHIES including Skulls, Horns of Alligator and Crocodile now in possession of I. C. Johnson, Esq., senior." This promising description of the picture that faces Mr. Johnson, junior's introductory chapter is calculated to whet the appetite of the reviewer: an alligator on the Blue Nile, or the White for that matter, would interest any naturalist: but alligators and crocodiles with horns! Alas: this is only an example of the author's chaotic English: he killed crocodiles it is true, but their horns exist in the author's faulty composition alone: anything to equal Mr. Johnson's 'style" we have never read. The results are sometimes quaint: "the bullet struck home cutting through the spine of the amphibian which woke him up with a start;' why it should be left to the severed spine of the amphibian to wake him up with a start is not clear; nor is it of much account: a shot through the spine which produced no worse consequence than to awaken the victim with a start is a curiosity. There were others, but these are described in another paragraph. Mr. Johnson travelled on the Soudan railway to Khartoum amid curious phenomena: 'Each man had his own bedding, provisions table service candle-stick and personal servants, who circulate in the cars attending to the wants of their respective masters." The bedding, table service, and candle-stick that can not only circulate in cars but can attend to the wants of their respective masters would be simply invaluable in the Soudan or anywhere else: with such competent articles of outfit around we cannot understand why the author had to complain of deficiencies on the part of his Arab servants. Mr. Johnson's distinctions are cut a little fine sometimes: we have been trying to get at the precise meaning of this:—"I fired and the lion ceased to live. It was too sudden a decease to warrant the assertion that the lion died, he simply ceased to live: nor did the detonation which ensued convey a meaning to a brainless mass of prostrate inanimity.' Passing over the nice discrimination between dying and ceasing to live we feel some curiosity concerning the place in the sequence of events of the detonation "which ensued"; and were the brains of the mass of prostrate inanimity blown out? This lion, by the way, had "notorious anthropophagous pridilections:" this is not uncommon in lions, but we do not remember to have heard it put quite that way before. Mr. Johnson has what would seem to be a very real grievance against the Egyptian Government who fined him smartly for trespassing in a game reserve, whereas the official map supplied him was in fault: if he pled his case in the same extraordinary style as he has written his book we can feel no surprise at his failure to procure justice: we are conscious ourselves that the glaring defects of his narrative handicap us in the endeavour to render justice to his achievements as a sportsman.

This trip up the Blue Nile would appear to be the author's maiden expedition after big game: he shot on a license issued by the Egyptian Government, and despite many difficulties, not the least of which was the lack of a competent shikari, he killed all the game his permit sanctioned: his knowledge of species was clearly very crude as he did not know a reed buck until it was identified for him by the authorities who "rubbed in" the information with a mild fine of £1 per head. Mr. Johnson complains that the Government have "reserved" all the best shooting grounds in the Soudan for their own officers; it was certainly tantalising to be encamped in a gameless country and hear on the forbidden side of the river the roar of lions, and the crash of elephants in the jungle; but the fact that the author secured all the trophies allowed by his license should relieve him of any sore feeling on this score. We have our own opinion about the propriety of giving residents preferential opportunities of shikar: the attractions of life in the Soudan, Uganda and kindred lands are not so dazzling that the opulent visitor need complain of the favouritism shown in this regard. The author, by the way, secured what proved to be the record reed buck head—so he was assured by the authorities who examined his trophies for taxation; unfortunately he does not think of giving the measurements of the "champion head" as he calls it. He has the right stuff in him we feel sure, but he is obviously a young hand and has something to learn in sportscraft: thus it is not playing the game to aim at an antelope's forelegs and bring it down with the legs smashed below the knee when a fair shoulder shot might have been put in. Mr. Johnson's idea seems to have been that by thus disabling his quarry he made more certain of it than he could by a sportsmanlike shot with his much vaunted ·303, whereto we suggest that if the '303 cannot be depended to stop an antelope, it were better discarded for a heavier weapon. Nor is it good business to "bring down reed buck at several hundred yards," the range thus vaguely indicated being mentioned in proof that he could kill at a distance whence he could not discern the presence or absence of horns. However Mr. Johnson is not afraid of hard work and does not spare pains to get his game: and he will no doubt subscribe to the more orthodox tenets of the sportsman's creed after a little wider experience. It is not a matter of sporting ethics or expediency; but we suggest that when a young gentleman's "general procedure in cases of nocturnal rowdyism or revelry was the very effective one of putting a rifle bullet into the midst of the revellers which without doing any bodily harm" etc, the young gentleman acts with such criminal recklessness that the authorities would be more than justified in refusing him license to shoot in the country again.

There are some capital reproductions of the author's photographs, though the subjects are not always well chosen: there are also a few very poor plates from the same source.

'Sport on the Blue Nile. By Isaac C. Johnson. H. Banks and Son, London.

Regular frequenters of Brighton Races will not need to be told that the view of the proceedings from the stand is frequently considerably impeded by what is known as a "sea fog." A rather worse visitation than usual occurred on the Cup Day in 1869, when Restitution snatched victory from Morna's grasp after the race had looked at the mare's mercy.

Upon being congratulated on his fine riding, Daley, who rode Restitution, smiled as he replied,—

"Yes; but it was just a bit lucky. I knew Morna must be in front of me somewhere, though I hadn't the least idea where she was."

Those who were present and witnessed this race will doubtless recall to memory the figure of the late Baron Rothschild, and recollect the somewhat undue haste with which he grasped the cup and hurried off to Ryde with it, the trophy decorating the Baroness's dinner-table the same evening.

REMINISCENCES OF SOUTH AFRICAN SHIKAR.

IN the early fifties when I was with my regiment on the frontier of the Cape of Good Hope, in South Africa, I made the acquaintance, and became on very friendly terms with one of the most celebrated elephant hunters, and who was known there as such.

In those days these hunting fields were considered to be the very best in the world, and no other land could boast of more daring and enthusiastic hunters.

Old Edward Driver was the most successful huntsman of the day. He was a man of indomitable courage, and had served as a volunteer and also in the capacity of a guide in several of the disastrous wars against the Kaffirs, which time after time devastated the country.

I will now proceed to narrate an episode which occurred to this plucky old man, who was after elephants in company with two of his friends—the Thackerays. Driver was going down a deep gorge in one of the kloofs over-looking the great Fish river. He had separated himself from his companions, and suddenly he was assailed by a huge male rhinocerous. This formidable brute, without the slightest provocation, rushed out from a dense thorny bush in which he was concealed and within the twinkling of an eye Driver and his horse were sent flying into the air. Driver luckily fell clear of the horn, and some distance from his mount, still grasping his rifle in his hand. As he was neither stunned nor disabled, he rushed into the nearest cover and concealed himself, and from his lair he witnessed the infuriated rhino trampling and goring his prostate horse. Driver, instantly aiming at the root of the rhino's ear sent a fourounce bullet into its brain killing it dead on the spot. Just at this juncture his companions rejoined him who as well as may be imagined were both pleased and gratified at seeing this famous hunter standing over the carcase of his adversary. The frontal horn of this animal Driver told me was fully four feet in length.

Needless to say Driver's horse was literally cut across with its bowels lying out, and was immediately put out of its misery by a bullet.

Driver, on another occasion, with the same party, was out after a herd of elephants, which in those days swarmed in hundreds in the dense forests known as the Fish River Bush. He was pursued by a bull elephant that one of his comrades had wounded. Jumping off his horse Driver unfortunately fell on his back: of course the horse bolted. In a moment the infuriated pachyderm was on him, and he would have been trampled to death in an instant had it not been for his two companions who very pluckily and intentionally diverted the attention of the angry beast from the prostate Driver.

The elephant was luckily enticed away by Driver's protectors, who shortly afterwards succeeded in shooting this monarch of the forest. Having accomplished this they returned to look for their brave friend, expecting to find a mangled corpse. But it was not so. To their delight and astonishment Driver was found on his legs leaning against a tree, perfectly conscious holding out a mutilated hand, and using very expressive language against all elephants in general, and especially against the one who had so grievously assaulted him.

Driver being an extraordinary tough old customer was after a short period out again in quest of elephants, and it was a well-known fact in South Africa, that this fine old settler and hunter made a very considerable sum of money from the proceeds of his numerous hunting expeditions, for to my knowledge he was able to purchase a very large tract of land in the valley known to this day as Driver's Bush Kloof, and many other parts in that region of South Africa bear his name in the three vernaculars of the country; for instance, some lofty hills are known as "Driver's Kop', "Driver's Berg," "Driver's Vontein" and so forth, showing how this remarkable man had left his his mark all over the country.

It was not only as a mighty hunter that good old Driver was known, but from his remarkable acuteness, and his perfect knowledge of the Kaffir character he always proved himself to be the most valuable and trustworthy guide and instructor any one of our Governors or Commanders-in-Chief ever had in cases of emergency in that land.

To show the pluck and cool determination of Driver he made a bet of a considerable amount with the Commissioner of the district that he would, previous to shooting three of the largest tuskers in a herd, first mark them with a piece of chalk on their hind quarters with his initial "D," and bring them to book afterwards, and this feat he performed to my certain knowledge, and that put thereby £100 into his pocket.

On one occasion when in his capacity as Captain of the Guides, he accompanied British troops under the command of Colonel Harry Smith, who was afterwards well known as the hero of Aliwal in the Sikh War, the then paramount chief of Kaffir land, named Eno, had been captured and held prisoner by Colonel Harry Smith, and when Eno was being conveyed to the nearest British camp, the party had to cross the Raishkamma river. Eno was placed between two cavalry men. Whilst they were fording the river and got half way across it, and almost waist deep swirling over the rocky bed of the river, Eno suddenly plunged forward and dived head long into a deep pool and for a time was lost to sight, to the intense amusement of his guard which included Colonel Harry Smith and Driver. Without a moment's hesitation Driver putting spurs to his horse's dashed into the pool with a horse pistol in hand and descrying Eno's head emerging from the water, some thirty yards off, he urged his mount towards the woolly-headed fugitive, who was swimming desperately to the opposite bank, which, however, he was never fated to reach alive, for one bullet from Driver's pistol pierced the unfortunate wretch's brain: he rolled over and was swept down the stream. Eno's corpse was found very shortly afterwards jammed between the rocks, and was brought into camp and identified.

When the news spread through Kaffir land that the "Great Chief" Eno was no more, it had a most disheartening effect upon all the Kaffir tribes, who had for so many years been hostile to the white man's Government, and in a few weeks the various subordinate Kaffir chiefs sued for peace, which was eventually and gladly granted to them, inasmuch as the closing of this long and desultory war enabled the colonists to return to the farms.

Driver, as reward for his services, was granted a very large tract of land situated in a beautiful valley not far from the bank of the great Fish river and now known as "Driver's Bush."

In subsequent Kaffir wars this grand hunter was always to the front, and without ever demanding the slightest emolument was ever ready to aid the British with his knowledge and experience of the country.

HINTS TO BEGINNERS.

WHERE TO FIND SNIPE.

EARLY in the season in fine weather snipe will be found in those rice fields in which the water is not too deep for them and in which the mud is of that soft consistence so dear to the snipe-shooter's heart. If the crop is backward, and the cover light, they will shelter under the west and north sides of the ridges between the fields. They avoid very heavy rice as they cannot rise out of it with ease. Aus dhan stubbles are excellent finds, especially after the stubbles have sprouted again.

After heavy rain look for the birds on higher land amongst light thatching grass, sugarcane, airee, autumn kalai, etc., as the rise of water in the ricefields drives them out. I remember being out once in a shower of over two inches of rain one September. There were numbers of flooded-out snipe flying about in search of drier quarters. They eventually collected into wisps and made off for some thatching grass. In a cyclone the birds get into quite heavy cover.

Early and late in the season, when sun is very hot at midday, the snipe often seek shelter under bushes and tufts of high grass. At such times grass bordering their feeding grounds is always worth beating. There are certain places where snipe are often found on dry ground. These are usually close to beels in which there is no cover but good feeding. The birds retire to grass or crops in the neighbourhood, or to large clods, during the day. On the 1st March of this year, 1903, I was out with a friend on a small beel on laterite soil. There was hardly a bird in the beel and I had almost given up in disgust when I saw a snipe pitch right out in "the dry" on my left. I walked him up and flushed him out of the dry bed of a watercourse under the shade of whose banks he had taken refuge. I took the hint, kept to the banks of the little nullah and picked six and a half couple out of it. My friend who stuck to the beel got only one bird. These birds were about a quarter of a mile from the nearest water or mud.

In the beels it is not of much use looking for snipe where the water is deep unless it carries islands of floating weed with grass or flags growing through it. In this case they are often very plentiful and are best shot from boats. The birds that fall on the floating islands are, however, very difficult to retrieve, and, if no boats or canoes can be had, the walking will be found very heavy. There are many beels where very good snipe shooting can be had from boats, or from two dougas or dug-out canoes fastened together. As one does not get tired one shoots very well from boats once one becomes accustomed to firing from a moving platform. Care should be taken to prevent the cartridges from becoming wet in the water at the bottom of the boat, and also to protect them from the full rays of the sun. Some cartridges after exposure to sunshine for some hours kick like mules.

The round smooth rushes, like marlin spikes, which grow in those parts of beels which are not cultivated, rarely afford good shooting except very late in the season when other parts of the beel are dry. Avoid them therefore unless you are driven to them, like the snipe, because there is nowhere else to go. The snipe always prefer cultivated ground and fallows. Ground that has not been ploughed at some time or other is rarely soft enough for them: probably never, save where there are springs which last make the real bog or morass. Sola, the pith of which is used for hat making, often gives cover to lots of snipe in the middle of the day; and is moist, but not wet, places on the edges of beels I have shot quail in it. Sandy soil is useless for snipe shooting except after heavy rain when, as it dries quickly, the flooded out snipe may have to take to it until their regular quarters again become habitable. On such occasions I have had good sport in places where as a rule snipe are never seen. In beels where the water is too deep in the rains for rice you will sometimes see early in the cold weather, fields full of mud and water, prepared for boro dhan, quite free from vegetation, but divided by ridges on which longish grass or even hogla grass is growing. These ridges usually hold lots of snipe which are easy to kill as you know whereabouts they will rise, and they are easy to define as they fly across the bare fields when the boro dhan is planted and growing in February and March fields of it should never be passed over.

An excellent cover for snipe is formed by the straw of the long trailing boel rice which is said to grow as fast as the water rises in the beels. After harvesting, the straw, which is quite useless, is gathered into heaps, and lies thus until it is dry enough to be burnt. In one beel I have had delightful sport amongst these straw heaps, and that not once or twice, but week after week. This was in Rajshahi which is the best district for small game shooting that I know.

I believe that snipe are to be found on the links near the sea coast of Bengal, but I have had no experience there. I have shot them on the beach and amongst rock in Scotland at low tide, and lots of them in pastures near the sea, and no doubt similar localities in Bengal suit them equally well. They may also usually be found under the banks of small streams, especially if the banks be hollow or clothed with flags.

EQUIPMENT AND FINAL HINTS ABOUT SNIPE.

The best gun for a beginner to use at snipe is a cylinder 12 gauge, bored to give a pattern of about 110 pellets in the 30-inch circle at 40 yards with the standard charge of 3 drs. Black powder (or its equivalent in the smokeless powder used) and 1¼oz. of No. 6 shot of 270 pellets to the oz. Such a gun with No. 9 shot will make a pattern at 35 yards that nothing can get through. Some guns do not perform well with certain sizes of shot, so the snipe gun should be tested at the target with Nos. 8 and 9. Both barrels should be bored to shoot alike. Many guns have the left barrel choked, but this only leads to smashing up, or missing, near birds. A cylinder barrel will kill snipe at any reasonable distance and is all that is required. The stock of the gun should be short rather than long. It must be remembered that one's feet are often hard and fast in mud when a bird rises, and that sometimes, in such cases, one has to take a shot to the left rear with the butt against the biceps instead of into the shoulder. You should therefore be able to pull the trigger of the right barrel with the first joint of your forefinger when the butt is in the bend of the elbow. The gun should be light and must fit you if you aspire to shoot well. Any good gunmaker can fit you with a gun as well as a tailor can fit you with a coat; but, with guns as with coats, "ready-me-downs" are apt to prove failures. I rather like guns with 28-inch barrels. A gun can be built lighter with them without being in any way weakened, and they are quite long enough to aim with. Guns of very light make are apt to give "gun headache" owing to the vibration set up by the recoil. At one time I used a choke bored 16 gauge gun, for all small game except ducks, loaded with No. 7 shot and Ballistite powder. This combination is good enough for anything, and I have killed many grouse, partridges, and hares with it as well as snipe, but it is not so easy to shoot with as a cylinder 12. I gave it up when I was transferred to a district where there were good shots using scatter guns and a good deal of competition. When I went back to the twelve-bore I changed to Schultze powder as I felt that the standard charge of Ballistite in twelve-bore cartridges was too heavy for comfort. The drawback to Schultze powder is the "blow back." Shooting against the wind this stuff blows back into one's eyes and smarts. "Imperial Schultze" is said to be free from this defect, but I have not tried it. [An ideal powder Ed.] Schultze is very regular in its performance, and so is E. C. No. 3, but this last powder is not easily obtained in Calcutta. No doubt there is some reason for this, but the powder behaves very well at home. No. 9 shot is the best all-round size for snipe, but No. 8 is useful in windy weather. Your cartridge bag should be waterproof.

As far as clothing goes everybody will no doubt please himself. The main point is to have the coat and shirt thick enough to protect one from the sun. Very light upper garments are a mistake. For nether tackle I like khaki regulation pantaloons; long stockings over them, tied above the swell of the calf; and leather boots. This get-up is equally adapted to walking and riding. To ride home in Jodhpore breeches are the most convenient as they enable one to dispense with gaiters or putties. Putties are a nuisance in a beel and nearly always come down. Leather boots will not become hard no matter what your bearer may say, if they are properly dressed with vaseline before use and just before they become dry. They will then keep supple enough. They should have two or three eyelets let into them at each side of the instep just above the sole. The holes thus made will let in water it is true, but they will also let it out. Water is bound to get into your boots, so it is well to make arrangements for it to come out again. Squelching about on dry land in boots full of water is far from pleasant. Boots should not have projecting welts, as these lift mud, but the soles should be strong or you will get your feet sadly bruised in walking over hard ground with sodden boots. Veterinary vaseline can be had almost everywhere in 5-lb tins at Rs. 2-10 a tin. It is the best thing going for guns, boots, saddles, belts, and any leather work that is required for use and not show. It darkens leather so should not be used for parade equipment. Mixed with beeswax it makes a good lubricant for rifle cartridges. Melt the mixture, dip the bullets into it, and set them to dry. Mixed with mercurial ointment it makes a first-class grease for rifle barrels, removing leading from the grooves. A 5-lb tin lasts for months.

I do not recommend smoking while shooting. I used to think that I shot better with a pipe in my mouth, and there is no harm in it in a short day, but I think now that it makes one thirsty, and affects one's wind on a long and heavy day.

You must of course drink something if you are out all day, but I strongly recommend that nothing alcoholic be taken until you have changed into your dry clothes and are ready to go home. Then a peg will do you no harm. Always take a change of clothing and a towel with you. You will find the "mohra" I mentioned in Chapter II very useful while changing. Personally I like to have two changes on a long day so as to sit down dry to tiffin. If you decide not to change for tiffin you will find a rug or horseblanket wrapped round your legs a great comfort in cold weather.

Formerly, my instructor in snipe shooting and I always used to take our ponies into the beels, and ride them, in all kinds of places, until we saw lots of birds. If the sport became slow we mounted again until matters improved. In the district where I now live snipe are too scarce for this method, and I dismount whenever I see a likely place. Likely places may be summed up as:—

(1) Any stretch of rice, not too heavy, where the water is not excessive and the mud of the right consistency.

(2) Especially any field where the rice looks both darker and more straggly than usual.

(3) Any fallow or stubble field is the right sort of soil if the cover is sufficient.

(4) Any thick cover in an open beel except the round rushes.

(5) Any light cover near good feeding grounds on which there is no shelter for the birds.

(6) Any well covered ridges between open fields of mud and water.

(7) Any cover in the vicinity of newly-ploughed land in places which snipe frequent.

Remember, let me repeat, the importance of concentrating all your faculties on your game. For a fraction of a second prior to firing you will be conscious sometimes of an effort muscular and mental, in forcing your gun into the line your mind has drawn from your eye to the spot aimed at. I cannot describe what I mean more closely, but it is true that no one can shoot really well without being conscious of this strain at times no matter how effortless the successive "rights and lefts" may seem to the spectator. Avoid ground that feels hard under foot when looking for snipe unless you have particular grounds for thinking that the birds are there. Slimy clay is seldom productive of sport. Do not leave good feeding ground with no cover on it without taking a cast through the adjacent crops and grass.

Do not walk down wind to snipe in a beel. If it is very windy weather, and the birds are very wild, it often pays a good shot to walk straight up wind to them. They are then very hard to hit but you can sometimes get within range of them in this way when you cannot do so in any other. Ordinarily down and across the wind is the best line to take.

When you fire at a snipe and see both his legs drop he will be found dead wherever he pitches, unless he has merely had his legs broken. I can't say that I have ever seen such a case as the last, but I have seen many a snipe with one leg down. It is an authenticated fact that snipe escaping with a broken leg repair the injury with feathers used as splints and bandages. By degrees you will acquire an instinctive knowledge of when a bird is hit. If you have reason to suppose this to be the case mark the bird carefully down and, in mercy, add him to the stick as soon as possible. The best way to kill a wounded bird is to hold it breast upwards in your hand and bring the back of its head into sharp contact with the butt of your gun. A smart stroke will kill it instantly; a half-hearted tap is cruel; and a hard smash will send blood and brains all over you.

Pintail snipe are the first to come and the last to go. They are easily distinguished by their richly barred underwing and by the pin feathers in their tails. They have a more compact shape, shorter beaks, and are more easy to shoot than common snipe. They are frequently found alone and often rise silently.

The Jack snipe is a handsome little fellow, very good to eat but very apt to make you score a miss. He jumps up as a rule from thick cover, flickers about for a short distance and pitches again. If you do not realize that he is a Jack you will be very likely to shoot in front of him.

Beware of painted snipe. Until you become acquainted with them you will probably fire at them. They are easy to shoot if you realize what they are; but, like the Jack snipe, are often missed when mistaken for snipe. They are unfit to eat. Their plumage is very handsome, especially that of the hen bird.

Once more let me impress on the young sportsman the necessity of recovering wounded game wherever possible, and of instantly killing winged birds. It is unsportsmanlike, to say the least of it, to leave wounded game about to be torn by kites and hawks—your coolies will never see the necessity of killing the wounded birds they pick up unless you insist upon their doing so. My practice is to have all live birds brought to me at once; and I kill them in the manner above described. It may cause a little disturbance and loss of sport but we owe the snipe much and should avoid needless cruelty in dealing with them.

CORDITE RIFLES.

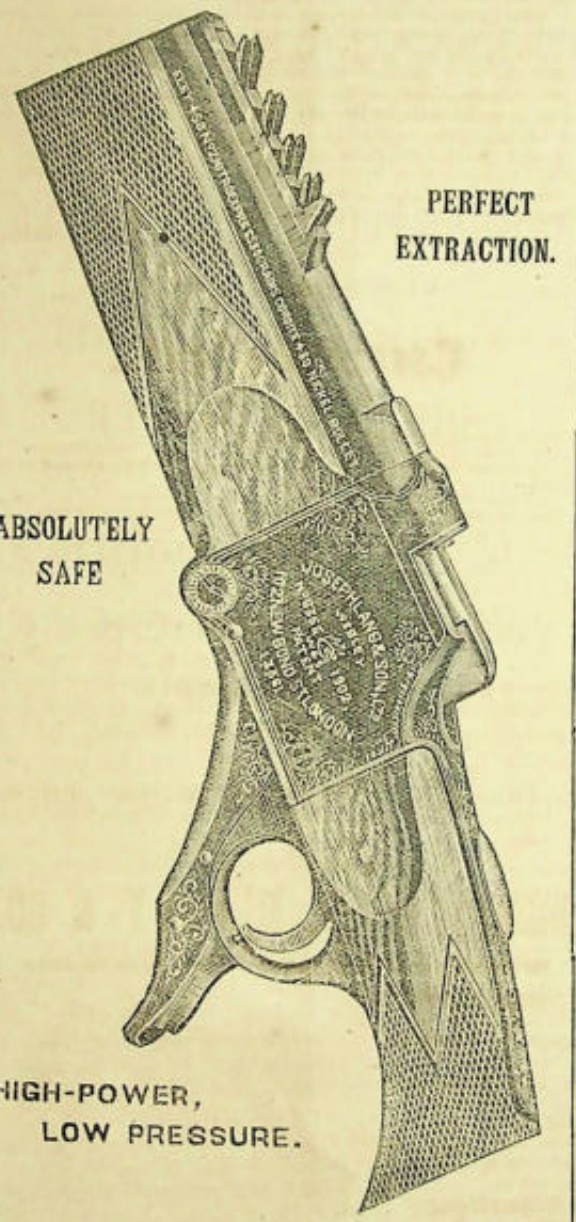
HIGH-POWER. LOW PRESSURE

Average Velocity 2171ft. per second.

Energy Equals an 8-bore Firing Black Powder.

Pressure about 12 to 13 Tons per sq. in. compared with 16 to 18 with the old ·450 Cordite Cartridge.

"FIELD," May 9th, 1903.



"A most marvellous run of uniformity.....Extremely difficult to find an instance where equally well authenticated experiments have shown such satisfactory readings."

"FIELD" April 18th 1903.

"Shooting at ordinary temperatures, the pressures registered gave an average of 12·87 tons per square inch chamber pressure, at a temperature of 140° Fahr. the standard reached was 15·93 tons, which is well under the service pressure of several of the ordinary express Cartridges.

"COUNTY GENTLEMAN."

"The whole trial was of the most satisfactory character..... pressures were such as to leave a margin of safety to the shooter."

"THE FIELD,"

May 9th, 1903.

"Messrs. Joseph Lang & Son, Ltd., have been very prompt in submitting for our notice a rifle which has been chambered and regulated for firing the new No. 2 nitro cartridge .....A thoroughly sound and well turned out piece of work.....maximum of strength and ease of extraction. Very high velocities .....most marvellous run of uniformity. In fact, it would be extremely difficult to find an instance where equally well authenticated experiments have shown such satisfactory readings."

Five shots at 100 yards with the new No. 2 Nitro Cartridge, fired in a LANG Rifle. Centres of shot holes fell within 2·1 in. by ·75 in. Average deviation from point of mean impact ·7 in.

"THE FIELD." "A fine piece of shooting."

"A target made at 100 yards, which is in our possession, contains a group of five shots, with a distance of 1in. between the centres of the highest and lowest perforations, and 1/8ths of an inch between those on the extreme right and left.'

Price from 20 Guineas.

POONA RACES AND STEEPLECHASES

Sixth Day, Wednesday, 7th October 1903.

THE concluding day of the Poona Races was full of pitfalls for backers. The course was none too springy but bright sunshine prevailed the whole afternoon. The attendance was good but not overflowing and there was at times a general air of staleness amongst backers who on the whole have come off much the worse for their "nodding" more frequently than was wise to the metallicians.

The business of the day opened badly for those who feel it is a sin to allow a good horse to run unbacked. The good thing of the first event was Ptarmigan, but the handicapper had taken excellent care of him and we may take it as a compliment to the adjuster of leads that a ten to one chance rolled home by a neck from a six to oner. Dispute has caused a surprise before to-day, but not as a sprinter. Ptarmigan finished nowhere, and Governor, who was fancied on Monday's running, kept him company; Sir jamal, however, only succumbed to Dispute by the shortest of necks.

The two chases followed and while we try to deceive ourselves into the belief that the illegitimate game has still got some life in it I fear that at Poona, where the steeplechase meeting used once upon a time to be quite a separate programme, the jump game may have to be erased, even as a fillip of sorts, from the prospectus of the Poona Races. The Poona Grand (save the mark!) Annual was contested by a field of four; of these Rickshaw, who was receiving weight all round was expected to finish the course and win easily and he was backed freely. A splendid finish, considering the course was 2¼ miles, was witnessed. Pope who went out at long odds running Rickshaw, who was fast stopping, to a neck. Veneda ran badly. The Ganeshkind Chase, a race for ponies, was considered a gift for Beryl and had she stood up at the last jump there might have been joy in the camp of backers. Patrician, another well fancied one, also fell and Mr. Fischer's Good Boy, who led the others all through by two fields, won in a trot.

Punters took their next fall when they backed Moon or Gallant with some assurance for the Desert Handcap. A splendid race was witnessed, a field of eleven contesting. Up the straight Moon looked a winner and he would certainly have been first past the post but for the zigzag course steered by Heeroo, who was riding one of his head to tail finishes.

Forest won the Newmarket Handicap in Australia four years ago and came out for the Maharajah of Jodhpore. It is a long time since he ran in India and for him to come out and beat sprinters like Malto as he did in the Poona Handicap disposes one to think that he may get back some of his old form. Malto was strongly supported for the event, but it was Wedlock, who had the satisfaction of fully extending Forest who won by a neck, Malto a head off.

Quite the smartest 14-1 pony is undoubtedly Russley Rose. She has earned three brackets and ran second at Poona and the company she has met would be hard to beat even at the Sydney pony meetings. She wins her races a long way from home and in the Commissioner's Purse was cantering from the distance. Mr. Bass's S. P. put in a run at the finish which gives good promise for the future.

This concluded the afternoon's programme. Details :—

THE EXTRA DAY.

Saturday 10th October 1903.

IF the company was not absolutely classy the excellent finishes made up for this. Scattercash who had been showing such improved form won in excellent company in a field of eleven his nearest attendant being Nainava who has been having a rest. When Jolly Roger made his first appearance at Poona he was greatly admired but he did not run up to his looks if anything he was stripped an improved pony, but the other English pony, Golightly, was better fancied Min, despite her heavy impost, being strongly supported. Min appeared to have her field cooked at the distance but Jolly Roger strongly ridden by Robinson snatched the victory by half a length.

That Chungiz has turned rogue or gone off altogether is pretty evident, for he never made my show at all in the Losers Handicap Turkish Flag II in consideration of his light handicap was expected to win and despite a strong challenge from Victory he won somewhat easily. For the Autumn Plate Ayrdale went out a hot favourite, Mr. Apcar's Youngster, Sacristan, being next in demand Gum, the surprise packet from Mysore, led up the straight and managed to win by a neck in the excellent time for seven furlongs of 1 min 31⅖secs.

Most people fancied that the Welter Scurry was a good thing for Money Spinner but as all the money seemed to flow in on Hamilton the public took the hint and profited by it for Hamilton won from pillar to post.

Mr. Fischer's Governor has never been fitter in his life when he is at the present moment and yet he was not fancied for the small Arab Plate which he won by a short head the struggle being a fine one to witness and the time good.

That Nancy Till, a pony, should have beaten such big horses as Dart and Ombree makes them very small beer indeed and the little mare fought out the issue from the distance tooth and nail and won by a head.

THE NEW MAIDEN PLATE.—Winner Rs 200, 2nd Rs. 100, 3rd Rs. 50. A handicap for maiden Arabs 14 hands and under landed since 1st July, 1902. 6 furlongs.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS POINT-TO POINT MEETING

Thursday, 8th October 1903.

THE above is another of the Poona annual "shows" that it has been my lucky privilege to be present at two years in succession and the little side lights on such events are, all the world over, instructive and amusing to a 'stranger within the gates.' Pray observe the heading to these lines You think I might aptly, more appropriately and with greater brevity have written "Poona and Kirkee Hunt Races"! Perish the suggestion! Did I do so I would probably have infuriated leg hunters chasing me (or possibly you my worthy and innocent Editor) with spears. For there has been I understand a feud (stopping short only at bloodshed) over this vital matter. The Poona Pigstickers declare that they form the Poona "Hunt" and that any use of the latter word by mere fox catchers is an infringement of their copyright. So you see how it behoves me to write circumspectly on this national question. Need I mention too, to any one acquainted however slightly with such matters that the delicate subject of "qualification" caused considerable heartburnings. Had this horse really been out the magic 'ten times'? Had that one been "regularly hunted"! What does "regularly' mean? Does 'regularly" mean hacking to "cover side" sufficiently long to catch the Master's eye and then getting on to the slave when it comes to real business. Is it advisable for any one intending to compete, to have any connection with the selection of the course? For be ye pure as crystal and chaste as the quintessence of all the virtues ye shall not escape calumny. These were among the petty grievances one heard more or less freely discussed and each answered the vexed questions to his own liking. The place selected was the plain between the palace of His Highness the Aga Khan and two twin-like hills known as the "Sisters." Beyond the fact that it was close to Poona I am fraid I cannot offer my congratulations to the committee on their selection, more especially as I am assured (and can readily believe) that many better sites were available. It was certainly with no thrilling excitement that one saw the field start off over a most uninteresting half or three-quarters of a mile of dead level, and never caught a glimpse of them again till they came back into sight over the same uninteresting stretch. Under such circumstances it was difficult to "enthuse," nor did one's pulse throb with any feverish haste when in the first event the winner won by the entire length of this run in Nor was the management of minor details quite without a flaw or two. There was no bell and "competors" had to be warned to get ready by word of mouth ; programmes seemed to run short very early in the day, and the absence of one deprived people not acquainted with the men and horse concerned of much of the interest they could otherwise have felt. A map of the course was thoughtfully enough provided for the use of competitors and would have been doubtless of great advantage to those not previously acquainted with the lie of the land. Unhappily, however, I believe one flag as marked on the map was about half mile out of its bearing with disastrous and disappointing results to more than one hopeless rider who did not fail to express their personal views on return! There was also it was averred one flag at least too many, which led to confusion. All these little details which could with a little forethought have presumably been avoided did not tend to the perfection of organization, that acme ever to be desired but not always attained. But apart from such trivialities a very pleasant afternoon's sport was enjoyed. With one detail at least even the most hypercritical could find no fault and that was with the hospitality of His Highness the Aga who provided an overflowing supply of good things in two large tents and extended characteristic hospitality and kindly greeting to friend and stranger alike. The Cup presented by Colonel Sheringham, the M F. H., was won appropriately enough by his hard riding 1st whip, Mr. Armstrong, on a good looking horse called the Sweep by considerably over half a mile, in a canter

The Honorary Secretary, Major England R. F. A., annexed the prize presented by the officers of the 3rd Bombay Cavalry on his horse Hotspur, just getting home in front of Mr. Howard Smith on Flirt In the third and final event for ponies 14-1 and under for a Cup given by His Highness the Aga a smart looking English pony called the Fizzer was installed a hot favourite at 2 to 1 on, but got the better of his rider, Major England, and bolted (we afterwards heard) into the dim distance. A ding dong finish resulted in Major Geddes, R. F. A., just securing the verdict on Mr Lucas' grey Arab Promise from Captain Hewlett on his waler Coronation, a fine performance on the part of the little desert born and a slight recompense to Mr. Lucas for a nasty accident in a previous race to his mare who fell and cut herself badly. The final scene on such joyous occasions was unfortunately deprived of much of its glamour owing to the fact that of the three prizes only the Cup presented by the Cavalry was ready for presentation. A pleasant afternoon's sport but one would have liked to have seen a little more of the running. Finishes on the dead level we can see to our heart's content on Mr. Gray's beautiful course And so after doing justice—just once more to His Highness' hospitality we rattled back to Poona.

THE TURF.

ROYAL WINDSOR SEPTEMBER MEETING.

SPORT in the Royal Borough on the 18th instant was above the average. The weather, too, was of a most delightful description, and the company numerous, while fields ruled large, no fewer than seventy-seven competitors being seen out in the first half-dozen events on the card. The last item was reduced to a match, the "purple, straw sleeves" of Lord Durham being carried to victory by King's Limner, who easily disposed of Pericles in the Curfew Plate. The principal event on the programme, the September Handicap, was taken by Papola, who won the August Handicap, at the previous meeting on the Rays. Tin Soldier although he defeated fifteen others in the Park Selling Plate, was retained for 55 guineas, and he will probably win again for Mr. Hibbert. The Queen Anne's Welter fell to Lord Stanley's Mixed Powder, who made the whole of the running, other winners being Col. Fenwick's Iras colt, Mr. Schwind's Grey Girl, and Mr. King's Plombieres. The last-named was at one time the property of His Majesty, but was sold in July for 410 guineas, this being her first outing since changing hands.

THE SEPTEMBER HANDICAP—Of 360 sovs One mile and a quarter.

Mr W M G Singer's ch m Papola, by Tyrant—Poppy, aged, 7st 11lbs ...	Madden	1

(Winner trained by P Peck.)

BETTING : 15 to 8 on King's Limner.

The favourite waited on the other to the distance and then challenged and won by three-parts of a length. Time by Benson chronograph, 2mins. 3½secs.

So promising was the weather outlook in the metropolis on the 19th that there was every inducement for those so disposed to patronise the concluding stage of the Windsor Meeting, especially as the programme gave every prospect of furnishing another interesting afternoon's sport. Consequently it was not surprising to find the special trains well patronised, and several putting in an appearance who had been present at the Ayr gathering. The attendance in the Rays was an excellent one all round. The card was to-day confined to half a dozen events, and for each good fields assembled at the post, but, with the exception of the principal race, backers carried all before them, and they must have returned from the meeting with pleasant memories of their visit to it.

THE ROYAL BOROUGH HANDICAP—Of 137 sovs. One mile and a half.

Mr J Buchanan's br c Kano, by Trenton—Rabia, 3 yrs, 7st 8lbs	Hardy	1

Won easily by three lengths; a neck separated the second and third. Kitty Tar was fourth, Morecambe Bay fifth, Gangway colt next, and Bonnie Scot last. The winner was purchased by Mr W. Dormer for 210gs.

LINGFIELD PARK CLUB SEPTEMBER MEETING.

Unfortunately for this one day fixture on the 22nd very disagreeable weather prevailed. The attendance, however, was exceedingly good, and large fields were seen under silk. Lord Dunraven's Livia won the Crowborough Nursery Handicap in great style, leaving her fourteen opponents some distance behind. The same owner's Morgendale carried off the Autumn Handicap, just getting the better of Noblesse by a neck. Charivari took the Two-Mile Selling Handicap, but there was no demand for him at the subsequent auction. The Club Welter Plate proved the good thing anticipated for Mr. Bottomley's Lady Voter, and Honours cleverly captured the Effingham Selling Nursery Handicap. The gelding was afterwards bought in for 310 guineas, the surplus of 260 guineas over the conditional selling price being shared by Mr. W. Coventry (whose La Parisienne finished second) and the race fund. Sport concluded when Holme Lacy landed the odds laid on him for the Brasted Highweight Handicap.

FOLKESTONE SEPTEMBER MEETING.

The arrangement by which a single day fixture at Folkestone was set to precede the important Manchester September Meeting proved anything but convenient, especially for Newmarket trainers, the upshot being that only four horses from the headquarters of the Turf fulfilled their engagements at Westenhanger on the 24th instant. The South-country stables were well represented, however, and though the calibre of the competitors left a good deal to be desired the numerical strength of the fields fulfilled anticipations. The holiday element were in fair evidence in the enclosures, and the executive must have been abundantly satisfied with the number of spectators to pass the turnstiles. Pleasant, summerlike conditions prevailed, the temperature being perhaps a little too high for the time of year, but the course yielded excellent galloping, and the light remained good to the finish.

SALE OF SIR HUMPHREY DE TRAFFORD'S STOCK.

Many years elapsed since such an important sale of pedigree hunters and polo ponies took place as that conducted at Hill Crest, Market Harborough, on Wednesday, by Messrs. Warner, Shephard, and Wade. The sale, which also included the whole of Sir Humphrey de Trafford's kennel and sporting dogs, was necessitated by the departure of the owner for India and Japan on a big game shooting expedition, and with two exceptions the horses and dogs were sold without reserve In these circumstances the prices paid for some of the hunters were remarkable, but the stud has for years borne so good a character that there was eager competition for the whole of the lots. There was a large attendance of buyers, the sale having caused an unusual amount of interest in hunting centres owing to it including the famous hunters, Red Cloud and Ruby.

The morning was occupied by the sale of the dogs, and these realised a little over £250, top prices being given for a brace of handsome flat-coated retrievers, Barton Tangle and Barton Joe, both broken and thorough workers They realised 33gs. and 25gs. respectively. Of the large draft of fox terriers Mr. P. G. Hayward (Needham Market) secured a bargin in the wire-haired bitch, Barton Rose, winner at several representative shows this year. She was originally bought for 100gs., but on Wednesday she was sold for 15gs.

After luncheon the hunters, one of the best lots in the country were submitted, and, although reserves were placed on Red Ruby and Red Cloud, all were sold at an aggregate of 7,155gs. Top price was reached for Red Cloud, never beaten in the ring, he having won championships this season at Islington, Nottingham Peterborough, Sheffield, Buxton, and Cardiff in addition to first prizes at many other shows, including Royal Dublin, Lancashire and Richmond. He fell to the bid of the Duke of Bedford at 1,050gs, Mr. Wertheimer being the purchaser of Red Ruby, another big winner in the ring, at 1,000gs. Red Cloud, a chesnut gelding, was bred by Mr. Ronald Barber, of Westerwood, Wooder, Northumberland. He is by Red Eagle his dam being by Prescription.

The prices of the other important lots are appended. Sir Gilbert Greenall, who bought three, being the Master of the Belvoir Hounds.

There was an exceedingly nice lot of polo ponies, which realised an aggregate of 1,125gs., the chief prices and purchasers being:

Raspet	Count de Madre	110
Pale Face	Mr. Malliner	180
Snowball	Mr. Malliner	130
Grace	Major Neil Haig	95
Grisel	Mr. Mackey	180
Diamond	Mr. W. Hardcastle	120

The brood stock realised 412 gns., these including a number of splendid foals, and Mr. Wertheimer purchased a nice Hackney pony, Sandow, by Fourposter, for 270gs Altogether the pedigree stock reached the fine total of 9,014gs., these, with the sporting dogs, which yielded £452, and the miscellaneous lots, bringing up the aggregate to over £10,000.

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

DIVISION I.

NOTTS FOREST vs. BLACKBURN ROVERS.—A match, which ended somewhat luckily for Forest, was played on the City ground on Saturday, the 19th before 10,000 spectators. The weather was a little threatening but no rain fell, and the ground was dry, but covered with a very heavy turf, which was one of the reasons why the Foresters, who had been hard worked in friendly matches during the week, were beaten. Another reason was the incapacity of Calvey, and the introduction as his partner of H. Griffiths, late inside left of Reading. Mistakes like this are fatal to any team's success. The Blackburn Rovers, playing against the wind in the first half, had quite as much of the game as their opponents, and no goals were scored before the cross-over. In the second half, the Rovers played the better football, though the shooting at goal was execrable on both sides. The only goal of the match came to the Rovers when Bowman (their centre forward) shot, and Iremonger (full back), in trying to turn the ball aside, put it past Linacre, his goalkeeper, into the net. The forwards on the Forest side, changed places towards the finish of the game. Sugden (centre) and Morris played together on the right wing, with Calvey in the centre, but to no good purpose, and the Forest team will want overhauling before they do much good against really powerful opponents. Blackburn Rovers played a neat and strong game on a ground that might have been thought to favour the Foresters. Result : Blackburn Rovers, one goal ; Notts Forest, nil.

DERBY COUNTY vs. NOTTS COUNTY.—There was an attendance of 12,000 spectators on the Baseball Ground at Derby on Saturday afternoon, the match between these old rivals being one of the most attractive on the Derby card. Derby, who won the toss, attacked hotly at starting, but Bloomer shot outside, and his example was followed at the other end by Green. There was not a great deal to choose between the teams afterwards, though on one occasion Gee sent the ball into the net when lying in front of goal. The referee at once disallowed the point. The play was of poor quality afterwards, and though each side made repeated efforts to score their shots invariably went wide or struck the legs of opposing players. Ten minutes from the interval Notts secured the lead in rather lucky fashion. Humphrey sent in a low shot at twenty-five yards range, and Whittaker, after jumping out of the way of the ball, failed to recover himself in time to prevent it passing into the net. At the interval Notts were still in possession of the lead, and subsequently Derby redoubled their efforts to get on terms. Their shooting, however, exhibited no improvement, and the Notts backs playing a very vigorous game, knocked them off the ball with ease. There was also a good deal of kicking out, and the standard of play remained at a low level to the end. Notts gained a somewhat lucky victory by one goal to love

STOKE vs. SHEFFIELD UNITED.—For their match at Soke on Saturday, the 9th, Sheffield United were at full strength while the potters found it necessary from various causes—including suspensions for disobeying training rules—to make alterations in all lines but goal. The attendance numbered 12000. Stoke started very strongly, and had a couple of goal to their credit before the game was nine minutes old, Whitehouse and Bradley being the scorers. Unfortunately, however, shortly afterwards Burgess, the home left back, sustained an injury to his left knee, and this undoubtedly affected greatly the result of the game. Though he did once reappear, he was not of much use, and he was soon compelled to retire altogether. The result was that at the interval the scoring was even (3-3), and the visitors eventually won by four goals to three. The second moiety was a hard struggle from first to last. The pace was exceedingly fast, and every individual on each side was a worker. It wanted but ten minutes to time when Sheffield obtained their lead, and then Boore completely misjudged a shot from Priest. Stoke were all over the United in the early stages of the game, and they had equally as much of the play as their opponents after Burgess had left the field. Result Sheffield United, four goas ; Stoke three.

DIVISION II.

WOOLWICH ARSENAL vs. BURTON UNITED.—At Plumstead, on Saturday, the 19th, Woolwich Arsenal gained another victory, beating Burton United by eight goals to love The score is no exaggeration of the home team's prowess, for if anything, they were more than that number of goals in front on the day's play. Both against the wind and with it the Plumstead men displayed unmistakable superiority. The day was fine, and quite 12,000 spectators witnessed the play. Burton won the toss, and the Arsenal started against the wind, but Burton had the sun in their faces. Within the first two minutes the Arsenal gained three corner kicks, but nothing resulted. Linward was next responsible for a splendid shot from the left wing, but Bromage saved splendidly. Then the Burton forwards attacked, but Eargreaves shot wide. The Arsenal broke away again, and their beautiful combination evoked general admiration. Linward, who played splendidly throughout, ran finely down on the left and centred to Coleman, who tipped the ball into the net. One up, the Arsenal played harder than ever, but it was not until the game had been in progress twenty-five minutes that their efforts were rewarded, Linward then scoring a second goal after a splendid bout of passing all along the line. This led up to half-time the score then being. Woolwich Arsenal, two goals ; Barton United 0. In the second half the Arsenal simply made hacks of their opponents. Early on Coleman only just missed and a little later Gooing sent in a hot shot which hit the cross-bar and rebounded into play. Bromage was next in evidence with a fine save from the foot of Coleman, but at last Shanks got one past him. From thence the game went all in favour of the Arsenal. Briercliffe scored a lovely goal after a round of passing, in which the whole of the front line had a hand, and he immediately followed it with another from a splendidly-placed corner by Linward. Bromage and Kirkland defended finely, but the home forwards had now got their measure, and Coleman after a round of passing, put on goal number six. Briercliffe followed with a seventh just after, and had the Arsenal taken full advantage of their openings, there is no knowing, where the scoring would have stopped. Coleman shot over with an open goal in front of him, and Shanks failed to score from a penalty kick. Shortly before the close Gooing scored, and the result was : Wolwich Arsenal, eight goals ; Burton United, 0.

OTHER MATCHES.

CASUAL vs. LONDON CALENDONIANS.—The season at Tunnell Park was opened last Saturday with the above match. The attendance was satisfactory, but there was very little enthusiasm displayed by the onlookers. Shortly after the start, from an attack by the Casuals, Ward put in a neat pass to Tuff, but Robertson cleared. Almost immediately afterwards Simonds missed scoring by barely a foot. Following a fruitless corner, a free kick gave the Calies the advantage, but Wilson fisted out. Even play ruled for a time, the defence on both sides being stronger than the attack. After a clever save by Wilson, Ward had a splendid opening, but Ralston fortunately got up and prevented a shot. The Casuals still continued to hover near their rivals' goal. Following ineffectual shots from both sides, Williamson scored from a pass by Gray, and it was by this goal the Calies led at half-time. After ten minutes' play in the second half, Shaw had to retire owing to a mishap to his knee, and for the rest of the game the Calies played one short. The Calies made strenuous efforts to equalise, but the Scots' defence proved impregnable, and the end came with the score : Caledonians, one goal ; Casuals, nil.

QUEEN'S PARK RANGERS vs. TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR.—The Spurs came another "cropper" on Saturday, the 19th, at Kensal Rise, and they have still to open their scoring account in connection with the Southern League tournament They were fairly and squarely beaten by Queen's Park Rangers, and everyone of the 15,000 people present must have gone home with the pure conviction that Tottenham Hotspur is no longer a name to instil fear into everybody. Truly, they had no fewer than six men away—Tart, Morris, Hughes, Woodward, Warner and Walton—but the fact remains that the team at any time so far this season does not possess those powers of scoring which are essential to the winning of matches and the gaining of Southern League points. The 'Spurs can still carry the ball right into the opposition camp as prettily and cleverly as anybody, but, this once accomplished, scarcely anything else is attempted, and on Saturday Collins, the Rangers goalkeeper, was scarcely once seriously called upon. Heaps and heaps of times unnecessary "fiddling about" was indulged in when a shot at goal would have been far more to the point, and in this respect the Spurs suffered much by comparison with their antagonists. Whenever an opportunity occurred the Rangers "let fly" at Williams' charge, and probably Tottenham were fortunate in getting off with only a couple of goals defeat. The West End team is not at all a bad one, and should improve as the season goes along. The defence is all right, but on Saturday there was a weakness at centre forward and outside left. Brown hardly did himself justice, and Cross, at least on his latest performance, is not a worthy substitute for Wilson. The pick of the Rangers on Saturday was Newlands, Bowman, Hitch, Hamilton, Abbott, and McGowan, and a special word of praise must be bestowed upon the latter, who was just about the most prominent man on the field. For the Spurs Watson, Jones, Burton, and McNaught played well, but the forwards, after a promising start, failed to keep together, and combination was subsequently at a premium. The gate was very nearly a record for Kensal Rise, but, even admitting that all the people must have a sight of the game it would be wise of the Queen's Park Rangers executive to guard against breaking in before the finish of a match. There might be trouble some day, and the ground is big enough to keep everybody but officials and players outside the rails. During the first half the visitors kicked with the wind but against the sun and right up to half-time they had considerably the best of the game. Weak shooting, however, killed all their efforts, and the interval arrived without any score by either side. After changing ends the Rangers took up the running, and in nineteen minutes McGowan shot a very clever goal. Eleven minutes later Abbott got through again and beat Williams, Queen's Park Rangers therefore winning by two goals to none.

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR vs. FULHAM.—The 'Spurs won this match on their own ground on the 21st instant by two goals to one. It was a clever victory, but would have been much more substantial had not the forwards taken several "breathers" in the second half. However the many spells of intermittent brilliancy more than balanced the periods of slackness, and Tottenham thoroughly deserve their win. Williams was very good in goal for them and Erentz and Watson did giant's work at full-back ; but the halves were not the mainstay of the side as they should have been. Cameron is getting something of a veteran now ; but although he lacks some of his old pace, he still possesses his genius for doing the right thing at the right moment, and nothing could have been better than the way he got the first goal. The Fulham forwards put in a lot of pretty work, and their backs and goalkeeper were very good, but their halves were being constantly beaten by the 'Spurs forwards. Both sides had sundry reserve men playing, and Fryer, the ex-Derby County goalkeeper, was still away from Fulham on the injured list. It was a glorious afternoon for football, the 'Spurs ground was in its best order, and there was a crowd of some 4,000 people.

Facing the wind the 'Spurs played the better football, and within the first quarter of an hour Kirwan made an opening for Cameron, who scored with a grand left-foot shot—an impossible thing for any goal-keeper to save. A spell of strong attacking by Fulham followed, and a chance of equalising was offered by a free-kick in the penalty area. Williams stopped Gray's shot very cleverly. Subsequently the 'Spurs had the run of the play. Biggar had many fine shots to save, and ten minutes before change he was beaten by a free-kick by Kirwan, who shot the ball cleverly at a range of twenty-five yards. So Tottenham crossed over with a lead of two goals to none. The 'Spurs slackened their pace in the second half ; their backs and goalkeeper had much hard work from the Fulham forwards, who played with a nice easy finish. There was no incident out of the common until ten minutes from the finish, when a general rush by the Fulham forwards led up to a goal by Hunt. Each side subsequently attacked, but there was no more scoring, the game ending : Tottenham Hotspur, two goals ; Fulham, one.

THE NORTHERN UNION.

NORTHERN LEAGUE.
DIVISION I.

The Yorkshire clubs who occupy positions in the First Division of the Northern Rugby League got their own back, if one may use the term, on Saturday, the 19th. Of the nine matches played, five were inter-county engagements, and of these four resulted in victories for teams representing the broad-acred county. The tit-bit of the day's programme was the meeting of the Hunslet and Runcorn clubs at Hunslet. Runcorn were decidedly the cleverer in the first half, and, as the result of a try by H. Price, from which a goal by Jolly accrued, the Cestrians were leading at the interval. Hunslet, however, turned the tables afterwards, Hannah going over, and Albert Goodthorpe landing a goal from that place, and another from a penalty. Hunslet thus gained a victory after a magnificent game by seven points to five. Some historic battles were recalled by the meeting of Batley and Warrington. The former were the cleverer in combination and gained a well-earned victory by three goals and a try (nine points) to nil. After leading at half-time, Widnes suffered defeat from Leeds, a try by Crumpton and a goal by Grace giving the last-named team the verdict by five points to two. The cup-holders (Halifax) returned to something like their old form and superior forward play against Hull gave them their first win by two goals and a try (seven points) to nil. Keighley also made a great improvement and managed to play Leigh to a pointless draw. Oldham found Huddersfield a hard nut to crack, even though they were on their own ground. In a game which was rather roughly contested and in which several men were injured they just managed to win by a goal (two points) to nothing. Bradford were treated to their first defeat, Hull Kingston Rovers beating them by three tries (nine points) to one try (three points), while Broughton Rangers were handsomely thrashed by Salford, the final scores reading, four goals four tries (twenty points)—two tries (six points) against them. Swinton had a tight game with Wigan, and only managed to win by a try (three points) to nil. Appended is the table of results to date :—

DIVISION II.

In the Second Division, Castleford, by good all-round combination kept up their unbeaten record, Birkenhead being defeated by one goal two tries (eight points) nil. Both the Leeds district clubs suffered reverses, Bramley being beaten by Normanton by a try to nil, and Holbeck at the hands and feet of Yakefield, who scored eleven points to nil. Rochdale had a somewhat easy task, and defeated Dewsbury to the extent of nine points to five. Lancaster found the new entrants, to the competition, Pontefract, in good form, and the two played a draw of three points each. Brighouse Rangers had no difficulty in disposing of Morecambe, for they scored eleven points to the latter's two. York also somewhat easily defeated South Shields by ten points to three and St. Helens trounced Barrow to the tune of eighteen points to six. It will thus be seen that out of five inter-county engagements the Yorkshire representatives were victorious in three. Full table of results :—

BOXING.

THE PRETORIA GYMNASIUM, BIRMINGHAM.

GEORGE PHAILIN vs. KID DAVIS.—A big crowd assembled in the Pretoria Gymnasium, Coleshill-street, Birmingham, on the 31st instant, in expectation of seeing a well fought-out fifteen-round contest between George Phailin, of the hardware city, and Kid Davis, a coloured boxer hailing from Denver, U. S. A., who has been winning a lot of events in the ring since he came to this country. They were, however, doomed to disappointment, as, although at periods the men went in for boxing in the true sense of the term, the affair degenerated, after a few rounds had been got through, into a hanky-panky exhibition. In the fifth round the referee plainly told the men that unless boxing was substituted for holding he would retire. For a brief spell better work was shown especially by Davis, who was much the stronger. Then came more holding which necessitated the referee keeping close to the men and frequently parting them. This went on until the eighth round was well on its way, when, so palpably were the men transgressing the rules of boxing by declining to break away that the principal official left the ring, and declared "no contest" a course which was approved of by the majority of those present, especially the better element, who were disgusted at the exhibition. Mr. H. E. Cleveland, the Birmingham boxing representative of the Sportsman was referee, Jem Mace timekeeper, and Mr. Gus. Hall M.C.

CYCLING AND MOTORING IN ENGLAND.

THERE is no disputing the fact that the present day wheelmen do not devote the same care and attention to their machines as riders of the old school were wont to do. A hasty occasional brush over is now considered sufficient attention to give a machine, with the natural result that the plating—especially in awkward corners—soon show signs of rust, and the enamel loses all its lustre. Why is this? We believe the reduction in the price of cycles is largely responsible. Eighteen or even twenty pounds was a lot of money to lay out on a machine and consequently only those who were thoroughly enraptured with the pastime were found amongst the purchasers. This being so, it stands to reason that the cycles came in for a far greater amount of attention ; indeed, it was the pride of the owners to keep their machines in a spick and span conditon. But now, when a really serviceable machine can be bought for ten pounds, a large number of people are only cyclists as a matter of convenience. They occasionally ride to some friends, or to attend the tennis court or cricket ground, and when not in use leave their machines uncleaned and neglected in some shed or lumber room.

Since the time when the reconciliation of cyclists and railway companies took place and the latter reduced their charges for carriage, and accepted libility over ten shillings, we have been anxiously looking for improvements in the facilities for transit promised by the companies So far, beyond the fact that perhaps the porters and guards exercise more care when handling machines, no special accommodation, has been provided in the luggage vans, and cycles are still huddled together, sandwiched between trunks and bags. We had occasion the other week to take our cycles by train and give it into the care of the guard, who placed it in a clear corner of his van. At the next station there was a small party of cyclists, and their machines were put in the same van. Unfortunately we had to leave the train first, and when we came to get our cycle it was packed away behind all the others ; the spokes and pedals proving a regular key puzzle to the guard. To our surprise the machine was not much damaged, although we know for a fact that the same could not be said of those remaining. Special racks are required, and the railway companies should keep to their promise.

The "last" but by no means "least," of the London race meetings was held at the Crystal Palace track, Sydenham, on 19th, September when the Anerley Bicycle Club put forward one of the finest afternoon programmes that it has been our pleasure to witness for many a long day. Their efforts to ensure a successful meeting were rewarded by a fine afternoon, an attendance of some ten thousand people, and capital racing on the part of the competitors. In the five miles scratch race for the Hospital Cup, A. L. Reed was seen at his best, good judgment gaining for him his third consecutive win by two lengths. The most attactive item on the programme, however, was the one mile match between the hitherto unbeaten Polytechnic C.C. team and a team representing the Rest of England. The match was decided in four heats, the team scoring the least number of points winning. The result was as follows :—Heat 1, All England 3, Polytechnic 7. Heat 2 All England 6. Polytechnic 4; respective totals 9 and 11. Heat 3 all England 6. Polytechnic 4 ; respective totals 15 each. Heat 4 All England 4. Polytechnic 6; the Poly. boys thus receiving their first defeat by 2 points Another very interesting event was the five miles pursuit race between the two long distance amateurs—G. A. Olley and

The annual subscription to a cycling club in the Isle of Wight carries, amongst other benefits, an insurance against accidents to any of the members.

The Motor Volunteer Corps made its first appearance on actual duty in the recent autumn manœuvres of the British Army, and although the work done by the members has escaped notice in the general press, nevertheless their duties were heavy, fatiguing, and, above all, extremely useful. The Commander-in-Chief, Earl Roberts, inspected the corps at the close of the manœuvres and in thanking the members for the work they had done and the generous manner in which they had placed their services at the disposal of the army, said that "without them the work of the umpires would have been impossible." An example of the use of motor cars in the field is given by a ride of Hon. C. S. Rolls. Repairs requiring to be done on one of the Commander-in-Chief's W. O. cars, Captain Rolls was despatched from Marlborough at 10 40 A. M. for Birmingham which he reached at 2-30 P. M. Here the requisite material was procured and Captain Rolls left at 3. 55 P. M. on his return journey, arriving at Marlborough at 7 55 P. M. The repair was done and the car made ready for use by 10-15 A. M

A newly-formed body for the benefit of motorists which is growing rapidly, is the Motor Union, the objects of which are chiefly directed to affording protection to members against injustice and harassing treatment when the new Motor Act comes into practice. Owing to the prejudices of country magistrates and officious constables, it is thought and perhaps correctly, that there will be many cases of flagrant injustice, and the Motor Union will at once take action by defraying the expenses of defendants who have been unjustly treated, and by appeals to a higher court. The subscription is one guinea, and the membership is open to anyone interested in automobilism. A special defence fund is being inaugurated for the purpose of protecting individual motorists, whether car owner or motor cyclist, and also of getting definite legal pronouncements on ambiguous points. All motorists should make a point of supporting the new union.

From the evidence given at an inquest touching the death of a civil engineer, it would appear that the deceased came by his death through the frailty of wooden rims. The machine he was riding at the time of the accident was one of American manufacture, brakeless and fitted with wooden rims, and as the rim of the back wheel was broken when the bicycle was found, it is assumed that when coming in contact with a cross drain in the road the rim gave way under the strain. Apart from the question of rims, one reads with surprise that the machine was brakeless. The foolhardiness of riding a pneumatic shod machine minus a brake, has been so frequently commented upon and wheelmen warned of the risks they run, that in cases of accidents no sympathy can be extended to those who through their foolishness have brought misfortune on their own heads.

CRICKET AT MUSSOORIE.

CHAKRATA vs. MUSSOORIE.—This was the big event of the Chakrata week at Mussoorie. The visitors went in first and put up but 80 runs, the homesters responding with 234 to which Mr. W. A. Bailey contributed a fine innings of 93. Chakrata did better in their second venture running their total to 229 before they were all dismissed. The chief scorers were Captain Lloyd 68 not out, Mr. Gannon 67. Mussoorie went in once more and put up 76 for the loss of one wicket, thus winning by nine wickets. Score:—

INTERESTING CRICKET FACTS GENERALLY UNKNOWN.

ALL who write glibly about tall-scoring and the great ease with which runs may be made in first-class cricket may find food for reflection in the fact that Captain W. L. Foster 1,041; David Denton 1,057; and Relf 1,059 are the only three cricketers who reached a four-figure total in their first season, in first-class cricket. I ignore the existence of W. G. Grace as a batsman never to be mentioned in the same breath with other batsmen. Six batsmen attained "Thousand honours" in their second season viz.: Arnold 1,212; C. J Burrup 1,295; F. Bowley (Worcestershire) 1,081; David Denton 1028; G C. B. Llewellyn 1,025; and Major R. M. Poore 1,551, while it was their third year's experience of first-class cricket before the following twenty joined the ranks of scorers of a thousand and over: Bosanquet 1,026; Carpenter 1,087; Cgttell 1,003; S. H. Day 1,011; R. E. Foster 1,073; Hayward 1,169; F. S. Jackson 1,928; C.O. H Sewell 1,114; Kinneir 1.131; Storer 1,110; T. R. Mason 1,149; L. C. H Palairet 1,343; Trott 1,175; P. Perrin 1,073; Tyldesley 1,017; Quaife (W. G.) 1,053; Ranjitsinghji 1,775; W. P. Robertson 1,102; P. F. Warner 1,137 and Capt. E. G Wynyard 1,038

The name of C. I. Thornton, "Buns" to his intimate, is always associated withgigantic sixers and terrific hitting, yet in the whole course of his first-class career this world famous batsman scored only 2,896 runs, a career extending over nineteen seasons. H. B. Daft, a name every cricketer somehow or another invariably associates with the manufacture of runs never scored more than 596 runs in a season and that only in his tenth season, 1,896. A. N. Hornby, who as "Monkey" is known to every cricketer whether he has the honour of his acquaintance or not, scored over a thousand bat twice in his career 1 531 and 1,383 in two successive seasons 1881, 1882. W. Chatterton was playing 14 seasons before he attained the honour. Alec Hearne, the best all-round old stager now playing without a doubt, scored 1 477 in his twelfth season. Lord Hawke who has an average of 21 for Yorkshire for 23 seasons' cricket and an aggregate over 13,000 for the county scored 1,078 in his fifteenth year possibly one reason for the Yorkshire Captain's well-known opinion that it takes three or four seasons of the best cricket to bring out all the cricket in a man, and that one season of county cricket is worth three or four of 'Varsity cricket as regards the same purpose. Any cavil at Alec Hearne's inclusion among the old stager section of cricket is best answered by pointing to the year when he first played for Kent, 1884, when he scored 101 runs with an average of 6·11. Now, in his twentieth year we find him scoring 755 with an average of 21·57. He did not score 1,000 until his twelfth season. Having given a few instances of good scoring it is interesting to note that tried in two seasons for Yorkshire, viz., 1893 and 1894 G. Waller scored but 2 runs that J. Ravenscroft played in two seasons for Cheshire [not a first-class shire but the matches played in were first class] and failed to score, this was in 1888 and 1894 and that one who gets his thousand regularly enough nowadays, E. H Killick, who is very handy on the piano by the way, scored 102 in his first three seasons for Sussex then 1,109 then 274, meagre trial and indifferent health having much to do with such in and out cricket. The great "C. B." played six seasons before reaching four figures with a 1,788 total in 1898. Archie Maclaren 1,104 in 1895 was his first thousand and readers will be surprised to note that R. Peel but once attained the honour with 1,206 in 1896. The late Arthur Shrewsbury's sixth season 1883 saw him cross the 1,000 time for the first time with 1,117 as his total, and the late G. F. Vernon's biggest bag was 856 in 1881. W. Gunn 7; Abel 6; J. T. Brown 6; George Hirst 5; A. O Jones 5; Jessop 4; C. McGahey 4; L. G. Wright 7; S. M J. Woods 9; A. E. Stoddart 7 are among the big names in the cricket world of those who took some time to mature. In part of three seasons did the Old Alleynian F. deL. Solbé play for Kent during which he totalled 14 runs! He at least found runs hard to make.

THE HARRIS TOURNAMENT.

NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE vs. YORK AND LANCASTER.—This match was played this evening on the Gymkhana ground in fair weather though the rain which fell the previous days had rendered the ground less hard than some footballers could have wished. In the first half the North and Lancashire team pressed hard from the start. They were, however, soon checked and the ball was driven back into their ground where a hard struggle ensued for some little time, the ball being frequently cornered or driven out of bounds. Play became more even as the game advanced, the ball being repeatedly driven backwards and forwards After several encounters at both ends of the ground and near the goal-keeper's quarters the whistle sounded without either team having been able to put in a goal.

A change was noticeable in the play during the second half time which was all in favour of the York and Lancashire team. The ball hung about their goal and a number of scrimmages took place near it, which always looked dangerous though good play by the backs goal-keeper prevented the Staffords from scoring. At last, however, the ball was driven through the Stafford team thus scoring their first goal. The Lancashire team then displayed a little more dash and carried the ball down the field a couple of times and on one occasion looked very much like scoring. The Staffords, however, proved themselves the stronger in combination and brought the ball back to the quarter of their antogonists making a succession of rushes and putting the goal-keeper at his tent to ward off disaster and prevent further scoring. Nothing more was effected during the remainder of play and the match thus ended in a win for the Staffords by one goal to nil.

10TH HUSSARS vs. ROYAL WARWICKSHIRE.—This match was played at Ghorpuri. The Warwick commenced the game and the right wing getting possession well in the centre sent in a fine shot but the goal-keeper drove it off. The Hussars were not very long in retaliating, but the pressure was relieved by kicking out. The Hussars forwards with some clever passing quickly got back again and sent in a shot which went wide. Towards the end of the first period the Warwicks again began to make their presence felt and an attack being well pressed home by their right ended in the left Hussars back accidentally pushing the ball into his own net. The Warwick were again aggressors in the second period but were unable to get through. The Hussars seemed to tire as they failed several times to press home their attacks, but their defance continued strong. When six minutes were left the Warwicks scored again, and the game ended in a win for the Warwicks by two goals to nil.

THE BUFFS vs. CHESHIRES.—This match was played on the Gymkhana ground T. Buffs gained some slight advantage at the commencement and gradually got the ball down the field, and after a run down Ablet, the inside right, scored. The Cheshires then woke up and played with great dash and combination, and retaliated, Gaffney scoring; and Dowell, inside left, scored another goal before close of half time.

During the second half the Buffs were sorely pressed. They fought hard, which was the only redeeming feature of what was a one-sided affair. Whitehead, centre forward, scored again for the Cheshires; the match ending in a win for the Cheshirrs by 3 goals to one.

ROYAL SCOTS vs. R. F. A.—This match was played at Ghorpuri. The Gunners played a fine game and gave their opponents as much to do as they could to keep them going. They certainly had the best of the exchanges in the first half and only the staying powers of the Scots served them to run out victors in the end. The Scots woke up to their danger in the second period and playing with much of their old verve were able to win. The scores were: Royal Scots 3 goals, R. F. A., Rirkee, 2 goals.

WEST YORKS vs. THE WARWICKS.—This match was one of the most stubborn of its kind and was keenly contested from start to finish. The match was a repetition of runs up and down the field, both teams exhibiting fine powers of passing and combination. Some hard fighting ensued mostly towards the centre of the field.

The play during the second half time was of the same even character. Nothing was scored by either side during the period and an extra ten minutes' play was allowed. In two minutes from the resumption of the play the Yorks from the corner kick scored one goal, and within another four minutes put in another goal by a kick from the near centre. Nothing further resulted, the game standing: Yorks two goals. Warwicks nil.

SEMI-FINALS.

ROYAL SCOTS vs. NORTH STAFFORDS.—Both teams exhibited fine tactics in passing and played with good combination, but there appeared to be a want of dash, and clever rushes along the field were few and far between. The game was uninteresting. Neither side appeared to have an advantage at any part of the play. Under such conditions it was difficult to pick out the better team as to say with any degree of certainty who would prove victorious. The game went along both in the first and the second half time without either party being able to score. The match was replayed on the 11th inst. The game was stubbornly contested, the Cheshires having the best of the exchanges and confining the West Yorks for the greater part of the time to their own territory. Gaffney, of the Cheshires, scored the first point for his side shortly before half time and the second period passing without any addition to the score, they ran out victors by one goal to nil.

THE BECHTLER CUP.

PHILANDER SMITH INST. 2ND TEAM vs. MODERN SCHOOL.—This was the first match in the tournament and was brought off on the 5th instant, the Modern School being the favourites. The first half was well contested, both teams doing good work. Just before half time the Modern School scored a goal. In the second period the Philander Smith team worked hard and had the best of matters. Hobbs put on their first goal soon after resuming, Jahans adding another shortly after. The game got very rough towards the end, but the Modern School were unable to add to their score, their opponents winning by two goals to one. Teams :—

P. S. I. 2ND TEAM.—Goal, R. Driscoll; backs, E. Thurley, V. Eagles; half-backs, L. Pringle, C. Cruz, G. Hardy; forwards, O. Haupt, S. Smart, P. Jahans, S. Lyttle, C. Campbell.

MODERNS.—Goal, Smith; backs, Quarry, Ro[illegible] half-backs, Brumby, Morton, Smith; forwards, Manoslescue-Gose, [illegible]mer, Johnson, Fleming.

OAK GROVE vs. Y. M. C. A.—Played on the 5th instant, and resulted in a win for Oak Grove by five goals to one. The game was fast throughout the winners showing that they were good exponents of the game. They pressed hard in the first half and put on three goals, Smith netting two and Reynolds the third. The Young Men played hard and Hill scored their only goal just before half time. They started well in the second half, but did not keep it up and the Oak Grove team playing well together put on two more goals, winning as stated. Teams :—

OAK GROVE.—Goal, Wilds; backs, Harrier, Whale; half-backs Burge, Milchem, Ellison; forwards, Jahans, Reynolds, Smith, Hales, Boileau.

Y. M. C. A.—Goal, F. Kreiser; backs, Scott, Vogel; half-backs, C. Kreiser, Smith, R. Gilden; forwards E. Gilden, Stenson, Hill, Bowan, Francis.

MANOR HOUSE "A" TEAM vs. YORK HOUSE.—These teams met on the 7th instant at Happy Valley. The Manor House team were heavier and stronger and won rather easily by five goals to nil. They put on two goals in the first period, and three in the second. The York House team might have been beaten by a larger margin had it not been for the fine play of Orde their goal keeper who saved some good shots. Teams :—

MANOR HOUSE "A" TEAM.—Goal, Felose; backs, Drake, Warde; half-backs, Law, FitzPatrick, Fox for Fitz Patrick; forwards, Hagar, Beaty, O'Connell, Meares, McCracker.

YORK HOUSE.—Goal, Orde; backs, Crakar, Marshall; half-backs, Morley, Cones, McGowan; forwards, Allison, Hughes, Marshall, McGowan, McMuller.

SURVEY OF INDIA vs. PHILANDER SMITH INST. 1ST TEAM.—These teams met on the 8th instant after heavy rain. The game was a very fast one throughout, the Philander Smith team giving a brilliant display. In the first half they scored three goals and all within the first ten minutes then the game settled down and no further scoring took place till the interval. The Survey played hard and scored a goal during the second period, but they were unable to get even, the Philander Smith team ran out victors by three goals to one.

MANOR HOUSE B. TEAM vs. DEHRA DUN.—This match was played on the Manor House grounds last Thursday and resulted in a win for the homesters. They were therefore to meet their first team the next day but scratched in their favour.

OAK GROVE vs. PHILANDER SMITH INST. 2ND TEAM.—Played on the 9th instant at Happy Valley. Oak Grove were a stronger and faster team and won by two goals to one. Towards the end of the first half Oak Grove forced a corner and succeeded in converting it. Their opponents played hard and managed to equalise early in the second period, but it was not long before Oak Grove got away with a fine run and scored their winning goal.

CALCUTTA RACKET CLUB.

THE annual singles handicap was played through last month and, in spite of one or two games falling through owing to illness, proved very successful. The doubles tournament was not so lucky and after a month had passed with only one match played, it was abandoned.

The opposite ends of the handicap met in the final of the singles, and the general opinion was in favour of Major Baldock, who had been steadily improving all through the tournament. With the score 12-4 in his favour in the first game, he looked liked justifying this opinion, but Rae secured the service at this stage, and putting on a somewhat lucky sequence of ten aces which seemed to demoralise his opponent, he won the match rather easily. SOUTH INDIA A. A. TOURNAMENT.

THE tournament was brought to a conclusion last week, the finals in the respective classes being fought off. The following are the results :—

Finals.

C. C. Suaris (Madras V. G.) beat Dr. Carne (55th Btty. R. F. A.) The first three rounds were very slow little real fighting being done. Suaris woke up in the fourth round and got in some good ones. The last round was very close, the judges deciding in favour of Suaris.

FEATHER WEIGHTS UP TO 9ST.

Finals.

Pte. Davey (1st Royal Fusiliers) beat Pte. Elliot (1st Leicesters). The first round was very even but Davey had the best of the next three rounds, gaining a lot on points. In the fifth round Elliot got in a hard one but Davie retaliated and gave his man a good deal of punishment the verdict going to the Fusilier.

LIGHT WEIGHT UP TO 10ST.

Pte. Harris (Durham L. I.) beat Lce-Corpl. Sanderson (1st Leicesters). The first bout ended very evenly and Sanderson had the best of the second, but Harris had all the best of the third, fourth and fifth, the judges giving him the decision.

MIDDLE WEIGHTS UP TO 11ST. 4LBS.

Finals.

Pte. Jones (Royal Warwicks) beat Lce-Corpl. McGill (Durham L. I.). Jones who had the advantage of reach and was quicker on his feet fought cautiously and kept McGill off, the latter trying for a knock out. Jones piled on the points and got the verdict.

HEAVY WEIGHTS.

Pte. Hall (1st Leicesters) beat Gr. Forsbrey (P. Fatty, R. H. A.) The first round went to Hall, who also had the best of the next round. Forsbrey was trying for a knock out, but though he got in some hard swings he was unable to find this mark and Hall had the best of it all through winning on points.

Sports.

MADRAS POLICE SPORTS.

ANNUALLY after the tedious exams. at the end of the Summer Session the officers of the Madras Police give a round of festivities at the Police Training School in Vellore. This year was no exception to the general rule. Mr. H. A. Waring, the Principal, arranged a most enjoyable entertainment on the night of the 30th, followed the next afternoon by athletic sports. In spite of the slipperiness of the ground caused by the recent heavy rain and on account of which the long distance and hurdle races had to be abandoned the sports were a great success.

Punctually at 4-30 P.M. the starters in the first race faced the line and were despatched immediately. Owing to the length of the programme which consisted of 17 events, the last item took place in semi-darkness, a light which greatly added to its effect. This event deserves special notice. A fort had been constructed on one side of the parade ground, well protected with barrels and sand-bags, it was held by a score or so of brave policemen supported by a dozen dummies. The attacking party began operations at about 100 yards, advancing under cover and firing volleys, the defenders received them with smart independent firing. When the stormers had advanced to within 20 years of their goal, they fixed bayonets, and with a wild cheer charged on the fort and took it after a sharp struggle. The "Fall In" then sounded, the victors lined up outside the fort bringing the prisoners and the dead (dummies) with them. The flashes from the guns added greatly to the effect of this novel item and Mr. Waring who planned it is to be congratulated on its great success. Col-Sergt. Jennings is to be complimented on the way he commanded the storming party.

The prizes were given away by Mrs. E. L. Vaughan, the wife of our Collector, who had come in specially from Chitor to be present at the sports.

Mr. Waring then made a speech thanking everybody for coming. Mr. Vaughan's reply was greatly appreciated by everyone present, especially by the officers, the staff, and the men of the Police school.

The Band of the Madras Railway Volunteers, which had been in attendance during the evening then played God Save the King and the gathering dispersed amid cheers for Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan and Mr. Waring. The following are the details of the several events.

JUDGES.—Messrs. Lane, Pelly, and Jones.

STARTERS.—Messrs. Mayne and Atkinson.

100 YARDS FLAT RACE.—For men in the Station House Officers', Class (Telugus). 1st Mohammed Abdul Hammed, 2nd Ramdass. 20 starters. Won easily by 2 yards.

100 YARDS FLAT RACE.—For men in the Station House Officers' Class (Tamils). 1st Minnasseh, 2nd G. Srivinivah. 19 starters. Won by a few inches.

100 YARDS FLAT RACE.—For Head Constables. 1st Raja Gopalar Cherriu, 2nd Suriyanarayana. 9 starters. A very tight finish.

100 YARD FLAT RACE.—For Recruits. 1st Appalasami, 2nd Chocka Singam Pillai Krishna Sami. 14 starters. Won easily. A fine race for second place.

TUG-OF-WAR.—"A" Section vs. "B." Section. "1st" pull "B" pulled over "A." 2nd pull "A" pulled over "B." 3rd pull A pulled over B. A most exciting contest. "A" section deserved their win. Although a lighter team their form was splendid.

100 YARDS FLAT RACE.—For Inspectors. 1st Draviam Koil Pillai, 2nd G. Nana Olivu. 11 starters. Won easily.

GUARDS TURNING OUT.—Men to lie down, with belts and turbans off. Prize to be given to the section, which turns out quickest and best dressed.

Won by "C" section who turned out in 36 seconds. Although "A" section turned out in 32 seconds, they failed to get the prize owing to careless dressing.

100 YARDS SACK RACE.—For Recruits. 1st S. Appalasami, 2nd Krishnasami. 11 starters. G. Nana Shanugam who was leading by 5 yards fell just before he reached the post. A good finish between first and second.

TUG-OF-WAR.—"A" section vs. "C" section. 1st pull "A" pulled over "C." 2nd pull "C" pulled over "A." 3rd pull "A" pulled over "C." "A" had great difficulty in winning this event. The last pull lasted over 3 minutes.

VICTORIA CROSS RACE.—Run 150 yds, climb into fort under fire, seize a dummy, and run 50 yards; garrison in fort to catch the intruders if possible. 1st Manasseh, 2nd Rajagopala Cherti. 15 starters. A novel race which caused great excitement. Out of the 15 who entered the fort only 3 returned.

100 YARDS SACK RACE.—For Station House Officers' Class. (Tamils). 1st G. Srinavasa Iyer, 2nd Subramania Iyer. Ten starters. No. 2 would have won easily if he had not fallen just before reaching the post.

100 YARDS THREE LEGGED RACE.—for Inspectors. 1st Rajagopal Iyer and Srinavasamy, 2nd G. Nana Olivu and Subanasinga. 6 pairs. An exciting finish. Won by a yard.

100 YARDS SACK RACE.—For men who had not been punished during the Summer Session. 1st Moideen Sahib 2nd Abdul Hamid, 3rd Abdul Kadir. 22 starters. An exciting finish between 3 Mohammedans. The Hindus were no where.

"THREE-LEGGED RACE.—For Recruits. 1st Nos. 281 and 181, 2nd Nos. 536 and 782. 14 pairs. The firs pair managed to wriggle in a foot or so in front of the second.

TUG-OF-WAR.—Officers and Staff vs. "A" section. Owing to the lateness of the evening this event was abandoned. "A" section would have given the Officers and Staff a hard time.

TUG-OF-WAR.—"A" section vs. Recruits. Won easily by "A" section who had an invincible team.

FRESH AIR VS. HEAT IN MENAGERIES.

WHAT is a curious and an instructive experiment which the management of the Dublin Zoological Gardens have been conducting with lions. The Phœnix Park Zoo has always been successful in its lion breeding operations: a few years ago they had on exhibition lions of the seventh or eighth generation born in captivity, and these were as healthy as any lion ever seen in a menagerie. It is a singular thing, but lions breed more freely in Dublin than in any other town in Europe, so far as our knowledge goes, while on the damp clay of Regent's Park the keepers have never yet succeeded in rearing a cub. Their success in leoculture of recent years had placed the Dublin Society in possession of a much larger stock of lions than they wanted, or could dispose of, the market for lions even of the best stamp being but limited. Just a year ago there were thirty lions, old and young, in the gardens and the Council decided to risk a couple in making an experiment. Accordingly they selected a pair of youngsters,—we are told that they picked out the "weediest," and however that may be, we are safe in assuming that the best examples were not chosen—and housed them in an outdoor cage partially roofed over and containing only a large dog kennel to serve as sleeping quarters. Now the Dublin winter is not a severe one, measured by ordinary home standards, but it is cold enough and wet enough to try the leonine constitution highly; and as it happened, last winter in Dublin was colder than usual. Nevertheless the young lions came through it in perfect health, the only difference being that they grew faster than their brethren indoors and developed longer and thicker coats.

Accepting their survival of the trial of the "outdoor system," the two results mentioned are much what we might have looked for: the accommodation both in the old Dublin Lion house and the new one is by no means on a scale calculated to afford exercise of the muscles to such restless animals: and confinement in a cage on a larger scale could hardly fail to produce a good effect on the growth of youngsters. The increased thickness of coat is also a natural result: the coat of an animal accommodates itself to a change of circumstance whether natural or artificial. A somewhat parallel case occurs to mind in the Pittsburg Cold Storage Warehouses recorded some years ago. The temperature in the cold chambers where meat and other things were stored was maintained at a point a few degrees below freezing: and for some months after the cold storage business came into operation neither rat nor mouse was to be found in the cold chambers. After a few months, however, traces of rats were discovered and the rats themselves when caught arrested notice at once by reason of the length and close texture of their fur: and by degrees the cold rooms in the Pittsburg store houses were made the abiding places of rats who apparently had resolved that cold should not daunt them and who grew warm coats to suit the new climate they had to endure. Then it occurred to some thoughtful person that if rats could thus adapt their attire to special conditions cats might display sufficient catholicity of spirit to do the same. Accordingly a few cats were introduced into the cold rooms and kept there. The experiment did not answer at first: the comfort loving cat objected to living in an ice house and its protest took the convincing form of dying. Then a cat with fur something closer than the ordinary was selected for experiment: she survived: not only survived, but, entering with commendable zest into the experiment brought forth seven kittens which followed the maternal example and grew close, thick coats suitable for the uncongenial climate of the cold storage room. This family of cold-room cats, it is averred, formed the parent stock of thick-coated cats which in time was distributed throughout the storage houses of Pittsburg.

The ability of the lion to thrive in a climate so much colder than that of his native habitat suggests the propriety of making further experiments in the same direction with other animals. There is practical purpose in making such experiments for the cost of erecting and maintaining the cage-cum-hot house building now deemed necessary for tropical beasts is a formidable item in the accounts of every zoological society: also, were it found that the animals can resist the rigours of a European winter we do not doubt that they would be very much healthier and enjoy—or suffer—longer lives in captivity. In making such experiments zoological societies would be doing nothing original. It is a matter of history that Henry I. established a menagerie at Woodstock in a walled park wherein, beside "great store of deer" he had "divers strange beasts kept and nourished, such as were brought to him from far countries as lions, leopards, lynxes, porcupines and such other." It is wildly improbable that the zoological keeper of the twelfth century was acquainted with any means of applying artificial heat to the cages in which his charges were housed; and we can only regret that contemporary chroniclers were not moved to record a few particulars of the Royal Menagerie at Woodstock for our guidance at the present day.

The Dublin experiment is an important step in the direction whither modern ideas concerning the best methods of keeping exotic beasts in captivity may eventually lead us. The theory that a high temperature maintained by costly artificial means is the first condition necessary in menageries for the large felidæ and some other beasts, notably the higher apes is being questioned by those who consider the subject in a liberal-minded spirit. The value of fresh air, larger liberty and the greater opportunity for occupation larger liberty affords have been recognised as desirable in American zoological collections and the results we cannot doubt will prove the correctness of the views of those who adopt these methods. After all, the caged lion or tiger does not depend for his existence on a temperature artificially maintained at the level that may be familiar to him during certain hours at certain seasons. Tigers as we know are never more alert, active and hungry than in the cold weather: and we have never heard it suggested that tigers are liable to cold and kindred ills even though the thermometer fall below freezing point. It is permissible to suggest that the spirits of animals have something to do with their health and that a cheerful lion will thrive better than one in state of chronic bored despondency: and we may suggest that if the beasts could choose they would joyfully sacrifice one degree of temperature for every one linear yard of additional space given in exchange for it, to a reasonable point. Exercise, occupation and fresh air are not less necessary to the well-being of animals than an equable warm temperature; and any well-directed experiment, such as the Calcutta Zoological Gardens authorities have recently carried out, which helps forward this theory towards the realm of practice, deserves encouragement.

For the Althorp Park Stakes of 1845 Lord George Bentinck had engaged a filly named Cherokee, who was looked upon as very smart. Cherokee won her trial so easily—by four or five lengths—that his lordship was afraid some of the old horses in the gallop had not run up to their form by reason of the shortness of their preparation. He therefore desired Kent, his trainer, before he left for Northampton, to try My Mary (who was second to Cherokee) over again with the unerring old African, as it was his lordship's intention to stand a good stake on Cherokee for the Althorp Park Stakes, if Kent was able to make out that My Mary, aged three years, was in form.

The second trial came off all right, as My Mary won it easily, making it pretty evident that Cherokee was very smart, as My Mary had won the Prendergast at Newmarket in the preceding autumn. Accordingly Lord George, after arriving at Northampton, gave his chief commissioner, Mr Harry Hill, practically unlimited instructions to back Cherokee for the Althorp Park Stakes.

As Kent was saddling the mare Mr Hill came up to his lordship in great tribulation, stating that he was unable to execute the commission, as they only offered 5 to 4 against Cherokee, although there were ten starters and two or three of the others heavily backed.

"Don't come here to bother me with your fears" exclaimed his lordship testily. "Go back and get on as much money as you can, and you will find 5 to 4 good enough odds when the race is over."

And so it proved, as Cherokee won in a canter by two lengths.

Sporting Notes.

THE Calcutta training track will be opened on Monday, the 26th instant: work in connection with the rubbing down sheds and other accessories peculiar to the Calcutta course during the cold weather are either complete or going on apace.

Smallman, the popular Calcutta trainer, has gone to Rangoon for the Autumn Meeting which begins on the 24th instant. Among the horses he took down with him was Amis, recently purchased by Mr. Balthazar of that city.

The Indian Polo Association Annual Championship Tournament, will be held shortly after the Inter-Regimental Tournament, date to be notified hereafter. We draw attention to an advertisement regarding this fixture which appears among our sporting announcements to-day.

We publish with much pleasure the Bombay Shikar Regulations recently issued. The operations of the murderous native shikari and the fish poisoner will thereby be restricted though we would fain have seen more stringest rules for his special benefit in certain respects. Still as a beginning the rules are good, and can operate in no other way than for the benefit of all concerned. The rights of the Forest Officer are not recognised, we see, as paramount, while very wisely the Government have made concessions to wild forest tribes who subsist largely on the products of the chase. Years ago we put in a plea for tiger cubs and the sparing of immature carnivora and even this, we are not sorry to see, has received recognition in the new game rules. When, we wonder, will Bengal fall into line with Burma, Kashmir, the Nilgiris, Ceylon, and Southern India and Bombay and have proper rules for the regulation of shooting and the prevention of game extermination in supercession of the effete regulations issued nearly 20 years ago.

With much regret we announce the death of 2nd-Lieutenant Holford, 4th Dragoon Guards, on the 13th October, at Dehra, from injuries sustained in a hurdle race on the 29th September.

The Southern Mahratta Race Meeting comes off at Belgaum on the 29th and 31st instant. The Arab contingent, we believe, will be strongly represented and the entries promise good racing.

It is rumoured that Mr. "Bob" Sievier threatens a descent on India this cold weather.

The well performed French horse Vinicius came by an accident in the Prix Royal Oak at the Paris Meeting, held on the 13th ultimo which will prevent him being trained again; he now goes to the stud.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. A. Apcar's string in charge of Watson is expected in Calcutta at the end of this week.

Mr. R. Boteler, the C. T. C. official handicapper, returned to India in the Maldavia which arrived in Bombay last Friday; the same vessel brought back Messrs. A. Milton and W. J. Bradshaw of Calcutta.

The English Jockey Club have passed the new "doping" rule. We learn from our exchanges this week that at a meeting of the Jockey Club held at Newmarket on the 30th ultimo it was proposed and carried that Rule 45 be altered to read, "No two-year old shall run in any race with more than 200 sovs added before the Epsom Summer Meeting;" also, in Rule 132, it was decided to omit the first three lines to the word "but," the Rule to read: "If a horse runs in a hood, muzzle, martingale, breastplate, or clothing, it must be put into the scale and included in the jockey's weight." Rule 133 is altered to read: "No whip or substitute for a whip, bridle, plates, or anything worn on a horse's legs shall be allowed in the scales, either in weighing out or weighing in." It was decided to add to Rule 152—"If the jockey cannot draw the proper or declared weight, the Clerk of the Scales shall allow him 1lb."

To Rule 176 was added: "If any person shall be proved to have administered, for the purpose of affecting the speed of a horse, drugs or stimulants internally, by hypodermic or other methods, every person so offending shall be warned off Newmarket Heath and other places where these Rules are in force."

Penton, the jockey, is now in Calcutta, getting over the illness he recently contracted at Poona.

Sceptre and Zinfandel are among the horses scratched for the Cambridgeshire which will be run next Wednesday.

Some of the horses which we expect to play an important part in the approaching cold weather meeting, have arrived in Calcutta, among them Cretonne, Vanguard, Vasto, Presbyterian and Friar Tuck. Last year's Cup winner has summered well at Darjeeling, and Friar Tuck quite comes up to expectations in condition and looks.

The horses recently purchased by Mr. Paris in England and referred to by us some time ago, have gone to Wishart.

Gabelle, the winner of the Governor's Cup at the Colombo August Meeting, and Regalia II, who ran second, have arrived in Calcutta and will be prepared by Wishart for the big meeting.

We are sorry to hear of the serious illness of Ramshaw, the jockey, who is down with enteric in Bombay.

Dundee, the steeplechase horse, died at Lucknow last week.

Carreewick, late Valento, is a flier that may need watching during the Calcutta cold weather meetings. She is a five-year old bay Australian mare, by Haut Brion—Lady Helena, and is now owned by Aga Shah of Bombay. She is a well-performed one as will be seen from her record which we give below. We observe from the Australasian Turf Register that she was bought for India for £150 and we believe we are right in saying her present owner paid Rs. 8,000 for her, shortly after her arrival in this country. Here is a list of her performances.

The unbeaten Pretty Polly has won the Middle Park Plate as set forth in our Special Telegram to-day. She has done excellently and if she winters well should show up prominently in some of the classic races next year. She is entered for the One Thousand Guineas, the Oaks and the St. Leger.

The Annual General Meeting of the Ceylon Turf Club will be held on the 31st instant.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—The tenth extra day's racing showed not the slightest diminution in the interest displayed by either owners or the public and so far as keenness in the great game is concerned the season might be beginning instead of drawing nearly to a close. Backers began well when they spotted that game little pony Scattercash for the New Maiden Plate over 6 furlongs, despite his being top weight with 9st. 5lbs. as in Hoyt's masterly hands he really never gave his supporters any anxiety. But the fraternity of book compilers got their own again and a bit over, as they generally do, in the next race as with Golightly, Nautilus, Min and Key West, all backed for money the little fancied Jolly Roger (an English pony imported by Captain Stratton, and admirably ridden by Robinson, won cleverly to the surprise, I believe, of his own stable, his race being apparently considerably in advance of any previous form in his gallops. One more of the good things of life gone awaste.

In the Losers' Handicap for Arabs Ali bin Amir brought back to memory that wonderful little whilom champion Turkish Flag, who in poor Ebrahim's hands did such doughty deeds in days of yore. It is doubtful wisdom passing on an illustrious cognomen to an untried one, but in this case the second of the name did not disgrace it as he secured the Judge's verdict but by a neck only from the by no means smasher Victoria.

The public, astute though they are, often fail to take timely warning or to appreciate a horse's performances even though he thrusts it at them. So was it that in spite of the form already shown at the meeting by Gum, backers fancied at least three horses' chances before his and that very business like looking horse (of the chaser stamp he looks to my eye) showed them how quickly they had under appreciated his capabilities by having the race won on getting inside the distance. In this race appeared Mr. Apear's grand looking colt aptly christened Sacristan by Bill of Portland—Monastery, surely good enough breeding for anything. The colt, one of the big slashing stamp, ran very green through the first part of the race and seemed unable to balance himself into his stride, but I shall be surprised if he does not turn into a good one.

In the Closed Welter Stakes the public in fear and trembling backed the handsome Hamilton, who had sold them more than once, but Captain Randall kept him humming and won all out by a length and a half. A popular win.

In the Small Arab Plate the stable went nap on that great old warrior Governor, certainly one of the staunchest and most reliable Arabs in training

It is doubtful wisdom passing on an illustrious cognomen to an untried one, but in this case the second of the name did not disgrace it as he secured the Judge's verdict but by a neck only from the by no means smasher Victoria.

The public, astute though they are, often fail to take timely warning or to appreciate a horse's performances even though he thrusts it at them. So was it that in spite of the form already shown at the meeting by Gum, backers fancied at least three horses' chances before his and that very business like looking horse (of the chaser stamp he looks to my eye) showed them how quickly they had under appreciated his capabilities by having the race won on getting inside the distance. In this race appeared Mr. Apcar's grand looking colt aptly christened Saeristan by Bill of Portland—Monastery, surely good enough breeding for anything. The colt, one of the big slashing stamp, ran very green through the first part of the race and seemed unable to balance himself into his stride, but I shall be surprised if he does not turn into a good one.

In the Closed Welter Stakes the public in fear and trembling backed the handsome Hamilton, who had sold them more than once, but Captain Randall kept him humming and won all out by a length and a half. A popular win.

In the Small Arab Plate the stable went nap on that great old warrior Governor, certainly one of the staunchest and most reliable Arabs in training who seems to improve with old age and hard work. As the ever trusty Jimmy was entrusted with the steering apparatus everything augured for the best and the good thing came off all right, but with none too much to spare.

In the Auction Plate Ombree and the little mare Nancy Till divided popularity and the race provided a most exciting finish all down the straight, an appropriate winding up to a capital day's racing. Lansdown, Southall and Robinson being all hard at it, the former on Nancy just getting home by the shortest of heads from Dart with Ombree a neck behind.

The afternoon of a race was a somewhat unfortunate time to select for a fashionable wedding, for many distinguished racing men, who would greatly have desired to wish the popular young couple good luck, felt that to leave in the middle of an interesting afternoon's racing was more than could reasonably be expected of frail human nature, while I fear that several warriors who illuminated the first half of the day's sport with their presence in full war paint and whose martial positions in life necessitated their presence at the happy ceremony must have ungallantly wished that circumstances had permitted them to gaze on "silks and satins" elsewhere. To enable G. R's. to get away in time the Closed Welter Handicap for all ponies 14-2 and under was placed first on the card. The public for some unknown reason went for two unknown quantities in Estelle and Friendly undeterred by the handicapper's obvious depreciation of their virtues, possibly fearing lest the accomplished horsemen on them might outride Ena, who was certainly of superior class to the majority of the field. Major England, with a comfortable berth on the rails, never had a moment's anxiety and Ena won as she liked.

Then came a mile handicap for maiden Arabs when that admirably consistent performer Moreed in Hoyt's guiding had no real difficulty in winning, Talisman being the only opponent to make Hoyt move in his saddle for a moment or two.

The real upset of this day was the 6-furlong handicap for 14 hand Arabs, when with such rare good ones as Achilles, Little Joker, Moon and Tigris in the race, Colonel Eccles, who certainly does not win out of his turn, provided the victor in his good looking bay Rocket, on whom little Bennet making full use of his 6st 9lbs. raced away choking his field and just getting home practically unbacked.

A mile handicap for horses which had not won a race of the value of Rs. 1,500 or over since 1st April 1901 brought seven to the post, the public going strong for Misty and Mr. Apcar's colt Sacristan with the pony Min next in demand, but Byramjee the astute served up another out-sider in Planet—greatly improved both in form and manners.

Mosumma, the bottom of a five-furlong handicap with but 6st. 10lbs, won it easily, a quality little pony; and then came the Karjat Plate Handicap for 14-1 ponies with such winners as Key West, Nautilus, Veera, Miss Birnie and Haydn among them. Those who held that the last-named great sprinter could not get the fifth furlong burnt their fingers for their lack of discrimination, as beautifully nursed by Hoyt, he had the race safe every yard of the way.

An uninteresting Arab selling race brought the penultimate day of the Poona racing season to a close and as the ponies past the post a thunderstorm which had been threatening came down and sent every one scurrying to shelter.

The Dongargarh man-eater continues his criminal career, and for some time no serious attempt has been made to bag him; but with the cessation of the rains we hear of one or two shikar parties who have pledged themselves to compass his death. Good luck to them say we. By the way the Government reward has been increased to Rs. 1,500.

Captain James D. Graham, I.M.S., 4th Bengal Lancers, Allahabad, sends the following account of a unique accident to the Indian Medical Gazette. Lieutenant X, who has been under my care, met with the following rather unique accident :—

On coming up with the pig, he stuck it by a lunge movement, the pig being ahead of him. The pig then ran across the pony's front, and the spear shaft striking the pony's off shoulder, was knocked out of the rider's hand. At the same time the weighted end came to the ground well forward, the spear was jerked out of the pig, and its point turning in an upward direction, penetrated the near shoulder of the pony, passed through the chest wall, emerging through the numdah at the corner between the flap and seat of the saddle, having passed between the pony's tenth and eleventh ribs, both of which were partially cut. Force of impact sent it on, and it passed through the left buttock of the rider emerging behind and ultimately coming to rest with the blade in a position behind the left axilla and shoulder-joint. Only the buttock wound was made, the point of entrance being near the middle of the thigh, one inch below fold of the buttock, the point of exit being three inches behind and on a level with left trochanter major, and the distance between being six and-a-half inches. The wound was superficial, missed everything of importance, and is healing well. It was treated with carbolic oil at the time. Only some 1½ inches of shaft were visible between the point of exit from the pony and the entrance buttock wound. The pony stopped dead still, and was held, while the shaft was cut through below the entrance wound. It was then pulled straight through. Nine and a quarter inches of blade, and 1 foot 9¾ inches of shaft passed through the rider, and 1 foot 9 inches of solid shaft and 3 feet of torn bamboo passed through the pony. The pony developed pneumonia and died one week afterwards; but the post-mortem revealed no lung perforation. The case is interesting, I think, first, as illustrating the vagaries of a spear in a very few moments, once control over it has been lost by the rider; second, also as showing that such a wound need not become septic if first-aid appliances are at hand.

There is an interesting article in Munsey's Magazine, viewing the jockey from the American standpoint.

The writer, Mr. J. F. Marsten, declares that the jockey market is in its present condition because the supply does not meet the demand, and as to the reasons of the incursion of the American jockey into Europe we are told :—In the first place that they are conceded to be the best in the world, and there is a great demand for our riders abroad. The more prominent American stables are fond of racing in England and France. It is only natural for the owners who send their horses abroad to take American jockeys with them. As a result, a goodly number of our best saddle mechanics are riding in foreign lands for foreign or American owners. "Danny" Maher, perhaps the greatest living American jockey, has not ridden in this country for three years, preferring to accept engagements in England, where his success has been great. Lucien Lyne, who came into prominence last year when he piloted Savable to victory in the Futurity Stakes, is now riding in England for the Messrs. James R. and Foxhall P. Keene. "Winnie" O'Connor, one of the most popular riders who ever had the leg up on thoroughbred, deserted his native land this year to ride in France for the Baron de Rothschild. "Jerry" Ranson, who won his spurs on the San Francisco tracks is likewise in France, piloting the horses of William K. Vanderbilt. Nash Turner, Henry Spancer, Fred Taral, George Thompson, and "Skeets" Martin are all well-known American riders who are winning fame and fortune on foreign race-courses.

The "invasion" of American jockeys, as it is termed, is not confined to Great Britain and France. American boys are riding to-day with much success in Austria, Belgium, Russia, and Hungary, while at least one is performing in Chile. Here, then, is one reason why good jockeys are scarce on the American turf this season. There are, however, several other causes. The profession is a dangerous one. Accidents are frequent. Few jockeys are killed, but many are seriously hurt, with the result that they lose their nerve, and their usefulness as riders is ended, permanently or temporarily. Racegoers will recall the case of George Odom, one of our most popular and successful jockeys. Thrown one day in a big field, and barely escaping with his life, the lad lost his courage completely and did not return to his best form for more than two years.

Thoroughbreds have most delicate organisms, and the good rider is the one who understands his mount. Some horses run best when in front. In such cases the rider most know how to send his mount to the front and keep him there, without pumping him all out before the stretch is reached. To trail with a "front runner" is to lose all chance to win the race.

Other horses are slow beginners, and to force these to the front would be suicidal. Some are prone to go wide—that is, to run out on the turns. Others are notorious loafers, and will not run until waked up. The jockey who reaches the top of his profession must know how to deal with all these equine varieties. A jockey must know how to judge pace. He must be able to tell when the horses in front of him are setting such a fast clip that they will drop back to him before the race is over. He will then hold his horse at an even pace and wait for those in front to slacken speed. It often happens that when the spectators think a certain horse is rushing to the front, he is only keeping up a steady pace. The tired animals in the lead are dropping back to the horse, who is running well within himself.

Alertness at the post is another important factor. Many a race is won by getting away from the barrier ahead of the field. This insures getting the rail and covering the shortest route. The jockey must also know just when to make his run, or bid. To get to the front too soon means a tired horse for the final struggle in the stretch. To make the supreme effort too late means that he will not get up in time. Absolute lack of fear is another important qualification of the star rider. He must frequently shoot his mount through the smallest of holes. If the horses in front close in, he must pull up or go over the fence. He must keep out of "pockets"—that is, he must secure clear sailing. Few people realise what a strain it is on the arms of a jockey to ride a race of a mile or more, especially on a heavy-headed horse. It will be seen that upon the rider devolves, in great measure, the responsibility for the victory or defeat of his mount. Sometimes, of course, a horse is so much better than the rest of the field that it would come home in front with the worst kind of a bungler up; but this is the rare exception. In a close finish, the result depends almost entirely on the jockey. Seldom does an apprentice "hook up" with a crack rider in the stretch and beat him out, even if the novice has the better horse under him.

A South African correspondent writes :—

The race for the Johannesburg Spring Handicap of £1,500, was run on 12th September. I give the result below :—

BETTING : 11 to 8 agst Peppermint, 4 to 1 each Ocean Gem and Invasor, 9 to 2 Caledonia, 14 to 1 Malgo, 33 to 1 Spring Meeting, 50 to 1 Eleanor.

Totalisator : Win, £31 18s.; places, £8 1s.; £2 6s., £1 17s.

At the half-distance Spring Meeting challenged, and, gradually overhauling Caledonia, fairly wore him down, and won by a head. Peppermint, who apparently tried to get through in the rails, was three-quarters of a length behind Caledonia. Ocean Gem was placed fourth by the judge, a length further away. Invasor was fifth, Malgo sixth, and Eleanor last. Time.—1min. 43⅘secs.

It will be seen that Barney Allen's Caledonia was second, beaten by a head. Apart from the money part of the matter, and the loss must have been considerable for the horse was always well backed, it must have been a keen disappointment to his genial owner. He expressed himself confident to the last and said to a reporter, "Even now that Pippermint is going I can see nothing to beat me. I think I shall win easily." Pippermint is reputed quite the best horse in South Africa and should, it is said, have won easily, but was badly ridden by an Australian, H. Powell, call it that anyhow; some people say it was rather an artistic performance

There was a good deal of unpleasantness all round in connection with the horse owing to the idiotic proceedings of the owner, who had another horse in the race called Chinois and seemed to find amusement in backing them both days about alternately, declaring that Chinois was the one that was going, only to change the mind at the last moment and send Pippermint. Backed him heavily too, but it only serves such people right.

Dandy ran in a 6-furlong race on the same day but was nowhere.

The recent horse sales in the New Forest have shown a substantial advance in the prices realized for ponies, due, no doubt, to the improvement in the breed resulting from the policy of the New Forest Pony Association. This is a matter of more than local importance. The small horse is the war horse of the future, and it is fortunate that we have in the United Kingdom several native breeds of ponies which may be made suitable for such work. The little horses of Dartmoor and Exmoor and the New Forest, of Wales and Western Ireland, the Shetlands of the far North, and the Galloways of Southern Scotland may furnish a large supply for military work; and in each district where the ponies are found serious attention is now being given to the problem. It may seem absurd to speak of the "Shelty" as a horse fit for a yeoman or a hussar; but horse-breeders know better. He is the hardiest, most sagacious, and most docile of the horse tribe, cunning yet tractable, and free from vice; sturdy and ready for any work, with a power of endurance no less remarkable than his intelligence. In his native wastes he lives in the open air, making a meal of seaweed, or swimming a voe to find fresh patches of herbage, and he knows well how to open a gate if there be provender on the other side of it. For nearly sixty years the Shetland pony has worked in the coalpits of Durham and Northumberland, and Lord Londonderry has formed a stud of pure Shetlands to maintain the supply. The Shetland is very small and rarely exceeds a height of 9½ hands, but he is all bone and substance, and it is believed that these qualities may be employed to furnish the ideal mount required by the fighting men of the future.

The ponies of Galway and Connemara are even more valuable for this purpose. They are larger than the Shetlands, and they have the same capacity for thriving where more delicately natured creatures would starve. They can make a meal from a gorse bush and even dig up the roots for food. "Surely nowhere in the British Islands," says one authority, "are there ponies with so much stamina as these." They attain to twelve and thirteen hands, are robust and strong, good-tempered, intelligent, and courageous, and the Connemara "hobbies" perform invaluable service to the peasants who are fortunate enough to own them. There has been no attempt in the past to improve or even to maintain the breed of these valuable yellow or dun coloured ponies, but with care and attention it is estimated that at least 1,000 of them could be furnished every year for remount work with advantage both to the army and the poor people in that congested district. The ponies of Wales and the west of England are no less suitable, though the War Office laughed at the idea until a couple of New Forest ponies, standing less than 14 hands, won the first prize at the Military Tournament in the team jumping competitions open to the auxiliary forces. Sir Richard Green Price has said that good ponies beat moderate horses of twice their size, for they have "twice the constitution and thrice the sense." The recognition of this fact will lead to a great development of pony breeding in this country, and the work has already begun.

Although polo is much the same all the world over, the "station game" in India differs considerably from the small local games in England or America observes a writer in the October number of Baily's Magazine. For though in Hindustan much excellent match-play is to be seen, the station game is often—according to the local vernacular—of the "bumble puppy" variety. One will sometimes find men who can hardly sit across a pony endeavouring to play. Well-meaning but somewhat incapable Joint Magistrates are en evidence. Assistant District Superintendents of Police, semi-black "Opium wallahs," Civil Surgeons, and Loco. Superintendents of railways are also among the devotees of the station game.

At the game alluded to one does not play thousand-rupee ponies. In all probability five of the ponies playing might be bought for that sum; some of them have begun life in an ekka (an under-sized cab); whilst others do duty as native infantry adjutant's charger. Nor is the standard of height always very rigidly adhered to. One may thus find a 14-2 galloway competing with a 12-2 "tat," the first-named being owned by the Collector and the latter by his Assistant. A special feature of the station game is the presence among the players of one or two men hailing from small out-stations. They may have ridden or trained many miles to enjoy a few chuckers—such is their keenness. Should they be well-paid Joint Magistrates or Deputy Collectors, they will be well mounted on Arab ponies, for which as much as 800 or 900 rupees apiece may have been given. As to the kit worn by the players, white or coloured shirts of Cawnpore drill, or sweaters, white drill breeches, and black or brown leather boots are patronised. It may, in this connection, be pointed out that the breeches are often of the most atrocious cut. For neither the Anglo-Indian tailor fraternity of Calcutta and Bombay nor the indigenous durzee have the remotest notion how to shape breeches. [Bosh.—Ed., Indian Field.] They are, almost invariably, too tight in the thigh and too loose round the knee to be comfortable. A few players, on the other hand, have their breeches made in England when returning home on leave of absence. However, since the possessing of well-cut breeches does not necessarily result in good play, it is perhaps immaterial as to whether these garments are properly or improperly made. It should be pointed out that heavily quilted sola topees are worn by polo men in India, the occasional native player preferring the turban of the country. As a precaution against damage resulting from a spill the sola topee has its uses.

It frequently happens that Indian officers from the native cavalry regiment join in the station game. And exceedingly well some of them play. Blest with a quick eye, good judgment, fine horsemanship and excellent ponies, they play a remarkably good game. Indeed, polo is a strong bond between the black and white inhabitant of our unpleasant Eastern possession. In many of the large stations, such as Meerut, Lucknow, Rawalpindi and Secunderabad fast games may be enjoyed, three or four regimental and one or two station teams putting in an appearance at the polo ground several times a week. At Muttra in the North-West Provinces, where the 9th Lancers are stationed, polo is played every evening, there being practically nothing else to do there.

In some stations but one game a week is indulged in. Such is the lack of interesting general conversation in Anglo-Indian social circles that the excitement in question is discussed for a week before (and after) it has taken place. Just as after a day's hunting men love to ride their line over again so in India does the guileless subaltern or the extra keen Officiating District Superintendent of Police like to discuss the game in all its bearings until the subject is eventually worn to shreds. Indeed, no detail will escape him. Being a small place he will know his neighbour's business and everything concerning him better than he himself does. He will be fully aware that the "Major sahib's" breeches were made by Tautz and that those of the native regiment captain were manufactured by the wife of that economical warrior. He will also have treasured up the information that the Civil Surgeon's saddle was won in a raffle for eight annas and that the Joint Magistrate's brown riding-boots were a present from the local shoe-maker, whose son he has appointed to the police force. Nor are the ladies of the station behind hand in manifesting an interest in the game. The whole half-dozen of them put in an appearance, eagerly discussing the points of the player and of the ponies. And some of them are exceedingly well informed upon the subject of horseflesh. In fact, it is quite a common thing to find an Anglo-Indian lady assisting her spouse to choose a pony. In the most professional manner imaginable she will feel its legs and look at its teeth.

Much disappointment is reported from all parts of the United Kingdom at the paucity of both partridge and pheasant. Many preservers of the latter have decided on closing their coverts for this season, reserving the birds for breeding, the havoc wrought by the abnormally wet summer having thinned out stocks to a most serious extent.

To judge by an auction held in London on the 29th ultimo many owners of motor cars appear to have had enough of them; no less than 50 lots falling to the hammer at prices 60 per cent. under and even lower than the original cost. Steam and petrol-driven cars went for the usual mere song, popular fancy now being pronounced in favour of the electric accumulator.

The new draft for the Madras Hounds arrived from England on the 17th instant. It consists of fifteen couples, all in first rate condition and these, with three couple from the Poona Hounds will form the pack for the coming season. Major F. C. Logan Home continues as Master—his fourth season—and he will have as whips Captains R. H. Dick Conyngham, A.-D.-C., W., Thompson, R. F. A., and Mr. H. M. Gibson. Weather permitting, a beginning will be made in about a month's time.

Athletic Notes.

THE Northern Circars Racquet Tournament is to be held annually at Christmas at such court as the Committee shall decide. It will be managed by the Stewards of the Waltair Gymkhana and shall be for pairs representing any recognized service or profession, no two players to combine to represent any District, Station or Club, (sporting or otherwise). A trophy, obtained by public subscription, will be presented to the winning pair, to be held by them till the date of the next Tournament. The "rubbers" with the exception of the final, are to be the best of three games and the final is to be the best of five games. We are asked to state that entries are to be sent to the Honorary Secretary, Waltair Gymkhana, on or before the 15th December.

The All India Hockey Tournament will be held at Allahabad this year and will commence on the 18th January 1903. It is open to British Regiments, attached men not to be played in regimental team; Teams of British Officers of any two Native Regiments combined; Batteries R. A. or companies R. G. A. (any two may combine); Station Gymkhana, Police officers' Teams, and Volunteer Teams of the same Corps or Station.

The Calcutta Rowing Club dinner may be held on the 14th proximo after the decision of the Power Cup race.

That marvellous runner A. Shrubb seems never to go out nowadays without lowering a record. His latest achievement was 6mins. 47⅗secs. for the one mile and a half at the L A C. Autumn Meeting as fully reported in our London Sporting Letter to-day. This eclipses the previous British record and is only 1 second outside the world's amateur record now standing to the credit of T. P. Conneff.

The match between Mr. L. Bagshawe's crew and that stroked by Mr. C. V. Green alluded to in our last issue is "off," owing to a transfer and an accident in the Telegraph boat.

The second series of races for a silver cup subscribed for by the Mosquito Yacht Club in Yokohama and the Canoe and Dinghy Club in Kobe came off on Saturday, 19th September, in Yokohama. The first series of races was held in Kobe in June, as already reported in these columns. The Kobe Club race with small open centreboard boats, of the dinghy type, and at the Kobe Spring Regatta two Yokohama representatives went down to sail against the two chosen Kobe men. The two boats used were identical, and were tossed for by the parties concerned. Kobe won the first race, Yokohama the second and Kobe the decider. The second series of races was sailed in Yokohama, two sister boats of the Yokohama fleet being used. These are much bigger than the Kobe boats, being "race abouts" of about the equivalent of 1½ rater at home. In both races the Yokohama men led from the start, and won all the way, finishing 5 minutes ahead in the first race, and 4 minutes in the second.

We are sorry to learn of the accident to our old cycle champion, Mr. Stanley Oakes of Calcutta. Treating himself for some dog bites with pure carbolic acid has landed him in the General Hospital with a very bad foot and hand, and altogether he is not having a cheerful time. In common with his many friends we hope to see him out ere long and sympathise with him in his hard luck.

The Committee for the scheme to send home a team of Indian cricketers held a meeting in Bombay on the 16th instant. It was resolved that the scheme had advanced so far that the Committee felt they were justified in making arrangements for fixtures at the meeting of County Secretaries at Lord's in December next. Mr. E. H. D. Sewell, of the Essex County Cricket Club, has been asked to take the necessary steps to arrange for these fixtures. It was further resolved to send out printed circulars for subscriptions or guarantee of subscriptions to the public of Bombay and several parts of India generally. From the number of subscriptions and the guarantees promised, the Committee were of opinion that their application would be generously responded to by lovers of sport in this country.

Bicycle polo may be revived in Calcutta this cold weather if the Cycle Corps carries out its present intention of starting a team. This will give us Ballygunge, the Cycle Corps and the B.-N. We see our friend Mr. F. A. G. Medd of the Calcutta Rowing Club, rowed bow of a winning scratch eight at the L. R. C. regatta held at the end of last month.

The Caledonian Cricket Club, Calcutta, hold their annual dinner at the Trocadero next Saturday.

The Dinapore Hockey League is still in progress, two games were played on the 13th instant. In the first game the Survey beat the Officers 5th B. L. I. by three goals to nil. They scored all the goals in the second period, the first half being very even. Khagole beat the 73rd R F. A by a goal to nil on the same day after a hard game.

On the 16th instant two more games were played Khagole beat the Survey by 2 goals to one. At half time the Survey were leading by a goal to nil, but after the interval Khagole played hard and put on two goals. The other game was between the K. O. S. B.'s and the officers of the B. L. I. The Borderers winning by 2 goals to nil after a closely contested game.

The Rangoon Trades Walking Match came off on the 10th instant, the following twelve competitors facing the starter:—Messrs. D. Johnstone, C. Urquhart, J. Towers, J. Johnson, W. J. Fowles, L. F. Bayne, F. R. Graystone, J. Brisbane, J. R Smith, G. S. Clark, W. M. Turner and W. Burns.

They went away at a rare pace, Towers, Johnson Fowels and Turner leading. Towers walked well and leading throught won in 1hr 16mins. 25secs. C. Urquhart second in 1hr. 17mins. 33secs. and the old Calcutta veteran W. M. Turner 1hr. 19mins. 1sec.

Our Bombay correspondent writes :—The weekly Mounted Sports held on Wednesday were again of a very successful character. The programme was of an interesting nature, and most of the events attracted a numerous entry, whilst each and all of them were followed with keen interest by a large crowd of spectators. There were three tent-pegging competitions, the programme opening with that for the Symons' Cup, which was open to members of the Bombay Light Horse only. On the whole the pegging was good, though a triffle slow. The result was a win for Mr. Bryant, who was run very close by Mr. Stansfield. In the open competition for horses, Mr. T. D. Moore was an easy winner ; Mr. H. S. Symons being second. Tent-pegging for ponies was won by Mr. Stovold, with Mr. Graham second. As is usually the case, the jumping competition, which followed, evinced a very keen interest, and some of the jumping was decidedly good. Only the winner (Mr. Alston), however, who was riding Miss Milligan, his own horse, gained points at the rails, which were nicely taken. All the animals took the hurdles well. The Horse Scurry resulted as follows :—Mr. Roberts' Vermouth—20 yards (Mr. S. M. McCausland) 1st. Mr. Atston's Neptune—15 yards (owner) 2nd ; Mr. Campbell's Darius—20 yards (owner) 3rd. Vermouth raced in front throughout, and eventually won easily by two lengths, while a neck separated the second and third. This was followed by the Pony Scurry, for which nine started, Mr. R. F. R. Cooke's Conductor, receiving five yards start, won this in the easiest of fashions, but there was a close race for second place between Mr. O. G. Owen's Banker—20 yards start, and Mr. H. Gray's Florican—scratch. The programme wound up with a mounted infantry race, which was won by Mr. T. D. Moore, with Mr. Campbell second.

General Notes.

THEIR Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Curzon will give a farewell dinner party on Monday, the 26th instant, to Sir Walter and Lady Lawrence.

Delhi is reported to have felt a couple of earthquake shocks at 11 P.M. on the 15th and 2-30 A.M. on the 16th instant. We trust these were not of the kind so delightfully described by "Malvolio" in our Allahabad contemporary some years ago.

The State functions in Calcutta have been fixed for the following dates : The Levées will be held on the 21st December and 4th January, the Drawing Room on Wednesday, December 30th, the State Dinner on Friday, 1st January and the State Ball on Friday, 8th January.

There has been a change ordered in his Excellency the Viceroy's autumn tour. Instead of leaving Simla on the 9th as originally intended, his Excellency will do so on Friday, the 6th proximo and arrive at Patiala on the 7th, Nabha on the 9th and so on, returning after his tour in the Gulf by Rajputana to Calcutta.

A sad accident occurred at Allahabad on the 14th instant. Miss Ruth Howe, B. A., teacher in the local Girls' High School, was riding on her bicycle, when another lady passed her on horseback and the animal in passing Miss Howe kicked her on the head fracturing her skull. A few minutes after the accident she expired.

A copy of Messrs. Cutler Palmer and Co.'s new price list reaches us. It is replete, as to its contents, with details of all that is choice and alluring in wines and spirits, and adorned, as to its cover, with a picture of the late Captain Frank Cutler, R. N., a sailor of the old school who after he left the sea founded the firm whose name is a household word in India.

Mr. Bourdillon, much to Calcutta's regret, comes down from Darjeeling on the 29th instant and makes over charge of Bengal to Sir Andrew Fraser on the 3rd proximo. Possibly our new L. G. will be seen and heard on one of our local pulpits during the ensuing cold weather, for according to all accounts he is fitted by nature more for the rôle of the "eminent divine" than that of the Indian satrap. At any rate he has put in some good work in mofussil pulpits we are told.

A curious story reaches us from Agra, where, it is said, a private of the 2nd South Stafford Regiment stationed there has made a voluntary confession to the District Magistrate that before coming to India he was out for a walk with his sweetheart, when there was an altercation between the two and he killed her and threw her body into the Thames. The man is in custody pending the result of inquiries addressed to the police authorities in England as to whether such a murder was actually committed.

The proprietor of the Great Western Hotel, Bombay, continues to justify his claim to keep his hotel well to the fore front. The hotel has just been thoroughly overhauled, re-decorated, and materially improved as to its furnishing and interior economy. Additional dining accommodation has been provided and two hundred residents can now be seated. The kitchens have been refitted with the most modern appliances. The drawing-room has been re-furnished, and the establishment, we believe, will compare to advantage with any hotel in the country.

The Right Rev. James MacArthur, late Bishop of Bombay, left India in the Caledonia last week. His popularity was apparent in the large amount of leave taking indulged in by both clergy and laity, a week devoted to farewell demonstrations having been found necessary ; but while he was a good fellow all round, and doubtless a good Bishop [illegible] there are many in Bombay who owe him a grudge for having started the vandal movement for substituting Bombay's grand old historial Cathedral by a more pretentious edifice with a better "frontage."

Mr. T. A. Pearson has vacated the bench of the Chief Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta and his successor sat for the first time yesterday. Poor Mr. Pearson certainly deserved sympathy in his labours, for he was one of those ultra-conscientious beings whose capacity for taking pains makes an hour's hard work of what another might accomplish equally well in ten minutes. Withal he was a worthy man and a man who meant well, and if by comparison with certain of his predecessors he seemed to fall somewhat short of one's ideal of what a police magistrate should be, and though his judgments and methods raised a smile here or a snarl there, we all believe he tried to do his best. Some native pleaders of his court presented him with a certificate of character in the shape of an address last Saturday and we are told Mr. Pearson was "much touched."

London Week by Week.

LONDON, Friday, 2nd October 1903.

THE Cabinet crisis which, unlike mere commonplace crises, appears not to be at all critical, continues ; we are getting quite used to it and await developments with indulgent disinterest. Mr. Balfour, a special correspondent thoughtfully wired on Saturday when he passed through Aberdeen on Saturday on his way from Balmoral "after giving instructions to his valet, walked slowly down the platform with his eyes fixed on the ground, apparently deeply engrossed in thought. He stopped for a few minutes at the station bookstall, and after making a purchase there, proceeded to the Station Hotel." Positively hypnotic in its engrossing character isn't it? Lord Milner arrived in town on Tuesday and "declined to discuss the business which had brought him to England" ; which when one thinks of it was not singular. He has of course been kept under close press observation and we know exactly what time he has called in Downing Street and what hour he came away. Sometimes we even hear by which door he came out, and can draw inferences concerning the prospect of his accepting the Colonial Office from his choice of exit by Downing Street or the Horse Guards parade. The papers vie with one another in heaping fuel (of this kind) on the sinking glow of public interest, but without much result.

The fogs have come upon us earlier than usual this year, we have not suffered much in town so far—at least those who don't get out of bed too early have not—but in the channel on the east coast and in the Solent traffic has been much delayed. On Saturday last vessels coming round the Wight to Southamptoon had to anchor for hours before they could proceed.

We were threatened with a big cab strike at the end of last week under circumstances which would have ensured cabby a good deal of sympathy. The Commissioner of Police issued an order which if carried out would have been productive of quite as much inconvenience to the cab-using public as to the cabmen: it forbade empty cabs to pass through Regent Street, Bond Street, Oxford Street, the Strand and Piccadilly; the four streets in London where people most often call hansoms. It was a bêtise proceeding and the London cabby not being quite so tame as the motussil ticca gharry wallah, objected. The Cab Drivers' Union took the matter up and succeeded in convincing Scotland Yard of its mistake: for the order has been rescinded in so far as to allow empty cabs to pass along the streets named at a trot. As the cabhorse can trot at about four miles an hour when necessary, this will do.

"Dolly Varden", who made her début at the Avenue last night, is no relation to the eminent locksmith and the lady of the Protestant Manual. She pertains to the eighteen century and seems to be an offshoot of the same family as our tried friend the "Country Girl" or Wycherley's "Country Wife:" somehow, whatever her descent she is bright and sparkling and very full of the tuneful melodies beloved of the unserious playgoer: and was welcomed with acclamation. The main thread of the story is quite strong enough for comic opera. Dolly (Miss Mabelle Gilman) is an heiress and her guardian John Fairfox (Mr. Tom Daniel) is pardonably anxious to wed her himself: most desirable heiress in every way: I sympathised with John Fairfox. To the end that Dolly shall not fall a prey to anyone else, she is allowed to take outdoor exercise only in a bottomless sedan chair: rather a quaint notion that serves well on the stage. John, however, has forgotten that Dolly has beautiful feet and ankles and though the rest of her is securely shut in chaired Captain Belleville sees and falls in love with that end of the lady: dogs her home and adores her important remainder. Follows a game of fence between Dolly and Fairfox, who, of course, is roused to intervene between Belleville and his love: in which game Dolly of course outwits her guardian. The business here is a trifle thin even for comic opera: Dolly might no doubt persuade Fairfox that Bellevelle is really in love with his sister Letitia (Miss Sylvia Sablanc) but when she borrows Letitia's cloak and so disguised (?) obtains the indispensable "leave to marry" from Fairfox, we feel it is asking too much of indulgence. The dialect used by some of the characters is quaint: and the "book" is not brilliant: but the music and the dresses and the dancing cover a multitude of shortcomings and the audience was charmed into indulgence.

I question whether Mr. A. P. K. S. Carlton's new Farcical Comedy in Three Acts entitled "Dumbbell Daisy" has a career before it. The thing is feeble: its humour is of the "knockabout eccentrics" order and those who discern exquisite drollery in the spectacle of a stout female undressing herself will no doubt be delighted with it. I must confess to a certain vagueness about the plot, and to this hour am far from sure that it has any: the general impression left on my mind is of a large woman: a "strong woman" of the music hall stage who by force of muscle dominates everybody else: of much hiding behind doors and in cupboards: of boxing bouts between "Daisy" the strong woman and small men: and of underwear not commonly exposed to the public eye elsewhere than in shop windows "trimmed with Real Lace, etc., etc. The gallery found the piece much to its liking, and the closer it stiled to improprieties the louder the laughter from above.

"Mummydom" is the name of the curtain-raiser. It is the handiwork of Mr. Rutland Barrington and Mr. W. Bendall. Three mummies, father, mother and daughter come to life for an hour once in every ten centuries and must return to the grave unless they can find humans to take their places. Three tourists, father, mother and son come along bickering and squabbling, and in the presence of the Rameses family wish they were dead and in the peaceful tomb. Thus the Rameses get a fresh lease of life and have a startling time with the conveniences of civilisation till their return to bed. Some of the music was pretty and tuneful, but the piece was thin even for a curtain-raiser. The Great Queen Street Theatre is the scene of these novelties.

Loie Fuller is among us again. She appeared at the Palace on Wednesday and is the same Loie Fuller we knew in years agone. She has made some difference in her mise en scene: turns her background to better account by draping with gauze curtains, she provides a soft hazy mysterious rainbow effect which enhances the whirling, floating, dazzling figure in front. The result is always beautiful and sometimes quite impressive: her display is divided into four scenes "In Space," "Among the Butterflies," "Water," and I suppose we are to read the "X X X X" on the programme for "Hell." Anyway "X X X X" is startling, almost fearsome, the stage appearing alive with flames. "In Space" may be called a study in weather, or a weather dance: the snow scene was particularly well done. Loie Fuller had a great reception and has a renewed season of success before her.

There was a lively meeting of the Lyceum Theatre Co. Ld., on Wednesday. The chairman announced that the fourth year of the Company's existence had been most disastrous, and that the directors thought the only way to retrieve its fortunes was to convert the house into a Variety Theatre: an announcement which was received with roars of derisive laughter. A letter from Sir H. Irving was read by Mr. Bram Stoker. Sir Henry naturally deplored the proposition to convert the Lyceum from a house of legitimate drama to a music hall, but wrote that he would not oppose if the majority of shareholders wished it. This letter did a good deal to restore the temper of by no means conciliatory shareholders. There are, it appears, great difficulties of selling the house if a buyer could be found: and after two hours of more or less stormy debate the motion to reconstruct the house and make it into a music hall was carried. Sic transit, etc. After all the majority of shareholders are mere ordinary men who do not care to "elevate" the public with remunerative but high-toned drama at their expense: and having regard to the enhanced possibilities opened up by the creation of the new Kingsway and Aldwych hard by they prefer to "go on" and put a little more money into the pit music hall venture. I wonder if the manager will change the name: it ought to be done. Without being one of Sir H. Irving's perfervid admirers I think it would be a pity to associate the name he made famous with music hall entertainments, however good and however pregnant with success.

By the way writing of music hall business Arthur Roberts is going to return to the London stage after two years' absence.

There are two books towards which the tail of my eye has been wandering while I write these notes: one is the late M. de Blowitz's "Memoirs" which must wait till the mail goes for perusal: and the other is Kipling's new book of poems "The Five Nations", which I have dipped into. Some of the prices are very familiar, "Recessional" and "The Islanders" for example; but there is much that is new and, as one would expect, much of the new is inspired by the war. The poet's impressions gained in South Africa have been allowed time to resolve and shape themselves and some of the verse-results are worthy of Kipling at his best. One impression produced by reading some of the pieces, takes strengthening clearness in any mind: to wit that Kipling is growing older: he seems to me to strike here and again an even deeper note than is his wont; his passion is more restrained and his tone graver: though in his soldier pieces the old dash, rollicking, cynical, rude but convincing is as youthful as ever. Perhaps it will cover the case if we say he has both broadened and deepened, mentally speaking. You will not have space for much in the shape of quotation and I fear me that I may tread on the heels of your reviewers: but these lines on Cecil Rhodes, in memoriam, appeal to me to set them here:—

"It is his will that he look forth
Across the world he won—
The granite of the ancient North—
Great spaces washed with sun."

This is from one of the best of the soldier poems: it is as good an example of the poet's power of vivid concentration, of sweeping summary as I remember.

"Same tumble down on the same 'idden farm,
Save white-eyed Kaffir 'oo gives the alarm,
"Same shootin' wind at the end o' the night,
Same flyin' tackle an' same messy fight.....
"Same chilly glare in the eye of the sun,
As 'e gets up displeasured to see what was done,
"Same spinsh o' pink on the stoep or the kraal,
An' the same quiet face which 'as finished with all."

For months the Times has been pleading with us almost tearfully to buy the "Ency. Brit." at less than half price and pay even that on the instalment system: and still it has some copies to sell. It seems to have lost its massive temper this week for it came out with a full page advertisement full of warnings very like threats. If you dont buy the Ency. Brit. at once for half price, you will have to pay the full price to a bookseller who will make a profit at your expense and so will the Times. Do you mean to buy it or not? That is what the Times wishes to know. I should really like to have the useful work, but the cost is one consideration and shelf room is another. Had I £30 to spare and a few cubic feet of space to spare I should not hesitate.

* * * * * *

I suppose shoplifting is a common offence in London: and its frequency I suppose will explain the curious little experience which befell a friend the other day. She was in Harrods' Stores; having made a purchase she laid hands on an umbrella on the counter she mistook for her own and was leaving when a stranger claimed the umbrella which my friend surrendered with apologies to recover her own from the shop floor. Her apologies were received with great coolness. The incident reminded her that she wanted presents for two girls, and she was moved to give her generosity the shape of umbrellas. Getting into an omnibus with her three brollies to return home she was astonished by the only other occupant of the 'bus remarking with disagreeable point "So you 've had a pretty good day after all, I see."

* * * * * *

Which reminds me of a little bit of scandal that out of an umbrella; it has been whispered in corners pretty freely of late. A certain soldier, member of one of the service clubs, missed his brella from the stand: it had a plate with name on it and he made known his loss on club notice board, but without result; and a week or ten days he went to the maker ordered another explaining that his own had steriously vanished. The man of brollies smiled riously and said it was very odd; but he had at that moment Colonel——'s missing umbrella in the house: it had been brought in by a gentleman who had ordered the name plate to be removed and replaced by a plate bearing his own. With some difficulty Colonel——wrung the name of the gentleman from the shopman; it was that of a member of his own club. To him Colonel——wrote requiring him to take his name off the member's roll or face exposure; the umbrella thief took the former alternative with expedition.

ONLOOKER.

Old John Day was a strict observer of the Sabbath, never exercising his horses on that day, and he used to tell a story in support of his principle. One Sunday morning Mr. Padwick came down with a party of friends to see his Derby favourite, Belgrade, at exercise. It would make thousands of pounds difference to him, he said, if his friends could see his horse at exercise, and his beautiful action when extended, instead of merely seeing him in the stable.

"Belgrade is your horse," Old John replied, "and so are the others, and you can do what you like with them: if you take them out Goater may go with them, if he likes, but you must excuse me."

Mr. Padwick accepted the compromise, and Belgrade and a few more were taken on to the Downs. While galloping with the older stable companion Belgrade suddenly became frightened at nothing—or, at least, nothing could be seen. The horse generally of a most docile disposition he became quite unmanageable, dashing off at a furious pace down a steep hill which was almost a precipice, while the boy who was riding him threw himself off in affright. In vain did Goater on a hack and Padwick in his carriage give chase. Belgrade soon out-distanced them, after saddle, bridle, and every particle of his clothing had been sent flying.

Nothing more was seen or heard of him that night; but early the next morning, just as John Day was about to set out to scour the country, a man called at Danebury to inquire if a horse were missing, as one was caught in his yard late the night before, and was then at the end of the barn, tied up with a halter. A lad was despatched at once. It proved to be the missing horse, and the truant was brought back in a most terrible plight, and though, as has been intimated, he was at the time first favourite for the Derby, strange to say, after that eventful Sunday gallop he was never good for anything again.

A CRICKETER IN INDIA.

IT is a curious fact that those "globe trotters" who set themselves the task of writing a book on their travels without intention to instruct almost invariably contrive to give a very much better and truer picture of Indian life, as they see it, than the conscientious but mistaken visitor whose book aims at the enlightenment of his, or her, brethren at home. Mr. Cecil Headlam's book is a case in point. The author enjoys this advantage that he was a member of the Oxford Authentics team which toured India and Burma last cold season: his name is therefore familiar to us as a cricketer, more particularly as a very smart wicket keeper: and this amusing and at the same time sensible and discriminating book proves that he is as alert in seizing impressions of men and things as he showed himself behind the bails. His qualifications for writing a book are manifest in the circumstance that cricket, the purpose which brought him hither, falls into its proper place in his pages: he gives it no undue prominence; his book is not the book of a cricketer pure and simple but of an observant and intelligent man of the world with eyes for all interests and phases of life; and if we give prominence to his remarks on cricket it is to be understood that we are dealing with only one phase, and that a very subordinate phase of the book.

Mr. Headlam was impressed with the increasing interest taken by natives in cricket, the growing appreciation of the game as he aptly says "is one of those striking and significant facts which are never recorded in Blue Books." We do not think that the importance as an influence for good in moulding native character is exaggerated; it is the cricketer who writes the following passages, but the accuracy and point cannot we think be gainsaid "—but cricket unites . . . the rulers and the ruled. It also provides a moral training, an education in pluck and nerve and self-restraint far more valuable to the character of the ordinary native than the mere learning by heart of a play of Shakespeare or an essay of Macaulay which is reckoned education in India." Mr. Headlam, by the way, is unsparing and incisive in his criticism of the so-called education provided at enormous cost for the baboo. He recognises the excellence of the ideal; but he thinks and few sensible people will not agree with him, that the authorities are "endeavouring to compass this aim by the worst system of so-called education ever devised by the wit of man. The mistake . . . . has been made of supposing that examination in lessons learned by rote is the instigator and the test of that moral and intellectual training which should be the meaning of the word Education." Mr Headlam holds cricket a far more valuable discipline than cram-book schooling and we most cordially agree with him. Some of the passages in his book will open the eyes of people at home. He was astonished in Bombay to behold young India at every street corner batting and bowling with the utmost keenness. He deplores the fact that Britishers do not play more regularly and more generally, but he recognises that the superior attractions of polo and shikar are in some measure accountable for this: also, he realises that cricket out here is not the same thing as cricket in the old country. The voice of experience speaks in the following extract:—

...if, as at Bombay, you play in the monsoon, the wickets, baked by a hot sun after heavy daily rain, are just a bit of glue, and give the batsman no fun, while the bowlers feel the effect of the burning, exhausting sun, and quickly modify their run, lose sting, and, as the phrase goes, soon bowl only twelve an[na]s the rupee. If, on the other hand, you play in the cold w[eather] you cannot without very great expense and trouble in wa[ter] provide a tolerable grass wicket at all."

The fact that the majority of us have work to do, and [little] of it, militates against regular play: it is not everyone w[ho] give up the necessary time to the game, Polo is a game w[ith] among its other great merits, does not make such large de[mands] on the short leisure of busy men; and this Mr. Headlam [also] recognises. There is another passage of which we can a pre[sent] the force better than those for whose enlightenment it [was] written:—

You go out on to the ground to play, and you get at once yo[ur] first and probably most lasting impression of cricket in India. It is an impression of sun, dazzling, exhausting, baking, cooking, deceptive sun. It is not till you have seen it and played in it that you realise why it is that every team on tour, visiting India or Australia, pays always, at any rate at first, a little below par, twelve annas to the rupee. Some players indeed it suits, but they are not many. For this sun is not the sun which we know at home. It is different not only in degree, but in kind from the sun which we know and love in Europe. In England the sun is a thing to be thankful for and to bask in. In India it is a thing to curse and to dread. Build your houses so that the sun cannot get in to them dress yourself so that the deadly rays cannot injure you, and order your life so that you may keep within doors in the hot weather between nine and four. That is a different sort of power from that of the sun which we welcome at home. And it feels different.

That the sun "helps you to raise a thirst" is one of its minor advantages, which the author gratefully acknowledges. It is fortunate that the disadvantages under which cricket is played in this country are less apparent to the native than to the Anglo-Indian. The value of sports and games in bringing the different races together on a common footing of interest is acknowledged; there is no other means whereby the ruling race and the ruled can hope to approach mutual the understanding; and we are glad that the importance of cricket as an "Imperial factor" should have been set out by a hand so competent as Mr. Headlam's.

Space forbids us to refer to the many other attractive features of this book at the length their very real merits deserve; but we can heartily recommend it to our readers as a mine of amusement so ably wrought that it affords the thoughtful much food for reflection. The illustrations are numerous and very good.

A PRINCE OF SINNERS.

A PRETTILY told story somewhat recalling one of the earlier efforts of Besant is this up-to-date novel by G. Phillips Oppenheim, author of "The Survivor," "A Millionaire of Yesterday," etc. The plot it is scarcely fair to reveal, so much of the interest of the book depending on the methods by which it is worked out, a "prince of sinners" finally giving place to a "prince of good fellows." As in "All Sorts and Conditions of Men" the reader is given more than a superficial peep at the dens of poverty, misery, iniquity and vice; but, on the other hand, this does not prevent the author from portraying with distinct success a couple of charming women characters who live and move and have their being in le monde l'on s'amuse, and with no less effect the vulgar but good hearted and right principled moneyed middle class man, with his pretentious impossible daughters who act as a splendid foil to their pretty and refined cousin. The hero, in spite of his being a trifle priggish we feel more than ordinarily drawn to, and his character is consistent throughout. We can scarcely say the same for the heroine—the pretty conscientious hard-working cousin. For would any girl of Mary's style have so far sacrificed it as to have made that involuntary confession i the manner unmistakably not her lover, as she did on the evening of the tête à-tête tea-party when "she stumbled to her feet, and suddenly stooping down, laid her burning cheeks against his," though it is easy to believe the hero too priggish to have made the least deviation from the line he had mapped out for himself because of it. Perhaps the pretty cousin is not the less interesting because of her unexpected weakness. Certainly she is not the less puzzling and woman, as we know, has ever held the right of being, to the opposite sex, at least, a delightful problem. How it all works out, will doubtless be of far more interest to the reader of the well told story if instead of giving him any clue we leave him to find out for himself.

THE GOLD WOLF.

"ONE of Ourselves" might almost as appropriately have been the title of Max Pemberton's new book, for in this high pressure, twentieth century existence of ours when a passion for grabbing and grubbing seems to be the key note of existence, which of us does not cherish a secret fondness for the "Gold Wolf"! The volume lying before us gives the history of a man who paid nearly with his life for disregarding nature's warning for many months, a man so engrossed in his money-gaining transactions that he gradually became a slave, body and soul, to the "Gold Wolf." For some time "he had known that which he would have confessed to no living man. The wonderful brain, the surpassing gift of concentration were failing him surely. He had drawn heavy cheques upon the mind's bank, and the balance shrank every day. He knew that nature had sounded a warning bell for him—not once, but many times; and he had neglected it.....He did not dare to rest. Riches, fame, the honour of his financial house forbade it..... .....Let him draw back, and thousands might fall in that tremendous cataclysm. Such was the state of mind of the man who, in the supreme moment when he realized that the Doctor's verdict was true, and that nature would sound no more warning bells, (for if he did not stop and rest and take breath, as it were, there would be no more breath to take) had no woman's love and sympathy to support him. For he had married titled poverty, just as the woman to whom he had given his name had married commonplace wealth. Lady Hermione's sudden and wholly unexpected death forms the mystery that in some three hundred odd pages is elucidated, and the story of The Gold Wolf ' ends not unlike the fairy tales of one's childhood, in this respect at least, that the chief dramatis personæ are left "married to live happy ever after." Profusely illustrated by Maurice Griffenhagen, and with such incidents as "May Races" at the universities, the theft of some famous rubies—the discovery of which finally track the author of Lady Hermione's death—skilfully introduced, Max Pemberton's latest story is readable enough.

A Magyar [no]ne of the richest and most influential of the great [no]bles owning large domains on the outskirts of [Bu]kidnapped under the very noses of the authorities, [and] in a dungeon belonging to the hero. Thence he [es]after some thrilling adventures, which include a duel [wi]wo girls, adventures with wild boars, and numerous [wi]ith escapes. The hero-villain is comfortably disposed [by] the timely rush of an avalanche, the kidnapped prince [re]stored to his own, valour rewarded and beauty consoled—all after the most approved methods. In capital binding and delightfully clear print the volume is just such a one as is handy when journeying by rail or boat, and the perusal of its pages will doubtless wile away a weary hour.

A SPORTING HERD.

IT was the darkest hour of the night—the hour preceding dawn—as we left the Swiss chalet-like wooden bungalow, situated picturesquely by the side of a small winding stream at the foot of the——hills, and started out in search of a herd of bison reported to be in the neighbourhood. The bright silvery face of the Lady of the Night was hidden behind thick banks of clouds which had welled up from the sea-board the evening before and a thick wet river mist enveloped everything, the trees standing up out of it like dark wakeful sentinels keeping watch and ward over the marches of the animal world. The effluvia rising from the damp sodden jungle would have made the most rabid amongst the disciples of the anopheles creed change his views as to the sole source of the malaria fiend.

For an hour and more we plodded on in the darkness, floundering through mire or stumbling into the deep imprints left by wild elephants, bison and animals of the many descriptions which comprised the fauna of this sportsman's paradise. Such one thought, must have been the state of the water-sodden globe when the animals issued from the Ark at the bidding of the greatest of mythological animal tamers.

The dawn broke slowly, almost unwillingly, and the light struggled fitfully through the dense mist. This latter, however, lightened perceptively, as one got further and further away from the stream and as daylight dissipated the gloom we could see that we had entered a dense bamboo forest, the ground beneath our feet being more or less of a morass. Less than a mile of this and we got into the open scrub again and to our right the hills appeared towering up amongst the masses of slowly writhing cloud. The effects given by the play of the morning light upon this panorama of hill and slowly rolling vapor were very beautiful.

To me
human cities torture.

We had now picked up the tracks of the herd, not the small one of eight we had come out to seek but of a much larger one known to comprise some 30 animals, amongst which was a good old bull, which had been seen in the locality a few days before. These tracks were quite fresh evidently made during the night and we held on our way in the utmost silence. Owing to the sodden state of the jungle stalking was by no means difficult, but every now and then a twig drier than the rest would get beneath one's feet and go off like a pistol shot and the large thorns of the slender side branches of the giant bamboo were a never-ending source of annoyance. Did one stoop ever so low, even to assuming the derogatory position of all fours, a sharp-pointed spike would be sure to be ready to catch one exactly in the centre of the back and it required considerable self-restraint not to give vent to audible maledictions. Or an unusually deep swampy part of the forest would be reached, to be lightly passed over by the trackers, but in which, being in thick shooting boots and loaded with a heavy rifle, one sank to the knees. To get out absolutely silently was an impossibility and the look upon the shikari's face at the slightest noise made one feel as if the lot of a condemned man upon the scaffold with the rope round his neck was by comparison quite an enviable one. Another painful experience accompanying tracking, which in its intensity becomes almost agony, is the intense desire to cough which often assails one. This disagreeable experience must I am sure be common to many. One struggles against it, remembers that the wish is quite unusual, one never ordinarily has this idiotic desire, that it is only necessary to think about something else to forget all about it—it is of no use; after breathing deeply, breathing lightly, breathing through the nose, and not breathing at all, which results in semi-suffocation, one has to give in and then—the shikari's hopeless look of surprise and pain!!

All the above experiences were gone through as we cautiously followed on the trail of the slowly moving herd. Fresher and fresher had become the indications that they were not far off and for some fifteen minutes we had been moving forward, the conditions being unusually favourable, without a sound to break the harmony of the proceedings. Suddenly the silence is broken. A short sharp snappy bark-like roar cleaves the air, a short rush in the forest on our left flank, and we know that we are up to the herd and that it has winded us. See us they could not, nor we them, as we had entered a giant bamboo forest interspersed with tall trees and a thick growth of high grass. Intense silence succeeded for a few seconds, broken only by the twittering of a few small birds in a neighbouring tree. Then followed the well known and intensely thrilling rush of heavy animals in heavy jungle as the herd closed up, apparently uncertain as to which point to look for the danger. As animal after animal took fright the sounds increased to a crashing roar and as the leader at last made up its mind the roar bore down in our direction with a deafening sound, as of some great mountain stream in turbulent flood. No time had we for thought. Action was imperative. A hurried whisper from Anaconda (the head shikari) which was scarcely necessary, even if I could have understood the gibberish which took the place with him of a Christian language (his English was limited to "elephan," "bisn," "samur," mine, of the wild sounds he produced, nil), and we closed up to a big bamboo clump which happened to be handy. I waited, muscles braced to their utmost tension, nerves and heart playing hide and seek throughout my anatomy after the fashion of a young lady's when the harmless Mus communis makes its uninvited appearance, on the floor of the boudoir and finger on trigger, It was a wildly exciting moment and would have long marked the day with a white corner stone had not one even more enlivening occurred later in the day. It was short lived however, as suddenly the herd, swerving to their left front as one, went crashing away through the forest like a tornado. The foremost bison were within 15 to 20 yards as they turned but not one did we see owing to the thick cover. Relief was written over the faces of my companions and I am sure it must have been very legibly imprinted upon mine. So sudden had been the rush that the whole thing could only have lasted a minute and yet one had lived a life in that short space of time! Whilst the herd were trampling a broad line through the forest, the roar gradually decreasing to a faint far off murmer,—like a Calcutta Nor-Easter blowing itself out—we held a hurried consultation, the trackers in words, I in forcible pantomim. Anaconda lit a match (he had matches of his own on him, but I noticed he used mine which I had given him to carry along with my tobacco pouch—a small point but one so characteristic of the native. Would we were all as careful. We'd all make our fortunes!) and the slight air moving showed how the herd had winded us. They had doubled in their tracks slightly to their left and were on our left flank as we came up.

We now took up the trail again and for a short time silence was not so absolutely essential. We had scarcely moved forward when a fine sambur stag broke from a bamboo clump on our right. He was within a few yards and I just got a snap-shot view of him as he bounded away. He need not have troubled as we were in search of lordlier game than he. The direction in which the bison had proceeded soon took us out of the heavy cane jungle in which we had put them up so unwittingly and unwillingly and but for the swampyness of the forest hereabouts the going would have been comparatively easy. My excitement grew as we got out into the more open jungle as one now had some hopes of being able to see one's game, hide and seek with a herd of bison in thick forest being a form of pastime a trifle trying even to the best of nerves. Cold and wet and dirt (between heavy mist, tropical showers and miry bogs I was by now in a sorry plight as regards appearance, but who thinks of that when the game is afoot and when that game is the bison!) and the worries of bugs and thorns, not to omit friend anopheles all passed unnoticed now as we stole onwards, searching carefully every portion of the forest. It must have been well over an hour later when we again came up with the herd. There was a slight fall in the ground, the forest being of fairly open character A little distance ahead was one of those partial openings or natural clearings, consisting of heavy boggy soil covered with a crop of coarse 8-foot high grass and scattered clumps of bushes, which were common to the forests of this part of India. The bison were grazing near the far end of this clearing, the forest beyond having much the same character as that we were in. It could be seen that the herd was very considerably scattered and the wary animals were evidently not aware of our presence, but caution was nevertheless imperative as should the bison wind or see us again they would certainly not give me another chance. Moving forward with the utmost care I strove to make out the big bull I had been told was present in the herd, but search failed to show him to me. Some outlying cows away to the right were evidently beginning to get suspicious and uneasy and one suddenly turned and fronted us, standing stock still with ears thrown forward to catch the slightest sound, head well up and nostrils agape to catch the slightest taint in the breeze. It was evident that she had not seen us; but that instinct of self preservation so strong in the jungle denizen and developed to a marvellous degree in the great hulking brutes before me evidently told her that there was something unusual about and told me that I had no time to lose if I wished to secure a reward for a heavy morning's work. Glancing again over the heads I could see from my position I singled out what appeared to be a fair-sized bull and let fly. The bullet struck him true and he turned and made off in a line dead away from us, entering the forest behind the clearing almost at once. Instant confusion and turmoil arose and we dashed forward, half right as a glance showed that the herd was closing hope of up in that direction, and as quick as the awful state of the ground would permit, in the making out and getting a shot at the big bull. The herd had all collected in the open clearing and as we reached the edge of the forest and dashed or rather stumbled into the mazy boggy opening—it could not be called a sylvan glade—we pulled up short in sheer amazement and wonder at the most remarkable sight it has ever fallen to my lot to witness. A hurried glance at Anacondu's face informed me that he was equally surprised, if not equally interested and enthusiastic! For there, less than 50 yards away, was the herd—a herd of some 30 bison closed up together in battle array—a serried seething mass of wildly tossing, brightly gleaming, yellow horns and waving uplifted tails. I have said that the herd appeared to be, closing up on the right as we started to rush forward but I had imagined it was only due to their all taking the same direction in flight. Of course to make progress at all in such abominable going one's eyes had to be fixed upon one's feet and therefore the movements of the herd could not be seen during our short forward rush. The point we had aimed for and reached would, we had thought, take them in a diagonal line away from us and across our front. After closing up they had, however, turned and the direction they appeared to be taking, for they were moving forward in short sharp steps, evidently a very enraged herd, would bring them diagonally just past on right front. Did they swerve but slightly in their charge, for there could be little doubt about their amiable intentions, they would be over us. We were both in the open and there was no clump of bushes of any size near us that the herd could not go right through. I shall probably never see such a sight again nor will it be ever effaced from my memory. The bison at all times in his native jungles is a magnificent beast. With black glossy gleaming back and flanks, clean snow-white stockings and massive head. What a picture he makes when, turned to bay and really angry, he stands quivering with rage and fury before his wild onslaught on to his foe. Such I had seen before and for such I was prepared. But to see the picture multiplied by 30. It was stupendous! I had never seen but had often read about and also heard of authentic cases of a herd closing up en masse to get rid of the too pressing attentions of a tiger, but I was unaware of the existence of a herd sporting enough to close up to charge a man. The position and sight, although of the nature to set the blood dancing through one's veins at the double, was too serious and urgent, however, for more than the most hasty study and reflection on points of natural history, especially as there appeared every likelihood of the notes never being recorded for the benefit of sportsmen The herd did not care about natural history, but it evidently did care, and care very much, about its breakfast and intended to dispute the possession of that, to it, luscious steamy bog clearing. The distance between us had already perceptibly diminished, for they had not stopped their forward movement, but with loud snortings had edged closer and closer in their endeavour to see exactly what the danger was before the leader sounded the charge. Matters had now therefore become more exciting than pleasant. Our only chance was to turn them but even at this juncture I made one more last effort to pick out the big bull (and Anacondu I learnt afterwards had tried to do the same) but in that sea of tossing horns it was impossible and so, as there was little time to waste, I picked out what I hoped would be a bull and let drive at it. There was a waver, I thought—I hoped—and as I fired my last barrel the herd broke from a smart trot to a lumbering gallop, swerved to their left and went off though the forest with that well-known crashing roar of sound. Music sweeter than their retreating footsteps I have rarely heard and though music was not in the thoughts of my companions, for the two other trackers emerged from somewhere behind, solid content was expressed on their countenances. The herd had crashed off, but not all. Two angry bellows proclaimed the fact that they had left one of their number behind and we at once proceeded to move cautiously forward in the direction from which the sounds emanated. A few yards from where the herd had advanced in battle array the forest commenced again and just within this we saw a bison down, struggling in its death agony. Stealing forward finger on trigger I crept to within fifteen paces. The beast, with a short bellow, tried to rise but it was too far spent: a couple of groans and a deep sigh and its sporting spirit had departed to the happy hunting lands. After making sure the bison was dead we went up to it and to my intense chagrin I found that it was an old cow. At the time of firing in my attempt to turn the herd I of course knew that the chances were rather in favour of my hitting a cow but with the brutes showing such a determined front and aggressiveness the risk had to be taken if I ever wished to fire another shot —the rules of sport and the forest notwithstanding. The fates willed that I should have bad luck! I turned away with a feeling of annoyance and commenced to look for the blood of the bull I had first wounded. My disgust was increased by the demeanour of the men who, to my surprise, answered my enquiries as to where the bull had stood when I fired by stating and showing that they did not think I had hit it. Hit or not every inch of that ground was going to be carefully searched, to that I at once made up my mind. Some distance from the cow we came upon some blood. This they at once put down as being the the cow's. I was too certain, however, about my shot to give in and I took a wide cast in the direction I believed the bull had gone. After some search, only half heartedly joined in by the men, I found some blood on some tall grass. I pointed it out triumphantly to Anacondu. The mixed look of pity and amusement on his face as he stooped to pick some of the blades was good to see and so was the rapid transfiguration which would on his finding blood, fresh blood, upon his fingers. All listlessness vanished now. With a wounded bull about no time to skulk and they all set to work with a vengement Cautiously and carefully we followed the tracks and we came upon a mass of clotted frothy blood which was sufficient proof that the animal had met its death blow and that it was only a matter of time as to where it dropped. For the next two hours we followed the trail, the blood never ceasing and over and over again did the rifle come up to the shoulder at the snap of a bamboo or twig. It is nerve-stretching work walking up a wounded bison in thick jungle and the wounded bull took us through some of the nastiest places we had seen that morning, progression being often only possible on hands and knees And those bamboo thorns! Every bamboo clump, each patch of tall grass, big tree or thick bush might shelter the wounded and doubtless enraged brute and the spirit which animated this most sporting of herds led me to anticipate a vicious charge should we be spotted as we approached and he be still capable of making it. After some two and a half hours we reached a small hill on which the forest was of a more open nature. The blood trail took us over this and disappeared into what proved to be a large stretch of bamboo jungle on the far side. After satisfying myself that this was so and sending a couple of men to see that the bull was not in the immediate vicinity I had reluctantly to relinquish further search My time was up, my resting place for that night was the bungalow of a friend many miles distant and on the morrow I had to start for the far North. It was a sad blow as I wanted to look upon that bull. There was little doubt that its trophy, which from the size of the tracks there was every reason to even then think would be a good one, would take its place amongst many another hardly earned one, but I wished to see it in its native wilds. However there was no help for it. An eight mile tramp through swampy boggy forests followed by another eight miles on the pad of an elephant lay between me and my night's halting place, and there was no time to lose if I wanted to get there before dark. Leaving two men to continue the search, for Anakondu was certain the bull would drop that day, with the hope of liberal bakshesh as a reward for success, I started on one of the worst eight miles it has ever been my lot to have to accomplish. The excitement of the tracking being now absent there was nothing to keep one's attention off the vileness of the ground we covered, and to add to the discomfort the rain of one of the wettest months of the year commenced falling with that steady persistence which means that it has set in for good. But what are such minor trifles and disagreeables in comparison to such a day as I had had. Shall I ever see such a sight as that closed up herd again—those wildly tossing, gleaming yellow horns and stiffened, erect, waving tails. Shall I ever watch it determinedly making up its mind to charge and, with blood wildly coursing through my veins, shall I realize that that charge is meant for me! Yes I shall see it, nay, I have seen it—but it was in shadow land, in that land in which, locked in the arms of Morpheus, one re hopes one's hopes and re-fights one's battles o'er again.

BOMBAY SHIKAR RULES.

THE current Bombay Government Gazette contains the following:—

It is officially notified that in exercise of the powers conferred by Section 25, clause (i), Section 31, clause (j), and Section 75 clause (d), of the Indian Forest Act, 1878 (VII of 1878), and in supersession of Government Notification No. 6254, dated the 25th July, 1894, his Excellency the Governor in Council is pleased, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, to prescribe the following rules to regulate hunting, shooting, poisoning of water, and the use of traps or snares in the Reserved and Protected Forests of the Bombay Presidency excluding Sind.

1. The following acts are absolutely prohibited in all Reserved and Protected Forests:—

(a) the poisoning of rivers or other water, and the explosion of dynamite therein for the purpose of killing or catching fish;

(b) the setting of spring guns;

(c) the taking, wounding or killing of big game, other than tiger, panther, wolf, hyæna, wild dog, pig or bear, over water or salt licks;

(b) wounding or killing the females of deer, antelope, or bigon;

(c) wounding or killing any game birds or hares during close season fixed in the Appendix.

2. The setting of snares or traps is prohibited in all Reserved and Protected Forests except with the written permission of the Divisional Forest Officer.

3. (a) In any Reserved or Protected Forest or portions of Reserved or Protected Forest to which the Local Government may, for the purpose of strict conservation, or for the preservation of animals which are becoming rare, or for both of these purposes, apply this and the following rules by a Notification published in the Bombay Government Gazette hunting and shooting are prohibited except under a license to be obtained from the Conservator of Forests.

(b) Every license issued under clause (a) of this rule shall permit the holder only to hunt and shoot and shall be valid for a period of one year from the date of its grant in any Reserved or Protected Forest in the Presidency to which these rules are made applicable under clause (a) subject to the condition that before it has effect in any Forest division in which the licensee does not reside or exercise jurisdiction, it must be countersigned by the Divisional Forest Officer.

(c) No such license shall entitle the holder to hunt or shoot more than two stags or bulls of each species of animal to be specified in the license, according to a list to be prepared for each Forest Division by the Conservator of Forests.

4. Licenses shall not be refused except for special reasons to be stated in writing.

5. Wounded game may be pursued into the forest of the Division adjoining that for which the license is valid or into a forest closed under Rule 8.

6. A license granted under these rules shall not be transferable

7. Every person to whom a license has been granted under these rules, and who is found hunting, shooting, snaring or trapping in any forest to which these rules apply shall on demand by any Forest, Police or Revenue Officer, produce his license.

8. The Conservator may on the recommendation of the Divisional Forest Officer and the Collector, declare that any particular forest or part of a forest is wholly closed for a term of years or annually for a specified season. He may also prohibit the taking, wounding or killing of any particular species of animal in any specified tract of forest with a view to the preservation of such species, but any such order shall be subject to revision by the Commissioner. To such forests the validity of licenses granted under these rules does not extend or is modified accordingly, provided the gazetted officers whose jurisdiction extends to such forests, or persons holding licenses on which the Divisional Forest Officer has endorsed special permission to that effect, may kill pig, tiger and other dangerous or a destructive animals in such forests. Such special permission shall not be given for a longer period than one month in any case.

9. If any person to whom permission under Rule 2 or a license under Rule 3 has been granted commits a breach of any provision of the Indian Forest Act, 1878 (VII of 1878) as amended by the Forest Act, 1890 (V of 1890), or of any rules made thereunder, he shall be liable to the penalty of having the permission or license as the case may be cancelled by the Divisional Forest Officer in addition to any other penalty to which he may be liable under the Indian Forest Act, 1878 (VII of 1878) or otherwise. An appeal against the cancellation of the permission of the license by the Divisonal Forest Officer shall lie to the Collector, and a second appeal in case of dismissal of the appeal by the Collector to the Commissioner whose decision shall be final.

10. In any case where the Divisonal Forest Officer or Conservator thinks it advisable, he may direct that a Forest Guard or other person shall accompany the camp of any license-holder hunting or shooting in forests, with the object of seeing that Forest rules are not infringed by camp followers.

11. The word hunting as used in these rules includes tracking for the purpose of discovering the lie of wild animals, provided that any person holding a license is not prohibited from employing any number of trackers.

12. Nothing in these rules shall be taken to exempt any person from liability in respect of any offence by injury to the Forest or its produce or of any other offence punishable under the Indian Forest Act, 1878 (VII of 1878) as amended by the Forest Act, 1899 (V of 1890).

13. Nothing in these rules shall be taken to cancel any privileges granted to resident wild tribes except by the express order of the Collector, or to preclude the grant of special permission by the Divisonal Forest Officer or Collector to resident villagers on special occasions.

(N. B.—Forests in which wild tribes have been given the privilege of hunting will not generally be notified under rule 3.)

The game birds referred to in Rule 1 (e) are as follow, and the close season is fixed as follows :—

	For	Close Season.

The close season for Hare is 1st April to 30th Sept.

Fishing.

SUCCESS IN ANGLING.

THE success of an angler depends largely on the amount of common sense exercised.

The hunter when in quest of game exerts all his cunning which consists of careful forethought coupled with good judgment. If the game is wary, he takes into consideration the direction of the wind and how he can best approach with the least possible noise or lure the game to it without being seen until the quarry is within range.

It is quite probable that fish are possessed of as much instinct or intelligence regarding their self-preservation as most birds and animals; certainly they are as quick to discern any unnatural movement and take instant fright, and when in this state they have no idea of taking food.

It is very rarely the case that the angler gives the proper attention and careful consideration necessary to get within fishing range. The two senses which are most prominent in the organization of fishes are those of feeling and seeing. Most anglers of experience take heed of the latter sense, but the former as a rule is not given due consideration. A heavy jar of any kind in the vicinity of the bank of lake or stream is communicated to the water, and fish will frequently take greater alarm from an unseen disturbance than something that can be detected by vision, as in one case the nature of the foe is unknown, while in the other their instinct has taught them the ways and means to best protect themselves from threatening danger. While it is undoubtedly true that fish will become accustomed to the presence of an angler if he remain quiet, and will return to their usual quarters after a time, still, much time is lost through lack of careful approach before they will again resume feeding. The skill of an angler in hooking or landing a fish or the fineness of equipment is of no avail provided they are not in a state of perfect tranquility when the lure is presented.

In the art of angling there is scarcely a limit to the amount of skill that can be displayed in all the details necessary for success. It matters little how much time or study one has devoted to the subject, there is constantly some new fact presenting itself or something of an interesting nature to be learned. In the preparation of selection of the tackle the skill of one angler over another is really a question of common sense. Eliminate all the scarecrows possible, have your tackle as fine as you can to answer the purpose: give the fish credit for at least enough intelligence not to take anything which exhibits the fraud too prominently; always keep as close to nature as the component parts of your tackle will permit, and use the same caution you would in creeping on a flock of ducks around a bend in the river or any other game that one has to exercise great care and forethought to outwit.

It is a common saying with many anglers that they can sit all day with rod in hand in perfect contentment without getting even a nibble. While there is no question but that to the overwrought mind the refreshing breezes and delightful scenery is invigorating and restful, after months of hard labour amidst the humdrum and clatter of city life, and the sense of relaxation is more than pleasant to contemplate, nevertheless the enjoyment must be infinitely more keen and both mind and body receive greater benefit when a feeling of enthusiasm pervades the system and a desire to excel in this, one of the noblest of sports.

Even among the most indifferent, the sensation of a sharp tug on the line and the bend of the rod will set the blood tingling and awaken the dormant energy to a strong desire and determination to win the fight if possible, and land the fish which is bravely and heroically putting forth all his strength and resources to escape from his unknown and unseen foe. When the capture has been effected and the beauty lies before you, one cannot help but admire the pluck and endurance of the vanquished, and almost wish that he had been the victor.

The common sense fisherman will tell you that when fishing from a boat he throws his bait as far as possible in order to avoid being seen, and also that the conditions surrounding the fish may not be disturbed; he will tell you that he endeavours to present the lure in life-like and appetizing manner, and give it a motion approaching nature to the best of his ability. The tackle will be fine, and the hook so well concealed that the fish sees nothing but the bait. The following taken from an unrecalled writer on angling topics aptly illustrates this common-sense principle :—

"By observation you will soon know that you must not show yourself to the intended capture, and therefore you must not be too close to the water's edge; if it is necessary for casting your fly, you must make yourself as little visible as possible."

After all these points have been taken into consideration it will be seen that while skill in the manipulation of rod and reel is desirable, and only long years of experience can attain this, that the most important factor and the one which was responsible and contributed most to the weight of the basket on the homeward march was allopathic doses of horse sense applied when and where most needed.

HINTS TO BEGINNERS.

V.

PARTRIDGES AND QUAILS.

The Grey Partridge.

GREY partridges are very wily. It is almost impossible to get them on the wing without a gang of coolies. In the early morning and evening they run and run till they break the hearts of any dogs you may use to them. In the middle of the day they lie very close in heavy and thorny cover and leave little or no scent. The dogs get knocked up by the heat, and if some coolie is not lucky enough to push a bird out of a bush on the end of his lathi you see nothing of them. The coolies should thrust their lathi well into the middle of the bushes and stir them well up. The partridges do not much mind a blow on the top of the bush they are in.

In extensive and continuous cover these birds can hardly be shot at all. Still sport of a sort can be got with them in the following classes of cover :—

(1) Narrow but long strips of cover out of which the birds cannot run without being seen.

(2) Detached clumps of thorny bushes near crops, or similarly situated fields of high sugarcane.

(3) High crops early and late in the day.

In cover of the first kind, if not so full of thorns as to be unbeatable by the practically naked coolies, you can get these birds on the wing by cutting rides and putting out coolies to act as stops. Two rides should be cut across a narrow part of the cover, near to the end and towards them the birds should be driven. The first of these transverse rides should be cut some twelve feet wide. Some yards further on should be the second, a regular clearance of 40 feet at least. Twenty yards between the rides is about the correct distance for thatching grass covers. If the jungle is of thick thorns they should be much nearer together. At the far side of the second clearance two or three stops should be posted to head the running birds back. They should show themselves, and may talk, but not make a great noise. The birds, running on ahead of the beaters, will halt in the space between the two rides on seeing the stops. When the beaters arrive the guns should take up positions commanding the patch in which the birds are and the beaters, in close and even line, should be sent in. One of two men should remain in the narrower ride to see that the birds do not run back. The beaters may make as much noise as they like early in the beat to get the birds on the run. As they approach the end they should move more quietly and should not shout lest they should flush the birds prematurely.

The second class of cover affords pleasanter and less wearisome sport, specially in a quail year. Every bush should be beaten and stirred up as the line comes to it, and all thatching grass should be beaten in line. It is of the greatest importance that the line be straight and the gaps between the beaters as equal as possible. If there are wide gaps, or if men straggle behind, the partridges will dodge behind the line and squat until they have a clear chance, when they will run back at about eight miles an hour. In cover of this class I have had pretty mixed bags of partridge and quails, with perhaps a hare or two, and a few snipe from "soft" bits. I have always enjoyed this form of shooting immensely, but it is not worth much in a year when the quails do not come down.

The third class of cover is of course the feeding ground of the birds. If the crops are in detached fields the birds rise out of them when disturbed. This form of shooting is very uncertain and you will seldom find enough birds to make it worth your while.

The best bag of grey partridges I ever helped to make was eleven brace, but such bags are rare. It was in cover of the second class.

The grey partrige is faster on the wing than a snipe, and carries a lot of shot, so you must aim well forward to kill. It is mud-coloured and generally skims away over the clods—indefinable—after having carefully ascertained which direction gives it the best chance of escape.

I shall leave them at this point. They can be shot, but a man must be hungry to eat them, except in very cold weather when they are well fed on ripe rice and can be hung for three or four days. Even then they are inferior to the domestic murghi.

No. 5 or 6 shot is the best for these birds, but I have killed plenty with No. 9. A runner is rarely recovered without a dog, unless it falls in the open; and even in that case it will give the coolies a good run before they catch it. Grey partridges should only be shot from September to 15th February.

The Black Partridge.

This is a bird of the more Northern and Eastern districts of Bengal. I have only found it in two places west of the Bhagirathi river. On the left bank of the Ganges it is common in suitable places and affords good sport.

Compared with greys black partridges are easy to find. I have found them in the shooting season, i.e., from October to 1st March, usually near water, in jha jungle, grass, and crops. We easily got on terms with them, and I have had great sport with mixed bags of "black" quail, snipe, and hares. The worst of the black partridge is that he is far too easy to shoot. The cock is easier to shoot than the hen on account of his colour, which makes him very easy to see against any background. I have flushed and shot them in beels, in a couple of inches of water, when snipe shooting, and numbers of them are sometimes flushed when beating grass for larger game. No. 5 or 6 shot are the best, but I have killed them with No. 9. The plumage of the cock bird is very beautiful. Some people consider them good eating.

Quails.

I am afraid that every rains a lot of nesting birds come to grief under the name of rain quails. For this reason I never go after them now, though I shot a lot before I found out that they were nesting. The rain quail is nearly as big a bird as the grey quail which is the bird I mean by my heading, and is found amongst them in the cold weather in its duller winter plumage.

The grey quail has one fault. It does not come to Lower Bengal every cold weather. If crops are bad in Behar it deigns to visit us. If it gets enough to eat in the North-West it stays there. As regards shooting quails there is little to be said except "Don't be in a hurry." The whirr with which they rise, sometimes at one's very feet, is often disconcerting to beginners. In a "quail year" they are everywhere. All the khal crops hold them, as do stubbles, sugarcane, light thatching grass tufts of binna grass, and the cultivated parts of beels which are too dry for snipe. They love sandy churs. They are easy to flush once, but after one flight they lie very close, and afford good sport with well broken dogs. They are delicious to eat, and easy to shoot when one is accustomed to the sport; though men who are accustomed only to snipe shooting sometimes find them difficult at first. When in practice at them you should not miss many. The snipe gun and No. 9 shot are the most suitable. And February perhaps the best month. There are a great many varieties of the quail shot in the cold weather in Bengal which are not fully described in any book I know.

Button quails are not worth powder and shot.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Mr. Christopher W. Wilson, whose hypothesis is endorsed by Professor Cossar Ewart, asserts and certainly to a great extent proves by his own experiments, that it is quite as possible to diminish the size of horses by restricting diet during foalhood as by selection of stock, and it must be conceded that this well-known breeder of polo ponies in the border counties has been so far successful, but the process can hardly be recommended for this country now that native breedess have been stimulated into raising nags. The method at first blush is certainly opposed to all preconceived notions, but the Cumberland breeder points to results, leaving to his more erudite colleague physiological deductions. The professor contends that nature will adapt itself to circumstances, so that, when nutriment is limited development is retarded in proportion; certainly when we look at the smaller animals in our villages and bustees there is undeniable evidence of this for the dhobie's donkeys and wretched little pack tats stand out prominently as examples, though we should prefer to substitute the term deterioration for that employed by Mr. Ewart. No doubt on a well conducted breeding farm or ranche where constant supervision can be exercised any pronounced inimical effects of the process could be promptly rectified as soon as manifested, but the stinting of young stock during foalhood and even up to the third year, would be so likely to appeal to the ingrained ideas of economy inherent in the native mind as to lead to the entire neglect of all youngsters during the two years the system recommend they should be left to shift for themselves, with, to our mind, the result we have alluded to. The prevailing idea either with plants or animals is to lay a good foundation for stamina at the outset, yet we must remember that the Japs and Chinese have for centuris produced diminished models without sacrifice of robustness though neither to our knowledge have applied their process to horses. The Shelties are brought to notice by the two authorities to emphasise their arguments and this assertion has already provoked controversy, some contending that breed and climate alone are responsible for these shaggy specimens of the horse, the opposition pointing out that arrest of growth is entirely due to the semi-starvation the little creatures are subjected to until taken up for training. The demand on the horse line in future, as you recently had occasion to show, will be for the old fashioned galloway type, but if Messrs. Wilson and Ewart's system is to be introduced for reducing our spindle-shanked country-breds to a more compact form I hope the initiative will be strictly entrusted to the Government studs or only to such breeders intelligent enough to comprehend the latter gentleman's scientific deductions, though I much fear they will prove rather abstruse problems for the average run of unprofessional breeders to digest. Once the idea got into the native breeder's noddle that the proverbial straw a day was sufficient for all young stock, it most certainly would not conduce to the success we wish to attain, but rather the reverse. With all due deference therefore to the authorities mentioned I am rather inclined to adhere to the old order of breeding; sticking strictly to selection.

GAME IN THE SUNDERBUNDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

All along the inner face of the Sunderbunds ..agers are complaining of the depredations of deer and bigger game, on their winter dhan. From what can be gleaned from boatmen, steamer serangs, and others the recent heavy rains have swamped out animals from their usual grazing grounds in the centre of these jungle fringed islands, so good sport from launches or even pinnaces should be had by those who can afford time and money for a cruise along the border of our breakwater wilderness

POONA ELEVENTH EXTRA MEETING.

Saturday, 17th October 1903.

THERE was a visible diminution in the attendance at this meeting and the betting was also somewhat crampel. Undesirable rain had fallen overnight and this interfered with the chances of the topweights to some considerable extent. In the first race friendly with the services of Hoyt was looked upon as the winner, but there were several knowing ones who thought The Dane was good enough to do the trick and backed him accordingly. Ena, however, was not neglected, and brought joy to the hearts of backers by "waiting in front" from start to finish.

The forward running of Mooreed in the earlier part of the season caused him to be well supported for the Chinchwad Plate. He is a game little pony, and, drawing clear at the bend, won comfortably, his immediate attendant being Talisman and not Silvermane as was expected.

Rocket had the best of the run in the Lanowli Plate and got a four lengths break at the start, whereas Moon was left and though Heeroo brought Moon wide at the bend he only failed in his attempt to catch Rocket by half a length.

On the running displayed by Sacristan the other day it seemed impossible for this youngster of Mr. Apcar's to lose the Kirkee Plate; but Misty and Min were expected to stretch him. Planet, who have been off form, however, provided a surprise by winning from Min by a length. Mosumma accounted for the Khandalla Plate and has not won out of time. In this event the Prophets and Know-Alls were put to confusion.

In the Karjat Plate Haydn had to fight his way to the front from the distance and he did so gamely and finished a length in front of Key West, his rival Veera being beaten into third place. The biggest upset of the day was when Bukhtawar ran away with the Arab Selling Stakes and was not claimed. Details:—

THE TURF.

THE MANCHESTER SEPTEMBER MEETING.

A SPLENDID programme was set for decision at Castle Irwell on the 25th ultimo, and it was unfortunate that brighter weather did not prevail. Fields, too, were exceedingly poor for this course, considering the handsome value of the stakes, though in the case of the Autumn Breeders' Foal Plate which was reduced to a match, the reason for the absence of the opposition is easily explained by the presence of the unbeaten Pretty Polly, who evidently frightened the remaining forty-nine acceptors away. She won in a common canter from Don Paez, odds of 25 to 1 being laid on the filly, who thus gained her fifth successive bracket. The Manchester Trafford Handicap attracted the only Irish-trained Cesarewitch candidate to the post, viz., Winkfield's Charm, and his very easy success will doubtless bring the colt into greater prominence in connection with the more important race to be decided 14th October, for which his weight is 7st. 5lbs. Otto Madden again did well, riding three winners in five mounts.

Won easily by four lengths ; a like distance separated the second and third. Golden Bay was fourth, Emily Melton fifth and Yab last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2mins. 44⅕secs.

The conditions for the concluding afternoon's sport at Castle Irwell on Saturday, the 26th ultimo, were a vast improvement over those prevailing on the first day, and the attendance showed a corresponding increase. Fields were larger and racing went with a much better swing than on Friday, there being nearly twice as many runners as sported silk on the previous afternoon. The principal item down for decision was the Prince Edward Handicap of 2,000 sovs, which attracted a dozen good class animals to the post, including three Cesarewitch candidates. Favouritism rested with Maori Chieftain, who had not previously been seen out this season, but all the placed horses sprang from the outside division, Wet Paint defeating Kano by a head for first place, with Gardenhurst a somewhat bad third. The result was thus pretty much on the lines of a year ago, when Mormon got the better of Volodyovski. Saturday's winner was bred by H. M. the King, when Prince of Wales, who presented him to Lord Marcus Beresford, and at the last Kempton Park Christmas Meeting he carried the colours of his present owner to victory in a humble race.

Gardenhurst was the first to leave the paddock, and he was followed in the parade by Maori Chieftain, Imperious, Cottager, Eminent, Countermark, Pain Bis, Field Rose, Wet Paint, and Kano, Fariman being led to the post without taking part in the preliminaries. They cantered in the same order, and the white flag was hoisted at twenty minutes past three. Two minutes later a capital start was effected, the first to show in front being Cottager, Field Rose, Imperious, and Pain Bis, with Wet Paint last, and, on settling down at the first turn, Cottager held a clear lead of Imperious, Field Rose, and Eminent, these being followed in Indian file by Alp, Pain Bis, Countermark, and Maori Chieftain, the whipper-in still having Wet Paint. So they ran to the straight, where Eminent drew out with a slight lead of Kano, Alp, and Gardenhurst, with Wet Paint working his way into fifth place, but below the distance Kano and Wet Paint singled themselves out, and a grand set-to resulted in favour of Wet Paint by a head ; five lengths between second and third. Eminent was placed fourth, Pain Bis was fifth, Countermark sixth, Alp seventh Cottager eighth, Imperious ninth, Field Rose next, and Fariman last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2min. 11⅘secs.

NEWMARKET FIRST OCTOBER MEETING.

The weather was none too promising when the "First October" Meeting was ushered in on the 28th ultimo, though after the decision of the opening item on the card the sun appeared and the conditions improved considerably. There was not a large attendance, but this was only in keeping with custom on the first afternoon. Sport ruled fairly interesting until the concluding item on the card which resulted in a double fiasco, and will be found referred to elsewhere. The most important race down for decision was the Great Foal Stakes, but the scratching of Rock Stand late on Monday took from the event a good deal of interest. The colt was expected to take his final galloping in this event prior to meeting Sceptre in the Jockey Club Stakes tomorrow, and in his absence odds were laid on Sir E. Cassel's Lovat. They were, however, rudely upset, the daughter of Love Wisely not being placed in a field of four The victor, Prince Royal (late Louis William), had never previously secured a bracket, and he was of course little supported. Another competitor to gain a maiden victory was Flower Seller in the Two-Year Old Race. It was the colt's first race, the son of Florizel II. acquitting himself well. Nothing could be found to oppose Venus in the Triennial Produce Stakes, other winners being the Miss Archer filly, Hymeneus, Henry the First, and Fosco.

THE GREAT FOAL STAKES.—Of 820 sovs, for three-years olds ; colts 8st 12lbs, fillies and geldings 8st 9lbs, with penalties and allowances. A. F. (one mile and two furlongs).

The following did not go to the post a second time, but must be considered starters for the race :—

Sir J Blundell Maple's Ardeer, 6 yrs, 9st 7lbs	W Lane 0
Mr H Heasman's Broadway 4 yrs, 8st 2lbs	Halsey 0
Sir E Vincent's Clairetta, 3 yrs, 7st 10lbs	Janek 0
Mr A Cohen's Brownist, 3 yrs 8st 11lbs ...	Boardman 0
Mr L Brassey's Arabi, 3 yrs, 7st 11lbs ...	Lyne 0
Lord Stanley's Mixed Powder, 3 yrs, 7st 10lbs	H Aylin 0

(Winner trained by Hayhoe.)

In the first and second instances the race was declared no start ; consequently, it had to be run over again, and there were eight runners both on the second and third occasions. The first prices rule the betting, and there is therefore no occasion to allude to the subsequent wagering.

BETTING : 4 to 1 agst Mixed Powder, 5 to 1 Exaltation, 8 to 1 Goldrush, 10 to 1 each Mimicry, La Uruguaya and Centre Board, 100 to 8 each Ardeer, Sizergh, and Mug, and 100 to 6 any other (offered).

The running was made by Clairetta, in the centre, from Goldrush, Mimicry, Ardeer and Mixed Powder, with Centre Board and La Uruguaya in close attendance for half the journey, when Goldrush dashed out clear of La Uruguaya and Mimicry, and won by half a length ; a neck between second and third. Clairetta was fourth, Mixed Powder fifth, Sizergh sixth, Brownist seventh, Exaltation eighth, Centre Board ninth, Ardeer next, and Mug, who was left at the post, last. The runners broke through the rails and it was no race, but the starter's assistant failed to recall them. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min 3⅘ secs.

On going to the post a second time, there were only eight runners, but there was another breakaway Exaltation, Mimicry, and Goldrush galloping the course, though only the first-named was ridden out, and he passed the post two lengths ahead of the pulling-up Mimicry. The race was then started by the flag, but after a couple of breaksaway, Mimicry and Exaltation were practically left behind. Goldrush made play from Mug and Sizergh, with Centre Board next in advance of Fosco, Mimicry and Exaltation being the whippers-in to the Dip, where Fosco drew out, followed by Mug, and won by a length ; a head seperated the second and third. Sizergh was placed fourth, Goldrush was fifth, Centre Board sixth, and Exaltation last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min 4⅘ secs.

A lot of rain fell at Newmarket during Tuesday night, but a welcome change took place on the 29th ult., and when racing was resumed the conditions were almost perfect, the sun shining with considerable warmth. The attendance did not reach large proportions, but a considerable improvement in this respect may be looked for to-day, when Rock Sand and Sceptre will fight their battle over again in the valuable Jockey Club Stakes. There was nothing of particular interest on the card yesterday, and in the majority of races held ruled small. The chief item, the Great Eastern Railway Handicap, however, brought a dozen to the post, favouritism resting with Chacornac, for whom Mr. H. J. King paid 480 guineas at the recent sale of horses the property of Mr. J. R. Keene. The gelding had not previously earned a bracket this season, but yesterday he gained an easy verdict. Mr. King won the corresponding race last year with Orchid, the same jockey being up. Henry the First followed up his success on the first day in the Buckenham Stakes by landing the odds laid on him for the Boscawen Stakes, and Sir E. Cassel's Love Charm took the Triennial Produce Stakes easily. Other winners were Court Belle, Riverside II., Mousqueton, and Joshua. Otto Madden gained a couple of brackets, and, as W. Lane failed to score, Sir J. Blundell Maple's jockey only leads by two points.

Won cleverly by a neck ; six lengths divided the second and third. Brabazon was fourth.

The Jockey Club Stakes differs essentially from its sister event, the Princess of Wales' Stakes, inasmuch as three-year olds, which are now rigorously debarred from competing in the mammoth stake decided behind the Ditch, are here afforded an opportunity of measuring strides against their elders. A glance at the past records of the race serves to show that it has been the gainer by their presence, the strength of the opposition being materially enhanced thereby. Furthermore, the younger generation have justified their inclusion in no uncertain manner, for so far only two of the ten winners, Isinglass and Love Wisely to wit, have emanated from the ranks of the four-year olds. Never since its inauguration has the issue been narrowed down within so small a compass as this year the scantiest field hitherto associated with the contest being the seven who tried conclusions in the year of its institution ; but partisanship ran high between the respective adherents of Sceptre and Rock Sand, and it was in the presence of a much larger and more representative gathering that a brisk day's sport was decided. The scene which followed Sceptre's victory was such as has seldom been witnessed on the classic Heath, and it will long remain green in the memory of those privileged to witness it. The weather remained fine until the decision of the big race, after which it turned showery and unpleasant, but the going was in splendid order.

THE JOCKEY CLUB STAKES—Of 10,000 sovs ; the second received 1 500 sovs, the third 1,000 sovs, the nominator of the winner 400 sovs, and the nominator of the second 200 sovs, weight for age, &c. Last mile and three-quarters of Cesarewitch Course.

BETTING : 11 to 10 on Rock Sand, 5 to 4 agst Sceptre. 20 to 1 Cappa White, 50 to 1 William Rufus, 100 to 1 Cheers (offerd).

Neither Sceptre, Cappa White, nor Cheers was on view in the paddock and William Rufus cantered down to the post in front of Rock Sand. The white flag was hoisted at 3-10, the lot being despatched to a capital start a minute later, Cappa White showing the way to Rock Sand and William Rufus, with Cheers whipping in. There was no change whatever till about six furlongs from home, when Sceptre took third place, and, gradually improving her position, she drew to the front after passing the Bushes, at which point Maher began to be uneasy on the favourite, who was lying second, with Cappa White next Thence-forward the race resolved itself into a procession, Sceptre maintaining her lead and won easily amidst a scene of the wildest enthusiasm by four lengths ; two lengths divided the second and third. Cheers was last throughout Time by Benson's chronograph, 3mins 10secs. Value of the stakes £7,185.

Though somewhat gusty the weather was bright for the concluding stage of the Newmarket Meeting. Very few people were present to witness the sport, which, however, turned out fairly interesting. A good start was made with 14 runners, out of the 16 entries for the Two-Year-Old Selling Race, and Glandore, who got well away, made the whole of the running and beat several more fancied candidates. The huge field of 21 started

FOOTBALL.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

THE LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP.

DIVISION 1.

ASTON VILLA vs. EVERTON.—This match was played at Aston on Saturday, the 26th ultimo before 30,000 spectators. Both sides were representative, the visitors playing the same eleven that won such a big victory over Newcastle United, and the Villa merely substituting Johnson for Bache in the front line the latter suffering from a throat affection. In glorious weather, and with the turf in fine condition, the game was fought out at a tremendous pace. The visitors showed beautiful combination, their half-backs in particular playing delightful football. Fortunately for the Villa, their backs were steadiness itself. Noon in particular playing better than he has done this season, and, with George at his best, the Everton attack met with no success. On the rare occasions they broke away, the Villa were always dangerous. McLuskie once missing a rare chance when he drove the ball at short range right against Kitchen's legs. George tipped over the bar a lovely drive from Booth, and just missing a rare chance when he drove the ball at short who centred beautifully for Johnson to head into the net. The Villa thus led at half-time by one to none. In the second half the Villa were clearly the more aggressive side, staying the pace better and being generally dangerous when in front of goal. McLuskie scored the second point from a pretty combined movement and Wilkes added a third, despite Kitchen's effort to divert the course of the ball, which went into the top corner of the net. Everton made a big effort at the finish, and after Young had scored with one clever shot, they nearly just missed at a second attempt. It was a great game full of clever football, the result being: Aston V[illa] three goals; Everton, one.

SHEFFIELD UNITED vs. DERBY COUNTY.—The meeting of these clubs at Brame[ll] on Saturday took place in glorious weather and attr[acted] 20,000 people. The ground was in capital con[dition] the teams were quite at full strength. The game [was] fast, with United facing a glaring sun, and Derby made most of the early running. At the end of fifteen minutes Davis scored through the ball glancing off Thickett, and thus deceiving Lewis who would otherwise have saved the shot. Up to the interval things were even, but there was no more scoring. United crossing a goal to the bad. In the second half United's early dash was sent back, and, after a lot of mid-field play, Richards rounded Thickett cleverly, and shot a surprise goal close in, the County thus securing a two-goal lead after ten minutes' play. This set United going, and the rest of the game saw a brilliant display of football from them. At the end of twenty-five minutes Bennett, who had previously had hard luck, beat Whittaker with a superb drive in the corner of the goal, and the equaliser came from Priest's head from a corner. Thus, with a quarter of an hour remaining, the score was level, and, with United still keeping up the tremendous pressure, a third goal came from Common just in time. Result: Sheffield United, three goals; Derby County, two goals.

BURY vs. SUNDERLAND.—These teams met on Saturday at Bury, in beautiful weather, before 15,000 people. Lindsay again appeared in the home team, whilst his namesake represented Day in goal for Sunderland. Sunderland started and faced the sun, and almost immediately got through, Gemmell missing narrowly with a header. At the other end McCombie sailed in and spoiled a fine effort by Leeming. The ball travelled quickly but from a breakaway Wood netted with a low shot after seven minutes play. Still Bury pressed, and twice more the visitors' goal escaped miraculously. But Sagar and Wood got away, and the former beat Lindsay again before the game was seventeen minutes old. This further success spurred the visitors' forwards, who were smart and active, but met with a stubborn defence, whilst the home attack wasted no time and shot desperately. Ten minutes before the interval Bury again pressed, and Sagar beat Lindsay, the ball being hooked out of the net by Watson, but Mr. Lewis granted the point, and at half-time, Bury led by three goals to love. On resuming Bury still held the upper hand, although Sunderland were several times dangerous. The backs at both ends were prominent, but after fifteen minutes Hogg registered the first goal for Sunderland after a fine individual effort, the same player sending a lightning shot just over the bar soon after. The visitors pressed for a time and were extremely dangerous, but the home team rallied, failing, however, to penetrate the defence. Just before the close Wood looked certain to score, but Watson averted danger in the nick of time. Final score Bury, three goals; Sunderland, one.

DIVISION 1.

BRISTOL CITY vs. WOOLWICH ARSENAL.—At Bristol on Saturday, the 26th ultimo, the Arsenal representatives accomplished another fine performance, beating the Western club by four goals to nil. The weather was fine and the game attracted 12,000 people. Both teams were strongly represented. The home side gave another trial to Hangett, a local man, who did very well at Bradford last week. In the Arsenal team, Sands played centre half in place of Pratt. The game opened in sensational manner, Gooing and Coleman scoring in the first five minutes, and it was by these goals the visitors led at half-time. After capital play between Coleman and Bradshaw, the latter got away and was given off side. The game opened keenly, but Hoar's [illegible] added the third goal for the Arsenal, [illegible] and the result was: Woolwich Arsenal, [illegible] none.

RUGBY RULES.

OLD MERCHANT TAYLORS vs. HARLEQUINS.—Glorious summerlike weather, but far too hot for Rugby football, prevailed at Richmond on Saturday, when, in the presence of a fair company, the above clubs opened their season on the Old Deer Park ground. On just such a day a twelvemonth ago to the same te[illegible] provided a remarkable game on Wandsworth Common, which ended in a draw of sixteen points each. The O.M.T. obtained two goals and two tries in the first half, and their opponents secured the same score in the second half. There was no repetition of this draw, but none the less a very keen and well-contended match was seen, one, moreover, fought at a fine pace, sustained pace taking the heat into consideration. The Taylors won, and deservedly, for, on the general run of play they were the smarter fifteen. With regard to the sides, both were very strong, the most notable absentees being G. W. Dillon, on tour with the Kent cricket team in America, V. Cartwright (Harlequins), and N. C. Fletcher (Old Merchant Taylors). The last-named, it may be stated, is expected to play but very little this season. The Taylors began very strongly, for, after Fox had kicked off down the slope, the forwards, by superior footwork, soon forced the ball well into the Quins' territory. At first Newton relieved [illegible] a neat run to the centre, but the invaders soon returned, and Cockell, getting his quarters going, a nice round of passing ended in Walters being pulled down well in the "25." A forward rush gained the visitors some relief, but a clever kick by Cockell placed the Quins on the defensive. Soon a favourable opening was presented to Waters, and he scored wide out, the kick taken by Raphael failing. On resuming the old boys continued to press: the forwards were certainly the smarter set, while at half Cockell and Buck were very effective, especially the first-named. If the Harlequins were rarely dangerous, they were able to prevent their line being crossed again, consequently when the interval arrived the home side held the lead. Very soon after restarting, a fine bout of passing, in which Waters, Raphael and Harding participated, was only checked in the nick of time. This was followed by a free kick in the visitors' "25." Raphael essaying a place kick that failed. Immediately afterwards, however, the international had a nice opening made for him by Cockell and Buck, and, threading his way cleverly through host of opponents, he grounded behind the posts. Draper took the shot and goaled, thus giving his side an eight-point advantage. This reverse stimulated the Harlequins, and by a series of short rushes they reached the home "25." Here Newton, Stoop Smith, and Bourdas all made fruitless attempts to break through the last-named once being exceedingly well collared by Harding. However, out of a loose pack near the half-way line, Stoop picked up, and by a really brilliant individual run got over amid hearty cheers, Fox placing an easy goal. Only ten minutes remained, and in this period the Quins never looked like adding to their score, the end coming with the Old Merchant Taylors winners by one goal and one try (8 points) to one placed goal (5 points).

BLACKHEATH vs. ROSSLYN PARK.—The Rugby season in the Metropolitan district opened on Saturday, the 26th ultimo in beautifully fine weather; in fact, the heat was far and away too great for the players, who, of course, just now are dead out of condition. But the agreeable surroundings were appreciated to the full by a large gathering of spectators, numbering, it was estimated, something like a couple of thousand. The ground, too, was in capital order. Capt. R O H Livesay, the International, appeared at half-back. He is only a few days back from South Africa, and it is a noteworthy fact that he never had a day's illness in the whole three years, whilst his prowess was rewarded with a D.S.O. He played really well in the game under notice, but it was a case of "bellows to mend" with most of them before the interval was reached—the captains wisely decided to play two thirties, with a view to getting fit. Kendall, the Cheshire and international half-back, was seen in a new rôle viz, as centre three-quarter back, and his try was a neat piece of work. Rosslyn Park used their feet well in the open, and, all round, were very little behind their victors, the difference lying in the combination of the two sets of backs. The home lot were making more use of their opportunities, what time Rosslyn Park, by faulty passing a[illegible] of the game, [illegible] score till the last [illegible] (who led the team in the absence [illegible] Skrim-Rogers were seen to advantage in the club forward rank, and Brown, at the base of the scrummage was invariably good. Kendall was the best of the third line, and quite the feature of the match was the display of Russell, the London Irish man in the last line of defence. He tackled soundly and kicked well, his only error being a couple of aggravating misfields, each of which he subsequently recovered. Jefferson, Parker, and Tennant were conspicuous in the loose for the losers, but Lowrens and Davies gave their line few decent passes, King-Stephens was best of the three-quarters. Again must attention be called to the late start. The game was advertised for 3-15, and it was nearly half an hour later when it was started. The Heathens won the toss, and play settled in mid-field. Passing along the home line almost enabled Brown to get through. Rogers was then just wide from a penalty free, and a little later Pinckney in-passed to Brown, who scored the opening try for the club, which Rogers failed to improve upon. Rosslyn Park had a turn pressing and a try seemed a certainty for them, King-Stephens losing a splendid opportunity. Whetham injured his knee, and was compelled to retire. Porter from the pack, going three-quarter instead. The pace became slow from this point, and the football was of a slovenly, featureless description. After a nice bout of handling, Kendall, feinting to pass to his wing, completely beat Treloar, and scored a try which failed an improvement, so that at half time Blackheath led by two tries (6 points) to nil. The game was very even in the second moiety, Blackheath again utilising every opportunity that came their way and Livesay and Pinckney making some excellent openings, which Kendall and Pinckney and Ballingall supplemented From one of these Pinckney received from Livesay, via Brown and got in at the corner, though he appeared to have been held up outside The kick again failed. Shortly after, from a forward rush, Rogers dribbled to the line for Hobbs to score a further unconverted try. In the last minute of the game the pluck of the visitors was rewarded, the ball going across the three-quarter line and King-Stephens scoring. Jefferson, allowed a "no charge," landed a good goal. The result, therefore, was a comfortable win for the home fifteen, as follows : Blackheath, four tries (12 points) ; Rosslyn Park, one goal (5 points.)

ATHLETICS.

L. A. C. AUTUMN MEETING.

Not for many a long day has a [illegible] Athletic Club received the patronage accorded the fixture decided at the Stamford Bridge Grounds, Fulham, on Saturday the 26th ult The surroundings carried one back to the early "eighties" when pretty nearly as many thousand spectators lined the railings and filled the stand as hundreds attend now-a-days. Certainly there was every inducement to attract the sport-loving public to the enclosure which will soon know the premier club no more. The weather was of a most delightful character indeed, absolutely perfect, while the programme put forward included two items important enough in themselves to arouse interest, that might, with the near approach of the end of the legitimate season, be on the wane. A gathering four thousand strong may appear a trifle to some who remember the palmy days of old "Litlie," when this number could have been multiplied by five, but bearing in mind the "empty benches" so frequently seen of late years at headquarters one has reason to feel thankful for smaller mercies. The splendid attendance secured recently at Kennington Oval by the South London H. and the success achieved in the fixture under notice go to prove that it is only necessary to introduce something with a spice of novelty about it, and put forward the best goods in the market, to revive the public interest, which has flagged somewhat of late years. Although walking races have often been taken as a source of amusement, not to say merriment it was a happy idea of the executive of the L. A. C. to issue invitations to the Stock Exchange. In May last the members of the "House" started the craze, and, though walks and wobbles followed thick and fast, nothing reached in interest the struggle decided on the Brighton road between the men from Capel court As an additional attraction that wonderful runner. Alfred Shrubb, was prevailed upon to again attack the Mile and-a half record and with the Press giving extensive and kindly advertisements, and the weather, as stated, of a charming character, the meeting was favoured in every way. Great care had been taken by the ground custodian, Charles Perrry, and with hardly a breath of wind blowing, and the track in splendid condition, the critics were confident that something out of the common would be accomplished during the afternoon.

E F. Broad (1). E. Denton (10), Francis Fry (†), W. A. Steward (†), and H. Gilmour Thompson (12) also competed.

The figures in parenthesis denote the order of finishing in the Brighton Walk Those marked (†) did not take part in that event.

Directly the pistol was fired Jull jumped off with the lead, closely followed by H. N. Duke, Hammond, Hoare, and Ide. Steward bringing up the rear. Before the men had gone a hundred yards cautions were thrown out broadcast. Then the field settled down to better form, but before half a mile had been covered Fry retired. At the end of the first mile the order of the leading division was : H. N. Duke, Hammond, Jull, Bellington, Hare-Duke, and Knights, with Broad lying ninth, and Steward a long way behind last. A little later the latter was lapped, and Bellingham putting on the pace came to the front with a rattle, Hammond and the two Dukes being next. Completing two miles H. N. Duke was leading just ahead of Hammond Bellingham, and Hare-Duke with Knights fifteen yards away. Thus early the race was left to the competitors mentioned, Broad, who had been losing ground steadily, was very short and jilty in his stride at this stage and terribly bad just after making two miles and a half was disqualified for trotting. Three miles found Hare-Duke, Hammond, and H. N. Duke almost together, Knights still hanging on now about twenty yards away. The half distance was covered in 30mins. 0⅕sec. and at 4 miles H. N. Duke was showing the way, Knights now began to find the pace too hot, but the two Dukes, Hammond and Bellingham were battling along within a yard or two of each other. Hammond was going in splendid form, easy and graceful evidently with something in hand Just after five miles had been covered Hare-Duke and Hammond spurted away from H. N. Duke and Bellingham. The two last named answered the spurt however, and then just as the race became most exciting Hare-Duke was pulled out by G. P. Beckley. This left Hammond with a good lead, and though Duke was sent on again the bungle cost him about 100 yards. Bellingham now went after Hammond, and at six miles he was close up with the leader, H. N. Duke being seventy yards away third, and his brother half that distance behind fourth. Two laps from home Bellingham, amid much excitement, took command once more, and when the bell rang for the last circuit he was two yards ahead of Hammond. Just after passing the pavilion, however, Hammond drew level. There was a brief struggle for supremacy on the far side, but Hammond had the foot of his man, and though Bellingham recovered some ground down the straight, he was beaten, after a fine race, by eight yards. H. N. Duke was 120 yards away third, and Hare-Duke another ten yards away fourth.

The mile times were :

Small soon gave way to Thieleman and Jones, and at the half distance Shrubb, running in grand style, had got close to Binks When a thousand yards had been covered the champion was level with the Highgate harrier, and then spinning along he caught Ward, who at once pulled up. At the mile Judson was leading with Shrubb thirty yards away sixth. Here Binks joined in and paced the little South Londoner who was leading, closely followed by Collins, Ward now helped Shrubb along for a short distance, and Binks, taking him in hand down the straight, Shrubb ran all out a winner by a hundred yards in the record time of 6min 47⅗secs. GOLF.

ROYAL AND ANCIENT G.C., ST. ANDREWS.

On the 1st instant the members of the Royal and Ancient G.C. held their autumn medal competition over the St. Andrews links. The meeting was almost a record one as regards numbers, 158 players having entered the list, including most of the best players of the club, amongst others Mr. R Maxwell, the amateur champion, Mr. S. Mure Ferguson, Mr. H. Ferrier Kerr, Mr Leslie Balfour Melville and Mr. Herbert Fowler. The conditions under which play was conducted were favourable for low scoring. In the early part of the day it was very threatening and heavy showers fell, but as the day advanced it brightened up and the rain kept off. The greens at first were a trifle heavy, but after a time they were all that could be wished. Play started at nine o'clock, Sir R. B. Finlay, the new captain, striking off the first ball. Despite the early hour there was a good muster of members and their friends. The medals under competition were King William IV. medal, the club gold medal, and the Glennie medal for the best aggregate score at the spring and autumn meetings. Last year Leslie Balfour Melville, who perhaps has carried off more medals than any other man, won with the then lowest recorded medal score of 77, Mr. Robert Maxwell being next at 79. Much interest was manifested in the play yesterday, and several of the couples were accompanied by a goodly retinue of onlookers. Mr. Edward Blackwell was the first to return with a fairly good card, his score being 80. Mr. Herbert Fowler, Mr. C. K. Hutchison, and Mr. J. E. Laidlay being next with 82. Much was expected from Mr. R. Maxwell, the amateur champion, and he certainly did not disappoint expectations. Starting with a 5, his score out was simply perfect, and his total was 36. Homeward he kept up his fine game, his only high figure being 6 at the Holecross, where a five might have been taken. He came home in 40, giving a total of 76, and beating the Medal record of Mr. Balfour Melville by a stroke. Mr. Maxwell's figures were:

Out: 5 4 3 5 5 4 3 3 4—36.
Home: 5 3 4 6 5 4 4 5 4—40—76.

Mr. Maxwell was warmly congratulated on his splendid score. Following two couples behind came Mr. Leslie Balfour Melville. Mr. Melville was looked upon to make a good fight, but it was not anticipated that he could improve upon his last year's performance. As usual, he played a good all-round game. He, however, took 40 to go out; homeward he improved on this by a stroke, and the score showed a 79, and he took second place. Mr. Balfour Melville's figures were:—

Out: 5 5 4 6 5 4 4 3 4—40.
Home: 4 2 4 5 5 4 5 6 4—39—79.

With Mr Balfour Melville's arrival the best of the players had returned, and although thirty-nine couples had yet to return, the interest in the competition was practically at an end. As anticipated, none of the remaining players came within sight, and Mr. Maxwell accordingly carried off the King William IV. medal with 77 and Mr. Leslie Balfour Melville the club's gold medal at 79 Mr. Maxwell again secured the George Glennie medal at 158 for both meetings. The next best scores were: Edward Blackwell, 80; W. Herbert Fowler, 82; C. K. Hutchison, 82; J. E. Laidlay, 82; J. S. Paton, 83; C. E. Gilroy, 83; Spencer H. Gollan, 84; B. B. Sharp, 84; S. Mure Fergusson, 84; Ernley Blackwell, 84; H. G. L. Simson, 85; W. Norman Bonse, 85; G. H. Aitken, 85; Rev. A. H. Cochrane, 86; F. M. Orr, 86; A. Maitland, 86; Walter R. Cook, 87; W. E. Fairlie, 87; G. M. Rutherford, 87; N. S. Sandeman, 87; R. Herbert Johnston, 87; H. Ferrier Kerr, 87; G. Scratton, jun, 87; A. G. Tait, 87; J. P. Jopp, 88; A. E.Orr, 88; G. P. Elwes, 88; A. F. Macfie, 88; J. E. Balfour Melville, 88; John Fairlie, 88; W. T. Armour. 88; Capt. A. Wolf Murray, 89; Dr. J. Goff, 89; David Anderson, 89; H. S. Ellis, 89; C. Maitland, 89; Ian Macintyre, 89; J. J. Balfour Melvile, 89; and Fred C. Tillis, 89.

Hunting.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

THE brilliant season of this illustrious Hunt was brought to an appropriate close by a complimentary dinner to the Master, [illegible] and all sporting Poona and his wife turned up to show their appreciation of the most excellent sport he afforded from first to last. After drinking in all loyalty to the health of the first gentleman and sportsman alive, His Majesty the King-Emperor, the toasts of the Master and Whips and of Sir Robert Low, a staunch supporter of the Hunt were drunk with musical honours. The Master made a speech, chiefly a statement of hunting affairs and a most satisfactory and encouraging statement it must have been to the members of the Hunt, while admirable speeches were made by Sir Robert and Lieut.-Colonel Bull who had lately returned from long leave. So ended the Hunting season of 1903. It was with the utmost diffidence that I accepted the proffered honour of recording its incidents. I felt that inexperience of local men and places would make my task a difficult one but if I have in my humble lines afforded a slight interest to good sportsmen who unhappily were from one cause or another unable to personally partake of the joys of the great sport my efforts will have been more than fully repaid. It is impossible to estimate all that the members of the Hunt owe to Colonel Sheringham through whose probably unique knowledge of Indian hunting they owe so wonderfully good a season nor should one I gather forget the able assistance rendered him by his whips, Mr. Armstrong and Major Chesney and the Honorary Secretary Major England, to whose unremitting interest the satisfactory financial state of affairs must to a great extent be due

SCARAMOUCH.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

THE meet on the 12th inst. was at Sandy Nullah Toll Bar and the morning's sport proved most enjoyable A couple of jacks were first viewed below Rocky and hounds were soon on their line. They made for Waterfall but kept along the ghats to the Toda Cathedral, where they separated—hounds also dividing. One was hunted to Brooklands from where he climbed the hill to Rocky and going through the cover broke on the Waterfall Stream, then he ran along stream to Waterfall Shola, where he crossed, hounds losing him in Dunsandle. The remainder of the pack followed the other jack back to Rocky, where he went to ground in a nullah below. The old Pykara Road covers were next drawn blank but hounds started on a line near the junction of the old and new roads, the jack led them towards Dartmoor Vale where they threw up.

Another jack was started below Wapshare's Hare Shola and gave the field a good run. Through Wenlock, and Khed Shola along the Road where the hounds lost the scent, but they hold and picked it up again. The quarry went past the Pykara Plague Camp and running parallel to the River was lost above the falls.

Cycling.

LONDON, Friday, 2nd October 1903.

IN the Motor Car Bill which comes into operation on 1st January next, no distinction beyond the registration fee is drawn between motor cycles and motor cars, and it is only natural that the owners of the former are anxious that some limit should be fixed as to how far the Act will apply to them. A conference has been held between the Auto-Cycle Club, the National Cyclists' Union and the Cyclists' Touring Club, on the matter, and they have decided to invite motor cyclists to give their views on the points arrived at by the conference. It is generally accepted that the cycle and the car should not be classed under the same category, and it is the intention of the interested bodies to lay suggestions before the Local Government Board at an early date. The question whether motor quads and the like, should be classed with motor bicycles or cars, is one to be decided.

When there is ground for complaining, by all means complain, or else the grievance will never be remedied. Cyclists have frequently referred to the selfish behaviour of certain motorists on the road, and, since we know for a fact that they have good cause for so doing, we trust that the offenders will take the hint to heart and amend their ways. But now it is the motorist's turn to complain about the thoughtlessness of cyclists. The Automobile Club have recently held a series of reliability trials for motor cars; fixtures of considerable importance to the trade and pastime alike, and sandwiched with the out and home runs were one or two hill-climbing tests. On occasion of the tests up Westerham Hill, the officials of the club were considerably inconvenienced by cyclists who would insist upon riding down the hill while the tests were on. Apart from the foolishness of riding down such a steep hill as Westerham, however powerful one's brakes may be, it was bad form of the wheelmen to interfere in this way. True they had a perfect right to use the hill, but it would have done more towards securing the consideration they desire, if they were to have shown like consideration on the above occasion.

Another council is grappling with the dust question, and are scarrying out experiments with the view of discovering som system of road making that will overcome the existing nuisance caused by the clouds of dust which rise on a windy day, or when a fast travelling motor car passes along. The council showing such enterprise is the Wandsworth Borough Council, and in the north-west corner of Wandsworth Common they have laid a long stretch of specially prepared roadway. First a three-inch layer of tarred granite broken to a fairly large gauge, is well rolled in by a steam-engine. Then another layer of 1½-inch gauge is put down and rolled, and a final layer of ½ inch metal completes the job. One would think that a road so prepared would last well and create but little dust. Its wearing will be watched with interest.

There was only one race at Canning Town track on 26th September, and that a 2 kilometre event (1 mile 427 yards), and in which but two competitors took part. Yet it was a race meeting in itself, full of intense excitement, and characterised with one of the greatest struggles that it has ever been our lot to witness. The occasion was the decision of the final heat of the World's Amateur Championship, which was declared void when run at Copenhagen on an appeal by A. L. Reed, against Ellemann the German, who then won. Ellemann objected to the decision of the Danish officials, and refused to start in the re-run final, so only A. L. Reed and J. S. Benyon competed. At the start Benyon took the lead, with Reed close up, the positions remaining unaltered until half the last lap was completed. Then Reed sprinted and drew level with his opponent, and a grand struggle took place up the finishing straight, resulting in a win for Reed by half a wheel. The crowd then jumped the fence, and in the mad stampede Benyon was knocked over, receiving a nasty leg wound and a sprained wrist.

Some boys in the district of Reading have been amusing themselves by placing nails with the points upwards on the roadway and then hiding behind a hedge, waiting to see how many cyclists would sustain a puncture. No doubt the boys thought the sport a less risky one than placing the nails on the schoolmaster's chair, but they were mistaken, for information of their "larks" was given to a police constable, who captured the lot. At the police court the fathers of the youngsters promised such conduct would not occur again, and no doubt somewhat forcibly impressed the fact on the boys at a later and more opportune moment. A small fine only was imposed.

The Washington cycle police on search for furious riding cases, have [illegible] to resort to a [illegible] to substantiate their statements, but [illegible] sixpenny cyclometer provided with speed indicators of a reliable type. These indicators are tested by a commission from police headquarters, and when found accurate are officially sealed and numbered. If the police in this country who lay themselves out for capturing offending motorists and cyclists, were mounted on motor bicycles with speed indicators attached, we would be nearer obtaining a correct statement as to speed in furious driving cases. But even then, some of the country police would be adding 10 per cent. to the speed registered to allow for any shortcomings of the indicator.

When one considers how many facilities are afforded the ready and resourceful thief, it is marvellous that cycle thefts are not more rife than they are. It is nothing to the credit of many thoughtless wheelmen that crime does not stalk rampant throughout the length and breadth of the land. Cyclists seem to have an unbounded belief in the integrity of their fellow countrymen. Would a sane person leave his watch on the mantel-piece of a coffee room at a hotel, or his change on a counter for any space of time? Then why should he leave a valuable cycle unattended in a public roadway? If a cycle is left for any length of time a chain and padlock should be used for cycle thieves will run but little risk, and as soon as they notice the chain they will leave the machine alone

A well-known oculist has been giving his opinions on goggles which is of interest to all classes of motorists because the form and quality of spectacles is a question of the utmost importance. A glass shield in front of a motor car is insufficient protection, as producing a strong draught, it whirls in the dust and other things at the side of the car. Therefore, goggles are absolutely necessary. For the lenses good clear glass free from imperfections of any kind is recommended, but is superior to either mica, celluloid, or gelatine. The edges of mica crumble away, its layers come apart, and it also loses its transparency. Celluloid and gelatine become dark with age. After exhaustive experiments [illegible] shaped periscope glass with the same refractive power at the centre as at the periphery, has been found the best, and it should have a very wide field of vision. For strong sunlight the lenses may be smoked, with carefully prepared surfaces, divergent or convergent, but neutral tint is preferable. The goggles must fit firmly, but without pressure. In spite of what has been urged to the contrary, ventilation must be provided for; and for this purpose eyelets or a wire gauze with a fine mesh should be fitted at the sides. The inner surface of the gauze as also of the goggle frame, should be black, and for those portions of the shields in contact with the skin, chamois leather covering is the most suitable.

When old stagers are asked as to the best animal they ever knew, not a few of them will mention Virago, whose career as a three-year-old was one of almost unexampled brilliancy.

She was purchased for Mr. Padwick by John Day privately from Mr. Stephenson, when a yearling, for £360, but had to go through the sale-ring at Doncaster, when he once more ostensibly became her owner at this figure or thereabouts The Danebury trainer said, before he bought her, that he had seen the finest yearling in the world, and that he should buy her for Mr. Padwick, cost what she might. He did and she turned out the best three-year-old in England, or indeed, in the world.

Virago was by Pyrrhus the First out of Virginia, by Rowton. She was a beautiful, rich, but rather dark coloured chestnut, with a little white on her off-hind pastern standing about sixteen hands high, very powerful and lengthy She had a small and generous head, with a short straight neck, but stood a little upright on her forelegs; was very quiet, and had a fine temper. Take her all in all she was a splendid mare, and quite as good as she looked.

She ran only once as a two-year-old, at the Shrewsbury Autumn Meeting. The winner was entered to be sold for £80, and Virago was unplaced. In those days it was only the winner that could be bought or claimed, or she would not have run, as her merits were too well known at the time to her party to run the least risk of losing her.

As a three-year-old she commenced her victorious career by winning the City and Suburban and Metropolitan Stakes at Epsom, a thing never done before or since on the same day. In the latter she beat Muscovite, a five-year-old, at 21lb, and he won the Cesarewitch Stakes easily, carrying 8st 3lb. The same year, at York, she won both the Great Northern and Flying Dutchman Handicaps, the One Thousand Guineas at Newmarket, the Grodwood Cup and Nassau Stakes, the Yorkshire Oaks, the Warwick and Doncaster Cup [illegible] ing ten stakes out of eleven, of the collective value of £9,750, beating seventy-five horses, and being herself only beaten in one race (T. Y. C.) by Ellermire a two-year-old and very fast, at York August meeting.

During the winter she turned roarer, and, though she was kept in training the following season, it was with indifferent success, and she was soon afterwards sent to the stud, where, however, she proved a failure.
