Sporting Notes.

WITH the Calcutta monsoon season drawing on apace, the question of how, where, or if at all, the monsoon hurdle races will be run becomes a matter ofimportance to owners of intending timber toppers. An esteemed contemporary assures us that it has been definitely decided to meet the difficulty by filling up the old nullah with cinders, but though this is perhaps the best selection, it is by no means certain that the result will be altogether satisfactory. A walk round the course the other morning, however, led us to the belief that the C.T.C. have another and sure scheme in their mind's eye, to wit the disablement of all the jump horses at present in Calcutta by means of flights of schooling hurdles, the top rail of each of which is studded—one might almost say coped—with long, sharp, and extremely rusty iron nails. This is perhaps the simplest and—to the C.T.C.—cheapest method of settling the matter, since there are no jump horses there can obviously be no jump races, and the erection of immature culverts and cinder-diluted quicksands will be thus rendered unnecessary.

While on the subject of hurdles, and in case there should be any hurdle racing this monsoon, is it not nearly time that the Calcutta hurdles were disposed of as firewood, and something a little less unique substituted in their place? In every other place we have visited the hurdles are either made of sawn timber with bars wide enough to be visible, or they are split wood hurdles—as these are—but bushed. The only object of having unbushed split wood hurdles would appear to be to delude a horse into the idea that he can gallop through them—a belief which he subsequently discovers to be a delusion.

Very little work is doing on the course at present, but what little there is is fraught with considerable danger. Only the other morning Wishart had to pull up in an exercise canter in order to extract a rusty iron nail, the size of a juvenile crow bar, from his horse's frog. Excitement is also added by the vagaries of certain equestrians who seem to consider the race course a suitable spot in which to educate their mounts in the art of passaging, circling, reining back, and other military manœuvres, and a few mornings ago we saw a bold sportsman engaged in jumping the bamboo rails put up as barriers to close the course, and, not only jumping them, but jumping them the wrong way round!

Apropos of this what a fine instance it is of the "law of cussedness" that when a non-racing man or woman rides on to a race course during morning work, his or her evil genius invariably prompts them to ride the wrong way round, that is to say left-handed on a right-handed course and vice versâ. This of course does not apply so much to Calcutta, where regulations on the subject exist, but to up-country courses. To meet another horse careering wildly in the opposite direction is quite enough to put a nervous thoroughbred over the rails, but this never occurs to those sportsmen who utilize the track as a handy spot on which to exercise their dogs.

Early last week the S. S. Itinda arrived from Australia bringing up about forty horses, all in fine condition. Some of these are the property of Mr. Gove, while the Idler and Find Out, the new purchases of the Kour Sahib of Patiala, are also among the shipment.

In steeplechasing it is interesting to observe a horse jump a fence, and note the precise point on the "wing" of the jump which shows how high it raises its body to get over safely. This is found to be very much lower than usually imagined.

A fifteen hand horse is five feet high, and its body is two and a half feet from the ground; therefore in order to clear a fence four and a half feet high, the horse would have to raise its body only two feet. But since it can, and generally does, brush through at least six inches of the hedge, there is no necessity for a horse rising more than eighteen inches at the fences.

Now, if you lower these jumps so that the horse may not have to rise at all to clear them, you actually make them dangerous.

In some of the old courses they have done away with the wall, the bank, the board fence, etc., in their stead remain about eighteen inches to two feet of the old obstacle, surmounted by a foot and a half of earth and a lot of brush. These obstacles, notwithstanding the fact that they are practically alike—a brush jump with an earth base—are still called the "wall," the "bank" and the "board fence."

This recalls the story told of a clebrated English gentleman rider, "Doggy" Smith, who was asked by one of the stewards at Sandown Park, after a steeplechase in which he had ridden, how he liked the course. He replied: "Oh, the course is all right. But, I say, you ought to have a lot of labels made with 'This is a wall,' 'This is a bank,' 'This is a water jump' printed on them; then we might think we'd been steeplechasing, which is more than I can think now."

This was before the jumps at Sandown were raised. Even in England they go through the same periods of relaxation of rules, followed by strenuous efforts to enforce them—and re-enforce them—just as we do Elsewhere.

Simla held its fourth Gymkhana on the 13th instant, when large entries and keen competition were the features of the proceedings. The first event—Gentleman to cut four potatoes—was won by Col. Kennard from twelve competitors. Eleven entered for the Snatcher Stakes in which gentlemen were to pick three polo balls off stumps and throw them into a bucket, ladies to pick three tennis balls off posts and throw them into sacks. Marks given for pace. This was won by Col. Kennard and Mrs. Whelar, with Capt. Wigram and Mrs. Buck second. Polo croquet for ladies produced fifteen competitors and was won by Mrs. Atkinson, Miss Teague second. The fourth event was—For ladies and gentlemen to ride in pairs over three low hurdles to a given spot, where both dismount and write their names legibly in a book, mount and finish over three hurdles. Pair taking least time to win. Syces allowed to hold horses or ponies only. Won by Lord Suffolk and Mrs. Morgan with Col. Kennard and Mrs. Buck next, a second behind. The Trotting Race for ladies on horses was won by Mrs. Couchman, while Mrs. Atkinson won the Ponies' Race. Thirteen couples entered for the last event—The Bran Tub Stakes. This provided great fun and was hotly contested. Gentlemen with ponies run to ladies with sealed envelope, lady after opening envelope matches a ribbon inside envelope with other ribbons placed near by. Gentleman after receiving ribbons rides to bran-tub where he again matches the ribbon, mounts and rides to winning post. First in with three ribbons correctly matched wins. Syces allowed at bran-tub. Mr. Oppenheim and Mrs. Hawkins were first, and Lord Suffolk and Mrs. Buck next.

It will be news to a good many people to hear of pigsticking in the vicinity of Bangalore, and the sport has certainly not been in vogue of late years at least, writes a correspondent. But on the 6th instant three officers of that sporting regiment, the 6th Dragoon Guards, had a fairly exciting day and accounted for a very fair boar. The cover around Bangalore consists principally of the ordinary South Indian scrub jungle in large patches, with cultivation of various sorts between. The jungle, however, is mostly too high to ride through, and the extent of some of the covers makes it somewhat difficult to beat the pig, of which there would seem to be a fair number, out of it. The sporting trio above referred to were Messrs. O. St. Michael Jones, Ker and Christie, and they went out to the Bikashapur Estate, on the Kankanhalli Road, at the kind invitation of Mr. G. V. Scovell. The invitation had been to come out over-night and begin operations in the early morning, the genial host—he is a brother of Mr. Scovell of yachting fame and indeed goes in a great deal for yachting himself—apparently concurring in the opinion of the immortal Jorrocks that "where a man dines he shou'd sleep, and where he sleeps he should breakfast." Accordingly at day break a start was made, about fifty coolies acting as beaters under the command of Mr. Scovell's head maistrie. The first cover drawn proved blank, and the second patch appeared much too large for three "spears" to manage properly. This proved to be the case, for although a good boar and a sow were in the jungle, they slipped away almost unperceived and had got a hopelessly long start in the direction of another large patch of jungle, before the sportsmen found out which way they had gone. This latter patch was about a couple of miles away, and although a prompt move to it was made, and the jungle carefully beaten, the pigs were never seen again. Either they must have gone straight through in the first instance, or the cover proved too thick for the little army of beaters. And here it may be remarked in parenthesis that some scrub jungles in Southern India are absolutely impenetrable for beaters. Such a cover exists at Vandalur, the well-known sniping ground, a score of miles from Madras, in the shape of a large hill close to the road which is literally one mass of different thorny shrubs and cactus. When sniping the tracks of large pig may be constantly seen in the neighbouring paddy-fields, or their rootings in the fields some miles away from their stronghold, but all these tracks lead back in the direction of the hill to which they retire before daylight. But with many apologies Mr. Editor for the digression, I will return to my baa-lambs. The day was now well on, and even on the Mysore plateau the sun can be hot at mid-day, so that a move was made for Mr. Scovell's hospitable bungalow with a view to tiffin. On the way back, however, a sudden hubbub and shouting announced a find, and a good-sized boar made off straight in the direction of Mr. Scovell's estate, thus helping the "spears" on their way to luncheon in the most considerate manner. All three riders were close on the boar after a gallop of about a mile and-a-half, the ground being none too easy in places, when Mr. Pig stopped short and turned to bay fairly blown. He evidently meant fighting, and came straight at Mr. O. St. Michael Jones, who got in a good spear behind the shoulder, the blade snapping short off and remaining in the boar's body. Still he came on, being again speared by Mr. Christie, although not deeply enough to finish him off. However he was now rather sick, and retreated into a patch of thick jungle. Somewhat rashly the sportsmen dismounted and followed the boar on foot, for it was impossible to ride into the jungle, and Mr. Ker catching the brute almost in the act of charging, met him half-way and got the spear well home in his chest, being just able to hold the now considerably weakened animal off at spear's length. Messrs. Christie and Jones joined issue, and the pig was again speared, the coup de grace being administered by Mr. Jones. The boar was a good one, (for these parts) measuring about 27 inches—not fourteen hands—as I heard suggested by another officer after the triumphant trio's return—and he carried fairly good tusks. The ground in this district is quite rideable in most places, and it is likely that some further "stiches" will take place before long, for there are any number of the sporting military element now in Bangalore. But more than three "spears" are required to work the covers properly.

The Stewards of the Berhampore Races are circulating a draft programme for a meeting they propose holding in November or February.

Lieut. W. A. Hamar Bass has bought that good colt Carabine and we may possibly see him running this year in the Viceroy's Cup. Carabine is a four-year old by Carbine—Saintfield His very first appearance gave him a bracket at the Salisbury meeting, 24th May 1900, when he won the Juvenile Selling Plate with 9st. up. He was sold after the race to Mr. J. Collins for 170 guineas. In June he was third to Jim Alec, to whom he was giving 6lbs. in the Hollybush Selling Plate at Gatwick. In September he was twice second to Congratulation; in the Clumber Nursery Handicap Plate at Nottingham and in the Dryton Nursery Handicap at Pontefract. In November he was unplaced to Laffan in the Lancaster Nursery Handicap at Manchester. In 1901 Carabine won the Thirsk Handicap at Thirsk in May; also the Warwickshire High Weight Handicap Plate at Birmingham in June. At Haydock Plate he secured a bracket in the August Handicap, and won the Nottingham Handicap at Nottingham in October. The Manchester November Handicap was also won by him, beating Black Sand and Rambling Katie. He ran unplaced to Lakota in the Ingestre Handicap at Wolverton in May, and to Gyp in the Great Ebor Handicap at York in August. Last year he ran four times, his only victory being the Chester Cup when he beat St. Aldegonde and Sweet Sounds. He was second to Scullion, to whom he was giving 16lbs. in the Ascot Stakes in June, seventh to Black Sand in the Cesarewich, and fifth to Sweet Sounds in the Markeaton Plate at Derby. This year up to the 22nd May he had fulfilled but one engagement, running fourth to Vendale in the Chester Cup.

It will be seen from the above list of performances that Carabine is a real good one: he has run in very good company, and when he has not won he has been either placed or somewhere on the premises. Up to last month he fulfilled 17 engagements which had brought him 7 wins, 3 seconds, and one third. Altogether his record is one which entitles him to much respect and will secure for him the good wishes of all Indian sportsmen. We wish Mr. Bass all good luck with his new purchase, and trust we shall have the pleasure of seeing Carabine brought to the post at Calcutta on the 26th December next as fit as hands can make him.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—Nelson, the well-known English jockey, who is at present riding in India for the owner of Sceptre, has arrived in Bangalore and proceeded to Mysore. Penton also has passed through, and altogether quite a number of European jockeys will be seen in the saddle next week.

Saturday's paperchase in Bangalore was a failure owing to heavy rain, and consequently very deep going. Despite thunder, lightning, and wet, however, about a dozen men and two ladies—Miss Armstrong and Mrs. Hawkins—pluckily rode the course, although it was impossible to do much hard galloping. For the present, although the paperchases will be regular affairs, there will be no sweepstakes, but later on in the season it is hoped to hold several competition paperchases and to present an average cup both for horses and ponies.

Our Lucknow correspondent writes, under date 14th June, as follows:—The weather has, thank goodness, been a little cooler this week, and it was possible to enjoy last Thursday's paperchase, the course for which started near the Kukrail Bridge and included some eighteen jumps. The field was again very good. Among the starters whose faces I recognised were Mr. Ryves on Truelove, Mrs. Lawrence on Miss Mary, Mrs. Saunders on Jacqueline, Miss Porter on Ladysmith, Mr. Douglas Straight on Carry Me Safe, Mr. Symons on Ludo, Mr. Story on There and Back, Mr. Watson on Doris, Captain Torides on Steam Horse, Mr. Stott on Greyling, Mr. Gage on Safe Conveyance, Mr. Sheridan on See You Again, Mr. Berthond on Crusader, Mr. Ruck on Adjutant, and Mr. Shaw on Bitter Beer. Mrs. Ryves got away with the lead and held it for about half the course. Until the last jump it looked as if the victory must fall to a native boy who was riding Captain Dunbar's Rifleman, but he lost ground at the last jump, and Mr. Symons came in first, followed by Mr. Gage, with Rifleman third The Officers of the Gloucesters were "at home" after the run. The date of the Paperchase Cup Race Meeting has been changed, I hear, from the 18th to the 25th instant.

We had another very jolly little water gymkhana yesterday (Saturday) at the Chutter Munzil Swimming Bath, organized by Mr. Douglas Straight, our District Superintendent of Police; it was a great success. There was a good attendance, including many ladies. The first event, diving over a rope, was won by Major Newnham, with Messrs. Symon and Sheridan, equal, second. Eight entered. The second event, swimming two lengths on back, for which eight again entered, had to be swum in two heats. The first was won by Mr. Barnaby, the second by Mr. Stott, the final falling to Mr. Barnaby. The egg and spoon race, which caused no little amusement, attracted seven entries. The first heat was won by Mr. Douglas Straight and the second by Mr. Stott, who also won the final. A very exciting game of polo followed, three rounds of two minutes each, in which the East Surreys beat the Gloucesters by one goal. The afternoon's sport was brought to a conclusion with various feats of skill, all of which were good, and some exceptionally so.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—We have been having a noisy time of it in peaceful Poona and heaven's artillery has been outvying that of the Royal Field. For, while the latter has been pouring out plaudits in honour of the advent of the little tin gods from Olympia to cast their effulgence on us poor dwellers on the plains, the former has not confined itself to blank ammunition and, great Jove (jealous no doubt of the thunderbolts which issue at times from the Editorial chair), hurtled one of his own manufacture at the edifice of our local 'Thunderer' knocking off several massive coping stones, but otherwise, happily, doing no harm. Lightning also struck a house in Ghorpuri—next, curiously enough, to one that was struck last year, and the owner appears to have had a narrow escape from electrocution.

I regret to see that the talented critic who writes over the nom de plume of "Lorgnette" in your excellent little contemporary the Indian Sporting Times makes so vigorus an attack on the executive of the Western India Turf Club on the subject of closed races. Anything which emanates from the pen of so distinguished a critic of Indian racing is entitled to due consideration, more especially since one must rest assured of the absolute disinterestedness of the writer. He leads off with the scathing assertion that the closed races held at the extras under the auspices of the W. I. T. C. are in many respects "a fallacy and a farce," and adds that the remark is induced by the fact that in the new prospectuses special catering is being made for the G. R.'s. who happen to be members of the leading clubs in Western India. And therein apparently lies the sore. The closed races are under the most recent conditions confined to members of H. M.'s Navy and Army, members of the Indian Civil Service, and members of the Byculla, Yacht Club, and Bombay Club, Bombay, and of the Club of Western India, Poona. This would seem to embrace a fairly extensive field for closed racing. Yet "Lorgnette" cavils at it and resents the exclusion from the list of the Bombay and Poona Gymkhanas and in his zealous championship goes so far as to be apparently surprised at "the Western India Turf Club not being a means of qualification to a closed race!"

But let us look at the matter from another point of view. Surely it must be admitted that it is to a genuine gentleman amateur who races mainly for sport, and not to the wealthy professional owner who races chiefly from a commercial point of view, that we must look uphold the best traditions of racing, and surely it is killing the goose with the golden egg and a shortsighted, selfish policy to attempt to deprive the former class of all personal interest in the great game?

Some years ago racing on this side of India was confined chiefly to Arabs and country-breds, English and Australian horses being in an extreme minority. Blood Arabs in the stables seldom fetched over a thousand rupees, and under such circumstances the gentleman amateur could and did hold his own in racing, and the large number of names of celebrated gentlemen owners and riders handed down to us testifies very clearly to the good use they made of their opportunities.

Then came the influx of the wealthy native; the purchasing of animals at from any price varying from one to ten thousand or more, and as a not unnatural result the swamping of the impoverished amateur. He could not possibly live up to it, and as the result amateur racing has for some years past been more or less moribund.

But during the past year or two there seems to be a distinct recrudescence in desire on the part of several gentlemen amateurs to patronize the grand game, if only it is made possible to them. Surely this desire should be fostered as the executive of the Western India Turf Club are apparently endeavouring to do, instead of being smothered at birth as it seems to me "Lorgnette" is endeavouring to effect? It will, I think be a sad day for racing when those who rule its affairs are from among the number of those who look on it solely as a commercial enterprise. And since owing to lack of wealth they cannot possibly compete on fair terms with the racing public at large, it seems obviously sound policy to frame rules giving such owners an opportunity of personally indulging in the great game

"Lorgnette" grieves at no new riding talent being unearthed among the G. R.'s and at the standard of riding not being an exalted one. Admitting that, is it necessary to point out that such a deplorable state of affairs is the direct result of lack of opportunity, a misfortune which the Turf Club are now evidently endeavouring to remedy.

The question of restriction in closed races is a delicate subject to dilate on and one which I approach with the utmost diffidence and with the most earnest desire to avoid giving offence. But if the restriction be made too elastic the object in view is at once defeated, and in confining themselves to the Services and Clubs previously mentioned, the executive would seem to have used a wise discretion. Member-hip of His Majesty's Service is accepted as an "open sesame" to most doors and the Indian Civil Service not unreasonably (in India at any rate) is accorded an equal privilege. It cannot be overlooked that election to a Gymkhana is necessarily less vigorous than to a Club, and it certainly seems that anyone, who, not belonging to the distinguished services mentioned, is also for one reason or another unable to claim membership of one of the four Clubs in question, can have no great grievance if he is excluded from a closed race. "Lorgnette" can scarcely be in earnest when he hints at membership of the Turf Club as being a qualification to compete in closed racing, and it need scarcely be treated seriously, since it would mean the qualification of opulent natives and would render the restriction, to use "Lorgnette's" own phrase, indeed "a fallacy and a farce." If the executive of the Western India Turf Club find their efforts do not meet with sufficient support, nothing can be easier than for them to omit such races from future programmes. But their effort is obviously an earnest one for the good of racing on this side of India

I hear most encouraging accounts of the Poona and Kirkee Foxhounds. A sporting friend, whose opinion I can rely on, tells me they look a very useful lot, and that their condition at so early a stage shows the sign of the master hand we know is ruling hunting affairs. Colonel Sheringham's invitation to meet hounds at Kennels at 5-30 any morning has I believe met with most gratifying responses—and what pleasanter way of spending a morning when one has not, alas! reached the sere and yellow of life. Some exceilent cub hunting is going on and the new hounds have entered in the most promising manner I believe. So at present all seems roseate. I have not yet heard when the first real meet of the season is to take place. It will no doubt be a Lawn Meet at Government House.

I hear that the list of G. R.'s in this Presidency has been enriched by the appointment of Major Beavor, A. M. S., as Surgeon to His Excellency the Governor, with Major Edwardes, 3rd Cavalry; Captain the Honorable C. Greville, Military Secretary; Captain Wood, A. D. C.; Colonel Hazelton, A. V. D.; Major England, Royal Fusiliers; Mr. Cooper R. F. A., and doubtless others whose names do not at once rise to my memory, all ready to sport silk. One need scarcely fear that amateur race riding is as yet at a very low ebb on this side of Hindustan.

A correspondent writes from Dharampore:—"The Giri river has been most disappointing. I fished the Jumna at the mouths of the Giri and Arsun in April, until the snow water came down, which it did early for this year, about 24th April. Before it came down I hooked a Goonch in the Jumna at the mouth of the Giri who accomplished the unusual feat (for a Goonch) of running out the whole of my line, viz. 200 yards, with one grand rush. To my disgust when I landed him I found it was only Goonch of 20lbs. instead of, as I expected, the record fish for the season. I also got a 10-lb. Mahseer in the same place; both on dead bait—a 6-inch one spun with a wire trace. I started up the Giri after that and fished as far as Solon, about 80 miles: but the fish were not on the take, the largest I got were a 7-lb. and a 4-lb. fish. I think there must have been a little snow water in the river. A member of the Foreign Department who started up the river early in April got, amongst other good fish, one of 44½lbs. and another of 26lbs. The river swarms with fish and is preserved by a number of watchmen who patrol it.

A reward of Rs. 100 has been offered by Mr. H. A. Crump, I.C.S., Commissioner of the Nagpur Division, for the destruction of a man-eating panther which infests the jungles of the Muramgaon zemindari in the Chanda district.

According to the British Inventor a brilliant plan for ridding back gardens of philandering cats has been registered. It consists of nothing less than the invention of a fearsome automaton tom-cat made up of a tin frame and covered with a fur coat. The general principle of construction is based upon powerful clockwork, released by a lever when the tail of the animal is moved. The clock works a pair of bellows, with two loud, screeching reeds, at the same time forming contact to light the lamps in the eyes, and forcing outwards a dozen long needle points, which come up through the skin of the back. The tail also acts as a trigger, and releases a hammer formed of the lower jaw of the cat, which explodes two percussion caps in the mouth.

Of 1,016 persons bitten by mad dogs and treated at the Pasteur Institute, Paris, last year, three only are said to have died of hydrophobia.

Niagara remains the pinnacle of the adventurer's ambition, until he takes to aerial navigation. In spite of the heavy toll in lives which has been paid by those who have made the trial, a surprising number of persons have braved the terrors of the Falls, either by swimming, floating, or worse still, the giddy crossing on foot by means of the tight-rope. The first to make the journey by the last-named means was, of course, Blondin, and it is unlikely that in our day his performances will be excelled. It was nearly fifty years ago that he first slung a hawser between the Falls and Whirlpool Rapids. For 18 minutes he walked, leapt, danced, and curveted in mid-air, drank from a bottle passed up by cable from a steamer below, and then with his balancing-pole, weighing 45lbs. and measuring 38ft., landed on the Canadian side. Several times thereafter he repeated the performance with infinitely daring variants, walking with his head enveloped in a sack, with his feet encumbered by baskets, with his hands and feet manacled, carrying a table and chair, and finally a man. One of the most remarkable pieces of nerve was that in which he held a hat in his hand, while a sharp-shooter from the deck of a steamer riddled it with bullets. The Falls have always a pathetic interest for Englishmen from the fact that the grandest swimmer this or any other country ever produced, Captain Webb, lost his life there. It was in July 20 years ago that the poor fellow made the attempt. After getting into the current, he was seen to pass a few of the swells, and then was sucked under. His lifeless body was recovered four days later, seven miles down the river, and to-day it lies in Oakwood Cemetery.

Of freak performances there have been not a few. Carlisle D. Graham, a Philadelphian, has several times shot the rapids in a barrel of his own fashioning. After his first successful attempt he determined to repeat the feat with his head protruding from the tub. He did so, and was nearly suffocated by being caught in an eddy in which he could not get his breath. His success inspired a young woman named Maud Millard to emulate the feat. She took with her in her barrel a pet dog. Thousands of people watched the nine hours' tossing of the barrel in which she was imprisoned. They saw it sucked under, and cast high into the air hundreds of yards from the point at which it had disappeared. When late at night the barrel was redeemed from the water, the little dog leapt joyously from its prison, but the girl was dead. The fresh air for whose lack she had died has been absorbed by the dog. The wife of a professional wrestler made a somewhat similar attempt recently, and was picked up almost dead. Another of her sex copied Blondin's feat of crossing the rope with her feet and hands girt about with chains. She managed the journey successfully, but has not been heard of in a similar connection since. A couple of years ago a Mrs. Taylor shot the Falls in a barrel, and there remains nothing else out of which man could win notoriety, until a new thrill be devised. Quite a lot of heroism which might have been more profitably employed has been expended in feats of this character.

A German scientist has suggested a means of ridding localities of the mosquito pest. The professor in question, we are told, argues that protection from animal and insect depredations is frequently secured by the erection of scarecrows. He further states that, inasmuch as mosquitoes are the prey of dragon-flies, and that as the mosquito avoids this insect as much as possible, the bodies of dead dragon-flies strung upon wires in mosquito-infested localities should succeed in scaring mosquitoes away. This opens a wide field for operations. "As big fleas have small fleas that on their backs do fright' em, so little fleas have lesser fleas, and so ad infinitum"; and the only thing to do to rid ourselves of insect pests is to place destroyers in conspicuous spots, and the trick is done.

An experiment was, says a contemporary, made by a Polish nobleman to ascertain how far storks migrate during the winter. He caught a stork, and attached a plate to its neck on which were inscribed the words: "This stork comes from Poland." In the following spring the same stork was found in the nobleman's park with a bundle around its neck, containing several precious stones of great value, and the metal plate with these words on the other side: "India sends him back with presents to the Poles." Next please.

An unexpected incident such as a swarm of bees suddenly alighting in a public thoroughfare is enough, according to what we read in a Paris newspaper, quite to unnerve the average policeman. The incident referred to was this: Whilst a man employed in watering the roads was standing near a water-main in a Paris street, a swarm of the industrious little insects, presumably bent on an outing, settled down on the pavement. The man in charge of the water-cart hesitated what to do, and called the police to his aid. The constable on duty in the vicinity consulted a colleague, but though they would have collared a pickpocket or drunkard with the utmost alacrity, they are said to have experienced considerable delicacy in interfering with the bees. Ultimately, a tradesman acquainted with the habits of the insects was applied to, and secured the swarm, but there yet remained the problem, what was to be done with the capture. At the police-station the Commissary emphatically refused to take charge of the wanderers. At the lost property office, it is narrated, there was no room for them, so, finally, the tradesman, much against the grain, was compelled to store them away somewhere until their owner could be discovered.

Some time ago we gave our readers our opinion of Messrs. P. Orr & Son's "Orite," which we consider to be absolutely the best preparation for cleaning and preserving rifles and guns. We continue to hear its praises sung by all who have tried it, and we are pleased to hear that the War Office evidently thinks it good enough to ask the manufacturers in India for quotations.

The rain has come just in time to tempt owners into supporting the Tollygunge Gymkhana on Saturday, and very fair entries have rolled in for all but two events. Neither the polo players nor the voluntary warriors of Calcutta seem anxious to have a flutter; but all the remaining events have filled well. There is some very useful class in both the horse events, and "hacks" is a decided misnomer for many of those entered for the three-furlong hack stakes. Out of 14 entries for this contest, most of whom are unknown quantities, it will be no easy task to pick the winner, but as several of the better class ones are double entries for this and the opening handicap, they may elect to go for the latter only and so simplify matters. Oom Paul, it will be remembered, ran in very good company last season when quite unfit, and, should he go for this race, will probably be the first to catch the judge's eye. Sylvia also made a fair show, running second in a hunter's hurdle race, and Myrene ran well in the light horse paper-chase, when untrained. Corban, too, has won a Gymkhana, so that the winner might turn up in either of these. Sir Humphry is a nice cut of a horse, but is believed to be all out of order, having had fever. Red Pepper is reported to resemble his name, and on the whole we should select him and Oom Paul to fight it out between them.

For the pony hurdles five entries are forthcoming, of whom Pekin and Peeping Tom are known to be moderate paperchasers. Country Girl is reported to be very "peas in the pot," but she is entered for the ½ mile also. Which ever she goes for, she should not be allowed to run loose.

For the pony race, ½ mile, we have nine to choose from, of whom Ophelia, Pekin, and First Guide are known as paperchasers. If what we hear of Country Girl is reliable, she should about win this, and Moonray and First Guide may be looked to to fill the situations. A warmish crowd are named for the opening handicap, True Blue, Red Pepper, Oom Paul, and Chummey, all being stated to be real jam. Writing before seeing the weights, it is impossible to make a selection, but unless weighted out, True Blue, Oom Paul, and Red Pepper should all run well.

Athletic Notes.

WHAT will, we fear, be almost the last of the Lawn Tennis matches for the present season, came off on Saturday last on the Calcutta Cricket Club ground, when that Club invited the Saturday Club to try conclusions. The tourney was played on the American principle, each couple of one side playing eleven games against each of the other couples in turn. Each Club was represented by 3 couples, and the match decided on the best of the 99 games played. The sides were very even and a most exciting match resulted, the Calcutta Cricket Club ultimately winning by the narrow margin of 3 games, as set forth in the details given elsewhere.

The Calcutta Cricket Club were represented by Messrs. Hechle and Allen, Preston and Hinds, Harvey and Danger, and the Saturday Club by Messrs. Jacksonand Grimley, Colville and Quin, and Bagshawe and Hill. In the first round Jackson and Grimley beat Preston and Hinds by 7 to 4, Bagshawe and Hill beat Harvey and Danger by 7 to 4, but Hechle and Allen scored 10 to 1 against Colville and Quin, giving the Calcutta Cricket Club a lead of 18 games to 15. In the second round, Preston and Hinds beat Colville and Quin by 9 to 2, but Hechle and Allen lost to Bagshawe and Hill at 3 to 8, and Harvey and Danger went down to Jackson and Grimley at 2 to 9, making the score 34 to 32 in favour of the Saturday Club. In the last round Hechle and Allen won by 8 to 3 from Jackson and Grimley. Preston and Hinds beat Bagshawe and Hill by 7 to 4 and Harvey and Danger lost to Colville and Quin by 4 to 7, making the total 51 games to the representatives of the Calcutta Cricket Club against 48 for the Saturday Club.

We hope next season to see a good many of these inter-club matches, as they are very interesting and do a lot to stimulate the game.

The International Golf Match, which brought the very successful Championship meeting at Muirfield to a termination, proved most exciting, and it came to the last putt of the last couple Messrs. G. F. Smith (England) and C. E. Dick (Scotland) before the Southerners could claim the victory, and even then Mr. Dick took three on the green. The feature of the play was the magnificent form shown by the new champion Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Hilton and their severe defeats of Mr. John Ball and Mr. Laidlay, respectively; the young Chiswick amateur, Mr. H. G. Castle, also played very finely and easily accounted for Mr. Robb. But why Scotland elected to play Mr. Norman Hunter, unless Mr. Edward Blackwell, Mr. John Law, Mr. A. R. Aitkin and many others, including his brother Mr. Mansfield Hunter, were all unable to play, comes as a great surprise. The ex-Cantab is certainly a strong player, but no less certainly one of the most erratic, and his downfall at the hands of Mr. W. H. Fowler, an enormously improved golfer, was only what might have been expected.

The English team for the International Professional Match in connection with the open Golf Championship at Kestwick has been selected and will be as follows:—Harry Vardon (Captain); J. H. Taylor, Tom Vardon, P. Rainford, Rowland Jones, E. Ray, T. G. Renouf, W. G. Toogood, A. Tingy, T. Williamson, J. Sherlock, and J. Row with Earnest Grey and G. H. Cawsey as reserves. This is a far stronger side than that chosen for Scotland as will be seen from an analysis of the names, but the whole match is apparently a misnomer, as we learn that Andrew Kinkaldy, Archie Simpson, and Willie Auchterlonie, three of her very best and very best-known professors, will not be allowed to represent Scotland because they do not belong to the new fangled Professional Golfers' Association. What a farce! Surely trades unionism will not be allowed to dominate sport in this manner. It would be far better not to have the match at all.

The sad death of Mr. P. G. Pearson, the well-known lawn tennis player, from enteric fever which was reported last week, will have caused much regret in Calcutta where he had made many friends during his short residence in India. Mr. Pearson, who was educated at St. Paul's School and Magdalen College, Oxford, was quite the best dark blue lawn tennis player of his year, and often distinguished himself at Wimbledon and the other big tournaments; he never appeared to get quite fit out here, and consequently never showed his best form, but he won the lawn tennis Championship of Bengal last year, when he had only been in the country a few months, and only succumbed in the final to Mr. Nelson Wright this year after a tremendous struggle. Mr. Pearson was only 25 years of age, and had been less than two years in India, and his sudden death has cut short a most promising career.

A lot of training is going on for the projected after-dinner walk from Barrackpore to Calcutta. The match is between representatives of Messrs. J. Thomas & Co. and Messrs. Birkmyre Bros., 6 aside, and no doubt all of them will go the distance. The date, as at present arranged, is the 11th July, and the course will be about sixteen miles. Mr. E. A. Smith will act as starter and time-keeper, and six well-known Calcutta Sportsmen have agreed to act as umpires.

Some members of the Calcutta Rowing Club have lately been prominent on the Thames. The London Rowing Club Trial Eights were decided on the 15th May, and in the Trial Eights from Chiswick Church to Putney Dummy, we find Mr. F. A. G. Medd rowing No. 2 in the winning boat, and from the reports in the Lock to Lock Times, his crew was a very good one. In the Club Eights, Hammersmith Bridge to Putney Dummy, Mr. C. V. Green rowed No. 6 in the boat that won. Messrs. J. B. Hoare and J. Graves have also been seen on the riverside.

Mr. Warre Cornish, son of the Vice-Provost of Eton, made an attempt to shoot Windsor Weir in a small Canadian canoe last month. Owing to all the sluices in the weir being up, there was a tremendous stream running, and the attempt was a very daring one. Mr. Cornish quietly paddled his canoe down the weir stream unaccompanied, and tried to guide it between the uprights of the weir, which are only about five feet apart. The canoe, however, struck one of the supports, and Mr. Cornish was thrown into the eddying waters. He had the utmost difficulty in keeping afloat, but fortunately he was able to clutch the uprights and hold on until the lock-keeper and other men appeared on the scene. After much difficulty, Mr. Cornish was dragged on to the weir in an exhausted state, and his canoe floated on down the river. His escape from drowning was a remarkable one. Many years ago Lieut. Watkin Williams Wynne of the Guards, lost his life in endeavouring to shoot the same weir when there was not nearly so strong a stream running. Happily, after the attempt, Mr. Cornish was able to leave for his home at Eton College.

A process whereby tanned pigskins can be used as a substitute for rubber for tyres has been invented by a Mr. John Muir, Leith, Scotland. He says that the pigskins so treated will wear longer than rubber.

The terrible list of casualties which occurred during the recent motor race from Paris to Madrid, which resulted in the authorities stopping the contest when Bordeaux was reached, may not improbably lead to the forced abandonment of the contest of a similar kind which is fixed to take place in Ireland during the month of July. For our part we shall rejoice if this is the outcome of the terrible affair in France, for to class the speed trials of these death-dealing engines as "sport" is surely stretching that much-abused word to its fullest extent. That there is a certain amount of enjoyment in rushing along the roads at lightning speed no one will deny who has had an opportunity of indulging in the experiment, but that any good purpose is served by such celerity is more than open to doubt. Now that it has been proved that there is danger to life and limb to be feared by the motorists themselves some check will doubtless be placed upon their actions, and assuredly the roads of Great Britain should never be allowed to form racecourses for those who indulge in this craze.

"Wag" Harding, the ex-champion sculler, has been stricken with brain affliction at Vienna. A meeting of gentlemen connected with the Thames side was held on the 22nd ultimo to decide what steps should be taken to help the unfortunate man and his wife and family who are left practically penniless. Enough money was raised at the meeting to meet Mrs. Harding's immediate wants, but the committee decided to issue collecting lists at on early date.

The Madras Hockey Tournament will commence on the 20th proximo, when the Challenge Cup, at present held by the 2nd Battery, Durham Light Infantry, will be offered for competition.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—With the break of the monsoon, which may occur at any time now, the Bombay football season will commence, and from what I hear I fancy our local association teams—or the chief of them—will be a little stronger than has been the case of recent years, and in this connexion I am glad to be able to say that there is every chance of the Gymkhana giving a better account of itself than for some years now. But, of course, much of this depends on whether or not all the men who have promised to turn out will keep their word. The annual meeting, held an evening or two since, was, I understand, attended by between twenty and thirty players, among them being quite a lot of men who will be making their first appearance in Bombay "soccer", but who have done well for other clubs both in India and at home. Mr. Lidderdale was elected Captain and Honorary Secretary, and no better choice could have been made, for he is a rattling good player, and, what is still more important, an enthusiastic devotee of the game. Turning to the Rovers, I understand that they have several promising new players, in addition to which they will still have the assistance of most of those who figured in the eleven of last year. The competition for the Harwood Challenge Cup, which has had no little share in rousing increased interest in the dribbling code in Bombay will be continued this year, and gives every promise of being as great a success as it was last year. In connexion with this competition, I understand that the committee have come to a decision which I have no doubt will commend itself to everybody, and that is that in league games every player shall be compelled to turn out in his club colours. In the past it has been no uncommon thing to see players of this or that team turning out wearing all the colours of the rainbow, which, naturally, has caused no little confusion to referee, players, and spectators alike. Then, of course, the Rovers' Tournament will be again held this year, and I have no doubt that it will be as equally successful as the tournaments of previous years. And in connexion with this I would once more put forward my suggestion as to the advisability of the civilian teams of Bombay being represented in the Tournament by a combined team, for it is only by doing this that they can hope to get anywhere near the final. Since I threw out this suggestion two or three weeks since I have had an opportunity of talking over the matter with two or three prominent civilian players, and all have expressed themselves in favour of some such step being taken.

By every mail the Honorary Secretaries of the scheme for sending a team of Native Indian Cricketers to England next year continue to receive encouraging letters from gentlemen connected with the leading English clubs, and given a good season I have not much doubt as to the success of the tour, Mr. F. E. Lacey, Secretary of the Marylebone Cricket Club and Ground, writes: "At a committee meeting held yesterday (18th May) I was directed to inform you that if an Indian team visits England next season, they will be prepared to offer it a welcome, and will give £100 towards its expenses if a match is played at Lord's." Then Mr. W. Alcock, Secretary of the Surrey County Club, has written promising to bring the matter before his committee, and adding, "I can only repeat my sincere interest in the trip, and add my desire to be of use to you in any way in my power, I am glad to hear that the M. C. C. have offered you a cordial welcome. I can promise you an equally hearty one at the Oval." The sum which is being subscribed in India towards the expenses of the team is of a fairly satisfactory nature, but I should like to see promises of substantial support coming in a little quicker than they have been up to the present. "Surely," as a writer pointed out a few days since, "there are many sportsmen amongst the Indian gentlemen who will contribute Rs. 1,000 each." An evening or two since I was speaking to a gentleman who is taking a very keen interest in the scheme, and he was of opinion that there need not be the slightest fear as regards the financial side of the question. At any rate, I hope this will be the case. There is one thing which I should like to point out, however, and that is in reference to the constitution of the committee who have the arrangements in hand. It is intended that the team shall be representative of the whole of India, but it will be noticed that the committee does not include anyone from outside the Bombay Presidency. I fancy this must have been an oversight. It is all very well to talk about Bombay wanting all the honour and glory, but the fact must not be lost sight of that subscriptions are being invited from all parts of the country, and that the team to go home is not one of the Bombay Presidency. Would it not have been policy to have invited a gentleman from Madras and another from Calcutta to accept a seat on the committee? Of course the committee may say, "if we had done this they would not have been able to attend the meetings." This may be true, but at the same time it would have gone some way towards enlisting interest from that side of India, and would have been a compliment which, I fancy, would have been appreciated by players in Bengal and Madras. Of course I don't want it to be understood that I am finding fault with the committee, but it is a matter which I have frequently heard referred to, and it is not yet too late to remedy the oversight, if such it was.

Sussex beat Yorkshire on the 10th instant by an innings and 180 runs, while the matches between Gloucester and Lancashire, and Essex and Derbyshire were drawn owing to rain. On Saturday last all matches were abandoned owing to rain.

One often hears of a batsman being out in two ways, but seldom in three. In the match between the M. C. C. (Victoria) and Western Australia, played in Perth, at Easter, Mr. Randell, one of the local team, expressed no dissatisfaction at the umpire's decision when he was given out. Fry sent down a ball to him, which he turned on to his wicket, dislodging the bails. A. E. Johns caught the ball before it touched the ground, and then the batsman fell over his wicket. He was thus out, bowled Fry, caught Johns bowled Fry, and hit wicket bowled Fry.

The report that a team from Yale College may compete with an Oxford and Cambridge team or one composed of Cambridge men alone is confirmed by Mr. Thomas, captain of the Yale track team. If the International games are arranged they will be held late in July.

Henley has lost an old landmark in the person of Captain H. W. Etheridge, Superintendent of the Thames, whom oarsmen, who rowed at Henley regatta some years since, will remember. Captain Etheridge was eighty years of age and was Superintendent of the Thames from 1858—1878.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—Apropos of a paragraph in the Indian Sporting Times which criticises my denial of the statement that H. H. the Maharajah of Mysore has granted Jayaram leave to stay in England for the purpose of playing in the Indian cricket team, I have a few words to say. That such leave will be granted is highly probable, and that the Committee of the Indian team have received official intimation that such leave has been sanctioned is most certainly not the case, although the Committee may have received a hint in this direction.

I am glad to note that the Indian Sporting Times is of opinion that the statement as to Jayaram's leave costing the State thousands of rupees is utter nonsense, for it appeared in a paper published not a thousand miles from the Indian Sporting Times' office. Everyone is quite aware that Jayaram is not considered to be on leave whilst pursuing his studies, but the I. S. T. is decidedly astray when it remarks that Jayaram is "entitled to furlough after several years of study." Everyone here is well aware that Jayaram has not the necessary service to be entitled to furlough, and personally I have the honour to know Jayaram very well. However it is highly probable that the leave will be granted. Indian papers have only been a bit "previous."

It is probable that a boxing competition open to the Madras army may take place during the Bangalore race-week in July. Mr. O. St. Michael Jones of the 6th Dragoon Guards is the moving spirit in the business, and more than one fight to a finish is likely to enliven the proceedings. As regards these latter, however, I am not at present at liberty to disclose names. I did hear, however, that one heavy weight was keen enough to desire "a twelve-foot ring and 2oz. gloves"!

General Notes.

THE State Ball at the Viceregal Lodge, Simla, arranged for the 29th June, has now been fixed for the 26th instant.

We regret to learn that Mr. P. B. Bramley, District Superintendent of Police, Benares, got a touch of the sun on Sunday, and has been compelled to go to Naini Tal, where he is at present in the Ramsay Hospital.

Railway collision took place on the 13th instant at Sukheke Station between Lyallpur and Wazirabad, between a local mixed train from the former place and a goods train. Four native passengers were killed, and ten seriously injured.

The ball given by the Knights of the Black Heart, at the Town Hall, Simla, on the 10th instant, was a great success. A large number of guests, including the Lieutenant-Governor and Lady Rivaz were present at the dinner which preceded the dance.

H. H. the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal leaves Darjeeling about the 15th July and after a short stay in Calcutta will go on tour to Behar. He will open the Behar-Bukhtiapur Light Railway and visit Hatwa. Berhampur and Dumka will probably be visited also.

We see the Niel-Frawley troupe, who twanged out their repertoire to the Calcutta public last season, have got to Melbourne, where they are to give their peculiar nasal renderings of their peculiar pieces. We note with surprise that Miss Susie Vaughan has joined them. From the Broughs to the Frawleys—poor Susie!

At a meeting of the Calcutta Light Horse, held at Head-quarters on the 12th instant, with Lieutenant-Colonel E. Henry presiding, the following officers were elected to complete the establishment: Lieutenant A. J. Pugh to be Captain, 2nd-Lieutenants T. Westmacott and G. Shorrock to be Lieutenants, Sergeants A. Pickford and Latham Hamilton to be 2nd-Lieutenants—good sportsmen all.

We are glad to see that Robert Clarke, who was tried on two charges of defaming Mr. F. W. Roberts, Executive Engineer, Burma Railways, has, after a trial lasting two and a half days, been sentenced. The prisoner was found guilty on the first charge by a majority of seven to two and sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment, and on the second charge by a majority of eight to one and sentenced to two years' simple imprisonment. And rightly too, there has been too much of this sort of thing in Burma lately.

The Photographic Society of India have just issued their salon prospectus. The salon will be held at the Club Rooms, 57, Park Street, Calcutta, from the 21st to 31st December 1903. There will be two sections. In section A the Society's gold medal will be awarded to the best collection of four photographs taken by one member. Section B embraces four classes for each of which medals will be awarded. The classes are Portraits, Landscapes, Instantaneous work and Lantern Slides. Intending exhibitors will find further details in the prospectus.

Between Sonepore and Banwarchak on the B. & N.-W. R a collision between a passenger and a goods train took place on the 12th instant. Several passengers were injured and were brought to Muzaffarpur where they are being attended to by Captain Cochrane, Civil Surgeon of Chapra. It is believed that there were no European passengers in the train. The accident is reported to be due to the native guard of the goods train securing a line clear unauthorisedly. The brakesman of the passenger train was killed, and the driver, a European, is said to have been injured.

A terrible disaster took place at the Yellannu Colliery, Secunderabad, on the 11th instant. The roof of one of the galleries collapsed entombing several hundred miners. Many managed to crawl out, severely injured. Later intelligence announces that though some two hundred odd people had been imprisoned all were rescued except about 5 or 6. The whole field is in a bad condition and sinking everywhere

Complete returns of those killed and injured have been issued. It appears that 384 persons in all were in the mine, at the time of the accident. The total casualties are:—Ten killed, nine injured, and five workmen remain to be accounted for, ten of those entombed being rescued the next day. The narrow escapes of large numbers were simply marvelous.

With great regret we heard of a sad accident on the 9th instant resulting in the death of Dr. N. S. Monnier, Personal Assistant to the Health Officer of Calcutta. While visiting Mr. Ford, a friend, residing in the Hazra Road, they went for a swim in a tank adjoining the house. After swimming about for some time Mr. Ford came out and suddenly hearing cries of "Ford, Ford" saw the doctor disappear under the water. Mr. Ford went to the rescue but it was useless. Dr. Monnier never rose again. Medical aid and the Suburban Police were called in, and the tank dragged. At last a professional diver was sent for from Kidderpore and at 3 A.M. he recovered the body which was removed to the residence of the deceased gentleman's brother. Dr. Monnier was thirty-five years old and had only been married three months. The greatest sympathy is felt for his widow, who was present when the accident took place.

London Week by Week.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Friday, 29th May 1903.

THE Coaching Club met at the Magazine on Saturday as by precedent bound, that being the Saturday before Derby day. There was a good muster of twenty-nine coaches, and as the women had put on their best clothes it was as pretty a meet as I have seen. Colonel Hall Walker, whose portrait and biography are in the June Baily's, was there as usual, with a nice team of very dark browns. Came also Mr. Albert Brassey with bays, Mr. Lindsay Hogg with liver chesnuts, Mr. Gerwyn Jones with black browns, Dr. Hastings with greys, Captain Hargreaves with browns and bays, Mr. W. H. Grenfell with browns and bays, and Mr. Colston who drove blacks. The club "processed" round the park as usual and a good many of the coaches took their parties down to Hurlingham to lunch.

Then was the Temple Flower Show upon an early day this week. Distinctly a function of the season is the Temple Flower Show: everybody who is anyone is sure to be there, and nobody who includes a barrister among his or her acquaintance need stay away. For this reason your scribe was not at the flower show, having done his devoirs thereat these many seasons past without fail: though it is always a pleasant function whose charms are qualified only by the stuffiness of the marquees, crammed with plants and people.

The "meet" of the Aero Club at Ranelagh on Saturday was a success and either that or the fine day or the Ladies' Driving competition or all three brought a very respectable crowd for the first time this season. The magnificent indifference of the polo ponies to the three apparitions in the persons of balloons on the ground, interested me; so also did the feelings of the passengers in the second balloon which got off badly and for as long as we could see it kept its car and contents swinging like a pendulum to the utter disordering, I fear, of the several interior economies of the contents. By the way the Driving Competitions produced what to me is a new obstacle and I venture to suggest a particularly good one. The competitors had, among other tests, to drive between a pair of posts against each of which rested a wheel: it was curious to see how skilful whips who made light of rows of pegs and the usual embarrassments came to grief at the wheels, only one competitor got through without displacing one of them.

I hear that the meeting in the Park on Saturday was one of the largest ever seen upon that stage of organised talk. There was a mile or two of brakes with bands and banners and citizens who, for all the earnestness ascribed to them, wore, I am told, an air of festivity, not to say frivolity. Monday's paper told me, and I daresay a goodly proportion of those earnest and enlightend demonstrators, that the demonstration was against the Government's Education Bill for London: a matter which leaves the calm of most of us unruffled.

Christie's, during the last days of last week, was rather more of a crush than the Academy. By reason of the exhibition of Mr. Reginald Vaile's famous collection of pictures, mostly French of the 18th century. The features of the collection were the "Boucher Panels," each about 124 inches by 71 inches, "Love's Offering," The Love Message, "The Fortune Teller," and "Evening": these were sold in one lot and the first bid was 8,000gs. A Paris dealer, Sedelmeyer by name, Agnew and Tooth, fought the battle out among them, Tooth holding out longest and paying 22,300gs. J. M. Wattier's portrait of the Comtesse de Newbourg and her daughter, signed and dated 1749, went for 4,500gs. Nearly all the Vaile pictures are familiar to the public through their frequent appearance at loan exhibitions. The 62 pictures were sold in three hours and realised a total of £58,529.

Pity the sorrows of that unhappy Bond Street dealer in works of art, to whom an aged lady from Worthing some ten days since, offered a shabby old picture for whatever trifle his Art Dealership might be graciously pleased to give her. It was a battered old canvas with ten big holes in it and the face of the lady portrayed was deplorably dirty; but it was a Gainsborough, and what were the mingled emotions of that dealer when the work he scornfully refused to buy at any price was caught up by Wertheimer at Christie's on Saturday for 9,000gs.! The modest old lady from Worthing had thought perhaps it was worth £5.

Be it far from a taxpayer to condemn the War Office for endeavours in the direction of economy, but is the country in a state of such destitution that it is imperative to sell blankets "that are worn out or otherwise inferior when that inferiority takes the shape of a filthy condition, soiled with blood, food etc.," (vide the letter of the Medical Officer of Health for the City of London to his confrère of Birmingham). At least one serious outbreak of typhoid or enteric has been traced to these "inferior" blankets which have been sent home from South African hospitals full of the bacilli of enteric. These second-hand blankets have, it appears, been sent all over the country to convey infection to households most likely to take advantage of the opportunity thrust upon them. The Military authorities burned, or cooked, £150,000 worth of tinned stores they did not want, not so long ago. One would imagine that officers of the R. A. M. C. might be trusted with the task of condemning blankets that had been used by enteric cases. Wonderful ways indeed are those of our priceless War Office.

Reuter, without doubt, has given you news of the Paris-Madrid Motor race. The competitors were unanimous in their complaints against the spectators who in their desire to view the race only got out of the way at the last moment and thus considerably impeded the progress of the cars. Inasmuch as the speed some cars attained was over 80 miles an hour the spectators certainly exhibited some lack of consideration for themselves. The amazing thing about the business is that the casualty roll is so brief. Imagine 212 high power locomotives started at intervals of one minute to race over one of the finest and smoothest roads in Europe. The whole race took place in the densest of dust fogs from start to finish: cars were passing and repassing one another at express train speed the whole journey: and the population on the road was "warned" to keep out of the way, in other words that the Route Nationale from Paris to Bordeaux could not be used by any but racing motorists for at least three hours and a half at any given point! My sympathies are entirely with the Municipal authorities at Bordeaux who declined to trust the motors that did arrive to use their own power in that city: the cars had to be drawn out of the city limits by horse or cattle.

Naturally the tale of disaster has drawn attention to the possibilities hovering over the Gordon-Bennett Cup Race in Ireland next July. Somebody has hurried into print to say that the circumstances of the Irish race will be quite different: only twelve cars are to compete and these will start at longer intervals: seven thousand police soldiers and Club Stewards are to keep the 93-mile course. In fact every precaution has been taken to prevent accident even to the motorists themselves; but it is noteworthy that public apprehension is aroused wholly on behalf of those who mote not neither do they spin at express train rates along public roads. The Hon' John Scott Montague contributed a plaintively silly letter to Wednesday's Times. He thinks that the "feeling aroused over the casualties in the Paris-Madrid race is somewhat unreasonable." Mr. Scott Montague has misapprehended the trend of public feeling; it does not much object to motorists killing themselves, but to motorists killing other people on the public highways.

Much Ado About Nothing took the boards of the Imperial on Saturday and is likely to make a longer stay thereon than the Vikings. My recollections of Miss Terry's Beatrice at the Lyceum in byegone days was a bit misty I fear, but Anno Domini notwithstanding the Beatrice of the Imperial revival recalled it vividly: whence you will correctly infer that Miss Terry has lost nothing of the charm of frankness and roguishness that made her Beatrice one of her best creations. Mr. Oscar Asche was a more than satisfactory Benedick; but among the men Mr. Norman Forbes' Dagberry most appealled to me: he made the man a pompous blockhead whose verbal ineptitudes are merely and naturally incidental to his sterling stupidity; and the house recognised cordially the merit of an uncommonly clever performance.

By the way did men in Elizabethan times ever wear their hair cropped short as at the present day? If this innovation was due to failure of the wigmaker to come up to time, we will forgive it; but if Miss Terry intends to run much Ado without bewigged heads I hope she will think better of it. The scenery was a great score for Mr. Gordon Craig. The Church in Act III was a stroke of genius; by clever manipulation of lights from above very simple stage accessories are made to convey a singularly vivid and convincing sense of the space which is the predominant characteristic of a church. It was wonderfully well done, and Lyceum traditions as regards staging are potent at the Imperial, it is clear.

Caste has been revived at the Criterion for a week. Miss Marie Tempest was Polly and right well the part fitted her; but by general consent honours go to Miss Kate Rorke for her Esther. I have seen Caste often enough in all conscience; and though my liking for the piece has always been qualified by a consciousness of the future which St. John Hankin put into one of his "Dramatic Suquels" in Punch a few years ago, I never enjoyed the play more than at the Cri. on Tuesday, thanks largely to Miss Rorke's tenderness and sympathy as Esther. Mr. Dawson Milward created a Captain Hawtree of his own and excellently truthful to the chosen type it was. Old Eccles was a besotted lout and nothing else; he had none of the subtleness of the Eccles of Mr. Hare who showed long ago what could be done with that rather thankless part.

There is a lively agitation afoot concerning the propriety of allowing children to "go on" at hours when children ought to be in bed. The agitation I rather think is largely promoted by the Exeter Hall faction which regards the stage-door as rather worse than the gates of the Inferno and whose exalted sense of morality is offended by the bare notion of going inside a theatre. These would have child parts forbidden altogether, regardless of the detail that early apprenticeship to the stage often means a decent livelihood. A good idea has been put forward, that licenses for children should be granted, not as now to individual children, but to the managers who employ them. If it be desired to ensure the good treatment of the youngsters, surely that is the best way to ensure it: but judging by the keenness of children to go on, any safeguards in that direction do not seem at all necessary.

Uneasy lies the head that wears the responsibility of issuing, and advertising, an Encyclopædia Britannica. In Tuesday's Times is a declaration for which I had been looking these many days, stimulated to expectancy by the articles which have been appearing in the Financial News. Those articles averred that the Encyclopædia Britannica was the product of an American book syndicate of pushing character, and that the Times has merely lent its name to the enterprise. Whereto the Times' declaration of Tuesday makes a series of counter-statements which tell us that its great self took all responsibility, but it is said that some malcontent is bringing an action against the Times to recover the price of a copy of the Encyclopædia Britannica on the plea that the Great Work was sold under false pretences. We shall know more of this matter in due time no doubt.

Paul Blouët, otherwise Max O'Rell, died on Saturday in Paris, and a source of gaiety to nations is dried. He was a Breton by birth, but a Britisher by adoption, for during 30 years his home was in this country. For eight years he was French master at St. Paul's School, but "John Bull and his Island" in 1884 showed his true metier and the school desk knew him no more. The highest tribute to the good humour of his satirical humour was the popularity of his books in England (his wife, an Englishwoman, did all the translations, by the way) He often hit us hard, but the geniality of the man was magnetic and he might say pretty much what he pleased, so his spirit shone through him. He was one of the best lecturers I ever heard and I believe he was equally good as an after-dinner speaker, but I never had the luck to hear him in this capacity. It is to be feared that his amusing books will not live, they were a bit too superficial.

It was pretty well known that Mr. F. G. Curzon would not defend the divorce suit Miss Ellis Jeffreys (to use the lady's stage name) was to bring against him: hence they that fatten on "West End scandals" were baulked of what they no doubt thought would be a banquet. Enough was proved to obtain the decree desired: the pair had been separated by mutual consent for over a year, but the separation only afforded opportunity for fresh trouble: the upshot of the brief trial on Thursday should have the not rare merit of satisfying both parties.

ONLOOKER.

It is not a very rare case that horses who are only supposed to be sprinters have proved themselves to excel over a distance of ground, and, vice versâ, horses who were thought to be stayers only, and not possessed of much speed, have finally made their name on the T. Y. C. Similar popular opinions have often been found wrong.

When Pearl Diver ran in the Grand National it was prophesied that if he landed on the flat anywhere near the leaders he must win, as he had shown such good speed when engaged in the legitimate business. As a matter of of fact, he did jump first on the course, and was then beaten by The Lamb, whose forte was supposed to be galloping over ploughed fields.

That over-estimated colt Sir Joseph had very shelly feet, and "Teddy" Weaver had a standing complaint that whenever an engagement was made for the horse the ground proved as hard as adamant, and he had no earthly chance of winning. The day he ran in the Royal Hunt Cup was a pouring wet one, and the stable thought that their time had come, and that they had a fair "pinch." The result was as on previous occasions—that the horse was easily beaten.

Perhaps, however, the most striking intance of a case of this sort was in connection with Macaroni. Many years ago, it was an article of faith with racing men that "the Sweetmeats liked to hear their feet rattle." So thoroughly was this believed in that when a torrent of rain fell at Epsom Downs on the Derby Day of 1863, converting the course into a quagmire, Macaroni, who had been an equal favourite with Lord Clifden at 5 to 1, receded to double the odds, and at the start was not even third favourite. Strange to say, Lord Clifden blundered in the heavy going, and Macaroni beat him by a head, the pet theory in connection with the Sweetmeat blood thus taking the knock.

SERVICE AND SPORT ON THE TROPICAL NILE.*

CAPTAIN SYKES was one of the officers who were sent to Uganda to take part in the work of quelling the Soudanese mutiny, and, despite its title, we opened his book with some qualms, anticipating yet another painstaking account of a difficult and troublesome business which, so far as he who reads for amusement is concerned, has already found chroniclers numerous enough. Our apprehensions on that score have been quickly and very pleasantly dispelled. We hear little about the mutiny and high politics; the author devotes himself to such matters as came under his own eyes in the daily routine of his work, and his good spirits, lively humour, and observation of native character, found a fruitful source of entertainment for himself and for us in the every-day incidents of African life. It is not a connected narrative, but in the author's own words "events do not occur in any particular order, nor are one's ideas connected in regular sequence. I have written them down as they occurred." To this light-hearted treatment the book owes much of its undoubted merit. Captain Sykes has no illusions about the negro races, and sums them up with a good deal of shrewdness. Few African races, he remarks, show much advance upon their ancestors since the time of Adam; the conditions of their existence render it unnecessary for them to think, and he is clearly of opinion that the mental process with the negro is at a very elementary stage indeed. Nevertheless he speaks with affection of the Soudanese he commanded and got on swimmingly with the tribes with whom he was brought in contact: and we may fairly attribute his success to the sound, good sense which taught him understanding of an animal race and the indulgence, tempered with firmness, wherewith he treated them.

Captain Sykes obtained little sport in Uganda and on his way thither the circumstances of his duty in the country indicated speed; and not until he embarked upon the Nile and his task of establishing stations thereon had he or his companions much opportunity to use the rifle save on hippos and crocodiles. The slaughter of a hippo was an event productive of less satisfaction to the sportsman than his native following, as the taste of these religious is for meat in a very advanced stage of "highness" and the orgies which followed the death of a hippo showed the savage at his lowest. Apaddu, just above the Duffields Falls, the spot which Baker regarded as the future centre of Africa, appears to be no bad place for the sportsman. If the game had ever been disturbed it must have been long before Captain Sykes' party created a settlement; for when the work of clearing was in hand "occasionally one would hear shouts and yells from the hewers and some bush buck or reed buck or small gazelle would come dashing through the busy throng, not knowing where it was going." At first the antelopes, attracted by curiosity, "were tempted to come and look on" at the work. Elephants and rhino were numerous, giraffe were occasionally seen, eland, haartebrest, cobus and numbers of smaller antelopes were very common. One of the best things in the way of sporting reminiscences is the author's frank analysis of his feelings when for the first time in the presence of elephants. There were three—two cows and a young bull, and Captain Sykes had only a ·303 with him, a good weapon, but not one with which inexperience could with a light heart face elephants:—

> "As I crouched behind a tree and gazed up at him I thought how easily he could uproot it and trample me to death. Visions of six dead men, which one elephant had recently mangled to death, began to rise up before me. I found myself trembling from head to foot—whether from excitement or fear, or both, I know not. Probably it was fear! When I was within ten paces of the monster, I lay down and took a steady aim at the vital spot in his heart marked in a diagram in my mind's eye. For a moment I wondered if I dared to fire: I was still safe and could have walked away unharmed. For very shame I could not do that. My brave Bazruta was by my side weapon in hand and I steadied myself for one of the supreme moments of my life."

He took his chance and got his elephant: and has "since learned by better experience how colossal his ignorance was." His next adventure with elephants was a much more serious affair: he and Bazruta stalked with in ten yards of a herd of forty or fifty, wounded one in a fashion we need not criticise, and following the herd up wounded another. This brought a charge in which the whole crowd joined and hunted the flying sportsman and his followers right up to the caravan, when the gleam of the escorts' presented rifles or the crowd of humanity turned them. The book is brightly and pleasantly written. Whether he writes of native character, of boots, butterflies, sport, dances or food, the author is always alert and amusing: there is not a dull page from cover to cover. A few tolerable illustrations are given.

* Service and Sport on the Tropical Nile, By Captain C. A. Sykes. Murray.

It is related, on what is generally considered pretty good authority, that when poor George Fordham won the Goodwood Stakes of 1870 on Paganini he only received from the horse's owner, the late Ned Smith, the sum of five pounds. However this may be, certain it is that later on "the Demon" had an opportunity of avenging himself on his parsimonious patron, which he did not neglect to seize.

In the following year Fordham had the mount on Idus in Newmarket Handicap, Snowden riding Paganini. A short distance from home, Fordham saw that it would be a desperately near thing between them and, indeed, could not disguise from himself that, if anything, Snowden's mount was actually going the better of the two; so, without looking at Snowden, he said, "Jem, I'll save five pounds with you!

Snowden, desiring to see how the chances stood, looked to ascertain how Idus was going, as Fordham had thought he would, for that was his artful plan to distract his dangerous rival's attention for a moment. Seizing the second, Fordham got first run, and won by a short head. Riding back into the saddling enclosure at the top of the town, the victorious jockey saw Mr. Smith looking anything but pleased, and maliciously determined to vex him still more; so, leaning down to the boy who was leading Idus in, he said in a whisper, loud enough for Smith to hear, "Look sharp; I think I'm a bit short of weight."

The bait took. Mr. Smith—hopes of winning yet by the disqualification of Idus flashing through his mind—rushed frantically into the weighing-room to watch with keen and eager eyes the process of weighing in. There he saw Fordham passed all right at the scale, as of course he knew he would be, and as he got out of the chair and passed Mr. Smith, the jockey said, with a smile on his face—"Quits."

JOTTINGS FROM JUNGLYPORE.

I.

VERY warm just now at Junglypore. We have lately invested in a new self-registering thermometer. We simply couldn't believe the old one. It used to exasperate everybody by saying "only 105°" on the very infernallest of infernal days. The new one has soothed us: it weighed in with 114°, and shortly after gratified its owners by putting up the satisfactory score of 119½°, the which appeased mightily. It is something after all to think that you are getting it worse than the great majority of suffering exiles! Indeed one has known men fight savagely, in each upholding the claim of his particular station to being the hottest in India!

* * * * * *

The jungles are pretty open and bare at present. The few brilliantly green trees that appear in fresh foliage—bless them—at this all-parched season, only seem to accentuate the wilderness of whitish grass and bare stems. By day the blackened expanses, by night the curving lines of creeping red, show that the jungle fires are at work fertilising the soil on hill sides that shall spring out softly green at the earliest fall of rain. Khubbar is rather scarce this year—at least from the lower hills close by. A prowling leopard or two; now and then news of a phantom bear: oftener still of a sambar, the latter practically useless, as few stags are to be found in horn just now—although there are the exceptions to prove the rule.

* * * * * *

It is really too hot at this time of year (we have been here a very long time, and are getting "fed-up") to enjoy a morning's ride or walk after antelope or chinkara. By 8 A.M. the sun is fierce, and the haze-laden fiery wind has been up and doing since a still earlier hour. But there are tigers not so far away! A man-eater among them too. The last we heard of the latter was when a party of cartmen was passing along a lonely road in the forest depths. The tiger appeared over a hill above them, and, bounding lightly on to the road, hunted his human prey round the carts, behind the bullocks—of which he took not the slightest notice. Picking out one poor fellow, he retired up hill with the body. This tiger is one of those that, so common in these parts, do not stick to an entirely human diet, and is therefore somewhat difficult to locate. It will not no be long before some one is after him.

* * * * * *

We have had a little pigsticking lately. Pig appear to be recovering from the effects of the famine years, and, given a year or two more of fairly fat seasons, we shall have them all back again in their ancient and familiar haunts—however the old coverts are sadly thinned.

Within the last two months or so our little local and informal Tent Club has accounted for some nine or ten pig, mostly smallish ones, as it is not often that the really big boars from the surrounding jungly hills forget themselves so far as to linger in covert on the plains. Nearly all these pig died fighting as a pig should; and horses have been cut, one of them somewhat severely. The best boars measured 33 and 34 inches respectively.

* * * * * *

This year the shooting season has already been productive of mishaps: and the last one reported, the sad case of poor Rogers in the Chanda district, is more than usually distressing. We read that he "boldly walked up" the wounded tiger. In the absence of detailed information it would be as inadvisable as superfluous to comment on the poor fellow's method of dealing with that grim potential agent of death, a wounded feline.

On 1st May of last year one of our present number at Junglypore was the victim of an accident in the jungle, which resulted in his being carried to Rogers's house, where, as he will never forget, he was received and nursed with the greatest kindness. Indeed it is probable that he owes his life to the prompt despatch of medical attendance which met him while still far distant from that little civil station in which he found such a friend in need.

At that time invalid and host found many a subject of common interest, and, in the course of an unusually sympathetic intercourse, their exchange of ideas indicated clearly that he who has now fallen a victim, on another fatal May day, to that chance which follows on all human undertakings, was a man of clear and cool-headed sense, experienced in the pursuit of big game, and the last to run a foolhardy risk. Here again, too, it would be difficult even to insinuate on the part of those who have lately been rushing to ill-founded conclusions in print that the weapon used by the ill-fated sportsman was to blame for the sad accident. That both the shots fired at the charging tiger were directed with an admirable coolness is evident from the fact that they struck what was undoubtedly the centre of the mark, breaking both of the brute's jaws as he came on. It is questionable whether any kind of firearm would have done more than the ·450 cordite rifle then did. The whole unhappy episode appears to have been one of those which occasionally bring home to us that "nothing is certain," and as such it has to be sorrowfully engraved on the tablets of the mind.

* * * * * *

So much tiger-shooting is now-a-days carried out without the use of the trained elephant, that men who have to content themselves with the pursuit of the big cats nominally "on foot" are often perplexed with the question of what is to be done in the case of a wounded beast.

Let us take the commoner form of tiger-shooting prevalent over the larger part of India—that of beating with a gang of men afoot and "stops" in trees, while the rifle, for a variety of good reasons, occupies a commanding position above the surface of the ground. A tiger or panther appears, is fired at, and wounded—perhaps mortally, perhaps slightly, it is difficult on many occasions to tell which—and the beast then passes from the view of sportsman or of "stops" into ground which cannot well be searched from trees, high banks, or other points of vantage and view What is to be done?

In many cases, confident in an experience of animals previously followed up and disposed of without accident, the sportsman may elect to wait what he considers a sufficient time, and then, very cautiously, proceed to look for the dead or disabled creature. But the element of chance is an ever-present factor. This may be the only but very occasion on which the beast elects to go for his pursuer; and out he comes in that utterly astonishing manner.

He may be stopped by a fortunate shot; in which case it is to be feared that the shikari will become dangerously confident on the next occasion. He may make good his attack; and then the hunter, his friends—or both—will gain a dearly-bought warning.

It is practically impossible, in view of the varied character of different situations to advise, even in apparently clear cases, any particular line of action. If the ground be suitable, the services of a herd of domestic buffaloes may be usefully employed, in the way of which most of us are aware. Should the cover consist of not too long grass, covering rideable ground, it may be possible to search it at a fast pace on horseback; a method which has before now been successfully employed. The covert may also be fired. And there are other plans.

But as a rule, unless indeed the sportsman or his men are indifferent to their safety, or as a rescue, it is surely no sane man's business to fruitlessly offer human life as a very possible sacrifice to a beast which is intent on his destruction, and has a double power of dealing death in its septic fangs and claws.

There appears to be a fairly widely distributed idea that a wounded tiger, abandoned by the sportsman, will develop, in the case of its escaping death, into a terrible scourge of the country side; but this is certainly contrary to most experience. Being what they are, a comparatively slight wound will often bring felines to their death; and, if they should recover, it is more likely than not that such creatures will display greater caution than before.

At any rate, working by the law of averages, and endeavouring to avoid that arch-enemy Theory, it is far more likely that infinitely greater evil will be caused by the following up of a wounded animal than by its judicious abandonment.

As to the moral view to be taken of what has been given above, it seems fairly obvious that any fool can follow hot foot on the track of a dangerous brute, but that it usually takes a wise man all his time and courage to decide when to leave it.

We are an argumentative lot at Junglypore; so next time I write you I may be able to impart our humble ideas on the very burning question of weapons.

DHAK.

INCIDENTS OF IBEX SHOOTING.

Several considerations had led to my pitching my tent in a nalah near Kargil instead of going further into Baltistan. Expense, time, and a doubt as to my ability to put up with the cold and loneliness, were the three principal ones. I think I found about as distressful a spot as exists in that dreary country—great sheer walls of rock shut in my nalah on either hand: it was like being at the bottom of a well. A dirty little stream wandered noisily along the rocky bottom of the ravine, disappearing at intervals beneath huge snow-drifts. The stunted birch trees and snow bent bushes were naked and budless, exhibiting no signs of coming spring, although it was the middle of May.

A side nalah joined the main one close to where my tent was pitched, and about three or four miles up this smaller ravine, the rock walls gave place to shale slopes, with here and there what my shikari called a maidan. These maidans were slopes rather less steep than the usual shale ones, on which a certain amount of rough vegetation managed to flourish. These proved to be the grazing grounds of a large herd of ibex. I think there were only three good bucks among the lot. One had a very fine head, forty two and-a half inches round the curve; in fact quite an an uncommon trophy to find so comparatively near Srinagar. The other two were very far behind only about thirtyfives, and there were four or five more running from thirty to thirty-three. My second day in the nalah I was lucky enough to find four of the bucks and one or two does away from the rest of the herd. The big one was among the four. I made by stalk to find two bucks in view, perhaps a hundred and sixty yards off with their tails towards me I could not for the life of me tell which was the big fellow and shot the wrong one, a thirty-two incher; but my luck was good that day: I missed the big one as he galloped off, but got him as he topped a ridge of rocks two hundred and fifty yards off. He fell with a terrific crash some fifty or sixty feet and then rolled headlong down a steep shale slope, without even damaging the tips of his fine horns.

For several days after this the herd quitted the slopes of the side nalah, and we could not find where they had gone.

I tried various other places and found three more herds, but there were no good heads among them. I hoped, however, that the first lot would eventually come back, as I knew there were still a couple of decent heads. One evening we went up the little nalah and there high above us, on a very steep slope, was the herd feeding; at that particular part of the nalah there were steep, shale slopes between rocky ridges. Putting one of the rock ridges between us and the game, we started on a most heartbreaking climb. Eventually we got just above where we thought the herd was. A clamber over the rocks and a peep over the edge revealed a young buck with a deformed horn standing on a ridge, still well above us doing chowkidar. I wormed back and disappeared, and then started climbing to get above the sentry. Then on trying to get up and look over I found the ridge was so precipitous that I could not climb up. Eventually we found a place which looked possible, and the shikari scrambled up somehow, when I handed up my rifle, and then with his help got up too. All this made a good deal of noise, and when I looked over the edge, I found three or four does staring at me only sixty yards off. Moreover they had evidently heard us sometime before and had gone up the shale slope, so as to be almost level with me as I looked over. I knew there was no time to be lost and this hurried me. I glanced over the scattered herd and saw two bucks close together, about a hundred and twenty yards off. Of course all their heads were turned towards me, and I could only see that the horns of one of these had a good curl to them, and that he seemed to be the best in sight. I quickly covered him, and sent a Mannlicher bullet through his heart. At the shot my shikari jumped up with my field glasses to his eyes, and, as the ibex scattered hither and thither, exclaimed I had shot the wrong one, and pointed to two animals going off—one up the hill and the other parallel to it. I lost no time in getting the Mannlicher on to the ibex making up the hill. I missed him two or three times, when he stopped to look back, being then about three hundred yards off. This gave me a chance of a steady shot and the bullet got him fair in the body extinguishing him instantly. I then had a shot or two at the other one, and as near as possible got him too. Taking the 300 yards sight full I put a bullet just over his back. The ibex I had killed smashed the points of both horns in falling: he had a thirty-five inch head, very thick, though not long. I was most incredulous as to having shot a small one, so went down the shale slope some distance to where the animal I first killed had rolled. To my utter disgust he proved to be a thirty-one; and it was only some days later, when I had arranged the horns in a line and looked at them from about forty yards off, that I realized how excusable the mistake was. The chota shikari and tiffin cooly were sent up to bring away the head of the thirty-five incher, while the shikari rolled the small one down a shale shoot, and I sat down to wipe out my rifle.

The place where I was sitting was a tiny flattened ledge between two steep shale shoots. Suddenly I heard a rumble, and looking upwards saw in the distance a cloud of dust: this was followed by stones coming down both shoots. Presently there was a roar and a regular avalanche seemed to be descending towards me. I hurriedly crept upwards a few yards and took shelter under a sort of hump in the slight ridge between the two shoots. I was only just in time: one huge stone just grazed my back, while another missed my head by a foot. Both were whizzing like rockets with the velocity they had attained in their long flight. The chota shikari who was a big heavy man (quite belying his name) had dislodged some stones while crossing the slope far above us—a piece of carelessness that might have had disastrous consequences. The shikari, who was lower down the slope, was luckily near some rocks, which he used as a refuge. A word as to the rifle I have been using. It is a late investment, a Shoenhauer Mannlicher, the weapon spoken of so highly by Baillie Grohman. It differs from ordinary Mannlichers, in that the whole of the barrel and action lifts out of the stock, so that the rifle will pack into an ordinary gun case. The Cartridges are rimless like the Mauser-ones: while the magazine is a revolving one closed at the bottom, so that there is no fear of earth or sand getting into the mechanism when one is shooting from the prone position. The accuracy and killing power leave nothing to be desired. Four out of five ibex I have shot with it were killed instantly; the fifth was wounded in the leg, and had to be given another shot. There are two kinds of bullets—the ordinary soft nose, and the soft nose, split case. These latter have three small slits in the front of the envelope, as well as having the soft point; the former go through an ibex making a large wound of exit. I have only killed one ibex with the split bullet and that did not go through—

THE NILGIRI GAME ASSOCIATION.

A correspondent writing from Ootacamund says:—

The Collector, Mr. Mullaly, having decided to close the district to Ibex shooting for a further period, I wonder whether the members of the Game Association will appeal to Government against the decision of the Collector, as they said they would, and failing to obtain the redress from the Government, to resign in a body. Such an appeal must prove futile, inasmuch as there is abundant proof existing in the Government archives to show that Mr. Mullaly is acting within the orders of Government, and also in accordance with precedent established by his predecessors, and I endorse the opinion of many that if the members carry out their threat they will adopt a suicidal policy. Whether the Association continues to exist or not is a matter of really no importance, for they are simply advisers, and their refusal to accept the condition which must arise in all business based upon advice, whether wrong or right, of such advice being at times rejected is in itself a sufficient reason to justify summary dissolution. Such a course I am of opinion will hardly be adopted, either by the President or the Government. The rules of the Association show that it has only a permissive existence, and can therefore be dispensed with at any moment. No doubt being a body of experienced sportsmen its advice is at all times desirable, but to directly or indirectly lead it to suppose that it is infallible, and can adopt a policy of restraint when what it advises cannot be carried out, will prove a great mistake and work mischief at some future date, when the conditions for disregarding its advice are not so justifiable as they are on the present occasion. What I ask is, whether it is in the interests of order and for the benefit of the local community, sporting or otherwise, is not material to the argument, that responsible officers of Government should be coerced and prevented from conducting their own affairs in their own way. Of course it must be conceded that every public or quasi-public body has a right to remonstrate, to petition higher authority, to assemble and make known their wishes and wants: but one cannot approve of an attitude of sulking and threatening, however abortive, in case remonstrance is disregarded, petition rejected or wants and wishes ungratified.

Some of the speakers at the last special meeting of the Game Association contended, they said for a principle, and a more important administrative principle is involved here, namely that which cannot tolerate the legal and official status of the District Collector and the District Forest Officer being menaced. As local representatives of Government they are simply wheels within wheels, and when quite willing to accept the steering of the members of the Game Association when safe, they certainly are well within their rights and entitled to support, when they take charge of the rudder believing that other guidance is risky. It is going too far for the members of the Game Association to say they know everything about game and game protection. They believe they do, but they must not claim to override the combined wisdom and experience of the Government, the President and his expert adviser, the Honorary Secretary. In this particular instance Messrs. Mullaly and Hadfield showed their ability to urge their views in public meeting and in print, but the course proposed in the alternative is as objectionable as, we believe, it will be unsuccessful, and it would be better that the members take their medicine even though it be with a wry face. By adopting the ill-advised course the Association is in danger of losing the influence accumulated through long years of good advisory service, while submissiveness may enable it to recover that influence in the future that it exercised in the past as shown by its own admission. Its members will advise, the Association will pass, and its Honorary Secretary will carry out, as heretofore, such measures of protection or destruction as may be necessary.

Thus things have gone on since 1879; and may go on in future. A few years hence there will be two holes in the board that will be filled by new figures, and the old condiality be restored. If, on the other hand, in its temper it will not permit any one to stand in its way it wishes to run its own course, and seek to be accountable to nobody, the sooner it extinguishes itself, as it threatens to do, the better for all concerned and for game.

NESTOR.

"A.H.B.," of Ascot, sends to the Globe some very fair specimens of "Howlers" perpetrated by Board School children and collected by a Board Schoolmaster. On the nature of gases, "An oxygen has eight sides." In natural history, "A cuckoo is a bird which does not lay its own eggs"; "a mosquito is a child of black and white parents"; and "a blizzard is the inside of a fowl." In geographical study we get the following: "The equator is a managerie lion running round the earth and through Africa"; "a meridian is the place where they keep the time"; and "the inhabitants of Paris are called Parisites." Among answers we have heard before is that of the child who declares "Izaak Walton was such a good fisherman, that he was called the Judicious Hooker."

If the Americans cannot find a horse good enough to carry off our Derby, they are pretty strong in the matter of jockeyship. For three successive years Blue Riband winners have been steered by American riders. Still this is a bit discouraging to native talent, which, so far, has not been strikingly developed by the apprentice allowance introduced for the purpose of encouraging the young idea. There has, however, not been much time for development. The embryo Archers and Fordhams may be on the way.

A TRIP TO THE TORSA RIVER.

ON 14th March 1903 I left Calcutta for a short trip to the Jaldaka river. Following the advice of friends who had not much acquaintance with that part I travelled by the Darjeeling mail. The train was rather crowded, that is with ladies, so one was put into my compartment, a thing I don't usually care about, but in this case my fair companion was of attractive appearance and engaging manners, and we had a most interesting discussion regarding her travels. It appeared that she was touring round the world, and had been through America, Japan, and China, which it had also been my fortune to see and this was her first appearance in India as well as her first journey on an Indian railway. At Sara Ghat I got on to the steamer and thence travelled to Jalpaiguri, which was reached about dawn. Descending on to the platform, I drank a villainous mixture supposed to be coffee and while doing so an individual came up and enquired of me if the 32nd Pioneers had passed, as he had a relative in them, and they were on the move to Silliguri, accounting for his question at the same time by saying that he had been in the jungles for three months, and only just returned. I then went to the Dâk Bungalow and got chota hazri. After walking a mile further I arrived on the banks of the Teesta and found the steam ferry lying in a small pool of water without steam up. Accordingly I toiled across at least another mile along the sandy bed of the river, till I reached the main stream where I was poled across in a ferry boat. The water was discoloured and intensely cold, snow water was coming down. Crossing the river I found a train with a dining car attached waiting, and also learnt that had I come by Parbatipur and Lalmanir Junction I should have reached the place where I was now in the same time, and without the unpleasant trudge across the sands of the Teesta. I then took train to Chalsa Road. Arrived there, for regular trains ran no further, I got out and told the station master I wanted to march to—— Forest Bungalow. He said he had never heard of it; one or two planters who arrived on the platform about this time stated the same Then the Commissioner of the District appeared and on my asking him if he knew of it said that he didn't. He then produced his map, and after some discussion, knowing that the bungalow was on or near the Jaldaka, arranged with the station master for me to go on by the next ballast train to a bridge 3 miles further on across a tributary of the Jaldaka, which he said would be nearer to my destination in any case: so on I went as far as the bridge.

Arrived there a railway baboo appeared with coolies from some huts close by, unloaded my baggage and I prepared to start "Where are they to take your baggage, Sir," enquired the baboo. To——Forest Bungalow was my reply. The baboo looked thoughtful for a moment, then said he had never heard of it. This was pleasant. There was forest all round for miles, and I hadn't the least idea whether the bungalow lay up or down the river, and about one hour remained before sunset. Relying on a bungalow, I had brought no tents, otherwise I would have camped where I was. Luckily a brilliant idea occurred to the baboo. He told me that 3 miles further on, on the line was the District Railway Engineer's bungalow, that he knew all the places all round, would put me up for the night and show me the road next day. So my baggage was put back in the train and I resumed my journey. The train stopped at Nagrakata Station, where I left my baggage and went up the hill to interview the District Railway Engineer. I explained the situation to him, and soon found myself comfortably housed as his guest. An intelligent man was sent off to search for the bungalow who returned after three days, saying it couldn't be found!

For the next two days I fished the Jaldaka river, distant about ½ mile with fly and spoon. The water was low clear and I got nothing, though I had a couple of short runs in pools above the bridge with dead bait, the fish getting off, others fished entirely with a fly with rather better results. I now learnt that the railway line was open for ballast trains to within 6 miles of Madari Hât, a village on the banks of the Torsa, so I started for the rail head, distant 20 miles, but the train was slow, excessively so, and I realised after starting that my stores and cooking pots which were to follow on by the next train from Nagrakata might not reach me for several days as the ballast train frequently occupied that time over the journey. Luckily there was a saloon attached to the train after some hours, containing telegraph officials who very kindly gave me dinner and chota hazri the next morning. Finally after various movements which occupied two days, during which I stopped at a planter's bangalow 8 miles off, where we had a shoot at small game I found myself on the banks of the Torsa at Madari Hât on the 20th in company with another engineer. I put up at the Engineer's bungalow, and as my stores had not arrived, lived during that and the following day on the contents of my tiffin basket and that of the Engineer which he had kindly left for me. In the afternoon I got four small fish, aggregating about 2lbs. on a small fly and a 3-lb fish on a 1¾-inch spoon, all silvered. There was a market held at Madari that day, where I bought eggs, chickens, and vegetables sufficient for two or three days, also some villainous tea.

Messrs. STANLEY OAKES & Co.

On the morning of the 24th I issued forth and getting a dugout with a scratch crew I started to fish with a two inch spoon : the fish would not take. In the meantime clouds were gathering and a storm began to work up the river bed. I kept steadily spinning away. While I was doing so, the wind, which had gradually risen, blew very hard and a few big drops of rain fell. The fish began to take ; I hooked one every cast. They were taking the spoon with the greatest force and time after time I found my hooks torn off, twisted, or broken. I had a few short runs, but I did not succeed in landing a single one. Then the rain came down in torrents, and I made for the village for shelter. After some hours the storm cleared off and the sun shone out again, so I went down to the river once more with the scratch crew. Intending to cross the pool to the further bank they dragged the boat up in the shallow still water on the near side as far as it would go by the side of the heavy run that entered the pool. My boatmen then shoved the boat head pointing slightly up stream towards the further bank. As soon as the head of the boat touched the rapid the boat spun rapidly round and heeled over ; the boatmen fell over each other into the boat, which immediately filled with water and capsized. As it turned over we all climbed on to its bottom and hung there, while the boat shot down the rapid with great speed for about 50 yards. Then getting into quieter water, we swam ashore and recovered the boat lower down. But it was empty ; this meant that a Farlow's rod and a Hardy's cane rod and reel, a Mallock's reel, half my casts and spoons, a landing net and a tiffin basket were at the bottom of the river. Cheerful !

However we set to work to make a large fire on the river's bank where we dried our clothes and set to work diving for the lost articles. After some time my double-handed rod was recovered, and I started to fish again but without success. The tiffin basket and casts and spoons were recovered several days later after constant diving, but the other things were not found.

On the 22nd I fished about half a mile lower down the river using medium salmon gut and a 2-inch silver spoon. After a couple of casts in a run which entered a deep pool I hooked something which went off with a rush, taking out about 40 or 50 yards of line. The fish then slackened off a bit, and afterwards tried to get into the rapid issuing from the pool. This he very nearly accomplished, but by moving along the bank and reeling in I got him into shallower water which ran slower, in which he worked slowly up the river I guessed he was a fair size by the way he kept along the bottom well out of view. At last the water he was worked into got so shallow that I could see his back fin and tail. In he came, slowly nearer and nearer, and at a sign from me the boatman waded in towards him, this resulted in a few short rushes after each of which he got more and more exhausted until he lay panting in the shallow water with one glistening side exposed. The boatman put his fingers in the fish's gills and lifted him out of the water. The fish which like all the others I caught in the Torsa was a mahseer and scaled 17 pounds.

I continued to fish this pool for some time without any results and finally decided to move lower down. I got to a place where the river ran in three channels, and selected one which contained a deep pool. After the very first cast while letting my spoon down the run I felt a couple of tugs with some interval between them, so letting out two or three yards more of line I began to reel in slowly letting my spoon play in and out between the run and the deep still water. After reeling in about 10 yards there was a tug, and out rushed the line in the most lively manner. I got on to the bank and slowly began to reel in, bringing the fish up stream into shallow water towards the bank. On landing him he was found to weigh 4 pounds. Resuming my fishing from the very same place I hooked a fish at the very next cast and succesfully landed him in the same manner ; he also weighed 4 pounds. I fished again in the same place with no result, and then sat down and had tiffin, because I was hungry and also to give the fish a rest. After tiffin I decided to try the pool again. After about three casts and reeling in the thirty or more yards of line I had let out I was reeling in the last ten yards or so when there was a tug and a rush, which took out about 20 yards of line, then a second rush which brought the fish to the further end of the pool, where he leapt once or twice clean out of the water, I lowered the point of my rod. The fish now turned and came running up stream towards me, so reeling in as hard as I could I made for the bank, and in order to keep the line taut ran away from the water. He worked right up into the run, but in a short time his efforts slackened and I reeled him in towards the bank. He weighed 8 pounds. Although I fished the pool again and again and tried lower down I hooked nothing more of any size that day. In returning to camp I fished some rapid shallow water with an aluminium spoon, and caught several small fish, varying in weight from ½ to ¾ pound. When I reached the bungalow I found my stores had arrived which relieved me from any further anxiety as regards supplies.

On the 23rd of March I went down to the pool where the upset had ocurred. The boatmen warned by their previous experience did not attempt to shoot across near the head of the rapid and we crossed in safety lower down. The banks on both sides were low and formed of large boulders, but at one point the bank I had crossed to rose steeply to about 6 feet above the water, so getting the boat about 10 or 15 yards above that point I commenced to fish letting my spoon play opposite the steep bank where I guessed the deepest water lay. I succeeded in landing one 4-pound fish and after some interval another of 5 pounds. I touched one or two more but that was all. I then moved down stream in the dug out. Looking over the side of the boat as I went down to see if any missing articles were visible, suddenly the boatman spotted something bright lying in the shallow water, and stopping as soon as possible we landed, and after wading in it was recovered ; it proved to be the aluminium lid of a box that had been in my tiffin basket, and from the position where it was found, 400 yards from the point of the upset, I concluded that most of my things had been swept down stream. I tried the pool where I had caught the 17-pounder, but it was no use, so I moved down to the point where I had been so successful yesterday, and commenced work. Letting the spoon rapidly down the run, I felt slight tugs once or twice, but I continued to let out line till I judged my spoon to be near the end of the pool, then I began to reel in After a few turns I got a fish on who gave some good play, he was successfully landed. His weight was 6 pounds.

I then fished steadily on the same water for about an hour and had decided to try another place and was reeling in the last few yards of my line, when the spoon was seized with a violent jerk, and out went the line with a rush. This fish on being landed weighed 7 pounds. Although I fished hard for the rest of the day I got nothing.

On the 24th after I had tried nearly all the pools without any success I moved down to the one where I had landed the 7-pounder yesterday. Commencing very cautiously right above the run and letting my line slow down towards it, and fishing some deep water alongside of it the result was that I got hooked in a sunken tree in deep water close to the head of the run. The boatmen stripped and went in to try and free it, but the current was so strong that they were swept off their feet into deep water. I next made the boatmen take off their puggaries and tie them together. I stripped and tying one end of it round my waist, the other being held by the boatmen standing up stream in shallow water, went in, I got hold of the tree, which was a large one, but couldn't find the spoon, and having to come up at short intervals to breathe, the greater part of the time under water each dive was spent in finding the tree so I didn't make much progress. I finally gave it up and reeling in short broke the line off as short as I could, not a single fish did I touch that day, though I worked steadily on till sunset.

Another storm would have probably set matters all right again. Very early on the 25th I started back on my way to Calcutta. I learnt while en route that about a month previous a tigress with a cub had appeared in the neighbourhood of a tea garden about 12 miles from the west bank of the Torsa and close to the railway. She had carried off five coolies, the last one being seized and carried off while sitting in his hut. This as may be imagined had created rather a panic, but as nobody had been taken for a month, the people had settled down again. A planter I met told me he had seen Hilsa fish for sale in the markets in the neighbourhood and that on enquiry he was told that they had been netted in adjacent streams. I was rather surprised to hear this, as I had hutherto supposed that Hilsa were only to be caught in the neighbourhood of Calcutta, and certainly never imagined they were to be found within twenty miles of the Himalayas. It would be interesting if some one would give further information on this point. [Hilsa are found in most of the big rivers in Eastern Bengal—the Hooghly, Brahmapootra, Megna, the Jaboona etc,—at Goalundo and Damookdeah are the biggest fisheries ; but they are caught in vast numbers higher up and further from Calcutta Ed.]

The climate in the Dooars was perfect during my trip, and though I fished all through the day I experienced no inconvenience from the heat. The best spoon for the river is a silvered one, about 2 inches in length. I never tried dead bait, but have no doubt that it would be equally if not more effective. I was rather suprised to find such fair sport so near a railway under construction. As a rule in such cases one finds the pools netted or dynamited. But in this case both the engineers on the line were fishermen, and stopped all unfair destruction of fish.

Shooting.

A NEW SINGLE-TRIGGER MECHANISM.

MR CHARLES LANCASTER, of 151, New Bond-street, has forwarded for our inspection, writes The Field, a new single-trigger mechanism, which is herewith illustrated. For the purpose of a practical trial three guns so fitted were also placed at our disposal, and in order that they should be shot under a variety of conditions a visit was paid to Mr. Lancaster's shooting ground, where a large number of cartridges were fired at all the recognised forms of moving "bird." Some of the most difficult shots were sent from the tower in double rise fashion with a bewildering perplexity of direction. In such cases the mechanism proved itself fully able to deal with the rapid operation of the parts that was necessary to score the double kill before the birds had reached the ground. The more, in fact, that one sees the methods in vogue at intelligently managed shooting schools, the clearer does it become that the science of shooting overhead birds is to know why one misses. One varies the allowance bit by bit till the birds that seemed at one moment beyond the range of the gun are subsequently unerringly smashed in the air, as a result of finding out the characteristics of their travel and the precise allowance necessary to provide for the delay due to the time of flight of the shot. Considering that this often runs to as much as 10ft. with birds known to be travelling at about 65ft. per second, or say just over forty miles per hour, it will be understood that many misses in the field are due to want of courage in giving the necessary allowance rather than faulty alignment on the track of the bird's flight or the opening out of the pattern.

A test of this kind is at any rate particularly applicable to the trying of a single trigger since with any muddling of the pull one's swing is lost and the recovery comes too late to allow for making up the time wasted in futile effort. The record of kills effected was, however, well up to the average hitherto experienced, which at least goes to show that the trigger was doing its work in accordance with the requisite standard.

NEW SINGLE-TRIGGER MECHANISM.

In the accompanying illustration of the mechanism it will be seen that the chief operating part is the swinging trigger blade E which is pivoted in the ordinary way to the pillar A. Upon opening the gun the end H of the lever H, which is pivoted at I, is operated, so carrying the swinging blade E to the right-hand side in a position to operate the right sear. This, by the way, is not shown, the illustration dealing only with the trigger mechanism itself as mounted on the trigger plate A. The spring L is constantly pressing the blade towards the left, but the lever H prevents any movement till the right barrel is fired. Then the blade swings over to the right, but it is arrested in a position midway between the two sears by its rearmost end coming into contact with the hinged stop K This arrests the blade till it is freed by the unvoluntary pull, the adjustment of the stop-piece K and the action of its spring M serving to make the release at the proper moment simple and effective. The chief function of the last-named spring is, however, to hold the piece K against the screw stop on its left side, while allowing it to give way to the swinging blade when the latter passes one again to the right side as part of the process of cocking and reloading when the action is opened. It should be understood that when the involuntary pull occurs the swinging blade gets past the intermediate stop and so takes up the position requisite for firing the second barrel. A gun so constructed belongs, of course, to the three-pull type, as distinguished from the alternative mechanism in which the involuntary pull is rendered ineffective by the action of a stop or timer. The mechanism can be set at the option of the shooter to fire the left barrel.

CALCUTTA REVOLVER CLUB.

The third monthly prize meeting was held at Milton Park yesterday. The shooting was with the right hand at 20 yards. The following were the best scores returned : M. Mertig, 41—2—39, first prize ; J. K. Chase, 38—5—33, second prize ; J. T. Meade, 35—4—31.

A match between the Club and the Port Defence Volunteers was also held, the former winning easily.

Conditions : six shots each, right and left, at 20 yard

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—In view of the various walks in contemplation to and from Barrackpore, would you kindly state what is the distance from the Shambazar terminus of the Tramways to the point of junction of the Barrackpore Trunk Road and of the Station Road, Barrackpore, or to the milestone (? 15th or 16th) nearest that point. It certainly seems sound in starting from this end to escape slummy and crowded thoroughfares, and I fancy about 14 miles will prove more than enough, anyhow quite enough, for most people at this time of year.

X.

The 15th June 1903.

[The distance from Government House, Calcutta, to the Cross Roads mentioned is 14 miles 7 furlongs (we think). Subtract 3 miles from Government House to the Shambazar terminus and you have 11 miles 7 furlongs.—ED.]

CROCODILES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The rather gruesome account of a man being seized by a crocodile on the Padda, and the attendance of an alligator at the banquet, reported in a recent issue, impels me to ask whether the latter does not occasionally prey upon human victims himself. The gurial is credited with being harmless to animal life, but, as I myself have witnessed, has no objection to second-hand dishes in the shape of carrion, when sufficiently decomposed to suit his more fragile jaws. Adults can often be seen bathing in the clear water of the eastern rivers with the long-snouted saurian in company, but as children occasionally are reported drowned, may not the reptile be at the bottom of the matter? for though adult bodies are recovered, those of little folk are never found. I don't wish to frame an indictment against the gurial, but the matter needs clearing up.

THE SALWEEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—With reference to the account by "Salween" entitled "with canoe and rifle in the Shan States" which appeared under the heading of "Shikar" in your issue of the 28th May 1903, will you permit me to point out the following inaccuracies which appear. In the last paragraph but one, "Salween" says, "The river, although navigable, was now very swift and dangerous, but by good fortune after three days, by dint of keeping in near the banks when the current was worst, we safely reached Papun." This statement is incorrect. Papun is on the Youzalin river and not on the Salween. From Papun to the nearest spot on the Salween (at Kyonkhuyat) is over twenty miles and there is a high range of hills in between. The Youzalin river meets the Salween near Kawkayit about 70 miles below Papun. Again, in the same paragraph "Salween" says, "From this we might have continued right on to the sea, for steam launches come up so far." This is not so: the Irrawaddy Flotilla Company's launches only go as far as Shwegon, about sixty miles above Moulmein and ninety miles below Papun. As far as I am aware no launch has ever been within fifty miles of Papun.

Some of the old maps of the country show Papun to be on the Salween (of course incorrectly), and perhaps "Salween" had one of these maps by him when he wrote his account, but even then he reckoned without the Hâtgyi (Great Rapid) which lies about one hundred and twenty miles above Moulmein, and which is not navigable.

BIG GAME GROUNDS IN BENGAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR—with reference to a query which appeared in a recent issue of your journal, P. C. Roy would no doubt be welcomed on the S. Sylhet tea gardens just now! Behar, Purnea and the borders of the Nepal terai will furnish buffalo, deer and tiger, not to say pig, but to fire on the latter in that particular province would cause the man who did so to incur much the same odium as is meted out to the vulpicide in the hunting shires at home. The Sunderbunds, where they abut on the Backergunge district, especially where fresh rice land has been brought under cultivation, yield buffalo, bheelwah and the smaller deer: the same applies to the neighbourhood of Port Canning—the Mutla. The jungle lying between the city of Dacca and Maimensing can be hunted for buffalo, though deer are not now over-plentiful. The eastern districts and four-footed denizens inhabiting them will be found fully noticed in your back numbers. The Brahmaputra churs, though still holding moiesh, have been pretty nearly ruined as hunting-grounds by the steam traffic on the river, so anyone drawing either of the Assam valleys must depend on the terais underneath the hills. The south side of the Surma Valley, though abounding in game, is unsatisfactory to work, owing to the huge forests of bamboo encountered, though the ground improves after passing the Munipur boundary at Tepai Mook, where rhino turns up, but is scarce and shy. The northern side in the Sylhet district is still well stocked and will well repay the sportsman prepared to rough it somewhat. High up the Mandas and all east from the Cooch Behar boundary, both hill and terai, hold metna, buffaloes, sambhar, bear and small deer, while the ravines of the hill rivers, such as the Borhilli and Subansiri, are well worth tramping up. The Jyrung forest, south of Gowhatty, has been unofficially preserved for many years and here, in addition to the game mentioned, rhino is in evidence. The Nowgong wastes is the Yellowstone Park of Assam, while well armed and with reliable companions the Namba jungle abounds in game. One has but to get well into the back slums of former hunting-grounds to find ample scope for his energies with either the light rifle or bone-smasher.

(FROM OUR OWN SPORTING CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Friday, 29th May, 1903.

THE TURF.

IT is abundantly manifest that the Doncaster executive intend to keep abreast of the times, every gathering on the Town Moor being generally marked by some new feature. The hoisting on the number-board of the result of the draw for places meets with the warm appreciation of the public at all racing resorts where it is practised, and another move that found general favour has been the erection for a quarter of a mile round the bend of a second row of rails running parallel to the old ones and some six feet inside them. The intention is to keep sightseers well out of reach of the horses as they sweep round the turn, police being stationed between the two sets of railings to insist upon an observance of the new restriction. If the inside fence were continued the whole way to the winning-post it would be better still. It was glorious to experience a genuine foretaste of summer on the Town Moor to-day. The air was soft and balmy, and there was folks amongst the huge attendance who were ungrateful enough to complain of the excessive heat. Be that as it may, the majority fairly revelled in the delightful conditions, even if they cast envious eyes on the select few who turned out in all the glory of new Panama hats and immaculate flannels. The muster on the second day in the rings had nearly reached a record for the Spring Meeting, and there was no diminution in the gathering on the concluding day. Moreover, the sport went with a swing, and from first to last the entertainment was a thoroughly enjoyable one.

THE CHESTERFIELD HANDICAP—Of 435 sovs. One mile and a half.

Duke of Portland's ch c Caro, by Carbine —Nenemoosha, 4yrs, 8st 6lbs ...		Maher 1
Mr E C Clayton's ch h Patron Saint, 5yrs, 7st 5lbs ...	...	J H Martin 2

(Winner trained by Mr. G. Lambton at Newmarket.)

BETTING: 11 to 8 agst Caro, 2 to 1 Patron Saint, 6 to 1 Champagne, 8 to 1 Pom Pom, and 100 to 8 any other.

Five furlongs from home, Pom Pom collided with Lady St.George and unshipped his jockey, and Caro, pulling his way to the front in the straight, followed by Patron Saint, won in a canter by three lengths; a bad third. Lady St. George was fourth.

The rythm of equine hoofs galloping lightly over the springy sward is music to the ear of the sportsman, and the temptation to "join the glad throng that went laughing along" towards Epsom to-day proved well nigh irresistible. And no wonder, for the morning broke radiant and glorious, and apprehensions on the score of the weather entered into the minds of no one. The enthusiasts who make a point of driving down by road, as their fathers did before them, roused the southern suburbs of London betimes, and along the Clapham and Bixton roads a stream of vehicles flowed steadily for several hours. Patrons of the three different railway routes took matters more leisurely, but their numbers reached—if they did not exceed—the average and the throng on the stands, in the enclosures, and on the far side of the track reached enormous dimensions. As was the case a twelvemonth ago, Royal patronage was accorded the meeting. Shortly after one o'clock a loud cheer proclaimed the arrival of the King, who was accompanied by Prince Christian and attended by Col. Legge. It was satisfactory to note that His Majesty was looking in robust health and appeared to enjoy his surroundings to the utmost. But for a strong north-easterly breeze the heat of the solar rays would have been over-powering. As it was, the conditions were almost perfect, and the turf yielded wonderfully good galloping, having regard to the chalky subsoil and recent parching weather. Moreover, sport ruled brisk throughout, and from start to finish the proceedings were replete with interest.

BETTING: 2 to 1 agst Jolly Beggar, 3 to 1 Mousqueton, 3 to 1 Merryman, 5 to 1 Challenger, 100 to 7 Gold Winner (offered).

Merryman jumped off clear of Mousqueton and Gold Winner, with Challenger, who hung fire, last, for quarter of a mile, when Jolly Beggar took second place, which he resigned half-way up the straight to Mousqueton; but Mr. Douglas Baird's colt could never get on terms with Merryman, who made the whole of the running and won by a length and a half: a like distance separated the second and third. Everything was favourable for those who journeyed to Epsom on Wednesday to witness the decision of "the greatest race in the world," as the Derby has very properly been termed. The weather was gloriously fine, nothing was wanting as regards the condition of the turf, and, to crown all, the favourite gained a very handsome victory Their Majesties the King and Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and other members of the Royal Family graced the proceedings with their presence, and had an exceedingly hearty reception, and, although the Royal colours were not sucessful, there is satisfaction in the fact that the race did not go out of the country, however much we like to see sportsmen from across the Channel contesting the event. On his running yesterday, however Vinicius ought clearly to have carried off the French Derby. In comparison with recent years, the numbers of runners was disappointing, though, of course, the known superiority of Rock Sand accounted for this in a large degree. The field, in fact, was the smallest, with one exception, for just one hundred years, the exception being in 1894, when Ladas only had half a dozen opponents. But what was lacking in quantity yesterday was undoubtedly made up for in quality. The American horse was excused from taking part in the preliminaries, and, after a very good start, Rock Sand took the lead, though Mead assumed command when a quarter of a mile had been covered. Rounding Tattenham Corner, however, the King's horse was done with, and Rock Sand, drawing clear was never afterwards threatened, the favourite winning with ease amid considerable cheering. Sir J. Miller's colt has now been successful in eight out of nine races, and has won in takes 18,124 sovs. His trainer, G. Blackwell, is to be heartily congratulated upon the victory, this being his first Derby winner.

Apart from the Derby, some large fields were seen out at Epsom yesterday. Of the fifteen who contested the Epsom Town Plate, the Irish-trained Mandalay was mostly fancied, but he succumbed to the Ballette filly, who had captured the Egmont Plate on the previous day. Martina, winner of the Juvenile Plate, was sold to Mr. M. Gurry for 330 guineas, leaving a surplus of 230 guineas for division between the owner of the second horse (Sir J. Miller) and a race fund. Catgut, in securing the Caterham Plate, gained her fifth successive bracket. The Ranmore Plate was won by Blue Diamond in 56⅘ secs, which equals the record time for five furlongs, made by Master Willie at the Epsom Spring Meeting Sun Bonnet made short work of fifteen opponents in the Effingham Plate.

THE DERBY STAKES—Of 6,500 sovs, by subscription of 50 sovs each, h ft, or 5 only if declared by the last Tuesday in March, 1902; for three-year-olds; colts 9st, fillies 8st 11lbs; the nominator of the winner received 500 sovs, out of the stakes; if not sufficient surplus is obtained from subscriptions to give the second at least 400 sovs and the third at least 200 sovs the difference to be made up from the race fund. About one mile and a half. (295 sovs 100 of whom paid 5 sovs ft). Closed July 23rd, 1901.

Glaucos was struck out at 2-23 P.M. on the day of the race.

(Winner trained by Blackwell, at Newmarket.)

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Rock Sand, 11 to 2 agst Vinicius, 100 to 14 Flotsam, 9 to 1 Mead, 25 to 1 Rabelais, 33 to 1 Acefull, 100 to 1 Cerisier (offered).

PLACES (1 2 3): 4 to 1 on Rock Sand, 2 to 1 Flotsam, 7 to 4 Vinicius, 6 to 4 Mead, 2 to 1 agst Rabelais, 4 to 1 Acefull, 100 to 8 Cerisier offered.

The first to leave the padock was Rock Sand, who was followed in the parade by Flotsam, Cerisier, Rabelais, and Vinicius, with Mead bringing up the rear, Acefull, who was saddled away, taking no part in the preliminaries. Flotsam led the canter from Rock Sand, Rabelais, and Cerisier, with Mead last, and it was 3-10 when the lot were assembled at the post and the white flag was hoisted. There was not much delay, the lot being despatched to a capital start at 3.17, the first to show in front being Rock Sand on the outside, from Rabelais, Mead, and Acefull, with Flotsam close up and Cerisier last. So they ran for a quarter of a mile, when Mead took a slight lead of Cerisier, Rock Sand, and Flotsam, with Acefull next, in advance of Rabelais, Vinicius dropping into the racr, but passing the mile post Rock Sand and Cerisier changed places and Acefull and Vinicius were the last pair. At the top of the hill Rock Sand drew level with Mead, the pair going on just clear of Flotsam, with Rabelais galloping in his heels and Acefull and Cerisier in close attendance, Vinicius still whipping in, but, rounding Tattenham Corner, Rock Sand drew out clear of Flotsam, Rabelais, and Mead, and, making the remainder of the running, stalled off the late challenge of Vinicius, who took second place just inside the distance, and won, amidst uproarious cheering, by a couple of lengths; a like distance separated the second and third. Rabelais was fourth, Mead fifth, Acefull next, and Cerisier last Time by Benson's chronograph, 2mins 42⅘ sec. Value of the stakes, £5,850.

The programme for the third day of the Epsom Summer Meeting has undergone more changes and variations than that of any other stage of the fixture. Until 1895, in which year Whitte (with odds of 30 to 1 laid on him) beat his solitary opponent, Powick, the Epsom Grand Prize was the tit-bit of the Thursday, but it disappeared from the card, its place being taken the following season by the Durdans Plate, which gave way in its turn to the Epsom Cup. Last year was the date of the inauguration of the valuable Coronation Cup, which remains the principal feature of the penultimate day's racing, and, judging by the class of the entrants, the new event seems to have a bright feature before it. In comparison with yesterday, when one of the largest crowds ever witnessed on the breezy downs enjoyed themselves to the top of their bent, the attendance this afternoon seemed at first sight sparse and attenuated, but in reality such was far from being the case, a bigger concourse of spectators having seldom been associated with the so-called "off day's" entertainment. Despite the wear-and-tear to which it had been subjected during the two previous days, the verdure of the course was positively marvellous, and was rendered all the fresher by a soaking thunder shower, which cleared the atmosphere and made things generally cool and pleasant prior to a recommencement being made. Th afternoon remained delightfully fine, and the sport was ful interest.

Caravel settled down in front of Valenza, Rising Glass, and Seahorse II., with Templemore last to the mile post, where Caravel increased her lead three or four lengths and Rising Glass took second place in front of Slipthrift, Seahorse II. now dropping in to the rear. So they ran till a quarter of a mile from home, where Rising Glass assumed command, but was challenged by Valenza, who crept up on the rails and won a fine race by half a length; three lengths divided the second and third. I have just time to append the result of the principal event of to-day's racing:—

The scene on the road to the Downs this morning was one of unusual animation. Fortunately the dull sky and the rain which prevailed during the early hours gave place after nine o'clock to genial sunshine, with the result that the ladies came out in their daintiest summer costumes, their presence largely preponderating outside coaches and vehicles of all descriptions. The difference in the composition of a Derby-day crowd and that of an Oaks was probably never more marked than it was this morning, nearly all of those travelling by road being smartly-dressed people in superior conveyances. The large number of motor cars on the road was also a striking feature. At Waterloo, Victoria, Charing Cross and other railway stations there was an exceptional pressure on the numerous specials run to Epsom for the "Ladies' Day."

THE OAKS STAKES—Of 5,000 sovs. by subscription of 50 sovs. each, h ft., or 5 sovs. only if declared by the last Tuesday in March, 1902, for three-year-old fillies: 9st. each; the nominator of the winner to receive 400 sovs. out of the stakes; if not sufficient surplus is obtained from subscriptions to give the second at least 200 sovs., and the third at least 100 sovs., the difference to be made up by the Race Fund. About one mile and a half. Two hundred and sixty-seven subs, 117 of whom pay 5 sovs. forfeit.

From time immemorial it has been an article of faith with racing men that no unnamed animal could win the Blue Riband, and considerable pressure has been brought to bear on owners to persuade them to bestow cognomens on their animals previous to running in the great race. Thus Favonius, who carried off the chief Epsom event in 1871, received his name on the morning of the race itself, much to the relief of those who had backed the "Zephyr colt," by which title the son of Parmesan was previously known: while five years later Kisber, the equally celebrated Mineral colt, was not named until the Monday before the race

LEICESTERSHIRE vs. SUSSEX.—Played at Leicester, 21st, 22nd, and 23rd May Drawn. Thanks in a very great measure to their two new men, Gill and V. F. S. Crawford, Leicestershire were enabled to have all the best of the play in this match, for, when stumps were finally drawn on the third evening, the visitors required 78 runs to win, and had but one wicket to fall. The draw was, therefore, all in favour of Leicestershire Crawford's innings of 72 was made in 75 minutes, and was without blemish, the chief strokes being a 5 and seven 4's, whilst Gill's display, which was marred by a chance at 94, lasted 90 minutes, and contained sixteen 4's. But for mistakes in the field, Leicestershire would probably have won easily, for Vine and Relf, who made the highest scores in the first innings of Sussex, were both let off.

KENT vs. NOTTS.—Played at Catford Bridge on 21st, 22nd and and 23rd May. Notts won by 4 wickets. When play ended on Friday night Notts seemed to have a most difficult task before them, for, in a low scoring match, they still had 71 runs to make with only 4 wickets in hand. There was, of course, more than a chance that the wicket would improve after the two or three days' fine weather, but on the best of wickets it is not often that the last four men are good for 71 runs But when the game was resumed on Saturday morning there was a surprise in store for the two not outs, Anthony and G. Gunn, stuck to their work with such determination that the runs were hit off without further loss. Gunn played a steady game, and allowed his partner to do nearly all the scoring. Under the circumstances Anthony's innings of 52 was one of the best seen this year. The fortunes of the game fluctuated a good deal. When stumps were drawn at the end of the first day Notts had considerably the best of matters, for thanks to good cricket by A. O. Jones, Dexter and Anthony they were leading by 27 runs, and still had three wickets in hand. But they only ended with a lead of 47. Dexter's innings of 38 was purely defensive, but particularly useful; it lasted for two hours and three-quarters In their second innings Kent did well, and when, an hour and a quarter before time, Notts went in for the fourth innings of the match, Bradley, Alec Hearne and Blythe bowled so finely that they seemed practically to have secured a victory for their side.

YORKSHIRE vs. SOMERSET.—Played at Taunton on 21st and 22nd May Somerset won by six wickets. The Somersetshire team is always a hard nut to crack on its own ground, and the reputation held by a visiting team hardly ever affects the result There had been no rain at Taunton for some days, and the wicket was much faster than could have been expected by the Yorkshiremen, who had hitherto played only on very slow wickets. The consequence was that they misjudged the place at which the ball left the ground, and as Braund was bowling for all he was worth, they, most of them, never got into their stride. Brown played a good innings and Lord Hawke, as so often before, made runs when they were very badly wanted. Palairet and Braund made an excellent start for Somerset, but after the former was dismissed, there was such a collapse that Yorkshire seemed to be more than holding their own. Seven wickets were down for 111, and then H. Martyn completely changed the appearance of the game. He hit and hit boldly, sending Hirst to the boundary three times in an over, and when stumps were drawn, he was not out, 62; he had found a useful partner in A. E. Newton, and Somersetshire were now leading by 43 with three wickets in hand. Just before the end of the day, Hirst strained his left leg, and had to retire. On the next morning Martyn was bowled without adding to his score—he had made his 62 in just over an hour—but Newton and Cranfield hit the bowling all over the field. Yorkshire were unfortunate to lose the services of Brown, jun., who dislocated his shoulder when bowling. They also had substitutes for Hirst and Tunnicliffe, the latter having split a finger. In the end, Somerset had the useful lead of 109, and as Yorkshire lost three wickets for 50, and four for 76, there was more than a reasonable hope to the Southerners that they would come out of the struggle with great honour. Hirst was able to bat, and played the innings of the day, but Tunnicliffe was still and an absentee—a very great disaster for Yorkshire, who for all that made a good fight. Lord Hawke and Haigh, when things were looking hopeless, made a fine effort to save the game. Somerset were left to make 82, and accomplished their task with ease,

MIDDLESEX vs. GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—Played at Lord's on 25th 26th and 27th May. Middlesex won by an innings and 118 runs. There was a very attractive day's cricket at Lord's on Monday, for although most of the Middlesex team failed to distinguish themselves their failure was more than compensated for by the brilliant display of Warner, L. J. Moon, Trott and Griffin. The two former gained the upper hand from the first, and by lunch time had taken the total to 190, Moon being at 95 and Warner at 93. After lunch they scored more quickly than ever, but when the total was 248 Moon was at last disposed of. The innings had lasted for two hours and 25 minutes only. Both men showed a great command over the ball, and made admirable strokes Warner lasted until the total was 283. For a time after the first-wicket partnership was broken, the bowlers began to make headaway, but when Trott and Griffin came together they were knocked all over the field. In 50 minutes 94 runs were put on. Griffin, who played a vigorous game claiming 51 of them. There did not seem much chance when Hearne came in for the last wicket that Trott would reach his hundred, but Hearne was equal to the occasion and helped Trott to increase the score by another 69 runs. Trott played a really good innings. The only Gloucestershire bowler who met with success was Roberts, who kept an excellent length. Gloucestershire had a few minutes' batting and scored 18 without loss, the day's play having produced 520 runs. Tired out by their long day's fielding the Gloucestershire men did not distinguish themselves on the next morning, Hearne's bowling getting up considerably at times, although he did not take many wickets. Jessop played a maiden over and then was caught at the wicket off Beldam. Never did Gloucestershire look like making a big score, and a follow-on was necessary. In this there was some good batting by Kitcat and Jessop, the latter making 49 in 35 minutes, but just before half-past six the match was over.

LANCASHIRE vs. SUSSEX.—Played at Old Trafford on 25th, 26th and 27th May Sussex won by nine wickets. Although the wicket was hard enough on the first day of the match, it was a little fiery at one end, and the Lancashire batsmen for the most part found great difficulty in making runs. After the great batsmen on the side had failed, Sharp and A. H. Hornby put on 48 in forty-five minutes and then Eccles and Hornby added 51 in the same time, Hornby playing a really fine innings. There was a different tale to tell when Sussex went in, for Vine and Fry put on 70 for the first wicket, and then Fry and Killick played out time, the former being at 64 and the latter at 45. The total was 142 for 1 wicket, so that Sussex had much the best of the situation. Killick was soon out on the next morning, but Ranjitsinhji then joined Fry, and the two famous batsmen obtained a mastery over the bowling. At lunch time the total was 343. Fry being not out 142 and Ranjitsinhji not out 105, but immediately after the game was resumed the latter was caught at short leg. The partnership had produced 195 runs in two hours and a quarter. After this the end came sooner than was anticipated. Fry was at the wickets five hours for his great innings of 181. Lancashire had to go in against a balance of 260, and when stumps were drawn had lost 4 wickets for 92 (R. H. Spooner not out 41). Yesterday Sharp and Spooner batted so well that the innings defeat was saved the partnership producing 160 runs. Sharp made the highest score of his career in first class cricket, and was batting for two hours and a quarter.

LAWN TENNIS.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. ALL ENGLAND L. T. C.—A fairly strong team from the All England Club journeyed to Cambridge yesterday and succeeded in defeating the Cantabs by seven matches to two, 15 sets to 5, and 115 games to 67, in boisterous but fine weather. The teams and individual matches were :—

R. F. and H. L. Doherty, All England, beat Hunt and Stone, Cambridge (6—4, 6—1); beat Andrewes and Chance, Cambridge (6—4, 6—3); beat C. Palmer and Argyle, Cambridge (6—2, 6—2).

A. W. Gore and J. E. Mellor, All England, beat Andrewes and Chance, Cambridge (6—2, 6—1); lost to Palmer and Argyle, Cambridge (6—4, 6—3); beat Hunt and Stone, Cambridge (6—3, 6—4).

H. Wilson Fox and Archdale Palmer, All England, lost to G. Palmer and Argyle, Cambridge (6—3, 4—6, 6—2); beat Hunt and Stone, Cambridge (3—6, 6—1, 6—3); and beat Andrewes and Chance, Cambridge (6—3, 6—2).

BOXING.

It was twenty-five minutes to one of the 19th instant morning when the curtain fell on the entertainment at the National Sporting Club The start was late on Monday night, and the finish, as stated, early the next day. This is a short history in itself of a wonderfully fine show, which would have been more appreciated provided it had ended in anything like decent and reasonable time. The tit-bit on the programme, the contest for the Middle-weight Championship between Jack Palmer, of Newcastle, and Jack "Twin" Sullivan, of America, of course, came last. As a result, many who did not see the force of passing the night in town missed one of the most punishing battles ever seen in the club. Sullivan took the ring a bigger man by pounds than was anticipated. His strength at close quarters was most pronounced, and his favourite hit, a half-arm hook on the body, of a distinctly telling character Palmer fought a grand uphill battle, and in the end the referee failing to part the men, gave his verdict a draw All the contests went the full length.

Palmer was seconded by Spike Sullivan, Tom Murphy, and Jack Fulton, the American being looked after by his brother "Mike" and Charley Hagin. They were very well matched so far as regards size. Sullivan, although the lighter, appearing quite as big a man. The opening exchanges favoured the Novocastrian, who was by far the cleaner in style. Twice he put the left on the head and the right on the body, Sullivan, who clinched a little, hardly showing his form. However next time he displayed the fact that he had a hard punch, for he twice smashed the right on the body out of a clinch and put the left hand on the head. The next round again favoured Sullivan, who kept hooking his left on to Palmer's body—blows that had great effect upon the Englishman, who had appeared to hold his opponent just a little too cheap. After this the American showed by far the better form, always first to land on his man and dealing out heavily. He was particularly severe on Palmer's body on which the right was smashed in fine style. The seventh was a very desperate round, for Sullivan started by landing a number of heavy rights on to Palmer's head and body, which appeared to take a deal out of him. However, the Englishman was by no means so bad as he appeared, for, catching Sullivan unawares he dashed the right on to his opponent's face after which the American, who was in distress, hung on for some time, Palmer's blow having taken a deal out of him. However, he recovered rapidly, and in the next two rounds was again doing best. Sullivan was seen to greatest advantage in the close work, where he was by far better than Palmer. However, always a tryer, the Newcastle man made a very fine show, and by his splendid show in the tenth round gained the loudest applause. So the battle proceeded, Palmer making a fine effort to get on terms with his opponent. Sometimes he was quite brilliant, his left-hand work being very good. To the end they went hard at it the result being a draw

GOLF.

THE AMATEUR INTERNATIONAL.

ENGLAND vs. SCOTLAND.—The tentative introduction of an Amateur Golf International at Hoylake last year having been followed up during the intervening period by the establishment of the event on a permanent basis, last week's Golf at Muirfield closed on Saturday with a nine aside contest between teams representing, respectively the golfers of England and Scotland. The teams were selected on Thursday evening, and while the English selection, based almost entirely on the form revealed by the championship contest, gave general satisfaction to the English golfers (who had, however, occasion to lament the absence from the field of three members of last year's ten, Messrs Hutchings Ellis, and, Branston), the Scottish team represented rather the paper than the current strength of Scottish golf, and as such gave rise to a good deal of criticism. As matters turned out, two of the players against whom most criticism was directed, Messrs. Laidlay, who has been out of practice of late, and Norman Hunter lost heavily, but so did one of the men who was certain of his position from the first, J. Robb, and, on the other hand, so good a fight was made of it that, as the the match counted by matches instead of by holes, as at Hoylake last year, the last match of the series proved the decider, and that on the last green with the last stroke in the day's play. After a great sporting finish England reversed the verdict of last year, when Scotland won by seven holes.

MAXWELL vs. BALL.—Having regard to the recent cold and backward weather, the golfers at Muirfield were exceedingly favoured by the week's weather, and as good luck would have it, Saturday was the most summerlike day of the six, a westerly breeze being the only drawback. A large crowd of general and local golfers visited the course during the day, and in the afternoon there would be close on 1,500 persons on the links. Attention was naturally directed in the first instance to the play of the leading "strings" Maxwell and Ball. A year ago the Englishman finished one hole up against the new champion, who on this occasion proved a good deal too strong for his rival, with regard to whom it falls to be said that he was not in the best of health, he having contracted a cold which effected his kidneys. For all that, Ball played good golf, and although he had, usually to give the odd through the green his fine second shots left little between the pair on the putting greens. Maxwell won the first two holes played, and lost the next two, the result representing inferior play—first on the part of the one and then of the other on the green. Maxwell drew away with a magnificent 3 at the seventh hole, a put he again performed in the afternoon, and turning 1 up he won the first hole in, and, after three divides two more. At the close of the round he was 4 up, his approximated details working out at 73, one above the record for the course made by Herd, the open champion, in the championship contest of 1892. Details :

Maxwell : Out, 3 4 5 5 5 3 4 4 4 : in, 3 5 4 4 3 4 5 4 4—total 73.

Ball : Out, 4 5 4 4 5 4 4 4 4 : in, 4 5 4 4 4 5 4 5 4—total 77.

Maxwell lost two of the first three holes played in the afternoon, poor at the hole side but steadying, he won three holes running, and, 6 up at the turn, he ended the match three greens later, winning by 8 up and 6 to play. His half-round out was one stroke under that of the morning, his details being : Out, 4 5 5 4 4 3 4 3 4 ; in, 4 5 4—total, 49 for 12 holes.

HILTON vs. LAIDLAY.—Meantime, Hilton, playing his finest golf of the week, was giving his old opponent, J. E. Laidlay, a severe trouncing. Laidlay was out of form, his short game being very indifferent, and although he began with three divides, he lost steadily from the fourth green. He was 3 down at the turn and 4 down at the end of the round, which Hilton completed in the following approximated details : Out, 4 5 5 4 4 3 3 4 4 ; in, 4 5 4 4 3 4 6 4 4—total 74.

In the afternoon the Hoylake man had an easy progress. He stood 8 up at the turn for home, and won the match by 9 up and 7 to play.

THE OTHER MATCHES.

The third couple, H. G. Hutchinson and F. Mackenzie, had a fairly equal match, the young Scotsman playing a slashing game through the green, and the championship runner-up owed the evenness of the play to his grand iron approaches. He was 1 down at the end of the first round, and squared the match at the first hole of the second round. Mackenzie drew away with wins at the third and fourth greens, stood 2 up at the ninth and 3 up at the twelfth, and won by 5 and 3. In the following couple, J. Graham was opposed by H. de Zoete, who gave R. Maxwell so long and hard a game on Thursday. Graham held a lead at one stage of the first round, but he played a slack game through the green to 2 holes in, lost his lead and stood 3 down, on the home green. Putting himself to it, he wiped out this deficiency in the first half of the afternoon's round with, in successive holes, three in and a 3, and matters were thereafter give-and-take till Graham won the match on the home green. J. B. Pease played a steadier game on the green than L. Balfour-Melville, and won a fairly close game, and Mure-Fergusson got home narrowly from S. H. Fry, Scotland scoring 4 points against 2. With two of the last three Scottish hopes were disappointed, Jas. Robb playing a very poor game—one of the worst of his career—against Horace Castle, who earned the distinction of twice laying himself and both times negotiating a stimie, and Norman Hunter was too erratic to cope with W. H. Fowlers. This left a settlement to G. F. Smith and C. E. Dick, and here English interests were in the ascendant at the end of a moderate first round. Dick, however, took all his chances in the early stages of the afternoon's play, and great excitement was occasioned by the report that with half a dozen holes to go the pair were square. Everybody flocked out to see the encounter all the other matches having finished, and the last holes were the most exciting of the day. One up with two to go, Smith lost the seventeenth hole, and the match was carried to the home green. Here Dick was short with his run up, while Smith laid his like within holing distance. The Liverpool Stock failed to run down a long put, and Smith, holing out, won the hole and the match amid loud applause. The event was a great success, but a concensus of opinion seemed to be that it should precede instead of following the heavy work of the championship.

RACQUETS.

THE AMATEUR HANDICAP CUP.

FINAL TIE.

Five days of very interesting play at the Prince's Club, Knightsbridge, left Capt. S. H. Sheppard, D.S.O., of the Royal Engineers, on the 23rd instant the winner of the handsome silver cup presented by the president, Sir Wm. Hart-Dyke, Bart., M.P. To have won a second trophy within about two months (for he recently captured the Army Singles Championship) is certainly a brilliant achievement. On the present occasion his success is all the more meritorious, as he was one of the extreme back-markers, owing five, a pretty stiff handicap against such a class player as Mr. H C. B. Underdown, who received six aces, and who has represented Eton in the Public School's Championship. The "skipper," however, who has a wonderful athletic frame, proved an adept in covering the court for any kind of return, and to this and his fine service may be ascribed his victory, although it must be stated he appeared to be heavily handicapped. Still, Mr. J. H. Saunders, the popular secretary of the club, must be complimented upon his judgment in allotting the starts. Mr. W. G. Hilton Price acted as referee, while Beck called and marked the game most admirably. Result :—

THE GAME.—Capt. S. H. Sheppard, D. S. O. (R. E.) (owes 5), beat Mr. H. C. B. Underdown (rec 6), by four) games to one (15—11, 14—1, to 11—5, 15—9, 15—10, and 15—11).

For some time in the opening game hands were small, but Sheppard, with a nice run of seven aces, quickly made it "ten all," and he eventually won at 15 11.

He failed to add anything in the second game and for a long period hands were very frequent, until Sheppard, with a fine run of seven, reached 9—7. Underdown, however, with a couple, made it "9 all," but his rival, not to be denied, retaliated with four, getting to 13—9. From here it was a most exciting struggle, but after numerous hands Underdown, after the game had been "set to three," proved successful.

The third encounter proved a very easy thing for the Army champion, as he made best sequences of five and seven, and won at 15—9.

On the fourth occasion, Sheppard, who had by this time warmed up to his work, quickly wiped off the arrears, and play-

THE FOX WAS THE WINNER.

RESULT OF A HOT COMPETITION IN THE CALL OFFICE.

Lively Typewriter Contest ended in a Victory for the Grand Rapids Machine—Something about the "Light-Running Fox."

"The quick brown Fox jumps over the lazy dog." This odd sentence is familiar to all operators on the typewriter, because it is a good practice line, containing, as it does, all the letters of the alphabet. But the "quick Fox" has a new significance in The Call Office

We now have in constant use in this establishment six typewriters, a New Century Caligraph, in the counting room, the first editorial machine, a No. 7 Franklin (and both of these are excellent machines) and the latest acquisition in the shape of four 'Foxes." When it was recently decided to add four more typewriters to the editorial department, the use of the machine having proved a great saving of time and labour, to say nothing of the improved condition of the copy for the linotype operators, it was concluded to secure the very best that the market afforded. On account of its long-established reputation, there was somewhat of a predisposition in favour of a well-known machine and one of the latest models was taken on trial. It was in every respect a first-class machine. On the suggestion of one of the members of the editorial staff who is known as a pronounced "typewriter crank," and who had been practically testing the "Fox" machine for seven months or more, it was decided to send to Grand Rapids, Michigan, for a sample of that make for competition.

The "Fox" had not been in the office two nights before it was the favourite. No one would use any other machine when he could get hold of the "light-running Fox." The slight depression of the keys, the remarkably easy action, the swift escapement and possibility for speedy writing, the phenomenally light touch, the comparative noiselessness, the ease of inserting paper and making corrections, the ball bearing carriage, the simplicity and perfection of the mechanism, the manifest durability of the machine and absence of complicated gimcracks, were all strong points, over which there was no argument. Not being experts, the operators at first did not appreciate all these details, but they did know that they liked the operation of the "Fox" the best, and it was such a favourite that there was almost a fight for its use. The "Fox's" principal rival was such a good machine, however, that for some days the competition was hot; but all through the "Fox" maintained the lead so far as the preferences of those who were to become operators were concerned.

Experts examined the "Fox" machine, the most of them never having heard of it before. It was examined mechanically and from the standpoint of operation. It was hammered and pounded by hard and rapid operators on the Remington, the Smith Premier the Densmore, the Caligraph the Yost, the Hammond, the Barlock, and several other standard makes, and the same opinion came from all—that the "Fox" was in every respect a perfect specimen of a typewriter. Men who had been all their lives prejudiced in favour of some other machine, became enthusiastic in their praise of the "Fox" after using it for a short time. The result was an unqualified victory for the "Fox" and four of the machines were ordered. This was no disrespect for the leading competitor * for it was an excellent machine and one of the best ever turned out by the company, and had the "Fox" never been heard of it would have been the winner; but after having tested the relative attractions of the two the general demand was for nothing but "Foxes," and the "light-running Fox" won the race. Any one dropping into the editorial rooms of The Call along towards midnight will find one of the liveliest kinds of a Fox chase they ever heard of.

* The machine referred to was a 1100 model or the No. 6 Remington.

FROM THE "MORNING CALL."

The 'Fox" is a high grade machine, well built, wonderfully light to the touch, a powerful manifolder and a clear sharp stencil cutter; has the Universal Keyboard with 88 characters—more than any other—is fitted with a patent "Roll up Platen '—no carriage to Lift—which makes it better than a "Visible Writer." It is simplicity itself and can be mastered in a few hours.

Our August Catalogue explains the "Fox" in detail. May we send you a copy?

TRAILL & Co., Sole Agents in INDIA, BURMAH, AND CEYLON. CALCUTTA.

ing a dashing game at service, and also in the rallies, he annexed the game at 15—10.

Commencing the fifth game it was palpable that the captain had the match well in hand, and this proved to be the case for in the fifth and last game he soon put on five and three aces, and ran out with a superb sequence of twelves aces, winning at 15—11. In all, the winner aggregated one hundred aces to the loser's twenty-eight. Time of match, 45min.

At the close the company adjourned to the large and handsome reception room where the donor, in presenting the cup to Captain Sheppard, said that it give him the greatest pleasure to hand over the trophy, as he was convinced that the best man had won. It was a very sporting entry on the winner's part, and to have worked his way right through with such a heavy penalty was, indeed, a triumph that he might well be proud of, and he was certain his friends would de delighted to hear of his victory.

In a few choice words, Captain Sheppard thanked Sir William for his beautiful cup, and thoroughly appreciated the prowess of all his opponents. He was proceeding shortly to India, and he would take care that both the Army and the Hart-Dyke Cups should grace the mess table. Loud cheers)

THE PROFESSIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP.

GILBERT BROWNE PRINCE'S CLUB vs. JAMSITJEE BOMBAY.—With such an important match on it was certainly very surprising to fined only a moderate company present in the gallery overlooking the racquet court at Queen's Club, West Kensington, on Saturday the 23rd instant when the above professionals played the first half of their match for the Championship of the World and £50 aside. Probably the delightful weather caused the majority of racquet enthusiasts to discard for the nonce patronising their favourite indoor pastime: certainly it was not the sort of day to entice anyone to watch any indoor game. Since Peter Latham's retirement a year ago, the title of champion has remained in abeyance, but it was at once acknowledged that the next best man in England was his old opponent Gilbert Browne, who for some years now has been engaged at the Prince's Club, Knightsbridge. When a match for the Championship was mooted, the English and Parsee communities in Bombay at once threw out a challenge for their professional, Jamsitjee, of the Bombay Club, to play Browne for the title. This was at once accepted and articles were signed two play to matches, each the best of seven games, for £100. The usual conditions prevail, the only thing special being that in the event of Jamsitjee proving victorious, he agrees and undertakes to play the next championship match when challenged, in England. In the event of the winner being challenged and refusing to defend his title within six months from the date of the last challenge, except as provided by the present championship, he shall forfeit his title. Saturday's play was certainly not up to expectations, although it must be stated that some of the rallies were brilliantly contested Still at times there was a lack of finish on the part of both men—whether it was over-anxiety or not one cannot say. Browne who has a very effective back-handed stroke, put himself out on more than one occasion with two faults, but apart from this it must honestly be stated that the better man won on the day's play. It is to be hoped that on his own court next Thursday he will be seen to better advantage; but he has a tremendous uphill task to pull the match out of the fire, as in the event of the games being level the number of aces scored in the two matches will decide the issue. The Parsee has a very fine service, but he is seen to far better advantage in the rallies. As regards all-round work, however, we do not think that either can be classed with Latham or Standring (New York). By the way, "Peter" has signified his intention of challenging the winner He is very fit, and every day puts in a lot of work in Mr C. D. Rose's court at Newmarket, where he is at present engaged. On Saturday, Mr. J. H. Browning acted as referee, and Messrs. E. M. Baerlein and E. F. Newton as umpires, while Holden, one of the club professionals, admirably called and marked the games.) Amongst those present were Mr. J. H. Saunders (secretary. Prince's Club, Mr. C. J. B. Marriott (the newly elected secretary of the Queen's Club); Gen Minto Elliott; Captain S. H. Sheppard (Army racquets champion); Creed, Major A Cooper Key, Messrs. H. S. Mahony, H. M. Leaf, E. G. Raphael, Nigel Holmes, R. M. Smith, G. E A. Ross, M. Templeton, A. de Luze. Peter Latham "Judy" Stevens (the renowned Harrow coach), and a host of professionals from both the Prince's and Queen's Clubs. Details: Jamsitjee (Bombay Club) beat Gilbert Browne (Prince's Club, Knightsbridge) by four games to one (15—11, to 13-3, 13-0, to 13-3 15-8 and 15—4).

FIRST GAME.—Winning the spin of the racquet, Browne opened service, but only managed to put on a single At the start both were naturally anxious and somewhat erratic. Four hands each only ended in 'two all' being called, but then Browne put on four after some exciting rallies, and on the next occasion was out with two cuts. Hands were small, the best three (twice) by the Parsee, who eventually ran to game with four at 15—11. Time, 11min.

SECOND GAME.—On continuing, Jamsitjee failed to add anything, whilst Browne, with two and three, reached 5—0, and ultimately, after innumerable hands, 8—3. He, however, failed to sustain the advantage, as his rival, with 4 and 8, got to 10—8. A most exciting struggle ensued, hands being small and frequent, and at "13 all" the game was set to "5." Here again both fought hard for the mastery, but the visitor won at 5—3. Time, 18min

THIRD GAME.—Keeping on, he added two more, and put Browne out with a tremendously hard back-handed smash, but by this time the Prince's Club professional had warmed up to his work, but so desperately keen was the struggle that neither man could make any headway, the biggest runs being three aces on either side. Browne reached 13—12 but Jamsitjee, after making it "13 all," was put out with a "gentle tap" stroke high up the court which he could not possibly reach in time. Browne then got in and ran out, amid great applause, by 3—0 Time, 13min.

FOURTH GAME.—He added two more before being put out with a swift return off the right angle, and then ensued perhaps the best bit of play in the match. All the rallies were brilliantly contested, two, three, four, five, and eight "all" being called. Then, however, Jamsitjee, serving finely and playing a superb game at the back of the court, went out with a splendid sequence of seven aces at 15—8. Time, 8min.

FIFTH GAME.—A soft service stroke enabled the Englishmen to quickly put out his opponent, but he in turn only managed to tack on one. The Parsee then came out with four (three by service), but later on Browne made it "four all." He, however, could not last with his rival, as after an unproductive hand each, the Bombay professional placed a nice sequence of seven to his credit five of them being obtained after some magnificent rallies. Browne failed in two hands to do anything and then the Parsee ran to game with four at 15—4. Time, 8min. Time of match, 58min.

The second half will be played at Prince's Club, Knightsbridge, on Thursday next, 28th May at 2-30 P.M., when Browne, being his own court, will probably be seen to better advantage.

Gilbert Browne, disappointed his admirers on the 28th instant when in his own court, he again had to put up with second place to W. Jamsetjee The occasion was a match, the best of fourteen games, for the championship and a stake of £100, the first half to be played at Queen's Club and the second at Prince's, but at the former enclosure the Parsee exhibited his superiority to such a marked degree, winning by four games to one, that the result yesterday was practically a foregone conclusion. In order to get on terms with his opponent Browne would have had to accomplish something quite out of the common, but as events proved the Englishman again met more than his match, and Jamsetjee holds the professional championship for at least the next six months. Peter Latham may then be persuaded to emerge from his voluntary retirement, and if he cared to challenge the Parsee the match would excite universal interest. It may be that at present Jamsetjee has not shown what he is capable of doing at his best. His style is so easy and graceful that he never appears to be going at top speed but there is no doubt whatever of his being an exponent of racquets worthy to be classed in quite the top rank. The proceedings yesterday attracted a large attendance to the Knightsbridge Club, and among those present were Lord Cholmondeley, Lord Donoghmore, Sir A. Wills, Hon. C. Baring, Capt. Haley, Capt. Tufton, Capt. Carstan, Col. Kennard, Capt. Jones, Capt. Trotter, Capt. Sheppard, Messrs. G. E. A. Ross, E. B. Noel, H. Tattersall, H. S. Mahony, and F. H. Browning, the latter gentleman officiating as referee. Peter Latham also witnessed the play, together with Charles Saunders and Walter Gray (the coach at Charterhouse School). J. Soutar called the scores. Details:—

W. Jamsetjee, Bombay, beat Gilbert Browne, Prince's Club Knightsbridge, by four games to one (15—5, 11—15, 15—6, and 15—1). The Parsee scored the first two aces, but Browne soon drew level by service. The former, however, then put in a magnificent sequence of eleven, six by service, and was only put out by his opponent's wonderful smash down the side of the court. Jamsetjee thus led at 13—2 and with Browne unable to get fairly going the Parsee won the first game at 15—5, after eight hands. Runs were extremely small for a long time during the second game, but some fine rallies took place, Browne keeping his rival continually on the alert with some great strokes off the angles. Browne was well ahead at 6—2, but Jamsetjee gradually got on terms, and with a run of five possessed the advantage at 11—8. The latter never scored again, however, for a run of five carried Browne to 13—11, and, despite serving himself out with a couple of faults, the Englishman got home at 15—11 and made the games one all after a prolonged sitting of twenty-three hands. Jamsetjii quickly opened out a useful lead in the third game, and mostly by service ran to 8—2 before his opponent improved his position with a sequence of three. Browne never had another chance, however, for, playing beautifully, the Parsee scored all the remaining aces and won the third game at 15—5, after fourteen hands. The fourth meeting saw Browne put up a good fight for a little while, but then a run of five by his opponent opened out a wide gap at 11—4. Small hands followed, but the Parsee maintained his lead and won at 15—6, as the result of twenty-three hands. Jamsetjee was quite brilliant in the fifth and final game. He opened with a sequence of five aces, followed on with four, and finally ran out to 15—1 with a run of six at the ninth hand, Browne palpably tiring. The match lasted 45mins.

ROWING.

ROWING AT OXFORD UNIVERSITY—THE SUMMER EIGHTS.—Nothing could have been more delightful than the weather that prevailed. A light south-westerly breeze prevented the heat being too oppressive, and there was again an exceptionally large attendance no both sides of the river. The racing, too, was more interesting than on the opening night, and in the Second Division, no less than four bumps were recorded. In the First Division the three leading boats again provided a most exciting struggle, and whilst at one point New looked like catching University, at another they themselves appeared likely to fall victims to Magdalen. Lower down Brasenose followed up their previous success by bumping Pembroke, and Worcester provided Trinity with a bump early in the race.

The Second Division started at 4-30 in the following order: Lincoln Keble, Merton, Wadham, Hertford, Queen's, Jesus, St. John's, Corpus, Oriel. St. Catharine's, and St. Edmund Hall. Lincoln had to row hard to keep clear of Keble, who had a very good crew in Martin immediately below them, and the latter, coming up rapidly from the Bridges, secured them under the Willows Wadham, who had lost a place to Merton the previous night succumbed to Hertford at the Balliol Barge, whilst Queen's failed to hold their own against Jesus, and the Welshmen caught them at the Freewater Stone, St. Johns being within half a length at the time. Corpus were well away from Oriel, but St. Catherine's failed to stall of St. Edmund Hall, who caught them soon after the start, the latter making their bump at the Weirs Bridge.

The First Division order of starting was University, New College, Magdalen, Balliol, Pembroke, Brasenose, Worcester, Trinity, Christ Church, Exeter Lincoln. Another fine race ensued between the leading boats. New gained rapidly up Iffley Reach, and passing the bridges were within half a length of University. Magdalen in the meantime having drawn on to the Wykehamists and were within half a length at the bridges. Nearing the boathouse New further reduced the gap until only a narrow margin divided the two crews University were well steered, and, rowing rather the faster stroke they drew away towards the finish and reached home a short quarter of a length to the good, whilst the same distance separated New from Magdalen, Balliol being four lengths behind the latter. Brasenose caught Pembroke under the Willows, and Worcester fell victims to Trinity at the commencement of the gut, the other boats being their distances apart.

The weather still continues delightfully fine, and as a consequence there was a very large attendance at Saturday's racing which, however, hardly proved as interesting to those on the Barges as that of the previous evening. The greatest interest centred in the race for the headship, and although University had succeeded in holding their own in the two previous races they were not so successful on this occasion, and New caught them before reaching the Cherwell. Hitherto University had shown the best form at the finish of the course and had managed to draw away again in the last quarter of a mile, but a fine effort by the Wykehamists from the Boathouse enabled them to effect their purpose along the wall and so secure the headship.

The Lower Division started at half-past four in the following order, the brackets denoting the bumps:

Lincoln	Wadham	Corpus
Merton	Jesus	Oriel
Keble	Queen's	St. Edmund's H.
Hertford	St. John's	St. Catherine

Although getting a good start, Lincoln failed to make any headway against Merton, who gained on them at every stroke, and notwithstanding that the Lincoln cox steered a better course, they were forced to strike their colours at the Bed Post. The struggle between Keble and Hertford was very keen. Hertford rowing a faster stroke, came up very quickly, and at the Long Bridges were within a length of their opponents. Along the Willows they continued to close up the gap, but at the Boathouse Keble, possessing better staying power, went away again. Not to be denied, Hertford shot again on reaching the Cherwell, and, although they missed, Keble had to do all they knew to keep clear, eventually scraping home by three yards. Jesus continued their upward career, catching Wadham at the Ferry, whilst St. St. John's also improved the position at the expense of Queen's opposite the Kidneys. The remainder of the boats finished their starting distance apart.

The Upper Division started at 6 o'clock as follows:

University	Brasenose	Worcester.
New College	Pembroke	Christ Church.
Magdalen	Trinity	Exeter
Balliol		Merton

The attendance at this Division was largely increased, doubtless owing to the prospects of a keen struggle between the head boats. New College commenced at the start to gain on University, and rowing a much faster stroke, got to within a length at the Gut. Along the Willows they continued to improve their position, and at the New Cut they overlapped, eventually catching University opposite the New College Barge. The next three boats were all well apart, but Pembroke had a stiff task in avoiding the attention of Trinity, who got to within half a length at the Boathouse, and, putting on a spurt along the Barges finished a quarter of a length behind. Owing to the death of the Provost, Worcester did not row and Christ Church, who went to the start, did not compete. Exeter, after being hard pressed by Merton right to the Cherwell, got clear and finished their distance to the good.

Many years have elapsed since such a succession of fine weather has been experienced during the Eights week, and, with bright sunshine and a pleasant breeze, the conditions prevailing on the 25th were quite as favourable as on the previous occasions. After the excellent form they had displayed at the end of last week, it was expected that Magdalen would overhaul University, and, going off very fast, they caught them before passing the Boathouse. Consequently they will now have a chance to secure the headship, and as New did not bump University on Saturday until much nearer home, it seems highly probable that Magdalen will effect their downfall. Christ Church, who are undoubtedly a very good crew, made short work of Trinity, and Worcester, failing to profit by their Saturday's rest, succumbed to Exeter, and to-day may provide Merton with another victim. In the Second Division, Jesus gained another popular victory, Hertford falling to them on this occasion, and it looks as though they will still further improve their position. St. John's also moved up another peg, and, thanks to Queen's being above them, Corpus were able to obtain winning brackets.

The Second Division started in the following order: Merton, Lincoln, Keble, Hertford, Jesus, Wadham, St. John's Queen's, Corpus, Oriel, St. Edmund's Hall, and St. Catherine's. All the bumps in this division took place over the first half of the course. Merton were compelled to row fairly hard to escape Lincoln, and at the Cherwell only half a length separated them. Keble had to bustle along at the start, as Hertford were being pressed hard by Jesus, who effected their downfall opposite the ferry. Wadham stood very little chance against St. John's, who caught them before reaching the Gut, and Queen's fell victims to Corpus near the Freewater Stone.

Next day the First Division order of starting was: New College, University, Magdalen, Balliol, Brasenose, Pembroke, Trinity, Christ Church, Worcester, Exeter, and Merton. New College rowed over comfortably, but, with Magdalen behind them, University fared even worse than on Saturday, as they had got no further than the Red Paost when Magdalen ran them down, and the race between the latter and New College this evening will excite an immense amout of interest. Balliol came in more than their distance ahead of Brasenose. Pembroke rowed over, although they had to work hard up to the Freewater Stone, where Trinity, who were behind them, fell victims to Christ Church. Worcester, who were unrepresented on Saturday, again put on, and, after a brief struggle, fell to Exeter just as they were entering the Gut.

Bright sunshine favoured the fifth day's racing on the 26th instant, but there was a cold easterly wind, which had an appreciable effect on the attendance. Interest centred in the race for the headship between New and Magdalen. Having once secured it, however, New College showed no disposition to relinquish the position, and, rising to the occasion, they displayed much improved form, going away well in the last quarter of a mile. Magdalen were certainly the speedier crew, but appeared to lack the dash of New. Christ Church gave another proof of their excellence, steering Pembroke quite early in the race, and Merton rose another place at the expense of Worcester. Three bumps were again recorded in the Second Division, Jesus and St. John's both continuing their upward career. Corpus were very unfortunate, as, after having bumped Queen's on Monday night, they lost their place again owing to the stroke getting his oar fixed in the rowlock. St. Edmund's Hall made a fine effort to secure Oriel, and only just failed in their endeavour.

The Second Division order of starting was as follow: Merton, Lincoln, Keble, Jesus, Hertford, St. John's Wadham, Corpus Queen's, Oriel, St. Edmund's Hall, St. Catherine's. Merton rowed up much better than on the previous evening, and were at no point in any danger of losing their place. Keble never stood much chance with Jesus, who came up hand over hand in the Iffley Reach and caught them at the Corporation Ferry. Hertford fared little better at the hands of St. John's, although the latter experienced a rather harder struggle and did not make their bump until reaching the Willows. Corpus had a mishap at the start, and Queen's recovered the place they lost the previous evening.

The First Division order of starting was: New College, Magdalen, University, Balliol, Brasenose, Pembroke, Christ Church, Trinity, Exeter, Worcester, and Merton. As on previous occasions Magdalen gained considerably on New College up to the Red Post, being at one point within a quarter of a length. Along the wall, however, New held them, and putting in a capital spurt from the Cherwell, they drew away again and finished a good half length in front, University Balliol, and Brasenose, followed at wide intervals, but Pembroke fell to Christ Church near the Weirs Bridge Trinity kept well away from Exeter, but Worcester continued their downward career, and fell victims to Merton before reaching the Weirs Bridge.

One of the most successful race weeks ever known concluded last evening, delightful weather prevailing right to the finish, although at one time during the day there seemed a possibility that the final stage might be marred by rain. New College left off head of the river, and were fortunate in doing so, as Magdalen were undoubtedly the faster and better crew, but New proved good stayers, and, when once past the Willows they held their own without any great difficulty. They undoubtedly improved very much during the racing, and their performance is another proof of the excellent coaching they have received at the hands of Mr. G. C. Bourne. Taken all round, the rowing was not as good as usual, and doubtless the difficulties experienced in coaching owing to the floods had a lot to do with it. Christ Church proved the most successful crew in the First Division. They gained four places, notwithstanding the fact that they had to change their No. 5 at the last minute. Worcester, on the other hand, had a very poor crew, and after starting sixth, find themselves in the unenviable position of sandwich boat. Merton succeeded in working its way well into the First Division, but Jesus and St. John's could boast the greatest number of successes, either crew claiming five victories. Jesus have not been so high up for years. They were lucky in displacing Lincoln last evening, the latter only rowing a few strokes before they went into the bank. Wadham were most unfortunate, as, after losing four places, last evening the crew caught a crab along the Willows, and Oriel, coming up past Queen's and Corpus, bumped them at the New College Barge, which necessitated an exchange, Wadham thus losing three places and Oriel gaining a similar number. Such a thing has not happened for a great number of years.

The Second Division started in the following order: Worcester, Lincoln, Jesus, Keble, St. John's, Hertford, Wadham, Queen's, Corpus, Oriel, St. Edmund Hall, and St. Catherine's. Lincoln were very unfortunate, as, owing to the bow of their boat being pointed in shore, they ran into the bank immediately after the start, and Jesus gained another place without any difficulty. Keble lost ground to St. John's from the start, and the latter managed to make their bump on entering the Gut. Corpus succeeded in recovering the place they lost to Queen's the previous evening, and left a wide gap between Oriel and Wadham. Oriel went in pursuit of Wadham, and an unfortunate crab placed the latter at their mercy and they had to acknowledge a bump near the New College Barge.

The First Division order of starting was: New College, Magdalen University, Balliol, Brasenose, Christ Church, Pembroke, Trinity, Exeter, Merton, and Worcester. As before, Magdalen gained very considerably on to the leaders in the early part of the race, but New passed the post a quarter of a length to the good. Christ Church gained considerably on Brasenose, finishing within three-quarters of a length, whilst half a length separated Pembroke from Trinity, the other boats being well apart.

The present order is as follows, the figures in parentheses denoting the starting order.

CYCLE RACING IN BANGALORE.

It has seemed advisable to the Committee for cycle racing in Bangalore, to compile a brief summary of the history of cycle racing in that station during the last five years. This has been done essentially from a financial point of view and especially with the object of dispelling an idea which seemed to exist in certain quarters that these meetings have been a speculation on the part of the Indian Cycle and General Engineering Company, Limited. I have written before on this point in The Indian Field, and it is now in my power to lay the fullest information before all who take interest in cycle racing in India. So long as even a suspicion of speculation exists, people will always button up their pockets, and whilst this little article has as its principal object the promotion of cycle racing as a sport which is eminently adapted to provide the general public with amusement, and to render those who go in for it real athletes, it may be said that it is also fair to the Indian Cycle and General Engineering Company that its probity should be vindicated. With this slight preamble, the particulars gleaned may be set down.

It is perfectly evident that though the directors of the company above-mentioned may have considered that cycle racing needed the support they accorded it at the outset, they cannot be expected to continue to accept all responsibility for an indefinite time. The Committee are of opinion that the cycle race-meetings are worthy of the support of the public, particularly of the military; soldiers being, with one or two exceptions, the sole competitors, and if subscriptions can be raised to make up a respectable prize fund, the directors of the Indian Cycle and General Engineering Company, Limited, are prepared to expend a further sum of Rs. 600, in altering the track to give spectators an entire view of the course, and in other ways improving it. So much for the present, now for the past.

In May 1898, it was decided to start cycle-racing in Bangalore and an influential Committee of civil and military residents was formed. The Indian Cycle and General Engineering Company undertook to construct a track at their own risk, and it was hired by the Committee. A subscription list was opened which brought in the very respectable sum of Rs. 785, amongst the subscribers being Colonel Donald Robertson—now Sir Donald Robertson—British Resident in Mysore, several of the Mysore high officials, certain generous private individuals, and practically all the principal business firms in Bangalore. Thus it was evident that the idea met with much sympathy and approval. The races took place on August 18th and 20th, something like two thousand persons being present; and a second meeting took place on November 25th and 26th, which was not so successful. The accounts of these two meetings showed a deficit of Rs. 236-8-11, which sum is still due to the Secretary who then held office—Mr. Bernard Hawkins. Very little was done in the matter of cycle racing during 1899 by the Committee, the scene and centre of racing having been moved to Madras, but in 1900 a meeting was held under the auspices of the Madras Cycle Race Committee, which resulted in a deficit of Rs. 246-15-6, and this has been defrayed by the Indian Cycle and General Engineering Company, who received nothing for the use of the track. It was not until the middle of 1902 that anything was done again in the matter of cycle racing, and on this occasion a very successful gathering took place, both from a sporting and a financial point of view. The entrances were good, the "gate" showed an attendance of nearly 2,000 people, and the prizes were on a lavish scale. On this occasion, also, the accounts showed a credit balance of Rs. 58-0-6, whilst amongst the subscribers were H.H. the Maharani of Mysore, and also the Dewan. The meeting held at the end of 1902, although eminently successful as far as racing was concerned, turned out a dismal failure from a financial point of view, as the deficit of Rs. 557-11 6 will show. This was mainly due to Coronation celebrations elsewhere drawing away a good deal of interest.

At a meeting of the Cycle Race Committee held in April last, it was decided to lay the accounts before the public,—seeing the great interest evinced by riders from all parts of India in the Bangalore meetings, and the good sport which has always been shown spectators—with a view to making one last appeal, and to put the meetings on a sound financial basis.

The actual state of things at present is, that if Rs. 500 can be obtained, it is proposed to hold a meeting in the middle of July, but failing a subscription list of this amount, the meeting will be postponed sine die. A subscription list of from Rs. 750 to Rs. 1,000 will always secure a good meeting both from a competitor's and a spectator's point of view, and will moreover secure the Committee from loss. It may finally be added that the Lincoln champion cyclist—Higgins—who has put up so many Indian records is at present in the station, whilst Fox, Color-Sergeant Smith, Burton of the Carabiniers, and other well-known riders are training regularly. There are also some new men from outside who promise well, and also many good local riders. Major Burt, D. A. A. G., is taking great interest in the furtherance of cycle racing, and it is much to be hoped that the necessary subscriptions may be forthcoming, and that numerous entries will be received from outside stations.

CYCLING IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Friday, 29th May 1903.

THE death is announced of Paul Albert at his parent's house at Mayence from injuries received in an accident, he having been thrown from his car when negotiating a steep hill near Ingleham. Many of the present-day cyclists will remember Paul Albert as the champion cyclist of his time, he having won the world's sprint championship at Vienna in 1898, and in 1899 the quarter and one mile National Cyclists' Union Championships at New Brighton. He was a most successful rider, besides being a general favourite alike with his rivals on the path, and the public. The poor fellow was only twenty-eight years of age and died from a fractured skull.

At the Bristol Post Office A. and C. C. race meeting, a most distressing accident occurred during the final heat of the five-mile motor bicycle race, which cast a gloom over the gathering and led to the postponement of the undecided events on the programme. The accident occurred at one of the highly banked corners, which P. C. Bailey, of Bristol, when travelling over thirty-four miles an hour, took wide. G. A. Barnes, the record breaker of London, also ran wide, and when passing his opponent something went wrong with his machine and the two riders collided. The smash was awful, both riders and their machines falling amongst the spectators, two of whom were killed and some twenty injured. Bailey escaped with but slight injuries, but Barnes received injuries to his head and one of his legs.

In common with other cycling scribes we have always advocated the use of the cycle amongst road surveyors and inspectors, not only on the score of the saving of time and consequently the more frequent inspection of the roads and road-labourers, but also because a surveyor who cycles over the roads under his charge, would far easier detect any unevenness of the surface. We are glad to see that the Carmarthenshire County Council hold similar views, for when recently advertising forthree inspectors of main roads for the County, they stated that candidates must provide themselves with cycles and use them for travelling on the roads. This is a capital idea, but could not the Council supply the machines?

A lady cyclist has been successful in obtaining damages from the Edinburgh Tramway Company for injuries received. When starting for a ride, one of the company's cars ran into her carrying her along for a considerable distance, and inflicting personal injuries and damage to her machine. She made a claim for £500, the case being finally settled by the company paying £110 and all expenses. Not long ago, the company had to pay some hundreds of pounds compensation to a Birmingham manufacturer who was run into whilst driving a motor car.

British-made cycles hold pride of place in the markets of the world. In prices they may range high, but those who can afford the money know that they are purchasing an article that can be relied upon to give satisfaction. Even in America, British cycles are held in high opinion and are looked upon as specimens of good workmanship. An American writing to an English cycling paper, says: "Our papers may assert what they wish, but for all that I am convinced that your people do put the finest kind of work in their best bicycles." This is praise to be sure! We might add, that even the cheap British-made cycles possess a finish that is not found even in second-grade foreign production.

Some people maintain that rim brakes are largely responsible for side-slip, through their skidding the wheels and bringing about falls. This may be if the brakes do not act evenly and the rider does not apply them judiciously. There is no reason, however, why the fact of applying rim brakes should cause the wheels to skid. To suddenly put on the brake at hard pressure, is pretty sure to bring about a catastrophy, but not so if the pressure is applied gradually, the application of power being increased as the way on the machine is retarded. Another failing, is, in cases where the rims are not mathematically true, the likelihood of the brake locking the wheel. If the rim is not perfectly true, this frequently occurs. But the wise cyclist when ordering his machine, would specify for reliable rims—like the Dunlop—and so overcome the possibility of this defect.

The prospective cyclist about to purchase a machine, cannot be too careful on the point of obtaining advice. Nowadays, a jerry-built cycle bears, to the untutored eye, practically as good an appearance as the best machine it is possible turn out. Enamel and nickel-plate cover bad workmanship in a most effective manner, and unless the man about to purchase a cycle obtains the assistance of an experienced friend, he stands a very good chance of making an unsatisfactory purchase, especially if buying a machine at a low price, unless of course he goes to a firm of standing and repute where he may rely upon being well and properly treated. It is, generally speaking, in buying a machine from a comparatively small maker who goes in for cutting prices, that the jerry-built machine is obtained.

There is no truth in the statement that the cycle share market has experienced an appreciable weakness owing to the rage for walking. Walking has certainly gained a temporary hold on a certain section of the community, but there is no fear that wheelmen will discard their cycles for the older but slower form of locomotion. Once a cyclist always a cyclist is the general rule, and to give up the wheel requires a far greater attractive pursuit than that provided by Shanks' Mare. There is something so fascinating about cycling as to ensure for it lasting support. With many other pastimes the public soon grows tired, but with cycling the more one rides, the stronger grows the desire to be once again on the wheel gliding through the leafy lanes or over furze covered commons.

The Birmingham Centre of the National Cyclists' Union is one of the most business-like centres of the Union, and under its control, not only is racing flourishing but the interest of ordinary cyclists is well looked after. The racing men are kept in order, and any underhand riding is severely dealt with. For instance, at a meeting at Small Heath, last Good Friday, some riders were noticed to be roping. The matter was reported to the Centre, and the men immediately suspended. The result of such prompt and strict measures, is, that racing in the neighbourhood has since been very satisfactory, the competitors riding 'all out,' and thus providing purer and more interesting sport.

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

DALHOUSIE vs. BURN & CO.—Played at Howrah on the 13th instant. The visitors started operations and rushing down forced a corner which they were unable to improve upon. The attack on the home goal was continued, but the Dalhousie forwards were unable to beat Hollis. Then the game was transferred to the other end, where the home team lost some opportunities. Once more the visitors brought the ball down and Dodds had a lively time. Williams eventually putting the ball through. After the interval the Dalhousie men had matters all their own way. Echlin scored a second goal, Williams added another. Then H. Bonner got away for the home team and scored their only point. After this the visitors kept up a bombardment on Burn & Co.'s goal and Phelps put on a fourth point, the visitors thus winning by four goals to one. Teams :—

DALHOUSIE F. C.—Peake, goal; Maigrett and Bushby, backs; Williams, Phelps and Dalling half-backs; Echlin, Rosser, Watts, Stewart and Stimson, forwards.

BURN & CO.'S A. C.—Dodds, goal; McFadyen and Donnithorne, backs; McLaughlan, Russell and Wood, half-backs: Kerr, H. Bonner, Taylor, Cochrane and Todd, forwards.

Referee—Mr. Maurice Rennry, C.F.C.

K. O. S. B. vs. HOWRAH.—These teams met on the Dalhousie ground last Saturday, when the Dum-Dum men had an easy win by three goals to nil. They began the attack at once, but for some time could not break the Howrah defence; then Cassidy got possession and put the ball through. The Borderers continued the pressure for the most part of the half, but owing to erratic shooting were unable to increase their score. On changing ends play ruled in the Howrah grounds throughout the half, but the Borderers only managed to put on two more goals, Cassidy and Walls being responsible. Teams :—

K. O. S. B.—O'Neil, goal; McChesney and MacDonald, backs; Campbell, Stewart and Tait, half-backs; Byers, Walls, Cassidy, Neilson and Bexton, forwards.

HOWRAH.—A. Bennett, goal; H. Osborne and Curtis, backs; E. Osborne, Morrow and Lewis, half-backs; Burns, Jackson, Smith, Davis and Rebeiro, forwards

Referee—Mr. A. O. Henry, Rangers' F. C.

Y. M. C. A. vs. ARGYLL & SUTHERLAND HIGHLANDERS.—This match was played on the Association ground on the 13th instant, when a good game resulted in a win for the Highlanders by a goal to nil. The opening exchanges were very even, then the visitors forced a corner but without result. Williams next saved a fine shot and the Association going down Apear spoiled by shooting wide. Fast play followed but neither side gained any direct advantage and halftime arrived without score. On crossing over the Highlanders began to show better form, and, after the Young Men had lost a couple of chances of scoring, a combined rush took the ball down and Lockhart beat the Y. M. C. A. custodian. The Young Men tried hard to score and a foul against the visitors looked like giving them a chance, but the visiting backs cleared and the whistle going soon after the Highlan' men won as stated. Teams :—

93RD HIGHLANDERS.—Coventry, goal; Wallace and Silcock, backs; McLean, McGovan and Mowat, half-backs; Pollock, Lockhart, Montgomery, Galbreath and Hogg, forwards.

Y. M. C. A.—Williams, goal; Baldwin and Yackjee, backs; Rosser Butler, and P. Street, half-backs; Crow, Apear, Street, Simmons and Cooper, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. J. Greig Dalhousie F. C.

CALCUTTA vs. RANGERS.—Played on the Rangers' ground last Saturday and resulted in the defeat of the home team by a goal to nil. The Rangers rushed off but were brought up and the visitors going away Sherman got in a shot which went over the bar. Calcutta then put up an attack on the home goal but shots were wild and Sullivan getting possession sent a hard shot in to Buckley in saving which he conceded a corner. The Rangers' half was then invaded but no scoring took place and the teams crossed over with clean sheets. The home team played up but Calcutta were soon in their territory and forced a corner. Maunder placed a fine kick and Cooper sent the ball in and Whelan stopping it inside the net a goal was allowed. Back came the visitors again and several shots were sent in all of which Whelan saved in fine style. Up and down play closed the game, Calcutta winning as stated. Teams:—

CALCUTTA RANGERS.—Whelan, goal; Anderson and Templeton, backs; Hughes, Lees and O'Laughlin, half-backs; O'Sullivan, Hill, Williams, Cuthbert and Russell, forwards.

CALCUTTA F. C.—Buckley, goal; Todd and Galsan, backs; Maunder, Crawford and Walker, half-backs; V. Cooper, H. Sherman, H. Cooper, V. Sherman and Stewart, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Batho, Calcutta Rangers.

K. O. S. B's. vs. 6ITH R.F.A.—These teams met at Dum-Dum last Monday when the home team had an easy win by four goals to nil. They had the rest of matters all through, keeping up a continuous attack. After the Artillery had opened the Borderers transferred the ball and kept it in their opponent's territory. Several shots were sent in but were all wide of the mark tillat last Nielson netted the ball. Play started once more and back came the Borderers, Nielson scoring a second time. On crossing over the home team continued to press and Cassidy, who was in good form, put on two more goals giving the K. O. S. B's the victory as stated. Teams :—

K. O. S. B.—O'Neil, goal; Allen and MacDonald, backs; Tait, Stewart and Campbell, half-backs; Byers, Walls, Cassidy, Nielson and Bexton, forwards.

64th R. F. A.—Nicol, goal; Woods and Quin, backs; Lockur, Corby and Donnely, half-backs: Shirt, Wratten, Clarke, Dods and Connelly, forwards.

Referee.—Sergt. Wallace, 93rd Highlanders.

CALCUTTA vs. BURN & CO.—Played on the 15th instant on the Calcutta ground which was in a very slippery condition owing to a heavy shower just before the game began. Calcutta started off with a series of rushes which were unsuccessful and then the visitors had a turn. But the home team soon returned and the Engineers backs had a warm time. Calcutta conceded a corner soon after but nothing resulted, and for the rest of the half Calcutta had the best of matters. On changing ends the home teams again began the attack and several shots were sent in without being turned to account. Indiscriminate play followed till Stewart got away, and from a scrimmage in front of goal H. Cooper scored for Calcutta. Burn & Co. tried hard to equalise without success and the home team were left victorious by a goal to nil. Teams :—

CALCUTTA F. C.—Buckley, goal; Todd, and Gillespie, backs; Maunder, Crawford, and Walker halves; V. Cooper, H. Sherman H. Cooper, V. Sherman, and Stewart, forwards.

BURN AND CO.'S A. C.—Dods, goal; Donnithorne and Ker, backs; Russell, Wood, and Cochrane, halves: Macfadyen, Todd, Freeman, H. Bonar, and J. Bonar, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Batho, Calcutta Rangers.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

If we except the Calcutta vs. Y. M. C. A. and the 93rd Highlanders vs. Y. M. C. A. matches the past week's football has been somewhat devoid of interest, but the displays in these two games were sufficiently interesting to atone for the general mediocrity which has otherwise been en evidence.

In the first of these matches which was played on the Calcutta ground the home team tried yet another experiment by placing Fyffe on the outside right in lieu of Blaning and moving Cooper to Fyffe's position as centre forward. V. Sherman was again brought into the side with most beneficial results as he played a very fine game indeed, especially during the first half.

The Young Men took the field without the younger Street and Baldwin, the latter's place being filled by his brother.

The initial period of the game went all in favour of the premier club whose forwards showed exceptionally good combination and repeatedly broke through their opponents' defence in which Yackjee was especially prominent. The Association front rank were dangerous on one or two occasions and Buckley only just managed to save a shot by Crow at the expense of a corner. Calcutta, however, were not to be denied and the elder Sherman obtaining possession made a fine individual run and passed to Fyffe, who had no difficulty in beating Williams, and this score was added to immediately afterwards by Cooper, who dribbled through all the opponents, only one of whom touched the ball after it had been kicked off. This further reverse seemed to put the Association on their mettle and Apear and Crow had hard lines in not scoring, the latter especially sending in a very fine shot which struck the cross bar, but from the rebound Gillespie fed Stewart, who, after a dodgy run, centred beautifully and Cooper again scored for Calcutta.

The second period of the game was mostly in favour of the visitors, but, despite strenuous efforts, they were unable to get past Buckley, who was well supported by Maunder and Gillespie. A good deal of foul play occurred during the closing stages for which the Young Men were mostly responsible, although the most flagrant breach was committed by Crawford, the Calcutta centre half-back, and which unfortunately the Referee did not notice. This player is repeatedly being penalised for unfair tactics which, although no doubt unintentional, should be checked before they become habitual.

The 93rd Highlanders went very near losing their unbeaten certificate in their match against the Y. M. C. A., as had the Young Men's forwards not shown such desperately poor shooting they would undoubtedly have won. The military team were without their centre forward Quin, for whom Galbraith was not a very efficient substitute, and the Y. M. C. A. played Rosser's younger brother in place of Brown at half-back.

The first half was not productive of any score by either side. The Highlanders although often dangerous never looked like scoring and Williams had no difficulty in keeping his charge intact—their opponents on the other hand continually spoiled most promising efforts through over-eagerness which resulted in their forwards continually over-running the ball. After the restart the 93rd made a vigorous onslaught, and though repeatedly repulsed, Lockhart at last got passed Williams with a shot which grazed the bar—the Young Men were unable to respond and thus the Highlanders maintained their unbeaten record by the narrow margin of 1 goal to 0.

For the winners Lockhart, McGowan and Wallace played well in their respective positions, whilst for the Association the goal-keeper and both backs showed a sound and untiring defence. Mr. Greig of the Dalhousie F. C., was Referee and we would recommend a study of the methods adopted by him to some of the other budding "knights of the Whistle."

While on the subject of Referees we observe that the Council of the I. F. A. have very wisely, for their own peace of mind, refrained from giving the reasons which led them to reject the appeal of the Y.M.C.A. against Mr. Bushby's decision in the Ranger's match, as it is impossible that any satisfactory explanation could be made by the Council, in view of the Referee's own admission of his mistake. However no further action can be taken, but no doubt the Council are aware ere this that they have by this unfair ruling forfeited much of the confidence that was once reposed in them.

The Howrah eleven put up a surprisingly good game against the K. O. S. B. during the initial half of last Saturday's match which was played on the Dalhousie ground, as at the interval the Dum-Dum team were only leading by a goal to nil. For this the Howrah custodian, Bennett, was largely responsible and his goal-keeping was a feature of the match. After the resumption, however, the military added two more goals and thus won by 3—0. What a pity Howrah and Burns did not combine force—they would have been able to put a very strong side in the field, whereas at present they are both easy targets for their opponents.

It is very noticeable that in most matches in Calcutta the various goal-keepers obtain the largest share of praise for their performances. We have repeatedly to record the magnificent defence of these members of the team—is it that Calcutta is at present fortunate in the possession of several high-class custodians, or do they shine by reason of the poor shooting of the forwards opposed to them? We incline to the latter opinion.

BOMBAY SILVER MEDAL.

THE Bombay medal competition, which always shows the Golf Club's long season to be nearing a finish, took place on the maidan on Friday and Saturday last, and resulted in a tie between Mr. T. Drimmie, the Honorary Secretary of the Club, who did a very good scratch round in the circumstances of 84, and Mr. E. A. Woodhouse, who won the St. Andrew's tankard only a fortnight ago, and whose card showed 94—10 =84. Mr. Peterkin was as usual well up, and Mr. Hall returned a fair score, but no one else did much, the stifling weather and the difficulties of the putting being too much for most of the competitors. The tie between Mr. Drimmie and Mr. Woodhouse will be played off at an early date. Score :—

Bowls.

"WE'LL PLAY AT BOWLS."

SO said the lady attending the "good Queen" of King Richard II., when she was asked, "What sport shall we devise here in this garden, to drive away the heavy thought of care?" The scene was the Duke of York's garden at Langley, and the authority is "the thousand-souled Shakespeare." Strange irony of fate it is that of the Plantagenet palace in Hertfordshire not a trace should remain, and that on part of the site of Shakespeare's house at Stratford there should exist to-day a bowling green! Bowls is, indeed, of all outdoor games the most historic, although not so ancient as quoits. It has been played by the citizens of London from time immemorial, and so scandalous were the scenes of riot occasioned by its patrons in the time of the Monarch above mentioned, that bowling alleys within the City walls were forbidden. Even outside—in the then rural retreats of Bermondsey and Blackfriars—the amusement was not approved for the people, since its popularity threatened seriously to interfere with the practice of archery. A hundred years later, in Henry the Eighth's reign, the pursuit of bowls was interdicted as an illegal public pastime; although the "Merry Monarch" added bowling alleys to Whitehall Palace, allowed artificers, servants, etc. to play at Christmas, and granted licences to those worth over one hundred pounds per annum to keep a bowling green for private play only. "Common bowling alleys eat up the credit of idle citizens," says the somewhat severe historian of the time. But the prohibitions of the Tudors had little or no effect upon the vogue of bowls. One of the most famous stories of Elizabethan history is of a game of bowl on the Plymouth Hoe, interrupted by news of the Spanish Armada, when Drake declared that, as he afterwards proved, there was time enough to finish and beat the Spaniards, too. This game was played on 19th July 1588, the fleet having been kept to harbour by adverse winds, and the Admirals seeking diversion on shore after the mid-day dinner. The Stuarts were inclined to favour the sports of the people, and by proclamation in 1618 James I. approved of "lawful recreations and honest exercises upon Sunday" after Divine service. "Archery for men" and "dancing for men and women" were permitted, but not "bear and bull baitings, interludes, and at all times in the meaner sort of people, by law prohibited, bowling." During the commonwealth parishioners combined to secure the suitable observance of Sunday, and people were fined for being present at "any wrestlings, bowlings, rechings, ringerings," etc.

Charles I. was passionately fond of a game at bowls. He made a bowling green at Spring Gardens, but frequently escaped from town to play in seclusion at a lonely house in Essex, belonging to one Shute, a wealthy Turkish merchant, and among the Monarch's most devoted followers. This couple invariably played for high stakes, and it is related that on one occasion the King was beaten by his subject in several games, and declined to play any longer. 'An please your Majesty," quoth Shute. "£1,000 rubber more; perhaps luck may turn." "No, Shute," replied the King, as he gently laid his hand upon his subject's shoulder; 'thou hast won the day, and much good may it do thee; but I must remember that I have a wife and children." Poor Charles played bowls almost to the end. During his confinement at Holmby or Holdenby) House, near Northampton, in 1647, he devoted most of his days to the pursuit, playing either at Lord Vaux's at Harrowden, at Earl Spencer's at Althrop, or at his palace-prison near Naseby, the story being that he was occupied at the game when seized by Cornet Joyce, and taken to meet his tragic fate through the agents of the Parliamentarian Army. Bowls became popular as a country house sport because the ladies could play the game. It was for this reason that Pepys approved of it. When visiting friends at Petersfield, he mentions that they were "very merry, and played with their wives at bowls"; and upon another occasion he relates that he paid a visit to a bowling-alley, and there found "lords and ladies at bowl, in brave condition" Bowls was also dignified by the support of the Church, and Dr. Egerton, while occupying the See of Durham, used frequently to play in public with his guests. Once a visitor happened to cross the lawn while the game was in progress, and one of the chaplains called out, "You must not shake the green, for the Bishop is going to bowl." The poets of the Stuart period also largely favoured the pastime, and one of its most redoubtable champions was Sir John Suckling. In his verses entitled "The Sermons of the Poets," he candidly avers that—

"He loved not the muses so well as his sport:
And prized black eyes or a lucky hit,
At bowls, above all the trophies of wit."

Suckling possessed a passion for bowling, and it is said that one of his sisters went to the fashionable bowling green, situate in Piccadilly, positively "crying for the fear that he should lose all their portions."

The repeated references to bowls in the comedies of the Restoration era attest very fully the popularity of the game among women, who were exceedingly fond of playing it with their lovers. Mountford in his comedy called Greenwich Park, causes one of the characters, Violant, by name, when bantering with her gallant, to display a very intimate knowledge of bowls in a metaphor of somewhat elaborate character :—

"I find you are experienced in't, my lord,
And are a bowler in the green of love,
Can lie i' the way or hit the heart at pleasure;
I am a stranger to my bias yet,
Nor is it fit my weakness should be challanged
By one who knows the ground and all its rubs."

From the earliest years of the Eighteenth Century bowls has been par excellence the national sport game, and matches between individuals, towns, and counties are to-day of constant occurrence. So are they, to a lesser extent, in the North of England, some of the matches at Blackpool, for instance, drawing as many as 6,000 to 8,000 spectators. Bowls remained a fashionable pursuit in Southern England during the early part of last century, and was played by "the quality" at Tunbridge Wells and Epsom, and on greens considered an indispensable adjunct to every country gentleman's house. Now it appears not improbable that bowls will once again become a popular sport of the people. In London a championship of the public parks has been instituted and other developments are observable in the provinces. Quite recently bowling greens have been provided by the Municipalities of Torquay and Cheltenham. Of existing Bowling Clubs the oldest is stated to be that at Southampton, which dates as far back as 1299. But in such good old English towns as Shrewsbury, Gloucester, Tewkesbury, etc., the game of bowls has probably been continuously played for an almost equally lengthy period. The bowling green at Shrewsbury is in a delightfully sheltered spot on the banks of the Severn, being attached to an ancient hostelry in Wyle Kop; while the dry, smooth shaven green at Tewkesbury has been immortalised in the pages of "John Halifax, Gentleman." Near to London we are ever reminded of the antiquity of the game by the fact that Putney, Enfield, and Chigwell each possess (or did quite recently) a Bowling-green House; while as more central and still older relics of the past we have Bowling-green-lane in Clerkenwell and a Bowling-pin-alley off Chancery-lane. "We'll play at bowls" because it is, indeed, a good old game, and one well worthy of being perpetuated in a sport-loving country. Perfection in the art of bowling is far more difficult to attain than the tyro imagines. "Tis easy to bowl down the hill," says the proverb; but on the green it is as in the affairs of life—one has to allow for the bias which influences the attainment of the object in view. The Jack at bowls is the butt of all the players. But those who play ill will be either "narrow" or "wide," and perhaps may have cause to say with Anne or Bohemia—

"Twill make me think the world is full of rubs,
And that my fortune runs against the bias."

Lawn Tennis.

KASHMIR CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNAMENTS.

THE first of, it is hoped, a series of Kashmir Lawn Tennis Championship Tournaments was, during the past week, brought to a successful termination, and considering this is the initial year of the Tournament and that it is as yet unknown, the numbers of entries and the standard of play may be held to have quite come up to what was expected or hoped for. The events to be decided consisted of—

I. Gentlemen's Single Championship, which produced 8 entries.
II. Gentlemen's Double Championship—5 couples.
III. Ladies' Single Championship—7 entries.
IV. Ladies' and Gentlemen's Double Championship—7couples.

Suitable prizes of local manufacture were provided by the Committee, representing 80 per cent. of the entries, and a very handsome, massive, silver Challenge Cup was presented by Rajah Sir Amar Singh to the Club, to be held by the winner of the Gentlemen's Single Championship for one year and not to be taken out of India.

The results of the play in the finals of each event were as follows :—

Men's Singles.

Capt. Smallwood 6—5, 6—5, 6—4 vs. Capt. Powell 6—1, 6—1.

Men's Doubles.

Major Dobbie and Capt Smallwood, 6—1, 6—3, 6—4 ... ... vs. Capt. Powell and Mr. Douglas nil.

Ladies' Singles.

Miss Waters 6—2, 6—3 vs. Mrs. Hutchinson. nil.

Mixed Doubles.

Mrs. Hutchinson and Capt. Smallwood 6—2, 6—3. vs. Miss Waters and Mr. Anderson nil.

The 'Men's Singles" was productive of some excellent struggles and some fine play.

Captain Smallwood by playing mainly from the back of the court may be said to have played his adversaries' game, at which Captain Powell is especially good, being certain in his returns and very steady.

Had the winner played his own game from the middle of the court and up to the net, at which he excels, it is thought his victory would have been more decisive.

In the "Ladies' Single," the public were treated to a ding-dong struggle from the backs of the courts, in which the superior strength and condition of Miss Waters was too much for her adversary, who, however, played a good uphill game.

The winner's right-hand strokes, her power of placing the ball from side to side of the court, and her volleying when required, would, if she could strengthen her back-hand play, constitute her a very formidable antagonist in any ladies' tournament.

In the combined contests Captain Smallwood with good partners proved too much for all opponents, and he succeeded in having a share in the winning of 3 out of the 4 events.

The standard of the play all round was distinctly good, and all that is required to make these contests thoroughly successful is larger entries which will come as the tournament becomes better known.

The prizes were presented to the winners by Mrs. Colvin, after a few appropriate remarks by the Resident.

THE PROGRESSIVE MOTOR.

HOLOCAUSTS and shocking fatalities, abuse and denunciation notwithstanding, the motor car pursues the tenour of its way, establishing itself more and more completely as a factor in social and business life at home, and even out here. Since Parliament passed the Bill whereby the Gordon Bennett Cup race might be held in Ireland, many things have happened to exalt the standard of the car and strengthen hands which, it is permissible to think, do not stand in very urgent need of strengthening. It is stated the President of the Local Government Board is to bring in a Bill to sanction a higher rate of speed on the public roads than the statutory twelve miles; and the step is more noteworthy for the principle involved than for the probable consequences of a higher legal speed. We are told by a private correspondent that the twelve-mile maximum is practically a dead-letter over the greater part of England, and it requires no great effort of credulity to believe it, that every mile of highroad, suitable or unsuitable for letting a motor car "have its head," should be watched by police is obviously impossible: and that a skilled, or for that matter unskilled, driver should be satisfied to travel at twelve miles an hour when a vista of level and deserted road tempts him to try what it feels like to travel at thirty-five or forty miles is obviously asking too much of human nature. It has been freely suggested that the motor should be relieved from all restrictions of pace and the driver made responsible for any untoward consequences of excessive speed by the infliction of more stringent penalties. The suggestion would have more to recommend it did practicable suggestion of means to compel drivers to stop or to enable their unfortunate victims to identify them, accompany it. The conduct of motorists who hurt and drive away is the great obstacle in the way of releasing them from the present restrictions, and it is only too certain that the grievance of horse-owners, and in a less degree of stock-owners, whose cattle and sheep must in the natural order of things be driven on the roads, is a very real one. The trouble is that the grievance is essentially a country grievance, and in modern England the town is unfortunately the law-maker. Townspeople suffer little, save in their olfactory organs, from the iniquities of the motorists. In his own interest the chaffeur durst not travel at twelve miles an hour through the streets, the traffic makes such a speed too dangerous to the car and its occupants; on the country roads the position is different.

The "non-stop trials" between Glasgow and London, particulars of which are brought us by recent mail's papers, appear to have set at naught the speed regulations with a light heart. Actual racing, such as is possible to cars of from twelve to twenty-four horse-power, was prevented by dividing the route into sections and penalising the car which arrived at the end of a section before it was due; but, we read, "as a rule a minimum time involving an average pace of about 17 miles an hour was set for each section." The police were on the look out in certain counties where automobilism is unpopular; but motoring sympathisers were at pains to keep these sections of road under surveillance and warn the competitors when they should regulate their speed to statute requirements. Of course there were occasions when a car gained immunity by extreme defiance of speed regulations. An eloquent example of this difficulty in controlling hot-headed motorists was provided by Miss Levitt, the only lady competitor. At Hellifield three plain clothes policemen sprang from behind the hedge and tried to stop Miss Levitt's car, "but," she told a newspaper man, "we were going at thirty-seven miles an hour and dashed right by them." They had, indeed, been recklessly courageous policemen who "tried to stop" a twelve horse power car going at the rate of an ordinary passenger train! The main object of this Glasgow-London run was to test the feasibility of making a 400-mile (412 miles to be exact) journey without stopping for repairs or adjustments of gear and machinery. The journey was broken at Leeds, where the competitors spent the night, and as each car arrived it was taken over by officials appointed for the purpose who held it in custody till the moment of starting next day, to the end that no repairs or adjustments should be made during the halt; if anything were considered necessary the chaffeur had to do it while his car was in motion; if he pulled up for the purpose he was penalised at the rate of a mark per minute—save for damaged tyres, when the penalty was a mark for every five minutes. The time allowed for the Glasgow-Leeds run, 212 miles, was 18 hours 10 minutes, or over five minutes to the mile; that for the Leeds-London run of 190 miles was 16 hours 30 minutes, which works out at practically the same rate of about 12 miles an hour; but, as already mentioned, a speed of 17 miles was maintained over some sections of the route. Of the twenty-two cars which left Glasgow, twenty reached Leeds and all those twenty arrived safely in Piccadilly the same evening. Who may be adjudged winner of the trial is a matter of minor importance; the experiment has established a working record for modern motor cars proving that they can be run for 400 miles without needing repairs other than such as can be executed while in motion. Whether this possibility can be held of cardinal importance we may leave it to the expert motorist to decide. We ourselves should be inclined to attach more importance to trials whose object should be the reconciliation of equine and motor interests.

It is a stock argument of the motor man when confronted with the sins of his fraternity to produce historical parallels in defence and point to the diatribes with which horsemen, coachmasters, and farmers assailed the first railways; and to represent that even as time has secured general acquiescence in the railway, so it will eventually bring about acquiescence in the existence of the motor. The parallel is no parallel: it is false on the face of it; for whereas the train is confined to its own lines, and any one living in the neighbourhood of the line learns in a very short time at what hours trains may be expected to pass and be prepared accordingly with timid horses, the motor stands on a totally different footing. It disputes the right of way with the horse on every road possible to wheeled traffic and by force of mechanical strength it carries the day: it appears at any moment of the twenty-four hours and its speed only too frequently is regulated by the driver's opinion as to the immunity he enjoys from police interference; and the last and greatest offence of the motor is the facility with which it can escape from the scene of a disaster without identification. The mask, goggles, and enveloping garments worn by motorists are no doubt essential to their comfort, even to health; but nothing is more certain than the fact that unscrupulous wearers of these comforts take advantage of the disguise so conferred. We repeat that there is no historical parallel for the situation created by the introduction of the motor and its accompaniments: and it behoves those responsible for the well-being and safety of the majority to devise efficacious means for keeping these machines under proper control. The Automobile Club we know has done much to discourage "scorching"; but the club controls only a very small minority of motorists, and were it otherwise, control should not be left to a private association.

THE LONDON ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

THE Report of the Council on the progress of the Society, presented at the seventy-fourth anniversary, is now to hand, and as usual deals with (1) the general condition of the Society and its finances; (2) the business transacted at the office in Hanover Square, and (3) the state of the gardens and menagerie in Regent's Park. Of course, with regard to the general condition of the Society, the most important event is the retirement of Mr. Sclater; the final appointment of Dr. Mitchell to succeed him does not come within the scope of the present Report, since the Fellows made their decision at the meeting when this was submitted. Everyone must agree that "the very high position occupied at the present day by the Zoological Society of London in the world of science is largely due to the exertions and the personal character of its retiring Secretary" as the vote of thanks passed by the Council puts it. At the same time there is fortunately no possible doubt as to the thorough efficiency, scientific and practical, of his successor.

It is gratifying to note that the number of Fellows on the books last year was greater than in any previous year since 1878, which augurs well for public interest in the Society's work; the total number of new Fellows for the year being 228.

Among the nine new corresponding members elected the names of F. Dixon Bey, Director of the Administration of Ports and Light-houses, Port Said; P. Camidge West, H. B. M. Vice-Consul, Punta Arenas, Chile; and Dr. J. D. F. Gilchrist of the Department of Agriculture, Cape Town, strike one as particularly suitable ones for the honour. If was inevitable, one supposes, that a few Museum men should be appointed, although such people are seldom of much service to the Zoological Society, as their interest is generally confined to dead specimens.

It is pleasant to note the presentation of the Gold Medal of the Society to Sir H. H. Johnston, G.C. M. G., K.C.B., F. Z. S., in acknowledgment of his assistance to Zoological discovery, and especially on account of the Okapi; and of the silver one to a late Calcutta resident, Mr. E. W. Harper, F. Z. S., for his very numerous donations of Indian birds, always packed and cared for most sedulously, so that most of them arrived sound and lively.

The Council considers that, although last year's income was not equal to that for the year preceding, there is no reason for dissatisfaction, inasmuch as the decrease is mainly attributable to the falling off of the admissions to the gardens and of riding receipts. The bad weather of last year especially on the Bank Holidays, may be reasonably held responsible for the fewer visitors. With regard to the smaller amount earned by the Society's beasts of burden and entertainment, it is sad to read that both "Jingo" the African elephant, and "Suffeh Kali" the Indian have not risen to their responsibilities, but have displayed infirmities of temper which rendered them unsuitable vehicles for the juvenile frequenters of the gardens.

As "Jingo" has now quitted both the Gardens and the world, there is a vacancy for a steady and reliable elephant of African extraction; "Suffeh Kali" would not be difficult to supersede. The principal item in the expenditure of the Society, which was rather more than in last year's, was the balance of what had to be paid for the new Ape House, amounting to £3,153-1-2. This house has cost a great deal—over £7,000—and might, so an architect of the writer's acquaintance informs him, have been done equally well at a less expense; but it is a good investenent, for after all, no group of animals equals the Anthropoid Apes either in scientific or popular interest. The Silvery Gibbon (Hylobates leucisens) exhibited in this house is the greatest favourite in the gardens, and deservedly so, for she is a splendid gymnast, and always showing off her accomplishments. Hay, fruit, and vegetables, were all dearer than usual last year, and so the expenditure on these heads has been increased.

The lectures usually given at the gardens from April to July were on interesting subjects—Flying Reptiles, Horses and Zebras, the Okapi, and Elephants; but nevertheless they appear not to have justified their existence, for they will not be continued. After all, people usually go to the Zoo to look, not to listen. The most important publication during the past year was Professor Lankester's memoir on the Okapi, published in the Society's Transactions. It is to be hoped that we shall some day have an opportunity of examining this remarkable beast at the gardens; the specimen at the British Museum is interesting but unsatisfying to the eye—as set up it recalls a badly-shaped ticca-gharry horse gaudily painted up.

A number of comparatively unimportant repairs have been executed during the past year, but much remains to be done in this direction, as the installation for the animals has been much neglected of late years. This is the more to be regretted, as interesting animals continue to come in; last year was particularly prolific in such. Among those new to the Society's collection may be noted a young male Proboscis Monkey (Nasalis larvatus); two of the genuine Wild Horse (Equus caballus prjevalskii) from Western Mongolia, now anything but wild and great favourites with children; the beautiful scarlet Sepoy Finch (Haematospiza sipahi) of our hills which, by the way, has moulted out yellow; one of the curious Racket-tailed Parrots (Prioniturus platurus) of Celebes; nine of our familiar Water-Pheasants or Pheasant-tailed Jaçanas (Hydrophasianus Chirurgus); and some specimens of a rare Anaconda (Eunectes notacus) from Paraguay.

Other notable animals, but not new to the menagerie, were a Snow-Leopard and a Panda (Aelurus fulgens) which latter unfortunately did not live long; a female White-tailed Gnu, a welcome example of an almost extinct species, bred in the gardens; and a pair of young Giraffes, presented by the Governor of Kordofan, and so far in very fine condition.

The general breeding results in mammals were good; in addition to the White-tailed Gnu may be noted one of the Brindled species, an Eland, a Yak, a Leopard, three Red River Hogs, and one Duke of Bedford's deer (Cervus xanthopygus.) The number of births among the birds was considerably smaller and none of the accessions gained in this way were of any importance, as the Society has lately paid little attention to keeping the more out-of-the-way species. There is hope now, however of matters being generally managed in a more business-like and scientific way in Regent's Park, and no doubt in a year or two we shall see valuable accessions in feather as well as fur.

Sporting Notes.

CONGRATULATIONS to Lieutenant Hamar Bass on his first win with Sceptre, who carried off the Hardwicke States last Friday.

We hear that Mr. C. H. Holder has bought Ivanhoe II, the 13-3½ gelding recently imported by Mr. R. Powell.

Mr. Galstaun has bought the black gelding Dulcimer by Harmonist—Barbelle, and expects him up with Mr. Griffiths' shipment now en route for Calcutta.

J. Robinson, the Indian jockey, seems to be combining business with pleasure while he is down in Australia; he has been riding in a few races and had the mount on a horse called Sandboy more than once.

The Behar Light Horse have won the Volunteer Tent-pegging Tournament this year with the score of 57. The following is the order in which the other seven corps were placed: Ghazipur Light Horse 42 points, Cawnpore Light Horse 42, Calcutta Light Horse 40, Punjab Light Horse 37, Surma Valley Light Horse 36, Assam Valley Light Horse 35, Allahabad Light Horse 34.

There is a very persistent rumour afloat that General Burnett is to be succeeded by Sir Edward Locke Elliot in the command of the Poona District, writes our Poona correspondent. I had always been under the impression that the appointment was one for officers of the British Army. The appointment would, however, be an immensely popular one with the racing world. Though I do not claim personal knowledge of those days, many a laudator temporis acti has assured me that such equine Arab champions as Hermit, Euclid Lannercost and others are not bred, or at any rate brought to India nowadays. It is a big thing to say of any amateur, but trainers and jockeys have declared that in neither department could professionals afford to give away a pound to "Mr. Locke" at his best. But while we must all welcome such a distinguished soldier and horseman to Poona, since "men must come and men must go" and a successor must in the inevitable course be found for General Burnett, one must never forget the almost immeasurable good the latter has done for racing on this side of India.

I am sorry to hear that the well-known Arab importer, Ali bin Talib, has lost his valuable maiden horse Mahkoom, who had already shown more than promising form. That celebrated dealer is, however, accredited with wealth which would make him better fitted to bear such a misfortune than a poorer owner.

Another well respected Arab importer, who has had a slice of Fortune's ill favour, is Syed Raschid, one of whose blood horses in Poona was recently found to be suffering from that curse of horseflesh —glanders—and had to be destroyed. His five other horses valued at Rs. 25,000 (presumably owner's valuation, and if one could invariably induce buyers to unhesitatingly accept owners' computation, how delightfully invigorating to all concerned) naturally came under suspicion, and steps were taken with a view to their injection with mallein in order to put suspicion beyond a doubt. Syed Raschid's stable being situated within city limits (luckily enough for the peace of mind of the trainers of the other large stables in the more fashionable training neighbourhood of Ghorpuri and Wanowri) and the civic fathers, their Oriental placidity turned to anxious disquietude at the mere thought of a possible twenty-five thousand rupees compensation, postponed active measures in the matter of mallein, referring the case to the District Magistrate who apparently allayed their perturbation. One can only hope that the poor gee gees will pass through the dread ordeal successfully.

The Poona and Kirkee Foxhounds have, I believe, had most excellent cubbing which many keen spirits have enjoyed fully in spite of a 5-30 A. M. meet at the Kennels. There was one very brilliant little burst I am told in which only a few seem to have participated, when hounds blooded themselves by rolling over a jack after a smart quarter of an hour—if correct a most creditable performance which must, one must believe, have rejoiced the gallant Master's heart. The hunt is apparently fortunate in obtaining the services of Major Chesney of the Bengal Lancers, who has kindly consented to give his services as first whip in which onerous duties he will be assisted by Mr. Sidney Armstrong of Dapuri, a well-known and keen supporter of this pack for some years past. I hear the opening meet is fixed at Ganeshkhind for the 25th instant, when a large and fashionable field will presumably make their devoirs to the Master certainly so I am credibly informed, if there is likely to be a photographic artist handy.

The Gymkhana at Simla last Saturday was a great success and was only marred by an accident to Mrs. Walker, who took a bad fall in the pigsticking for ladies. Her pony stepped on the pig, which was represented by a blown mussack, and fell, rolling over its rider. Mrs. Walker escaped with no broken bones. The first event was tent-pegging for gentlemen and was won by Captain H. Turner, with Mr. Cochrane second. The pairs race, in which competitors, ladies and gentlemen in pairs, were to ride to a given spot, dismount, change saddles and animals, mount and finish, was won by Captain H. Turner and Miss Wheeler. Mrs. Buck won the pigsticking for ladies. The Lloyd Lindsay for teams of two ladies and two gentlemen went to Mrs. Buck, Miss Teague, Colonel Kennard and Captain Wigram. The Arithmetic Stakes was carried off by Mr. Mant and Miss Brownhead. The Gretna Green Stakes provided great fun: gentlemen were to gallop to a point where ladies in rickshaws were placed, dismount and pull rickshaw to winning post. Two gentlemen to be nominated by each lady. Captains Wigram and Brooke with Miss Brownhead were first, and Colonel Kennard and Captain Keighly with Mrs. Buck second.

Mussoorie held its seventh Gymkhana on the 18th instant, but it was not a great success. Entries were few, the attendance poor, and there were no enlivening strains of the band. The tent-pegging went to Captain Daunt, with Mr. Forbes second. Eight entered for the Sprinters' Stakes, in which competitors were to walk 25 yards, run 50 yards, and ride 100 yards in the order named. Captain Lindsay was an easy first. The pony race, ½ mile, for ponies 14-1 and under, was won by Mr. Cautley; Mr. Ridgeway second. The arithmetic race was won by Mr. Hope nominated by Miss F. Rendell. There were about ten entries for the musical race, which was won by Miss Woodland. Mrs. Tweedy gave away the prizes.

The subject of cordite rifles and cordite pressure in India was one on which last year we had some correspondence; our shikari readers will, doubtless, read with interest an article we extract from The Field on the new cordite rifle cartridge recently introduced by Messrs. Eley Bros.

An interesting Anglo-French shooting match, with clay birds for targets—the first of its kind in the country—was decided on Friday, the 29th ultimo, near Paris, between teams of seven men each, representing the Isle of Wight Gun Club and the French Fusil de Chasse. The conditions were—Two heats, each man to shoot at fifteen birds in each heat, and five birds in succession. The competitors were called by couples, one Englishman and one Frenchman. The contest was exciting from the start, and the greatest interest was manifested throughout the match. After a keen struggle, the Frenchmen won both heats, the first by five points and the second by six. M. A. de Lesse (French) was the highest scorer for the day with 29 kills out of 30 pigeons.

A striking instance of the distance which a dog will travel in order to return to a home in which he has been well treated is related by Mr. Wain, of the Birmingham Home for Stray Dogs. Some time ago a stray collie was brought to the Home, and subsequently sold to a gentleman in Birmingham. As soon as it could escape from its new master, it returned to the Home, and this occurred so repeatedly that the gentleman who had purchased it decided to ask Mr. Wain to find another customer for the dog. The collie was subsequently sold to a commercial traveller, who regularly visits Birmingham, but whose residence is at Liverpool, and Mr. Wain advised him to keep it chained up for a fortnight until it settled down. The dog was then taken to Liverpool. The very next day Mr. Wain was surprised to see the dog come trotting up the yard. The dog had never been to Liverpool before, and it is astonishing how he could have found his way back, and more astonishing still, perhaps, that he accomplished the journey in a little over ten hours.

The Rev. George Martin pleaded guilty at Epsom Police Court on Wednesday, the 27th May, to a charge of being on Epsom Downs on Wednesday for the purpose of committing a breach of the peace. A police constable stated that he saw the defendant acting in a violent manner. He was uttering threats and trying to pull down a bookmaker's stand, saying, as he did so, "It is an insult to the Divine Master because of the cross on it." The cross referred to was a Union Jack, said the constable. Further evidence showed that the crowd resented the prisoner's action and had assaulted him, and it was stated that he was arrested as much for his own safety as anything else. The prisoner, addressing the Chairman of the Bench, said: "Sir, already the practice of betting is draining the lifeblood and chivalry of England." He added the constable had made a mistake in speaking of a Union Jack. He only sought to pull down the stand because of the cross, which was an insult to the Divine Master. The defendant, in reply to the Chairman, declined to promise not to return unless the cross was removed. The Chairman said that in these circumstances he must be detained for his own safety until the races were over.

Suggestions are under consideration for a mammoth canine exhibition at the World's Fair, St. Louis, in 1904, and it would appear that there is a more than favourable chance of the show materializing. And in the event of its becoming a reality no stone will be left unturned to make the event a memorable one in the history of dog shows. Every recognized breed will be provided for, and entries sought from all parts of America, and from Canada and England, making the scope of the show decidedly international.

The Rangoon Race Stewards intend holding a Sky Meeting on the 25th July.

Our Lucknow correspondent writes on 21st June: "They say that there is but a sheet of blotting paper between Jacobabad and the nether regions; we have only had tissue paper this week, I think, here. In the intervals of bathing we have looked at the thermometer, only to be convinced that thermometers were invented by Ananias. Yet on Thursday afternoon some fifteen riders and a goodly number of spectators voluntarily left the comparative coolth of the bungalow to take part in or "assist" at the last of the paperchases of the season. I was also a spectator, a "compulsory volunteer." The course started at the Kukrail Bridge on the Barabanki Road and finished near the Pontoon bridge by La Martiniere College. Mrs. Saunders on Leonora, was the only lady who started, and among the men I saw Captain Dunbar on Victory, Captain Winwood on Wakine, Mr. Russell Carr on a brown, Major Heneage on Dragoon. Mr. Douglas Straight on Ludo, Mr. Symons on Truelove, Mr. Berthoud on Crusadar, Mr. Watson on Doris, Mr. Stott on Great Flyer, Mr. Sheridan on White Stockings, Mr. Shaw on Bitter Beer, Mr. Story on There and Back, and Mr. Frematle on Edna May. It was a distinctly good run and ended in Captain Winwood coming in first, closely followed by Captain Dunbar and Mr. Symons. The officers of the East Surrey Regiment were At Home after the run. Next Thursday is the day fixed for the Paperchase Cup races. I have seen the programme which is distinctly attractive. There is a race for horses, C. W. over 11st. 7lbs., another for ponies W. I., 12st. for 14-2 Walers and 11st. for C.-B.'s and Arabs, a race for ladies' hacks which have never won a race of any description, and a couple of consolation races.

A very enjoyable Gymkhana organized by Mr. A. L. Saunders, the Deputy Commissioner, and Mr. Douglas Straight, D. S. P., took place on the Police Parade ground last Saturday (20th.) The weather was slightly more tolerable than has been the case lately. A slight shower which fell cooled the air and did no harm even to the ladies' dresses. The attendance was good. The first event, a steeplechase for Native mounted Police, was won by Sowar Gafoor Khan, with Sowar Madhu Singh second. In the second event, the Polo Ball competition Mr. Symons was first and Captain Winwood second. Mrs. Wallace won the third event, a Wand Race for Ladies, Miss Williams being second. The fourth event, the Skilful Amazon Stakes, fell to Mr. Manson and Mr. Sheridan. In the fifth event, the Obstacle Race, Mr. Last was first. The sixth event, the Board School Stakes, was won by Captain Dunbar nominated by Mrs. Roe, Mr. Stott, nominated by Miss Williams, making a good second. The Band of the 7th Rajputs was in attendance. Mrs. Saunders and Mr. Straight were "At Home" on the ground, Mr. Saunders being unfortunately prevented by indisposition from being present.

BEHAR NOTES.

There is very little news in the district now-a-days, as a large number of people are away in the hills, and the rest of the planters are busy preparing for mahai. The indigo is mostly small and stunted from the long drought we have had, but should come on quickly now that we have had general "rains" throughout Behar. By the 25th instant I should think most factories will have commenced manufacturing their nassi, or low lying indigo.

The disastrous accident on the Tirhoot State Railway, near Sonepore, a short time ago, when a large number of native passengers were killed and injured can hardly be commented upon, until after the official enquiry has been held; but it shows gross neglect and carelessness on the part of some of the staff in permitting two trains travelling in opposite directions to travel over the single line between the two stations.

It is, however, only fair to state that the B. and N.-W. Railway and T. S. Railway have had very few serious accidents; but the public have other cause to complain against the railway. The Indian Planters' Gazette and other papers have, time after time, drawn attention and commented on the way in which the line is managed but with small success, as the Railway authorities apparently take little or no notice of these complaints, which are continually being brought forward in the newspapers.

If the attention of Government is drawn to the working of the line by this accident near Sonepore, it will be the cause of the greatest benefit to the general public in Behar.

There have been a few small "sticks" about the district lately. Messrs. Jim Wilson, W. Marsham, and Frank Rawlins beat out a "grass" on the Behirie dearas on the 18th of June. One pig was killed, another one was stuck, but managed to get away into some thick jowah and escape. Three or four other boars were put up and chased, but were unfortunately lost, as the undergrowth and jungle around the grass made it extremely difficult to see the pig once he got out of the more open jowah.

On the 20th instant Messrs. Marsham and Rawlins were lucky enough to put up a fine boar on the Mhow dearas. He gave them a grand run and made an excellent fight when overtaken. He taped 31 inches on the ground; he was measured again for curiosity, when brought into the factory, and was found to go fully 33 inches.

The small pig killed at Sawaisingpur a short time ago, and which I described as being a peculiar shaped brute, had tusks on him which measured 8¾ inches; these are very big tusks for a small 28-inch boar.

It would be interesting if some of your readers could give the measurements of some of the largest tusks they have found on different boars with the size of the animals killed. I notice in the Indian Planters' Gazette of the 20th, under a nom-de-plume, an insinuation that my account of the pig killed at Sawaisingpur is incorrect and exaggerated. I am quite willing to prove my statement to the hilt by all the witnesses who were out that day, though a cowardly attack under protection of an assumed name needs no reply.

Athletic Notes.

WITH walks and rumours of walks in Calcutta, some of our readers may find matter of interest in the article on "Long Distance Walking" which we reproduce in our issue of date.

The projected visit of the Yale University. Athletes to England has been abandoned owing to the expense it would entail.

The reappearance of Abel in the Surrey team on Thursday, the 28th ultimo, at the Oval was greeted by delighted shouts from the spectators. When his time came to bat Abel, who had made 90 on the previous day in a club and ground match, showed that he was still a great batsman, and on a tricky wicket he played one of the best innings of the day, carrying his bat for 28. Everybody will wish that he may now be able to play regularly, and that he will meet with as much success as ever.

At Ilford on Saturday, the 30th ultimo, A. Shrubb of the South London Harriers ran two miles in nine minutes eleven seconds, thus establishing the world's record for the distance.

There was some remarkable scoring in the match between Essex Club and Ground and Tottenham on Friday, the 29th ultimo, at Tottenham. The home team, for whom D. Reese, the New Zealand cricketer, made 98 in fine form, scored 273 for seven wickets, and then declared, apparently leaving the club no possible chance of winning. But E. H. D Sewell, the Ex Indian cricketer, scored at such a rate that when stumps were drawn the score was 238 for three wickets. The first hundred went up in 35 minutes, and Sewell made his hundred in fifty minutes, eventually reaching 148 in an hour and a half.

Yorkshire beat Cambridge University on the 17th instant by 206 runs. Derbyshire beat Surrey by 111 runs. The match between Leicestershire and Warwick was drawn, but the matches between Middlesex and Essex, and Somerset and Hants had to be abandoned owing to the sodden state of the ground.

Worcestershire beat Hampshire by an innings and 77 runs on the 20th instant; Yorkshire beat Derbyshire by seven wickets; Lancashire and London County drew: while the matches between Surrey and Cambridge University, Essex and Warwick, Kent and Gloucestershire, and Sussex and Middlesex were abandoned.

Tyres of motor bicycles require periodically looking over, and immediately a cut or gash appears in the outer cover, it should be cleaned out with a blunt instrument, and all foreign matter removed, and the lips of the cut solutioned. As soon as the solution is nearly dry, the cut should be closed and some tyre tape bound round the tyre and rim. Large gashes often require filling in. An unfailing remedy for cuts and gashes in all kinds of tyres, is the Dunlop tyre stopping. When inserted into a large gash, it effectually seals it, forming a splendid repairing substance, and prolonging the life of the tyre.

Harry Elkes, the well-known cyclist, was killed at Boston on the 30th ultimo. He was taking part in a twenty-mile motor-paced race, when at the sixteenth mile he fell and was run over by a motor, his injuries being fatal. He had ridden fifteen miles in 18min. 40sec., creating a world's record.

Although John Gunn's innings of 294 still holds the field against all comers this season, G. L. Jessop's 286, as reported in our London sporting letter to-day, is undoubtedly the more remarkable. It was made in less than three hours and practically with only a single partner, Board, who helped him to increase the score by 320. Jessop hardly made a mistake throughout the innings. His previous highest innings was 233 against Yorkshire.

The following entries have so far been received for the I. F. A. Challenge Shield Competition.—Royal Irish Rifles, from Fyzabad; Prince of Wales's Volunteers (1st Battalion, South Lancashire Regiment), from Jubbulpore; 93rd Highlanders (holders); K. O. S. B.; Calcutta Football Club; Dalhousie Football Club; United Club, Howrah; Calcutta Rangers Club; Sova Bazar F. C.; Hare Sporting, Chinsurah; and Customs F. C.

No fewer than twenty-two teams have entered for the Trades' Challenge Cup. This is four more than last year and a record so far, 20 being the previous best in 1899. The following are the entries:—National Association (holders); Howrah Sporting Club; Aryan Sporting Club; Entally F. C.; Stalwart Sporting Club; Jamalpore Gymkhana; Apprentice Engineers' Recreation Club, Jamalpore; Gaurangdi F. C.; Y. M. C. A.; Chowringhee F. C.; Port Commissioners F. C.; Mahomedan Sporting Club; Dalhousie F. C.; Moslem F. C.; Calcutta Union; Mohan Bagan Sporting Club; St. Xavier's College; Seebpore College; Medical College; Calcutta Boys' School; Bengal-Nagpore Railway, and Sporting Union.

Last Saturday, a boxing entertainment was got up by Mr. Artie Tully and carried through at the Tivoli Theatre when the air was thick with challenges. Tully opened the exhibition with a ball punching display, after which Pybus and Irvine fought six rounds. Pybus is very quick and in spite of his opponent's size, made a draw of it. A bout of four rounds between Brown and White also ended in a draw. Then Fisher met Swan of the Royal Irish Rifles. It was only a four rounds contest, but a good display was given and there was plenty of hard hitting, Swan eventually getting the verdict by a point. Fisher has challenged Swan to fight ten rounds for a purse, the contest being arranged to come off after three weeks. Govia has challenged Fisher to fight twenty rounds with four ounce gloves 10st. 6lbs., give or take two pounds. Lamphier challenged Tully for a purse of Rs. 1,000, the latter immediately accepting. The date, however, has not been fixed.

On dit the Bombay Gymkhana intend, if possible, to send a four to represent them at the big Poona regatta this year.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—Association football may now be said to be in full swing in Bombay, and during the past week quite a number of matches have been played, some of which have been in connexion with the Harwood League, which was instituted last year with such success. The idea of starting the League originated with Colonel Harwood, R.A.M.C. after whom it has been called, and the success which attended it last year was of such a character that there was no doubt but that it was destined to become an annual thing. This year practically every local team has entered, and the fixtures comprise over forty matches, so that local followers of the "soccer" code have an excellent season to look forward to, for in addition there is the Rovers' Tournament, which comes on in September, and of course, any number of friendly games. The Rovers and R. G. A. set the ball rolling on Saturday last with a well-contested game, which resulted in a win for the civilians by one goal to nil. In connexion with the League the Rovers, on Monday, met the Telegraph eleven, and ran out winners by one goal to nil. For the winners McLachan and Serafton played a sound game at back, while Chatt was the best of the half-backs, and Tyler and Gawthorne did good work among the forwards. For the losers Game played a good defensive game at back. On Wednesday evening the Telegraph eleven met with their second defeat, being beaten by the "B" team of the North Staffordshire Reg. by four goals to nil. R. G. A. and the R. E. teams met on Friday evening, but the game was of a very one-sided character. The Gunners held the upper hand throughout and eventually won by five goals to nil. On Thursday evening we witnessed a very interesting practice game in connexion with the Gymkhana, and considering the number of men who turned out and the good form shown by many of them, I am of opinion that they have a successful season before them. They play their first league match on 7th July, when they will meet the Rovers.

Considerable interest is being evinced in the series of golf matches which are taking place between the Bankers and the World. In the first two matches the World proved successful, but the Bankers were not satisfied with this and challenged the World to a foursome match, which came off a morning or two since. Eight couples were down to play for each side, but, at the last moment, two of the representatives of the World were unable to turn out, and the match resolved itself into seven couples aside. The result was another defeat for the Bankers, this time by seventeen holes to three. The winners for the World were Messrs. H. W. Meikle and L. Stansfield, who beat Messrs. D. H. Brand and James Carnegie 2 up; Messrs. H. S. Jacob and H. G. Hart, who beat Messrs T. W. McLachlan and Ralph Kidd 5 up; the Rev. J. Cameron and Mr. C. St. Paul, who beat Messrs. G. C. Scott and R. Fairnie 4 up; Messrs. Innes Ker and J. Reed, who beat Messrs. W. J. K. Hegarty and A. A. Legat 4 up; and Messrs. C. Thomson and C. W. Breal, who beat Messrs. J. Lapraik and J. Esplin 2 up. For the Bankers. Messrs. J. Stiven and F. H. Grey beat Messrs. P. F. Fischer and Mr. C. J. J. Jones by 2 up; while Messrs. R. A. Don and R. H. M. Steven beat Major Rogers and Mr. E. E. Coombs by 1 up. No less than ten of the players for the Bankers belong to the National Bank.

The Bombay Gymkhana opened their cricket season yesterday (Saturday), when a match was played between teams of thirteen representing the Civil and United Services. The latter won the toss, and elected to bat, and when they had scored 128 for the loss of eight wickets declared their innings closed. To this total Lieutenant Langhorn contributed 37 before he retired, and in him the Gymkhana have secured a very useful bat. He has a nice crisp style, times his strokes well, and can hit hard. Major Street also played well for his 26, while Lieutenants, Carroll and Scott contributed 21 and 17, respectively. When the Civil commenced their innings only about an hour remained for play, and during that time they scored 76 runs for the loss of two wickets, H. E. Harrington scoring 28 (not out) and F. J. Clark 26. Both batted well, but one or two of the former's strokes were a bit risky. For the Civil Clark bowled well, securing three wickets at a cost of thirteen runs. The Parsee Gymkhana also opened their season yesterday with a match against Ralli Brothers' C. C., but neither side appeared to be in good batting form—the Parsee Gymkhana won by 70 runs to 59.

The next Calcutta Rowing Club Regatta will be held on the 15th August, when the Hoare Cup and Senior Sculls events will be decided. Entries for the former close on the 15th July and for the Sculls on the 8th August.

looked forward to with considerable interest, seems to have proved a regular fiasco. With so many county matches on at the same time, and with about half their Indian team not yet home again, the Authentics were apparently unable to put anything like a representative eleven into the field, and indeed K. J. Key himself was the only man on the side who had made the Indian tour. Correspondingly the Oxford University eleven was at nothing like full strength, the majority of the old blues in residence standing down to give a trial to a number of batsmen and bowlers who are in the running for places in this year's team, but even so they proved far too good for the Authentics whom they beat by an innings and 76 after declaring their own innings closed.

In the final tie of the Tollygunge Club Golf Handicap Tournament by match play which took place last Friday, after having been unavoidably postponed owing to Mr. Sutherland's ill-healllh, a most exciting struggle was seen between Captain Peacock (receives 12 strokes) and Mr. G. H. Sutherland, who was conceding one-third. Mr. Sutherland led throughout and stood 4 up and 7, and again 2 up and only 3 holes to play, but Captain Peacock, who appears to have had the best of the luck, pulled him down by dint of some long puts, and eventually won on the last green by cannoning into the hole off Mr. Sutherland's ball.

General Notes.

HIS Excellency the Commander-in-Chief gives a ball at Snowdon, Simla, on Thursday, the 9th July.

Mr. E. Cable, of Messrs. Bird & Co., Calcutta, succeeds Sir Montagu Turner on the Viceroy's Council.

We regret to learn that Lieutenant H. H. B. Prior, of the 43rd Gurkhas, was drowned while boating at Manipur on Sunday, the 21st instant.

Lord Suffolk, A.-D.-C. to H. E. the Viceroy, left Simla for England by last mail. His absence will be greatly felt by his many friends and India will have lost a good sportsman.

During a thunderstorm at Chaibassa on the 12th instant Mrs. Mungavin, wife of the Civil Medical Officer, was struck by lightning while in her bungalow, death being instantaneous.

We regret to hear of an accident to Mr. Foote of Messrs. Wrenn Bennett & Co., Madras. While cycling on the Cooum Road a native ran into him and he was thrown badly, fracturing his right leg.

Another drowning fatality ! At Hyderabad in Sind on the 14th instant offerings were being made to the river god by the people, when a boat containing 130 persons capsized, and thirty are believed to have been drowned. The boatmen on the bunder, as is usual with the native in these cases, rendered no assistance.

At a meeting called last week by Mr. E. W. Orr at D'Anglis Garden, Madras, it was proposed to establish a Trades' Social Club, and a Provisional Committee was appointed to go into the question. Although primarily instituted by the trading community of Madras, it is not proposed to make it exclusively a Trades' Club. It occurs to us to ask what has become of the project for starting a Calcutta Trades' Club ; apparently it died in the preliminary prospectus stage.

The latest additions to the Calcutta Zoological Gardens are three tiger cubs, two of them presented by His Excellency Lord Curzon and the other by Mr. F. A. Slacke, Commissioner of Chota Nagpur. The Viceroy sent down three cubs from his camp at Rewa, but one them has since died. The other two little fellows, aged two months, are going strong and are extremely playful. Mr. Slacke's present-ation is four months old and is caged, the others are in an enclosure, near the Burdwan House. It is as good as a pantomime to see them fed with milk out of a Mahomedan wash pot in the early mornings.

Last Thursday the Old Wellingtonian dinner was held at Simla. General Stuart Beatson was in the chair, and among others present were Colonel Hawkins, R. A. ; Mr. H. S. Harrington, P. W. D. ; Colonel A. Bayley, C. B. ; Major Unwin, Punjab Cavalry ; Rev. G. Nicholls ; Captain Fox Stangways ; J. H. Bill, C. S. ; Lieutenants W. P. Parsons, R. A. ; Caulfield, R. A. ; Crawshay, Welsh Fusiliers ; Lieutenant-Colonel A. Beacher ; Captain Ready, Welsh Regiment ; and Lieutenant R. E. Bate. General Beatson proposed the health of the Old School and telegrams were received from similar gatherings at Lucknow, Murree, Calcutta, Bannu, and Srinagar.

Our Poona correspondent writes :—I see that in one of our local churches last Sunday one of the two patent burners refused to be lighted, while the other flared up in such a terrifying manner that it had to be quenched, the chaplain having regretfully to announce that service could not he held ! It almost makes one wonder if it was not a respectful protest on the part of the Washington burners against the stamp of sermon one is so frequently compelled to listen to out in this country. Imagine the effect on a jury of a barrister who read his speech, unable to look up lest he should "lose his place" and stammering and stuttering in the middle of every alternate sentence. How impressive too it would be to see a commanding officer making his men mark time in the middle of some intricate manœuvre, while he fumbled about in the drill book for the next word of command. What a strange thing therefore it seems that of the men whose profession in life it is to save the souls of their fellow-creatures, and who are paid for doing so, scarcely one in a hundred can stand up and say a few manly earnest words for fifteen minutes without ceaseless references to the manuscript he has so laboriously written or patiently copied. Such incompetency would scarcely be permitted in any other profession, and it is indeed a strange thing that those responsible do not insist on a greater efficiency in what ought to be the most noble and earnest profession in the world.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 5th June 1903.

AT this time of year you are hardly likely to receive in an appreciative spirit laudatory remarks on your climate, but if there be aught of merit in consistency you have at least something to be satisfied with. How grateful should we be for the English summer, three hot days and a thunderstorm ! A hot day and three thunderstorms has been more the rule for the last week. On Wednesday we were lighting fires again and grumbling at the maids for not lighting them before breakfast ; and then to add insult to injury a friend wired me to "hurry up and come down" with my rod because the Mayfly was up. More fool the Mayfly, I draw the line at dryfly fishing in a winter greatcoat, woollen gloves, and comforter in June. To-day it is torrid again.

The thunderstorm on Saturday afternoon and early on Sunday morning were peculiar. Never have I heard such violent crashes in Europe, and the storm hung lingeringly over the western suburbs. The meteorologists suggest that the western suburbs are thus favoured because of the "enormous development of electrical energy" artificially produced for working the tram-lines; as though the elements were protesting against mankind chaining the lightning and making it work. What gives colour to this theory is that the storm rolled to and fro between Gunnersbury and Twickenham along the tram route. It was bad enough over Kensington, but further west it was alarming, even to a vessel who has been seasoned in the East. A cheering sequel was the dense, white clammy fog which held us empalled for hours after the deluge of rain ceased.

The G. P. O. announces that a committee of eight has been appointed to consider the best means of providing for the conveyance of the mails to and from the East and Autralasia when the existing contracts with the P. and O. and Orient lines expire. The mere outsider does not see where the Indian mail service can be improved so far as the quick carriage of letters is concerned.

Marble Hill, better known from afar as the view from Richmond Hill, was opened as a public park on Saturday. One so rarely finds opportunity to pat the L. C. C. on the back that the occasion is gratifying : the view cost £72,000, half of which the L. C. C. found, the balance being contributed by the district authorities, Messrs. Rothschild, and by Mr. Pierpont Morgan, who gave his £1,000. It was a fellow-countryman of his who bought up all the echoes he heard of: views seem to be a better investment, particularly views whose preservation checkmate the further expansion of the overgrown village.

The Court of Arbitration appointed under last year's Metropolitan Water Act sat for the first time last Friday. The eight water companies which are obliged thereby to sell their undertakings to the Metropolitan Water Board handed in claims amounting to 47½ millions within a few thousands. The New River Company, whose history is an industrial roman-e dating from James I.'s time, claims 11½ millions. Charles I. showed an unfortunate lack of foresight and consideration for his descendants when he sold his 36 King's shares then quoted at £100 each for an annuity of £500. A whole "King's share" in the New River Company was sold in 1890 : it brought £94,900.

I don't know whether you will care to print the following instructive letter from a soldier which appeared in last Monday's Times. Following the Report of the Committee appointed to enquire into the extravagance of officers individually and of regimental messes collectively, this letter is timely and illuminating. It is a pity the writer did not append excerpts from his tailor's bills :—

The improvements in military "modes" here set forth have taken place in my time. Very minor details I have not noted, nor the idiosyncratic requirements of various commanding officers. The dates are only approximate ; also, I have given no account of the separate changes of Indian patterns.

1880.—Tunics—badges of rank moved from collar to shoulder, gold lace shoulder cords introduced ; mess-jackets—roll collar abolished, stand up collar introduced, gold lace shoulder cords introduced.

1886—Field service caps introduced.

1888.—Miniature medals abolished.

1895.—Red serges—pattern altered, sword worn inside ; blue serges—Norfolk jacket shape introduced.

1901.—Tunics—collar and sleeve lace altered ; gold lace put on tails ; blue frock coats introduced.

1903.—Drab serge coats—badges of rank altered.

It will readily be noticed how the authorities have been stimulated, I suppose by the lessons of the war, to urge on important reforms in uniforms. Nor are they content to rest on their laurels ; we are further promised that this year will see the abolition of the frock coat and drab grey coat and the reintroduction of the grey great-coat and of gold lace stripes on our full dress trousers, also the alteration of the badges of rank on our serge coats. When the great minds and energies of the authorities are spending themselves in imagining adornments for him, verily the officer would be ungrateful if he grudged spending part of his liberal emoluments on reforms so well devised for striking terror into his country's foes. And the taxpayer may rest assured that everything possible, at any rate in the way of tailoring, is being done to protect him from alarms and incursions.

The terrible mishap at Eton has given rise to much criticism of the houses and, so far as some of them are concerned, it is fair enough. Many of them are old, inconvenient, and inflammable ; and "Baldwin's", combined in its picturesque self most of the objections to an old house from the standpoint of safety. Endeavours have been made to work upon public feeling with accounts of young Horne's death : the reality was bad enough ; he was found suffocated where he had fallen at the barred window, and, as in the case of Lawson, the smoke saved him the greater agony. The inquest throws no light on the cause of the fire ; whether it was due to the electric light installation or to the gas there was no evidence to show. We only learn that the house was roused by the roar of flames about four o'clock on Monday morning, and that the fire even then was quite beyond control.

The Queen drove down to Eton on Tuesday to inspect the scene of the fire and personally expressed her sympathy. I am told she was greatly impressed by the circumstance that many of the boys escaped by climbing down the great wisteria which contributed so much to the beauty of the house in summer; and undoubtedly the casualty roll had been much longer in its absence. Messages of condolence have been pouring in ever since the disaster was made known. There was no "Fourth" this week: all arrangements and invitations were cancelled at once; and so for three years in succession now the Eton festival has not been observed in traditional fashion.

Mr. H. G. J. Lotbinière suggests a solution of the native labour problem in the Rand by getting 20,000 coolies from India yearly for two years—each coolie on a two years' agreement at Rs. 36 per month, Rs. 20 of which to accumulate as deferred pay till his return home. He thinks coolies would jump at it! So do I: only the coolie being a singularly apt man of business would assuredly expect interest on his deferred pay, and I should feel inclined to adopt only that part of the scheme which proposes to pay the man's family five dibs a month during his absence; he can be trusted to take care of his own pice with, of course, the aid of the maistre. Mr. Lotbinière writes of the "Indian" as "very intelligent and highly civilised": he is hardly the latter, perhaps, unless you take the Kaffir as your standard of measurement, but certainly intelligent and a man of affairs. After some sad years of dealings with the Malabar Coast coolie, I am prepared to support the assertion that what he doesn't know is not worthy learning.

I omitted last week to refer to the dismissal from St. Petersburg of the Times correspondent. The gentleman was requested to leave forthwith, but the intervention of the Ambassador secured him three days' grace at the end of which he was politely but firmly escorted out of the Tsar's dominions. Evidently the Russian authorities read the Times with critical attention and disapprove of comment upon their policy in Finland and their absence of policy in connection with the Kishnieff affairs. It must be admitted that the Thunderer's attitude towards the Russian Government in these matters has not been sympathetic, it had been passing strange were it otherwise; but for such time as Russia claims to be regarded as a Western Power, for such time must she expect to be considered through Western spectacles, though of course to have a reporter sitting ever on his doorstep making hostile comment on his domestic proceedings would be intolerable to a man not necessarily hypersensitive.

The agitation against motors grows apace: the race that was stopped at Bordeaux has given it a stimulus. One good suggestion is that some of the old canals which formed so important a feature of the English transport and travelling system in former days should be laid dry and made over to motorists for their own special delectation. Many of the old canals are practically disused and connect large towns by the shortest routes. Travellers on the bottom wouldn't get much in the shape of view therefrom, but they might mote at any pace they pleased. Sir Ralph Payne Gallwey, inspired perhaps by his late study of the mediæval cross bow, suggests legalising the use of the shot gun and cartridges of No. 8. He points out that the shot marks would furnish sure means of identification. So they would: and the language of the peppered motorist would help. But suppose you kill your motorist? How is the car to be stopped in that event? I should be the last to beg even a short close season for scorching motorists, but the picture of cars flying uncontrolled about the roads at 60 miles an hour with nothing but the dead game on board fills me with dismay. Try again Sir Ralph: what about a Maxim used low on the works?

The Stock Exchange Walk to Brighton has started a "boom" in pedestrianism. I should have thought that the girls in London tea-shops had enough walking exercise in the daily pursuit of their vocation, but evidently it only serves to remind some of them that they must be in good training: wherefore 160 waitresses wearing white aprons assembled at the Royal Exchange at 7-30 A.M. on Whit Monday morning to walk a race to Marble Arch, viâ Queen Victoria Street, the Embankment, Grosvenor Place, and Park Lane. Four miles. Annie Grainger took the lead near Cleopatra's needle and going well within herself won. Victoria Bateman 2nd; Emma Stephens 3rd.

Won by thirty yards; six teaspoons between second and third.

The Hippodrome Whitsuntide programme includes a variation of "Looping the Loop" which it calls "Hooping the Hoop", an up-to-date performance, inasmuch as it is accomplished in a motor car which depends not on its engines, but its weight for the velocity necessary to carry it round an iron hoop 20 feet in diameter. A courageous young woman, Miss Mina Alix, sits in the car; her journey occupies about three seconds, but I imagine the sensations of a lifetime are crowded into them. The "Hoop" differs from the "Loop" in being a complete circle; the car enters it by a trap door which is instantly closed automatically and leaves by another which opens by a similar device. Having seen the performance once, one mentally enquires what would happen if the first trap failed to shut or the exit trap to open. Miss Alix, however, appeared to have perfect confidence in the machinery. Her engaging smile must have been the most difficult part of her daring performance.

The Gordian Knot got itself untied after a week's run (it was only put on for six nights I believe), and on Saturday Trilby was produced at His Majesty's. Mr. Tree in his old part of Svengali and Miss Dorothea Baird as Trilby received a regular ovation. They deserved it. Svengali is the part which Mr. Tree has made peculiarly his own; he has got Du Maurier's unattractive creation to the life and Svengali at His Majesty's steps out of the novel on to the stage. Eight years has done a great deal for Miss Baird as an actress; she made her name as Trilby, and good as her reading of the part was her acting now has wonderfully improved. She and Mr. Tree carry the weight of the play and do it easily. The Laird (Mr. Lionel Brough), Taffy (Mr. Edmund Maurice) and Little Billee (Mr. Norman Tharp), are worthy of their leaders.

Trilby was more than cordially received, but the gods in the gallery made a dead set at an actor who took perhaps an indiscreetly prominent part in the Criterion row of a few months ago. The moment he came on they began yelping. Those of the audience who are not in the confidence of the gallery first-nighter clique could not make head or tail of it; but the natural instincts of the better part of the house prompted them to single out the said actor, whose name I withhold of intention, for special applause.

The play is only on for a week. On Monday night Alfred Austin, Poet Laureate, gets a show for his Flodden Field at which the King has promised to be present, Guy's Hospital benefiting. Alfred is thus sure of an audience for one night at all events. A dramatised version of Kipling's The Man Who Was is to follow Flodden Field.

Just Like Callaghan at the Criterion is an adaptation from the French by Cosmo Gordon Lennox and its theme is as old as matrimony. Manderberry (Mr. Fred Kerr) has a taste for mild dissipation and to shield Mrs. M. (Miss Annie Hughes) from pain invents for the pack horse of his misdeeds one Callaghan, who is his very double and is always being mistaken for him. Manderberry works the deception with boldness and skill, writing anonymous letters to Mrs. M. to tell her that he (Manderberry) was dining at the Carlton Hotel or lunching somewhere else with ladies of light character on such a night or day, which reports are obviously untrue because Manderberry dined at home or lunched at home with Mrs. Manderberry on those particular occasions. Mrs. M. therefore has no suspicion and no complaint except that her spotless mate should have such a dissipated double. The fun begins to get fast when Manderberry determines to present himself at his own house in the character of Callaghan to convince his suspicious visitor Mrs. Hare (Miss Fanny Brough). Nemesis overtakes him in the shape of an attack of cramp, but he contrives to smuggle himself as Callaghan out of the house and return in his own proper person. Complications are supplied by Dr. Hare (Mr. O. B. Clarence) and Major Harroway (Mr. F. Volpe), but into these space forbids me to go; it needs no great experience of the theatre to recognise the possibilities of complication in such a device. One has, like the Marchioness, to "make believe very much," as credibility is rather overtaxed; but the piece went well after the first act which dragged a bit and wants brightening up more than a little. Miss Fanny Brough, as the suspicious and prying Mrs. Hare, took the honours.

JOTTINGS FROM JUNGLYPORE

II.

IN my last I said we would discuss the subject of rifles for use on Indian game. A good deal has been written and said of late concerning cordite rifles, the older big-bores, the newer small-bores and it must be confessed, bores of many descriptions! But here goes again!

What we think, here at Junglypore, is that too many men make the mistake of endeavouring to obtain a perfect "all-round" weapon. This apparently is not yet to be had.

Let us re-consider this question of modern weapons. Up to about ten years' ago sportsmen used either the large bore rifle (or ball gun) or the express rifle—both with black powder. About this period it was discovered that the new military small bore rifles possessed wonderful powers with a suitable bullet, and these rifles so deservedly "caught on" with many sportsmen that they emerged triumphantly from all kinds of troubles occasioned by faulty, smokeless "powders" and unsuitable bullets. As was natural, however, these rifles were soon tried beyond their powers, and out of their own particular sphere in some cases they exceeded their admirers' most sanguine hopes—in a good many others they led to very dire accidents, on account of their general lack of knocking-down power. This led to the evolution of the medium-bore cordite rifle, which began to attract the notice of sportsmen about the year 1898. These medium-bore high velocity cordite rifles sprang rapidly into favour, in spite of the failure of those manufactured by certain incautious firms. They are practically magnified ·303's, ·275's, or ·256's. Their effect on game is so wonderful in most instances, and so peculiarly so when they are used against really heavy game, that sportsmen generally have been rather led away in consequence into imagining that here at last is the perfect all-round weapon. Further, they have been deceived into placing an extraordinary amount of confidence in these weapons, with which they have faced dangers that they would have avoided in the days of the black powder express. The inevitable result—as in the previous case of the new small-bores—is that a reaction has set in.

It is not difficult to follow the reasons for the few accidents that of late appear to have shaken the faith of men in the medium-bore cordite rifles. These weapons enable one to kill at greater sporting ranges than do the big-bores, and also perhaps the expresses. As a rule, therefore, dangerous game succumbs before it can come to close quarters, and over-confidence is thereby fostered. An animal which has not previously noticed the rifleman is not guided to him by the smoke. In some cases the bullets for use in these new rifles are designed only to give their best results on ponderous game, and, naturally, may and do fail when used against tigers, lions, or panthers, whose bodies offer far less resistance.

Great capital against the ·450 cordite rifle was made out of the lately reported lion shooting accident in East Africa, but most of it was irrational; people seem to expect to obtain perfect results from weapons whose peculiarities they have not troubled to study.

Now to look at the question from the other point of view. We in Junglypore have had, for the last six years, very exceptional opportunities of forming an opinion on the merits of various classes of sporting arms. Among our number are devotees of both old and new systems, and we have had between us practically every kind of sporting weapon that exists. Here is a list to convince the sceptic:—

8-bore rifle, 10-bore and 12-bore "Paradox," 12-bore rifle, ·577 magnum (Sam Baker pattern) rifle, ·500 magnum rifle (440 grain bullet.) ·500 express, ·450 cordite (Rigby's) rifle, ·400 cordite (Jeffery's) rifle, ·303, Mauser 275, and Mannlicher ·256.

Junglypore, moreover, possesses almost unique opportunities for shikar, both great and small; while some of us invariably sally forth further afield each hot weather. Among several men of differing views, different ideas naturally prevail, and even when these are sifted it is difficult to particularise. One point on which there is a consensus of opinion is that no satisfactory truly all-round rifle yet exists. After that, a choice of weapons rests largely with the sportsman himself. Allowing that a smokeless propellant is in all ways superior to black powder, the rest is a question of a man's build and physique. If he can handle it, the bigger the bore the better for close jungle work. For ponderous game the medium-bore cordite rifle comes in first favourite. For dangerous soft-skinned game, at close ranges, the ball and shot gun of the Paradox type, not smaller than 12-bore. For long range shooting, at hill or plain non-dangerous game, the ·303, as giving rather better killing power than the smaller bores. In these three we have succeeded in reducing to the minimum a long list of favourite weapons.

In our opinion, except for use on ponderous game with the proper bullet, the high velocity rifle appears to have too high a velocity for sporting purposes. Throughout a large experience it has been noted that, although actually conveying far less damage to the animal struck, the slower travelling ordinary express bullet and, in still greater degree, the Paradox bullet, knocks down an animal, whereas the cordite rifle appears rather to numb its victim with the extraordinary velocity of its projectile, which appears to lose knocking-down power in an impact which is so sudden and penetrative.

There seems to be less chance of an animal eventually getting away when hit by a high velocity rifle, but the slower travelling bullet rolls a beast over, at least temporarily, and enables one to put in more shooting before it can regain its legs. Dynamics are beyond the scope of this weekly scribble, but appear to bear out our argument. It is the knock-down push or blow that is so useful in that short second of time when a man may be reached by a brute thirsting for his blood; and that this is best conveyed by a handy ball and shot gun seems incontestable. What we do require now is a reliable smokeless powder for use behind the Paradox ball, for the smoke produced by black powder is awful, especially in a damp atmosphere.

Them's our Junglypore sentiments, with the reservation that—"werry little's ce.tain, 'speshully in 'untin'," where, on occasions, all one's practical experience is set at nought by some circumstance of chance.

To be personal, I have come up into the hills behind Junglypore for a time and have already had a somewhat stirring encounter with a tigress. Of her more in my next.

"Drak."

A VILLAGE TIGER.

Copyrighted.

We have all got our little hidden beliefs, which though even to ourselves we pretend to scoff at, yet in reality have more than a half faith in. It is of one of these that I am about to tell you.

Napoleon the First is said to have had so great a dislike to a white rabbit that the sight of one turned him sick. I fancy though the thought of the Iron Duke made him a good deal more so. I know a man now in Calcutta who not only cannot stay in the same room as a cat, but can always tell you when one is near him, though he has neither seen, or heard it or smelled it. In like manner as it has happened so many times to me I have come to a half, a more than half belief, that the direct result of my shooting a snipe while after tiger or panther, is, that either I or some one with me will be mauled that day. Mind the conditions are that I, having received news of one of these felines, start out to shoot him; that on my way I unpremeditatedly and quite accidentally put up a snipe and bowl it over. I will now tell you of the first time it happened. I do not care to give the real name of my companion as he is still alive, nor the date and place, but it's all quite true nevertheless.

For about ten days I had been written to by a small zemindar to come and shoot a tiger that had for some time been a scourge to his ryots by killing their cattle. I was at the time full up with work and it was most inconvenient to leave it, yet I sent round the news to all the Europeans of the little mofusil station. None, however, cared to come, when it was proposed to go out on foot. The zemindar at last got a nuisance, and one day when Smith (that's as good a name as any other for him) happened to be in my office, I wrote to say I would go, provided he had the brute fairly well located, and would provide beaters. Smith, who was told all this, asked to be allowed to come with me. Never in his life, as I heard afterwards, having shot any thing but a few crows and kites. I did not I say know that then and thought the man an expert shikari since he could always talk sport ad lib. His rooms being choked up with books on sport, large game and wild fowling, trophies too adorned his place, skins and horns.

Two o'clock in the afternoon saw us at the village and we found the zemindar in a most gorgeous palki. He pointed to a straggling patch of jungle and then to one or two others, casually remarking that the tiger might be there. "But," I asked, "where is he now, you have surely had him marked down?"

"Oh, it is somewhere about" replied the oleaginous baboo, "you finding him looking round." Well a three-mile walk is apt to be heating to the blood, specially if topped up with a disappointment.

"Where are the beaters you promised? Do you mean to tell me that you have not even troubled to mark him down?"

"Honourable Sir you can do anything you please, but how can poor mans be told to enter jungles with biting tigers."

Whereupon, beginning six generations back I gave him a faithful and true history of the characters of all his female relations concluding with the remark that no self-respecting toad would own him for a first cousin and that even his own mother could hardly say if he was a bat or a lizard.

Just then one of the villagers said that he could take us to a kill about four days old, and as there was nothing else to be done, off we started, a few men volunteering to come too. We went through some knee high grass jungle and poked about a bit: it was a silly thing to do, because in grass, even only so high, it was quite possible for a tiger to hide till you tumbled over him. Our two dogs, however, roamed freely, so it was clear that there was no tiger about. Soon we came upon the remains of the old kill, a few dried up broken bones, the men wanted us to push our way through thick scrub jungle and cane brake but I refused to do that. It is inconvenient interviewing tigers on your hands and knees; they do not like it and are apt to resent any such rudeness.

Coming away I spied in the distance a likely looking bit of marsh for snipe. I had all along had my doubts as to our finding a tiger, but thought we might get a chance at a snipe or two, and in consequence we had both brought some snipe cartridges with us. Accordingly we gave up all hopes of getting stripes and went for the long bills. Smith's dog put up the birds in twos and threes, out far out of range. He neither obeyed call or whistle but romped about like a clown in a circus. Smith's shooting too was a revelation. I do believe he fired his gun off in every conceivable position except between his legs. He fired at snipe half a mile off and then audibly "think he'd touched it up that time." After a couple of charges of shot had spattered up the mud almost in my face I thought it time to be going, so I voted a return homeward. On our way back we met the zemindar's gomasta, or rent collector. He said he had got together some beaters and there were fresh pug marks into a narrow strip of high land, so perhaps the tiger was there; would we come and help the poor villagers to get rid of this cattle-devouring brute? Going to the place I had a look round. A narrow strip of jungle in length from east to west, four hundred yards or so; a broad drain full of water cut right through it from north to south. Here I thought, was a grand place for the guns. I placed Smith at the north end, I stopped at the south. To get at us stripes would have to cross this ditch and the water would check his rush somewhat, while if he passed between us we would each get a lovely shot as he crossed. The beat began. The men were to beat up from east to west. Not many men were needed as the place was only about a hundred yards broad. After a little the shouts died away, and it seemed as though they had stopped. After waiting some time, and thinking the men had at the last moment funked the beat, I told my man to throw a clod of earth into a tuft of grass across the drain, where a couple of snipe had just pitched. Substituting No. 8 cartridges for the ball ones I had in my gun I made a neat right and left as they soared.

Just as I had bowled over my birds a man came running up to say that the tiger was in a cane brake and would not stir. Quickly reloading with ball I ran down the southern edge of the jungle for about half way to the beaters, then I turned into it getting on to higher ground as I did so. A chorus of shouts told me something was up and I saw a tiger burst through a bush, and make for the ridge I was on. I got off that high ground pretty slippy and back into the open. The direction the animal was taking would bring it past me about fifteen yards to my left. I did not think it would go for me if I stood still and I hoped to get a shot broad side on as it passed. The brute had seen me, however, and with a series of coughing grunts it came for me. It was a beautiful sight. The glaring eyes, the red gaping mouth furnished with ivory white teeth which showed up quite distinctly against their red background, the lovely silver ruff standing out and forming a fitting frame to the whole. I could not help thinking what a magnificent sight it was. I at the same time was inwardly cursing my stupidity for being there at all, not to put too fine a point on it I was in a blue funk. As he altered his direction and swerved for me just at the top of the rise I fired. There was a half rear, then down went his head, the body pitched forward against a sapling which smashed beneath the weight, and turning a complete somersault fell with its tail actually sweeping against my ankles. Well I like my boots brushed as a rule, but there are exceptions and I objected to them being done like that so backed out to a respectable distance. As the animal lay still a crowd of natives, who had seen the whole affair from about five hundred yards off, came running up, probably with a view to the theft of the whiskers. I turned towards them to caution them not to go close as we did not know if it was dead. Just then as I spoke I caught a movement out of the corner of my eyes. There was a convulsive shiver, a heave, and Master Stripes was into the jungle like a flash. I was just at the time taking out the empty cartridge case from my gun and had barely time to snap the breach to and take a hurried shot at him which as we afterwards learned only touched him up on its flank. Smith hearing the firing came round and I told him what had happend and I asked him if he was game to follow up the wounded beast shoulder to shoulder with me. He expressed his willingness so taking two other men to help in tracking, we mounted the higher ground and soon picked out blood tracks. These led us through some rather open tall weeds into scrub jungle, and at last struck a cattle path, following along which, we brought up in front of a large cane brake through which there was a sort of tunnel which ended in a grass patch beyond. We could only get to this grass by crawling on our hands and knees for about three or four yards, but this I would not do. We were getting close to the other side of the jungle and I was certain that a wounded animal would not pass through it to the open cultivation beyond and as the scrub was very thick at the other end of the grass patch I told Smith I felt sure that the tiger was in it and would charge the first to enter the grass.

It was imperative then that we entered it prepared for instant action. We then sent the men back for daos to cut away a few branches so as to enable us to walk through erect into the grass. While the men where cutting the jungle from the track I stood over them directing them and keeping my weather eye open as sailors say for any action on the part of Master Stripes and I believed that all this time Smith was just behind us. It appears though that hoping and expecting to come across him more or less hors de combat Smith had left me; he had gone back a little, worked round the clump of bushes to our left; there he came across a clear opening into the grasspatch but not daring to enter it himself, yet wanting to stea a march on me he sent his servant on ahead to pry round.

As the last obstruction in front of me was cleared away I looked round for Smith and not seeing him was just about to ask where he had gone when I heard those grunting roars that a tiger gives when charging, and looking forward saw Stripes charging out of the bushes beyond into the grass patch. Smith's servant was in the middle of it and Smith a few yards behind him. The man was running back to his master, then very luckily for himself turned at right angles and dived into a bush. Smith blazed one barrel straight into the air, dropped his gun and turned and ran like a hare. I have heard it said that a charging tiger never turns, but goes straight. I know this one took every turn and twist, Smith did, coursed him like a greyhound, jumping up through the long grass to see its way as one has so often seen dogs do in a hay field.

I was not quite sure at first whether the animal might not swerve on to me and I determined to reserve fire for very close quarters; but as I saw both Smith and Stripes pass by the bush on my left, I ran after them. All I could think of was, I could never show up in the station again unless I got Smith back too and then the rather selfish thought ran through my brain, "Better get at Stripes while his attention is taken up with Smith. "Once Smith is done for," thought I, "the brute will then do for me." I was after them while so thinking and getting a clear shot fired just as Stripes grabbed Smith. They fell together, tiger on top I nearly fell over them in my haste. I spoilt that skin for putting the muzzles of my barrels to the brute's head I fired from my hip and blew it to Jericho so to speak. Smith staggered up his shoulder, an awful sight. I got some whisky into him I always take whisky out when going shooting, one never knows how useful it may be. To show you a Bengalee's idea of gratitude I may remark that there was some little delay in getting water and whisky for Smith which prevented us going for his gun and when we did go (it was on our way back and not twenty or thirty yards off) we could not find it. It had been stolen by the very men whose cattle we had come to save and for whose sakes we had risked our lives. We never got it back. Let any Government official who may read this ponder. This is the race we are placing in positions of trust and responsibility. These are the men whose words in a court of law are considered the equal of or even more to be relied on than an Englishman's.

AFTER CAVE TIGERS IN CHINA.

Although tigers are found in both North and South China in suitable country, under similar conditions to those obtaining in India, there is a certain stretch of coast along the south-eastern littoral which they frequent, albeit the nature of their surroundings are such as to give one the impression of being a most unlikely district for them to harbour in.

In the neighbourhood of Amoy and along the south east coast generally there is but little cover for large game of any description, and with the exception of a small species of deer—known locally as the hog-deer, but not resembling the Indian deer of that name—it is doubtful if any other of the larger beasts, beyond tigers, are found, to some considerable distance inland.

Tigers, however, exist in some numbers along this coast and their strongholds, from which they issue usually only at night, are the numerous caves and fissures in the rocks which are found along the shore and more especialy along the banks of the rivers that enter the sea at several points.

About a year ago an opportunity offered of visiting Amoy, which is noted as being one of the best places for finding these tigers, for although caves exist in plenty all along the sea-board, certain spots seem to be more favoured by the animals, and certain caves are generally a safe find year after year, being usually re-occupied by another beast if the original owner is destroyed.

The banks of the river that enters the sea near Amoy is one of the most favourite locations. Here caves of all sizes abound in the rocky cliffs, but those which the tigers as a rule frequent are not the larger ones, as one would suppose, but, on the contrary, it is more customary to find them in the smaller fissures which are only just big enough to allow of ingress

This being so it requires some little nerve and a considerable amount of keenness in the sportsman to induce him to endeavour to cope with such a dangerous brute under conditions of difficulty, for although attempts have been made to force the tigers to bolt from these caves by smoking them out and by other means, they have never been successful, and therefore there is no other course to be followed if the trophy of a cave tiger's skin is to be won.

Had the above been fully known to me before I was committed to the attempt I doubt if I should have chosen to risk such a dangerous form of sport; for at the time I had never shot a tiger even under more favourable conditions although I had some experience of other dangerous game.

However, some months back I was in the neighbourhood of Amoy and thought I would look up a friend of mine who is employed in the Chinese Customs Service. He was delighted to meet me again after a considerable period of separation, and insisted on keeping me to stay with him for some days. He was, I knew, a keen sportsman, and soon we were discussing some fast trips that we had made together and comparing notes as to sport in general since we last met He told me that he had shot several tigers in his present district, and I saw and admired some of the skins of the same that he exhibited.

I proposed that if he could spare the time he should come out and show me some sport, as I was keen to have a chance at a tiger, and he said he would arrange matters for me, but did not think he would be able to accompany me, as he was particularly busy just at this time. He explained to me that the tigers hereabouts were found in the caves for there was practically little or no jungle to hold them.

The following day he informed me that he had secured the services of a man to accompany me and track up the tigers, who had been out with him previously and whom he had found reliable so it was arranged that on the next day but one I should start for the most likely place, which was some miles off.

My friend duly furnished me with a rifle of his own for I had brought none with me, not anticipating sport in the vicinity. On the morning appointed I started by boat up the river with the tracker, and after an hour or two reached the spot where we were to land. The tracker set off at once, I following him, and moved along the river's banks for some distance. The banks were high and rocky and honeycombed with many caves and openings. Several of these my guide examined but found no tracks for some time. At length on arriving at a rather larger fissure, he pointed out to me some tracks that he declared were those of a tiger. He was not, however, satisfied that they were fresh, but nevertheless he lit a torch and entered the cave. I now to some extent realised the method of procedure of following up this sort of sport and I am bound to say I did not like it. However being committed to the enterprise, and calling to mind that my friend had succeeded in killing several tigers in this way, I reassured myself, and without demur at the guid's sign al, stepped in front of him, having previously seen that my rifle was properly loaded The cave widened inside, and its floor was composed of smooth white sand, wherein the pugs were now clearly visible. The whole extent of the cave was not large however, and soon we had explored it without seeing any further sign of a tiger, so that he must have left it again. My guide, on our emerging again into the open air, extinguished his torch and informed me that this was not the regular haunt of a tiger, but that occasionally they used it, but that now we had better proceed without further delay to another spot where he confidently expected to find one at home.

We consequently set off, and not troubling to examine several caves we passed, finally reached a very small opening. So low was it that I doubted if an animal of the size of a tiger could pass through it and said so, but the guide assured me it was a favourite stronghold and in corroboration pointed out to me several tracks leading to and from the cave, some of which were plainly quite recent I must admit I did not greatly fancy the situation, for the man told me we would have to enter the cave on all fours—I in front and he behind me with the torch.

It was not altogether a pleasant prospect, nor was this mode of pursuing a dangerous beast, the one I would have chosen in calmer moments, but under the circumstances there was nothing for it but to proceed, unless I was to return and say that I was not prepared to accept the risk.

The man too seemed to see nothing out of the way in his proposal, that we, practically grovelling on our stomachs, should thus enter the den of a ferocious beast, to give him battle on his own ground.

So, making the best of it I proceeded to enter, and found the passage quite as difficult as I expected. The tracker came after me with the torch alight just behind my shoulder as I groped my way along my on hands and knees.

I could see fairly well for only two or three yards in my front, but beyond that there was inky blackness. More than once as we slowly proceeded I imagined I saw the tiger's shape in front of me and stopped, but my guide from behind motioned me on.

We must have penetrated some yards in this way, when we found the passage opening and soon saw that it led into a larger cave. I was just about to enter this congratulating myself that here at least it would no longer be necessary to crawl and that one could stand upright, when the tracker seized my arm from behind and then pointed ahead into the darkness. On looking in the direction indicated I could see nothing, but the guide raised the torch somewhat, and then I perceived, at only a few yards in front of me, two burning eyeballs, close apparently to the ground.

Now was the critical moment, and it must be a case of do or die, so slowly I raised my rifle, and with the light of the torch behind me on the sights, I aimed straight between the two points of fire. I pulled the trigger and was almost deafened with the concussion and report in the confined space, and at the same moment the guide jammed his torch into the sand and extinguished it leaving us in total darkness.

Before I knew what was happening, I felt the man seizing me from behind and dragging me backwards through the passage. Somehow or other we backed out in a few seconds and glad indeed was I to find myself again in the open air. I now asked the guide what was to be our next move, for I determined that nothing would induce me to enter that cave again, with a possibly only wounded tiger in it.

However the man was jubilant and declared I had killed the beast. I was by no means sure that I had hit him at all, but after relighting the torch the tracker said that he was now going in to see, and that there was no danger, and that I should stop outside until he returned.

After a wait that appeared interminable, the man came out again, now simply beaming with joy. He said the tiger was stone dead, shot through the brain. I was delighted to hear it, and that my foolhardy experience, as I considered it had fortunately been successful, but I registered a mental vow that never again would I similarly tempt Providence. This vow, however, I may say that later circumstances induced me to modify.

Our business now was to get the dead animal out of the cave, and for this it would be necessary to obtain assistance as we doubted our ability to manage it ourselves. Accordingly the tracker set out for the place we had left the boat in order to summon the two boatmen, while I sat down to congratulate myself on my success and to discuss some refreshment that I had with me, as well as a long drink of brandy and water from my flask, that I felt badly in need of.

The tracker returned in about an hour, bringing with him the two boatmen and a long rope which he proposed to make fast to the tiger's legs and thus drag him out. I was afraid the skin would be injured by this method, but there was no other way possible, so I had to agree; for the entrance of the cave was too low and narrow to let the men bring out the body otherwise. We might of course have removed the skin within the cave, but the tracker asured me the other was the better way, and that on the soft sand the tiger would come to no harm.

We accordingly entered, and there by the light of the torch, I first saw the dead beast, which must have died on the very spot it was crouching. without hardly a struggle.

We fixed the rope on to his two fore legs, and then carried him to the entrance, backing out ourselves and pulling the rope out with u. When we were all out once more, we dragged together on the rope, and with considerable difficulty at length got the beast safely out.

We then proceeded to skin him, but first of all I examined him. I found him to be a male tiger of not very large size, but in good condition. The skin was a good one and beautifully marked, and I was pleased indeed at obtaining such a trophy. It was afternoon before the skinning operation was finally concluded, and we set out once more for the boat and started off down stream.

On nearing our landing place, I saw my friend and another man approaching to meet us. They shouted out as soon as we were within call to ask what luck we had had. I replied I had got a tiger, and on reaching the bank exhibited my skin with no little elation. They both congratulated me heartily, but my friend said to me, "Now confess the truth, weren't you in a deuce of a funk, when you entered the cave." My tracker, who heard the question, before I could reply, declared I was a very brave man and was loud in his evidence to my extreme coolness throughout. However, letting him run on and earn the reward he hoped his flattery would insure him. I frankly admitted that had I known the method of hunting tigers pursued in these parts, nothing on earth would have induced me to undertake the venture. My friend laughed heartily and said he was sure of it and that it was the same with himself with his first tiger, but he assured me that amongst the many expeditions after these cave tigers, he had known or taken part in, there had never been a mischance. For the animals, whether missed or hit never charged but invariably retreated further into the cave, if not entirely disabled at the first shot. He said he believed there was absolutely no danger, for whether it was the sudden extinguishing of the light that confused the beast or what, the fact remained that no accident had ever occurred. He said, however, that few, even if assured of this, would care to take the risk, if the manner in which the shot must be taken was known to them beforehand.

This was the manner of my obtaining my first cave tiger and I may say it was not my last, in spite of my vow, but all things considered I think there is but little sport in this method of pursuing the beasts, and I would sooner see them given a better chance of escape, as when hunted in the ordinary way.

A NEW CORDITE RIFLE CARTRIDGE.

Messrs Eley Bros. recently submitted for our examination and report, writes The Field, a new Express rifle cartridge which they have designed during the past few months. We cannot do better than publish their own statement as to the reasons which have made a new cartridge desirable, notwithstanding the varied selection that is already available to meet the requirements of the big game shooter. Under date 5th March 1903, they wrote to us:

You will no doubt remember the controversy that arose in your columns on the subject of cordite rifles in India, the general effects of your expression of opinion being that the present standards of working by which nickel-covered bullets and cordite charges are loaded into solid brass cartridges of the old black powder express sizes gave higher pressures (especially in tropical climates) than is desired. So far as we are aware, this same opinion is held by most of the leading rifle makers, at any rate at the present moment by several of our more prominent customers. For this class of ammunition we are designing an entirely new cordite express cartridge, capable of giving the high ballistics that sportsmen seem to favour, and yet keeping the gas pressure down to a point that leaves an ample margin of safety. So important are the possible developments of this cartridge from the point of view of the rifle manufacturers, that we have decided to submit the same for your consideration and report, in the hope that by so doing the cartridge will have a chance of becoming a standard that all rifle manufacturers may acknowledge. We think this preferable to an indefinite multiplication of types, whereby the shooter abroad frequently finds it impossible to renew the supply of ammunition. We shall be happy to supply you with samples and all other information that may assist you in forming your report, which we hope you will consent to undertake.

In view of the great interest that most necessarily attach to developments of such a kind, we had no hesitation in accepting Messrs. Eley's offer, and in the interval that has elapsed since the promised cartridges were delivered we have been able to conduct a series of very interesting trials. The rifle used for the experiments was a ·450 bore weapon, the chamber of which was reformed so as to take the new cartridge. It is highly probable that when a specially constructed rifle is available—the one we used having a somewhat short barrel—the velocity results will be subject to still further improvements. Meanwhile, with the data already obtained it has been clearly demonstrated that the claims put forward on behalf of the new cartridge have been fully substantiated.

Turning to the cartidge itself, it may be explained that it has been adapted to fire the standard 480gr. nickel-coated bullet of ·450 bore. The general construction of the cartridge case is based on that of the ·450 straight taper cartridge. The case of the latter is 3¼in. long, and it has a length, when the bullet is properly seated, of about 3·9in. The internal capacity of the space available for the cordite charge is such that 100grs. weight of water can be inserted therein the test being made by cutting the nose end of the cartridge off at a point corresponding with the position of the jute wad at the base of the bullet. The weight of water necessary to fill the case is then easily measured, the cubic capacity of the powder chamber being thus established. Other things being equal, the maximum gas pressure that is attained in the process of firing is proportionate to the density of loading of the explosive—that is, the number of grains of cordite that are loaded into the case in relation to the weight of water that will fill the same space. With a capacity of 100·3grs. for the ·450 straight taper cartridge, and the standard powder charge of 70grs. of cordite, this proportion obviously works out at ·698, which is the percentage that the weight of powder bears to the weight of water filled in as above. Our own experiments with this cartridge show that with a mean chamber pressure of 17·56 tons per square inch the mean muzzle velocity is 2,131ft. per second.

The new cartridge, whose designation is "·450 No. 2 nitro," displays a markedly different construction. In the accompanying drawings the new and the old cartridges are illustrated side by side. In the first place, the new case has an extra length of ¼in., additional powder space being further provided for by a reduced entry of the bullet and by a slight increase of diameter. The amount of water that can be filled into the new case is as nearly as possible 140grs.; but as it needs more explosive to get the same result on the bullet with an increased size of chamber, the charge for the new cartridge has been fixed at 80grs. of cordite, this representing a loading density of 56, which is to say that the weight of cordite is 56 per cent. of the weight of water that can be got into the same space.

Turning to actual results, the following series of muzzle velocities were obtained, the firing being conducted over the standard distance of 60 yards, the usual formula for converting observed into muzzle velocities being employed: (1) 2163, (2) 2150, (3) 2173, (4) 2163, (5) 2167, (6) 2171, (7) 2173, (8) 2153, (9) 2180, (10) 2162. Average 2160ft. per second, with a highest of 2180 and a lowest of 2150 the mean deviation being 8·9. Bearing in mind the experimental nature of the rifle employed, these results may be considered highly satisfactory, the regularity of action being most marked.

Fifteen shots were next fired for pressure, the velocities being recorded for each shot. It will be seen that they were not quite so high as was experienced when the velocity tests were separately conducted.

As these cartridges have been put forward as capable of producing the high ballistics demanded by the sportsman, without attaining a level of pressure that is in most quarters regarded as objectionable, we thought it desirable to fire a series of comparative rounds with cartridges at different temperatures. Shooting at ordinary temperatures, the pressures registered gave an average of 12·87 tons per square inch chamber pressure Instead of reaching such high pressures as 20 tons when the cartridges were shot at a temperature of 140 Fahr., the standard reached was 1,593 tons, which is well under the service pressure of several of the ordinary express cartridges which have become popular on account of their high ballistics.

Altogether there seems to be good reason for believing that the problem of harmonising high ballistics and low pressures has been solved by the production of a special nitro cartridge having an extremely low density of loading. The sizes of case that were appropriate for the old black powder cartridges required to be heavily charged with explosive in order to produce the flatness of trajectory that became so popular through the extended use of military types of sporting weapons. Since special rifles must be used for such cartridges, the only argument that can be advanced in favour of adhering to the old black powder sizes is that sportsmen can fall back on the black ammunition should they be unable to replenish their stock of smokeless. Now that cordite has become well nigh universal, it seems reasonable to suppose that a special nitro cartridge that is widely recognised should be obtainable wherever such goods are stocked. If, therefore, gunmakers are prepared to recognise this cartridge in the manner that is outlined in Messrs. Eley's letter, it is likely that the use of special ammunition giving a more reasonable range of pressure than has hitherto ruled, will make considerable headway. This notice may be concluded by giving the leading dimensions of the cartridge, which are: Diameter of rim, ·660in.; size under head, ·565in.; depth of rim, ·080in.; size at shoulder (2·85in. from the base), ·550in.; size at nose ·482in.; length of case, 3·5in.; length of complete cartridge, 4·27in. It should be mentioned that the object of using a capped wad is to insure a perfect fit in the barrel, so making an efficient gas check. Unfortunately it is shown in the drawing with the round side upwards instead of downwards, as it should have been. Finally attention should be drawn to the reduced neck of the case which prevents the bullet from passing too far into the case, and thus avoid a fault that leads to great increases of pressure.

Even at a time when heavy betting was common, the Marquis of Hastings attracted a great deal of attention by his reckless plunging on anything that looked good. Towards the back-end of 1867, the noble owner found his banking account very considerably depleted, and decided that a dash, similar to one successfully landed on Athena in the spring, when the commissioners' orders were to bet as long as the Ring would lay, was necessary.

Naiveté had been very highly tried, and when she was slipped at one of the Newmarket Autumn Meetings an unlimited amount of money was forthcoming to back her. The good thing, however, failed to run up to the trial form, and was beaten by a filly named St. Angela. When setting day came it was found that the marquis had lost nearly fifteen thousand pounds on this race, and the most galling part was when they next met Naiveté gave her former conqueror an easy beating, subsequent form also showing that St. Angela—though afterwards to become famous as the dam of St. Simon—had no pretentions to good class.

On the day following this unexpected defeat, his lordship had his famous plunge on Blinkhoolie for the Cesarewitch, which was, however, won by Julius, who gave Blinkhoolie 14lbs. and an easy beating. At Ascot, the following season, the pair met at even weights, and on this occasion Blinkhoolie won by six lengths, a fact that was not comforting to those who had lost their money over the Newmarket race.

In the hope of getting his own back, the marquis backed Lady Elizabeth for the Middle Park Plate heavily enough to recover his former losses; but again he was disappointed, and the match for £1,000 aside between Lady Elizabeth and Julius, at a difference of 9lbs. for the year, was the dernier ressort. After a desperate struggle the filly got home a head, and the greater part of that terrible week's losses was recovered. It was, however, a terribly near squeak, and should assuredly have taught the ill-fated marquis as lesson a regards the evils of "plunging."

THE KASHMIR SNOW PIGEON.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The following is a short description of the Snow Pigeon:—

Head dark dove colour, almost a slate blue, eyes orange; neck, breast and under parts white; shoulders light brown; large white patch on back; root and end of tail dull black, centre barred with white; legs red. The dark head is particularly noticeable, when the bird is facing you, showing its snow white breast. The wings are dove colour mixed with black and brown. The average weight of four birds was ten and a half ounces. My scales were not sufficiently finely graduated to weigh the birds separately.

I give the above description as these birds seem to differ considerably in marking from two I shot in 1901, near Sirkanda Peak, some twenty-five miles from Mussoorie. Unfortunately I have neither my notes on those birds, nor any work of reference just now at hand to refer to. Perhaps you Mr. Editor will append an enlightening note.

FLEUR-DE-LYS.

[The Pigeon is the white-bellied Pigeon (Columba leuconota) It is known to Himalayan travellers as the "snow pigeon" Scully gives the weight as 10oz. so the birds must have been good sized ones Were Fleur-de-lys to enlighten us as to this pigeon's call and nidification, it would be most interesting, as nothing appears known about them, except that Lieutenant Cordeaux says he found them breeding amongst crags in the Ai Nullah, Kashmir, in August.—ED.]

LATE STAY OF THE SHELDRAKE IN TIRHOOT AND ALBINISM IN THE COMMON HERON.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—A fine male sheldrake was brought me by a mir-shikari on the 11th of May. It was caught on a large chur in this district. This is very late for this species as most have left India before the middle of April.

I also got on the same date a peculiar form of albinism in A. Cinerea. I append a description of the bird. Head, neck, and lower plumage white except crest which is brown, the longer feathers being very dark. There are also some buffy brown feathers on the forehead, the lower foreneck is streaked with buffy brown and dark brown. There is also an interrupted brown collar on the breast; sides of body, axillaries and underwing; coverts pale ashy brown; upper back brownish buff the bases of all the feathers and stips of some white; lower back ashy grey; primaries and secondaries pale buff with broad portion of inner webs tinged with brown, the three innermost primaries, their coverts being dark brown; tertiaries ashy brown; lesser wing coverts white, remaining coverts buffy white; tail buff, brownish at base with exception of the central feathers which have white instead of buff; colours of soft parts same as in ordinary specimens except in the legs which are dirty flesh colour.

Proposed Amended Hackney-Carriage Bye-Laws.

(a) First-class.

1. First-class hackney-carriage licenses shall only be granted for comfortable, roomy, clean, easy-running vehicles of a description superior in all respects to second-class carriages. They may be of any approved pattern, such as broughams, landaus, phaetons, officejaun, etc., etc. Each carriage must have a thoroughly good pair of lamps.

2. No carriage, drawn by a pair of horses, shall be licensed in the first-class unless both animals are fit for their work and at least 14-2 hands high, and none drawn by a single horse unless the animal is fit for its work, and at least 15 hands high.

(b) Second-class.

1. No carriage shall receive a second-class license unless it be in a thoroughly fit and proper condition.

2. If it be of the kind known as "palki-gharry" or "brownberry," it shall conform to the following dimensions :—

	Inches.
Breadth of carriage inside	36
Depth of seat	18
Width of well of carriage between cushions ...	24
Height of roof	40

3. The springs and the axles must be of thoroughly sound manufacture, all the iron-work strongly put together, and the carriage must have a good pair of lamps.

4. No carriage drawn by a pair of horses shall be licensed in the second class unless both animals are fit for their work and at least 13 hands high, and none drawn by a single horse unless the animal is fit for its work, and at least 14 hands high.

(c) Third-class.

1. No carriage shall receive a third-class license unless it be in a clean and safe condition, have sufficient room inside to seat four persons, and have stout axles, springs and wheels, and a good pair of lamps.

2. When drawn by a pair of ponies each pony must be in a fit condition and at least 12 hands high. When drawn by a single pony the animal must be fit and at least 13-2 hands high.

(d) General.

1. No animal shall be deemed fit for its work unless it is so in respect of height, bone, muscle and condition, and equal to the work of drawing the carriage.

2. Harness must be of good description and strong. No chain or rope traces, unless they be covered with leather, and no string fastening will be allowed.

3. Every carriage of all three classes shall have a plate affixed in some conspicuous part of the outside of the carriage specifying the class, the number of each class in the register and the number of persons it is licensed to carry. A 2nd-class carriage shall also bear the owner's name painted on some conspicuous part of the outside of the carriage. Each class of conveyance shall be painted a distinctive colour, namely, 1st-class yellow, 2nd-class blue, 3rd-class chocolate, and the wheels and the body of the carriage shall be of the same colour. Every carriage shall be distinctly marked on its panels with the number of the class to which it belongs, the figures to be not less than 6 inches in length resembling the marking of Railway carriages. This Bye-law shall not apply to carriages already on the register until after the expiration of one year from the 1st of October, 1902. The lamps of every carriage shall have the register number of the carriage painted on them.

4. It shall be the duty of the Registering-Officer upon receiving proper information or complaint in writing that any horse or vehicle licensed under the Hackney-Carriage Act is unfit for use, to send for the same, and if after due enquiry he be satisfied of such unfitness, he shall, by written order, suspend the working of such horse and vehicle for a period not exceeding one month, after which period he shall again examine the horse or vehicle.

It shall be obligatory on the owner to produce within 24 hours any horse or vehicle so sent for.

5. Every person applying for a driver's license must be acquainted with the principal places and streets in and around Calcutta, and have a thorough knowledge of the rates and fares in the Schedule

6. No new driver shall be licensed unless he be in all respects a fit person for such employment.

7. A book of fares shall be prepared and printed under the authority of the Commissioners, shewing distances and fares from various centres. A copy of this book of fares shall be given to the owner of a hackney-carriage at the time of the delivery of the license, and on demand shall be shewn by the driver to any fare asking for it. An abstract of the distances and fares printed on enamelled plates shall be affixed under the orders of the Registering-Officer in a conspicuous place in each hackney-carriage after such carriage has been lincensed.

8. Each driver and syce must be properly dressed in clean uniform, the head-dress being of the same colour as the class of carriage.

9. The owner shall be responsible that every first, second-class and third-class carriage when plying, or when on hire, shall have a licensed driver as coachman.

10. Every driver, when giving up service or leaving Calcutta, shall deposit his license and ticket at the Registry Office, to be returned to him on application before resuming work.

11. Every place where any hackney-carriage or horse is kept, shall be open to the inspection of the officers of the Department at any hour of the day or night.

First Day. Tuesday, 16th June 1903.

The first day of the meeting was a very successful one, the many guests of H. H. the Maharajah swelled the attendance and the going after the recent rains was all that could be desired. There were only three starters for the first race, Minimus, who was a hot favourite after getting an indifferent start, caught Beccles in the turn for the straight and won in a canter. For the Arab Plate, five faced the gate, Chungiz was backed at 3 to 1 on and with Harefoot made the running at a cracking pace, but at the bend for home they were all in a bunch, Chungiz having slightly the best of matters. Rubric came up now and staying out won by two lengths from Chungiz, who was a head in front of Sapphire. For the third race, the MacIntire, Plate, Trenton was favourite, but was unable to pull it off. Oberon led from the start with Gaylad well up. Trenton, who had got off badly, challenged at the bend, but could not come up and was beaten by Oberon by three lengths, Dr. Barnado being third.

In the Farm Stakes there were seven starters: Upstart at the beginning of the betting was favourite, but his place in the betting was eventually taken by Louis whilst Wisdom and Evensong also carried a certain amount of money. It was an excellent start from which Philistine led with the others in a bunch. Coming to the straight Louis, Wisdom and Upstart caught the leader and laced abreast, Louis winning by a head, the third a length behind. In the race for Arabs Sarjamal, Moon and Chester all carried a good deal of money. This was also a good start and there was not much to choose between them at the bend up which Sarjamal and Moon raced with Chester close up, Moon eventually winning by half a length. Details:—

Second Day, Thursday, 18th June 1903.

After the rain on the 17th the going was in excellent condition, and sport was all that could be desired. The attendance was augmented by visitors from Bangalore, but unfortunately His Highness was prevented from coming by indisposition. The fields ruled larger than on the first day, although there were only two starters for the Installation Cup. Minimus carried his big weight home to the satisfaction of backers. After a false start when they carried away the gate, Minimus got the best of it, but Beccles shot ahead and led by some four lengths until the bend for home when he went back to Minimus and they raced up the straight, Minimus eventually winning by a length and a half in the very good time for that weight of 1min 33⅘secs. For the Stable Cup there were ten starters which speaks well for the handicapping. There was a good start after some delay at the post and they raced together in a bunch, with the exception of Blue Blood, who was a long way behind, Tecoota and Harpist raced up the staight, the latter winning by a length, De Wet two lengths behind just beating Corrie Roy and Blue Blood. His Highness The Maharajah's Cup was an upset, an outsider at 15 to 1 winning. From rather the worst of the start Superb made the pace leading by some three lengths from Harefoot with Baby Boy third, Rubric and Moon lying some way behind and Syndic last. They went in this order till four and a half furlongs from home when the favourites, Rubric and Moon, made their effort and caught Superb, but were unable to catch Harefoot who had assumed the lead at the bend. There was a ding dong race up the staight between Rubric and Harefoot, which resulted in the latter winning by half a length; Rubric two lengths behind.

There was a good start for the Dewan's Cup. Louis, who was pulling double, making the running for the remainder who were more or less together. They were all together at the bend five furlongs from home. When coming round the home bend Upstart took the lead and won fairly easily by one and a half lengths from Evensong, Prime being two lengths behind for third place. In the last race Jack O'Lantern had to be scratched, so only seven horses went to the post. From an indifferent start Gaffer made all the running, and the others, with the exception of Viking, who lay a long way behind, ran together. They kept in this order to the five furlong post when Gaffer was caught at the home bend. Promontory took the lead, winning fairly easily from Ayrdale with Wallgrove third. Details:—

First Meeting, Saturday, 20th June.

THE first Tollygunge Gymkhana of the season was on the whole a very successful little meeting, and the course was in very fair order though if anything a bit on the hard side. It is greatly to be regretted that the straight course is not yet fit for use, as the turns on the old course are not too good, but it is of course out of the question to attempt the other at present. Owing to the number of unknown quantities among the starters, winners were not easy to pick, and many were the rumours of reputed hot things among the new brigade. Those punters, however, were wise in their generation who stuck to old friends and heeded not the voice of the charmer proclaiming a new champion.

In the Pony Hurdles Country Girl was supposed good goods, but though she made the pace hot for three furlongs that appeared to be as much as she wanted. Peeping Tom, who ran a waiting race, challenged Pekin at the last flight, and coming away won comfortably by a length. In the second race Oom Paul on the strength of his running in the cold weather was rightly most fancied; but 2 to 1 on is not a very grand price in a novice event. Sir Humphrey was supposed to be dangerous, but he and his stable companion have apparently mistaken their vocation, having been intended by nature to co-operate with the celebrated Colonel Cody in electrifying the West End of London, rather than to deal wholesale destruction on the race course. Gamester at the fall of the flag elected to give an exhibition of back jumping, in the course of which he cannoned into Corban with the result that both came down. Oom Paul got well away and was never extended, winning with his head in his chest. In the pony half mile First Guide being caught in the right frame of mind disposed of a very moderate lot of ponies with some ease. For the Opening Handicap public favour was divided between Sylvia and French Girl, the latter on her performances up-country some years ago. There is no doubt that had she been anything like the mare she then was, nothing else in this race would have made her gallop, but Anno Domini is no doubt beginning to go against her and her temper, never of the best, has not improved with age. Sylvia led throughout, but Red Pepper coming with a rattle on the post, snatched the verdict by a head. Four ponies turned out for the polo scramble which was won by Starlight. The arrangements on the whole were good, though the proposed admission of the metallicians at the future meetings will be a great improvement. Details:—

THE TURF.

THE weather for the fourth "classic" event of the season decided at Epsom on the 28th ultimo, was in pleasant contrast to that which prevailed a year ago. Sceptre won the Oaks in a downpour of rain, but Our Lassie gained her victory in brilliant sunshine, and she did it handsomely, more than making amends for the disappointment she caused her supporters over the Lincolnshire Handicap. Of course, what would have been the result had the accident not taken place during the running remains untold. The glorious weather attracted another great company to the famous downs, the King, the Prince of Wales, and Prince Christian again being present. Ten competed for the principal event, or four less than twelve months ago, and the field was the smallest since 1897 (Limasol's year), but the runners bore very favourable comparison with previous competitors for the ladies' race. Favouritism rested with Hammerkop, who had several good performances as a two-year-old to recommend her. Prince Soltykoff's filly came next in demand, followed by Mr. Joel's representative on the 6 to 1 mark. There was an excellent start, Valve holding the lead for the first quarter of a mile, when she gave way to Skyscraper, and little further change took place until beginning the decent, when St. Hylda assumed command. At Tattenham Corner Dazzling struck into Sun Rose and fell, and shortly afterwards Our Lassie drew out clear and gained the verdict by three lengths. Hammerkop deprived Skyscraper of second place by a head, while Sun Rose, only a neck away, was placed fourth. Lyne, who rode Dazzling, was fortunately uninjured, being able to walk back to the weighing room. Our Lassie had only previously gained one bracket, that being in the Sandown Park Stud Produce Stakes, when she made her début on the racecourse last year, but by her two victories she has now credited her owner (who also bred her) with 6,875 sovs.

THE OAKS STAKES—Of 5,000 sovs., by subscription of 50 sovs. each, h ft, or 5 sovs. only if declared by the last Tuesday in March, 1902; for three-year-old fillies; 9st. each; the nominator of the winner to receive 400 sovs. out of the stakes; if not sufficient surplus is obtained from subscriptions to give the second at least 200 sovs., and the third at least 100 sovs., the difference to be made up by the Race Fund. About one mile and a half. (267 subs, 117 of whom pay 5 sovs. ft.)

Switch Cap was struck out at 2-5 P.M. on the day of the race

(Winner trained by Morton, at Wantage.)

BETTING :—2 to 1 agst Hammerkop, 4 to 2 Sun Rose, 6 to 1 Our Lassie, 7 to 1 Valve, 10 1 Dazzling, 100 to 7 Skyscraper, 20 to 1 Mrs. Gamp, 25 to 1 Florinda, 33 to 1 Ladies' Mile, 33 to 1 St. Hylda.

Hammerkop was the first to emerge from the paddock, and she was followed in the parade by Valve, Dazzling, Skyscraper, St. Hylda, and Florinda, with Our Lassie whipping in Mrs. Gamp, Sun Rose, and Ladies' Milt being saddled away by permission of the Stewards. They turned and cantered in the same order, and it was seven minutes past three when the hoisting of the white flag denoted that the field were under the starter's orders. The flag fell two minutes later to a capital start, Valve being the first to show in front of Ladies' Mile, Our Lassie, Skyscraper, and Dazzling, with Hammerkop next for a quarter of a mile, when Skyscrper took up the running from Hammekop, Ladies' Mile, Valve, and Sun Rose, their nearest attendants being Dazzling, Florinda, and Mrs. Gamp, with Our Lassie and St. Hylda whipping in. Passing the Mile post Ladies Mile took second palce from Hammerkop, with Sun Rose, Valve, and Our Lassie in front of Dazzling, Florinda, and St. Hylda, Mrs. Gamp being last, but rounding Tattenham Corner Dazzling struck into Sun Rose and fell, and St. Hylde, on the outside, raced up to the two leaders, being followed into the straight by Hammerkop and Our Lassie. When fairly in the line for home Hammerkop took a slight lead of Skyscraper, Sun Rose, and Our Lassie, and the latter, shooting to the front a quarter of a mile from home, clear of Hammerkop and Skyscraper, won easily by three lengths; a head divided the second and third. Sun Rose, a neck behind was placed fourth; Florinda, a long way off, was fifth Valve sixth. St. Hylda seventh, Mrs, Gamp eighth, and Ladies' Mile last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2mins 44⅘secs. Value of the stakes, £4,950.

The Derby week of Rock Sand's year will long be memorable as having been one of the most glorious on record. The success of such a reunion as Epsom's four-day festival hinges almost entirely upon the elements, and in these variable climes it is a rare experience indeed to be favoured with ideal summer weather for six or seven consecutive days, as has just been the case. Kempton Park claims the privilege of winding up what is perhaps the most important week of the year, and the programme, framed by a liberal and up-to-date executive, was worthy of the occasion. The Coronation Commemoration Stakes which was inaugurated a twelvemonth ago, gave place to a new venture in the shape of the Palace Handicap of 1,000 sovs. and inclusive of a Match, the card extended to seven items. Clad in a wealth of summer foliage, the trees in the Park looked at their very best whilst the brilliant hues of the rhododendron blossom in the shrubberies lent an additional charm to the surroundings. A heavy thunderstorm, which deluged the course just before racing began, cooled the atmosphere if it rendered the turf somewhat soft and spongy, but, with the exception of a similar visitation a couple of hours later, the afternoon was bright and sunny, and a large muster in the rings, stands, and enclosures—not to mention the open space on the far side of the course—testified to the popularity of the Sunbury tryst.

Since the last important meeting at Hurst Park the electric tramway system from Hammersmith and Shepherd's Bush has been extended to Hampton, and the effect of the extension upon the attendance on the 1st instant was very striking. There seemed no diminution in the number of folk who have always been in the habit of utilising the South-Western Railway, and in addition to these regular patrons of racing, a constant stream of pleasure-seekers flowed towards the course from across the river, the extra service of ferry boats improvised by the executive being subjected to a heavy strain. Always a favourite tryst with holiday-makers, it was abundantly evident to-day that the popularity of the Hurst Park Whitsuntide fixture is still on the increase, and it is doubtful if a larger crowd was ever present at this spacious riverside resort than that which filled the stands and enclosures to overflowing this afternoon and swarmed in thousands in the open. The morning broke bright and resplendent, and but for a fitful northerly breeze the heat would have been overpowering. Now and again a few clouds brought relief to those who had no shelter from the solar rays, but from start to finish there was never any threat of rain, and the entertainment was replete with interest throughout.

A repetition of the previous day's stirring scenes was hardly to be expected at Hurst Park on the 2nd instant, the holiday folk who had entered so enthusiastically into the proceedings having for the most part resumed their hum-drum occupations. The regular racegoers did not by any means have things to themselves, however, for the number of pleasure-seekers who found leisure to patronise the concluding stage of the fixture exceeded expectations, and the attendance all round was good. The weather underwent a striking change during the night, a drop of something like twenty degrees in the temperature making matters much pleasanter. It was almost chilly in the morning, in the entire absence of sunshine, and a sombre canopy of storm-clouds boded ill for those about to spend a day in the open. Happily, the threat of a wet afternoon was not fulfilled, and the meeting was brought to a close under bright and enjoyable conditions. The band of H. M. Scots Guards played a tuneful selection of popular music on the members' lawn, and though the fields in many instances cut down to decidedly narrow dimensions, little else was to be expected, seeing that other meetings were in progress in different parts of the country.

It is not often that the first week in June is reached without trainers having had to complain of hard going, but this year so consistently favourable have the conditions been that racing has been conducted under exceptionally high pressure ever since Lincoln without the semblance of a "check." The upshot is that a large percentage of the equine performers are sorely in need of a rest, and there is a momentary threat of the supply proving unequal to the demand. This was especially noticeable at Manchester on the 3rd instant, even the overnight races failing to meet with much support, and the shortage of combatants looks like extending throughout the meeting, the very Cup itself not being exempt from its withering influences. Sport reached a fair standard nevertheless, and if the numerical strength of the fields left something to be desired, there was no lack of "go" about the proceedings. The morning broke dull and chilly and the outlook was far from reassuring, but the sun worked its way through the sombre canopy of clouds in due course, and blazed down with the fervour of midsummer throughout the afternoon. The conditions could hardly have been more delightful, and the local folk turning out in their thousands, revelled in the warmth. The attendance was good in all departments, but, notwithstanding the recent copious rains and the luxurian herbage, the horses raised clouds of dust as they galloped.

Of the numerous sporting centres visited by racegoers during the course of the year there is not one at which the environments are more consistently gloomy and depressing than Manchester. It was quite exhilarating, therefore, for visitors to find the murky city bathed in sunshine on their arrival and experiences on the 4th instant were even more delightful. The wind had veered round into the south-west during the night, the change being followed by a material increase in the temperature, backed up by brilliant sunshine. The conditions proved warm and summerlike, and were vastly to the liking of the big crowd of spectators. It appears that, owing to trade depression and a shortage of cotton, nearly all the local mills closed for the whole of Whitsun week, and thousands of operatives thus found themselves with plenty of time on their hands. This may in some measure have accounted for another huge attendance at Castle Irwell to-day, the muster being very large in all departments. Hitherto, owing to some friction between the Corporations of Manchester and Salford, the electric tramway system has not been worked to the best advantage, but they have now arranged things to their mutual satisfaction, and holiday-makers were well catered for by a complete and expeditious service to the new estate. Sport was much brisker to-day, and, notwithstanding that the ground is geting harder hourly, good fields tried conclusions for most of the events on the card.

CRICKET.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE vs. SUSSEX.—Played at Brighton on 1st 2nd and 3rd June Drawn. Anything is possible when once G. L. Jessop gets going, and it does not for a moment imply that when he makes a great score the side opposed to him is weak in bowling. On Monday he was seen at his best. He went in third wicket down, and a short time afterwards half the side were out for 129. Then he was joined by Board, and the bowling was absolutely collared. Jessop made his first fifty in half an hour, his first hundred in an hour and ten minutes, his second hundred in two hours, and his 286 in a few minutes less than three hours. His innings, which is quite beyond the powers of description, included forty-one 4's. Meanwhile Board had been steadily keeping up his wicket and was still going strong when his partner went. The two men had increased the score by 320 When stumps were drawn the total was 480 for nine wickets. Sussex had a bad time on Tuesday, for rain stopped play until one o'clock, and although Fry played a brilliant innings, and with Vine put up 120 in an hour and a-half, the Gloucestershire men were always masters of the situation, and when stumps were drawn only 202 runs had been scored for nine wickets. Yesterday the last two men made a most determined stand, but they could not save the follow on. Marlow's innings was worthy of the highest praise When Sussex went in again they met at once with two very serious disasters, for in the first over Fry was bowled by a ball at which he did not play, and in the next over Vine was l-b-w. Fortunately for Sussex it was one of Ranjitsinhji's days, and with Killick to help him, he very soon put a better appearance on the game. Killick stayed for an hour and a quarter, and Relf came in to carry on the good work. Time went on, and still Ranjitsinhji played beautiful cricket, and found a most valuable partner in Relf. Eventually Ranjitsinhji carried his bat, and the match was saved.

NOTTS vs. SURREY.—Played at Trent Bridge on 1st, 2nd and 3rd June Drawn. The Notts men were seen to very great advantage on the first day of this match, for the bowling and fielding of the opposing side was always good, they succeeded in putting up 420 runs for the loss of six wickets. During the day there were two long partnerships—W. Gunn and Iremonger putting on 191 runs and John Gunn and Anthony 146 runs. At close of play John Gunn was not out with 127 to his credit. This he increased by 34 on Tuesday morning, his entire innings having lasted for three hours. The last four wickets were soon disposed of. Lees bowled uncommonly well and had an excellent analysis for such a long innings. With Abel and Hayward Surrey made an excellent commencement, both playing in quite their best form and scoring quickly. At lunch time the total was 105 for the loss of Hayward. With Hays as a partner, Abel took things more leisurely, and the two men seemed to have a complete command over the bowling when at last Abel was dismissed for a fine 61. Hayes did not survive him for long and things began to look bad for Surrey. But there was no need for anxiety, for every man did his duty. The crowd objected to the slow play of Lockwood, who was lame, but this passed off. By the time that stumps were drawn there was a strong probability that the match would not be played out, for Surrey had scored 331 for the loss of only five wickets. Although this record was not kept up yesterday, Surrey were only 65 runs behind when the innings ended. Notts declared in their second innings, but Surrey had not the slightest difficulty in playing out time.

MIDDLESEX vs. SOMERSETSHIRE.—Played at Lord's on 1st, 2nd and 3rd June. Middlesex won by 112 runs. Attewell was fortunate in the weather on Monday, and a big crowd came to see his benefit match. No one could have complained of the quality of the batting, for although there were only three scores over 50, every man who went in made double figures, and made them in good style, and generally very quickly. The most important innings of the day was the 135 by Warner, who was at the wickets for three hours, during which he showed a mastery over the bowling. A very good innings indeed was the vigorous 57 of J. H. Hunt, which was put together in 40 minutes. But undoubtedly the most attractive batting of the day was seen when L. C. H. Palairet and Braund went in for Somerset; they both made the bowling look very easy indeed. Just before stumps were drawn Palairet was beautifully caught in the slips with the total at 96. The good beginning was hardly kept up on Tuesday. Braund who was not out 35 overnight, increased his score to 73, but with the exception of Phillips and Robson, the rest of the Somerset team failed to rise to the occasion. Middlesex began their second innings with a lead of 143, and did not do half as well as in the first innings, although W. P. Robertson played a great game. Still, owing to their long lead in the first innings, they were able to set Somerset the heavy task of making 317, and at the close of the day Somerset had lost three good wickets, and had only knocked off 50 of these. Yesterday Phillips and Hedley raised hopes among Somersetmen that the match might be pulled out of the fire, but after Hedley was dismissed there was never much doubt as to the result 400 Metres Race.—Won by J. B. Densham, South London H. Time, 51⅘secs.

Three mile Race.—Won by A. Shrubb, South London H Time, 14mins. 53⅘secs.

800 Metres Race.—Won by P. B. Dodd, South London H. Time, 2mins, 8⅘secs.

2,000 Metres Invitation Handicap.—M. Dupino, Racing Club de France, 90 metres start, 1; H. E. Martin, South London H 130 2. Won by a foot. Time, 5mins. 50secs. S. W Fowler Dixon, London A. C, 65 metres start, was at virtual scratch but ran unplaced.

L. A. C. SECOND SPRING MEETING.

The Blackheath Harriers had a field day at Stamford Bridge Grounds on Saturday the 30th ultimo, where the L. A. C decided the second spring meeting under conditions of the most unfavourable character. Previous to the start thunder rolled ominously in the distance, and dark clouds soon began to come up against the wind. The sport, however, had been in progress for the best part of an hour before a storm of great severity broke over the ground. This was just after the final heat of the 120 yards had been run. From here to almost the end it was a very strong mixture of thunder, lightning, and rain with an occasional dose of hail thrown in. The path quickly became flooded; in fact, in some parts it was under water the entire width, and so heavy was the downpour that it looked a matter of impossibility to run through the card. The competitors, however, signified a desire to go on, and with the officials in the same mind all the events, with the exception of the long jump handicap, were finished, the card being completed in half an hour or so after the advertised time. Previous to the storm, too, fine performances were accomplished. In the race for the 220 yards challenge cup, C. H. Jupp, the holder, spreadeagled his field, and, running with much power, his fine raking stride enabled him to beat by one-fifth of a second the previous best performance—his own of 22 2-5sec—for this event. Another "best for the event" followed when J. H. Bessell took the 1,000 yards challenge cup in 2min 18 4-5sec, beating the 2min. 19 3-5sec. made by A. G Butler in 1896. The 120 fell, after a fine finish, to B. Macmin, Blackheath Harriers, 7 yards start, and then the storm upset altogether the form in the remaining events The veteran J. E. Fowler-Dixon struggled manfully and with all the pluck for which he is noted in the three-mile walking race against the scratch man and holder, R. H Watson, who won the yacht handicap rather easily, and E. F. Judson, Blackheath Harriers, secured the mile and a half handicap in creditable time. All the four open events, the 120, 880, 309, and one mile and a half, fell to the Blackheath Harriers. At the close the prizes were presented by Miss Shearman. The chief officials were: Referee, Mr. M. Shearman, K. C.; judges —Messrs S. K. Holman, E. H. Pelling, J. H. A. Reay, and J. Shearman; referee for walking,—Mr. H. Venmi; starter,—Mr. C. L. Lockton; timekeepers, Messrs C. V. Hunter and J. E. Fowler-Dixon; handicapper, Mr. F. W. Parker. Details:

220 Yards Challenge Cup (best previous performance, 22 2-5sec. by C. H. Jupp 1902).—C. H. Jupp (holder), 1; L. F. Tremeer, 2; G. P. Constantine, 0; C. W. Fox, 0. Fox and Constantine only went a few yards, and Jupp, having the foot of his solitary opponent, won as he liked by six yards' Time, 22 1-5sec., which beat his previous best by one-fifth of a second.

1,000 Yards Challenge Cup (best previous performance, 2min. 19 3-5sec. by A. G. Butler 1896) (holder, Lieut. H. C. Hawtrey, abroad).—J. H. Bessell, 1; D. C. Cowan, 2; E. S. Ward, 3; A. S. D. Smith, 4. Ward led, followed by Bessell, Cowan, and Smith in the order named. At "the bell" the positions were the same, but coming down the straight Bessell got in front and won, after a hard finish, by three yards; half a yard between second and third. Time, 2min. 18 4-5sec. beating previous best by four-fifths of a second.

120 Yards Handicap (handicap represents A. F. Duffy, 100 yards amateur champion, at scratch) (first in each heat to start in final).—Heat 1: C. D. Comrie, L. A. C. and S. L. H. 4½ yards start, 1; H. Watson, L. A. C. and S. L. H., 3½, 2; E. B. Harman, Blackheath H., 8, 0; H. Norrey, L. A. C., 10½, 0; W. J. Basan, Blackheath H., 11, 0. The virtual scratch man failed to get up by half a yard. Time, 12 2-5sec.

Heat 2: A. J. Court, Herne Hill H., 8 yards start, 1; J. A. Miller, L. A. C., 4, 2; R. E. Wright, L. A. C. and S. L. H., 9, 3; E. T. Wall, Blackheath H., 5½, 0; J. E. Perrett, S. L. H., 10½, 0. Won by half a yard. Time, 12 2-5sec.

Heat 3: L. F. Tremeer, L. A. C. 1½ yards start, 1; A. Goodall, L. A. C., 5½, 2; F. J. C. Shepherd, L. A. C., 7½, 3; W. Davidson, Herne Hill H., 4, 0; H. F. Pash, L. A. C., 12, 0. Won by half a yard. Time, 12 1-5sec.

Heat 4: B. Macmin, Blackheath H., 7 yards start, 1; G. P. Constantie, L. A. C. and S. L. H., 2½, 2; W. H. Orton, L. A. C., 4½, 3; Lieut. A. Marsden, R. N., 5, 0; O Groenings, Polytechnic H., 8, 0. A good finish, won by a foot. Time, 12 2-5sec.

Heat 5: E. H. Coopman, University College Old Boys' F. C., 7½ yards start, 1; E. Cope, Finchley H., 5, 2; C. W., Fox, L. A. C., 3½, 3; E. H. Flatt, L. A. C., 10½, 0. Won by a foot Time, 12 2-5sec.

Spendlove, Ranelagh H., 130 Cleave was almost level with Smith at the quarter, but half-way down the straight he retried. Towards the finish half a dozen of the competitors took close order, and after a grand struggle the placings were given as above. Time. 1 min. 56 1-5sec.

Three-mile Walking Challenge Cup and Yacht Handicap (best previous performance, 23min. 4 1-5sec. by G. P. Beckley, 1881).—R. H. Watson (holder), scratch, 1; J. E. Fowler-Dixon, 4min. 15sec. start, 2; C. M. Callow, 4min. 40sec, 0. Contested in a deluge of rain. Callow, not caring for the downpour, retired after going a little over a quarter of a mile. Dixon, though beaten for pace, hung on in plucky fashion, and was, like the winner, loudly cheered at the finish. Times: Watson, 23min. 44 1-5sec.; Dixon, 29min. 34 3-5 sec., leaving Watson a winner by over a minute and a half.

300 Yards Handicap (first two in each heat to start in flanal).—Heat 1: C. H. Jupp, L. A. C., scratch, 1; H. Watson, L. A. C. and S. L. H., 10 yards start, 2; B. Macmin, Blackheath H., 18, 3; G. W. Jones, L. A. C., 15, 0; R. E. Wright, L. A. C. and S. L. H., 20, 0; F. J. C. Shepherd, L. A. C., 22, 0. Won in fine style by a yard.

Heat 2: H. F. Pash, L. A. C., 24 yards start, 1; G. P. Constantine, L. A. C. and S. L. H., 7, 2; J. A. Miller, L. A. C., 15, 3; E. H Montague, S. L H., 10, 0; C. Mc-Lachlan, Herne Hill H., 12, 0; E. B. Harman, Blackheath H., 19, 0; P. C. Crump, Blackheath H., 22, 0. Won rather cleverly by two yards.

Heat 3: J. B. Densham, L. A. C. and S. L. H, 12 yards start, 1; Lieut. A. Marsden, R. N., 12, 2; E. H. Flatt, L. A.C, 28, 3; C. W. Fox, L. A C., 9, 0; W. H. Orton L. A. C, 15, 0; A J Burn, S. L. Soon after completing the mile, however, Judson took the lead, and when the bell rang he was ten yards, ahead of Thompson, with Ward third. Half-way round the last lap Ward looked dangerous, but at the top Judson increased his pace, and finally he won handsomely by twenty yards; a like distance divided second and third. Time, 7min. 2 -35sec

PROFESSIONAL COMPETITION AT ENFIELD.

A glorious summer's day—rather trying for competitors, but pleasant for spectators—was associated with the opening play at Enfield on the 29th ultimo in the professional tournament for handsome prizes given by the Enfield Golf Club. A 36-hole qualifying stroke competition was decided, and J. H. Taylor (Mid-Surrey), the open champion of 1894 1895, and 1900, who has been showing such fine form of late, gave another brilliant display. With rounds of 74 and 73, and a total of 174, he was an easy first, and his 73 should remain as the record for the course for a long time. Harry Vardon (South Herts), 77 and 74—151, was second; James Kinnell (Norwich), 79 and 74—153, third; and J. Braid (Romford), 75 and 79—154, fourth. Thus two Englishmen, Taylor and Vardon, and two Scotsmen, Kinnell and Braid, qualified to compete in the semi-final on Saturday morning. The present champion, Alexander Herd (Huddersfield), never got thoroughly going, and with 80 and 77—157 he could only finish fifth. Jack White (Sunningdale) was completely off his game in the morning, and with 88 and 74—162, he tied with C. R. Smith (West Middlesex), 80 and 82—162, for sixth place. The remaining player, E. Hooker, the Enfield professional, was last with 85 and 89—174.

In the morning Taylor took 7 for the third hole mainly through topping his second shot into the burn. After that he missed one or two short puts, but coming home, and in the whole of the second round his golf was faultless. Details of his score are appended:

First round.—Out: 4 4 7 4 4 4 4 4 4—39
Home: 4 4 5 4 3 4 4 3—35—74
Second round.—Out: 5 3 5 3 4 2 5 5 5—37
Home: 3 5 5 5 3 4 4 4 3—36—37
Total, 147.

Harry Vardon drove grandly, being nearly always dead on the line. He had no luck on the greens, quite half a dozen puts which ought to have gone down stopping on the lip of the hole. His figures were—

OPEN TOURNAMENT AT MUSSELBURGH.

Following the custom established in 1892, when the championship was taken away from Musselburgh, the townspeople prefaced an open championship with a Scottish venue by holding an open competition for money prizes of £15, £8, £5 £4, £3, and £2 and four of £1, for professional, and a silver cup and gold medal for amateurs, play taking place on the 4th instant over the famous old nine-hole course. The entry of sixty-four included a number of second class amateurs and the pick of the professional, save Harry Vardon. The event attracted a lot of attention locally and there was a big crowd throughout the day. Play began at nine in the morning and ran late into the evening, a new method of starting intensifying the delays incident to a big field on a short course, while the baked condition of the greens, which made the short game most uncertain, did not tend to expedition at the beginning of the day. The crowd singled out J. H. Taylor and Jas. Braid for first attention, but any hopes that might have been entertained of Braid equalling his great feat of two years ago, when he made a new record for the course with an aggregate of 140 were soon dashed. He bunkered off his first tee shot, and, taking a 7 for the hole, made so poor a return that with 41 he was six strokes behind the leader, the other public favourite J. H. Taylor. The latter's round of 35 represented practically faultless golf, the Richmond man dropping only one stroke in the round. His details were 4 5 4 3 3 4 4 4 4. In his second round Taylor took two strokes more—excusable, looking to the growing keenness of the putting greens—and at the middle of the contest he held first position with 72, second place being held by C. R. Smith, the Scottish International player, with rounds of 38 and 35, total 73.

The other leaders were Tom Williamson (74, 36, and 38), Jack White (75, 39, and 3) and G. Caldwell Daikeith (75, 38, and 37). Taylor was the centre of attraction in the afternoon, but with two 38's he hardly kept up the standard of the morning, and he finished in 148, eight strokes over Braid's winning register of 1901, a capital performance considering the state of the course and the putting-greens. The feature, however, of the early afternoon was the fourth round of A. Herd, the champion redeeming his comparative failure of the forenoon with a brilliant round of 33, a return unequalled in competition golf, for many years at all events, and equal with Bob Ferguson's and Willie Park jun's record rounds of the green. Herd had a long putt for a 3 on the home green and a round of 32, but his ball ran round the disc and jumped out. His details were 4 3 4 3 4 4 3 4 4. Good third rounds by Massey and Williamson gave each an aggregate of 1·2 for their rounds and and a chance, with a fourth round of 36, of catching up the leader, the play being full of interest till the very end of the day. The final results were: Taylor, 148; Braid, Smith, and Williamson, equal, 150; Jones, 151; Herd and Massey, equal, 152.

The excitement caused by Herd's great round had hardly died down ere Braid came in with 34—a grand round being spoiled by a missed drive off the fifth tee. Here the Romford man was put off his drive by some one moving in the crowd, Braid bunkering, and taking 6 at a 4 hole. With an aggregate of 150 he joined Smith and Williamson two strokes behind the leader. Massey was now the only man who could beat Taylor, but the Frenchman began badly with a 6, and, with 40 he receded to sixth place. The prize-list was as follows: J. H. Taylor 148, £15; J. Braid, C. R. Smith, and T. Williamson, 150, divided £17; R. Jones, 151, £3; A. Herd and A. Massey, 152, divided £3; J. Kay, J. Kinnell, T. Vardon, and E. Foord, 154, divided £3.

Messrs. Gordon Stewart, Musselburgh, and D. Leitch, Musselburgh, 156, tied for the Amateur Cup.

CROQUET.

The Annual Championship Meeting was brought to a successful conclusion at Wimbledon on Saturday.

In the open Championship Mr. C. Corbally defeated Miss Gower.

In the Ladies' Open Championship Miss Coote beat Miss Preston two games to one.

In the Mixed Doubles' Open Championship, C. Corbally and Miss Gower beat C E. Willis and Miss Coote two to one.

In the Handicap Singles Miss Cowie beat the Hon. S. Coleridge.

In the International Scotland (W. W. Bruce and Miss Berens) beat England (C. E. Willis and Miss Bramwell) two to one.

Wales (T. Williams and Miss Gower) beat Ireland (C. Corbally and Miss Preston) two to one. In the final round Wales beat Scotland by two to one.

ROWING.

The Annual Race between the training ships, Worcester and Conway, was rowed on the Mersey on Saturday. The Conway crew showed superior rowing all along the two miles' course and won by fully ten lengths.

It is stated that two German scullers, Carl Erst, who last year won the German Championship, and Conrad Haffner have entered for the Diamond Sculls at Henley.

Pigsticking.

PIGSTICKING ANECDOTES.

THE following account, strictly speaking, has little to do with pigsticking; but as it was an extraordinary occurrence, and should be of interest to your readers, I will relate what happened.

Some three or four years' ago, at Begum Serai Factory, a pig had been speared on the dearas, and its body was brought into the factory by some of the coolies, after the stick, and put down in front of the bungalow. Now it happened that there was an old gray horse grazing in the garden at the time; he had long been past work, and was a kind of pensioner, being allowed to roam about wherever he liked. When he saw the boar lying on the ground, he suddenly made a rush for it, and at once began savagely attacking it with his teeth. The whole animal was changed; a few minutes before he was a broken down old crock, now he was a furious maddened animal, every now and then making a peculiar screaming sound, and even sinking on to his knees to mouth and tear at the carcass. M—, and some of the pigsticking party who had come out of the bungalow to examine the dead boar, were so astonished at first that they did nothing; but eventually the horse was dragged off the pig and with some difficulty led away. The coolies then lifted the boar's body up and were taking it away, when the old nag broke away from M—, who was holding him, and made for the dead animal again which, after some trouble, he was persuaded to leave.

This story, which can be vouched for by some three or four witnesses, is the only case I have heard of a horse attacking a pig's carcass; and it would be interesting to hear if any of your readers have ever experienced such a thing. The old horse I have no doubt in his young days had seen ridden to pig; perhaps he may have been badly cut, and as horses are known to have marvellous memories, the sight of his old enemy and the recollection of his wound may have induced him to take the revenge he did.

Every kind of country has to be ridden over when after pig; it may be the hard sun-dried mud of the Gangetic dearas, split up all over the surface by a dangerous network of deep, broad cracks; it may be through thick, high grass filled with holes and blind ditches, or merely in the open; but, wherever it is there can be no holding back if the pig is to be killed; so spills are common and frequent in the merry chase after the wily boar.

I will now describe two bad accidents while after pig. The first one is a distinct warning against the use of too big stirrup irons; and it also points to the danger of not thoroughly inspecting one's riding gear. In the present case if the safety clips on the saddle had been left open, or properly oiled, the stirrup leather would have been easily released, and a man's life wouldn't have been seriously endangered; as it was the safety clips were found thick in rust, and fixed so firmly into the leather of the saddle that they couldn't be moved. I will now relate what occurred.

There was a "stick" at a grass near Belsundie, not far from Samastipore, some twelve years' ago, the following planters were out C. R—, J. R—, N—, S—, J. W—, and G—, from the Dowlutpore concern; G. and E. M—, two brothers from Jeetwarpore; and the Hon'ble F—, A—, and some others.

A pig broke out from the grass, and G— and W—, while galloping after it, both came down in a blind ditch G— escaped all right, but W— was not so lucky; for as the horse lay for a minute partly stunned with the unfortunate rider's left leg pinned under the animal, W— discovered that his right foot had been completely knocked through the stirrup iron, and was firmly fixed round the ankle. The horse scrambled to his feet, and as he did so the rider's left leg was released, and he tried to pull himself into the saddle by the help of the reins. He failed in doing so; and as the horse bolted off, he was violently jerked back, and the next minute was being dragged by the right leg. G— and E. M— rode as hard as they could to try and get the reins and stop the animal, but were unsuccessful; and the horse, half mad with fright, increased his pace to a gallop. Escape seemed hopeless, as every now and then the beast would lash out at W——'s body.

After going some distance the horse tried to jump a bank and ditch that surrounded a tope of mango trees; here he fell again, and in falling, the jerk took the rider's boot completely off leaving him bleeding and stunned on the ground; while the animal galloped away through the trees, with the boot still hanging in the stirrup iron. W— was lucky enough to escape without a bone being broken, but he was badly shaken and cut about, and it was some weeks before he could leave his bed. Several ladies, who were out at the stick, and all the men of the party, were witnesses of this rather ghastly accident. The pig that broke was afterwards killed, and he turned out a miserable little beggar; he would make no fight, and died like a cur in a half-dried tank.

The other spill occurred some years back at a grass called Bowarah, not very far from Domath Factory. A large party were out, amongst others being Sir W. H.—, R. H—, N—, D—, and C—.

A pig was put up, and was being hotly pressed by N—. The boar was just in front of him, when there was a crash, and the pig with N— and his horse disappeared out of sight. They had fallen some twenty feet into an old well. Everybody rode up expecting to find them all killed, but, marvellous to relate, N—, barring being knocked out in time for a bit, was quite unhurt; and his horse escaped also, though he bled a little from the nose.

I will try and picture some of the fascinations of pigsticking for those of your readers, who have never carried a spear or seen a stick.

A long "grass" thick and broad, in which are seen several hundred coolies all armed with sticks and lathies, while here and there are a few elephants scattered along the line advancing slowly, but surely, through the grass, under the supervision of two or three Sahibs. Outside, and also riding about in the grass, are some more pigstickers. Suddenly there is a cry; the line of coolies are seen to stop, and a white-coated rider, far away on the right, is seen to gallop. A pig has sneaked out without being seen, though now he can be distinguished like a black ball rolling away in the distance.

You and the rest of the party are tearing your way through the grass; you see "white coat" far ahead, when his horse is seen to turn "turtle" in a cloud of dust. He has lost his reins and is hopelessly out of the run, for his nag, with head and tail up, is cantering away in the direction of his stables, three miles away. With a bound that clears the ditch at the edge of the grass, you are in the open, and now with a singing noise in your ears, as you rush through the air, you watch the dark spot ahead getting bigger and bigger, the powerful strides of the horse under you, the increased pace, as half unconsciously your spurs meet in his side, makes you even keener than before for the excitement of meeting the pig. You are almost up to him; you see him, hardpressed, as he is, turn savagely out of his way to charge amongst some grazing cattle. He is badly blown now, and is undoubtedly collecting himself for the fight that is to come. You steady your horse and bring your spear point more to the front in readiness. His ears prick forward, he suddenly turns, and with an increased pace and a short "O-ough", "O—ough" of rage and fury, he charges you and your horse with all his superb strength.

You feel your spear go in deep into muscles and flesh, while your horse passes on. You are round again in a minute, but the pig is already meeting another rider with a brave charge. You then see him badly wounded and dying; and unable to move totter and fall over, though still proudly facing his enemies to the last.

There are very few pigstickers, if any, I should imagine, who have ever had an experience like the following that happened to a Tirhoot planter. That was to have a full grown boar on the top of his horse, behind him and his saddle.

A few years ago, M— and R— and some other "spears" were out after pig on the Gangetic dearas, not far from Khan Mizapore Factory. A boar was put up and after a gallop he was brought to a stand-still. The place where he had taken up his position was on the top of a steep nassi; M—, who was in the nassi below, rode up to attack him, and as he received the pig's charge he had to hold his spear high in the air to stick him. The spear entered the animal's body all right, though he was only wounded; but the force of the pig's charge carried him completely over the side of the nassi, and he partly fell and partly sprang on to M—'s horse, landing behind the saddle, from which place, after a scramble, he fell to the ground and was speared. He was found to be a full-grown boar and measured 33 inches.

An amusing thing that occurred at a "stick" near Sitamarhi about three years' ago, is worth relating, though it might have ended seriously.

W—a planter, J—, and one or two others were out pigsticking. A boar broke out of a grass and after a hard gallop, W— succeeded in getting up to him; the pig turned and charged, and though the spear went into him, he seemed to feel no pain in his savage lust for revenge, but forced himself up the shaft, impaling himself until the spear head and shaft was well through his body, by which means he was able to get close enough to W—'s horse to cut it very badly.

W—had to dismount at once, and he called to J—to ride up and finish off the pig, which was standing badly wounded with the spear still in him alongside a high aree (a partition made of earth, dividing the different fields). J—, who was plucky enough, had at that time very little experience of pigsticking; the aree was between him and the pig which seemed very badly hurt, and he was just about to stick the animal, when it suddenly revived, and much to J—'s surprise sprung on to the mound, and in a moment had the toe of his boot in his mouth. J—struck at him with his spear, but the pig held on, and before he fell over and died had completely bitten the end of the boot off.

The whole party were afraid J—was badly hurt, or at least had lost his toes; and were greatly relieved when he replied that he wasn't hurt in the slightest, adding that he always wore his top boots made big, and stuffed at the end with cotton wool!

* * * * * *

One 'Xmas, now some seven or eight years' ago, a large party went out to look for pig in the grasses around Chuckia Factory. In Sarun they failed to find pig, but they put up a full-grown Blue Bull, and as they had such an excellent run and killed it in the end, I will give a short description of it. Amongst others the following were out:—Major G—, a Gunner, C. G—, a Subaltern—in a Native Cavalry Regiment, J.—, a planter from Tirhoot, J. A. W.—, J. W.—, and several others.

The Blue Bull started off across country at a rattling pace, though from the look of its clumsy gallop it appeared to be hardly going at all. The country was broken up with tanks and ditches, and it was a regular steeplechase from start to finish. Most of the horses were quite blown when the Blue Bull took refuge in a small grass. Coolies were then got to drive him out, and in the meanwhile the horses managed to get a bit of a rest. Out he came again, and after a hard gallop, he dashed through a grass without stopping. J—had a spill here, as he and his pony took a header into a dried-up tank in the grass. Major G—who was beautifully mounted began to press the Blue Bull, while J. A. W—rode just behind him.

Several miles had been covered, most of the horses were dead beat, and nearly everybody had had a spill, except Major G— and W——, as the horses were too pumped out to rise at the jumps.

The Blue Bull who was getting tired, would now and then lie up in a grass, but was always easily driven out, and at last he slowed down. Major G—then got up alongside; both the deer and his horse were quite done up, and the pace was hardly a canter. He tried to spear the Blue Bull, but couldn't get the spear through the hide; and at every attempt the animal would lash out at him with his heels. At last W—, who was behind, shouted out to him to get in front of the animal, and spear him like that; G—then managed to get his horse a bit ahead of the Blue Bull, who plunged on to the spear and was killed at once as the spear entered his heart.

Nobody got back to the factory before two in the afternoon, and the run from start to finish must have been about ten miles.

It was not far from this factory ten years' ago that J. A. W.—on his horse Sweet Briar rode down and speared a wolf after a very long run.

* * * * * *

I will now relate how a 15-2 horse was cut above the tail by a pig in the north of the Chupra District, as such a jump by a pig is unique, when cutting at a horse. A pig will generally jump when he is cutting, but the marvellous spring this pig gave is well worthy of record.

It happened like this: Domath Factory and the country all around there is infested with pig, and N.—, who was at that factory some years ago, used to often get his two and three pig a week by himself.

One day a punkah-wallah on his way to the bungalow from his village saw a large boar enter some ikeree grass; he marked him down carefully, and at once went to the factory and gave the information to N—, who ordered up his horse (which stood 15·2), mounted it, and cantered out to the place with a spear.

It was only a small patch of grass, and N—, ordered some coolies to drive some cattle that were grazing along side into the grass. The cattle were driven in, and shortly after a very fine boar made his appearance and went across country. N—after a gallop, succeeded in getting up to him, and giving him a very good spear; and as he thought he had badly wounded the pig, he partly pulled his horse up after he had passed him and looked back; as he did so, the pig charged, and making an immense spring, cut the horse badly over the tail. The pig was killed very shortly after and was found to measure 34 inches.

A pig, or a drove of pigs, will very often upset the pigstickers while they are having a comfortable lunch in the middle of the day, and send them flying in every direction for their horses.

the centre line. The game was well through the first half when Lockhart drew first blood for the visitors. They continued to attack and forced a couple of corners, but nothing resulted. Just before the interval Hill got away for the home team, but lost a good chance by shooting wide. The second moiety showed improvement in the Rangers and a better display was given. The Highlanders continued to attack, but Templeton and Anderson offered a strong defence, and the visitors lost several openings by erratic shooting. Then a melée took place in front of the home goal and the ball was put through. Shortly after another goal was put on by the Highlanders from a penalty kick and the match ended in a win for them as stated. Teams :—

64TH R. T. A. vs. HOWRAH.—Played at Howrah on the 23rd instant, the home team winning after a hard struggle by two goals to one. Howrah started the play and for the first part the game was in their favour. Then Dodds got possession and running down passed to Lieutenant Shaw who scored. Howrah played hard and the ball was transferred to the gunners' half. Here a foul by Lockins gave them a penalty kick from which Jackson put the ball through. On resuming, the Gunners attacked the visitors' goal and Howrah had a busy time. At last W. Smith got away and running down sent in two shots, the second of which proved successful. The Barrackpore men were unable to equalise, and Howrah thus won by two goals to one. Teams :—

HOWRAH.—A. Bennet, goal; F. Bennet and H. Bennet, backs; Morrow, H. Osborne, and E. Osborne, half-backs; J. Smith, Curtis, W. Smith, Jackson and Burns, forwards.

64TH R. F. A.—Hutchinson, goal; Woods and Prince, backs; Corby, Lockins and Donalley, half-backs; Goodwin, Wratten, Lieutenant Shaw. Nicol and Dodds, forwards.

CALCUTTA vs. A. AND S. HIGHLANDERS.—These teams met on the Highlanders' ground on Tuesday, when the home team was victorious by three goals to one. They forced the pace from the start and after a hard attack Lockhart drew first blood. The Highlanders continued to press but nothing resulted and then the visitors attacked and Coventry was called upon to save some difficult shots. On crossing over a foul by the Highlanders gave the Calcutta men their chance and Cooper equalised. The Highlanders put on a great spurt and Quin soon put them ahead, Calcutta tried hard to get level again, but were unable to score and the 93rd playing the wet ball in fine style, added a third goal, Hogg converting a long pass by Pollock. Teams :—

CALCUTTA F. C.—Buckley, goal; Gahan and Todd, backs; Walker, Maunder and Crawford halves Fyfe, H. Sherman, Cooper, V Sherman and Stewart, forwards.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

WE much regret the clerical error in our last week's notes whereby we referred to the council of the I. F. A. as being the body who rejected the appeal of the Y M. C. A.,—as of course the matter was dealt with by the Committee of the League and it was to them that I intended my remarks to refer. We trust the council of the I. F. A. will accept this explanation and "The Chiel's" apologies.

All those who are interested in football, both as players and spectators, will, we feel sure, be grievously disappointed to hear that the newly-formed Referees' Association is not meeting with the support that such a long-felt want so richly deserves—and why? Simply and solely we believe because men who are willing to officiate are unwilling to submit themselves for the necessary examination as to their efficiency. Can anything be more childish! At home men whose thorough knowledge of the game is unquestionable do not consider it infra dig to have to submit themselves for a qualifying examination—surely therefore this precaution is still more necessary out here where one is to a certain extent out of touch with the constant alterations in the rules. So bury your false pride ye would-be referees and assist in making the association the boon it would surely prove to all soccer enthusiasts.

The Rangers are improving daily and their draw of 2 goals all against Dalhousie was one of the best performances they have given this season. Certainly Dalhousie were without Stimson and Wallace, but the substitutes both filled the vacancies satisfactorily and they were otherwise at full strength. The game was very even and at times exciting, especially during the closing period, but Dalhousie were perhaps slightly the better team and should have just won. All the scoring was done during the second half, the first point being credited to the Rangers by Russell, who rushed the ball past Peake, after the latter custodian had thrice repulsed the attack. Soon after came an equalising, and somewhat lucky, goal from Rosser as the result of a pretty piece of combined play with Echlin. Then the game became fast and exciting and after some desultory play Emery placed the ball nicely for his forwards who dribbled up and Affleck put his side ahead with a fine shot which completely beat Whelan. Only a few minutes remained for play, but this sufficed for the Rangers to equalise, as from a beautifully placed corner White headed through and thus made the score 2 all. Anderson, Templeton, Lees and O'Laughlin were principally responsible for the good show given by the Rangers—they form the nucleus of a fine defence, but the forwards, with the exception of Russell, are slow and ponderous and were no match for their speedy opponents. For Dalhousie, Peake was not at his best—what a pity his kicking is so weak—and Watts though clever and untiring in mid field work, invariably missed opportunities in front of goal. Rosser and Echlin were fast and resourceful as usual, but how very much more dangerous they would be with a little less impetuosity and more generalship.

The Y. M. C. A. encountered Howrah on the ground of the latter club, and after a vigorous game in which combination was conspicuous by its absence the match ended in a draw of one goal all. Neither team was at full strength, the visitors being without Baldwin, Butler and P. Street and Howrah were minus the services of Ferrier and Hart. On the day's play the Association were undoubtedly the better side, but the defence of the trans-Hughli team, especially Bennett in goal proved very sound. The first point was scored for the Association by Simmons, who tried a long shot from his position at half-back which just sailed under the bar and into the net. This player was, however, responsible for the goal which was scored against his side during the second half as he handled in trying to save and from the penalty kick Jackson beat William with a fine hard shot.

The meeting of the 93rd Highlanders and the 64th R. F. A. proved nothing but an exercise canter for the present holders of the shield, as after taking matters very easily throughout, they eventually won by 5 goals to nil. The Barrackpore team were very poorly represented, as neither Shaw, Woods nor Hutchinson were playing and they seldom penetrated the Highlanders' twenty-five line The game was too one-sided to admit of description, but Quin, who returned to his place at centre forward, scored two of the goals, the other three coming from Hogg, Lockhart, and Montgomery.

The return match between the K. O. S. Bs. and Calcutta was looked forward to with intense interest by both players and spectators alike, and it was a great disappointment to several of the latter that they were precluded from seeing the encounter in consequence of the game being played at Dum-Dum. In the first match the premier club proved victorious and it was known that the Borderers would strain every nerve to avenge their previous defeat, and such proved to be the case, but luck in the shape of a superb display on the part of Buckley was against them and Calcutta were again victorious by the narrow margin of 2 goals to 1.

The premier club were without the services of Gillespie whose place was taken by Gahan, but they were otherwise at full strength, whereas the homesters had several new men playing. From the kick off the military went away with a rush and looked like scoring when one of their forwards was pulled up for offside, which penalty was again repeated shortly afterwards, the ball finding touch near the K. O. S. B.s goal line. Some indiscriminate kicking followed the throw out from which the ball came to the elder Sherman, who headed it into the net and thus drew first blood for his side. The game had hardly been restarted when Cooper obtained possession from his half-backs, and making one of his well-known individual efforts dribbled finely through the opposing defence and added the second goal. Nothing daunted the military played with increased dash and Todd and Walker on several occasions saved finely, the latter on one occasion cleverly deprived Byers and passed to Fyfe, who put in a hard shot which O'Neil saved with difficulty. Bexon then got away and made tracks for the Calcutta goal, and Todd, although depriving him of the ball, failed to clear, but Neilson missed a fine opportunity by shooting wide, and shortly after this the K. O. S. B. obtained a corner which was well placed and Neilson headed through thus bringing the score to 2—1.

During the second half there was only one team in it and that was not Calcutta. The homesters had all the best of the argument and pressing continuously maintained an incessant bombardment on the visitors' goal, but without success and consequently they retired defeated by the half-time score.

All praise for Calcutta's victory is due to Buckley and in a much lesser degree to Todd, as it was only the fine defence of these two men that saved the Red-Shirts from a crushing defeat. Buckley was magnificent and his display is one of the finest we have ever seen. Todd played his usual robust game and his long kicking was continually in evidence. His confrère, Gahan, was quite outclassed and gave a poor exhibition which threw extra work on his fellow back. The forwards were spasmodic and showed little or no combination; they all did good things at times, but their efforts were of the individual type. We have seen all the half-backs play better. Cassidy, Byers, and Watts were very clever and effective for the Dum-Dum team and Stewart fed his front rank with discrimination, while Allan got through a lot of work but was not too sound in his defence.

The Dalhousie vs. Y. M. C. A. match, which was played on the ground of the former club, was productive of a good struggle and ended in a pointless draw. In the first game between these two teams the Young Men won by 2 goals, but since then Dalhousie have shown such consistent improvement that their chances of success in the return match were thought to be very rosy. During the first half the home team had the better of the game and shots by Rosser and Watts were well saved by Williams, whereas Peake had little or nothing to do. This state of affairs continued after the interval when the pace at which the game had been played made itself felt and the play was desultory and uninteresting. Towards the close Watts scored for Dalhousie, but the point was disallowed and the match thus ended in a pointless draw. Watts, Rosser, Simmons, and Williams were conspicuous for their respective sides.

We understand that Dalhousie intend appealing against the Referee's decision in regard to the goal scored by Watts. It appears that the goal judge said the ball had passed the line before Williams saved, whereas the Referee who considered himself in a position to judge decided that it had not and consequently overruled the goal judge's opinion and disallowed the goal, a nice point for the Committee of the League, with odds on the Referee's verdict being upheld.

The Rangers put up a very poor show against the 93rd Highlanders on Saturday and the latter without exerting themselves unnecessarily won by 3 goals to nil. The Rangers' backs fed their forwards well throughout, but innumerable opportunities were lost by the attacking division through hesitation. The Fort men on the other hand were quick to take advantage of an opening that offered, and although they only scored once in the first half they subsequently augmented this by two more goals during the latter stages—it was an uninteresting game.

Walking.

LONG DISTANCE WALKING.

IN this age of hurry, when one jumps on tram, or takes train or motor when going the shortest of journeys, it is gratifying to find that our standard of physical ability is not degenerating. The latest craze is long distance walking, overdone it may be, but yet useful as a guide to the strength and stamina of the young men of our day. Certainly the most remarkable feature of the remarkable Stock Exchange walk to Brighton was the fact that no fewer than seventy-six out of eighty-four starters completed the journey, and not that one man finished in nine and a half hours. It was a revelation to old-time athletes, many of whom would have staked all they possessed against even half the men who left Westminster Bridge on May-day morning ever completing the journey, and would have called one mad had he suggested that ten of them would finish inside ten hours, forty five inside eleven, and seventy-two inside twelve hours. Yet those facts are now on record, and serve as a fitting denial to those who assert that we are a dwindling race, and that there is a general deterioration in the national health and strength.

It was a long and trying walk, yet some remarkably good performances were accomplished, and the men finished very fresh indeed Here and there a man came in done up, but insufficient or injudicious training was probably the cause, and the stories which were published as to the collapse of many of the competitors were all nonsense, probably emanating from brains as fertile as those of the reporters who so extensively boomed the affair, and whose quotations of bets were, as Mr. Vandervell remarked after finishing, as faulty as the market prices in the City columns of certain newspapers. This gentleman, who is far from young, set himself the task of walking the fifty-two and-a-quarter miles in thirteen hours, and after covering the distance in about eleven and-a-half, sat down and wrote a two-column humorous article on the race for a financial paper. That showed at any rate no sign of a mental collapse. The only complaint he makes is that the milestones went backwards a mile or two before reaching Brighton; but a small bottle of the best, after walking forty-eight miles without liquid refreshment came as the nectar of the gods, and he finished strong, though somewhat stiff and foot-sore. All the men seemed to be possessed of the same pluck and determination as Mr. Vandervell.

They had laid themselves out to get there and get there they would and did. As they trudged along one was struck with their varying styles. Here and there was a suggestion of "a mix," and one noticed that these men were generally accompanied by professional trainers, but taken collectively a more fairer walk was never held. One early picked out Mr. E. F. Broad as likely to be troublesome at the finish He walked upright, with a fair heel-and-toe action head held well back, and the arms swinging naturally, and not in the high-stilted fashion so common among short distance path walkers. His judgment of pace was excellent, and when he at last took the lead he had a lot of reserve power left, while Mr. G. D. Nicholas, who had made the pace for nearly three parts of the journey, was only able to force himself along through sheer pluck. At Croydon the latter had showed the signs that the pace was telling, the cheeks being flushed, but he went on in really remarkable fashion, and I look upon his performance, after an ill-judged rush to the front at the start, as one of the best in the race. He recovered wonderfully in the last few miles and finished even fresher than the winner, but the next three or four showed signs of distress, especially Mr. Russell Davies and Mr. N. Varley. The former is an old member of the Ranelagh Harriers and has had plenty of training across country He walked well and once forced himself into second place, but in the effort to gain this position he had just overtaxed himself, and had to give way to Mr. T. E. Hammond in the last half mile, and thus lost third place in the scratch race. Yet he finished within six minutes of the winner.

Though the young men proved speedier the older men in the race did some extraordinary and very commendable work. When in 1868 the brothers Chinnery (one of whom was a judge in the recent walk) made the journey and set up first record, they took 11hrs. and 35mins.; yet Mr. G. S. Pawle, who is forty-seven years of age, only took 10hrs. 19mins. 57secs. on May Day, when the weather was so bad that one would have thought such a record by a veteran was impossible. Mr. R. P. Farrell, the old London Rowing Club man, who only took 10hrs. 15mins. 22secs., is also well over thirty-five. In 1878 Mr. P. J. Burt lowered the Chinnery record to 10hrs. 52mins., and this stood till 1884, when Mr. C L O'Malley, of the London Athletic Club, a fine steeplechaser, skater, boxer, and swimmer, beat Mr. B. Nickels, jun., in a match in 9hrs. 48mins. Those were the days of genuine sporting matches, and no such athletic event has since been decided over the course except the Stock Exchange Walk, though several amateur clubs have held open races. The first of these was by the Ealing Harriers in 1884, when the late Mr. J. A. McIntosh won in 9hrs. 25mins. 8secs In that race very little discretion was shown by the walkers, one of whom, Mr. J. Miles, walked the first seven miles in a little over an hour—an absurd pace for so long a journey The second man on that occasion was the veteran Civil Service athlete, Mr. C. M. Callow, who took 10hrs. 14mins. 6secs. In 1891 Mr. E. H Cuthbertson, a member of the Lea Harriers and one of the Committee of the Stock Exchange Walk, went from Hatchett's, Piccadilly, to the Old Ship at Brighton—the old coaching course—in 10hrs. 6mins 18secs., his time from Westminster being 9hrs. 55mins. 34secs.; but all previous performances were eclipsed in 1896, when a well-known professional named S. Franks, then forty-five year of age, walked over in 9hrs. 7mins. 7secs. This professional was one of the first men to fairly walk eight miles in one hour

In 1897 the open walk of the Polytechnic Harriers brought out thirty-seven starters. In that race Mr. J. Butler, the present amateur champion as well as London to Brighton record holder, made exactly the same mistake as did Mr. G. D. Nicholas on May Day. He showed the way at a great pace and

Pigsticking.

PIGSTICKING ANECDOTES.

THE following account, strictly speaking, has little to do with pigsticking; but as it was an extraordinary occurrence, and should be of interest to your readers, I will relate what happened.

Some three or four years' ago, at Begum Serai Factory, a pig had been speared on the dearas, and its body was brought into the factory by some of the coolies, after the stick, and put down in front of the bungalow. Now it happened that there was an old gray horse grazing in the garden at the time; he had long been past work, and was a kind of pensioner, being allowed to roam about wherever he liked. When he saw the boar lying on the ground, he suddenly made a rush for it, and at once began savagely attacking it with his teeth. The whole animal was changed; a few minutes before he was a broken down old crock, now he was a furious maddened animal, every now and then making a peculiar screaming sound, and even sinking on to his knees to mouth and tear at the carcass. M—, and some of the pigsticking party who had come out of the bungalow to examine the dead boar, were so astonished at first that they did nothing; but eventually the horse was dragged off the pig and with some difficulty led away. The coolies then lifted the boar's body up and were taking it away, when the old nag broke away from M—, who was holding him, and made for the dead animal again which, after some trouble, he was persuaded to leave.

This story, which can be vouched for by some three or four witnesses, is the only case I have heard of a horse attacking a pig's carcass; and it would be interesting to hear if any of your readers have ever experienced such a thing. The old horse I have no doubt in his young days had been ridden to pig; perhaps he may have been badly cut, and as horses are known to have marvellous memories, the sight of his old enemy and the recollection of his wound may have induced him to take the revenge he did.

Every kind of country has to be ridden over when after pig; it may be the hard sun-dried mud of the Gangetic dearas, split up all over the surface by a dangerous network of deep, broad cracks; it may be through thick, high grass filled with holes and blind ditches, or merely in the open; but, wherever it is there can be no holding back if the pig is to be killed; so spills are common and frequent in the merry chase after the wily boar.

I will now describe two bad accidents while after pig. The first one is a distinct warning against the use of too big stirrup irons; and it also points to the danger of not thoroughly inspecting one's riding gear. In the present case if the safety clips on the saddle had been left open, or properly oiled, the stirrup leather would have been easily released, and a man's life wouldn't have been seriously endangered; as it was the safety clips were found thick in rust, and fixed so firmly into the leather of the saddle that they couldn't be moved. I will now relate what occurred.

There was a "stick" at a grass near Belsundie, not far from Samastipore, some twelve years' ago, the following planters were out C. R—, J. R—, N—, S—, J. W—, and G—, from the Dowlutpore concern; G. and E. M—, two brothers from Jeetwarpore; and the Hon'ble F—, A—, and some others.

A pig broke out from the grass, and G— and W—, while galloping after it, both came down in a blind ditch G— escaped all right, but W— was not so lucky; for as the horse lay for a minute partly stunned with the unfortunate rider's left leg pinned under the animal, W— discovered that his right foot had been completely knocked through the stirrup iron, and was firmly fixed round the ankle. The horse scrambled to his feet, and as he did so the rider's left leg was released, and he tried to pull himself into the saddle by the help of the reins. He failed in doing so; and as the horse bolted off, he was violently jerked back, and the next minute was being dragged by the right leg. G— and E. M— rode as hard as they could to try and get the reins and stop the animal, but were unsuccessful; and the horse, half mad with fright, increased his pace to a gallop. Escape seemed hopeless, as every now and then the beast would lash out at W——'s body.

After going some distance the horse tried to jump a bank and ditch that surrounded a tope of mango trees; here he fell again, and in falling, the jerk took the rider's boot completely off leaving him bleeding and stunned on the ground; while the animal galloped away through the trees, with the boot still hanging in the stirrup iron. W— was lucky enough to escape without a bone being broken, but he was badly shaken and cut about, and it was some weeks before he could leave his bed. Several ladies, who were out at the stick, and all the men of the party, were witnesses of this rather ghastly accident. The pig that broke was afterwards killed, and he turned out a miserable little beggar; he would make no fight, and died like a cur in a half-dried tank.

The other spill occurred some years back at a grass called Bowarah, not very far from Domath Factory. A large party were out, amongst others being Sir W. H.—, R. H—, N—, D—, and C—.

A pig was put up, and was being hotly pressed by N—. The boar was just in front of him, when there was a crash, and the pig with N— and his horse disappeared out of sight. They had fallen some twenty feet into an old well. Everybody rode up expecting to find them all killed, but, marvellous to relate, N—, barring being knocked out in time for a bit, was quite unhurt; and his horse escaped also, though he bled a little from the nose.

I will try and picture some of the fascinations of pigsticking for those of your readers, who have never carried a spear or seen a stick.

A long "grass" thick and broad, in which are seen several hundred coolies all armed with sticks and lathies, while here and there are a few elephants scattered along the line advancing slowly, but surely, through the grass, under the supervision of two or three Sahibs. Outside, and also riding about in the grass, are some more pigstickers. Suddenly there is a cry; the line of coolies are seen to stop, and a white-coated rider, far away on the right, is seen to gallop. A pig has sneaked out without being seen, though now he can be distinguished like a black ball rolling away in the distance.

You and the rest of the party are tearing your way through the grass; you see "white coat" far ahead, when his horse is seen to turn "turtle" in a cloud of dust. He has lost his reins and is hopelessly out of the run, for his nag, with head and tail up, is cantering away in the direction of his stables, three miles away. With a bound that clears the ditch at the edge of the grass, you are in the open, and now with a singing noise in your ears, as you rush through the air, you watch the dark spot ahead getting bigger and bigger, the powerful strides of the horse under you, the increased pace, as half unconsciously your spurs meet in his side, makes you even keener than before for the excitement of meeting the pig. You are almost up to him; you see him, hardpressed, as he is, turn savagely out of his way to charge amongst some grazing cattle. He is badly blown now, and is undoubtedly collecting himself for the fight that is to come. You steady your horse and bring your spear point more to the front in readiness. His ears prick forward, he suddenly turns, and with an increased pace and a short "O-ough", "O—ough" of rage and fury, he charges you and your horse with all his superb strength.

You feel your spear go in deep into muscles and flesh, while your horse passes on. You are round again in a minute, but the pig is already meeting another rider with a brave charge. You then see him badly wounded and dying; and unable to move totter and fall over, though still proudly facing his enemies to the last.

There are very few pigstickers, if any, I should imagine, who have ever had an experience like the following that happened to a Tirhoot planter. That was to have a full grown boar on the top of his horse, behind him and his saddle.

A few years ago, M— and R— and some other "spears" were out after pig on the Gangetic dearas, not far from Khan Mirzpore Factory. A boar was put up and after a gallop he was brought to a stand-still. The place where he had taken up his position was on the top of a steep nassi; M—, who was in the nassi below, rode up to attack him, and as he received the pig's charge he had to hold his spear high in the air to stick him. The spear entered the animal's body all right, though he was only wounded; but the force of the pig's charge carried him completely over the side of the nassi, and he partly fell and partly sprang on to M—'s horse, landing behind the saddle, from which place, after a scramble, he fell to the ground and was speared. He was found to be a full-grown boar and measured 33 inches.

An amusing thing that occurred at a "stick" near Sitamarhi, about three years' ago, is worth relating, though it might have ended seriously.

W—a planter, J—, and one or two others were out pigsticking. A boar broke out of a grass and after a hard gallop, W— succeeded in getting up to him; the pig turned and charged, and though the spear went into him, he seemed to feel no pain in his savage lust for revenge, but forced himself up the shaft, impaling himself until the spear head and shaft was well through his body, by which means he was able to get close enough to W—'s horse to cut it very badly.

W—had to dismount at once, and he called to J—to ride up and finish off the pig, which was standing badly wounded with the spear still in him alongside a high arre (a partition made of earth, dividing the different fields). J—, who was plucky enough, had at that time very little experience of pigsticking; the arre was between him and the pig which seemed very badly hurt, and he was just about to stick the animal, when it suddenly revived, and much to J—'s surprise sprung on to the mound, and in a moment had the toe of his boot in his mouth. J—struck at him with his spear, but the pig held on, and before he fell over and died had completely bitten the end of the boot off.

The whole party were afraid J—was badly hurt, or at least had lost his toes; and were greatly relieved when he replied that he wasn't hurt in the slightest, adding that he always wore his top boots made big, and stuffed at the end with cotton wool!

* * * * * *

One 'Xmas, now some seven or eight years' ago, a large party went out to look for pig in the grasses around Chuckia Factory. In Sarun they failed to find pig, but they put up a full-grown Blue Bull, and as they had such an excellent run and killed it in the end, I will give a short description of it. Amongst others the following were out:—Major G—, a Gunner, C. G—, a Subaltern—in a Native Cavalry Regiment, J.—, a planter from Tirhoot, J. A. W.—, J. W.—, and several others.

The Blue Bull started off across country at a rattling pace, though from the look of its clumsy gallop it appeared to be hardly going at all. The country was broken up with banks and ditches, and it was a regular steeplechase from start to finish. Most of the horses were quite blown when the Blue Bull took refuge in a small grass. Coolies were then got to drive him out, and in the meanwhile the horses managed to get a bit of a rest. Out he came again, and after a hard gallop, he dashed through a grass without stopping. J—had a spill here, as he and his pony took a header into a dried-up tank in the grass. Major G—who was beautifully mounted began to press the Blue Bull, while J. A. W—rode just behind him.

Several miles had been covered, most of the horses were dead beat, and nearly everybody had had a spill, except Major G— and W——, as the horses were too pumped out to rise at the jumps.

The Blue Bull who was getting tired, would now and then lie up in a grass, but was always easily driven out, and at last he slowed down. Major G—then got up alongside; both the deer and his horse were quite done up, and the pace was hardly a canter. He tried to spear the Blue Bull, but couldn't get the spear through the hide; and at every attempt the animal would lash out at him with his heels. At last W—, who was behind, shouted out to him to get in front of the animal, and spear him like that; G—then managed to get his horse a bit ahead of the Blue Bull, who plunged on to the spear and was killed at once as the spear entered his heart.

Nobody got back to the factory before two in the afternoon, and the run from start to finish must have been about ten miles.

It was not far from this factory ten years' ago that J. A. W.—on his horse Sweet Briar rode down and speared a wolf after a very long run.

* * * * * *

I will now relate how a 15-2 horse was cut above the tail by a pig in the north of the Chupra District, as such a jump by a pig is unique, when cutting at a horse. A pig will generally jump when he is cutting, but the marvellous spring this pig gave is well worthy of record.

It happened like this: Domath Factory and the country all around there is infested with pig, and N.—, who was at that factory some years ago, used to often get his two and three pig a week by himself.

One day a punkah-wallah on his way to the bungalow from his village saw a large boar enter some ikerve grass; he marked him down carefully, and at once went to the factory and gave the information to N—, who ordered up his horse (which stood 15-2), mounted it, and cantered out to the place with a spear.

It was only a small patch of grass, and N—, ordered some coolies to drive some cattle that were grazing along side into the grass. The cattle were driven in, and shortly after a very fine boar made his appearance and went across country. N—after a gallop, succeeded in getting up to him, and giving him a very good spear; and as he thought he had badly wounded the pig, he partly pulled his horse up after he had passed him and looked back; as he did so, the pig charged, and making an immense spring, cut the horse badly over the tail. The pig was killed very shortly after and was found to measure 34 inches.

A pig, or a drove of pigs, will very often upset the pigstickers while they are having a comfortable lunch in the middle of the day, and send them flying in every direction for their horses.

At a "stick" in the Chupra District, once, the party had just settled down to refreshments, and drinks were being handed round, when there was a sudden shout of soor, soor; and the next minute several pig and a lot of butchas were into the party.

The confusion was awful and everybody made for safety; two stout, burly planters made a spring into a bullock cart, —but, alas! the frail bamboos gave, and there they stuck, with their legs on the ground, while the drove of pig tore past.

Another time at a "stick" not far from Bettiah, the whole party including several ladies were all having lunch, when a pig suddenly appeared from a grass not far away and charged down on them.

Luckily C—, N—, and D—, had their horses standing alongside, and they were on them at once, and after heading the pig away from the lunch party, C—got up to him and speared him.

If this pig had got amongst the others, he would have done a great deal of damage, as nobody had anything more deadly in their hands than a few hard-boiled eggs!

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HOUNDS.

Monday, 15th June.—A cold, windy, and cloudy, but fair morning. We moved off from Sandy Nullah Toll Bar at 7 A. M for Barber's Shop, thence to the Dartmoor Vale. Here a brace of jacks were viewed which caused complications for a few moments, but hounds soon settled to the line of one of them, which ran up to Briar Shola, and it looked ominously liked Staircase Hill; while we regretfully watched the other taking the better line, and making in the direction of Wapshare's Hare Shola. Hounds hunted in covert for some time where scent was good; they started several jacks who went away, but stuck obstinately to the hunted one, and at last bustled him out with a rush over the adjacent hill where he ran to ground in a small covert. The Master next drew down the Yemakal Valley; this constitutes a fine hunting country, with good scenting ground but there are some very steep hills, and the crossings are difficult to get down to, so that if hounds are going at any pace, it is not very easy to live with them. We had not gone far, when hounds were again on a line, and settled to their work at once. Those who got a good start were with them the first couple of hills, but the pace at which they were going began to tell on the horses, who, however, held steadily on, though hounds were a bit "forrarder" carrying the line out straight up the valley for about two miles to Karumuda Shola, skirting which they swept round to the left. The jack was now heading in the direction of Nadunkod Mund, running through several Sholas on the way, where he could not take refuge as the hounds were pressing him close. He then ran below the Mund straight on to Zemakal Shola, which he did not enter, but turned left-handed for Chemund Shola. Here hounds seemed rather at a loss; the scent was failing, as it generally does with a sinking jack running down wind. The Master stopped hounds and collected the pack to take them home, as they had had quite enough. It was a splendid run lasting for about 35 minutes, in very good country barring one or two hills. It was altogether a most enjoyable day for sport.

Thursday, 18th June.—Saw hounds at Golf Corner. At Jackal Shola, the first draw, they got on a line, but didn't make anything of it. Finding again on top of Newmarket they ran truefully to "Bluequens," through this and out the other side to Porlock Shola. They were here stopped and taken along Newmarket. Near the double crossing a jack was viewed; hounds were already on the line, and running at a tremendous pace took us over the Lawley's Course across the Pykhara road and on to the Dunsandle road, along this for about half a mile, till taking to the country again they brested the opposing hill and ran down thus skirting a Shola just near Waterfall, over the road again and into a covert in the side of the road, when they lost their jack; this was a short but thoroughly enjoyable burst. The Master just waited to give horses a rest, then went on again towards the Old Pykhara road. After jogging quietly along for a few minutes, the hounds suddenly went away, the cause being a jack had jumped up close to them. They ran him over the hill and on to the Pykhara road off it into a covert close by from where, being hard, pressed, he turned and facing the open was pulled down. Though scent was still good, it being a rainy morning, the Master thought it best to take hounds back to the Kennels, as horses had had enough, and it was a satisfactory day for hounds.

Saturday, 20th June.—This morning at the early hour of 5-30 A. M., the hounds met at the Kennels. Captain Fife (Master), Captain Dick-Cunnynham (Whip), and Captain Packard were the only ones out. It was really a trial morning for the new draught of hounds which came out from Home about the end of March. On Bagman's Hill the hounds got on two lines and the pack divided, one lot running down the Nungenard Valley and the other heading for Staircase. Nothing much happened; they were soon after collected and taken back to Kennels.

Cycling.

CYCLING IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Friday, 5th June 1903.

A MOVEMENT is on foot in Wales to establish a series of inter-town contests on the cycle race path. The promoters of the scheme gain confidence in their venture by the keen rivalry which exists between the inhabitants of Welsh towns; they attribute the sole success of the Welsh football clubs to this town rivalry, and anticipate similar large gates should they institute team racing on the cycle track between competitors from different towns. Cycle racing has undoubtedly boomed in the Principality, and meetings are always better attended than in any other part of Great Britain, so the introduction of inter-town contests should prove a grand success. The venture will be watched with interest, since there are great possibilities in the idea.

A new method of carrying a passenger in connection with a motor bicycle has recently made its appearance on the roads. Instead of the usual trailer car or forecarriage as used in the ordinary way, a basket carriage has been devised which can be attached to the side of the motor bicycle in such a way that driver and passenger are side by side. At present, if the motorcyclist wishes for company, he has the choice of pulling a trailer or having a front basket chair fixed to his machine. Both of these have their disadvantages, and in neither case can two riders converse with comfort. The new attachment appears to be safe, sociable, and comfortable, and does away with the danger of side-slip by converting the bicycle into a three-wheeler.

Now that cycling has spread to such a large extent, it is not surprising that many road surveyors should be numbered amongst the devotees of the wheel. It is certainly fortunate for wheelmen when the road surveyor of their district is a cyclist, for it stands to reason that he must be more keenly alive to the wants of cyclists, and be ready to do all he can to provide the best cycling roads. For instance, it used to be a common practice when, at the beginning of the winter season, new metal was laid upon the roads, to cover the whole surface from one side to the other; but now it is particularly noticeable that in almost every case a small passage is left at either side, which enables the cyclists to pass with but little inconvenience. The thoughtfulness in all cases might not be specially for the cyclists' welfare, but one has very good reason to suppose that the wheelman is chiefly responsible.

It is doubtful whether many people know of the practical experiments which were made some years ago, and which showed that no less than 45 per cent. of the wear and tear of roads was due to horses' hoofs. Atmospheric variations were responsible for 20 per cent., while the wheels of vehicles accounted for the remaining 35 per cent. In regard to the last item, of course, iron-shod wheels were taken into consideration, and when we bear in mind the wonderful difference in the wear upon the road surface by iron-shod wheels as compared with rubber-shod wheels, it is seen how very slender indeed are the grounds upon which many local councils and similar bodies suggest the taxation of cycles, especially when such suggestions are made on the plea that they wear out the roads.

Some changes have been made in the programme of the Gordon-Bennett race in Ireland. In the first place it has been decided to start the cars at a minimum of seven minutes' intervals, so that, unlike the Paris-Madrid contest, it will be practically a time race. Secondly, arrangements have been made to draft another large body of police to help keep the course. Thirdly, extra controls have been arranged for at dangerous corners and narrow places along the course. Finally, no spectators will be allowed within a hundred yards of the course, except where banks or stone walls exist. Further precautionary measures are under consideration, but, nevertheless, the element of danger connected with this contest far outweighs the commercial potentialities. It is generally understood that the various counties through which the course lies, will only permit the race to proceed under very vigorous precautions for the public safety.

A kilometre has been run by motor at a rate of over 80 miles an hour, and a mile has been accomplished on a circular track in sixty-two seconds. The King has travelled frequently at twenty miles an hour, and the speeds for which the Prime Minister has been three times fined have varied from twenty-three to thirty-three miles an hour. No Prime Minster in the world before ever travelled by road at a rate of nearly a mile in just over two minutes, and though Mr. Balfour has broken the law by doing so, he has helped by his "active resistance," to hasten the day when the motor must be accepted as the readiest and quickest means of travel over short distances, and over long ones. It is not ten years' since the winning motor in a great race attained a speed of only thirteen miles an hour. It took the steam engine fifteen years to increase its speed four times; it has taken the motor only seven years to do the same. The winning speed was thirteen miles an hour in 1894; in 1895 it had risen to fifteen; in 1898 it was twenty-three; and in 1899 the fastest speed was thirty miles. But in two years the speed of the motor was all but doubled, and in 1901 M. Fournier astounded the motor world by travelling 327 miles in less than six hours. It was a record speed of over fifty-three miles an hour, and M. Fournier's motor, running between Paris and Bordeaux, beat the Sud Express, the fastest long-distance train in the world, by more than an hour. In the last event from Paris to Madrid, the first stage to Bordeaux was accomplished at the rate of eighty miles an hour.

The well-known Continental racing man Lesna, always seems to be in trouble, the latest accident falling in his way being in the Paris-Madrid race, in which he started as a competitor in the motor cycle section. The smash up occurred about midway between Paris and Bordeaux, and resulted in Lesna sustaining a fractured knee. Recovery will be long and tedious, and Lesna may rely upon the good wishes of his many friends.

With the extension of motoring, the speed question comes in for a lot of discussion; but it is satisfactory to cyclists that, while the police authorities and automobilists are at loggerheads, the long-suffering wheelman at the hands of the country police, are left more alone. What was considered furious cycling, sinks into insignificance, when compared with the speed of some of the modern motors. Besides, the police consider it a higher honour to haul up an automobilist than a cyclist.

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

HOWRAH vs. Y. M. C. A.—These teams met on the Howrah ground on the 17th instant when after an exciting struggle the game ended in a draw of one goal each. The visitors kicked off and running down Crow just missed scoring. They continued to press till H. Osborne got away and play was transferred to the Association half, but they were unable to get past Yackjee. After a couple of rushes the Young Men gave the home team plenty to do and play ruled fast to the interval. Just before the whistle, Simmons put the ball through for the visitors. On resuming, the Howrah men appeared in better form and from a penalty kick, for hands against Simmons, Jackson equalised. Play was very exciting for a time then the home forwards began to tire. The Association pressed, but could not get through, the game ending one goal all. Teams:—

HOWRAH.—A. Bennett, goal; F. Bennett and H. Bennett, backs; Morrow, H. Osborne, and E. Osborne, halves; Smith, Curtis, Grieff, Jackson and Burns, forwards.

Y. M. C. A.—Williams, goal; Rosser and Yackjee, backs; Power, Simmons and Cooper, halves; Crow, H. Street, Apcar Gordon and Schaumburgh, forwards.

Referee—Sergeant Wallace, 93rd Highlanders.

DALHOUSIE vs. RANGERS.—Played on the Dalhousie ground on the 17th. The visitors opened operations, but the home team soon got possession and kept up a continuous attack on the Rangers' goal. They were unable to score, and half time arrived pointless. On changing ends the Rangers attacked the home goal and sent in some difficult shots, all of which Peake saved, then the Dals had a turn, but without success. The Rangers nexting rushed down and Russell scored. The home team play up hard, Rosser sent in a fine shot, in trying to save which, one of the Rangers' men put the ball through his own goal. The home team continued to attack and Affleck put on a second goal. At this the Rangers played up and Peake had to save several hard shots. At last Whittie equalised from a melee and no further scoring taking place the game ended in a draw. Teams:—

DALHOUSIE F. C.—Peak, goal; Margrett and Bushby, backs; Emmery, Phelps, and Dalling, half-backs; Echlin, Rosser, Watts, Affleck, and Williams, forwards.

RANGERS' F. C.—Whelan, goal; Templeton and Anderson, backs; O'Laughlin, Lees and Hughes, half-backs; Russell, Johnson, Williams, Whittie, and Pell, forwards.

A. AND S. HIGHLANDERS vs. 64TH R. F. A.—This match was played on the Highlanders' ground last Thursday, the home team having an easy victory by five goals to nil. They went away at the start and after a couple of minutes Quin scored, which was followed by Hogg netting a second goal. They continued to press throughout the half, but put on no further score. After half-time the Highlanders resumed the attack, and towards the end they put on three goals, Lockhart, Quin and Montgomery being responsible. Then the Artillery forced a corner, but nothing resulted, and the Highlanders won, as stated, by five goals to nil. Teams:—

64th R. F. A.—Nicol, goal; Prince and Quin, backs; Corby, Lockins and Donally, half-backs; Shirt, Wratten, Clarke, Harrison and Dods, forwards.

Referee—Sergeant Fuller, K. O. S. B.

BURN AND CO. vs. HOWRAH.—These teams met on Burn and Co.'s ground on the 20th instant when a very even match ended in a pointless draw. Donnithorne, Freeman, and Wood were most conspicuous for the Engineers, while of the Howrah men the Bennetts and the Osbornes showed up in good form. Teams:—

HOWRAH.—A Bennett, goal; F Bennett and H Bennett, backs; Morrow, H. Osborne, and E. Osborne, half-backs; Watts, Jackson, Grieff, Smith, and Curtis, forwards.

BURN'S AND A. C.—Dodds, goal; MacFadyen and Donnithorne, backs; Cochrane, Wood, and Russell, half-backs; Kerr, J Bonner, H. Bonner, Taylor, and Freeman, forwards.

Referee.—Sergt. Wallace, 93rd Highlanders.

DALHOUSIE vs. Y. M. C. A.—Played on the Dalhousie ground last Saturday and ended in a draw. Both teams played up, but were unable to score. Just before time Watts sent in a shot and claimed a goal. The Referee did not allow it, though the goal line judge affirmed the ball was thrown out from within the net. An appeal by the home team is pending. Teams:—

DALHOUSIE.—Peake, goal; Margrett and Bushby, backs; Affleck, Phelps, and Dalling, half-backs; Rosser, Echlin, Watts, Williams, and Stimson, forwards.

Y. M. C. A.—Williams, goal; Baldwin and Rosser, backs; Cooper, Butler, and Street (junr.), half-backs; Simmons, Yackjee, Apcar, Street (sen.), and Crow, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Henry, Rangers.

K. O. S. B.'s vs. CALCUTTA.—Played at Dum-Dum on Saturday when a good game resulted in a win for the visitors by two goals to one. The Borderers commenced operations, and going down Eyers missed a good chance by a wild shot. They continued to press and Buckley had to save two or three hard shots. V. Sherman then got possession and ran down, but back came the soldiers and Cassidy sent in several shots. The visitors next rushed down and Fyfe passing to V. Sherman the latter headed the ball in. They returned to the attack and Cooper put on a second goal easily getting past O'Neil. The Borderers played hard and showed splendid combination, and fast play followed. Buckley was tested on several occasions, but saved in grand style. At last Neilson scored from a corner and half time arrived with Calcutta leading. On changing ends the soldiers had the best of the game and kept up an attack on the visitors' goal, but were unable to get past Buckley who saved in marvellous fashion, the game ending as stated in a win for the Calcutta. Teams:—

CALCUTTA.—Buckley, goal; Todd and Gahan, backs; Maunder, Crawford, and Walker, half-backs; Fyfe, H. Sherman, Cooper, V. Sherman, and Stuart, forwards.

K. O. S. B.'s.—O'Neil, goal; MacDonald and Allen, backs; Campbell, Stewart, and Tait, half-backs; Byers, Walls, Cassedy, Neilson, and Bexton, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Rope, Rangers.

RANGERS vs. A. & S. HIGHLANDERS.—This match, played on the Rangers' ground on the 20th instant, resulted in a win for the Highlanders by three goals to nil. The first half was all in favour of the visitors, their opponents hardly ever crossing the centre line. The game was well through the first half when Lockhart drew first blood for the visitors. They continued to attack and forced a couple of corners, but nothing resulted. Just before the interval Hill got away for the home team, but lost a good chance by shooting wide. The second moiety showed improvement in the Rangers and a better display was given. The Highlanders continued to attack, but Templeton and Anderson offered a strong defence, and the visitors lost several openings by erratic shooting. Then a melée took place in front of the home goal and the ball was put through. Shortly after another goal was put on by the Highlanders from a penalty kick and the match ended in a win for them as stated. Teams :—

93RD HIGHLANDERS.—Coventry, goal; Wallace and Silcock, backs; Mulholland, Maclean, and Mowatt, half-backs; Pollock, Lockhart, Quinn, Montgomery, and Hogg, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Greig, D. F. C.

64TH R. T. A. vs. HOWRAH.—Played at Howrah on the 23rd instant, the home team winning after a hard struggle by two goals to one. Howrah started the play and for the first part the game was in their favour. Then Dodds got possession and running down passed to Lieutenant Shaw who scored. Howrah played hard and the ball was transferred to the gunners' half. Here a foul by Lockins gave them a penalty kick from which Jackson put the ball through. On resuming, the Gunners attacked the visitors' goal and Howrah had a busy time. At last W. Smith got away and running down sent in two shots, the second of which proved successful. The Barrackpore men were unable to equalise, and Howrah thus won by two goals to one. Teams :—

HOWRAH.—A. Bennet, goal; F. Bennet and H. Bennet, backs; Morrow, H. Osborne, and E. Osborne, half-backs; J. Smith, Curtis, W. Smith, Jackson and Burns, forwards.

64TH R. F. A.—Hutchinson, goal; Woods and Prince, backs; Corby, Lockins and Donalley, half-backs; Goodwin, Wratten, Lieutenant Shaw. Nicol and Dodds, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Wood, Burns' A. C.

CALCUTTA vs. A. AND S. HIGHLANDERS.—These teams met on the Highlanders' ground on Tuesday, when the home team was victorious by three goals to one. They forced the pace from the start and after a hard attack Lockhart drew first blood. The Highlanders continued to press but nothing resulted and then the visitors attacked and Coventry was called upon to save some difficult shots. On crossing over a foul by the Highlanders gave the Calcutta men their chance and Cooper equalised. The Highlanders put on a great spurt and Quin soon put them ahead. Calcutta tried hard to get level again, but were unable to score and the 93rd playing the wet ball in fine style, added a third goal, Hogg converting a long pass by Pollock. Teams :—

93RD HIGHLANDERS.—Coventry, goal; Wallace and Silcock, backs; McLean, McGowan and Mowat, halves; Hogg, Montgomery, Quin, Lockhart and Pollock, forwards.

CALCUTTA F. C.—Buckley, goal; Gahan and Todd, backs; Walker, Maunder and Crawford halves Fyfe, H. Sherman, Cooper, V Sherman and Stewart, forwards.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

WE much regret the clerical error in our last week's notes whereby we referred to the council of the I. F. A. as being the body who rejected the appeal of the Y M. C. A.,—as of course the matter was dealt with by the Committee of the League and it was to them that I intended my remarks to refer. We trust the council of the I. F. A. will accept this explanation and "The Chiel's" apologies.

All those who are interested in football, both as players and spectators, will, we feel sure, be grievously disappointed to hear that the newly-formed Referees' Association is not meeting with the support that such a long-felt want so richly deserves—and why? Simply and solely we believe because men who are willing to officiate are unwilling to submit themselves for the necessary examination as to their efficiency. Can anything be more childish? At home men whose thorough knowledge of the game is unquestionable do not consider it infra dig to have to submit themselves for a qualifying examination—surely therefore this precaution is still more necessary out here where one is to a certain extent out of touch with the constant alterations in the rules. So bury your false pride ye would-be referees and assist in making the association the boon it would surely prove to all soccer enthusiasts.

The Rangers are improving daily and their draw of 2 goals all against Dalhousie was one of the best performances they have given this season. Certainly Dalhousie were without Stimson and Wallace, but the substitutes both filled the vacancies satisfactorily and they were otherwise at full strength. The game was very even and at times exciting, especially during the closing period, but Dalhousie were perhaps slightly the better team and should have just won. All the scoring was done during the second half, the first point being credited to the Rangers by Russell, who rushed the ball past Peake, after the latter custodian had thrice repulsed the attack. Soon after came an equalising, and somewhat lucky, goal from Rosser as the result of a pretty piece of combined play with Echlin. Then the game became fast and exciting and after some desultory play Emery placed the ball nicely for his forwards who dribbled up and Affleck put his side ahead with a fine shot which completely beat Whelan. Only a few minutes remained for play, but this sufficed for the Rangers to equalise, as from a beautifully placed corner White headed through and thus made the score 2 all. Anderson, Templeton, Lees and O'Laughlin were principally responsible for the good show given by the Rangers—they formr the nucleus of a fine defence, but the forwards, with the exception of Russell, are slow and ponderous and were no match for their speedy opponents. For Dalhousie, Peake was not at his best—what a pity his kicking is so weak—and Watts though clever and untiring in mid field work, invariably missed opportunities in front of goal. Rosser and Echlin were fast and resourceful as usual, but how very much more dangerous they would be with a little less impetuosity and more generalship.

The Y. M. C. A. encountered Howrah on the ground of the latter club, and after a vigorous game in which combination was conspicuous by its absence the match ended in a draw of one goal all. Neither team was at full strength, the visitors being without Baldwin, Butler and P. Street and Howrah were minus the services of Ferrier and Hart. On the day's play the Association were undoubtedly the better side, but the defence of the trans-Hughli team, especially Bennett in goal proved very sound. The first point was scored for the Association by Simmons, who tried a long shot from his position at half-back which just sailed under the bar and into the net. This player was, however, responsible for the goal which was scored against his side during the second half as he handled in trying to save and from the penalty kick Jackson beat William with a fine hard shot.

The meeting of the 93rd Highlanders and the 64th R. F. A. proved nothing but an exercise canter for the present holders of the shield, as after taking matters very easily throughout, they eventually won by 5 goals to nil. The Barrackpore team were very poorly represented, as neither Shaw, Woods nor Hutchinson were playing and they seldom penetrated the Highlanders' twenty-five line The game was too one-sided to admit of description, but Quin, who returned to his place at centre forward, scored two of the goals, the other three coming from Hogg, Lockhart, and Montgomery.

The return match between the K. O. S. Bs. and Calcutta was looked forward to with intense interest by both players and spectators alike, and it was a great disappointment to several of the latter that they were precluded from seeing the encounter in consequence of the game being played at Dum-Dum. In the first match the premier club proved victorious and it was known that the Borderers would strain every nerve to avenge their previous defeat, and such proved to be the case, but luck in the shape of a superb display on the part of Buckley was against them and Calcutta were again victorious by the narrow margin of 2 goals to 1.

The premier club were without the services of Gillespie whose place was taken by Gahan, but they were otherwise at full strength, whereas the homesters had several new men playing. From the kick off the military went away with a rush and looked like scoring when one of their forwards was pulled up for offside, which penalty was again repeated shortly afterwards, the ball finding touch near the K. O. S. B.s goal line. Some indiscriminate kicking followed the throw out from which the ball came to the elder Sherman, who headed it into the net and thus drew first blood for his side. The game had hardly been restarted when Cooper obtained possession from his half-backs, and making one of his well-known individual efforts dribbled finely through the opposing defence and added the second goal. Nothing daunted the military played with increased dash and Todd and Walker on several occasions saved finely, the latter on one occasion cleverly deprived Byers and passed to Fyfe, who put in a hard shot which O'Neil saved with difficulty. Bexon then got away and made tracks for the Calcutta goal, and Todd, although depriving him of the ball, failed to clear, but Neilson missed a fine opportunity by shooting wide, and shortly after this the K. O. S. B. obtained a corner which was well placed and Neilson headed through thus bringing the score to 2—1.

During the second half there was only one team in it and that was not Calcutta. The homesters had all the best of the argument and pressing continuously maintained an incessant bombardment on the visitors' goal, but without success and consequently they retired defeated by the half-time score.

All praise for Calcutta's victory is due to Buckley and in a much lesser degree to Todd, as it was only the fine defence of these two men that saved the Red-Shirts from a crushing defeat. Buckley was magnificent and his display is one of the finest we have ever seen. Todd played his usual robust game and his long kicking was continually in evidence. His confrére, Gahan, was quite outclassed and gave a poor exhibition which threw extra work on his fellow back. The forwards were spasmodic and showed little or no combination; they all did good things at times, but their efforts were of the individual type. We have seen all the half-backs play better. Cassidy, Byers, and Watts were very clever and effective for the Dum-Dum team and Stewart fed his front rank with discrimination, while Allan got through a lot of work but was not too sound in his defence.

The Dalhousie vs. Y. M. C. A. match, which was played on the ground of the former club, was productive of a good struggle and ended in a pointless draw. In the first game between these two teams the Young Men won by 2 goals, but since then Dalhousie have shown such consistent improvement that their chances of success in the return match were thought to be very rosy. During the first half the home team had the better of the game and shots by Rosser and Watts were well saved by Williams, whereas Peake had little or nothing to do. This state of affairs continued after the interval when the pace at which the game had been played made itself felt and the play was desultory and uninteresting. Towards the close Watts scored for Dalhousie, but the point was disallowed and the match thus ended in a pointless draw. Watts, Rosser, Simmons, and Williams were conspicuous for their respective sides.

We understand that Dalhousie intend appealing against the Referee's decision in regard to the goal scored by Watts. It appears that the goal judge said the ball had passed the line before Williams saved, whereas the Referee who considered himself in a position to judge decided that it had not and consequently overruled the goal judge's opinion and disallowed the goal, a nice point for the Committee of the League, with odds on the Referee's verdict being upheld.

The Rangers put up a very poor show against the 93rd Highlanders on Saturday and the latter without exerting themselves unnecessarily won by 3 goals to nil. The Rangers' backs fed their forwards well throughout, but innumerable opportunities were lost by the attacking division through hesitation. The Fort men on the other hand were quick to take advantage of an opening that offered, and although they only scored once in the first half they subsequently augmented this by two more goals during the latter stages—it was an uninteresting game.

Walking.

LONG DISTANCE WALKING.

IN this age of hurry, when one jumps on tram, or takes train or motor when going the shortest of journeys, it is gratifying to find that our standard of physical ability is not degenerating. The latest craze is long distance walking, overdone it may be, but yet useful as a guide to the strength and stamina of the young men of our day. Certainly the most remarkable feature of the remarkable Stock Exchange walk to Brighton was the fact that no fewer than seventy-six out of eighty-four starters completed the journey, and not that one man finished in nine and a half hours. It was a revelation to old-time athletes, many of whom would have staked all they possessed against even half the men who left Westminster Bridge on May-day morning ever completing the journey, and would have called one mad had he suggested that ten of them would finish inside ten hours, forty five inside eleven, and seventy-two inside twelve hours. Yet those facts are now on record, and serve as a fitting denial to those who assert that we are a dwindling race, and that there is a general deterioration in the national health and strength.

It was a long and trying walk, yet some remarkably good performances were accomplished, and the men finished very fresh indeed Here and there a man came in done up, but insufficient or injudicious training was probably the cause, and the stories which were published as to the collapse of many of the competitors were all nonsense, probably emanating from brains as fertile as those of the reporters who so extensively boomed the affair, and whose quotations of bets were, as Mr. Vandervell remarked after finishing, as faulty as the market prices in the City columns of certain newspapers. This gentleman, who is far from young, set himself the task of walking the fifty-two and-a-quarter miles in thirteen hours, and after covering the distance in about eleven and-a-half, sat down and wrote a two-column humorous article on the race for a financial paper. That showed at any rate no sign of a mental collapse. The only complaint he makes is that the milestones went backwards a mile or two before reaching Brighton: but a small bottle of the best, after walking forty-eight miles without liquid refreshment came as the nectar of the gods, and he finished strong, though somewhat stiff and foot-sore. All the men seemed to be possessed of the same pluck and determination as Mr. Vandervell.

They had laid themselves out to get there and get there they would and did. As they trudged along one was struck with their varying styles. Here and there was a suggestion of "a mix," and one noticed that these men were generally accompanied by professional trainers, but taken collectively a more fairer walk was never held. One early picked out Mr. E. F. Broad as likely to be troublesome at the finish He walked upright, with a fair heel-and-toe action head held well back, and the arms swinging naturally, and not in the high-stilted fashion so common among short distance path walkers. His judgment of pace was excellent, and when he at last took the lead he had a lot of reserve power left, while Mr. G. D. Nicholas, who had made the pace for nearly three parts of the journey, was only able to force himself along through sheer pluck. At Croydon the latter had showed the signs that the pace was telling, the cheeks being flushed, but he went on in really remarkable fashion, and I look upon his performance, after an ill-judged rush to the front at the start, as one of the best in the race. He recovered wonderfully in the last few miles and finished even fresher than the winner, but the next three or four showed signs of distress, especially Mr. Russell Davies and Mr. N. Varley. The former is an old member of the Ranelagh Harriers and has had plenty of training across country He walked well and once forced himself into second place, but in the effort to gain this position he had just overtaxed himself, and had to give way to Mr. T. E. Hammond in the last half mile, and thus lost third place in the scratch race. Yet he finished within six minutes of the winner.

Though the young men proved speedier the older men in the race did some extraordinary and very commendable work. When in 1868 the brothers Chinnery (one of whom was a judge in the recent walk) made the journey and set up first record, they took 11hrs. and 35mins.; yet Mr. G. S. Pawle, who is forty-seven years of age, only took 10hrs. 19mins. 57secs. on May Day, when the weather was so bad that one would have thought such a record by a veteran was impossible. Mr. R. P. Farrell, the old London Rowing Club man, who only took 10hrs. 15mins. 22secs., is also well over thirty-five. In 1878 Mr. P. J. Burt lowered the Chinnery record to 10hrs. 52mins., and this stood till 1884, when Mr. C L O'Malley, of the London Athletic Club, a fine steeplechaser, skater, boxer, and swimmer, beat Mr. B. Nickels, jun., in a match in 9hrs. 48mins. Those were the days of genuine sporting matches, and no such athletic event has since been decided over the course except the Stock Exchange Walk, though several amateur clubs have held open races. The first of these was by the Ealing Harriers in 1884, when the late Mr. J. A. McIntosh won in 9hrs. 25mins. 8secs In that race very little discretion was shown by the walkers, one of whom, Mr. J. Miles, walked the first seven miles in a little over an hour—an absurd pace for so long a journey The second man on that occasion was the veteran Civil Service athlete, Mr. C. M. Callow, who took 10hrs. 14mins. 6secs. In 1891 Mr. E. H Cuthbertson, a member of the Lea Harriers and one of the Committee of the Stock Exchange Walk, went from Hatchett's, Piccadilly, to the Old Ship at Brighton—the old coaching course—in 10hrs. 6mins 18secs, his time from Westminster being 9hrs. 55mins. 31secs.; but all previous performances were eclipsed in 1896, when an well-known professional named S. Franks, then forty-five year of age, walked over in 9hrs. 7mins. 7secs. This professional was one of the first men to fairly walk eight miles in one hour

In 1897 the open walk of the Polytechnic Harriers brought out thirty-seven starters. In that race Mr. J. Butler, the present amateur champion as well as London to Brighton record holder, made exactly the same mistake as did Mr. G. D. Nicholas on May Day. He showed the way at a great pace and simply beat himself, as did also Mr. W. Endean, who had to give way to Mr E. Knott of the South London Harriers. This fine runner, swimmer, walker, and boxer won in 8hrs. 56mins. 44secs., and might have done even better had the walk not been started from the Polytechnic Institute, Regent Street, from which point his time was 9hrs. 10mins. 14secs. Two years later there was an open run over the road, this being won by Mr. F. D. Randall, the Finchley Harriers, in 6hrs. 58mins. 18secs.; and then this year Mr. J. Butler, profiting by his earlier experiences, was able to beat all records, he completing the journey in 8hrs. 43mins. 16secs. In that event a Mr B. Bray, who is forty-four years of age and whose occupation is such that one would hardly imagine he had time to train, came in second in 9hrs. 6mins. 5secs. An interesting race prior to that of the Stock Exchange was the one among members of the Ranelagh Harriers in March. Then Mr. P. L. Fisher, one of the Stock Exchange judges, walked second in 9hrs. 47mins. 3⅘secs.; Mr. J. H. Childs, of the "House," fourth in 10hrs. 30mins. 59⅘secs.; and Mr. F. D. Carr, also of the "House," sixth in 10hrs. 57mins. 35secs. On May Day Mr. Childs was able to reduce his time to 9hrs. 59mins. 28secs., he gaining tenth position; and Mr. F. D. Carr brought his down to 10hrs. 48mins. 7⅘secs., he finishing thirty sixth.

Looking through the Stock Exchange figures one notes that sixty-six men beat the time of the brothers Chinnery, thirty-seven that of the late Mr. P. J. Burt, whose recent death from the effects of a fall from his horse in Hyde Park was deeply regretted by all sportsmen, and six that of Mr. C. L. O'Malley. By figures you can prove anything, but here we have actual facts, not mere statistics, and no one possessing common sense can argue that, as far as walking is concerned, we have degenerated. And walking be it noted is a natural exercise, not an invented one. It will be long before the infantry will be relegated to the past, and in encouraging walking the Stock Exchange and other kindred bodies are doing good service to the community. The tendency nowadays is to depend too much on artificial physical recreation By artificial physical recreation I mean the weight-lifting and muscle binding work which is now so common in our schools of arms and schools of physical culture. The fact that the circumference of a certain muscle has been added to does not and cannot imply that a man's stamina has been increased. Our old systems of training were bad because the sole idea was to sweat down and then try to build up again before the day of the race or contest. Nowadays, however, every attention is paid to the development of muscle, and enthusiasts spend all spare cash and time in this so-called pastime. Rather would I have a real hard day across the stubble or a long walk on the road with some manual labour as my training power. For example, your best arm work is driving a restive pair, climbing a tree, or carrying and using your gun during a long day's rough shooting. You get some exercise then which while being enjoyable is also beneficial, and the best of all is that you get out in the open air, the best exercise of all for those engaged in crowded cities. That it is useful to you is proved by the position Mr. George Hoare obtained in the Brighton race. He is an old Blackheath Harrier who had seen service at the front. Running across country and walking had always been his pleasures. He proved himself a good soldier, and despite the hardships he had undergone was still fit enough to walk from London to Brighton in a little over ten hours. That the performance so far as our records go is a good one I am prepared to admit, but still there are thousands who did they but put their mind to it could accomplish even better time. The sportsman who plods field to field and heather to hill does a rare lot of walking in a day and so does the agricultural labourer who troubles little about a ten-mile walk to the scene of his labours, a long day in the field, and a walk home. Outside the big cities, where mechanical means of travelling are either cheap or convenient for saving time, the ordinary man walks twenty or thirty miles a day, and it is only by the overgrowth of cities that performances such as those in the Stock Exchange walk cause us any surprise, In fact it proves what we ought to have known all along that the average man can walk well over four miles an hour for a long stretch, but the walk should also be a guide to our military men as to the pace in long marches. It is far better to walk to a scheduled time than to force the pace. Far better get your men fresh up at the finish than have them blown. That is the mistake we make in our volunteers and regulars competitions when we force a company along to beat the time of some other company over a long course before reaching the shooting point. They are set out to get there in London to Brighton record time without thought of after-work, and though their shooting at the moment of finish may be good, they are not so well handicapped for after-work as the company who reach the firing point with physical resources fairly husbanded, i. e., staying power still unexhausted. Man is after all a mere machine, and can but go the limit of his oiling. To define that limit would be absurd, for the walking records quoted in this article were each and every one at the time of making considered little short of marvellous. Yet even the latest will be beaten in the time to come, for there is no limit to improvement in man's pluck and endurance. But the mere beating of record is no proof of stamina, what is wanted is a race of men capable of undergoing long marches in good time and yet being fairly fresh for further work at the end. A set pace off a mile in so many minutes without increase at intermediate miles is the ideal thing for a long journey, and our infantry officers should study this matter carefully. They will get far better results than by mere brutal forced marches which simply exhaust the men for no purpose and take all the go out of them at the finish. The sport and pastime of long-distance walking has been too much neglected since the introduction of railways, and though the men may have the stamina they have not had the opportunity of practice or taken anvantage of it. One therefore welcomes the revival of long-distance contests, which are fine tests of power and endurance, and as in road walking doubtful movers are conspicuous by their absence we are now likely to see some fast and genuinely fair walking in England. I have found long distance walking one of the finest things to keep one in condition, but for the enjoyment of walking one must understand how to walk in comfort. A suit of flannels, jacket and cap, and a well-made pair of walking boots will be found the best outfit. Above all things, see that the boots are well fitting and have them made to measure by a man who understands walking. They must not be racing boots or shoes, but wide, comfortable treading boots, with stout soles, squire-built-toes, and uppers not too heavy. Once get a decent pair built, never forsake the lasts, but always get your boots built of them. Then you will understand and realise the real comforts and pleasures of walking. Once you become fond of walking you take a new lease of life, for you cannot help becoming a real lover of nature. In the study of nature you learn things hitherto undreamt of, and appreciate the things you have hitherto only heard of, but above all you find health, the greatest treasure of the universe.—Daily's Magazine.

CALCUTTA SWIMMING CLUB.

Friday, 19th June 1903.

THE preliminary heats in the Four Lengths Handicap were put through this evenning. Only nine competitors faced the starter and they were divided into two heats. Results were as follows:—

FIRST HEAT.

		Start.	Nett Time. Mins. Secs.
1	H. G. Remfry ...	27 secs.	2 10⅘
2	W. Govan ...	25 „	2 12
3	J. Chaplin ...	32 „	not taken.
4	A. E. B. Siddons ...	20 „	did not finish.

Siddons, who ought to have won this, swallowed a mouthful in the last length and had to retire. Remfry won comfortably with Govan and Chaplin fairly close up.

SECOND HEAT.

		Start.	Nett Time. Mins. Secs.
1	K. M. Kennedy ...	20 secs.	1 59⅘
2	H. L. Harvey ...	32 „	2 13⅘
3	G. Brown ...	9 „	1 53
4	J. Knox-Ord ...	25 „	not taken
5	F. T. Blockley ...	30 „	not taken

Kennedy romped in an easy first in unexpectedly good time. Harvey was fairly close and the rest nowhere. The final heat will be contested on Friday, 26th current.

WATER POLO.

CALCUTTA SWIMMING CLUB vs. 93RD HIGHLANDERS.—This match, which came off at the Baths on Tuesday, resulted in an easy victory for the home team by eight goals to nil. In the first half four goals were put on, Batho scoring two and Kennedy and Brown one each. On resuming Batho scored another goal, Kennedy added two and Miller contributed a fourth. The Highlanders were completely outplayed, their opponents showing their superiority all through. Teams:—

CALCUTTA SWIMMING CLUB.—Goal, G. Harnack; backs, A. Cox and A. Stacey; half-backs, A. R. C. Miller; forwards, K. M. Kennedy, G. Brown, and G. W. H. Batho.

Referee and Judge.—Mr. H. L. Harvey.

Sir Joseph Hawley during his short but extremely successful career on the Turf, did not make many mistakes, but once—when the Leybourne baronet went down to Benham (the seat of Mr. Sutton) to try Merry Wife with Gardevisure for the Cambridgeshire of 1865—the pride of property led him astray.

There were four in the trial altogether, the two mares probably running at the 11lbs. the handicapper had placed between them, and at the finish half a length only separated them; but that half length was against Gardevisure, who had lost three lengths at the start, and who had afterwards obtained possession of the lead, but failed to quite stay home.

Colonel Pearson thereupon ventured to remark that she ought by rights to be credited at the end with the three lengths she had lost at the beginning, more especially as she had made up her ground in the first quarter of a mile, when the pace was a real ripper—which sounds rather like common sense.

"D—your excuses!" replied Sir Joseph—"where your mare is, mine will be;" but he was all wrong, for Gardevisure won and Merry Wife was no where.

After this trial Gardevisure went back in the betting from 14 to 40 to 1. Undoubtedly she could not stay, but her terrific turn of speed pulled her through; for she was going well within herself when they began to collar the stiffest part of the ascent, and she would have had it all her own way had it not been for Nu, who was popularly supposed to have been "readied" for this event.

The most remarkable feature of the whole transaction is that the Ilsley party, if such a thing had been possible, would have gladly substituted Lord Lyon, two years, for the mare, three years; for as far back as 17th August of that year he had been tried with her three-quarters of a mile at 10lbs. (8st. 7lbs. and 9st. 3lbs.), and he had beaten her in such a canter that they thought him her equal at even weights, and they knew he stayed better; more especially did they scoff at the possibility of Gladiateur, then first favourite for the Cambridgeshire, with 9st. 12lbs., giving him 3st. 10lbs. The effect of the race, had they needed any further evidence, was to make the Ilsley stable confident they had got the Derby winner of 1866.

At about four o'clock on the Thursday afternoon preceding Easter week in 1869 Captain Matchell tried a three-year-old for the City and Suburban which had been little thought of by the outside public in connection with that event. The trial horse was that best of milers, Vespasian, and the youngster Alpenstock, successfuly accomplished such a difficult task as not only to leave the City and Suburban at his mercy, but to give him good chance for the Derby. It had not been taken into consideration that the following day was Good Friday, on which there would not be any "club," and the consequence was it was well known all over England the next day what had been done, and bookmakers who were not on the qui vive were surprised at friends dropping in to see them at their private residences, and finishing off by backing Alpenstock, against whom, of course, they were desirous to lay, so that, to the disgust of those connected with the stable, they had to take something like 5 to 1.

The commencement of the betting prosecutions may be dated from this race. Alpenstock ran in the name of Mr. Bevill, but it was fairly well known that he belonged to the Earl of Hardwicke, then Lord Royston. His lordship did not desire his name mentioned in connection with the horse, and he sent a civil message to the members of the Press through one of their number asking them not to mention his name in the matter. Umbrage was taken in certain quarters that Lord Royston did not send his message through them, and not only was his name published as being the real owner of the horse but exaggerated accounts were given of what he had won, and the fine present he had made his jockey.

In the betting-rooms at Newmarket the following week Lord Royston spoke in bitter terms of the way in which he had been treated, and of the manner in which he believed his commission had been spoiled by the List-men, although the unfortunate time selected for it was the real cause. Mr. Billy Wright, who was then the chief list-keeper, thought right to chaff Lord Royston, who turned on him and said—

"Do you know that your business is illegal, and that I, a magistrate, could issue a warrant and search your premises?"

The answer to this was ironical laughter. Shortly afterwards, Mr. Beaumont, a wealthy coal-owner, asked a question in the House, and in a few days there were no more advertising betting list-keepers in England.

PROTECTIVE RESEMBLANCE.

THERE is no more fascinating and instructive branch of nature study, nor one that deserves more attention on the part of sportsmen than that on which Professor Poulton recently addressed a youthful audience at the Society of Arts in London. As Wallace somewhere remarks, on a phase of this subject, "to the older school of naturalists colour was a trivial character, eminently unstable and untrustworthy in the determination of species; and it appeared to have, in most cases, no use or meaning to the objects which displayed it." We have got beyond the stage when colours were regarded as merely decorative inutilities, offered to gratify the eye of man, but we have by no means fathomed the depths of the subject yet; and as we progress we realise that colour, shape, motion, and life-habit are matters that must be observed and studied together if we are to arrive at a true understanding of the whole subject. Within late years much attention has been devoted to this phase of natural history in America, and the theories advanced in connection with colour, or rather with colour distribution, have received very general acceptance. It has been shown, for example, that there is definite and valuable purpose in the natural scheme of colour that endows practically all dark-coated animals which haunt the open with a white or light-hued underside and frequently with a white or pale throat at the angle of head and neck. A fawn coat with a white belly is, comparatively speaking, inconspicuous; but to what degree he who is unversed in colour mysteries would never imagine until he had seen the white belly dyed to the colour of the flanks to exhibit the result of the self-cast shade of the animal. Some years ago there stood in a retired corner of the Natural History Museum in South Kensington, a curious and ingenious model, made to exemplify the protective importance of a light underside; it consisted of a couple of ducks made in dark grey felt set on a sheet of glass to represent water. One model was painted pale grey below; the other remained "whole coloured," and the superior conspicuousness of the latter arrested the least observant eye by reason of the darkness of the shadow. The light underside of animals in a word is a set off against the darkness which would otherwise result from shade.

Though jungle hunting animals wear coats usually calculated to harmonise well with their surroundings, they seem conscious that protective resemblance ceases to be serviceable the moment they make any movement. Every shikari knows that a deer or antelope alarmed remains stock still until it takes flight at the top of its speed; and we all know and have often learned to our cost how extremely difficult it is to pick up with the eye an animal which is standing, it may be, only a few paces distant from us. Practice and use do much to help the eye in this respect, but when the animal is seen, it is curiously difficult sometimes to form an exact idea of the intervening distance; there is a something impalpable in the beast when it stands merged in harmonising surroundings, and it has often occurred to us that this impalpability, baffling to the human eye, may be of real service to the animal when stalked by tiger or leopard. This of course assumes that beasts of prey under such conditions are not better able to judge the distance for crawl and spring than the human enemy. It may be observed in this connection that the apprentice in jungle craft cannot employ himself more profitably, so far as his eyes are concerned, than by setting out with a good caller in the evening when animals begin to move. It goes without saying that a deer in motion is easy enough to see and to cover with the rifle; but when the animal, suspicious or alarmed, stops and stands, as an animal whose suspicions are awakened does stand still as though stuffed without the flick of ear or tail, it seems to vanish into air. The novice will do himself a better turn under these circumstances to sacrifice his trophy, or dinner it may be, and use the animal before him as an object lesson, closing his eyes for a moment or two while the game is moving and opening them when his caller, by a touch, tells him it has stopped. A few long range interviews with deer on these lines form an education in protective resemblance which will prove invaluable to the sportsman.

It is curious to see that so well-informed a naturalist as Professor Poulton should repeat so old a tale as that the stripes of the tiger harmonise with "the reeds of the jungle" and make for invisibility. The more so when he had but a moment before truly remarked on the fact that the stripes of the zebra—identical with those of the tiger, we may say for practical purposes—merge into a uniform dull grey at night. If the tiger were always hunted by day, and if he invariably made reedy or heavy grass land his dwelling and hunting place, there might be some reason for perpetuating the old-fashioned theory that the stripes, as stripes, form a protective coat. But as we all know, tigers affect jungles of very different character and most of their sport is obtained at the approach of dark or after dark. We do not say that it is always the case; on the contrary there is ample evidence to the contrary, but we are dealing with the tiger under natural conditions where he is the hunter and not the hunted, and under such conditions he is more active after dark. It is wise to be cautious in drawing inferences in these matters, and Professor Poulton did not venture to draw the inference that if the striped zebra looked grey at night, the striped tiger would appear the same colour. He might have done so without fear of error or contradiction, for as it happens the tiger in misty moonlight looks a dingy uniform grey, and the eye, even at a few yards' distance, fails absolutely to pick out the striping. It is reasonable to suppose that the tiger appears to those most nearly concerned to wear a coat of invisible grey at night; it would be of small service to him were the human eye the only one so constituted as to make alternate black and yellow a "self-colour," and that grey; and we may therefore suppose that the eyes of deer and other victims of the tiger resemble our own in so far as their sensitiveness to colour is concerned, and herein we find the protective value of the tiger's coat at the time it is of most importance to himself that it should not advertise his presence. We think that by day the tiger moving through long grass or jungle would prove more noticeable by reason of his stripes than would an animal of equal size and shape wearing an all yellow or all black coat. A coat striped or self-coloured at rest would be about equally baffling to the vision if we may compare recollections; for obvious reasons opportunities for such comparison side by side do not offer themselves. Certain it is that the leopard gains in daylight by his spots when he takes up his position on the limb of a tree, and the value of this protective scheme of colour is accepted as a representative case. Is it in reality of such high utility? It is notorious to all who have sat out in a machan that, always provided stillness and quiet be observed, game of all kinds will pass and repass without raising their heads. They seek danger on the ground level, not from above; and this being the case it appears to us that the leopard in the tree, as a model of repose when there is prospect of business, owes less to his spots than is commonly supposed.

We are on safer ground when we come to examine imitative or warning and protective colouration in the insect would; also protective formations in the same kingdom. No part of the world, perhaps, is richer in object lessons of this kind than India. Butterflies and moths, protectively coloured to match their food plants, are numerous, and the "stick" and "leaf" insects which offer such striking evidence of protective shape are at hand in every compound. A curious feature of colour adoption in butterflies was demonstrated long since by Professor Poulton. He proved by a long series of experiments that the prevailing colour which surrounded a caterpillar influences the creature's hue during the period of quiescence to be reckoned by hours which immediately precedes transformation into the pupic state. By employing boxes suitably coloured within, Professor Poulton succeeded in procuring marked modifications of colour in pupa of the English tortoiseshell butterfly: he obtained variations from nearly black to pale or brilliant gold; and he also proved that the sight of the caterpillar had nothing to do with the adoption of a modified colour scheme.

THE Tollygunge Club are advertising the following programme for their second Gymkhana fixed for Saturday, 11th July:—

1. A Handicap Steeplechase, for Paperchase horses. Distance—about 1½ miles.
2. A Handicap Hurdle Race, for ponies 14-1 and under, that have never won a race of any description, value Rs. 50 or over. Distance—1 mile over five flights.
3. A Handicap Flat Race, for maiden horses. Distance—5 furlongs.
4. A Handicap Flat Race, for ponies, 14-1 and under, that have never won a race of any description, value Rs. 50 or over. Distance—5 furlongs.
5. A Handicap Flat Race, for horses, that have never won a race of any description, value Rs. 40 or over. Distance—¾ mile.

Entries close to the Honorary Secretary, 8, Clive Row, on Monday, 6th July, at 5 P.M.

This prospectus is a decided improvement upon the last, and all events should, with ordinary luck, fill well. We hear that eight intend going for the steeplechase for horses, of whom the best is Sylvia. It is early days yet to indulge in anticipations, but provided the handicapper's part of the business is satisfactorily accomplished, there is every prospect of a real good afternoon's sport. The six furlong for horses, so framed as to cut out the previous gymkhana winners, is a good idea, as giving the crocks a chance; in this way, a good field is assured. Several of the gymkhana division have been putting in some useful six-anna work, but we have not yet seen anything in the shape of a gallop. French Girl has been working regularly and is looking very much improved; if she gets back to anything like her old form she will prove a hard nut to crack, and it must not be imagined that her performance at the last gymkhana is to be taken as anything like a fair sample of what she can do.

As yet not much is doing in the way of preparation for the Calcutta Monsoon Meetings, though the improved going has tempted some owners to do a little schooling. The new hurdles have at least the merit of being visible to the naked equine eye, and as they are practically unbreakable, and driven well into the ground, besides each panel being about 15 feet long, it will be bad business running anything but thoroughly schooled horses over them. The oft-ventilated grievance that monsoon hurdle racing is practically flat racing will now at any rate be groundless.

A recent purchase of Mr. Galstaun went a short school on Tuesday morning with Jack Spillain up, jumping in very good form, after which two of Mr. Cowper's—Bushey and First Guide—went over a couple of flights at half speed. The going appeared to be slippery and more cinders are wanted on the take-off side of the hurdles. Autocrat and another from the same stable subsequently went a three parts speed school over two flights, the former jumping in rare good style.

Flat race horses are doing little as yet, six annas being the limit speed of the work.

So far the attempts made at providing a crossing place over our old friend the nullah in the hurdle course, have merely resulted in forming a quagmire into which a horse sinks almost hock deep. We trust that something more satisfactory will be evolved before the racing commences; but, like the proverbial Scotchman, we "hae oor doots." So long as the matter is left entirely in the hands of a possibly well-meaning Bengali whose knowledge of engineering is as vague as his grasp of the requirements of a galloping track, there seems little chance of any permanent solution of the difficulty being arrived at. We do not know whether the custom of giving nicknames pertains to our Aryan brethren of Bengal, or what the Bengali translation of "Ethelred the Unready" would be, but we feel that some such sobriquet would not be inequitable.

We now hear that the statement that Mr. Beaty was to officiate as starter during the monsoons was premature, and that in all probability his place is to be taken by an amateur. Personally we hope that this is not the case and that the gate will be in the hands of its cold weather manipulator.

It was decided, at a meeting held on the 24th ultimo at the Poona Gymkhana Club, to bring off the Poona Horse Show some time in September.

The following classes were agreed upon:—Class 1, tandems; Class 2, infantry chargers 13-3 to 14-2; Class 3, Arabs and C.-B. chargers; Class 4, light weight Arab and C.-B. polo ponies; Class 5, heavy weight Arabs and C.-B. polo ponies 13 stone and over; Class 6, English and Colonial chargers; Class 7, pairs of horses in harness; Class 8, ladies' horses; Class 9, jumping competition for ponies 14-2 and under; Class 10, ponies 14-2 and under in single harness, (a) English and Colonials, (b) Arabs and C.-B.'s; Class 11, English and Colonial polo ponies; Class 12, hunters 14-2 and under; Class 13, light weight hunters; Class 14, hacks over 14-2; Class 15, hacks 14-2 and under, (a) English and Colonials, (b) Arabs and C.-B.'s; Class 16, teams; Class 17, heavy weight hunters 13 stone and over; Class 18, horses in single harness; Class 19, ladies' ponies 14-2 and under, (a) English and Colonials, (b) Arabs, (c) C-B.'s; Class 20, jumping competition for horses; Class 21, best horse in the Show; Class 22, best pony in the Show; Class 23, children's ponies; Class 24, best hunter in the Poona and Kirkee Foxhounds; Class 25, best polo pony in the Show.

The date of the Rangoon Sky Meeting has been changed from the 25th to the 18th July. The Autumn meeting will be held on the 3rd, 5th, and 7th November.

The prospectus of the Dehra Autumn Sky Meeting, which has been fixed for the 29th September and 1st October, is advertised in our issue of date. The card for each day is a very full one of seven events, and includes a hurdle race and half a dozen well framed races for Arab and C.-B. ponies. Entries close on the 10th August and 10th September.

We have much pleasure in printing further on, in extenso, the first report of the Indian Branch of the Society for the Protection of Birds, of which that indefatigable ornithologist and good sportsman, Mr. W. trust the perusal of what is therein set out will result in a large accession to the members' list, for, be it noted, none of its objects in any way clash with those of the true sportsman, rather, we should say, do they operate directly in his interests.

We are sorry to hear of an accident to Mr. Stiffe, Officiating Collector of Moradabad. While out pig-sticking on the 21st ultimo he had rather a nasty fall, breaking his collar-bone.

The second entries for the Bangalore Races will be found in our Turf columns.

The dates appropriated for the Quetta Autumn Races are the 22nd, 24th and 26th September.

The following "business" communication reached a friend of ours the other day: he wants to know if we can help him to discover what is being offered him. Perhaps some of our readers might come to the rescue:—

DEAR SIR,—If your honour will be good enough to give the rate of following at, an earlish date, then I will be able to send you the artical as soon as possible and will pay dew commision on them.

Recent disclosures in connection with spurious antiques has led to some curious revelations as to how these are manufactured. It appears that the appearance of great age can be given to new coins by compelling geese to swallow them. The gastric juice acts on the face of the coins, and, it is said, produces the exact semblance of all the characteristics of very old age—so much so, that even experts are deceived. Should the coins be ejected before the process is complete, they have to be re-swallowed. We are not told how long it takes to produce an antique coin, but presume that a coin of the period of the Pharaohs would require considerably more digesting than one of the time of Julius Cæsar.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the Transvaal has announced that, owing to the scarcity of game in the Transvaal, no shooting permits will be granted during the current season for the following varieties of game:—Eland, elephant, giraffe, hartebeeste (red), hippopotamus, koodoo, ostrich, rhinoceros, wildebeeste (black), and zebra. Shooting permits for buffalo, crested crane, hartebeeste (Lichenstein), roan antelope, sable antelope, sassaby, and wildebeeste (blue) are being issued on the condition that no more than two specimens of each variety are killed or captured.

Dr. A. P. Knight, Professor of Animal Biology in Queen's College, Kingston, Ont., as the result of a series of experiments with dynamite explosions in water and their effect upon fish, has demonstrated that such explosions are more destructive in deep water than in shallow water, where the pressure resulting from the explosion is not sufficiently great to rupture the swim bladder. The most significant fact brought out was that, when dynamite cartridges are used for fishing, in addition to the fish which come to the surface and float, a much larger number may be merely stunned or be killed outright and sink to the bottom. Among those which come to the surface are the small fish and fry and absolutely worthless. Dynamiting is, therefore, one of the most destructive of all modes of poaching.

"Tod" Sloan has brought an action against the Stewards of the Societe d' Encouragement with regard to the Rose de Mai case. The Stewards hold that, having been a jockey, he must be aware that no one was allowed to use the training ground without permission of the Stewards. Sloan's case is that he galloped the filly at the request of a member of the Jockey Club and a trainer, and that he should not be held responsible for their failure to obtain permission. He consequently claims 100,000 francs damages from the Stewards, and 25,000 francs from their organ, the Bulletin des Courses for publishing their decision. The case was adjourned for a fortnight.

Captain Casson, A.-D.-C. to the General Officer Commanding Poona, met with a bad accident while playing polo at Mysore. His pony fell, rolling over him and putting out the Captain's shoulder. He is reported to be progressing favourably.

The Gymkhana at Simla on the 27th instant produced large entries, but there was only a moderate attendance. Captain Wigram won the first event, picking up discs with a hogspear. The next event, for ladies to trot 3 furlongs, walk 1 furlong, and go as you please 2 furlongs was won by Miss Harman in the horse division, and by Miss Buck in the pony class. The Affinity Stakes was won easily by Captain Wigram and Mrs. Buck, with Major Gough and Miss Teague second. Fifteen turned out for the tilting for ladies won by Mrs. Buck; Mrs. Teague second. The Cigarette Scurry for which there were 18 couples went to Captain Wigram and Mrs. Atkinson. Mrs. Buck and Miss Wheeler ran off the pigsticking for ladies held over from last week, Miss Wheeler proving successful. The last event was a Pony Scurry—600 yards; second pony to get the prize. Ten ponies competed and Captain Capper won. Mrs. Buck is now at the top of the scoring for the Cup, given by the Viceroy's Staff, with 19 marks, Mrs. Atkinson is next with 13, followed by Miss Teague and Miss Wheeler with 11 points each.

Lieutenant W. A. Hamar Bass, 10th Hussars, the owner of Sceptre and Carabine, was married on the 9th ultimo at Windsor to Lady Wilmot Ida Noreen Hastings, daughter of the late Earl of Huntingdon.

Regarding the death of Record Reign the Times to hand by this mail has the following notices:—

"The Auteuil steeplechases were marked by two accidents, which caused the death of Lord Sefton's Haphazard and the Maharajah of Patiala's (sic) Record Reign, the jockeys of these two horses being severely injured. Both these accidents occurred in the Prix des Orags, a steeplechase of £1,000, which was the principal race of the day. Record Reign fell at the water jump opposite the stand and broke his shoulder, while soon after Haphazard fell at the second water jump and broke one of his forelegs. A van which is always kept in readiness at Auteuil in case of accident was sent for to take the injured animals away, and they were destroyed without delay. There was something pathetic about the death of Record Reign, for never before had a horse from India come to run in France. He was bred in Australia, where he won races, and was purchased on behalf of the Maharajah of Patiala, who was anxious to buy a horse that could win the Viceroy's Cup. He was shipped for India, where he secured several races for his owner, who then determined to send him over to France to run for the Grand Steeplechase at Auteuil, which is the richest cross-country race in the world. Record Reign arrived in France a few weeks ago attended by three Indian natives, whose dress attracted much notice on the French racecourses, and he won two minor races before running at Auteuil last Sunday. The Indian attendants of Record Reign wept bitterly when their charge, who could hardly stand, was being assisted into the van which was to carry him off to his death. The death of Haphzard was also a great blow to Lord Sefton, who had bought him a fortnight or so ago with the view of winning one or other of the big prizes at Auteuil."

Our Poona correspondent writes:—Government House are determined to show that (as is indeed meet) Their Excellencies are not going to be backward in providing for the amusement of the Poona public and have already published a programme of enagagements extending from the end of June to the end of September, and including a Levee, a Reception, a Ball, a Garden Party (when the latest "creations" in millinery are displayed to a bewildered male and jealous female assemblage) a Fancy Dress Ball, a Gymkhana, and another Ball. Truly an attractive card of events for the youngest and giddiest. Of last year's staff so far as I know, Captain Greville alone remains, and the present members have a high standard to live up to, but will, I have no doubt, prove worthy of the trust.

Polo is in full swing and the ground is playing wonderfully well considering all things. The number of men jostling for places augurs well for the prosperity of this great and glorious game. If a scratch tournament is to be inaugurated I trust we may not be compelled to make laughing stocks of our heroes by the teams calling themselves little flowers as was the brilliant idea of some one on the last occasion. There is surely something a little ludicrous, without being humorous, in four great grown-up men calling themselves rosebuds, daisies, or lilies of the valley. This extravagant form of humour may possibly be varied on the next occasion by adopting onions, cauliflowers, and potatoes as the discriminating emblems. It would be just as useful and equally funny.

It will be most interesting to see if Private Smith of the Lincoln really means business in his desire to again meet that wonderful little man Corporal Smith of the 10th Hussars. The Indian Field's account of the Poona Boxing Tournament was, by the way, I believe the only one in which the latter great fighter was given his correct and not brevet rank. Private Smith "not satisfied with his late defeat" has declared his anxiety to meet his namesake again and the Lincoln giant cannot complain that there was any tardiness on the part of the Hussar in accepting his kind invitation, and the Tenth have guaranteed Rs. 200, to which useful sum the public will I feel sure be ready to add a purse if assured of a really genuine encounter. Fine and gallant fighter though Private Smith undoubtedly is he struck me as just a trifle deficient in his understandings to carry his magnificent frame through a prolonged fight, and while I confess to being no admirer of the Corporal's style of boxing I am very fully impressed with his pluck, his marvellous physique and quite terrific power of hitting. I have in my own mind little doubt as to which is the better man, but if there still lurks any doubt in the mind of the Lincoln champion and his admirers, it would seem a thousand pities that all further doubt should not be dispelled by the only practical means. But Poona originated the puzzle and to Poona belongs the right of being the scene of its solution and the meeting of the two champions of the illustrious name they both bear would ensure a bumper gate and may I be there to see!

A sporting confrère in Bombay writes to me that he was fortunate enough to get a long inspection of Mr. Apcar's new champion "Great Scot" and declares him to be the most fascinating horse, in his opinion, yet landed in India. Thanks to an unusually placid disposition he bore the voyage with equanimity and has in consequence landed in wonderful condition. Altogether he appears to be a most worthy candidate for the great honours he is intended for.

The Poona race course is the scene of wonderful bustle and work from the cold grey of the morning; indeed from, I hear, long before dawn some of the native contingent of so-called trainers see wisdom in rousing their gee-gees in the middle of the night in order to shove into them the stereotyped number of chukkers. And yet such is the marvellous dispensation of Providence in tempering the wind to the shorn lamb, that these horses on rare occasions actually win races. In my meek humility I fear I cannot lay claim to the astuteness of some sporting writers who with courage worthy of a greater cause spot dead certainties during the half speed period of work. But several trainers are apparently beginning to "shove 'em along" and I have an astute and knowledgeable tame native tout whose brains I hope to be able to make use of for the benefit of a confiding public.

The popular light weight jockey Hoyt has, I hear, returned from Australia and must have been satisfied with his reception in the gorgeous grilling East since he has, I believe, induced a younger brother to return with him. The latter cannot, however, come to scale at the same useful weight and will, it is believed, confine his efforts to "up in the air" performances over the big fences. He comes with the reputation of being a fine horseman over "leps" and should, with his connection, get plenty of work.

On Sunday last a field of quite twenty-five met Colonel Sheringham and his pack on the Cavalry race course, for a morning's cub hunting. The Master with a strong pack of some twenty-eight couple of hounds first drew a fig garden which I am told in former years held many a jack. This morning, however, it was drawn blank. Then skirting the Railway, hounds drew a jowari khet and in a very few moments a burst of music gladdened the hearts of the field. The jack broke away and made over the race course and railway and the road which leads to Mundwa. I am informed that great anxiety was caused by the sound of an approaching train; however luckily the jack slipped over before the train came along and the hounds followed after the train had passed; a narrow squeak. A slight check occurred, but after a run of about 10 minutes in all the quarry was pulled down a few fields before he could get to the river. A nice little gallop and from all accounts all enjoyed themselves.

The English Jockey Club, at the annual general meeting held on the 8th ultimo, discussed, among other things, the starting gate and the means whereby it could be more efficiently worked. A report will be found further on.

Our Lucknow correspondent writes:—Another very enjoyable afternoon was spent at the Mahomed Bagh on Saturday, when Colonel Humphrey and the Gloucesters were "At Home" at a Gymkhana. The following were the results: First Event, Victoria Cross Race over Hurdles. Mr. Stott won, with Mr. Gage second. Second Event, Afternoon Tea Race. Mrs. Saunders and Mr. Douglas Straight, D. S. P., nominated by Mrs. Ross, won. Third Event, Whistling Stakes. Mr. Storey, nominated by Mrs. Lawrence, won. Fourth Event, Wand Race with Polo Balls. Major Eustace won. Fifth Event. Which would you rather Stakes. Mr. Symons, nominated by Mrs. Saunders, won. Sixth Event, Tilting at Ring for Ladies, won by Miss Williams.

A delightful innovation was inaugurated yesterday when a Water Polo Tournament took place at the Chutter Munzil Swimming Bath. Four teams competed, each game consisting of three chukkers of two minutes each. The first round was won by the Gloucesters, who defeated the East Surreys by five goals to two; in the second Lucknow Gymkhana beat the 5th Dragoon Guards by three goals to one; and in the final the Gloucesters won from Lucknow Gymkhana by three goals to two. Mr. Douglas Straight is to be congratulated on the success of his new idea. I understand that there is to be a Water Gymkhana next Sunday morning.

Athletic Notes.

THE Leander Rowing Club's eight for the "Grand" this year has now commenced training, seated thus:—H. A. Steward (bow), T. S. Drysdale, B. C. Cox, J. E. Payne, R. B. Etherington-Smith, F. W. Warre, E. J. Escombe, G. M. Maitland (str.), and H. L. Etherington-Smith (cox).

For the "Stewards," the Leander crew will be:—B. C. Cox (bow), T. Drysdale, F. J. Escombe, F. W. Warre (str.)—three Cambridge Old Blues and one Oxford.

Captain Wigram put up a fine innings of 107 in the return match between the Simla C. C. and the local Volunteers, which ended in a draw. Simla made 245 for seven wickets, and their opponents 74 for three, when rain stopped the play.

Tom James, the Welsh professional cyclist, won the quarter-mile and the five miles National Cyclists' Union Championships of Wales. At Glasgow, he defeated the crack European sprinter, H. Meyer, in a half-mile race. James rode a Dunlop tyred machine.

That the success which attended the Stock Exchange Walk would lead to a "boom" in road pedestrianism, remarks a home contemporary, was the view taken by most people in a position to form an opinion, and we had a second edition of that famous tramp last Saturday, when the members of the Central Meat Market decided to see what they could do in this direction. In one respect, at any rate, the butchers may be said to have justified their action, seeing that one of their body, H. F. Otway, succeeded in covering the distance in 9 hours 21 minutes, or, roughly speaking, ten minutes less than the time occupied by Broad a month earlier. On behalf of the last-named it will probably be claimed that the weather on Saturday was much more favourable for such an enterprise than when he made the attempt, and there is doubtless something in the contention, albeit Otway's performance as it stands was a very fine one. Perhaps before the athletic season is over we shall hear of a match between the pair.

We regret to hear of the death from cholera of Mr. G. E. Coles, Superintending Engineer, Lower Ganges Canael. He was educated at Brackenbury and Cooper's Hill and in his younger days was well-known on the football and cricket fields. He was captain of his college cricket eleven and had been invited to play for Kent, and the Gentlemen of England. Mr. Coles died at Naini Tal on the 21st ultimo after twelve hours' illness.

Lancashire beat Surrey by seven wickets on the 27th ultimo; Derbyshire defeated Leicestershire by 35 runs; and the match between Yorkshire and Notts ended in favour of the former by an innings and 63 runs.

Somerset beat Gloucester on the 26th ultimo by an innings and 72 runs.

Mr. Monty Holbein has expressed his intention of trying again this year to swim the Channel. He proposes starting from Dover in July or August and is training for the swim. Holbein seems determined to accomplish the feat and declares he will try every year till he succeeds.

We remind local oarsmen that entries for the Hoare Cup should be sent in forthwith, as the intention is to give entrants some preliminary practice ere the crews are finally selected on the 15th instant.

The Annual General Meeting of the Calcutta Rowing Club will be held at the Strand Road boat house on Thursday, 16th instant, at 6-15 P.M.

We are progressing. Motor cars are now being turned out in India; not merely the parts imported and put together here; but the whole machines from A. to Z. made in an Indian workshop and the result a most creditable production. This enterprise has been started by Messrs. Simpson and Co., the well-known carriage builders of Madras and this is what the Madras Mail says about it:—

"The firm have been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. S. J. Green, a motor engineer, who has had considerable experience with the leading manufacturers at Home. Under his direction the firm have put down special machinery and plant to build cars complete in every detail on a large scale. The first car thus built has just been through its trial, and has proved most satisfactory. It is another example of what the Indian artisan is capable of doing under competent European supervision. The whole of the car, including the engines, boilers, pumps, gearing, etc., has been built at Messrs. Simpson's factory, from the raw material to Mr. Green's own design and specifications; and on him it certainly reflects great credit. The only parts imported were the "burner," which is of the Clarkson type and some of the minor fittings. We believe it is the first motor car that has been built throughout in India. The car is of the latest "tonneau" pattern, having the boiler placed in front under a bonnet, which arrangement has the advantage of being easy of access for small adjustments. The boiler is of special and original construction, and is capable of maintaining an even pressure of steam under varying conditions, the cost of fuel being greatly reduced. The "feed" water is heated by a special arrangement, by which it enters the boiler at nearly boiling point, the exhaust steam being utilised for this purpose. The engines are vertical double cylinder, fitted with reverse and variable cut off, and are capable of driving the car at speeds varying from 4 to 16 miles per hour. The driving is direct to the main axle, which is self-contained, running on ball bearings and absolutely dustproof. Both automatic and hand steam and air pumps are fitted. The wheels are ball-bearing tangent steel with solid rubber tyres, these being far more durable and possessing advantages over pneumatic tyres for the ordinary Indian roads. The steering is of a special type by which the car is most easily controlled, and the starting and reversing levers, etc., are most conveniently arranged so that the driver can adopt a natural position. The car throughout is built much stronger than usual, and is made specially to suit local conditions. The only fuel required is ordinary kerosine oil, and this, with water for the boiler, can be procured anywhere in India.

The mechanism is entirely free from complicated parts, and can be almost at once driven by any intelligent person."

It looks as though double centuries in county cricket matches, up to quite recently the rarest of achievements, will soon be hardly more uncommon than a single three-figure innings was say five and twenty years ago, for even in the wretched weather which has marked the present year of grace at home, this week's mail news brings us an account of two such performances. Mr. P. Perrin for Essex against Notts scored 170 and 102 not out, and Arnold, the splendid all-round Worcestershire professional hit up 101 not out and 128 for his county against Cambridge University. This latter feat was rivalled in the same match by Mr. E. M. Dowson, the Light Blue Captain, who is in grand form this season, especially with the bat, and who scored 94 and 122 not out. Given a chance first-class batsmen do seem to enjoy themselves now-a-days.

According to Golf Illustrated it is definitely decided that an Oxford and Cambridge Golfing Society team will leave Liverpool on 6th August for a tour in the United States. It will include twelve players in all, and the following nine names are mentioned as certainties: Messrs. John L. Low (Cambridge and Royal and Ancient G. C.), T. Mansfield Hunter (Oxford and Honourable Company of Edinburgh Golfers), Norman F. Hunter (Cambridge and Honourable Company), J. A. T. Bramston (Oxford and Royal North Devon G. C.), A. C. M. Croome (Oxford and Royal North Devon), H. C. Ellis (Oxford and Alnmouth G. C.), H. G. B. Ellis (Oxford and Alnmouth), H. W. Beveridge (Oxford and Ashford Manor G. C.), and D. F. Ranson (Cambridge and Tooting Bec G. C.), while it is hoped that Mr. Horace G. Hutchinson (Oxford) may also be able to make the trip. This with say Messrs. H. W. de Zoete (Cambridge), J. W. B. Pease (Oxford) or B. Darwin (Cambridge) would just about put the Society at full match strength, and we fancy that, however much the Yankees may have improved they would be overpowered by this team even on their own links: that is taking a line through Mr. W. J. Travis, who is certainly the leading American amateur golfer, but who was not considered more than an ordinary good player on the home links in 1901, and not strong enough to be able to reckon with any degree of certainty on beating any one of the golfers enumerated above. But there is many a slip, and if Mr. Low gets together before he sails half the men specified he will do brawly, and he will find plenty more thoroughly sound players in the Society's ranks to fill up from.

This year's Open Golf Championship may be said to have given us the first thorough test of the rubber-cored ball as compared with its rivals, and taking a line right through the competition it looks as if a couple of strokes' advantage in the round is about the most that can be claimed for it over the "guttie." This, however, is of course amongst absolutely first-class golfers, to those of more moderate prowess the value of the "Rubbacor" is infinitely higher.

Jack M'Cauliffe met Carpenter at Mussoorie on the 27th ultimo, for the light weight boxing championship. It was a good fight, but Carpenter was outclassed, and after eleven rounds was knocked out.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—Of recent years very little interest has been taken in Rugby football in Bombay. It is true that big crowds have turned out for the Tournament matches, but the other game played during the season attracts but a sparse attendance of spectators. Four or five years ago this was not the case, for then people used to turn up in their hundreds and it was no uncommon thing to see the ground lined three and four deep. But what a difference now! Then there were quite a number of Rugby teams in the city, whereas at the present time there are only two—the Bombay Gymkhana and the Royal Garrison Artillery, (Colaba). All the other clubs have become extinct, or have taken up "soccer," and, of course, people become a little tired of always seeing the same two teams playing against each other—the R. G. A. against the Gymkhana one night, and the Gymkhana against the R. G. A. the next. I was in hopes that we should have some other Rugby teams in the field this season, but up to the present I have not heard of any, and consequently I am afraid there is very little chance of reviving interest in the handling code this year. Cannot the North Staffords raise a team? They already run two or three Association elevens, and I understand that there are several Rugby enthusiasts in the regiment. Then it is also suggested that we might have a fifteen composed of the British Officers of the Native regiments and the Colaba Garrison. The Gymkhana Rugby football annual meeting only was held this week, and was fairly well attended. Mr. P. J. Arnot was again elected Captain and Honorary Secretary, and no better choice could have been made, for he is a rattling good player, and one who can be relied upon to do his best in promoting the success of the team. The only other business to be transacted was the election of the Selection Committee, on which Lieutenant Scott, Mr. Marshall Reid, Mr. T. W. Moore, and H. P. Hebblethwaite will act. It was pointed out that, as last year, there would only be the Royal Garrison Artillery to play against, so far as Bombay was concerned. It was decided, however, to endeavour to arrange a couple of matches with the Buffs—one at Poona and the other in Bombay. The fixing of the date for the annual tournament was postponed until later so as to make sure of not clashing with any of the other annual fixtures which come on in the months of September and October.

Play in connection with the Harwood Association Football League has been continued during the past week, and one or two interesting games have been witnessed. In the match between the Bombay Rovers and the North Staffordshire Regiment, "B" team, on Tuesday, the soldiers had a good deal the best of the exchanges, the Rovers' forward line being far from a good one. In the first half the soldiers twice shot into the net, while after changing over they scored a third goal, and eventually ran out winners by 3 goals to nil. Playing on Thursday evening, the Government Telegraph Club scored their first victory in the League defeating the Royal Engineers by 3 goals to nil. Neither side showed anything like good combination, and I don't expect to find either of them very far up in the League table at the end of the season. On Friday the Royal Garrison Artillery met the North Staffords' "B" team, and a large number of spectators put in an appearance in anticipation of witnessing a good game. And they were not disappointed. Both teams were fairly evenly matched, and both goals were frequently bombarded. The Staffords were leading by 2 goals to 1 up to within ten minutes of the call of time, when the Artillery men made a final effort to win the match. And in this they were successful, for they put on a couple more goals, and left the field winners by 3 goals to 2. This victory places them at the top of the League table, the North Staffords' "B" team being second with the Rovers third, and the Telegraph Club fourth. By the way, what has become of the B. V. A. Club this year? I haven't noticed them participating in either Rugby or Association Football, and they don't even appear to have a cricket eleven.

Another interesting golf match was played off on Thursday morning, in connection with the Royal Bombay Golf Club, one side being composed of players over, and the other of players under, a certain age. Despite the fact that very short notice was given, 22 players turned up, but the younger men were beaten all along the line, only three of them managing to tie in their matches, while the others were all defeated, the match resulting in a victory for the older players by 17 holes to nil. Playing for "age" Mr. Ralph Kidd beat Mr. G. C. Scott by no less than seven holes, while Mr. C. St. Paul, the Rev. J. Cameron, and Mr. W. L. Shaw won their matches by two holes, the other winners being Messrs. J. Stiven, L. Stansfield H. S. Jacob, and H. E. Hart by one hole each. The ties were between Messrs. Osborne, Marshall, and F. H. Greigh, Messrs. E. Ferrers Nicholson and R. A. Don, and Major Rogers and Mr. R. H. M. Steven. The recent rain has considerably improved the course, and a large number of men are turning out of a morning. I understand that some other matches are being arranged and that the younger men are determined to have their revenge out of the "aged" ones.

The Committee who have in hand the arrangements for sending the Indian Cricket Team to England next year have just held a meeting, at which satisfactory progress was reported. The Honorary Secretaries intimated that all the players who had been communicated with had notified their willingness to join the team, so that when the time came to make a final selection there will be no danger of the side not being thoroughly representative of native Indian cricket, and it was further pointed out that there was not the slightest doubt that the trip, in addition to proving highly beneficial to the cricket of the participants, would be a success from a financial point of view. Up to date guarantees of £100 each have been received from Yorkshire and the M. C. C. as the team's share of the gate proceeds, and it is felt that this example will almost certainly be followed by Surrey, Lancashire, and most of the other counties. For my own part I don't think the first-class counties at home need have much hesitation in giving guarantees of this kind, for the matches participated in by the native cricketers are certain to draw big "gates." Letters were also read from the various princes, noblemen, and gentlemen, who have either subscribed, or promised to do so, to the fund that is being raised to meet the expenses of the tour, and it was estimated that up to date something over Rs. 18,000 would be realised when all the sums that had been promised were paid. Mr. D. J. Tata and Mr. A. H. S. Aston, the Honorary Secretaries of the Bombay Gymkhana C. C., than whom it would be difficult to find one who takes a keener interest in the game, were appointed Honorary Treasurers to the fund, and become members of the sub-committee. On the motion of Mr. A. C. Rumboll, seconded by Mr. F. J. Clarke, it was decided to open a subscription list in addition to the guarantee fund, and a sub-committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Russell and Mr. A. Sidney Galtrey was formed to arrange details. In my opinion the opening of such a fund is a decidedly good idea, for it will enable men of comparatively small means to contribute, who, perhaps, would not otherwise have done so.

General Notes.

Sir Francis Maclean, Chief Justice of Bengal, returned from Darjeeling last Sunday.

A large and brilliant gathering attended the State ball at Simla on the 26th ultimo and the proceedings were a great success.

With regret we hear of the death of Lieut.-Col. Showers, Commandant of the Assam Valley Light Horse, who died suddenly on the 26th ultimo. He was one of the oldest planters in Assam and will be deeply regretted by all who knew him.

The "Mosquisto" pen offered to the Indian public by Messrs. Trail, & Co., seems to us to possess all the good qualities such an implement ought to have. It is extremely strong, does not catch the paper nor spoil the ink, is very flexible and an ideal aid to rapid and legible handwriting.

The Calcutta Amateur Dramatic Society have nearly got through the drudgery of preparing their new piece "The Dandy Fifth" for presentation to the public, and announce the dress rehearsal for the 9th instant and the first night for Saturday the 11th. From all accounts we are in for an agreeable surprise in connection with the mounting and dressing of the piece, while it ought not to suffer in other respects with that clever and tireless stage manager Mr. Zimmermann at the head of affairs.

The Royal Artillery Dinner was held at the United Service Club, Simla on the 25th ultimo, the following officers being present:—Generals Sirs E. Elles, G. Scott, L. Parsons, Sir J. Wolfe-Murray; Colonels Saunders, Hawkin, Smith, Rainsford, Mahon, and C. Hamilton; Majors Rundle Durcot, Short, Bertie Clay and Malleson; Captains Tancred, Knapp, Beynon, Easton, Ollivant, and Tyrrell; Lieutenants W. F. Parsons, W. W. Parsons, Loveday, Bennett, Rathbone, Caulfield, Edmundson, Spencer Hutton-Squire, Crawshay-Williams and Gregory. Sir E. Law, General A. Hunter, and Captain J. Home, late R. A., also attended the dinner.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 12th June 1903.

THE wild excitement that Mr. Ritchie's utterances produced in the early part of the week has calmed down with significant rapidity. The country, it would seem, sees no objection to the Cabinet which directs its affairs having two or three minds on such a trifling matter as its whole fiscal policy, and the patient curiosity to see what is going to happen next, which followed the first outburst, has been assuaged by the growing certainty that nothing will happen. It would be a good thing if there were an upheaval; the week has shown even the bindest that we are trying to group new schools of thought under old names, and the sooner leaders step out of the crowd and pick sides for a new game the better. It does not matter what they call themselves, the party in power is the Liberal party, both parties take much the same line on the Treasury Benches.

This morning's papers contain various versions of the tragedy at Belgrade. The only really incredible variant is that labelled "official" which informs a credulous world that while the King and Queen with their relatives were sitting in the verandah after dinner, King Alexander told the Queen she must leave the country; Queen Draga refusing, the relatives took sides and there was a faction fight in which Their Majesties and some of their partisans lost their lives. News of the murders does not affect the British Court's arrangements, and there will be no Court mourning; but we are curious to know what position diplomacy will take up, whether our Ambassador at Belgrade will pay his respects to Prince Peter, who has been placed on the throne.

One doesn't expect much of the Times in these days, but it was something of a shock this morning to find the Belgrade murders employed as the text for a flaring new advertisement of the Encyclopædia: there it was, half a sheet of it in immediate juxtaposition with the foreign telegram page, half of which is occupied by the telegrams from Belgrade. It strikes the mere average reader as in bad taste, but since the Times has been dragged at the tail of the Encyclopædia Britannica we are surprised at nothing.

The Court which has been sitting at Wellington Barracks to try the young officers mixed up with the Cape "ragging" case has finished taking the evidence of Mr. Stanford, the victim, yesterday and was adjourned to make up its mind whether it should delay to enable the prosecution to summon certain apparently unwilling witnesses, to wit a Mr. Barclay, who was present at Mr. Stanford's "trial" and the doctor who examined him "from the Cape." The Court as you doubtless know is trying Captains H. B. O. Williams and J. H. Hayes, 3rd Dragoon Guards; Captain C. Fane, D.S.O., and Lieutenant C. M. Truman, 12th Lancers; Second-Lieutenant C. L. Prior, 17th Lancers; Lieutenant R. H. Hermon-Hodge, 3rd Grenadier Guards; and Lieutenant (Honorary Captain) W. Judkins, 5th Battalion Rifle Brigade—on a charge of having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in that at the Mount Nelson Hotel, Cape Town, on 25th December 1901, they stripped, exposed, and subjected to indecent treatment one Hardwicke Stanford, a Civilian.

What they did do according to Mr. Stanford's evidence was to wind up a Christmas eve ball by putting him (Stanford) into the hotel fountain, then stripping him, photographing him in a state of nudity, putting him into the fountain again clad in a dressing gown and clipping patches of hair off his head and moustache. The sinners have already been mulcted £1,500 by a Civil Court; and though the practice of stripping civilians and putting them in fountains is not to be encouraged—even at five in the morning after a Christmas ball when a cold tub might be advantageous to all parties—the matter would, no doubt, have been allowed to rest there but for the indecencies committed on young Stanford. Horse-play is not necessarily unbecoming the character of officers and gentlemen, provided they don't let outsiders into the fun; but if the very well-defined boundaries between practical joking and impropriety are crossed, then the soldiers have themselves to thank if their chiefs take the matter up. There would have been a sweet row—and rightly—if half a dozen civilians had taken similar liberties with the person of an obnoxious young man who held His Majesty's Commission.

The ball in aid of the London Hospital on Tuesday night at the Albert Hall was one of the biggest things of the kind ever carried to a successful conclusion. The hall was really well decorated for the occasion—no easy matter when you consider the enormous height of the place—and they who regard a dance as means to a supper were loud in their praise of the idea of turning private boxes into private supper-rooms. You see a fellow could go to as many suppers as he was asked to without the carking subconsciousness that he was unduly conspicuous at the table. The floor had been well done, but most of the night the crowd was too great for dancing in comfort, and there were many lookers on who preferred a place on high in a friend's box to look down on a really beautiful show. The International Quadrilles by people in fancy dress were the spectacle of the night. It was a late ball—or an early, whichever applies to an exodus at its height about 4 A. M. I see that four thousand tickets were sold; the charge was a guinea including supper, but the profuse people paid, I believe, up to ten guineas in the sacred name of hospital charity, and the trustees of the London Hospital must have gone singing to bed on Wednesday morning.

If has been quite a hospital week in one sense. On Sunday afternoon the King and Queen went to St. Paul's to foster in advance the interests of the "Hospital Sunday" collection; not in State. They went by the embankment with a small escort of mounted police, were received near Temple Pier by the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, a ceremony occupying about 40 seconds and drove rapidly on to the city. There was no display of any kind in the shape of State uniforms; the common councilmen's gowns were about the only touch of colour. Yesterday Their Majesties visited the city again to open the new Outpatient Department of the London Hospital and the new rooms for the Finsen treatment of lupus; their progress was conducted on much the same lines of simplicity as on Sunday. His worship the Lord Mayor seized the opportunity to publish in Wednesday's paper, an appeal to his "richer fellow citizens" to send him a thousand apiece to endow beds; he wanted those thousands at once. "They should reach me by noon on Thursday at the latest." I have no doubt he got all he asked. Catch the B. P. in the right mood, warmed with the smiles of royalty and whirl of riotous living, and its cheques for thousands are to be had for a wave of the little finger, if the little finger be upon the hand of a somebody.

Ranelagh broke out with a Ladies' Gymkhana on Saturday. It brought a big crowd and was productive of some fun, the Aunt Sally race appealing most to the discriminating throng. Mrs. Stroyan (a daughter of Sir Walter Gilbey) carried off most of the prizes. Mrs. Stroyan is one of the best horsewomen in Essex, and on Saturday she won the Bending Race, the Sortiga (you know the game? carrying rings and streamers off posts, at a gallop) and the race round a post and home; and was second in the Aunt Sally smashing competition. I hear that the Rochamption Gymkhana on the same day was a great success. Your correspondent ought to be Sir Boyle Roche's bird on Saturdays, there is so much going on; and even that capable fowl would often be at a loss to decide on which two places he would bestow his patronage.

The cheap but exhausting walking race is becoming "fashionable" says a ha'penny evening paper in its preliminary eulogy of a walk to Brighton undertaken last Saturday by the butchers of Smithfield Market. Now the butchers have confirmed the example of the Stock Exchange and we may expect the example to be followed by the Bachelors' Club and the Ancient and Honourable Buffaloes; Officers of the Brigade of Guards; Officers of the Clapham Vestry, and so on. I am not quite sure that such high matters as pedestrianism come within the scope of these frivolous notes, but the First Butcher, Otway by name, beat Mr. Broad's record by just under nine minutes; his time being 9hrs. 21mins. 1½secs. In justice to Mr. Broad be it added, however, that the day was cooler and the roads were dryer on Saturday than when the Stock Exchange walk came off.

I hope Editorjee you are careful about the shaving paper you use. For days I have been suffering in the morning from depression, and as my liver is sound and other influential organs are well behaved I was puzzled to find a cause, till in a moment of alert consciousness I traced it to my shaving paper—an old store list. I had worked my way through it to the Mourning section and every morning my waking eye lighted on something like this:—An elm shell, covered white serge, finished white flannel and satin", "Attendants and coachmen in mourning with gloves (extra)" "Outer Coffin of Oak," &c., &c. Enough to upset anybody when it jumps to the eyes at 8-45, particularly if he was dining out the night before; but it shows I want a holiday, don't you think? I have torn out the rest of the Mourning pages and am now shaving with "Mantles and Robes" which are often quite interesting; but I do not expect to recover tone until I have been away for a while.

Alfred Austin had a brilliant house for his Flodden Field on Monday night; but most of the brilliancy was all on one side of the footlights. Sir Walter Scott in Ivanhoe showed that a battle could be vividly described by a lady looking on from a window, but they are few who can work with the tools of Sir Walter Scott and our Poet Laureate is not one of them. Lady Heron takes the place of Rebecca; Sir William Heron is a prisoner in the hands of King James, but this is no matter because Lady Heron is in love with the Earl of Surrey, Commanding Officer of the English forces. The Earl of Surrey and King James leave a good deal to their respective chiefs of staff, it would seem as they come in alternately to be made love to by Lady Heron. Surrey has a merciless taste for blank verse and spreads himself at every opportunity. Lady Heron's wiles are thrown away on this speechful warrior: might as well try and flirt with Lord Kitchener. King James is a more responsive vessel; but Lady Heron only flirts with him to keep him off the battle field (though truly he strikes one as a leader who "never would be missed"). Presently, within about quarter of an hour of curtain-fall, she tells him why she trifles with him, and James goes off to cast himself on Surrey's sword. Enter Surrey to be congratulated on his victory. With regrettable want of tact Lady Heron tells him she did it all by detaining James at her side. Surrey, naturally enraged at this slur on his generalship, calls her a traitress and other bad names. Lady Heron goes home to Ford Castle, whither Surrey causes James' body to be delivered at once (by equivalent of Carter Paterson apparently); this is to punish Lady Heron. Why she should cozen James so lightly in life and mourn him so bitterly dead is not clear, but when an elderly gentleman (Sir William) turns up unexpectedly he finds his flirtatious spouse embracing the royal clay preparatory to taking her own life.

Flodden Field is not a shining example of the modern or any other drama. The last quarter of an hour was full of action and strong feeling and during the other two hours the business rippled along smoothly as chalk stream. Miss Constance Collier did what she might with Lady Heron, but Lady Heron's manufacturer seems to lack courage: he is afraid to let his characters go; and Lady Heron showed us what a wealth of possibilities had been missed; one was sorry for her. Mr. Kinsey Lisle has "improved" Kipling's story of the "Man Who was" by introducing four ladies into it. This was a mistake and a bad one. Limmason's sister has nothing to do with the action and the other three women have less. The only result of the innovation is to compel tedious explanations to account for the presence or absence of Limmason's sister with whom Dirkovitch is in love; the story is essentially one of masculine interest and that thread of interest is only frayed by trying to wind a love story round it. Get thee to a nunnery, girls! It is not often we do not want you; but here you are distinctly, decidedly, and emphatically in the way. Had you any part in the story, Kipling would have given you chairs in the front row; having none he did not even let you peep through the crack of the door.

Hading is at the Coronet, Notting Hill, with Sapho. Capus' Comedy is an old favourite in London and was as well received as ever, thanks muchly to Mdme Granier's delightful rendering of the character of Henriette Maukun. Mdme. Granier is a great actress, but her wonderful merits do not seem to have impressed the B. P. so deeply as those of other French actresses in the first rank. Sapho, of course, is also an old familiar friend of Londoners: one they are glad to meet again as witness the crowded little house that greeted her on Monday night. Later on shall we have Sara Bernhardt and eke the divine Rejane.

JOTTINGS FROM JUNGLYPORE

LAST week I wrote that we had had a little adventure with a tigress. Although nothing much out of the ordinary, it exemplifies the element of chance which surrounds the experiences of Shikaris, and makes it impossible to regulate their movements to absolute safety.

"Once bit, twice shy" is sufficiently truthful an adage, but to imagine that the personal experience of one "regrettable incident" will safeguard one against repetition is quite misguided. All that the most cautious individual can do is to "leave nothing to chance": and then chance sometimes comes in an easy winner!

The other day H. and I. descended from this pretty little mountain colony to investigate certain rumours that we had heard as to the presence of a Bagh in the Ambadop ravine. Ambadop, the "pool by the mango tree," is a delightful little spot about fifteen hundred feet below and three miles north of here, and its extremely picturesque glen goes twisting and winding down between steep hillsides to join a large tributary of the distant Tapti. These jungles are at present very bare, and the white and shrivelled grass exceedingly hot and choking: but here and there a pipal or banyan raises its grateful shade, and, in combination with certain charmingly secluded pools, serves to offer sufficient cover to wandering felines.

H. and I. passed the mango pool and went about a couple of miles downstream, slowly and quickly pottering along dry stretches of boulders, and examining sand and dust for the necessary tracks. At a spot where a considerable tributary nala joins the main ravine lies a narrow bay of level soil, rather raised above the level of the floods: and here grows much long "burroo" grass, shaded by a few small new-leaved mhowa trees. Not far from the border of this little "strath" rises a spreading banyan: in the river bed below lie some delectable pools. Soothed by the sylvan beauties of this spot, H. and I. repaired to the water's edge, and, reclining in the shade, masticated a biscuit and raised aloft the pleasantly-gurgling water-bottle.

Anon, refreshed, we prowled on, and, about fifty yards on, regarded with pleasure what we had come to seek—the pugs of a small tiger: but we failed to mark the prints of some smaller pads, or passed them by as those of hyæna, or other lesser beast of the forest.

Up to this point we had been accompanied by four korkus, whom we had met on their way to cut bamboos, and had persuaded to come so far with us. These people now desired to be excused, in order to attend to their work and we having casually inquired in which direction they would now proceed, they had indicated a course uphill and away from the river, leading past the aforesaid banyan tree and "burroo" grass. So we left them drinking water and squatting on the laterite rocks. Half an hour later H. and I. accompanied by two of my own men had explored about half a mile down-stream, up a stale pug marked branch nala, and down again, when I remarked a suddenly thoughtful look on my old orderly's face—but the incident passed.

Not finding any more tracks down stream, we had turned and were retracing our steps, when we became aware of the four korkus hurrying down the far bank of the riverbed. Surprised at this sudden departure from their original bamboo-cutting expedition, we stopped and called to them, but in a preoccupied kind of way they continued their course, one of them signalling that this was their path. Now had my old fellow mentioned to me the cause of this previous pause and thought, subsequent events might have turned out very differently, but he did not. "Chance" was creeping in.

N. B. for future use—"Suspicion should rest on every departure from the normal."

It was becoming hot in the deep-sunk ravine, and up we ploddered over pebble and sand, past the pug-marked pool (erasing the pugs), past almost the level bay and banyan tree, H. going along the further bank. By the pool-side I stooped, and scooping up a little water patted it refreshingly over my scanty locks. Then I ascended a little bank on to the higher ground to settle on a spot for our bait that evening.

"Baurrgh-ha-waurrgh-ha-harrgh-a-waugh! the deafening noise burst all around me in the vibrating air, stunning and confusing for a couple of seconds, until, elongated and flattened, the form of a tigress grew clear under the banyan tree close to my right front, as she rushed towards me, bellowing and scattering the dried leaves. Behind her two little brutes of cubs: they also in full song! My 12-bore ball gun flew to my shoulder: the roaring comet came to a sudden halt. Finger on trigger, I took a few steps backward, then more: reached the edge of the bank: darted down it: and, pursued by the same disgusting outcry, made nimblest time across a mass of boulders, in some queer manner managing to watch my rear as I skipped along. Slowing down, I perceived H. making a flank movement in my direction, and joined him on the far bank behind another splendid old dur tree. The two men were not far off in a similar position. The roaring having ceased, we ascended our tree, handed up rifles, and reconnoitred.

The tree from which the tigress had made her demonstration was now about one hundred and ten yards away, and when I peered through the forked trunk of our refuge, there lay the tigress—like a big pussy-cat by the fire. She had gone back and was lying in the shade close to the gnarled trunk of the banyan, in full view. As the shot was not altogether an easy one we agreed to wait a little, at least until a steadier hand would give us a better chance: and so continued to watch the tigress, who every now and then turned her head to look behind her, or to her left, in the direction of our tree. Her cubs she had no doubt sent on before her into the grass. At last, feeling steady, we had almost prepared to fire, when the brute slowly rose to her feet and paced gently forward. Even then the sights were aligned on her shoulder, when she turned, and presenting a back view, glided into the long "burroo." About half an hour was now spent in trying to discover her new position, but the difficulties of the ground and cover defeated us, and we turned homewards leaving her to another day, mistress of the situation.

On my next visit, when I approached the spot from a different point and examined it with great care, I left a buffalo calf as bait. Finding the tigress had left the immediate neighbourhood, it was interesting to go over the scene of the previous day's excitement, and it was now seen that, when so suddenly stopped, I had arrived within about twenty-five yards of the family tree, from which the tigress had charged out for about ten yards. So it is probably fortunate that instinct warned me not to fire on that occasion. As it was, the tigress gained her point and was content with having covered the retirement of her cubs. As is usual in such very sudden encounters, I carried away only a fleeting glimpse of a tawny stretched-out form, and a memory of a peculiarly dark-red flank.

The experience of another occasion, on which almost the same tactics had been pursued by another family tigress, leads me to believe that it was extremely unlikely that the tigress would have followed me up or made good her charge. Had she done so, I should have been forced to turn and shoot her or try to do so, and it is difficult to say what would have then ensued. My orderlies, who were also armed, retired straight across the river-bed, and from their position could have aided me had the beast come on, but as a most trustworthy man of this class once very nearly shot me when following up a wounded tiger, it is possible that I should have had more to fear from this direction than from the wild beast.

It remains to note that the four korkus, though of course they deny it, came on the tigress after we left them, and were driven off just as I was. The thoughtful look on my orderly's face was due to the roaring which she had then indulged in; only it was too distant and indistinct, he says, to distinguish at the time: and so he said nothing about it!

The behaviour of the jungle men in not letting us know that the tigress was there was quite in keeping with their general behaviour, but it might have resulted in a melancholy incident—for me; the tigress having been already excited was much more likely to go for one on being disturbed a second time at such very close quarters.

We have not done with this brute yet, and in my next I hope to be able to relate how we have turned the tables on her.

Fishing.

THE MASCALONGE.

AFTER a hearty luncheon the mascalonge was dozing in a restful lounging place—the bit of shallow water where overhanging trees and patches of foam mitigated the fierce rays of the August sun.

The morning hours had been spent in a thorough examination of the spacious pool, the very existence of which had been unsuspected on the preceding day, and the results were satisfying. The swift river, hurrying down from above, spread out into a broad expanse of still water, deep and long, before gathering again for an onward rush to the sea, and the mascalonge had found the pool fairly alive with fishes smaller than itself, delicious bass and suckers and eels. Well might it congratulate itself on the roving spirit which had impelled it to a journey of exploration, if the peaceful possession of this well-stocked pool were to be the reward.

The Ottawa had been the home of its earlier years, along the shores of the large forest-covered island which obstructs the flow of the river just below Les Chutes des Chats. At first, in the quiet channel to the east of the island, and afterwards, on the other side in the turbulent waters at the foot of the falls, it had grown gradually in strength and courage until it feared no other one of its kind. But those terrible creatures, men, which moved overhead in boats on the surface of the river must be avoided at whatever cost.

One of them, in particular, a veritable giant in size seemed to be afloat all of the time—very likely he lived in that large house upon the river bank—and always on the lookout for fish. And so it was fear of man, as well as a desire to see more of world, that impelled the mascalonge one day to make its way up the eastern shore of the river to that outlet of the Mississippi, which is called the timber snye and up the timber snye to this pool of plenty.

The foam-covered shallow was an admirable lurking place for the mascalonge. As it lay there with its head pointing up the stream neither victim nor foe could hope to enter unobserved the pool from above, and the lower stretches were easily covered by a backward glance of its right eye. Even now an almost imperceptible pulsation of the water disturbed its rest and roused it to instant activity. What could that small bright object be which moved slowly along the surface of the pool with a revolving motion, which was rather disconcerting to a newly awakened sleeper? A rare fish, possibly, a tidbit acceptable to a satiated appetite. Or, more likely, a dangerous foe to be destroyed or put to flight. In either case there was nothing to be gained by delay, and so the mascalonge shot forward and seized the intruder, intending to crunch its life out. Instead of doing so, however, it felt a sharp stinging pain at the angle of its jaw, and something seemed to be trying to draw it toward the shore. Turning, it dashed outward and downward to the depths of the pool shaking its head and trying in vain to escape from the clutches of what, too late, it knew to be a spoon hook—one of those devilish contrivances by which ignoble man strives unfairly to get the better of high-spirited fish.

As it was drawn again to the surface, it was a man standing on the shore with a rod in his hands and a line extending from the tip of the rod to the spoon hook in its mouth. Near the man stood another creature, dressed in a different fashion, which the mascalonge knew to be a woman. She had a square black box in her hands, with an eye at one end of it, which she pointed toward the mascalonge, at the same time pressing a spring. But the man kept on turning a small crank on the butt of the rod and drawing the mascalonge nearer to the shore. Repeatedly it dashed away in vain search for freedom and as often, the hook still clinging to its jaw, the line drew it back again until, with its strength almost spent, it lay in the shallow water at the feet of the man. With the rod held high in his right hand, he reached down with his left as if to seize it by the gills and lift it from the water, but he was deterred by the sharp teeth in its jaw. Instead he took a fly-book from his pocket and asked the woman to pick out the largest hook she could find, a long blued-steel one, and to lash it with a piece of her trout line to a short stick that was lying on the shore.

Taking this improvised gaff in his left hand the man tried to gaff the mascalonge under the jaw, but its weight was too much for the slender hook, which straightened out like a piece of iron wire, and once more it reached the bottom of the river.

This time the man did not attempt to bring it back at once, but merely kept a taut line, while he found a key ring in one pocket and a package of larger, stronger ringed hooks in another, one of which the woman put on the key ring, slipping the latter on the middle finger of his left hand. Then the reel revolved and the line came slowly in.

When mascalonge had been drawn to the surface of the water, not more than ten feet from the river bank, a sudden strain broke the spoon hook's hold and, almost lifeless, it felt itself sinking to safety. No—not yet—for the man let the spoon hook sink, too, and then, drawing it up suddenly, caught the mascalonge, in the side. Once more he began to reel in the line feeling sure that the prize was now almost within his grasp. But the mascalonge, lying out in the river, perceived that resistance was easier than before, that while lying broadside to the shore it could not be drawn in and that slight exertion was required to maintain that position. Gradually strength and courage returned and with them the hope of ultimate escape. After a time the hook tore loose again, and the mascalonge, without waiting to give the man another opportunity, disappeared from his sight forever.

On the shore there were vain regrets and lamentations as the story was told to other men and women who appeared on the scene shortly afterwards but deep down under the rocky cliff the mascalonge rejoiced and was thankful, and the smaller fish began to realize that their future was to be a sad one.—Shooting and Fishing.

A RIFLE FOR THE NEW EXPRESS CARTRIDGE.

MESSRS. JOSEPH LANG AND SON, LTD., have been very prompt in submitting for our notice, writes The Field, a rifle which has been chambered and regulated for firing the new No. 2 nitro cartridge, which was reported upon at length in our issue of 18th April and which seems to have created a great deal of interest among sportsmen and others interested in big game rifles of one kind or another. The rifle is constructed according to the new Webley system of falling block, a specimen of which action is at the present time in our hands for the purpose of a detailed notice. It is sufficient, therefore, to say that the general system of action is one that has been elaborated in a number of ways in order to afford a maximum of strength and ease of extraction Needless to say, our recent experiments with the new cartridge could not be considered as final until an opportunity was available for testing its accuracy as fired from a sporting weapon, our experiments having been conducted with an experimental barrel specially chambered for the purpose in view. It was, therefore, very opportune that our article on the new cartridge should be closely followed by an offer from Messrs. Lang to submit a rifle capable of firing it.

The barrel of the gun submitted is 27in. long, and, in order to test whether the velocity results were in agreement with those obtained in our experimental weapon, a series of records at 60 yards was at once taken, and the following are the values as corrected for velocity for the muzzle :—

(1)	2166ft. per second.	(6)	2176ft per second.
(2)	2169ft. ,,	(7)	2185ft. ,,
(3)	2157ft. ,,	(8)	2176ft. ,,
(4)	2169ft. ,,	(9)	2195ft. ,,
(5)	2160ft. ,,	(10)	2157ft. ,,

Average, 2171ft. per second.

These records compare very satisfactorily with those previously obtained, there being a rise of about 100ft., probably due in a measure to the absence of loss of gas due to the pressure piston in the gun used for the earlier experiments, it being impossible, for certain reasons, to obtain an absolutely perfect gas check. To the extra length of barrel must also be ascribed a great part of the improved results obtained. In fact, we can now state with confidence that in rifles with barrels 30in. long there would be no difficulty in obtaining the full 2200ft. per second, which represents the high velocities that are sometimes considered a desideratum. However, the figures obtained from the rifle under consideration show it to give very high velocities, which come exceedingly close to this nominal value. In fact, it is a question whether the extra 3in. of barrel is desirable, in view of the handiness of the shorter length and the results obtained with it. In looking through the above records of velocity it will be clear at once that there was a most marvellous run of uniformity. In fact, it would be extremely difficult to find an instance where equally well-authenticated experiments have shown such satisfactory readings as are met with in the first five shots of the series, which have been recorded in the true order of firing.

Five shots at 100 yards with the new No. 2 Nitro Cartridge, fired in a Lang Rifle. Centres of shot holes fell within 2·1in. by ·75in. Average deviation from point of mean impact, ·7in.

With accuracy in velocity one naturally expects accuracy in shooting, and it is therefore, unfortunate that we were not able to give Messrs. Lang the opportunity they would have liked for selecting favourable conditions suitable for obtaining shooting of the very high character that the rifle has in private trials shown itself able to accomplish. A target made at 100 yards, which is in our possession, contains a group of five shots, with a distance of 1in. between the centres of the highest and lowest perforations, and 13-16ths of an inch between those on the extreme right and left. As Messrs. Lang were particularly anxious that the rifle should be fired at 500 yards as well as at the shorter distance, the time available made it impossible to visit two grounds on the same day, so that our own 100 yards range, which is well fitted with the needful appliances, was not used, and an extemporised bench was fitted up. Even then the conditions were very severe on the shooter who conducted the firing. Three diagrams were fired at each distance, making, with additional shots, a total of some sixty shots in the day, to which was added such nerve disturbance as might be arrived at from a 100-mile journey beforehand.

Under these circumstances it would not have been surprising if the diagrams made had resulted in disappointment; but this was not the case, as the accompanying reproductions of the best in each series will go to show. The 100-yards diagram occupies an exceedingly small area and the height measurment would have been less had the precaution been taken of firing a warmer beforehand. This was not done, so that the first shot of the five fired fell about an inch below the group formed by those that followed. It is, however, necessary to abide strictly by the conditions laid down, and we accordingly decided that an extra shot to take the place of the first one should not be allowed. Still, there is no need to apologise for such a fine piece of shooting as that here reproduced. In fact, nothing would have been said about it had we not received full particulars of the even better shooting that had been carried out a day or so before at the private ranges of the maker of the rifle. As regards the general construction of the rifle submitted to our notice, we were able to state, after a careful examination, that it is a thoroughly sound and well turned-out piece of work, reflecting great credit on the manufacturing ability which has been exercised in its produc ion. Its weight is 10lbs. 2oz., which may be reduced a little in the finish processes.

CARD QUERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Can you give me a decision on the following point that recently arose at whist :—

A and B partners against Y and Z. It's A's lead, but A and B lead simultaneously. Can the penalty for B's lead out of turn be exacted that round, or must Y and Z wait till A or B next get the lead before a lead may be called.

C. B.

["A" has led in turn, so there is no penalty on his account, and the only penalty left is that "B's" exposed card can be called at any time.—ED.]

ANIMAL CANNIBALISM.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Could you or any of your readers enlighten me as to whether—

(a) The female members of the Filidæ destroy the young of other females of their species should they 'knock up' against them ?

(b) I am informed in a still more startling fashion regarding reptiles, viz., that the females, though prolific, invariably keep hanging about near their eggs, and when these hatch they set to eating up their own young !

In this manner, my informant maintained, such undesirable species as snakes, muggars and the like kept within reasonable bounds as regards numbers, for only a small minority of the hatched young escaped the jaws of their unnatural mothers to grow up.

IDENTIFICATION OF SPECIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I shall be grateful if, by means of the enclosed sketch, you could give me the correct name of the cat I have attempted to depict. I got her as a kitten some time ago in what was thought to be a leopard's den in a mass of rocks some seven miles from here—altitude about 5,000 feet. The kitten was quite intractable for the first two or three weeks, but is now, though I have had to cage her, absolutely tame with me. She will not allow strangers or servants to touch her. Her fur is the exact tint of a leopard's pelt with the exception of the richer markings on the face. Her legs, feet, and belly are marked exactly in the same way as the ordinary leopard. I should say that she promises to be about the size of a large English tabby, but might have developed more in her native jungles. I fancy she is too small for Felis Viverrina, but is more handsomely marked than any specimen of Felis Bengalensis I have ever seen. Her mew is a grating call quite unlike the domestic cats, as also are her expressions of ill-temper, when bullied. I have done everything for her and handled her myself since she was caught, and she is now almost annoyingly tame; her chief enjoyment is a romp round the rooms with an old tennis ball, but she will allow no one to touch her except myself. I should be very glad to know her real and scientific name. Her tail is tapering, obscurely spotted and barred, black tip, and reaches to the shoulders when turned over her back, and this is different to most descriptions of the leopard cats.

J. H. L. W.

KASAULI, 20th June 1903.

[It is always risky attempting to identify specimens from written descriptions, and in no species does this remark apply with greater force than when the numerous small cats are concerned. The sketch which accompanies our correspondent's description, however, helps us a good deal and leaves no doubt in our mind that this annoyingly tame feline is a kitten of Felis Bengalensis (The Leopard Cat). The white band running up to the forehead from the inside of each eye, as shown, is very distinctive, while the colouration and markings are those of F. Bengalensis, even allowing for the great variation in colour this species exhibits.—ED.]

HIMALAYAN FOREST FIRES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—During the greater part of the month of May, whilst touring about in the Kumaon District of the Himalayas, in the neighbourhood of Naini Tal, Ranikhet, Almora, etc., I have been much grieved to observe that forest fires were of almost daily occurrence. Nor are they of spontaneous origin; for, upon making careful enquiries from natives on the spot, I find that the fires are wilfully lighted, the chief culprits being the owners of grazing cattle. The existing impression is that by burning up the dry grass and undergrowth before the annual rains commence, a more luxurious and rapid growth of green grass is the result. Be this as it may, for no one doubts the efficiency of carbon as a fertilizing agent, it is doubtful if the growth of the new crop can be accelerated before the appearance of the monsoon. It is not, however, with the object of discussing the growth of grass that this letter is written; but to point out the gross cruelty and alarming loss of life to wild animals in general, and birds in particular, which such fires must cause. May is the month when most birds have either eggs or young; and the destruction of a nest by fire, which burns night and day, must often result in the death of the parent birds with their offspring. After having carefully examined parts of the forest where fire has raged, I can safely say that to a height of at least six feet above the ground all vegetation is consumed. And although large, full-sized trees are not absolutely destroyed, any one with the most elementary knowledge of structural Botany knows that the severe scorching of the trunk which the tree undergoes must seriously injure them (I am referring to exogenous trees.) At frequent intervals, along the forest pathways, the following notice is posted up: "Hunting, shooting, and fishing in this forest is (are?) prohibited until 25th July." I should like to ask the responsible authorities: "Which causes the greater destruction to game: the combined sports enumerated on the notice-board, or forest fires?"

At one dâk bungalow in the district enumerated above, where I spent the night, in the immediate vicinity of which I had not observed any fire? I was awakened very early in the morning by the most glorious concert of bird-voices which I had ever listened to. The day had not yet dawned, and the whole hill-side seemed alive with music; in which the notes of the Yellow-billed Whistling Thrush (M. Temmincki) and the Grey-winged Ouzel (M. Boulboul) were most prominent. It is too late this year for anything to be done in the matter; but I trust the forest authorities will take steps to prevent such appalling destruction to bird-life being continued in the future.

E. W. HARPER.

An agreement has been entered into between the American Audubon Society of Bird Lovers and the Millinery Merchant's Protective Association, by which the former society agree to protect the latter against legislative or legal aggression in consideration of the association using its utmost efforts to discourage the use of the plumage of gulls, terns, grebes, humming birds, egrets, herons, American pelicans, and song birds of any country from the beginning of 1904; but the importation and use of domestic or foreign feathers of domestic fowls or other species than those named is to be encouraged. This is a hint which our British Bird Protection Association might act upon.

LUCKNOW PAPERCHASE RACES.

Thursday, 25th June 1903.

THE Paperchase Cup races were brought off to-day under favourable circumstances and there was a large attendance. The Ladies' Hack Race, ½ mile, fell through, and a Polo Scurry was substituted which filled well. Captain Winwood had two wins, steering his own pony, After Dark, to victory in the Polo Scurry and securing the verdict in the Horse Chase on Capt Dunbar's Eldorado. Details:—

Third Day, Saturday, 20th June 1903.

A BIG card of eight races was carried through on the concluding day when a large and brilliant gathering was present. Lieut.-Col. Desaraj Urs had two wins, making a total of five for the meeting. In the Arab Handicap an objection was lodged against Harefoot on the ground of bumping and upheld, the race being awarded to Baby Boy. Lieut.-Col. Sprot, the owner, has appealed to the Calcutta Turf Club against the decision of the Stewards, but nothing has so far been heard. An objection was also raised against. Evensong for bumping in the C.-B. Handicap but was disallowed. Bookmakers on the whole had a good meeting and the totalisator was not much patronised. Details:—

BANGALORE, 21st June 1903.

H. DONNE, Secretary.

There is at Port Logan, in the South of Scotland, a fishpond holding tame salt-water fish that come half out of the water to be fed. An interesting account of a visit paid to the pond appears in the June "Windsor." At the pondside the guide "waved his basket and whistled," and "never came trout to May fly so readily as a score of unmistakable sea-fish came from all parts of the pool, scrambling and jostling against one another as though they had been playing football under Association rules. They came to the edge of the step, and there they rested until their guardian took some of the nasty delicacies and offered them. Straightway certain of the cod-fish put their heads out of the water to within half an inch or less of their gills, and took the food with a joyful but ill-bred gulp. They were cod-fish, haddock, and other rovers of the sea, all thriving, fat, and happy." On one side of the pond in which the fish are kept there is access for the rising tide, and, as the outlet is cross-barred, the fish cannot escape. "The taming of the fish is not an easy matter. For more than a year the captives are wild and sullen; some do not thrive at all. However, time works wonders, and, as visitors must be few and far between, it is hardly surprising to learn that the example of the tame fish is slowly followed, and the wild ones learn to respond to the whistle of the fisherman when he comes down the stone steps carrying provisions." That the fish should come to the edge of the pool is not surprising; but, until one has seen them, it is hard to believe that they raise themselves right out of the water and snap at the food like half-trained dogs.

(FROM OUR OWN SPORTING CORRESPONDENT.)

THE TURF.

THE Friday of Whitsun week is invariably the occasion for a monster Catholic procession, which takes hours winding its way through all the main thoroughfares of Cottonopolis, and this ceremony nearly always synchronises with Manchester Cup day. All the traffic was disarranged from breakfast time until noon on the 5th instant by the progress of thousands of school children attired for the most part in white dresses with coloured sashes and bearing banners, the scholars being accompanied by bands playing a lively selection of secular music. The whole town was en fete, and the day being, as usual, celebrated as a general holiday, the electric tram service to Castle Irwell was strained to its utmost capacity as soon as the cars could be got to work in anything like systematic rotation. It was manifest long before a start was made at two o'clock that the muster would be of unusual strength, and by the time the turnstiles had stopped clicking a huge concourse of spectators had gathered in the various enclosures, which were black with an unbroken array of humanity. They were rewarded by witnessing some good racing, as apart from the Cup, which resulted in the unexpected victory of Zinfandel, capital sport was provided. A chilly, threatening morning gave place to a bright afternoon, but the light began to fail early, and it was in semi-darkness that the proceedings were brought to a termination. The ground, which has been getting drier every day, was very hard, and the horses kicked up clouds of dust as they galloped down the straight, but fields ruled of average strength, though one or two intended competitors were not allowed to carry silk.

(Winner trained by Beatty, at Newmarket.)

BETTING: 13 to 8 agst. Our Lassie, 7 to 2 Cliftonhall, 11 to 2 Friar Tuck, 8 to 1 Zinfandel, 100 to 7 Rightful, 100 to 6 Scullion, 100 to 6 Syneros, 100 to 6 Venus, 20 to 1 Bachelor's Button, 20 to 1 Monitress, 50 to 1 Valve (o).

The first to leave the paddock was Bachelor's Button, and he was followed in the parade by Scullion, Syneros, Our Lassie, Cliftonhall, Rightful, Valve, Monitress, and Venus, the last pair being Zinfandel and Friar Tuck. They turned and cantered in the same order, except that Syneros remained behind and walked to the post. It was 3 22 when the white flag was hoisted, but the start was delayed for four minutes by Friar Tuck, Monitress, and Syneros, and when the barrier was raised the latter whipped round and was left at the post. Our Lassie was quickest away, but Valve settled down with a slight lead of Rightful. Our Lassie, and Zinfandel, with Scullion and Bachelor's Button next in advance of Venus and Cliftonhall, the whipper-in being Friar Tuck, to the mile post, where Zinfandel and Our Lassie changed places, Cliftonhall being in close attendance, followed by Bachelor's Button and Scullion. So they ran to the straight, where Cliftonhall took up the running, on the rails, with a slight lead of Zinfandel, Rightful, and Bachelor's Button, these being clear of Our Lassie and Scullion till below the distance, where Zinfandel challenged Cliftonhall, and the pair, drawing right away from ther opponents, fought out a tremendous finish, which resulted in favour of Zinfandel by a length; a bad third. Our Lassie was fourth, Scullion fifth, Friar Tuck sixth, Valve seventh, Rightful eighth, Monitress ninth, and Venus last. Syneros took no part in the contest. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2mins. 28⅕secs.

In the year that has elapsed since the new race-course at Castle Irwell was inaugurated for sport under Jockey Club Rules, the management have effected many improvements, and it is clear that they have no intention of lagging behind the times. The number-board in the Club enclosure, which obstructed the view of those situated in the Press and trainers' stand, has been removed bodily to a more convenient site over the weighing-room, and the bare open spaces surrounding the offices have been laid out as gardens and ornamental shrubberies. The result of the draw for places has in every instance been hoisted in the frame in juxtaposition with the jockeys' names, and it is satisfactory to note that this practice, which is vastly appreciated by the spectators, is gradually being adopted at all the principal meetings. It has been contended over and over again that the public in the cheap rings here are so far removed from the winning-post that they can see practically nothing of the finishes. This concerns no one but the occupants of the enclosures themselves, and, inasmuch as they continue to flock thither in their tens of thousands at every available opportunity, it is only reasonable to infer that they are satisfied with their lot. They assembled in overwhelming numbers to witness the concluding stage of the fixture on the 6th instant and had no reason to be dissatisfied with the entertainment, though the last two races cut down to a very narrow compass. The going, which had been uncommonly hard from the commencement of the meeting, derived some benefit from a thunder shower which swept across the valley shortly after the conclusion of yesterday's sport, but it was still firm and unyielding, the herbage, though verdant, being too rank to afford adequate covering for the sun-baked ground.

Mr. Fowler is proverbially lucky as regards weather for his meetings, and the Fates came to his rescue once more on the 9th instant. The barometer was falling ominously yesterday evening in London, portending a climatic disturbance of some kind, and it came sure enough during the early hours in the shape of a violent storm of wind and rain. The morning broke dull and gloomy, but the threat of a wet jacket has no terrors for the habitual race-goer, and a large muster of members and their womenfolk was supplemented by a flattering attendance in the public enclosures. The wind veered round into a mild quarter during the forenoon, and the sun blazed down with welcome fervour. The park was seen at its best, and as usual fields reached large proportions, no fewer than 68 runners going to the post for the half-dozen events of which the programme was composed. Up till yesterday the course was very hard, having been backed up by the recent drought, but the torrential downpour during the night had refreshed nature exceedingly, and going was in capital order, and looks like remaining so for the final stage of the gathering.

BETTING: 4 to 1 agst Juno, 9 to 2 The Poetess filly, 6 to 1 Pennacook, 7 to 1 each Equity and Ardent, 8 to 1 The Ripper, and 10 to 1 any other (offered).

Won by a neck: a length and-a half separated the second and third. Poetess filly was fourth, Strongbar fifth, Juno sixth, Nebula seventh, Molly Shipton colt eighth, Ardent ninth, and Equity (who broke a fetlock and was subsequently destroyed) last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 60⅘secs.

The weather underwent a radical change after the cessation of sport on the 10th and the concluding stage of the gathering was ushered in under most depressing conditions. A sombre and oppressive pall of fog brooded over London, and the rain dripped monotonously as though it had come to stay. Unfortunately, such proved to be the case, for on arriving at the scene of action rain was found to be descending steadily, and it continued almost without cessation throughout the afternoon. In spite of the damp surroundings the flower-beds in the members' enclosure (where the band of the East Surrey Regiment played a delightful selection of cheery airs) were looking at their brightest. The rhododendrons were a blaze of roseate blossom, and a wealth of pansies and giant poppies contributed to brilliancy of the scene. Notwithstanding the damp surroundings the attendance showed no falling off whatever, and even the ladies were present in their accustomed numbers. The course freshened by several hours' soaking, yielded grand galloping, and the field, if less numerous than twenty-four hours previously, were far in excess of the average. A couple of exciting finishes added a zest to the proceedings, but backers of first favourites only twice succeeded in hitting the mark and honours rested with the Ring.

CRICKET.

THE PHILADELPHIANS' TOUR.

THE CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY MATCH.—Played at Cambridge on 8th, 9th and 10th June Cambridge won by six wickets. Although they were naturally very short of practice, the Philadelphians played very good cricket on Monday, but when play ceased for the day they had much the worst of matters. The chief feature of the day's cricket was the really fine batting of J. A. Lester, who did so well when he was in England with the Haverford team. He was at the wickets for two hours and-a-half, during which he made many beautiful drives, and placed the ball well to leg. Everybody was disappointed when he failed to reach his hundred by only four runs; he was ninth out and his innings included fourteen 4's. Bohlen played a very graceful innings, and helped Lester to put on 96 runs in about an hour With the exception of Brown the other men were unable to judge the pace of the turf. When the 'Varsity went in King bowled well, with a strong wind behind him, but the wind against which McDonell had bowled with considerable effect, did not seem to help the American, whose well-known swerve was not greatly in evidence. Ebden and Godsell scored 86 for the first wicket, and when stumps were drawn the total was 111 for one wicket. The innings, which began so well, seemed likely to come to an end on Tuesday sooner than was anticipated. Godsell was out almost at once; Mann and Dowson both played pretty cricket, but after they were separated only small scores were made until eight wickets were down, when Roberts and McDonell gained a mastery over the bowling, the former hitting finely The Philadelphians began well in their second innings with Bohlen and Wood, and when stumps were drawn they were only 69 runs behind with eight wickets in hand. Yesterday King and Lester both played fine cricket, and things seemed to be going particularly well for the visitors. But the tail did nothing and Cambridge only had to make 55 to win a task which they had some difficulty in performing.

YORKSHIRE vs. SUSSEX.—Played at Bradford on 8th 9th and 10th June. Sussex won by an innings and 180 runs. Yorkshire again had to do without the services of Hirst, although Hunter was able to return to the team. Early in the day Tunnicliffe, in catching Vine, reopened the wound in his finger, and had to retire. Sussex were seen to great advantage on the first day, for after Vine had been dismissed, Fry and Killick put on 105 in two hours and-a-quarter, and Fry and Ranjitsinhji 174 in a couple of hours. During the latter part of the day the batting was infinitely superior to the bowling, both Fry and Ranjitsinhji making the most masterful strokes, although Fry, to a great extent, discarded the risky pull. Fry was batting all day—five hours and twenty minutes—and during by far the greater part of this time he played almost a defensive game, never making a mistake. When stumps were drawn, with the total at 337 for three wickets, he was not out 160. On Tuesday morning Fry continued to play splendid cricket, and had the satisfaction of passing the second hundred—a great feat against the Yorkshire bowling. He was batting, altogether, for about seven hours, and hit twenty-four 4's. Newham and Cox both played excellent cricket and at lunch time Sussex declared, with the pleasing knowledge, that they could not be beaten. Tired with their long period of fielding, and out of luck, the Yorkshiremen, as a whole, failed to come up to their reputation; but Lord Hawke once more did his level best to stem the tide, and Wainwright and Haigh made useful scores. But when the innings ended the Champions were no fewer than 428 runs behind. Before stumps were drawn Brown and Jackson steadily batted for an hour, when the latter was bowled. Hunter came in and played out time. The Yorkshiremen made a plucky attempt to bring about a draw but although nearly every man did a little towards this end, and although Lord Hawke once more played a great game, the task was too great, and for the third time this season the Champions were defeated.

LANCASHIRE vs. KENT.—Played at Old Trafford on 4th 5th and 6th June. Kent won by 177 runs. Times seem to be changing, and the Southern counties are beginning to come out on top again. In this match Kent from the end of the first day had the match in hand, quite outplaying their formidable opponents. When stumps were drawn on the first day, they had scored 321, and had dismissed three good men for 20. The chief feature of the day's cricket was the fine innings of 127, made in three hours and-a-half by Seymour, and the good innings of 63 by Humphreys, who helped Seymour to put on 123 in an hour and-a-half for the fifth wicket, and the stand made for the eighth and ninth wickets, which between them added 101 runs to the total. On the next day the wicket was not in such good condition as it had been on the previous day, and Lancashire failed to distinguish themselves, the only man who seemed quite comfortable being Tyldesley. With a lead of 163 Kent preferred to go in again and when stumps were drawn had scored 147 for six wickets, so that they were now 313 runs on with four wickets in hand. On Saturday they were able to put Lancashire in to make 334 in the fourth innings of the match, and with the wicket not in very good condition this task proved far too formidable. Garnett played a splendid innings.

SUSSEX vs. SOMERSET.—Played at Hastings on 4th and 5th June. Sussex won by 8 wickets. Much of the interest in this match was lost when it was found that L. C. H. Palairet, F. A. Phillips, and Captain Hedley could not play for Somerset, but the county has such a reputation for making a good fight, even under the most disheartening circumstances, that it was never safe to prophesy a victory for Sussex. For the first time this season S. M. J. Woods won the toss, but possibly it might have been better if he had lost it, for his side did very little in the first innings. For Sussex, who, when stumps were drawn, were 98 to the good with half their wickets in hand, Fry played well, and Killick and Ranjitsinhji put on 99 runs in partnership in an hour. On the next day Somerset were again outplayed, but Martyn and Newton made a desperate attempt to save the game.

M. C. C. & GROUND vs. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—Played at Oxfordon. June 4 to, 5 to, and 6 to, M. C. C. won by 24 runs. The M. C. C. took an exceedingly weak team to Oxford, much weaker than the sides which they are often able to send against schools and ordinary clubs, but with the luck which has so often attended weak teams sent out by the famous club, a victory was gained after a most exciting finish.

The match between Surrey and Hampshire, which should have been played at the Oval on 7th, 8th and 9th May was abandoned without a ball having been bowled, and is therefore not included in the above table

POLO.

THE HURLINGHAM CLUB, FULHAM.—The assemblage at Hurlingham on Saturday, the 6th, was the most numerous and brilliant since the International matches of last year. In the initial encounter a team representing Hurlingham was pitted against a Ranelagh quartette, the sides being:—Ranelagh: Mr. M. de Las Casas, Mr J. C. de Las Casas, Mr. A. Rawlinson, and Mr. A. de Las Casas (back); Hurlingham: Mr. F. Grenfell, Mr. R. Grenfell, Mr. C. Greenfell and Mr. J. Lawson (back). Umpire: Mr. T. B. Drybrough. The turf afforded capital going for the ponies, and the match was fought out at a good pace. Too much importance must not be attached to the scores registered by the respective contingents for they were by no means indicative of the play, of which the home side had considerably more than appears therefrom. They ought to have secured several more points, as on occasions they had the opposition hopelessly beaten in front of goal and literally threw chances away through inaccurate hitting. As it was, Ranelagh won by seven goals to one. The final tie of the Handicap Tournament was then proceeded with, the sides being:—F. Team: Capt. L. C. Jenner, Capt Greatbed, Major H E. Schofield and Mr. Foxhall Keene (back); E. Team: Lord Ingestre, Mr. C. T. Garland, Major F. Egerton Green, and Mr. T. B. Drybrough (back). Capt. F. Blacker umpired. At the mid-way interval F. Team had scored three goals to love, and they ultimately won by seven to two. The band of the Royal Horse Guards played during the afternoon.

RANELAGH CLUB, BARN ELMS.—What with the polo matches, the ladies' sports, and a night ascent by the Aero Club, there was sufficient diversity in the Ranelagh programme on Saturday the 6th, to satisfy the most exacting. The London season being now at his height, the gathering was far and away the most brilliant yet seen this summer. During the afternoon a visit was paid to the charming grounds by the Princesses Patricia and Margaret of Connaught and Princess Victoria of Schleswig Holstein, who were interested spectators of the proceedings. A commencement was made with the match between the Magpies and the Freebooters, which was productive of an exceptionally keen and close game. The sides were:—Magpies: Capt Drage, Col. H. R. de Lisle, Capt. J. Lloyd, and Mr. U. O. Thynne (back); Freebooters: Mr. N. Baring, Mr. E. B. Sheppard, Mr. Foxhall Keene, and Mr. J. Watson (back). Umpires: Major Morris and Mr. F. A. Gill. The opening exchanges ruled in favour of the Freebooters, for whom Mr. Baring and Mr. Sheppard scored, but these reverses only served to arouse the opposition, who infused so much dash and determination into their play that they had placed themselves on terms before the bout ended, goals resulting from strokes by Col. de Lisle and Capt. Drage. From now to the end it was anyone's game, the Magpies winning a hotly-contested match by six to five. Goals were also somewhat plentiful in the match between the Royal Artillery—Capt. Rowell, Major Cameron, Capt Stanley, Major Ferrar (back)—and Ranelagh—Mr. J B. Dale, Major R. Hoare Capt G. J. Fitzgerald, and Mr. J. Gouldsmith (back). At the outset Ranelagh did best, but the final record was a draw at eight goals all. The proceedings were enlivened by the band of the 1st Life Guards.

GOLF.

THE INTERNATIONAL MATCH AT PRESTWICK.—The Prestwick links are known throughout the world as providing the finest golf courses anywhere. Here, indeed, so far back as forty-three years ago was instituted the first open premier contest, which was then, and for a number of years, won by Scottish players until English cracks wrested the honours, and for some seven or eight years the prizes were taken south of the Border. Alec Herd, for Scotland, regained the honours in time, and since then the Championship has been held by Fernie, Simpson, Martin, Brown, Park, Burns, Ball, Kirkcaldy, Hilton, Auchterlonie, Taylor, Vardon, and Braid. Among the leading and best known experts entered for the present year's contests are the winners of the past five years' matches—Vardon, Taylor, Braid, and Herd—The event of the first day's play was the newly-instituted International match between players of England and Scotland, and no matter what the result, it is to be hoped that a continued interest will attach itself to the game by the perpetuation of the new fixture. Of the Prestwick golf course little need be said further than to mention that several important improvements have lately been made—two new tees for the third or cardinal hole, one on each side of the second green, and so, instead of driving a mashie as in times past, they are sufficiently far back to allow of a drive tee shot, while a new tee has been made for the sixth clipean fields nearly in line with the tenth field. The weather was ideal, and the play was satisfactory. The efforts of both sides in the International were very earnest. On the returns arriving Scotland had a lead; then matters became equal. Then England had first 1 up, then 2 up, but the arrival of Coburn and Kay made the scores equal, and the countries were square, six matches each. In the foursome, which created enormous interest and attracted a big crowd, the first four to start were Vardon, Taylor, Braid, and Herd. The first and second holes were halved; Braid scored the next point, Herd followed with a fortunate putt, and the Scotland men stood 2 up. Scotland led by 3 when Taylor added 1, and Braid with beautiful play kept his side in front. Great driving by each followed, and perhaps the greatest putt of the day was made by Vardon at thirteenth hole, and England was within one of Scotland. All the other tees were of more than ordinary interest and the excitement was intense. Details:—

ROWING.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY SUMMER RACES.

The commencement of these races attracted a very large number of spectators on the 10th and Ditton Paddock presented a gay appearance. The weather had been very threatening during the forenoon, but a bright evening prevailed. The head boats do not appear so good as last year, but a decided improvement in the lower boats is apparent. Third Trinity, the head of the river crew, were well away from the Hall, who were hotly pursued all through by First Trinity, the latter getting within a few feet of them just past the railway bridge. As was anticipated, Lady Margaret quickly overhauled the Jesus crew, and some fine racing should be witnessed between the first four boats Christ's crew brought down Emmanuel and Caius also defeated Pembroke. The latter boat was expected to improve their position. Selwyn were much faster than First Trinity 2, and defeated them at the Red Grind. Lady Margaret 2, after a fine race with Peterhouse, caught them in the Reach. The officiating judges were Messrs. L. H. K. Bushe-Fox (Lady Margret) and R. A. Nelson (Peterhouse). Details :—

The Second Division were started on their journey at 5-35 in the following order, the brackets denoting the bumps :—

Trinity Hall 2	Corpus	Queens'
Pembroke 2	Jesus 2	Clare 2
Sidney	Third Trinity 2	Magdalene
Emmanuel 2	Trinity Hall 3	Downing
Caius 2	St. Catharine's
Clare 1	First Trinity 3

Trinity Hall 2 were well away, but Sidney lowered the colours of Pembroke 2 at Ditton Corner; Emmanuel 2 fell to Caius 2 at the same place, and Jesus 2 conquered Corpus at the Willows. First Trinity 3 were victorious over St. Catharine's at the Gut, and Clare 2 wrought the downfall of Queens' at Grassy. Downing rowed a plucky race after Magdalene, but just failed to effect a bump.

The company had greatly increased when the First Division were started at 6-35. Five bumps were recorded, viz :—

Third Trinity	1	Emmanuel ...	1	First Trinity	2
Trinity Hall	1	Christ's		Selwyn
First Trinity	1	King's		Peterhouse
Jesus ...	1	Pembroke ...	1	Lady Margaret	2
Lady Margaret	1	Caius ...	1	Trinity Hall	2

Third Trinity were never in danger, and finished the course more than their starting distance ahead. A fine struggle ensued between the Hall boat and First Trinity. At the Railway Bridge Trinity were overlapping, but the Hall crew just managed to avert disaster. The Lady Margaret boat got off quickly, and brought about the downfall of Jesus at the Gut. Christ's got the better of Emmanuel at Ditton Plough, whilst Pembroke were also vanquished by Caius at the same place. Selwyn, who have improved a lot, caught First Tinity 2 at the Red Grind, and, although Peterhouse made a good race of it, they had to give in to Lady Margaret 2 in the Long Reach.

The weather on the second day was not so favourable as on the opening day. A north-easterly wind did not add to the comfort of the spectators. Nevertheless, there was an increased attendance, both sides of the river being densely packed. Although not so many bumps were registered as on the previous evening, the racing proved most interesting. Third Trinity kept more than their distance ahead and the crew rowed a more livelier stroke. The greatest interest was centred in the next two boats, and a desperate struggle was witnessed from the start. First Trinity got to within a few feet, but the Hall managed to get home without being bumped. The Christ's crew registered their second bump by defeating the Jesus men. King's strove hard to avert defeat from Caius, but the last-named crew just caught them before reaching the finish. Selwyn quickly overtook Pembroke, who are not rowing up to form. In the lower division the Hall second boat had to row hard to keep clear from Sidney, as in the reach Sidney overlapped them, but they failed to register a bump. Although 6 in Caius second boat caught a crab at Grassy, they soon got together again and overcame Pembroke 2 just past the Willows. First Trinity 3 gained the mastery over Hall 3, and Clare 2 defeated St. Catharine's at First Post Corner. Messrs L. H. K. Bushe-Fox (Lady Margaret) and R. A. Nelson again acted as judges.

The Second Division were started at 5-35 in the following order, the brackets denoting the bumps:

Trinity Hall 2	Jesus 2	St Catharine's
Sidney	Corpus	Clare 2
Pembroke 2	Third Trinity 2	Queens'
Caius 2	Trinity Hall 3	Magdalene
Emmanuel 2	First Trinity 3	Downing
Clare 1

Sidney made a fine effort to catch Hall 2, but the latter stayed the best. Caius 2 registered their second bump by vanquishing Pembroke 2 just upon entering the reach. Clare first boat just missed bumping Emmanuel 2 at the Willows. Trinity Hall 3 had to acknowledge defeat to First Trinity 3 at Grassy Corner, and St. Catharine's succumbed to Clare 2 at First Post Corner.

The First Division were sent on their journey at 6-35 in the following order, the brackets denoting the bumps :

Trinity Hall 1	King's	First Trinity 2
First Trinity 1	Caius 1	Lady Margaret 2
Lady Margaret 1	Pembroke 1	Peterhouse
Jesus 1	Selwyn	Trinity Hall 2
Christ's

The head boat was never in danger, and finished more than their distance away, but a great race took place between the Hall and First. Although the latter missed catching, Hall had to row for all they were worth to keep clear, eventually reaching home by a few yards. The Christ's crew continued their upward career by lowering the colours of Jesus at Grassy. Another keen race took place between King's and Caius, the former being defeated when only a short distance from the winning post. Selwyn effected their second victory by overtaking Pembroke at the Gut. The Sandwich boat got close up to Peterhouse, but nothing resulted.

OPENING DAY.

THE main gate of Government House, Ganeshkhind, was appropriately selected as the venue for the opening meet of the above distinguished pack, and in spite of many half-muttered growlings at 5-30 A. M. instead of 6 as in, I believe, former years a large field was present within a few minutes of time to do the Master honour. But from all I gather the few minutes' "law" granted by the gallant Master on this occasion is not likely to be similarly extended in future mornings and those who trust to a like indulgence are likely to be left behind. One of the first things which strikes a man lately arrived from an English hunting field is the needlessly disreputable manner in which we most of us turn ourselves out for a morning's hunting. It would be an insult to a respectable rat-catcher to use the simile of costume often adopted regarding the turn-out which is considered a poor compliment to a Master of Hounds in England. Many men hold that the clothes of a country are good enough for the country one's in, but surely such extravagant untidiness and inappropriateness of vesture as is affected by so many in Indian hunting fields is unnecessary.

However to cut the cackle and come to the hunting; a trifle late Colonel Sheringham moved off to a hillock near the quarters of His Excellency's staff, and at the signal hounds threw themselves gaily up the slope, and after a little doubt settled steadily on what seemed a somewhat stale line and worked it with most commendable perseverance since scent was clearly very bad towards the Railway line. A cast forrard had no satisfactory result and the Master after one more futile effort to pick up the line called hounds off and moved on the Botanical Garden for what was I fancy the feature of the day to some at least—the annual photograph. For which among one's loved ones at home can guess that the prominent position assumed before Mr. Stewart's camera is not invariably the pride of place we affect at the end of a fast 25 miuntes over Deccan's rocks and nullahs? Reputations have at times to be dearly won. If then we can on rare occasions capture them at a considerably reduced rate how foolish to miss the golden opportunity. Having accordingly struck attitudes as near like the pictures in Captain Hayes' books as we can accomplish in the short time at our disposal, a relentless Master jogged on to a sugarcane patch near Aundh. A merry burst of music soon proclaimed a fine and the picture book seat was quickly exchanged for the one which the cruel exigencies of the moment necessitated—not always a completely satisfactory one or sufficient for present requirements. Over the plains towards Pashan hounds raced at a rare pace and reaching the big nullah swung right handed through thick cover and a guava plantation enabled the pack to rather give the field the slip for the nonce as it took a deal of doing. Running with a fine determination hounds tumbled their jack over close to the banks of the Mooia river. Times varied from 15 to 20 minutes, but whatever the accurate period it was a very enjoyable gallop and sent every one home in a good humour.

POLO AT BANGALORE.

A HANDICAP TOURNAMENT.—Mr. Irvine, R. E., Honorary Secretary of the Bangalore Polo Club, has been successful in organising a handicap polo tournament amongst players in the station, which opened on the 26th instant, and although handicapping in a polo tournament may seem somewhat of an innovation, the present competition will no doubt not only make for the good of the game generally, but will cause Bangalore players to give a better account of themselves at the forthcoming tournament for the Cup presented by H. H. the Maharajah of Mysore. Seven teams entered, the 4th Madras Pioneers drawing a bye and some fast although not very high-class play resulted. Nevertheless there is good material in Bangalore, and the representatives of the "City O' Brans" will not disgrace themselves in the big competitions. The following are briefly the details of play up to date. In each case four chuckers were contested, twenty minutes' clear play being allowed. The officers of the "Carabiniers" were "At Home" to their friends on Saturday, the 27th, when the third tie was played.

FIRST TIE.

"The Carabiniers," "A" Team (scratch) vs. "The Carabiniers," "C" Team (+7 goals).

First Chucker.—The scratch team were all over their opponents, penning them throught the chucker and scoring four times, through the agency of Dormer and Swifte "C" Team scored a subsidiary. Score :—"A" Team, 4 goals 1 subsidiary; "C" Team, 7 goals 1 subsidiary.

Second Chucker.—"C" Team defended pluckily, but did not seem to have any attacking power in them and "A" Team out-galloping the receivers of points repeatedly added, two more goals. Score :—"A" Team, 6 goals 1 subsidiary; "C" Team, 7 goals 1 subsidiary.

Third Chucker.—Play was slow on both sides, and a strong wind down the ground made it difficult to steer the ball. Towards the end of the chucker Swifte scored for the scratch side, and two subsidiaries were also added, placing "A" Team ahead. Score :—"A" Team, 7 goals 3 subsidiaries "C" Team 7 goals 1 subsidiary.

Fourth Chucker.—Only a couple of minutes remained for play, out the game was over barring accidents. Dormer scored a goal, and another subsidiary shortly afterwards accrued to the givers of points who won without trouble.

Final score :—"A" Team, 8 goals 4 subsidiaries; "C" Team 7 goals 1 subsidiary. Sides :—

SECOND TIE.

Q. O Sappers and Miners (+ 1 goal) vs. Essex Regiment Team (+ 6 goals).

First Chucker.—The Essex Regiment started with a good deal of dash, Strickland doing well at back, and Captain Churchill travelling fast in front. A subsidiary to each side was all that was scored, although the Sappers were dangerous more than once. Score :—Essex Regiment 6 goals 1 subsidiary; Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 1 goal 1 subsidiary.

Second Chucker.—Shortly after start Loch had the Essex goal at his mercy and easily scored. The play became fast, but nothing more accrued to either side. The superiority of the Sappers was nevertheless apparent. Score :—Essex Regiment 6 goals 1 subsidiary, Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 2 goals 1 subsidiay.

Third Chucker —The pace of the Essex team slackened, and their opponents began to make rings round them. Coming right down the ground at a great pace Marshall scored a good goal, his example being shortly afterwards followed by Wagstaffe. A subsidiary just before the chucker ended, left the game in an interesting state. Score :—Essex Regiment, 6 goals 1 subsidiary; Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 4 goals 2 subsidiaries.

Fourth Chucker.—With two goals to win, the Sappers played for all they were worth, and it was not long before good work between Loch and Marshall resulted in the latter scoring. Two subsidiaries rapidly followed, but time was short and it seemed as though the Essex team would just save the game. A fine run and shot by Loch, however, caused the black flag to be waved, and the Sappers just won by 1 goal and 3 subsidiaries. Final Score :—Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 6 goals 4 subsidiaries; Essex Regiment, 6 goals 1 susidiary. Sides :—

THIRD TIE.

Captain Peel's Team (+5 goals) vs. "The Carabiniers," "B" Team (+4 goals)

First Chucker.—Captain Peel's team pressed and Captain Peel himself quickly scored a goal, followed by a second from the same stick. Play then quickened and amongst other good efforts a fine run by Anketell Jones for the "Carabiniers'" team was noticeable but nothing further was scored. Score :—Captain Peel's Team, 7 goals; "B" Team "Carabiniers," 4 goals.

Second Chucker.—The "Carabiniers" continued to have the worst of it and their opponents added to their already long lead. Captain Peel and Lieutenant Grieve were conspicuous. Score :—Captain Peel's Team, 9 goals 2 subsidiaries; "B Team" "Carabiniers," 4 goals.

Third Chucker.—Play was uninteresting and nothing was added to the score.

Fourth Chucker.—There was only 2¼ minutes for play and nothing worthy of remark was done. The play of the "Carabiners" as a whole was disappointing. Sides :—

THE JOCKEY CLUB AND THE STARTING GATE.

AMONG the important items of business brought up for discussion at the Annual General Meeting of the Jockey Club, held in London on the 8th June, was a proposed new rule relating to the Starting Gate.

The Stewards proposed that New Rule 36 should read as follows :—

"Should the starter consider that through any faulty action of the starting-gate a fair start has been effected, he shall declare it 'no start,' and order the jockeys, by means of a recall flag, to return to the post. The starter's decision on this point shall be final."

(Present Rule 36 to be included in Rule 38.)

The Club would remember that at their last meeting a discussion arose with respect to the starting-gate. No proposal was then brought before the Club to abolish the starting-gate, although it appeared that certain members of the Club had no very exalted opinion of that method of starting, nor had he received any notice that a motion to abolish the starting-gate was to be brought before the Club. At that moment the Rules of Racing distinctly said that all races should be started by a starting-gate and, therefore, he took it that it was the duty of the Stewards to see that this method of starting was made as perfect as possible. The discussion which arose at the last meeting was of great use to the Stewards, and very valuable suggestions were then put forward. It would be noticed that in the new Rule, which the Stewards proposed, the chief point was to throw the responsibility upon the starter of deciding whether the start was a fair one or the reverse. The starter was obviously, he thought, the person in the best position to judge as to the fairness of the start. To assist the starter, there would be a recall flagman, who would be entirely under the direction of the starter, and by means of the recall flag the starter would be able to stop jockeys should he think a fair start had not been effected. It would be made, however, clear to starters that they had no power to declare a start to be no start, except when, owing to the faulty action of the gate, any of the horses were interfered with. The starters would also be requested to make a practice of personally testing the gate at least once before each start. With those precautions he had considerable confidence in saying that the chance of a fiasco, such as they had in the One Thousand Guineas, was extremely remote. He would add that the recall flag had been in practice in the North of England, used by Mr. Willoughby, and he had never had any difficulty. He would move that the new Rule be embodied in the Rules of Racing.

Lord Londonderry inquired where the recall flag was to be.

Mr. Brassey replied that the recall flag was to be entirely different from the old white flag; it was a new institution altogether, and the flagman would be entirely under the direction of the starter, who could put him 100 yards or 200 yards, or as far as he thought necessary in front of the starting-post, so that if the gate should go wrong, and the horses become entangled in the tapes, the starter would raise a little flag and the recall flagman would know that he was to hoist his recall flag, and then in all probability the jockeys would see it, and would be able to return to the post without having run the course.

Mr. Lowther thought that the recall flag ought to be more than 100 yards in front, and asked: Did they mean to confine the operation of the Rule solely to accidents to the gate itself? They did not give discretion to the starter if from any other cause he wished to recall.

Mr. Brassey replied that it was only in the case of faulty action of the gate, and the starter would have no right to say that as tart was not a start if he had himself made a mistake, or for any other cause.

Mr. Lowther said that, as regards the flagman's position, he supposed it would receive consideration.

Mr. Brassey said the object was to leave it entirely to the discretion of the starter, and to put the responsibility entirely upon him. On some courses he might not be able to put it quite so far in front as at others.

Mr. Rose said that at the Wokingham Stakes last year the jockeys jumped forward into the net before the starter had actually pulled the handle, and it was not the fault of the gate. At the time, the gate was in perfect order, and it was the fault of the jockeys jumping into it and interfering with it.

Mr. Brassey stated that the Wokingham Stakes incident last year would come under the new Rule.

Mr. Fitzwilliam inquired if the Stewards had considered the question as to whether the horses ought to be started quite close up to the tapes or a little distance off.

Mr. Brassey replied that the Stewards had discussed that with the starters, and there was a great deal to be said in favour of it possibly, but he thought the general feeling of the Stewards and of the starters was that if the horses were put back a few yards, they were so much more inclined to fidget and the jockeys to try to get the best of each other. He believed this system acted very well in India ; but in America, and also in Australia, the horses had to get up as close as they could to the tapes. The Stewards did not propose at that time to make any alteration in the existing Rules. He would move that New Rule 36, as printed on the paper, be embodied in the Rules of Racing

The motion was put to the meeting, and carried.

ENGLISH CRICKET CHAT.

THERE seems no end to the bad luck that Yorkshire are experiencing at the present time. In addition to the great blow they received through Hirst being injured, Tunnicliffe badly hurt his hand in stopping a ball and will be unable to rejoin the team for at least a week.

That, however, is not the end of their misfortunes. Wanting bowlers as badly as they do it is surely the hardest of hard luck that Jackson should be compelled to stand down owing to an abscess on the foot.

But the crowning misfortune is the indisposition of Lord Hawke. So much depends upon the captain of a side, especially when things are going badly with them, that Yorkshire are to be greatly commiserated with on the latest and greatest of their misfortunes.

Although the season is less than a month old the champions have already suffered three defeats, Sussex being the latest county to cut their comb. All hopes of retaining the lead must now have left them, and while not wishing to be unkind we cannot but say that we are very pleased at the prospect.

The continued superiority of one county over all the others while very gratifying to the supporters of the team in question, cannot fail to have a bad effect on the game generally. A change is absolutely necessary in county cricket as in everything else, and on that ground, therefore, we look complacently on while disaster overtakes the Tykes.

At the present time Middlesex and Sussex stand at the head of affairs, and therefore their meeting at Brighton next week will be looked upon with great interest. In one way it is rather a pity that their first meeting takes place at the seaside town, as with both teams in fine batting trim a definite finish is distinctly problematical.

Fry and Ranji are now batting at the top of their form, and Sussex will be one of the hardest teams to get rid of that any team can possibly encounter.

They still suffer, however, from want of a really good bowler, and although Cox and Relf managed to overthrow the Yorkshire eleven, we doubt their capacity to get rid of a good team for much less than 400 runs on a hard true wicket. Given a good man with the ball we should plump for the seasiders as the coming champions.

Essex have been doing so well of late that the failure to beat Derbyshire owing to rain must have been very aggravating. They had only got 33 runs to get to win, and thanks to a very late start, five minutes was all the time they had to knock them up.

Sewell and the Rev. Gillingham certainly had a try, but in the course of two overs all they could muster was 11 runs, and a draw was the result.

The Peak men are certainly the most unequal lot of fielders we have seen during the present season. They made some terrible mistakes, missing catches that came straight into their hands, but at the same time two members of the team brought off a couple of very difficult catches.

Warren had one on the boundary, which he secured with one hand high up, falling over the ropes in the attempt, while Lawton was responsible for the other—a difficult swerving ball which he had to follow up to secure.

The best man in the team when they occupied the field, however, was Humphries, the wicket-keeper. He stood right up to Bestwick when the latter was bowling some very fast stuff, and in a total of 360 he only allowed two balls to go by him. By the way, I hear there is a chance of him coming south next season.

One of the most pleasing things in connection with Surrey cricket is the return to form shown by Richardson during the past week. His performance against Worcestershire—thirteen wickets for 135 runs—stands out as a great feat, and the large-hearted, hard-working bowler cannot fail to be pleased with himself.

He has worked very hard all the winter through to reduce his bulk, but only with partial success. The fact of the matter is that Richardson is one of those men who actually put on weight by means of hard work.

However, so long as he can get wickets at a no greater cost than ten runs he need not fear anything about his increase in weight. His success, it is hardly necessary to state, is highly popular with the rest of the team.

The appointment of Mr. Walker to the captaincy of the Surrey team is one of the most popular that could possibly be made. He handles his men with care and judgment, and is likely to get the fullest value possible out of them without an effort.

J. T. Hearne is the first bowler of the season to capture his half hundred victims, and, judging by the way in which he is at present performing, he looks like coming out very near the top of the list.

He took twelve wickets in the Leicestershire match for 124 runs, and proved that be the wicket what it may he is still one of the most deadly bowlers in England to face. His length is as good as ever, and he has a way of sending down a ball which it is almost impossible to resist hitting—with fatal results.

He is splendidly backed up in the field by Trott, and it is owing in great measure to the latter's fine work in the slips that Jack Hearne's analysis is as good as it is.

Lancashire's new trundler, Walter Brearley, is said in certain quarters to be a bit of a genius in the way of a fast bowler, but his latest exploits do not make him out to be anything out of the ordinary. We shall have a better opportunity of judging when he comes south.

The death of Robert Thoms at the advanced age of seventy-three removes one of the few remaining links connected with the cricket of a generation ago. Although never a great player he was yet a fine all-round cricketer in his day, but it was as an umpire that he was chiefly known to fame.

He officiated in all the chief matches during his time, and with H. H. Stephenson umpired the first England and Australia match in this country (at the Oval in September, 1880).

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

RANGERS vs. BURN AND CO.—These teams met at Howrah on the 25th ultimo and after rather an uninteresting game the Rangers won by 3 goals to 1. They got going at once and after some passing Whelan headed the ball in. The Engineers were not together and Wood and Kerr each missed shots. Then the visitors ran down once more and Whitie scored with an easy shot. The Rangers' goal was next besieged and a great struggle took place till the interval. On resuming Wood got away for the home team and nearly scored, Templeton saving. The Engineers were playing in better form and Behrends was tested once or twice. After the game had been carried on in midfield for a while the visitors forced a corner, but nothing resulted. A foul by the Howrah men gave the Rangers their third goal, Williams putting the ball through from the penalty kick. The last few minutes of the game the Engineers played hard and H. Bonar succeeded in finding the net. Teams :—

DALHOUSIE vs. K. O. S. B.'s—Played on the Dalhousie ground last Thursday, the home team putting up a feeble display and being beaten by 2 goals to nil. The visitors scored shortly after the start from a penalty kick Some rushes by the Dalhousie men proved fruitless and the Military again got possession and forced a corner. Peake saved, but Byers got the ball and put it through. Just before half time, Byers went lame and had to leave the field. In the second moiety the home team played up but lost many chances owing to poor shooting. Neither team scored and the game ended as above in a win for the Borderers by 2 goals to nil. Teams :—

K. O. S. B.'s—Brocklehurst, goal; Goldie and McDonnell backs; Campbell, Tait, and Bradley, halves; Byers, Kennedy Cassidy, Nelson, and Bruce, forwards

DALHOUSIE.—Peake, goal; Bushby and Margrett, backs; Alexander, Phelps, and Dalling, halves; Echlin, Watts, Williams, Rosser, and Stimson, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. H. Bemfry, C. F. C.

A. AND S. HIGHLANDERS vs. HOWRAH UNITED.—The Highlanders' ground was the venue of this match last Friday, and the visitors were defeated by 3 goals to 1. The home team got the ball at the start and play was confined to the Howrah half; Pollock scored their first goal and two more were added by Montgomery and Lockhart, the Highlander; keeping up an incessant bombardment. In the second has Howrah had to play a man short, Hart having put his elbow out But they played up well and just before time Curtis put on their only goal. Teams :—

93RD HIGHLANDERS.—Coventry, goal; Auchinvole and Silcock, backs; McLean, McGowan, and Mowatt, half-backs; Miller, Montgomery, Quinn, Lockhart, and Pollock, forwards.

HOWRAH UNITED.—A. Bennett, goal; F. Bennett and H. Bennett, backs; Morrow, H. Osborne, and E. Osborne, half-backs; Ferrier, Curtis, W. Smith, Jackson, and Hart, forwards.

CALCUTTA vs. DALHOUSIE.—On their own ground last Saturday Calcutta beat Dalhousie by 3 goals to 2. The home team had a strong combination out and went away pressing hard. Cooper got through after a short time but they had not the lead long, for the visitors rushed down and Watts equalised. No further scoring took place during the first half, but on resuming Calcutta at once assumed the offensive but were met with a strong defence. Then the visitors got going once more and Johnson scored a second goal. Excitement was very high, and the Calcutta halves playing with judgment gave their forwards every opportunity. Fyfe at last finding the net. They continued their attack and Fyfe scored once more. The Dalhousie men put on a spurt and were pressing hard when time was called but were unable to score. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Buckley, goal; Dennis and Todd, backs; Walker, Crawford, and Maunder, half-backs; Cooper, H. Sherman, Fyfe, V. Sherman, and Stewart, forwards.

DALHOUSIE.—Piper, goal; Wade and Bushby, backs; Williams, Phelps, and Balling, half-backs; Echlin Rosser, Watts, Johnson, and Stimson, forwards.

Referee.—R. Rope, C. F. C.

A. AND S. HIGHLANDERS vs. K. O. S. B.'s—Played on the Highlanders' ground on the 27th ultimo, the home team proving victorious by 3 goals to nil. The visitors were without Byers and felt his loss keenly. The Highlanders opened and play ruled very even throughout the first half, the interval arriving pointless. But on crossing over the home team had the best of matters and doing all the attacking scored three goals, Quinn, McLean, and McGowan being credited with the points.

Y. M. C. A. vs. BURN AND CO.—These teams met on the Association ground and the game resulted in a win for the home team by 2 goals to nil. The Young Men were the first to get going and a neat bit of passing between Yackjee, Simmons, and Apcar, resulted in Apcar scoring. Burns tried hard but could not score and half time arrived with the Young Men leading. In the second half J. Bonar and Rosser were ordered off the field for mistaking the game for a free fight—a disgraceful performance. The home team attacked and Simmons, who played a good game throughout, scored a second goal. Burn and Co. were playing hard but could not break the Association defence. Teams :—

Y. M. C. A.—Williams, goal; Baldwin and Rosser, backs; Cooper, Butler, and Power, half-backs; Yackjee, Simmons, Brown, Apcar, and Crow, forwards.

BURN AND Co.—Taylor, goal; Donnithorne and McKerron, backs; Morris, Sinclair, and Cochrane, half-backs; Freeman, Wood, Kerr, J. Bonar, and H Bonar, forwards.

Referee—Mr A. O. Henry.

HOWRAH vs. RANGERS.—The Rangers gained another victory at Howrah last Saturday beating the home team by 2 goals to nil. Howrah were without E. Osborne and McLeod, while the visitors played Clerici instead of Anderson. The Rangers had all the best of the first half and scored two goals in great style, Whitie and Whelan being responsible. In the second half Howrah did all the attacking but in spite of many attempts were unable to score. Teams :—

RANGERS.—Behrend, goal; Templeton and Clerici, backs; Boilard, Lees, and O'Laughlin, half-backs; McKenna, Whitie, Whelan, Williams, and Russell, forwards.

HOWRAH.—A Bennett, goal; F. Bennett and H. Bennett, backs; Morrow, H. Osborne, and Curtis, half-backs; J. Smith, Grieff, W. Smith, Jackson, and Ferrier, forwards.

Y. M. C. A vs K. O. S. B's.—These teams met on the Association ground on Monday, the Borderers winning by three goals to nil. Both teams played very hard during the first half but neither could score and the interval arrived nothing having been recorded. On resuming the Young Men went to pieces and, despite the efforts of Crow and Cooper the Borderers put on three goals. Kennedy drew first blood taking advantage of a chance given him by Baldwin: they forced matters and Walls found the net after a nice piece of passing by Cassidy and Kennedy. Williams made some clever saves but was beaten a third time, Walls again scoring. Teams :—

Y. M. C. A.—Williams, goal; Baldwin and Yackjee, backs; Cooper, Rosser and Power, half-backs; Crow, Simmons, Apcar, Browne and Crow, forwards.

K. O. S. B.—Brocklehurst, goal; McDonald and Gouldie, backs; Campbell, Stewart and Bradley, half-backs; Cassedy, Kennedy, Walls, Bruce and Nielson, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Flatnauer, Dalhousie.

A. & S. HIGHLANDERS vs. DALHOUSIE.—A huge crowd assembled to witness the return match between these teams played on the Dalhousie ground on Tuesday. In the first match Dalhousie had checked the victorious career of the Highlanders and Tuesday's match was looked forward to with great interest. The home team were without three good men and were ultimately beaten by two goals to one. The 93rd were the first to attack and after a few minutes' play Lockhart headed in. They continued to press and bombarded the home goal, but Peake was in great form and saved in fine style. Watts got away once or twice but to do purpose and just before half time Montgomery scored for the Highlanders. On changing ends the Dalhousie men played hard and even play followed till the 93rd forced a corner. Rosser got possession from the kick and running down beat Coventry. The Highlanders were pressing when time was called, but no further scoring had taken place.

93RD HIGHLANDERS.—Coventry, goal; Wallace and Silcock, backs; Mowat, McGovan, McLean, half-backs; Hogg, Montgomery, Quin, Pollock, Lockhart, forwards.

DALHOUSIE F. C.—Peake, goal; Wade and Bushby, backs; Dalling, Wallace, Phelps, half-backs; Smith, Rosser, Watts, Johnson, Echlin, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Percy Willder.

BURN & Co. vs. 64TH B. F. A.—This match played at Howrah on the 30th instant resulted in a draw of three goals all. The Engineers got away and Kerr drew first blood, but the Gunners came down and forced a corner from which Wratten equalised. Burn and Co. got going again and Wood put on a second goal. The 64th were not to be beaten and Shirt equalised matters. On resuming after half time the military reurned to the attack and Shirt scored a third goal. Burn and Co. played hard till they had drawn level, Sinclair finding the net. No further scoring took place, the game ending in a draw. Teams :—

BURN'S A. C.—Taylor, goal; Donnithorne and McKerron, backs; McFadyen, Sinclair and Cochrone, halves; Freeman, H. Bonar, Wood, J. Bonar and Kerr, forwards.

64TH R. F. A.—Quin, goal; Prince and Donnelly, backs; Lockens, Corby and Harrison, halves; Wratten, Shirt, Lieutenant Shaw, Nicoll and Dodds, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Ribbins, Howrah United.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE defeat of Calcutta by the 93rd Highlanders in the return match between the two teams extinguished any chances the premier Civilian Club may have possessed of heading the League table at the close of the competition and now that the first and second positions are assured public interest in the League matches shows unmistakeable signs of being on the wane. This is, however, only temporary, as when the struggle for the Shield commences there will be no lack of keenness on the part of players or spectators.

An incessant drizzling rain, a slippery ground and a wet heavy ball were the depressing conditions under which the Calcutta and 93rd Highlanders' match was played, but, despite these drawbacks, there was a solid phalanx of spectators all round the ground testifying to the interest taken in the meeting of these two teams With the exception that Gahan again filled Gillespie's place the Calcutta eleven was at full strength as was the case also with their opponents whose splendid condition stood them in good stead on the heavy going. The play during the first half was very even, each side in turn attacking, but the shooting in consequence of the wet ball was very erratic, and the efforts of the Calcutta forwards were repeatedly frustrated by the sound defence of the home backs. Cooper, Fyfe, and the younger Sherman worked hard and continuously, the latter especially being noticeable on several occasions for clever foot work and some well-placed centres. Eventually from a throw in by Wallace, the military forwards dribbled down and from some scrambling play on the left wing Montgomery sent in a cross shot which Buckley should have had no difficulty in saving, but he endeavoured to fist out, instead of handling, and missed, and as no further score took place before the interval the Fort team led by 1 goal to nil.

Shortly after the restart Cooper obtained possession from Crawford and running down passed to Fyfe, who was badly fouled and from the ensuing penalty Cooper brought the scores level. Immediately afterwards, however, the Highlanders' forwards ran down in a body and after a very feeble resistance on the part of the visitors' backs Quin beat Buckley and put his side a goal ahead. Calcutta then pulled themselves together and it was with difficulty that Coventry successfully dealt with shots from Maunder and Stewart, the latter a particularly good one from the touch line. Hereabouts the "Red Shirts" were having rather the better of the game, but the Fort custodian was in fine form and repulsed a lovely shot by the younger Sherman in great style. Another score was shortly forthcoming as the 93rd left wing combined prettily and Hogg, with a hard shot, put the third and last goal to the credit of his side.

The winners were undoubtedly greatly assisted in their victory by the conditions under which the game was played, but at the same time there is no question as to their being the better team. Their defence in which Wallace, Coventry and especially Mowatt were very conspicuous, was noticeable for its soundness and for the accuracy with which the backs fed their front rank. Pollock and Quin were the pick of the forwards, and these two men combined very prettily and with great effect. For Calcutta Buckley was not at his best and the forwards were disappointing.

Cooper worked hard, but was too well watched, and Fyfe made several mistakes. Stewart showed pace, but was outweighted. Of the half backs Walker played better than we have yet seen him, but Maunder showed a falling off, and Crawford was rather too slow. Todd as usual was very sound and Gahan improved on his display at Dum-Dum.

A more dispiriting display than that between Dalhousie and the K.O.S.B. it would be difficult to imagine, and the sultriness of the weather cannot be held entirely accountable for the absolute lack of energy shown by the Trades' team. For some unaccountable reason the entire formation of the side was altered and as a reshuffling of position took place on more than one occasion during the progress of the game it was not surprising that the team was at sixes and sevens. Four fouls in the first five minutes of the game from the third of which Byers scored was a rather tame beginning. Rosser and Watts, however, made desperate efforts to equalise, but these were repeatedly spoilt by Echlin, who was playing a wretchedly poor game. Before the end of the first half Cassidy scored the second goal and he should have added to this shortly afterwards but for his weakness for playing to the gallery. After the interval the Dum-Dum team simply made rings round their opponents, but thanks to the excellent goal-keeping of Peake and the untiring defence of Bushby they were unable to score and so left the field victors by 2 goals to love.

Peake, Bushby and Rosser appeared to be the only members of the Dalhousie eleven who were capable of "raising a gallop" and it was difficult to account for the inclusion of Alexander, who was useless throughout. Byers was playing well for the winners before he was injured and Bruce was conspicuous on one or two occasions, but the whole side took matters far too easily.

The meeting of the Y. M. C. A. and Burn's, which took place on the ground of the first-named club, was unfortunately marred by a most regrettable exhibition of temper on the part of two of the players which the Referee considered sufficiently serious to necessitate his ordering them both off the field and the matter is to be reported to the authorities. Foul play is undoubtedly very prevalent at the present time and it therefore behoves all Referees to deal with the evil with a strong hand. Penalty kicks are not sufficient punishment for deliberate and repeated foul play and therefore when a player is known, as are several of them, to persistently indulge in these tactics the football arena should be cleared of his presence.

To return to the game between the Y M. C. A. and Burn's the most noticeable absentee was Dodds, the Burns custodian, for whom Taylor was but a poor substitute. The Young Men were the better team, but they were only able to win by 2—0, a result which was largely due to the fine defence of Sinclair and Donnithorne. Apcar and Simmons, who scored the points, were very prominent for the winners as also was Yackjee, while Wood, the Burn's centre forward, was responsible for several tricky individual runs.

The return match between the League Champions of 1902 and the holders of the Shield drew an enormous crowd to the Highlanders' ground on Saturday last and a very even game was witnessed during the initial half, but after the resumption a somewhat lucky goal from McGovan appeared to dishearten the Borderers and infuse energy into their opponents with the result that the Fort team added two more goals during this period and so ran out winners by 3—0. Mowatt and McGovan played an exceptionally fine game for the 93rd, and it was due to their vigilance that Cassidy and his confréres got such few chances of scoring. On the other hand several promising efforts by the Highlanders' front rank were spoilt by Lockhart, who was penalised on three occasions for offside. Quin played a pretty game and scored two of the goals and Hogg and Montgomery proved useful, but the latter is inclined to be slow and is too fond of "tricks." Cassidy worked hard for the King's Own as did Kennedy, but the forwards all indulge in far too much passing without gaining ground.

Calcutta had a very near shave of being beaten by Dalhousie on Saturday last, as after a really good exhibition of football and a most exciting game, the premier club only just scored the winning point a few minutes before the call of time. Dalhousie were without Peake, which was a severe loss, and Dennis played back in place of Gahan on the Calcutta side It was a fast game from the start and each side pressed in turn, but it fell to the lot of the younger Sherman, who fully maintained his previous good form, to draw first blood for the "Red Shirts" as he headed through from a centre by Stewart. Dalhousie, however, equalised shortly afterwards from a mêlée in front of the Calcutta goal and thus the score stood at one goal all at half time. After the restart the next point went to Dalhousie and matters looked ominous for the home team, but the elder Sherman, after having played considerably under his form, came out with one of his brilliant shots and scored a beautiful goal from near the 25 line. This was shortly added to by a hard shot from Cooper, which gave his side the victory although a draw would have more truly represented the trend of the game. Dennis was a distinct improvement on Gahan at back, but the reshuffling of the forwards is I think a mistake.

NOTES ON THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP.

THIS week's mail papers bring us full details of this competition at Prestwick, and it is clear that the meeting was no less brilliantly successful throughout than the Amateur event at Muirfield a month previously. It opened with the professional Golfing Association's match between England and Scotland in which contrary to all expectation the latter proved successful halving the singles in which James Braid inflicted a severe defeat upon Harry Vardon, and winning the foursome by a single point after a great struggle; considering that Scotland lacked the services of such representative golfers as Andrew Kirkaldy, Archie Simpson, Willie Auchterlonie and A. H. Scott, her success against the very powerful English team must have come as a welcome surprise to north country golfers. Next came the contest for the blue riband itself, Harry Vardon starting favourite in spite of his recent defeat at the hands of Braid, with Taylor, Herd, Braid and in a less degree Tom Vardon and Jack White most fancied of the other professionals, and Messrs Maxwell and Hilton alone among the amateurs being regarded as having any chance in the lamented absence of Mr. John Ball. To cut a long story short it once more proved to be a case of Vardon first and the rest no where or rather of Vardons first and second. Harry Vardon won his fourth championship by six strokes with rounds of 73, 77, 72, and 78; he led by four strokes at the end of the first day's play, and after adding a 72—a fresh record—to his total of 150 contented himself with a steady 78 for his final round When the Championship was last held at Prestwick in 1898 Harry Vardon won by a single stroke from Willie Park on an aggregate score of 307, and it was Considered and rightly that the form shown had never been surpassed in a championship contest: this year he does 300, and could almost certainly have improved on his figures in the last round if necessary, while his second was debited with three unnecessary strokes by real bad luck at the seventeenth hole. Haskell balls no doubt make some difference—but what of the man himself—"not a man at a' just a d—d "automaton" as Andrew Kirkaldy once called him—but, even with all due reverence to young Tom Morris, without a doubt the finest golfer of all time. Tom Vardon's success in running second to his brother will have been very popular too, and to none more welcome than to one who can look back on many a good game with the present Sandwich professor when he was working under George Low at St. Ann's some ten or twelve years ago. His particular rival Jack White of North Berwick, Seaford and Sanningdale came out third, a proud position and one which he has occupied before, and then we have, two more of the famous quartette in Herd and Braid, and then three more places down, Taylor. It is a wonderful thing when one thinks what a small thing a stroke at golf may be to see how the cracks all of them and almost without exception come out on top. The Amateur contingent did not show up at all well. Mr. Maxwell leading off with 82 and 84, very poor rounds for him: he pulled himself together on the second day with two splendid serves of 74, but it was too late, and he could not get nearer than 14th Mr. Hilton finished up 27th with an aggregate of 324, 15 strokes worse than in 1898 when he was third to Vardon and Park: and the rest were literally nowhere. Like or even more than several others 1903 will have every claim to be known as Vardon's year.

SOUTH INDIA A. A. COMPETITION.

First Day, Thursday, 25th June 1903.

BOXING has been added to the public sports given by the South India Athletic Association and a competition opened on the 25th ultimo, the first night's proceedings proving a great success. The entries are restricted to British Troops and Volunteers. The competitors comprise men from the Leicestershire Regiment and the Durhams and a couple of Artillerymen. The auxiliary forces are represented by only one man, C. D'Costa, who proved himself very fit. Some competitors entered too late to be included in the tournament, but the Association was offered a special prize of Rs. 50 for which they will compete. There was a good attendance and proceedings were under the patronage of Major General Sir Norman Stewart, Bart., C.B. Commanding Madras District. Lieutenant R. St. C. Houston, A. V. D., acted as Referee, Lieutenants J. H. O Groves, R. G. A., and C. T. M. Hare, 1st Leicestershire Regiment, as Judges, Mr. J. Duggan as Time-keeper, and Sergeant-Major Gates, of the 52nd Co., R. G. A., as Master of Ceremonies. Details:—

FEATHER WEIGHTS UP TO 9ST.

Vol. C. D'Costa M. V. G., beat Drummer Walker, 1st Leicester Regiment.

The volunteer was very quick and in spite of being lighter than his opponent was not to be beaten. The first round was very even but D'Costa had the best of the second and third bouts and was declared winner on points.—

LIGHT WEIGHTS UP TO 10ST.

Pte. Murphy beat Pte. Wilks, 1st Leicestershire Regt.

Murphy was heavier than Wilks and rushed his man, having the best of matters. Both fought well, but at the end of the three rounds Murphy was declared the winner.

Pte. Hayward beat Pte. Bown, 1st Leicestershire Regt.

This proved a very even and interesting fight. Hayward tried to rush his opponent but without much success The first two rounds were very level and at the end of the third the issue was still doubtful, so an extra round was fought in which Hayward obtained the verdict.

Sergt. Bown beat Pte. Bennett., 1st Leicestershire Regt.

Bown had the best of it all through quite outclassing Bennett, and displaying good training and science. Bennett got in some hard blows but Bown always got in a good return and leading throughout was declared winner.

Second Day, Friday, 26th June 1903.

The proceedings on the second day were interesting as the following results will show :—

LIGHT WEIGHTS.

Pte. Murphy beat Pte. Hayward, 1st Leicestershire Regt.

Hayward had the best of the first round, but in the second round he lost his head and Murphy sent in a hard one which knocked his opponent out.

Lce.-Corpl. Cunningham beat Sergt. Bown, 1st Leicestershire Regt.

Bown got the better of the opening exchanges, but a heavy left hander from Cunningham floored him, but he was soon up again. In the second round Cunningham got in a couple of hard ones. Bown got to close quarters in the last round, but Cunningham was not to be beaten and got the verdict.

MIDDLE WEIGHTS.

Pte. Bailey beat Pte. Geary. 1st Leicestershire Regt. Wild and furious fighting took place, clinching being frequent. Very little science was displayed, Bailey's weight helping him to win.

Dr. Thomson, 35th Batter, R. T. A., beat Bmbdr. Gibson, 12th Batter, R. T. A.

Hard fighting took place Gibson being quick, but Thomson having the advantage of weight. The second round was mostly in favour of Thomson, but Gibson got in a hard one at the close of the round. At the end of the third round each man had 12 points. The verdict was given to Thomson.

Swimming.

CALCUTTA SWIMMING CLUB.

Friday, 26th June 1903.

THE Final Heat of the Four Lengths Handicap was contested this evening. In the absence of Mr. H. S. Harvey Mr. G. Brown was permitted to swim in the Final by virtue of his right as fastest loser in the preliminary heats. The race was well fought out, Kennedy securing first honours by 2 secs. from Govan, with Brown, who swam splendidly, a good third and Remfry only an inch behind. The following were the times :—

		Start.	Nett Time.
1	K. M. Kennedy ...	20 secs.	1 min. 58 sec.
2	W. Govan ...	25 "	2 min. 5 "
3	G. Brown ...	9 "	1 min. 50½ "
4	H. G. Remfry ...	27 "	2 min. 9 "

Mr. Batbo acted as Judge and Mr Henderson as starter.

The next event will be a six lengths handicap on Friday, 10th July.

INDIAN BRANCH OF THE SOCIETY FOR THE PROTECTION OF BIRDS.

REPORT—1ST MAY 1903.

THE Society for the Protection of Birds has been called into existence by the pitiless destruction which has for long past been carried on over the whole world. Hundreds of thousands of birds have been sacrificed in the interests of fashion and commerce, under circumstances that must arouse the sympathy of the most hard-hearted and unsentimental. The actual wearing of birds' feathers, or the skins of animals, would be a matter of comparatively small moment, were the fashion kept within reasonable limits, and were the trade carried on with some conception of the laws of humanity. Unfortunately from the desire for gain on the one hand, and for birds' plumes on the other, many creatures not only beautiful, but of vast importance from the agriculturists' point of view, have been ruthlessly slaughtered—in only too many cases under circumstances of revolting cruelty.

The Indian branch was started on 1st March 1901, by the present Honorary Secretary, at the pressing request of the parent society. As was pointed out at the time, it is impossible for the ordinary Englishman in India to give anything like sufficient leisure to secretarint work of this kind. The Honorary Secretary begs therefore that the various subscribers and others will read this Report with lenient eyes, dwelling rather on what has been accomplished, than on what has been left undone.

Before recounting the details of the Society's efforts, the Honorary Secretary wishes to record most gratefully the immense help given him by Mr. E Comber and Mr. Spence of Bombay, not only since the inception of the "Branch," but during his year's furlough. Without their ungrudging aid, the movement must have collapsed.

Thanks are also due to the Editors of the Indian Field, the Indian Sporting Times, the Asian, and the Indian Daily Telegraph, for the support they have always rendered by lending their columns to the publication of the views of the Society, and for their kindness in obtaining and forwarding information on important questions.

As regards the work of the branch during the past two years, it may be briefly stated to have been satisfactory. First and foremost, a "Bill" has been passed by the Supreme Government, prohibiting the export of birds' skins and feathers, save for, and by, scientific collectors and naturalists.

In November, 1900, the Honorary Secretary, with the aid of numerous members of the Society, drew up a Report at the instance of the Government of the United Provinces, who wished to collect facts for the Legislative Council to work upon, in which this particular manner of meeting the depredations of plume-hunters was advocated.

The Hon Sir Allan Arthur, moreover, kindly received a letter, drawn up by the Honorary Secretary and signed by over sixty Lucknow residents. In it was pointed out the destruction of game and birds in Lucknow.

On H. E. the Victory's visit to Burma strong representations were made by those in Rangoon interested in the matter, and there seems but little doubt that it is the combined efforts of the various Societies for the protection of game and birds that have caused the authorities to examine the question so closely

That matters are not quite in the parlous state that they were some years ago, is proved by the flourishing existence of several energetic Societies. Of these the Nilgiri Game and Fish Preservation Association has done wonders, not only in improving the conditions that existed in the hills of Southern India, but in stirring up public opinion generally on the subject. That their sympathies are not merely confined to game is evident from the most generous donation of Rs. 50 which was voted to the Indian Branch Society for the Protection of Birds.

Mr. Hadfield, the Honorary Secretary, has kindly forwarded copies of the "Rules" of the Association, and of the Madras Act of 1879. It is to be regretted that section 4 of this Act does not apparently include animal, bird, or fish, other than those "useful for food," and we would draw the attention of the Association to the fact in view of its being remedied. Mysore also is fortunate in having a Game and Fish Preservation Association. Through the kindness of the Honourary Secretary, Mr. Thos Hunt, we have received "Regulation No. 11 of 1901 of the Mysore Government. Though too long to quote, it is "a Regulation to prevent the indiscriminate destruction of wild animals and birds and to provide for the protection of Game and Fish in Mysore."

The statistics of the Association's effort are excellent and show at once the need for such agencies and the usefulness of their work. At the same time it is to be feared that not only in Mysore, but in Hyderabad where most excellent and stringent (on paper) protection laws has been passed, they are administered almost entirely with regard to the European sportman. The native shikari and meat-hunter are, as often as not, entirely unmolested, more particularly if a little bakshish can be squeezed out of them by the forest guard or police. While it is perfectly right that any European—should he trangress the game laws—be promptly brought to account, it is useless to legislate, unless some restriction is placed upon the professional hunter.

In Kashmir the careful preservation of game has prevented that country from being shot out as was quickly being done. It is a difficult matter, however, to stop "snow driving" in the winter. All those who know the "hills" in winter, realise the terribly destructive waste caused by these drives.

Numerous Municipalities have passed local bye-laws to protect the fauna—more especially during the breeding season—but it is to be feared that they are in most cases a dead letter. In the lower Himalayas in and around the various cantonments, shooting is prohibited between 15th March and 10th September Nevertheless, throughout the summer, pheasants and partridges are shot on their nests by the natives, and sold in the barracks.

The native offender is rarely caught. He is far too careful. If he is detected, the result in nine cases out of ten is a hopelessly inadequate fine. The difficulty of imposing a suitable punishment is admitted. When only an occasional delinquent is caught it means that numbers are escaping detection. Were several offenders detected and punished by a sharp fine or imprisonment it might do good, but nothing that can be inflicted in an occasional instance will be sufficient to deter others from running the (practically non-existent) risk.

The Calcutta sporting papers have called attention to the "Traffic in Trophies," and "Personally-Conducted Sport." Into the ethics of the latter we not enter, but as regards the former, there is only too much reason to fear that certain Europeans, probably cold weather tourists, furnish the market for these goods. The subject is one that demands more space than can be allotted to it here, beyond remarking that it is one that undoubtedly calls for registration.

The authorities of the Bombay Presidency have also begun to do their share towards protection, and with a Viceroy who has shown so much practical sympathy as Lord Curzon, it is not without hope that we continue to press forward our petition for still more restriction to be imposed on ignorant and wanton slaughter.

In so doing we are not animated by any desire to prevent the native from enjoying his rights. Rather, on the other hand, will a careful protection of many insectivorous birds prove a blessing to the agriculturist. Fortunately the average Indian—other than the professional hunter and certain wandering tribes—molests birds but little. To this has been due the comparative immunity enjoyed by our fauna. But, though the higher castes are true vegetarians, the lower classes, and of course Mahomedans and Christians will all eat meat if they can get it. Thus a demand for game (birds and animals) is created, which has been met in places with a zeal totally oblivious of the harm that wanton destruction causes.

Quite apart from mere sentiment, and from a desire on the part of the sportsman to preserve game for his own enjoyment, it is absolutely essential that destruction should not proceed beyond reasonable bounds.

A certain gentleman, well known throughout India as a naturalist and "great game" shot, informed the Honorary Secretary some time ago that, while before the late famine in the Central Provinces, he had knowledge of two man-eating tigers in his district, towards the end of the distress the number had increased to no less than seven. This he attributed to the terrible destruction by every shikari of deer, antelope, and pig, the natural prey of the great felidae. Water was so scarce that any small pool was safe to attract the thirsty animals where they were immediately shot irrespective of age or sex. The leopards and tigers being without their usual food took to man-eating. This may be an exceptional locality, but we think it shows at any rate one risk attendent on excessive slaughter.

In the Field of the 14th February, 1903, notice was given to an issue of the Khedivial Agricultural Society in which attention was called apparently none too soon, to the great diminution in the number of useful birds in the neighbourhood of Cairo. The writer (Dr. Innes) tells of the almost total extermination of the buff-backed heron (Ardea bubulcus) which is more commonly known as the cattle egret from its habit of attending the herds that wander over the plains. In this connection it may be mentioned that the only asuthenticated British-killed specimen was "shot (in 1805) while following some cowe and picking up insects."

Birds of this species follow the plough and pick up mole-crickets and larvæ. Capt. Shelley says that they cause "great havoc among the locusts and other insects."

They were so common in the past, and did so much good, that many travellers confounded them with the sacred ibis. Dr. Innes attributes the reduction in the numbers of this useful bird to "so-called sportsmen, who kill for the sake of killing." He also points out that, unless a stop be put to reckless shooting, so as to allow the birds to increase, it will be necessary to take steps involving considerable expense, for the destruction of injurious insects.

Many more instances could be given of the benefit of certain birds and animals, and of the injurious effects likely to result from their destruction.

The Government has appointed a special entomologist to watch over the interests of the agriculturist and the planter and doubtless he will be able shortly to give much valuable information as to the action of birds in keeping down destructive insect plagues.

A glance at the balance sheet will show a considerable amount in hand. The reason for this is that, during the absence of the Honorary Secretary, the expenses were very small, while on the other hand, the donation from the Nilgiri Association considerably swelled the funds.

The Honorary Secretary proposes to publish pamphlets during the year dealing with the protection of birds and game. Furthermore he is making arrangements to supply gratis, "Bird Notes and News" to all annual subscribers of Rs. 2 and upwards, and to all Life members.

The Honorary Secretary wishes to point out that to do this will entail considerable outlay, and he appeals to those who take an interest in the Fauna of India, to aid by sending their subscriptions, however small, and by inducing their friends to become members. Furthermore, numerous subscribers have not sent their subscription for the past year, in some cases for the past two years.

It is doubtless not the amount that is the cause, but the little trouble that must be incurred in sending it. Will those who have so kindly supported the Society's efforts in the past, continue their aid? An appeal is especially made to the native nobility and gentry. Their feelings and religious predilections are in favour of the protection of animal life. Yet but few of their names appear on the list. Money is wanted for publishing advertising, postage, and for the usual expenses attendant on carrying on a work of this kind. It was found that a large number of persons were deterred by the idea that the Society looked askance at followers of Sport and Natural History, and it has been no easy matter to eradicate this impression.

The only rules that are binding on members are :—

(i) That they shall discourage the wanton destruction of birds (and animals) and interest themselves generally in their protection.

(ii) That they shall refrain from wearing the feathers of any bird not killed for food, the Ostrich only excepted.

(iii) That they shall endeavour to recognise fully the breeding seasons of the various species and refrain from sport at those times. (This is not intended to prohibit naturalists from indulging in their several pursuits, but it is taken for granted that their innate sense of what is right and proper will cause them to act with moderation.)

(iv) That they shall endeavour to act as becomes true sportsmen and lovers of nature and to induce others to do the same.

MEMBERS.

Any person may become a member of the Society, on paying the sum of two annas as registration fee and agreeing to the object of the Society as stated in the rules.

ASSOCIATES.

Members may become Associates of the Society on agreeing to pay one rupee or more annually, and Life Associates, a donation of one gold mohur.

Associates who subscribe five rupees and upwards annually and donors of five gold mohurs, will receive a copy of each new publication as issued.

Subscribers of one gold mohur annually will be designated Fellows.

It is to be hoped that all sportsmen, naturalists, and lovers of birds and animal life, will be induced to lend their influence and financial aid—the smallest subscription and donation—to enable the Society to defray the few necessary expenses.

The number of letters and communications that have to be written, before individuals make up their minds to join, is very great, and numbers of circulars and letters have to be despatched to which no answer is vouchsafed. Such work should really be carried out by a clerk, but until further funds are forthcoming, it is impossible to employ one. In the meanwhile every advantage possible must be taken of the means at our disposal.

It is to be hoped that those who had supported the Society this year will not only not withdraw their aid, but will endeavour to further its aims and objects by inducing others to join. The Society for the Protection of Birds, which in India also includes wild animals generally, does not propagate the views of a few faddists, but endeavours to prevent by reasonable means the extermination or undue diminution of our Indian fauna.

Subscriptions and donations may be paid to the Honorary Secretary.

"LAWN TENNIS AT HOME AND ABROAD."

THE appearance of a book bearing this comprehensive title reminds us that the most popular of outdoor games has lived down competition that more than once threatened to submerge it or drive it into obscurity. At the height of its popularity came the sudden discovery that the bicycle was a means of progression of which men of the better classes might make use equally with city clerks and shop boys; and lawn tennis lost the full devotion of some faithful adherents who had, theretofore, known no other love: then ladies took to the bicycle and lawn tennis suffered still more. The spread of golf affected the game not a little, but it has survived the rivalry of golf; the croquet revival, though not of so temporary a character as some ventured to predict, drew away some of the less ardent, or less successful, tennis players; but on the whole the position of lawn tennis is to-day stronger than ever. Its robust constitution is proved by the readiness with which it has lent itself to transplantation; football and cricket have been taken up by the select few in large towns in France and Germany: polo has caught on a necessarily more select few in France, Spain, and the United States; but no game has found such catholic acceptance among foreigners of active habit as lawn tennis. We frankly admit that until we read the book so ably edited by Mr. Wallis Myers we did not know how widely lawn tennis had been taken up by continental peoples or how strong the hold it has taken upon their affections. The tournament held at Homburg during the height of the season of that popular resort is perhaps the most eloquent proof of the cosmopolitan nature of the game to-day; the British visitor may have to face a French player in the first round, a Dutchman in the second and an Italian in the third. The King of Portugal is an enthusiastic player and many of his subjects are keen about the game. Mr G. W. Hillyard speaks with enthusiasm of the courts at the Cascacs Club near Lisbon; his visit thereto makes him deplore the backwardness of players at home in this respect. In Sweden the game flourishes under the patronage of the Crown Prince, and it is equally strong in Switzerland: indeed the Open Swiss Championships bring together as various an assemblage of nationalities as the Homburg tournament: Mr. R. B. Hough, who has won this championship on four different occasions, says that in 1898 he had to play, at Chateau d'Oex near Balle an American, a Frenchman, a Swiss, an Italian and an Austrian one after the other in successive rounds!

American players have come much to the front during comparatively recent years: a fact which may in some measure be due to the establishment of the Interscholastic Association in 1891, whereby recruits to the lawn tennis ground are "caught young" and rising talent is fostered, but in still greater degree, we imagine, to that scrupulous attention to minutiæ which distingusshes the American enthusiast in any game to which he devotes his attention. As proof of this we remember Mr. Dwight Davis on his visit to Wimbledon, resorting to one of the corner courts with a friend to practice the peculiar stroke for which he was so famous. For fully twenty minutes the friend "served" balls which Mr. Dwight Davis returned with that stroke and none other. Messrs. Davis and Holcombe Ward, it may be noted, held the Doubles Championship of the United States for the three years, 1899-1901, until beaten by the brothers Doherty in 1902 at Newport. They take their tennis very seriously in the States, every year the United States National Lawn Tennis Association appoints a committee of three to draw up what is called the "Rank List:" this list contains the names of thirty or forty players in order of merit as adjudged by the committee and a place among the first ten is held a great distinction. Naturally, in a country where feeling runs so high on the game, a place on that committee is not a bed of roses; and the three, we gather, have abundant opportunity to learn the fullness of the truth concerning the impossibility of pleasing everybody. The keenness of the best American players is best shown perhaps by the fact that men travel from Chicago, 1,000 miles, and even from California, 3,000 miles to take part in the Western Championship Tournament in New York.

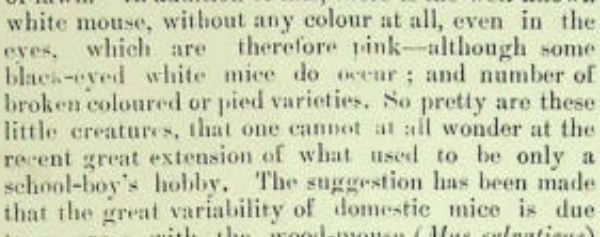
Reference to the American Interscholastic Association for Lawn Tennis suggests a curious point in connection with the game as played in England. At few, very few, of our public schools, and large schools other than public schools, is lawn tennis encouraged: few indeed offer any facilities in the shape of grounds. At small private schools we do find tennis courts, but these exist as the alternative to the cricket grounds which would be of little use to a school numbering fifteen or twenty boys; but by no stretch of meaning can the term "school game" be applied to it. The young tennis player serves his apprenticeship on the courts at home; it is essentially a holiday game for him, and he has seldom those opportunities for regular practice throughout the summer which make for expertness until he go to the University or starts life in business: in which latter case, if his tastes point tennis-ward he takes care to establish himself in "diggings" within reach of a club ground where he can get his game regularly in the evening. If it be desirable that Englishmen should hold their own in International Lawn Tennis, and success in Open Championships becomes more difficult of attainment and therefore more envaible every year, by reason of the increasing popularity of the game, then surely it were wise to take measures whereby it should be encouraged among school-boys. We hear much about the value of games and athletics and there is a strong faction in favour of compulsory games at school. While conceding that a love of cricket or football or both is a good thing in youth, it may be suggested that tastes in boys, as in men, differ and that a lad to whom cricket does not appeal is not de facto a loafer by preference: and that were opportunity offered he might prove a shining ornamen on the tennis court. Preference for rackets or fives over cricket has never, we think, been regarded as a defect of character so conspicuous as to call for correction, and ina much as the same qualities of activity, quickness of eye, alertness and coolness are brought into play by lawn tennis, there is no reason that we can perceive why lawn tennis should be as it were placed under a scholastic ban. In the earlier years of the game when the Britisher had it all to himself all started from pretty much the same plane and had equal chances one against another; but now the game has gained such wide acceptance and the best players of all nations meet regularly every year at one place or another the position is radically changed. Mr. H. S. Mahoney, who contributes an informing and thoughtful chapter to the work before us, observes that it appears to him to be only a matter of time before the Championship passes into the hands of American or continental players: he gives preference to the American for the reason we have been discussing, to wit that while the game is encouraged in the schools of the United States, it is barred to boys in British schools. He thinks that unless this is altered and soon altered we must look forward to taking "a back seat" in the early future. This is a contingency that must be deplored for many reasons: the most obvious being that lawn tennis is the only game of activity and skill which is played under the same rules and under the same conditions by all nations the world over: a circumstance which renders international play peculiarly easy; and peculiarly desirable because players of different nationalities are not handicapped by the necessity for conforming to new and strange rules when they visit new courts. We do not forget that they play on grass in England and America, on sand on many continental courts (wonderfully good and true the best of the sand courts are) on wood in some places and on cement or asphalte as we often do: in this country: these are the only differences and they are not wide enough to create distinctions or to baffle any player who has the least adaptability and the chance of a few days' practice before taking his place in a tournament. If lawn tennis is worth playing it is worth our while as a nation of athletes to try and keep our place at the top: this is a proposition we think none will deny.



MICE AND MEN AT THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

AT the last scientific meeting of the London Zoological Society, on Tuesday, 26th May, most of the proceedings consisted in a most interesting discussion, chiefly conducted by Professors Weldon of Oxford and Bateson of Cambridge, of the principle known as Mendel's law of heredity, in its application to fancy mice and rats. A good series of these interesting little animals were on exhibit, mostly alive and the mice contributed an olfactory evidence of their presence in a most characteristic way. The varieties shown were extremely interesting; few people would not be astonished at the remarkable differences in colour shown by the common mouse which is now elevated to the rank of a fancy animal, and regularly shown. In the wild mouse (Mus musculus), and in the domestic variety known as "golden agouti," which for all practical purposes is identical in it, the familiar "mouse-colour" is produced by three-colour pigments, black, brown, and yellow. In the varietal forms anyone of these may predominate to the exclusion of the others, and thus we get black, chocolate, and fawn-coloured mice. Again, one pigment only may be represented but in a weak degree; in this case we get blue or slate colour corresponding to black; silver-fawn, to chocolate; and cream, a faint form of yellow or fawn. In addition to this, there is the well-known white mouse, without any colour at all, even in the eyes, which are therefore pink—although some black-eyed white mice do occur; and number of broken coloured or pied varieties. So pretty are these little creatures, that one cannot at all wonder at the recent great extension of what used to be only a school-boy's hobby. The suggestion has been made that the great variability of domestic mice is due to a cross with the wood-mouse (Mus sylvaticus) which is light brown above and white beneath, and is known to have been sometimes crossed with the house species in captivity, but from the known great variability of other domestic animals where there is no reason to suspect a cross, such an explanation seems unnecessary.

The rat in domestication varies far less than the mouse, only black, grey, and white colours usually appearing together with pied forms, the markings of which are far more definite than in mice. The theory of Mendel, an Austrian monk, whose work was published about the middle of the last century, has a distinct bearing on all questions of variation where the inheritance is one sided or alternative in respect of any particular character. He used peas as subjects for experiment, but other plants and animals also have been found to obey the same rules. Mendel's law states that when two individuals of a species possessing different characters are crossed, one character may disappear altogether in the offspring. This is therefore called the "recessive" character, the character which remains being the "dominant" Now, if these offspring, showing only the dominant character, be crossed inter se, the result will be, not uniform, like their parents, but different, like their grandparents, but those having the dominant character will preponderate; on the average there will be three dominants to one recessive.

These "recessives," if allowed to breed between themselves, will truly propagate the recessive character; but their "dominant" brothers and sisters, bred together, will not produce similar results. They will all look alike, but one-third of them, if crossed, will produce pure dominants again, while the other two-thirds will again produce a mixture of dominants and recessives, and this, as in the former case, will be in the proportion of three dominants to one recessive.

Thus the whole pedigree will come out as follows:—

To apply this to a concrete case: Cuenot, who has been experimenting on mice, found that when he crossed a grey wild mouse with a white tame mouse, the results were all grey. Grey, therefore, was here the dominant character, and white the recessive. When the grey mice thus bred were crossed together, 198 grey mice and 72 white ones were obtained. This comes very near the Mendelian proportion, which, out of the above number, should have shown 202·5 grey to 67·5 white.

Of course, no one who knows anything about breeding would expect a principle like this to work out absolutely exactly, and it is not surprising that there was a very lively and not altogether dignified debate on the subject. But there certainly seems reason to believe that Mendel's law is a principle of great importance, even if of only partial application. It is especially worthy of consideration by breeders, to whom it ought, when fully worked out experimentally, to be of the greatest assistance. In some cases it would seem to be unworkable from the start. Thus, pheasants, like mice, show dominant and recessive characters when crossed: an ordinary pheasant and a white one will produce ordinary birds, with rarely a few white specimens; but geese, when white and grey are crossed, come out pied, both character being well represented.

One or two points in the procedure of experimenters seem to need criticism. One is their custom of calling the result of crossing two-colour varieties "hybrids:" a quite incorrect term, as "hybrid" has for centuries been accepted as the name of a creature resulting from the union of two species existing distinct in a state of nature. The proper term would of course be "mongrel," that usually used to denote the offspring of varieties of the same species.

Secondly, in investigating matters of this kind, it would seem to be best to start with new varieties, not with creatures which have already been handled by breeders. A white mouse, known to be the offspring of wild grey parents, would be worth a dozen from some tame strain; and the white or cinnamon sparrows which occasionally crop up would be more valuable breeding-subjects than any domestic bird. In these cases one would, so to speak, start fair; while after an animal has been selectively bred for generations its power of transmitting its qualities to its offspring is positively known to be increased, which obviously introduces a new factor into the problem.

However, in whatever way these experiments are conducted, some valuable results are certain to be obtained, and it is highly satisfactory to find that some naturalists at any rate are seriously taking up the study of live animals as opposed to theorizing from their mortal remains.

THE AMATEUR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION CHAMPIONSHIPS.

LONDON, Monday 6th, July 1903.

THE meeting was held at Northampton last Saturday in fair weather and before a large attendance. That marvellous sprinter, A. F. Duffey, carried off the 100 yards for the fourth year in succession! A. A. Shrubb, the long-distance runner, who is carrying everything before him this year, scored two wins—the one and four miles. P. O'Connor, the Irish champion, won the long and high jump and Nicholson of Scotland credited himself with the weight and hammer events. Appended are results:—

Sporting Notes.

SATURDAY morning was the occasion of much schooling over the hurdles on the Calcutta course. The first to go were a pair of Mr. Galstaun's, Mulwala, and a recent purchase, a chestnut gelding, the former jumping in rare style, and the latter, though a bit raw, showing great promise. Yuletide, Moonray, and First Guide then went a school, the last named jumping very "crabbed," as they say in Ireland, at the first flight and firmly declining to have anything to say to the second. Moonray jumps in good form and should make them hurry a bit at Tollygunge on Saturday.

Autocrat and a brown from Wishart's string then went round, Jack Spillain having the leg up on the former and Bloss on the brown. Autocrat has apparently no love for the game and was fencing in very slipshod style. The brown seemed to be a great lepper, and if he gallops as well as he jumps, should prove useful. The Captain (Smallman up) and a grey Arab ridden by a native boy also went a school. The Captain is a real good type of hurdler as he stands well off them and "lands going." He will take a lot of beating in the Monsoons.

Old Loch Arden went a nice half speed gallop with Spillain up. The old horse is looking as well as possible and like all Mr. Galstaun's string, reflects great credit on Hard.

We hear that old Marwari also went out over the sticks, but did not witness the performance. He is looking a bit of a rag just now, however, and will have to improve a lot before he is likely to do much good.

On Sunday morning a recent purchase of Mr. Orr's, a gray mare with a wonderful pedigree, was given a rough up over about 3 furlongs with the Arab Starlight. She failed to justify her breeding, however, as she was never in the hunt with the Arab.

The going is already beginning to be a bit hard, and the heat during the present break precludes anything but the slowest of slow work. Now is the time for all interested in the preparation of the noble animal to clap on the prayer for rain, and like the importunate widow of biblical fame, keep it going till answered.

Since Saturday practically nothing has been doing on the course so far as horses are concerned, with the exception of Pekin, who went a full school on Tuesday morning, Mr Evers up, along with a brown horse steered by Mr. Budley. Pekin was jumping very sticky, and seemed to find the absence of anything in the shape of cinders on the take-off side of the hurdles a distinct disadvantage, as he slid a length and a half before taking off at each flight. It would be conducive to better jumping if the Aryan gentleman who is erroneously supposed to exercise a fatherly care over the well-being of the course and those who use it, could be persuaded to expend a few much-needed cinders in front of the "leps." A fact which may be news to him is that it is a waste of time putting down cinders for a space only of three feet from the timber, as that is not where a horse collects himself for his jump!

If training work has been slack lately, the digging game has been going merrily and the open sepulchre extending across the galloping track at the half mile post is now large enough to form a family vault for the interment of all the trainers, jockeys and race horses in Calcutta. Considering that the course has done very fairly well for the last seven or eight years without having its bowels exposed in this ruthless manner, one might almost have thought that the matter might have been allowed to rest in peace till the end of the racing season, which would also, a mere layman would think, have been a more seasonable time for digging, but people on awakening from a prolonged slumber, are always as we know in a cast-iron hurry to get up and do something.

Mr. G. B. Deakin has returned from England looking remarkably fit.

William Opie, the jockey was found dead on Sunday morning in a house in a Calcutta back lane. On Saturday he seems to have fallen off some steps on to a paved courtyard below, was carried up to a room, complained of a pain at the base of his skull, and died during the night. Poor Opie, he was a rare good man over a country and twice won the Indian Grand National—on the late Mr. Acton Straw's Kimbolton in 1898 and on the same owner's Moss Trooper the following year.

The Ahmednagar Horse Show will be held on the 5th, 6th, and 7th November.

The following are the weights in the Maharajah's cup to be run at the forthcoming Bangalore meeting:—Promontory 9-12, Wallgrove 9-7, Harpist 9-6 Goldsmith 9-2, Knight Templar 9-0, Trenton 8-13, Milburn 8-8, Bouquet 8-5, Leonidas 8-1, Glenfield 7-9, The Gaffer 6-10, Strule 6-0. Top weight for those not accepting weights will be raised 4lbs. Harpist has been scratched for all his engagements. Trenton and Milburn are strong favourites.

We have to acknowledge receipt of a complimentary copy of Volume XV of the Calcutta Turf Club Racing Calendar, the only really authoritative publication of its kind on this side of India. It as well turned out and as carefully compiled as ever.

Lord Suffolk will rejoin His Excellency the Viceroy's Staff in October at Calcutta.

We regret to hear of the death of Lieutenant Cunliffe, 1st Battalion, the Queen's. He succumbed to enteric fever at Cherat on the 2nd instant.

The Lucknow Spring Meeting has been fixed for the 2nd, 4th, and 6th February.

The second entries for the Civil Service Cup will be found in our Turf News to-day : they include English Rose, Ivanhoe II, belonging to that well-known Assam sporting gentleman Mr. C. H. Holder, Lady Cheltenham, Namuna and Bellmetal. We may remind our readers that third entries close on the 16th September.

The entries for the Army Cup now number thirty-three, the second entries, which closed on the 1st instant, having brought in an accession of ten—Dul-Dul, Toofan, Mudke, Mac, Euphrates, Eshton, Regret, Naseri, Better Luck II, and Young Prince. Third entries close on the 1st October.

We have to draw the attention of our readers to an error in the conditions of the Dehra Stakes as published last week in the prospectus of the Dehra Autumn Sky Meeting. As will be seen from an advertisement in our Turf columns, the word "maiden," wherever it occurs in the conditions of this race, is to be erased.

Mr. J. MacJohn, an Armenian gentleman resident in Calcutta, is among the latest recruits to the Indian Turf. He has lately purchased Mr. Arthur James's Bundook, a three-year-old bay colt by Persimmon—Bunduica, and we believe the animal will shortly be seen in Calcutta.

The thirty-sixth annual exhibition of the Simla Fine Arts Society will be opened by their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Curzon, at the Town Hall, Simla, on Monday, 13th July. The exhibition this year is expected to be of a very high standard.

A large and fashionable gathering was present at the last gymkhana at Simla on the 4th instant. The first event was tent-pegging for gentlemen and was won by Colonel Birdwood and Colonel Cookson. The Affinity Wand Race went to Mr. Mant and Miss Wheler. Colonel Kennard and Mrs. Muspratt Williams secured the third event in which ladies and gentlemen were to start in pairs, ride to a given point and dismount. Ladies to fire 5 rounds at a target 50 yards off. Gentlemen allowed to assist in loading and unloading. Mount and finish past a post over two flights of hurdles. First pair past the post with best score wins. Time allowed 4 minutes.

The fourth event was for ladies. To pick five polo balls off posts one by one and place them separately in one bucket. No dismounting or picking up balls from the ground allowed. Whoever has most balls in bucket wins. Mrs. Atkinson won after a dead heat with Miss Wheler.

Seven entered for the Wand Race for gentlemen which was won by Major Maxwell. The last race caused great excitement. Ladies to gallop past their partners and throw balls for them to catch. Mrs. Atkinson, Mrs. Hawkins and Mrs. Buck tied, the first named eventually winning. The prize given by the Viceroy's Staff for the lady with most points gained in the gymkhanas was won by Mrs. Atkinson with 21 marks, Mrs. Buck being second with 19.

An Ootacamund correspondent writes:—I have already sent you copy of Dental Surgeon Bischoff's appeal to the Committee of the Nilgiri Game Association and circulated as well to all license holders, in consequence of his game license, as well as that of Mr. Van Ingen our local taxidermist and also a Committee member of the Assosiation, having been cancelled by Mr. Mullaly, the Collector and as such the President of the Association. It is alleged that these two shot ibex in the Nilgiri district notwithstanding that the Committee had decided to close ibex shooting for a further period.

At the last meeting of the Committee Dr. Bischoff's appeal was discussed and eventually decided by a majority of votes not to rescuid Mr. Mullaly's order cancelling the licenses of both these gentlemen. Of course an appeal to the Madras Government will in due course be made.

It is of interest to note in this connection, that before the Government sanctioned the shooting of jungle sheep with shot Mr. Mullally with two other shooters did go out to the downs and did shoot jungle sheep with shot. Their offence was duly reported and it was compounded by the payment by a condoning fee of Rs 50 each.

Dr. Bischoff in his appeal emphatically denies having shot ibex in the Nilgiri district, and asserts that Mr. Van Ingen shot them in the Malabar district. Dr. Bischoff has not been granted a hearing and the President's decision was ex parte and of course the Committee, or the majority of them had not the pluck to overrule this as they ought to have done and save a great scandal. The Press were excluded from the meeting room!

Our Poona correspondent writes :—The chief incident of the past week has of course been the detestable tragedy in one of the Native Infantry Regiments now stationed here and the crime was all the more despicable, in that the motive was of the most trivial description. Here was no sudden, uncontrollable act committed on the spur of the moment; no love passion; no injured honour to be avenged. Were it not that equally insignificant causes to our knowledge give rise to equally grim tragedies it would be hard to grasp that a reprimand for carelessness on parade, insubordinate acceptance of the reprimand and the lenient notice of half an hour's extra drill therefor tells the whole story. Over this triviality the vile young hound brooded for five days, and having been on guard duty from before dawn, while leaving his rifle at the guard room, took away the cartridges, took a fellow sepoy's rifle and going to his jemadar, a caste fellow's room, deliberately shot him in the mouth, firing again—and missing him as he fell backwards—dead. A still greater tragedy was apparently prevented by the dispensation of Providence, for presumably flurried at his fell deed the foul young fiend got hustled in the simple motions necessary with the result which will be readily understood by any soldier that the third cartridge got jammed and the murderer in his guilty terror flung it down and bolted. This horrible crime was committed about 4-40 A.M., and it is greatly to be regretted and scarcely creditable, that the young miscreant has up to the present eluded capture. There are rumours of a sepoy in khaki with a mufti pugree on taking a ticket by a train leaving Poona within half an hour of the murder. The surrounding wells have, needless to say, been searched, but neither alive nor dead has the loathsome young fiend been captured. That it will be early effected must be the earnest desire of the least vindictive and few punishments could be too degrading for so vile and cowardly a crime.

There has been a certain amount of curiosity as to the object of the tickets of admission to His Excellency the Governor's Levee. From all accounts the "weeding out" process could not have been of a very drastic or searching description and people tell me that a good few were there whose claim to admission to such functions left a good deal to imagination. Apart from this the dust and the ever-increasing antiquity of the top hats seem to have been the chief objects of note and "gorgeous function" was as appropriate a description as of old, and how often those time-honoured words have done service in print who can tell?

Poona cricket up to now scarcely calls for any special comment and the practice matches are not calculated to interest the general public. Nor can I hear, I regret to say, of any unknown coming champions, that the loss of such as that little marvel Captain Greig (at present busy capturing the Mullah instead of Parsee wickets and presidental centuries) Captain Wood and others on that height of platform can scarcely be exaggerated. There is generally in this world some one who "rises to the occasion," who he or they may be in this connection I must honestly admit I do not yet know.

One knows of lady doctors and lady lawyers and indeed lady most things nowadays, but a casual glance at a list of jockeys licensed by that august body the Western India Turf Club fairly made one gasp. For never outside the sporting novelette have I yet met the lady jockey! Is the "gay Paree" indeed going to supply this startling novelty? And will it be a case of side saddle or bloomers? or—but surely Mr. Gray and the highly respectable body of Stewards will draw the line there. All these qualms are caused in my anxious mind by seeing that among the artists qualified to ride races is one Marie II. Who she (or he?) is I know not, nor why "II," for Marie I. I wot not of.

My special race course tout assures me that there is nothing worthy of chronicling in connection with racing gee gees just yet. Several animals are buzzing along a bit in view of the first day's extra racing on the 25th instant, but the discreet are naturally averse to any insane effort to get their champions "cherry ripe" too early in the season with nearly a score of days' racing before them. The next fortnight should, however, find several candidates for early honours "humming", and trainers must be praying for a little rain to take the sting out of the track since so many seem to prefer the inner sand track with its metal foundation to the outer litter track which seems excellent, but may possibly be a trifle too deep to allow them to stride along without shortening the stride. We all have our fantasies.

A home paper writes:—In our issue of the 4th November we pointed out that Major-General Tyler, then Inspector-General of Artillery in India, had stated in his Annual Report of that branch of the Service that he hoped in the near future that the remounts supplied to the horse and field batteries would be of the compact, short-legged type, which is more in accordance with modern ideas of what the artillery draught-horse should be. Of course it is possible to go to an extreme in this direction, which may lead to unsatisfactory results. It must be borne in mind that not so many years ago several batteries of field artillery in India were horsed entirely by Arabs, but it was found that, however sturdy and compact Arabs from 14 hands to 14-2 might be, they had not sufficient weight for draught purposes, especially when guns were moving on soft or sandy soil. The same objection holds good against the Indian country-bred horse. That both the country-bred and the Arab are hardier and not so dainty about their forage as the Australian horse is undeniable, but they both lack in power and weight as draught animals when compared with the waler. No doubt in time the new scheme of the Indian Government for breeding horses for military purposes will turn out a success, but in the meantime the Government has acted wisely in not discouraging the Australian breeders who, there is every reason to believe, will endeavour to produce the horse required if any guarantee of regularity and continuity of supply is likely to be held out for a reasonable time. Acting in a fair spirit, the Indian Government has decided that until breeders in Australia have had time to breed the standard of remount required, the limits adopted for purchase during 1903-4 and the following seasons will be for horse artillery 15·3 to 15-1, for field batteries 15-3 to 14-3, and for howitzer batteries from 15-3 to 15-1. This is a decided all-round reduction in height, seeing that for many years past the average height of field battery horses has been at least 15-2½.

The Bangalore Handicap Polo Tournament was won by Captain Peel's team who defeated the Q. O. Sappers and Miners' team by 5 goals and 1 subsidiary to 4 goals and 1 subsidiary.

"Bridge Topics," by our old friend "Lynx," return to us between the dainty covers of a charmingly turned out booklet for which Messrs. W. Newman and Co., are responsible. Many of the chapters appeared in the columns of The Indian Field last year, and as they have attracted considerable attention, we should say Bridge players will re-read them and the additions the author has made with pleasure, while those who make the acquaintance of "Lynx" and his pithy observations for the first time will profit by an attentive study and a calm digestion of "Bridge Topics."

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—The ancient capital of Mysore has been having some quite lively little Gymkhanas lately in which H. H. the Maharajah, the Yuvaraja, Mr. Bowring and other well-known personalities have been running and riding their own horses. In view of the fact that His Highness the Maharajah was unfortunately unable to be present on the last two days of the big meeting owing to indisposition, it is pleasant to see him so much himself again as to be able to ride in several races, and even to steer his own horse Southern Cross to victory.

The Bangalore season may be considered to be in full swing just now, and amongst other signs of the fact are the weekly paperchases, which are most successful, producing fields of fifty or sixty riders. On Wednesday last a good many ladies were out, and the course was between five and six miles in all, with one check. It is also worthy of notice that a lady—Mrs. Bernard Hawkins was easily first home, riding a beautiful thoroughbred mare. Captain Claridge, 3rd Madras Lancers, came second, and had led up to an awkward drop-fence where Mrs. Hawkins passed him.

The second and third entries for the big meeting are poor, and five races in all have failed to fill. Substitution races have been framed to take their places, and it is to be hoped that entries will come in. It is significant that the Banglore entries have been worse than Mysore, although good money is offered at the former meeting, and I think that one reason amongst several is that country-breds and Arabs have not been kept severely separate as was the case in the Mysore prospectus—rumour has it at the direct request of H. H. the Maharajah. Still the Bangalore meeting will probably be a fairly good one.

Balasore is a place we recommend to any Calcutta man wanting a holiday. It has not yet aspired to the distinction of challenging Waltair for the title of "the Brighton of India"; but it may do so by and bye. Meanwhile it is progressing and offering attractions that the week-end tripper and short-holiday makers may find it worth while considering. Leaving Howrah by the train that starts about 10 P.M., Balasore station is reached next morning at 4 o'clock—a six hours' journey. Two hours in the waiting room, with chota hazri to help fill in the interval, and one starts for the "Sea-Face Bungalow" at which mine host Steans offers a cordial welcome and supplements it by the ability to make one really comfortable. The bungalow is built on the sand hills close to the beach, and it is reached by a fine, pucca road, nine miles from the railway station, an ideal biking stretch: indeed a bike is an accessory to the trip that must not be left out. There are some fine roads and, when the tide is out, the beach gets almost as hard as cement and as smooth as a track, rendering a spin along the shore an exhilarating and novel experience to the Calcutta wheelman thoroughly sick of the eternal maidan and suburban lanes.

Then there is the sea bathing when the rollers come in at high tide, what need to enlarge on this? Likewise the shooting which is excellent. Snipe, quail, partridge and small game abound in season; bear, tiger, leopard, deer and even elephant can be had without extraordinary trouble by one who makes Balasore his head-quarters and sees that his bundobast is good. Altogether Balasore is well worth a visit.

A Brisbane paper records the fact that the value of the bottle tree as fodder for stock during time of drought has been brought under the notice of the Agricultural Department. A Mr. Bowman was cutting down a tree for the leaves, when the sheep began to run after the chips, and so the tree was opened up with the result, he says, that every head of stock "went mad over it." Mr. Bowman, although he has no grass, has bought 900 merino ewes on the strength of the discovery. Lambs eat it as well as the old sheep. An instance is given of a 15 years old pet wether without a tooth growing fat since eating the tree. Any kind of stock will eat the wood after a little use of it. Mr. Bowman considers that it will soon be carried on the railway at fodder rates. He stated that cows which were almost dry from want of condition are now not only fat and strong, but are giving a good yield of milk. Bottle trees often contain from 50 to 100 tons of fodder. There are plenty of bottle trees within easy reach of the railways. Mr. Bowman believes that hundreds of stock can be saved with it. The trees will keep for months in the log with the bark on.

There is a marked inclination among German hunters of big game to abandon the rifles of extremely high velocities. In place of the rifles with a velocity of 2,000 feet a second or thereabout, the calls are for rifles of about 1,700 feet velocity; in fact it may be said that in Europe there is a feeling that sportsmen have gone beyond the desirable point in velocities for rifles, and that those of less velocity are more desirable for hunting.

We regret to hear that Mr. Murray Hammick, C.I.E., Secretary to the Government of Madras, was seriously hurt while out with the Ooty hounds on the 6th instant.

The dress rehearsal of The Dandy Fifth comes off at the Calcutta Opera House to-night. Mr. Zimmermann and his coadjutors, we believe, will add to their laurels and enhance the popularity of the A. D. S. with his tuneful, cheery piece which to a greater degree than in some of their previous successes gives principals and chorus many and big chances of scoring. The music is bright and distinctly martial and inspiriting, seeing which we may confidently expect Mr. Marks to lead his band on to fresh triumphs. It is whispered that the chorus dance in the third act, somewhat after the famous "Tell me pretty maiden" in Floradora, will be good enough to fill the house every week end: and this reminds us to say that the booking is encouragingly big.

The Tollygunge Gymkhana, for which we publish the weights, has filled well as regards entries, but we hear rumours that fields will dwindle considerably, as several owners are, not perhaps unnaturally, dissatisfied with the somewhat erratic nature of the handicapping. As an exercise in thought reading in order to determine by what possible train of reasoning some of the relative burdens could have been arrived at, the card is distinctly interesting, but owners can hardly be expected to derive any pleasure from such psychological problems. As regards anticipations and selections for the first race Sylvia with 11-4 should be good goods, as she is known to be a sticker, and we hear that her lepping is unimpeachable. The Pony Hurdles should, if he is in the right frame of mind, fall to First Guide, but should he decline the business, there can be nothing else in it but Moonray, as Peeping Tom has been crushed out with 10-2, and Pekin is jumping so stickily that we cannot fancy him even with only 8-9 on his back. For the Maiden Horse Stakes Oom Paul with 10-7 will hardly need to canter, but should he not start, French Girl at 9-11 has been very confidingly dealt with, and may quite possibly give Mr. the Handicapper, a bad shock. For the Pony Flat race, First Guide must win, provided he can be induced to try. In the Hack Stakes, Sunshine would appear to have been turned loose with 10-4, though should Sylvia elect to go for this in preference to the chase, the other may have to hurry a bit.

BEHAR NOTES.

Our Behar correspondent writes:—There was a small "stick" at Begum Serai on the 29th June. Several pig were seen, but as the grass was both large and thick, it was extremely difficult to get them out. One pig, however, broke out into the open, and after a gallop was speared by "Bill" Rawlins.

I described a pig that was extremely difficult to kill at Sawaisingpur some weeks ago, one or two of the party who were out that day firmly believing that the animal died more from exhaustion than from the wounds given him, as the spears couldn't be got to pierce his hide properly. I believe this is most uncommon, but there have been cases like this in Behar before.

Mr. J. A. M. Wilson and two other men some fifteen years ago in the Sarun District, brought a big boar to bay, and his hide was found to be so tough that it was with the greatest difficulty he was killed.

Mr. H. E. Abbott and Sir William Hudson, also many years ago at Koolpooreh, put up a solitary boar with regular scales on his shoulders, and a skin hardened like leather, which prevented their spears from penetrating, and it was only after a hard fight he was killed.

The rain in Behar has been most unevenly distributed this year; around and about Dalsingh Serai the country is perfectly dry and very little rain has fallen; while Sitamarhi, some fifty and odd miles further north, is getting an average of nearly an inch a day.

There have been several breaches on the Khanwa Ghât branch of the Tirhoot State Railway from floods and the line is also closed from Sitarmarhi to Bairagnia, on account of a diversion having been washed away; this is hardly a hopeful outlook, considering the monsoons have only just commenced.

On the 2nd and 3rd of July, large flights of locusts passed over south Tirhoot, travelling from east to west and doing the greatest damage. Mucktapore factory, near Samastipore, had nearly 800 bighas of excellent indigo completely stripped of leaf and other factories have also reported great damage to their crop. I was out at the time, and I noticed what I thought was smoke in the sky to the east; this coming nearer was seen to have a light brown tinge and very shortly had completely spread out, and hung overhead like a cloud. Then down came the locusts; not like rain, but slowly and quietly like snow, and very shortly the indigo fields turned from a bright green to a dull red; the white roads were a reddy brown, the tops of houses and the whole of the surrounding country had changed its colour in a few minutes. The transformation was so complete and sudden, that the only way to realize it is to picture an artist suddenly picking up a brush covered with light brown paint and dabbing it over a bright smiling painting of a landscape. The natives were busy on every side dancing and rushing about with kerosine tin and every other possible kind of thing they could get a noise out of, but with poor success; for though the locusts would rise in front of them in myriads, they only returned again in greater numbers. Suddenly the whole flight rose, and before one hardly grasped it, they had passed on to the west, followed by hundreds of birds, and were very soon far away in the distance.

Reports have also come in of locusts to the north of Mozufferpur, so apparently they are all over Tirhoot.

Cholera is raging in different parts of Behar, and Miss Gray's sad death came as a great shock to the district, as she was supposed to be recovering. The greatest sympathy is felt for her brother and sister throughout the whole of Tirhoot.

The Bishop of Calcutta shortly visits the district. He will go to Mozufferpur, Sitarmarhi, Samastipore, and Durbhanga, holding a service at each place.

Athletic Notes.

SURREY beat Yorkshire by 145 runs on the 1st instant. Essex beat Sussex by six wickets; Warwickshire was defeated by Lancashire by eight wickets and Hampshire succumbed to Worcestershire by 91 runs; the match between Notts and Leicestershire was drawn.

Somerset beat Gloucester by ten wickets on the 3rd instant. Yorkshire beat Leicestershire by an innings and 280 runs.

In the match between Sussex and Surrey on the 3rd instant Mr. C. B. Fry made 200 runs.

The Henley committee this year refused to accept the entry of Titus for the Diamond Sculls, his amateur status not being considered satisfactory.

The Gordon-Bennett Motor Race—that senseless rush over three hundred miles of Irish roads—was won by a foreigner named Tenatzy in 6hrs. 3mins. 9secs. Jarrott, an Englishman, smashed his car, broke his collar-bone and injured his wretched chauffeur, whereat the motorphobes will probably rejoice. But, mirabile dictu, no unfortunate spectator, harmless peasant or innocent child was killed. In the words of our only Bertram, "isn't it marvellous." Which reminds us that Charlie Bertram was married last month to Clara Palmer, the harpist. We wish him all good luck.

There was a very successful regatta at Naini Tal on the 29th ultimo. Five events were carried through and some good racing witnessed. The Mixed Fours resulted in a fine struggle. Capt. McCarthy's boat beat Capt. Nicholson's boat by a length. The crews were Miss Elliott, Miss Adams, Capt. Tillard, Capt. McCarthy (str.) and Mrs. Porteous, Miss D. Sykes, Capt. Porteous and Capt. Nicholson (str). The Scratch Fours was won easily by Mr. Courthope, Capt. McCarthy, Capt. Porteous and Mr. W. M. Smith. Mrs. Porteous and Capt. Tillard carried off the canoe race by the narrow margin of a foot, and the Mixed Double Sculls went to Miss Elliott and Capt. Tillard, who won by a quarter of a length after a fine race. The warrant and N. C.O.'s race was won by the Depôt, but owing to a misunderstanding there was a foul and the race will probably be rowed off at the next regatta.

The immense value to a side of a batsman who can hit with great power has seldom been better exemplified than in Essex vs. Sussex, reported in our London Sporting letter this week, when after the Sussex men had been scratching about for runs, Sewell took charge of the bowling in the manner of Lyons and Brann in the old days, and placed his side in the course of an hour in the most flattering position. That his fine effort was thrown away (only as far as points in the Championship table are concerned) was due to the rain on Saturday. It speaks well for the foresight and good judgment of the Essex committee that they persevered with Sewell with such determination last year when, a novice to first-class cricket, he so often failed. On Monday last he was eighteenth in the batting averages with 31·60, having scored 474 runs in fifteen completed innings. He has thus already exceeded his total of 445 made last year in twenty-five completed innings, when his average was 17·80.

The Corinthian Football Club left London for their tour in South Africa on the 13th of June. They can scarcely hope to repeat—to surpass would be well nigh impossible—the achievements of the previous Corinthian combination which left England in 1897, and out of twenty-three engagements won twenty-one and drew the other couple—one at Johannesburg, the other at Durban—with a goal record of 113 against 15. Such players as the Corbetts, S. H. Day, L. J. Moon, and C. B. Fry are all unable to make the journey, but a pretty powerful side has been got together, largely drawn from the two 'Varsity teams. Not one of the party except Taylor made the journey six years ago, and he can scarcely be described as making a second trip, seeing that he is already settled in South Africa—to wit, at Johannesburg. All told, the players number seventeen, but of these only eleven took their departure on the 12th, so that, even making allowance for Taylor's assistance, the party will not be numerically over strong for the first few fixtures, although they would doubtless be able, if it came to the worst, to press one or more capable substitutes into service. Messrs. Norris, Braithwite, and Curwen followed on 27th June and C. D. McIver and another—whom we heard on Saturday would probably be M. Morgan Owen, the Welsh International—will leave England early in July. The full party will, therefore, be composed of:—

T. S. Rowlandson (Cambridge University) (goal),
W. U. Timmis (Old Carthusians),
P. L. Hollins (Cambridge University), and
O. T. Norris (Old Carthusians and Oxford (University) (backs),
C. Wreford Brown (capt) (Old Carthusians),
M. Morgan-Owen (Old Salopians and Oxford University),
J. G. Birch (Old Carthusians),
A. F. Leach-Lewis (Cambridge University),
P. P. Braithwaite (Cambridge University), and
W. J. H. Curwen (Old Carthusians) (half-backs),
H. S. Snell (Cambridge University),
F. H. Bryant (Old Reptonians),
J. E. Balfour-Melville (Oxford University),
J. S. D. Rider (Old Salopians),
G. L. Mellin (Old Malvernians),
S. S. Taylor (Cambridge University), and
C. D. McIver (Old Foresters (forwards).

While the public interest is centred just now on walking and walkers it may not be generally known that in 1890 a fine performance was put up by one of the fair sex. Miss Zoe Gayton walked from San Francisco to New York, 3,400 miles, in 215 days. Her average rate was about 16 miles a day, though on one occasion she covered 40 miles.

Details of the walking match between representatives of Messrs. Birkmyre & Co. and Messrs. J. Thomas & Co. will be found further on. It was for a Cup value Rs. 250, five a side, from the Barrackpore Golf Club to the Calcutta Golf Club, almost 17 miles, and the course was down the Trunk Road, through Circular Road, and Park Street and up the Ladies' Walk to the winning post. Messrs. Birkmyre & Co., thanks chiefly to the good performances of Messrs. R. B. Wilson and Archy. Birkmyre, who came in first and second, won by 33 points to 22, the winner's time being three hours five minutes. It was a real good sporting match, well carried out, and the time put up by Mr. Wilson was most creditable, taking the surrounding circumstances into consideration.

A great deal of interest was taken in the race and the enthusiasm of the big crowd which lined the streets from Sealdah to the Calcutta Golf Club was most refreshing to behold, showing, as it did, that we poor "Ditchers" can appreciate a good thing when we see it.

At the same time we should try and be correct when we write about it. To describe the event as "the pioneer walk" from Barrackpore to Calcutta, or to refer to it as the "first competition of the kind ever held in Calcutta" is hardly accurate. But then our memories are proverbially short, and "Bengal Head" is a condition as common now as ever it was. We have a vivid recollection of a match over practically the same course, the start being at the 14-mile stone, just this side of the Park Gates, and the finish opposite St. James's Church in Lower Circular Road—13 miles 6 furlongs. It was on a blazing hot day in June 1877, and of the quartette who started only three finished, the winner being the late Mr. C. E. Willcox of the E. B. S. R. Coy., it was a Company in those days—and his time 2 hours 27 minutes. Then there was the Naval Volunteers' walk from the Barrackpore Railway Station to the Shambazar Tramway Terminus. This was some years ago (more than we care to remember) and about a dozen of us chiefly members of the old C. N. V. Athletic Club covered the 13 miles in smart time as the preliminary to a more ambitious affair which never came off. This calls to mind the famous Naval Volunteers' March to Diamond Harbour on the 6th December 1890, when 62 of our Amateur tars, accompanied by 16 members of "F". Coy. C. V. R., did the 30 miles in the net time of nine hours fifteen minutes (deducting one hour ten minutes for halts) the rate working out at three and a half miles an hour which, as each man was in full marching order, with arms and accoutrements and carried 20 rounds of ammunution, was not too bad. It was a pitch dark night, and the road was from indifferent to very bad most of the journey, while the heavy dew added some pounds to each man's load.

The Boxing competition held by the South India Athletic Association came to a conclusion on the 29th ultimo. The competition was a great success throughout and reflects great credit on the Association. Details of the finals will be found further on.

The Calcutta Golf Club advertises a Cleek Match for the 17th and 18th instant: the conditions may be learned on reference to the advertisement further on.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—Very considerable interest is being evinced in the Harwood Association Football League, and the various games which have been played off during the past week have been witnessed by large crowds of spectators. In both matches I have witnessed this week, however, play has been of a somewhat one-sided nature. In one, the Rovers were opposed to the Royal Engineers. The latter have by no means a good eleven, but they have very sportingly entered for the League. In the match under notice, which, by the way, was interfered with by rain, the Rovers had all the best of matters, and ran out winners by three goals to nil. The North Staffordshire Regiment have two teams entered, and on Thursday evening their "A" team played their first match in the League, and once more the Royal Engineers, who were their opponents, had to submit to defeat. The game was not a particularly attractive one from a spectator's point of view, but there were occasional periods of bright play. From start to finish the North Staffords had all the best of matters, but the Engineers maintained a very sturdy defence. Time after time Colaba players seemed almost bound to score, but the custodian kept out many good shots. Before half-time arrived, however, the Staffords scored a couple of goals, and during the second moiety added another, eventually leaving the field victorious by three goals to nil. Up to the present the Engineers have had fourteen goals scored against them, without having been able to place one to their own credit. In my notes, a week or two ago, I referred to the fact that there was every promise of the Gymkhana being able to put a very good eleven in the field this season—now I have no doubt about it. They played their first match (not in connexion with the League) one evening this week, their opponents being the Telegraph Recreation Club, and won by ten goals to nil. From start to finish they simply made rings round their opponents, and there is no doubt but that they could have won by a much larger margin of goals. The whole team combined excellently, every man was in his place, and there was no wild kicking, whilst the passing was most accurate. They play their first League match on Tuesday, when they will meet the Rovers.

During the past week a couple more matches have been played in connexion with the Royal Bombay Golf Club. One was arranged between seniors and juniors of the National Bank of India (five aside). The play was over one round of nine holes, and the result was an easy win for the juniors by twelve holes to three. The winning players for the juniors were Mr. F. H. Greig, who beat Mr. J. Carnegie by three holes, Mr. D. H. Brand, who beat Mr. Ralph Kidd by five holes, and Mr. J. D. Johnston, who accounted for Mr. W. J. K. Hegarty to the tune of four holes. For the seniors Mr. T. W. McLachlan beat Mr. G. C. Scott by two holes, while Mr. A. A. Legat beat Mr. J. Esplin by one. Another interesting match was that players over and under 35 years of age. The original entry totalled 28, but four were unable to play, and twelve couples turned out. The result was an easy win for the older players by twenty-two holes to nine for the winner. Mr. Osbore Marshall beat Mr. L. Stansfield 2 up, Mr. C. J. I. Jones beat Mr. R. H. M. Steven 4 up, Mr. G. Ferrer Nicholson beat Mr D. H. Brand 4 up, Major Rogers beat Mr. M. Innes Ker 2 up, Mr. C. St. Paul beat Mr. A. A. Legat 3 up, Mr. H. R. Greaves beat Mr. E. E. Coombs 1 up, Mr. J. C. Kiddle beat Mr. E. A. Miller 3 up, Mr. H. E. Hart beat Mr. S. C. Bayley 1 up, and Mr. I. Reed beat Mr. J. Kerr 2 up. For the players under 35 the only ones to win were Mr. J. D. Johnston, who beat the Rev. John Cameron3 up, Mr. R. Fairnie, who beat Mr. W. L. Shaw 5 up, and Mr. C. Thomson, who beat Mr. E. R. Jardine 1 up.

Subscriptions continue to come to hand almost every day in connexion with the fund for sending a team of Indian Cricketers to England next year. Among the latest subscriber's is His Highness the Maharajah of Cooch Behar, who wrote saying he would subscribe Rs. 3,500 to the fund. This donation is the largest so far received to the fund. In addition to this Rs. 3,500, the following subscriptions have been paid or promised up to date :—H. H. the Aga Khan, Rs. 3,300; Mr. J. N. Tata, anything between Rs. 3,000 and Rs. 5,000, H. H. the Maharaja of Patiala, Rs. 1,500 ; H. H. the Maharajah of Bikaneer, Rs. 1,000 ; H. H. the Maharajah of Mysore, Rs. 500 ; H. H. the Raja of Kupurthala, Rs. 500; H. H. the Maharajah of Bhavnagar, Rs. 500 ; H. E. the Viceroy, Rs. 200; H. E. Lord Northcote, Rs. 150 ; and H. E. Lord Ampthill, Rs. 150. In addition to these substantial subscriptions have been promised by Sir Dinshaw Petit, Bart., Mr. Bomanjee Dinshaw Petit, Mr. B. Baliah Naidu Garu, and Mr. M. Buchi Babu. It will thus be seen that the scheme is being well supported in India, and of course a considerable sum has been already guaranteed by a number of the English clubs.

Despite the gloomy outlook of a couple or three months ago, the present cricket season promises to be one of the most successful in the annals of the Bombay Gymkhana. In past years it has been somewhat difficult to raise a couple of elevens to play on the same day, but at the present time there are no less than between fifty and sixty men wanting to play, and yesterday (Saturday) afternoon the Gymkhana put three elevens in the field, two of which were successful. The first XI, which is a decidedly strong batting side this year, accounted for the 21st Bombay Infantry by nearly a hundred runs, thanks, principally, to good batting by Lieutenant Langhorn and Mr. E. L. Sale while useful scores were made by several other members of the team. For the soldiers Sher Khan was top scorer with 47 (not out), and was really the only one to make anything like a stand against the Gymkhana's bowling. Another Gymkhana XI, encountered Ralli Bros' C. C., and the less said of this match the better. Ralli Bros. batted first and ran up a total of 175, of which Mr. B. D. Gagarat scored 98 (not out), the Gymkhana replying with the miserable total of 24, no less than seven men failing to trouble the scorer. After the second wicket had fallen it was a regular procession to and from the wicket, and I don't think Captain McDonald and the members of his team will forget their experience in a hurry. The third match was between a team of Reserves, run by Mr. F. St. George Gratwicke and the second XI of the 21st Bombay Infantry, which resulted in a win for the Gymkhana by eleven runs. Mr. R. F. R. Cooke greatly distinguished himself in this match—he was top scorer, took seven wickets at very small cost, and threw an eighth man out.

The subscription list which has been opened in Bangalore in connection with the forthcoming cycle races has reached a total of about Rs. 900, the subscribers including Sir Donald Robertson, British Resident in Mysore, Brigadier-General J. E. Nixon, C. B. Colonel Sprot of the Carabiniers, Colonel Daniell of the R. F. A., and many other well-known residents. The Essex Regiment subscribed Rs. 100, the Carabiniers Rs. 50, and the Indian Cycle and General Engineering Company Rs. 100. This interest taken in cycle racing after a prolonged period of apathy is most encouraging, and an excellent meeting is now a foregone conclusion.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 19th June 1903.

THERE has been really only one topic of general interest since I wrote last : to wit the weather. It was wet enough last week, but on Saturday it began to rain in earnest and kept on steadily until Monday night, nearly 60 hours : with consequences. The low-lying parts of London were under water on Monday : the streets, in Battersea, Stepney, and other regions were navigable by boat only ; not otherwise. On Saturday night the Underground Railway out in the Hammersmith direction was under water and, I am told, tickets were not issued to any station more remote than Earl's Court; and even there the flood was over the lines. On Sunday and Monday the town stayed at home unanimously. I had to be in Bond Street, Regent Street, and the St. James's region on Monday afternoon and the streets were literally empty but clean. Never have I seen London so clean : well may it look so, for the meteorological records say it has not had such a tubbing for nearly forty years : 4·68 inches in a week is not bad for any place not Cherrapoonjee nor in Lower Burma.

* * * * * *

I might proceed for a column or two to describe everything that has not happened owing to the rain. There was to have been a motor gymkhana at Ranelagh on Saturday and the King was to have been there : of course there was no gymkhana and no Majesty. If rumour be an honest woman of her word one wet man turned up in a motor car at Ranelagh and went home again. If there are many more wet Saturdays and Wednesdays this season I fear me the balance sheets of resorts like Hurlingham and its rivals will be subjects for tears. It is a glorious climate this of the British Isles : while London and the Eastern counties are aflood, they have had snow storms in Perthshire and in the Border districts grouse are dying in thousands—of drought !

The present scribe is not often lured from his own hearthrug after dinner by "At Home" cards ; but temptation in the shape of Miss Marie Hall beset him one evening during the last week, and he fell. Marie Hall, as you know, is the violin phenomenon. Aged nineteen : fee £500 a night : genius. Romance hangs over her. She is the daughter of a man who played the harp in the orchestra of a Newcastle theatre, and her father losing his berth, Marie and others of the family played in the streets for a living. Somebody heard her (Sir Charles Tennant's and other names are mentioned, but who shall probe to the truth !) and had her educated after Kubelik had pronounced her a marvel. And here is she ; the rage and likely to remain the rage as she deserves. She plays with her whole body: I have heard and seen some swell violinists, but never such an extraordinary executionist as this girl : she seems able to make the fiddle say anything she likes, and she did, what one very, very rarely sees done, roused a big drawing-room audience to honest and demonstrative enthusiasm.

She is a strange looking little girl. Slight, pale, darkish hair, piercing dark eyes under heavy eyebrows, the right heavier than the left apparently ; half pathetic, half frightened expression, when not playing—then her face works freely. She does not know how to smile, as somebody remarked ; she took the most vociferous encores as gravely as possible acknowledging them with a quaint little bow, like a bird pecking. Her immobility of feature under applause made a lady observe that "she looks at us as if we were dirt."

The ball at the Albert Hall in aid of the London Hospital is reported not to have been a tremendous financial success, but one hears so many different accounts of the resulting balance that it is permissible to doubt whether the sum realised fell below the hopes of the organisers, at any rate it was good enough to justify another venture in the same direction, for we are being invited to take tickets for another hop in the Albert Hall on 9th July in aid of the Charing Cross Hospital, H. R. H. Princess Louise, Her Grace of Argyll heading the list of patronisers. Mention of this projected ball suggests reference to the exceptional number of charitable entertainnments, bazaars, meetings and so on which are going on this season. What the papers call "Society," and what is "Society," have been and continue in convulsions of philanthropy.

Every day has brought new accounts of the Belgrade tragedy, each differing from the last. More than one says the unfortunate King fled for his life offering to abdicate, to quit Servia, to part from the Queen if his life were spared. She kept a brave face to the last evidently : not a word has been said against her demeanour when the assassins ran them to ground, on the roof, in her bedroom or wherever the murder was committed. It is stated by more than one chronicler that the bodies of the pair were flung out of the window : a lady who spent some years in Belgrade, who knows the Servian character and has friends in the Servian capital told me she was "afraid it might be true : they are so excitable and when they get excited they are savages and worse." King Peter's seat on the throne will be an uneasy one—unless he has the strength of mind and other necessary moral qualities to begin by dealing with the men who put him on the throne as murderers. One may doubt if he will do this : the Continent, as judged by its newspapers, has taken the affair with a calm that is callous. Spain and Italy, particularly the former, are most disturbed over it. A mild sensation was caused on Tuesday by a letter in the Times from Don Jaime de Bourbon, son of Don Carlos, pleading for sympathetic judgment on the career of the murdered king.

A fine Ascot was more than the most sanguine dared hope to see, but by Tuesday the rain had about rained itself out and after one or two futile attempts to spoil the fun the clouds dried up and even allowed the sun an occasional innings. The Lawn was deeply disappointed over the Royal Procession planned on a larger scale than we knew in our late Queen's reign, and reinforced at the eleventh hour by a few unexpected distinguished foreigners, it did not take the usual route up the course to the Royal Stand. The King had to choose between cutting up the course—and half-a-dozen State carriages and teams would have left their mark after the deluges of rain—and disappointing the crowd by taking the main road to the rear of the stand. In my humble judgment His Majesty, as usual, did the right thing : racing was the business of the day and he elected to avoid doing anything that would injure a course which is never one of the best in England. The crowd was quick to recognise the reason of the change and the appearance of Their Majesties on their balcony produced a splendid ovation, which was repeated

The prospect of the royal visit to Ireland has prompted a suggestion that a Royal Bodyguard should be formed in Dublin on the lines of the Corps of Gentlemen at Arms in London and the Archers in Scotland. Why not resuscitate the old Guard of Halberdiers which adorned the Viceregal Court for a few years in Stewart days?

There is a very pretty quarrel in the papers among scientific men. One afternoon last week Professor Fleming gave a demonstration of wireless telegraphy in the rooms of the Royal Institution, receiving messages from Poldhu in Cornwall. Dr. Horace Manders with Mr. Maskelyne of the Egyptian Hall, conducted a little experiment on their own little hooks to prove to their own satisfaction that Marconi messages could be intercepted, and they claim to have intercepted the Poldhu-Albemarle Street messages. Their investigations disturbed the freedom of intercourse there between and Professor Fleming was naturally angry; he wrote to the papers denouncing those who interfered as "scientific hooligans" who deliberately tried to wreck his demonstrations. Mr. Maskelyne writes back to say this is a falsehood, the demonstration only succeeded by courtesy of those who, having the power to wreck it, yet refrained from doing so. What finished courtesy! How grateful for and how touched by the Manders-Maskelyne consideration Professor Fleming ought to be! If this be scientific courtesy may I never encounter scientific rudeness.

Short is the British memory. At the annual meeting of the South African Graves Fund last Friday Miss Frere announced that the subscriptions so far this year amounted to a beggarly £80. Last year £1,350 was subscribed and used to erect memorials over graves of men who fell in South Africa. The idea was—I say was—to put up these memorials and maintain them out of the Fund: it does not look as though their maintenance would long continue, does it? 'Twas ever thus: we must have "some new thing" even for our charity and the war is passing into history: short our memory I say again.

Sarah Bernhardt opened her season on Monday at the Adelphi (where the Very Best Penny Dreadful Drama is short lived) with our old familiar friend Fédora. Madame is brilliant and fascinating as ever; she grows no older, loses not a hair's weight of her wonderful powers. The wonderful voice is there, stronger, clearer, more stirring if possible than it was ten years ago and more. At the Coronet Mdme. Jane Hading produced on Monday a French rendering of the Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Mr. Pinero and Mrs. Pat Campbell were in the house which, despite the horribly wet night, was full. Paula is not a part in which Jane Hading is at her best. It lacks the subtlety in which the French actress excels and she made Paula rather too extravagant: a loud and violent Paula. How much of a French play—or an English play Frenched—does a London audience understand? The query is prompted by an incident that occurred in the first act on Monday. Tanqueray (M. Duquesne) had the stage to himself at one point and at this point a candle shade took the opportunity to fall blazing on the table cloth and set fire to it. A dozen people in the audience shouted warning to M. Tanqueray in their very best French, but the flames had attained to quite respectable proportions before M. Tanqueray discovered what his anxious admirers were driving at.

A "Cake Walk Dance" has been added to the negro entertainment at the Shaftesbury and promises to catch on; it is weird and yet graceful while the music is tuneful and haunting. It has originality so far as London is concerned and the audience enjoys it hugely.

Undoubtedly Mr. Hubert Henry Davies, who wrought Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace is the rising star in the dramatic sky. Close upon the success of the necklace play comes Cousin Kate at the Haymarket, a neat, clearly contrived comedy, bright and often witty in dialogue and a capital study of character to boot. The whole business of the play hinges on a not improbable coincidence. Kate Curtis (Miss Elles Jeffreys) is summoned by Mrs. Spencer to decide what is to be done in the matter of Heath Desmond (Mrs. Cyril Maude) who at the last moment has thrown over her daughter Amy. Kate comes down by train and shares the carriage with a fascinating stranger to whom she loses her heart and who loses his to her: the stranger proves to be the straying Desmond, who has been driven away by Amy's pious or let us say, churchical pigheadness. She is young, emotional, and silly, but she yields to Kate's arguments, eats her humble pie and writes begging Desmond to return and promising he shall have his own way about Sunday observances and other matters. Desmond returns (Act II) and finds Kate alone in the house: a delightful dialogue follows: the best and least sentimental piece of love-making I can remember. Then enter Amy, who reveals Desmond's identity heretofore unknown to Kate. The strength of the play lies in Desmond's and Kate's obvious fitness one for the other: and the third act shows the silly Amy made happy with the Rev. Bartlett, a lovely example of the pompous clerical prig played by Mr. Rudge Harding, who very nearly proposed to her before Desmond put in his word. It is a play that will run, Mr. Davies' skill in character drawing is his strong suit, his humour is another and a natural dramatic instinct completes his equipment. The Elizabethan Stage Society is "coming out strong" if I may be permitted the flippancy. It produced Twelfth Night at the Court Theatre on Tuesday and remarkably well it succeeded, surmounting the difficulties of acting the play as Shakespeare wrote it with conspicuous success. Mr. William Poel (whose other name is Pole: he is a son of the late famous Whist authority), took the part of Malvolis and was roundly and deservedly applauded. Among the ladies Miss Douglas Reynolds' Olivia was the best. 'Tis a far cry from Shakespeare to Howard Talbot and George Dance; but it is worth noticing the fact that their Chinese Honeymoon was played for the 700th time on that Tuesday evening. Miss Louie Freear remains the backbone of the piece, though there is no actress on the stage concerning whose abilities more diverse opinions are expressed.

Dan Leno's breakdown is now admitted to be serious. He is at an institution for cases of mental disturbance suffering from brain exhaustion induced by over work. It was clear months ago that he was over doing it: when a charity entertainment wanted a lift he could not say "no," and charity organisers exploited him freely and traded profitably on his enormous popularity. The doctors have pronounced a month's absolute seclusion necessary and even Mrs. Leno is not to be allowed to see her husband during that term.

What should be done with Patrick Knowles, age variously given as eight or ten years, who stands committed for trial at Stockton-on-Tees charged on his own confession with the wilful murder of a baby of eighteen months? The little monster lured the infant to a sand pit and buried it alive, piling stones on it to keep it in the grave he prepared for it; and was caught taking another baby away to the same fate. This boy murderer is not a normal child on the face of it; and as it seems wildly improbable that he should ever outgrow his homicidal propensities, his fate is life long restraint. One cannot help feeling that a painless death would be the most merciful portion to meet out to him. It is impossible to treat him as a subject for industrial school or reformatory; and, to my mind, five minutes in a lethal chamber were an alternative preferable to perhaps 70 years in a criminal lunatic asylum.

The Underground Railway indulged in its second accident on Tuesday; quite a number of people were seriously injured by the collision at King's Cross and one or two may not recover. The extraordinary thing is that none of the men in the rear carriages were killed on the spot: the carriages were smashed to pieces and it was over an hour before a few of the victims could be relaesed by the saw. Yesterday the town was horrified by news of the Lyddite explosion at Woolwich: sixteen dead; some of the unfortunate men were blown to pieces and their relatives had the gruesome duty of identifying the severed limbs by tallow marks and so on. It is the worst accident that Woolwich has known for half a century.

ONLOOKER.

A good lady called on a doctor with her youngest olive branch, and on explaining his symptoms was told to go home and give him a black draught. When the doctor called next day he found young hopeful writhing on the ground in agony.

"What," he said, "didn't you give him the black draught?"

"Well," replied the woman, "I couldn't find a draught, so I gave him a domino instead—double sixes!"

WINDING UP THE SEASON.

BOLAGUNGE is not an inviting place of residence, being, except when washed out by one of the periodical floods, anything but cleanly. What between husks of supari nuts, skins of jack fruit, rejected oranges, piles of imperfectly sundried fish, pigs, goats, pariah dogs, mangy cats, and swampy surroundings, it seems wonderful the place should continue to be occupied. Being close under the steep cliff-like hills, however, the view from it is pretty enough and the clear sparkling stream is a redeeming feature. Small fish up to a couple of pounds rise readily to the fly, while the voracious bashar can be had with either spoon or minnow, though you have to look out for that gorging abomination the big gar whose scissor-like teeth will cut through the stoutest gut trace. Spread of cultivation and sinking of the ground between this place and the foot of the mountains in June 1897, have driven both deer and buffalo away, so beyond a solitary boar or sounder the eka around contains nothing. At the same time the village pigs roam so far afield that great circumspection is requisite in letting fly at anything in the pork line anywhere around. Goats being plentiful encourage the leopard to lurk about, and though seldom seen in the day time his pugs appear on paths, sand banks, and about the fenced-in compounds of a morning, without exciting much attention. A good many are trapped, but as skins, from the wearers being lammed to death with lathis or daos and the whiskers burnt off, they are not worth having. By poling a couple of miles up stream you can have good sport in April, and in fact all through the rains, there being a small though deep pool where the river twists round to the south; masheer here running up to 20 and 40lbs. Having business further on we did not sojourn here long but made for a place marked on the map as Jebunopore (why, I can't say) as the people of the bustee call it Subansora. It may be as well to mention that many names on our topographical maps are incorrectly given, the same applying to the streams. A path from this place leads up the hill to Nongjuri and so on to Shillong, but unless one is accustomed to the hands and knees mode of progression he had better go round by the old road or a newly-opened track viâ Whalang. A good pleasant-enough camping ground is had in a cluster of small huts at the base of the hill and about two miles to the left (west) on the path to Terriah over some low spurs covered with brushwood lies the entrance to the Brahmin Cave.

Three days sufficed for what business I had to do here, and as the weather appeared settled we went in for some fishing in the stream that forms the Terriah as also the Companygunge river issuing from the hills through an imposing gap with short rapids ad lib, the common reservoir being fully a couple of acres in extent and never without a ripple. Except at noonday you can always find shade under cliffs from which to operate, and there being little umbrageous timber about there is splendid ground for casting, while, either in the feeding or empting rapid, you can troll to your heart's content. In April common trout gear is sufficient, but in September, perhaps, the best month for whipping this place, you need a stout salmon rod and the strongest tackle for the huge monsters that come bounding up run over 70lbs., while even the smaller fish seem in that month to be imbued with extraordinary vigour. The precipitous sides of the ravine are too steep for any animals, so that camping all fresco can be indulged in without fear of prowlers and a week can be passed in this quiet secluded spot without encountering a human being or anything more dangerous than an otter. The scenery, though rugged, is grand, while at all seasons of the year there is a cool breeze flowing down the ravine Bare as the Um Lam Lam gorge seems to be of vegetation, it is remarkable for the numerous hives of bees which are mostly fixed in the fissures of the rocks under shelter of overhanging boulders which latter look as if the slightest motion would topple them down. The ravine is an ideal asylum for the insects as it is safe from bruin as also from the red ant, and, unless by the aid of uncommonly flimsy ladders, from the h man marauder also.

On our return my attention was drawn to fresh droppings which at first I took merely as those of the lungoor which are plentiful enough about here, but closer inspection showed to be those of bear, but it was too late to follow up. The take when weighed in camp came up to 120lbs, of fish, averaging 7lbs. a piece, all caught with the gray fly. The men being anxious for bruin flesh we procured a tyke from Lakat starting early next morning to take up the trail; otters that had been scampering over the ground the night before rather bothered the scent until we got up into the first range when we hit it off pretty quick, soon finding one of the little black chaps gazing up at a swarm of bees out of his reach. Off he went among the rocks, dodging in and out in fine style, till we lost him suddenly on the edge of a deep rift in the limestone, across which he must have jumped. We had to hunt about for a crossing as the gap was exceedingly deep and the take off and landing too fragile to trust to. At last a wythe hanging from an acacia tree was found, so unwinding it we swung ourselves over: doggy would not try it, and after running to and fro for some time quietly trotted homeward leaving us to our own devices. Small as the bear are here they are uncommonly active and following up may result in an unpleasantly sudden encounter. Toiling up a spur clearer than usual we sighted our friend leisurely walking up the centre; a shot from a No. 12 hit him in the flank and with an angry growl down he came, but a second ball broke his back, and ere we got up to him all was over. My chum began to pull the dead creature about till warned of the consequences, for early in the season the shaggy covering abounds with ticks in all stages of development. We slung the quarry on a long bamboo, the bearers taking the precaution to smear the pole between them and the carcase with some sticky milk like juice afforded by a creeper. On examining the hide in camp I said I didn't care for the skin, so that it was forthwith singed and then taken off. Bear steaks are uncommonly good eating and the news of our success getting wind little was left of bruin by the next morning.

We paid a visit to the cave, but it has been so often described before that details are unnecessary. The entrance does not seem to have been affected by the big earthquake, and the only noticeable thing inside is a huge stalactite detached from the roof lying in three pieces across the path to the pool. The sight of this and the number of others hanging over head I must confess had something to do with determining us from remaining long inside in case of a repetiton of subterranean convulsions. Trying a fresh way back home rewarded us by getting a ravine deer, also a tola the latter being much appreciated by our men. I attended the bazaar at Lakat on hât day and gained a good deal of information as to the game in the huge bheel. South of it little alteration has taken place here and the old shikari, now, poor old chap past work from partial blindness, informed me that there were quite as many buffalo and bheelwah in the place as before, the decline in the trade of the hât keeping people away. There is a small herd of elephants knocking about between Lakat and the Jafflong tea garden, but no notable animal among them, though a big rogue tusker is in possession of the Oomla meit ravine to the eastward. The Bengalee bustee wallahs say the beast is a rogue, but no damage has been credited to him that I could glean, so I suppose he is one of those solitary males on a prospecting matrimonial turo. From its isolated position the country, both terai and bheel between Bolagunge and Jaintiapore, remains pretty well stocked with game, but as the latter is without timber, elephants would be needed to beat it properly. The village of Darrung is the best place to hang out in as it affords access to the bheel, the low teelahs at the foot of the hills proper, as also the debouchere of the Mantang river well up which the valley opens out affording refuge to numbers of the pretty little agile mouse deer, with now and then such sambhur families as recess away from the low country.

NO. 4 REFUGE HOUSE.

DURING the X'mas holidays, 1901, the year of the big cyclone in November, we paid our second visit to No. 4 Refuge House in the Sunderbunds. Our fleet consisted of a big house-boat the "Curlew," occupied by ourselves, a smaller one the "Seamew" filled with stores and serving as kitchen, and a fine big launch, the "Kittiwake," who towed the lot, and several dinghies besides. We believe in doing things comfortably when we trip to Sunderbunds. The following notes are taken from my diary dated 20th December, Mutla: "All day coaling and watering; at 8 P. M. started with favourable tide and fine moon. Held on to mouth of Hoogildee; laid up for night. 21st, started 6 A. M., made Seerfulla gang 10-30 A. M. Held on down Kai Khall Maree and Dalhousie River, etc., till made gang leading to Refuge House No. 4 Creek, with shoal at mouth. Tide full, so had no difficulty in crossing the bar. Held on by moonlight, till we were within quarter of a mile of the mouth of khall and the sea. Anchored for night. Lovely calm night. Day somewhat blowy; sea trifle lumpy in places." Next morning we rowed down to the mouth of the khall, and it being low water we were much struck by the changes apparent in our surroundings. On the Refuge House side, instead of hard black mud cut up by little channels of water and thickly interspersed with the jagged remains of trees we landed on a spread of smooth white and golden sand, reaching far out into the sea and extending right up to the Refuge House. Here again a great change had been effected, for the sand was heaped up so high that we could almost touch the floor of the shelter without climbing the ladder at all. Everywhere was drifted shining white sand. Quantities had been carried a long way into the jungle, quite overwhelming the lower growth in places. Only one set of tiger pugs did we see here—a fact which struck us as remarkable; as in former times the walk along the sea face and round and round the Refuge House seemed to be the fashionable promenade for the tiger community of the island. The poor old house looked dilapidated and much the worse for its buffeting by the cyclone, and no longer a safe or desirable haven for the distressed. In the afternoon we landed on the opposite side and discovered still greater changes had taken place there. About a mile of heavy jungle, at the end of the island, consisting of well raised ground and old salt pans, a regular stronghold for tigers had been completely swept away, only a small bank of hard black mud and the stumps of a few trees being left to mark the spot. We wondered what had happened to the tigers. Truly those must have been days of terror to the inhabitants of the island. From what we saw, it seemed as though nearly the whole place was under water at one period of the storm. Another splendid stretch of sand bordered with good jungle, a favourite play-ground for deer, had also completely disappeared into the sea. There were no pugs about, but we met a pig or two routing around in the jungle and saw a couple of deer scamper off, but too far for a shot. I forgot to mention that as we rowed to the mouth of the khall, we saw our old friends, the pair of muggars, lying basking in the sun close to the water's edge, almost exactly in the same spot as they frequented two years' ago; evidently a trifle such as a cyclone disturbed not the even tenor of their lives. The following morning we took a long walk over the sands for about three miles along the sea face. We passed by the old salt licks and found them filled up with sand, but the deer had already scooped out a fresh hole for themselves, while mingled with their tracks all round the place were the ominous pugs of other gentry. On our way home as we were skirting the edge of the waves, the tide having run out, we noticed some queer scratchy-looking marks in the moist sand, and found that they formed a regular path leading from the sea towards the dry sand and jungle. At first we attributed them to a muggar's proceedings, but on following them up found they terminated in a series of scrapings round a small space of sand and finally led away to the sea again. I was stamping about the place where the marks were when suddenly my foot sank in over the instep. In great excitement we fetched bits of drift wood and commenced to dig and in a few seconds were rewarded by the sight of a nice round little leathery shelled egg, which was quickly followed by several more. Finally, when all the dry sand was cleared away, a neat cavity was exposed to view, filled with newly-laid rows of pinky white, perfectly round, turtles' eggs, all moist and shining in the wet sand. We lifted them out and piled them like cannon balls in a heap, and on counting found that the "clutch" contained no less than a hundred and fifty-seven eggs. We also photographed them, but, alas! the plate got spoiled. Our boatmen, Calcutta manjis, said they knew they were "good to eat," but their caste forbade them to do so. As we had no caste scruples, we had them taken home in triumph and partook of them for several days with gusto. This is the way to serve turtles' eggs: Boil gently for about 15 minutes, bring to table hot, tear the leathery shell open, separate the jelly-like white from the yolk, and spread latter on toast or bread and butter; add plenty of pepper and salt. This was the only turtle's nest we found with eggs in it, but later on discovered others which had been robbed of their contents. The thief we traced to a big boar whom we occasionally saw running about the sands in eager search after something we could not make out what, but put down as crabs. One day with the aid of the glasses we made out he was gobbling up huge mouthfuls out of the sand, and we wondered; but our discovery of the turtle's nest and several holes along the shore shewed us how the beggar had been feasting.

Our great occupation when the tides suited was fishing. One method by which we made several good hauls was to stretch a long deep net across the mouth of a small khall from bank to bank, staking it down firmly to the mud at the bottom. This was done at high tide, just before the water turned to run down; and when at low water we re-visited the net, the result was usually a nice little catch of "pisces," edible, also non-edible, amongst them a few beetis, crabs galore, and a selection of very toothsome little fish in shape like a bream, with formidable spines on their humped backs, beautifully marked with purple and bronze blotches on back and sides. Fried in butter with artistically scattered bread crumbs, they made a most poetic dish. Our men were particularly rejoiced when a horrid looking monster, with flat head, boot buttons for eyes, and long feelers pendant from its enormous gargoyle-like mouth was included in the catch, as they reckoned it a great delicacy. The brutes squeaked when they were handled and very often contained big yellow-brown oval eggs, resembling large cod liver oil capsules in appearance and shape. I've no doubt they were equally tasty, but we declined to be tempted into sampling their quality though our men brought us a lot nicely fried in oil, and were much disappointed at our refusal of their dainty dish. But our most sporting fishing was when we visited a big mud and sand flat, a sort of blind khall left dry by the receded tide. Then we took as many men as could be mustered, and all the nets, scoops, and baskets handy, and made a day of it. The great thing was to venture out as far as possible over the yielding sands, sometimes up to the knees in slush—most exhausting walking—in order to meet the first rush of the incoming tide as it raced with turgid, sandy waters into the little channels bearing on its waves multitudes of struggling shrimps and tiny fish, who were hurried along; noless roleus with leaves and other rubbish. This was the time for using scoop nets and baskets; even a waistcloth came in handy, but soon the water deepened and larger fish came sailing up the stream in hot pursuit of their small brethren, who jumped out of the water in shoals to avoid their jaws. A most wonderful sight. Now the cast net came into requisition, the pheng do jhall as one of our party christened it, and many a fine young beeti was captured by its means; various other fish a sea snake or two, and some little sharks. One day a small porpoise followed the crowd into quite shallow water, but we did not get a cast. Its colour was remarkable, being a light flush pink; we put it down as an albino freak. A saw fish about three feet in length was amongst the catch made by the cast net. He was a most agile and slippery customer and gave us great trouble to haul out of the water. On land he was more lively than ever, flapping about to such an extent that his saw got hopelessly entangled in the net, and several meshes had to be cut before we could get him free. It was anything but a pleasant job as his saw was so sharp that the operators received some nasty scratches before he was released. Our men called this fish "rhattak," and were most anxious to get possession of the saw which is used as a charm, but we preferred to keep the trophy for ourselves. We were particularly struck by the absence of the great armies of blood-red crabs that used to run over the sea-face and sand dunes during the day on the occasion of our first trip. They made a most wonderful splash of colour on the white sands, and when they paraded at the edge of the sea the effect of their vivid red against the deep blue of the water was most picturesque. It was evident the cyclone was answerable for the diminution in their ranks, as fresh sand to the depth of several feet had been swept up over some of their special haunts, and water was standing in other places. We only saw a few small companies of them. Coming home one evening along the sands at dead low water we were much amused watching their little ways. The sun had just set, and the evening was very calm, the sea sliding up the smooth white sands in absurdly tiny waves. A company of frivolous young crabs ran down to the water's edge and there played a game that was quite human in its way. They all ranged themselves in a line, and as a wavelet came coursing up the sand, the great joke seemed to be to push your neighbour in and skip out of the way yourself. Further up the bank, about high water mark, the older crabs were walking slowly around, cleaning up their holes, or sitting demurely at their doors, while the little ones played close by.

The alteration made by the cyclone to our usual landing place on the Refuge House side was rather a nuisance. The banks at the mouth of the small khall had been washed away and the channel deepened considerably, obliging us to row further up the khall when the tide was high and step off the boat right into the jungle. As at this part it was much blocked with piled-up drift wood, mounds of sand and matted bushes, we rather fought shy of excursioning on that side, unless the tide was running out enough to allow of our alighting on the chur that had been formed beside the channel. One day we organised a big fishing, and wind and tide being favourable, landed on the said chur and proceeded gaily along the sand to our destination,—the big flats, little dreaming of the surprise party the elements had in store for us poor innocents. The sport was good, and laden with spoils we tramped back along the sands rather astonished to find the water so far in; also we noted a tumbling line of breakers out to sea, but before we reached the corner by the Refuge House we found the tide had come in with a rush, bringing a strong breeze with it; that big rollers were racing up towards the khall, breaking in showers of white spray over the submerged sand banks, seething right in amongst the jungle, while even our ghât a little way up the khall was a commotion of turbulent waters. Our dinghies were nowhere to be found. We shouted and shouted, but hearing no answer through the noise of the waves and the wind, retraced our steps some way back into the jungle in the endeavour to find a road leading further up the khall. However there was nothing in that line to be discovered. So following the pugs of a tiger we forced our slow and painful way through the debris left by the cyclone, climbing over huge fallen trees, "wrastling" with sticky creepers, prodded by thorns, or sinking into deep beds of sand, filled with colossal oyster shells, when we were not paddling through water. These acrobatic feats were somewhat fatiguing, loaded as we were with heavy rifles and photographic "apparatus," our men being already over-burdened with the fish and net they carried. The leading pugs were suggestively fresh too, and when presently we found larger ones close alongside, somewhat fresher if possible, trending the same way, quite a healthy excitement was added to our endeavours to reach the open as speedily as might be. At last, wading up to the ankles in water, we won through only to find the dinghies swaying about on the other side of the khall, the men holding on for dear life to the jungle to prevent their being swept out to sea or dashed against the trees, while a strong sea boiled around them instead of the usual placid waters. The prospect was anything but cheering. As it was not yet the top of the tide, there was nothing to be done but to wait till it turned to run out again, and hope that the wind and sea would then calm down. In about half an hour we made a start wading out to the dinghies which were still bobbing about like corks in a stream, and scrambled into them in a manner not wholly dignified. Our dinghie, the largest and heaviest laden, went first

We had two natives rowing and one to steer. J. & R. also took oars, while I sat in the bows and warned the rowers when a big wave was approaching. The swell was very heavy but our sharp-nosed dinghie shot up and down over them most actively. When we reached the bar at the mouth, however, the real fun commenced. Here the rollers were not only huge in size, but followep close upon each other, leaving the old boat hardly time to rise from the hollow of the one passed, before the next was upon her. It was anxious work navigating that sand bank. Just as we thought we were well over the worst, three enormous waves came swelling up upon us; in their immediate wake two smaller ones. We had just time to sit tight, when they were upon us. The brave old dinghie rose to them and slipped over the first two in a wonderful manner, but as her nose was still in the air after the third, in rushed the smaller ones, giving her no time to recover. Down she came with an awful smack and a shock that sent us all out of our seats, while the spray flew out on either side, and the waters seemed as if they must rush in and overwhelm us. But such was her buoyancy that though she shipped some water over her bows, the waves seemed to slip apart from beneath her rounded keel, and she showed not the slightest sign of upsetting. The men now strained lustily at their oars, and before another succession of rollers could reach us we were over the bar and into comparatively smooth waters. The other dinghie, being shorter, managed the passage easier than we did,but every one was extremely thankful fo find themselves out of the hurly-burly. If we had been upset, how very unpleasant it would have been. Apart from losing all our rifles, etc., and even if we could have struggled to shore, the water on the bar being pretty shallow, the chances were our friends the muggars would have played "Undertaker" to some of the party. No doubt they were ready watching for a catastrophe the whole time. That same evening about 5 o'clock a tiger roared in the jungle quite close to the house-boat, and it was a remarkable thing how many pugs we found during our rambles after we had been in the place for a few days; whereas on our first explorations we thought there was hardly a tiger left on the island. On our return voyage we took a new route, steaming north and west through various khalls We started at 2-30 P. M. and by 5-30 P.M. had reached the sea, but as there was a formidable bar guarding the mouth of the khall, we had to lie inside for the night. Very early next morning we rowed the "Seamew" and "Curlew" over the bar, the launch following as soon as the tide made sufficiently to allow of her getting over with a scrape. At 8-30 A. M. the fleet started, and after a lovely smooth run up the Bidda River, arrived at Musjid Bari, 2-30 P. M., dropping anchor at our old moorings there. We passed on the way splendid stretches of sand and inviting-looking jungle, and marked down a likely spot or two for future exploration. The cyclone seemed to have played great havoc in places, the trees being totally destroyed, and the sand heaped up and carried far into the jungles, while in other cases khalls had been formed, quite changing the character of the land

The chequered public career of Tom Oliver was wound up about 1865 by a sale of his effects under an execution. Among the live-stock offered for sale at the public auction was an animal which might have been anything, but was described in the catalogue as a mare. She had been left to graze for some time—while the bailiffs were in possession—in a field where there was a pool. In this she had bathed to her heart's content, and as she was never groomed she got very dirty and ragged. She, as a matter of course, filled her stomach with grass till it distended to such an extent as to destroy all her original symmetry.

Her racing career had, from accident to a leg, been brief and untriumphant, so that her merits were only known to her owner, who—when her appearance had created much derision, and she failed to elicit a bid—asked the auctioneer if he might be allowed to repossess her. The united shout of approval which followed such a modest request induced the auctioneer to hand the mare over to the bankrupt Thomas, and he, knowing what a diamond was concealed in the rough exterior, took her with him to his new location, which was as private trainer to Mr. W. S. Cartwright.

This mare was The Bloomer, from whom were descended Ely, Albert Victor, George Frederick, Louise Victoria, and other notable race-horses, and she may be said to have been the founder of one of the most famous lines of modern times.

EARLY SNIPE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The subjoined table shows the dates on which the first couple of snipe were shot each year in the districts of Chittagong and the Chittagong Hill Tracts. These birds, from their poor condition, were evidently new arrivals :—

1900	At Rangamati on			16th	,,

It is a pity there are gaps in the years, but here is the record of a whole district and it may be of use to naturalists. Note how early the first couple was got in 1892. Was it an early year in other districts I wonder.

LUCKNOW 4TH OPEN GYMKHANA.

STEWARDS :

G T SPANKIE, ESQ | CAPT L M DUNBAR, 5TH D G
MAJ EUSTACE, 5TH DG | „ W Q WINDWOOD, 5TH D G

Judge.—MAJ. EUSTACE, 5TH D.G.
Clerk of the Scales.—C. LANG, ESQ., 5TH. D G.
Starter.—F. BEATY, ESQ.

First Day, Thusday, 2nd July 1903.

Lucknow has this week again had cause to be grateful to the energy of the Stewards generally and to the Honorary Secretary Captain Dunbar, in particular, an energy which not even the ghastly weather we are having now seems to have any effect upon. On Thursday and Saturday at any rate they have had the gratification of seeing that their efforts were fully appreciated. The attendance was good on both days, especially on Saturday ; the fields were also for the most part good, and the sport was undeniable. Captain Dunbar had a bit of bad luck on Thursday when one of his horses, Priest, came to grief; on the other hand he won three races on that day, with Eldorado, Victory, and Rowena. On Saturday Major Eustace, who undertook the task of judging, had a couple of wins. On Thursday the Officers of the R. A. were "At Home," and on Saturday our thirsts—and they were neither few nor small—were looked after by the 6th Bengal Cavalry. The Band of the VII in Rajputs was in attendance on both days. The following are the full result of this most successful meeting. Details :—

THE STICK STAKES.—Rs. 32 to the winner and Rs. 10 to the second. A Flat Race for bonâ fide Paperchasers and Hunters that have regularly attended the Paperchase Meets this season. C. W. over 10st 7lbs. Gentleman riders only. 1 mile.

LONDON Friday, 19th June, 1903.

THE TURF.

THE programme at Hurst Park on the 13th instant was framed on broad and liberal lines, and at no other meeting of the many held here during the season is prize-money distributed with such prodigality. The value of the stakes amounted to an aggregate of well over 5,000 sovs., and, with three such attractive items as the Victoria Cup, Hurst Park Foal Plate, and Duchess of York Plate following each other in quick succession the entertainment could not fail to reach a high standard of excellence. Unfortunately the hostility of the elements effectively marred the enjoyment of what should have been a most pleasant reunion. Shortly before midday the lowering clouds began to discharge their contents, and a drenching downpour continued without cessation throughout the whole of the afternoon.

The conditions could hardly have been more dismal or cheerless, and a large section of those who go racing for pleasure were deterred from participating in their favourite pastime in consequence. The upshot was that the muster all round was far below the average, and much of the interest in the proceedings evaporated. Sodden to begin with, the turf began to cut up badly before the curtain was rung down upon a high-class day's sport, and many of the rising generation who figured under silk failed to show their true form in the mud.

An interesting feature was the installation of a new electric clock for the timing of races which was first used to-day. The dial occupied a prominent position opposite the judge's box, and though the contrivance was only used experimentally this afternoon and was not seen to the best advantage, it must be voted an unqualified success

THE DUCHESS OF YORK PLATE—Of 979 sovs., for three-year-olds : colts 9st, fillies and geldings 8st 11lbs ; with penalties and allowances. One mile and a half.

(Winner trained by C. Peck, at Ilsley.)

BETTING : 5 to 2 agst Henry the First, 9 to 2 Bridget filly, 11 to 2 Bolsover, 7 to 1 Herbert Vincent, 100 to 12 Week End, and 100 to 8 any other.

Won by a head ; three lengths separated the second and third, Bolsover was fourth, Frusquinade fifth, Pennacook sixth, Queen Beauty seventh, Wild Willow eighth, and Armoea last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min. 5⅘secs.

It was a notable Ascot, notwithstanding the weather, and the attendance was fairly large. Their Majesties the King and Queen, who arrived just prior to the first race, had a most enthusiastic reception, Her Majesty looking beautiful as ever in white bonnet and heavily trimmed cloak. His Majesty was the picture of health and good spirits ; in his buttonhole there was a scarlet geranium. The Royal party arrived in eight four-horsed landaus. It was, of course, a day for cloaks and wraps, with unfortunately but little interval except when the sun came out brilliantly and did its best to make amends, just after the chief race of the day, which Genius won. Then some amount of honour was done to the resplendent scene, the stands offering a brilliant picture, while the field for this race as it flashed by was a sight more than worth seeing.

THE GOLD VASE—Value 200 sovs, given by His Majesty, with 200 sovs in specie for the winner, and 100 sovs for the second added to a sweepstakes of 20 sovs each ; weight for age, etc. Two miles.

BETTING : 11 to 2 agst Cappa White, 7 to 1 Gourgaud, 10 to 1 Throwaway, 10 to 1 Scullion, 10 to 1 Elba, 10 to 1 Prince Florizel, 10 to 1 Preen, 100 to 9 Rightful, 100 to 8 Suprenant, 100 to 8 Victor Don, 100 to 7 Alderman, 100 to 6 Lord Brand, 20 to 1 any other (offered).

Rightful led from Scullion to the stands, where he settled down with a slight lead of Gourgaud, Great Dame colt, and Intaglio, with Alderman and Surprenant next, in advance of Scullion, Prince Florizel, Blithesome, and Victor Don, Genius being the whipper-in to the Brick Kilns, where Scullion took third position, closely followed by Victor Don, Alderman, Surprenant, Lord Brand, and Throwaway. So they ran to the bend for home, where Rightful was still leading from Gourgaud, Scullion, and Genius and the last-named, drawing to the front below the distance, followed by Scullion and Rightful, won by two lengths ; four lengths separated the second and third. Gourgaud was fourth, Coal Sack fifth, Preen sixth, Throwaway seventh, Prince Florizel eighth, Alderman ninth, Lord Brand tenth, Victor Don eleventh, Great Dame colt next, and Blithesome and Rodrigue II. the last pair. Time by Benson's chronograph, 3mins. 35⅘secs. Value of stakes, £1785.

Won in a canter amidst uproarious applause by six lengths ; a neck between second and third. Ladurlad was fourth, Eoscene fifth, St. Evremonde sixth, Merry Saint seventh, and Saltpetre last, except Playbill, who was dismounted five furlongs from home. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2mins 59secs.

Very unsettled and dubious was the outlook on the morning of the 17th, and it was not until long after breakfast that favourable weather could be looked forward to with any degree of confidence. Happily, the conditions improved hour by hour, and it was to the accompaniment of a balmy atmosphere and brilliant sunshine that a resumption was made. Furthermore, the afternoon remained fine to the close, though a severe thunderstorm passed over the course soon after the conclusion of hostilities.

The presence of the King is indispensable to the success of an Ascot gathering, and the knowledge that his Majesty would again grace the proceedings went a long way towards attracting an illustrious and fashionable assemblage to the famous Heath. In every department the muster showed a decided improvement on that of twenty-four hours previously, and the scene was in every way more brilliant, though doubts on the score of the weather were reflected in the feminine toilettes, dark and substantial materials being worn in many instances in place of the dainty diaphanous fabrics usually exclusively associated with the function. There was a wonderful show of costumes nevertheless, the Royal enclosure in particular having the appearance of a flower garden. The going had improved materially during the night, and large fields were once more the order of the day, but the "talent" fared badly, and the ring must have spent an enjoyable afternoon.

BETTING: 9 to 2 agst St. Brendan, 9 to 1 Roe O'Neil, 9 to 1 Hazafi, 10 to 1 Duke of Westminster, 100 to 8 Kilcheran, 100 to 8 General Cronje 100 to 6 Burses, 100 to 6 Imperious, 100 to 6 Kearsage, 20 to 1 Handicapper, 25 to 1 Minnie Dee, 25 to 1 Cerillo 25 to 1 Swooper, 33 to 1 Kunstler, 33 to 1 Rondeau, 33 to 1 O'Donovan Rossa, 40 to 1 Tar Brush, 40 to 1 Bacheor's Button, 50 to 1 Bailantrae, 50 to 1 the Solicitor, 52 to 1 Lavengro, 66 to 1 Chaucer, 66 to 1 Acefull, 66 to 1 Hartfield, 66 to 1 Wapentake.

The white flag was hoisted at five minutes past three, but it was 3-26 before the barrier was raised to an irregular start, in which the worst sufferers were Burses, who whipped round, Kilcheran, Bachelor's Button, Cerillo, and The Solicitor. The first to show in front was Swooper in the centre, from Hazafi, on the upper ground, Minnie Dee in the centre, and Chaucer, with St. Brendan on the right, Kearsage and Duke of Westminster next and Imperious, Handicaper, O'Donovan Rossa, and Kunstler heading the middle division, for half the journey when Swooper lost his place, and Hazafi showed the way to Handicapper, Imperious, Kunstler, O'Donovan Rossa, and Duke of Westminster. So they ran till approaching the distance, where Kunstler, in the centre, and Imperious, on the stand side, singled themselves out clear of Handicapper, Hazafi, Duke of Westminster, and O'Donovan Rossa, and a fine set-to resulted in favour of Kunstler by a neck; two lengths separated the second and third. Hazafi, close up, was placed fourth: Duke of Westminster was fifth O'Donovan Rossa sixth, Chaucer seventh, Swooper eighth Kearsage ninth, Minnie Dee tenth, St. Brendan eleventh, and General Cronje twelfth, the next lot comprising Tar Brush, Lavengro, Wapentake, Cerillo, Bachelor's Button, and Burses. Kilcheran was last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min. 45½secs. Value of the stakes, £2,450.

(Winner trained by R. Count in France.)

BETTING: Evens Rising Glass, 6 to 4 agst Maximum II, 100 to 7 Elba, 100 to 7 Prince Florizel.

Prince Florizel was the first to leave the paddock, being followed in the parade by Rising Glass, with Elba whipping in. The same order was preserved in the canter. It was ten minutes after time when the white flag was hoisted, but only a minute elapsed before the barrier rose to a capital start, Prince Florizel showing the way to Maximum II, and Elba, to the stand, where Elba took up the running clear of Prince Florizel, with Rising Glass bringing up the rear. There was no change whatever until passing the Brick Kilns, when Prince Florizel closed with Elba and the pair came on two or three lengths clear of Maximum II. to the straight, where the last-named gradually assumed the command from Rising Glass, upon whom Halsey was hard at work, and, making the remainder, of the running, the French candidate won in a canter by six length; three lengths separated the second and third. Time by Benson's chronograph, 4 mins 4⅘secs. Value of the stakes, £3,390.

BETTING: 7 to 2 agst Rydal Head, 7 to 2 Lancashire, 9 to 2 Leucadia, 5 to 1 Montem (Kermesse f), 8 to 1 Jolly Beggar, 100 to 8 Castello, 100 to 7 any other.

Santry, on the top ground made play from Montem (Kermesse filly). Rydal Head, and La Fleche filly, with Leucadia next, in advance of Castello, Herbert Vincent, and Lancashire, till a quarter of a mile fromm home, when Leucadia and Rydal Head joined Santry, but Montem, shooting to the front inside the distance, clear of Santry and Lancashire, won cleverly by two lengths; a head divided the second and third. Leucadia was fourth, Rydle Head fifth, Herbert Vincent sixth, Helter Skelter seventh, Bridget filly eighth, La Fleche filly next, and Castello last. Time by Benson's chronograph. 1min. 15secs.

MATCH vs. GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—Played at Cheltenham on 15th, 16th and 17th June. The Philadelphians won by an innings and 26 runs. Owing to continuous rain the ground at Cheltenham was partly flooded at the time fixed for play on Monday, and although it was decided to wait until four o'clock on the chance of some cricket, a heavy shower at one o'clock necessitated a postponement until the morrow. The Gloucestershire team, when they batted on Tuesday, were without Jessop, who was called away owing to the illness of his wife, and against the bowling of Lester, King and Clark they could do very little on a slow wicket. On the other hand the Gentlemen of Philadelphia, thanks chiefly to bold batting by King and Cregan, did much better. As the ball travelled very slowly, some of King's best hits only produced three runs. When stumps were drawn, the total was 131 for seven wickets, or 45 runs on. Yesterday the innings ended with a lead of 69, and as when Gloucestershire went in again they could do next to nothing against the bowling of Clark and Lester, they were beaten by an innings. Lester met with remarkable success with the ball, his six wickets only costing 13 runs.

YORKSHIRE vs. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—Yorkshire won by 206 runs. For this match Yorkshire could only put a very weak team in the field, Lord Hawke, F. S Jackson, J. T. Brown, sen., and J. T. Brown, jun., Tunnicliffe, and Hirst, who are all more or less hors de combat, being unable to play. In the absence of Lord Hawke, the team was captained by R. W. Frank. On the Cambridge side E. M Dowson, Howard-Smith, and C. H. M. Ebden were away. In cold and cheerless weather it was possible to play for most of the first day, although stumps had to be drawn at six o'clock while there was an interruption after lunch on account of rain. The wicket was fairly easy, and Denton enjoyed himself upon it, playing a very sound innings which lasted for an hour and three-quarters. No one else greatly distinguished himself. When stumps were drawn Cambridge had lost a wicket for 16 runs. Rhodes and Haigh on Tuesday showed that on a difficult wicket they are as difficult as ever to deal with, and except for a scort stand by Harris and Mann, they had almost an uninterrupted run of success. Yorkshire, in their second innings, found scoring far from easy against the bowling of Keigwin, but they made enough runs to be able to beat Cambridge with the utmost ease, their bowlers once more having the upper hand.

SURREY vs. DERBYSHIRE.—Played at Chesterfield on 15, 16th and 17th June. Derbyshire won by 111 runs. Although the weather at Chesterfield was most unpromising in the morning, it was possible to begin play on Monday after lunch. For the greater part of the day the players were inconvenienced by a continuous drizzle, and for an hour play ceased, while at a quarter past six rain again fell heavily, and play ended for the day. The patient batting of L. G. Wright was the chief feature of the cricket, and Needham played a good innings. When stumps were drawn, Derbyshire had scored 125 for eight wickets. A good innings by Warren, who was not out 13 over night, helped materially to increase the Derbyshire total on the next morning, and the total of the whole innings was reasonably good, as Surrey soon found out. For on the damaged wicket Bestwick was nearly irresistile, and Holland and Hayes alone could play him. With a lead of 108, Derbyshire succeeded in putting together 152 for the loss of eight wickets before stumps were drawn, and were thus 260 runs on a position which looked extremely favourable for them. Yesterday when Surrey went in for the fourth innings of the match they had to make 265 runs, an almost impossible task on a difficult wicket. For the second time in the match Abel was out for nothing, but Hayward and Hayes played steadily and well, and later Walker did his best to save the game. But the task was hopeless, more especially as the light was so far bad that play had to be stopped three times on its account.

SURREY vs. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—Played at Cambridge on 11th and 12th June. Surrey won by ten wickets. By the time that stumps were drawn on the first day of this match Surrey were in an excellent position, for against a total of 183 they had scored 148 for the loss of three wickets. For a time Cambridge did very well indeed, Ebden, Mann and Dowson all batting finely. But when Lees went on to bowl the situation changed, and after lunch he took six wickets for 11 runs in eleven overs, six of which were maidens. Keigwin, who showed plenty of confidence, was the only man who could look at him. After Walker had been dismissed, with the total at 7 Hayward and Holland batted finely, but carefully, for Surrey, and raised the total to 124 in about an hour and three-quarters. When stumps were drawn the total was 148 for three wickets, Holland being not out 45. On the next morning Holland increased his score by 21, and when he was dismissed he had been batting for three hours for a most useful 76. Afterwards, Wiltshire, Baker and Lees all made very useful scores, and Surrey had a lead of 84. Before these runs were knocked off Cambridge lost eight wickets, Lees being in great form with the ball. But Roberts and Marsh then played bold cricket, and increased the total by 61 runs, so that Surrey had to go in again.

GOLF.

THE ST. GEORGES' VASE.—The annual thirty-six hole open amateur competition for the St. George's Challenge Vase was played yesterday on the links of the Royal St. George's Club at Sandwich. Despite a very heavy rain in the morning, the course was in good order. There were thirty-three competitors, including the holder, Horace Castle.

In addition to those who made full returns M. W. Mossop, Sunningdale; J. F. Abercromby, Royal St. George's; R. J. Robertson, Ashford Manor; the Earl of Darnley, Royal St. George's; C. Lake, Royal St. George's; Dr. Bruce Goff, Brighton and Hove; A. E. R. Kennedy, Royal St. George's; S. A. Peto Royal St. George's; the Hon. H. H. Finch-Hatton, Royal St. David's Harlech; Capt G. O. Bigge, Royal Engineers; H. McNill, Royal Sydney N. S. W. C. Burns, Royal Ashdown Forest; W. P. Mathews, Royal St George's the Hon. J. B. Lubbock, Royal St. George's; J. Robertsen Walker, Royal St. George's Major C. F. Baxter, Royal North Devon; P. C. Thornton, Royal Wimbledon; J. Markets Lt. Wimbledon; H. Underdown, Prince's; and J Tomkinson, Royal Cromer, competed. The non-starters were: Mr. S. Mure-Fergus son, capt. of the Royal St. George's Club; A. D. Blyth, Royal St. George's, and J. S. Worthington, Mid-Surrey

Mr. Hutchison's golf was sound all through. Playing a good long ball, he was rarely in difficulty from the tee, but he might have saved a couple of strokes on the greens in the morning, when he missed two short puts. Playing to the home green in the second round his tee shot found the rough to the left of the line, and the ball was lost. However, laying his approach dead he was down in a perfect fonr after going back to the tee, and took the hole in five. The details of his score were as follow.

FIRST ROUND.

Out: 5 4 4 4 4 3 5 4 5—38.
Home: 4 4 4 5 5 5 4 5 5—41
Total. 79.

SECOND ROUND.

Out: 5 5 4 4 4 3 5 5 3—38.
Home: 8 4 5 5 5 5 4 4 5—41
Total, 79.

The regularity of his play is shown by his card which was the only one for two rounds which contained nothing higher than a 5. Mr Fry, who was putting in his best form, spoilt his score at the seventh hole in the morning, where he required a 7 to get down. He lost his ball from his second shot, going to the seventh, and should have lost stroke and distance. Both he and his partner amagined that the ball should be treated as out of bounds, and so only distance was sacrificed. The error was not corrected until after the card had been handed in, and the question which has to be settled is whether, the competition not then being over, the card should be disqualified. Mr. Fry's score was as follows:—

FIRST ROUND.

Out: 5 5 3 4 4 3 7 5 4—38
Home: 5 4 4 5 5 5 4 5 5—42
Total, 80.

SECOND ROUND.

Out: 5 5 4 4 4 5 4 5 3—39.
Home: 4 4 5 4 5 5 4 5 3—39.
Total, 78.

Mr. Norman Hunter lost his ball from the last tee in the morning, and required 7 to hole out, but in the afternoon had the best round of the day, the details being: Out: 4 4 4 4 3 7 5 3 5—35; home: 5 4 4 5 5 5 4 5 4—14. Total, 76. Mr. Mansfield Hunter commenced splendidly, getting to the sixth hole in the morning in 4 under 4's, but his score after that included four 6's, and he took 82 for the round. The holder, Mr. Castle, played a steady game, whilst a splendid score would have been returned by Mr. Beveridge but for a 7 at the fourth and a 9 at the fifteenth hole in the morning, when he got into unplayable position in the first bunker, and for a 7 at the fourteenth in the afternoon, when he missed his tee shot. Considering his bad luck at the fifteenth hole, his 41 home, in the morning round was remarkably good. Mr. Castle's figures were :—

FIRST ROUD.

Out: 5 5 3 4 4 4 5 4 5—39.
Home: 4 4 4 5 6 5 4 5 5—42
Total. 81.

SECOND ROUND.

Out: 4 4 3 5 4 2 7 4 5..38
dome: 4 4 5 5 7 4 5 4 4—42.
Total. 80.

Mr. Beveridge's card was as follows: First round—Out 5 4 5 7 4 3 5 3 6—42; home: 4 4 4 4 5 9 4 3 4—41. Total, 83. Second round—Out: 5 4 5 5 3 2 5 3 3—36: home: 4 5 4 6 7 4 5 3 4—42 Total, 77. Mr C. E. Dick frequently found the rough, but a fine 78 in the afternoon enabled him to tie with Mr. Beveridge for third place. The details of Mr. Dick's rounds were: First round—Out: 4 4 4 5 5 3 6 3 5—39; home: 6 4 4 5 6 5 5 4 4—48. Total, 82. Second round—Out: 5 4 4 4 4 3 5 3 5—38; home 4 4 3 5 7 4 4 4 5—40 Total, 78. ROWING.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY SUMMER EIGHTS.—The weather on the 12th instant was more favourable for these races than on the previous evening, and there was a very large company again present which included Capt. Percy Scott, R. N., C. B., C. V. O., and Col. Dowse, commanding the Home district, besides several old Blues. Only five bumps were registered, three in the Lower Division and two in the First Division. Fewer bumps have not been known for several years past. Notwithstanding this the racing last evening was of an exceptional character, and proved most exciting, most of the crews having to row through. they were fairly exhausted at the finish. Third Trinity have had no difficulty in maintaining their position at the head, and have improved considerably during the racing. The Hall crew, although again hotly pursued by First Trinity 1 finished with a little more in hand than on other occasions. A finer struggle than that which took place between Jesus 1, Emmanuel 1, and Caius 1 from the commencement of the course could not be wished for. All up the Reach only a few feet separated the boats, and it was a question who would bump first. Caius gained the verdict just after shooting the railway bridge. Selwyn gained their third victory by defeating King's. Another keen struggle was witnessed between Pembroke 1, First Trinity 2, and Lady Margaret 2. No bumps were made, but at the finish First Trinity 2 were overlapping Pembroke, and only a few feet separated Lady Margaret from First. In the Lower Division Sidney again made a plucky effort to overhaul the Hall second boat, but just failed to bring off the bump. Caius 2 were only a few feet from Sidney at the winning post Emmanuel overtook Pembroke 2, Third Trinity 2 were defeated by First Trinity 3 and Clare 2 registered their third bump by lowering the colours of Trinity Hall 3. Messrs L. H. K. Bushe-Fox and R. A. Nelson again acted as Judges.

The Second Division were sent off at 5-30 in the following order :—

Trinity Hall 2	Jesus 2	St. Catharine's
Sidney	Caius	Queens'
Caius 2	Third Trinity 2	Magdalene
Pembroke 2	First Trinity 3	Downing,
Emmanuel 2	Trinity Hall 3
Clare 1	Clare 2

A good race between the first three boats resulted in close finishes. Emmanuel 2 brought about the downfall of Pembroke 2 just after passing the Willows, First Trinity 3 gained the mastery over Third Trinity 2 at Ditton corner, whilst Clare 2 triumphed over Trinity Hall 3 in the Post Reach.

The First Division started at 6-35 in the following orders :—

Third Trinity 1	Jesus 1	Pembroke 1
Trinity Hall 1	Emmanuel 1	First Trinity 2
First Trinity 1	Caius 1	Lady Margaret 2
Lady Margaret 1	King's	Peterhouse
Christ's	Selwyn	Trinity Hall 2

Although only two bumps were effec ed, some grand racing ensued. Third Trinity were well away, and the Hall again kept their position, although chased by First Trinity. Caius 1 bumped Emmanuel 1 when the latter were close on Jesus crew just by the railway bridge, and Selwyn captured King's upon entering the Reach.

These races were brought to a conclusion on Saturday the 13th Heavy rain fell throughout, consequently the attendance was very poor indeed as compared with the previous evening. The racing has not been so productive of bumps as in past years, only 27 being recorded during the four evenings. This proves the general average of the crews. Third Trinity (although they lost the services of that sterling oarsman, J. Edwards-Moss) have easily maintained their position at the "head." During the week they have come on a deal, and always finished more than their distance to the good. The most exciting racing has been between the next two boats. Both are to be congratulated on their plucky efforts. The Hall have been severely pressed each time, but have never lost their form and have stayed the better. First Trinity made a desperate effort on the last day to lower the Hall colours but the cox missed his shot in the Long Reach. Selwyn, for a small college, are to be heartily congratulated on making four bumps in the First Division. They have been under the supervision of the Rev. W. L. E. Parsons. Pembroke 1, of whom much was expected, have shown indifferent form, and have gone down three places. The most successful crews are Caius 1, Selwyn, First Trinity 3, and Clare 2. These have ascended each evening and consequently have gained their oars. Christ's and Caius 2 come next with two bumps each to their credit. The judges were: Messrs L. H. K. Bushe-Fox (Lady Margaret) and C. W. H. Taylor (Third Trinity).

The Second Division crews were started in the following order: Trinity Hall 2, Sidney, Caius 2, Emmanuel 2, Pembroke 2, Clare, 1, Jesus 2, Corpus, First Trinity 3, Third Trinity, 2, Clare 1, Jesus 2, Corpus, First Trinity 3, Third Trinity, 2, Clare 2, Trinity Hall 3, St. Catharine's, Queens', Magdalene, and Downing. Three bumps were made in this series. Trinity Hall 2 kept well ahead of Sidney, whilst the latter were hard pressed by Caius 2, who overlapped at the Railway Bridge, but failed to effect the bump. Emmanuel 2 were at the time well up with Caius. The Clare first boat made their fourth ascent by catching Pembroke 2 at the commencement of Stourbridge Common. First Trinity 3 lowered the colours of Corpus at Ditton Corner, and thus made their fourth bump. Clare 2 likewise accomplished a similar performance by defeating Third Trinity 2 in Post Reach. The five lower boats caused no excitement.

The First Division crews were started in the following order: Third Trinity 1, Trinity Hall 1, First Trinity 1, Lady Margaret 1, Christ's, Jesus 1, Caius 1, Emmanuel 1, Selwyn, Kings', Pembroke 1, First Trinity 2, Lady Margaret 2, Peterhouse, and Trinity Hall 2. Three victories were achieved in this string. Third Trinity had little difficulty in keeping their place at the "head of the river." There was, however, another exciting race between the next two crews, First Trinity shooting for Trinity Hall in the upper part of Long Reach, but their plucky spurt was not successful, as the Hall men got away a few feet and finished with some yards in hand. Lady Margaret were more than their distance away from First Trinity; and Christ's caused no serious trouble to the Johnians. Caius 1 wrought the downfall of Jesus 1 in Long Reach, and thus won their oars; a feat also accomplished by Selwyn, who caught Emmanuel 1 just before reaching Grassy Corner. The only other bump in the series was effected by First Trinity 2 on Pembroke 1 just before reaching the Railway Bridge. The other three crews created little interest. It is noteworthy, however, that Trinity Hall 2 have not been shifted from their position as "sandwich boat" throughout the contests.

ATHLETICS.

LONDON A. C. EVENING MEETING.—A further edition of the recent deluges seemed likely to cause a second postponement of the three members' handicaps which should have been brought off last week, but were put back to the 17th instant through the regrettable accident to the club handicapper, Mr. F. W. Parker, who is, we are glad to learn, progressing steadily. At the time fixed for the start—half-past six—rain was falling in torrents at the Stamford Bridge Grounds, Fulham, which were dotted with miniature lakes. Shortly after, however, the downpour ceased, and it was resolved to proceed with the programme, which was entered upon shortly after 7 P. M. and expeditiously worked off, although the water lay in a big pool where the runners enter the straight for home. Considering the conditions, there was some capital sport, witnessed by a handful of enthusiasts. It presented three features, one being the success of J. B. Densham, who secured the sprint and was second in the 300 yards; another the promising running of a new member in F. Heyes, who took the 1,000 yards from the limit mark; the third the unfortunate breakdown of C. H. Jupp, which is the more to be regretted as he has recently expressed himself as feeling remarkably fit. His leg troubled him the previous evening, and he resolved not to turn out for the sprint, but formed one of the eight who faced the starter for the 300 yards race. Though he began to close up the gap, it was soon seen that he was going lame, and on entering the straight he broke down completely and retired. Heyes, who is not yet, we understand, 18 years of age, and a Wimbledon schoolboy, could have increased his advantage, and though easing up, won by nearly twenty yards. He is possessed of a taking style, and should prove a valuable recruit to the ranks of the L. A. C. The officials were:—Judges: Messrs S. K. Holman and E H. Pelling; timekeeper, Mr. C. Val Hunter; stewards, Messrs E. Ion Pool and F. L. Fisher; and starter, C. Perry. Details:—

100 YARDS HANDICAP.—Heat 1: W. H. Orton, 4½ yards start, 1; W. F. Owsley, 8, 2; A. Quibampton 6½, 3. Won by three-quarters of a yard. Time—10⅖secs. Heat 2: J. B. Densham, 5 yards start, 1; A. Goodall, 6½, 2; L. F. Turner, scratch, 3. Won by a yard. Time—10⅖secs. Heat 3: E. P. Constantine, 1 yard start, 1; E. S. Ward, 8½, 2; F. E. Dickinson, 7½, 3. Won by half a yard. Time—10⅖secs. Heat 4: F. J. C. Shepherd, 6½ yards start, 1; C. W. Fox, 1½, 2. Won by a yard and a half. Time—10⅖secs.

FINAL HEAT.

J. B. Densham, 5 yards start	...	...	1
W. H. Orton, 4½	...	...	2
E. P. Constantine. 1	...	...	3
F. J. C. Shepherd, 6½	...	...	4

A capital finish. Densham winning by a foot, twice as much dividing second and third. Time—10⅖secs.

1,000 YARDS HANDICAP.—F. Heyes, 68 yards start, 1; S. Lunviss, 60, 2; C. S. White, 48, 3; E. S. Ward, scratch, 4; A. S. D. Smith, scratch, 5; R. R Fowler, 40. 0; E. R. Small, 5-, 0; F. E. Dickinson, 60, 0. The limit man went off at a hot pace and substantially increased his lead of his nearest opponents. The issue was never in doubt, and he eventually won, easing up, by about eighteen yards. It was a good race for places, White being only a couple of yards behind the second man, while the two scratch runners were close at his heels. Time—2mins. 18⅖secs.

300 YARDS HANDICAP.—A. Quibampton, 20 yards start, 1; J. B. Densham, 11, 2; A. Goodall, 23, 3; C. H. Jupp, scratch, 0; L. F. Tremeer, 4, 0; C. W. Fox, 9, 0; W. H. Orton, 16, 0; F. J. C. Shepherd 23, 0. This was run in one heat instead of two and produced a capital race. Densham looked like beating Quibampton on the post, but the latter came again and finished a few inches in front. A foot divided second and third, and Jupp, as already mentioned, broke down. Time—32⅖secs.

THE WEASEL.

When Fitzsimmons and Sharkey fought at Coney Island some time after their battle at San Francisco, the Sailor, who had improved a great deal in the meantime, rushed at "Fitz," swinging both hands. His left caught "Fitz." high on the jaw and shook him up pretty well.

"That's a good one, Tom!" Fitz. exclaimed.

"Yes, and here comes another one," said Sharkey. "I'm not as easy as you think."

Tom had the best of the round, and kept "Fitz." on the defensive. As they started back to their corners at the close of the round, Fitzsimmons turned and winked and grinned.

"Just wait till you see me sink the ship," he prophesied. The "ship," of course, was the fine, big full-rigged three-master that Tom had tattooed on his enormous chest. In the next round Fitzsimmons suddenly exclaimed, "'Ere now, Tom, 'ere goes for your face." Unthinkingly, the Sailor threw up his guard to protect his jaw, and just then Fitzsimmons' right, in a fierce upper-cut, landed on the keel of that big blue ship like a torpedo. The keel is just about on Sharkey's solar plexus.

The ship reeled, quivered, and slowly sank to the floor with all on board. Tom was a great rallier, however, and in a few seconds he was up and fighting again. Once more Fitzsimmons told him—"'Ere's one for your face," and as Tom threw his arms up, "Fitz's" fist landed under the ship again, and this time poor Tom went down and out.

Hunting.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

IT is not often in this great empire that the views of the all-conquering Aryan and the poor oppressed white man coincide or that the desire of all sects and creeds are unanimous, but this almost incredible reality exists in the pent-up longing for a timely rainfall. What a thousand pities they seem that with all the marvels of modern science our wise men cannot learn how to direct the course of the watery element and turn on the water tap at appropriate moments. Among others I venture to say Colonel Sheringham would have turned on the hose and sprayed the surrounding hunting country and many keen spirits would have lent a willing hand. Dry as the proverbial stick I am told was the ground when hounds met at the Slaughter Yard and a more than usually large field was thereby deprived of a gallop. Meeting at 5-30 no one could grumble that any of the day was wasted, and although a jack was viewed away from a hillock hard by and the Master lost no time of getting his hounds on the line there was obviously to even Macaulay's priggish school-boy (if he had been in such good company, which the detestable young brute certainly wouldn't have been) not a vestige of that sport producing aroma known to the talent as "scent" and try as hounds would they could make nothing of it and in abject despair the Master had to jog along to a cover, where, it was hoped, another bold Reynard of the country might be found. Jogging along over some very strong ground a quarter of an hour or so was sufficient to reach the desired spot. What a pity it seems to be that the covers out here are not named, as from all I can gather they are not. It makes it hard for the poor scribe to describe the line to those who like himself are unhappily able to share in the pleasures of the glorious chase. However an enclosed garden by the side of a stream sounds a likely lie for a jack in this sultry weather and so it proved, for no sooner were hounds thrown in than a merry burst of music set hearts aflutter, only to be disappointed by the unmistakable sound—pleasant enough after a fast 40 minutes, but a doleful dirge in cover, and a faint-hearted jack who preferred sudden death to a dash for liberty was chopped. The natural gloom was, I believe, slightly dispelled by a saltatory effort on the part of one of the field who had left his supply of bees'-wax at home. If it wasn't for these trifles, however, life would be dull. Hounds' heads were turned homewards, and it was hoped that even a sprightly little grey fox might be generous enough to enliven proceedings; but the homeward line was drawn blank and so ended a somewhat disappointing day from a galloping point of view, though I would be sorry to believe many of those out did not derive benefit and pleasure from accompanying and watching hounds

It is on such days as this that the keen sportsman has the time and opportunity of getting to know the hounds and imp the elements of hunting from the wisdom of such experts as our present Master. One has the time to accumulate information on such occasions. When hounds find quickly and gallop fast most of us are too "busy riding" to think of anything else!

Yeroda Jail was the cause for the following meet and it speaks well for the keenness of the members of this now justly celebrated Hunt that in spite of Their Excellencies' reception at Ganeshkaind on the previous night the grey dawn of 5-30 found a most flattering attendance to meet the Master several "habits" I am told gracing the occasion. Hope of a truth springs eternal in the human breast and another stifling morning with ground unblest with dew must have afforded but little encouragement to the most sanguine. However seldom it may occur in real life, on this occasion at any rate virtue met with its suitable reward. Skirting the pretty little house of the Superintendent situated close to the grim prison walls, the Master "hoicked" hounds into the home cover, and a whimper proclaiming the honoured tenant at home was soon confirmed by the pack and doubly confirmed by one of the whips. After a slight doubt hounds simply raced, I am assured, straight as the crows fly over fields without an obstacle of any sort to check horse or hound and fleet flat racers must have had all the best of it for the nonce. Of an intellectual turn must have been this varmint, for he made straight for the Deccan College at the outskirts of which he must have been headed and twisting sharply right handed found the tenour of his way hindered by the broad flowing river whose watery volume were not to his liking. Meanwhile hounds seem to have carried on and by the time the Master cast back could make nothing of the line and it looked like a magic disappearance till news was brought that the jack had taken refuge in one of a collection of native huts close by. From all I can gather there seems to be a general idea that after so short, if speedy, a burst, full law might have been given to this hapless fugitive and such would have given very general satisfaction I infer. However Masters no doubt have the blooding of their hounds to consider, and in the Master's hands alone must lie the sentence. Scant start was I believe given and still apparently thirsting for wisdom since other wiles had played him false the jack headed once more straight for the college building. All chance of becoming a B. A. was, however, frustrated and hounds rolled him over in the middle of the scholars' quarter, while warlike Brahman youths fled screeching in an agony of fright. It was a very fast little burst at the beginning, but the last five minutes scarcely afforded unalloyed pleasure to many.

Hounds were then taken along a large and very likely looking nullah (whose name, if it has one, my informant did not know) a jack was viewed sneaking away from a babool cover near a large tank and hounds I am assured worked a somewhat uncertain scent with admirable perseverence. The ground was very broken and in many places stoney and had the pace been hotter a thinning out would doubtless have ensued. Slow but pretty hunting was the order of the day for over 15 minutes, when a doe chinkara tempted hounds cruelly, two couple or so failing to resist and giving the whips all they could do to stop them. Meanwhile the Master with the greater part of the pack was worrying out the line with a skill and determination creditable to all and a pretty object lesson it must have been I gather. The jack was evidently having none too cheery a time and from a rise was viewed down a nullah with little left in him, but still with a useful lead over hill and rocky dell hounds worked the weak scent in a most patient way until reaching a stream crossing the road to Ahmednagar at a point near the seventh mile stone, when bearing in mind the earliness of the season and the great heat of the day the Master, with reluctance, I make no doubt, but with a wise discretion which none can gainsay, determined to stop hounds. Time from find to stopping full thirty-five minutes, so it was clocked over good sporting country, and though the pace was nothing great it seems to have been a very enjoyble hunt and everyone I have met has been more than satisfied. Looking to the absolute dryness of the ground it seems to have been a most creditable performance on the part of Master and hounds.

Polo.

THE BANGALORE HANDICAP POLO TOURNAMENT.

THE SEMI-FINALS.

THE Bangalore handicap polo tournament was proceeded with on Monday, the 29th June, and Wednesday, the 1st July. The British Resident in Mysore was present on both days, and many ladies watched the play, which was vigorous and fast, especially in Wednesday's match. The riding off was good, and here and there pretty bits of passing occurred, although, as a whole, the play could not be described as really scientific. Mr. Irvine, R. E., who handicapped the teams, is to be congratulated on the result, for very close games have been the order of the day. It may be added that there are some very handy ponies in the station now, and it is to be hoped that outside teams will enter for the Bangalore tournament, and make it an unqualified success, for there are plenty of keen players here at present. The following are the details of the play:—

Q. O. Sappers and Miners (+ 1 goal) vs. 4th Madras Pioneers (+ 3 goals).

First Chukker.—The Pioneers went off at a good pace, but when the teams had got fairly to work the Sappers began to press, Loch and Marshall playing well together. The Pioneers were gradually forced back to their line, and a couple of subsidiaries were scored by the Sappers just before the chukker ended.

Score:—4th Madras Pioneers, 3 goals 0 subsidiaries; Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 1 goal 2 subsidiaries.

Second Chukker.—The givers of points set to work with determination, and after one or two good runs by Loch, Johnson backing him up, put the ball through. Three subsidiaries followed, after which Marshall added another goal and then the Pioneers made an effort and kept play in midfield for the rest of the chukker.

Score:—4th Madras Pioneers, 3 goals 0 subsidiaries; Q. O. Sappers and Miners 3 goals 3 subsidiaries.

Third Chukker.—The Pioneers appeared to be tiring slightly, and the Sappers evidently playing a winning game pressed them hard. Hart broke away with a good run, travelling three parts down the ground on the right side, and for a moment the Pioneers looked dangerous. But Wagstaffe stopped the rush and initiated a forward movement on the part of his side, which ended in Loch scoring a good goal. The bugle soon afterwards sounded.

Score:—4th Madras Pioneers 3 goals 0 subsidiaries; Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 4 goals 3 subsidiaries.

Fourth Chukker.—Not much time remained for play, but the Pioneers made a plucky effort and for a brief space invaded the Sappers' fortress. Their hitting was inaccurate, however, and Marshall and Loch coming down together, the former got a fairly easy chance, scored the last goal of the match, and the Sappers won handsomely.

Final Score:—4th Madras Pioneers, 3 goals 0 subsidiaries; Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 5 goals 3 subsidiaries.

Umpires.—Captain Peel, R. H. A., and Captain Swifte, "The Carabiniers."

The Carabiniers "A" Team (scratch) vs. Captain Peel's Team (+ 5 goals).

First Chukker.—Both teams went off pretty fast, but Captain Peel's side had the best of the earlier exchanges, and Saunders backing his captain well up, cored a goal after about a minute's play. This seemed to put the Carabiniers on their metal and Kirby and Swifte became very prominent, the latter scoring just before an excellent chukker ended.

Score:—Captain Peel's Team, 6 goals 0 subsidiaries; The Carabinier's "A" Team, 1 goal 0 subsidiaries.

Second Chukker.—The superiority of the Dragoons now showed itself, and they began to pen their opponents who for nearly the whole of the chukker were in a state of siege. The ball repeatedly went behind, and then two subsidiaries were added to the Dragoon's score. Then Kirby scored a goal for them amidst applause and play ceased with the Carabiniers still pressing hard.

Score:—Captain Peel's Team, 6 goals 0 subsidiaries; The Carabiniers "A" Team, 2 goals 2 subsidiaries.

Third Chukker.—The Carabiniers set to work with much energy, and Swifte scored for them with a good long shot. Not long afterwards the same player added another goal, and notwithstanding their heavy handicap the Carabiniers' chances began to brighten. Captain Peel headed his team in one or two good efforts, but Ker was the safest of backs and the attacks were repelled.

Score:—Captain Peel's Team, 6 goals 0 subsidiaries; The Carabiniers "A" Team, 4 goals 2 subsidiaries.

Fourth Chukker.—With two minutes and 50 seconds left for play, the Carabiniers worked hard for the game, but although they pressed almost throughout the residue of the play, their shooting was faulty—possibly from over-eagerness to score, and 2 subsidiaries were all that accrued to them before the inexorable bugle sounded the "Cease fire" and Captain Peel's teem had won by 2 goals.

Final Score:—Captain Peel's Teem, 6 goals 0 subsidiaries; The Carabiniers "A" Team, 4 goals 4 subsidiaries. Teams:—

THE FINAL.

The Q. O. Sappers and Miners (+ 1 goal) vs. Captain Peal's Team (+ 5 goals).

The final took place on Friday, the 3rd instant, the British Resident again being present, besides a numerous company. Mr. Irvine, R. E., played instead of Mr. Wagstaffe for the Sappers, but otherwise the teams were the same as had played in the preliminary ties.

First Chukker.—Captain Peel's team pressed and the ball went behind the Sappers' line, but then a good combined movement initiated by Irvine took the ball to the other end of the ground, where it went behind. Some rather rushing play near the scratch team's goal was followed by the ball going out and then Irvine got in a good run for the Sappers. Loch shot for goal, but the ball went behind and the chukker ended without any. Scoring Score:—Captain Peel's Team, 5 goals 0 subsidiaries; Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 1 goal 0 subsidiaries.

Second Chukker.—Irvine hit behind the line and Loch did the same thing directly afterwards. The Sappers pressed hard, and Johnson at last scored a goal for them amidst applause. Changing ends, Irvine got away and a subsidiary resulted, but a miss by Johnson gave the scratch team a chance. Grieve, however, also missed, and then Peel getting clean away looked like scoring, but the ball went behind.

Score:—Captain Peel's Team, 5 goals 0 subsidiaries; Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 2 goals 1 subsidiary.

Third Chukker.—Loch and Marshall took the ball from the Sappers' line to mid-field, and some fast give-and-take play followed, of which the scratch team had none the worst. Then the Sappers pressed again, Marshall and Loch being very prominent, but nothing was scored, and the game looked a good thing for Captain Peel's team.

Score:—Captain Peel's Team, 5 goals 0 subsidiaries; Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 2 goals 1 subsidiary.

Fourth Chukker.—There were 3½ minutes left, but three goals was a long lead in favour of the scratch team. Nevertheless the Sappers set resolutely to work and Loch put the ball through the posts almost at once. After the re-start the Sappers came down at once. A good shot by Loch almost scored, and then he added a goal with a fine back-hand stroke amidst applause. Peel, however, relieved the pressure with a good run and a subsidiary was added to the scratch team's score. Marshall was just looking dangerous when the chukker ended and Captain Peel's team just won by a goal.

Final score:—Captain Peel's Team, 5 goals 1 subsidiary; Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 4 goals 1 subsidiary. Teams:—

CYCLING IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Friday, 19th June 1903.

LAST month we referred in this column to the special motor racing track which was shortly to be constructed at Purley, and spoke of the possibility of cycle road races being held there without fear of interruption from the police. The promoters of the track have since intimated, that any suggestion which might be made by road-racing cyclists, and which would make no radical alterations in the existing plans, would receive the most careful consideration. The proposed track, which will be about seven miles in circumference, lays between hills and downs just off the Brighton road at Purley, and to all intent and purposes will be an ordinary roadway, with, however, an exceptionally good surface, and free from pedestrians, equestrians and vehicular traffic. Road racing clubs should take the matter up without delay, for there are great possibilities in the suggestion.

The question of inn-keepers' and refreshment contractors' responsibility with regard to cycles left in their charge whilst wheelmen are taking refreshments at their establishments, is one that magistrates are frequently called upon to settle, and invariably to give judgment in favour of the cyclist. A refreshment house-keeper of Morpeth, was recently sued by a cyclist at the Morpeth County Court, for compensation for the loss of a lamp stolen from his machine whilst left in defendant's charge. The case was all against the refreshment house-keeper, he having accepted a fee of twopence from the plaintiff, and although the solicitor for the defence contended that his client was not responsible, since the lamp was detachable from the machine, his honour gave judgment for the amount claimed, with costs.

The Headingley sports committee has offered a prize to any member of the Leeds Police Force who will ride a mile on the local track in 2mins. 45secs. This offer has been made in view of the evidence of a police constable in a furious driving case. The constable alleged that he travelled at a rate of a mile in 2mins. 45secs. in order to catch up a motorist who was driving beyond the legal limit, and the members of the Sports Committee, doubting the speed capabilites of the constable in question, have made the above offer to the chief constable of Leeds. It is doubtful whether the challenge will be accepted.

Owing to the unfavourable weather which we have been experiencing for the last month or two, the home cycle trade has not been in such a flourishing condition as was anticipated in the early months of the year; not that there has been any slump in the home trade, but simply that it is not booming as optimists expected. Fortunately, foreign trade is waking up, and the Board of Trade's return for May, and indeed for the whole year, shows that the British made cycles are in far greater demand in foreign countries than hitherto has been the case. In May of this year the shipments were valued at £76,744 against £65,137 in the corresponding month of 1902. For the first five months of this year the figures are £389,766, against £286,870 last year, an increase of well over £100,000.

When a cyclist is implicated in a running down case, and has secured the evidence of a police constable on point duty, on his behalf, he generally possesses a feeling of satisfaction that the case will go in his favour, for magistrates generally accept the evidence of one police constable against that of three or four civilians. But such was not the case with a cyclist who was sued for damages by the guardians of a girl whom he had accidentally knocked down and caused some slight injuries to. The officer on point duty, when giving evidence, stated that in his opinion the cyclist was by no means to blame, and that at the time he was only travelling at the rate of four or five miles per hour. This evidence, however, availed the wheelman but little, for judgment was given against him.

On 27th, June starting at 6 A. M., the Motor Cycling Club 200 miles reliability run for the S F. Edge trophy will take place. The route selected is over four out-and-home courses of approximately 50 miles each, radiating from one centre, situated within 20 miles of London. Competitors will be started in batches of three, at five minutes' interval, and will be allowed to dismount for congestion of traffic. All the competitors will be required to stop an hour at the conclusion of the first 100 miles, and a quarter of an hour at the conclusion of 150 miles. During these stoppages no adjustments, replacements or repairs of any description whatsoever will be allowed. That such a trial for motor cycles requires the most careful preconsideration must be obvious, and possibly no set of rules or conditions that could be devised would seem to be perfectly equitable to all riders. One of the greatest difficulties is inherent to the bicycle itself—viz., that it offers no facilites for carrying an observer. To that extent therefore, competitors will be dependent mutually upon the sense of fairness and sportsman-like feeling of their fellows. As all competitors and officials will work with one aim—the good of the club and to make a success of the trial—there can be no doubt as to the result.

Cycling and motoring, as kindred sports and pastimes, are supposed to have interests in common. For some time past, however, a feeling has been growing among cyclists that motorists are not their best friends—indeed, so acute has that feeling become that a good many cyclists are prepared to aver that the motor-car is an intolerable nuisance, and a source of danger to those who cycle. This has been caused by the selfish conduct of a certain, and by no means small, section of motorists, who misuse the country roads to a degree. The first cause of complaint is the dust raised by the rapid passage of large pneumatic-shod cars, which, when their exhaust pipes are directed straight down on the road instead of the sides, raises the dust in clouds, and makes cycling far from pleasurable; for, instead of the pure country air, the poor wheelman is compelled to inhale pecks of dust; whilst throat, eyes, and ears are irritated by the particles. Of course motorists are not primarily responsible for the condition of the roads, but nevertheless they create a nuisance to others, for which there appears to be no remedy.

Disregarding the automobile as a pleasure vehicle, pure and simple, and considered solely from a commercial standpoint, its progress has been very remarkable. The substitution of mechanically propelled for horse-drawn vehicles is after all but of minor importance. But an advance of far greater moment has been made. It is the substitute of the automobile where steam had been previously regarded as impossible. In England, the North-Eastern Railway has adopted automobile freight wagons. In Ireland, the various County boards have installed lines of automobiles in opposition to the railways. In France, an automobile train has been put into service on a line where locomotives were used heretofore. In Italy, an automobile service between cities has been organised to carry the Government mails. In Russia, the Government has approved of automobiles for carriage of materials and troops. In Chicago, a line of automobiles has a regular street-car service. In Japan, the motor omnibus has appeared as competitor of the ancient inrikshaw. Such an awakening to the utility of the automobile cannot by any process of argument be lightly passed over. The petrol engine, of which the automobile is the most practicable exponent, must in the course of the next few decades enormously facilitate travel.

ENGLISH CRICKET CHAT.

WITH the cricket season a month and a half old there is already some excitement over the Championship owing to the defeat of Yorkshire by Somerset, Middlesex, and Sussex, the invincibility so far of Middlesex and Sussex and the winning career of Essex after their first match, and defeat, at the hands of Yorkshire. The East Anglian side after that match beat Surrey twice, with ease the first time, then Kent, scored 401 against Notts' 302 and had quite an equal draw with that side, drew with Derby requiring but 20 runs to win with a second innings to play, dismissed Sussex for 77, scored 166 themselves, and then got Vine and C. B. Fry out before Sussex had wiped out the arrears when rain prevented further play. For all this series of successes they have to thank Perrin 170 and 102 not out vs. Notts, 103 retired hurt vs. Derby, four times over forty in the two Surrey matches; C McGahey 110 not out vs. Surrey and some thirties and forties; E. H. D. Sewell 15 and 60 vs. Surrey at the Oval 42 and 0. vs Kent, 72 and 45 vs. Notts, 70 vs. Sussex when 25 was the next best score; F. L. Fane 90 vs. Derby and several twenties and thirties; Rev F. H. Gillingham 76 vs. Kent; Buckenham,s all-round cricket in the second Surrey, Kent and Derbyshire matches Mead's 7 for 34 and 7 for 27 vs Surrey at the Oval and Sussex at Leyton with several other lesser but none the less useful bits of bowling. Indeed the Essex team has not given such an all-round exhibition of good cricket for some years, their fielding and catching has been almost unequalled for regular excellence, and when one or two have failed others have always come off. Of the seven matches played up to 13th June they have been on top in six and no other county can this season say that. Middlesex are going great guns owing to a return to form of Jack Hearne and better bowling by Trott. Warner too started with a brace of centuries and the side routed Gloucestershire, Somerset and Yorkshire, both at Lord's, in no uncertain style. Already they have one of their August reinforcements, in the person of Jimmy Douglas, at hand and him they are utilising against Essex this week in a match that is fairly certain to be abandoned owing to rain if indeed a start is made Sussex have both their big batsmen going strong For once more showing his predilection for Yorkshire bowling by taking 234 last week at Bradford. Ranji has tacked on two or three hundreds to his century list and looks fitter than he has the past two seasons, perhaps the worries of journalistic work have had a good effect, for has he not once edited The Sun and does he not now write for the Daily Express? I fear Sussex bowling is hardly strong enough to win them the Championship, at any rate if they do they will be about the weakest bowling side that has ever attained unto that position.

Lancashire ought to do better than they do, but I have an idea that they drop catches and not the best batting and bowling side will ever succeed if catches are dropped. Their fast bowler, W. Brearley, is of the bump, thump, and one in-the-ribs order as C. B. Fry will tell any inquisitive one, but Ranji came in and scored off all these "perchers" that had previously been playing a tattoo on the Old Oxonian's person. Tyldesley has not yet got going and that means a lot to the Red Rose, last season it was very much of a one man team in this respect, many a side beating Lancashire but losing to Tyldesley! Maclaren is nothing like the bat he was, though he will still of course continue to get hundreds.

Yorkshire's position is largely due to the fortune of was that renders it impossible for T. L. Taylor, at the other end of the world on business, and Irving Washington, recovering fromf illness, to play, which catastrophe preceded Hirst hurting his leg, J. T. Brown, junior bowling his shoulder out, Tunnicliffe splitting a finger, F. S, Jackson getting a small ulcer on the foot and Rhodes happening to be long out of form with the ball all at the same time. Indeed but for Lord Hawke's superb batting in nearly every match the Tykes would have been in many sorrier plights than they have been. Bad fielding has also had its usual effect and taken altogether Yorkshire cricket for the moment is not fizzing away. When some of these fine cricketers return to the side like giants refreshod some of the rest of the counties may have to look out for squalls. It's a long way yet to the end of August.

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

Y. M. C. A. vs. RANGERS.—This match played last Thursday ended in a pointless draw. Play was not very interesting The Rangers opened well but the Association played up and in the first half the game was very even. After the interval the Rangers attacked, but Yackjee and Rosser defended well and they were unable to score, the game ending as stated. Teams :—

Y. M. C. A.—Montague, goal; Yackjee, and Rosser, backs; Power, Cooper, and Ewing, half-backs; Godfry, Simmons, Apcar, Miller, and Crow, forwards.

RANGERS.—Whelan goal; Anderson and Templeton backs; Boilard, Lees, and O'Laughlin, half-backs; Pell, Whitse, Mathieson, Williams, and Russell forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Walker, Dalhousie F. C.

CALCUTTA vs. HOWRAH SPORTING.—Played on the Calcutta ground on the 2nd instant, the home team winning by four goals to nil. The Calcutta men had the best of the first half and several shots were sent in. V. Sherman at length scored after a combined run by the forwards. A free kick to the home team was unsuccessful, but shortly after Fyfe scored their second point. Howrah were pressing when half time was called. On resuming the Calcutta men got away and good combination among the forwards was witnessed. A third goal was registered, Bennett putting the ball into his own net. The Howrah goal was then besieged and several unsuccessful shots sent in. Just before time Fyfe ran down and put on the fourth goal. Teams :—

CALCUTTA F. C.—Buckley, goal; Todd and Denniss, backs; Maunder, Crawford, and Walker, halves; Binning, H. Sherman, Fyfe, V. Sherman, and Stewart, forwards.

HOWRAH SPORTING.—B. Bennett, goal; F. and H. Bennett, backs; Lewis, Osborne, and Curtis, halves; J. Smith, Farrier, H. Smith, Jackson, and Burn, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. R. Remfry, Y. M. C. A.

64th R. F. A. vs. K. O. S. B.'s—Played at Barrackpore on the 2nd instant when after an uninteresting game the Dum-Dum men won by three goals to nil. Opening exchanges were very even, but the Borderers soon got going and pressed hard, erratic shooting preventing them from scoring; just before the interval, however, Bruce found the net. In the second half, though the Gunners defended well, their opponents had the best of matters and Kennedy and Nielson put on two more goals. Teams.—

K. O. S. B.'s.—Aitkinson goal; Allen and McChesney, backs; Campbell, Stewart, and Bradley, half-backs; Simpson, Kennedy, Walls, Nielson, and Bruce, forwards.

64th R. F. A.—Harrison, goal; Prince and Queen, backs; Lockins, Colby, and Donnelly, half-backs; Nicol, Dodds, Lieutenant Shaw, Wratten, and Shirt, forwards.

Referee—Sergeant Fuller, K. O. S. B.'s.

CALCUTTA vs. 64TH R. F. A.—These teams met on the Calcutta ground last Saturday and a very one-sided exhibition resulted in a win for the home team by eight goals to nil. They began the attack and play was confined to the military half, a continuous bombardment being kept up on their goal, Fyfe drawing first blood. H. Sherman added another goal before the interval. On changing ends Calcutta resumed the attack and V. Sherman put on the third goal. Fyfe added the fourth and then H. Sherman, who was in great form, scored two goals in quick succession. Fyfe again found the net and just before time was called, H. Sherman scored the eighth and last goal. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Buckley, goal; Dennis and Todd, backs; Walker, Maunder, and Pearson, half-backs; H. Sherman, Binning, Fyfe, V. Sherman, and Stewart, forwards.

64TH R. F. A.—Harrison, goal; Quinn and Prince, backs; Donnelly, Corby, and Beckett, half-backs; Lieutenant Shaw, Wratten, Lockens, Nicholl, and Dodd, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. R. Remfry.

A. and S. HIGHLANDERS vs. BURN & CO.—This was another one-sided game played last Saturday, the Highlanders having matters all their own way and running out victorious by seven goals to nil. Quinn started the scoring soon after the start, Montgomery adding two goals soon after. Quinn was playing splendidly and put on three more points before the interval when the Highlanders were leading by six goals to nil. On resuming the Highlanders' shooting became very erratic and only one goal was scored, Lockhart finding the net just before time. Teams :—

93RD HIGHLANDERS.—Coventry, goal; Wallace and Silcock, backs; McLean, McGovand, and Hafford, half-backs; Robinson, Lockhart, Quinn, Montgomery, and Hogg, forwards.

BURN & CO.—Taylor, goal; McFadyen, and Donnithorne, backs; Morris, Sinclair, and Cochrane, half-backs; Todd, Freeman, Wood, Kerr, and McKerron, forwards.

Referee—Mr. A. O. Henry.

HOWRAH vs. DALHOUSIE.—Played at Howrah on the 4th instant, the visitors winning by two goals to nil. They had the best of matters during the first half but their shooting was not very good and they only found the net once. Howrah played up in the second moiety but were unable to score, and Rosser putting through once more the game ended as stated.

DALHOUSIE.—Peake, goal; Wade and Bushby, backs; Phelps, Wallace, and Dalling, half-backs; Echlin, Rosser, Smith, Stewart, and Stimson, forwards.

HOWRAH.—A Bennett, goal; F. Bennett and H. Bennett, backs; Palmer, Morrow, and Lewis, half-backs; Ferrier, J. Smith, W. Smith, Jackson, and Burns forwards.

RANGERS vs. K. O. S. B.'s—The Rangers served up a surprise last Saturday by beating the Dum-Dum men by a goal to nil. The Borderers were without Byers and Cassidy and though they had the best of the first half could not break through the Rangers' defence. O'Laughlin, Templeton, and Anderson played hard, and Whelan in goal was at the top of his form. In the second half the Rangers got going and Jones put the ball through the soldiers being unable to equalise. Teams :—

RANGERS.—Whelan, goal; Anderson and Templeton, backs; Boilard, Lees, and O'Laughin, half-backs; Peil, Jones, Hill, Williams, and Whittie, forwards.

K. O. S.B.'s—Brocklehurst, goal; Allan and McDonald, backs; Campbell, Stewart, and Bradley, half-backs; Bruce, Kennedy, Walls, Neilson, and O'Neil, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. P. Wilder, I. F. A.

64th R. F. A. vs. DALHOUSIE.—This match was played on the Dalhousie ground [illegible] before a large crowd. The home team were hot favourites but [illegible] played a disappointing game and won by a single goal to nil. [illegible]play during as the first half was of a scrambling order and the interval arrived without score on resuming Dalhousie got a free kick for "hands" and Stewart put the ball through. They were unable to increase their lead and won as stated. Teams :—

64th R. F. A.—Harrison, goal; Prince and Grimley, backs; Donnelly, Corby, and Fairhall, half-backs; Dodds, Nichol, Clark, Lieutenant Parkins, and Wratten, forwards.

DALHOUSIE.—Peake, goal; Margrett and Bushby, backs; Phelps Wallace, and Dalling, half-backs; Stewart, Stimson, Rosser, Johnson, and Smith, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. M. Remfry, C. F. C.

K. O. S. B.'s. vs. BURN AND CO.—These teams met on the Howrah ground on Thursday and ended rather unexpectedly in a draw of two goals all. The first half was in favour of the Borderers, who put on two goals before the interval. In the second moiety Burn and Co. played with great determination and equalised. Wood and Taylor each scoring a goal.

THE TRADES CUP.

DALHOUSIE "B" TEAM vs. HOWRAH SPORTING.—Played on the Dashousie ground and resulted in a win for the home team by two goals to nil. Smith scored both points.

ST. JOSEPH'S vs. B. N. RY.—These teams met on the Y. M. C. A. ground, the game ending in a draw of one goal all. The match was replayed on Monday, St. Joseph's winning by a goal to nil.

SEEBPUR vs. SPORTING UNION.—On the Rangers' ground last Monday the College beats their opponents by two goals to love, Nyss and Lewty finding the net in the first half.

ENTALLY vs. MAHOMEDAN SPORTING.—These teams met on the Town Club ground, the Entally men winning by a goal to nil.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

ONE can have too much of even a good thing, and this has been the case with the League competition which has been dragging to a close during the past week. When the leading positions on the League table have been established beyond doubt the object of the competition has been secured and the subsequent meetings of various teams consequently excites little or no interest in the football world, and takes up much valuable time which could otherwise be spent in arranging such excellent contests, as, for instance, Civil and Military which proved such a success last year, but which we fear will not find a place in the programme for 1903.

Could not the Committee of the League, or those who are responsible for matters appertaining to this competition, so arrange that in future not more than say six teams were allowed to enter? This would not be a hardship on the teams who were excluded as the saving of time could be expended in playing friendly games and subsequently innumerable opportunities for competition play would arise in the contests for the Shield, the Trades, and other Cups.

Reverting again to the "Civil and Military" match what a magnificent game the meeting of the following teams should produce :—

Civil.—Goal, Buckley or Peake; backs, Todd and Anderson; half-backs, Maunder, Lees, Walker; forwards, Rosser, Fyfe, Cooper or Watts, V. Sherman, Apcar.

Military—Goal, Hitchinson; backs, Wallace and Silcock, half-backs, McLean, McGowan and Mowatt; forwards, Cassidy, Byers, Quin, Montgomery, Hogg.

He would be a brave man who laid odds on either team.

Despite heavy rain throughout the day the Howrah team found the Calcutta ground in very fair condition for their match with the premier club which ended in a victory for Calcutta by 4 goals to love. The game was an uninteresting one, the visitors seldom invading their opponents' territory, whereas the shooting of the home team was weak, probably on account of the wet ball. Both Fyfe and the elder Sherman were in fine form, the latter on several occasions showing exceptional cleverness in his manipulation of the ball. Binning, who reappeared in the team, gave a much improved display in which his accurate heading was most noticeable, but there is room for improvement in his fielding of the ball. Bennet in goal performed well for Howrah and the two Smiths were conspicuous for one or two good runs—the methods employed by W. Smith are not, however, beyond reproach and he came under the Referee's notice on more than one occasion.

The meeting of the Rangers and the K. O. S. B. furnished a regular surprise, as although the Military team were without Cassidy, Tait, and Byers it was not expected that the Rangers would prove successful. Victory should certainly have rested with the "Dum-Dum" men and that it did not do so was principally due to the goal-keeping of Whelan, who gave yet another sound display, in which he was ably assisted by Lees and Anderson.

The Borderers have been showing very poor form in their recent matches—their methods are "finnicking" and they have lost much of the dash they once possessed. Kennedy and Neilson are both good, but without Cassidy the entire team seems to go to pieces.

Both the Highlanders and Calcutta took the opportunity to augment their goal averages on Saturday last which they did to the tune of 7 and 8 goals respectively. The Highlanders' victims were Burns who played on the defensive from the start and at no period of the game did they look like scoring. Wood and Sinclair worked hard in their respective positions, but the team as a whole have no pretensions to League form.

All the Highlanders endeavoured to score from various parts of the field, but success in this direction was principally confined to Quin, who shot no less than five of the goals.

It is high time that some steps were taken to put an end to the continual "barracking" to which Referees have been subjected by the soldiers from the Fort on every occasion on which decisions have been given against their team. This state of affairs has been going on from the commencement of the season until it has now become unbearable, and it would therefore be a boon to Referees, spectators and players alike if such steps were taken as would lead to a discontinuance of this objectionable and unsportsmanlike practice. Calcutta were only able to score two goals during the first half of their match with the 64th R. F. A., but no less than six fell to them during the second period without any response from the Gunners. The first point came from Fyfe, who put in a very hard shot which hit the crossbar and went into the net and then followed a second goal from H. Sherman. The visitors' forwards, amongst whom Shaw, Wratten, and Dods were noticeable, ran down on several occasions, but their efforts lacked combination and their shooting was very weak.

After the recommencement Calcutta maintained a continual bombardment of the Gunners' goal—Fyfe and the two Shermans subscribing six goals between them.

The game was too one-sided to be interesting, but the distinguishing feature of the match was undoutedly the display given by the younger Sherman, who scored no less than half of the goals for his side, which says much for his powers of shooting. His success, however, was principally due to his always being in the right place to operate on the well-placed cross shots which were continually being sent in by his brother and Stewart from the left wing. Fyfe was in his best form, but Pearson, who was included in the absence of Crawford, played a very poor game throughout.

The innumerable Cup competitions which are now taking place are very bewildering to the lay mind, and it is doubtful whether the devices resorted to to place strong teams in the field tend to improve the morale of the game For instance we understand that it is possible for a player who has figured in the contest for the Shield to get permission to play in the Trades Cup, which is essentially for junior teams, and further should his team be beaten he is permitted to reappear for the Shield. Such a state of affairs is, on the face of it, absurd and we are pleased to hear that steps are to be taken to prevent this double shuffle being possible.

Again, the Surma Cup, we believe, is open to junior and native teams, yet a perusal of the personnel of the so-called "B" team which represented the Y. M. C. A. against the "E" Company of the 93rd Highlanders will prove the fallacy of any such belief. It would be interesting to know on what grounds Yackjee, Simmons, Crow, Echlin, Apear, Rosser and Russell consider they are qualified to play for the "B" team. It is quite apparent that the rules require to be made much more stringent.

THE COLOMBO MEDAL. The competition for this, the most recently instituted of the Club's many medals, took place on the Maidan links on Friday and Saturday last, but though the ground was in excellent order for good golf and the weather by no means unpropitious few players returned their cards, and the scoring all round was very poor. Eventually Mr. H C. Begg, who followed up a very poor first half round of 47 with an excellent second half in 40 proved to be the winner and his success was very popular. The best scores sent in were as follows :—

THE ORMISTON SILVER CHALLENGE CUP. Mr. T. B. Peterkin, with an allowance of 17½ strokes, wins the Ormiston Silver Challenge Cup, and the accompanying memento for the best eight 9-hole rounds in club competitions during the season, his nett score being 334½, an excellent performance, and one on which Mr Peterkin, who has been playing very steadily all the season, is to be heartily congratulated. The following are the best aggregates scores for this prize and go to prove the advantage which the handicap players have gained from the use of the Haskell and other rubber-cored balls, while the returns for the Cashmere Cup, which are comparatively poor, seem to show that they do not help the scratch men in at all equivalent proportion :—

THE SOUTH INDIA A. A. COMPETITION.

3rd Day, Saturday, 27th June 1903.

PROCEEDINGS on the third day were more largely attended than on the two previous occasions and some good exhibitions were given. Every effort was made to bring the contests up to their final stages to be decided on the concluding day. Three men were left in for the Association's special prize and good fighting was witnessed in the middle weights. Details :—

MIDDLE WEIGHTS.

Private Crake, 1st Durhams, beat Private. Capewell, 1st Leicesters Crake fought fiercely and twice floored his opponent knocking him out eventually after 55 seconds.

Private Hall, 1st Leicestershires, beat Dr. Thomson, 35th Battery, R. F. A Thomson was most fancied, but Hall proved himself a good fighter and was leading at the end of the first round. Thomson tried to use his weight in the second bout, but Hall's defence was sound and when he came up again in the third round was the fresher of the two, securing the verdict at the end of a smart contest.

THE SPECIAL PRIZE.

(Catch Weights.)

Lance-Corporal McGill 1st Durhams, beat Dr. Bailey, 55th Battery, R. F. A. McGill had the best of it all through, and in the second round drove his opponent into his corner and forced him to cry enough.

Gunner Bailey, 55th Battery, R. F. A., beat Lance-Corporal Bainbridge, 1st Durhams.

Bainbridge rushed in at the start but the Gunner fought steadily sending in some good ones on the heart and ribs and leading at the end of the second round won a good bout on points.

Concluding Day, Monday, 29th June, 1903.

The competition was brought to a conclusion to-day before a large crowd of spectators, among whom were Major-General Sir Norman Stewart and his Staff. Good sport was witnessed and arrangements were all that could be desired. The Feather Weights was won by Sergeant. Bown, the Light Weights by Lance-Corporal Cunningham and the Middle Weights by Private Hall The Association's Special Prize went to Gunner Bailey. Details :—

FEATHER WEIGHTS (FINALS).

Sergeant Bown, 1st Leicestershire Regiment, beat Volunteer C. D'Costa, M. V. Guards.

D'Costa had the best of the first round, but Bown fought steadily and in the second round twice sent his opponent to the floor. D'Costa was quite down in the third round and Bown, though rather blown, had the best of the matters and received the verdict.

LIGHT WEIGHTS (FINALS).

Lance-Corporal Cunningham, 1st Leicestershire Regiment, beat Private Murphy, 1st Leicestershire Regiment.

Both got to busines at once and a good fight was expected, but Cunningham twice got in on the back of the neck knocking Murphy out the second time.

MIDDLE WEIGHTS (FINALS).

Private Hall, 1st Leicestershire Regiment, beat Private Crake, Durham L. I.

The first round ended in favour of Crake, but in the next Hall began to show his superiority and maintained the lead throughout, the remainder of the five rounds being declared winners on points.

SPECIAL PRIZE (CATCH WEIGHTS). SEMI-FINAL.

Lance-Corporal, McGill, Durham L. I., beat Driver Thomas, R. F. A., St. Thomas' Mount.

Thomas was hardly a match for his opponent, and half way through the first round was knocked out by a stinging blow on the neck.

FINALS.

Gunner Bailey, 25th Battery, R. F. A., beat Lance-Corporal McGill, Durham L. I.

There was little science exhibited, McGill fighting for a knock out. But Bailey fought steadily and pluckily and in spite of receiving some very nasty ones repeatedly asumed the aggressive eventually winning on points.

The prizes were given away by Sir Norman Stewart, who congratulated the Association on the success of the competition.

ROYAL ARTILLERY SPORTS.

Tuesday, 30th June, 1903.

THE rain held off and the R. F. A., Kirkee, were able to get through an excellent programme this afternoon. All the events were keenly contested and the sport up to its usual high standard. Proceedings were enlivened by the Band of the 7th Bombay Pioneers. Captain Parry, Lieutenant Aherne and Brevent Sergeant-Major Drayson acted as the judges, and Mrs. Carter distributed the prizes to the successful competitors at the close.

Results were as under :—

1 Heads and Posts.—Three Entries per Battery.

1st—Sergt. Shire, 45th Battery.
2nd—Sergt. Giles, 29th F. B.
3rd—Sergt. Gleeson, 18th F. B.

2 Lime Cutting.—Three Entries per Battery.

1st—Sergt. Giles, 29th F. B.
2nd—Sergt. Fahey, 40th F. B.
3rd—Sergt. Shire, 45th F. B.

(Twelve competed).

3 Drivers Jumping With Led horses, 3 Drivers per Battery, 2 runs each Marks for Jumping and style, Led horses breaking away disqualifies for that run.

1st—Dr. Passingham, 29th F. B.
2nd—Dr. Smith, 40th F. B.
3rd—Dr. Beers, 40th F. B.

4 Single Tent Pegging.—Three Entries per Battery.

1st—Sergt. Fahey, 40th F. B.
2nd—Br. S. M. Worsfold, 29th F. B.
3rd—Br. S. M. Maloney, 40th F. B.

5 Wrestling on Horseback.—Six Gunners per Battery, bareback, snaffle bits, no boots.

40th Field Battery Team—1st

Also competed 29th and 45th F. B. teams.

6 Section Jumping.—One Section N. C. O. per Battery.

1st—Section 18th F. B. N. C. O.'s Section Jumping—Drivers.
1st—Section 40th F. B.

7 Quarter Mile Flat Race.

1st—Br. Carnagie 18th F. B.
2nd—Dr. Grayley, 18th F. B.
3rd—Dr. Robbin, 40th F. B.
(Five competed).

8 Obstacle Race.

1st—Corpl. Budd, 45th F. B.
2nd—Dr. Gammie, 18th F. B.
3rd—Br. Blair, 18th F. B.
(Seven ran).

Walking.

A CALCUTTA MATCH.

THE long-talked-of match between teams of five a side, representing Messrs. Birkmyre Bros. and Messrs. J. Thomas & Co., came off last Saturday night, and the careful preparation that had gone on for some weeks resulted in a really good performance. The course was over the Grand Trunk Road, from the Barrackpore Golf Club to the Calcutta Golf Club, the route in town being through Lower Circular Road and Park Street, as near seventeen miles as one could make it, and though most of the going was good, there were some pretty long stretches of rocky and uneven surface. Then we must not overlook the fact that the walk came off in the dark and on a muggy night in the rains when we look at the winner's time which was given at 3 hours 5 minutes. We consider this a most creditable performance, and as both Mr. Wilson and Mr. Birkmyre came in really fresh, it is obvious that a few minutes could have been knocked off the time if necessary. The winners' guerdon was a silver cup, valued Rs. 250, subscribed for by the losers, and they thoroughly deserved the trophy.

The race started at the Barrackpore Golf Club and a small crowd, including some Calcutta sportsmen, gathered at the start which was timed for half-past five, but the launch was late in arriving, and it was twenty-five minutes past six before Mr. Barrow sent them on their journey. The teams were :—

BIRKMYRE BROTHERS. White and Red.	J. THOMAS AND CO. White.
A. Birkmyre.	C. Michie.
R. B Wilson.	E. A. Lyon.
F. P. Waddley.	F. Ford.
R. Kee.	A. Tosh.
A. Crawford.	R. M. Ballantyne.

They went away at a rare pace and turning into the Grand Trunk Road had taken up their places and settled into their stride. Wilson and Ford immediately assumed the lead, then came the others in a bunch, Crawford and Kee bringing up the rear. They were followed out of Barrackpore by the crowd which tailed off near Tittaghur after cheering the walkers on their way. The competitors from this point were accompanied by the judges, Messrs. Harvey, Barrow, and Smyth on horseback, a small contingent of cyclists and the representatives of the local press on horseback, motor-car, bicycle, and 1st class ticca. At the thirteenth milestone, Wilson and Ford had established a lead of about four hundred yards. The main body here began to pair off led by Birkmyre and Waddley. The twelfth milestone was reached at 6-55 by the leaders, and the eleventh at six minutes past seven. At this juncture Birkmyre and Waddley put on a spurt and went away from the others, while they began to lessen the distance between themselves and the leaders. The tenth milestone was passed at 7-17 P.M., and Ford and Wilson were going very strong, doing an average of eleven minutes a mile. It was 7-28 when the ninth milestone was reached and here Birkmyre and Waddley were only thirty seconds behind the leading men; five minutes separated them from Tosh, Ballantyne, and Michie who were about three hundred yards ahead of Lyon, Kee, and Crawford. The eighth milestone was reached at 7-39 and the seventh eleven minutes later. The leaders had gone away again from Birkmyre who was about a hundred yards ahead of Waddley. Crawford now began to come up and passed Kee, Lyon, Ballantyne and Michie, Tosh being a little ahead of him. At 8-1 P.M. the sixth mile was left behind, Birkmyre being two minutes behind the leaders. The next mile was covered in twelve minutes by Ford and Wilson who were still walking splendidly. Then Wilson began to go ahead and at the Chitpore bridge, reached about 8-15, was nearly 1,000 yards ahead of Ford, with Birkmyre coming up fast, but he soon took a pull on himself and dropped back to his position behind Ford. At the Shambazar Tramway terminus Mr. J. H. Allen joined Wilson and brought him along at a swinging pace from this point to the finish. Crowds of people began accompany the walkers all along Circular Road and an enthusiastic gathering of cyclists and others was waiting for the leader at the foot of Park Street. Five minutes later Ford hove in sight, closely followed by Birkmyre, who came away with a magnificent spurt and passing him at Rawdon Street walked up Park Street at a spanking pace finishing up nine minutes behind Wilson. Ford then arrived, closely followed by Waddley. Crawford had walked splendidly up Circular Road and came in 6¼ minutes after Waddley. Then came the rest of Thomas and Co., Kee bringing up the rear. Seventeen miles in 3 hours and 5 minutes is extremely good walking and Wilson's performance was a fine one. The freshness with which both he and Birkmyre finished showed that they could have taken more out of themselves. The following is the order at the finish with the net times:—

		Hours.	Minutes.
1	Wilson	3	5
2	Birkmyre	3	14
3	Ford	3	15
4	Waddley	3	17
5	Crawford	3	25½
6	Tosh	3	26½
7	Lyon	3	27½
8	Ballantyne	3	28½
9	Michie	3	30
10	Kee	3	39
Messrs Birkmyre Bros			33 pts.
Messrs Thomas & Co.			22 pts.

There was a huge crowd at the Golf Club to welcome the pedestrians, carriages and spectators lining both sides of the Maiden's walk. Each competitor was loudly cheered on his arrival, Wilson receiving a warm ovation.

Arrived at the Club House the congratulations partook of a more personal character, and as soon as he could get a hearing Mr. A. Birkmyre gave them a speech and others orated. The air was thick with general congratulations and everybody was thanked and praised and then, as the local scribes usually put it "the assembly dispersed."

BIRDS OF LUCKNOW.

YELLOW FRONTED PIED WOODPECKER. [Liopicus Mahrat-tensis].

Small-caste Woodpecker, Royal Woodpecker (Martinière boys).

This handsome bird, known to the natives, in common with all Woodpeckers and barbets, as Kutpurwa, is fairly common and a permanent resident. A pair excavated a hole in a branch of a neem-tree in my compound this spring, and I often used to watch the birds digging away. Not wishing to disturb them I did not cut out the eggs. I have only one or two of these, taken from the babool and the mango. Like those of all the tribe they are glossy white and measure about .85" × .67".

INDIAN PIGMY WOODPECKER [Iyngipicus Hardwickii].

Not uncommon and a permanent resident, but apt to be overlooked. Some years ago on 24th March, Reid took two fresh eggs from a hole—the entrance of which, ¾" in diameter, was on the underside—in a mango. These eggs averaged .70" × .52".

This year early in April, a boy brought me a small glossy white egg, which he said he got from a hole in a mango. The bird he described as like a tiny woodpecker, so it must have belonged to this species.

GOLDEN-BACKED WOODPECKER [Brachypternus Aurantius]. Golden Woodpecker [Martinière boys].

A noisy gentleman is the Golden-backed Woodpecker, with his handsome red top knot and mantle of gold. He breeds in March and April, and his wife is often a terribly long time in making up her mind when to lay the eggs. Many a nest hole have I fruitlessly cut. Usually the hollow is artificial, but I took three bare-set eggs on one occasion from a natural hollow in a decayed mango. The eggs were exposed to the sky, yet, though there was absolutely no need for so doing, the bird had cut a hole on the underside, an act which seemed to me to show how strong is the natural instinct even when the necessity for the fulfilment thereof is wanting. The eggs, glossy white of course, average .99" × .77".

COMMON WRYNECK [Iynx Torquilla].

Only a cold weather visitor, and as I have only two notes of having seen it, I do not think it is very common.

COMMON INDIAN GREEN BARBET [Thereiceryx Zeylanicus].

Large-caste Woodpecker (Martinière boys). The brain-fever bird and the koel are trying to the nerves I own, but the green barbet runs them very close. The jarring "kotur, kotur, kotur, koturuk, koturuk" would have caused more than one to have ended his days as with a charge of shot in his body, had it not been that, as a "lover" of birds, I felt bound to stifle my feelings and bear in silence as best I could. The four thin shelled glossless white eggs are laid in an artificial hole in some decayed mango, sheshum, neem, babool, or other tree, the branch chosen being usually more thoroughly rotten than that selected by a Woodpecker. They average 1·18" × ·88".

CRIMSON-BREASTED BARBET [Xanthoæma Hæmatocephala] Basanta [H].

Small-caste Green Woodpecker (Martinière boys). The "tonk, tonk, tonk" of the Coppersmith is to be heard on every side during the spring and early hot weather. Like the lost species it feeds on fruit and berries, and is very partial to the figs of the pipal and banian. Probably also insects form part of the diet. It excavates the usual hole in a hollow branch of mango, pipal, babool, or any other tree, and lays three fragile white eggs which average .92" × .66".

INDIAN ROLLER [Coracias Indicus]. Nilkant [H]. Blue Jay [Anglo-Indian].

One of our commonest birds, and a most noisy nuisance during the breeding season. It is found everywhere, in groves, gardens, and open plains. In some parts of India it is looked upon as sacred, being the bird of Shiva, but, in Lucknow, no such feeling exists. In fact in this part of Oudh far less importance appears to be attached to sacred creatures than in other places. I have known monkeys, which had made themselves a nuisance by trespassing in private compounds, shot without any open protest being raised. Though few Hindus, even of low caste, will touch a dead Nilgai, yet it is rare that any one protests against their destruction. Occasionally some priest will object to a peacock being shot, but unless the village is composed of Brahmins, or other high castes, the sportsman is rarely interfered with. Of course I do not mean to imply that one should shoot at birds or animals usually considered sacred without enquiry. Personally I always ask permission from the local inhabitants if I wish to shoot peacock, and have never had any difficulty. Furthermore I avoid shooting near a village.

The "Blue Jay" lays its eggs in holes of trees or buildings during March, April, and May, laying four glossy white eggs averaging 1·27" × 1·06". Sometimes the hole is unlined; at other times a more or less thick bed of feathers, hair, paper, wool, etc., is placed for the eggs to rest on.

EUROPEAN ROLLER [Coracias Garrulus].

I shot a single specimen (adult ♂) while snipe shooting on the 25th October 899. This is the only instance I know of its occurrence here, though the late Mr. George Reid told me that he fancied he saw it on one or two occasions.

COMMON INDIAN BEE-EATER [Merops Viridis].

Patana, Harrial [H].

One of the commonest and most beautiful of our birds. Ever cheerful in the hottest weather, the mango-bird, as the Martinière boys call him, is to be seen almost everywhere. In common with King-crows, shrikes, doves, rollers, and larks the bee-eater has come to the firm conviction that telegraph wires have been put up especially for his benefit, and "from early morn to dewy eve" numbers will be seen perched on the "magic thread." As Reid pointed out years ago, they are extremely fond of a sociable dust bath. On a hot summer evening numbers of these little birds will be found rolling over and over in some peculiarly dusty spot, where they will enjoy them to their hearts content for twenty minutes or more. Then as if some one with a watch has called "time's up," away they go in a body to seek their resting place for the night. They breed in holes, in banks of nullahs and streams, mud walls and similar places, and when one thinks how weak and slender are their beaks and claws, it seems wonderful to what a depth they penetrate. The eggs laid in March, April, and May are spherical alabaster balls, from 4 to 7 in number and average .77" × .67". There is no lining to the nest beyond the loose sand. Occasionally other occupants in the shape of toads, lizards, etc., are found in the holes, and once I discovered the dried mummy of a bee eater that must have been there a long while.

BLUE-TAILED BEE-EATER [Merops Philippinus].

Large-caste mango-bird [Martinière boys]. Very locally distributed an not nearly so common as the previous species. It seems to have a great partiality for water, and breeds in company with well mynas in the banks of the river. I took a number of eggs—6 was the largest number in a clutch—from some holes in a sandy railway cutting in the middle of May. They are more elongated than those of M. Viridis, and measure on an average .91" × .78". The depth to which these birds dig is very great—4 to 6 feet and even more—and it is no easy matter to get at their egg chambers.

INDIAN-PIED KINGFISHER [Ceryle Varia]. Kowrilla [H].

A common and permanent resident laying its eggs—rather elongated glossy white and averaging 1·17" × ·92"—in holes in the river banks, in February, March, and early April. There is no lining to the nest but the sand on which the eggs rest is usually full of tiny fish-bones. As is well known it hovers over the water before diving, but I have seen it dart from a perch like the European Kingfisher.

COMMON KINGFISHER. [Alcedo Ispida]. Not common in Lucknow, but a permanent resident. I have never found the nest in India, but one of my boys took a nest with 7 white eggs, like those of the green bee-eater, from a hole in a nullah some two or three hundred yards from this goomti during the "rains." I once watched this bird hovering over the water and diving for fish like ceryle varia.

BROWN-HEADED STORK-BILLED KINGFISHER. [Pelargopsis Gurial]. Badami Kowrilla [H].

I have never seen this bird here, and Reid, who was a most careful observer, only came across it on three occasions. According to him it prefers water well shaded by trees.

WHITE-BREASTED KINGFISHER [Halcyon Smyrnensis]. Not very common, and seems to care less for water than other Kingfishers. Reid says that "it does not dive for fishes—habitually at least, and though it may catch them occasionally, it appears to depend more upon grasshoppers, etc., for food." The little I know of the bird goes to confirm his views. On most occasions when I have seen it, my attention has been attracted by hearing its characteristic scream as it was flying from one mango grove to another, where doubtless it was going in search of insects. It is I feel sure a permanent resident, but I have never found its nest.

COMMON GREY HORNBILL [Lophoceros Birostris]. Chakotra [H].

Not very common in Lucknow itself but in those parts of the division where there are groves of banian and pipal trees, it is fairly numerous. It breeds in the division, but I have not found its nest.

EUROPEAN HOOPOE [Upupa Epops].

A cold-weather visitor only and fairly common.

INDIAN HOOPOE [Upupa Indica]. Hud-hud [H].

A common and permanent resident. It breeds in holes of trees and in buildings. The nest, a varied assortment of rags, grass, feather, tow, etc, is usually a most evil-smelling affair. When the young are hatched, it is only equalled in vileness by that of Neophron gingivianus. The eggs, 4 to 7 in number, are laid from February to April, and are plain brown or bluish, glossless and rather rough in texture. In shape they are elongated and measure on an average .95" × .67". The bird that occurs in these parts always has a certain amount of white on the crest feathers and is, I think, a connecting link between the two forms.

COMMON INDIAN SWIFT [Cypselus Affinis]. Ababil [H].

Swallow Martinière boys]. Numbers of this species frequent Lucknow and the country round. They breed in colonies under gateways, eaves of bungalows, and out-houses. The nests are made of feathers, straw, etc., agglutinated together by the saliva of the bird, and the inside is of a tough parchment-like construction. The eggs seem to be laid twice a year. I have taken them from March to July, and Reid got them in February and August. They are of course plain white elongated ovals, two or three in number, and average .86" × .56".

PALM-SWIFT [Tachornis Batassiensis]. Common where there are toddy palms, in the leaves of which it makes its nest. It is rarely found far from these, and is therefore local in distribution.

W. J.

Lord Alington has always been looked upon as the incarnation of worldly wisdom, and without doubt few shrewder men have ever lived. He was on the right scent as usual when he took £2100 to £100 about Florence for the Cambridgeshire of 1884. He believes, however, that no bet is a good one until it is hedged, and, consequently, when the mare came to the front in the betting, he made himself safe by laying £800 to £100.

Unfortunately, however, when he laid this bet he did not give the name of the original layer for the money. The result was that he had to pull the £800 out of his own pocket, the bookmaker having become a defaulter.

According to the returns of the Berlin Statistical Bureau for 1902, there were killed during last year in Prussia nine elk, 15,000 red deer, 8,600 fallow deer, 110,000 roe deer, 9,400 wild boars, 2,273,000 hares, 314,000 rabbits, 400 capercailzie, 6,000 black-game, 2,250 hazel grouse, 2,522,000 partridges, 103,000 quails, 139,000 pheasants, 320 bustards, 41,300 woodcock, 52,000 snipe, 280 wild swans, 3,400 wild geese, 270,000 wild ducks, and 1,200,000 small birds.

THE LONDON ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

THE last meeting of the present session of the London Zoological Society was held on 16th June, when several interesting communications were made. I had the honour of opening the ball with the exhibit of a hen-feathered Bantam cock—a casual specimen, not one of the "Sebright" or "Henny Game" breeds, in which this character is constant. I was also able to exhibit a pair of feet from an Egyptian-bred fowl with remarkably long hind toes, these having three joints instead of the normal two. Mr. R. E. Hodding showed a most interesting series of skulls of four-horned sheep, and argued that in such specimens it was the upper pair of horns which corresponded to the true horns, the lateral pair being the extra ones. His argument from the greater size of the upper horns can, however, hardly be valid, as the extra toe in five-toed fowls is usually larger than the real hind toe. Moreover the upper horns in four-horned sheep show a forward curvature quite unlike normal horns. Mr. Oldfield Thomas showed the skull of a remarkable form of the Gazelle Gazella granti, obtained in German East Africa by Messrs. Roberts and Blaine. In this specimen the horns were twisted round inwards, so that the tips pointed backwards and outwards instead of forwards as they should have done. As horns of this curious reversed type were stated to characterize a particular locality, Mr. Thomas thought that the form should be given subspecific rank and called Gazella granti roberti. But the most interesting item was the exhibition by Dr. A. S. Woodward of photographs in illustration of the recent discovery of a frozen Mammoth in the district of Jakutsk, in Siberia, and the remarks accompanying them. It seems that the unhappy Behemoth had met his death so suddenly that the grass of his last meal was yet between his teeth. He was in a sitting posture, and a large blood-vessel had been ruptured in his frantic efforts to free himself from some position of difficulty, which seemed to suggest that he had fallen into a hole. The nature of the catastrophe which seems to have overwhelmed so much of the ancient and prehistoric great game of Siberia naturally gave rise to an interesting discussion.

F. FINN.

The Story Teller.

THE SPOOFING OF GURRUMPORE.

HE was such a nice boy, with such a quiet, trusting, innocent, look in his blue eyes, and such a want of guile in his round, chubby cheeks that we took him under our protection from the first.

He came to us—the Ninetieth Bombay Blazers—from an English regiment in Bengal. He had got married when at home on leave; one of those silly, boyish marriages one so often hears of, and which all would-be wiseacres hold up their hands in pious horror at the very mention of. They found, of course, that they would have to live very quietly and economically, so he had come to the Staff Corps and been appointed to us.

She, too, was all that was young, pretty, and innocent, and I well remember the night I was introduced to her. She had wavy golden hair, such a chubby little face, just like her husband's and a pretty, pouting little mouth, and she would look into your eyes with the same trusting look that he did, as if she could see no wrong in anybody. They were a beautiful couple. Because of his innocence and trustfulness we christened him the Juggins, whilst she was known as Mrs. J., otherwise "the Baby," from her extremely youthful look. She called him Dicky, and he called her Dolly.

We were fairly large station at Gurrumpore. We had besides ourselves—the Bombay Blazers—a field battery, and a number of Civil Service officials. We were very well off for society, for we had plenty of ladies, and we amused ourselves fairly well with gymkhanas, tennis, cricket, and theatricals; but the big event of the year was our "Week" in the rains when our races came off, and everybody got up a dance or a tennis party, or, at any rate, did something to make the week go off pleasantly for our visitors. When the Jugginses came to us things were very dull; it was the middle of our hot weather and everybody was feeling somewhat played out, so the Jugginses were as new toys to us. The men took charge of Dicky and tried to teach him billiards, ecarte, and whist, at all of which he turned out a most arrant duffer. The ladies took charge of Dolly, and told her all about each other—one at a time, of course—and put her up to things in general. But somehow things didn't seem to interest Dolly—all she seemed to want was to be alone with Dicky—and by degrees our interest in them seemed to drop, and the J.'s were left more or less to themselves.

But one day things were given a fresh impetus by the announcement that the Juggins wanted to buy a charger for parade purposes. He said he didn't care about horses a bit, but he had to have one. All the men who had horses to sell regarded the Juggins as delivered into their hands by Providence, and brought round their equine possessions in strings, and between them they landed the Jugginses with a fairly broken-down old Arab, which, however, did him for parade purposes. He was never seen to ride it at any other time, and it always took its exercise with its sais, who sat and talked to other saises and friends he met along the roads, whilst the Arab waxed fat, contented, and sleepy in aspect. The hot weather wore away and we got more lively; and, amongst others, the Juggins woke up and said he intended buying a pony, so that he and his wife could ride together—but it must be something cheap. Pony after pony—the lame, the halt, the blind, and screwed—were all brought to him. But no, they were all too dear—he wanted something really cheap; he didn't want to play polo or anything that way—simply something quiet, that would amble along the road, and above all, be cheap.

One day several of us were sitting in the mess verandah smoking after tiffin, and Juggins was with us. He didn't often come to tiffin, but he happened to be there that day; and there came along a wood-cutter, towing behind him a long legged, long-haired, long eared pony, with a long, ragged tail that trailed to the ground, and staggering under two huge faggots of wood, one on either side of him.

"Hullo Juggins," said Teddy Beach of ours, "here's a pony for you—he'll be cheap enough, I expect, and he looks quiet."

"Yes," said Juggins, "he looks a nice pony and he has a nice long tail—my wife likes a long tail on a horse" and the Juggins gazed hopefully and innocently into Beach's eyes as Teddy called up the coolie and asked if he would sell the pony.

It was a great favourite of his mother's, the man said, and his children loved to play with it, but he was a poor man and wanted bread and salt, and the sahib could have it for twenty-five rupees if he wanted it—and to our utter amazement and no little amusement the Juggins said he would give the man twenty for if it he would come to his bungalow.

Oh! the shrieks of laughter with which we followed that procession of Juggins, the coolie, and the pony to the Juggins bungalow, and how we all tittered with joy and hid our faces in our handkerchiefs as the Baby came out, looking so pretty in a plain white frock and a lace parasol over her head, and literally crowed with delight at having a pony "really her very own," and seeing it eat sugar out of her hand. The first time they went for a ride together I think the entire station turned out to look. Dick was on the fat Arab, and Dolly, as pleased as Punch, and very red with excitement, was on the new pony; she would not have it clipped—the cold weather was coming on, she said—and so it was as ragged, dishevelled, and long-tailed as when it was first bought.

Of course, Juggins never heard the end of Faggots, as the pony was named, and, on his part, he was never tired of singing its praises—how quiet it was, how nicely it trotted, and how fond his wife was getting of it; but everybody was rather surprised when, one day, as we were discussing at the reading-room the probable entries for the different races at our meeting, Juggins asked if there was a race for ponies?

"Rather," said Perkins, of the Gunners. "Why, do you mean to enter Faggots?"

"Well, it would be rather fun, wouldn't it?" said Juggins.

"Fun!" replied Perkins. "I rather think it would."

"I shall have to train him, I suppose?" asked Dicky.

"Train him!" we all cried. "Certainly not, he's in excellent condition."

So Faggots was duly entered for the pony Derby, and while the Baby was occupied in the manufacture of a silk cap and jacket of pale pink and blue, which she said would look sweet, the Juggins was initiated into all the mysteries of height, weights, weighing-in and out, lotteries and all the hundred and one things that it was considered necessary he should know as an amateur jockey, besides several hundred other things which were equally unnecessary, but caused much inward joy and pleasure to the imparters of the information, and were received by the pupil with his usual look of childish trust and confidence. And still the fat Arab and the long-haired pony went for their evening exercise along the Bombay-road with their master and mistress, and returned after dark.

The eventful day arrived. The station was full of visitors and we had got through two very pleasant days and nights, and of course, all the new-comers had been initiated into the Faggots joke, and all were as anxious as ourselves for the cream of the joke to come off, which would be when Faggots turned out for the Pony Derby

There had been great excitement at the Selling Lotteries the night before—we had several good ponies in the station. There was Teddy Beach's Coquette, and the B. J. R. Syndicate's (Brown, Jones, and Robinson, of the Civil Service) Grass Widow, and Trumpeter, the hope of the battery—and a wild, hot tempered beast, that fairly could gallop if he liked, only he seldom did like—belonging to the engineers of the railway, and rejoicing in the name of "Satan"—besides a number of medium goers. The bidding the night before at the Lotteries, in the Gunner's Mess, had been high, and before they had been long selling there were thousands of rupees in the Pony Derby Lottery. There had been great fun when Faggots was put up.

We took a long time to explain the system to Juggins. At last he had grasped it, and when O'Flaherty, our sporting doctor, who was doing the auctioneering, called out, "Now then, the well-known pony Faggots—got the best of the weights, and ridden by his sporting owner!" a sweet voice from the thick of the cheroot smoke called, "One rupee"—"two" was called in another place, but Faggots was finally bought in by his owner for four rupees.

Well, the day had come, and the hour for the Pony Derby too. Nobody really expected the Juggins would start: but he was seen ready to weigh—in the Baby's pink-and-blue jacket and cap. Then Faggots himself appeared, was unsheeted, and revealed, in all his utter hideousness, long tail and all.

But when Juggins had mounted and the pair shambled down to the post—for he could not be persuaded to canter past—oh! the yell of laughter that went up from that course! We shrieked, laughed, hooted, and held our sides in our glee. It was our glee. It was the last time we laughed in Gurrumpore for many a long day

Nobody ever quite knew what happened next—it was so sudden. Teddy Beach, who was riding Coquette, said he was racing Trumpeter for the inside at the corner when, sound with a as of the bursting of the monsoon, Faggots came, past them and drew away, his long tail streaming out behind him, and Juggins standing up in his stirrups and smiling his innocent, child-like smile at them over his shoulders. We in the stand saw Faggots striding beautifully, and going easily within himself, leave the others behind, and will as he liked by twenty lengths!

The most forcible expression of opinion came however, from Mr. Melton, of the firm of Melton and Mowbray, bookmakers, who travel India during the racing season, who said—

"Well, you might a knocked me down with me own pencil, She comes up to me looking like a school-girl going to buy butterscoch, and she says, 'How much will you bet against my husband's pony—it is called Faggots?' So I laughs and says, "Fifty to one to you, miss! and she says, quite sharp-like' Right! I take you in handr ds! and plants her dibs. And if the bloomin' crock don't go and romp in."

We were all pretty sick, I can tell you; and it was a long time before we found out how he had done it. He told some of us by degrees. When he was in Bengal he had raced a lot, but had bad luck, though he had some good nags. Faggots was the best of his ponies, and when he sold the others he kept him. Somehow he and a friend, aided and abetted by "the Baby" (we changed her name after that), hit on the plan which he carried out to spoof us on the Bombay side. The pony was trained part of the way, then marched by easy stages for weeks till he arrived looking more like a jungle pony than anything else, on a day that the Juggins fixed when he rode out one day to where his faithful old sais had been waiting for some days with the animal—the sais playing the part of the coolie, and afterwards stopping to look after him, a fact which amused us vastly at the time—but "Juggins' sais" turned out the best of men when he was enabled to assume his proper character.—Sporting Sketches.

The Garden.

GARDENING IN MIDNAPORE.

CAPSICUMS.—There are two kinds of capsicums which may be satisfactorily grown in these parts, namely, the common chillie Capsicum frutescens and a large fruited variety Capsicum grossum. It is scarcely worth while going in here for the Capsicum frutescens, except perhaps for some of the choicer kinds, as the villagers grow abundance of it

What is known as Nepal pepper may be very advantageously grown here. Some three years ago, I got a small supply of seed of this pepper from a friend at Dehra Doon, and have since yearly raised crops of this chillie. Nepal pepper can only be treated as an annual here, and the seed should be sown in nursery beds towards the end of the rains, from the middle of September to the beginning of the following month. When some three inches high the seedlings should be put out in rows or lines three feet apart and they should be watered every evening for the first ten or twelve days or till they have taken root, the after-cultivation consists mainly in keeping the soil open and irrigating every week or so. The plants will generally begin bearing towards the middle of December and the fruits to ripen by the end of the following month: the trees present then a very pretty sight, the bright yellow fruits contrast very pleasantly with the rich green of the leaves. The chillies should be allowed to fully ripen, before being picked, and after being thoroughly dried in the sun or hot oven should be powdered and stored in stoppered bottles for future use.

There are some three or four kinds of chillies which are indigenous to the country and perennials, a few plants of these should always be given a corner in the garden, for fresh green chillies are almost indispensable for chutnies, bkurtas, salads, etc. Besides the above there is another kind of chillie which is also a perennial and which is botanically known as Capsicum minimum. The fruit of this chillie is very small, hot and pungent and is very useful for making chillie vinegar and chillie sherry: this latter forms an excellent accompaniment to soups of all kinds and in my opinion in no way inferior to Tobasco sauce. This variety of chillie, and which is familiarly known as bird's-eye chillie, succeed best under shade, so a plant or two of it, if put out in some shady nook or corner of the garden, and perhaps where scarcely anything else will grow, will be found very useful.

Capsicum grossum can only be satisfactorily grown out here from imported seeds, and I have found the American varieties to succeed best. Any fair garden soil enriched with suitable manure will answer for these capsicums; the seeds should be sown in nursery beds and the plants transplanted when six inches or so high. They may be put out in rows two feet apart along the garden paths or in pots singly. I have found this latter mode to answer the best. When the fruits have begun forming liquid manure should be freely applied, and not more than three to four fruits allowed to remain on each plant.

Capsicums are more ornamental than useful, though some of the better flavoured varieties make an excellent salad by themselves. Among the American varieties what is known as President Garfield may be grown to an enormous size. I have seen them five inches long and three inches in diameter, though, as I said before Capsicum grossum is more ornamental than useful, but if for nothing else but their showiness they should always be given a place in the garden.

RECIPE FOR CHILLIE SHERRY.—Take a table spoonful of fully ripe bird's-eye chillies and the same quantity of green ones; pick clean and wash with vinegar; dry and put them in a half pint bottle, pour over a wine glass full of brandy and a table spoonful of vinegar, and let it stand for a couple of days then fill the bottle with good dry sherry. Let the whole stand now for three weeks or a month longer, shaking the bottle occasionally, when the contents may be decanted through a piece of flannel. A few drops of this chillie sherry will be found an excellent accompaniment to soups, and specially so in the hot weather when something is required to stir up the jaded appetite.

CARROTS, Daucus carrota.—May be grown in Midnapore in the rains when the rainfall is not heavy; but the best roots are those from the cold weather sowings. Any garden soil of a light and friable nature and provided it is freely manured is suited to this vegetable. The manure should always be applied fully six months, or longer, before the crops are put down for fresh manure is very injurious to roots and should never be made use of. The ground should be dug for a foot or more, for like all root crops, carrots require a loose soil and well pulverized. The best time for sowing carrots is from the middle of September to the end of the following month; the proportion of seeds sown is about ½ oz. to every 50 square feet. For the earlier sowings, the following and which are mainly short-rooted varieties, preference should be given to, viz., Early Paris, Dutch Horn, Early Scarlet and Centenary, and for late crops the following will be found useful, namely, English Horn, Long Scarlet, Altringham, and Paris Market.

After the seeds have been sown, they should be well harrowed in and watered every evening with a watering can. Carrot seeds take longer to germinate than most other vegetables and they seldom do so before the tenth or twelfth day. Should the seedlings come out too thickly, they should be thinned out to about two inches apart and the ground occasionally loosened with a fine hoe. When the roots have begun forming liquid manure in weak solution should be applied once a week. Most of the earlier varieties will be ready to be taken in 10 to 12 weeks from the time of sowing, and the late ones a month or so later.

Carrots may be kept in good condition nearly all through the hot weather and rains and they will be found very acceptable at a period when scarcely any other European vegetables are available. Carrots required for future use should be sown on raised beds, well drained and in soil which has a good admixture of sand. The best way to preserve carrots is to cut off all the leaves at the beginning of the rains and cover up all exposed tops with a layer of leaf mould and sand. Carrots thus preserved will be found to have lost none of their flavour or delicacy and will form valuable additions to stews, soups, etc.

CELERY, Apium Graveolens,—is a difficult vegetable to grow in Midnapore, as it is more or less all over Bengal. I mean to grow it to perfection, for the majority of roots one gets in the market and elsewhere are scarcely worth putting on the table. To grow celery satisfactorily out here, seedlings or plants of the previous years' sowing should always be made use of: seeds for these should be sown about December in shallow pans and transplanted a couple of months later into empty wine boxes, two inches apart. These boxes should have holes bored in their bottom to allow of proper drainage, and they should be kept in a northerly varendah or any other shady places facing the north. During the hot weather the plants should be watered every evening and the ground occasionally loosened with a fine hoe. As soon as the rains have set in, the daily watering should be withheld and it should only be resorted as occasion may require, for the great thing at this period is to prevent the soil getting sour and the plants turning yellow and damping off. A good plan to prevent the soil turning sour is to apply a layer of small ghooting or lime-stone on the surface. Though plants from the previous year's sowing usually give the best results, celery raised from some of the earlier sowings of the season, i.e., from the first week in September to the middle of the following month give very fair results, but the roots obtained from such sowings cannot possibly be compared with the earlier ones. Those who are not fortunate enough to have celery seedlings of the previous year, should sow the new season's seeds as early as practicable, i.e., from the first week in September to the middle of October. Plants from these early sowings should be big enough to be put out during the following month. The seedlings when three inches or so high should be put out in trenches six inches apart and on a bed of rich friable soil. The young plants should be watered daily every evening but once they have taken roots and have begun growing, the watering should be restricted to twice a week. Liquid manure in weak solution is very beneficial so should be applied with every alternate watering. The great thing in growing of celery is to accelerate the growth as much as possible and thus prevent the development of fibres in the leaf stalks which are the edible parts. As the plants grow they should be earthed up, and when some 18 inches high the trenches should be entirely filled in to the base of the leaves. The object in filling up these trenches is to blanch the leaf stalks and render them crisp and white. Another way of blanching celery stalks is to cover up the plants when big enough with earthenware chongas or funnels. Any native potter could make these up: they should be a couple of feet high, about 8 inches in diameter and with both ends open. Each plant should be carefully covered up with one of these chongas, only the top of the leaves showing through the opening above. Blanching celery in this way has its advantage and I prefer it myself to the earthing up, as this latter mode is very apt to rot the inside of some of the stalks. With proper care and cultivation celery may be kept in good condition for the table till the close of the cold season, but once the hot weather has set in the stalk becomes stringy and too high flavoured. Celery stalks obtained from the season's sowings, though never so big as that from the older plants, are tender and well flavoured.

Celery is usually eaten raw or in its fresh green state and forms one of the most valuable accompaniments to cheese we have got. It is also highly commended for flavouring soups, ragouts and such. Celery stalks stewed by themselves make an excellent dish and they are also excellent for pickling in vinegar, though pickled celery stalk is a condiment one scarcely ever sees out here. The tenderer leaves and young stalks if cut in pieces and dried in the sun or in a hot oven and carefully bottled, will be found very useful for flavouring soups, etc., when the fresh vegetable is out of season.

There are two varieties of celery usually grown in Bengal, but the difference lies mainly in the colour of the stalks which are either white or red. The former should be given preference to as I have always found it the more delicate and better flavoured of the two kinds. Celery is indigenous to the country, at least to India, and is found plentifully in its wild state at the base of the North-West Himalayas.

CRESS, Lepidium sativum—May be grown in Midnapore as well in most other parts of Bengal all the year round. To obtain cress to perfection, it should be sown in a light friable soil, well enriched with manure, freely watered and kept partly shaded. The great thing in growing cress is to see that it is tender with plenty of pungency. In the cold seasons, sowings should be made every week and the herb will be ready for the table in 12 to 14 days. When cutting cress one should always be careful to use a pair of scissors, as the plants must in no way be injured or damaged, for a second and very often a third cutting will be obtained from the same plot. During the hot weather and rains sowings should be made in well raised and properly drained beds and the plants protected from either too much rain or sun. If the rains be too heavy, the sowings should be made either in shallow pans or empty wine boxes. These should be kept in a verandah facing the north partly shaded, but with plenty of light. Cress in the hot weather and rains should be cut when they put out their fourth leaves, for if allowed to remain longer they will damp off. At such time these herbs will be found most acceptable for salads and as an accompaniment to a sauce. Cress may be easily acclimatized, so seeds of some of the choicer kinds should always be preserved for furture sowings.

THE WORLD ON WHEELS.

AN attractively got-up little book, entitled "Early Carriages and Roads," by Sir Walter Gilbey, reviews the progress made in coach building in England from Elizabeth's time to the end of the coaching era. The history of wheeled passenger carriages, as distinguished from that of vehicles for the conveyance of agricultural produce, is an interesting and important phase of social history and one which well deserved the attention of a writer so widely read and well informed as the author of this book. Regarding the use of the wheeled conveyance from the broadest standpoint we might almost divide it into three epochs which gradually merge the one into the other. In the first epoch men and women took carriage from necessity: those were the early and middle ages when roads were not, when passenger vehicles were innocent of springs, when the "long waggon" travelling at three miles an hour was the refuge of women and children and such as could not ride. Until well on in the seventeenth century the "coach" properly so called did not exist, and our ancestors made their journeys entirely in the saddle: even in Alexander Pope's time, he who took coach when he might have ridden was regarded as a lazy fellow whose effeminacy was for reproach, and the days when goods were carried on pack horses which were driven in long strings about the country are hardly yet passed out of living memory. It is fair to doubt whether the charge of effeminacy would lie against the man who took coach in preference to the horse at the period when carriages were guileless of springs. Until about the year 1700 when the use of steel springs began to be understood, wheeled carriages were no beds of luxury either on the awful tracks miscalled roads or on the hardly less rough streets of the town. Queen Elizabeth, as we all know, was a keen sportswoman and a regular rider until she reached an advanced age: she was not made of the tender stuff that shrinks from discomfort; but it is on record that she suffered so much in her coach on one occasion that she refused ever to use it again. The forerunner of the steel spring was the system of suspending the carriage body on standards and strong leather braces; and we can imagine what the jolting, tossing, and vibration of a heavy coach even on a fairly smooth road must have been. Small wonder that our ancestors preferred the saddle as safer and more expeditious; but we confess our inability to see how the man who took a place in the early coach laid himself open to the charge of effeminacy.

Samuel Pepys and Misson, an observant French visitor to England at the time of William III, tell us that people were much in the habit of driving for pleasure in Hyde Park in their times, but that was apparently the only place whither "carriage people" attempted to drive for pleasure. And there was sufficient reason why carriage exercise should have been productive of less gratification than pleasure until those two benefactors of the species, Mr. Obadiah Elliot and Mr. John Loudon Macadam, came on the scene. The first-named, whose memory is less green than it deserves to be, invented the elliptical carriage spring just about a hundred years ago and thus made passenger vehicles incomparably superior to their predecessors: Macadam made roads fit for a carriage to travel on, and the two benefactors practically made a new era. The achievements of these two should always be considered together:

few of the roads in England were good enough for a carriage hung on springs till Macadam's system was adopted; and Mr. Obadiah Elliot came on the scene just at the right time. Endowed with decent roads and carriages on good springs driving for pleasure became more general and a few years after the elliptical spring appeared, came the definite recognition that driving a coach was worthy to rank as a sport in the establishment of the "Benson Driving Club" in the year 1807, and of the "Four-Horse Club" in the following year. The Benson Club flourished for many years, but eventually decay set in. The coach was driven off the road by the railway train in the forties and fifties, and the Benson Club died with the mail coach. The mail coach died hard: it made a brave struggle for its life, but grievous taxation upon coaches and their earnings helped the railway unduly: when the coach was paying 20 per cent of its earnings to the State, the infant railway was paying 5 per cent., and these burdens crushed the life out of the coach prematurely. Sir Walter Gilbey gives some figures in this connection which tempt us for the moment to glance aside from our immediate topic. "To show the decline of coaching—in 1835 the total revenue from the stage coaches amounted to £498,497; and in 1854 it had fallen to £73,903."

For a time, about the middle of the last century, coaching was in a state of suspended animation, notwithstanding the fact that the Four in Hand Driving Club was founded in 1856, a very few years after the demise of the Benson Club. We travel now beyond the period covered by Sir Walter's book, but it is worth noting that the carriage section of the International Exhibition of 1862 did not include a single drag or travelling carriage. In the years that followed, however, coaching took a new and robust lease of life. Some enterprising men started coaches to run from London to Oxford, Windsor, Esher, Brighton, St. Albans and other towns which are a day's or part of a day's journey by road; and as the chance of handling a team appealed to young men of leisure and means as closely in our day as it did to their grandfathers in the brief Golden Age of coaching, the proprietors make a good income out of the box seat alone. On fine days during the summer months, as most of our readers know, these coaches are crowded as to the roof. It is by the way significant of the tenacity with which we adhere to words and phrases long after they have lost their original meaning, that the term "outsider" should still be a conclusive term of social disability. The word was borrowed from the language of the road; a clause in George III's Coach Act of 1810 forbids any "outside passenger" to travel inside unless with the consent of one inside passenger; and such consent being given the consenting inside passenger was to have the outsider placed beside him. The Coaching Club, founded in 1870, imported a scarcely perceptible element of wholesome rivalry into four-in-hand driving. It has sometimes occurred to us that the enterprising management of Ranelagh or Rcehampton might frame a driving competition open to members of the two clubs.

Tandem driving is a comparatively modern innovation, but when it first occurred to a sporting whip to put one horse before the other instead of driving the two abreast, it would be difficult to say. It is certainly not the way to get the most work out of the two horses or ponies; but, equally certainly, tandem is better fun than any other form of driving and belongs to the third epoch of driving for sport. Henry Albren produced a few pictures in which a tandem appears, but none of them, so far as we recollect, bear date; but the dress of the very sporting drivers refers these pictures to the first quarter of the nineteenth century. While considering modern sporting turns out it would be very unjust to omit mention of the fearful and wonderful vehicle which enjoyed such popularity, particularly in Ireland at the end of the eighteenth century and early years of the nineteenth. The "Suicide Gig" offered such large opportunities for breaking the driver's neck and the neck of his groom that we marvel at the lack of enterprise, or folly, which has left it unrevived. It was a wonderful vehicle, compared to which, the "perch high phaeton" of the same period was safe and homely as ekka or ticca gharry. The ambition of the driver of the "Suicide" was to possess the highest wheels, and rear his seat as high as he possibly could above them: and what altitude his reckless courage might reach, his groom's seat was by coachmakers' rule or suicide-gig convention bound to be three feet higher. Old prints show us to what an altitude this singular vehicle was raised: we wonder, while looking upon them, whether the unwritten laws of suicide-gig driving permitted the driver to get down when he came to the ruts four feet deep which roused Arthur Young's ire against "these infernal roads."

We must regard the old coach races with which it was the custom (Acts against furious driving notwithstanding) to signalise May day as the outcome of a sporting instinct if these races cannot actually rank as sporting events. Even behind the best of teams with an experienced man on the box, on a sound coach on the best of roads, those May day coach races must sometimes have made the flesh of the timid passenger to creep. The coachman who could boast that he had done his whole journey at fifteen miles an hour including stoppages was a proud man; but prouder he, who could and did race another coach mile after mile uphill without drawing rein and downhill without shoe. They are exciting enough to read of these old coach races, and we can understand why elderly passengers and persons of timid habit refrained from travelling on May day; but a coach journey on that day must have been a thing for the young blood to dream of for weeks before hand.

HENLEY ROYAL REGATTA.

LONDON, Friday, 10th July 1903.

THE Regatta opened on Tuesday the 7th instant and ended yesterday, having been carried out under favourable conditions throughout. The finals yesterday produced some very good racing and interesting finishes. Cambridge this year was represented by but two crews—Third Trinity, and First Trinity—Caius and Trinity Hall having lost some of their oarsmen were unable to put in an appearance. Appended are details:—

Sporting Notes.

VISITORS to Tollygunge on Saturday last were regaled with a really merry afternoon; for if the racing was poor, there was at any rate no cause to complain of lack of excitement in other ways. The fields were, as we anticipated, small, three being the prevalent number of starters. This was caused, as we prophesied it would be, by the cheerful, light-hearted nature of the handicapping. One owner who had six or seven entered, one way and another, put the big "J." through the names of all his candidates as soon as the allotments of burdens was made public, though one or two other owners, who would have been equally justified in doing the same, left theirs in, but whether from a feeling of compassion for the promoters of the carnival, or from a desire to give their animals an exercise gallop in silk, deponent knoweth not. At any rate it could not possibly have been with any hope of carrying their imposts to victory. A report of the meeting appears elsewhere.

The Calcutta course, or part of it, was open for the first time on Tuesday morning and a certain amount of half and three-quarter speed work was witnessed. Several of Mr. Galstaun's lot went five and six furlongs at a nice working pace. Springlock with Smallman up went six furlongs at three-quarter speed. This horse is evidently intended for the Monsoons and is a class above anything we are accustomed to see out at this time of year. Of Mr. Bell-Irving's string the only one to go fast was Metalwing, who was sent a useful five furlongs. The others were doing slow work on the maidan. There was also some schooling, High Tide going over two flights in great style unaccompanied, Jack Spillain having the leg up. Naiades (owner up), and Bushy (Mr. Raban) also went over two flights, the former clouting the timber very hard. French Girl was also hoisted over a couple of flights. She has evidently no intention of hurting herself or her rider, but will have to accelerate her style of jumping a bit before she proves dangerous at this game. The Captain (Smallman) and a brown pony of Mr. Prendergast's (Mr. Barrow) went a full school, the latter looking quite cool and comfortable without the ornamental sheet which we have become accustomed to see flapping round his sides when at work, presumably to keep him warm during the recent wintry weather. The Captain is an ideal timber topper and improves with every school. He was jumping two clear lengths away from the other at each flight.

There is no doubt that the new hurdles are a slight improvement upon the old patterns as they undoubtedly inspire horses with a certain amount of respect for them, and some that last season were very rocky jumpers, are acquiring a very different style after having tried conclusions between their shins and the new timber.

Our Poona correspondent writes :—In a fortnight the Poona racing season will be in full swing. Already trainers are shoving along those of their charges intended to take part in the preliminary campaign and there seems every likelihood of the First Extra Meeting filling very well indeed, while the season, as a whole, promises to provide most interesting racing. The track of a morning presents a most animated appearance, and as usual the clocking of each other's horses goes on with that frankness so characteristic among trainers in India. All the Bombay stables are in residence at Poona now, and excepting Byramji, who is at Bangalore with Harpist, all the trainers may be seen at the rails of the Grand Stand of a morning. Kendall who presides over the Ananji Nanji and Gokuldas' string has his lot well forward, and as was the case last year this stable is sure to earn a good many brackets at the Extra Meetings. The team consists of many fine Arabs, including Flying Childers, Grey Fox, Hakum, and the very smart bay, Bay Middleton which showed excellent form at the Bombay races. The most recent addition to this stable is the waler pony Picture whose colonial record entitles her to be reckoned first class.

Mr. A. W. P., whose stable did so well at the end of the Bombay season, has taken up his quarters at Poona and will watch the training of his team by Fowler. With Min, Fitzeros, Fando, Free Trade, Cinder, etc. to represent him, "Mr. A. W. P." should occupy a good position in the list of winning owners at the end of the season. I hardly think, however, that he or Mr. Percy Fischer, his confrère in racing, will be represented at the first two or three Extras, as the team was late in going down to prepare for the coming campaign. There has been no addition to this stable which is already large enough to be almost unwieldy, and among its disappointments is the pony Wink. They say the son of May boy is a humorous pony who will stop in the middle of a race to bite at a fly or turn to look at his rider reproachfully if his mouth is tugged : he has been a most expensive joke to Mr. Fischer who by the way has gone to Bangalore for the meeting and will probably ride something there. None of his horses were forward enough in training to be taken down with him for the meeting.

Ali Bin Talib, whose Changiz from his running at Mysore appears to have turned rogue, has been giving this grey, Mameluke, Moon, and others of his selected Arabs slow work as a letting down after Mysore, and, as they are all fit they will only require a pipe opener or two to get them ready for any of the Extras in which he elects to send his colours out. Byramji Rustomji has a very long string in hand and some exceptionally smart ones comprise the lot. Of these Indabba, over whose first measurement there was such a rumpus, will have to be reckoned with. He was quite at the top of the tree in the Colonies where he won amongst the ponies as well as the horses. Harpist has come on wonderfully well under this trainer who has also a classy lot of Arabs in his care.

Andrew Clarke is unfortunate in having lost New Oswestry by death. This chestnut put up a great record at Bombay ; if he had lived and been measured a pony again there is nothing in the country that could have beaten him on terms. Clarke's lot has somewhat thinned down, but he still has some fairly useful ones on the track of a morning including that game old Arab Governor, Dart, Chancellor, etc. Tommy Tingey occupies one of the houses on the road which the flippant call "the trainers' gallery," and Messrs. G. K. D. D.'s horses are sent along of a morning in a manner that suggests their early appearance under colours.

Aga S. Shah returned from Mysore with his quartette, and all his candidates are working regularly on the Poona track ; some are evidently not to appear till the season is well under weigh, but others are having the work pushed into them in a manner that indicates a participation in the opening stages. Ayrdale has improved wonderfully and old Beadsman looks very well despite the moth-eaten patches ; while among the Arabs, Achilles, Oriental, and Chester show a fine bloom in their coats. Of the other trainers and horses it need only be said that work goes on in earnest and the results of their efforts will soon be known. Watson and Dignum will arrive after Bangalore.

A great improvement has been made in the track. A foundation of kunker has been laid at the distance where there was a depression and water gathered after a heavy downfall, and over this earth and turf has been spread rendering the going springy and doing away with the danger of water logging. The old stand has been pulled down and rebuilt in line with the stand which was completed last year ; alterations have also been made in the paddock, and altogether the stand and enclosure have been greatly improved. Mr. Cecil Gray is never satisfied unless he is planning new ideas, and what is more, he never rests once having thought out any thing, till it is accomplished. To this trait in his character is due the great improvements which have of recent years been carried out at Poona and Bombay.

The Madras Gymkhana held a point-to-point race on the 4th instant in lieu of the proposed Paperchase which did not fill. Mr. H. N. C. Campbell sent the field away to a capital start from the end of the Mambalam Tank. Off they went over the bund, across a road and crossed the railway a little further on, led by Mr. Branson with Mr. Elwes and Captain Cornwall next. They took the bund of the Long Tank at the west corner and coming along at a spanking pace made for the Adyar Club. Branson was the first to appear with Elwes close at his heels. They were to finish between flags on the Club lawn and a tight struggle took place between Mr. Branson's Sportsman and Mr. Elwes' Shamrock, the latter going ahead twenty lengths from the post and winning by half a length. After an interval Captain Cornwall arrived followed by Mr. Gibson, the rest of the field straggling in.

The election of the Khedive to membership of the English Jockey Club has suggested the publication of the following paragraph in a Calcutta native paper :—"The Khedive of Egypt has been elected a member of the Jockey Club. We did not know that the Egyptian was a 'horsey' man. We may next hear that the 'honour' of being in the company of 'Jockeys' has been extended to Aga Khan and the Kuar Sahib of Patiala, both horsey men with some business to transact almost every day with either Indian or European jockeys." This is a bit rough on the poor Khedive ; but he will survive we dare say.

J. D. Scott has been on a visit to Calcutta.

Poor Me, the Colombo racing mare owned by Mr. Bartleet, has just died.

Donald Greenhalgh, it is rumoured, will start a training stable in Colombo.

A London correspondent writes :—"I saw Tom Scott in the City to-day and had a long chat with him. He was confident he would have won the big Steeplechase in France with Record Reign by fifty lengths if that unfortunate gee hadn't broken his leg. It was strange that the bone above the knee was the one to break. Scott told me he had the horse insured for £1,000, so from a money point of view the owner loses little if anything. It was Scott's intention to bring Record Reign to England to have had a shot at the Cesarewitch, the Cambridgeshire, or the Grand National next year. Scott, Southall, and Ramshaw leave England for India at the end of June."

Ascot brought about little change in the relative positions of the prominent jockeys, at home and the lead was still held by W. Lane, who had had 50 winning rides to the 19th ultimo. His position was, however, challenged by both Madden and Halsey, of whom the first-named had reduced the difference between his score and that of Lane to seven, while Halsey was a good third with 41. Maher, Trigg, and Watts tied at 32, and of those among the "twenties" M. Cannon and his brother Kempton stood best.

The following is the list compiled from 23rd March to 19th June :—

Our Bangalore correspondent writes :—A lengthy programme has been issued for the Bangalore Horse Show which takes place on the 4th and 5th proximo. The show will be held on the race course and will be under the patronage of H. H. the Maharaja of Mysore. Also the Committee is a very strong one, including Sir Donald Robertson, British Resident in Mysore, (President); Brigadier-General J. Eccles Nixon, C. B., Colonel J. P. Grant, and Lieutenant-Colonels Woods, C. B., Bond, C. B., Sprot, Daniell, Georges Cox and Desaraj Urs. There are twenty classes in all, embracing all possible description of horses and ponies, there are jumping competitions for horses and ponies, a special prize for the best lady whip and a similar prize for the best turned out team, besides driving competitions pure and simple for single harness, tandems and teams. It should be a great show.

At the risk of being monotonous I must say a word or two as to the weekly paperchase which took place on Tuesday last. These paperchases are being taken up so keenly in Bangalore that the later part of the season when there are likely to be competitions for average cups, must produce good sport. A great feature in the chases which have taken place lately, is the riding of some of our ladies, and Mrs. Bernard Hawkins, Mrs. Randall, the Misses Sprot, and Miss Armstrong are amongst the best. If a lady is good on a horse, she is generally very good, and the above-mentioned fair horsewomen are cases in point. On Tuesday last, Mr. Bernard Hawkins rode a good second to Colonel George 3rd Madras Lancers, in the horse chase ; whilst Mrs. Randall occupied a similar position to Captain Claridge, 3rd Madras Lancers, in the pony chase. Moreover I fancy Captain Claridge would be the first to acknowledge that he was not riding a pony strictly speaking and only went round with the ponies because he generously denied himself a ride with the horses for hospitable reasons ; the gallant 3rd Madras Lancers being "At Home" to their friends. As a final remark; what a treat it was to see Mrs. Randall pick that pretty black pony up again when he was all but on his nose over the last fence but one. Cheers for the Bangalore lady riders.

An extra Gymkhana was held last Saturday at Simla. There were six events, all filling well and being keenly contested. The first, a Consolation Plate for ponies that have never won Rs. 10, was won by Circassian, Captain Capper up. The ladies tilting and gentlemen tent-pegging brought out ten competitors. Captain Wigram and Mrs. Lecky securing the prize with Major Maxwell and Mrs. Buck second. Captain Wigram won the third event—hitting the polo ball. The Wand Race for Ladies went to Miss Steward and the Not-at-Home Stakes to Captain Wigram and Mrs. Buck. The Thread-needle Stakes, which closed the programme, was won by Captain Brooke and Mrs. Atkinson.

A very satisfactory report was presented to the subscribers to the Bombay Hunt at the annual meeting held a day or two since. Hunting was commenced on 27th November and ended on the 8th March, hounds being out 30 times (excluding bye-days), and jackals were accounted for. One hound was charged by a buffalo during a run and died from internal injuries, another received an injury to the head and had to be disposed of, and a third was lost in the jungle and never heard of again. Five-and a-half couple unfortunately died of lung disease, but the committee believe that the cause of the outbreak has disappeared, and that a similar misfortune in the future need not be apprehended. Of the remaining 18 couple, 12 couple were sold to Mr. Murray-Aynsley, of Coorg, and six couple to the Ooty Hunt. At the end of the past season the accounts showed a credit balance of Rs. 149, while the accounts presented to the meeting showed a credit balance of Rs. 487. The report and statement of accounts having been adopted, it was decided that a pack of hounds be purchased for next season, and the following were elected members of the Committee :—Messrs G. K. Remington, F. C. Macrae, J. L. Symons, H. E. G. Proctor, Cecil Gray, J. H. Symington, Donald Graham, and J. A. Lord. Mr. R. W. L. Dunlop was requested to again undertake the duties of Honorary Secretary. The Committee were empowered to make all the necessary arrangements for the purchase and shipment of hounds, and the Honorary Secretary stated that Mr. G. K. Remington, who was now in England, had kindly consented to assist in selecting the hounds. Mr. J. A. Lord was again elected Master, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded him for the able and successful way in which he had hunted the hounds during the past season, and the excellent sport he had shown.

Our Poona correspondent writes :—The weather has been very oppressive and the sportsmen of Poona were beginning to feel a trifle depressed and weary of life till thrown suddenly into an ecstasy of wild delight by the announcement in the local organ that shuttlecocks may be obtained from the Badminton Honorary Secretary of the Gymkhana at an anna a bird! So now brave and good men can breathe again and feel that life once more is worth the living.

By the way the local sporting young man went a bit wide at the corner in proclaiming that Mr. Hamar Bass is importing Carbine to run for the Viceroy's Cup. Needless to say it is not the "pride of Australia" that is coming, but his son Carabine. The feminine appearance of the name has too I see led another sporting writer into believing the bit of blood in question to be a mare! It certainly adds greatly increased interest to the big race at Calcutta and probably two horses of greater repute than Great Scot and the Chester Cup winner have never arrived to contest the blue riband of the Indian Turf. That they may both (and others worthy to meet them) get to the post fit and well and at the height of their forms must be the earnest desire of all good sportsmen.

There was a great meeting of the talent the other day on the Yerowda Golf Links, when eight champions of the Government of Bombay met eight of the "brutal and licentious soldiery" representing Bombay Command Head-quarters and administered a crushing defeat on the men of war. His Excellency Lord Northcote was playing like a standard book on the game driving with determination and putting with precision and never gave his opponents a chance and the civil element eventually won by 19 holes to 4.

I have oft times yearned to be a Civic Father, for I hanker after the unrestrained respect of my fellow-men. Poona roads are not all quite perfect and I have even heard people criticise the lighting thereof and other trifles of that sort. But a European restaurateur here made a humble, and, as it seems to the average uncivic mind, laudable effort to tidy the front of his porch with a border of white stones a foot or so broad. Then came the Assyrian down like a wolf on the fold and the Majesty of Cantonment Law ordered the immediate removal of the little bauble. And India is now saved.

Captain Channer, R. N., of Colombo, has, in a letter to the Times of Ceylon, delivered himself of the following observations on horse "feed":—

The expense of horse-food has so much increased that, from paying Rs. 80 per mensem per head for keep of our racing horses and ponies, it is now Rs. 130. In England the current rate is £10 per mensem, and you get a run every week during the season. In Ceylon it is £8 6s. sterling, and you practically only get two meetings—Colombo and Nuwara Eliya—in the whole year. In the eighties, men were content to feed horses on the food of the island and of India, and at that period very high-class horses ran in the Colony. As a matter of fact, paddy is the heaviest grain per bushel in the world, running to 44lbs.; next is New Zealand oats, 42lbs.; and the best Scotch white, 41lbs, per bushel. If one-third of gram is run through the paddy, the difference of analysis is only about ·7 between this mixture and the best English oats in their second year, before which they are not fit food for hunters or race-horses. English oats in the second year, from Lincolnshire, or grown on limesoil, weigh 40lbs. the bushel, which is exactly the weight of crushed paddy and gram. A cheaper food, and I think a food better adapted for racehorses in this hot Colony, is the best Indian oats grown in the Dehra Doon district. These run their full 35lbs, to the bushel, and have plenty of meat. Fresh shipments can be procured twice a month from Calcutta. In my opinion the reason that so many horses take so long to acclimatize is that their insides are overloaded with too strong and plenteous a diet. Vasto, Bay Middleton, and several others, in the hands of skilful trainers, ran and won the best races of their class within 6 to 8 months of landing. Mr. Barney Allen brought over £18,000 sterling of horses, and ran them hard with great success shortly after landing. I personally find, if I rough a pony down as he should be, that I can take him across the Gulf of Manaar in a stormy half gale of wind: he will be five or six days on board; and is fit to hear any Jack's back crack over the Bombay country in 48 hours after landing. Colonel Bull, late M. F. H. of the Poona Hounds, and one who owns some of the best hunters in Western India, told me he had hunted both his horses 48 hours after landing them from Aden.

"A hungry horse (properly nourished) is a good horse for any wrk—racing, hunting, hacking, polo or trapping. A fat one is a wicked bullock; he may win a race out of his class, but certainly won't amongst his peers. I last year was handicapping; and I pulled the weight off, and kept on jettisoning at each handicap a fat one, but he could not gallop for a bag of nuts. This year he ran hungry and with clean heart and lungs, and I saw in his last handicap he was carrying 11st. 6lbs.—rather a sudden change from 7-7 (and I would have put 6-7 if there had been a rider for him). A fat horse at hunting or polo, will, if the former, prance at his fences and, if the latter, kitten his work; which makes his rider look a fool. Trapping, he will probably put what you value most in the ditch, and spoil her calling frock, and then amuse himself kicking the trap to pieces on his way home. The Book of Deuteronomy tells us that anything in skin or hide that waxes fat (unless it's most righteous) also gets wicked, and kicketh; which means, that it takes a blood horse to carry his corn; now Ladas could only eat 16lbs. of corn per diem for his Derby preparation and was a growing youth. I have a blood mare three off by Young Artillery (by Trenton—Bengal Light)—Haidee. This is what she eats per diem of paddy and gram:—On the first July, she goes on an Indian oat diet; every ounce of food she puts into her muscles, and I fully expect the day she goes to the post she will have dropped 2½ inches in front, and her waist will have decreased 3 inches at least. It is ridiculous to think that any but the very highest blood can carry an abnormal quantity of food. A peck (10 lbs.) is a very generous ration for a full-grown horse all the year round; and it is, I think, a very wonderful arrangement that can put 25 and 30 lbs. into a horse and keep him clean inside. I know I thought myself lucky if my Australian ponies would eat 12lbs. of oats daily for six weeks without picking at them. I spoke to several trainers in Bombay, who all are in favour of Indian oats as being more digestible in hot and damp climates than the heavier descriptions. A horse weighing 850lbs., on a daily ration of 10lbs. of corn and 12lbs. of grass, eats eleven times his own weight in the year. A hound on ¾ bushel of rice and 7·75 soup-meat eats from 9 to 10 times his weight, taking him at 60 lbs. more or less. The biggest American trotter, which is very nearly a thorough-bred horse, the blot in his escutcheon being on the dam's side, a Clydesdale, weighed 1,150 lbs. and 10½" below the knee: pro rata he should eat 16,650 lbs. per annum, but this I doubt, as I don't suppose his tummy was pro rata to his weight."

Among our shooting news this week will be found an interesting extract from The Kynoch Journal on cordite pressure in tropical countries.

A series of races in connection with the South India Homing Society began yesterday. Young birds are to be flown from Chickjagar (113 miles) and old birds from Dharwar (304 miles).

On the subject of cordite rifles in India, The Kynoch Journal remarks :—"From what we can gather from authentic sources such trouble as has actually occurred, has arisen rather from strained actions than from damaged barrels, and the injury generally occurs at the first shot or two, which suggests that the presence of a slight film of oil in the chamber has allowed the cartridge case to move back against the face of the action and exert thereon the full pressure of the gas, instead of being held firmly in its place by friction against the sides of the chamber, in which latter case the base of the case can only reach the face of the action by the stretching of the metal of the case near the head, the strain on the action being thus very much reduced. The difference between an oiled and a dry chamber is well established by experiments with automatic guns. It would be good policy on the part of gunmakers to test their rifles, after the actions are hardened, with a few cartridges giving say 24 tons, the chamber being oiled.

Many shikaries have tried to gain the thousand-rupee reward for the destruction of the Tipperah man-eater and several tigers have been shot, but the notorious animal is still at large. He added another victim to his list last week and continues to keep out of range. An organised effort is being made to bag him which it is hoped will prove successful.

Any one wanting a good petrol electric launch can be supplied at once by Messrs. Thos. Cook and Son (Calcutta), whose advertisement regarding this jolly little craft appears in our special notices to-day. We have had a trip in this boat, so our recommendation is the outcome of some experience. She is 23ft. long, 5½ft. beam, and draws from 1½ to 2ft. of water. She is driven by a neat and compact little petrol engine in which the petrol is admitted through a regulator tap into the cylinder; here it vaporises and is exploded by an electric spark and this, as Helen's Babies would say, makes the "wheels go wound" and takes us along merrily at 8 knots an hour. It takes about half a minute to get up full speed, and seated under its gay awning with the commissariat and good company aboard there are many worse things than a trip in such a craft. The very thing for a rajah we should say.

On the 15th June in the House of Commons, Sir Henry Seton-Karr asked the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether the provisions of the International Conference, held in London in May 1899, for the preservation of big game in Africa had now been ratified by all the Powers represented thereat; and, if not, what Powers had not done so, and for what reasons; whether the provisions of the Conference were now being carried out in all parts of Africa under the control of the Foreign Office, and, particularly, if the prohibition of the export of elephant tusks under 11lbs. in weight was being strictly enforced, and by what means; also whether, having regard to the Regulation that licensees must make a Return of game killed, these Returns from the date the Regulation came into force could be collected from the territories in Africa under the control of the Foreign Office and presented to Parliament; and whether he could state in what game reserves in Africa officials and natives were allowed to kill game, and to what extent and under what conditions; also to what extent and at what cost the sanctity of the game reserves in Africa was enforced by game wardens, police, or otherwise.

Viscount Cranborne replied the ratifications of the Powers have not been deposited owing to the fact that in signing the Convention the French Government reserved its obligation to ratify until Abyssinia and Liberia had acceded. These Powers have been repeatedly urged to accede, but have hitherto hesitated to do so owing to their fear that they may not be able to carry out all the provisions of the Convention. Negotiations with them are still proceeding. The provisions of the Convention are now being carried out in all the Protectorates under the control of the Foreign Office by means of the Game Regulations. These Regulations forbid, amongst other things, the export of elephant tusks under 11lbs. in weight, and it is the duty of all Administrative Officers of the Protectorates and of the Customs Officials to see that they are strictly enforced. It was at first found impossible to collect accurate returns of the game killed under licenses, but the returns for 1901-02 for the British Central Africa Protectorate were laid before Parliament in August last, and for Somaliland in April last. Those for East Africa and Uganda will be laid on the table shortly. Officials are not allowed to shoot game for the purpose of sport in any of the reserves in the Protectorates administered by the Foreign Office. It has not yet been found possible to deal with the natives in those reserves in such a way as to prevent their hunting game within them, but the importation of firearms is carefully checked, and natives are not allowed to own weapons of precision as defined in the Brussels Act. As already stated, it is the duty of all Administrative Officials to see that the Game Regulations are enforced; and in the East Africa protectorate an officer with the title of Game Ranger has been appointed for the purpose, at a salary of £250 with £100 for expenses. There is no other sum specially appropriated to game preservation.

got back to Bombay last Friday morning, and in the course of conversation with the Editor of The Indian Sporting Times he had something to say about his magnificent mare. "They never saw the way she went in the Hardwicke," he remarked with some amusement and much satisfaction, "and she finished quite alone." Mr. Bass further told me, writes our friend, that he had never seen the mare looking better, Taylor, her trainer, having done wonders with her. I reminded him that one writer had written that it was "a thousand pities Mr. Bass had not started her for the Gold Cup and so have prevented the spoils going to France," to which the owner of Sceptre now rejoined that they all wanted him to run her for the Cup. "I never thought of doing so for a moment, as she had never gone more than a mile and a half, and certainly had done no sort of Cup preparation. I might have broken her down by running her, and of course, I should not have liked that to happen as she will run next year before going to the stud." From subsequent conversation I gathered that Sceptre as a five-year-old will run for the Ascot Gold Cup and the Princess of Wales' Stakes and all sportsmen the world over will rejoice to hear that Mr. Bass has decided to preserve her to the Turf for another season after this.

Carabine is en route to India in the Olympia and is expected to arrive in Bombay about the 23rd instant.

Athletic Notes.

THE Ladies' Bogey Golf competition at Poona on the 7th instant was spoiled by rain. Only four competed, Mrs. Bagshawe winning with Miss Henderson second and Miss Anderson third.

News reaches us of a fatal boating accident at Oxford. Two undergraduates, Mr. C. E. Clement of Magdalene College and Mr. C. F. Warren, Mathematical Scholar of Queen's College, went down the river to Sandford in a Canadian canoe. On their not returning a search was instituted and the canoe found in Sandford pool much damaged, also two of the cushions. It is surmised that the extremely strong current capsized the frail craft.

Leicestershire beat Derbyshire on the 8th instant by 126 runs, Worcestershire defeated Somerset by an innings and 109 runs. The match between Gentlemen and Players at Lord's resulted in a draw.

Sussex beat Hampshire by ten wickets on the 11th instant, Somerset beat Lancashire by 182 runs, Derbyshire beat Notts by 114 runs and the Gentlemen defeated the Players at the Oval by 54 runs.

The Eton and Harrow match resulted in a win for the former by 154 runs.

Karachi has also got enthused over walking. Two matches came off last week. On the 11th instant the men had a match, the course being from the Sind Club to Clifton and back—distance 5½ miles. The following gentlemen competed:—Lovell, C. S. Wilson, Brandon, Chetham, Shuttleworth, Captain Sherer, Seaton, Pearson, Terry, Summers, Lucas, Maule, Cole, Captain Hulsburg, and Peak.

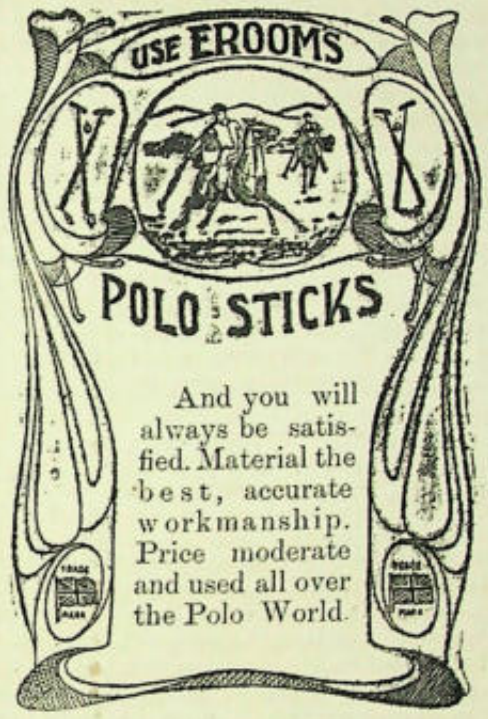
Lovell and Wilson led all the way, but nearing home the former went away from Wilson and walking in grand style finished 200 yards in front. Messrs. Shuttleworth and Brandon came in shortly after Wilson. The winner's time was 55 minutes.

The ladies also had a match on the 9th instant They walked from the overbridge op Queen's Road to the Gymkhana. The following six competitors lined up at the start :—Mrs. Stephen, Mrs. Thole, Mrs. Brunton, Miss Cosser, Miss Bell, and Miss Osborne. On getting the word from Colonel Thackeray they started off at a great pace, Miss Osborne leading for a third of the distance, then Miss Cosser went ahead and kept the lead till the finish. Miss Bell passed Miss Osborne at the railway crossing and came in second, Miss Osborne a good third. Miss Cosser received a cut-glass silver-mounted powder box as a prize.

The Madras Hockey Tournament which begins next Monday promises to be a success. Ten entries have been received which are as follows :—1st Battalion Durham Light Infantry from Wellington; 1st Battalion Leicestershire Regiment, Madras; 1st Battalion Leicestershire Regiment (Wing), from Bellary; 1st Battalon Essex Regiment, Bangalore; Bangalore Gymkhana; 1st Battalion Lincolnshire Regiment, Trimulgherry; 1st Battalion Middlesex Regiment, from Secunderabad; Queen's Depôt, Poonamallee; the Madras Cricket Club; and the Royal Warwickshire Regiment.

We remind members of the Calcutta Rowing Club that the Annual General Meeting will be held at the Strand Road Boat-house at 6-15 P.M. this evening.

Our Bagalore correspondent writes :—The cricket season has begun in Bangalore, and the Gymkhana administered a terrible beating to the Essex Regiment on the 9th instant. The Regiment were all out for 41, Captain Standage's analysis reading six for seventeen, and the Gymkhana scored 230 for five wickets, Marsden and Barstow putting on 19 for the first wicket, and scoring 65 and 61 respectively.



Cycle racing in Southern India has taken a new lease of life, and the present satisfactory position is that when the deficit on the last meeting has been met, the prize fund paid out and all expenses paid, there will be a surpus of at least Rs. 400 or Rs. 500 in hand towards the next meeting. A somewhat new mode of procedure will be adopted in regard to future meetings. Immediately after the conclusion of the present races, the programme for the next half-yearly meeting will be published, and entries will close a month before the meeting. Bombay and Calcutta will probably be communicated with in regard to possibility of clubs sending down representatives or teams to compete, and it is much to be hoped that the two biggest cities in India may see their way to something of the sort. We are only a small community in Bangalore, but we are sportsmen to the "pit of all our stomachs" as the Frenchman said and we much want other sportsmen to come down and try conclusions with our athletes. A full account of the brilliantly successful cycle race meeting which is just concluded accompanies these notes.

Our Bombay correspondent writes :—We have had plenty of football in Bombay during the past week, and very little rain having fallen, large crowds of spectators have turned up each evening either at the Cooperage or Oval. Of course the chief interest continues to be centred in the Harwood Association League, which is now in full swing. Of the seven teams who are taking part, however, two are already practically out of the running—the Telegraph Recreation Club and the Royal Engineers, the latter of whom will, I fancy, be fairly safe for the wooden spoon. One cannot, however, keep admiring the sportsman-like spirit displayed by these two teams—despite bad lickings, they always turn up smiling to meet their next defeat. The reason why I name the engineers as likely winners of the wooden spoon is that they have been defeated by the Telegraph, and I do not anticipate that either eleven will succeed in defeating any of the other competing teams. But to return to the play of the past week; the match in which most interest was taken was that played on Monday between the Gymkhana and the Rovers. It was the former's first appearance in the League this season, and I must confess that I was somewhat disappointed by the form which they displayed. True it is that they were without the services of two or three of their regular players, while Lieutenant Harris, who played centre forwards for them with such success last week, has proceeded to Aden. Taken all round, however, the team which they were able to put in the field seemed a good one, and I, in common with many others, anticipated that the match would be productive of a better game than turned out to be the case. In the first half the Gymkhana had rather the better of the exchanges, despite the fact that Lidderdale their left-back, sustained an injury to one of his legs which "put him out of action" shortly after the game started. Times out of number the Gymkhana forwards had chances of scoring, but they simply wouldn't shoot, while when they did take it into their heads to have a shot for goal, the ball either went wide or sailed over the bar. The teams crossed over at half time with a blank scoring sheet. The second moiety saw the Rovers almost constantly on the attack, but, like their opponents, none of the forwards seemed to have their shooting boots on, and frequent chances of scoring were thrown away in a manner which was almost painful to watch. The Gymkhana only broke away on three or four occasions, and it was during one of these short visits to their opponents' territory that W. Reid shot the only goal of the match, which gave the Gymkhana the victory. That they were lucky to win was the general opinion of the spectators.

On Thursday evening the North Staffords' "B" team were opposed to the Gymkhana in the former's fourth league game. The civilians had to again take the field without the services of two or three of their best men, but despite this fact they made a very good fight, and came near scoring on two or three occasions. The soldiers were not long in opening their account, and before the game had been in progress a quarter of an hour they scored a couple of goals, both through Spragg, their inside right, who played a grand game all through. After these reverses the Gymkhana did a spell of attacking, but weakness in front of goal was again conspicuous, and until they can get hold of a centre-forward who is something like a decent shot I don't think they will run up many big scores. The ideal man for this place was Harris, but he will be absent in Aden for two or three months. On Thursday Bromley was entrusted with the position, and, on the whole, gave a good account of himself. He can, however, only kick with his right foot, and when he does shoot he does not put sufficient powder behind the ball. The Staffords crossed over at half time with a lead of two goals to nil. After the restart the Gymkhana made several attacks on the military goal, but the defence of the soldiers was sound. Just before the close of play the Staffords banged their third goal into the net, winning by three goals to nil. The match between the North Staffords' "A" team and the Telegraph Club proved a very one-sided affair, the soldiers doing practically as they liked with their opponents, who were eventually beaten by eight goals to one. The Royal Garrison Artillery still head the list, with the North Staffords' "B" team next.

Not a great deal of interest seems to be taken in Rugby football this year, a fact mainly due to there being only a couple or three teams playing in Bombay. The Gymkhana cannot be said to have started the season in very promising fashion, having suffered a couple of defeats during the past week. But in this connexion it must be borne in mind that several of the best men who have been playing against them, for the military teams they have met are also playing members of the Gymkhana, whose services will be called upon for the matches with the Buffs (if arranged) and the Tournament games in October next. As to the past week's play, the Gymkhana on Tuesday met a team composed of military players, and both fifteens being fairly evenly matched a good game was witnessed. There was very little to choose between the forwards, but the military held a big advantage at half-back, where Lieutenant Sargent, a Lancashire county player, particularly distinguished himself. He and his partner frequently got the ball away to three-quarters, but the Gymkhana, who were minus the services of C. M. Ward, tackled well, and on several occasions the military players were brought down when almost over. At half time the military held a lead of a goal to nil. In the second half both sides made strenuous efforts to score, and the military eventually ran out winners by a goal and a try to nil. On Thursday evening the Gymkhana met with their second defeat, this time at the hands of the Royal Garrison Artillery (Colaba). The civilians, who had a somewhat weak team out, several of their best players being engaged in the Association match, had the best of the first half and crossed over at half time with a lead of a goal and a try to nil. The second moiety was evenly contested, and there was no further scoring up to within a few minutes of the close of play, when the R. A. ran in a couple of tries in quick succession, both of which were converted. This was all the scoring and the soldiers left the field victorous by ten points to eight.

The Bombay Gymkhana cricket team scored another win yesterday (Staturday), when they met and defeated a combined team of the Royal Garrison Artillery and the North Staffordshire Regiment. Despite the heavy rain which had fallen during the morning, the pitch was in good condition, and slightly favoured the bowlers. The Gymkhana, who won the toss, batted first, and ran up a total of 113, none of the batsmen particularly distinguishing themselves, although the bowling can only be described as moderate. Owing to a late start having been made—when will the Gymkhana try to start play punctually?—only about an hour remained for play when the military commenced their innings and a drawn game appeared almost certain. They made a fairly good start, but after the fall of the first wicket the rest of the team were soon disposed of, the whole side being out for 67 which left the Gymkhana winners by 56 runs. The military players found Cheetham's bowling very difficult to deal with and he captured six wickets at a cost of 27 runs. The Gymkhana have started the season well, and, contrary to the opinion I expressed a month or two ago, I don't expect to see them defeated on many occasions this year. In conclusion I would like to throw out a suggestion, and that is that the grass in some parts of the deep field should be cut. On Saturday the ball frequently stopped dead in it.

Fired by the example of the European pedestrians the Aryan brother will show his powers as a walker. The Bengalee assistants of the Import and Export Departments of Messrs. Gillanders Arbuthnot and Co. Calcutta, propose tramping from Titaghur to the Government House end of the Red Road next Saturday. Teams will be ten aside and the prize fund has been subscribed to by the European assistants of the firm.

It is rumoured that the assistants of Messrs. Ralli Bros. are considering a walk.

The statement that M. D. Kanga, the well-known Parsee cricketer, is dead has been contradicted.

We are sorry to find that the race for the Hoare Cup, entries for which closed yesterday, has drawn but two crews and this the result of personal appeal by members of the Committee.! Undoubtedly the Calcutta Rowing Club is passing through a mighty slack time. It is more than probable that there will be no race for senior sculls as arranged for the 15th proximo owing to an accident to one of the two racing skiffs.

General Notes.

WE regret to hear of the death of Mr. M. H. Starling, one of the oldest members of the Bombay Bar. He died at the Yacht Club chambers last Sunday after an illness of thirteen days.

We offer our congratulations to the Earl of Suffolk on his engagement to Miss Wolfe-Murray, third daughter of Major-General Sir James Wolfe-Murray, Quarter-master-General in India.

Last week we referred to an accident to Mr. M. Hammick. While out with the Ooty hounds his horse came down with him on a rough piece of ground near the Pykara road. Mr. Hammick fell on his head, but his topee broke the force of his fall. His jaw was badly cut and he received a severe shaking, but, we are glad to learn, that his injuries are not so serious as were at first supposed and that he is getting on well.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 26th June 1903.

THOUGH the weather is still far from June-like we are slowly recovering from the effects of the late deluge, and our hearts within us are rejoicing at even the very moderate amount of sunshine that is being vouchsafed to us. After almost a fortnight of unbroken gloom, a quite momentary gleam of brightness last Saturday afternoon was positively startling, and I could hardly believe my eyes when, on looking up, I actually beheld the sun—a very weak, watery, and inefficient sun it is true—but still the sun. Regaining a decent measure of self-control, as quickly as might be, I wended my way to the underground station for which I was bound, and where I overheard an old lady, evidently of a timorous nature, confiding to a sympathetic friend that when she saw the sudden and unusual (very unusual!) brightness, she thought it nothing less than a flash of lightning and fled to the nearest shop for shelter. The improvement came too late for "Ascot Sunday" on the river, as on Saturday the floods were still rising—the result of the torrents of rain the day before—and the hearts of the riverside folk must have been disquieted.

Of dramatic events there is not a great deal to chronicle this week. At all events nothing to equal the interest of Madame Hading's appearance as Paula in "La Seconde Madame Tanqueray." On Monday we had Madame Sarah Bernhardt in her well-known part of Marguerite Gautier, which was, as it always is, a marvellous exhibition of genius. It always seems fresh, however, as often as one sees it. At the Garrick on Wednesday night there was a crowded house eager to welcome Madame Rejane again as "Yanetta" in "La Robe Rouge." The piece is certainly very well constructed, and the expectations of those who saw her in it last year must have been amply realised.

I make a point of seeing Mrs. Patrick Campbell in every new part, whatever other duties I may leave undone; always hoping, alas! so far in vain, that one day she may equal her never-to-be-forgotten Paula. In this pious hope I, therefore, betook myself to the New Theatre on Wednesday evening to realise, if possible, "The Joy of Living," and came away wondering greatly where on that occasion the joy came in. The story is gloomy; the characters people whom one would carefully avoid in real life. Most of them are "cranks" and many of them "enjoy bad health." Beata, who to judge from her gestures, is in an advanced state of heart disease, has been the wife of Kellinghausen for nearly twenty years, during twelve of which Volkerlingk has been her lover-platonic—merely of late. The husband and lover are friends; both are political. In the heat of an election contest a paragraph reflecting on the intimacy between Beata and Volkerlingk appears in a newspaper. Kellinghausen does not believe it as he has confidence in his wife, but thinks it his duty to question them, when the hesitation of Volkerlingk and an exclamation by Beata leave no room for doubt. After a good deal of extremely wearisome talk, it is finally arranged that Volkerlingk shall make away with himself as an obvious way out of the difficulty; but Beata obligingly saves him the trouble and poisons herself while giving a luncheon party, at which she proposes as a toast "The Joy of Living." The husband and lover are reconciled, and the daughter of the one is to marry the son of the other, and with this unpleasant arrangement the unpleasant

Mr. Tree must have been amply rewarded when at the close of "The Queen's Sanatarium Matinee" at His Majesty's Theatre on Monday, he was able to announce that it had realized the sum of £5,000. The chief attraction, no doubt, was Madame Sarah Bernhardt's recitation, but Miss Filippi's monologue "Pot au Feu" was about the most enjoyable item to the frivolous minded amongst the audience. It is an amusing clever little sketch of a cook, determined to so bewitch her master by her cookery that he will remain a bachelor rather than risk losing such a treasure. She constantly tastes the dish she is preparing—at each taste becoming more confident of success—but so frequent are the tastes that when the cooking is finished the food is finished also! Miss Filippi gave the piece with much naturalness and humour.

The motor cab has reappeared in London, in the shape of a petrol motor hansom. I was not privileged to see it myself, but my informant, who does not share my loathing for all motors, assures me it is a roomy and comfortable cab. The driver sits in front of the fare. There is a "boot" for light luggage at the back, and a small seat which can be hooked on at the chauffeur's side of the cab for a third passenger. It is the property of "The London Express Motor Service, Limited" which intends shortly to place on the streets a public service of similar cars. The fares are to be from a shilling upward.

It is devoutly to be hoped that the memorial to Mr. Lang on the subject of motor-car legislation, which is being prepared in the House of Commons, and is receiving many signatures on both sides of the House, may have some effect, and a measure be passed before this session closes that will put an end to the reign of terror at present prevailing.

By the way, during the late rainy weather I became aware of one point in favour of motor cars—they don't splash mud up as other vehicles do.

Two cases which have excited an unusual amount of interest have been concluded this week—"The Moat House Murder" case and the Cape "Ragging" case. The former only occupied two days, there being practically no defence. The prisoner's Counsel made the most of the single point which would have told with me, had I been unlucky enough to be on the jury—that none of the underclothing found on the body was marked, whereas Miss Holland was known to be particular on that point, and all clothing and house linen found in the house was most carefully marked. However it is impossible to doubt the justice of the verdict. With regard to the Cape "Ragging" case, the defendants must, I should think, congratulate themselves on having got off cheaply. The general feeling appears to be that though a verdict of "guilty" would have "served them right," it would have been a mistake to ruin their professional careers, when they had already paid a tolerably heavy fine for their—to put it delicately—crude methods of exhibiting their distaste for Mr. Stanford's society. It was probably something like the verdict we have all heard of "not guilty—but don't do it again."

A very pleasant little exhibition of sketches by "Mr. Punch's young men" is on view at the Woodbury Gallery, New Bond Street, which ought to be visited by all admirers of Mr. Punch—and are we not all his admirers? Much as we may have enjoyed Linley Samburne's cartoons, and the delightful sketches by Bernard Partridge, Phil May, E. T. Reed and others in the pages of Mr. Punch, the pleasure of seeing the drawings as left by the artist is many times greater. Another small collection of pictures well worth a visit is Mr. Mortimer Mempes' Durbar pictures at "Dewdeswell's." Lucky mortals who were at the Durbar say the colouring is wonderfully good; certainly many of the likenesses are excellent, that of Lord Kitchener being an exception and there is a most amusing and original catalogue.

A large number of Mr. F. Carruthers Gould's political cartoons were sold at the private view at the Continental Gallery on Tuesday, and I am told that many of them might have been sold half a dozen times over which doesn't surprise me. The Radical cartoons found most favour among Conservatives and Unionists—that staunch Conservative Sir John Aird becoming the possessor after keen competition of "the Zollverien Cake Walk" which shows Mr. Chamberlain dancing with the obviously reluctant Mr. Balfour. Lord Onslow was the purchaser of the one I should like to possess above all others "When He Comes Back" in which Mr. Chamberlain as a particularly fit and flourishing gamecock, regards the ragged and altogether dejected group of birds representing the ministry, who have not kept the peace during his absence in South Africa. Of the Froissart series "The king desireth that an end may be made of the war in Africa" was bought by Mr. Chamberlain's Private Secretary. Lord Monk-Bretton and Mr. R. Biddulph-Martin, M. P., became the possessor of "Sir Joseph de Birmingham goeth to Guildhall," while Mr. Bryce very fittingly was the purchaser of the portrait of his brother "Sir James de Bryce speaketh against the Bill." Captain A. H. Lee, M. P., bought the most amusing military cartoon "German Manœuvres" in which Lord Roberts, in uniform, eyes with considerable misgivings the costume of the Secretary for War as they are setting out together.

The railway experiment of continuous runs over long distances appears likely to succeed, the latest development being the unbroken journey of 300 miles from Euston to Carlisle. Being blessed with a contented mind, I am myself perfectly satisfied with a rate of from sixty to sixty-five miles an hour, which we are told is the highest speed compatible with safety when rounding sharp curves, but for more adventurous spirits a good time is coming. An electric railway on the "mono-line system" is to be constructed between Manchester and Liverpool, and the engineers promise that the car will travel safely at the rate of a hundred and ten miles an hour. It is said that a Belgian engineer has already done it, and that experts report favourably of his experiments. Should the Manchester and Liverpool line prove a success, financially, as well as in other respects, nothing less than a domestic revolution is upon us. When a man can reach his work, business, or chambers, an hour after leaving his home in the country nearly a hundred miles off, the overcrowding problem will be solved. So good luck to the "mono-line" system.

Proceedings in the House of Lords are not often amusing reading, but on Monday there was an exception to the dignified dullness which generally pervades that august assembly, when poor Lord Leven and Melville complained piteously and yet humourously of the attack made upon him by the Scottish Press for objecting that his should be the corpus vile on whom the experiment of residence at Holyrood, while the drainage is in an insanitary condition, should be tried. To us, matter of fact, prosaic Southrons, his objection, I imagine, seems but natural—a desire to avoid making acquaintance with the typhoid bacillus being not uncommon—but not so the patriotic Scots who appear to have discerned in the action of the Lord High Commissioner a studied insult to the ancient palace of their kings.

The Royal Agricultural Society has after all been fortunate enough to have good weather for its first show in its permanent home at Park Royal, but in spite of this the attendance has fallen short of expectation, not coming up to the best of the country meetings. To those who like myself do not appreciate fat cattle and pigs, the horses were far and away the most interesting part of the show, and during the four-in-hand and jumping competitions the stands were well filled. The four-in-hand competitions appeared to be the principal attraction, and were followed with keen attention. The excellent speech of the retiring President, the Prince of Wales, at the Society's Annual Meeting on Wednesday, seems to foreshadow reform, which one hears is needed.

It seems an ungracious act to criticise the appeal made by Sir James Gilder on behalf of the scheme for providing houses on flats free of rent or taxes for widows and daughters of officers of the Army who are left with small provision. I hear the project is to build a block of flats for their accommodation somewhere near town—Wimbledon is mentioned. One would think that a small increase of income to meet the cost of rent would be more acceptable to these ladies many of whom may naturally desire to live with or near friends. The flat plan might possibly enable a larger number to be helped, though even that is doubtful when one remembers the cost of bricks and mortar, of land near town, and of the upkeep of the establishment—the last item an increasing one. Be this as it may the scheme is one well worthy of support, and I cordially wish it good luck.

CHOTA NAGPORE.*

IN a handsomely bound volume running to three hundred pages, with forty-three excellently selected and executed photographs, Mr Bradley-Birt puts before the reader an exhaustive handbook to Chota Nagpore, a district which, though within three hundred miles of Calcutta, is little known, except to coal owners and coolie recruiters. The work, which is published "with all rights reserved" thereby protecting it from the incorrigible "lifter," teems with interest from the first page to the last. The writer is no mere compiler of pure official records, but has, with rare sympathy and descretion, collected his material from the people themselves and has produced a delightful description of a district unique in fables, folklore, habits and customs—reading almost like the history of some newly discovered land. Inhabited by the remnants of tribes claiming to be aborigines, we are introduced first to their mythological origin as handed down from traditions of the past, with sundry outrageous embellishments tacked on, but many of the stories, customs, and habits tend to show that a highly civilised race held sway in Chota Nagpore long anterior to the advent of the present people, a deduction amply confirmed by the relics of temples, tombs, and other ruins The snake is the titular deity and represents the devil, but one tribe, professing to be the oldest, consider descent from him to be an honorable distinction. To go through the various versions of the origin of the human race, the story of which differs with each class of exponent, would destroy interest in the opening chapters; the book must be read to be properly appreciated, and none can rise from its perusal without admitting there is a vast field in India for research in the archæological and ethnological line. Few of the present generation are aware of the martial character of the tribes and the bold front they exhibited when the British first essayed to subjugate them. The Hos who inhabit the country nearest to Calcutta are, perhaps, the most remarkable mountaineers in the country, but where all are manly, honest, and display prepossessing qualities it would be invidious to particularise. The sacred temple and shrine of Parisnauth comes in for minute description, while the photos of gods and goddesses, with the usual ornamental accessories, exhibit no meam artistic skill on the part of the designers and builders.

Game of all sorts is still plentiful though the author shews that the sportsman has but to go further from the beaten tracks than of yore to obtain it. All the tribes are unerring shots with either their primitive bows and arrows or the cheap guns allowed, while in scrimmages their inborn pluck enables them to hold their own with tomahawk against even the man eater. Chapter V is an admirable effort of word painting and shews the writer to have thoroughly identified himself with the people of his district. The stirring events of 1857 are well told, and it will doubtless surprise many to learn how stiff was the fighting and various the changes of fortune that went on so close to the metropolis in those dark days. It is much to be hoped that other officials will be incited to follow Mr. Bradley-Birt's example, for such publications as the one before us will tend more to bring the ruling race and their fellow subjects in touch with one another than Cycles of pedantic administration reports, with their dry array of statistics and official padding. We heartily commend this charming book to every class of reader, for all will find in it both amusement and instruction.

THE LAND OF THE BLACK MOUNTAIN.*

THERE is perhaps no country in Europe which sees fewer English visitors and concerning which we know less than Montenegro. Messrs. Wyon and Prance, being travellers of enterprise, set themselves to explore the land on the Albanian frontier and the more peaceful regions remote from the border; and their experiences make a very readable and entertaining book. It is not a country that can be recommended to visitors who suffer from weak nerves; the Montenegros hold that "a man without arms is a man without liberty" and cheerfully subscribe to the tenets of their military organisation which practically obliges every man to constantly carry his rifle in order to instantly obey a mobilisation order. The men have an exhilarating habit of expressing various emotions by the discharge of loaded revolvers, which is apt to prove startling. Firing pistols is doubtless an effective method of stimulating horses to speed and a convincing way of assuring chance acquaintances of your good-will and wishes for a prosperous journey, but it is a habit to which the stranger accustomed to less robust measures, needs time to get used. It is not difficult to form an idea of the country and people from the authors' book; we glean the impression that were Norway repopulated with Irishmen and the vendetta established on a wide and popular basis, we should have another Montenegro. The country is mountainous, wild and sparsely populated; the people are hospitable, models of courtesy to strangers, brave and physically remarkable. A large proportion of the men stand well over 6 feet and the authors refer with respectful admiration to the high standard of female beauty. The hospitality of the people in out-of-the-way places was found oppressive on occasion, politeness requiring the consumption of more than an ordinary human interior is framed to accommodate.

It would be hardly accurate to say that the prevalence of blood feuds form a blot on Montenegrin life; so deeply does the idea permeate the whole social system, that it seems impossible to divorce the vendetta from the course of daily life. We are told that the reigning prince is endeavouring to stamp out the custom and that it is "surely dying out." If this be so the authors' book gives us a picture of Montenegro as it used to be and not as it now is; for the solution of private disagreements by rifle bullet is painted as the ordinary mode of adjustment. Life on the Albanian frontier seems to be quite as pregnant with excitement as residence on the N.-W. frontier, when the more bellicose among our hill neighbours are in a state of unrest. Messrs. Wyon and Prance were offered opportunities of sport in the mountains of the interior, but for two sound reasons accomplished little.

In the first place their hosts were too anxious to procure sport for them and the woods were too freely disturbed ; and in the second the shepherds with their flocks had driven the deer to the higher and more inaccessible grounds. We cannot imagine that in a land where every man can use the rifle, which is his inseparable companion, and where meat is a coveted luxury, the stock of game can be very heavy, but it seems possible that a man who should be content to rough it in the widest sense of the word and was prepared to work hard for his trophies, might do something in Montenegro in the autumn. He would certainly lack nothing in the way of assistance from the country people whose welcome for Englishmen appears to be ready-made : but he may profit by the experiences of the authors of this book, so far as to take an English saddle for his own riding and a very large stock of "Keating" The map which accompanies the book is slight but sufficient ; the illustrations from photographs are not quite up to the mark.

THE SPORTSMAN AT LARGE.*

COLONEL ANDREW HAGGARD is not a prolific penman but when he does write he is always well worth reading. In this readable book he gives us a collection of stories of sport in various parts of the world, among them angling sketches in the country where he has done some of his soldiering. Canada, whither he has apparently often resorted for the fishing which holds the largest place in his sporting heart, figures largely in the book ; he has killed the ouananiche, trout, and other game fish under various circumstances and, it may be observed parenthetically, has worse to say of the Canadian mosquito than of our constant enemy in this country. Camping on a Canadian river can scarcely be considered the acme of comfort, more particularly at night when mosquitic attentions compel the unhappy sportsman to anoint himself all over with a compound that produces on the mosquito's mind the impression that he has an animate peppermint drop to deal with ; but the sport, given luck, is worth hardship so long as the victim is permitted to retain his eyesight. Truly the colonial mosquito seems a more venomous reptile than him of our intimate acquaintance in the east. We should have enjoyed another chapter or two of reminiscences of Japan. There is good trout fishing in the country and the Jap is an expert fly tyer ; he uses no wax and no implements in putting his flies together, but they are tied so cleverly that they are as strong as the best home-made articles. Colonel Haggard on one occasion had the good fortune to be invited to a Japanese grandies' duck hunting party, a form of sport which few Europeans have seen. It is a curious combination of hawking and butterfly-catching, the ducks taking the part of the butterflies. A noteworthy feature of the hawking part of the business is that the hawks are flown on a light cord which the hawker allows to unwind in his hand while the bird is in pursuit The guests do the catching, and some little skill is necessary to net a duck in full flight. This sport might form an amusing addition to our outdoor occupations in this country given suitable grounds ; but the grounds must be carefully selected, if a single duck is to give the netsman—or netswoman—a chance.

It needs but slender acquaintance with the ordinary fishing boat of Aden to be able to appreciate the resolute enthusiasm which enabled the author to defy the combination of smell and rough sea and indulge in sea fishing off that delectable spot. In a clean boat the average fishing enthusiast might venture ; but memory of an Arab boat only passing to windward is enough to win our envious respect for the author's keenness. His most exciting story is the first in the book, wherein he gives an account of a particularly bold venture in Abyssinia with lions. The den in which was a family of cubs having been found, Colonel Haggard with one gunbearer took up his quarters inside its entrance when the lion and lioness were out, and shot them, so to speak, on their own hall door at close quarters ; a risky experiment and one which discretion would not often repeat. There are also some entertaining stories of salmon fishing in Scottish rivers : a sport so heavily over-written that it is a high compliment we pay the author when we say we could read more. "Griff" who illustrates the book is a clever draughtsman but he overdoes his caricatures.

Shikar.

OVIS "SHARPEYE," OR THE STALK THAT FAILED.

I THINK my experience of shapoo must have been particularly unhappy, for the three or four occasions on which I have pursued these sheep, I have quite failed to come to terms with them. I ascribe my misfortunes to two things ; first the persistently bad wind, second the lateness of the year which has made the grass very scanty, so that the shapoo only rest fitfully, instead of sleeping all through the middle of the day : the fact is they cannot get enough to eat unless they are foraging steadily all the time. One day I had only got half a mile from the village where my tent was pitched, when five shapoo were sighted slightly above us on the hill side : I just followed the path as it made a curve which kept the sheep out of our sight, and on looking over a rise found five ewes standing only seventy yards off : it was just pure bad luck that it did not happen to be one of the other two flocks we subsequently saw, which both contained good rams. We avoided frightening the ewes, which after staring at us went quietly up the hill side. Another half mile further on we came to a saddle which projected from the big hill along which we were walking and joined it to a small knoll. On peering cautiously over, we sighted two rams below us and on the open hill side. To sit down and watch events was the only thing to be done under the circumstances, as the animals were unapproachable. After ten minutes' watching the smaller ram went down out of sight into a little nulla and almost immediately after four more rams appeared a good deal higher up the slope than the first two, but still below us. The wind was blowing from our left, up the hill, and at right angles to the line going from our saddle to the shapoo. These four rams had to all appearance nearly finished their morning feed ; first two lay down, then the third, and about a quarter of an hour later, the fourth. Now this day the wind was steady and in a good direction, and if only the shapoo had had a decent feed instead of being still hungry, all would have gone right. Two little nallas ran down the hill, one on our side of the sheep, the other beyond them. The nearer one had some biggish rocks in it, just about at the right place for a shot, so I decided that this should be my way of approach. It was quite easy to shuffle back from the saddle, and put the swell of the hill between us and the game. Some distance above us was a ledge with a patch of snow near it, and this seemed to offer an easy crossing to the top of the nulla, while allowing one to keep out of sight of the eyes below. My shikari, D. T., climbed leisurely up to this ledge and shuffled across it : this took some time as the hill was steep. On getting across the ledge to the head of the nulla, what was our disgust to find that the shapoo were all up again, feeding steadily, and, moreover, on a little plateau which gave them a clear view right up our nulla. Below this higher bit of ground, and practically in the nulla itself, was a slight depression, and the shapoo fed down into this, and then one of them lay down. This looked as if they meant to have another snooze and we waited until they showed unmistakeable signs of at least a temporary stay in the hollow, and then crept on all fours across the top of the nulla, and over the ridge, through some snow, into the nulla beyond. We were in full view of the shapoo all this time, but none of them looked up. The little ravine beyond, in which we now were, sloped steeply down, and was all shale and stones. A most cautious descent had to be made to avoid dislodging anything large. At last I got down to within about four hundred yards of the sheep, and began to reconnoitre. I could see only two ; one a big ram with a good head lying in the middle of the hollow, the other, a small beast much nearer to me, feeding. The small ram was a good deal higher up than the big one, as well as being nearer the shale slope behind which I was taking cover. I left my shikari behind when I got within four hundred yards of the game, and slid the rest of the way on my back. Hereby I ought to have gone right down to some rocks opposite the big one, keeping out of sight behind the slope all the time. My idea was that if I did this the other two rams which I knew must be somewhere quite close, would get my wind at once and give the alarm, for the breeze was blowing straight up the nulla. Anyhow what I did do was, I shuffled down as quietly as I could to opposite the small ram I had first seen feeding. I was then about three hundred yards or a little less from the big one. I then crept horizontally across the hill keeping quite flat till I had gained another forty or fifty yards. Unfortunately the slope was very steep and go as quietly as I knew how, yet small stones kept rolling down. When I had gained those fifty yards, the small rams under the rise, whom I had not yet seen, heard the stones and got up and saw me. The big one at once got up too, so I had to shoot at once from an uncomfortable half-sitting, half-sliding position, on the steep shale. I fired one shot, when he got up, and two more as he galloped away, all misses as I thought at the time. Afterwards, however, I found blood on the track, and the poor beast must have been hit after all : as I did not get him I hope it was only a slight graze, I think if it had been a body shot, from what I have seen of the Shoenhauer Mannlicher's performances, he would only have gone a very short distance My shots put up another flock which contained certainly two good rams if not more. When I first saw the four rams from the saddle of the hill, I am certain there were two good ones ; so that these must have subsequently got mixed up with the flock to which the two rams, first seen below, belonged.

The shapoo are certainly favoured by the smooth steep slopes on which they seek their scanty food, but apart from this they seem to me to be quite as wide awake as ibex, though they do not seem to post sentries in the same way.

My notes on various attempts to bring down a decent shapoo, are, I fear, not very happy ones. To begin with, picture the country in which I was camping, nor forget the fact that I had no one to talk to except the Kashmiri shikari, the burden of whose conversation was, how very much, much better I would have done, had I followed his advice. A small village of half-a-dozen huts, built of rough stones below, surmounted by sundried brick : the roofs flat, made of sticks and brush laid across the walls, and then plastered with a thick layer of mud. The top edge of one of the houses had a band of red round it above the white wash, and close beside it stood the curious red symbol shaped like a red chess king, and mounted on a pedestal of white-washed mud and brick, which you see everywhere in Ladak. Round this small village was a patch of cultivated land, divided into small fields by loose stone walls. All this land was of light green with the sprouting "grimm," then only three to four inches high, although it was the very end of May. The only other green was that of the willows, along the banks of the little stream, the irrigating water of which alone gave life to the crops and trees.

On either side of the ravine rose the grey and brown hillsides, above them again a chain of serrated peaks white with snow. Looking at them from a distance one wonders how it is possible for the numerous goats and sheep, belonging to the village, to find enough to keep them alive, on these inhospitable slopes. However, on the so-called maidans, where the flocks graze, one finds that there is a certain amount of coarse vegetation growing in clumps here and there, wherever it can get a hold. The natives, who are of a decided Mongolian type, wear pigtails and are indescribably filthy. Their dress consists of a collection of rags, surmounted by a goat skin thrown over the back with the hair inwards. Their shoes are of roughly sewn puttoo and leather made in sock form : they are their own shoemakers, and are always having to renew the leather soles, which wear through in a very few days on the stony hill sides The women do all or nearly all the work, and being thus made into beasts of burden, are prematurely aged and wrinkled. The hot sun of Ladak, combined with the cutting dry winds, to which they are exposed all day, has a mummifying effect on the skin, which would very quickly destroy the beauty of Venus herself, and these poor creatures never even started their girlhood with a decent stock of charms. The women wear their hair in a profusion of plaits, while over the back of the head they have a flat piece of puttoo, studded thickly with rough turquoises, cowries, and various coloured stones.

The marriage arrangements are curious, to say the least of it. There is usually only one wife to three or four brothers. She is first apparently married to the eldest brother, and the other brothers are considered as supplementary husbands of inferior rank. I will not be sure of this part of it, but I do not think there is a marriage ceremony for any except the eldest brother. The eldest brother also apparently has the children named after him, and is considered to be the father of the family. When a man is well off he will perhaps have only one brother in the house in the position of additional husband ; but from all accounts, only a regular millionaire has a wife entirely to himself. The unmarried women appear to become nuns ; otherwise servants to the Llamas, doing all the cooking and drudgery for these holy men, in order that they may live without that work which is so abhorrent to the male sex in Ladak. Curiously enough all the villagers appear to be able to write a little. Most of them carry a reed pen in a metal case stuck into their waistband, and a wooden writing tablet, which is coated with a whitish earth or some such material, in order to show marks made on it with a pointed instrument. A good deal of rough puttoo is made in the villages, and one sees the old women sitting at the foot of a tall pole, with a cross piece at the top, from which depend long strings of sheep's wool, which they are busy twisting, all ready to be made subsequently into cloth. Every Ladaki carries a steel set into a fancy handle of leather and pierced brass : this hangs to his waist by a leather thong. As he cannot get a flint, he uses a piece of hard red stone, found in the country, from which one can readily strike fire. I am afraid I have wandered a great way from the shapoo, so I will go on to relate two other failures, which occurred on the same day.

One morning I had seen a really beautiful ram up near the snow ; I had a good look at him through the glasses, and he had a head like an ibex, undoubtedly well over thirty inches round the curve. I quite failed to get anywhere near this animal of course ; that day it was principally the baffling wind which blew from me to the shapoo wherever I chose to go. I hoped to see this big ram again under happier circumstances, so went one morning up to where I thought I might see him. Instead I found another ram, near the snow, not so big certainly, but still a very handsome trophy. We examined this beast over a snow bank, at about four hundred and fifty yards, and were able to see that he was a good one, and, moreover, all alone. The wind was all right, and apparently we had only to go below, and along the hill side, and peep over at the right spot, to find him within easy range. This we did, and when we looked over there was absolutely nothing in view at all ; the ram had vanished, having in some mysterious way become acquainted with our designs against him ; though as the wind was right, and the going over soft snow, it is difficult to know how we could have betrayed ourselves to him. Well there was an end of that stalk, and nothing more was viewed till the evening, when the chota shikari whom I had sent up a hill to see if he could see anything beyond, sent back the rifle coolie to report shapoo in sight. I climbed up the hill and found a flock feeding in an open place on the other side. They were unapproachable from any direction, so the only thing was to sit down and wait. After half an hour they fed up to the shoulder of the opposite hill, and eventually disappeared over it. Then was our time, we went down a break-neck place, to where they had been first feeding, and then followed their tracks round to the shoulder, over which they had vanished. Here I loaded the rifle, looked to see the sights were all right, and going quietly forward peeped over. In front, however, were two small folds of ground, and beyond was a larger dip, and it was evident that it was in this larger hollow that they must be feeding. I handed my rifle to the shikari, for having the usual turn over safety, there is no danger in a native carrying it loaded for a short distance, and we went forward to the further shoulder looking upon the large hollow. Here the shapoo were right enough. They were feeding along the slope opposite and were about two hundred and fifty yards off. I could not even see which were the rams without the glasses, but there was no chance of getting any nearer I therefore selected what I thought was the best head, put down the field glasses and did my best to hit the owner of it. The flock bolted a short distance and stood again, and I had two more shots at what the shikari told me was the big one. Then they went further up the hill, and I killed one. On getting down to it I found it was a wretchedly poor head. Just then it occurred to me to put the rifle back into its cover and I found the 300 yards sight up. In handing over the rifle to me the shikari must have pushed it up, and as it is so very little higher than the two hundred, and lifts up between it and the eye, and not beyond it as in the case of most rifles, it is very difficult to notice without looking quite closely. Of course there was absolutely no excuse for such a thing happening, and I ought never to have fired without a final careful examination of the sights. Whether I should have bagged the ram had the three-hundred yard flap been down, of course I do not know, but as at these altitudes (11,000 to 12,000 feet) the Mannlicher shoots decidedly high, a mistake of this sort was quite sufficient to send my bullets over the backs of small animals like shapoo Personally I think most of the interest in a stalk is absent, when you have to shoot at such a distance, that you cannot see whether the beast aimed at has horns or not, without the help of glasses. At two hundred yards or more, against a brown hill side, rams and ewes seem all alike to the naked eye. The shikari was anxious I should keep the head of the small ram I had shot in mistake for the better one, but I was determined that those horns should not be seen in my possession. The animal had been halalled, so it was dragged down the nulla towards the stream below, along which a path led to our village. About half way down we came to a khud over which the corpse had to be pushed, while we went round. The shikari was going to cut off the head before shoving the sheep over, but I said "It's late and getting dark, never mind about the head." When it got to the bottom, there was only one horn, and I was glad. The shikari of course declared that the two shootable rams in the flock, both of which I had failed to get, were beauties. I had looked at them carefully through the glasses and thought them fair only, but then whether it is that the eye pieces are not the right distance apart, or merely his natural Kashmiri habit, the shikari always does see an extra halo of horn round the head of every ram he looks at through the glass.

My little expedition was brought to a sudden and successful conclusion in this wise: a villager who had taken his goats up the hillside to graze, saw a number of vultures making towards a spot up near the snow. As I had let the people round know that I had wounded a shapoo, on the chance of its turning out to be hard hit, the buckree-wala at once came to my camp with the news. I sent off a man with him, and they both went up the hill in the wake of the vultures. Eventually they found the skeleton of my ram with big scavenger birds sitting round it digesting. The skull as well as all the rest was picked clean, but the horns were undamaged, and proved a fine pair very much curled, and measuring 29 inches round the curve. Of course there was no way of finding out where the ram had been hit, but I suspect it was in the stomach: and as the bullet I was using was a soft point without splits, it very likely did not expand, if it struck a soft part offering but little resistance: and this would satisfactorily account for the animal travelling as far as it did. As I was in a very uncomfortable position when I fired, and the range was long, I was extremely glad to have recovered the head at all, though I regretted the unnecessary pain the poor beast had been put to.

The horn substance itself of the shapoo is very thin, so that the head has to be covered with a piece of goat skin or any other suitable material, to protect it from the sun and wind, otherwise the horns are liable to develop cracks.

Having got my head I started back towards Kashmir next morning, and spent the night at Lamyuru. Here there is a very decent Dâk Bungalow, possessing among other properties a galvanized iron tub. A good hot bath with lots of water, in a room in front of a fire, is a delightful luxury, after the usual shivering ablutions in a draughty tent. Lamyuru was putting on the garb of spring on my return: two or three sunny days had made all the difference. The willows were all in leaf and the crops well above the ground. Pigeons are not protected by the Kashmir Game Laws, and it is worth taking a shot gun with one for these birds alone. They can be hung for several days and are most excellent eating. I much regretted having no gun with me, but with the help of the ·28 Stevens and reduced charges I managed to bag pigeons occasionally, and so get a welcome change from the eternal mutton and fowl. Blue rocks and snow pigeons seem to fraternize freely, but the former birds are decidedly the most numerous. I saw pigeons which though light in colour, were not barred like the snow pigeon, so perhaps the two kinds interbreed, and I may have seen hybrids. I saw very few doves indeed; the only kinds observed being the large spotted hill dove and the ordinary grey one. Probably in warmer weather one would see more of these birds. Lamyuru has a small monastery perched on the top of the cliff, on and around which the village clusters, within a mile or two, on the road towards Maulbeck are some very curious clay cliffs which have been weather worn in the most fantastic manner: they are serrated and channelled away leaving quaint pinnacles standing up here and there. I intended to take a photograph, but the light was bad and so I did not attempt it. On the way out I had made only a single march of the thirty miles between Lamyuru and Maulbeck, but going back I took it more easily and stayed the night midway at Kharbu. Kharbu also possesses a Dâk Bungalow and a tub. The country here is not very interesting: a large stream flows through a wide plain, in which there are several villages, Kharbu being the principal one. Owing to the flatness of the valley and the unlimited water supply, there is a large amount of land under cultivation. There is a quaint looking village, on the opposite side of the Kharbu stream called Staktsf, clustered all over a big pointed rock. Between Lamyuru and Kharbu one crosses the Fottu La Pass, 13,400 feet above sea: this sounds formidable, but really the slope up to and down from the pass is so gentle that it is only by looking at the aneroid when one reaches the cairn at the top, that one realizes that there has been a rise of 2,000 feet from Lamyuru. Between Kharbu and Maulbeck there is another pass the Namika La, also about 13,000: this is very little steeper than the Fottu La, and both passes were quite clear of snow both going and coming, although the Zoji La which is but 11,300, was one vast snowfield at the time Maulbeck had greatly improved in appearance during the few days I had been away, all the willows were in full leaf, and the crops coming up well above the ground.

Maulbeck has a little Dâk Bungalow down by the side of the Wakka stream, which I had left a mere brook, to find it transferred in these few days into quite a river by the melting snows. Maulbeck has a queer little monastery perched on the very top of a high rock. There is also a curious and colossal figure of Chamba (whoever that lady was) carved on another and smaller pointed rock a little further up the valley.

From Maulbeck to Kargil is a long tiresome march of about twenty-four miles. The road follows down the Wakka stream nearly the whole way. I found the villages beside the little river completely transformed on my way back and this made the long march seem less wearisome. The willows and poplars were all in full leaf, while the "grimm" was nearly six inches high. Each patch of cultivation as one came suddenly upon it at a turn in the road, looked a charming oasis amid the gloomy surroundings of barren rock and brown shale slopes. Of Kargil itself I need say little: it is comparative civilization. There is a telegraph and post office, and soon I was at my ease in the Dâk Bungalow in front of a fire reading letters and papers.

FLEUR DE-LYS.

THE NILGIRI GAME AND FISH PRESERVATION ASSOCIATION.

AT the last committee meeting of the above Association, it was decided to accept Mr. Gordon Hadfield's resignation of the office of Honorary Secretary, and to appoint Captain G. N. Packard, Assistant Adjutant General, Royal Artillery, Madras Command, to the office. It is extremely doubtful as to whether this is a wise step. Captain Packard is a very energetic officer, and perhaps will prove to be a very popular Secretary: but will he be able to control the agency that is so very necessary for the protection of game and exotic fish over so large an area as that at present under the control of the Association? This is doubtful, and we must bide a wee. For efficient protection the Honoray Secretary must be here, there, and everywhere. Can Captain Packard, with his routine office duties to attend to, do this? The Forest Officer under the provisions of the Forest Act demands his being continually on tour in all parts of the district, and it is to the Forest Department subordinate staff, such as rangers and guards, that almost every case of illegal shooting has been brought to notice, and irregularities in contravention of the Game Act suppressed, so much so that I read in the last annual report of the Game Association that "within a few years poaching by natives ought to be almost stamped out." True the Game Association maintain watchers, but the number is inadequate, and the Association cannot afford to increase the number for efficient protective purposes, and the discontinuance of the District Forest Officer as the Association's Secretary, means the discontinuance of the forest guards assisting the game watchers.

The Game Association came into existence before the Nilgiri Game Act II of 1879, and for about fifteen years the Honorary Secretary was no other than the District Forest Officer; the then Government who, no doubt, during its stay on these heights for half of the year wtached the Association's proceedings, and suggested thatthe Forest Officer might, with great advantage, be appointed to the Secretaryship, and for the past decade or more that Officer has filled the office with most successful results.

The Government in pointing out the defects of non-official control did so in terms that cannot be consireded as complimentary. It remarked upon the strong class aspect of the Association's recommendations, denouncing the attempts made by it in obtaining trout ova and endeavouring to introduce pheasants and peafowl, etc., which the Government thought would not prove a success. In 1893, however, the Association made a dutiful submission to the Government and surrendered to its opinions and to the control of its local agent, the District Collector, who cared no more about sports than does the present Collector, the former not in any way being defied, as his acts were in obedience to directions from the Government Council Chamber.

I would bring to notice that the Nilgiri Game Association would not be in its present efficient working order if the Committee had not followed the kindly suggestion of the Government to appoint the District Forest Officer as their Secretary, and that keen and most ardent sportsman, the late Mr. Rhodes Morgan, who, brought back to the Nilgiris from Africa, was the District Forest Officer appointed as Secretary, and he worked very, very hard in the interests of the Association. On his untimely death his successor, Mr. Douglas, as District Forest Officer, undertook the duties, and on Mr. Douglas retiring Mr. Gordon Hadfield—belonging to quite a sporting family, his father the old General who accounted for several large bags—was nominated to the office, and it is regretful to repeat that he has now resigned it.

Since the District Forest Officers kindly undertook honorary work for the Association, it must be candidly and truthfully admitted that game has largely increased. Poaching and illegal shooting has been minimised if not altogether put a stop to, and it is really a great pity that the Association could not prevail on Mr. Hadfield to continue in office till his retirement from the Forest Department a year hence.

To turn to the two last annual reports of the Association, I find evidence of the abundance of sambur and jungle sheep obstructing and diverting the hounds, the wholesale slaughter of vermin, the introduction and propagation of jungle fowl, peafowl and trout, etc. Even in the matter of ibex, which has brought about the present strained relations between the members of the Game Committee and the local officials, I can positively assert, and there must be many sportsmen on these hills at the present day who will agree with me and can remember that in the years 1891 and 1892 the animals alluded to above were almost exterminated. That there are any now to wrangle over is the best argument in favour of the District Forest Officer being the Honorary Secretary of the Game Association.

PRESSURES GIVEN BY CORDITE CARTRIDGES IN THE TROPICS AS COMPARED WITH PROOF PRESSURES.

AS the subject of possible high pressures continues to exercise the minds of sportsmen in India, a series of experiments has recently been made to determine the maximum pressures given by Cordite Cartridges under circumstances which might possibly arise, but which certainly do not represent the average conditions, even in the tropics

A number of cartridges were heated for periods varying from one to two months to a temperature of 120°F. They were then kept for an hour between 150° and 160°F. and then fired in a gun heated to a temperature of between 160° and 170°F. This we consider represents conditions that might occur if a rifle with a cartridge in it were left exposed to a tropical sun for an hour or two.

It must be borne in mind that 160°F. is a temperature at which a rifle cannot be held in the unprotected hand, and it is therefore very unlikely that many shots are fired under such circumstances, so that it must not be supposed that the pressures given below represent the average pressures given by Cordite Cartridges in the tropics.

Cartridge.	Charge Grains of Cordite.	Bullet Grains.	Pressure in tons per square inch at a temperature of 65° F.	Pressure in tons per square inch gun and cartridges heated to 160° F.	Pressure in tons per square inch given by proof charges at 80° F.
·577 3 inch	100	750	15·0	20·0	26
·500 3 „	80	750	16·0	20·5	28
·400/·450	70	480	13·0	17·5	24½
·450 3¼ „	70	480	17·0	21·5	31
·450/400	60	400	17·5	22·5	30½
Jeffery ·400	60	400	16·5	21·5	29
·375	40	270	14·5	20·0	26
..	40	320	16·0	21·0	30
·430/·360	41	314	14·0	19·0	25½
Rigby ·350	43	310	16·0	21·0	28
·360	30	300	13·5	18·0	25
·303	30	215	16·0	21·0	30

For the sake of comparison the pressures given by cartridges at temperatures between 60° and 70° F. are tabulated together with the pressures given with Cordite charges, increased by 20° and nickel bullets increased by 33° above the weight of the Service Charge, this representing the proof pressures, so that it can be seen at a glance what is the margin between the highest possible pressure exerted by the Service Charge, and the pressure at which the rifle has been proved. It may be necessary to explain that there is no such thing as an authentic pressure or velocity unless the chamber, barrel, cartridge, and bullet dimensions are all specified, so that it must not be supposed that the figures given are more than the results of experiments with barrels which were chambered and bored as nearly as possible to what we consider standard dimensions.

The chamber sizes were all within ·001" or ·002" of the maximum cartridge dimensions adopted by the Kynoch Company. The barrels were bored about ·010" smaller than the diameter of the bullets, and rifled to a depth of ·005", so that the diameter at the bottom of the grooves was equal to the diameter of the bullets used. The length of the barrel was in every case 28".

It is, of little use to state the pressure given by a cartridge unless some information is give as to the boring of the rifle in which it is fired, although this information is generally withheld when the results of experiments on presure and velocity are published.

There appears to be a fairly constant relation between the presure of the Service Charge at ordinary temperatures to that given at the extremely high temperature above mentioned, and similarly the presure given by the proof charge seems to bear a fairly constant relation to that given by the Service Charge under the same conditions.

The present experiments seem to show that the pressure of a cartridge heated to 160° F. fired in a barrel at the same temperature is 30% higher than that given by the same charge at a temperature of 65° F., and from the previous experiment it appears that the heating of the barrel has a distinct effect in raising the pressure which is not altogether accounted for by the cooling effect of the chamber when the gun is not heated; it seems to be rather due to increased friction between bullet and barrel at high temperatures.

The increase of pressure observed in these experiments is much greater than when the cartridges are heated to 140° and fired in a comparatively cool barrel about ten seconds after withdrawal from the oven. Under these latter conditions the rise of pressure is about 15% or only half that observed in the present experiments, and it is probable that this 15% fairly represents the average increase of pressure in cartridges fired in the tropics as compared with those fired in England.

The pressures shown in the table as given at ordinary temperatures are probably near the maximum, as the cartridges were kept for some weeks at a temperature of about 70° F. and the results agree closely with the maximum figures taken from a large number of proofs extending over a period of twelve months. The proof pressures having been taken at a temperature of 50° are probably rather understated than otherwise.

The pressures given are interpreted according to the pressure table published in No. 20 of the Journal, so that pressures in the neighbourhood of 22 tons are given are some ·67 tons higher than they would be if interpreted by the ordinary Field table, whilst proof pressures in the neighbourhood of 30 tons are some 3 or 4 tons higher than the old table would make them.

It will be seen that the proof pressures are in general about 35% higher than the ordinary service pressures, and 35% higher than the pressures given at the highest temperature at which cartridges are ever likely to be fired. This would appear to be a very fair margin of safety, especially considering that the number of shots fired at such extreme temperatures would be very limited.

We think, therefore, that sportsmen in India should realize that the proof of Cordite rifles is sufficiently severe to insure their safety even in the hottest climate.—The Kynoch Journal.

A WALKING RECORD.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Reading your interesting account of the recent amateur walking race from Barrackpore to Calcutta, and your comments thereon, I should be glad if you can tell me what the home walking record for 17 miles is. Of course it will be considerably less than 3 hours 5 minutes I know, and I am also aware that the conditions would be all favourable at home and I do not for a moment wish to invite a comparison with the really good performance of Messrs. Birkmyre's best man; I merely ask for information, the subject having aroused interest in our chummery.

SEA TRIPS.

TO THE EDITOR, "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Now that the cyclone season has passed, or is in abeyance for the next three months, would it not be possible to organise a weekly excursion out to sea from Saturday to Monday vid Port Canning? The accounts in your paper of the piscatorial wealth along our almost unknown sea coast evidences that ample and healthy recreation can be had for our jaded city folk, if they could only get an occasional run down to the seaside as town folk do at home.

There must be several vessels now lying up that at little expense could be fitted for excursions, and at least 100 people could to accommodated at an inclusive charge of Rs. 50 for the trip, while I will be bound to say that a good tumble about in the ground swell outside once a month would set people up better than a hasty run to Darjeeling or other played-out resorts. The change would be novel and those who have been long resident in the plains would not have to risk the consequences of the rapid change in temperature these sudden rushes to the hills entail. Though not so cool the fresh air blowing over the clear open sea must be purer than that coming up over hundreds of miles across the steaming plains, while a two days' course of fresh sea fish diet, which Calcutta folk never get, and a few sea baths ought to prove attractions to the majority, not to mention the potting at muggars en route and the excitement of hauling in dolphins, etc., over the side. The tribute to Neptune would also, in many cases, prove much more beneficial than all the medical nostrums recommended to run down individuals. In the good old days of tug steamers few were ever without passengers and even a sojourn on the pilot brigs (if rough) was most enjoyable.

BANGALORE GYMKHANA RACES.

Saturday 11th July 1903.

A MERRY little Gymkhana took place in Bangalore to day 11th instant, and although the final day's cycle racing was in progress at the same time, there was a very good attendance, including the British Resident and a great many ladies. Fields were not large with the exception of the Polo Pony Race, which produced spirited betting and an excellent finish ending in a dead heat. Captain Claridge was unfortunate in the opening race, for his mount looked like squandering his field when he jumped out of the course, but he lost so much ground that he could never make it up again afterwards. It was pleasant to see little Barty winning again for the pony was well known in a small way on the Bangalore course a year or two ago. There were several small bookmakers present and they did fair business, whilst the Band of the 4th Madras Pioneers played an excellent selection of music. Events and results:—

HURDLE RACE.—Rs. 49.—For ponies 14-2 and under which have not won a race of any description. English and Australians 14-2 to carry 12-7, C. B.'s 12 0, and Arabs 11-0. 1 mile over six flights of hurdles.

TOLLYGUNGE CLUB GYMKHANA.

SECOND MEETING.

Saturday, 11th July 1903.

PROCEEDINGS opened with a 1½ mile handicap steeplechase for horses, for which Sylvia with 11st 4lbs, or 2lbs more than Chummy,—observe the subtlety with which the difference of 2lbs in the form of these performers is arrived at!—was rightly considered good goods. She justified her supporters' opinion by winning pretty comfortably, though had Chummy been made a little more use of earlier in the proceedings, it is quite possible he might have bustled her at the finish.

The Pony Hurdles produced a field of four, of whom Moonray was extensively backed down to 5 to 4 on, though for what reason it would be hard to say, as neither his previous performance nor his appearance warranted the confidence of his supporters. That game little bit of stuff Peeping Tom, in spite of his somewhat alarming burden of 10st 2lbs, struggled home a winner by a neck from Pekin, but the result was mainly due to superior jockeyship. The July Stakes, though it only produced a field of three was full of surprises. Oom Paul, on the strength of his previous running, was installed a hot favourite at 5 to 2 on, while, many of the knowing division, including her connections, went "all ends up" for French Girl. Oom Paul ran a very different Oom Paul on this occasion, being never in the hunt, and one is led to the belief that the trying nature of the climate must have proved too much for him. French Girl, though she may not have "improved out of all knowledge" since her last public appearance, has certainly improved, at least as much as three weeks' work entitles her to, and she led throughout the race being only nicked on the post by Red Pepper by the shortest of short heads. It was bad luck, but these good things will come untied sometimes We noticed also that her temper has improved, as on this occasion she went to the post like the proverbial lamb, and was first away when the flag fell.

The real jam of the afternoon, however, came in the pony flat race in which First Guide was set to give Moccassin 1st 6lbs over five furlongs—the latter's pet distance!! By what mysterious train of reasoning the handicapper arrived at this result, he alone knows. The mere on-looker can only presume that this official imagined Moccassin's entry to be a form of joke, and believed that the animal was actually dead and on his way to be incorporated in one of Mr. Billie Harris's far-famed, pea-ed, skin tights! Considering that last cold weather Moccassin an Perfect to a length over five furlongs and would have won but for being badly left at the post, it is obvious to our old friend "the meanest intelligence" that on this occasion he had, roughly speaking, about 3 stone in hand. This fact he shortly afterwards demonstrated by winning by six lengths, pulling double, but as the owner and rider of First Guide was indisposed to over exert himself in a hopeless stern chase. the matter was, we hear, made the subject of an enquiry of a really quite awesome nature. But then some people are never satisfied. One can of course fully sympathise with a desire on the part of the executive to provide a gory finish for the delectation of a brutal and licentious public, but this result would be more happily attained by exercising a little ordinary care in the handicapping department

The last race also furnished a surprise in the winner turning up in Firefly. The betting on this race was somewhat unique as almost every one of the five starters was at one time or another an odds-on favourite! Sir Humphrey ended up at the head of the list, but was unable to live with the others after the first two furlongs. And so ended what may truthfully be described as a real merry meeting. Details—

THE TOLLY'S NALLAH STAKES.—A handicap steeplechase for paperchase horses. About 1¼ miles.

Mr T Curtis-Hayward's b aust m Sylvia, 11st 4lbs	Mr Dudley	1
Mr E L Ralli's b aust g True Blue, 10 2 (2lbs extra), ...	Owner	2
Mr A Birkmyre's b aust g Chummy, 11-2 (4lbs extra), ...	Owner	3

True Blue jumped off with the lead and made the pace a cracker, Chummy lying last. This order was maintained to the turn into the straight where Sylvia assumed the lead and won comfortably. Chummy came with a rush when too late, and though going strong, failed to get up.

BETTING: 3 to 1 on Sylvia and 2 to 1 against the others. Totalisator Rs 6.

PONY HURDLE RACE.—A handicap hurdle race for ponies 14-1 and under that have never won a race of any description value Rs. 50 or over. 1 mile over 5 flights.

„ E A Woodhouse's gr aust g Moonray, 10st 2lbs	Mr Dudley	3
„ A H Froom's b aust m Maud II, 10st 9lbs	Mr Pugh	0

Pekin cut out the work from Peeping Tom and Maud II. The latter died away to nothing four furlongs from home, and a great race between Pekin and Peeping Tom resulted in a clever win for the latter by a neck.

BETTING: 5 to 4 on Moonray; evens Peeping Tom; 4 to 1 against the rest. Totalisator Rs. 12 to win; Rs. 8 and Rs. 17 to place.

THE JULY STAKES.—A handicap flat race for maiden horses. Five furlongs.

Major Baldock's b aust m French Girl, 9st 11lbs	Mr Barrow	2
Mr W O Ives' br aust g Oom Paul, 10st 7lbs	Owner	3

French Girl jumped off with a lead from Oom Paul, Red Pepper whipping in. Oom Paul shut up at the home turn and Red Pepper coming with a well-timed rush just sneaked the verdict from French Girl on the post.

BETTING:—3 to 1 on Oom Paul; 2 to 1 agst Red Pepper; 3 to 1 French Girl. Totalisator Rs. 25 to win.

PONY FLAT RACE.—A handicap flat race for ponies 14-1 and under that have never won a race of any description value Rs. 50 or over. Five furlongs

Mr T Cowper's b e g Moccassin, 9st 8lbs...	Mr W Bell Irving	1

„ J D Marshall's br aust m The Owl, 8st 7lbs	Mr Hawkins	3

After considerable delay at the post caused by display of temper by First Guide, the flag fell to a good start, and Moccassin and The Owl at once went to the front. The Owl elected to take a turn in the jungle instead of rounding the bend into the straight, and Moccassin romped home hard held by six lengths.

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Mocassin 2 to 1 agst First Guide, any odds the others

THE NEW HOUSE STAKES.—A handicap flat race for horses that have never won a race of any description value Rs. 40 or over. ¾ mile.

Mr R A C Pugh's c aust m Firefly 11st 4 lbs	Owner	1

Mr A Birkmyre's br aust g Gauntlet, 11st 5lbs	Owner	0
Mr H T Raban's b aust g Sir Humphrey, 11st 4lbs	Owner	0

Firefly led from the start attended by Sir Humphrey and Sunshine. Sir Humphrey dropped back at the 3 furlongs and Gauntlet drew up third. Firefly was never caught and won easily by two lengths.

BETTING: Evens Sir Humphrey; 6 to 4 agst Sunshine; 3 to 1 each Bushey and Gauntlet. Totalisator Rs. 15 to win and Rs. 13 place.

GYMKHANA AT QUETTA.

Saturday, 5th July 1903

EXCELLENT racing and good entries were the features of the very sporting gymkhana held to-day. There was a fair attendance, though people arrived late owing to the heat. The course was in good condition. Mr. Goldingham and Captain Hislop secured two wins each, while Captain Grove and Captain Hislop divided riding honours. Details:—

THE TURF.

ASCOT.

THE weather for the concluding day's sport at Royal Ascot was as wretched as wretched could be. Rain fell heavily from an early hour and continued throughout the day, and it was hardly surprising that the attendance showed a great falling off. Sport, however proved interesting, the presence of Sceptre adding much to the attractiveness of the Hardwicke Stakes, though it would have been greatly enhanced had Rock Sand opposed Mr. Bass's filly. The pair may meet in the Eclipse Stakes on 17th July. The Alexandra Plate brought out half a dozen starters, including the Gold Cup winner, Maximum II., and Arizona, another French horse. The going was very heavy, and about a mile from home M. de Bremond's representative got his foot into a hole and fell. Arizona eventually won by two lengths from Friar Tuck. The former's record in France has not been brilliant, but it will probably be remembered that in the Prix du Conseil Municipal in October last Arizona finished behind La Camargo and First Principal, being followed home by Black Sand. Twelve months' ago William the Third captured the Alexandra Plate, the French representative on that occasion, Amer Picon, being placed third. For the Wokingham Stakes the Kingsclere representative, Littleton, who won on Tuesday, was made a very warm favourite—in fact, the colt was backed as if the race was over, and his friends must have had a rude shock when the outsider, Glass Jug, romped home by three lengths from Pitch Dark, third place being occupied by Wolfshall. In the Hardwicke Stakes, Sceptre carried Mr Bass's colours for the first time. She had half a dozen opponents, but, with her old jockey (Hardy) up the filly won in a common canter from Gay Gordon.

THE ALEXANDRA PLATE.—Of 1,500 sovs, added to a sweepstakes of 25 sovs each, 15 ft: weight for age, etc.; the second received 400 sovs, and the third 100 sovs. Two miles six furlongs and 85 yards. Starting at the Hunt Cup post.

M E de St Alary's b c Arizona, by Omnium II—Attractive, 4 yrs, 9st 5lbs ...	W Pratt	1
Duke of Portland's br c Friar Tuck, 4 yrs, 9st	M Cannon	2

Lord Ellesmere's Pax, aged, 9st 7lbs ...	D Maher	0
Mr G Thursby's Vendale, 4 yrs, 9st 5lbs...	Owner	0

(Winner trained by G. Milton, in France.)

BETTING: 5 to 4 agst Maximum II, 5 to 1 agst Arizona, 2 to 1 Friar Tuck 100 to 3 any othe (o)

Vendale settled down with a slight lead of Arizona and Friar Ttuk, with Maximum II next and Pax last till approaching the stands, where Arizona took up the running from Vendale, Maximum II, Friar Tuck, and Coal Sack.• Rounding the first bend Coal Sack slightly headed Arizona, but the latter soon repaseed him, with Maximum II in close attendance. Approaching the Old Course, however, Maximum II put his foot in a hole and fell, and Arizona showed the way to Friar Tuck and Coal Sack, and remaining in the van to the finish, won easily by two lengths: a bad third. Vendale, a long way off, was fourth and Pax last.

Time by Benson's chronograph, 5min 29 2-5sec. Value of the stakes, £1,515.

THE WOKINGHAM STAKES (handicap)—Of 940 sovs; winners extra. Six furlongs, on the Hunt Cup Course.

(Winner trained by Major Beatty, at Newmarket.)

BETTING: 6 to 4 agst. Littleton, 8 to 1 Torrent, 10 to 1 Nabot, 100 to 8 Grave and Gay, 100 to 7 Mauvezin, 100 to 7 His Lordship, 100 to 7 Dumbarton Castle, 100 to 7 Wolfshall, 100 to 7 Hackler's Pride, 100 to 7 Achaicus, 100 to 6 Cossack, 100 to 6 Tickets, 29 to 1 any other (offered).

After a tedious delay Mauvezin, on the stand side, showed the way to Nabot in the centre, Pitch Dark and Glass Jug, with Grave and Gay, Wolfshall and Littleton in close attendance till nearing the distance, where Glass Jug drew to the front, followed by Grave and Gay, Wolfshall and Pitch Dark, and, making the remainder of the running, won decisively by three lengths; a head divided second and third. Grave and Gay was placed fourth, Portcullis was fifth, His Grace sixth, Nabot seventh, Tickets eight, Littleton ninth, and Mauvezin last.

Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min 23 1-5sec.

THE HARDWICKE STAKE.—Of £2,463 10s; weight for age, etc. Swinley Course (one mile and-a-half).

(Winner trained by A. Taylor, at Manton.)

BETTING: 11 to 10 on Sceptre, 6 to 1 agst Gay Gordon, 7 to 1 Fowling Piece 8 to 1 agst Pain Bis, 10 to 1 any other (offered).

Pain Bis led for a few strides, when Arion and Pain Bis made joint running, clear of Fowling Piece and Ladies' Mile with Sceptre slightly last to the Swinley Bottom, where Arion went on from Fowling Piece, Ladies' Mile, Gay Gordon, Pain Bis, and Sceptre, with Cheers now last. Passing the Brick Kilns Sceptre, took second place, closely attended by Fowling Piece, and the pair came into the straight in clear command, but Sceptre pulling her way to the front when in the line for home, cantered in the easiest of winners by six lengths from Gay Gordon, who took second place close home; a dead-heat for third place. Ladies' Mile was fifth and Cheers last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2min. 53⅗secs.

NEWCASTLE AND GOSFORTH PARK.

Unlike many other places North of the Trent, Newcastle did not completely escape the deluge of last week, but, whilst the South-country was being literally washed out, the rain in the far North considerately ceased on the Wednesday, and as a result, the going at High Gosforth Park on the 23rd instant was as nearly perfection as it is possible to attain. The velvety nature of the going might have been expected to induce owners and trainers to run their horses, but this was not the case, and the competition was more restricted than usual at the summer meeting. The biggest muster for any race was nine, and for the chief item on the card, the North Derby, only three did battle, and these were far from meriting the description of equine giants. The failure of the sport to attain the desired standard made not the slightest difference to the financial side of the proceedings, and it is doubtful if there have ever been more people present at Gosforth on an off-day. For this the brilliance of the weather has to be thanked. It was an ideal summer's day and the picturesque course was seen at its very best, the rhododendrons in the avenue leading from the main road being particularly beautiful.

Twelve months' ago Lord Durham's horses delighted the Novocastrians by carrying everything before them, but a repetition of these triumphs was rendered impossible when Mardonius met with an accident in the course of his preparation for the "Pitmen's Derby," and it was not a particularly brilliant string that came North to carry the familiar and popular "purple and straw sleeves." The first representative of Harraton House to start was Aliwal, and, although his credentials were exceedingly poor, the weight of local money made him a good favourite for the St. Oswald Welter Handicap. One of the slowest out of the slips, he always laboured painfully in the rear, and after the Malton candidate, Coronilla, had flattered only to deceive, McMayne drew out clear and won decisively by three lengths. There was a lot of easing up when McMayne was seen to have the issue in safe keeping, and it is highly improbable that the minor placings will prove reliable.

Ruy Lopez got off in front of Dropmore, and cleverly shook off his challenge by a neck ; four lengths divided second and third.

Stress of Southern competition has made the Northumberland Plate of less importance as a sporting institution than it was in the old Town Moor days, but the race itself retains its hold upon the North-country people and on the 24th, when the celebration was favoured with bright and exceedingly pleasant weather, a mammoth crowd found its way to lovely Gosforth Park. To accomplish the long journey from the "cannie town" all sorts of vehicles were requisitioned, and from noon onwards the turnpike road was black with sturdy pitmen trudging to the venue. The scene on the road prepared everyone for the magnitude of the gathering, and it was not surprising to hear old sportsmen who have not missed a meeting at Gosforth since its establishment in 1882, declare that the attendance was as big as any they could recall, and possibly, as was the case yesterday, a record was established. On all lips was the question "What will win the Plate?" and there was as much keenness over the race as though the competitors were horses of the highest class. On the formation of a market before racing reflection was given to a common idea amongst those who had witnessed the early morning gallops that Rightful had not carried himself well, and that he was feeling the effects of his recent hard work and of his long and trying journey from Arundel. He was consequently decidedly easy, whilst all the heavy metal was for Cliftonhall and Congratulation. Later a demonstration by the immediate connection of H. Chandler's stable caused a reaction, and the final quotations were in keeping with the early market transactions, single points separating Cliftonhall, Rightful, and Congratulation, whilst beyond the three 10 to 1 was on offer. It was somewhat a novelty in modern handicaps to find only one apprentice taking the allowance. This was Dillon on the favourite, Cliftonhall, and it was his last day for meeting the senior jockeys on advantageous terms. Whilst Cliftonhall had his weight reduced 5lb, overweight was declared for the Scotch candidate, Powder Puff, to ride whom G. McCall had had to work hard. Powder Puff is the reverse of a beauty. He was so ungainly as a yearling that the late Mr. Forrest-Tod gave him to his brother Mr. G. G Tod, but, being a son of Carbine and Lady Frivoles and thoroughly fit, McCall, the Dunbar trainer, was hopeful that he would outstay his opponents.

(Winner trained by T Anson, at Malton.)

BETTING : 2 to 1 agst Cliftonhall, 20 to 1 Syneros, 3 to Rightful, 20 to 1 Leviathan, 4 to 1 Congratulation, 33 to 1 Mannlicher offered, 10 to 1, Throwaway, 10 to 1 Powder Puff.

PLACE BETTING : 6 to 4 on Congratulation, 2 to 1 Throwaway 6 to 4 Cliftonhall, 4 to 1 Syneros, 5 to 4 Rightful 5 to 1 Leviathan, 6 to 4 agst Powder Puff, 8 to 1 Mannlicher.

Cliftonhall led the parade and canter from Powder Puff, Rightful, and Syneros, with the Kingsclere pair whipping in, and the preliminaries were got through after a trifling delay, caused by Throwaway objecting to face the crowd in the canter. The lot gave no trouble at the post, and in a brief space of time Mr. Willoughby effected a capital start. Congratulation was the first into her stride, jumping off in front of Cliftonhall, Mannlicher, and Throwaway, but passing the stands Leviathan went on from Powder Puff, Mannlicher, Congratulation, Syneros, and Cliftonhall, with Rightful and Throwaway side by side in the rear. Going along the back stretch Leviathan and Powder Puff established a three-length lead of Cougratulation, Syneros, Mannlicher, and Cliftonhall, nrth Throwaway now last, and soon afterwards Powder Puff took up the running from Leviathan. Syneros, Cliftonhall, and Rightful, this being the order when they disappeared from view along the lake side. Upon reappearing in sight Powder Puff was still leading, but he was now closely attended by Rightful, with Cliftonhall next in front of Congratulation and Syneros, and Leviathan last behind Mannlicher. Below the distance Powder Puff hoisted signals of distress, and Cliftonhall and Rightful challenged. The former quickly shot out clear, and, to an accompaniment of great cheering, won easily by five lengths ; three-parts of a length divided second and third. Mannlicher was fourth, Powder Puff fifth. Congratulation sixth, and Leviathan was tarled off.

Time by Benson's chronograph 3min 25 1-5sec.

After the excitement of the Northumberland Plate day, matters seemed quiet and lifeless at the concluding stage of the meeting at High Gosforth Park, but there was not more than the usual falling off in the attendance, and the financial results have exceeded even the most sanguine anticipations being as large as, if not larger, than any previously recorded since the meeting was transferred from the Town Moor. The weather was close and oppressive and there was ever present a fear that rain would fall. During the night there had been a copious downpour, but this did not mar the going, and it came as a boon rather than otherwise, for it laid the dust on the road to the pretty park. Happily the fears of wet were not realised.

THE PHILADELPHIANS TOUR.

MATCH vs. NOTTS.—Played at Trent Bridge on 18th, 19th and 20th June. Gentlemen of Philadelphia won by 165 runs.

The visitors did not make the best advantage in their first innings of their good fortune in winning the toss, although for a time they seemed almost certain to make a big total. The first two wickets fell for 4 runs, but Bohlen and Lester then made a fine stand, and by lunch time the total had been taken to 116 without further loss. When play was resumed twenty more runs were put on without accident, and all seemed well. But then there came a series of surprises. Bohlen and Lester both left at the same total—136,—and the fifth wicket fell at 148. After this nothing could be done with J Gunn and Wass, and the innings came to an abrupt end. The Notts men did moderately well when their turn came to bat, and when stumps were drawn they had scored 119 for half their wickets. Of this total G. Gunn and J. Gunn were responsible for 81, the former, who went in first, being not out 29. But he was not batting all the time, for soon after the game began he was injured by a fast ball and had to retire for an hour, after which he took his place at the wicket again. The remaining five wickets fell very quickly indeed on the next morning, two men being out owing to bad judgment in running. The game was practically level when the visitors began their second innings, but before stumps were drawn they had gained a commanding lead, for with a wicket in hand they were 321 runs on. For this happy position of affairs they had chiefly to thank Morris, who played a beautiful innings, scoring well all round the wicket. His 164 was put together in about four hours, and included sixteen 4's. King, Lester, Wood and Sharpless also did well, the latter playing a purely defensive innings which lasted for an hour and three-quarters. On Saturday the last two men, Graves (who was not out 17 over night) and Jordan, made such a valuable stand, that when in the course of an hour they had increasad the total by 74 the innings was closed. Graves hit very well indeed and Jordan kept his end safe. Notts had now a most difficult task before them, and they were not equal to it, although J. Gunn and Staunton made a brilliant effort to save the game.

THE MATCH vs. M. C. C AND GROUND.—Played at Lord's on 22nd and 23rd June. M. C. C. won by 5 wickets. The M. C. C. paid the visitors the compliment of putting by far the strongest team in the field against them that they have got together this season, a compliment which was, of course, greatly appreciated, as the Americans naturally do not like to find that committees have chosen their match in order to try experiments with beginners. The wicket dried so slowly that no play could take place until a quarter-past two, and when the game began it was found to be very difficult indeed instead of merely being slow. As a consequence of this Hearne and Mead were almost irresistible, and except Bohlen, who batted steadily for an hour, none of the visitors ever got going. Nor did the M. C. C. fare much better against the bowling of King, who, although he is not always seen at his best on a slow wicket, was very difficult indeed. Half the wickets were down for 55, when Bosanquet made the position better by scoring 30 out of 40 made while he was at the wicket. The tail could do nothing against King and Clark. The innings came to a close just before the end of the day, the M. C. C. having a lead of 39, which promised to be very useful since the wicket was hardly likely to improve much. When the game was resumed on Tuesday morning it was soon seen that even the small lead of the M. C. C. would not be easily wiped out. Mead was in great form with the ball, and with the exception of the time when King and A. M. Wood were together, did almost as he liked. These two batsmen made a very plucky effort to put a better appearance on the game, and to a certain extent they succeeded, for, although the M. C. C. had what appeared a very slight task in their second innings—they only had to make 55 runs—it might have gone hard with them but for the excellent batting of Warner, who was not out 30 when the game was won with five wickets in hand. The visitors are greatly to be congratulated on the fine fight which they made against such a powerful team on a wicket which was exactly suited to Mead and Hearne, two of the most deadly bowlers in England on their day.

SUSSEX vs. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—Played at Brighton on 22nd 23rd, and 24th June. Cambridge won by two wickets. In former years this match has frequently been noticeable for very high scoring on both sides, but as Ranjitsinhji and Fry were having a rest, there did not seem much chance that the Sussex team, at any rate, would do anything very great in the way of totals. On the other hand Cambridge, not having Tate to contend with, had to oppose a side which was very weak in bowling. On the first day the wicket was slow after the heavy rains, but not difficult ; perhaps Sussex, who batted first, had rather the worst of it. For a time the Cambridge bowlers carried everything before them, and when the total was 31, Vine, Leach, C. L. A. Smith, and Relf were all out. Thus matters looked about as bad as they could be for Sussex, but at this critical moment Newham came in, and, as he has done over and over again when his side has been in dire distress, kept one end safe for a long time. Meanwhile Killick had become settled, and was playing a confident game. In partnership the two men put on 113 runs in an hour and forty minutes, when Newham was at last dismissed for an invaluable 30. Killick was out ninth in trying to do the best for his side by hitting hard when the last few men were in ; his fine innings of 116 lasted for three hours and ten minutes, and included twelve 4's. Cambridge at the close of the day had scored 97 for two wickets, thus being 114 runs behind. Ebden and Wilson played very steadily and carefully, the latter being not out 50. Wilson only increased his score by five, but Fry made a short stand with McDonell, after which there was a rapid downfall of wickets against the bowling of Relf, until Dowson, who went in tenth made an invaluable 24. Meanwhile McDonell had played very sound cricket and his 47 was made at a critical time. Sussex began their second innings with a lead of four runs, and although they lost Leach and Killick very soon, Vine and Smith did well, and Newham again played a first-class defensive innings. He had this time Relf as a partner, who was in splendid form, and eventually had the satisfaction of making his hundred. He at times hit very hard, and once, off an over from Roberts, he scored 18, while he made 14 off an over from May. He was only at the wickets for an hour and-a-quarter. Brann, who made a welcome re-appearance, played excellent cricket, and when stumps were drawn Sussex, with four wickets in hand, were leading by 270 runs. Yesterday Brann brought his total to 60 : he batted as well as ever. Cambridge had to make 322. Ebden and Dowson were both missed soon after they began their innings and the result was fatal. Dowson batted splendidly and was well backed up by Wilson, and as time went on it seemed probable that Cambridge would make the runs. But a little later it was evident that it would be a question both of time and wickets, and eventually amidst the greatest excitement, Cambridge won by two wickets only four minutes from time. Dowson played a magnificent innings.

SURREY vs. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—(12 a side). Played at the Oval on 22nd, 23rd and 24th June. Surrey won by nine wickets. In weather which was a complete change from that of the previous few weeks, spectators and players at the Oval seemed to be living in a different climate. It was quite warm, and everybody could thoroughly enjoy the cricket, despite the fact that much of it was pretty slow. For some years University batting seems to have lost its dash and vigour, and it was not surprising to find when Oxford went in that on a slow and not very difficult wicket scoring was monotonously slow. Evans was an hour and ten minutes in making his 28, and Carlisle, the only other man on the side who made more than 20, an hour and twenty minutes in making his 29. Nor can it be said that the batting on the whole was worthy of the reputation of a Varsity team; there was a want of confidence about it which was disappointing in the extreme. True, Clode and Lees both bowled well and took every possible advantage of a slow wicket, but the Oxford men showed no enterprise against them. When Surrey went in Abel, who has struck a bad patch just now, was again unfortunate, but Hayward and Hayes were both in good form, and after the latter was out Holland played a fine defensive game; he and Hayward in partnership increased the total by 103 runs in an hour and-a-quarter. Hayward, who was not quite in his best form, had a charmed life being missed four or five times, a state of affairs which must have horrified old 'Varsity players who were looking on. He was out third at 149, and his innings of 86 lasted for two hours and included twelve 4's. When stumps were drawn, Surrey, with six wickets in hand, were 61 runs on. For a time on Tuesday everything went well with Surrey, who seemed likely enough to have a long lead before the innings ended, for Walker and Raphael both played good cricket, and made a very useful stand. But when the partnership was broken Burn and Martin brought the innings to a close with great rapidity. For all that, Surrey had a lead of 152, and although Evans, Pawson, and Wyld batted well, more especially the latter, Oxford had hardly knocked off the balance before five wickets were down. Wyld's fine innings then came to a conclusion; he had deserved well of his side for he had made a splendid effort to save the game. When the sixth wicket fell Oxford were only 27 runs on, but Voss hit hard, among his drives being a six off Lees, all run out. At close of play the 'Varsity with three wickets in hand were 75 runs on. The tail played up well yesterday and the result was that Surrey had to make 104 to win. Clode had bowled very well indeed, Abel and Hayward played very cautiously and put up 43 for the first wicket, and Abel and Raphael continued the same tactics, but Hayes, who succeeded Abel, made runs much more quickly. At lunch time with two wickets down Surrey still required 25 to win, and at ten minutes past three the match was won.

KENT vs. YORKSHIRE.—Played at Leeds on 22nd and 23rd June. Yorkshire won by on innings and 130 runs. The return of Hirst has made a marked difference in the all-round strength of the Yorkshire team. On the first day of this match he played a splendid innings of 120, an innings which was all the more valuable because the first part of it was played at a time when it seemed very probable indeed that the Yorkshire total would be very small, for the first four wickets fell for 65. At this total Smith joined Hirst and the much-needed stand was made. This lasted for two hours, during which 151 runs were put on. Smith scored his first 50 for his county, and batted in excellent form. After he was dismissed there was a sudden downfall of wickets and eight men were out at 220. Hirst had batted for two hours and three quarters for 120, an innings which included eighteen 4's, made partly by fine drives, and partly by well-judged pulls. Haigh and Hunter both played well, the latter keeping up his wicket for an hour and-a-half Kent had a very bad half hour before stumps were drawn, losing C. J. Burnup, Humphreys, and Seymour for 18 runs. For a time on Tuesday morning Alec Hearne held out against the Yorkshire bowling, and Fairservice made a very useful 16, but Hirst and Haigh were in splendid form on a wicket which had by no means improved. Kent had to follow on, and although they did better than in the first innings, no one made any prolonged resistance to the bowling, although several men made double figures. The only outstanding innings was that of Huish. Once more Hirst and Haigh did well, but at the end Ringrose had to be put on, and quickly finished off the innings.

PEDESTRIANISM.

LONDON TO BRIGHTON.

The "go-as-you-please" race from London to Brighton promoted by the Evening News, and decided on Saturday the 22nd June, proved a success in every way. Although many were found wanting in a struggle which tested to the utmost the stamina, speed, and strength of the competitors, this was no more than could be expected in a field that furnished close upon a hundred starters. The conditions, which admit of any mode of progression being adopted are, without a doubt, of a more trying nature than the fair heel and toe business. It is far easier for a man to run himself out than to walk himself to a standstill. Consequently a "go as-you-please" requires more generalship, head-work, and judgment than does its next of-kin, the ordinary walk. As we have said, quite a number of those who started on their way to Brighton from Westminster Bridge on Saturday lacked these qualities to a considerable extent, and yet the event put on record a performance the like of which had not previously been fairly accomplished. In covering the distance of 52¼ miles in 6hrs 34min 50sec, Leonard Hurst, the well-known professional, beat the 6hrs 58min 1sec standing to the credit of F. D. Randall by no less than 23min 28sec. Roughly speaking, Hurst, on the form he showed on Saturday, would have given Randall three miles start and a beating. How the winner would have fared against such men, in their prime as Rowell and Littlewood or what the two celebrities named would have done over the course negotiated on Saturday, is not, perhaps, difficult to imagine.

None of the competitors seemed to have any desire to "poach" at the start, and while the majority began running smartly directly the order to "go" was given, several commenced to stroll across the bridge in leisurely fashion. Until the Horns at Kennington was reached the road was fairly clear, though now and again an early tram-car caused slight obstruction. Turning into the Brixton-road the "obstructions" had to be negotiated, while the cars of the judges whisked up the Clapham-road and again entered the thoroughfare, which was now well lined with sightseers A drizzling rain began to fall, and the men, settling down, H. Jewell showed the way, followed by G. F. Eeslon, J. Punter, Len Hurst, W. E. Kay, W. Vinall, W. H Treble, E. Day, C. J. H. Lewis, H. J Hart, C W. Hart, A. Crudgington, H. Shaw, and the two Bells. Then came the one-armed man, E. Bealey, at the head of another division, which included Frank Craig, S. Wilson, and J. G. Warden, old Spencer being a long way back whipper-in. Passing Brixton Station, Day (18min 2sec) had worked his way to the front, and, going up the Hill he made the pace pretty warm from Punter, Jackson, Lewis, Treble, Hurst, and Crudgington, the next lot comprising Jewell, Hunter, Bealey, Easton, and Vinall. Thus early the tail was long, chiefly owing to the fact that quite a number elected to walk themselves warm. The rear division included H. Loder. W. Saward, W. J. Crawley, J. Gillett, C. Cody, C. Dickens. J T. Coleman, F. Sinden, H. A. Hudson, J. G. James, R. T. Jones, and the veteran J. Reddy. Streatham Hill found Jackson in front (time, 30min 6sec), the others close up being Punter, Treble, Easton, Vinall, Lewis, and H. J. Hart, with Crudgington and Hurst coming along side by side. The Hill had told its tale, and even so soon the tail was extended to a mile and-a-half, the back division comprising Warburton, McColley, Hal Smith, Craig, Elgood, J. A. Randall, J. Laurie, G. Pettitt, H. S. Cox, with old Spencer still further away. The streets of Streatham village were well lined with spectators, despite the fact that rain was falling in quite an aggravating manner. Jackson continued to plod along in front, and he secured the ham promised the first man in Croydon, reached in 54min 15sec. At Purley, 11¼ miles from the start, Jackson (time, 1hr 12min) was still the pioneer, 100 yards in front of C. J. Lewis, these two being 600 yards ahead of Crudgington, Hurst, Punter, H. Bishop, and Vinall, almost together. the next lot comprising A. Baker, Easton, Day, and Mouland. Rain fell very heavily, despite which Croydon was full of sightseers; indeed, the line extended almost to Merstham, where Crudgington, Hurst, and Vinall were leading, Jackson having fallen back, slightly leg weary. Hart, who had been a long way behind a now began to improve his position. At Merstham 18 miles, Hurst, Crudgington, and Vinall, were almost in a line. Time, 1hr 59min. At Redhill, 20¾ miles, Vinall, putting on the pace, drew away slightly from his two companions. Hurst, however, was soon with him, but not so Crudgington, who quickly fell away. Horley, 24¼ miles, found Hurst and Vinall doing their best to run each other down. Mouland had now got right away from the ruck, while the two Bells were running beautifully, with Easton, Baker, Dance, and C. W. Hart improving. Directly afterwards W. V. Bell had to give in, while Punter, having injured his foot, also retired. Jackson, too, dropped into a walk but was revived by some Oxo and champagne. Day, feeling the effects of the pace, had dropped into a walk. Horley proved a fatal point to quite a number, and here Crudgington, as stated, collapsed, though fortunately Dr. Jackson Lang happened to be handy. Leaving Horley (time 2hrs 35min 35sec). Hurst and Vinall drew right away. The little man, Vinall, hung on gamely, but he eventually had to give way, and, reaching Crawley 29¼ miles, Hurst was well in front (time, 3hrs 12 min 10sec). Coming down Handscross Hill, where Broad gave Nicholas the go-by in the Stock Exchange Walk, the lady globe-trotter was passed, struggling along in her nonsensical feat. So far as fast position was concerned the race was now over. Vinall, suffering from the effects of his desperate struggle with Hurst, fell back rather rapidly, while of the others Bell, C. W. Hart, Coleman, Luxford and Coleman showed a corresponding improvement. Hurst reached Bonney (38 miles) in 4hrs 25min, Pyecombe (45¼ miles) in 5hrs 27min 30sec, and Preston Park in 6hrs 16min, finally finishing over 38min before the second man, Bell, in the record time of 6hrs 34min 50sec. Bell came in wonderfully fresh, while Hart got third. The other fifteen prize-winners were timed in the order given below:—

SCOTTISH AMATEUR ATHLETIC CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The S. A. A. A. Championships reached their majority this year, having been established in 1883. There was a capital attendance, some 5,000 spectators being present. In five of the events the holders did not defend their titles J. McLean, Blackheath H., who won the 100 and 220 Yards sprints last year, is at present abroad, and for a like reason M. Cormack, London A. C., did not appear in the Half-mile. In the Broad Jump a walk over was allowed to G. C. Anderson, Edinburgh University A. C., in the absence of J. A. Campbell, Watson's College A. C., the former holder, while H. Nicolson Kyles, Shinty A. C., in joining the professional ranks, forfeited his right to defend the honour gained last year. Some excellent competition was witnessed in the short-distance items, but the feature of the meeting was undoubtedly the triple success of J. McGough, Bellahouston H., who, while retaining previous honours in the Mile and Four-mile, added the Half mile trophy to his list. It is no easy task for any runner to win three such championship distances in an afternoon, and the performance, while on a par with those of Alf. R. Downer, winner of triple bays in the seatons of 1893, 1894, and 1895, and that of W. H. Welsh, the International Rugby footballer in 19 0, must be ranked higher in consideration of the arduous nature of the task. McGough had a neat win of two yards over W. Roxburgh, Hamilton H., in the Half-mile, and in the Mile, his favourite distance, he had an easier journey. He, however, did not spare himself, allowing W H. Neill, West of Scotland H., and J. Ranken, Watson's College A C., to cut out the running he did not assume command until after half-distance. Going to the front on the last circuit, he maintained premier position to the close, and won by fully fifteen yards in the very good time of 4min 27 3-5sec His final triumph—in the Four-miles—was only obtained after a punishing race, in which J B. Cowe, Berwick H., provided the most serious opposition. The latter ran strongly throughout, keeping at the heels of the champion all the way. A sudden sprint after three miles and a half gave the Eastern runner a twenty-yard advantage, which, however, McGough regained before the gap closed. Having gained the measure of his man, the winner moved faster in the final round, and finished twenty yards ahead, the time being 20min 30 1-5sec. The High Jump was again secured by J. B. Milne, Dundee Gymnastic Club, who has been the champion since 1897, with the exception of the season of 1901, when he was beaten by his antagonist of Saturday. Details:

100 Yards Race, challenge cup, value 25 guineas (holder, J. McLean, Blackheath H.)—Heat 1: D. D. Stiven, Edinburgh H., 1; Thos. Straiton, West of Scotland H., 2. Won by half a yard. Time, 10 4-5sec. Heat 2: R. L. Watson, West of Scotland H., 1; J. Ford, Glasgow University A. C., 2. Won by a foot. Time, 10 4-5sec. Final heat: Ford, 1; Watson, 2; Stiven, 3; Straiton, 4. All went off to a fine start, and at twenty yards from home Ford had opened out a yard advantage over the others, finally finishing two feet in front of Watson. Time, 10 2-5sec.

Half mile Race, challenge cup, value 30 guineas (standard-2min 3sec) (holder, J. N. Cormack, London A. C.).—J. McGough, Bellahouston H., 1; William Roxburgh, Hamilton H., 2; T. W. Smith, Heriots (F. P.) F. C, 3. McGough led from the outset with Roxburgh in close attendance Smith was dropped on the second lap, and the race was confined to the former pair. Roxburgh challenged going into the straight, but the Bellahouston harrier easily held his own and won comfortably by two yards. Time, 2min 1 3-5sec.

120 Yards Hurdle Race, challenge cup, value £15 (holder, G. C. Anderson, Edinburgh University A. C.) (standard, 17sec).—G. C. Anderson, Edinburgh University A. C., 1; R. S. Stewart, Edinburgh University A. C., 2; R. H. McCowat, Glasgow Academy and West of Scotland H., 3. The holder had no serious opposition to encounter, and easily retained his title. Time, 16 3-5sec.

Putting the Weight, challenge cup value £15 (holder, H. Nicolson, Kyles Shinty A. C.) (standard, 39ft).—Thos. R. Nicolson, Kyle Shinty A. C and West of Scotland H., 41ft 4in, 1; J. Scholes, Garscule H., 36ft 3in 2.

High Jump (standard, 5ft 6in).—J. B. Milne, Dundee Gymnastic Club (holder), 5ft 9in, 1; R. G. Murray, West of Scotland H., 5ft 8in, 2.

Throwing the Hammer (standard 115ft).—Thos. R. Nicolson, Kyles Shinty A. C. (holder), 145ft 10in, 1; T. Scholes, Garscule, H., 103ft 9¼in 2.

220 Yards Race (holder, J. McLean, Blackheath H.) (standard 23 2-5sec).—R. L. Watson, West of Scotland H., 1; Thos. Straiton, West of Scotland H., 2; D. D. Stiven, Edinburgh H., 3 Straiton had the best of the start, and led the van until well into the straight, where Watson broke through and secured the verdict by a yard and-a-half. Time, 23 3 5secs.

One Mile Race, challenge cup, value 25 guineas (standard, 4min 34secs).—J. McGough, Bellahouston H. (holder), 1; J. Ranken, Watson's College A. C., 2; Samuel Kennedy, Garscule H., 3; W. H Mill, West of Scotland H., 0. Won easily by fifteen yards. Time 4min 27 3-5secs.

Quarter-mile Race, challenge cup value 25 guineas (standard 52sec).—R. L. Watson, West of Scotland H. (holder), 1: R. G., McPherson, Monkfeyston C C., 2; Wm Roxburgh, Hamilton H., 3. Won easily by four yards, a yard separating second and third. Time, 54 2-5sec.

Broad Jump (holder, J. A Campbell, West of Scotland H. and Watson's College A. C.) (standard, 20ft 6in).—G. C, Anderson, Edinburgh University A. C., 20ft 8in.

Four-mile Race, challenge cup value £15 (standard, 21min).—J. McGough, Bellahouston H. (holder), 1; J. B. Cowe, Berwick H., 2; J. M. Butters, West of Scotland H, 3. Won by twenty yards, after a punishing race, Time, 20min 30 1-5secs.

GOLF.

THE CRUDEN BAY TOURNAMENT.

In delightful weather, the semi-final and final rounds of the annual open amateur tournament for the Cruden Bay trophy took place on Saturday the 20th June. There was a large attendance of spectators. In the semi-final Mr H. H. Hilton (West Lancashire) beat Mr W. D. Davidson (Aberdeen), the winner two years ago, by 5 and 4, and Mr J. A. Donaldson (Bon Accord) defeated Mr. J. G. Cunningham (Carnoustie) by 4 and 2 the final between Messrs Hilton and Donaldson, decided in the afternoon, was certainly one of the most remarkable events ever seen on a golf course. Mr Hilton got dormy 3, and lost the last three holes An extra half-ground was played to decide the tie, and again the open and amateur ex-champion got dormy 3, only to lose the last three holes. It was then decided to play the last two holes, and Mr Donaldson won the match by laying his opponent a stymie on the home green.

In the semi final Mr Hilton went out in the fine score of 33 strokes, and stood 3 up at the turn. He also won the tenth hole, and, after three halves, settled the match on the fourteenth green, where he was 5 up with 4 to play. Except that he missed a few chances in his short game, he showed splendid form, but Mr. Davidson was very weak through the green. Mr. Donaldson was 1 up on Mr. Cunningham at the turn, and, after getting dormy 3, secured the next hole and the match.

The final was commenced at 2-30 P.M. Neither men played up to form but after three halves Mr. Hilton secured the lead on the fourth green, his opponent being bunkered. Mr. Donaldson squared at the fifth, but lost the ninth and then broke down for a time, losing in fact three holes in succession. Then, however, he commenced to play a splendid uphill game. He won the thirteenth (Hilton getting into the burn), and, after halving the fourteenth and fifteenth, saved the match by winning the last three holes brilliantly in 2, 3, and 4. Another nine holes were played to decide the tie. Mr. Donaldson lost the first four holes, and looked hopelessly beaten, but he won the fifth and halved the sixth, leaving Mr. Hilton dormy 3 Then, as in the first round, the Aberdeen player won the last three holes and halved the match, although Mr. Hilton ought to have divided the ninth hole, where he missed a foot put. The players then elected to make another attempt to decide the tie by playing the seventeenth and eighteenth holes. The former was halved in 4, but on the home green Mr. Hilton failed to negotiate a stymie, and Mr. Donaldson won a sensational match by 1 up, after two ties.

Hunting.

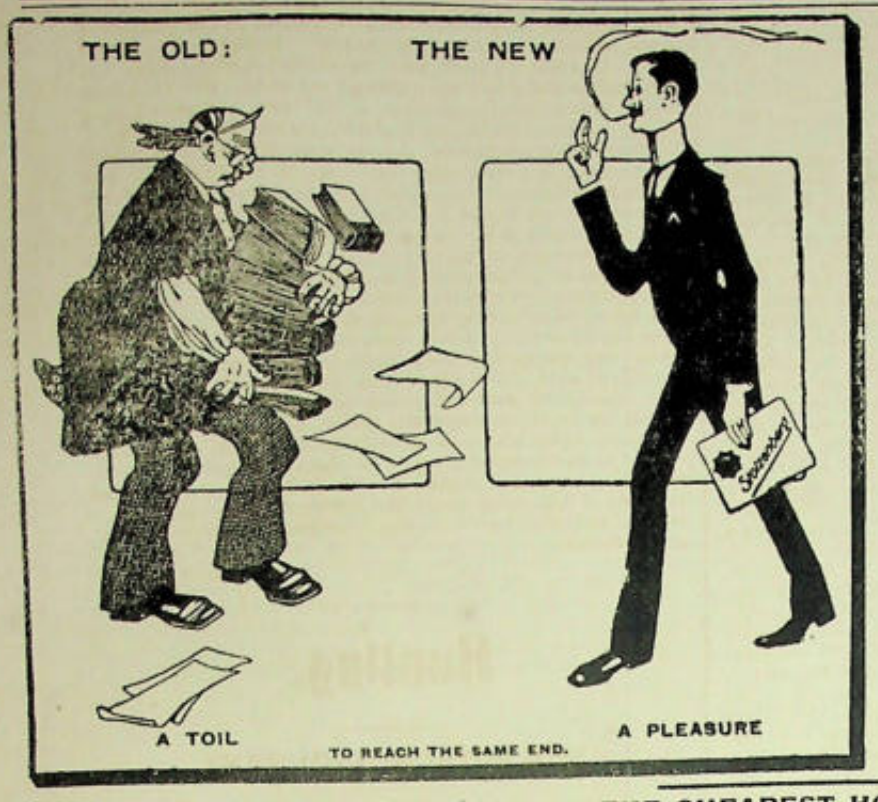
THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

HOUNDS met at Brooklands on the 7th instant and drew Brooklands cover and were soon on a line which proved stale. Moving towards Rocky they spoke to another trail and ran it to Sandy Nullah Toll Bar where the Master stopped hounds. The country past Barber's shop. Dartmoor Vale and Wapshare's Hare shola was next drawn and hounds found in the last named place, running to Bacon wood where they were again stopped. In the Yemakal valley quarry was again started, and after a sharp burst the jack went to ground but though routed out he got to ground again and was killed by the terrier. The morning was bright but scent bad and rain is much needed on the downs.

On the 9th the meet was at the 7th milestone on the Pykara Road. Briar Shola was first drawn and the hounds finding at once raced away after the jack through Wapshare's Hare Shola, over Windy gap down into the Yemakal Valley but lost him in Yemakal Shola. Hounds picked up a scent near the Pykara Road and all settled down to a brisk gallop. Following the river as far as Rock Shola, the quarry entered it but came out again and followed his old line turning up stream and going to ground in a nullah where he was left. On the homeward journey Briar Shola was again drawn and a jack started. Away he went at a spanking rate along the ridge of Herbert plantation, down into the Yemakal Valley, below Bacon Wood and up to windy gap, on to Wenlock Wood and Khed Shola where he was lost.

B.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.



APPARENTLY a variety of reasons were responsible for the marked weeding out which took place in the field which met the gallant Master on the 5th instant. From what I gather the main reasons which salved the sleepy consciences of most may be enumerated as follows: (1) A heavy shower of rain on the previous evening; (2) consequent alleged doubt as to whether (a) the country would be rideable; (b) whether the meet would be at 5-30 or 6 (as instructions were that the earlier hour would hold good "till the rains"); (3) ambiguity regarding the active place of tryst (and certainly "Satara Road" left a good deal to the imagination, and the Honorary Secretary might, perhaps, make an effort to be a trifle more explicit in future); (4) an apparent and perhaps not unnatural disinclination to run the risk of knocking horses about over such a remarkably stoney part of the country so early in the season. Be the reasons what they may the sad fact remained that an extremely select assembly gave the morning salutation to the M. F. H., and those keen souls who did were, I hear, amply rewarded by a very sporting run, even though the going was not quite of the Brighton Downs order and many of the lie-a-beds must have regretted not "risking it." Meeting at the Cross Roads leading to Satara and Parbatti (famous for its temple replete with historical interest and one of the land marks of the Poona country), Colonel Sheringham lost no time, it may be presumed, in moving on and straightway proceeded to draw the big nullah which skirts the hill. That it had been frequented during the night was at once apparent, but it must have been but a cursory visit, by an early jack, as in spite of the previous night's shower hounds could not maintain possession of the line. Rightly presuming that the hills would be his direction, the Master lifted hounds and his hunting craft was rewarded by the pack thankfully acknowledging the skilled assistance. Up to the Government grass land they hunted at a rare pace, and it was a pleasant surprise to those not already "in the know" to find that the "barbarous barbed" wire, which in former years encircled this area, had been taken away, for which act of decency and grace the benign Government deserve the congratulations and thanks of all good sportsmen. I hear that in previous seasons the presence of the abomination of civilization referred to spoilt several good runs and led to friction by reason of the not unnatural action taken by some sportsmen in snipping the vile form of fence which they could not get over and dare not try and burst through. All, however, is now harmony. Quickly appreciating that he could look for no assistance from his foes, from the former dread invention of modern science, the jack soon left this false haven of refuge and led hounds and the field at a pace (over the most appalling country, up and down hill sides plastered thick with Deccan stones and rocks) so good that even the originally select field of keen sportsmen grew still smaller by degrees and beautifully less. Towards Karakwasla (whose famous lake forms the water supply of Poona) hounds

THE HANDIEST FILING SYSTEM IN THE WORLD.

THE "STOLZENBERG" LETTER FILING SYSTEM.

A TRIUMPH OF EFFICIENCY.

Is suitable for Documents and Correspondence of every description.

All papers relating to any particular firm or business are filed together, and are thu kept quite separate, and readily get-at-able.

No unnecessary room taken up, as in the case of most files now in the market the back being quite thin and taking up no more space than the actual letters—a very important point where space is a consideration.

All papers can be instantly and conveniently referred to without any manipulation of springs which often means dislodging a number of papers in order to get at any particular document.

The covers are made in various qualities and sizes, to take from 1—300 documents, in octavo, quarto, or foolscap.

Files are supplied in different colors: Blue, Red, Orange, Buff, and Green. The idea of using coloured Files provides an easy means of distinguishing at a glance the various distinctive branches of correspondence in a large business, such as referring to Agencies, Purchases, Sales, Finance, or for Town, Country, Continental, and Colonial.

hunted their jack in the most determined way till reaching the line of bills encompassing the lake; scent failed and after 25 minutes genuine hunting of the most sporting—if somewhat rugged—description the quickly increasing heat rendered that mystic element yclept "Scent" unworkable and hounds threw their heads up and owned defeat. I hear that at this period not more than half a dozen (including the gallant Master and a lady who I hear is well known with this pack and more often than not occupies the 'pride of place" were really with hounds. Altogether it seems to have been a capital rough-going sporting morning, and I have heard many vain regrets from those who failed to avail themselves of it—and it will no doubt be a wholesome warning.

The meet for Thursday the 9th was originally fixed for Wagoli, nine miles off on the Ahmednagar Trunk Road; but bearing in mind that there was a Ball at Government House on the preceding evening, the place of gathering was wisely altered to the familiar Bund Bridge thereby granting an extra half hour's grace to rest our weary limbs and sleep off that possible "one extra glass" of champagne. Evidently appreciating this kindly consideration (for obviously the fact that the previous effort having proved a failure, Mr. Stewart was to take another photograph could have nothing to do with it) an unexpectedly large field turned up. In looking up past chronicles of this Hunt, I see that my illustrious predecessor double-thonged with ridicule this thirst for venatic distinction, and I am assured that many used to turn up for celebration who never dared or pretended to ride a yard over country. Verily we all have our own views of the pleasures of life. That the craving for photographic notoriety had disastrous results on the present occasion is, I fear, but too true and Colonel Sheringham must, I opine, regret bitterly that he allowed his good nature to overrule his well-known antipathy to this sort of nonsense From 6 till nearly 8 was wasted in drawing the river side between the Bund and Holkar's Bridge; there many were rejoiced by once more being in the first flight—in the camera. It was almost 8 o'clock, and a peculiarly sultry morning at that, when Colonel Sheringham threw hounds into a very likely looking little cover near the Alandi Road and a burst of music pronounced that the varmint was at home and a good one he proved himself to be. Headed apparently by some of the "Macadamers" the jack took refuge in a garden from which, however, he was soon ousted and headed at a great pace for Yerroda Jail. Hounds carried a great head and it was obvious that scent was good, and that if only the sun would not interfere a good run was in store. But minute by minute the heat grew more oppressive. Leaving the Jail on the right the jack took refuge in a large excavation apparently meant to be a tank, but at present dry. Little time was given him for resting by the way, and seeing that safety lay in flight alone he selected the Sister Hills as his point. After going for about 25 minutes hounds were mostly run to a stand still and horses and riders were, I am assured, in similar plight. So distressed were all concerned that proceedings might wisely, perhaps, have terminated there. Rumour was given, however, that this stout jack had gone to ground and the temptation to blood hounds, after their gallant efforts, was naturally great and, doubtless, they appreciated the reward, done to a turn, though many of them were from all accounts. Meanwhile men and horses were having bellows to mend, and a good Samaritan with a hunting flask received, I hear, the heartfelt gratitude of several who were completely "cooked." Had this fine run taken place between 6 and 8 instead of between 8 and 9, how thoroughly enjoyable it would have been, and that delicate animals, like English Foxhounds, can stand so terrible a strain in such trying weather so early in the season is more than I fear one can dare hope for. Photography and hunting go "coupled" badly.

THE SOUTHERN INDIAN CYCLE RACES.

First Day, Thursday, 9th July 1903.

NEVER have the prospects of cycle-racing in Southern India looked so bright as they do at present. Whereas a certain amount of apathy has been shown of late years, the subscription list was no sooner opened on the present occasion than it swelled rapidly to over a thousand rupees, and a surplus is assured, be the gate what it may. But judging by the opening day, the gate should be an excellent one, for a large crowd of all classes, which included Sir Donald and Lady Robertson, numerous ladies, many well-known members of society, and a strong contingent of the military watched the racing. Each event has been duly described in its place, so that it is only necessary here to treat of the general aspect of the function and to add a word or two as regards the salient features. A strong wind was blowing which was expected to cause slow times, but notwithstanding this fact the heats for the Championship Mile were both better than previous records on the track, the Lincoln crack, Higgins, taking 2mins. 15secs. to cover the distance, and Theagaraj, the well-known native rider, going one better in the following heat by winning in 2mins. 14⅘secs. A good many of the brethren of the pencil, who are here in readiness for next week's racing, were on the ground, but there was little betting, Higgins being too well known was in a class by himself at most distances. He won the three races in which he started for the mile was a really fine one, and a word must be said for Rowe of the Middlesex regiment, a new man who promises really well as a long-distance rider. The weather, besides being squally, was very threatening and a sharp shower actually descended in the course of the afternoon. Events and results:—

ONE MILE CHAMPIONSHIP.

1st Prize, Cup value Rs. 450, and Rs. 40, 2nd Rs. 30, 3rd Rs. 15

Higgins (Lincolns) (holder) 1st; Bewers (Essex) 2nd; Rowe (Middlesex) 3rd.

Also started—Richardson (Royal Scots) and Allder (Lincolns).

Rowe was quickest away, with Bewers second and the Lincoln crack lying fourth. He went up third before the first lap was completed, and took the lead in the course of the second, winning as he liked by 40 yards. Rowe was some twenty yards behind the second man, with Allder next, whilst Richardson stopped Time—2mins. 15secs.

(Second Heat.)

Theagaraj (Civilian) 1st; Smith (East Yorkshires) 2nd; Fox (Lincolns) 3rd.

Also started—Williams (The Carabiniers) and Wainwright (Leicesters).

Smith led out and established a fair lead, but the native rider was quickly after him, and allowing him to do the pacing until the opening of the final lap, went past and won very easily by thirty yards, Fox being about the same distance behind the ex holder of the trophy.

Time—2mins. 14⅘secs.

FIVE MILE HANDICAP.

1st Prize, Rs. 50; 2nd Prize, Rs. 30; 3rd Prize, Rs. 15.

Higgins, Lincolns (scr) 1st; Fox, Lincolns (180 yards) 2nd; Benson, "G" Battery R. H. A. (440 yards) 3rd.

Also started—Richardson, Royal Scots (200); Williams, The Carabiniers (240); Allder, Lincolns (380); Bain, Civili (550.)

Bain retained his lead for four laps and then stopped, leaving Benson with the lead. The pace became too hot for Richardson and Williams, and they also retired, which left Benson with a long lead of the three Lincoln men. Of these Higgins was last, evidently taking it easily, but all three gradually drew on Benson, and four laps from home Higgins took the lead, Allder retiring and Fox riding at Benson's wheel. The Lincoln crack eventually won sitting up by 100 yards from Fox, with Benson a plucky third. Time—12mins. 11secs

(Second Heat.)

Rowe, Middlesex (220 yards) 1st; Allen, "G" Battery R. H. A' (240 yards) 2nd; Theagaraj, Civilian (scr.) 3rd.

Also started:—Smith, East Yorkshires (180); Bewers, Essex (440); Bowrer, "G" Battery R. H. A. (500), Wainwright, Leicesters (500).

Allen and Rowe rapidly went up to the limit man, and Smith stopped after going a mile. In the seventh lap, Rowe went right away from Allen and Theagaraj was unable to decrease the gap between himself and the latter rider, although he made a plucky effort four laps from home. The Middlesex man won in great form by half a lap, Allen, distressed but plucky, beating the native by 100 yards for second place. Time—12mins. 21secs.

ONE MILE NATIVE HANDICAP.

1st Prize, Rs, 15; 2nd, Rs. 10; 3rd, Rs. 5.

(First Heat.)

Vadevalu, Civilian (50 yards) 1st; Arokiam, 1st Pioneers (30 yards) 2nd.

Also started—Sulramony, Civilian (20 yards) and Valayudam, 4th Pioneers (50 yards).

Vadevalu retained and improved his lead and won by 70 yards from Arokiam, who quickly passed the other limit men. Time—2mins. 47secs.

ONE MILE ALL-COMERS' HANDICAP.

Bewers, Essex (120 yards) 1st; Smith, East Yorkshires (50 yards) 2nd; Bain, Civilian (120 yards) 3rd.

Also started:—Richardson, Royal Scots (80); Allen, "G" Battery R. H. A. (90); Allder, Lincolns (100).

Bewers did all his own pacing, and never being threatened won easily by 70 yards. There was a great race for second place, Smith just qualifying himself for the final by a wheel from Bain with the latter the same distance ahead of Richardson. Allen and Allder stopped Time—2mins. 5secs.

(Second Heat.)

Benson, "G" Battery R. H. A. (12 yards) 1st; Williams, The Carabiniers (90 yards) 2nd; Fox, Lincolns (70 yards) 3rd

Also started—Wainwright, Leicesters (130) and Ryall, Essex (160).

Ryall led for some distance, when Benson went by and was never afterwards threatened, winning easily by 40 yards, a long distance between second and third. Time—2mins. 9⅘secs.

FIVE MILE HANDICAP.

(Final.)

Higgins, Lincolns (scr.) 1st; Rowe, Middlesex (220 yards) 2nd; Fox, Lincolns (180 yards) 3rd.

Also started—Allen, "G" Battery R. H. A. (240).

Higgins and Fox closed up, and then the four went round in a slow procession, each refusing to do the pacing until two laps from home. Then all began to race, with the result that Higgins went by and won by 30 yards, Rowe beating Fox by a length after a good race, and Allen also being close up. Save for the sprint over the last two laps, this race was a farce. Time—19mins. 15secs.

Second Day, 10th July 1903.

The attendance was not quite so large as on the opening day, but Sir Donald Robertson, British Resident, was again on the ground, and there were several noteworthy points about the racing The well-known Lincoln rider, Higgins, proved that he had not only maintained his excellent form of the last two meetings, but had improved upon it, and the style in which he won the Mile Championship for the third time in succession thereby making the Cup his own property, called forth hearty "bravos" from the assembled spectators. His ride in the first heat of the Three-Mile Army Championship was also a fine performance, and it is doubtful as I have repeatedly remarked, whether he has his equal as an all-round rider in India to-day. In connection with the native rider, Theagaraj, he is to be specially congratulated on riding so well, for he is still suffering from the results of a bad accident he had some months ago, and walks quite lame. He is young, and should still improve if he can get sound again. Rowe, of the Middlesex has already been mentioned as a promising long-distance rider. and Bewers of the Essex Regiment, another new man, by no means disgraced himself in the final for the Mile Championship, although he was last. He did the pacing for nearly the whole journey, and was only just beaten out of a place in a very fast-run race. Other riders of promise are Williams of the Carabineers, and Richardson of the Royal Scots.

Events and results:—

FIVE MILE CHAMPIONSHIP.

(First Heat.)

1st Prize—Shield valued at Rs. 400 and Rs. 40; 2nd, Rs. 30; 3rd; Rs. 20, 4th, Rs. 10.

Richardson, Royal Scots, 1st; Fox, Lincolns, 2nd.

Also started—Williams, The Carabineers.

The Carabeniers led for five laps and then retired. Fox taking up the running and retaining the lead at a slowish pace until the last lap opened. Richardson, who had waited on him, then made his effort, and a fine sprint home resulted in the Scot winning by half-a-wheel. Time—14mins. 59secs.

(Second Heat.)

Theagaraj (Civilian) (holder) 1st; Rowe, Middlesex, 2nd.

Also started—Alder, Lincolns.

Alder got away, with Theagaraj and Rowe riding in the order named. They made the pace alternately until four laps from home, when the native crack went to the front and looked like staying there. Riding with excellent judgment, however, he again fell back when there were two laps to travel, but in the last lap spurted finely, and going by, won handsomely by ten yards from Rowe, who beat Alder a long way for second place. Time—12mins 43secs.

ONE MILE NATIVE HANDICAP.

(Second Heat.)

Doraswamy Q. O. Sappers and Miners (50yds) 1st; Rungaswamy, 28th M. I. (30yds), 2nd.

Also started—Poonaswamy (Civil) (scr) and Rungaswamy 4th Madras Pioneers (25yds).

They rode in unchanged order throughout, with the exception that the Civilian passed the Pioneer, and the win was a fairly easy one. Time—2mins. 34secs.

THREE MILE ARMY CHAMPIONSHIP.

(First Heat.)

1st Prize—Cup valued at Rs. 400 and Rs. 40; 2nd, Rs. 30; 3rd, Rs. 20; 4th, Rs. 10.

Higgins, (Lincolns) (holder) 1st; Williams, The Carabineers, 2nd.

Also started—Smith, East Yorkshires, and Allen, R. H. A.

The Horse Artillery man led at a rattling pace for three laps. when the invincible Lincoln man went past without an effort, and in two more laps had spread-eagled his field, eventually winning by nearly half a lap in the fine time of 6mins. 57⅘secs., which beats his own time in the final at the last meeting by 4 secs. Williams kept pluckily at work, and finished second, but Smith and Allen stopped.

Rowe, Middlesex, 1st; Fox, Lincolns, 2nd.

Also started—Richardson, Royal Scots, and Alder, Lincolns.

Richardson made running, with Rowe, Fox, and Alder all handy until three laps from home. The pace, although not slow, was nothing like that of the previous heat, and they were all together when the last lap opened. Fox looked like coming away, but in a good finish the Middlesex man had more left in him and won by a couple of yards with Richardson the same distance behind the second man and Alder close up. Time—7mins. 56⅘secs.

ONE MILE NATIVE HANDICAP.

(Final Heat.)

Sulvamony (Civil,) 1st; Vadevalu (Civil) 2nd.

Also started—Dovaraswamy, Q. O. Sappers and Miners, and Rungaswamy, 28th M. I.

The winner led all the way and won easily, long intervals separating the other riders. Time—2mins. 33⅘secs.

ONE MILE CHAMPIONSHIP.

(Final.)

Higgins, Lincolns (holder) 1st; Theagaraj (Civilian) 2nd; Smith, (East Yorkshires) 3rd; Bewers (Essex) 4th.

The race of the afternoon, and a really finely contested event. Higgins' previous best time for a mile had been 2mins. 15secs, which he did in the first heat on the previous day. He won the final for the same distance at the last meeting in 2mins. 16⅕secs but both of these timings had been beaten, although only narrowly, by the native crack on the preceding day, when he sailed merrily home in 2mins. 14⅘secs. and it was thought that he might trouble the holder, who had only to win on this occasion to retain the Cup. The story of the race is soon told. Bewers, the new Essex rider, made the pace a cracker until well into the last lap. Indeed the others had to ride all they knew to live with him, and opinions were expressed more than once that he would fairly cut his field down. Half way through the final lap, however Higgins, who had been last all the way, came through his men as only he can and finishing as strong as a lion he won the Cup outright amindst hearty applause by ten yards from Theagaraj, Smith just beating the plucky pace maker for third place. Time—2mins. 13⅘secs. (a record for India).

Third Day, 11th July 1903.

The closing day of the Bangalore Cycle Races provided a fitting termination to a thoroughly successful athletic function. The President of the Committee touched upon the one somewhat unsatisfactory feature which had presented itself, in his speech before he gave away the prizes, and this was the paucity of entries from the numerous cyclists in the Garrison. To some extent, however, he accounted for this correctly, and when The Carabineers and the Essex men have done a little more training, they will probably enter in larger numbers. The results of the meeting were a brilliant triumph for Higgins, the wonderful Lincoln rider, who won two handsome Cups outright and put up some really fine times. Higgins is a quiet, unpretending man and does not strike one as being particularly strongly built, but he is all wire and whip-cord, and seems practically untiring. The Championship Shield over five miles was also won outright at this meeting, and it is a great feather in the cap of the native community that they should have produced so fine a rider as Theagaraj. Smith of the East Yorkshire, at one time a champion at South Indian Meetings, did not seem to ride in quite his old form, and like many more of us, alas!—he has probably seen his best day. Fox of the Lincolns may be placed under this heading too, pluckily as he rode on more than one occasion, but Bewers of the Essex, Rowe of the Middlesex, Williams of The Carabineers, Richardson, Royal Scots, and the R. H. A. man Benson are all very promising riders; more especially the first two. The attendance on the closing day was very large, and the fine band of the Essex Regiment played a most enjoyable selection of music.

At the close of the racing, Colonel Sprot, Commanding The Carabineers, who is the newly-elected President of the Cycle Racing Committee was asked to present the prizes, but before doing so he made a most appropriate little speech in which he first called on those present to join him in heartily congratulating Higgins, who had proved himself such a good man on the track (cheers) and who had won outright two such handsome trophies as the Cups for the One Mile Championship and the Three Mile Army Championship (renewed cheering); also in congratulating Theogaraj on winning outright the Five Mile Championship Shield (applause). He regretted there had not been more entries from the Garrison, and thought that possibly they were afraid of the redoubtable Higgins. However he hoped the garrison entries would improve at future meetings. Cycling, he said, was important in the army; the public he was sure had been pleased, and he hoped the Committee would be equally pleased with the gate money.

On behalf of the Committee, Colonel Sprot then announced that there would be a cycle race meeting in Bangalore next December, which would be open to the whole of India, whilst October would see a meeting open to the Bangalore Garrison.

Events and results :—

ONE MILE HANDICAP

Final.

Prizes—Rs. 40, Rs. 30, and Rs 15.

Bewers, Essex (120 yards) 1st; Benson, R. H. A. (120, 2nd Williams, The Carabiniers (90) 3rd; Smith, East Yorkshires (50) 0.

Bewers made the pace from Benson and Williams, but Smith was coming up fast when he unfortunately lost a pedal, and consequently stopped. Bewers was never caught and won by 15 yards from Benson, with Williams a long way off third. Time—2mins. 5⅗secs.

NATIVE ARMY CHAMPIONSHIP.—THREE MILES

Prizes—Cup valued at Rs. 400 and Rs. 20, Rs. 10 and Rs. 5. Lap Prize—Rs. 5.

Doraswamy, Q. O. Sappers and Miners, 1st; Rungaswamy, 4th Madras Pioneers (holder) 2nd; Rungaswamy, 28th M. I., 3rd; Arokiam, 1st Madras Pioneers.

Doraswamy paced throughout a slowly-run race, the holder making his effort in the final lap but failing to collar the leader who won by 15 yards, and also took the lap prize. Time—9mins 50secs.

FIVE MILE CHAMPIONSHIP.

Final.

Prizes—Shield valued at Rs. 400 and Rs. 40, Rs. 30, Rs. 20 and Rs. 10.

Theagaraj (Civil) (holder) 1st; Rowe, Middlesex, 2nd; Fox, Lincolns, 3rd; Richardson, Royal Scots, 4th.

Richardson paced for five laps and then dropped back to a crawling pace, practically retiring. Two laps more having been covered by the leaders—of whom Rowe was first—however, Richardson again spurted and brought them along for another lap or two. In the final lap, the holder went by his men and leaving them without an effort won by 40 yards amidst hearty applause. Rowe beat Fox by ten yards for second place. Time—12mins 40secs.

ONE MILE SCRATCH RACE. (Open to Bangalore Garrison.)

Prizes—Rs. 40, Rs. 30, and Rs 15.

Bewers, Essex, 1st; Benson, R. H. A., 2nd; Allen, R. H A., 3rd; Williams, The Carabineers.

Bewers led all the way and won by ten yards; a wheel between second and third. Time—2mins 46⅕sec.

CONSOLATION RACE.—ONE MILE.

(For riders placed 4th and lower in Heats.)

Prizes—Prize, presented by Mr. Annaswamy Modaliar and Rs. 15 added, Rs 20 and Rs. 10.

Poonaswamy, (Civil) 1st; Ryall, Essex, 2nd.

Two other native civilians also started. Ryall led for two laps, but Poonaswamy went by him in the last lap and won by 40 yards. Time—2mins. 39 secs.

SCRATCH TEAM RACE—FIVE LAPS. About 1¼ miles.

PRIZES—Rs. 20 and Rs. 12.

"A" TEAMS.		"B" Team.
Benson, R. H. A.		Bewers, Essex
Richardson, R. S.		Bain, Civil
Allen, R. H. A.		Smith, E. Yorkshires
Alder, Lincolns		Theagaraj, Civil.

A dead heat. Theagaraj won and Smith was second, but Bewers and Bain were seventh and eighth, respectively, which gave the teams 18 points each, and they agreed to divide. Winner's time—4mins. 32⅖secs.

THREE MILE ARMY CHAMPIONSHIP

Finals.

Prize—Cup, valued at Rs. 400, and Rs. 40, Rs 30, Rs. 20, and Rs. 10.

Higgins, Lincolns (holder) 1st; Williams, The Carabineers, 2nd 2nd; Rowe, Middlesex, 3rd; Fox, Lincolns, 4th

A grandly run race. Fox paced the crack as he has so often done before, for four laps and then dropped back, beaten by the pace. Higgins then took up the running himself, and going clean away from Rowe and Williams, won without an effort by nearly half a lap. It was a pity he was not more pressed, for although his time was half-a-second better than that in which he won last year, he himself travelled faster in the opening heat, and had there been any one to make him really ride, he would probably have put up another new record. Twenty yards between second and third. Time.—7mins. 1sec.

TEAM RACE.—FIVE LAPS. (About 1¼ miles.)

COMBINED R. A.		ESSEX REGIMENT.
Gordon		Ryall.
Thompson	vs.	Matthews.
Howthorne		Day.
Clarke		Lodge.

A good contest which the R. A. team won by 3 points. Gordon, R A., was 1st, and Day, Essex Regiment' 2nd. Winner's time—5mins. 11secs.

CONSOLATION RACE—ONE MILE. (Open to riders placed 4th finals, and 3rd in heats.)

Prizes—Rs. 20 and Rs. 10.

Alder, Lincolns, 1st; Richardson, Royal Scots, 2nd; Bain Civil o.

Richardson did the pacing until well into the last lap, when Alder spurted and won a good race by five yards. Bain fell at the final turn from home. Time—2mins. 23⅘secs.

CYCLING IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Friday, 19th June 1903.

WITH the continual growth of automobilism and with every prospect of this form of conveyance being supplemented for horse drawn vehicles, the question of dust on the highways is one that must receive immediate and careful consideration by every road surveyor in the country. To overcome the dust nuisance is a problem surrounded with many difficulties, but one, nevertheless that should be thoroughly gone into

The West Surrey County Council are treating a section of the Horsham-Brighton road with specially prepared materials, and it will be interesting to watch how the experiment answers. Cherbourg quartzite forms the metal, and this, after being broken up in small pieces and thoroughly dried, is treated with tar and pitch. This is laid on the prepared roadway and then thoroughly rolled in by a steam roller, a dressing of sand completing the job. It is expected that the 'life" of the road will be extended some twenty-five per cent.

"Cycling is dead!" has been so frequently urged by those not in a position to know, that the reiteration of the cry falls on deaf ears, and the cyclist goes on cycling. A more mythical statement we doubt has ever been given expression to, and its fallacy is apparent to all who use their eyes in the course of their daily duties. Ask the country inn and hotel proprietors, if cycling is dead; call at any leading cycle depôt and observe the bustle and business; sit on a stile by a popular highway and count the cyclists that pass, and then decide the question for yourselves If a non-cyclist, take a spin on a wheel, and then pronounce whether the pastime will ever die.

Great amusement was caused at a race meeting held near London, by the explosion of one of the competitor's tyres when the men were on their marks awaiting the pistol. A limit man hearing the report took it for the signal to go and was off like a shot, riding "all out" until the shouts of the officials and the laughter of the spectators, showed him that something was amiss.

The Woodford Meet, carries the mind of cyclists of old standing back to the days when such gatherings were very different functions to that of the present day; they can picture the muster of wheelmen who use to assemble at Woodford, Hampton Court, or Hayes Common, all dressed in tight fitting breeches and elaborately braided coats, every club having a certain material and style of its own with a bugler thrown in. They can see the cyclists hurrying and scurrying to join their fellow clubmen, and on the bugle sounding placing their feet on the foot-rests of their high bicycles in readiness to mount. The bugle sounds again; the riders mount their machines, and a long procession slowly winds its way round and round the locality, until the arrival at a large marquee, all laid out for tea, brings the meet to a close.

What a different gathering is the Woodford Meet of to-day held on 20th June last. In place of the uniforms of military precision the wheelmen taking part adorn themselves in fancy costumes ranging from the sublime to the grotesque, and by entering heart and soul into the spirit of the thing, tend largely to the success of the gathering The Woodford Meet Cyclists' Association is composed of a body of good organizers and enthusiasts, and the perfect arrangements and system observed stands to the Association's credit. This year the Meet was supported by no less than twenty-three Essex cycling clubs, the individual members of which totaling 552 cyclists in fancy dress Add to this the collectors and officials, and the number taking part was almost 700. The amount collected is not yet known, but it was pretty evident that previous collections have been exceeded. Up to 1902, £814 had been collected, the whole of this amount going to the local hospitals, the expenses in connection with the meet being defrayed by the clubs taking part.

Although raining hard at the appointed time to start, fifteen members of the North Road Cycling Club assembled at the General Post Office, London, at midnight 19th, June and started on their annual run to York. The roads for the first portion of the journey were wet and muddy, and all through the journey of some 190 miles to York the seasoned riders had a strong, cold, head wind to contend with, yet they all arrived at York at 8-45 P.M., fifteen minutes within their schedule time.

All the arrangements for the Gordon-Bennett race, on 2nd July are now complete. The race will start at 7 A.M., and the twelve competitors will be sent off at intervals of eleven minutes. It is stated in some paper that it is expected that ninety miles an hour will be done. This is arrant nonsense. It will be a good performance to do between forty and fifty miles in the hour on the torturous course, which has to be traversed three times to bring the mileage total to 351 miles. The English and American teams have arrived in Ireland, and are now making themselves acquainted with the course. The French and German teams are expected on the 27th instant.

Emile Bouhours is riding with all his old dash, and the famous French pace follower should have a very successful season before him, judging by the way in which he beat Robl, Linton, and Ryser in the series of matches for the Grand Prize of Hamburg. In each of the three events, at 10, 25, and 50 kilometres he passed the tape first. Bouhours is thirty-three years of age and has been associated with the cycle race path for a matter of ten years, during which time he has figured amongst the first four prize winners in middle distance events. On three occasions he has visited England to fulfil an engagement, and on each time has beaten the world's records.

An exhaustive enquiry has been held by the U. V. F. respecting the charges brought against Levaloy, the cyclist who finished second to Ancouturier in the last Bordeaux-Paris race The charge against Levaloy is, that taking advantage of night, he covered a certain distance of the journey in a motor car. This he stoutly denies, but the verdict of the U. V. F. went against him and that body passed the severe sentence of disqualifying him out of the race with suspension for life.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE 93rd Highlanders are to be heartily congratulated on capturing the League Cup, and moreover without having lost a single match. This fine record has been attained by hard and consistent training, excellent generalship, and a magnificent defence, in which we consider they especially excel. McGowan has shewn consummate judgment in the management of the team and in his knowledge of the game, besides being the pivot on which the entire back division worked. The Highlanders are, on League form, undoubtedly the best side in Calcutta, but the many weak spots in their forward line preclude us from agreeing with those enthusiasts who consider them a great team. However they may justify the views of their supporters during the tussle for the Shield.

Calcutta have done uncommonly well to finish second with only two defeats, and both by the League champions. Their most inglorious display was that against the 64th R. F A. with whom they only managed to draw, but this was due to experimenting with the team and thus disorganising the entire combination. They sadly need a really good left back to partner Todd who has been a tower of strength to the side, and it would also be advisable for the executive to finally make up its mind, before the matches for the Shield, as to whether they intend Fyffe or Cooper to play in the centre. On a dry ground there is no finer goal-keeper in Calcutta than Buckley, but his displays with a heavy ground and wet ball have always left something to be desired The meeting between Calcutta and the 93rd, or Rifles, ought to provide the finest match of the season.

THE K. O. S. B.'s—Last year's League champions have fallen from their high estate and are at present showing very indifferent form. They are, however, strengthening their side for the shield competition by the inclusion of several of the 1902 team and this should enable them to make a bold bid for victory.

Dalhousie's position in the League table is somewhat disappointing. When caught in the mood they are one of the most dangerous teams in Calcutta, but on the other hand they have given some unaccountably bad displays. In Watts they have a clever and resourceful centre forward, who is likewise a good shot, but he has often proved very erratic and perhaps a trifle too unselfish, Rosser has played consistently well throughout and is quite in the front rank amongst local forwards. The half-back line is the weak spot in the team and badly requires strengthening. With Watts, Rosser, and Peake in form, the Trades team are capable of going extremely close for the blue riband of Calcutta football, although they will have to be in very good trim, to beat the Borderers whom they should meet in the semi-final.

All the other entries for the Shield can have little or no chance with such teams as the 93rd, Calcutta, K.O.S.B s' and Dalhousie, although the Rangers might create a surprise, if only they are able to strengthen their forwards who, with the exception of Russell, are far too slow and sadly lack combination. They have a fine defence, however, and their goal-keeper, Whelan, is fast approaching first class.

The Council of the I. F. A. have shown in no uncertain manner by the suspension of Bonner of Burns, and Rosser of the Y.M.C.A., that they intend to put down foul play and general misbehaviour on the field with a strong hand. Rosser is to be sympathised with as he was not the aggressor, and it requires considerable self-control to refrain from retaliation under such circumstances as those in the case under notice, but at the same time we do not agree, as a matter of principle, with those who consider that he should have been dealt with more leniently. We trust this exemplary sentence will have a salutary effect on some players we wot of, or else there will be further need for the beneficial services of the I. F. A. Council.

We regret to learn that the Customs have been obliged to withdraw from the Shield due, we believe, to cessations from their ranks. This must be a disappointment to Mr. Judge which we hope will be atoned for by his team making a bold bid for the Rugby Cup.

GOLF AT GULMARG.

THE season in Gulmarg was late this year owing to the heavy fall of snow; houses and links were buried 10 feet in snow on the 1st April, and it did not clear off till the beginning of June when the sun exerted itself and vegetation sprang up magically, the growth of grass on the greens was plentiful and made the task of Mr. Smith, the green-keeper, easy, as little or no turf had to be replaced. So before the rush of players came the greens were in excellent order, the superfluous growth removed from the course leaving the Ragwort on each side to receive the strong language of those who pull or slice their balls; the hazards and bunkers were as formidable as ever, ready to assist the vendor of golf balls by making away with them in the swift running streams and pitfalls numerous. The undulating hills covered with grass kept down by sheep grazing, making the turf springy and even, and most enjoyable, in the clear crisp air for your morning and evening round of 18 holes. Enjoyable is no word for it; the lovely scenery of pine, maple, rododendron, fur and shrubs, loved of one's youth in our far-away homes, with snow-capped mountains, with round-topped velvet hills, brown yellow, or green, you go clambering up and up to meet the purple bases of the great mountains that lay their mighty length along the horizon and thrust up white massive peaks into the blue sky, reaching Kilimarg, or Minimarg, the morning breeze sweeping down to meet us bearing a thousand scents of flowers of every description.

A holiday up here is well worth having after the heat and discomfort of the plains; it invigoirates and makes you think life is really worth living especially after a successful round, lwhere you have sent the Haskell rubber flying through the air like a ·303 bullet lofted in perfect style, putted with the accuracy of a Vardon and ended in triumph over your opponent. Yes, life up here is glorious, yet strange that nowadays, when it is so easy to get to Kashmir, more people do not come, but spend their money in hill stations where they are cramped and worried with rules of society.

The first contest for men and ladies came off last Tuesday, a handicap pairs, 12 holes, partners to be drawn for. The entries were numerous, 24 couples were started by that energetic and popular Sub-Secretary Captain J. Hill; the ladies drove off the crest of the hill tee, few doing well. Miss Nicholetts as usual came to the front dropping her ball within 20 yards of the hole, a drive equal to that of most of the masculine species; her partner helping well the hole was done in four, very many of the second shots reaching the swift running meandering stream guarding the green. Hades swamped many of the fair competitors. No. 3 hole was fatal to most second shots, as the bunkers are so placed that an indifferent effort finds repose in drains of sorts; casual water abounded, wet boots and skirts predominated, the putting with the new rubber-cored ball was very difficult, to see first class players like Captain Hill, W. Mitchell, General Anderson, Y. Phelps unable to command the wee self-willed ball, which deviated on the slightest pretence from the straight line to the hole, was laughable.

The winners were Colonel Fenis and Mrs. Twinning, net score 53. Major McMahon and Mrs. Vanrennan second, with 56; the rest averaging 60. Both ladies dragged their partners through many difficulties.

The Horse.

THE ORIGIN OF THE ARAB HORSE.

ALL students of live stock husbandry and horse breeders who take more than a passing interest in their occupation must have experienced a strong feeling of surprise at the conclusions arrived at by Professor Ridgeway in his lecture delivered before the Cambridge Philosophical Society. In the first portion of his letter he states that the original horses of Europe were small—about ten hands high—and were unable to carry a man; they were used for war chariots. Had Professor Ridgeway made any enquiries he would have found that there is ample proof that among the pre-historic horses of Europe there were some races that were anything but the weedy ants he describes. One instance of this will be sufficient. At the station of Salutre, was Macon, where an enormous number of the remains of quartenary horses have been found; the size of the bones show that, though not standing high, they were stoutly-built animals, and the bones furnish plain indications that they were very muscular. A skeleton, minus the head, was set up from these bones by M. Toussaint, who presented it to the Museum of Natural History, Lyons. He expressed his opinion that the race to which it belonged approached closely to that at present existing in the Bresse. M Sanson supported this conclusion and stated his belief that the Belgian draught horse was a direct descendant of the horse of Salutre. All records of ancient history show that the horse was first used for draught. It was not till the time of Sargon, who is mentioned in the Bible, that horses were used for cavalry purposes. Professor Ridgeway's theory to account for the stripes in some races of horses by supposing that one of the ancestors was a zebra hybrid is, on the face of it, extremely unlikely. It is quite possible, nay, extremely probable, that some races of the horse are descended from a striped animal not necessarily a zebra. There are several striped races of the horse existing at the present day, but their habitat is far removed from the home of the zebras. There is a record of striped horses (1100 B.C.,) in Chinese literature, of which mention is made in a work by Captain Schlieben and they are again referred to in a record of 107 B.C. They inhabited a mountain country in Khokhand and were described as striped and as having the peculiarity of sweating blood. I have met with mention of this peculiarity in some Hungarian horses in the French Cavalry. There is a race of striped horses bred in the Kathiawar District, India. Many of the Burmese mountain ponies are striped, and there is a breed of striped ponies in Norway. All these striped breeds are dun or mouse coloured. Professor Ridgeway's statement that the Arab horse originated in Africa is, I believe, quite contrary to what is known of the subject. The Arab and the African horse have been declared to be two distinct races by all careful observers who have gone closely into the matter. In the first place their heads are entirely different. The Arab has a flat forehead with large prominent eyes and small ears, widely separated at the base. The African horse has a well-rounded forehead, the eye is of moderate size and is not prominent, and the ears are long and apt to droop. This horse has only five lumbar vertebræ, while all other horses have six, and the original type had no chestnuts or callosities on the hind leg. The two types differ considerably in form, the Arab having well-rounded limbs and ample muscles, while the African horse stands more on the leg, is not so well rounded on the rib, and is lighter in muscle. The peculiar features of the African horse, whose original home seems to have been in Nubia, were first made public in a memoir by Professor Sanson, addressed to the "Journal de E'Anatomie el de la Physiologie," May 1868. It was not necessary for any learned Professor to tell us that the Arab horse did not originate in Arabia. Every reader who takes an interest in the subject knows well that Arabia was almost, if not quite, a horseless country at the commencement of the Christian era. Even at the time of the Hegier (622 A.D.), Mahomet did not possess a single horse. The value of the horse in war was realised by him and he raised the care for the horse almost to a religious duty. That these two races of the horse were quite distinct in the most ancient times of which we have any record there is plenty of evidence. The types of the horse figured on the monuments of Assyria are all of the true Arab type to which M. Sanson has given the name of Asiatic. The horses of the Parthenon, sculptured by Phidias, are the highest type of the Arab. On the other hand the horses depicted on the monuments of Egypt are all of the African type. Formerly this horse was commonly met with throughout Northern Africa, but they have in a great part been modified by the Arab type. Even at the present day the almost pure type of the African race may be met with in the Dongola District of Nubia. That both races are represented in the English thoroughbred there is no doubt. The Godolphin Barb there is good reason to believe was of the African race, from the frequent recurrence of the type in his descendants. On the other hand the Darley Arabian was of the Asiatic type. It is an interesting fact connected with these ancestors of the English thoroughbred horse that the descendants of the Darby Arabian are the winners of nearly all the great races, while the descendants of the Godolphin Barb are gradually disappearing from the front rank of the Turf. In all countries the Asiatic type, or, as it is now called, the Arab is preferred to that of the African, both for beauty of form and for superior physical qualities. Those who take an interest in the origin of the Arab type of horse will obtain much valuable information on the subject from Pietreman's admirable work, "Les Chevan Dans les Temps Prehistoriques et Historiques." Whatever the origin of the Arab horse may be he certainly did not come from Africa.

BRUNI—in the Australasian.

Particulars of the mode of occurrence and removal of a carcase of the mammoth which had been discovered in 1901 in the province of Iakousk, in Siberia, are contributed with illustrations by M. L. Elbee (La Nature; May 23). The remains were half embedded in the snow and ice, and there were still preserved the eyes, the mouth, and even the stomach. Measurements showed that the animal was about 3 metres in length and 2 metres in height, and must have weighed about 1000 kg. The specimen has not yet been exhibited in public owing to the great difficulties experienced in preserving the skin.

The Oaks of 1838 resulted in a dead-heat. Governess and Gildermere were the pair the judge was unable to separate, and their respective owners decided the fillies should run t off.

As Governess returned to the paddock, somebody noticed a nasty-looking red streak across the frog of her near fore-foot, and soon it was rumoured Mr. Gratwicke's animal was hurt. Though the dead-heaters both went to the post, the scare, which had been confirmed by sundry bystanders, had the effect of making Governess the non-favourite. In the run off, Gildermere was never going easy, and Governess won without turning a hair, while the favourite finished in a manner that suggested staying was not altogether her forte.

Later on the mystery of the injured foot was solved. In galloping up the course the filly had somehow trodden on a fragment of dark-red cloth, which had wedged itself under the edge of her shoe, and had thus given rise to the report that she had met with an accident.

THE DANDY FIFTH.

ALTOGETHER English, excessively military, and by way of being rather comic is the play written by George R. Sims, set to music by Clarence C. Corri, yclept The Dandy Fifth, which the ever-energetic A. D. S. have presented to an indulgent Monsoon audience this season.

Bright, tuneful, and boasting some decidedly pretty musical numbers, well staged, mounted and exceedingly well dressed, we would go so far as to say this comic opera is quite the best thing staged by the Calcutta amateurs for some seasons. Many extra dances and songs have been introduced with good effect, and the whole went with a swing and verve that amateurs can so often supply even more effectually than first-class professionals; and which, though it may be very safely inferred to have been more than half imparted by vigorous applause and hearty encores from an appreciative audience, in no small way helped through the very excellent first performance of the season given by the Calcutta A. D. S. at the Opera House last Saturday.

Like the usual up-to-date "comic opera" so-called, The Dandy Fifth is not weighted with over much plot, story, or clever dialogue. Its attraction lies in its utterly inconsequent humorous situations, and all its grand opportunities for dance and song to which Mr. Zimmermann, (as Milligan) the lion comique of the evening responded bravely. Later on he was ably assisted by Mr. Mathew's clever impersonation of Mdme. Von Blitzen, (in spite of the rather trying falsetto) while Mr. W. B. Urmson as Trooper Brown, though slightly hampered by the cockney accent, was also extremely funny. Mrs. Anderson sang very sweetly as Kate Lorrimer, the wilful heroine, who wanders out disguised as a singing girl, and is promptly made love to by Dick Darvill (Mr. H. B. Mason). Mrs. Anderson wore in the first act a pretty frock, most artistic in colouring and design, though its one fault did not escape the critical eye of a poor male thing sitting next us. This, however, was such a minor one, it scarcely bears dwelling upon, and Dick Darvill may be well excused for his quick infatuation. In the second act the fancy ball gown, though of very costly materials, was not nearly so becoming, and we would almost say so elaborate as to be rather over-powering. This, however, could not prevent Kate Lorrimer's impersonation from being very evenly and charmingly played throughout. As Dick Darvill, the scion of good family who has enlisted in the Dandy Fifth, Mr. H. B. Mason had not very much to do, and did that little carefully and painstakingly and sang his songs well, but the rôle of "light lovier" would appear to be as heavily encumbered as ever even in comic opera and Dick Darvill seemed to the onlooker to take himself a bit seriously withal.

Mrs. Wakefield makes what the school-girl calls a "ripping" Polly, and was an immense favourite with the audience, who evidently appreciate clever and graceful dancing. Her acting was bright and vivacious, and her enunciation delightfully clear, if at times a trifle high pitched and rapid.

Mr. Webber, Dr. Bonwill and Mr. Horncastle do well in their respective small parts, and Mr. Whittle does all that can be done with the terribly heavy and utterly uninteresting character of sir Victor Vavasour the Yachtsman, for whom it is difficult, even in the charming inconsequence of comic opera, to find an excuse for a place in the cast.

The lady members of the chorus seemed to want still a little more drilling in their action than do the men; but all must be complimented, including their indefatigable conductor, on their volume and time, which is quite refreshingly good, and will bear much comparison with efforts in this direction last year.

Mr. Pulford would seem to have romanced a little with the scenery of Southsea, but then as we know "all's fair in love or war," and these two elements certainly abound in The Dandy Fifth! It is no small reflection of praise on the untiring efforts of the busy stage manager that by universal consent the entire show has been pronounced an unqualified success.

The Garden.

GARDENING IN MIDNAPUR.

CUCUMBER.—We are fortunate in Midnapur, nay, in Bengal, in having two different species of cucumbers, indigenous to the country, which may be divided into the hot weather and rainy season varieties. The for-mer is a small gourd-shaped cucuumber of a light green colour streaked with reddish stripes. The seeds of this variety are usually sown along river bank sand where the soil is more or less alluvial loam with a good admixture of sand. The seeds are sown from the middle of January to the end of the following month, and the cucumbers are in season during the hot months—from March to the beginning of June. The worst about these hot-weather cucumbers is, that a good many of them have a slightly bitterish taste. Plants bearing such fruits should at once be pulled out, for the good ones are very acceptable for salads and are the best kinds for pickling. I twice got seeds of these hot-weather cucumbers from Saharanpur, but the gourds they produced were so small and the plants bore so sparingly, that I had to give it up as a hopeless job; specially so as any number of these cucumbers could be had when in season for a pice a-piece. The rainy season variety of cucumbers and of which there are two different kinds viz., the green and white, may be had all through the rains and the beginning of the cold weather. The two different kinds are very much alike in shape and appearance; the only difference lies in the colour, which is either rice green striped with white, or pale lemon colour; the latter is said to be the more delicate and better flavoured of the two kinds, but personally I have found very little difference. Any ordinary garden soil enriched with manure will suit these cucumbers. The best time for sowing the seeds is from the first week in May to the end of August. These sowings should be made every three weeks, so as to ensure a succession of crops till well into November. Four to five seeds should be sown in each little circular bed. These beds should be about two feet in diameter and raised six inches or so above the surrounding ground. The seeds usually germinate on the fifth or sixth day, and when the seedlings have put out their fourth leaves they are very liable to be preyed upon by a specie of small red beetles, not very unlike lady birds. The best protection against these pests is to sprinkle over the plants with either finely sifted wood ashes or Keating's insect powder. When the plants are six to eight inches high, they should be trained on the frame works specially put up. These frame works or structures should be built on bamboo poles firmly inserted in the ground. The poles should be five to six feet in length and about the same distance apart; to the tops of the post transversed rods should be fastened and the climbing cucumber plants trained on the uprights and across the transversed rods until the whole is covered with a leafy screen and the fruits hang down beneath. These structures are distinctly temporary but they answer very well for the purpose. Cucumbers, if picked very young and when some four to five inches long, will not only be found to be very delicate, but if eaten, peel and all, will be found to have none of the indigestible after effects, which bar so many from enjoying these succulent vegetables, To those persons with whom raw or green cucumber salad does not agree, should have their cucumbers parboiled first; five minutes in boiling with a pinch of salt will be found ample and then sliced and dressed as usual.

Cucumbers besides being an almost indispensable adjunct to Mayonnaise sauce, is also very useful as a vegetable and can be made into a variety of paletable dishes, and much more of it should be made use of than at present; for cucumbers usually come into season when most other vegetables are scarce, and when our system more than ever require a greater amount of green food. Imported cucumbers rarely succeed in this country (at least in the plains) and are scarcely worth growing. I have tried both English and American seeds. The Giant Pera sent out without the former never grew to more than six inches, and the gourds were full of seeds and tasteless. Among the American seeds sent out now, there is a variety known as Floridas Pride which succeed fairly well out here, and if acclimatized seeds could be tried, the results I am sure would prove satisfactory. Two years' ago I put down seeds of this American cucumber, and out of a dozen plants that came up, only a couple bore some half a dozen fruits between them; these were eight to ten inches long, rather thin looking and of a deep green colour; in taste and flavour, I found them in no way superior to the cucumbers we get here in the rains, but acclimatization and proper cultivation may both improve the size and flavour of the fruits.

KNOL-KOHL, OR KOHL-RABI, Brassica oleracea, is a species of vegetable belonging to the cabbage tribe. Knol-Khol succeeds very well all over Bengal and as it endures heat better than most other imported esculent vegetables, it comes into season earlier. Any ordinary garden soil, thoroughly enriched with manure, specially with that containing the most nytrogen and phosphoric acid, is the best suited to it. For the earlier crops the seeds should be sown about the 15th July and the sowings should at first be protected from either too much sun or rain. When about four to five inches high, the plants should be put out in rows a foot or so apart, and they should be shaded from the sun for the first week or so, or till they have firmly taken root. Knol-kohl seedlings put out early in August should be fit to be taken up by the middle of October. These early kohl rabis should be cut when rather smaller than tennis balls; if allowed to get bigger, they will be found to be stringy and hard. A succession of sowings of this vegetable should be made from August to the end of January, and though it is one of the first to come into season it is also one of the last to go out. Liquid manure will be found very beneficial and should be freely made use of when the knol-kohls are forming as this will prevent them from getting hard and stringy. There are two varieties of this vegetable, the white and purple, both are very much alike in everything but colour, the purple kind is, however, the hardier of the two and comes into season earlier. Knol-kohl is one of the most delicate vegetables we have, if made use of when young and tender, for what one generally sees exposed for sale in the market, have usually been allowed to grow too big and are coarse and tasteless. Knol-khol when young and tender, cooked in boiling water, with the lid of the saucepan open and served with a nice white sauce are difficult to beat, and they are also excellent mashed up with fresh butter, pepper and salt and served on toast.

THE HORSE OF THE FUTURE.

THERE seems not to be the remotest doubt, with the increased ramifications of tramways and railways, coupled with the motor-car coming into universal use in towns and on highways, that the superior class of draught horses will soon be unneeded, hence it will no longer pay to breed them. Nor is the outlook in agriculture dissimilar. Already the plough, the reaper and binder, motor driven, are being rapidly adopted on large farms in England, while under the co-operative system the same is coming into vogue among the less affluent tillers of the soil. The present generation of what are termed "carriage folk" may still adhere to their handsome pairs for park purposes, while the toolers of four-in-hands will no doubt continue to disport their splendid teams till they themselves are laid on the shelf: but what view will the coming generation take of these matters? It is much to be feared that the pronounced Sybaritism of the present age will prevail as time goes on, and the pleasure of gliding along roads without exertion or clatter will assert itself. The recent cart horse shows at Islington and Regent's Park, from the fewer entrances and poorer attendance compared to former years, indicate which way the current is setting and the descendants of the grand Clevelands, Suffolk punches or ponderous Flemish mares are doomed to gradual extinction, hereinafter only to be seen in private parks as representatives of bygone races much the same as the remnant of the ancient indigenous British cattle is only now to be seen at Chillingham, or the Bison of the boundless praries at Yellowstone Park. That riding horses will survive for many a long year we are firmly convinced, for though the bike is part of our daily life now, the inborn sympathy existing among even our little dots of either sex for their first live geegee will take years to obliterate, so that we may reasonably hope for a continuance of that progression that begins with the sheltie or "neddy" in the early teens, up to the fourteen hand hack or hunter, that pinnacle of ambition of advanced youth and budding manhood.

We believe the horse of the future or at least in our time will be confined entirely to saddle nags either for private use or military purposes. The light field guns of long range do not now require the stout though lumbering artillery horses of even a dozen years ago, and the Boer campaign demonstrated that the days for heavy cavalry had passed, so that breeders will have to devote their attention to the production of light active animals in which moderate speedand great endurance must be the main considerations. The racehorse we are not here concerned with; he stands apart on a platform entirely his own. Home breeders acknowledge what we here indicate—the necessity of increased attention being given to the hack and hunter class.

Out here within the last few years importers have inclined the same way, the nags brought up from the colonies being far less heavily built than was previously the rule, and though for police and ordnance work the larger beasts may still continue in moderate demand, the bulk of our military requirements will be limited to the height of riding cobs and polo ponies. A recent newspaper article pointed out that each successive invasion of India had been accomplished by cavalry; while we have but to go back a hundred and fifty years for confirmation of the fact that it was horsemen who swept all before them in the ceaseless wars between the rival chiefs of

Already the plough, the reaper and binder, motor driven, are being rapidly adopted on large farms in England, while under the co-operative system the same is coming into vogue among the less affluent tillers of the soil. The present generation of what are termed "carriage folk" may still adhere to their handsome pairs for park purposes, while the toolers of four-in-hands will no doubt continue to disport their splendid teams till they themselves are laid on the shelf: but what view will the coming generation take of these matters? It is much to be feared that the pronounced Sybaritism of the present age will prevail as time goes on, and the pleasure of gliding along roads without exertion or clatter will assert itself. The recent cart horse shows at Islington and Regent's Park, from the fewer entrances and poorer attendance compared to former years, indicate which way the current is setting and the descendants of the grand Clevelands, Suffolk punches or ponderous Flemish mares are doomed to gradual extinction, hereinafter only to be seen in private parks as representatives of bygone races much the same as the remnant of the ancient indigenous British cattle is only now to be seen at Chillingham, or the Bison of the boundless praries at Yellowstone Park. That riding horses will survive for many a long year we are firmly convinced, for though the bike is part of our daily life now, the inborn sympathy existing among even our little dots of either sex for their first live geegee will take years to obliterate, so that we may reasonably hope for a continuance of that progression that begins with the sheltie or "neddy" in the early teens, up to the fourteen hand hack or hunter, that pinnacle of ambition of advanced youth and budding manhood.

We believe the horse of the future or at least in our time will be confined entirely to saddle nags either for private use or military purposes. The light field guns of long range do not now require the stout though lumbering artillery horses of even a dozen years ago, and the Boer campaign demonstrated that the days for heavy cavalry had passed, so that breeders will have to devote their attention to the production of light active animals in which moderate speed and great endurance must be the main considerations. The racehorse we are not here concerned with; he stands apart on a platform entirely his own. Home breeders acknowledge what we here indicate—the necessity of increased attention being given to the hack and hunter class.

Out here within the last few years importers have inclined the same way, the nags brought up from the colonies being far less heavily built than was previously the rule, and though for police and ordnance work the larger beasts may still continue in moderate demand, the bulk of our military requirements will be limited to the height of riding cobs and polo ponies. A recent newspaper article pointed out that each successive invasion of India had been accomplished by cavalry; while we have but to go back a hundred and fifty years for confirmation of the fact that it was horsemen who swept all before them in the ceaseless wars between the rival chiefs of the country, the mounts of each approximating the size and height of those now so much in favour. This being admitted, we hope the recently allotted 47,000 acres for breeding purposes to ex-cavalry pensioners on the Jhelum canal tracts will be entirely devoted for the propagation of this class of horse, and in a few years we ought to have the same stamp of stud that Alexander requisitioned in his march through Central Asia and with which later on Ghengiz Khan swept the plains of Upper India; or those that periodically raided Bengal, ridden by the robbers from the Mahrata States. Existing Government studs are fully capable of supplying all horses for guns or ceremonial purposes, so that subsidised or independent stock farmers should be encouraged to strive mainly to turn out the fourteen-hand animals experience indicates to be the kind now and likely, in the near future, to be most in request.

We have treated in former issues of what animals may be needed either for baggage or riding in our more rugged districts, indicating the kind of stock most suitable for military service therein, and we venture to opine that breeders will best consult their own interests and those of the State by confining themselves to what was then recommended. Whatever may happen in Europe, or other elaborately roaded lands to lead to the practical extinction of the horse, in India at all events, he'll hold his own, outside the towns, for many years to come, and though the motor invasion may be felt, we trust its appearance will not cause intending breeders to lose heart, under the impression that horse breeding no longer holds out the same profitable inducements as formerly.

FOOTBALL IN CALCUTTA.

(Contributed.)

IT occurs to me that, Mr. Editor, you might possibly welcome a few reflections upon football from one whose point of view seldom or never finds an advocate in the press nowadays. I therefore take advantage of a leisure which rarely comes my way to give vent to certain considerations that you may find of interest.

In the first place it would be well to explain that I write of Association football alone. It would be well, too, perhaps, to preface my remarks by saying that I have been actively connected with football almost without cessation for over 30 years. I played first-class footer when professionalism was not recognised, but had begun to appear thinly veiled by the bar of the public house and the counter of the tobacconist's shop. The Canny Scot was only crossing the border singly in those days to pick up soft billets in the wealthy manufacturing districts of Northern England, and when I left school, school ethics and school enthusiasm could still find a fitting place in local football. Football in short was still a game and not a spectacle. That ancient Saxon word "friendly" had not been tortured into a horrid technical expression, and when Timbuctoo played the neighbouring town of Otaheite, Timbuctootans met Otaheitans. The teams were not half Laplanders and Kamskatchans. But since those days football has almost ceased to be a game. It has often been likened to a gladiatorial display, and rightly so. The demand for a finished spectacle has killed local enthusiasm, and nowadays your first class local team is an institution much on a par with the corps de ballet of any Theatre Royal. —agile, muscular, high kicking, combining with machinelike precision and all the time playing to the gallery! When it comes to a contest what is the player but a paid servant who must provide a spectacle and win his supporters' bets if he can? This is not an exaggerated picture of English football at the present time and we are beginning to suffer in Calcutta from the evils of the system. We have our League; Cup ties ridiculous in name and number. We distinguish between friendy games and "League matches" with all the idiotic additions of the home sporting press, and we criticise Referees and Club executives as though they were the Managers and Directors of some Limited concern such as exploits and trains football gladiators in England, and with what result? We are rapidly converting the game here, too, into a spectacle. The players are more and more sacrificed to the spectators. Professionals and professional style are exalted, and there is less and less room for the man who desires to play football for its own sake as in England; so here the public school-boy is deserting the game and its ethics suffer accordingly. Any one aware of the references to the I. F. A., which arise out of League and Cup contests, would at once admit my proposition. Indulgence in abuse, actual fighting and other breaches of the manners of the true sportsman are all too common, and these bad examples affect the Hindu and Mahomedan teams. The English professional style grafted upon a Bengalee stem produces strange fruit and the resulting modification of British head punching and British language is no less distasteful to the real enthusiast even though he be only a philosophic admirer of the ingenuity and subtlety which the natives of these parts display in the process. As to the exaltation of professionalism it is patent to all. One need only read the profuse effusions of a daily contemporary of yours who devotes much space to football, Mr. Editor, to see the tendency of the press in this direction and that professionalism succeeds in winning matches is shewn by results. As there is no such person as a professional football player in India, you may wonder what I am driving at. Well I am approaching dangerous ground perhaps and possibly some of your readers may not agree with my view that regimental teams, if not exactly professional, represent, in India, professionalism. In efficiency they are professional and in their methods, but whilst second class in both they bring with them most of the tricks of the trade. The British Officer does not figure in the team and is no longer, so far as one can see, concerned in its affairs. The Regiment comes along to back its team and howl at any Referee who displeases it, and speaking generally fairly reproduces the home-made article. Well-balanced mediocrity, coupled with physical fitness, sweeps the board of "the pots" spectators yell, and the press sings exaggerated pœans. Hence the exaltation of professionalism, and the consequent gradual disappearance of the amateur with individuality, who can play decent football, keep his mouth shut, and obey the Referee cheerfully and without sarcasm. I fear that having regard to the position of affairs in England, the unfortunate course that football has taken in Calcutta cannot now be stayed, but if I had my way the League would be abolished. I would re-establish the despised "friendly" game. In short I would encourage players en masse instead of spectators en masse, encourage the game, and cease to compete with the corps de ballet.

Performances and Engagements of the Winner.

And Patrick, bred by his owner, made his first public appearance in the Imperial Produce Stakes at Kempton Park October Meeting, 1901, which he won from Royal Lancer by a head, and at the Newmarket Second October Meeting the colt captured the Clearwell Stakes by a neck from Abeyance filly, third place being secured by Royal Lancer. In the Dewhurst Plate at the Newmarket Houghton Meeting he ran second to Game Chick, being beaten by a neck, which concluded his two-year-old career. Last season the colt ran third to Sceptre and Pistol in the Two Thousand Guineas, was placed second to Royal Ivy in the May Three-Year-Old Plate at Kempton Park, and at the Newmarket Second Spring Meeting finished first in the Newmarket Stakes, but was disqualified for bumping, the race being awarded to Fowling Piece. Next time out, however, Ard Patrick won the Blue Riband of the Turf, being followed home by Rising Glass and Friar Tuck. He followed this victory up by taking the Prince of Wales's Stakes, Ascot, Perseus being second and Cheers third, subsequently running third to Rising Glass and Templemore in the Jockey Club Stakes, Newmarket First October Meeting. The colt had not run this season prior to the Princes of Wales's Stakes when he won as described in our telegram of 4th July. Ard Patrick is entered in the Jockey Club Stakes, Newmarket First October; and the Champion Stakes, Second October Meeting.

Meanwhile he has been sold to Count Lehndorff for twenty thousand guineas.

Sporting Notes.

THE Calcutta course was open on Saturday morning and a fair amount of half and three-quarter speed work was given. Springlock and Loch Arden went a five-furlong spin, both looking well, and the former moving in rare form. Loch Maree and Royal Artillery and another brown entire of Mr. Galstaun's went a spin together with Trollop. The last-named was palpably in distress a furlong from home and it looks doubtful if his wind will allow him to do any good in future.

Kellnerin, Corrick, and Actress were also sent five furlongs at a useful pace. Gerard's string were all moving along at half and three-quarter pace, and of Mr. Bell-Irving's lot, Metalwing and Warrigal were the only two to go fast work.

Of the jumpers, Mulwalla (Smallman), High Tide (Hard), and an unnamed chestnut of Mr. Galstaun's went a mile over the pony hurdles. The chestnut is a real nice lepper and moves as though he could gallop as well as jump. Mulwalla was jumping very sticky and High Tide's performance was not by any means a finished one.

Naiades (owner) and Bushey (Mr. Raban) also went a mile over the sticks at half speed. The Captain, accompanied by the black pony as before and also by a Grey Arab, went a school. The Captain is a very slippy jumper and wastes no time at them, but we shall not be surprised to see him clouting them a bit hard when it comes to racing. Kittylea went round the course alone, jumping like a book and apparently pulling hard all the way.

On Tuesday morning not much was doing on the Calcutta course. Naiades (owner) and Bushey (Mr. Raban) went a half-speed school over a mile. Loch Arden (Smallman) was also schooled over four flights, jumping, it appeared, a little reluctantly, at least Smallman seemed to have to shove him at them a bit. One or two of Wishart's string did some half-speed work on the flat as did also several of Mr. Galstaun's. Mulwala went a useful seven-furlong gallop, moving in grand form. Yuletide went six furlongs three-quarter pace, the rest of Mr. Bell-Irving's string being at slow work.

The dates of the Karachi autumn races have been fixed for the 3rd, 5th and 7th November entries closing on the 20th September, 17th October and 24th October.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—"The gentle dew from heaven," referred to by the immortal Baconspeare falleth in the most sealed sample fashion and everyone, I opine, is pleased, except possibly the official weather prophet whose lugubrious croakings have been gainproved. The life of an official weather-warner has always struck me as an enviable one. If his prognostication (by some fortuitous chain of circumstances) happens to come right he can strut about and make himself bumptiously objectionable, and in the ninety and nine per cent. instances of miscalculation—well, he still draws his monthly emoluments, and sets about further references to "fair to cloudy" and wind currents.

Racing men must pour benedictions on the heads of Mr. Cecil Gray and the Turf Club executive for the forethought which provided the inner sand track. How great a boon it is one scarcely appreciates till a heavy downpour comes when the litter track becomes a slough of despond and the sand remains admirable going and in spite of the continuous heavy rain, Trainers who were anxious to shove along candidates for the first day's extra racing on the 25th instant have been able to put in a lot of strong work which in former years would have been impossible.

Even race horses are "kittle cattle." That fine looking English importation Presbyterian is I believe of a disposition far from being as solemn and sedate as his religious nomenclature would imply. He is indeed a bit of a tiger, and more than once on my bicycle peregrinations I have seen him when ridden at evening walking exercise, followed by a native attendant with a driving whip, while the handsome chestnut "passed the time of day" to passing vehicles by roaring like a tiger at them. In the face of this disposition the following incident which my tame tout vouches for is interesting. The other morning while at exercise on the course and ridden by the jockey Hoyt it was seen from the grand stand that there was a difference of opinion between horse and horseman about the nine-furlong post. It appears that for some reason best known to his own subtle mind Presbyterian sat on the rails and remained in that position so long that Hoyt, fearing he had got his hind leg over, dismounted. His syce seeing the difficulty ran up, made a grab at the reins, and, with the fiendish ingenuity of the Aryan brother succeeded in pulling the bridle clean off leaving the ferocious tiger wholly without means of control with horses passing him at every moment. What the feelings of owner and trainer must have been at that moment can readily be imagined. Presbyterian instead of running amok as one might well have expected trotted along the course to the six-furlong post, when he changed his aristocratic mind and began grazing on the grass track. Overtaken by a trembling syce he intimated that it was not his lordly pleasure to be "led into captivity captive" just then and trotted back along the verdant sward (skipping demurely over the ropes placed at intervals as a hint to keep off the grass) till he reached the enclosures taking absolutely no notice of all the horses who passed him in all innocence, and having shown his shapely form to the denizens of the grand stand, allowed himself to be surrounded and captured without demur. When one considers the appalling mischief that might have been caused by a high strung, not too sweet tempered English stallion, one can only—while wondering—be thankful that the incident had so harmless an ending.

The Arab steed is certainly a rum little devil. Over rough ground at pigsticking speed, probably the most sure-footed of the equine race, my tout tells me that in one morning on the course he saw no less than two go head over heels for no other reason than that they were going slow and consequently with characteristic carelessness half asleep or too lazy to lift their feet. Luckily no harm was done, though with big horses thundering along behind a nasty accident might easily occur.

Wheresoever the carcase is there will the eagles be gathered together. The ever-popular Jimmy Robinson has arrived from "down there" and prefers the balmy zephyrs of the East to his colonial cold I believe and is already hard at work on the course. Hoyt is here, with a younger brother. So are Cowell, Ivemy, little Melsom, Mr. Bass's private jockey who has already I see caught the judges' eye more than once at Mysore (and I believe there was more than one eye looking out of that box!) and others and no doubt after the Bangalore meeting other distinguished artists will appear on the scene to witch the Poona world with noble horsemanship.

I see that the Poona Gymkhana Amateur Dramatic Club (it requires elocutionary powers to tackle the title) propose treating us to My Friend the Prince early in August. People here still talk of the good old days when Major Hobday and his marvellously well stage-managed company charmed everyone with his clever burlesques and the general idea seems to be that no later effort has approached those performances. But present Poona talent may possibly electrify us.

A Sydney paper writes:—"Racing men in Australia, where the starting machine is so successfully used, find it hard to understand how starters in England contrive to make such a mess of the business of despatching fields by aid of the barrier. The prejudice against it is still alive, and is evidently going to die hard. With the Jockey Club determined to stand by the machine, however, there may yet be hope for it to get a fair chance of convincing the English folk all round of its undoubted value.

We invite the attention of those interested in the Lucknow Autumn Meeting to the addition to the conditions of the Oudh Steeplechase on the first day as advertised in our Turf columns.

Our readers are reminded that first entries for the Meerut Autumn Meeting close on the 1st August.

The able management of the Annandale Gymkhana Club, Simla, has enabled the Committee to pay off the loan raised three years ago for the water supply and carrying out of the great improvements effected in the course.

Additional interest was lent to the Spring Regatta in Kobe, writes our correspondent, by a series of Interport events, Yokohama having sent down men to compete. In the race for four oars, there was an exciting incident, which has caused a considerable amount of comment in the local newspapers. The Kobe boat, when about half the distance had been covered, came into collision with a Japanese fishing boat, manned by a large crew, and having their rudder carried away, were put out of the race. At the time of the occurrence the visiting crew was leading, and from all accounts had the race well in hand. The Yokohama cox, on seeing the fishing boat coming along rapidly at right angles to the course, made a considerable detour, and avoided the danger, but the Kobe boat carried more or less straight on, possibly on the off chance that they would gain a bit on the leaders. It has since transpired that the fishing boat deliberately tried to run down the racers, owing to some dispute with the Kobe Rowing Club, and under the circumstances there was some talk of the poor spirited behaviour of the Yokohama captain, who refused to row it over again, as some of his men had to row again the same afternoon in other events. A heated newspaper controversy was brought to a close by the Kobe Committee eventually publishing a letter disclaiming any sympathy with the Kobe partisans who thought that the losing crew should not stand by the fortune of war.

The pair oars were won by Yokohama by two lengths, and the double sculls by a greater margin. A series of three sailing races resulted in Kobe's favour, Yokohama only winning one. In these races sailing boats of one design were used, with a toss for choice. The boats were of a type not familiar to the Yokohama representatives, and they deserved credit for winning even one out of the three races. The return sailing match is to be decided in Yokohama shortly, two of the Yokohama yachts being used—sister boats.

In baseball the Yokohama team were recently very badly drubbed by a team from one of the Japanese schools. In fact the students simply romped rings round the foreigners. Baseball is a game for which the Japanese youth is very well suited, but on this occasion surprisingly good form was shown.

The Yokohama Athletic Sports came off under the disadvantage of nasty wet weather, which interfered considerably with the running and jumping. One local record was broken, however, in throwing the cricket ball, when 114 yards, 1 foot and 8 inches was credited to the winner.

Considerable activity is being shown by the ships of the British and American Fleet in port at Yokohama, and their oarsmen are practising industriously, evidently with a view to some International matches. Matches between the crack crews of the different ships on the station provoke great interest, and the bets over even a dinghy race sometimes aggregate an enormous sum.

Many people in Calcutta will have received with regret the news of the sudden and sad death of Mr. F. P. Dunne, well known in racing cirles as "Mr. Prendergast," in the front rank as a G. R. and a popular personality everywhere. He died of heart failure at Marseilles on his way home in search of that restoration to health which, poor fellow, was denied him.

Mr. J. Buckingham, of Assam, draws attention to the wholesale mobbing of game during the floods in his district. Pent up on isolated churs or teelahs deer are slaughtered merely for the sake of their hides, and as no discrimination is exercised as regards sex, many unweaned fawns deprived of their dams slowly starve to death. In a non-regulation province, where the executive is not hampered by a council, a simple ukase from the Chief Commissioner would put a stop to this ruthless extermination.

Captain Bayley, Adjutant of the Ceylon Volunteers, being more than usually interested in the shooting of his corps, is bringing over a team of Ceylon marksmen to compete with their brothers in arms in India at some of our meetings. We wish them luck.

The Poona Junior Polo Tournament will take place at Poona or Kirkee between the 15th and 31st August, entries closing on the 1st idem.

In our last issue we gave the reply of Lord Cranborne to Sir H. Seton-Karr on the subject of the preservation of big game in Africa, but this information has since been supplemented by Mr. Chamberlain from the Colonial Office. He says:—"The parts of Africa under the control of the Colonial Office which come within the zone defined by Article I. of the Convention for the preservation of wild animals, birds, and fish in Africa of May 19, 1900, are the British Colonies and Protectorates in West Africa and North-Western Rhodesia. Regulations for the preservation of wild animals have been brought into force in the Colony and Protectorate of Sierra Leone, in the Colonies of the Gold Coast and Ashanti, in the northern territories of the Gold Coast, and in the Protectorates of Southern and Northern Nigeria. In the other West African Colonies or Protectorates regulations are in preparation, and will be brought into force very shortly. In Southern Nigeria, by Order 8 of 1901, made under proclamation, the killing of young elephants and the possession and sale of any tusk weighing less than ten pounds is prohibited, under a penalty not exceeding £50 fine, or a term of imprisonment not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour, and in Northern Nigeria the proclamation of 1901 contains a provision to the same effect. The regulations which are in force at the present time in the other Colonies and Protectorates mentioned above contain no provisions for the prohibition or regulation of the export of elephant tusks under ten pounds (the weight specified by the Convention) in weight. No game reserves have been formed in any part of Bri-

We, in common with others, says The Field, have long lamented that so little attention is paid in England to any kind of riding other than mere "sticking on." The usual riding school curriculum goes no higher than providing a stud of quiet horses and sending a pupil round and round the school at the different paces. Doubtless many a riding master would like to do more, but his pupils give him no chance. They do not want school riding, nor do the majority care to run the risk of tumbling off when trying to accomplish some feat. As soon as they can ride with some confidence they forsake the school for the road, when but a quarter instructed. When the Imperial Yeomanry were being raised a number of them practised at Savigear's riding school, Earl's Court, where the system of teaching proceeds somewhat on military lines. The candidates are asked to do a good deal more than merely ride round the school in ordinary fashion. There was a programme of eight events, and to perform them some activity and skill are required. One often sees in the hunting field how difficult men find it to mount their horses, but it does not involve much time or trouble to learn to mount without stirrups, while if the horse move off it makes the mounting all the easier. Then there are many men who, should they lose a stirrup, can only recover it by stooping down and guiding the leather with the hand, whereas by merely turning in the toe and striking the bar, thus causing the stirrup iron to swing, the foot is placed in it directly. If some riding competitions for civilians could be arranged at some of the schools a great deal would be done to further the art of horsemanship.

With sincere regret we received the announcement last Monday evening of the tragic death of Mr. William Gorrie, who was connected with the insurance business of Messrs. Balmer Lawrie and Company of Calcutta. Poor Gorrie's mind seems to have been unhinged over some sudden and terrible trouble and as a result he shot himself.

Our Poona tout writes :—When writing last week I said Mr. Percy Fischer was not able to take any of his horses to Bangalore, but when he got down to the spot he studied the entries and opining that some of his ponies, even though not tuned up fully, were good enough to meet the company they would be asked to run against, wired for them, and he was rewarded with a fair meed of success, both good old Governor—honest servant—and Key West doing his colours credit. This invasion of Bangalore took Fowler, the trainer, away from Poona, and "Mr. A. W. P." has for the nonce had to be his own trainer. He has been sending his many candidates along at a fair bat lately, which betokens their early appearance. Considering that the stable went down to the Deccan capital rather late, I must say that he has got some of the string sharpened up wonderfully. Fitzeros is not so ructious as he was last season, when many a morning as I cantered on the rides I was joined by Stonhill on Fitzeros. They never kept me company for more than a few minutes, Fitz bucketting and pulling all over the shop, while Stonhill in gasps between bumps explained that the "ole 'oss was getting as quiet as a sheep." Fando, Free Trade, and one or two Arabs of Mr. A. W. P.'s string are quite readied and will appear at the introductory Extras.

Presbyterian is giving Bleach no end of trouble of mind. His performances on the Poona track have been the subject of remarks from all those who have seen his exhibitions of temper and his violent dislike for work. There was some disinclination to refer to Presbyterian's antics, but the fat is now in the fire, a rather amusing account of his latest escapade having appeared in the Bombay evening daily. Presbyterian has a temper, he hates the track, and only the liberal administration of a stock whip will at times induce him to go on to the track to do his work. The first time the performance of persuading the chestnut to go on the course was witnessed by me, I thought he was a circus horse and that the ring-master's whip was the next best substitute to the brass band to put him in a good humour. The other morning he had a very bad pain in his temper and somehow got his leg over the rails, and then in the confusion which followed his bridle was pulled off and he got loose. Many things happen to runaway horses, but by good luck he was soon recaptured without any harm being done. He has summered well, but there'll be the devil to pay when he has to line up to the barrier without the companion who has to lead him in work, and the horses which draw numbers near him will have to dodge his heels or be wrecked. It's a pity that he is not sweeter tempered.

Byramji is back and is shoving Milos and others of his string along. Indabba does his work before the lark rises, and some say long even before the cock crows. He has quite recovered from his measuring trials and will give some of us eye-openers when he comes out. I guess he can make even the horses gallop out here, as indeed he did "down under," and among the ponies, even of the first flight this season, he will prove his calibre. Byramji has a useful lot and is entering several for the First Extra.

There was likely to have been a dissolution of partnership in the stable for which Kendall trains, but happily that contingency has now been removed. It would have been a thousand pities if a stable so strong in all classes were broken up or divided. Cowell has received the jacket of these owners and has been back a week and riding the string at work. Omarkhan, who was the jockey to the stable for two seasons, is now with Byramji. Kendall's stable has a very strong hand in the Arab class and some of the untried ones are said to give promise of greatness. One thing is certain, and that is, with Hyderi and Bay Middleton to get a line through, they can back the new ones when they appear with no uncertain mind. I note, by the way, that the nomenclature of "Foxes" has now given place to "Flying"—Flying Childers, Flying Dutchman, etc. The Fox family was really growing a bit perplexing.

Tingey has his string well up to the mark, those owned by Messrs. G. K. and D. D. and Mr. Baldock having done well under his care. Clarke's too are to be seen doing good honest work, while Aga Shah's lot are quite prepared to commence the annual programme. The other trainers are all busy, and when Jack Scott, Dignum, Watson, and perhaps Taylor are all assembled in Poona, wont the course be a busy scene of a morning ?

Captain Randall, 3rd Madras Lancers, intends staying the whole season in Poona, and as he has some really useful ones, notably the English roan, Dr. Barnardo, he ought to have a good time. He is a keen rider and is sure to ride many of his own when the weights suit him. He will bring up besides his own lot several other Bangalore horses including, I believe, Barefoot.

Charles Mogridge, the jockey, was drowned last Tuesday evening in the Serpentine Tank on the Calcutta maidan. He was swimming his horse across when he seems to have let go and gone under.

BEHAR NOTES.

Captain Stevens, the Civil Surgeon in Mozufferpore, is down with enteric fever, and is reported to be seriously ill. He is son of the Hon. Mr. C. C. Stevens, who acted for a short time as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and has only been a short time in the station ; but both he and his wife have made themselves universal favourites, and it is hoped he will make a speedy recovery.

Mrs. D. MacLeod, of Begum Serai Factory, was ill with cholera a short time ago ; but has quite recovered again. It was incorrectly reported in a Calcutta newspaper that Mr. MacLeod was ill ; which was not the case.

The drought in Behar is becoming extremely serious. It is a great grain centre, and Tirhoot, Chumparun, and Sarun are very thickly populated, and their only support is their crops. The moonsoons have, up to date, been a complete failure ; the consequence is that in several parts of Tirhoot the paddy has not been planted out yet ; and the crops sown, such as murewah, etc., are drying up ; the outlook for the future unless general rain fall, is very serious. The produce in mahai is reported to be good ; but the indigo crop is both burnt, and small in the district and the factories in South Tirhoot, I am afraid, will do very badly. There was an extraordinary rainfall in this part of the district on the night of the 11th instant, which must have been a "cloud burst ;" this is about the only rain we have seen here for some time. Tegra Factory measured over 10 inches ; Dalsingh Serai Factory 8½ inches, Muniarpore 7 inches, Kalyanpore 5 inches Mhow Factory 5 inches, Gungowlie Factory 3 inches. To the North of Dalsingh Serai Factory there was little or no rain, and also to the west of Muniarpore Factory, while to the south of Tegra and Mhow the rain fall was slight.

There was a small "stick" at Nundnie Factory a few days ago, and one pig was killed.

There is to be a meet in Mozufferpore about August, and the residents in the station are already sending out their invitations.

Athletic Notes.

CALCUTTA Rugby football players may be interested to hear of the recent arrival of Mr. E. Martelli, a player who has made his mark at home and who not long ago was a member of the English fifteen who toured in Australia. He plays in the back division and brings with him the reputation of being a brilliant three-quarters. We trust to have an opportunity of seeing something of his form this season.

The I. F. A. Shield competition is now in full swing as per details in our Football columns. The Royal Irish Rifles will be down to-day and will meet the 93rd Highlanders in the second round on Saturday when a good game should be witnessed.

The Annual General Meeting of the Calcutta Rowing Club was held at the Strand Road boat-house last Thursday evening, Mr. F. E. H. Power occupying the chair. The statement of accounts for the year were passed and the date of the termination of the financial year was altered from the 30th June to the 31st December. The voting for office-bearers for the current season resulted in the re-election of the gentlemen who were on the Committee last year, with the addition of Mr. L. Bagshawe, who fills the vacancy caused by the retirement of Mr. Graves, now at home on leave.

The hot weather regatta of the Madras Boat Club promises to be a success. There will be Senior and Junior Pair Oars and Sculls, and four crews are in for the Club Fours Cup as under.—

There has been a a walking match at Lucknow in which 18 members of the Trades tramped from Bara Banki to Lucknow, 17½ miles. We had not our special representative out on this occasion, but we read that the first five miles was covered in 1 hour 35secs., the next five in 1 hour 40 mins., and the remaining 7½ miles in 2 hours 40 mins. The 17½ miles in 5hrs. 20mins. 35secs. We call this a crawl. The winner. Mr. H. W. Puckeridge of Messrs. Murray and Co., received a cup valued Rs. 200. Walking in Lucknow must be a very different thing to what is considered walking in Calcutta and elsewhere.

The Baboos of the Import and Export Department of Messrs. Gillanders Arbuthnot and Co., brought off their walk from Titaghur last Saturday. They were unlucky in having rain during some part of the journey. Babu Jotish Chunder Bannerjee, of the Export Department, was the first man in, covering the 13 miles in 3hrs 5mins.

"John Peel" is evidently a rabid anti-motorist; he writes to the Pink 'Un :—

"As to the motorist, the only capable means of dealing with this plague seems to be for the long-suffering and over-patient public to pay these inconsiderate law-breakers with their own coin. Comparing the number who have taken to this luxurious pleasure with that of any other pastime, there never was such a huge proportion of wrong 'uns. No other class has caused such a howl of indignation to rise throughout the country as they. It has almost become a cry for vengeance, and it is about time that those of us who do not wish to be maimed or killed should go about armed, and, if necessary, shoot into a few of the murderous miscreants who defile our roads and render other means of travelling a danger. Short of making them have a judicious fear of retaliation, it seems hopeless to expect decent or fair conduct from this class of travellers."

We have to acknowledge receipt of a copy of the first number of a new journalistic venture yclept The Scotch Advertiser, a weekly newspaper, to which we extend a cordial welcome while we wish it every success. We are told that the Scotch Advertiser "has been started with a twofold purpose, firstly, to form the nucleus of a Scotch paper which, it is hoped, may become the recognized representative organ of the Scotch community in India; secondly, to provide an advertising medium wherein merchants and traders can have their wishes carefully carried out in the matter of effective and well-displayed advertisements.

"As a weekly paper for our fellow-countrymen, we will endeavour to make it a link between India and the Auld Country, as well as a journal of the doings of Scotchmen throughout India and for this purpose we shall welcome communications from each Presidency. It is our ambition to make the Scotch Advertiser a sort of rallying point for Scotchmen in this country and we trust, through the traditional spirit of 'clannishness,' to attain this object."

We trust the projectors of the journal will find their hopes fully realised.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—Rain has been falling in Bombay practically the whole of the past week, and consequently both cricket and football have been considerably interfered with. In connexion with the Harwood Association Football League, five matches were down for decision, but a couple of these have been postponed, while two out of the three played may well be described as "mudlarks." The only match played under anything approaching favourable conditions was that decided on Monday evening, when the Bombay Gymkhana met the Telegraph Recreation Club, and then it was raining practically the whole of the second half. From start to finish the Gymkhana were almost continuously on the attack, and ran out winners by five goals to nil. As on previous occasions, however, they were weak in front of goal, a remark which more particularly applies to the first half. Time after time they had splendid chances of scoring, but they were not turned to good account, Carnegie, their centre forward, being decidedly weak. The Gymkhana crossed over at half-time with a lead of one goal to nil. In the second moiety Carnegie was put at half, while Bromley went centre forward. As a result the play of the Gymkhana forward line was considerably improved, and they put on four more goals, eventually leaving the field victorious by five goals to nil. The Telegraph team played pluckily throughout, and on one or two occasions came very near scoring, but it was only the erratic shooting of their opponents, in the first half of the game, that saved them from a much bigger defeat. On Wednesday evening the Telegraph made their sixth appearance in connexion with the League and suffered their fifth defeat, this time at the hands of the Rovers. The ground was in a fearful state, and anything like accurate play was out of the question. The third match played was between the North Staffords "A" team and the Rovers, when, despite the swampy condition of the ground, a fair game was witnessed. The soldiers had the best of the opening stages, and soon obtained a lead of a couple of goals. After this the Rovers played up strongly, and eventually drew level. Towards the close, however, the Military players once more found the net, and ran out winners by three goals to two.

I have been asked to call attention to the Bombay Rovers Association Football Tournament (the fourteenth), which has been fixed for 11th September and following dates. This tournament, which is open to all teams from India, Burma, and Ceylon, is one of the most popular events of the year, and has been steadily growing in popularity both among players and spectators. The winners will be entitled to hold the Rovers' Silver Challenge Cup (value £70) for twelve months, returning it in time for next season's competition, and in addition, a gold medal will be presented to each member of the winning team, and silver medals to the runners-up. The rules of the Bombay Rovers Football Tournament will be observed, and copies of the same will be supplied to all competing teams. Entries close on the 5th September, and the ties will be drawn two days later, when all teams entering are entitled to have a representative present. As on the occasion of the last tournament, the secretarial duties are again being carried out by Mr. F. Hogan, to whom all communications should be addressed. The tournament was first held in 1890, and has been won each year as follows:—

1890. Worcester Regiment Band Team.
1892. Worcester Regiment.
1893. Lancashire Fusiliers.
1894. Royal Scots.
1895. Royal Scots.
1896. Durham Light Infantry.
1897. Middlesex Regiment.
1898. Highland Light Infantry.
1899 Royal Irish Regiment.
1900. Black Watch.
1901. Royal Irish Rifles.
1902. Cheshire Regiment.

From the above it will be observed that the tournament has always been won by a Military team.

Very little interest seems to be taken in polo in Bombay, and only a few men turn out for the games which are played twice a week. Something is wanted to revive interest in the game, and I am glad to learn that an effort is being made to hold a tournament this year. The last one took place in 1901, when the competing teams were Ulwar, Golconda, 20th Hussars, and the local Gymkhana. Despite this small entry very considerable interest was evinced, and there was very general expression of opinion in favour of its being made an annual fixture. For some reason or another however—for the moment I don't remember what it was—no tournament was held last year, and with the exception of those actually playing little or no interest seems to be now taken in the game. Mr. R. F. R. Cooke, the newly appointed Honorary Secretary, is however making a big effort to again revive interest in the game, and has written to a large number of clubs asking them if in the event of the Gymkhana deciding to hold a tournament this year they will send teams. The replies received up to the present have not, however, been very promising. The 10th Hussars, the Maharajah of Ulwar, Mhow Gymkhana, C. I. Horse, Calcutta, Bangalore, Jhansi, and Rajkote have replied that they will be unable to enter teams. On the other hand, the Poona Gymkhana and 3rd Bombay Cavalry state they will each be glad to enter a team. The Oxford Light Infantry (Poona) cannot give any definite answer as they expect to be shortly proceeding to England. A large number of clubs have not yet replied.

As far as cricket is concerned, there is very little to write about this week. A number of matches were commenced yesterday (Saturday) afternoon, but heavy rain commenced to fall about 4 o'clock, and further play was out of the question. The Bombay Gymkhana met the Y.M.C.A., and I rather fancy that had the rain held off the former would have suffered their first defeat of the season. Winning the toss, they elected to take first service at the wicket, and when rain stopped play they had lost eight wickets for 83 runs. Mr. H. Cheetham, who scored 34, was the only one who seemed to be able to do anything with the Y. M's. bowling, for, with the exception of Messrs. Mead and Langhorn, both of whom just managed to get into double figures, the other members of the team made a very poor show with the bat. In less than another month we shall have the first of the annual matches between the Presidency and Parsees, and the attention of local cricket enthusiasts will shortly be turned to the probable composition of the two teams. As to the Presidency, their prospects are much brighter than at one time seemed likely would be the case. At the same time, however, I am rather inclined to think that the Parsees will prove successful both in Bombay and at Poona. As to the selection of the Presidency XI. the claims of a large number of players to inclusion in the team are being put forward, and I fancy the Selection Committee will find their task no easy one. With the exception of Mehta, who has proceeded to England to qualify for Lancashire, the Parsees will be able to put out practically the same team as last year.

The annual general meeting of the Calcutta Racket Club was held on Friday afternoon last at the Club courts in Chowringhee, when the statement of accounts submitted showed the finances of the Club to be in a very flourishing condition. Mr. H. P. M. Rae was re-elected Honorary Secretary and Treasurer, and the following members were chosen to serve on the Committee for the coming year: Hon. Mr. A. A. Apcar and Messrs. H. Collingridge, J. C. R. Johnston, W. H. Michael and F. H. Stewart. The proceedings terminated with votes of thanks to the Chairman (Hon. Mr. A. A. Apcar) and the Honorary Secretary and retiring Committee.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 3rd July 1903.

THE weather, having at last decided to "take up," has done so with the vigour which for some time past has characterized its proceedings, and the heat on several days during the week has been almost overpowering. Boating on the river was safe as early as last Sunday, though the stream was still strong, and immense crowds went down: the squash in the trains being appalling, and causing one to marvel at the discomfort voluntarily endured for the sake of "Sunday on the River."

The ingenious theory put forth by Messrs. Warmington and Haldane (Counsel for the British Museum authorities in what is known as the "Irish Ornaments Case), reminds me of the eminent naturalist of whom I used to be told in my far-off youthful days, who if he saw only a minute bone could not only tell you off-hand to what bird or beast it belonged, but could also construct a complete skeleton of said bird or beast, placing the bone in its proper position. By the way I never could see the point of the story which, no doubt, was told in the (altogether vain) hope of inciting me to greater efforts in the pursuit of knowledge. But to return to the Irish Ornaments Case. A farmer,—surname Nicoll—Christian name unknown to me—ploughing in the "dear disthressful country,"—to be precise, near Lough Foyle, turned up some gold ornaments of great antiquity and value: a collar, bowl, chain, necklace, torque, and a perfectly modelled little boat with oars and spars. Nicoll sold them to a silversmith for a comparatively small sum. Silversmith sold them again, and after passing through several hands they were finally purchased by the British Museum authorities for £600. Upon this the Royal Irish Academy, which hitherto had not shown any violent yearning to possess them, put in a claim for them on the plea that they were found in Irish soil. The British Museum authorities courteously, but firmly, regretted their inability to oblige their Hibernian confrères by handing over the ornaments, explaining that one of their statutes expressly forbids their parting with any property they may have acquired unless it should prove a duplicate or worthless.

The Irish patriots in Parliament, metaphorically speaking, jumped at this fresh instance of Saxon greed and injustice towards the down-trodden Celt, and duly ventilated the grievance of the Irish "nation" in the House. There appeared to be no solution of the difficulty when the Crown came to the rescue and claimed the ornaments as "Treasure Trove." Now, as I am told, the law of "Treasure Trove" is not only of very respectable antiquity, but also very complicated and curious. Several things are necessary to prove "Treasure Trove." Firstly, the article must be of precious metal; secondly, the owner must be unknown; thirdly, the owner must have hidden it—not lost it or thrown it away, as in that case the first finder could claim it against all but the owner. The hiding entitles the King to it, therefore that the ornaments were hidden was the ground on which the Crown based its claim, and it lay with the authorities of the British Museum to prove that another theory was the more probable.

From the evidence of experts these ornaments were probably fashioned between the years 300 B. C. and 600 or 700 A. D., and given this fact, Messrs. Warmington and Haldane constructed this ingenious theory. That at the time above mentioned the sea had covered the spot on which the ornaments were found. Given the sea, what more likely than a Sea God? Given the God, we must assume that it had worshippers; and given the worshippers what more likely than that among them should be an Irish Chieftain? With these concessions, case for finder complete. The ornaments evidently had been flung into the sea as a sacrifice to the Sea God, by a Chieftain in a transport of pious fervour and as is well known, a sacrifice may not be reclaimed. Mr. Justice Farwell was sceptical. If the sea had ever covered the spot in question it must have been (according to the best authorities), at least 2,000, and perhaps 4,000, years B. C., and we have no reason to assume that there was any Irish Sea God, or any Irish Sea Kings or Chiefs who made offerings. But Mr. Justice Farwell had strong reasons for believing that however peace-loving and law-abiding the Irish nation may have become in comparatively modern days, petty wars, faction fights, and such like welcome interruptions to the monotony of existence, were not altogether unknown in the far-off ages to which these ornaments belonged. Taking this into consideration and also the fact that the ornaments when found were close together, the smaller were inside the larger,—he had no hesitation in deciding that they had been hidden during one of the petty tribal wars, and therefore were "treasure trove," and the property of the Crown. The Crown presents them to the Royal Irish Academy; the Irish patriots rejoice that their hereditary foe has been forced to disgorge, and the avaricious Saxon is perfectly satisfied that Irish antiquities should find their resting-place in Dublin. Mr. Justice Farwell's decision therefore gives satisfaction all round.

This week we have seen Madame Sarah Bernhardt in a new character—that of Josephine de Beauharnie in M. E. Bergerat's Plus que Reine. "Plus que Reine" is really a series of scenes from the life of Josephine from the time when, as a young widow, she first meets Bonaparte in the Palais Royal gardens before his nomination as Barras' assistant, and when his fortunes were at their lowest ebb. He falls in love and their marriage takes place. His mother and sisters constantly try to set him against his wife, but Josephine, now in love with her husband, triumphs. In the third act in which the Deputation offers Napoleon the Imperial Crown, and Josephine pathetically entreats him not to accept it, Madame Bernhardt was especially fine, as also in the fourth act, when the son of Hortense having died, Napoleon thinks of divorce. Josephine summons Lucien, hoping that Napoleon will adopt his son as heir to the throne, but Napoleon makes the condition that Lucien shall divorce his wife, and this he refuses to do. After Lucien's departure Napoleon dictates in Josephine's presence, a letter asking for the hand of a Russian Princess. After trying in vain to induce Josephine to sign the act of divorce, and Junat has refused to help him to persuade her, he throws away in a rage the key of the door of communication between his apartments and those of Josephine—forgetting that she has another key. Junat reminds him, and when Josephine with her key opens the door she finds herself in front of a brick wall. She then in despair signs the act of divorce and hands it to Napoleon. Madame Bernhardt shows Josephine as a heroic character, her noble self-control in the earlier scenes, and later her anguish and despair are very powerfully portrayed. The interest of the play suffers to some extent from the prominence given to Napoleon's meaner qualities, which puts one out of sympathy with Josephine's attitude towards him.

At the Garrick we have had Madame Rejane as Fanny Legrand in Sapho, which is not one of her most convincing personations.

Miss Annie Hughes' play Lorna Doone founded on Blackmore's novel, was presented at The Avenue Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, and proved a rather wearisome performance, in spite of some decidedly clever acting. The fact is the book is too diffuse to be easily dramatised, and Miss Annie Hughes has failed, as have others before her, to produce a good acting version. She herself was delightful as Gwenny, but Mr. Hadyn-Coffin cannot be considered a successful "girt Jan Ridd."

This dissertation on matters theatrical, and the frequent mention lately of the Irish Light Railways in connection with the motor-car race, must in some occult manner account for my sudden recollection of a curious little experience when I was on a visit to Ireland about two years ago. I went a trip by the Light Railway from Dublin up into the Dublin mountains to see a noted waterfall, the name of which I totally forget; but that is not a matter for regret, since if I could recollect it I am morally certain I couldn't spell it! The distance, to the best of my recollection, was about twenty miles, and we passed through only one village (as we in England reckon villages) and there the monthly sheep and cattle fair was in progress. As we returned in the evening our "train" was boarded by a dozen or fifteen of the farmers and drovers, and the third class compartment being full some of them overflowed into our first class one, much to our dismay, knowing what might be expected from an incursion of cattle drovers on their way home from a fair in England. I must add that our fears were not realized, but the point of my story is that these men, without exception, were going to Dublin for the sole purpose of seeing Mrs. Langtry act! She was in town with her company and had arrived in Dublin the day before. None of them had seen her, but they had heard—and had the most touching belief in the statement—that she was not only the most beautiful woman, but the most "illigant acthress" in existence.

There are many indications that the reception of the French President will be unusually cordial—not only by the powers that be, but by the "man in the street." The national sympathies and antipathies of "new masters" are curious and interesting and there is a good deal of sound instinct in them. For the French there is no dislike, though a certain amount of tolerant contempt may leaven their admiration. In fact their attitude reminds me of that of a "gentleman of the old school" towards women—fickle, unreasonable beings—but all the same to be liked and admired. The Russians they distrust and dislike, but mixed with these feelings there is a certain awe, as of the great Unknown. But their thorough-going and hearty enmity is reserved for the Germans, in whom they can see no good thing.

It is consolatory to learn that our recent latter-day deluge was something of a blessing in disguise. We are told that some rain water collected in the Strand between 13th and 15th June; and on being examined was found to contain more than nine grains of solid matter per gallon. "There were traces of salt, ammonium sulphate, organic ammonia, and nitrites, though the chief constituents were soot and other suspended matters. Taking the rainfall as 3·8" in five days, there fell over London's 73,839 acres some 6,437,230,000 gallons in that time. In this there were 3,738 tons of solid matter, 330 tons of salt 267 tons of ammonium sulphate, and about 2,000 tons of soot." For this relief much thanks!

The result of the motor race in Ireland is a distinct disappointment to those of us who hoped that the Gordon Bennett Cup would remain in England, but Chevaliar de Knyff, who seems a marvel of pluck and endurance, deserves hearty congratulations on his success. The English competitors had more than their share of bad luck—two out of the three coming to grief at an early stage of the proceedings, one of them being unfortunately seriously injured. The details of the race have no doubt been telegraphed, and no purpose would be served by repeating them. [And of little interest to Indian readers. Ed.] Two facts seem to be established by this race—one, that except for motor maniacs a motor car race is about as uninteresting a function as it is possible to imagine—in this case only those spectators who were tolerably near the finish could form any idea of how the race was going; the second—that this ought to be the last race of the kind on the public highway. The Servian people appear to be in the mood to be thankful for small mercies, since we hear that the severe and dignified rebuke contained in King Edward's reply to the telegram sent by King Peter notifying his accession to the throne, "has given the greatest satisfaction to all classes and parties in Belgrade." Murderers are not likely to be afflicted with unduly sensitive feelings, but one hopes that "the greatest satisfaction" was not felt by King Peter himself when he was reminded of the deolerable stain left on the good name of his country by recent events, by which he is profiting.

It appears that some little time is likely to elapse before the appointment of Cardinal Vaughan's successor is announced. It will not be an easy appointment to make. The names already mentioned in connection with it are those of Bishop Browne of Southwark, and Dom Gasquet, Abbot President of the English Benedictine Congregation. The latter, an accomplished man of letters, is well known by sight to frequenters of the Reading Room of the British Museum, where his Benedictins habit makes him a noticeable figure.

Though the attendance at the Royal Agricultural Show at Park Royal were much below those at several of the country meetings, it is pleasant to learn that the foreign visitors were unusually numerous, and also that they were by no means "only on pleasure bent," to the advantage of many of the exhibitors. A gentleman hailing from New South Wales contrasts the attendance at the Royal Agricultural Show held last April near Sydney, with that at Park Royal last week. He writes "Sydney has a populationof something over four hundred thousand, and London has, I believe, from five to six millions. The Sydney ground is reached by a tramway and a good road, while Park Royal have several double lines of railway converging on it, leading from the largest and wealthiest city in the world. The attendance on the two best days at the Sydney show numbered together a hundred thousand, while for the five days at Park Royal, with His Majesty the King present on one day, and the Prince of Wales on three days, the total attendance was sixty-five thousand only. These figures speak for themselves."

"BRIDGE TOPICS."*

This latest addition to Bridge lore is aptly named, as the book does not pretend to be a treatise on the game, but rather a criticism of most of the leading points which are constantly recurring in actual play. Nearly half the book is devoted to a criticism of the existing rules under which Bridge is played in England and contains suggestions in regard to the method of scoring, some of which are extremely reasonable and greatly to be desired, whilst the advantages of others may be considered doubtful. In the remainder of the book, the writer gives some admirable suggestions regarding the play of the game, though we do not agree with all his arguments.

His suggestions regarding the alteration of the present form of scoring are on the whole sound and it would be a good thing in the interests of the game if the existing anomalies of the score were removed. For example, as he points out, undue value is undoubtedly given at present to a declarer holding aces and 4 aces in one hand might well be reduced from 100 to 80; also 3 aces are perhaps too well treated at 30, though "Lynx" apparently overlooks the fact that 3 aces in No Trumps are three fourths of the honours, whereas in plain suits 3 honours are three-fifths of the honours. With regard to what he terms the "10 point—No Trump trick" we think he makes out a very good case and the slightly longer time which a rubber would take, would be more than compensated for by the additional premium earned by skill. We are also in accord with him regarding the enhancement of the values of "slams" which are insufficiently rewarded at present and we also think some amendation of the scoring of the rubber points advisable though instead of his proposal we are more in favour of giving 50 points for each game won, by which the winners score 100 as at present and the losers, (if they should win one game of the rubber) get 50 for their game won; but we do not like his suggested introduction of a score for "carte blanche." Anything tending to further complicate an already somewhat complicated system of scoring is bad and this proposal also is open to other objections. For instance, there might often be difficulty in proof of "carte blanche" unless a player's word were accepted, and in any case, much discussion and waste of time would often ensue; also in the case of a player holding 4 aces and a "carte blanche," and probably going out in "No Trumps" (as his partner would probably have his fair proportion of court cards or a long suit to bring in) the adversaries would feel that it was manifestly unfair that they should be mulcted of the maximum honours for a good hand, as well as further remuneration for a bad one, both being held by the same player. With the exception of the "carte blanche" and the minor alteration suggested above, we think "Lynx's" suggestions for the revision of the scoring rules sound and well worthy of general adoption.

To come to the second portion of the book, "Lynx's" advice re "How to declare" is excellent, and if players who hesitate or give indications of the state of their hand would follow them out, it would add greatly to their reputation as desirable partners, or opponents. Of course hesitation is sometimes unavoidable, but it is unfortunately far too common. With regard to "what to declare," to deal with this subject thoroughly, a treatise of 500 pages might be written, as the subject is so exhaustive and the variations of the declaration depend so much upon the respective scores of the declarer and his opponents, but dealing with "Lynx's" remarks we are not altogether in accordance with him. "It is not advisable to declare "Sans Atout" without an ace, except as a "desperate expedient." With a good all-round hand, guarded in every suit, but without an ace, with the assistance he is likely to get from his partner, the dealer is more likely to make the odd trick in "No Trumps" than in any declared suit, whilst on the other hand if the declaration be passed down, and the dealer's partner has a strong suit which he must declare, it is an even chance whether it is a black or a red one, and if it is a black one, a good hand is wasted on a small score. Too much dread is often expressed of the possibility of finding "100 aces" against you, which is a very rare occurrence, and does not compensate for the loss of the trick or two which the declarer will generally make, if he goes "No Trumps" with a fully guarded hand and gets fair average support from his partner.

"Lynx's" arguments against the "Defensive Black Suit" declaration are undoubtedly weighty, but we think he is in error in saying that the best Bridge players in the leading London clubs never declare defensively. This may have been the case when Bridge was first introduced, but if we are correctly informed, it is now quite a recognised rule amongst a certain section of good Bridge players to declare a defensive suit if they have less than 3 court cards in their hand and no ace. We do not go as far as that, but in "Lynx's" arguments think there is too much tendency to wish to "Go out." The deal is an undoubted gain and should be taken full advantage of but it can also be used advantageously as a defensive, as well as an offensive measure. With a really bad hand a black declaration will generally lead to a small score either way, whereas if it is left and a moderate red declaration made by his partner, (as the declarer's partner is fully justified in thinking that the dealer has at any rate "something"), a double is often the result. We remember an instance which occurred in actual play; the dealer declared a black suit, his partner putting down a beautiful "Sans Atout" and swearing loudly; they just managed to go out, (thanks to the partner's hand) which of course they would have done had the declaration been passed down. The next deal, the dealer had a hand almost exactly similar to the previous dealer's; he left it, and his partner declared a red suit; he was doubled, his hand exposed, the dealer had nothing, and the adversaries won the game and rubber. A defensive black suit declaration should never be adopted without serious consideration, but we do not think "Lynx" places enough importance upon the risk of the opponents going out or adding greatly to their score if the dealer's partner has only a moderate hand, with the additional advantage of it being their deal next time, which is a point not to be overlooked.

With the chapter on the "Heart Convention" we heartily agree; to our mind the practical certainty of the doubler getting the suit he wants, even if it does not enable him to double quite so often, far outweighs the "short suit" lead, which often leads to fearful disaster; moreover, it is commonly laid down that no player should double in any suit unless he is practically certain of the odd trick, and how can he be that, if he doubles on one suit and cannot rely upon his partner to lead that suit?

"Bridge Topics" is well put together and nicely got up, and if some of the suggestions proposed by "Lynx" can be generally adopted, and be incorporated in the rules of the game, the writer will have rendered a service to the Bridge-loving community in general.

TWO FIRSTS OF SEPTEMBER. WEST AND EAST.

No. 1.—West.

I HAVE often been asked the question as to which I prefer, game-bird shooting at Home, or in the Himalayas. The answer is a very hard one to give, as I am equally fond of both. In the first place it is quite wrong to suppose that British game-birds are less wild and easier to circumvent than those of the Himalayas—I speak of game of the West of England only—and in the second place I must put forward the well-known axiom "comparisons are odious" I have enjoyed A 1 shooting both in the West of England and in our grand mountain ranges of India, so here goes for an account of a good day in dear old North Devon.

It is the 1st of September 1898, a cool, rather cloudy day with a nice breeze from the south, and my friend S. has driven over ten miles to have a try at the partridges with me.

"There ought to be a good scent," I remarked, as we started at 10 o'clock from my cottage to roam over my small shoot of 1,000 acres, and S. agreed with me. We had two beaters, and my old setter, Ranger, a Himalayan, bred dog of the good old-fashioned orange and white sort, rather a slow worker who would not have a look in for a field trial prize, but an untiring old shikari, with an A1 nose, gentle mouth and the most intelligent dark brown eyes. A powerful dog, and equally at home in the hills of Devon, as he is in the Himalayas.

We are just about to enter a turnip field, and my hand is on the latch of the gate, when "whirr," and up gets a a covey of ten birds, S. is smart with his 16-bore and drops a bird among the roots with a quick shot over the gate; Ranger quickly retrieves it, and on we go in line through the turnips. "Bang," and S knocks over a rabbit on the left, and "Bang, bang, d—," as I miss another bunny on the right with both barrels.

"They birds have gone over to Wickleigh Moor zur, I reckon," said Will, one of the beaters," and us ought to have some fun with 'em there as the cover be middlin' thick." So over the big bank we climb, across a muddy lane, over a stubble and a grass field, and another climb over and through an enormous fence brings us on to Wickleigh Moor; merely a large field covered with gorse, heather, and rushes. In Devonshire any enclosure that grows gorse or heather, from five to a thousand acres, is called a moor.

"Hold up." I say to Ranger and off he starts zig-zag across the field, and in this third turn he comes to a point close to a bed of rushes about an acre in extent. What a picture the old dog looks, stiff and motionless, as we go quickly, but quietly, up to him. Up they get again with a whirr and four barrels are loosed off. "Well done genelmen. shouts the excited Will., "there be four birds down, a brace to each of 'ee, and I reckon us be in for gude day's sport." One of them is a runner, "the one that fell to my second barrel," says S., but the old dog is soon on his line and in a few minutes all are bagged. I get a snap at a rabbit at the end of the moor, he is soon in Ranger's mouth and transferred into the game bag, and on we go again; down a rushy "bottom" where S. knocks over a landrail, and two old birds that rise very wild get away unhurt, but scared perhaps, by the four barrels that are fired at them. "I reckon they old cheaps belong to thicky covey that us have bagged vaive out of, the artful old critters" says Will., "and that's why us only zeed ten birds instead of the dozen that you counted t'other day zur."

On we go again to another big root field and form a line down it, keeping the dog to heel. No dog can range a field of roots quietly, and it is best to walk birds up on these occasions. A large covey rises far out of shot when we are about a third of the way down the field, and to our dismay, instead of going straight ahead, as we had hoped, they wheel away to the right, and so on out of bounds. "What a pity zur," says Will., "if us could only have got into that vaine lot of birds you genelmen would have had two or three brace of 'em." So, off we go to find another covey and in a field of rape up they get, fourteen of them, and we each get a bird. The covey has been marked, however, and we follow it, and down in a hollow among some elder bushes we come on them. S. gets one, and I have the luck to bag a brace, right and left, and shortly after S. puts in a fine shot at a high woodpigeon and brings him down with a thud.

Crossing another moor three more rabbits and another landrail are added to the bag and shortly afterwards we hear a holloa. "Hurrah for lunch," I exclaim, and we see the boy who holloaed staggering along with a substantial basket. He soon arrives, and we squat on the turf by some furze bushes and have out the pasties, sandwiches, and cake, washed down with beer for S. and myself, and thick "appley" cider, such as the Devon yokel loves—for Will and Fred the beaters. A smoke, of course, follows, and before long on we go again to some more root fields and moors as yet untried.

We soon get on to a biggish moor, well covered with golden furze bloom; it is very pleasant up there, breezy and fresh, at 600 feet above sea level, far cooler and pleasanter than at 6,000 feet elevation in the Himalayas, but the Dartmoor Hills away to the south, rising to 2,000 feet only, hardly impresses me like the grand Trisool Range of Gurhwal rising to over 20,000 feet; though S. thinks the former view fine enough, and so it is, a pretty, peaceful, rural scene, with its green fields and brown, fine woodlands, brakes and moors, and grey towers showing up here and there.

Two more rabbits and a third landrail are accounted for on the moor; the latter rising with its slow, but graceful flight from a patch of rough grass close under Ranger's nose "I doant think I ever knawed they landrail to be so plentiful" says Will. Into the roots again, and out of the mangolds rises a fine covey of thirteen birds. Only one drops, however, "D—d bad shooting" remarks S as he reloads his gun, "we ought to have got two brace down from that lot," but we have marked the birds into a long patch of rough grass on our right front. To this we get as quickly as we can and up get two of the covey which S. downs smartly with his deadly 16 bore, and I manage to drop one of the remaining ten with my right and miss with my left, as the whirring Devonian partridges rise about 35 yards away immediately after S.'s quick right and left, and away they go on our right, over the boundary hedge and out of my shoot.

We climb one of the biggest banks in the west of England, scramble through the thorn hedge on top, jump a ditch beyond, and are in a big stubble field from which a covey rise from the further side and wing their way to some roots beyond.

"We'll get hold of they lot presently zur" remarks Will., "but I reckon there be a brood in this yur rush bed in front of us." We are now approaching a patch of rushes and tussocky grass, Ranger's flag drops to the level of his body, and with a stealthy "stalky" gait he begins drawing up to something that delights the keen old dog's scent. Up gets another landrail, but neither of us fire, as from the dog's manner we know there is something better on ahead. Will. and Fred. are silent and excited, while S. and I advance with cautious tread instinctively somewhat after Ranger's style. The dog stops and stands, but not stiffly, so I wave him on again, and about thirty yards further on he stiffens and stands like a rock.

Up get four birds, and bang, bang, drop two to my gun. Bang, bang again from S. on my right and the remaining two go down also. "Blamed if that ain't smart work genelmen" says Will., and it was pretty certainly, to see four birds rise and all four drop in a second, but not so hard shooting as bagging two brace out of a big covey.

On again, across another moor where S. knocks over a rabbit, and I miss one, to a rape field. In these small roots a dog can range fairly quietly, and Ranger is soon standing a covey; they rise rather wildly, but S. has one down, and we mark them into a furze brake ahead of us.

The dog is called to heel, and we walk the furze in a closely formed line. Two birds get up, but get clean away from our four barrels. S. and I look at each other and swear. A little further on, however, another brace get up and we each bag one, while four or five more get away while we are reloading. On we go, and are now nearly at the end of the shoot, a single bird rises straight in front of me, and bang, down it goes.

Two more get away from our guns, and in passing through a little copse of oak and ash, close to home. S. makes another neat shot at a woodpigeon, and I manage to bowl over a rabbit. We are soon at the house now, and count out the bag: 11 brace partridges, nine rabbits, two woodpigeons and three landrails. A nice mixed bag of 36 head, and a very pleasant day's shooting.

No. 2.—East of Suez.

1st September 1902, a hot and muggy day, as my friend M. and I started about seven, from our camp at 6,000ft. elevation in the Kumaon Himalayas, not twenty miles from the pleasant little hill station of A. where M.'s regiment is quartered. Markers have been out since early dawn to keep their eyes on the coveys, and the prospects for the day are good.

Our hill ponies carry us along, but owing to a mistake on the part of the head beater we have some difficulty in finding the place where we are to dismount, a few shouts, however, put us right, and we are off our ponies, and taking our guns we ascend the hill for a short distance to where the first covey is marked down.

"Are you ready," says M., who is bossing the shoot, and I answer "yes."

Order is given "to Jhálo," and from the oak scrub up gets a covey of fourteen well-grown chukore. M. downs a brace in workman like style, and I get one bird.

The covey has gone on ahead and we now try for another small covey that has been marked a short distance away. We are soon there, and each bag a brace; M's spaniel retrieving his birds, and my old veteran Ranger bringing mine along

For some time we try again for the first covey, but somehow they eluded us, and we did not see them any more that day. A third covey is not far off, and after them we go; the day is beginning to warm up, but is not unpleasantly hot

Covey No. 3 are lying in a tangly ravine some distance below, and we make our way down to them, over the terraced fields and along a rather steep slope to where the birds have been marked. I take my stand near the edge of the ravine about thirty yards above M. and the beaters chuck some stones into the thicket from the upper end.

Up get five or six chukore in company with several doves. I have the luck to drop a brace of the former, and M. downs one; the doves bothered him or he would have got two chukore for a cert. Five more birds come down from the tangled scrub and creepers, easy shots, and I down another brace; M. has a bird down too. It takes some time before all the six chukore are picked up, but old Ranger and M.'s dog go to work in the thicket, and the plump birds are hung on the sticks along with the others. Now some uphill work comes in, as a small covey has been marked into some oak scrub some way above us; it is warm work and we are glad to get a drink from a small stream on the way. We are soon there, however, and the beater's form line above us, but birds are on the run and several rise out of shot, one getting up behind us. M., however, drops one, a long shot, in de Grey-like style, and I miss an easy one with both barrels. Down hill is now the word, and in some thorny scrub, well sprinkled with boulders, we get another brace each. Then round the shoulders of the hill to where another lot have been marked, and I manage to drop one, the others not getting up nicely get clean away from us.

A shot from far above, lets us know that Mrs. M. and a lady friend have arrived with the breakfast. We are thirsty, hungry, and hot, and quite ready to do justice to the substantial meal awaiting us. Up we go, and before reaching the shady spot where the ladies are sitting, cool ourselves down in a convenient stream, our heads each under a waterfall. It is piping hot, and few leeches are discovered hanging to our ankles, these are made to leave go by putting some salt on their extremities; if pulled off the most distressing irritation follows, but if choked with salt there is no irritation to worry on.

We have 9½ brace of birds to show the ladies and hope for more sport in the afternoon. How the soda-water did go down, followed by delicious cutlets, tea, and other good things. Sublime tobacco is then produced and our pipes kept going for a bit, and afterwards our cameras are taken from their cases and photos of the merry group taken. M.'s dog gives some trouble, but his Goorkha orderly takes hold of him and gets him in a good position while the triggers are pulled. At about one o'clock we take our guns again, Miss S. accompanying us: our wish is to break the district record by bagging fifteen brace of chukore. We do not, however, succeed in slaying more than three brace in the afternoon, the twenty-fifth bird being neatly dropped by M. a long crossing shot, at about four o'clock. Our sporting young lady friend pours out tea, and not long after we stroll back to D., where Mrs. M. welcome us with more cooling drinks. We are satisfied with 12½ brace on 1st September and after dinner slay several of our chukore over again. Thus ended one of the pleasantest day's shooting I have ever had. Chukore shooting is delightful sport, and about the hardest exercise I know, it is up and down work all day: we started at something over 6,000 ft. altitude, went down to about 4,000 ft. and finished up well over 6,000 ft. again. Walking, even in a hilly country like Devon or Somerset is child's play to work in Kumaon, also the days are longer in the East. Both are, however, equally enjoyable: the English partridge being every bit as sporting a bird as the chukore.

A WHITSUNTIDE SHOOT.

YE, who have slain your tigers, your leopards, and your bears, ye, to whom the crash of the falling bison, smitten in his pride, does no more than mark one of the many days in the shikari's diary, to whom the bowling over of an ibex, or an ovis ammon, is but as the circumvention of the timid hare in the dâk jungle, will find nothing in the following lines to interest. They will but raise the supercilious smile of patronising superiority.

Yet even the humble pedagogue may, perchance, have a hankering after sport, though the claims of a class of some twenty or thirty youngsters, thirsting to imbibe knowledge, may prevent him from "roving over hill, plain, and woodland afar."

Still, though "spots" and "stripes" are only but to be reckoned by one skin of an extremely juvenile Felis pardus, slain—and that not by the writer—in a beat for pheasants, and two extremely mangy jungle cats; though acquaintanceship with "brother Boar" is limited to having trodden on him once by accident, while he was enjoying his midday siesta; and though intimacy with "Bruin" may be restricted to sundry attempts to manœuvre him in the dense hill jungle after the "rains," the desire for sport burns none the less fiercely in the dominie's breast. To put the matter shortly, much as I should like to have a chance of slaying big game, I have to put up with the joys of the jheel and the grass jungle—and excellent sport I get too, so mustn't grumble—with an occasional stalk after a buck.

But this year the last Saturday of the month and Whit Monday fell together, so I determined to see whether I could get a little out of the opportunity. Big game of course was out of the question, but in journeying up from Bombay I had noticed some excellent buck between Jhansi and Cawnpore, better at an rate than these to be seen in Lucknow, so I thought I would go down to those parts and try my luck.

First of all I induced "C." to accompany me, for I am a sociable beggar, and, though I must confess I do better when alone and have only myself to think about, yet at the same time I like company, and to have some one with whom to talk over the day when the shades of evening fall.

A friend had most considerately given us "the straight tip," so on the Friday evening we were at the station with men, guns, and provisions waiting for the train to start. A "local" is not a rapid conveyance, as it was nearly 2 A.M. before we were turned out at the little siding at "P," where, having given orders to be wakened at daybreak, we flung ourselves down for two hours more sleep.

Having partaken of a substantial chota hazri and seen our goods and chattels piled up on to the byle gari we set off for the dâk bungalow some five miles distant. The morning was comparatively fresh and we stepped out briskly across the maidan, keeping a sharp look out for any thing in the nature of a pair of horns.

The ground at first was flat and bare, and appeared to be a kind of black cotton soil and full of holes. In the distance were low isolated rocky hills which seemed to rise suddenly out of the plain with no very precise idea as to why they did so. Larks, plover, and sand grouse rose up here, there, and everywhere as we walked along, but no four-footed beast, save the herds of native cattle, or an occasional pi-dog, met our anxious gaze. After about a mile the ground became more broken, and covered with low thorny scrub jungle and babool trees. On all sides could be heard the call of the grey partridge, many of which with quail—common, brush, and button—we flushed as we brushed through the grass. Hares too were numerous, and, evidently knew we were not after them from the casual way in which they lopped out of their hiding places. As we proceeded, the babool trees became more numerous and, just as we were beginning to realise that the jungle was likely to get much denser, one of the men stopped and pointed ahead of him. Looking carefully we made out two forms which at first sight appeared to be doe antelope, but which the glasses showed to be "chink"—one apparently with a very fair pair of horns. A spin of the coin gave "C" the shot, so off he went to try his luck, while I waited. Fortune favoured him and he got within a hundred yards without difficulty. Then whether it was the stuffy night in the train or—tell it not in Gath—the quart of Pilsener at supper, his hand shook at the critical moment, the bullet passed over Mr. Chink's back and he was lost to us immediately.

It was very disappointing, but there was nothing to be gained in crying over spilt milk, so we said nothing and walked on. In the jungle, which soon got so thick that we had to find a way out of it and go round, we saw plentiful traces of nilgai, though no blue hide showed itself. Mingled with the calls of the grey, were those of the peacock and the black, or the painted partridge—which I do not know as I did not shoot a specimen. Soon after this we came to the Betwa, across the sandy bed of which, now nearly dry, we made our way. The cool water, as we waded through the various rivulets, was delightfully refreshing. Here and there were spur wing plovers and river tarn; flying lazily about in one pool a white ibis was searching for food, and numbers of sand-grouse were wending their way homeward after their morning drink. I wanted to know whether there was any chance of finding eggs, and so shot a pair right and left, but, on examination, the eggs, though forming, were not far developed, nor did I come across any nests. The skins were not in good condition, being "khureed" as my taxidermist put it.

Having crossed the river, we wended our way through a narrow pass between the high cliff into the village of "E." Apparently in former days it had been a more prosperous place. In the cliffs were bits of brickwork, as if the heights had been fortified at some time or other. On the ledges I could see the nest of neophrons and possibly of the lugger falcon and Bonelli's eagle, all of which breed in similar spots. The heat by this time was increasing and the uneven road was inches deep in dust, which, stirred up by the carts and wayfarers got into the lungs, and almost choked us. It was with not small feeling of thankfulness that we espied the bungalow, a queer two-roomed little shanty. Fortunately it boasted punkahs, and we were soon sitting down to an excellent breakfast, with an apathetic native tugging spasmodically at the punkah rope. During the heat of the day we slept, and at 4 o'clock we were roused by the shikari to say that some buck were in a field a little way from the bungalow. After a cup of tea we sallied forth. C. made his way to the right, while I went in the direction of the buck already mentioned. On getting up to them I found none worth shooting, so left them and wandered on over the plain. With the advance of the evening the antelope had emerged from the shelters where they had lain during the heat of the midday sun, and were scattered about in small parties. The greater number were does with fawns at foot, but at last I spotted a gentleman with what appeared to be a fair pair of horns, standing under a babool. Unfortunately his harem promptly gave the alarm and away he went. He soon disappeared over a hillock, so Dwarka and I determined to make a long circuit and try and come up to him from the other side. This, after considerable difficulty owing to the number of does, we managed to do, but we could not make out where the buck himself was because of the bushes which were between him and ourselves. While furtively glancing round, one of the members of the harem caught sight of us. Blackie was instantly on his feet, but, not knowing whence danger proceeded, stood irresolute. I had not a very good view, but I had to take the chance such as it was. Taking as careful an aim as I could I pulled the trigger. The next moment the buck was coming straight at me as hard as he could go. Thinking he had been missed, I felt for another cartridge, but before I could reload, he saw me, swerved, and jumped the nullah in which I was. As I passed I saw he was streaming with blood, and he had hardly gone another twenty yards before he fell over dead. The bullet a ·303 soft-nozed was well placed, but was just behind the heart, and it seemed extraordinary that with such a wound he could have run a yard. Nevertheless, I have shot several buck with the ·303 "soft-noze" and have had similar experiences. I have never tried the ·303 on dangerous game, but it seems that to be effective the aim must be very accurate, as the knock-out power is practically nil. I was disappointed in the horns when I examined the dead animal, as they were not nearly so good as I had been led to expect, but the waning light doubtless deceived me.

The next morning saw us out again by 5-30. I got a long shot at a fair buck but aimed a little high, the bullet missing his shoulder apparently by an inch or two. I then came upon a chink which did not wait to give me a chance, and, though I turned him in "C's" direction he had no better luck. After a little while we saw a lovely black buck with a beautiful pair of horns in some rather thick babool jungle—most ideal stalking ground. Unluckily there were a lot of does scattered about, and, do what we would, we could never get within distance. Just as we thought we had evaded the ladies by making a detour from the right, we would come suddenly on a pair of eyes watching us on the left; did either of us attempt an approach by moving away from the left, we invariably found ourselves confronted by another sentinel on the right. At length the increasing heat warned us to return. As we strolled along we surprised a solitary buck standing under a babool tree: he galloped off and we did not expect to see him again, but, while we were taking a rest beneath the shade of a pipal, Dwarka came to say that the animal was in a field close by, and appeared to be quite off his ground. I got within one hundred and fifty yards without difficulty, but he was in some rather long stubble, so that when I lay down I could not see him. Taking advantage of the fact that his head was turned away and that he was feeding, I advanced across the open by sharp rushes. Why he never heard me I do not know, I had soft shoes on but the stubble crackled a great deal in spite of all my care. At length I judged that my chance had come, and dropping down, raked him through with a "soft noze." He ran some twenty yards and collapsed. Though a light coloured buck his horns were several inches better than the others, at which I was very pleased. Being very tired we lay up till 5 o'clock; "C." was lazy and wouldn't budge. He said the weather was too hot and life too short to risk his crawling after black buck. I started off therefore by myself. Not half a mile from the bungalow I saw a lovely buck with two or three does in a field. It was an easy stalk to within seventy yards, and I was just getting up to the place I had selected—a low tree in a hedge of grass,—when a native and his dog appeared from the opposite direction and hunted them off, together with three nice chink which were in some long grass a little to the left. This was a great disappointment as I had made sure of getting the buck, and through the glasses he looked a very fine beast. However it was useless worrying, so Dwarka and I walked on and were not long before we made out some chink some distance off. A nullah aided us, and though its twists and turns seemed to be never going to end, we at length got within range. I covered a chink which was slowly walking through the long grass, when Dwarka touched my shoulder, and said that ten yards further on I should get a clearer shot. I slipped back quietly without being observed and reached the place in safety. To my chagrin the quarry had vanished, and a byle-gari lumbering over the horison furnished the requisite information.

Next day our leave was up, so we made our way back to the station in the cool of the early morning. To me the trudge, long and dusty as it was, was delightful, hardly a patch of grass or scrub that did not seem to hold a partridge, quail, or hare, while the varieties of doves, babblers, and larks kept one continually on the look-out for something a little out of the common. Here I came across that very pretty little bird the rufous-tailed finch-lark for the first time. I have never seen it in Oudh. I suppose our district is hardly arid enough for it, but here amidst the sandy wastes, scattered over with patches of thorn, it was quite common. We reached the station just in time to get a good wash, change, and breakfast before the train arrived. The train !!! Never shall I forget the journey! The engine crawled slowly along through the heat, as if it were not quite sure where it it was going, and, what was more, didn't care. What the temperature of the carriage was I do not like to guess, but the climate of a "local" railway carriage, crawling through the plains of Northern India at the end of May is not polar. Divesting ourselves of our garments, until we were as nearly attired in our birthday suits as we dared, we laid down on the seats and perspired in silence. Every now and again one or other hazarded the proposition of an iced drink which was immediately seconded and carried nem con. How we survived I do not know. The journey by the mail,—which did not stop at the little station of "P."—occupies rather less than five hours. We took rather more than nine !! However all bad, as well as good, things must come to an end, and we disembarked still alive eventually. I had thoroughly enjoyed my trip, for though the untimely arrival of the dog and the byle gari had certainly lost me a good buck and probably a chink, still I had not returned empty handed, and both C. and I hope some time in the cold weather to go down there and try and reduce the number of those partridges.

The Transvaal Trout Acclimatisation Society have been very unfortunate in their first attempts to introduce trout into the streams of the Transvaal; it is to be hoped that future efforts will be more successful. Two consignments of 16,000 ova each were sent to South Africa; but, in consequence of their arriving at the wrong time of the year, namely, the hot season, all the ova were lost. It is now intended to introduce another 16,000 ova, to arrive during the cool season. Some of the streams in the Transvaal, particularly the Mooi River near Potchefstroom, seem to be ideal waters for trout, as they abound in gravelly beds and quick runs.

It is stated that the Army Remount Department have purchased a couple of zebra mules, through a Hamburg firm, for the purpose of testing the suitability of these animals for transport. Large numbers of horses are lost through horse sickness, and it is thought that, as the zebra and the donkey are both perfectly immune from this disease, and even resist rinderpest well, the zebra mules would turn out most useful animals. The Germans in Africa are already using these mules, and they have established large zebra breeding farms on the slopes of Mount Kilimanjaro.

It has been noticed that ladies soon become fair shots with miniature rifles, and they take a real pleasure in shooting competitions where small prizes are shot for. There is not the recoil and noise about a small rifle that there is attached to a gun or even a revolver, consequently a lady soon gets confidence in shooting. We notice that the North London Rifle Club has decided upon admitting ladies to their miniature rifle section, and we think this is an idea which might be followed by other clubs.

SPECIAL CORDITE FOR TROPICAL COUNTRIES.

WE are able to give the results of some experiments with special tropical cordite in some of the most commonly-used Express cartridges. This cordite has been standardised for temperatures from 100° to 140° F. We give below a table shewing the pressures and velocities at 75° and also at 145° F., the gun in the latter case being at a temperature of 100° F.

Cartridge.	Charge Grains of Cordite.	Charge Bullet Grains.	At 75° Fahr. Pressure Tons per Sq. Inch.	At 75° Fahr. Velocity Ft. per Sec.	At 75° Fahr. Deviation from Mean.	At 145° Fahr. Pressure Tons per Sq. Inch	At 145° Fahr. Velocity Ft. per Sec.	At 145° Fahr. Deviation from Mean.

It will be seen that the pressures at the higher temperature are only slightly in excess of those given by the standard cordite at 60° F., whilst the velocities are considerably higher. At 75° F. pressure is some two tons below that given by standard cordite whilst the velocity is only some 50 feet lower. We do not recommend the use of this cordite at temperatures below 60° F. at which temperature standard cordite is at its best.

In view of the high ballistics obtained, it is possible to still further lower the pressure if velocities exceeding 2,150 feet per second are not required. Indian sportsmen may, therefore, rest assured that with this cordite their rifles will be subjected to no greater strain than when used in this country with ordinary cordite, and the many thousand rounds that are annually fired here is a sufficient guarantee that no trouble is likely to occur under such conditions.—The Kynoch Journal.

THE BEST NIGHT SIGHT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Will you or any of your readers oblige me by kindly letting me know what is the best night sight for shooting at night, moon-lit or dark? I have used Weston's patent night sights, illuminating paint and the Diamond Foresight but without any satisfactory results.

HABITS OF THE NILGAI.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Could you or any of your readers kindly inform me whether the Nilgai (Portax pictus) in its wild state grazes kneeling? Those I have hitherto met have been either lying down or browsing off bushes as they quietly sauntered along, but I have a tame young one about eight months old who most religiously drops on his knees to graze thereby exhibiting a more ludicrous than elegant appearance. This young gentleman, though very partial to the sun-dried mowha flower (Bassia latifolia) as now available, much prefers Clarke's bottled French plums (prunes) and Crosse and Blackwell's tinned apple rings if you please! It is interesting to give him a mixture of the former with one or other of the latter on a plate and see him move away the mowha flowers with his nose to get at either the prunes or the apple rings as the case may be. Should the plate be placed in the floor he promptly falls on his knees to feed.

THE HYDERABAD GAME LAWS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The administration of the Game Laws in the Native State of Hyderabad having come in for somewhat adverse criticism, I think it will be somewhat consoling—particularly to those of your readers who hail from the Deccan—to learn that the authorities there are fully alive to the fact, and are endeavouring to remedy matters with some measure of success. I have had some correspondence with Mr. W. F. Biscoe, the Conservator of Forests at Hyderabad, an Associate of this Society and a keen protector of game. The difficulties he has to contend against are very great. In the first place, there is no Arms Act, and "the number of guns in the district is innumerable." The assistants in the Forest Department are chiefly natives, and are therefore inclined to be lax as game-keepers.

Influential natives can always get leave to shoot, but though hardly "sportsmen" in the English sense of the word, they do not seem to do much harm. The shooting of Deer and Nilgai over water is decreasing, though one reason for this, as might be expected, appears to be the decline in the number of animals.

As regards the game preservation in those tracts especially reserved for H. H. the Nizam, the chief animal preserved seems to be the tiger.

The animals and birds are fortunate in having Mr. Biscoe to look after their interests, and, though to the enthusiastic sportsman matters may appear to be far from what they should be, let them console themselves with the thought that progress is being made, and that in the face of great difficulties.

NOTES ON THE SNOW PIGEON.

THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I append the few notes I have made on the habits of the Snow Pigeon.

This bird is very silent and I have never heard it utter a sound. The nesting places are usually in such precipitous places that I have been unable to procure any eggs. I found one colony of about twenty birds, which were nesting in a cliff overhanging the Sind River near Baltal. This was the first week in June, and judging from the persistent way in which the pigeons kept returning, although repeatedly frightened away, I had no doubt that either their eggs were in the course of incubation, or that the young birds were already hatched out. I also saw Snow Pigeons in the evenings flying back to crevices in the rocky walls of Wakka Nalah near Maulbeck and have not the least doubt that they nested there. Another place where they were evidently nesting was in a clay cliff close to Lamyuzu.

The Snow Pigeon appears to be similar in its habits to the Blue Rock, and I often noticed flocks which contained both kinds. Although there are plenty of Snow Pigeons in Ladak, one never sees them in the enormous numbers that one does Blue Rocks, and when a flock has both kinds of birds in it the Snow Pigeons are always greatly in the minority.

At the beginning of May I saw Snow Pigeons and Blue Rocks sitting about on the strong hillsides in pairs, and from their behaviour I judged the mating season to be then just over. If they started laying about the middle of May, which I thought likely from what I saw at Maulbeck, then the colony I came across at Baltal at the beginning of June must have just hatched their chicks, which seemed likely enough from their determination not to be scared away from the place.

Snow Pigeons feed during the day, and return to roost early in the evening (from 4 to 4-30 P.M.). As far as I observed they have their evening drink just before going to roost. They also drink early in the morning before beginning to feed.

Being grain feeders like the Blue Rock they are to be found all day in the cultivated ground near villages.

THE RECENT TOLLYGUNGE GYMKHANA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—My attention has been drawn to some remarks on the running of my mare French Girl, which occur in your account of the Tollygunge Club Gymkhana of Saturday last, the 11th July.

Put into plain English your insinuations amount to this—

(1) That the mare was not run to win in the June Gymkhana.

(2) That on that occasion her temper was purposely upset, or allowed to be upset, so as to prevent her giving her true running.

(3) That having by these means got her into the July handicap on favourable terms, I backed her to win a large stake in that race.

Each of these insinuations is totally and entirely false. The first two points are merely suggested by innuendoes and are unworthy of any further reply. I shall therefore confine myself to the last point, regarding which you have made a definite statement. Your words run: "Many of the knowing division, including her connections went all ends up for French Girl."

The "connections" here referred to can only mean myself, as no one else has the slightest interest of any sort or kind in the mare, or has had since she came into my possession, over two years ago.

I must therefore ask you to be good enough to state explicitly on whose authority you gave publication to the statement that I backed the mare heavily at the last Gymkhana, knowing, as you must have done, that taken in connection with your other remarks, the assertion was equivalent to a charge of fraud. It would also be interesting to know what step, if any, you took towards verifying the assertion before publishing it. Failing a satisfactory reply on these points I must request you, in your next issue, unreservedly to retract the remarks you have seen fit to make, which are entirely misleading and opposed to the true facts, which are these: When the mare ran in June I had Rs. 110 on her (Rs. 50 to win and Rs. 60 for a place). She ran unplaced. In July I had exactly Rs. 20 on her.

Besides these two bets I had not a single penny on either my own or any other horse running at either meeting, either directly, indirectly, or in any way whatever. I shall be obliged by your publishing this letter.

C. B. BALDOCK, MAJOR,
Merwara Battalion.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Major Baldock has shown me the letter he is writing to you concerning certain remarks you saw fit to make in your issue of the 16th instant upon the form displayed by his mare, French Girl, at the Tollygunge Club Gymkhana Meetings. Personally I should not deem your criticism worth powder and shot, but as Major Baldock feels aggrieved—and very justly so—at your remarks, I, whom they also concern, am bound to fall into line with him. Please, therefore, note that I fully endorse everything that Major Baldock has written you. (Noted ED.)

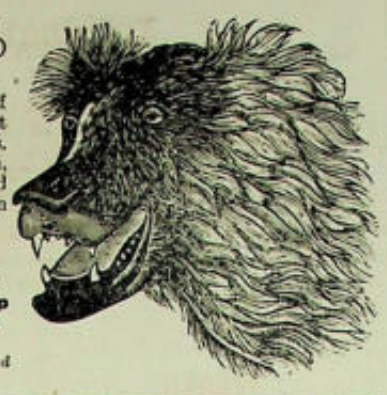
I have further some information for you which I note Major Baldock has omitted to give you, and to which you are not perhaps strictly entitled. However to accentuate the inaccuracy and irresponsibility of your remarks, I will make you a present of it. (Thanks, ED.) The extent of Major Baldock's vast investments upon his mare on the 11th was Rs. 20, which I put on for him. Personally I do not bet, so that this big sum represented the full extent of the "commission"! When the mare ran on the first occasion, I believe I am right in saying that Major Baldock had Rs. 50 on each way. (Not quite right, but near enough ED.)

Finally I must call upon you to withdraw and apologise for your insinuation as regards myself as the rider of French Girl—namely, that I did not try to win on her when she first ran: an insinuation that is as unworthy as it is grossly incorrect and defamatory.

You are, of course, the best judge as to the line which your paper should take and as to what best suits the palates of your readers, but if you will pardon my saying so, it seems a pity that you should deliberately go out of your way to defame those who run horses and ride them for the sake of sport, and with whom the "plunder" does not enter into the question, when there is so much material ready to your hand upon which you could give us a taste of your perspicacity in racing criticism.

A. S. BARROW.

[We print the above letters in fairness to our correspondents; but surely the writers thereof are taking our remarks too seriously? They have our assurance that nothing was further from our intention than an imputation of fraud against either the owner or rider of French Girl, and we cannot see how such a construction can reasonably be put on our remarks. The disturbing paragraph was dictated by a desire to see the humorous side of the little meeting; but a perusal of the above letters convinces us that, on occasions, we "joke wi desficultie." The paragraph may have been loosely worded as to its sporting slang, especially in respect of the "all ends up" reference, but we submit that it is straining at a gnat to discover therein an insinuation of fraudulent practice. However, there are the letters and our expression of regret for having caused two outraged sportsmen to write at such length.



It only remains for us to thank the writer of the second letter for his advice; in journalism, as in most other occupations, there are always to be found those who affect the habit of teaching their seniors how to extract by suction the nutriment from the product of the domestic fowl.—ED.]

Second Day, Thursday, 16th July 1903.

IT must be confessed that good sport, fair women and gallant men were all most apparent in the enclosure on the Bangalore "Cup" day Many were the notabilities your correspondent met, but space has to be considered, and he cannot as he would enumerate them Colonel Daniell and the officers R. A. were "At Home," nearly every corps in the station—and they are many—had its tent, the British Resident and Lady Robertson were early on the course and were to be seen conversing with their many friends in the genial fashion which has won Sir Donald so much popularity—and excited such regret at his impending retirement and certainly from a social point of view the day was a brilliant success. The Residency ball, which had taken place on the preceding evening, had brought in numerous visitors from outside stations, and the enclosure was quite sufficiently crowded to be comfortable Seven or eight book-makers were in evidence, and must have had a fairly good day, for actual favourites nearly always went down, although actual outsiders on the other hand did not as a rule come home. There were two salient features which stood out in the day's racing; the successes of Colonel Desaraj Urs' candidates in the Cup and another race, and the fine form shown by little Melsom the English jockey. Up to the time of writing he has had six mounts at the meeting, has won five of them and only missed being placed second in the sixth by the narrowest of margins' Colonel Desaraj Urs, it may be remembered won the cup last year with Misrule, and the popularity of Trenton's fine victory on the present occasion was very apparent when the horse returned to the paddock. Moreover in this particular race, that Melsom rode really finely. Always handy, he nursed his horse with much judgment, went for the inside berth at the turn for home with great determination and just in time, and finishing with much power on a thoroughly game horse always had a little the best of a really fine finish with the favourite. Very creditably did old Leonidas run too, being only a length behind the second horse, but Promontory, although prominent as a "promontory" should be until the home turn felt his heavy impost, and as his jockey himself said, died away terribly so soon as the ascent of the hill began. There is not a great deal to be said of the other six races. Ptarmigan romped home in the first race, Flight seemed to lie much too far off in the Steeplechase, and would probably have beaten the non-favourite had she been kept with her, Bouquet's was a somewhat lucky win in the Horse Scurry, for Dr. Barnardo had all the worst of the start and had to go right round his horses at the corner, and Cleopatra II upset a great pot in Key West for the Leonidas Purse. A very easy ride for the all conquering Melsom was the New Pony Race, and Essex would seem to have improved a lot, whilst Mainspring after making all the running could not stay quite well enough to beat the very classy but somewhat crocky Best Shot in the run in for the Substitution Hebbal Stakes.

In the second enclosure there was a fair gathering and a good deal of betting went on here also, whilst the crowd of natives was immense, as it always is on the day that H. H. the Maharaja's Cup is run for. The starting machine worked well, and the Band of the 1st Moplah Rifles played a good selection of music.

Events and results:—

THE EASTERN PLATE.—Rs. 350. Rs. 200 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third pony. For Arab ponies 14-1 and under. ¼ mile.

Lieut-Col J Desarj Urs' g a h Ptarmigan, 8st 3lbs	Melsom 1
Mr Percy Fischer's ch a h Governor, 9st 11lb	Penton 2
Mr E Sydenham's b a h Syndic, 8st 11lbs	Meah Jan 3

BETTING: Evens Ptarmigan and Governor, and 4 to 1 agst Syndic.

Ptarmigan ran an exactly similar race to that on the opening day, jumping off with the lead, increasing it throughout and winning anyhow by five lengths, with Syndic beaten off. Time—1min. 25⅘secs.

(Winner trained by Poolanmah.)

THE CLOISTER CUP.—Rs. 500, of which the second pony gets Rs. 200. A steeplechase for ponies. About 3¼ miles over Steeplechase Course.

Mr R Anketell Jones' b e m Lady Abbess, 11st 2lbs	Brown 1
Mr R Dockray Waterhouse's b aus m Flight, 11st 5lbs	Thompson 2

BETTING: 3 to 1 on Flight, and 7 to 4 agst Lady Abbess. The last-named came away with the lead, and passed the stand for the first time ten lengths ahead. Flight closed up a trifle in the country, but at the turn for home she was still a long way behind, and Lady Abbess, never seriously threatened, (although her jockey did not seem very comfortable over the jumps) won hands down by eight lengths. Time—3 mins. 45⅘secs.

(Winner trained privately.)

THE HORSE SCURRY.—Rs. 600, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 100. A handicap for horses 5 furlongs.

Mr N R Chowdhury's br e m Bouquet, 9st	Lansdowne 1
Mr J W Keat's b aus g Gum, 8st 11lb	O'Neil 2
Capt J Randall's ch m e g Dr Barnardo. 9st 12lbs	Owner 3
Kumara Rajah of Pittapore's ch aus g Jack O'Lantern 10st 3lbs	Oomer Khan 0
Major H C V Harrison's ch aus g De Wet 8st 8lbs	Meah Jan 0
Major Logan Home's ch aus g Redoubt 7st 12lbs ...	Goolo 0

BETTING: Evens Dr. Barnards, 2 to 1 agst. Jack O'Lantern 3 to 1 De Wet, 4 to 1 each Bouquet and Gum 6 to 1 Redoubt.

De Wet was left at the post, Bouquet and Gum getting the best of a somewhat uneven start, and they raced in company with Jack O'Lantern and Dr. Barnardo some lengths behind, to the turn for home, where Captain Randall on the outside challenged vigorously. His horse responded gamely, and actually held the lead for a few strides, but died away again and Bouquet won a good race by half a length; a length between second and third. Time—1 min. 5⅗secs.

(Winners trained by Dignum.)

H. H. THE MAHARAJAH OF MYSORE CUP.—Rs 4,000 of which the second horse will receive Rs. 500 and the third Rs. 200. A handicap for horses.—Race Course and 200 yards.

Lieut-Col I Desaraj Urs' b aus g Trenton, 8st 13lbs	Melsom 1
Mr A A Apcar's b aus g Goldsmith, 9st 2lbs	Penton 2

Mr N R Chowdhury's b aus g Promontory 9st 12lbs	Lansdowne 0
Mr Spooner Hart's b aus Wallgrove, 9st 7lbs	O'Neil 0
Lieut-Col Armstrong's b aus, g Knight Templar, 9st	Oomer Khan 0
Mr A A Apcar's br aus g Milburn, 8st 8lbs	Bennett 0
Major H C V Harrison's ch aus g Glenfield 7st 9lbs (car. 7st 12½lbs)... ...	Meah Jan 0
Capt E I R Peel's b aus g The Gaffer, 6st 10lbs (car 7st 2½lbs)	Goolo 0
Mr R L Kindersley's b nth am h St Rule 6st (car 6st 12lbs)	Brown 0

BETTING:—Evens Goldsmith, 4 to 1 agst Trenton, 5 to 1 Walgrove Knight Templar and Milburn, 6 to 1 each Promontory, Leonidas Glenfield and The Gaffer, and 7 to 1 St Rule.

St Rule refused for a long time to join his horses, and when a start was made led past the stand and for a couple of hundred yards beyond it when he ran out and Milburn showed prominently to the front. The Gaffer falling rapidly behind and Trenton Promontory and Goldsmith being handiest of the rest. At the four furlong post Milburn gave way to Trenton, who at the turn for home was leading perhaps a length with the favourite and Promontory next. As they came up the straight Leonidas also challenged on the outside and it looked like being a close thing The weight told however on Mr. Chowdhury's horse and he fell away rapidly, Trenton on the rails winning a fine race from the favourite by half a length with old Leonidas three quarters of a length behind the second horse. Promontory a length behind Leonidas was placed fourth by the judge. Time—2mins 25⅕secs

Colonel Desaraj Urs' horse received a great ovation as he returned to scale

Mr A P Symond's bk aus m Cleopatra II, 7st 6lbs	Melsom	1
Mr A Sattar's b aus m Beccles, 7st (car 7sf 1½lbs)	O'Neil	2
Mr Percy Fischer's b aus m Key West, 9st	Penton	3
Capt Roome's br e m Chemisette, 6st (car 6st 5lbs)	Bennett	0

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Key West, 2 to 1 Cleopatra II, 8 to 1 Beccles and 10 to 1 Chemisette.

Beccles making the most of her speediness rushed to the front and made running at a great pace, with the favourite next and Cleopatra II third. So they ran to the distance where Key West was asked a question and replied in the negative. Cleopatra II however, challenged strongly opposite the second enclosure and soon holding Beccles safe, won comfortably by one and a half lengths, 2 lengths between second and third. Time —1min. 35⅕secs.

(Winner trained privately.)

THE NEW PONY RACE.—Rs 350. Of which the first Pony will receive Rs. 200. Second Rs. 100 and third Rs. 50. Weights Handicap 5 furlongs.

Major H C V Harrison's b aus m Coree Belle, 8st 8lbs	Meah Jan	0
Capt Strong's b aus g Larrikin, 7st 7lbs ...	Bennett	0

BETTING: 6 to 4 agst Mainspring, 2 to 1 Best Shot, 3 to 1 Coree Belle, 4 to 1 Larrikin, and 6 to 1 Latch Key.

The favourite made running until well into the straight, where Best Shot joined issue and getting the best of the struggle won by a length, Mainspring being four lengths ahead of the third horse. Time—1min. 48⅖secs.

(Winner trained privately.)

Third Day, Saturday, 18th July 1903.

The third day of the Bangalore meeting was by far the best of the three from a racing point of view. It was unfortunate that H. H. the Maharajah was again unable to be present owing to fever which I believe partakes of the nature of the dengue fever which has been making a nuisance of itself in Southern India for some months.

However this is not a medical treatise and it is necessary to get on to the racing. The attendance was rather thin in the early parts of the afternoon, but increased rapidly as it wore on and when the dead heat was run off just before dusk fell, the enclosure was full. This is not the place for an article on racing in Southern India, and there are several remarks I hope to make elsewhere, but this fact cannot be gainsaid, that this season's meeting has provided the best racing seen in Bangalore for a very long time. To-day, fields were good, the class of animal which went out was as a rule good, betting was fairly brisk and finishes in most cases were excellent. What more can the soul of man want? There are improvements which may and I believe will take place, but at least Bangalore has more than held her ground this year, in the face of the decay of racing in Southern India generally.

The races have been noticed in their places, and can only be briefly discussed here. A red-hot favourite won in Beccles for the first event, although there was very nearly an awful upset, for her jockey weighed out some pounds short of weight by mistake, and had to be hustled back in a hurry to weigh out in a proper manner. Rubric won a most plucky race in the Desert Handicap, and this was another feather in Melsom's cap, whilst the race between Bouquet and Gum was a tribute to the handicapper's skill. But more of Gum anon. As a straight tip I say "watch him." A terrible facer for a good many people was the result of the C. B. race. Philistine, a practically unknown colt, was "chucked in" and ran away with the race. Voila tout! Then came the great dead-heat between Wallgrove and Goldsmith, and the betting in the run off proved that public opinion was correct. Key West and Acme provided a good struggle in the Excelsior Stakes and the final event was practically an exercise canter for Blue Blood. In conclusion it may be said that the arrangements were excellent. Seven races and a run off, take a lot of getting through, and the Stewards of the races and Mr. H. Donne, the energetic Secretary are to be much congratulated on the result of the efforts.

Events and results :—

THE PONY SELLING RACE.—Rs. 350, of which the first pony will receive Rs. 200, the second Rs. 100 and the third Rs. 50. Half mile.

Mr A Sattar's br aus m Beccles (Rs. 1,600), 8st 10lbs	Oomer Khan	1
Kumara Rajah of Pittapore's b aus m Shield (Rs. 900), 8st 6lbs ...	Gooloo	2
Mr G P Graham's ch aus m Shot Silk (Rs 1,200), 8st	Melsom	3
Capt Roome's br e m Chemisette (Rs. 1,500), 8st	Mirza Khaleel	0
Major H C V Harrison's b cb g Hampton Court (Rs. 1,200), 7st 4lbs	O'Neil	0
Mr Allardice's g aus g Sardine (Rs. 1,200), 6st 7lbs	Bennett	0
Mr Strickland's b aus m Fortunate (Rs. 700), 6st 11b (car 6st 13lbs) ...	Dadoo	0

BETTING: 7 to 4 on Beccles, 4 to 1 agst Shield, 5 to 1 each Shot Silk, Hampton Court, and Sardine, 8 to Chemisette and 10 to 1 Fortunate.

After a long delay at the start, principally owing to the vagaries of the favourite, they were dismissed in a straggling line. In fact Beccles and Chemisette got away two or three lengths in front of everything else and the former, making all the running, won pulling up by three lengths. Shield beat Shot Silk by half a length for second place, after a good race. Time—53⅘secs.

THE DESERT HANDICAP.—Rs. 1,000. Rs. 800 to winner, and Rs 200 to second horse.

A Handicap for Arab horses. 1¼ miles.

Lieut-Col J Desaraj Urs' ch a h Rubric, 9st 7lbs	Melsom	1
Mr R R S's ch a h Sapphire, 7st ..	Abdul Kader	2
„ Sydenham's b a h Syndic, 6st 7lbs ...	Bennett	3
Lieut-Col A Sprot's ch a h Harefoot, 8st 12lbs	McQuade	0
Mr W F Wormald's b a h Baby Boy, 8st 3lbs	O'Neil	0

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Rubric, 3 to 1 each agst Baby Boy and Sapphire, 4 to 1 Harefoot and 5 to 1 Syndic.

Rubric on the rails got away with Shapphire next, and Syndic, Harefoot and Baby Boy in the order named. So they went into the country, so they came out of the dip, and strange to say in the very same order they finished. It was, however, a great struggle between the first two, Sapphire challenging in the most resolute way two hundred yards from home. The favourite ran game as a pebble, and just retaining his advantage won by a neck; seven lengths between second and third. Time—2mins. 29secs.

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Louis, 5 to 2 agst Upstart, 3 to 1 Philistine and 6 to 1 Prime.

From a good start Philistine led out and speedily established a lead which he increased in the dip to half-a-dozen lengths. Striding along Colonel Grant's colt won without being pressed by five lengths; same distance between second and third. Time—1 min. 23⅕ secs.

(Winner trained privately.)

THE AUGUST STAKES.—Rs. 1,200, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 200. A Handicap for horses. 1¼ miles.

Mr Spooner Hart's b aus g Wallgrove, 8st 10lbs	O'Neil	1
Mr A A Apcar's b aus g Goldsmith, 7st 7lbs	Penton	2

General Sir G T Pretyman's br aus g Mainspring, 7st 9lbs	Gooloo	0
Major H C V Harrison's ch aus g Glenfield, 7st 11lbs ...	Mirza Khaleel	0

BETTING: 2 to 1 Walgrove, 4 to 1 each Trenton, Promontary, Goldsmith and Corrie Roy, 8 to 1 Mainspring and 10 to 1 Glenfield.

Away to a good start, but coming to the distance the favourite appeared to be winning easily. Goldsmith, however, challenged vigorously and another really fine race resulted in a dead heat, with Trenton four lengths behind third. Time—2mins. 12secs.

In the run off, Wallgrove won fairly easily by three lengths. Time—2 mins. 13⅗ secs.

The betting was 2 to 1 on Wallgrove and 6 to 4 agst Goldsmith.

THE EXCELSIOR STAKES.—Rs. 600, of which the second pony will receive Rs 100. A Handicap for C.-B. ponies 14-2 and others 14-1 and under. 5 furlongs.

Capt W Dougall's ch aus g Lancer, 7st 5lbs	Melsom	½ heat
Capt W A Ward's b aus m Dolly, 7st 11b ...	Bennett	0

BETTING: 5 to 4 agst Key West, 6 to 4 Ocean, 3 to 1 Acme, 5 to 1 Lancer and 6 to 1 Dolly.

PRODUCE OF THE KING-EMPEROR'S DOMINIONS.
LUCE'S EAU-DE-COLOGNE.
Durable and deliciously fragrant.
Rs. 2-12 Re. 1-8 Re. 1-4 and As. 14 per bottle.
According to size. From
J. F. Madan, Calcutta and Darjeeling.

After one false start, in which Dolly travelled half over the course, Acme got away with Lancer in close attendance. At the corner Lancer was in front but Acme soon disposed him, but the favourite came through at the first enclosure and won after a good struggle by three-fourths of a length with the dead-heaters three lengths behind Acme. Time—1 min. 8⅖ secs.

(Winner trained by Fowler.)

THE HORSE SELLING RACE.—Rs. 350, of which the first horse will receive Rs. 200, the second Rs. 100 and the third Rs. 50. For horses 5 furlongs.

Capt J Randall's br aus m Blue Blood (Rs. 1,200), 9st 10lbs	Owner	1
The Kumara Rajah of Pittapore's ch aus m Kingfisher (Rs. 500), 8st 5lbs ...	Meah Jan	2

SANDOWN PARK.

DELIGHTFUL summer weather prevailed for the commencement of this meeting. The sun shone brilliantly during the greater part of the day, and a nice breeze was also moving. It was not surprising, therefore, that the attendance for the first day was unusually large, the conditions, as well as the prospect of some attractive racing, drawing sportsmen together in great numbers. The valuable Foal Stakes brought out a field of nine. Flotsam (third in the Derby) and Gay Gordon (second to Sceptre in the Hardwicke Stakes) shared favouritism, but, whereas Lord Derby's colt gave only a moderate display, Sir D. Cooper's representative won a great race by a neck from Sir E. Cassel's Exchequer, who ran second to Rock Sand at Ascot. After capturing the Wadham Plate by a neck from Giglio, Ichi Ban broke down, and failed to elicit a bid at the subsequent auction. The Pet colt (late Lucky Dog) showed that his Manchester form was correct by running away with the Rookery Two-Year-Old Race. W. Nightingall sent out a couple of winners in Tin Soldier and Logan Rock, who took the Cobham Plate and Grand Stand Handicap respectively, the Corinthian Welter Handicap going to Lord Carnarvon's Mountain Rose. Details :—

A rattling finish resulted in favour of Tin Soldier by two lengths; a length and a half between second and third. Missovaga was fourth, Rossano fifth, Egmont sixth, Bucklebury seventh, Snooker eighth, and Tideway last. There was no bid for the winner.

The delightful weather and the promise of another interesting afternoon's sport attracted a huge crowd to Sandown Park on Saturday. Fields, with one exception, ruled large, and backers commenced well by selecting Out o' Sight for the Robert de Witville Handicap, the four-year-old winning easily. The Lady Smith colt, who won at Newcastle on Thursday, failed to gain a place, and the Irish-trained Ferriera finished last. In the Selling Handicap the new rule respecting false starts was applied for the first time. The tapes of the "gate" were broken and all the horses, jumped off, but were recalled, Carrigavalla eventually romped home. Pretty Polly made her initial appearance on the racecourse in the British Dominion Two-Year-Old Race. She was first away and when half the distance had been covered the filly was out by herself, some twenty lengths in front, and she won in the commonest of canters. Mountain Rose captured the Wellington Handicap by a neck, Black Love took the Hampton Plate and Robert Le Diable the Coombe Plate. Trigg rode three winners.

NEWMARKET FIRST JULY MEETING.

The conditions for the commencement of the First July Meeting at Head-quarters on the 30th ultimo were all that could be desired. The sun shone delightfully, and there was a nice breeze blowing. The King, the Prince of Wales, and the Duke of Cambridge were interested spectators of the racing, but the general company was not large. Good fields contested the majority of the events, eight going to the post for the principal item on the card, the the July Stakes. Odds were laid on Montem, and, in the hands of M. Cannon, Lord Wolverton's filly won cleverly by half a length from Vergia, while, a like distance away, Lord Rosebery's Chelys was third. Montem is perhaps best known as the Kermesse filly. She won the New Stakes at Ascot, and has quickly placed another valuable race to her credit. It is worthy of note that her dam also captured the New Stakes and July Stakes in 1881. She next ran third in the Richmond Stakes, Goodwood, but absolutely won the Champagne Stakes, Doncaster, and the Middle Park Plate. Montem is engaged in the corresponding events this year. She may still further follow Kermesse's example. Ladas, her sire, also won the last two mentioned races in 1893. Backers did pretty well at Newmarket yesterday, although in the opening event, the Maiden Two-Year Old Plate, Drumnigh, an outsider, defeated the favourite, Mrs. Hawkins, by three-quarters of a length, Kilcberan, carrying top weight, scored over seventeen opponents in the Visitors' Plate. Niphetos was left at the post. The Hare Park Handicap fell to Patron Saint, the Trial Plate to Reservist, and the Bottisham Plate to Bibury, F. Hardy rode three winners and M. Cannon two. Details:—

Won by two lengths; four lengths separated second and third. Most Excellent was fourth. The winner was bought in for 400gs. Time—1min 25⅖secs.

Delightful weather was again associated with racing at head-quarters on the second day. The King and the Prince of Wales were present, also the Khedive, who is the guest of Sir Ernest Cassel. Eighteen contested the Plantation Plate, but backers did not hesitate to lay odds on the Pet colt. Mr Gilpin's youngster was first away and cantered home. He has won all his engagements so far, and has shown himself a two-year-old of great merit. He was purchased as a yearling for 80 guineas, and his racing career will no doubt be watched with considerable interest. The Stud Produce Stakes brought out a dozen competitors, Orienta being a slightly better favourite than Catgut The pair were divided at the finish by Melodious, Mr Lindemere's filly gaining the verdict easily. This was her third bracket straight away. Whistling Crow took the Stetchworth Plate and Angelito the All-aged Plate. The Duke of Devonshire won the High-weight Handicap with Maladroit, and Lady Burgoyne also carried his colours to victory in the Soham Plate.

THE STUD PRODUCE STAKES—Of 1239 sovs, for two-year-olds; colts 9st, fillies and geldings 8st 11lbs; with penalties and allowances. Chesterfield Course (five furlongs).

Won easily by three lengths; a neck divided the second and third Richmond was fourth, Pam fifth, Tiger sixth, Dolores Olga seventh, Extradition eighth, The Warrior ninth, Nahma tenth Tay colt eleventh, Santa colt next, and Poplar a long way last. Time—1min. 3secs.

The weather for the third day's proceedings was again of a delightful nature. It was, in fact, the warmest day yet experienced and but for a good breeze the heat would have been almost unbearable. The card was a very attractive one, the first "ten-thousand-pounder" of the season being included, find there were also the July Cup and the Exeter Stakes. His Majesty was again present, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, and the general attendance showed an increase. Nine contested the Princess of Wales's Stakes, the same number as in 1897 and 1899, when the respective winners were Velasquez and Flying Fox. Ard Patrick had been prepared specially for yesterday's valuable race, not having previously run in public this season, and he started the hottest favourite that has ever won the event. Odds of 6 to 4 were laid on Flying Fox four years ago, but about Mr. Gubbins's colt 2 to 1 was demanded by the pencillers. Ard Patrick won in brilliant style, finishing three lengths in front of Royal Lancer, who was followed at an interval of four lengths by Cheers. In addition to the winner, however, the second and third horses received substantial sums out of the stakes, the net value of the race to last year's Derby champion being 7,185 sovs., which brings his winnings to date up to 17,331 sovs. When Isinglass captured the Princess of Wales's Stakes in 1894 he earned a little short of 11,000 sovs, but the second and third horses received considerably less than in the following years. Ard Patrick is nexs engaged in the Eclipse Stakes, to be run on 17th July and should he then meet Rock Sand and Sceptre it would, indeed, be a race between giants.

THE PRINCESS OF WALES'S STAKES—Of 10,000 sovs, the second received 1,500 sovs, third 1,000 sovs, nominator of the winner 400 sovs, nominator of the second 200 sovs; weight for age, etc. Suffolk Stakes course (one mile four furlongs).

Mr J Cannon's Soaraway, by Ayrshire—Lady Muncaster, 4yrs, 8st	F Hardy	0

(Winner trained by S. Darling, at Beckhampton.)

BETTING:—2 to 1 on Ard Patrick, 10 to 1 agst Snowberry 100 to 8 Veles, 100 to 8 Royal Lancer, 20 to 1 Cheers, 25 to 1 Conroy II, 33 to 1 each Fowling Piece, Floriform, Soaraway 50 to 1 (offered).

Veles was the first to leave the paddock, and he cantered to the post followed by Cheers, Snowberry, Fowling Piece, Soaraway. Royal Lancer, and Ard Patrick, with Conroy II. bringing up the rear. There was little delay before the barrier was raised and Conroy II. showed the way clear of Soaraway, Snowberry, and Floriform, with Royal Lancer and Cheers next, and Ard Patrick galloping in the heels of the latter. Fowling Piece being the whipper in for a mile, when Cheers took a slight lead of Royal Lancer and Ard Patrick. A quarter of a mile from home Ard Patrick drew out clear of Royal Lancer and Cheers (the trio being out by themselves), and making the remainder of the running, the favourite won easily by three lengths; four lengths between second and third. Floriform, a hundred yards off, was placed fourth, Snowberry was fifth, Conroy II. sixth, Vele, seventh, and Fowling Piece last. Value of the stakes £7,185.

SURREY vs. YORKSHIRE.—Played at Sheffield on 29th and 30th June and 1st July Surrey won by 145 runs. Both these counties are fighting very hard just now to retrieve their position, and it would have been impossible to mark out the winner with any degree of confidence. The return of Hirst has greatly strengthened the Yorkshire eleven, but Rhodes seems to have lost a good deal of his skill when he is not at work on a very trick wicket. On he first day's play Surrey had reason to congratulate themselves for on a wicket which helped the bowlers a little, they scored 280 and dismissed four of best Yorkshire batsmen for 122. The Surrey batting was very good on the whole, although that of Holland and Lees alone stood out very prominently. The former played a most excellent innings and was at the wickets for two hours and a half, being fourth out; he hit twelve 4's. Hayward, who never seemed quite comfortable helped him to put on 70 for the first wicket in an hour. This was the most productive partnership of the innings, but the Yorkshire bowlers never had the slightest chance of making a clean sweep for nearly every man showed good form. Able and Holland put together 41 runs at about the rate of a run a minute and Lees played a very good game indeed. Yorkshire lost Brown when the total was only two, but Denton and Tunnicliffe then put on 78 runs in 50 minutes, and things looked well for the home team. But before stumps were drawn four wickets were down, Richardson being in great form. On Tuesday morning the Yorkshiremen did badly, for although Tunnicliffe, who was not out 52 overnight, continued to play fine cricket, while Smith kept up his wicket for about half an hour for a hit for 4, Lock wood and Richardson soon became masters of the situation. Soon seven wickets were down for 169, and at last Tunnicliffe, when within three runs of his hundred, was stumped after a faultless innings which had lasted for two hours and a half. He fell a victim to Lockwood, who then disposed of Wainwright and Ringrose with the next two balls, thus doing the hat trick. As a result of the rapid downfall of the wickets, Yorkshire were 98 runs behind, which did not look at all promising for them since the wicket was still helping the bowlers. In their second innings Surrey soon began to forge ahead, and by excellent cricket Hayward and Holland put on 78 runs before lunch without being separated, so that their county with all the wickets in hand was now leading by 156 runs. But a great disappointment was in store for Surrey men. When, after lunch, the total had been increased by two runs, Holland and Hayward were both dismissed, and from this time the Yorkshire bowlers had the best of matters, Ringrose especially meeting with success. Abel and Lees made useful scores and Walker followed the example of the Surrey captain who had preceded him by making a fine effort at the critical moment. The Yorkshiremen had to go in to make 268—a most difficult task under the circumstances. From the very first disasters occurred and soon wickets began to fall thick and fast. At the end of the day the total was only 99 for seven wickets, so that Yorkshire still required 178 to win. The following day nothing unexpected happened, and Surrey gained an easy victory. Richardson's fine bowling was quite a noticeable feature of the match.

NOTTS vs. YORKSHIRE.—Played at Trent Bridge on 25th, 26th and 27th June. Yorkshire won by an innings and 68 runs. Although Yorkshire still had to take the field without several of their best men, the presence of Hirst in the team simply made all the difference in the world. The first day's cricket may be said practically to have decided the result, for against the Notts' total of 132, Yorkshire had scored one more run for only three wickets, Hirst being not out 33 and Wilkinson not out 38. The Notts innings was disappointing, although this was really not at all surprising, for there had been very heavy rains which had rendered the wicket very difficult, a state of affairs of which Rhodes availed himself in the most marked manner. On the other hand Hirst (who did not bowl by any means as fast as usual), Haigh and Ringrose were all more or less ineffective. Misfortunes came soon to Notts, for after W. and G. Gunn had played steadily for a time, there was a breakdown, and although Anthony, who made 20, was missed twice off Rhodes in the long field, half the team were out for 69. G. Gunn, who had all the time been acting entirely on the defensive, brought the total without further loss to 93 before lunch, and afterwards increased it to 117. The innings then was brought to an abrupt conclusion. The Yorkshiremen batted very strongly, and of the five men who went in before stumps were drawn, four made over 20. Brown and Tunnicliffe scored 50 in forty minutes for the first wicket, and when Hirst and Wilkinson got together the bowling was mastered. On the next day there was a succession of good innings. Wilkinson and Hirst continued their partnership until it had produced 143 runs in two hours and a half, when Wilkinson was out for 64, which had taken him three hours to compile. Hirst was within a single run of making his hundred when his fine innings came to a conclusion: he had been at the wickets for a little more than three hours, and had made his runs out of 163; he had taken an hour to score his last twenty runs, and to his over-caution may be ascribed his downfall. The innings was by no means over, for Rhodes played splendid cricket for a couple of hours, while Wainwright showed excellent form for 41. Notts had to go in against a balance of 232, and when stumps were drawn had made 45 for the loss of two wickets, so that they were still 187 runs behind. G. Gunn was not out 21. On Saturday Gunn was only able to increase his score by 6, and after this the Yorkshire bowlers always held the upper hand, no one being able to make any prolonged resistance to them.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE vs. SOMERSET.—Played at Gloucester on 25 and 26 June. Somerset won by an innings and 72 runs. By the end of the first day's play Gloucestershire were almost hopelessly out of the running, and nothing but a magnificent innings by Jessop could have saved them. In their first innings on a difficult wicket they were powerless against Cranfield and Braund, while on the other hand their own bowlers could make very little impression on O. M. Samson and Martyn, chiefly through whose efforts the Somerset total was reasonably large. Samson made the first hundred of his career in first-class cricket; he was at the wickets for three hours and twenty minutes, during which he played beautiful cricket. His partnership with Martyn was the turning point of the game, for when the two men came together, the total was only 114 for five wickets; 116 runs were put on. Of these Martyn claimed 73 by the most vigorous cricket; at one time during his innings he scored a 6 and three 4's off an over from Spry. When stumps were drawn, Gloucestershire had lost a wicket in their second innings for 8 runs, and were thus 200 runs behind. They did a little better on the next morning, Wrathall playing brilliant cricket for thirty minutes, during which he made 54 out of 68 runs. After his dismissal Thomas made a useful stand, but the tail, with the exception of Roberts, made duck's eggs to a man.

SURREY vs. LANCASHIRE.—Played at Old Trafford on 25th 26th and 27th June. Lancashire won by seven wickets. The weather and the wicket had a good deal to do with the result of this match. As it turned out, Surrey reaped no advantage from winning the toss, for as a result of it they had much the worst of the wicket in both innings. There had been a great deal of rain at Manchester, and when the game began it was easy to see that it would be a bowlers' match. From the first Barnes proved to be very difficult but on the other hand, Littlewood could make no impression on the batsmen, although this did not very much matter, since when Littlewood was taken off Brearley was able to do all that was necessary. None of the great Surrey batsmen could do anything with the bowling except Lockwood, who kept up his wicket for nearly an hour, waiting in vain for someone to help him effectively. The innings was a triumph for Barnes and Brearley. When Lancashire went in they were as much at a loss at first as Surrey had been, and the first four wickets fell for 41 runs, no one seeming able to look at Richardson except Spooner, who batted very well, indeed for 27. So far Surrey were doing well but the long experience of Maclaren stood him in good stead and at this critical stage of the game he played splendid cricket. Nor was he left alone to fight for his county, for Sharp and afterward E. E. Steel hit hard, the former scoring 24 out of 39 and the latter helping Maclaren to put on 51 runs. Altogether Maclaren was batting for an hour and a half and his innings was a better display of cricket than many others of his when he had made considerably over a hundred. At the close of the innings Barnes made a very useful 17. Surrey had to go in against a lead of 61, which on a very difficult wicket was a great disadvantage. In the course of half-an-hour's batting they lost Haywad and Holland before stumps were drawn with the total at 11, so that they were now in a most unsatisfactory position, being still 50 runs behind. On the next day there was heavy rain and it was found impossible to play. The wicket on Saturday was so wet that there was no cricket until one o'clock, but for all that there was plenty of time for Surrey to be beaten. They were never able to make up the leeway, although when two more wickets had fallen they had knocked off the runs, it was hardly likely that the last six men would score enough to give Lancashire a very difficult task. Abel at last broke through his spell of bad luck and played a most excellent innings being not out when lunch time arrived. Unhappily for Surrey he was caught off the first ball when the game was resumed. Lockwood again played a fine defensive innings, but nothing could withstand the triumphant progress of Barnes and Brearley, and Lancashire only had to make 52 runs to win. There was just a chance that Surrey might escape, for rain seemed imminent. But Garnett and Spooner made runs as quickly as possible, and when the downpour came they had scored 22, although they were both out. But the hopes felt by Surrey men that the rain would last long enough to save them were not realised, and when play was resumed the runs were soon hit off.

ETON vs. WINCHESTER.—Played at Eton on 24th and 25th June. Eton won by 43 runs. In this match each side had four members of last year's eleven, and five out of the eight distinguished themselves. Nicholls played a particularly good innings for Eton, showing great powers of hitting. Williams also played a good innings and the tail in the persons of Boles and Tod did well. Evans bowled finely although he was not on for very long. The innings of Winchester was only noticeable for the batting of Weatherby and Morris and the good bowling of Scholfield and Tod. When stumps were drawn Eton had made 9 runs in their second innings, and were 54 runs on. On the second and last day most of the batsmen with the highest reputations did nothing of note but Crankshawe Campbell and Aspinall all played well. In the end Winchester had to make 218 to win and although Weatherby played a brilliant innings, which almost gave victory to his side, there were only two other men, Wright and Fyffe, who made any stand at all against the bowling

LAWN TENNIS.

THE ALL-ENGLAND CHAMPIONSHIP.

Magnificent weather again prevailed for the continuation of the English Lawn Tennis Championships on the 29th ultimo, and the enclosure at Wimbledon once more presented a most charming appearance The crowd almost reached the large dimensions of Saturday, and the interesting play was followed with keen interest. The various competitions are rapidly nearing conclusion, and, of course, the most important matches which took place yesterday were the Open Finals in the Gentlemen's Doubles and Singles, F. L. Riseley and M. J. G. Ritchie had survived to contest the right to challenge the Singles champion, H. L. Doherty; but the struggle did not produce a great exhibition of the pastime. Riseley was quite brilliant at times, but at others appeared inclined to recklessness, and it took him two hours and ten minutes, during which period 54 games were played, to defeat his steady-going opponent who always required a lot of beating. Ritchie spoiled good chances by bad serving, and he made no fewer than seven double faults. The brothers Doherty experienced little difficulty in defeating Mahoney and Ritchie in the Doubles, but the latter pair were considerably handicapped by the gruelling Ritchie received in the Singles. Mahoney played splendidly, but Ritchie failed to do himself justice. The competition for the Ladies' Doubles came to an end, winners being Miss Douglas and Mrs. Pickering. Details:—

GENTLEMEN'S SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIP (holder H. L. Doherty).—Final round (open competition): F. L. Riseley beat M. J. G. Ritchie by three sets to one 1—6, 6—3, 8—6, 13—11).

GENTLEMEN'S DOUBLES CHAMPIONSHIP (holder F. L. Riseley and S. H. Smith).—Final round (open competition): H. L. Doherty and R. F. Doherty beat H. S. Mahoney and M. J. G. Ritchie by three sets to love (8—6, 6—2, 6—2).

LADIES' DOUBLES.—Final: Mrs. Pickering and Miss D. K. Douglas beat Miss C. M. Wilson and Miss. H. Lane by two sets to love (4—2, 6—1).

ALL ENGLAND PLATE.—Semi-final round: C. Hobart beat R. J. McNair by two sets to one (4—6, 6—3, 7—5).

MIXED DOUBLES.—Fourth round (continued): S. H. Smith and Miss. E. W. Thomson beat B. Hillyard and Miss. Stawell-Brown by two sets to love (6—1, 11—9). Semi-final round: S. H. Smith and Miss. Thomson beat E. D. Robinson and Miss M. Stonham by two sets to love (6—2, 6—3).

With the continuation of brilliant weather, the attendance on the 30th ultimo was larger than ever at Wimbledon when the Lawn tennis Championships advanced another stage. Every possible coign of vantage was occupied, and there could not have been many less than 2 500 well-dressed men and women gazing on the central court when H. L. Doherty the champion, and F. L. Risley appeared to contest the challenge round of the Singles. Risley had worked his way through the open competition by a series of well-deserved victories, but when he tackled Doherty he was facing an opponent of quite different class. The holder commenced rather unsteadily, and prolonged the first set, but he soon settled down, and giving quite a masterly exhibition, fairly outplayed Riseley, who seemed to lose heart towards the finish. Miss Douglass, of Ealing, won the Ladies' Singles from Miss Thomson, of Rudleigh Salterton, but Miss Robb, the previous holder, did not turn out to defend her title. Miss Thompson plays in quiet and particularly graceful form but she was beaten by an opponent more certain with her returns. Miss Thomson, however, secured some consolation by helping to annex the Mixed Doubles with S. H. Smith who was particularly deadly with his terrific driving, and, after a kind of International duel against the American, C Hobart, A W Gore proved successful in the All-England Plate. Details:—

GENTLEMEN'S SINGLE CHAMPIONSHIP MATCH.—H L Doherty (holder) beat F L Riseley (winner of the All-comers' Competition) by three sets to love (7—5, 6—3, 6—0). Doherty took a long time to find his proper game, and Riseley with a series of effective drives down the side lines, varied with an occasional unreturnable volley, managed to hold his own until the games were called 5 all. Doherty then won the next two games and secured the first set. The holder rapidly improved, and although Riseley played very well, he stood little chance against the champion's wonderful knowledge of the most effective strokes. Riseley eventually fell off in his service, and after being level at three all in the second set, never won another game in the match, the third being a love set. The match only lasted fifty-five minutes.

LADIES' SINGLES (Miss M Robb, previous champion, did not defend her title)—Final and Championship Match: Miss D K Douglass beat Miss E W Thomson by two sets to one (4—6, 6—4, 6—2). This was a very pretty match to watch. Miss Thomson possesses an effective low, cut service, but she failed to return the ball so often as Miss Douglass. The latter led in the first set at 4—1, but Miss Thomson then won the next five games off the reel. Miss Thomson continued to play splendidly for a time, but gradually fell away, and was eventually rather easily beaten.

ALL-ENGLAND PLATE—Final round: A W Gore beat C. Hobart by two sets to love (7—5, 6—3).

MIXED DOUBLES.—Fourth round (concluded): C Hobart and Miss Bromfield beat M J G Ritchie and Miss W Longhurst by two sets to love (6—4, 6—4). Semi-final round (concluded): C Hobart and Miss Bromfield w o, F L Riseley and Miss Douglass scratched. Final round: S H Smith and Miss E W Thomson beat C Hobart and Miss Bromfield by two sets to love (3—2 6—3).

Probably the most successful championship meeting ever held at Wimbledon terminated on the afternoon of the 1st instant. Brilliantly fine weather prevailed throughout the entire proceedings, the sun shining, in fact, from first to last, and, although only one match remained to be played yesterday, the attendance suffered little by comparison with the numbers recorded during the earlier stages of the tournament. The piece de resistance yesterday was one calculated to stir the whole lawn tennis world. Last year champions for five successive seasons in the brothers Doherty were beaten in the challenge round of the Gentlemen's Doubles by Smith and Riseley, but the former pair were not content to let matters rest at that, and, having steered safely through the preliminary competition, became entitled to meet their former conquerors. The Dohertys proved in quite brilliant form, and easily regained their lost laurels, but, had Smith been able to do himself anything like justice, the result might easily have been the other way. Riseley played magnificently, but had to suffer through many mistakes by his partner, who, besides other things, lost his service on five occasions. The triumph of the challengers proved highly popular among the 2,000 people, who witnessed a most interesting match Details:—

THE GENTLEMEN'S DOUBLES CHAMPIONSHIP MATCH.—R. F. Doherty and H. L. Doherty (winners of the All-comers' Competiton) beat F. L. Riseley and S. H. Smith by three sets to love (6—4, 6—4, 6—4). Chiefly by means of Riseley's superb volleying and service the holders held their own to three all, when R. F. Doherty put in some effective work at the net, and won the first set for the brothers. The games were called four all in the second set, but subsequently the Westerners failed to add another point. H. L. Doherty and Riseley were very prominent in the last set, but the latter was let down by his partner, who frequently failed with his best stroke, the long and hard drive. The games were once three all, but the Dohertys eventually won at 6—4, and consequently a love set match, which lasted an hour and ten minutes

LONDON A. C. SUMMER MEETING.

For their summer meeting at the Stamford Bridge Grounds on Saturday; the 27th ultimo, the L A C were favoured with brilliant weather with a nice breeze to temper the heat, but they received poor support from the general public, which is to be regretted, considering the capital programme of sport provided. Entries were fairly numerous, and though the fields did not rule large some interesting racing was seen. L F Tremeer proved to be in fine form. He won both the sprints, and was in the successful team in the relay race, but he failed to retain the hurdles challenge cup, which went to A Trafford in good time. The hammer-throwing, putting the weight, and high jumps handicaps were productive of close competitions, in which the old Oxonian, W E B Henderson, and the Light Blue, H A Leeke, figured prominently, though the last-named, being on scratch mark, was asked to give too much away J R Cleave showed a want of practice in the half-mile challenge cup race, and E S Ward secured a popular victory. The quarter-mile handicap brought out a promising youngster in E H Montague, of the S L H, who won both his heat and the final very readily off the ten-yard mark, his time when he beat C C Twort, of the Twort-Cleminson A C to whom he was conceding 21 yards being 50 ⅗ secs. The success of H F Pash in the mile handicap was also very gratifying. The officials were: Referee, Mr. C Herbert; judges, Messrs S K Holman, E H Pelling, H W Hill, J Shearman, and D Basan; starter. Mr. C L Lockton; stewards, Messrs. F L Fisher, E Ion Pool, and W J B Tippets; timekeepers, Messrs A Ovenden and J E Fowler Dixon; handicappers, Messrs C Herbert and A J Fowden. Details:—

100 YARDS CHALLENGE CUP.—L F Tremeer, 1; J A Miller, 2; C D Comrie 3. C H Jupp was a non-starter. Tremeer had the measure of his opponents from the start, and won easily by nearly three yards, two yards between second and third. Time—10⅖ secs.

100 YARDS HANDICAP (OPEN).—Heat 1: A Goodall, L A C 7 yards start, 1; H Norrey, L A C, 9½, 2. Won by a foot Time—10⅖ secs. Heat 2: C W Fox, L A C, 2¾ yards start, 1; C Towers, introduced, 9¾, 2. Won by a foot. Time, 10½ secs. Heat 3: R E Wright L A C, 8 yards start, 1; H Watson, L A C, 2¾, 2. Won by a foot. Time, 10½ secs. Heat 4: L F Tremeer, L A C ¾ yards start, 1; E H Clube, S L H, 3, 2. Won by half a yard. Time—10½ sec. Heat 5: F S Lloyd, L A C, 7¼ yards start, 1; W H Orton, L A C, 4½, 2. Won by inches only. Time—10½ secs.

FINAL HEAT.

F S Lloyd, L A C, 7¼ ...	...	3

Also ran: A Goodall, L A C, 7, 0; R E Wright, L A C 8, 0. Wright looked like getting through at one point, but fifteen yards from the tape Tremeer came with a rare effort and won by quite half a yard. with Lloyd beating the late S L H Secretary by a foot. Time—10½secs

PUTTING THE WEIGHT HANDICAP.—W E B Henderson, allowed 1ft 6in, 38ft, 1; G W Clark, L A C 6in, 37ft 2½in, 2; A J McHutchon, London Highland A C, scratch, 37ft 1in, 3; H A Leeke, L A C, Scratch, 36ft 4; P G Masters, L A C, 0; A J Burn, S L H, 0.

880 YARDS CHALLENGE CUP.—(J H Bessell, holder, resigned)—S. Ward, 1; A L Woodard, 2; J R Cleave, 0. The non-starters were J B Densham and E L Gay-Roberts. Ward led at the bell, with Cleave in attendance, and just when an exciting finish appeared in store, the Oxonian stopped through lack of condition, and Ward practically finished alone, Woodard coming in a long way behind the winner. Time—2mins 0⅖sec.

120 YARDS HURDLES CHALLENGE CUP.—Heat 1: L F Tremeer (holder) and J H Jarvis walked over, E S Ward not starting. Heat 2: A Trafford, 1; J B Densham, 2; N Zambra, 0. Won easily. Time—18⅖secs. Final heat: Trafford, 1; Jarvis, 2; Tremeer, 3. Trafford took the hurdles in good style, and won easily; a poor third. Time—16⅖secs.

THROWING THE HAMMER HANDICAP.—P G Masters, L A C, allowed 18ft, 126ft 10in, 1; W E B Henderson, L A C, allowed 8ft, 120ft 6in, 2; H A Leeke, L A C, scratch, 111ft 3in, 3; A J McHutchon, London Highland A C, allowed 25ft, 89ft 7in, 0.

120 YARDS HURDLES HANDICAP.—Heat 1: J H Jarvis, L A C, owes 5 yards 1; A Trafford, L A C, owes 17, 2; N Zambra, L A C, owes 11, 0. Won easily. Time—18⅖secs. Heat 2: W J Gibson, London Hospital A C, owes 12 yards, 1; W F Owsley, L A C, owes 3, 2. Gibson took the lead two hurdles from home and won by a yard. Time—18⅖secs. Heat 3: T F Cox, Metropolitan Police A C, owes 6 yards, w o Final heat: Jarvis, 1; Gibson, 2; Owsley (fastest loser), 3, Cox, 0. Won by a yard; half a yard dividing second and third. Time—18⅖secs.

HALF MILE RELAY RACE.—L A C beat L H, L F Tremer got ahead of Watson in the first 220 yards and C W Fox and W H Orton beating J B Densham and C D Comrie. C H Jupp entered on the last stretch with a good lead of G P Constantine. The last-named closed on the speedy sprinter in the straight, but Jupp, although lame, held out, and won by six yards. Time—1min, 33⅖secs.

HIGH JUMP HANDICAP.—A J McHutchon, London Highland A C allowed 2in, 5ft 7¼, 1; E S Ward, L A C, 3in, 5ft 7in, 2; W E B Henderson, L A C scratch, 5ft 6⅖in, 3; N Zambra, L A C, 2in, 0.

440 YARDS HANDICAP.—Heat 1: E H Montague, S L H 10 yards start 1; G R Painton, London Hospital A C, 25, 2 W J Basan, Blackheath H, 30, 3; J B Densham, L A C, 9, 0; C D Comrie, L A C, 14, 0; R E Wright, L A C, 25, 0; A Goodall, L A C, 25, 0; F W Twort Twort, CleminsonA C 33, 0. Won by yards, one yard between second and third. Time—51secs. Heat 2; C C Twort, Twort-Cleminson A C, 31 yards start, 1; E P Constantine, LA C 10, L J Twort, Twort Cleminson A C, 18, 3; H Watson, L A C, 14, 0 H Miller, A C, 21, 0; F Llyd, L A C, 25, 0; A H Bilbrough, Reigate H, 26, 0; S B Hudson, Finchley H, 27, 0; E R Small, L A C, 32, 0. Won by three yards; half a yard between second and third. Time—50⅖secs.

Montague again ran with excellent judgment, and had little difficulty in winning by three yards; a good race between the others ended in Basan being beaten by a yard, with less between the next two. Time—50⅖secs.

ONE MILE HANDICAP (Open.

H F Pash, L A C, 148 yards start ...	...	1
H E M Martin, S L H, 135 ...	...	2
E H Orton, L A C, 118 ...	...	3
C S White L A C, 138 ...	...	4

Also ran:—E L Gay-Roberts, L A C, 38 yards start; E S Ward, L A C, 76; E F Judson, Blackheath H, 94; S W Fowler-Dixon, L A C, 108; F B Thomson, L A C, 135; H G Sydes, L A C, 138; H D Montague, 138; C Roffey, Ranelagh H, 140; S Luniss, L A C, 146; H Miller, L A C, 148; W B Lowe, introduced, 156; and C H Spendlove, Ranelagh H, 268.

Pash was leading on entering the last lap, Gay-Roberts at that time being sixty yards behind the leader, and occupying eighth place. He failed to go the pace of the leaders, and Pash running strongly to the end, won by six yards from Martin, who beat Orton by a trifle less for second place. White was running third to within a couple of strides of the tape and was then beaten by Orton. Time—4mins 21 ⅖sec.

The prizes and trophies were handed to the winners by Mrs S K Holman.

THE N. C. U. CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Followers of amateur cycle racing will have reason to remember the first batch of the National Championships of 1903. To say that they proved a fiasco on Saturday the 28th ultimo, a Canning Town, is by no means too harsh a form of criticism. After what was witnessed in the mile event, it is time that the Union girded up its loins, and seriously considered the question whether the sport of cycling is to sink deeper in the mire, or whether it is to revive and become attractive to the public. We were told some few years back that the reason of the decline in path racing was undoubtedly due to the indulgence in the wretched practice of "loafing." This, in all truth, was bad enough, but last Saturday's display has furnished a new phase somewhat; at all events so far as amateur championship events are concerned. The standard time limit was fixed at 2mins 50sec. and each of the five heats were completed well within that period. But a very different state of things prevailed in the final. It was a story of the worst malpractices in cycle-racing. Fouling and boring was freely indulged in by a rider whose sportsman-like conduct hitherto has been above suspicion. Two equally well-known riders, one of whom had an excellent chance of securing a victory, were thrown only a few yards from the finish by a deliberate act of boring. The whole business was only too palpable, and the spectators did not fail to mark their disgust at such procedure. And so the Mile Amateur championship of 1903 became null and void. In the five-mile event, H. W. Puyne, the holder, was defeated in his heat, and the honours were transferred to A. L. Reed, who, with J S. Benyon, a sterling rider from Liverpool, contested a most exciting finish, ending in a victory for Reed by a very close margin. Other events were included in the programme, which was much too lengthy, the last event not being finished until nearly 8 P.M.—Results:

ONE MILE N. C. U. CHAMPIONSHIP.—Winners of Heats: A L Reed (holder), Polytechnic, J E Wells, Putney, A. E. Wills, Putney, A. S. Ingram, Polytechnic, and T. Childs. Newcastle. All the heats were ridden well within the time limit of 2mins 50secs, but the final was declared void owing to that time having been exceeded.

FIVE-MILE N C U CHAMPIONSHIP.—Final Heat: A L Reed, Polytechnic, 1; J S Benyon, Liverpool, 2; J T Marnie, Birmingham, 3; A S Ingram, Polytechnic, 0. The event was contested in four heats and a final, championship honours resting with A L Reed after a fine struggle in the last fifty yards with Benyon, who possesses a remarkably fine turn of speed. Marnie finished about a length behind the pair, while Ingram sat up in the straight. Time—14mins 6⅘sec.

FIVE-MILE MOTOR-CYCLE HANDICAP.—Final Heat: C R Collier, 15secs start, 1; T H Tessier, 30secs 2; J F Crundel scratch 3, Won by half a lap; a lap between second and third Time—7mins 42⅘secs.

ONE MILE CYCLE HANDICAP (THAMES IRONWORKS C C).—Final Heat: W E Cannon; 140 yards start, 1; S T Dawson, 190, 2; R H Dawson, 1803. Won by four lengths. Time—2mins. 1⅘sec.

880 YARDS FLAT HANDICAP (OPEN).—S. Doyer Putney A.C., 68 yards start, 1; W A Lines, St. Bride's A C., 59, 2; W E Ames, Highgate H., 93, 3. Won by 20 yards; 6 yards between second and third. Time—1min 55⅘secs.

HALF-MILE CYCLE HANDICAP (OPEN).—Final Heat: V B Casey, Putney, 30 yards start, 1; R Brooks, Thames Ironworks, 25, 2; G C Anderson, West Ham, 45, 3. A capital race, which was secured by Casey, by a length and a half from the local riders. Time—1min. 5secs.

ONE MILE FLAT HANDICAP (OPEN).—P. Judd St. Mary's H., 138, 1; S. Dyer, Putney A.C., 140, 2; H. Hobbs, Thames Ironworks A.C., 120, 3. Won by 30 yards; 20 yards separating second and third. Time—4mins. 18⅘secs.

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

THE meet on the 16th instant was at Sandy Nullah Toll-Bar when a large field, including Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Ampthill, turned out. The Covert near the Barber's Shop was first drawn but without success, then hounds opened on a line from the swamp near the 6th mile on the Pykara Road and a fast burst followed; over the ridge by Wapshare's Hare Shola, across the swamp below, through Wenlock and Khed Sholas, and along the Waterfall Bridle Road, past the Toda Coffee Shop the jack going to ground near the Pykara River, where he was left. Briar Shola and Gibbs Shola were next drawn blank and in the Bracken Cover a sambhur was started but not followed. On the south side of Rawlings Nullah a game gentleman was viewed who took the field a merry run into Bluegums where hounds dwelt some minutes, then over the spur to Governor's Shola and below this away to the right eventually going to ground on the top of Martyn's Shola, where he could not be evicted. The morning's run was full of incident and pleasant in spite of the monsoon weather and the high winds.

B.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

THE nine-mile jog along the Ahmednagar Road to Wagholi on the 12th thinned the attendance down to about a quarter of a hundred sportsmen, and after the previous night's shower and the distance from Poona and consequent freedom from the guileless and ubiquitous Tommy hopes for a good morning's sport naturally ran high, but were, alas, doomed to comparative disappointment. No law was given to late comers—on the principle presumably that if it was worth coming nine miles it was worth coming in time and certainly the morning seemed too good to waste after the abominable weather we have been enduring of late and on these stroke of six the Master jogged on to draw the neighbouring sugarcane fields. A find was soon proclaimed and men jammed their hats down and settled themselves down into their saddles hoping it was one of their good sticky-seat days for the going was apparently delightful and surely scent must be good on such a day.—But there are two components to a good run—good hounds and a good jack. The first we are assured of, but on this occasion, the latter failed us. Possibly bold Renardjee was loth to leave his happy home—possibly he was a trifle strange to that part of the country—certainly he couldn't make up his mind as to where he wanted to go and, after unseemly and unsporting gyrations more characteristic of a watch spring than a straight necked jack he accelerated his ignominious end by jumping down a blind well with his relentless enemies at his tag. Fortunately it was not very deep and hounds scrambled down without injury, though volunteers had to be called out to bring hounds and the dishonoured remains to ground level again. A poor run and a great disappointment. Moving on right handed the Master drew several little patches of sugarcane, but this excellent part of the country seems badly stocked with varmint (a too strict preservation of pheasants we must presume) and the rest of the morning was spent in futile wanderings, the only interesting incident, apart from the study of hounds and the lesson to be learned therefrom and from their handling by so distinguished an expert being, the negociation of a somewhat formidable stone wall—mighty solid and forbidding it was. I am told,—in cold blood but luckily an accessible and practicable piece for the non-thrusters was discovered. After vain endeavours to listen to a wild rover the gallant Master gave up the forlorn hope. A somewhat disappointing morning from a sport point of view, but after all fresh air and exercise do one a vast amount of good, though as a sportsman remarked cynically "one can get them a trifle nearer home";

It is difficult and trying to the ordinary system to burn the candle of life at both ends (with on occasional small illumination in the middle as well) and the largely patronized Cinderella dance at the Gymkhana Club on the previous night, well into the small hours of the clock indeed naturally told severely on the hunting contingent that turned up to meet the gallant Master at Pashan on the 16th. The ground was naturally heavy on the lowlands and valleys, but the slopes were good enough going and a cool drizzly morning seemed to augur well for sport, hopes doomed once more to disappointment for the morning's sport cannot by the wildest straining of veracity be considered of a very thrilling description and it seems a feeble form of appreciation and a poor compliment to the intelligence of the Master and officials to paint a dull day in gaudy though incorrect colours. Tempered truth ought to hurt the feelings of no good sportsman, and there seems a certain impropriety in misleading the public with deliberately inaccurate chronicles. Disappointing days there must be—one can only hope they may be but seldom and they after all make the red-letter runs all the more thoroughly delightful. To return to the day's doings hounds were taken across the bund and the Master threw them into the sugarcane crops near the Ram Nullah, in previous years a safe find I am told.

On to Pashan and all drawn blank and as all could see the sugarcane was still too small to afford very trustworthy sanctuary to the wary wily one whose blood was being sought. After passing Pashan village a whimper or two put a stop to dulness for a time and working along the nullah in the direction of the Bamburda Heights burst into melody and men thought that after patient waiting they were in for a good thing and hunters were set going and hopes ran high. But the joy was short lived. Racing along the slope the Jack made straight for the steepest available part of the hill and after about seven minutes was tumbled over and worried. Just sufficient of a run to whet but not satisfy one's appetite. After a rest hounds were put into cover near the Government House Clock Tower, where a faint-hearted jack was chopped. Blood for the hounds but not much sport for the field and I gather that a good many could do with a little less blood and a little more galloping. However when this first burst of the monsoon is over we may confidently look forward to better sport, and it is reasonable enough that when a man has to be seven miles or more from one's bed at 5-30 A.M. he looks forward to a bit of a gallop as a recompense of his virtue.

BELLARY SKITTLE TOURNAMENT.

First Day, Tuesday, 14th July.

MUSKETRY SCHOOL A. vs. 14th M. I.—The Musketry team were superior to their opponents and had the best of matters all through, eventually winning by 4 goals and 3 subsidiaries to nil.

First Chukker.—Play ruled midfield till McEwen taking the ball down scored a subsidiary. Rice followed this up by putting on the first goal, McEwen shortly after adding a second; a free hit for a foul against the Musketry proved fruitless and the chukker ended with the scores: Musketry, 2 goals, 1 subsidiary; 14th M. I, nil.

Second Chukker.—Gwyer hit a subsidiary and McEwen made another. The 14th then got away but missed and some neat passing by McEwen and Rice enabled the latter to put on the third goal. He added a fourth a little before time, the Musketry winning as stated. Score:—Musketry, 4 goals 3 subsidiaries; 14th M. I., nil.

MUSKETRY B. vs. LEICESTER REGIMENT.

First Chukker.—The Leicesters opened well and Gaitskell drew first blood, Tronson following up with a subsidiary, a foul against the Musketry gave the Leicesters a free hit but nothing resulted, Gaitskell put the ball through once more before the end of the chukker when the score was: Leicesters, 2 goals 1 subsidiary; Musketry B, nil.

Second Chukker.—No scoring took place in this chukker which was conspicuous for a number of dangerous fouls against the Musketry team. The Leicesters nearly scored once or twice, but the chucker ended without result, the Leicesters thus winning by 2 goals and a subsidiary to nil. Teams:—

2ND MADRAS LANCERS vs. UBIQUE TEAM.—The Lancers quite outclassed their opponents.

First Chukker.—The Lancers got possession, Wheatley scored a goal to which he added another almost immediately. Then Henderson put the ball through with a fine hit. After some mid field play Ballantyne took the ball down and Colonel Younghusband scored. Again getting possession Ballantyne obtained a subsidiary. Another subsidiary was added and Henderson put on yet another goal. Score: 2nd M. L., 5 goals 2 subsidiaries; Ubique, nil.

Second Chukker.—Wheatley opened the scoring with a goal and Colonel Younghusband put on another. Ballantyne and Henderson took the ball down and the former put it through. A subsidiary was then scored, to which Ballantyne added another goal. A fine run by the same player resulted in the tenth goal being scored. Following some up—and—down play the Lancers got away and Colonel Younghusband put through, Ballantyne doing likewise a little later. Some pretty passing between Henderson and Ballantyne ended in the former scoring just before time. Score: 2nd M L 13 goals 3 subsidiaries; Ubique, nil. Teams.—

Second Day, Wednesday, 15th July.

2ND M. L. vs. 14TH M. I.—The Lancers had another easy victory winning by 10 goals and 1 subsidiary to nil.

First Chukker.—The Lancers got the ball and Wheatley scored a goal, Henderson adding a subsidiary. Ballantyne and Colonel Younghusband brought the ball down, the latter putting through, Ballantyne following suit a little later. Henderson scored a goal and then the 14th began to show up but not for long, Ballantyne getting possession and putting on a fifth goal. Colonel Younghusband next got the ball and passed to Ballantyne, who scored another goal which closed the chukker. Score: 2nd M. L., 6 goals 1 subsidiary; 14th M. I, nil.

Second Chukker.—Up and down play opened proceedings and the 14th began to get to work, but Ballantyne took the ball down and Wheatley put it through. Henderson next missed a shot, but Colonel Younghusband returned it and Henderson put it through. The same player scored two more goals before play ceased, the Lancers winning as stated. Teams:—

LEICESTER REGIMENT vs. UBIQUE.

First Chukker.—Mid field play ended in the Leicesters getting away and Tronson opening the scoring with a goal, a mêlée in front of the ubique goal a little later resulted in Puckle adding a second point. Then Gaitskell scored a subsidiary and Puckle added another goal. No further scoring took place, the chuckker ending in favour of the Leicesters by 3 goals and 1 subsidiary to nil.

Second Chukker.—Puckle made a goal which was followed by some wery even play. Then Tronson got away and put the ball through. Up and down play ensued till Dent got possession and taking it down Gaitskell scored a free hit for a foul against the Ubique resulted in a subsidiary. Score: Leicesters, 6 goals 2 subsidiaries: Ubique, nil. MUSKETRY A. vs. MUSKETRY B.

First Chukker.—McEwen scored for A team and from the throw in took the ball down, but it was brought back by Garsia. He was stopped and some neat passing resulted in Gwyer adding a second goal. A foul against A. team gave B. team its chance and a goal was scored from the free hit. Gwyer put on a third goal for a team and the chukker ended with the score: A team, 2 goals; B. team, 1 goal.

Second Chukker.—After some fast play Rice scored and A. team getting the ball from the throw in added a subsidiary. B. team then got away, but were stopped by Rice, who scored once more just before time. Score: A. team, 5 goals 1 subsidiary; B. team, 1 goal, Teams:—

CYCLING IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Friday, 3rd, July 1903.

THE first National Cyclists' Union championship meeting of the season, was held on the Canning Town track on 27th June. It proved most successful with the exception of the fine heat for the one mile championship, which is considered the blue ribband of the amateur race path. In this event the time limit of 2 minutes 50 seconds was exceeded, and the race was therefore declared void. A. L. Reed won this event, as well as the 5 miles championship, decided at the same meeting, with J. S. Benyon second, and J. T. Marnie third. This latter event proved a splendid race, and heed only won by the narrow margin of a few inches. There were two motor-cycle events included in the programme, the first a five miles handicap, won by C. R. Collier, and the second a three miles match between C. R. Collier and J. C. Crundall. Crundall, who was mounted on a Dunlop tyred cycle gradually drew away from his opponent, and eventually won by 250 yards in the good time of 3 minutes 33½ seconds.

The fact that the competitors in the mile championship exceeded the time limit of 2 minutes 50 seconds, has drawn forth a howl of disapproval from those who have the interest of cycle racing at heart. This "loafing" all but killed the sport some few years ago, and if the amateur men are going to hold back from doing their proper share of pacing, and treat the spectators to an exhibition of crawling, they will find that sport promoters will throw up the sponge, and not trouble to organise meetings of any description. It is hard enough now to provide a programme that will entice the public to such gatherings, and if the amateurs treat them to such a shocking display of racing as that in the mile event, "gates" are bound to fall away.

A capital branch of sport is hill-climbing, and the competitions of this nature held from time to time throughout the country are invariably well supported by road racing men, not only as competitors, but as spectators. Actual road racing being prohibited by the police, hill-climbing competitions in a way take its place, and to our idea provide far more interesting sport, since the progress of competitors can be watched from start to finish, and undoubtedly in competitions of this kind the best man wins. The Southern Cycling Club recently held their annual competition at Westerham Hill, a very steep incline in Kent, that at places is as steep as one in six. C. Spanton won both the scratch race and handicap, the former in 4 minutes 22⅘ seconds and the latter from scratch, with F. S Bale (4 minutes 44 seconds), second in the scratch event, and P. R. Rowe (22 seconds start) second in the handicap. Next Saturday the Catford Cycling Club will hold their annual competition on the same hill. We understand a very good entry has been received.

There is only one advantage that can be derived from the imposition of a tax on cycles, and that is the possibility of obtaining figures as to the number of machines in use in the British Isles. So far, any figures that have been published are only estimates, and cannot in any way be taken as reliable. In France, however, a reliable record is provided by means of the cycle tax, and we find that during last year the number of cycles that were registered in France amounted to the enormous total of 1,250,000, being ten times more than those registered in 1895. This is a surprising total considering that automobilism has taken such a hold on the French people, and is advancing in that country with such tremendous strides.

Cycling, too in China is in a flourishing condition, and the imports of machines continue to increase, shewing that the Chinese have thrown to the winds the objections which they first put forward against the introduction of the cycle. But manufacturers who do export business to China must be careful as to the type of machine which they supply, for in a report which is issued by the United States Consul at Newchang, he states that there is no demand whatever for men's bicycles, but only for the ladies' type, as the native costume requires a dropped frame machine.

Amongst the recent carvinals that have taken place, and which have proved marked successes must be mentioned the Woodford Cycle Meet held in June, when a sum of money was collected that it is estimated will exceed £400, and the Liverpool Cyclists' Carvinal held last week. Since the Liverpool Carnival was inagurated in 1891 a sum of over £4,500 has been collected and distributed amongst the hospitals and medical charaties in Liverpool, the annual takings ranging from £63 to £500. If only a record could be taken of the amount of money annually collected in this way, by cyclists masquerading and putting themselves to considerable inconvenience and expense, the total would provide not only interesting reading but a surprising amount to move in the matter of the unsafe state of the tram lines which provide a death-trap for all wheelmen who have occasion to pass along the streets where the metals are laid. The Aston District Council not taking any notice of a communication sent them, in which the bad state of the tram lines was fully pointed out, Mr. Woollen and his colleagues decided to lay the matter before the Board of Trade, and with a report setting forth the whole facts of the case, which was submitted to one of the Board of Trade secretaries, photographs shewing the disgraceful state of the tramways were included. The official at the Board of Trade promised to give the matter his earnest attention.

There seems but little chance for England to be represented at the world's championships which are down for decision at Copenhagen this month. It is greatly to be regretted, since with A. L. Reed for the shorter distance event, and Leon Meredith for the 100 kilometre race, the chances of England would be particularly rosy. It is not however, owing to a lack of men that England will be unrepresented in the amateur events, but solely to the fact that the exchequer of the National Cyclists' Union is not in such a flourishing condition as to warrant the executive paying the expenses of the representatives. There is just the possibility of Meredith going over on his own, but then, without the assistance of the N. C. U. towards his expenses, we are afraid that he will be handicapped by indifferent motor pacing.

FOOTBALL IN CALCUTTA.

I. F. A. SHIELD.

HARE SPORTING vs. HOWRAH UNITED.—This, the opening match in the above competition, was played on the Rangers' ground last Saturday. A slippery ground and a greasy ball were little conducive to good football and the display given was not very brilliant. Howrah did all the attacking and had much the best of matters. The first half ended without score, but on resuming Wood put the ball through, the point being disallowed for off-side. Half way through the second period the Howrah men got away and Johnson sent in a fine shot, the ball was hardly cleared when Burns banged it in. They continued to press but without further result, the game ending in a win for Howrah by a goal to nil. Teams:—

HOWRAH.—Donnithorne, goal; F. Bennett and H. Bennett, backs; Morrow, H. Osborne and Curtis, half-backs; W. Smith, Burns, Wood, Jackson, and Kerr, forwards.

HARE SPORTING.—Kormokar, goal; Mutidal and Sarbadhicari, backs; Ghose, Bose and Banerji, half-backs; Mukherji Boodu, Dey, H. Bhatacharji and R. Bhatacharji, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. M. Remfry.

RANGERS vs. SOVA BAZAR.—These teams met on the Sova Bazar ground on Monday, when the homesters won by two goals to one. The Rangers were without Anderson, whose place was taken by Boilard and were unfortunate in losing Russell soon after the start, thus having to play one short throughout the game. The Rangers pressed immediately and then Russell had to retire with a broken nose. The visitors played hard and had if anything the better of the first half in spite of the handicap. The interval arrived with no score, but on resuming a penalty kick for hands against Cooper gave the home team their first goal. The Rangers played up and Whitie was not long in equalising. The game was now fast and exciting. The Sova Bazar men a gain getting the lead, Bagchi scoring after a good run. The visitors tried hard to equalise and Whitie once more found the net, but the point was disallowed on the ground of offside and no further scoring taking place the game ended in a win for Sova Bazar. Teams:—

SOVA BAZAR F. C.—Goal, S. Mookerjee; backs, K. Mookerjee and C. Mullick; halves, J. Ghosh, D. Dev and J. Laha; forwards, B. Dass, B. Mitter, Bagchi, Ray and Bose.

CALCUTTA RANGERS F. C.—Goal, Whelan; backs, Templeton and Boilard; halves, O'Laughlin, Lees and Cooper; forwards, Echlin, Whitie, Williams, Pell and Russell.

Referee.—Mr. M. Remfry, C. F. C.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THERE has been very little senior football during the past few days, but the ties in the first round of the Shield competition have been played off with the result that Calcutta, Howrah United, and Sova Bazar live to fight another day. The premier club, however, were not called upon to meet their opponents as Chinsurah scratched, and as the Customs have also declined the contest, Calcutta goes straight into the semi-final to meet either the 93rd Highlanders or the Rifles.

Thus early in the competition a surprise has been effected—and a very unexpected one by the victory of Sova Bazar over the Rangers by two goals to 1. The Rangers, who had the assistance of Echlin of Dalhousie, were strongly represented, but Anderson failed to turn up and to add to their troubles Russel met with an injury to his nose which necessitated his leaving the field before half-time. Despite these misfortunes the Rangers undoubtedly were the better team on the day's play and should have won. There was no score in the first half, during which Lees played an especially fine game at centre half and Williams and Whitie were prominent among the forwards. Shortly after the interval Sova Bazar scored from a penalty for hands against Cooper, but Whitie equalised, and it was only a really fine individual effort on the part of Bagchi that won the match for the Baboos, who have now to meet the K. O. S. B. in the second round.

The match between Howrah United and Hare Sporting was uninteresting and productive of very poor football. The ground was certainly greasy and the ball heavy in consequence of the rain, but there was little or no attempt at combination, and Howrah, although having most of the game throughout only managed to score once, through Burn, shortly before the close of time. We should recommend Curtis, the Howrah left half back, to amend his tactics or he will go the way of his confrère, Bonner of Burns—his play, especially against the Calcutta B team on Monday last, was particularly foul.

It has been arranged that the 93rd Highlanders and Rifles' match is to take place on Saturday next, but at the time of writing these notes the renue has not been definitely decided upon. Mr. Pritchard is to be the Referee and he is taking steps to have goal judges and a strong picket to guard against overcrowding on the touch lines—and he'll want them!

RUGBY NOTES.

The Rugby season can hardly be said to have commenced although practice games are on the tapis and the newly-formed City and Calcutta United teams tried conclusions on Monday last, victory resting with the former side.

We are pleased to learn that both Messrs. Pope and Whitie have been successful in their efforts to raise teams, and we have no doubt that "Ballygunge" and the "Calcutta Casuals" for which they are respectively responsible will in time be forces to be reckoned with. When Calcutta are in a position to arrive at some idea of the team that will eventually represent them, those who are not selected should, we think, join Ballygunge and thus strengthen and thereby enable them to give the premier club a few really good games which is what they so sorely needed last year.

Calcutta, Ballygunge, Customs, Calcutta Casuals, City St. James', Armenian College, and Fort William are the team who have arranged matches with each other, but we learn that the Armenian Old Boys cannot get together aside, which is a matter for surprise and regret in view of the promise they gave last year of developing into a really strong team. Under the circumstances we presume that Yackjee, Apear, and Hollow will be found assisting other clubs!

Bishop, who was to be found in the Calcutta ranks two or three years back, will again turn out for them this year and we understand that Martelli, who formed one of the English team who visited the Antipodes, is in Calcutta and ready to play for whatever club he may decide to join—he will undoubtedly be a great acquisition.

Calcutta promise to have a very fine side this year and good judge as their Captain is he will find it no easy matter to pick his Cup team, especially the forwards, here are some of them:—Berridge, Harvey, Whitie, Carroll, Heilgers, Brown, Bell, Simpson, Bishop, and Pope. Rumour says that Caw has retired from active participation in the game

CLEEK COMPETITION.

THIS nine-hole competition, the last on the Club's lengthy programme for the season of 1902-3, attracted a large number of players on Friday and Saturday last and produced a very keen struggle. The scoring too was very good all round, perhaps better comparatively than on any other occasion this year, seeing that players were restricted to the use of a single iron club, Mr. H. C. Begg, who is playing at the top of his game just now, proved the winner with a thoroughly sound scratch score of 44, while Mr. H. R. D. Munn came out only half a stroke behind him, and several players tied for this place at 46 net. The cards sent in were as follows:—

GOLF IN GULMARG.

THE weather has been boisterous, yet golf flourishes as usual. On Tuesday, 7th July, we had a mixed doubles, approach and putting competition Twenty-four couples entered with light hearts and soon foozled themselves out, or broke down owing to the exertion required to mount the rises and cross the bunkers, yet the walking on the elastic turf was good. A little casual water interfered here and there. A few Haskells were lost for the benefit of the Gowlee Loys who make a good thing out of finding balls and selling them. Mrs. Laverton was "At Home" on the 14th green and most liberally supplied the exhausted golfers with requisites to replenish. Two couples came in equal: Mrs. Kaye and Capt. Bois Johnson, Miss Fryer and Capt. Pennington, with a net score of 38. In playing off the tie the latter couple won.

The Story Teller

THE ENCHANTED HILL.

COPYRIGHTED.

IN my article on general superstitions which are current in the Chittagong Hill Tracts and other districts of Bengal that appeared some time ago in this paper, I referred en passant on that of the Mro-dang, and I promised to write more about it at a future date. To-day I shall redeem that promise.

Living as I have for years in the Chittagong Hill Tracts, almost as one of themselves I have naturally heard many a superstitious story or wild legend told to me by one or other of the various tribesmen. The Mugh—Mro Kyang, Banjogi, or Quaemi—people the wooded hills and dark glens of their country with many a mythic personage. To these I generally directed the conversation when, as often happened I found, myself reclining on my bedding in a tribesman's house. We seldom used tents in the tracts, marching from village to village wherever our work took us. The cleanest house, that is newest looking—for all were clean even if smoke-coloured inside—was as a rule placed at our disposal. Built on piles six or seven feet from the ground, they were always light and airy, and very comfortable. Roads there were none, no pony could have been got over the rough, almost pathless ground we had to travel so all our marches had to be done on foot, and after a ten or fifteen-mile tramp, considerably augmented by excursions off the way, after jungle fowl, pheasant, or even deer, it was very pleasant in the cold weather to listen to such stories in the evenings.

Dinner over I lie at full length on my bedding, which is spread on the springy bamboo floor, a new mat under it to keep it clean; my camp lamp turned down a bit allows the bright log fire burning on a large square of clay in the centre of the room to cast grotesque flickering shadows all over wall and roof. I sigh the sigh of tired contentment as Motoo my boy brings me my cheroots, and retires. Then one hears voices "Has the gentleman finished his meal." Then do thou Gour Sing ask "To Quay" if we may approach. That is one of those little things that is so likeable about the hill tribesmen. Be he ever so curious he will never intrude, especially at meal times. If asked to come and sit by you while you eat he will do so gladly; away will he fling his cheroot nor dream of passing any remarks on the to him strange food he sees, at least not at meal times. True at your after-dinner peg or before dinner peg he may casually remark that my bottle bears a different label, or is a different colour or shape from that I had last time I was there, and quaintly wonder if this present liquor was as good as the other; but then every man has his weakness. Money to the tribesman is dross compared to either a pretty girl or good liquor. Well, well, they are all very nice kept to their proper times and places, but keep 'em there say I. "Huzoor", says Gour Sing, "the rifles and gun are cleaned," and from a distant corner he brings them for inspection. That done with a salute he asks "if the head men may come up;" this being granted, in they troop as often as not the Roaga bringing some rice beer or honey beer—the latter is a sweet liquor and somewhat syrupy but very strong. What it is made of exactly I can't say. Whatever it was it would have hurt the feelings of the whole village to refuse it, and I always took about a wine-glass of it, though after all it was not so bad. A glass or two to the elder men of my men, with a request that the younger be allowed to finish the rice beer satisfied every one. Then perhaps a few words are spoken on my work. Then shikar is talked. Gaur, Sambhur, Tiger, Rhino, all are talked about and if there is no news then I used to refer to some hint or allusion to some belief or tale. It was under such circumstances as these that I heard the following legend. Contrary to their usual custom, for as a rule they were delighted to tell yarns, they had the greatest reluctance to talk of the hill at all. I had the greatest difficulty in hearing the whole yarn. Once or twice before I had tried to get at the reason for this particular hill being held in such veneration and dread but without success. May be my expressed intention of going up it may have induced them to tell me all they knew about it hoping it would put me off.

It was in the village of Wein-cha-lang, the Banjogi chief, that I was told it. From this village which is, or used to be on the road from Ruma, the old Sub-Div.'s head-quarters to Pyramid Hill can be seen two peculiar hills which unlike any others rise out of the centre of a large tringular valley bounded by the three then Government paths (one could hardly call them roads), from Ruma to Politye, from Ruma to Pyramid Hill, and from Pyramid hill to Poly, as we shortened Politye into. These hills are unconnected with any range, ridge, or spur or with each other. They rise like two enormous sugar loaves, truncated at the top; their tops being flat, their sides clothed in dense jungle for two thirds of the way up, then become almost bare of jungle, while at the same time becoming so steep as to seem nearly perpendicular. One of these hills is known as "Bandar Pahar" or the monkey hill. In the late sixties or early seventies Government used to have a garrison and a stockade there, but as the official orders put it the garrison was removed on account of the extreme unhealthiness of the place. If I am correctly informed there would probably have been a mutiny if the Frontier Police had not been removed. The unhealthiness was certainly there, but it took a peculiar form. Sentries were mysteriously killed. They were found dead by the guard who came to relieve them from their two hours' night watch. No wound or mark was ever found on them. No scuffle or challenge was ever heard, nor were their deaths ever satisfactorily accounted for. The corpses all bore the same distorted features as though seized with intense terror. I believe as a matter of fact that the post mortem reports said something about heart failure. Then as the deaths continued, the unhealthiness of the place caused it to be abandoned. Curiously enough, the night after it was left, fires and lights were seen all about its top, and a sound as of a deep booming hollow gong was heard from it at intervals throughout the night.

The other hill rejoices in the name of Mro-dang-kyang. It rises to a height of from fifteen hundred to two thousand feet. Its top appears to be almost circular, and its sides near the top are supposed to be insurmountable so precipitous are they. There is said to be one path up, though no villager could ever be found bold enough to point it out, and I doubt if any one knew it even then. No one cares to talk about this hill; it is unlucky to do so The Beings therein do not like it. Game in the valley all round it was very plentiful, from the stately elephant down to the button quail, and it is said all game there was very tame and easily shot yet never recovered. Vanishing from mortal view even after having their throats cut, if it should chance to die on any part of the Mro-dang. The Banjogi will not hunt there now; it is not good to do so they say. Many generations ago report tells of three brothers who went out after game near this place. One of them wounded a sambhur which made for this hill and eventually took refuge on its summit. Intent on following its tracks the man did not notice that he had outstripped his two brothers, or that he was going up the dreaded hill; nor did he seem to think of the impossiblity of a mortal sambhur and a wounded one at that getting over such a rough steep place. It always appeared only just to struggle on just out of reach, and in the excitement of the chase he did not reason how it managed to progress at all, though he had to tuck both spear and dao in his waist cloth, and used both hands as well as feet to enable him to clamber over the large boulders or ledges the deer had passed over easily At last the animal came to the top and there he contrived to seize and kill it. Waiting till he was joined by his two brothers the three proceeded to cut up the stag, with the first stroke of the knife intended to flay it, it vanished completely, though they were all holding it up to make the incision in its breast.

What happened after that they never told. They were found a day or two after by their fellow-villagers wandering about the valley. All three were blind, two were raving lunatics. Nor did the curse stop there. A year passed. On the anniversary night Boom, Boom, Boom went the sound of a deep-toned hollow gong, and again Boom, Boom, Boom and yet again thrice hummed and reverberated the solemn triple strokes through the dark night over all the land, and in the morning one of the brothers could not be found. At every new moon hereafter the warning sounds were heard and the day after his wife or one of his children died. Then two years passed. Again on the anniversary night was the supernatural gong heard, and the second man went God knows whither. In like manner month after month, new moon by new moon, by drowning, fire, by accident from man, or accident from beast, or from disease, one by one his family was carried off, and ever the fearful notes preceded their doom. The last of the three was driven out and made to live on the skirts of the village. From year to year he waited the awful summons which he knew would in some mysterious way call him from the world. Living the life of a hermit supported by the alms of the villagers, he it was who warned them again to keep away from God's hill, for the makers of the world lived there,

All this naturally increased the awe the locality was held in, and the place was shunned as though it were the mouth of the Infernal regions itself. No bamboo cutter's dao was ever heard in its valley, or tribesman's joom (i.e., a clearing roughly cultivated) seen amidst its mazes of foliage. Solemn silence, save for the bark of a deer, or the deep gutteral call of a tiger brooded over the land and the place was left to itself desolate and mysterious. Its all but perpendicular sides appearing to guard jealously the secret of its mysterious top from the sacrilege of prying eyes. Twice a year only were its echoes disturbed save by wild animals on the new moons nearest to the shortest and longest nights of the year. On those regularly recurring occasions the dull "boom" as of heavy ordinance was heard on its summit, and rolling down its sides reverberated among the countless ranges of hills till the continuous sound secured the hoarse murmurings of an offended deity.

Man fell, woman was the tempter. Such was the history of the world at the beginning, and it has been repeating itself ever since, and will do so to the end. Years after the above adventure, the Belle of Wein-cha-lang's village unable to decide which of her numerous lovers to accept, put them to the trial of ascending Mro-dang-kyang and of felling a conspicuous large gurjeon tree that grew on the top. All refused horrified struck but one and he at last undertook the task. Many weeks the interviews he had with the blind visitant of the hill, were bowed down, then, by the weight of nearly a century of years still dragged out a miserable solitary existence. Worn out by the young man's importunate prayers to be told the way, by at last, after having bound him by a most fearful oath never to speak to mortal man on the subject, gave him advice, directions and instruction. The very night after this had been done ten three triple strokes from hill, not heard for years, buzzed and hummed through the village, chaining every one with terror to his house. When day broke it was found that the old white-haired blind man had disappeared, never again was he seen by mortal eye.

Undeterred by these unaccountable warnings the youngster still held to his purpose, and one or two mornings after started out on his awesome errand. Three days passed without a sign though there were a dozen eager watchers at the village. On the morning of the fourth the chief of these, the girl herself, as the mists rolled away, saw that the big gurjeon was no longer standing; drawing the attention of her neighbour to the fact the whole village turned out to view the gap caused by the missing tree. Some moments after while they were still gazing at it, the whole hill was seen to sway gently to and fro, the trees on it rocking like elephant grass in a gale. The sound as of a thousand rolling thunders roared down upon them. In an instant they were enveloped in a dense white fog, and at the same time hurled to the ground by a severe earthquake which by causing a landslip carried away half their village. The fog did not clear off all that day so that none could move nor eat nor drink. The morning after all, however, was as before save for the half-ruined village, and it was many days ere the homeless ones had rebuilt on safer ground. In the meantime naught had been seen of the young adventurer, but about ten days after he was discovered in the jungle at the foot of the village hill whither he said he had been led, for it was found that he too had become blind. Who had led him? That was what he would not say. How he had become blind he could not say. What had happened to him he only told in part, nor could anything induce him to divulge more than he told them on the first day of his return. Here is the story.

The first day's journey brought him to the foot of the hill, where he camped for the night. It passed without event except that an elephant came and watched him, and passed, then a gaur bull came and watched him and passed, then a sambhur came and watched him and passed, and because he had been warned by his instructor not to take life, he did not kill.

The second day found him climbing the hill, but he lost his way, and as he sat pondering what to do a boar stood in front of him, a porcupine on one side of him and a wild dog on the other, so he got up and went uphill anyhow, but nigh overtook him, and he ate cold rice and composed himself to sleep. Waking up in the morning he saw a tiger and a panther and a bear sitting not far from him. They sat and saw him depart yet did nothing. On he went, then he felt as though hundreds of eyes were peering at him. From leaf, from tree trunk, from rock he seemed to just catch vanishing faces peering at him. Large boulders of rock appeard to move out of his way. At every turn where he thought his way was blocked he would turn to go back, but suddenly a path would be seen clear ahead, but looking back he could not see a vestige of the path he had but just passed over. At length as evening approached he reached the summit which was quite flat, a thick ridge or belt of trees grew round its edges, the rest was quite bare save for short thick grass that felt like cotton to tread on, it was so soft and was like the fur of a squirrel, it was so short and close. In the centre of the summit was a lake, its waters surrounded by a steep precipitous bank some ten háths (i.e., cubits) high which was pierced here and there with caves running backward from the water and mighty winds burst out of some of these. He saw too a huge cannon of stone by the lake as large as the trunk of the largest gurjeon tree; it was lying north and south. Searching about he found the tree he had to cut down, and composed himself to sleep under it. He woke just before dawn. The lake appeared to glisten and shine and heave. By this time he was very tired and wearied of his job and longed for home, so he set about felling the tree, and at every stroke it groaned like a man. Then he felt very weak, not having eaten warm food or smoked for three days and forgetting that he had been told not to light fire on any part of the sacred hill he longed for hot food and he lighted a fire, but a rushing wind came and blew it out and this happened two or three times, so he went to the shore of the lake, and getting under shelter he made fire by friction of bamboo and cane. Then as it blazed up he was suddenly seized and carried he knew not whither and there was a roar of voices. Supernatural man like, or spirit like beings came and went. They told him they were the guardians of the land. What they appeared like he could not say or would not. This they were bound to do to give notice and warning to all when the power whose rule they lived under went to war. When there was danger of the ruling power changing then would the war gongs sound and the big gun bloom out their warnings, and all who heard were to put out their fires and bury their faces in their cloths and to vacate the vicinity for a time lest evil befel them. He refused to marry the girl who had suggested the cutting of the tree, yet he married others. They were always unlucky; they never lived more than two or three months after the wedding and their short career was always marked by great misfortune. Their houses caught fire, rats ate their grain. Their crops were blighted. The girl herself was barren, a thing almost unheard of among the tribe. She grew more and more beautiful and retained her great beauty to the day of her death, but after a time no one would marry her. Since this last intrusion on the hill some say five generations have passed, and ill luck dogs the person who would ascend it.

As I have elsewhere said time and again have I made arrangements to visit it; but curious to say both I and W. (a young policeman) never could manage it, something always prevented it. There are dozens of people who have heard these curious sounds coming from the hill, sounds as of guns and infantry fire. I have heard them myself. A mail before the news of the bombardment of Alexandria arrived in Chittagong the Banjogis and others stated we might expect war and were fearful of Looshai raids because they had heard firing from the hill of the guardians. Sounds were noticed at the time of Majuba Hill, Isandula, and Ulundi. Many times have the police at Ruma thought Politye was attacked, mistaking the sounds from this hill for their firing and vice versâ. We have all heard of Burrisal guns. I have not yet seen a satisfactory explanation of them, but doubtless water of sorts, sea or river, causes them. Of course some one suggests volcanic action. Well, what blinded these men who went up it. Who told them to beware of fire on the hill. Hunting in its valley is unlucky and misfortune is the fate of all who seek to intrude upon it. Indeed both poor W. and I are curious examples. He never had aught but misfortune to the day of his death after trying to go up it, and as for myself a more misunderstood unlucky man I have never heard of. Wherever I do my best to make friends I make enemies, and not only that, but as surely as I make an intimate friend he is as unlucky as I, if he is not cut off in the middle of life by a violent or sudden death. Drowning, fire accident, two suicides. The worst thing that I can do to a man is to get him to become my friend. Rot—rank rot—says some one, to which I from my heart can only say I wish it was.

FOX TERRIER TYPE.

NOW that dog shows in India appear to have come to stay; and because, of the entries at any show, more than half are usually terriers, and, of that half, more than half fox terriers, breeders in the country may well begin to turn their thoughts more seriously to home productions and to rely on what they can breed themselves rather than import at a high figure with possibly only disappointment in store. There are many advantages in this suggestion. In England, as in India, the fox terrier is, without doubt, the most popular show dog in existence, and that means that any specimen of the breed, if of any real excellence, commands a high figure. The importer, if he is unable to pick and choose for himself and has therefore to rely on the judgment and good faith of the seller by correspondence, would be wise to apply to a breeder of reputation and not to the petty dealers whose advertisements fill the papers. But in doing so, he should be prepared to pay through the nose. When really high-class fox terriers fetch prices from £200 to £500, it is obvious that the best cannot be obtained for a twenty-pound note which is about as much as most Anglo-Indian exhibitors care to give. For that figure he will obtain a pedigree dog of good blood, but by no means necessarily a show dog, probably one very far from show form, and he must be prepared to be beaten, and beaten handsomely, by the best terriers bred in the country, and apart from the expense and risks of importation, the country-bred animal has other advantages. If merely blood is required, there is already plenty of it in India. A few youngsters can be purchased at comparatively low prices, and breeding from them judiciously and with a fixed aim, and selecting the best of those bred, a useful kennel might be established without the expenditure of much capital. The specimens so bred will be acclimatised to the country, they will probably be hardier than imported dogs, they will be eligible for those classes from which imported terriers are debarred, for puppy classes, for various produce specials, and if successful the owner has the satisfaction of winning with something he has bred and reared himself. The pleasure of such a win is naturally greater than a success the result of a purchase at a high figure.

It is, however, essential that the breeder should bear clearly in mind the type and stamp of terrier he is going to try and obtain. He may very probably have heard glib allusions to the old type and the new. There is, without doubt, some foundation for this differentiation, but at the best it is only half a truth, and there are at least as many types as there are Sundays in the year. There is the small, neat, but toyish type of the days of "Trimmer" and "Bellona," when handsome markings were at a premium; and the type of coarse giants so large as to make the name "terrier" a misnomer. Fanciers found the coat too fine and bull-terrier-like, and the jacket faddists rode their hobby to an opposite extreme. Thick, dense coated terriers won, even though their coats were soft, silky, or woolly, and without a single other point of super-excellence. The "front" craze, originating in a praiseworthy attempt to eliminate heavy-chested specimens led to narrow-fronted dogs with curiously defective action. Cobby little terriers were designated "clods," and the fanciers went helter-skelter for liberty. Rabbit coursing became popular, and terriers more resembling the whippet were bred to meet the demand. Some breeders liked short legs and passed the accompanying long backs; others set their face against long backs and bred specimens shaped like a milking stool. But it is impossible to enter into all the divisions and sub-divisions of types, they have been of all sorts and descriptions; large dogs and small and toys; broad chests and extra narrow fronts; fine hard coats and dense, soft ones; wedgy, strong heads and long, lean muzzles; compact terriers and racers; short legs, long legs; short backs, long backs; keen terriers and terriers only in name; terriers keen and able to follow a fox to earth; terriers, keen enough, but two large or ill-shaped for their occupation; and dogs with no propensity to follow if they could.

The selection of type demands some consideration. Let it by all means be carefully considered; but having arrived at it, let the one definite aim be borne steadily in view, uninfluenced by every wind of doctrine. Judges differ in their opinions, they always will differ as long as the world lasts, and too much value should not be attached to a win here and there of a different type; the most outlandish creatures have been seen with prize cards nailed above their benches, but such errors of judgment should be regarded as ephemeral, and the terrier of a well-chosen standard will win in the long run. There is a deal of luck in dog shows as in other mundane enterprises. The exhibitor cannot expect to score heavily on every occasion; but if he deserve success, it will, not all at once perhaps, but sooner or later, assuredly come. Medio tutissimus itis is a sound maxim to follow; avoid extremes in any direction, the extremist judge is rare in India. When the Indian judge fails, he fails usually from want of sufficient knowledge, but he is rarely a faddist. He likes a generally well-balanced taking-looking terrier, any exaggerated point, even if exaggerated in the direction of virtue, is apt to look to him peculiar. He will not lightly deal with a pronounced defect, because there is some other pronounced merit. In this respect he often differs materially from English judges. A judge, and a good one as far as Indian judges go, sent back a sterling good terrier because he happened to have a little white on the nose that no judge in England would have noticed, therefore if super-excellent merits are not attainable, avoid any little marked defects, which home judges will appraise at their value, but which the Indian judge is apt to handicap almost to disqualification.

If the reader happen to have had any acquaintance with the type of terrier bred by the late Mr. Harbidge, he could not select a better guide. "Every dog has his day" is a well-known proverb, but if any special type of terrier has had a better chance of winning than others at each and every stage of fox-terrier history, it is the type for which Mr. Harbidge was deservedly famous. Whatever the special craze of the moment, the Huntons were always likely to be there or thereabouts; and at the auction, when the above well-known kennel was dispersed, breeders all over the country, whatever their particular, and however contrary their ideas, were alike glad to obtain specimens of the Hunton blood. At the present time, there is no more successful breeder than Mr. Redmond of Totteridge, chiefly because there is no one more consistent. The man who knows what he wants is already half way towards attainment. No breeder ever placed before his mind's eye a clearer idea of his aim than has Mr. Redmond, and the extraordinary success that has attended his kennel during many years is solely due to steadfast adherence to his type. "Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel," and no fox-terrier breeder has ever excelled by flitting from type to type, by rashly using this champion sire or that, merely because he happened to be a champion, irrespective of the danger of introducing undesirable blood. Whether in the case of Mr. Redmond with terriers, Mr. Laverack with setters, Mr. Booth with short-horns, pre-eminent success has been due to a steady uniformity of purpose, an unwavering adherence to a definite goal of perfection.

Let then the type be a good one and stick to it. A terrier just large enough not to be too small. Aim at good head and ears, the head points always catch a judge's eye first; but never neglect legs and feet. The greatest novice will often succeed in the matter of head at a bound, but only skill and care, and patient continuance in well-doing will ensure the legs and feet of a show terrier. Avoid wide chests, but do not exaggerate the narrow front. Pay no attention to handsome markings, but aim at symmetry of form and a terrier outlook. Let the coat be dense, but never soft; and if the wire-haired variety be the fancy, aim at a jacket that requires a minimum of trimming, no amateur can prepare a profuse coated terrier for exhibition with sufficient skill, it is an art, and the amateur should therefore aim at a jacket which the daily grooming with brush and comb will render presentable.

Do not breed too largely. It is true that a man with a choice of a hundred puppies has cretoris paritus a greater chance of success than one who has only ten; but puppies need a deal of care and attention. There are no facilities for "walking" puppies in India, the owner has to depend on himself alone, and it is in every way better to maintain a couple of brood bitches and do them and their offspring well than to attempt a large and partly neglected kennel. Breed on a small scale, breed only from the best attainable, and keep all puppies until it is known for certain which are the best. The expense will be less and the chances of success greater. The beginner cannot be too careful not to bite off more than he chew; or breeding too extensively, he will find he has to sell at random to reduce numbers, parting possibly with his best, or all may be badly reared and mixed beyond redemption. A fixed aim, a good eye for form, and a beginning with small begnnings will carry the novice far in a country where there are no very wealthy exhibitors, and where the professional element is entirely absent.

Sporting Notes.

THE Ooty Hunt Races have been fixed for the 22nd and 25th September. Proceedings on the first day will be on the Ootacamund Race Course, but on the second day at Cocky's Course. An attractive card has been issued for both days. The first day's programme will comprise the Hobart Park Purse, the Stand Plate, the Ladies' Plate, the Transvaal Stakes and the Scurry. The Ootacamund Hunt Cup will be held on the second day when there will also be the Ladies' Point-to-Point Race, the Pony Point-to-Point Race, the Ladies' Pony Point-to Point Race, the Horse Steeplechase, the Pony Steeplechase and the Medium Stakes.

An advertisement in our Sporting Announcement columns tells us that the Bengal Polo Tournament, under the ægis of the Calcutta Polo Club, will commence on the 11th January 1904. For other particulars we refer our readers to the advertisement itself.

Owing to heavy rain the Poona First Extra Meeting, fixed for last Saturday, had to be postponed to yesterday. We give brief details in our telegraphic summary of the racing, reserving a full report for next week.

We are glad to hear that Colonel the Hon'ble Baring's scheme for extending and improving Annandale (Simla) is expanding in a remarkable manner, and the project now comprehends the possible construction of a funicular railway.

The rules of the Calcutta Turf Club, with certain alterations, are likely to be adopted at the meeting of the Ceylon Turf Club convened for the 14th proximo.

We publish again to-day the prospectus of the Poona Races and Steeplechases, and draw special attention to the fact that the date of the fourth day's races has been altered from the 30th September to the 1st October.

The English horse Bundook, more by good luck than by good management, has arrived in Calcutta, and those who have seen him pronounce him a three cornered, herring-gutted, weedy looking gee, who has landed in poor condition, having been left to the mercies of the ship's butcher throughout the voyage!

Not much work to record this week on the Calcutta course. On Saturday the track was not open as being a bit too sloppy, and in consequence trainers had to quest where they could for a suitable locale for anything approaching fast work. Kellnerin and Corick went along five furlongs a nice working gallop and Metalwing and Yuletide from Mr. Bell Irving's string both did some three-quarter speed work, the former six and the latter five furlongs inside the course. Little or no schooling took place, Moss Rose and a black pony went over four flights. The former is looking well and will take a bit of beating when the going is nice and deep. Loch Arden went a school alone jumping in good style, but taking matters in his usual easy-going way. Mulwala and the chestnut went a short school, the former's jumping being an improvement on anything he has shown us so far. Old Marwari was out hacking, indeed this is all we have seen him do so far and we gather that he cannot be intended for any of the first three meetings.

On Tuesday the course was again closed, though whether this was due to regard for the hay crop or merely because the baboo had not got up early enough we are unable to say. Anyway the going would have been excellent. As it was the fast work was distributed to the four winds of heaven, some horses going on the Ellenborough which was a bit on the hard side and some lobbing in and out of the nullahs on the big maidan. On the inside of the course we saw Loch Arden go a couple of short spurts, Metalwing covered seven furlongs three-quarter speed and Yuletide did a nice six-furlong spin. Mr. Galstaun's two browns went a spurt and Mulwala and the chestnut went a full school. The former who is improving every day was too hot for his companion and Smallman left the other standing after clearing the culvert. The Captain went over a couple of flights jumping in his usual neat style. On the Ellenborough we saw Mr. Pugh's Beeswing [illegible] going slow work. She still wears her habitual somewhat hungry look we notice, and her manners do not seem to be greatly improved. Mocassin was also doing slow work here together with Warrigal and most of Wishart's lot. We are promised a look at the gate to-morrow and Friday and provided the baboo can be persuaded to leave his downy couch in time we may see some education at that part of the business.

The Murree Dog Show will be held on the 13th August, entries closing on the 6th idem.

First entries for the Meerut Autumn Meeting close on Saturday, the 1st August.

With the object of obtaining a larger number of country-bred remounts than heretofore for British Cavalry, the Government have authorised the purchase for the stock run at Mona at nine months' age and upwards of young stock which may show any likelihood of developing into British Cavalry remounts.

Mr. A. Milton left Calcutta last week and sailed for England in the Persia last Saturday. He has long needed a change to the old country—we believe we are correct in saying that it is nearly a quarter of century since he set foot on English soil. We wish him (and all who know him join in the wish) as much fun as he can squeeze into his short holiday and we hope to see him back again before the cold weather as fit and chirpy as ever.

The Paris Zoological Gardens was the scene of a tragedy early this month. The keeper of the hippopotamus entered its cage for the purpose of cleaning it, when the animal suddenly rushed at him and pinning him with its huge head crushed him. The beast was eventually driven off by other keepers and the unfortunate man who was sixty-two years of age, taken to hospital. He was in a horrible condition, nearly all his bones were crushed and he died in a few minutes.

"Murderous millinery" is the highly appropriate (if opprobious) term, lately invented to designate the borrowed plumes that pass for women's hats and bonnets in the present day. So ruthless and incessant has been the slaughter of gulls in the vicinity of Flamborough Head that the East Riding County Council in conjunction with the Humanitarian League, have presented a Bill to Parliament praying that a fine of £5 be levied on both vendors and wearers of the plumage of scheduled birds; Herons and Kingfishers are included. The pot-shooters aver that the birds are becoming so numerous as to menace the fish supply. The protectionists hold opposite views, so if a committee of enquiry is granted, there'll be some tall special pleading on either side.

The Pioneer writes.—The news of a tiger at Etawah, and in the middle of July, seems more like an extract from the chronicles of 1803 than a possibility of these days of ever scarcening shikar. The groves of St. John's Wood would have seemed as likely to harbour a Royal Bengal as those bare Jumna-side ravines, with their sparse jungle of babul and bushes. Nevertheless a tiger was bagged there a few days ago within a couple of miles of the station in circumstances just as sporting as if the encounter had taken place in the heart of the Terai. It appears that for some time back a part of the ravine land has been taken up as a reserve by a Cawnpore firm for growing babul trees for tanning purposes. Now a tiger from the other side of the river had observed the peace and quietude that had come to reign over this spot, and overlooking its deficiencies as jungle for the sake of these advantages, determined to settle there. He came across accordingly some time last year, tried the place, and liked it so much that he determined to go back to his old country and see if he could persuade a handsome young tigress whom he knew to share his retreat. He was successful in his suit, and just when the story of a tiger ever having been in the locality was beginning to be dismissed as a myth, the people of the neighbourhood discovered that they were entertaining two. A few months passed by and the appearance of certain small tracks on the sand beside the big ones testified to the fact that the couple had become parents. With the increase of their family their appetites increased amazingly, and the ravages amongst the Etawah cattle became past a joke. However, all attempts to waylay them, whether by driving or sitting up, had failed up to the end of last week, when news was brought to Mr. Mardon, the Collector, that they had been marked down in a particular quarter of the reserve. Mr. Mardon went to the spot with a friend, and finding after following the tracks some way that they diverged, proposed that they should each follow one trail. He himself had not gone far when he was charged by the tigress, but having a bush between did not shoot. The tigress, however, was determined on fighting, and came at him again from another direction, when he turned her with a shot in the shoulder. Nevertheless she went off strong, and Mr. Mardon after a time gave up the chase, but handing his rifle to his shikari told him to follow the tracks. Unfortunately as generally happens a number of unauthorised lookers on joined in. They found the tigress eventually, apparently lying dead, and one of these men foolishly approached her, tapping the ground with his stick. The tigress could not stand this, and jumping up seized the man by the thigh and would have carried him off, but she was too far gone, and as she dropped him again a shot from the shikari finished her. Whether her family will now quit the place, or whether we shall have to chronicle "more tiger-shooting at Etawah" remains to be seen.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—The Bangalore racing season proper is now over, although it is to be hoped that we may get a day's sport from time to time. Most of the jockeys, trainers and book-makers here are, however, moving on to Poona almost at once, and they celebrated their departure by issuing invitations for a race ball at the Bowring Institute which, taking place on the 21st instant, was a great success. Many of the upper ten thousand in Bangalore were present, including a large contingent of officers, and the guests in all must have numbered well over a hundred. The music supplied by the band of the 4th Madras Pioneers was excellent, and about mid-night a most recherché supper was provided to which ample justice was done. Oscar Dignum, the "oldest trainer in India," as he in very truth is, was foremost in the promotion of the function and in his subsequent efforts to see that everyone enjoyed themselves, whilst Mrs. Dignum kindly undertook the arduous duties of hostess. It was about 3-30 A. M. when the last guest departed, and it may be finally remarked that everything was done regardless of expense, and in the most liberal manner.

Mr. O' Shaughnessy, President of the Bowring Institude, made a short speech thanking the generous hosts for their hospitality and good fellowship, and specially mentioned the names of Mr. and Mrs. Dignum.

An American hailing from Boston, Mass., intends to travel to the Arctic regions on an automobile. He proposes to reach a point in Norway 600 miles north of Christiania, after an extensive European tour, and to drive the entire distance, except, of course, the waterways, on his motor. He carries the flag of the Massachusetts Automobile Club, which he intends to deposit at the most northern point reached, obtaining a receipt for it, with the understanding that it will be surrendered to any member of the club who beats the record. What a blithering crank!

It is reported that the shooting of the new Army rifle has been pronounced very unsatisfactory by expert riflemen. The shortening of the barrel by five inches having been found to reduce its range, an extra twist was put in the rifling with the result that there was extra recoil when the rifle was fired. To lessen this trouble the muzzle was slightly opened, and this has, it is said, also affected the shooting. The reduction of the length of the barrel, too, has made a difference in the sighting, as might naturally be expected. In consequence of the adverse opinions that have been expressed, the production of the new weapon has been, practically, suspended pending further experiments.

Some particulars of the Birmingham Air Gun Club movement may be interesting to our readers. The amalgamated clubs, of which there are at least 350, numbering 14,000 members, are controlled by the Birmingham and District United Air Gun Association. The members are armed with various air-guns, costing from 15s. to £2 2s. each. The shot costs 10d. per thousand; so it can be seen that this sport is not recklessly extravagant. The target has a bull three-eighths of an inch in diameter, which counts five, a half-inch radius from centre, counting four, one-inch radius from centre, to count three, and 1½in. radius from centre, to count two. The clubs are formed into leagues of at least sixteen clubs each, who compete against each other once each week from September till May, the winning team counting two points; and at the end of the season the winners and runners-up of each league are entitled to compete for the Association Trophy, on similar lines as the English (Football) Cup, the actual winners to be the champions of the Association and holders of the trophy for one year, each member being presented with a solid gold medal with a suitable engraving. Almost the whole of these clubs are held on licensed premises, where a range of at least six yards can be obtained.

Our Poona tout writes:—Hoping against hope the decision to hold or otherwise the First Extra Meeting on Saturday, 25th, was deferred till Friday, when a clearing in the sky gave promise of a fair day to dry the course which the recent heavy falls of rain had rendered sticky. But rain fell over-night and on Saturday morning the Stewards decided not to hold the meeting till Wednesday. The Bombay "special" was cancelled, but quite a number of trippers drove down to Victoria terminus with suit-cases only to have to return to their desks disappointed, at the turn of affairs and heaping anathemas on the devoted head of that irresponsible being, the clerk of the weather, who last year indulged in a similar prank. With a break in the weather candidates will get a couple of winding up gallops which was impossible with the course as sticky as a ploughed field. In the end this postponement will result in more exciting finishes based on form rather than on capacity to flounder through mud.

Most sportsmen will hear with regret that Mr. Percy Fischer that good all-round athlete and sportsman has been laid up for some weeks and is now in St George's Hospital at Bombay. He took a chill at Belgaum and on going down to Bangalore had to take to his bed and was unable to see his ponies run at the meeting. He was suffering from a small abscess on his liver which burst the day he was leaving Bangalore for Bombay under the advice of the doctors and when he arrived at the latter place he was conveyed straight to St George's Hospital, where he still remains under treatment. He is very weak, but when I saw him there on Saturday he was very cheerful and was doing the honours of the sickroom to a large number of callers during the visiting hour. He will most probably have to remain on the shelf for a few weeks and when he is up again will have to go a bit more astee then was is wont, for even iron constitutions want careful treatment after a bout of serious illness. We could ill spare so good a rider and sportsman generally and it is pleasant to note that what might have proved a serious illness has turned out to be less dangerous than might have been the case.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—In connection with the case of running amok in one of the Native Infantry Regiments which I referred to in a previous note there was considerable excitement the other day over the rumour that the murderer was discovered floating in a well not far from the regimental lines, and popular feeling was mixed between rejoicing at the discovery and regret that so foul a young miscreant should have been permitted by Providence to have so comparatively peaceful an ending. The regimental authorities proceeded to extract the "deader"—none too pleasing a task since it was in an advanced state of decomposition—only to discover that it was the corpse of a native butler! The civil authorities to whose lot the mephitic task of extraction would ordinarily have fallen smiled sweetly I hear while gratefully acknowledging safe receipt of the late lamented. Meanwhile the obnoxious young coward is still at large, a fact not very creditable to those concerned, considering how short a start the murderer got. I am not usually of a blood-thirsty disposition, but I must confess that I would consider few deaths too painful or ignominious for an ignominious brute of that description who on the most trivial pretext deliberately took away a fellow casteman and brother soldier's life.

The proceedings of the Poona Polo executive in connection with the forthcoming Tournament have not, I gather, met with unalloyed satisfaction. As all the polo world knows the handsome trophy to be contested for in the big tournament was presented by the present Maharaja of Idar, better known to the world perhaps under his former name of Sir Pertab Singh, than whom no more courteous gentlemen nor more genuine sportsman exists. Those who have the privilege of knowing His Highness can readily imagine that, while earnestly intending his handsome gift as an encouragement of the game in its highest form, he would be the last man in the world to impose conditions, just as I fear he may be among the first to regret that any petty condition should be imposed. Here in Poona we not unnaturally expect the best of everything and in many matters get worse. Medicority wearies us. We can get that anywhere. We have got the highest class of racing by the sound and liberal policy of inducing the highest class of race horses to compete. It was accordingly a matter of regret to many good sportsmen to find that the Poona Polo executive had in framing the conditions of the big tournament for the trophy presented by a native, thought themselves justified in closing the contest to native teams!

To call the tournament (in the face of such a restriction) an Open Tournament was an absurdity which necessarily courted derisive criticism so obviously applicable that presumably to avoid further ridicule the name has, it will be noticed, been changed from Open to Senior? But this after all seems but a very paltry step in the right direction. The main restriction of closing it to native teams still exists and so long as it does exist unpleasant reflections cannot but arise. By all means let Poona Polo players have local or closed tournaments to their heart's content. But (quite apart from the question of the sporting instinct which excluded native teams from contesting for a cup presented by a native) the better class of polo player and the Polo-loving public certainly expect that at least once a year the executive should provide us with an exhibition of the best and most scientific modern Polo. In excluding native teams the public are at once debarred from witnessing the highest class of Polo and surely one such game is far more worth the watching than many of inferior skill and science. Nor is it by playing against opponents of mediocrity that a team can hope to rise to form of the highest quality. In any case the public of Poona, in the Poona season, have a right to ask for the best and expect it to be given to them.

There is a rush on Poona stabling just now such as has never as yet been known to the oldest inhabitant, and where on this wicked earth all the blood horses that are flowing in are to be accommodated it is really difficult to imagine. C. Bleach I believe has already got his string scattered over half of Ghorpuri, and now Carabine and Mr. Bass' new pony will require situable apartments.

Jimmy Robinson is looking after a few horses. Tom Scott has several horses coming in a day or two. Mr. Spooner Hart's collection of quality to the number of fifteen or more are shortly arriving from Bangalore—a new departure to be warmly welcomed, and Jack Scott has his usual extensive yet select stablefull coming as soon as the weather makes travelling for his aristocratic and fastidious charges feasible—with the usual large stables of (in addition to Bleach) Andrew Clarke, the ever green, and Tommy Tingey, an almost longer habitué of Indian race-courses, Byramjee, the astute Zoroastrian, Kendall with his wonderfully warm lot with which he so often plays the winning card, Potter—the Australian trainer (at present making a start in Sunny Ind and to whom one may safely wish all success), Beasley—a name to conjure with in Ireland at any rate—who has a few very likely looking ones to bring out, "country-bred" Mahomed, Churchward, Cowell and Ivemy. These with the large owner-trained stables of Aga Shamsudin (who in the preparation of His Highness the Aga Khan's and his own horses has nothing to learn from the most accomplished) and Ali bin Talib, and several other smaller European and native amateur trainers necessarily means a strain on stabling which it is only to be hoped will bear it! Any enterprising landlord who took advantage of the several suitable sites near the course and built thereon neat houses with ample stabling on modern lines could make no mistake. But is there such a thing as a liberal-minded landlord? Like the black swan he is a rare bird on this earth.

Tom Scott carries a great bloom after his trip to la belle France and is full I hear of reminiscences and anecdotes of an interesting and instructive description. Of French chasers he has not exalted opinion and holds that there was nothing in France to make the late lamented Record Reign gallop over a chase course and declares the way the old horse "slid over them" was a revelation to the furriners. The fences at Auteuil, as indeed many of us know, though immaculate in appearance (being kept beautifully trimmed) are by no means formidable, and this naturally was all in favour of a flat racer like Record Reign, who was not inclined to waste valuable time in pretending to be a flying machine as some chasers do. The management of the best French courses is, however, Scott is of opinion, infinitely better than the majority of (indeed of almost any) English courses, where so often all is "crush and confusion." Like everyone else he is struck with the almost magical improvements effected in the Poona course, stand and enclosures by probably the greatest wizard of all race secretaries, Mr. Cecil Gray, and indeed I can safely guarantee that visitors, even of last season, will open their eyes in astonishment at the marvellous and practical improvements that have been effected.

Walkimania has reached Poona and the Oxford Light Infantry have been the first to be attacked, the complaint showing itself in a very sporting ten or eleven-mile walk, in which three score brave soldier boys came to the scratch. Starting at the Wanowrie Guard Room cross roads, past the Roman Catholic chapel and so past the Buffs' Barracks and polo ground across the level crossing, where some of the pedestrians got stuck by closed gates, over Bund Bridge, past the College of Science and Sappers and Miners' Lines and over Holkar's Bridge, skirting Kirkee and into the Bombay Trunk Road, past the Sassoon Hospital and home to Barracks. The first man, Private King, did the journey (and it is a long eleven miles I gather) in 1-54½ with Private Smith 30 seconds only behind him; Lance-Corporal Dancey 2 minutes behind being the only three to cover the distance under two hours.

The Bangalore Polo Tournament for the Cup presented by H. H. the Maharaja of Mysore opens on the 3rd August, when the Mysore Imperial Service Lancers play "B" Team of the Carabiniers and the Durham Light Infantry will be opposed by "A" Team of the Carabiniers. On the 4th proximo the 4th (Q. O.). Hussars meet the Q. O. Sappers and Miners, and the 1st Madras Lancers try conclusions with the Bangalore Gymkhana. The Semi-finals will be played on Thursday, the 6th proximo, and the final on the Saturday following, both these latter days' play taking place on the beautiful ground belonging to H. H. the Maharaja near the palace.

Two extra days' racing are announced for the 6th and 8th proximo in Bangalore. Ferguson leaves for Poona to-morrow and Melsom, the English jockey with most of the other professional riders, has already gone. But Dignum and Watson will probably not appear in Poona for a week or two yet at least, and there is a rumour that the former may not go.

Athletic Notes.

Surrey beat Somersetshire by 246 runs on the 22nd instant, Yorkshire defeated Notts by 164 runs, Essex beat Derbyshire by 232 runs, Leicestershire was beaten by Worcestershire by an innings and 10 runs, and the matches between Gloucestershire, and Lancashire and Middlesex were drawn.

Our London Sporting Letter this week contains full details of the Amateur Athletic Association Championship Meeting, the Henley Regatta, and the cricket matches between the 'Varsities and the Gentlemen and Players.

A walking match was included in the programme of the Oxford Light Infantry monthly sports held at Poona on the 21st instant. The course was about 11 miles, Private King was first covering the distance in 1hr. 54½ mins. Private Smith was second half a minute behind.

The assistants of Messrs. Hall and Anderson and the Army and Navy Stores, Calcutta, had a walking match last Friday evening. Thirteen competitors were started off at 9-30. Messrs. Hall and Anderson being represented by Messrs. Russell, Robinson, Robertson, Rackham, Peregrine and Gibbons, and the Army and Navy by Messrs. Davey, Davis, Smith, Harvey, Cameron, Hill and Vincent. The judges were Messrs. More and Scotney, and the starters and time-keepers Messrs. Lewis and Leeson. The course was about 3½ miles starting from Chowringhee, opposite the Army and Navy Stores, Cathedral Road, past the Presidency Hospital and Jail, Race Course, Kidderpore Road, Red Road, Mayo Road, and back again into Chowringhee, finishing at the Army and Navy Stores. Robinson and Robertson kept the lead the whole way, the former winning in 44mins. 30secs. with Robertson next in 44mins. 50 secs. Russell 45mins. 44 secs; Davis 45mins. 50 secs., Rackham, Vincent, Cameron, Peregrine, Harvey, Gibbons and Davey. From the result it will be seen that Messrs. Hall and Anderson's team had an easy win.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes :—

Although not entirely serious as a cricket function, a match which took place here on Tuesday, the 21st, may be mentioned as being a novelty and productive of good fun, and in the hope that it may become an annual affair. A side of trainers, jockeys, bookmakers and journalists, captained by the well-known G. R., Captain Randall, played the "Bangalore Owners." The Owners batted first and totalled 121, but the "professional men," although at one time their chances looked black passed this by 17 runs and were accordingly victorious. Melsom and Bennett, two midgets, who together scarcely total thirteen stone batted first for the professionals and caused considerable amusement. Odds were offered that they did not make a run between them, but Melsom hit the second ball he received to the boundary amidst loud applause and the layers of odds were discomfited. Ferguson, the well-known trainer, proved himself most useful both with bat and ball, and there were several others in the team who shaped wonderfully well considering that they were out of practice.
