Isinglass won the richest prize ever run for on the English Turf, viz., the Jockey Club Stakes of 1894, which, with a surplus, amounted to £11,302. Next in value was the Prince of Wales's Stakes at Leicester secured by Donovan, which was worth £11,000.

The opening day of the Lahore Xmas races last Saturday was marred by a fatal accident to Mr. Hanley Carless whose mount graceful came down in the Pony Hurdle race and threw Mr. Carless on his head, the unfortunate gentleman being killed instantaneously. Mr. Carless joined the Civil Veterinary Department in 1907. Last summer he was Superintendent of the Civil Veterinary Department of the North-West Frontier Province and the North Punjab. On return from leave Home in November, he was appointed to the Lahore Veterinary College. He was a fine steeplechase rider and rode with success at the last Christenas meeting in Lahore.

The Christmas meet of the Calcutta Paperchase Club as usual drew a big crowd last Friday morning and spectators were afforded a good view as the chase was in the open Salt Lake country. Messrs. Allen and Deakin carried the paper and laid a serpentine course—about 4½ miles with 7 mud walls, a bush wall and four fences,—finishing on the Chota Maidan. Amongst those out we noticed Lady Jenkins on her big hunter, Mrs. Dudley Myers on Benalbi, Miss Binning on Eileen, Mrs. Dods on Spero, Mrs. Whish on Levi, Mrs. Wanklyn on a grey, Mrs. Paris on Baldoyle. Mrs. Walsh on a chestnut, Mrs. Gresson on a black, Mr. Evers on Rifleman, Mr. Ballantyne on Fairy, Mr. D. Johnstone on Wait-for-me, Mr. Radmore on Meprise, Mr. Pugh on Rip Rap, Mr Sayers on a chestnut, Mr. Montgomery on a chestnut, Mr. Thomas on a chestnut, Mr. Stephen on Pierrot, Mr. A. K. Gladstone on Joanna, Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6, Mr. McLean on Minnie, Mr. Winckworth on a bay, Mr. Murray on Desmond, Mr. G. Marshall on Juba, Mr. Lang on Vanity, Mr. Leggatt on Dawn, Mr. Chancellor on H. E., Mr. Felsenthal on Rocky Valley, Mr. Hayward on a brown, Mr. Heath on a bay, Mr. Tegart on Biddy, Mr. Morshead on Punch, Mr. McLeod on a bay, Mr. Taylor on Dervish, Mr. Dudley Myers on a bay, Major Thornton on a chestnut, Mr. Tibet Hilliard on a chestnut, Mr. T. Marshall on Loyalty, Captain Meynell on a brown, Mr. Deakin on Scarboro', Mr. Perkins on Pacific, and several others.

In the horse chase Rifleman led all the way. His nearest attendents at the start were Dervish, Pacific, Rocky Valley and Desmond. Pacific bolted after the third fence and Rifleman went on in front of Dervish, Pierrot, Rocky Valley and Desmond. Rocky Valley came down three fences from home and Rifleman won comfortably from Dervish and Desmond. The official order was:—

1. Mr. Evers on Rifleman.
2. Mr. Murray on Desmond.
3. Mr. Tayler on Dervish.
4. Mr. Stephen on Pierrot.
5. Mr. Tegart on Biddy.
6. Mr. Dods on Spero, followed in order by Mr. Morshead on Punch, Mr. Ballantyne on Fairy, Miss Binning on Eileen, Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6, Mr. Johnstone on Wait-for-me, Mr. Leggat on Dawn, Mrs. Whish on Levi, Mr. Gladstone on Joanna, Mr. McLeod on a bay (remounted), Mrs. Myers on Benalbi, Major Thornton on a chestnut, Mr Myers on a bay, Mr. Winckworth on a bay, Mrs. Walsh on a chestnut, Mr. Marshall on Juba, Mrs. Wanklyn on a grey, Lady Jenkins on a bay, Captain Meynell on a brown, Mr. Marshall on Loyalty, etc.

In the pony chase Mr. Deakin on Scarboro' quickly went to the front and kept the lead to the end. Mrs. Whish was going well when her mount slipped and brought her down. The fair rider was bruised and shaken but escaped without serious hurt. Mr. Ballantyne also came down and was knocked out of time but was eventually able to walk in to chota hazri. The official order was:—

1. Mr. Deakin on Scarboro.'
2. Mr. Chancellor on H. E.
3. Mr. Radmore on Meprise.
4. Mr. McLean on Minnie.

England was defeated by Australia in the first test match which ended on the 21st instant. When the visitors entered on their second innings they were left with 438 to make to win, but they could only put together 291 and were thus beaten by 146 runs. Hordern for Australia took seven wickets for 90 runs. Gunn was top scorer for England with 62.

The M.C.C. opened their match with a fifteen representing Bendigo on Boxing Day. Batting first they made 176, Hobbs contributing 67. Bendigo then went in and had put up 122 for 6 wickets when play closed for the day.

The final of the Indian Army Hockey Tournament in connection with the Old Bombay Exhibition was played in the Stadium on Friday last, when the 105th Mahrattas beat the 127th Baluchis by 2 goals to nil after a well-contested game.

The sporting and athletic events at the Old Bombay Exhibition are being successfully carried through and some interesting finals have been witnessed. The Open High Jump was won by Mr. H. A. Dubois, who beat the second man at 5ft. 6in., and in an exhibition jump cleared 6ft., and would have gone further but for a sore heel. Mr. Dubois is on the teaching staff of the Bishop's High School and was formerly at FitzWilliam Hall, Cambridge. He represented his university against Oxford in the last annual competition and won the High Jump at 5ft. 8¾ins. Other results in the Bombay Exhibition Sports programme are as follows—Tent-pegging, N.C.O.'s and Men, British Troops, Final. S. S. M. Bryce (7th D. G.'s), 1, Sergt. Clent (7th D. G.'s) 2 Sergt. McGuinnes (R.H.A.) 3. Horse Jumping, N.-C.O.'s and Men, British Troops, Final. Corpl. Mills (7th D.G.'s), 1; Pte. Poole (7th D.G.'s), 2; Br. White (R.H.A.), 3.

Open High Jump:—Finals. Dubois (Poona) 6ft., 1; Jemadar Latchpat Singh, 5ft. 6in., 2; Hildreth, G.B.V. Rifles 5ft. 5in. 3.

Long Jump:—Jemadar Lakhpat Singh, 26th Cavalry, 18ft., 8in., 1; Sepoy Gheba Khan, 12th Baluchis, 18ft. 2¾in., 2; Lance-Naik Phuman Singh, Sappers and Miners, 3.

One Mile Bicycle Race.—J. Smith, 1; P. F. Bulsara, 2, Lee., Corpl Tve, Sherwood Foresters, 3.

The Amateur Golf Championship of India, which has been in progress over the Tollygunge Club links during the holidays, reached the semi-finals stage on Tuesday, when two exciting matches were witnessed. Whigham, the Rangoon player, had a sensational win over Alex. Mann, an ex-champion and one of the favourites for the title this year, while the match between Gatheral and Cunningham was carried to the 25th green, where Gatheral won. He meets Whigham in the final on Sunday next.

The death is announced in England of Mr. William McGregor, founder of the Football League. Born at Braco, Perthshire, in 1847 he learned football in the Roman camp at Ardoch, N. B., and played occasionally with the Birmingham Celtic Society 36 years ago. He was an enthusiastic promoter of the game and was first president, founder and life member of the Football League: he was also, at various times—vice-president of the Birmingham and District Football Association: member of the Council of the Football Association: president and founder of the Aston Villa Schools Charity Association: president of the Birmingham Junior Charity Football Association: one of the founders and president of the Birmingham Youth and Old Boys' Football Association: a life member of Aston Villa Football Club and president of the Old Aston Villa's Society. Mr. McGregor was also an enthusiastic Volunteer and was a member of the first Perthshire regiment: now a battalion of the Black Watch.

The Tournament for the Cooper Allen Polo Challenge Cup begins at Cawnpore on the 19th January, entries closing on the 9th idem.

The Dewar Hockey Shield Tournament open to teams from Jhansi, Nowgong, Sehore, Delhi, Saugor, Agra, Lucknow, Fyzabad, Allahabad, Jubbulpore, Mhow and Cawnpore will be held at Jhansi next month, entries closing on the 15th January.

The Minister's Cup Cricket Tournament at Secunderabad ended on the 20th instant when the Royal Artillery beat the Sherwood Foresters in the final by 111 runs.

The Madras Gymkhana races advertised for New Year's Day have been postponed until the 2nd January.

Six teams have entered for the Lahore Xmas Polo Tournament and were drawn as follows (A). The K.D.G.'s vs. 60th Rifles (B). 17th Lancers vs. 37th Lancers (played on Xmas Day) (C). 7th Hariana Lancers vs. winners of A. (D) 12th Lancers vs. winners of B. (played yesterday.) The final between winners of C. and D. is to be played to-morrow.

The Committee of the Boat Club recently decided to hold four trial races with a view to developing rowing talent in Madras. A number of men have been tried during the past three weeks and two crews made up as follows will race on the Adyar on the 30th instant.

No. 1 Crew.—Stroke F. Anns, 3. Erlam Smith, 2. Ian Stuart, bow W. J. Turnbull. No. 2 Crew—Stroke Payne, 3. Tolson, 2. Attwood, bow Sewell.

The boxing contest arranged between Ad. Wolgast and Freddie Welsh, which was to have taken place at Los Angeles on the 30th November had to be abandoned owing to Wolgast having to undergo an operation for appendicitis, which, it is reported, may cause his retirement from the ring altogether.

After 24 hours' notice Willie Ritchie was substituted for Wolgast, and an interesting struggle between the newcomer and the Briton was witnessed. Ritchie stayed the entire 20 rounds, and put up a remarkable battle. He has a useful punch and his opponent was groggy several times, but Welsh recovered well each time and cutting out the pace won very easily on points.

The same day a 20-round bout was fought in San Francisco between Packy McFarland and Harlem Tommy Murphy. Six thousand people attended. A hard slogging battle was fought out with considerable punishment on both sides. Murphy had considerably the worse of the earlier rounds, but Packey injured his right hand severely in the twelfth round and the bout became a slow affair thereafter. Although unable to land a k o McFarland won by a large margin. The decision was given in favour of McFarland.

The twenty-round match between Sam Langford and Sam McVea was brought off under the ægis of Mr. Hugh McIntosh at Sydney on Boxing Day when McVea secured the verdict on points. It must have been a great battle and we await details with interest. It will be remembered that their previous match in Paris went the full twenty rounds and ended in a draw. Langford was to have met Jeannette in Californa six weeks ago but defaulted, sailing for Australia instead on a contract to meet McVea. The winner of Tuesday's fight will almost certainly be matched with Jeannette. McVea has met Jeannette on four previous occasions, winning the first time at New York in ten rounds. A twenty-round bout in Paris in February 1909 was won by Jeannette, but they had a return encounter two months later when Sam McVea won in 49 rounds. In December last year they met again over 30 rounds, the match being declared a draw.

The kidney punch blow in boxing has been prohibited. Theoretically there was no sound reason which could be advanced for its abolition and now it has gone we shall see much cleaner and fairer boxing all round.

Robinson Crusoe's gun, the identical weapon that was the mainstay of that lonely sailor during his castaway life on Crusoe Island, is, according to an authentic report, in Philadelphia, the jealously guarded property of Miss Houlda B. White, of 201 North Thirty-fourth Street.

The discovery of that fact caused the wealthy descendants of Alexander Selkirk, whose adventures were the basis of Daniel De Foe's famous story no little uneasiness.

British magazines, after the relic had been traced America, printed several articles, in which it described as "rusting, uncared for, and alone the attic of some unappreciative Yankee," and overtures have been made to its present owner purchase it, the price offered being much higher that originally paid for the ancient firearm. Instead of the attic troubling the Selkirk relatives, the gun occupies a place of honour in the beautiful home of one of West Philadelphia's wealthiest women, and the papers, showing the authenticity of its pedigree, are locked up carefully in the vaults of a local trust company.

Miss White has had the gun for more than thirty The story of her ownership is unique, and the relic, in her eyes at least, an added value. Thirty-five ago a distant cousin left Philadelphia tour of England and Scotland. Knowing Miss penchant for collecting odd things, he kept open for odd bits, and many a piece in Miss's large collection came from him. While in Largo, the old fashion Fifeshire town in which Alexander Selkirk was born, he noticed in passing by a cottage that a public sale was in progress—someone was being dispossessed for non-payment of rent. He went in, and when the old gun was offered, together with the papers proving its identity, became an excited bidder, finally carrying it away with him, after having paid $160 to the auctioneer.

Several hours later a messenger came to the hotel where he was staying with a letter. The communication was from the auctioneer, who wrote that a wealthy relative of the Selkirk family had authorized him to offer the purchaser of the gun $320, double the price paid.

Loath to take the heirloom from the family that was evidently so highly prized, he said that if the would-be purchaser would meet him at the dock next day he would give up the gun. The Selkirk representative did not turn up, and the gun sailed for America to be presented to its present owner.

In the last few years Miss White has had letter after letter from England, some of them offering her goodly sums for her prize.

Intrinsically the gun is not worth 5 cents. It is of a pattern invented in the year 1676, a flint fire'ock.

In the days when such weapons were used the gun was loaded almost to the muzzle with powder, with a litt'e placed in the flash pan near the hammer. When the hammer descended it struck a piece of flint, ignited the powder in the pan, and the weapon was discharged.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 8th December 1911.

It is curious to note the splendid digestion of London for its seasonal shows. This has been Cattle Show week, and to thousands of countrymen—"whose speech is of bullocks"—this is the central week of the London season. They have been breeding and feeding their stock, and come up to the Show to note the successes, the prizes, and to see the sights. But London scarcely notes their advent, sees only an extra pair of gaiters or so in the streets, and a ruddy face or two asking the way. To the farmer Cattle Show week is the summit and crown of the year, the one week in which London is really interesting. And the Londoner is almost unconscious of its coming. The average Londoner connects it vaguely with Smithfield—where it is not—and would be puzzled to answer the countryman in the Strand who asked the way. For London on the whole is horribly indifferent to details. And to seven millions of people without a farm even a cattle show is a detail.

The Show has had brilliant weather withal, for though the night and mornings have been cold and sloppy, during the hours of the day the Show has been open to the public the sun till yesterday did its best to the extent of making an overcoat the reverse of a friend, and making those inside the houses draw down blinds to keep out the glare and this is December! Good old English climate.

A few hours after the ink was dry on the above paragraph we paid for this unusual brightness; London was itself again. We had to-day four hours of blackness in the morning and afternoon it poured with rain and it was bitterly cold. In the midst of it all I thought of the opening of the Delhi Durbar! It must be difficult for Londoners in a city soaked with rain and with the lights on at midday to imagine the scene of splendour at Delhi. The King-Emperor and Queen-Empress have made their state entry amidst conditions unparalleled in the history of India. All the golden resources of your golden land have been called upon to contribute to the material magnificence of the occasion, and within the camp area of twenty-five square miles is concentrated the flower of its aristocracy. We read that the Imperial entry and procession was brilliant in the extreme, and marked by unbounded enthusiasm on the part of the spectators. This and the various events that are to follow will make a red-letter page in the annals of India. It is to be hoped that the Durbar will not be a source of disappointment to the aspirations of the right sort of natives. Oriental custom expects such a ceremony to be accompanied by the dispensation of favours, and there is much extravagant speculation regarding the nature of those which are to be conferred. Some important concessions will no doubt be made, but it is probably out of the question for the Government to rise to the height of native dreams and the Bengalees and the sedition wallahs will, of course, find excuse for ingratitude whatever is done. On the other hand it would mar the effect of the Imperial visit if a feeling of discontent were to be caused because no great national boons were announced. But we can feel assured that the advisers of His Majesty will venture as far as they possibly can in this respect in order to secure the continued goodwill of this remarkable people.

Why take the risk on your own shoulders? We will take it for you!

The powers that be are always alert to shut up some perfectly harmless amusement and make the populace as gloomy as they can. The other day the L. C. C. began on the picture shows and Sunday concerts; these are to be disallowed and the Sabbath made more miserable than it is and its dreary enough in all conscience. Now whist drives are to be banned. There is likely to be considerable resistance among whist players if the police project for stopping all public whist drives in London is carried into effect.

The project was first made known by the banning of a whist drive which it was proposed to hold in St. Hilda's Church hall, Brockley, in aid of a local cricket club. A police sergeant called on the vicar, and in consequence of a warning which he gave, the whist drive was cancelled and a dance substituted at short notice.

"The sergeant told me," the vicar afterwards stated, "that the police were only waiting for public opinion to be sufficient ripe for them to stop all whist drives in London."

The abolition of whist drives will not take place without a protest. Mr. W. F. Hurndall, who was one of the pioneers of these meetings when the vogue began and still holds four a week, says that although he would feel bound to abide by any decision the authorities made, the first police court prosecution intended directly to solve the question whether whist drives were illegal or not would be defended by means of a fund which had been formed for that purpose by those interested in the matter.

"Different promoters of course, have different methods of conducting them," says Mr. Hurndall, "but I do not think whist drives generally can be pronounced illegal. Whist is a game of skill, and to prohibit its being played in public would involve, logically, the prohibition of football and cricket."

Sir Henry Cotton—mecmuk hurram and "white baboo" as he used to be called in Calcutta, has just brought out his "Indian and Home Memoirs." I don't suppose it will have a large sale in India where among Europeans the mention of his name incites to strong language. In his preface he writes:—

"I submit my memoirs to the judgment of the public, and venture to hope that they may add to the number of my friends and not increase the ranks of those who are enrolled upon the other side." It depends upon what he means by "friends." If the term includes those who, because they have enjoyed reading a well-written book, feel well disposed to the writer, their number may be increased—for, certainly, Sir Henry Cotton writes skilfully and presents a number of entertaining pictures of life both in India and the House of Commons. He talks pleasantly, moreover, about chess and lawn tennis, and in his early chapters about various characters of the last generation of whom we are glad to hear more. But, unfortunately, these things are not of the essence of the volume. The essence is Indian politics and the line taken almost throughout is one of bitter hostility to the Government of India as it has been conducted almost without interruption till now, and to successive Secretaries of State, not excluding that famous Liberal, Lord Morley. When we used to read Sir Henry's speeches during his short career in the House of Commons, and when we read those parts of his book which tell, for instance, of the Indian National Congress, of Lord Curzon's Viceroyalty, of Assam, and generally of the relations between the English and the natives of India, the wonder grew, and grows, how a man like the author could have risen to high place in the Civil Service, and how he could reconcile it with his conscience to serve under the atrocious tyrants who, according to him, bear rule in Calcutta and at the India Office and how he can continue drawing his big pension!

The writings of Maxime Gorki do not appeal to me, though he has a big public composed of those who love looking on the seamy side of life and have appetite's for squalor, filth and physical and moral degradation as dished up by that Russian muck-raker. Consequently I did not attend the opening of "The Lower Depths," a play in four acts, translated from the original of Gorki by Mr. Lawrence Irving and given at the Kingsway Theatre. Some of your readers, however, may care for a synopsis of the piece, I, therefore give them what the Times critic thinks about it. According to him, "Gorki's Lower Depths is the last word of the macabre. It turns the theatre into a chamber of horrors. It haunts you like a nightmare. The cry of the dying woman—dying unheeded amid the drunken riot of the night-shelter—lingers in your ear. Why? why? She cannot remember one moment in her life that was free from fear—fear of blows, fear of starvation. Why? why? Over her corpse the drunkards stagger and cheat and quarrel, and her requiem is the shout that they won't be troubled by her cough any more. By a stroke of savage irony her husband, the one man in that thieves' kitchen who, callous brute though he has been to his wife, has tried to be an honest worker is brought down to the level of the others by her death. All his little stock of tools goes to pay for her burial. But she is well out of this stifling den of sordid avarice, crapulous vice, and hideous nameless tortures. Yells and curses and tipsy choruses and women's agonized screams rend the air. Yet even more harrowing than the brutal violence of the thing is the undercurrent of listless despair, the numbing sense of there being no way out. Lasciate ogni speranza is scrawled in letters of blood and vodka over the door of that Hell.

If that were all the picture, it would be too painful for endurance. But Gorki does something to mitigate our mental anguish; against his background of sheer ugliness he sets one or two figures of surpassing beauty. There is old Luka, the tramp, a quasi-Tolstoyan apostle of love and pity, who comforts the dying, tries with his broom to make the foul den a little less foul, encourages the hopeless with at any rate a momentary gleam of hope, and patiently answers scoffers with words of benign wisdom. He would persuade these wretches that they too are men. If he could only awake their belief in something! "For," says he, "if you believe in a thing, that thing for you really exists." This wholly lovable part is now played with tenderness and simplicity and a pleasant touch of the whimsical by Mr. Holman Clark. Then there is Nastya, the "unfortunate," consoling herself with dreams of some pure love which she pretends to herself and to the others was once hers. "Lies, all lies!" cry the others—save old Luka, who listens with sympathy to the girl's romancing. If she can believe in her dreams, why then for her they are true. There is a certain note of hysteria in the part which Mme. Yavorska does not shirk, missing, however, nothing of its pathetic beauty. On this occasion the actress's linguistic short-comings pass virtually unnoticed, as such trifles always do when emotion is really felt and faithfully expressed. Another touch of beauty is the glimpse of the Tartar making a little hallowed corner of his table for his elaborate ritual of prayer in the very thick of the others' noisy revels. A trifle too noisy, perhaps, the revels; too much of the Drury Lane for the little Kingsway Theatre. But on the whole this must be reckoned a very creditable representation of a play which demands a serious effort from every individual player. For that matter, it demands a serious effort from every individual playgoer—the effort to overcome the instinctive preference for the merely agreeable and to recognize that human misery and pain also have their claims to be interpreted in terms of art."

Sir George Lewis, the great solicitor who held the keys of society's skeleton cupboards, died in London yesterday. In the ranks of the law Sir George Lewis occupied a unique position. He was a great solicitor, and his clientele was great in number and in quality.

In his time there was no man who knew more family secrets, and who, by his worldly understanding and legal sapience, had prevented venomous tongues from saying them abroad. Many a family skeleton owes the inviolability of its resting-place to his professional prudence and sage advice. The confidential adviser of Society, he kept their secrets well—so well that he carries them to his grave.

Another notability who has crossed the divide this week is Canon Teignmouth-Shore, who was chaplain to Queen Victoria, King Edward, and the present King. The Canon was a favourite chaplain with the Royal Family. Queen Victoria sent for him when the death of Princess Alice occurred, and he was also the consoler of Queen Alexandra on the death of her eldest son, the Duke of Clarence. He attended the Kaiser's mother in her last illness.

He was a Dublin man by birth, and was as witty as he was eloquent. He was one of the few persons who ventured to make jokes to Queen Victoria. When the Queen said she was sorry that Northampton had elected Mr. Bradlaugh, the atheist, as M.P., Mr. Teignmouth-Shore replied, with twinkling eyes, "Surely your Majesty would not expect shoemakers to believe in the immortality of the sole."

"THE HAUNTS OF TAHR."

Not a breath stirs the tall feathery pines around The noisy chatter of the cicada has ceased, and great red ball is rising above the black peak to your rig and getting smaller and lighter the higher it gets. Th endless chirruping of the mole-cricket can be heard fr the puddle some few yards away and in the distance villagers protecting their crops from bears are just the only sounds which greet the ear.

As the night creeps on, other denizens of the awake, and make their voices heard, and soon the woods are full of sound. The eagle-owl calling mate, in his deep guttural notes, makes the wood again; the night-jar adds his little mite in two lon notes which are repeated at short intervals half the night; and the little scops-owl every now comes in with a plaintive little "wat."

CABLEGRAMS: PURDEY, LONDON.

As you ascend the hill you disturb a family of the large flying-squirrel which are making a meal off the sticky young cones of a small spruce and you hear them scampering up to higher branches, making a curious rustling and scratching with their sharp claws on the rough bark.

Suddenly an ominous growl meets the ear, and surprises you if you have not heard it before, but it is only the mother squirrel, and you wonder how a little thing like that can emit such a deep-throated sound. There are plenty of these pretty little rodents all over the higher Himalayas, and their mournful cry is frequently heard.

As the moon gets well up into the heavens a hardly perceptible breeze springs up, and though you can scarcely feel it, the tops of the grand old trees around you respond to it and you see them gently waving to and fro, and the air is full of an almost undefinable murmur, and anon the breeze increases and all other sounds are hushed or drowned in its mighty roar.

One solitary cloud, no larger than the proverbial "man's hand," sends across the face of the moon, and then another and still another, and before you have gone another mile a deep mist falls over the country side, and a drizzle sets in. There is nothing for it but to find the biggest spruce or silver-fir tree and take shelter under it while you are still dry, and collect some twigs and make yourself a fire, for you will feel the chill going through your very bones in a few minutes, if you have to sit still. The wind having brought up the clouds and rain appears to be satisfied and ceases, but the rain comes down in torrents, and looks as though it means to last, in which case you may as well wend your way home again and spend the rest of the night in bed. However, it is over as quickly as it came, and as the grand old giants around you are as good as most Indian houses for keeping out the rain, you are none the worse, and after a few minutes resume your journey as the moon once more appears, to light you on your way.

Your object is not sport exactly, though you have your gun with you in the event of a bear making himself objectionable, but a feeling of unrest and to get away from the "madding crowd" and be alone with naught but nature as your guide and comrade, to think your own thoughts and be free from the trammels of officialdom and work.

Up and up you mount and see the rain drops glistening on the branches ere they fall to earth.

At length you reach the limit of trees, and as it is still some hours to dawn, you light a fire in front of a huge hollow tree and get inside to steal a few minutes' sleep.

A monal pheasant in the branches overhead awakens you with the first streaks of day, and you get out of your hollow and stretch your legs before setting to work on the sandwiches in your pocket.

"Tik tik tik tiloo, tik tik" says the old cock—"wake up, it's day" he seems to say, and is answered by others from adjoining tree-tops.

The harsh notes of the koklass echo from hill to hill and soon the jungle is awake. As you pick up your rifle and stroll up the hill, the grey-winged ouzel flits out from among the branches where he spent the night, and taking up a position on the very top of a silver-fir pours out a volume of glorious song. Deep mellow notes they are with which he welcomes the advent of another day, and as he goes on he becomes oblivious of all around him, and you see his little throat quivering as he ascends and descends up and down the scale in marvellous bursts of trills and tremelos, giving thanks for the wonder around him. A thrush joins in, but his feeble voice can only just be heard, and though sweet in tone cannot be compared to that of his cousin's. Little tits are out flitting from branch to branch, examining carefully the under side of the cones and twigs, where insects have taken refuge from the rain to begin their all-engrossing duty for the day. A flock of tomtits are similarly engaged on the next tree, and a cock minivet is also there. He sits for a minute on the very edge of a branch, with head swaying from side to side, and suddenly flies up to a twig just above him and hovers beneath it for just a second; his quick eye has detected some small movement there and he has gone to see the cause of it, and nor is he mistaken, for a tiny insect is working itself beneath the bark. The minivet without sitting has just hovered absolutely still except for those lovely scarlet and black shimmering wings and has secured the prize. A pair of cock monals can be seen slowly wending their way up the hill from among the trees and every now and again one or the other stops to pick up some seed or insect, or to begin digging. A few sharp quick taps with his beak seem to satisfy him that what he wants is there, and then he takes a step forward and throws up the earth behind him with his feet and again searches it with his beak, till the dainty morsel is secured. They are, however, both on the look out for danger, and the first movement you make is caught by their keen eyes. They stop quite still for a second to make sure, run a few paces up the hill, and then go shrieking down the nullah as fast as their wings will carry them.

A fly-catcher, its bright blue wings scintillating in the rays of the rising sun, flashes past you, secures a termite on the wing, and returns to its perch, whence you see the wings of the ant drop; a shake of the head and the morsel is no more.

A cloudless sky has succeeded the rain and all nature is at her best. The marvellous green of the Himalayan forest and pastures is at its brightest, except for the deep blue tint over-spreading hill and dale in this clear atmosphere, which adds to the wonderful general effect.

Above you where the Alpine pastures begin is a blaze of every shade of greens, blues, pinks, and whites. Myriads of little forget-me-nots, daisies, anemonies, iris, primulae, and hundreds of the sweet flowers cover the gentle slopes on every side, and to think that they will all be trodden under foot and destroyed soon, when the shepherds bring their flocks and herds up.

Across the valley, a rugged row of inaccessible cliffs confront you; almost a sheer, perpendicular wall of rock where one would think a bird would even have difficulty in finding a foothold, but as you watch a couple of gray figures appear, moving along the very face of the cliff, and walking, it would seem, on air. A tiny ledge not more than six inches wide is sufficient for these wonderful mountaineers to go along; the left flank brushing against the wall and their off side hanging over a 1,000 feet drop where the smallest slip would hurl them on to the sharp rocks below.

The tahr, or Himalayan goat, is not troubled by nerves and these dizzy heights do not bother him in the very least.

The two walk along the ledge, which your glasses show to you as a tiny streak across the cliff, and looking ahead you notice that a few paces further the streak comes to an end, and you wonder what the fate of the tahr will be when they arrive there, for they certainly cannot possibly turn round to go back, and to go forward would be equally impossible, so what will they do?

The leading one approaches, but just before he gets to the end of the ledge he sees a wee tuft of grass, some few inches below his forefeet; he bends down to secure it but just cannot reach it, so carefully goes down on one knee, the one on the cliff side, while you cannot take your eye off him. "Heavens, he must go over, and nothing can possibly save him if he stirs another inch," you say to yourself; but he is quite undismayed, while the animal behind appears to take no great interest in the proceedings, and patiently awaits the leader's pleasure. Slowly the off knee bends, rests for the fraction of a second on the edge of the ledge, but there is apparently no room there for two alongside each other, seems to slip off, and you hold your breath, feeling certain that next minute the goat will be flying through space, to reach the bottom a mangled corpse. The leg straightens, and horrors; it hangs over, and the whole weight of the animal is on the one knee, the other dangling over space. He secures the tuft of grass and you can see his jaws working as he eats it, and while thus engaged calmly looks down the precipice, and seems to rather enjoy this unique position, for he is in no hurry to get up.

What can he do now? There seems to be nothing for it but to fall over the cliff, and you cannot see how he can possibly save himself.

Thus he sits for about a minute, which appears to be ten to you as you keenly await developments, and then deliberately lets himself go over the edge, while a cold shudder runs through you.

Like a stone he falls a distance of about 15 feet and stops dead in seemingly mid-air. The sudden stoppage is so unforeseen that your glasses follow on and you lose him; but returning the way you have gone you find the old buck, seemingly glued against the cliff, and a part and parcel of it. A careful look reveals a tiny projection no bigger than the palm of your hand, and in some wonderful manner he has fallen some 15 feet through space and pulled himself up, on all four feet on this small foothold. Marvellous, wonderful; and to think that he had let himself go with such confidence and certainty.

What if the projection had not been firm and given under him, or what if he had missed it, and a hundred other "whats" and "ifs" rise in your mind; but of these the old veteran had seemingly taken no thought whatever. Oh for a head and nerves like that!

After this feat you have gained confidence in his powers and are no longer anxious, though still interested in his further movements.

Another look round and down and he has picked out his footholds in advance, and now goes off with a succession of short bounds from ledge to ledge and reaches broken ground in safety. What a wonderful combination of the working of eyes and feet at the same time, and what extraordinarily accurate judgment of distances. No. 2 sees his friend safe across the cliff but seemingly does not fancy the route taken by him and chooses one, seemingly equally difficult except for the first drop, which apparently he does not like.

Glorying in their wonderful powers, the tahr invariably choose the most impossible and inaccessible cliffs and crags to live in, and the way to and from their feeding grounds generally presents the worst.

Even here, however, they are not safe from their enemies, and there is one to whom these cliffs are nothing, and a tender young kid does not come amiss, and that is the Golden Eagle, but fortunately it is very seldom and only when hard pressed for food that he will attack deer, goats or sheep. Why he should not take to a mutton or goat diet oftener seeing the ease with which he can kill a tahr, is rather strange. The writer on one occasion saw a full grown tahr killed by a single eagle with the very greatest of ease.

An old buck, sentry to the herd, was standing on the very pinnacle of a rock looking over a cliff, when like a bolt from the blue came the eagle with closed wings and struck the tahr across the shoulder with his talons and hurled him straight over a drop of some five or six hundred feet. On examination, the tahr was found to have just one single gash, extending from the point of the shoulder to the back of the ear, where the powerful hind claw had done its deadly work, excepting, of course, the cuts and bruises received in the fall.

You watch the tahr move over the ridge and turn your attention to thoughts of turning back to camp and work, but as you get up from the stone on which you had taken up your position, another object of interest meets the eye within 300 yards and quite oblivious of your presence, and you see an old brown bear (U. isabellinus) poking about and deeply interested in a hole he was digging.

The wind is quite right and a little depression in the hill gives all the cover you require, and you hurry up towards him, loading your rifle as you go. The ground is soft and wet, and your rope-soled shoes are not likely to make any noise, so you can keep your eyes about you and not on the ground. Ten minutes and you are cautiously peering over a juniper bush and watching friend bruin having a great time. His great long white nails think nothing of the stones, etc., they some across and he digs away quite at ease, only lifting his feet to put down his snout and sniff the ground. Very deliberately he examines the ground, and slowly puts forward one huge paw, digs a claw into the earth below a large boulder, and draws it out of the ground as though it were a small pebble. The cavity made by the boulder interests him not a little, and again his nose goes down and he takes a long sniff and emits a deep sigh of relief and again sets to work to get down a little deeper into his pit. Wild animals are, however, ever on the watch, and old bruin is no exception, and though seemingly deeply engrossed, has an eye open and one nostril always on the sniff for any enemy that may be lurking. Though a bear in the very prime of life, you notice with some surprise that he has a very patchy coat, which at this time of the year is strange, and in consequence is not worth shooting, so you decide to have some fun with him instead. A sharp whistle brings him round in a second, sitting up on his haunches, with his nose well up in the air, but he cannot see you and the wind is in the opposite direction, and so tells him nothing. You slowly raise your hat over the juniper bush and gently move it to and fro. This catches his eye, but he can't make anything of it, and so gets up on to his hind legs to get a better view, making a curious grunting noise the while. Thus he stands, swaying from side to side like a drunken man, not knowing what to do, and apparently very worried. The distance between you and the bear is not more than 15 paces, so you can see every movement of his body and can see that wonderful nose of his hard at work, and his little beady eyes, showing a lot of white, as they roll about in their sockets. As they glance up the hill for a second, you jump up with a shout, and this is too much for old bruin's equilibrium. With a "woof" he almost falls backward, steadies himself, turns half up the hill, but finds that will not do, and then recovers his presence of mind and goes down the hill at a lumbering gallop and never stops again till he is well under cover of the dense scrub jungle half a mile below. The brown bear of the higher Himalayas is one of the most peacefully inclined animals there is, and will do all in his power to avoid an encounter with man, but occasionally a mother with cubs, taken by surprise at close quarters, will charge home, and then she can make herself extremely nasty and is a foe to be reckoned with. The black bear, however, is made of sterner stuff and frequently takes the aggressive when roused from his siesta by villagers cutting grass.

The sun by now is rising high in the heavens and your watch tells you that it is time that you were wending your way back to camp and breakfast, so slinging your rifle over your shoulder, you make your way down the hill, with the songs of many birds to cheer you on.

FLAT RACING IN ENGLAND.

II.—GOODWOOD TO DONCASTER.

THROUGHOUT August the cry of our trainers was as the cry of Rachel bewailing her children! They, the trainers, refused to be comforted; that is except by rain. Cloudless skies and scorching rays of the sun continued without interruption, with the result that gallops were rendered so hard that strong work was impossible. Small fields of crocks, or animals liable to be crocked at any moment without involving great loss on their owners, competed for third rate stakes and failed to raise the enthusiasm of a tiny and perspiring crowd of only moderate dimensions.

One day I had occasion to run down to Ascot. How different the scene then from that to which one is accustomed on a Cup day! acres and acres of brushwood or young firs on each side of the line were burnt to the ground, having been parched almost to tinder and having then fallen an easy prey to any casual spark. The place seemed to cry for water, and after a short reverie on bygone scenes, Persimmon's victory in the Cup over Winkfield's Pride, the Wokingham fiasco, when two-thirds of the field were left, and Black Arrow's sensational defeat, I gladly turned my back upon a spot that can present so mighty a contrast. I am aware that many in the Far East would reply, "Oh we always have that here." Quite so, but familiarity breeds contempt; moreover, I heard more than one, well-seasoned to tropical suns, affirm that he had never felt the heat so much between Cancer and Capricorn.

Those few training centres, such as Newmarket and Epsom, that can boast of Tan gallops maintained active work, and the trainers there had the whip-hand of their confreres. Winners were produced, yet few good horses were risked on the adamantine ground. The aristocratic stables, one and all, accepted the Fabian policy of delay, leaving to those that are less pretentious the motto "Little fish are sweet."

In the latter days of August York infused a little life into the sport, by means of its Ebor Handicap and Gimcrack Stakes. The meeting always forms quite a change from the humdrum of holiday racing, for being far north and in the vicinity of the moors, it attracts many a sportsman whose thoughts have of late been centred on grouse, and it also shows us a few horses with a claim to class. Quite a representative field turned out for the Ebor Handicap, now shorn of its prænomen of Great, though it is still great in the eyes of the Tykes, and is still called by them the Pitmen's Derby. Claretot, who had sprung a surprise at forties last year, was again in the field, as was Anchora, his then victim by a head, together with some sixteen others of which Marajax, Pillo and Yellow Slave represented the best class while Mirador made his re-appearance after a prolonged absence. Yellow Slave was backed into favouritism, but she grows daily more unreliable and will not gallop even in Maher's hands, as was once her wont. Several were manifestly short of work, such as Marajax, Dalmatian and Mirador, but not so Pillo, who went with as much rattle in the race as he did in the market, being soundly backed down to 100 to 12. Moreover, he won easily from Claretot, with Mirador, who was eased, a head away third. It is remarkable how successful the trainer Robinson has been with horses cursed with dicky legs; memory recalls Cinderello, the Lincolnshire winner, and now with Pillo, who was a perfect cripple some twelve months ago, he has carried off this year's Northumberland Plate and the Ebor. The success of Mr. Buchanan's colt was very popular and led one's thoughts back to the time when Robinson was a very live factor in the big handicaps, with Clorane and Winkfield's Pride. Some praise, too, is due to Mr. Oleman the eminent Epsom Vet., who has worked another wonderful cure on a horse which many would have considered "gone."

By virtue of the custom that the owner of the winner of the Gimcrack Stakes is the honoured Guest at the annual Gimcrack Dinner in December, some Exodus always attaches to this race. Mr. Raphael's Cylgad came in first, but not to this gentleman does the privilege fall of making the speech of the evening, and incidentally providing the champagne. His colt palpably bumped and bored, and thereby prevented Lomond from winning, and the objection laid by the latter's owner could have but one result. Thus Mr. Hulton of Sporting Chronicle fame will have the pleasant task of addressing the Gimcrack Club.

Doncaster with its St. Leger ushers in the Autumn campaign—it is the beginning of the end, and, with the acceptances for the Autumn handicaps made public, all dreariness fades away. My words of warning concerning Sunstar's preparation for the St. Leger had scarce reached their destination, when they were verified. The hard going proved too much for the dicky legs of Mr. J. B. Joel's colt, and the pen was perforce put through his name not only for the last of the classics, but for all engagements, so that we have heard the last of Sandridge's son on a course. For some three years or more his name will be more or less dormant, until the young Sunstars seek to emulate the deeds of their sire. Three years is a full early age at which to commence stud duties, but no doubt, remaining as he does in Mr. Joel's possession, he will be given every opportunity to settle down and establish a name for himself at the Stud. If I remember rightly, Flying Fox was retired at the end of his three-year-old career, and moreover he, like many another sire of Bend Or blood "got" his best youngsters in his first two years, so that there is every hope in Sunstar though of course, he is not of the same blood as Flying Fox. The Austin Friars magnate is, I believe, very anxious to reclaim Sandridge, who some two years ago was sold into France, but his attempts have proved unavailing, which is all the more regrettable now that Amphion blood is at last producing offspring of sound pretensions to stay. A year or so ago six furlongs was reckoned the length of the tether of an Amphion horse, and Sandridge, of course was merely a brilliant sprinter, but his stock are not deficient in stamina, and there is no reason to think that the offspring of Amphion's grandson will be deficient in this all-important attribute. Off-hand the only Amphion I ever remember to stay a course of two miles was The Nut, but he is a light of other days.

Now that the St. Leger is over and Mr. Pilkington's Prince Palatine is enrolled in the list of Classic heroes, Sunstar's breakdown is all the more to be lamented. Even if he had not won, he would certainly have made a race of it, which the St. Leger field of 1911 utterly failed to do against the son of Persimmon and Lady Lightfoot. In a small field Lycaon, Mr. Joel's second string, Lord Derby's King William, and the Whatcombe colt were the only three seriously considered, though the One Thousand heroine Atmah was supported as one of Mr. J. de Rothschild's good rough outsiders. Beardsley, the trainer of Prince Palatine, was very confident and ever since his victory in the Gordon Stakes at Goodwood had carefully timed the colt's preparation for the St. Leger, and he was well backed at prices ranging between sixes and fours previous to the day. Of King William one does not know what to write, except that his performance stamps him as distinctly moderate. Rumoured better than Stedfast (who by the way was never entered), dubbed the most improved horse in training, holding the confidence of so astute a judge as his trainer the Hon'ble G. Lambton, many jeered at the idea of his failing to follow in Swynford's footsteps, and yet in spite of a fair start he utterly failed to grapple with Prince Palatine, who in the end won with ridiculous ease in 3mins. 6secs. by six lengths from Lycaon, who was three in advance of King William. Rather than believe that Mr. Lambton made such an egregious blunder regarding King William's abilities, I would sooner rate him as one of those beasts which do one thing at home and another out. The beating he received can hardly be reckoned in weight, it might have been two stone, but at any rate Prince Palatine did quite sufficient to show that, with Sunstar out of the way, there is not much doubt as to what will prove the best four-year-old next year. I for one would never believe his form against Mushroom, when, in receipt of ten pounds, he was beaten at Newmarket—the Prince could now give Cinnamon's son a stone. In the St. Leger field was Pietri, a mad horse and the mount of Maher; he now carries a tube. Horses so adorned should be barred from all classic races just as geldings are, although it is not admitted on all hands that roaring is hereditary. How nearly once did Curzon win the Derby in Sir Visto's year—Curzon who in later years competed in selling hurdle races! Stedfast, of course, could not compete in the ... Leger, but some weeks later he met the Prince at an advantage of seven pounds and beat him a length, but even this form does not make him out the equal of the St. Leger winner.

On an ideal October day a brilliant gathering, including His Majesty King George, assembled at Turf head-quarters to see the time honoured Cesrewitch run. The race still maintains its hold on the public, and is still, and ever will be regarded as the principal long distance handicap of the year in spite of others of mushroom growth, that are more richly endowed; for none carries with it the Exodus which the Newmarket handicap bestows on the winner. It is said that many a horse could win it at a mile and a half, or even two miles, but it is the last quarter that takes the getting especially considering the pace they go all the way. The Manton stable supplied its customary puzzle in having one or more fancied candidates. Of these Mirador weighted at 7-11 was early picked on by the public, than whom there is no better judge, as the best handicapped horse in the race, considering his meritorious third to Pillo and Claretot in the Ebor Handicap when he was obviously only half fit. Mr. Astor, who usually trains at Kingsclere with Waugh, is the owner of the son of Marco and Semitone, and when it was brought to his notice that his colt was a public favourite for the Cesarewitch, in true sportsmanlike fashion he decided to give the public a fair and square run, and allowed Mirador to forfeit a valuable engagement at Newbury in the Autumn Cup, success in which would have entailed a prohibitive penalty for the Newmarket race. Moreover Wootton's services were engaged, but he was destined not to get down to a lower weight than 8st. and thus put up 3lbs. extra. The other Manton candidates were Papavero and Declare, the former of whom carried a ten pound penalty for his success in the Prince Edward Handicap, but Declare was struck out at the last minute owing to the hard state of the ground, a state of conditions by no means suitable to Sir R. Garton's colt's dicky leg.

The field gradually simmered down into sixteen runners out of an entry of over seventy. Lord Cadogan's filly Martingale II. and Dalmatian were the chief hope of Newmarket, but the horse that drew most attention was Willonyx, S. Darling's charge, and the property of Mr. C. E. Howard. He is a magnificent type of thoroughbred, and looked trained to the hour, a mass of good hard muscle, calculated to assist him in carrying his welter of 9st. 5lb. Owing to a coughing epidemic in the Stable he was never very prominent in the antepost market, but was so highly fancied at the last that he finished up joint favourite with Mirador at 9 to 2, with Martingale next in demand at 6 to 1 and Papavero firm at 9's. Save that Yellow Slave was left some lengths the start was a good one, and on they came with a rare rattle, led by Ignition, till just short of the Bushes where the Ascot Stakes winner gave way to Papavero, who was now shouted as the winner. But Willonyx and Martingale were both lying handy, and challenging some little way from home Mr. Howard's sturdy colt raced to the front; and battling on under his weight in gallant style beat Martingale by three-quarters of a length. He may have been lucky in so doing, for the filly was baulked of an opening at a critical moment when racing for home, but on the other hand, Higgs was riding a confident race on the winner, while Winter was all out on Lord Cadogan's representative. At the respectful distance of five lengths came Papavero followed closely by Mirador, and thus the first four places were filled by the first four favourites, a somewhat unusual occurrence. That the public have not lost their love for a good horse was proved by the shouts of applause that greeted the victory one and all seemed to forget the owner, the trainer and the jockey, in their admiration of the horse, who in winning with 9st. 5lb. in the saddle had beaten a record, which had stood for twenty-one years. Many were visibly moved at the sight, and the gallant fellow has won for himself an affection almost equal to that bestowed on Victor Wild. I have more than once drawn attention to his undoubted merit and consistency, but he has improved even more than he was thought capable of by his stoutest admirers. So the St. Simon line (for, as all know, he is by William III. out of Tribonyx) still performs doughty deeds worthy of their sire. Persimmon, St. Frusquin, William III., Willonyx, what scenes these names conjure up in the mind of one who has known them and almost loved them! Thus Sheen's record of winning under 9-2 was eclipsed and Willonyx's name is immortalized along with other heroes like St. Gatien, the Derby dead-heater, who in 1884 carried 8-10 to victory as a three-year-old, and the White Knight, who with 9-12 in the saddle, just succumbed to the feather weight Demure. There was some fear that Willonyx might be sold to go abroad, and more than one foreign agent was ready with a tempting offer; in consequence there was talk of a syndicate being formed to purchase the horse at £30,000. This, however, was unnecessary, for Mr. Howard made it publicly known that his colt would remain in England, and I believe he is to begin stud duties at once.

Exactly a fortnight after the Cesarewitch the Cambridgeshire is set to be run at the Newmarket Houghton meeting. Copious showers had in the meantime intervened, with the result that the going which had already become soft, was rendered even holding by a downfall on previous day and night. I do not know which was the more depressing, the weather at Newmarket or the result of the race. If there was one horse which seemed to have no chance it was Long Set, and yet he won in a canter by five lengths at thirty three to one. These complete reversals of all form will occur, and do occur frequently where horses of poor class are engaged, but here this was not the case, for the field, though under the average in quantity (only 16 started), was well up to the average in quality with many of our best handicap milers well and fancied. Darling had hopes of completing the double by the aid of Sunbright, while the general public had visions of similar luck through Mustapha or the Forfarshire brothers, Mercutio and Braxted. For some weeks a fairly brisk market was open on the race, but a market as misleading as early markets generally are; Hornet's Beauty stood at tens, coupled with Grammont and Louawand at twelves, etc., and yet on the day we see one a non-runner and the others at twenties and forties, while the three leading positions in the betting as they faced the starter were held by Mustapha, Trepida carrying a ten pound penalty for her success in the Duke of York's Stakes and Mercutio, horses which were seldom if ever mentioned some four weeks previously. It was honestly believed that Mustapha would at last atone for all his past failures, and with Wootton in the saddle, he once more carried the confidence both of the stable and the public ending up favourite at 9 to 2. Tatting, a lightly weighted French mare, set the pace just in front of Long Set, but after a quarter of a mile Jellis drove the latter to the front and there he remained, a la Christmas Daisy, till the winning post was passed. Trepida, who got home too well away and was consequently baulked in running, was very prominent at the Bushes, as were Mercutio and Mustapha, but none could make the least impression on Mr. Sol Joel's colt, who galloped in an easy winner by five lengths with Mustapha second and Mercutio third. The winner was lightly enough weighted with 6-12 but his chance did seem hopeless after his defeat in the Duke of York's Stakes, where, well backed, he could not even get a place, and seemed to be lacking in ability to stay even a mile. Naturally downcast faces greeted his victory, and none looked more gloomy or more puzzled than those of his trainer Batho and his owner. Here was a horse capable of winning, and that too easily, the most difficult Handicap of the year in the hands of those who are by no means adverse to speculation and yet they did not know it, and let him run entirely unbacked. Maybe the going, now soft, suited him better. Still the bare fact stands out as one of those complete reversals of form which stagger the out and out believer in the "book;" to my mind, however, it is only a further proof of the maxim that a racehorse is not a mere machine. This was the third year in succession that Mustapha has finished second; truly of him one might quote Juvenal's line.

"Dis ille adversis genitus fatoque sinistro."

Apart from the Cambridgeshire he has twice been second for the City and Suburban and filled a similar position in the Duke of York's Stakes this year with two more seconds and two thirds in important handicaps. Yet the horse is an honest fighter to the last—he is best described as a Second edition of Mr. Padwick's Yellow Jack. All sympathy to his noble owner Lord Carnarvon, who is as much engrossed as ever in archæological study concerning Egypt and Thebes.

The story of the Cambridgeshire would not be complete without reference to the incident concerning Hornet's Beauty and Mahsud, two horses the property of Sir William Cooke and trained by Mr. Peebles. With sixteen wins to his credit and an unbeaten record in England (he was unplaced once at Ostend) the Irish Express, as Hornet's Beauty is jocularly called, was considered certain to try conclusions in the principal handicap of the Houghton week, in spite of his heavy weight of 8st. 13lb. as a three-year-old. The public seized on him as an honest horse, certain to give them a good run, and he was the most popular horse, whether singly or in doubles. Rumours that he might give way to Mahsud passed more or less unheeded, till, some seven days before the race, it was publicly reported that a trial between the two would take place. The test gallop duly came off the Sunday preceding the race, and in it Hornet's Beauty narrowly defeated Mahsud, who, it was generally conceded, had proved himself the better at the weights. This was followed by the scratching of Hornet's Beauty amid general regret. In the race Mahsud ran fast to the Bushes and then faded away; all one can say is, that if this form was correct, and if he was relatively better than Hornet's Beauty; then the latter is a vastly over-rated animal. I would be inclined to the opinion that Mahsud did not run his best, nor did he reproduce the form of the trial, for I have every reason to believe he is a good colt; time will show that he is quite a first class handicapper. The public, already incensed at the scratching of Hornet's Beauty, were exasperated by seeing the gelding brought out some two hours later for the last race which he won in his usual style. Then there followed a scene, which happily is not often experienced at Newmarket, or in fact elsewhere. Instead of the usual cheers, loud hooting and booing greeted him. The public were giving vent to their feelings, but they were feelings which had better not been expressed. Where an owner has two horses engaged, surely he and not the public has the right of choice; he who pays the piper has the right to call the tune!

There were too many fingers burnt over the scratching of William Rex the Netheravon candidate, the rumoured rod in pickle to follow in the footsteps of Christmas Daisy. The colt seems to be a flat catcher, still his connections are patience personified and maybe he will yet justify the remarks I once wrote of him. Nothing would surprise me less than to see him run away with one or more of the principal Spring handicaps.

The two-year-old racing since Goodwood has somehow fallen a little flat and its only outstanding feature has been the rapid advance to the front of Mr. J. B. Joel's colt Absurd. Bred as he is by Sundridge, out of Absurdity, he is aptly, if not happily, named, and as is the case with so many of his kith and kin, possesses rare speed. Enjoying a final private reputation at home, he did nothing in public to strengthen that reputation until, after a defeat at Goodwood and a second to Jingling Geordie at Kempton, when in receipt of weight, he carried off the first important Nursery of the year, the Devonshire Nursery at Derby. The reason no doubt lies in the fact that he was never properly wound up till then. Now his advance became meteoric. In spite of a ten pound penalty making his weight 8-13, he was backed down to evens some few days later in the Glasgow Nursery, which he won from twenty opponents in a canter by five lengths. After capturing the Clearwell Stakes at Newmarket, he was reserved for the Middle Park Plate run at the Cesarewitch meeting, which is, so to speak, one of the juvenile Classics. Here a small field of ten turned out to compass the Bretby Stakes course, including his stable companions White Star and Absurd, Sweeper, Farman, and Alone. In spite of the fact that Mr. Joel made no declaration, White Star was a strong favourite at 6 to 4 with Sweeper at twos and Absurd, the only other really backed, at sevens. There is no doubt that Morton, Mr. Joel's trainer, believed that White Star was the better of the two, and, that too, in spite of having three pounds the worst of the weights; but in the race itself nothing could go the pace with Absurd, who darting off like an arrow from a bow, led throughout and won easily by three lengths from Sweeper, who was half that distance in advance of White Star. In justification to the last named son of Sundridge and Doris it must be added that he was crossed at the start and lost some lengths before he got fairly going. It is always somewhat of a catastrophe when the second string of a stable wins, but it was nothing compared to the disaster which came about through Absurd's defeat in a race at Sandown. In a field of seven runners large sums went on him at eight to one on, and those who customarily lay heavy odds on, thinking it money for nothing, had a rare shaking when Wootton seemed to hold the opposition too cheaply, and Mr. Joel's colt was beaten by Coriander. Here was a rara avis indeed, a winner at 100 to 1 against, the first since Signorinetta in the Derby. This mare by the bye is coming up for sale in December, her owner, the popular Chevalier Ginistrelli, having decided to give up training now that he has passed his allotted span of three score years and ten.

But to return to the two-year-olds. For the Dewhurst Plate, run over seven furlongs, only half a dozen went to the post, and White Star carrying the maximum penalty was opposed by nothing better than Lorenzo, Cylgad, and Jingling Geordie, to all of whom he was giving weight. The son of Sundridge won right enough, but somehow he does not strike one as a Derby winner in embryo, for he is somewhat lacking in size, though, of course, he will represent the stable in the Epsom classic, since Absurd is not engaged. Were one forced to pick a candidate for classic honours, I would choose Mr. Hulton's colt Lomond, by Desmond and Lowland Aggie. I have already drawn attention to the merits of this colt, and his Gimcrack Stakes victory followed by a minor success, have borne out my words. Owing to being in a stable that contracted a coughing epidemic he was pulled out for none of his late autumn engagements, as he had become slightly infected. He could not be in better hands than Wootton's, and I shall be surprised if there is not a brilliant future before him. The slapping colt Lom too must not be lost sight of; since his solitary victory, already recorded, he has been in retirement, which perhaps is the wisest course to adopt with a colt of his shape to whom time is a necessity.

The beautiful Kingsclere filly Bellisle, by Isinglass and Virginal, has not yet tasted defeat and is without doubt the best of her sex, if not of her age as many contend. She only has to maintain her merit to add the name of Lord Falmouth once more to the list of owners of Classic horses. It is a matter of congratulation that his time-honoured colours have so worthy a filly to carry them.

Once the Cambridgeshire is over, events of little more than passing interest occupy the closing weeks. Liverpool's chief event is its Autumn Cup, which fell an easy prey to Trepida whose form with Mustapha, who filled third place two lengths from the winner, showed that it was merely misfortune that robbed her of the principal handicap of the Houghton week. At the same meeting a couple of fine sprinters showed us their real merit. The beautiful mare Stolen Kiss carried a welter of 9st. 4lb. to victory and, with these and other laurels fresh upon her, goes to the paddock, while Runnymede, a three-year-old of American breeding, did almost better in capturing a six furlong sprint with 8st. 11lb. in the saddle. He and Braxted are as fine a pair of handicap sprinters as we have seen for many a day.

Time was when the Derby Cup was an attractive race over the straight mile but regulations concerning added money have forced the executive to change the course to a mile and six furlongs. Here Bronzino, reappeared after a prolonged rest, owing to the hard ground which he literally hates. Carrying nine stones he was strongly fancied, and his wealthy owner Mr. J. de Rothschild going in for a big stake and the public following suit, he started at two to one in a field of thirteen, even then he was only a point in advance of the northern three-year-old Graball. Between two stools the public fell to the ground, for the winner turned up in Clarenceux with the top weight second and Graball third. The latter is a fine colt by Marcion out of Grasp, and one which on a galloping course, minus the Derby bends, will do great things; in fact a Cesarewitch may easily be within his grasp.

The last important handicap of the season, the Manchester November Handicap, fell appropriately enough to Ult'mas, and many scented the omen contained in his name. He broke the long run of bad luck which has attended favourites in this race and gained a popular win for the Sportsman bookmaker Mr. Gorham, who some years ago won the Grand National with Shannon Lass. The success of this son of William the Third was the culminating point of a remarkable run of luck for Fallon's stable, which, in addition to this race and Trepida's dual success in the Liverpool Cup and Duke of York Stakes, carried off some fifteen minor races. The smiles of fortune, just as sorrows, "come not single spies, but in battalions."

It is worthy of note how poorly the three-year-olds did in all the principal autumn handicaps. Horses of this age usually play an important part in them, but this year not a single success was gained by them and only two of them even ran into a place, namely Graball and Martingale II. It does not necessarily mean that our younger handicappers are deficient in merit, for I do not think they are. It is merely a coincidence that results have so fallen out, and it is all the more remarkable, if one looks into past returns, which show that for at least the last nine years the younger generation has never failed to win one or more of the handicap plums.

The list of stallions is about to receive valuable addition, for besides Sunstar and Willonyx, Swynford, Bachelor's Double and Royal Realm will shortly commence stud life. Lord Derby suffered a severe loss when Swynford who, of course, is by John O'Gaunt out of Canterbury Pilgrim slipped when galloping with Wootton in the saddle and somehow or other split a pastern. It was a mystery how the accident came about, and it was at one time feared he would have to be destroyed, but veterinary skill has saved the horse, though he is still nursing the injured limb. Bachelor's Double will carry on the line of Master Tredennis his sire, while Royal Realm will help to replace the defunct Persimmon and commences his duties with the honours of a Newbury Cup and Newbury Autumn Handicap fresh upon him. In both of these races Mr. Walker's colt carried top weight and proved himself a fine type of a good class stayer.

Turf statistics are always more or less dry, and passing reference will be all that is called for here. Frank Wootton has run up a brilliant total of 187 wins and for the third year in succession heads the list of winning jockeys. He is however, increasing in weight, and it is very improbable that he will go to scale next year under 8st. 7lb. The services of Winter have been in great demand, and though he is still apprenticed he has firmly established himself as one of our leading Jockeys. Lord Derby with over 42,000, won chiefly by the aid of Stedfast and Swynford, managed to top Mr. Joel's total of 34,000. His Majesty King George did not reach four figures; still many an owner in his first year has not been able to command this success. He has broken the ice as a winning owner, and now it is the hearty wish of every sportsman that he may head the list of winning owners, not merely by virtue of his sovereignty, as he now does, but also by virtue of figures.

THE "ASIAN,"

14th December, says:—

* * * * Mr. Joe Lee has returned to India and opened a place of business at 8, Lall Bazaar Street, Calcutta. Many of the leading owners, both on this side of India and on the Bombay side, have opened transactions with him, which in itself is sufficient evidence of his reliability. When he was in India before, he made quite a number of notable payments, one of Rs. 20,000 to Rs. 100 which he paid to Mr. Peerbhoy Adamjee, of the Tardeo Mills, Bombay, for placing them 1 2 3 in the Viceroy's Cup, which is still remembered in Bombay, being quite a record for India.

THE "INDIAN FIELD,"

14th December, says:—

* * * * The fact that he does extensive business with many of the prominent racing owners both in Calcutta and in Western India should be sufficient guarantee of his bonâ-fides.

THE "INDIAN PLANTERS GAZETTE,"

16th December, says:—

* * * * Mr. Lee is a Bookmaker of good financial standing, and gentlemen dealing with him need have no fear of his not being in a position to meet all demands. The odds he is offering are the talk of the town.

THE "INDIAN DAILY NEWS,"

19th December, says:—

* * * * As for soundness and stability Mr. Lee's standing is beyond question. He lays you several points over. This is a decided advantage over the old style of Bookmakers who always laid you several points less.

Second Day, Wednesday, 27th December 1911.

The racing on Viceroy's Cup Day attracted a huge crowd. There was the usual arrival in State and the enclosures were packed. The racing was excellent but unfortunately as we had already gone to press we were only able to keep the paper open for the bare results. Once more we have to congratulate Sir Apcar A. Apcar on yet another victory in the Viceroy's Cup race—that gallant horse Mayfowl winning easily in record time: and confirming the confidence we have had in him throughout. Comments next week.

LAHORE CHRISTMAS MEETING.

First Day, Saturday, 23rd December 1911.

THE meeting opened this afternoon in the presence of a big gathering. Fields were large and some close finishes were witnessed, but what would otherwise have been a most successful afternoon was marred by a fatal accident in the Pony Hurdles. Graceful, ridden by Mr. Stanley Carless of the Civil Veterinary Department, failed to rise at the first obstacle and fell, pitching her rider on his head. Mr. Carless was picked up dead and his untimely end was a great shock to those present. This lamentable accident delayed the proceedings and the last two races were run in the dark. Results:—

THE BEGINNERS' PLATE.—Rs. 200 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. For maiden Arab ponies. ¼ mile.

Mr. Pollock's The Nut, 10st., 11lb. ...	Ruiz	1
Capt. Conder's Heavens, 9st. 9lb. (car. 10st. 2lb.)	Harty	2
Mr. Gates's Shah Rulan, 9st. 3lb. ...	Mr. Thursby	dead heat.
Sirdar Jewan Singh's New Luck, 8st. 2lb. (car. 8st. 11lb.)	Trahan	dead heat.

Also ran: Izatto, 10-1; Khartoum, 9-3; Bubbles, 9-3; Tradesman, 8-11 (car. 8-4).

BETTING: 5 to 2 on The Nut, 5 to 1 agst. New Luck, 6 to 1 Bubbles, 8 to 1 the rest.

The Nut led all the way and won in a canter by two lengths. A good race for second place, Heavens coming in a short head in front of Shah Rulan and New Luck, who dead heated for the third place. Time—56⅖secs.

TRIAL PLATE.—Rs. 200 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. For maiden Arab and C.-B. ponies 14-2 and under and maiden English and Australasian ponies 14-1 and under. 5 furlongs.

THE REASON WHY

Elgin

TENTS STAND FIRST.

¶ "ELGIN" TENTS have advertised themselves for nearly half a century, because every "ELGIN" TENT sold, is a standing advertisement while the tent lasts.

¶ Each Tent made by THE ELGIN MILLS at Cawnpore is produced with equal care, whether the price is Rs 25 or Rs. 25,000. The Quality of Material, the Workmanship, the Finish always come up to the "ELGIN" reputation.

¶ You will be convinced if you buy an "ELGIN" TENT, which will speak for itself, or any friend who has used one, will confirm our statement.

Let us send you our Latest Catalogue, which is the most Complete Published.

H. S. STEWART, CAPT.
Honorary Secretary,
Bareilly Race.

BAREILLY, U. P.

NOTICE.

With the sanction of the Stewards of the C. T. C., the Stewards of the Bareilly Races have cancelled General Condition 5 of the Spring Meeting to be held on 22nd and 24th February 1912.
The General Condition in question reads:—
"5. Except in steeplechases, in the event of there being less than 5 starters in any race, the third money will not be given, and in the event of there being less than 4 starters, the second and third money will not be given."

"Do you know what is the best thing out?"
"No. What is it?"
"I haven't decided whether it's an aching tooth or a conflagration."

THEY were discussing the temperance question. "I am in favour of wine and spirits," said the great financier, "I am an overworked man, and every night after dinner I have forty or fifty letters to write. Well, in these circumstances, I find a bottle of champagne with the evening meal a great help."
"Does it help you to answer the letters?" an amateur analyst asked.
"Oh, no," said the financier; "but after it I don't care a hang whether I answer them or not."

Sport in England.

WINCHESTER

RIFLE AND PISTOL CARTRIDGES.

To do justice to your skill, you should use good ammunition no less than an accurate rifle or pistol. The arm is often blamed when the ammunition is at fault. To insure your getting cartridges that are uniform in size and shooting strength, and sure-fire and accurate, ask for Winchester cartridges—the Red W Brand. These cartridges are made and loaded in the most complete plant in the world by automatic machinery and are always just the same.

ASK FOR THE RED W BRAND

Except for a tiny shower, the weather on the second day proved satisfactory, though dull, while a bit of a mist curtained the far side of the course. Saturday half-holiday makers materially swelled the muster on a rare day, on which the risk of laying odds was minimised in three cases out of four.

The members' lawn was fairly well patronised, several prominent patrons of cross-country sport being present, while the fair sex was well represented, and the executive are to be congratulated on the excellent state of the going. Results:—

GATWICK.

On Monday morning the balance was struck in favour of fine weather, and we were treated to another abnormally sunny day. The specials from town were well filled, and the attendance, supplemented by visitors from the South Coast, was a most satisfactory one for this season of year. The course was in capital order, and sport was of interesting character, though as usual at this meeting, no particularly extra class was engaged. Results:—

FINSLEY SELLING STEEPLECHASE—Of 100sovs. 2 miles.

Won by four lengths; a bad third.

Such an incessant rain as that experienced early on Tuesday morning would have had serious effect on the Gatwick course but for the fact that the swollen Mole ran some feet below the big plateau, and softer going was the only penalty paid for the downpour. The attendance was again a good one for the time of year; and, as on Monday, the sun came out to illumine the glorious landscape over which Box-leith Hills rear their summits in the Western weald. Fair sport was gain witnessed, while backers had nothing to complain of, for Goldwin was the only favourite to fail during the afternoon. Results:—

COURTLAND SELLING STEEPLECHASE (HANDICAP)—Of 100sovs. 2 miles.

Quite a gale of wind and rain prevailed at Leicester throughout Wednesday night, and the downpour was maintained during exercise hours yesterday morning, when a slight improvement occurred. At noon the prospect was positively encouraging, and the sun made strenuous efforts to pierce the gloom. The going was very soft and the average of runners was very moderate; the attendance, too, exhibited a falling off. Results:—

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

SOME surprising results occurred in the First League on Saturday, Newcastle United, Blackburn Rovers, and Middlesbrough—the clubs occupying the three leading places in the competition—all meeting with defeat. Middlesbrough went down before Bolton Wanderers at Burnden Park, Blackburn Rovers faced against Manchester City at Hyde-road, and Newcastle United on their own ground lost to Manchester United. For the reverse sustained by Middlesbrough there was some explanation in the improved form the Bolton men have lately been displaying and as it was, Middlesbrough ran their opponents to a goal, but no one could have been prepared for the victory of Manchester United at Newcastle, and the win of Manchester City was scarcely less remarkable. Newcastle, indeed, had not until yesterday known defeat since the last day of September, winning meanwhile six games out of eight and drawing the other two. Certainly Manchester United played very well against Aston Villa a week ago at Old Trafford, but nothing they had done this season suggested the ability to lower the colours of Newcastle at St. James's Park. Manchester City entered into their contest with Blackburn Rovers with only one victory standing to their credit at the end of thirteen engagements, but they too, in drawing with Sunderland at Roker Park on the previous Saturday had roused the hopes of their supporters. Still, in view of the splendid football the Rovers had displayed against Woolwich Arsenal, the City would probably have been glad to feel sure of halving the points. The Manchester men, however, rose to the occasion in great style, scoring the only goal of the first half and running out handsome winners by 3 to 0.

Although so unexpectedly defeated, Newcastle United still retain their position at the head of the First League, but whereas victory would have given them a lead of three points over their nearest rivals, they are now once again hard pressed by Bradford City, who, indifferent performers in out matches, have won all seven games they have contested at home. Only by one goal to none did Bradford prevail against Bury—the solitary club in the senior division of the League without a single victory to their credit. Aston Villa came out in great form against Liverpool at Birmingham, outplaying their opponents so completely on change of ends that they increased an interval score of 1 to 0 to one of 5 to 0. Everton, after losing at Preston and West Bromwich, just managed to overcome Sunderland, and consequently can still claim not to have lost a home match this season. Notts County, recovering on the previous Saturday from a spell of failure, succeeded in winning at Oldham—a good performance, but somewhat discounted by the numerous failures of Oldham Athletic during the past month.

Strongly contrasted fortune attended the respective efforts of Tottenham Hotspur and Woolwich Arsenal, the Plumstead men losing on their own ground to Sheffield Wednesday and the North London team gathering both points as the result of a meeting with Sheffield United at Bramall-lane. Dropping Chalmers, moving Randall into the centre position, and introducing Gordon Hoare into the front rank, the Arsenal so far from improving their attack as the result of these alterations, cut a sorry figure. The team, indeed, played with a deplorable lack of skill, and suffered a well-merited defeat by 2 to 0. All the scoring was done in the first half, McLean and Kirkman getting through in turn, and the Arsenal subsequently performing so indifferently that the success of the visitors was never in doubt. Hotspur, on the other hand, showed to considerable advantage at Bramall-lane, and might easily have gained a more decisive victory than one of 2 to 1. The opening half passed by without any score, and although R. Steel got through soon after change of ends, Sturgess equalised before Middlemiss had the satisfaction of putting on a second goal for Hotspur. In their last seven matches the Tottenham men have registered ten points out of a possible fourteen, and they are now within two points of the leaders.

The results of the matches among the leading clubs of the Second Division of the League had the effect of making a position of affairs near the head of the competition much more open. Neither Burnley nor Hull City won—Burnley, indeed, being nearly beaten at home by Birmingham—while with Chelsea, Derby County and Clapton Orient all successful, those three clubs advanced over the head of Wolverhampton Wanderers, who went down on their own ground before Derby County. Burnley, with one more match played, are only a point ahead of Hull City and two points in front of Chelsea, who have fulfilled the same number of fixtures as the Lancashire team. But the side with as good a record as any of them is Derby County, who on their recent form must be regarded as the most consistent team in the tournament. With two games in hand and a superior goal average, they stand only four points lower than the leaders, whom they meet at Derby on Wednesday in their postponed League game. London clubs were all successful yesterday, Fulham equalling the doings of Chelsea and Clapton Orient—but with far greater credit to themselves—and winning by five goals to two at Leicester.

Swindon gained their eleventh victory in fourteen Southern League games and their position is made all the stronger—for the present at least—because Queen's Park Rangers were deprived of a win at Stoke by the crowd who invaded the ground and prevented the match from being played out. As no more than five minutes remained and the Rangers led by two goals, the result may be awarded the visitors, who at any rate, should get the full points without trouble. Of the other leading clubs, Crystal Palace were without a match; Northampton found it a difficult matter to beat West Ham United, and Millwall went to Brighton and overcame the Albion—this being about the best performance of the day. Coventry City and Plymouth Argyle also won away from home, the West County team gaining the most decisive victory of the afternoon in scoring 3—0 at Luton.

RUGBY RULES.

INTERNATIONAL TRIAL.

ENGLAND vs. THE SOUTH.—In the first of the Rugby International trial matches, played at Twickenham in dull weather but under excellent conditions, the England fifteen gained a narrow victory by 3 placed goals and 1 try to 2 placed goals, 1 penalty goal and 1 try. The actual result of the game, however, was robbed of a lot of its significance owing to the injuries to players that took place during the game. In the first half England lost the services of Lyon, their full back, and Steinthal, their right centre three-quarter, and for the rest of the game they laboured under a severe handicap. It says much, however for the excellence of the side that they should have in such disheartening circumstances been successful. As a trial game the match was a complete success a lot of splendid play taking place on both sides, and with the pace always very fast, the 4,000 people who were present must have been amply rewarded. That the England fifteen were the better side cannot be doubted. Their forwards were the superiors of the other eight—until, of course, one of them had to be pulled out to take the place of Lyon—and during the opening stages they heeled so well that the ball was nearly always with the England backs. At this period Sibree and Stoop did all that was required of them, and but for the accidents that occurred it is more than likely that England would have won by a very substantial margin. The outstanding figure of the three-quarter line was John Birkett whose strong running and tackling lent distinction to a fine match. Lambert too, served by his fine speed, did many good things, and near the end scored the try which enabled his side to win. Harvey Jones was, frankly, a disappointment. Certainly, he did not have many chances in the first half, the attacks usually being carried on by the opposite wing, but later on, when the ball came his way, he showed neither the speed nor the resource of an International three-quarter. Macllwaine, Wodehouse, Holland, Ritson, and King were the pick of the forwards.

On the other side Johnston showed himself to be a capable full back, though perhaps his kicking was not so strong as usual. The three-quarters were quite satisfactory, but with Jago by no means a success at half-back they did not have the same opportunities as came the way of their opponents. The try that they obtained just before half-time was certainly quite the most finished piece of play in the match. Brougham on the right, showed a splendid turn of speed and had little the worst of it in his duels with Lambert. Tarr and Mobbs were effective centres, though Mobbs did not show his best form until the game had been in progress some time. Butcher was good and Gardner, the other half-back, capital in defence. Snell, Burdett and Marshall were the pick of the forwards.

Woodhouse kicked off for England against a slight breeze, and following little loose play while the men were settling down the England fifteen began to assert themselves. First Birkett got away, but slow to get his pass in the movement failed. The game, however, was only seven minutes old when the first score of the match took place, a fine bout of passing emanating from Sibree and Stoop giving Birkett a chance. Handing off a couple of opponents he then swerved inside to avoid Mobbs and Tarr and gained a fine try under the posts. Lambert had no difficulty in placing a goal. Previous to this it may be mentioned Ritson had touched down after the ball had been carried over, but a forward pass nullified the try. Leading by five points thus early the England fifteen played up splendidly their forwards being quick in heeling and following up. Once the South carried the play to the England twenty-five, but the England backs, by fine passing, relieved the pressure, and Johnson saved the situation by a fine kick into touch. Birkett showed up prominently a little later, but could not get through and then came England's second try. Neat and quick passing was followed by a forward rush, the ball ultimately going out to Lambert. He kicked past the opposing backs, and Mcllwaine taking up the dribble, ran the ball over the line and scored. Lambert failed to place a goal. Directly afterwards the England backs were again in motion and Lambert got away, but Brougham's speed enabled the latter to bring down his colleague when a try seemed certain. A little later came the first of the accidents, as in preventing Brougham from scoring by kicking dead, Lyon was brought down and left the field limping. Ritson went full-back and for a time the game was in the England twenty-five. Then the England forwards got the ball out and like a flash Stoop passed to Birkett. He cleared the way for Lambert to go on and get a try. Brougham made a great effort to reach his legs, but Lambert jumped clear and trotted on and grounded the ball under the posts. He also placed a goal, and England led by 15 points to nothing. Then Steinthal went off, England having to play six forwards and three three-quarters. Next Birkett was injured, considerable delay taking place and he went in also, Tarr going over to the England team, but Birkett soon returned and Tarr went back to his own side. No sooner had play been resumed when the South were awarded a penalty kick, and Butcher, with a fine drop-kick, landed a penalty goal. This, it may be mentioned occurred just before Birkett returned. Despite the handicap, under which they laboured, the England fifteen continued to control the game, their handling of the ball being very fine. Stoop and Birkett and Pillman were nearly through and then Birkett almost gained another of his great tries, beating man after man and being pulled down only just short of the line. Just before half-time the South scored their try, it being the outcome of a really brilliant movement. In turn Gardner, Butcher, Tarr and Mobbs and Brougham handled the ball the last named running splendidly before giving Tarr a return pass. Tarr, with a clear course, scored easily and Johnson kicked a goal. Half-time:

The South ... ... 2 goals (1 penalty).

When the game was resumed King played at full-back for England, but he was not a success in that position, and following two narrow escapes that the England fifteen had, Coulson took the Yorkshireman's place. In the first case, close passing between Butcher and Jago should have led to a try, but with the defence beaten Jago passed instead of going on, a fine chance thus being missed. Then the England forwards came away with a good dribble, Lambert carrying it on, but Brougham stopped him near the line, and Gardner picked up and kicked well into touch. England missed a good opportunity just afterwards, Stoop getting away and passing to Wodehouse, who had a clear run. Two colleagues were in close attendance, but Wodehouse delayed his pass and was brought down from behind by Johnston. Then Brougham broke through, but Coulson collared him splendidly and saved a try, but a little while afterwards the South scored. They had been pressing, and Birkett picked up and tried to break through. In handing off an opponent he dropped the ball, which Mobbs at once seized upon and forced his way through to get a fine try. Johnston placed a goal, and thus the scores were level at 13 points each. A little later the South were in again, Butcher scoring a try, which was not converted, but near the close Lambert, following up and getting possession from a cross-kick scored for England, and placed a goal which enabled his side to win by the bare margin of 2 points:

England ... ... 3 goals 1 try.

THE COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

DURHAM vs. CHESHIRE.—Although during the opening half of this match at Durham the play was so even that each side obtained 11 points, the Durham fifteen showed much superior form afterwards and gained an easy victory by three goals and two tries to a placed goal, a penalty goal, and one try. Cheshire had the advantage of a stiff breeze during the first half, and very quickly scored a couple of tries through McArthur and Heyworth, the first of them being improved upon by King. Following that, however, Durham attacked strongly, and in turn Pyman and Brittain crossed the Cheshire line. Neither place kick was successful, however. Then Pemberton kicked a penalty goal for Cheshire, but from a try by Hall Elwood placed a goal for Durham, and the interval arrived with the score at 11 points each. On resuming Durham had a good deal the best of some rather poor play, and Nicholson scored a try for Elwood to place a goal. Bruce then got over, and Elwood kicked another goal. From that point to the end Durham maintained a strong pressure, but lost many chances through wild passing. The weather was fine, and a fairly good crowd saw the match. Durham, 21 points; Cheshire, 11 points.

WELSH TRIAL MATCH.

PROBABLES vs. POSSIBLES.—The Welsh trial match at Abertillery was robbed of much of its importance by the fact that many notable players were unable to take part in the contest Bancroft, Spiller, Dykes, Geen and Lewis all being absent. The play generally never reached a high standard, though this may have been accounted for by the fact that the weather was all against good football. In the opening half the best form was shown by Birt, Lewis, Owen and Vile. Tries were scored for the Possibles by Evans and Lewis, Harold Thomas converting one of them. Webb got over for the Probables and Birt placed a goal, so that at half-time the Probables were three points to the bad. After change of ends Evan Davies and Coldrick scored tries for the Probables, one of which was converted by Birt. The pick of the two fifteens were Birt, Plummer, Owen, Lewis, Vile, Uzzell and Trump. Probables 13 points; Possibles, 8 points.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs. LONDON SCOTTISH.—In this game at Oxford the Dark Blues had the assistance of Knott, and the side gave a brilliant exhibition of football, winning by three goals and eight tries to a try. They were seen at their best in the second half, when they obtained seven tries. The Scottish obtained their try just before time, Gilray scoring. Geen was in excellent form, scoring four tries, while Steyn on the other wing obtained three tries, and Dingie, Brown, and Poulton also scored. Two of the goals were kicked by Lagden and one by Poulton. Altogether, the Oxonians gave a very convincing display. Oxford University, 39 points; London Scottish, 5 points.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. UNITED SERVICES.—An excellent game at Cambridge ended in a draw, each side scoring two placed goals. The Light Blues were the first to score. Thomas obtaining a clever try and placed a goal. Towards half-time the Services attacked strongly, and in quick succession tries were obtained by Wadegery and Coltart, and both were converted by Harrison. Midway through the second half Susskind gained a try for Cambridge, and Thomas kicked another goal. In the later stages Cambridge attacked strongly and came very near winning the match. The Services defended well and the match was left drawn. Cambridge University, 10 points; United Services, 10 points.

LONDON WELSH vs. BLACKHEATH.—Owing to several of their best men being crocked and other causes Blackheath were weakly represented at Wandsworth. The London Welshmen, for once in a way rising to the occasion, easily outpointed the visitors, and won by a penalty goal and four tries to a placed goal. Fairly early in the match Gower got away to score for the home side. Then Maddocks placed a fine goal from a penalty kick, and later the last-named player, after a fine run, put James in possession to score a second try. These enabled the Welshmen to cross over with a lead of nine points to nothing. Quite early in the second half the Blackheath forwards, using their feet well, subjected the home line to severe pressure, and out of a loose rush Dussik crossed the line for Dickson to add the goal points. After that, however, the visitors' defence was sadly lacking in certainty, and first E. R. Jenkins scored from a cross kick of Williams', and in the last few minutes Gower also got over. Nearly all the tries were gained in an easy position, but Maddocks, who took all the place kicks, was uniformly unsuccessful. London Welsh, 15 points; Blackheath, 5 points.

ROWING.

TRIAL EIGHTS AT OXFORD.—The Oxford Trial Eights race was rowed on Saturday over the Moulsford Course, and resulted in a win for No. 2 crew, stroked by Mr. R. W. Fletcher, by one three-quarter lengths.

No. 2 crew had the Berks station, and No. 1, stroked by Mr. B. B. Quiller Couch, the Oxon. The President got the two crews away well, and No. 1 crew, rowing the faster stroke and with the advantage of their station, at first took the lead; at one time they were three-quarters of a length ahead, but No. 2 crew began to draw up upon them, and although No. 1 were still leading at the Betel and Wedge, it could be seen that No. 2 were the better crew and would win. Rowing a long and steady stroke they drew level with and then passed No. 1, who made a most plucky and determined spurt, but only went up very slightly and lost their advantage almost at once. Their spurt took a great deal out of them, and they became very short and hurried. No. 2 increased their lead round the last bend, which was in their favour, and won by one three-quarter lengths in 11mins. 56secs.

The race was rowed in most trying conditions for the oarsmen, as there was a strong head wind, and consequently rough water as well, against which they had to battle the whole way. There was, moreover, very little stream, and, in the circumstances, the time of the race was very fast.

The two crews were considerably above the average, especially Mr. Fletcher's, which was a very nice-looking crew indeed, and rowed with length, steadiness, and ease all over the course. They appeared to be well together for a Trial Eight, got their oars into the water fairly quickly and had a long finish. They were a better crew both individually and collectively than No. 1, who may be considered to have put up a very good race against them. No. 1 were a good average Trial Eight.

The Trials showed that Oxford are very well off for good and promising individual oarsmen, and that all the men are "stayers"; and the President should be able to get together a strong University crew. In No. 1 crew Mr. N. M. Bruce and Mr. A. H. M. Wedderburn were the best, and in No. 2 Mr. L. B. Horsefall, though he did not row quite up to his form on Saturday, and M. A. F. B. Wiggins were the best. Besides those Mr. Baillieu, Mr. Pitman, Mr. Fison, and Mr. Fletcher are useful men. Names and weights:—

TRIAL EIGHTS AT CAMBRIDGE.—The Cambridge Trial Eights' Race was rowed on Saturday, and was won by Mr. S. E. Swann's crew by two and a quarter lengths in 13mins. 13secs. The race was not rowed over the usual course, and so the time is of little or no value as a guide. There was rather a stiff breeze against them all the way, but, on the whole, the conditions were fairly good.

Mr. Collins's crew had the far station, which has a slight bend in its favour half-way through the course. There was some little delay at the start, as Mr. Collins's crew was being blown into the bank. When they were started Mr. Swann, rowing a good deal the faster stroke, led at once, and gained about half a length in a minute. Mr. Collins was rowing a longer and slower stroke, and looked as if he ought to win, but the other crew maintained their position for three or four minutes, and then began slowly to increase their lead. At the Pumping Station Mr. Swann's crew was about a length clear. Mr. Collins spurted and gained a little ground, but Mr. Swann answered it and went away again. Every time that Mr. Collins spurted Mr. Swan answered, gaining a little each time, and won by two and a quarter lengths. Mr. Swann was rowing the faster stroke throughout and won the race by hurrying his crew along. He was better backed up by his crew than was Mr. Collins, who did not receive very much help from his No. 5 and No. 6. The losing crew were not so well together as the winners, and, although perhaps they showed greater length and steadiness, they were deficient in leg work.

The trial Eights this year are below the average. The rowing cannot be considered very good, and there did not seem to be any conspicuous individual talent. Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Burnand, and Mr. Le Blanc Smith showed up best in Mr. Collins's and Mr. Collins is the better stroke of the two. He is, however, short in his swing, although he managed to give better length to his crew than did Mr. Swann. In Mr. Swann's crew Mr. Goldsmith, Mr. Dobb, and Mr. Heyland were the most promising. Mr. Dobb should develop into a useful oarsman with time and coaching; he became very short at the finish towards the end of the race on Saturday. Names and weights:—

BOXING.

THE FLY WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP.—On Monday, the 4th instant, Sid Smith, of Bermondsey, beat Joe Wilson, of Stepney, at the National Sporting Club in a twenty rounds contest for the fly-weight championship of England, the club purse and Lord Lonsdale's belt. It was a close thing, but Smith clearly won on points, although Wilson hit very hard at times, and four times during the contest sent the winner to the boards.

Wilson scaled 7st. 13lb. and Smith 8st. when they weighed in during the afternoon, and, although Smith was the taller and had the longer reach, Wilson was much the sturdier in build. It was beautiful clean boxing all through with none of the tricks that have of late years been imported into the game, and it was not until the seventeenth round that the referee's "Break!" was heard.

Smith was always the cleverer, but Wilson surprised the critics with his splendid defence and the capital use he made of his right when he got a chance. He really missed a chance of winning in the fifth round, when, after sending Smith down with a heavy right on the point and a flash left on the face, he did not force the fighting quite enough.

Had Wilson sailed in then and chanced a blow or two himself he might possibly have secured a knock-out and a victory. As it was, Smith came up strong, but exceeding cautious for the sixth round, and, although he was knocked down again in the thirteenth round, there was never any doubt about the result unless one of Wilson's heavy blows put his opponent out for a count.

The first round was as fast as could be, and Wilson surprised everyone by the smartness of his defence and his cleverness in getting away. Smith did most of the leading in the second round, and in some light work had the best of it. Smith was on his knees to a left-hand swing in the third round, but scored the most points, although Wilson was hitting the harder.

Smith still went on scoring points in the fourth round, but Wilson used his left with capital effect, and towards the end of the round he made Smith wince with a couple of good right-hand punches on the body.

The fifth round might have been the turning point in the contest. Early on Wilson landed a heavy right on the point and Smith went down heavily. He got up groggy, and was sent down again with a left flush on the face. Had Wilson gone in for some two-handed fighting he might have had the champion out, but he did not, and Smith lasted the round out.

Strong as ever, but much more cautious, Smith used his left in putting on the points in the sixth round. Wilson was eager, and missed with one or two right swings, but, although he got in one good right, it was Smith's round.

We saw some perfect boxing in the seventh round. Smith, a past master at ring tactics, had the best of it, but Wilson was delighting everyone with his cleverness. There was nothing much to comment on in the eighth and ninth rounds, but the boxing was still capital, and Smith was a trifle in front against his game and determined opponent, who looked as strong as ever.

Wilson used his left hand with better effect in the tenth round, but Smith continually got past his guard, although there was not much sting in his blows. Both boys were still on their toes and the pace was as fast as in the opening round. Smith continued to score the points in the eleventh and twelfth, although Wilson got in a good right on the body and one on the jaw in the twelfth.

Wilson had another great chance in the thirteenth round. He floored Smith with a right-hand swing on the side of the head, and Smith was also down on his knee just after. It looked as if Smith was weakening, but he came again like a lion in the fourteenth, and although it was obvious he did not like some of the punishment he received, he was always the better boxer.

The fifteenth was a very light round, which was, of course, all in favour of Smith, but Wilson showed much cleverness in blocking many of Smith's blows. Wilson got in some telling body blows in the sixteenth round, which Smith did not like, and he also ducked out of the way of a couple of swings from the right which might have altered the complexion of the contest had they landed.

There was some hugging in the seventeenth round, which saw Smith at his best at in-fighting. For the first time the referee said: "Break." The eighteenth might almost have been an exhibition spar, so pretty was the boxing, and at this game, of course, Smith scored all along the line. The nineteenth round gave neither man an advantage, the boxing, being still of best-class with Smith much the cleverer.

"A great contest!" we all said when the lads boxed through the twentieth round with but little in it. Smith had won, we knew, but Wilson was almost as good as his conqueror, and to ringing cheers the lads left the ring.

It was a clean, upstanding bout with none of the kidney punching and wrestling we too often see in contests of this kind. I only hope some of the critics of the noble art were present. It was the old English game, and the fight was contested in the best sporting spirit throughout.

CALCUTTA POLO CLUB CORONATION TOURNAMENT.

H.E. THE VICEROY'S STAFF vs. 10TH HUSSARS.—The tournament opened with this game on Christmas Day. The 10th were represented by their second team and had to work hard to beat the Staff, who put up a good game, in spite of the lack of opportunities they have recently had for practice.

First Chukker.—The Staff pressed but missed two shots at goal. The 10th were then awarded a free hit. This was not turned to account and the staff resuming the attack scored through Captain Hartley.

Second Chukker.—Both goals were visited without success. Then the 10th got away and Major Cadogan equalised. Before the end of the period, however, Hartley rushed down and gave the Staff the lead once more.

Third Chukker.—Sticky play for a spell. Then the 10th got away and scored twice in quick succession.

Fourth Chukker.—Cadogan got on and scored for the 10th. Thereafter the Staff attacked and after one unsuccessful shot the Staff scored, Maxwell putting through.

Fifth Chukker.—The Staff had the upper hand throughout this period and scored two more goals, thus taking the lead once more.

Sixth Chukker.—The 10th pressed and equalised in a mêlée. Shortly after they put in a good run down the field and notched another point.

Seventh Chukker.—The Staff ran down and shot for goal, but Canning saved cleverly. Fast up and down play till nearing the close of the chukker when the 10th scored another goal.

Eighth Chukker.—This was a very level period. The Staff succeeded in scoring again, but subsequent efforts to get on terms were unavailing.

Final Score:—10th Hussars, 7 goals; Viceroy's Staff, 6 goals.

2ND LANCERS vs. 4TH CAVALRY.—This match was played on Tuesday and a fast and well contested game was witnessed, the 2nd Lancers eventually winning by 7 goals to 4. There was little to choose between the teams in the first half and at the interval the score stood at 2 all. The Lancers then got going and put on two more goals in the fifth. Each team registered a point in the sixth and the Lancers put on another in the seventh at the end of which period the score read: Lancers 6 goals, Cavalry 3 goals. In the last chukker a goal was obtained by each team and the Lancers thus won as stated by 7 to 4. The winners were better mounted than the 4th Cavalry, who nevertheless played pluckily throughout. Cricket.

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE week has been a busy one for cricket, for in addition to the Xmas matches at the Gardens and Ballygunge, the Elphinstone College, H.M.S. Highflyer, the Turf Cricket Club C.C. and the Middlesex have also had a few important matches. On Thursday the ball was set rolling when the Turf Club played the Maharaja of Nattore's team. Nattore was much too strong for the Turf boys, whom they beat by five wickets and 171 runs. Out of a total of 301 put up by Nattore, D. Sampre contributed 103. The Maharaj Kumar, who has the making of a fine cricketer, contributed 72, whilst the Maharaja in the bowling line got five wickets for 37 runs. The Turf Club also lost to the Middlesex on the following day by 51 runs, but in the second innings the Racing boys and bookies got to work, Colin Barrett and W. Jackson contributing a not out 48 and a not out 72 respectively.

The Stage too have indulged in cricket, and last Friday a Theatrical team played Nattore, but a victory for the Maharaja's team was anticipated, and this proved to be the case, the Stage losing by 134 runs. Out of a total of 108 registered by the Stage, Moore (15), J. Vaughan (29), Thornhike (16) and Pritchard (10) were the principal run-getters. The Maharaja's side knocked up 242, P. Ganput subscribing 105 and the Maharaj Kumar 74. The Maharaja again distinguished himself with the ball, getting six wickets for 55 runs.

On Saturday spectators mustered in force to see the match between the Bombay Gymkhana and Ballygunge on the latter's ground. Major Greig was conspicuous by his absence, and it is doubtful if this fine cricketer will don flannels during His Majesty's visit here. In addition to the Major three other prominent Bombay cricketers were unable to accompany the team, while Ballygunge were also not at full strength. Saturday's cricket was disappointing, but on the following day both teams scored consistently and an even draw was the ultimate result. Ballygunge in the first innings were all out for 121—a miserable score on an excellent wicket, Frank Gould (not out 41) and J. R. Coulthard 23) being the principal contributors. W. S. Halliley took six wickets for 25 runs and Major Southey three for 44. Bombay fared very little better, their venture closing for 136, to which Halliley and Southey, the two bowlers, compiled more than half the score, the former getting 37, while the Major subscribed 20. White, Gould and Murray all got wickets, the first named five for 50, Gould two for 42 and Murray two for 27 runs. On Sunday there was not the remotest idea that huge scores would be recorded, but this was so, and both teams batting very consistently a draw was the ultimate result. Ballygunge in their second innings put up 319 for six, after which the closure was applied. Bombay too did equally as well, 236 being registered for the loss of five wickets when time was up. For Ballygunge White played a dashing innings of 111, while V. Cooper (not out 49) and Skinner (not out 47) hit brilliantly. On the Gymkhana side the two bowlers again carried off the honours of the match, Halliley being not out 70, while the Major got a not out 50. Both batted in attractive style.

The two-day match on Saturday and Sunday between Calcutta and the Military at the Gardens ended in a draw, the latter having slightly the best of the deal. The military had first use of the wickets, but the game, which was announced to start at 11 o'clock, did not commence until two. The military knocked up 201, B. N. Bocquet (64), N. H. B. Lyon (45) and L. G. Lightfoot (not out 41) all displaying good form. Chisholm took six wickets for 39 runs, while Muir got two for 71. Calcutta replied with only 132, Quin (34), Turnbull (19) and Bissaker (20) being the highest scores recorded. Lightfoot took six wickets for 26 runs. In the second innings the military knocked up 114 for eight, after which the closure was applied. Calcutta registered 117 for a similar number of wickets when time was up. Bocquet (72) and Given-Wilson (19) were the top scorers for their respective sides.

The Elphinstone College (Bombay) had no difficulty in beating the Presidency College (Calcutta) by an innings and 41 runs. The Parsees totalled 232, to which H. F. Mulla, who represented the All-India Team in England, subscribed 83 by reputable cricket. The Presidency College were all out for 81, while in the follow on they registered 110. The match was played on the Maharaja of Nattore's ground on Sunday and Monday.

There was a large attendance at the Gardens on Christmas day to witness the game between the Bombay Gymkhana and Calcutta, and as is usually the case on these occasions the Pavilion was well filled, especially on Monday, when the ladies were invited to tiffin, on which day the 27th Punjabis' Band was in attendance. Calcutta were lucky in having first use of the wickets, and when their last man was out the supporters of the home club were in no way disappointed, for Calcutta had put up a substantial total of 316. Of this A. J. Carter subscribed 106 by brilliant cricket, this being this fine batsman's first century recorded in Calcutta. Bocquet (84) and Von Krumhausen (45) also batted in attractive style. The Gymkhana replied with only 183, Major Southey hitting splendidly for 74 while B. C. Covell came next with 39. The Bombay team had to follow on, and on a wicket that had gone from bad to worse the whole side was out for 105. V. A. S. Stow was top scorer with 28. Halliley seven wickets for 126 runs for Bombay and Muir six wickets for 50 runs in the first innings and Chisholm six for 36 in the second for Calcutta bowled best.

The Ballygunge and United Services match last Monday and Tuesday at Ballygunge resulted in a win for the home team by five wickets. The Services team with the exception of Quin was purely a military one, and the side did remarkably well in putting up 325. Of this fine total Lieutenant F. H. Gould subscribed 127 and Lieutenant P. N. C. Bossiter 103. The old suburban club too batted consistently, their venture closing for 267, D. S. Shallow hitting splendidly for 148 while P. Hoerder also hit well for 50. In the second innings the visitors fell all to bits, all being out for 135, to which Bossiter subscribed 55. Ballygunge wanted 174 to win, and this they obtained for the loss of five wickets. Hoerder (not out 69) and Stafford (not out 64) hit pluckily and won the match a minute before call of time.

The officers of the Rifle Brigade beat Calcutta "A" after an exciting game by a wicket, the respective scores being 162 and 160. The match was played at the Fort on Monday.

On Tuesday a very enjoyable day was spent on the Police ground when the Australian Jockeys beat the English Jockeys by 85 runs. The scores were: Australians, 200; English, 115. Frank Wootton represented the Australians, but was not successful with the bat.

NATTORE'S XI. vs. TURF CRICKET CLUB.—Played at Ballygunge last Thursday, Nattore winning easily by 5 wickets and 171 runs. They disposed of their opponents for 130 and then ran up 301 for 5 wickets, Sampre retiring after contributing 103, Shunker (55) and the Maharaj Kumar (52) also batting well. Score:—

THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP OF INDIA.

THE qualifying round was played on the 24th instant over the Tollygunge links. The condition of the greens was excellent and the weather beautiful. Forty-eight competitors went out and forty-one returned cards, results of which are as under. As will be seen three returned 170 and of these two were to qualify. A decision was arrived at by comparing the scores with the Bogey scores and Messrs Bray and Dunlop took their places in the first 16. Mr. Alex Mann was top with 76+81=157 and won the prize for the lowest score for 18 holes and the prize for the best aggregate for 36 holes. His cards were as follows :—

Morning, Out :	4,	4,	4,	4,	4,	4,	5,	4,	3,	36	76
In :	5,	4,	5,	5,	4,	4,	5,	4,	4,	40

MICHELIN

"Semelle" Non-skids

—but there is only one quality.

Quality is the predominant characteristic of our tyres.

We are students in the science of Tyre Culture; and our efforts are constantly directed towards the improvement of the already high standard we have set.

Quality has gained the leadership for us; and there is no keener recognition than our own of the fact that only by the continuance of Quality can we hold that leadership.

It is a well-known saying that "imitation is the sincerest form of flattery," and the fact that many of our competitors have tried to copy our "Semelle" non-skid is a conclusive proof that the principles are right.

It is, however, just that extra touch of supreme quality which distinguishes our "Semelle" from the commonalty.

If you have not already tried one, get your stockist to supply you with a Michelin "Semelle." It is the finest non-skid on the market.

The Semi-finals were played on Tuesday and provided a sensation in the defeat of Mann by Whigham, the Rangoon player. Mann is an ex-amateur champion and was much fancied for the title this year. Whigham won the first two holes and Mann the third and fourth. The fifth went to Whigham and they halved the next two. Whigham took the eighth and the ninth and was three up at the turn. Whigham—4 4 5 5 3 4 5 3 3=36' Mann —5 5 4 4 4 4 5 4 4=39. On the homeward journey, Whigham won the 10th, 11th and 12th holes and became dormy 6. The next was halved and Whigham thus qualified for the final by 6 and 5.

The match between Gatheral and Cunningham was very evenly contested, a dingdong struggle carried to the 25th green when Gatheral won. The first hole was halved as was the third, Gatheral winning the second and fourth : the fifth also fell to him and the sixth was halved. Cunningham took the seventh, but his opponent won both the eighth and ninth and stood four up at the turn. Gatheral 5 5 4 4 3 4 6 5 3=39, Cunningham 5 6 4 5 4 4 5 5 4 =43. On the return, Cunningham made a great recovery, and played splendid golf. He won the tenth, twelfth and thirteenth holes, the eleventh and fourteenth were halved. Cunningham won the fifteenth and squared the match. The sixteenth was halved and Cunningham winning the seventeenth took the lead. At the last green he missed a short putt and Gatheral holing out in 3 squared the match. Gatheral 5 4 5 6 4 5 4 4 3=40. Cunningham 4 4 4 5 4 4 4 3 4=36. Continuing the play was not so good and the first five holes was halved in 5 5 4 4 4, the 24th was also halved, Cunningham missing a short put once more. The 25th was won by Gatheral, who thus secured the match. The final between Whigham and Gatheral will take place on Sunday next, starting about 10 A.M.

MIKE.—"Pat, there's only wan thing will cure malaria—that whisky-an' quinine." Pat.—"Where can ye get it?" Mike.—"The whisky-an' quinine?" Pat.—"No; malaria!"

AGAIN and again.—The Widow Wagg had lost her third, George Jones, D. D., delivered the funeral address, and an eloquent and moving address it was, but George, in his inaccurate way, hadn't made sure whether it was her third or her fourth that the Widow Wagg was burrying. Hence the spoiled a great oration with these concluding words—"And now we commend to the divine mercy this widowed handmaid, who had been bereaved again and again and again—." George hesitated, frowned, and added—"And perhaps again."

MOTOR NOTES.

LONDON, 8th December 1911.

ONE of the first projects arising out of the recent settlement of the differences between Germany and France in Africa gives some idea of the progressive and enterprising manner in which Germany proposes to make use of her new opportunity. According to the Berliner Tageblatt Germany's West African territory is to be linked up with her East African colony by a service of motor cars across the Continent, passing through the Belgian Congo. The connecting of different districts by a service of motor cars has already been tried with encouraging success in the Belgian Congo, and the German Government has decided to adopt the same means of communication. New roads will have to be made through forest and hewn out of mountainous country. Bridges will have to be constructed to span rivers and a considerable amount of organisation will be necessary before the scheme gets into working order. It is stated, however, that already German engineers and military officers are conducting a survey to find the best route

THE obnoxious smell that is sometimes associated with motor cars is not always due to over-lubrication. In many cases the odour is due to oil or grease leaking from the gear-box and thrown by the shaft on to the hot exhaust pipe. At this point the pipe may not be hot enough to really burn the oil up immediately, but it does it gradually, and makes a most unpleasant smell in so doing. The remedy is a simple and obvious one. As a rule, the leakage, if round the bearing of the gear-box primary shaft, cannot be stopped, and the thing to do is to protect the exhaust pipe from the splashes. This can be done by fitting a thin iron shield an inch or two from the exhaust pipe and between it and the line of the oil splashes.

ONE of the admittedly weak points in modern motor construction is the antiquated method of starting the engine. In this respect we have made but little progress since the time of the early motor car, but there are indications that sooner or later the antiquated method of starting will be abolished. Already two or three manufacturers actually embody self-starting mechanism in their engines, whilst self-starting devices are being put on the market independently. To start on the switch is a peculiarity which some engines possess to a greater or lesser degree, but this, remarks the Motor News, entails forethought beforehand, and it is never very certain. By the possession of a device which is certain, the motorist would be relieved of considerable trouble, especially the owner-mechanic who tends his car personally and does not keep a chauffeur. But to be marketable such a device must be simple, light, and easily applied. I am inclined to think that once the actual benefits of self-starting become realised, it will not be long before every car possesses some means of achieving this object. It is simply a case of demand. If the purchaser insists on it, the makers will respond, and once such an equipment becomes standard, simplicity will be aimed at, and designers will set to work to make self-starting an easy matter.

The best Headlight.

The C.A.V. Model "G" headlight is admittedly the best and most efficient on the market It is immensely popular; the demand for it being ever on the ascendant. Its powerful beams brilliantly illuminate the darkest nights, while its fog-penetrating qualities are most marked. A user writes:—"The light was magnificient through the dense fog on the Lammermuirs." A unique feature of this lamp is that it never dazzles.

PERHAPS one of the most common errors made by the amateur is that of tightening a series of bolts improperly. In replacing the lower portion of an engine base chamber, for instance, the lower part will be forced up into place and a single nut or stud fitted into position to hold it. Then another bolt will be fitted on the opposite side. If the case happens to fit snugly in place all may be well so far; but should it sag a little on one side, when the opposite nut is drawn up tight, the case will most likely be cracked. Herein lies the important point. In assembling any part which is secured by a series of bolts, one should be careful, first, to see that the part has an even and snug bearing all round; second, to make sure that the bolts are drawn up evenly. One should not draw up the nut of one bolt as tightly as possible, then proceed to the next one and do the same. The nuts should all be drawn up, a little at a time, and one by one round the case until all become fairly tight.

CONSIDERABLE though the saving of petrol may be as a result of adding to the engine of an old car a modern form of carburettor, it is frequently possible to bring about an appreciable diminution in fuel consumption simply by careful driving. Even in the case of two identical cars, similarly loaded, and run together over the same course, there may be a wide difference in the petrol consumption of these cars, the extent of the difference being a measure of the skill of the drivers. The most economical car of the two will be that which is driven at that speed which previous experience has shown to be its most economical rate of progress. For all cars there is some such speed of maximum economy, and in general this ranges from twenty to twenty-five miles an hour. At higher speeds the wind resistance increases very considerably so that more petrol may be used to overcome this resistance than is required to propel the car at, say, twenty miles an hour. Petrol can also be saved by taking full advantage of favourable gradients. The writer of the Motor Notes in the Birmingham Daily Post, for instance states that he always "free wheels" down all easy and well-known slopes; but, of course, this practice is not to be recommended on steep or unknown hills, as it deprives the driver of the braking-power of the engine which, on the lower gear, is alone sufficient to keep the speed of the car down to a low limit even on a bad hill.

AVIATION NOTES.

A DECREE regulating air traffic in France has just been issued by the French Government. It provided that all aviators must be provided with certificates and with permits for their aircraft. Each machine must carry a visible registered number and must come to land when invited to do so by signals which are to be arranged subsequently. Flights over cities or crowds are prohibited. No explosives, cameras, or wireless telegraphy apparatus may be carried without special permission. A log-book is to be kept, in which, however, in the case of aeroplanes, only the names of the passenger or passengers and the hours and places are to be recorded. In the near future all aircraft will be expected to carry three lights, a white one in front, a green one on the right, and a red one on the left. A horn must be carried for use in foggy weather. There are various provisions designed to prevent collisions. Aircraft are expected never to pass within 100 metres (about 330 feet) of each other if circumstances permit.

THE experiments that Commander Schwann has been carrying out with his hydro-aeroplane at Cavendish Dock, Barrow, met with a measure of success on Saturday last. Improvements have been made in the floats, and the Green engine has been rendered more effective. In the presence of a few officers Commander Schwann took the machine out, and as soon as it had been released it ascended gracefully from the water. After it had remained in the air for a short time a sudden gust of wind brought it down, but if fine weather prevails the experiments will be continued.

THE special course of instruction in aeronautics which Mr. C. B. Fry, Honorary Director of the training ship Mercury has arranged for the boys, was started on Monday. This course forms part of the scheme lately evolved by the Young Aerial League to give Boy Scouts a simplified aeronautical training which would enable them to identify machines, estimate their height, speed, direction of flight, etc., thus enabling them to be of immediate service to their country in case of invasion. Mr. Hilin Deshlede, lecturer in aeronautical engineering at the Polytechnic, London, gave the inaugural address and dealt specially with the manner in which aeroplanes would affect the Navy.

MR. JAMES VALENTINE, the well-known aviator, was recently the guest of the Harrogate Chamber of Trades, when he was presented with the prize offered by the Chamber to the first airman to arrive at Harrogate from Hendon in the £10,000 race. Mr. Valentine, in thanking the Chamber for the gift, which took the form of a silver tea service and salver, said he had not yet got his marriage certificate, but when he did he would lay aside his airman's certificate.

MR. MOORHOUSE, the Huntingdon aviator, who is endeavouring to be the first Englishman to qualify for the Aero Club's Senior Brevet, attempted a flight from Huntingdon to Hendon and back without a stop on the 22nd ultimo. He found, however, that the air was too thick for observations to be made, and when near Hitchin turned back, making a circuit home by way of Cambridge and covering over eighty-six miles in 83 minutes.

A MEETING of British aeroplane manufacturers was held at the Royal Aero Club, on Tuesday, to decide what action they should take in regard to the policy of the War Office in throwing open to the world its forthcoming trials of military aeroplanes. It was eventually decided to form a committee of manufacturers and airmen to wait upon Colonel Seely, and represent to him the advantage of restricting the trials of British makers.

A DEPUTATION from the Aerial League waited upon Colonel Seely, Under-Secretary for War, on Tuesday, in reference to the military aeroplane tests. He said that the Government adhered to their decision that the principal prize should be open to all comers, and indicated that there would also be a subsidiary prize for British machines.

EASTBOURNE is achieving a reputation as an aviation centre. In addition to the flights that have recently been made there Mr. F. B. Fowler made an ascent last week on a 50 h.p. Gnome Blériot monoplane. He flew from the Eastbourne Aerodrome to Hampton Park and also made several smaller flights round St. Anthony's Tower. In landing, however, he came down too sharply, with the result that one of the stays was broken.

HIGHLAND GAMES AT BANGALORE.

THE Cameron Highlanders held their annual sports meeting at Bangalore last week, a big crowd of spectators being present on the concluding day, Friday, the 22nd instant. The Regimental band was in attendance and Lady Daly gave away the prizes at the close of the proceedings. An attractive event was the 30 mile bicycle race, run on the 21st instant from the barracks 15 miles up the Ossoor Road and back. Seven men started, the favourite being Sergeant Smith, with a home divisional reputation for long distance cycling. They were paced by Captains McPherson and Lumsden in a motor-car. Smith led all the way there and part of the way back, when he was seized by cramp and was motored home. Private Thompson, another good man, broke down over a puncture. Private Smith, of H. Co. finished first, in 1 hour 54 seconds, and Private Robertson, G. Co. second, in 2 hours 7¼ seconds. Results —

THURSDAY, 4th January 1912.

A PIONEER OF HIMALAYAN BOTANY.

The Christmas season of 1911 will be memorable (we can scarcely say saddened in the case of one whose life so largely exceeded in length the normal span) in scientific circles by the death of the veteran botanist, Sir Joseph Dalton Hooker, in his 95th year which took place on 11th December. Born in Suffolk during the summer (on 30th June, to be precise) of 1817, Hooker lived during the reigns of no less than six British Sovereigns ; George III. being on the throne when the deceased botanist first saw the light. It is, indeed, difficult to realise the enormous changes which Hooker witnessed, not only in science, but likewise in the progress of the world generally, during his prolonged life. In his youth the foundations of modern scientific geology were being laid by Charles Lyell, Huxley was considerably his junior, and Darwin did not publish his epoch-making theory till the subject of this notice was well on in middle life, and then only owing to Hooker's prompting.

Himself the son of a distinguished botanist, and brought up in intimate association with another great botanist—Professor Henslow (whose daughter he subsequently married)—young Hooker, although educated as a naval surgeon, could scarcely do otherwise than make the study of plants his favourite pursuit and the main object of his life's work. And he had not long to wait for opportunity of showing his capacity for botanical investigations of the highest class. For in 1839 he was appointed assistant surgeon and botanist to the Antarctic Expedition in the Erebus and Terror, under the command of Sir James (then Captain) Ross ;—an event which seems to us of the present day almost pre-historic in its remoteness.

Admirable as was the result of his botanical work during this expedition, it cannot be dwelt upon here, as our object is to refer to the Indian episode of Hooker's career. It may, however, be mentioned that, as one of the results of this Antarctic voyage, Hooker was enabled to establish the fact that the whole of the animal life of the ocean is ultimately dependent upon the minute vegetable organisms which float in their unthinkable millions upon its surface ; thus proving once for all that life on land and on sea has its foundation on the vegetable kingdom.

Soon after his return from the Antarctic, that is to say, in November, 1847, Hooker started on an expedition—partly supported by Government, but mainly financed from his own private resources—to investigate the botany of the Sikhim Himalaya, and to describe and reap, so far as possible, this at the time little known region. This adventurous trip, much of which was accomplished in company with D. D. Campbell, then political officer at the newly founded station of Darjeeling, occupied three years ; Hooker returning to England in 1851, together with Dr. T. Thompson, who had joined him at Darjeeling towards the close of 1849.

The narrative of this trip was recorded by Hooker in his "Himalayan Journals," one of the most delightful works of travel that has ever been published, the first edition of which was issued in 1858. The hardships which Hooker and Campbell suffered at the hands of the Arrogant Raja of Sikhim by whom they were incarcerated for several weeks are too well known to need more than passing mention ; but it is interesting to note that the plans and maps made by Hooker in Sikhim and Nepal were adopted by the Survey Department at Calcutta and long remained the standard source of information on the subject. Indeed, it is stated that some of the Himalayan passes crossed by Hooker have been but rarely crossed by European footsteps since.

Before noting his Himalayan experiences, it will be interesting to refer to a passage where Hooker refers to the Calcutta Botanical Gardens as they were in 1847.

"The great banyan tree," he writes, "is still the pride and ornament of the garden. Dr. [Hugh] Falconer has ascertained satisfactorily that it is only seventy-five years old ; annual rings, size, etc., afford no evidence in such a case, but people were alive a few years ago who remembered well its site being occupied (in 1782) by a wild date-palm, out of whose crown the banyan sprouted, and beneath which a fakir sat. . . . The gigantic limbs spread out about ten feet above the ground, and on Dr. Falconer's arrival there were no more than eighty-nine descending roots or props ; there are now several hundreds, and the growth of this grand mass of vegetation is proportionately stimulated and increased."

His notes on the founding and progress of Darjeeling (then termed Dorjiling) are also of interest. After mentioning that the suitability of this favourite station as a sanatarium was first suggested during the Governor-Generalship of Lord William Bentinck, and that a settlement was founded some time subsequent to 1828, Hooker observed that, "Once established, Dorjiling made rapid progress. Allotments of land were purchased by Europeans for building dwelling-houses ; barracks and a bazar were formed with accommodation for invalid European soldiers ; a few official residents, civil and military, formed the nucleus of a community, which was increased by retired officers and their families, and by temporary visitors in search of health, or the luxury of a cool climate and active exercise. . . . Political difficulties have not, however, interfered with the rapid increase of Dorjiling ; the progress of which during the two years I spent in Sikhim, resembled that of an Australian Colony, not only in amount of building, but in the accession of native families from the surrounding countries. There were not a hundred inhabitants under British protection when the ground was transferred ; there are now four thousand. At the former period there was no trade whatever ; there is now a very considerable one in musk, salt, gold-dust, borax, soda, woollen cloths and especially in ponies, of which the Dewan in one year brought on his own account upwards of fifty into Dorjiling."

Neither must we forget Hooker's picturesque description of the magnificent scenery and marvellous vegetation of the Darjeeling Himalaya,—a description which will remain unsurpassed for all time. To the British horticulturist Hooker's greatest claim to remembrance is, however, undoubtedly founded on his discoveries of so many new kinds of Himalayan rhododendrons, which have done so much to beautify gardens and plantations in England and elsewhere.

The writer of the article Rhododendron in the Treasury of Botany observes that "the genus is widely diffused ; Rhododendron lapponicum occurs in the Arctic zone, R. maximum and R. catawbiense are plentiful in some parts of North America. The genus has also representatives in Europe and in China, but in India we find the greatest number. Dr. J. D. Hooker observed forty-three species in Sikhim, most of which were new ; and in Bhutan they also abound . . . . . The discoveries of Dr. Hooker have added greatly to our knowledge of the species and enriched our collections with several which are highly prized by cultivators. R. Ciliatum may be mentioned as an example ; it grows at an elevation of from 9,000 to 10,000 feet in the rocky valleys of Sikhim, and of all Indian species is probably the most easily cultivated ; while its moderate size and abundant flowers are further recommendations."

As an example of Hooker's picturesque description of the Himalayan flora, we may quote a passage from the Journals relating to the Zemu valley ;—

"Rhododendrons occupied the most prominent place, clothing the mountain slopes with a deep green mantle glowing with bells of different colours ; of the eight or ten species growing here, every bush was loaded with as great a profusion of flowers as are their northern congeners in our English gardens. Primroses were next, both in beauty and abundance ; and they were accompanied by yellow cowslips, three feet high, purple polyanthus, and pink large-flowered dwarf kinds nestling in the rocks, and an exquisitely beautiful blue miniature species, whose blossoms sparkled like sapphires on the turf. Gentians began to unfold their deep azure bells, aconites to rear their tall blue spikes, and fritillaries to burst into flower. On the black rocks the gigantic rhubard formed pale pyramidal towers, a yard high, of inflated reflexed bracts, that conceal the flowers, and overlapping one another like tiles, protect them from the wind and rain."

Hooker was, of course, a fellow of the Royal Society, as well as of many foreign academies and his claims to special distinction were recognised by the bestowal of the coveted order of merit. Thus, full of year's and full of honours, the most picturesque and venerable figure in the ranks of British science has passed to his well-earned rest.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The racing diary of the past week is a heavy one and as owing to the first part of this paper having to be closed earlier than the last half we were unable in our last issue to do more than publish the bare results of the racing on Viceroy's Cup day we must hark back and take up the parable from the eve of that race.

The happenings of Cup day are by now somewhat stale news but to preserve the continuity in the narrative of events it is necessary to shortly recapitulate the facts and make some reference to the numerous opinions that have been expressed thereon both in the press and elsewhere. We have been fortunate enough so far to present our patrons with the winners of the first two important flat races of the Calcutta season for Tangaroa was selected for the Trials and in the Viceroy's Cup we placed them 1, 2. In our final review of the situation we stuck to Mayfowl and expressed the opinion that he was the better of the Apear pair and that he would come out on top, though it was also evident that there was not very much between the two horses. There are many people who think that Mayfowl was lucky to win and that his stable companion Vavasor won the race for him. In this we do not entirely concur for we consider that the best horse on the day won and that however Vavasor had been ridden it would have taken him all his time to beat Mayfowl. The best proof of the pudding is in the eating and here we have a horse that has for two years in succession shown us a consistently good performance, winning his races on each occasion in the same time to within the fraction of a second. That Mayfowl is a fast horse and a really genuine stayer there can be no denying, and though the Colonial friends of Vavasor accuse his jockey of having murdered his chances by his ill-considered tactics in making the running with a horse he knew had a brilliant dash at the finish, we nevertheless feel confident that when it came to a fight, as it would have to do a couple of furlongs from home if Vavasor was to stop Mayfowl's getting a run on him, Mayfowl would wear him down and beat him a head off. We consider Mayfowl a better class horse than Vavasor and we are convinced he is a far better stayer. C. Hoyt undoubtedly made too much use of Vavasor and did so needlessly as the pace was quite solid enough. Lawn Sand, who was sent out to make the running, overacted the part and by clearing out and getting about twenty lengths in front of his horses he might just as well not have been in the race at all. He was of no use to either of this stable companions and it was Vavasor and not Lawn Sand who set the pace. Mayfowl lay all the time well up just behind Vavasor, Aborigine and Last Call who were in front together, Lawn Sand being out by himself all the way till past the half mile post, by which time he had been ridden to an absolute standstill in a manner sufficient to break the heart of even the staunchest, and for no useful purpose either. Mayfowl was never more than three lengths behind the head of the field and at the half mile, when Aborigine began to falter and Black Buck could not come on, Kuhn closed up behind Vavasor and Last Call and was never more than a length off. At the home turn he took Mayfowl up on the outside of them and the race was over in the next few strides, as neither Vavasor nor Last Call could go with him and the game old gelding drew away from them with ease and won in our opinion comfortably, in 3 min. 1½ sec., an Indian record and exactly four-fifths of a second better going than that in which Mayfowl won this Cup last year. Vavasor probably ought to have been second, and he might have been closer up to Mayfowl at the finish if he had not been made so much use of all through the race, but he would not have beaten him and at whatever point of the journey Vavasor had tackled Mayfowl he would have found that his stable companion could go faster and further than he could. We do not think there is any doubt about this and if the race were run over again and the best flat race jockey procurable, Wootton, for instance, were put up on Vavasor, we should expect to see the result the same.

Of the defeated and particularly of Last Call, Aborigine and Black Buck, we consider that the running of the first-named justifies us in considering that he has not lost his form as entirely as he was supposed to have done. We have always been inclined to think that there was a tendency to condemn this horse out of hand, on the strength of one admittedly poor performance in the Aga Khan Cup in Poona. Brewer is reported to have said that he was glad to be rid of the horse when he was purchased on behalf of Mr. Mathuradass Goculdass and that he considered that there was not another race in him. He no doubt believed this when he said it or he could never have been a party to Last Call's being sold out of his stable. It is very apparent that this horse has not lost his form for he was never renowned for a brilliant dash of foot and he has shown us that he can stay as well as ever by finishing right up to the front with two of the best horses in India at the end of a very fast run 1¾ mile race. We shall not be at all surprised to see Last Call in one of the big long distance handicaps, our only doubt being that there is no race in India quite far enough for him. As to Aborigine and Black Buck the former was in our opinion stale. We remarked after his running in the Trials that we considered he was overdone and that his appearance did not please us. He is looking a bit hunted and carries very little muscle over his quarters and back. This opinion is strengthened very considerably by the horse's performance in the Cooch Behar Cup, referred to lower down in these notes. He has been given five races inside of practically three weeks and he has not thriven on it. He was just about his best when he won the Wellesley Plate and if he had then been given an easy and had not been pulled out in rapid succession for the Trials and Viceroy's Cup he would possibly have won the Cooch Behar Cup. It is a big strain in a horse's constitution to be asked to take on three severe races like the Trials, the Viceroy's Cup and the Cooch Behar Cup inside of one week. For the Trials was run on the 23rd

December, the Cup on the 27th and the Cooch Behar Cup on the 30th. In any other land they would consider it a good achievement if they got a horse readied for one big race in a week and would not expect him to fly at three in rapid succession. As to Black Buck the same remarks in a very great measure apply, with the exception that he did not come out in the Trials, but he had had a lot of fast work and he was given a searching gallop on the Sunday preceding the Viceroy's Cup and he would have been far better if he had been left at home, for he was strong right up when he ran that good second to Aborigine in the 1¼ mile Wellesley Plate on the 16th December, ten days before his big engagement. In the Viceroy's Cup he was one of the earliest beaten, as he was quite harmless by the time the half mile post had been reached. His running was in a measure a disappointment and yet we ought not to expect horses to act like machines—but some of us do.

Of the other races in the card on Viceroy's Cup day the Grand Annual Hurdle Race was looked upon as a good thing for Five Crown, in spite of the 12st. 12lb. he had been awarded in the handicap and we do not think in view of the previous and recent form this impost was excessive. It nevertheless settled him and he was unable to repeat his Poona victory over old Realm, to whom he was conceding in the 1¼ mile Deccan Plate 1st. 8lb.: in the Grand Annual he was asked to give him 4lb. more. As Realm finished two and a half lengths behind Five Crown at Poona in the race just referred to this ought not to have stopped Sir Apear Apcar's horse; but he was well beaten before the last obstacle and old Realm, who showed a great dash of pace at the finish, won very comfortable by two and a half lengths. The Chief of Manavadar's horse seems to be coming back to a bit of his old form in his old age, for, of course, four years ago he was absolutely top of the map in Australia. He won the V.R.C. Grand National Hurdle Race and the Australian Hurdle Race in 1906 and in 1907 they ran him on the flat and he secured the Australian Cup and the Sydney Cup so there is no question about the class he is. Williamson who rode Realm was unlucky as to get put into one of the wings and ear in the race smashed one of the small bones in his right foot. He rode a very fine race and were very pleased to see this good cross-country horseman in his first important jump race in India. Williamson arrived here last autumn and signalised his first ride in India by winning a hurdle race on Raigendorie with no stirrups, his leathers having broken over the second race.

As for the rest of the card very little comment is necessary. In spite of his brilliant deeds in the past the public showed a waning confidence in old Refresher for the International Pony Plate and made Leo Grand, who was getting 9lb. from Mr. Goculdass' pony, the better favourite. It was a pleasure to see Refresher tackle his rival in the straight and he won, as he has so often done before, like a racehorse. This year is his third win in succession in this race and he has shown marvellous consistency. The Curzon Plate was a great upset as it looked good goods for Watch Tower, but Mr. Goculdass' luck was in and old Forfeit, who started at 20 to 1, made practically all the running and won by three-quarters of a length from Socialist, the favourite Watch Tower being third.

Only three were left in the Calcutta Plate' Tangaroa, Soultline and Lumination, and it was no more than an exercise canter for Tangaroa. He started at 3 to 1 on. Soultline, true to his reputation, made a very poor show and was beaten out of second place by Lumination. The German Cup brought the card to a close and a big field of fifteen went for it, Santoinette, Black Douglas and Brigade being most fancied but the luck of the Apcar colours on Cup Day is proverbial and the stable rarely miss securing one other event on the same day as they win the Viceroy's Cup. Koonowla broke his maiden in signal fashion and, showing no signs of the knavishness of which he has on previous occasions given us a taste, fought it out with Black Douglas and beat him two lengths The actual difference on the weights was 1st. 8lb. Koonowla, who was handicapped at 8st. 3lbs., carried one pound overweight.

On Cooch Behar Cup day we had only a short card of five races as owing to the arrival of Their Majesties it was not possible to commence racing before 3 P.M. The attendance was very fair, though early in the afternoon the stands and paddock were somewhat empty, people being unable to get there in time for the first race. There was a rumour that Her Majesty the Queen was coming, but it turned out to be incorrect and Their Majesties went to the Zoo instead, greatly to the disappointment of the racing folk. Things did not roll the way of punters by any means, but in spite of only one favourite having won and the ring scoring an absolute skinner over Sidonia, who won the Gunny Meah Cup, they asserted that they did not do so very well. We feel inclined to say Credat Judæus appella! The only favourite to win was the first one, Bonny Boy, who, ridden by Wootton, had no difficulty about securing the Xmas Selling Handicap. There was an objection lodged by Hackler's Bloom's owner, on the ground of a cross at the start, but after taking evidence the Stewards over-ruled. There was no bid for Bonny Boy when he was put up for sale after the race. He started at even money and cut out the five furlongs in 1min. 1⅘secs.—pretty hot time for selling platers. For the Lawn Plate, for which ten went out, they picked Chestnut Park and on his recent running the Kuar Sahib's four-year-old looked like winning it. There was a very close race between Foudrette who led all the way, Forfeit, Chestnut Park and Cherry Hackle, necks only dividing the first three, and Cherry Hackle was only half a length behind Chestnut Park. It is to be noted that all the runners in this race were English horses. The Sandown Park Plate came next and the public went solid for Hoppner which Chobham, who was certainly entitled to attention on Poona and last year's Calcutta form, was not greatly fancied at sixes. There was regular scrimmage coming up the straight between Paul Pry, Neith, Hackler's Girl and Malmsey and Chobham was lucky to be clear of it. Whalley brought him up with a whistle right outside the battle and managed to short head Malmsey on whom Brown had the mount. The Stewards talked to Brown for knocking Wootton about but he was not the only one. At the same time we think little "Frank" may be left to take care of himself as he is not altogether a babe in a scrum!

The Cooch Behar Cup came next and of the fourteen left in over night both Refresher and Coat of Arms were struck out. In spite of his recent failures there was plenty of money for Aborigine, and Lumination was also backed, the pair being level at 2 to 1. Then a demonstration in favour of Five Crown took place and latterly a good deal of money went on him, the horse's closing price being 6 to 1. There was also a bit of support for Sanhedrin and Jemima, Hilarity and John Wesley were all backed for small money, but the bulk of it went on the two favourites. Personally we could not see Aborigine a winner as we consider the horse looked overdone and had dropped a good deal of his condition. Lumination's support was also difficult to understand, as the mare has never shown any form over this distance and, though she ran fairly well, it is obviously not her dash. Neither of the favourites were placed and Five Crown, who had been in a nice position all the way, had to reckon with John Wesley, who commenced a vigorous attack at the distance post. The pair of them fought it out all the way home, Five Crown running on with much gameness and showing no signs of the faint—heartedness with which he has so often been charged. He won a neck and Santoinette and Lumination were close up third and fourth respectively. On the Western India Stakes form this race certainly looked a goodish thing for Five Crown and so it proved.

The last race on the card was the Gunny Meah Cup, a round the course event, and Cheeky and Ruling Passion were served up very hot favourites for it, Encourage, Sea Lad and Moira also being backed, but nothing else was much enquired for. Sidonia went out at 25 to 1 and ridden a nicely timed race by Jelliss came away from her field at the home turn and won very comfortably by two and a half lengths in very good time.

The Tollygunge Horse Show will be held to-day and promises to be a most successful fixture. The entries have this year beaten all previous records, the quality is pronounced to be of a very high standard and competition in all classes is bound to be very keen. Judging begins at 10-30 A.M., and the distribution of prizes is fixed for 4-45 P.M.

The Bombay High Court re-opened after the Christmas vacation on Tuesday, when Mr. Justice Macleod disposed of the racing suit in which J. C. Smith, the trainer, claimed to recover Rs. 3,741 from Gordhandas Khatao. The decree was passed for Smith with interest and costs.

The third run of the Calcutta paperchase season took place on Friday last and brought out only a moderate gathering, the numerous festivities we are having in Calcutta just now doubtless accounting for the absence of many. The course was in the brickfield country, about 4½ miles over thirteen obstacles, the majority of them mud walls. The going was not of the best and accidents were numerous, but fortunately no serious damage was incurred. In the Horse Chase Mr. Evers led most of the way and looked like winning comfortably, when Mr. Murray on Desmond came up with a great rush from the last hurdle and just snatched the verdict by a head. There were several falls, and among those who came to grief was Mrs. Dods who was among the leaders when the accident occurred. Her mount Spero came down at one of the fences and gave his rider a heavy fall. She sustained a cut over the eye and was severely shaken, but very pluckily remounted and rode in. Mr. Steele Perkins came down at the second wall and was knocked out of time, but fortunately was not seriously hurt. Mr. Montgomery and Mr. Taylor also fell at this obstacle. The official placings were—

1. Mr. Murray on Desmond
2. Mr. Evers on Rifleman
3. Mr Winckworth on Kini
4. Mr. D. Johnstone on Wait-for-Me
5. Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6
6. Mr. Radmore on Sapphire followed by Mrs. Wanklyn on Grey Harold, Lady Jenkins on Red Mount, Mrs. Collin on a bay, Mr. G. Harvey on Fortune, Mr. Montgomery on George and Miss Binning on Eileen.

A small field turned out in the Pony Chase. Mr. Deakin on Scarboro led all the way followed by Mr. Evers on Late Night till the latter came a cropper. At the last one Mr. McLean on Minnie challenged strongly, and Scarboro only won by a short head. The order was—

1. Mr. Deakin on Scarboro.
2. Mr. McLean on Minnie.
3. Mr. Radmore on Mepriso.
4. Mr. Muir on Archibald Certainly Not.
5. Mrs. Whish on Nainette.
6. Mr. Chancellor on H. E. (re-mounted).

A London correspondent writes regarding the famous football match between the Jockeys and The Notabilities which unique and Homeric struggle took place on the 11th December:—

A man stood in Bishop's Park, Fulham, yesterday watching with bulging eyes a weird procession wending its way towards Craven Cottage, the ground of the Fulham Football Club.

The majority of the pilgrims were horsy-looking men, with quaint hats perched at subtle angles, sportive coats, cut wide at the skirt, and racing glasses slung over the shoulder. Some had a peculiar droop of the shoulders, some were bent forward as if grasping the handlebars of a bicycle, while many had close-cropped hair, flat noses, and spreading ears.

The man with the bulging eyes gazed tremulously at this never-ceasing procession, like a bird fascinated by a serpent. At length he turned to a park-keeper. "Who," he gasped, "are these?"

The park-keeper smiled condescendingly. "They are going to see the great football match between the jockeys and a team of men famous in sport," he explained. "The horsy-looking men are race-goers, those with the drooping shoulders are golf-caddies, the ones with the bent appearance are racing cyclists, and those with the cauliflower ears are pugilists."

The Craven Cottage ground might well have been mistaken for Kempton Park on Jubilee Stakes day. Probably never has such a galaxy of sporting notabilities been gathered together before. Every sport was represented, and every spectator had a chance of feasting his eyes on the hero of his own particular game.

The gate was in aid of the Putney Hospital, and women and Boy Scouts in uniform were admitted free. Some sensation was caused at the beginning by the attempts of an elderly sportsman, disguised as a Boy Scout, to obtain free admittance. He was, however, betrayed by his grey side-whiskers, and was ignominously rebuffed amid loud shouts of "Welsher!"

Herbert Jones, the royal jockey, was captain of the horsemen. Willy Griggs was the goalkeeper—a very good one, too—and other jockeys with household names were Winter, Rickaby, Crisp, Robbins, Bullock, Clark, Trigg, Wheatley, and least, but not last, little Joe Plant.

Chief among the notabilities was Bombardier Billy Wells, the champion heavy-weight boxer of England. A colossal man is Wells, with a handsome, kindly face, and the tenderness with which he treated his little opponents was touching.

Then there were three famous golfers—Harry Vardon, ofttimes open champion, George Duncan, and Joshua Taylor. Vardon kept goal, and his only complaint was that the greens were not in quite such good order as they might be. W. J. Bailey, H. T. Johnson, and G. A. Olley were three cycling champions. H. V. L. Ross, the champion pedestrian, who at half-time looked as if he had just walked to Brighton and back; Ernie Barry, the champion sculler, who frequently stroked the ball with his hands; Jabez Wolffe, the Channel swimmer, in a football outfit which fitted him tighter than any swimming costume. It is years since Wolffe played football, he said, and he would any day rather be stung by a jellyfish than tackle Joe Plant.

Two kings of sportsmen, Lord Lonsdale and Sir Claude de Crespigny, kicked off.

Joe Plant was the undisputed star turn of the afternoon. Never was there such a joyous little man. He must stand every inch of four feet, and is nearly as broad as he is long. He looked like an advertisement of somebody's baby, who, after a wasting disease, had been restored to health and corpulence by a regimen of somebody else's food. His little knickers were too long for him, and his chubby little legs too short. He tore all over the field and though he seldom touched the ball he pursued it unceasingly.

Occasionally the spectators were puzzled by seeing the ball move, apparently of its own volition. Closer inspection, however, showed that Joe Plant was behind it.

The jockeys were intensely serious, and won the match by four goals to two. Winter—carrying several pounds of mud over-weight—using whip and spur, scored the first, and Crisp, putting in desperate finishes, the other three, Bailey, the cyclist, scored one goal for the Notabilities with a shot geared to 125, and Ross, the pedestrian, walked the other through.

The Punjab Polo Tournament has been won for the second year in succession by the King's Dragoon Guards, whose team had such bad luck in the Delhi Durbar Tournament, losing the services of Captain Leslie Cheape, their best player, through illness on the eve of the final—a handicap which deprived them of victory. At Lahore last week they beat the 37th Lancers in the final for the Punjab Cup by 10 goals to 1.

The North-West Frontier Polo Tournament has been in progress at Peshawar during the holidays and resulted as follows:—

First Round.—14th Lancers beat 24th Punjabis. Guides Cavalry W. O., 25th Cavalry scratched. 1st Lancers W. O., Peshawar Gymkhana scratched. 31st Lancers "B" team beat Raore. 15th Lancers beat Royal West Kent Regiment. (35th Scinde Horse, Guides Infantry, and 31st Lancers "A" team drew byes.)

Second Round.—35th Scinde Horse succumbed to the 14th Lancers. 1st Lancers were defeated by the Guides Cavalry. 31st Lancers "B" team fell before the 15th Lancers. 31st Lancers "A" team were beaten by the Guides Infantry.

Semi-Finals.—14th Lancers beat the Guides Cavalry by 4 goals to nil. Guides Infantry beat 15th Lancers by 2 goals to 1.

Final.—Played on the 29th ultimo, a splendid game being witnessed. The score was two goals all at the close of the last chukker, and extra time with widened goals was played, the 14th Lancers scoring a goal and thus defeating the Guides Infantry by 3 to 2.

The Mounted and Athletic programme in connection with the Old Bombay Exhibition advanced another stage on the 27th ultimo. The final of the half mile flat race for schoolboys resulted as follows:—G. D. Patel (Sir J. J. P. B. Institute) 1; R. Murray (Byculla School) 2; N. J. Narsang (Sir J. J. P. B. Institute) 3. The horse-jumping competition open to Indian officers resulted in a tie between Duffedars Fateh Mahomed and Sunder Singh, and Sowar Malak Mahomed, all of the Governor's Bodyguard; the tie will be run off later on. The first two of six runs for the open pony jumping event were run. Only a small field competed, but some neat and clean jumping was seen. So far Lieutenant Barney's grey is leading with Mr. E. G. Pearson's Buccaneer second. During the afternoon in one of the many heats in the 100 yards flat race Lce.-Corpl. Howard covered the distance in the excellent time, considering the state of the ground, of 10-1/5secs. The Balaclava Melee (British Army) final resulted in a victory for the No. 1 team of "C" Squadron of the 7th Dragoon Guards, with No. 2 team from "D" Squadron of the same regiment second.

The Bombay Jackal Club entertained Lord Harris, ex-Governor of Bombay, at dinner on the 27th instant and a most enjoyable evening was spent. After the banquet the Master proposed amidst cheers the health of the guest of the evening, remarking that this was the first occasion on which the Jackal Club had ever entertained a guest who was not officially connected with the Hunt and that the reason for the Club's desire to entertain Lord Harris was to be gathered from the excellent reproduction on the menu card of Mr. Macrae's drawing of Lord Harris in full gallop with hounds in full cry ahead.

The Master stated that although, owing to the holidays, there was only one member present who had hunted in Lord Harris' time (Mr. H. S. Symons), it was well known that Lord and Lady Harris and all the staff at Government House were hard and regular followers of hounds on every possible occasion and that reference to the diary of Mr. Buckland, the then Master, showed that on three consecutive 28th days of December Lord and Lady Harris and the staff had been out with the hounds, and with reference to one of such occasions there was an entry in the Master's diary, "H. E. out on a roan mare going hard."

After the health of Lord and Lady Harris had been enthusiastically drunk with musical honours, Lord Harris replied and in the course of a most interesting speech stated that although he had started hunting in Bombay in some diffidence, he had, after his first gallop, never missed an opportunity of following hounds. Lord Harris added that he had hunted over many countries and with many packs but that there was no hunting which he more thoroughly enjoyed than over the Bombay country with the Bombay hounds.

The Pioneer reports that out of thirty-nine tigers killed during the royal shooting trip in Nepal twenty-one fell to the King-Emperor's rifle. A big bag of rhino could have been got, but this branch of the sport was purposely limited. Four bear were also shot.

Following up his victory over Hackenschmidt Frank Gotch, the American wrestler, has defeated Alex. Munro, the English champion, in two straight falls for the catch-as-catch-can wrestling championship of the world.

The first fall was gained in 12 minutes and the second in 8 minutes 5 seconds, each with the half Nelson hold.

Tarro Miyaki, the Japanese jujitsu wrestler, and Jack Madden, the instructor in jujitsu at the Portsmouth Gunnery School, were the central figures in an exciting scene at the Empire Palace Music Hall, Portsmouth, on the 9th December.

At the second hours Madden was offered £1 a minute for every minute up to twenty that he stayed against Miyaki in a match with the strangle hold barred. Madden lasted the twenty minutes, and was paid out in gold and notes.

Words were afterwards exchanged on the manner in which the contest had been conducted, and Madden pointed to scratch marks on his throat. Suddenly Miyaki flew at Madden, but was repulsed with a blow on the jaw from the hand which still grasped the money. Miyaki, however, got hold of Madden and threw him with a neck hold, Madden still holding on to his £20.

In an instant the house was in uproar, and bluejackets swarmed on to the stage. The curtain was lowered, and the struggling wrestlers were separated by the bluejackets and the theatre staff. Several members of the orchestra were hurt in the scramble for the stage by the bluejackets.

The annual meeting of county cricket secretaries was held at Lord's. Mr. F. E. Lacey, secretary of the M.C.C., presided.

Mr. Lacey said that the season of 1912 would be unprecedented in the history of cricket. Never before had two Overseas Dominions sent teams at the same time to engage against the Home Country. He wished to point out that the Tournament was quite experimental, because neither of the countries concerned had made any pledges beyond 1912. The counties would be called upon to make unusual sacrifices and perhaps their interests would be in conflict, but he did not anticipate any difficulties that could not be overcome. He thought they would agree that it was for them to make this experiment a great success, both financially, if the weather would permit, and from the larger Imperial standpoint.

Three days have been allotted to each of the Test Matches, but in the event of two countries

THE match between the M.C.C. and a fifteen representing Bendigo was drawn. The visitors batted first and made 176, while Bendigo after making 122 for 6 wickets were all out for 164. In their second innings the M.C.C. scored 188 for nine wickets.

THE second Test match between England and Australia opened on Saturday last, in the presence of a large crowd of spectators. The Commonwealth won the toss, and batted first and were all out for 184, Ransford scoring 43 and Hordern 49. Barnes took 5 wickets for 44. England then went in and made 38 for one.

ENGLAND continued their innings on New Year's Day and were all out for 265, to which Hearne contributed 265 and Rhodes 61. Hordern took 4 wickets for 66 and Cotter 4 for 73. On Tuesday, the start was delayed owing to the overnight rain. Australia went in again and at the close of play had scored 269 for 8 wickets, Armstrong scoring 90.

THE Australian Board of Control has appointed Clem Hill, Iredale and McAlister to select the cricket team which is to visit England this summer. Hill has been appointed Captain and Trumper Vice-Captain.

WE congratulate Mr. J. D. Gatheral on his win in the Amateur Golf Championship of India. He met Mr. G. C. Whigham in the final round on Sunday last and won an exciting match on the last green. Mr. Gatheral took part in the Championship last year and reached the semi-finals where he succumbed in a close match to Mr. B. A. Collins the ultimate winner.

THE trial Four Oar race organised by the Madras Boat Club was rowed off on the 23rd ultimo, an excellent race being witnessed. Thompson's boat got off best but their opponents came slowly up to them and were abreast at the mound. They then drew away and were three-quarters of a length ahead at the Adyar steps. Anns spurted and looked like getting on terms but St. Paul's crew were able to hold out and won by three-quarters of a length. Crews:—

JACK LESTER was no match for Sam McVea in any particular when he stood up before a crowd of 3,000 persons at the Olympic Stadium, Brisbane, on the 9th ultimo. An impression created was that McVea was the heavier man by not less than 20lb. The advantage of height and weight was with him, and his splendid-modelled form looked Herculean against the soft contour of the white man. The black's eyes shone with easy confidence, and every graceful movement betokened him as a master. There was only one point to be decided, and that was how long Lester could stop. The answer might have been given to this in the first round, but for the pluck of the white man. When the gong sent them together Lester feinted nervously, and then led with his left to the face; but, cleverly avoiding, McVea uppercut hard with the left. A moment later the black met his opponent with a half-hook to the jaw, and Lester fell to the floor. He, however, scrambled up on the count of eight and again faced the music. McVea smiled as Lester sought refuge at close quarters from a cruel left, which seemed like a rapier point stealing in and out through his guard in further search for a vital spot. Lester opened the second round with a right to the body which must have hurt, for his opponent fought viciously, with snappy, short-range punches, which drew blood. Lester's right eye was observed to be swollen as he came out for the third round. He sought to get close, but McVea placed a glove on his forehead, and pushing off chopped the right to the jaw. A series of exchanges closed the round. In the succeeding rounds Lester continued to take severe punishment, but his stock of endurance gradually gave out. In the eighth round the white man led short, and McVea uppercut, and then put his right over the jaw. Lester was swung over the ropes, where he hung helpless. At this stage the police intervened, and the referee (Flanagan) declared McVea the winner.

A TELEGRAM from Chicago announces that Jack Johnson has agreed to fight Sam McVea at Sydney, the contest to take place probably on Easter Monday. Johnson is to receive a purse of 30,000 dollars with 5,000 for training expenses.

A subsequent cable reports that an agitation is being organised by the nincompoop brigade to prohibit the contest. Commercial men have engaged counsel to test the legality of the fight.

THE Lucknow Dog Show will probably be held on the 8th February. Particulars obtainable from the Honorary Secretary, Mr. F. Jackson.

to the funds of that deserving institution the Union Jack Club which will shortly open a branch in Bombay. A splendid programme has been arranged and many well-known service boxers will appear in the ring on Saturday, the 6th instant.

That fine athlete Sergeant Miller, Royal Irish Rifles, has just won the Army Championship gold medal at the Burma Athletic Association Sports Meeting for the second year in succession. He carried off the ¼ mile, 120 yards hurdles, Long jump and High jump. Miller ran at the Bengal Presidency Athletic Association meeting in 1910 and won the 100 and quarter. Another prominent figure at the B.P.A.A. sports of recent years, Naik Imam Din, 93rd Burma Infantry, has swept the board in Rangoon, winning the 100, quarter and half and taking the native troops and Police Championship medal.

The Australians (holders) have disposed of the Americans in the Davis Cup Lawn Tennis contest. The singles were played on New Year's Day when Brookes (Australasia) beat Wright (America) by 6-4, 2-6, 6-3, 6-3 and Keath (Australasia) beat Larned (America) by 2-6, 6-1, 7-5, 6-2. The Doubles were decided on Tuesday, Brookes and Dunlop (Australasia) defeating Wright and McLoughlin (America) by 6-4, 5-7, 7-5, 6-4.

French Rugby Football has made vast strides during the last few years and the International matches become every year more interesting. Ireland met France at Paris on New Year's Day and a fine game was witnessed. Ireland won by 11 points to 6 and the features of the match were the fine dribbling of the Irish forwards and the stalwart resistance of the French defence. All the scoring took place in the first half, Ireland being unable to get through in spite of strong pressure after the interval.

The report on the nutritive value of Bovril read before the Annual Meeting of the British Medical Association is attracting wide attention in the medical profession.

The British Medical Journal of 16th September last devoted some six pages to a detailed account of the recent experiments, in which it was shown that in the case of human beings the body-building power of Bovril was "even more marked" than had been previously shown in the experiments with animals. A further article has just appeared in the Medical Times and the following extracts are of universal interest. The Medical Times first points out that the experiments were originally conducted "with the object of ascertaining whether a certain beef extract (Bovril) supplied to the Government had any nutritive value or not. The results were simply startling."

"It was found that in all cases the administration of the extract (Bovril) caused an immediate increase of weight."

"In subject C. (human) it was found after the use of 10 grams of Bovril the mean increase of weight was 129 grams, whilst in subject S (human) the mean increase after the use of 10 grams of the same extract was no less than 216 grams."

"In each series of experiments on the dogs it was found that the actual increase in weight varied from ten to twenty times the weight of the dry solids added in the shape of the extract to the food, whilst in the human experiments the increase was even more marked."

One important point brought out by these experiments is the fact that this increase in weight is in tissue and muscle, and not merely fat, showing that Bovril must therefore be regarded as a true nutrient and an essential part of the diet of every man, woman and child.

Any suggestion for the effective destruction of that dangerous pest the rat will be of interest to our readers. This is a new dodge, which M. de Kruyff, of the Agricultural Bureau of the Dutch Indies at Buitenzorg, Java, says has been adopted with success in Java. All visible rat-holes were first stopped with earth to ascertain which holes were inhabited, for the inhabited holes were found reopened on the following day. Half a teaspoonful of carbon bisulphide was poured in each of these holes, and after waiting a few seconds to allow the liquid to evaporate, the mixture of vapour and air was ignited. The result was a small explosion, which filled the hole with poisonous gases, and killed all the rats almost instantly. A pound of bisulphide is sufficient for more than 200 rats' holes; 131 dead rats were found in 43 holes which were opened after the operation.

The tenaciousness with which weasels stick to their prey received striking proof in Glencannich, a lonely Inverness-shire glen, last week. A cyclist came upon a weasel dragging a rabbit, which it had just killed, across the road. The bold little animal showed some surprise, but refused to go more than five or six yards away from the dead quarry, which it seemed to look upon as its peculiar property. The cyclist was, however, determined that he would bring the rabbit away with him, and with this purpose in view he carried it along some 80 yards and laid it on the top of a gate 4 feet high. His intention was to pick it up on his return in the evening, he having to go some distance up the glen. In about two hours he was back at the spot, and considerably surprised to find no rabbit there. The traveller looked about everywhere without success, and would have blamed human hands for his loss were it not that near the spot where the rabbit was first found he saw the weasel dragging it along by short stages. Dismounting, he scared the weasel off, to find that one eye had gone, and that a great patch of the face and neck had been eaten clean away. In the circumstances, and having in view the herculean efforts of the weasel probably to bring home food to its young ones, he was moved with pity, and left the rabbit with the plucky beast. Before going out of sight, a look back showed the weasel again dragging the rabbit laboriously along.

Just as we go to press we learn that the Scouts have won the Calcutta Polo Club Coronation Cup Tournament, beating the 10th Hussars in the final by 15 goals to 6. Details in our next issue.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 15th December 1911.

So Delhi is to be the Capital of India and the seat of Government is to be transferred from Calcutta! I could hardly have been more startled if a bomb had gone off at my feet than I was when I saw the contents bills of the evening papers last Tuesday. It was some time before, all sickened and amazed, I recognised that suddenly had come to an end a long and glorious chapter of our rule in the East, and that the uprooting of traditions in this novel and unprecedented fashion would have far-reaching results which cannot at the moment be more than hinted at. His Majesty's Durbar announcements have vastly pleased the natives; what say the Europeans, the descendants of those who won India and kept it, those whose ancestors bled and died for it and lie buried in the graveyards of that fair city over whose gates we must now write "Ichabod"? What indeed.

All these matters will be discussed anon in Parliament; meanwhile as a loyal subject I must conclude that there goes wisdom to the mandate of the Emperor. But to one who spent the best thirty years of his life almost within the shadow of Job Charnock's tomb there is irrepressible sadness in seeing the sceptre depart from dear, old, well beloved Calcutta. The beginnings of our Indian Empire were there when honest Job Charnock, John Company's good servant, came to clear the jungle and build a fort under the name of our Dutch King, when he bought three poor villages of the son of Aurangzeb, when the name of Kalikata went home in letters to Leadenhall Street as Calcutta. With Charnock's fort for a foothold, with the Hooghly for a back door, we held our own, winning and losing in war and trade until all India was a fief of the British Crown. We came, a handful of merchants and clerks, a little muster of muskets, by permission of a Nawab. We held there, while ancient dynasties failed and golden thrones toppled down, until Kalikata village became the seat of an Empire vaster than the dreams of Tamerlane or Akbar. Holwell and his few score defenders lost Fort William to Suraj-ud-Daulah; Clive won it back for us, and marched out from it to the crowning victory of Plassey. Warren Hastings ruled there in his pride: Wellesley was there in the years when India was again for losing or winning.

There are the monuments of our adventurous fathers, the nabobs, the Captains and the Governors: in Calcutta we have built up house and church, signs that no magic of Eastern Empire will ever change the English heart of us. It is no light thing to remove the seat of our power from the city where a dark stone marks the space in which Holwell's garrison suffered the agonies of the Black Hole, where a marble hall is being built commemorate the British queen who took up the burden of Indian empery. Your "Vagrant's" ancestors were with Clive, many of them sleep beneath a well-preserved mausoleum in Calcutta's Military cemetery. Since 1757, in broken line from father to son, we have served our sovereign and our country and helped in our humble little way in the great and glorious game of empire building and the maintenance of our rule over a conquered people—a people who can only be ruled with the strong hand—and we have contributed our little share chiefly from Calcutta. Is it any wonder I cannot hear unmoved that the seat of the Indian Government is to be moved, at the word of a King-Emperor of my race, across nine hundred miles of the map so far from the spot in which are enshrined so many cherished traditions!

Last week I think I was writing of sunshine. This week I tell of terrific gales, of violent channel crossings, of a coast strewn with wrecks, of dislocated passenger traffic and many fatalities and casualties. London did not escape, and for considerable periods we experienced a wind velocity of something like eighty miles an hour. We are now busy picking up the debris and counting the cost in life and property. The cyclonic conditions seem to have been fairly general, for news of disaster is by no means confined to the Southern counties and the coast; the Midlands felt it badly and at least one fatality occurred last Sunday. This was in Cambridgeshire where a well-known sportsman was driving a motor car when he was overtaken by the gale, his car was blown into a river, and overturning, pinned him to his seat, and he was drowned, poor fellow.

Full daily reports, illustrated and otherwise, are served up with our coffee and rolls of the magnificent pageant of the Delhi Durbar and all its attendant tamasha. Those of your readers who may have been "durbaring" may, perhaps, have noticed H. H. of Baroda peacocking around among the Chiefs and honoured guests. It is sad to note that while he is basking in the smiles of royalty at Delhi a little side-light on his recent visit to England is providing food for reflection over here. Like many of his fellow princes it would appear that he has been, shall we say with Mary Jane "rather gay," and now if you please, we find him cited as a co—respondent in a divorce case! The husband is a Mr. Statham—never heard of him—and he charges Mrs. S. with misconduct with the Gaekwar. Appears to me the unfortunate man is in for rather a thin time, and the heavy damages he claims seem afar off. For they can't serve the erring Chief with those tiresome judicial documents necessary to connect him with the proceedings; he claims to be immune from such matters being—"an independent ruler of any independent state." It may be added that attempts were made to serve the Gaekwar when he was in London; but after the manner of his kind he possesses a Secretary beyond whom it was impossible to get. How well one knows that Secretary those of us who, for our sins have ever tried to see a Rajah when that individual desired to be left undisturbed. They next tried the co—respondents' solicitors; but by that time the bird was winging its way back to Baroda!

"Bella Donna," by Robert Hichens, adapted by J. B. Fagan, was put on at St. James's on Saturday and, doubtless, all London will rush to see this melodrama to enjoy the frisson of a sensational and revolting story in superb interpretation. Poison pervades the whole of the play. First the subtle poison of perverted, yet attractive femininity; anon, when Bella Donna has married her weakling only to deceive him with the splendorous Egyptian, the snakelike concrete poison is administered in the aroma of coffee. Of all crimes despicable, poisoning is the lowest; it makes one shudder; there is nothing in palliation of it—it is ugly. And the more skilfully the process is developed, the uglier it becomes. Hence, the question arises; Will the audience while witnessing the play be able to free itself from its primordial aversion against the main character, a rake at heart always, for her past was more than shady, a very despicable criminal when from sheer lust she poisons her husband's cup and day by day witnesses in calmness and simulated affection his growing decrepitude.

A triple alliance determined the great success of the evening: Sir George Alexander, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Mr. Charles Maude, with Sir George as the leading power. He has never played a part so fully suited to his gifts and personality. His appearance—one espied in his Isaacson the image of one of our most popular railway financiers—intensely dark of hair and moustache, with luminous eyes; agility and businesslike composure personified. His manner, in consultation, persuasively suave; in the grand conflict, searching, tenacious dominating—the splendid Jew undeterred by a thousand obstacles. Withal a figure to be remembered as a marlstone in a career. To Mrs. Patrick Campbell the same tribute is fairly due. Her part was easier, more flamboyant, than Sir George's, but that should not discount the appreciation of the actress. With infinite ingenuity she trisected her part. She portrayed three women. The schemer full of entrancing charm; the woman incomprise, unhappy, restless unsatisfied, bored to the verge of tears, with insatiable longings for her Egyptian charmer. Then gradually the woman criminal—trisected once more: "avant, pendant, apres." She was at her finest in the committal and incipient repentance of her crime. Her restlessness, her anguish, her despair, above all, her final departure to doom like a Zenobia, crest-fallen, yet majestic, deeply impressed the audience. She felt the part—had it been moulded with greater introspection it would have been epoch-making. But the actress extracted from it every atom of its essence. And then when we had made up our minds as to the great merits of the leading impersonations, as to the atmospheric power of Mr. Shiel Barry as the young Egyptian servant, the lofty distinction of Mr. Charles Bryant's grandee, the convincing portrayal of a flippant American doctor by Mr. Athol Stewart, a surprise was sprung upon us. All of a sudden Mr. Charles Maude, who had to handle the perilous part of the husband poisoned by inches burst out in the full force of reconquered manhood. It was a thrilling moment, perhaps the moment of the play that touched the heartstrings, when the reconvalescent rebelled against the discovery of his would-be murderer. In dramatic value it stood above the level of the rest of the play, as an instance of emotional acting it was a credit to the young generation.

Add to these portrayals of parts the picturesque background of Egyptian perspectives and vistas of wonderland and there is hardly any need to say how deeply the imagination of the crowd was touched.

Ernest Benzon, who twenty-four years ago obtained notoriety as the "Jubilee Plunger," has just been quietly buried at Geneva, where he died. In 1887, the Golden Jubilee year, Benzon, who was then 21, set about ridding himself of a fortune of £250,000 in a year. His conduct made him the talk of Europe.

He was always ready to risk large sums on the wildest gambling chances, but it was by backing horses and betting on pigeon shooting that he squandered the greater part of his fortune, though the gambling clubs that flourished in London in the 'eighties helped to reduce his bank balance. He also wasted large sums on clothes, and never wore a collar twice.

After his fortune had gone Benzon lingered on in London for a few years. He never attempted to do any work, and was always proud of his era of extravagance. He wrote a book entitled "The Art of Spending Money." Afterwards he went abroad, with an allowance of £400 a year, and died in a home at Geneva.

As the result of long suffering, following on an accident in a railway lift, "John Strange Winter" (Mrs. Arthur Stannard) died in London last Wednesday. The authoress of "Bootle's Baby" and a hundred other stories was born Henrietta Eliza Vaughan Palmer. Her father, a clergyman, had been in the Army before taking orders; no doubt a good deal of the novelist's familiarity with military life was gathered from her father's gossip of the days when he wore a sword.

"Bootle's Baby" was published in 1886, and from that year to the present time John Strange Winter poured forth an unceasing stream of harmless stories, which, at all events, have had the merit of pleasing many worthy people.

AN EXCITING ADVENTURE.

On the 18th April 1909 I was marching from Pya to Wabobin in the T——reserve. The distance is 8 miles, up an easy gradient for four miles and then down hill for the rest of the distance.

I had been riding my pony, but when about half a mile from the top of the hill I got off to try to have a shot at a gyi (barking deer) which I saw running off from near the side of the road. I did not see the gyi again, so unloaded my rifle (a single barrel ·400 cordite) and handed it over to my Chin follower and instead of mounting my pony again I proceeded to walk up the rest of the distance to the top of the hill, with the Chin and my two dogs following behind.

I had gone about a quarter of a mile, and was looking ahead, when out of the corner of my eye I saw something running off to the left (down-hill side). The jungle here was burnt and perfectly open, and in perhaps the second or two that passed before I looked towards it, I remember distinctly, wondering to myself what the animal could be, I said to myself "It is not a gyi, nor a pig, nor a sambur, I wonder what it is" and then I turned and my surprise was great indeed to find it was a tiger bounding away at a slow canter and looking for all the world like a magnified cat. This was at a little after 7 A. M., and what he was doing out in the open at that hour of the morning I do not know. As soon as I saw what the animal was I turned round to the Chin and saying kyaggi (big tiger) snatched the rifle out of his hand. When I first saw the tiger he was about 40 yards off, but by the time I had got the rifle out of the Chin's hand and was getting a cartridge out of any pocket, the tiger was disappearing down a dip about 100 yards off. I crushed a cartridge into the rifle and telling the Chin to hold the dogs, which were running after me, and wait on the road, I rushed off to where I saw the tiger disappear. As I got near the top of the slope down which he had disappeared I slowed down and getting behind a boulder, looked over, but found I could not see down the slope, so came out far behind the boulder and getting to the edge of the slope peeped over. About 30 feet below me the slope ended in a ledge about 10 feet wide and beyond that the hill sloped down again and the only cover on the ledge was a single bush. Well at first for a second or two I saw nothing, and just as I was wondering which direction the tiger could have gone in, I saw him on the ledge below me and to my half right. He had evidently run down the slope out of sight and then stopped to listen, and thinking all was safe was just beginning to walk off.

The moment I saw him I put up my rifle, and he must have seen the motion because he got behind the bush, before I could get a bead on him, and there he stood for what seemed an age to me but what was probably only a few seconds.

All I could see of him while he was behind the bush, was his nose, tail, and about six inches of the outline of his back, but as I thought he had got suspicious and might disappear down the hill, keeping the bush between himself and me, so that I should not see him again, I decided to risk a shot. He was only about 30 feet from and below me at the time, so guessing where his shoulder was, I fired, and then the row started. He fell clear of the bush to where I could see him plainly, and lay on the ground and squirmed and roared, and I like a silly ass, instead of reloading at once and putting another shot into him, turned round and called out to my Chin to come along as I had downed him. It never struck me that the tiger was not past recovery as I had got so used to "downing" animals with one shot, with my cordite rifle, that I had got careless. However as the Chin was nearing me, the tiger managed to struggle to his feet, but luckily being at the edge of the slope below the ledge, he slipped and rolling down the hill letting out the most blood curdling roars. I did not know when he might not be up the hill again so telling the Chin to bolt, we raced back to the road!

As I had only my rifle with me, I sent a Burman forester back to the ranger, who was coming along behind, to bring his gun. The groans of the tiger continued for some time and then stopped, and as the forester had not returned with the ranger's gun I suggested to the Chin that the tiger must be dead and that we should go and prospect; he agreed to this, but proposed, that we should follow a ridge down, instead of going straight across to where I had last seen the tiger, and this we did, but had not gone many yards when the tiger, who must have heard us, began to growl again, so we returned to the road to wait till the ranger's gun arrived, which it did about half an hour later and the ranger and forester with it. The Chin then took the ranger's gun and he and I followed at a short distance by the ranger bearing a spear and the forester a dao, went cautiously to the spot where I had last seen the tiger disappear down the hill. Having got to the spot we looked over, but could neither see nor hear anything and the Chin then suggested that I should wait where I was and he would go round and down the hill a bit to prospect. I watched him go round and work his way round, until he was almost below me, keeping a good look out (the jungle here was burnt and except for some bamboo clumps perfectly open), for a time he seemed to see nothing, but then I saw him suddenly stop, kneel down and fire, and then came a succession of grunts and roars from the tiger. I saw the Chin fumble with the bolt of his gun (it was one of the single barrel bolt action 12-bore converted sniders) and then came racing up the hill. Thinking that the tiger might be after him I got ready to shoot, but when the Chin reached us I found he was not bolting from the tiger, but that he had come up as the empty cartridge had stuck, and this we got out with a thin bamboo stick.

The Chin said he thought he had hit the tiger, and that it was still lying where it was when he fired, so he and I followed by the ranger and forester went down to the spot from where the Chin had fired, near a big wild mango tree. When we got to the spot the Chin pointed to a bamboo clump about 30 yards below us and across a very small dry nullah, and said, "He was lying there when I fired, but I can't see him and now" and then almost immediately after "There he is behind that bamboo, he is looking at us." I then spotted the tiger, his body was behind the bamboo clump and his head though clear, was behind a dead bamboo, sticking out at right angles to the clump. He was looking at us, and as I stepped to the left to get a clear shot at his head he let out a roar, leaped up and started up the hill at us. At this I jumped behind the mango tree, thinking the Chin would stand by me and that if I missed the tiger, when we got clear of the bamboos, the Chin would have a shot; but when I got behind the tree I looked round, and what I saw was, the Burman ranger and forester both fairly elderly men, going as hard as they could in a bee line up the hill, and the Chin with the ranger's gun following a contour and just disappering round the hill. There was a lot of method in the Chin's madness. What he evidently thought was that he would soon be out of sight, while the tiger if he did not get me would be almost certain to see the Burmans and follow them. And I, well I only had a single barrel rifle, and thinking I could easily overtake the Burmans who had a twenty yards' start I followed, and as it happened we all four finished up in a dead beat on to the road, with the tiger "also ran," but did not finish!!

I expect a good few shikaris who have shot tigers from safe spots on trees or from the backs of elephants will be inclined to swear at my bolting, if so let them, and if the same thing happened again, and I could bolt in safety I would especially if I again had only a single barrel rifle (with a double barrel it would be different) as I do not profess to be a good shot with a rifle and am not one of those people who will willingly court the charge of a bison or tiger and drop it dead at their feet, with a shot in its head.

However to proceed with the yarn. As we reached the road my baggage elephants had just arrived, and the question then arose what to do next, as none of us knew for certain exactly where the tiger was. I thought he had not crossed the little dry nullah, but the Burman ranger—who could not possibly have known any thing about it, as he was the first to bolt—swore he had seen the tiger come right up the hill.

I eventually decided to unload one of my elephants (a tusker) and send him down to prospect and this I did, but when the elephant got down to the mango tree from which we had bolted he got very nervous, and I called out and asked the mahout (I was standing at the spot from which I had first fired at the tiger) if he could see the tiger; he said "I can't see him, but I can hear him," which was quite true because he was groaning away below us. I then went down to the mango tree where the elephant was. I did not want to get on to the elephant, as he was frightfully nervous, very few Burma elephants being trained for shikar. By the time I got down the groans had ceased, and although we looked for about five minutes we could see nothing, so I told the mahout to drive the elephant round to behind where we had last seen the tiger and then bring it up towards us, so that if the tiger was anywhere between he would be driven towards us. As the mahout was rather nervous, the mahout of the other elephant also got on the tusker's back, and after a long delay managed to drive the elephant round and back to the spot where the Chin had last fired at the tiger. When they got there they said they could not see the tiger, but there were two big pools of blood on the ground.

The Chin and I then went down, and sure enough there were the two big pools of blood, the first where he was lying when the Chin fired, and the second where he was when he jumped up and charged us. I then followed up to see what he had done when he charged and found that he had got as far as the nullah in to which he had evidently gone head over heels and not being able to climb the steep, though low, bank on one side, or the bump having taken all the fight out of him, he had returned the way he came.

We could not make out where the tiger had got to, and the mahouts said they thought he was not very hard hit and had got away, but this I did not believe and was just wondering where the nearest water was so that we could pitch camp and come back late to search for the tiger with both elephants, when we heard a twig crack in the only unburnt patch of jungle anywhere near us. This was a small creeper covered patch about 15 yards square and about 20 yards from us. We at once suspected that it must be the tiger, so the Chin and I got across the nullah and told the mahouts to take the elephant round and beat the tiger out towards us. They had not gone far, however, when they returned, and told us that they could see the tiger in the unburnt patch, but did not know whether he was dead or not.

The Chin and I then got on to the elephant and we went to the place where the mahouts had seen him. I could only just make out the tiger, but the Chin said he could see it distinctly and that it was looking at us I could have shot at the tiger as it lay but did not know how the elephant would behave and I did not want to be on a bolting elephant in fairly thick bamboo jungle, so the Chin and I got on to trees, and although we could not then see the tiger I told the Chin to fire where he thought it was, so that if it was not dead and came out I could bowl it over. The Chin said "I can't see it," but I said "never mind, fire where you think it is," which he did, and then there was a tremendous commotion, the tiger roared and the bushes shook, and I was thus able to guess exactly where he was, so fired and over he went so that I could just see a little bit of his body, and into this I put another shot and then all was still, so I sent the elephant up to near the tiger and the men said it looked like dead. I then got down from the tree and walked up to about 8 yards of it and put in another bullet to make sure (before firing I shook my fist at the Chin and told him not to bolt this time but to fire at the tiger if we charged) but he was stone dead.

He was a young male, 7ft. 6ins. in length as he lay. All four of my shots had hit him, but the Chin had missed both his; one shot, however, had hit him in the stomach and made a rip about six inches long. I expect this was the second shot from the tree. My first shot had made six holes in the tiger, the bullet entered the left fore leg hip up broke it, came out, entered the lower part of the chest, came out, entered the right fore leg above the elbow, travelled down and round the bone at the elbow without breaking it, and came out on the other side.

The broken leg explained why he was not able to bring home his charge up hill at us. It was 11 o'clock when I finally bagged the tiger, so had had nearly four hours' intense excitment. A year and a day later, on the 19th April 1910, I had a somewhat similar adventure, but that, as Kipling says, is another story.

Fishing.

CURIOSITIES IN FRENCH FISHING TACKLE.

French manufacturers of fishing tackle offer their customers a great variety of novel and ingenious implements: some of the devices are so curious, that a short description may interest angling readers of the Indian Field.

A cross-bow specially made for harpooning fish, appears to be a most ingenious toy, from which one might get a good deal of amusement. It has a wooden bow, which, however, does not bend as in ordinary cross-bows; the impulse to the harpoon is given by thick elastic strings. The arrow is a light tube made of fibre, with a steel head. The line runs down this tube to a reel, which is fixed underneath the barrel of the cross-bow. The makers declare that this instrument shoots with considerable accuracy, and that with its assistance one can capture fish of considerable size, when they are lying on or near the surface.

A terrible looking instrument is the harpoon-gaff; a set of claws gape at the end of the shaft, and on thrusting the contrivance down on to a fish the claws seize hold of it like the talons of an osprey. A French tackle shop offers, as might be imagined, a great assortment of fishing creels, for most of the baskets sold in England are of French make. Consultation of a Saint Etienne catalogue also shows that English sellers make an enormous profit on these foreign creels.

There seems to be a considerable demand among Continental anglers for artificial insects, judging by the numberless ingenious imitations which are offered for sale. Besides caterpillars, spiders, grasshoppers, beetles, and so forth, they make artificial gooseberries and cherries. You can also buy imitation mice and crabs, and frogs which work their legs in life-like manner, as they are drawn through the water.

An extraordinary fishing instrument is the floating reel. A reel is fastened to the top of a sort of little boat, while the angler carries a larger winder full of line. The boat can be made to sail out into the middle of a river, and let out the baited hook from its reel. The apparatus is, of course, an application of the otter principle, and anyone using such a device on British waters would certainly be run in for poaching.

A peculiarly ingenious device of very questionable utility, is a combined rod and reel. The rod is in four pieces; the top and two middle joints being of split cane, while the butt is a metal tube. On the butt are two grips, with a reel, permanently attached to the rod, between them. The upper grip glides backwards and forwards like the fore-end of a Winchester repeating shot-gun. This to and fro motion winds in the reel, so that when you want to shorten line, you pump the upper grip to and fro. The paying out of line is regulated by a small lever worked by the thumb.

There is also an automatic reel made in France, which strikes the fish on touching a lever, or if preferred, when bottom fishing, the reel can be arranged to strike the fish directly there is a pull at the bait. As the catalogue says, the angler, after resting his rod over a twig, can go off and smoke his pipe quietly, or take a siesta, and the reel does the rest.

For casting long distances, a reel is made to twist through a right angle, like the well-known Malloch. The French edition is, however, made in wood instead of metal, and looks very like an ordinary Nottingham wooden reel. The handles being fixed to the drum, the latter cannot be reversed, as in the case of the Scotch reel.

A very good system of stiffening light cane bottom rods is carried out in France. A fine silk ribbon is wound spirally round the cane, and then a similar ribbon is wound with the spirals in the opposite direction, both ribbons being varnished and covered at their ends by the ferrules they cannot ever become loose. This plan adds great stiffness and strength to light rough canes, without appreciably increasing their weight.

French tackle shops sell an enormous variety of made up baits. Some of these pastes are scented with all kinds of odorous substances. One can even buy desiccated blood for bottom fishing.

"Fleur-de-Lys."

The postmistress of Plumpville was in bad odour. They whispered that she tampered with the Plumpville packages: they murmured that she perused the Plumpville postcards. They didn't trust her.

A little boy entered the Plumpville post-office bearing between his podgy fingers a large piece of rich Christmas pudding.

"My ma send this to you, with her compliments," recited the youth and would you please eat as much as you can?"

The postmistress was delighted.

"How very kind of your mother to remember me," she exclaimed. "Does she know I have a special weakness for Christmas pudding?"

"Yes, she does," replied the youngster; "so she thought she'd give you some this afternoon before she sent any off to her friends, just to take the edge off your appetite!"

ANTELOPES LIVING WITHOUT WATER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—In your last issue Mr. Lydekker asks for information which I have been asking for during the past ten years. But it is as the voice of one crying in the wilderness. The only plan would seem to be, to despatch a competent observer, whose observations could be relied upon, to discover whether the Chilka Lake Antelope are unable to obtain water, and if so, whether there are plants of the nature of the ak, which would supply them with the needful moisture.

When the question was first raised some dozen years ago, a correspondent in your contemporary told us that there were wells and irrigation channels in the district referred to. There seem, then, to be no reason why antelope should not be able to obtain water from this source.

At the same time, the late Major Rodon informed us that in times of drought, antelope had been known to jump down wells in their efforts to obtain water. He also told us that antelope and gazelle in Bikanir and Jochpur eat the flowers of the ak, presumably a "fleshy" plant, which supplies some moisture. We have set at rest for ever the question, once mooted, whether antelope and gazelle in India ever drink at all, and proved that they are in the habit of resorting regularly to water. But it still remains to be proved that they are able to live without water, like some African species, relying for this liquid on desert plants or bulbs. Perhaps the enterprising Bombay Natural History Society will undertake this investigation.

JOE LEE,

8, Lall Bazaar, CALCUTTA.

'Phone 1616. Tel. Address: IBEX, CALCUTTA.

Post Box 386, Calcutta.

14th December, says:—

* * * * Mr. Joe Lee has returned to India and opened a place of business at 8, Lall Bazaar Street, Calcutta. Many of the leading owners, both on this side of India and on the Bombay side, have opened transactions with him, which in itself is sufficient evidence of his reliability. When he was in India before, he made quite a number of notable payments, one of Rs. 20,000 to Rs. 100 which he paid to Mr. Peerbhoy Adamjee, of the Tardeo Mills, Bombay, for placing them 1 2 3 in the Viceroy's Cup, which is still remembered in Bombay, being quite a record for India.

THE "INDIAN FIELD,"

14th December, says:—

* * * * The fact that he does extensive business with many of the prominent racing owners both in Calcutta and in Western India should be sufficient guarantee of his bond-fides.

THE "INDIAN PLANTERS GAZETTE,"

16th December, says:—

* * * * Mr. Lee is a Bookmaker of good financial standing, and gentlemen dealing with him need have no fear of his not being in a position to meet all demands. The odds he is offering are the talk of the town.

THE "INDIAN DAILY NEWS,"

19th December, says:—

* * * * As for soundness and stability Mr. Lee's standing is beyond question. He lays you several points over. This is a decided advantage over the old style of Bookmakers who always laid you several points less.

LAHORE CHRISTMAS MEETING.

Second Day, Tuesday, 26th December 1911.

THERE was a large attendance at the Lahore races on Tuesday and a long programme of eight events provided excellent sport, while punters had a good day, favourites scoring in six of the events. The officers of the 1. M. S. were "At home" and the Band of the King's Regiment enlivened the proceedings. The big race of the day, the Lahore Grand National, was won by Mr A. W. Thursby on his own mare Green Feather, who squandered her field and won as she liked. Mr. Thursby also rode The Riot, the winner of the Horse Hurdle Handicap and Snipesnap, the winner of the Anarkali Handicap Division I. Captain Furnell scored two wins, on Lorraine in the 2nd Division of the Anarkali Handicap and on Sirdar Jewan Singh's Major-General in the C.-B. Plate. The Sirdar also won the Mozang Handicap with Menzer ridden by Harty, who rode a plucky race after sustaining a heavy fall in the Horse Hurdles. Ruiz rode the two other winners. Results:—

THE C.-B. PLATE.—Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second and Rs. 50 to the third. For maiden C.-B horses. Catch-weights over 10-7; ponies allowed 7lb. 5 furlongs.

NOTTINGHAM.

The hurricane having blown itself out, Monday morning opened bright at Nottingham, though it became overcast as the day wore on, with brief sunny intervals. As might have been expected, the course rode distinctly on the soft side, albeit fields were of fair dimentions, and sport interesting. Backers alighted on the winners with rare perspicacity, four first favourites winning. Results:—

Racing was lifted to a higher plane next day thanks to the Midland Handicap Steeplechase, which brought out many smart cross-country performers. From all points of view, save that of the pencillers, the race was an unqualified success, and even if there was not as large an attendance as on the opening day, the executive had very little excuse for fault-finding. The wind had nicely dried the surface of the track, and carried off the overhanging clouds. Not only in the chief event of the meeting, but in three other races did backers find the winner. Results:—

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

LONDON clubs, as a whole, have reason to be well pleased with the draw for the first round of the Association Cup. Tottenham Hotspur, it is true, go to West Bromwich and Woolwich Arsenal to Bolton, Millwall to Bury, and Leyton to Liverpool, but on the other hand, there are seven ties set for decision in the metropolitan district. All three Second League teams play at home. Chelsea, who it may be recalled reached the semi-final stage of the competition last spring, receive a visit from Sheffield United, Clapton Orient meet Everton at Homerton, and Fulham oppose Burnley at Craven Cottage. Of the Southern Leaguers Queen's Park Rangers try conclusions with Bradford City, the Cup-holders, at Park Royal, West Ham United meet Gainsborough Trinity at Upton Park, and Brentford play Crystal Palace at Brentford, while Croydon Common, members of the second division of the Southern League, are drawn against Leicester Fosse on the Selhurst enclosure. Other South-country clubs securing choice of ground are Luton, Watford, Southampton, Swindon, and Bristol Rovers, so with ordinary luck the South should be well represented in the second stage of the great annual struggle.

Beating Oldham Athletic at White Hart-lane on Saturday Tottenham Hotspur registered their eighth victory in the First League this season, and both Bradford City and Bolton Wanderers meeting with defeat, the North London club step into third place in the competition, only Newcastle United and Blackburn Rovers now possessing records superior to that of the Tottenham men. Hotspur lost three of their first eight engagements, but since the middle of October they have gained five wins, played two draws, and sustained only one defeat—the narrow one inflicted upon them by Newcastle United a fortnight ago. Yesterday, inasmuch as Oldham had lost five times in the last six weeks, no doubt was entertained as to the ability of Hotspur to add to their list of successes, but the Oldham men offered such a stubborn defence that, much to the surprise of the spectators, the interval arrived without any score. Middlemiss, however, on change of ends, gave his side the lead, and before the finish corner kicks, forced by Tottenham, were turned to such good purpose that the score was increased by goals from McTavish, R. Steel, and Minter, Hotspur being left with the most decisive victory which has rewarded their efforts in any match this season.

Very different from the experience of Tottenham Hotspur was that of Woolwich Arsenal who, journeying down to Bury, had the mortifying experience of furnishing Bury with the first victory gained by that club since the opening of the present season. Until near the end of October the Arsenal acquitted themselves so creditably that they stood higher on the list than Tottenham, but for their last seven engagements the Plumstead team can show only one win and two draws, no fewer than four of these encounters having resulted in defeat. Certainly fortune was very unkind to the Arsenal yesterday, Greenaway being so badly damaged in the opening half that he was of little use afterwards, and Shaw afterwards meeting with so severe an injury that he had to retire from the game. Still, prior to Shaw being disabled, Bury had scored twice, first from a penalty and afterwards through Loman, while just at the finish Kay registered a third goal. Previous to yesterday Bury had taken part in thirteen matches, drawing five but losing eight and winning none. Their performance of the previous Saturday, however, in running Bradford City to a goal at Bradford, had pointed to a distinct improvement in the team.

Newcastle, winning at Liverpool, though only by 1 to 0, strengthened their position at the head of the First League, but appearing at Middlesbrough, Bradford City once again displayed their inability to reproduce their best form away from home. On their own ground the Cup-holders have won seven games in succession but only once has victory attended them in an out match. Pulling through against Everton, Blackburn Rovers, thanks to a better goal average, managed to keep ahead of Tottenham Hotspur. Bolton Wanderers, after these successive victories, went down at Nottingham, and although making a creditable fight against Aston Villa at Birmingham, Preston North End sustained their first defeat since they appeared at Tottenham in October.

Not often is such heavy scoring seen as that which took place in the matches of the Second Division League clubs. At Craven Cottage Fulham won by seven goals to one, Derby County beat Leicester Fosse by five goals to nine and Burnley overcame Leeds City by five goals to one. Glossop and Clapton Orient divided six, and altogether the ten games produced no fewer than forty-one goals, home clubs getting twenty-seven of them. Apart from the high scoring, there was nothing of an outstanding character about the engagements. By their success at Leeds, Burnley retained their position at the head of affairs, but their lead is not a strong one, Hull City, with two games in hand, being a point behind, and Derby County, with a similar number of matches fulfilled as Hull City, only two points below Burnley. Chelsea have dropped to fifth place, but Fulham, thanks to their handsome victory over Gainsborough Trinity, now stand eighth on the list and have quite a good record. But for their inconsistent play at the start of the season they would occupy a much better position. Their recent performances show them to be a capital side.

The Southern League provided a curious series of results half the games ending favourably for the home sides and the remainder being drawn. Of the first six clubs only Swindon and Millwall gained victories, and, as a consequence, the champions now lead by five points, though Queen's Park Rangers will probably have the match played last week at Stoke awarded to them. Still, Swindon hold an advantage of a clear three points, besides having a goal average far superior to that of any of their opponents. They secured their twelfth success in fifteen games by a margin of 4 goals to 2, a remarkable performance, seeing that Luton, their visitors, obtained the only goal of the first half, and this was surpassed by Millwall, who scored 5—1 against Stoke, a very surprising result seeing that the teams changed ends at New Cross on level terms. Crystal Palace, who were without a regular centre-forward, owing to the sad death of Woodhouse earlier in the week, could not beat New Brompton, the bottom club in the competition, and Northampton—third on the list—helped Bristol Rovers in their eighth drawn game.

RUGBY RULES.

THE COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

DEVON vs. SOMERSET.—The stronger side all round, Devon gained an easy victory over Somerset in this match at Exeter by 2 goals and 2 tries to a penalty goal and a try. Over 6,000 people witnessed the match, which was played in fine dry weather, but on a somewhat heavy ground. The game was not very old before Devon took the lead, smart passing between Jago, Davies, and Baker, enabling the last-named to score a try, which Lillicrop converted. Following that Somerset attacked, and Hoar obtained an unimproved try for them. Up to half-time, Somerset played very well, their forwards being capital, but nothing further was scored before the interval. Early in the second half, Monk kicked over the heads of the Somerset backs and scored cleverly, and then Snell, from a line out, obtained another try. Neither of these was converted. Then after Gunningham had kicked a penalty goal for Somerset, Snell, from a line out, scored another try for Devon, and Lillicrop placed a goal. Devon, 16 points; Somerset, 6.

CUMBERLAND vs. LANCASHIRE.—The game between these counties at Cockermouth ended in a win for Lancashire by one penalty goal and three tries to two goals (one penalty) and one try. Though the weather was fine the attendance did not number more than 500. At the outset Lancashire pressed, but made mistakes in their attack. Eventually Latham gained a try, which was not converted. Lancashire continued to have the better of matters, and a further try was obtained by Bryning, Schofield's kick being unsuccessful. Afterwards Saint kicked a penalty goal, and Colley scored a try which was converted. At half-time Lancashire led by 12 points to 8. After changing ends Cumberland obtained a penalty goal kicked by Bell. Lancashire, 12 points; Cumberland, 11 points.

CORNWALL vs. GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—Unable to place their best fifteen in the field, Gloucestershire suffered a severe reverse at Redruth, Cornwall, winning by five tries to nothing. The ground was in fair condition despite recent heavy rain, while the attendance numbered about 4,000. From the Gloucestershire team Hudson, Neale, and Kingston stood out for Washbourne, Robbins, and Hamblin. In the opening half Rice and Gent scored tries for Cornwall, and though neither of them was converted, the Cornwall team did enough to show that they were never in danger of being beaten. Early in the second half a good pass by Trevarthen enabled Bennetts to score for Cornwall, while later on Rice and Bennetts added further tries. None of the place kicks were successful. As the score would indicate, Cornwall were clearly the more finished team, their football being very good indeed. Gent, Bennetts, Jackett, and Rickard were the best men on the side. Cornwall, 15 points; Gloucestershire, 0.

OXFORD vs. CAMBRIDGE.—Oxford beat Cambridge very easily in the inter-'Varsity Rugger match at Queen's Club on the 12th December by 2 goals and 3 tries to nil. Oxford won the match in the first ten minutes. Four minutes from the start Piesaar made the unpardonable mistake of letting the ball bounce when pressed, and Poulton, following up at a tremendous pace, scored. R. O. Lagden failed to convert from a difficult angle. Five minutes later the Cambridge full-back made the same fatal mistake, and Oxford scored again, Lagden converting easily.

This seemed to put Cambridge off their game entirely: there was no backbone in the side. When Steyn proved to be as fast, or even faster, than Lewis, Cambridge looked all over a beaten side.

The third try, scored by Bullock, was rather a soft one. Cambridge were all at sixes and sevens at the moment: one could not think what had happened to a really good team to play that way. The try was not converted, but 11 points to nil in a quarter of an hour seemed to have put paid on the bill.

Shortly afterwards Poulton was hurt, and badly. He was carried off, and a lot of time was wasted, which was rather bad luck on Cambridge, in a way, as they were just getting going. After Poulton had left Lagden, as deputy captain, had to go into the pavilion, presumably to ask whom to pull out of the scrum as centre three-quarter.

Poulton came out again, though palpably lame, some few minutes later. The game was fairly even till half-time, neither side scoring again. The Cambridge forwards however, were finding something of their game, though Cambridge was still painfully slow at scrum half.

In the second half Oxford played five three-quarters again. Poulton was unable to come into the picture as a scorer of tries, but his tackling saved two certain and three probable tries. He was not quite as bad as he seemed; could put in a dash when necessary. Those dashes must have been painful, though.

Cambridge started getting the ball after the first quarter of an hour in the second half; but Cambridge was slow, and passes were bad, and Owens was right on his game. Dingle scored a brilliant try for Oxford under the posts, swerving in and out like a Genee and waltzing through the Cambridge defence. It was a fine try, and Lagden easily converted, but what Cambridge were doing to stand about watching nobody knows.

Oxford scored once more, from a rush on the right. Cambridge looked dangerous once or twice at the finish, but their dash seemed to have gone.

Oxford were a great side on the day. They won all along the line, and, if Poulton had not been crocked, there is no saying what the score would have been. He was fine, even when, apparently, hardly able to hobble.

The man of the day, however, was F. H. Knott. It is a tremendous compliment, but a fact, to state that he is the legitimate successor to A. D. Stoop as England's stand-off half.

Cheeseman beat Cumberlege at scrum-half, so Will had very little chance of showing what he could do. Oxford won and won well. But change the full backs, and—it would have been a game. Cambridge were a demoralised side after the first ten minutes; even the laying-out of Poulton could not pull them together.

ROSSLYN PARK vs. OLD LEYSIANS.—In this game played at Old Deer Park, Richmond, the Leysians registered their tenth successive victory, beating Rosslyn Park by two goals, one dropped goal, and three tries to nothing. The ground was not at all bad, and play was fast and interesting throughout. The Leysians were too fast and too clever for their opponents, who, while making a brave show forward and occasionally behind the scrum, failed altogether when near goal. Leach scored first, but his try was not converted. Then B. M. Holloway dropped a neat goal while the forwards were still scrumming. Bell added an unconverted try, and then Pyman, intercepting beyond the half-way line, scored behind the posts after a sixty yards run. Pinkham failed to convert, and the Leysians crossed over with a lead of 13 points. This was quickly added to on restarting, Pyman again running in, and this time Mellor added the extra points. He did the same to a try obtained by Walker, after some capital passing, and after several attempts had only just failed. Old Leysians, 23 points; Rosslyn Park, 0.

GUY'S HOSPITAL vs. RICHMOND.—With the ground in a terribly heavy state at Honor Oak Park, the Guy's fifteen, adapting themselves much better to the conditions than their opponents, managed to defeat Richmond by three goals, one of them dropped, to a placed goal and a try. In the first half Anthony opened the score by cleverly dropping a goal over the scrum, and this success was followed up by Hartley's getting a try, from which Stokes was able to add the goal points. Thus, the Hospital crossed over with a lead of nine points to none. In the early part of the second, thanks to some brilliant footwork of the Richmond men, Wilson and A. H. Read obtained tries, and Ainsworth improving one of them, they got within a point. However, a bad mistake of Ainsworth led up to a try which Medlock gained and Stokes converting from the touch line make the Hospital victory an assured thing. Guy's Hospital, 14 points; Richmond, 8 points.

LONDON SCOTTISH vs. LONDON HOSPITAL.—This game at Richmond was a poor one, the home side gaining an overwhelming victory by two goals one dropped goal and eight tries to nothing. The London Hospital men for a time displayed much keenness in tackling, but were always outclassed, outplayed, and in the end hopelessly beaten. During the opening half they showed little skill, and the Scotsmen gained three unconverted tries, Salveson getting in twice and Robertson once. After change of ends the Scots carried everything before them, and the Hospital, for all their hard tackling had no chance. Robertson ran in with a try, which was not improved, and then Steuli placed the Scottish further ahead with a cleverly dropped goal. Afterwards the two Robertsons, Gilray, Purves, Salvesen, and Kinross ran in with tries, two of which were converted. London Scottish, 38 points; London Hospital, 0.

OLD BLUES vs. OLD MERCHANT TAYLORS.—On a heavy ground at Twickenham the Old Merchant Taylors defeated the Old Blues by 2 goals 1 try to 0. At the start the Blues played keen football, but, as the game settled down, it was evident that their opponents were superior at every point. From a scrum in the Blues' half, Ryan opened up the game, and, after some excellent passing, O'Callaghan secured the ball and, running strongly, crossed the Blues' line. Ryan kicked a goal from an easy position. The Taylors pressed hard subsequently and, after a series of scrums, occasionally behind the scrum, failed altogether when near and Ryan placed a goal. In the second half the Blues fell off in their play, and the Old Merchant Taylors had no difficulty in maintaining the advantage they had secured. Cockell ran finely, and would have scored but for putting his foot into touch, and just after the same player secured the ball on the left and ran in, but this time Ryan failed to improve. Although they struggled hard to the finish, the Blues were unable to penetrate the very sound defence of the Taylors, O. M. T., 13 points; Old Blues, 0.

HARLEQUINS vs. BLACKHEATH.—In a fine struggle at Twickenham the Blackheath forwards played in such great style that the Harlequins were beaten in a very hard and interesting game by two tries to one. Blackheath were without Coverdale, who is injured, and his place at stand-off half was taken by Pillman, who played a creditable but not a great game. The Blackheath forwards played with their usual robustness and dash, and completely demoralised the Harlequins' backs. Very rarely did the home backs get any openings, and when they did they were met by such resolute tackling that all their attacks but one failed. The Harlequins had slightly the better of the first half, and when they were pressing on the right Stoop, with a wide pass to his left wing, enabled Lambert to score in the corner. The kick failed, and at the interval the Harlequins led by 3 points to 0. Directly play was resumed Neale kicked forward, and, following up smartly, regained possession, to score an unconverted try in the corner. For the remainder of the game fortune fluctuated, and each side set up attacks which were driven back. Towards the close Pillman initiated a series of cross kicks, most of which were quite ineffective, but just before no side Neale utilised one and scored a clever try without. Blackheath, 6 points; Harlequins, 3 points.

ATHLETICS.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY A.C. vs. A.A.A.—Rain, which fell incessantly throughout the morning at Cambridge left the track at Fenner's on the heavy side for the contest between representatives of the Cambridge University A.C. and the Amateur Athletic Association. However, the weather was fine and there was practically no wind when proceedings began before a moderate attendance.

The Cambridge ranks were depleted by five first-rank performers in MacMillan, Black, Dubois, Phillips, and Clarke while the A.A.A got a strong team together, with the result that they won the match by 4 events to 3. Details:—

Throwing the Hammer.—H. Leeke (A.A.A.), 130ft. 1; A. E. Flaxman (A.A.A.), 118ft. 5in., 2; F. C. Stephen (C.U.A.C.), 115ft. 2½in., 3; J. A. O. Muirhead (C.U.A.C.), 99ft. 2in., 4.

100 Yards Race.—V. H. D'Arcy (A.A.A.), 1; W. A. Stewart (A.A.A.) 2; H. M. Mackintosh (C.U.A.C.) 3; J. L. Faune (C.U.A.C.) 0. Stewart led until within twenty-five yards of the tape when D'Arcy came up and won by half a foot. Two feet separated second and third. Time—10⅘secs.

Half mile Race.—P. J. Baker (C.U.A.C.) 1; P. E. Mann (A.A.A.), 2; G. H. Atkinson (C.U.A.C.), 3. Atkinson set the pace for a lap, then Baker took the lead and won by eight yards. Time—1min. 59⅖sec. This was a fine performance for Baker, considering that he was so recently indisposed.

Long Jump.—S. S. Abrahams (A.A.A.), 21ft. 11½in., 1; C. F. Smith (Cambridge University); 20ft. 5½in., 2; E. H. Hutcheon (A.A.A.), 17ft. 6½in., 3.

440 Yards Race.—J. L. Faune (Cambridge), 1; D. H. Jacobs (A.A.A.), 2; E. W. Haley (A.A.A.), 3; E. M. Davis (Cambridge), 4. Faune went ahead 150 yards from home. Jacobs stopped twenty-five yards from the tape and walked past the post. Time—51secs.

Putting the Weight.—M. J. Susskind (Cambridge); 38ft. 0½in., 1; F. C. Stephen (Cambridge); 37ft. 7in., 2; J. H. Barrett (A.A.A.), 36ft. 11½in., 3; H. Leeke (A.A.A.), 35ft. 3½in. 4.

120 Yards Hurdle Race.—K. Powell (A. A. A.), 1; A. C. Straker (Cambridge), 2; G. R. Milner (Cambridge), 3; E. H. Hutcheon (A. A. A.), 4. Powell led throughout and won by seven yards from Straker, the Freshman, who was half a yard in front of Milner, the blue. Straker knocked down his sixth hurdle. Time—16½secs.

High Jump.—C. W. Taylor (A.A.A.), 5ft. 7½in., 1; F. O. Kitching (A.A.A.), 5ft. 6½in., 2; A. G. Straker (Cambridge), 5ft. 4½in., 3; F. Sproule (Cambridge), 5ft. 4½in., 4.

One Mile.—A. Hare (A.A.A.), 1.; L. F. Taylor (Cambridge), 2; H. B. Wane (Cambridge), 3. Hare took the lead 350 yards from home Taylor raced him hard up the straight, but Hare won by four yards. Time—4mins. 36⅘secs.

Three Miles Race.—A. L. Treble (A.A.A.), 1; W. Scott (A.A.A.), 2; E. C. Barry (A.A.A.), 3; R. E. Atkinson (Cambridge), 4. The A.A.A. always had the race in hand, and Treble eventually won by twenty-five yards; same distance between second and third. Time—14mins. 56⅕secs.

CROSS-COUNTRY.

OXFORD vs. CAMBRIDGE.—Oxford realised anticipations by winning the thirty-second annual 'Inter-Varsity cross-country race, held on the 9th instant over the usual seven-and-a-half miles course mapped out by the Thames Hare and Hounds at Hampton. Indeed, Cambridge hardly made so good a match of it as had been expected. The Dark Blues supplied the first four men home, and won with a total of 16 points, as against the 39 of Cambridge, who had the last four men. It was the fourth consecutive victory of the Oxonians, but Cambridge still have the greater number of successes to their credit, viz., 18 to 14. The going was rather heavy, but the water jumps were easier than usual, being less swollen than might have been expected. C. H. A. Porter ran with good judgment. He was always near the front, although Gowan Taylor made most of the running.

The order of finishing was:

C. H. A. Porter, Oxford, 43mins. 36⅖secs.	...	1
E. Gowan Taylor, Oxford, 43mins. 57⅖secs.	...	2
G. M. Sproule, Oxford, 43mins. 58secs.	...	3
W. C. Moore, Oxford, 44mins. 52⅖secs.	...	4
H. W. C. Lloyd, Cambridge, 44mins. 56⅕secs.	...	5
A. G. R. Garrod, Oxford, 45mins. 6secs.	...	6
C. J. Sharp, Cambridge, 45mins. 36secs.	...	7
R. S. Clarke, Cambridge, 46mins. 8⅕secs.	...	8
E. P. Turner, Cambridge, 46mins. 18secs.	...	9
A. G. Ashton, Cambridge, 46mins. 25secs.	...	10

Shortly after the start, Turner assumed the lead. He was closely followed by Moore, who soon afterwards went to the head of affairs. At the end of about three and a half miles Taylor was leading by a yard and a half from Porter. Taylor's time at this point being 18mins. 45secs. Sproule was third in 18mins. 50secs and Moore fourth in 19mins. 20secs. At five miles the order was unchanged, and the runners were still about the same distances apart. In the run in of two miles across Wimbledon Common Porter drew away and won comfortably.

ROWING.

'VARSITY BOAT RACE PROSPECTS.—Judged by the Trial Eights form, Oxford's chance of a fourth successive Boat Race triumph is distinctly rosy. As mentioned last week, Mr. R. W. Fletcher's crew won rather easily in 21·55; poor time, perhaps, compared to last year's 9·13 but the conditions were altogether different. Up to the Betel and Wedge point Mr. Quiller-Couch's eight held their own fairly well and showed capital form. Then, however, lack of stamina told the inevitable tale and the winners had the race safe. President Bourne had arranged the weights beautifully this year. Both crews scaled precisely the same, but the "work" in the two boats was markedly different. The winning crew used 12 feet 5 inches oars, blades 5½ inches wide, with a leverage of 32 inches; whereas the losing crew used 12 feet 3 inches oars with 6 inches blades and a lesser leverage of 31 inch. As in the case of the New College VIII. last summer, the victors owed much of their superiority to their greater length acquired by using these longer oars. They were able to get on a better swing and infinitely better pace than their rivals. Individually, splendid form was shown by both strokes, plus Messrs. W. J. Fison, A. F. R. Wiggins, E. D. Horsfall, and F. E. Buller (winning crew); and Messrs. A. H. M. Wedderburn, E. R. Burgess, C. L. Baillieu, and N. M. Bruce (losing crew). Six of these are Old Etonians. Mr. Baillieu hails from Australia. Mr. Bruce (the 'Varsity Sculls winner) is an Old Wykehamist. Outside the available Blues, therefore, there is ample material to hand for preliminary Boat Race practice early in the New Year. Frankly, the Dark Blues' prospects were rarely brighter before Christmas.

Cambridge prospects are hardly so bright, by comparison. Bad luck has already befallen them, as such oarsmen of repute as Messrs. C. E. V. Buxton, G. E. Tower, A. Drewe (all Old Etonians) were obliged to stand down the race, not forgetting Mr. L. A. Pattinson (the "Coluhouns" winner). Whether the three last-named will resume rowing after Christmas is a moot point, but Mr. Buxton certainly will not. Acting under medical advice, the distinguished Old Etonian will cease rowing at all for at least a year. Cambridge are thus robbed of one of their finest oarsmen. Nor did the "Trials" rowing quite come up to expectations this year. One hardly expected them to give us of their best, inasmuch as eleventh-hour changing had not conduced to perfect rhythm, etc. Mr. S. E. Swann (the Blue) was only installed at stroke thwart in the winning eight a few days before the actual tussle! This enhanced the value of his easy victory in the fair time of 13·13. Beside himself, individual oarsmen who distinguished themselves in the winning boat were Messrs. H. B. Dobb and H. M. Heyland (Pembroke), W. Wankowicz (Downing), H. W. Arden (Queen's), and H. S. Shove (First Trinity). Mr. Dobb is an Old Tonbridgian, Mr. Heyland an Old Wellingtonian. Mr. Arden, an Old Radleian, and Mr. Shove an Old Uppinghamian. Mr. Wankowicz is a Russian. On his "Trials" form, Mr. J. S. N. Graham (Eton and Third Trinity), the winning coxswain, should get his colours at the very first time of asking. Outside Messrs. R. Le Blanc Smith and C. F. Burnand (the Blues), the best form in the losing crew was shown by Messrs. D. C. Collins (a new Zealander) and L. S. Lloyd (an Old Etonian). Mr. Milligan (an Old Salopian) also enhanced his reputation at No. 2. A very sound representative eight is assured in due course, but whether of the same calibre as that at Oxford is extremely doubtful pro tem. So far, it looks as though the Oxford president will create yet another boat race record by stroking a fourth successive winning crew.

PROPOSALS FOR ALTERING THE HENLEY COURSE.—The stewards of the Henley Regatta, who hold their annual meeting next Saturday, have issued a circular to the clubs competing at the regatta submitting proposals for altering the Henley course, and asking for opinions on the same.

For some time past rowing men have held the opinion that the boat drawn on the Bucks station holds a distinct advantage, particularly when there is a wind off that shore, which enables the crew to gain some shelter from the trees and bushes along the Bucks bank. It is also held that coxswainless crews find it easier to steer on the Bucks side with the bend in their favour. Some time ago Mr. H. G. Gold (O. U. B. C.) sketched a scheme for altering the course by making the start and finish about 250 yards lower down the river, introducing an angle on each side but this has not met with much favour.

The committee of management now submit two proposals for consideration. In the first, the start is placed about half-way along the island on the Berkshire side, giving an angle on each side, and bringing the line of piles on the Bucks side farther away from the Bushes for the first half-mile. The winning-post would be placed about eighty yards nearer the bridge, and the course would be about 100 yards shorter. In the second proposal the start and finish would be as at present, except that the line of piles along the island would be moved nearer the island, giving an angle in favour of the Berks boat just above the island to equalise the angle on the Bucks side near Remenham. The proposals have aroused considerable interest amongst rowing men, and the decision of the committee will no doubt be largely influenced by the opinions expressed by the oarsmen belonging to the clubs concerned.

Polo.

CALCUTTA POLO CLUB CORONATION TOURNAMENT.

13TH HUSSARS vs. CALCUTTA POLO CLUB.—Played on Thursday last, ending in a win for the Hussars. The Calcutta Polo Club were badly handicapped in the matter of ponies and were also not playing up to their best form, whereas the 13th, who are a greatly improved team—as their display in the recent Delhi Durbar Tournament showed—put up a very fine game and quite outplayed their opponents. The score at half time was 2 to 1 in favour of the Hussars, but thereafter they were always on top and ran out winners by 7 goals to 2, four points being registered in the last two chukkers.

First Chukker.—Both goals were visited and the 13th penalised for hitting behind. Nothing came of the free hit and then the Hussars got on and Vanneck opened the scoring.

Second Chukker.—Up and down play and penalties against both teams, but these were not improved upon. An abortive run by each team closing the period.

Third Chukker.—Midfield play till Vanneck got away but missed an easy shot at goal. Calcutta were penalised for hitting behind but nothing came of it. Then a splendid combined run by the Hussars ended in Vanneck scoring their second goal.

Fourth Chukker.—Fast up and down play. Calcutta rushed down but Atkinson shot wide. A penalty against the 13th was also unproductive but soon after Calcutta got away again and Scott hit a goal.

Fifth Chukker.—Lawson Smith got possession and scored; the 13th had the best of the remainder of the chukker, but there was no farther score.

Sixth Chukker.—Fast play all over the field. A combined run by Calcutta was unfruitful but Atkinson got the ball from the hit out and rushing down hit a goal. The 13th then put in a good run, Major Richardson's shot hitting the post.

Seventh Chukker.—The 13th pressed and Vanneck scored. They kept up the attack and Vanneck put on another goal. Calcutta were kept on the defensive, but there was no more scoring in this period.

Eighth Chukker.—The Hussars continued to hold the upper hand and pressing throughout registered two more points. Final score: 13th Hussars, 7 goals; Calcutta, 2 goals. Teams:—

13TH HUSSARS.		CALCUTTA POLO CLUB.
Mr. W. C. A. Vanneck	1	Mr. H. V. Scott...	1
Mr. T. E. Lawson Smith	2	Sir Cecil Graham	2

Mr. J. H Hind (back).		Capt. A. A. Tod (back).

Umpires:—Major Mort and Captain Keighley.

SCOUTS vs. 8TH HUSSARS.—This was the last tie in the first round of the tournament and proved a comfortable win for the Scouts. They quite outplayed the 8th and led by 8 to 2 at half time. They then slackened their efforts and in the second half they put on three more goals and the Hussars registered four. Captain Barrett's team are better mounted and a better combination than any of the teams competing in the tournament and as will be seen won their succeeding games with comfort.

First Chukker.—Up and down play till the Scouts got going, and after just missing scoring on several occasions the ball was at length put through by Kishengarh.

Second Chukker.—Kishengarh ran down and scored. Wormald and Broadbent were prominent for the 8th and the latter notched a goal. Thereupon the Scouts got possession and Barrett hit a goal.

Third Chukker.—The Scouts pressed throughout this period and put on four goals, Kishengarh and Ratan Singh being responsible for the score.

Fourth Chukker.—Ratan Singh hit a goal and then the 8th got going and added another point to their score.

Fifth Chukker.—The Scouts slackened down and the Hussars put on two goals.

Sixth Chukker.—The Scouts pressed and registered two more goals.

Seventh Chukker.—The 8th played up and gave a fine display, scoring two more goals in tip-top style. The Scouts notched a goal.

Eighth Chukker.—Up and down play no score. Final Score: Scouts 11 goals 8th Hussars 6 goals. Teams:—

"THE LAXATIVE OF THE FUTURE."

The Head Court Physician to the KING and QUEEN of ITALY states:—

"I have tried PURGEN repeatedly on patients suffering from diseases of the chest, when I wanted to use a mild purgative, and I have always been satisfied by its mild and non-irritating action. In my opinion this remedy is THE LAXATIVE of the FUTURE."

Dr. ANTONIO MACCIORANI.

PURGEN acts surely, gently and uniformly, without causing any irritation or pain, and its effect does not wear off by prolonged use. PURGEN is not absorbed by the system. It has no action on the liver or kidneys, and it does not produce flatulence, nausea, depression or other disagreeable symptoms usually associated with aperient medicines. PURGEN is an especially valuable medicine for the delicate, for invalids and for children. Made up in small tablets of agreeable flavour and sold in boxes only.

Sold in Three Strengths:—

"INFANT" (for young children); "ADULT" (for 'grown-ups'); "STRONG" (for invalids and chronic constipation).

WINCHESTER

.405 CALIBER REPEATING RIFLE

THE DREADNOUGHT OF THE JUNGLE.

The .405 Winchester fears nothing alive. It is powerful enough to stop any animal, no matter how big or how dangerous. Its 300-grain, soft-point bullet has a ton and a half of energy, and when it strikes, it mushrooms and delivers the whole of this tremendous energy with terrible shocking effect. There is an immediate collapse—the animal drops as though struck by a thunderbolt. The rifle holds five of these cartridges, which can be fired in rapid succession. Its action is reliable and strong, and its shooting straight and true. As a big-game gun of exceptional power it has no peer.

Semi Finals.

The semi-finals were played on Monday, Their Majesties the King and Queen being present at the game between the Scouts and the 13th Hussars, as also His Excellency the Viceroy, Lady Hardinge and a large party from Government House.

18th Hussars vs. 2nd Lancers.—This game was played in the forenoon and was very fairly level most of the way.

First Chukker.—Up and down play till Sir Basil Brooke got possession and opened the scoring. A penalty against the 10th for hitting behind enabled the second to equalise and shortly after Robertson got the ball and put them ahead. Towards the close the 10th got on and equalised.

Second Chukker.—After one unsuccessful run the 10th got through, Cadogan putting them ahead. The same player scored again shortly after and then a spell of level play followed, Gould eventually scoring for the 2nd.

Third Chukker.—The 10th bombarded the Lancers, citadel and after several unsuccessful shots, the ball was at length put through, Cadogan being credited with the point. Another run proved unfruitful and then the 2nd rushed down and Robertson scored.

Fourth Chukker.—The 10th had the best of the play throughout this period and Fielden and Cadogan were responsible for two more goals.

Fifth Chukker.—The Lancers did all the pressing this time, but their strenuous efforts to score were unsuccessful and the chukker was unproductive.

Sixth Chukker.—With the exception of two unfruitful runs by the 10th, their opponents had the best of this chukker, but missed several opportunities of scoring and another blank period was recorded.

Seventh Chukker.—Gould got away and scored for the 2nd. Then the 10th pressed and Fielden put on a goal, Sir Basil Brooke adding another shortly after.

Eighth Chukker.—Robertson run down, but his shot went wide. Then the 10th pressed and Cadogan scored. Up and down play, the 2nd being penalised for hitting behind. Nothing came of the free hit and the game ended soon after with the score, 10th Hussars, 10 goals; 2nd Lancers, 5 goals. Teams:—

10th Hussars.		2nd Lancers.
Major the Hon. W. J. Cadogan	1	Mr. D. S. Davison	1
Mr. E. A. Fielden	2	Capt. G. Gould	2
Sir B. J. Brooke	3	Capt. L. Robertson	3
Mr. H. Gordon Canning (back).		Major G. Knowles (back).

Scouts vs. 13th Hussars.—The Scouts were expected to have an easy win in this game, but though they won by 8 to 5, their opponents put up a good fight and played pluckily throughout.

First Chukker.—The Scouts pressed throughout and Kishengarh scored twice. Just before the close the 13th were penalised for crossing.

Second Chukker.—The free hit was cleared. The 13th were again penalised for a foul but once more nothing came of it. The 13th put in some good runs but without success and the period ended without score.

Third Chukker.—The Hussars attacked but could not get through. Up and down play followed and then the Scouts pressed once more and eventually scored another point.

Fourth Chukker.—The 13th got away and Hind scored. Soon after Hind took the ball down and Lawson Smith put it through. Level play followed but towards the close the Scouts got possession and Kishengarh scored.

Fifth Chukker.—The 13th put in a couple of unsuccessful runs and then the Scouts got away and Rutlam hit a goal. The Scouts continued to press but nothing occurred.

Sixth Chukker.—The Scouts attacked but were repeatedly repulsed. A penalty against the 13th for hitting behind was not turned to account and then the Hussars got the ball and scored two goals in succession, Vanneck and Richardson being responsible.

Seventh Chukker.—Two penalties against the 13th for hitting behind. Nothing came of them and then Kishengarh got away and scored: Richardson retaliated and the 13th were only a goal behind at the close of the period.

Eighth Chukker.—The Scouts pressed throughout and though the 13th offered a stout defence, they were twice beaten, Rutlam and Kishengarh putting through. The 13th lost more than one chance and had to retire beaten by 8 goals to 5. Teams:—

The Scouts.		13th Hussars.
K. Ratan Singh	1	Mr. Vanneck ...	1
H. H. the Maharaja of Kishengarh ...	2	Mr. Lawson Smith	2
Capt. Barrett	3	Major Richardson	3

Umpires:—General B. F. Mason and Captain Hartley.

The Punjab Polo Tournament.

The tournament opened at Lahore on Xmas day when two games were played. In the first, the 60th Rifles put up a plucky fight against the King's Dragoon Guards who won comfortably by 9 goals to 2. The other game was between the 37th and the 17th Lancers. The 17th led at the interval by 2 to nil but in the second half, the 37th scored 3 goals without response and won.

King's Dragoon Guards vs. 60th Rifles.

First Chukker.—Up and down play till the K.D.G.'s got away and Weinholt scored. The 60th then attacked, but the K.D.G.'s drove them back and Weinholt scored again. The 60th made a good run but failed to put through and Wickham getting away put on the Dragoons' third goal.

Second Chukker.—Hawkins got on and scored and the K.D.G.'s, keeping up a strong pressure, hit two more goals, Hawkins and Rasbotham being responsible.

Third Chukker.—The 60th ran down, but Pearse's shot went wide. The Dragoons next had an unsuccessful run and then the 60th got away again and Pearse hit their first goal.

Fourth Chukker.—Thursby nearly scored for the 60th. Both goals were then visited in turn, but it was not till the close of the chukker that Wickham scored for the Dragoons.

Fifth Chukker.—The 60th were prominent till Rasbotham got possession and took the ball down for Hawkins to score. Even play, Weinholt adding to the Dragoons' score with a magnificent shot just before the close of the period.

Sixth Chukker.—The 60th lost a couple of good opportunities. Up and down play followed and then Pearse put in a fine run from which Thursby scored. Just before the bugle sounded, Rasbotham had a good run but shot wide. Final score: King's Dragoons, 9 goals; 60th Rifles, 2 goals. Teams:—

K. D. G.'s.		60th Rifles.
Mr. L. Hawkins	1	Mr. J. F. C. Pearse	1
Mr. E. E. Wienholt	2	Mr. A. D. Thursby	2
Capt. Rasbotham	3	Capt. V. Yeats Brown	3
Major Wickham	(back)	Mr. F. Cavendish-Bentinck	(back)

37th Lancers vs. 17th Lancers.

First Chukker.—Even play all over the ground, neither side scoring—the 17th having ill luck on one occasion when a pony stopped a good shot at goal.

Second Chukker.—The 37th were on the offensive but could not get through, a good run by the 17th being also unfruitful.

Third Chukker.—The 17th had the best of this period and Turner scored two goals.

Fourth Chukker.—The 37th then asserted themselves and did most of the attacking in this period. A penalty hit against the 17th was unproductive and several other efforts to score were unsuccessful.

Fifth Chukker.—The 37th kept up the pressure and after a fruitless effort by Lucas, Bruce scored a goal. The 37th were then penalised for offside, but nothing came of it and they returned to the attack.

Sixth Chukker.—Maintaining the pressure the 37th equalised through Bruce, and shortly after Lucas put Talbot in possession and the latter scored the winning goal. Final score: 37th Lancers, 3 goals; 17th Lancers, 2 goals. Teams:—

37th Lancers.		17th Lancers.
Capt. S. M. Bruce	1	Mr. H. F. Eckstein	1
Capt. H. M. Lucas	2	Mr. E. C. Dubs	2
Major J. Talbot	3	Mr. H. B. Turner	3
Major C. B. Loring	(back)	Mr. H. F. Parbury	(back)

Semi Finals.

King's Dragoon Guards vs. 7th Hariana Lancers.—This match was played on the 27th ultimo and needs little description. The K.D.G.'s were too strong for their opponents and won very easily. They outplayed them in the first three chukkers and then eased up, the game being more level after half time. The K.D.G.'s eventually won by 13 goals to 2.

19th Lancers vs. 17th Lancers.—This was the second of the semi finals and was won by the 37th by 5 goals to nil, the score not being a true index of the game, as play was level and the 19th lost several chances of scoring.

First Chukker.—The 37th attacked and hit a goal. Then the 19th put in a good run their final effort going wide. The 37th pressed again and put on another goal before the period closed.

Second Chukker.—The 19th did all the attacking in this period but missed several attempts of scoring.

Third Chukker.—The 19th kept up the pressure but their efforts remained unrewarded. The 37th then ran down but were stopped. Offside against the 37th gave the 19th a free hit from which they got away, the attempt to score going out wide.

Fourth Chukker.—Up and down play till Loring got away and scored for the 37th. Bruce was nearly through shortly after and then the 19th pressed and a couple of good chances were not turned to account.

Fifth Chukker.—Fast play in which the 19th were mostly on the offensive but all their efforts were fruitless.

Sixth Chukker.—Maintaining the pressure the 19th again lost openings and then the 37th came through and scored in a melee. Level play followed till just before the close of the chukker Bruce added another goal. Final Score. 37th Lancers, 6 goals; 19th Lancers, nil. Teams:—

Final.

King's Dragoon Guards vs. 37th Lancers.—The tournament came to a conclusion on the 29th ultimo when the K.D.G.'s met the 37th in the final and beat them in a good game by 10 goals to one, and thus retain possession of the Cup they won last year. The 37th played up well against the crack team and had hard luck in not scoring oftener. They made the Dragoons gallop to win and a most interesting game was witnessed. The 37th were "At home" on the ground and after the Hon. Sir Arthur Reid had made a short congratulatory speech Lady Dane presented the Cup to the winners Details:—

First Chukker.—Up and down play, Weinholt drawing first blood for the K.D.G.'s. They got away again from the throw in and Weinholt put on a second goal. Then the 37th attacked and Lucas crowned a good run with a successful shot. Up and down play for the rest of the chukker.

Second Chukker.—Both goals were visited in turn and shots by each team went out wide. Play was fast and even and there was no scoring.

Third Chukker.—The Dragoons attacked and Wickham scored. They kept up the pressure and Rasbotham added the fourth point. A run by the 37th followed, Bruce's shot being frustrated by a pony.

Fourth Chukker.—Up and down play. The 37th missed but Weinholt scored for the Dragoons. Rasbotham and Bruce made runs for their respective sides but nothing accrued till just before the close Rasbotham hit a goal.

Fifth Chukker.—The K.D.G.'s attacked during the major part of this period and scored two goals, Wickham and Hawkins being responsible. Loring and Lucas were prominent for the 37th on more than one than one occasion and had bad luck in not scoring.

Sixth Chukker.—A run by Lucas was stopped and Hawkins coming away hit a goal. The 37th attacked and once more a certain goal was diverted by an opponents pony. Lucas was nearly through soon after, a long shot just going wide. Shortly before time Rasbotham got away and notched another goal. The final score reading—K.D.G.'s, 10 goals; 37th, one. Teams:—

The Question of Polo Pony Measurement.

The question of the measurement of ponies for polo is fa reaching a point when it can no longer be shelved or treated with indifference, but must receive the careful consideration of the I. P. A.

Measurement in many stations has become an absolute farce. Ponies which never have been and never could have been 14-1, unless their legs were stretched out at a ridiculous angle, are passed without a murmer; undue clemency in the matter of "ageing" is often observed, and, in consequence, 15 hand "ponies" are by no means uncommon, and for tournaments are eagerly sought.

There would, perhaps, be little at which to grumble in this fact, if the rules and chances were the same in all stations. A strong opinion exists that Polo measurement should be abolished in toto, and sixteen hand horses allowed on the ground if desired. "Matters would right themselves automatically" say this party. "Big horses will lose more in handiness than they gain in speed, and so in the end we shall get an average 14-3 to 15 hand animal, which is much what we have at present, though without the abuses now attendant upon measurement.

Since, however, the I. P. A draws practically the whole of its funds from measuring fees, it is unlikely that a proposal to this effect would gain influential support.

Without particularising any station in which the measurer is conspicuously careless, or shall we say—kindhearted, though several such will at once occur to polo-players, it may be pointed out that the chief unfairness of the present system is, that all measurers have by no means the same idea of their functions. One would contrive to measure Lemberg, another would be doubtful about a Shetland. Thus, it behoves an owner carefully to choose his official before submitting a pony for adjudication. A case in point occurred a short time ago. Two officers each brought one pony out from England. Both these ponies were exactly the same height—14-2 without shoes. One officer had his pony measured at, say, A. without the least trouble, but the other, on presenting his purchase to the official at, say, B. was refused a certificate.

Under I.P.A. rules, a pony once refused can never be passed, and therefore this second animal was rendered practically valueless for polo, while the first, owing to the clemency of the measurer, may easily become one of the most valuable ponies in India.

There are, of course, a great many cases in which the measurer is quite as strict and careful as a racing official, and here let it be said that no intentional unfairness of any kind whatsoever is imputed; but on the whole, I. P. A. measurement of the present day may fairly be said to have degenerated into a farce, and a remedy must be sought.

There are, apparently, four alternatives.

First.—Abolition. But for reason's indicated above, this is unlikely to be accepted.

Second.—The appointment of paid official measurers, either to tour the country or to deal with certain districts, and to carry out their duties under the same system and with the same strictness as the officials of the two racing clubs.

N. S. U. MOTOR-CYCLES AND CARS.

It is because N. S. U. Motor-cycles and cars have acquired a splendid reputation for reliability and endurance in other countries that we are confident of their ability to give the greatest satisfaction to users in India. The design of both motor-cycles and cars is of the most advanced character, and the material and workmanship are of the highest order. Both productions abound in good points. For instance, notice the front and rear springing of the motor-cycle. Here is a system which ensures the utmost possible comfort when riding over rough uneven roads. We feel sure you would be thoroughly satisfied with an N. S. U. Motor-cycle or car. May we send you full particulars?

The objections to this otherwise excellent scheme are, of course, the cost of salaries, which would be considerable since only responsible persons could be employed, and that it would be far more troublesome, with such a limited number of authorised officials, to get ponies passed than is at present the case.

Third.—Raise the standard of height to 14-2. This course is advocated by a great many people, but it is difficult to see how such a change would be of the slightest benefit. Why should an additional inch suddenly inspire the measurers with care and uniformity?

The fourth alternative needs explanation. Let the present system continue, but introduce a new rule under which any pony in a Tournament may be challenged by a member of another team. Allow an inch for shoes and unpared feet, and ordain that any pony, so challenged, who fails to measure 14-2 half-an-hour before the match, shall be debarred from playing in the Tournament.

There is, of course, one great objection to this scheme. Probably every team owns some big ponies, and more often than not their big ponies are their "fliers." They would know perfectly well that a challenge by them would bring the opposing side buzzing round their stud bent on reprisal, and so, in order to get their own giants on to the ground, they would forego their right to challenge. On the other hand, some proposal on these lines, worked in conjunction with a scheme for "claiming" ponies, advocated in the columns of the Pioneer some time ago, might be productive of good. At present the lack of care and uniformity in measuring is patent. A team from A. can ride 14-3 ponies, while one from B. can only use 14-1. So the A. team starts with a considerable and undeserved advantage.

Certainly it is high time that this matter received careful consideration.

"LOVE makes the world go round," quoted the Wise Man: "I suppose that accounts for the fact that so many girls are giddy," added the Simple Person.

AN actor, who was enthusiastic over the possibilities of pantomime, once tried to convince Mr. Barrie, the novelist and playwright, that anything and everything could be expressed facially. "I can tell my audience anything without speaking a word," he said. "Then you will kindly go to the back of the stage," said Mr. Barrie quietly, "and express in your face that you have a younger brother, who was born in Shropshire, but is now living in a boarding-house on the south coast?"

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE Bombay Gymkhana and Elphinstone College teams were rather disappointing, the Gymkhana losing two out of their three engagements, while the Elphinstone College, after beating the Presidency College, lost to a scratch side of the C. C. C. by 8 runs. THE Bombay Parsees were to have played the Bengal Gymkhana, but the latter have cancelled all their fixtures and unless more interest is taken in this club it is likely to break up.

The Bombay Gymkhana of course were by no means a representative side, and in addition since September they have had no practice, for like the Calcutta maidan their little playground was appropriated for receptions of various kinds, owing to the King's Visit, the Bombay Gymkhana not being so lucky as Calcutta or Ballygunge Clubs, who have grounds exclusively for their own use, consequently the Bombay Gymkhana's hollow defeats are not to be wondered at.

After Calcutta beat Bombay by an innings and 28 runs, it was not expected that the Gymkhana would fare any better against Nattore and this impression proved correct, the Western Presidency team losing to the Maharaja's eleven by an innings and 51 runs.

The games played during the week really need no description, for the cricket all round was poor and although in some matches large scores were recorded, these huge totals would have been greatly minimised had the fielding and bowling being good.

In the last match at the gardens—the one between Calcutta and Ballygunge—catches were missed galore, D. S. Shallow in 40 minutes having no fewer than five catches dropped off his bowling alone. As stated, bad fielding was not only seen on this ground, but at Ballygunge and on Nattore's ground too. When the Maharaja's team is pitted against clubs like Sporting Union, Town Club, Bagh Bazar, Orientals, Nattore's batsmen can always retire after having compiled big scores, but although the Maharaja invariably gets the best Hindu, Parsee and Mahomedan cricketers to play for him these men never make half as many runs against decent bowling or fielding. There is really no interest taken in fielding by any of the local players and with the exception of White, Prince Victor, Quiterio, Rossiter, Low, A. E. Cooper, one or two more and Nattore's men, who nearly all are keen fielders, the other cricketers do not seem to care a brass button whether they drop one catch or a dozen. The same remark also applies to the ground fielding which nine times out of ten is execrable.

But now to the week's cricket. The last match of the three played by the Bombay Gymkhana was against Nattore. Bombay batting first were all out for 109 to which N. A. S. Stow contributed 26, Sampre took six wickets for 54 runs. Nattore replied with 344, K. Salamuddin 65, B. R. Mehta 61 and C. M. Ali not out 70, all batting with success. In the second innings Bombay totalled 181, T. H. Watts batting very prettily for 39. The excellent fielding of Nattore largely contributed to the success of this brilliant victory. Seshachari, the great Hindu wicket-keeper, Aziz and Salamuddin in particular distinguishing themselves.

The Turf Club beat Howrah Sporting by 16 runs on Friday, the Howrah men scoring 162, while the Turf Club got 178. For the winners, J. Grieff's 41 W. Gregory's 46 and C. Barrett's six wickets for 54 runs were the principal features of the match.

On the Customs ground a very enjoyable game between the Pilots and the H. M. S. Highflyer came off last Thursday, the Pilots winning by the narrow margin of three runs. Mr. Lyon 39 and Mr. Glazrove 38 for the losers and V. Cooper 25, H. Cooper 20 and C. O. Park 50 for the Pilots were chief contributors. The Highflyer team were all out for 141.

On Saturday there was no cricket, but on Sunday and Monday the Calcutta and Ballygunge clubs were engaged at the gardens, while the second strings of the two clubs met on the Ballygunge ground. Tall scoring took place on both the grounds, but had the fielding been better, the totals would have been greatly minimised. The game at the gardens ended in a draw Ballygunge scoring 320 in the first innings for six wickets (innings declared) and 181 for five (innings declared) while Calcutta registered 265 in the first innings and 189 for 4 in the second. Ballygunge had the best of the draw, but Calcutta were handicapped owing to the loss of Chisholm one of their principal bowlers. White's 77 was the batting display of the match.

The game at Ballygunge between the "A" teams ended in a win for the C.C.C. by the narrow margin of 4 runs. Ballygunge "A" scored 154 and 217 while the Calcutta "A" got 146 and 329. H. F. Forster compiled 158 for the home team, while J. C. Sewell for Calcutta missed his century by 3 runs. Both batsmen, however, received lives.

Golf.

THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP OF INDIA.

THE final of the Amateur Championship was played off on Sunday, the 31st ultimo, over the Tollygunge Club course when Mr. J. D. Gatheral beat Mr. G. C. Whigham of Rangoon by one hole. The morning round produced capital Golf. Wigham won the first hole and Gatheral took the second. The third and fourth went to Whigham and the fifth was halved: Gatheral won the next two and Whigham taking the eighth and ninth was two up at the turn. Coming home the tenth and eleventh holes were halved, Gatheral won the next two and squared the match. Whigham won the next and Gatheral the fifteenth while the last three holes were halved, the round thus ending all square. The cards were as follows:—

Whigham.—Out: 4, 5, 4, 4, 3, 5, 5, 4, 3—37. In: 5, 4, 5, 6, 4, 5, 4, 4, 4—41=78.

Gatheral.—Out: 5, 4, 5, 5, 3, 4, 4, 5, 4—39. In: 5, 4, 4, 4, 5, 4, 4, 4, 4—38=77.

The golf in the afternoon was not up to the standard of the morning play, both competitors evidently feeling the strain. Going out Whigham won the first and third holes, the second and fourth were halved, Gatheral took the fifth, the sixth was halved and Gatheral winning the next again made all square. The eighth was halved and Gatheral taking the next was 1 up at the turn. Coming home the first hole was halved in six, and Whigham winning the next got on terms. The twelvth and thirteenth holes were halved, but Gatheral won the fourteenth and took the lead. The last four holes were halved and Gatheral thus won the match by one up. Scores:—

Whigham.—Out: 5, 5, 4, 4, 5, 4, 7, 5, 3—42. In: 6, 4, 5, 6, 4, 4, 4, 4—41=83.

Gatheral.—Out: 6, 5, 5, 4, 4, 4, 5, 5, 4—42. In: 6, 7, 5, 6, 3, 4, 4, 4, 4—43=85.

The winner came out from Scotland with a reputation a couple of years ago and has always been a consistent player in club competitions. He took part in the championship last year and reached the semi-final stage where he was beaten by Mr. B. A. Collins, the ultimate winner. This year he was second in the qualifying rounds and has subsequently had some close games, beating Ogilvy by 4 and 3, Melrose by 2 and 1 and Cunningham on the 25th green. Whigham is a competitor from Rangoon, and was +3 at Prestwick. In 1899 he reached the semi-final of the British Amateur Championship, before being beaten by John Ball junior. He competed in the Calcutta Championship in 1907, when he lost to G. E. Colville by 1 hole. In the present competition he has had fairly easy victories, defeating Stapledon by 5 and 4, Bray by 3 and 2, and Mann by 6 and 5.

There was quite a big crowd of interested followers both in the morning and after lunch, and at the conclusion of the match Mr. Duncan, Captain of the Calcutta Golf Club, made a short congratulatory speech and handed the cup to the winner.

THE ASIAN CUP.—The Annual Tournament for this trophy was played at Barrackpore between the 23rd December and 1st January. Sixty-five competitors entered, but only twenty-two returned cards, Mr. P. Teehan with a score of 70 nett, coming out top Messrs. Hope and Patterson tieing for second prize with 76. Score:—

LAHORE FIFTEENTH CHAMPIONSHIP DOG SHOW.

THE fifteenth annual Dog Show, held at Lahore in the Agri-Horticultural Gardens last Friday and Saturday was a big success. The entries were large and the quality good, though perhaps not up to the level of the previous shows. Terriers were as usual the best represented. Messrs Paterson and Muir, Mr. J. Law and Mr. E. W. Hearle Sprot all showed good fox-terriers, while Major F. Martin was the most prominent winner with his Irishmen and Scotties. Mr. J. Ward took most of the classes for Airedales and Lieutenant-Colonel H. Smith took three firsts in the Bull Terrier classes. The judges were—Lieutenant Colonel H. Smith, I.M.S., Major F. Martin, Mr. A. E. Jenkins, Mr. V. de V. H. Woodley, Mrs E. Batson James and Mr. F. Miles. Results:—

The Naturalist.

GREEN ANIMALS

GREEN is the characteristic colour of the vegetable rather than of the animal world. And the universal principle of the green of plants is known as chlorophyll. Among the lower forms of life naturalists have often found it difficult to distinguish between plants and animals, and at one time the possession of this green colouring matter was suggested as a decisive test. Organisms possessing it were to be classed as plants, although its mere absence could not be held to prove they were animals. Then it was found that the green colour of the common fresh-water hydra was due to chlorophyll, and the distinction seemed to break down. Animals might possess the green colouring matter of plants. Since then other green animals have been discovered which owe their colour to the same substance.

But it has now been shown that the green colour of the hydra is of vegetable origin. It is, in fact, the colour of certain one-celled algæ which grow in its tissues. The hydra, in fact, is its own garden in which it grows the little green plants which seem essential to its well-being. This well-known little animal of our ponds and ditches is an interesting example of what biologists call symbiosis, a living together for mutual advantage. By keeping the hydra in a mixture of glycerine and water the little plants can be induced to leave their host, and it becomes colourless. If it is now kept in distilled water it will remain so, as will also any new individuals it may produce by budding. Place it, however, in ordinary pond or ditch water, and it becomes green again. The spores of its favourite vegetable are absorbed, and grown again in its tissues. Host and guest are happy together once more!

And there is a green worm whose colour has a similar origin. This worm begins life colourless, but within three days of its birth becomes infected with the cells of certain algæ which live in the water. So the worm becomes green through the colour of the little vegetables growing in its tissues. If the worm does not obtain the algæ it dies, probably because it cannot otherwise get rid of its waste nitrogenous products. Tennyson has written of the human body as "a little city of sewers," but our worm seems to be a smaller city without sewers. Hence it needs the green algæ to act as scavengers. As in certain eastern cities vultures and dogs keep the streets free from refuse, so these green algæ feed on the waste material of the worm. Thus the worm keeps its garden supplied with manure, and appropriates the starch produced by its vegetable crop, converting it into sugar.

The caterpillar of the common cabbage butterfly is of a bright green colour like the leaves on which it feeds. Hence it is difficult to see as it eats up our choice vegetables or flowers. In its green colour nature has given it its modicum of "fern-seed" by means of which it walks invisible through life. Yet in spite of the obvious advantages of such a garb it is remarkable how few caterpillars are really green. The majority, in fact, are more or less brightly coloured. But there are a number of animals which do wear the green, and apparently for the same reason as the green caterpillar, to escape observation. Their reason is that of the hunter who of old donned the "Lincoln green" that he might walk the woods unseen. Among the frogs there is one which has taken to the arboreal life, and it has put on the green livery. So, as it pursues its business or pleasure amid the green foliage, it is not the "observed of all observers" as it would otherwise be. Tree-haunting lizards have done likewise. Yet it is remarkable how few of those tree-lovers, the birds, have mingled any green in their attire. Among our own species we may cite the tom-tit and great-tit as showing a certain amount of possibly protective colouring in respect of their green surroundings. And then there is the green woodpecker. For other countries the parrots may be given as striking examples.

The sloth, most arboreal of mammals, in its mode of life, adopts the "Lincoln green." Creeping along the lower sides of the branches as it does, it thus obtains a certain amount of concealment from its very position. And this is heightened by the "peculiar greenish tint of its outer covering." This colour, very uncommon in mammals, is not due to the colour of the hair, but to the fact that the sloth carries its garden on its back. For on the fluted surfaces of the hairs there grow numerous green algæ, which thus enable the sloth to simulate its surroundings in colour. But the climate of the damp, gloomy, tropical forests of the sloth's native home is necessary for the welfare of the sloth's garden, and the green soon disappears from animals kept in capitivity in this country.

The grasshopper is green like the grass in which it lives, and this, with its wonderful powers of jumping, give it the modicum of "fernseed" required for the preservation of its race. The aphides on the rose-bush are green, and thus tone with their surroundings. But there are others such as we may see on the cider tree, or knapweed, which are almost black and thus easily visible.

In Queensland there is a green ant which makes its nest by drawing together the leaves and flowers of the tree in which it lives. It is said to keep spiders for spinning the necessary thread. The leaf-cutter ants in tropical countries cut out bits of leaf and carry them home to their nests. They are a fierce race, and are said to be imitated by a milder species, which is thus thought to obtain a certain amount of protection. A certain part of the body of the latter is green, and so modified that the ant looks as if it were carrying a bit of green leaf. Wearing the green in this way is believed to be a protection to them. They are mistaken by enemies for the fiercer species, and therefore left severely alone.—The Globe.

SEA ELEPHANTS.

EVER since the Spaniards overran Mexico and California, Lower California has been a place of wonderment and mystery. Tiburon Island and Guadalupe Island and the Gulf of Lower California have had more strange tales woven about their human and animal inhabitants than any other part of this Pacific coast. It was in Lower California that the Spaniards asserted that they had found "men whose heads do grow beneath their shoulders," wondrous monsters of the six and eight-legged variety, and "fish with trunks like unto elephants."

Started by the Dons, the weird yarns multiplied even under more modern conditions, until the United States steamer Albatross, a converted cruiser, started south bearing a party of scientists from the American Museum of Natural History of New York City. The aim of the expedition was to explore the islands and coast of Lower California and the waters of the surrounding ocean and gulf. Its success was remarkable.

The Albatross (says the New York Times) left San Diego, Cal., on February 28, 1911, and made its first stop at Guadalupe Island. It was here that for the first time in many years scientific eyes beheld the almost fabled sea elephant, the Macrorhinus angustirostris. Indeed so rare has the animal become that many scientists have believed it extinct. The first of these strange creatures observed by the party was a monster bull lying upon the sand in the shade of a cliff, with the breakers surging around his bulk.

When he sighted the members of the shore party he reared his huge body from the sand hollow and waddled hastily toward the sea, but before he could get into deep water shots from the rifles of the party killed him. He measured over twenty feet in length and more than half that in circumference around his shoulders. On their return to the ship it was learned that Dr. Townsend had captured alive five young sea elephants. These, however, did not show the well-developed elephant snouts. They gave their captors hardly a moment's rest or quiet until they were shipped to the New York Aquarium from San Diego.

Mr. Osborn, an authority on ornithological subjects, and a member of the expedition, told the following story of some of their discoveries: The largest colony of sea elephants was visited on March 4, when probably fifty of all ages and both sexes were reposing high on the beach, and wallowing in huge comfort in the sand. The work of skinning and skeletonising the specimens shot was done in the lee of a cliff 2,000 feet high with a concave face, and our labour was interfered with by loose flying boulders from the top of the cliff.

The animals are sluggish and inactive while on shore. The fighting bulls waddle face to face, open their mouths, throw their long snouts up in the air, and roll their heads till they touch their backs, all the time letting out a hollow roar something like that of a caged lion. At times they emit from their mouths a small cloud of white vapour and roll their large black eyes about. Their eyes are often as much as three inches or more in diameter.

When pursued, they waddle, crawl, and flap down to the water's edge with a most awkward gait, but when the sea is reached their powerful bodies are instantly graceful and rapid in long swimming strokes. Skins and skeletons, as well as live specimens, were collected, and thus was completed an important addition to science—the re-discovery of the sea elephants.

On Guadalupe we captured four kinds of the herd of goats which overran the Island, the kids to be used as mascots aboard. The old mascot, Bill, a goat from the Society Islands, died some time ago, and he will be added to my collection of game heads.

After our return to San Diego to ship the sea elephants we turned south again, this time leaving the Guadalupe well to the west, and headed down the coast to the many bird islands and collecting grounds. In the course of the cruise we touched at thirty-seven points and only four towns.

On Cedros Island an unsuccessful attempt was made to collect specimens of the deer peculiar to it. Several skeletons were found, but no living examples of this rare and rapidly disappearing species were seen. At Turtle Bay—well named, by the way—we obtained one of the distinct type of deer inhabiting that dry waste. At Pichilinque Island, our first coaling station, I went ashore and shot a black hare, found nowhere else in the world but there and on Espiritu Santo Island, near by. These hares are almost coal-black on the back and lighter on the sides. They inhabit the rocks and the sea caves of the sea cliffs and mesas.

Tiburon Island, the largest in the gulf, is the home of the Seris. This island is more fertile, for it has a little water which is "mal sed" for here water is life. We beached in an attractive cove on the south-east side of the island, and on the second day two deer were shot. Dr. Townsend, a member of the expedition, got the first. These deer are of a different species from those found elsewhere, and were greatly prized. The work of transporting the largest, entire, to the ship was a task for six men.

HIGH DIVERS OF THE PACIFIC.

Many birds get their living by fishing, and the most successful dive after their prey. The black divers, which are often seen rocking on the ocean swell, duck under now and again. They swim a considerable distance beneath the surface to catch perhaps one fish. The kingfisher, swooping down from the vantage-point of a bough, is lucky if he takes a trout from the pool. Champion among the diving birds is the pelican, for under his bill he carries a big pouch, with which he scoops up a peck of little fishes at a single dive. It is this fishing-bag of wrinkled skin that, together with the enormous bill which makes its frame and support, gives the bird its ungainly look. It can only rest easily with its neck curved back and its bill balanced on the bulge of its breastbone.

The pelicans commonly seen on the coast of California are big grey birds, the size of geese. They have broad wings, long necks, heads round and white as baseballs, and their bulky body is supported on short, sturdy legs, ending in webbed feet. In spite of having all this dead weight to carry, they are high fliers. Pelicans soar aloft, not as high indeed as the buzzards, which circle like black specks against the blue, but to a height of 100 or 200 feet above the sea. To watch the feats of these birds in diving from such elevations is a most interesting spectacle.

First of all, they must locate their prey; for the smelts, yellowfins, and small silvery fish on which they feed are migratory. So they travel up and down the coast, three or more together, flying in Indian file a few feet above the wash of the long Pacific rollers. They are prospecting, as a miner would say, for a likely fishing-place. Having found one to their fancy, they separate and rise high into the air. As everyone knows who has ever peeped over the edge of a cliff, you can see far into the depths of a quiet sea from a lofty elevation. So the great birds fly steadily back and forth, questing, like hawks above a stubble-field. Suddenly a pelican hovers—comes to a standstill, with his wings flapping fast. He has sighted a shoal of fish, swimming perhaps many feet below the surface. Down goes his bill, up tilts his tail, and with wings closed tight the bird shoots downward. While in the air one corkscrew turn he makes, and then hits the water with a mighty splash. You would think a whale was spouting. The second goes by; you wonder if he will ever come up; and lo! there is the squat grey bird floating on the water many yards from the spot where he struck the surface. After that tremendous dive he needs a little time to rest and recover breath before attending to the catch. Now his bill points to the sky, gapes apart a little, and the contents of the distended pouch slip down the bird's gullet.

Not all, however, that the pelican's scoop net has swept up goes to feed his own stomach. The pouch has no muscles attached to it, and the bird cannot swallow with his mouth closed, like a man or a monkey. He must open his bill slightly and, when the pouch is well loaded, a few spill out. The gulls know all about this, and, although they feed fat on sand-crabs and all the refuse of the shore, they are always hungry for fresh food. They never dive themselves, and only catch fish that swim very near the surface. But when a pelican dives, all the gulls on the beach, white-necked with yellow beaks or cinder-grey and red billed, take to their wings at once. The first to arrive at the spot where the pelican bobs up range themselves astern of the big fisher, like shore boats in attendance on a steamer, and wait for him to unload. When he raises his bill, they whirl in, screaming, to pounce upon the spillings of the pouch or deftly to snatch a small fish from the angle of the partly opened bill. This impudent act the big fellow sometimes resents by a twitch of his ungainly beak directed at the robber. But he beats the air in vain; the nimble gull is off and away with his booty. A pelican's pouch is so capacious that, one would suppose, a full load would satisfy his appetite. But no; a sea-bird is an insatiable creature. When there is a big run of fish into a bay and the water bubbles with their moving, the pelicans dive again and again into the press.

At length they tire of fishing and fly ashore. Huge sacks of feathers they seem, as they stand about on the beach in various attitudes of repose—some preening their plumage, some quietly digesting their enormous meal. When they take flight again they flap and scramble through the shallow water, half-running, half-flying, till they acquire sufficient momentum to launch themselves into the air. It is with these heavy bodies as with the airships—the difficulty is to get under way. The gulls, light, airy creatures, take two tripping steps, and up they go; the pelicans flounder along for twenty paces.—F. W. Reid, in Sports Afield.

THE TIGER'S DREAM.

Our sporting literature teems with stories descriptive of the fiendish ferocity of man-eating tigers, but unfortunately all the evidence is for the prosecution, and the tiger's side of the case has never received any attention. Quite by chance I have heard a yarn, which seems to point to the possible existence of extenuating circumstances in the conduct of these dreaded man-eaters.

While staying in Manchester, I went to see a large travelling circus and menagerie. There I made the acquaintance of one of the attendants, whose Christian name was "Jake." His surname was I fancy, Hargreaves, but of this I will not be sure, for I never heard him called by it. I became so interested in this man, that I stayed on in Manchester in order to better my acquaintance with him. He was generally called "Tiger Jake," on account of his extraordinary aptitude for understanding and managing these animals. There were three tigers in the show, and Jake seemed to be on intimate terms with all of them. It was strange to see a surly old tigress, who used to lie sulkily indifferent to the crowd round her cage, jump up eager and alert, directly Jake approached. One could see too that the feelings of the animals towards this man were inspired by pure affection—Jake seldom fed the tigers, and there was a lad of eighteen or nineteen who nearly always carried out this duty, yet the big cats appeared to take no interest in this latter individual, and certainly never fawned on him, even when he was bringing them food, as they always did on Jake, whether he brought food or not. Evidently "Tiger Jake" possessed some peculiar qualities which appealed to animals. It was not only tigers which showed affection to him; the other animals, and even the birds, all seemed anxious for his notice. I found Jake rather reticent, and hard to get to know, and it was quite a while before I could flatter myself that I had made friends with him. An accident helped me however. One evening, while some men were looking at the tigers, one of them carelessly tossed a lighted match towards the cage: it was a wax match, and fell still alight just inside the bars close to a young tiger named "Moses." There was a little pile of straw, and this at once began to catch. I jumped over the barrier, and knowing Moses' mild disposition, thrust my arm in and pulled out the straw, before any harm was done. Poor Moses only realised the situation -- I pulled the burning mass through the bars and then he jumped up with a frightened "Wuff," and dashed to the far end of the cage.

Jake came up at this moment, and at once entered the cage and soothed the terrified Moses.

After this I found the tiger man's reserve melted, and we were soon fast friends. This somewhat long preamble is necessary in order to show how Jake came to tell me the following story.

"You must have noticed how dogs dream: sometimes in their sleep they even go through the action of galloping, as they lie on their sides, and utter little barks at the same time. It is easy enough to see that when they do all this, they are dreaming of an exciting hunt. All the other animals dream too, and once I believed a tiger actually communicated its dream to me in full detail. I was in another show then, and we had four tigers, which I used to train and teach to do tricks. One of the four was said to be a man-eater, though I must say I hardly believed it. To begin with it was a youngish animal, with a very good coat and perfect teeth. Also it was a peculiarly good tempered beast, and always did its little tricks with the utmost intelligence and good nature. However a thing that happened one night made me alter my opinion, and I now think that this tiger must at one time have killed and eaten human beings. I used to sleep in a little compartment in one of the big vans which was separated by bars from the cage which occupied most of the van. It was very cold weather, and at night I used to poke my bare feet through the bars, and bury them in the tiger's hairy side. He used, I think, to like me to sleep near him, anyhow he used always to lie at night time close up against the bars, at my side; and when I shoved my cold feet against him, would often give a sort of sleepy grunt of approval. Well one night when I went to bed, the tiger had evidently been having nightmare, for he was groaning, snorting, and struggling in his sleep. I thought at first that he was ill, and so took the light close to look at him. However I soon saw that he was perfectly well, for there is very little mistake about a sick tiger, so I tumbled into my bed on the floor, and stuck out my feet against the tiger's side as usual. I soon went to sleep, and dreamt a most extraordinary dream. It is a considerable while ago now, and a good many of the details have faded from my recollection, and especially the strange vividness of all I dreamt. I thought I was in a wood, and I especially noticed a kind of small bamboo, which was growing here and there in little clumps among the trees. I went afterwards to Kew, and there found some specimens of the very bamboo of my dream. It was one of the false reed bamboos, which never get large. The kind I saw is common in the hilly parts of India. In my dream I seemed to be aware of the wood, and the bamboo reeds, and the hot sunshine, but at the same time my whole being was obsessed by a tremendous fear and hatred of something or other. Close to me I suddenly realised there was a large tigress, crouching flat among the leaves. The fear and hatred in me drew me towards this tigress as though for protection. Suddenly into my dream there came a great noise, first of all at some distance, and then rapidly coming nearer. My terror increased until it was well nigh unbearable. Then suddenly I jumped up, and went racing alongside the tigress, who had rushed off too. The clamour behind us seemed deafening. Then all at once I saw a towering shape in front, which was instantly obscured by a white cloud. Then all became a jumble of noise and confusion, and I felt something hit me, and woke up. The tiger had rolled round, and banged one of my ankles against the bars. I thought sleepily, that I had just had a bad go of nightmare, and that it was naturally mixed up with tigers, as I was sleeping so close to them. I soon rolled back under my blankets, and instinctively putting back my feet against the tiger, went off to sleep again. And then I began again to dream. It was a clear moonlight night, and I was stealing slowly towards something ahead, which seemed to be drawing me on, I did not know how or why. There was, however, exactly the same feeling of hate and fear pervading me, as in my first dream. Now the hate seemed to be the more important and dominating sensation, of the two. As I crept on and on, the hate and fear seemed to gradually fade, and be replaced by a new thing:—a desire to kill and kill. And now I at last saw my destination; it was a village, a row of thatched huts. Behind and towering above the village, were tall trees which looked very high and dark against the sky. In front were flats, which looked wet in the moonlight, and seemed to be divided into square fields, by low banks. I went quietly up the village street, to a particular hut, and stopped for a little in the shadow of the wall listening. Why I chose this hut, or what was going to follow, I did not know. Suddenly I found myself leaping on to the grass roof, and in a moment I went down in a smother of rubbish, into the interior. There were screams from inside, as I fell through the roof, and I pushed against something warm and soft. At that moment my feelings became quite easy to analyse: they were exactly the same as when, as a small boy, I climbed from outside, up the kitchen-garden wall of a certain farmer, and stole a most luscious peach from the top of the tree.

My teeth closed into something plump, which I longed to eat, and with a light weight in my mouth, I leapt lightly up through the great hole in the thatch, and out into the moonlight. At this point, for some unknown reason, my dream broke off in the most maddening fashion. It was not because I waked, for I went on sleeping. When however I woke in the morning, I felt at once that my feet were very cold, and found that the tiger had moved a little away from the bars, so that my feet no longer touched him. Then suddenly it occurred to me that this was no ordinary dream, but that by being in contact with the tiger, I had somehow taken part in one of his dreams. Piecing things together while they were fresh in my memory, I came to the conclusion that the tiger had been wounded in a beat when young, and that the tigress of my dream was his mother. Then in hate and revenge he had taken to reprisals, and the killing of a human being, would if he happened to be very hungry, as a tiger in the natural state must usually be, naturally lead to eating him as well. My feelings in my dream were so exactly those of a naughty boy, who has looted and carried off something very good to eat, that I begin to think the man-eating tiger is not nearly such a ferocious unnatural beast as he is painted.

Anyhow my poor caged man-eater was the gentlest and kindest of beasts, whatever escapades he may have committed in the days of his freedom. I went to a number of photographic exhibitions, in order to see what an Indian village is really like, and am convinced that only by suggestion, could I have received such a vivid impression of an Eastern scene in my sleep."

AUSTRALIA'S VICTORY IN THE FIRST TEST.

After a stubborn contest running into the sixth day the first Test match at Sydney between England and Australia ended in a victory for the Colonials by 146 runs, the full score being Australia 447 and 308, England 318 and 291. It was the googley bowling of Dr. H. V. Hordern that was chiefly responsible for England's defeat, his success in the second innings being even greater than his success in the first. His figures for the match are:—

	O.	M.	W.	R.
First innings ...	... 27	6	6	85
Second innings ...	... 42·2	11	7	90
Total	... 69·2	16	12	175

He was difficult to play throughout the game. Hearne, Mead, Foster, and Hobbs played his bowling with some degree of certainty, but Rhodes, who was beaten by five successive balls, was never more tied up. It is, perhaps, a pity that the English team showed so much restraint in the second innings. Hobbs and Foster hit out, and both only fell through taking too many liberties. A free and open game might have upset the Australians and unnerved Hordern. Take away the latter and the Colonial bowling was very poor stuff. All credit to Australia who held England hard from the beginning of the match.

By this victory the Australians have been enabled to draw level in the number of wins—thirty-five each out of eighty-seven Test matches played. A Test match which runs into the sixth day is rare, though not unique. The last one to stretch over such a period was at Adelaide last January, between Australia and South Africa, and there are three other instances—two at Sydney and one at Adelaide. England won both at Sydney, and lost in Adelaide, while the six-day Test in which the South Africans took part was a win for the visitors.

The first of the six-day tests was memorable. Australia played a first innings of 386 in 1894, yet lost by 10 runs—robbed by rain when they had victory almost staring at them. Eight years later, at Adelaide, McLaren's team set their opponents 316 runs, and they were obtained for a loss of six wickets. The match might have lasted a week if a fierce dust storm had not raged on the fourth afternoon, and stopped play at three o'clock. It broke the flagstaff at the Adelaide Oval. The gale was so fierce that the players could not face it.

The third prolonged Test was played in Sydney in 1903, and the aggregate of 1,641 runs was recorded. That was R.E. Foster's game, when he put up 287, the highest individual score in Test cricket. England landed a victory in getting their 194 runs for five wickets. At Adelaide last January there was no interval at all. At the end Australia wanted 378 to win, and they obtained 339. No fewer than four batsmen were during the match just decided interested in the increase of their Test aggregate to four figures. Trumper scored 1,994 runs previously in Test matches against England, and he took his figures to 2,000 in this match, a distinction shared only by Hill, Noble, and Gregory. In addition, Bardsley, Ransford, and Hobbs in all Test matches passed the thousand mark.

But the most remarkable feat in the whole match was, as stated above, the successful bowling of Dr. H. V. Hordern—a cricketer who can break both ways, and who can bowl straight—all with the self-same action.

Who are the players who have ever taken as many as twelve wickets in a Test match before? A hurried glance through the 116 Test matches which have now been played reveals the following facts:—Rhodes (16 wickets at Melbourne), Blythe (15 wickets at Leeds), Spofforth (13, at Melbourne), Richardson (13, at Manchester), S. F. Barnes (13, at Melbourne), Turner (12, at Sydney), Trumble (12, at the Oval), Martin (12, at the Oval), Lohmann (12, at the Oval), Briggs (12, at Adelaide), Snoke (12, at Johannesburg).

Hordern's 12 wickets for 176 runs will long be remembered. The 87th England-Australia match is Hordern's match. The googley has succeeded yet again, and batsmen will have to invent some means of defeating it. Batsmen have become so accustomed to watch the hand of the bowler, a turn this way or that suggesting the off or leg-break, that they play to the hand. They will have to ignore what the hand does altogether if "googley" bowling is going to be so difficult.

It was no fluke on the part of Hordern either; he keeps an irreproachable length—as a rule—and so is never, or hardly ever, easy. There is just one thing that this Test match has taught us, and that is that the Englishmen played up well—defeated it is true, but not disgraced. There is no need to be downhearted or pessimistic as to conclude that the team won't win a single match. England did not have the best of luck; P. F. Warner's absence had a far-reaching result. In addition it had an injured batsman in Gunn. But the Notts professional did well enough, and if able-bodied men did as well there would not be much room for complaint. With a little good fortune the visitors should make an even better fight in the next Test, and perhaps a winning one. There is certainly good ground for strong hopes.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

KING-EMPEROR'S CUP DAY in Calcutta will long be memorable in the annals of the turf in India, for not only was it the first occasion upon which the reigning Sovereign has honoured the Calcutta course, but probably it will be the last in the lives of the present generation of racing people in India when this course will be similarly honoured. H.M. the King was not then paying his first visit to the Calcutta course for in 1905, when Prince of Wales, he came to Calcutta and presented a Cup to be run for in the same manner as he was graciously pleased to do upon the present occasion and since that time it has been a permanent fixture on the Calcutta cards under the title of the Prince of Wales's Plate. The King's Plate was instituted in the year 1910, but in the present year, thanks to His Majesty's generosity, it has been turned into the King's Cup and to commemorate the present epoch-making visit to India, His Majesty has been graciously pleased to signify his Royal intention of making this cup an annual fixture and of presenting the C.T.C. with a cup to be competed for on the same conditions as those of this year's race. Although it hardly needed this to fix the event of His Majesty's Coronation as Emperor of India in our memories, this mark of the Royal favour is a distinction, of which Calcutta has every reason to be proud and it is one which will give an added lustre and importance to the Calcutta Meetings. The crowd was a record one in every way, and not only were all four stands and enclosures densely packed, but the inside of the course was a sea of heads and the whole of the route of the Royal procession and other approaches to the course were thronged by huge cheering crowds of spectators. Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Hardinge and their suite arrived at 2-45 P.M. and were followed by Their Majesties and the Royal Suite a quarter of an hour later, the arrival on the course taking place at 3 P.M. precisely, before the second race was run. Their Majesties entered the course by the entrance at the one-mile post and drove round to the main gate of the members' lawn. Their Majesties and their Suites arrived under escort of two squadrons of the Viceregal Bodyguard, Major Lord Charles Fitzmaurice and Major Wigram being the mounted Equerries-in-Waiting. Their Majesties were received by the full body of the Stewards of the C.T.C. and escorted to the Royal Box amidst tumultuous and prolonged cheering. No scene of similar enthusiasm has ever been witnessed on the Calcutta course and the magnificence of the Royal arrival has never probably been equalled upon any race-course in the world and can certainly never be surpassed. Their Majesties remained in their box until after the third race, when, escorted by the Stewards and followed by their Suites they came down into the paddock and entered the ring in which the eighteen competitors for the King-Emperor's Cup were being led round before the race. Their Majesties stayed until after the fifth race. The Royal departure was the signal for another outburst of popular enthusiasm and the cheering at the course was taken up all along the route. The proceedings were in every way worthy of the great occasion.

THERE were only six races on the card and in view of the ceremonial arrivals and departures it was of ample length for comfort. It was a first-class day's racing all through. There was an important hurdle race (The Tally Ho Plate); the principal 14-2 pony race of the year; H. M. the King-Emperor's Cup; the most important 6-furlong race of the year, the Metropolitan, and the other two minor events were the Pony Handicap and the 1½ mile New Year Plate. Racing commenced at 2-15 P.M., the Tally Ho Plate, for which only five ran, Collegian being struck out at the last moment from the over-night acceptance list. Sequent who had been hors de combat with a slight injury sustained when rolling in the sand bath after exercise one morning was made a firm favourite and the best price obtainable about him at the finish was even money, Sholto being next in demand at 2 to 1 and True Love at sixes, the other two, Proprietor and Fearless Boy, virtually friendless at twenties. The favourite was tackled by Sholto at about the mile post and so successfully that he was well beaten inside of the next half mile. It then looked a good thing for Sholto till Proprietor ranged up alongside him and though Sholto hung on to his challenger with great gameness till the last obstacle, Proprietor quickly had him beaten when once they landed on the flat and eventually won, well ridden by Mr. Evers, by two lengths. It was a regular facer for backers, as the winner's name had hardly been written down in any of the bookmakers' volumes.

THE Pony Handicap did not assist towards rehabilitating the fortunes of backers, as with all the weight, First Bell was selected and started very well backed at twos; Waiata and Son of a Gun next in request, the ultimate winner, Circus Girl, on whom Bowley had the mount, at tens. First Bell got away very badly and seemed not to relish the weight, as he never really was on terms with his field. Circus Girl lay in a nice position all through and assuming command just before the field turned into the straight, had no difficulty in holding Waiata and Son of a Gun at bay, winning comfortably by a length and a half. The last time this mare was out was in the Eclipse Pony Plate, when with 7st. 13lb. she was badly beaten by First Bell 9st. 13lb., Waiata 9st. 3lb., Son of a Gun 9st. 1lb., The Plum 9st. 1lb., these ponies finishing in this order. On Wednesday she had 7st. 7lb., Waiata 9st. 2lb., Son of a Gun 8st. 9lb., The Plum 8st. 7lb. and First Bell 10st. 9lb.

A GOOD field of fourteen went for the Innovation Handicap and from the outset the newly-arrived Australian mare Hydra, late Masonic was backed as if the race were all over and soon touched 6 to 4. Of the pair from Byramjee's stable Ask Mamma was a considerably better favourite than Leo Grand, who, when Refresher had been scratched, certainly seemed to us to be the most dangerous in the race, bar one. In the New Plate, 5 furlongs, at Poona Borgie, who was then getting only 4lb. from Leo Grand, finished second to him. In the race on Wednesday Mr. M. Goculdass' three-year-old English filly was getting 15lb. and it seemed to us to be sticking out of the handicap. The result proved the correctness of this deduction, as Borgie won cleverly by a neck from Leo Grand. It also, however, connoted considerable movement on the part of the runner-up, who must be a good many pounds better pony than when he ran in Poona. Hydra and Hughie dead-heated for third honours and so there was not much served out of the week for the backers of the favourite. Hydra looks to us to have dropped any condition she may have had and at present we are inclined to ticket her a somewhat overrated pony. Her Australian friends said that there was nothing in India likely to live with her when she was ready. She is apparently considered to be ready now, or otherwise she could not have attracted such strong support as she did. She never could pace it with either the winner or Leo Grand. Borgie is a nicely-bred little mare, being by Fariman out of Erchless, and we shall expect to hear of her in Bombay during the coming meeting.

THE King-Emperor's Cup stood next for decision and there was such a densely packed crowd round the enclosed ring, in which the horses are paraded, that it was difficult to get a good view of the competitors until they came out on to the course. Vavasor was scratched at the last moment and the stable were represented solely by Five Crown, the Cooch Behar Cup winner, who was very well thought of in the ring and attracted a good deal of support. The horse looked well when he came on to the course, but nothing in the field looked better than Last Call, who started favourite, and Brogue who was not as well backed as the other one from Ferguson's stable, the hurdle race mare Wayward and Wild. A great deal of money went on the latter on the strength of her having beaten Brogue in a home gallop, but it was hardly possible on the English form to class these two mares together. There was a good deal of shuffling so far as the jockeys were concerned. Firth was taken off Black Buck, for whom Mr. Galstaun lent the owners the services of F. Wootton, there being nothing in Mr. Galstaun's stable upon which Wootton could get the weight. Bowley was put up on Black Buck's stable companion Santoinette and Whalley was engaged from outside to ride Brogue, as he was naturally not wanted for Lady Erna, the sole representative from Mumford's stable who had bottom weight, 6st. There was a good deal of money for Last Call in spite of the big weight and though Mr. Goculdass expected his horse to run well he was by no means confident of victory, as 9st. 11lb. is a big weight over a long journey on hard going. Personally we considered Brogue a good thing all through the piece and two weeks ago we picked her as a possible winner of this race after she had won the 1¼ mile Paddock Plate on the first day of the meeting. She was in at a nice weight, 8st. 7lb., strictly speaking about 5lb. more than she deserved, but still we gave her a winning chance and we could not see her very ordinary stable companion Wayward and Wild beating her whatever happened. The stable, however, went for Wayward and Wild and she was undoubtedly considered to be the better of the two. Mr. Thaddeus was not confident of victory, but he said just before the race that he could only safely say that he would beat one in the race and that was Brogue. Things turned out, however, very differently. Wayward and Wild, who had 7st. 4lb., was out with the running accompanied by Bachelor's Knot, Hilarity lying closest to these two with Brogue, Last Call and old Coat of Arms all together next. The pace was a regular cracker all the way and when the two leaders were finished with, which was shortly after the half mile, Hilarity took it on and her jockey saw to it that there was no loitering. Tactics such as these exactly suited two such genuine stayers as Brogue and Last Call. They tackled Hilarity at the end of the straight and it was very quickly apparent that the Bombay mare was not going to see it out. Brogue was in front just after the distance post and, well ridden by Whalley, was landed a winner by one and a quarter length. The time was very good indeed as 2mins. 52secs. is a sterling good gallop for the present race course (1 mile 5 furlongs 58 yards) and was one and a quarter second better than Riflebutt's time in the King's Plate last year when Mr. "Harbarton's" horse had 21lbs. less on this back than Brogue carried, his impost having only been 7st. Mr. Galstaun's success was a very popular one and all the more so on account of the bad luck that has attended his stable this season and the great disappointment that his two horses Wavebird and Prince Rupert have proved Thanks to Tangaroa and Brogue Mr. Galstaun has been credited with two of the most important races of the year, the Trials and the King-Emperor's Cup, as well as the Calcutta Plate which Tangaroa also won. After the race His Majesty presented the cup in person to Mr. Galstaun and congratulated him upon his horse's victory.

A VERY fine field went for the Metropolitan, all fifteen of the over night acceptors being declared to start. In spite of the 10st. 7lbs. which he was awarded—a weight out of all reason in our opinion in any first-class handicap and one which was not obviously necessary in the present case as the bottom weight was 10lb. above the authorised minimum (6st.)—there was a good deal of support for that champion of Mr. Galstaun's, old Tangaroa, but Chobham started actual favourite and on recent form his position in the betting was undoubtedly justified. The stable, however, pinned their faith to the unreliable Devil's Dyke who had a nice weight, 7st. 2lb., and a good jockey in Jelliss on his back. The ultimate winner Victo was on offer at 12 to 1, and 15 to 1 and there was not much money for her. And yet we ought not to have disregarded her, for it was the first time she was out over anything like her best distance and she has obviously been gradually racing herself fit. Ramshaw gets his horses well without knocking them about—an art that has not unfortunately been acquired by every trainer in India—and he sent this mare of Mr. Craig McKerrow's out looking a perfect picture. She won her race like a racehorse should and she put up very good time, but did not break Sea Spray's record for the race in 1908, Mr. Deakin's mare having galloped the distance in 1min. 18⅘secs. with 7-t. 3lb. Victo had 11lb. more on her back, so that it totals up to a very creditable performance. We take the opportunity of congratulating Mr. McKerrow upon the maiden victory of his colours in India and we are of opinion that he has in Victo a mare that is going to do well in India. She is exactly the right stamp and we should not be surprised to see her stay a bit farther next season. Tangaroa dead-heated with Socialist for second honours and Malmsey was close up.

THE New Year Plate was the last race on the card and for this Langton was sent out a well backed favourite at two's, though Sanhedrin and Royal Scotland also had their respective followings, the former finding plenty of friends at 5 to 1. There was a very close race and just before the post Langton badly bumped Sanhedrin and bored her across the course, causing her to interfere with Cheeky. An objection was inevitable and the verdict against Langton was also inevitable. Langton was deprived of his victory and the race went to Sanhedrin, Cheeky and Herald being placed second and third respectively.

THE Tollygunge Steeplechases opened on Saturday last and Their Majesties again honoured the Calcutta racing public by being present. Their Majesties did not arrive till after lunch and, attended by His Excellency the Viceroy, motored down to the course, arriving punctually at ten minutes to three in good time to see the race for the Indian Grand National decided, that event being timed for 3 P.M. The welcome Their Majesties received was, as has been invariable throughout their stay in Calcutta, a most enthusiastic one, and there were loud cheers all along the route and also on their arrival at the course. Their Majesties were received at the main gate by the Stewards and conducted to the specially erected stand which has been put up since last season. The crowd at the course was a very big one indeed and the accommodation of Tollygunge is not nearly sufficient to cope with the demands made on it, but as the fate of this course seems to be at the present moment hanging in the balance it would be unwise to counsel any additions to the present accommodation. Steeplechasing in India has not thriven for years past, and as every season at Tollygunge comes round we have the same story to tell, poor entries and still poorer fields. The Steeplechase course here has been considerably improved during the last two seasons and so far as the fences go there is no fault to be found with it, but it is of no avail to have good fences unless the course itself is put into a safe condition upon which horses can gallop and jump. In former years it was the practice to plough up a considerable portion of this course, but of recent years this has been discontinued and it has been sought to counteract the hard ground by top dressing. This we do not believe to be possible unless the surface upon which the top dressing is to be done is specially prepared. It is furthermore no use whatever trying to apply a dressing after the ground has once got hard. Heavy manuring in a prepared trench followed by sifted mould placed over the surface before the rains arrive would, we believe, prove to be the best means of circumventing the present iron-bound ground, for the grass would then grow up through this surface and hold it together and the manure and top dressing would form a very serviceable cushion. As regards the stand side of the course, if it is still desired to keep it grass, there is only one thing naturally to be done, namely, to water it until it is as soft as the going in Calcutta during the monsoons. If, and when, we get a Steeplechase course in Calcutta no good will be done with it unless it is more plentifully watered than the flat course at Calcutta at present is. It is of no manner of use having water laid on if it is not used, and we consider that the flat racecourse at Calcutta is and has been dangerously hard all through the season. Where jump races are concerned it is obviously necessary that the surface should be soft and resilient. We quoted the example of the Blackpool Summer Steeplechases, where a hard course was rendered soft by judicious watering. The Stewards of that meeting possibly had not quite so difficult a problem as confronts Calcutta, but they tackled it in a sensible manner. The next point is the matter of races for jumpers and the values of stakes. At the present moment there is no inducement whatever to an owner to buy jumpers because there are only two days' racing at Tollygunge, a few scattered steeplechases at Lucknow, Meerut and Umballa, and the few days' jump racing at Poona. If therefore cross-country sport is to prosper in India the owner must be given more opportunities of earning money; he cannot possibly afford to keep his horses to look at, and with only a few months during the year in which he can race them it is surely fair to expect that more opportunity should be given him than is at present the case. Calcutta, when she gets her steeplechase course, will be able to give a great fillip to the game, but we consider that she has in the past also neglected her opportunities, for it would be quite possible to have two days' steeplechasing at the Tollygunge course during the rains when the going is in excellent order. There is also a very good flat course at Tollygunge and big enough for any fields that are likely to start during the monsoons, so that two days' jump racing out there as an interlude to the hurdle racing and flat racing in Calcutta at that time of the year will, in our opinion, not only be possible but be very useful indeed. Something has got to be done if steeplechasing is to be saved from extinction, for it is very evident that we have now reached a period when we must decide to either stop or go on.

IN all excepting one race the Indian Grand National fields were of the poorest and accidents and breaksdown unfortunately frequent. Falls there will always be where jump racing is going forward and they are all in the day's work, but breaksdown from the hard going need not be so frequent and we condemn the Tollygunge Course as the cause of the nineteen unsound jumpers who were sound when they came to Calcutta and before they started schooling over this course. Peter, Lady Vera and Mimicry all broke down on Saturday last, the two former badly and the latter it is said sufficiently so to make it doubtful whether he will be able to start to-day (Thursday.) The card was originally a long one of six chases and two flat races, but as the Moderate Steeplechase degenerated into a walk-over and the Trial Chase Plate had only two runners, only one of which got the course, it was not difficult to get through everything without any undue hurry. Racing commenced at 12-30 P.M., and after the first two events there was an interval for luncheon. The Minor Steeplechase stood first for decision and of the five that went Late Night, Mr. Evers' pony, was made a warm favourite and started at 5 to 2. It looked as if the money were coming home safely but Late Night fell at the last fence having, so it is said, put his foot in a hole, but in our opinion he was badly beaten. Marconi then had only to canter home a winner by thirty lengths. Mr. H. V. Scott is to be complimented upon his first win between the flags. Mr. Evers was, we are sorry to say, badly damaged when Late Night fell and sprained his arm as well as lacerating all the muscles of his left leg.

THE First Pony Steeplechase came next and six of them were declared to start. Miss Clare and Lady Vera both from J. D. Scott's stable were both backed. There was a good deal of disaster in this race also, as the second time round Ormley came down and Ngakapa on top of him at the second obstacle. Williamson, who rode Ormley, was badly shaken and had his wrist sprained as also damaging his right foot of which he had already broken one of the bones. Miss Clare was beaten about half a mile from home and Lady Vera, although she broke down before the last fence, struggled home in front of Bandy Leg. She had to be removed from the course in the horse ambulance.

The Trial Chase was a farce as only two were declared to start and of these Fearless Boy toppled over the first time round at the fence at the bottom of the straight. This gave Randall his second fall during the afternoon and he was temporarily knocked out of time and unable to ride for the rest of the day. Proprietor fenced well and is very promising.

The Indian Grand National came next and it was the only race of the day in which there was anything like a decent field, all eight of the acceptors being declared to start. Realm and Maisonette were both well backed and Sholto, Cravet and Idle were also fancied, but True Love was left more or less severely alone and both on the day before and on the day of the race she was on offer at 10 to 1, a price obtainable right up to the start. Maisonette ran dead last all the way and they say she would not attempt to gallop on the hard ground. The farther they went the farther she was beaten. Peter broke down, and the second time round the contest was between True Love, Sholto, Cravet, Idle and Realm, a really fine race being witnessed as all these horses were in a lump and they all stood up. Two fences from home Realm and True Love came away from their field and a hammer-and-tongs finish resulted in a win for True Love by a short head. Realm had never been jumped over the course before but fenced very well though he jumped perhaps a bit higher than was necessary. The pace was good but 6-49 is a long way off Milburn's good record of 6-31¼ in 1903. MacNeilage rode a very nicely judged race and his victory is a reward of patience, for he has had a number of very rocky rides in this race and not a few bad falls.

The Military Steeplechase only drew three runners and was a cake walk for The Ghost who never was seriously troubled.

The two flat races brought the proceedings to a close, Bomb, a hot favourite, being beaten in the Avenue Plate by Whin who started second favourite and Village Girl, whose S.P. was 7 to 4 on, had to gallop for her life to beat Beryl a short head in the Pony Handicap Plate. Details appear elsewhere.

Last Sunday was quite a red-letter day for the sporting community of Calcutta when Mr. Galstaun entertained over two hundred guests to a river trip in honour of winning the King-Emperor's Cup. There was a sumptuous champagne lunch, a buffet going the whole day, and a high tea; all provided by Messrs. Castellazzo Brothers, who excelled themselves in the varied menu and the quality of the fare which they provided. The lunch was quite one of the jolliest affairs imaginable and long before its conclusion they were up to toasts. H. H. The Maharaja of CoochBehar proposed the health of the host in a few well-chosen words, which it is needless to say were received with tumultuous applause and appropriate vocal accompaniment. Mr. D'Arcy Lindsay proposed the guests which was replied to in a brief but felicitous speech by Mr. J. Hutchison. Mr. Bonnaud made a characteristic reply on behalf of "The Ladies" and Ferguson and Whalley had something to say in reply to the toasts commending their share in the great victory.

A string band was in attendance and added much to the gaiety of the occasion. Dancing was kept up all the afternoon with much spirit in spite of an execrable deck floor, while some highly entertaining "turns" were provided by Mr. Bonnaud, Mr. Keyes, Mr. Chas. Harding, Mr. J. Pymm, and Mr. R. A. Pymm.

Mr. Galstaun must be much gratified that his effort to provide pleasure for such a large gathering was such a complete success, and if good wishes for the future would only mature, Mr. Galstaun would easily be at the top.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—After the Xmas interval, we gathered once more at Mahaluxmi on Saturday for the 4th Extra Meeting, there being a good attendance, satisfactory fields and more than average racing. Punters, however, had a bad time of it as out of seven races only one favourite got home and there were some bad upsets, added to which is the fact that the betting is very close. There were several fresh arrivals from Calcutta, Ramshaw, the trainer, and the jockeys Saxby, Brown, Ferguson and Hoyt, Brown winning the first two races, these being for newly landed ponies.

Less than usual was known about these, and in the first several were credited with having given winning gallops, Royal Bloom going out favourite from Coxcomb, Mijbas and several others at a point or so longer. Coxcomb was first away and ran well up all the time, but as to the favourite, he caught the leader after a furlong, was in the lead round the bend and looked all over a winner only to stop in the straight. At the turn he went out wide taking many of those with chances with him, this letting Mijbas in on the rails and he very soon shewed his superiority to the rest.

In the second division Agah Pasha was a strong favourite, though a good deal of money came late for a diminutive bay, Ream, Galliard being next. Mulki was well away from the barrier leading Galliard, and at the turn Agah Pasha came up handy. This was about all the favourite could do however, and nothing could extend the leader, Ream coming with a late run which landed him into a poor second in front of Galliard.

Next came the big horse race with a field of only six, betting resting between Ruby Tin, Huka and Chivalry, who went out in that order with the rest practically ignored. Lady was quickest away, and on the other hand Chivalry's start was bad enough to practically put him out of it at once. Mafoota and Huka were next to the leader, and after a furlong these were joined by Ruby Tin, Mafoota dropping out. Before the bend Ruby Tin was in the lead attended by Huka, and they came, round it about level. A good race was promised, but Saxby had a nice hold of Huka and when wanted was able to go away with some ease. Yvette came with a good run and dead-heated with Ruby Tin on the post for second place.

A good race and a bad upset was seen in the next, a handicap, for which fourteen started, Ashroff and Dilkhush being favourites at threes, Singer at fours and others nibbled at. Singer first shewed out for a few strides, then Fairplay went away in front, Solitaire, Dilkhush and Woolwinder joining the other with Ashroff some way behind being ridden a waiting race. In the straight Singer came at the leader and Ashroff had made his way right up with the front bunch, but here he found a difficulty in getting an opening. A great finish ensued, Fairplay upsetting the pot by just getting there by a head, with Ashroff the same distance behind these.

Eight went for the maiden mile, Sir Edward being at first favourite, but later a rush came for Kamer-el-mulook, who displaced him, the third best fancied being Ghalyum. Real Gold made the running for the favourite followed by One Thousand and Miner, but both the latter gave way to Sir Edward and Kamer-el-mulook. At the three furlongs Sir Edward came up to the leader and Kamer-el-mulook was not going too promisingly, in fact could do nothing in the straight. Here Sir Edward held Real Gold safe, but Ghalyum having come along well was sent out to win by a wide margin. This one has often been credited with good gallops, but could never before reproduce them in races.

In the nine furlongs there were some important scratchings, leaving seven in and nothing likely to beat Grand Duke again, though a good deal of money came for Sir Hugo and some for Well Done. Harry Johnson made all the pace and ran a very good race all the way, Shawcutt dropping out about half way and being passed by Sir Hugo and Grand Duke together. Coming round the final turn Grand Duke ran up to the leader, Sir Hugo was also well placed, but the latter is in want of a gallop. From the distance Grand Duke had them all settled, and though Artist and Well Done came well they could not get Harry Johnson out of his place.

Finally a field of thirteen, Electric, a warm favourite, Yussuff Pasha and Kimberley next. Electric led out from Kimberley and had him settled, but from the turn Order came up and eventually won with a bit in hand.

With the Medina and escorting ships in the harbour at present, it was a good idea to arrange an evening's boxing between the Army and Navy in aid of the Union Jack Club. This came off on Saturday night, and I am glad to say met with a very ready response, the enclosure on the Oval being well filled. There was a liberal card of no less than eleven events, and we saw some very spirited and plucky fighting in all classes. It was natural to expect the soldiers to have the better of it, and they did. Mr. McAlpin was Referee, Lieutenants Crauford and Knight Bruce Judges and Captain Oldman and Lieutenant Hewett Timekeepers. The Committee consisted of Major-General Swann, Major Saunderson, Engineer-Lieutenant Alexander, Calt Cairns and Mr. Taylor, R. N.

The only Naval success amongst non-commission men was in the first when Savage, who was in the final of the Tournament at Home, beat Denham. It was a spirited go throughout, Savage being the quicker though the loser seemed to be having more of it at the finish. Another very good fight, in fact the best of the evening was that which Makins won over Lamprell. The latter is a hard hitter, but Makins generally avoided and did a deal of work himself when in close. In the third it seemed all over, but Lamprell was very game and went the whole way. A peculiar bout was that between Daniels and Luck, the former being the stronger, but so well did the other cover and get out of trouble that he lasted out amidst cheers. Midshipman Maund is possessed of a very good straight left, and this telling in the long run he had the better of points over Lieutenant Gore Brown, who was nearly out at the finish.

Most of the fights were good, and the contestants deserved what Major-General Swann said about them before we broke up.

6 Rds. L. S. Savage, H. M. S. Argyle, beat Pte. Denham, L. N. Lancs, on points.

10 Rds. Pte. Hudson, L. N. Lancs, beat P. O. Johnston, H. M. S. Natal, the latter giving in during the third round.

10 Rds. Middles. Pte. Isaacs, Warwicks, beat L. S. McCoy, H. M. S. Argyle, who injured his wrist in the second round.

10 Rds. Bantams. Sergt. Daniels, Dorsets, beat Sto. Luck, H. M. S. Defence, on points.

10 Rds. Feathers. Pte. Mortimer, 5th Northumberland Fus., beat S. B. England, H. M. S. Sphinx, the fight being stopped in the seventh round.

Midshipman Maund, H. M. S. Argyle, beat Lieutenant Gore Brown, Dorsets, on points.

10 Rds. Lights. Pte. Makins, L. N. Lancs, beat A. B. Lamprell, H. M. S. Defence, on points.

10 Rds. Middles. Pte. Blake, Norfolks, beat Pte. Gillet, R. M. L. I., H. M. S. Medina, who gave in in the fifth round.

6 Rds. Bantams. Pte. Burns, L. N. Lancs, beat A. B. William, H. M. S. Medina, who gave in early.

6 Rds. Feathers. Bdsm. Oldham, Warwicks, beat L. S. Butler, H. M. S. Cochrane, knocking him out in the fourth round.

A small field turned out for the fourth meet of the Calcutta Paperchase Club last Friday. We were glad to see Mrs. Dods out again, having quite recovered from her fall, but we are sorry to learn that a heavy fall while schooling a pony over the Horse Show fences will keep Mrs. Whish out of the saddle for some time. Mrs. Whish has ridden very well this season and it is extremely bad fortune to be laid up at this time: we wish her a speedy recovery. Other ladies out were Mrs. Wanklyn on Grey Harold, Mrs. Collin on Kildare, Mrs. Webley on a bay, Mrs. Walsh on a chestnut and amongst the male sex were Mr. Evers on Rifleman, Mr. Ballantyne on Fairy, Mr. Radmore on Baldoyle, Mr. Seyers on Dick, Mr. Montgomery on a chestnut, Mr. Stephen on Pierrot, Mr. A. K. Gladstone on Jemima, Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6, Mr. McLean on Minnie, Mr. Winckworth on Kim, Mr. Murray on Desmond, Mr. G. Marshall on Juba, Mr. Lang on Vanity, Mr. Chancellor on H. E., Mr. Felsenthals on Rocky Valley, Mr. Hayward on a brown, Mr. Heath on Actress, Mr. Morshead on Punch, Mr. Taylor on Dervish, Mr. Dudley Myers on a bay, Major Thornton on a chestnut Mr. T. Marshall on Loyalty, Mr. Deakin on Scarboro, Mr. Perkins on a bay, Mr. Vicary on Chieftain, Mr. Rogers on Satire, Mr. Harvey on Fortune, Mr. Knot on List, Captain Barge on a bay, Captain Keighley on a bay, Mr. Hodson on Tara, Mr. Savage on a bay, Mr. Bletsoe on a bay, Mr. Field on a bay.

The meet was at the Sheep Pens and the course was about four miles of good going over fourteen jumps, consisting of four hurdles, nine mud walls and one bush wall. In the Horse Chase Mr. Evers on Rifleman led all the way and won comfortably from Mr. Murray on Desmond; Punch, Kim and Baldoyle next in order. Mr. Stephen on Pierot was lying third at the railway but came down at a wall soon after and was knocked out of time. There were others who also came to grief but no damage was done. The following is the official order:—

1. Mr. Evers on Rifleman.
2. Mr. Murray on Desmond.
3. Mr. Morshead on Punch.
4. Mr. Winckworth on Kim.
5. Mr. Radmore on Baldoyle.
6. Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6, followed by Mr. Gladstone on Joanna, Mr. Vicary on Chieftain, Mr. Rogers on Satire, Captain Hodson on Tara, Mr. Sayers on Dick, Mr. Harvey on Fortune, Mr. Heath on Actress, Mr. T. Marshall on Loyalty, Mr. Knot on List, Captain Barge, Mrs. Wanklyn, Mrs. Collin and Mr. Savage.

In the Pony Chase Mr. Deakin on Scarboro led all the way to the final obstacle when Mr. McLean on Minnie took command. Scarboro was not beaten however and a splendid finish ended in a dead heat. Only three others finished:—

1. Mr. Deakin on Scarboro.
2. Mr. McLean on Minnie.
3. Mr. Chancellor on H. E.
4. Mr. Radmore on a grey.
5. Mr. Field on a bay.

The M.C.C. opened their engagement with 15 of Geelong in dull, showery weather on the 5th instant. Batting first on a good wicket the English team hit up 285 for eight wickets, at which total they declared. Mead made 65 by free cricket, hitting seven fours and one six. Gunn scored 51. When stumps were drawn Geelong had made 41 for two wickets. Resuming next day, Geelong completed their first innings for 277, of which Liddiutt scored 129 runs. He gave no chances and put up a good defence. The M.C.C. then went in again and made 118 runs for four wickets. The match was drawn.

"Plum" Warner, the M.C.C. Captain, has arranged to leave Sydney for England on the 23rd instant. There is no chance of his being well enough to play cricket again this summer, and he thinks it best to get back to his home, where he may be quietly nursed to convalescence. His illness is a serious blow to the Englishmen, but there is every reason to believe that he will soon recover. G. L. Jessop, the well-known cricketer noted for his hard hitting, has resigned the Secretaryship of the Gloucester County Club and will probably leave for Australia later.

The following are the draws for the first round of the Jamasjee Cricket Cup Tournament to be played off by the 31st January:—Durham Light Infantry vs. 51st and 52nd Sikhs, F.F.; Royal West Kent Regiment vs. North Staffordshire Regiment; R.A.M.C. vs. Supply and Transport Corps; Rifle Bridge vs. R.A. and R.E.; 17th Lancers vs. 10th Royal Hussars; Royal Sussex Regiment a bye.

In the final two singles completing the contest for the Davis Cup at Christ Church, Brookes beat McLaughlin by 6—4, 3—6, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4. Heath had a walk over, Wright being indisposed, and Larned having strained a tendon.

The Secretary of the Swedish Olympic Committee has sent us copies of the Special Rules and Regulations for the various International contests to be held at the fifth Olympiad in Stockholm this year. We shall be glad to give those interested such details as they may require.

The dates originally fixed having been found inconvenient the Connell Cup Polo Tournament at Allahabad has been postponed. It is probable that the fixture will take place during the spring race week.

The Lucknow Polo Tournament for a Silver Challenge Cup, presented by the XVth King's Hussars, will be played at Lucknow during the Spring Race Meeting. Entries close on the 15th instant with the Honorary Secretary, Captain E. R. Broadbent, from whom conditions and all particulars may be obtained.

The Coronation Horse Show at Lucknow will take place in the Martiniere Park on Friday and Saturday, the 9th and 10th February. Valuable cups and prizes are being offered and a cup valued at £40 has been put up for competition in the High Jumping event.

The Native Cavalry Polo Tournament begins at Umballa on the 12th February and the Tent Pegging Tournaments in connection therewith will be held on the 14th, 15th and 16th idem, entries closing on the 1st.

A London correspondent writes:—Tom Longboat is in England again; few will forget the pother there was over his initial appearance, and the enthusiastic regard which Canadians had for his chances in the great Olympic Marathon—also the U.S.A. representatives, if one might judge from the anxiety they displayed to prevent him from competing therein. But 24th July 1908, was not Tom Longboat's day; circumstances were against him. He is no lover of tropical weather anyway, and the Indian crack failed, just as did our British fliers.

Now he has come upon us unheralded, with his praises unsung, but Tom means business. He is really keen on showing people on this side that there is still plenty of good running in T. Longboat, and to tell the truth there must be, for he has never done better than in 1911. During the year he has had plenty of racing, with A. E. Wood, Alf. Shrubb, Fred Meadows, Abbie Woods, of Toronto, and the rest of the distance men, and generally been ahead at the finish, too. He had some great races with A. E. Wood. The 12 miles was a terrific contest, and only a foot separated the pair at the finish. He beat Gusta Ljungstrom, record holder, by a couple of laps at 15 miles, and ran 10 miles in 51mins. 50secs., on a 12-lap track against Fred Meadows. So the Onondago Indian must be pretty fit. So then he is ready to race anybody. His is a comprehensive challenge: he will run anyone over any distance.

Jack Johnson, the champion bluffer, who a short while ago announced his retirement from the ring, stating that nothing would induce him to take part in a fight again, has during the past ten days been fixed up for two contests. Last week we learned that he had been matched with Sam McVea, the fight to take place in Sydney at Easter. A later telegram announced that the fight would be held in Paris on the night of the Grand Prix, and now we are told that it has been indefinitely postponed as a fight to a finish has been arranged between Johnson and Jim Flynn, the Pueblo Fireman, which will take place somewhere in Nevada in July. Johnson has been guaranteed 31,000 dollars and a third of the receipts from exhibition films showing the progress of the fight.

Georges Carpentier, the French welter weight, beat Harry Lewis, the American, in a twenty round bout at the Cirque de Paris on the 13th December. There was an immense crowd present and over two thousand persons were blocked out and waited patiently outside to learn the result—thereby testifying to the firm hold that boxing is taking on the French public. The principals were in their places to time and the two men presented a striking contrast, Lewis being short and thick-set, with a large head covered with curly black hair, whilst Carpentier is still rather lanky, with enormous length of arm, small boyish head, and fair smooth hair parted in the middle. The American is over twenty-five, whilst the French boy is not yet eighteen, and his figure is hardly set compared with the tough compactness of the elder man.

For the first three rounds there was little to choose, but it was evident that Lewis was going to rely entirely upon body blows, having little chance of reaching the head as long as his opponent was fresh enough to use his long arms to guard. At every opportunity Lewis closed and hammered Carpentier with vicious hits in the face. Up to the tenth round the American appeared somewhat the fresher and more confident, giving away his head to get in his favourite half-arm body hits.

After this point, however, Carpentier so repeatedly stalled off Lewis's attacks and himself reached his opponent's head and body that there remained no doubt in anybody's mind as to the eventual decision. In the twelfth round the French lad punished the American severely, making great play with his long right. In the thirteenth round Lewis recovered some ground with lefts and rights to the body, Carpentier scoring but slightly. Thereafter to the nineteenth round the Frenchman carried things almost as he wished, measuring his distance splendidly and landing his blows with great effect. In the nineteenth, however, he showed some signs of tiring, and Lewis rallied finely, having distinctly the better of the exchanges throughout the round. In the last round of all, although obviously weary and having one eye closed Carpentier scored with both left and right-handed jabs. He maintained his lead and in the end was an easy winner on points, his success being greeted with an outburst of tremendous enthusiasm.

Jim Sullivan, the English Middle-weight Champion, will probably meet Carpentier in the near future, while Harry Lewis, Harry Mansfield and the Dixie Kid have all expressed their willingness to fight the holder of the Lonsdale belt.

We publish in our epitome of English sport this week details of the contest between Bombardier Wells and Fred Storbeck. It appears to have been anything but a scientific bout and both joined in exchanging hard wallops. It was probably the hardest battle in which the champion has been engaged thus far in his career and Storbeck proved

WITH the arrival of the New Year it once more becomes our pleasant duty to acknowledge the receipt of numerous almanacs and calendars from our business friends. The South British, The Commercial Union, and the Alliance Insurance Companies have weighed in with useful wall calenders, while the Standard Life Office, New Zealand Insurance Company, the agents of Harrison Line of steamers have all sent us desk calendars. A well coloured wall calendar comes from Messrs. Curtis and Harvey, and the usual almanacs issued by the Englishman, and Civil and Military Gazette have also come to hand.

THE local Secretary of The Standard Life Assurance Company, has received advice from his Head Office, Edinburgh, that the new business for the past year exceeds Two Million pounds Sterling.

London Week by Week

FRIDAY, 22nd December 1911.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE, the well hated, had a despatch box thrown at him early this week and, receiving it near the eye, wore a somewhat rakish and rowdy look when he appeared next day at the police court and got his assailant—a male Suffragist—two months' hard. Possibly a militant Minister should not complain when a militant Suffragist throws a missile at him. We have no knowledge of the ethics of the Suffragist movement, beyond the fact which is self-evident to everybody, that its members do not accept the ordinary standards of decent conduct. One can dimly understand why the ardent advocates of "Votes for Women" dog Mr. Asquith's footsteps, since he is openly contemptuous of them and their cause; but the Chancellor of the Exchequer sympathises with them, speaks in favour of them, demonstrates with them—yet he also is liable to the proverbial half-brick.

Perhaps it is thought that whereas the Premier is an open enemy, Lloyd George is a traitor in secret, for all his fine words. However that may be, most people will disclaim the methods of the Suffragists and the Cabinet together. The methods of the former are of the kind that renders discussion and public meetings impossible; the methods of the latter are those of men who are ready to sit on the fence indefinitely, and to say neither Yes nor No to one of the fundamental questions of modern politics. That attitude is a dishonest one, and it cannot be excused by any minimising formula or indulgent silence; it aggravates instead of diminishing the enmity of those who clamour for a vote, and it leads to the distrust of those who are opposed to the extension of the franchise for women. We are quite aware that this is not the only matter on which the Cabinet are divided, but it is the most prominent at the moment, and the division is openly admitted. And meanwhile the tactics of the Suffragists have done much to lose them any public support which they may once have had. The cause has perceptibly retrograded during the last eighteen months.

So the Gaekwar of Baroda did not conduct himself decently at the Delhi Durbar. Is it to be wondered at when one reflects on his general behaviour for some time past and thinks for a moment on what is said to have been going on in his State for quite a long time? His behaviour over here at the Coronation evoked considerable comment, but it was allowed to pass unpunished, now he's caught it, he has, we read, been made to apologise and further steps will probably be taken to teach him his proper place by the Power that rules his destiny. That Power has already seen to it that the apology—between the lines of whose abject excuses India will read—has been made more public than the offence. There is talk of reducing the number of guns which salute the Maharaja, of those twenty-one guns whose greeting is more to the ruling prince than the G.C.S.I. or the robe of honour. That the lesson will be taught is not to be doubted.

Baroda will have little sympathy in its misfortunes from the other great states. Hyderabad's Nizam, with his long pedigree from Mohammedan Khalifs, Mysore's Rajput Maharaja, will not concern themselves with the troubles of such a newcomer into Indian history as the Gaekwar dynasty. For Mahomedan princes, kinsmen of the Prophet, for Rajput rajas, children of the sun and the Sacred Fire, Baroda's rule is as a parvenu. Sprung from an adventurer born of one of the ninety-six petty households of the Mahrattas, a casteless prince to whom the Brahmin will not so much as read the holy Vedas, the whole State of the Maharaja Gaekwar lies in the hand of those who made him and can break him. Last year, at the sight of the plump Chief of Baroda, one's memory called up an old picture in an old Illustrated London News, the picture of a solemn little boy, all clanking with heavy jewellery, upon whom a Viceroy had conferred the title of Favourite Son of the English Government. May wisdom prevail with him: it is better to be the Favourite Son than the Prodigal Son. In the Baroda villages there are other little boys for whom the genealogists can make a pedigree from Pilaji Gaekwar.

THE subject of "Women and their Dogs" has received a good deal of attention in the papers as an outcome of what was observed at some recent dog shows. Mr. Cosmo Hamilton writes vigorously, but who shall say with exaggeration, on the question as to whether women should be allowed to keep real dogs, and it is one of indescribable importance to nearly all men—especially those who are married—and to every dog in the land. He says, among other things:—

"Taking the case of the dog first, go just once to a show of the Kennel Club at the Botanic Gardens, or any other show, large or small, anywhere else, and you will be appalled at the detestable cruelty of these so-called dog-lovers—dog-merchants is the real word—to their unfortunate animals. Listen to glowing stories of inbreeding and of subsequent treatment. Hear how the pedigree animal who shapes well to earn money is imprisoned, walked forth on a lead, treated as a sort of valuable convict, never permitted to rush and scamper or to enjoy life, and see finally how it is chained to a far too small cubby hole for hours to whine its heart out before being led, bullied and terrorised, into the show ring.

It is impossible to conceive any cruelty so systematic and persistent and devilish as that meted out by hundreds of dog women and men to the wretched beasts which are to be the means of making money for them. Vivisection is as nothing compared with it. It has always been a matter of wonder to me that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has never done its work in regard to this most pernicious form of cruelty and mercenariness.

It is imposible in a short letter to deal with the case of the unhappy men who are married to women who keep dogs. Mr. Galsworthy could do it justice in a four-act play, or Mr. Chesterton in a series of articles, or Mr. Arnold Bennett in five novels. I myself have often thought of writing a tragedy called, "Love me, love my dog," showing the utter wreck of a home because of the inhumanity of a fluffy-minded woman towards several Poms, all of which eaten up with diseases, sleep on her bed. There is only one woman per ten thousand who is temperamentally fitted to keep a dog. All the other deserve penal servitude.

THAT much-talked-of mystic drama and spectacle, "The Miracle," will be produced at Olympia on Saturday evening. The organiser is Mr. Max Reinhardt, who will in this wordless play give us something four times larger than anything he has previously handled. It will be enacted on a stage 400 ft. long by 100 ft wide. The actors, who will be robed in the wonderful costumes of mediæval times in Rhineland, will number 2,000 and there will be in addition a choir of 500 trained voices and 200 instrumentalists. In order to give verisimilitude to the spectacle the whole of Olympia has been converted into an early Gothic cathedral—not a mere paint and canvas device, but a vast creation of steel, timber, and plaster. The story which the drama unfolds promises to be very impressive, and will be interpreted by actors and actresses of widespread fame.

MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER is big enough to make it evident that anyone who happened to be hidden beneath the bolster of the bed in which he slept would pass a very uncomfortable night. And that is the point of "A Man in the Case," which was produced at the Palace Theatre on Monday night.

The little piece is something of a satire on problem plays and the craze for bedroom scenes. It concerns "the eternal triangle"—only it is treated humorously. Through the window of Anna's bedroom at midnight, while Harold, her husband is away, comes amorous Anthony, bent on illicit love. The sudden return of Harold makes it necessary for Anthony to hide himself, and this he does under the bolster. Now, Harold is suspicious, but after vainly searching the room he asks the forgiveness of Anna for doubting her, and gets into bed—on top of the unhappy Anthony. And in the morning, after the husband has started to catch an early train, and Anna and Anthony have congratulated themselves on a lucky escape, Harold returns with a bottle of embrocation. This, he explains, is for Anthony's bruises. The husband had known of his presence in the bed all the time!

If "A Man in the Case" is but an unpretentious trifle, it is very skilfully constructed. There is not any superfluity of talk, and the piece proved greatly to the liking of the audience. Mr. Arthur Bourchier's figure gave weight to the joke in more ways than one, and he acted cleverly as Harold, a part which made no great demands upon his powers. Miss Violet Vanbrugh played brightly as the wife, and Mr. Allan Aynesworth was admirable as Anthony. The production was so completely successful that the author ought now to reveal the identity which is hidden behind the name "Virens H. Virens."

THE smallest woman in the world held a private reception yesterday at the Criterion Restaurant.

The name under which she is to appear at the London Hippodrome is "Lady Little," but her real name is Marie Jeannette.

She was born eighteen years ago in a farmhouse in the Basses-Pyrénées, and for two years she was an ordinary baby. But as the years passed her parents found that something odd had happened. Marie Jeannette never grew up. She remained 23 inches high.

Although she is a baby in size, "Lady Little" has a perfectly developed figure, long fair hair and a tremendous love for jewellery and fine dresses. She is the Queen of the Lilliputians—without question the smallest, the daintiest, and the prettiest.

Life through her eyes is very quaint. She sees human faces as red smudges with bulging eyes, and voices sound like a roar in her ears. An ordinary hand is a monstrous, ungainly thing, and her vision of mankind, except when she is seated on a high throne, is limited to the knee. She sees the massive feet that take her quite a long time to walk round with her toddling steps, and then a person vanishes into a complex tower of clothes.

The world outside is not hers to walk about in. She can only be carried. She stands in relation to human beings much in the same relation as a toy terrier does to a Russian boarhound.

She lives surrounded by minute things: clothes that would be too small for many dolls; knife, fork, and plate that might have come from a doll's tea set; and a cradle such as she was rocked in eighteen years ago in the Basses-Pyrénées.

Her voice is the tremulous and high-pitched voice of a midget, but as she sat on her throne yesterday fanning herself with an ostrich-feather fan, the size of an average hand, her bright, intelligent eyes beaming with delight, she seemed full of self-assurance and confidence, in spite of the giants that crowded round her.

GOGRA: THE DEATH OF A SPORTING TIGER.

I AWOKE at 3 A.M., absolutely soaked through. By Jove! it was hot and I moved my camp cot outside again, and as far away as possible from the red hot little forest bungalow. A rain storm earlier in the night had made us seek its shelter.

My friend F., the best of good sportsmen, is with me, and we are spending our hot weather leave as best suits our tastes, far away from civilisation, in the midst of Central Indian forests. We have been out nearly a month and have had some grand sport, but there is still a tiger haunting this particular jungle which has defeated all our best laid schemes. "Gogra" the natives call him, after a backwater of the river near by, which bears that name and on the banks of which, tunnelled in under long elephant grass, are many paths leading to his favourite lying up places. This tiger is not a man-eater, it lives peaceably, killing its share of game, but two years ago, when being driven by a line of yelling coolies towards some sportsman, sitting up in a tree rifle in hand, it thought out the situation and broke back, roaring and fighting through the line, knocking over and killing two unfortunate men, who happened to be in the direct line of its retreat. For this reason, the villagers here are terrified of him.

Nothing, not even the promise of double pay and baksheesh will induce them to drive over any spot where Gogra has killed a ghara, let alone go into or near Gogra Sarar, where the fiend is supposed to live.

Again I turn over in my sleep and imagine I hear the bleating of a goat away down at the far end of the village clearing. Poor little beast, it is probably now being throttled by a panther. Good luck to it!

We have had some long days out after other game and both decided last night to have a Europe morning to-day. As daylight wakes me, again I move my cot into the shade of the bungalow, for the sun will soon be too hot to be pleasant. A coolie arrives with our mail letters; good man, he has jog-trotted all the way from the nearest postal village, some ten miles away.

As I lie, reading my home news, I see the ghara coolies returning from their morning round of all the bodas—young buffaloes—that are tied up as bait for the tiger. They are driving only two bodas in front of them and we had three and the goat out last night, so I call to F. who replies "Hu-bally-ray" from under a sheet.

The men come near and salaam and tell us that the goat has been killed by a panther, evidently late in the morning, for little has been eaten of it, and the panther has not broken the thin rope with which it was tied to a bush. The ghara at Kekra nala has been taken by a tiger and has apparently been dragged off a long way into the jungle. Oh no! They had not followed it up—they were much too frightened and had run back along the fire line to give us early news!

F. is already out of bed and getting into his shikar kit and the coolies ask me if I'm not coming too; they press me, but I don't require much pressing and I am soon ready to start off. Our idea is to follow up the kill—see how much has been eaten, and, if possible, make arrangements for putting up a machan over the carcase to sit up in this evening.

We move along the fire line and cautiously approach the dead goat. The panther will no doubt return to feed this evening, so we cover the carcase over with branches and leaves, to keep it out of sight of vultures as it is lying in rather an exposed spot. We proceed quietly on, down the fire line in the direction of Kekra nala. There is quite a well-worn path winding along the fire line and on this, one sees the tracks of a lot of game. The fire line here runs parallel with the river and not far from it, so throughout the night, bison, buffalo, tiger, panther, bear, sambur, chital, kakur and four-horned antelope, besides hundreds of smaller animals, cross and recross the path on their way to and from water.

There are fresh tracks of a panther going along the path; it has not long passed, for its pugs are over those made by the coolies on their way back to the village. The tracks lead along to Kekra nala, and then turn up; here we are on the scene of last night's tussle. There, are the great fat pug marks where the tiger descended into the nala here; he crouched with his legs well under him, his belly almost touching the sand and his tail twitching nervously at the tip; there, the deep scratches mark the spot from which he made his spring on to the wretched buffalo. A broken rope hangs on the tree stem, a dark red splotch marks the place where the blood was sucked and a path made by the heavy body, being dragged along the ground, leads up the bank and away up hill.

A tiger does not carry its kill, at least not a kill of any size. The ordinary method with a heavy body is to straddle over it, lifting as much as possible of its weight off the ground and dragging the rest along between its own legs. If the dead body catches in fallen timber or creepers or has to be pulled up a steep incline, the tiger will reverse the motion and move backwards, while pulling the carcase along with his mouth.

I open my rifle to see that it is loaded and cocking both barrels ready for an emergency, move forward following the drag. F. follows me and the two coolies bring up the rear. It is not a hard drag to follow, the buffalo was a well-grown one and after traversing some 300 yards of jungle, all uphill, my eye catches sight of a yellow form gliding along in front. My rifle comes automatically to my shoulder, but I see it is a panther and not a tiger, and refrain from firing. The form moves along without making a sound, although the ground, over which it is moving is 6 inches deep in leaves, as dry as tinder. This is the panther whose tracks we saw in the fire line and which turned up the nala. He had smelt the blood and had followed it up and finding the tiger away, was stealing a good breakfast off his cousin's kill. One leg of the buffalo has been eaten and the carcase has been gralloched as neatly as if done by a Chicago expert. We slowly retire back to the fire line. The ghara is well hidden in the forest so no need of disturbing the place by covering it over with branches.

Often tigers do this of their own accord, if the kill is left in an exposed place. I have seen the body of a white cow, so cunningly covered over with grass, that I stepped on it before I realised what it was.

Back in the fire line we talk affairs over. We will return in the heat of the day and erect a machan whilst Mr. Gogra is asleep, but meanwhile, where is he? Gogra Sarar is not far out of our line homewards and he is sure to have gone there to water after feeding. Let's go and have a look; so off we wander through the forest. The two men are not asked whether they care to follow or not, but they evidently prefer being with us to going home alone!!

We flush a herd of chital on our passage through some grassy open clearings in the forest. What lovely creatures they are, their every movement is graceful! We must not disturb the jungle now by firing, so on we go. F. is leading carrying a ·360 rifle. I follow, more to his left, we are some 20 apart, whilst the coolies are behind me. I am not quite certain if the waterhole is in this clearing or the next, the grass is so tall and hides everything. All of a sudden, I realise that I am face to face with a tiger. His head and shoulders have, as it were, risen out of the ground. What majesty there is in that look! The yellow of his skin looks shiny in the slanting rays of the sun, and his great white ruff silhouettes his massive head. All this and much more I noticed in one brief moment, then, up comes my rifle, I instinctively draw a deep breath and pull, and at the same moment, the tiger swings round to my left and gallops off, uttering a terrific roar. I fire my second barrel at the yellow streak of lightning, moving through the grass, but feel it is a miss and my eyes follow his form, as it swings round in a circle and disappears into the forest.

F. was on the far side of a big thick bush when all this happened and saw nothing. He did not realise the close presence of the tiger, till he heard my shot, followed by the roar.

The waterhole is not more than 30 yards in front of me and already F. is there, so I join him and tell him all that happened. The tiger did not flinch to the shot, but I surely can't have missed him. I feel quite certain that he is wounded. The tiger had been down at the water drinking and had sprung up the bank towards me, when he heard our approach, which explains his most sudden appearance in front of me.

What to do next was a puzzler!! The two coolies were evidently not enjoying the situation and were for a straight trek home. They look upon Gogra as something of the supernatural! The tiger is wounded and if we once leave it, we shall have to come out again alone, for we know nothing will induce any of the men to enter this jungle again now. We quickly decide to follow him up at once. No doubt a foolish decision, but our blood was hot.

Having told the two men to keep close behind us, and assuring them they would be perfectly safe, if they kept there, but that we could not answer for their safety if they lagged behind or left our file, I lead along in the direction the tiger has taken. F. following me closely and the two men bringing up the rear. At the edge of the grass clearing, we strike a game path along which the tiger has evidently gone, for I can see marks where the leaves and earth have been disturbed. There is no blood trail and I begin to wonder if the tiger is really wounded. Can I have missed so large a mark at so short a range? No, it is not probable!

It is ticklish work following up a wounded tiger at once like this, through jungle where one cannot see more than a few yards ahead, or to either side. The advantage is all on the side of the tiger, who can lie concealed until the sportsman approaches within striking distance, so it may be safely inferred that our advance was slow. Four pairs of eyes were eagerly searching the jungle for the sight of the tawny hide. A low growl, about 40 yards to our right front, makes me look there at once and I catch a glimpse of a retreating yellow form. Again we advance slowly and again we are challenged by a growl, this time I see the body moving quickly through some high grass and I throw up my rifle like a shot gun and fire. The shot is answered by a very angry roar and again all is still. The patch of jungle, where I had last seen the tiger was of longish grass much beaten down by the weather, and of leafless brushwood, with stems fairly close about one or two inches diameter, growing to a height of perhaps 15 to 20 feet, above which the branches of teak and tendu trees stood out against the blue sky. We advance up the path for a short distance, but the tiger has not passed here, he is away on our left, so I turn off sharp and head for where I last saw the brute. We have covered perhaps 40 yards, since leaving the game path, when with a terrific roar, the tiger charges out of the brushwood ahead and comes straight at me. I have not time to feel nervous, the only thought in my mind is that it is a case for absolutely accurate shooting. I kneel down on my right knee, resting my elbow on my left and am thus on the same level with the tiger. He comes on like a whirlwind—just a roaring mass of fury—cannoning off the stems of the brushwood in his hurry to smite his foe. He looks huge; when he is ten yards off (I had my sights on his head and chest the whole time) I fire straight at his head. Bang! Bang! as quick as I can and throw myself out of the way as the huge brute collapses, almost on the spot where I had been kneeling. F., who had also got his rifle up in self-defence, then fired a shot at him, as he lay, but the tiger was dead, only the muscles quivered as the body settled down.

The two coolies stood their ground well—they were, I think, too petrified with fright to think of moving. Their faces, as I turn to look at them, are almost ashen grey. They quickly realise that Gogra is dead and a moment after, both men are on the ground kissing my feet by way of showing their homage.

My last two shots had caught him fairly in the head between the eyes, the two soft lead nickel bullets had entered within two inches of one another and the skull was just a pulp. It felt for all the world like a huge, much-broken, hard-boiled egg. My first shot had caught him sideways in the chest, about 4 inches behind the shoulder, as he turned and my snipe shot had cut a lump out of his tail and had nearly ham strung him.

We leave one coolie (he doesn't much fancy being left alone with Gogra, even though he is dead) and we start off homewards. As we debouch from the jungle on to the fire line, we are met by a large party of villagers headed by my bearer. They had heard the firing and guessed that something unusual was up.

After much vivacious talking on the part of the coolie, who had been with us and who goes through the whole scene in the most amusing fashion, we leave the party to bring in the dead body of the tiger and come on home for breakfast. It was 8-30 A.M. when I fired my first shot near the waterhole an only 8-55 when the tiger lay dead in front of us, 25 minutes of most exciting sport. I again say it was a foolish thing to do, no one ought to follow up any dangerous wounded game on foot, without at least giving the animal time to stiffen from his wounds, and perhaps, more or less forget the incident. I will not try to excuse myself, but all's well that ends well," and as Lindsay Gordon so aptly puts it—

"No game was ever yet worth a rap,
For a rational man to play
Into which no accident, no mishap,
Could possibly find its way."

A wonderful experience but not one that one wants to have more than once in one's life.

During breakfast we talk matters over and decide to sit up to-night over the two kills. We toss for places and F. gets the panther's kill while I draw the tiger's kill, in hopes that the panther we saw this morning, may try for some supper there too. After breakfast, when the men are back again and some are busily engaged in skinning operations, we sally forth and make a machan over the panther kill, sending some men to make another over the tiger's kill. Hot work and we do not get back till after mid-day. At 3-30 we start out again. I see F. safely ensconced in his machan and go down the fire line with two men to the other place. I climb up, load my rifle and send the men away, having previously told them to wait on the fire line, about half a mile away, until I should call to them. They have brought a lantern with them. My platform is very uncomfortable, the string matting of the native cot, of which it is composed, is very loosely woven and my weight consequently rests mostly on the branches underneath, which support the charpoy. I half lie down before I get fairly comfortable and light a cigarette. My mind still dwells on the experiences of the morning and I must confess I never even think for a moment of the possibility of bagging both a tiger and a panther in one day. I dream on, at peace with all the world, when out of the corner of my eye I catch sight of some movement in the jungle.

My cigarette is put out on the instant, by the vulgar yet simple means of spitting on the burning end. I see the panther gliding down the nala on my left and about 70 yards away. I dare not move, for I cannot possibly fire from the position I am in, so I patiently wait events, the while gripping my rifle, ready to spring up to a sitting posture, should occasion demand.

The nala, a rocky bed, runs down and falls over a 30-foot waterfall just on my left hand. The panther crosses the bed of the nala at the fall and takes cover behind a large clump of bamboos on my side, not 40 yards from me. The moment he takes cover behind this, I am up and ready for him, should he appear again on this side. Minutes pass and nothing happens. I almost begin to wonder if I have been dreaming, when I see its form stealing away again by the same route over which it had approached.

It is evidently not suspicious; it had probably heard the noise of our arrival on the scene and of the men going away again, and, wondering if the noise was occasioned by the return of the tiger to its lawful prey, had just come down to investigate matters. It goes away, well pleased with itself, no doubt thinking of succulent morsels to follow, but I am well pleased too, for now the panther has his head turned the wrong way and I can move with caution. My rifle is up and ready awaiting the arrival of the panther at a certain open space. My forecast proves right and as its shoulder comes in line with my sights there is a bang and the poor panther falls over lifeless, a twitch or two of its long furry tail and all is still.

I wonder if the men will come up to me on hearing the shot. I hope not. It is no use my going home yet—there is but one road and that passes under F's machan and I must not spoil his sport. 7 P.M.—It is quite dark, so I blow my whistle and the two men arrive with a lantern. Both are highly amazed to find a dead panther for them to carry home—they had interpreted my silence after the shot to a miss! A straight pole is soon cut down and the panther slung on it with its paws, head and tail tied by a rope of creepers.

I take the lantern and the two men hoist the spoil on their shoulders and away we go down the fire line. As we approach F's machan I hear a distant snarl and a movement in the grass near by, and then F's voice calls out that a panther came to his kill, just after it got too dark to see to shoot and only moved away as we got within 50 yards with the light. This panther was apparently unable to break the rope by which the goat had been tethered to a bush and so was contenting itself by feeding off the carcase as it lay. It was bad luck, F.'s panther not coming during daylight. My panther proved to be a good specimen, a male, with a lovely coat and measuring just on 7 feet from nose to tip of tail.

To those who do not know India and have not shot there I will say "Don't runaway with the idea that a sportsman can bag a tiger and a panther in one day every time he goes out shikaring," for he will soon learn from experience that it is not so, and to his cost!

THE "INDIAN DAILY NEWS," 19th December, says:—

* * * * As for soundness and stability Mr. Lee's standing is beyond question. He lays you several points over. This is a decided advantage over the old style of Bookmakers who always laid you several points less.

THE "ASIAN," 14th December, says:—

* * * * Many of the leading owners, both on this side of India and on the Bombay side, have opened transactions with him, which in itself is sufficient evidence of his reliability.

THE "INDIAN FIELD," 14th December, says:—

* * * * The fact that he does extensive business with many of the prominent racing owners, both in Calcutta and in Western India should be sufficient guarantee of his bonâ fides.

THE "INDIAN PLANTERS GAZETTE," 16th December, says:—

* * * * Mr. Lee is a Bookmaker of good financial standing, and gentlemen dealing with him need have no fear of his not being in a position to meet all demands. The odds he is offering are the talk of the town.

Radiol.

RADIOL TREATMENT prolongs the life of a Horse's Legs. Completely removes by radiation all soft swellings that disfigure and lame a Horse as sprained Tendons, Windgalls, Bog Spavins, Capped Elbow Big Leg, Enlarged Glands, etc.

No Blister; No Laying up

No Hair Removed.

RADIOL TREATMENT fines down a worn Horse's Legs and is a certain cure for Puffy Joints and Sprains, Prevents Filled Legs.

An intelligent use of the "RADIOL LEG WASH" counteracts that daily wear and tear of the legs unavoidable with the Horse in constant work, whether training, racing, or on the road.

One flask of "RADIOL" will make a GALLON of valuable Leg Wash.

"The Field," June 16th, 1906:—

"We have been able to test some trial bottles of "RADIOL" in cases of Wind-galls, Splints and Puffy swellings and have found "RADIOL" to be very beneficial, and we have also found it useful as a leg wash for polo ponies after a day's play."

To be obtained from Broom & Co., Calcutta; Treacher & Co., Bombay; W. E. Smith & Co., Mount Road, Madras; Heath & Son, Sharia Maghraky, Cairo; W. Wilson, Rawal Pindi and Murree; The Mombassa Pharmacy, Mombassa.

WINCHESTER

.22 Caliber Automatic Rifle.

This is the only automatic rifle using rimfire ammunition, and consequently it is inexpensive to shoot. It's rapidity of fire makes it a great game getter, and for shooting rabbits, birds and other small game, it has no equal. For running game it is particularly desirable, as a succession of rapid shots may be fired with accuracy while holding the rifle on the game. It holds ten strong shots, each of which is fired by simply pulling the trigger. Shoot one and you'll realize it's great effectiveness. It is strongly made and simple to shoot.

Winchester Rifles are Sold by All Dealers.

THE CONSOLATION PLATE II.—Rs. 300 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second and Rs. 50 to the third. Won by a length; a bad third.

Owners and trainers extended a more lavish hand in respect to the patronage they bestowed upon the final stage of this well-appointed little jumping fixture. Despite the overnight rain, that had materially soddened an already heavy race track, more horses turned out to run than on the previous day. This had the effect of brightening up matters considerably, and with the first four favourites proving successful backers could view the proceedings with happier grace.

There was less chilliness in the air, and if damp underfoot, it was far more agreeable overhead. The attendance, however, fell a trifle short of the opening day's satisfactory muster, and very little excitement could be engendered from the finishes, inasmuch as mostly all the races throghout the afternoon were won by very large margins. Results :—

NEWBURY.

Eloquent testimony to the popularity of the Newbury Meeting was on Wednesday supplied by the many who set the elements at defiance and boarded the Great Western specials; but the attendance in all department fell a lot below the average, the morning outlook being dismal and cheerless, rain falling in torrents, and persistently at that. Results:—

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

THE decision of the Football League clubs that an enlargement of their competition to three divisions is undesirable comes as no surprise. Not very long ago a similar proposal was rejected, and from the result of the vote just taken it would seem as if the management committee were desirous to show plainly that the desire for an extension—so strongly felt by some—was not shared by the majority of the most important professional organisations. The system of promotion and relegation has told prejudicially against many fine teams in the past. As cases in point may be mentioned, West Bromwich Albion, who, after a period in the Second Division that almost threatened their extinction, are now prosperous once more, and prominent among the best sides. Another famous club to suffer, and not yet fortunate enough to get back to the First Division, is Derby County, and the mere thought of having to put up with a place in still more lowly company must have been enough to influence the opinion of the majority of those most interested. The wonder is that eleven of the forty clubs should have been favourable to an addition to their numbers. Possibly these were the wealthy clubs, who have no cause for apprehension so long as Association football maintains its present popularity; and no likelihood exists of any decline in public favour. In this latest agitation by clubs of modest reputation as players and comparatively poor financial standing the Southern League management committee are to be congratulated on the dignified attitude they adopted to bring matters to a head—with a result that they and all their best clubs will consider very satisfactory.

While the Army Association are endeavouring to bring together again all the amateurs, the announcement from the Amateur F.A. respecting their offers with regard to the Olympic Games comes very opportunely. That the Football Association must have control in this international tournament is recognised by everyone; and should they select any Corinthian or other players not belonging to their clubs all arrangements for affiliation will be left in their hands. Nothing could be more sportsmanlike than this move, which is made clearly with the idea of placing at the disposal of the Football Association all England's best players. Of even more importance than the possible improvement of an eleven to meet the Continental sides at Stockholm next summer is the likelihood that the much-regretted split will be healed by the coming together of Corinthians and F.A. Amateurs on the field of play.

Everything that happened last Saturday helped to strengthen Newcastle United's position at the head of the Football League. While they were inflicting the most severe defeat of the day on Aston Villa, Blackburn Rovers were losing at West Bromwich, Tottenham Hotspur were going down in a close struggle at Bolton, Middlesbrough were sustaining their fourth defeat of the season at Plumstead, and Bradford City were undergoing an unexpected reverse from Notts County. Bolton Wanderers, four points behind them, were the most dangerous of Newcastle United's rivals to gain a victory, and they go up to second place as the outcome of a well-deserved though hard-earned victory over Hotspur. A finely got goal decided the issue, and in the circumstances the visitors could feel satisfied in losing by so narrow a margin to one of the best clubs in the competition; their last reverse was to Newcastle at Tottenham, and their record is now rather spoiled by the third beating in the course of nine games; but, relatively, they are only worse off than Newcastle United and Bolton Wanderers—their most recent conquerors, and the only two clubs above them. The leaders accomplished quite a remarkable performance, as they lost Higgins directly after the first goal was scored and, besides being a man short almost all through the game, they were further weakened by Wilson being injured. Yet they scored three times in the second half and prevented their visitors from getting through. It was something of a coincidence that Aston Villa should have had their defence pierced half a dozen times directly after L. R. Roose left them.

The Welsh international was playing his first game with Woolwich Arsenal, and it seemed as if his presence influenced the Middlesbrough forwards, who can rarely have shot worse in a game that went evenly. Roose was never at fault in what he had to do. He could scarcely have had a more crucial test in his opening match with the Plumstead club, as opposite him was England's goalkeeper in all three matches last season. Roose bore the inevitable comparison well, and his dating methods when more severely tried will make him a favourite with the Woolwich Arsenal crowd, who thoroughly enjoyed the success of the home side over such formidable opponents.

The results of Saturday's matches among the more prominent teams of the Second Division of the League have had the effect of making the struggle among the first half-dozen clubs much more open in character. Only four points now separate Burnley, the leaders, from Clapton Orient, sixth on the list, and as the Orient have a couple of games in hand they may be said to be practically as well off as the Lancashire club. But the best-placed team is Derby County, who, although they missed a fine chance of another victory, are only two points below Burnley, with two games fewer fulfilled. Hull City have a similar record to Derby, but their goal average is much inferior, and because of that they had to give way to Derby County as second club in the tournament. No such heavy all-round scoring as characterised the games the previous Saturday occurred yesterday, the ten engagements yielding an aggregate of 27 goals. This, too, in face of the fact that not a single visiting club won. Three succeeded in drawing, but the rest lost, Hull City and Leeds City suffering the heaviest reverses. Hull had not their best side out against Clapton Orient, and were beaten by four goals to none, while Wolverhampton Wanderers got through five times against Leeds City, Chelsea had to play desperately hard to overcome Barnsley, and at Grimsby Fulham just lost by the one goal that the game yielded.

With Swindon suffering a most surprising defeat by four goals at Northampton, after a succession of performances that made them much the best side in the Southern League and gave them a powerful position at the head of the competition, Queen's Park Rangers, who won by the only goal scored at Leyton, are once more well in the running for the championship. During the week the authorities decided to award the Rangers the full points for the match which could not be finished owing to the crowd breaking in at Stoke, and now just one point divides the London club from the leaders. Such a difference has the addition of the recently scored goals made that Swindon no longer claim a superiority in this matter. Moreover, Crystal Palace and Plymouth Argyle have closed up, so that there exists every possibility of a fine fight for the championship.

RUGBY RULES.

ENGLAND VS. THE NORTH.—Very wet weather attended the second of the Rugby Union's important trial games played on the ground of the Liverpool Club at Aigburth. A good deal of rain had also fallen earlier in the week and as a consequence the turf was in a muddy condition. The match did not prove an attraction, only a few hundred spectators being present. As had previously been announced, Carr, of Leicester, took the place of Boulton in the England three-quarter line, while in the North team Harrison and A. King, the original choices as halves, gave way to H. F. Humphries, of Durham, and R. C. Saint of Cumberland. The England fifteen differed in four instances from the side that defeated the South a fortnight before, Brougham, Tarr, Pym, and Brown coming in for Harvey Jones, E. Steinthal, Sibree, and Coulson. At the outset the England backs gained some ground, but Bell returned. In another attacking movement by the England backs Birkett knocked on, and Roberts gathered the ball and raced away. He shook off Johnston and secured. A try for the North in three minutes, but Bell failed with the place-kick. Just afterwards Schofield was nearly in. England attacked again and Birkett passed to Lambert, who was pulled down by Bell. The North were penalised, and Lambert with his kick hit the post. The North were quick, but England pressing. Stafford was nearly in and North escaping with a dead ball. A fine passing movement was brought off by Stoop, Birkett, and Lambert, and the last-named was stopped within a few yards of the goal line. North again touched down and thence a race over the line ended in favour of the North full-back. The game had been in progress for twenty minutes when Pillman commenced, a movement, which was carried on by Stoop and Birkett and ended in Lambert gaining a try which he himself converted. Directly afterwards Holland dribbled over the North line and Stoop gained a try just before the ball would have rolled dead. Lambert hit the post with his place kick. England now led by 8 points to 3. Soon after the drop-out England were again away, Pillman passed for Stoop won kicked across to Lambert, the ball bounced nicely from the latter and he was enabled to score a further try, which, however, Johnston could not convert. Half an hour from the start England led by one goal and two tries to a try. England were now playing very finely and Birkett with a strong effort cleared the way for Lambert, who easily ran right behind and placed a goal. After these reverses North played better, but their back did not handle the greasy ball at all well. England once more pressed, but Dingle kicked the ball dead. Half-time:—

England	...	... 2 goals 2 tries
The North	...	... 1 try.

Directly after restarting Mellwaine made an opening for King, who scored near the corner, but Lambert failed to kick a goal. A blunder by Carr let in Schofield, who ran well, but Saint kicked too hard, the ball rolling dead. For a time the North held their own, but from a pass by Birkett a try was obtained by Wodehouse and Lambert kicked a goal. Thus fifteen minutes after the resumption England were three goals and three tries to a try. Afterwards England were awarded a penalty, but the kick was promptly charged down. However, Stafford dribbled back, and was well supported by King and Mellwaine, with the result that the last-named gained a try which Lambert did not convert.

The attendance had now increased to 2,000 but the ground, in spite of the cessation of the rain, was in a very bad condition. The handling of the England backs continued to be very fine, and a further try was added by Carr. Now and again the North broke away, but their backs were unable to overcome the difficulties in anything like as well as the English three-quarters, whose form, having regard to the conditions, was exceptionally good. England were over again but lost the ball, and then out of some loose play near the England line Saint ran over for the North, Bell's kick hitting the post. The final score was:—

England	...	... 3 goals 5 tries.
The North	...	... 2 tries.

BOXING.

BOMBARDIER WELLS VS. FRED STORBECK.

BOMBARDIER BILLY WELLS beat Fred Storbeck, the South African boxing champion, in the eleventh round at the National Sporting Club last Monday night. He was always scoring points, but he seemed to lack power in his blows, and gave his friends many anxious moments before the contest ended. The contest was for £250 a side and the club purse, which brought the stakes up to over £1,000.

Wells played with the left all the time, and ducked and dodged Storbeck's swings time and again. Storbeck crouched and bored in, and Wells tapped him hard with the left: but still did not hit as he has done in several of his previous contests.

It almost seemed as if the very incompetence of Storbeck as a boxer was nonplussing Wells. He seemed to remember Gunner Moir and the punch which put him out, and when Storbeck opened himself up to him he was afraid to let go. So it seemed, but Wells was always boxing well and using his left with effect.

As a matter of fact, Wells seemed content to spar his way through the contest, and yet, although Storbeck rarely landed of him, he was apparently almost as much out as his opponent when he administered the last right-hand blow which finished the bout.

And it was one of the few times that Wells really brought his right into operation from start to finish. It was there on guard all the time, but rarely in use for the offensive. Perhaps Wells was boxing to instructions, but it seemed to me that he might have finished it off much quicker had he a mind to do so.

Still, there was scarcely a round in which Storbeck had the best of it. He bored in and crouched, and Wells punched at it. He bored in and crouched, and Wells punched him with a straight, but without much power, or flicked him with a half-round left. But that left was there all the time, and Storbeck's right eye at the finish bore eloquent testimony to its efficacy, for it was practically closed.

In the first round Wells was on his toes like a bantam, and Storbeck, head almost on knees, kept trying to get in a right on the body and a weird swing to the jaw, tactics which obviously puzzled the Bombardier. Wells seemed afraid to hit his man in the second round, as though he fancied the many openings he got were traps. So he poked out his left and defied the counter, and was content to score the points.

Storbeck tried hard to get in in the third but was not allowed to do so. Wells certainly seemed merciful to his man, and made little use of his right. Storbeck got in a heavy kidney punch in the fourth round which did not do Wells any good, and he was as puzzled as ever Storbeck's tactics.

Wells was more worried in the fifth round when Storbeck got his swinging left home a time or two on his body, but he went in to fight towards the end of the round and landed a couple of proper lefts and rights just before the gong.

Wells boxed his man cleverly and showed about his best form in the sixth round. But still he did not bring the right into play, and it seemed to me that there was something wrong with it. The seventh was about the only round, perhaps, that Storbeck held his own, and his swinging blows told their tale when they landed a time or two.

In the eighth round Wells really started as if his blood was up for a fight. They mixed it well, and Storbeck was not the only receiver in some hard hitting, in which Wells used his right in the shape of a fierce upper cut.

Storbeck took a lot of punishment in the ninth round and clinched and held on to avoid it if possible. The beginning of the end came in the tenth, when Wells, measuring and timing his man finely, hit him flush in the face with a straight left. He then sailed in to win, and after taking many stiff blows, the gong saved Storbeck from a count, to a right on the jaw, after he had been down for eight seconds.

The South African seemed dazed in the next round and covered up his face and seemed to want to chuck it. Then it was seen that Wells himself had been taking some gruel. With all the best intentions in the world he could not get in the one that counted for a long time.

It must be said that Storbeck covered up cleverly. At last Wells' right found a mark, and Storbeck spun round and took the count. And Wells, after he had crossed over and shaken his beaten opponent by the hand, was glad that his corner was not a hundred yards off.

BILLIARDS.

GRAY VS. STEVENSON.

THE first of the three level matches of 18,000 up for £500 a side between Stevenson and Gray ended at the Holborn Hall on Saturday in a victory for Gray by 636 points.

A prize of £50 offered for the best break during the match was won by Stevenson with his break of 543, made during the first week of the match. The second match will be played at Liverpool in January, and the third at Caxton Hall, Westminster, in February.

It cannot be said that this match produced a brilliant display of billiards. Stevenson was out of form during the last three critical days, and throughout the match a certain incapacity, most unusual with him, to judge the strength of the cushions has often led to a fatal loss of position. On the other hand, there can be little doubt that Gray, whose staleness has been the subject of general comment, is by no means the player that he was last season. The change of balls, the difference between the bonzoline and the crystalate variety being in most respects very small, cannot account for the fact that he so often failed with favourite forms of the red loser into the middle pockets and has only once succeeded in making a break of 300. If both men were fit and in their best form, it is, humanly speaking, certain that Gray would win by a quarter of the game. Red-ball play scores three points to about two-and-a-quarter in the English top-of-the-table game, and, given equal efficiency on the part of either specialist, the statistical advantage in favour of reliance on amateur methods carried into the region of the abnormal cannot be evaded except by handicapping.

Various suggestions have been made for bringing these exponents of different styles into a position of equality. The losing hazard is the staple stroke of amateur billiards, and for that reason alone its use cannot be limited, as was done in the case of the spot-stroke. As regards the Gray-Stevenson matches the only feasible suggestion made—after the event, as it happened—was that the three games should be played with the three kinds of ball, ivories, bonzolines and crystalates. Had that arrangement been made, Stevenson would have been sure of winning one of them at least, since he has the "ivory touch" and Gray has never played with ivory balls. But the result of the rubber would have told us nothing as to the comparative merits of the two masters of modern billiards. It would have merely proved, if further proof were needed, that crystalate balls are the easiest of all for the would-be maker of big breaks, whereas ivories are the most difficult.

N. S. U. MOTOR-CYCLES AND CARS.

It is because N. S. U. Motor-cycles and cars have acquired a splendid reputation for reliability and endurance in other countries that we are confident of their ability to give the greatest satisfaction to users in India. The design of both motor-cycles and cars is of the most advanced character, and the material and workmanship are of the highest order. Both productions abound in good points. For instance, notice the front and rear springing of the motor-cycle. Here is a system which ensures the utmost possible comfort when riding over rough uneven roads. We feel sure you would be thoroughly satisfied with an N. S. U. Motor-cycle or car. May we send you full particulars?

Gray, who should derive benefit from a short holiday from the tense and vitiated atmosphere of the public billiard hall, ought to win the second and third matches more easily than he has won the first, which was anybody's game up to Friday evening. If he does so, the supremacy of the red loser as a match-winning factor will be firmly established. It will then be interesting to see what is the next stage in the evolution of the modern game among the greater masters thereof. Gray, one feels confident, will never be able to supplement his mastery of red-ball play by a thorough command of the all-round game, including the delicate business of scoring close cannons at the top of the table. Lindrum, who is now showing something like his best form, is the most likely of all—not excluding the indefatigable Inman—to approve himself a master of both methods and (to adopt the late Sir Robert Morier's epigram about Gladstone) to show himself many-sided beyond his rivals because he is brilliantly one-sided in more ways than anybody else.

It would seem likely that the new generation of professional billiard players will be compelled to add a mastery of the "Gray stroke" to their repertoire of match-winning accomplishments. But it is not improbable—there is no such word in the lexicon of modern billiards—that somebody will presently arise who can standardize top-of-the-table play, keeping up the winning hazards and cannons for as long as he pleases.

A CERTAIN woman went down from Jerusalem to Jericho and it chanced that her gown was not fully buttoned up in the back. Now, a priest and a Levite, meeting the woman and perceiving her plight, passed by on the other side, without saying a word. But a certain Samaritan journeying that way, was touched with compassion. "Madam," quoth he, "your ha-hum—" "Sir!" the woman thereupon exclaimed, and gave him a look which froze him on the spot. Whence it appears that discretion is the better part of valour.

CALCUTTA POLO CLUB CORONATION TOURNAMENT.

Final.

SCOUTS vs. 10TH ROYAL HUSSARS.—The final, of which we were able only to give the bare result in our last issue, was played on Wednesday morning, the 3rd instant, in the presence of a very fair gathering of spectators. His Majesty arrived half way through the game and stayed to the end, presenting the Cup to the winners at the conclusion of the proceedings. The game was not a particularly exciting one, for the 10th were no match for the Scouts, though they played up pluckily to the end. The Scouts led by 7 goals to nil at half time and continued to add to their score till the last period when they slowed down and the 10th managed to put on three goals. The final score was 15 goals to 6 in favour of the Scouts. Details:—

First Chukker.—Up and down play. The Scouts then asserted themselves and Kishengarh opened the scoring. The 10th next had a chance but missed.

Second Chukker.—Kishengarh was prominent for a couple of good runs but his final efforts were unsuccessful. The Scouts were then twice penalised for foul, but nothing occurred. Both goals were next visited and eventually Kishengarh got through and scored.

Third Chukker.—The Scouts had matters all their own way in this period and registered five goals, Kishengarh got 2, Captain Barrett, Bani Singh and Rutlam one each, being responsible for the points.

Fourth Chukker.—The 10th pressed and, Fielden opened their account. Another effort was fruitless and then the Scouts attacked and put on two more goals.

Fifth Chukker.—This was a very level period, both teams being seen to advantage. Barrett scored for the Scouts and Sir Basil Brooke for their opponents.

Sixth Chukker.—A penalty hit against the Scouts was not turned to account and then the 10th were called upon to defend and Kishengarh scored. The Scouts kept up the pressure till just before the close of the period the 10th got away and scored in a scrimmage.

Seventh Chukker.—A couple of good runs by Fielden were not successful and then the Scouts took up the offensive and notched two more goals, Kishengarh and Bani Singh being responsible. The 10th hit behind just as the period closed.

Eighth Chukker.—From the free hit the Scouts obtained a goal and Bani Singh added another shortly after. Then the Scouts slowed down and the Hussars put on three goals, Cadogan, Fielden and Canning being credited with the points. The game thus ended with the score: Scouts, 15 goals; 10th Hussars, 6 goals. Teams:—

THE BURMA A. A. ANNUAL SPORTS.

THE ninth annual Sports meeting of the Burma Athletic Association was held on the 30th December and 1st instant and was a most successful fixture. The programme was carried through without a hitch, the arrangements were excellent and real good sport was witnessed. Among the amateurs Lieutenant Mylne repeated his last year's victories in the 100 and quarter, F. Barton again won the high jump and hurdles and Pusey the long jump and 220 yards handicap. The half mile handicap was won easily by Captain Barrett, who was second to Goodger in the half mile scratch. The Army Championship Gold Medal was won by Sergeant Miller of the Royal Irish Rifles with 48 points. He won the 100 yards, 440 yards, high jump, long jump and hurdles, Rfm. Walsh of the same regiment taking the two remaining events—the half and one mile. The Silver Medal for the Native Troops and Police events was won by Naik Imam Din of the 93rd Burmas with 36 points. He won the 100, quarter and half, Ujagar Singh took the hurdles, Harnam Singh the high jump and Amar Singh the mile—all representatives of the 93rd Burmas.

At the conclusion of the programme Mr. Justice Robinson made a short speech and Lady Adamson gave away the prizes.

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

OWING to the several functions during the King's visit there has been very little cricket in Calcutta, but as soon as the Commissioner of Police will give permission for the tents again to be put up the maidan clubs will resume cricket once more. The pitches, it is true, have been greatly effected and a couple days rain at the present moment would do the grounds lots of good; but that, under present conditions, one cannot hope for.

On Saturday there was no cricket, but on Sunday a good match was witnessed at the Gardens, the visitors being the Maharajah of Patiala's eleven. K. M. Mistry, the crack Parsee left-hand batsman and bowler, owing to an injured foot, was unable to play for Patiala, but the vacancy was ably filled by Prince Hitty of Cooch Behar, who greatly distinguished himself some four seasons back, this brilliant cricketer having headed the batting averages when playing for his father's team. Prince Hitty at present lacks practice, but going in at the fall of the fourth wicket he managed to get a not out 11 the result of twenty minutes batting.

On the other hand, although Calcutta were without Muir and Chisholm—both excellent bowlers—the home team had out a very powerful batting side, but the bowling and fielding of Patiala was too good, especially that of Tarrant, and Calcutta who had the advantage of first use of an excellent wicket, were all out for a paltry total of 124. White, it is true, had hard luck in being given out leg before Boota Ram the wicket keeper appealing, for had there been any suspicion Tarrant would have asked for the Umpire's opinion, but as the Middlesex man remained mum there was a doubt whether White had put his leg in front of the wicket. However, with the exception of White and Lee the rest fared badly. The former was top scorer with 42, while Lee got 35 and both batted in free and attractive style. Tarrant got seven wickets for 49 runs, but his brilliant fielding was the feature of the match, and but for Tarrant Patiala would not have won by four wickets. The Australian born and Middlesex County player was time and again cheered for his brilliant picking up and the catch that dismissed Stafford was a beauty. Truly Tarrant saved no fewer than a dozen boundaries. Patiala knocked up 153 for six wickets, and as the match had been won and lost the Maharajah desired that those batsman who had not been successful should have a second knock at the wickets. It was arranged that each side have half an hour's batting, but the cricket at this stage was, of course, not of a serious character. Calcutta, in 32 minutes, knocked up 75 for three while Tarrant and the Maharajah who both failed in the first innings knocked up 62 between them before His Highness was bowled by Stafford for 30. Both the Maharajah and Tarrant hit splendidly. In the first innings Tara Chand and Kissen Singh hit well for 48 and a not out 33 respectively. Patiala has quite a good team—all the players belonging to the country and there is no doubt that the team's fine showing is greatly due to the interest His Highness and Tarrant have taken in the players.

On Thursday the Maharajah of Nattore's team beat the Rev. E. M. Wheeler's eleven by an innings and 180 runs, Nattore having totalled 469 for six innings declared, while the visitors got 88 and 201. The Maharaj Kumar played for Wheeler's side and contributed a dashingly played 80.

In the return match between the Pilots and the H.M.S. Highflier, the latter who were not at full strength lost by 164 runs. The game was played at the Gardens on Thursday, and the Pilots who had first knock, registered 254 for 4 after which the closure was applied, Ansell 83, V. Cooper 71 (retired), H. Cooper 45 and D. Vine not out 33 were the chief contributors. The flagship were all out for 90 to which Lieutenant Blagrove subscribed a not out 41.

At Ballygunge on Sunday, the officers of the Rifle Brigade in the return match beat the old Suburban Club by 104 runs, the previous game being a win for the B.C.C. The Rifles totalled 302 while Ballygunge were all out for 198. R. O. Bridgeman 87, Captain Sloggett 70, and E. B. Powell 34 for the winners, and R. N. Bocquet 72, and H. E. Skinner 29 for Ballygunge, were the principal run getters. Bridgeman, Sloggett and Bocquet all batted soundly. The Sporting Union at Marcus Square on Sunday had the best of the draw against the second strings of the C.C.C. and B.C.C. combined. The Babes scored 194 for 7 while the Visitors got 155 for 9.

At Dum-Dum on Sunday, the Station team which was composed of nine of the 1st Middlesex beat the Customs by 31 runs. The Home team totalled 204 and the Customs 173. S. E. A. Whiteway for the winners batted attractively for 58.

TOLLYGUNGE CLUB SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL HORSE SHOW.

JUDGES:

CAPT. F. W. BARRETT.
COL. R. C. BROOME, C.I.E.
CAPT. H. N. HOLDEN.
CAPT. V. A. S. KEIGHLEY.
CRAIG MCKERROW, ESQ.
COL. T. G. PEACOCKE.

MAJOR F. C. STRATTON.

THE seventeenth annual Horse Show at the Tollygunge Club was held on the 4th January and was in all departments well up to the average, some of the classes being of better quantity than usual and in greater quantity. Their Majesties and Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Hardinge were present and motored down to the Show Grounds after lunch and in time to witness the jumping competitions. At the conclusion of the proceedings Her Majesty the Queen graciously distributed the prizes. The Harness classes were not better than they usually are though there were one or two very neat horses seen out, the bulk of the prizes being won by Mr. P. B. Lawrie. Mr. Galstaun, Mr. J. A. Johnston and the 8th Hussars were amongst the others. The 8th won the four-in-hand prize —five teams competing. The Hacks were a bigger and a better all round class than the Hunters. Bob, Maxim, Parkhill were the pick on their respective classes amongst the Hunters and a very fine horse of H. H. the Maharajah of Cooch Behar's named Osterly was undoubtedly the best sort in any of the Hack classes. The horse jumping competitions were very good but the ponies were not numerous and were not very good performers! We append the results :—

LAHORE HORSE SHOW.

Monday 1st January 1912.

THE Lahore Horse Show was held on the polo ground on New Year's Day and the Honorary Secretaries, Captains Paterson and Lucas of the 37th Lancers and their committee are to be congratulated on a most successful meeting. Owing to it being found impossible to hold the show in Xmas week both entries and gate receipts were smaller than at the previous meeting but the classes were up to the usual high standard and the arrangements could not have been improved upon. The band of the King's Liverpool Regiment was in attendance and Lieut. Col. Nicholson and the officers of the King's Regiment were "at home" to their friends. Prior to the distribution of prizes by Lady Reid, Brigadier General F. E. Johnson D. S. O., made a short congratulatory speech. Appended is a list of the awards.

FIFTEENTH LAHORE CHAMPIONSHIP DOG SHOW.

THE above Show was held on the 29th and 30th December 1911, when 199 entries were received and 117 dogs were actually benched. The number of dogs, though a few short of last year, owing to the Durbar, were up to the usual Lahore average but the quality of the Exhibits was, if anything, above the usual Lahore form. The Fox Terriers (Smooth and Wire) as usual mustered in the largest numbers and a very encouraging feature was the improvement in the number and quality of the Bull Terriers, Irish Terriers, Airedales and Bulldogs. Cockers were disappointing, save for H. H. The Maharajah of Jhind's latest importation Walhampton Ned. Dachshunds also showed a considerable falling off. The larger dogs were as usual mainly represented by the Maharajah Kumar of Rangpur's Kennels although in the great Dane, Monarch, Mrs. G. M. Lance has a very fine specimen of this breed.

The thanks of the "doggy" public are due to the following ladies and gentlemen who kindly carried out the arduous task of judging :—Mrs. E. Batson James, Mr. A. E. Jenkins, Mr. V. de V. H. Woodley, Mr. J. Miles, Major F. Martin, and Lieutenant-Colonel H. S. Smith, I. M. S., also to the Honorary Secretary of the Show, Mr. W. C. W. Muller,—and his Committee Lieutenant-Colonel L. Impey, Mr. R. Goodall, Mr. L. Medley, and Mr V. de V. H Woodley to whose perfect arrangements they are indebted for an excellent Show. Lady Dane very kindly distributed the prizes on the second day and also otherwise showed her interest in the Show by presenting a very generous Special for the best Pekingese in the Show. The names of the other donors of Specials to whom, and to Lady Dane, the Show Committee take this opportunity of rendering their public thanks for their generous support of the Lahore Show, will be found in the list of Specials below.

The annual dinner and general meeting of the I. K. A., which forms part of the Lahore Show, took place, as usual, in Nedon's Hotel on the 29th December, when a very cheering gathering of about a dozen members assembled to elect the Committees for the ensuing year and to discuss several important agenda put before them by Major H.G. Walton, I. M. S., who owing to the unavoidable absence of the Chairman of the I. K. A., Lieutenant-Colonel Impey, was voted to the chair. The gathering dispersed about mid-night after recording votes of thanks to Mr. R. Goodall, the Honorary Secretary of the I.K.A., for his able conduct of the affairs of the I. K. A., to Mr. L. Medley, for his able conduct of the Indian Kennel Gazette the official organ of the Association ; and to Mr. W. C. W Muller, for kindly undertaking to run the Lahore Show for a second time.

The full list of prize winners in the various classes appeared in our last issue. Appended are the awards among the Specials :—

MOTOR NOTES.

LONDON, 22nd December 1911.

IN a few days the season of Christmas will be again upon us, and even now the revival of the festive feeling is making itself felt. In accordance with time-honoured custom, I take this opportunity of wishing my readers and friends, wherever they may be situated, a Happy New Year, the reward of a diligent year and the outcome of a genial spirit. Although the matter-of-fact person may think New Year greetings are somewhat out of place in notes of this kind yet the New Year comes all the world over, and dull indeed is the motorist who cannot forget the worries of the police trap and the licenses which will shortly be due, and work himself into the irresponsible pleasures of the season. At the time of writing the weather does not bear a great resemblance to the old-time Christmas that in the days of our fore fathers seemed more seasonable, but the beauty of the English climate is that one need never despair, and by the time Christmas Day is on us it may be that the shrill north-easter is piling the snow on our door-steps, and we, sitting expansively within the glow of the fire, thank Heaven we are not as prone thirty miles from anywhere.

FEW owners of cars, even those who drive much after dark, appreciate the importance of keeping the lens mirrors and front glasses of the lamps and headlights clean. A greasy or dingy surface such as follows one or two evenings' driving absorbs a considerable proportion of the light from the flame. By far the best thing to use to clean the lens mirrors is a mixture of denatured alcohol and water, equal parts of each being used. This solution should be applied with a clean, soft rag, so as not to scratch the surfaces.

THE motor-car, by linking up the railway stations outside London with a much wider radius than the horse vehicle could cater for, is doing a great work in helping the business man of London to live farther in the heart of the country than would be possible otherwise. By this means many houses in beautiful residential districts which would be debarred to the man whose place of business is in London, owing to the distance separating them from the nearest railway station, are by the aid of the motor-car brought within a comparatively short distance of it. As an instance of this, a growing number of motor-cars are to be seen in the mornings and nights at local railway stations. At Haywards Heath, for example, it is no uncommon thing to see as many as thirty awaiting the arrival of business men from London. The explanation is that this station serves a wide residential part of rural Sussex, and the residents are recognising more and more the facilities of using the motor-car in their journeys to and from the station.

IN the early days of motoring it would have been superfluous to ask such a question, since the railways of large towns bore ample evidence of the manner in which the engine oil was finally disposed of. But conditions have been improved to such an extent that now a leaking engine is rather the exception. This being the case my American contemporary, Motor, asks what becomes of the oil, since we all know that the supply must be replenished? Some of it is undoubtedly burned in the cylinders, even in an engine from which there is no issuance of blue smoke with the exhaust ; and probably this disposition accounts for the loss of the greater part of it, since the cylinder walls, beside being the most extensive of the engine's bearing surfaces, are also the hottest. But heat is evolved in bearings, even those that are perfectly lubricated, and this heat is disposed of through the oil. Lubrication is more than the simple mechanical matter of keeping two surfaces apart. Another phase of the subject consists in the evaporation of the oil, its change into a gaseous state, and the dissipation of heat in this way. It is to be remembered that friction occurs between the particles of the oil composing the lubricating film in a bearing. This oil film is heated in the same way that water has been heated and caused to boil away by constant stirring, as in certain classic physical experiments.

NOISES are sometimes located in places that one would never suspect. For instance, a pronounced squeak was found due to the opening of several of the joints on the sills of a wooden body after all points of the mechanism had been carefully gone over with an oil can. A knock that was searched for in vain in the engine was finally located at the petrol tank, which was adrift on the frame ; another that suggested loose connecting rod big ends was eventually discovered in the silencer, where a baffle plate had become loose on all its retaining rivets except one at the top, which permitted it to swing backwards and forwards like a pendulum at every impulse of the motor, and thus produce a rhythmical knock usually attributed to a defective engine bearing. A clicking noise that was searched for in vain for several days was discovered in the fan belt, which had a metal fastener that produced a little metallic knock every time it went over the fan pulley.

THE following hint given by my contemporary Motor News as to how to keep dry in really bad weather, on a vehicle unprovided with a hood, is of interest. Presuming that the occupants of the cartare equipped with good mackintosh coats, the only really vulnerable point is when sitting in an inch or two of water on the seat. No mackintosh will resist this for very long, and it is nearly impossible to keep the rain out, for it runs down the back of the car. Therefore, the best plan is to sit forward, and pull each cushion forward an inch or two, so that the water descends to the frame of the seat, and does not reach the cushion. It is not a comfortable way to travel, but it ensures dryness, and anything is preferable to sitting in water and feeling it gradually overcome the resisting forces of the mackintosh. With a suitable waterproof coat, a good rug for each person, and some form of heat protection, such as fishermen wear, it is possible to keep dry for a whole wet day's run in an open car. But it is not pleasant.

AVIATION NOTES.

THE Automobile Society of Great Britain held a meeting last week at the Royal United Service Institution, when Colonel J. E. Capper opened a discussion on "The Military Aeroplane." Major-General Ruck presided. Colonel Capper said as the commander of a force he would only look to the aeroplane to give information by reconnaissance, and he would also require it to be armed with some light form of shooting weapon. It should be capable of travelling long distances and returning rapidly. It should be able to fly in a wind of considerable force and variability. Captain Wood said that the silencing of the aeroplane was an important point. The Japanese were considering the question of mounting a Maxim gun on an aeroplane. Captain Broke-Smith said that from forty to sixty miles might be a suitable radius of action of the present day machine. A fully-loaded machine, with fuel for four or five hours, which would fly at a height of 4,500 feet for an hour, would be the best for military purposes. Mr. S. F. Cody said that the first point in an aeroplane that flew well at a good speed was silence. An aeroplane was worthless if not silent.

MICHELIN

"Semelle" Non-skids

—but there is only one quality.

Quality is the predominant characteristic of our tyres.

We are students in the science of Tyre Culture ; and our efforts are constantly directed towards the improvement of the already high standard we have set.

Quality has gained the leadership for us ; and there is no keener recognition than our own of the fact that only by the continuance of Quality can we hold that leadership.

It is a well-known saying that "imitation is the sincerest form of flattery," and the fact that many of our competitors have tried to copy our "Semelle" non-skid is a conclusive proof that the principles are right. It is, however, just that extra touch of supreme quality which distinguishes our "Semelle" from the commonality.

If you have not already tried one, get your stockist to supply you with a Michelin "Semelle." It is the finest non-skid on the market.

ACTIVE preparations are in hand at the Grand Palais, Paris, in connection with the Salon de Locomotion Aerienne, which was opened on the 16th instant. A feature of the exhibition will be the machines which have proved so successful in the recent French military competitions. Apart from these, however, there will be a comprehensive display of most of the other types with which any notable results have been obtained. The aero engine and accessory sections will also be full of interest.

LIEUTENANT R. T. SNOWDEN-SMITH, Army Service Corps, whilst flying in a Farman biplane at Aldershot last week, met with an accident. When at a height of about 800 feet the machine got out of control and finally dashed into a high hedge, with the lieutenant, who had been thrown out of his seat clinging to the upper plane. He escaped with a severe shaking.

MR. JAMES VALENTINE passed the necessary tests last week for the Royal Aero Club's special certificate. The course selected by the official observers was from Salisbury Plain to Laffans Plain, Aldershot, and back—approximately 103 miles. Mr. Valentine started on one of the new Bristol military-type monoplanes, and quickly passed out of view at a great altitude. The outward journey occupied forty-five minutes, and the return trip nine minutes longer. For the altitude and gliding tests Mr. Valentine made a separate flight, ascending to, approximately, 2,000 feet from which height he planed down to earth, alighting on the designated spot. Mr. Cody also made the qualifying flight for the special certificate a few days previous to Mr. Valentine's attempt.

REPLYING to a deputation of aeroplane and engine manufacturers and also the representatives of the Aeronautical Society, who waited on Tuesday at the House of Commons on Colonel Seely, the Under-Secretary for War said the specifications for the military aeroplane competition would be issued shortly, and the tests would take place in about six months. He said the main prize would be open to the world, but he did not say that there would not be other prizes for the encouragement of British manufacturers. Machines supplied to the War Office must be manufactured in Great Britain.

THE brothers Wright are reported to have purchased 1,000 acres of land in North Carolina with the object of prosecuting experiments with gliders and aeroplanes in privacy next spring. The tract chosen is near the seashore, and consists of long stretches of undulating sand, with big dunes, very useful for launching gliders at frequent intervals.

MUCH interest was aroused by speeches made by Prince Louis of Battenberg and Colonel Seely, Under-Secretary for War, on the subject of aerial navigation for purposes of war, at the resumed discussion on "The Military Aeroplane," at the Royal United Service Institution on Monday. Among those on the platform in addition to Prince Louis of Battenberg, Colonel Seely, and Major-General Ruck who presided, were Major-General Sir Arthur Paget and Major-General Sir Charles Hadden, Master-General of Ordnance. Prince Louis laid stress on the necessity of equipping the Navy with an auxiliary fleet of aeroplanes, or hydro-aeroplanes, as much at home on the water as on land. Colonel Seely made it clear that, in the opinion of the Government, the time had now arrived when we would wait no longer for further development. The need for aeroplanes as an adjunct to military warfare had recently been demonstrated. The army possessing the larger number would sweep the skies of its rival and secure an immeasurable advantage.

AT the recent congress of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale in Rome it was decided that the aeronautical industry is not sufficiently advanced to warrant the making of a rule in connection with the Gordon-Bennett aeroplane trophy contest that competing machines should, as far as possible, be constructed in the country which they represent. It was decided that the rules for next year's competition should be the same as for this year, except that the distance to be flown is to be 125 miles, and that the course shall not be less than 3½ miles long and 328 feet wide, and have no sharp turnings.

IT is interesting to learn that English aeroplanes are being recognised abroad as among the best in this direction. In Australia, Mr. Hart, the first Antipodean to take a brevet on his native soil, is flying a Bristol biplane. Lieutenant Harford, of the Indian Army, who recently learned to fly at the Bristol School at Brooklands, has purchased one of these machines, and will shortly be flying it in India. In South Africa, Mr. John Weston is using the same type of machine, and in Sweden Lieutenant Carl Dahlbeck, of the Swedish Navy, is achieving fame on his recently purchased Bristol mount.

The Horse.

THE MOUTHING OF COLTS

THE fundamental requirement in breaking young horses, either to saddle or harness, is that they should be carefully mouthed, this consideration practically taking precedence over everything else in the process of their education, says a writer in an English publication. A good, easy mouth constitutes, so to speak, the basis of the good manners which a properly broken and trained horse should possess, while it is also the foundation upon which its complete obedience to the bridle primarily rests, hence this matter is one to which one cannot devote too close attention. An important principle to bear in mind in this connection is, that it takes time to mouth a colt thoroughly. The process does not admit of being hurried, nor can it be forced. It is only by degrees that young horses can be accustomed to the action of the bit and learn to respond to it readily and freely. Thus the lessons must be progressive in their nature, and too much must not be expected of them all at once. To begin with, it is merely necessary to get hold of the bit. Not until this has been accomplished and its original resentment against the latter's presence in its mouth has been completely overcome is it possible to make any further real progress in mouthing it. The next stage is to teach it to go properly into the bridle, and finally the colt must be taught to bend nicely to the bit in response to its pressure. Not, of course, that it is possible to draw any definite line of demarcation between these successive stages, for naturally they imperceptibly merge into one another, so that one cannot say exactly when the one ends and the next begins; but such, roughly speaking, are the different phases occurring in the mouthing process—at any rate, it is upon this principle that the latter should be conducted.

The use of a bit suitable for the purpose is, needless to say, of the utmost importance. It must be perfectly mild in its effect, and easy and comfortable for the animal's mouth, so as not to hurt or irritate the latter. The bit which fully answers these requirements is a plain snaffle, with a thick mouthpiece to it, and in my experience this is not alone the best, but actually the only kind really suited with which to mouth a colt. Certainly the most satisfactory results are got with it. Of course, for the earliest lessons, a player, or mouthing bit, with keys attached to its mouthpiece, may suitably be used. This is a snaffle pattern bit, so that its use involves no deviation from the principle enunciated regarding the selection of a bit for mouthing purposes. Raw, young horses take very kindly to such a mouthing bit, and the keys on it incite them to champ the mouthpiece, the mouth thereby being kept fresh, while they are also induced to take hold of the bit all the more readily, in consequence of which the object aimed at in the first stage of the mouthing process is specially promoted. The only objection to urge against a player bit, as used for bitting young colts, is that it is rather clumsy; hence, while useful for the preliminary mouthing lessons, it is not well adapted for the subsequent stages when they are ridden or driven in harness. Consequently, as soon as the colt has got nicely used to the bit and the foundations of a good mouth have, so to speak, been laid, the player bit should be dispensed with, an ordinary plain snaffle being then substituted. Fancy bits, such as those with india-rubber mouthpieces, for instance, are no good for mouthing purposes. A horse, young or old, will never take hold of an india-rubber bit as freely as of a metal one.

Many breakers are partial to giving colts their early mouthing lessons by lungeing them, with the head reined back by means of side-reins, buckled to a roller or surcingle. Nothing really effectual is, however, accomplished in this manner, for the lungeing rein is of practically no value in helping to form a raw young horse's mouth. If it is desired to do the preliminary mouthing on foot, the only really suitable method is to drive the colt in long reins. These give the breaker more complete control over the animal and allow him to bring and keep it up to the bit, as well as to act upon its mouth very efficiently, so that it can be driven right and left, as required. The lungeing rein, on the other hand, confers none of these advantages. The long reins are unquestionably of very valuable assistance in the early stages of breaking and mouthing, though far from being indispensable. There is no real necessity to commence the mouthing lessons on foot; the thing can be quite as effectually done from the first by straight away riding the colt or driving it in harness. In fact, I have in my experience found this plan to be the most satisfactory, all preliminary mouthing on foot, by means of side-reins, lunge, or long reins being dispensed with. Mounted on the animal's back or seated on the box seat of a trap, the breaker is able to control the colt much more efficiently and to act in a more delicate and certain fashion upon its mouth than he can possibly do when on foot. So why not begin in this way at once, instead of attempting to perform the early mouthing by other, less efficient means? The only preliminary measure which it is desirable to carry out when mouthing on foot is dispensed with is to accustom the young horse to the presence and feel of the bit in its mouth by letting it wear the bridle for two or three hours daily for about three days while it is standing in its stall or box.

Finally, a word of warning may be said against the practice of reining back colts tightly with side-reins, which is too commonly adopted, with a view to mouthing them. This cannot be too severely condemned, for, far from having a beneficial effect upon the mouth, such tight reining back in purely mechanical fashion tends to spoil it, and is responsible for many a colt becoming hard-mouthed.

HOW TO TELL ANECDOTES.—Never begin an anecdote by saying—"I heard a good one the other day." It is very bad manners. It shows a lack of consideration for others. It puts your auditors in a very bad hole. You kill all chance of affording them any amusement. It makes them nervous and apprehensive. The fear the worst. They feel as though they simply have to call up a laugh from the vasty deep, and they gird up their loins, as it were, for the effort. Most people cannot possibly laugh when they feel that they must. It is easier to laugh when you feel that you mustn't. The laugh is an involuntary thing. It is spontaneous. It bloweth where it listeth. When you tell a fellow you heard a good one, he makes up his mind to laugh or bust. He is on the alert for the proper moment, as runners strain to leap at the crack of the pistol. Having all this on his mind it is impossible to get the point, and enjoyment is out of the question. Do not say you "nearly died laughing" either at the beginning or the end of your anecdote. It is a reflection on your friend's powers of discrimination. Don't tell your friend a joke is funny. Don't say—"Very good, I thought!" If you relate an anecdote which is followed up by silence the only decent thing you can do, if your victim be a man, is to pull out a good cigar. If a lady, lean impressively forward, and say—"How nice you are looking!" Or, if the lights are low and all things propitious, you might whisper softly in her ear—"Votes for Women."—"Puck."

SINGLE HORNED NEPALESE RAMS.

For more than half a century the British Museum has possessed a couple of skulls of Nepalese domesticated rams remarkable for the circumstance that the horns which rise vertically from the forehead, with a pronounced backward sweep, and are so closely approximated that they look at first sight as though they formed but a single horn with a split summit. Closer examination shows, however, that the two horns, which are deep black in colour, are quite complete, and have their adjacent surfaces perfectly separate although in close contact.

For a long time these two skulls, which were presented in the 'forties by the well-known Indian naturalist and civilian Brian Hodgson, appear to have remained the only evidence in England of such a peculiar type of horn-conformation. But when his Majesty King George returned from his first Indian tour (undertaken when Prince of Wales) he brought with him from Nepal a couple of live rams presenting the same remarkable peculiarity. These rams were presented to the Zoological Society of London, in whose menagerie one of them lived till 1908, when its skin was set up and placed on exhibition in the Natural History branch of the British Museum. The other was transferred to the Duke of Bedford's park at Woburn, where attempts were made to breed from English ewes rams showing the same peculiar type of horns, but without success. This ram has likewise gone the way of all flesh, and is now represented only by its skull and horns.

The mounted ram in the British Museum carries a long and shaggy coat, with the head, neck, and legs black, and the remainder of the body white. In its relatively short tail, small ears, and Roman nose, it presents a remarkable resemblance to the so-called Indian fighting ram, which is, of course, a native of Tibet, where it is known as the barwal breed, the horns, too, were it not for their upright direction, close approximation, and black colour, are likewise very similar to those of the barwal, which is normally a white sheep, although black individuals are sometimes met with. And in such black individuals, and probably also in black-headed ones, the horns would very likely participate in the sable hue.

In the guide to the Domesticated Animals in the Natural History branch of the British Museum it is stated that these unicorn rams, as they are there called, represent a distinct breed, of which the ewes are hornless; the latter piece of information being supplied from Nepal. It has, however, been recently suggested that the unicorn character is a "fake," due to the horns of young rams being squeezed together and kept tightly bandaged till they are full grown; and there seems very great probability that this is really the true explanation. For it is a very remarkable fact that Brian Hodgson, who, as we have seen, presented the original skulls to the British Museum, and who subsequently wrote what was evidently intended to be an exhaustive article on the tame sheep of Tibet and Nepal, makes no mention of a unicorn breed. Neither is there any reference to such a breed in a series of long articles on domesticated sheep published by the German Naturalist Fitzinger in the 'fifties and early 'sixties at Vienna; nor in fact in any of the older natural histories or treatises on domesticated animal to which we have had the opportunity of referring.

But although the probability of the fake theory being the true explanation is great yet it cannot be regarded as absolutely certain, and we therefore take occasion to ask such of our readers as may have practical acquaintance with Nepal if they can throw further light on the subject. Not improbably, however, if the fake theory be true, the Nepalese will be very loth to reveal the secret.

On the assumption that the unicorn character of these rams is due to their horns being tightly bandaged together from an early age, the breed from which they are taken would seem to be the barwal; black-headed individuals being selected as the subject of experiment.

In conclusion, we may take the opportunity of mentioning that a complete skull and skin, in a condition fit for mounting of the black-faced hunia ram of Tibet—that is to say, the domesticated breed used for carrying salt and borax across the passes—would be welcomed at the Natural History branch of the British Museum.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The racing diary of the past week in Calcutta is again a heavy one, as we have had a day's steeplechasing, the concluding one of the Tollygunge Meeting, and the two first days of the Calcutta Second Meeting on Saturday and Tuesday last. Calcutta is fast beginning to empty herself of the big crowds of visitors which His Majesty's visit and the 'Xmas week attracted and by the end of next week after the Fourth Extra the racing population will be still further diminished. A big contingent goes up to Lucknow and will not return and with them will, of course, go a certain percentage of the horses now racing here. But even so we shall probably find that there will still be a fairly good muster to carry on the war at the remaining Extra Meetings in Calcutta. Most of the big stables not going to Lucknow will be off westward for Bombay after next Saturday's racing. Sir Apear Apear, Mr. Galstaun, Mr. Craig McKerrow, Mr. Garda, H. H. the Kour Sahib of Patiala, Mr. Kelso, the Chief of Manavadar, and several other owners of lesser degree have all horses engaged at the Western meeting and most of them will be present in person. Mr. Burjorjee, H.H. the Maharajah of Cooch Behar, Major Stratton, Mr. T. Scott, Mr. J. D. Scott, some of H.H. the Kour Sahib of Patiala's, Mr. E. J. Marshall, Mr. Walmsley, etc., are all bound for Lucknow and so the ranks will be visibly thinned during the next fortnight. Some of the owners and jockeys may return after Lucknow, but the majority go on to Bombay for the big meeting and from thence home. Wootton, Saxby, Jelliss, Whalley, Bland, Bullock, Bowley, all go home after Bombay.

The Tollygunge Steeplechases concluded on Thursday last with a slightly better day's racing than most people expected, but the knell of cross-country racing in India is tolling unless some drastic reforms are undertaken. Calcutta is the sole hope of salvation, and if things can be placed upon a more satisfactory footing here, the result will react upon all India. The first thing is to decrease the risks of breaking horses down which are at present the principal bugbear and to do this the Tollygunge course will either have to be abandoned, or the galloping surface altered from what it is at the present moment. The casualty list this year is a very heavy one and two more horses broke down on Thursday. Suffragette and Woodlark, the latter winning but coming back to the paddock lame all round. He lamed himself schooling, but was patched up sufficiently to be started last Thursday. The next thing to be done is to acquire a chase course in Calcutta and the next, and the most important of all, is to have more racing and more money for jumpers to run for. Until these things are done there is no possible hope for steeplechasing in India and we shall, sooner or later, be compelled to put up the shutters and admit the sorrowful fact that a fine sport has died from absolute inanition. Of the six steeplechases catalogued for the last day of Tollygunge one degenerated into a walk-over and in two others very poor fields went out. Proceedings opened with the Moderate Handicap Steeplechase for which, in a field of four, Durbar and Tall Boy were both backed and Suffragette was better supported than the eventual winner, Daisy Priam, who started at sixes and twos for a place. The victory of Mr. Cockell's mare was in no small measure due to the excellent jockeyship of Mr. H. V. Scott of the Rifle Brigade, who rode her a beautiful race and won a neck from Tall Boy, and this in spite of his having broken a stirrup-leather five fences from home as Daisy Priam landed over the open ditch. Mr. Scott was loudly cheered as he returned to the paddock in spite of most people having dropped their money.

The Ghost walked over for the Military Handicap Steeplechase for which five had accepted over night, and only four out of the six acceptors went for the Suburban Plate which followed it. Of these Maisonette was made a strong favourite and was backed at 9 to 4 and 2 to 1 on the place. Woodlark was at 5 to 2 and 6 to 4 on. Maisonette ran a better mare than she did on the previous Saturday, but she does not act on hard ground and Woodlark had her well beaten a good bit before the last fence. The winner is owned by Major H. N. Holden, whose luck at this course is proverbial, and was ridden very nicely by Captain Charrington.

The "big" event on the card was the 3 miles Tollygunge Plate, a race value Rs. 5,000 to the winner with Rs. 2,000 and Rs. 1,000 in place money. Of the seven left in over night Coal and Maisonette were both struck out and Realm, Proprietor, True Love and Idle were all backed—fair betting on such an event as this. Realm carried most of the money and 7 to 4 was the best price obtainable about him at the finish, Mr. Scott's Proprietor, the Tally Ho Plate winner, being next choice and Idle was supported by a staunch few. The feature of the race was the great bid for victory which Proprietor made and he was only beaten in a desperately close finish by three-quarters of a length. Realm was giving him a lot of weight, 2st. 11lb., and proved himself yet once again a veritable Trojan. This gallant old horse has shown a wonderful return to form this season, as he started by winning over hurdles in Poona the Grand Annual; he then came on to Calcutta and won our Grand Annual; he was very unlucky to miss the Indian Grand National and he has now won the second most important steeplechase in India, the Tollygunge Plate. To carry 12st. 8lb. over 3 miles of hard going and stiff obstacles is no mean achievement. The hero of the Australian and Sydney Cups of 1907 and of the V.R.C. Grand National Hurdle Race and the Australian Hurdle Race of 1906 seems to have taken on a new lease of life. He was perfectly sound after the race and his old legs scarred all over with the marks of the firing-iron, seem to have been themselves turned into iron as he has shown no signs of even going tender after any of his races. Northmore rode the horse a very nice race and was naturally on better terms with him than when he rode him in the National, for prior to that race Realm had not jumped any of the Tollygunge fences. The horse fenced beautifully on Thursday. True Love, the National winner, was obviously feeling the race of the previous Saturday, as she went anyhow and took a good many liberties with the fences, being well beaten after about two miles and a half of it. She ran quite a different mare to what she did in the National.

The Second Pony Steeplechase was somewhat of a fiasco. There were five runners and of these Late Night went the wrong course, Hayhoe mistaking one of the horse fences in the straight for the pony obstacle alongside it. Ormley fell badly and Norah would not have the ditch at all and dislodged her jockey. This left Sea Lad with nothing to beat, as Bandy Leg could never make him gallop and Mr. J. D. Scott's pony won by twelve lengths hard held. Late Night was taken back and jumped the course safely thereby securing third money. The stewards had Hayhoe up and cautioned him to be more careful in future. The Minor Handicap Steeplechase was also a farce, as out of the three that ran Alton stopped at the water and shot his jockey over his head into the middle of the "brook!" Marconi and his stable companion Stockings then went round together, the former winning easily at the finish. The flat race, the Kiosk Plate, brought matters to a close and of the five that ran Bird of Freedom and King's Spear were very well backed, the former winning, well ridden by Whalley, by three-quarters of a length. Many people, ourselves amongst the number, thought Bird of Freedom unlucky not to get there. This brought the Tollygunge Meeting, 1912, to a close and it now remains to be seen what the future is to be: whether we are to make an attempt to go on as we are now with miserable entries and poor racing year after year, or whether reform is to be tackled on far-reaching lines and a comprehensive scheme formulated for putting this tottering house in order. At present the foundations are very unstable and things cannot in our view continue unless something in the way of a prop and stay is devised to avert the almost inevitable downfall. Details appear elsewhere.

On Saturday last the venue of sport changed back once again to Calcutta and although the crowd was a considerably diminished one by comparison with the huge assemblies of the week of the Royal Visit, there was still a goodly gathering and the usual crowd of the regulars. The fielders report that there was probably more money moving in the ring than over any day this season and with good fields and in almost every case very open issues this is not surprising. It was a very good card in spite of there only being two races of any importance in it, the Macpherson Cup (Rs. 7,500), the longest and the second oldest event in the Calcutta programmes, and the Chowringhee Plate (Rs. 5,000), one of the important sprint races of these meetings. The rest were small, Rs. 1,500 and Rs. 2,000 races, two of them being pony events. There were only six races and with the evenings already appreciably lengthening out a start at the comfortable hour of 2-45 P.M. was possible. Proceedings opened with the 5 furlong Scurry Handicap, for which three were well backed, namely, The Plum who started favourite, The Point and Dulcimer, Waiata and Circus Girl also being enquired for but not seriously. The Plum was taken out to the front at once and won all the way, Hopscotch, who ran a very good pony, finishing three lengths behind her but never looking dangerous. Hopscotch was giving Mr. Burjorjee's mare a stone. It was an interesting gallop in view of the coming events at Lucknow and The Plum will now certainly have to be taken into account when we are reckoning up the chances of the Civil Service Cup.

A good big field also went for the New Plate, fourteen of the nineteen acceptors being stripped for it. The absentees were Hughie, Sea Lad, Up Guards, Manveron and Beryl. Mr. Garda was well represented in Manveron's absence by Regalia, late Ask Mamma, who in our idea is probably not so very much superior to the English mare by Manveron. Regalia was a strong favourite all the way through and her easy win showed that her selection was amply justified, for Whalley never had to move on her. For the January Plate, for which thirteen went out, Sperry, in spite of the 9st. 12lb., was backed to win it principally because F. Wootton had the mount, but personally we do not like light framed horses under these crushing imposts and Sperry never looked dangerous, Bombastic the second favourite fighting out a desperate finish with that consistent little mare Chin Chin, who was sent out to the front the moment the gate went up and made all the running. She had a lot of weight and asking her to carry it all the way like this was not, in our opinion, the easiest path to victory. We think she was unlucky not to have won. Bird of Freedom in spite of the hard race she had on the previous Thursday ran a very close third and yet she has the reputation of being very jady.

The Macpherson Cup came next and of those left in Vavasor and John Wesley were the only two struck out, the former having 9st. 13lb. in the handicap and the distance being thought a bit beyond the latter's tether. There was very little betting on this race before operations opened on the course but prior to racing starting Brogue was backed at threes and evens. She did not, however, long remain at anything like this price and the money poured into the ring for her, the owner according her a full measure of his support. She touched 6 to 4 on, but money coming for Koonowla shortly before the start, she receded to 5 to 4 on. Black Douglas was also backed, but we may say that all through the piece the betting was about 10 to 1 bar three and at the finish 12 to 1 bar three. In our idea there was never much doubt as to what the result would be, for on the King-Emperor's Cup form Brogue stood out over a longer distance better suited to so genuine a stayer. Koonowla was beaten by his own stable companion Five Crown, from whom he was getting 10lb., but neither of them could make any impression on Brogue who taking command at the home turn came right away, winning comfortably in F. Wootton's skilled hands. The time was very good and was level with the record put up by Bantock in 1908 when that horse won it with 8st. 7lbs. or 9lbs. less than the impost that Brogue carried. The record for the Doncaster St. Leger—the Macpherson Cup being run over the same distance—is 3mins. 4secs. put up by Swynford in 1910.

The Chowringhee Plate followed next and was a bad race for backers, as two much-fancied ones went down in Chobham and Victo. They were both about level in the market but at the finish Chobham had a slight call of Mr. McKerrow's mare and started at 6 to 4, the mare's prices being 2 to 1. There was hardly anything else backed for money and the ultimate winner, Watch Tower, stood at tens. Mr. Thaddeus' horse was handicapped at 6st. 12lb. but carried 7st. 1lb., P. O'Neil riding him 3lb. overweight. The race was in our opinion false run. There was a poor start, Bull's Run being left, and the rest got way in straggling order, Victo one of the slowest and she never got to her horses until they had gone half a mile: but then she made up her ground fast. Watch Tower got a big break on his field at the start, was never headed and won easily by two and a half lengths. The time, 1min. 27⅗secs., was good but was slower by a full second than Soultline's in the December Plate last season.

The last race was the 1½ mile Prinsep Plate and Wayward and Wild and Sanhedrin were both well supported. Wayward and Wild ran fourth and Sanhedrin won after a great set-to with Mayfly IV and Royal Scotland, a short head and a neck being the judge's verdict. Details appear elsewhere.

Tuesday's racing was very good taking it all round and in almost every instance good big fields went to the post. The mid week crowd at the Calcutta Second Meeting is never very big as it happens after the 'Xmas holidays are over and the busy population of Calcutta is once again hard at work. There was a very full card for an off-day, the division of the St. George's Plate giving us an extra race. The original entry was far too big to make it possible for this race to be run in one event on our bad five furlong course. Space does not permit us to comment at any length upon Tuesday's proceedings and we must therefore confine ourselves to a very short review of the card. Backers did not have all the luck by any means and the day opened with the defeat of Sea Lad, who went out a hot favourite for the pony hurdle race, the winner turning up in Glory, who was practically in front all the way. Sea Lad had a big weight and was made to carry it all the way. They backed Cherry Hackle and Bomb for the Division II. of the St. George's Plate and the former scored very comfortably in F. Wootton's hands. Most people, however, went astray over the next race for which The Loaf was made favourite, but it was the other one from Mumford's stable that won, the hitherto unreliable Devil's Dyke. The horse wore a hood and blinkers and ran quite straight. A lot of money was done in over Wellfield, who was beaten a head. The Clyde Plate also was not a race that did much good to the followers of the favourites, as both Mauveron and Winnie R. went down and the 6 to 1 chance Beryl won all the way. The stable had a good race we are glad to hear and averaged their money at remunerative odds.

The big race of the day was the Prince of Wales' Plate, a mile handicap, and when Brogue was found to be amongst the missing and Tangaroa was left in to carry Mr. Galstaun's jacket a lot of money went in to him. Her connections, however, stood very staunchly to Victo and the mare ended up favourite on the ring at 5 to 2, Tangaroa 7 to 2. Mr. Galstaun's game horse ran a very fine race but weight told its inevitable tale and the 13lb. he was asked to give Victo effectually anchored him. We congratulate Mr. Craig McKerrow upon this second important victory of his nice mare and we shall not be greatly surprised to see her very prominently on the front rank next season.

The card concluded with the Division I. of the St. George's Plate for which Macann was well backed but got shut in and never got through, Chin Chin winning all the way and the Kidderpore Plate for which The Loaf started at 6 to 4 and won easily, beating Royal Scotland without any great trouble.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—With the return of holiday makers we are settling down more to the real thing now, and on the occasion of the Fifth Extra on Saturday there was a large attendance in both enclosures. The books find plenty of money and, though at one time they were distinctly to the bad, the last race set them right. Our local owners, trainers and jockeys are back and prospects for the season are distinctly good.

This week the new ponies up to 14 hands were sent over an extra furlong, and in both divisions of the race the public got home by making the winner favourite. One quite new to us in Jais was the good thing in the first, good money also coming for Jamal Beg, who was the stable fancy in preference to last week's winner, Mijbas. Evening News carried some confidence, but came down with McGlone early in the race. Hidayet Pasha made the pace for a time from Jamal Beg, but at the three furlongs Jais was in front and never left the issue in doubt. Taki Khan came late into a place, and should be watched.

Despite his failure to stay a furlong less previously, Agah Pasha was again favourite in his division from another good looking one in Mafush. This was about as easy a win as the former, Agah Pasha soon being in front and winning well in hand. Mafush was next to Moyaid in a place, the former being sticky in the early part, Ya Nasib wanting a gallop or two.

Amongst big horses, the five-furlong sprint was poor, a field of only four going out. Lanceolar last year showed quite good form, so, with nothing of any class to beat and none being really ready, he was hot favourite from Wassail and Duke of Lancaster. Torzal showed the way for a couple of furlongs, then Lanceolar on the rails went away. Wassail came well from the three furlongs and eventually staved off Duke of Lancaster, but could make no impression on Lanceolar.

The mile saw six starters, and with the form he recently showed in Calcutta, Forfeit was always in prime demand, about a point shorter than Gallileo. Huka was at 5's with Bright Metal, a nibble at Lancasterite and none for Matiyela. To cut the story of the race short, Forfeit led all the way and won with just a nice bit in hand. Lancasterite was his nearest attendant right up to round the home turn, where Bright Metal drew up outside and made a bit of a race of it with the favourite. Weight told on Gallileo, and Huka's staying days are over.

A seven-furlong race for Arabs, the Mahim Plate, was split up, and of the classier lot Young Majub was a very solid favourite all through from Ashroff and Singer. St. Anthony set a solid pace for five furlongs, Fairplay, Young Majub and Lama being in fairly close attendance. At the beginning of the bend Lama went to the front and Young Majub came up handily, but at the distance it was seen that the latter was going much the easier and he came away comfortably. Fairplay passed St. Anthony for a place with Ashroff and Singer next to these.

It was in the second division of this race that the bad upset occurred, Dilkhush being again the medium of a gamble, Mutrood and Soomsam next in the odds from Pendil. Shihab and Makeb were at first prominent, but could not stay, Soomsam coming up between them as they faced for home. He had them well beaten and seemed to be a certain winner when Burg came with a run on the outside and, wearing him down, won on the post by a head.

In the mile there was another great finish, Money Gold being an even money favourite from Well Done and Regent in a field of nine. Harry Johnson, then Mysore made the running from

I hear an enquiry took place into the running of Agah Pasha.

STEADY progress has been made with the Open Hockey Tournament in the Stadium of the Old Bombay Exhibition, till now we have reached the semi-finals. In the earlier matches there were, of course, some easy wins, but this week has seen some close things, closer than scores would suggest. For instance, there was by no means a three-goal difference between the Cheshires and B. V. R. The former won mainly through superior ability to drive home an attack in the circle, the losers throwing away a great many chances in the opening portions of each half. There was also of better understanding amongst the winners, who have played so much together.

The Pioneers have got through after a couple of hard fights, but the Bombay Gymkhana lost at their first outing to the 14th Hussars, after putting up a stubborn show, which lacked combination generally.

THE fifth paperchase of the Calcutta season was held on Friday last, the meet being just beyond the Old Man's Crossing near the Dakuria Road. The fog caused some delay in starting, but they were eventually got away in the Horse Chase. Mr. Murray on Desmond led most of the way and looked like winning, but he unfortunately ran off the paper when nearing home and Mr. Vicary, who had been well up all the way, took command and came in a winner by three lengths from Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6. Mr. Murray came along when he had realised his mistake and had bad luck in just missing a place among the first six. Miss Follitt was going well when her mount fell at one of the walls, but we are happy to say the lady escaped without hurt. The official order was :—

1. Mr. Vicary on Chieftain.
2. Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6.
3. Mr. Winckworth on Kim.
4. Mr. Halliday on Diamond.
5. Mr. Mackay on a bay.
6. Mr. T. Marshall on Loyalty, followed closely by Mr. Murray, Mr. Ritchie, Mr. Morris, Major Holden, Mr. Hilliard, Captain Ryves, Miss Binning, Mr. Savage, Mr. Knox, Mr. Wigham, Mr. G. Harvey, Mrs. Wanklyn, Mr. Studd and Mr. Steele Perkins. Ten started in the Pony Chase and Minnie made all the running, but near the finish Mr. Deakin came through on Scarboro and won by four lengths. Mr. Tanner third. The order was :—

1. Mr. Deakin on Scarboro.
2. Mr. McLean on Minnie.
3. Mr. Tanner on Emerald.
4. Mr. Vicary on a chestnut.
5. Mr. Chancellor on H. E.
6. Mr. Field on Paul.

The meet was well attended and amongst those out we noticed :—Mrs. Wanklyn on Grey Harold, Miss Binning on Eileen, Mrs. P. B. Walker, Miss Follitt, Mr. Vicary on Chieftain, Mr. Halliday on Diamond, Mr. Mackay on a bay, Mr. Wigham on a bay, Mr. Tibet Hilliard on Hermit, Mr. Montgomery on a chestnut, Mr. A. K. Gladstone on Joanna, Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6, Mr. McLean on Minnie, Mr. Winckworth on Kim, Mr. Murray on Desmond, Mr. Chancellor on H. E., Mr. Hayward on a brown, Mr. Heath on Actress, Mr. Morshead on Punch, Major Thornton on a chestnut, Mr. T. Marshall on Loyalty, Mr. Deakin on Scarboro, Mr. Perkins on a bay, Captain Ryves on Satire, Mr. Harvey on Fortune, Mr. Knox on List, Mr. Hodson on Tara, Mr. Savage on a bay, Mr. Field on Paul, Mr. Ritchie on a bay, Mr. Morris on Bluebell, Major Holden on Windsor, Mr. Tanner on Emerald, Mr. P. B. Walker on a chestnut, and several others. We are glad to learn that Mr. Evers is making a good recovery from his accident at Tollygunge and we hear that he will probably be riding again in to-morrow's chase.

THE Bombay Inter-Regimental Poin-to-Point Race was held on the 8th instant and it is hoped that this event inaugurated this year will become an annual sporting fixture in the Western capital. The race was for a Cup, for teams of four from any regiment stationed at Bombay, Santa Cruz or Deolali. The first man home scored the same number of marks as there were starters, the second one less and so on. Cup to go to the team scoring the greatest number of marks. The course, which comprised a variety of obstacles, started near the Bombay Jackal Club at Santa Cruz and went north for half a mile, then right handed till it swept round the north edge of the Kaleena Tank. Thirty-six competitors faced the starter, Colonel Lempriere, who sent them away well together. At the finish Mr. Max Rummel (1st Team, Bombay Light Horse) was first, Mr. Kirke Smith of the same team second, Mr. Barney (Royal Warwicks) third and Mr. Knight Bruce, also of the Warwicks, fourth. These were followed by the 26th Light Cavalry team who finished in a body, and thus won. Results :—

1.	1st team, 26th (K. G. O.) Light Cavalry ...	122
2.	The Royal Warwickshire Regiment ...	120
3.	1st team, 104th Wellesley's Rifles ...	87
4.	1st team, Bombay Light Horse ...	83
5.	7th (Princess Royal's) Dragoon Guards...	59
6.	2nd team, 26th (K. G. O.) Light Cavalry	56
	2nd team, 104th Wellesley's Rifles ...	56
8.	2nd team, Bombay Light Horse ...	37
9.	"Y" Battery, Royal Horse Artillery ...	36

The Cup was then presented to the winners by Mrs. Moore and the assembly adjourned to a chota hazri given by the Bombay Jackal Club.

CALM and collected, McVea received the verdict over Langford at the Rushcutter's Bay Stadium on Boxing Day. They went the full 20 rounds, and the decision of the referee (Snowy Baker), was in favour of McVea. The vast crowd were clearly delighted with the performances of both men and cheered them to the echo. On the other hand they expressed the utmost dissatisfaction with the verdict and hooted the announcement that McVea was the winner on points. For the first four rounds both blacks seemed intent, and were anxious to secure the knock-out, but they then realized that it was almost certain to go the full length of the journey. There was a fine variety about Langford's punches, which came from all points, and he forced the pace throughout.

It was on his curious left hook to the head that the victor placed most reliance, and it was virtually this punch which determined the issue. It was varied with short rights to the head, and the right upper cut. The weather was warm, with the sun shining, and unclouded. The gates of the Stadium were opened at 6 A.M., when a number of men were waiting to secure the pick of the lower-priced seats. By 9 o'clock about 10,000 persons were present, and when the fight began, at 10 o'clock, the Stadium held about 20,000 spectators. Although McVea had been steadily in favour, public opinion at the last moment veered round to Langford, and just before the fight started 6 to 4 on was offered about "Boston Tar Baby."

Langford was handicapped in one matter. The articles had called for a clean break and the referee construed this as meaning that infighting was not to be allowed and appeared to so construe it in a very literal spirit, for he repeatedly checked Langford and called upon the men to break whenever the Boston man appeared likely to do the Californian severe damage at close quarters. McVea was not slow in grasping the situation either. He saw where his chance lay and he did not mean to neglect it. For whenever Langford had succeeded in forcing his way or else ducking past the bigger fellow's left McVea dropped his arms and blocking such body blows as were aimed at him to the best of his ability would fall promptly into a clinch. Langford tried hard to do things at times but was always being checked and it is greatly to his credit that he refrained so entirely from giving any signs of exasperation.

McVea's weight was given at 14st. 2lb., and Langford's at 12st. 2lb. says the Adelaide Observer. Jim Barry, the American heavy-weight, who arrived by the Moana, was introduced, and challengedthe winner. Langfordled first, but McVea moved out of range and hooked his left to the jaw. Some seconds later Langford scored with a straight left on McVea's face. McVea was particularly careful about Langford's right after he had received it on the upper jaw in the first round. In the next couple of rounds McVea repeatedly got his left on to Langford's face. Langford landed an occasional blow to the body, and once when McVea doubled up, he drove his right over to the jaw. Later Langford received a heavy right on the jaw. Before the little man could recover McVea got in the right, followed with a heavy hook to the jaw, which sent Langford over. He was up immediately, was busy for the next three or four rounds, and showed a disposition for in-fighting ; but McVea, although he had to take some stiff punches, was not seriously troubled, and kept his dangerous left busy. In the tenth round Langford's right eye was showing the effects of the repeated visitations of the big man's left. He got in a couple of smashing blows to the jaw, and in the eleventh round was making McVea rather uncomfortable. The twelfth round was also Langford's and he got right and left to the head and body.

Thereafter there was a good deal of clever boxing, in which McVea proved himself a master of ringcraft. In the seventeenth round McVea's left was lacking power. He was forced by Langford, who put in solid punches to the body and jaw—his blows were still strong. In the next round Langford's right eye closed up. Thereafter McVea, boxing well, became renewedly effective with his left, which he got in repeatedly, and all he received in exchange were a couple of lefts to the body. This round was decidedly in McVea's favour. In the final spurt McVea's left again and again went to Langford's damaged eye. He seemed to be stronger, and made a closing rally which left Langford behind. The last blow was a hard right by McVea to Langford's jaw.

McVea pressed forward, and shook hands with the beaten man. The referee (Baker) remarked :—"It was the greatest and cleverest fight I have seen. I was greatly impressed with Langford's style, and I think he is the greatest little living fighter of to-day. Yes, I think he was handicapped by the clean break, and would have done much better if the fight had been all in." Tommy Burns, who was at the ringside, stated that he was surprised at the verdict going to McVea. He says Langford did all the forcing and fighting, and the other never won. McVea had the ligament of the right thumb badly strained in the seventh round, and says this prevented him from showing as well as he might otherwise have done. Regarding the match with Johnson, which will be arranged if possible, McVea says :—"I will be only too pleased to fight him." The promoter (Mr. McIntosh) says the crowd was as large as on the occasion of the famous Burns-Johnson contest, but the takings will not be so heavy. The share of the two boxers on a percentage basis cannot yet be announced. Langford's trainer (Mullin) does not agree with Baker's verdict. He says :—"Sam won, and won comfortably. I shall believe all my life that the fight was Langford's."

FOR the past 19 years a group of good sportsmen in Calcutta have each year assumed the responsibility of conducting one of the largest and best athletic sports meeting in India.

It has always been their aim to help the standard height to interest all groups of competitors. With this ideal again before them they for the nineteenth time offer a set of games which promises to equal that of any former season.

The meeting is essentially a championship meeting, and as usual the Amateur Championship in the 100 yards, 220 yards, 440 yards, ½ mile and High Jump will again take place.

The Minto Challenge Shield which last season was won by the Central Branch Y.M.C.A., Calcutta, will be awarded to the Club whose competitors win the greatest number of points in these five events.

The British Army Championship will again embrace the six following events :—100 yards, 440 yards, 600 yards, 1,000 yards, 1 mile and 1 mile Relay. As the best army abilities in India come down for this meeting the keenest kind of sport is anticipated.

The Native Army and Schools Championship will again be as last year. The Native Troops are not "quitters" in sports but are out to fight it to a finish in every race.

The meeting as usual will be held by kind permission of the Cricket Club, in their ground in the Eden Gardens on Saturday, the 17th February ; the entries closing on the 7th of February.

In addition to the Amateur Championship events the 150 yards, 300 yards, 120 yards, Hurdles

Handicap and the 2-mile Bicycle Race will be held for amateurs.

The new features of this meeting are a Native Army and Native Police Tug-of-War, for which the entry fee is Rs. 5 and the prize Rs. 50; and an event open to all—on the horizontal and parallel bars. The Honorary Secretary, Dr. J. H. Gray, 25, Chowringhee, will be pleased to supply all particulars to intending competitors.

THE long programme of sports in connection with the Old Bombay Exhibition were brought to a conclusion in the Stadium last Thursday afternoon, Major General Swann giving away the prizes at the close of the proceedings. Captain Wintle and Captain Naylor in whose capable hands the arrangements have rested are to be congratulated on the big results of their hard work—they certainly left no stone unturned to insure the success of the meeting. The following is a list of the principal winners of open competitions :—

Open Jumping Horses—Major Dyer, 7th D. G.'s, 1; Mr. Julian Gove, 2; S. S. M. Boyce, 7th D. G.'s, 3.

THE third Test match began at Adelaide in hot weather on the 12th instant. Australia batted first and were all out for 133, Foster taking five wickets for 36: Armstrong (33), Trumper (26), and Hordern (25) were the chief contributors. The M.C.C. then went in and had made 49 without loss when stumps were drawn. On the 13th the match was resumed and England gave a fine display, bringing her score up to 327 for 4 wickets. Hobbs batting five and half hours, made 187, and hit eighteen fours. His innings was a splendid effort, though he gave five chances. Continuing on Monday the M.C.C. took their score to 501 before they were all disposed of. A telegram to the Times of India gives individual scores as follows :—Hobbs 187, Rhodes 59, Gunn 29, Hearne 12, Mead 46, Foster 71, Douglas 35, Woolley 20, Smith 22, Hitch 0, and Barnes not out 2. Extras 18. Total 501. Australia then went in again and had made 96 for one wicket when play closed for the day. On Tuesday they did very well and had scored 360 for 5 wickets when stumps were drawn. Carter made 72, Bardsley 63, Hill 98, Kelleway 37, Armstrong 25, and Minnett 38 not out. Australia brought their total in the second innings to 476, Mathew scoring 53 and Ransford 38. The M.C.C. going in again made 112 for 3 wickets and thus won by 7 wickets.

As will be seen from an advertisement appearing further on the Bengal Lawn Tennis Championships will be held on the Calcutta Cricket Club ground beginning on the 20th February next. Entries close on the 15th February and the courts will be open for practice to competitors from Monday, 12th February.

GEORGE GRAY, the Australian billiard marvel, has just beaten H. W. Stevenson, the English champion, in the second of their series of three matches of 1,800 up. The match was played at Liverpool last week and the scores at the finish were: Gray 18,000, Stevenson 17,229. It will be remembered that in the first match Gray beat his opponent by 636 points.

THE "Dixie Kid," who is shortly leaving India, has issued a general challenge to Feather-weights in India, Civil or Military. He is open for a match on any date from 15th February to 2nd March and is willing to box 15 or 20 rounds under Marquis of Queensberry Rules for the best purse offered. He is prepared to deposit a side wager of Rs. 500 and expects his opponent to do likewise.

A SKITTLE polo tournament for prizes presented by H. E. the Governor, was begun at Madras on the 13th instant. Three teams three aside have entered and they have been handicapped as follows: A (Scratch) Rajah Venugopal Bahadur, Mr. P. B. Thomas and Mr. Macfarland. B (−6 goals) Captain Worgan, Mr. Cotterell and Captain Jarvis. C (−1 goal) Captain Torrie, Major Gordon and Mr. Wilson. The first game was between Rajah Venugopal's team and Captain Worgan's team. The latter scored 8 goals without response and thus won by 2 goals.

ONE of those topics that is frequently discussed at shooting parties concerns the question as to which bird is the most difficult to shoot, and the matter must always be interesting to those who are concerned as to their average of hits to misses. The subject can be divided into two parts—first, which bird is the most difficult to hit; and, second, which bird takes greatest amount of bringing down, apart from all question of accurate aiming. Some birds, as we all know, offer a far more difficult mark than others, while some, again, may be easy enough to hit, but not by any means easy to bring down, though you may put them well in the centre of your charge. From either point of view the question is hard to decide off-hand, but there is one bird that seems to fulfil most of the conditions of a difficult shot, and that bird is the wild duck, especially at this late period of the season. We believe that it would be harder even for the first-rate marksman to keep up his average at wild duck in late November or December than at any other bird. For not only do wild duck fly at a great pace, making them very difficult to hit in the first place, but they are also so hard that in some cases they seem absolutely impervious to the shot. We have heard it stated before now that a wild duck shot at coming to one cannot be killed at a distance of over thirty yards unless you can get him in the head, but we do not think that rule will always hold good. It is certain, however, that a duck offering an approaching shot is harder to kill in every way than one that is crossing or going away. And one can very well understand this when one examines the extraordinary resistance offered by the feathered armour of the bird about its breast. A comparatively weak pellet will penetrate the feathers from behind, but it takes the strongest of the charge to find their way through from the opposite point. There is no doubt that the use of heavier shot, as well as a slightly increased charge is necessary in late-season duck-shooting, and it is interesting to note that No. 4 at 43 yards and No. 3 at 47 yards have the same hitting power as No. 5 at 41½ yards and No. 6 at 40 yards.

NYASSALAND or British Africa seems now likely to supersede British East Africa as a big game hunting district. It is rather a difficult place to approach, as there is no railway from the coast to Zomba, the capital. It means a four or five days' trip up the River Zambesi, thence by rail to Blantyre, where the expedition can be organised and trackers and servants obtained. Shooting in Nyassaland works out at a much cheaper rate than in East Africa or Uganda, the game being plentiful and expenses of carriers low. A "visitor's" license in Nyassaland costs £10, which allows the holder to kill the following quantity of game :—Buffalo, 6; hippopotamus, 4; eland, 6; gnu, wildebeest (except white-tailed species), 6; zebra (other than mountain zebra), 6; antelopes and gazelles—sable, 6; roan, 6; kudu, 6; any other species, in all, 30; colobus and other fur monkeys, 6; aardvark (Orycteropus), 2; egret, 10; wart-hog, 10. In addition to this license the following charges are made for licenses to kill elephants :—One elephant, £10; two elephants, £20; three elephants, £40; four elephants, £60. No game license is required to kill lions and leopards and other carnivora. The best season is from August to November (the beginning of the rains), when the long grass is burnt. of an experienced African hunter, should not exceed £50 to £60, provided that a tent and the usual necessary camp equipment were taken from home. Ivory can be sold locally for, roughly, 10s. per lb., so if the visitor shoots the four elephants he is allowed on a £60 license, with tusks averaging only 40lbs. to 50lbs., he would make £160 to £200 by selling his ivory, and this would pay for the whole trip out and home.

Herbivorous animals evince an almost unerring instinct in avoiding poisonous plants, even those which, to the human palate, would fail to betray their noxious properties. Monkeys may nibble at an unknown fruit, but they generally pause to study the result of that test, and nearly always manage to arrive at a correct conclusion.

Such facts suggest a sagacity which seems to indicate the existence of a "sixth sense." The ordinary senses of our fellow-creatures, says the Philadelphia Record, may receive warnings from indications which we have not yet learned, or else have forgotten to heed. The superintendent of the meteorological observatory at San Salvador noticed surprise that both the beasts and the agricultural Indians of the neighbouring mountains seemed to recognise the omens of an earthquake which he himself would have been unable to predict without the aid of his barometer.

"There will be a temblorito (a little shock) before long," the Indians would remark, in the matter-of-fact way with which a person might comment on the probability of a rain shower. "What makes you think so?" he would ask the prophets. "Is there anything unusual about the weather or the looks of the sky?" "Don't know," was the invariable reply, "but I have felt that way before every earthquake."

The weather, at such times, might appear clear and calm; perhaps even cooler than usual; but soon after sunset the predicted temblorito would rattle along the streets, and shake the loose rocks from the cliffs of a neighbouring quarry.

In the reign of the Emperor Justinian, the coasts of Western Asia were visited by a series of destructive earthquakes, and a few days before the first shock the citizens of Antioch are said to have received a warning of its coming in the sudden departure of a large flock of rooks that had long made their nests in the city walls. The credibility of that seeming miracle has often been questioned; but is it not possible that experience may have taught the birds to connect certain conditions of the atmosphere with the idea of an impending 'quake?

Capenter mentions the case of a wren that built her nest in the slate quarries of Penrhyn in a situation liable to great disturbance from the occasional explosions. She soon learned, however, to take warning by the sound of the bell, which was rung to give notice to the workmen whenever a blast was about to be fired, and would quit her nest and fly to a little distance, where she would remain until the shock of the explosion had passed off.

Storms, too, are thus evidently anticipated by various species of animals and birds, and it is by no means inconceivable that even their supposed ability to forecast the approach of mild or severe winters may be in some measure a fact.

Privy Council Appeal—Re 30, Clive Street. On Tuesday before the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Chatterjee an application on behalf of Amlook Chand Parruck, the mortgagee of the premises No. 30, Clive Street, was made by Mr. N. Sircar instructed by Mr. P. Srimany for admission of appeal to His Majesty in Council. Mr. S. R. Das on behalf of Mr. U. L. Bose opposed the application. The appeal was admitted, as the claim of mortgagee exceed the sum of Rs. 25,000 and involved substantial question of law.

What a Christmas! It poured with rain the day before, and Christmas Eve was a soaker of the most uncompromising kind. If good King Wenceslas had looked out early last Monday morning he would have found no snow, but his eye would have seen that the mud "lay round about; deep," but not "crisp and even." Still it had ceased raining and, by all that was wonderful, the sun,—yes gentle reader, the sun, came out—there are the meteorological reports to witness if I lie. And with the invigorating sunshine and just a touch of winter wind we said—before midday—"this is a bit of orlright." The memory of the night's rain was swept away with pleasant suddenness, and hundreds of thousands of worthy and unworthy, people were abroad enjoying the finest out of doors day of this "winter."

Country dwellers, I daresay, awoke to hear the birds in the garden twittering, certain of the coming sunshine, and the sharpness in the air had its own message. In London there was an eager air, the mud was quickly caking under the sun and the countless pilgrims of the day went briskly to the shrines of the household gods.

Thousands were out driving, walking, or motoring. The parks and the roads leading from London were thronged. Many people motored to see friends in the country; many others decided for Brighton or some other accessible seaside place, and went off by train. But these travellers, numerous as they were, made up but a small proportion of those who hoped to enjoy their Christmas in town with their families or with their friends.

There is always a transmigration across London on Christmas Day by reason of the joining-up of family circles and the never-to-be-neglected gathering together of old friends. Throughout the morning and again in the early evening crowds of people were moving, crossing from one side of London to the other. They were mostly young people. They went from Crouch End to Beckenham, from Notting Hill to Sydenham, from Streatham to Golder's Green. Never has the Christmas mood been more plainly reflected on the faces in the streets.

The poor were better served than in any previous year. Christmas dinners were supplied in tens of thousands by charitable workers. No hospital was without its festival and good cheer, and workhouses were places of warmth and comfort. The best testimony to the prosperity of the day was the entire fiasco which resulted from an attempt to hold a "rally" of the unemployed on Tower Hill. Christmas weddings were celebrated in great numbers, there being twenty-six at one church. It was simply beautiful—till lighting up time came. Then down came the rain, the mud became uncaked, everything—resumed the dampness and stickiness of the previous day, and your "Vagrant" bit on his mince-pie reflecting on Cherrapoonji in the monsoons.

The Gaekwar's alleged connection with Indian sedition formed the subject of some nice, outspoken comments in the Times the other day. A day or two afterwards the "Secretary, Maharaja Gaekwar" sent a reply for publication, and it was published. But the Times is not convinced, and points out that, while it evades some of the principal statements made by that paper, it "does not meet any of them directly or definitely."

It appears that the Gaekwar of Baroda has been "misunderstood." The pious and loyal Daily News rushed to the defence of a ruler who was forced to apologise for lack of respect to his monarch, and who was simultaneously cited to appear in the Divorce Court. And Mr. Rowland Wormell, who has "had free access to signs of the man's soul"—the phrase is Mr. Wormell's—now tells us that he is most at home with his books behind the door of his library. A good many people over here will be relieved to hear it, many more people who live rather nearer Baroda will be moved in a slightly different way. They will be interested to hear that the Gaekwar's favourite literature, besides "The Meditations of Marcus Aurelius" and Bacon's "Essays," also includes "The Imitation of Christ." Thomas a Kempis has had many strange pupils, but never a stranger than this Mahratta prince, who was, we believe, a child of the bazaar.

Meanwhile he is clean out of the picture in the divorce case in which he was cited as "Co.," the court has struck him out of the suite as in a little trifle of this kind the suzerain State has no powers of interference. Leave, however, has been given to the representatives of the injured husband to proceed without naming the Gaekwar as co-respondent. No costs would be given and there could be an appeal if desired. Have I any comments? None, I am afraid which can be expressed in language fit for publication.

The Censor resigns. That much abused and fantastic public official, Mr. G. A. Redford, Official Examiner of Plays under the Lord Chancellor—to give him his full title—has had enough of it and retires this week.

But much as authors have objected to his idea of what indecency is, they will be by no means satisfied, for he is to be succeeded by Mr. Charles H. Brookfield, whose appointment to the post of Assistant Censor a few weeks back caused some people to rock with laughter, and other people to shriek with anger.

Considering the unpopularity of his position, Mr. Redford has not been over-paid during the sixteen years he has been reading plays for a living. His official salary is £320, and his fees—reckoned at so much an act—only brought up his income to £800 a year, and for this he had to read over 600 plays a year—two a day! And such plays some of them were too. Every song and every "gag" had to be passed as well.

He used to be a bank manager before he became Censor. "What does he know about plays?" asked somebody. "Oh, he's a safe man," replied a wag. "Besides his Christian names are George Alexander."

Here are some of the things Mr. Redford has done while Reader of Plays:—

Prevented a girl from appearing in silk fleshings in "Kismet" after she had done it 145 times without anyone noticing.

Stopped the performance of "The Mikado" at the Savoy during the visit of Prince Fushimi, because he thought it would displease him. The Japanese warship Tsukuba replied by playing the music of "The Mikado" while lying in Chatham Dockyard!

Refused to license "Monna Vanna" because the heroine was supposed to be wearing nothing under her cloak in one scene; and licensed "The Devil," which contained a scene exactly similar.

Granted a licence for "Salome," the opera, after refusing it; but made Salome dance round a platter with no head in it.

Had his office objected to by seventy-one well-known dramatists.

Gave evidence before a Select Committee which heard 349 Blue-book pages of evidence as to whether or not there should be a Censor at all.

Refused to license "Mrs. Warren's Profession," which denounced immorality, and licensed "The Spring Chicken," which made fun of it.

Sanctioned Pinero's comedy, "The Wife Without a Smile," and its dancing doll which made Mr. W. T. Stead so cross.

Withheld licences from forty-three play out of 7,000. Of these forty-three, thirteen were afterwards licensed.

Had German plays read to him by his wife because she understands German and he does not.

Once he would not sanction "Œdipus Rex," now being rehearsed at Covent Garden.

Stopped "The Follies" from making fun of "An Englishman's Home."

Licensed "Dear Old Charlie," a risky farce, written by the new Censor.

The new Censor is now at Nimes, in France. Many troubles will be waiting for him when he returns and starts work.

It has been a week of Christmas fare at the theatres. All our fine old crusted "pantos"—Aladin, Cinderella, Dick Whittington, Hop o' my Thumb and Company have drawn the usual Christmas crowds, while Olympia has been taxed to its utmost to seat the enormous concourse which has gathered nightly to look at "The Miracle."

The most popular pantomime I think is "Hop o' my Thumb" at Drury Lane. The only tiny thing about it is Miss Renee Mayer, a wee damsel who speaks and swaggers and dances and sings with charm and childish aplomb in the name part. A new departure has been made in securing the collaboration of Mr. G. R. Sims, who is probably responsible for the more than ordinary coherence of the story. But in Drury Lane pantomime the story is not, and probably never can be, the thing. The leading funny man is Mr. George Graves, who plays a king that has lost his memory. He can recall nothing of his six daughters now in the hands of the cannibal Ogre, nor of his runaway second wife Zaza. But then he is a gay old dog with more to remember than is altogether to his credit. As played by Mr. Graves in his dry, peevish, crabbed way the King is very amusing. Until the King recovers his memory and his lost family by magic means he relies entirely on Datas, cleverly played by Mr. Ernest Langford. You can guess from the name the sort of man this Datas is. "Am I right, sir?"

Miss Fanny Brough, new to pantomime—it is "Fanny's First Pantomime" as one of the characters observes—is hampered by a rather poor part. She is, however, clever enough to work it up into something very much better. At present she has as an eccentric lady of title, nothing to say that is very brilliant, and the ridiculous harem skirt that she wears is now rather out of fashion even in the theatre.

Nor has Mr. Will Evans—who appears as the last of the Pierrots, named for obvious reasons Potterino—as yet quite found his game. But it is always so with Drury Lane pantomime. It grows in quality as it is pruned of its weaker branches.

So Mr. Collins, who had produced the pantomime splendidly—some of the scenes are as beautiful as any he has ever devised—has nothing to worry about. He has done his work admirably, as Mr. "Jimmy" Glover has done his.

The ladies, too, are delightful. Miss Violet Loraine and Miss Maudie as a Prince and Princess make love charmingly, especially in a very pretty balcony scene.

In other charading Miss Daisy Dormer, Miss Alice Esden, and Miss Jessie Winter are very pleasing.

* * * * * *

At the Lyceum we have "Dick Whittington and his Cat." The story has one great advantage over even Cinderella's, that of variety. The story covers town, country, sea, home and abroad. The town is Old London, which admits of any amount of picturesqueness of scene, costume and custom. Of the dozen scenes at the Lyceum six are of London. Of these the chief are the Exterior of Fitzwarren's Shop, and Cheapside with Whittington acclaimed Lord Mayor of London. Both these scenes are admirably done, the animation and the splendour of Old London street-life being vividly expressed. One gets a glimpse, too, of Old London Bridge and Guildhall. Fitzwarren's Kitchen and Store is one of the few interiors. It also is well presented, and many are the amusing pranks that take place within its walls.

The country is, of course, Highgate Hill, which in Whittington's time was country indeed. This is a charming woodland scene, and the Bower of Bluebells into which it is transformed at the end of Part I. is a dream of beauty. There is also "Ye Road to Highgate," a simpler scene, but none the less pretty.

At sea we are aboard the Roly Poly Good Ship Alice, named after Fitzwarren's daughter, who, "in the lovely garnish of a boy," has accompanied her sweetheart on his travels.

As to abroad, there is Morocco. Both the sea coast and the Emperor's Palace is a gorgeous spectacle. It is now fairly well established that Whittington's only "Cat" was one of the ships by which he brought coals—the first sea-borne coals—from Newcastle, and that the Moors were none other than the begrimed colliers. But this need distress no one.

Another good point of the pantomime is that it is rich in animals. Children will love the mischievous Cat of Mr. Stanley Lupino and the Bow-Wow of Mr. George Fletcher, and will be interested in the Spider of Mr. Fred de Vere, and the very agile Fly of Baby Gaskin.

There is much to laugh at. The Egbert Brothers, whatever they turn their hands to, are screamingly funny. Mr. Jimmie Danbers is drily absurd, but never unnatural, as Fitzwarren's Cook. Mr. Idle Jack Williams is also very droll.

The pretty element of the piece is carried forward by Miss Claire Rothaine, a handsome and spirited Dick, by Miss Nan Stuart, who looks sweetly engaging and innocent in her girl's dress and sings delightfully, and by numerous other most attractive young ladies, some of whom it is impossible to identify, so lavish have Messrs. Melville been in their girls.

And then there is "The Miracle" at Olympia. I was there on the opening night and the audience hailed it as a wonderful work of art, and in saying that the applause seemed somewhat out of place, one is probably paying the highest possible tribute to the beauty of the play. The quality of the applause, however, showed that the audience had been attracted, not so much by the beauty of Dr. Karl Vollmoeller's wordless play, or by Humperdinck's exquisite and unobtrusive music, as by the amazing resource, unfailing grace, and endless fascination of Herr Max Reinhardt's production.

The story is of a Nun, who, hearing the Spielman's alluring strains, deserts her watch over the Miraculous Image of the Virgin and goes out into the world. After a career of horror and misery, in which she involves many besides herself, she strays back again to the feet of the image, and once more takes up her religious duties. The other nuns have no scruple in receiving her, for during her absence the Madonna has descended from her pedestal and taken on the form of the errant sister.

Mdlle. Natacha Trouhanowa is the Nun, and she mimes and dances very expressively indeed. A performance of more depth, however, is that of Mdlle. Maria Carmi, who, as the Madonna, seems to stand quite aloof from the world. Anything more beautiful has rarely, if ever, been seen on the stage. As for the huge crowds, they run into thousands—the horses, the asses, and the dogs, they are managed by a master.

The singing, and, indeed, the very movements, are in themselves almost a miracle, and the glow of colour, much assisted by artistic lighting effects, is another charm. Humperdinck's musical setting is so perfectly attuned to the play that one drinks it in almost unconsciously, and does not, perhaps, pay it sufficient attention. The use of familiar church melodies is very silkful, and the music of the Spielmann is weirdly impressive.

But in the end one is always brought back to the consideration of the wonders of the setting, which has changed the gaunt and bare Olympia into a Gothic cathedral, glowing with light from stained glass windows.

THE VAGRANT.

When the iceman came out of No. 37 he found a small boy sitting on one of his blocks of ice. "'Ere!" he roared, "wot are yer a-sitting on that for? Git off of it!" The small boy raised a tear-stained face. "Was you ever a boy?" he queried faintly. "Of course I was!" fumed the iceman. "But—" "And did you never play truant?" cut in the youngster. "Of course I did!" snarled the iceman. "Now then, you—" "An' when you got home did yer father take a stick an'—" A lump rose in the iceman's throat. "Sit where you are, my little man," he gulped; "I understand."

Review.

"NOTES ON BRIDGE."

THIS little book on "Bridge" is for the most part sound, but does not contain so far as we could discover anything new, though many of the hints as to how various combinations of cards should be played are put in language which will be more easy to understand than will be found in any other book we have come across. To the moderate player who desires to become better it should prove of considerable use, and to the bad player who desires to become moderate the tips given in the opening chapters will be invaluable, and no tips more so than the one, in which the author lays stress, that a bad player will learn more by watching how a good player manipulates his cards in one rubber than by bungling fifty rubbers himself. Mr. Simpson in some of the deductions he states should be made from leads is not correct. The lead from A. Q. J. and others in no trumps is the Queen even though the player has a card of re-entry in another suit and King is usually led from A. K. J. to six whether the player has a card of re-entry or not. His suggestion that the lead of 10 from K. J. 10 will die a natural death is only an example of a fervent hope on the part of the author, for many of the finest players lead it. The lead of a King single or a King once guarded in a trump declaration are not leads which moderate players should be told to indulge in, though such leads in the hands of the skilled player have saved many a game. The author is pleading for a doubleton lead is well put and is convincing so far as it goes, but when all is said it can only be regarded as the refuge for the destitute, and is not a lead to be commended except in the hands of a skilful player. The time when a doubleton lead is the best available lead is not easy to gauge. The author does not point out that a doubleton lead has the best chances of success when the leader holds the ace of trumps. "Notes on Bridge" is well worth perusal and study and we hope that the author will write a similar book on "Auction Bridge."

Fishing.

THE MYSTERIOUS AND SPORT-GIVING SEA-TROUT.

THE more we reflect upon the mystery surrounding the sport-giving sea-trout—or salmon-trout, as it is often designated, for it is a kind of combination of the lordly salmon and the speckled trout, possessing some of the qualities pertaining to each of these noble fish—the greater is our wonder at one of the marvels of Nature. Here is a fish of mystery and romance, an unfailing source of interest to the fisherman. No species of the finny tribes (if we except the salmon) affords so much delight to the angler, for here is a gamesome fish second to none, if size is taken into consideration. There is, too, a certain flavour of the unknown about it that has an irresistible attraction. Practically a wanderer from his earliest days, he is equally at home in the deep salt waters of the restless sea as in the cold, clear waters of the rippling hillside stream that was his birthplace, and to which he will return, after a short sojourn in the food-providing ocean, where he waxes lusty and strong, to do his duty to his fellows by propagating his race. And not the least wonderful is the fact that the sea-trout will return year by year to the very same stream that sheltered their embryo existence, there to deposit and fertilise the ova. This important mission accomplished once more, they fall back to the depths of the great sea to regain vitality and grow strong to (let us hope) provide excellent sport for the angler later on.

What a powerful instinct it must be that impels this wonderful migratory fish to seek the insignificant mountain brook from the limitless depths of the "vasty deep"! And what of the irresistible power that forces them up the raging torrent, over cascade and waterfall, pool and shallow, leaping and struggling onwards until they reach a certain spot where the waters are cold and clear ere placing their eggs in the unfailing care of Mother Nature? And how many years has this marvellous change from the salt water to the fresh gone on? Who knows? Well might one ponder over these mysterious things.

Unlike the salmon, which is not supposed to feed whilst in fresh water (although this assertion has often been disputed), the sea-trout is a hearty feeder, and after a flood is often found gorged with worms. It will, too, take the angler's fly with alacrity at times, and the piscator who is lucky enough to be on the spot when there is a "spate" up in the distant mountains and the hill-side burns are tumbling down in brown, foam-flecked torrents, and the waiting sea-trout, gasping in the congested pools of the river's lower reaches, respond eagerly to the old, old call of Nature and rush forward unhesitatingly to some lonely tarn or sparkling brook, will fill his pannier with silvery beauties, and reap such a measure of fine sport that his less fortunate brother could not conceive in his most ambitious dreams.

But, alas! such fortune is only for the few; for to obtain good sea-trouting one must travel to the west of Ireland—to Connemara and adjacent counties—or to the beautiful rivers and lochs of the land of heather and deer. Here, in remote and wild places, this beautiful member of the Salmonidae is to be found at its best.

For successful fishing on a sea-trout loch a good run of sea-trout is in the first place most essential, and—quite as needful—a fair breeze that will raise a nice ruffle on the water. A light split-cane rod some eleven feet or so in length will be found very suitable with an easy-running reel—quick winding and with a regulating check—a strong tapered silk line with a fine gut cast mounted with two (some anglers favour three or more) of the large lake flies so much in vogue for this class of fishing. As regards these lures, those of the Grouse and Claret variety will be found good killers; locally dressed ones, perhaps, are to be preferred. While the single-handed rod is advocated as the ideal one for sea-trouting, much is to be said in favour of the double-handed rod. With this latter weapon one has a much better command over the fish, and at the same time can cover a more extensive piece of water without moving the boat; and if the day be rough and fish run heavy, a distinct advantage is to be gained, as one can land the fish much quicker and easier. Still, for good sport commend us to the lighter instrument.

To angle for sea-trout is a pleasure never to be effaced from the memory of the enthusiast. Here is a fish by no means timorous, for he will come again and again at the fly, and when in good condition (which it generally is if fresh run from the sea) puts up an excellent fight. He will fling himself at the angler's fly with a sudden rush, leaping like a silver bar out of the white-crested waves, sometimes taking the lure ere it touches the water, and when hooked its determined efforts to escape will be most surprising. Sea-trout will, on occasions, jump clean out of the water, now two feet, now three feet, each leap being more fierce than the preceding one (these actions betoken the true white-trout, and are critical moments) or will tear out yards of line from the screaming reel in alarming fashion, and will then suddenly turn and dart in towards the boat before you can reel in the slack line. Woe to you if the fish succeeds in diving under the boat, for a broken cast is the inevitable result—at least, nine times out of ten it is.

There is a "glorious uncertainty" about sea-trout fishing that adds considerably to its charms. One never knows the second when a lordly sea-trout may jump out of the white-crested waves at the gaudy-coloured lures, as, standing in the stern of the boat, the angler manœuvres his dancing flies over all the water within reach; for here there is no deliberate stalking of a regularly "rising" fish. Any moment may see a fish come leaping out of the foam-flecks, and should the fisherman be caught napping, that sea-trout is not for him, for that lively fish will be gone in a fraction of time. White-trout are not fastidious, and as a rule do not object to any fly of a brilliant colour, being especially fond of a bit of tinsel; bright red-bodied flies with gold or silver twist are extremely attractive to sea-trout.

A good plan when sea-trouting on a lake from a boat is to row up the water in the teeth of the wind, and then quietly drift back with the breeze in your favour, thus greatly facilitating your casting powers.

Not the least of the many attractions of sea-trout fishing is the beautiful and romantic scenery which surrounds the grey, tossing waters of the loch. Who can forget the bracing moorlands where the ubiquitous heather clothes the hills in purple raiment; the grey mountain crags down which the burns thread their sinuous course like threads of living silver; the rushing and invigorating breezes: the white-crested waves of the loch, and the perfect solitude! There is a wonderful effect, too, when the white clouds chase each other across the summer sky, for under the shifting lights and shades wild grouse mountain and romantic valley, rocky glen, and silver stream are to be seen in an endless variety of colour, of brown and purple, green and gold, and the eye of the most exacting of anglers and Nature-lovers cannot fail to be impressed.

Although sport is not quite what it was some years ago, before fisheries were spoiled by poachers and impecunious landlords, the angler can still rely upon a fairly heavy creel, provided the sea-trout are running; and in these days, when rivers are so much over-fished and good trout-angling is difficult to get, the angler who has the opportunity should by no means miss a day's sea-trouting. And if it should be an "off" day and sea-trout scarce, most probably a good catch of "brownies" will compensate him, as most sea-trout rivers and lochs hold a good stock of Salmo fario.

A sea-trout of one pound in weight will give excellent sport on a light rod and fine tackle, and will be found in good condition from July to October.

PRACTICE CASTING.

Do you do any practice casting? Well, why not? If I should prove to you that it would actually help you in your fishing, wouldn't you say it was worth while? The average fisherman learns the art from books, from observation, from teaching and, best of all, from experience. If from an ordinary teacher, he is the equal of his mentor, although the latter may be only a very ordinary caster. When actually fishing it is seldom one will take time to try this or that thing he has heard or read about. It is all too short a holiday and one's mind is intent solely on fishing. But you might—cast—better—catch more fish. How? Practice, that's all. If you have any doubt about it, just be an onlooker at a casting tournament, and I promise you a very considerable surprise.

The degree of proficiency attained by these latter day tournament casters is truly marvellous, and to many, is scarcely credible. A few years ago, who would have believed it possible to cast a fly, single-handed, over 100 feet with a 5-ounce rod? Or to cast a little ½-ounce weight from a free-running reel, using one hand only, a distance of over 250 feet? Or, perhaps more wonderful still, to cast the same weight at a 30-inch target in the water, placed successively 60, 70, 80, 90 and 100 feet from the caster, and only miss it once out of fifteen successive shots! Have you ever tried to drop your fly accurately into the swirl of some rising trout or bass, and felt the thrill of satisfaction that is yours when you do it nicely. What would you think of casting five times each at a 30-inch ring placed 50, 55 and 60 feet away—fifteen casts in all—and not missing once! These instances, all authentic, are quoted merely to show what wonderful control of the rod, reel and line is possible and is taught by practice casting.

But this is simply a game, you say, and has nothing to do with actual fishing? You are much mistaken. It is simply another case of "practice makes perfect," and you will generally find the skilful tournament caster, besides being an ardent fisherman and a beautiful caster, is mighty successful in regard to the "heft" of his basket. It seems to be the fashion, however, to deride and belittle the sport, and to exclaim at the special and particular tackle used. It is claimed that the equipment is unfit for fishing, and merely intended for the making of records. This is true, in a sense, but in substance is all "tommyrot." Would you insist upon the runner wearing heavy shoes because his little spiked slippers are unfit for conventional wear? Would you abolish racing sulkies because one does not use them for pleasure driving? Would you insist upon races being rowed in flat-boats? Nonsense! It is simply a case of preparing oneself properly for the game in hand, and using such rigging and gear as custom dictates and usage has found correct.

I have fished all my life and on many waters, and I can truthfully say that tournament work and its attendant practice has increased my ability as a fisherman and my dexterity as a caster, tenfold at least. Eight years ago I was, perhaps, just an average fisherman—maybe less skillful than the average. The tournament game interested me and I went into it, was delighted with the sport and the sportsmen in it, took it up in earnest and kept at the practice whenever time permitted, which, alas! was far too seldom to satisfy me. To-day, when I meet the average fisherman on the stream or lake, I can cast farther, quicker and more accurately; I can reach places that he cannot; I can control my line better, am less bothered by the wind, and my arm and wrist muscles do not tire. My eye is better for measuring distances, my hand is firmer and steadier and I can send my fly or lure just where I want it to go. And listen! I can catch more fish, too! Perhaps that sounds like boasting, but please do not take it that way. I simply mean to state, as a plain matter of fact, what practice will do for one.

Even the idea of simple practice casting has been sneered at. I remember a certain Englishman who declared that one might as well practice with a landing net in a tub! I agreed with him, having time and again seen nets used in a fashion which indicated that the user would do well indeed to practice—beginning in a pail. Now in all seriousness, why shouldn't one practice casting. How else can one attain perfection? Let me cite a few instances which may interest you. Some years ago I was bass fishing on the Delaware river with a friend, who was an ardent fly-fisherman. I was doing considerable bait-casting at the time in an experimental way, and my friend was much interested in watching me and at last asked if he might try. I gave him the rod and stepped back to watch the fun. Those who understand bait-casting will know just what happened. The look of astonishment on my friend's face as he regarded the "rat's nest" in the reel, was more than worth the trouble of picking out the snarl. I asked, with a laugh, if he could do it again and he got his back up, dropped fishing, and kept at it all the afternoon. By night he was casting fairly well, and immediately upon his return to town he bought an outfit and went at it in earnest. Two and three years later that man twice in succession won the national championship for distance bait-casting and made two new world's records. Again, at one of the tournaments at Madison Square Garden, I ran across a chap whom I had met while fishing at Greenwood lake. He was tremendously taken with accuracy bait-casting in the overhead style—now at that time—which he had never seen before. He tried my rig, bought a duplicate, and on the driveway next his house he fixed up some makeshift targets and quietly commenced practising. Two years from that time be won the national championship for accuracy bait-casting. All of which shows conclusively the value of practice, and if it applies to tournament work, why not to actual fishing! It is simple enough to simulate to a degree the conditions encountered in fishing, and the benefit derived is certain and positive. One practices billiards, shooting and such other sports as require skill and a deft touch—why not casting!

The sense of touch and rhythm of time, so important to the fly-caster, are soon lost through want of practice, and the inevitable result is broken leaders from "yanking" fish, and flies galore snapped off in the first few days of fishing. Naturally, one cannot practice through the cold wet days of winter. The line would quickly freeze on the reel, and the best enamel line ever made can be utterly ruined by five minutes' work in freezing weather. But in the autumn, and again, in those rare, sweet days of early spring when one yearns for the song of the brook and the fingers itch for the feel of the quivering rod—why not practice then! Before the fishing season opens is the time of all times for practice—especially for the man who is for angling pure and simple. Get the stiffness out of your arm, and develop that supple smoothness of wrist action so essential to delicacy in fly-casting. Practice at a mark—a leaf, a floating chip, anything; to train your eye to the quick and correct measuring of distance, and the pitch of your forearm to a true line. Practice the "dry-fly" cast—the most delicate and graceful of all, and likewise the most deadly—until you can accurately measure the line in the air, and calculate nicely the drop of your flies. Get the knack of gently checking the cast just before the line is fully extended, so that your flies will drop lightly, instead of hitting the water with a splashy little spat. Practice casting where there is some obstacle ten or fifteen feet to the rear of your position without throwing your line behind you—the tricky "switch cast," and so useful on brushy streams. Practice throwing a loop in the air over the water and picking up your flies without fuss, so that, when fishing a quiet pool, you can recover your casts without that nasty and disturbing "sw-w-up" when the line is ripped through the water. Practice casting in the wind, both with and against it, and learn how the line may be driven for quite a respectable distance squarely in the teeth of a considerable breeze. Practice, too, with the left hand, so you can change off and rest your right "wing" when it begins to tire.

Learn to make your rod, not your arm, do the work in casting. That's what the rod was made for. Cast with the wrist and forearm, and not with a big sweep of your whole arm. Practice holding the elbow close to the side, and you will soon get it. Reach well out in front when you start to recover a cast, especially if it is a longish one, and finish the back-cast with a sharp, snappy backward flip of the rod. Don't let your rod go far behind you on the back-cast—it's the worst and commonest fault in fly-casting. About 20 degrees from the vertical will do nicely; watch the rod and you will find it usually goes much farther behind you than you think for. Put your mind on stopping it straight up and down. Learn to "shoot" your line; that is, suddenly lengthen your forward cast without throwing all the line behind you. The quickest way to acquire this is by pulling from the reel several feet of line, which is held in long, loose coils by the left hand. Give the forward cast just a little more force than usual, finish with a sharp downturn of the wrist and then—not before—let the loose line run out. Many experts play their fish in this manner and seldom use the reel, the reason being that the line is handled better and quicker, and what is most important, more smoothly. Learn to cast your fly straight, and to drop it at the exact spot. To do this, you must first learn to cast with the wrist alone, with the forearm held straight up and the thumb in line with the rod. Learn to drop the flies lightly, by gently checking your cast, before it is quite extended, with the rod. At first the check will be too sharp and the flies will jerk back kerflop! Practice awhile until you get this; then begin checking a little sooner and a little easier; and, just before they alight, let the rod tip go forward. Try this carefully and see how nicely it works. Learn to carry your line in the air—which goes with the celebrated dry-fly cast—until you can keep it going without fouling. When you do this, don't hold the rod quite vertical—let it slant a little to the right, so the cast will not strike the rod. With a pliant rod and a tapered line this cast is much easier than it looks. Begin with a short line, until you get the idea, and then slowly lengthen out as you improve. You will notice the line goes forward in a rolling loop, with the loop in front and the fly following. Don't start your back-cast until the fly is nearly extended, and do it smoothly with the wrist—don't jerk. Remember that the line takes just the same time to straighten behind you as in front; so you must instinctively time your casts.

If you happen to be a devotee of bait-casting, you have just as many opportunities to perfect your work and style. The chances are you use the old side-arm cast, now obsolete among experts. Why not learn the modern overhead style! It is just as easy, and infinitely more graceful and effective. Here, too, you should learn to make your rod do the work for you, and perfect the action of wrist and forearm as in fly-casting. To be sure, extreme distance requires arm-work and lots of it, but we are talking of fishing where it is not needed. Practice steadily using your wrist, and you will soon be astonished at the ease and accuracy with which the overhead cast is made. Learn to gauge your distance, that the bait may be quickly sent spinning, not just near the spot, but right to it. Learn to thumb the reel smoothly, that fairly long casts may be made without using much force, which destroys accuracy. Slowly ease off your cast while yet in the air, and follow the last few feet with the tip of the rod, so your bait will land on a taut line and you may be ready for an instant strike. Learn to spool the line, to distribute it evenly on the reel with the fingers while reeling in, and without watching it. You must watch your bait. This is awkward at first, but with practice one soon learns the knack of holding the rod with three fingers and spooling the line with the fore finger and thumb. Learn to send your cast straight and low, not in a high, curving flight. The latter is all right in general but absolutely hopeless for accurate work in the wind.

And now, let me put in a final plea for "style" in your work. Don't make the mistake of trying for distance at the expense of form. It is absolutely true that the man who fishes with a short line, and fishes right, always gets more fish than the fellow who slams around with a long, splashy line. Distance does help, and help a lot; but take your time, work up to it slowly, and develop the perfect cast, which includes distance and form. Take your time, too, when at practice, and keep at one thing until you get it right.—Lou. S. Darling in Recreation.

Shooting.

SOME MODERN FREAK WEAPONS.

We are a conservative race, and startling departures from the conventional find as a rule little favour in our eyes. This is especially the case with sporting fire-arms, and the British gunmaker seldom allows his imagination to run riot, when placing a new gun or rifle on the market.

Our French neighbours are, however, far less bound by convention than ourselves, as an examination of some of their gunmakers' lists will abundantly prove. I have lately been giving a practical trial to a French rifle of exceedingly novel construction. It is a 22 rim-fire, and is chambered for the Winchester special 22 cartridge, which shoots 7½ grains of black powder, or its smokeless equivalent, and a 45 grain bullet. The peculiarity of the rifle is that it has three bores in a single barrel. The three bores are parallel, and the three cartridges are exploded simultaneously by a single lock. The idea of the rifle is that it will enable one to kill shy duck at ranges where a gun is useless. A friend, who had lately purchased the weapon, asked me to go and see him, and give the invention a thorough trial. I was very favourably impressed with the finish and handiness of the rifle, which, though the barrel is about 26 inches long, weighs only 6½lbs. The sights might be better: there is a fixed sight for 50 metres, and two flap sights for 100 and 150 metres respectively. The action is a bolt one, but instead of having the slots in which the bolt lugs engage, in the recessed breech end, the bolt head is hollowed out, and has the slots, while the lugs which engage in them are outside the breech end of the barrel. Thus the head of the bolt fits like a cap over the breech. This arrangement looks quite neat, and besides giving great strength, covers in the breech completely, so that no gas from a split base can get to the shooter's face. The extractor ejects the three empty shells together, as one opens the breech. The day on which I tried this rifle was very gusty, while the light was bad: the results obtained therefore may be regarded as very average, and not a bit better than one might expect, when using the rifle on real ducks under ordinary winter conditions.

We first of all set up a bunch of cardboard ducks at 110 yards. These profiles were cut to the exact size and shape of plucked mallard. Our six cardboard birds were arranged in a small group about 5 feet wide and approximately the same depth; in fact in the sort of relative positions in which one often sees small bunches of fowl.

I used a handy rail as a seat, and steadied my rifle against a post when aiming. The result of a number of shots was that about three duck would have been bagged for every two shots: that is the average number of central hits was 1·5 per shot. As might be expected, the grouping of the three bullets was most irregular. Sometimes they would make a rough triangle of 8 or 9 inches side, at other times two would be close together and the third 10 to 11 inches away. Sometimes the same duck would get two bullets at once through the middle of the body. Once only I got no hits, the bullets all striking the grass just under the nearest duck; I think this failure was entirely my own fault, and not the rifle's and that I held that particular shot low.

The shots at 110 yards would have all been about in a 12-inch circle. We then put up a single duck at 112 yards, and I fired several shots at it. The result was that the single bird would have been bagged two out of three times.

The above trials were, I confess a good deal of a surprise to me: I did not expect that in such a light rifle it would have been possible to group the three bullets so closely together. I look on the weapon as a complete success, and a thoroughly practical tool for shooting wildfowl at long ranges. It will be observed that we only shot the rifle at a range where the heaviest of shoulder guns would have been practically useless. I would have liked to try the rifle also at 150 yards, but the paddock where we were shooting did not admit of a longer distance than 112 yards. The effect at 150 yards would I expect, have been rather better than half what it was at 110. That is probably one duck per shot would have been bagged out of the flock, and one duck in three, shooting at single birds.

The 22 W.R.F. is a good cartridge for a multiple barrelled rifle, as it has considerable power, combined with a high degree of accuracy. This ammunition shoots well in fact up to 200 yards. We used smokeless cartridges of U.M.C. make, and there was one misfire in 48 shots. This misfire was due to the rifle, as examining the triangle shaped striker with a magnifying glass, I found the inner edge of one of the points slightly lower than the other two. Probably someone had snapped off the lock with the rifle empty, and so burred the striker.

I may add that I have been so highly impressed with the performance of this French "Canardiere," that I intend to get one for myself, if my next place of residence should be one where there is an open foreshore frequented by wildfowl. It is on the shores of estuaries, and tidal rivers, where no cover exists within shot-gun range of the ducks, feeding places, that the French three-barrelled rifle would be so invaluable. The light weight of the weapon itself and its ammunition, is also a great point. The Canardiere is made by the Manufacture Francaise d'Armes et Cycles, Saint-Etienne. The price, in highest quality and finish, is about £7.

The same firm make other novel weapons, regarding the practical utility of which, I am not so confident.

One of these is a bolt action gun, with the same action as the three-barrelled rifle, but with two smooth bores in the same barrel, one above the other. The top one is 9 m/m calibre, and the lower 6 m/m, both being chambered for the rim-fire shot cartridges.

The idea is that you have two saloon guns in one, with a choice of ammunition according to the object aimed at. Perhaps for a collector the gun might be useful, as the 6 m/m cartridge loaded with dust shot would do for small birds, while the 9 m/m loaded with larger would serve to bring down bigger things.

Another curious weapon is a model of a duelling pistol, the propellant of which is liquefied carbonic acid gas contained in a tubular fore-end. The duellists wear masks and blouses of strong material, and thus can practise the duello without damaging each other. A semi-circular shield in front of the trigger guard protects the hand. The liquefied gas does not give the bullet much velocity, so it will not go through the loose blouse or wire mask.

Yet another quaint weapon is a 6 m/m central fire revolver, with twelve chambers, and two barrels. This pistol fires two shots simultaneously; six double shots in succession. The makers say in their catalogue "C'est une arme terrible." I have no doubt it would be most handy at close quarters, but not having tried it, I know nothing as to what sort of shooting it makes.

Having shown their ingenuity in the manufacture of deadly weapons, the same manufacturers offer for sale a bullet and knife-proof garment, which they call a "Protege-Corps Invulnerable." They say this armour is so flexible and so comfortable, weighing under three kilos. that those who get used to wearing it can hardly do without it, just as a woman cannot do without her corsets.

MAJOR A. A DUFF.

Honorary Secretary:—A. H. STEELE, ESQ.

First Day, Thursday, 11th January.

THE Winter Meeting opened this afternoon, but the attendance was on the small side, the fact that to-day is mail day accounting for the absence of many. Good sport was witnessed and close finishes were the order of the day. Nawab Mahomed Monnineddin Khan Bahadur won two races and Ruiz was the most successful rider, scoring three winning brackets. The arrangements were, as usual, tip-top and the Band of the 88rd Wallajahbad L. I. was in attendance and played at intervals during the afternoon. Results:—

THE BOBILI PLATE.—Rs. 550, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 100. 5 furlongs.

ELEY CARTRIDGES

—essential to good sport.

The most accurate and reliable of cartridges may not always suffice to ensure good sport, but good sport is out of the question without them.

Eley Cartridges do all that the best cartridges can do in this direction, with a trustworthiness which has won for them a measure of success greater probably than any other cartridges in the world.

Two 'Eley Loaded' Cartridges:

Eley 'Acme'
A bright orange 4-inch deep shell Cartridge, loaded with Eley (42-gr.) Smokeless Powder.

Eley 'Elold'
A light maroon Cartridge. Loaded with Eley (33-gr.) Smokeless. Light recoil: absolutely waterproof.

The above, and other Eley Specialities, may be obtained from Gunmakers and Dealers in Ammunition, everywhere.

Elgin

TENTS STAND FIRST.

¶ "ELGIN" TENTS have advertised themselves for nearly half a century, because every "ELGIN" TENT sold is a standing advertisement while the tent lasts.

¶ Each Tent made by THE ELGIN MILLS at Cawnpore is produced with equal care, whether the price is Rs 25 or Rs. 25,000. The Quality of Material, the Workmanship, the Finish always come up to the "ELGIN" reputation.

¶ You will be convinced if you buy an "ELGIN" TENT, which will speak for itself, or any friend who has used one, will confirm our statement.

Let us send you our Latest Catalogue, which is the most Complete Published.

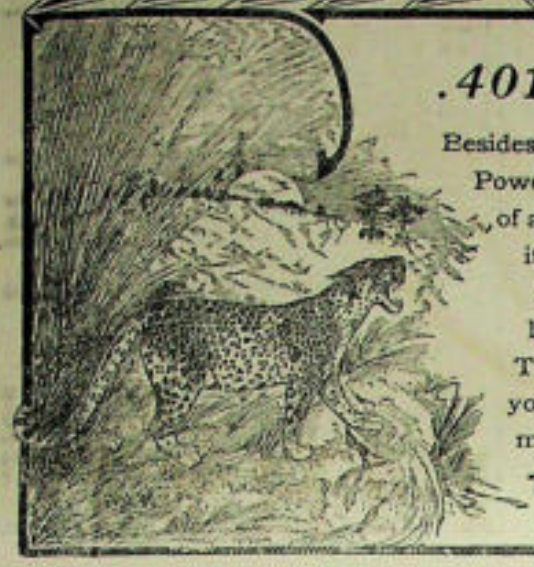
WINCHESTER



.401 Caliber High-Power Self-Loading Rifle.

Besides being the most powerful recoil-operated rifle made, the Winchester .401 Caliber High-Power Self-Loader is the simplest, strongest, most easily operated and most rapid shooting of all rifles of this type. For hunting game, the self-loading type of rifle is ideal, providing it is reliable; and when you can get the power and the swiftness and ease of action of the .401 Winchester, you have a battery that prepares you to meet any game alive. Just look at these figures: velocity of bullet, 2142 foot seconds; energy, 2038 foot pounds. These figures show that the .401 is more powerful than the .303 British, and in addition you have the increased rapidity of fire. This is further augmented by the interchangeable magazine system, the simplest, quickest and most effective method of loading ever devised.

THESE RIFLES CAN BE SEEN AT ALL GUNMAKERS'.

KEMPTON PARK.

On Boxing Day a bright morning that did not fulfil its promise tempted a rare holiday crowd to Kempton Park, Tattersall's and the silver rings being particularly well patronised, and it was a great pity that a soaking wet afternoon should have spoiled the pleasure on the day, umbrellas being in requisition from start to finish. The going was so bebbling that the hoofs cut fairly into it, while with a mist brooding over the park, the light was very bad. Under the circumstances, fields panned out fairly well. Results:—

Won by eight lengths; same between second and third.

Shorn on Wednesday of the holiday element, the attendance fell short of the big muster of Boxing Day, but this time the morning bore out its rosy promise, the afternoon being delightful. Thanks to the improvement in the weather and a liberal distribution of straw, the paddock afforded pretty sound footing for the enthusiasts who went out to take a look at the competitors. The course, however, rode heavy, as exemplified by the dead-beaten condition in which the competitors finished. Fields ruled small but the sport was interesting throughout. Results:—

FOOTBALL.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

SOME surprising results in the First League marked the opening of the holidays. Newcastle United, Bolton Wanderers, and Tottenham Hotspur, who occupied the three leading positions in the competition, all meeting with defeat last Saturday. Vagaries of form generally characterised what, if the festive season to most people, is a period of great stress to football professionals who are called upon to get through an enormous amount of work during the space of ten days, but it is usually after Christmas rather than before that so many unexpected results take place. In view of what occurred yesterday, therefore, the opening of the New Year may well find the First League offering a very different aspect from what it presented a week ago. Happily for Newcastle United, that team had established a lead of four points over their nearest rivals and thus, defeat from Preston North End notwithstanding, they still retain their place at the head of the competition. Whereas, however, a week ago Newcastle occupied a very strong position indeed, to-day they find themselves only three points ahead of Middlesbrough, who have, moreover, a match in hand. Curiously enough, there are now two other clubs, in addition to Middlesbrough, no more than three points behind Newcastle, and each of these—Manchester United and Notts County—have engaged in one game less than the leaders.

Tottenham Hotspur, despite their defeat at Bolton on the previous Saturday, were not expected to experience much difficulty in overcoming Bradford City, for the Cupholders, although they had won seven games out of eight at Bradford, possessed a wretched record for out engagements. Indeed, away from Bradford, the City could only claim one win and three draws as against five defeats, and their one success, if achieved at the expense of Newcastle United, dated back to the early days of September. Hotspur opened in promising form and were perhaps unlucky to have a goal secured by Minter disallowed. Certainly, even if the interval arrived without any score no reason existed at that point why Tottenham should not win. Some startling football characterised the resumption, for R. Steel at once opened the scoring for Hotspur and two or three minutes later Bradford—thanks to Thompson and Walden—were a goal ahead. From a corner Tottenham drew level, R. Steel again registering the point and everything pointed to a draw when in the last minute of the game Walden went right through the home defence and scored a third and winning goal for the Cupholders.

Scarcely anyone could have expected that Woolwich Arsenal would hold their own with Notts County at Nottingham, for the Plumstead team had to take the field without Common, Chalmers, or Randall—three of their crack forwards. Indeed, when a week previously the Arsenal overcame Middlesbrough in such capital style, Chalmers scored two of the three goals and Randall the other. The alterations in the front rank naturally militated against the prospects of the London team. Calvert, brought in as inside-right in the absence of Common, did equalise a goal by Richards, but prior to the interval Matthews placed Notts ahead again and before the end Flint secured a third goal for Notts. Even fully represented the Arsenal would probably have experienced much difficulty in escaping defeat, for Notts during the past month have beaten Sheffield United, Oldham Athletic,

Bolton Wanderers, Bradford City, and now Woolwich Arsenal. Notts are having a very curious season. They played so well at first that early in October they stood second on the list. Striking a very bad patch they next lost four matches out of five and drew the other, whereas their last five engagements have all ended in victory. The Arsenal, unless they gain some points as the result of their two meetings with Hotsper, are likely to find themselves very badly placed at the end of the holidays, for their two following matches are at Liverpool and Manchester.

Apart from the match at Tottenham, the only contest in the First League furnishing a victory for the visiting team was that at Gigg Lane, where Bury, losing to Everton, met with their tenth defeat in sixteen games. Bury led at the interval, but Everton, adding two points subsequently, snatched a victory. Sunderland did not win at Ewood Park, but in drawing with Blackburn Rovers on that enclosure they accomplished a highly creditable performance. Their two games with the Rovers have yielded them three points. Aston Villa overcame Sheffield United at Birmingham, as they had previously done at Bramall Lane and by the same narrow margin—1 to 0. Bolton Wanderers found Manchester United at Old Trafford too strong for them and West Bromwich cut up badly against Sheffield Wednesday.

With the three leading clubs all successful—Burnley and Hull City at home and Derby County at Grimsby—the position of affairs at the head of the Second Division of the League underwent no change. Indeed, the only alteration among the first half-dozen clubs was that Chelsea, thanks to a draw at Bradford, went up above Wolverhampton Wanderers, who lost to Burnley at Turf Moor. Of the other London teams, Clapton Orient went down at Barnsley, but did not sacrifice their position in the table, while Fulham, defeating Notts Forest at Craven Cottage, made a useful advance, and are now eighth on the list. Until yesterday two clubs—Gainsborough Trinity and Glossop—had not won a single match in the League competition, but curiously enough they were both successful. Glossop, at home, defeated Birmingham, while Gainsborough Trinity went to Stockport and gained a remarkable victory by three goals to none. With Derby County they enjoyed the distinction of winning away from home, no fewer than seven teams being triumphant on their own grounds. Thus the results were in many respects like those of the previous week.

Queen's Park Rangers missed a great opportunity of getting to the head of the Southern League again—a position they lost five weeks ago. They had the best of the play at Park Royal but, because of wretched shooting, suffered defeat from Norwich City, who obtained two goals to one. This result was perhaps even more unexpected than the defeat of Swindon, who had failed so badly at Northampton on the previous Saturday that confidence in their ability was rudely shaken. The presence of Fleming—absent a week before—did not make sufficient improvement in the Swindon team, and the Albion from Brighton won handsomely by a margin of two goals. The defeat at home of the two leading teams has not altered the aspect of the competition so very much, because Northampton—third on the list—could only draw at Luton, while Crystal Palace lost at Brentford by one goal of the match at Griffin Park—an interesting event, as the teams meet on the same ground in the first round of the Cup. Plymouth Argyle—one of four visiting teams to win—have risen to fourth place. They have not suffered defeat since 21st October, when they were last but two on the list. During the past two months Argyle stand out by themselves as by far the most consistent side in the competition, and the West Country club are probably stronger than at any previous time in their history. With the luckless Leyton as their victims at New Cross, Millwall found little glory in winning by a bare goal. Altogether London teams had a very bad afternoon, as Millwall and Brentford, the only teams to secure points, did so at the expense of sides from the same district.

CHRISTMAS FOOTBALL.

Football enthusiasts held Christmas carnival all over the country yesterday, great crowds being present at all the matches. In the South most of them were contested in the morning, but in the North afternoon play was pretty general.

At Tottenham the new terraces were tested to their limit. The official returns state that 47,109 people entered the ground, and there must have been another 10,000 who failed to get in at all. The gates were shut shortly before the start of the match.

As a game the match did not compare with the contest on the same ground on Saturday, when Bradford beat the Spurs. Tottenham were always much the better side. They scored three goals early in the first half, and eased up. They got two more early in the second half, and slackened their efforts again.

Woolwich did a good deal of attacking during the closing stages of each half, but could not get through, and were beaten by 5 to 0. The goals were scored by Minter (two), Middlemiss, McTavish, and Darnell. Neither side was quite at full strength. Dr. L. R. Reese was hurt at Nottingham on Saturday, and as Burdett is down with tonsilitis Crawford, of the reserve team, kept goal for the Arsenal. Greenaway was also crocked at Nottingham, and Winship came into the forward line. Tottenham had Webster for Brittan, who was hurt in the match with Bradford City on Saturday.

Newcastle, the leaders, played a great game at Oldham, and beat the Athletic by four goals to two. This result gives Newcastle a lead of three points over Bradford City, their nearest rivals.

At Manchester, 50,000 people saw Bradford City beat the United by one goal to nil. Play was scrappy in the first half, when nothing was scored. After the interval West failed with a penalty kick, and Duckworth put through his own goal from a corner.

Middlesbrough drew with Everton, and maintained their high position in the League. Indeed, at the moment Bradford City are second and Middlesbrough, Tottenham Hotspur and Blackburn Rovers are all on an equality for third place.

At Blackburn the Rovers and Sheffield Wednesday played a pointless draw. Bolton Wanderers, who were beaten at Manchester by the United on Saturday, met with another mishap yesterday at Liverpool, where they were beaten by the only goal scored in the game.

Notts County was another of the leading sides to meet with a reverse, Manchester City, the last club but one on the table, creating a surprise by winning on the banks of the Trent by the only goal scored in the match.

Sunderland, who are displaying capital form just now, won at Bury by 2 to 0. This is Bury's eleventh defeat in seventeen games. Sunderland scored a goal in each half, but Bury should have at least held their own, their chief weakness being in front of goal.

RUGBY RULES.

BLACKHEATH vs. OLD ALLEYNIANS.—At Blackheath, the home side completely outplayed the Old Alleynians and won by 4 goals and 6 tries to a goal from a mark and a penalty goal. The game was delayed owing to the late arrival of the Old Alleynians, and was finished almost in darkness. Blackheath were without Neale, and several of their forwards, but they had Knott at stand-off half, whilst the visitors were rather weak. The Blackheath three-quarters had plenty of openings made for them by their halves, but their passing was wild, and they should have scored more frequently than they did. As it was, however, they crossed their opponents' lines four times in the first half, and six in the second, whilst the only response was a goal from a mark in the Blackheath twenty-five, and another from near the touch line, both goals being placed by Greenwood. The Blackheath forwards played a great game, and, as often happens, outstayed their opponents and finished as fresh as they began. Pillman was in splendid form, and opened the scoring with the best try of the day. He took a pass from Owen in excellent style, and, after doubling back, ran straight in under the posts for Dickson to convert. He scored a second try before the interval, and the other try scorers were Craven and Owen (two each), Friday, Knott, Stokes, and Pym. The match was not taken very seriously towards the close, and the try scorers were allowed to take the goal kicks. Successful shots were made by Dickson, Craven, Knott, and Stokes. Blackheath, 38; Old Alleynians, 6 points.

OLD MERCHANT TAYLORS vs. HARLEQUINS.—By the decisive margin of two placed goals and two tries the Old Merchant Taylors beat the Harlequins at Richmond. The Harlequins were not by any means at full strength, but had a very useful side. The Taylors' forwards showed all their customary energy, and had plenty of support from the backs, who were very effective in much of their passing and always good in defence. Adrian Stoop did great things, as usual, for his side, but the passing by the Harlequin backs broke down badly, and the side never really settled down to their usual game. Throughout the first half the Taylors were pressing, and very soon Roe, from a pass by O'Callaghan ran in; while a little later Allen scored cleverly after a nicely handled round of passing; Cheesman this time kicked a goal. After change of ends the game took much the same course, but once Stoop, following up a kick of his own over the goal-line, was within an ace of scoring, but save for that occasion the Harlequins were always pressed, and, despite all their good defensive play O'Callaghan and Allen ran in with further tries. Ryan was successful with one of the place kicks. As the game went the Taylors were clearly the better side, and their win was well earned. Old Merchant Taylors, 16 points; Harlequins, 0.

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

On Saturday the Y.M.C.A., Presidency and Parsee Clubs were able to play on their grounds, but the pitches were in bad condition and unless there is rain the maidan clubs will not be able to improve their grounds, which are at present very hard while the grass is parched. However the khalasees are busy watering the pitches, but this means money which some clubs can ill afford.

The cricket season at the gardens is soon coming to a close and of the few remaining matches the games between Calcutta and the Maharaja of Nattore's team, which is fixed for next Saturday and Sunday, and the annual match between the English and Indian Schools, which is to come off on the 3rd and 4th of February, are the only two important items on the card. As Nattore's best players will be leaving Calcutta after the Ballygunge match, the Indian Schools will not be a representative side, whilst on the other hand the English Schools will have the pick of a large selection, including the officers of the 3rd Middlesex, the sister battalion at Dum-Dum, and the Black Watch. On Wednesday morning the ever sporting Rifle Brigade left Calcutta for Rawalpindi, but the Rifles played very little cricket during their stay here, although lieutenants Riley, Brockholes and Earle, Major Harman, and last, but not least, Colonel Shute, the corps possessed five keen cricketers. It is pleasing, however, to say that the Rifles have been relieved by another sporting lot—the Black Watch, who are of course, best at "Soccer," but the new regiment have also a good cricket eleven.

The most interesting match of the week was the return game between Calcutta and the Military—a one day affair—which took place at the gardens on Sunday. The wicket was in good condition, but the attendance was meagre. The Military who had first knock put up a substantial total of 228 for seven wickets after which the closure was applied. Captain E. B. Powell 65, H. L. Riley 43, N. H. B. Lyon 28, and R. N. Bocquet 23, all batted with success. Calcutta were without A. P. Muir and N. W. Chisholm, undoubtedly their two best bowlers, but it was in the batting that the home team failed, the whole side being out for 159.

M. B. Quin batted steadily for 62, and J. D. Guise and G. Turnbull, the other veterans, also shaped nicely for 34 and 28 respectively. S. C. S. Lee for Calcutta took 3 wickets for 33 runs, while for the Military Sergeant Sharp of the 3rd Middlesex, who was the only non-commissioned officer playing, got 4 wickets for 31 runs—a good performance.

The other matches on Sunday were of less interest, and for the first time this season B. A. White took a rest. This brilliant cricketer was to have represented Calcutta against the Military but declined the invitation.

At Ballygunge the old suburban club beat the Dum-Dum Garrison by 46 runs. Batting first, Ballygunge knocked up 163 to which H. F. Forster 57, P. Hoerder 35, and F. Gould 33, were the principal run-getters. With the exception of S. E. A. Whiteway Dum-Dum were at full strength, but the side could only total 117. Sergeant Piggott, who is the best all-round man, the 1st Middlesex possess, batted steadily for 27, C. Lord hit well for 32. Lieutenant F. H. Gould for Dum-Dum and his name sake the old North Point boy, both bowled with success, the officers taking five for 44 runs, while the home team's bowler 3 for 35.

The Maharaja of Nattore's team beat St. Xavier's Club by 4 wickets and 164 runs. The game was played on Nattore's ground, and the visiting team who batted first were all out for 92, A. Vaughan being top scorer with 37, Sampre took six wickets for 34 runs. Nattore replied with 260 for six, Ogad Shunker, who came from Prince Ranjit's state, contributing a not out 102 by excellent cricket, K. Roy, who at one time played for the Town Club, also shaped well for 69.

At Garden Reach on Sunday the Port Commissioners beat the Calcutta "A" by the big margin of 3 wickets and 183 runs. Calcutta were all out for a miserable total of 59, due principally to the excellent bowling of Teddy Templeton, who took five wickets for 12 runs. The Port Commissioners replied with 242 for 7 wickets, A. C. Patterson 28, T. H. Elderton 44, G. Allen 60, H. G. Beaks not out 26, being the principal subscribers.

In a half day match between the Y.M.C.A. and the Customs on Saturday the latter had decidedly the best of a drawn game. The game was played on the Y.M.C.A. ground and the Customs, who batted first, declared at 116 for two wickets; M. Quiterio not out 41, C. Barlow not out 24, and Mr. J. A. Stevens 34, all batted attractively. The home team lost 7 wickets for 92 runs.

At Nattore's ground on Saturday time saved the Mahomedan Sporting from defeat. Nattore scored 210 for 7 to which H. R. Mehta batted brilliantly for a not out 111. The Mahomedan Sporting lost 7 wickets for 56.

Boxing.

LANGFORD vs. McVEA.

THE following details of the big contest at Sydney on Boxing Day appears in the Sydney Referee :—

1st round.—They moved out to each other as if setting to partners for a dance. Both were cool, and each had his wits well about him. McVea scored with a couple of lefts which were mere feelers than aught else; then they clinched and Langford hooked his left to the jaw. McVea's retaliatory left swung round the neck, and then he hooked left to the ear, followed by left to the face and left to the ear. Langford essayed a left to the head, but missed, and he blocked a similar effort from the other fellow, following with a left that plainly impressed McVea. Here, amid great excitement Langford staggered the bigger man with a right to the head; then both landed straight lefts, Langford fended a long left half hook, half swing and swung his own to the ribs, and scored again with the same member in the same place, and then up to the back of the neck. McVea's lance-like left brought from a foot away with direful intent was neatly blocked, and he looked the more serious of the two. Langford's left jolt found the stomach an easy target, and the three minutes ended with Langford slightly the better placed in points. It was a good clean battle, and looked like continuing so.

2nd round.—McVea started hostilities with a left hook, which Langford blocked neatly; then he hooked the sinister member to the ear as Langford waded in, and landed another one on the same spot before they broke away. McVea's left found the chin nicely, and trying once more for the same mark, he missed badly. Langford grasped the situation too slowly to make the most of his foeman's momentary helplessness. McVea's right walloped the head hard, and his left hooked the chin before Langford drove a light left to the stomach. McVea's left caught the jaw—a fair punch—and Langford's left wound round the big fellow's neck in a rather rough cuddle. A fruitless rush to close quarters by both saw McVea's left make contact with the head, while Langford's right missed, but he blocked a beauty left and swung left to the body, copping a right on his ear as he jumped away. Langford's left went over the shoulder of his vis-a-vis, and he followed with a short one that failed to reach. McVea's left and Langford's right to the head were noted as good blows McVea scored two rights to the head, and grazed the top of the "Tar Baby's" cranium with another. Langford did something good when he smashed a left to the stomach, and his left to the ribs, for they plainly told. McVea's handiest weapon jabbed the face with power and he poked a harmless left to the neck. Langford cleverly back-moved a left, which seemed to spell trouble, and crossed a right to the jaw—perhaps the best blow so far—which sent McVea back in his tracks. Just before going-all McVea's left found the other fellow's face somewhat easy as he came in. McVea's round.

5th round.—Langford, still boring in as he always did, just beat a hostile left hook, and swung his own left through space. Twice did they appear inclined to wrestle, and twice did Referee "Snowy" Baker separate them. A clash, and each swung the other off one foot in a sort of whirl caused by the violence of the contact. Another clinch. Langford's left shot fairly into McVea's face—a good clean blow—and then he socked two rights to the ribs. Close to the enemy, McVea landed a good right uppercut, and Langford's left crashed into the body, while McVea's connected back of the ear as Langford ducked inwards from it. McVea poked a left uppercut home, and he poked his tongue out when Langford's left and right to the head, as the big fellow was forced on to the ropes, rattled him some. McVea's left to the head was short, but the next attempt proved successful. Mac essayed a left to the body and missed. A clinch followed, and McVea landed left on the head. McVea's left swing was blocked, but he jabbed a straight left to its mark. Langford moved about in a menacing way till McVea sort of half jumped, half fell, in on him to get a left hook in the neck. Twice did McVea fail with lefts to the head, and Langford followed suit once, using an uppercut. McVea jabbed a left to the throat. Langford's round.

10th round.—McVea missed with a left hook to the head, but he did better trying again. Langford, while close, rammed his right to the chin, but did not get away quickly enough to beat McVea's stab to the body. Twice did Langford chop right to the ear and neck, and Mac smiled after each blow. Langford's left to the face had a lot of force, and he swung his right to miss by a good deal. Langford blocked a left, and landed a light left in the body, and blocked another left, and brought his own to bear on the enemy's neck. Langford's swung left to the body, and scored right and left hooks to the chin, causing McVea's knees to give way, and he hung on to Langford for support. Clinching lasted a little time. McVea hooked left to the head, and another left hook from him was fended. Langford's right worried the ribs, and his left went over McVea's head. Langford's right swing missed. Langford tried again, with better luck. In a clash McVea's head struck Langford over the right eye and raised a lump as big as an ordinary egg.

11th round.—The vim of the thing began to slacken off a bit. Early Langford had a great opening offered him, but he did not see it till too late. McVea scored two lefts to the head, and Langford sent a fine punch to the nose, followed by a right uppercut. Again was big Sam seen to be smiling broadly. McVea's left hook was partially blocked, and another attempt fell short. Langford jabbed left to the face, and blocked another left hook: then he drove his left to the body. Langford now notched a heavy left jab to the chin, and a right in the ribs. McVea poked a left to the face before Langford brought the house down through landing a severe right uppercut in a clinch. Langford's left to the face, and McVea's right hook to the face, and left jabbed on the same spot, were applauded. Langford still in the lead.

Wonderful Tonic.—"John," said a wife who was supposed to be on her deathbed, "in case of my death, I think a man of your temperament and domestic nature, aside from the good of the children, ought to marry again." "Do you think so, my dear?" "I certainly do, after a reasonable length of time." "Well, now, do you know, dear, that relieves my mind of a great burden. The little Widow Jenkins has acted rather demurely toward me ever since you were taken ill. She is not the woman that you are, of course—a strong-minded intelligent woman of character—but she is plump and pretty and I am sure she would make me a very desirable wife." The next day Mrs. Jones was able to sit up; the following day she went downstairs, and the third day she was planning a new dress.

THE FISHERIES OF THE BAY OF BENGAL.

According to a lecture delivered in December last before the Royal Society of Arts by the well-known expert Dr. J. Travis Jenkins who at the invitation of Government, paid a long visit to India in 1908-9 for the purpose of a practical investigation of the fisheries, the "harvest of the sea" in the Bay of Bengal offers a mine of wealth to any enterprising company which will undertake the task of establishing a trawling station, and carry out the work of trawling in a systematic and up-to-date manner.

A good many years ago Lieutenant-Colonel Maxwell, C.I.E., who was formerly in charge of Burmese fisheries, stated that in his opinion "wealth beyond the dreams of avarice" awaited the persons who first had the courage to exploit the fisheries of India in a modern fashion. Lieutenant-Colonel Alcock, formerly Superintendent of the Indian Museum at Calcutta, and naturalist on the Royal Indian Marine Survey Ship Investigator was equally confident. He wrote: "The sea-fisheries of the Bay of Bengal are of a value well-nigh incalculable. That they are unknown, uncared for, and unappreciated, is unfortunately true; but it is equally true that they will prove a mine of wealth to whoever may have the enterprise to exploit them and the tenacity of purpose to work them in the face of the apathy and incredulity that at present exist regarding them."

These opinions have hitherto attracted little or no attention on the part of capitalists, but as they are fully endorsed by the results of the trawling carried on by Dr. Travis Jenkins in the Golden Crown there is some hope that the richness of our seas and estuaries in valuable food-fishes will not be suffered to remain neglected for ever; and that such a splendid opportunity of not only earning good dividends for those who subscribe the capital, but of largely augmenting the revenues of India, will attract the attention it undoubtedly merits.

Despite cyclones and the Monsoon, the experience of the Golden Crown has rendered it certain that trawling can be successfully carried on in the Bay of Bengal night and day at all seasons of the year. Working with only one set of trawls (that on the opposite side being rendered unavailable on the result of repairs done to the vessel in India), the Golden Crown was able to make four hauls in the twenty-four hours; and it is therefore certain that a vessel working with the gear of both sides could easily accomplish half-a-dozen. Every haul made by the Golden Crown brought up a large supply of fish, of which a big percentage belonged to the more valuable food-types, such as bamalo, hilsa, and a variety of "tupsi." Among the remainder, were a vast variety of inferior kinds of edible fishes, such as cat-fishes, which would find a ready market among the poorer classes of Calcutta natives. The only uneatable fishes taken were sharks and sword-fishes; but even these are not to be regarded as useless, for their fins and livers have a very considerable value. Indeed, when it is recalled that the liver of a big shark may scale as much as one hundred weight, it will be evident that an enormous yield of oil from this source may confidently be anticipated.

It is further satisfactory to learn that, by means of ice-chambers fish taken in the Bay can be landed in good condition in Bengal. Dr. Jenkins consider, however, that Diamond Harbour would form a much more suitable site for a trawling station than Calcutta:—

"Diamond Harbour," he observes, is merely a tidal creek, with no facilities at present for trawling, but it possesses numerous advantages over Calcutta. In the first place, it is much easier of approach from the sea, some of the most difficult shoals including the celebrated 'James and Mary,' being situated above it. A master of a steam-trawler, after some experience of the localty, ought to be able to pilot his vessel without assistance.

"Diamond Harbour is connected with Calcutta by a branch line of the Eastern Bengal State Railway, so that perishable goods could be rapidly transported there. Coal and fresh-water could be brought down by launches or country boats, whichever was cheaper. Land for building purposes could be obtained at a cheaper rate than in Calcutta, and there should be no difficulty about coolie labour. Coal and water are both cheap, but ice is expensive, and it would certainly pay any trawling company to make their own ice. There is no Customs duty on fresh fish, and the harbour dues (if any) would be very moderate. There are no laws or regulations restricting trawling in any manner in the Bay of Bengal, and none will probably ever be required. There would be no opposition to trawling by native fishermen as the natives do not fish in the open sea except to a very limited extent off the Madras coast. The fish merchants in Calcutta might, and probably would, attempt to boycott trawl-caught fish, since it would tend to interfere with the large profits they at present enjoy. Hands for deck and engine-room work can be obtained at cheap rates, but in my opinion no trawler could fish successfully in the Bay of Bengal with less than two Europeans on board."

The possibilities of the Bengal fisheries do not, however, by any means end with the Bay itself, for there is the vast tract of the Sunderbuns, with waters that are in part salt, in part brackish, and in part fresh. And it is to certain parts of this area that the hilsa resorts in shoals during the rainy season for the purpose of spawning, which is carried out in fresh water. Then, too, there is the Chilka Lake, and likewise the great area of water in the Puri district. As regards the advantages of an estuarine over a marine fishery, Dr. Jenkins speaks as follows:—

"A much smaller capital would be required than in the case of a steam trawling company. To equip and maintain a small fleet of motor launches would cost far less than a corresponding number of steam-trawlers. These launches would be mainly used for transport, which is the chief difficulty in the way of development of the fisheries.

"The risk of casualties and delays in the supply to the Calcutta market consequent on the weather would be much less than in the case of deep-sea trawlers.

"The development of the estuarine fisheries would be independent of the importation of European labour, and would consequently cost much less than steam-trawling, where, in my opinion, Europeans could never be dispensed with. In an estuarine fishery it is rather by improving and modifying the local methods of fishing than by introducing foreign methods which may prove unsuitable to local conditions, that success is to be anticipated.

"The taste and good qualities of the estuarine fish are already well known to the population of Bengal, whereas sea-fish are not so well known, and are certainly less appreciated. In the estuaries there are fish suited to the taste and means of all classes of the population. The bamalos, bhektis, coja-bhektis, mullets, shrimps, and prawns compare favourably with the best of fish anywhere, while the siluroids [cat-fish], gobies, and others would suit persons of moderate means. When one considers the class of fish found on the tables of well-to-do up-country residents at present, it seems almost incredible that no attempt has been made to develop on a large scale the possibilities of the Sunderbuns and other coastal fisheries of Bengal."

It is further urged that the establishment of a separate Government Fisheries Department ought to be at once sanctioned.

Those desirous of further information on the subject should consult the full report of the lecture published in the Journal of the Royal Society of Arts for 22nd December, 1911. If the commercial world neglect this apparently golden opportunity, it will not be the fault of either Dr. Jenkins or ourselves.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The Calcutta Second Meeting came to a conclusion on Saturday last and we have now had two days' flat racing and two days' steeplechasing at Tollygunge. The Calcutta Fourth Extra Meeting is run on Saturday next, the 27th: there is no racing at this centre on the 3rd February owing to the intervention of Lucknow, but we start again on the 10th after the Fifth Extra and, so far as at present is known, there will be ten Extras in all as was the case last season when the season finally came to an end on the 15th March. If there are ten Extras this season the last of them will be run on the 16th of that month. The duration of the Calcutta season is influenced almost entirely by the weather, for if it sets in hot in March as it frequently does the heat gets so intense that racing is almost impossible. In Bombay in addition to the five days of the big meeting they manage as many as sixteen Extras. Here we have seven days of our big meetings, two days' steeplechasing and ten Extras or nineteen days' racing against Bombay's twenty-one. There has already been a fairly big exodus to Bombay and Lucknow, but after next Saturday's meeting Calcutta will be practically denuded of her racing population and though a good many people will return after Lucknow the best of the season may now be said to be over. Mumford goes to Bombay with the rest of his horses this week, a big detachment of Mr. Galstaun's horses go on the 29th with Fergusson, Bence with the Kour Sahib's goes on from Lucknow, also Ramshaw, who has already some en route for Bombay and practically the only big stable not leaving Calcutta is Sir A. A. Apcar's. These horses do not go to Bombay and make no move till they finally leave Calcutta for their summer quarters at Bangalore. Nevertheless there will probably be quite a big enough muster left in Calcutta after Lucknow to see us through, as a number of owners nowadays find it worth their while to reserve their horses until the big fish have gone away and the prizes are therefore easier to win. The Extra Meetings very often furnish extremely good racing and the stakes for meetings of their class are far from bad.

On Saturday last the attendance was not very large, though the racing was good and the course very fast, the consequence being that two Calcutta time records were lowered. The Calcutta course at this time of the year is very fast because it is allowed to get extremely hard and we personally would rather see races run in worse time and know that there was less risk to horses' legs and feet than is at present the case. Most owners will agree with us we have little doubt when we say that we would rather do without these fast records and have a soft racing surface. With an unlimited water-supply and all the necessary appliances for watering the course there is no excuse for Calcutta ever being hard. When the water-mains were laid on we hoped that the course would be kept soft and that all attempts to make it like a tennis lawn or a golf green would be abandoned in favour of utility.

This, however, has not happened and the Calcutta course is very hard and the grass is mown till it is as close cut as it well can be. If the grass were left long it would for one thing hold the dew and any artificial moisture that might be added and it would also form a useful cushion and lessen the concussion. The same thing was observable on the Tollygunge Steeplechase course this year. It would not matter a great deal if these courses were a bit on the soft side provided the moisture was not only on the surface and what if their appearance were spoilt by the amount of cutting up that they would get? Better this surely than that horses' feet and legs should suffer as they at present do. Nobody is particularly anxious to see time records lowered, but every owner and every racing man must be concerned in keeping horses sound and in not seeing them race upon adamant.

The two time records lowered were the 5-furlong and the 1¼ mile, Tangaroa winning the Hooghly Plate with 10st. 7lb. in the saddle in 1min. 1sec. and Jemima, who had 7st. 5lb., won the Merchants' Plate in 2mins. 34secs., the previous fastest on record for the latter race having been Dalkeith's 2mins. 34⅕secs. with 9st. 6lb. in 1906. Jemima's performance was a good one, but considering the weight she carried not intrinsically better than Dalkeith's. The English record for the 1¼ mile is Zinfandel's 2mins. 28⅖secs. at Manchester with 6st. 12lb. in 1903, but Finasseur, a French horse, is credited with having galloped this distance with 9st. 2lb. at Chantilly in 1905 in 2mins. 28⅕secs. The Australian record, according to the Australian Racing Chronicle, is 2mins. 32½secs. which was put up by Noctuiform with 8st. 10lb. in 1905 and by Maniapoto with 8st. in the same year and on the same course, Randwick. The English record for 5 furlongs is 56⅖ secs. and this time has been put up several times by, amongst others, Mirida 1905, Master Willie 1903, Blue Diamond 1903, and Le Buff 1903. There is an American record on a straight course partly down hill of 56⅖secs. put up by Maid Marian in 1894 at Morris Park, N. Y. The New Zealand record is 58secs. by Machine Gun, who had the astonishing weight of 11st. 5lb. in the saddle and put up this time at Riccarton on the 12th November 1904. The Australian record is 1min. 0¼sec. by Walwa in 1893 at Maribyrnong. Master Willie's is accepted as that world's record by Badminton and on the occasion (21st April 1903) he carried 9st. 7lb. at Epsom. Tangaroa's performance considering that he had 10st. 7lb. in the saddle and was drawn number nine in a field of fourteen on such a particularly bad five-furlong course as the Calcutta one, is a performance of very high merit and it would be an interesting calculation to try and find out how much he could have cut off this if he had had say a stone less on his back and had had the rails all the way or had been on a straight course. There are many people who say that horses gallop faster round a turn, or at any rate make better time, which is not always the same thing. There may be something in this, but given exactly similar conditions of going and a horse that will run straight, we should be inclined to wager that he would put up better time on the straight course.

A LOT of horses have a tendency to hug the rails and they gallop better when they have a rail alongside them, but a horse accustomed to a straight course like the wide spaces at Newmarket, for instance, would probably go faster straight than he would round a curve. In Calcutta our five-furlong course is on a continuous curve for 3½ furlongs of the distance and the start is practically on a turn, so that the outside position means a great disadvantage and the inside one, provided a horse is quick out of the gate and quick on his legs, a very great handicap in his favour. Tangaroa won this same race (the Hooghly Plate) last year with 9st. 8lb. in 1min. 1¼sec. and his performance this year is therefore a marvellously consistent one. This season also when he won the Fort Plate, 5 furlongs, he cut it in 1min. 1⅕secs., having 9st. 7lb. in the saddle and winning with ease from Neith and Harene. The success of this fine horse this season has been altogether phenomenal. He has now been out seven times altogether and has won five races and on the other two occasions he has been second. He commenced by winning the December Plate, 7 furlongs, (Rs. 1,470), carrying 9st. 7lb.; he then won the Fort Plate, 5 furlongs (Rs. 1,470) with 9st. 7lb.; the Trials 1 mile (Rs. 11,800) with 9st. 3lb.; the Calcutta Plate, 6 furlongs (Rs. 4,900) with 9st. 8lb.; he dead-heated for second place in the Metropolitan, 6 furlongs, carrying 10st. 7lb. with Socialist 8st. 5lb., Victo 8st., winning by three-quarters of a length and he was second with 10st. 7lb. to Victo 8st. 8lb. in the 1 mile Prince of Wales' Plate and he has now won the Hooghly Plate, 5 furlongs (Rs. 4,900) with 10st. 7lb. In addition it may be mentioned that Tangaroa, when he won the Trials, lowered the Indian mile record, having covered the distance, going easily in 1min. 40⅕secs. the best on record for this distance in India, having previously been Fizz's 1min. 40⅘secs. in 1910. Including place money Trangaroa has won his owner in stakes this season Rs. 25,290 or roughly £1,680 a respectable sum considering how small our stakes are and that to do this he has had to win the principal one-mile weight for age race and two of our most valuable sprint races besides. It is a very fine record for India. Tangaroa like all the rest of Mr. Galstaun's horses is for sale the price which is asked being £3,000. This is as good as saying that he will not be sold in India, and if this is so he will be taken back to England in which country he has already raced and won. He will be a much-travelled horse by the time he is finished. Bred as he is by Grafton—Waihine he must be of value as a sire with great staying blood in his veins, as Grafton is by Galopin and Waihine is by Trenton (by Musket) out of Lady Granville by Chandos and it is difficult to find a much finer pedigree hunt high, hunt low in the Stud Book. Grafton is out of Maid Marian, who is by Hampton (Lord Clifden—Lady Langden) out of Quiver by Toxophilite out of Daughter of Young Melbourne (Melbourne—Clarissa) and Brown Bess (Camel—Daughter of Brutandorf. We need not therefore have much hesitation in asserting that blood like this must command attention wherever it is found. In addition to this Tangaroa on his make and shape alone is an ideal sire and it would be difficult indeed to fault him. He is a horse with a splendid constitution, great bone and of undoubted soundness and personally we hope that Mr. Galstaun does not sell him in India but decides to take him home and see what he can do at the stud. Mated, preferably we think, with a St. Simon mare, so as to obtain a double cross of Blacklock (Tangaroa's pedigree being full of that strain) he might get something exceptionally good in the way of a long distance horse. He is bred strictly according to Australian ideas of Galopin on Musket and we therefore think that an infusion of the sire's blood in the next cross might as we say produce a very good result indeed.

TURNING to the rest of the card the Hastings Plate was won by Sequent, who when last he was out was only then just recovering from a slight accident he had met with rolling after exercise in a sand bath. He won all the way beating Proprietor, who was much fancied in some quarters, by two and a half lengths. The race was run very fast all through, the time being 3mins. 20⅖secs., which compared more than favourably with the time in which Proprietor won the Tally Ho Plate over the same distance, 3mins. 23secs. Encourage was well backed for the Belvedere Pony Plate and his selection on the Poona running was justified but he performed very disappointingly and Beryl, who was well supported by her stable, ran away with the race from start to finish and easily beat Ruling Passion at the finish by a length, Sidonia, who was well in, running third. The Bhowanipur Plate witnessed the downfall of another favourite, as Cherry Hackle, who was ridden by Wootton, was only able to secure third honours, Pressy, who started at 10 to 1, winning a head from Wayward and Wild, who went out at fives and who was in front practically from find to finish.

THERE was not much chance of getting anything back over the next race, the Sealdah Plate, which was a certainty for Goldseeker, who started at 2 to 1 on and won very comfortably from Rapin, Lady Lucretia, Sir A. A. Apcar's new one, being third well up. The Hooghly Plate and the Merchants' Plate have already been referred to. In the latter race Jemima, who had a light weight, cut Brogue down at the finish, the heavy impost telling its tale when it came to the final struggle. Brogue was beaten but not disgraced and 9st. 12lb. is a very big burden for a small one such as she is. Koonowla, who was also much fancied, ran badly and was a beaten horse a good long way from home, Hoyt having to ride him hard to induce him to keep in his position a good half mile from home. Santoinette ran a close third and ought to be due to win shortly now that all the cracks are out of her way. We understand she remains here for the Extras and she ought by a process of elimination to be about the best of the ones left behind. When Mayfly IV.'s number was found to to be missing from the frame for the City Plate it was a good thing for Wise Hawk and Whalley had not much difficulty in silencing the guns of the opposition a long way before the finish, Mr. Gutschke's horse scoring very comfortably by two lengths unchallenged, as Brittania could make no impression on him. Details appear elsewhere.

OUR Bombay correspondent writes:—With a couple of divided races we faced a card of eight events on Saturday and ultimately left well satisfied with good sport, several close finishes and a balance on the side of punters. Evans, Brown and Hoyt each rode two winners, one of the first named's successes meaning a bit of a scoop for the books.

In all races fields were satisfactory, a dozen going out for the opening event, the first division of the Nursery Plate. On the last run, Mafush was well backed, but a new one to us in Berar was always the shorter priced. He, however, failed to run anywhere near up to expectations though well placed all the way and finishing third. Yungi Dunya made most of the running with Mafush, these two leaving the other mentioned in the straight and Mafush staying on considerably the better.

Thirteen went out in the other lot, Jais looking a soft thing on paper, though he had several to meet who had not run yet, Red Light and Fathibeg being well fancied, but mainly for a place. Bustan ran a peculiar race as, after being first out, he ran on really well at the finish. Jais on the rails and Red Light took up the running early from Fathibeg, and as they turned Jais had his nearest attendant well beaten. Bustan here came outside, but failed by half a length after a game effort, though Jais probably had a bit in hand.

Sandwiched between these was the first division of the Church Gate Plate for old ponies, Young Thara favourite from Sir Edward in a field of eleven with good betting. Shihab showed for a moment in front, Then Golden Day assumed command from Young Thara, who keeping the rails came away at the two furlongs Here Baldwin came up well outside, but the favourite being nicely in hand had little trouble in winning, Sir Edward winding up third in a poor finish.

Turning to the second batch, which came last, the same stable provided the favourite in St. Anthony, but others were also well backed, Electric, Kimberley, Aurum and Khalas. Kimberley and then Pendil cut out the pace, St. Anthony drawing alongside the latter on the rails. This latter was in the lead as they faced the straight, and having Pendil settled was also able to stave off a late run by Fado; Khalas and Aurum ran well but had poor journeys to contend with.

Though the winning stables have a nice bit to collect, the public found both races for big horses none too good for them. The first was a sprint and on his easy win Lord Carlyon was now thought a really good thing, Ruby, Tin and Elser next in demand. This time Chivalry got well away and set a cracking pace as far as the bend from Lord Carlyon and Elser. Here Lord Carlyon caught and passed him like a winner, but Elser also improved his position. The latter coming well, though rather erratically, caught the favourite near the stand and won by a head, which might have been more judging by the running.

The race for new ponies under 13-3 attracted a dozen, betting being even between Agah Pasha and Ream with Jamal Beg a point shorter and Galliard a point longer. Russian and Agah Pasha were first away, then Galiard passed his stable companion and led Agah Pasha and Jamal Beg. The last named ran out at the turn, where the other two led, but Agah Pasha fell away leaving Ream to come full of running and wear Galliard down badly in the last furlong.

Very open was the mile for all horses, Bachelor's Knot always being favourite from Bright Metal and Gullileo till at the last moment Aqueduct was rushed to threes. From the start Aqueduct showed in front of Lancasterite, Bright Metal, Gallileo and Bachelor's Knot in fairly close order. This remained till near the home turn, Bright Metal came second outside from Gallileo on the rails. Aqueduct, however, was well in hand and won with some ease, Bachelor's Knot failing to catch Bright Metal. This is the American jockey Archibald's first win here, and he made a very good impression.

A bad upset for backers was the result of the Charni Road Plate, a 10-furlong race for Arabs with a field of nine and Guinea Gold made at once a hot favourite from Sir Hugo and Young Salanic. Sir Hugo was at once rushed to the front, and remained there all the way to the distance, Tajilmulook and Braganza being close up next. Here Braganza drew up and, having much more in hand than the other two, won with some ease. Artist beat Tajilmulook for a place, but Guinea Gold was never in the hunt at all.

The open Hockey Tournament in the Exhibition Stadium is drawing to a close and there is every prospect that the Cheshires will fulfil expectations and add this to the two Aga Khan successes to their credit. Their combination and sound defence was altogether too good for the Hornets, and in their semi-final on Saturday they walked round the schools to the tune of 7mins. 1sec. In these matches they only did what was anticipated, and though a tougher job faces them in the final the general understanding between the players should see them through.

After a replay with the Warwicks, the 14th Hussars have reached the semi-final stage and now have to meet the Dorsets, who have come so far after only playing once. The former are likely to win this, as they have plenty of dash to make up for a lack of the finesse possessed by some others.

The Ezra Challenge Cup Polo Tournament drew only two entries this year—the departure of regiments and absence of several polo players accounting for this small entry. The game was played on the 22nd instant in the presence of a big crowd of spectators, the Calcutta Polo Club being "at home" on the ground. The teams were :—H. E. the Viceroy's Staff : Captain Hartley, 1 ; Colonel Maxwell, 2 ; Captain Nicolson, 3 ; Captain Tod, back. Calcutta Polo Club : Captain Large, 1 ; Sir Cecil Graham, 2 ; Captain Dixon, 3 ; Captain Keigbley, back. The umpires were Captain Forester and Mr. Henderson.

It was a well-contested game. The Staff led at the end of the fourth chukker by 4 goals to 2, then the Calcutta Polo Club got going and scoring two goals in each of the remaining periods, ran out winners by 6 goals to 4. The cup was given away to the winners by Lord Hardinge.

The Infantry Polo Tournament will take place at Bareilly this year, commencing on the 19th February.

The Skittle Polo Tournament at Madras was continued on the 17th instant when Captain Torrie's team (—1) met Rajah Venuopal's team (scr.) The game was a very level one. At half time the Rajah's team led by 2 goals to nil, but on resuming their opponents scored three goals in rapid succession. Then the Rajah's team got going once more and putting on two more goals ran out winners. Rajah Venugopal's team 4 goals, Captain Torrie's team 3—1=2 goals.

The last match of the tournament was played on Friday between Captain Torrie's team (—1) and Captain Worgan's team (—6) an exciting game ending in a win for the former. Worgan's team went off at the start and led by 4 to nil at interval. The third chukker produced a goal for Torrie and in the last period Worgan's trio scored twice and Torrie's once. The final score therefore was : Captain Torrie's team 2 goals—1=1. Captain Worgan's team 6 goals—6=0. The complete scoring for the tournament is as under.

Rajah Venugopal's team, 4 goals scr. =4 goals.
Captain Torrie's team, 5 goals —2 =3 goals.
Captain Worgan's team, 14 goals —12= 2 goals.

The handicaps thus worked out exceptionally well. Rajah Venugopal's was a popular victory. Her Excellency Lady Carmichael presented the cup to the winners—the Rajah, Mr. P. B. Thomas and Mr. McFarland—at the close of the game.

Eight teams entered for the Cavalry School Polo Tournament at Saugor and the four matches completing the first round were played on the 17th instant.

The first match between the Staff (Capt. Mosley, A.V.C., 1 ; Capt. R. W. Grimshaw, 34th Poona Horse, 2 ; Capt. G. N. Reynolds, 21st Lancers, 3 ; and Capt. C. H. Howell, 18th Lancers, back) and A Ride II (Sir N. Leslie, Bart, 38th C. I. H., 1 ; J. A. Brooke, 6th Inniskilling Dragoons, 2 ; Mr. Walker, 32nd Lancers, 3 ; and Mr. A. E. H. Beaman, 1st Lancers, back) was a close game but rather slow. The Staff showed better combination and eventually won by 2 goals to nil. Reynolds and Beaman were most prominent for their respective sides.

The second match was between A Ride I, (Messrs. Willoughby, 10th Lancers, 1 ; Lang, 16th Lancers, 2 ; Connell, 13th Lancers, 3 ; and Wise, 33rd L.C., back) and the Assistant Instructors (Mr. Agnew, 1 ; Captain Baddeley, 2 ; Captain Moir, 3 ; and Mr. Harenc, back) : a fine match had been expected and so it proved, for a fast game was witnessed. The Instructors had slightly the better of the play and ultimately won by 3 goals to 1. Harenc did exceptionally good work for the winners and Wise was most conspicuous for A. Ride.

The third match between B Ride II (Messrs. Gall, 25th Cavalry, 1 ; Lucas, 30th Lancers, 2 ; Mason, 14th Hussars, 3 ; and Benton, 4th Cavalry, back) and C Ride (Messrs. Johnson, 26th Light Cavalry, 1 ; Fleming, K. D. G's, 2 ; Duberly, 17th Cavalry, 3 ; and Stewart, 10th Hussars, back) This was a splendidly contested game and the issue was in doubt till the last few minutes. The score was two all when B Ride were penalised for a cross and their opponents scored the winning point. The teams were well matched and all played well. Fleming and Johnson, Gall and Benton doing good work. The last match in the first round was between B Ride I (Messrs. Hudson, 8th Cavalry, 1 ; Paterson, 19th Lancers, 2; Vigors, 9th H.H., 3; and Macdonald, 11th Lancers, back) and D Ride (Messrs. Burt, 37th Lancers, 1 ; Broderick, 27th Light Cavalry, 2 ; MacGregor, 34th Poona Horse, 3 ; and Onslow, 21st Cavalry, back). This was won as expected by B Ride, who had an advantage in ponies, but they were badly let down owing to erratic shooting and their victory by 3 to 1 was no easy thing. Macdonald and Paterson, Onslow and Macgregor did best for their respective sides.

The following are draws for the 15th Hussars Challenge Cup :—

The King's Dragoon Guards vs. 8th Hussars and the Inniskillings vs. 13th Hussars.

In offering an event in Gymnastics the Executive Committee of the Bengal Presidency Athletic Association has ventured on a new departure. The parallel bars and horizontal bars are the apparatus that will be used. In order to make known the new competition and to help intending competitors the "set moves" are herewith published as follows :—

Horizontal Bar.

(1.) Hang swing, upstart, back circle, short upstart, shoot to front.

Parallel Bars.

(1.) Both hands leading at end of bars. Steady lift to short arm balance ; forward roll to short arm balance, rest on right bar in front, short arm balance, rest on left bar in front, short arm balance, rest on both bars in front legs off and swing to long arm balance and straight over.

(2.) Double cut in, short arm balance, forward roll swing, fall back to upstart position between bars (resting armpits on bars). Upstart to long arm balance walk to end and cut out.

The entries close on the 2nd February, and the Honorary Secretary, 25 Chowringhee, Calcutta, will be pleased to give further explanation if necessary.

Bombardier Wells has once more made up his mind to pay a trip to the States and if wisely handled should rake in the dollars. There is talk of a contest with Jack Johnson but he can well afford to wait. There are plenty of second and third rate heavy weights knocking around to keep Billy busy for several months to come and he would do well to work his way steadily through as many of these as he can persuade to meet him before going after the championship crown.

Fred Storbeck met Frank Moran, the American heavy weight at The Ring on the 1st instant, a hard slam finishing in a disappointing fashion in the seventh round. There was very little to choose between them in the opening period, but Moran was easily on top in both the second and third rounds. Then the South African got going and had the best of the fourth meeting on points. The fifth and sixth were his by a big margin and he again had the best of the exchanges in he seventh when he lost his head and was disqualified. He was hammering away at Moran when the gong went : the American turned round promptly but Storbeck apparently did not hear the signal. Following his man up he twice hooked him on the head in his own corner. Moran's seconds protested, but the South African had completely lost his head and landed two more blows, the last just as Moran sat down. The referee had no other course open to him but to disqualify the Boer. It is disappointing, for the riddle as to the respective capabilities of the two men remains unsolved. However both are anxious for a second meeting and the possibilities of a return match are very big.

Jack Lester and Dave Smith met at the Sydney Stadium on New Year's Day for the light heavy weight championship of Australia. Lester had agreed to weigh not over 12st. 7lb. or forfeit £250. He weighed 12st. 2¾lb. Smith went 11st. 12lb. It was a very one-sided contest. Smith was too fast altogether for Lester and fought with more punishing effect than in any previous encounter. Lester tired after the sixth round. In the twelfth a right to the jaw nearly dropped Lester. In the thirteenth Smith again swung a right to the jaw. Lester dropped his hands, took delivery of the left and went down to a count of seven. The bell saved him. In the fourteenth Lester came up very tired. Smith was careful waiting to lodge a knock out but in a clinch Lester hit Smith below the belt and Smith was declared the winner.

Mr. James E. Sullivan, whose position in the athletic world of America is second to none, announces in the columns of a Stockholm newspaper that for the first time since their connection with the Olympic Games, which will take place next summer at Stockholm, the United States will be represented in all the competitions included in the games. While the athletic team will be the most numerous and the strongest ever sent out from America, there will also be competitors in cycling, fencing, riding, shooting, swimming, wrestling and in the Pentathlon, Decathlon, etc.

"Try-outs," he also states, will take place in three separate localities—viz., Boston, Chicago and San Francisco, in order to secure the best representation in the United States. Special "try-outs," for the Pentathlon and the Decathlon will be held on 13th, 19th and 30th April.

In the same newspaper (Ny for Idrotl) Monsieur Jules de Muzsa, the Hungarian representative on the International Olympic Committee, states that the Hungarian preparations for participation in the Olympic Games of Stockholm are far more extensive than in any former meeting, for whereas the Hungarian team for the Olympic Games of London, in 1908, numbered 40 the team for Stockholm will be about 160, namely :—Football 17, shooting 3 to 10, swimming 12, athletics 20, wrestling 12, fencing 12, lawn tennis 5, gymnastics 22, rowing 13, and cycling 6.

Monsieur Jules de Muzsa also states that the Hungarian Government has contributed 4,800 kroner towards the expenses of Hungarian competitors.

At the Lucknow Dog Show fixed for the 8th February it is proposed to hold Gun-dog Trials and a Hound Trail in addition to the usual attractions, and we hope the venture will meet with success. Unfortunately the notice for these is very short, and sportsmen at a distance will hardly be able to get ready in time. There is a good deal of local talent available, however, and the keenest interest is being taken in these events.

The match between the M. C. C. and a Ballarat fifteen ended in a draw. Ballarat went in first and made 294 for nine wickets, Edmund Herring, the Rhodes scholar, scoring 55 and his veteran uncle, Morris Herring, 129. They were all out for 318 and then the M. C. C. went in and put up 349 for two wickets, Kinneir contributing 114 and Vine 112.

The jubilee of international cricket was marked by a brilliant demonstration in the form of a smoke concert in the Melbourne Masonic Hall on the 30th ultimo. Among 800 present were the Governor-General Lord Denman, the Prime Minister (Mr. Andrew Fisher), and the English and Australian elevens. The most interesting feature of all the gathering was the presence of many old-time cricketers, whose popularity in connection with a testimonial to Mr. G. McCarthy Blackham, "the prince of wicket keepers," was opened, and £52 4s. was collected in the building. The Governor-General gave £10. Mr. Donald McKinnon (President of the Victorian Cricket Association) was in the chair.

The Governor-General, in responding to the toast of his health said he was keenly interested in test cricket, and he considered that it must have beneficial results inasmuch as it should serve to bring the mother country into closer relationship with the Commonwealth. (Cheers.) They all deplored the illness of Mr. Warner, and hoped for his speedy return to convalescence. The present test matches were being played in a sportsmanlike spirit. This was one of the chief characteristics in the Australian sporting life. (Cheers.)

"The English team" was given by the Prime Minister, and Mr. Pawley (manager of the English team) acknowledged the toast. He also read a letter from Mr. P. F. Warner, who deeply regretted being unable to be present. He added :—"It is an historical occasion, this jubilee of English and Australian cricket. How different was the first team, with their bearded faces and solidly built, from the slim, youthful, almost boyish looking cricketers of to-day. What memories those 50 years bring back one could write pages about the many famous battles between England and Australia, and pages about the men who took part in them. When one comes to think of it, it was an extraordinary fact that a country with a population of 5,000,000 can produce cricketers who hold their own with the cricketers of the mother country whose population is 40 millions. Grit and courage have long been the outstanding features of the Australian cricketers. Until that famous day at the oval in 1882 Englishmen were accustomed to think that they stood alone as cricketers, but that great seven-run victory awoke England to the fact that here, indeed, was a sturdy son of hers who meant to be at least her equal and sometimes her superior. I have been asked by the Marylebone Club to convey to you a special message of greeting and goodwill. (Cheers.) The bitter disappointment I have suffered in my illness has been tremendously lessened by the extreme kindness I have received from everyone in Australia. I tender you my best and heartiest thanks for the welcome you have given our cricketers." (Cheers.)

The Ladies' Amateur Golf Championship of India ended in a win for Mrs. Hannaford, who beat Miss Binning in the final last week up by 2 and 1 to play. Details further on.

The sixth paperchase of the Calcutta season brought together a big muster and among those out we observed—Mrs. Wanklyn on Grey Harold, Miss Binning on Eileen, Mrs. Dods on Bo-peep, Mrs. Buck on Chorister, Miss Follitt on a bay, Mrs. Collin on Kildare, Captain Charrington on Durbar, Mr. M. H. Smith on Nellie, Mr. Evers on Baldoyle, Mr. Bletsoe on Farthing Bun, Mr. Galstaun on Priory, Mr. Tegart on Biddy, Mr. Muir on North Shore, Mr. Jas. Hutchison on Steel Arrow, Captain Brancker on Enthusiast, Mr. Vicary on Chieftain, Mr. Halliday on Diamond, Mr. Mackay on Gipsy, Mr. Wigham on a bay, Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6, Mr. McLean on Minnie, Mr. Winkworth on Kim, Mr. Murray on Desmond, Mr. Chancellor on H. E., Mr. Hayward on a brown, Mr. Heath on Actress, Major Thornton on a brown, Mr. T. Marshall on Loyalty, Mr. Deakin on Scarboro, Mr. Perkins on a bay, Mr. Knox on List, Mr. Savage on a bay, Mr. Field on Paul, Mr. Ritchie on a bay, Mr. Tanner on Emerald, Mr. P. B. Walker on Pan Out, Mr. Johnstone on Wait for Me, Mr. Morris on Blue Bell, and several more The morning was a clear one and a punctual start was made. The meet was at Jodhpore thana, the line crossing the Gurriah Hât Road three times, the Molla Hât Road once and returned after many twists and returning to the starting point—five miles over sixteen obstacles. Several came down in the horse chase, Mr. Marshall, Captain Brancker, Mr. Halliday and Mr. Evers all getting falls, Mr. Evers was riding Mrs. Paris' Baldoyle and has resigned the contest for the Average Cup. He was in front most of the way but fell at the drop fence where Nellie, Diamond and another also came down. Gipsy, Durbar and Desmond then went on in front, Gipsy leading over the last fence. On the flat Durbar came through and secured the verdict by half a length. The official placings were :—

1. Captain Charrington on Durbar.
2. Mr. Mackay on Gipsy.
3. Mr. Murray on Desmond.
4. Mr. Tegart on Biddy.
5. Mr. Winckworth on Kim.
6. Mr. Vicary on Chieftain, followed by Mr. Riviere, Miss Binning, Mr. Morris, Mr. Knox, Mrs. Wanklyn, Mr. Halliday, Mr. Dods, Mr. Perkins, Mr. Johnstone, Mr. Savage, Mr. Wigham, and Miss Follitt, Mr. Studd, Mr. Curtis Hayward, Mr. Bletsoe, Mr. Ritchie, Mr. Galstaun and many more.

In the pony chase Minnie made all the running to the last fence where Scarboro came away and won comfortably. The order was—

1. Mr. Deakin on Scarboro.
2. Mr. McLean on Minnie.
3. Mr. Chancellor on H. E.
4. Mr. Muir on North Shore.
5. Mr. B. P. Walker on Pan Out.
6. Mr. J. Hutchison on Steel Arrow.

followed by Mr. Field on Paul, and Mr. Macky on Peter Pan.

The All India Hockey Tournament opened at Allahabad on Monday when three games in the first round were played. The holders (N. W. Railway Volunteers) beat the King's Own Regiment by 4 goals to 1 ; the Naini Tal Volunteers beat the Royal Irish Rifles by 6 to 0 ; and the United Provinces Police beat the Connaught Rangers by 8 goals to 2. Three more games were played on Tuesday when the East Indian Railway Volunteers beat the Allahabad Gymkhana by 8 goals to nil : the 2nd Berkshires beat the Royal Irish Regiment by 3 to 1 : and the 4th Worcesters beat the Allahabad Volunteers by 2 to 1. Details in our next issue.

There have been a few big-game hunters in our time, but they are not in the same street with those mighty Oriental hunters the Great Moguls. There are records of their bags which have been proved authentic. In one drive organised by Akbar, near Lahore, 15,000 animals were bagged. Jehangir, in his memoirs, says that from his twelfth to his fiftieth year he slew upwards of 28,000 wild animals with his own hand, including 86 tigers. Just imagine this with the comparatively primitive weapons of those days—matchlocks, spears, etc.!

The leaping tuna, which affords such sport on the Californian coast, is, we believe, identical with the fish to be found in the Mediterranean and off the Spanish coast. The fish is caught by trolling, and we have taken them on a hook dressed with a bunch of the leaves which enclose the ears of maize. When drawn through the water, these strands quiver and somewhat resemble the motion of a flying-fish. On the Pacific coast the usual bait is a flying-fish, and the fisherman endeavours by the action of his rod to give a litelike action to the bait, making it leap and squatter along the surface of the water. One of the Californian fishermen was so consistently successful in catching tunas that there was a good deal of talk and argument as to how he did it. The secret is now out. This angler used a kite. The boatman, it is said, held the string of the kite, from which was suspended a line with the bait attached. By working the kite in a certain way the bait was made to dance along the surface, making it irresistible to the tunas. We fancy we have heard of this dodge applied to the fishing of Irish lakes with flies instead of bait attached to the line from the kite. Of course, in this case it was a poaching contrivance which may be placed in the same category as "ottering" and "cross-lining."

London Week by Week.

Friday, 5th January 1912.

We Londoners, as usual, helped in the New Year with sounds of mirth and revelry by night, and 1912 opened his eyes on the first of his 366 days of life in perfect weather and bright moonlight. For one night in the year, at least, stolid and drab old London almost out-Continents the Continent. Each New Year is ushered in with more of the bohemian spirit, and all the big hotels and restaurants (and most of the smaller ones) are making a more elaborate feature of the First of January celebrations yearly.

The Savoy, the Cecil, the Ritz, the Piccadilly, Prince's, the Criterion, the Waldorf, etc., scintillated with bohemian light and life and gaiety last Sunday night, while happy crowds of well-dressed men and women seized the excuse of the New Year to spend a truly Parisian evening "seeing in" 1912 to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne," accompanied by the popping of champagne corks.

Fleetstreet, Ludgate Hill, and the neighbourhood of St. Paul's was packed with a jostling crowd of humanity, and street vendors did a good trade with hideous tartan caps made of paper, squeakers, hooters, and other instruments of oral torture which are supposed to add to the gaiety of nations at such times of rejoicing.

But on Tuesday our merriment was spent; the last lights were out on the last Christmas tree; the last snap dragon was as dead as St. George's dragon, without a snap left in him. The clock of St. Paul's and Big Ben have tolled out plenary absolution, for the loathed errors of 1911; so now for reform, for clean living, for thrift and industry, for early hours and a hygienic diet!

The last two words of the above paragraph remind me of the tragedy of the turkey which was left at my flat by mistake, which I tried to trace to the despatcher, and, failing, left with the porter of our Mansions, which porter after keeping it on offer for four days did eat, he and his wife and children and they that were with them, as he tells me. I believe there was a great assemblage of undelivered turkeys and geese at the postal depôt, Mount Pleasant, after Christmas—undelivered because they were insufficiently or insecurely addressed. Ah, what a tragedy lay hidden behind each of those derelict birds. Think of the expectations baffled, the hopes crushed, the appetites unsatisfied; think of the empty larders, the bit of fried bacon substituted at the last moment for the absent gift, the lost opportunity that could never, never be regained. It is all very well for the cynic to say, "So much the better for digestion." That is only begging the question. Is not the indigestion, or the intrepid spirit that risks it, the chief joy? What is Christmas if we cannot eat to the verge of physical tribulation, and get livers, and have nightmares and the other "compliments" of the season? All the poor people who went without their dinners this Christmas through postal miscarriage have lost a chance of dyspeptic excitement which they cannot possibly recapture. To-morrow's repletion will not fill to-day's void. There is only one Christmas day in the year, and for each Christmas day there is its appointed turkey or goose. Two turkeys, or a goose and a turkey, next year will not atone for the no turkey and the no goose of this. Two concurrent bilious attacks in the future will not make up for the absence of a bilious attack in the present. There was the unutterable sadness of superfluous hygiene in those turkeyless homes.

The music of "Die Fledermaus," by Johann Strauss, the Waltz King, is one of the most delicious scores in existence, and if only for its music, "Nightbirds," the English of "Die Fledermaus," adapted by Miss Gladys Unger and produced by Mr. Michael Faraday at the Lyric Theatre on Saturday, will be an unqualified success.

Miss Unger has, however, done her work very well, though the story, such as it is, is familiar, superficially Parisian, and not very funny. We meet again the errant husband eager for a night out; the jealous and beautiful wife who follows her husband masked, and to whom he makes violent love; the sentimental rival, this time a Hungarian; a nincompoop prince, a cheerful soubrette; and so on and so on.

But the old familiar figures are handled with ingenuity and humour, and the operetta finishes in a model prison, itself not an unamusing burlesque, which houses a comic warder, a figure of complete and delightful fun as played by Mr. A. W. Bascomb, and Mr. Bascomb with the duet and the trio in the first act, the Czardas in the second, and the song written to the immortal "Blue Danube" waltz in the third makes "Nightbirds" an entertainment of real charm.

Mr. Bascomb has a personality of whimsical sadness. He never smiles. He hardly raises his voice above a whisper. He is apparently unconscious that he is being amusing, or that hundreds of men and women are holding their sides with laughter on the other side of the footlights. He is, indeed, an original and distinguished comic actor.

Miss Constance Drever, who wears some wonderful dresses, sings the music of the Countess Cliquot with the power and finish which she showed in "The Chocolate Soldier." Mr. Workman, as her wandering husband, again brings to his work the note of Savoy distinction. Miss Muriel George as the Countess' maid sings and acts excellently, and is a comedienne of genuine and outstanding ability. Mr. Farkoa, as the lover, is Mr. Farkoa, and who can ask more? The chorus was quite good, but the stage management was rather wooden.

In the second act a section of the ballet from the "Empire upon which the Sun Never Rises," danced very daintily with Miss Phyllis Bedells, no longer a child but grown into an accomplished ballerina, as the première danseuse.

Either in London or in the provinces "Charley's Aunt" has "kept running" continuously since its first production nearly twenty years ago, and in face of that fact what need is there to dwell on its strong incentive to harmless merriment? From start to finish it is a good jest, which one can enjoy whole-heartedly. Youth is writ large on its story and treatment and, because we have all had our madcap days, or like to think we have had, we can always enjoy the light-hearted pranks of Lord Fancourt Babberley and his fellow-under-graduates. The piece has now taken rank amongst London's Christmas annuals, and this year is seen at Whitney's, where, brightly acted by a clever company, it goes with a running accompaniment of merry laughter from a crowded house. Mr. Charles Windermere plays the bogus "Aunt" with a convincing appearance as well as the high spirits the part requires, while he is careful not overstep the line; Mr. Henry Hare gives the part of Spettigue the needful aggressiveness: Mr. Theo. Stewart makes a breezy Sir Francis Chesney; Mr. Sydney Compton gives us a typical Oxford scout; Miss Ada Ferrar lends distinction to the part of Donna Lucia and the young people are admirably represented by Mr. Elyston Owen, Mr. Robert Burnett and the Misses Amy Brandon Thomas, Ursula Grant and Eva Rowland.

A very enthusiastic reception was accorded "Sweet Nell of Old Drury" when it was revived by Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry at the New Theatre, St. Martin's Lane, last Monday night. Although Mr. Fred Terry did not figure in his original part of Charles Stuart, Miss Julia Neilson was in the title rôle, and her rendering of the part of Nell Gwynn, both as the orange girl in the opening act and later as the Court beauty, was admirable. Mr. Malcolm Cherry was excellent as Charles II., and shared the principal honours with Julia Neilson, while as Lord Jeffreys, the Lord Chief Justice, who in order to pay off an old score schemes for the banishment and death of Sir Roger Fairfax, Mr. James Berry also did well. As Sir Roger, Mr. Alfred Kendrick was a decided success, while Messrs. Henry Hewitt (Lord Rochester,) Frederick Groves (Lord Lovelace), Arthur Williams (Percival), Arthur Aplin (Rollins), Miss Molly Terraine (Lady Olivia Vernon), Miss Miriam Lewes (Lady Castlemaine), and Miss Muriel Dole (Duchess of Portsmouth), did all that was required of them in a most creditable manner.

The "Eternal Waltz," at the Hippodrome, with its fascinating melody, has caught on, but heaven forfend that it should justify in fact the name given to it in a spirit of ironical humour. A tune that really was eternal would, sooner or later, drive us all mad—not only us, but future generations as well. Even those perennial lyrics, "Home, Sweet Home" and "Annie Laurie," have probably been the cause of more cerebral trouble than is suspected. Every popular melody, like every dog, has its day; but, fortunately, no one would want to listen to "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay" for ever, and the exquisite music of "Tommy, make room for your uncle" would pall in time. Waltz tunes are no exception to the common lot. If the "Mabel" Waltz, that had so great a vogue many years ago, were now revived, it would fall flat, people would sneer at it as "mid-Victorian," and entreat the orchestra to "shut up." And some day the "Eternal Waltz" will prove that it is only temporal, and a new rearrangement of melodious notes will reign in its stead. It will get to the barrel organ; and the barrel organ gives the coup de grace to immortality.

It is now possible for residents in this country to obtain, with the aid of the bioscope, a very fair idea of the glories of the Durbar and the ceremonies which preceded it, from the time that their Majesties arrived in India; and the pictures shown last night at, among other music-halls, the Empire and the Palace are striking indications of the success which has attended the work of the operators. The pageantry of colour is missing—for the Kinemacolor pictures are not yet ready for exhibition—but apart from this one drawback the films are an excellent record of a wonderful event.

But the pictures will probably excite most attention in that they confirm the accounts telegraphed to this country with regard to the conduct at the Durbar of the Gaekwar of Baroda. The Empire pictures, in particular, taken at very close range, are especially clear on the point. There could hardly be a more striking contrast than between the ceremonial salutation of the Nizam of Hyderabad, full of sincerity and solemn significance, and the apparently indifferent attitude of the Gaekwar of Baroda. Dressed in white and carrying a cane, the latter approached the Royal Throne after the Nizam has bowed three times. The Gaekwar bows once only in a perfunctory manner, retreats a pace or two, then turns his back on the King and walks slowly away. The incident could be so clearly followed at the Empire on the first night the film was shown that a storm of disapproval greeted the Gaekwar's conduct. Since then this part of the spectacle has been boo-ed and hissed with a cordiality which leaves no room for doubt that if the Gaekwar ever ventures to visit England again he will have to put himself under police protection.

A CROCODILE EPISODE IN BRITISH NORTH BORNEO.

About one hundred yards down the river from where we were putting up a railway bridge and on the north or right bank was a large morass or swamp. Through a channel in the river bank the water flowed into the swamp, re-entering the river some half a mile further down. The water in the swamp was therefore always on a level with that in the river, and fish and amphibians had always an open passage between the two. Inside the entrance there was a large deep hole worn out by the back eddy and here a crocodile of the larger species had taken up its quarters.

A Malay called my attention to the saurian one day as it lay on the bank between the river and swamp, basking in the sun with its enormous jaws open to their fullest extent. I can not rightly describe the monster, for monster it was, and measured, as I found on putting the tape over the impress it left on the short grass, over thirty feet. It was of a dark greyish colour, getting lighter towards the belly, and its back appeared to be a knotted and gnarled mass beyond description.

I endeavoured to get as near it as possible but as I could only approach from windward, it must have scented or sighted me, for by the time I got within sixty yards of it, the tail gave a great semi-circular sweep, and the crocodile was in the water and out of sight. The Malays and Dyaks were much disappointed at my non-success, as this was one of the larger specie called by them "Ikaulaut" found in the rivers of Borneo—formidable for its size and rapacity: it is fierce, carnivorous and dangerous.

I suggested that it would probably not return, but this the Malays pooh-poohed and said it would take more than a scare to keep it away from its haunt, which it had possibly used for hundreds of years. I laughed at the idea, but they maintained the "Ikaulaut" lived many hundreds of years, and as that was the fixed belief of the lot of them, I thought it best not to dispute the matter. I am aware the larger saurian are long lived, but I could hardly take in their statement. At any rate, the one in question, judging from its enormous bulk and appearance, was no chicken.

True enough a few days later it was again seen basking in the sun at the same spot and this time I got into a canoe with my rifle. We paddled across the river, drifted down opposite the crocodile and approached towards its side, if anything rather towards the tail. Getting within about fifty yards I aimed behind the foreleg, the most vital part I am told, but whether my nerves were unsteady owing to the unusual excitement or from the motion of the canoe, the bullet struck the back, ricochetted leaving a white mark, and with incredible speed the crocodile was again in the water, marked but otherwise unharmed. I was satisfied we had seen the last of it, but the natives persisted that it would re-appear.

Nothing was seen of the monster for some time, and I kept chaffing the men that it did not take much to scare away their "Ikaulaut" bugbear, but their answer was always "It will come." They were right, for in about a fortnight or so the crocodile for the third time made its appearance, and in such a favourable position as tempted another shot. It was lying on the bank of the hole it haunted, with its head towards the jungle and, as usual, its jaws agape. I got hold of my rifle and dodged from tree to tree until I got within shooting distance intending to aim at its open throat, which I considered would lead to fatal results. I, however, did not get the chance, for the jaws suddenly closed with a crash and it turned side on to take the water. Aiming hurridly I fired, the bullet entering its side about three feet behind the right shoulder. It seemed paralysed for an instant, blood flowing freely, and I was momentarily under the impression that it was killed, but it recovered and made for the water. I was sure it would seek the deepest bottom of the hole and die, and next day I sent some men in a canoe to search the hole with bamboos, but no trace of the carcass could be found.

I gave no further thought to the crocodile being satisfied in my own mind that it would die from the wound. I was therefore not a little surprised a month later when the interpreter came to mesnd said, "Tuan" (Master) "the 'Ikaulaut' is once more in the water hole in the swamps; some of the men have seen it." I replied, It must be another one; at any rate, I cannot bother any more about it.

At dinner time a request was made by the men for me to have a large book made and to give them a long rope. I was anxious to see what they would do, and thought it best to comply. I gave one of the Chinese blacksmiths two feet of half inch steel rod with orders to make a hook with a bend of four and a half inches and a shank thirteen inches long with an eye in the end of it. A large fish hook was given him as a sample as to shape and he turned out a very satisfactory looking implement. I handed it with 150 yards of ¼ inch signal wire rope to the men, and only stipulated that they were to do their fishing in their own time.

They secured the hook to the wire rope, and then came a further request to be allowed to use a spare crabwinch. This I also agreed to and they wound the rope on to it and then carried it to within fifty yards of the crocodile's haunt and made it fast to the root of a tree.

A Dyak, one of the huntsmen, produced the foreleg of a deer and it was securely lashed to the hook, leaving the point and bend of the latter clear. The bait was then laid into the water at the side of the hole and an amount of slack rope arranged between it and the crabwinch.

Next morning the bait had not been touched, but some time during the day it had been dragged to the middle of the hole, as shown by the slack of the rope taken up. For the next three days it remained untouched. I told the men to pull it out as it would be putrid, but their reply was to leave it alone, the "Ikaulaut" likes his game "high," or rather that was their meaning.

On the fourth night the bait was gorged, and the wire rope ran out and as taut as a fiddle string. I would not allow the men to touch the winch until after work was over, and as it was a Saturday they had all the afternoon before them.

Immediately they got free from work, four men went to the wench and began to heave in. It was a pretty stiff haul, the men relieving each other to drag the monster through the water, as it kept lashing with its terrible tail and flurrying about. At last the gigantic but repulsive head was got free from the water, and slowly but surely the great and ugly body was dragged up the bank, until only some four feet of the tail remained in the water.

The capture was a certainty to all appearance, and the men were jubilant in anticipation of, venting their vengeance on one of their much dreaded enemies. I had my rifle in my hand, and on a sudden and, as it proved to be, an unlucky impluse, I sighted a foot behind the left foreleg and fired. The bullet went home, and the blood gushed from the crocodile's mouth. I thought I administered the coup de grace, but the brute was only stung to madness, and made such desperate and herculean exertions to escape that the rope came home with a twang.

With tail partially in the water the crocodile's managed to slew itself half round and actually rolled down the slope like a log and was gone. On examining the tackle it was found that the shank of the hook had broken clean off at the eye: the steel in the hurry in making had been tempered too hard.

The men were much chagrined, and I only pacified them by taking the whole blame, and pointing out that the "Ikaulaut" could not possibly live, as the blood flowing up its throat showed that it was fatally wounded; besides it had two feet of steel rod stuck in its entrails. I sent them in canoes to prod the bottom of the hole with bamboos, but they found nothing.

I was and am still of the opinion that the much wounded animal sought some deep hole in the river and died at the bottom of it; at least, it did not put in an appearance again all the four months longer we were in completing the bridge.

The natives, Malays, Dyaks, etc., build their villages on the banks of the rivers and they assert that the "Ikaulaut" frequently make incursions during the night and carry off people as well as domestic livestock such as goats, calves, etc. As to the truth of this I can't speak, but they hold the saurians in great dread and do everything with their not very formidable weapons against such enemies, to destroy as many as they can.

PROTECTION OF WILD BIRDS AND ANIMALS.

The following is the full text and the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill to make better provision for the protection and preservation of certain wild birds and animals in India:—

Whereas it is expedient to make better provision for the protection and preservation of certain wild birds and animals; it is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. Short title and extent.—(1) This Act may be called the Wild Birds and Animals Protection Act, 191 ; and

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan, the Santhal Parganas and the Pargana of Spiti.

2. Application of Act.—(1) This Act applies in the first instance to the birds and animals when in their wild state, specified in the Schedule.

(2) The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, apply the provisions of this Act to any kind of wild bird or animal, other than those specified in the Schedule, which, in its opinion, it is desirable to protect or preserve.

3. Close time.—The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare the whole year or any part thereof to be a close time throughout the whole or any part of its territories for any kind of wild bird or animal to which this Act applies; and during such close time, and within the areas specified in such notification, it shall be unlawful—

(a) To capture any such bird or animal, or to kill any such bird or animal which has not been captured before the commencement of such close time;

(b) to sell or buy, or offer to sell or buy, or to possess any such bird or animal which has not been captured or killed before the commencement of such close time, or the flesh thereof;

(c) if any plumage has been taken from any such bird captured or killed during such close time, to sell or buy, or to offer to sell or buy, or to possess, such plumage.

4. Penalties.—(1) Whoever does, or attempts to do, any act in contravention of Section 3, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to Rs. 50.

(2) Whoever, having already been convicted of an offence under this Section, is again convicted thereunder shall, on every subsequent conviction, be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to Rs. 100, or with both.

MELOX AND MELOX MARVELS.
THE PREMIER DOG FOODS.
MELOX gets Dogs into condition and keeps them fit. Is readily eaten when all other Foods are refused. It improves and strengthens the digestive organs.
MELOX MARVELS, the miniature Dog Biscuits, contain many of the essential principles of MELOX and a large proportion of meat and its juices. Possess great nourishment and form a dainty change of diet.
For Hot Climates these Foods are unique, as they are essentially Bone and Muscle makers. Bitches raise healthy Litters, while bad doers and weekly puppies thrive upon it in a remarkable manner.
Can be obtained of all Army and Navy Stores Depôts in India or direct from—
CLARKE'S BISCUIT FACTORIES, Limehouse, London, England,
By Royal Warrant to the KING.

5. Confiscation.—(1) When any person is convicted of an offence punishable under this Act, the convicting Magistrate may direct that any bird or animal or the flesh or plumage of any bird or animal in respect of which such offence has been committed, and any arms or implements which have been used for the commission of such offence, shall be confiscated.

(2) Such confiscation may be in addition to the other punishment provided by Section 4 for such offence.

6. Savings.—Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to affect the capture or killing of a wild animal by any person in defence of himself or any other person, or to the capture or killing of any wild bird or animal in bona-fide protection of a standing crop or growing fruit.

7. Repeal.—The Wild Birds Protection Act, 1887, is hereby repealed.

THE SCHEDULE.

(i) Bustards, dock, floricans, jungle fowl, partridges, peafowl, pheasants, pigeons, quail, sand-grouse, painted snipe, spurfowl, woodcock, herons, egrets, rollers and king-fishers.

(ii) Antelopes, asses, bison, buffaloes, deer, gazelles, goats, hares, oxen, rhinoceroses and sheep.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Wild Birds Protection Act, 1887 (XX of 1887) enables rules to be made prohibiting the possession or sale, during the breeding season, of any kind of wild bird recently killed or taken, or the importation of the plumage of any kind of wild bird during such season. Power is also given to Local Governments to declare these provisions to apply to any animals of game other than birds. The Act applies only to Municipalities and Cantonments, and rules framed under it are practically inoperative in checking the wholesale slaughter of birds in rural districts throughout British India. The need for a general law which should have the effect of protecting those wild birds and animals which are threatened with extermination has been exhaustively considered and the present Bill is the outcome of that discussion.

It will apply in the first instance to the birds and animals specified in the Schedule. As, however, it would be difficult to provide, for the whole of India, a single list sufficiently exhaustive to cover all the kinds of birds and animals, the protection of which widely varying local conditions may render desirable, it is proposed to permit Local Governments to add to the list at their discretion.

The Bill will empower Local Governments to declare, if necessary an absolute prohibition, either throughout the year or for any specified part of the year, and extending to the whole or any part of its territories, against the capture or killing of any animals or birds to which the Act applies, or of the possession of such animals or birds, or of the plumage of the latter.

It is proposed, however, to exempt from the operation of the measure any person who captures or kills a wild animal in defence of himself or of any other person, or who captures or kills any wild bird or animal in bona-fide protection of a standing crop or growing fruit.

BADMINTON.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Will you kindly let me know the correct measurements of a Badminton Court and oblige.

H. S.

[A Badminton Court measures 44 feet by 20 feet. Service lines are drawn across the court parallel with the net and six and a half feet on each side of it. A line down the centre joining the service and base lines forms the four courts, each of which measure 15½ feet by 10 feet.—ED.]

Radiol

RADIOL TREATMENT prolongs the life of a Horse's Legs. Completely removes by radiation all soft swellings that disfigure and lame a Horse as sprained Tendons, Windgalls, Bog Spavins, Capped Elbow Big Leg, Enlarged Glands, etc.

No Blister; No Laying up

No Hair Removed.

RADIOL TREATMENT fines down a worn Horse's Legs and is a certain cure for Puffy Joints and Sprains, Prevents Filled Legs.

An intelligent use of the "RADIOL LEG WASH" counteracts that daily wear and tear of the legs unavoidable with the Horse in constant work, whether training, racing, or on the road.

One flask of "RADIOL" will make a GALLON of valuable Leg Wash.

"The Field," June 16th, 1906:—

"We have been able to test some trial bottles of "RADIOL" in cases of Wind-galls, Splints and Puffy swellings and have found "RADIOL" to be very beneficial, and we have also found it useful as a leg wash for polo ponies after a day's play."

To be obtained from Ernoom & Co., Calcutta; Treacher & Co., Bombay; W. E. Smith & Co., Mount Road, Madras; Heath & Son, Sharia Maghraby, Cairo; W. Wilson, Rawal Pindi and Murree; The Mombassa Pharmacy, Mombassa.

THE REASON WHY

Elgin

TENTS STAND FIRST.

¶ "ELGIN" TENTS have advertised themselves for nearly half a century, because every "ELGIN" TENT sold is a standing advertisement while the tent lasts.

¶ Each Tent made by THE ELGIN MILLS at Cawnpore is produced with equal care, whether the price is Rs. 25 or Rs. 25,000. The Quality of Material, the Workmanship, the Finish always come up to the "ELGIN" reputation.

¶ You will be convinced if you buy an "ELGIN" TENT, which will speak for itself, or any friend who has used one, will confirm our statement.

Let us send you our Latest Catalogue, which is the most Complete Published.

WINCHESTER

AN EFFECTIVE BIG-GAME GETTER.

There's no question about it — when you go after big game, you want a rifle that has power. You get it in the .35 Caliber Winchester Repeater. This rifle handles a cartridge having a 250-grain bullet, which has a muzzle velocity of 2200 foot seconds and a muzzle energy of 2687 foot pounds. Think of this tremendous energy being expended inside an animal, as it is when a soft-point bullet is used! And you have five cartridges all told, which can be fired in rapid succession. What animal could withstand the terrible shocking effect of such a battery? Many so-called big-game guns seem mere toys in comparison. The .35 Winchester has a strong, simple and reliable action, and a short 24-inch barrel, which is easily handled and yet shoots straight and true at all ranges effective for big-game shooting.

ALL GUNMAKERS CARRY THESE RIFLES.

HURST PARK.

The open weather is most acceptable to the majority of sportsmen, though it puts an extra tax on our jumpers, without an easy furnished by a spell of old-fashioned Christmas weather. With perhaps a contingency against frost, the grass at Hurst Park on Friday last was kept as long as at Derby and sensibly, too, as the high swarth kept the galloping from what might have been very heavy going. The attendance was well up to the average, but, as at Kempton there were marked gaps in the principal events. Results :—

The old year faded out at Hurst Park in sombre surroundings but though skies were grey and the air chilly, hearts were warm and a merry circle of old friends exchanged the compliments of the season with a cheery optimism of better times in store.

The attendance was a very good one, full patronage being accorded the excellent service of trains, and the road division was in force; but, as on the previous day, fields were not plethoric. With the grass kept long the going was not so holding after all ; in fact fairly good, and though several contretemps occurred, no serious damage accrued to man or horse. Results :—

MANCHESTER.

The cotton strike does not seem to have much effected the pocket of the Lancashire folk, as the big outside rings were well filled on Monday in a style that must have cheered the executive, and there were quite as many people in the members' enclosure as at the November meeting, but the falling off was if anything in Tattersall's.

The executive have got a good course, thanks to the drastic measures employed by the Cheshire firm of seedsmen, but they cannot fight fog and most of the racing took place under such a veil as only allowed some furlongs out and home of scope. Results :—

On Tuesday the fog was thicker than on Monday and without a breath of wind it looked like coming to stay, but then cleared off sufficiently to give a two fences clear vista, so fortunately everything proceeded smoothly from start to finish of a successful meeting. Lookers-on did not see much of the game, except as far as the small area in which the fog bounded their vision, but though the attendance fell short of Monday's muster it was a fairly good one, especially in the further enclosures. ASSOCIATION RULES.

THE close of the year finds rather more than 200 of the 300 matches which constitute the First League programme completed, and Newcastle United possessed of a lead of four points over their nearest rivals. To their proud position the Newcastle men are fuly entitled for, if in September losing as many games as they won they passed through the next two months without a single reverse being recorded against them, December brought a check in their fortunes, reverses being sustained from Manchester United at Newcastle and from Preston North End on the Deepdale enclosure, but these disasters were not sufficient—after the admirable work of October and November—to rob them of first place in the competition. Altogether during the past three months they have in the course of fifteen engagements gained ten victories, played three draws, and suffered two defeats. The marked improvement in their career came practically with the return of Rutherford to the team and the introduction of Hibbert, and now that the disagreement with Veitch has been at length settled, Newcastle United enter upon the New Year with excellent prospects of carrying off the League championship for the fourth time in their career.

As their most formidable rivals for first honours, Newcastle have Blackburn Rovers, Everton, Manchester United, and Bradford City, Blackburn Rovers and Bradford City have been well placed for a long time past, but Manchester United's advance dates back no more than six weeks, during which period they have won five games out of eight and lost only one. The progress of Everton is of even more recent occurrence, for the second Saturday in December found that team twelfth on the list. Since losing at Blackburn, however, Everton have beaten Sheffield Wednesday, Bury, Middlesbrough, and Tottenham Hotspur, and drawn with Middlesbrough, thus registering nine points out of a possible ten. As a result of this fine series of performances, Everton take third place on the list, and in so doing occupy exactly the same position as at the end of 1910. Twelve months ago, however, Aston Villa and Manchester United stood at the head of the competition Newcastle United being no higher than eighth and Blackburn Rovers—now second—being seventh on the list. The fact than Manchester United and Aston Villa last season finished respectively first and second is full of hope for the prospects of Newcastle United.

Saturday's games—the return engagements to those contested on the first day of September—furnished four instances, of a similar result to that arrived at so early in the season. Newcastle United again defeated Bolton Wanderers, Blackburn Rovers for the second time showed themselves too strong for Bury, and Sheffield United, having previously won at Oldham by 3 to 2, pulled through against Oldham Athletic at Bramall Lane by 4 to 0, while, rather curiously, Manchester United, so far from running up a good score at the expense of Manchester City at Old Trafford, had, as at Hyde Road, to rest content with a pointless draw. Notts County, after sustaining two reverses from Manchester City earlier in the week, took their revenge at Meadow Lane for a defeat inflicted upon them at West Bromwich, and Sheffield Wednesday, beaten at home by Preston North End in September, pulled through at Deepdale by the odd goal in five. Very low down on the list for the first three months of the season, the two Sheffield clubs are both making up ground, Wednesday having won six of their last eight matches and United three out of five.

While matters are going well with several First League clubs, Tottenham Hotspur have struck a very bad patch. Only three weeks ago the North London team were making a desperately close fight for second place with Blackburn Rovers and, within two points of Newcastle United, found themselves well in the running for first honours. A narrow defeat at Bolton, however, was followed by an unexpected reverse from Bradford City and the brilliant victory over Woolwich Arsenal on Christmas Day was promptly discounted at Plumstead on Boxing Day. Now has come another narrow beating—from Everton—Hotspur thus sustain ng their fourth defeat in five matches. On no occasion have the Tottenham men been badly beaten, but the loss of so many points destroys all likelihood of the club securing a really prominent position. Although Everton only scored once yesterday, Beare going through in the first quarter of an hour, the Lancashire team were generally the more dangerous side. Collins, the regular right-back, was badly missed. Woolwich Arsenal, like Hotspur, are faring disastrously, but for the Plumstead team owing to injuries to players, there is more excuse. Yesterday at Liverpool neither Greenaway nor Lewis could assist, and the Arsenal found themselves two goals behind at the interval. Liverpool, thus happily placed, kept their opponents well in check afterwards and ran out winners by 4 to 1.

All the eight matches which comprised the programme for the Second League clubs had definite results, six home clubs winning and two—Stockport County and Wolverhampton Wanderers—suffering defeat. Very few changes occurred in the positions on the table, and as the first four teams in the competition were all successful they remain the same as at the conclusion of the Christmas programmes. During the week Derby County superseded Burnley at the head of affairs, and although they only lead by one point they possess a much finer record, having a game in hand and a splendid goal average of 50 for and 14 against. No other club can point to such a fine testimony of strength in defence, though Chelsea have only had one more goal obtained against them. Against Clapton Orient, Derby County, after seeing the first goal of the match scored by their opponents, played admirably and quite deserved to win by the margin of four goals that separated the teams at the end. Visiting Stockport Chelsea were victorious in a fairly level game, and Fulham also won against the luckless Bristol City side, who with Notts Forest, are a long way down the list. The surprise of the afternoon occurred at Wolverhampton, where Grimsby Town gained an unexpected victory and enabled Barnsley to go up above Wolverhampton Wanderers. Scoring was fairly heavy, the eight games producing 37 goals.

Apart from the games at Brentfort and Exeter—drawn without a score and won by a goal respectively—Saturday's matches in the Southern League were remarkable for the ease with which defences were overcome, no fewer than 39 goals being obtained—38 of them in eight engagements. The heaviest scoring took place at Swindon, where the champions beat Leyton by 6 goals to 2, but the most meritorious performance was the victory of Crystal Palace by 6 goals to 1 at Upton Park. Perhaps West Ham United were unlucky to suffer such a heavy reverse, but their defence was sometimes obviously at fault, and the visiting forwards, with the recently acquired Smith in the centre, played a clever, dashing game. Watford were the only other side to win away from home, but Southampton gained a point from Millwall at New Cross and Reading drew with Brentfort at Griffin Park. These were of no special consequence in relation to the leading clubs, the most important matches being those in which Swindon beat Leyton 6—2 and Queen's Park Rangers defeated Plymouth Argyle by 2—0. Until Wednesday when they lost to Swindon the Plymouth club had not suffered reverse since 21st October, actually winning nine out of ten games. Steadily rising to third place they had a great opportunity of seriously challenging Swindon and the Rangers, but meeting these formidable opponents within four days they lost both games—the second beating, yesterday, leaving them nine points behind the leaders, who are five points ahead of Queen's Park Rangers. Following their reverse at Northampton and at Swindon from Brighton and Hove Albian, the Champions gained four victories in this last week of the year, and they enter upon the second half of the season's work with a splendid prospect of doing well in the Cup, besides retaining chief honours in the Southern League.

RUGBY RULES.

LONDON WELSH VS. LONDON IRISH.—These sides, returned from their Christmas tours, met at Wandsworth on terribly heavy ground with the result that the Irish, adapting themselves to the conditions far more easily than their opponents, won by a couple of tries to nothing. The Irishmen obtained a try in each half, Horan scoring for them in the first eight minutes and M'Gowan about two minutes from the finish. The characteristic Irish rushes of the visiting forwards, in which they kept better control of the ball, were continuously dangerous, while the Welshmen, relying more upon their back play, made too many mistakes. The latter's halves frequently got the ball from scrums, and just as often set their three-quarters going, but the greasy ball was a big handicap in passing, and someone invariably. On two occasions tries seemed certain, but each time with a clear field the player knocked on. The weather was delightfully fine, and there was a capital attendance. It should be mentioned that the London Welsh were not at full strength. London Irish, 6 points; London Welsh, 0.

RICHMOND VS. FETTESIAN LORETTONIANS.—Richmond were fortunate in drawing their game against the team from the famous Scottish schools at Richmond, for on the run of the game the Scotsmen should have won quite easily. On each side the forwards were good and pretty well matched and the tackling all round was very keen, but the players in both three-quarters lines were rarely together. Attempts at pressing were often woefully bad, and many fine scoring chances were, as a result, thrown away. For the opening twenty minutes the play favoured Richmond, and a passing run across the field sent Plant in with a try, which was not improved, while, after the Scotsmen had wasted several promising chances of scoring, Wilson raced away with another try and Lagden kicked a goal. In the second half the Scotsmen had a good deal the better of the game, but their aimless kicking and poor passing on their side, and the sound tackling of Richmond, kept them out for a time. P.M. Campbell, however, got in with a try for them, and Mackenzie placed a goal, whilst later, after Richmond had been frequently hard pressed within a few yards of their goal line, Stout got over wide out. Purves failed with the place kick, and the scores were even. Fettes and Loretto did most of the attacking at the end, but they could not score again. Richmond, 8 points; Fettesian Lorettonians, 8 points.

"PLEASE mum," said the tramp, "would you be so kind as to let me have a needle and thread?"

"Well, y-e-s," said the housewife at the door, "I can let you have that."

"And could you oblige me with a small piece of stuff to patch my clothes?"

"Oh, yes, I think I can manage that. Will this do?"

"Thankee very much, mum. It's a little different colour from my suit, I see. Perhaps, mum, you could spare me some of your husband's old clothes that this patch will match?"

"Well, I declare, you're clever, my man and I'll give you an old suit. Here is one."

"Thankee greatly, mum. I see it's a little large, mum, but if you'll kindly furnish me with a square meal perhaps I can fill it out."

Polo.

AN ALL-INDIA POLO TEAM.

THERE has been considerable discussion among polo players since the great Durbar Tournament, as to the composition of a team to represent India as a country, and the chances, if such a combination could be formed, of pitting it against the best teams of England and America.

Unfortunately the difficulties of bringing about a meeting of this kind are almost insurmountable, at any rate so far as the formidable Meadowbrook players are concerned. They will not leave their own shores again for polo purposes until the International Cup is wrested once more from their tenacious grasp, and a strenuous excursion to regain it is rendered necessary. This may not occur for some years to come, by which time the present members of that invincible combination will probably, with the exception of Milburn, have been superannuated, and others, perhaps not equally brilliant, will have stepped into their places. Therefore a battle between Mr. Whitney's quarrette and All-India hardly comes within the range of practical politics, though were such a contest to occur, the struggle would undoubtedly be of the closest description, and not a few would anticipate a victory for the latter. It would seem possible, however, for a representative team from India to dispute the honour of supremacy with the best side that England can produce, if only the matter of leave could be satisfactorily arranged, and a bandobust made for the purchase of the necessary ponies.

Last year, it is true, a team representing the I.P.A. competed for and won the Coronation Cup at Hurlingham, which was intended to be a supreme test of efficiency. But at the last moment several strong competitors scratched, and the Tournament resulted more or less in a fiasco; only one team, the 4th Dragoon Guards, winners of the Home Inter-Regimental, being left to do battle with the stalwarts from the East. Skilful and dashing though the Fourth undoubtedly are, there is no question that a far stronger combination can be produced in England in case of need, and the same may be said of the sportsmen who did duty for India on that occasion. Neither Shah Mirza Beg nor Colonel Chunda Singh would be selected to play for a really representative team, though the veteran Colonel played a magnificent game at Delhi, when the Scouts suffered a narrow defeat at the hands of the Inniskillings.

Slight though the chances may be of an actual encounter between England and India at polo, it is nevertheless of interest to hazard an opinion as to the two best sides which might be selected, and to discuss their respective merits. There can surely be but one opinion as to the composition of an All-India Team as regards three of its members. Captains Cheape, Ritson, and Barrett stand out by themselves as the best performers in this country, and the only questions to decide are—what positions in the field would they occupy, and who would be the player to complete the quartette.

The selection of the latter would appear to lie between two alternatives—Mr. E. W. Palmes, 10th Hussars, and Captain Rasbotham, who played so brilliantly at No. 1 for the K. D. G's. in the Durbar Tournament.

Mr. Palmes went to America last year with challengers led by Captain Hardress-Lloyd, and though he did not actually play in the test matches, he may be considered an International to all intents and purposes. He is a very accurate and powerful hitter, absolutely cool and collected in any emergency, and enjoys enormous experience in tournament polo. At No. 3 he is worthy of inclusion in the very strongest side.

Probably, therefore, the best possible All-India team would be—Captain Cheape No. 1, in which position he figured against Meadowbrook, Captain Ritson No. 2, Mr. Palmes No. 3 and Captain Barrett, back.

On the other hand one might argue that Captains Rasbotham and Cheape are so accustomed to one another's methods, that a stronger combination might be formed if Captain Rasbotham played No. 1, Cheape 2, Ritson 3, and Barrett back. Personally, however, I prefer the first suggestion, since Rasbotham, though equally brilliant, is perhaps not quite so reliable as Palmes, and has not the same experience.

Suppose, for the sake of argument, that this team were to arrive in England, adequately equipped with ponies, to enter the lists for the Champion Cup at Hurlingham. No ordinary side at home would have a chance against them, and if their certain victory were to be averted, a special selection would have to be made. Several prominent names at once occur.

Edwardes, 9th Lancers, Captains Wilson and Hardress-Lloyd are all Internationals and Edwardes, in particular, is absolutely phenomenal. Mr. Buckmaster, too, though nominally retired from the game, is still in the opinion of many, the finest player, except Milburn, that the world has ever seen. Mr. Cecil Nickalls, a wonderfully strong No. 1, Mr. Pat of the same ilk at back, Lords Wodehouse and Rocksavage, the two Grenfells and many others would all deserve careful consideration; though perhaps the best possible England team at the moment would be composed of Mr. R. Grenfell 1, Mr. N. Edwardes 2, Mr. W. S. Buckmaster 3, and Captain Hardress Lloyd back. Should such a quartette meet the All-India team suggested above, it would be surprising if the latter did not start favourites, though as far as Goal Handicap goes there is nothing to choose between them. I am writing from memory, but I believe that the two teams are exactly equal according to the present Handicap List. The Indian representatives, however, especially Cheape and Ritson seem to improve every day, while possibly Buckmaster and Captain Lloyd are gradually losing some of the dash which makes them so powerful. The great probability is that were such a match to occur, the victory of India by a margin of not less than three goals would be generally anticipated. What a pity it is, that the difficulties in the way are so many. It would be a battle of giants and worth going very far to see.

SIALKOT TOURNAMENT.

FOURTEEN teams entered for Polo Tournament at Sialkot, but the 3rd King's Royal Rifles scratched. The tournament is played on the handicap system and the first round was put through on the 15th instant when six games were played. The first match was between the King's Regiment and the 19th Lancers "A" team the former being in receipt of 5 goals. An unfortunate accident in the third chukker, in which Mr. Fitzgerald was knocked over, rather robbed the game of its interest, Mr. Fitzgerald being unable to continue. Mr. Talbot, who had shown excellent form, had to stand down, and the game was continued with three players on each side. Eventually the 19th Lancers won by 7 goals to 5 goals.

The 17th Lancers "A" team defeated the 21st Cavalry by 8 goals to 5. Both sides' handicap being the same they started level. This was perhaps the best match of the afternoon. Both sides were well mounted and some good polo was seen. For the winners Lieutenant-Colonel Tilney was in great form, and hit most of the goals. The Lancers had slightly the best of the game throughout and made full use of all their opportunities.

The 17th Lancers "B" team beat the 4th E.B.B.'s by seven goals to 1. This was the only match in which the handicapping did not bring the sides together. This was mainly due to the superiority of the Lancers' ponies. Better mounted the 60th would have done much better. All the winners played well, while for the losers Captain Seymour was the best.

The last game was between the 17th Lancers "D" team and the 42nd Cavalry. Both sides' handicap being the same they started level and an excellent game was witnessed. Mr. Turner and Mr. Dube both showed excellent form and it was mainly through their efforts that their side won. The 42nd all played up well but as in the previous game the superiority of the ponies told and they were beaten by 3 goals to nothing.

THE second round was played on Wednesday the 17th.

The first match was between two teams of the 17th Lancers. Both teams had the same handicap, so started level. A very good game was witnessed. The "A" team had a slight advantage throughout, their shooting at goal was better than their opponents, who missed two easy chances. Colonel Tilney and Major

The next match was between the 19th Lancers "B" team, handicap 12, and the Durham Light Infantry, handicap 6. The 19th gave their opponents 5 goals start, and failed to catch them, eventually being beaten by 3 goals to 1. The Durham's thoroughly deserved their success, and had quite as much of the game as their opponents. Teams as before.

The last game was between the 17th Lancers "B" team handicap 17, and the 17th Lancers "D" team, handicap 11. "B" team won by 7 goals to 4. This was a very fast game. Captain Melvill and Mr. Parbury were too strong in the attack, and making full use of their opportunities in front of goal, their side won rather easily.

The first games of a handicap tournament for those beaten in the first round were also played off during the day. The King's Liverpool Regiment were beaten by the Sialkot Gymkhana by 4 goals to 3 goals, and the 21st Cavalry beat the 19th Lancers "A" team by 4 goals to 1 goal.

Athletics.

1st Bn. MIDDLESEX ATHLETIC SPORTS.

THE Barrack Square at Dum Dum was well attended on Friday afternoon the occasion being the annual sports of the 1st Middlesex. The day previous the different heats were run off and on the afternoon on which the finals were put through most of the events were keen and exciting. The fine Band of the regiment contributed largely to the afternoon's enjoyment and it is not since the Munsters left, which is thirteen years ago, that the little suburban station of Dum Dum look so bright and cheerful. Appended are the results of the principal events on the programme:—

Long Jump.—Corporal Eden 1, Pte. Bateman 2, Lce-Corpl. Harrison 3. Eden cleared 18 feet 4 inches.

Mile—(Regimental).—Pte. Smith 1, Lce.-Corpl. Panton 2, Pte. Barton 3. Won by 10 yards.

THE MADRAS BOAT CLUB.

ANNUAL REGATTA.

THE Annual Regatta of the Madras Boat Club was held on the 20th instant under most favourable conditions. The three events between teams representing Madras and Poona were most interesting and on this occasion the visitors from Poona carried all before them. They won the Inter-Club four-oar race for the eleventh time out of fourteen contests and also carried off the pairs and single sculls. There was a big attendance of spectators and at the close of the proceedings the Hon. Sir Murray Hammick made a congratulatory speech and Lady Hammick gave away the prizes. Mr. Cunliffe acted as Starter, Canon G. H. Smith as Umpire, Mr. A. D. Jackson as Judge, and Mr. H. H. G. Mitchel as Time-keeper. Results:—

JUNIOR SCULLS.—707 yds. In whiffs.

Heat 1.—Redfern beat Mellor and Alexander.

Heat 2.—Attwood w. o.

Final.—H. Redfern beat G. R. Attwood easily by two and half a lengths. Time—3mins. 39secs.

JUNIOR PAIR-OAR.—707 yds.

C. G. Alexander	(str)	S. E. Sewell	(str)
M. S. T. Paul	(cox)	M. E. S. Thompson	(cox)

Won easily. Sewell's boat stopped near home, owing to an accident to a side. Time—2mins. 56secs.

PAIR-OAR.—707 yds. Clinker boats.

POONA.			MADRAS.
J. Startin	(bow)	beat	C. A. W. Payne	(bow)
R. C. Wilson	(str)		W. Simmons	(str.)

Won very easily by several lengths. Time—3mins. 3secs.

CHALLENGE SCULLS.—Best boats, 707 yds. For prize and Challenge Cup to be held for one year.

Heat 1.—Maddeley beat Greig. Greig fouled a buoy and retired.

M. P. Leahy ... beat J. W. Maddeley.

Leahy went off with the lead and kept it all the way eventually winning by one and a quarter length. Time—2mins. 41secs.

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

TRULY Calcutta has been doing very badly this year and their batsman have never been able to score against good bowling. Nattore has beaten Calcutta twice and the defeat of the second match which took place at the Gardens was attributed to the wicket. The third game which was to have taken place on the C.C.C. ground was played on the Maharaja's pitch in accordance with Calcutta's wishes. But even on this excellent pitch, and the Calcutta batsman having first use of the wickets they fared badly, the whole side being out for 170 to which Nattore replied with 347 for four.

On Saturday evening, when Calcutta had scored 161 for five wickets, there were bright hopes of the side putting up a decent total, but on the following morning the remaining five batsmen surrendered themselves for 9 runs only. Their downfall was due to the excellent bowling of Sampre and Baloo and to the all round brilliant fielding.

Indeed Nattore were the stronger combination all round. B. N. Bocquet's 58 was the best display on the losing side, the batsman making sound strokes and not giving a chance. V. Given Wilson played well for 52, but his innings was marred by two chances. Sampre who comes very fast off the pitch, maintained a perfect length throughout, and took seven wickets for 53 runs. Baloo got the remaining three for 71 runs, but the Bombay Hindu had two catches dropped off his bowling.

For Nattore P. Shivram's 114 was the feature of the day's batting, and as far as could be seen he gave no chances. K. Roy contributed a not out 107 his third century this season and he too played sound cricket. Diveker, who got 55 contributed the same score as he did in the last match against the same team. Nattore won by 6 wickets and 177 runs, and the Maharaja and his men are to be congratulated on their handsome victory.

The Bengal Nagpore Railway when at full strength have a very strong side and on Sunday at the gardens they beat a combined team of the C.C.C. and B. C. C. by one wicket and 153 runs. The combined XI batted first, and were all out for 166 to which the Railway replied with 324. For the losers J. C. Sewell 46, and G. L. Scott 50, and for the B. N. Ry. C. A. Gordon 30, A. N. Bose 46, E. G. Lilley 75, C. W. Carroll not out 47, and C. Tripp not out 46, were the chief contributors.

AT Howrah on Sunday the Sporting Club beat the Telegraph by 37 runs. Out of a total of 152 for the visitors G. Crook and G. Alridge subscribed 67 and 69 respectively. Howrah Sporting knocked up 189, J. Paul 44 and H. Sircar 41, being the principal rungetters.

At Dum Dum on Sunday the 3rd Middlesex beat the Suburban station team after an interesting day's cricket by 77 runs. Dum Dum totalled 188, Lieutenant F. H. Gould playing attractively for 91. The 3rd Middlesex knocked up 235, Mr. Lyon 75, Mr. Lightfoot 30, and Mr. Gransemore 37, being the highest scores recorded.

The Jute Mills who on Saturday were lucky in beating the Y.M.C.A. by 2 runs, the latter declaring for four after scoring 103 while the jute team were all out for 105, lost to St. Xaviers' on Sunday at the College by 81 runs. The College knocked up 203 for four, whilst the Jute Mills were all out for 122. A. Vaughan for the winners got a not out 80.

At Budge Budge on Sunday Shaw Wallace's team which was composed of officers beat Budge Budge by 15 runs. The home team scored 220 to which M. Quitero and C. Barlow contributed 97 and 93 respectively, both batsmen retiring. Shaw Wallace's side totalled 235 to which C. M. Pope contributed 101.

THE M. C. C. TOUR IN AUSTRALIA.

THE SECOND TEST MATCH.—The second Test match was played at Melbourne on the 31st December, 1st, 2nd and 3rd January and ended in a win for England. The Australians batted first and were all out for 184, Barnes, who bowled remarkably well, taking 5 wickets for 44. Hordern not out 49 and Ransford 43 were the chief contributors. England replied with 265, of which Hearne made 114—his first test century—a really fine innings extending over 3 hours and 45 minutes and including 11 fours. He batted confidently throughout, with a sound defence and a fine variety of strokes. Rhodes played a valuable, if somewhat lucky innings of 61, Woolley, Gunn and Mead being the only others to reach double figures. In their second venture Australia compiled 299. Armstrong made 90—a great effort, soundly defensive while the conditions were difficult and splendidly aggressive in the latter half. Cotter batted well for 41, and Minnett (34), Hordern (31) and Ransford (32) all made useful scores. On going in a second time England were left with 219 to make to win and they hit off the required number of runs for the loss of 2 wickets. Hobbs played a most attractive innings of 126 not out. While his defence was strong he lost few opportunities to punish loose ones and his wristy strokes all round the wicket were as clean and true as one could wish to see. He hit 8 fours. Gunn made 43 by slow cricket, Rhodes 28, and Hearne, not out 8 being the other contributors. Score :—

LADIES' AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

THE Ladies' Championship was continued on Tuesday when the second round was played with the following results :—

Mrs. Hannaford beat Mrs. Elton. Mrs. Hannaford led 3 up at the turn and eventully won by 5 up and 4.

Mrs. Young beat Mrs. Hope Stewart. The latter began well and led 3 up at the turn, but Mrs. Young struck form on the return journey and finished 2 up.

Mrs. Alexander beat Mrs. Martelli. Mrs. Martelli was quite off her game and Mrs. Alexander won comfortably by 7 up and and 6 to play.

Miss Binning beat Mrs. Arthur Windsor. The holder of the championship was not in form and Miss Binning won easily by 5 up and 4.

SEMI-FINALS.—The match between Mrs. Young and Miss Binning ended in a win for the latter by 6 up and 5 to play after being 5 up at the turn. Mrs. Hannaford beat Mrs. Alexander after a very level game by 3 up and 2 to play.

THE FINAL was played on the 19th and spectators were treated to a very fine match. Going out Miss Binning won the first hole, the second and third were halved in 5, the 4th and 5th went to Miss Binning, making her 3 up. Going to the 6th Miss Binning found the tank and this hole was won by Mrs. Hannaford. The seventh was won by Miss Binning, the 8th went to Mrs. Hannaford in 5 and the 9th was halved in 4 leaving Miss Binning 2 up at the turn. On the return journey Mrs. Hannaford won the 10th and 11th and thus squared the match. She also took the 12th hole and thus led 1 up. The 13th and 14th were halved and Miss Binning carrying the next hole made all square once more. On the way to the 16th Miss Binning again put her ball into the tank and Mrs. Hannaford winning the hole was 1 up with 2 to go. The 17th was won by Mrs. Hannaford and she thus secured the match by 2 and 1.

Mrs. Begg, the Captain of the Ladies' Golf Club, then presented the cups, and congratulated both champion and runner—up on their excellent play, and cheers terminated the proceedings.

THE ALL-INDIA HOCKEY TOURNAMENT.

THE following is the draw in the All-India Hockey Tournament and results to 24th instant :—

THE DAVIES CUP.

THE weather was fine for the start of the Davies Cup at Christchurch on New Year's Day. The court dried rapidly, and was in the pink of condition. The sky was overcast when the game began. The stands were crowded. The Governor's party were present and the enthusiasm was great. The principal game was the single between Norman Brookes (Victoria) and Beals C. Wright (America).

First Set.—Wright (serving) won the first game, and Brookes the next. Brookes also won the third by out-generalling the American, and also the fourth. Wright took the fifth, Brookes the sixth, Wright the seventh, Brookes the eighth, and Wright the ninth. Brookes won the tenth and the set.

Second Set.—Wright (serving) won the first game, and the second and third. Wright seemed to be getting on his game in this set. Brookes picked up, and won the fourth, but lost the fifth and sixth. He had an easy win the seventh. The eighth was the worst game so far, won by the American. 6-2.

Third Set.—Wright took the first game easily, Brookes the second, Wright the third, Brookes the fourth by clever playing, also the fifth and sixth very easily. In the seventh Brookes out-generalled the American, but lost the eighth, and won the ninth and the set.

Stephens'

It is especially suitable for India because it retains its copying power under varying climatic conditions.

Fourth Set.—Brookes seemed to be lasting better, Wright having had most of the running about. Brookes won the first, Wright the second, Brookes the third, Wright the fourth, Brookes the fifth, Wright the sixth, Brookes the seventh, eighth, ninth, and the match amid great enthusiasm.

Final scores :—Brookes, 6—4, 2—6, 6—3, 6—3.

Heath vs. Larned.—Larned commenced his match against Heath at 20 minutes to 4 o'clock. He won the first and second games, and Heath won the third and fourth, thus making the scores level. However, that was the Victorian's last success during this set, as the American won the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth games, and scored an easy victory. Heath had his revenge in the second set and scored an easier victory than Larned's in the first. The Australian won the first and second games. He lost the third, but made no mistake thereafter, as he won the next four games and the set. The third set proved the most stubbornly fought and prolonged of the day. Larned got the first game, and Heath notched the second. The game was keenly contested. Five, one, then the other, had the upper hand. Larned won the third but Heath evened the score by winning the fourth. A big lead was secured by Larned through winning the fifth and sixth. Then Heath won a hat trick of games, the seventh, eighth, and ninth. Larned replied by taking the tenth. Finally Heath won the set by defeating the American in the eleventh and twelfth games. The Australians were now in a strong position. Heath had only to win the next set to give them a leg in. He began well by winning the first two games, but the American drew level during the third and fourth. That was the visitor's only score, however, as Heath won the next four games, the set and the match.

By splendid tennis, consummate generalship, admirable restraint, and safety tactics, Brooks and Dunlop on the 2nd instant robbed the American challengers of their last chance for the Davis Cup. Although the Americans captured the second set 7—5, it could not be said fairly that the result was ever in doubt. The general opinion, rightly so, held that a great deal depended on Dunlop's form. Brookes has at times broken down in doubles games, but is clearly at top form now. Dunlop is admittedly one of the finest doubles players in the world, if fit and well for such a severe battle. All through, so far as they could, Wright and McLoughlin, playing according to a prearranged plan, turned everything Dunlop's way. Volleys were twisted into his corner. McLoughlin battered him from all over the court, but the genial Victorian stood the test well Worried by his opponents, he tried at first to make his shots too fine and frequently netted and dragged outside the base and side lines All this while unsmiling Brookes, his grey cap well down over his ears, was starved but was never for an instant off his guard. McLoughlin did astonishingly brilliant things from terrific smashes, scorching drives to rasping volleying at the net. His service up to the fifth game of the fourth set was invincible. In pace, placing, kicking, and breaking, his service rivalled Brookes's. When he tired the Americans began to go back steadily. Wright, light-hearted as ever, battled manfully to recover the ground lost through his partner's drives and smashes, which were now too often finding the net, but it was of no avail. The Australasian pair pressed ruthlessly. Dunlop's low volleying and cross-the-court shots aroused the crowd. With superb dexterity and deadly accuracy Brooks, with his lips set, as they always are when facing an opponent worthy of his steel, lobbed to the base line, or cut off-drives as they crossed the net, with quite master strokes, or at the net glanced ace-winning volleys into some out-of-the-way corner. Further, he pursued the characteristic policy of never wasting an ounce more of energy than was necessary with a stroke. Patiently he loaded from the base line, and from corner to corner of the opposite base line. There were no wild lashings, that earned plaudits more often than not. His return was gentle-mannered. Wright fought desperately from the back line, and recovered remarkable shots after punishing physical efforts. As the Americans faltered, their opponents added depth to their drives and sting to their volleys. When the Americans lost McLoughlin's service halfway through the fourth set prophets among the spectators buzzed ominously. Dunlop's service many people considered, was too soft, but many people erred therein, for its habit of keeping low made it difficult to return with any severity. Brookes walked about the net, volleying McLoughlin's return from side to side. He got him out of position, and smashed quietly. McLoughlin drove the next well out, and the crowd cheered. With victory in sight Dunlop's malignant service went to Wright, and the latter was too far for it. The occupants of the stadium buzzed excitedly. The fate of the Davis Cup might hang on that last serve which smiling McLoughlin had to face The ball landed in the middle of the service base. The youngster stepped back to make a fore hand drive of it. He swung viciously right into the net, and it was all over The crowd pressed about the winners, and the enthusiasm was something to remembered. The cheering continued until the contestants had passed from view. The winners finished in superb condition, Brookes particularly so.

First Set.—The Australians won the first and second games, America the third and fourth, Australia the fifth and sixth, America the seventh, Australia the eighth, America the ninth and Australia the tenth and the set. 6—4.

Second Set.—America won the first game, Australia the second, America the third, Australia the fourth, America the fifth, Australia the sixth, America the seventh, Australia the eighth, America the ninth, Australia the tenth, eleventh, twelfth and the set. 7—5.

Third Set.—America won the first and second game, Australia the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth, America the seventh and eighth, Australia the ninth and tenth, and the set. 6—4.

Motoring and Aviation.

MOTOR NOTES.

LONDON, 5th January 1912.

MOTORISTS who have either been smashed up or forced into curbs and ditches by other drivers are just now airing their grievances in their special papers. If one would take the trouble to canvass among motoring friends for their opinions and experiences, one would find that few reasonable motorists have escaped the man who seems determined "to get there" regardless of the safety of others. Even on the main road silly "monkey tricks" are more common than they ought to be among the type of driver who insist on passing everything on the road. The ordinary amenities of the highroad should allow every driver to go straight on with due care without worrying what traffic their may be coming up behind him. Nothing is more disconcerting to the average driver than to be at the wheel of one of two cars between which a speed-fiend sports with barely an inch to spare between his hub caps and those of the other cars.

FOR the good of motorists, as well as cyclists it is to be hoped the Cyclists' Touring Club will be successful in raising in the House of Commons the question as to the reasonableness of the recent decision in the Appeal Courts about straying cattle and horses. The point was originally raised in an action brought by two cyclists, who were riding a tandem bicycle, against the owner of a cart horse which was straying on the high-way and which brought about the wreck of the machine and injury to the riders. This action went against the cyclists, and so has the judgment of the Appeal Court. By common law, as it at present stands, the occupier of land adjoining a highway is under no duty to fence so as to keep his animals off the highway, and, in order to succeed in a claim for compensation caused by a straying animal, a plaintiff would have to prove that it was in the general nature of the animal to be vicious, and that the owner of the animal was aware of its propensities. This being so, it is eminently desirable that steps should be taken to initiate legislation in order to remedy a state of the law which is so obviously absurd and inflicts such manifest injustice on all road users.

THE universal joints of the cardan shaft are often neglected because they are not located where they are a constant reminder to the owner or driver. It is, however, very necessary, if the car is to be maintained in the best possible condition, that they should have an occasional inspection. A good rule in the case of a vehicle which is used moderately is to make this a monthly task. It is not necessary always to thoroughly clean the bearings every month, but they should at least have the supply of oil renewed If this is done every month and the old oil cleaned out by flushing with paraffin before the new oil is put in they should never give any trouble. There is generally a plug in the joint casing, which can be removed for the purpose of flushing and refilling. Cotton waste should not be permitted within the casing, as it will be sure to become caught in some irregularity. of the joint and be twined about the bearings after the shaft is in motion. In the case of the rear universal joint, grease is generally inserted into the casing by means of grease gun. The front universal joint casing may be filled with gear oil, or, when the weather is cold, cylinder oil may be used to good advantage.

Horse-Owners allege that tar in wet weather gives a very treacherous foothold to horses and that many accidents have occurred through its use. Whilst every one recognises the necessity of tar-spraying to prevent the dust nuisance, it is now suggested that there is another side to the question. Some authoritative information will therefore be necessary as to the effect it has on horses, and what remedies can be taken to avoid any ills that may exist. The Roads Improvement Association are shortly going to enquire fully into this question to see what effect the various methods of shoeing horses has on the matter, and their considerations will be awaited with much interest. From a preliminary consideration of the facts before the Roads Improvement Association it would seem that the complaints of slipperiness come only from certain parts of the country, where the calkins of the horses' shoes penetrate the tar binding to such an extent that water gets beneath the road crust, causing a greasy surface to be formed.

An inquiry has been instituted in France to ascertain the effects of tarred roads upon wayside vegetation. According to some, the effect is anything but beneficial, flowers, plants, and even trees, suffering very markedly from the black, powdery tar dust which settles on them. A commission has been appointed accordingly to investigate the matter and to ascertion the real facts of the case. Its findings will be of general interest. Personally, I shall expect to learn that there has been a good deal of exaggeration on the subject. The practice of road tarring seems, indeed, to arouse peculiar hostility and give rise to peculiar fables. Sometime ago, it may be remembered, a scare was got up as to the pollution of rivers, and the destruction of the fish therein by the tar-infected water drained off the roads. It was conclusively proved subsequently, however, that the notion was an absolute myth. I shall not be very greatly surprised to learn that the alleged damage done to the trees is another complaint in the same category.

AVIATION NOTES.

A flight across the Atlantic from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Ireland, is proposed by Mr. James V. Martin, the Harvard aviator, who learned to fly at Hendon.

Mr. Martin who carried the first passenger in heavier-than-air craft from Hendon to Brooklands last May, is quite calmly planning this cross-Atlantic flight as a possible trip for the summer of this year.

He proposed to make the attempt in the moonlight period of August, and calculates that he can cover the oversea journey of 2,000 miles in about forty hours, at the average of speed of fifty miles an hour.

The trip will be made from New York or Boston, stopping at St. John's, Newfoundland, for fuel. The aeroplane will have a small cabin, 6feet wide and 10feet in depth fore and aft, and will provide accommodation for two operators and one mechanician.

Little difficulty is anticipated as to the navigation. A compass will be used, but not relied on to any considerable extent, because the element of leeway in aeroplanes may be so great as to render the compass entirely misleading.

The average height at which the machine will remain during its trip will be 5,000 feet, and the navigator believes that he will be able to keep some vessels within sight at all times.

Signalling devices will be carried by the aeroplane, so that the attention of passing vessels can be attracted in case the aeroplane alights on the water. The aeroplane, which will be driven by five 50-h. p. Gnome engines, is expected to carry 5,000lbs. of petrol and oil.

If the British Government has not risen to the situation, it is not because the necessity of doing something to keep abreast of our Continental rivals has not been impressed upon them in Parliament as well as out. When at last the Government does awake to a sense of its responsibilities, it is to be hoped that the debt under which the members of the Aerial Defence Committee and other far seeing members of both Houses have laid the country will not be forgotten. In season and out of season, questions have been showered upon responsible ministers, but always with the same result. The policy has been too favourite one of "Wait and see" so that we have not got very much further. We have already alluded to the Bill which the Government passed in June last, so there is no need to do more than mention it in passing. It can easily be gathered that, officially speaking, the year has been a somewhat barren one.

I do not hear a great deal of the work accomplished by the Italian airmen in the Tripolitan campaign, but what little news does filter through is convincing enough of the extreme rapidity of the aeroplane for reconnaissance work. The correspondent of the Daily Express sent home an interesting despatch the other day, describing the valuable work done by the aeroplanes attached to General Canevaro's army. One conclusion is that as a bomb-dropping device the aeroplane in the hands of those employed was not successful. What it may be able to accomplish in this direction in the future of its development is another matter, but as we know it to-day and can conceive it to-morrow, we are not surprised that the actualities of warfare have taught this lesson. Of the value of the aeroplane as a gatherer of information, the correspondent speaks in the highest terms of praise. In fact, he goes so far as to say that many of the Italian operations could not have been successfully conducted had it not been for the important scouting work done by the airmen.

The rumour was current a few days ago in Paris that the two well known Belgian aviators, Van den Born and Jules Tyck, both of whom had already made flights in the Far East, had volunteered their services to the Turkish Government for action at the seat of war in Tripoli. The report is absolutely unfounded, however, and the kindly feelings that they entertain towards their friends in Italy have prompted both these aviators, to utter strong denials. As a matter of fact, Van den Born has been suffering these past three months from a violent attack of rheumatism, and as it was at the expense of all his valuable energy that he managed to drag himself from his quarters in Paris to the offices of a Paris contemporary to make protest in person it is evident that he is scarcely in a fit condition to undertake military service.

It is now the end of the year and the consequent closing of the 1911 competition for the Ae. C. F. Criterium, under practically the same rules as the Michelin Cup used to be competed for, witnessed some determined attempts to wrest the honours from M. Fourny. A successful attempt was made on Sunday last at Pau by Gobe on a Gnome engine Nieuport monoplane, when he succeeded in covering 740 251 kiloms. in 8 hours 16 minutes, thus improving on the world's distance record of Fourny of 722 93 kiloms., for which the time taken by the Maurice Farman biplane was 11 hours 1 minute 29⅘ seconds. Gobe's Nieuport machine carried at the commencement 260 litres of petrol and 65 litres of oil as sufficient supply for eleven hours.

Not content with the already successful type of Hydro-aeroplane which has been used with so much success in the States, Glen H. Curtiss has returned to San Diego, California, where he intends to spend the winter in carrying out further experiments on this type of craft. He has already produced one new machine, in which the engine is mounted above the midway position in the gap between the main planes, and the pilot is seated much lower down than heretofore. It will be remembered that a report has been circulated around New York, as mentioned in last week's flight, that Louis Paulhan, who is at present engaged in an action with the Wright Brothers, has ordered one of these machines to be delivered to him next month.

As an indication of the public belief in the aeroplane as a sporting and commercial vehicle of the future, it is interesting to notice that at a meeting of the London County Council some time since, a question was asked of the Chairman of the Establishment Committee whether in view of the fact that the new County Hall would not be completed until four years hence, his Committee would consider the advisability of equiping the roof of that building as a landing ground and garage for the use of aviating members. His reply was to the effect that at present such a provision would doubtless receive every consideration.

In contrast to the success that E. F. Driver and C. Compton Paterson have already attained in Cape Town, comes the very unwelcome news that the latter well-known pilot met with what might have been a serious accident while giving an exhibition on his biplane at the cycle track at Green Point on Tuesday afternoon last. According to reports the elevator jammed while he was at a height of about 40 feet and, losing control of his elevation, he was forced to land somewhat abruptly, with disastrous results to his machine. Paterson was taken away to the hospital where his injuries were found to be nothing more serious than several nasty bruises.

Letters from Bibendum to a Self-made Motorist.

81, Fulham Road,
London, S.W.,
December 13th, 1911.

Dear Miles,

Yours of the 23rd is the last I'll get from you for a time, but this will catch you before you forsake the pen for the steering wheel and turn the old lady's bonnet west.

Your nine-storey pile of sarcasm about that tyre-burst calls to mind the case of the indignant motor cyclist who tried to drive his hot-air quill into the tempers of a few manufacturers not long ago. His high-power rhetoric went to show that his particular form of insanity lies in squashing a tyre on to the back wheel, and with never an enquiry after its health, expecting it to cart him a bit more than 3,000 miles on his joyous way. However, another fellow arrived in the firing line with a 4.7 article that skinned all the whiskers off the first man. He pointed out that he doesn't think the fact that he invariably gets over 5,000 miles out of his Michelins calls for cheers from the assembled populace, because, he says, this mileage is simply the result of keeping the tyres clean and looking them over after every run.

So, you see, you revealed all the rag-stuffing in your genuine hair-filled argument when you said that your tyre had "only run 2,000 miles and hadn't been on the rim more than two months." And that remark naturally called Tommy Watson to mind. Regularly once a month a bill came in to Tommy's Pa for a pair of socks for Tommy. The old man had been a boy himself, and naturally had had his own methods for hooking in a little extra pocket money. So he drew a conclusion, and opened investigations accordingly. "Tommy," he said, "how many pairs of socks have you?" "One pair," said Tommy suspiciously, "I ain't a bloomin' centipede." Now, the old man had never landed Tommy in a lie; but this time he thought he could hear the Spirit of Ananias breathing heavily just behind his ear. So he made Tommy take his boots off. Then he saw the boy was speaking the truth; saw, and very nearly heard.

I only mention this in passing, because what applies to a motor cycle tyre in this matter of cleanliness applies no less to a car tyre; also I want you to stick it right across the front of your memory-case that cuts in covers want filling up, at once; and that rim clinches and cover beads demand occasional examination and treatment. The condition of a man's coat and pants is no guarantee that he won't catch his death through an undarned hole in his undershirt.

That's why I don't want to have any more of those red-light-of-battle howls from you before you really have a casus belli to stand on. If you read the papers you will know what I mean by that, so there's no need to explain that I am not inviting you to jump on me in a physical sense.

Remind me, when we meet, to tell you the story of my friend Wowser, and what he said to me about manufacturers' carelessness before he discovered that the real cause of the trouble lay in his having, while fitting, left a spur lever inside the cover under discussion.

Your sincere friend,

BIBENDUM.

LAMINITIS—FEVER IN THE FEET—FOUNDER.

Acute laminitis (founder) is one of the most, if not the most, painful to the animal and distressing to witness of any of the many acute pains and agonizing diseases to which the horse is liable. It consists of inflammation of the sensitive and extremely vascular and delicate structures known as laminæ, each dovetailed, as it were, into a corresponding horny substance opposite, and the whole encased within a horny box (the hoof) on the outside, and the pedal bone on the inner; it is very plain to see and easy to understand how intensely acute and painful must be an inflamed condition of this part; no relief can be obtain by swelling, and the more the inflammation proceeds the more intense the agony. Anyone who has once witnessed a bad case of acute laminitis can never forget it. The poor animal stands rooted to the ground, with its forefeet (which are by far the most liable to the affection) stretched out in front, and being unable to back, the hind ones are drawn up as far under the belly as possible to relieve the weight of the body; the nose is pushed out, the nostrils dilated, eyes staring, with a pleading and agonizing look, the tail often elevated and quivering, respirations quick and panting, the pulse full and bounding in the early stages and beating perhaps at the rate of a hundred and twenty to the minute, fever up to 105 or 106 degrees, and even with this temperature, the perspiration rolling off the poor wretch from every pore. The urine as a rule is high colored, and diarrhœa may be present, which is a good thing. Such is the appearance of an animal suffering from acute founder. Once seen, it cannot be forgotten.

As has been said before, the forefeet are the ones which are affected in the vast majority of cases, but the hind ones are sometimes the seat of the trouble, and when they are, they are also drawn under the belly as far as possible to bring the weight on to the heels (which are the parts least affected in this disease), and the forefeet are likewise pushed under the body; this is all to relieve weight from the affected parts. Occasionally all four feet are involved, when the position assumed will be a mixture of the preceding, but no mistake can be made as to the nature of the disease, for the intense pain manifested, the hot feet and throbbing of the arteries at the fetlocks, and the appearance the animal has of being rooted to the ground, for he cannot move, is diagnostic. A case of this kind requires immediate attention. If it is not so bad but that the feet can be lifted, and the shoes hastily taken off, that is the first thing to do; then get the feet into tubs or buckets of hot water, as hot, in fact, that you can scarcely bear your hand in it, and have an old blanket cut up and put in the bottom of the tub for the feet to rest on. If it is impossible to raise the animal's feet to remove the shoes, put the feet, shoes and all, into the hot water; placing the blanket in the bottom of the bucket will not then be necessary, as it is only intended for a cushion for the bare soles to rest upon. Now give the patient the following draught, and repeat it every three hours until the fever goes down considerably:

Tincture of aconite, 25 minims; sweet spirits of nitre, 1 ounce; cold water 6 ounces.

In addition to this, place a bucket of clean, cool, fresh water in front of the animal, so that it can be taken whenever the patient wants to, and put the following powder in it: Chloride of potash, 2 drachms; nitrate of potash, 2 drachms. One of these powders should be given three times a day in the drinking water for two or three days.

If the animal will eat, bran mashes, hay, and grass if in season should be given; if the bowels are constipated, a laxative condition should be produced by sloppy mashes, linseed (daxseed) tea, grass, carrots and warm enemas rather than by a purge, but if they remain obstinate, a purgative must be administered, but it should not be a violent one, and if plenty of the laxative diet advised has been given, the following mild one will most likely suffice.

Dynamo Car Lighting.

The first to introduce electric lamps for cars we are again the first to introduce a system of dynamo car-lighting which is at once the most thoroughly practical and economical proposition yet placed on the market.

The bugbears of previous systems are conspicuous by their absence. The important improvements have been the means of attaining a considerable increase in efficiency and reliability. A striking feature that compels admiration is the extreme simplicity that dominates the whole system.

Altogether the system is a triumph of British Engineering skill and workmanship.

The Dynamo complete can be supplied from

DYNAMO LIGHTING OUTFIT.

Barbadoes aloes, 5 drachms; powdered ginger, 1 drachm; molasses sufficient to make a ball. Keep the feet and fetlocks in hot water (which must be kept hot) all day, and put them into big hot flaxseed meal poultices at night; this must be continued for several days, but the medicine must be regulated by the general condition of the animal, and the pulse, temperature and appetite, which are the three great indicators by which we must be guided in the increase, decrease, stoppage or change of medicine. If the animal shows a disposition to lie down, encourage it by all means, as it will afford more relief than anything. See, however, that the horse has a good bed, and have the patient turned over every two or three hours to prevent bed sores, reduce fever, and produce rest.

The Story Teller.

CRISIS WITH A MAN-EATER.

THE Local Government had long had him "under consideration" and was contemplating the offer of something like fifty pounds for him—at the rate, perhaps, of ten shillings per victim. But when a Government takes cognizance of a man-eater and is prepared to act handsomely by him, and his personality becomes official, it is reputation, fame, almost vainglory, both for him and his victor. Many a man gets ambitious of the honour of his acquaintance and there is seeking for him as for rubies. It is true there are drawbacks even without the consideration that the rupees offered may fall short of the actual working expenses; but one's desire for adventure and narrow escapes is occasionally too much for control, and it is not uncharitable to suppose that the Sirkar is aware of this. Perhaps—this is a humble suggestion—there would be noble zeal if the destroyer were mentioned in "despatches"; that is, publicly acknowledged (say, in the Gazette) and suitably extolled. The money reward may then be saved—and that is something in a financial age. It is also a weakness with many to hasten to the rescue of human life, and when a village is awed into keeping indoors and starving because many men and women are "missing," there is nothing to do but undertake it. Still, there would be no harm in the Gazette idea above mentioned.

That was the situation. And I explained the case to Miss Alice Hayward. I was appointed to be in attendance on her, in a manner of speaking, for the entire period of my leave, and I could not be absent without permission in writing, so to say. Hence the explanation. There was a fellow, called Waters, who was ridiculously disputing the matter with me, though at times he was annoying in the way of seeming to be favoured, and on the whole I was doubtful whether I should leave him behind or let the man eater alone. But whilst coveting the undertaking and the glory—and thereby rising a step or so in promotion (in her service)—man-eaters are not to be heard of definitely every day, and there is no professional shikari so reliable in khubber as a Government that wants you to do a job for it. It obligingly furnished full particulars and kept the reward idea in the background and seemingly out of delicacy for one's feelings. It was glad to assume that the mercenary character of it would be offensive. So it simply said there was a man-eater of a very objectionable kind, and hinted that here was a splendid chance for the true sportsman and practical philanthropist.

I secured the permission (rather too easily for my satisfaction) and proceeded to put my irons together after incidentally mentioning that perhaps Mr. Waters disapproved of such dangers. Between us he was not quite of that sort, but it was judicious to put a little spoke in his wheel which would take him some trouble to pull out before my return. So I departed for the locality in the plains, Waters coming to see me off. "Sorry I can't come with you," said Waters, "but after all it's only one, which any man should manage." Then I saw with alarm that he was not only pulling out the spoke already, but carefully fitting it into my wheel. He wished it to be understood that he was accustomed to deal with man-eaters swarming around him, and scorned tamer work. That was just like him, a fellow who couldn't stick to truth for any consideration. "Of course," he added, flicking off the ash from his cigar, "you'll try the machan plan as safest. I generally go in amongst 'em on foot myself." And he yawned wearily. I was sorry I was leaving him behind, being so ingenious a liar, but it was too late to hold back. If I could have taken him along and got him upon a machan which would give way at the critical moment it would have been a wiser and happier arrangement.

Reaching as far as the railway would do it I took horse to the village, almost a day's journey, where there was much popular rejoicing, relief and gratitude amongst the sadly few who were left of those who had fled or died, for now they felt that the time for their deliverance had come. A shikari was quickly found who explained how fell the foe was, his cunning, his daring, his ubiquity, his prescience. Otherwise he, the shikari, would have slaughtered him long ago. Already had two of his brethren perished in the attempt, they finding too late that they themselves were stalked whilst stalking, or watched when watching, and that in any case their guns were unequal to the task. It was whilst discussing and arranging deadly plans that I was stricken down with fever the same day, malarious, nasty and disabling, just the kind which is more irritating than a worse, leaving the mind clear to fret and feel the malignancy of it and rail at fate. For days I waited in exasperation for its departure, and then began to reflect on possibilities. How if it continued to the end? Waters would find a fresh spoke in my failure, and who could blame her if she agreed with him? I could hear him distinctly saying it was a fever that does come on at such times, convenient and never-killing a man, and enabling him to return as sound as a roach. After a fortnight of Waters on the brain I got the shikari at my bedside and instructed him to proceed with the arrangements. "But, Aazoor—" I told him in language worthy of the subject that I had reasons for being carried to the machan if I was dying and kill the beast with my corpse. "How many more men 'missing'?" "Three" said he. I groaned in spirit. They might have fled and escaped it but for hopes of me. "If anything happens to the Aazoor—" the shikari again started; and again I cut in vehemently which my weakened voice ill-supported; "you just obey orders,"—and have the machan at the pool to-morrow. Remember I have strength enough yet to fall upon and slay thee. Think of that."

He showed that that being so he had hopes of me. "If the Sahibar would only come on in the day and leave the Aazoor free in the evening to attend to the task," said he wistfully as he left. I should have done it at the start if the fever had only let me know it meant to have a time of it. But that's the way, I said bitterly, of fevers—nothing honest and above board; all deceit and treachery. The pool now was my only chance: for I could not follow the beast by his "kills" through four hamlets of which he took toll. That would mean foot-work and wariness, besides surprise shooting, as to which I was doubtful of myself, and I was not liar enough like, say Waters, to pretend otherwise.

On the pool, then, I staked my happiness, and as I was supported thither by the shikari the next evening I referred to contingencies. "Should I be overcome, look you, and the bagh appears, you are to wrench my arm until I rouse myself, tear it, break it, do what you will with it, I give you full powers, so long as you stir us into life. And place the gun beside me on the right, and then we shall see what the fates have decreed." He hearkened with respect, inward communing and reservation; and shortly went aloft and hauled me up, and next the rough ladder, all rope and cross-sticks. I found he had arranged too comfortably for the circumstances; which is just the way with them. It was disgust that was wanted and vexation and exasperation.

A bright moonlit night, with the pool looking alluring, I I have no doubt, in the still heat of the clearing, besides giving promise to tigers of delectable visions in the shape of bluebull and deer and wild-goat; but illusory all because of these understanding their affairs only too well, placing sentries at all points and scenting the enemy even with the wind in his favour and having an instinct with regard to the soft padding of his feet, however tender and cautious as he usually is against disturbing them. It was the sight of such fauna that kept me staring heavily a while until the novelty began to give way before the steady advance of my pet hour, and I was wildly feverish in mind for the coming of my quarry before it was too late. Sick with the longing and the misgiving I sat resolutely struggling against myself, when the shikari beside me nudged me into attention.

"The bagh" "Where?" "Somewhere," he whispered: the ghoral are hastily scattering." Then we waited nervous and intense but no bagh appeared, and I was sinking into torpor when he nudged afresh. "It is coming." I roused myself drowsily and looked forth listlessly, and by this time was far too gone to appreciate the contour and the shimmering beauty of the coat as the beast moved with lithe easy grace into the space wherein was set the water as a jewel under the moon. Having drunk and laid down to absorb the cool of the bank it suddenly looked towards me and at the same moment I was conscious of a sound under the tree. The shikari uttered a cry of alarm and stood up hastily, and then I heard a voice known to me only too well: "Mr. Vincent, are you there?" with a laugh. Was it the nightmare of fever, I began to enquire, accentuated; or was it really a man-eater advancing towards the voice? I had had my brain and heart tortures during the sick hours, but this transcended in horror, and I turned towards the shikari to ascertain the truth. He certainly seemed agitated and made a movement for my gun, saying in a hoarse voice "Sahib, awake! It is a mowakil. The bagh is at hand. Sit up."

Illusion or not I decided to fire and stay the beast as it approaches, and with a delirious cry I discharged both barrels almost hysterically, and I observed its slacken pace at the sound from an unexpected quarter, then resume its quick advance. It was now within half-a-dozen yards from the tree, and I cast a hasty glance below, and saw her leaning against the trunk, for she had observed the peril also. I arose with a wild shout and the shikari held me back. Shaking him off violently I flung the gun before the advancing beast and in the struggle against the restraining hand I fell from the height instead of leaping from it, and even then was conscious that the man was preparing to let down the ladder and descend, and I felt that his plan was to check the beast with clamour and numbers until we could descend. A true shikari is always ready deliberately to hazard his life if need be, and to take his share in accidents. Somehow the thought passed through my brain even when in a heap in the ground, badly and needlessly hurt, and before I could rise to bar the tiger's way towards the tree-trunk. In such circumstances every body works as seem good in his own eyes, and I had an idea that the shikari would do something should I fail to stop the advance. The beast might merely maul me from want of time for more, but must be checked at whatever cost. I arose with a cry of exultation on finding that he had not passed and I was right in his way.

Surprised for a moment he regarded me covetously, being quite content to take the substitute for his original prey, and as I stood with the recovered gun, raising it with both hands to strike forcibly on the muzzle, I heard simultaneously a scream and a shot, and the beast almost in the midst of a rush on me stumbled, rolled over and struck against my legs. I drew back and surveyed the body, almost distrusting all that had happened. But I turned round and saw she was there, and the shikari near by with my belt of cartridges looking away towards an advancing figure, which presently joined us.

"I always hold for a moon behind you, d'y'see" said Waters in his usual drawl, and throwing away the empty cartridge. I could see that with difficulty he suppressed a yawn. "It helps the 'sight,' y'see n'shines along the barrel, though other fellows prefer it right above. Mistake. What d're think, eh?"

It was just like him to discuss the merits of things with a tiger at his feet shot in most exciting circumstances. It seemed the beggar was accustomed to follow up tigers on foot, and upsetting conditions seemed rather to help his aim. Nothing seemed to surprise him, and he apparently had no nerves. "A devil of a fellow," I thought admiringly.

"Seems full-grown," he said, glancing at the body languidly. "Through the pegs, I see. Fine thing that moon." He almost suggested that the moon had shot it, and it was done every day, and it was all a bore.

It was only as an after-thought that he explained his presence. "Miss Hayward after you had overstayed your leave thought something had happened, and though I said, and her cousin said 'you were surely going in for many after tasting blood, she decided to look you up, and I agreed to come also; and, in fact, here I am." He was almost dropping off to sleep.

"But who is her cousin?"

"Oh, she? she, y' know, thinks well of the name and has said she will adopt it."

"What name?" I asked, puzzled.

"Waters." And then I let him doze off.

It seemed it was an old affair; and because he was languid in all he did, nobody suspected it.

I was relieved both for his sake and mine, and, in short, everything has ended well and we have "lived happily ever afterwards."

A MUSEUM OF THE HORSE.

A NOTICE appeared in a recent issue of the Field to the effect that an influential movement has recently been set on foot in France, having for its object the establishment of a Museum of the Horse, which is to comprise among its exhibits every relic, curiosity, historical writing or pictorial memoir connected with the animal from the earliest times down to the present day. With this end in view, a strong committee of leading French horse owners and breeders, Cavalry officers, Veterinary Surgeons, and indeed horse lovers generally has been formed, and they are already at work collecting exhibits and raising funds for the acquisition of a suitable building. It is a remarkable, though lamentable, fact that the initiation of this laudable scheme should have been left to our French neighbours, and while paying tribute to their enterprise, one can only regret that the proposal did not originate in our own country.

The horse for centuries has been identified with Great Britain far more than with any other land. Foreign breeders have ever, and do still, look to England for the replenishment of their studs with the best blood.

English horsemen have always led the way in every branch of the equestrian art, save only that of show—ring jumping, which is more or less a circus knack.

The British bred racehorse is admittedly far ahead of any rivals except those of France, and the best of the latter are almost invariably bred from recent British stock.

In every way the noble animal is our special perquisite, and any proposed institution for the preservation of his relics and traditions should undoubtedly have emanated from the British Isles.

Now, however, that the initiative has been taken out of our hands we can only regret that such is the case and set to work with a will to remedy the fact as far as possible by forming a Museum of our own, which, by reason of the enormous resources of long equine experience and traditions which we have at our command, should surely easily outstrip in point of completeness, interest and value, any rival institution of the kind.

There are hundreds of families in Great Britain to-day, whose ancestors, for many generations, have been continually engaged in horse management, horse ownership and equine pursuits in general. Numberless valuable pictures and relics of celebrated racehorses of the past exist; various interesting possessions of the great horsemen of history, such as John Peel, Beckford, Chifney, Buckle, Fred Archer and countless others abound; rare copies of ancient works on the horse are to be found, all of which, if kindly lent or presented by their present owners, would form an unequalled index to the history of the greatest animal benefactor of the human race. Funds for the acquisition and preparation of a suitable building could surely be raised by an appeal for subscriptions from the myriads of British horse lovers, even the humblest of whom would be glad to add his mite towards the attainment of an object so eminently desirable; while the contents of the Museum should be quickly forthcoming, since it is difficult to conceive anyone refusing to lend, who possesses an exhibit of interest.

India, too, could take her full share in supporting the Institution. This is the home of the great equine sport of pigsticking, while polo, also, has taken a firmer hold in this country than in any other—and both these sports would furnish much material worthy of inclusion in a Museum of the Horse.

Again, the immensely important part which has always fallen to the lot of the horse in war, has been productive of innumerable relics and curiosities of the greatest possible interest. Almost every Cavalry Regiment possesses some article reminiscent of a gallant deed performed by a bygone warhorse; or a lance, a saddle, or a trumpet, which, recalling a memory of some hard-fought day, in which the horse played a prominent part, would add greatly to the lustre and interest of the exhibition.

Surely a Horse Museum is not an unattainable ideal. The French are starting one, why should not we? Are we to be outdone by our neighbours in love for the animal and proficiency in his handling! Not so very long ago we held practically a monopoly of equestrian skill. The English horse and the English horseman were renowned, and their pre-eminence undisputed, throughout the world. But now the British horseman, though not yet equalled, is closely approached by his Italian and French rivals, while the French bred horse has already surpassed ours at steeplechasing, and there is little to choose between them "on the flat." At polo, of course, with the exception of India and America, foreigners cannot compare with us as yet, while of foxhunting and pigsticking they know practically nothing; but they are forging ahead, and it behoves us to look to our laurels.

This instance of a Horse Museum is a case in point. In these days of motors and aeroplanes, the horse is gradually being relegated to the background. This is fatal to the health and hardihood of the upper classes of the nation. It is nowadays by no means uncommon to see young men keeping motors—or worse, in preference to riding to hounds or playing polo. The institution of a Museum would renovate and stimulate the decaying love for the horse, and regather lost sheep into the fold. A movement for its inception is, therefore, urgently needed, and it behoves those of us who love the horse second only to our wives, parents or sisters, to urge and argue in its favour whenever opportunity may offer.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The announcement of the impending retirement of Mr. S. Griffiths one of the Official Handicappers to the C.T.C. has been received with regret. Mr. Griffiths has shown himself a very competent official, even though at times he has erred and has sometimes, as even the best dispenser may, conceived a too high opinion of various horses' capacities. However as one of the world's greatest strategists said, "Show me the man who has never made mistakes and I will show you the man who has never made war!" We regret to hear that the principal reason for Mr. Griffiths' retirement is that he finds India is too great a tax upon his health. Mr. Griffiths' retirement confronts the C.T.C. with the problem of finding a successor and various suggestions as to who is best fitted to fill his place have already been thrown out in our contemporaries. The name of a C.T.C. official who is now in India has been put forward, namely, Mr. Harvey Roulston, but if our information is correct Mr. Roulston is by no means anxious to take up this work. The other suggestion is that Mr. Fred. Lee, who was at one time one of the Committee of Handicappers to the Jockey Club, should be approached. The Jockey Club Handicapping Committee consisted of Mr. Lee, Mr. Dawkins, and Mr. Keyser. The system of combined handicaps was not found satisfactory and the Committee was abolished some time ago. Mr. Dawkins is now the only Official Handicapper to the Jockey Club, though Mr. Keyser, Mr. Lee, and others are handicappers holding licenses from the Jockey Club and are often employed by them. The official handicapper's duties are confined to Newmarket, Ascot, and Goodwood, though Mr. Dawkins is at liberty to and very often does, accept work outside. Mr. Lee, however, is not now tied down by any engagement and it is thought that it might be possible to obtain his services for the C.T.C. In our own opinion it would be better to obtain a handicapper from England for a very obvious reason, namely, that the majority of horses racing in India to-day are English. This was not the case a few years ago, but nowadays this is all changed and the bulk of the horses come out from home and an annually decreasing minority from Australia. It would therefore seem to be desirable that an official be appointed who has a personal and intimate knowledge of the English form and if a gentleman of the standing and experience of Mr. Lee could be obtained it would be a matter for much congratulation. Mr. A. Keyser is not a young man and it is said that he would probably be unwilling to undertake work in India. So far as the question of health in India goes it is, of course, a matter that influences a good many people in their acceptance of offers of employment in this country. Mr. Rowland Leigh, who was with us for one season, found that India did not suit him and retired at once: Mr. S. Griffiths, after a somewhat longer period of work, has found the same thing; but there is no particular reason why the experiences of these two gentlemen should be repeated. The work may be said to extend from July to March each year and in the intervening months the officials of the C.T.C. invariably go away on holiday out of India so that the work cannot be said to be unduly onerous.

The Zemindar of Sivagiri, who purchased Sperry from Tom Scott not long ago, intends to start the horse in Bombay if the handicapper is in any wise kind; but otherwise he will go to Bangalore with the rest of Ramshaw's lot and be put by for the rest of the year till next cold weather. There ought to be a useful race in this horse after Ramshaw has done a little of his well-known "architecture" with him, and put a bit of useful stuff on to him. At present Sperry is nothing like what he is capable of being made and we think it was somewhat of a pity to run him as often as his late owner did during the past cold season. He has been out seven times in all and has only managed to win once. His success was the 5-furlong Criterion Plate at the First Extra in which race he had 8st. 7lb. and beat Eustace 9st. 10lb. and Black Douglas 9st. 10lb. Eustace was deprived of second place for bumping and boring. Sperry is by Ayr Laddie out of The Maine. Ayr Laddie (wrongly described in the C.T.C. list of pedigrees as "Air" Laddie) is by Ayrshire out of Catherine Douglas and The Maine is Bobadil, who is by Bill of Portland out of She. Bill of Portland is by St. Simon out of Electric Light, who was by Sterling out of Beachy Head. Ayrshire gives this horse Hampton and Galopin, as he is by the former and Atalanta, Ayrshire's dam, was by Galopin out of Feronia, who was by Thormanby out of Woodbine by Stockwell out of Honeysuckle by Touchstone out of Beeswing. If therefore there is anything at all in blue blood Sperry ought to be worth thinking about next season when they get him right.

A correspondent who assails a weekly contemporary with notes of a somewhat vacuous description has evidently quite misunderstood some suggestions that have been put forward in our contemporary the Statesman and in this paper with reference to a top-weight limit in first-class handicaps, or in handicaps other than high-weight and welter handicaps. In a futile endeavour to criticise some notes in the Pioneer evidently based upon what has appeared in the Calcutta papers mentioned, this correspondent puts his foot in it somewhat. He writes:—

"Here is another instance of flagrant inconsistency. The writer who sends the Calcutta racing notes to the Pioneer in his contributions in last Monday's issue of that paper remarks that 10st. 7lb. is not a racing weight. If any of the readers of the Asian will turn up the racing records of the period when Mr. Boteler was handicapper they will see that this official frequently headed his handicaps—not in Welter weights races—with 11st. 7lb. and 11st. 12lb. with the lowest weights ranging from 6st. 12lb. to 6st. 9lb.—and very often those top weights won."

Mr. Boteler, who happens to be in Calcutta, and has a particularly vivid memory, did not do as this paragraph states. In welter and high-weight handicaps there is no maximum limit. The suggestion made by the Calcutta papers was that the top-weight limit in handicaps, other than high-weight and welter handicaps, should be in the region of 9st. 7lb. or 9st. 12lb. The result of this would be that an owner entering a moderate horse in a first-class handicap would know that the maximum concession he could expect from the top-weight would be either 3st. 7lb. or 8st. 12lb., the minimum limit being 6st. We fancy this "inconsistency" (sic) was fairly understandable by everyone, excepting perhaps this correspondent!!

The entries for the Calcutta Fifth Extra Meeting on the 10th February are well up to the average of these meetings and there seem to be enough horses left behind in Calcutta to make the Extras during the present month and the earlier part of March as successful as they usually are. There are only seven in the Magdala Plate, a hurdle race over the R. C. and a distance and we may not get many runners, as the presence of horses like Five Crown and Sequent in the race may frighten away some of the smaller fry; but in the other races there is no reason why we should not see fairly good musters. There are nine in the 1½ mile Imperial Plate, a similar number in the 6-furlong February Plate, eleven in the 5-furlong Cone Plate for 14-2 ponies, fifteen in the 1 mile New Course Plate, and nineteen in the 6-furlong Outram Plate. The weights will not, we understand, be out until to-day week.

The racing in Calcutta last Saturday at the Fourth Extra Meeting was not any better than it was expected that it would be, and with so many people already on the wing to other centres it was hardly to be expected that fields would be big. The prospects of the extra meetings in Calcutta if judged by Saturday did not appear to be particularly good, but things are somewhat better than they look, as after Lucknow some of those who have gone up to that meeting are not going on to Bombay and will find it worth their while to come back here. The Extra Meeting just before Lucknow usually is poorly supported. There were only six races in the card and fields were small throughout, the largest field to go for any event being eleven, this being the number of the starters in the five-furlong Ganges Plate. The attendance was also somewhat meagre, but Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Hardinge graced the occasion with their presence and were received by the Stewards of the C.T.C. who were all present, excepting Mr. Dudley Myers, who was the only absentee and we regret to hear that the cause of his absence is an attack of enteric fever, fortunately a mild one.

After the racing on Saturday a number of people, owners and professionals went away to Lucknow and Bombay. Amongst those who have gone up to the northern meeting are Colonel Beaver, Mr. E. H. Marshall, Mr. Lamb, Mr. Griffiths, Mr. Craig McKerrow, Mr. Evers, Captain Charrington, Captain Kennard, and amongst the professionals Barrett, Whalley, Murdison, Jellies, Firth, Northmore, Randall, J. Davis, Robinson, Hayhoe, Frank Wootton, Bowley, Clements, Williamson, Pegrem, and several more. Ramshaw left for Bombay after Saturday's racing and is not going to Lucknow, as he has nothing to take him there, Hayhoe being in charge of whatever may run from that stable. Mr. Galstaun is not going up to Lucknow this year, but we understand he may go on to Bombay. He has Brogue and others engaged in important races and will go over and see them run.

At the Fourth Extra racing did not commence until 3 o'clock, the lengthening evenings permitting of a later commencement. The first race in the card was the Ochterlony Plate one and a half mile and only five were stripped for it. There was first of all a good deal of money for Wise Hawk, but he was quickly displaced in the betting by Wayward and Wild and last of all Herald came up and started second favourite to Mr. Thaddeus' mare. Wootton had the ride on Wayward and Wild and very nearly got there, as it was a very close thing between the favourite and Herald, the latter winning by a short neck, which, presumably, we may take to be what is usually called a head. Murdison has had a long run of losers and we were therefore glad to see him secure a winning bracket and change the bad luck. The stewards had Thoburn up and asked him for an explanation of his riding of Light Metal, which they did not appear to consider as satisfactory, but the jockey's explanation was, we understand, more than satisfactory and personally we consider that calling the matter in question was rather unnecessary, as this mare is no particular class and is notably a very slow beginner. She carried four pounds over her handicap weight, but even at the minimum limit we should not have given her any chance. Her actual handicap weight was 6st. 12lb.

For the Turf Club Plate, which came next, there were eight runners, all the overnight acceptors being declared to start. Frank Wootton had the ride on Winnie R., who, when last she was out in the one mile Belvedere Pony Plate, ran very badly and was never dangerous. She was then getting 2lb. from Ruling Passion and on Saturday over a furlong less she was in at level weights. The public, however, follow Wootton and were not very far amiss as they saved their place money, although Winnie R. was never dangerous after the home turn, and Ruling Passion, who was second favourite at 5 to 2, had not much difficulty in defeating Sidonia, who also beat Winnie R. This form, although it connotes a certain amount of improvement on the part of Winnie R., bears out the Belvedere Pony Plate form fairly correctly. The time, 1min. 30secs., was by no means bad for the class.

A very poor field of five only went out for the Second Selling Handicap and when the betting opened Hackler's Bloom was the best favourite and at one time touched 6 to 4. Speedometer was also backed and was accorded a full measure of the owner's support, this horse and Hackler's Bloom finishing up at the top of the betting, Bonny Boy, who was Wootton's ride, being only a point longer. Fadgie was backed at sixes and 6 to 4 a place, but the other three carried the bulk of the money. When the gate went up Speedometer stuck his toes in the ground and refused to budge in spite of the ministrations of the starter's assistant with a hunting-crop and Downland also was left at the gate, the pair of them taking practically no part in the contest. Fadgie jumped out in front, and leading the whole way won somewhat comfortably by half a length from Bonny Boy, who was giving her 2st. 9lb. The weight anchored Bonny Boy very successfully. On being put up for sale after the race Fadgie fell to the bid of Dr. Spooner Hart at Rs. 950 which was Rs. 200 over the upset price, the fund benefiting to the extent of half this amount and the owner of the second horse to the same amount. Dr. Hart intends sending Fadgie home to England to the stud that he is starting in Norfolk at a place not far from Sandringham. He has already sent home Mr. deSoysa's Footprint, and he has collected about fifteen or twenty brood mares. Fadgie is by Symington out of Cynane (by Cyllene) and is a very nicely bred thing, but is somewhat small. However it very often happens that small mares produce very good foals. Dr. Hart has also got a stud farm on the borders of New South Wales and Victoria in the Colonies and has always done fairly well at the Sydney sales with his yearlings. He is now starting a similar establishment in England and we hope he will have every success with his venture.

The Ganges Plate came next and they practically backed only three of them: Convent Girl, who was made favourite, Skehanagh, who was backed on the strength of a gallop, and Rapin. Lah was supported to a certain extent for a place and also straight out, and in the race this horse made a great offer to win, as he ran the favourite to a head and the time, 1min. 2½secs., was decidedly useful. Lah ought to be a very good sort of horse for flat races in the monsoons and this performance makes him out very fairly good second class even allowing that he had not a desperately hot lot against him. Skehanagh ran very green and was slow in getting out of the gate and Rapin does not seem to be able to find his way home at the moment as he never looked like winning. He is well enough bred to win the Derby, but he seems to be a very unfortunate horse.

For the next race, the Kelleston Plate, six of the nine acceptors were declared to start and there was practically nothing backed excepting Hackler's Girl. Cherry Hackle had a few friends at fours and Pressy at 9 to 2, but the favourite was backed down to 5 to 4 on to win and there were plenty of people ready to lay 3 to 1 on her for a place. She was very prominent the whole way through the race and won without much difficulty from Cherry Hackle and Foudrette. Everyone was glad to see Mr. Holmes break his long run of bad luck and we hope that this is but the prelude to further success. For the last race, the 1½ mile Minto Plate, five were declared, Sir Apear Apear striking out Koonowla and only starting Sequent. There were only two backed and Sequent had a slight call of the market at the finish, Jemima being the other one. There was a very close finish and weight told its tale, as Jemima failed to concede the winner the 15lb. that she was asked to do. Sequent has proved himself a very useful horse indeed this season, as he has now been out five times and has won three. There is only one horse at the meeting with a better record and that is Tangaroa, who has won five races out of seven starts. Details appear elsewhere.

Our Lucknow correspondent wires:—"It appears that Son of a Gun, while being led from the Lucknow station, was frightened by a band striking up and bolted. He ran into a ravine fifteen feet deep and was badly cut about the head and back and his hip was injured. It is not yet known whether he will start for the Civil Service Cup Race.

The last English Mail brings us news of the death at Captain Greer's Brownstown stud, Curragh, of the famous sire Gallinule. The son of Isonomy-Moorhen had one of the most brilliant stud careers in the annals of the turf. In nineteen seasons Gallinule's stock won nearly 500 races, worth upwards of £280,000, and sired the brilliant classic winners, Pretty Polly, Slieve Gallion, and Wildfowler.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—The Seventh Extra and the last we shall have for a fortnight in order to give the Lucknow Meeting a chance, came off on Saturday before the usual very fair crowd. Punters were never far off the mark, but betting was very good and several backed in each race. Fields were good and the racing exciting in most cases, added to which two winners were not paid out on till enquiries had been made into objections. Brown again rode a couple of winners, whereas both divisions of the race for newly imported ones were won by a native rider, Kamad, who has not figured first past the post for a considerable time.

We opened with the first part of the New Maiden Plate, the only one of a field of fourteen to have shown form being Bustan. One out for the first time in Thulfha found good support and money also came for Hazoor. Angel gave a deal of trouble both in the paddock and on the course, was first to get away with Bustan, but then gradually fell off. The race needs no description, Authority and Golden Ducat giving way to Thulfha and Lord Durham, who in turn had no chance with Bustan in a finish which saw long gaps between the first few.

Turning to the other division, there were ten runners and a hot run on Hercules, who wound up equal favourite with Yungi Dunya with Khalid Beg next. Hercules never gave any sort of encouragement, Khalid Beg leading out to give way to Yungi Dunya and Ya Nasib. Here again the leader, once in front, never left the issue in doubt and won pulling up by ten lengths, Khalid Beg gives promise for the future by coming again in the straight and finishing second.

There were the two usual big horse races, the sprint being a Selling Plate, seven starting and 5 to 2 being on offer the field with Yvette the shortest from Huka, T. M. S. and Ruby Tin. On the outside, Mandeville showed out for a time, then Pantry Girl and T. M. S. passed him, the former just to the good on the rails and Yvette coming close up outside them. As they reached the quarter mile Yvette began to drop back, Huka taking her place and T. M. S. running level with the leader. Once in the straight, T. M. S. took a decided lead and as Huka was being ridden the former eventually still had a run in her. It was alleged that T. M. S. had interfered with Pantry Girl by closing her on to the rails and thus losing her place money, but this was over-ruled.

Another very open affair was the long Arab race, Regent starting favourite at threes, Parliament, Sir Hugo, Guinea Gold, Money Gold and Well Done all between that price and sixes. A very unfortunate accident occurred in this race, as after passing the seven-furlong post Money Gold came down and on Yussuff being brought in he was found to have had his thigh bone fractured. Ghalyum led Parliament and Baloz to the half mile, where Baloz had a slight lead of Sir Hugo for a furlong. Sir Hugo then lead from Well Done, Baloz and Merrily and looked all over a winner. There was a most exciting race, and Well Done fighting on gamely just got his head in front on the post. Merrily beat Baloz for third place, but was disqualified owing to over-weight.

Next the seven furlongs for all horses, Forfeit being made favourite at 6 to 4 and remaining as such, from Elser, Bright Metal and at a point longer Aqueduct, Gallilee and Coat of Arms with The Cellarer as outsider. From the jump Elser and Aqueduct showed out, but the former then giving way to others the latter led Forfeit, The Cellarer and Coat of Arms. Near the half mile Forfeit considerably decreased the gap, but Aqueduct had him and as they neared the turn Elser was up to him on the outside of Coat of Arms. The last named made no apparent effort to run out but was done, and well as Elser came he could not fully extend Aqueduct. An objection was lodged against the winner for crossing at the start, but here again it was overruled.

To conclude, we had the two divisions of the seven-furlong Dadur Plate with fields of seven and eight respectively. In the first there was a struggle for favouritism all through between Mudkoor and Young Thara, who both wound up at twos, Lama and Prime Minister next. Fair Play made all the pace from Young Thara to the quarter mile, where the latter led Lama. As they entered the straight Lama was seen to have the other's measure, but then Mudkoor came with a run and, going on, won a good race. Prime Minister finished third after being some way out of it.

In the next there was a more solid favourite in Sweden with Saree and Sir Edward next. This was a great race, Sinclair and Shihab leading Sir Edward to the turn. Here Sir Edward passed them and Fado got through on the rails with Saree outside. The finish was desperate and there can be no doubt Saree would have won but for running out wide, as it was Sir Edward held on gamely from Fado with only a head separating each of the first four, Saree just pipping Sinclair for a place.

The conclusion of the Open Hockey Tournament in the Stadium of the old Bombay Exhibition this week was much as most people expected it to be. Having won the Aga Khan Cup for two years and including in the team almost identically the same players, the Cheshires were hotly fancied from the start. Training and combination meant everything to them and though we saw them extended on occasion, the manner of their success may be gauged from the fact that their goal remained unpenetrated throughout. How determined were the defending lines is evident when in every game they played their opponents were unable to take any advantage of openings and thus got labelled as poor in the circle.

Our most likely civilian team was the B.V.R.A., who had as much of the game with the winners, but were hustled off the ball on the many occasions on which they offered danger. It was a good and fast game, but, as in other ones, the thoroughness of the military attack was bound to tell.

In the Hussars they had a less scientific combination to face, but these in all their matches played with such "go" from start to finish that they made a close enough thing of it to infuse excitement and interest. For more than half of the first period they quite held their own, but then the Cheshires were not to be put off and scored twice. This they followed with another after the interval and thus placed the issue beyond doubt. A comparison of methods showed the forwards of one side always in position for centres and their halves excelling at their parts of middlemen, participating in attack and defence. The losers have not got themselves to such a pitch of mutual understanding and did well to make such a game bid. They had a hard time of it and only beat the Warwicks after one of the hottest games of the series following a tie of one all, in which the subsequent losers appeared to have perhaps a shade the better of it.

I feel as though these remarks would not be complete without a reference to our local sporting enthusiasts. At each game the audience was composed of a mere handful, and thus deprived the whole affair of its air of importance. The reason may be that local teams were not quite trained up to the mark and that we have the annual Aga Khan Tourney to look forward to. Anyway, it is a pity the public have not supported Stadium events better and it seems the old cry still stands good that sporting enterprise is not worth the trouble of organisers.

The second Championship Dog Show will be held by the Western India Kennel Club on 22nd February in conjunction with the Horse Show in Bombay. Several entries have already been received from up-country and Calcutta and a most successful show is expected. As far as present arrangements go, the following judges will come outside the local ones:—Lieutenant-Colonel H. Smith, Lieutenant-Colonel Impey and Lieutenant-Colonel Willan Dawson.

A return match between Sam Langford and Sam McVea had been arranged by Mr. McIntosh to take place in Sydney on Anniversary Day, the 26th January. Neither McVea nor Langford made demur when the proposal was put to him, each acquiescing readily.

McVea's hand was found to be not as bad as he thought at the time, or as other people understood. Mr. McIntosh says Dr. Perry, Medical Superintendent of the Sydney Hospital, examined the weapon, and found the arm a bit muscle-bound near the shoulder—nothing more. Some judicious and properly applied massaging removed the trouble and placed everything as right as ever, consequently "big Sam" was completely himself, but Billy McClain, McVea's manager, has announced that the match could not take place, as McVea's arm would not be right for some time. Mr. McIntosh ridicules this, and points to medical testimony as evidence that McVea was suffering from nothing more serious than a muscle-bound shoulder on the right side, an inconvenience he has had for some time. Mr. McIntosh says both Tommy Burns' shoulders were so affected when he entered the ring against Johnson.

Jack Johnson has agreed to meet Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman in a contest to a finish, to take place somewhere in Nevada in July next—the 22nd of that month most probably. Johnson is to get $31,000 plus one-third of the cinematograph receipts. The two men have agreed not to take part in any other match between 1st May and the date of the contest in question. The match arranged between Johnson and McVea to be held in Paris on Grand Prix night, 24th June, will therefore have to be postponed. Jim Flynn was a railway fireman before he seriously took up boxing. He cannot compare with his opponent in the matter of height, weight, and reach, but he is very strong, very game, and by no means a new man, for in 1904 he beat George Gardner in ten rounds at Denver; eighteen months later he knocked out the clever Jack Twin Sullivan in the fifteenth round at Pueblo, Colorado, but a few months afterwards was in turn knocked out by Tommy Burns in the fifteenth. Then Flynn again beat Jack Sullivan and George Gardiner, and also knocked out Dave Barry.

Then came his meeting with Jack Johnson at San Francisco, which ended in the eleventh round in favour of the coloured man.

Flynn was not discouraged, and meeting Bill Squires about six weeks afterwards, beat him in the sixth round. He afterwards beat Battling Jim Johnson (twice), and took part in the several other contests, being stopped in the first round by Sam Langford.

Later he boxed no decisions with Billy Papke (twice), Jack O'Brien, Jack Burns, etc., and early in 1910 every newspaper gave him the honours of a no decision contest with Langford at Los Angeles, but when the pair met again a month later Sam won in the eighth round.

Al Palzer knocked out Al Kaufman in the fifth round of their battle at the National Sporting Club of America, New York, on the 28th December. Palzer is Tom O'Rourke's "White Hope" and the loser the Californian heavy weight who until his defeat by Jim Flynn a few months ago was regarded as a likely opponent for Johnson. Early in his career—that is six years ago—Kaufman promised remarkably well. Five successive opponents went down before the power and the direction of his mighty right like so many ninepins, each in a single round. That was a remarkable professional début. Then Jack O'Brien knocked him out in the seventeenth round of a battle, and thus put an effective stop to the sequence of single round successes. Kaufman has done nothing at all electrifying since, if his knocking out of Jim Flynn a little over three years back be excepted.

Palzer impressed New Yorkers a great deal on 26th October last, when, at his manager's hall he outclassed, in every department, one "Soldier" Delaney, and clinched his demonstration of marked superiority by putting Uncle Sam's bold warrior down for the count in the third round. Palzer was never in danger. Of course, Delaney had not set the world afire, neither had Palzer, but there were people who thought a good deal of the former.

A match between Jim Flynn and the new one should now be well in order while negociations began immediately after his fight with Kaufman to match Palzer with Carl Morris and both men seemed eager for a meeting at an early date.

Gunner Moir is doing his utmost to get Bombardier Wells into the ring with him before Wells leaves for America. But somehow the English heavy-weight Champion doesn't seem inclined to take the chance of avenging the only defeat he has ever suffered. Well's first opponent in the States, we hear, is to be Carl Morris, the Oklahoma giant, who weighs about 17 stone and is famed for the possession of Herculean strength. The Bombardier is here up against a stiff proposition: his managers should have arranged to have him introduced to American methods before he is sent against a man who will be sure to employ them in the most deadly fashion. Wells, would of course, be called upon to meet Carl Morris and Al Palzer in any event, supposing he has any intentions whatsoever of making a profitable trip across the Atlantic, but with so many more or less exploded but still aspiring "White Hopes" knocking around it should not be difficult for Wells to map out a programme with a few less ambitious preliminaries.

At the coming Highland Brigade gathering at Lucknow there will be a half mile race open to the British Army (Highland Brigade barred) to be run on the 13th February and a one mile race open to the Native Army to be run on the 12th instant.

The entries for the Laver Hockey Challenge Cup Tournament at Secunderabad close to-day. A photograph of the Cup has been sent us by Messrs. Barton, Son and Co. of Bangalore, the manufacturers, and to judge by this the trophy is yet another example of the splendid workmanship turned out by the firm. The Cup which was won outright last year has been replaced by the present Cup, which is valued at Rs. 1,000. The competition is one of the best in India and draws a large number of military teams from different parts of India.

The Australian cricketers, Trumper, Cotter, Armstrong and Carter, have written to the Board of Control declining to go to England to play in the triangular matches, except under a manager approved by the team. The chairman of the Board says that the team will go to England, even if all now playing in the Test Matches decline to go.

The M. C. C. team went to Tasmania at the beginning of last week, and at Launceston on the 23rd, 24th and 25th January played a match against a team representing the North of the Island. North Tasmania batted first and made 217 to which the M. C. C. replied with 332. Northern Tasmania completed their second innings for 165. The M. C. C. scored 56 runs for two wickets and thus won by 8 wickets.

This is not a world's record, writes "On Looker" of the Ceylon Sportsman, though it is easily the best thing ever done in this line in Ceylon. On the 12th February 1910, L. Hawkins playing for Millfield vs. Aberdare in New South Wales hit six 6's in an over. This is the world's record. At Howe Park (New South Wales) on the 9th November 1910, W. Cameron hit seventeen 6's off 19 consecutive balls bowled to him by Howard. He hit six 6's in an over. This record, however, has been rejected by Cricket, as the laws of the game were not recognised during its accomplishment.

On the 31st December 1910, Cameron referred to above, hit five 6's making 30 in all, in an over of six balls. Last year L. Walsh of Burwood hit five 6's and a 4, or 34 in all, in an over. In first-class cricket last season Alletson, the Notts professional, scored 34 in an over that included two no-balls. A. E. Lawton, the Derbyshire cricketer, scored 30, 22 and 34 in consecutive overs in a Club match last year: 86 runs in three overs is a record for any kind of cricket.

THE Kadir Cup Meeting for 1912 will commence on Monday, the 18th March.

THE Oxford and Cambridge University Boat Race has been definitely fixed for Saturday, 30th March, at about half-past eleven o'clock.

THE Lahore Trades Football Tournament begins on Monday, the 26th instant, entries closing on Saturday, the 17th idem.

THE Madras Gymkhana Horse Show fixed to be held on the Island on the 20th, 22nd, and 24th February, has been postponed until the 29th February and 1st and 2nd March: entries close on the 24th instant.

THE Sialkot Polo Tournament ended on the 23rd ultimo in a win for the 17th Lancers "A" team who beat "B" team of the same regiment in the final by 4 goals to 2.

THE All-India Hockey Tournament at Allahabad was concluded on Monday, the 29th January. The final brought together the holders, the North-Western Railway Volunteers, and the 4th Worcester Regiment. They met on Saturday last when the game ended in a draw 4 all, and on Monday another hard struggle was witnessed, this time the North-Western Railway being victorious by a goal to nil and thus securing the Cup for the second year in succession.

THE semi-finals of the Cavalry School Polo tournament were played at Saugor on the 19th instant before a large gathering, and two exciting games were witnessed. The first match was between the Staff and the Assistant Instructors and ended in a win for the latter by 3 goals to 1 after a great struggle. Baddeley and Agnew were most conspicuous for the winners and Reynolds and Grimshaw worked very hard for the Staff. Teams—Staff (Captains Mosley, A. V. C., 1; Grimshaw, 34th Poona Horse, 2; Reynolds, 21st Lancers, 3; and Howell, 18th Lancers, back) and Assistant Instructors (Mr. H. C. Agnew, R. E., 1; Captain Baddeley, 15th Lancers, 2; Captain Moir, 10th Lancers, 3; Mr. Harene, 4th Cavalry, back).

In the second match B. Ride met C. Ride. This was a very fast and exciting game, B. Ride winning by 3 goals to 1. There was little to choose between the teams and C. Ride had hard luck in not scoring on more than one occasion. Fleming was seen to the greatest advantage. Teams—B. Ride (Messrs. Paterson, 19th Lancers, 1; Hudson, 8th Cavalry, 2; Vigors, 9th H. H., 3; and Macdonald, 11th Lancers, back) C. Ride (Messrs. Johnson, 26th Light Cavalry, 1; Fleming, K. D. G.'s, 2; Duberly, 17th Cavalry, 3; and Stewart, 10th Hussars, back).

THE Tournament was brought to a conclusion on the 22nd January, when the "B" ride team (Messrs. Paterson, 19th Lancers, 1; Hudson, 8th Cavalry, 2; Vigors, 9th Hodson's Horse, 3; and Macdonald, 11th Lancers, back) beat the Assistant Instructors (Mr. H. Agnew, R.E., 1; Captain Baddeley, 15th Lancers, 2; Captain Moir, 10th Lancers, 3; and Captain Harene, 4th Cavalry, back) in the final by 4 goals to nil.

The winners were considerably stronger in every department, in ponies, accuracy and combination. Vigors was particularly conspicuous throughout, but all played at the top of their form. The losers did not show up nearly so well as in previous matches, probably on account of inferiority of ponies. Baddely and Agnew did an enormous amount of work on their behalf. After the match the cup was presented to the winners by Mrs. Wapshare.

THE Cavalry School held their annual Point-to-Point Race meeting 2½ miles out of Saugor on the 24th ultimo. The course was about 3½ miles in length and a couple of stone walls and many bush fences had to be negociated. The arrangements were excellent, there was a large attendance of spectators, and the Cavalry School were "At Home." The feature of the afternoon's sport was the fine riding of Mr. Fleming of the K. D. G.'s who steered three winners. The opening event was for native officers and of the five starters only two finished, Jem. Het Ram (2nd Lancers) winning easily from Jem. Rawat Singh (Poona Horse). Then came the Pony Light Weight Race. Six started and Vulcan and Lilly made the running till nearing home when Drover came through and beat Landslip in a hot finish by half a length. Diavolo third two lengths away. Time—7mins. 40secs. The official order was:—Mr. H. Fleming's Drover (Owner), 1; Captain Baddeley's Landslip, 2; Captain Reynolds' Diavolo, 3. Also ran: Captain Grimshaw's Goldshell, Mr. Johnston's Lilly and Mr. Adlercron's Vulcan.

The Horse Heavy Weight Race brought out four starters and was won comfortably by Mr. Oswald's James from Major Hambro's Minting, Mr. Stewart's Squire third and Mr. Wise's Substitute next. Nineteen started in the race for British N.-C. O.'s which was won by R. S. M. Vaughan, Cavalry School Staff, who finished a length and a half in front of Sergeant Dubson, 7th Dragoon Guards, with Sergeant-Major Hill, Inniskilling Dragoons, three lengths behind.

The next event was the big race of the meeting—the Neveravon Cup, for light weight horses. Fifteen started and they ran in a bunch to the water where Count Hannibal, Pedro, Lily Bart and Simson all came down. The last named was remounted and came away to win easily from Lily Bart. The official placings were:—Mr. H. Fleming's Simson (Owner), 1; Captain Jackson's Lily Bart (Mr. Platt), 2; Mr. Willoughby's Alphonse (Owner), 3. Also ran: Sir N. Leslie's Ek Sow; Mr. Money's Kitty; Mr. H. Johnson's Count Hannibal; Mr. Macgregor's Busby; Mr. Cave Browne's Belinda; Mr. Owen Jones' Merwyn; Mr. Walker's Monte; Mr. Metcalfe's Paddy; Mr. Hudson's Rascal; Mr. Mason's Elsinore; Mr. Gibson's Pedro; and Mr. Benton's Ewe Lamb.

Six turned out for the Pony Heavy Weight Race but Mr. Fleming on Calm led from end to end and won by a quarter of a mile from Mr. Duberly's Osprey: Mr. Macdonald's Indecision third two lengths away. Also ran: Mr. Agnew's Slug and Mr. O'Rooke's Meteor. The Strangers' Race brought the afternoon to a close and was a disappointing show. Many mistakes were made as to the right course and eventually Colonel Johnston's Mehtab came in first but he was found to have missed a fence and so the verdict went to the second horse Major Knowles' Up Start, with Captain Berkely Hill's Janiki second. Mrs. Wapshare gave away the prizes.

LAST Thursday being a bank holiday the seventh of the weekly Calcutta paperchases was held on that day instead of on the Friday. There was a very fair field and amongst those out were the following:—Mrs. Wanklyn on Grey Harold, Miss Binning on Eileen, Captain Nicholson on Durbar, Mr. Thomas on Farthing Bun, Mr. Tegart on Biddy, Mr. Jas. Hutchison on Steel Arrow, Captain Brancker on Enthusiast, Mr. Halliday on Diamond, Mr. Mackay on Gipsy, Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6, Mr. McLean on Minnie, Mr. Winckworth on Kim, Mr. Murray on Desmond, Mr. Chancellor on H. E., Mr. T. Marshall on Loyalty, Mr. Deakin on Scarboro, Mr. Perkins on a bay, Mr. Knox on List, Mr. Savage on a bay, Mr. Tanner on a brown, Mr. Wheeler on Sauce, Mr. Taylor on Dervish, Mr. Stephen on a brown, Mr. Heath on Actress, Mr. Sayers on a chestnut, Captain Barge on a bay, Dr. Taylor on a bay, Mr. Egerton on a chestnut, and a few others.

The course was a long one of nearly six miles, starting to the right of the Gurreah Hat Road not far from the Jodhpore Thana, and was a sporting line, sixteen made jumps having to be negociated before the finish. There were few accidents; Messrs. Stephen, Savage and Marshall got falls, the two latter escaping unhurt but Mr. Stephen was badly knocked about. He damaged his mouth rather severely and it was feared at one time that he had dislocated his jaw but beyond having a few teeth knocked out there is nothing serious and he is making a speedy recovery. In the horse chase Mr. Riviere got away with the lead Messrs. Mackay, Halliday, Winckworth, Tegart, Murray and Captain Nicholson all close up. There was little change till the Ladies' wall where Messrs. Murray and Winckworth were in command with Captain Nicholson, Messrs. Mackay, Tegart, Riviere and Halliday next. Mr. Halliday went up to the front after crossing the road for the third time but ran off the paper soon after. He quickly rectified his mistake and was in front at the last hurdle, then Mr. Tegart and Captain Nicholson passed him, the

The 9th Division Indian Army Hockey Tournament is this year being played at Secunderabad. The Bangalore Regiments entering are the 81st Pioneers and the 20th Deccan Horse, and these two teams played off the tie on the Cameron Ground on the 23rd ultimo. Each side had scored one goal up to the call of time, but playing extra time the 81st Pioneers put in a goal and won by 2 goals to 1. The Pioneers go to Secunderabad to continue the tournament.

The Bangalore Hockey Tournament will commence on the 1st March.

A novel method of hunting lions in British East Africa has been adopted by Mr. Rainey, an American millionaire, who recently returned to Nairobi after a six months' trip in the interior. Mr. H. Hill, one of the guides attached to the party, who also accompanied Mr. Roosevelt, touched at Lorenzo Marques the other day, en route for Durban, and described various hunts in which he had taken part with Mr. Rainey's safari. Mr. Rainey went to Africa to hunt lions, but not to shoot them. He collected a pack of large dogs, resembling mastiffs, and obtained the permission of the Governor to hunt lions in the Reserve. The game warden met the party at Ulu and accompanied them through the sanctuary. At Ulu it was hoped to get into touch with the lions, but the game had trekked on on account of the burning grass, and after the game went the lions. After a week's stay at Ulu the party moved along the line to Kapiti, where they met the most extraordinary luck. In one day alone they bagged as many as 26 lions. A big pack was put up suddenly, and, the dogs being loosed, the whole party went for the lions, dividing the batch into lot, each lot being ridden down. Mr. Hill describes the chase as most thrilling. The dogs had not the slightest fear of the lions, and, once they came up with one, it succumbed in a few minutes to their vicious, tearing bites.

The Calcutta Kennel Club Sixth Championship Dog Show will be held on the maidan on Friday and Saturday, the 2nd and 3rd instant, judging commencing at 9-30 A.M. on Friday and the prizes being given away by H. E. Lady Hardinge at 4-30 P.M. on Saturday. Colonel L. Impey and Mr. J. Miles, two of the best judges of dogs in India, will judge, and the show promises to be of unusual interest, a great number of valuable dogs having been imported since the last show, and many good dogs having also been bred in India. The entries total over a thousand. Besides the class prizes there will be over 30 special prizes, including a cup from Lady Hardinge for the best dog in the show, a cup from the Lieutenant-Governor and also two challenge cups, the Apcar Cup offered for the best dog bred by an exhibitor in India, and a £25 cup presented to the Club by Messrs. Cooke and Kelvey, which, it is understood, will be offered for the best dog in sporting breeds born in India.

Arrangements for tiffin and tea are in the capable hands of Messrs. Kellner and Co. and the grounds are being lighted throughout by the General Electric Co. (India) with Osram lamps. Exhibitors are requested to note that their show numbers, metal discs, etc., can be obtained at the office on the show ground, on Thursday between 10 A.M. and 6-30 P.M.

The annual meeting of the Bengal Hockey Association was held on Tuesday evening at the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Chowringhee.

The following office-bearers were elected for the ensuing season :—President—Mr. T. H. Richardson ; Vice-Presidents—Mr. E. Studd and the Rev. E. H. Whitley ; Council (Class A)—The Rev. Father Power, Mr. R. N. Bocquet, Mr. E. Studd, Mr. H. M. Sherman, Mr. T. C. J. Davies, Mr. M. Carvar, Mr. E. Thomas and Mr. A. Macready ; (Class B)—Mr. C. C. Lamb (Black Watch) ; (Class C)—Mr. C. C. Loman and Mr. M. S. A. Ahmed, Presidency College ; Honorary Secretary—Mr. N. R. Bhattacharjee ; Honorary Treasurer—Mr. A. B. Rosser.

Mr. E. Studd proposed that the following be inserted in Rule 29 of the Association before the words "And no suspended player" :—"Every affiliated Association or Club shall be held responsible for the action of all its players, officials, and members, and in the event of any member being found guilty of misconduct the Council shall have power to deal with the Club or Association in such manner as they think fit."

The proposal was adopted.

The Secretary's report showed that hockey is becoming more and more popular year after year in Calcutta as was evident last season from the large attendance in all the important fixtures in the League and the Beighton Cup competitions. The League tournaments had been a substantial factor in this improvement. There were four cases of misconduct reported to the Council. Two were let off with a warning ; one resulted in a temporary suspension of a week, after which the player was warned and let off ; one player was suspended for a year for gross misconduct while on the field of play. Four affiliated Clubs—the Sporting Union, City Athletic Club, Town Club, and Mohan Bagan A. C.—were expelled from the Association for taking part in an unrecognised competition.

The total receipts of the B. H. A. during the year 1910-11 amounted to Rs. 2,252-15, leaving the cash in hand of Rs. 19-7 after meeting all expenses.

The statement of accounts for the season 1911 for the Calcutta Hockey League competition showed the balance in hand to be Rs. 314-1-6.

Mr. Smith (of Messrs. B. H. Smith and Co.) has offered a Cup worth Rs. 500 to the Association, and the Council will discuss later on the terms of the competition.

We have received a copy of the current price list of Messrs. Walter Locke and Company Limited. It is a beautifully got up list and is probably the finest catalogue of guns, rifle, ammunition and shooters' requisites ever issued in this country. All sportsmen should obtain a copy for reference.

London Week by Week.

So far an Antipodean winter has been ours. Up to Sunday last we had seen no frost or snow, nor even heard of any—round and about London at any rate. The song birds left with us were in full tune, robins were laying eggs, primroses were in bloom, people were gathering raspberries and strawberries, the apple buds were bursting, rooks building, bees pollen hunting, roses shooting and so on and so forth, vide reports in daily press. Certes it was mild and balmy and with an average daily temperature of over 45° it was small wonder that most things in nature were beginning to think the Spring had come round again. Browning need not have made such a fuss about the English April. January is quite as mild, clement, and spring-like. Lilac and laburnum may be expected to flower in a few weeks, asparagus will be ready by February, and a glut of strawberries may be looked for on St. Valentine's Day. On May Day we shall probably have the record frost of the century and the Derby may once more be run in a snowstorm. Nature always keeps the pendulum swinging.

But as I write the news comes of blizzards and hail and ice and snow drifts ten feet deep in the midlands and further north. Hunting has been stopped in many centres, racing has been postponed and abandoned even so close to London as Windsor, and practically every sport and pastime has been adversely affected. What your sporting contributor will find to write about I cannot imagine.

The passing reference to wintry conditions reminds me that last week a Wesleyan choir at Peterborough, singing the old ballad, "Good King Wenceslas" before the Mayor, changed the line "Bring me flask and bring me wine" to "Bring me cake and gingerwine." The incongruous modernity of the new version is atoned for by the beautiful temperance idea that is conveyed. There are lots of old drinking songs that can be improved in like fashion. For "Pour out the Rhine" may be substituted "Pour out the Vichy, let it flow," and instead of singing about "the glorious vintage of champagne" it would be better to say "the glorious brew of ginger ale." The next thing we shall be having is a teetotal Falstaff, a Dick Swiveller who drinks only ginger-beer, a Simon the Cellarer with nothing but sodawater and Apollinaris in his vaults, a Tam o' Shanter whose beverage is barley water and a Bacchus decorated with the blue ribbon.

London traffic is fast becoming one vast combine; soon we shall have one ticket to anywhere, if the union of bus, tube, rail and tramcar eventuates. The developments which are taking place in connection with London's traffic facilities bid fair completely to revolutionise travelling in the metropolis within the next few years.

Everything points to a gigantic combination catering for the millions of short-journey passengers, whether the journey be made by railway, tube, omnibus, or tramcar. Already arrangements are in progress by which a union will be realised between about ten of our huge passenger carrying organisations.

Almost every quarter of London will be served by the combination, however, for where the railways stop the motor-omnibuses will be found ready to carry passengers on their journey.

The entire combination converges on the District Railway, which owns the line between the Mansion House and Hammersmith. Branching off are the tubes to Finsbury Park and Hampstead in the north, while the Bakerloo serves the useful purpose of linking up the north-west and southern systems of railways at Waterloo and Paddington.

In the west the London United Electric Tramways Company takes up the passenger where the railway, tube, or omnibus leaves him and conveys him to almost any part of the Thames Valley by its intricate and widespreading network of lines.

To all intents and purposes the whole undertaking will be worked as though it were one complete system. Through tickets will be issued which will frank passengers on rail, tube, omnibus, or tramcar, whichever may be necessary for them to continue their journey.

The great Censor joke, about which I wrote recently, has been solved. Now we know why Mr. "Dear Old Charlie" Brookfield was appointed co-censor. The Lord Chamberlain has let the cat out of the bag.

It is a simple enough reason—all the music-halls in London may have stage play licenses for the asking, and all the sketches produced are stage plays which must be passed by the Censor (at a guinea a time). Moreover, all the theatres may have music-hall licences—if they want them.

Lord Spencer announced last week that he had a scheme to settle the whole stage play and sketch muddle. He unfolded his scheme the other day in letters to Mr. Gibbons and Mr. Stoll granting stage play licences forthwith to the Coliseum, the Middlesex Theatre of Varieties, and other music-halls on the following conditions:—

1. All sketches produced in buildings licensed for the performance of stage plays will require to be licensed by the Lord Chamberlain.
2. That no application shall be made for an excise licence where an undertaking has been given to the L.C.C. that no intoxicating liquors shall be sold.

But the Lord Chamberlain's regulations prohibit smoking in the auditorium. This prohibition, he says, he is prepared to waive if Mr. Stoll gives him a written undertaking

That no performance shall contain fewer than six distinct numbers. Such numbers to appear on the programme and the Act Drop to be lowered between each item.

Under Lord Spencer's new scheme it will be legal to produce any licensed play at a music-hall before an audience of smokers.

There is nothing to prevent a music-hall manager from putting on five small "turns" of a minute each, rushing down the curtain after each, and then clearing the stage and settling down to a complete performance of "Hamlet."

On the other hand, the managers, if they are so minded, may introduce musical and dancing "turns" between their acts and allow their audiences to smoke.

The former privilege they seem never to have coveted, and the latter they unanimously decided four years ago that they did not want.

The new privileges will be submitted to-day and the theatrical managers will meet to discuss it.

Meanwhile, audiences will go on as usual, wondering what it is all about.

Major W. P. Drury has already shown us, with the help of "The Flag Lieutenant," much of the lighter side of the senior Service, but in "Calamity Jane," R.N., a delightful one-act play, which was produced at the Globe Theatre last Tuesday night as a curtain-raiser to "Vice Versa," he presents us with a picture of the life of those whose active days on the sea are past. "Calamity Jane" is the nickname given by the occupants of a pensioners' ward at the Royal Naval Hospital, Haslar, to the charming nurse who administers to their wants. All of the pensioners are octogenarians, with the exception of one—but he hails from Plymouth, and is therefore despised by the Portsmouth veterans as of no account. Under the mistaken view that the nurse's lover has met with a fatal accident, the pensioners endeavour to break the news gently to her by drawing up a picturesque account of his death—written on wondrous black-edged notepaper—the authorship of the narrative being mainly attributable to one who is declared to have been "wasted on the quarter-deck and in whom there was the making of a Chaplain of the Fleet." But when the nurse and her lover read the epistle side by side they realize the kindly feeling which prompted the endeavour and the descriptive touches are forgotten. There is much hearty laughter in the little piece, and it is charmingly played by Mr. Philip Desborough, Mr. A. Corney Grain, Mr. Walter Kingsford, Mr. Leon M. Lion, Mr. C. Leveson Lane and Miss Joan Chaloner.

The Charles Dickens Centenary Celebration at the London Coliseum on Sunday night was of the nature of a national festival rather than of a mere theatrical performance. As one by one the favourites of the London stage made their appearance in the well-known Dickens characters the large audience gave way to wave after wave of ever-increasing enthusiasm. After a few musical items the dramatic portion of the programme began with an adaptation of the "Christmas Carol," with Mr. Seymour Hicks, who looked and moved like a figure from out a Cruikshank drawing, as "Scrooge." Then followed the third act of "The Only Way," with Mr. Martin Harvey as Sydney Carlton: "An Incident in the Life of Mrs. Gamp"—a delicious bit of farcical comedy from "Martin Chuzzlewit," enacted in inimitable fashion by Messrs. Cyril Maude and Fred Emney: the "Maypole Inn Scene" from "Barnaby Rudge," introducing a succession of graceful and humorous old-world dances; "Tom Pinch"—founded on incidents from "Martin Chuzzlewit," with Mr. Willard, Mr. Hayden Coffin, Miss Alexandra Carlisle and other well-known people in the cast; and, the crowning event of the evening, the Trial Scene from "Pickwick," the cast of which comprised such names as, among others, Sir John Hare, Sir George Alexander, Mr. G. DuMaurier Mr. James Welch, Miss Marion Terry, Miss Rosina Filippi, Miss Lottie Venne and Miss Eva Moore.

Both in "The Cricket on the Hearth" and in "The Golden Wedding," the one-act play by Mr. Eden Phillpotts and Mr. Charles Groves by which it was preceded in Mr. J. H. Brewer's matinee at the Court Theatre on Wednesday afternoon, there were floods of feigned tears on the stage, and, no doubt, some rivulets of real ones in the house. For human nature's is very much what it was in the days of Mr. Guppy, and there are chords in the human mind that will always respond to the sight of suffering and the sound of sentiment. But if there were tears there were also sighs. For it is a melancholy fact that the world is no longer so young and so unsophisticated as it was when Dickens wrote of the Peerybingles and Gruff Tackleton and Caleb Plummer. And not even the new stage version of their simple story that Mr. Brewer presented to the audience at the Court is dramatically modern enough to be likely to make a lasting appeal to this Athenian age. And that to the simple-minded and old-fashioned must be a cause for regret.

At the same time it was possible to listen to both the plays with a good deal of pleasure, and the audience certainly seemed to enjoy them, as indeed they well might compared with many plays of the day, which are modern and nothing else. "The Golden Wedding" is an extremely amusing little piece by Messrs. Eden Phillpotts and Charles Groves, in which two old gentlemen quarrel like lads over an old lady, and make it up at her request. Mr. Brewer, Mr. Vernon and Miss Yarde played it with great spirit and it was very well received.

As to "The Cricket" if there can be imagined anyone who did not know the story, he would certainly be wondering a good deal as to what exactly was happening. Gruff Tackleton would worry him. But knowing them all so well, it is quite pleasant to see them walking about in the flesh—Dot and John and Caleb Plummer and the Stranger and Tilly Slowboy. Tilly was rather disappointing; Miss Marie Wright overacted her so fiercely that she was not funny; but Dot (Miss Esme Hubbard) was a dear, and John, though he was not so slow as we remember the good carrier, was very hearty and good. The Caleb, too, of Mr. J. H. Brewer was capital, if a little unnecessarily senile.

Affection by Proxy.—"I find that my husband has been having the office-boy call me up every day and mumble terms of endearment. That's a nice way to fool his wife! He's been going to the races." "How is it that you didn't catch on to the voice?" "Well, I'm busy at bridge every day and I've been having the cook answer the telephone."

"Why did you jilt that man who wanted to marry you?" "Because," replied the prima donna "I couldn't make up my mind whether he was in love with me or merely wanted to hear me sing for nothing."

A BLACK BEAR DRIVE IN THE KARAULI STATE.

Some years ago while out on a shooting expedition with a friend, we were discussing the vagaries of sport and how luck came to some men and to some men the reverse. How some big game hunters always came across animals and how others could go for days and never see a sign of life in the jungle.

"It is very extraordinary" remarked my friend. Take this case for instance. One year I had been in the jungle below R——for over two months after tiger, and although I knew they were there, I had not set eyes on one since my arrival.

A few days before my departure, N——, a Major in the ——Lancers, arrived and camped near me.

The very first day that he went out to look over his ground, he suddenly came on two tigers who were moving along on a hillside some 40 yards above him.

"What luck!" I said. "Did he get them both?"

My companion, an experienced shikari, turned and looked at me in sorrow.

"Have you ever shot tiger?" he asked.

I admitted I had not.

"He did not get either. He stood quite still, they passed him, and he went back to the camp, but he shot one a few days after in a beat. If he had fired when both were above him, he would have perhaps only wounded one. Fifty yards is nothing to a tiger, and there would not have been much chance for the Major had they charged."

I listened in silence and remembered the story in after years.

In fact to shoot at any dangerous game above one when on foot is very unwise unless prepared to risk one's life. This is especially the case when out after black bear in hilly country. Actual experience has often shown the astonishing rapidity with which Bruin, after finding that he has been badly hit, will roll himself down into the middle of his attackers and once arrived, he is one of the worst animals to deal with.

The native of India fears him perhaps more than any other, and will avoid, if he possibly can, travelling by night in any neighbourhood which black bear are frequenting. The natives fear attack, but in reality, it is more the sluggish habits and character of the animal that are the cause of the trouble. For most denizens of the jungle move out of the way very quickly on the approach of man, but not so the bear. Perhaps it is that he is making up his mind what to do—perhaps he resents intrusion, but whatever the reason is, he often sticks to his ground, and woe betide the luckless being who unwittingly stumbles on to him in the dark.

But I digress, and must turn from bear talk to actual experience.

In the Native State of Karauli, in Rajputana, black bear are to be found in good numbers. There are two methods of shooting them, or rather attempting to shoot them. One is the ordinary method of locating the animal in the jungle and then beating him out, and the other is to sit up for him close by the caves in which he dwells, when the wild figs are ripening and he comes out at dusk to feed on them.

The former method is the more general, as the latter can only be indulged in at certain seasons of the year, and it was this former method that was followed on the occasion in which I had the good fortune to visit Karauli and enjoy the hospitality of His Highness the Maharajah.

Although devoted to sport of all kinds, and a very fine shot withal, His Highness does not neglect the administration of his State, and while doing his utmost to provide sport for his guests, is also able to show to them such institutions as the schools, hospitals, and jails at his capital. It was in fact during a visit to the largest of the schools that news was brought in that a bear had been marked down about four miles off. His Highness and his guests were solemnly seated round in the main hall of the building, while a pedantic headmaster gave forth in sonorous tones, the results of the last year's working of the school. The attendance of the students, the work of the various classes, the distinctions gained and the prizes earned—all such matters we listened to with grave faces, and as the address lengthened unduly, signs of boredom were to be seen on some of the assembled faces. Even the Maharajah showed symptoms of weariness at such cumbersome details. But the fates came to our rescue. As we sat, one of His Highness's retainers came quietly into the room, and slipping up to his master's side, whispered a few words.

The look of weariness at once passed away—the pedagogue paused, and lifted his eyes from his papers—the Maharajah looking in our direction put his stick, rifle like, to his shoulder and uttered the one word "bear,—" that word gave the signal. The remainder of the function was hurried through and off we went to hunt the bear.

His Highness headed the cavalcade with one or two of his men to show the way, and proceeding at a round trot, we soon reached the part of the jungle where he was said to be. Jumping off our animals, which could not carry us farther, we tramped for about half a mile along a narrow path, and then took up our positions on some high rocks which commanded a long and deep ravine.

Almost as soon as we had seated ourselves, the beat began—at first we could not see the line of men, but there was no mistaking the noise—shouting, yelling, beating of drums and tins, blowing on horns and other weird instruments, they shortly appeared coming down the ravine.

Bruin was lying very close—no one had seen a sign of him. Then, all of a sudden, the noise became louder still—there was evidently some animal on the move and rifles were got ready. But it was only a hyaena, a beast not worthy of our bullets, and he was allowed to pass on his way unmolested.

Nearer and nearer came the beaters and a troop of black-faced monkeys swung chattering and grimacing across our front. Then a whole bunch of peafowl rose, and uttering their shrill, discordant notes, sailed away out of sight. Still no bear!

His Highness began whispering to his attendants, whose grave faces betokened disappointment. But one of them—doubtless a shikari who knew the ground—pointed to a dark spot or jungle below us, up to which the beaters had not yet come, and the Maharajah's face brightened.

There was still hope then. And now the shouting yellow mass had got up to this spot and their cries were redoubled as they started to penetrate the thick bushes. Suddenly for one instant the promiscuous yelling stopped, and on all sides the one word "Reech,"—"Reech"! was shouted, and then one after the other three bears broke cover and started down the ravine at a clumsy shuffle.

I drew on the first, fired and saw him stagger, but he went on as if unhurt, so I gave him another barrel, which appeared to have no effect. Loading again I was just in time to give a finishing bullet to one of the other two which the Maharajah had knocked over with his first shot.

The third got away untouched.

I felt I had hit the first one vitally, and made sure he would be found dead at no great distance, so taking some men with me, I started to follow him up, but we had not gone far when shouts from the party made us turn our heads. Some men posted on the hills had seen the bear, who was lying up badly wounded in a patch of scrub. Hastily turning in the direction indicated, we proceeded to get above the wounded animal, and having done so, stones were rolled down to try and make him move. The first two or three gave no result, but a large boulder which went crashing through the patch, had the desired effect, and out came the bear making a great noise. He made a feeble attempt, poor beast, to charge up the hill, but he had not the strength left in him, and a well directed bullet quickly put an end to his sufferings.

Both bears were fine specimens, and His Highness was quite gratified at the result of the drive.

THE AMATEUR CARTRIDGE-LOADER.

We live in an age of trusts, combines, and amalgamations, and the various branches of industry with which the gunner is concerned are no exceptions to the general rule. Time was when the making of most of the paraphernalia connected with shooting was a thing of many parts—one man made powder, another shot, another cartridge cases, another wads, and so on. To-day all that is changed. Most of these businesses are more or less combined so that the cartridge-maker of to-day—or, at least, the principal firms occupied in that comprehensive business—is the actual manufacturer of most of the material he uses. It is probably in the interests of the shooting man that things nowadays should be so arranged, for whereas in the past he had to depend upon the doings of many, to-day there is practically only one firm to be held responsible in the turning out of his ammunition. That ensures better work, as a rule, and it certainly saves the gunner an infinite amount of trouble. Competition also is now so keen that there is far less room for the turning out of inferior stuff—the gunner's ammunition has to stand on its merits to a far greater extent than was the case in former times, and this competition has also brought about a reduction in price without in any way reducing the value for money that the consumer expects to obtain. On the contrary, the excellence of British-made ammunition is to-day of a far higher standard than ever before. Though many wonderful things are nowadays produced at the price of the humble "brown," there are few articles to be obtained in this country that represent such a marvellous production at that figure as the loaded sporting cartridge. For a single penny—or even less—one can now buy a cartridge that is perfect in every way, and no man who shoots has any excuse for using the inferior foreign stuff that is still sometimes offered him. The enterprise of the up-to-date maker of sporting ammunition has met with its reward, and well has it been deserved.

At the same time, there are still a few of us who prefer to load our cartridges at home, and although there is much less advantage in so doing than once was the case there is still something to be said for the practice. At one time of day it was undoubtedly cheaper for those who had the time to do it to turn out their own ammunition, but it is doubtful whether there is anything to be gained in that direction to-day. Nor is it possible for the amateur, never mind how complete his apparatus may be, to load his cartridges in better style than he can buy them. Modern machinery for cartridge loading has been brought to such a state of perfection that it can beat the best of hand labour every time and the man who loads his cartridges at home must have realised that fact long ago. But though probably ninety-nine per cent. of those who shoot now buy their ammunition ready loaded, one supposes there will always be a few enthusiasts who prefer to do the work for themselves. And there is no reason why they should not do so if they are so minded. Cartridge-loading, especially to the younger members of the shooting fraternity, is always a fascinating amusement, and there is very little risk attaching to it if ordinary care be exercised. As regards the powder, in fact, cartridge-loading is much safer than it used to be, and it may be said that with the various improvements in all the material used the whole process has been very much simplified in recent times. There are, however, several points to be observed by anyone who wishes to be his own cartridge-loader, for not only must he be careful of his own safety, but he must do all in his power to ensure the turning out of the best stuff possible.

FISHING.

The first thing that the amateur cartridge-loader will require is some sort of labour-saving apparatus so that he may load a good many cartridges at a time, for loading them one by one is a laborious business, and the best results can never be obtained in that way. If one likes, one may, of course, go in for a good deal of labour-saving machinery, but the ordinary individual will be satisfied with the simplest devices—at any rate, at the outset. He will require a block to hold fifty or a hundred empty cases, powder and shot measures, rammers and a turnover machine. With some powders he will require a set of very sensitive scales if he is to obtain extreme accuracy in his work, but for ordinary purposes he will generally be able to dispense with these. But even if he does not go to the trouble of weighing each charge as he puts it in, he will find it useful to have by him a pair of scales for the purpose of checking the accuracy of his measures from time to time. One actual experience with the various powders will enable him to discover how far he may trust to his measures, but it may be said that the question of specific gravity as compared with measure has received very great attention from the powder manufacturers, and there is really very little room for the amateur to go wrong in this respect. At the same time, stress must be laid on the necessity for taking great care in the measuring of charges, for the modern powders are far more powerful, weight for weight, than the old ones, and a very slight difference one way or the other may spoil the whole thing, even if it does not tend to dangerous results now and again.

Before purchasing his empty cases the amateur must make up his mind precisely what powder he intends to load them with, for although the caps of modern cases are much more perfect than they used to be, and may be depended upon to give very uniform results even with different powders, there are some caps specially suited to certain powders, and this fact is often of extreme importance. This matter is very much simplified by the fact that the powder-maker of to-day is in many cases also the case-maker. His own experience has taught him which kind of case, and what sort of cap, is best suited to his powder, and the amateur is in no difficulty in satisfying himself on this point. If he deals in one special make of powder and gets his cases from the same manufacturer, he cannot go wrong, and will obtain the highest efficiency from his ammunition.

After the powder has been put in the cases a good shaking will be necessary to settle it in its place, and then the first of the four wads, which in this case must be one that is thoroughly grease-proof, will be inserted. After that the first "ramming" is necessary, though in these days it is not ramming at all. All that is required is gentle pressure on the powder sufficient to seat the wad firmly on the paper, and to secure even pressure it is best to use a multiple rammer capable of pressing ten or twenty cartridges at a time. The thick felt wad comes next, and this, too, must sit firmly on the grease-proof wad, but without the exertion of further pressure on the powder. A thin card wad to keep the shot from sticking to the felt wad is next placed in position, but again without giving further pressure to the wads or powder underneath, and then comes the shot. This should be shaken down into place like the powder, and a good, firm, though not over-thick wad placed on top to keep all in place. The shot should be held so that only one or two pellets at the most are able to rattle. A loosely-shotted cartridge never performs so well as one that is nice and tight.

Nothing remains now to be done except the turnover, and that requires considerable care. Too deep a turn will cripple the charge, while one that is not deep enough will not offer sufficient resistance, and is also liable to shake loose. The average amateur is generally tempted to turn down his cartridge too tight, and a good deal of practice is necessary before the right amount of turnover is arrived at.

The amateur often gets into difficulties with the much-condensed nitro powders, and must keep a look-out for those which require a cone-based case or else he will find that he has too much room to spare, and must find some means of getting rid of it. He will probably attempt to do this by increasing the turnover, or he may use a thicker felt wad, which is certainly preferable. But, of course, every powder ought to be used in the case specially suited to it; otherwise the best results cannot be hoped for. It is important, too, that the cartridge when finished should be of exactly uniform length, for if they are too short or too long for the chamber of the gun the shooting is sure to be affected. Only long practice will enable the amateur to turn out cartridges exactly similar to one another in every respect, but if he cares to make use of the various appliances now at his disposal to ensure this result his trouble will be much reduced. One important thing he must make certain of is that all his cartridges are true to gauge, or he will be constantly in difficulties in the field. If his cases are good there is not much fear of bulging them in the process of loading, provided due care is taken, but it is just as well to pass each case through a gauge when it is done to size it up to the proper circumference. Let no man be tempted to make his cases do service a second time. They are so cheap nowadays, that there is no excuse for the practice, and though a fired case may look practically as good as new, such good shooting as the first time of loading cannot be obtained. Those who care to go to the trouble of loading their own cartridges will find it an absorbing hobby at any rate for a time, but they must not imagine that they are going to save money by it unless they are in the position of using many thousands of cartridges in a season, and are prepared to erect a rather elaborate plant for the loading of them.—EAST SUSSEX in Shooting Times.

THE DRINKING HOURS OF BIRDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—In the very appreciative critique in the Indian Field of our humble first effort in the world of literature on the larger scale, "Cupid and Cartridges," objection was taken to the fact that we timed the Imperial Sandgrouse to turn up for their morning drink at 7-45 A.M. In the critic's opinion 8-45 A.M. would be the right hour actually. Our words were that the birds arrived a few minutes later than the rise of the sun at 7-45. Possibly, all are wrong in attempting to fix an hour, because the sun rises at different times during the winter, but this, at least, I must adhere to: that the Imperial Sandgrouse come to assuage their thirst directly after the sun has risen. Where the area dependent on the one water is large, there will be flights turning up at any time within an hour, but it would not be safe for sportsmen near the Indus, at any rate, to be late from settling into their pits comfortably at the sunrise itself. The first flight gives the line of aim to all the others, and, if that is diverted, there may be little or no sport. The criticism reminds me forcibly of one of the pleasantest of these minor shoots enjoyed in the district of Mianwali (Hazratabad of "Cupid and Cartridges.") Mianwali is one of those places where one seldom goes for a real shoot, but where one can never leave a gun behind, because shots at something or other are usually fired during the day's ride or morning inspection of crops.

The hills of the Salt Range culminate in the pleasant sanatorium of Sakesar, where three districts meet. From this a low barren range goes on at a lower level, crossing the Indus at the Kalabagh gorge and losing itself in the maze of defiles and rocks of the Kohat and Bannu districts. From Nammal a stream pierces the hills between Sakesar and the lower ridges, and coming out near Musa Khel it is soon in the winter absorbed on the first few thirsty fields below. It is led away from the torrent bed to those lands by a pleasant channel which owing to the shape of the ground broadens out at two places. On the first of these it is wise for two guns to plant themselves at dawn and, after placing men to defend the other spot, to await events. A short time after sunrise the Imperial Sandgrouse appear, and having settled down amidst the pebbly under-hills for a time and, in accordance with popular belief, having filled themselves partially up with shingle, they fly down to the water. Though flights may be large, the birds are not only swift but extraordinarily tough skinned, so that the share expected from them is not always realized; but about the time when disappointment reigns despite a moderate bag, the blue pigeon flying down from their homes among the rocky cliffs turn up on the same water for their morning drink in due course. The last of the Imperial Sandgrouse and the first flights of the pigeon mingle, but after a while they all disappear, and there is nothing to do but to eat one's breakfast as near as possible to the water. There is, as a rule, plenty of time to finish, provided that the cook is prompt and serving is speedy. Still, throughout the meal, the air is seasoned and the ears are attuned to carry sound. As a rule, however, the last round of toast and marmalade has just been consumed, when fresh calls announce the advent of the Pintailed Sandgrouse, who belong to the league of drinkers some time after meals. It may be observed for the benefit of those who prefer the ordinary practice that the Pintails are but half the size of Imperial Sandgrouse, and from the point of view of the consumer, at any rate, dry feeding is to be deprecated. With the thrills of the oncoming birds a rush is made again for the pits, and after a time they, too, come on for their day's liquid refreshment.

A variation of this programme could always be attained by hurrying after the disappearance of the pigeon across a rock-strewn path and over a long defile between the hills in order to be in time for the Pintailed Sandgrouse on the same water on the Nammal side of the gorge. A new wide plain opens out on that side of the hills and the birds of the thirsty uplands were obliged to come to the only water for a long distance. This change of programme led as a rule to horrible starvation, because there was a little marsh which would generally provide a few Snipe, and, however faint one might be, it was difficult to pass on without pursuing. Now under the personal instruction of Sir Louis Dane, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, a huge dam has been constructed within the gorge which is expected to hold back the water to a distance of five miles. The lake formed thereby will benefit the crops below immensely, but from the point of view of the sportsman it is to be seen whether Duck will take to the impounded waters or whether the Sandgrouse will move to the shallow at the head in lieu of deserting it altogether. Whatever may be the result, the old days of joyous feeling with 30 birds lying on the ground during breakfast and of hope of a proportionate share out of the third species have gone. But at least, the place has served to give an idea of the hours during which these three kinds of birds are wont to fly towards water, and wherever one is one may look out for the Imperial Sandgrouse during the first hour after the rising of the sun, the Pigeon during the second, and the Pintailed Sandgrouse about the fourth. At least, such is our experience on and near the Indus.

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

So wintry did the weather prove in the North and Midlands last Saturday that grounds generally were reduced to a truly deplorable condition. Snow, sleet, and rain prevailed nearly everywhere, and fog was not altogether absent, the afternoon being quite the worst experienced this season. So hopeless was the state of the Owlerton enclosure that Sheffield Wednesday and Bury did not attempt to contest their First League match, and at Bradford, where Bradford City met Newcastle United, as well as at West Bromwich Albion, where the Albion encountered Tottenham Hotspur, play had to be stopped early in the second half. Special interest attached to the struggle at West Bromwich, from the fact that the Albion and Tottenham meet on the same ground next Saturday in the first round of the Association Cup, and the abandonment of the contest occasioned great disappointment. More fortunate than the other London clubs, Woolwich Arsenal succeeded at Plumstead in bringing off their match with Aston Villa. They found themselves a goal behind at the interval, but managed to effect a draw of 2 goals each, and in so doing had cause for some satisfaction, four of the Plumstead team's last five engagement having resulted in defeat. L. R. Roose could not play and Greenaway was also an absentee from the home side.

Blackburn Rovers although a goal in arrear at half-time succeeded in beating Middlesbrough, and as Newcastle United had to abandon their game at Bradford the Blackburn men who at home this season have won eight matches out of twelve and drawn the other four, can now claim as many points as the Newcastle Club. Newcastle, however, still remain at the head of the First League owing to the possession of a superior goal average. Everton gave further proof of the fine form they are now in by running up 4 goals against Manchester United who, however, were not at full strength. Browell, a very young player, secured from Hull City, turned out for Everton for the first time and registered two of their goals. He should give their attack a much-needed improvement. Their defence is nearly all that could be desired, as may be realised from the fact that in their last six matches only one goal has been scored against them. Liverpool, like their Everton neighbours, are going very strong just at present. Only three weeks ago they stood last but one on the list of First League clubs, but since that time they have gained five consecutive victories. Yesterday at Hyde-road, Manchester City ran them to a goal in the end, but well into the second half of the game Liverpool led by 3 to 0.

Sheffield United are another team who have recently been making considerable headway. They, early last month, had only four wins to show at the end of fifteen contests, but of their seven most recent encounters they have won five and lost only one. They accomplished a particularly creditable performance in beating Bolton Wanderers at Burnden Park, where earlier in the week Aston Villa had lost by 3 to 0. Defeated four times during the holidays, Oldham Athletic, strengthened by the assistance of Hunter, the Aston Villa half-back, enjoyed a welcome turn of fortune in a victory over Preston North End by 1 to 0. Sunderland, at Roker Park, ran up against Notts County the heaviest score of the afternoon.

Some surprising results occurred in the Second Division of the League, chiefly among the clubs at the head of the competition. Visiting Bristol, Derby County, who last Monday met with a severe reverse at Stockport, could only draw. Burnley went down before Gainsborough Trinity; while Hull City drew at Glossop. While all this was happening, Chelsea, playing at home scored 4 goals to 2 against Leeds City, and thanks to that success, they have advanced to second place in the table, only one point below Derby County, with an equal number of matches played. Their position is now very favourable, but Hull City a point behind, still have a game in hand, and may be considered a little better off. The failure of Burnley was quite unlooked for, seeing that Gainsborough Trinity had previously won only two matches and were last but one on the list, while Hull City's inability to overcome Glossop—worse off than Gainsborough—was equally surprising. All the London clubs fared well, for Clapton Orient won by 4 goals to 2 against Stockport County, and Fulham gained a fine victory at Birmingham.

As most of the leading Southern League teams were playing away from home some unexpected results were bound to occur on such bad grounds as were experienced everywhere and Swindon suffered defeat at Norwich, while Northampton failed to win at Leyton. On the other hand, Queen's Park Rangers managed to win at Reading, while Plymouth Argyle and Crystal Palace made the most of their opportunity of playing at home. As a consequence of these results, the competition holds out much better prospect of providing a close struggle for first honours than it did a week ago. The Rangers are now within three points of the leaders and have a game in hand, but no other club comes nearer than another three points, so that Swindon will enter on the Cup-ties with the happy knowledge of being safe in their League position for some weeks to come.

RUGBY RULES.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

DURHAM vs. CUMBERLAND.—As both counties were out of the running for the championship, the meeting of Durham and Cumberland at Westoe did not prove a very strong attraction, and only about 2,000 people were present. Five minutes after the start, from a scrummage, Heal got over for Durham, and Sivewright converted. For a while after this the play was fairly even, but Durham then attacked strongly, and Robertson gained a try, from which Ellwood placed a goal. From this point to the interval Cumberland kept up an almost continuous pressure, but they missed some splendid chances, and at half-time Durham led by two goals (10 points) to nothing. After change of ends Cumberland were seen to marked advantages. Following up smartly, Smyth beat the full-backs and crossed the Durham line, J. Holliday improving upon the try. After this Durham pressed, and Dingle put on a try, which Sivewright converted. In the closing stages Cumberland again pressed heavily, but they could do no more than obtain another try, secured by Ewbank. In this way Durham won by three goals to one goal and one try. Durham, 15 points; Cumberland, 8 points.

CORNWALL vs. HAMPSHIRE.—Represented by nothing like their full strength, the Hampshire fifteen, at Camborne, suffered defeat, Cornwall scoring 2 goals and 2 tries to 0. Wretched weather prevailed, and a very small company saw the match. During the opening stages Cornwall pressed a good deal, and Bailey got over for them. Arthur, however, relieved splendidly, but then with the Cornwall forwards taking the ball down the field in a capital rush, Rich got possession and passed to Martin, who scored a try, which was improved upon. Some good play by Peet and Arthur for Hampshire was next seen, but they could not score. Thenceforward to half time Hampshire had the best of matters, their forwards being very good in the loose, and the Cornwall line had three narrow escapes. Cornwall, however, led at the interval by 5 points to 0. After change of ends Hampshire pressed a good deal, but at length Cornwall took up the attack, and Carter scored another converted try from a pass by Trewartha. Following that, Rich and Rickard also crossed the Hampshire line, but these tries were not improved upon. Although beaten the Hampshire team gave a creditable display, their forwards being excellent. Cornwall, 16 points; Hampshire, 0.

ENGLAND vs. THE REST.

Played under deplorable conditions the last of the English international trial matches at Twickenham on the 6th instant ended in a draw, each side scoring a goal. The weather could scarcely have been more unfavourable. Steady rain all the morning was followed shortly after two o'clock by a drenching downpour, and although there was some slight improvement soon after the game began the rain never really ceased. This naturally had a prejudicial effect upon the attendance, but, for all that there must have been between five thousand and six thousand people present. Throughout the game a lot of good play was seen but, except for the two tries, it led to very little. The result was something of a surprise, for, after the fine displays the England team had given in the previous two trials, they had been looked forward to as certain winners. As a matter of fact the England pack was a disappointment. They took a long time to settle down and, although holding their own quite well for the last twenty minutes of the first half, they were outplayed after change of ends both in genuine scrummaging and in the loose. From the start the men who stood out prominently among the Rest forwards were Hynes, Eddison, Bleacowe, and Griffith, and these men retained their form to the end. King, who had played splendidly on the England side in the first half changed places with Dibble at half-time and did even better work than before. Pym, working the scrummage for the Rest, gave a capital display, and the best of the Rest three-quarters was Steinthal. He, however, neglected his wing man, Roberts, most shamefully, the latter player scarcely receiving a pass during the whole game. Tarr did not play so well as in the first trial tally, the latter player scarcely receiving a pass during the match, giving his passes very badly, and consequently Butcher did not get very many chances. On the England side the outstanding players were Poulton, Knott and Johnston. The last-named was in his very best form. Cool to a degree, he always seemed to have plenty of time in which to get in his kick, and he almost invariably found touch and gained a lot of ground for his side. Poulton was the best three-quarter on the field, but though he did not have many chances in the second half he did enough before that to be certain of inclusion in the team against Wales. Very speedy he took and gave his passes well and ran beautifully. Knott was quite a success at stand-off half, being good in defence and getting the ball away in excellent style. As already indicated the forwards were disappointing, but Brown was always conspicuous and Pillman came through the match with credit. Very prompt to time Dibble kicked off for the Rest, but the ball was fetched back and a scrum formed in the centre. The Rest forwards went through with a fine rush and were quickly awarded a free kick. Dibble punted across, but Poulton returned, and then, with the ball going out to the Rest three-quarters, a good chance was lost by Tarr dropping the ball. Steinthal, however, gained a lot of ground by a fine kick into touch. Another free kick to the Rest followed and Ryan tried to kick a goal but sent wide. The England forwards could not settle down and so far had given a wretched display, being beaten both in scrummaging and in the loose. At length, however, they got the ball out and Knott gave Poulton a neat pass. The latter transferred to Brougham, who ran some yards and then found touch with a useful kick, thereby gaining a lot of ground and carrying the play well into the Rest half. From the scrummage which followed the line out Poulton made a fine dribble, but with the ball going over the line Bell touched down. The England forwards dribbled back to the Rest line from the drop-out, and again Bell had to touch down. By this time the England forwards had improved a lot and were packing quicker and holding their own in the loose. The Rest forwards stuck to their work splendidly and soon carried the play to near the England line. Soon the ball came out to the backs, and although Butcher failed to hold a bad pass Hynes dribbled over the line for England to touch down. The England forwards next came away with a fine rush, carrying the ball past the halfway line.

There the Rest backs tried to break through, but Poulton, standing well up, intercepted a pass and got away on the right. He gave Brougham a good pass after drawing the defence, but Brougham failed to hold the ball and a promising movement was ended. The Rest quickly recovered, but Johnston put in some fine work saving in grand style in finding touch with a long kick. A moment later he was called upon again and responded equally as well. Following some scrummages Poulton twice broke away. The first time he was collared, and the next he dodged two or three men and then passed to Birkett, but Tarr knocked the ball down. These movements gained ground and at last England scored. From a scrummage the ball went out to Knott, who flashed it on to Poulton in great style. Already in his stride, Poulton was past three or four men before they were aware of it, and then doubling back he swerved past Steinthal and Bell in turn to run on. Outracing Bell, the Oxford man grounded the ball under the cross-bar and so gained a really brilliant try. Lambert had no difficulty in placing a goal. Play had then lasted twenty-five minutes. England did not hold their lead long, for five minutes later the Rest equalised.

They had set up a fairly good attack, but Tarr gave two bad passes and England looked like gaining some ground. From a loose scrummage, with the Rest forwards being pushed along by the England attack, Pym snatched up the ball splendidly and had it out for Tarr like a flash. Tarr gave to Steinthal, who, dodging cleverly, ran through the England defence. Poulton made two desperate attempts to collar him from behind, but could not quite reach him and Steinthal grounded the ball by the post for Lagden to place a goal. After that the England backs gave a capital display of passing, the ball going from Knott to Birkett and then on to Poulton. Brougham, however, missed his pass and another good chance was lost. Half-time arrived a little later with the scores:—

England	...	...	... 1 goal
The Rest	...	...	... 1 goal

During the interval King and Dibble changed sides, the idea being, no doubt, to see whether the England forwards would improve under the leadership of the experienced Somerset man. So far from that, however, was the case that in the second half the Rest forwards exercised a greater superiority than before, being much better than the England eight at practically every point. At the outset of this half there was some kicking into touch, Steinthal for the Rest and Knott and Poulton for England doing good work. Soon the superiority of the Rest pack began to tell and England had to touch down. Knott was often prominent, getting the ball away well, but England were for a long time penned in their own quarters. Eventually, with the Rest attacking on the left, Butcher tried a big cross-kick, but the ball bounched to Lambert, who shook off Robert's tackle and passed to Birkett. He soon gave the ball back, and Lambert running on to the half-way line, cross-kicked beautifully. Reaching up Pillman got possession and a try seemed likely, but as he was collared, Pillman threw forward and so the Rest escaped. Butcher next got away with a dangerous dribble, but he was brought down by Brougham, the tackle having the appearance of being illegal, and Johnston was able to gain ground with a superb kick. This he followed with another splendid punt, but the Rest forwards would not be denied, and gradually by a series of loose and strong rushes worked the ball to the England line. In this Eddison and King showed up very well, their work being of a high order. The ball went out to the Rest backs and danger for England threatened, but Poulton tackled Tarr in great style. Then with the attack going the other way Steinthal tried to drop a goal when he might with advantage have passed to Roberts. Indeed his neglect of Roberts was a glaringly bad feature of the Yorkshireman's otherwise good display. The Rest were now right on the England line, but Tarr, dropping the ball, missed a good opening, and then relief came to England with a touch down. It was a near thing. King only just failing to get to the ball first and so score a try.

The closing stages of the game were full of excitement. Having held up under great pressure for so long, England at last broke away, the ball being got out to Poulton, who raced away and passing to Brougham, enabled that player to carry the game into the Rest twenty-five. England, however, could not press home their attack, and the Rest forwards soon transferred the play to the other end, where Pym gave Roberts a beautiful pass. He made a grand run, but Poulton dashed across and pushed him into touch just as he reached the corner flag, the Oxford man thus saving what seemed a certain try. Just after that Roberts was away again and almost in, but this time the situation was saved by Johnston, who had the better of a hard scramble for the ball.

England	...	...	... 1 goal.
The Rest	...	...	... 1 goal.

BOXING.

KID MCKOY vs. G. GUNTHER.—From details of the match brought off in Paris on the 9th instant it would appear that the Kid won with ease although by a narrow margin that the whole affair was uneventful and not particularly interesting.

Gunther forced most of the time, although many of his blows were wild and ineffective, and the American's showing had little to recommend him for championship honours.

Slow and at times using his elbows suspiciously, McCoy's punches for the most part lacked force, and apart from several right upper-cuts, he did nothing of importance. It was far from a good bout, both men boxing with little fire, and this fact brought cries of discontent from the onlookers.

Most of the leading was undoubtedly done by Gunther. He was at his man from first to last, never giving him a moment's peace, and McCoy at times countered with the left, but as with Gunther, there was little steam behind the blows. No damage was done all through, and neither man was in any difficulty. Gunther twice slipped to the boards, but was up at once, swinging rights and lefts all over the place.

It was a very unconvincing contest, the decision meeting with a mixed reception. Gunther scored in the first, fourth, seventh, and eighth rounds; and McCoy had an advantage in the fifth, sixth, ninth, and tenth rounds. The second and third were even.

Frank Moran challenged the winner, and there are possibilities of a contest being arranged between him and McCoy.

ROWING.

'VARSITY BOAT RACE.

MONDAY was the first day of Term at Cambridge, and in accordance with custom the Cambridge crew commenced practice, which will give the Light Blues nine weeks on the Cam and the Ouse before removing to the Thames. We are informed by Mr. Arbuthnot, the C. U. B. C. president, that the race has been definitely fixed for Saturday, 30th March, the tide so serving that the race may be rowed at about 11-30 A.M. This will mean that Cambridge will have in all twelve weeks in which to build up a crew, but the time will be none too long, as the material, judging by the form in the Trial Eights, is not of the best, and most of the oarsmen will have to be made.

Mr. J. H. Gibbon, the famous stroke of 1899 and 1900, who is now resident at Cambridge on account of his appointment in connection with the Artillery Section of the Officer' Training Corps, was in charge yesterday, and between 2 and 3 o'clock he gave tubbing instruction to all members of the crew. It will be remembered that at the end of last Term an experimental crew was afloat for a little experience in light boat rowing, and yesterday's crew was composed mainly of the men rowed in that boat.

The 1909 racer was launched at 3 o'clock, and the men took up their positions. C. F. Burnand, who was at No. 2, was the only Blue assisting. D. C. Collins, the famous cricket Blue, who led the losing trial eight, was at stroke; Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 all rowed in the winning trial eight, and the bow thwart was filled by Pilcher, of the losing trial. The composition of the crew did not occasion any surprise, as it was composed of men who were prominent in the Trial

—essential to good sport.

The most accurate and reliable of cartridges may not always suffice to ensure good sport, but good sport is out of the question without them.

Eley Cartridges do all that the best cartridges can do in this direction, with a trustworthiness which has won for them a measure of success greater probably than any other cartridges in the world.

Two 'Eley Loaded' Cartridges:

Eley 'Acme'
A bright orange 2-inch deep-shell Cartridge, loaded with Eley (42-gr.) Smokeless Powder.

Eley 'Elold'

Eight race, and it is highly probable that at least four of the men called upon yesterday will eventually row against Oxford, although, of course, there will be many changes. Wankowiez has the distinction of being the first Russian to ever row in a Light Blue boat.

The journey in the ship occupied only 40 minutes, the crew paddling with fairly lengthy stops at 22 a minute to Ditton Corner and back. Mr. Gibbon was accompanied by the president and secretary.

Five Blues are available for Cambridge this year—R. W. M. Arbuthnot, R. le Blanc Smith, C. F. Burnand, S. E. Swann, and P. V. G. Van der Byl. Swann is not yet in residence, and Van der Byl, who has returned to South Africa, is not expected up, although there were rumours that he intended coming into residence. Last year's spare man, L. S. Lloyd, will take up residence in a day or two. The following was the order of rowing:—

THE SIALKOT TOURNAMENT.

Semi-finals.

THE semi-finals were played on Friday, the 19th instant. The first match was between the 17th Lancers' "B" team and the Durham Light Infantry, the latter having five goals' start. For the first three chukkers the Durhams very successfully defended their goal, and at the beginning of the last chukker the score was five to two in their favour, the Lancers only having scored twice. The last chukker was quite sensational. Captain Melvill scored four successive goals in brilliant style; he was mounted on an extremely fast and handy pony, and whenever he got the ball he scored. Teams:—

17TH LANCERS' "B."	Handicap.	DURHAMS.	Handicap.
Mr. Parbury ...	... 5	Mr. Gilpin ...	... 0
Capt. Melvill ...	... 6	Mr. Turner ...	... 3
Mr. Nicholls ...	... 2	Capt. Wood ...	... 3
Mr. Boles ...	... 4	Mr. Greenwell ...	... 0

The second match was between the 17th Lancers' "A" and the 19th Lancers' "A." The 17th were better mounted and had a slight advantage throughout. Colonel Medley put up a great defence for the 19th, who were eventually beaten by three goals to nil. The two teams had the same handicap, but the superiority of the ponies made quite three goals' difference. Teams:—

19TH LANCERS' "A."	Handicap.	17TH LANCERS.	Handicap.
Mr. Baddeley ...	... 2	Mr. Plowden ...	... 0
Mr. Howell ...	... 6	Major Thompson	... 1
Mr. FitzGerald	... 0	Lt.-Col. Tilney	... 5
Lt.-Col. Medley	... 4	Major Carden ...	... 5

In the Handicap tournament the King's Regiment were beaten by the 2nd-Lieutenants of the 11th Lancers by three goals. The Sialkot Gymkhana were beaten by the 22nd Cavalry by six goals to five. The finals of both tournaments were played on Tuesday, the 23rd January. In spite of heavy rain the ground played well and two fine games were witnessed. The 17th Lancers' "A" team met "B" team in the final of the big tournament, "A" team receiving three goals' start. In the first chukker after some exciting play up and down the ground Melvill scored by a fine near side shot. Major Thompson's pony fell towards the end of the chukker, but no damage was done. Melvill was again responsible for another goal in the second chukker, and this was the last goal scored by "B" team. Major Carden scored for "A" team they eventually won by four goals to two. Teams:—

"A" TEAM.	Handicap.	"B" TEAM.	Handicap.
Mr. Plowden ...	... 6	Mr. Parbury ...	... 5
Major Thompson	... 1	Capt. Melvill ...	... 6
Col. Tilney ...	... 5	Mr. Nicholls ...	... 2
Major Carden ...	... 5	Mr. Boles ...	... 4

The final of the Handicap tournament was won by the Sialkot Gymkhana, who beat the 21st Cavalry by five goals to three. The 21st had two goals' start. This was another very good game, but the Gymkhana was a little too strong for their opponents. Teams:—Gymkhana.—Mr. Eckstein, Mr. Dube, Captain Hastings and Captain Yates. 21st Cavalry.—Mr. Garstin, Mr. Lewis, Mr. Ismay, and Mr. Dane.

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

AFTER the English versus Indian Schools match which comes off at the Gardens next Saturday and Sunday, the cricket season in Calcutta can be said to have closed. This annual fixture will not be as interesting as it was last year, for Nattore's crack Bombay players have all left Calcutta, the Maharaja's important matches having terminated, but H. R. Mehta and K. Roy are down to play for the Indian team. K. Seshachari, Nattore's wicket keeper, will probably not play: the old St. Xavier's boys, F. and A. Gould will not appear and as A. B. Rosser has not played this season, the old Lahore boy has also stood out. So far five players from the Customs have been picked, but instead of taking Dutt and Banerji from the Howrah Sporting B. Mukerji of the Aryans, and M. Ali, who only represented Aligarh last season should be included in the team. G. Cameron and B. Riggs should also be picked. The English team has been selected as follows:—R. N. Boequet, J. D. Guise, B. A. White G. Turnbull, M. R. Quin, F. N. C. Rossiter, A. J. Carter, A. C. von Ernsthausen, L. J. Lightfoot, E. C. Cumberlege and C. S. Murray.

RIFLE AND PISTOL CARTRIDGES.

To do justice to your skill, you should use good ammunition no less than an accurate rifle or pistol. The arm is often blamed when the ammunition is at fault. To insure your getting cartridges that are uniform in size and shooting strength, and sure-fire and accurate, ask for Winchester cartridges—the Red W Brand. These cartridges are made and loaded in the most complete plant in the world by automatic machinery and are always just the same.

In the Nattore and Ballygunge match last Sunday some excellent bowling was witnessed and this accounted for the small scores. As was only to be expected Nattore won, but the Maharaja's team were for once not seen to advantage in batting. Ballygunge rendered a very feeble account of themselves, the whole side being out for a small total of 62. To this score R. A. White, as usual, was top scorer, his 26 being the result of sound batting. Sampre, the Bombay Hindu, took six wickets for 15 runs and bowled even better than he did against Calcutta the week before.

The Maharaja's team only replied with 146—the second smallest score registered by the side this season. P Shivram as against Calcutta was the chief contributor, his 50 being the result of sound batting; C. M. Ali hit well for 31. Frank Gould was in fine form with the ball and his six wickets for 45 runs on such an excellent wicket was a good performance.

Ballygunge had a second knock, and the side fared better, compiling 162 for seven wickets. White again showed to most advantage, subscribing 79, but his innings was a lucky one. G. G. Keddie hit well for 38.

Without Rogers, Templeton, W. Jackson, C. Simpson, and W. Cooper, the Rangers could not be said to be anything like a representative side, and so lost badly to Calcutta on Sunday, the C. C. C. winning by two wickets and 249 runs. In addition to these five men being absentees, the Rangers have had no practice since the 3rd December, as their ground had been appropriated to make room for the stands erected for the King's visit.

However, the Rangers did fairly well in batting, the innings closing for 183, but the attack was miserable, no bowler being able to find his length, and added to this catches were dropped, while the ground fielding also left much to be desired. Calcutta were not slow to take advantage of their opportunities and their batsmen hitting out knocked up a grand total of 382 for eight wickets. A. J Carter contributed 105,—his second century this season. M. R. Quin, who has been batting very consistently this year, shaped well for 77. J. C. Sewell got 59 and J. K. Michie 55. This was the highest contribution credited to the last named this season. All the batsmen hit splendidly but all were accorded "lives." Quin also did good service with the ball, taking six wickets for 28 runs.

The Port Commissioners, who have had a most successful season beat St Xavier's after a close game last Sunday at Garden Reach by 24 runs. The Port Commissioners batting first knocked up 135 to which A. E. Pyster subscribed 63, and A. C. Patterson 11. St. Xavier's were all out for 109.

On Saturday afternoon the Customs beat the Town Club by 7 wickets and 79 runs. The Indians were all out for 64, while the Customs knocked up 143 for 3 wickets, C. Barlow not out 60, McCready 22, and Quiterio not out 29. C. Marsden, who has been bowling excellently throughout the season, took six wickets for 17 runs.

The Telegraph and the Medicals played a game on the former's ground last Saturday afternoon in which both sides scored 141 for six wickets each. The Medicals, who had first use of the wickets, scored their runs in an hour and a half, while the home team, who had an hour and ten minutes to bat, got exactly the same score for a similar number of wickets. Stumps were drawn precisely at 5-30. For the Telegraph Bertie Riggs hit magnificently for a not out 98. For the Medicals J. Sweeney 27 and H. Giblin 58 played soundly.

A MIDDLE-AGED FOOZLER'S REMARKS ON GOLF.

VIII.

ABNORMAL CONDITIONS

NOTHING shows up the quality of a man's golf so well as unfavourable climatic conditions. I have just been fortunate enough to see a match between two first-class exponents of the game, in a thick fog, on a cramped course unknown to both. On the 29th November, on the Fulford Course, near York, Ray of Ganton played Cheal of York the Duty of Scarborough, Major of Fulford. I followed the first-named pair and saw most interesting golf. A thick wet fog enveloped everything like a damp blanket. Some of the members of the committee constituted themselves gobies and showed the player the direction of the holes, the position of bunkers, and so forth. The atmosphere was still, and of such density that one could see without difficulty from fifty to seventy yards, according to the part of the course: low down near the Ouse, the field of view was extraordinary small. Ray and Cheal are remarkable contrasts in regards appearance. The Ganton professional is a huge man, over six feet in height, with immense shoulders, and the rest of the powerful physique in proportion. Cheal is small and very slight; and therefore a standing encouragement to men of similar build, as he proves conclusively that golf is not a game of strength.

Fulford is a decidedly heavy, yet sporting little nine-hole course. The grass is very strong growing, and somewhat coarse, so that it is a hard business in summer to keep the putty in condition. The constant mowing, rolling, and treading are, however, slowly, yet surely, improving the quality of the grass, and these links will eventually be very nice indeed. In places the drives have to be taken between trees, only twenty-five to thirty yards apart, so that it behoves one to keep straight. Though Ray and Cheal were driving from the tees into the dark unknown, and their balls were lost to sight directly they left the club, the strange conditions seemed to make little difference to their play.

One of the committee would indicate the line, and then away shot the ball, like a bullet, into the fog. Then on we all walked to where the drive ought to go, and duly found the balls lying in the middle of the pretty every time, 200 yards or more from the tee. The Fulford greens are very small, and the grass was so soaked with wet that there was practically no run, yet after the drive, time after time, with iron or mashie, Ray would pitch a deadly second on the little square, hidden far away in the fog. Or when his second happened to be off the green, a perfectly judged run would leave the ball close to the pin. Ray's putts approaching and putting gave him an easy victory over Cheal, who was not up to his usual form in this respect. The Ganton man, in spite of wet, fog and ignorance of the links did each of his rounds in 37, a total of 74 for the eighteen holes. Having seen what a very small influence the extremely unpleasant conditions had on the professors of the game, I and another man played a round in the afternoon, to find out what effect the fog would have on our modest powers. This personal test proved most useful in enabling us to realise the extraordinary difficulties a really first-class man can surmount, without apparent effort. The long game is not so very much harder in a fog, than at other times, when one knows a course really well. Playing one hole, however, we both mistook our position, and instead of going between a pair of bunkers, went outside the righthand one into the rough. We also two or three times quite failed to locate the position of the green, when making long approaches, and pitched our balls wide away to a flank. This trouble did not affect the professionals, who had the green's position always carefully indicated, and the approximate distance told them.

It was in the short approaches that we realised our deficiencies. The flag would be visible in a misty sort of way, and in spite of our intimate knowledge of the course, we again and again were quite unable to judge whether the pin was thirty or fifty yards away.

How, under the circumstances, Ray was able again and again to bring off his deadly runners, I am quite unable to say. To the moderate player it looks almost like inspiration.

A great deal is made of "timing," as it is called, as an important factor in long driving. I am inclined, however, to think that long driving is principally the result of very hard hitting. I noticed that the head of Ray's driver is travelling at very high speed, at the moment it meets the ball; it was also very easy to see that all the weight of the player's great shoulders went into the stroke. Curiously enough my opponent in the fog was a man with very much the same physique as Ray. He also gets a good deal of his fifteen or sixteen stone into the ball, and can send away particularly hefty shots from his heavy iron.

Hockey.

THE ALL INDIA TOURNAMENT.

THE twelfth annual All-India Hockey tournament was held at Allahabad last week and attracted fourteen entries this year—a smaller number than usual. Three games in the first round were put through on the opening day—Monday, the 22nd ultimo. The Naini Tal Volunteers beat the Royal Irish Rifles easily by 6 goals to nil and the United Provinces Police whipped the Connaught Rangers by 8 goals to 2. The remaining game, that between the King's Own Regiment and the cupholders—the North-Western Railway Volunteers—was a closely contested affair. The Volunteer team could not get going and towards the end of the game when they were a goal down their shooting was most erratic. At length a few minutes before time they managed to net the ball and time was called with the score one all. In the extra period the Volunteers pressed throughout and scoring three more goals without response won by 4 to 1. Three more games were played on the 23rd and two of these were very well contested: the other match, between the E. I. R. Volunteers and the Allahabad Gymkhana, was most uninteresting. The Railway lads' matters all their own way and ran out victorious by 9 goals to nil. The 4th Worcesters met the Allahabad Volunteers and a really good game was witnessed. Play was exciting throughout and at full time each team had a goal to its credit. The game was resumed and the Worcesters scored again, but in spite of great efforts the Volunteers were unable to equalise and were beaten 2 to 1. The match between the 2nd Royal Berkshire Regiment and the Royal Irish Regiment was a very even display, the Berkshires ultimately winning by 3 goals to 1.

The second round was played off on Wednesday, the 24th ultimo, when four games were decided and some fine play was witnessed. The United Provinces Police met the Naini Tal Volunteers—as they did in the first round last year—and this time the Police were again defeated, the score being 3-1 in favour of Naini Tal. The winners did not impress one as being quite such a good team as last year. They shewed none of that brilliant forward play of yore but their defence was magnificent. The Police gave them a good game but had to acknowledge defeat by 3 goals to 1. The N.-W. R. Volunteers ran rings round the 32nd Co. R. G. A., scoring freely all along the line and coming out on top by 9 goals to 1. The 2nd Royal Berkshires met the Royal Scots and a hard struggle was witnessed. The Scots were let down owing to poor combination but they played a strenuous game nevertheless and were beaten by the only goal scored in the match. The remaining engagement was between the 4th Worcesters and the E. I. R. Volunteers. The teams were well matched and put up a great game, the score at the finish being 2-1 in favour of the soldiers. Half-time found the score one all, but on resuming the Worcesters netted again and in spite of repeated efforts the Volunteers were unable to get on terms

The semi-finals were played last Thursday. The match between the holders and the Naini Tal Volunteers attracting the biggest crowd of spectators. They were rewarded by a splendid game and a first-class display of hockey. The teams were at the top of their form and did their utmost—the only goal of the game being scored early in the first half by the North-Western Railway as the result of a corner. Comparing the teams there was little to choose between the attacking lines and the defence was sound, though while the N.-W. R. men all helped in defending their citadel the Naini Tal team were content to rely on their goal-keeper, and here a special word of praise should be said for Gabriel, their custodian, who gave a splendid exhibition between the posts But it was at half that the N.-W. R. men had the pull, their second line breaking up attacks and feeding the attack in masterly style. The game moved up and down after the goal had been scored but neither team gained any material advantage and the N.-W. R. Volunteers qualified for the final. The other semi final game, between the 4th Worcesters and the 2nd Royal Berkshires, was not a very inspiriting affair. The Worcesters were the better team and might perhaps have won by a bigger margin than the 4-2 victory standing to their credit.

The final brought together the N.-W. R. Volunteers and the 4th Worcesters—the same teams as contested the last stage last year. Saturday's game was most sensational and excitement reigned supreme throughout The Worcesters who had made but a mediocre showing in the penultimate round were a markedly improved team in the final. They played with a dash with which they had not been credited and gave a capital display against their formidable opponents. The Volunteers were first to get going and Lakin opened their account, but the Worcesters were not troubled a whit and shortly after Gordon equalised. Fast play followed and Crunden again gave the Volunteers a lead but it was not for long, Pelly putting the teams on terms. The Volunteers attacked vigorously but could not get through and just before the interval Wright got away and netting the ball gave the Worcesters a lead. On resuming the Volunteers pressed hard: Crunden sent in a shot which Foreman saved in sensational fashion but he conceded a corner in doing so and from the hit on Crunden equalised. Fast play followed and each team put through again before the close of the game, Leedham scoring for the regulars and Holloway for the Volunteers. Extra time was unproductive and the game ended in a draw 4 all.

The drawn game was replayed on Monday in the presence of a very big crowd and another good game was witnessed. The Worcesters did all the attacking at the start and were very nearly through on more than one occasion. Then the Volunteers got going and the Worcesters' goal had several narrow escapes. Nothing, however, was scored in the first half. On changing ends play was maintained at a very high standard. Both teams were at the top of their form and a most exciting game resulted. The Volunteers made repeated efforts and after several fruitless attempts they were rewarded and succeeded in scoring the only goal of the match. The Worcesters tried all they knew to equalise but without success, the North-Western Railway Volunteers winning the tournament for the second year in succession. Lady Knox presented the trophy to the winning team who also received a smaller cup which they will keep.

Boxing.

BOXING IN THE ARMY.

I.

BOXING calls forth and develops to a higher degree than any other sport all those qualities which form the character of a soldier, for pluck, fortitude, and chivalry are the very essence of boxing. It is more than a sport with our race, it is a national inheritance. It is one of the Army's greatest assets, a valuable and ready means by which the characters of our soldiers can be moulded, and the highest qualities, both moral and physical, be instilled.

A sport of such immense value should be put to its fullest use. And yet in how many regiments is boxing systematically conducted and encouraged? In the regiment which do boast of boxing clubs, what is the percentage of men who take an active part in the boxing meetings? The answers to these questions would go to prove that boxing is not sufficiently encouraged, and is not established as a sport throughout the Service. By reason of the inborn love which our men have for it, and the ready means by which it can be practised, boxing should be the most popular sport in the Army. In many regiments it is not for lack of encouragement that it does not thrive. How many times is a boxing club formed and the men given every opportunity to join it? At first there is great enthusiasm, many join the club, and the boxing room becomes a scene of strenuous practice. But gradually the enthusiasm cools until finally, except in a few isolated cases, all interest seems to die out and boxing relapses into a dormant state in the regiment. In other regiments where boxing seems to flourish it is in reality confined to a few prominent boxers whose frequently reported achievements in the ring give an unwarranted reputation for boxing proficiency to the regiment in general. It is, indeed, in but a very few instances that it can be said that the majority of the men in a regiment take an active interest in boxing.

There must be some strong reason, then, why boxing, with so many conditions in its favour, is not more universal throughout the Army. The reason is that it is regarded too much as a money-making business and not as a sport. The true spirit has been killed. Regimental boxing meetings, instead of embracing competitions and contests for the encouragement of all classes of boxers in a regiment, are too often arranged solely for the benefit of the prominent boxers of the garrison. Meetings are frequently held in which not one of the contestants belongs to the regiment holding the meeting! Meetings of this kind are held for one of two reasons, either with the object of making money or for the purpose of bolstering up an ancient reputation for sportsmanship.

Call to mind some of those meetings and the tedious 10-round contests, arranged between men whose skill would scarcely maintain the interest of the spectators during four rounds. By no stretch of imagination can it be said that such meetings encourage boxing or advance its cause in the Service. The true sporting regiment is one which endeavours to make every man take up and benefit by boxing. To this end it does not attempt to bribe by offering large money prizes, but it places boxing in the same sporting category as football and other games, and treats it as such. It trains its men to box for the highest of prizes—for honour of their regiment or company. It holds series of competitions for beginners, the winners of which are presented with cups or medals, and "good losers" are recognised and duly encouraged. By these means all the finest qualities which make up the true sport of boxing are called forth and developed.

To make boxing a popular sport, and to keep it wholesome and clean in a regiment, will require considerable perseverance, tact, and judgment. The successful attainment of this end will depend mainly on the energy of the committee, the good influence of the boxing club, and the frequency with which meetings are held. With all the will and enthusiasm in the world, officers frequently find themselves at a loss when striving to popularise boxing in the regiment, and it is with a view to helping them that the following practical suggestions are offered.

THE COMMITTEE.

The success of a sport in a regiment depends on the energy and capability of its controlling committee, and in no sport more so than boxing. This especially applies when boxing is first introduced as a sport, for it means that the majority of the men will first have to be educated up to the idea. With the knowledge of this fact, the committee should be composed of only such members who will work with a whole-hearted energy for the attainment of this object. The General Committee should be made up of a President and Vice-President, who shall be officers, a senior non-commissioned officer as battalion representative, and a representative from each company—the president, vice-president, and battalion representative to constitute the Executive Committee. It will be the duty of the Executive Committee to organise and carry out the boxing meetings; to arrange all contests and competitions, and to select the regimental boxing team. It will elect the members to the boxing club, be responsible for the club room, and appoint the boxing instructor. It will also take action in all cases of unsportsmanlike behaviour or misconduct.

The company representatives will assist the Executive Committee by encouraging the men of their companies to practise boxing in their company rooms, and by inducing them to enter for the competitions held during the meetings. More than this, they should by force of example endeavour to instil all the true instincts of sport into the men of their company. The tone and success of boxing will greatly depend on the keenness and loyalty with which the company representatives work in its interests.

BOXING CLUB.

Almost as essential as a capable committee to the success of boxing in a regiment is a well organised and well run club. It is a valuable medium by which not only the art of boxing, but the ideals of true sport are upheld and disseminated throughout the regiment. In electing members, care should be taken to select only those men who prove themselves to be genuine sportsmen and keen boxers. To be elected a member of the club should be considered a privilege and an honour. It is a mistake to allow any and every candidate for membership. This only has the effect of lowering the tone of the club and of overcrowding the boxing room. Winners, runners-up and good losers of competitions, if they prove themselves good sportsmen, should be elected members. The names of those men elected should be inserted in the sports notices in "Orders," and posted up on the sports notice board, and in the boxing room. Members should have the privilege of using the boxing room for training and practice. In the event of an instructor being engaged, they should be eligible to receive boxing tuition. Members should pay no subscription and should be admitted to all regimental boxing meetings free of charge. These should constitute the benefits of membership but on the other hand, a member should be expelled from the club without hesitation for any unsportsmanlike act. Seconds, dressers, and ring-orderlies should be selected from members of the club.

The boxing room, to be used only by members of the club, should be fitted with the necessary training apparatus. A ring should be fixed up in which men can practise foot work, shadow fighting, etc. In the event of the ring being used for actual bouts, the floor should be covered with some soft material. Ordinary blankets tacked down with sheets sewn together and stretched over them make a capital and effective covering for the floor of a ring. In the boxing room, besides training apparatus, there should be a supply of rubber shoes, "shorts," sweaters, rubbing gloves, towels, and embrocation. The supply of the latter is generally an item of considerable expense to the boxing club. The following is a recipe for an excellent embrocation at less than a quarter the usual cost:—One pint vinegar (white), one pint turpentine, one pint methylated spirit, six eggs (yolks only). The yolks of the eggs and the turpentine should first be carefully mixed, then add the methylated spirit, and finally the vinegar. The cost of the above is about 2s.

A reliable non-commissioned officer should be put in charge of the boxing room, one who can instruct in boxing if possible, but this is of secondary importance. His first duty will be to see that no kit is taken away, that the embrocation is not wasted, that the room is kept scrupulously clean, and that all damaged gear is at once repaired. He must be present in the room during the hours that it is opened to the members of the club. He must report any irregularity to the president of the committee. If there is any likelihood of the room being overcrowded members should be divided into sections and each section allotted a fixed period for practice.

A good and hard-working instructor should be engaged to give lessons in boxing to the members of the club. In selecting an instructor, first and foremost, make sure that he is "straight" and a clean boxer; consider next his capabilities as an instructor rather than his boxing record. A first-class fighter is often a dismal failure as a boxing instructor, and lacks such essential qualities as patience, perseverance, and energy. Having decided on an instructor engage him to visit the room once or twice a week according to the number of members in the club. Divide the members into classes according to their capabilities as boxers, and let them attend for instruction in relays. It is a great mistake to overcrowd the classes. The men who have benefited by lessons in the club room should be induced in their turn to give instruction to the men of their companies who do not happen to be members of the boxing club. This system of expert instruction has better results, and is less costly than having a boxing expert actually living with the regiment. Members should not be permitted to box one another in the club room during practice hours. This usually leads to men receiving unnecessary punishment, and so are apt to lose interest in boxing. A man may not mind receiving punishment occasionally, say, during a competition, but to be continually battered about has a deterrent effect on the keenness of the pluckiest of men.

The cost of a properly organised boxing club should be practically nil, as the expenses incurred in the boxing room, the purchase and upkeep of gloves and other kit, the supply of embrocation, the washing of towels, etc. and the fees of the instructor are, as a rule, more than covered by the receipts from well arranged and well organised boxing meetings.—Army and Navy Gazette.

SNOW LEOPARD CUBS.

A pair of fine young Snow Leopard Cubs were shipped by the Society on Tuesday last by the "Scindia" for the London Zoological Gardens. The animals were almost fully grown and were perfectly tame. They have been presented by Captain D. G. Oliver, Srinagar, Kashmir.

NEW MEMBERS REQUIRED.

The Secretary mentioned that at the present moment the Society has only had about 110 members in Bombay out of a total of 1,500 members. He thought this number was considerably less than formerly and hoped that local members as well as up-country ones would try and induce others to join the Society.

MAMMAL SURVEY.

Up to now 767 specimens had been collected by Mr. Crump in Khandesh, Cutch, the Deccan and the Central Provinces and 503 specimens collected by Mr. Shortridge (in 2 months) in the Dharwar District. All of these had been forwarded to the British Museum for working out and the first report on them would appear in the next Journal. Some Rs. 28,000 had been collected, but about Rs. 7,000 has already been spent, as the initial expenses were necessarily heavy and the Committee hoped that members would continue to support this fund, which was doing such good work. Already one new genus had been found and two new species, the descriptions of which would appear in the Journal.

The following papers were then read :—1. "Some notes on queens of Termites," by the Rev J. Asmuth, S. J. 2. "A note on Trichosanthes dioica," by Lieut.-Col. K. R. Kirtikar, I.M.S. (Retd.)

DOG BREAKING.

No good sport is to be had, or at least thoroughly enjoyed, without a good dog.

The best sport with the gun, and the highest enjoyment of it, is with the best dogs.

It is as easy for a sportsman to select a good dog as it is to select a good horse; and the good qualities are as essential and valuable in the one as in the other. Remember that a well-bred, well-broken, and clever dog costs no more, either for keep or tax, than an ill-broken mongrel.

Dog breaking, to be entirely successful, must be conducted on rational principles. Much experience is not necessary; but an acquaintance with the true nature and disposition of dogs in general will be of great service.

Neither is it by any means necessary that the breaker should be a good shot. But it is indispensable that he should be good natured, patient, and entirely free from irascibility.

The dog breaker who uses most kindness, and is most sparing and mild in the nature of his chastisement towards the dog, always succeeds best. The violent, severe, and impatient bully never succeeds in turning out a perfectly trained dog. The utmost he attains is to make a dog stand in terror of him; so that for fear of having some of its bones broken, or being beaten to death, it runs away on the least intimation of having done wrong; and probably puts up covey after covey as it races across the field. It is a true test, on a dog running away in this manner, that it has been badly trained and beaten. No dog which has been properly trained and mildly and judiciously chastised would do so.

It is wanton cruelty and ignorant folly to beat a dog at any time, unless it knows why it is punished. It is a well timed chastisement, not the severity of it, which ensures obedience.

Faults may be reproved without being punished. Excessive flogging makes the dog hunt in fear, and with a broken spirit; whereas the bold and dauntless spirited dog is the sportsman's pride and delight; and the courageous dog is of all others the one to hunt with most success and least fatigue. Unless a dog hunts cheerfully and willingly, entering with all its heart into the spirit of the sport its services are of not much use.

It is true that some dogs require rather more chastisement than others; whilst some may be broken without a lash.

All dogs should be trained as much as possible by dumb animals; and this system of training is specially applicable to the instruction of pointers and setters.

A talkative trainer spoils the dog, though it be ever so well bred; because it becomes so accustomed to the voice of its trainer that it will obey none other than verbal signals. The more care and trouble the trainer takes in teaching the dog by silent signals, the more valuable and useful will it be when in pursuit of sport.

It is unreasonable to suppose that birds will lie if they will hear your voice. Therefore, "Don't talk to your dogs when in expectation of finding game."

A dog, in its very nature, will soon discover from its dumb trainer that, to approach game, silence must be observed. Retrievers which have been accustomed to attend sportsmen who go wildfowl shooting, are particularly sagacious as to their duty, and that of their master, observing the very strictest silence; and when stalking wildfowl, a clever dog will crawl along with belly touching the ground, on a signal to do so by its master, who probably has to do likewise.

There is no better age at which to commence the training of a dog than at seven months old; and all the initiatory lessons had best be given in a yard, on the premises where the dog has been brought up. The trainer will find it of immense advantage to devote about 20 minutes daily, for three or four weeks, to the preliminary lessons, before taking the dog out in the fields in search for game.

These should be given when the trainer is alone with the dog; there must be nothing to divert its attention from the trainer.

Begin by practising the dog, when hungry, to seek about the yard for pieces of food, which you have unobservedly placed in concealment; accompanying the dog in its searches, encouraging it to hunt for the food by the motions of your hand; and induce the dog to fancy you are looking for something. Always show pleasure and satisfaction when the dog finds the food. Do not allow it to eat the food immediately; take it in your hand, look at it, show it to the dog, let him smell it two or three times, and then give it to him to eat. Place a piece sometimes on a stool or chair so as to induce the dog to hold up his head. The higher pointers and setters carry their noses the better, because they find their game quicker; and the birds lie better to such dogs than to those which carry their noses close to the ground. Never deceive the dog by encouraging it to hunt for a bit of food, unless there really is a piece secreted; and never allow the dog to give up until it has found it. This will go far in giving the animal the early confidence in you as possessing a superior knowledge as to where there is game to be found or not, when in the fields.

Having taught the puppy to seek for and find the hidden pieces of food, the use of the check cord must then be resorted to, for the purpose of teaching it to stand firm, and stop instantly to the signal "to-ho!" This important lesson is taught in the following manner: having buckled a soft leather collar around the puppy's neck, attach thereto a cord about fifteen or twenty yards in length, the end of which you hold firmly in your hand; then encourage the dog, as before, to hunt for a piece of food; and just as its nose is being tickled with the savor of tidbit, call out "to-ho!" at the same instant pulling the cord sharply, so as to bring the dog to a standstill; at which you must keep him whilst you walk slowly up to him; after which allow him to advance and eat the tidbit he has found. In a short time it will be unnecessary to use the cord, and by simply saying "to-ho!" the dog may be instantly brought to a standstill.

Never throw pieces of food to puppies; always give it to them with the hand, and make them take it gently.

Teaching a dog to drop to the hand, is another of the first and most important lessons in the instruction of pointers and setters. By "dropping to the hand" is meant to "down charge"; or crouch to the signal of holding up the hand high above the head. This may be taught thoroughly in the yard, before ever taking the dog out in the fields. The most simple manner of teaching it is by holding up a whip, and calling out "down charge!" Then insist on the dog lying still while you walk away to another part of the yard; if he attempts to move, tie him to a stake, repeating your orders to "down charge." After a very few lessons, the stake and whip may be dispensed with; and the dog, by further practice, will crouch to the signal of holding up the hand, and remain so until encouraged to "hold up!" The use of the gun will be of advantage in this lesson; taking the greatest care not to frighten the dog with a loud report, or by using the gun offensively.

Teach the dog also to obey your whistle; a single note meaning "attention"; and a continued whistle that he is to come to you. The single note should be given when the dog's attention is occupied in hunting for the secreted bits of food; and on the instant of the dog looking towards you in obedience to the whistle, direct him further by some dumb signal, either to hunt to the right or left, or to "down charge."

Never use sentences in speaking to a dog; one word only is best; more than two should never be used. Use neither spikes nor spiked collars in dog-breaking; they are brutal instruments.

Having carefully inculcated the initiatory lessons alluded to, the trainer may then take the dog out in the fields; being, as before, quite alone with it. He will now require a longer check cord than that used in the yard; if forty yards in length so much the better; and the lightest, most useful, and durable cord for the purpose is that which sailors call "rat-line."

The check-cord cannot be dispensed with in dog breaking; it is the best and only assistant the trainer requires.

The dog should now be taken to a spot where you know there is a covey of birds; and there encouraged to hunt. If a well bred dog, it will find and point them; and if so, walk up to the dog and pat him, then encourage him to advance steadily, and on the birds rising, instantly check him with the cord, if he attempts to run in, by pulling him back on his haunches; but do not use the whip for the first or second attempt, nor until you find he cannot be broken of attemping to run in without using it. After you have succeeded in this important lesson, pat and reward him with a bit of food every time he does it perfectly.

Remember, also, that it is a golden rule in the instruction of a dog, to drag him back to the spot where he ought to have remained; whether for the purpose of pointing the game, or in obedience to the signal to "down charge."

Having carried the course of training thus far, you may now allow an assistant to accompany you; giving him the check cord, while you use the gun and kill a few quail; and in all probability the dog will ever after take the greatest delight in hunting for game. Be strict and prompt in checking any overeagerness or unsteadiness and take plenty of time in reloading after having killed a bird; and then allow the dog to find it and mouth it tenderly.

The only troublesome thing to teach in a pointer or setter is quartering the ground; this requires perseverance and much practice. The trainer must teach the dog to cross and recross the fields to the simple signal of waving the hand to right or left; and to do this effectually, at first he will have to walk with the dog, up wind, crossing and recrossing just as is required but in time he will find it less and less necessary to do these walking; whenever the dog skips over any portion of the ground without hunting, endeavour to make him, by signals, go and hunt it; and if he refuses or does not understand you, go yourself, good naturedly, calling and encouraging the dog to rehunt the field.

A well distributed and judicious range is a great accomplishment in a good dog, but difficult to teach.

A dog having once acquired the habit of running in, it is difficult to break him of it; though in general it arises through his having been shot over by a bad shot or inexperienced sportsman, who, the moment he shoots a bird, rushes forward himself, before reloading, to secure it, a proceeding that has been the ruin of many a splendid young dog.

A commendable feature about Lemco is its marvellous "keeping properties." Even in the tropics opened jars keep absolutely fresh and pure. This phenomenon is not due to preservatives, but to beef purity and perfect concentration. Food reliability reaches its topmost point in Lemco. Replace the cork to keep out dust.

LEMCO, Thames House, London, E.C.

Many young sportsmen, on wounding a rabbit, are apt, in their eagerness to capture it, to encourage a pointer or retriever to chase it. Such an encouragement is also ruinous to the dog; because, after once being incited to chase, the dog will do so every time you miss. Such is the nature and instinct of the dog for chasing, that the steadiest and most perfectly trained dog may be ruined by one indiscretion of the kind.

Pointers, setters and retrievers should never be allowed either to chase, run in, or lacerate the game. A retriever may be allowed to 'road'' a wounded running bird; but the trainer must be very cautious never to allow the dogs to chase a rabbit.

All dogs have a natural propensity to run after rabbits; which must be instantly restrained in such dogs as are trained to the gun.

Never use or break a young pointer or setter to rabbit shooting; it is certain ruin. When the dog is tired, do not hunt him, it decreases his zeal for sport and injuries his constitution to encourage sport to weary limbs.

Let every sportsman who uses setters remember that they require water almost every hour, especially during hot weather, or they cannot endure the fatigue of a hard day's work.

A well broken dog seldom requires a word to be addressed to it; a dumb signal, a wave of the hand or motion of the head is sufficient.

If you want to catch the dog's atention in the field, simply whistle gently, one note only; and on the dog raising his head, make your signal.

Never interrupt a dog when it appears to be on the scent of birds.

Remember, too, that, although the dog be ever so well broken, if the young sportsman does not know how to hunt it and insists on its keeping to the rules of instruction inculcated by the trainer, it will soon be taking liberties; and if these are uncorrected, the dog is soon spoilt.

A thoroughbred dog which has been accustomed to work for a good shot, never works willingly for a bad shot, after discovering that he seldom kills anything. Such a dog has often been known to run away off the field, and endeavour to find its old master.

A sportsman should never allow his dogs to jump or fawn upon him; such a liberty has been the cause of many an accident with the gun.

MOOSE STALKING WITHOUT A GUIDE.

OUR hunting grounds in the county of Charlotte, New Brunswick, were shut in by high mountain ridges, and practically inaccessible to horse and wagon. Until forty years ago there was a heavy growth of fir and spruce, and ancient residents tell of the extensive lumber operations in the old days. The historic Saxby gale did much towards making the locality what it is to-day, while forest fires have completed the work of devastation. In the swales the second growth of fir and spruce has sprung up, but elsewhere nothing ventures above the soil save scrubby birch and moosewood. Thus the conditions for big game life are ideal—plenty of cover in the swales and an unlimited amount of food upon the elevated portions. And the game is there, too—moose, deer and bears in plenty. The section to which I have reference embraces some thousands of acres, and is reached by rail either from St. John or St. Stephen, where passage is taken to Bonny river. The last two miles of the journey is over a road of inconceivable and unforgetable roughness, to a clubhouse on the shore of Red Rock lake, a sheet of water one and a half miles long by a mile broad. Here the fatigues of travel are forgotten in the prevailing atmosphere of rest and quiet.

My hunting companion and I, being "residents," were not hampered by the autocratic rulings of a guide, and so felt the full elation of freedom and independence as, one bright October morning, we set out for the clubhouse where we were to temporarily take up our abode. Shortly after our arrival in camp rain-clouds gathered, threatening a downpour every minute. Not deterred, however, about two o'clock we rowed to the lower end of the lake, and an omen for a successful hunt was vouchsafed when, upon landing, I fired at a partridge strutting not more than ten paces distant—and missed. This oracular manifestation was confirmed, a mile or so further on, by a wild-cat furtively vanishing from the path, before a rifle could be raised in protest. After following a path about two miles a turn to the right was made, which led us over a ridge where fresh moose signs were numerous. At the end of the ridge, just by way of making a noise, I put a "caller" to my lips and sounded the trysting note. It was at the close of the rutting season and we did not expect an answer. In a few moments, however, from the scattered hackmatacks and spruces in a little swale, the big, ungainly form of a bull emerged. He took a precursory look around, and then fell to browsing. Evidently the call did not appeal to him. He was much too far away for us to venture a shot; stalking was our only chance, and that would prove most difficult, by reason of the splendid natural endowments against surprise possessed by the animal, and cultivated to an ideal degree through constant exercise.

With a stiff breeze blowing, it is not difficult to approach a moose near enough for a shot; but when the air is heavy and still every atom of patience must be called into requisition. In this particular instance there was but a faint breath of air, as could be seen by the fitful stirring of the treetops. A hurried council of war was held and a plan of action mapped out. By carefully retreating and circling we could approach up-wind, our objective point being a hill, the top of which would be within range.

After half an hour's work we craned our necks over the hilltop. The moose had gone down wind about a hundred yards farther, so that he was near enough now for a shot. Rawley elevated his sights to 200 yards, and at the report the bull threw up his head and listened, as yet quite sound in body. At the second report he wheeled completely around, turning in the space of a few feet, as though mystified as to the direction from which the new fly had come. The next shot was more effective, for he stumbled to his knees, but was up again in an instant, though still doubtful which way to flee. A couple more bullets decided him, however, and away he went, disappearing over the top of the ridge, while two excited individuals breathlessly stumbled along in pursuit. He was next caught sight of through some sparsely growing firs; the rifles whanged again, and Rawley, who had had an unobstructed view, testified to the bull's demise. Still skeptical, I ventured to suggest a detour around the bushes, so that we might meet him and get a chance for another shot. Rawley had been right, however, for we found the moose dead—shot just back of the ear. Instincts of a savage ancestry awoke in our breasts, and we grinned as we shook hands over the fallen game. The spread of horns was fifty inches.

The rain came down in torrents that night and all next morning, so that we were housed. About eleven o'clock the downpour ceased, and by noon weather conditions were such as to warrant our going out. At half-past one o'clock we left the clubhouse and repeated the row and walk of the previous day, quartering the ground diligently, but without avail. After two hours of careful work we found that it was almost time for turning back, and it was suggested that we go around a big hill about half a mile away. This being agreed upon the advance was continued. Exceeding care was now exercised, as fresh signs were in evidence. Every stump that was black enough was narrowly scrutinized; and presently down in a hollow, a stump that we had been gazing at for some time raised its head, showing a good set of antlers—all of which seemed perfectly natural and entirely satisfactory.

This was my moose, as Rawley had the one of yesterday. With deliberation, made more deliberate by the calm voice of Rawley in my ear—he was not doing the shooting—I waited for a side shot. In a moment the bull turned and I had my chance. Unsoathed, he threw up his head and listened, but at the next report dropped on his knees, just as the one had the day before. He did not seem to be able to locate the danger point, but moved about in an undecided way, showing that, however clever he might be in placing to a nicety the call of the cow, he was very much astray when it came to determining the exact position of this unknown danger. At last he set off up wind, his nose telling him that that direction at least was a safe one, while we played a quickstep with the rifles till he disappeared in a growth of small birches that filled a narrow depression between two hills, and from which he could not emerge without coming into view. After a few minutes, as nothing happened, Rawley made a circuit down wind to chase him out, while I watched the only possible avenue of egress. At last, when I had begun to fear that Rawley had lost himself, two shots came in quick succession, then a wheezy coughing of the moose, followed by a stentorian command to 'Harry up!" I got there in time to see the moose fall. Through some misunderstanding, Rawley had not attempted to start him along, but had been watching him for some time waiting for me, as the bull stood fighting against the dread weakness that was overpowering him; then, out of pity, he shot him. He had a better formed set of antlers than the one of the day before, and the spread was greater, being 53 inches. A horse could not be taken into that country, for deep bogs and watercourses, tangles and blow-downs obtruded impregnable barriers. The sport then was over—hard work was about to begin. We sighed as our imaginations led us step by step over the many difficulties. If you have "been there," to use a favourite "Recreationism," you know that, like skinning a grizzly bear, dressing a bull moose is work for strong and willing arms.

Bright and early the next morning we set out to bring in the heads. When we reached the brow of the hill from which the first moose had been shot, on the opposing hillside loomed a familiar form, but the distance was too great to see if it were cow or bull. I ventured a call, however, which only drew a passing glance in our direction. Suddenly we noted the motionless form of a bull at the edge of the woods on our left, about 200 yards away. There was a ravine between, its sides cobbling with the charred trunks of fir and spruce. After deliberating for a time the bull moved slowly towards us, but kept up-wind. At last he stopped directly to windward of us, and would not come nearer—about seventy-five yards—though all the tricks we knew were resorted to. The wisdom of his action was apparent at a moment's thought. He had placed himself in direct air communication with the supposed cow, which would not fail to have scented him, and made her presence known. We grunted like a bull, gave the squealing grunt of the cow, cracked branches and insulted him generally; these tactics failing, we were moved to address him vigorously but quietly in the Anglo-Saxon tongue. At last becoming disgusted, he went off up-wind, and we in another direction.

Incidents such as this raise the question as to the acuteness of the hearing of a moose in unraveling sounds in imitation of those made by its kind. My personal belief is they can be hoodwinked without difficulty. The unfailing source of analysis is the nose, and even with regard to that, how far the scent of man will carry is still a matter of conjecture. I have passed 100 yards to windward of a bull without startling him, while moose fifty or seventy yards above me have been alarmed, probably by an air current contrary to the prevailing direction of the wind. Velocity of the wind, position of the hunter—on the same plane or a higher elevation—and the condition of the atmosphere, must doubtless be taken into account. This, however, is certain: a moose cannot scent a man fifteen paces off, if the wind is blowing steadily from the moose.

The day was gloriously bright, but a stiff wind was blowing, which made our progress through the short bushes moderately quiet. We determined to go to the top of a high hill, where an extended view of the country could be had, in the hope of seeing more moose. Before reaching the summit we saw two upon the hillside directly above the carcass of the last moose shot, and at that distance they appeared to be very large. They were near the brow of the hill, so that a shot with the camera was within the realm of the possible. Rawley was to remain behind and signal me their exact position when I came in sight on the crest of the hill. Making a wide detour in order to approach up-wind, after half an hour's labour I reached the top. Far away Rawley waved the handkerchief, while breathlessly I crept forward. At last I stood up and looked around, but could see no sign of the moose, and so inferred they must have lain down. The surmise was right, for when I had gone a few feet further I heard a low snort, and a young cow got up, not more than fifteen yards distant, and walked down the hill, looking from time to time apprehensively behind. A bull rose to his feet as she passed, and seeing that something was amiss, followed. I hurried back over the hill, hoping they might pass near enough for a snap-shot, but they circled too far below.

Rawley then met me at the carcass of my moose, and in about thirty minutes we had the neck-skin and head off. Then began the hardest work of the whole hunting trip. I tied a piece of mooseskide over my shoulders, hair side down, making a fairly easy pad. Later I concluded I could never have carried the head out without its aid. With the brow on my shoulder, the nose lying close to my neck and an antler in either hand, I found carrying the head a comparatively easy matter. The weight was thus placed almost in the centre of the body, and when one shoulder grew tired, a very slight effort would raise the nose over my head to the other shoulder. These heads we carried for nearly five miles, and over the roughest country imaginable. Occasionally one sees the photograph of a hunter carrying out the head, and it seems simplicity itself; but ten to one the man posed for the picture, and never carried a head in that graceful posture five yards.

After a strenuous half-hour—through thickly growing birches and tangled alders, which caught the antlers and held one till by main force they were wrenched through; up steep hillsides and over fallen logs, at last Rawley's moose was reached. That head was got ready and off we started again.

I now had the opportunity of enjoying Rawley's endeavours, as he had mine a short while before. Our progress was necessarily slow, but abounded in incidents that relieved the tedium of the way. Once, hearing a disturbance in the underbrush behind me, I turned in time to see my fellow-labourer backing out on his hands and knees from under his moose head, a concealed root having surreptitiously laid him low. We reached the lake at length weary, but gratified with our day's work.

Next day we went back after the steak, which, for greater convenience in carrying, we put in bags. This work was much easier than that of the day before, though the results were disastrous, as we both caught severe colds, the meat being as lumps of ice on the back of our necks. But in spite of all the hardships, we shall do it next year—though it be far from New Brunswick—if opportunity offers, and the next, and the one following; for the lure of the woods is mighty and the zest of the hunt is strong.—H. SOMETHING WRONG.—An elocutionist was reciting Macaulay's "Battle of Ivry" and declined with intense military fervour the lines—

"A thousand spurs are striking deep,
A thousand spears in rest,
A thousand knights are pressing close Behind—"

when he was interrupted by a person in the gallery. "Hold hard, guv'nor!" he shouted. "Was them there knights one-legged ones, 'cos there's only one spur apiece, yer know?"

GIVING HIM THE HOOK.—"You will excuse me, madam," said little Binks to the fair lady at the reception, "but really I didn't catch your name." "How funny," said the lady. "It's Fish."

VISITOR—"That new maid of yours seems very nice and quiet." Mistress—"Yes, she's very quiet. She doesn't even disturb the dust when she's cleaning the room!"

"Is straightened circumstances, is he not?" "Yes. He confesses that it is about all he can do to keep the wolf out of the garage."

BIG GAME IN 1911.

DURING the year just past there has been no discovery, so far as big game are concerned, equal in importance and interest to that of the mountain nyala in 1910. It is true, indeed, that we have the new golden takin from Sheu-si, to which reference has been already made in our columns ; but this animal, although regarded by its describer as a new species, is really nothing more than a colour-phase of the Sze-chuen takin, and is therefore in no wise comparable in point of interest to the mountain nyala. Next, perhaps, in point of interest is the discovery that the klipspringer of certain parts of East Africa is distinguished from the other representatives of the species by the presence of horns in the female. In connection with this may be mentioned the discovery that klipspringers—which were previously supposed to be confined to South and East Africa—likewise inhabit the highlands of Nigeria.

As regards India, it may be noted that the ibex of Lahul has been described by Dr. Camerano as a new race under the name of Capra sibirica filippii.

Certain blue duikers from the Transvaal and Nyasaland have been described by Mr. R. C. Wroughton as representing a couple of new races of Cephalophus natalensis. Considerable discussion has taken place with regard to the colouring of the red kobs of the Bakr-el-Ghazal ; and it seems to be now pretty certain that there is a gradation from the wholly red Uganda kob to the black white-eared kob of the swamps of the Sobat ; the colouring of these antelopes being probably dependent, at least in some degree, on the nature of their habitat.

Dr. Brockman's letter with regard to gazelles existing without drinking on an island off Somaliland has been already referred to in our columns, and is of much interest.

In America Dr. Hornaday has shown that the musk-ox, whose westerly range was previously supposed to be limited by the Mackenzie River, existed at no very distant date in Alaska.

Passing to giraffes, it may be mentioned that Mr. Lydekker has named two new races—one from British East Africa, and the other from North-eastern Rhodesia.

In the deer tribe Mr. J. G. Millais has given a new name to the elk of the Yakutsk district, although it is by no means certain that this is distinct from the Siberian race named in honour of the Duchess of Bedford; and Mr. G. S. Miller has described the roebuck of Sheu-si as a new species, although it is undoubtedly nothing more than a local race of the Manchurian animal, which differs from the European species by the taller crowns of its cheek-teeth. A Bornean muntjac has been described as new by Mr. Lyon; while Mr. Hollister has separated the Corean muskdeer as a distinct species.

The unnecessary addition to the already overburdened list of varieties of the bontequagga (Burchell's zebra) by Professor Ridgeway's description of a sport as a distinct race is a matter for regret. On the other hand, Mr. Lydekker's recognition of the Somali representative of the black rhinoceros as a race characterised by well-marked peculiarities in the skull, seems to be founded on a sure basis of fact.

As regards carnivora, there is little of interest to record beyond Mr. R. J. Pocock's theory that the hunting-leopard, or hunting-chita, is more nearly related to the typical cats than are the lion, tiger, and leopard; the non-retractile nature of its claws being regarded as an acquired instead of a primitive feature. A protest may, however, be entered against the proposal to replace cynælurus, the well-established scientific name of the hunting-leopard by the quite unknown Acinonyx, on the ground of priority in publication;—a doctrine which some naturalists, especially American, appear to worship as a kind of fetish.

The exhibition of big game trophies during the past summer at the Crystal Palace has already been noticed at sufficient length in this journal, and the same is the case with regard to the publication of the catalogue of the English section of the Vienna Sports Exhibition of 1910.

With regard to other literature concerning big game it may be noted that Mr. Lydekker has published supplements to his well-known volumes on the Game Animals of India and of Africa, thus bringing those works well up to date. A new edition has also been published of Rowland Ward's "Records of Big Game."

Major Kennion's interesting volume on Seistan (which together with some of the undermentioned works, has been already reviewed in our columns) contains much information with regard to the gazelles and wild sheep of that country. Mr. Fletcher, in his fascinating volume of the Nilgiris and the Wynaad has given us much fresh and up-to-date information concerning the big game of the "Blue Hills," while Mr. Stebbing has done the same for that of the Himalaya.

As regards books on African big game and travel, it must suffice to mention Mr. Letcher's "Big Game Hunting in North-eastern Rhodesia" and the Duke of Mecklenburg's handsome quarto entitled "In the Heart of Africa."

While, as will be gathered from the above, there is nothing startling or of predominant interest to record, it will be evident that steady progress continues to be made towards the completion of our knowledge of the big-game faunas of the world.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

We much regret to learn of the illness of Lord Alington, who is, we hear, down with enteric fever. Lord Alington is the guest of H. E. the Viceroy and is at Government House, Calcutta: he is a brother of H. E. Lady Hardinge and another of Lord Alington's sisters is Lady Chelsea. We trust that his Lordship who is one of the best known figures in racing circles at Home will quickly recover.

The first Lord Alington owned amongst other horses, Match Box, who ran second to Ladas owned by Lord Rosebery in the Derby of 1894, and also Throstle, who won the Leger of that year.

The last received Australasian contains an article upon Stipendiary Stewards and what they ought to be and what they ought not to be, the occasion for our contemporary's leader being the appointment of a detective inspector of police to be a stipendiary steward of the Tasmanian T. C. We believe—and in fact our contemporary tells us so—that in the Colonies they consider that a stipendiary's duties should be those of a racecourse Sherlock Holmes and that he should be for ever upon the trail of the wrong-doer. In a certain degree we consider that this is a correct conception of the duties of the steward, whether he be a paid official or not, for the controlling authorities are there to see that racing is kept clean and that those who run their horses dishonestly and defraud the public should be punished. At the same time the stipendiary is not primarily a policeman, but is appointed because he is a man whose racing experience entitles him to be considered a specialist and in order that he may aid the honorary official by his advice and stand behind the chair, an added power to be consulted in cases of difficulty, or in the thousand and one dilemmas that crop up in the direction of the affairs of a big racing organisation. The Honorary Steward, and we will speak particularly of this class of official in India, is usually a busy man of affairs, who can ill afford the time he so ungrudgingly bestows upon the conduct of his office, and the principal compelling cause which induced the C. T. C. and W. I. T. C. to appoint stipendiary stewards was this. It was therefore decided to obtain the aid of experts and to constitute them a consulting body whose suggestions and reports would be acted upon by the honorary body. It was not, however, the scheme to make these stipendiaries "detectives." We do not say that there is not a good deal of work that falls to the lot of the stipendiary that is not of the nature of detective work and there is, of course, a good deal that a stipendiary is asked to do that the honorary official does not in the ordinary course of events touch. For instance, there are often times when the peculiar manner in which a horse travels in the betting market is a matter that should come within the purview of the stipendiary and with which he should make himself acquainted. The Honorary Official is not, as a rule, to be found watching the operations in the betting ring and usually confines himself to closely watching what happens in the race itself. This, of course, is very excellent in its way, but the added knowledge of what had transpired before the start would and very often does, furnish a key to a situation that may of itself look innocent enough. A horse may, for instance, go out a hot public favourite and get badly blocked or bumped, or knocked about, or left at the post, or otherwise prevented from bringing the money home and a well-supported second or third favourite may win. If the superior and intimate knowledge of the stipendiary enables him to know where the money came from that the winner carried, it would be considerably more illuminating than what the stewards see happen in the race.

In the interesting leading article in the Australasian our contemporary commences by saying:—"After months of consideration the Tasmanian Turf Club has appointed a stipendiary steward. Their choice has fallen upon a detective-inspector of police. We know several racing men of ripe experience who think a policeman is the proper man to fulfil the duties of a stipendiary steward. Failing a policeman, they would have a racecourse 'battler,' not an impecunious 'get a bit" but a battler of the superior kind—one in a position to talk to well-placed owners, as well as the riff-raff of the course. The V.R.C. and the A.J.C. each employ a detective, but he is not necessarily called upon to watch the racing. There have been occasions, however, in which the V.R.C. detective has been entrusted with the task of unravelling a supposed Turf fraud and in a Colac case he achieved signal success. Most detectives—and specially Irish detectives—know something of racing, and Detective-Inspector Donovan, of Launceston, may be just the man for the position. In all probablity he will start with some knowledge of the peculiarities of the men whose racecourse doings he will be called upon to watch. He may also start with some knowledge of the rules of racing. These rules are a puzzle to the average person. You may easily become familiar with them, but it does not follow that you will be able to interpret their meaning with success."

Our contemporary then cites some instances of difficulty particularly with reference to dead heats for which we have in India special legislation. The stipendiary system is held to have been a success in Australia and it is not a country in which they believe in keeping any cats that do not catch mice. Our contemporary concludes by saying:—"The stipendiary system is holding its own, although it cannot be said to be the success the starting machine has been. Our stipendiaries, as we have remarked so often, are not given a proper chance. At the suburban meetings, where they have charge, they are outnumbered by honorary officials, who can—and generally do—outvote them whenever they try to do anything. There is no doubt, however, that racing is all the better for the presence of the paid men, and South Australia now is the only State which attempts to do without them."

In India we consider, for the reasons already stated, that stipendiary stewards are a necessity particularly at the big racing centres of the C.T.C. and W.I.T.C. and we should be sorry to see them discontinued for any reason, for we believe that their presence has had a salutary effect and that the hands of the stewards have been greatly strengthened.

The telegraphic report of the first day of the Lucknow Spring Meeting appeared in our last issue, but we were unable, owing to this journal going to press on Wednesday, to make any comment thereon. The principal matter of interest so far as the then immediate future was concerned, was the signal defeat of Arth in the Novice Plate (6 furlongs) for which race Captain W. A. Kennard's pony started an odds on favourite, the ringmen declining to take any less odds than 7 to 4 about him. This pony had been up till then nominally second favourite for the Army Cup and was much fancied in some quarters and also, so we understand, by his owner. After his downfall in the Novice Plate, in which he could only finish a very moderate third behind to Musketeer and Melton, he was dropped like a red hot coal for the Army Cup and could have been backed for that race at fifteens and twenties, his previous price having been fours. It of course put him out of court and the subsequent proceedings on the second day of the meeting showed unmistakably that he had been held in too high estimation. Sea Lad had no difficulty in winning the Open Pony Chase, in which he was opposed by a very moderate field, and he was never even asked to gallop. In the C.T.C. Steeplechase Mr. J. D. Scott's Proprietor on the strength of his victories in Calcutta and at Tollygunge was made a warm favourite, but the unexpected happened and that consistent old horse Coal, on whom Mr. Hilliard rode a very nice patient race, came away from the last fence and won without much trouble. Proprietor, Fearless Boy and Cravat were out in front most of the way and many people thought that Hayhoe made a bit too much use of the favourite. Another favourite went down in the Stewards' Cup, for which Bull's Run was well backed, but he was beaten in a close race by his stable companion Parkhill, on whom Whalley won a neck. Ruiz rode H.H. the Kuar Sahib's horse and a good deal of money was done in over him. Another upset occurred in the next race, the Jehangirabad Plate, for which Mr. E. J. Marshall's Winna was made favourite at twos, but not only did she fail to connect but finished down the course and old Naughty Boy, whose chances were so lightly estimated by the stable that Mr. Galstaun refused to back him, won with fair ease by half a length from the outsider Dorrie owned by Captain R. B. Johnson. J. Robinson rode the winner and Whalley had the ride on Dorrie. Robinson followed this success up by winning the last race, the Desert Plate, on Meazer, who started a hot favourite at 6 to 4 and won without any difficulty from Captain Kennard's Najmi and Captain R. B. Johnson's Sahoon.

On the second day of the Lucknow Meeting on Thursday, 1st February, the principal plat was the Army Cup, for which race ever since betting opened at the end of the Poona Meeting last autumn, Tofic Pasha, owned by Captain J. R. K. Hodgson, had been a warm favourite, the brilliant successes of that pony at that meeting having made the Army Cup look a particularly good thing for him. The unreliability, or perhaps we ought to say, the hidden surprises of Arab form were, however, yet once again exemplified, for a quite unlooked for result was brought about by the victory of the 12 to 1 chance Prince Charlie. It may be said that only one pony was backed, the favourite, for the odds at the start were 12 to 1 bar one, the favourite being down to 2 to 1 on and plenty of takers at even so extravagant a price. Captain Johnson and Mr. Thomas bought Prince Charlie last season from Mr. Mathuradass Goculdass after that pony had won a couple of small races at the Poona Meeting, 1910, the 5-furlong New Comers' Plate and the Arab Pony Consolation Plate. Last Poona Meeting Prince Charlie was not out at all and he had very little behind him in the way of good recent form to make it possible to consider him a formidable rival to such a little paladin as Tofic Pasha had proved himself. At the Poona Autumn Meeting Captain Hodgson's pony won every time he was out, his victories being the ½ mile Captain's Plate, 11st. 9lb. from Dilerjung 9st. 11lb. and Daulat 9st. 10lb., won anyhow; the 5-furlong Arab Pony Welter Plate, 10st. 11lb., from Electric 9st. 9lb., Little Sanaya 10st. 2lb., won easily by two and a half lengths; the 7-furlong Service Plate, 10st. 5lb., from Good Shot 9st. 12lb. and Dilerjung 9st. 3lb., scoring with equal ease, and the 5-furlong Little Arab Plate, 11st. 4lb., from Good Shot 10st. 13lb. and Little Officer 9st. 8lb. In Poona in fact he was invincible and the Army Cup in Lucknow was booked a very good thing for him all throughout the piece. Money had gone on to him in sacksful and it looked, for once, one of those really good things that could not go wrong. Every one was so certain about it that the short odds on the day did not choke them off and there were plenty of people willing to buy their money. The consternation caused when Prince Charlie tackled the favourite may be better imagined than described, the more so when it was seen that the challenge was not merely a flash in the pan, but had plenty of powder behind it. The result as many wiser and sadder men now know, was that Captain Furnell, who rode Prince Charlie, managed to short head the favourite right on the post after a most desperate battle. The ringmen, for once, we believe were ready to admit that they had had a real good race and any one of them who did not cannot have been making a book to figures. The result of the race was a real facer to backers and probably more money was carried by this favourite than by any other pony that has ever started for this particular event.

As to the rest of the racing on Army Cup Day backers were out of luck for the most part, as Hopscotch whose S. P. was 3 to 1 on for the February Plate was left at the post and the winner turned up on the 12 to 1 chance Gurteen owned by Bond, the dapper little trainer and ex-steeplechase jockey. After this race Gurteen was backed for the Civil Service Cup for a few hundreds, but the price of Hopscotch did not expand to any extent, as why should it have done since the pony never took any part in this contest. Coal went out favourite for the Lucknow Military Chase and had the steadier of 12st. 12lb. to carry. The winner turned up in the 3 to 1 chance Stonehall, who won nicely ridden by the part owner Mr. Blacklock. Major Mussenden is the other part owner. Wootton scored his first win at the meeting on Hughie, who won the Giant Pony Handicap without much difficulty from Naughty Boy and May Kenley. In the Captains' Plate Wellfield was much fancied, but was well beaten by that promising mare of Major Stratton's Monaleen II., who was ridden by Mr. Evers and won in good style in 1min. 2⅕secs. The Arab Handicap, the last race on the card saw, another favourite defeated, as Rockbarton went out at a short price but succumbed to Sahoon, on whom Whalley rode a hurricane finish, winning by three-quarters of a length. The winner's S. P. was returned at 6 to 1.

The Civil Service Cup was run on Saturday last and the surprise in which it resulted was such as the betting ought to have told us all was foreshadowed. In such an open race as this was anything might have won and it is the fact that right up to the day there was no pronounced favourite. When the Calcutta contingent left for Lucknow Son of a Gun was best backed for money and it was said that the stable were very confident; there was also a good deal of money for Mr. Galstaun's first string Hopscotch and also for The Plum, First Bell, Waiata, Circus Girl, and an occasional long shot at Gillieflower the 8th Hussar pony. On arrival at Lucknow it was found that The Plum had damaged an eye on the journey up and she was easier in the betting for a while; Son of a Gun got away from his syce and fell in one of the many small ravines round about Lucknow and was stated to have damaged himself; Waiata was reported to be sore; the only time we saw Hopscotch out he gets badly left at the post and thus had no show at all; Circus Girl gets beaten by the outsider Gurteen, who gave her 7lb. over five furlongs and beat her easily! Such were some of the happenings which combined to create an even more open market than was already the case. Just before the race things were in a more decided condition: three of them were at 6 to 1, Hopscotch, First Bell and The Plum; Waiata, Son of a Gun, Devon and Bit o' Fashion were at eights, Circus Girl, Gillieflower and Gurteen at tens, and all being backed. That this condition of affairs should have prevailed with a fair amount of recent form to guide us was a great feather in the bonnets of the handicappers. The adjustments were exceedingly well calculated and the handicap a very careful and a very able compilation. It is not often that the punters and the prophets will candidly admit defeat, but in this case they were compelled to do so. The only pony concerning which any decided opinion was expressed was Waiata on the strength of this mare's very consistent Calcutta form in the Harrison Plate, Eclipse Pony Plate and the Pony Handicap. Waiata faithfully ran up to her form in Lucknow and but for the unlooked for improvement in Mr. Faunthorpe's Devon, victory would have been hers. There was no recent line to Devon and her sole performance of any merit last season was a win from Premoa over half a mile, the 14-2 giving her 2st. 3lb. This was hardly good enough form to go nap upon, but the mare's improvement was obviously no secret to her stable, as she was backed and cleverly backed at that, the stable, so we hear, averaging their money at a very nice price indeed. She closed at eights so that the commission must have been worked with much discretion.

Devon is by Soult out of Gaiety Girl and therefore gets a tremendously strong strain of good staying blood in her pedigree. Soult is by St. Simon out of Beauharnais and Gaiety Girl is by Santoi who is by Queen's Birthday out of Merry Wife. Merry Wife is by Merry Hampton (Hampton—Doll Tearsheet) out of Connie, who is by Pero Gomez out of Hilarity, who was by King Tom out of Nightingale. Nightingale was by Mountain Deer out of Clarendon, who was by Sir Hercules out of Mustard. King Tom was by Harkaway out of Pocahontas. All Soult's progeny race and he has several of his descendants running and some of them winning in India at the present moment, amongst them Hughie, Hopscotch, Soultline, Solution, Lady Soult. Old Signorina was by Soult and a good mare she was.

The results of the fourth day of Lucknow will be found fully recorded in our turf columns and do not demand any very extended comment. Parkhill won the Horse Hurdles, for which he started favourite, and it is pleasant to be able to congratulate Major "Eugene" Stratton upon the series of successes that his horses have gained at this meeting, for luck has not been his of late. Sir John Hewett's Southern Cross getting 1st. 11lb. from the Civil Service Cup winner, won at a very nice price, Waiata having started favourite but getting off late and destroying any chance she may have had. Morino a 6 to 1 chance beat Bull's Run and Wellfield for the 6-furlong Residency Plate. Wootton was secured for Bull's Run, who started favourite at twos and looked like winning till close home, when Morino challenged hotly and won by half a length, well ridden by Jimmy Robinson. Backers again had a bad day and the fielders have had all the fun and most of the money so far.

arrived in England last month. He has gone over to enter English racing, and make preparations for the enjoyment of the first real holiday he has had since he went into business over nineteen years ago. Although still a young man—he is in his forty-fifth year—Mr. Kohler feels that he has earned retirement from business cares, and means to devote most of his remaining years to his one hobby, the Turf. He is said to be a Turfman from pure love of the sport, and although he has only indulged in it to any extent for the last half-dozen years, he already counts among his warmest friends Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, Mr. August Belmont, Mr. William K. Vanderbilt and other staunch supporters of the Turf in America.

We learn that Mr. Kohler's connection with the Turf began some years ago, when he acquired a splendid breeding establishment in the Ramapo Hills, near New York, which from the beginning has been successful. Last autumn he purchased Mr. Sam C. Hildreth's stable of winners, including Novelty and Zeus, who have both been frequent winners, and engaged Mr. Hildreth to train for him in England, taking over the entire lot in March. He hopes to find suitable quarters for his horses at Newmarket.

Although he will do all his future racing in England, the new owner has not given up his stud at Ramapo. He has 25 brood mares still installed there, with Master Robert, a handsome stallion by Magazan, serving his first season as the over-lord. Master Robert has been the winner of races worth over £12,000, and his owner is very optimistic as to the class of the stock he will produce.

The stable going to England, consists of thirteen, most of which have been good winners in America. The American's career on the English turf will be watched with interest if the performance comes up to anything like the promise.

In spite of the Light Horse Ball the night before and a warm morning on Friday a very good muster turned out to the eighth meet of the Calcutta paper-chases. The course was even longer than the previous one and the line zigzagged in and out through narrow lanes and jungle. The start was off the Molla Hat Road and the paper went out to the Tollygunge Lane, then across the Molla Hat Road to the Old Man's Crossing, and back again to the Molla Hat Road and across it at Jodhpore Thana. The line continued across the Gurriah Hat Road to the Jodhpore Station and into the Tollygunge country through which it wound its way to finish at the starting point. Among those out were: Mrs. Wanklyn on Grey Harold, Mrs. Dods on Bo-Peep, Mrs. Buck on Chorister, Mrs. Walker on a grey, Miss Binning on Eileen, Mr. Thomas on Farthing Bun, Captain Brancker on Enthusiast, Mr. Halliday on Diamond, Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6, Mr. McLean on Minnie, Mr. Winckworth on Kim, Mr. Murray on Desmond, Mr. Chancellor on H. E., Mr. T. Marshall on Loyalty, Mr. Deakin on Scarboro, Mr. Perkins on Sincerity, Mr. Knox on List, Mr. Savage on a bay, Mr. Tanner on Jaguar, Mr. Pugh on Rip Rap, Mr. Wheeler on Sauce, Mr. Bletsoe on Dervish, Mr. Heath on Actress, Mr. Sayers on a chestnut, Mr. Radmore on Emerald, Colonel Grainger on a chestnut, Mr. Wigham on Brandy, Mr. D. Johnstone on Wait for Me, Mr. Muir on North Shore, Mr. Williams on a black, Mr. Walker on Pan Out, and several more.

In the horse chase they were sent away to a capital start and the first to show out was Enthusiast, with List, Diamond, Sincerity, Desmond, Rip Rap close up. Enthusiast ran off the paper after a couple of miles and took several out, leaving Mrs. Dods and Mr. Sayers in command. But they were caught a mile from home by Mr. Halliday on Diamond. He lost the paper soon after but got on the right line again and in a hot finish beat Sincerity a length for first place. The official order was:—

1. Mr. Halliday on Diamond
2. Mr. Perkins on Sincerity
3. Mr. Murray on Desmond
4. Mr. Thomas on Farthing Bun
5. Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6
6. Mr. Johnstone on Wait for Me.

followed by Mr. Knox, Mr. Wheeler, Captain Brancker, Miss Binning, Mrs. Dods, Mr. Bletsoe, Mrs. Wanklyn, Mr. Tanner, Mr. Wigham, Mr. Marshall, etc.

In the pony chase Scarboro, as usual, led all the way and though challenged by H. E. at the finish had no difficulty in holding his own. The order was:—

1. Mr. Deakin on Scarboro.
2. Mr. Chancellor on H. E.
3. Mr. McLean on Minnie.
4. Mr. Radmore on Emerald.
5. Mr. Muir on North Shore.
6. Mr. Thomas on Venesta.

Owing to a heavy fall of rain, which made the ground unplayable, the final match in the "Country Life" Challenge Cup at Lucknow has been postponed till the 8th February.

The General Alderson Cross Country Races for British and Indian troops will be held at Poona on the 29th February. The Hockey Tournament begins on Monday the 4th March.

The Jhansi Handicap Polo Tournament for the Challenge Cup presented by Messrs. J. C. Bechtler, Son and Company will be held on the 26th February and following days, entries closing on the 15th instant.

There are thirteen entries for the Native Cavalry Polo Tournament which opens at Ambala on the 12th instant, and the draws are as follows:—1st Lancers vs. 17th Cavalry; 3rd Skinner's Horse vs. 9th Hodson's Horse, "A" team; 18th Lancers vs. 30th Lancers; 11th Lancers vs. 19th Lancers; 2nd Lancers vs. 4th Cavalry. The 9th Hodson's Horse, "B" team, 7th Lancers, and the 37th Lancers have drawn byes.

The match between the M.C.C. and Victoria opened at Melbourne on the 2nd instant in great heat, and sultry weather conditions continued throughout the game. The M.C.C. batted first and had scored 293 for five wickets when stumps were drawn at the end of the first day. Th innings was completed for 467, Hearne contributing 143 in excellent style, while Douglas made 140 by careful batting. Victoria then went in and had six wickets down for 84 at the close of the day's play. The game was resumed on Monday when Victoria were all out for 195, Armstrong being top scorer with a not out 50. They followed on and made 132 for five wickets when play ceased for the day. Continuing on Tuesday they ran their total to 314 before they were all out, Armstrong giving a fine exhibition for 120 not out and Mackenzie scored 78 without a chance. The M.C.C. were thus left with 43 runs to make to win and this they did for the loss of two wickets.

A most unpleasant incident occurred at the meeting held at Sydney on Monday to select the Australian team for the Test Match when long-standing differences between Hill and McAlister culminated in a bout of fisticuffs. Hill subsequently resigned.

The accident to G. A. Faulkner, the famous South African cricketer who was reported to have broken his leg whilst playing football, is not so serious as was at first thought, and it is expected that he will be able to play for South Africa in the triangular cricket contests during the forthcoming season.

Charles Williams, the Harrow coach and professional racquets champion of England, recently defeated at New York George Standing, of the New York Racquets and Tennis Club, in a match for the championship of the United States by three games to one, the score being 2—15, 15—8, 15—9, and 15—10.

The competition for the Captain's Cup in connection with the Calcutta Golf Club will be held during February, March and April, over the C. G. C. links at Tollygunge (unless players mutually agree to play their match on the maidan or at Barrackpore). The conditions are:—18 holes, handicap, Match play, three-quarter of difference between handicap allowances. First round should be played off by 18th February; 2nd, 3rd, and 4th rounds by 10th, 24th, and 31st March respectively; 5th round by 7th April; semi-finals by 14th April, and final by 21st April. Eighty-nine entries have been received.

In the South Indian Hockey Tournament at Secunderabad last week the 109th Infantry played the 6th Jats, whom they beat by 2 goals to 1. The Jats were the first to score in the opening half, and the 109th equalised after a penalty from "sticks." The game was very close in the second half, the 109th just managing to score the winning goal. The 81st Infantry from Bangalore were badly defeated by the 1st Brahmins, who from the start asserted their superiority, and eventually won by 11 goals to 4. In the semi-finals the 1st Brahmins met the 61st Pioneers and an exciting game in which the contending teams were very even resulted in a win for the Pioneers by 2 goals to 1.

The 109th Infantry beat the 95th Infantry after scrappy play by 2 goals to 1.

Fred Storbeck, the South African heavy-weight boxer, and ex-P. O. The proposed contest between Bombardier Wells and Kid McCoy, which was to have taken place in Paris, has fallen through, as the Parisian promoters could not see their way to agree to the terms put forward by Wells. Gunner Moir has been approached and has expressed his willingness to take the Bombardier's place. He has also notified his readiness to accept an offer of a £500 purse for the much discussed return match between himself and the English champion, but there seem very little hopes of Wells agreeing to fight for what must now be rather a small prize to him.

The Sixth Annual Championship Show of the Calcutta Kennel Club was held on the maidan last Friday and Saturday and was an unqualified success from every point of view. A complete report appears further on.

At length Arnst and Barry have been able to arrange matters to their mutual satisfaction. The New Zealander has accepted Barry's terms for a return sculling match and will sail for England at the end of March. It will be remembered that these two champions met in August 1910 on the Zambesi, when Arnst won and maintained his right to the world's championship title. He won this from Webb in December 1908 and beat him a second time six months later. He was challenged by Whelch and beat him in April 1910, his match with Barry taking place four months after.

London Week by Week.

By the calendar it is winter, by the thermometer it is early summer. It is quite warm walking about in the city, yet we poor calendar and custom-ridden Britishers keep fires in our grates, possibly for the same reason that we put chrysanthemums in our vases, because a fire is the winter flower so to speak. Now some people call this "Extraordinary" weather; I don't for I know of our snow storms in June and of Januarys so warm as to put such violent exertion as dancing round a May pole quite out of the question. Besides one has only to consult the old diarists to learn that any sort of weather may be expected at any time of year in this melancholy island. All the same one wonders to find so many "people who count" staying on in the dismal air and sharing the charnel house comforts with those who really cannot afford to quit. For those who can pay for seasonable cold there is Wengen and ski-running or the Engadine with a frozen lake and the long toboggan-path. For those who want no winter at all there is higher Egypt, where Mizraim's dust is spurned by the car-wheels from the new hotel.

And one observes that the Englishman who once danced content in his island, boasting of its rightness and its tightness, is putting off his nature and becoming a migratory animal. Indeed, he has already the swallow's instinct; he waits only for the swallow's strength of pinion. Already each one of us, come holiday time, preens for some petty flight: no one but the wingless one stays at home when he can reach the edge of the sea or, mayhap, cross it into a strange land. Those stronger on the wing, as I have said, are now in Egypt or in Switzerland. A whole covey of us went up but a few weeks ago to light down again in the city of the Moghuls. Give us all wings, distribute cheques and tickets, and England in a chilly February—that most unnecessary month—will be empty as the house-martin's nest.

And so would a good many other young gentlemen—at any rate, until they realised what "personal risk" might possibly mean. For instance, would the advertiser be prepared, in order to win his £5,000, to punch Jack Johnson on the nose? Or to become a strict vegetarian? Or to submit to a Christian Science cure in the case of a compound fracture? Or to sit out ten consecutive nights of Ibsen's plays? Or to dose himself with all the nostrums advertised for bronchitis, nerves, rheumatism, debility, indigestion, premature baldness, and a blotchy complexion? Or to read right through, without skipping, the latest sermon-novel by an eminent writer? These are graver perils than leading a forlorn hope or going up in an aeroplane—perils that make £5,000 appear a very paltry and inadequate reward.

It is reassuring, with a Government well on the way to a national expenditure of 200 millions a year, to find that one department is bent on economy. The new issue of the London Telephone Directory is a model of conciseness, based apparently on that frugality of letters that uses "circs" for circumstances, "props" for properties, and "digs" for diggings. These abbreviations are commendable so long as they are intelligible, but the first duty of a directory is to avoid ambiguity. Unfortunately, the new volume does not always succeed in this. Against one name may be found the shortened description, "Dmnd mchnts." A guess may perhaps be hazarded that "mchnts" stands for merchants, but what on earth (or elsewhere) does "dmnd" stand for? It might be diamond or it might be—.

The word "music-hall" will soon be as obsolete as the old "free and easy" from which it is descended.

In its place the more majestical term of "musical theatre" will arise, and this will mean a theatre where you may smoke, and see Harry Lauder and Marie Lloyd, an acrobatic act, a few performing dogs, a ventriloquist, and two back-talk comedians, prefacing a three-act play by Sir Arthur Pinero.

Mr. Henry Tozer, who speaks for the Syndicate Halls—the Tivoli, the Pavilion, and the Oxford—told a newspaper man the other day that the first thing the directors would have to consider was the changing of the name of "music-hall" to "musical theatre."

"It is more descriptive of our entertainment," he said. "We are, and always have been, musical theatres. I do not say that we shall overcrowd our programme with plays and sketches, but if the demands of the 'star' performers become very high, we shall replace them with what have hitherto been known as 'stage plays.'"

This result of the Lord Chamberlain's decision with regard to stage plays at the music-halls has not yet been considered. It is likely to have a far-reaching effect on the salaries of individual music-hall performers whose salary as a "star" equals to-day the combined salaries of an entire sketch or play company.

"As for the sketches," Mr. Tozer continued, "the supply is unprecedented. I have been burning midnight oil lately reading scores of sketches from lesser authors, who are determined to take advantage of the new arrangement."

All the managers, however, do not take the same view as Mr. Tozer.

Mr. Butt, of the Palace Theatre, says:—

"There will be no change in our policy. We have always been a variety theatre, and we shall remain as such. All we wanted was the legal right to produce 'sketches' in the proper sense of the word.

"People who go to a theatre want to see a play in three or four acts, and people who come to a variety theatre want to see a variety entertainment—that is, a programme full of variety, with pauses between the numbers on the programme; in fact, an entertainment where they may drop in any time during the evening without that feeling of having missed something that they would have if they visited at half-past nine a theatre where a connected play is being produced."

Herr Max Reinhardt's production of Sophocles' "Œdipus Rex" at Covent Garden last night was always very ingenious, at moments very imaginative, now and again very beautiful, and at the end almost repulsively terrible. But it was modern. It was full of over-eager effort for the mere effects. It was more Reinhardt than Sophocles.

The action takes place in the front of the stage and in the auditorium itself. Across the stage are the bronze columns of the King's house, with the brazen bossed gate in the middle. Steps lead down from the gates on either side, and on these steps the greater part of Sophocles' lines are spoken.

The scene is impressive, but, frankly, in only one respect does Herr Reinhardt's method of production seem to have any great advantage over an ordinary stage performance, and that is with the movements of the great crowd that at times fills the space in front of the proscenium and flows along the aisle of the stalls.

Here, as at Olympia, one is made to feel the rustle, the movement, the drama of a crowd as one has never realised it from one side of the footlights to the other.

For the rest, the Reinhardt method calls too much on the imagination of the spectator, and the illusion is difficult to retain.

The characters in their Greek costumes are among the black-coated audience. It is novel, daring if you will—but to what end?

Mr. Martin Harvey, who has brought Max Reinhardt to Covent Garden, has used Professor Gilbert Murray's version of the Greek tragedy, with some cuts. Professor Murray is a poet and a man of taste, and he tells one of the most awful tragedies in literature without the smallest undue emphasis.

But the bustle, the insistent chorus, the lighting from the auditorium, the ever-present modernity of Herr Reinhardt's presentation accent the horror and make the tragedy almost melodrama. With all its fine points—and it has many—"Œdipus Rex" at Covent Garden is essentially "Œdipus Rex" Teutonised.

Mr. Martin Harvey's Œdipus is an interesting and moving performance. The actor, lacks the full tragic manner, and he is apt to be shrill when he should be thunderous, and trivial when he should be happy.

But Mr Harvey acted with a real sense of the dignity of the great drama, and in the concluding scene, when he is blinded—the maimed eyes being shown with far too excessive realism—and totters away to his doom, he was pathetically beautiful, the victim of cruel circumstance, "a thing of God abhorred."

Miss Lillah McCarthy looked regal as Jocasta, and spoke sonorously, but she did not quite indicate the utter despair of the woman. Mr. Louis Calvert was very fine indeed as Creon, acting and speaking perfectly; and excellent, too, were Mr. Herbert Dansey as the messenger and Mr. Franklin Dyall as the king's servant.

And the crowd was quite wonderful, and it is in the handling of stage crowds that one finds Max Reinhardt's genius. His "Œdipus Rex" comes to us stamped with the approval of nations whose artistic appreciation is at least equal to ours. Yet one may be bold enough to affirm that it does not carry the art of theatrical production one whit beyond the standard of English playhouses, except in one particular, and, interesting as it is, it is emphatically not the ideal method of performing Greek tragedy.

Mrs. George Cornwallis West, widow of Lord Radolph Churchill and mother of Mr. Winston Churchill, is an ambitious woman. She has just signed a contract that will enable her to carry out a scheme conceived some time ago—the holding of a great Shakespearean Exhibition in London. The exhibition is to be held at Earl's Court during the coming summer, and to Mrs. Cornwallis West belongs the whole credit for what promises to be a most wonderful and attractive undertaking. She has two objects in view. In the first place, she desires to raise funds for the building of a National Shakespeare Theatre, in which she is greatly interested; and in the second place she hopes to stimulate public interest in Shakespeare by producing in London a Shakespeare Exhibition such as has never been seen before and make Shakespeare's time a living reality.

She is finding £50,000 to be spent on the exhibition, which will be opened about the middle of May and remain open till October and it will occupy the whole of the buildings in Earl's Court. It remains to be seen what backing the public will give to the enterprise: I hae ma doots.

Grand Opera finds but scant support in this London of ours, the fate of the recently opened London Opera House hangs in the balance and I for one can't see what can save it. Mr. Hammerstein discussing the future of the place said this week that the continuance of a grand opera after the present season depended entirely upon the subscriptions. "Nowhere in the world is grand opera produced without the guarantee of subscribers. It cannot be done. A director cannot enter into contracts involving millions of dollars with only the fickleness of the weather to cover him. That is why my arrangements for next season are conditional.

"If there are no subscriptions there will be no more grand opera. I have built the house, produced the operas, and given the people of London a sample of what they can obtain, but its continuance depends entirely upon subscribers.

"So far my box-office has been very satisfactory, and from the general public I have had every encouragement. But that is not enough for grand opera. It does not cover seasons when the weather is against you and when certain circumstances take the better people out of London.

"I have heard many objections and many excuses. Some object to my name, my religion, even my nose; others to the locality of the house; while it has been further explained, that during the present season the music-supporting society has been out of town.

"Very well, I accept these excuses, but I cannot repeat an experiment which has so far involved me in an outlay of £350,000.

Why take the risk on your own shoulders? We will take it for you!

"After all grand opera is a philanthropic institution. It is provided either by the State, the municipality, a number of rich people, or—a little man like myself. So far I have not had the support of the people who ought to be the guarantors of grand opera in this City. The explanations given I accept, but I cannot accept them again."

Exit Grand Opera I suppose. But the world is not coming to an end, if this class of entertainment can't live here, doubtless some other show will be found not unworthy of the place which has been its home for these few brief weeks.

The Right Hon'ble Henry Labouchere, Privy Counsillor, old Parliamentary hand, journalist and theatre runner, died of bronchitis at Florence on the 14th instant. He had been in indifferent health since his wife died in November 1910. He was a really extraordinary man and a bundle of contradictions really. He had tasted almost every form of excitement, social, political and financial, he posed as a cynic and was in reality one of the kindest hearted of men. He couldn't bear a swindler and in Truth they were pilloried mercilessly by the hundred: these enterprises cost him a heap of money, but he did not much mind he was a rich man. And we must not forget how few libel cases he really lost—only some six or eight I believe—while over and over again he did good service to the public. He converted Truth into a limited company, in which he held a majority of the shares, and since the death of Mr. Horace Vowles, Mr. R. A. Bennett has been its editor. Mr. Labouchere had written little for the paper in recent years. He was a constitutionally indolent man, but when he was interested in a subject he would write off pages of his queer cramped upright caligraphy. He would never write his memoirs—a decision by which the world has lost much.

Lord Wenlock—one of your old Indian satraps—died in London on Monday after a long illness. As you know he was from 1891 to 1896 Governor of Madras, and he and Lady Wenlock were both personal friends of the King and Queen, whom they accompanied on their Colonial tour in the Ophir. Since 1901 Lord Wenlock had been a Lord of the Bedchamber to His Majesty and in 1910 he was also appointed Vice-Chamberlain of Queen Mary's Household.

A story is told of Lord Wenlock that in his schoolboy days he and Lord Rosebery one afternoon ran away from Eton to see the races at Ascot. They had made very elaborate plans, for a conveyance was to meet them, the coachman also bringing false beards and moustaches. Neither the man, the trap nor the disguise turned up, but the boys ran nearly all the eight miles to Ascot without stopping, saw the last race, and then doubled back to school, getting back again in time for their absence not to have been noticed.

The rector of a country parish having sent blankets, groceries, and coals, and some of the good things usual at Christmas to an old parishioner, a lady expatiated warmly to him on the reverend gentleman's kindness.

"Don't you think," she asked the villager, "that it's very good of Mr. Blank to look after you like this, and send you all these nice things?"

"Good of him!" exclaimed the old man, in blank amazement. "Why, wot's 'e for!"

TIGER STORIES WITHOUT A GUN.

The usual tiger story has a man with a gun in it, but it sometimes happens that one has a startling encounter with a tiger when there isn't a gun within miles. I have often heard it denied that tigers prowl about in the day time, that it is "against their nature," that every cat big or little is a nocturnal animal and therefore bound to sleep in the depths of the jungle during the day. But personally I had a very clear demonstration that—at least sometimes—tigers are to be seen at, for them, unseemly hours of daylight.

I had just completed surveying the Nahorjan Tea Garden with the exception of an outlying patch of young tea of about 80 acres some six miles from the headquarters factory. I told Peebles, the Manager at dinner, that I intended to go over to survey this next morning. He said—"That reminds me I haven't been over there myself lately, so I will ride over with you and see how the young tea looks."

Round about Nahorjan there were several other tea gardens and the European population of that rather isolated section of the district numbered about eighteen including three ladies; so there was the usual beef and mutton club, and Peebles was grazing some of the beef cows at Palastolly, the outgarden I was going to survey.

We arrived there next morning about nine and the Assamese jemadar in charge met us with a long face and the news that a tiger had killed one of the Beef Club's fat cows. "It is lying near the new cowshed which I am building. The tiger has not eaten any of it nor mauled it about. He tried to drag it away but could not for the rope round its neck. Would the sahibs be pleased to come and look at it?"

We walked over accompanied by a couple of dozen jungle coolies, male and female, and my flag and chain men. Sure enough the cow had not been much marked, so Peebles determined to make beef of it.

"Pity to waste a good well-fattened beast like that, especially as the tiger has scarcely marked it."

"There's nothing the matter with it" I said. "I hope to have some of it for dinner to-morrow."

"All right" said he. "Jemadar get a cart and have it sent over to Naborjan at once. Remember it must go to-day, as the tiger will be sure to come back to feed as soon as it is dark."

The tiger didn't wait for the dark, for just as Peebles spoke he came out of the jungle not forty yards from us, ran across our front with his head turned towards us—what the Heralds call passant, regardant, and with a couple of angry "wuffs disappeared into the jungle on our left front.

Astonishment is no name for what we felt. The coolies turned the indescribable colour known only to those who have seen a thoroughly frightened dark complexioned native and the fat jemadar collapsed on the ground a quivering mass terror-stricken jelly.

We discussed sitting up for it, but the jungle just there was low and scrubby with no tree big enough to conceal a machan; so the cow was sent to Naborjan and proved excellent beef, albeit not butchered in the orthodox way. We had to stand any amount of chaff when the story got known especially from the ladies.

"What would you have done if it had charged?" said one dame. What could we have done? We had our riding switches in our hands for weapons.

"Were you afraid!" said another. We hadn't time. The whole affair was over in thirty seconds.

One of the most startling of tiger adventures—if it was a tiger—befel Mr. Hugh Macnish of the Greenwood Tea Estate some six miles from Dibrughar when riding in to the club at Dibrughar from his garden one dark evening in the cold weather of seventy-eight. When passing Nagagooly Tea Garden something sprang out of a clump of jungle which abuts on the road onto the hind—quarters of his pony and immediately either fell or jumped off. The pony set off along the road as if it were ridden by a Valkyrie. On arriving at the club the animal, whatever it was, was found to have severely clawed the pony; and the claw marks were too large and far apart for a leopard and too small for a full-grown tiger. It was generally thought in one district at the time, that it was a young tiger; especially as a tigress with a couple of well-grown cubs had been seen several times by the coolies drinking at the Nagagooly; that curious circular back-water of the Dibro river which gives its name to that garden.

I have ridden that same pony more than once past the spot where it got the fright and it was amusing to see how well it remembered it. As soon as it got near the clump of jungle from which the tiger or whatever it was had emerged, it used to sidle over to the other side of the road and slip past at a slow canter, on its tiptoes so to speak, and then as soon as past set off ventre a terre along the road. Truly horses have good memories.

Macnish owned a tiger, or at least he claimed proprietary rights in one that used to prowl about the outskirts of Greenwood in daylight. I owned a very fine rifle then and was ambitious to distinguish myself by trying it on a tiger; so having some machinery business at Greenwood, I took my rifle with me in the hopes of getting a shot at the tiger.

"And what did ye bring your gun for?" said Macnish.

"To have a shot at that tiger I hear is prowling about the garden."

"Na, na, yer na going to shoot my tiger" said canny Mac.

"Your tiger Mac.?

"Yes, my tiger. It prowls about and frightens the dammed coolies from grazing their infernal cows in my tea. It kilt a coo on Tuesday for which I am thankful. That tiger is worth half a dozen chowkedars to me."

So Mac's tiger was left alone.

HINTS ON SEA-FISHING FOR INDIAN ANGLERS.

As I have pointed out in previous letters, our Indian seaports offer absolutely unlimited opportunities for the most splendid sport. Many a man for whom freshwater fishing is all too slow, would take to sea fishing with enthusiasm, were he once properly blooded. Speaking generally, the tackle used and the methods pursued are both of the simplest description. Excellent sea rods and reels, which are practically unbreakable by ordinary fishing and which require but the most casual attention to keep them in good working order, are now to be obtained at all the better tackle shops at most moderate prices. There are many inducements to fishing the sea round the coasts of India. Good seaworthy boats, with experienced men, can be hired at most places at low rates.

FISHING.

Nothing can be pleasanter, on a hot day, than to get away from the land and enjoy what little breeze exists on the placid ocean. No violent exertion is needed, and one can carry a tiffin basket and iced drinks with the comforting knowledge that they are all the time at one's elbow. If the sun's rays are too fierce to be pleasant, it is easy enough to rig up an awning over the stern. In fact sea fishing in Indian seas is a sport that can be carried out under conditions of absolute comfort. Although, when in India, I sea fished whenever I had the chance, I yet mourn greatly over opportunities which might have been made a great deal more of, if I had possessed a little more knowledge of the fish and their habits. For instance the bream is one of the best sport giving fishes at Karachi. Although I caught a good many, I might have done very much better had I realized that the larger bream are found in deep water during the day, and that if one is fishing in five fathoms or so, it is better to try at dusk. I also greatly regret that I did not make more use of the drift line, a simple and most effective method of fishing, which I will here proceed to describe. In drift lining the bait may be either a live fish, a dead fish, or part of a dead fish. The line is either unleaded, or only leaded lightly, and the tide is used to carry the bait a long way from the anchored boat, and so show it to any feeding fish in the vicinity. Only just as I was leaving Karachi, did I realise how with a drift line one could catch the big mackerel or saw-fish as they are called locally. I did try it a couple of times and had great sport with these magnificent fish, which run six to nine or ten pounds, and jump like salmon when hooked. The procedure with a dead sardine is quite simple. The little fish is threaded on to a good sized long shanked hook so as to hang straight; the line is then paid out, which can be done by taking the check off one's reel, when the tidal current will draw the bait further and further away from the boat. The drag of the line makes the sardine wriggle in life-like manner and surface feeding fish take it readily. When sailing out to the fishing ground, it is a good plan to put out a sardine on an Archer, or similar spinner. One has, however, to be careful that the reel is free to run. I have had lamentable smashes from big mackerel snatching at my bait, when the boat was going fast, and the reel I had on worked a bit stiff.

The sardines above referred to are usually easy to get, as the fishermen net them in quantities. They make a good bait for bottom fishing, as well as whiffing and drift-lining, and both bream and cat-fish take them readily. These latter, hideous creatures with whiskers, are just like the river silaroids in appearance, but give far better sport, fighting hard on a light paternoster. All sea fish fight well as a rule, and the silaroids of salt water are infinitely more vigorous, weight for weight, than their relations in the freshwater rivers and tanks. Another deadly method of sea fishing, which I did not know of when in India, is to bait a fair sized hook with a dead sardine, or part of one, and to cast the line out unleaded, allowing the bait to sink and lie at the bottom. This is of course for fishing when there is no perceptible current, in harbours, backwaters and so on. A little line is left loose, so that when the fish picks up the bait, it may feel no drag. The loose line is allowed to go off, then the rod is quietly picked up, and the strike made. This is practically the method by which tarpon are caught in Florida. It is very deadly for the large sea perches, many varieties of which abound in Indian waters. It would of course do well for the megalops, which is nothing more or less than the Indian tarpon.

Another fact, which is most useful for anglers in India to know, is that ray's liver has a great fascination for many fishes. Large rays are caught in quantities on the Indian coast, so usually there would be no difficulty whatever in getting as much liver as ever one wanted. Curiously enough I was once told by an angler that he had had great success fishing for batchwa with duck's liver.

With regard to the nuisance of small sharks and dog-fish, I am sorry to say that there appears to be no way of getting rid of their attentions. When a shoal of these vermin come round, the only thing to do is to up anchor and go somewhere else. I have more than once been driven away from my fishing ground off Manora, with most of my tackle cut to pieces, and have been forced to try a new place.

I have had similar experiences with dog-fish in a salt-water loch in the west of Scotland, when fishing for codling, but the British dog-fish is not nearly so bad as the Indian variety as regards cutting tackle, and moreover the Scotch ones were not entirely useless, as a man in the village used to feed his hens on them.

Indian waters hold other undesirable inhabitants, besides sharks and dog-fish. There are the sting rays, horrible flattened monsters armed with terrible serrated poisonous spines in their whiplike tails. Directly one of these brutes is got into the boat, its stings should be broken off with a billet of wood, a booted foot being planted firmly on the creature's tail during the process. There is also a most terrible looking eel, with teeth like a dragon. This latter brute, which fortunately does not grow very large, is drawn gingerly on to the edge of the gunwale, where it can be safely hammered with something hard, and the dishonoured corpse dropped overboard as ground-bait. This reminds me of an attempt I made at Manora to use the ground-bait net. The idea is that you have a small meshed net and pack into it all the odds and ends you can find, such as mashed crabs, fishes' entrails, bits of sardines, etc.; then with a large stone inside to sink the net and a thick cord to hold it by, you lower the affair close to where you are fishing. An occasional tug at the cord releases tasty particles which drift round the hook bait, and so fish are attracted and brought on the feed. I had a net of this sort, and when using it one day, two or three hundred yards off the end of Manora Breakwater, some monster of the deep came along and took the whole net, breaking the stout cord I had it attached by like packthread. I suppose it was a good sized shark, and I sincerely hope the stone and the string net gave him bad indigestion.

All sorts of booms, to spread out the baits, are advertised by fishing tackle shops, but these arrangements are quite unnecessary. A simple paternoster with two hooks attached to the vertical portion of the tackle by the special paternoster swivels, is all that is necessary for bottom fishing. The strength of the tackle and size of the hooks being varied according to the kinds of fish one expects. The bottom hook of the paternoster should be attached close down to the lead, and the second nineteen or twenty inches higher up.

As regards rods, they are simple affairs. Something in the likeness of a stiff short spinning rod does well for boat work. For fishing from piers and rocks, one needs something longer to keep the tackle clear of the edge. I used to get very good fishing off rocks near Karachi, using an eleven-foot cane rod and gut paternoster. The fish caught were not large, half a pound to three pounds, but I used to get lots of them. The rings should be large upright ones, phosphor-bronze, or porcelain. The latter are very nice to use, but are very easy to break, if one is not extremely careful. For this reason I recommend stout metal rings instead.

Lines used in salt water, and exposed to the Indian sun, do not last long, but suitable ones for sea fishing are not expensive, and can be purchased almost anywhere.

Without yet venturing to say too much about it, I think I can recommend "gut substitute" for sea fishing. I used some this year for codling, and found it very satisfactory. It is ever so much cheaper than gut, and being in a single piece like reel line, the use of it saves much troublesome knotting. All the patent gimps I have tried rot rapidly after being exposed to the action of salt water, so that they are only reliable when quite new. You must use strong tackle in Indian seas, for immense fish abound. I learnt this lesson from having line after line broken by monsters so powerful that they would run a hundred yards off the reel, in spite of every effort to stop them, and then break the line as though it were cotton. What these fish were I never knew, as I had nothing strong enough to come to terms with them. I therefore advise other anglers to always take, in addition to the ordinary gear, a rod, reel, and line capable of dealing with fish up to 100lbs. This can be put out with a good sized dead fish as bait. When sharp toothed creatures are expected, good gimp can be improvised by serving a strong cotton snood for some inches above the hook, with fine copper wire.

Starter:—MR. E. S. DEANE.
Secretary:—MR. E. S. DEANE.

Second Day, Thursday, 1st February 1912.

SNOWERY weather did not prevent a very large gathering of sportsmen attending the Meeting to-day. Conspicuous amongst those present was General Sir S. Mahon's house party, including Marquis Santos Suarez, the Duke of Feneranda, General Sir Hugh and Lady McCalmont, Hon'ble Mrs. Barrett, Lady Ashley St. Ledger, and others.

The Army Cup provided as bad an upset as has been witnessed for many years, as the greater part of the money was on Tofic Pasha. In the result, however, the latter was only beaten by a head. The field of fourteen was smaller than that in 1910, but the finish was better.

THE FEBRUARY PLATE.—Rs. 700 to the winner, Rs. 200 to the second, and Rs. 100 to the third. For Arabs 14-2, C.-B.'s 14-1, and other ponies 14-0 and under. Above heights to carry 9st. 3lb. W. I. 5 furlongs.

Mr. J. C. Galstaun's bk aus g Hopscotch, 9st. 7lb.	Wootton 0

(Winner trained by Owner.)

BETTING: 3 to 1 on Hopscotch, 6 to 1 each agst. Circus Girl, The Point and Ruminant, 12 to 1 Gurteen.

Hopscotch was badly left. The Point led for most of the journey but was passed in the rails by Gurteen, who won by three-quarters of a length; a neck between second and third, and the same between third and fourth. Time—1min 3⅕secs.

THE LUCKNOW MILITARY HANDICAP CHASE.—Rs. 1,500 to the winner, Rs. 300 to the second, and Rs. 200 to the third. A high-weight handicap steeplechase for horses which are bona fide property of officers in His Majesty's Army on full pay. To be ridden by Officers in the Army on full pay. About 2¼ miles.

(Winner trained by J. D. Scott.)

BATTING: 2 to 1 agst Hughie, 5 to 1 Hydra, 6 to 1 each Naughty Boy and Dorrie, 8 to 1 the others.

Hughie, who was never pressed, won in easy fashion by one and a half lengths; three-quarters of a length between second and third; a neck between third and fourth. Time—1min. 16secs.

THE ARMY CUP.—Rs. 2,000 to the winner, Rs. 300 to the second and Rs. 400 to the third. For Arab ponies 14-1 and under which have never won a flat race value Rs. 500 or over, and which are bona fide and unconditionally the property of officers in His Majesty's Army on full pay, and which have been the property of a person qualified to enter since 1st August 1911. To be ridden by officers qualified to enter. Ponies 14-1 to carry 11st. 7lb. W. I. 7 furlongs.

(Winner trained by Beedham.)

BETTING: 2 to 1 on Tofic Pasha, 12 to 1 each agst. Lazim Nagashi, and Prince Charlie, 15 to 1 each Musketeer and Arth, 20 to 1 to 30 to 1 the others.

Getting away to a good start they raced level to the four furlongs, where Great Power, Arth and Prince Charlie showed in front. Two furlongs from home Prince Charlie drew ahead and after a gallant effort to catch him on the part of Tofic Pasha, Exchange and Musketeer, snatched the race by a head, three-quarters of a length separated second and third; a short head between third and fourth. Time—1min. 41secs.

THE CAPTAIN'S PLATE.—Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 200 to the second and Rs. 100 to the third. A welter handicap flat race for horses that have never won a flat race value Rs. 1,000 or over. Gentlemen riders. Professional jockeys to carry 10lb. extra. 5 furlongs.

BETTING: 2 to 1 agst. Rockbarton, 3 to 1 Meazer, 4 to 1 Najmi, 6 to 1 each Aga and Hachal, 7 to 1 to 10 to 1 the rest.

The running was performed by Rockbarton, Meazer and Sahoon, the latter winning a close race by three-quarters of a length; a short head divided second and third; one length between third and fourth. Time—1min. 1⅘secs.

Third Day, Saturday, 3rd February 1912.

THIS was another disastrous day for backers culminating in the débâcle provided by the Civil Service Cup race in which the 12 to 1 Devon beat a picked field. The winner is the property of Mr. Fauntborpe, a popular member of the United Provinces Civil Service, who has on more than one occasion tried to annex the Cup with Devon. The pony was trained by Major Ormond Winter and was splendidly ridden by J. Davis.

In the remaining five events favourites also failed to flatter the hopes of their supporters. Unless things improve on the next two days it is to be feared that the 1912 meeting will be know as "The Black Meeting."

I should mention that everyone is in high praise of the improvements made in the enclosure and paddock, making it one of the finest and most trim looking in the whole of India. These changes, I believe, are due to Mr. Deane's own initiative.

THE NEW LAWN PLATE.—Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 200 to the second, and Rs. 100 to the third. A welter handicap for Arab ponies 14-1 and under that were qualified to run in the Army Cup. To be ridden by gentlemen riders. Professional jockeys 10lb. extra. 7 furlongs.

Capt. J. G. Rees' b a h Denmark, 10st. 2lb. Mr. Thursby 0

(Winner trained by Beedham.)

BETTING: 5 to 4 agst. Prince Charlie, 3 to 1 The Nut, 6 to 1 each Nagashi and Denmark, 8 to 1 Great Power.

Nagashi led to the home turn where The Nut displaced him, winning easily by two and a half lengths; a head separated second and third. Time—1min. 44⅘secs.

THE HANDICAP PONY CHASE.—Rs. 1,000 to the winner, Rs. 300 to the second, and Rs. 200 to the third. A high-weight handicap steeplechase for ponies 14-2 and under. R. C. about 2 miles.

Capt. E. B. Houston's ch e m Norah, 7st. 10lb. (car. 8st. 8lb.) ... Williamson (ref.)

BETTING: 6 to 4 agst. Late Night, 3 to 1 Sea Lad, 6 to 1 each Marconi and Charge, 10 to 1 to 20 to 1 the others.

Norah refused at the third fence. Pompadour and Late Night, who had been leading, were joined at the six furlongs by Sea Lad, who then drew ahead and despite a challenge by Charge won in good style by two and a half lengths, ; two lengths between second and third; four lengths between third and fourth. Time—4mins 6⅕secs.

THE CIVIL SERVICE CUP.—Rs. 8,000 (of which Rs. 2,000 presented by the members of the Civil Service in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, and Rs. 6,000 from the fund). The second pony will receive Rs. 2,000 and the third Rs. 1,000 out of the entire stakes. Fourth Day, Monday, 5th February.

TO-DAY'S racing attracted a very large attendance, many doubtless still being in hopes of recouping themselves for losses earlier in the meeting. Beyond an accident to Fearless Boy in the Horse Hurdles, which everyone much regretted, the racing passed off smoothly. Favourites came in in three events. The victory of Southern Cross, however, in "The Point's" Cup proved an absolute facer. Morino's win in the Residency Plate was also unexpected, while in the last event another hot favourite went down in Bayleaf.

The R. E. and the R. A. M. C. were "At Home" and music was supplied by the band of the Highland Light Infantry.

THE HORSE HURDLES.—Rs 1,500 to the winner Rs. 300 to the second and Rs. 200 to the third. A high-weight handicap hurdle race for horses. About 2 miles over 8 flights of hurdles.

Radiol

RADIOL TREATMENT prolongs the life of a Horse's Legs. Completely removes by radiation all soft swellings that disfigure and lame a Horse as sprained Tendons, Windgalls, Bog Spavins, Capped Elbow Big Leg, Enlarged Glands, etc.

No Blister; No Laying up
No Hair Removed.

RADIOL TREATMENT fines down a worn Horse's Legs and is a certain cure for Puffy Joints and Sprains, Prevents Filled Legs.

An intelligent use of the "RADIOL LEG WASH" counteracts that daily wear and tear of the legs unavoidable with the Horse in constant work, whether training, racing, or on the road.

One flask of "RADIOL" will make a GALLON of valuable Leg Wash.

"The Field," June 16th, 1906:—

"We have been able to test some trial bottles of "RADIOL" in cases of Wind-galls, Splints and Puffy swellings and have found "RADIOL" to be very beneficial, and we have also found it useful as a leg wash for polo ponies after a day's play."

To be obtained from Kroom & Co., Calcutta; Treacher & Co., Bombay; W. E. Smith & Co., Mount Road, Madras; Heath & Son, Sharia Maghraky, Cairo; W. Wilson, Rawal Pindi and Murree; The Mombassa Pharmacy, Mombassa.

A MILLIONAIRE gave his little daughter, at Christmas, a superb doll's house—a doll's house lighted with electricity, that had baths and a garage, and even in one corner of its garage a tiny doll monoplane.

"Well my dear, do you like your new doll's house?" the little girl's father asked her one day during Christmas week.

"Oh, yes, papa; tremendously," she replied. "But I've let it furnished to Cousin Angela for five shillings a month."

THE TURF.

HURST PARK.

THERE was enough frost to throw a film of ice on the surface water in the Thames Valley on the previous night, but on Saturday the weather was clear enough at Hurst Park, though towards the finish the mist began to steal back over Molesey Hurst.

The attendance proved up to the average, and though the hurdle racecourse was a bit heavy in places, the steeplechase track was in excellent order. Several falls occurred, with little damage, and the honours of the afternoon rested with Gore's stable, which supplied two winners for Sir C. Ashton-Smith. Results:—

HURST PARK FOUR-YEAR-OLD SELLING HURDLE RACE—Of 150sovs. 2 miles.

Won by three-lengths; half a length off dead-heat for third place.

Monday was one of those half-and-half days when it ought to rain but did not, and under a uniform leaden sky the temperature challenged that of Devonshire. A marked improvement was shown in the attendance, and though the going was heavy for this well-grassed track, fields panned out particularly well, the feature in a full and interesting afternoon's sport being the reassuring form shown by that grand horse, Jerry M., who credited Gore's stable with a third win at the meeting. Results:—

WOLVERHAMPTON.

It is a far cry to Wolverhampton for the Londoner, and the bulk of a good attendance on Monday was supplied from the Black Country, whose inhabitants are keen enough on all branches of sport, while a fairly good muster occupied the members' enclosure. A drizzling rain all night and morning had made the ground

Much of the holiday element was eliminated from Tuesday's attendance, which, under drizzly, foggy conditions, went to prove how sturdily the Anglo-Saxon race follows sport under adverse conditions, as umbrellas were necessary nearly all the afternoon, and the smoky mist having increased in density, allowed little of the racing to be seen.

The incessant drizzle had put a greasier surface on the course at the jumps; in fact, two of the three runners in the first race fell to begin with, while despite the heavy going fields passed out fairly well in a modest programme restricted to five events by the walk-over of Furdysburn in the concluding event. Results:—

NEWBURY.

Newbury appears to have sound cause of action against the weather gods for spoiling what promised to be an exceptionally interesting day's sport.

Persistent rain not only reduced the course to such a condition that some owners refused to run their horses, but it kept all save the stalwarts away from the meeting on Wednesday. Anything more depressing it would be difficult to imagine, and it was with a sigh of relief that winners and losers alike turned their backs on the place. Such conditions of "going" are often ruinous to backers by upsetting the form, and the fact was painfully borne in on them. Results:—

.405 Caliber Model 1895 Rifle

THE MOST POWERFUL REPEATER MADE.

In the confidence that comes from knowing that one is equipped to meet the largest or most dangerous prowler of the jungle is often found success. The .405 Winchester is the most powerful repeating rifle made. Its 300-grain, soft-point bullet has sufficient shocking power to stop any game alive. Note the tremendous velocity and energy shown by the following figures: velocity, 2204 foot seconds; energy, 3236 foot pounds. The rifle holds five cartridges, which can be fired in rapid succession, each shot delivering a ton and a half of energy. Simple of operation, reliable in action and accurate in shooting, it is used by famous big-game hunters in all parts of the world.

FOOTBALL.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

In marked contrast to the usual experience in connection with the first round of the Association Cup, Saturday's games furnished scarcely a single real surprise. Newcastle United, it is true, went down before Derby County, whom they had knocked out of the competition in the fourth round last season at Newcastle, but yesterday's contest took place at Derby, and Newcastle United, although runners-up in 1911 and winners in 1910, have not won a Cup-tie on opponents' ground for three years. Apart from Newcastle United, the only other First League team to be knocked out by antagonists not belonging to that organisation were Sheffield United, and they have now suffered defeat in the first round of the Cup for six years in succession. Altogether the opening stage of the struggle proved a great triumph for the First Leaguers, of whom eleven won their games and four others drew—Bradford City (the holders of the Cup) at Park Royal, Oldham Athletic at Oldham, and Middlesbrough with Sheffield Wednesday at Ayresome Park. Thus whereas the draw prevented more than sixteen First League clubs qualifying for the second round, it is possible, when the drawn matches have been replayed in the course of the week, that fourteen will have achieved that distinction. While Second Leaguers held their own creditably with First Division clubs, Southern League teams came badly to grief against the senior teams, five being knocked out, and Queen's Park Rangers alone effecting a draw. As some compensation for these reverses two Southern League clubs earned the right to participate in the next stage of the competition by victories over members of the Second League, that satisfaction falling to Northampton and West Ham United.

London clubs for the most part fared badly. Of the twelve metropolitan teams, seven enjoyed the advantage of playing at home, but, so far, only Fulham and West Ham United, in addition to Chelsea, have victories to their credit. Either Brentford or Crystal Palace, who drew at Griffin Park, must also pull through, but Queen's Park Rangers can scarcely be regarded as likely to beat the Cup-holders at Bradford, and the chances of Croydon Common outclassing Leicester Fosse at Leicester are far from hopeful. Moreover, Tottenham Hotspur, Woolwich Arsenal, Clapton Orient, Millwall, and Leyton are all to be numbered among the fallen. The Arsenal put up a very close fight against Bolton Wanderers at Burnden Park, a solitary and somewhat lucky goal by Smith just before the interval deciding the issue, but at West Bromwich the Tottenham team although also only one goal behind at half-time, lost by 3 to 0. In the three other instances of London clubs being dismissed from the competition, an odd goal decided the issue. Leyton lost by no more than 1 to 0 at Liverpool—a highly creditable achievement considering that just recently Liverpool had beaten five First League clubs in succession—but Millwall greatly disappointed expectations in going down before Bury at Gigg Lane by 2 to 1. At Homerton, Clapton Orient made a bold fight with Everton, holding their own up to halfway through the second portion of the game, although a goal down half a minute from the kick-off. Late on the match the satisfaction fell to Brolwell, Everton's new centre-forward, to put on a second and deciding goal for the Lancashire club, whose defence is so strong that Saturday's goal by Bevan, the Orient centre, was only the second registered against them in the course of seven consecutive engagements.

A very small measure of success too, attended the South-country clubs outside London. Certainly Swindon scored heavily against Sutton Junction and Reading won at Southport, but the victory of Portsmouth was achieved at the expense of another South-country team in Bristol Rovers. Members of the Southern League, Northampton, and Coventry are, of course, really Midland teams and their successes entailed the disappearance from the competition of Bristol City and Southampton—both runners-up for the Cup in previous years. Norwich City actually did not rob Blackburn Rovers of the splendid record possessed by the latter club for games at Ewood Park this season; indeed, they lost by 4 to 1 and Plymouth Argyle, as expected, failed to hold their own with Sunderland at Roker Park, while, although enjoying the advantage of playing at home against Notts County, Luton suffered defeat by 4 to 2, the Nottingham men scoring all their goals before any success attended the efforts of the Luton men. Watford held their own with Wolverhampton Wanderers, but they cannot possibly cherish much hope of prevailing against the Wanderers at Wolverhampton.

Of the 32 tries, 17 were won by home teams and seven by visiting elevens, the distinction of gaining a victory away from home being enjoyed by Everton, Manchester City, Notts County, Bradford, Coventry, Portsmouth and Reading. A draw resulted in eight instances, and as in the replays Hull City, Barnsley, Wolverhampton Wanderers, Leicester Fosse, and Blackpool compete on their own grounds there exist an excellent prospect of the list of five Second League clubs that have already qualified for the second round being appreciably increased. The other replays take place at Owlerton (Sheffield), Valley Parade (Bradford), and the Crystal Palace. Scoring ruled unusually low, the 32 matches yielding only 74 goals in all, 50 being registered by home clubs and 24 by their opponents. Twenty-five clubs failed to score at all, and nineteen others had to rest content with one goal apiece, only eight out of the 64 teams securing more than a couple of goals.

RUGBY RULES.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

CHESHIRE vs. YORKSHIRE.—A well-contested match at Birkenhead rather unexpectedly ended in a draw, each county scoring one goal and one try. The weather was fine and 3,000 spectators were present. Yorkshire were without their international forwards, but they opened the game in strong fashion, and only hard tackling by Woodhouse and Pemberton kept them out. Cheshire occasionally pressed, but eventually Yorkshire took up the attack again and Clarke obtained a try, which Harrison failed to convert. At half-time Yorkshire led by a try to nil. Yorkshire started the second half with a brisk attack, but Cheshire soon retaliated, and a brilliant round of passing resulted in a try by Folds. Fearnside failed to kick a goal. The Yorkshire pressed again, and Steinthall gained a try, which Harrison converted. In the closing stages Cheshire played with great determination, and eventually Wilman ran in under the post and Fearnside kicked a goal, thus making the scores level. Cheshire, 8 points; Yorkshire, 8 points.

OLD LEYSIANS vs. OLD WHITGIFTIANS.—The ground at Wandsworth was naturally soft, and the Leysians, starting in excellent form, quickly scored three tries against the visitors. The first was gained on the right wing by Walker, who ran round and touched down under the bar for Pinkham to unaccountably miss an easy goal. Next Williams received the opposing back and also scored between the posts, Pepper on this occasion converting. Lastly, the third try was scored by Pinkham, the full-back, amidst considerable cheering. More even football followed, and just before the change of ends Yates got over for the Whitgiftians. This, as it happened, was the last score of the match. All through the second half the Leysians' backs were continually getting the ball, but they were met by magnificent tackling, players being continually brought down just as a try seemed certain. In the end the Old Leysians retained their unbeaten record, winning by a goal and two tries to a try. Old Leysians, 11 points; old Whitgiftians, 3 points.

LONDON WELSH vs. ROSSLYN PARK.—Rosslyn Park were beaten by a representative side of the London Welsh at Wandsworth by four tries to one try. The winners showed much improved form, and for the first twenty minutes played excellent all-round football. Maddocks was chiefly instrumental in the scoring, his resourcefulness contributing to each of the three first tries. Scoring the first himself, he threw wide to Williams, enabling the latter to gain the second, and again, when placed in a tight corner, passed nicely to Williams, who sent Pawley over on the third occasion. The Welsh were continually attacking, and during the first half the visitors only twice invaded their opponents' territory. On resuming, however, the Rosslyn Park forwards put plenty of life into the game, and they consequently held their own for quite a long time. Pressing continually, their efforts at last proved successful, for Barry Wells broke through following a rush. This score, however, made little difference in the result, for the Welsh went further ahead with a try by Howell. London Welsh, 12 points; Rosslyn Park, 3 points.

GUY'S HOSPITAL vs. BLACKHEATH.—Blackheath took a very weak team to Honor Oak Park and were defeated by Guy's Hospital by a goal and a try to a goal. The visitors were without both their half-backs, two of their three-quarters, and five of their leading forwards. The ground was very heavy and the ball was very difficult to handle. In the first half Blackheath made the only score, Dodds putting in a great run and passing to Levey, who scored for Dickson to kick a goal. In the second half Guy's had the best of the game, and twice crossed the Blackheath line. J. P. Jones, after a good run with Brook, obtained a try in a good position, and A. L. Stokes converted. Then, the forwards rushing down, Pritchard scored a try, which was not converted, but sufficed to give Guy's the victory. Guy's Hospital, 8 points; Blackheath, 5 points.

LONDON SCOTTISH vs. HARLEQUINS.—The Harlequins' win over the London Scottish at Richmond by 2 placed goals and 4 tries to 1 placed goal and 1 dropped goal was honestly earned. For three-fourths of the time the Scottish had the ball from the scrummages, but the opposing halves, Stoop and Pym, played nicely together, making many openings for the men behind them, and the three-quarters often turned their opportunities to account. For ten minutes the play was all in favour of the Scottish, but Dodds, after some passing, ran in for the Harlequins, and Kingscote placed a goal. Kerr cleverly dropped a goal for the Scottish, before Stoop and Brougham added tries for the Harlequins, one of these tries being converted. The Harlequins were leading at half-time by 13 points to 4. Early in the second half Lockhart got over for the Scotsmen, and then converted his, but in the subsequently play Brougham, Carter, and Birkett scored further tries for the Harlequins, none of which were improved. Harlequins, 22 points; London Scottish, 9 points.

Streatham vs. London Irish.—Playing on their own ground, Streatham gained a narrow win over the London Irish by two tries to a goal. Dickson and Phillips scored the tries for Streatham and Morton converted a try by Barratt.

Old Alleynians vs. Trojans.—A hard and exciting game at Dulwich was won by the Old Alleynians by two goals (one penalty) and two tries to four tries. The Trojans played a strong forward, and on the whole were a little unlucky to lose. The place-kicking, however, was faulty.

Dublin Wanderers vs. Richmond.—There was a moderate attendance at this match at Dublin, and a rather poor game was won by the Wanderers by four tries to two tries.

Royal Navy Chatham vs. United Services.—The Services at Portsmouth put a poor side into the field and were defeated by five tries to one try. The forwards were well matched, but Chatham were superior behind the scrummage.

Bristol vs. Cardiff.—A hard game at Bristol ended in favour of Cardiff by one goal to a try. Jenkins scored for Cardiff and Dyke placed the goal. Marks gained the Bristol try.

Leicester vs. Gloucester.—In the presence of 8,000 spectators Gloucester won at Leicester by a dropped goal and a try to nothing. Dick dropped a goal and Weatbourne gained a try.

Devonport Services vs. Devon Albion Reserve.—At Devonport the Devon Albion team won by four goals (one penalty) and four tries to one try. The Services were quite outplayed, the Albion backs showing excellent form.

Llanelly vs. Swansea.—A hard game at Llanelly ended in a pointless draw. Swansea had a weak team and played much better than was expected, their defence being admirable.

Northampton vs. Moseley.—A fast game at Northampton was won by the home side by four tries to a goal and two tries. It was a capital match all through, Moseley came very near winning at the finish.

Penarth vs. Newport.—Playing at Penarth the Newport fifteen won by two goals (one penalty) and two tries to nothing. Penarth made a good fight up to half-time, but afterwards were quite outplayed.

Edinburgh Academicals vs. Kelvinside Academicals.—At Edinburgh the home Academicals defeated Kelvinside by three goals and three tries to none. Throughout the Edinburgh team had the best of matters, though Kelvinside made something of a show in the second half. Their passing, however, was very weak.

Glasgow Academicals vs. Watsonians.—At Glasgow the Watsonians gained an easy victory by two goals and six tries to two tries. Six thousand spectators were present, but the game was not particularly interesting.

Edinburgh University vs. Stewartonians.—Playing at home Edinburgh University beat the Stewartonians by two goals and eight tries to one try. The forwards were fairly matched but the University backs were the superior.

BILLIARDS.

GRAY AGAIN BEATS STEVENSON.

AMID a remarkable scene of enthusiasm among an attendance which crowded the St. George's Hall, Liverpool, George Gray beat Harry Stevenson in the second test match on Saturday evening by 771 points. The Australian's victory was not, however, so comfortably obtained, as the margin would suggest, Stevenson giving his young rival a big fright during the final stage, when, after being 300 behind before he had the chance of striking a ball, he pushed his score peg along to within 316 of the Australian's.

TREACHER & CO., LD.,

BOMBAY & POONA.

It was a magnificent attempt on the part of the champion to secure another run for his backer's £500, and his plucky uphill fight received recognition at the end when, following a call of "One for the loser," round after round of applause made the rafters ring.

Big attendances are seldom attracted to a billiard match in Liverpool on a Saturday afternoon, but the penultimate stage of the "test" game proved an exception, the hall being crowded when proceeding were continued. Both players were a trifle "nervy" at the outset, and the first few hands were played for best efforts of 33 (from 20 unfinished) by Stevenson, and 37 by Gray, the latter being at fault with his screw shots, and Stevenson with his cushion cannons. Eventually the Englishman broke away with a fine all-round 131, but was materially assisted by a fluke at 50, and finally came to grief at a two-cushion cannon played with the left hand.

No response coming from Gray, Stevenson came back to add a useful 68 next hand, but it was not gathered in his happiest vein. Failure at an ordinary deep cannon set up nice position for Gray, who showed his appreciation by collecting 90 off the red ball ere miscueing when attempting an intricate quarter ball cross loser. Stevenson responded with a remarkable break of 153, in which he was always in difficulties, and was unlucky in the end to be deprived of position by a "touch," and though negotiating the long white loser all right, a wide screw cushion cannon defeated him a few strokes later. He was at this stage less than 300 behind the Australian, but with 45 and 62 the latter drew away again, though a quantity of useful runs of 41, 47, 53, and 39 by the champion once more made things very interesting.

Subsequently Stevenson ran into a groove of very bad luck, and for the remainder of the session his best breaks were 65 and 75. Gray's experiences were of a more happy description, for subsequent to a very fine 133, a glaring fluke opened up the all-red route, and a valuable 149 was the result. Another fluke gave him a 48 next hand, and yet a third fluke a fine 156, and following the latter with 88 (unfinished), he ran to his points holding the brightest prospects of victory. He had, of course, much to thank Dame Fortune for, but all the same the Australian played splendid billiards during that most eventful closing hour on Saturday afternoon. Gray aggregated 914 to 797, for averages of 36·56 and 30·61 respectively. Interval scores:—

Gray (in play)	17,252
Stevenson	16,606

Taking up his unfinished effort of 88 when play was resumed before a crowded house, Gray maintained his succession of losing hazards until 241 had been recorded. A long shot to the top right pocket prefaced his downfall, the white coming out, and although the red fell in the middle pocket, the ultimate position was hopeless. Whatever hope might have existed among the supporters of Stevenson vanished during the progress of this contribution, and this was emphasised when the champion could only collect 38 as a result of three visits. The Colonial, too, was having a succession of small additions, six journeys to the table bringing him but 19. Stevenson came in with 97, whilst Gray's idea of a safety leave was mastered by Stevenson, who executed a magnificent cannon as preliminary to a further break of 93, 43 following subsequently.

Gray responded with 93, and Stevenson roused the audience to enthusiasm with 64 and an exceptionally fine 184, whilst a moment later he gathered 67. At this juncture he had aggregated 621 points against 133 by Gray since the latter's opening item, and as the Australian had apparently lost touch, visions of a sensational finish began to take shape. Gray, however, dispelled them when he compiled 130, and with Stevenson again failing to mark up an adequate response, Gray finally took possession of the table and, by means mainly of the all-red route, travelled to game with 317 (unfinished). For several minutes subsequently he was occupied in bowing his acknowledgments to the audience.

The referee (Mr. George Reid) then opened the sealed envelopes containing Messrs. Burroughes and Watts's cheque for £60 and the breaks apportioned to each player by the Editor of the Sporting Life, Gray being announced as winner of the cheque for his break of 839, made on Tuesday evening. Final scores:—

Gray	18,000

'VARSITY BOAT RACE.

CAMBRIDGE.—As was fully expected, there were some drastic changes in the Light Blue crew this week but it is doubtful if some of the alterations would have been made so soon had Wankowicz kept fit. At the end of last week he was troubled with a very bad cold, and was unable to row yesterday. Accordingly Goldsmith shifted from No. 3 to No. 5; S. E. Swann, last year's bow, came in at No. 3; and there was also an alteration at stroke, the president superseding Collins, but the cricket Blue is evidently not discarded, as he was "tubbed" during the afternoon. The Blue, R. le Blanc Smith, continues to take exercise, and yesterday morning went for a long run along the towing path.

Small boat exercise commenced at the usual time, Mr. Gibbon advising Goldsmith and Dobb, Swann and Burnand, Pilcher and Collins, Heyland and Arbuthnot. The "ship" was launched at 3-20, and Mr. Gibbon was accompanied by Messrs. R. le Blanc Smith, C. A. Skinner, and C. Collins. The crew paddled to Baitsbite Lock and back. Amended order and weights:—

	st	lb.
G. St. C. Pilcher, First Trinity (bow)	10	9
C. F. Burnand, First Trinity	12	10
S. E. Swann, Trinity Hall	11	10
R. S. Shove, First Trinity	12	6
J. H. Goldsmith, Jesus	12	12
H. R. Dobb, Pembroke	13	3
H. V. Heyland, Pembroke	12	5

OXFORD.—Oxford commence practice on the Isis to-morrow when in all probability, Professor G. C. Bourne father of the president, will supervise the work. As last year Professor Bourne will be responsible for the coaching during the earlier part of the training, and will probably be relieved by Mr. Harold R. Barker (the old Christ Church Blue), and Mr. Harcourt Gold will put the finishing touches on when the crew arrives at Putney. It is expected that Oxford will do a part of their training at Henley, to which course they will probably migrate about the end of February.

The prospects are very rosy. President Bourne has almost a plethora of good talent for the two or three vacant seats. As to the final constitution of the crew so much depends upon whether A. S. Garton, of Magdalen, will row or not. It was understood several weeks ago that he would be available. If Oxford could get a crew from men at present in residence without calling upon Garton, it might probably consist of N. M. Bruce, Christ Church (bow); E. D. Horsfall, Magdalen (2); Tinne, University, or Ballieu, Magdalen, (3); L. G. Wormald, Magdalen (4); A. H. Wedderburn, Balliol (5); A. F. R. Wiggins, New (6); C. W. B. Litteljohn, New (7); R. C. Bourne, New (str); H. B. Wells, Magdalen (cox).

In the event of Garton being called upon, he would presumably occupy his accustomed position at 6, which would mean the transference of Wormald and Wiggins further up the boat. The preliminary practice will be followed with interest.

COUNTRY LIFE CHALLENGE CUP

Semi-finals.

THE semi-finals of this Handicap Tournament were played off at Lucknow on the 31st January before a very large attendance. The 8th Hussars with a credit of one goal in the handicap beat the 13th Hussars, after a most exciting game, by 5 goals to 4, and the King's Own with 7 goals in the handicap, defeated the 12th Cavalry by 9 goals to 6. Details:—

8TH HUSSARS vs. 13TH HUSSARS.

First Chukker.—The 13th Hussars scored two goals in rapid succession. The 8th attacked for the rest of the period and were rewarded with two goals. Score: 8th Hussars, 3 goals; 13th Hussars, 2 goals.

Second Chukker.—The 8th hit a goal early and continued to press. Play was then transferred to their end and a long shot just going outside their flags. Score: 8th Hussars, 4 goals; 13th Hussars, 3 goals.

Third Chukker.—There were determined attacks on both goals alternately, Richardson finally sending the ball through for the 13th. A subsequent hit for goal by the 8th went wide. Score: 8th Hussars, 4 goals; 13th Hussars, 3 goals.

Fourth Chukker. There was a rigorous attack on the 8th Hussars' goal which was finely defended. After a brief space the 13th Hussars made two more onslaughts, but without success

Fifth Chukker.—The 13th continued to hold a slight advantage in frequency of attack and finally scored from a scrimmage in front of the flags. Score: 4 goals all.

Sixth Chukker.—The 13th made repeated assaults. A foul was given against them at the close, but the penalty shot was without result.

Extra Chukker.—Play was chiefly in the 8th Hussars' end, frequent hits at goal going wide. Then from a foul against the 13th Mort sent the ball through for the 8th. Final score: 8th Hussars, 5 goals; 13th Hussars, 4 goals. Teams:—

THE KING'S OWN vs. 12TH CAVALRY.

First Chukker.—The King's Own obtained seven goals in the handicap. Kerans hit two goals for the Cavalry The King's Own then obtained possession but a shot at goal went outside. Score: King's Own, 7 goals; 12th Cavalry, 2 goals.

Second Chukker.—After a fine defence the Cavalry scored from a melee. The King's Own then got away and Uzielli hit a goal. Score: King's Own 8 goals; 12th Cavalry, 3 goals.

Third Chukker.—Indecisive play, till finally the Cavalry hit a goal.

Fourth Chukker.—Uzielli scored for the King's Own. Play was then transferred to their own end, but the Cavalry's shot at goal went wide. Score: King's Own, 9 goals; 12th Cavalry, 4 goals.

Fifth Chukker.—Continuing on the offensive the Cavalry got through early in the chukker. Level play followed. Score: King's Own, 9 goals; 12th Cavalry, 5 goals

Sixth Chukker.—Alternate attacks were made and both teams were within an ace of scoring. The cavalry eventually hit a goal from a well directed shot. Final Score: King's Own, 9 goals; 12th Cavalry, 6 goals. Teams:—

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

ANOTHER annual contest between the English Schools and Indian Schools has come and gone and yet another defeat has the latter sustained. Saturday and Sunday's game was the seventh played, and with the exception of the one in 1909 in which the Indian Schools gained a victory the English Schools have won all the other games.

When this contest was first arranged the Indian Schools included no non-Christians, but as the first two or three games resulted in easy victories for the English side, the Indian Schools being unable to get men of the Lowty class, it was decided that Mahomedans and Hindus should also be invited.

In 1909 the Indian Schools won handsomely by 190 runs and the following year the English Schools won after an exciting match by 18 runs.

Last Saturday and Sunday's game produced a still more exciting finish, as the Indians only lost by 15 runs, but had Marsden been kept on to bowl instead of McCready the Indian Schools would probably have won. McCready was not only off in his bowling, but his field was sadly arranged, for instead of having a man at long on he should have had an extra cover.

G. Banerji of the Howrah Sporting, who has never played in important matches, should never have been picked and the Indian Schools were also handicapped owing to Seshachari having declined the invitation to play.

B. Mukerji, of Cooch Behar and Aryan fame, was not included in the team as he had not played for about a month, but for that matter with the exception of Nattore's men the others also lacked practice. B. Riggs was asked at the eleventh hour and had no time to get the leave, and it was lucky that Baloo was in Calcutta to assist the side, and that C. M. Ali, another Nattore's man, was taken to fill up the gap just before the match started.

Although Quiterio was blamed for losing the match by keeping McCready on to bowl as long as he did when the latter was being punished so severely, it was more the bowler's own fault than his captain's, that so many runs were thrown away, for, had McCready only had a man at extra-cover both Guise and Rossiter's scores would have been greatly minimised. McCready, however, made amends by contributing 42, but had Banerji, who neither showed to advantage in batting or fielding, been left out, and Seshachari turned out I have no hesitation in saying that the Indian Schools would have won by just as narrow a margin as they had lost. Of course had Seshachari played C. M. Ali would not have been picked and while the English Schools would have got a smaller total the Indian Schools would also have scored fewer runs, for it was Nattore's batsman C. M. Ali who contributed a not out 55, the highest individual score on the side. It would not have been proper to ask Banerji to stand out after he had been selected to represent the side; but, of course, selection Committees invariably do make awful blunders. It is to be hoped next year the men that are chosen are players who have played in representative matches and not in third rate local cricket half-day games.

The English Schools had out the strongest eleven available, for although Chisholm could not play owing to an injured knee, there were quite a number of good bowlers, while in batting the side was the strongest that has taken the field this year, even against Nattore such a strong batting eleven has never been pitted, the three military officers Bocquet, Lightfoot and Rossiter, being included in the team. The wicket was in excellent condition and Bocquet having the good fortune to win the toss himself went in first along with White. Baloo and Sampre started the bowling and the batsmen scored 20 each. Carter, who has never contributed much against good bowling, was beaten for 1, and Turnbull got 11. Four wickets for 67 was the state of affairs when Rossiter and Guise were associated. Both batsmen hit well, but the Artillery officer had a bit of luck, as there was a skier which Banerji should have gone for, and a little later Sampre dropped Rossiter at "mid-off," Baloo being the bowler to suffer. Guise got 4 boundaries off McCready between cover and mid off and had there been a man placed at extra-cover only singles would have resulted from these shots. Mehta once should have stumped

HIGH VELOCITY

GAME RIFLES.

The accuracy, workmanship and solidity of build of the well-known B.S.A. L.-E. Sporting Rifles are, despite the very low prices of these weapons, unsurpassed even in the most expensive hand made game rifles. They are beautifully finished and "come up" just as nicely and freely as a well-made shot gun.

The B.S.A. Lee-Enfield ·375 bore rifle (270 grain bullet) has been introduced mainly because the ·375 is a very popular cartridge and may readily be obtained in any part of India. It is recommended because of its inexpensive character and its utility as an express arm for killing even the heaviest of game up to 300 yards or so. Energy 2,336 feet lbs.

B.S.A. Sporting Rifles are made also for the ·315 (8 m.m.) cartridge, and are sighted up to 300 yards only specially for India. Bullet 240 grains, energy 2,200 feet lbs.

Rossiter, but considering that the Parsee has not kept wickets for several years, except in cases of accidents, Mehta did far better than one could expect. However, when Rossiter was at last beaten by Sampre the board showed 151—5—57. Although the Artillery Officer's innings was by no means faultless he hit splendidly and largely contributed to the success of his side. Guise got 38 and Cumberlege 25, and on Saturday, when stumps were drawn for the day, the score was 204 for 7 wickets.

The following morning Marsden, who had only bowled three overs the evening previous for 3 runs, was given a chance with the ball and the Customs man did himself justice by taking the remaining three wickets at a cost of 10 runs, his average for the match being 3 for 18. The English Schools' innings closed for 224—a total which should have been much minimised.

The Indian Schools did not do badly, their venture closing for 209, but the match had been lost the day previous. McCready, who gave 39 runs without taking a wicket, however, contributed 42, but Mehta and C. M. Ali batted remarkably well for 46 and not out 55 respectively. N. Ali, of Aligarh fame, scored 12 and fielded well; while Barlow also did his share by subscribing 25. Baloo, Sampre and Marsden, although they failed in batting, all bowled well; but Roy and Quiterio, two good batsmen, did not come off; while Banerji showed neither to advantage on the field nor did he make amends in the batting line. The English Schools, although a bit lucky, are entitled to their hard-earned victory.

Boxing.

BOXING IN THE ARMY.

II.

BOXING MEETINGS.

BOXING Meetings encourage and stimulate men to take up boxing, and give them an object for which they can train and practise; consequently, if frequent meetings are held throughout the season, a continued interest will be maintained, and the boxing throughout a regiment will be considerably improved. The importance of this continuity is not sufficiently realised. Many regiments seem to think it quite sufficient to run one big meeting during the season; they lose sight of the primary object of the meeting, and draw up a most extravagant programme for the benefit of a few prominent boxers; they pledge themselves to pay large purses from an entirely problematical gate, and the organisers suffer considerable worry and anxiety from the prospect of possible failure. There is, too, as a rule, no experienced (boxing meeting) staff capable of assisting in the management, and the whole responsibility generally falls on the shoulders of a single energetic and over-worked individual, who is naturally not anxious to repeat the experiment of holding further meetings.

These very meetings, on which are so much time and money expended, are often dismal failures both financially and from the spectators' point of view. The chief reason why they are not financially successful is because contests are arranged without sufficient forethought. Instead of matches between prominent men of the regiment and others from the garrison, contests are arranged between men from a distance, which, besides costing much money, create little or no local interest. Frequently third-rate civilians are engaged to fight 10-round contests, which are seldom instructive or edifying, and are always contrary to the spirit of Service meetings. Again, these over-ambitious meetings are disappointing from a spectators' point of view, for usually they are too protracted. There are too many long contests of eight and ten rounds' duration, tedious exhibitions, which tend to bore the onlookers, and often to ruin the prospects of promising young boxers by inciting them to go long "distances" before they possess either the requisite skill or stamina. These long drawn-out contests are also the chief causes of the hugging and clinching evil. But the worst effects of these ambitious meetings are that they "spoil the market" for other units, which have less ambitious but more sporting aims.

It is a welcome order of the Royal Navy and Army Boxing Association, which insists on a fixed scale for purses and limits the duration of contests. Boxers will soon discover that, with the disappearance of long contests, there will be an increase in the number of boxing meetings held during the season.

In holding boxing meetings there are three important points which must be borne in mind. First, that the meetings are to encourage and maintain interest in boxing; secondly, that they are the means of furthering true sport throughout the Army; thirdly, that they should be at least financially self-supporting.

With regard to the first point, there should at least be five meetings held during the season, each of which should consist of a series of short contests, arranged for the more advanced boxers, and several competitions at varying weights for those less prominent and novices. The contests may vary from three to six rounds. Men who have "won their spurs" in competitions should be given at first minor three-round contests; then, if they continue to improve, they should be promoted to more important contests against better men. By this means men will be encouraged to climb the ladder, and often it will be found that recruits who commenced the season as novices before its close will have fought their way to the front, and gained the distinction of being selected to fight even six-round contests. Several competitions should be held, the weights being varied at each meeting. It is best to hold two novices' competitions and one open to the regiment. For the definition of a novice it should be remembered that a man may not box in a novice competition if he has won previously in the same or any higher class. For instance, a man may not enter for a regimental novice competition if he has already won a similar competition or a brigade event. But there is nothing to prevent him boxing in a brigade novices' competition if he has previously won a regimental novices' event.

It is well, too, that occasionally inter-regimental matches should be arranged, for nothing tends to raise the tone of boxing or to make it more sporting than when men can be induced to box for the honour of their regiment or company. These matches bring out the very best traits of boxing, and are of immense value for raising the tone of the sport to the highest degree. It is sometimes urged that such matches breed ill-feeling between regiments, but no more ill-feeling results from a boxing match than from an inter-regimental football match: in the majority of cases far less. The regimental boxing team should consist of six men selected to represent the regiment at each of the recognised weights, and its captain should be that member of the team who has the best influence on boxing in the regiment.

An annual meeting should be held to decide the champion boxing company. Competitions should be held at each weight and every man that enters and is a genuine "trier" should be awarded one mark. The winner of each bout should gain another mark. In the second series the marking should be similar, and so on throughout the competition until the winner is found. He will receive one mark more than any other competitor. A man who draws a bye and wins his bout in the second series should be awarded three marks. The champion company will be the one which gains the greatest total number of marks in all the competitions.

Care should be exercised in allowing members of the regimental team to enter these competitions. Their entry is likely to deter less skilful men from entering, and, at the same time, to rob the competitions in which they take part of interest. A good plan is to debar members of the regimental team from entering, but, in order that their company shall not suffer, to award them one mark more than the total points of the winners at their particular weights. The winners of these competitions should receive bronze medals, and each member of the regimental team a silver medal. During the company championship meeting a match should be arranged for the regimental team. A meeting of this description creates keen interest.

TRAILL & CO., LD., Calcutta.

It is most undesirable to add to the expenses of a boxing club by losing financially over boxing meetings. By means of sound organisation and a judicious arrangement of matches and contests these should be more than self-supporting. A great point to remember is not to try and make it a purely money-making concern. Arrange contests which are likely to create local interest, and do not offer large purses or arrange contests of long duration. A brisk meeting of about three hours' duration, with variety, is the best both from a boxing and spectators' point of view.

Companies should also hold small meetings which consist of a series of minor contests between their leading lights and men from other companies. Company novices' competitions should also be included, in which men may be induced to box who, owing to shyness or lack of confidence, will not enter the regimental boxing competitions. If such men are nursed and encouraged by these small competitions, they will gradually gain in skill and confidence, and, working their way up, may perhaps ultimately win regimental open or novices' competitions. These small company meetings can be held in empty barrack rooms, or the boxing club's room could be borrowed for the occasion. Such novices' competitions give excellent practice for judging and refereeing

The success and smooth working of the actual meeting entirely depends on how every little detail has been considered and taken into account, and on the working capability of the boxing meeting staff. The president of the club must allot each of these definite duties, and must ascertain that these duties are thoroughly understood. The staff should comprise the president, the two vice-presidents the M. C., the register keeper, and the ring manager. The M. C., besides introducing all competitors to the audience, will have charge of all police arrangements, and be responsible for good order. He should distribute reliable non-commissioned officers and men among the audience to assist in creating an orderly spirit. He should never stand up near the ring side while a bout is in progress and shout for order, as this has the effect of interrupting the boxers and often only irritates the audience.

The register keeper carries out all the clerical work during the meeting. He should be seated at the president's table, near the ring. He is responsible that the programme is kept up to time, and that the referee and judges are each provided with one. He should make out the names of all winners of prizes as soon as they are declared, and hand them to the president, so that there is no delay between the termination of the meeting and the prize giving. He should be given two orderlies to carry the slips, etc. All the ticket-sellers and ticket-collectors will be under him.

The brunt of the work falls on the shoulders of the ring manager, who should, as a rule, be the battalion representative on the boxing committee. He will be responsible for the erection of stage and ring, for the dressing room arrangements, colours for boxers, boxing gloves, and the seating accommodation. He will assist at the weighing-in. During the progress of the meeting he is responsible that no time is wasted between bouts. Under the ring manager will be the seconds, who, besides seconding boxers, are in charge of towels, basins, etc. There should be three dressers to assist the ring manager, one whom will find competitors in plenty of time for their bouts, and hand them over to the second dresser, who will put on their boxing gloves and colours. The third dresser will take the gloves and colours off the competitors as they leave the ring and will put them in the dressing room. Ring managers should marshal all the winners and arrange them in order according to the prizes. In calculating the probable duration of a boxing meeting, a useful formula to remember is, that the number of bouts equals the number of competitors, minus the number of competitions. For instance, if there are six competitions, feather-weights, light-weights etc., and 100 men turn up to fight, then the number of bouts to be fought off is 100 minus six, or 94 bouts. Allow four minutes plus actual time for each bout. For instance if bouts were to be three two-minutes rounds, then the duration of a bout equals 10 minutes. Therefore duration of above meeting would be 10 minutes multiplied by 94, or 15 hours 40 minutes.

All meetings should be judiciously advertised. Post up bills advertising the meetings in all canteens, institutes, etc., in the garrison. Prices of seats for meeting should vary from 3d., 6d., and 1s. to 2s and 3s., according to the size of the meeting and the interest it is likely to create. It is a good plan to sell as many tickets beforehand as possible. Tickets should be given to selected non-commissioned officers from each company to sell to men of their companies. If ready money is not required, the men need not be asked to pay for their tickets until the following pay day. In order to bring home more clearly the small cost of running a meeting in which prizes are judiciously given, we will take a meeting which includes four competitions—with an aggregate of 42 entries—and six contests. The prizes are arranged according to the scale laid down in the rules of the R. N. and A.B.A., Part III. (b):—

		Value of Prizes. £ s.
1.	Novice competition, 10st. 7lb.:
	Class A, 10 entries	1 0
	Prize for good loser	0 2
2.	Novice competition, 11st.:
	Class A, 12 entries	1 4
	Two prizes, good losers	0 4
3.	Ordinary competition, 9st.:
	Class A, 9 entries	1 7
	Prize for good loser	0 3
4.	Ordinary competition, 9st. 7lb.:
	Class A 11 entries	1 13
	Prize for good loser	0 3
	Total	£ 5 16
5.	Three-round contest between winner and runner-up of 9st., novice competition held at previous meeting:	£ s.
	Class A	0 9
6.	Three-round contest between winner of 11st. competition and man from another regiment:
	Class B	0 12
7.	Three-round contest between winner of 10st. 7lb. competition and man from another regiment:
	Class C	0 15
8.	Three-round contest between two men who fought a draw in a class B contest at a previous meeting:
	Class C	0 15
9.	Four-round contest between the winner of a brigade competition and a man from another regiment:
	Class D	1 10
10.	Six-round contest between a member of the regimental team and a man from another brigade:
	Open	3 0
	Total	£ 12 17

Total cost of money prizes is £12 17s.

The meeting could be held during two nights, and in order to make it self-supporting a charge of 3d admission for the first night and 6d. for the second should be made, with 9d. and 1s. for the better seats.

If only 200 pay 3d. for admission on the first night the total would be £2 10s., and 600 at 6d. on the second night total £12 10s. The receipts for the two nights would be £15, which would leave a balance in hand of £2 3s., which is more than sufficient to cover the cost of advertising, tickets, wear and tear of gloves, etc. The estimate of the receipts is not an exaggerated one, and the programme quite up to the average of most regimental boxing meetings.

Conclusion.

In conclusion, the progressive steps to be taken in introducing and establishing boxing as a sport in a regiment may be summed up in the following manner:—

Form a committee, the members of which must be keen, willing, and energetic.

Draw up and issue a programme of the meetings, and their probable dates, to be held during the season.

Hold a meeting and eliminate from the competitions all the men known to be good boxers by arranging contests from them. For the remainder of the battalion arrange competitions which will include men of all weights. A good plan at the first meeting is to hold competitions at every 7lb., commencing at 9st.

During the meeting a good insight should be obtained into the standard of boxing and the pluck, etc. of the men.

From the pick of the boxers at the first meeting elect the members for the boxing club.

Engage the services of a boxing instructor to give lessons to the members of the club.

At the second and subsequent meetings include a larger number of contests, arranged for the men that proved themselves good fighters at the previous meeting. Besides these hold about three competitions. The weights of the latter should be varied at every meeting.

Select a team of boxers to represent the regiment and arrange matches for them.

Wind up the season by holding the regimental championship meeting.—Army and Navy Gazette.

MOTOR NOTES.

I fully endorse the suggestion that there is room for improvement in the way of making certain fitments adjustable. For instance, a driver who for any reason makes frequent changes from one car to another knows that whilst one type may suit his physical proportions, another may be absolutely uncomfortable. The pedal reach varies greatly in different designs, so much so that in one case the driver may have to sit with the legs almost fully extended—whilst in another the knees may be bent in a manner decidedly conducive to cramp. Another direction in which adjustability is desirable is in the distance between the steering wheel and the seat and also the angle of the wheel. We have seen motorists of generous proportions subject themselves to painful contortions in order to get safely ensconced behind the wheel, while we have seen small men steering with the wheel in a position much too high for them. Still another improvement which we should like to see come into vogue would be the provision for entrance from the driving side. With the more roomy cars the driver can pass the front passenger and gain his seat without greatly inconveniencing the latter, but in a great many designs it is either essential for the passenger to dismount to allow the driver to enter, or else for the driver to perform a gymnastic feat and climb into his seat from the offside. These are matters which will probably not all be adjusted until the public demand them, but, as competition becomes keener, they may become selling points, and the makers who are early in the field with the desired innovations will undoubtedly reap their reward.

The wet muggy weather that has recently been experienced has shown up various little defects in many new cars. It is surprising that the really efficient mudguard is still so scarce. When you see a new car with beautiful paintwork all splashed with mud after a few hours' run, you can conclude that the mudguards are not adequate. Coachwork is costly, and to spoil a work of art by fitting bad guards is very poor economy indeed. Every mud splash mars the paint, and the work of washing it off produce a slight frictional action on the highly-polished surface which is detrimental to its finish. Successive cleanings, especially when the mud has caked and dried hard, have the effect of little drops of water and little grains of sand that we all know about. In the ideal car no mud should reach the coachwork or the upper sides of the mudguards, and the sideward displacement of liquid slush should be so controlled that it would not squirt on to other vehicles or road users. If this is secured a good part of the dust problem would be solved at the same time, for where the mud rises so does the dust. A great deal of the expense and deterioration in connection with motoring is due to the frequent cleaning of coachwork from mud and dust, and the consequent scratching and dulling of the paint which follows from constant rubbing.

The question as to which is the better form of brake—internal or external—for use on motor-cars is, we notice, being discussed in motoring circles across the Atlantic, the consensus of opinion being apparently in favour of the internal expanding variety. One writer, in summing up the position and deciding in favour of internal brakes, points out that, in the first place, as they are entirely encased, they are practically dirt-proof, and therefore free from the danger of any derangements which might arise in consequence of the presence of foreign matter in the mechanism. They are also more powerful than external breaks and generally more positive in action, as the dust-proof case keeps them in good condition. The same writer admits that the external contracting brake has some advantages over its rival. It is easier to adjust than the latter, because, being outside the drum, it is easily reached, whereas the internal type cannot always be adjusted satisfactorily without removing the wheel. Also, as it is generally more flexible than the latter, its application is more even, especially if the drum happens to be a little warped. The external brake is, however, more liable to drag or become inoperative than the other type, due to the fact that its mechanism is more exposed to injury from some outside source. It would be interesting to have the views of motorists in this country on the subject.

I have referred on many occasions to the folly exhibited by some motor body builders who design bodies as if they were intended for their own use, caring little for the wishes which may be expressed by the user himself. Although we believe that the "take it or leave it" spirit is dying a well-deserved death, we think that some good may result if more of us were wont to dwell upon the customer's attitude in general—that is to say, let us put ourselves in his position as a non-technical man, with money to spend, coupled with an expectation of the pleasant journeyings which are in store. Those who have had the opportunity of listening to conversations with customers, of between two acquaintances who are criticising a motor-car at a show, will have noticed on what seemingly trivial grounds a really good vehicle may be sometimes condemned. Perhaps there is no luggage carrier; then the whole thing is condemned as an inefficient touring vehicle. The carriage builder may emphatically state that he will attach a beautifully finished grid of the most modern description, but the client is merely irritated, simply because the accessory in question is not there at the time. To take another instance—the customer finds the seats hard and uncomfortable, and will ignore the body entirely, however ingenious may be the cabriolet heat or spotless the varnish. The motor body builder must realise that he should build to please his customers, and should spend as much of his spare time as possible as a practical motorist. No time is wasted which is devoted to the improving of the seats and the general convenience of the carriage. All these things must, of course, have the foundation of sound construction, for, although the client cares little for the wood and iron and the screws and bolts used, he is ready to enlarge on their defects if they become apparent.

The Scottish Motor Show, as an exhibition of international motor commerce, is better in that it is more representative than the late exhibition at Olympia. American vehicles are being shown in larger numbers and variety under conditions favourable for comparison and criticism. The Scottish agents have readily grasped the means thus offered them of discussing the situation free from prejudice and with no small gain in widening their conception of how these vehicles are manufactured. The judgment may be left safely in their hands, for if proof were needed of the Scottish agent's perspicacity in matters commercial allied with mechanisms, the high grade quality of the bulk of the exhibits at the current show reflects the situation as it has been made and still is. It may also be added that the future of the cheap imported car rests largely with the verdict of the Scottish agents.

In a recent issue of the British Medical Journal the effects of motoring on health are discussed under the title "The Therapeutic Possibilities of Automobilism". The evidence on which the article is based was mainly provided by French medical men, the members of that profession in France having apparently devoted more attention to the subject than their brethren in other countries. According to one doctor, motoring would seem to be a cure for anæmia, or bloodlessness, while chronic constipation is also said to give way before the effects of motoring. People who suffer from either dyspepsia, gout, neurasthenia, sleeplessness of nervous origin, and some cases of asthma, all benefit from a motor run. On the other hand, those afflicted with lung disease of any kind, kidney trouble, disease of the eye, or epilepsy would all suffer from effects of motoring. In the case of insomnia, the inclination to sleep after a journey en auto is, according to one experimenter, probably due to the absorption of ozone.

AVIATION NOTES.

A great deal of objection is being raised by residents living in the neighbourhood of Windermere against the use of hydroplanes on the lake. At a gathering at Bowness a few days ago the following resolution was passed:—"That this meeting of landowners, residents and others records its urgent protest against the proposal to make use of Lake Windermere, which is a public highway, for the purposes of hydroplaning, a school for aviators and in particular against the proposal to erect hangars in the neighbourhood of Bowness Bay, on the ground that such procedure would inevitably destroy in a large measure the amenities of the district, would prove dangerous to the large number of persons who use the lake for sailing and general boating purposes, and would cause serious loss to property owners and others.

For some time past experiments have been made with aeroplanes capable of dropping on to the water instead of into it, as sometimes happens, and at Monaco, from 24th March to 31st, the competition arranged for hydro-aeroplanes by the International Sporting Club will afford a good opportunity of showing the progress made in this, the latest development of the art of flying. Stormy weather would, of course, prevent the competition from being of much practical use, but, given fairly good conditions the tests will be of very great interest. They will include flights from the harbour of Monaco to the sea outside and back again, while those who desire to obtain the highest number of points—and the biggest money prizes—, will have the risky task of starting from the open bay and descending gracefully and safely upon another part of the dazzling yet treacherous southern sea. Altogether prizes to the extent of £600 are being offered in connection with the competition.

The American Society for the Advancement of Science has recommended to U. S. A. Government the necessity for establishing an aerodynamic laboratory for the study of aviation problems. Professor Rotch, of Harvard University, in the course of a paper before the society on aerial engineering stated that the necessity for knowing the conditions which may be encountered by aircraft in voyages will ultimately lead to the construction for flying charts at different levels, similar to sailing charts for the ocean. Instruction in flying by the so-called aviation schools is unworthy of consideration, since at best these only teach the aviator to operate and repair his machine as an automobile school does the chauffeur.

One of the best flights witnessed in Sheerness harbour was made on Saturday last by Mr. J. Valentine on a Deperdussin monoplane. Leaving the Eastchurch aerodrome, Mr. Valentine flew along the Swale, and approached Sheerness harbour by way of Queenborough. He was at a high altitude when he reached the Medway, but he "vol-planed," and when a short distance from the sea rose again, and made some graceful curves around the assembled battleships. Mr. Valentine afterwards flew to the mouth of Sheerness harbour, and then returned and Queenborough to Eastchurch, rising at one period to a height of 3,000ft.

Mr. W. E. Hart, the Australian aviator, who recently made a forty-seven miles flight from Penrith to Sydney on a Farman biplane, is twenty-six years of age, and a dentist by profession. For the last two years, however, he has conducted a motor agency in Sydney. He early qualified for the pilot's certificate at Penrith, N.S.W., under the auspices of the Aerial League of Australia. Mr. Hart is to be presented by the League with a magnificent shield in recognition of his having been the first Australian aviator to successfully complete distance cross-country flying. Questioned as to his intentions Mr. Hart remarked that he has arranged to fly from Sydney to Melbourne under the auspices of the League should suitable arrangements be made in the intervening towns, and he hopes to arouse the interest of the Australian Defence Department as to the possibilities of the aeroplane as a means of defence of the country. He proposes to give exhibitions in Melbourne, Brisbane and Tasmania, after which he will open aviation schools in Melbourne and Sydney.

Mr. S. F. Cody, having had his prize-winning biplane smashed sometime ago, has rebuilt the old machine which he used at the Doncaster aviation meeting in 1910, and so improved it that at a trial on Monday it gave promise of some brilliant performances. An Austro-Daimler engine of over 100-h. p. has been installed, and on Monday it produced a pace far beyond that formerly achieved. Mr. Cody calculates that the extra power will enable him to carry five passengers and enough petrol for a four hours' flight. He has already made the necessary seating accommodation. Another idea which he intends to develop is to construct a platform under the bottom plans, whereon a man may lie fully extended and manipulate a machine gun that will command everything in front of and below the biplane.

On Friday last week Mr. J. W. Dunne, whose efforts to obtain automatic stability for aeroplanes have been more than once mentioned in these columns, placed a remarkable exploit to his credit. Rising in his specially-designed monoplane from Eastchurch, Sheppey, he left his machine to control itself, and wrote a short note to show the possibility of a pilot making a written record as he flies. His trip occupied 6¾mins, during which time the aviator covered a distance of about 6 miles.

Lieut. J. W. Seddon, R. N., met with an unfortunate accident on Saturday last at the Royal Aero Club's Aerodrome, Eastchurch. He had descended after a successful circuit of the ground, and was running his machine towards the shed, when he failed to stop the engine, with the result that the aeroplane ran at a considerable speed against the door of the shed. Lieut. Seddon was thrown from the machine, and fell across the doorsill, fracturing his left leg.

THE CALCUTTA KENNEL CLUB.

SIXTH ANNUAL CHAMPIONSHIP SHOW.

Friday and Saturday, 2nd and 3rd February 1912.

The Calcutta Kennel Club, founded in 1906, held its sixth Annual Championship Dog Show on the above dates and the exhibition was certainly as successful if not more so than any of its predecessors. The arrangements were, as usual, excellent and the benching was better than last year, there being more room for visitors to view the dogs, while the judging rings were larger. Every attention had been paid to the well-being of the dogs and the public comfort had not been forgotten. The catering for lunch and refreshments had been entrusted to Messrs. G. F. Kellner and Co. and the lighting of the grounds had been carried out by the General Electric Company. The judges were Lieut.-Col. L. Impey, C.I.E., President of the I.K.A. and Mr. J. Miles also of the I.K.A. and the judging taken all round gave very general satisfaction. There were 306 entries and the exhibitors numbered 162, no fewer than 25 coming from other Indian towns as far distant as Lyallpur, Bombay, Madras and Bangalore. The dogs were of a better class all round and though, in the opinion of some, the big dogs were rather out of the picture in the specials and variety classes, this must be accounted for by the exceptional quality of the terriers which overshadowed other exhibits. The fox terriers, both wire and smooth varieties, were a wonderful lot. In smooths Mr. G. Jamieson showed some splendid animals. His Nitram Lightweight won all along the line among the dogs, taking the Junior, Novice, Limit and Open Classes, in the last of which he beat the Rajah of Pithapuram's celebrated champion Avon Oxendale, which was champion dog at last year's show and had also won a 50 guinea Challenge Cup at the Crystal Palace a few years ago. Nitram Lightweight had further successes in the variety classes, taking three firsts and two seconds. He also carried off two specials, the Cup for the best exhibit imported since last C. K. C. Show and the Cup for best Fox Terrier aged 12 months or over weighing not more than 18lbs. The wires were another tip top class, and Mr. Law's exhibits would surely hold their own at any of the English Shows. In dog classes Mr. Law's Beyemar Perfection won Junior, Maiden and Novice, and Beyemar Hazel Nut took Limit and Open. His Wasp of Paignton and Runswick Plum won Bitches' Limit and Open respectively. These again did well in the varieties, Hazel Nut winning five times and taking three specials—I. K. A. special for best terrier bred in India, Cup by C. K. C. for best exhibit opposite sex to winner of Lady Hardinge's Cup, and the President's Challenge Bowl for best dog bred by exhibitor. This is the second time Mr. Law has carried off this trophy, his last success being at Lahore, and he has only to take it once again to make the Apear Bowl his own property.

The Irish terriers were good, but it was disappointing to see such a poor show of Scotties. Only six were benched and considering the number of this breed in Calcutta it was surprising that the Committee's efforts were not better rewarded by owners of the "Die Hard." Jock o'Glencairn won for the third time and qualified for championship honours. Mr. L. Medley's bull terrier His Excellency also scored his third win at this show and is to be awarded a championship certificate, the only other member having had this honour being we believe Mr. E. A. Lyon. The bull terriers were the biggest exhibit and the class was particularly good. Miss Duke's Loon won Dogs, Puppy, Junior and Limit, Mr. Medley's His Excellency took the Open and Mr. Barlow's Tuscany Nipper the Limit. The same owner scored in three classes with his bitch Brigade Queen, who was second to Mr. F. H. Goodwin's Bloomsbury Lady Quality in the Open. His Excellency won a variety class and the special cup for the best bull terrier. I. Airedales Mr. E. E. Hare, Miss Gould and Messrs. Stedall and Johnson divided the prizes. The Australian terriers were well judged, Mrs. Blakelock's Chippy being a typical animal. Some very fine Dachshunds were shown. Mr. Lorenzo Riepel took Limit and Open and Mr. Lionel Edwards' Wallis took three of the Bitch classes. Among bulldogs Mr. Al Atkinson from Lahore was very successful, taking Dogs, Puppy and Novice with Aville Buster and Open with Paddington Duke, he also won Bitches, Puppy with Aville Sunchie. Mr. Paul's Leap Baroness Bur took Bitches, Novice, Limit and Open and also carried off six variety classes and two specials—the L. G.'s Cup for best exhibit imported from abroad and Messrs. Hamilton's Cup for best exhibit in Non-Sporting Breeds. Of the sporting dogs some very fine cockers were shown by Mrs. Cuthbert Edwards and Colonel Willan Dawson. The small breeds were well represented in class, Mrs. King's Japanese Kobe Lady Cheeky being a prominent winner of classes, varieties and specials. Mrs. Batson James' Pekingese Priestley won the I.K.A. Special for the best Non-sporting Dog bred in India and also the Tollygunge Club prize for best Pekingese, and Mrs. Jas. Murray's Dachshund Hunden the I. K. A. special for the best Sporting Dog bred in India other than terrier. Lady Hardinge's Cup for the best exhibit in the show was won by the Rajah of Pithapuram's smooth fox terrier bitch Champion Southboro Sachet. The Cups were finer than in previous years and a valuable addition has been made to the prize list in the 25-guinea Challenge Cup presented by Messrs. Cooke and Kelvey for the best exhibit bred in India in sporting breeds. This was won by Mr. J. Law's Beyemar Admiral Vanguard, who also won the Rajah of Pithapuram's prize for the best wire fox-terrier dog.

A feature among the big dog exhibits were the Borzois which numbered eight, Mrs. Rodocanachi's Rajah of Addlestone standing out prominent as a splendid specimen. It was hard luck that he did not do better in the variety classes.

H. E. Lady Hardinge was to have given away the prizes but was unable to be present and Lady Jenkins acted in her stead. Appended is a list of awards.

The following is a list of the awards :—

Bloodhounds—Open.—(1) Mrs. Fred Harley's Cæsar (Dog)

Great Danes—Novice—(1) Mr. G. Hennessey's. Lord Romo (Dog).

St. dernards—Open—(1) Maharaj Kumar of Rungpore's Tell-Von-Altuna (Dog).

Collies—Open—(1) Mr F. B. Bradley Birt's Merry Eyes the Second

Borzois—Open—(1) Mrs. J. M. Rodocanachi's Rajah of Addlestone (Dog). (2) Maharaj Kumar of Rungpore's Valda (Bitch), (3) Maharaj Kumar of Rungpore's Gerald (Dog).

Deerhounds—Open—(1) Lieut. H. E. Roome's Lion (Dog).

Basset Hounds—Open—(1) Mr. A.W. Watson's Teddy Pipes.

Greyhounds—Novice—(1) Mr. A. Milton's Oscar.

Greyhounds—Limit.—(1) Mr. Y. C. Ariff's Joker.

Greyhounds—Open—(1) Mr. Y. C Ariff's Joker.

Kangaroo Hounds—Open.—(1) Mr. J. Dinshaw Ramjee's Black Prince. (2) Mr. J. Dinshaw Ramjee's Jack.

Afghan Hounds and Rampur Hounds—Open.—(1) Mr. T. Wright's Lancelot. (Rampur Dog).

Setters—Open.—(1) Maharaj Kumar of Rungpore's Tell Prince.

Cocker Spaniels—Dogs—Puppy.—(1) Mrs. C. Edwards's Skeltonian King

Cocker Spaniels—Dogs—Novice.—(1) Mrs. C. Edwards's Skeltonian Sapper.

Cocker Spaniels—Dogs—Open.—(1) Col. A. Willan Dawson's Rock Darkie

Cocker Spaniels—Bitches—Puppy.—(1) Mrs. C. Edwards's Skeltonian Queen.

Cocker Spaniels—Bitches—Novice.—(1) Mrs. C. Edwards's Skeltonian Queen. (2) Col. A. Willan Dawson's Rock La Reine.

Cocker Spaniels—Bitches—Limit.—(1) Mr. H. H. Cameron's Teen

Cocker Spaniels—Bitches—Open.—(1) Mrs. C. Edwards's Skeltonian Queen. (2) Col. A. Willan Dawson's Rock La Reine.

Spaniels other than Cocker—Novice.—(1) Hon. Mr. Norman McLeod's Scamp.

Poodles—Dogs and Bitches—Novice.—(1) Mrs. Reginald Curran's Orchard Freckles (Bitch).

Poodles—Dogs and Bitches—Open.—(1) Mrs. Reginald Curran's Orchard Freckles (Bitch).

Bulldogs—Dogs—Puppy.—(1) Mr. Al. Atkinson's Aville Buster. (2) Mr. J. W. Gaunt's Patton.

Bulldogs—Dogs—Novice.—(1) Mr. Al. Atkinson's Aville Buster. (2) Zemindar of Sivagiri's Lewisham Johnny.

Bulldogs—Dogs—Limit.—(1) Maharaj Kumar of Mymensingh's Mayor of Margate.

Bulldogs—Dogs—Open.—(1) Mr. Al. Atkinson's Paddington Duke. (2) Maharaj Kumar of Mymensingh's Mayor of Margate.

Bulldogs—Bitches—Puppy.—(1) Mr. Al. Atkinson's Aville Sunchie.

Bulldogs—Bitches—Novice.—(1) Mr. P. C. E. Paul's Leap Baroness Bur.

Bulldogs—Bitches—Limit.—(1) Mr. P. C. E. Paul's Luap Baroness Bur. (2) Mr. P. C. E. Paul's Luap Rival Princess.
Bulldogs—Bitches—Open.—(1) Mr. P. C. E. Paul's Luap Baroness Bur.
Bouledogues Francais—Dogs and Bitches—Limit.—(1) Prince Henry of Reuss's Follette. (Bitch)
Bouledogues Francais—Dogs and Bitches—Open.—(1) Prince Henry of Reuss's Follette. (Bitch)
Airedale Terriers—Dogs—Puppy.—(1) Mr. E. E. Hare's Weldon Warrior.
Airedale Terriers—Dogs—Junior.—(1) Mr. E. E. Hare's Weldon Warrior.
Airedale Terriers—Dog—Maiden.—(1) Mr. E. E. Hare's Weldon Warrior.
Airedale Terriers—Dogs—Novice.—(1) Mr. E. E. Hare's Weldon Warrior. (2) Miss Evelyn Caspers's Beauwar Marquis.
Airedale Terriers—Dogs—Limit.—(1) Mr. E. E. Hare's Weldon Warrior.
Airedale Terriers—Dogs—Open.—(1) Mr. E. E. Hare's Weldon Warrior.
Airedale Terriers—Bitches—Puppy.—(1) Miss C. M. Gould's Woolie.
Airedale Terriers—Bitches—Junior.—(1) Miss C. M. Gould's Woolie.
Airedale Terriers—Bitches—Maiden.—(1) Miss C. M. Gould's Woolie.
Airedale Terriers—Bitches—Novice—(1) Mr. E. E. Hare's Weldon Lassie.
Airedale Terriers—Bitches—Limit—(1) Messrs. Stedall and Johnstone's Felden Fishergirl.
Airedale Terriers—Bitches—Open.—(1) Messrs. Stedall and Johnstone's Felden Fishergirl.
Bull Terriers—Dogs—Puppy—(1) Miss M. C. Duke's Loon. (2) Mr. F. J. Innes's Elgin Don. (3) Mr. H. J. Strelley's Cobby.
Bull Terriers—Dogs—Junior—(1) Miss M. C. Duke's Loon. (2) Mr. W. Roberts's Druid.
Bull Terriers—Dogs—Novice.—(1) Miss M. C. Duke's Loon. (2) Mr. H. J. Strelley's Cobby. (3) Mr. W. Roberts's Druid.
Bull Terriers—Dogs—Limit.—(1) Mr. C. Barlow's Tuscany Nipper. (2) Mr. K. B. Baxter's Gay Slate. (3) Mr. W. Roberts's Druid.
Bull Terriers—Dogs—Open.—(1) Mr. L. M. Medley's His Excellency (2) Mr. J. Dinshaw Bamjee's Willowdene Merry Prince. (3) Mr. C. Barlow's Tuscany Nipper.
Bull Terriers—Bitches—Puppy.—(1) Mr. C. B. Hurst's Bohemian Queen.
Bull Terriers—Bitches—Junior.—(1) Mr. C. Barlow's Brigade Queen. (2) Mr. C. B. Hurst's Bohemian Queen.
Bull Terriers—Bitches—Novice.—(1) Mr. C. Barlow's Brigade Queen. (2) Mr. C. B. Hurst's Bohemian Queen. (3) Mrs. E. Poole's Egypt.
Bull Terriers—Bitches—Limit.—(1) Mr. C. Barlow's Brigade. (2) Mr. C. B. Hurst's Bohemian Queen. (3) Mrs. E. Poole's Egypt.

Assuredly the best.

Ever since the inception of electric lighting for cars, the famous C.A.V. head, side and tail lamps have been recognised as the standard by which to judge other makes. Potential motorists fit only C.A.V. lamps; others are not nearly good enough when the most efficient lighting equipment is required to complete a car's luxuriousness. Therefore, specify C.A.V. if you wish to know the real meaning of lamp satisfaction.

Our illustrated catalogue will be sent, post free, on request.

HUNTING THE WHITE-TAILED DEER.

I HAD been in camp all day patching moccasins and waterproofing boots, when one of the boys returned with the story that he had shot a buck "as big as a cow." He had hit him square in the rump, the bullet going on down into the abdomen we afterward learned, and still the buck kept ahead of him until night made the hunter give up the trail and come in to camp. The unlucky man gave me the best idea he could of the country and locality where he had been forced to quit the trail of the wounded buck; and the next morning, as soon as I had surrounded and captured a bunch of six husky cornmeal flap jacks, I hit the snow for that buck's trail—or what was left of it, as there had been a slight fall of snow during the night. A tramp of about three and-a-half miles brought me to a track that must have been the buck's, I thought. I could not see any blood on the trail, but there was the dragging hind leg, as plain as the thumb on my off-side fin. Following the track for a few dozen rods I came to another track, that of an Indian, following the wounded deer's trail, which he had found and judged worthy of being watched for a few steps. I felt assured it was an Indian because he walked to the side of the deer's trail, rather than in and effacing it, as a white man would have done. His paces were short and he was pigeon-toed; so I deduced that he must be a short man, very heavy, and well enough to let alone. Presently I saw him making his way up the side of a sparsely-wooded hill about a half-mile away. From his careful study of the trail, he had evidently decided to follow it and see if there was not a dead, or nearly dead, deer in the immediate vicinity.

The Indian was a half-mile ahead of me on a trail that meant meat to him. My efforts had been wasted, and there was nothing to do but hit it off south-west for a runway that I knew. A shot from the direction of the Indian momentarily halted me, but I held to my course toward the chosen hunting grounds. Before I had gone forty rods a track in the snow was found, and it had copious blood spots on either side, fresh as if made the minute before I discovered it. My eyes nearly popped out. There was a dragging hind leg! The trail led to the south; I followed and within a hundred yards found the buck lying dead behind a fallen, charred log. The very deer the man in our camp had told about, and that I had come out to find. He was hip-wounded and had lost a lot of blood, but had managed to live through the night, and when warned of the Indian's approach had run blindly, anywhere, until he fell dead. There was no fresh wound on the carcass—the Indian had chanced a shot and missed; so, by right of discovery I let out what little blood there remained in the deer, dressed and gambreled him, and was about to suspend the carcass from the snag of a limb, when Mr. Indian came up behind me and grunted. I motioned him to help get the carcass over the snag. He obeyed, standing his rifle beside my own. Then he looked the whole deer over carefully. He was seeking a wound more fresh than the one in the hip from which the blood had flowed the whole night through, but could not find it.

"You shoot?" I inquired, standing back and pointing in the direction he had come.

"Sure me shoot."

"Hit him?"

"Not find hole."

"Ain't no hole," I volunteered. "You shoot wild."

"Guess so."

Then I explained the circumstances as best I could and he listened attentively.

"How much to help me in with him?" I asked for I saw surrender of the meat in his softening eyes.

"Dollar," he said; so I helped him shoulder the big buck, with directions to carry it 200 steps and then give it to me. "You not tell I shoot at him," he suggested anxiously, and I assured him I would not tell a soul.

The story brings me up to the text: that deer hunting is eighty per cent. luck and twenty per cent. work of the hardest kind. An old shooter will tell you, however, that the best luck comes to the man who stays out from morning to night, just as long as he can see, frequenting the best runs and passes and feeding grounds, and moving about as little as possible. Of course, every man who has hunted deer will not agree with all that I may have to say. I write from my own experience, and as I shoot for the meat that comes from the sport, I may have the wrong view of the whole game of deer shooting. In two seasons I have fired but six shots from rifles at deer. Many chances were not accepted, for various reasons; yet I count these as being the best six shots I ever fired. The game of deer shooting is one of the most exciting sports in the list of big-game hunting. Still-hunting is its most scientific form, and all the old-timers declare that they learn something more every season. Still-hunting cannot be mastered, in the common sense of the word. There is always a new development. At the least expected moment the opportunity for the shot is thrust upon the hunter, and he either does the right thing intuitively or the wrong thing altogether.

A first long step toward success is to get located before the season opens. Go into camp about a week or ten days ahead of the opening, and get the run of the country—leaving your rifle in the case. You may not be able to find promising "sign;" which will mean a removal to other grounds. It is always advisable to have an experienced deer shooter in the party. Secure a local guide, if available, in case no one of you knows the country. Guides are not beyond reach of the average purse; they can point out runways and passes; and there is nothing so essential to success as knowing the country. Certain ridges will be covered with brush such as deer love to browse upon; others, bare of undergrowth and unattractive. There is one section of the north woods that I know better than others, and I attribute my success to knowing the runways most naturally followed by the deer. They travel a great deal, nipping buds and moss and shoots of green that show above the snows, and generally feed every day over the same grounds. During the hunting season, if there are many hunters in the country working them back and forth during the day, deer will feed as they travel and rest quite a bit at night, especially in the dark of the moon. When the nights are not dark they will move about a great deal, more in the rutting season than at other times. I have seen great patches of brush that had been knocked down and mauled over at night by fighting bucks, while the does browsed peacefully by and watched the progress of the fight. After being started during the day, deer will keep alert and travel holding to the most densely covered runways.

If there are many hunters, it is well to let them drive the game to you. Conceal yourself at a pass where you can command a view of the brushy hillsides, and watch the runways carefully. In cold weather, when you cannot remain quiet more than a half-hour at a time, have a couple of good points to watch over and move from one to the other as need of exercise requires. The stillest of still-hunters can be heard. It is only a matter of distance. And after a deer has been shot at a time or two he is more than ever suspicious of a questionable sound or scent.

There are many who declare that a buck has more sensitive sense of smell than a doe. I know that it is harder to get a shot at a buck than at a doe, but it seems that she would be as well provided with the sense of smell, since nature gives her each season a fawn or two to protect.

The whip of a flag, as white and waving as the famous plume of Navarre, is more commonly seen than the deer which accompanies it. It is always erect unless the animal is hit. Usually a crippled deer drops his flag. One must say "usually," else he might be contradicted with vehemence. Each hunter sees things for himself. Most deer are shot under fifty yards, though a few are killed at long ranges. My experience goes to show that about as many are shot standing as running. If you are sure you have hit one hard, follow the trail and note the amount of blood he has lost. If it is considerable, the chances are that the shot is fatal. If it appears to be a leg shot, give the animal a chance to lie down. The idea is to let him stiffen so he cannot go fast, that you may find opening for a fatal shot. The crippled deer should be killed.

Dogs should not be employed to chase deer. Leave hounding to the pot-hunter. If he prefers getting his game that way, that is his business. It is against the law in most states.

Deer protect themselves when at rest by watching the back trail, and one can never tell how close to a resting deer he is getting when he is tracking one in the snow. Their scenting powers are very great. A hunting coat saturated with tobacco smoke is a mighty good protection for the deer, and more so if the wind be in his favour. I believe that deer can scent a good deal against the wind. The general "man smell" is terrorizing to any of them. Add to this the smell of tobacco on clothing, or a pipe in the hunter's mouth, or the breath of a tobacco chewer, and the chances are all in favour of the deer. And some still-hunters are themselves pretty good protectors. Located on a runway one evening, I heard a buck lashing his horns through the brush, trying them for the coming rutting season. He was so long in coming that I felt premonitions of buck fever. I could hear him just over the hill, and was ready for the shot, when what should loom into view but a sportsman from a camp a few miles away. He walked right up to me before he saw my red coat, and stopped suddenly, as if struck.

"Hello!" I said.

"You here?" he queried, as if sight of me was not convincing.

"Sure," I answered; and then added, "What are you doing?"

"Still-hunting," he answered—and then I laughed a big laugh in my sleeve.

The arm to use in deer hunting is largely a matter of private opinion. It is well to note, however, that nearly all experienced shooters choose a bullet as heavy as 190 grains. The 32-40, 38-55, 40 and the 351 cartridges are making more friends each year. Standard makes of rifles, with high velocity loads of smokeless powder behind metal-patched soft-nose bullets, will get the game. Personally I prefer something about the calibers mentioned, though others have had just as much success with something else. The old style 44-40 is still a good deer load, especially when soft-point bullets are used. Too much cannot be said for the bullet that mushrooms upon impact with flesh. It tears unmercifully, and thus prevents many wounded animals escaping. Solid bullets of small calibers are liable to go through without inflicting great damage, unless they strike a bone. In deer shooting the chances are so few for telling shots that when the time comes one must be prepared and get his game.

A strong hunting knife is an essential. If a sheath knife, swing the sheath on your hip, fastened so it will not flap. One sees greenhorns carrying sheath knives on the belt in front, where a fall over a log might shove the blade through the sheath and into the groin or thigh. The folding pocket "sticking" knife is very handy to carry, as it does not catch on the brush and is always ready for use. The edge is also protected, insuring a cutting keenness. Select one that locks open and has a guard. I once nearly cut off a hand while struggling with a buck; the blade of my knife snapped closed on my hand. When the hunter needs a knife, he needs it with all seriousness. It must be dependable, cut quick, and go to the spot.

The garb to be worn when deer hunting is at the hand of every shooter in the shape of old clothes. A red coat and cap are essential to perfect safety. Moccasins are good for dry weather still-hunting and tramping, but rubber pacs with leather tops are the ideal wet-weather and snowy-walking footgear. Some call these pacs lumbermen's rubbers. The main thing is to have something that will turn water and keep the feet warm. Use a couple of pairs of good woollen socks inside them, and do not be afraid of getting them too big. To make the boot-tops waterproof use four ounces deer or sheep tallow, half-ounce of beeswax, and half-ounce of rubber chipped fine, as it will melt when all are stirred together. Heat steadily till the rubber is all dissolved. Then have the boot dry and warm and apply the waterproofing very hot, but not boiling. It cools so suddenly that one must have the boot and waterproofing just at the right heat to get the best results.

Deer hunting is one of the cleanest sports in which arms are employed. If followed carefully by hunters, it is a safe sport. It is a good rule not to shoot into brush or thicket until you see the game clearly. Better risk losing a few shots than to kill a man or maim him for life. Make it a rule to identify your deer, whether buck or doe, before shooting.—Recreation.

WILD BEASTS AS PETS

THE appalling and lamentable tragedy at Colney Hall, Norwich, at Christmas, whereby Mr. Terence Barclay, a gallant young guardsman, who went safely through the Boer War with a contingent of Norfolk Yeomanry, lost his life, affords a lesson as to the danger of keeping the larger carnivora as pets. In this instance the father of the deceased officer, on his return from a hunting trip to British East Africa in February 1911, brought with him a couple of lion cubs—male and female—which were installed in a strong wire enclosure at Colney.

Within this enclosure was a roomy wire cage where the cubs were confined ; but it was the practice of the members of the family—including the daughters—to let the animals out daily into the outer enclosure, where they played with them as unconcernedly as if they were kittens. While the lions were quite young, this was, of course, comparatively free from danger ; but, as was pointed out by friends of the family, it was certain that as time went on the risk would continually become greater. Nevertheless, no heed was paid to the warnings ; and when the deceased officer returned home for his Christmas vacation, he entered the enclosure and let out the lions—now at least three parts grown—as usual. Whether they had forgotten him, whether their play was more energetic than usual, or whether they had turned spiteful, cannot now be decided ; but whatever may have been the cause, one of them felled him to the ground, and stood over him, till he was pluckily rescued by his sisters and a chauffeur and carried into the house. There he lingered for a fortnight, to expire just after Christmas, as the result of the injuries received, the claws or teeth of the animal having entered one of his lungs. Thus ended untimely and pitiably a gallant and promising life ; and our most sincere and hearty sympathy, as well as that of all our readers, goes to the bereaved father and the other members of the family.

Many catastrophes of a more or less similar nature—although happily not always fatal—have occurred from placing too much confidence in wild animals which their owners fondly believed to have become completely tame. A young officer, for instance, on his return from a shikar-trip, brings with him a tiger, leopard, or bear cub, which on being established in the cantonment becomes the playmate of the whole mess. But sooner or later there almost certainly comes a day when—it may be in pure play—he deals a heavier blow than usual or gives a more vigorous snap, and the mischief is done. Happy is it if in such a case the injury inflicted is not serious, and the aggressor is packed off to the nearest zoo, before further mischief results.

We are not preaching cowardice, or not urging that wild animals cannot be tamed, at least to a certain extent; but what we do say is that such animals, as soon as their early cubhood is passed, ought to be handed over to the care of professional experts, who know how to treat them and to what extent they are to be trusted, and when times of dangerous excitement are to be expected. Such knowledge cannot be possessed by amateurs, and it is certainly the height of folly that they should run such risks. So strongly, indeed, do we feel on the subject, that we should like to see a statute passed, both in this country and at home rendering it illegal for a private owner to keep cubs of the larger carnivora after they have attained the age of six months.

It is to be feared that in this matter the great and genial animal-tamer, Mr. Carl Hagenbeck, has unwittingly done harm owing to the confident manner in which he has expressed his belief in the extent to which wild animals can be rendered tame and harmless. He writes, for instance, in "Beasts and Men," the English translation of a German work, as follows;—

"All carnivores without exception, when they are caught young and are properly treated, are capable of being brought up as domestic pets. Their so-called wild nature does not break out unless something happens to put the animals in a rage: and this, after all, is just the same with domestic animals. As to what can be achieved in the way of taming wild animals, I have certainly had more experience than any other human being. Both intelligence and love of animals are essential to success in taming. Then it is quickly discovered that among animals, as among men, good and bad are mixed; and that, while the good will develop of itself, the bad can be suppressed."

Here, be it noted, the fact is admitted that such tamed, or shall we say half-tamed, animals are subject to accidental or periodical fits of rage, while it might have been added that their play may also be of a dangerous nature. All this indicates that such creatures, although in most cases capable of being handled with impunity by professionals, are not safe in the hands of amateurs.

It is no answer to say that in their playful or spiteful moods they are displaying the same traits as domesticated animals, since most of the latter are not big enough to inflict injuries like those which happen from the rush of a tiger or a lion; and if they are, they are generally either put out of the way at once, or are kept with very special precautions.

The Colney lions, which belong to a race in which the spots of cubhood are retained to a late period, if not indeed permanently, have, we are glad to learn, been transferred to the Dublin Zoological Gardens, where they will be prevented—barring accidents—from doing further mischief. When the keepers came to fetch them they found the male so much bigger than they expected, that the cage they had brought with them proved too small, so that a more capacious one had to be hastily constructed on the spot.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

WE resumed racing in Calcutta on Saturday last, the 10th instant, when the Fifth Extra Meeting was run. Thanks to the recent rain, the weather was moderately cool and the course in far better condition than it usually is. There was not enough rain to really soften the ground and it was therefore a bit greasy in places early in the afternoon, especially near the rails, but after the surface had been somewhat cut up this defect disappeared. The going was on the heavy side and times somewhat slow in consequence, but this is of no great moment and we would rather see slow times and a soft course than race with the knowledge that the hard going was knocking horses' legs and feet about. There is no reason why we should ever have hard going on the Calcutta course, as there is an ample water-supply and an up-to-date means for watering purposes. It is surely of not much account if the tennis lawn appearance of the course is destroyed, for there is no point in having a race-course like a tennis lawn and there is every point in having it in such a condition as will do a minimum of harm to the horses galloping over it. The attendance was not very large, though a number of people had returned from Lucknow. Her Excellency Lady Hardinge was present and it was satisfactory to learn that the news of Lord Alington was in every way favourable and that the patient was making good progress towards recovery. Amongst the returning visitors from Lucknow were Mr. E. J. Marshall, Mr. Evers, Colonel P. K. L. Beaver, Mr Lamb, Mr. Griffiths, and amongst the professionals Hayhoe, Robinson, Murdison, Clements, McNeilage, Williamson, Pegrem, J. Davis, Bland, Firth, etc. The racing was by no means bad and there were in two cases very close and exciting finishes. There were also one or two "incidents," but they were mostly of a trivial nature. In one race, the Outram Plate, there was a good deal of bumping at one stage of the contest, particularly at the half mile turn, but the objection to the winner, Bomb, for a cross in the straight was not found to be sustainable and the Stewards took very little time in coming to a decision. The Stewards called the running of Collegian in the Imperial Plate in question, but as the horse went out with a leg on him and broke down badly when he was leading half a mile from home, there would hardly seem to have been much justification for their action. Collegian naturally dropped back dead last when his leg went and he hobbled back to the paddock a hopeless cripple. Bland would have been perfectly justified in pulling up and leading the horse in, in fact it is a pity he did not stop him and get off at the point where the breakdown happened.

THERE were only six races in the card and proceedings opened with the Magdala Plate, a handicap hurdle race. When Sequent's number was found to be missing from the frame the public rushed to get on to Five Crown in spite of the 13st. he had on his back, thinking that the stable tip was good enough to follow, for Sequent could have won this race with 11st. 12lb. Five Crown last season won the Hastings Plate with 12st. 8lb., and it was obviously expected that another 6lb. would not stop him. In the race the two top-weights Five Crown and Realm made the running and True Love lay off them till the half mile where she took command and soon had things settled bar a fall. Realm jumped in nothing like his old form and as near came it as did not matter over the second flight. He was found to be very lame after the race and has we hear broken down badly. The pace was not alarming, as the race was run in 16⅗secs. slower time than the Hastings Plate, which Sequent won with 11st., but the heavy course and the heavy weight stopped Five Crown and Realm was obviously not at his best. True Love won easily and was very nicely ridden by McNeilage, who displayed considerable judgment in profiting by the throat-cutting tactics of his opponents. For the New Course Plate backers picked Herald, who had a big weight, and Rapin Tana and Speedometer were also backed, but the winner turned up in Isabela, Mr. A. N. Das' old mare, who had been running forward lately but who escaped the attention of the lynx-eyed prophets and punters alike. She made all the running and won by half a length from Rapin; Tana only a short head away, Herald, who did not seem to relish the weight or the going, missing a place by three lengths. Herald is a small footed horse and he did not answer in the mud. Isabela's previous performances this season have been as follows: fourth in the 7-furlong Bhowanipur Plate, 7st. 3lb. to Pressy 7st. 11lb., Wayward and Wild 9st. 4lb. and Cherry Hackle 9st. 13lb.; third in the 1½ mile Ochterlony Plate, 7st. 4lb. to Herald 9st. 5lb. and Wayward and Wild 9st. 12lb.; and on the same day (Fourth Extra) third in the 1¼ mile Minto Plate, 7st. 11lb. (handicap 6st.) to Sequent 8st. 11lb. and Jemima 9st. 12lb., so that we ought to have given her some chance if Herald were given any: vide above Ochterlony Plate. Isabela's appearance, however, was against her and she did not look like winning in the paddock.

FOR the 6-furlong February Plate, for which only a small field of five went out, they backed two, Foudrette and Kilmarnock, the former carrying the bulk of the money, but she was badly beaten out of a place and Kilmarnock, who has not so far done much this season, won in a common canter, Kuhn hardly being able to hold him back to them. Kilmarnock had been out four times previously this season but had had no success. He is a five-year-old English gelding by Ayrshire out of Early to Bed. Ayrshire is by Hampton out of Atalanta, who is by Galopin out of Feronia by Thormanby out of Woodbine by Stockwell out of Honeysuckle by Touchstone out of Beeswing, who was by Dr. Syntax out of Tomboy's dam, and is one of the great matrons of the English stud. Mr. Atty Persse had Kilmarnock at Stockbridge last season, but did not manage to win a race with him. As a three-year-old Kilmarnock won in Ireland the 5-furlong Summer Plate (£204) and was placed several times. He is an amazing nice horse to look at, and though of course geldings are the ticket for India, it seems a pity that one so well bred as he is should be unsexed. He won his race on Saturday like a race-horse and we are sure to hear from him again very soon.

A HOT favourite was beaten when Village Girl went down in the Cone Plate and a lot of money was also done in over the nicely bred Spook (known last season at Home as the Séance colt by Minstead), who just missed a place. Village Girl was beaten by that great old fighter Ruling Passion, the well-named descendant of Predominant and Naughty, who, thanks principally to the strong finish Thoburn rode him, short-headed the favourite right on the post, the much-fancied May Kenley a head away third; but as only seven ran we are afraid her connections cannot have got over-round on the result. Ruling Passion was not expected as it was not his best distance. Dignum, however, has got him uncommonly well and he looked a regular son of Anak amongst them in the paddock. Spook will, in our opinion, win a race before the season is out. He is building up every day and we were much taken with his appearance last Saturday when he went out on to the course.

THE two from Wishart's stable, Bomb and Skehanagh, finished top of the betting for the 6-furlong Outram Plate which came next and there was very little else asked for, though at the close of operations some money was going on to The Witch. Mr. A. N. Das' mare is looking much improved since Thomas has had her and he has put a lot of condition on to her, but she is after all only a slip of a thing and looks about big enough to carry a pair of boots. She has been twice expected but she has failed them on each occasion so far. Bomb, another one who has let her connections down, so they say, once before this season, won very comfortably, Murdison never having to move on her to win. The objection for a cross was not sustained and if there was any rough-house it was not at the point at which it is alleged to have taken place. Our Monsoon friend Mahoney Boy was only a short head behind The Witch, to whom he was conceding 12lb. The last race we considered a very good thing for the Merchants' Plate winner Jemima, who was meeting Sequent on 6lb. better terms for a three-quarter length beating over a quarter mile shorter course. It worked out like this, as Sequent was well beaten at the end of the straight and Santoinette was the only challenger. She never gave Jemima's backers much cause for alarm however and Mr. Roy Chowdhury's mare won with fair ease by one and a quarter lengths. Collegian, as already mentioned, came back to the paddock on three legs, and we hear that he is considered to be a bad case. He is an English entire by Just Cause out of Phyllis Wilkes; Just Cause is by Best Man out of Farewell, Best Man by Ormonde or Melton, and Farewell is by Doncaster out of Lily Agnes, so that if it is a hopeless case he has a certain value at the stud. Details of the racing appear elsewhere.

OUR French neighbours intend to make a strenuous effort to repeat the only French victory in the Epsom Derby (Gladiateur 1865) this season with Montrose II. by Maintenon out of Mario. Maintenon was a real good horse and was much fancied for the Grand Prix of 1906, which was won by that brilliant horse Spearmint. This colt Montrose II. has a very good two-year-old record, as out of his nine essays he won six and was, so they say, unlucky to get beaten on the other three occasions They say that he is the best colt that our Gallic neighbours have ever bred since 1905. Gouvernant's year, and they look forward hopefully to retrieving the defeats of such good ones as Holocauste, who broke his leg in the Derby of 1899; Vinicius, who ran well in the Derby of 1903 and was unlucky to get his run late; Gouvernant, who represented France in 1904 and was terrified out of his wits by the thunder St. Amant winning because he had his ears stopped with cotton wool; and Jardy by Flying Fox, who ran in 1908 and who most unfortunately developed a cough on his way across the channel. It is to be a duel, so they say, between Montrose II. for France and Lomond for Albion, perfide no longer!!

THE supervision of racing is a subject which has been receiving a little attention in the London sporting press lately. Quite one of the best contributions comes from the pen of a well-known sporting scribe to whom some fine Pickwickian suggestions about stewards have been made. He writes:—

Coming up to me at Derby on the Cup day a literary friend celebrated for his graceful style and enjoying a wide publicity said: "I've been pitching into you this week. I knew you wouldn't mind, being so good-natured, and always liking to hear both sides of a question."

What he "pitched into" was a renewed plea for the establishment of stipendiary stewards.

Everybody knows about the boomerang, and how, after being hurled violently into space, it returns to the skilful thrower. Similarly the arguments of our literary critic appear to recoil on himself in his latest remarks about dishonest running and the duties and responsibilities of stewards in connection therewith. He cites the case of an animal which started an odds-on favourite and was "down the course." A fortnight later it ran again, had no price, and once more finished unplaced, apparently showing itself to be useless. Quite recently it made another appearance, when the money was put down, and it won comfortably, and our literary friend somewhat pathetically asks: "What could the stewards do?" He puts the question after assuming the animal was "not out" on the first occasion and merely took a little exercise on the second. "Probably"—this is in relation to the first go—it was backed on form by the public, the owner and friends having no hand in driving it to odds-on. M'yes, perhaps, though I should not say this is a common occurrence in the case of "stumer" odds-on favourites. Various ways suggest themselves of manipulating such animals. One would be for the owner or his commissioner to go about ostentatiously laying odds-on, while the time secret confederates are taking them in larger sums from a duped public.

"What could the stewards do?"—i.e., the gentlemen officiating at the place where the ramp was consummated. Under their jurisdiction the horse had certainly done its best. "What had happened at the other meetings they might have thought, if the idea of questioning the result had occurred to them, was no business of theirs."

This is indeed a queer sort of morality, and a worse give-away of the system of honorary supervision could not easily be imagined. Consider, for a moment, what this principle of limited responsibility would mean in general practice. A man is wanted for murder in Whitechapel. He is recognised by officers in Soho who easily could arrest him, but they refrain because they are not attached to the Whitechapel division, and what happens in that district is no business of theirs. What price law and order in those circumstances? Such a state of affairs, would, of course, be perfectly farcical—too ridiculous for words—but our friend the proper-up of honorary and the foe of paid officials approaches very close to it with his suggestion of Kempton stewards, for instance, not being concerned in the previous running of a winner there at Sandown even when its two performances call loudly for investigation. Honorary stewards are, or ought to be, just as much the police of the Jockey Club as stipendiaries would be. Their office is local only in the sense that the meeting where they are acting is local. They represent the Jockey Club stewards and as such must have a general responsibility.

Some years ago a leading authority—now dead and gone—preached the amazing gospel that "in racing we must take things as we find them," and he was terribly angry, I remember, when I expostulated with him and asked him whether he would apply the same principle to burglars at his house. "Don't let me interrupt you, Mr. Sykes. One must take things as one finds them. Have you found enough to satisfy you, or shall I show you the gold-plate chest?" I hope my literary friend will not be very wroth at these pleasantries. He pitched into me, recollect, and copy must be got somehow in these dull times.

OUR Bombay correspondent writes:—Having wasted but little time since the Lucknow Meeting came to an end, the racing fraternity are now at great strength in Bombay with the Big Meet now so near at hand. Scratchings on Saturday, our last Extra for some time, were rather numerous, but nevertheless we were left with very fair fields and class in some instances superior to what is expected on such minor occasions. The attendance was not as large as it might have been, but the ring was very busy and punters had an exceptionally good time, never being further out than a second favourite.

As to the actual card, we were first faced with the divided Selling Plate for newly-landed ones, in the former of which Wild Eagle was rather better favourite than Starling, who is a nice looking chestnut out for the first time. The former looked the more tuned up, and the result was that after Brow and Sadee Beg had made all the running he came away comfortably, giving Whalley a win at his first attempt, which he later supplemented with another leaving himself and Evans as the most successful jockeys.

In the second a good deal of money came for Evening News, who fell when last he started, but Master Bill very soon shortened and displaced him with Bavan and Manchester the others considered in a field of seven. Evening News and Bavan both got away in front of the favourite, but as they turned for home he came up outside and all was over. Manchester put in a game effort, but was held safe.

Whereas in the first the owner bought the winner in for Rs. 2,000, in the second the winner was lost to Mr. Goculdass at that figure to Mr. Heath, but the former secured Manchester at Rs. 1,400, and he should turn out well.

With Tangaroa in it and Wootton giving us our first taste of his abilities, the Newmarket Plate, a five-furlong sprint, was looked upon as important. One would have expected the Trials winner to have been at almost prohibitive odds, but money from the right quarter about Socialist enabled one always to secure a very fine price, Macann being thought the possible outsider to nibble at. For a change we did not see Tangaroa jump away in front, Lord Merv showing the way to Macann and Socialist, but in the first furlong Wootton found a passage and allowed the top weight to slip through. He was clear of Socialist on the rails, and Macann outside, as they reached the bend, and from there his backers had no cause for anxiety. He won with a nice bit to spare, and when called on Socialist left Macann and claimed place money.

Considerable interest was taken in the meeting of Braganza and Grand Duke in the nine furlongs for Arabs, the former winding up half a point the shorter with the latter reported to have been a bit off his feed. The betting was justified after a very pretty race. Braganza was slipped out of the gate just to the good of Terror, but according to usual instructions, Grand Duke was driven up from the outside into the lead. He ran third, with Baloz displacing Money Gold for third place at the half mile, to the home turn. Here both were going well, but it was not difficult to see when once properly into the straight that Braganza was the better in hand and a match down the straight ended in his winning fairly decisively.

There is no doubt that the winner is in great form, but it must be admitted that he had a big pull in the start.

The mile for big ones was very open in the betting, Elser, Coat of Arms and Langton of the local ones being always in demand, though the last-named expanded after a rush. Slightly shorter than these was Valerius, who is reported to be a bit in and out, whereas Sanhedrin came in for quite a few bets at a nice price. Coat of Arms, Mafoota and Elser were most prominent till right up to the quarter mile, where Mafoota fell away and Sanhedrin came up with Valerius making up a long gap between himself and the front. As they turned, Elser came away on the rails, and though Coat of Arms again ran perfectly straight the ex-pony held him quite safe and continued the good impression he made in his recent outings. Sanhedrin did not see it out and, though running on well, Valerius could only get third.

In the selling race for old ponies over seven furlongs there was such a determined run on Mysore that he was always able to hold his own in the betting against Fado, tens being obtainable about the rest. Tressady caused something of a sensation by taking a twenty-length lead from Miner and Mysore, but the latter pair began to drop out at the half mile, where Regiment was fast reducing the long lead and Fado got through handy to him. Before the bend Tressady was done, and Fado coming into the bend went on to win with something in hand, Mutrood and Padshah also finishing well.

Lastly, a very good lot of sprinters went over six furlongs, the first rush coming for Mudkoor, to be soon followed by one for Rajput, who warmed to a solid even money chance, whereas at a good price Lookman at the finish commanded good money. This was never much of a race, Chechan following Brazee on the rails with Rajput outside. The last-named soon showed in front and gradually increasing the lead was well clear when Mudkoor went after him. It was no use, Rajput being well in hand, and third place went, as indicated by betting, to Lookman, who got through late.

The Jubbulpore race stewards have decided to increase the 2nd and 3rd monies in all Rs. 300 races at the Spring meeting to Rs. 75 and Rs. 50 respectively.

The ninth weekly run of the Calcutta Paperchase brought out only a moderate field, a number of enthusiasts being in camp with the Light Horse, and the ladies apparently reserving themselves for Wednesday's chase. The only two ladies riding were Lady Jenkins and Mrs. Wanklyn, while among the men were Mr. Ballantyne on Farthing Bun, Mr. Holmes on Enthusiast, Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6, Mr. Murray on Desmond, Mr. Chancellor on H. E., Mr. T. Marshall on Loyalty, Mr. Deakin on Scarboro, Mr. Perkins on Sincerity, Mr. Knox on List, Mr. McLean on Minnie, Mr. Pugh on Rip Rap, Mr. Wheeler on Sauce, Mr. Bletsoe on Dervish, Mr. Montgomery on Floreat, Mr. Sayers on a chestnut, Mr. Radmore on Bess, Colonel Grainger on a chestnut, Mr. Muir on North Shore, Mr. Williams on a black, Mr. Barrow on Hurlingham, Mr. Brownell on a bay, Dr. Taylor on a chestnut and one or two more.

The rain had rendered the going on the soft side and it was a long wet ride with some stiff fences to negotiate. Grief was plentiful: Sincerity fell with Mr. Steele Perkins who damaged one of his ankles, Mr. Galstaun, Mr. Chancellor and Mr. Montgomery also got falls but were not hurt.

The course started to the left of the Jodhpur thana, and included sixteen jumps made up of four hurdles, three bush walls and nine mud walls. The line took one through a good bit of open country, and some very greasy lones and the going was heavy throughout.

In the Horse Chase Messrs. Murray, Sayers, and Knox made the running from the start. Mr. Wheeler and Mr. Pugh then took command and after the road Mr. Bletsoe came to the front with Mr. Knox and Mr. Pugh next. In the run home Messrs. Murray, Bletsoe, Riviere and Knox and Steele Perkins were together. Mr. Perkins fell at the final hurdle and a good finish between the others resulted in a win for Mr. Murray on Desmond by a head.

The official verdict was—

1. Mr. Murray on Desmond.
2. Mr. Bletsoe on Dervish.
3. Mr. Riviere on 10 to 6.
4. Mr. Knox on List.
5. Mr. Holmes on Enthusiast.
6. Mr. Sayers on a chestnut, followed by Mr. Wheeler, Mr. Pugh, Mr. Ballantyne, and Mr. Wanklyn.

In the Pony Chase Scarboro, Minnie, H. E. and Hurlingham were most prominent. H. E. fell twice and Scarboro once more won from Minnie. The following was the order :—

1. Mr. Deakin on Scarboro.
2. Mr. McLean on Minnie.
3. Mr. Muir on North Shore.
4. Mr. Radmore on Bess.
5. Mr. Barrow on Hurlingham.
6. Mr. Brownell on a bay, followed by Dr. Taylor and Colonel Grainger.

The Calcutta Ladies' Paperchase Cup, which this year reaches its twentieth anniversary, was run yesterday morning over a course of about 4 miles of the Jodhpur country and was won after a very fine race by Mrs. R. H. A. Gresson, who rode her horse Enthusiast with excellent judgment all through the race and beat Mrs. Dods on Spero in a close finish over the last obstacle, Miss Binning a head away third, Mrs. Wanklyn and Mrs. Reid both close up. Mrs. Gresson's performance was all the more creditable as she had not had many previous opportunities of making the acquaintance of her horse, Mr. Gresson having only purchased him about a week ago from Captain Brancker. There were six runners in all the five ladies already named above and Lady Jenkins, who was compelled to ride Redmount, who, though extremely sure, is not blessed with much pace, Priory, her other horse, having taken to refusing badly. Mrs. Dods made the running most of the way till after the field crossed the Gurriah Hât Road about a mile and a half from home, and here Mrs. Gresson ranged up alongside and shortly after passed her. At the last turn after the Ladies' Wall Mrs. Dods again got in front, but Mrs. Gresson got up on the inside and sailing away to the front again jumped the last fence about a length in front, winning finally by a length and a half Lady Dring presented the Cup to the winner whose success was a popular one and Mrs. Gresson was loudly cheered as she went up to take the prize which she had won by a display of admirable horsewomanship.

The following was the official record :—

1. Mrs. R. H. A. Gresson on Enthusiast.
2. Mrs. Dods on Spero.
3. Miss Binning on Eileen.
4. Mrs. Wanklyn on Grey Harold.
5. Mrs. Reid on At Last.
6. Lady Jenkins on Redmount.

Won by a length and a half; head between the second and third; two lengths between the third and fourth; At Last a close fifth, Redmount distanced.

The following are the remaining fixtures of the season :—

The 10th Chase, 16th February.
The 11th Chase, 23rd February.
The Pony Cup, 28th February.
The 12th Chase, 1st March.
The Paperchase Cup, 8th March.
The C. L. H. Cup, 13th March.
The annual Dinner will be held at the Saturday Club on the 8th March.

A "Mere Man" writes:—We were all very pleased to see Mrs. Gresson win the Ladies' Paperchase Cup on Wednesday morning. She rode a sound race all through and won cleverly at the finish. The win would have been far more popular if we had seen Mrs. Gresson out during the season qualifying a horse of her own for the contest. It is difficult to get away from the feeling that the three or four ladies who finished close up to the winner on their own horses—horses which they had themselves qualified, by starting regularly in the weekly chases and riding hard, (for the most part in the first flight)—are deserving of much sympathy. Would it not be good for paperchasing if the conditions of this race were so altered as to confine entries to the ladies who ride regularly, just as the horses are confined to those who run regularly in the weekly chases?

We have on at least one previous occasion seen this cup won by a lady who, although living in Calcutta at the time, was not seen paperchasing either before or after the race, and I suggest with all diffidence that it is not fair to the regular riders in the hunt that the paperchase rules should permit of horses being borrowed at the last moment for the occasion, and the race won by an entry who is not a regular follower of the weekly chases.

There is, of course, a rule which prohibits the mere man from buying a horse out of the hunt expressly for a Cup contest after the animal has been qualified by the seller. The rule stipulates that a horse to be admitted to a Cup Chase shall have run in half the number of weekly chases held up to the date of the Cup while in the rider's possession. In other words a sale cancels all previous qualifications, and a horse purchased in this way is of course no longer a qualified paperchase horse and cannot compete even for the Ladies' Cup—why not extend the rules to prohibit borrowed animals as well. The majority of ladies riding would not be averse to such a rule, as many of them to the writer's knowledge have in recent years been sporting enough to ride their own horses rather than take mounts on infinitely better animals offered to them.

I offer the suggestion to the Paperchase Committee for what it is worth.

The 9th Division Inter-regimental Polo Tournament for Sir Charles Egerton's Challenge Cup began at Bolarum on the 5th instant when two games were played. In the first the 20th Deccan Horse beat the Sherwood Foresters by 13th goals to nil in a very one-sided game. The second match was well contested throughout, the 7th Dragoon Guards eventually beating 7th Hussars by 3 goals to 1. The next game was between the K.L.I's and the 29th Lancers, ending in an easy win for the 29th by 5 goals to 2. On the 9th instant the two semi-final games were played. In the first of these the 33rd Cavalry ran rings round the 29th Lancers, ultimately defeating them by 8 goals to 2. The match between the 20th Deccan Horse and the 7th Dragoon Guards was a much more interesting affair. The Deccans got away at the start and scored three goals in the first period. Subsequent play was very even, the 20th Deccans winning in the end by 8 goals to 2. The final was played off last Saturday and a splendid game was witnessed. Both teams were at the top of their form and gave a fine exhibition of polo. Time was called with the score two all but the goals were widened and the game resumed when the 20th Deccan Horse scored the winning goal and thus once again secured the Egerton Cup. Teams; 20th Deccan Horse—(Bangalore) Siddik Omer, 1; Sidik, Nur 2; Captain A. E. H. Ley, 3; Captain H. B. Worgan (back); 33rd Q. V. O. Light Cavalry:—Captain W. H. Anderson, 1; Colonel H. J. W. The first round of the Native Cavalry Polo Tournament at Ambala was completed on the 13th instant with the following results :—

17th Cavalry beat 1st Lancers by 11 goals to nil.

3rd Skinner's Horse beat the 9th Hodson's Horse "A" team by seven goals to one.

18th Lancers beat 30th Lancers by five goals to three.

19th Lancers beat 11th Lancers by six goals to three.

2nd Lancers scratched to the 4th Cavalry.

Details will appear in our next issue.

The last English mail brought us some notes as to the Romanoff and Mostyn salts presented 1911-12 to the Indian Polo Association and to the Khedivial Sporting Club, Cairo, by the proprietors of Country Life, in commemoration of the Coronation of His Majesty George V. The Indian Polo Association received two sets of the Romanoff salts (each set comprising two salts), and one copy of the Mostyn salt, to be played for under I.P.A. rules, and the Khedivial Sporting Club, Cairo, one set of two salts, to be played for under Hurlingham rules.

The Polo Challenge salts were specially made to the order of Country Life, and are replicas of two fine English salt-cellars, or, more correctly speaking, standing salts, of the latter part of the sixteenth and of early part of the seventeenth century. The more ornate example is an exact copy of the Mostyn salt, which bears the mark of an Elizabethan goldsmith, together with the London hall-marks of the year 1586, and is preserved in the National Collection at Victoria and Albert Museum, South Kensington. It has a cylindrical body embossed with lions' masks in cartouches amidst garlands of fruit and foliage, and rests on three claw-and-ball feet. Above the body is the salt receptacle, and over this is its ornamental domical cover, which is, of course, removed when the salt is in use.

The second is a steeple-topped standing salt and is an exact replica of one of the Romanoff salts, the work of an English goldsmith whose initials, R. B., accompanied by the London hall-marks of 1611 are stamped on the original silver-work now in possession of the Emperor of Russia, and preserved in the Treasury of the Kremlin at Moscow. The body of the salt is also cylindrical, but quite plain, and of the type that is generally referred to as "drum-shaped." It rests on a spreading base enriched with the "egg-and-tongue" ornament charcteristic of the Early Jacobean period, and like the Mostyn salt is supported by three claw-and-ball feet. Above the body is a projecting cornice enriched like the base, and within this is the salt-bowl, to which its domical steeple-topped cover is attached by four ornamental scroll-work brackets. In this case the brackets afford space for the removal of salt from the bowl, which is thus always protected from falling dust.

The action of Country Life in selecting these standing salts as polo prizes has been enthusiastically commended by collectors of plate and connoisseurs generally, not only because the salts are beautiful reproductions of Elizabethan and Jacobean silver-work, but also because they afford interesting illustrations of the most important articles of silver-plate which graced the tables of English gentlemen in the middle ages and down to the time of Charles I., when hundreds of such articles were put in the melting pot to provide money for the soldiers engaged in the war between that monarch and his parliament. They also recall to our minds the table-manners of the Elizabeth and Jacobean periods when salt was obtained by evaporation from sea-water and was a costly commodity, regarded with veneration and as a safeguard against witchcraft, and it was considered unlucky to spill it; a superstition illustrated in Leonardo da Vinci's painting of the Last Supper, in which Judas Iscariot is depicted in the act of spilling the salt.

In the reign of James I., when the fork was introduced into England, there were no such things as salt-spoons, and every well-mannered person, at table, helped himself to salt from the nearest receptacle with a knife, as directed by "The Book of Curteisie," which says that "Where-so-eure thou be to digne or to suppe, of gentilnes take salt with thy Knyf." In other words, don't dip your meat into the salt-cellar. Down to the seventeenth century it was the custom in good society, when helping oneself to meat, to hold the joint with one hand while cutting a slice; the slice was then placed on one's trencher and cut into small pieces, each of which was taken up with the fingers, dipped in the salt that had been placed on the trencher, and with the fingers conveyed to the mouth.

Amongst the higher classes the standing salt, or "great salt" as it was generally called, was almost invariably of silver, and was always placed in the most important part of the dining table in front of the host and his most important guest, while smaller salt-cellars, which were regarded as of minor importance, were set on other parts of the table. From the position of the great salt and the honour that was paid to those who were seated near it, others who were placed at a distance from it were regarded as of less consequence, whence arose the old-time reference to "humble cousins who sit below the salt."

The Country Life polo salts in their design and execution carry us back to the time of Shakespeare and Ben Jonson, for in every detail they are exactly like the Elizabethan and Jacobean salts from which they have been copied, and not only have the form and decoration of each of the originals been carefully copied, but the signs of ware which are seen on the originals have also been reproduced with remarkable success, and but for the fact the Mostyn and Romanoff salts bear the London hall-marks of 1586 and 1611, while the Country Life salts are stamped with the hall-marks of 1911-12, the modern reproductions might easily be mistaken for the originals themselves.

The Executive Committee of the Bengal Presidency Athletic Association Sports wish to announce that His Excellency Lord Hardinge has been gracious enough to present a challenge cup to be competed for in the High Jump Championship competition. Because of this handsome offer the Executive Committee have decided to hold open the entries in this one event up till Friday, the 16th instant, in order that competitors who have not already entered might be attracted by this handsome trophy. The winning jumps for the past three years have been 5ft. 5in., 5ft. 6in. and 5ft. 8in. respectively. The event is open to both European and Indian Amateurs. Entries may be sent with fees to the Honorary Secretary, 25, Chowringhee.

The Senior Harrison Shield Cricket Tournament was brought to a conclusion in Calcutta last week end. The teams contesting the final match were the Sibpur College, and the Military Students of the Medical College. Batting first the Medicals made 160, Sibpur replying with 84. The Medicals were all out for 94 in their second venture and Sibpur were left with 171 to win, but their second innings only realised 85, the Medicals thus winning the match by 85 runs. For the winners Martin bowled uncommonly well, taking 5 wickets for 38 in the first innings and 9 for 32 in the second.

The Fourth Test Match was begun at Melbourne on the 9th instant in perfect weather. England won the toss but sent her opponents in and dismissed them for 191. Minnett 56 was top scorer, Kelleway made 29, Hill 22, Hordern 19, Trumper 17 and Cotter 15; Barnes took 5 wickets for 74, Foster 4 for 77 and Woolley one for 22. Hobbs and Rhodes opened England's innings and had put together 54 at the end of the day's play. Continuing next day England made 370 runs for the loss of one wicket. Hobbs scored 178 in splendid style, an innings which included 22 fours, Rhodes made 157 not out, and the partnership between this pair was responsible for 323 for one wicket—a record for a test match. The previous longest partnership for the first wicket in matches between England and Australia was in 1899 at the Oval when F. S. Jackson and T. Hayward put together 185. Hobbs and Rhodes' partnership beat the record for any wicket in a test match, previously held by C. Hill and R. J. Hartigan who put together 243 for the 8th wicket at Adelaide in 1907-08. The record first wicket partnership in first-class matches stands to the credit of J. T. Brown and J. Tunnicliffe, Yorkshire vs. Derbyshire, at Chesterfield in 1898 when they scored 554. Continuing on Monday England completed her innings for 589 runs—a record for a test match, the previous best being 586 scored by Australia at Sydney in 1894-95. On Monday Rhodes was out for 179—a splendid innings. Gunn made 75 without giving a chance, a 56 by Woolley and 50 by Foster being the other chief scores. Minnett took 3 wickets for 59, Armstrong 3 for 93, Hordern 3 for 137, and Kelleway one for 80. Australia then went in again and made 8 runs without loss when play closed for the day.

The match was concluded on Tuesday when the Australians' second innings realised 173 runs, Carter being topscorer with 38, Ransford 29 not out and Trumper 28 being the other chief contributors. England thus won the fourth test match by an innings and 225 runs and thus take the rubber, beating the Australians in three of the five matches, one of which still remains to be played. Of 51 matches played in Australia England have now won 22 and Australia 27, two having been drawn. Of the matches played in England, England have won 16 and Australia 8, 15 having been drawn, the high figure of drawn matches in England being due

THE 1st P.V.B. Hockey Tournament was concluded at Lahore on the 10th instant when the Royal Sussex Regiment met the North-West Railway Volunteers "A" team in the final. A splendid game was witnessed, the Sussex eventually winning by 3 goals to 1. All the scoring took place in the first half; the Railway team made desperate efforts to get through in the second moiety, but the soldiers' defence was too good for them. Lieutenant-Colonel Wright presented the Cup to the Sussex and complimented them on beating the redoubtable North-Western Railway team.

THE Marryatt Cup Lawn Tennis Tournament is now in progress at the Bombay Gymkhana, the final being fixed for the 24th instant.

THE preliminary heats of the annual regatta of the Royal Connaught Boat Club Poona were rowed off on Saturday last, a very big crowd assembling at Rosherville. Appended are results. The regatta itself is fixed for to-morrow when a dinner and dance will follow the aquatic programme.

STATION EIGHTS—½ mile.

R. A. M. C. (Smales, bow; Brown-Mason, Bowen, Startin, Turner, Byatt, Leahy, Langrishe, stroke; Mrs. Parker, cox) beat Royal Engineers (Richardson bow; Corry, Twiss, Loring, Bowet, Whiteley, Walker, Paris, stroke; Miss Brooke, cox) by half a length. Time—2mins. 44secs.

JUNIOR FOURS—3 furlongs.

Dorsets beat Loyal North Lancs by 2½ lengths. Time—2mins. 18secs.

SENIOR PAIRS—3 furlongs.

Leahy and Langrishe beat Whiteley and Walker by 1½ lengths. Time—2mins. 25secs.

JUNIOR FOURS—3 furlongs.

R. A. (Eeles, Greenshields, Vines, Sarson, and Mrs. Slade Power, cox) beat Royal Engineers (Rawlence, Loring, Corry, Richardson, and Miss Brooke, cox) by ¾ length. Time—2mins. 21½secs.

SENIOR PAIRS—3 furlongs.

Turner and Wilson beat Byatt and Startin easily by 2 lengths. Time—2mins. 25secs.

JACK JOHNSON, the negro heavy-weight champion, must of necessity be entered on the lists as a humorist. His latest attempt to add to the gaiety of the world is contained in a recent message from America. Johnson has issued a statement to the effect that he has accepted an offer to wrestle Gotch, the world's champion, some time in April or May, and it is further added that the affair will be for the championship of the world, and that Johnson's "end" is 30,000 dollars. "Johnson," concludes the message, "declares that he is certain of victory."

The negro has done some peculiar things in his time, but this, one may be permitted to think, is easily his best. Seemingly he only deals in offers of 30,000 dollars. That was the amount he wanted to meet Langford or McVea; its English equivalent was his requirement for a match with Bombardier Wells, and for his contest with Dan Flynn in July the same number of dollars figures as Johnson's share. He is certain of victory; the negro was never otherwise, but on this occasion he will get very few people to take the absurd affair seriously.

Johnson will be given the credit of being a great boxer, but no one has ever heard of him as a wrestler, and to select Gotch, the man who defeated Hackenschmidt, is too utterly ludicrous. If the thing were a vaudeville turn—such as Johnson's "match" with George Robey in London, which was cleverly done, and served its purpose level, but for Johnson to speak of beating Gotch is taxing the credulity of folk a little too much. The negro was ever a good Press agent, and perhaps after all his latest effort comes as the result of the failure of the American newspaper men to give him that publicity which was his until recently.

MR. H. MCINTOSH, the famous fight promoter, has been experiencing some difficulty in getting McVea to agree to a return contest with Sam Langford. McVea is quite willing to fight Barry who is now in Australia, but pushes obstacles in the way when an encounter with Langford is talked of. McIntosh is, however determined to bring the match off, and as McVea went to Australia under contract with eyes and mind open to all the conditions of a hard and fast agreement, McIntosh has decided to set the law in motion if the matter cannot be decided otherwise.

AARON BROWN, "the Dixie Kid," fought Harry Lewis at Liverpool the week the last English mail left and was well beaten, the fight being stopped in 8th round. Taking a line through both the men's recent contest with the Frenchman, Georges Carpentier, it looked a very good thing for the Dixie Kid, but spectators were surprised at the revelation of Lewis' true form. They met at catch weights. The coloured fighter had all the best of the two opening rounds and in the second landed a succession of right-handed punches flush to the angle of Lewis' chin. Each blow carried all his weight but they did not seem to affect Lewis at all. This seemed to be a shock to the Kid's nerves, for he was far less agressive in the third and fourth meetings. He came again in the fifth and sixth during which he appeared to almost overwhelm the white American, but Lewis had probably been easing up and he let himself go from the close of the sixth round. There was then no doubt as to his superiority. The Kid didn't have a look in. He was driven to the ropes and badly battered and hammered to the gong. The black, though boxing cleverly in the seventh, could not escape punishment or stave off exhaustion and he was saved by the gong. He was a badly wearied man at the eighth meeting and was sent to the boards with a right hook behind the ear, Mr. Douglas then stopping the contest. The Kid rose to continue but again collapsed, thereby justifying the referee's decision.

THE Annual Sirhind Boxing Tourament will commence in Umballa on 29th February, 1912. The entries close on 24th February. The All-India Regimental Championship Trophy will be competed for during the tournament. The present holders are the Royal Welsh Fusiliers. His Highness, the Maharajah of Patiala, is again presenting a Five Hundred Rupee Cup to be won outright by the regiment winning the "All-India Challenge Trophy; besides this Cup the regiment winning will receive a replica in bronze of the Challenge Trophy.

THE New Animals Act in England may hit the angler very hard for it seems to be quite on the cards that live bait fishing will be prohibited. It would appear from this new enactment that one may not fish with a live worm or any other live animal bait in England under a penalty of £25, or alternatively, or in addition, six months with or without hard labour.

That, at any rate, seems to be the opinion of the police, who, presumably, are not acting on their own initiative, and of anglers.

This is the position in which anglers and rod fishers find themselves as the result of the protection of Animals Act, which has just come into force. A test case is to be fought, but until the House of Lords has decided one way or the other English fishermen are afraid that it is only too certain that live bait may never again be used.

The wording of the Act is:—

If any person shall cruelly beat, kick, ill-treat, overtide overdrive, overload, torture, infuriate, or terrify any animal, or shall cause, procure or, being the owner, permit any animal, to be so used, or shall, by wantonly or unreasonably doing, or omitting to do any act, or causing, procuring the commission or omission of any act cause any unnecessary suffering...such persons shall be guilty of an offence of cruelty within the meaning of this Act, and shall be liable upon summary conviction to a fine not exceeding £25, or, alternatively, or in addition thereto, to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months.

"Captive animal" is defined as follows, and it is this definition which anglers are taking to themselves, and which the police are relying upon as regards fishermen:—

The expression "captive animal" means any animal (not being a domestic animal) of whatsoever kind or species and whether a quadruped or not including any bird, fish, or reptile, which is in captivity or confinement, or which is maimed, pinioned or subject to any appliance or contrivance for the purpose of hindering or preventing its escape from captivity or confinement.

That the police are taking the matter up is shown by the following letter which appears in the Fishing Gazette:—

Anglers and the new Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Law.

Mr. O. J. Buszard of the Good Intent Angling Society, wrote me on 19th January as follows:—

"Dear Sir,—Fishing with a friend yesterday on a private lake in Sussex, I was informed by inspector D—of the Sussex Police (who was passing, and saw us fishing in the distance) that we were liable to a fine of £25, or six months for live-bait fishing or even paternostering! It appears to me that if this Act came into force on 1st January 1912, the sooner you try and get this grandmotherly legislation repealed the better: and I shall be pleased to promise 21s. to help should you care to open up a subscription to press the matter. It affects thousands whose only holiday is a Sunday's fishing now and then, and for myself one of the healthiest of rest-cures.

"I am afraid there is no 'if' about it," Mr. Marston, the editor, writes, commenting upon the matter. "The Act is in force, and the magistrates and police throughout the country have no option but to act upon it, when they have cases of alleged infringement brought before them."

Mr. Marston said that he and Mr. T. A. Cook, editor, and Mr. Sheringham angling editor, of the Field, intended to get up a guarantee fund, and take a test case to the House of Lords, if necessary.

"I cannot see that a worm is anything but an animal," he said "and I am sure a minnow or a gudgeon is a fish.

"The particular clause which mentions fish was slipped through the House of Commons at midnight, when all the members were somnolent, but it applies all the same.

"The people it will hit are not salmon and trout fishers, who use flies, but workmen, who do use live bait. Where there is one fly fisher there are scores of the others.

"If you are not allowed to use worms you hit the deep sea fishing, for they use worms, mussels, and clams to catch cod, and none of these is a vegetable.

"Others who will suffer are the Thames fishermen who have fishing rights below Isleworth, and who supply live bait.

"The one ray of hope is the clause in the Act which reads :—

Nothing in this section . . . . shall apply to the commission or omission of any act in the course of the destruction . . . . of any animal as food for mankind.

"It may possibly be that if a fisherman can prove that he is going to eat the fish he kills, or that they will be eaten, he may escape the penalty.

The Director of New Zealand Fisheries reports that over 1,000,000 Atlantic salmon ova were imported last year. The ova were procured from the south of England, Scotland, and Germany, and they are being hatched out at Lake Te Anau. The hatching is turning out very satisfactorily, but, in order to thoroughly establish such a migratory fish as the salmon, the importations of ova will require to go on for several years. The American, or quinnat, salmon, with which the great canning industry is carried on on the western coast of America and British Columbia, has been successfully introduced into New Zealand waters. The experiment of introducing this species has been made in the Waitaki. The quinnat is now to be found in all the glacial streams which feed lakes Tekapo, Pukaki, and Ohau, and there is no difficulty in obtaining fish for "stripping" in the smaller streams in the Mackenzie Country. The Director is satisfied that the successful establishment of the quinnat is ample proof that the Atlantic salmon can also be acclimatised in New Zealand, and, if so, it will add greatly to the sport of anglers.

The Imperial Entomologist at Pusa, Mr. T. B. Fletcher, who has been appointed Entomologist to the Government of Madras, has arrived in Bangalore after a tour in the Anamalai Hills with Dr. Anstead, Scientific Officer to the United Planters' Association. He is actively occupied in the study of the white ants of India, and found five varieties among the tea, coffee and rubber plantations of Anamalai. Mr. Fletcher joins the staff of Coimbatore Agricultural College during this year.

Mr. R. F. Stoney writes to the Madras Mail :—"Sportsmen will doubtless be interested to hear of the occurrence in the neighbourhood of Madras of Swinhoe's snipe (Gallinago Megala), a specimen having been shot by me on the 3rd December 1901, about 30 miles south of Madras, and another was, I believe, obtained on the 4th instant. As far as I am aware, this is the first occasion on which this snipe has been recorded as having been shot in India. The bird is very similar in appearance to the pintail snipe (G. Stenura), but is usually somewhat larger. It can be identified by an examination of the tail, the former having twenty feathers, the outer twelve of which are attenuated, and the latter twenty-six, of which the outer sixteen are very much attenuated or about one-third the width of the former. A more detailed description can be obtained on page 395 of Part 3, Vol. XX, of the Bombay Natural History Society's Journal. The following are the particulars of the specimen :—Length 11·2 ins. ; tail 2·25 ins. ; wing 5·5 ins. ; bill 2·5 ins. ; tarsus 1·5 in. ; sex female ; weight, slightly over 5 ozs."

The final match in the South India Hockey Tournament was played at Secunderabad on the 8th instant and brought together the 61st Pioneers and the 109th Infantry. It was a very interesting game. The 109th had all the best of the first half and led at the interval but on changing ends the 61st woke up and managed to equalise before the call of time. Ten minutes' extra play each way and the Pioneers asserting themselves scored two more goals, thus winning by four goals to two. This is the seventh time the 61st Pioneers have won this cup, and the third time in succession. Brigadier-General Rodwell presented the cup to the winners and congratulated them on their splendid record.

Six teams have entered for the Madras Gymkhana Association Football Tournament which began on the Island on Monday.

Leicesters' "A" team met and defeated Leicesters' "B" team on Monday by 5 goals to nil.

Gymkhana met Perambore, on Tuesday and beat them by a goal to nil.

On Wednesday, the Oxford and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry played the winners of the match between the Leicester "A" and "B" teams.

The winners of the match between Perambore and the Gymkhana play the Cameron Highlanders today, and the final is fixed for Saturday.

The Madras Cricket Club will hold an Athletic Sports Meeting at Chepauk on the 23rd and 24th instant, when the following programme will be discussed :—

100 Yards open, Quarter Mile open, Mile open, 100 Yards, 120 Yards Hurdles, Quarter Mile, Half Mile, 229 Yards Handicap, High Jump, Long Jump, Putting the Weight and Throwing the Cricket Ball. The prizes in each of the first three events are Rs. 75 and two Silver Cups are to be given in each of the others with a third prize in the 220 Yards Handicap.

Events Nos. 1, 2 and 3 are open to all Europeans. Entries must be made through a Regiment, Corps or Club. A third prize will be given for these events if sufficient entries are received. No. 8 is open only to members of the Madras Cricket Club. All other events are open to Officers of the Army and Navy, members of the Universities and Public Schools, and European amateurs of any recognised Gymkhana Club. Entries must reach the Honorary Secretary, Chepauk, by the 15th instant.

The final of the Burma Battalions Hockey Tournament was played at Mandalay on the 10th instant when the 123rd Outram Rifles beat the 1st 10th Gurkha Rifles by 3 goals to nil.

The members of the Calcutta Ladies' Golf Club will be "At Home" on Tuesday, the 20th, when there will be a 9-hole competition for men and putting competition for ladies. Her Excellency Lady Hardinge will give away the prizes.

The third billiard match of 18,000 up between H. W. Stevenson and George Gray is now in progress and is a very close game. On Saturday night last Gray had made 8,231 and Stevenson 8,222.

R. Arnst, the holder, and Ernest Barry, the English champion, will meet for the world's sculling championship in June next. The race will be rowed on the Thames.

The Connel Cup Polo Tournament has once more been postponed and it has now been decided to hold the tournament at Allahabad in the first week in March.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 26th January 1912.

Many of us have been amused spectators of the recent fruitless efforts of the Y.M.C.A. to raise £100,000 in twelve days. Early this month, heralded by stupendous booming in certain sections of the ha'penny press, there came amongst us one Mister Ward a professional Yankee money-catcher of the most blatant type, full of strange schemes and with a mind and body of brass. His campaign in the British Isles was to raise £100,000 "against the clock" for the Y.M.C.A. new buildings in Tottenham Court Road. Well he failed, but he raised £66,667 in the twelve days, which isn't bad, and no doubt the Young Christians will find use for the money. But if Mister Ward took himself seriously his reflections can hardly be particularly cheerful at the moment. True he has scooped in a fairly big sum in a short canvass, but he "dropped his money pus" as Uncle Remus would say when he thought he could hustle the British public as he apparently hustles the Yankees. The B. P. is not behind the door in finding coin for deserving objects, but it won't be rounded up like cattle ; this "stand and deliver, look sharp and get a move on" method is rather calculated to make many charitable folk close their purse strings tight. Also there be those who are by no means obsessed with the Y.M.C.A. movement. It has its hostile critics in fair numerical strength, millions of us are utterly indifferent to it, others might feel disposed to accord support if some of the old and much-discussed objections were removed. There is a widespread and well-founded belief that a spirit of "narrowness" pervade the

The monument to the Duke of Wellington in St. Paul's Cathedral is to be completed shortly by the addition on the summit of an equestrian statue of the Iron Duke. It is nearly sixty years since the victor of Waterloo died, and the fact that only now is the nation's design for doing his memory honour to be carried out in full need not be regarded as proof of our dilatory fashion of doing things. Rather should it be taken as evidence that we are a nation of long memory and steadfast intention, and when we mean to do a thing we do it, though it takes us sixty years to worry through with it.

It makes no difference that the man who designed the statue is also dead. If anything, that misfortune adds to the credit of persevering with the scheme. Nor need the fact that when the equestrian statue is hoisted to the top of the monument nobody will be able to see it properly in the dim half-light of the arch under which it will be practically concealed be held up as evidence of the British habit of muddle. Had they left the Wellington monument where it was originally erected, in the chapel which is now used by Chancellor Tristram for his Consistory Court, nobody would ever have seen the statue at all without borrowing a ladder.

Because we do not suffer enough already from annual conferences, the Bar are now proposing, in addition to the annual meeting of the General Council of the Bar, to have something in the nature of a conference such as is held by some foreign Bars for the discussion of matters affecting the profession. We have never had a high opinion of lawyers, but at the same time have never been among those who believe that no lawyer can be a man of character unless it be bad character. Occasionally we have recognised the shining lights of the legal profession as men of intellect, possessed of something like enough unto principle to be mistaken for it. But if the Bar carry out their threat to hold an annual conference for the discussion of matters affecting the profession, we shall join those who believe that lawyers are a more hopeless tribe than the Nazarenes, unless they make their annual powwow a Private Bar conference in the colloquial sense of the term. The necessity for such a conference does not exist, moreover, while the Imperial Parliament remains an institution. When any legislative proposal is before the House of Commons the discussion upon it resolves itself into a consideration of matters affecting the legal profession to the exclusion of the merits of the measure, whatever they are. A session of Parliament is, in fact, one prolonged conference in the interests of lawyers.

It is very hard business to be a child nowadays, for the world is so full of folks whose mission it is to improve the human race at the expense of everything which a generation or so ago made childhood the happiest period of life, because it was the only period unburdened by responsibilities. The latest design of the cranks who are spoiling childhood is the cultivation of high ideals amongst schoolchildren by telling them stories of great deeds and bidding them go and do likewise. The cranks who are doing this call themselves the Moral Education League and it may be taken for granted that the great deeds which they hold up for childish emulation are first carefully sub-edited with a view to make them morally improving in the most depressing sense. The uselessness of the scheme is not its only condemnation. The absurdity of talking to schoolchildren about the art of Murillo in order to inspire a desire for the beautiful, or about Elizabeth Fry's reformation of Newgate in order to cultivate a taste for philanthropy, speaks for itself. Nobody who knows the average boy will be surprised if after a lecture on Sir Philip Sidney or Chevalier Bayard, he still believes that Dick Turpin or Captain Kidd was a greater hero than either. The Moral Education League will have their labour for nothing notwithstanding they may create a little prig here and there; but why should they be allowed to torment children with their ideals and morals? When children, who under compulsion have to endure this sort of thing, escape from school a violent reaction takes place, and society has to suffer for it. Thus are hooligans manufactured.

The cinematograph theatre, so popular in suburban London, is about to invade the West End and to make a serious bid in competition with existing places of amusement. Arrangements are being rapidly pushed forward for the erection of three palatial theatres at which "moving pictures" will be the sole attraction offered. In one case a sum of no less than £130,000 is to be expended over the enterprise; in another the cost of acquiring the freehold will be £100,000, and in the third the ground rent alone will amount to a sum of 5,000 guineas yearly. It is proposed to run the theatre on high-class lines. The pictures shown will mainly be scenes of travel, pageants of the day, and subjects of scientific interest. The "comics" beloved by suburban audiences will be rigorously excluded.

The pessimistic view, founded on the non-success of a number of cinematograph theatres, unsuitably situated and badly managed, that moving pictures have had their day is obviously not shared by those interested in the new enterprises, and further evidence of the belief in their money-drawing powers is afforded by the fact that one firm of estate agents, operating largely in the West End, have at present on their books no fewer than 700 inquiries for properties and sites in suitable positions for cinematograph theatre purposes.

If, to quote his own picturesque phrase, Sir H. Tree last Monday night broke the bread of variety for the first time, his welcome was a fitting tribute to his debut. Whether the audience was much concerned about those changes in the law which have made it possible for the stage's leading representative to accept the hospitality of the music-hall is open to question. The crowded theatre that applauded Sir Herbert and extracted the inevitable and graceful speech clearly appreciated the fact that the premier actor was honouring the premier music-hall and offering a performance which, in its study of character and presentation of the bizarre, is not to be equalled in the thirty minutes' traffic of the variety theatre.

"The Man Who Was" is undoubtedly a piece of frank melodrama, fashioned out of a fine story. There many be in it more of Kinsey Peile than Rudyard Kipling, but in his picture of Austin Limmason the officer of the White Hussars, who broken and crushed in Siberia, finds his way back to the regiment, and to memories of twenty years, Sir H. Tree's delineation is as strong and compelling an effort as anything in his long gallery of portraits. The terrible looking creature, lank of hair, half naked with face bleeding and body begrimed, that crawls into the officers' mess at Peshawar, appears but half human. With admirable art we watch the growth of memory, the recapture of self, and, as one object and then another fans the flickering flame of recollection, the man's real self makes feeble efforts to pierce through the cruel mists of the years. It is a pathetic and a thrilling scene, and the actor's triumph is very great. One may be curiously conscious of the unreality of melodrama in the surroundings, yet by the sheer power of the actor's art what is happening grips the emotions and, in its climax, offers one of the most moving and affecting incidents of the contemporary stage. The actor, with concealing artifice, gradually fans the flames of memory to a white heat, and as he brings himself erect and grasps the tattered old flag which he helped to save at Inkerman, the full flood of emotion overwhelms him, and Austin Limmason falls dead in the circle of his old comrades.

If the variety theatre is to avail itself to the full of its new liberty, it is by such direct and appealing plays as "The Man Who Was" that it will best stimulate in its audience a love of the drama. It may not be high art, and, contrasted with Mr. Shaw's delicious exercise, "How He Lied to Her Husband," which is also in the Palace Theatre bill. "The Man Who Was" has about it something of the obvious, not to say the tawdry. But the average music-hall audience is in leisured mood; and although we acknowledge that at the Palace Theatre the standard of appreciation is at its highest, the enthusiastic reception accorded the play and the players on Monday night is fair evidence of the kind of work which, under the new liberty accorded by the Lord Chamberlain, is likely to find most favour. The depressing play is not for the variety theatre, and "The Man Who Was," in spite of its pathetic figure, has nothing really grey in its composition. Sir H. Tree was after all, well advised in choosing it for his début, on the variety stage.

THE UNEXPECTED.

"Hira Singh put the evil eye on us no doubt" grumbled old Bàlach "by shouting after us, once we'd started, for that extra packet of cartridges we'd forgotten. We've not seen a sign of anything and yet my sister's son said he saw as fine a herd as you'd wish to meet in the Long Valley Nat three days ago." We were out after markhor in the wild Baluchistan Hill. It was four in the afternoon and we had worked all day. Markhor, it is true, are pretty rare in a country where every man who can afford it carries a gun, but I thought I had got information that could be relied on.

Both my attendants were quite certain that Hira Singh was the cause of our ill-luck. Old Balach, with a muttered imprecation, had at once removed both his sandals and knocked the dust out of them, which is the only possible way of preventing "the almost inevitable consequences," but even this had failed and we were now making our way back to camp tired and not a little disappointed.

In Shikar, however, it is usually the unexpected that happens, and I was, if I had only known it, within reach of a curious discovery in the natural history of the neighbourhood.

Our road lay along the bed of a fine rocky stream, and turned sharply on to the head of a long pool at a spot where the water took a turn against some great cliffs.

Young Mistak, the second Bàlach, was ahead, and he made an amused exclamation as something slid out from a spot of sand into the middle of the pool. "What is it?" I asked, not able to see clearly.

"Crocodile" said the youth.

"Crocodile?" I said "Why on earth——!" and, grabbing my rifle from old Bàlach I fumbled for a cartridge.

But the ugly snub-nosed head that had remained above the water just long enough to tantalise me, disappeared with, as it seemed to me, a sardonic wink before I could get my rifle up.

I then turned and rent my guide. Why had they not told me there were crocodile, snub-nose crocodile too—not mere fish-eating gavial—in the country.

But Bàlach is an independent old fellow and told me roundly that he could not be expected to know that, when I had asked him about markhor, I cared for crocodile. Nobody had ever shot them. He had heard that one had snapped at a man years ago and they sometimes pulled down a goat. But otherwise they did no harm. What good were they to me? For answer I pulled out my cheroot case and showed Balach the finely finished leather, with difficulty convincing the old materialist that it was the hide of the same animal.
