THE LIGHT OF THE FIREFLY.

A WELL-KNOWN London firm (to whom we do not intend to give a free advertisement by mentioning their name) announce that by the use of their burners the quarterly electric light bill of their customers may be reduced by one-half. If these lucky customers could find out and utilise the mode by which the firefly lights and maintains its lantern, their bills might be reduced by something like 99 per cent. instead of a beggarly 50 per cent.

For we are told by an American lady biologist, Mrs. A. B. Howard, who, by the way, writes in the Annals of the Transvaal Museum, that the light of the firefly is unique in that it is practically, if not absolutely, light without heat. An American professor, who is cited in support of this statement, told the author of the article in question that "after thorough experiment with the most delicate thermal apparatus known to science he could authorize the statement that not more than one-thousandth, if any at all, of the energy expended in the flash of the firefly is lost in heat, when one considers that with our ordinary artificial lights less than one per cent. of the energy is sometimes available for light, and even with the electric arc only 10 per cent., the wonderful economy of the 'cheapest form of light' is very apparent."

If the mode in which this wonderful light is produced could be thoroughly ascertained and made available for human use, a large amount of the anxiety which undoubtedly exists as to what is to became of the British nation when its coal-supply runs short, might at once be laid to rest.

Unfortunately the extremely minute size of the light-giving or[gan] of the firefly and the consequently infinitesim[al] light-giving substance is [an] investigation of this nature so difficult, that there is little [hop]ing definitely solved, still [we] the method of light-produci[ng] For the present, therefore, electric light co[mpa]nies must be content with the 50 per cent. reduction promised them by the firm to which allusion has been already made.

BOOK NO. 542

As regards the common American species of firefly, it appears that both sexes emit light, although that of the female, who does not fly, is much feebler than that of her partner. In the latter the light is produced by a couple of plates, lying directly under the very thin skin, and completely filling the lower half of the fifth and sixth abdominal segments. The tenuity of the overlying skin allows free emission of the light. The light giving organs consist of two layers; the lower or ventral layer consisting of polygonal cells filled with coarse granules, while the upper or dorsal one has a different composition.

Omitting minute details of structure, mention of which would be unsuitable to an article of the present nature, this is practically all that is known with certainty in regard to these wonderful organs.

With regard to the means by which the light is produced the general opinion is that it is due to the slow oxidation of some substance produced by the cells of the lower layer of the light-organs. The exact composition of this substance is at present unknown, although it has been supposed to be of a fatty nature; the oxidation of which is caused by substances akin to alkalies. Confirmation of this is afforded by the fact that certain carbon compounds have been found capable of emitting light under conditions similar to those which occur in living organisms, when slowly acted upon by an alkaline medium; and further evidence in the same direction has been yielded by experiments with jelly-fish, which show that alkalies enhance and stimulate the light, which is extinguished by acids.

Assuming that naturalists are on the right track in attributing the light of the firefly to the slow oxidation of a fatty substance, what we now want is a kind of Zoological Edison, who would find a way of reproducing and utilising for human purposes the "cheapest light in the world."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

We join with our contemporaries who have entered a protest against the veto placed by the stewards of the C.T.C. upon ante-post betting by bookmakers holding their license. The "bucket-shop" betting which has been at the root of all the trouble in Bombay and which first, so we are informed, impelled H. E. Sir George Clarke to endeavour to place things upon a more satisfactory basis by legislation—a praiseworthy endeavour in which we fear he must ultimately fail—is a totally different thing to betting "on futures" with recognised bookmakers who are licensed by the C.T.C. and W.I.T.C. A prohibition against ante-post betting, if literally read, means a prohibition against all betting that is not S.P. therefore strictly speaking the C.T.C.'s veto means that nothing but S.P. wagers must be accepted. Now in India we have no official S.P. and therefore to pursue this argument to a further and a logical conclusion the veto means that betting is almost impossible, for a bettor is hardly likely to wager money S.P. when the price is at the arbitrament of the layer and is not officially settled. India, we think, takes herself a thought too seriously and is too anxious to emulate that worthy character Agag who, as we know, "walked delicately!" It is not difficult to imagine the kind of outcry there would be in England if ante-post betting were suddenly forbidden by Tattersall's Committee! The stewards of the C.T.C. were impelled to their present action by what went on during the recent monsoon season and the flood of stupid correspondence which was permitted in a certain Calcutta news-sheet but the greater bulk of this forestalling business was done in a particular way and through a particular channel. The police are quite capable of looking after the unauthorised bookmaker of the "bucket-shop" order and as regards the "regulars" the C.T.C. have them under very close control and we much doubt whether any of the abuses of which we have been told would be found to be existant so far as they are concerned were ante-post betting permitted. Ante-post wagering on the Trials and Viceroy's Cup is a very old established institution in Calcutta for they are the only races during the year that have ever attracted business of this description, hardly any money going on any other races or at any rate it has been so small as to be negligible. As things at present stand what will happen supposing the C.T.C. do not remove the prohibition will be that the ringmen will probably agree that certain prices to be agreed upon by a committee of themselves shall be S.P. prices and the wagers will all go on S.P. that is to say that there will be no business in the usual way and that the prices win and place will be unknown until after the race. The speculator, however, may not find this sort of thing particularly amusing or profitable and consequently there will be next to no business. That the only two betting races of the year on this side of India will be robbed of a large measure of their customary interest hardly needs be said. If the Stewards gave a restricted permission for ante-post betting in the cases of the Trials and Viceroy's Cup it would be a concession much appreciated and would be merely conforming to a custom that is time-honoured.

Mr. A. A. Apcar's horses are expected within the next fortnight or ten days and will move from Bangalore as soon as their watchful trainer is fully satisfied that our Calcutta weather is sufficiently settled. Mr. Apcar himself is, we are glad to hear, in greatly improved health and has derived much benefit from his stay in Bangalore during the summer and will come on a little in advance of his horses. It is equally satisfactory to hear good accounts of the string and the rumours that Lawn Sand had not thriven after having been added to the list are, we learn, more or less unfounded. The horse did not at first seem to have recovered as quickly as was desirable after the operation, but he is now said to be alright. Mayfowl is also well reported upon and, hardy good-constitutioned horse that he is, has rarely much amiss with him. Calcutta appears to agree with him, for as soon as he arrives here he seems to do even better than ever. His Poona running can be more or less disregarded as he was not ready. The stable are fairly confident that Mayfowl will again render a great account of himself in our principal long distance race, the Viceroy's Cup. Mayfowl is one of those horses that never puts his best foot forward in private but in a race it is a different pair of shoes. Given that he is fit and well and it is possible to secure a strong-run race right through for him there would seem to be more than a level chance of this good horse's repeating his last year's triumph. By a process of elimination there would seem to be only Mayfowl left. They talk of Aborigine, but he has had, it must be borne in mind, about four hard seasons of it in Australia right up to the collar all the time and with the value of stakes on the increase down-under and so many more opportunities of picking up money, we regard it as doubtful whether Mr. G. K. would have been advised to take this horse out of Australia if there were any chance of his earning his owner any more money. Horses are not always like old port and our recent experiences of Australian importations do not encourage a belief in their worth by the time they find their way to India. This horse may prove to be the exception that has stood all the racket and is still fresh enough to win a big race under adverse conditions in a country to which he is a stranger. Last Call, upon the authority of so good a judge as Brewer who knew the horse well in England, is a very doubtful quantity. He has, it is true, been standing work so far and he has been out in a race but those who know him and have seen him are necessarily the best judges and they say that Brewer's opinion is more than justified and that his owner will be very lucky if he gets a race out of him. He showed absolutely no sort of form at Poona. We doubt Wavebird being class enough, though after Mayfowl's and Retort's exploits this is a dangerous thing to say, but his owner does not estimate him at anything better than moderate handicap form. Prince Rupert will, we understand, carry Mr. Galstaun's first jacket with F. Wootton inside it in the Cup and one will wish him luck, but the horse has so plainly shown that his distance is about half a mile less than that of the Viceroy's Cup that it would be entirely unsafe to rely upon his staying. Cattaro has not shown any signs of mending his manners since he has been in India and still continues to wear the rogue's badge! Whether any of these new ones of H. H. the Kour Sahib of Patiala's, Bull's Run or Chestnut Park are going to turn out better class than they were at home remains to be proved. Capture's break-down is a serious loss to the stable, for he was as fine a horse as has come to this country for many a day and is beautifully bred being by Cyllene out of Kore. He won the Maiden Horse Plate last season in Calcutta beating Riflebutt and Solution and he finished second to Fizz in the Wellesley Plate and then H. H. was advised to throw both this colt and Cattaro out, as they neither of them seemed to have quite got on their legs after the voyage—and this was done. Capture has had to be fired but we hear that nothing much is hoped for him and personally we have no great faith in patch-work in India. Riflebutt, on his running last back end in Calcutta, was a horse that must necessarily have attracted attention this year for his second to Lawn Sand in the Merchant's Plate, 1½ miles, giving Mr. Apcar's horse 8lbs. and beaten a neck only was a sound performance to say nothing of his victory in the King's Plate, which race although he had a very light weight, he secured in very taking style. He has, however, unfortunately broken down badly and has been suffering from serious hock trouble.

Some of Mr. Galstaun's horses are expected to-day and the rest will probably be all in by the end of the week. They have been a very long time on the road, five or six solid days from Poona.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. A. Gresson are expected in India by the in-coming mail and their many friends in Calcutta will be very glad to welcome them back again.

ESTABLISHED 1742.

LADY JENKINS leaves Marseilles for India on the 3rd November and is expected back in India about the middle of the month. Her sporting ladyship has bought another hunter a bit faster than the big Irish horse she had last year and has sent him out ahead.

THREE steeplechase schooling fences are to be put up on the Calcutta course—a piece of news that will be very welcome to owners of jumpers who have hitherto been compelled to go all the long distance out to the Tollygunge course even when they desire merely to pop their horses over one or two obstacles to enable them to renew their acquaintanceship with them. The fences will be put up alongside the public riding track in the old straight from the big tree up to the site of the old race stand, a distance of about three furlongs, so that there will be a fairly good space in between each obstacle. It is proposed to put up one "mud" wall of the stamp that is so popular with our paperchasing friends and the other two are to be of the same pattern as those that are on the Tollygunge steeplechase course but of a height that will equally suit both horses and ponies, about 4 ft. 3 ins. we understand.

THE Calcutta public riding track, which has now been opened, is a much improved one and is both wider and longer than the old one. The straw dressing is not a thing that anyone is very fond of for even when straw is cut very short as this is it has a way of bunching up and has been known to bring horses down before now, but in Calcutta it is a case of Hobson's choice for tan is apparently too expensive for either the public ride or the training track. Anyway it has never been tried and there is no other material excepting sand available.

MR. "BOB" SIEVIER, M.P. (in posse!), has in his time played many parts, frontier policeman in Zululand where he saw some considerable amount of fighting, play actor in a Shakespearian Company touring India, Mr. Sievier having played Queen Catherine in Henry VIII., bookmaker under the name of Bob Sutton in Australia, playwright (one of his works, The Younger Son, having been produced at the Gaiety), owner of Sceptre (One Thousand, Oaks, St. Leger), editor of the Winning Post, certainly one of the brightest and most newsy of sporting weeklies in England, Modern Life, Sievier's Monthly, etc., and now last scene of all in his strange eventful history a True Blue Tory for Hoxton!

THE House of Joel has been spoiling the Gentiles to some purpose of late and to annex two of the big two-year-old races (the Middle Park Plate and the Dewhurst Plate), and also the Cambridgshire inside of a very short period, to make no mention of other important victories earlier in the season is "talking." Long Set, the property of brother "Solly," started at a very fat price and has never been at much shorter odds than 20 to 1 and all the Gentile horde were on Mustapha, who nobly sustained his reputation and "carted" all his confiding followers yet once again. Mr. Sol Joel, we presume, cannot have been entirely in the dark, for from the way in which Long Set won it is obvious that he must have been able to tell them something at home before the race. So astute a member of the Chosen Race as the owner would not have had such a good thing in his stable without knowing it, and it is therefore a fairly safe presumption that he did not let his four-year-old by Rabelais out of Belle Perdue run loose. Long Set only won once as a three-year-old the Hainton Selling Plate at Lincoln last November, but this year he has had one or two successes interspersed with several almost unaccountable failures. He seems in fact to be—on his public performances—a most unreliable horse, for his form is, to say the least of it, extremely uneven. He started the year by running fourth in the Lincolnshire behind Mercutio, Brandimintine and Spanish Prince. His next effort was the Doveridge Handicap against nothing like as good class and he was absolutely down the course. Next time he was out was on the Royal Hunt Cup (7 furlongs 166 yards) and at only 4lbs. from Moscato he gave that horse a tremendous dusting and was only beaten a neck, Spanish Prince third, and a smart field behind the placed ones. If it had come off Mr. Joel would have had a nice win as Long Set's S. P. was 33 to 1! He was out in the Drayton Handicap at Goodwood and the public went for him, but Brother Jack supplied the winner in Sunspot, who brought home the eights to one in taking style. At Doncaster the other day Mr. S. B. Joel had Long Set in the Doncaster Welter Handicap (1 mile), and obviously had a fancy for him as he started at 5 to 2 and won handsomely from Thaddeus and Matelot.

WHITESTAR, the Dewhurst Plate winner, is late the Doris colt and is an own brother to Sunstar, the Derby winner, and a possible winner—who can say he is not as likely as any of these others—of next year's Derby! This race—the Dewhurst Plate—was his sixth venture and he has only been once defeated. His record reads: won Woodcote Stakes 6 furlongs Epsom 8st 12lb. beating Halberd 8st. 12lb. and Lomond 8st. 12lb.; unplaced Coventry Stakes 5 furlongs at Ascot 9st. to Lady Americus 8st. 11lb. Kempion 9st. and Tonypandy 9st.; won July Stakes 5 furlongs 140 yards Newmarket 9st. beating Melody 8st. 11lb. and Sweeper II. 9st.; won Molecomb Stakes 6 furlongs Goodwood 9st. 5lb. beating Flanders 8st. 12lb. Ootram 8st. 12lb.; won Champagne Stakes 5 furlongs 152 yards 9st. beating Melody 8st. 11lb. and Jingling Geordie 9st. and his present victory. Between this colt and Absurd Mr. Jack Joel ought to have a very strong hand to play in next year's classics. Both Absurd and Whitestar are in the Two Thousand, Whitestar is in the Derby and Leger.

J. ROBINSON has arrived in Calcutta and was on the course yesterday morning. He has not, as was stated earlier in the year, severed his connection with Mr. Galstaun.

SAXBY is stated to be coming out for Mr. G. K. and Wembley comes out for Mumford. It was at first said that McLachlan, the Australian jockey, was coming out to ride Aborigine in the Viceroy's Cup, he having ridden the horse in most of his engagements in Australia; but this fell through and we understand that "Mr. G. K." then arranged for an English jockey.

WE regret to record the death at Meerut of the young professional jockey Spencer. While riding in one of the races at the Gymkhana meeting on Saturday his mount began to swerve near the three furlongs. Leaning over on one side to keep the pony straight, the jockey came into collision with the post, was knocked off the saddle and killed on the spot. When picked up he was found to have sustained terrible injuries. His chest was stoved in, one thigh was fractured and his head badly bruised. He was buried on Sunday, his funeral being very largely attended.

BRISBANE, the horse which the Australian Government has presented to the King to ride in the processions connected with the Delhi Durbar, arrived safe and well in England on the 10th October. He is a very fine grey, standing 16-1 and represents the pick of Australia's military mounts.

THE Polo Tournament at Jubbulpore for the Begum of Bhopal's Cup attracted seven entries this year and a start was made on the 19th ultimo when three matches were played. The first was between the Remnants (Mr. Duke, Mr. Tillard, Captain Odlum and Mr. Fitzgibbon) and the Royal Fusiliers (Mr. Laverton, Mr. Wilson, Colonel Lawford and Mr. Leslie). The latter team won by 7 goals to 2. The second match was much more exciting and was a good galloping game. The Cavalry School (Mr. Fleming, Mr. Lucas, Captain Baddeley and Mr. Wise) beat the 22nd Punjabis (Captain Sutherland, Mr. Wallace, Major Blois-Johnson and Captain Furney) by 4 goals to 1. The third game between Civilians (Mr. Mathias, Mr. Knowles, Mr. Forteath and Mr. Todd) and the 2nd Lancers (Mr. Davison, Captain Robertson, Captain Scott and Major Knowles) had been looked upon as a good thing for the Civilians, but they failed to play up to form and were beaten by a big margin. The semi-finals were played on Saturday the 21st and two excellent games were witnessed. That between the Royal Fusiliers and the Cavalry School was very level for four periods and then the Fusiliers began to tire and the Cavalry put on several goals, eventually winning by 8 goals to 3. The other match was between the 32nd Lancers (Mr. Sherwood Smith, Mr. Howard, Mr. W. Hope Johnston and Captain Pollok) and the 2nd Lancers and was a splendid game. The issue was in doubt right up to the last chukker, when the 2nd Lancers got away and scoring two goals in quick succession ran out winners by 7 goals to 5. A large crowd assembled to witness the final between the Cavalry School and the 2nd Lancers on the 23rd ultimo. The game was not as good as had been expected. The score was 3 all at the fifth chukker, but thereafter the Cavalry put on two more goals and won by 5 to 3. Mr. Fleming, Mr. Davison and Captain Scott were most prominent for their respective sides.

The Meerut Autumn Polo Tournament opened last evening with two games in the first round—the King's Dragoon Guards beat the 18th Lancers by 11 goals to 4 and 13th Hussars ("B" team) beat 3rd Skinner's Horse ("B" team) by 9 goals to nil.

In the second round the winners of these two games meet, and 17th Lancers ("B" team), play 3rd Skinner's Horse ("A" team), 17th Lancers ("A" team) play Gymkhana team, and 13th Hussars ("A" team) play the Royal Berkshires.

The following are the entries in the Delhi Durbar Polo Tournament thus far received:—10th Hussars, the Inniskilling Dragoons, the Palampur team, the Scouts (Captain Barrett's team), the Tigers (Count De Madre's team), 9th Hodson's Horse, the 17th Lancers, the King's Dragoon Guards, the Imperial Cadet Corps, the Maharaja of Kishengarh's team, the 13th Hussars, the 17th Cavalry, and the Golconda team.

There still appears a chance of a return match between Arnst and Barry for the world's sculling championship. Arnst has now cabled to Barry offering him expenses if he will row on the Paramatta next Easter for £500 aside.

It looks as if the recent mischievous agitation in respect of the Johnson-Wells fight will cause a decline in professional boxing in England. The proposed match between Gunner Moir and Bombardier Wells for the heavy-weight championship of England has had to be abandoned owing to the impossibility of securing a hall for the contest. English professionals will have in future to seek pastures new. America, Australia and South Africa offer fields for their prowess safe from the interference of middlesome nincompoops of the Meyer stamp. Mr. Hugh D. McIntosh, the well-known Australian promoter has guaranteed Bombardier Wells £1,000 with the privilege of a 25 percentage for three contests with Bill Lang, Jack Lester and Sam McVea. Now that his fight with the Gunner is off it is more than probable that Wells will accept and sign up for these Australian engagements.

Packey McFarland has accepted an offer from the Madison Square A. C. to box 10 rounds with Matt Wells, the English light-weight champion in the Garden this month, the weight to be 135lb. scaling at 3 o'clock. Promoters are of opinion that the match would draw a $40,000 gate as it would be the biggest attraction that could be arranged.

Nine regiments have entered for the Football Tournament open to the British Army in India, of which the final rounds are to be played at Delhi. No less than 76 Indian regiments have entered for the Hockey Tournament. This is believed to be a record for India and probably for any other country.

Captain Chamier, 33rd Punjabis, Daryaganj, Delhi, has been appointed Secretary, Hockey and Football Tournaments, Durbar, vice Captain Watson-Smith, 1st Brahmans, whose duties as Adjutant, Simla Volunter Rifles, do not permit of his continuing to act as Secretary. All correspondence should accordingly be addressed to Captain Chamier.

The following are the results of the first and second rounds of the Delhi Durbar Football Tournament in the 8th (Lucknow) Division:—

First round.—Divisional Team, R.G.A., Calcutta, beat the 3rd Middlesex Regiment, Lebong, by 3 goals to 2.

Second round.—Divisional Team, R.G.A., Calcuttta, beat the 1st Middlesex Regiment, Dinapur, by 4 goals to love; the Royal Scots, Allahabad, beat the 2nd Battalion, Gordon Highlanders, Cawnpore, by 1 goal to love; the 1st Highland Light Infantry, Lucknow, beat the 1st King's Own Regiment, Lucknow, by 1 goal to love; the 2nd East Yorkshire Regiment, Fyzabad, beat the 28th Battery, R.F.A., Fyzabad, by 7 goals to love.

The semi-finals were to have been played on Tuesday evening when the Royal Scots, were to meet the Divisional R.G.A. team from Calcutta: and the East Yorkshire Regiment were to meet the 1st Highland L. I. The winners of these two matches will contest the final some time before the 14th instant.

The results of the first round of the Delhi Durbar Hockey Tournament, so far as the Lucknow Division is concerned, are as follows:—

48th Pioneers, Allahabad, beat 62nd Punjabis, Benares, by 8 goals to love.

66th Punjabis, Barrackpore, beat 26th Punjabis, Alipur, by 2 goals to love.

The drawings for the semi-finals are:—38th Pioneers vs. 66th Punjabis; 41st Dogras vs. 36th Sikhs.

The semi-finals are to be concluded by the 4th November and the final by the 14th November.

Only four teams entered this year for the 6th Divisional Hockey Tournament at Poona open to Indian troops. The first game was played on the 27th ultimo when the 12th Pioneers met and defeated the 117th Mahrattas by 3 goals to nil. On Saturday the 105th Mahrattas disposed of the 127th Baluchis by 4 goals to 1. The final was played on Tuesday last between the 12th Pioneers and the 105th Mahrattas. It was a close and exciting game. The Pioneers drew first blood but the 105th soon equalised. The Pioneers again took the lead and held it till the closing stages of the game when the Mahrattas got on terms once more, and the match ended in a draw, 2 goals all.

The Junior Polo Tournament at Secunderabad was brought to a conclusion on Saturday last when the 33rd Cavalry beat the 29th Lancers in the final, by 3 goals to 2. In the earlier rounds the Royal Artillery (Messrs. Giffard, Chance, Lush-Wilson and Blount) met the 2nd K.L.I. (Collins, Captain Battye, Mr. Leach and Captain Hanbury) and were beaten by 2 goals to 1.

The 29th Lancers (Mr. Spurgin, Captains Meynell, Birch and Martin) beat the 7th Dragoon Guards, (Captains Watson and Mansel, Major Clay and Captain Lindsay) by the narrow margin of 5 goals to 4. The K. L. I. were beaten by the 33rd Cavalry (Lieutenant Kenworthy, Colonel Browne, Captain Ferris and Lieutenant Grantham) by 7 goals to 2. Then the 29th Lancers met the Sherwood Foresters (Lieutenants Brownrigg and Earle, Captains Becke and Millward) and defeated them by 3 goals to 2, after a hard fight.

The competition for the Amateur Golf Championship of India will be held over the Tollygunge links between the 24th and 27th December next, entries closing on the 14th December, with post entries from visitors up to 17th idem.

Three individual centuries were scored in a cricket match at Bangalore last week, when "A" Squadron beat "B" Squadron in the final of the 14th Hussars' Regimental Tournament. Private Billinghurst made 123 for "B" Squadron, Private Andrews 108 and Corporal Smith 148 for "A" Squadron.

The Clan Cameron, which arrived in Bombay from Birkenhead last week, brought out a draft of twenty-four couple of foxhounds from Wilton's Kennels at Hamwell. The hounds, which were under the charge of Will Morgan, arrived in good condition and looked little the worse for their long sea voyage and with the assistance of the Master (Mr. R. W. L. Dunlop), the Honorary Secretary (Mr. Alister Forbes), and one of the Whippers-in (Mr. H. D. Ash) and the ready help of the chief officer of the ship, hounds were led in couple, into two large bullock lorries kindly lent as in many years past by Mr. N. N. Wadia, and despatched to the kennels at Santa Cruz. In addition to the newly landed hounds, eight couple of last season's pack are returning to their old quarters, having been bought back from the Belgaum Hunt, and with this valuable addition the Master should have a pack at his disposal capable of showing the best sport available over the Salsette country.

The following extraordinary golf story is printed by the Field which vouches for its accuracy:—

A distinguished member of the King's staff was playing recently on the links at Balmoral. At a critical moment in his match he apparently failed to loft his ball so much as he may have intended in making an approach stroke.

His ball was seen to strike a cow, which slowly moved away without giving any other indication that she had undergone any unusual experience. When the player came to the spot vacated by the cow his ball was not to be found. Not unnaturally he turned towards the cow with an air which may be presumed to have mingled question with apology.

The cow deprecatingly shook her head, as if to declare with deep regret that she could offer no suggestion as to the player's difficulties or the errant missile. This movement, however, dislodged the ball from her right ear.

Next time we have a golf or fishing story to tell we had better attribute it to a "distinguished member of the King's staff," then all loyal subjects will be simply bound to believe us.

We regret to note that in spite of the protests of the Society for the Protection of Birds, and various laws, notably in India, against the exportation of plumes, the destruction of birds for millinery purposes continues to be almost as great as ever. Mrs. Fuller Maitland pointed out in the Times last August that during the strike, in the list of imported goods detained on board ship and in the docks and warehouses, were 618 tons of bird-skins and feathers. This was but a small fraction of the total annual import, and there is reason to fear that an enormous quantity of bird-skins and feathers still come from India, in spite of the prohibition of the law, and the seizure of disguised cargoes from time to time. What is needed, as the journal of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds points out, is not only a prohibition against export, but a prohibition against import. The cargoes should, in fact, be overhauled in England, and should be confiscated when they come from India and other countries which have laws against the slaughter of birds. Unfortunately the English Government has little or no time to deal with the matter, for the feather trade is so powerful that a measure against the importation into England of illicit skins and feathers could only be passed after much opposition.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 13th October 1911.

Having successfully weathered the heat wave we are now, under less brilliant skies and in cooler surroundings, facing the "Crime wave" which is sweeping over the country and filling our papers with revolting reading—those idiotic news sheets the runners of which conceive it their duty to help the criminal and hamper justice by the publication of several editions per diem which keep the criminal almost hourly posted as to the movements of those who are on his track!

Our criminologists aver that the present weather conditions are to an appreciable extent responsible for this recrudescence of crime. And I'm not disposed to question their deductions. We are now a neurotic and hysterical people and weather has admittedly a great influence on certain classes of crime, and the series of triple tragedies which have been reported from various parts of England during the last few days may, it is thought, be explained by the depression of the barometer after the heat of the record summer. In the dull, depressing days at the beginning of autumn such tragedies are noticeably more frequent than at other times.

The weather has both a beneficent and malign influence at different times on various types of mind. In the early spring, when the days are usually bright and inspiring, persons of neurotic and excitable temperaments and those subject to attacks of homicidal mania are not often driven to crime. In the dog days, however, this class of crime is aggravated by the weather conditions, and when, as during the past week, you get a period of atmospheric depression—dull, heavy days following bursts of sunshine or exceptional heat—the crime statistics invariably leap up.

This fact is known to all who have studied crime in India at first hand. There have been days in barracks—any commanding officer knows—when a whole British regiment has been half hysterical owing to the weather conditions, and occasionally at such times soldiers have been known to seize rifles and shoot down comrades without motive.

Some such wave seems to have passed over England lately, and although it is not unexpected by those who study the effect of weather on crime, it is fortunately rarely that there is such terrible proof of the correctness of the weather theory. The suicide figures for London last week were far above the average, too. This is partly accounted for by outbreaks of influenza, which leave the victims morbid and prone to sudden fits of depression whenever the days are heavy and gloomy.

I see the Indian Government contemplates the abolition of the directorship of Indian archaeology; naturally Lord Curzon—and with him Lord Minto—has lodged a vigorous protest against the movement. In my humble opinion the establishment of this department was among the happiest inspirations of Lord Curzon's viceroyalty. Before his time archaeology was left entirely to the local Governments, which sometimes displayed a lack of zeal and almost always a lack of knowledge. The overworked civil servant had little time to investigate the character of the monuments in his district, which were often left to the mercy of the ever-advancing jungle. In other cases, where the value of the fabric was appreciated, there was no attempt to place it in proper surroundings. Lord Curzon changed all that. While leaving the actual guardianship of monuments in the hands of the provincial authorities, he established a proper archaeological department which should offer them advice, and when necessary spur them on. The new department's success was complete. Not only did it accomplish excellent work, but its activities were eagerly supported by the best Indian opinion. And now, Lord Curzon tells us, this department is to be suppressed. It is hardly credible that the Government of India really cherishes this mischievous intention. In a country whose memorials of antiquity are so numerous and so diverse there is obvious need of a central department. We must await the official explanation, but meanwhile it must be understood that it is not for Lord Curzon to justify a continued expenditure, but for the authorities to justify a proposal strongly suggestive of vandalism.

A Dr. Evans, who has spent many years in India and has obviously kept his eye peeled, has been telling a Welsh missionary meeting at Bangor some most unpalatable truths about the incalculable mischief done by Indian missions, and his picture of the drunken, dissolute, lazy, incorrigible, filthy and altogether impossible creature the "native Christian" has made quite a stir; while his serious indictment against Indian missions, whose reports are "cooked," has considerably fluttered those circles intimately concerned with snatching the pennies of the Sunday school children for the salvation of the heathen in his blindness.

Dr. Evans, said that before he went out there he was warned against employing converted natives as servants. He thought those who gave that advice were prejudiced against mission work, so he tried a Christian native, but had to dismiss him. He tried a second and a third, but he had to get rid of them also. The Mahomedan servants he engaged, however, gave every satisfaction. There were, in fact, very few missionaries who employed Christian servants.

He also stated that missionaries had complained to him that they could never get the reports they sent to England published as they wrote them. They were invariably "cooked," in order that the public might be induced to give money in support of missions.

The whole system of missionaries in India requires revising. Christianity is introduced to the Indian in European garb, and the Bible is treated as a Western book. Many Indians have complained to me, said Dr. Evans, that Jesus Christ is pictured to them in a top hat and frock coat, instead of a turban and sandals.

It is a well-known fact in India that Christian servants are not to be trusted, though there are exceptions. They are not as truthful and honest as Mahomedans and Hindus, and if a native is seen drunk it is ten to one that he is a Christian. In fact, decent Mahomedans and Hindus are teetotallers from religious convictions.

Dr. Evans, the truthful and greatly daring, added that there are in India large numbers of what are styled out there "rice Christians"—men who become converted for the sake of obtaining food. Once a Hindu accepts food from a Christian he is ostracised, and is compelled to become a Christian.

While he is not opposed to the principle of missionaries, Dr. Evans thinks more freedom should be given to natives, and they should not be hedged in by sectarianism. The different sects, he says, seem to be in competition for the best show of converts. Well done Evans! But you've sown the wind and already in the columns of the daily press we are reaping the hurricane. But while most of the rejcinders team with ignorance, and narrow minded prejudice, we returned Anglo-Indians are getting in many hearty laughs.

That famous sporting and athletic baronet, Sir Charles B. Lawes-Wittewronge, died at his residence near Harpenden in Herts, last week, as the result of an operation for appendicitis. Born on 3rd October 1843, Sir Charles had just completed his sixty-eighth year. He was the son of Sir John Bennet Lawes, the well-known practical agricultural chemist, whom he succeeded in 1900, and in 1902 he assumed the additional surname of Wittewronge. He married in 1869 Marie, daughter of Mr. Charles J. Fountaine, and he leaves an only son, Mr. John Bennet Lawes-Wittewronge, who succeeds him in the title. Sir Charles, who was a well-known sculpter, with a studio in Chelsea Bridge Road, was president of the Incorporated Society of British Sculptors, and he was the defendant some years ago in the great society-sculpture action of Belt vs. Lawes.

It was as an athlete, however, that he was best known, and as Mr. C. B. Lawes he won almost everything worth winning in sport. He was an old Cambridge Blue, had held the mile amateur running championship, was amateur champion oarsman in 1865, and in 1899 held the quarter mile, one and six to twenty-five miles amateur cycling records. At Eton he won the 100 yards, the quarter, the mile, the steeplechase, the sculls and the pair oars; at Cambridge the half-mile, the mile, and the two miles, the Oxford-Cambridge one mile, the Cambridge Sculls, the Diamond Sculls, and the amateur championship of the Thames.

In 1898-99 he took up riding behind pace, and set up fresh records for the quarter mile, one, and six to twenty-five miles, as already stated when he was over fifty-five years of age!

Mr. Arnold Bennett is an extraordinarily versatile writer. He has written essays and "thrilling" stories. He has gained solid fame as the author of minutely careful and rather grim realistic fiction; and last week at the Royalty Theatre, Miss Tempest produced a comedy of his, delicately ironic, charmingly fantastic, entirely stimulating.

"The Honeymoon" is of the type of play that always succeeds in Paris and rarely succeeds in London. It has no "strong" situations. It suggests much more than it says. It depends on the humour of its dialogue, and the fun is intellectual and never mechanical. No heavy man ever misses a chair and sits abruptly on the floor. No indignant husband nails his riding breeches over the mantelpiece. If Mr. Bennett were a Frenchman "The Honeymoon" would give him an international reputation. But he is an Englishman—and one wonders.

Cedric Haslam, aviator, and Flora Lloyd, dainty woman of the world, are married, and are in the first hours of their honeymoon, when news comes to them that a German has started for England determined to win the £10,000 prize for the first flights over Snowdon. Patriotism and pride both impel Haslam to cut the honeymoon short, tune up his plane, and forestall the Teuton. But Flora stands in the way. Her honeymoon was to be a full month. If her husband cuts it short it will be evident that he puts his aeroplane before his wife.

Then while they are arguing Haslam's mother, father, and brother rush in and tell them that they are not married after all. The curate was a sham, the marriage is invalid.

Flora is delighted. The bishop of the diocese hurries to London to offer to make things right himself early the next day, but Flora refuses. She and Haslam have such different ideas of values. Then Haslam is told that the German has broken his leg, and he sees the way out. He tells Flora that he has become convinced that she is right and he is wrong. The honeymoon shall run its course. Will she marry him? And she who knows all about the German's leg, loves him for lying to win her, and falls into his arms, and all ends with a smile.

This is the briefest summary of the intrigue, but it conveys little or no idea of the joy of the play. The false curate who has borrowed his brother's clothes and played the parson just for a new experience and for sheer curiosity as to why his family is attracted to the Church, is a delight. He is responsible for his own discovery, he apologises handsomely, and after dinner at the Ritz he gives himself up at Vine Street eager for another new experience.

Haslam's mother, a truculent lady novelist with a meek husband, who acts as her stenographer and comforts himself with the collection of private opinions he keeps in his head, are also splendid, and Flora is a perfect dear. Miss Marie Tempest played the part last night with consummate art. Miss Tempest is a comedienne so complete in her equipment and understanding and so exquisite feminine in her expression that little is left to the critic except to applaud and to pray for the opportunity of seeing her again.

Mr. Graham Browne acted capitally as Haslam, Mr. Dennis Eadie gave a perfect little character sketch of the bogus curate, and Miss Kate Serjeantson and Mr. Dion Boucicault were excellent as the novelist and the suppressed husband.

HIMALAYAN SPORT.*

It might well have been thought that the subject of big-game shooting in the Himalayas has been pretty well written out. Nevertheless Mr. Stebbing who is already known to the Sporting Community as the author of a work on shooting in the plains, has contrived to make a very readable, and certainly a charmingly illustrated book without anything specially new to tell. From his official position as entomologist to the Forest Department, the author has had to visit many parts of the Himalaya, extending from Baluchistan in the west to Sikhim and Bhutan in the east; and he has therefore enjoyed a much wider acquaintance with the big game fauna than falls to the lot of the ordinary sportsman.

The e experiences are, however, in the main confined to the wooded districts, which leads to the conclusion that the sport has been enjoyed during official expeditions, which would, of course, not include the treeless districts of Ladak.

No kind of big game animal—even if it be small—appears to come amiss to Mr. Stebbing, who exhibits as keen an interest in stalking markhor and goral, as in the pursuit of the lordly hangul or the stately markhor. Even brown and black bear, whose pursuit soon becomes irksome to most sportsmen seem to afford him an endless source of delight.

Once the author had a chance at the splendid Sikhim stag, or shau, an animal of which complete specimens are still lacking in all British collections; but the fates were not favourable. In treating of the hangul, or Kashmiri barasingha, Mr Stebbing tells us that the period of gestation is different from that of the European red deer; a fact which appears to be unknown to most, if not all, naturalists in England. Very satisfactory is the statement that matters are now going well with this noble animal, which was at one time in imminent danger of extermination, and that its numbers are now on the increase, more especially in Chamba, where it is a comparatively recent introduction. Whether this increase in the range of the species is due to natural causes, or to human influence, we are not told; but it is a matter of very great interest, in regard to which some of our readers may be able to furnish authentic first hand information.

In Kashmir the great thing in favour of the hangul is that the wholesale slaughter by natives which used to be carried on every winter has been effectually stopped. Throughout a large portion of Kashmir territory the number of kinds of game permitted to be shot by sportsmen is strictly limited, but it appears that this is not the case in some of the outlying districts, and Mr. Stebbing has therefore done good service in appealing to sportsmen who shoot in such districts to be moderate, and to keep their bag within reasonable limits.

One warning to globe-trotters who visit the Himalaya is worth quoting, namely, that they should on no account bring European valets with them, as on such expeditions these gentlemen are not only quite useless, but are an unmitigated nuisance as well. They cannot, of course, dine and live with the native servants, and they have therefore either to be provided with separate tents and meals, or they have to sleep and dine with their masters.

Although Mr. Stebbing does not refer to it, the warning may also be extended to the case of ladies bringing their maids on Himalayan expeditions. An English lady of the right sort—and they mostly are of the right sort—will bear unavoidable hardships and discomforts without a murmur; but your ladies' maid will make no end of a fuss even at such trifling matter as being caught in a snow-shower while she is always in the way and never of any earthly use. We write this from what we have personally witnessed in by gone years.

Mr. Stebbing's book is distinctly one that should be read by all interested in the Himalaya, and their name is legion.

Shikar.

AFTER BEAR IN THE LIDAR VALLEY, KASHMIR.

Up here in the Lidar Valley I have been very busy after bear as an interlude from fishing the Jhelum to such time as the lordly bara-singh may issue from his velvet to be shot at, and with what success you, dear reader, will soon perceive. Every day the shikari, a red bearded old scoundrel in whom a life long habit of inventing fictitious khaber has resulted in the unvarying disclosure of herds of imaginary game, comes to my tent to report.

"Sahib, a bear has been eating the makki last night." My fourth day in the nullah found him rather more loquacious, or perhaps he felt the necessity for some additional incitement. "Sahib" he said "the gujarloy are very sad as the harpat (bears) have done much harm and they have given a goat to the ziarat (local monastery comprising three sticks sustaining a part worn blanket beneath which the resident fakir squats) to keep them off but they will surely come to night, etc., etc." So my bedding was carried into the makki field on four successive moonlight nights, but alas the goat had done its work too well.

While sitting disconsolately outside my tent on the morning of the fifth day an old peasant approached and squatting down strongly advised the gift of eleven annas to the abovementioned monastery to ensure the acquisition of a game—perceiving eye. He appeared much distressed on my refusal and after a long-winded speech told me he suffered much from palpitations of the heart.

He brightened up however on receiving three bread pills, swallowed with all hesitation, for this is the month of "Ramzan," and while wishing my long life and prosperity reported that a favourite cow had, during the night, fallen down a precipice in the jungle and that the harpat would certainly visit the carcase. So every morning and evening we sat over the carcase, or rather close by in a machan and watched it dwindle day by day together with our hopes of ever seeing a bear before my leave was up.

Notwithstanding that the nullah appeared rather exclusive as regards game, my red bearded old Ananias soon reported khaber of a cheetah, so four hours were spent one evening sitting over a little white goat in the acquisition of an aching cramp and a life-scar inflicted by the goat while returning behind me down the khud owing to his slipping, and inflicting on me a dire wound.

Then the shikari to keep things going as the time for bara-singh was not yet ripe, organised extensive drives when I would be left in a painful position on a rock high up on the hillside to await the arrival of the yelling line of coolies which occurred with monotonous regularity and without a bear. Once however an old black fellow did roll out of the jungle below me but retired again quickly on my missing him with both barrels, to return disconsolately to camp, bagless, where the shikari was already endeavouring to pacify the beaters with six pice a piece less than the stipulated wage and, notwithstanding the terrific outcry, to convince me they were receiving full measure.

Subsequent drives resulted in nothing more than a serious diminution in the exchequer and the presumable corresponding enrichment of that of my head cut-throat, so we returned to the carcase of the favourite cow, almost threadbare by this time and khaber was instantly forthcoming that "only last night a bear had eaten."

Full of wonder at the unceasing attraction the old favourite seemed to possess for the game of the jungle we proceeded next morning by the witching light of the "milky-way," much of which the chokra had previously spilt over the chair from which I take my chota hazri, to the scene of the now ancient tragedy.

Sharply awaked by the shikari from a kind of reverie into which I had fallen, my attention was drawn to a small black object below me.

Without one moment's hesitation I levelled and fired and was instantly rewarded by the sound of piercing yells, while a small black dog trailing behind him a bushy tail, which it subsequently transpired I had shot through the root, flew out of sight down the ravine.

Thus I again returned to camp without any commensurate result and next day refusing to be led astray, strolled off alone after tea into the jungle returning shortly after dark to be met half-way across the stream by the head "rat-catcher," while poised for a leap from one stone to another.

"Sahib" he said, "where have you been? We have been looking for you everywhere, an enormous bear has been eating the carcase." "Yes" continued the under-shikari, "I rushed to spot with your gun and saw him moving to and fro but could not find you."

"Good Lord" I said "not the favourite one"?

"Yes Saheb, that very"

"Why damme, I have been there myself for the last hour."

Then I fell into the water.

Now we are both content to wait quietly for the 15th September and looking out from my tent strewn with sweet smelling hay, across this, the most beautiful valley of the Himalayas, my time is fully occupied in watching the simple life around, where the daily expenditure is in kind and the peasants tie bits of string round their wrists to keep off the cramp caused by clutching the grass with one hand while they reap it with the other.

Quite close to my tent is the little water mill that grinds all the makki of the nullah into flour, hard by the local blacksmith sits in the open and repairs the sickles and hatchet-heads, while a small boy blows air into a tiny charcoal fire by means of two small sheepskin mussaks which he opens and closes after each blow, operating the ingenious contrivance rather like a concertina.

Thus I wait and hope that "God will give me my bara-singh in due season and now that the chokra has learnt not to lay the plates as if they were bombs, hold a shirt in one hand and pass the potatoes in the other, or fall over all the tent-ropes in a mad rush from the cook tent to appear in front of me with his lungee in the soup, I find the excitement of shooting gugis (a kind of pigeon) in my pyjamas before breakfast quite sufficient to last me through the day and so to leave the bears in peace to whatever form of nutriment as supplied by the nullah they most prefer.

STANA RUSSELL.

The late A. J. Cassatt, at a dinner at the Philadelphia Country Club, was once asked his opinion of the fashion of women riding horseback astride.

"I don't altogether favor this fashion," said Mr. Cassatt, smiling. "I think it leads to confusion.

"I was driving one afternoon on the Lancaster pike when a rider was thrown violently from a spirited bay horse. Luckily the accident happened in front of a pharmacy.

"The pharmacist ran forth with his clerk. He propped up the head of the unconscious rider, and seeing a gold cigarette case lying on the road, he took it up and read the address, 'P. S. Pitcoe, 1820 Walnut Street.'

"'Jack,' said the pharmacist to his errand boy, 'telephone to Mrs. Pitcoe, 1820 Walnut Street that her husband has—'

"But just then a tiny gold hand-mirror with a powder-puff attachment fell from the rider's trouser pocket and the pharmacist called:

"'I mean, Jack, telephone Mr. Pitcoe that Mrs. Pitcoe has fallen—'

"But at this point the clerk, who had been burning a feather under the rider's nose, tickled her lips with it, and she smiled and murmured:

"'Jim!'

"And then the pharmacist shouted:

"'Telephone Mr. and Mrs. Pitcoe that Miss Pitcoe has fallen off her horse.'"

BOTTOM FISHING IN CEYLON.

The tank and lakes of Ceylon are practically virgin waters, as far as the angler is concerned. They simply swarm with fish, and anyone who knows the rudiments of angling can be certain of good sport. One of the commonest of fish is the murral, and though tank murral do not get as large as river ones, they are yet big enough to give excellent sport on a small livebait. The average weight will be found to be about two pounds, with occasional specimens up to three pounds or more. Murral take a livebait freely, and a small carp will be found the most satisfactory bait, as it lives a long time on the hook, and is silvery and attractive in appearance. An egg shaped cork float, so big that the livebait cannot pull it under, is the best thing to use. There should be a bit of quill three or four feet above the big float to keep the line from sinking and getting entangled round the bait. It is also well to grease the line as a preventitive against sinking. A pair of Limerick eyed hooks whipped back to back make an efficient tackle. One of them should be put through a bit of skin near the back fin of the bait, so as to balance it horizontally. By having a pair of hooks, the little carp is equally weighted on both sides, and so tends to swim straight: the pair of Limericks also give a better chance of hooking the murral. A small pistol bullet ten inches, or thereabouts, above the hooks, is also necessary to keep the bait down. With tackle like this I have had excellent sport with murral: it is better, however, to have two or three rods out at a time, as then one gets proportionately more runs and if the murral are on the feed the fun is fast and furious.

The livebait should not be too far below the float, for murral have their eyes set on the upper surface of the head, so that they see objects above them best, and will take a livebait quite close to the surface. The best size of carp to use as bait is four to four and a half inches. I have caught heaps of murral with baits only three and a half inches long, but there is no doubt the better fish prefer a four to four and a half inch bait. In the Punjab rivers I found that murral would take half a chilwa threaded on an ordinary single hook and fished on the bottom. I caught too, a good number of murral in Ceylon on tiny fry only an inch to an inch and a half long. I used these little fry in lieu of worm, threading one of them on to a small hook, and fishing on the bottom: the float used was a small quill.

Ceylon waters hold quantities of fresh-water sharks. These can be caught in many different ways: a large livebait, on or near the bottom, a deadbait on the bottom, a bunch of worms, or even some chicken entrails strung on a biggish hook.

Some sort of gimp should be next the hook, as the cat-fishes have all got lots of sharp teeth, which will cut gut like scissors. Probably the nicest fishing of all is for carp, with a paste bait. In a former letter I have alluded to the difference between roach fishing, as practised in the Thames and Lea, and roach fishing in the North of England. The Lea rods are of white cane and fifteen to eighteen, and even twenty feet long. The tip of the rod is held just over the float, so that there is no slack line, and the angler is able to strike like lightning directly he sees a bite. In the North of England they use light ten and a half foot rods, and reach distant swims by casting out the tackle. The fine line is well greased so that it floats, and thus it is possible to strike with one's float fifteen or twenty yards away. Both systems of fishing have certain advantages and certain drawbacks, which it is not necessary to enter into here. A fifteen foot rod of white cane will be found very handy for bottom fishing in Ceylon. The length enables one to reach beyond beds of weeds fringing the shore, and also gives one considerable power over a big fish.

White cane roach rods are certainly somewhat fragile and delicate, but one I have has survived five years of Ceylon and India, and has caught fish up to six pounds in weight. The light ten and a half foot roach rods, which are in vogue in the North of England, do not give one much control over a lively fish, and as in Ceylon there is always a chance of getting hold of something rather big, it is better to have a longer rod, with which it is easier to keep a large fish out of the weed beds.

With roach tackle and paste bait, one may have the best of sport with Olive Carp in all the Ceylon lakes. It is an ubiquitous fish, and I found it plentiful in every tank and lake in Ceylon that I visited. Olive Carp run the same weight as roach, pounders being common, and fish of over a pound and a quarter rare: they take paste readily, bite well as a rule, fight not badly, and last of all are not at all bad eating. I have very pleasant recollections of hot afternoons spent under a shady tree on the bank of Kantalai Lake, and I beguiled many a fat carp from the prolific waters of that charming pool. I used to catch heaps of gudgeon also in Ceylon; they are just as plentiful everywhere as the Olive Carp.

No sportsman who visits the Ceylon lakes should go without a rod. Good sport can always be had even in the heat of the day, when shooting is not to be thought of. By groundbaiting one or two likely places, the angler will greatly increase his basket. Murral and gudgeon are both excellent eating, as also are even the hideous fresh-water sharks.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

Second Day, Thursday, 26th October 1911.

THE racing to-day was again most interesting and the proceedings were graced by a larger gathering of spectators than on the opening day. Punters had a very fair time, but they got a heavy knock in the Cairo Cup, when Poona Mail, who started at tens led all the way and won by three-quarters of a length. Lacrosse would not join her field in the Juvenile Plate and after a protracted delay they had to be sent away without her. The first race, the Pavilion Plate, was won by Hooded Monk, against whom an objection was lodged on the score that under polo rules he was not a qualified polo pony, having only one eye, but the Stewards overruled the objection. Northmore rode three winners. Results:—

Third Day, Saturday, 28th October 1911.

Another big attendance witnessed excellent racing this afternoon, and the Honorary Secretaries are to be congratulated on a most successful meeting—the result of their strenuous labours and the hearty response they met with from owners. The bookmakers had rather the best of the deal today and we were provided with some excitement in the Coronation Cup Steeplechase for ponies. Lacrosse and Hyman were the only starters, but neither completed the course and the race was declared null and void, the question of bets being referred to Calcutta. Results:—

CLUB PLATE.—Rs. 200 to the winner, Rs. 50 to the second, and Rs. 25 to the third. A high-weight handicap for English and Australasian ponies 14-2 and under. 6 furlongs.

Won by two lengths; half a length between second and third. Time—54⅕secs.

BAREILLY AUTUMN GYMKHANA.

A VERY successful two days' gymkhana race meeting has just been concluded at Bareilly. In spite of the course being somewhat heavy some good racing was witnessed and though the handicapper found some difficulty in bringing them together on the second day we were treated to interesting sport. Fields were very fair but the attendance was on the small side on both days. Major Gaussen and Major Glasgow were the most successful owners with three wins each, Captain Stewart and Captain Godman coming next with two each. It is proposed to hold another gymkhana meeting in January to be followed by the big spring meeting the month after.

Always Reliable

Cartridge reliability when big game's on hand is a matter of supreme concern.

The reliability of 'ELEY' Cartridges is recognised as widely in the old world as in the new. For accuracy no finer cartridges are made.

The following Cartridges are specially recommended:

·400/·300 NITRO EXPRESS

Smokeless, 300 gr. Bullet.

MODDITE—Compared with Cordite, of which it is an improved form, Moddite is practically unaffected by tropical temperatures. It is now used by us in place of Mark I or M.D. Cordite for loading 303 and all Cartridges adapted to Military Rifles, and to Express Rifles of ·475 bore and under.

'Eley' Cartridges are obtainable throughout the world.

THE ANTI-RACING LAWS OF AMERICA.

PERSONS able to give an expert opinion, says the New York Herald, declare that the anti-racing laws enacted in New York in 1908, and supplemented by the directors' liability law of last year, have cost the wage earners of America not less than $25,000,000. This is based upon the enormous reduction in breeding of thoroughbreds and value of stud farms, the loss of wages to farmers' employees, to stable hands, race track employees, railroads and railroad employees, and others who depended upon the frictionless workings of a great institution.

Mr. August Belmont stated a few days ago that less than half the usual number of thoroughbreds are now being bred. Because there is no American market, to all intents and purposes, those still bred are almost a drag on the market. This naturally drives them to other countries. Even if racing were to be reinstated at once it would be years before the numbers and class of horses would be as good as prior to 1908.

With the reduction in stables, thousands of men lost employment. Some were taken across the water when the stables were sent over, but the great majority became waifs, for they knew no other means of earning a living.

Even under the Agnew-Hart laws the various racing associations tried to maintain interest in the sport. Stakes and purses were reduced, in many instances to one-fifth the former values. Under these handicaps the turf struggled on, but when the directors' liability law went into effect on 1st September 1910, all the New York tracks closed, and they have not reopened. Their owners declare that they will not again be opened until the obnoxious law is repealed.

Some of the prominent owners have hung on in hopes that there would be relief at Albany. Forced to race in Canada, where they could only campaign their horses on half time, a few of the well known turfmen have done what they could to keep alive interest, but more than twenty of the most noted horsemen of America are now abroad, with stud farms and stables located in France or England.

In 1907 so fashionable and popular had horse racing become in New York State that in printing the names of those present on a big day it was like publishing those seen on a great opera night. It was at the high-water mark. Rich men, fired with ambition to own the best racers in the United States, almost fell over each other to obtain the best horses in training. At sales of well bred yearlings there would be hundreds of the best-known men and women eager to witness the competitions for the youngsters. Bids of thousands at a time came as fast as the auctioneers could pronounce them.

At the close of that year the report of the State Racing Commissioners showed that the five per cent. on the gross receipts at race-courses amounted to more than $250,000, indicating that more than five million dollars gross receipts had been taken in by the nine racing associations which had been doing business.

Messrs. Keene, Whitney, Belmont, Duryea, Madden, R. T. Wilson, S. C. Hildreth, Vanderbilt and Gould, the Raineys and others each maintained from thirty to sixty horses in training each year. The expense of training each horse is not less than a thousand dollars. This meant that stable hands earned from thirty to sixty dollars a month, and many supported families, either wives and children or aged or poor relatives. Other necessary expenditures were for saddlery, medicines, the farriers, and the veterinarian. The feed, the best to be gotten, cost large sums. Transportation to various points was a large part of the expense. Then when it came to pay the forfeits and the trainers' and jockey's salaries it was necessary, if the stable was to be kept going, to win at least $50,000 a year. Few stables did this. Mr. Keene's was phenomenally successful, and for the last ten years it always made a handsome return. This, of course, meant also a dividend on the original investment for stallions, imported broodmares, the land, the feed, and the necessary help.

Mr. Keene had it figured down to a fine point, and said that it cost him $800 to develop each yearling. As he usually bred about eighty, it will be seen that if he ceased to breed horses he alone would cease to contribute $64,000 a year to the wage earners of the country.

Multiply this by at least one hundred, which is a conservative estimate of the number of breeders who have been driven out of business, and the enormous total of $6,400,000 is taken away from the industries of the land. All this is now diverted to France, England, Holland, Belgium, and Germany.

In a day's racing at one of the great courses near Paris in June or the height of the season one could easily fancy himself at Belmont Park or Sheepshead Bay, and hundreds of well-known Americans are there enjoying their favourite sport. The indulgence in it is made a source of revenue to the country, and charities and other institutions reap the benefit. In addition the blood stock of the country is being steadily improved.

THE TURF.

KEMPTON PARK.

LAST Friday was beautifully mild, and after such a scorching summer it was wonderful to see how the big forest trees in the park had conserved their green foliage thus far into autumn. The course was on the yielding side, contrasted with the hard galloping elsewhere previously, and this may account for the upset of public form. The extraordinary fact remains that, though every winner had come fresh from previous successes, the "talent" were floored, as not one favourite won. Results:—

NEWMARKET.

That important item, the weather, such an important factor at meetings on the Heath, looked to be satisfactorily arranged by a brilliant moonlight night, and received emphatic endorsement on Tuesday morning by bright sunshine on top of a white frost. Perhaps the importance of the occasion, combined with Royal patronage, accounted for the immigration, but Newmarket contained a larger number of strangers within its "gates" than has been the case for years, and the highest, bore the lively aspect of olden times before the handy system of weekly tickets came into vogue and the station was shifted from the business end of the town. By twelve o'clock traffic was in full swing as the specials rolled in, and a large and representative company gave a liberal index to what might be expected in the way of a muster on Cesarewitch day. Tattersall's Ring was, of course, crowded, and in expectation of the King's visit society mustered in force in the birdcage and club enclosure, the company including many prominent patrons of the Turf. The going was hard enough, though it had certainly improved under the recent rains, and fields afforded plenty of scope for speculation, though the two principal items fell through. Results:—

How greatly the patronage of the King benefits Newmarket, and how highly appreciated his presence is, was shown yesterday by the number of visitors who had remained in the town after Wednesday's vast crowd had dispersed home, and the highest again presented a busy appearance long before the time came for a move to the course; and for an off-day the attendance was an exceptionally good one in Tattersall's and the further enclosures. It was a glorious day, bright and exhilarating, and with a temperature almost as mild as spring. Despite the hard going fields again panned out well on the average, and sport was brisk. Results:—

The weather for Cesarewitch day was, up to a certain point, magnificent, and the assembly on the famous Heath was naturally an extremely large one. After all it was decided not to run Occlare in the big event, his withdrawal, as at Newbury, being necessitated by the hard ground. The Manton stable was thus left with two representatives—Mirador and Paparero.

The preliminary wagering in connection with the Cesarewitch was notable for the rapid shortening in Willonyx's price, the top-weight ultimately starting joint favourite with Mirador at 9 to 2.

Ignition went away with a long lead, but dropped back after a mile had been covered. After leaving the Bushes Willonyx obtained command, his immediate attendants being Paparero, Martingale II., and Mirador. Climbing the final ascent Martingale passed Paparero, and made a strong challenge near the finish. Willonyx, however, ran gamely, and won by three-quarters of a length from Martingale II., with Paparero third and Mirador fourth. Wolftot broke down. Many fine performances have been achieved in the long series of races for the Cesarewitch, but the victory of Willonyx to-day claims precedent over all his weight—9st. 5lb.—being a record for the event. The nearest approach to it was in 1880, when the late Prince Soltykoff's Shoen won with 9st 2lb. Results:—

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR beating Bury and Woolwich Arsenal making a draw with Bolton Wanderers at Burnden Park, London's First League clubs had good reason to be satisfied with their performances on Saturday afternoon. A fortnight ago no one would have doubted the ability of the Tottenham team to overcome Bury, but faith in the skill of the North London team had been considerably shaken by defeats from Blackburn and Sheffield Wednesday, and thus the success against the Lancashire club proved very welcome to Tottenham's numerous supporters. As it was, followers of Hotspur had some anxious minutes, Bury scoring directly after the start and retaining the lead up to the interval. The substitution of Ellis Crompton and Middlemiss for Young and Forman did not appear to have effected the necessary improvement in the attacking power of the team. However, on crossing over the Tottenham forwards found their game, and on two occasions a judicious pass by McTavish resulted in a goal by Minter. Hotspur did not add to their score subsequently, but they finished much the stronger team and deservedly victorious. Bury, it may be noted, are still without a win to their credit—an unenviable distinction shared with them by Manchester City.

Considering the relative performances of Bury and Bolton Wanderers, the achievement of Woolwich Arsenal in halving the points with Bolton at Burnden Park must be regarded as rather better than that of Hotspur in beating Bury. The Plumstead men, moreover, speedily found themselves engaged in an uphill task, seeing that within a quarter of an hour of the kick-off the Wanderers led by 2 goals to 0. Despite these early reverses, the Arsenal played with plenty of spirit and from good centres by Randall, the new recruit, and Lewis Chalmers was enabled to make the game 2 goals all. The Londoners met with a great disappointment immediately the second half commenced, a farther goal registered by Chalmers being disallowed on the ground that Lewis, before he centred, had let the ball cross the touch line. The Plumstead lines subsequently were subjected to a good deal of pressure, but Bartlett kept a fine goal and, try as they might, Bolton failed to regain the lead. Only one win stands to the credit of the Arsenal at the end of six engagements. Still, on three other occasions the Plumstead men have averted defeat, so if they are not equalling the form in which they finished last season, their position, as yet, affords no cause for great anxiety. It must not be forgotten, too, that the side have been handicapped of late through the disablement of Ducat.

West Bromwich Albion and Bradford City, as well as Bolton Wanderers, drawing their matches the positions of the leading clubs underwent no material change. The Albion no doubt cherished hopes of beating Newcastle United, but the game ended without any score, and Bradford City, so far from winning at Preston, experienced some difficulty in halving the points. The great upset yesterday, however, was the defeat of Aston Villa on their own ground by Sunderland. While the Villa had been making up a lot of ground of late, Sunderland's four immediately preceding engagements had resulted in two draws and two defeats, so at home the Villa appeared certain of victory. Despite the fact, however, of being a goal behind at the interval, Sunderland pulled through by 3 to 1. Among the clubs doing well this season are Notts County, who yesterday registered their fourth victory. They are now level on points with West Bromwich and Bradford City, and with better shooting in their game with Bradford last Thursday would have been able to claim the lead. Blackburn Rovers can congratulate themselves upon having overcome their old inability to play their game away from home, for yesterday they followed up their victory at Tottenham with a win at Liverpool.

Chelsea had an excellent opportunity of gaining two valuable points away from home on Saturday, but Grimsby Town may deprive the team of promotion. Holding only 8 points as the outcome of seven engagements, Chelsea have indeed started the long struggle indifferently. Fulham also succumbed, and at home, Hull City just winning; and Clapton Orient, as was the case last year at this time, are again the London club to attract most attention by good performances, while they once more enjoy the distinction of being the only unbeaten side in the League. They won at Gainsborough, and hold the best record in the competition—a point behind Barnley, with a game in hand. Burnley accomplished a capital performance in beating Nottingham Forest, and it is noteworthy that Bristol City sustained another reverse, so that there seems little chance of either of those teams getting back to the first division.

Heavy scoring again gave the chief feature to the Southern League matches, the full programme yielding 35 goals. Visiting teams obtained only 5, Watford standing out alone with a victory at Bristol over the Rovers. New Brompton drew at Upton Park, but in the other eight matches home sides won, Stoke, with Crystal Palace as opponents, alone being hard pressed. Millwall and the Brighton Albion each won by 5 goals to nil, Queen's Park Rangers had only one less against Brentford, while Swindon put on 3—0 against Reading and Northampton won just as easily. These clubs—always prominent in recent years—now have the struggle practically to themselves, though, of course, any team succeeding as Millwall have done on the last three Saturdays, may come to the front. The Rangers and Swindon hold a useful lead from all rivals, and on the season's form are in a class by themselves.

RUGBY RULES.

ENGLAND'S INTERNATIONAL programme for 1911-12 is identical with that arranged for 1909-10, and, it is to be hoped, it will yield equally gratifying results to those achieved two seasons ago, when, for the first time for eighteen years, England carried off the championship. There are trial matches in the South and in the North in December and on the first Saturday in the New Year—a fortnight before Wales have to be encountered at Twickenham—comes the contest between England and The Rest which, to the embarrassment of the Selection Committee, resulted both last January and a twelve-month earlier in the defeat of the side which, as the result of the two previous trials, had been built up to represent England. Three weeks after the struggle with Wales the Irishmen whom, curiously enough, England have not beaten for three seasons, appear at Twickenham. The middle of March sees the thirty-ninth match with Scotland, with Inverleith the scene of the struggle, and on Easter Monday the Englishmen play France in Paris. Wales oppose Scotland at Swansea, where the Scotsmen have not gained a victory for twenty years, and meet the Frenchmen at Newport, but, in addition to opposing England at Twickenham, they try conclusions with Ireland at Belfast—the scene of defeats for the Principality both in 1904 and 1906. Scotland go to Dublin to play Ireland and receive a visit from the Frenchmen who open the International tournament with a match against Ireland in Paris on New Year's Day. Inasmuch as France last season just managed to beat Scotland, our friends across the water must not now be entirely ignored as competitors for the International championship, but the issue of that contest notwithstanding, the day is not yet when the Frenchmen will have to be regarded as serious aspirants for first honours, and, in the absence of some marked development in the matter of combination on the other side of the Channel, there shou'd be no apprehension on this point so long as the British Unions place representative fifteens in the field. Against this expression of opinion it is, of course, possible to bring forward the fact that France did beat Scotland by 16 points to 15. At the same time, it must not be forgotten that the Scottish authorities last season were in sore trouble as to whom to select, trying in the course of the four Internationals four full-backs, twe've three-quarters, five halves, and sixteen forwards! The Scotsmen, moreover, had to admit a severe thrashing from Wales, but they made a better fight with Ireland and, before the season closed, built up a team capable of running England to five points. No reason exists for anticipating that Scottish football, with its splendid traditions, will again cut such a sorry figure, and the Frenchmen had better be prepared for an awkward experience when they visit Inverleith in January. For the moment, however, the best chance of the championship being wrested from Wales appears to lie not with Scotland or Ireland but with England, who, last winter, made a capital fight with the Principality at Swansea, lost narrowly and most surprisingly to Ireland, and won a thoroughly interesting and well-contested game with Scotland.

The struggle for the county championship commences at the end of the present week, when Northumberland, the runners-up to Yorkshire in the Northern division last season, engage with Cumberland and Hampshire meet Somerset at Portsmouth. To the fortunes of Hampshire particular interest attaches from the spirited endeavour being made to revive the Rugby game in that country and from the handicap under which the Hampshire Union must labour in having to send teams as far afield as Cheltenham and Camborne—no small difficulty to a newly-formed organisation. Happily for their home matches—whatever may happen to them in out engagements—Hampshire will be able to draw largely upon the Services. Next Saturday G. H. O'D. Lyon, the international, turns out at full back and the Services also furnish the whole of the three-quarter line and half the pack. For half-backs the Selection Committee have gone to the Leicestershire Regiment who, now stationed at Aldershot, are the holders of the Army Cup. Privates Fisher and Smitton, the halves in question, figured in the Final Tie for the Army Cup at Twickenham last March, when the Leicestershire Regiment defeated the Second Life Guards by 15 points to 0.

LONDON SCOTTISH vs. ROSSLYN PARK.—In this match on the Athletic Ground at Richmond Rosslyn Park were probably unlucky in being beaten. For two-thirds of the game they always appeared the more likely side to win, but they allowed their chances to go unaccepted, and their otherwise good work was wasted owing to the uncertainty of their backs with their passing. The forwards on each side worked hard, and the whole were well matched, while the tackling all round was very sound and sure, but neither backs were ever well together. Still, it was a keen game, and not by any means lacking in interest. On the run of the play in the opening half the Park men had the best of the struggle, and once they had a certain try, when Souter on the wing missed the final pass. Nothing was scored in the opening half, but halfway through the second, when the Scotsmen were being hard pressed, Paterson, their full back, cleared very cleverly, and then, after a dashing run by Gi'dray, Simson got away and scored wide out, a fine kick by Purves giving the Scotsmen a goal. Rosslyn Park tried hard in the time that remained to pull the game round, but they could not get through the London Scottish defence. London Scottish, 5 points; Rosslyn Park, 0.

LONDON WELSH vs. PONTYPOOL.—It was unfortunate that wet weather should have prevailed at Wandsworth, especially as the visitors brought a very strong side, including three internationals, and a large company of their own followers with them. The London Welsh, however, created an agreeable surprise as, although encountering the strongest team that has appeared against them so far this season, they played far superior football themselves than on any previous occasion. For the first twenty minutes at least their attack was almost irresistible, and during that time they put on a couple of goals, and afterwards maintained this useful lead of 10 points till the interval. A run by Leigh and Williams once took the play into the visitors' quarters, and the forwards completed the attack. Clay was able to score the first try for J. S. Evans to add the extra points. A similar attack was responsible for the second try, Edwards this time completing the score, and Evans once more placed the goal. As soon as the game had restarted Pontypool set about reversing the run of the play and, aided by some superior forward footwork, Prosser was more often able to set his three-quarter line in motion. After a grand run J. P. Jones sent J. H. Evans in with a try, and Talbot could not improve; but on a repetition of the movement in which Jones himself ran over Prosser placed a goal and brought matters to a more even standpoint. The winning score was a splendid drop-kick by Prosser ten minutes from the close, and, nothing else being scored, Pontypool won by 2 goals (one drop) and a try to 2 goals. Pontypool, 12 points; London Welsh, 10 points.

HARLEQUINS vs. BRISTOL.—The Harlequins gained a very easy victory at Twickenham by three goals and four tries to a penalty goal. They had G. D. Roberts among the forwards, and this fine player improved the general work of the pack. Bristol did not bring down anything like such a good side as represented them last season, and their backs were completely outplayed. As long as the play was forward Bristol held their own, but could not utilise any slight advantage they obtained and in the open Harlequins had matters all their own way. For twenty minutes Bristol had most of the play, and often gave promise of scoring, but then the home team's enterprise reaped reward. In rapid succession tries were scored by Brougham, Lambert, and Maxwell; while the first-named got in again. Lambert kicked one goal, and twice had bad luck in hitting the post. Crossing over, the Harlequins' backs still dominated the game, and passing by Stoop, Birkett, and Lambert ended in the last-named getting in behind the post. The same player kicked a goal. In a collision with Birkett, Bradshaw was injured and had to be carried off the field. Birkett then scored easily, Lambert converting, and a characteristic Harlequin movement ended in Maxwell scoring again. Johnson, the International full-back, played a capital game for Bristol, and the last kick of the match was a penalty by him which yielded the visitors their goal. Harlequins, 27 points; Bristol, 3 points.

OLD MERCHANT TAYLORS vs. BLACKHEATH.—There was a good attendance at the Old Deer Park to see the first meeting of these clubs, but the game was played in a drizzling rain and the standard of play was not high. There was a very promising start when, after about three minutes' play, the Taylors got up a strong attack by their backs, and the ball going out to Will on the left wing, he ran over in a good position and scored a try, which Ryan improved. But from this time the ball was kept almost exclusively among the forwards, and when it got out to the backs they could not do much with it and generally kicked from touch. However, they had several chances, and just before the close Stokes missed an absolutely certain try by not passing to his wing-man, who was quite unmarked. The Taylors' forwards were much the better pack. O. M. T., 5 points; Blackheath, 0.

SCULLING

W. ALBANY vs. J. ARNST.—W. Albany, the River Lea sculler, and J. Arnst, New Zealand, sculled a match last Saturday, afternoon over the Thames Championship course from Putney to Mortlake, for stakes of £50 a-side and a silver trophy presented by the proprietor of the Sporting Life. Arnst came to England last August to train W. H. Fogwell for his match against Barry, and yesterday's race was the outcome of an offer by Mr. George Seifert, New Zealand, to match Arnst against any English sculler except Barry.

Arnst is the elder brother of Richard Arnst, the holder of the World's Championship, and although he has trained several scullers, he has had little racing experience. Albany was taking part in his third big match. In May last he met Barry for the Championship of England, but was beaten easily.

The weather yesterday was fine, but a north-east wind made the water very lumpy in Crabtree Reach. Albany won the toss and took the Middlesex station. The men got away from the stake-boats by mutual consent, and Albany gained so fast that he was well clear in a dozen strokes. Both men pulled 28 strokes in the opening minute. The Englishman gained steadily and led by three lengths at the mile in 5 minutes 4 seconds. Arnst was very uncomfortable in the rough water off the Crabtree, and Albany, who displayed better watermanship, had increased his lead to five lengths at Hammersmith-bridge, passed in 9 minutes 23 seconds. After the bend there was a following wind, but the race developed into a procession.

Albany passed Chiswick Steps in 14 minutes 18 seconds, and Barnes-bridge in 19 minutes 15 seconds, with a long lead. He dropped to a slow paddle before the finish, and won by four lengths in the good time of 22 minutes 50 seconds. The winner has improved since his match against Barry, his leg work being much better. Arnst was slow, and failed to keep his boat on an even keel in the rough water.

OOTACAMUND HUNT.

25th October 1911.

THE Ooty season of 1911 is over, the curtain having been rung down yesterday when H. E. Sir Arthur Lawley said good-bye at the expiration of his term of office. Everyone was at Charing Cross (not the London trysting place of course) at 1-30 P.M. to give Their Excellencies and the Misses Lawley a regretful but hearty Godspeed.

But it is Sport that must be written of for the Indian Field, and alas there is too little to chronicle.

The hunting during the past two months since I recorded the point-to-point races has been kept up with enthusiasm, but with gradually diminishing fields. The going has been good owing to a continuance of showery weather during September. Last week's meet on Friday at Sultan Shola witnessed the final hunt of the season and wound up a most successful record of sport enjoyed under the able mastership of Major Duff, to whom all here are extremely sorry to say good-bye.

Trout fishing is now an established sport of these hills and some excellent fish weighing up to 5lbs. have been caught lately. This sport bids fair to become better each year and will, it is expected, attract a larger number of visitors to Ooty.

Golf has been more popular than ever, and the links pavilion is about the only rendezvous of an afternoon, where one can be fairly sure of meeting one's friends. Captain Campbell Rose has done a lot for the improvement of the links and also engineered a successful tournament which came off last month.

Cricket has languished, though one seldom gets any at this time of the year, but the dry spell in August led one to hope of a few matches, and it was disappointing the energy required to bring together two elevens was not forthcoming.

Only a few visitors from the other Presidencies have patronized Ooty this year, which is a matter of regret, but perhaps under the reign of the new Governor, Sir Thomas Carmichael, this lovely station will become more popular next season. For the next four or five months at any rate it will be "benighted," so no more news until March next, Mr. Editor.

SCRAICH REGATTA.

A SCRATCH regatta organised by Mr. Wilson the Honorary Secretary was held at Roeherville on the 25th and 26th ultimo and was most successful in every detail. Entries were good, the racing close, and the arrangements tiptop. The Dorset Regiment were "At Home" with their band on the second day and after the regatta a dinner and dance was held and a most enjoyable evening spent. The results of the racing are appended. Colonel Baddeley was judge, Mr. Fanshawe was starter, and Mrs. R. D. Prior gave away the prizes.

What to do if Your Horse Pulls

THE KEY TO HIS MOUTH IS A RENSUM REIN.

Sir Gilbert East, Bart., wrote:—

"You have found the key to my excitable mare's mouth. I have now the pleasure of riding an animal chock full of life, with complete control."

You have three courses open if you own a puller. You may go on using him, to your great discomfort; you may sell him, to your loss; or you may cure him, if you know how. I am a veteran horseman with a reputation to lose, and I stake it upon the assertion that in my "Rensum" Pamphlet I will show you how, for £1 1s. (the cost of a "Rensum" Rein), you may, without severity, cure the worst puller. The Pamphlet will prove to you that by a new method you may turn a confirmed puller into a snaffle bridle hunter, or polo pony. The "Rensum" Pamphlet will also show you how you may cure a rearer, kicker, or other vicious horse.

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE cricket season in Calcutta can now be said to have really commenced, for Ballygunge, Calcutta and the Customs, three of the strongest local teams, started operations during the week. The old Suburban Club's opening match was an inter-club affair on Sunday, and it is pleasing to note that most of last year's players are available. Captain R. N. Bocquet, Lieutenant C. D. Rawson and Messrs. F. T. Paine and E. Horncastle are the conspicuous absentees. Paine was, with the exception of G. F. Alexander, the oldest cricketer in Calcutta, and next comes M. H. Quin and J. H. Hechle; the last named owing to having put his shoulder out has not handled a bat for four years, but is going to play occasionally this season for both Ballygunge and Calcutta and was assisting the "over thirty" at the gardens last Tuesday. Both the clubs at Ballygunge and the Eden Gardens will have to depend on their old hands to do battle for them in representative matches, and V. Given-Wilson, T. Curtis Hayward and G. Turnbull were the chief contributors for the "Buddhas" in the first C.C.C. match; while so far at Ballygunge B. A. White and D. S. Shallow have been top scorers and White has also done good work with the ball.

The Customs have a very fair cricketer in W. J. Ward, and Nind, their late Superintendent, may also play in a few matches. Nind played at the Gardens in the first C.C.C. match but he will be going to Rangoon in January. The Customs opened on Tuesday with an inter-club match, Mr. J. A. Stevens' XI vs. Mr. W. J. Ward's XI which resulted in a win for the latter's side by 64 runs, Ward himself contributing a not out 62.

The match at the Gardens ended in a win for the seniors the respective totals being: Under Thirty, 132, over 0 346. The "Juniors" gave a miserable display with both bat and ball and their fielding too left much to be desired. A. W. Shallow subscribed 71 in free and attractive style, his strokes on both sides of the wicket being neatly executed. N. A. Moore, a new cricketer to Calcutta shaped well for 26. But with the exception of these two no other double figures were recorded. Hechle and Pope came out with good analysis, the former securing three wickets for 32 runs, while Pope got six for 40. The match was twelve aside and for the Seniors there were no less than eight double figures recorded. Given-Wilson 70, T. Curtis Hayward 71 and C. Turnbull 50 were the chief contributors and the trio were not beaten. Hechle also retired after scoring 10. J. D. Guise and M. H. Quin were the notable absentees.

In the inter-club match at Ballygunge on Sunday the title under which the match was played was a bit puzzling viz., under 40 versus over 20. In this match "over 20" won, their opponents being all out for a miserable total of 109, while they knocked up 273. On the winning side B. A. White 65, (retired) D. S. Shallow 80 (retired) and J. G. Frost 35 were the chief contributors. On the losing side V. Cooper hit pluckily for 40. White took seven wickets for 35 runs.

The Rangers as stated in my last notes have a very poor team this season and have already suffered two defeats. On Saturday they lost to the Y. M. C. A. by two wickets; but although the Christians won, their display was also very tame. Atkinson was top-scorer of the match with 40 to his credit, but his strokes were very feeble and he should have been out before he had scored 10. A. Hodges and C. Cody for the Rangers and A. M. Price for the Y. M. C. A. were the principal absentees. The Rangers totalled 106 and the Y. M. C. A. 107 for eight.

At St. Xaviers College last Sunday the Park Street Club beat the Rangers by seven wickets. The Rangers scored 127 and 126, while St. Xavier's got 217 and 37 for three wickets.

Dalhousie lost to the Rifle Brigade by 49 runs in a half day match last Saturday, but the Fort regiment put up a larger score than they deserved, for with the exception of Lieutenant Blackbeides -one of the others who got double figures were certainly lucky in doing so. The Rifle Brigade registered 115 while Dalhousie were all out for 66. The wicket helped the bowlers and the mistake that the home skipper made, was that he did not give Lord a few more overs. Lord bowled a perfect length, and was unfortunate in having two catches dropped off his bowling.

Of the Indian teams the Aryans and the Sporting Union are the strongest combinations. The former beat the latter but on Tuesday the Sporting Union had slightly the best of the draw with Ballygunge, the Sporting Union scoring 155 while the Suburban Club registered 118 for eight wickets.

PUNJAB COMMISSION TOURNAMENT.

17TH LANCERS vs. KING'S DRAGOON GUARDS.—The final in the Punjab Commission Tournament was played in the Laurence Gardens, Lahore, on the 27th and 28th ultimo and ended in an easy win for the Lancers. Batting first they made 251, Boles, Bruce and Mitchell batting well. The King's Dragoons Guards did poorly and lost 7 wickets for 85 when stumps were drawn. They could only add 11 runs to their over-night total on Saturday. The Lancers then went in again and compiled 251 for 7 wickets when they declared their innings closed. Boles and Bruce made a great stand, the former being not out 131 and Bruce making 74. Boles batted freely and his hits included 17 fours. The Dragoon Guards showed up a little better in the second innings and thanks to a good innings of 81 by Hawkins and a useful 39 by Pope took their total to 181 before they were all disposed of. The Lancers thus won by 225 runs.

At the conclusion of the game Lady Reid presented the cup to the winners in the Montgomery Hall. Before the presentation the Hon. Mr. Justice Robertson, C.S., made a brief speech reviewing the history of the Punjab Commission Tournament since its inception in 1910. He said that the cup in the early days of the tournament had been usually won by the "unconquerable British Infantry" and subsequently by the 24th the Sikh Brigade, and the S. and T. Corps. This was the first occasion on which British Cavalry had won it, and it was the more remarkable in that the runners-up were also a British Cavalry regiment. In conclusion Mr. Justice Robertson said the cup was presented to the army in the Punjab as a mark of friendliness from his own great service to their great service. He then asked Lady Reid to present the cup, which was received by Captain Bruce of the 17th Lancers. Cheers for Lady Reid,

The Naturalist.

FAMILY FLITTINGS.

THE bird life of India is always interesting, but in this far north-western corner of the Empire it has an added charm. For here lies the great highway to Central Asia—not only for the hundreds of camels that swarm through the various passes, bearing fruit and spices from the half-closed lands of the East and returning laden with corrugated iron or calico or such-like unpoetic things—or crowds of pilgrims on their way to Mecca the Blest—but also for the almost unending streams of birds that twice in the year cross our frontier to and from their breeding grounds.

The problem of migration is entrancing and little understood but it must not be touched upon now, nor must one deal with the crowd of Waders, Sandpipers, and other water birds that make our jhils a veritable paradise in winter to the ornithologist, for my object is only to write a few brief notes on those flitters that may be found in the garden of any border bungalow.

The stream of migration is, as I have said, almost unending, and goes on for the greater part of the year. This coupled with the fact that many of the birds are only partially migratory and spend many months of the year with us makes it hard to know where to begin, but it seems most natural to do so with the return journey, for it is then that our acquaintance with so many of the most interesting of our Indian flitters begins.

Long before the mausahib has broken up her camp on the pine-clad slope of the Himalayas, whilst Srinagar is a veritable Henley and Simla all resplendent with scarlet and gold chapprassis, like a field of corn full of poppies, the birds commence the return march. The first heralds of the coming cold are the two pied wagtails, and with them or perhaps even before them come their more gaily dressed brothers with their yellow-and-green plumage

These latter, however, we must look for in the spring, for all wagtails, roughly speaking, have a distinct summer and winter plumage and all the seven yellow species that pass through here are so much alike in the autumn that it is almost impossible to tell one from the other, even when shot and in the hand. But in the spring all that is needed is a good pair of glasses and a little patience joined with some keenness of observation.

To return to the two pied wagtails—Oates has called them the White Wagtail and the Marked Wagtail. Their scientific names are Motacilla Alba and Motacilla Personata respectively. The native mixes them up and calls them both Dhobins and one could wish that ornithologists would always be as apt in their names.

They first appear here late in August or early in September. At first they are few and far between but by the end of the month they are quite common as they are throughout the cold weather.

The two birds are easily distinguished, the White Wagtail always having the ear-coverts whitewashed, that is, it has an entirely white face: it is also the more common, while the Marked Wagtail always has the ear-coverts black, that is it has a black patch behind each eye, and looks as if it were wearing a Bolshevik cap. Young birds of both species have the top of the head grey like the back, instead of black.

Another bird that appears in large numbers about this time, though they often return as early as the end of July, is the Rose Starling, Pastor Roseus. He has various native names, Tilear—but this is used for all Starlings—Sunch, the Punjabi name; Tut-Khurda—the name by which he is known to the Pathan, a word meaning mulberry-eater. He is a bird that cannot well be mistaken the head, crest, wings and tail being black and all the rest of the plumage pale pink. In the autumn the place to look for them is a peepul tree, and in the spring you will find them busy with the mulberries. To the native mind this quite settles the question of migration, at least with regard to this particular bird. It is quite simple, they come for the figs and mulberries. We are not told what they do in between times, but when I once suggested that there might be other causes which led to the sudden appearance of the vast flocks which come, it was politely but firmly pointed out to me that I was only displaying my ignorance.

Rose Starlings always go about in large parties and keep up such a constant chattering while feeding that one can hardly fail to notice them. In fact a peepul or a mulberry tree full of them is very like an Indian railway station crowded with third-class passengers, everyone shouting at the top of his voice and pushing and rushing about and getting generally mixed up.

When on the wing the flight is steady and strong and they move forward in a silent determined manner, very different from their fussy behaviour at other times.

In the autumn they stay some weeks before passing south. On their return in April the stay is much shorter, for there is important business ahead of them and no time must be wasted. At this season they suffer much at the hands of native shikaris, being very fat after a winter passed in idleness and good-living, and they really are quite good eating.

With September come the Quails, also the Snipe, Ducks and many other water birds, but these you will not find in your garden. If you want them you must be up before the sun and prepared for a long drive out, pleasant enough at this time of year but desperately cold work in December.

The number of Quails that come in September is immense. Call-birds judiciously placed in the cotton-fields over night will produce a bag of upwards of a hundred next morning. They return again in April but not in nearly such large numbers and it is hardly worth going out after them. In these parts they are much used for fighting, every young blood keeping his Quails, and Tom, Dick and Harry too, for that matter. Sportsmen of this type often pay quite fancy prices for them, fifty rupees being by no means uncommon, and I have heard of two hundred being paid for a first class bird, but this must have been a record.

When the ducks first come and just before they leave they spend the night and most of the day on the jhils, but as the season advances they go off to the rivers, and then it is very hard to get a shot at them.

Snipe, both Jack and Full are here in numbers from September to March or April, and I once shot three painted snipe in one day, but I have never seen them before or since.

As the autumn advances the number of Waders increases, but these again are not garden birds, and unless you are fond of wading about in bogs too, you will not see much of them. Among the more interesting water-loving birds I have found here are the Bittern, Botaurus Stellaris, an occasional visitor to England and at one time fairly common, and the Glossy Ibis, Pleagides Falcinellus: this latter is a glorious bird, but perhaps it hardly ought to be called a flitter, as it has been found in India in June and has been known to breed in Sind.

By the early part of November the rooks, Corvus Frugilegus, are beginning to come and with them the Jackdaws, Corvus Nonedula. And when they once start coming they do so in such numbers as to make one's life a burden. As the sun begins to set the sable ranks of this great army appear in the eastern sky, and for over an hour a steady stream of rooks and daws pours into the trees in cantonments. At dawn the westward march towards the feeding grounds begins and at this time the noise is almost deafening, for the whole time every bird is carrying on a conversation at the top of his voice. It is truly wonderful [illegible] lot rooks and crows seem to have to talk about.

All through the winter they come in ever-increasing numbers until the gardens become polluted by them, and I have known quite large branches broken off the trees by their weight alone.

The nightly din of their settling down to roost is prolonged by their intense suspicion, which causes them to wheel round and round in the air before they can make up their minds to settle down for the night, now drawing nearer and then off again. At last all is quiet and peace reigns, but some luckless person fires a shot and the whole business is begun afresh, for every rook in the place is on the wing and everyone is asking "Who fired?" and if anyone was hurt. But it is worth remembering that although you may bring down the wrath not only of the whole rook family upon your devoted head but that of your neighbours as well, you will have peace in your own garden for some time, for rooks once fired at will not roost in the same place for weeks to come, and it certainly is dangerous to do so for I have known fifteen bagged with a couple of barrels. When they are wheeling round and round before settling down for the night, to look up and watch so many birds all going in small parties in different directions makes one feel quite giddy.

Jackdaws are easily distinguished from rooks owing to their being considerably smaller and their cry being much more shrill.

Other members of the crow family that visit us for the winter only are the Hooded Crow, Corvus Cornix Sharpii and the Corbie or Jungle Crow, Corvus Macrorhynchus. This latter is the common crow of the hills, and is found in hundreds all over the Punjab during the winter. But he is by no means common here. Perhaps we are a little out of the way for him, and we ought to be profoundly thankful, for he is a worse villain than the ordinary House Crow, and far more cheeky and destructive, with a taste for literature which makes it quite unsafe to leave books lying about outside. However you won't find him in your frontier garden more than half a dozen times during the course of his stay.

The Hooded Crow is fond of waste land and desert places; he is a grey-black bird not unlike the common Crow, but easily distinguished from him, the grey being lighter and more sharply defined, while the whole of the back and lower plumage are grey instead of black.

A distant relation of the crow family and one bearing a different surname is the Indian Grey Tit, Parus Atricaps. He is much more respectable than most of his relations, and except for the fact that he is occasionally accused of picking out fruit buds, he bears quite a good moral character. This is the only Tit that has been found in the plains of the Punjab up till the present, so if you see a Tit you can be quite sure of your bird. It has not got the habit so common with other Tits of hanging head downwards, except on rare occasions.

Other common winter birds are the Lapwings, and of these the ordinary Peewit, Vanellus Vulgaris, and the Sociable Lapwing, Chettusia Gregaria are by far the most numerous.

With January the return migration begins, the first birds to come being the Minivets, Pericrocotus Brevirostris. They generally arrive about the 20th January. It is surprising with what regularity not only these but all other birds return year by year, as a rule varying only a day or so, earlier or later.

Why the Minivets come so early is not quite clear, for the hills in which they breed are covered with snow long after this, and they do not stay with us long. But I have a theory of my own. The Minivets are found only in India and Eastern Asia, and are true Orientals in that they are polygamous, their Bengali name signifying Beloved of seven damsels. Now everyone knows what a business getting off to the Hills is, but when there are seven memsahibs instead of one, not to mention grown up sons and daughters, and when you have a wardrobe like that of the Pericrocotus family, it must be anxious work. And one does not wonder that an early start is essential if things are to be ready by the time the season begins.

Like Mrs. Wiggs, the Minivets frequent the cabbage patch, for even as early as January while the frosts are still keen, the cabbages are covered with the caterpillars of the ordinary white cabbage butterfly. I have generally noticed these birds early in the morning, and from the New Year onwards I daily visit the kitchen garden just before breakfast until I have seen and recorded the arrival of the first Minivet. They always go about in small parties, and the males keep up a constant and very characteristic whistling. This together with their brilliant red and black plumage and the hardly less gaudy yellow and grey of the female makes them birds that even the most casual observer can hardly fail to note.

A much less notable bird that comes about this time is the Black-throated Ouzel, Merula Atrigularis. He too is an early riser and is always up betimes and on the lookout for worms on their way home after making a night of it. You will see him from your dressing room window towards the end of the month or early in February, running about upon the lawn and looking for all the world like an English thrush, except that the dark spots on the upper breast run together and form a black gorget. I know few birds that take one's thoughts back to the old home as does this ouzel, while hunting about in the dew-drenched grass and flowers for his breakfast on a dull morning during the very early spring days.

The beautiful blue Rock Thrush, Petrophila Sinuus, may also occasionally be seen about now, but alas, he is very rare and one must not do more than mention him.

The warmer days of early March bring back the Swallow and the Sand Martin, Hirundo Rustica and Cotile Riparia both English birds and needing only a passing reference. These are followed a little later by the Indian Swift, Cypselus Affinis, and that most beautiful of all the family, the Wire-tailed Swallow, Hirundo Smithii. The Indian Swift can be easily distinguished from all other Swifts by the white patch under its chin, but to see it you need to be rather close, or else to catch the bird with your glasses as he turns upwards to a higher level, the glow of the setting sun thus falling on his lower plumage.

They are interesting little creatures to watch, though one does not see much of them during the day. Perhaps like most of us, they have other business on hand. But as evening draws on and the sun gets less fierce, when men are thinking of tennis and golf, they come out in swarms and then ensue great games of Prisoners' Base or Kiss-in-the-Ring, accompanied all the time by twitterings of delight as if life were too full of joy.

If, however, you are fortunate enough to occupy a bungalow frequented by these charming little birds, or should they chance to fancy your daftar or kacheri, towards the end of April or early in May they will be constantly in and out of the verandah, or even the rooms, in pairs for then they are busy house-hunting, and if you have time to stop and listen to them for a moment, you will hear him whisper as he flies, Dearie don't you think that this would do?

The ordinary Swallow is so familiar a visitor to England that he needs no description, but he is another of those birds that bring a touch of home. How one's mind goes back to those glorious summer days when the Swallows, mere flecks in the sky, assured one that the day would be fine, and the planned expedition a success, or as they skimmed low over the meadows, speaking of coming rain and flies that kept close to the ground, gave promise that the trout would be rising well.

The Wire-tailed Swallow is too brilliant a bird with his glorious metallic-blue back and flaming chestnut head, contrasting so sharply with the spotless white of his lower plumage, to carry one's thoughts back to our own uncertain summers. One feels that so bright a bird would be out of place in anything but the most brilliant sunshine. The most striking feature of this beautiful little Swallow is the two wire-like feathers that project some four inches beyond the rest of the tail, and make the bird look as if it were a flying pin-cushion with two long hat-pins stuck in it.

April brings a number of smallish birds many of which spend the hot weather with us, but of those that only stay a few days and then pass on perhaps the most striking are the Red-headed Bunting, Emberiza Luteola, and the Rose Finch, Carcodacus Erythrinus; the former is by no means a garden bird, but they are to be found in flocks among the ripening corn-fields, and with their yellow plumage and deep reddish-chestnut heads and necks they harmonize wonderfully with the corn on which they feed, or give a striking touch of colour to the trees as they settle on them, when put up from their feast of stolen grain.

For a few days the Rose Finch seems omnipresent, and then lo! he is gone! One hardly knows how to describe this bird, except that it looks a hen-sparrow that has been dyed pink, and then gone out into the rain and washed most of the colour off, or like a Hindu during the Holi Festival.

I once had a cook who, if ever a Sparrow got into the kitchen used to catch it and dye it and then set it free as an awful warning to the rest of the sparrow tribe, a living scarecrow, so to speak, or perhaps to be more exact, a scare-sparrow. And I must say that many of his fearful examples were uncommonly like Rose Finches. At times his creations surpassed any ornithological specimens I have ever seen in India, and I remember one beautiful offender who went about the compound with a bright blue head, pink body, purple tail and green wings, till at last a shower of rain came and washed him back to his normal condition.

Now it is that the Drongos or King Crows come, Dicrurus Ater. And well they deserve their popular name, for Corvus Splendens, Esq. looks the other way and tries to assume an air of innocence when his lord and master comes along, or else slips round the other side of a tree and makes off quietly as soon as he thinks the coast is clear. The Drongo's powers of flight are most remarkable and his pluck limitless, and it is these two characteristics that make it possible for him to bully and browbeat a bird five or six times his own size. A Kite or Tawny Eagle pursued by a crowd of jeering Crows or indignant Mynas makes a slow and dignified retreat, occasionally swooping down upon his tormentors who instantly scatter with wild squawks of alarm, only to resume the sport as soon as the tormented one goes on his original course once more. But when a bold and determined Drongo comes along it is quite another matter. The retreat is much less dignified and there is no attempt to scare or bluff so resolute an enemy, but only a desire to reach some place of refuge. The King Crow is a bird that has "got there" by sheer strength of character and seems to keep there.

Now to come to the pretty little Bee-Eaters, Merops Viridis, and their larger cousins or brothers, Merops Philippensis, and take possession of the telegraph wires and croquet hoops, and other such like convenient and commodious hunting-boxes, never seeming to doubt for one moment that they were put up for their especial benefit.

Every now and then from the middle of April onwards you will see a tiny bird flash by or hang for a moment on quivering wings before some newly-opened flower, as he sucks the honey from its innermost recesses. It is the purple Sun-Bird, Arachnechthra Asiatica, resplendent in metallic purples and blues and greens according as the light falls upon him. It is almost too delicate a creature to belong to this world, a bird of Paradise indeed.

From time to time the Golden Oriole, Oriolus Kundoo, passes like a gleam of sunshine from one tree to another, and everywhere resounds with the cooing of the doves, which leave us in the winter, but are back in full force by now. Then gradually the heat increases the Myna ceases to chuckle over some joke which was told him last Christmas, the Crows no longer shout insults at every passer-by, but sit with bills wide open and wings drooping, gasping for a breath of fresh air. The only sound that strikes the ear is the wild cry of the Brain-Fever Bird as he screams in an ever-ascending scale, "Isn't it hot? Isn't it hot?" Every one who can rushes off to the Hills and those who can't sit at the Club and long for the time when the Wagtails shall return to tell them of the coming cold weather, and, at the same time, start the cycle of migration once more.

WASPS' NESTS.

Wasps' nests, whether fashioned above or below ground, are constructed of that substance which we call "wasp paper," the ingredients of which are the various fibres of wood or living plants, cemented together by the glutinous secretion with which all wasps are provided in order to enable them to carry out their architectural designs. The quality of the "paper" employed in the construction of wasps' nests varies a good deal according to the particular requirements of each species. Thus the building material of the tree-wasps is more waterproof and of a tougher consistency than that employed by the underground species, whose homes are already in some measure protected from the elements by their natural surroundings. Though the paper of which a wasps' nest is composed is much more fragile than that which man makes for his own use, the method of manufacture is very much the same, and it is remarkable that whereas it is only in quite recent times that we have discovered the uses of wood-pulp in this direction, the wasp has been making use of that raw material from the beginning of the world. The wasp, in fact, discovered how to make paper thousands of years before that substance was "invented" by man.

The story of the wasp's nest begins with the awakening of the "queen" wasps from their long winter sleep. With the first ray of sunshine in the spring these sole survivors of the colonies of the previous year sally forth to seek out suitable places for the making of their new homes, each of which must be fashioned by the sole labours of a single queen, and in it, so soon as a few cells of "comb" are complete, the eggs which will hatch out presently into "worker" wasps, will be deposited in due course if all goes well.

Accidents excepted, the queen wasp eventually finds a situation to her liking, and at once begins to collect material for the making of her nest. Gathering this from the stems of trees or fences, wood that is dead or partially rotten being best suited to her purpose, she proceeds to churn up each tiny morsel into a kind of paste, and kneading this by degrees into a ball by means of her powerful jaws, she carries it home. Arrived there, the next thing for her to do is to flatten out the little ball of paste into a strip of paper, this forming the "strap" by which the nest itself is attached to the nearest convenient support. The next step in the process is to form an inverted paper cone to act as the "foundation" of the roof, though in the wasp a process of building, whether the nest be built in the ground or suspended from the bough of a tree or a rafter, the work always begins at the top, and is carried downwards by degrees. Layer by layer the covering is laid on until a tiny complete nest is fashioned with an entrance hole at the side or underneath. That done, the queen begins to construct the cells—generally seven or eight in number at the beginning—in the apex of the nest, and in each of these she lays a single egg, glueing it in position so that it shall not fall out. For the cells of a wasp's nest are not arranged like those of the bee. They are placed in single layers, and each one points downwards so that the immature wasp when it comes into being begins its life upside down. This curious arrangement is intended, no doubt, to afford better protection to eggs and grubs during the time that they are maturing.

That solitary labours of the queen wasp are, however, by no means ended yet. As soon as the eggs become grubs, she has to feed the latter, and not until the grub approaches the last stages of its existence can the queen wash her hands of its care. When the shapeless grub has developed legs and wings, though even then it is soft and colourless and very unlike the handsome insect it is destined to become, it seals itself over in its cell for the completion of its development. Then one fine morning it breaks through the door of its prison, and emerges in all the splendour of its black and yellow dress. Directly each cell is vacated; the queen having first cleaned it out, deposits therein another egg, but this time she has the assistance of her first little family in attending the wants of the second.

But before the second batch of grubs needs feeding, the members of the first family, directly they enter upon their existence, take upon themselves the architectural duties of their mother, and as each brood hatches it joins in in the work of enlarging the home. Day by day the outside covering is added to, and one after the other fresh rows of cells are built. The wasp's method of building is marvellous in its thoroughness, although it may be said that the nest is never finished, yet it may always be described as complete. The cells are always kept enclosed within the outer envelope, though the latter is growing larger all the time. And the way in which the wasps accomplish this is by perpetually laying on fresh outer coverings, at the same time cutting away those that did service before, and thus making room for the wide expansion of the comb containing the cells. This work goes incessantly till the end in summer, the last two or three lots of eggs and grubs being destined never to see the light of day.

That, briefly, and of a necessity shorn of thousand and one of its interesting details is the story of the making of a wasp's nest—a structure that in its every detail reflects the greatest credit upon its ingenious and industrious builders.—Globe.

MOTOR NOTES.

LONDON, 13th October 1911.

A GLANCE at recent newspaper reports of motor accidents reveals the fact that collisions between motor-cars are becoming very frequent, some of the accidents which have occurred of late being, we are afraid, due to the careless-ess of the drivers themselves. I quite agree with the Motor News that a man once familiar with the driving of a car is inclined to take more than ordinary risks, sometimes through a mistaken desire to show his skill, sometimes through actual indifference. Thus it is that a driver holding the crown of the road will move over at the approach of another car only just sufficiently to admit of the passage of the on comer, and if the latter is not equally skilled, or is nervous, a collision results. Or, again, motorists are far too fond of taking corners at a pace which renders it impossible for them to hold the left side of the road, and, swinging wide at the critical point, may meet another vehicle which, although observing the road rule, is unable to escape contact. It takes a very small impact to cause a motor accident. A sudden deflection of one of the front wheels will send a vehicle into a ditch before the driver has time to counteract it. Recently, when talking to an anti-motorist, a member of the staff of our contemporary pointed out that the carelessness of horse-drivers is responsible for many accidents, but he was met by the retort:—"There must be some carelessness amongst motorists, or why do they collide with each other?" Naturally, he was bound to admit the truth of the statement, and it is high time that motorists made some effort to put themselves in a position to repudiate such an accusation.

ON the morning of the 18th ultimo, owing to a breakdown a member of the A.A. and M.U. had to leave his car at Newcastle-on-Tyne in charge of his driver and take train to London. Four days elapsed without news of the driver. The member called upon the Association for assistance in tracing the whereabouts of the car, which had then left Newcastle. A description of the missing car was wired at 11 A.M. on Friday, 22nd ultimo, to all the Superintendents of A.A. and M.U. patrols stationed on the road from Newcastle to London. At 2-45 P.M. the same day news was received from a patrol at Leeming (Yorkshire) that the car had been seen, and during the afternoon other telegrams were received notifying the progress of the car towards London; at 6 P.M. it was reported to be passing through Buckden and at 11 A.M. next morning the member received his car.

A ROUND of almost any garage and an inspection of the cars would show that in five cases out of ten the headlamps were not securely clamped to their brackets. Testimony to this fact would, remarks "A Motor Journal," be forthcoming from the manager of almost any motor-car Insurance Company, who doubtless could relate a long tale of the number of claims made for lamps damaged through jumping on to the road. Apparently such happenings are the result of carele-sness in not seeing that the lamps are properly attached; but anyone who has knowledge of the number of times the lamps have to be taken off the car—for one reason or another—knows that it is more than the work of a moment to replace them properly. It usually means opening the tool-box and hunting for the shifting spanner—an operation which is often dispensed with. Lamps are expensive articles, and their makers would be doing well were they to concentrate a little attention on the necessity there is for devising a clip that can be operated by hand instead of the little square-headed stud now fitted.

MAURICE FOURNIER, the well-known French racing motorist who was killed in the French Grand Prix Motor Race held over the Sarthe Circuit the other week, must not be confounded with Henri Fournier, who made such a name for himself as a fearless driver in the early days of racing in Europe by winning the first Paris-Bordeaux Race in 1901 and later in the same year carried off the Great Paris-Berlin Race. At his best Henri Fournier was one of the most daring drivers that Europe has seen. The Maurice Fournier who met his death in the Sarthe Circuit, through the front axle of his car snapping when away in the lead, is probably a younger member of the same family

THE London General Omnibus Company recently made an announcement that will mark an epoch in London Street traffic. It was to the effect that at the end of the present month the last horse omnibus of the Company's equipment will be withdrawn from the London Streets and from that time on all their vehicles will be motor-driven. As in the days when the old stage coaches gave way to the superior powers of steam, so will 1st October mark another great turning point in the methods of conveyance. It is stated, however, that at the present time there are very few horse omnibuses left to be displaced. Of the 30 that remained to carry on the hopeless competition against the conquering motor-buses on three routes, 20, which run on the cross routes from Finchley to Chelsea and from Wandsworth by Kensington to Shepherds Bush, made their last trips and rumbled into the limbo of discarded things a few days ago, leaving only 10, on the London Bridge and Moorgate Street routes, to linger until the 18th instant when their tragedy will come. From a sentimental point of view it is melancholy to see these old servants pass into obscurity after many years of useful life, but in these days of progress, when the automobile in one form or another is almost universal, their doom was as inevitable as the stage coaches of a previous day.

THE Daimler Company issued last week in London an attractive little booklet on the Delhi Durbar. I expect this is already in circulation in India for in London it is being asked for eagerly. If any of my readers have not one of these by them, they only have to send a card "the Daimler Company's Representatives at the Durbar," and they will receive one by return. Their Agents are the Bombay Motor Car Company, Limited.

THE Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders has decided to form a separate trade section for tyre manufacturers. This will make the ninth of such sections, the existing ones being the accessories, agents, aero, British manufacturers, carriage builders, commercial vehicles, foreign manufacturers and concessionnaires, and the marine. The accessories section, has up till now been the tyre and accessories section, but although matters affecting tyre manufacturers have frequently been dealt with by the committee of that section, it is felt that the importance of the tyre business justifies a separate section with its own committee.

MESSRS. J. B. BROOKS AND COMPANY, Great Charles Street, Birmingham, have a number of luggage-carrying devices which will be seen at the Delhi Durbar. No fear is needed about the purchasing, for they are specially treated for the extremes of climate which are to be met with in India. If you will mention the Indian Field the manufacturers will send you an interesting booklet on some of their accessories.

WITH the coming of autumn police trapping appears to be on the wane at most of the places where it has been in active operation during the past summer. Very few traps have been reported during the past week. Scotland (Fort William and places within the jurisdiction of the Dundee sheriff), Kesteven, and a few places around London appear to be the only areas now infected. The Brentford Police have a case hanging over against a motorist who did not appear, and for whose arrest a warrant was issued; there is also a trap at Southwick, and a quarter-mile trap on the London-Portsmouth Road, between a point a little west of the Flying Bull and another point a little west of the School House just below the hamlet of Rake.

AVIATION NOTES.

MR. HUCKS has been during the week continuing his admirable exhibition flights in the country, using as before his well-known Blackburn "Mercury" monoplane. On Tuesday he put up five flights from the Ely Racecourse, although some roughish winds were asserting themselves. During one of these he made a trip from Ely Racecourse to the Cardiff Docks, and in the afternoon, about half-past two, he made a second ascent under disadvantageous conditions. The wind dropped during the afternoon, rendering the conditions more suitable, and by way of demonstrating his accuracy of aim, he dropped a lady's chatelaine bag from a height of about 800 feet almost at the exact spot that he had pre-arranged it should come to rest. On Wednesday Mr. Hucks started from the Ely Racecourse at Cardiff at 6-16 A.M. to fly to Newport, where he arrived at 6-37, for the purpose of carrying out another series of exhibition flights. Circling round the town to take his bearings, he descended in Shaftesbury Park, and during the afternoon gave a sample of his powers, flying over Scard Farm and the grounds of the Caerleon Asylum, then steering over the racecourse and crossing the river twice and re-descending to his starting point.

THE French military aviation competition commenced at Rheims on the 1st instant. The machines are required to carry a useful load of 6 cwt. and sufficient fuel for a journey of 187 miles, and also to land and start again without external assistance. A prize of £4,000 is offered to the winning aeroplane and Parliament has voted a credit of £44,000 for the purchase of machines which have proved their efficiency. Eight monoplanes, twenty-four biplanes, and two triplanes have been entered for the competition, including two Voisin machines capable of landing either on land or water.

THREE aeroplanes are to be acquired by the Dutch authorities for use in the home army, and six others are to be shipped out to the East Indies for the same purpose. At the recent Dutch manœuvres, Van Meel, accompanied by Van Heyst, was daily reconnoitring on one of the Henry Farman machines, and thereby was able to obtain the most minute information as to the movements of the enemy's troops. On one day last week he made a scouting flight, which enabled him to report upon the distribution of the troops within 50 kilome of the camps.

THE aerial mail deadlock ended on Monday last, the organisers expressing their willingness to recommend to the Postmaster-General that £5 0 should be set aside from the surplus funds of the service for the benefit of Mr. Hubert, who was injured in a fall while carrying mails. This met the views of Mr. Hamel, and accordingly he flew from Hendon for Windsor on Monday, carrying two of the remaining three bags of mails, but engine trouble brought him down four miles from Windsor, and the mails went on by motor car. Later in the day he returned to Windsor. The last bag was to have been carried in the evening, but the wind rose and flights were postponed. On Tuesday morning Mr. Hamel started on the final journey from Hendon to Windsor, and arrived at the latter place safely with the last consignment of mails.

"Semelle" Non-Skid

—the safest non-skid you can fit to your car.

This cover—which has specially hardened steel studs projecting well above the tread and deeply embedded in the rubber—ensures a firm grip on the greasiest of road surfaces, because the studs penetrate the grease.

Increased strength and support is afforded by the stout leather tread, which is not an attachment, but an actual part of the tyre, and renders it practically unpuncturable.

Remember! It is efficient as a Non-Skid until worn out.

Still the best.

The lead established by C.A.V. electric headlights nearly 10 years ago is still held by them. They were the best headlights then; they are the best now. Their superb qualities, rendered all the more efficient by recent notable improvements, afford still greater satisfaction. They brilliantly illuminate "all roads" without dazzling in the least degree.

ELECTRIC HEAD, SIDE AND TAIL LIGHTS.

A MACHINE which should reflect considerable credit upon its builders is in course of construction in the carpenter's workshop at University College School, Hampstead, where, under the direction of Geoffrey Hill, its inventor and designer, a triplane with an Antoinette type of tail and several original ideas, is in course of completion. Master Hill, who is the son of the Vice Chancellor of London University, is extremely enthusiastic upon his work, and he and his helpers hope within a few weeks to bring the machine out for gliding trips somewhere in the neighbourhood of Cricklewood. Should the glider prove as suitable as its designer hopes, his next effort will be in the direction of an engine driven plane.

MR. W. MOORHOUSE, who has recently made some fine flights at Huntingdon aerodrome, made a successful cross-country flight on Monday. Starting from Huntingdon for Northampton on a Gnome-engined Bleriot, he maintained a speed of about ninety miles an hour and arrived without a mishap. Later he resumed his journey to his home at Spratton and afterwards started back to Huntingdon. Although hampered by a stiff side breeze, he made a very successful flight on the journey back.

ALTHOUGH the result has not yet been officially announced by the French Aero Club, it is considered certain that Eugene Renaux has won the Quentin-Bauchart prize of £1,200 offered by the Municipal Council of Paris to the aviator who between 1st May and 1st October of this year should have covered the greatest mileage in an aeroplane. All flights made in recognised competitions or under the control of Aero Club officials count for this prize, and extra distance is counted when a passenger is carried. Renaux is reported to have covered about 4,375 miles on his Maurice-Farman biplane, his nearest rival being Helen on a Nieuport Monoplane with 3,300 miles.

THE number of certificates granted to aviators by the Royal Aero Club is at present between 140 and 150, and the efficiency to which methods of tuition in flying have been brought is evidenced by the last two months' record of the Bristol flying schools, where nineteen pupils passed their tests as aviators during that period. It is notable that of this number fourteen were officers of either the Navy or the Army, one of them being the only British Brigadier-General to qualify as an aviator, and another a naval cadet, who enjoys the distinction of being the youngest person to pass the tests of the Royal Aero Club.

WILLIAM T. DAY.

The Story Teller.

THE "PINCHING" OF THE HORSE.

He was the sort of genial person who, if you asked him how he felt, looked at you as though you had taken a liberty, and then put you off with a sophistical answer. He was a charming man not to know unless you were prepared to get all the worst of the exchanges. His equal for diplomacy would have been hard to find, and would have been no good to anyone when discovered. The racecourse was his happy hunting ground, and the name he went by, amongst his familiars there, was Josephus.

That he may have had another name, or even other names, probably assumed, is not a point that we need discuss with any particular earnestness of purpose. A rose by any other name would smell as sweet, and there is no reason to doubt that Josephus would have done the same. In fact, he was generally equal to the occasion, whatever it was, whether aromatic or not so, while some of his replies to questions in the paddock just before a race, when punters wished to know whether his candidate had a chance, were models of statecraft and tergiversation.

His ability, indeed, in that respect provides us with the text of our present stimulating discourse, for, although many writers are able to make bricks without straw (and how happy we might be if they made nothing but bricks), I am not of the tribe who dare attempt to tell a story without having any story to tell. My imagination is painfully conscientious. I cannot dream stories in the night and rise, like a giant refreshed, to turn them into money in the daytime. I am able to describe feebly what I have seen, but not to imagine that I have seen what does not exist, and describe that with hysterical eloquence.

Yet a funny sort of man in his way, Josephus seemed to possess that gift of second sight in some degree. Before anyone opened his mouth to ask him a question Josephus was, so to speak, half-way down the other's throat with an evasive answer. He never said simply "yes" or "no." He saw too far into the future for that; and, in addition, his idea was that, if there were a weakness in an owner's character, as is usually the case, it was displayed by giving away information which might leave him poor indeed.

When I first knew him, a few years ago, Josephus trained and rode a few horses of his own, their performances being devoted exclusively to the N. H. branch of sport. Although he was neither a very clever trainer nor a brilliant jockey, he was so artful in other ways, so cunning in Turf finesse and withal so unscrupulous, that he was able to make money at the game. People were glad to follow him if they thought he had a respectable chance. While backers did not run after him—his appearance being deterrent, whether he smiled or merely picked his teeth—they liked to back his horses when they knew "it was all right," when the owner's money was safely invested, when there was no reason to apprehend that he had made other arrangements.

Thus it chanced that, at a meeting in the south, Josephus had a horse running in a hurdle race, and just before the event little Charlie Spriggs, the almost professional backer—who bets chiefly for a living, and lives well even when he is positively broke—came to me in a hurry and tapped my chest, which I was thankful was not my pocket. Spriggs is not particular where he puts his fingers, or what they grasp when he is on the point of becoming insolvent.

Appreciating his clemency, I smiled at him in a luxurious manner, and said, "Well, Charlie, boy, what is it? Have you come into a fortune or seen a ghost? I shall not be surprised."

He looked round with an eager expression as if for the ghost. There was a flush on his face, a genuine flush, not the sort that clusters round one's nose after repeated visits to what has been frivolously termed the Juice or Gargle department. Then he said, with a rapid utterance, "This is rather important, upon my word. You know Josephus."

"I know him well enough to nod at from a distance"—such was my reply—"but not well enough to shake him by the hand like a man, and ask after his rude health. Besides, if I did, and he had a cough, he would describe it as a cancer."

"What! he does not always speak the truth?" exclaimed Mr. Spriggs, in feigned amazement. "Yet he might do so by accident. The chance is worth trying, at any rate, for it might come off in our favour. Go and ask him whether his horse can win this hurdle race."

"It's as much my life is worth," I murmured, irresolutely. "You don't know what you are asking me to do, or you would pause in your wild crusade. In order to question Josephus properly one ought to be armed to the teeth, and one ought to begin by pressing a revolver to his ear."

"Well, have a go, old man," urged Charlie; "he can't eat you, and if he does I'll have his blood."

Encouraged by that promise, which a sensible man would have estimated at its proper value, I approached Josephus as if he were a den of lions, with myself a kind of simple Daniel waiting to be chewed up. He was dressed to ride his own candidate in the next race. He stood there in the paddock wearing a saturnine expression and a long overcoat; he was watching the saddling of his horse while my heart thumped under my left breast.

After taking three steps to the front I took six to the rear, retiring rapidly as if to give up the quest, when, looking round, I observed Charlie Spriggs shaking his fist at me from a distance. He was making gestures to indicate that he should, of a verity, punch my head if I were unable to gratify his thirst for information. The situation was not pleasant for a man, like me, of neurotic impulses.

It is my habit, however, in such crises, after being thoroughly well frightened, to take the bull by the horns and cow him before he has time to make a fool of himself and me. So, with a proud mien, I walked up to Josephus, and said: "Good-m—morning; quite a charming day for the races, eh? Is it I who am spinning, or is it you?" my glance was full of meaning.

He might have scowled at me; I did not care. The matter had gone too far for foolish tremors.

"Spinning?" he queried, after a short pause. "You or I? Why, we are both spinning, old chap, for sure, and if you don't do it better soon, judging from your looks, you'll find yourself spinning alone, with green and yellow snakes for society in the local workhouse and no more—ah!—booze!"

A chilly silence ensued. The tone of his remarks was familiar—nay, personal; yet there was nothing in my appearance at that time, as far as I can remember, to justify his assumption that I had not recently been a total abstainer or a large winner on the day. Still, his coarseness gave me courage, and I said, "Yours any chance, eh? My 'couple' won't do you any harm."

"Mine has no chance," he replied; "in fact, we are chiefly here for a 'school' in public with the colours on." He winked at me graciously. "No, no, old boy, it won't do to-day; I can't tell you how to make money although—pardon me—you look as if you could do with it."

After that inspiring message I withdrew from the presence and joined Mr. Spriggs, who was waiting for me with ill-concealed anxiety. He was dancing about in a corner of the paddock all by himself. He might have been whistling to keep his pluck up until I came, so haggard and careworn was his aspect, and he failed to brighten up appreciably when I arrived. Great events have no influence on small minds.

"Well," he cried, eagerly, "is it a go?"

"He says not" I replied, "but even now I am not certain. He has such a number of fairy tales. He'd put his best friend away, if he had one, to get half a point more in the odds."

"Then we must back something else," suggested Charlie; "We shall get nothing by looking on with our shoulders up and cheering the winner after he has won and we haven't. Come along!"

Accordingly, we went into the ring to see what horses were being backed for the hurdle race; Charlie called it "nosing about." Why "nosing" was not quite clear to me at the moment, because my own nose was under proper control. We crowded round the principal bookmakers, anxious to discover a genuine commission. Nothing seemed to be backed in earnest. A "tenner" would have made a camel favourite, so sensitive was the market.

At last we decided to have fifty shillings each—for why cut up the "fiver" as Spriggs said, when we had few left—on old Jasat, who always ran consistently, if not very well, amongst the platers; while no sooner was our money invested than the candidate of Josephus came at a bound into the position of first favourite. It was very exasperating. His owner, of course, was backing him away on the usual up terms; the money had only just come back to the ring. We groaned in spirit, especially Mr. Spriggs, who had not been going very strong.

"I hope the bleater will—" he began, fiercely when I interposed.

"No, no," I said, with a peaceful gesture; "these things are in the hands of Providence. He may break his neck any day, but not until Providence ordains that his next toss shall be his last." I wiped my eyes to express grief. "It is no use our attempting to precipitate the catastrophe by thoughtless speech."

Truth to tell, I could have gone on all day in that strain of sententious eloquence if there had been a clear course; but Mr. Spriggs, who does not fancy me as Cardinal Wiseman with his tongue over the bit, rushed me, as it were, at the last fence, and knocked me out of my stride.

"Come on to the stand," he bawled, "and see the race; we've as good as done in our stuff already." Some of his slang is greatly to be lamented.

There were half-a-dozen runners. The race was thought to be a good thing for the horse of Josephus, although the second favourite—old Jasat, the consistent performer—was accounted dangerous. We watched the struggle with keen interest, having so much at stake. About a mile from home Josephus, who had been lying handy, went to the front and forced the pace. His competitors did not appear to possess a capacity to go with him. Only the indomitable Jasat kept within striking distance.

Approaching the last hurdle the horse of Josephus held a lead of five lengths, and Josephus was sitting still. We shuddered. It looked any conceivable odds on him; we groaned in spirit, Charlie and I, especially me, whose wail it was that startled an intemperate punter into falling down several steps of the stand before he could retrieve himself. The situation was agonising, but at the last hurdle a breeze sprang up—that is, there was a change.

The leader hit the hurdle very hard, and his jockey, who was riding on a small saddle so as to do the weight, fell off. Then our Champion, Jasat, appeared on the scene, and won the race in a canter. We shook hands with each other, Charlie and I, as if we were brothers, which—happily for both of us—was not the case.

To make matters brighter, the owner of the second claimed the defeated favourite. Josephus was not so chirpy then; indeed, his face wore quite a careworn expression as he emerged from the weighing-room.

"They've (pinched) my horse" he said to me, with a gasp; "not satisfied with beating me, they've 'pinched' my horse."

"Well, they have made a mistake, old chap," I replied, cheerfully; "they ought to have 'pinched' you not the horse."

And then, as the poet so beautifully sings, there was "a rustling of the leaves."

"RATS!"

DURING the last few years, it is safe to assert, more public attention has been directed to that most pestiferous (in the literal sense of the term, be it noted) and detestible animal the brown, or, as it ought to be called, the grey, rat than at any previous period. Indeed, it is perhaps not too much to say that the rat is at the present moment the most cordially detested animal on the face of the whole earth. And the reason of this is not far to seek, for the brown rat is now known to be the chief agent, by means of its fleas, in the spreading of bubonic plague, while the enormous amount of damage it does to corn and other articles of human consumption has recently been set forth in more precise terms than was previously the case. How much is the exact financial loss caused to the human race by the devastations of rats per annum, is, of course, quite impossible to state with any approximation to accuracy ; but that, taking the whole world into consideration, it amounts to tens of millions is a perfectly safe assertion.

Originally a native of Western China, where plague is probably endemic, the rat appears to have gradually spread westwards till it reached the Continent of Europe, whence it was eventually carried by ships to the British Islands. The migration of the rat into Russia is known to have taken place about the year 1727, when vast troops of these rodents swam the Volga from the Asiatic side and established the first foothold of the species in Europe. In Paris they made their appearance about the middle of the eighteenth century, and they are generally believed to have reached England in the year 1730. The westerly migration was, however, by no means restricted to Europe, for rats have been carried across the Atlantic, and are now as abundant in North America at any rate as in the Old World, although it does not appear to be known when the first arrived there. Strange to say, they have never overrun the heart of India, where a race of the black rat is still the dominant representative of the hateful tribe.

Wherever the brown rat went it more or less completely exterminated its weaker and less loathsome brother the black rat. In view of the world-wide interest now taken in the rat and its doings—more especially on the other side of the Atlantic—an American Naturalist has been conducting experiments in Massachussets with regard to the rate of its breeding. A good deal had, of course, been previously ascertained with regard to this matter; but the information was lacking in accuracy and details. The rats forming the subject of experiment comprised a considerable number of pairs, which were kept in roomy cages under conditions not very unlike the natural ones in localities where there is a constant and abundant supply of food. One difficulty in the experiments was due to the fact that rats in confinement (it is a thousand pities that the same thing does not occur in the wild state) habitually destroy about fifty per cent. of their new-born young; the chief, if not the sole, perpetrators in these acts of infanticide being the females, although the males were long supposed to be the culprits.

In cases of this kind of infanticide the female will breed again within a month; and as this rapid rate of reproduction was found to continue for seven months in succession, it is presumed that in such circumstances a dozen litters would be produced annually, as it has been definitely proved that rats will breed in every month of the year, the period of gestation varying between 23½ and 25½ days.

If the members of a litter are successfully reared, a second litter may be produced within a couple of months, so that, when there is no infanticide, five or six litters may be reared by a single pair within a twelve-month. Nor do rats waste much time before beginning to add to the population, for although full growth is not attained till eighteen months, both males and females become sexually mature by the end of the fourth month after birth, and are then capable of reproducing their kind at the rapid rate referred to above.

It has been stated that when female rats breed under twelve months old the number of young in a litter is only three or four; but this does not appear to be borne out by the American experiments, the author of which states that the number of young in a litter varies from six to nineteen, with an average of between ten and eleven. The young are weaned and ready to shift for themselves at the end of the sixth week.

When commencing to write this article our intention was to give the average number of rats produced by a single pair and their progeny in the course of a twelve-month; but on reflection it seemed a pity to deprive our readers of the opportunity of working out such a nice little puzzle from the foregoing data. We therefore leave the matter in the hands of each reader, with our best wishes for a successful solution of the conundrum.

In sixteen of the above 28 races the figures show an increase: in four of them the figures are the same as last year's and in the remainder there are decreases the two most prominent events being the Trials and the Viceroy's Cup. The former is a W. F. A. and C. and allowances event, the latter the principal weight for age race at the meeting. Although the figures show a satisfactory all-round increase upon last year's when the entries were poor, for out of the 27 races for which first entries closed last 24th November showed decreases, the falling off in some cases being extremely heavy, this year's entries, although satisfactory on the whole, are nothing out of the ordinary and are 56 less than those of 1908-09 when the lists, excluding the Maiden Horse Plate, totalled 615, but are 99 better than last year's which only totalled 460. The actual total for the present season is 559. It is, therefore, merely a much-needed recovery, for since season 1909-10 there has been something in the nature of a slight "slump." In this year's returns the long-distance races, that is to say races over a mile, that are best patronised are the Paddock Plate 36 against 23 last year, the German Cup 34, the Cooch Behar Cup 40 against 24 and His Majesty the King's Cup 36 against 17. The sprint races have in most cases as usual attracted fair entries but the pony races for the smaller classes are poor, though the International Pony Plate and the Innovation Handicap for our decidedly useful 14-2 class are well supported and the figures show an encouraging popularity. As regards the jump races both over hurdles and at Tollygunge Steeplechases we are just about where we were last year and for the past four years, we might almost say, as the lists show neither improvement nor deterioration to any appreciable extent. This is somewhat disappointing as there were hopes that we might this season see some improvement. The Indian Grand National may receive some more much-needed support when the second entries come in as we observe that nothing is so far entered from Mr. Apcar's stable and there must be some amongst all these horses that have recently been schooled Sequent, Royal Scotland, etc., who are possible National candidates. As things shape at the present moment, however, the illegitimate department is as badly patronised as of yore and there are not any signs of any improvement.

THE principal feature about the entries and the statistics of the last four seasons is the steady decline in the entries for the two principal W. A. and C. races at our meetings, the Trials and the Viceroy's Cup. The former race, it is true, is now an event which is w. f. a. and allowances, but the Cup conditions have not been altered, despite the fact that has yearly manifested itself that the "big" owner is growing beautifully less! It is impossible to stand still in any scheme of things and however excellent the conservative spirit may be in many things, there are times when it is answerable for a good deal of retrogression. Four years ago there were 25 first entries for the Viceroy's Cup, in the following year there were 23; last year there were 17; this year the total has shrunk to 14 or nearly 50 per cent. less than that of 1908-09, and as far as the Trials is concerned the same thing is noticeable in quite as marked a degree, the totals being in a descending scale of 26, 20, 19 and 15. We take it that it is scarcely necessary to state what these figures mean? They mean that the Indian owner cannot afford to compete with the few rich men who go for these events: that the earthenware pots are unable to float down the same stream as the brass vessels and that they are relinquishing the unequal contest and devoting their energies to races in which they have a chance of meeting the heavy brigade at a concession that may give them some sort of chance of success. The average owner nowadays with a limited capital at his disposal prefers to put it into two or three cheap horses instead of sinking it all in one expensive horse. It is true that of recent years—certainly since the days of Fitzgrafton—the Viceroy's Cup has been won by horses that have been comparatively cheap. Wandin cost only 900 guineas in Australia; Retort nothing like that figure in England and Mayfowl, last year's winner, was sold to Mr. Apcar we believe we are correct in stating for something like 800 guineas and cost very considerably less than that when sold originally in Ireland. But the presence of any horse of class and pretensions in a race where the majority of them are not much better than good plating form is enough to scare away the minnows. An owner buys a horse of moderate class we will say: he knows that under ordinary circumstances his new purchase has no chance at w. f. a. with an improved one like Mayfowl, or Lawn Sand, or a performer like Aborigine, or if there is an outside chance against these horses he prefers not to go to the heavy expense of taking it and therefore proceeds along the line of least resistance and goes for a handicap, in which he is bound to get a bit of weight from the cracks. If the owner who could afford to keep up a big string and buy expensive horses were a plentiful variety in India it would be a very different thing, but he is not and this being so it is obviously desirable that the policy of the greatest good to the greatest number should be adopted and the only "big" prizes of the Indian Turf thrown open to the multitude by altering the terms under which they are at present run. We do not anticipate for one minute that a conservative administration such as the C.T.C. will ever take the bold plunge of turning both the Trials and the Viceroy's Cup into handicaps but the thin edge of the wedge has been introduced where the Trials is concerned in the shape of an allowance clause and we believe that if both these races were turned into "terms" races and the w. f. a. conditions abolished in toto it would be a very good thing.

THE Viceroy's Cup entry itself is very poor and we do see how anything but a very uninteresting contest can be expected, especially as all ante-post betting has been vetoed. Out of the fourteen entered five come from Mr. A. A. Apcar's stable and three from Mr. Galstaun's, leaving six outside owners. The chief defect, however, is that out of the fourteen entered seven only can be said to have any pretensions to being long-distance horses of any class, for we do not count in either Vavasor or Neith-both of whom are of very doubtful soundness and this leaves us Cattaro, Mayfowl, Lawn Sand, Retort, Wave Bird, Last Call, Aborigine, and of these Retort is doubtful Last Call also under suspicion and that leaves us practically Mr. Apcar's pair, Aborigine and Wave Bird. However things may turn out better than they look on paper and it is to hoped that they will, for otherwise we have but a poor prospect of seeing anything like a decent race for this now time-honoured trophy. To shortly run through the card as at present constituted Mr. Craig McKerrow's Victo has no long distance form and has only won over 7 furlongs and 6 furlongs and it is far more likely we should say that she will be sent for the Trials where she might be expected to have some chance of seeing the end of the race. Over a mile and three-quarters, unless she has changed by some marvellous process into a long distance performer, she can surely have no chance! Cattaro, H.H. The Kour Sahib of Patiala's representative, was a rogue before ever he came to India and this climate is not likely to have affected any improvement in his disposition. He has shown no form since he has been in India and is stated to be a difficult horse to train as he is one of those disheartening animals a non-sweater. His Highness Yuvaraj Urs of Mysore's Miracle is an aged black gelding by Marvel out of Mirama and has nothing to entitle him to be considered Viceroy's Cup form in his Australian dossier! He has not performed in very exalted company but he has usually run over long distances. Mr. Apcar's horses do not need very much mention as they are all so well known. Vavasor and Neith are entered and are said to have been keeping sound. Vavasor was fully expected to win last year's Viceroy's Cup but he broke down in the race and réchauffés are never much good in India! We shall be surprised if he stands. With horses like Mayfowl and Lawn Sand in the stable they have no need of the assistance of the cripples. Mr. Galstaun's trio are also too well known to need much reference. If Mr. Galstaun runs Prince Rupert for the Viceroy's Cup and leaves the Trials alone, as he did last year, we may be sure that he does not do so without some very good reason. But as matters stand at the moment Prince Rupert stands convicted of an inability to stay. He was undoubtedly asked to buckle to last season somewhat too strenuously and he has had all the advantage of a long rest in a good climate: he has also arrived here looking extremely well, but a horse that is brilliant inside his own distance is very often worse than the worst the moment you ask him to go a furlong beyond it. Wave Bird is far more likely to be selected as the stable representative in the Cup and Maria Farina may be sent to accompany him. This horse is a stayer and though they class him as moderate handicap form, what, after all was last year's winner and this year's nominal favourite? We take it that Wave Bird is a better horse on his English form than Mayfowl ever was. Moderates both of them, doubtless, but it is these moderate horses that seem to improve out of all knowledge of themselves on occasion! Last Call we have already referred to. If he were himself there is nothing in India that could reasonably be expected to have any chance with him. He is reported to be exactly the right stamp of horse for this country, light, compact and not carrying any top hamper but his running in the Aga Khan Cup at Poona was not encouraging and there is this further doubt as to his standing a preparation. Brewer, who knows the horse well, is stated to have expressed the opinion that he was not likely to stand and that his new owner would be lucky if he got a race out of him. Last of all there is Aborigine, a horse with credentials of the first order from his own country and one that, if he were at his best, would command attention in such a field as is likely to be opposed to him, but he has had four or five strenuous seasons of it in Australia and horses do not improve under this sort of thing, however good they may be. They say again that 1¾ miles is just beyond his distance and that the Caulfield Cup (1½ miles) for which he dead-heated with Blue Book in 1909 was far more to his taste. He showed no particular form in Poona and they say that it would have been better if he had been given all the time possible before being asked to race again. We shall, however, be able to know more about him when he makes his appearance in Calcutta later in the present month.

A pair of very handsome dapple grey Russian Mares, 17 hands high, absolutely quiet in single and double harness, very fast and showy, one of the most handsome pairs ever imported into India.

LANDAU.

A R. T. Miniature Landau by Steuart and Company, No. 12030, with cushions, amps, pole bar, chains, carpet and cover in good order.

T. Scott was out on the Calcutta course on Monday last having been up in Meerut since his arrival from Australia about a week ago. In addition to the race horses Mil by Skopos out of Young Millis, Sperry by Ayr Laddie out of The Main (by Bobadil) Bomb by Bobadil—Shell (by Trenton) and a 13-3 pony Dulcimer, he has brought up in partnership with Mr. Shields about 54 hacks and harness horses. Mil has been sold to H.H. the Kour Sahib of Patiala and is entered in the King's Cup. He is decidedly smart and ran fourth in the last Sydney Cup and has also beaten good ones like Aurofodina, Cadonia, etc., and has run up to Gay Bob and Blind Harry in Melbourne. He has not yet won Rs. 1,000, so that he is a very useful sort to have in India where there are a number of races of this class open to him. He was bred by Mr. Hunter White, a very well-known sportsman in New South Wales. All the race horses are at present with Wishart but Mil, we hear, will probably be transferred to Bence, H.H. the Kour Sahib's own trainer, when he arrives in Calcutta.

Wishart leaves Bangalore for Calcutta about the 10th instant.

M. Davis, the light weight jockey, has arrived in Calcutta, having come up from Ceylon where he rode four winners at the October meeting.

Prince Rupert and Wave Bird came to the course for the first time last Saturday and have been out every morning since then. Both are looking very well.

We much regret to record the death of Captain Lane, as a result of a fall in a steeplechase at the Meerut Meeting. Captain Lane never recovered consciousness and died on Saturday last. Dick, the jockey who was also hurt on the same race, is still, we hear, in hospital and is somewhat badly injured.

Many people there are no doubt who own horses that they would be very glad to get rid of and pass on at almost any sacrifice to someone else: incurable, bad-mouthed, vicious brutes who are no pleasure to ride, drive or have anything to do with. Some horses are ticketted "incurable" and have been allowed to go on so long in their career of vice that this epithet is more or less deserved, for they apparently are so, and once having got the upper hand of a succession of owners and would-be breakers continue to do so until the end of the chapter. Mr. Rensum, however, the patentee of the Rensum Rein comes to the rescue and assures those who happen to be the possessors of these supposed incurables that they need not despair and he guarantees that his patent running rein will enable any owner, who will devote an ordinary amount of time and patience to the task of remaking and remouthing his "outlaws," to accomplish the desired purpose. A running rein is, of course, not an entirely unknown contrivance to most horsemen and horsemasters who have had to do with intractable horses, who bolt, who are onesided and who are generally bad to handle and ride, but Mr. Rensum is the first who has produced a bit and a bridle ready for the purpose and a practical pamphlet of interesting instructions how best to proceed to the accomplishment of the necessary reformation. The Rensum Rein is a contrivance that all who would essay to make and break horses should devote their attention as it will well repay them.

We regret that we were led into making a misstatement with regard to the reason why "Mr. Torrington" severed his connection with the Ceylon turf, and that he was fined Rs. 1,000. It was in connection with another recent case that an owner was heavily fined by the Stewards of the Ceylon T.C., but it is not at the moment necessary to enter into further details, as we understand that the matter may be taken further.

The Parisian, winner of the Melbourne Cup, is a brown gelding by Bobadil—The Parisienne, owned by Mr. J. F. Kirby. He had no record as a two-year-old, but at three years he fulfilled eleven engagements, winning the Trial Handicap (5 furlongs) at Mentone, and being four times placed second. As a four-year-old he appeared nine times, winning the Hamilton Cup (1½ mile) at Hamilton, the Warrnambool Cup (1 mile 3 furlongs) at Warrnambool, and the Coreena Handicap (1¼ mile) at the V. R. C. June meeting, was three times placed second and once third. At five years he won the Australian Cup (2¼ miles) at the V. R. C. meeting in March and was eight times unplaced. In the Caulfield Stakes the Caulfield meeting last month he ran unplaced to Malt King, Comedy King and Lady Medallist.

The other day we had the pleasure of a run down and a look round Mr. W. Burgess' stables, at 35, Diamnod Harbour Road, acquired from Mr. O. M. D. Bell, re-built and improved.

Mr. Burgess landed his first shipment of the season ex the S.S. Hymettus last month comprising 46 animals of all sorts: his second shipment is due to arrive about the first week in December and will consist of 50 more animals all specially selected for the private market.

The present lot which have landed in excellent condition, are now ready for show and amongst them we particularly noticed a T. B. Grey Gelding Speiler by Sir Tom, he is a very good looking one, full of quality, six years old, and about 15-3, has been hunted in Australia, with the Mount Gambier Hounds, looks good enough to race, and should make a splendid lady's paperchaser.

A Brown T. B. Pony Gelding Maxim, by Light Artillery, five years old, and 14-1, all quality, a fast pony and shows galloping all over him; Oaks, a T. B. Bay Gelding by Texham, 14-1, and five years, this is a made polo pony, having played, and up to fair weight. A Brown Gelding, 14-1, by Cashier, a magnificent weight carrier, with good looks, and would make a slashing mount for a heavy man, being fast, handy, and up to any amount of work.

A Bay Cob Gelding Mordon, about 14-2, and six years old, by Woldswan, bred by Hon'ble J. H. Angas, S. A., he has taken four first and three second prizes in the Adelaide Show Ring, a fast pony in harness, a grand mover, and has done his mile in 3mins. 2secs., he has splendid action and true withal.

There are several others which might be mentioned well bred and educated as is usual with this master of equine tuition: amongst these are several by Roman Warrior (the imported English trotting sire) these are all great movers and the few we saw trotted in hand, although but lately landed, show all the action of their celebrated sire who held the record.

This lot have landed well and being all in such condition should find a ready sale amongst those in need of an animal to meet any requirement.

Mr. Burgess has also a very handsome little pedigree Ayrshire Cow in full milk, with a calf: she is a shapely animal, a good milker, and just the size to do well in this country.

The stables are well situated on the Diamond Harbour Road and a few minutes run in the tram lands one at the door. A look round the stables and spacious paddocks will well repay the intending purchaser, or visitor.

The November monthly medal of the Calcutta Ladies' Golf Club was played for last week and ended in a win for Miss Binning with the excellent score of 69+2=71. Mrs. Baker was second with 82−8=74.

The Delhi Durbar Point-to-Point Meeting has attracted very good entries: for the All-comers' race 26 have entered, for the Indian Officers' race 15, for the Welter Weight 37, for the Light Weight 45, and for the Imperial Service Troops race 11.

The Incha Ram polo tournament recently concluded at Ambala was played on the new handicap system, with a maximum of 16 points per team and no offside. Seven teams entered and the following were the results:—

First Round.—K.D.G. (A) beat 8th Cavalry; 36th Jacob's Horse beat R.H.A.; 60th Rifles (A), beat 60th Rifles (B); K.D.G. (B) (bye).

Second Round.—K.D.G. (A) beat 60th Rifles (A) score 7—1; Jacob's Horse beat K.D.G. (B), score 4—3.

Final Teams were:—K.D.G.'s (A): Captain Renton, E. A. Wienholt, Captain Rasbotham, and Lieutenant-Colonel Hulton. Jacob's Horse: M. Parnell, H. Allardice, Major Fagan, Captain Forteith. The K.D.G.'s won by 10 goals to 1.

The Gorakhpur Spring Races will be held on 14th and 16th February next and the Third Lucknow Gymkhana Meeting has been fixed for the 20th and 22nd November.

A big field met the Master at the ninth milestone at St. Thomas' Mount for the opening meet of the Madras Hunt on the 5th instant.

Playing for Etah Station in a criket match vs. Etah School at Etah last week Said Mohomed Khan compiled 222 in quick time and was mainly responsible for the victory of the station by an innings and 164 runs.

The M.C.C. team has arrived in Adelaide and witnessed a Inter-State Match between South Australia and Victoria on the 4th instant. A formal reception, at which the visitors were warmly welcomed, being held after the match.

A team representing Paris met a team representing London in covered court Lawn Tennis in the Gay City on the 4th instant, Paris winning by 22 matches to 4.

The tie between the 12th Pioneers and the 105th Mahrattas in the Divisional Hockey tournament open to native troops in the Poona Brigade was replayed on the 2nd instant and resulted in a win for the 12th Pioneers by 2 goals to 1. To decide who was to represent the Division at Delhi three further matches were to be played: the winners in the Poona Brigade (the 12th Pioneers) vs. the winners in the Bombay Brigade (the 104th Rifles) and the winners in the Belgaum Brigade (110th Mahratta L. I.) vs. winners in the Ahmednagar Brigade (103rd Mahrattas). The final match being played between winners of these. On Monday the 12th Pioneers easily beat the 104th Rifles by 5 goals to nil and on Tuesday the 103rd beat the 110th Mahrattas by 4 goals to 2.

Joe Jeannette and Sam Langford have been matched to box 20 rounds at Los Angeles on the 11th instant. The contest will have the semblance of a championship affair in view of the announcement of Johnson's retirement. Langford and Jeannette have been persistent challengers for the title and both seem to be the strongest heavy weights in the game, barring Johnson. They have met on a number of occasions and Langford has had the better of the fights. Jeannette claims that in a long battle he can beat Langford and has been clamouring for a match over the long route.

What is going to happen to the World's Heavy Weight Boxing Championship title? Jack Johnson has announced his retirement, and also his disinclination to box Bombardier Wells. Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette are going to meet over a 20 round journey. Sam McVea is in Australia and Geo. McDonald has offered the variable Jack $10,000 plus $1,000 expenses, to box Langford 10 rounds in New York. Will Johnson accept? He may, as no Championship title is likely to be involved, seeing that it is extremely improbable that Langford could manage to knock out Johnson inside this comparatively short distance, no matter how untrained the latter might happen to be. Jack is a past master at stalling in every known method, and £2,200 will probably look good to him. Latest advices represent him as being in a coming on mood, but it is never easy to size up the famous Jack. He has never wanted Langford since his first meeting with the Boston tar-baby, and if he were to agree to box ten rounds he might find it difficult to avoid signing up for a 20 rounds should he fail to establish a clear superiority.

In memory of that Prince of sportsman's the late Maharajah of Cooch Behar, Messrs. S. Ray and Co., of Esplanade, East, will award annually a prize from this year (to be known as Nripendra Narain Prize) for the best batting average in senior cricket in Calcutta: such clubs as have fixtures with Calcutta C.C. will for this purpose be considered as senior clubs. The prize will consist of two best cricket bats, one pair best pads, one pair best gloves, one best ball and one best bag to be selected by the prize winner of a total value of Rs. 100.

SEALS can be made very tame, even in their natural surroundings, and a case which occurred recently at Lock Long may be interesting. The seal made its appearance daily at the head of the Lock, and created much interest amongst the visitors by coming close up to the small pleasure-boats without showing much sign of fear, and latterly becoming so much attached to one of the boat-hires as to approach at his call and feed from his hand. That an animal usually so shy and wary should so soon overcome its natural fear of man is remarkable.

WE are told that chamois in the Alps are becoming scarcer every year, and no wonder. Although in some cantons the chamois shooting season lasts only a fortnight, yet in that short time the hunters have managed this year to kill many hundreds.

In Fribourg alone which is not the chief chamois-hunting canton, 170 were shot, while it may be taken for granted that many more were wounded, and dragged themselves away to die under some rock where the birds of prey devoured their flesh. In the Grisons, where the hunting season lasts much longer, the slaughter of chamois is far greater.

There is a strong feeling in some quarters that chamois hunting should be prohibited altogether.

Chamois meat is considered a delicacy by the dwellers in the Alps, and very often it is served to visitors in hotels. For good skins there is always a market, as they make excellent rugs, which last a very long while. A cured skin, with the horns, sometimes fetches as much as £2.

It has been estimated by so well known an authority as Mr. Baillie-Grohman that about eight or nine years ago more than 11,000 chamois were killed annually in the Alps.

As will be seen from the advertisement appearing further on, the Calcutta Kennel Club Sixth Championship Dog Show will be held on Friday and Saturday, the 2nd and 3rd February 1912. The schedule, which is in course of preparation, will contain a liberal classification and there will be numerous specials open for competition among members of the Calcutta Kennel Club.

THE following is the revised programme of the polo, football and hockey tournaments at the forthcoming Delhi Coronation Durbar :—

Saturday, 9th December.—Polo, semi-finals. Football final.

Monday, 11th December.—Polo final.

Thursday, 14th December.—Hockey final.

London Week by Week.

FRIDAY, 20th October 1911.

THE "Garden City" is alas! one of those pitiful excrescences which have, I fear, come to stay. I have in my walks abroad visited four of them and found them all good places to live out of. Now Golder's Green—which lies Hampstead way, "down by the Old Bull and Bush" to be geographically correct—has, for the last year or two, been run for all it is worth (which is little enough in all conscience) by our friend the speculative builder and the Hampstead Tube people. The boardings and the walls of all places where human beings congregate have long been plastered with the usual crude representations of suburban cottages, wattle and daub as to their structure, hideous as to their outline and decoration and always shown as standing in huge horticultural grounds all emerald green and yellow and scarlet. And we have been invited to go and live in these refined abodes, to go piping down the valleys wild and frisk with Amaryllis in the shade, when we have left behind us the horrid, noisy, smelly city and let ourselves into "Myrtle Villa" or "Jasmine Cot" with our little latchkey.

I have kept a languid eye on this Arcadia, awaiting the usual developments, for three old Anglo-Indian friends have elected to swell the population and endure the life and society of Golder's Green. Of course it was bound to happen sooner or later; Garden Cities are no more immune from quarrels, cliquism and usurpations of authority than are all other human institutions such as Mofussil stations, what? So Golder's Green is now in the throes of internecine strife and some of us are extracting some mild amusement therefrom.

It seems that there are people who don't like other people's wretched children to cry interminably, or to walk on the flower beds. Then, there is a squabble about the club, and the outraged members have boycotted the billiard table and the refreshment bar. Yes, it was bound to happen; nevertheless, it is very sad. The Garden City began so auspiciously. Everything was done to ensure concord. No one was allowed to become a tenant whose sobriety and morality were not vouched for, and the members of whose family had not at least three vaccination marks. A respectability as of Upper Tooting was combined with the timid unconventionalism of a demure Bohemia. Propriety of conduct was expected, but it was not compulsory to wear a top hat on Sundays, nor was a man sent to Coventry if he omitted to leave the bottom button of his waistcoat unbuttoned. There was a delightful atmosphere of idyllic promise at the start, but now, alas, the serpent of discord has crept into the suburban Eden, and rural serenity is no more.

PEPYS in his diary records that on one occasion he visited Paternoster Row to buy his wife a new dress, but long before this reference by the witty diarist to this thoroughfare it had enshrined in its history much of the romance of Old London, being in the heart of the City and close to the famous Cathedral and Paul's Cross, where many historic events have occurred.

During the past week some workmen were engaged in pulling down the premises of Messrs. S. W. Partridge and Co., publishers, in Paternoster Row. The building dated back to the time of the great fire, and as the foundations were approached the workmen found that the premises had been erected over an early monastic institution, of which the window niches of Purbeck stone, mullions, jambs, and sills bore testimony to the handiwork of the old builders. In addition several arches and vaults were disclosed, in which a number of valuable specimens of ancient pottery were found, together with other relics specially interesting to archaeologists. The pottery included early examples made by the Romans, Germans, and Londoners. One of the Roman vases was broken by the pick of a workman, but all the pieces have been discovered, and it can, therefore, be repaired. Among the other "finds" were excellent examples of Roman bricks and tiles; an ancient pair of bronze snuffers; a curious cabinet of German make bearing the arms and monogram of George I.; a bone or ivory syringe of elegant design, belonging to a very early period, and some curious specimens of glassware.

The ground belongs to the Goldsmiths' Company, and it is not improbable, when the foundation of their new palatial building has been dug to the proper depth, other historical discoveries may be made.

THE idea that Blue-books are necessarily things crammed with information of the most dull and dreary kind is, of course, almost extinct. Even among those recently issued we find a few dealing with such entertaining matters as Measles, Calcium Sulphate in Baking Powder, the Welsh Church, Singing in Army Schools, and Ex-Meridian Altitude Tables. Now, to crush the idea utterly, a Blue-book is issued this week, which bears the official title: "Report on the First International Shooting and Field Sports Exhibition, Vienna, 1910," and the inscription: "Board of Trade—Exhibitions Branch."

Whatever the Board of Trade does, it may be trusted to do well; and there is, therefore, no reason for surprise in the discovery that the most valued and most accomplished servants of the Department are content to divide their attention between the settlement of strikes and shooting and field sports. The "Letter of Transmittal," which serves as a modest introduction to the work, bears the signature of Sir G. R. Askwith himself. An expert from the Natural History Museum has assisted in the work upon which the report is based; and Lord Desborough and Lord Lonsdale (who appears, not as an M.F.H., or as a judge of horses, but as a President of the Shikar Club) are among the gentlemen on whom the burden of responsibility for the volume falls. It all seems strange, but the appearance of a Blue-book on such a subject is accounted for by the explanation of the Austro-Hungarian authorities that the object of the exhibition was "to show the amount of economic

In the opening chapter of the work we are told that it was decided, "after careful consideration," that the British pavilion in the exhibition should be built outwardly in the form of an old Tudor country-house. Nothing, it is clear—neither period, nor environment, nor even artistic effect—was left to chance; but the whole thing was thought out with profound deliberation. Then, in the work of organisation, nothing that could make the Viennese visitor feel that he was really enjoying himself was overlooked; and thus it was that three skeletons, a number of old oars, and "an exhibit illustrating grouse-disease," were included in the British display. The collection, of which the book gives careful details, had for its biggest section a group of what are described as "sporting mammals." In such a group portrait models of Lord Desborough and Lord Lonsdale certainly ought to be found; but the description is misleading—it is only the victims that are included.

The collection as a whole was wonderfully representative of the sporting resources of the Empire; and the description, though it is defective, here and there contains many surprises. The "heads" for instance, are accompanied by the names of the sportsmen who shot their owners; but this has been omitted in the case of the Irish Elk, measuring 8 feet 10 inches between the antler-tips, that was dug out of an Irish peat-bed some years ago. The Tsessebbe, the duikerbok, the puku, the gerenuk, the beisa oryx, the addax, the situtunga of Africa are dealt with; and an "original description of the forest pig" is added as an additional treat. Among the other local groups the muntjac, the tsaine, and the tahr are to be found. There are British freshwater fishes that made a brave effort to defend the familiar "fisherman's tale" against unbelief. There are racing and rowing relics and trophies, and many pictures dealing with sporting subjects.

. It is, in fact, only with the art section that serious fault can be found. One picture bears the inscription "Fight between Jackson and Slavin, National Sporting Club, London." Jackson, of course, was a gentleman of colour; Slavin was not; and here we have it openly admitted in a Blue-book that this canvas has been exhibited for months in Vienna, under the auspices of the Board of Trade, without the Rev. F. B. Meyer turning a hair! Still, the Blue-book is an interesting one, and the precedent that it establishes is one that may be followed with pleasure to many people—Blue-books on the next football "final" and on the extinct science of ping-pong, for instance, would be certain of an extensive circulation.

And writing of recent publications reminds me to recommend to your large number of military readers "The Armies of India" (with coloured illustrations) by Major G. F. MacMunn, D.S.O., just brought out by Messrs. Adam and Charles Black. In an appreciative foreword, Lord Roberts refers to the Indian Army as "a splendid and potent machine. It is most imperfectly known in England, and often insufficiently understood in India, how diverse and divergent in many respects are the numerous races which we enlist into our Indian Army—in creed, in customs, in temperament, and traditions. Yet each and all of these factors must be attentively studied, and the most careful consideration given to the difference of treatment they impose in arranging the conditions of service for such widely different idiosyncrasies, if we would maintain and develop the fighting efficiency of our Indian soldiers and the strength of the bonds of loyalty and devotion by which they are attached to our service."

From St. James's theatre exit "The Ogre" after less than a month's run; re-enter "Lady Windermere's Fan," which has still a remarkable vitality and vivacity for all its twenty years of life. It would, of course, be absurd to say that Oscar Wilde's comedy does not bear traces of age. Fashions in plays change as completely as fashions in clothes change, and in these days soliloquies and asides, with which the piece abounds, strike a jarring note; nor does Wilde's cynicism sound quite so deliciously audacious as it once did. But the paradoxes and epigrams have not lost their sparkle; the years have not damped the verbal fireworks. And there is another quality which has helped to keep the play alive—it has a direct and carefully worked-out story.

If there ever was a dramatist who might with reason have supposed that the wit of his dialogue was strong enough to support whole acts without the introduction of an obtrusive plot, that dramatist was Oscar Wilde. But he was too wise to ignore the value of the situation and incident; he did not attempt to form the foundation of his comedies of nothing more substantial than a series of epigrammatical lines—as Hubert Henry Davies and Somerset Maugham and Alfred Sutro have attempted in their later plays, without meeting with conspicuous success. He did not trouble very much about characterisation; he did not worry over probabilities—how Lady Windermere and Mrs. Erlynne contrived to get into Lord Darlington's flat without being seen by a servant must ever remain a mystery. But he did supply a theatrically-effective background to relieve his verbal brilliance. The third act, that scene of Mrs. Erlynne's self-sacrifice, for all its artificialities, has real theatrical strength. And that is one reason why the piece has endured so long.

"Lady Windermere's Fan" is not a strong acting play, simply because the characters are not real people; and there was little to tempt Sir George Alexander back to his old part of Lord Windermere, but in his stead Mr. Dawson Milward gave a dignified and manly interpretation. The one character of any real scope, however, is Mrs. Erlynne, and Miss Marion Terry, who created it at the original production, again plays with pathos, finesse, sincere feeling, and all the magnetism of a charming personality. Miss Lilian Braithwaite acts prettily as the shallow Lady Windermere, Mr. Norman Trevor was a sincere Lord Darlington, although he naturally does not for a moment suggest the polished man of the world, Mr. Eric Lewis gives an amusing picture of Lord Augustus Lorton, and Mr. Owen Nares and Mr. Ernest Thesiger are amusing as cynical young men.

Gaiety piece, like good wine, always seems to improve with age, and now that "Peggy" has several months to her credit she has developed into one of the merriest and most entertaining of musical plays. True to her sex she believes in change, and last Saturday night, when she disported herself in new frocks, sang fresh songs, and danced the latest dances, she was acclaimed by a crowded audience with a full tribute of cheers and laughter. A Gaiety piece is like no other form of theatrical production, if, indeed, form is a word to be used at all in such a connection. It is the sheer inconsequence of half that happens which seems to be the enduring charm. No one on Saturday, either on the stage or in the audience, seemed to care how things happened or why. Enough that resourceful comedians and agreeable ladies danced and sang and made jokes in their own inimitable fashion. And there were some very amusing things done and said in this second edition of the musical play of George Grossmith and Leslie Stuart. Who were the authors and composers of the novelties was kept a secret, possibly again because no one would be likely to reveal any anxiety to know their names. All the new things were amusing and that is everything.

An enormous audience was a matter of course at the Albert Hall on Saturday when Madame Albani took her farewell of the London public. The names of Albani and Patti cannot often have appeared before on one programme, and never, it is safe to say, in conjunction with that of Madame Sarah Bernhardt. As it turned out, the amiable intentions of Madame Bernhardt, who had promised to recite for Madame Albani, were frustrated by the directors of the Coliseum, who, it was stated, had refused her the necessary permission to appear. But Madame Patti required no one's consent but her own, and she and Madame Albani, together with Madame Ada Crossley and Miss Muriel Foster and Sir Charles Santley and Mr. Plunket Greene, and the other eminent artists announced, all duly appeared, to the unqualified delight of some nine or ten thousand hearers.

One farewell concert at the Albert Hall is much like another and that of Saturday presented no marked exception to the general rule. Madame Albani herself came in, of course, for the heartiest possible reception, alike after each of her contributions to the programme and at the close of the proceedings when, after singing Tosti's "Goodbye," she was made the recipient of a testimonial the outcome of the subscriptions of her many friends and admirers. Making due allowance for the fact that she has now been before the public for the best part of half a century, Madame Albani was in excellent voice on Saturday. Beginning with Handel's "Ombra mai fu" and Chaminade's "L'Eté," she was, of course, compelled to sing again, choosing for the purpose Gounod's popular perversion of Bach's first prelude, which she gave with all her customary expressiveness to the violin obligato of Mr. Haydn Wood.

In wonderful voice also was Madame Patti, who came in likewise for a prodigious reception, being recalled again and again. It was not, indeed, until she had responded with two extra pieces in the shape of "Par dicesti" and "Home, Sweet Home" that she was suffered to depart. And Santley's reception was scarcely less hearty. He began with "Maid of Athens" and "To Anthea," and as encore chose "Simon the Cellarer," giving one and all in astonishing style. In truth, the whole concert was a triumph for the veterans, though this is by no means to belittle the efforts of the artists of a younger generation taking part, who one and all delighted the huge audience also.

In addition the Smallwood Metcalfe Choir sang and the New Symphony Orchestra supplied instrumental numbers under the direction of Mr. Landon Ronald, who also played some of the accompaniments. Altogether it was quite a memorable occasion, the financial results of which it is pleasant to think should be very handsome indeed.

SPORT IN SEISTAN AND MALAYA.*

SOME months ago we had the pleasure of welcoming an attractive volume by Major Kennion on sport and travel in the Far Himalaya. We have now to comment to the attention of our readers an equally, if not indeed a still more interesting work in which the same author introduces us to a comparatively little-known country, in which he spent,—in company for at least a portion of the time with his wife and children—rather more than three years as his Britannic Majesty's Consul.

While fully appreciating the delightful manner in which Major Kennion has described his sporting and other experiences in Seistan we do not in the least feel an inclination to visit that desolate and wind-swept country. The wind alone, which we are told blows for most days in the year, and occasionally attains the frightful velocity of 120 miles an hour, would indeed be quite sufficient to keep most people away; and we have no desire to emulate the gallant Major's experiences on the night when the tent containing his ayah and children was expected every moment to be laid low by the sweeping blast.

After a chapter on Black partridges and a second on the "Hunting of Rahmat," the author gets to work on big game by commencing with the Persian wild goat or ibex. Here we note that he objects to naturalists preferring to call Capra aegagrus (not Capra aegragus, Major Kennion, if you please), remarking that he sees no reason why it should not be called an ibex. The answer to this is that a goat is a goat and an ibex an ibex; and that although it is permissible to apply the term goat, as representing the type of the whole group, to an ibex, it is not the thing to call a goat an ibex. Nevertheless, sportsmen are in the habit of doing this, and there is accordingly nothing more to be said, as it is quite impossible to induce them to mend their ways in these respects. Major Kennion was fortunate not only in obtaining some good heads, but likewise in demonstrating that the distributional area of the species includes the Kopet Dagh Range, forming the boundary between Persia and Turkistan. These goats, it is said, appeared to go without water for months at a time during the hot season; the explanation of this abstention lying perhaps "in the existence of green-leaved figs and pistachio-trees and succulent roots, such as assafoetida, which may provide sufficient moisture for their needs." In this forced abstention from water these goats are stated by the author to resemble the white rhinoceros, although he ought, of course, to have said the black rhinoceros, which has to go without drinking for long periods in the Somali ranges. Wildfowling in Seistan forms the subject of a couple of chapters; and judging from the author's description and his bag, this sport, which includes birds ranging in size from teal to geese, must beat even that which is obtainable in parts of the Punjab. The fastest flying bird seems to be one which Major Kennion provisionally identifies with the clucking, or Baikal, teal. "The Seistani name for them," he writes, is "bullets, and it describes them well. Fast they came and low, often so skimming the water as to make it difficult to get a shot at them at all."

The most interesting animals brought home by the author were two species of gazelles, one of which, as stated many months ago in our columns, Mr. Lydekker has identified with Blanford's Gazella fuscifrons, named from a female head obtained from Jaik, but subsequently regarded by its describer as inseparable from the Indian "ravine deer." In this species, which may for the future be known as Kennion's gazelle the does carry horns; but in the second species, named by Mr. Lydekker G. Seistanica, the females are hornless, as in the Persian gazelle, to which it is nearly related.

Good heads of wild sheep were obtained by the author on the northern flanks of the Elburz and on the Kopet Dagh; these being referred by the Naturalist abovenamed to the Kopet Dagh race of the urial; although Major Kennion does not appear to be quite satisfied that they all belong to one and the same species.

Some individuals differ from the ordinary urial type in that the horns bend backwards instead of forwards, thereby approximating to those of the wild sheep of Asia Minor.

Maral, that is to say, the Persian representative of the European red deer, were obtained in abundance, and the author was fortunate enough to obtain a leopard-skin which not improbably indicates a new race.

From title-page to cover Major Kennion's volume is so full of interest and so brightly written that it should be read line by line, and not skipped in the fashion we confess we are compelled to adopt in the case of some books of sport and travel. We have not yet learnt to what post on the fringe of the Indian Empire the author was appointed on his return to India last summer; but wherever he may be, we trust he will be able in due course to give us another volume of his experiences as interesting as the one of which we now take leave.

The second book on our list demands only a few lines as it is merely a second edition of one which was reviewed, in this journal on its first appearance in 1907. Apparently the only new element in the second edition is the addition of various native Malay poems, or "Mantras." For a work of this nature to reach a second edition is, however, decidedly an honour, and we heartily congratulate Mr. Maxwell that "Malay Forests" has so hit the public taste as to be entitled to this supreme distinction.

GREAT GAME DISTRICTS.

CANADIAN BIG AND SMALL GAME.

THE big-horn Rocky Mountain sheep is to-day considered the most valued prize obtainable by the sportsman. Its home is among the fastnesses of the Canadian Rockies. This animal is of a suspicious, timid nature, but is sure-footed and self-reliant in its mountain home, and will escape over rocks which the hunter finds it impossible to traverse. Its flesh is pronounced by epicures to be the most delicious of the world's game, and its massive, wide-spreading horns make a beautiful ornament. Of all Canadian game the big-horn is most wary and difficult to bag. Its vigilance is admirable, and, once it has regained the higher ground after feeding during the early morning, only the combination of luck and skill will secure a successful shot. Every head brought down will represent honest hard work and straight shooting. A big-horn can go further over the rocks in five minutes than the best mountaineer can travel in two hours, and, once the vigilant, far-sighted eyes of the ram have detected the hunter, there is absolutely no chance of approaching within shooting distance. It is a glorious country which the big-horn inhabits, and a few weeks in the saddle amid the mountains exhilarate one as little else can. A good country for big-horn is the Lillooet district from the eastern shore of Chilco Lake, Chilco, and Chilcoten River easterly and southerly over a range of 100 miles. The hunting-grounds are reached by wagon from Ashcroft or Lytton over first-rate roads to Hanceville, thence on horseback. Guides can be picked up at Lillooet and Hanceville. This country is easily hunted, the mountains being easy of ascent, and one can ride within two or three miles of where the quarry is found. It must ever be remembered that hunting big-horn is no child's play, but with the assistance of a good guide the patient hunter can scarcely fail to secure a trophy in this country. Michel, in the south, and Golden are good points from which to reach the Kootenay sheep country, which is probably the most accessible of any, though this country is rough and somewhat difficult, and is only recommended to those who like mountaineering. The Cassier country is difficult of access, but is probably the best sheep-ground in the province. Steamer is taken from Vancouver to Telegraph Creek, on the Stikine River, where guides can be had, also provisions, horses, and outfit, and therefrom about four days' travel takes one to big-game country unsurpassed elsewhere in Canada. The big-horn is almost strictly a grazing animal. His natural feeding-grounds are the high mountain meadows which lie from a thousand feet below timber line up to the snow line. He is not equal to the mountain-goat as a climber, but generally surpasses the goat in speed and shyness.

The Rocky Mountain goat, a singular animal whose uncanny beard gives him almost a human-like appearance, has his home among the giant peaks of the Canadian Rockies. It is also known as the white goat. Surveying this animal, the "Harmsworth Natural History" gives the following interesting information:—The so-called white goat of the Rocky Mountains (Oreamnus, or Haploceros, montanus), which may be related both to serows and takin, is about the size of a large sheep, and averages 100 pounds in weight. It has very short and stout legs, terminating in broad and blunted hoofs, pointed ears, and jet-black horns, curving backwards and ringed for about half their length, but smooth above. The body is covered in winter with a long coat of white hair, which is nearly straight and falls on the sides of the body and limbs, but is erect along the middle of the back, and as it becomes longer over the withers and haunches the animal looks as though it had two humps. Beneath the hair is a thick coat of wool. In the Selkirk Range of Southern British Columbia the white goats show a dark brown line running down the middle line of the back, to terminate in an almost black tail, this being common to both the summer and the winter dress. In summer the coat is comparatively short and close. There are no glands below the eyes. In length the horns vary from 6 to 10½ inches. The skeleton, in common with that of the takin and musk-ox, is remarkable for the extreme shortness of the cannon-bones. The range of this animal extends through the Rocky Mountains from about latitude 36deg. in California at least so far north as latitude 62deg., but may reach as far north as the mountains run. Although chiefly a mountain animal, the white goat has occasionally been observed close to the sea-level and even swimming salt-water estuaries or rivers. Such occurrences are, however, rare, and as a rule it lives above or close to the upper limits of forests. But when driven by hunger these ruminants sometimes descend to lower levels in the forest, while they not infrequently traverse the lowlands separating one mountain or range from another. During the pairing season, in November, and in the middle of winter they are gregarious, although not markedly so at other seasons of the year. As might be inferred from their short and clumsy limbs, these animals have little speed, and when disturbed move leisurely off, trusting rather to concealment behind sheltering rocks than to rapidity of pace. Formerly the Rocky Mountain goat was much hunted by the Indians for the sake of its fleece, but, now that the demand for blankets made from its wool has well-nigh ceased, their pursuit has been abandoned in many districts. Although extremely agile among its native mountains the white goat does not appear to be a very wary species, and is perhaps the most stupid animal in the mountains, and needs little or no skill in hunting The great difficulty is in reaching the almost inaccessible places which it usually inhabits. The best time for hunting is in September and October, before the rainy season sets in, although skins are not in the best of condition till later. This animal has practically no enemies save man and eagles, as the grizzly bear, the mountain lion, and the wolf do their hunting far below him. When danger threatens he climbs up or down the steepest precipice he can find, and there is no wild creature without wings that can follow him. No sport can excel hunting the mountain-goat, for the quest brings the sportsman to a high altitude, where the tonic air always creates vigour and appetite. Everywhere in the mountains the sportsman finds himself in strange surroundings, and amid giant snow-capped peaks, cliffs, and gorges, picturesque mountain lakes and tarns, spacious valleys and enchanting streams, the whole more or less clothed with an infinite variety of fragrant pine woods, shrubs, and flowers. Truly, hunting amid such surroundings is a delight, and when the reward is a magnificent trophy, together with renewed vitality, the sportsman feels amply repaid for his time and expense.

Possibly the hardest game in North America to secure is the musk-ox, as it is found only in a district situated almost or quite within the Arctic circle and about the head-waters of the Great Fish River, also north-east of the Great Slave Lake and in Greenland and Labrador. Tradition says that the musk-ox receives its name from the fact that it emits a strong musk odour, but the Indians and trappers who bring these valuable skins to the Hudson Bay Company allege this to be a myth. The horns grow directly down and then outward. The colour of the coat varies from a jet-black to a deep seal-brown, according to the age and season of capture. The hair is very fine and silky, growing thickly about the face, back, and shoulders. In size the musk-ox is about 3½ to 4½ feet at the shoulder and from 5 to 8 feet from the tip of the nose to the end of the tail, and weighs about 800lbs. The animal looks diminutive when standing, owing to its very short legs, but the bones are massive and indicate great strength. Hunting these creatures is a serious and expensive business under the most favourable circumstances, and the only safe way would be to communicate with the Hudson's Bay Company at Winnipeg, Manitoba who can furnish letters to their traders to supply the guides, dogs, and equipment.

The black bear is found throughout the length and breadth of Canada. He is a harmless creature, with a good coat in the early spring, and lives upon fruit, berries, fish, meat, bugs, lizards, mice, etc. It is impossible to tell how he secured his notoriety as a dangerous animal, for in reality he is an arrant coward, and unless goaded by pain, or in defence of cubs, will not attack mankind. The best specimens are secured northward, and in the Yukon coats of over 8 feet in length are not uncommon. In New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia many have been killed weighing over four hundred pounds, and in sections of Eastern Canada they are so numerous as to be a positive nuisance to the settlers. There is no difficulty in securing a good specimen, the localities where this animal may be killed being numerous. According to Dr. C. H. Merriam, the food of the American black bear consists not only of mice and other small mammals, tortoises, frogs, and fish, but also largely of ants and their eggs, bees and their honey, cherries, and various other fruits vegetables, and roots. It sometimes makes devastating raids upon the barnyard, slaying and devouring sheep, calves, pigs, and poultry. Mr. C. C. Ward remarks, as the result of his own experience, that the black bear is growing more carnivorous and more discontented with a diet of herbs. It is fortunate that an animal of the ferocity he displays when aroused seldom attacks man. His powerful jaws and terrible canine teeth are well adapted to seize and hold his prey, and his molars are strong enough to crush the bones of an ox. His great strength, however, lies in his forearms and paws. His mode of attacking his prey is not to seize it with his teeth but to strike terrific blows with his fore-paws. His weakness is for pork and to obtain it he will run any risk. He is a good climber, but, owing to his weight, is unable to ascend to the tree-tops or climb far out on the branches, although he will go up straight stems to a considerable height after honey. He is an excellent swimmer, and many are killed while swimming in the lakes. As a rule, the black bear hibernates although its torpor is not deep, and the time of entering upon the winter repose depends upon the severity of the season and the amount of food supply. Although the males will remain active in any weather, so long as they can find abundance of food, the female is compelled to seek shelter sooner on account of her prospective family. The winter den of a black bear is generally a partial excavation under the upturned roots of a fallen tree, or beneath a pile of logs, with perhaps a few bushes and leaves scraped together by way of a bed, while to the first snow storm is left the task of completing the roof and filling the remaining chinks. The birth of the cubs occurs about January or February, and number two or three, and it is believed that the female does not give birth oftener than every alternate year. The grizzly bear has alway had the respect and admiration of all sportsmen. One of the best known sporting writers who has hunted in the United States for the past sixteen years recently announced that he has given up all hopes of killing a grizzly bear in his own country, and has been compelled to turn to British Columbia and the Canadian Rockies, where they are still plentiful. Like the wolves, the grizzly bears of to-day are alive to the fact that man is an enemy to be feared. Nine grizzlies out of ten will run the moment a man is encountered, no matter what the distance may be between man and bear. The tenth will charge him furiously, especially if the attack is made from below or from the only line of escape. It is said that a wounded grizzly always runs down-hill and this may account for some attacks upon hunters which might not have taken place had the hunter been located above or on a level with the wounded animal. At most seasons of the year the grizzly is a solitary creature. In the berry season two or three have been seen together in the same berry patch, but this is a rare exception. It is said to take seven years for a grizzly to attain maturity, when he usually reaches a weight of from five to seven hundred pounds. One died in Lincoln Park, Chicago that weighed eleven hundred and fifty-three pounds. As a rule, the claws are long and curved, and possessed of great strength, and the fur in season is a splendid trophy. The Provincial Game Warden of British Columbia, Mr. A. Bryan Williams, remarks that the Ishut River, which runs into the Stikine River not far from the mouth, is the best place for bear, both black and grizzly. You will have to hire a canoe and go up the river as far as you can. The snow should be off the slides in the mountains from the middle to the end of April, and at this time, while there is still snow in the timber, the bears come out of their winter quarters and are in prime condition. They are hungry after their long winter's fast, and spend a good deal of time hunting for food in the mountain slides, digging for roots, grubs, and insects. Be up early in the morning and out again in the evening, and with a good pair of field-glasses examine all the slides from a distance, and if you do not get a number of fine skins it will be your fault. Grizzlies are fairly plentiful in the East Kootenay and also Lillooet and some parts of Okanagan. They are also found at the head of some of the long inlets, such as Knight and Bute Inlets. The headwaters of the Naas River are very good, as is also the Skeena River in places. The best time to hunt bear is in the spring. On the Stikine River the bears come out of their dens about the middle of April. In the Kootenay and Lillooet districts they do not appear until May. Another excellent district is that which lies to the north of Notch Hill, on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Wolves are increasing in number, but the systematic hunting of them has now begun, and they will be kept down. In winter camps the hunting on snow-shoes of this marvellously cunning animal has proved enjoyable and exhilarating sport. The occasional low temperature only adds to the pleasure. The grey wolf is a large-boned, long-headed, powerful animal, whose weight frequently reaches eighty pounds. He usually hunts for big game in packs of from three to twenty. So great is the damage done to big game and to farmer's and ranchmen's stock that every province in Canada offers a bounty for their scalps. Yet the wolves continue their destruction of game and stock each winter in increasing numbers. Wolves are found in all the provinces of Canada. They are particularly numerous on Vancouver Island and along the northern coast and vary greatly in colour from almost entire black to grizzly grey, and from brindled brown to yellow. The puma, panther, cougar, or mountain lion, is found in the Canadian Rockies and British Columbia. It is the largest and most powerful of the cat family found in America, and of a sneaking disposition, but capable because of its great strength and size of putting up a terrific fight. Deer and all small game are its natural prey. With a good dog it is easy to get a cougar in many parts of Vancouver Island. They are also found in the Okanagan and Boundary Creek districts. They appear to be increasing in numbers in parts of British Columbia. They have been killed as far north as 54deg., but are not plentiful. The Canada lynx, bobcat, or wild cat is an animal perhaps better known to the fur trade than to the sportsman. The Canada lynx has the lank form of all the cat family, but its thick, soft fur makes it appear larger than it really is. Its feet are large and tufted, so that it can get about well in the deep snow of the country. Its coat is ashy grey. The animal has always a tuft of black hair on the ears, and may be distinguished in this way from the wild cat or bobcat. It is found in the maritime provinces and Maine, also in Ontario, Quebec, and in the Canadian West. The Canadian antelope is a graceful creature and roams the prairies and foothills of Western Canada and the mountain ranges of British Columbia. The best way to take the antelope is to start them on the run and then cut off their flight at an angle. They rarely change their course when they have once set out upon it, hence the sportsman is oftentimes able to get within range. The meat is good, but the hide is of little use.

TESTIMONIAL FROM SIR SAMUEL BAKER.
THE FAMOUS NILE EXPLORER.

Newton Abbot Devon.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

STEWARDS:

BRIGDR.-GENL. W. E. PEYTON, D.S.O.
LT.-COL. A. H. M. TAYLOR, D.S.O., 13th Hussars.
LT.-COL. R. ST. C. LECKY, R.H.A.
LT.-COL. C. F. MURRAY, S. and T. Corps.
MAJOR E. FEETHAM, Royal Berkshire Regiment.
MAJOR P. E. RICKETTS, 18th Lancers.

First Day, Thursday, 2nd November.

THE meeting opened this afternoon and was largely attended, the 13th Hussars dispensing hospitality. The course was in perfect order and the general arrangements could scarcely be improved upon—thanks to the hard work of the energetic Honorary Secretary. Fields were good and excellent racing was witnessed, the only marring feature of a most enjoyable afternoon's sport being a couple of nasty falls in the C. T. C. steeplechase. Crusader came down at the first fence and Dick, his rider, had to be removed to hospital suffering from internal injuries Captain Lane who rode Confederation got a heavy fall when his mount made a mistake at the third fence from home. He was picked up unconscious and was found to be suffering from slight concussion.

THE PONY HURDLES.—Rs. 650. Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. A handicap hurdle race for ponies. About 1¼ miles over seven flights of hurdles.

Mr. Sullivan's Lacrosse, 8st. 12lb. (car. 9st. 1lb.)	Dick	1
Col. Wilson's Miss Clare, 11st. 10lb.	Capt. Charrington	2
Genl. Pitcher's Stella II., 11st. ...	Gadson	3

Also ran: Daphne, 10-12, fell; Butterfly, 9-3, ran out; Sheen 8-12.

BETTING: 6 to 4 agst. Miss Clare, 5 to 1 each Stella, Daphne and Butterfly, 10 to 1 each Lacrosse and Sheen.

Lacrosse and Daphne were most prominent to the 7 furlongs where Lacrosse took command and going on in front won easily by eight lengths; the same between second and third Time—3mins. 33secs.

Butterfly ran off the course after the first hurdle and Daphne fell at the last flight.

THE BUFFERLAND PLATE.—Rs. 650. Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. A handicap for C.-B. ponies. ½ mile.

Genl. Pitcher's Dilawri, 8st. 12lb. ...	Ruiz	1
Sirdar Jiwan Singh's Vigorous Lady, 7st. 7lb.	Melsom	2
The Kour Sahib of Patiala's Conquer, 8st. 2lb.	W. Southall	3

Also ran: Referee, 11-4; Post Entry, 10-4; Adelina, 9-13; Icy Glare, 9-0; Free Wheel, 8-2; Sherwood 8-0 (car. 8-1); Julie, 8-0; Diadem, 7-2.

BETTING: 2 to 1 agst. Dilawri, 3 to 1 Icy Glare, 5 to 1 each Conquer and Vigorous Lady, 10 to 1 to 15 to 1 the others.

There was some delay at the start, but when they were got off Vigorous Lady shared out with Conquer and Dilawri in close attendance. This trio made the running all the way, Dilawri coming away at the distance to win by two lengths; one length between second and third. Time—52secs.

C.T.C. STEEPLECHASE.—Rs. 1,400 (of which Rs. 1,000 presented by the Calcutta Turf Club). Rs. 1,000 to the winner, Rs. 300 to the second and Rs. 100 to the third. A handicap steeplechase for horses. About 2 miles.

Capt. Houston's April Fool, 10st. 12lb. ...	Northmore	1
Mr. Miles' Idle 10st. 9lb.	Owner	2
Capt. Williams' Cravat, 12st. 7lb. ...	Owner	3

Also ran: Coal 12-13; Confederation, 11-12, fell; Red Tape, 9-7; Bonita, 9-5; Adventure, 9-0 (car. 9-1), fell; Crusader, 9-0, fell; Harlequin, 9-0.

BETTING: 5 to 2 agst. Idle, 7 to 2 April Fool, 4 to 1 Coal, 5 to 1 Red Tape 6 to 1 the others.

Red Tape led out from April Fool and Idle but was done with after four fields, Idle going on in command. Confederation then came up with the leaders but bungled and came down at the third fence from home. At the penultimate flight April Fool had deprived Idle of the lead and eventually won by three lengths; Cravat third the same distance away. Time—4mins. 16secs. Cursader fell at the first fence and Adventure who was prominent at the start also came down in the race.

ARABIA PLATE.—Rs. 650. Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. For Arab ponies 14-1 and under. ¼ mile.

Capt. Kennard's Najmi, 9st. 7lb. ...	Barrett	1
Col. A. Young's Bayleaf, 8st. 3lb. ...	Ruiz	2
Mr. Kennedy's Musketeer, 9st. 4lb. ...	Quinn	3
Capt. Kennard's Arth, 10st. 2lb. ...	Mr. Nicholson	0

Also ran: Dienar, 10-11; Ishmail, 9-11; Poona Mail, 9-9; Ammood, 9-3; Little Officer, 8-3; Mahmood, 8-13; New Luck 7-7.

BETTING: 6 to 4 agst. Najmi, 2 to 1 Bayleaf, 6 to 1 Poona Mail, 8 to 1 Musketeer, 10 to 1 the others.

Musketeer and Arth hung out off in front with Najmi and Little Officer next in order. The last named was soon done with and Bayleaf joined the others. At the distance Najmi came out and finally beat Bayleaf a length and a half; a neck between second and third; a good fourth. Time—53⅕secs.

JHANSIA PLATE.—Rs. 650. Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. A handicap for horses. 5 furlongs.

The Kour Sahib of Patiala's Chestnut Park, 8st. 9lb.	W. Southall	1
Mr. Robinson's Sulphur, 8st. 3lb. ...	Ruiz	2
The Kour Sahib of Patiala's Malmsey, 10st. 5lb.	Luckman	3
Mohi-ed-din Khan's T.M.S., 7st. 11lb. ..	Barrett	0

Also ran: Obo, 10-2; Morino, 9-10; Lady Douglas, 9-7; Cool, 9-7; Bird of Freedom, 8-9; Culverin, 6-10.

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Chestnut Park, 3 to 1 agst. T.M.S., 7 to 1 Malmsey, 10 to 1 the others.

T.M.S. led all the way to the distance where she was passed and Chestnut Park, and Sulphur and Malmsey fought out an exciting finish, Chestnut Park winning by a head, the same distance between second and third. Time—1min. 2⅖secs.

MEERUT PLATE.—Rs. 650. Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. For English and Australian ponies. ¼ mile.

Messrs. J. Scott and Fitch's Lady Grey II., 10st. 11lb.	Barrett	1

BRIGDR.-GENL. W. E. PEYTON, D.S.O.
LT.-COL. A. H. M. TAYLOR, D.S.O., 13th Hussars.
LT.-COL. H. ST. C. LECKY, R.H.A.
LT.-COL. C. F. MURRAY, S. and T. Corps.
MAJOR P. E. RICKETTS, 18th Lancers.

First Day, Thursday, 2nd November.

THE meeting opened this afternoon and was largely attended, the 13th Hussars dispensing hospitality. The course was in perfect order and the general arrangements could scarcely be improved upon—thanks to the hard work of the energetic Honorary Secretary. Fields were good and excellent racing was witnessed, the only marring feature of a most enjoyable afternoon's sport being a couple of nasty falls in the C. T. C. steeplechase. Crusader came down at the first fence and Dick, his rider, had to be removed to hospital suffering from internal injuries. Captain Lane who rode Confederation got a heavy fall when his mount made a mistake at the third fence from home. He was picked up unconscious and was found to be suffering from slight concussion.

THE PONY HURDLES.—Rs. 650. Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. A handicap hurdle race for ponies. About 1¼ miles over seven flights of hurdles.

Mr. Sullivan's Lacrosse, 8st. 12lb. (car. 9st. 11lb.)	Dick	1
Col. Wilson's Miss Clare, 11st. 10lb.	Capt. Charrington	2
Genl. Pitcher's Stella II., 11st. ...	Gudson	3

Also ran: Daphne, 10-12, fell; Butterfly, 9-5, ran out; Sheen 8-12.

BETTING: 6 to 4 agst. Miss Clare, 5 to 1 each Stella, Daphne and Butterfly, 10 to 1 each Lacrosse and Sheen.

Lacrosse and Daphne were most prominent to the 7 furlongs where Lacrosse took command and going on in front won easily by eight lengths; the same between second and third Time—3mins. 33secs.

Butterfly ran off the course after the first hurdle and Daphne fell at the last flight.

THE SUTTEHLAND PLATE.—Rs. 650. Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. A handicap for C.-B. ponies. ½ mile.

Genl. Pitcher's Dilawri, 8st. 12 lb. ...	Ruiz	1
Sirdar Jiwan Singh's Vigorous Lady, 7st. 7lb.	Melsom	2
The Kour Sahib of Patiala's Conquer, 8st. 2lb.	W. Southall	3

BETTING: 2 to 1 agst. Dilawri, 3 to 1 Icy Glare, 5 to 1 each Conquer and Vigorous Lady, 10 to 1 to 15 to 1 the others.

There was some delay at the start, but when they were got off Vigorous Lady showed out with Conquer and Dilawri in close attendance. This trio made the running all the way, Dilawri coming away at the distance to win by two lengths; one length between second and third. Time—52secs.

C.T.C. STEEPLECHASE.—Rs. 1,400 (of which Rs. 1,000 presented by the Calcutta Turf Club) Rs. 1,000 to the winner, Rs 300 to the second and Rs. 100 to the third. A handicap steeplechase for horses. About 2 miles.

Capt. Houston's April Fool, 10st. 12lb. ...	Northmore	1
Mr. Miles' Idle 10st. 9lb.	Owner	2
Capt. Williams' Cravat, 12st. 7lb. ...	Owner	3

Also ran: Coal 12-13; Confederation, 11-12, fell; Red Tape, 9-7; Bonita, 9-5; Adventure, 9-0 (car. 9-1), fell; Crusader, 9-0, fell; Harlequin, 9-0.

BETTING: 5 to 2 agst. Idle, 7 to 2 April Fool, 4 to 1 Coal, 5 to 1 and Tape. 6 to 1 the others.

Red Tape led us from April Fool and Idle but was done with after four fields, Idle going on in command. Confederation then came up with the leaders but bungled and came down at the third fence from home. At the penultimate flight April Fool had deprived Idle of the lead and eventually won by three lengths; Cravat third the same distance away. Time—4mins. 16secs. Crusader fell at the first fence and Adventure who was prominent at the start also came down in the race.

ARABIA PLATE.—Rs. 650. Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. For Arab ponies 14-1 and under. ¼ mile.

PURGEN

"A LONDON DOCTOR writes:—"Kindly forward two boxes of PURGEN on receipt of this. I find PURGEN most excellent and shall constantly prescribe it."

"THE LAXATIVE OF THE FUTURE."

PURGEN acts surely, gently and uniformly, without causing any irritation or pain, and its effect does not wear off by prolonged use. PURGEN is not absorbed by the system. It has no action on the liver or kidneys, and it does not produce flatulence, nausea, depression or other disagreeable symptoms usually associated with aperient medicines. PURGEN is an especially valuable medicine for the delicate, for invalids and for children. Made up in small tablets of agreeable flavour and sold in boxes only.

Sold in Three Strengths:—

"INFANT" (for young children); "ADULT" (for 'crown-ups'); "STRONG" (for invalids and chronic constipation).

English Price: 1/- per Box.

LONDON, Friday, 20th October 1911.

NEWMARKET.

FOG covered the fen country last Friday morning, and the contrast to Thursday's sunshine was most marked. Heavy rain lasted from ten o'clock till past midday, and in the far distance came the sullen boom of thunder from the heavy storm that bombarded Cambridge. His Majesty did not patronise the Middle Park Plate day, and that many sportsmen had been stalled off by the weather was evident by the depleted attendance all round. A general mist, gradually thickening, made the view of the racing worse and worse as the afternoon wore on. Results:—

LINGFIELD.

Fog festooned the atmosphere round the Metropolis as the specials left for Lingfield on Saturday, but by the time Mr. Robert Fowler's pretty venue was reached this had cleared off, only to return by the middle of the afternoon, when the last two races were run in a dense mist—so dense, in fact, that the colours could not be made out until the horses had neared the distance post. A fair crowd put in an appearance to witness a good afternoon's sport, though for the most part the class of the competitors was poor. One surprise was occasioned backers; that was when Grayling IV. ran away with the October Nursery. Otherwise they had all the best of the exchanges. Results:—

SANDOWN.

Rain fell in London yesterday morning, but not to any extent to affect the attendance at Sandown Park, and though the sky was sombre, the temperature was as mild as May. A fairly good company was treated to a quiet but interesting afternoon's racing, but the interesting developments expected in connection with the Cambridgeshire did not materialise. Thanks to the thick growth of grass and the recent showers the course was negotiable, though unless rain comes down between now and Saturday it will be hard enough for galloping over fences. Results:—

THE DREADNOUGHT OF THE JUNGLE.

The .405 Winchester fears nothing alive. It is powerful enough to stop any animal, no matter how big or how dangerous. Its 300-grain, soft-point bullet has a ton and a half of energy, and when it strikes, it mushrooms and delivers the whole of this tremendous energy with terrible shocking effect. There is an immediate collapse—the animal drops as though struck by a thunderbolt. The rifle holds five of these cartridges, which can be fired in rapid succession. Its action is reliable and strong, and its shooting straight and true. As a big-game gun of exceptional power it has no peer.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

No afternoon since the commencement of the present season has yielded so many surprises in the First League competition as occurred last Saturday. Playing at home against Sheffield United, West Bromwich Albion, after their many excellent performances during the past six weeks, appeared practically certain of victory, yet the only goal the match yielded went to the Sheffield Club. Bradford City, too, with wins against Aston Villa, Newcastle United, and Bolton Wanderers already to their credit, entered into the contest at Plumstead possessed of an appreciably finer record than the Arsenal, but the Woolwich men scored 2 goals to 0. As a climax to the day's surprises, Preston North End, whose only success in half a dozen games had been a bare victory over Sheffield Wednesday on the 1st Saturday in September, overcame Notts County at Nottingham, the defeat sustained by the Nottingham club following upon four wins and two draws on the part of that team. Not perhaps quite so remarkable, seeing that they had to take the field without two of their regular eleven, but still noteworthy, was the reverse inflicted upon Bolton Wanderers on the Hyde-road enclosure by Manchester City, who had previously engaged in six matches without winning one of them.

As Sunderland also lost at Roker Park to Newcastle United, the clubs occupying the five leading positions in the First League all met with defeat, three of them, moreover, being beaten on their own grounds. These numerous reverses on the part of the most prominent teams leave Manchester United the only side with no more than a single loss recorded against them. The present holders of the championship, however, began the winter's work in such moderate form that, despite their comparative immunity from defeat, they can claim no more than nine points, whereas four other clubs have already ten points standing to their credit. Among these successful teams are Blackburn Rovers, who last season so regularly failed to do themselves justice away from home, that it was not until the concluding Saturday of April they succeeded in winning an out engagement. That weakness still threatened to pursue the Rovers when, in early September, they lost at Sunderland and Middlesbrough, but since that time they have won three games and drawn two, their successes, moreover, including wins at Tottenham and Liverpool. The Blackburn men overcame Aston Villa, who after a bad start this autumn and a brilliant recovery, are again disappointing their supporters, yesterday's defeat following one of an equally severe description from Sunderland on the previous Saturday.

Among Saturday's wins that gained by Woolwich Arsenal over Bradford City was particularly well deserved. The Plumstead men had a nasty start in an injury to Chalmers that kept that player off the field for some minutes, but they soon settled down to capital football, and, although missing one fine chance, Common placed his side in front before the interval. A further point from a penalty directly after the resumption placed the issue beyond much doubt, and, despite considerable pressure by the Cup-holders later, the Arsenal kept their goal intact to the end. Without repeating the fine form by which last spring they raised themselves from an apparently hopeless position to one free from all anxiety, the Plumstead team are doing fairly well, and, with Ducat back in the eleven, they should have further victories in front of them. Hotspur stand higher in the competition than the Arsenal, but, after such a promising start to the season's work as they made, the present position of the North London club is disappointing, the reverse sustained at Middlesbrough being the third met with in the course of their last four matches.

The Clapton Orient team continued their run of success in the Second Division with a hard earned victory over Grimsby Town, and, as Burnley went down before Bradford, the North London club now stand at the head of the competition—one point in front of Burnley, with two games in hand. Undefeated so far this season, Clapton Orient can claim a distinction no other club in either division of the League possesses, while their goal average is much superior to that of any of their rivals. There were periods yesterday in their game with Grimsby Town when it seemed as though they might have to rest content with a draw, but they finished strongly their defence, as in all their previous matches being wonderfully sound. Burnley, who until yesterday had occupied first place in the competition, have met with little success in Yorkshire. They suffered their first defeat at Hull, drew at Barnsley, and have now been beaten by Bradford and so deposed from the leading position. Making further changes in their team by dropping Hilsdon from centre forward and including Dodd at inside left, Chelsea fared very well against Notts Forest, winning a good game easily. Woodward played cleverly at centre forward, and Ormiston was a capital half-back. With Fulham drawing at Barnsley the London clubs enjoyed quite a good day.

While the defeat of Swindon, the champions, was the most notable event, the whole programme in the Southern League provided a series of rather astonishing events. The table of results presents a strange sight with no fewer than eight visiting teams failing to register a goal, and the other two getting three each, and yet failing to do more than draw. Millwall and West Ham United enjoyed the distinction of doing so well against home defences, and Bristol Rovers shared this satisfaction of dividing the points by drawing at New Brompton. Plymouth Argyle managed to win at last, and now there is no team in the competition without a victory. Queen's Park Rangers experienced little difficulty in overcoming Luton, this being one of the few ordinary games of the day; and they now lead by three points with a goal average far superior to that of any of their rivals. Swindon still hold second place; then come Millwall, Crystal Palace, and Brentford, London clubs standing out very prominently in the competition.

THE COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

HAMPSHIRE v. SOMERSET.—The newly-formed Hampshire Union played their first match at Portsmouth before 5,000 spectators, their opponents being the Somerset fifteen. In the early stages Somerset had the better of matters and were only kept out by keen tackling and exceptionally fine work on the part of Lyon, the Hampshire full back. As the game progressed the home side showed improved form. Coates made a fine run for Somerset, but the Hampshire line was never in any real danger. Towards the interval Somerset were called upon to defend, but once the ball went dead behind their line. At half-time there was no score. In the second half the game was all in favour of Somerset, the Hampshire men playing in a disappointing manner. Lyon at full back was in splendid form and saved the side from a very bad beating. Within ten minutes of the resumption Bailey and Young gained tries for Somerset, and later Lyall dribbled over under the post, Slade placing the goal. Before the finish Thomas added another try and Somerset won by one goal and three tries to nothing. Somerset, 14 points; Hampshire, 0.

CUMBERLAND v. NORTHUMBERLAND.—A start was made with the competition in the Northern Division at Carlisle. Cumberland meeting Northumberland. The match was played under excellent conditions, the weather being fine and the ground in good order. Cumberland began in strong style, and scored twice through Boyd, but in each case the place kick failed. Afterwards the game took a turn in favour of Northumberland, and tries for them were claimed by Patterson, Borrow, and Roberts (two), one of which was converted by Alexander. When half-time arrived Northumberland led by one goal and three tries to two tries. The play in the second half was not so interesting as before. After passing between the visitors' three-quarters Borrow obtained the ball from Alexander and scored, the latter placing a fine goal, in turn Cumberland passed, and following a forward rush, Ewbank gained a try, which, however, was not improved upon. Afterwards Dodds made a fine run and passed to Roberts, who scored, but the goal kicked failed. In the end Northumberland won by 2 goals and 4 tries to 3 tries. Northumberland, 22 points; Cumberland, 9 points.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY SENIORS' MATCH.—Drizzling rain spoilt the Seniors' Trial Match at Cambridge, the play being rather below the usual standard with the players unable to handle the greasy ball at all accurately. Mistakes in passing were frequent by the three-quarter backs, and the forwards were uncertain and often kicked aimlessly. Of the three-quarters, M. J. Susskind was the best, and he changed sides at half-time to help the Colours to win. For the Colours tries were scored by L. Malcolmson, Broad, and Susskind, while Keddie and Susskind placed the goals. The tries for the Whites were scored by Thompson (2) and Susskind. Colours, 13 points; Whites, 9 points.

LONDON WELSH vs. UNITED SERVICES.—Although playing a very weak side, owing to several of their crack players being engaged at Portsmouth in the County Championship, the United Services played exceedingly well against the London Welsh at Wandsworth Common, and in the end defeated them by 1 goal and 2 tries to 1 goal and 1 try, the winning point being made absolutely in the last thirty seconds of the game. Throughout the first half the football was of exceedingly interesting and even character, many attacks being put up by both sides, only to be met by a sterling defence. On one occasion only was the line crossed, and that was about midway through when Maddocks getting well away cross-kicked, and as the ball rolled over the line Jenkins rushed up and completed the try. On changing ends, before the game had been in progress many minutes, Campbell intercepted a pass, and running more than half the length of the field, scored in brilliant style for Biggs to add the goal points. A clever try by Edwards improved by Evans put the Welshmen in front again, but Biggs also from an intercepted pass made the scores level once more. Just nearing the finish, Harrison got over for the Services. It should be mentioned that in the second half the winners were handicapped by the absence of their full-back, Bernard, who broke his collar-bone. There was a good attendance. United Services, 11 points; London Welsh, 8 points.

BLACKHEATH vs. NEWPORT.—The visit of Newport to the Rectory Field attracted a very good crowd, but the game did not prove to be so good as expected. Newport were without Vile, their captain, and Burt, and the absence of these two players resulted in almost complete disorganisation. In fact, during the whole game there was only about five minutes in which the team played in anything like their true form. In that short period they scored twice. Blackheath had three new three-quarters, and they did not combine at all with an attack, the game largely being an unscientific scramble with a defence predominating. But during their burst of good play the Newport backs made three strong attacks and two of these succeeded. After the ball had gone all along the line Onions scored wide on the left and directly afterwards Martin ran under the post; Hirst failed at goal on both occasions. There was no further scoring in the first half but early in the second Blackheath got on level terms. During the temporary absence of one of the Welsh backs, Coverdale scored wide out as the result of an individual effort and shortly afterwards Pym, taking a pass from Pillman in mid-field scored in the corner. Neither of the tries was improved. A few minutes before the close the Newport forwards rushed the ball over and Coldrick gained a soft try. The kick at goal was disallowed for handling the ball and Newport just won by three tries to two. Newport, 9 points; Blackheath, 6 points.

HARLEQUINS vs. RICHMOND.—There were 2,000 spectators at Twickenham to witness this game. Keen football was expected in view of Richmond's strength forward so decisively proved against the United Services. Expectations were not disappointed as far as keenness went, but once the Harlequins machinery got into motion there was no stopping it. Early on, through a clever interception by Plant, Richmond were nearly in Maxwell Dove being beaten, and Lambert forced to save, but helped by some kicking by Birkett the Harlequins soon put a different complexion on affairs. Birkett fielding the ball from a breaking scrum, sent Lambert in on the left after a brilliant race round. Next G. D. Roberts dropped a penalty goal, and just on the interval Lambert again rounded the defence from an opening by A. G. Stoop, who kicked a goal himself. As in the first half, on the restart. Richmond nearly profited by a bad mistake from some loose passing too close to the home posts. Then Brougham, after a run with Bickley, got in on the right and Lambert goaled. Duggan then nearly got in by a dodging run for Richmond, and the Harlequin line for a moment or two was in extreme peril. Stoop relieved, and subsequently again got his men in motion, Lambert romping in to goal. A minute later Birkett scored on the other wing. Nearing the end Richmond were rewarded for a plucky display in face of superior pace with a try by Duggan following a grand effort by Plant. There was no goal. With a minute or two to go, Lambert again romped round all opposition with the aid of Birkett and Stoop, and placed behind the posts to convert easily. Harlequins, 29 points; Richmond, 3 points.

ROWING.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—Although Term practically commenced on Monday the river has hardly awakened from its long vacation lethargy, but there will be a very different tale to tell to-morrow when scores of freshmen will be put through their facings with a view to the torpids. Still, there has been plenty to interest one inasmuch as nearly all the colleges who have any serious intentions with regard to the coxswainless fours have commenced practice, and already as many as eleven crews have been out. Magdalen, the holders, have had out two crews, the first, which was using a racing ship, consisting of E. R. Burgess (bow), E. D. Horsfall (who rowed in the Eton eight last summer). C. L. Bailleau, and L. G. Wormald (stroke). R. E. Burgess coached, and he was accompanied by A. S. Garton who unfortunately will not be in residence next spring. The second boat was manned by J. B. Cavanagh (bow), G. H. Leigh, A. C. Hobson, and F. H. Sandford (stroke). New College should have a very smart crew, as they have three of last Term's eight rowing, viz., Sir W. Parker (bow), A. F. R. Wiggins (two), and R. C. Bourne (stroke) and the remaining place is filled by F. A. H. Pitman, a freshman. The second crew ought also to be pretty smart, inasmuch as it includes W. G. Pison, who rowed bow of one of the 1909 trials, and R. P. Hankinson and B. Burdekin (stroke), who were in the eight, whilst No. 2 thwart is filled by Dr. Ward, an Australian Freshman who has come up with an excellent reputation. Dr. Bourne has been coaching the first crew and the President the second. Trinity are represented by two crews and as usual have the Rev. D. Legge as mentor F. E. Buller, H. R. Mundey, P. H. Dodds, and J. C. Poole have been representing the first, and C. Bury, W. F. A. Stride, J. H. Dodds, and H. C. Doyne the second; Dodds rowing three in either crew for the time being. Keble have a four on consisting of A. E. Hodgkins, R. S. Renfree, E. K. Barber, and H. C. Thomas (stroke); J. C. Nankwell undertaking the coaching. University were out early in the week with a crew composed of H. G. Garrod (bow), J. Dodd, G. Cory Wright, and C. E. Tinne (stroke), but they were unrepresented yesterday. Christ Church, with C. A. Gladstone coaching, had a four on composed of F. G. Lendbetter (bow), A. F. R. Broadhurst, O. B. Pratt, and N. M. Bruce (stroke). The old Blue, N. Field, was in charge of a Brasenose four consisting of C. C. Whadcoat (bow), H. F. Underhill, A. G. Ellis, and W. G. Nott-Bower (stroke); and Balliol, coached by E. T. W. Grove, were represented by H. K. Denham (bow), R. W. Fletcher, J. W. Hernemann, and H. A. M. Wedderburn (stroke). The date of the trial eight race is provisionally fixed for Saturday, 2nd December but it is very improbable that the President will have an eight out until the end of the week owing to the crowded state of the river during the first few days of term.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—The coxswainless fours are fixed to start on 2nd November, and already there are eight crews practising for the trophy. The holders, Third Trinity, will be strongly represented. Two Blues will figure in the crew, Arbuthnot and Le Blanc Smith. G. E. Tower is slightly indisposed and his position at stroke is occupied by L. S. Lloyd. Their second boat is stroked by Thoresby Jones. In the First Trinity four C. F. Burnand is at three and D. C. Colreus, the cricket Blue, at stroke, S. E. Swann, the Blue is figuring at three in the Trinity Hall four with N. B. Whitfield at stroke. Other crews at work are Calus, Emmanuel, Pembroke, and Jesus Several candidates are practising for the Colquhoun Sculls, which are arranged for 16th 17th and 18th November.

MEERUT AUTUMN TOURNAMENT.

1ST KING'S DRAGOON GUARDS vs. 18TH K. G. O. LANCERS.—This was the first game in the opening round played on the 1st instant. The K. D. G.'s won by 11 goals to 4.

First Chukker.—The Dragoon Guards attacked throughout and scored twice.

Second Chukker.—The Lancers pressed but were driven back and Weinholt put through for the K. D. G.'s. The Lancers got going again on change of ends and hit two goals.

Third Chukker.—The 18th kept up the pressure and Marsh put them on terms. An abortive run by the Dragoons was followed by midfield play. Here a foul was given against the 18th and Leslie Cheape scored from the free hit. The Dragoons had the best of the remainder of the period and Weinholt added another goal to their score.

Fourth Chukker.—The Dragoons were on the offensive and hit a goal and Weinholt scored another soon after, the same player putting on a further goal on change of ends. Another shot for goal by the K. D. G.'s just went out wide.

Fifth Chukker.—The Lancers kept their opponents busy defending and Mills scored from a long shot. Up and down play followed till Cheape got on and hit a goal.

Sixth Chukker.—The 18th were penned in their own territory and two good efforts by the K. D. G.'s were obstructed by ponies. A foul against the Dragoons gave the 18th a chance but the hit was unsuccessful. The K. D. G.'s were back again shortly after and scored another goal shortly before time was called. K. D. 13TH HUSSARS "B" vs. 3RD SKINNER'S HORSE "B."—The Hussars had all the best of the game and ran out victorious by 9 goals to nil.

First Chukker.—The Hussars pressed and scored two goals, Richardson and Kennedy being responsible.

Second Chukker.—Level play for a spell. Then the Hussars got on and Kennedy scored. The 18th kept up the pressure and after two shots had gone out wide, Rees put the ball through, a fifth goal being scored on change of ends.

Third Chukker.—Midfield play, Kennedy eventually adding to the Hussar's total. Play continued in Skinner's Horse ground and Richardson scored another goal.

Fourth Chukker.—Skinner's Horse were kept on the defensive and Kennedy put through once more, up and down play closing the period.

Fifth Chukker.—The Hussars had several runs to their opponents' flags but the chukker ended without score.

Sixth Chukker.—The 13th got away and hit a goal. Desultory play closed the game. Final score : 13th Hussars, 9 goals; Skinner's Horse, nil. Teams :—

1ST KING'S DRAGOON GUARDS vs. 13TH HUSSARS "B" TEAM.—The second round opened with this game on the 3rd instant, a fast game ending in a win for the K. D. G.'s by 7 goals to 2.

First Chukker.—The ball moved up and down the field and both goals were visited in turn but there was no score till shortly before time Cheape drew first blood for the Dragoons.

Second Chukker.—Play was for the most part in the Hussars' territory but the defence was sound and the period ended without score.

Third Chukker.—The Dragoons got away and Weinholt scored. Midfield play till a foul was given against the Dragoons. The free hit failed and after a spell of level play Hatfield scored a goal and Weinholt followed it up with another.

Fourth Chukker.—Play was very level throughout this period. The Hussars scored a goal through Richardson.

Fifth Chukker.—The Dragoons ran down but failed to score. Offside was next given against them and they had to bring the ball in from behind their line. They carried it down and hit a goal in a strlee. The Hussars were next on the offensive and looked like scoring but their shot was diverted.

Sixth Chukker.—The Hussars pressed and Kennedy hit a goal. On changing ends Weinholt ran the ball down and Cheape hit a goal for the Dragoons, Spurrier adding to the score before the call of time. Final score : K. D. G.'s 7 goals; 13th Hussars "B" 2 goals. Teams :—

17TH LANCERS' "A" vs. MEERUT GYMKHANA.—The Lancers proved too strong for their opponents and won by 12 goals to 2.

First Chukker.—The 17th got away first and hit a goal, the Gymkhana equalising very soon after.

Second Chukker.—A good run by Miles, but his final shot went out wide. A scrimmage in front of the Gymkhana goal enabled the Lancers to put the ball through and they obtained a third goal before the close of the period.

Third Chukker.—The 17th got on and scored and Miles notched a point for the Gymkhana.

Fourth Chukker.—Fast play, the Lancers adding another goal.

Fifth Chukker.—The 17th attacked throughout this period and put on three goals without response.

Sixth Chukker.—The Lancers continued to hold the upper hand and pressing throughout this chukker scored four more goals. Final score : 17th Lancers, 12 goals; Gymkhana, 2 goals. Teams :—

Umpires :—Captains Mills and Fielden.

17TH LANCERS "B" vs. 3RD SKINNERS' HORSE.—This was a very well contested game till the fifth chukker when two accidents handicapped the 3rd and the Lancers having the best of the last two periods won by 5 goals to 2.

First Chukker.—The Lancers were first to attack and after one unsuccessful shot the ball was put through. The 3rd got away on change of ends and equalised. Level play in midfield followed till Parbury got away and put the Lancers ahead once more.

Second Chukker.—The Lancers did all the attacking but their efforts were unavailing and the chukker ended without score.

Third Chukker.—Play was fast and level. Then the Lancers got away but were prevented from scoring. Towards the close of the period the Cavalry got away and hitting a goal made the score two all.

Fourth Chukker.—Fast up and down play, the period ending pointless.

Fifth Chukker.—The Lancers pressed, one of the Cavalry team coming down, but he was able to resume and on restarting Melville got away and scored for the Lancers. Two members of the Skinners' Horse collided soon after and Conway Gordon got a heavy fall. A run by each team followed but nothing resulted.

Sixth Chukker.—Conway Gordon's place was taken by a native officer and on starting the Lancers took up the offensive. They scored two goals without response and ran out winners by 5 to 2. Teams :—

13TH HUSSARS vs. ROYAL BERKSHIRES.—This was a fast game throughout, but the Hussars were too strong and eventually won by 10 goals to 2.

First Chukker.—The Hussars pressed throughout and scored 2 goals.

Second Chukker.—Play was very level in this period, neither team gaining any marked advantage and the chukker ending without score.

Third Chukker.—Fast play in which the 13th had the upper hand but all their efforts were unsuccessful and the score remained unchanged.

Fourth Chukker.—The Berkshires got away and scored their first goal, but it was not long before the 13th put through once again and led by 3 to 1.

Fifth Chukker.—A good combined run by the Berkshires resulted in a goal. Then the Hussars got going again and put on two more goals.

Sixth Chukker.—The Hussars had all the best of the play in this period and scoring in quick succession ultimately won by 10 goals to 2. Teams :—

Semi-Finals.

The two games in the semi-finals were played on the 6th instant in the presence of a large gathering of spectators. The Staff and R. A. M. C. were "at home" on the grounds. Play was fast and hard in both games but the K. D. Gs. and the 17th Lancers A were too good for their respective opponents and both won by big margins.

KING'S DRAGOON GUARDS vs. 17TH LANCERS "B" TEAM.

First Chukker.—The Dragoons ran down and Spinner scored, the same player adding a second goal on changing ends.

Second Chukker.—The Lancers attacked and Melville transferred to Egerton who scored. A run by the Dragoons was stopped for offside and they had to bring the ball in from behind their line. They invaded the Lancers' territory again and Cheape hit a goal.

Third Chukker.—The Dragoons kept up the pressure and Weinholt added to the score. A foul against the Dragoons was the next item of importance. The free hit was stopped but after a spell of midfield play, Turner got away and scored for the Lancers.

Fourth Chukker.—Level play till Melville got away and scored for the 17th. Another run by the Lancers a little later ended in the ball going out wide. Then the Dragoons attacked and Weinholt scored twice before the close of the period.

Fifth Chukker.—The Dragoons kept the Lancers busy defending throughout this period and added another goal to their score.

Sixth Chukker.—The Dragoons pressed and Weinholt scored. Then the Lancers got away and Melville hit a goal at the end of a good run. Before time was called the Dragoons were away again and Weinholt notched their ninth point. Final score: K. D. Gs., 9 goals; 17th "B," 4 goals. Teams as before.

Umpires:—Major Richardson and Captain Mills.

13TH HUSSARS "A" vs. 17TH LANCERS "A."

First Chukker.—The Lancers were first to press but the Hussars cleared and Vanneck running down opened the scoring. He had another try at goal shortly after but just missed. Then the Lancers got away and Dubs hit a goal.

Second Chukker.—Up and down play till Dubs got away and put the Lancers ahead. They did not, however, hold this advantage for long, for Jones put them on terms on changing ends. But the Lancers were credited with two more points ere the close of the period.

Third Chukker.—The Lancers attacked throughout this chukker and Lockett scored 2 goals.

Fourth Chukker.—The 17th took the ball down but the Hussars got possession and brought it back. Taylor's shot at goal being stopped by a pony. The Lancers returned to the attack and Dubs scored.

Fifth Chukker.—Midfield play, a run by Vanneck was unsuccessful and then the Lancers got down and hit a goal. Two abortive runs by the Hussars were followed by a good individual effort by Vanneck who put the ball through.

Sixth Chukker.—Vanneck got away and scored another goal. Thereafter the Lancers did all the pressing and obtaining two more goals ran out winners by 10 goals to 4. Teams as before.

Umpires:—Major Richardson and Captain Mills.

With the exception of Nattore, all the other local clubs have opened their season and I am glad to see that Calcutta have won their two opening matches. In recent years the first few matches at the Gardens have generally been lost, but this year the C. C. C. have started in promising fashion. The Maharaja of Nattore, who has been on a long tour, has just arrived and consequently there has been a delay in starting this year. Nattore's team is generally composed of players from Poona and Bombay and this year Nattore will put in the field a stronger side than he has ever had, for in addition to the players from the Western Presidency he has secured two good all rounders from Ajmere.

With the exception of J. D. Guise, who, so far, has been conspicuous by his absence, all the regular Calcutta players have assisted their club, and several of these have showed to advantage with both "bat and ball," but I have noticed during my seventeen years' experience of local cricket that the seasons when Calcutta can put out a very powerful eleven, are just the seasons when no strong outside combinations come over, and that the Xmas week matches generally prove very one-sided—the visiting teams either winning easily or Calcutta having it all their own way.

As stated, Calcutta this year appears to have a very strong team—in batting at all events, and of the new members N. G. Moore and A. J. Carter appear to be the pick. The latter against the Sporting Union on Sunday signalised his début by a dashing hit 68 (not out). Carter's innings was not faultless, but taking all things into consideration, the light being very trying, his display was a very creditable one. Moore in this match scored 30 before he fell to a splendid catch by P. Banerji at long on. This was Moore's only chance and judging by the many excellent strokes he made, this player should be of great service to the club.

It was pleasing to see A. C. Von Ernsthausen, the old Oxford and Surrey player, assisting his club and as usual he distinguished himself with the ball by securing five wickets at the cost of 11 runs. It is to be hoped, however, that Ernsthausen will play oftener than he has done during the last two seasons. The South African cricketer Given Wilson, as usual, batted soundly and J. C. Sewell also shaped well. The Sporting Union were all out for 66, while Calcutta registered 193 for eight wickets.

The Rangers generally beat Ballygunge and their first match this season was no exception to the rule. On paper Ballygunge looked strong enough to win by an innings and as the Rangers were all out for a meagre total of 109 and the Suburban Club with only four wickets down had registered 76 runs with such reliable batsmen as White, Bisseker, Hoerder, Hon'ble S. J. Best and F. Gould to go in, it looked any odds on Ballygunge winning. But cricket is a game of surprises and Ballygunge all succumbed for 107 and lost by 2 runs

Last Saturday in a half day match between Calcutta and the Oriental Sporting, the latter made a miserable show and the home team had declared with the score at 172 for only four wickets and dismissed their opponents for 62. The Mahomedans of Bengal have made very poor progress in cricket and the only strong combination in India are the Mahomedan cricketers from Aligarh. The Oriental Sporting were poor in batting, bowling and fielding, but as the office bearers of this club are keen in the interest of sport, there are now every prospect of general improvement. Local Indian cricket would improve greatly if one or two of the leading clubs, which have several wealthy members, could get out English "Pros" to coach the men, as has been done in Bombay and other places in India.

In the match between the Customs and Telegraph, which the former won, M. Quiterio and A. Cross did best, and the latter although not so finished a cricketer as Quiterio has strengthened the club.

Lack of judgment in captaining a team has often proved disastrous to a side, especially in half day matches and had A. E. Cooper of the Rangers declared a bit earlier than he did, his club would have beaten the Mahomedan Sporting on Saturday afternoon. The Rangers in two hours knocked up 162 for nine wickets and gave their opponents an hour to get the runs. The Mahomedans of course played for a draw, and they got it, nine of their wickets falling for 80 runs. Had Cooper applied the closure fifteen minutes earlier, his side would probably have won, for a defeat for the Rangers was out of the question.

Dalhousie and the Aryans played a very even draw and as the latter are the strongest local Indian combination, the Trades' Club did remarkably well. G. Chestney, at one time of the Howrah United Club, has not struck form, but the old Trans-Hooghly player is a fine all-round cricketer and ought soon be seen to advantage.

In the inter-club match at Ballygunge between the Club and the Chummeries, the home side scored 319 for eight against the Chummeries 158 all out. S. A. White scored 129 for the winners, this being the first three-figure innings of the season.

On Sunday at St. Xavier's the Customs beat the Park Street Club by 32 runs. Marsden, who invariably bowls well on these occasions, took 8 wickets for 37 runs.

The Horse.

HINTS TO BEGINNERS ON THE SADDLE HORSE AND HIS USE

By JOHN GELPIN.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE HALTER TWITCH.

THE halter twitch is an instrument of the greatest value to the horsebreaker. It is of American invention and was brought into India by Captain Hayes. It is extremely simple, all that is required being a halter, a couple of yards of soft cord about as thick as an ordinary office pencil, and a metal ring about an inch and a half in diameter to which one end of the cord should be spliced. To prepare the twitch for use put the halter on the horse, attach the ring end of the cord to the buckle or D. on the near side by a half hitch, pass the cord over the horse's head, down the other side, in between his upper lip and his gums, up the left side, through the ring, and let the end hang down. It will be obvious that if the end hanging down be jerked the part passing between the horse's upper lip and his gums will tighten and cause him pain and that the pain will cease on the strain on the cord being relaxed. This is the great point of difference between the old twitch and the halter twitch. The old twitch hurt the horse during the whole time it was employed whether he played up or not.

Stephens'
writes a rich scarlet-red colour.
Order it because it is important to have the best red ink as well as the best blue-black.
RESOLUTELY REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.

The use of the halter twitch is as simple as its manufacture. There is only one secret in it and that is always to use the same word of command every time the twitch is put into operation.

Let us suppose that the horse refuses to be saddled. Put the halter twitch on him, take the cord in your hand, and tell the syce to put the saddle on. The horse will repeat whatever defence he has hitherto used, probably a plunge away from the saddle. As he does so say "Steady" and give him a severe jab with the twitch at the same moment and hold on. This will bring him up all standing. He may try to break away the first time or two but all that is necessary is to hang on to the cord of the twitch. It is well to wear a glove or the cord may cut one's hand, and to take a turn or two of the cord to prevent it slipping from the grasp. The instant the horse is quiet relax the strain on the cord. Once more the syce approaches with the saddle, again the horse objects, again the word "steady" and the discipline. In five minutes he will be saddled and girthed. The next day the word "steady" will probably suffice if it has been invariably used with the twitch. A horse can be made steady to shoe, to mount, to harness, to put in the shafts, or for any other purpose in a few minutes by this means, and so long as he lives the word "steady" will have a sobbering effect on him.

Before I knew of this invaluable aid to horsebreaking I sold one or two horses as being incurably vicious which would have given me no trouble had I only known the cure. One was a first class pony, a winner on the flat and over hurdles when he could be got to the post, but such a brute to mount that I sold him at auction in disgust. My work in those days necessitated my crossing two ferries daily. I used to spend an hour at each ferry in mounting whenever I had this brute out, for the boats were not such as one could ride a horse into. If I had that pony now I should have him quiet to mount in ten minutes.

No apprehension need be felt that the horse will attack the man with the cord. Such a thing has, I believe, never been known to happen even in Captain Hayes's battles with real savages.

I am always rather loth to use this apparatus with good tempered horses that are only above themselves if other means will suffice, as it undoubtedly causes the horse great pain. But the amount of pain is exactly regulated by the amount of resistance, and if no other means will effect my purpose I use the halter twitch without hesitation. It is quick and permanent in its effects and the horse gives in so soon that the amount of pain suffered is usually small, though it is severe in degree.

I prefer to use soft cotton cord for the twitch as hemp sometimes causes abrasion of the mucous membrane. However wounds of that kind on the gums heal very readily and are not painful.

CHAPTER XIV.

VICES.

Jibbing and Rearing.—The worst vice of which a horse can be guilty is a rooted determination to do no work and to go nowhere but to his stable. This leads to rearing, jibbing, and a host of minor vices such as lying down with the rider, etc. A horse with a character of this kind is a thorough cad and I know of no means of curing him though I have seen reforms effected in one or two cases by a prolonged and brutal, though thoroughly deserved, assault on the horse until he gave in. This requires pluck, a strong seat, and an absolute disregard for the animal's feelings, and is not everybody's game. I have known two countrybred geldings cured for a time of rearing and jibbing by the rider dismounting and giving them a severe thrashing. In both cases the discipline had to be repeated about once a fortnight. I have known this to fail in other cases but it is worth trying if the severity of the punishment is not objected to. Personally I have no sympathy with horses of this kind and I consider any effective means of treatment justifiable. I have known a thorough bred gelding and a half bred mare to be permanently cured of jibbing in harness by the hearty application of a heavy hunting crop thong across their loins, and I have seen a gelding cured of refusing to go near a polo ball and another of refusing to jump by merciless thrashings. My only objection to this treatment is that it is not always effective. Hayes recommends making a horse lie down and keeping him down until he gives in. If the case is taken in time this sometimes effects a cure. The horse's head is tied to a surcingle round his body when he is on the ground and so long as his head is thus drawn round to his side he cannot rise. A crupper must be used or the horse will pull the surcingle forward. Straw should be placed under him and he should be allowed to kick and struggle as long as he pleases. When he begins to groan and give signs of surrender he is allowed to get up and is tried at his work again. If he again gives trouble he is put down again and kept down for a good long time. He will generally give in for the time being sooner or later. The worst of this treatment is that if too prolonged it is apt to break a horse's spirit, but, as Captain Hayes justly remarks, the only object in dealing with such a brute is to make him serviceable and one need not bother about his spirit.

Personally I am of the opinion that really bad jibbers are not worth the time and trouble spent in trying to cure them. Moreover they are always liable to relapse after an apparent cure, especially if they fall into the hands of a weak or timid rider.

A horse cannot rear if his hind legs are moving. If you have to mount a rearer it is a good plan to have a man handy with a whip ready to lace into the horse directly he attempts to rear. If it is decided to keep such a brute great pains should be taken with his mouthing. If he is not a very bad case you may cure him by getting him extra well balanced and collected. Horses that rear but do not jib are generally curable. They rear as a defence against the restraint of the bit and breaking is all that is needed.

When a horse rears with you catch hold of his mane half way up his neck with your left hand, keep the reins slack, and lean as far forward as you can with your head on one side of his neck. As he comes down push yourself back with your left arm so that he may not get the chance of sending you over his head with a kick or buck. I like to have my feet out of the stirrups so as to be ready to get clear of the horse if he falls, in which case one should push out from the neck with one's hands and be very alert on landing. If a horse's forelegs drop down to his sides look out. He has lost his balance and the sooner you quit the better. As long as he paws the air he is safe.

The best thing to do with a determined rearer is to get rid of him, by shooting if you can afford to.

Bucking.—Very few people can sit a real buck so it is fortunate that buckjumpers are very much scarcer than they used to be and are seldom seen. I remember when there were always two or three, if not more, within the circle of my acquaintance but at the time of writing I do not know one. I cannot say much about sitting buckjumpers as I am unable to do it but what I have heard on the subject is given in the chapter on "Seat." The chief point seems to be to keep one's weight so far back as to retain one's balance under all circumstances. Unfortunately one generally tumbles off before the point of balance is ascertained. Although I cannot say much about sitting a buck I can say, with every confidence, that if a horse is carefully broken in as recommended in previous chaptus there is practically no chance of his becoming a buckjumper. Remember to let the saddle warm up on the back before mounting young ones. They should be saddled and led round for half an hour or more before they are wanted and should then be mounted very quietly and made to stand for a minute before moving off (unless they are inclined to jib). Their heads can be kept up by running reins, and their backs can be got down by driving them in the long reins before mounting them until they become friendly and obedient. They should be accustomed while in the long reins to things touching them in the ribs for a lot of naughtiness is caused by ticklishness. Horses treated in this way and kept in regular work soon forget all about bucking even if they have once practised it.

If anybody is standing handy when a horse begins to buck he should at once lace into him with a whip and shout at him. The horse cannot possibly behave worse than he is doing and will have to stop bucking to get away from the whip.

There is no doubt that the knees should be well bent when on a rough horse. The last time I was bucked off I was trying a horse in a strange saddle of which the stirrup leathers were too long for me even when in the last hole. I was in tennis flannels and pumps and did not expect a "plant." To reach the irons I had to straighten my knee and at the first buck I went as far as the reins would let me. The whole thing was a bit of fun arranged by some friends who came and asked me to try the horse while I was playing bridge after arranging the long leathers and a slippery saddle.

THE CESAREWITCH AND CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

The Second October and Houghton Meetings at Newmarket, the latter of which brought the racing season to a close so far as "headquarters" is concerned, were both remarkable; the first mentioned fixture for a record performance on the part of Willonyx, who won the Cesarewitch with the heavy impost of 9st. 5lb. on his back, and the other for an outburst of hooting and booing, the like of which has never before been heard on Newmarket Heath.

Although Mr. Howard's horse made turf history by bearing his burden of 131lb. to victory over the trying 2½ miles Cesarewitch course, it a debatable point whether his performance was better than that of The White Knight in the year Demure won, for Colonel Kirkwood's champion was only beaten three parts of a length under 9st. 12lbs., and he would have pulled through with a pound or two less, while he was giving a mountain of weight, 3st. 3lb. to be exact, to the winner, who had some previous good form to her name, and no less than 24lb. to the third horse, Wuffy, an Ebor Handicap winner.

On the other hand, Mirador, who only lost this year's Ebor through lack of condition, was receiving nearly the same amount of weight from Willonyx, and the latter reduced him to the level of a hack, finding only one tenacious adversary in the final burst from the Bushes, and that Martingale II. The filly was making an impression on the top-weight in the last hundred yards, although he was not nearly "all out" to win by three parts of a length, for Higgs rode him with the hands alone, his orders being to use the whip only as a last resource. Another couple of pounds would have turned the scales against him, however, for when he returned to the paddock he had the appearance of a horse who had gone very nearly to his utmost.

Willonyx must be given this much additional credit, however. There was a lengthy delay at the post, chiefly owing to the bolting of Wolftoi, and although the Beckhampton crack is framed on weight-carrying lines every minute lost would have the effect of setting him at some disadvantage with the rest. His was a most handsome victory, and in thorough keeping with his other triumphs in the Chester Cup, Ascot Stakes, and Ascot Gold Cup this year. Although it was thought he was badly handicapped with at least two of his opponents, the result just illustrates what grit and stamina will do, backed up by an ability to act on firm ground.

Willonyx was not allowed to rest on his Cesarewitch laurels for English race-goers had the pleasure of seeing him once more in the Jockey Club Cup. In this event he scared away all opposition (including Lemberg) with the exception of the Cesarewitch second, Martingale II, but if it caused him an effort to defeat Lord Cadogan's mare in the long distance handicap of the Second October Meeting, he had no trouble whatever in disposing of her in the cup race for he galloped her to a standstill and won by 20 lengths and thus wound up a brilliant series of performances which ends his racing carreer, for he now goes to the stud.

What a storm of cheering broke out as he returned to the paddock! And what a contrast to the hostile demonstration when Sir William Cooke's grand Irish gelding, Hornet's Beauty, a three-year-old that holds an unbeaten certificate in 18 races in England, cantered away with the Scarborough Stakes on the previous day! This horse which by its long series of victories has earned for itself the title of "The Flying Irishman" was from the time the weights appeared for the Cambridgeshire until the day before its decision a sound favourite for that race, and what is more it had been backed in many double event bets with Willonyx. On the Sunday before the race, the gelding was tried at home with another Irish three-year-old in the same ownership named, Mahsud, and although "The Beauty" easily had the better of the spin, its stable connections decided to rely on Mahsud whom they thought was the better at the weights, and the unsexed son of Trendonnis was struck out in favour of the other. That the stable estimation was wrong was proved by the running of Masud in the Cambridgeshire, for he finished in the ruck behind Mr. S. Joel's Long Set, while the fact that Hornet's Beauty had not gone off was proved later the same afternoon by the easy manner in which it "lobbed" away from Olearia in the Scarborough Stakes.

The success of Long Set, in the Cambridgeshire was one of the easiest that has been gained in that import "Back End" Handicap for years. This 33 to 1 chance won pulling up from Lord Carnarvon's Mustapha, who thus finished second in the same race three years in succession, and the Lincoln Handicap and Select Stakes winner, Mercutio.

Such an easily-gained victory astounded the spectators. They stood dumb, more interested—amazed, for the moment, in the fact that Mustapha was again running second than that Long Set had won the Cambridgeshire by five lengths. It was a severe blow to the value of form. The Duke of York Stakes running was but an illusion, for if one thing more than another looked certain as things on the turf can be certain it was that Mustapha, who had also finished second in the Duke of York Stakes, while Long Set was not in the first nine, would confirm that running, for Long Set had only a pull of 5lb. in the weights. In fact it hardly seemed feasible that Long Set could possibly turn the tables on Trepida, who had 15lb. the worse of the argument. But it is plain that Long Set had come on tremendously since Kempton. There is no other explanation for it unless that something happened at Kempton that escaped all eyes; for Mustapha was never better and even if he was a trifle slow to move as compared with the electric dash of Long Set, half a mile out he always had a clear course, and there is no excuse for him.

From the end of Newmarket to the finish of the English flat-racing season proper is not a long way. The crack two-year-olds of the year have already gone into winter quarters, and if all goes well with them next year's classics should prove interesting as no one of them can be said to be "out by itself" on the two-year-old form. Mr. J. B. Joel's White Star won the Dewhurst Plate easily enough it is true, but he was beaten in the Middle Park Plate by both his stable companion Absurd and Sweeper II., and Absurd subsequently lost to the 100 to 1 chance, Coriander, owned by "Lucky" Major Loder, of Pretty Polly fame, while other youngsters of great promise are Lomond Belleisle, and Lom..

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

We are glad to welcome Mr. A. A. Apcar back to Calcutta and to see the senior Steward of the C.T.C. looking so well. Mr. Apcar has made a very good recovery from his illness and, thanks to the fine climate of Bangalore, he is now practically himself again. Mr. Apcar arrived at the latter end of last week and his horses in charge of Watson came on Friday morning and were all down at the course on Saturday.

The string comprises Vavasor, Neith, Mayfowl, Lawn Sand, Five Crown, Sequent, The Cockatoo, Royal Scotland, and the three new ones, Koonowla, Lady Lucretia and Bachelor's Art. Koonowla is the chestnut colt by Cyllene out of Handmaid, whose performances and pedigree were given in these columns at the time of his purchase earlier in the present year. He is a beautifully bred colt as Handmaid is by Hampton out of Barmaid by Galliard out of Loch Garry, who is by Blair Athol out of Mayonnaise. Koonowla is a smart looking colt and a nice level mover. Lady Lucretia is a brown three-year-old filly by Cupbearer out of Lady Mystery and she won a five furlong sprint at the Curragh last April. Bachelor's Art is a chestnut four-year-old by Tredennis out of Blanche Nef. He has run over hurdles and he also won on the flat at Phœnix Park at the back end of last season. These new ones were all selected in England for Mr. Apcar by General Sir E. Locke-Elliot, who was instrumental in sending out Mayfowl, Lawn Sand, etc. These three new ones all look useful, and Koonowla is probably the best of them. Lady Lucretia and Bachelor's Art landed in very poor condition. Koonowla is in the Maiden Horse Plate at the Second Extra and we shall then have some chance of seeing how he shapes against a field that is not one of outstanding quality and does not, as was the case last year, number amongst it a horse of Capture's class. Mayfowl and Lawn Sand naturally attract most attention in this string and last year's winner is the horse that is at present in the foreground of the picture for season 1911-12. Mayfowl is looking, as he always has done since he has been in India, hard and healthy and this is about all that his many friends and admirers could reasonably ask of him. He was not ready when he ran at Poona and his trainer is quite content to totally disregard any form he then displayed. All that his supporters need to be satisfied about is that the horse is in good health—the rest is of no importance, for he has never given his stable a gallop in private bar once when in leading Neith in her work he performed with surprising brilliancy. But as a rule he is not inclined to play his part at a rehearsal. As long as he is one of those performers who is "alright on the night" that is all that need concern us! Horses do not as a rule improve with age in India and though we have had instances in connection with the Viceroy's Cup of many double and treble winners it is not always safe to gamble on its happening again. Old Myall King was a notable instance of an evergreen and he was a gelding, and a triple winner. Sprightly was another; Highborn another, both geldings and both double winners of this Cup. Great Scot and Fitzgrafton, double winners, were entires who secured the race in years when the opposition was not very formidable and they did not last at their best much over two seasons. The gelding in India, however, is undoubtedly the class that stands the climate best, and provided nothing goes amiss and he is a sound horse both constitutionally and down below, there is no reason why he should not last long and retain sufficient brilliance to go on winning first-class races in this country for a more or less indefinite period. Watson does not consider the opposition this season to be formidable and is full of confidence in his horse being able to repeat the success of last December. His view will probably be shared by a very large number of other people. The chief menace in our opinion will come from Aborigine and particularly from Mr. Galstaun's horse Wave Bird—in spite of the fact that it is said that Fergusson is sweeter on Prince Rupert's chances. Personally we have lost all faith in the latter after his display of last year and we also think after seeing the horse on his arrival here that he looks too gross and far more a candidate for the harem than the race-course. Wave Bird when he ran at Home was always, so we understand from those who know him, light in flesh and a bit inclined to run up. He is at present the very reverse of this and carries a good deal too much beef. The truth is that Fergusson was afraid to send these horses along in Poona and did not enjoy the advantages of Bangalore in having a good course to work on. Both his horses look to us to be too big and lusty and we doubt, with the comparatively short space of time before him, he can hope to get off the avoirdupois. A race or two in Poona would probably have done both Prince Rupert and Wave Bird a world of good and it would have been better for them to have had it early in the season than close on to the time of their big engagements in December. In any case we shall regard Wave Bird as Mr. Galstaun's "main attack" and Prince Rupert as a "covering movement." Papavero, the mare that Wave Bird beat at Salisbury in the 1½ mile City Bowl, giving her 12lb., just previous to being shipped to India, has since then shown very good form against good horses, notably when she won the Prince Edward Handicap, 2 miles (£1,280), at Manchester with 7st. 2lb. from King Midas 8st. 9lb. and Yellow Slave 8st. 10lb. and a very good field, including Long Boat, Cardinal Beaufort, etc, behind the placed ones. Papavero endorsed this form by her prominent position in the Cesarewitch, in which she ran third to the champion handicap horse of the year Willonyx and Martingale II. There is, however, other collateral form to show that in selecting Wave Bird to represent him in this year's Cup Mr. Galstaun made no error and did not buy at random and this is the position of Willaura in the Liverpool Autumn Cup. This horse beat Mustapha out of second place for that event and finished a fair second to the winner, Trepida. At Gatwick this year in the 2 mile Prince's Handicap Wave Bird beat Willaura at practically level weights, Mr. Galstaun's horse being as a matter of fact in receipt of 2lb.

Against all this undoubtedly useful information and undeniable form we must place the fact that in Mayfowl we have a seasoned horse who, like so many other very moderate horses from Home, has improved tremendously since he has been in India, and like Sprightly, who was a very ordinary miler when in England, has turned out to be a good enough horse to win against the best that can be produced in India. The matter of acclimatization is, however, so tremendous a pull in a horse's favour that it outbalances all other considerations. We are no believers in an attempt to get a horse ready in a hurry in India. Mr. Apcar and Watson, who between them have had a larger share of success than any other owner and trainer in India, have always acted on the principle of giving new horses plenty of time. Neith and Vavasor were, it is true, asked to race in their first year in India, but one broke down as the result of a fall on the Poona course and Vavasor is a horse whose conformation is all against him on the hard courses of this country and who was going as sore as could be when he arrived in Calcutta last year. But festina lente is undoubtedly the motto for success and the best proof of the pudding is in the eating of it. "On the book" Mayfowl has a formidable rival in Wave Bird and the same may be said of Aborigine, but who shall say what the next three weeks may show us? Personally we have every belief in Mr. Apcar's last year's winner.

Lawn Sand is not a taking horse at any time but he is said to have now entirely recovered the effects of the operation and to be doing well. He showed considerable brilliance at the back end last season and we can only hope that he will repeat that form in the season to come.

There have been many other arrivals during the week and Stevenson got here early with the Chief of Manavadar's three, old Realm, who won over hurdles recently in Poona and was the hero of the Australian Cup of 1907 and the Sydney Cup of the same year and of the Australian Hurdle Race and the V.R.C. Grand National Hurdle Race of 1906. The other two are Haut Park and Comet. The former has won a good many races in Australia and is fairly smart up to a mile. Comet is a big chestnut horse and has performed well at the unregistered meetings in Australia.

Ramshaw has arrived with his string, which includes Black Douglas, who performed well in Poona and has arrived here looking extremely well; Ballymaclune, the new Irish horse owned by Messrs. Paris and Das; Victo and Once Again, late Jeanne Le Folle, the two mares sent out by Mr. Craig McKerrow; Sanhedrin, by Santoi—The Israelite; The Cellarer, by St. Simon out of Beaker, Barm—a smart looking chestnut Australian colt by Maltster out of Pose; Decidedly, another of Messrs. Paris and Das's and a very fine stamp of horse; old Sholto, the jumper and winner of the Poona Grand National; Ragged Maid, and last but not least little Fizz, who, however, is not to be raced but will probably be sent home to the stud in Ireland. The little horse is looking a perfect picture and is in great heart. Well-bred as he is, he ought to be able to write his name still farther on the scroll of honour, and his many friends and admirers in India will no doubt watch his future career with much interest. No honester or gamer horse has ever been seen out in a race and he was, and still is for that matter, a great popular favourite.

Haynor and Poole, the latter of whom was in P. Peck's stable at Home and has come out to India this season to try his luck in the East, are at present doing riding work for Ramshaw. C. Barrett arrives here very shortly.

Thomas's horses arrived on Saturday and Sunday last and the following is the list of those he has for his present season:—Kilmarnock, Green Ware, The Master, Harene, Pressy, Whin, Tom Chaucer, John Wesley, Warrayure, Vernier, Tana, Lucullus, Peter Pan, The Point, Rapin, and probably very soon Annabean and The Witch.

Fisher, Kuhn, C. Hoyt, A. Hoyt, Poole, Hayhoe, Beaumont, M. Davis, J. Davis, Firth, Pegrem, Williamson, White, R. Morrison, A. Fergusson, T. Fergusson, Manley, Robinson, T. Southall are amongst the jockeys at present in Calcutta.

Wishart's horses have arrived all well from Bangalore and comprise the following: Mil, Sperry, Bomb, and Dalcimer (T. Scott's and H. H. the Kour Sahib of Patiala) and Retort. Hackler's Bloom. Hackler's Girl, Plain Mister, Mystic Circle, Skehanagh, Blenheim Orange, Lady Teazle, Don Urbano, and Orange Pekoe, (Mr. Holmes). They have not yet been down to the course.

Bleach's horses were all on view on Tuesday last and Last Call was naturally a centre of attraction. The horse is everything that has been said of him! He is by no means the sort that you would turn round and look at, but having looked at him you would look again. He is a sturdy compact little brown horse showing plenty of power and substance. His form in Poona was so far below that which he showed at Home that there is no knowing what to make of him and it will be therefore fairer to him to reserve judgment till he has been seen out in a race or two here. They said of him in Poona that he had entirely lost all his dash but that remains to be seen. The others are Bachelor's Knot (a new one that won three times in Poona), Bambino, Master Delaval, Refresher, Solution, Soultline (who does not come to the course), Borgie, Forfeit, Pic Nic, Boat Song, Little Corporal 14-0½, Kiora 14-0½, and two Arabs, Towfik Pasha and Little Kabul. All these horses are looking well and Bleach reports that they have thriven well at Poona during the hot weather. Both Bambino and Refresher will possibly run over jumps and are said to perform very well.

Gee arrived from Darjeeling on Tuesday last with Merry Eyes, Charlotte, Water Lily and Portland who are engaged at the Tollygunge Club Meeting.

THE Thomas who is involved in the alleged horse stealing case in Madras is not the well-known trainer Thomas who is now in Calcutta.

WE regret to learn that Mr. Walmsley has lost his new one Concert Pitch by St. Ambulo out of Concert who was in Ramshaw's stable. The horse caught a chill on the way up from Bangalore and succumbed to hæmorrhage of the lung on Monday night.

WILD BOY has hopelessly broken down having gone in both back tendons when at slow work on the Calcutta course on Monday.

IT is stated that limited permission will be granted to bookmakers to make ante-post books on the Trials, Viceroy's Cup, His Majesty the King-Emperor's Cup and the Indian Grand National.

MR. CHARLES HARDING, the well-known bookmaker, has arrived in Calcutta, and will be betting at the meetings as usual.

THE first entries for the Calcutta Polo Tournament to be held during His Majesty the King's visit to Calcutta are very good and are as follows :—10th Hussars, 13th Hussars, 8th Hussars, K. D. G.'s, 4th Cavalry, H. E. the Viceroy's Staff, and the Calcutta Polo Club.

TREFIDA by Grebe out of Palotta, the winner of the Liverpool Autumn Cup, is owned by Mr. L. Clow. She won the Duke of York Stakes recently at Kempton, beating Mustapha, Knight of Honour, etc.; she ran fifth in the Cambridgeshire behind Long Set, Mustapha, Mercutio and Dandyprat. Last season she won twice, the Wheatsheaf Handicap 1 mile 60 yards, at Sandown, Blackstone and Merry Spinner being immediately behind her, and Sealed Orders, My Collar and Royal Escort amongst the field, and the Beckhampton Three-Year-Old Handicap 1 mile, at Newbury, beating Lady Edgar comfortably, Macsherry third.

IN a very interesting history of the Caulfield Cup in the last received Australasian "Terlinga" tells us of an incident which occurred in the year that Mr. R. M'Kenna trained the winner of that important event. The story is as follows :—

"Mr. Mat. O'Shanassy and Mr. Fred M'Evoy won next year (1888) with Chicago, who was trained by Mr. M'Kenna, now an Indian buyer. Chicago was a pretty good horse, in at 7st. 4lb. as a five-year-old, and a good stake was landed over him. It was, from all accounts, lucky for Chicago's owners that Dick Swiveller's leg gave way before the race. They were galloped together, I believe, and Dick Swiveller won very easily. He was a good horse, who would have won a big race if he had not been knocked about on hard courses with welter weights on his back. Tradition, sold not long afterwards for 3,500 guineas, was second and Bravo third to Chicago. This race, to all intents and purposes, marked the end of Gorry's career as a jockey. He was riding Bravo, and, coming to the last turn, he, when leading, came right across the field. No accident occurred, fortunately, but Spade Guinea (T. Sanders) and others were badly interfered with, and the report says :—'After the jockeys had returned to their room, Sanders, naturally incensed at Gorry's conduct in the race, got to high words with Bravo's jockey, and finally they resorted to fisticuffs, but were separated.' Then the stewards took a hand. They fined Sanders £2 for striking Gorry, and Gorry was disqualified for three months. He did a little riding afterwards, but the Bravo incident really closed his brilliant career as a jockey. Never did he show to less advantage than on Bravo in that race. As a youngster he was superb on any horse."

Mr. M'Kenna is of course well known in India as the most successful selector of Viceroy's Cup winners, and he was instrumental in furnishing Mr. Apcar with Great Scot and Fitzgrafton, as well as other horses. Neith and Vavasor would both probably have won this race had they stood.

WE regret to learn that Mr. H. G. S. Tyler, Collector and Magistrate of Cawnpore, met with a serious accident while playing polo on Friday evening last. His pony came down and Mr. Tyler was thrown beaking his left arm at wrist and elbow. Latest advices pronounce him to be making favourable progress in hospital.

THE Calcutta Polo Club, represented by Messrs. C. W. N. Graham, W. Thomas, Riley and Pigott, recently won the Sonepore Polo Tournament.

THE polo tournament for the Royal Dragoons Cup opened at Lucknow on Monday, when two games were played, the 8th Hussars "A" team defeating the Gordon Highlanders by 5 goals to 3 and the Highland L. I. defeating the 8th Hussars "B" team by 5 goals to 4, the winning point being scored in an extra period.

THE various preliminary rounds to decide which teams are to represent the several divisions in the Football and Hockey Tournaments at the Delhi Durbar are being gradually got through and below will be found some results :—Hockey Finals. In the 2nd (Rawalpindi) Division the 84th Punjabis beat the 40th Pathans by 5 goals to nil.—In the 4th (Quetta) Division the 130th Baluchis beat the 58th Rifles by a goal to nil. In the 6th (Poona) Division the 12th Pioneers beat the 103rd Mahrattas by 3 goals to 1. In the 7th (Meerut) Division the 33rd Punjabis were the winners. REUTER wires from Melbourne that in a match for the world's professional sprint championship run off there on the 14th instant A. B. Postle beat Jack Donaldson (Victoria) at eighty yards in 7¾secs., while Donaldson beat Postle over a hundred yards in the time of 9¾secs. Donaldson also won the distance of 110 yards in 10¾secs. The grass track was used. The 100 yards and 110 yards timings equal world's records.

THE M.C.C. opened their Australian tour with a match against South Australia at Adelaide on the 10th instant. The match was played in glorious weather and there was a large attendance on each of the four days play lasted. The visitors won the toss and batted first, their score being 331 for 4 wickets when play closed for the day. P. F. Warner scored 112 not out with one chance and Gunn made 106. Next day Warner carried his score to 151 and Foster compiled 158 in fine style. The innings closed for 536 and South Australia then went in, making 85 for 4 wickets before stumps were drawn. They completed their innings for 141, Clem Hill being top scorer with 51. Following on South Australia put up 204 for 8 wickets when play closed, Crawford scoring 63 and Mayne 82 not out. The latter could only add two more runs to his score and the home team were all out for 228. The M.C.C. thus won by an innings and 167 runs.

MR. B. A. WHITE, of the Ballygunge C.C., recorded his second century this season when playing against the Bankers and Brokers last Sunday he made 117. On Saturday A. Aziz scored 109 not out for Nattore against the Oriental Sporting and earlier in the week, R. Colah put up 138, playing for the Parsees against the "Ironsides."

A VERY remarkable bowling performance was recorded in a match played at Kolar between the Kolar Gold Field C.C. and St. Joseph's College, Bangalore, on the 4th instant. H. Pereira bowled all ten of the Kolar batsmen for 67 runs.

A VERY successful cleek competition over 18 holes was put through at the Calcutta Ladies' Gold Club last week. There were between 20 and 30 competitors, and the prize presented by Mrs. A. Mathews was won by Mrs. Needham Windsor with 83—9=74.

A SERIES of wrestling matches under Government supervision between Gama, Kallu, Kikar Singh, Rahim and other celebrated wrestlers has been arranged for the Badshahi Mela at the Coronation Durbar. The matches will decide who the real Rustami Hindu is. One day will be reserved for wrestling matches among Indian soldiers.

THE annual general meeting of the Calcutta Golf Club was held last Friday at the Maidan Pavilion, under the presiding of Mr. E. J. Wright, the Captain of the Club.

The report and accounts for the year ending 30th September 1911 were placed before the meeting and passed.

The election of the following office-bearers was then confirmed :—Patron, Lord Hardinge; President, Mr. F. W. Duke; Vice-President, Mr. Geo. B. McNair; Captain, Mr. R. Duncan.

The following members were elected to act on the new Committee :—Messrs. J. G. Melrose, T. Drimmie, J. A. Tassie, R. M. Black, H. Danks, and J. D. Gatheral.

Mr. Duncan, the newly elected Captain, thanked the members for the honour done to him. He also proposed a vote of thanks to the retiring Captain and the retiring Committee which was carried with acclamation. This brought the proceedings to a close.

As will be seen from an advertisement appearing further on Mr. Kenneth Heilgers, 4, Commercial Buildings, Calcutta, has placed upon the market the Hupmobile, a 4-cylinder, 15-h.p. car which is used by thousands of business people for commercial and social uses. A car to have a ready sale in India and particularly among mofussil buyers, must be (1) moderate in cost, (2) reliable, (3) fool proof, (4) cheap in upkeep, and (5) well designed and finished. Under the advice of well known home authorities, the Hupp Car has been selected as the most suitable car embodying to the fullest extent these features. As to the Specification this is equivalent to any £500 cars on the market with tyres low in cost and cheap petrol consumption, and the agent desires to demonstrate the sound commercial aspect, apart from the intense luxury of the 15-h.p. 4-cylinder car in a hot climate, of purchasing a Hupp Car on its merits by the fact that with costs at a penny a mile more work can be accomplished by one Hupp than several horses. It might further be mentioned that Mr. Heilgers is willing at all times to make appointments and give trials free of cost.

THERE seems little doubt now that the recent announcement by Mr. McKenna has dealt the death-blow to English boxing. It was stated that if the object and intent of the combatants are to subdue each other by a violent blow until one can endure it no longer, the contest is illegal. But, on the other hand, a sparring match, the object of which is to win by skill and not by severity of injuries, is lawful. Owen Moran and Jim Driscoll had signed up to meet at Birmingham on the 16th instant, but promoter and principals in the fight were summoned to appear at Birmingham police court on Monday last on a charge of planning a breach of the peace. The summons was fought as a test case, Lord Lonsdale guaranteeing the costs of the defence. Numerous boxing experts were to have given evidence, and we await details of the proceedings with interest. The result was a decision by the Birmingham stipendiary that the proposed contest was illegal and the defendants have been bound over.

On account of very large entries for the Durbar Boxing Tournaments the limit of representatives from units has had to be reduced to 8 instead of 10. The condition by which 3 representatives from one unit are allowed to compete in the same weight in class A (Soldiers), and that by which a Regimental team may include 2 officers in class B, have not been altered.

The following regiments have full regimental teams competing for the Durbar Challenge Cup :—

The Royal Irish, the Black Watch, South Lancashire Regiment, Royal West Kent Regiment, Royal Munster Fusiliers, King's Own Scottish Borders, Essex Regiment, the Gordon Highlanders, the Northumberland Fusiliers, Royal North Lancashire Regiment, Durham Light Infantry, the Leinster Regiment, 1st Middlesex Regiment, the Welsh Fusiliers, the Royal Scots, the West Riding Regiment, the Lancashire Fusiliers, the Highland Light Infantry, 10th Hussars, and the Seaforth Highlanders.

In addition, the following units have teams varying from 7 to 4 entries :—

13th Hussars (7 entries), the Manchester Regiment (6 entries), "X." Battery, R. H. A. (4 entries), 4th King's Royal Rifles (7 entries), 4th Brigade, R. F. A. (6 entries), Mountain Artillery, Rawalpindi, (6 entries).

The following units are also represented with smaller entries in either class "A" or "B":—

"N" Battery, R. H. A. 64th Battery R. F. A. 9th Brigade, R. F. A., 17th R. F. A. 74th Company, R. G. A., 66th Battery, R. F. A., 18th Brigade, R. F. A., No. 2 Mountain Battery, 91st (H. B.), R. G. A. 1st King's Dragoon Guards, 17th Cavalry, Rifle Brigade, 34th Sikh Pioneers, the Border Regiment, the 23rd Cavalry, the Dorset Regiment, Eastern Bengal State Railway Volunteers, Assam-Bengal Railway Volunteers, 25th Punjabis, Central India Horse, 17th Lancers, 16th Rajputs, 107th Pioneers, 7th Dragoon Guards, 4th Worcester Regiment, Norfolk Regiment.

Class A.—Catch-weight 12 entries, Middle-weight, 49 entries, Light-weight, 74 entries, Feather-weight 78 entries, Bantam-weight, 58 entries.

Class B.—Catch-weight, 6 entries, Middle-weight 10 entries, Light-weight, 9 entries, Feather-weight 6 entries.

The Tournaments open at 9 P.M. on Monday, the 27th inst. and will continue each evening at the same time. The Final will take place on 15th December. There will be no fighting on Wednesday, 13th December, the night of the fireworks display, nor on Thursday, 14th December, the night preceding the finals.

Any communications on this matter should be addressed to the Honorary Secretary. Durbar Boxing Tournament, Durbar Concentration.

The amateur open lawn tennis championships of Western India will be decided at the Bombay Gymkhana on 26th February and following days. There will be gentlemen's singles and gentlemen's doubles. These events are open to all comers (amateurs), but the Committee reserve the right in their discretion of rejecting any entry without giving reasons. The events will be played on the made lawn tennis courts of the Bombay Gymkhana and all arrangements will be under the control of the Committee. Grass courts are not available for the tournament. All particulars from the Honorary Secretary.

The King's gift of 50 guineas to the Zoological Society after his recent visit to the Gardens at Regent's Park, is to be added to a fund to carry out alterations of the menagerie, among them being the construction of an outdoor crocodile pond and the erection of outdoor cages for the anthropoid apes and monkeys. The improvements are likely to cost about £3,300. It is also proposed to proceed with the erection of an aquarium and the formation of an outdoor panoramic display. The Duke of Bedford, the president of the Society, has also subscribed 50 guineas, whilst handsome donations have also been received from the Earl of Altamont, the Earl of Cromer, Sir Charles Cust, and Sir E. G. Loder, Bt.

Messrs. Barton Son and Company, the well-known jewellers and silversmiths of Bangalore, have just despatched a silver casket for presentation by the people of Aden to His Majesty the King-Emperor when he lands there on his way out to India.

The casket is box form in shape, and is of solid silver gilded in parts. The body of the receptacle is ornamented in repousse with a floral design supported at the four corners by solid silver gilt floral scrolls. The front face bears a large silver gilt panel on which is embossed a panoramic view of Aden, the opposite side having a similar panel on which the inscription is engraved. At the two sides are given the Royal Arms and Britannia in oxidised silver fitted on to gilded medallions. The lid is ornamented at the corners by little models of the lotus flower, and the whole is surmounted by a finely modelled group of a camel, with attendant under a clump of palm trees, the camel being of silver gilt, the attendant oxidised, and the palm trees in cold silver. Designed and manufactured by Messrs. Barton Son and Company this is yet another of the splendid pieces of workmanship turned out by the eminent firm. They are also making a magnificent casket for presentation to His Majesty the King by the Bombay Municipal Corporation, and in addition are making a solid gold trowel and salver for mortar for the use of His Majesty the King at the laying of the Memorial Tablet of the All-India King Edward Memorial at Delhi. The designs were submitted to His Excellency the Viceroy, who has approved of them and placed the order with the Bangalore firm.

That monumental liar, "Dr." Cook, of North Pole notoriety is certainly not lacking in hardihood. On the 24th ultimo he had the effrontery to advertise in Copenhagen a lecture on his journey to the north! The impudence of the adventure was emphasized by the fact that the gathering took place in the Oddfellow Palace, where two years ago, amid a scene of great enthusiasm, he was presented by Prince Christian, as President of the Geographical Society, with the Society's gold medal for having reached the Pole.

The newspapers had taken a hostile attitude towards his presence in the city since his arrival and when he arrived at the Palace he was mobbed by a large crowd. He managed, however, to get inside the building, where 1,400 people received him with laughter, hooting, and hisses.

Dr. Norman Hanson, the Greenland explorer and former friend of Dr. Cook, stood up and declared that Dr. Cook was the greatest swindler of the age, and that his recent book on how he reached the Pole provided further evidence of his fraud.

Cook made a long reply, in which he reasserted his good faith without offering any further proofs. He continued for two hours, but most of what he said was inaudible owing to the uproar.

The meeting ended in the rascal being mobbed, and the police had to protect him from the violence of the audience.

The Rev. Sidney Swann, the famous old Cambridge Blue, who sculled across the Channel from Dover to Sandgate on 12th September in 10 minutes short of four hours, has invented a new oar.

At first sight the oar has rather a strange appearance, chiefly on account of the blade being at an angle of about 160 degrees to the loom. This, it was explained, is in order that the whole of the blade might be covered, and also to allow the whole of the blade to enter the water at the same time. The whole oar is 4 inches shorter than is the present oar. The blade is 8 inches shorter, but the distance from the button to the centre of resistance in the blade is exactly the same, while there is no difference in weight. The blade is straight. The Rev. Swann explained that in the old days, when they got a hard beginning right behind the stretcher, a curved blade was necessary, but now, when they do not go so far back, they do not need the curve, and at the finish, which is now so all-important, being without the curve is a great advantage. Then it is claimed that as the oar is shorter there is less water to turn round.

The Trinity Hall four had a short outing with these oars on two days last month and rowed a trial with them over the Little Ditch course. They were a second or two slower with the new oars, but, of course, it was their second time over the course, for which allowance must be made. The oarsmen said they felt quite as comfortable, and the only difference they really noticed was that the new blades are very much easier to get out of the water at the finish of the stroke.

It is an accepted fact, writes J. B. Wilson, the well-known sporting scribe in a London paper, that all men are liars, fishermen awful liars, and golfers the limit. So I was not surprised, meeting an exceptionally good fellow from Buenos Ayres, when he told me that he was plus 6 and ought to be 10, at least. Being rather a stranger to him, it seemed to me that he was stretching it a bit tight to start with; but one doesn't quarrel with a man when it's his turn.

Later, yapping golf, he let out that "My boss gives me a half: he's minus two." That shows how easy it is to misjudge a man. Out there, apparently, a plus man, with us, is a minus man. Hence my mistake in thinking him one of those. To be plus six would be sufficient for most people in this merry island to feel indignant that you are not plus ten is just a little too much.

It must have been mental telepathy, for we both started to tell the same story together: or practically the same story. His happened in Buenos Ayres; mine at Hythe. In his story, the man with whom he was playing was plumb off his game and pardonably irritable: he was driven into and hit on the leg. So he told the man "what done it," to quote the ancients, some of the things that would happen if this occurred again.

And it did occur again, three holes later. The furious merchant promptly collared a brassie and hit the ball—a new one—into the next republic. Shortly afterwards the riot started. In my story—which I know to be true—it was an elderly Scotsman, driven into when on the green and about to putt.

He also produced a brassie, took the ball off the green, and hit it gently over a house. Excepting that the language used was in different tongues, the cases were practically identical.

Then we got talking about cards: we might be talking now, but all the other people kept saying "Hush!" so often that we could hardly get going properly. But we both agreed that cards are absolutely—"Hush!"

Once upon a time a card nearly parted two loving brothers for ever. It happened this way. The younger brother had borrowed the other's favourite mashie: the card got on his mind: a bunker got in his way: the ball fell into the bunker: so the player hurled the club after it and broke it: he dared not tell his brother: he had a new, and rotten, shaft put in and stealthily replaced the club: the brother lost a monetary match and his temper: discovered what had happened, but not, unfortunately, his temper. The brothers were reconciled—by "cherry whisky." Supposing the golf club had not kept it?

My heavy little friend Percy tells me a wonderful story of how a card can obsess a man; here it is: Playing at the seventh tee at a London club a golfer got a very big drive and struck a bald-headed player, who was putting, on the head. To his amazement the elderly gentleman continued putting, and holed out. The offender rushed up to him before he went to look for his ball, and apologised most profusely. The victim was incredulous, and when assured that he had been struck on the head and was bleeding he said, "Thanks, I know, but I thought I did it with my club."

My little funny friend Lawrence tells another lovely card story. It was a two man. He was a fine player, but had been consistently pulling. At one hole a slice is absolutely fatal. The card had got on his nerves, so he determined, whatever happened, not to pull.

On the right is a small spinney, which is not only out of bounds, but out of the earth. They keep pheasants there, so one may not go in to recover a ball. He sliced three times into the spinney; three nice, new, half-crown dimples. The last looked as if it was just short of the spinney.

The player went up and found it was in. He hadn't got another ball, though he thought he had in his right-hand pocket. He fished out what he hoped to be a ball, and it was a wad of paper. His last hope was in his left-hand pocket, where he found half a crown. He tore up his card, and with the quiet remark to the half-crown, which he threw over the fence, "You'd better go over, too," went swiftly home.

With regard to the caring of a two-year-old's legs, a lengthy volume might be written and still leave a lot to be said. As a matter of fact, this is the most critical period of the animal's career and a trainer's responsibility can only be estimated by comparing his charge to a well-cared for infant in the cradle. The skeleton and general make-up of the colt's anatomy is but imperfectly formed at this period as the animals do not become matured until after the fifth year, says Dr. H. A. Woodroffe, an American veterinary surgeon.

Firstly.—As this is the age at which horses are most prone to develop all the infirmities that the equine race is heir to, the slightest appearance of any unusual heat or swelling, particularly in the neighbourhood of the joints and tendons, should be watched with suspicion as it may be the advance guard of such diseases as splints, spavin, curbs or sprained tendons, sheaths, or both. The symptoms which precede these lesions must not be confounded with stocked or gouty legs, resulting from insufficient exercise or overfeeding, etc., and lastly too close attention cannot be paid to the care of the feet in the stall and the shoeing. Some kind of stocking such as clay should be applied to the feet, particularly in hot weather, more especially when the animal is compelled to stand on wooden floors. Shoes should be removed every three weeks to prevent contracted heels and other deformities.

In regard to wet bandages, I would say that they are advantageous when frequently applied. The Newmarket web bandage being preferred, but equally good, if not better results may be secured by cold showering under the hose pipe and afterwards shampooing the part with the following lotion, which has a tendency to stimulate absorption and brace up the relaxed structure after severe work, besides having a general soothing effect.

Recipe.—Tincture of arnica, 4 ounces; witch hazel, 30 ounces; alcohol, 30 ounces.

The above will make a gallon of lotion and last a considerable time.

In case extreme heat and tenderness of any circumscribed part should present itself, I would recommend the following lotion to be applied to the parts constantly by means of a bandage saturated with it, viz:—

Recipe.—Ammonium chloride, 1½ ounces; spirits of turpentine fl., ½ drachm; dilute acetic acid fl., 12 ounces. Mix. Saturate bandage with above and apply morning and evening.

When any undue heat of the hoofs presents itself, the animal should be allowed to stand in a tub of cold water and, by the way, I may here remark that no stable is complete without a soaking tub.

When inflammation of the periostum or covering of the bone, which is a very vascular and sensitive structure and one that is implicated in what is known to trainers as "sore shins" and injured tendons, I have had good results from antiphlogistine, applied as hot as the animal will bear it, afterwards covered with bandages and left on from twenty-four to forty-eight hours. The above treatment combined with light feeding such as bran and oats, with the addition of grass and carrots, if procurable and the administration of a mild dose of physics, such as an aloetic bolus or a quart of raw linseed oil will often tend to combat an attack of disease at the onset.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 27th October 1911.

Last Saturday was "Trafalgar Day" and as usual Nelson's Column and the lions were decorated and Trafalgar Square became the repository of an Empire's tributes and the rendezvous of admiring and patriotic crowds of Londoners. Of how Nelson looked in the flesh his monument tells us little. There we have raised him towards the heavens; he dwells in the heavens of our imaginations. Englishmen have raised him high above the vulgar politics and petty hurryings of the Square, and on Saturday they and their kin, as on all Trafalgar Days, offered laurels and flowers in earthly worship of his memory. The wreaths and garlands were at the very foot of the great column. The mighty admiral was far above. All we got of his face was a large nose—an adventuring man's nose—against the grey and gloomy rainclouds.

But who needs a god of the sea in the faithful and intimate detail of the wax-works? The flowers and the green were tributes to the Nelson spirit—to the Admiral's ideal of duty. Many of the City clerks and the girl typists and the rest who halted at the column no doubt fear God and honour the King. They do not "hate Frenchmen like the Devil." But adoration of the Nelson blend of religion and fierce patriotism must have been in their hearts. The rain fell, and one wreath, or floral anchor, was very much like another. But the people were in no mood for hastening away. They lingered long, musing caught by romantic reverie. And really the urgent police might have let them linger. Surely the constabulary "Pass along! Pass along!" might have been given a rest for once. On one day in a year the Englishman might be allowed a change from the fetish of rush and hustle, and that day should be Nelson's day.

The wreaths were from all parts of the Empire that was made possible by Nelson. They were from the suburbs and the country, and from New Zealand and Natal, and Canada, and wherever the flag flies. But it is the home Englishman who is seized on this day by Nelson's ghost. The hawkers were crying their copies of the Times of 1805—true reproductions (as far as modern printing permits) of the joyful edition that brought the news of Trafalgar. Beside them men were distributing handbills reminding us what the Navy means to our land and our people. The column was placarded with the names of Nelson's ships and Nelson's captains. A few yards from him, and at something of his own height above the crowd, was the web of wireless instruments that are talking to the Admirals who have stepped into his shoes. One hoped that on the day he is wanted we shall find another Nelson, and that the captains to whom that "wireless" speaks on their misty seas will be as victorious as Nelson's captains.

We grumble incessantly in these islands; when it isn't the eternal weather we are never at a loss for a subject. All through our recent glorious summer the loud wail of the farmer, the vegetable produce raiser and the cattle breeder made itself disagreeably obtrusive. These good people got their rain at last—as a matter of fact they are getting more of it in bucketsful as I write so we don't hear so much from them. But now comes the lament of the owner of house property who says that the prolonged drought has had a disastrous effect on buildings, and we are led to believe that there has been widespread subsidence and that many thousands of houses are cracked and otherwise damaged by the summer of 1911. We are told that the drought has played the part of a continuous, if slow, earthquake, that the shrinkage of the clay and other subsoils has been so great that in many places whole streets of houses have developed threatening cracks, that drainage systems have been thrown quite out of gear and so on. It was hoped that with the coming of the rain would have settled this serious issue, but in many cases the rain has rather accentuated the trouble. Of course the sun, moon and stars, the rain, air and other atmospheric things never can do right in Merrie England. Well, at any rate the builders and contractors and the hosts of surveyors, inspectors et hoc must be having a good time "underpinning" and tinkering in every conceivable way that suggests the extraction of coin from the pockets of luckless landlords and still more unfortunate tenants.

The notice was cold and emotionless. It ran:—The last of the London General Omnibus Company's horse-driven vehicles will arrive at Moorgate-street from London Bridge this evening (Wednesday). This particular service, however, will be continued as usual by the Associated Omnibus Company, Limited, who have taken it over, and who are still running a large number of horse omnibuses on various routes of London.

There was nothing behind this concise wording to reveal the little drama that was played last Wednesday night in the brief stretch of lamp-lit streets from London Bridge to London Wall.

And yet it meant so much to the men who have driven the fifteen horse omnibuses that alone have remained with the largest company on the road in jog-trotting defiance to the motor-omnibus. It meant the real beginning of the end.

A scarlet motor-omnibus, brilliant with light and crowded with fares, rushed swiftly into the approach to London Bridge Railway Station as the driver of a white-painted horse omnibus flicked his whip at the horses and let them plod gently out into the traffic streaming over London Bridge.

This was the last horse omnibus of the London General Omnibus Company.

Nothing on the surface to mark it out from the few other horse omnibuses that lumbered by intermittently; nobody stopped and realised the significance of its passing. But if it had been daylight there would have been something observable in the face of the driver.

Thirty-two years is a long time to have driven horses in the service of one company, and that is the number of years that Driver Baggott has served the London General Omnibus Company.

"I'm thinking," he said as the omnibus came into the whirlpool of motor traffic by the Bank "I'm thinking of the knife-board days, when we used to carry the rugs for our regular passengers from Regent's Park to Camberwell."

And at London-wall, at five minutes past eight, the last horse omnibus of the London General Omnibus drew up in the half-darkness, and motor-omnibuses passed it with commanding hoots.

"I'm thinking," said Driver Baggot, "how we used to laugh at these things when they broke down, and whistle 'We won't go home till morning.'"

Six years ago the London General Omnibus Company owned nearly 2,000 horse omnibuses and 20,000 horses.

Eleven unassuming old men, representing the twenty-two survivors of the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava, dined at the Holborn Restaurant last night to celebrate the fifty-seventh anniversary of their world-famed ride. The dinner was organised by Mr. T. H. Roberts, the founder of the Balaclava Survivors' Relief Fund.

A telegram was received from the King thanking the survivors of the charge for the loyal sentiments conveyed in a message to his Majesty and trusting that they would spend a pleasant evening together.

The youngest of the little band of survivors, which dwindles year by year, is seventy-seven years old, and most of them are hale and hearty.

The new Alhambra ballet "1830," which was produced last Saturday night, is a thing of sheer joy—joy in the students' quarter, and in a little Parisian attic in which four artists, poor and proud, sup with happy grisettes while fame passes by; joy in a popular cafe-restaurant more gorgeous perhaps than in the students' quarter of our day; joy in the dance—a mazy, bewildering dance, into which all students, guests, rich patrons, curious visitors, fling themselves with a zest that is truly Parisian—on the stage; joy in a beautifully illuminated garden, quite unlike any illuminated garden outside Paris, where the artist and his sweetheart, after a tragic separation, become once more united—these are the incidents created, for an hour's entertainment, on the Alhambra stage. It would be a more difficult audience to please than the average music-hall audience is, if it were not more than delighted with the fare.

The ballet is a "costume comedy" of the French Restoration. The costumes are as quaint as they are charming (the English modiste might find inspiration here for 1912); and the scenic setting exquisitely coloured and lighted.

In the cast we have further evidence of the admirable training of the Alhambra school; while in M. Agoust (as the chief student) the art of pantomime has been developed to perfection. Amongst the newcomers, Mlle. Poldi Muller is a "discovery." Winsome, vivacious charming she should hold a place on the Alhambra stage for a long time to come.

The music, are arranged by Mr. Byng (no conductor has a better knowledge of ballet requirements), is of the happiest character. He has dipped deep into the popular music of the period; and the minuet, the pavane, the gavotte, the quadrille are all recognisable.

Several hundred of the worthiest people of South London—Elephant and Castle way must have had sore throats last Tuesday morning. It was not fog that was responsible. It was going out without their overcoats. It was "The Girl Who Knew a Bit."

For, if virtue is sparring sixteen sharp rounds with real villainy, and gets the worst of it, well, you have to hiss. And when, in the sixteenth round, virtue gets up and knocks villainy through the ropes—well, what can a self-respecting pit-staller at the Elephant and Castle Theatre do but cheer!

And hiss and cheer they did when "The Girl Who Knew a Bit" made her bow. Those who come west for their amusement say that the drama is getting less virile. But it is not so. The drama as she is played at the Elephant, is as strong and spicy as ever.

From the time he "plants" a forged marriage certificate to the time he blows up a ship in the East India Docks, the Hon. Marcus Blaythwaite works as hard as any villain can or ought.

There certainly cannot be a Villains' Trade Union, for if there were, the organising secretary would never let the Hon. Marcus put in such a working day as he does. Nor work for such wages—because, needless to say, he is foiled at last.

Perhaps it was because he wore spats; but somehow the audience never took a real liking to the Hon. Marcus. There were quite audible murmurs when he accused the heroine of being married to the assistant-villain in the first act. And in the second act, when he began whipping the heroine's poor old mother in the green limelight of a castle dungeon, it took two attendants to hold back a young man in the amphitheatre, who announced his intention of "going down to 'ave a cut at 'im."

There is no doubt about it, there are genuine creeps in "The Girl Who Knew a Bit." Indeed, just after the curtain had dropped on the heroine's mother, in her cell, springing at the heroine with a knife and a maniacal shriek, a middle-aged patron in the stalls rose from her seat and remarked that her blood had run so cold that she really must have a little something to restore the circulation.

But they all enjoyed it; the weepings, and the gnashings of teeth—the Hon. Marcus was a born gnasher—and especially the sentiments of the heroine, set by the orchestra to hymn tunes.

One heard something like this:—

"Don't abandon me. You are my kindred."

(Two bars of "Rocked in the Cradle of the deep.")

"No, Raymond." (Raymond was the hero, in patent leather shoes.) "No, Raymond, I will remember you always."

(Three bars of "Through all the changing scenes of life.")

And then a change.—

"And I will always love you."

(Fifteen bars of rag-time, played soft and slow.)

Perhaps one of the brightest points of "The Girl Who Knew a Bit" is its epigram. Mr. Charles Darrell has put the transpontine view of life into a nutshell, thus:—

"When a girl ain't got no muvver, 'er best pal's 'er 'atpin."

"Wimmen! Yus, they're angels 'when we're courtin' 'em, but marriage robs 'em of their wings."

And "The Girl Who Knew a Bit!" Well, there is not much to say about her, except that she knew a bit too much about the byways of villainy for the villain's comfort, and a bit too much of the seamy side of life for her conversation to be very pleasant, until, in the second act, she reformed.

But she had one saving virtue. Her hair was not red, and to find a "Girl Who . . . " without red hair is worth a journey to the Elephant and Castle Theatre.

Some of Dr. Richard Strauss's most violent and splendid work was given at the Queen's Hall Orchestra's Saturday afternoon concert—the first of their winter series of symphony concerts. In his fantastic Nietzschean tone-poem "Thus spake Zarathustra," this wizard of modern music "sang, and" (in the Zarathustran words) "all who were present went like birds unawares into the net of his cunning."

One may or may not harbour doubts as to the real greatness of the musical thought in this symphonic story of the pilgrimage of Zarathustra's soul through the morasses of conventional religion, passion, sorrow, and science to the haven of life's best thing—the "golden-emerald rapture" of the dance. But at the moment it is impossible to resist the flood of colour, the audacious verve and gaiety, and the stupendous orchestral technique which Strauss has lavished on his theme. Sir Henry Wood's reading of the work has increased in lucidity; the tropically luxuriant detail of the score was unusually clear, the orchestra played wonderfully.

Mme. Aino Ackte, one of the great lyric artists of the day—and, one may say, in the history of opera—sang the closing scene from Richard Strauss's "Salome." Her incomparable rendering of Salome's erotic frenzy will never be banished from the memory of those who saw her in Strauss's opera at Covent Garden a year ago. Though it is hard to sing with an orchestera, massed behind one, thundering out Strauss's strident harmonies, Mme. Ackte on Saturday yet delivered that strange soliloquy with such dramatic vividness of vocal colour that the altered circumstances of the performance were forgotten.

She also sang beautifully a song by her countryman, Jean Sibelius, "Autumn Night," which is remarkable for its exquisite orchestration. Typical of the absurd modern subservience of the musical world to everything German—like the spirit of the Scandinavian, Slav, or Hungarian musician who when he comes to England calls himself "Herr"—was the fact that Mme. Ackte, a Finn, sang this Finnish song to an English audience in a German translation.

Eureka!—or, to be classically accurate, eureka-men! At least, that is now a possible hope. In other words, a way has been found by which frayed collars and cuffs may be prevented. If the British Malt Products Company can repeat in all cases the marvels performed at Hammersmith Town Hall, man will no longer chafe under the very painful restraint of a stiff starched collar with upright edges which run a frayed surface into the skin made more tender by the vile and necessary razor. Wives will no longer dissolve in tears under a husband's just reproach or write indignant letters of vain protest to remorseless and destructive laundries. Scissors meant for other purposes will no longer be used to "trim" the cuffs which only show their frayed and hideous edges when a man is already very late for a dinner party. In fact, a new epoch of domestic peace, happiness, and economy is spread before a harassed and almost hopeless world. We are told that the damage has been always done in taking out the starch from linen sent to the wash, and that the new magic obviates all that. But the cause is immaterial. The cure is the important thing. It is quite enough to know that linen goes to the wash intact and returns in shreds, so cunningly concealed by an arrangement of folds and pins and glaze that the tatters and frays are only detected after a man has dressed himself. If we can be rid of that blot on life's surface, we can pluck up a new spirit and hope for almost anything. There remain, of course, the tatters of old age. No shirt is immortal. All cuffs must perish.

Now what the British Malt Products Company has to do is to turn their attention to India, and by establishing depots at all big centres, utterly rout that friend incarnate the Dhobie and all who help him in his fell work.

GREAT GAME DISTRICTS.

Canadian Big and Small Game.

The beaver is found everywhere in the Province, both on the mainland and the islands. They are not allowed to be taken. The musk-rat is found almost everywhere, but most numerous at the mouth of the Fraser River. The sea-otter is a very scarce animal. A few specimens are taken nearly every season by the Haida Indians in Hecate Strait, and at times one or two are procured on the west coast of Vancouver Island and Queen Charlotte Sound. The land-otter is common, and is found more or less everywhere, but only in a few places in the north can they be considered as plentiful. The racoon is found in numbers all along the coast and for considerable distances up the rivers. The marten is found on both the mainland and the islands. The best skins are obtained in the north. The mink is most numerous on the coast, but are found more or less throughout the Province. The wolverine is principally confined to the mainland, but a few specimens are taken on Vancouver Island. The badger is found throughout the interior, while the porcupine is found everywhere on the mainland. The hare (northern hare) is very plentiful in the north, and more or less everywhere. The jack-rabbit is not plentiful. It has been taken in the Okanagan district; this also applies to Baird's hare. But the little chief hare is found on the mainland, and is plentiful in East Kootenay. The polecat, skunk, and weasel are common, the first two being common on the mainland, and the last throughout the Province. The fur seal is occasionally taken in Hecate Strait. Hair seals are very plentiful all along the coast and for some distance up the large rivers, and the sea-lion is fairly numerous on the coast north of 51 deg. All game must be hunted in accordance with the game laws in force in each Province. Most of the small fur-bearing animals are trapped by the professional hunter, and are not usually sought for by the sportsman. As proof of the abundance of game in Canada to-day, one has only to peruse the reports which are published showing the fur exported from the Dominion from time to time.

Passing on to the Aves family, we find that Canada affords capital sport to the user of the shotgun; game birds and wildfowl abound almost everywhere throughout the Dominion, and provide very enjoyable shooting. The sharp-tailed grouse of the Canadian prairies is a splendid representative of the large grouse family. He is a big, thick-set, heavy bird, lighter in colour than the ruffled grouse; his back is a pretty chocolate, with black feather-bars, the under parts being pure white, each feather with an arrow-head of black. The birds go in coveys during the earlier part of the season, but later on pack in large flocks similar to the Scottish red grouse, and remain thus till the spring-time, when the birds separate again for nesting. Many parts of the Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta prairies are rolling and studded with bluffs; this makes a prettier landscape than a monotonous level prairie and a much better shooting country. A bluff is a patch of small, light bush composed of poplar and low scrub, and may be anything in size from a few yards to several acres in extent. The birds, when flushed on the open prairies or the stubble, fly straight to a bluff; then one gun, with dog going inside and the other two (if there be three guns, which is not too many) covering the circumference of the bluff, the birds are shot as they fly out of cover. The inside gun often bags his bird before it leaves the bluff. This habit of taking to cover gives a pleasant variety to the shooting, which no other grouse gives. In British Columbia these birds are found only in the dry belt to the east of the Cascade Range. They are fairly numerous in certain spots, and except during the first few days of the season, when they are apt to be too tame, they give splendid sport. About the best place for them is some seventy miles up the Cariboo road. There is good shooting in the Nicola district.

A word or two as to the shooting-wagon. This is an important adjunct to the outfit of the prairie sportsman. This should be a team and a roomy, democrat wagon, with plenty of loose hay in the bottom for the comfort of the dogs and for warmth for one's own feet. Next to the rig is the driver. There are good shooting-wagon drivers, and there are shooting-wagon drivers who are of little use. If one can light upon a boy who would rather follow a man with a gun all day than do anything else, he is the one to employ. He knows the whole country, can drive you anywhere, and is never lost. You leave the wagon and give him instructions as to which way you intend working, and you may rest assured that when your bag gets heavy and you want the wagon to unload your birds into it, you will find it just where you expected it. At each trip you make to your wagon he has some news to tell you—someone has been along and told him where there are lots of birds, or he has noticed birds alighting and directs you to the identical spot. He makes friends with the dogs, and those left in the wagon for spells of rest are as safe as though you were there yourself. When the day's shoot is over and everything packed away, and you are in the wagon—shooters and dogs—and start for home, you do not know exactly the size of your bag, but the boy can tell you; he is not quick at school, maybe, but he can and does keep accurate account of the game-bag, and tells you correctly what it is.

The pinnated grouse has been making his way up north into the Canadian North-west, and in a day's shoot several of these fine birds may help to fill the bag. This species does not take to the bluffs as does the sharp-tail, but remains in the open; you lose the variety which you get with the sharp-tail in the bluffs; but, like all the family, the pinnated is a fine bird. The bracing September atmosphere is most invigorating and health-giving, and after three or four weeks' sport one feels years younger and as supple as an Indian. A trip to the prairies in September is an experience that sportsmen should not miss. The birds in Manitoba and Saskatchewan and in Alberta are being very well protected. Twenty-five is the limit per diem for one gun, and sale and exportation are prohibited. It is but a few years since the Canadian West was settled and wheat was grown there. The grouse knew nothing of cereals and had to depend entirely upon the seeds and berries which were indigenous to the prairie. The change of surroundings soon brought about a change in the habits of these birds. They were not long in cultivating a taste for the grain, wheat in particular, which was being grown, and mornings and evenings the fields (stubbles) are the most likely places to find them. If the season for wheat has been good and the straw be long (the present season will be famous for both) and stubble left long enough to afford a good cover a brace of well-trained dogs get fine opportunities for undertaking work which gladdens the heart of the sportsman who knows what good dog-work is. It is not altogether the size of the bag by which the sportsman's pleasure is measured; there are many other things which contribute. There are several other kinds of grouse which may be killed, including the prairie chicken, ruffled grouse, Canada grouse, willow grouse, and ptarmigan, the last three in the northern part of Western Canada, and the blue grouse (cock of the mountains) and Franklin's grouse in British Columbia. The prairie chicken is only found in the dry belt to the east of the Cascade range. Among the waterfowl are the trumpeter and whistling swans, the Canada goose, Ross goose, lesser snow goose, and Hutchins' goose. The Canada goose and the snow goose are the most plentiful. The mallard, black duck, canvasback, redhead, pintail, gadwell, wood-duck, wigeon, green-winged, blue-winged, and cinnamon teal, spoonbill, shoveller, golden-eye bufflehead, blue-bill, snipe, golden plover, and fifteen varieties of the same family, great flocks of curlew, and immense numbers of various kinds of waders. Almost every marshly pool holds bittern and heron, and in addition there are cormorants, pelican, crane, coot, and water-rail, and other species of less importance.

A good locality is Whitewater Lake, in Southern Manitoba, reached from Winnipeg, by a short trip over the Napinka section of the Canadian Pacific railroad. Here "chicken," snipe, and plover are found in fair numbers, and there are here many geese, duck, crane, and other waterfowl. The east end of the lake is reached from Boissevain, but at Whitewater station, on the south shore of the lake, canoes and skiffs may be hired, and the facilities there provided enable the sportsman to obtain capital flight-shooting when geese are going out to feed, and also to get to the favourite haunts of the canvasback. Some great bags have been taken on the Whitewater, Killarney Lake as well as Pelican Lake, a short distance north-east thereof, are excellent spots, while on Rock Lake, near Clearwater, and Swan Lake, adjacent to Pilot Mound, good bags are the rule, and not the exception. North of Rock Lake are the Tiger Hills, in the Pembina Mountains, a good locality for grouse as well as for geese and ducks. Lake Winnipeg offers still stronger inducements. The route is from Winnipeg to Winnipeg Beach, on the Canadian Pacific line, a distance of fifty miles. The great marshes about the mouth of Red River extend for miles and form one of the most extensive duck grounds in the North-west, and they actually swarm with all kinds of wildfowl during the season. At Oak Lake, geese, duck, and plover (golden) may be secured in numbers. The lake is within an easy drive of the station, and a party equipped with tent, etc., can pitch camp and have time to dispose themselves for the evening flight-shooting. At the east side of the lake there is good camping-ground in the very line of flight, and on the north side the geese leave the lake in large numbers to feed in the neighbouring wheatfields.

In Saskatchewan and Alberta, on the branch line from Pasque—ground which has seldom been shot over—are large numbers of duck, geese, and plover. In the Dirt Hills, about twenty miles south of Regina, wildfowl are fairly plentiful, and in the district above Regina there are opportunities for bags of duck, etc., and nearly all the species of plover. Good goose-shooting is to be had on the south side of Buffalo Lake, about twenty miles north of Moose Jaw; wild geese in thousands come down from their feeding-grounds in the Arctic circle in the months of September and October, and remain there until ice begins to form on the lake. The country to the south of the lake is well settled, and the wheat stubble fields afford excellent feeding-grounds. Ambushed in pits dug in the fields in the line of the flight of the geese, with decoys set out, capital goose-shooting can be obtained. Rush Lake, Reed Lake, and Chaplin Lake, few miles from the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, are numerous other good points for geese, duck, and other wildfowl. At Calcary, the very finest sport may be enjoyed with grouse among the brushy foothills of the Rockies. Good shooting will be found within easy driving distance of that city. Near Golden, B.C., the lagoons on each side of the steamboat channel hold duck, geese, and swan—in fact, they are favourite breeding-grounds of waterfowl.—The Tracker, in Shooting Times.

FOR KEEPING IN PRACTICE DURING THE HOT WEATHER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

Sir,—In his letter No. IX., "Baldatcha" is enthusiastic in his praise of the pellet bow, but omits all mention of the air rifle, which is an infinitely more amusing toy, and will do all that the pellet bow can do, and do it better. There are several good air rifles on the market now, so that one can choose whichever of them one most fancies. They are all weapons of precision, and can therefore be used to keep one's hand in for both rifle and shot-gun shooting. The ammunition is so cheap that any amount of practice can be had at a nominal cost.

At short ranges the modern spring impulse air rifle exhibits considerable power, for the muzzle velocity is about 600 feet per second. The pellet however is so light, being short with a deep waist like the old pattern Paradox bullet, that it loses speed very quickly, and is quite harmless at a range of 150 yards or so. This makes an air rifle very safe for shooting with in one's compound, and with the most ordinary care, there is very little chance of an accident. The accuracy of a good air rifle is all that can be desired up to 50 yards. At 25 yards it is capable of shooting into a one inch ring. The difficulty at long range is the high curve of the trajectory, which makes under or over shooting the object probable, unless the exact distance is known. In respect of trajectory it is however incomparably superior to the pellet bow, by reason of its far higher initial velocity. I have explained in a former letter how the difficulty of shooting at unknown distances can to a certain extent be overcome by using special sights.

The standard air rifle is of ·176 calibre, but a very efficient ·220 is also made, which has about the same muzzle velocity as the ·176, and considerably greater killing power due to the heavier pellet. Larger bores than ·220 are made, but are not to be recommended, as this further increase in calibre causes considerable loss of velocity, and the trajectory, already sufficiently curved, becomes higher still. One of the beauties of the air rifle is that the barrel does not require cleaning: if a little oil is occasionally blown through the bore to prevent rust, the rifling will keep clean and in good condition without further attention.

Modern air rifles are fitted with either open or peep sights, as the purchaser may desire. The most effective arrangement is however a lens foresight, and a peep backsight. The lens is marked with dots one above the other, ranges from 25 to 50 yards, thus all tiresome alteration of the backsight for different ranges is got rid of.

While on the subject of air guns, I may mention that I lately read an account of the South American blow-pipe, as used by certain savages. There are it seems two kinds, one a short tube made of bamboo, and used for large animals. This is of comparatively large bore, so that the arrow shot from it may carry a considerable amount of Wourali poison. The blow-pipe used for birds and small animals is of very small bore, and made of reed. It is about eleven feet long. The writer states the effective range of the small bore blow-pipe with its thorn needle tipped with cotton, is 150 yards. I have no doubt however that this is an exaggeration. Having in mind that the air rifle is quite ineffective at this range, in spite of its high velocity and lead pellet, it seems incredible that a light dart propelled by a puff of air from a man's mouth should be able to reach an object at such a distance. The long shots made seem to have been at birds and monkeys in high trees, and distances upwards look much longer than they really are.

Dear Sirs,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which penetrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

ELEY

ALWAYS RELIABLE

An accurate cartridge is just as necessary as a dead-sure aim — though either — without the other — is not of much account.

The accuracy of 'Eley' Revolver Cartridge has been proved in all countries, under all conditions: 'Eley's' are the favourites of the world's leading marksmen.

A WORLD'S RECORD
With 'Eley' Revolver Cartridge

On July 27, 1909, at Bisley, in the Long Range Competition at 50 yds. Warrant-Officer A. J. Raven made the target shown below, using Colt Revolver and 'Eley' 455 Revolver Smokeless Target Cartridges 25 'Highest Possibles' were made during the meeting with 'Eley' Revolver Target Cartridges in Colt Revolvers alone

Radiol

RADIOL TREATMENT prolongs the life of a Horse's Legs. Completely removes by radiation all soft swellings that disfigure and lame a Horse as sprained Tendons, Windgalls, Bog Spavins, Capped Elbow Big Leg, Enlarged Glands, etc.

No Blister; No Laying up
No Hair Removed.

RADIOL TREATMENT fines down a worn Horse's Legs and is a certain cure for Puffy Joints and Sprains, Prevents Filled Legs.

An intelligent use of the "RADIOL LEG WASH" counteracts that daily wear and tear of the legs unavoidable with the Horse in constant work, whether training, racing, or on the road.

One flask of "RADIOL" will make a GALLON of valuable Leg Wash.

"The Field," June 10th, 1906:—

"We have been able to test some trial bottles of "RADIOL" in cases of Wind-galls, Splints and Puffy swellings and have found "RADIOL" to be very beneficial, and we have also found it useful as a leg wash for polo ponies after a day's play."

To be obtained from Ernom & Co., Calcutta; Treacher & Co., Bombay; W. E. Smith & Co., Mount Road, Madras; Heath & Son, Sharia Maghraky, Cairo; W. Wilson, Rawal Pindi and Murree; The Mombassa Pharmacy, Mombassa.

Mr. C. B. Kellow's br c Radiator by Simmer—Ondine, 3yrs., 6st. 9lb. ... E. S. Grace 0

BETTING: 3 to 1 agst. Lady Medallist, 5 to 1 Aurofodina 8 to 1 each Didus, Beverage, and Flavian, 12 to 1 each Jolly Beggar and Sandbath, 14 to 1 Britain, 25 to 1 Hartfell, 50 to 1 each Riffian, Flava, Prince Lack, and Indiscreet, 66 to 1 Twa Brigs, 100 to 1 each Radiator, Yarrabar and The Race.

When they lined up at the barrier Aurofodina, Sandbath, and Flava held positions nearest the rails; the centre division comprised Yarrabar, Lady Medallist, and Didus: while Flavina and Prince Lack were on the extreme outside. A good start was effected. The first to break the line were Sandbath, Radiator, Flava, Hartfell, Didus, and Jolly Beggar. After going a furlong, Twa Brigs had taken charge, and he showed the way past the judge's box followed by Didus, Beverage, Jolly Beggar, Hartfell, Lady Medallist, Indiscreet, and Radiator (who was nearly down), and the last two were Aurofodina and Prince Lack. Turning out of the straight Twa Brigs still held the lead, his nearest attendants being Didus, Beverage, Indiscreet, and Jolly Beggar. Running past the mile post, Indiscreet ran into second place behind Twa Brigs, and then followed Beverage, Flava, Hartfell, Flavian, and Lady Medalist. Indiscreet headed Twa Brigs along the back, while the most prominent of the others were Prince Lack, Beverage, Didus, Radiator, Flavian, and Lady Medallist. Indiscreet continued to make the pace round the far turn, and he went along the railway side with Beverage, Lady Medallist, Didus, Aurofodina, Flavian, and Hartfell in close attendance. Indiscreet dropped out approaching the turn, where Lady Medallist shot to the front followed by Aurofodina, while Sandbath and Flavian were well up on the outside. Lady Medallist was clear as she turned into the straight with Flavian, Aurofodina, and Sandbath in pursuit. By the time the distance was reached, Lady Medallist was out several lengths from Flavian, Didus, Aurofodina, Sandbath, and Britain. Flavian could make no impression on Lady Medallist, who continued to draw away, and she won very easily by six lengths from Flavian, who beat Aurofodina by three lengths for second money. Didus was close up fourth, Britain fifth, Sandbath sixth, Beverage seventh, Hartfell eighth, Indiscreet ninth, Riffian tenth. Flava eleventh, Prince Lack twelfth, while the last three were Yarrabar, Twa Brigs, and Radiator. Time—2mins. 34⅘secs.

.22 Caliber Automatic Rifle.

This is the only automatic rifle using rimfire ammunition, and consequently it is inexpensive to shoot. It's rapidity of fire makes it a great game getter, and for shooting rabbits, birds and other small game, it has no equal. For running game it is particularly desirable, as a succession of rapid shots may be fired with accuracy while holding the rifle on the game. It holds ten strong shots, each of which is fired by simply pulling the trigger. Shoot one and you'll realize it's great effectiveness. It is strongly made and simple to shoot.

Winchester Rifles are Sold by All Dealers.

Fortunately on Wednesday the weather proved exceedingly kind. It was an ideal autumn day, with a biting wind which made the task of getting about quite enjoyable. The jockeys reported the going to be "splendid." It takes a deal more than a couple of days rain to reduce the Newmarket turf to a state of softness.

When a race is declared by the experts to be very open it generally ends in a complete upset. So it was to-day in the Cambridgeshire. Long Set simply romped away with the big race amid the yells of the ring, many of whose members threw their hats and books in the air in sheer delight.

The winner made nearly all the running. He was cut by himself at the Bushes, and he won by five lengths. It was another Christmas Daisy debacle all over again, and we are becoming quite used to seeing the Cambridgeshire won running away, so to speak.

The price was returned at 33 to 1 against, but I heard more than one offer of 50's just before the fall of the flag. The result was a disaster for the public, and there were many long faces after the race. Long Set is a really good-looking colt by Rabelais, whom he very much resembles. His form this season has been of a most tantalising in-and-out description.

Had he been taken simply on his running in the Royal Hunt Cup he might have been fancied, but he has put in several very inglorious performances since, with the exception of a victory at Doncaster. He was beaten a long way behind Trepida and Mustapha at Kempton.

Mustapha got his usual place, and he is undoubtedly the most unlucky horse in training. He has been second in the Cambridgeshire for three successive years. Braxted failed to stay, and so did Mahsud. Results:—

We had a repetition of the dismal weather experience of Tuesday for the penultimate stage of the Newmarket meeting yesterday. Rain fell relentlessly most of the day, and there was no real break until near the end of the proceedings, when the downpour ceased, and the last race was run in sunshine. A big falling off was noticeable in the attendance, and the company looked very small in comparison to the large crowd present on the Cambridgeshire day. Results:—

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

VISITING teams fared exceptionally well in the First League on Saturday, no fewer than five of them gaining victories and only three meeting with defeat. Except, perhaps, in the case of Sunderland's success against Sheffield United, these wins away from home, moreover, were all in the nature of surprises. Sheffield Wednesday pulled through against Aston Villa at Birmingham, despite the fact that they were a goal behind at the interval, Everton just got home at the expense of Bolton Wanderers on the Burden Park enclosure, and at Old Trafford, where Manchester United led at half-time by 2 to 1, Middlesbrough snatched a remarkable win by 4 to 3. The victory of Woolwich Arsenal at Deepdale, too, came as something of an upset of form for, admitting that North End could not claim a single success at home this season, the Preston men on the two previous Saturdays had drawn with Bradford City and at Nottingham lowered the colours of Notts County. By 1 to 0, however, the Plumstead men triumphed, and this creditable performance having been preceded by draws with Oldham Athletic and Bolton Wanderers and a win against Bradford City, the Arsenal find themselves with 9 points as the result of eight engagements, a very satisfactory state of affairs, seeing that their first four games yielded them only 5 points.

As Tottenham Hotspur, after losing a goal to Notts County in the first minute of the match at White Hartlane, managed to effect a draw, the London clubs came out very creditably from Saturday's encounters. Whereas, however, the Arsenal have been steadily making up ground during the past few weeks, Hotspur's last five contests have yielded the North London club no more than three points, with the result that the Plumstead team now stand higher on the list than their Tottenham rivals. It is also to be noted in connection with the Arsenal that Bradford City—whom they beat a week ago by 2 to 0—yesterday won decisively against Manchester City, and as a consequence now stand at the head of the First League. The Cupholders advance to the premier position was also contributed to by the failures of West Bromwich at Oldham and of Blackburn Rovers at Newcastle. The Albion during the first few weeks of the season won four games out of five, but since that time they have not gained a single victory, two games being drawn and two lost. Curiously enough Bolton Wanderers, who, like West Bromwich, secured promotion this season, also began with four successes in their first five games, have likewise fallen upon evil times, their last four engagements having resulted in one draw and three defeats.

Among quite a number of unexpected results there was nothing perhaps more striking than the reverse sustained by Manchester United on their own ground. The holders of the League championship seemed to have little to fear from Middlesbrough, but the latter finished too strongly for their famous antagonists and captured both points. Incidentally the notable achievement of Middlesbrough suggests that the failure of Tottenham Hotspur against the same club did not represent such bad football as, at the time, the North Londoners were considered to have played. Another important defeat yesterday was that of Blackburn Rovers at Newcastle, the Blackburn team's five preceding contests having produced three wins and two draws. Bury managed to halve points with Liverpool at Anfield-road, but they have still to register their first victory this season.

The Clapton Orient team had their excellent record spoilt at Nottingham, where Notts Forest enjoyed the distinction of being the first team this season to inflict defeat upon the London club. As the Forest had been successful in all their previous matches on their own ground, it was perhaps a little too much to expect that the Orient, despite their excellent performances against other strong clubs, would prevail there, but it came somewhat as a shock to find them beaten by three goals to none and so have their defence penetrated as many times in one game as they had done in seven matches before that. As it happened, Barnley were unable to take advantage of their chance of going up to first place, for, playing at home against Chelsea, they could only draw. Thus Clanton Orient and Burnley are now level on points, but, with fewer engagements fulfilled and a superior goal average, the Orient still take precedence. Hull City and Bradford both seemed likely to win and, had they done so, they would have equalled the other two, but the Hull team had to rest content with a draw at Stockport, while Bradford were beaten by Fulham and gave way to Wolverhampton Wanderers as fourth club in the competition.

By far the most interesting match in the Southern League was that at New Cross, where Queen's Park Rangers drew with Milwall. It seemed likely that the leaders would suffer their first defeat, but the admirable defence, which had given away only one goal, again proved extremely good, and the Millwall forwards, who had carried all before them in recent games, could get through no more than once. The Rangers remain the one unbeaten side in the important Leagues, and still lead by two points from Swindon. The champions won by five goals against New Brompton, and there was a still more remarkable scoring game at Upton Park, where West Ham United beat Brentford by 7 goals to 4. In a third engagement London clubs came together, and in this case, too, something rather sensational occurred, Crystal Palace—one of two visiting teams to win—beating Leyton 3—1. Although their opponents have done extremely badly, and are last in the competition, this was a good performance of the Palace, who should have a very successful season now that they have found the way to win instead of merely drawing matches.

ENGLAND VS. DENMARK.—After preventing any scoring until nearly half-time, the Danes were outplayed at Park Royal and beaten by three goals to none. They had defeated England at Copenhagen in May of last year, and in view of that result their football was rather disappointing. For all that, they held their own, and at times showed better form than the Englishmen, who did not show to much advantage until after change of ends. Then the visitors had had to re-arrange their defence owing to an injury to Hansen, their goal-keeper. A substitute was allowed and he went into the half-back line, Castella, one of the full backs, keeping goal. This was a serious matter, as the two backs and halves had almost entirely upset the English forwards. Unfortunate in this respect, the Danes played very hard until towards the finish, when they became rather slack. The Englishmen, who played as selected except for Monk at centre half instead of Chapman, were always stronger in defence than in attack, Burn and Knight, the full backs, being particularly good. These two men broke up many promising attacks early in the game, when the Danes were quicker on the ball and generally the smarter side. More than once England's goal was in serious danger, but Brebner scarcely had a shot to save. The Englishmen gradually did better, Woodward and Webb making good attempts to get through. The Danish forwards put in some neat passing runs, and were having a full share of the game when in a break away Woodward put the ball across for Hoare to kick a good goal with his left foot. It was directly after this that the visiting goalkeeper twisted his ankle. After the interval the English looked like having all their own way, but they still lacked finish, and their opponents kept up a keen, bustling defence. Gradually the Danes seemed to tire a little, and after about twenty minutes Monk put the ball forward for Webb to run through and shoot between the posts. For hands against Hunt a free kick was given just outside the penalty area, and directly after this was taken S. Nielson caused Brebner to handle, and P. Nielson also had a shot saved. Generally, however, the Englishmen maintained the upper hand, and just before time Hoare completed the scoring. Fortunately, the weather turned pleasantly fine after a showery morning, but the attendance was disappointing, falling short of three thousand, the gate receipts being £84.

half, but this was mainly due to the splendid defence put up by K. B. Anderson, the Old Westminsters' goalkeeper. Twice he saved at close range from B. S. Farnfield when a goal looked certain and on another occasion he stopped a terrific drive from B. Crispe. Thanks to the fine work of R. M. Weeks and B. S. Evers in the half-back line the Cambridge backs were rarely highly tried, but R. G. Thompson at left back was very safe when the occasion demanded. The first goal of the match came about five minutes after the interval. Some fine play between C. C. Doodale and A. L. Fleming—the best wing on the field—left E. B. Stokes with a chance he took full advantage of. Farnfield might have increased the light blue advantage a moment later, but he shot straight at Anderson, who saved easily. Soon afterwards, however, Farnfield made amends by scoring with a rising shot, which gave Anderson no chance. Cambridge did nearly all the attacking after this, and Anderson was kept busy stopping shots from Stokes, Fleming, and Farnfield. D. L. Summerhaye broke away for the Old Westminsters, but he shot straight at the goalkeeper. Cambridge University, 2; Old Westminsters, 0.

RUGBY RULES.

Cambridge University vs. Old Leysians.—In this match at Cambridge the Old Leysians were the better side all round, and gained an easy victory over the Light Blues by two place goals, one dropped goal, and two tries to one penalty goal. The chief weakness of the Cambridge team was behind the scrummage, the three-quarters being most uncertain in giving and taking their passes. In the opening half, Mallinson and Mellor scored unconverted tries, and Pyman dropped a goal for the Leysians. Subsequently Hyman got over twice, both tries being improved upon by Mellor. Just before the finish Greenwood kicked a penalty goal for Cambridge University. Old Leysians, 20 points; Cambridge University, 3 points.

Old Merchant Taylors vs. Oxford University.—The Dark Blues opened their season with a victory over the Old Merchant Taylors at Richmond by three goals (one dropped) and two tries to one goal. The game was always interesting, chiefly on account of the brilliant passing of the Oxford back division in the first half. At the outset it appeared that the University would secure the easiest of wins, for within five minutes of the start Steyn crossed the Taylor's line. Lagden kicking a goal. He was quickly followed by C. Gilmour, who scrambled over with a try after Poulton had got to the line. Keeping up the pressure Oxford added further tries by the agency of Stoda and Poulton, Cheeseman increasing the last, and Sampson put Oxford further ahead with a dropped goal. The University thus led at half-time by 20 points. On restarting the Old Boys quite held their own, the pack playing strongly and Saunders at full back, putting in some fine work. The only score after the interval fell to the Taylors, Howard crossing the Dark Blues' line and Ryan converting. Oxford University, 20 points; O. M. T., 5 points.

London Scottish vs. Richmond.—This was a keen and fairly good game at Richmond. The Scotsmen were the better side and deserved their win by three tries to a goal. For some time after the start the play was all in the favour of the Scotsmen, but though they did most of the pressing they were unable to get through until Simpson, from a line near the centre, went right away and from his pass Salvest scored. Twice the Scotsmen had free kicks near the Richmond "25" line, but they could not turn them to account and though nearly always pressing they were unable again to get through. After changing ends Richmond for a time showed much improved form and within five minutes secured the lead. Oglethorpe got away and after a good run made an opening for Plant, who got over, and Dingle placed a goal. The Scottish backs were never well together but were the cleverer and their forwards put in much good work. One rush carrying them down to their opponents' goal line. Purves scored another try after some scrummaging near the corner flag, and a little later Macintosh ran in cleverly wide out after a good round of passing. Neither try was improved. Richmond in the closing stages of the game made a determined effort to pull the game round but were unable to score again. Scottish, 9 points; Richmond, 5 points.

Blackheath vs. Devonport Albion.—A very disappointing game, played at the Rectory field before a rather small crowd, ended in a draw—nothing scored. Blackheath were weakened by the absence of their captain and of their full back, Dickson, but they had Moritz and Dodds on the three-quarter line. The Albion were at full strength, but the three-quarter line was poor, and the two teams proved to be very evenly balanced. With neither side relying on its backs, the game resolved itself into a forward duel, and there was very little to choose between the packs. The visitors had the advantage as a rule in the scrums, but as soon as the ball got loose Blackheath had a little the better of the play. Pillman and Beghie frequently led determined rushes, while Pillman on several occasions gained considerable ground by judicious kicking. On the whole, the Albion had the better of the play in the first half and were unlucky not to score. When the game was in the Blackheath "25" on the left side, Jago kicked across and Hoare had an absolutely undefended line within two yards, had he taken an easy catch, but he knocked on. Lillicrap made some good kicks at the Blackheath goal from penalties in the second half, the ball once going only just under the bar. Blackheath, 0; Devonport Albion, 0.

ROWING.

Oxford University.—The Oxford president, R. C. Bourne, New College, began practice for the trials this week, when he had an eight out for the first time. The race has been fixed for Saturday, 2nd December, over the usual course at Moulsford, so that he has six clear weeks before him. But until the decision of the fours there can be nothing like a representative crew afloat. Seldom has the October Term opened under such favourable weather conditions, but there was some very heavy rain yesterday. The president first had out Gare and Wilkinson for some instruction in the pair, after which the eight was manned, and he coached them to Iffley and back at a very slow rate of striking. The Jesus stroke, Wilkinson, was entrusted with the stroke oar, with Gare at seven. It was a very light combination, the only oarsman going over twelve stone being the Hertford six, Hamilton. The names and weights were:—

	st.	lb.
R. Stephens, Jesus (bow)	10	11
R. C. Moore, St. Catherine's ...	10	3
H. C. Irving, St. Edmund Hall ...	11	10
G. S. Wright, Hertford	10	4
E. K. Bonsey, St. Catharine's ...	11	3
K. I. Hamilton, Hertford	13	4
J. H. Gare, St. Edmund Hall ...	11	4
L. F. Wilkinson, Jesus (stroke) ...	9	12
R. C. Bourne, New College (cox)

The coxswainless fours have now been definitely fixed for Wednesday, 1st November, and following days, the earlier date being necessitated by the probability of eleven crews competing. Magdalen, who are holders of the challenge cup, have re-organised their crew. Originally Wormald was acting as stroke on the bow side, C. L. Baillian three, the freshman E. D. Horsfall two, and E. R. Burgess bow. Under the new arrangement Burgess alone keeps his seat, as Horsfall has been promoted to the stroke thwart, under orthodox conditions, Wormald has gone three, and Baillian has moved to two. They are going exceedingly well, a remark that also applies to New College. Dr. Bourne has been coaching them. Whilst the president is looking after No. 2, who will be very little the inferior crew on the day. Trinity, the only other college that is running two crews, under the direction of the Rev. H. Legge, have made drastic changes in the arrangement since last week. Poole, who rowed stroke of No. 1, has gone three, making way for Buller, who had been rowing bow, and the latter thwart is now held by H. C. Doyne, who for some time stroked the second, a position now occupied by Quiller Couch. Dodds, who was doing double duty last week, has settled down at three in the second crew, and Graham has displaced Stride at two. Both crews are neat and the first appears to be pretty fast. G. C. Drinkwater, the old Wadham Blue, has been looking after the interests of Christ Church, and on Friday he also took Keble in hand, but at the moment the latter are not particularly promising. Brasenose are being stroked by W. G. Nott Bower, with A. E. Ellis three; and Balliol have an Eton freshman at either end of the boat, H. K. Denham occupying the bow and H. A. M. Wedderburn the stroke thwarts.

Cambridge University.—All the crews practising for the coxswainless fours are making capital headway, and seven sets are likely to enter. The holders, Third Trinity, are quite the best combination. Through the indisposition of G. E. Tower, the trial eight oarsman, L. S. Lloyd, will stroke. Mr. Gibbon, the old Blue, is their mentor. Hall have resorted to changes and are rowing Aliff, Swann, Adams and Whitfield. Jesus have come on under the supervision of Mr. Shields, and are now stroked by Gerwood, while First Trinity are coached by Mr. Sanderson, and have Collins, the cricket Blue, at stroke. Pembroke are led by Leyland, Caius by Macgregor, and Third Trinity II. by Shennan, the Etonian Freshman.

The president, Mr. Arbuthnot, opened work in connection with the trial eights on Friday, and on Saturday advised the following oarsmen in small boat practice:—A. E. Collins, Magdalene; F. D. Yeatman, Clare; W. J. Croasdale, Emmanuel; C. E. Bevier, Pembroke; H. R. Dobb, Pembroke; W. G. Atkinson, Emmanuel; P. Mathews, King's; and V. Clough, Christ's.

BOXING.

WELTER CHAMPIONSHIP OF EUROPE.

Charpentier, the cleverest of the French boxers, and Young Josephs, who holds the Lonsdale Belt in his division and the Welter-Weight Championship of England, met on Monday night at the King's Hall, London Road, in a 20-round contest under National Sporting Club Rules for the Welter-Weight Championship of Europe. Young Josephs retired at the end of the 10th round after having had much the worst of an encounter in which his opponent was as brilliant in attack as he was sound in defence.

Much interest had been felt in this match on both sides of the Channel, and a number of French enthusiasts were present at the King's Hall to encourage their compatriot and, incidentally, to add to the gaiety of the spectators by their quaint outcries. Boxing is now a very popular diversion in Paris and in several of the provincial cities, and the heroism of Charpentier, who is only 18 years of age, has been celebrated by a multitude of French impressionists. Young Josephs, a very amiable specimen of the modern pugilist, was naturally expected to win. In pace and knowledge of ringcraft he is the equal of any other of the Lonsdale belt-holders and, though he has not a very severe punch and lacks the virtuosity of the incomparable Jim Driscoll, it was not thought possible that he could be beaten by the young Frenchman, though the latter had won all his previous fights. The two men were obviously trained to the hour when they entered the ring; each weighed 10st. 6lb., but Charpentier had a considerable advantage in height and reach.

During the first three rounds nothing much was done, though twice Josephs narrowly escaped being caught in one of Charpentier's right upper-cuts (which closely resemble Johnson's famous match-winning blow), and once a right-swing missed by an inch which, if it had reached the chin, must have ended the contest. Afterwards, however, Josephs was outclassed; in the sixth round he was down thrice, and subsequently a large portion of his time in the ring was spent on the floor. Now and again Josephs, who played for the body throughout, landed what seemed an effectual blow, but, except in the eighth round, when Charpentier seemed to slow down after one of these visitations, the Frenchman was never in trouble. At present he is but the outline of the man he will become in, say, his 25th year, and if he acquires sufficient weight it will not be necessary to look further for a "white hope" worthy of the name.

NAVY AND ARMY CHAMPIONSHIPS.

On 21st October 1905, our Bluejackets were fighting to a tune which, although it changed to a dirge for England's greatest hero, still preserved the harmony of Europe from discord. On Saturday, 21st October 1911, the Bluejackets commemorated the glorious but sorrowful occasion in a fashion that Nelson himself would have cordially approved: not by funeral services or melancholy requiems, but by cheerful whole-hearted boxing, that instils in time of peace the arts and the temperament that are necessary to the practice of war, and that left the antagonists of the ring as good friends at the finish of the fight as are the England and France of to-day.

"England expects every man to do his duty" was signalled to-day on Nelson's old flagship, now superannuated in Portsmouth Harbour, and whatever the others outside did, I can answer for it that every man in the Connaught Drill Hall did his duty this evening, whether as boxer, official, or paying spectator.

The officers were quite moderate, saving those in the feather-weight, where last year's winner, Wildman-Lushington, again took premier honours. An unfortunate disqualification overtook the ex-heavy-weight champion, Captain Craven, in the heavy-weights. The captain was disqualified for striking his opponent after the sound of the gong for the end of the first round. Craven had victory almost in hand, and he explained subsequently that he had never previously boxed to the gong as a timekeeper, and it conveyed nothing to him in the contest. Results:—

Officers.

Feather-Weight.—Final: Lieutenant G. Wildman-Lushington (H. M. S. Neptune) beat Lieutenant I. A. Shuter (H. M. S. Vincent). The last-named was the better boxer, but Lushington was the stronger, and in the second round he upset his man, and the bout was stopped in his favour.

Light-Weight.—Final: Midshipman P. B. Lawd— (H. M. S. Bellerophon) beat Assistant-Paymaster Leyshon (H. M. S. Vincent). The first round was quiet and even. In the second Leyshon, who was the shorter and lighter man, forced the exchanges and took a lead, but at the finish the judges voted the other way.

Middle-Weight.—Final: Lieutenant H. D. Bentinck (3rd Coldstream Guards) beat Midshipman L. H. Bayley (H. M. S. Argyll) after a scrambling bout.

Heavy-Weight.—Final: Lieutenant A. Mortsay Read, 1st Northampton Regiment, beat Captain G. W. Bentley, 4th Battalion Middlesex Regiment. The form was very moderate on both sides, but Read scored faster in the last round.

Men.

Men's Feather-Weight.—Final: Lance-Corporal T. Evans Royal Scots, beat Driver Windebank, A. S. C.

Light-Weight.—Final: Lance-Corporal T. Miller, Loyal North Lancashire, beat Driver Condon, R. A.

Welter-Weight.—Final: Lance-Sergeant Baker, Royal West Kent Regiment, beat Private Jones, 1st. South Wales Borderers.

Middle-Weight.—Final: Private W. Palmer, 1st Leicestershire Regiment, beat Private McEnroy, Irish Guards.

Light Heavy-Weight.—Final: Private T. Harris, 2nd Coldstream Guards, beat Stoker Priseman, his Majesty's ship Hercules.

Heavy-Weight.—Final: Gunner Healey, R. G. A., beat Petty-Officer Kane, Physical Training School.

MEERUT AUTUMN TOURNAMENT.

KING'S DRAGOON GUARDS vs. 17TH LANCERS' "A" TEAM.—A large gathering assembled on the polo ground to see these teams contest the final match of the Tournament on the 8th instant. The 18th Tiwana Lancers were "At Home" and Lady Lake gave away the Cup to the winners at the close of an excellent game. Both teams were playing at the top of their form and fast play was witnessed throughout. The Lancers had bad luck on occasions and were eventually beaten by 8 goals to 5.

First Chukker.—The Lancers ran the ball down, but their final shot went out wide. Then the Dragoons attacked and drew first blood. Weinholt nearly put through again shortly after but the ball just missed and the Lancers took up the attack, equalising before the close of the period.

Second Chukker.—The Dragoons attacked and after two unsuccessful runs to the Lancers' flags, the ball was at length put through, Cheape scoring with a long shot. They continued the pressure and Spurrier added to the score a little later.

Third Chukker.—A miss by the Lancers enabled Weinholt to get away and hit another goal. Fast up and down play followed and then the Lancers got away and Lockett scored.

Fourth Chukker.—The Dragoons pressed but were pulled up for offside. They got going again soon after and Cheape hit a goal. The Lancers attacked for the rest of the period and put on two more goals.

Fifth Chukker.—Another miss by the Lancers let Weinholt in and he hit a goal. The Dragoons kept up the pressure and scored in a scrimmage in front of the Lancers' goal. The Lancers made desperate efforts on changing ends but could not add to their score. A foul against the Dragoons closing the chukker.

Sixth Chukker.—From the penalty hit Lockett took the ball down and Eckstein put it through. Play then returned to Lancers' territory and Weinholt put on another goal before time was called with the score:—K. D. G.'s, 8 goals; Lancers, 5 goals. Teams:—

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE features of the week's cricket have been the second three-figure innings by that excellent cricketer B. A. White, but prior to White's first century M. Dass of the Howrah Sporting Club got a not out 104 against the Medical (Military) A. Aziz playing for Nattore made 109 not out against the Orientals on Saturday, while the fifth century was compiled by K. Bose of the Aryans, who contributed a not out 128 against the Bengal Veterinary College last Sunday. Calcutta, after winning two matches easily, and having the best of a drawn game against the Town Club last Saturday afternoon, lost to St. Xavier's after an exciting game by 13 runs on Sunday. Another surprising result was recorded on Saturday when the Rangers lost badly to the Customs, the latter winning by nine wickets. These matches always prove interesting and generally there is not much to choose between the teams, but on this occasion the Rangers were all out for 38, while the Customs got 100 for one wicket.

It is pleasing to note that Jute Mills United have inaugurated a cricket club, and on Saturday in their opening match against the Rangers' second eleven, the Scotch men managed to win by three wickets. The Jute team is composed of several members who played for the Bristol United soccer team this season.

Dalhousie were badly beaten by the Telegraph in a half-day match last Saturday, and the following day the Trades Club suffered another defeat at Ichapur, but I am sorry to state that the Dalhousie scores were not available to the Press. This is also noticeable in some of the Indian teams who invariably cannot find their scoring book when they are beaten!

Before going into details of the more important matches I have much pleasure in recording a very sporting declaration by the captain of the Wellington Branch of the Y.M.C.A. in a Saturday afternoon match at the Fort against the Rifle Brigade. The Y.M.C.A batted first, and in an hour and a half registered 115 for five wickets, after which the closure was applied, giving their opponents an hour and twenty minutes for batting. The Rifle Brigade also acted in a sporting manner and taking the risk of hitting at every ball they were successful, scoring 187 for all out. Most teams would have played for a draw but the officers of the Rifle Brigade, like the true sportsmen they are, were determined that the match would be decided one way or the other.

In the match at the Gardens on Saturday, there was some excellent bowling witnessed, and although five of the Calcutta batsmen contrived to get into double figures out of the six wickets that fell, a 28 by A. J. Carter was the highest individual score. Calcutta declared at 116 for six, while the Town Club got 66 for seven wickets. Heckle, for Calcutta, who bowled unchanged, took five wickets for 14 runs, while N. Mukerji for the visitors took five for 43.

The Rangers against the Customs could only score a meagre total of 38, and this was due to the excellent bowling of McCready and Marsden, the former taking seven wickets for 24 runs, and Marsden three for 12. McCready and Quiterio contributed 57 and 36 not out, respectively, the latter's innings being faultless. McCready gave two chances, but he batted in good style.

The half-day match between Ballygunge and the Y.M.C.A. on the latter's ground was of a most unsatisfactory character, Ballygunge declaring 143 for five, while the Y.M.C.A. got 78 for one wicket. H. M. Sherman (89) for Ballygunge and A. Atkinson (not out 51) for the home team were the principal contributors, but both received "lives."

Nattore's xi opened their season on Saturday, but the Oriental Sporting were no match for the Maharaja's team, who won by 188 runs after declaring at 271 for seven wickets. Aziz, who scored a not out 109, was let off five times. The fielding of the Orientals was very bad indeed and they were all out for 83.

The Messerers, now that Mr. Knox has returned after his six months' holiday, are doing well, and they beat the Medicals on Saturday by a wicket and 66 runs.

In the match on the Dalhousie ground, on Saturday, against the Telegraph the home team were all out for 26, while the visitors got 68 for eight. Alridge for the winners took five wickets for 9 runs.

Barrackpore opened their season on Sunday when Calcutta paid them a visit, the result being a win for the home side by 64 runs. Calcutta totalled 84, to which A. J. Carter contributed 32 not out, while Barrackpore registered 148. Lieutenants Light-foot (45) and Gould (24) being top scorers. Simms (3 for 16) and Hewlett (4 for 12) on the winning side and C. Reid (4 for 41) for Calcutta were the most successful bowlers.

In the Calcutta vs. St Xavier's match the latter totalled 116 to their opponents 103. Marsden's five wickets for 26 runs was the outstanding feature of the match. The fielding on both sides was also very good—the men in the outfield saving many boundaries.

Stephens'
do not clog the type and are very durable in use.
They yield clear impressions.

In the Inter-Club match Ballygunge vs. Bankers and Brokers, the former won by 79 runs. The Brokers made 120, while Ballygunge registered 199. B. A. White for the winners subscribed 117 by sound cricket. A. P. Milne for the Brokers took six wickets for 33 runs.

On Sunday Nattore beat the Parsees by 197 runs. Nattore put up 226 and the Parsees only 38. S. K. Roy for the winners took seven wickets for 13 runs.

CALCUTTA GOLF CLUB.

THE Calcutta Golf Club opened their new season with the usual tiffin and competitions last Saturday. About 200 members sat down to the excellent lunch provided by Messrs. F. Peliti at the conclusion of which Mr. R. Duncan, the newly elected Captain, proposed the toasts of the King and the Calcutta Golf Club, which were drunk with all honours. The afternoon was then taken up with the competitions for the Opening Day Cup (for those with a handicap of less than 6) and the Duffer's Prize (for handicaps of 6 and over). The former was won by Mr. John Campbell and the Duffer's Prize by Mr. R. M. Black. Scores :—

Bibendum on Tyre Fashions.

As a practical motorist, have you ever been struck by the extraordinary divergence of opinion which our many competitors exhibit regarding the correct design for the tread of an all-rubber cover? Look at the adjoining "pictures," taken from issues of various motor papers. It is a strange fact that most other tyre companies base their claim upon public affection because their tyres are manufactured with a special form of tread, guaranteed to perform all sorts of wonderful feats.

Why?

It would seem that they are trying to please customers much in the same way as a picture dealer who, in exhibiting a picture set in a showy frame, diverts the attention of the purchaser from the real object—the picture itself—by enlarging upon the merits of the frame.

But where does the value lie? In the painting itself or the frame?

The very fact of such a great variety of fancy pattern tyres proves conclusively that none of these patterns is correct. Either one pattern is the best, and should be universally adopted by every tyre manufacturer throughout the world, or all are unnecessary. The only redeeming feature I can see is that they serve as an advertising point for pushing sales; in which case we must say that the tyre manufacturer has not the interest of his clients at heart.

He ought not to say: "Now here are a few of my assorted patterns. I haven't the ghost of a notion which is the best; it is for you to make your choice." What he should say is: "I have experimented with all sorts and shapes of tyres, and this is the model I have found to be the best; consequently I do not manufacture any other design. If I did, I would be deceiving you."

If the grooves on one tread are good, then how can the ribs on another be equally good?

And what happens to all those lumps? At the outset they support the whole weight and bear the driving strain; then, after a time, disgusted with having so much work put upon them, they quickly disappear. Result? A plain tread cover.

Again, have you ever compared the thickness of a Michelin Square Tread with a grooved or fancy pattern cover? Measured from the bottom of the grooves there is nearly $\frac{3}{8}$ of an inch less substance than in our Square Tread; and, in the case of another, if we measure the tread at its thickest part, we find 15½ m/m. as opposed to the 18 m/m. of the Michelin Square Tread, i.e., $\frac{1}{16}$ of an inch less substance.

You must not be surprised then if they last a shorter time than a Michelin Square Tread; and yet some of these tyres cost you more than you would pay for one of our Square Treads. Then, to revert to our original comparison, why pay more than the picture is worth because of the ornamental frame?

Was I not right when I said it was purely a huge piece of advertising bluff?

MOTOR NOTES.

JUDGING from the advance information which has reached me as to the 1912 models of the leading motor-car firms, it would seem that the chain, while it has almost disappeared as the means of final transmission on motor-cars—except those of the industrial type—is again finding an application in other portions of the chassis mechanism, notably in the gear-box and in the driving of the valve-actuating cam shaft. The new departure owes its origin to the endeavour that has been made to reduce noise as much as possible in what may be termed the power plant. Last year several firms made the innovation of substituting chains for the somewhat noisy gear wheels formerly employed, while many others were known to be carrying out experiments in the same direction. Apparently the experience gained has been of a satisfactory nature, for the forthcoming show will reveal the fact that several manufacturers have decided to adopt a chain drive for the cam and magneto shaft on their 1912 models.

LARGER-SIZED tyres and larger wheels are finding many advocates, and the arguments in favour of the larger wheel are perhaps more obvious to the average motorist. For instance, it is plainly evident that the larger wheel has a greater leverage in overcoming obstacles than has a small one; that it bridges depressions into which the smaller wheel will drop; that its tread, i.e., its circumference, being longer, it will be subject to less wear in covering a given distance; that it imprisons a greater volume of air, and hence offers a greater resiliency than the tyre of the same section on a wheel of smaller diameter. It is not, perhaps, so evident to the ordinary automobilist that (as has been pointed out by several tyre manufacturers) the greater radius of curvature of the larger tyre implies less abrupt flexures at the point of contact with an obstacle in the roadway; that the strain exerted on a large tyre is distributed over a greater area; and that the radiating surface is so large as to ensure adequate cooling almost at all times. Still, these are all strong arguments in favour of increasing wheel sizes up to more reasonable limits.

THE British Road Board is fortunate in having, at the end of its first year of existence, the sum of 1½ millions of pounds to operate with. Whence came the money? Out of the pockets of the motorists—every penny of it! And it is being expended to meet the cost of road-improvement throughout the United Kingdom. Some years ago, in the course of an interview, the Hon'ble Arthur Stanley, M.P., said :—"More important than legislative enactments as to the motor-car itself is the question of the maintenance of the main roads of the country." Motorists' money is now available, whilst a competent Road Board is at the head of affairs, so that an amelioration of existing conditions has now been instituted, not merely for the benefit of motorists, but for all other classes of road-users, who contribute nothing to the funds!

ALREADY a quarter of a million of money has been allocated by the Board for divers kinds of improvements, the most important being the construction of the "first great motor road." The highway will connect Birmingham and Wolverhampton, portions of existing thoroughfares being utilised and widened, and new sections constructed. The Board will not bear the whole of the cost, but as the new road is only 11 miles in length it will be admitted that its contribution of £30,000 is a handsome one. The road will avoid busy centres, will have no bad corners or steep gradients, and will shorten the distance of the present route by 1¼ miles. The United States authorities are also alive to the importance of good roads, and 25 millions sterling is to be spent in a series of annual contributions to form a great highway system throughout the country, while Canada will respond and build connecting roads in the Dominion.

THERE are few if any parallels to the wonderful strides that have been made in the short space of 10 years in automobilism and in automobile construction. The modern luxurious and silent running car bears but the faintest semblance to the troublesome yet pleasurable vehicles with which the pioneers of the movement enjoyed themselves in more ways than one. In the early days of the Motor-car Act considerable time had been spent in getting a car ready for a projected run and when this was done, and everything was ready for a start, all were hopeful but not confident, of getting home without a breakdown of one kind or another, for it was rarely that a spin of 50 miles or so could be undertaken without some incident arising. Many are the tales that could be told of experiences on the roads with these early machines, and, although not without their annoyance at the time, we believe that the elder generation of motorists look back with pride on the part they took in the initial stages of educating the public to the coming revolution in road traffic. Nowadays long excursions are undertaken and hardly any fears are entertained as to the possibility of making a non-stop run of a hundred or more miles. On the contrary, a motorist would be rather disgusted should his car fail in such an attempt, even with no more preparation than would be given by filling up with petrol, oil and water.

IT should be borne in mind that if the exhaust gases cannot freely pass away, back pressure takes place, in exactly the same way as a throttled exhaust in a steam engine. A simple analogy to this is of trying to force air by the aid of a cycle pump with a finger over the end, which causes the plunger to spring back. What takes place in an interal combustion-engine when there is a back pressure is much the same as the above; but the explosion is sufficiently strong to overcome the reverse influences operating by the exhaust not getting away quickly enough.

THE chief cause of clogged or dirty silencers is over-lubrication. There is often some misspent petrol, and always some carbon passing away with the exhaust, and, though even in a dry state a little will lodge in the crevices of the exhaust box When in this state little harm follows, and an extra exhaust usually corrects any trouble in this way; but if such deposits become saturated with oil, it is transformed into a greasy mass Too rich a mixture, to a modified extent, will have the same effect; but as the foreign element in this case is more of a nature of a spirit, the trouble is not so pronounced.

MANY of the larger cars are now fitted with an electric motor for lighting and heating purposes, and an American firm is making further use of the current to start the engine, the electric motor used having several novel features, which is claimed to overcome the difficulties hitherto encountered in electric starting devices. The manufacturers state that the trials proved completely successful. Control is obtained by means of a pedal, the depression of which brings the electric motor into action, and sets the engine proper running.

THERE are many motorists who maintain that the car engines run better at night than during day-light, and various reasons have been advanced why they do. The most scientific and satisfactory explanation I have read emanates from an American motorist. He says that in certain localities under certain conditions a marked difference can be noticed in the running of the engine by night and by day. The motor actually has more snap and speed at night. This will be particularly noticeable in localities having a damp climate, and where the days are warm and the nights cool. The main reason is that in humid localities the amount of moisture or water-vapour in the air is markedly less at night than in the day, while such conditions do not obtain in places having a cold or dry climate. Introducing more water-vapour into the cylinder would tend to stop the proper combustion of the charge. The power of an engine is, within certain limits, dependent on the speed at which it runs; hence a slower engine means less power. Moisture in the air also has a tendency to impair the carburation.

MANY motorists continue to drive their cars month after month with but the most cursory attention, including the occasional adjustment of parts which may wear loose. It is not until the wear becomes so appreciable that the car rapidly drops in efficiency, and becomes noisy and difficult to control, that they finally decide to take it to an expert repairer for a thorough overhaul. The Motor News rightly points out that this is very false economy, for the damage done to the car by such neglect is, to a certain extent, permanent, and the repairer's overhaul bill will be much greater than if the work had been put in hand a year and a half earlier. I would, therefore, advise all motorists to have their cars examined at least yearly, and more especially those who have no great mechanical skill and who employ chauffeurs who are not mechanics in any sense of the term. Whenever I hear a motorist toast that his car has not received attention for several years, I always feel that he is living in a fool's paradise; and that he is piling up trouble and expense for the future.

AVIATION NOTES.

THE Wright Brothers who have been experimenting quietly for months are reported to be about to test a new aeroplane, on which the usual propellers will be conspicuous by their absence, their place being taken by moveable wings in imitation of bird flight.

ANOTHER accident marked the Flying Meeting at Rheims on Sunday last, Mons. Prevost making a trial flight in a biplane with four passengers just before dusk was in the act of landing when he was compelled to make a sharp turning in order to avoid another machine. The machine caught in the rope of one of the sheds with the result that the peg which held the rope to the ground was torn out, and hit a soldier who was standing near with such violence that he had to be conveyed to hospital in a serious condition. The aeroplane was damaged but the aviator was unhurt.

OF twelve candidates for scholarships in aeronautics offered by the Imperial College of Science, London, two were recently successful in obtaining awards tenable for the year 1911-12. The value of the awarded scholarships lies between fifty pounds (£50) and £150, in addition to exemption from College fees. Owing to the large number of young men who are nowadays giving their attention to flying, it is anticipated that a very large number of students in science and engineering will undertake research work in scientific and mechanical problems connected with aeronautics.

THE Admiralty have accepted the offer made last week by the Liverpool Branch of the Navy League to present them with a fully equipped aeroplane for instruction purposes. The Admiralty stated that a monoplane with a 50 H.-P. engine would be suitable, and it should be constructed under Admiralty supervision. A subscription list for the cost of the aeroplane has been opened in Liverpool, which is the first city to make such an offer.

THE aeroplanes which are to be commanded by Captain Piazza, have arrived at Tripoli, and have caused a great consternation among the natives. They think that the aviators can fly as well without the machines, for wherever they go they are followed about by a wondering crowd, who expect them to disappear among the clouds with one mighty leap.

QUITE a novel scheme has been put into execution recently from the roof of a large garage in Birmingham. On the huge flat roof in the centre of the city two baloons are inflated and trips undertaken according to order beforehand. The initial accents were made by a number of well known people of Birmingham who were piloted by Mr. E. T. Willows, the owner of the baloon City of Cardiff. Another baloon, a smaller one, carried one passenger, viz:—Mr. Willows' mechanic. Both made successful flights, the larger baloon passing over the City of Birmingham, and on to Leicester, finally coming to earth about 5 P.M. at Cadby, about three or four miles from Leicester on the Market Harborough Road.

ON Wednesday of last week, was the final day of the competition for the Manville prize for the test aggregate flight on a All-British Machine with a passenger. Attempts were made by Mr. Cody, at Aldershot, and Mr. Pixton, at Brooklands, to improve their records. The result was a win for Mr. Pixton who was already leading on a Bristol biplane. During the eight specified days on which flying for this prize had been permissible, Mr. Pixton has placed an aggregate of 187 miles while Mr. Cody was second with 156 miles to his credit.

THE following notice has been given to all aviators:—"The Home Office has written to the Royal Aero Club with regard to the interruption caused to Divine Service by flights on Sundays, and the Committee therefore appeal to all aviators to refrain from making any flights over or near Churches on that day."

ANOTHER fatal accident has occurred in France. It happened on the 12th instant during the course of the military competition at Rheims. Level was returning from a flight on a biplane, when suddenly the machine was seen to lurch. The pilot, for a moment, succeeded to right it, but immediately afterwards, the machine dropped like a stone, striking against some telegraph wires. Level was found beneath the débris, suffering from a severe injury to the spine, to which he succumbed at the hospital.

LAST Tuesday arrangements were made for the carriage by aeroplane of a consignment of boots from the factory of a well known boot manufacturers in Northampton, to the Hendon Aerodrome. Mr. Moorhouse flew from his base at Huntingdon to Northampton on that day to get the first batch, but on arriving there he decided not to continue the journey to Hendon as the weather was too rough. Mr. F. K. McClean has made the first extended flight on the new Short twin engine biplane, which has been completed at the Eastchurch Aerodrome. Leaving Eastchurch with a passenger one day last week, Mr. McClean piloted the machine over Capel Hill to Leysdown, and then followed the north bank of the Swale to King's Ferry. Mr. McClean afterwards crossed the Island to the vicinity of Queensborough and Sheerness, and returned to Eastchurch by way of Minster. The flight was of three-quarter of an hour's duration, and there was a strong wind blowing, but the new system of control gave great stability to the machine. Messrs. Short are building another machine of the same type, and also laying down a biplane to be driven by two 100 H.-P. engines working four propellers.

MR. ROGERS, the American aviator who is endeavouring to fly from New York to San Francisco for the £10,000 prize offered by Mr. W. R. Hearst, reached Kansas City on the 10th instant. He has now covered 1,483 miles, and has thus beaten the world's record cross country flight of 1,263 miles, accomplished by Mr. Atwood this year.

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF SPORT.

THE publisher, Mr. William Heinemann, and the numerous staff of contributors are to be heartily congratulated on the completion of the new edition of the "Encyclopædia of Sport," the third and fourth volumes of which have just been issued. As we stated in a notice of the first volume (30th March), the work is vastly ahead of the original edition, most of the articles having been revised and brought up to date, while some, like those on tobogganing and motoring, are practically new.

Indeed, so far as the purely sporting articles are concerned the work is practically all that can be desired; and the same is to a great extent true with regard to the natural history articles, many of those dealing with big game having been revised and augmented by Mr. Lydekker. There is, however, still room for improvement in some cases, Mr. Bryden, for instance, revealing his complete lack of anatomical knowledge by suggesting that the okapi is as near akin to antelopes as it is to the giraffe; while in the article on the ostrich we find an old theory revived that the smooth shells of North African ostrich-eggs are due to their having been scoured and polished by the Arabs, whereby the pitting characteristic of eastern and southern eggs has been obliterated!

The beautiful coloured plates of game, shore, and water birds reproduced from sketches by the unrivalled pencil of Mr. Thorburn render the volumes far more attractive than would have been the case had all the illustrations been in black and white.

As we have had occasion to point out previously, the practice of having articles on kindred subjects written by different authorities leads to a certain amount of overlapping and inequality of treatment. But this is counterbalanced by the fact that in a large number of cases the articles—more especially those devoted to purely sporting subjects—have been written by the first authorities, and may therefore be considered to contain the last word on their respective subject-matter.

To review even one of these fine, handsome volumes within the compass of a single article would, of course, be an absolute impossibility, and we can therefore do no more than refer to the names of the authors of a few of the more important articles in the fourth volume. This opens with "Rackets," a subject for which Mr. E. O. Phydell Bouverie was originally responsible, but whose article has been revised by Mr. E. B. Noel, and every racket-player will therefore know that it is all it should be. Mr. Walter Winans, who gives some very interesting information concerning ancient and modern revolver, concludes his review by remarking that in his opinion the ordinary type of revolver is "preferable to any automatic pistol, all of which are not only dangerous to handle, but have too small a calibre to be of sufficient stopping power when they hit a man."

Revolvers lead on naturally on to rifles, which we find are treated of by Mr. Bryden, who was, no doubt, in his time an authority on those best adapted for use on the South African veldt. Whether he has been able to keep himself abreast of the latest improvements, it is not for us to say; but, personally, we should have preferred to see the subject treated by some experienced big-game hunter of the present generation, fresh from the fields of his triumphs.

Several experts contribute to the subject of rowing, among whom Mr. D. H. McLean takes the first place, with perhaps the longest article, while Mr. Caspar Whitney discusses the American aspect of the subject. To the article "Salmon" Mr. J. Turner Turner contributes a couple of very striking photographs of kelts feeding, and we should be much gratified to know how they were done. As regards the fish itself, the article appears well up to date, especially in the matter of the Salmon's practical abstention from food during its sojourn in freshwater. That well-known naturalist-sportsman Sir Herbert Maxwell discusses Salmon-fishing, at which he is an expert; while Mr. W. Hall tracts the tyro in the mysteries of tying Salmon-flies. For sea-fishing no better authority than Mr. Aflalo could possibly have been found, as he has had experience in many parts of the world, including tarpon-fishing in Florida, which is probably the most exciting kind of live-fishing to be had anywhere.

Tobogganing and skating in Switzerland are described in exquisitely illustrated articles, which, in consequence of the great popularity attained of late years, appear to have been very largely re-written.

With the bare mention that Lord Dunraven's long and admirable article on yachting have been brought up to date by Mr. F. B. Cooke, we take leave of what is indisputably the book for sportsmen of all classes.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The past week has witnessed a good number of new arrivals and the Eastern turf metropolis—the Epsom of India as it has been more than once very aptly dubbed—is fast filling up both as regards its human and equine population. The weather which, up to within a few days ago was unpropitious in the last degree has taken a turn for the better and we are now getting something more like the good climate to which we consider ourselves entitled and which is Calcutta's proudest boast for three and a half months in the year. Five more strings, Mumford's, Wishart's, Kendall's Greenhalgh's and Norton's, have made their appearance at the time of writing and there are not many more now left to come, but we are still about a hundred horses short of last year's figures, there being at present only 189 horses in training on this course as opposed to 285 last season. J. D. Scott's, Bence's, Byramjee's, Harper's and Pearson's strings are still due and they probably will collectively make up the present deficit. The only prominent Viceroy's Cup candidates still to arrive are Cattaro, and Black Buck, who has not yet been entered but will, we understand, make his appearance in the second entries, which close on the 5th December. Another final entry may, we understand, be Black Douglas, who showed such good form at Poona and is looking extremely well at the moment and making all the progress that Ramshaw could possibly desire. It is probable that the party which will be found contesting India's principal weight for age race this year will be the following:—

Cattaro.	Retort.	Black Buck.
Mayfowl.	Wave Bird.	Maria Farina.
Vavasor.	Last Call.	Black Douglas.
Lawn Sand.	Aborigine.	Miracle.

Present indications do not promise us more than a round dozen and it is even possible that we may see even less, but so far as can be seen the above are all more or less "probables." Of the horses here at the moment Mayfowl and Vavasor are the most canvassed in Mr. Apcar's stable, Wave Bird in Mr. Galstaun's, and Last Call in Blench's stables. Last year's winner looks hard and well and does his work in the morning in his usual placid and unconcerned manner. The horse is quite forward enough and we do not suppose that Watson will do more than give him enough fast work to ensure his being clean in the wind on the day of the race. It is all that is needed, for he carries plenty of good muscle and his wiry hard-bitten appearance is very attractive. If he is tried with any of his stable companions it may possibly result in his being very handsomely beaten, but knowing his dislike to "rehearsals" it will be unwise to argue from this that he will not run as good, possibly a better, horse than he did when he spreadeagled his field in last year's race. There are very few horses who could come out and win a big hurdle race and three days later the principal long-distance flat race in India. It takes a staunch one and a good one to stand up to this sort of thing: but we know that this is exactly what Mayfowl is, and though he was considered the "ugly duckling" of his stable last year and Vavasor was their best horse, he showed us what a mistake that was and how much his trainer had underrated him. The same thing is being said this year and there are those who believe that the resurrected Vavasor will justify last year's opinion and prove to be the best of the Apcar division. Personally we are not over-fond of rechauffés in India, and though Vavasor continues to do his work and shows no present signs of breaking down we hold the opinion that he is not as good a horse as Mayfowl, even if he is at his best and even if he should happen to beat Mayfowl, Lawn Sand and Co. in a gallop, which he may possibly do. We shall continue to believe that Mayfowl is the best Viceroy's Cup horse that Mr. Apcar has in his stable until he is beaten in that race by one of his stable companions. Wave Bird and Prince Rupert also continue to progress, but the popular verdict on both of them is that they are far too big. Fergusson we know regrets that it was not feasible to give them a race or two in Poona, and he has advised his patron that it will be necessary to slip at least a couple of races into each of them before their big engagement here. Wave Bird carries far too big a barrel on him—to put things politely—and as those who saw him run when Mr. George Edwardes owned him and he was trained by P. Hartigan say that he never looked like this when he won his races at Home, it will be very necessary to dispose of a good deal of this avoirdupois before we can say with confidence that he is fighting fit. There are those who say that he will not be Mr. Galstaun's best for the Cup on the day, but this we are much inclined to doubt, for we have lost all confidence in Prince Rupert's ability to get over a long distance like the 1¾ mile of the Viceroy's Cup. We shall be greatly surprised if Prince Rupert is not strictly reserved for the Trials, which is a race that if he is anywhere near his English form ought to be within his capacity, even with a very fast horse like the Colonial-bred Soultline in the race. It is, we consider, far more likely that Maria Farina will accompany Wave Bird to the post in the Viceroy's Cup. There is a custom in India to start most of the horses engaged in the Cup for the 1 mile Trials which race is run exactly three days before the big event, and we take leave to think that it is a pernicious one and certainly of recent years has not proved itself to be a wise experiment, for the Trials winners who have started hot favourites for the long dart have almost invariably gone down ignominiously. Since 1899 no winner of the Trials has won the Cup. Cherry won the Trials in 1900 and the Cup in 1899. And we have had a good many failures since then. Record Reign's downfall before Vasto in 1902 was a notable one. The Kuar Sahib's horse won the Trials of that year: he was known to be able to stay and the Cup looked a good thing for him: but the short race did not improve him and a slight feverish cold he had finished him. Dalkeith's year was another notable failure. This horse won the short race in slashing form and Mr. Galstaun, who was very anxious to possess something good enough to out Great Scot, who was then reported to be slightly amiss, bought a share in Dalkeith immediately after the Trials and ran him in his own colours in the Cup. Dalkeith displaced Great Scot in the favouritism and started at level money. Dalkeith was badly beaten and so for the matter of that was Great Scot, as Dr. Spooner Hart's fine horse Long Tom, a 9 to 1 chance at the start, swooped down on Mr. Apcar's champion of the two previous years and, in the old Leicestershire phraseology, cut them all down and hung them up to dry. Experience therefore teaches us that not only is it bad policy to try and win the double with the same horse, but that the law of chances is against it, for although some of these blazing hot favourites after winning the Trials have seemingly not been adversely affected by their expeditions in the one-mile contest have obviously not been benefited. It is against all common sense to expect a horse to come out and do his absolute best in two severe races within such a very short period, the more so as the Viceroy's Cup is a particularly trying contest.

Last Call was sent along a bit last Saturday morning accompanied by Bambino and is a nice level mover, but he is not attractive, and until he gives us some earnest of returning to some measure of form it is not possible to pronounce a decided opinion about his chances one way or the other. If he can be got to within even 10lb. of his best English form the Viceroy's Cup is all over. Those who know this horse's history at Home shake their heads over him and very rightly say that Brewer would never have let a long-distance horse of his class go out of his stable if he had thought that there was any chance whatever of his coming back to his best. There may perhaps be some justification for disregarding his extremely poor display in the Aga Khan Cup in Poona, but Bleach then considered the horse to be forward enough to advise the owner to back him—and at the weight Last Call had it would have been almost flying in the face of Providence to let him run loose. The fact remains, however, he showed that he was not well enough to get there though he ran well for a good bit of the way. He will probably be sent out before the Cup in a race to sharpen him up, and we shall them be better able to say how he is likely to shape in his more important engagement.

RETORT, the only other Cup horse of any note at present in Calcutta, who has been out on the course looks well and she showed an inclination to return to form at the back end of last season and she has been sound ever since: but there is no getting round it that she belongs to the doubtful brigade and we also do not put her in the same class as those who are most likely to be in the forefront of the battle, Mayfowl and Wave Bird. All "Mr. Holmes'" horses are looking very well and amongst the new ones are some that attract considerable attention. Blenheim Orange, the hurdler, is a beautiful dark chestnut all over quality and of great power and substance. He is a very compact, beautifully coupled horse, and stands over a lot of ground. Don Urbano is a bright bay a bit too much on the leg perhaps for some people's fancy, but we do not think that a great deal need be said about that. He is a very good looking one and so is the big chestnut colt Orange Pekoe. Skehanagh is a very neat little mare indeed, a dark brown. She is only a two-year-old and is by Symington out of Cream. They have not given her much rest this year as she has been out twelve times but has not won. She looks in very good order and "Mr. Holmes" does not, we understand, intend to ask her to do much for a living until she has had full opportunity of getting acclimatised. She looks good enough to be worth taking care of. Hackler's Girl—the third Hackler in this string as Retort is by that sire and also Hackler's Bloom—is a compact powerful little bay mare and there is a lot to like about her. She is the very opposite of Retort, as there is not much daylight underneath her.

NORTON'S horses got in early in the week and the lot he has this season are True Love, Fadgie, Foudrette, Collegian, Spook, King's Spear, Carnival and Elpis. They have all landed here from Dehra all right.

KENDALL'S lot are Miracle, who is owned by H. H. Yuvaraj Urs of Mysore, and the two ponies Master Priam, the four-year-old Australian 14-1, and Kismet II., 14-2 English, both owned by H. H. the Maharajah of Mysore.

THE jockeys Bullock, Poole, Bland and Fletcher have arrived in Calcutta and are from Home. Northmore, Barrett and Randall have come down from up-country. Wootton, Saxby and Whalley arrive later on and also very probably Templeman, Bowley and Robins. Bullock and Bland are attached to Mumford's stable.

THE following is the full list of W. Mumford's horses:—(Mr. Garda). Chobham, The Loaf, Lumination, Grevillea, Lady Portland, Bombastic, Lady Erna, Macann and Silver Dee colt. (Mr. Harbarton): Master Theo and Devil's Dyke. (Mr. Gussy): Chapel Royal. (Capt. Honble Thelluson): Airman. (W. Mumford): Beckmesser. (Captain W. D. Grant): Chrysanthemum. (G. P. Cosens): Bull Dog. (MacOwen): Leander.

MR. R. BOTELER, Senior Stipendiary Steward to the C.T.C., arrived from Home by the last mail and is, we are glad to see, looking very well. Mr. Boteler had a slight accident on the way over from Bombay and in alighting from the railway carriage fell and sprained his left thumb badly.

THE Tollygunge Club Gymkhana last Saturday drew the customary fashionable crowd which a November fixture invariably entices forth. The principal object is a society reunion and the racing is an entirely secondary consideration and only arranged, we take it, as a picturesque adjunct to tea and ices. But at the same time since there are races advertised and people bet on them, to a very heavy extent occasionally, we concur with our contemporaries that it is in every way desirable that these meetings should be run under C.T.C. rules: the more so as incidents frequently crop up that need rules to deal with them in a satisfactory manner. Mr. Galstaun was the hero of last Saturday, as he rode two out of the five winners, his own mare Convent Girl and Mr. T. M. Thaddeus' Guide: Mr. Tegart won a race on his own mare Biddy, and Messrs. Shillingford and Clive's Water Lily, late Alice, scored the other event on the flat ridden by Dr. Taylor, who had the measure of them all from the start to the finish. Over the steeplechase there was unfortunately a muddle. A flag had been put up on the course at 7 A.M. near a golf green which is close to the landing side of the second fence. None of the jockeys riding in the race were told about this addition and alteration and the flag was placed so far out from the inside turn as to make it possible for horses to go inside it. Two of them did: Suffragette, who ultimately won, and Durbar, who was second at that point. Wait for Me finished second, and an objection was lodged against the winner for not having gone the right course. These meetings are not run under any rules and the Stewards upheld the objection and disqualified Suffragette. If the meeting had been under any rules this could not have occurred, as C.T.C. rule 120 (ii) and N. H. rule 170 (2) are both very explicit upon this very point. The Indian rule, a counterpart of the Home one, reads:—

"If any flag, post or boundary mark be placed in the course or altered after the jockeys have been shown over the ground or had the course pointed out to them, it shall not be considered binding or of any effect unless such addition or alteration shall have been particularly named previous to starting to all the jockeys in the race by one of the Stewards, the Clerk of the Course, or by their representatives."

THE Derby Gold Cup run last Friday was won by Mr. J. B. Thorneycroft's Clarenceux, a four-year-old colt by King's Messenger—Squint II. Bronzino, who had most of the public support, ran second, beaten half a length, and Graball third. Clarenceux, prior to this win, had been out on five occasions this year. He ran second in the Queen's Prize (1¼ miles) at Kempton to the lightly weighted Origo, Merry Task being third. He was fifth in the Ascot Stakes (2 miles) won by Willonyx from King Midas, Victory and Kilbroney. He was second in the Summer Handicap (2 miles 24 yards), at the Newmarket Second July to Kilbroney, White Perdrigon third, and he was fifth in the Ebor Handicap (1¾ miles) which was won by Pillo. He came out in the Cesarewitch with 7st. 7lb. up, but finished in the ruck. Last season he beat Pillo from whom he was getting 2st. 8lb. in the Delamere Handicap at Manchester. At York the other day the difference was only 10lb. in his favour. He also won as a three-year-old the Wilton Welter Handicap at Stockton, also a Three-Year-Old Handicap (1¼ miles) at Newmarket beating Facet and Dalnacrag, from both of whom he was in receipt of a lump of weight.

THE polo tournament at Lucknow for the Royal Dragoons Cup ended on the 17th instant in a win for the 8th Hussars who beat the Scouts by 8 goals to 4.

A CHESS TOURNAMENT for the Championship of India will be held, at the Dewanji House Chess Club, Calcutta, during Their Majesties' presence in the Metropolis, under the Presidentship of Colonel T. A. Harrison, I.A., Comptroller of Military Accounts.

The second match of the M. C. C. tour in Australia—against Victoria—was begun on the 17th instant, the weather conditions being perfect throughout. The visitors had first lease of the wickets and had scored 247 for six wickets when play closed for the day. They carried their score to 318 before they were all out on Saturday. Foster played a brilliant innings of 101. Victoria had run up 219 runs for three wickets on Saturday, but on Monday they collapsed and the remaining wickets fell for 55 runs, the side being out for 274. Smith made 68 and Kortlang 67. The M. C. C. went in again and when stumps were drawn on Monday had put together 173 for three wickets. The innings was completed for 234 on the next day, Hobbs making 88 and Rhodes 66. On Tuesday Victoria compiled 210 runs for eight wickets before play closed for the day, Smith scoring 84. The match was continued yesterday, the Victorians being left with 69 to make to win. But they were all out for 229, the M. C. C. thus winning by 49 runs.

Mr. Warner, who was unable to take part in the Victoria match as he was suffering from gastritis, is making good progress towards recovery and his doctor thinks he will be well enough to play in the first Test Match, which begins on 15th December.

The Jubbulpore Point-to-Point Races were held on the 15th ultimo at the fourth milestone on the Mandla Road. There was a big gathering of spectators, the management of the meeting in the capable hands of Mr. Todd was all that could be desired, and altogether a very enjoyable afternoon was spent. The programme opened with a race for the Indian Army, Jamadar Sunder Singh of the 32nd Lancers winning easily by twenty lengths. A similar distance divided the first and second in the British Army Race, won by Driver Fear of the 80th Battery. The Horse Race brought out a field of six and provided a very easy win for Mr. Tolid on Curse of Cromwell. Eight ran in the Pony Race, Captain de Trafford on Chance beating Mr. Tottenham on Friendship a length for first place. The Commissioner's Cup Race wound up the proceedings, Captain Hodgson's Neptune, ridden by Captain Clarke, defeating Rev. Mr. Horwood's Peggy, steered by her owner, by three lengths in a field of fourteen.

Bill Lang, the Australian heavy weight boxer, has met with another defeat—this time at the hands of Sam McVea, who outed him in two rounds at the Sydney Stadium on the 20th ultimo. Lang appears to have shot his bolt and may as well retire now. He put up a poor show against Langford in London, but we know that the Boston Tar Baby is at least as good as McVea, so Lang's retrogression must be bad indeed if he could not manage to go two rounds with the erstwhile Paris idol. Lang's form was a lamentable one. He looked remarkably fit and had trained very conscientiously. The contest aroused any amount of excitement and though odds were laid against the Australian he really proved unworthy of support. No doubt he did his best, but he never really was allowed a chance. Notoriously a bad starter he was not permitted to make even a showing. McVea was on top of him straight away, and before the negro had delivered a couple of blows it could be seen that there was only one man in it. Lang shaped very awkwardly and was painfully slow, receiving some very heavy punishment in the first round. The second, and as it happened the last, opened with McVea shooting his left as he liked through Lang's miserable guard, Bill looking as helpless and unhappy as any man could. A left hook to the temple dropped Lang for 6 seconds while another almost as soon as he rose dropped him for the count of 8. Lang struggled to his feet and McVea stepped in. A right upper cut to the chin and all was over. McVea is going to meet Lester again in December.

According to some good people, the "knock out" blow in boxing has been defined in the House of Commons as illegal. On the 1st instant, Mr. Allen Burgoyne raised the question by asking Mr. McKenna, the new Home Secretary, whether the action which his predecessor felt compelled to take in connection with the abandoned boxing contest between Jack Johnson and Bombardier Wells, had had the effect of causing ground landlords and lessees of many halls in London to refuse to allow legitimate boxing matches to be decided at their premises; and whether he could make a statement which would allay the unrest, and do away with the uncertainty which prevailed not only amongst ground landlords and lessees of the halls, but also amongst boxers and boxing promoters.

Mr. McKenna: I have not heard anything of the alleged effect of my predecessor's action on ground landlords and lessees. The decision of the High Court in the proceedings by the District Railway against Earl's Court (Limited) had a much more direct bearing on their position than anything done by my Right Hon'ble friend.

The law on the subject of boxing contests is well established. My predecessor was advised by the law officers that, if the object and intent of the combatants is to subdue each other by violent blows —(laughter)—until one can endure it no longer—(laughter)—the contest is illegal; and that, on the other hand, a sparring match, in which the object is to win by skill, and not by the severity of the injuries inflicted—(laughter)—is lawful. The difficulty is not in the law, but in ascertaining whether any contest will or will not be kept within the law—a question which depends not merely on the rules which are to apply, but on the way in which the fight is actually conducted.

A boxing match which, so far as the rules are concerned, would be legal, may, in fact, degenerate into a prize-fight—(laughter)— and no doubt, having regard to the decision of the High Court, ground landlords and lessees are well advised in taking steps for their own protection. (Laughter and cheers.)

Mr. W. Thorne (Lab.): May I ask the Right Hon'ble gentleman, does he think that if there had been any possible chance of Wells beating Johnson there would have been any talk about the matter? (Laughter).

No answer was returned.

Now Mr. Alan Burgoyne's query was simple enough, and phrased so that it could not possibly be misconstrued. But Mr. McKenna chose to indulge in a mere output of words which, in relation to the question, has no meaning, and was no answer at all. So that boxers and boxing promoters are still left in the dark—an entirely unsatisfactory state of affairs that cannot be allowed to remain.

It may, of course, be ignorance on the part of the Home Secretary, and in that case it is as well to point out that the duty of a referee is not solely to give an award. No one needs to be told that there is a difference between a prize fight and a boxing contest, and it may be added that there have been hundreds of cases where referees have stopped contests because contestants have been found to be unevenly matched. That is a point worthy of remembrance.

But if the Government is opposed to boxing, then surely it was the duty of the Home Secretary to make that clear. As it is, he has helped to make confusion worse confounded, and especially so in the latter part of his statement, which will not help lessees of halls to do that which they were ready to do before the agitation.

So far from allaying unrest, Mr McKenna will have helped to intensify it, and boxers and boxing promoters will have of necessity to do something very quickly so that the position may be made plain. Ground landlords and lessees, too, must see the need for action. There are plenty of halls in London admirably fitted for boxing contests, which would be willingly let in the ordinary way, and those who own or conduct them ought not to allow a right to be taken from them without a struggle.

What exactly is the Home Office afraid of? Is it disorder? If so, they have an easy remedy. They could give the same protection to boxing that they do to political gatherings, and would at the same time put the sport on a proper basis. In any case, the position, as it stands, is quite impossible, and it is the duty of those who are friends of boxing to meet and decide on a course of action.

A large sugar planter in Zululand sends the following letter, which appears in the Aberdeen Free Press:—"One of my neighbours was shooting the other day and brought home a hippo and three crocodiles. One of the latter had a string hanging from his mouth when shot. On my neighbour pulling at it out came a bushbuck. He then cut the crocodile open and inside was a dog. He made inquiries and found a Kaffir had set a snare and caught the buck, which broke loose and went off with a couple of yards of the rope. The boy went and fetched his dog and put him on the spoor, followed up and found the buck, and chased it till it took to the water with the dog after it. A crocodile first swallowed the dog and then caught and swallowed the buck. It seems a tall yarn, but is quite true; it all happened in sight of my house last Sunday. The same man went and shot three more crocodiles, and says he must have seen a hundred during the day."

In an Oregon paper there is a statement that Professor Pernot, bacteriologist to the Board of Health, has discovered the germ that causes death in dogs when they eat salmon. In England salmon at 3s. per lb. is a bit too expensive a food for dogs, but in Canada it is about the cheapest meat going, and the Esquimaux dogs are regularly fed on it, dried or otherwise. Professor Pernot has discovered that salmon fresh from the sea did not poison dogs that ate the flesh. This led to the further discovery that dogs were poisoned after eating salmon only when the salmon has been in the fresh water of the river for some time. By a close examination of the blood like material along the back of the fish under a low power microscope, Professor Pernot discovered white spots which he quickly discovered to be amœba. In other words, organisms that attach themselves to the fish but do not poison the fish. Professor Pernot found that salmon-trout poisoned dogs in the same way that salmon from the sea did. Doses of calomel in quantities of two grains, given early after sickness, saved the lives of all dogs to whom it was administered by Professor Pernot. It is believed that the discovery of the cause and the cure of salmon poisoning will prove of high value to many owners of dogs on the coast. It is the first time anyone properly equipped and of sufficient intelligence has gone to the trouble of finding out why the eating of salmon was so fatal to dogs and to prescribe a remedy. The common remedy has been castor oil. Some would give salt, some shot, and the Indians would cut the end of the tail off. Many other remedies, too numerous to remember and mention, have been suggested. After a dog has recovered from a case of salmon poisoning he is said to be for ever afterwards immune, and can eat it with impunity. Bears, cats, hogs, and every other animal eat salmon in every stage of condition, and it seems to agree with them. The Indians have been seen eating it raw when in its most putrid state of decay. In fact, they prefer those salmon of putrefactive condition to any other salmon.

all messes, clubs and chiefs suggesting the same, and asking a few questions as to the holding of the tournament, the place where the finals should be played, etc.

The replies received, have not been encouraging and point to the fact that polo is such an expensive game that a large proportion of officers and others cannot indulge in it.

This is a little disheartening and although the polo suggestion appears to be a failure, the Ombos Co. are willing to await for more replies from the polo players till the 30th November. If by that date a sufficient number of polo teams are willing to enter the tournament, the cups will be given for an All-India and Burma Polo Tournament. Otherwise, the Ombos Cigarette Co., Ld., being still anxious to promote and keep alive sport in India, are willing to present a cup under similar conditions, and wish the public to co-operate with them in selecting the game, by sending them suggestions as to which game the cup should be given. The game selected should be such to which teams may be sent by messes, clubs or other institutions.

The suggestions should reach the Company by the 30th November 1911, and as soon as possible after that date, if the cup is not given to polo, the result of the voting will be published and the game which receives the largest support will be selected.

A photo (half-plate) of the cup which is offered for polo may be had if desired on payment of 8 annas.

Suggestions should be addressed to Ombos Cigarette Co., Ld., Lahore, and the word "Sport" should be mentioned on the cover as there is a special Manager appointed to deal with this matter.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 3rd November 1911.

"The Musical Divorce," as it was called, came to an end on Tuesday last. Certain people professed to have some doubt as to which way the verdict would go; but surely there was little room for this after the facts had once been made public? Here was an erotic Yankee woman, Mrs. Foster, wife of George Sherwood Foster, the artist, receiving from Thomas Beecham, the musician, letters which were about as "hot stuff" as I've ever seen published—though I've heard warmer epistles read in court—hiding them in her stockings, putting them behind pictures and under carpets, and doing other idiotic things that made for her ultimate undoing. Here were these two people, with a secret code, arranging and carrying out assignations all over the place, with a female go between and all the usual accessories. Also we find them plotting to throw into the way of the unfortunate husband a pretty woman, hoping to succeed in making him as bad as themselves. Yet people can be found to believe in their innocence! Well, after some very remarkable evidence bearing on the unwholesome atmosphere of the particular Bohemia to which the parties belonged and after much poetic eloquence by learned counsel for the woman and hard, uncompromising statement of solid fact, coupled with some scathing criticism, by learned counsel for the injured husband, the jury, after asking that they might be spared the usual summing up, found the Yankee woman guilty of misconduct, the grotesque musician guilty of ditto, the husband not guilty of either cruelty and misconduct as was originally alleged, and the usual decree nisi followed as a matter of course.

This has been the only "social" gup (save the mark) this week; now, I suppose, we must fall back on the doings at Tripoli for topics of conversation. Our press is getting very angry with the Italian methods of reducing the Arab population more or less wholesale—when they catch 'em—and we have the usual ignorant claptrap contributed by those who write of what they know nothing of: writers who have never lived in a black country and are supremely ignorant of the way to deal with a black race when punishment is indicated. Then, on the other hand, Moslem picturesqueness of narration finds expression in reports of wonderful doings by the Arabs, of enormous losses on the Italian side of thousands killed and many more thousands captured, of the incredible bravery of the Turkish allies, and so on. But in the same columns—a bit lower down—we are told that the Italians have heard nothing of all this! Truly the war has its humorous side after all.

We have been told for some time that the recent strikes and the long drought will make food supplies very dear and that we shall feel the pinch badly before Christmas. The increased cost of provisions need not, however, trouble us. New foods, for which there is as yet no popular demand, will make us independent of the butcher and the greengrocer. At a luncheon given last week to illustrate the possibilities of uncooked dishes, chrysanthemum salad was a feature of the menu. On the same day Canon Horsley was recommending the English snail as a much more delicious bonne bouche than the native oyster. There is, as the proverb says no accounting for tastes, and if the dignitaries of the Church prefer the slimy but succulent snail to the flesh pots of Egypt, this neogastronomy ought, in the interests of religious self-mortification, to be encouraged. It will be more difficult, though, to get the British housewife to take kindly to snails, whether cooked or uncooked, as an article of daily diet, even though they can be had for the gathering. The dear creature is so insular in her views. The dainty escargots of the Parisian menu do not appeal to her. She prefers her stodgy beef and mysterious sausage. It will take time for Canon Horsley's propaganda to beat down her ancient prejudice.

Once again we are the invited guests of Whitechapel, where the only popular Art Gallery in all England has opened its peep-show of Old London.

I will not say that there are too many prints and maps and paintings of Old London in this admirable show. These are all good things. I will go anywhere in reason to see again the pageant of eighteenth century Thames painted by Scott, our Cockney Canaletto. Hoefnagel's map of Tudor London, red roofs edged with green fields and blue water, Hollar's delicate etchings of Stewart London, timber gables and Gothic steeples, a Rowlandson pen-and-ink of fat, wiggy citizens driving out to Highbury Barn, Mr. Henry Norman's water-colour record of the old brick mansion which has made way for a new stone insurance office—all these are very good things.

Of the pots and pans, the cast shoes and the pleasant rubbish of Old London there is also much that is good enough in its way. There are the brown "Cullen pots" which once poured our London ales, the Roman dame's hair-pin, the Briton's bronze sword, and that enduring leather bottle which, as the song tells you, will "serve to put hinges and odd things in" in the day when it is no longer a trustworthy bottle. Also there are some noble oddments—Sol Giles's Wooden Midshipman with his sextant at his eye, the chair in which sat Dr. Johnson when he viewed in Thrale's brewery "the potentialities of wealth beyond the dreams of avarice." I am glad to know that William Hogarth showed himself in the maddest of looking-glasses that ever reflected a Londoner's chin, to finger—against the rules of the exhibition—the knocker which once announced the Great Lexicographer's guests at Bolt Court. And so on and so forth.

There will, I suppose, be a Whitechapel three centuries hence. I puzzle myself over possible items for its catalogue of the Old London Exhibition of the year 2211. By that time most of what is in my house and in my neighbour's shop will have long passed to the rubbish-heap. The antiquary will be collecting pictures that illustrate my odd behaviour at work and play, my fantastic clothing, my absurd and unhygienic customs. This is certain enough. Yet I ask myself whether he will handle lovingly anything that this age has made and left behind it? We shall provide him with curiosities in plenty: my telephone and my matchbox may come to inhabit a labelled glass-case.

A ridiculous historical error in a House of Commons' fresco that has stared members of Parliament in the face for over forty years, was last Wednesday detected for the first time. An unmistakable Union Jack appears at a date—140 years before the flag was adopted or even designed!

The subject of the picture is the landing of Charles II., when invited by Parliament to mount the throne after the death of Cromwell. The cliffs of Dover show in the background of the painting, and in the foreground Charles and his suit are stepping up the beach. On the extreme right of the fresco is portrayed a standard-bearer, and here is the ludicrous incongruity. The flag he bears, falling in heavy folds unstirred by the breeze, is a boldly painted Union Jack.

The fresco is one of eight executed by the Royal Academician, E. M. Ward, that cover both sides of the corridor connecting the great octagonal chamber with the House of Commons' lobby. It was not because the picture was out of sight in some shadowy, unfrequented corner that the anomaly has passed so long unnoticed. On the contrary, the brilliantly lit corridor in which the picture is displayed is the most used in the building. Members are constantly passing through it to go to other parts of the House, and to meet visitors, who crowd the octagonal chamber. Times out of number a member has invited a constituent to seat himself on the bench with him right opposite the Charles II. painting while they converse.

MADRAS.

Very welcome to those who fear (and with reason) that the beauty spots of England are being gradually destroyed, comes the news that three additional platforms are to be constructed at Paddington Station, which has been practically untouched since it was built in 1854.

The present station contains nine platforms, but these have been found insufficient to cope with the traffic, and three more platforms are to be added. The provision of this extra accommodation will entail an enormous amount of work, not expected to be completed for at least twelve months.

The new platforms will be built in a space which is now being excavated beneath the roadway and between the existing No. 9 platform and the Grand Junction Canal. The whole of the immense weight above them will be borne upon a huge construction of steel work.

No. 1 platform has already been extended, and is now by far the longest platform in London.

The London Opera House, with which its founder, Mr. Oscar Hammerstein, hopes to open a new and notable chapter in English theatrical history, is, with one ill-fated exception, the first building in London to be consecrated from its birth to grand opera. The exception is the handsome edifice in Cambridge-circus now-a-days known as the Palace Theatre.

Twenty years and a few odd months is not such a very long period that there are not many playgoers who can remember as if yesterday the high hopes raised by the opening, in February, 1891, of the English Opera House.

It was the ambitious scheme of the late Richard d'Oyly Carte, who, after successfully founding a school of English comic opera, thought to found a school also of English grand opera. All that is left of that really great project is Sullivan's score of "Ivanhoe," with a few haunting memories it created, and a palatial music-hall!

London's first home of opera was the Queen's Theatre, built on the site approximately occupied by Sir Herbert Tree's handsome playhouse of the present day. It was christened, by way of compliment to Queen Anne, who was on the throne when, on an April evening in 1705, the new theatre in the Haymarket was opened with Italian opera, a deservedly long-forgotten work called "The Triumph of Love."

The coming of Handel, just two hundred years ago, really gave grand opera its first vogue, and the King's Theatre, as the Haymarket house was renamed at the accession of George I., became the haunt of fashionable music lovers. There, in 1720, was founded a Royal Academy of Music, which was less an educational institution than an organised body of subscribers to the opera—an experiment which originated the system of subscription season still found to be necessary to operatic enterprise.

Records of that early day show that despite Mr. Handel and Signor Nicolini, of whom the Spectator made such fun, as much as £15,000 was lost in a single year. The King's Theatre later became Her Majesty's, and remained for years, under the Mapleson regime, a formidable rival to Covent Garden. Somehow or other, Mid-Victorian London kept two big opera houses going. The feat ought not to be impossible now.

As our grandfathers would assure us, not without reason, that was the Augustan age of the operatic art in this country. Pasta, Sontag, Malibran, Louis Lablache, Tamburini, Grisi, Mario, Titiens, Sims Reeves—what a glittering firmament was there.

Opera seems to have flourished spasmodically, in cycles. Just a century ago, for instance, there was a boom in operatic art, and Samuel John Arnold, son of the famous composer, turned the newly licensed Lyceum into the "English Opera House."

Fifty years or so ago again came an opera boom. Covent Garden passed from the legitimate and otherwise to the musical, and Fanny Kelly's playhouse, built in Soho with her own savings and named for the first decade of its existence the Royalty Theatre was now advertised as the New English Opera House.

In more recent days the Savoy and Lyric Theatre have been erected to the service of light opera. But since 1892, when the old Her Majesty's of many memories was demolished, the only abiding home of the highest phases of opera has been the Covent Garden house.

How will Mr. Barrie find acceptance in the music-hall? was the thought that naturally rose in the mind at the announcement that "The Twelve Pound Look" was to introduce the Scottish author to the variety public. The question was answered last night in a reception of this human little play so enthusiastic that one could not but regret the long delay in introducing Mr. Barrie's work as a "turn" even between a dancing duet and a humorous entertainer. And so far as humour and entertainment are concerned last Monday night's audience seized every point of "The Twelve Pound Look," laughed heartily at its sly and caustic wit, and applauded with all the enthusiasm of understanding the story of Kate's fight against the fat and smug prosperity of Sir Harry Sims.

It will be understood from what has already been written that the Hippodrome audience found no difficulty in appreciating a play that has hitherto found acceptance in the more intimate surroundings of a small auditorium. The question of dimensions had not been lost sight of by the players, or by Mr. Dion Boucicault as producer, and if to those who know "The Twelve Pound Look" some of the neatness of phrase and construction were missed in the ampler space of the Hippodrome, one can only applaud the performers who broadened their methods to meet the exigencies of the occasion. Particular interest attached to this introduction of Mr. Barrie to the music-hall from the fact that Miss Irene Vanbrugh for the first time appeared in the rôle which was really written for her. She is, if memory serves, the fourth Kate we have seen, and her reading of the part is alike individual and interesting. She does not make of Sir Harry's first wife quite so "intense" a creature as does Miss Lillah McCarthy, who is now appearing at Kate at the Little Theatre matinees, but she is intensely alive and she treats that unforgetable interview with her ex-husband in a spirit of easy raillery wholly delightful. For her one realises that indeed there are no regrets, and her mimicry of Sir Harry arriving home and finding the portentous letter that announced her flight (a piece of "business" new, we think, to the rôle) is in keeping with her high spirits. Miss Vanbrugh has a rousing reception last night: we have rarely heard such applause in a theatre.

Mr. Edmund Gwenn had attuned his note as Sir Harry to the demands of a music-hall, and if he broadened the part at times to the point of caricature, his excuse was ample and sufficient. Both Mr. Gwenn and Miss Vanbrugh spoke with admirable distinctness, a virtue appreciated at its full value by the audience. Miss Minnie Terry appeared as the second Lady Sims, and gave an excellent portrait of the crushed and silenced woman. "The Twelve Pound Look" is one of the cleverest and most real of miniature comedies; its inclusion in a music-hall programme is by some considered to be a gratifying sign of the times.

It may be presumed that the fact that the name of Mr. John N. Raphael, the adapter, is in bigger and more conspicuous type upon the programme of "The Uninvited Guest" than that of M. Tristan Bernard, author of the piece, is intended to show that the work presented at the Prince of Wales' owes more to the English than to the French writer. On this presumption one is able to believe statements that have been made that the original has had a great success in Paris. Farces rarely triumph over there unless they are witty or ingenious. "The Uninvited Guest" is neither ingenious nor witty, and so one may safely guess that it differs greatly from the work of M. Bernard, and chiefly consists of Mr. Raphael's efforts. The play has a story which might serve very well for musical comedy or romantic drama or wildly irresponsible farce, but serves very badly for anything that pretends to be comedy. "The Uninvited Guest" is Jacques Calvel, aged, 35, penniless, a sort of artist who makes designs for furniture dealers, and is acting ineffectually as commercial traveller for some German metal manufacturers. We find him in a suit of borrowed dress-clothes, slightly intoxicated, stealing cigars at a reception to which he has not been invited. He meets a pretty girl, daughter of a very rich old widower, and falls in love with her. A friend of his, named Barthazar, an unmitigated scoundrel, suggests that Jacques should marry the girl and engage him as Secretary at 25,000 francs a year, and that for the purpose of this scheme Jacques must pretend to be a prosperous commercial agent earning 80,000 francs a year. Jacques, who cannot plead the inexperience of youth or ignorance of life as excuse for the mean villainy, accepts the suggestion and swears to carry out the scheme. He refuses to swear by the beard of his father, because his father is clean-shaven. What wit! Almost on a par with a brilliant jokk about Chippendale furniture being made from chips; it may by assumed that Mr. Raphael is entitled to the credit for the second of these brilliancies. Jacques carries out the scheme up to a point, tells all the necessary lies, uses Barthazar's money to keep up appearances, and gets engaged to the girl; and then his noble nature revolts and he denounces himself as an impostor at the end of the second act. In the third we find him acting as salesman in an old furniture shop, which, judging by its stock, is situated in England, though the programme says Paris. The girl comes here to buy furniture for her wedding, since she is going to marry somebody else, but when she meets Jacques and is told that he really loves her, and fell in love with her—when slightly intoxicated—before he knew she was rich, she promptly forgives him, and her wealthy father, who apparently is a lunatic, gleefully accepts the quite contemptible person as a son-in-law. In the second act there was an effective scene in which Mr. Arthur Playfair as Barthazar transferred his services from Jacques to another man, and this had some merit and was well played by Mr. Playfair; and in the last act there were purely farcical bits of business not uncentertaining, but on the whole the piece is rather curiously free from wit, cleverness of character drawing, and ingenuity of construction. Mr. Hawtrey was funny in the first act in his picture of a slightly intoxicated vagabond, but rather heavy in the sentimental scenes. Mr. Fred Lewis and Mr. O. B. Clarence did a good deal in small character parts, and there were quite a number of young ladies who were remarkably successful in avoiding a suggestion, from any point of view, that they were supposed to be French.

"The Great Young Man" is the original version, which is banned in Russia for reasons of State, of Prince Bariatinsky's "The Career of Nablotsky," already made familiar by Princess Bariatinsky at the Royalty Theatre; but in its essentials the version now being played at the Kingsway does not differ from the play previously seen in London. So it is still difficult to raise much interest in an unsavoury set of characters—men and women with the morals of guinea pigs and the principles of pickpockets, intriguing upon sordid things. Nablotsky, if he is not "great" at all, but, on the contrary, singularly small, a petty trickster of the worst is well drawn—he is at least "a character"; and the situation, when to further his own ends he takes upon his shoulders the guilt of a state official, who has dismissed and turned adrift to starve a poor schoolmaster in order to give the post to a cast-off mistress of his own, has humour of a kind—albeit, somewhat bitter-sweet humour; but the play wins no sympathy, because none of the characters is sympathetic. The greater part of such interest as the production has comes from the acting of Princess Bariatinsky, or to call her by her stage name, Lydia Yaverska. She has personality; even something of magnetism; and although heavily handicapped by her pronounced foreign accent she made Nablotsky's wife telling in all her moods. Mr. Charles Bryant showed well the hypocrisy of Nablotsky, but came dangerously near to burlesque at times. And it should be set on record that he abandoned his usual Charles Wyndham manner and offered instead a suggestion of H. B. Irving. The other characters were played as well as they could reasonably be expected to be played.

THE VAGRANT.

Shikar.

AFTER A PANTHER IN THE INDIAN HILLS.

"A TIGER! No it is impossible! There has not been one on the hill for years."

"If it is not a tiger, it must be a very large panther. Never have I seen such a pug, and the buffalo! Well Sahib you yourself saw the buffalo before I hobbled him in the Ambpani Ravine. It is no ordinary panther that could have killed him."

My Bhil shikari stood before me and waved his hand to emphasize his words.

"How much has he eaten?"

"Not a great deal but he has begun from the hind quarters—a sure sign that he is a tiger or a very big panther.

He will be there to-morrow night for certain and the opportunity should not be missed."

I yawned,—pulled myself out of my long chair, lit a cigarette and tried hard to become enthusiastic but truth to tell I was somewhat sceptical of my shikari Bhutia and his huge panthers. Many were the sleepless nights I had spent in machans without result. Many were the rupees I had expended on buffaloes, goats and rewards to phantom villagers. In fact I had begun to think that there could not be a panther in the whole jungle, and at any rate not one who had not been so educated by being fired at, that he would come within any distance.

Of one thing I was quite sure and that was that I was not going to spend another night out in the jungle, a prey to mosquitoes and sandflies, however much Bhutia entreated.

This Bhutia himself quickly perceived for when I gave him to understand that machans were not to be erected, he shewed no surprise but at once made a suggestion. This was in effect that I should call in the assistance of two other Sahibs and that we should surround the ravine at daybreak and hope to locate and get a shot at Master Spots or Mr. Stripes as the case might be, while he lay up after his gorge on the carcass.

The plan was one which I had often thought of and mentioned to my shikaris, for with so many sportsmen about, the feline tribe had come to know machans a great deal too well and would not come within a hundred yards of one. So, probably to Bhutia's surprise, I welcomed the idea and sent him off post haste to make the necessary arrangements while I wrote inviting two members of the local garrison to come and try their luck.

Both were only too eager and we were all to meet at a small temple about three miles off at 3-30 A.M., on the following morning.

Ugh! Many of your readers must know only too well the craving for more sleep and the unwillingness to throw aside warm bed clothes and start one's toilet on a cold winter's morning, and in the hills in India the cold can often be very intense.

However, the resolve once made and acted on, all was plain sailing and I was soon, in company with my orderly, who carried my 450 express, riding briskly through the dark early morning in the direction of the temple.

Arrived there we made over our ponies to their grooms who had run on ahead and sat down to await the others.

We had not long to wait and in a few minutes, the three of us with our rifle bearers were wending our way in Indian file along a jungle path which led in the direction of the ravine where we hoped to find the slayer of the buffalo.

My shikari was to meet us at a spot on some high ground in close proximity to the "kill" where he and some of his attendants had been watching through the night for any signs, and endeavouring no doubt to locate the beast.

However, our way up to this point was not to be without adventure. As we made our way steadily upwards and onwards and had covered a distance of about a mile and a half from the temple, our attentions were drawn to a noise which sounded to us like the hum of machinery at a distance. For some time we went on our way unable to find any explanation and it was not until the darkness gave place to a faint glimmering of light that we discovered what it was.

In ascending the slope of a hillside, we had been following all unconsciously the line taken by myriads of wild bees who were winding their way back to their nests in the clefts and rocks of some hillside. While we had climbed up the ascent, they must have been far above our heads but now as we drew up to the top of the rise and on to level ground, they were quite close down to us—a most uncomfortable if not dangerous situation.

Those of your readers who know not the wild bee of the Indian jungles may smile, but others will understand the peril that one may be placed in, if these little winged creatures make an attack in any numbers on one's person.

In many cases their stings have proved fatal.

Just at this time our case was as aggravating as it was dangerous for we were now nearing the spot where we were to meet the shikari and they completely blocked our road with their countless numbers.

There was nothing for it but to call a halt and await developments and this we did, lying flat on our faces to escape any chance of annoying the little workers who had by now come still lower down to the ground.

I am thankful to say that our patience was not to be sorely tried and in about ten minutes, they had cleared off sufficiently to enable us to advance.

Presently I spied Bhutia perched like a vulture, on a high rock overlooking the ravine in which the dead buffalo must be lying. He was sitting like a statue watching with all his eyes and on other rocks we soon descried two of his helpmates.

A low whistle and Bhutia slid from his rock and crawled towards us. As he got close to us, I saw by the intense excitement depicted on his face that there was good news.

And good news it was, for according to him a very large panther was lying asleep, stretched on a rock, in the ravine below us.

Bhutia beckoned with his hand. Cautiously we all crept after him. Field glasses were slipped out of their cases and sliding and crawling we got on to a ledge of rock, craned our necks over and peered in the direction indicated.

Great Scott, do you see him?

My word, what a whacker!

Phew, he is a grand looking beast!

Cannot your readers imagine these expressions being used by the three of us as peering through the grey morning light over the mountain side we saw an enormous male panther lying asleep upon a rock.

For a few moments we continued to gaze through our glasses on the great cat-like form, with its graceful contour of limb and then silently we slid back out of sight and proceeded to hold a council of war.

In the end we determined that one of us should get the other side of the panther and then try and stalk him for a shot, while the other two of us were to take up positions to guard the line he would take if the stalk was unsuccessful.

We drew lots for places, or "the stalk" and I soon found myself perched on a high rock overlooking a ravine with one of the party about two hundred yards above me and the other attempting the stalk. This latter proceeding we two in the ravine could not see and so waited in patience for developments.

Some time passed by and it appeared evident that the panther had got away from his sleeping place but we had seen no sign of him in our direction.

I had with me an intelligent coolie who had worked many times as assistant to my shikari and while I sat, partially concealed from view by a portion of rock, he lay, very much ventre a terre on a ledge just beside me, searching with beady eyes every patch of jungle.

I had almost given up hope and was thinking of standing up and shouting to my companion above me, when the coolie made a very ominous clicking noise. I looked towards him and he very cautiously extended one finger in the direction of some thick scrub across the ravine and above our position. My eyes followed the line of his finger but look as I would I could make out nothing. Presently I saw by the coolie's expression that whatever he had seen had disappeared but both my eyes and his were now rivetted on to this patch of jungle.

Moment after moment went by and I was beginning to despair when once more that ominous click and at that instant I saw the panther for the space of about twenty seconds as he slunk at a low trot past a gap in the scrub.

Bang! For once my brain, eye and hand worked in unison and apparently accurately for as I snapped at him, he cracked up as if hit and then recovering, leapt down into the ravine out of sight.

The coolie was exuberant and made certain we should find him dead a little way down the ravine. Personally I was rather doubtful of this as it had been a long shot and I could not tell where he was hit, if hit at all.

Patiently we waited for the shikari and his men to come up and breathlessly we listened for their answer—when on arrival we had pointed out the spot where he had disappeared from view—and how terrible was the disappointment when they shouted back that there was no sign of the panther nor was there any blood about from a wound.

But I felt almost sure that I had hit him and urged the men to continue a little down the ravine and sure enough they soon came on spots of blood and started to track the beast in the true Bhil manner.

I watched them from my perch on the hillside, moving along cautiously with flankers thrown out on either side. Sometimes a couple of men would climb up trees and spy the ground in front and the main body would call a halt until their report had been shouted back.

At last I heard the welcome yell go up which meant that someone had got a view of the beast and then a man came back to tell me that they had seen him clearly, crawling on ahead with difficulty.

The little band of Bhils were now greatly excited. Like a swarm of angry hornets they drew on nearer and nearer to the slayer of their cattle and goats, until at last the poor brute too weary to move further was cornered in a big cave and I was called down to put an end to him. Climbing down the hillside I got above the cave and found a fissure in the rock through which I could look into it and as I took my first glance I met a pair of great yellow staring eyes set in a huge head.

A wave of pity swept over me and I felt for one moment the horribleness of it all but in the next I remembered the damage done to cattle and goats and raising my rifle, put an end to his existence with a bullet through the brain.

Bhutia had made no mistake he was a very big panther and his skin was in perfect condition.

Fishing.

A COUPLE OF DAYS FISHING ON THE "KOSI."

I WAS located at Saharanpur, North-Western Provinces, and having got seven days' leave, I decided to try the "Kosi," a river of which I had heard many favourable accounts as affording first-class sport. The "Kosi" rises in the hills near Almora and runs south and west through Kumaon.

As an off chance, I caught in a tank a few small fish from 3 to 3½ inches long, not very bright in colour, but with tough skins, and took them alive with me.

I trained by the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway to Moradabad and went from thence to Dilkuli by ghari. Dilkuli is on the banks of the "Kosi," and at it there is a rest bungalow at which I put up. From thence, for about 5 miles upwards, the river offers great facilities for the rod. At the Dilkuli end of this length was a stretch of unbroken water, and my first experience was to find it undisturbed by a breath of wind. The fish small and large, some of them of great size, could be seen in the clear water. It was no use in my trying fly fishing or trolling, so I sauntered up the side of the stream until I came to more likely places, where the river was brawling among rocks and rushing and eddying between and behind big stones. Having arrived at this apparently satisfactory water I began to cast with flies of quiet colours, neither tinsel nor gilt about them and was not long in getting a rise. That wakened me up a bit, and I became more careful in throwing my line and working the flies in the water. I mostly affected the rushing water between and the eddies behind the stones, and in a short time landed a nice little mahseer of 4lbs. A smart breeze at this time sprang up, and I made for where there was deeper water. In the throat of the pool I had a rise from what appeared a heavy fish, from the disturbance caused on the surface. Before casting again I waited for about five minutes then threw well above where the rise occurred, allowing the flies to sail as naturally as possible over the place. That was successful, and at the lunge and swirl, I struck sharply sideways. I had it fast enough, and having a 17 foot rod, by keeping its point up to nearly the perpendicular, I had complete command as I thought. It turned out, however, that I was somewhat premature, for the fish went here and there just as it liked and with apparent ease to itself. I did not know what to make of it. I cannot say how long I had it on the hook, it seemed at least a whole hour. At length it got down to the end of the pool and into shallow water, and I instructed my coolie to wade in and cleik it whilst I kept it hanging in the stream. That he cleverly managed to do, and before the fish was half beat it was dragged on to the bank and killed. It was a 14 pounder hooked by the ventral fin, and had I not had recourse to the cleik, would have broke away. I got in among the rocks and boulders again, and on the very edge of an eddy, hooked and fairly hauled out a 2 pounder. Still going up stream I came to a sort of gorge, the water in which being contracted came rolling down with great impetuosity. In the tail of this after repeated trials and throwing the flies well up the gorge, I hooked a lively, if not a heavy fellow. It commenced by leaping clear out of the water, then made various and eccentric runs, trying all it could to break away. It was only after giving half an hour of delightful sport that it yielded and was pulled out—weight 5lbs.

More than satisfied with my day's sport, and as it was getting on in the afternoon, I concluded to go home. As it was better walking a distance back from the river I took my rod down, making up my mind to go over the same water trolling the following day. On coming to the beginning of the unbroken stretch of water referred to, I met with a laughable episode. It was an exhibition in fishing and therefore I think it is not out of place to give the details here:—

I suddenly came upon, I was going to say, an apparition, but it was daylight and it turned out, a would-be fisher. He was got up regardless of expense, and in a manner that was enough to scare all the fish in the "Kosi." His attire was fresh, thin and new were his patent leather shoes; new also were his many striped jacket and waistcoat, and his pants of a novel shape and description. His hat was a double terai, and he had such a quantity of fly hooks of all sizes and colours stuck round it that would have set a tackle maker up in business. Evidently they were produced by Mahomedans who are forbidden by their religion to imitate any of the works of Creation. He had a highly varnished long rod with a reel of at least 8 inches in diameter. His speech was as affected as his turn out, and his first salutation was:—

"Demnition fine pool, Sir."

"Very fine indeed, Sir, but you will never catch a fish where you are casting at present, because fish do not lie in such bare water."

Upon this he faced round, put his finger to his nose, and with an expression of what he no doubt thought was sagacity and wisdom said:—

"Do you see anything green in my eyes, Sir?" It was evident such a person was not born to be instructed, but simply to be admired. I therefore left my rod with my coolie, and walked after him, to get some insight into his tactics. Arrived at a better part of the pool a fish hooked itself, and it was curious to see his antics. He seemed to be of a yielding disposition, and thought it advisable to let the fish have its own way. The result was, it ran out an exorbitant length of line, and was going to a nasty place among the rocks. I could not help calling out, "Hold it in, hold it in, if it gets to that eddy you are done."

"Fine fish, Sir, fine fish; fast hooked, Sir, do you see anything green about me? I have an opinion of my own, Sir."

I replied, "So has the fish, and now it is all over with you, for if you had nothing but a dead herring at the end of your line, you would never get it out of that mess. I hope you have another casting line as you will never see that one again."

"Fine fish, Sir; fine rod Sir; fine line, Sir; fast hooked, Sir, fast hooked. Do you see anything green——?"

He was stopped short, by an alarming rush of the mahseer, who shot down stream taking out the whole of his line to the tune of some 120 yards. It is generally the rule to make fast the end of the line, by running it through the hole made for the purpose in the cylinder of the reel, and tying some knots at the extremity to secure it. My sagacious sportsman had neglected that precaution, consequently the line, being all run out vanished at once through the rings of the rod, and streamed away below the surface of the water.

"Demnition hard that, Sir. What an extraordinary thing! Fish well managed, dexterously, artistically. Very odd indeed, Sir: beautifully played, fine rod, fine hand, demnition hard, I must say, how far must I go to get another line?"

"I presume Moradabad and Naini Tal are the nearest places neither of which are so many miles as there were yards in your lost line."

I asked if he was going my way, but he was to wait the arrival of his boy with his tiffin, so I left him. Who he was or where he came from I was unable to ascertain. It is probable he came across from Naini Tal, and was putting up at one of the Rest Houses higher up the river. At any rate, of all the conceited "Yahoos" I ever came across, he carried off the palm.

The early morning saw me, on my second and last day, making a bee line for the rough and broken water up the river. On reaching the desired place, I lost no time in putting up my rod and having everything in order, I cast, and continued casting for a long time, but failed to attract a fish big or little. At last a slight rain began to fall. It brought out the fish and they commenced rising freely. Within ten minutes I had landed three about 2lbs. each when a breeze sprung up and blew the rain off. The fish, however, still continued to rise although not so readily and the next hour saw me with only two more, 4lbs. and 6lbs., respectively.

As I wanted to be back at the Rest House in time not to make my start for Moradabad too late, I turned down stream. I changed my flies for MELOX gets Dogs into condition and keeps them fit. Is readily eaten when all other Foods are refused. It improves and strengthens the digestives organs.

MELOX MARVELS, the miniature Dog Biscuits, contain many of the essential principles of MELOX and a large proportion of meat and its juices. Possess great nourishment and form a dainty change of diet.

For Hot Climates these Foods are unique, as they are essentially Bone and Muscle makers. Bitches raise healthy Litters, while bad doers and weakly puppies thrive upon it in a remarkable manner.

Can be obtained of all Army and Navy Stores Depôts in India or direct from—

minnow tackle, and put on a live bait. I dropped it quietly, into the water close to the bank, and before it had got beyond three yards a dash was made at it by two fish simultaneously and they managed to carry it off the hooks. I changed my tackle for one with a larger assortment of traillers, put on a lively little fish and it was not a minute in the water when it was rushed like the previous one. I was on the alert, struck sharply and hooked something. It was not large but fought gamely, breaching clear out of the water two or three times. About 20 minutes and it gave in, coming to the surface on its side. This was not a mahseer but what is locally known so I was informed, by the name "Terio." It was nicely shaped, something like a trout, but not so blunt of snout, greenish black on the back, white belly, and spotted along the sides with dark red. I had never seen one before, and I understand it is but rarely found in the "Kosi." It is said to be good for the table, but I am not partial to fresh water fish in a culinary sense. I tried another live bait thinking I might get a hold of one of the leviathans. It was soon fast to something heavy. It rolled round making a whirl in the water of a circumference showing it was a big one. It turned its nose down stream and set off like a torpedo. My footing at the place was not at all good, and I lost ground at first. But the reel whirred and gave out a liberal length of line and saved me from being broken. I got on better ground, put on speed, and recovered the line as fast as possible. The fish still went a killing pace, showing no signs of distress, and I had to keep a little in the rear, the point of the rod high to save my line from getting athwart the rocks and cutting. I was beginning to despair, as in spite of all my efforts the fish was going towards the opposite bank and dangerous ground. I had to adopt the old plan of getting my coolie to throw stones beyond the fish, which gradually returned to the centre of the stream.

At length by lowering the point of the rod and thus taking off much of the strain, I managed to york the fish closer to my side of the river when it shot through a narrow rapid into the next pool. Its vigour did not seem to be the least abated, as it went swiftly down the pool, over the shallows till it came to the throat of the next deep, down which it darted at speed. The footing there again became bad, but I continued to keep company with my captive still doubtful of the result. I had now come to a stretch of deeper water, and the fish there took the bottom. I reeled up until the line was taut and tried to bring the game one to terms, but that did not suit, and it started off again apparently as fresh as ever. I had never seen a fish go down stream such a distance and for such a length of time, and I could not think that it could last much longer. The river now began to get broader, the current diminishing, and the fish, at last, to travel less rapidly. It had by this time entered the long stretch of unbroken water referred to at the outset of this article, I put forth all my skill to hamper and tire it. Still down stream it kept but slower and slower, with its nose showing occasionally, and hanging heavily on the line. It dived two or three times, but its motions became more short and feeble and I was able to draw it into the side. The coolie was ready with the cleik which he could now handle dexterously, but the fish made another rush and this it repeated three or four times. At last it was landed—weight 20½lbs.

The hook was not in the mouth of the fish, but the tail one was embedded in the gristly part outside the junction of the jaws. This accounted for its going such a distance—fully three quarter of a mile down stream before becoming exhausted. It was able to respire freely thereby retaining its vigour. Of course, I had little power over it, as the hook could have given it little if any pain.

On my arrival at the Rest House I was congratulated by another fisher on my luck. He wished his might be as good.

Although I have occasionally used live baits as experiments, I think it smacks more of pot-hunting than sport. Artificial allurements, more especially fly fishing is more sportsmanlike; at least, that is my opinion.

RACING QUERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Will you please let me know what happens in the following :—

A and B buy a race pony for Rs. 1,500 and half winnings for first season to go to seller. The pony does not win a race but is placed second in about six or seven races.

Have A and B to pay anything in respect of this second money to the seller of the pony ?

A. C.

ASSAM, 16th November 1911.

[Yes, A and B pay the seller of the pony, but place money does not count as "winnings" under any other circumstances.—ED.]

BETTING: Evens Sirdar, 2 to 1 agst. Occident, 6 to 1 each The Nut, Dojan and Nooman, 8 to 1 the others.

Nooman bolted on the way to the post and reached the mile and a half post before he was pulled up. But he was brought back and when the field were let go Nooman was quickest away and led to the quarter mile. Here he dropped back and The Nut brought them along to the distance where Sirdar took command with Occident next, followed by The Nut. This order was maintained to the finish, Sirdar winning comfortably by a length; half a length between second and third; a length and a half between third and fourth. Time—1min. 56⅘secs.

THE FLYING HANDICAP.—Rs. 200 to the winner, Rs. 50 to the second, and Rs. 25 to the third. A handicap for ponies. About ¼ mile.

BIRMINGHAM.

The weather on Monday went from bad to worse, rain falling in the Midlands and a gusty, wet afternoon that brought plenty of pressure to the square-inch of an umbrella made matters unpleasant in the open, rain lashing across the asphalte of the spacious rings under a half gale. Under these conditions it was not surprising that the attendance should be below the average, the majority of Birmingham sportsmen preferring to take their racing at second hand—through the papers. The going here, though on a bog, is always good, and was in really splendid order to start with. Results:—

HINDLIP MAIDEN PLATE.—Of 100sovs., for two-year-olds 5 furlongs.

Another sudden change brought a still night, with a strong white frost, and Birmingham looked bright in the morning sunshine next day. The prospects in the city suggested that all was well at Castle Bromwich, and as often happened the weather made ample amends for the previous day's sleet and slush, as after a few showers had demanded umbrellas the bulk of the afternoon was fine. The course was in real good order, and though quality was not to the front the executive had no reason to complain on the score of quantity, and the sport proved interesting enough. Results:—

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

No such startling results as had characterised the First League programme on the two previous Saturdays occurred in that competition on the 28th ultimo. The defeat of Bradford City, the leaders, at Goodison Park came as something of a surprise, but, drawing with Oldham Athletic and beating Bolton Wanderers, Everton had recently given proof of an advance upon the form which yielded them only five points for their first seven encounters. Apart from this contest at Goodison Park, the games went much as might have been expected except that the two London clubs were associated with some unusually high scoring. Tottenham Hotspur beating Preston North End by 6 to 2 and Woolwich Arsenal drawing their match with Manchester City at 3 goals all. The success of Tottenham Hotspur was particularly gratifying to the supporters of that club for, apart from the game with Bury three weeks ago, not one of the North London team's last six League engagements had resulted in victory.

N.S.U

In a charity match last Monday, however, the experiment had been tried of moving Minter to the centre position, dropping Ellis Crompton and introducing Newman, a player previously identified with Stockport and, a very satisfactory issue having resulted, it was decided to adhere to that formation yesterday. Their plan was not attended with immediate success, North End registering the first goal of the match, but Hotspur took the lead before the interval, and at one point in the second half the score stood at 5 to 1 in their favour. The introduction of Newman at inside right resulted in a great personal triumph for that player, who enjoyed the distinction of scoring three goals, two other goals being registered by Middlemiss from penalties, and Minter, in his new position, securing the sixth. Hotspur have not realised their promise of early September, but they occupy a fairly creditable place in the competition, and yesterday's brilliant performance will arouse expectations of further success for the Tottenham club.

Although merely halving the points at Manchester, Woolwich Arsenal came very near victory, for on three separate occasions they took the lead. A goal by Common, however, was neutralised by Wall, another by Randall, was equalised by Wynn, and after change of ends, when Ducat, from a penalty, had placed the Arsenal ahead once more, Wynn secured a third goal for the City. On recent form it might have been expected that the Plumstead men would win, but the City could scarcely be grudged the draw effected. The Arsenal are doing very well this season after an unfortunate start, seeing that five weeks have now elapsed since they last had to admit defeat in a League encounter. Since losing at Bramall-lane last month, they have beaten Bradford City and Preston North End and drawn with Oldham Athletic, Bolton Wanderers, and Manchester City.

Following up victories over Tottenham Hotspur and Manchester City with a win against Liverpool, Middlesbrough succeed Bradford City as leaders in the First League, the North Yorkshire club being able to claim a better goal average than Newcastle United, who also have emerged victorious from their last three engagements and can claim as many points as stand to the credit of Middlesbrough, Bradford City, Sunderland, and Blackburn Rovers occupying the next three places on the list. All the honours of the competition rest—at least, for the present moment—with the north country. Notts County and West Bromwich Albion having recently damaged the excellent prospects they possessed only a few weeks ago. Bury still remain last in the competition without a win to their credit, but on five occasions they have managed to escape defeat.

Contrary to general expectation, Clapton Orient on their own ground, suffered a crushing reverse at the hands of Chelsea, and this defeat, coming immediately on top of that sustained at Nottingham the previous week, has caused the North London club to drop four places in the competition. Earlier in the week they had been deprived of the leadership by Hull City, who went above them by reason of a victory over Gainsborough Trinity, and now Burnley and Wolverhampton Wanderers are ahead of them as well. Hull City made their position stronger with a narrow victory over Leeds City and, by beating Fulham at Craven Cottage by the odd goal in seven, Burnley kept only one point below the leaders. This result, in view of what happened the previous Saturday, when Burnley could only draw at home with Chelsea and Fulham defeated Bradford, was almost as much a surprise as that at Homerton. Running the leaders close, Wolverhampton Wanderers, who in recent engagements have played extremely well, are only two points below Hull City, while Chelsea now stand level on points with Clapton Orient, who however, take precedence by reason of fewer engagements fulfilled.

No fewer than 44 goals were scored in Saturday's Southern League games, but except in the way of heavy defeats no very surprising results occurred. Swindon and Northampton accomplished capital performances in winning at Exeter and New Brompton respectively, but, as Queen's Park Rangers also put on 4 goals to 1, the relative records of the champions and the leaders remain unaltered. The Rangers had another goal obtained against them—the third in nine games—and though they have scored three less than Swindon they have much the better average, while they remain two points to the good. Crystal Palace distinguished themselves by being the heaviest scorers with 6—0 against Norwich City—a startling second half going all against the visitors, who held as many points as their rivals when the game began. The Palace forwards had shown nothing like such form in any previous match this season. Millwall, curiously enough, fell away, and, only able to draw with Luton drop below the Palace to third place. Bristol Rovers, playing their sixth draw in nine games stand sixth on the list, with as many goals scored as obtained against them—a very strange record.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs. CORINTHIANS.—The Corinthians took a fairly good side to Oxford and beat the University by two goals to one. As in their previous game, Oxford were without their captain, A. F. J. Kerry, but they began well, and in some fast football gained an advantage. From a fine centre Wagner headed a splendid goal, and the University continued to hold their own until after the change of ends. The Corinthians started the second half with a re-arranged forward line, and the side played better. From a centre by S. E. Day, R. A. Young headed a good goal, and then C. E. Brisley put in a shot which G. Leaver, Oxford's goalkeeper, allowed to go through. This mistake cost Oxford the game. The University still had a fair share of the play, which went at a splendid pace, both goals being often in danger. The game was very enjoyable, and Oxford should consider themselves rather unfortunate to lose. Corinthians, 2; Oxford University, 1.

CIVIL SERVICE vs. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—Visiting Tidal Basin, the Cambridge University eleven suffered defeat by 2 goals to 1. The result scarcely gives a fair idea of the run of the game, but though unlucky to lose Cambridge played by no means well. The turf was rather rough, making accurate play very difficult, and short passing was seldom attempted. In a hard fast struggle, the Service showed all their wellknown dash and determination and managed to gain a very hard-earned victory. The were particularly well served by H. H. Simpson at centre-half and H. A. Brookes, the full-back, while when they got away the forwards were better in combination than their opponents. For Cambridge R. G. Thompson and all the halves played very well, after a poor start, and the forwards often did good work without ever settling down to a sound game. The Cambridge defence was at fault directly after the kick-off, and Tickle utilised an opportunity to shoot a fine goal, the ball striking under the bar as it beat Hopewell. Crisp wasted a chance when he got clear away from the half-way line trying a long shot that went wide when he only had the goal-keeper to beat. Before change of ends Hopewell ran out to a centre by Tickle, but Scott rushing up breasted the ball through. Cambridge had most of the play after the interval, forcing many attacks, while their defence was seldom severely troubled. M. Woosna got in a successful shot from loose play, but Cambridge could not again beat the stubborn defence. Civil Service, 2; Cambridge University, 1.

RUGBY RULES.

UNITED SERVICES vs. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—After one of the finest struggles seen this season the United Services defeated the hitherto unbeaten Oxford team by 2 goals and 2 tries to 2 goals at Portsmouth on the 1st November. The result was most unexpected, for up to within fifteen minutes of "no side" Oxford were leading by 10 points to nothing. Then, however, from a line-out Lepage snapped up the ball and was through the Oxford defence and had scored behind the posts before people realised what had happened. McIlwaine converted. From that point the Services were a different side. Seeing a chance of victory, the forwards put a tremendous amount of "ginger" into their work, and fairly dominated the scrums. They heeled quickly, and King, who was playing scrum-half instead of Oakley, who is on the sick list, fed his backs splendidly. Peet intercepted a pass from Hands to Poulton, which the last named knocked forward, and got clear away with only Cheeseman, the back, to beat. He punted over Cheeseman's head and beat him in the race for the ball. McIlwaine again converted.

The score stood at 2 goals all, and excitement was at fever heat. The Services' forwards were now irresistible, and Peet got his opportunity on the right wing. He made a splendid effort. Sprinting along the line, he handed off Geen swerved past Cheeseman, and scored near the corner flag.

Yet another try was to follow, for the Services' forwards again got away, and after some passing between the backs Gardner dribbled over the line and scored the final try.

This defeat should do the Dark Blues good, for it has amply demonstrated the weakness of their defence. Hitherto they have not been hard pressed. Too much praise cannot be given to the Services for their plucky recovery, more especially as they were without several of their regular players. In spite of the fact that Oxford are such a great attacking side, Lyon, at back, had very little to do; in fact, he only touched the ball once in the second half.

CAMBRIDGE U. vs. LONDON HOSPITAL.—After a fairly even first half, in the course of which the Hospital forwards quite held the 'Varsity pack and prevented them from getting the ball out to their backs, there was an extraordinary finish to the game between London Hospital and Cambridge University at Hale End on the 1st November when the 'Varsity won by 37 points to nil. There was no stopping the 'Varsity backs once they got going, and tries were scored in such quick succession as to become almost bewildering. With the Cambridge forwards improving as their opponents' tired and weakened, Cumberlege at the base of the scrum had an easy task to get the ball away to his three-quarters, who one and all showed much nippiness in attack. M. J. Susskind was tried as a partner to C. Shore in the centre in place of C. N. Lowe, and the lengthy U.S.C. boy showed that he can both run fast and give and take passes with a fair amount of accuracy. He possesses that rare accomplishment of modern three-quarters, the power to hand off an opponent, and as in addition he is a really fine kick it will be difficult to leave him but of the side. At present his weak-point is his tackling.

The man, however, who had most to do with the easy victory of Cambridge was Thorne, who by his straight running and well-timed passes was continually opening up the game. Cumberlege has got much quicker than he was last year, and with a useful stand-off half in Thomas to help him and two fast running wings in Lewis and Owens, the Cambridge back division is now a pretty "tough proposition."

.401 Caliber High-Power Self-Loading Rifle.

Besides being the most powerful recoil-operated rifle made, the Winchester .401 Caliber High-Power Self-Loader is the simplest, strongest, most easily operated and most rapid shooting of all rifles of this type. For hunting game, the self-loading type of rifle is ideal, providing it is reliable; and when you can get the power and the swiftness and ease of action of the .401 Winchester, you have a battery that prepares you to meet any game alive. Just look at these figures: velocity of bullet, 2142 foot seconds; energy, 2038 foot pounds. These figures show that the .401 is more powerful than the .303 British, and in addition you have the increased rapidity of fire. This is further augmented by the interchangeable magazine system, the simplest, quickest and most effective method of loading ever devised.

THESE RIFLES CAN BE SEEN AT ALL GUNMAKERS'.

The forwards however, were somewhat disappointing. They packed badly and heeled slowly, and seemed as if they needed a leader.

Only one try was obtained in the first half, Ovens getting over for Cambridge after a clever "cut through" by Susskind. In the second half, with the Light Blue forwards continually getting the ball, seven more tries were added and a penalty goal was kicked. Ovens (2), Susskind (3), Lewis, and Symington were the try-getters. Thomas kicked four goals and Susskind one. The last-named also kicked a fine penalty goal from the half-way line.

LONDON IRISH vs. LONDON HOSPITAL.—As was the case the previous Saturday at Catford, the Irish were behind the scrum, and it was to this cause more than any other that they lost to the London Hospital, who gained three tries to none. Forward there was very little in the game and, indeed, the home side if anything had rather the best of matters. On not one of the many occasions they had of scoring, however, were they able to press home an attack. On the other hand, the Hospital backs were quick to seize the opportunities that came their way. Midway through the first half a long swinging pass to the right wing gave Ash a chance of running in unmarked. Naturally enough he scored between the posts, this being the solitary score up to the change of ends. Afterwards Morris and Molesworth secured further tries at brief intervals, and as none of these were converted the Hospital won by nine points to love. On each side there was an accident R. Morton twisting his knee early in the game and O'Keefe injuring his instep towards the close. London Hospital, 9 points; London Irish 0.

OLD LEYSIANS vs. OLD ALLEYNIANS.—These teams of old Public School boys put out their best available strength at Wandsworth and a fast, level encounter took place. The Alleynians were more often able to get the ball from the scrum in the first half and their backs had consequently many openings. Wade, Kempton, and Gold made a combined attack but the Leysian forwards saved the situation. On another occasion the visitors were unlucky not to score when Cook sprinted on the right wing and cross-kicked to Wade, who just failed in a race with the full-back to touch down. No scoring occurred in the first half and it was well into the second before the Leysians, who had been trying hard for an opening, were at last successful and Mellor, foremost in a forward rush, scored the only try of the match. At a wide angle Pinkham failed to kick a goal. The Alleynians made an effort to get on terms and were rewarded with a penalty kick in the Leysians' "twenty-five," given for "not playing the ball." Wade failed with the kick and the Leysians won by the narrow margin of one try to nothing. Old Leysians, 3 points; Old Alleynians, 0.

BLACKHEATH vs. LONDON SCOTTISH.—Blackheath beat the London Scottish at the Rectory Field by 2 goals and 2 tries to 1 dropped goal and 1 try. They were without their full-back, Dickson, and two of the best forwards, Pillman and Griffiths, but their three-quarter line was strengthened by the inclusion of Neale of Bristol, and it was this factor that brought about the Blackheath victory. In the first half the Scottish forwards played a hard bustling game, which kept Blackheath almost together on the defensive; Kerr dropped a clever goal, and Horne, from a pass by Salveson, scored a try wide out on the right. Blackheath never looked very dangerous, and at the interval the Scottish led by 7 points to 0. The second half came as a surprise, both to the Scottish and to the spectators. In the first half the Blackheath backs had shown no promise of superiority, and it was not until nearly a quarter of an hour after resuming that they gave a sign of their improved quality. Coverdale made a number of openings for Neale, who, at left centre played cleverly to his wing and the other centre. He made the first score after an excellent combined run in which Coverdale Pym, and Stokes were also engaged, running behind the posts for Coverdale easily to convert. Blackheath, 16 points; London Scottish, 7 points.

GUY'S HOSPITAL vs. BLACKHEATH.—Blackheath put a poor side into the field at Honor Oak Park owing to their fixture with the London Scottish, and the Hospital had no difficulty in winning by five goals and three tries to two goals. The Blackheath forwards quite failed to hold their own in the first half, and the Hospital backs, well fed by Medlock, took full advantage of this weakness. After Rook had gained a try for the Hospital and Stokes converted further scores came through Stokes, Harkness, and Hoby, Stokes converting the last. Just before half-time the Hospital full-back failed to get in his kick and the Blackheath forwards rushed the ball across the line. Scrutton gaining the try, Kirkley successfully dealt with the goal-kick. Crossing over with a lead of 16 points to five, the Hospital went right away and Hoby scored. He was followed by Harkness (twice) and Stokes, the latter, who took the whole of the place kicks, landing three goals. In the second half Blackheath showed a little better form and a strong forward rush in the last few minutes resulted in a try by Smyth. Kirkley converting. Not long afterwards Pym got away and passed to Craven, who scored an unconverted try. The Scots had one break away, but nothing came of it and Blackheath pressed consistently to the end. On two occasions Neale, after running nearly up to the line, gave easy passes to Maritz, who scored two tries, one of which Stone improved. Guy's Hospital, 34 points; Blackheath, 10 points.

RICHMOND vs. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—Oxford attracted a big crowd of spectators to Richmond, the best gate seen, indeed, on the athletic ground this season. The Dark Blues were much the better side, and their success was always sure. The Richmond forwards played a hard game, and the defence was generally good, but, though making quite an interesting match of it, they could not cope with the pace and cleverness of the Oxford backs. In the opening half the Richmond men did so well that their line was only twice crossed, Poulton running in cleverly with a try, which Lagden converted, four minutes after the start, while shortly before the interval Geen scored from a clever effort by Poulton, but Lagden's kick failed. For some time after changing ends the visitors had some anxiety but their defence was never at fault, and while Richmond rarely looked like scoring, Oxford ran in with six more tries. Geen was responsible for three of them, and Poulton, Brown, and Bullnek the other four of the place kicks, which were taken by Logden and Cheesman, being successful. Oxford University placed another success to their credit by five placed goals and three tries to nil. Oxford University, 34 points; Richmond, 0 CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. HARLEQUINS.—There was a large crowd at Cambridge to witness the game between the University and Harlequins. The London side proved too strong for the Light Blues, winning by 1 dropped goal, 1 penalty goal, and 2 tries to 2 tries. In the first half, there was nothing to choose between the fifteens, the University having quite as much of the play as their opponents. Lambert scored for the Harlequins, but soon afterwards Lewis gained a try for the University. The score at half-time was 3 points each. Afterwards Lambert kicked a penalty goal, and Ovens scored for Cambridge. In the last few minutes of the game Lambert gained a try and Milton dropped a goal. Harlequins, 13 points; Cambridge University, 6 points.

THE COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

CHESHIRE vs. NORTHUMBERLAND.—There was a large crowd at this game at Birkenhead Park, the match being played in fine weather. The game had been in progress less than five minutes when Sykes gained a try for Cheshire and Pemberton placed a goal. Soon afterwards, however, Robinson scored for Northumberland, the place-kick failing. The Cheshire forwards showed excellent form and after a good rush Johnson gained a try. Cheshire continued to attack, but did not score again before the interval, when they led by 1 goal and 1 try to 1 try. After changing ends the Northumberland men played a strong game, and Roberts gained two fine tries, one of which was converted by Alexander. Later Dodds kicked a penalty goal. Despite these reverses the Cheshire men played very pluckily, and after a round of good passing, Thwaite gained a try, and Pemberton was unlucky in not kicking a goal, the ball hitting one of the uprights. In the final stages Northumberland had the best of matters, and Dodds gained a try, which Alexander failed to improve. In the end Northumberland won by 2 goals (1 penalty) and 4 tries to 1 goal and 2 tries. Northumberland, 20 points; Chesire, 11 points.

ROWING.

ARTILLERY vs. ENGINEERS.—In delightful autumn weather and before a big attendance the supposed annual fouroared match between the Royal Artillery and the Royal Engineers was revived over the Henley Regatta course yesterday, the previous battle having been fought in 1906 (the contest was started in 1869). Most of these engaged yesterday are well known upon the Thames, for of the Artillery Messrs. Brooke, Sanderson, and Gibbon helped Cambridge to defeat Oxford at Putney in 1900. Gibbon was then at stroke, the position he held in the previous year when scoring his initial success against Oxford, on that occasion also being assisted by Sanderson, who rowed in the winning Olympic Regatta eight. In addition, Gibbon, in 1902 stroked the Third Trinity Boat Club home first for the Henley Grand Challenge Cup. Benson in 1900 rowed for Eton at Henley, when they were beaten but Captain Sankey has occupied a more prominent position at the Royal carnival, for in 1910 and 1911 he stroked the Royal Engineers in the Thames Cup race, also making a memorable show this year, when with his three companions of yesterday, he was successful until meeting First Trinity, Cambridge, the eventual winners. For the race under notice the Artillery trained at Cambridge and Engineers on the Medway Mr. W. B. Woodgate umpired. Result:—

Berks Station, Royal Artillery.—B. W. D. Brooke, Captain R. Benson, Captain R. H. Sanderson, Captain J. H. Gibbon (stroke) 1.

Berks Station, Royal Engineers.—H. C. B. Wemyss, Captain N. D. Noble, A. H. Morse, Captain C. E. P. Sankey (stroke) 2.

The wind blew strongly behind the boats, both strokes consequently commencing at a pretty high rate—Engineers 38 and Artillery 37. The sightly slower stroke of the gunners had the greater strength behind it and they led off immediately and reached the Temple three-parts of a length to the good. After that it became the turn of the sappers, and slowly but surely differences were adjusted and the racing craft were progressing dead abreast by the Rectory. Between there and Fawley Court Boathouse the Artillerymen went the faster, gaining the half-way mark with their rudder just opposite the centre of the Engineers' ship. The latter then quickened and stole bit by bit from their rivals' lead so that the gunners showed the way by less than their forward canvas gaining Remenham Club. But Gibbon was always equal to the occasion and breasted the Grosvenor slightly first. Passing the old Isthmian enclosure Sankey called upon his fellow Engineers for a supreme effort, but by corresponding exertions the Artillery moved the faster and ultimately reached Mr. Holland, who was distance judge, two-thirds of a length to the good. Time—6mins. 2 secs.

GOLF.

PEN vs. BRUSH.—As tributes to the fine performances of Mr. Harold Hilton in this season's British and American championships, two events were held on the 28th ultimo by the London Press Golfing Society, of which Mr. Hilton has been a member for several years. The occasion was seized to institute the long-suggested match between teams representing the literary and artistic sides of the Press, and in the evening the champion was entertained to dinner by the members of the society at the Holborn Restaurant.

The match, which was termed "Pen vs. Brush," was held on the West Middlesex Club's course at Southall, and was invested for some time with an air of mystery by the appearance at the head of the artists' team of a strange personality. He was declared to be a Norwegian and a plus 3 man. His name was given as Mr. A. Zorn. It was explained that he was dumb, so that attempts to interview him were futile; while a photographer who wished to secure a picture of this interesting stranger was informed that he would have to make his desire known by signs. After a series of elaborate pantomimic explanations, his ambition was gratified. Mr. Zorn presented a picturesque spectacle, even though he wore glasses of a deep-blue tint. He played excellently. He opposed Mr. Hilton, who, although standing 4 up at one point, only won by a putt on the last green.

The identify of the stranger was revealed at the finish. He was C. Ralph Smith the local professional. The artists, being a man short, and wishing to give Mr. Hilton a good match, had employed their artistic gifts most effectually to disguise Smith. They dyed his cheeks, coloured his hair, provided him with the blue glasses, velveteen coat and generally altered his appearance so thoroughly that even the members of the club who followed the game were deceived. Mr. Hilton said that directly he saw his opponent play the first hole he knew that he was meeting a professional golfer, but he could not penetrate the disguise, although he had often seen Smith. It was only at the finish that the champion knew whom he had been playing.

The weather was very unfavourable, and the foursomes arranged for the afternoon were not counted, several of them being left unfinished. Each side won four games in the singles, so that the contest ended in a tie. Details:—

8th Hussars "B" Team vs. Highland Light Infantry.—This was a well contested game and an extra chukker had to be played before victory was secured by the Highland Light Infantry.

First Chukker.—The Highland Light Infantry pressed at the start but the Hussars cleared and running down scored a goal.

Second Chukker.—Fast up and down play. No score.

Third Chukker.—This was another pointless chukker, both goals being visited without result.

Fourth Chukker.—Level play for a spell till the Hussars got away and scored. The Highland Light Infantry then rushed away and opened their account but their opponents notched another point shortly after.

Fifth Chukker.—This was a well contested period and each team scored once.

Sixth Chukker.—The Highland Light Infantry were playing in splendid form and scored 2 goals in quick succession. The Hussars made great efforts but could not get through again and time was called with the score 4 all.

Extra Chukker.—The goals were widened and the game continued. The Highland Light Infantry put through almost immediately and thus won by 5 goals to 4. Teams :—

The semi-finals were played in splendid weather on the 15th instant the Scouts and the 8th Hussars qualifying for the final.

Scouts vs. Highland Light Infantry (receive 9).

First Chukker.—The Scouts pressed all through and scored 2 goals.

Second Chukker.—Up and down play. The Scouts scored from a penalty but soon after the Highland Light Infantry got away and hit a goal.

Third Chukker.—The Highland Light Infantry were kept busy but their opponents missed a couple of chances and the period ended pointless.

Fourth Chukker.—The Scouts got on and hit 2 goals in succession. Then the Highlanders came away and scored.

Fifth Chukker.—The Scouts pressed hotly and 3 goals were registered without response.

Sixth Chukker.—The Scouts had all the best of this period and before its close had put on 3 more, goals thus getting on terms. Scouts, 11 goals ; Highland Light Infantry, 2+9 goals.

Extra Chukker.—Fast up and down play the Scouts at length scoring the winning point. Teams :—

8th Hussars "A" vs. Wanderers (receive 5).—The Hussars had a very easy win.

First Chukker.—The Hussars did all the attacking and registered three points.

Second Chukker.—The 8th maintained the pressure and scoring twice equalled.

Third Chukker.—The Hussars went on the offensive all through and added 3 more goals to their score. The Wanderers got away once but their final effort went out wide.

Fourth Chukker.—The Hussars hit a goal. Then their opponents were prominent but failed to score.

Fifth Chukker.—The Wanderers got on and registered their only point. A penalty against them shortly after enabled the Hussars to hit a goal and they added two more to this before the close of the period.

Sixth Chukker.—The 8th kept up the attack and put on 2 more goals. Final score : 8th Hussars, 14 goals ; Wanderers, 6 goals. Teams as before.

Umpires :—Majors Wormald and Crawley.

Final.

8th Hussars "A" Team (receive 3) vs Scouts.—The teams met in the final on the 18th instant and put up a good game, as was expected. The Hussars won the game and had not to depend on their handicap for the victory. In the fourth chukker, Mr. Thomas' pony came down and gave his rider a heavy fall. Mr. Thomas was picked up unconscious and Mr. McCalmont of the 7th Hussars took his place.

First Chukker.—The Scouts attacked and put on 3 goals without response.

Second Chukker.—A penalty against the 8th was not turned to account and shortly after the Hussars hit a goal.

Third Chukker.—The Scouts pressed but were unable to get through and the Hussars rushing down towards the close of the period notched a goal.

Fourth Chukker.—The Hussars were attacking when Mr. Thomas fell. He was riding off when his pony crossed its legs. On resuming after the accident the Hussars got away and scored.

Fifth Chukker.—Play in both territories—the Hussars put on 2 more goals.

Sixth Chukker.—The Scouts got away and scored and the game ended with the scores : 8th Hussars, 8 goals ; Scouts, 4 goals. Teams as before.

Umpires :—Majors Crawley and Wormald.

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The programme for the Christmas week matches has now been fixed up, and it is pleasing to note that the Bombay Gymkhana are coming over. The Western Presidency team, which will probably be captained by Major Greig, will play Ballygunge on the 23rd and 24th December ; while on the two following days the visitors meet Calcutta. On the 27th, "Viceroy's 'Cup Day," Bombay will not be engaged, but a team of Calcutta players—those not interested in racing—will play the Elphinstone College. Eastern Bengal and Assam, who were here last year are unable to get together a team, but a three-day match, Calcutta vs. Ballygunge, is fixed to take place at the Gardens on the 31st December and 1st and 2nd January.

Two of the most interesting matches played so far this season, were the games between Calcutta and the Aryans on the former's ground, and the one between the C. C. C. and Nattore, which took place on the Maharajah's ground. Both the games resulted in defeats for Calcutta, but the encounter at Ballygunge was full of interest and excitement, Nattore only winning by a wicket.

In the match on the Maharajah'sground both teams may be said to be representative. A. P. Muir, who bowled splendidly for the Bankers and Brokers against Ballygunge the week previous, assisting Calcutta, while although P. Baloo and his two brothers Shivram and Vithal, and the slogger Massey were the notable absentees on the Nattore side, the Maharajah's team this year is strengthened by the inclusion of S. Aziz and C. M. Ali of Agra fame and D. Sampre who has done good work in Bombay and Poona cricket recently.

Nattore's ground is a batsman's wicket, but the attack on both sides was exceptionally good on this occasion, and while Calcutta were all out for 124, Nattore could only register 127 for nine ; the Maharajah who was last man to go in deciding not to bat. Mehta batted well for 45 his being the highest individual score of the day, C. P. Beachcroft batted best for Calcutta and in subscribing 32 made some good strokes to the "off." Muir bowled up to his reputation, and took 4 wickets for 24 runs, while Ernsthausen, Quin and Beachcroft got one each. Lee bowled but without success. For Nattore Sampre got 3 for 29, Ogad Shanker, 3 for 44, and Ali, 2 for 36.

The match at the Gardens on Sunday ended in a win for the Aryans by 4 wickets and 62 runs. Calcutta who went in first were all out for 145 to which score N. A. Moore contributed 42 by sound cricket. Moore, who is a new comer, is a good bat and a smart field and is sure to play for the Club in all representative matches. Calcutta were weak in attack, but B. Mookerjee of Cooch Behar fame, played a dashing innings for 69, only giving one difficult chance when Barton made a good attempt at a catch near the screen. The Aryans knocked up 207 for 4 wickets. K. Mookerjee took 4 wickets for 16 runs.

At Ballygunge on Sunday the Suburban Club beat Major Harman's XI., which was practically made up of Rifle Brigade, players, by an innings and 15 runs. D. S. Shallow's 79 for the winners, and T. F. Brockholes 28 and not out 29 were the best batting displays Captain R. N. Bocquet, who has returned from home, assisted Ballygunge, but did not show to advantage in his first match.

The United Jute Mills are doing exceedingly well, and last Sunday they beat Howrah Sporting by nine runs. The scoring was meagre, the Scotchmen scoring 95, while the Howrah Sporting registered 86.

At Ichapur on Sunday, the home team beat the second string of the Ballygunge Club by 14 runs on the first innings but in the second innings Ballygunge wanted 16 runs to win with seven wickets in hand when time was up. A. J. Stevens' display with both bat and ball was the principal feature of the day's cricket. He batted well for 37, and took four wickets for 34 runs Ichapur scored 126 and 80, while Ballygunge registered 112 and 79 for three.

Most of the half-day matches on Saturday were of the most unsatisfactory character, but in two of the games—Rangers vs. City, and Customs vs. Town Club—the fault of declaring much too late deprived the Rangers and Customs of wins. In both the games the respective captains did not apply the closure until quarter past four. The Town Club, however, took twenty minutes before they started their innings. It is a pity that the Bengali is not a better sportsman.

The half-day match between Calcutta and the Y. M. C. A. ended in a draw, but the players on both sides hit pluckily and no time was wasted. Calcutta applied the closure at 152 for seven, while the Y. M. C. A. got 119 for one wicket.

Dalhousie had the best of the draw with Ballygunge on Saturday afternoon the Dals declaring at 108 for five while Ballygunge lost eight for 88.

On the Town Club ground the Customs in an hour and 45 minutes knocked up 128 for 5 and the Town Club scored 49 for 6. W. B. Crosse, the Surrey player, batted well for a not out 49.

The Rangers scored 128 for nine and the City Athletic 72 for 9. The ever-green Teddy Templeton hit well for 33 and took five wickets for 22 runs.

The La Martinière boys were deprived of a victory for the want of a couple of runs in their match with Howrah Sporting, the Babus scored 114 for seven and declared ; while the boys got 113 for 6. On the previous occasion La Martinière beat Howrah Sporting.

The Telegraph have quite a decent team this year and they gave the Aryans a good game on Saturday, the result being a draw. The Telegraph scored 160 and the Aryans 98 for 4, C. Alridge 61 and G. Jewell not out 66 and B. Mukerjee 37 batted best for their respective sides.

CAN AMERICA BEAT US AT GOLF?

"Can the Americans beat us at Golf?"

The question is easier to answer than "Will the Americans eventually defeat us at golf?" writes Mr. H. H. Hilton in a London contemporary. At the moment I have but little doubt in my mind that the standard of the game as played across the Atlantic is not quite on the same plane as that exhibited on this side.

Several of the American amateurs are distinctly brilliant exponents of the game, but they cannot claim the same consistency of form that one or two of our most finished amateurs show. As yet they have no equivalent to Johnnie Ball in their ranks, and there is no prototype of Bobbie Maxwell at his best, but there is plenty of hope for the cause of American golf, as the majority of their leading players are very, very young—ridiculously so, according to the standard of age we are apt to set up on this side, and men whom we would be inclined to look upon as still in the very nursery of their golfing career would seem to rank as quite seasoned players in the United States. As an instance take Fred Herreshoff, who so recently ran me to the 37th hole at Anawamis. He has now arrived at the mature age of twenty-three summers: yet, no less than seven years ago, when he was a schoolboy, he actually reached the final round of the championship.

And even admitting that the American championship in those far-off days was probably not so difficult to win as it is now, imagine what we would think over here if a mere schoolboy worked his way through to even the semi-final round of our championship, and I suggest this while remembering full well that Gordon Barry won the championship at Prestwick in 1905—a success accomplished when he had not quite arrived at man's estate.

Boy Golfers in America.

But there is a big difference between a boy of sixteen and a youth of twenty. Why, even here we consider a player of twenty-five or twenty-six of age too young and inexperienced to do himself full justice in the big events; on the other side he would stand in comparison with the majority of the players as quite a hoary-headed veteran, and herein lie the strength and the possibilities of American golf. American golfers develop their game in extreme youth and gain experience in their early years, and the knowledge they then gain will be of inestimable advantage in after years. And while this early rapid development may mean a similarly rapid decay with advancing years, personally I could see no very direct evidence of this catastrophe, as I came across quite a number of veterans capable of playing quite as good golf as their contemporaries in age on this side.

It would be only natural to attribute the experienced ways of the younger players in the States to the natural precocity of American youth; on the other hand, I hold the opinion that this early golfing development is not so much due to the natural gifts handed by good Providence to these boys as to the fact that in their early years they are granted so many more opportunities of trying their mettle against older and more experienced men, and this gives them an insight into and a knowledge of the art of competition play which are certainly not granted to our young players on this side, who have invariably to gain their knowledge and experience through the more exacting channels of club competitions and inter-club matches, so that when a young British player comes to take part in open events the seriousness and solemnity of the occasion naturally appear a little weird and terrifying to him. In America, on the other hand, the spring months, and the autumn months in particular, bring one long succession of open and invitation tournaments, and for a period of two months a player can proceed from one tournament to another with hardly a break in between.

Many Tournaments.

Take, for instance, the case of young Chick Evans, who was so recently among us. It would be interesting to know how many tournaments he has taken part in during the past two years. He performed in quite an array of events when over on this side, and since his return he seems to have journeyed from one scene of golfing strife to another, just from tournament to tournament, and has finished up by playing a series of exhibition matches with the professionals. Think of what inestimable value such experience must be to a player who is barely twenty-one years of age. It would take a boy five years to gain a similar experience on this side of the Atlantic, and he would have to work hard, too, to get it all in. The young American golfer may appear to our view a somewhat precocious individual, but I cannot think that he is naturally any quicker than our own young players in picking up the game. He simply matures much more rapidly on account of the greater opportunities which are granted to him, and in consequence he will probably arrive at the zenith of his powers at a much earlier age than the British player. And one must never assume that a young American expert is naturally lacking in experience on account of his immature years, as he has probably had all the experience that a British player five to ten years older has been able to gain on this side.

American and British Amateurs.

Taking an American team of ten amateurs, what chance would they have against a team of ten British players? On their own soil a distinct chance. For argument's sake I will name a team of ten American players, giving the names of those whom, on my experience in the States, I consider worthy of inclusion. I will make it up as follows: Walter Travis, Fred Herreshoff, Jerome Travers, Chick Evans, W. Fownes, junr., Oswald Kirkby, Paul Hunter, Albert Seckel, E. M. Byers, and R. A. Gardner—I think even my American friends would grant that this team would be fairly representative of American golf.

Now, on American soil, this would prove a very serious problem for the British team to solve, and I am rather inclined to the opinion that they might fail to solve it. Now at least two of this team—Travis and Travers—are admittedly not quite so good as they once were, and it is possible that at one time in their career they were almost, if not quite, as good as the very best British talent; but taking the whole team on their present form, they have no men on the average of play who, to my mind, are quite the equals of one or two of our players. But, on the other hand, they are a wonderfully level lot, with not a weak player in the crew, and what is more important, the majority of them are really good match players, and in this respect the American golfer compares more than favourably with the British player. Possibly it may be due to their more continues experience of serious golf, or it may be that they are as a nation naturally gifted with the correct temperament for the game—and towards this latter assumption it must be acknowledged that they take the playing of the game in a much more serious vein than our own players are prone to do, and even in their many day-to-day matches play them with a keenness and solemnity which are not always to be seen on our courses. But, whatever may be the cause there is not much doubt in my mind that the average American golfer has a more determined temperament in the case of competition play than our home-grown product.

While, however, the British team would have a very serious task on foreign soil, on the other hand I cannot think that they would fail to win on one of our seaside courses, as the Americans have literally no opportunity of playing real seaside golf, and there undoubtedly is a distinction in the class of shots called for on inland and seaside courses.

In one respect British golf is distinctly stronger than American golf, and that is in the number of players who are capable of playing a first-class game. For every one to be found in America there are at least two to be found on this side, but it must be remembered that the game is a very young product over there, and the youthful players who fill so many spaces in the picture of American golf of the present day are just the very first crop of the players who have had the advantage of serving the apprenticeship to the game in boyhood's days. The form of this first crop plainly suggests that in the future we shall have to furbish up our armour. It is more than likely that the second and third crops will be superior to the first.

"Mr. Bobbleigh was here this afternoon, James, and he says now that you have your motor he'd like to have you run over and see him some time," said Mrs. Blithers. "Well, if he calls again," said Blithers, "just tell him that I'll be glad to run over him at any time, but I don't care particularly about seeing him."

Hockey.

THE AGA KHAN TOURNAMENT, POONA.

The Tournament opened on the 13th instant, when the Loyal North Lancs met the Lincolns. The latter team represented the detachment of this regiment at Kirkee and in spite of not having a big field from which to choose an eleven they put up an excellent show and were only beaten by 2 goals to 1. The N. Lancs were first to score but their opponents equalised after the interval and time arrived with the score one all. Extra time was played during which the Lancs scored the winning goal. On the 14th instant the Dorsets met the Belgaum Gymkhana. This was a very well contested game. The Dorsets scored in the first half and despite strenuous efforts on the part of Belgaum they were unable to equalise. The Police and the Gymnastic Staff took the field on the 15th and a very one-sided game was witnessed. The Police were no match for the Gymnasium team and had to retire beaten by 8 goals to nil. Another one-sided affair was witnessed the following evening when the Indian Army officers team disposed of the Norfolk Regiment by 5 goals to nil. The Norfolks did not play up to their form and lost numerous opportunities of scoring. On Friday the Loyal North Lancs met the Bishop's High School and both teams put up a good game. The High School were most erratic in front of goal in the first half and missed many chances of putting through. Not so the Lancs, for they made the most of their openings and were three goals up at the interval. The second half was most interesting. The Bishop's boys found their form again and managed to score twice. The Lancs, however, got another goal and eventually won by 4 goals to 2. On Saturday last the first of the semi-finals was played between the Dorsets and the Gymnastic Class. It was an excellent game throughout, both teams playing at the top of their form. The Dorsets were first to score but it was not long before their opponents got on terms. Just before the interval, however, a penalty bully in front of the Gymnasium goal resulted in the Dorsets scoring again. On crossing over they put on yet another point. Then the Gymnastic Class attacked and notched a goal, but try as they would they were unable to get through again and the Dorsets thus won by 3 goals to 2.

The Horse.

By John Gilpin.

CHAPTER XIV.

Vices—(continued).

Hogging and Pig Jumping.—All young horses in high condition are fond of jumping about when excited. The- should be shaken up and shouted at, and a good whack with an ashplant or similar stick makes a very good accompaniment to the shaking up. Cantering in small circles and figures of eight soon gets their backs down. If a horse starts hogging when going across country shake him up, increase the pace for a time, and keep him up to his bit.

Shying.—The best cure for shying is to make the horse thoroughly obedient in the long reins and to accustom him quietly to the things he is afraid of. If the fault is due to deficient eyesight there is no actual cure, but from whatever cause it may arise a tendency to shy can be mitigated by keeping the horse's attention occupied by collecting him and playing with his mouth. If the object he fears is on your right draw his head gently to the left and increase the pressure of the left leg, and vice versa. If the horse runs backwards a close application of both heels just behind the girth will generally bring him up to the hand again.

Many horses shy for fun when they are fresh. They look about for an excuse for a lark. This is due rather to high spirits than to vice and if it is objected to it can be cured by increasing the work.

Kicking.—Mere kicking up without trying to strike anything is not a very serious vice as a rule, but I have had a few thoroughbred ones that used to kick themselves nearly perpendicular and were consequently rather hard to sit. Two of them used to do it even at a fast gallop, and one of them, I am sure, kicked more than five hundred times on the morning he was first ridden on parade.

Horses that kick at others or at people or hounds must be corrected. If you hit a horse for kicking you must hit him while his legs are still in the air. If you wait till he is down he will almost certainly kick again. The place to hit a horse is just behind the girth. Further back he is much more ticklish and therefore more likely to kick if struck there.

If a horse cowkicks at you when you go to mount him hit him on the offending leg as it is striking. A whip should be used as a stick might lame him. In mounting such a horse get well up to his shoulder with your right hand on the pommel of the saddle instead of on the cantle. He will then be unable to reach you. If he cowkicks at your foot when you are mounted spur him hard and instantly on the side to which he kicked.

A horse should always be punished for striking out at a man if it can be done at the time. It is no use to hit him after his leg is down.

It is well to remember that a horse cannot kick you if you are close up against his buttocks, he can only give you a very rude push, but beware of his heels if you are three or four feet behind him.

Biting.—Captain Hayes's method of dealing with biters consists in the use of an octangular wooden bit with the faces grooved and the angles sharpened. This is made so thick that when it is on the horse cannot close his mouth. When he snaps he hurts his mouth badly and soon gives up the practice.

When mounting a horse that bites turn the elbow of your left arm (supposing you are mounting from the near side) out towards the horse's eye, take the right rein shorter than the left, and place your left hand well up the horse's neck, feeling the right side of his mouth all the time. As long as your elbow is sticking into his face he cannot bite you, but look out for the seat of your breeches if your off rein is too slack as you mount. A horse that both bites and cowkicks requires careful mounting. You must stand well up to the shoulder to avoid his heels and the elbow pointed at his eye and the shortened off rein will prevent his biting you.

Many horses are inclined to nip one out of pure good fellowship. They should be checked for this for a horse's nip is pretty severe.

Bolting.—A horse that bolts is temporarily mad, does not look where he is going, cannot be stopped or guided, and ought to be shot. If you have to ride such a brute have running reins on him and, if he gets away with you, haul his head round to his side with one of them. He is likely to fall but if you know that and lean right back with your feet out of the stirrups you will fall clear. If such a horse gets away amongst traffic it is extremely likely that he will kill somebody. As I said, such brutes should be shot. Fortunately they are rarely met with.

Hard Pulling.—This differs from bolting in that the horse is not mad and can be guided and managed by a good rider. A puller can generally be much improved by being thoroughly mouthed in the long reins and in the riding school. Once you succeed in getting the stiffness out of his neck and get him to canter slowly on his hocks, arching his neck to the curb, you can always get a hold of him when you want to. In the riding school all sorts of bits can be tried until you find one to which he will bend his neck. Sometimes when a severe bit is not successful a much milder one solves the puzzle, for horses undoubtedly sometimes pull from pain. I do not believe in high ports to curb bits except in the case of horses that get their tongues over the bit or draw their tongues right to the back of their mouths, and then only if the effect of the port is to keep the tongue in the proper place. Longer cheeks and a tighter curb chain make the bit more severe and cheeks can be had long enough to break a horse's jaw. Some horses that pull very hard can be held in such bits as the Chifney, the Baron Thornton, the Three-in-One, and the Mohawk, but careful breaking should make almost any horse that is not insane go in an ordinary double bridle or a Half Moon Pelham. Rubber mouthpiece covers are useful in some cases, especially after injury to the jaw, but many horses dislike the taste of them and try to spit them out.

For light-mouthed, excitable horses the curb chain should be covered with wash leather. The leather should be removable or the chain will rust inside it and may break when most required.

Unsteadiness.—Fidgetting, refusing to walk or trot without breaking, refusing to stand still, etc., are all matters of breaking. Once obedience is secured the rest follows. If a mad horse from freshness will not walk or trot quietly the best plan is to take him then and there off the road and canter him in a small figure of eight with the correct changes of leg until he sobers down. If one is alone the simplest plan is to let him go along until he becomes quiet. Some horses will halt when required to but after a short time begin to fidget, turn round etc., etc. This is a great nuisance from a parade point of view. The halter twitch is the only cure in bad cases though the man who is taking a school ride regularly may improve the horse by sitting on its back at the halt while the work is going on. The trouble is that though the horse will soon learn to stand still in the school he becomes excited on a big parade and will be almost as bad, perhaps, as ever. He will never disregard the word "Steady" if he has undergone the discipline of the halter twitch.

Horses required for parades should be accustomed to military bands whenever possible. Music excites some horses greatly at first and sets them a-dancing which is no advantage when walking or trotting past the saluting point under orders to maintain the greatest steadiness. Opportunities should also be taken of accustoming chargers to crowds, shouting clapping of hands, waving of flags etc. Boldness is first of all the result of confidence in and obedience to the rider and until these are secured horses will always be liable to shy and play up at unusual sights and sounds. Their education should therefore be well advanced before they are introduced to processions and rows. A thoroughly schooled and collected horse is under control and that is half the battle. He will soon get used to things that do not hurt him if he cannot get away from them or play up, while if he succeeds in creating a riot he will be worse on the next occasion.

I make a point of shooting crows, etc., round about the stable at times, generally when the horses are feeding. After a short time they take no notice whatever of the discharge.

Nervousness of Weapons.—When the horse is obedient in the long reins the sword, bogspear, lance, or whatever it is he dislikes should be shown to him and he should be accustomed to its sight, touch, and smell. He may then be mounted by a good rider who should quietly move the weapons about while the breaker still constrains the horse to stand still by means of the long reins. In exceptional cases the halter twitch may be required but I have not come across such. I have a mare that was quite quiet with the sword except when I picked up anything on the point of it when she became frightened and extremely violent. I cured her by putting small bunches of lucerne grass about, picking them up on the sword point as I rode about, and feeding them to her direct from it. She is now quite pleased to see a tentpeg or anything else on the point.

The weapons should not be used for any purpose until the horse is quite used to their being carried, and when the horse is quite used to their being carried, and when the sword is first brought into use cuts should be made very gently so as not to frighten the horse by the noise of the contact with the object. The more quietly one proceeds the sooner will one obtain one's object.

"What do you mean, sir?" asked the girl, struggling from her eager lover's arms. "That you are my chance for happiness," he cried rapturously, "and I always embrace an opportunity." "Nay," she returned coldly; "in this case you were but hugging a delusion."

Mrs. Gibson (who is head of her house) remarked one morning to her husband:—"In five months from to-day we shall celebrate our silver wedding." "Better wait five years longer," said her husband, in quiet desperation, "and then we can celebrate the Thirty Years' War.

The Naturalist.

NURSERIES OF SEA-FOWL.

Of the many people who must admire the flight and the appearance of our seagulls and other aquatic birds very few, in all probability, give a thought to their ways of life at any other time than that at which they are in evidence, or speculate on their habits at the nesting season, when they are not seen about the coasts in any large numbers except by those who make a special pilgrimage in search of them. Those who do undertake such pilgrimages, generally involving a more or less severe tossing in a small open boat, are rewarded by a spectacle of avine life in numbers altogether bewildering and in conditions which accentuate the struggle for existence very sharply. At the present time of year most of the fowl are massed together in certain places well known and recognised as the breeding-grounds of one or of several species. As a rule, these nurseries of the sea-fowl are insular, such as some of the islands of the Scilly group, the outer Farnes off the coast of Northumberland, some isles in Orkney and Shetland, the Bass Rock, Ailsa Craig, Lundy Island in the British Channel, and many more. A few are on the mainland. The vast avine population gathered into these comparatively small limits, and the land-grabbing and congestion which ensue, have to be seen to be appreciated rightly, but it may easily be believed, when one considers the number of the sea-fowl of various kinds on the coasts at times other than the breeding season, and the fact that at this moment their scattered legions are concentrated into comparatively few and strictly circumscribed spaces, that the stress is of necessity dire.

The general habit of the fowl is for each species to appropriate a spot, more often than not a whole island, adapted to its own proclivities, and to resent with vigorous hostility the attempt of any other kind to effect a lodgment on the appropriated soil. It is a tenure not unlike that which must have prevailed among mankind in its primitive social phases. On an island of flat stretches a colony of the lesser black-backed gull may be established; it is thus in the Scilly Isles, in the Farnes, and elsewhere. Beside them, on an island more rocky in its nature, you may find the cormorants sitting on their heaped up nests of seawrack; and on another, of very similar character, the lesser cormorant, the crested fellow, who is commonly called the shag, may be established to the exclusion of all other kinds. Very possibly the gulls will be less exclusive, for it often seems that the ground which suits them for their nesting upon its surface is of that nature which suits the puffins for boring into and laying within the holes. It is of the porous, easily worked quality of soil which is found in a thin layer over the rock on many of the lower islands round the coast, and usually carries a strong growth of sea-campion. In some places, as on Annette Island of the Scillies, the shearwaters live in similar holes, and apparently in quite amicable relations with the puffins; but the shearwaters are much more local, and not nearly so generally distributed at the nesting-time. The gannet, the solan goose, the splendid fisher which dives into the sea on its prey with a vertical plunge which sends up the foaming water like a whale spouting, is associated in popular estimation with the Bass Rock particularly, but has many other haunts, all rather of a like character, around the coast, such as Ailsa Craig, that West-coast counterpart of the Bass Rock on the East. There are other rocky cliffs which are tenanted solely by the guillemots, an absolute freehold which is secured by the sheer weight of numbers, for the birds sit so closely packed that when one arrives it plumps into the middle of those already assembled, communicating a joggling of position to every one of the birds gathered on that particular ledge or table of rock, and spreading to the outer edge, off which some other bird has ultimately to be jostled in order to make room for the one which has settled itself thus, with scant ceremony, in the crowded midst. Often in the jostling and change of place an egg will be dislodged from the terrace and dashed to pieces as it falls seawards. There are those who have written, and there are those who will tell you, that each of these crowded birds knows its own egg and returns to it guided by unerring instinct; but it is likely that those who write and those who say these things have never watched the coming and going of the guillemots in a crowded colony. Circumstances may alter cases, and where the congestion is not severe each parent may recognise its own egg and sit upon it with a jealous and particular care; but in the real stress of a crowd it is very obvious that such parental care of an individual egg is an impossibility.

The singular and fortunate disposition of animals to yield to another, even a smaller than themselves, if the latter be in real earnest to defend what it believes to be its rights, and the other has no particular interest in the matter, is seen very well exhibited where a colony of the black-headed gulls has established itself, and an intruder, in the shape of one of the lesser black-backed gulls for example, appears idly cruising in the neighbourhood. A favourite nursery of these pretty and graceful little gulls with the black heads, almost ternlike in the elegance of their shape and movements, and tern-like also in the raucous scold of their voices, is a fresh-water pond or lake, in the vicinity of the sea, grown over to a large extent with reeds and rushes. Among the reeds the black-headed gulls will have their nests, and if such an intruder appears as the black-backed gull they will arise and mob him, flying round and using the worst language that they know. It appears had in its effect on the bigger gull, which always yields to the clamour and departs beyond the circle which the smaller kind seem to look on as the limit of their domain. It is, indeed, with very good reason that these black-backed gulls are considered suspect, being worse stealers of eggs than even any of the corvine race, which has brought to a fine art the craft of egg-stealing. There is a story, with a moral, of the cormorants which now inhabit, at the nesting-time, that small and southern island of the Farnes, hardly more important than a mere rock, called the Megstone. The cormorants are there now, sitting on their nests or feeding their young, at the time of writing, but for the space of two years they entirely deserted that haunt, which had been the nursery of the family for very many generations. The reason, apparently quite adequate, for the desertion was that twice the sea combined its highest tide with the greatest force of the wind and swept the rock, which is well above all ordinary tides, so completely that the nests were carried away, and the cormorants accepted the gentle hint and for two years betook themselves, unwelcome and highly savoury guests, to the highest point on one of the neighbouring islands which was in the tenancy of black-backed gulls. It seems that, arriving as the cormorants did in a considerably body, the gulls had not the strength to repel them, but they kept their own nesting-places outside the centre occupied by the others, and whenever a chance offered, by one of these dark divers leaving its nest with an egg unguarded, the gulls would fall on the egg; and thus the conditions of life for the cormorants, evicted by the stress of weather from their immemorial home and persecuted by the inhospitable natives of the land of their adoption, became very cruel indeed. They have now decided to submit their fate again to the blind forces of sky and sea, returning to the Megstone rather than endure longer the intelligent persecution of the egg-stealing gulls.

A species which prolongs its life on the confines of the region that these black-backed gulls have made their own is the eider-duck; but the life of the ducks is fraught with anxiety, and if they leave their eggs uncovered for only a very short while the gulls are sure to have them. An exception would almost seem to be made, by those omnivorous thieves, in favour of the oyster-catcher, for this little bird may be seen going about in the creeping and self-effacing manner which it affects in the neighbourhood of its nest (or rather of its eggs, for the nest is a negligible quantity) in the very midst of all the gulls, and its eggs appear to be respected by them. Like as these dappled eggs are to the pebbles among which they are often laid, it is not to be thought that the similarity would defeat the vision of the quick-eyed gulls. There are many of the wading birds, besides the oyster-catcher, whose eggs are almost impossible to detect by the human eye which has had no training in the craft. Such are the eggs of the ringed plover, of the sandpiper, and again, passing to another genus, of the tern, which lay on the shingly fringes between sea and land. They are exclusive, too, but they admit cousins-German into fellowship of nursery, common tern and Arctic tern (the latter often more common than the former) nesting side by side and laying eggs hardly to be distinguished from each other, and neither at all easy to recognise from the almost identically coloured pebbles around them. One of the wading species, the redshank, you may find in great numbers in a locality such as the lands adjoining the lake of the black-headed gulls. As you walk, with perfectly innocent purpose, near their homes, they will come hovering, head to wind, about you, uttering a plaintive, piping protest, often accompanied, much in the same strain, by the green plover making complaint of you similarly; or they will perch on some outstanding post or rock for better convenience of scolding.

It is not necessary to refer to that one rocky islet in the North which is the sole British home, as we are told, of the bonxie, or great skua, nor to the fulmar petrel, restricted to St. Kilda amongst our islands, to show the extreme jealousy of the different kinds of sea-fowl in choosing and keeping their respective sites for the domestic dramas; and when the myriads are seen which throng rock, sky, and sea alike in the vicinity of these chosen spots, there is no longer cause to wonder that at the breeding-time the sea-birds are not as numerously present as usual about the coasts generally but rather that, nesting as they do in such legions on these selected sites, they do not appear even more multitudinous when they and their young ones disperse from them over the wide seas.—The Spectator.

The Story Teller.

A CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCE.

THE yogi used to sit at the gate of the chummery shared by Auchinleck and Little Taylor, and it got on the former's nerves in the unaccountable way things do get on a man's nerves when he is half-way through his second hot weather and the heat is beginning to tell on him. If you wish to live a moderately peaceful life in India, there are many things you should avoid doing; with regard to yogis, it is far from wise to allow yourself to feel irritated by them, it is foolish to show your annoyance, and suicidal to give yourself the pleasure of insulting the yogi. This is always supposing him to be the genuine article. He was in Auchinleck case. Of course Auchinleck was young, but after all, that is a very poor sort of excuse. There are certain circumstances in which, if a man once behaves like a fool, you may be perfectly sure he will do it again, and no amount of experience will rid him of the tendency. This was a certain circumstance, and Auchinleck played the fool quite superbly.

He belonged to type of British boy commonly called fresh. His complexion was fresh, he was always spruce and well-groomed, and he was very young, and rather green. The sort of youth who calls every native a "nigger," recognising no class distinction between a bearer and a dog-boy. Moreover, he was burdened with what he was pleased to call a sense of humour, and when one morning, he saw the yogi for the first time as he was driving to parade with Little Taylor, he pulled up to gaze curiously at the motionless figure squatting against the compound wall then slapped his knee with sudden mirth, voting it a "rummy show," and beseeching Little Taylor to look at the "weird little joker." The yogi, who by the way, was a perfect specimen of his kind, took absolutely no notice, but continued looking steadily ahead, not stolidly or sullenly, but rather as though he were quite alone. Auchinleck's amused curiosity seemed to have no effect on him, or else he had amazing self-control. The Hindu sais who sat shivering at the back of the tum-tum, was so old and decrepit that life could not possibly have held anything worth having in store for him, he was besides, hopelessly in debt to a fat and thriving bannia; yet he registered a mental vow to bring the yogi a peace-offering in the shape of a bowl of dhal and rice, and as many pice as he could muster, in order that the servant might not be punished with the sahib for the latter's folly. "Jove," continued Auchinleck," he must be a very holy sort of horror. Look at the dollops of paint on his face—caste marks you call 'em? Lord! He's simply plastered with white ashes, and his hair's unspeakable. What a funny brute," The sais writhed miserably, for, though he could not understand the actual words, the offensive tone of contempt amusement was unmistakable. Even Little Taylor grew uncomfortable. He was young too, and just out from Home, but he had learned more of India in nine months, than Auchinleck could have learned in a life-time, and both instinct and common sense told him that the other was using several different kinds of fool.

"Don't be an ass, Auchinleck," he said shortly, "After all black chaps have feelings just as we have, and these yogis are awkward fellows to meddle with." "Meddle with!" echoed Auchinleck," No fear of that. Why man, I would'nt touch the animal with a barge pole. Faugh." He tweaked gently at the reins, and the country-bred tossed her head, and started off down the Mall at a mild trot, the trap jogging behind her, for the sais' weight on the back seat was as nothing to that of the two sturdy subalterns. "Look here," said Little Taylor still more shortly; speech was never easy to him, least of all when he had anything particular to say. "If you will take my advice, you won't make fun of things till you know they are really funny. India is a rum place, and you may laugh the wrong side of your mouth.—Beastly unpleasant." But it is written no man may deliver his brother unless the brother be willing. Little Taylor had done his best. There are a few who will accept help in the shape of sound advice. Auchinleck, being one of the many, persistantly ignored Little Taylor's counsel to his own undoing. A really good joke remains funny for quite a long time, but even the best palls eventually. Auchinleck's yogi joke lasted all through the hot weather until the rains broke. At least he stolidly declared he was amused all that time. The yogi seemed to have got on a special mad kink in his brain, for he never neglected the little ceremony, each time he drove through the gate of pulling up his mare for a minute or two, to stare curiously at the yogi, and make more or less rude remarks. As time went on, Little Taylor suspected that he had ceased to find it funny, but he still clung tenaciously to his joke the only difference being that he began to heap insults on the motionless figure with a rather more savage ring in his voice, and his laugh was forced and harsh. Little Taylor besought him dryly once or twice not to be a fool, and his friends remonstrated with him good-humouredly, or violently, according to their several dispositions: Auchinleck was determined as the proverb of his own people has it, to gang his ain gait, as he told any one who cared to hear it, free of charge in remarkably choice language. The R.A.M.C. Captain told Auchinleck he was looking pale, that his nerves were strained to snapping point, and that he had better apply at once for leave to the hills. However, his unwilling patient put him forcibly outside the door, and swore gently at him for some little time, until even the invincible doctor was vanquished, and retired in a vile temper, leaving Auchinleck quite unmoved, to continue amusing himself in his own peculiar way. The first day the rains broke, he ordered the trap in the afternoon, and pulled up as usual outside his gate, in spite of the fall of the monsoon, which, compared to other rain, is as the Indian Ocean to an English Lake. The parched ground eagerly licked up the heavy drops, which spat and sizzled as they touched the steaming dust which sprang to meet them. The thunder rumbled in the distance, and cracked viciously overhead, and forked lightening flickered evilly through the trees, cutting ugly gashes in the leaden sky. The yogi was still sitting in his old corner with his hands resting on his knees, and his begging bowl on the ground by his side. A saffron loin-cloth, and a string of carved wooden beads were very poor protection against the drenching rain which had washed the plastered ashes off his body in brown patches. Some of the original keenness of the joke returned to Auchinleck, and he laughed with a real enjoyment of his enemy's discomfort, until the sais broke down and implored his master to go back. It was sheer waste of breath, for Auchinleck took absolutely no notice. He abused the yogi artistically in several languages, and wound up by asking him in his best Munshi Urdu why he chose to contaminate his, Auchinleck's, compound wall by leaning against it. He used an amazing number of adjectives over this simple question, and his voice was distinctly audible above the clatter of the thunder, and the hissing rush of the rain. Yet the yogi sat dignified and calm without moving a muscle, gazing through and beyond Auchinleck as though he meditated upon things unutterably distant. Auchinleck continued his drive, but he had no sooner got half-way down the Mall, than he turned and drove home again, whipping the mare into a canter in his haste. He reached the chummery gate barely seven minutes after he had left it, but the yogi had completely disappeared.

"Look, sahib," whimpered the sais, "the holy man has gone. We have not passed him—the road is straight and clear ahead. He could not have walked out of sight in so short a time. Lo, the sahib hath angered him! He is gone, and the luck will depart with him from the Huzoor's house! Arree bapree! The Heavens are raging, the gods be sore displeased!" "Rot!" said Auchinleck briefly; but he glanced round at the yogi's empty corner with the merest thought of nervousness in his eyes, wincing almost imperceptibly as the thunder boomed sullenly overhead. Once a man opens his heart to fear, he is never alone again. Auchinleck had turned the handle, as it were, preparatory to opening the door. He spent the rest of the day walking up and down the verandah, staring moodily at the torrents of rain, and smoking, or rather biting the mouthpiece of his pipe until it was useless and unrecognisible. By the time the evening had come, the door had fallen wide open, and fear was rioting madly in him, causing his hands to tremble, his eyes to rove over his shoulder, and his flesh to creep. The grey light of a sodden day faded to the blankness of night; but when the bearer came to let down the grass chicks, and ask if the Sahib desired a lamp, he was so savagely told to "get out," that he obeyed hastily, and went to tell the other servants of his master's unreasonable wish to stay alone in the dark.

"Arree, but that is bad news!" said the sais sagely, "Only this afternoon the Sahib spoke mad words to the yogi that sits at his gate. Without doubt, the holy man is angered at last, The Sahib is even now paying for his folly."

Back in the dim verandah, Auchinleck had thrown himself into a chair, and was looking out across the compound towards the gate, his chin resting on his clenched fists. The wild fury of the storm had settled down into a steady pour of rain that came down drearily, unceasingly. The trees hung their leaves and drank thirstily, the plants drooped and wilted under the overwhelming force of the flood, and the ground sucked up the welcome water until it could sink no more, but lay in ever-widening pools on the surface. Auchinleck's thoughts, which were centered on the events of the afternoon, suddenly became confused, and vague. An irrisistable desire to see the yogi surged through him and he knew instinctively that, were he to go to the gate, he would find him. He rose, and stood hesitatingly on the top step of the verandah, heedless of the heavy drops that chased each other down the thatched eaves and fell on his short crisp hair, spreading like dull stains as they soaked into his khaki—clad shoulders. His eyes were fixed unseeingly on the gate, the whole force of his being was concentrated in an uncontrollerable desire to go through it. For several minutes he stood there, swaying under the stress of his feelings, until a cold nose thrust into his hand, and a nervous wimper recalled him to himself. With a gasp of relief, he returned to his chair, and lifting the dog on to his knee, stroked and fondled it in a frenzy of gratitude. Now that the spell of the moment was broken, he realised that his desire to see the yogi had been an outside force. He was vividly conscious of the agent's savage disappointment at not being instantly obeyed; and fought with a sense of despair against the compelling influence which he felt gradually creeping over him again. He put the dog down gently, and started pacing up and down the verandah, battling with the longing he dreaded to satisfy. As he walked, he cast grim remarks to the dog which pattered uneasily at his heels, "You'd better go in, Ragsie," He said dryly. "This is no place for a half-bred Aberdeen who wishes to respect his master, for I'm going to give in soon, that's why I'm holding out so hard now. You had really better start the Rat-leaving-the-sinking-ship-act now, you know, something horrible is going to happen I've no doubt, and its a pity to sadden your young life so early in the proceedings. What do you say, Ragsie, what makes me think I'm going to hook it? I don't think so, of course not, but you never can tell. Jove, though," with a fierce laugh, "If I am going to kick the bucket, I'm damned if I do it alone, we'll bruise our toes together." He drew something from his pocket that glinted in the subdued light, and his finger curled suggestively round the trigger. The gleam of the steel was reflected in his eyes. He pulled himself together in a last effort to withstand the call with all the strength of will which he could muster. For a moment he wavered, then turned, with a sudden swerve, and stumbled down the steps. The dog followed him, whining a protest.

"Go back, Rags," thundered Auchinleck, and he started walking swiftly down the drive. Little Taylor was driving the doctor back to the chummery, ostensibly to show him a black—buck head he had recently bagged, in reality to ask his opinion upon Auchinleck.

The sky had rained itself clear for the time, and the mare invigorated by the keen freshness of the air, and the satisfying smell of damp earth, trotted smartly along the wet roads, jingling her bit, and shying coquettishly at the shadows. At the gate of the chummery, she shied violently, and clatter of the thunder, and the hissing rush of the rain. Yet stopped dead. "Its Auchinleck's pi-dog." Explained Little Taylor," Hi on, Ragsie. What are you mooing about here for? Get on with you. Why, Doctor, what's the matter?"

With a sharp exclamation, his companion climbed down. "Send the sais round to stables with the trap, and give me a hand here." He said curtly. Auchinleck was lying face-downwards in a crumpled up heap at the side of the road by the gate. The doctor turned him over very gently.

"Good Heavens, is he dead?" cried Little Taylor, who was very distressed. The doctor nodded, and pointed to the neat little blue-rimmed hole in the centre of Auchinleck's forehead. "By Jove, it looks just like a caste mark" said Little Taylor, with a hysterical giggle, for he was new to death. He met the other's grave eyes, and started. "The Yogi?" he stammered. The doctor nodded again, he knew the circumstances of the case "Exactly, the Yogi. "But look here Sir, I don't see—he must have shot himself, why he is clutching the pistol in his hand. Besides the Yogi is never here at this time of night." The doctor dropped his hand kindly on Little Taylor's shoulder, "It is self-evident, my dear chap, that this is not an ordinary case of suicide. India is an odd place, and strange and inexplicable things are continually happening. If we were to tell this story at the club, as it stands, with no more proof than we have, and nothing to guide our judgment, but instinctive knowledge the fellows would call us fools, and give us a hundred airy explanations—'suicide, result of heat and nerves—a sad but commonplace occurrence,' but we know it is not commonplace. Thank Heaven it isn't. What that poor chap must have gone through, before he shot himself, for he was not a weak character, is sickening to think of." "Then we keep the Yogi out of the story," said Little Taylor slowly. "Yes, if you are wise, you will not mention him. It would only puzzle people, and if they don't understand a thing, they get annoyed, and call it nonsense. It's human nature I suppose. However, we will call it a case of suicide, while temporarily insane—But you and I, Taylor, know better."

CRIPPLALL.

THE student was handsome, easy, and self-possessed, but appeared to be utterly ignorant of the simplest phase of the subject. Professor W. put question after question to him, without receiving one intelligent reply. Finally, the student said, naively: "I am very unfortunate, Professor; you never ask me anything I know." The professor said nothing, but gravely tore off a tiny piece of paper from a convenient pad. "Here, Mr. B.," he said, handing it to the student, "write all you know. Take plenty of time—there's no hurry."

THERE was recently presented to a newly married young woman in Baltimore such a unique domestic proposition that she felt called upon to seek expert from another woman, whom she knew to possess considerable experience in the cooking line.

"Mrs. Jones," said the first-mentioned young woman, as she breathlessly entered the apartment of the latter. "I'm sorry to trouble you, but I must have your advice."

"What is the trouble, my dear?"

"Why, I've just had a phone message from Harry, saying that he is going out this afternoon to shoot clay pigeons. Now he's bound to bring a lot home, and I haven't the remotest idea how to cook them. Won't you please tell me?"

The foregoing is on a par with the amusing faux pas committed by a Methodist minister who several years ago wrote to the editor of a San Luis Obispo journal condemning in severe terms "the cruelty of killing blue rocks by trap shooting" and deprecating the fact that "such heartless men could be found in that community."

BOXING IN ENGLAND.

Is professional boxing in England doomed? The attacks which have been made on this manly sport in the old country of late have given many the impression that it is. Starting with the proposed encounter between Bombardier Wells and Jack Johnson which, however, was not allowed to materialise owing to police intervention, the agitation spread first to Sheffield and then to Birmingham, where Owen Moran, of that town, and Jim Driscoll, of Wales, were scheduled to contest the best of 20 rounds early next month for the feather-weight championship of the world.

Everybody with the best interest of the sport at heart was glad to see the proposed Wells-Johnson affair stopped, for the reason that Wells, although he is possibly a world's champion in the making, was no match for the negro, and that he was simply going into it with the object of receiving the large sum of £2,000 for the loser's end of the purse; but when the Sheffield authorities stepped in and prevented matches of little or no importance, and the lead of the officials of the Cutlery town was followed by Birmingham, matters began to assume a very serious aspect.

It must be generally admitted that the Birmingham Chief Constable action over the Moran-Driscoll contest is quite the most serious threat that has been aimed against boxing as a sport for many a long year, but still the task of combating the assault is by no means an impossible one, provided only that the efforts of those who are doing their best for the good of the cause are not hampered by the well-meant but injudiciously enthusiastic screeds of those who are not quite sure whether the continuance of the sport or the success of their campaign against their rivals is dearer to their hearts.

It is true that the hearing of the summonses which have been issued against the principals concerned with the Driscoll-Moran match will be more or less of a test case in which the legality or otherwise of the sport will be tried, but even in the event of the Chief Constable of Birmingham proving successful in his action, it is hard to believe that it will even then put an end to the sport as some people would seem to imagine. The action is to be tried before the Birmingham stipendiary, and it is difficult to see how, remembering the numerous occasions on which the legality of the sport has been established, and the recent pronouncement of the Home Secretary, that gentleman can in any way read a contemplation of a breach of the peace into a friendly contest of skill between such a singularly well-matched pair as the Welsh and Midland representatives.

The case for the prosecution against the principals of the Moran-Driscoll contest is that it is a prize-fight. It is a fight for a very large sum of money they maintain, and that hard blows will be given in a determiniation to win, regardless of the consequences. The defendants on the other hand say that it cannot be a prize-fight because it is a fight of so many rounds and not a fight to a finish.

These are the lines on which the matter will be fought out, and it is going to be fought to a finish judging by the response that has been given to defence funds raised in several parts of the country. Lord Lonsdale, the President of the National Sporting Club, has thrown himself into the conflict heart and soul, and, like the good sportsman he is, he telegraphed to the London Sporting Life that he would take responsibility of all costs if the best counsel were employed.

If this contest is to be stopped because it is a prize-fight, it would be a bad day for England and her sport-loving sons, and it behoves everyone who has the interests of boxing at heart to do the utmost that lies in his power to counteract the influences now at work against this manly and healthful sport. It has already been decided in the London Courts, so far back as 1890, that boxing as then and now conducted was and is perfectly legal, and the fact that it is not only encouraged and countenanced by the Naval and Military authorities, the heads of Universities and Public Schools, members of the Stock Exchange, and last, but not least, by a large number of the clergy of all denominations, goes to prove that its prohibition would be little short of a national calamity.

One of the points of the prosecution in the Driscoll-Moran case is that it being a prize-fight the contestants will strive their utmost to pummel each other into a state of insensibility, and that they (the prosecutors) have to remember that if one of the men died a charge of manslaughter would follow. No doubt. But what are the odds against either of these men dying as a result of their encounter? Probably 50,000 to 1 would underestimate them.

As showing what few deaths occur from boxing contests it may be interesting to quote the reply of the Secretary for the Home Department to a question as to how many people were killed in boxing encounters, or whose death were due to injuries so received in the United Kingdom during the past five years.

The reply was as follows:—

"Deaths caused by prize-fights and boxing encounters are not separately classed in the Registrar-General's statistics, but are included with street-fights, etc., under the general heading 'Fights Wrestling, etc.' The total deaths in England and Wales thus grouped were:—

In 1905	...	...	... 11
In 1907	...	...	... 8
In 1908	...	...	... 10
In 1909	...	...	... 11

"Probably very few of these were deaths at prize-fights, as in London, during the five years covered by the figures, there was only one death in connection with a prize-fight.

"Exact figures for Ireland cannot be given, but I am informed that probably not more than one or two deaths have occurred in that country during the past five years which could be attributed to prize-fights or boxing-matches."

"WHAT'S the matter with your horse, cabby? Is he ill?" "No, sir, only 'e's unlucky. Every mornin' I tosses im whether 'e 'as a feed of oats or me a sossidge an' mashed—an' 'e 's lorst two morning's runnin'!"

A WISE Precaution.—The ardent Frenchman looked tenderly at the fair young mistress of his soul. "Je t'adore!" he murmured. "Maybe I'd better," she returned. "You can never tell who's listening in this house."

RETURNING from school a little girl proudly informed her mother that she had learned to "punchtate." "Well, dear," said her mother, "and how is it done?" "You see, mother," explained the child, "when you write 'Hark!' you put a hatpin after it, and when you ask a question, you put a button-hook."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

THE position regarding important "futures" in Calcutta has not been materially altered during the past week and there is no market on either the Trials or Cup, though one or two small wagers have been registered and there is a certain amount of mild speculation in doubles, but it cannot be said that there is anything to justify any horse being singled out as favourite for either event. Any quotations not supported by money are apt to create a false price, a thing that is undesirable in the last degree in a country where backers' one complaint is that they suffer from cramped odds. Known performers such as Mayfowl, Five Crown, Wave Bird, Soultline, Lumination are bound to be talked about, but until a genuine market has been established the publication of "nominal" prices does more harm than good. If asked to name those horses engaged in the two races which are under discussion, which are in our opinion doing best of the lot, we should unhesitatingly mention last year's winner and his stable companion Five Crown, and we like the appearance of these two horses better than anything else in the race. The stable make no secret of the fact that Five Crown is in their opinion the best horse they have in the string and that he is capable of beating Mayfowl any day of the week, but he has shown himself so unreliable on the flat, both in public and in private, that it is impossible for them to repose any confidence in him. If he has things all his own way as he did more or less when he won the big race (the Western India Stakes) in Poona the other day he may condescend to catch hold of his bit and gallop; if there is any possibility of a fight and he is hotly pressed he hoists the white flag at once. In private it is the same thing and he is reported to have times and again dropped his bit and refused to try when the pace was put on in earnest. Over hurdles his great speed serves him and he is rarely asked to go at his top, therefore he is marked down an honest horse, but even here he would probably decline to do his best if he were ever asked to take on a hard slogging battle a long way from home. Mayfowl and he will go out on their merits, as all Mr. Apear's horses do, and if, in the performance of his office of pace-maker, the dark brown hurdler manages to give the field the slip and win, it will not surprise his connections. Mayfowl has got to have a strong-run race and his owner will naturally see that he gets it. As to the other possible companions of the pair Lawn Sand we think may be for the present written off. He looked mean and poor when he arrived and though he is said to have picked up since he has been in Calcutta, his appearance is the reverse of reassuring, and we should think it is almost certain that he will not be asked to race till the back-end. Vavasor has had several short-distance gallops and he is not lame, but once or twice we have thought that he decidedly favoured the old leg, and personally we do not believe that he will stand. They say that the suspensory ligament is alright and that the long work Watson gave him in harness in Bangalore in the summer has done the trick and that everything has calloused, but we will believe that he is a sound enough horse to see this race out when he is first past the post. We do not consider, taking things all round, that the opposition is very formidable this year, not because there are not better horses in the race than there were last year, because there are, but because condition is the one thing that they stand or fall by here more than in any other part of the world. Mayfowl won last year because he was the fittest and soundest horse in the race and because he is a real genuine stayer. Given that there is a horse in this year's race as good a stayer and as forward there is no reason why we should magnify Mr. Apear's honest gelding into a prodigy and believe him invincible. We do not believe that if Wave Bird were as well as when he beat Papavero and Willaura in England, Mayfowl could reasonably be expected to defeat him; but climatic conditions have such a tremendous say in the matter that this must be the first and foremost consideration. Mayfowl has thriven in India from the very day that he landed, he has never had a day's sickness, he is a hardy light-fleshed horse that needs very little work to keep him well, and he has given optical and practical proof that the country suits him. Opposed to him this year he has horses with excellent form behind them but no one can quite say how far behind them it is! Wave Bird is not in shape and far two gross. Prince Rupert ditto and also a doubtful stayer; Last Call, a horse of high quality but "doubtful"—he has also shown no signs of coming back to anything like form and he has had plenty of time to do so; Cattaro, a horse that it would be impossible to trust with a sixpence in case he stole it; Aborigine, a horse with one good long-distance performance behind him in Australia over 1½ mile, but who has not been asked to go any farther; Black Buck, a possible danger if he is a better horse than he was last year; and that about summarises the strength of the opposition. We do not say that there is not a better horse in this race than Mayfowl, because we consider that there are two or three who have claims to be considered above his class, but present conditions are the things with which we have to deal, and present conditions display to us a horse that we know is at his best and probably as good, or better, than he was last year. Mayfowl is no paladin, and it would not take a horse of very great class to beat him, but those that he is likely to meet will not in our private opinion be as forward as he is and a great number of them not half as sound.

BY ROYAL APPOINTMENT TO HIS MAJESTY KING GEORGE V.

Sole Proprietors:—MACKIE & CO., DISTILLERS, LD.,

ESTABLISHED 1742.

Since our last appearance there have been a number of arrivals—Greenhalgh with Mr. G. K.'s Aborigine, Coat of Arms, Socialist and Devereux; Harper with Mr. Torrington's Black Buck, Santoinette, Ngakapa and Waioki; Dignum with Mr. B. P. Roy Chowdhury's Resemblance, Vitange, Ruling Passion and Jemima; Byramjee with Mr. R. R. S.'s and Langton, Leo Grand, Apologue, Paul Pry, Hilarity, Ask Mama, Encourage and Mauveron. Neither Dumella nor Aquatic have so far come on to Calcutta and there are rumours that all is not well with them.

Bench arrived on Tuesday with H. H. the Kuar Sahib of Patiala's horses, also two of Major F. C. Stratton's. The list is as follows:—Cattaro, Capture, Hamara, Bull's Run, Chestnut Park, Spring Daisy (14-2), Malmsey and Major Stratton's Parkhill and Lady Douglas. There was a slight accident to one of the boxes but no damage was done, though it was at first reported that some of the horses were somewhat injured. We are glad to know that it is not so.

Pearson, the trainer, has arrived from Lucknow with five horses.

Amongst Greenhalgh's horses Aborigine has attracted most attention, but he is not looking the best of the lot, as the palm for condition must be awarded to Coat of Arms. Aborigine is a nice quality horse and he looks well in his coat, but he does not carry as much muscle over his back and quarters as we should like to see and he is not as good behind the saddle as he is in front of it, like so many other Colonials. They said of him after Poona that he is far more likely to distinguish himself in the one-mile Trials than in the Viceroy's Cup, as he showed a very considerable dash of pace and he ran third behind Five Crown (8st. 11lb.), Hilarity (8st. 13lb.), his own weight 9st., in the 1¼ mile Western India Stakes, when he was said to be not fit, and he was unplaced in the 1½ mile Aga Khan's Cup which was won by Hilarity (7st. 10lb.), from Black Douglas (7st. 10lb.), and Coat of Arms (7st. 13lb), Aborigine's weight 9st. They say that even allowing that he was not cherry ripe when he ran in these races in the autumn he did not give the critics the impression that he would get over a distance of ground. The Viceroy's Cup is a quarter of a mile farther than the Caulfield Cup (1½ mile), in which Aborigine dead-heated with Blue Book, Pendil third. He is a nice mover and a good doer, but it is yet to be seen whether he is coming back to his Australian form of 1909. Coat of Arms is looking in excellent order and is far less angular than he was when he was here last season. If Calcutta were a left-handed course instead of a right-handed one this horse would win a lot of races. They have never managed to cure him of his boring propensities and he can never be depended upon to go straight. He will condescend sometimes to run straight and he has his likes and dislikes in jockeys! Devereux looks better than we have seen him do. Socialist is a bay gelding of no particular attractions.

Harper's horses have been in Lucknow for about three weeks since leaving Poona. Black Buck had a bad time on the voyage up to Bombay from Colombo and was off colour for some time, and he is not looking his brightest even yet. Santoinette looks a little dry in her coat. All these horses are for sale with their engagements and "Mr. Torrington" is easy as to whether he parts with them before or after the Calcutta Meetings. Black Buck will be entered in the Viceroy's Cup and we understand that Firth, who rode the horse when he ran second last year, has been retained to ride him this year.

Dignum's horses also had a somewhat trying journey to Calcutta and have not yet got over it. Vitange looks the brightest of the lot but Resemblance looks a bit dry in her coat. Ruling Passion looks well and Jemima, the new one, is by Jeddah out of Victoria May. Thoburn rides for the stable. We have not had much opportunity of seeing Byramjee's horses, as owing to the inclement weather early in the week seeing anything at all has been somewhat difficult. Some of them were out on Monday, including Langton, Apologue, Helarity, Leo Grand, etc. The last named is a chestnut pony that won the New Plate at Poona, beating Borgie and Ngakapa, and ran up in the All-Pony Plate to Refresher, whom he met at level weights, but was easily defeated. He has a 14-1¼ certificate and looks a good sort. Dumella, who is a fair horse on his English form, has not come to Calcutta. He is a four-year-old chestnut colt by Persimmon out of Princess Mary and won twice last season as a three-year-old, the one-mile Richmond Plate at Hurst Park, beating Salamanca, Wood Nymph, Hackler's Glow and Abattis, and he dead-heated with Atropia in the one-mile Autumn Handicap at Birmingham. He also ran third in the Great Foal Stakes at Newmarket (1¼ mile) to Thalia and Yellow Slave, to the latter of whom he was giving 3lb., Cardinal Beaufort, who was fourth, being also in receipt of 3lb. from him. He also ran fourth in the Ascot Biennial (1 mile) to William Rex, Salamanca and Bendy Tree, Glacier, Luster Ash and Miss Desmond being behind him. It will be seen therefore that he has met some fair horses, and the race against Yellow Slave and Cardinal Beaufort makes him out useful. He is said to be somewhat fractious to work.

W. Mumford, the well-known trainer, is ill with fever supposed to have been contracted in Lucknow. Mumford was feeling poorly when he arrived here and coming out on the course to see his horses work did not improve matters. He is now in hospital and we hope he will soon be himself again.

Lucullus, who is trained in Thomas' stable, picked up a nail at exercise on the Calcutta training track the other morning and has had to be thrown out of work.

The entries for the Calcutta First Extra Meeting will be found at a later page. They are not so big as it was expected that they would be, but with one exception, the Zeerut Plate, they may be said to be about up to the average. In the Pony Hurdle Race there are only four, and if this had been a handicap it might, under General Condition 8, have been declared void. That Condition provides that if in pony handicaps there are less than eight entered in separate interests the race may be declared void. In the Beginners' Plate there are sixteen entered, mostly new ones; in the Criterion Plate there are nineteen, and again a number of new horses; in the Lilliputian Plate for small ponies there are only eight; and in the Pony Plate for 14-2's there are ten; the Club Plate (1 mile) for horses has fourteen.

The Tollygunge Club Gymkhana last Saturday was run in fine weather and served as a very pleasant opportunity for afternoon tea with the mildest form of racing possible thrown in as an adjunct. It is impossible to take these meetings seriously until they are put upon a somewhat more satisfactory basis than they are at present. As things are now there is virtually no control, and any decision, however fantastical and opposed to racing law and custom, is possible. In such circumstances it would surely be better to abolish betting at these meetings in toto and to see whether the love of sport pure and simple will not be sufficient to keep them going. It is obviously desirable that where there is betting, and very heavy betting at that, there should be some rules to control it and matters in general. At present the only "rule" is that "the Stewards' decision shall be final," and, however erroneous may be the conclusion to which that body may come, there is no appeal. Under such conditions it is, as we say, impossible to treat these meetings as serious racing functions, and we think it is a pity that they aspire to be anything but contests for the honour and glory only.

On Saturday last the favourites won all along the line at odds on excepting in the steeplechase in which Suffragette fell at the fourth fence. She was jumping badly all the way and hitting the stiff rail and hedge badly came down in a heap "Mr. Bryan" was somewhat badly shaken.

THE first two ties of the Delhi Durbar Polo Tournament have resulted somewhat unexpectedly, as the 13th Hussars on Monday last defeated the redoubtable Golcondas by 6 to 4 and on Tuesday the unbeaten 10th Hussars, victors in the five last Inter-Regimentals, as well as winners of the last All-India Championship, were signally defeated by the K. D. G.'s by 8 to 4. In the last Inter-Regimental the 10th beat the K. D. G.'s by 7 to 3 and this signal reversal of the spring form is therefore all the more remarkable. The teams were virtually the same, the 10th team being identical and the only alteration in the K. D. G.'s was that instead of Mr. Hawkins at No. 1 they played Captain Rasbotham, who played for the regiment in that position when they won the Lucknow Spring Tournament, defeating the 2nd Rifle Brigade in the final by 7 to 1. The Delhi result was not entirely unexpected, as the K. D. G.'s were known to have come on a good deal and the 10th were by no means confident of repeating their Meerut success.

King's Dragoon Guards.—Captain D. Rasbotham, 1 ; Mr. A. E. Wienholt, 2 ; Captain L. Cheap, 3 ; Major H. C. Wickham, back.

17th Lancers.—Captain R. W. Bruce, 1 ; Captain T. P. Melvill, 2 ; Mr. H. Turner, 3 ; Captain V. N. Lockett, back.

13th Hussars.—Mr. T. E. Lawson Smith 1 ; Mr. W. C. A. Vanneck, 2 ; Major J. J. Richardson, 3 ; Mr. J. H. Hind, back.

17th Cavalry.—Mr. T. W. Kirkwood, 1 ; Captain D. D. Wilson, 2 ; Captain R. W. Henderson, 3 ; Mr. E. G. Atkinson, back.

H. H. Maharaja of Bhopal's team.—Jemadar Gulam Ahmed, 1 ; Captain Abdul Wahed, 2 ; Imtiaz Ali Khan, 3 ; Captain J. F. Todd (39th C. I. H.), back.

H. H. Maharaja of Kishengarh's team.—Rattan Singh, 1 ; H. H. the Maharaja, 2 ; Thakur Bunni Singh, 3 ; Ris. Moti Lal, back.

Golconda.—Mr. K. Green, 1 ; Captain Shah Mirza Beg, 2 ; Captain Hamid Yar Jung, 3 ; Captain Kadir Beg, back.

H. H. Maharaja of Palanpur's team.—Deare Singh, 1 ; Nawabzada Talej Mahommed Khan, 2 ; Bhainun Singh, 3 ; Captain A. J. L. Astley (14th Hussars), back.

H. E. Governor-General's Staff.—Captain A. F. Hartley (11th Lancers), 1 ; Lieutenant-Colonel F. A. Maxwell, V.C. (18th Lancers), 2 ; Mr. J. J. Astor (1st Life Guards), 3 ; Captain V. A. Keighley (18th Lancers), back.

Imperial Cadet Corps.—Nawab of Saranur, Nawab of Jaora, Maharaj Akel Singh and H. H. Rajah of Rutlam.

The "Scouts".—Mr. W. T. Miles 1 ; Captain Stewart 2 ; Captain F. W. Barrett 3 ; Colonel Chanda Singh, back.

The draw for the Tournament is as follows :—

The Golconda team play the 13th Hussars on the 27th November.

The 10th Hussars play the King's Dragoon Guards on the 28th November.

The Bhopal team play the 17th Cavalry on the 29th November.

The Imperial Cadet Corps play the 9th Hodson's Horse on the 30th November.

The 17th Lancers play the Scouts on the 1st December.

The Inniskillings play the Palanpur team on the 2nd December.

The Kishengarh team and the Governor-General's Staff have drawn byes.

Second Round.—The winners of the first four teams meet on the 4th December, of the second four on the 5th and of the third four on the 6th.

The two teams who have drawn byes play on the 7th December.

The semi-finals will be played on the 9th and the finals on the 11th December.

DURING a practice polo match at Delhi on Saturday last, playing against the 10th Hussars, Captain Bruce, 17th Lancers, received a severe injury from a blow in the right eye. His place will be taken by Mr. Parbury.

AS will be seen from our Special Telegram the Manchester November Handicap, the last of the important flat races of the English season, was won by Ultimus, Mr. Gorham's four-year-old hurdler by William the Third out of Merry Miser. Last month Ultimus won the two-mile Stayers' Handicap at Gatwick by six lengths in a common canter, beating Mr. H. North's Prairie Flower and Captain Homfray's gelding by Florizel II out of Chimera. Prior to that he had been out four times, but had not won, though he ran into a place on three occasions. He was second in February in the two-mile Brook Hurdle Race at Lingfield to Temnos, from whom he was getting 1st. 5lb.; he ran third in the Copthorne Hurdle Race, 2 miles, at Gatwick, to Washoe and Bachelor's Charm, and also third in the Dunstall Park Hurdle Race, 2 miles, at Wolverhampton to Wilkinstown and Portland Bay. After this came his success on the flat at Gatwick. Last season as a three-year-old he ran into a place once on the flat and also won once. He was second to a good colt like Ulster King in the Hastings Plate, 1¼ miles, at Newmarket, Game Hen running third, and his win was the Eaton Maiden Plate, 6 furlongs, at Chester, in which he beat Colline by a neck, Shebeen being third.

THE date of the Tollygunge Horse Show has been changed from 2nd January to 4th January. This was necessary, as the Review on 2nd January, commencing at 11 A.M., and finishing at 1 P.M., would have prevented many intending exhibitors from attending the Show till the afternoon too late to compete in many classes. As now arranged there is nothing to clash with the Horse Show, and though the 4th January is not actually a public holiday it no doubt will be considered one just as every day will be during Their Majesties' visit to Calcutta. It is considered very probable that Their Majesties will honour the Show with their presence in the afternoon, and this combined with the prospect of large entries should make this year's Horse Show a greater success than ever.

IN the House of Commons early this month the question of the number of deaths in prize-fights was raised. Replying to the questioner—the Rev. C. Silvester Horne—the Home Secretary said :—

"Deaths caused by prize-fights and boxing encounters are not separately classed in the Registrar-General's statistics, but are included with street-fights, etc., under the general heading, "Fights, wrestling, etc." The total deaths in England and Wales thus grouped were: 1905, eleven ; 1906, nine ; 1907, eight ; 1908, ten ; and 1909, eleven. Probably very few of these were deaths at prize-fights, as in London, during the five years covered by the figures, there was only one death in connection with a prize-fight. Exact figures for Ireland cannot be given, but I am informed that probably not more than one or two deaths have occurred in that country during the past five years which could be attributed to prize-fights or boxing matches."

WRITING to the Pall Mall Gazette from the Turf Club, Piccadilly, Sir George Chetwynd refers to the position of boxing as follows :—

"According to the statement made by the Home Secretary in the House of Commons last week, I should say that, as the law stands at the present time, boxing is decidedly illegal. It would be very easy to alter the law as follows :—

"All boxing contests must be limited to a certain number of rounds, twenty to be the maximum. The gloves used must not be less than 5oz. All competitors for a prize must be examined by a doctor before they enter the ring, and passed fit and sound. This need not apply to exhibition sparring. Notice must be given to the police when boxing contests are about to take place, and they shall have power at all times to enter the buildings, either before or when the men are in the ring.

"In the Sportsman newspaper a few weeks ago, when the Johnson-Wells contest was so freely discussed and written about, the Rules on Boxing of the National Sporting Club were published and, in commenting on them, the amazing statement was made that the knock-out blow was not considered! Now, I have seen hundreds of boxing matches, and, given that both men are trying, I have never seen one in which each of the combatants has not done his best to disable his adversary, and above all to bring off the knock-out blow which proclaims him the winner should the receiver of it be unable to rise within the allotted time of ten seconds.

"Well, what of that? I trust those Englishmen that would do away with all sports that have an element of danger about them are very considerably in the minority. Comparatively very few fatal accidents have occurred in boxing. A well-trained man does not feel the blows given with a glove to anything like the extent that an indifferently-trained man would do, and the referee always has the power to interfere and prevent a man from being unduly punished, by stopping the contest.

"My views, therefore, are these :—

"Let boxing continue, as it is carried on at present by the National Sporting Club and other well-conducted halls, and let those interested in boxing petition the Home Secretary to alter the law on boxing as it stands at present to one something like the suggestion I have made in the beginning of the letter.

"If things are to continue as they are at present, it appears to me that the fate of boxing is sealed."

THE Durbar Hockey Tournament opened with two games on the 28th instant. In the first the 20th Punjabis (5th Division) quite outclassed the 12th Pioneers (6th Division), beating them in an uninteresting game by 6 goals to nil. The 20th will now meet the 48th Pioneers who represent the 8th Division. The second game was between the 47th Sikhs (3rd Division) and the 93rd Burma Infantry (Burma Division). This was a well contested game but the 93rd forwards were smarter than their opponents and the Burma Division eventually won by 3 goals to one. They will now play the 130th K.G.O. Baluchis (4th Division).

AUSTRALASIA will be represented in the Lawn Tennis contest for the Davis Cup by Messrs. Brooke, Lycett Heath and Dunlop.

THE M.C.C. opened their match against New South Wales at Sydney on the 24th instant. The weather was wet and muggy and no play was possible before lunch. Having won the toss the M.C.C. batted first and when play closed for the day had scored 151 for four wickets. Rain stopped the game on the 25th but on Monday they resumed in fine weather and the M.C.C. carried their score to 238 before they were all dismissed. Gunn, who made 50, was hit in the hand and as it was subsequently discovered that the metacarpal bone was broken he has been forbidden to play for a fortnight. New South Wales made 198 for eight wickets on Monday, Gregory scoring 66 and Minnett 52 not out. Continuous rain prevented the resumption of the match on Tuesday and it was declared a drawn game. Warner though progressing favourably will be absent from the first test match but will probably play in the second.

IT has been perfectly plain to followers of athletics for some time that, whilst other nations are making great improvement, England virtually stands still. The writer's experience of Canadian, South African and American athletics, coupled with his observations at Home, induced him to think that the main explanation lies in the want of proper coaches to instruct our athletes. Unfortunately there are no rich clubs in England, which can afford to engage a highly salaried athletic coach, so he conceived the idea of enrolling experienced old amateurs under the title of the "Athletes Advisory Club." The scheme has already been referred to and readers will be interested to know that the club is now an accomplished fact. The inaugural meeting in London was a great success, upwards of forty keen enthusiasts supporting the instigator of the idea. The chair was taken by P. F. Fisher, Honorary Secretary of the Amateur Athletic Association, and among those present were the Rev. de Courcy Laffan, Honorary Secretary of the British Olympic Council, whilst at least a dozen ex-champions were among the forty or fifty present. Enthusiasm was the key note, and on all sides the scheme received support. It seemed to be the opinion that the material in England is all right, but that it wants developing. We shall now see what progress can be made with the assistance of experienced amateur coaches and high hopes are entertained that English athletes will soon make a better showing in the more scientific branches—jumping, weight-throwing, hurdling, etc., than they do at present. Of course the time between now and the next Olympia is rather short, and a great deal may not be accomplished by then, but plenty of spade work ought eventually to lead to the discovery and development of some real champions.

Some of the discussions at the meeting were very interesting, particularly those touching on the scientific side of athletes. The Rev. de C. Laffan said he had been much impressed with the study French authorities are giving the matter.

One of their methods is to make use of photography to reveal faults in various branches of athletics, high jumping for example. These are then pointed out and efforts made to correct. Dr. Abrahams was another speaker, who testified to the good which might arise from the use of the camera. He also made the suggestion that if famous athletes were medically examined, it might be possible to find certain characteristics which would explain their ability. Granted this, then other athletes should be examined for corresponding characteristics, and when they were found, induced to take to the particular sport they appeared suited to. Many other speakers offered excellent suggestions and at last it seems as though England is waking up athletically.

The Aga Khan Hockey Tournament was brought to a conclusion at Poona on the 24th instant, when the Dorset Regiment beat the Loyal North Lancs by 3 goals to nil. These teams met in the final on the 22nd instant when the game ended in a draw of one all, the replay bringing victory to the Dorsets as stated above.

The Bengal Presidency Athletic Association held their annual general meeting on the 22nd instant, the President, Mr. A. A. Apcar, taking the chair. The accounts for the last sports meeting, showing a credit balance of Rs. 868. 4 as. 9 p., were passed and it was decided to hold the sports on the 17th February next. The appointment of new members to the general committee was the next item of business and a number of new names were added in place of absentees. Mr. J. Rawson was appointed a judge in place of Mr. Arden Wood, who is away from Calcutta, and the name Mr. H. M. Sherman was added to the executive committee vice Mr. C. G. Arthur. Mr. W. C. Burke was appointed an extra handicapper. Mr. J. F. Snaith will hold the watch in place of Mr. P. N. Denton, while Mr. J. H. Hechle takes the place of Mr. C. G. Arthur as a caller over. The programme was then dealt with and the tug-of-war open to the British army was discussed. This competition for a handsome shield presented by Mr. A. A. Apcar was added to the sports programme in 1903 and, with the exception of the year 1909, has always drawn poor entries. In its first year there were but three: in 1904 only two. In 1905 two again, the brawny Wiltshires winning easily. They were the only entry the following year and in 1907 they again took the shield, beating the 5th Fusiliers, their sole opponents. In 1909 there was a welcome change, no fewer than eight teams taking part. The 8th Mountain Battery came out on top, but their weight apparently frightened away all subsequent opposition, for they remained unchallenged in 1910 and 1911. Last February the competition was divided into two sections—over and under a given weight,—but still failed to attract anyone. It is now thought that teams will not enter on account of the short pull, and in place of the usual 12-foot pull it has been decided to make it a pull all over the line this year and there is to be no weight limit. It has also been arranged to have a tug-of-war event open to the native army and police. There was some discussion as to whether to include the bicycle race again: as we all know cycle racing is a dead-letter in Calcutta now, but the committee hope for a better display than the miserable effort of the 1911 meeting, and it was decided to retain this item. Two gymnastic events were also added to the programme—exercises on the horizontal and parallel bars, open to all. These scarcely come within the list of recognised athletic sports events, but at any rate they are spectacular and will doubtless be interesting to those present on the day.

The meeting terminated with a vote of thanks to the chair.

Colonel R. F. Meysey-Thompson, writing in the Salmon and Trout Magazine says that eels are as destructive to salmon and trout as lampreys. "Eels can cause the death of a salmon of considerable weight by the use of strategy. One will obtain the grip between the dorsal fin and the tail, and then hold on like a bulldog, whilst the unfortunate victim in vain throws itself backwards and forwards endeavouring to shake off its captor, until at length its strength is exhausted, and the eel proceeds to make a meal at leisure. Worse crimes than these are laid to their charge in New Zealand," continues Colonel Meysey-Thompson, and relates an incident concerning an out-station owned by a relative of his, where a great number of bathing fatalities had taken place at a certain spot. "The current ran here with such strength that a powerful swimmer could only just stem it, and it was a favourite pastime to have a tussle with the stream; but, time after time, the bather would begin to shriek and splash on the surface, would disappear before help could reach him, and when his body had been found, it had invariably been eaten by eels. The cause of the fatality remained unknown for a long time, but at last it was discovered that, whilst the swimmer was almost stationary in the rapid stream, a huge eel would seize him by the foot or leg and drag him down beneath the surface. Eels attain an immense size in those waters, 20lb. to 30lb. being no uncommon weight."

A deputation from the Missionary Societies concerned with Nyasaland, Central Africa, and elsewhere waited on Mr. Harcourt last Thursday and urged upon him that sleeping sickness was so serious that it was impossible to await the publication of the Commission's report before combatting the disease. The havoc would be too great and also a severe check would be administered to commercial, agricultural, and missionary work. The Deputation must ask what immediate steps the Government were taking. The deputation further said that they viewed with alarm the restrictions of the destruction of big game, which they said must be removed or Government would lay itself open to the charge that while they were safeguarding the conservation of game they were opposed to the reservation of human lives.

Replying to the deputation Mr. Harcourt emphasised the fact that the relation of big game to the tsetse fly was most complex. If human beings were endangered science must give way in the interests of humanity. He assured the deputation that he would not hesitate to act immediately on any definite proof being furnished.

Sir Henry Seton-Karr, who has just returned from Portuguese East Africa, gives his impressions of the country. He says: "I first went through Rhodesia, and, in company with a Dutch hunter, killed a hippopotamus on the Zambesi River above the Victoria Falls. The hippos there have been getting dangerous recently, and attack canoes. They have been shot at a good deal, and the cows are probably afraid of losing their young. A little while ago, two young married couples in a canoe were upset by a hippopotamus. The husband in the case of one couple and the wife in the other were drowned, and their bodies, with the canoe, were carried over the Victoria Falls. North-west Rhodesia is a very fine agricultural and stock-rearing country. The grass, which grows six feet high, had not yet been burned off, but I had ten days' excellent sport, shooting antelope, zebra, roan and sable eland, hartebeest, and wildebeest. Then I went on to Mozambique, in Portuguese East Africa. With a white companion and 70 carriers, after two months' travelling, reach country where the natives have seen few white men. The land was very productive, and I saw oranges, cocoa-palm, mango, wild coffee, tobacco, wild rubber, and manioc, which is practically a pure and very nutritious arrowroot. It is hardly a colonising country for white men, but there should be trading possibilities in this region. Game is plentiful, and there is evidence of much mineral wealth, including gold, alluvial tin, and copper."

One of the most instructive reports of the current season was made by the Directors of the Standard Life Assurance Company of Edinburgh says the Saturday Review. This Company ends its financial year on 15th November, but accounts are not presented until several months later, and in cases where a quinquennial investigation has taken place the shareholders and policyholders are kept in suspense until the following April or May. For this reason the latest report still possesses the charm of freshness, although less than a month hence the Company will have completed another year's work. At the moment, indeed, the Standard Life makes a most interesting subject for study. Established in 1825, it remained prosperous for a long number of years, and for several quinquenniums in succession reversionary bonuses were declared at the rate of 30s. per cent. per annum. In 1880 the available surplus amounted to £514,420 and £389,744 was distributed among the policyholders; in 1885 the respective amounts were £609,980 and £485,091 and in 1890 they were £673,661 and £558,882. Then there was a change for the worse. In 1895 the surplus only amounted to £537,784, and £464,339 was divided among the policyholders, who had to be content with bonuses at the rate of £1 per cent. per annum. On the next occasion, however, a surplus of £691,422 was announced, and the £642,933 apportioned to policies sufficed to allow of a distribution at a somewhat higher rate—namely 25s. per cent.

More stringent valuation methods were then seen to be necessary. The average rate of interest earned on the funds had decreased by several shillings per cent., and reliance was no longer placed on the English No. 1 mortality table employed in the actuarial calculations. At the investigation made in 1905 drastic reforms were introduced. The Om table was substituted for the English, the annuities were actually valued by the British Oa (1893) tables, and future interest was assumed at a lower rate. As a result of these various changes the surplus almost disappeared, and the only bonuses received by policyholders were those which has been paid during the five years. Shareholders and policyholders were alike called upon to make a temporary sacrifice, but so inherently strong was the position of the Company that the Directors did not hesitate to declare an interim bonus of £1 per cent. per annum.

The accounts recently presented prove how justifiable was their optimism. During the five years 1905-10 the Standard Life made an almost sensational recovery. Although the whole of the life assurance and life annuity business was valued on a 3 per cent. basis—3 and 3½ per cent. rates were employed on the previous occasion—the investigation resulted in the disclosure of by far the largest surplus in the history of the enterprise—namely £878,956, while the actual profit made by the Company during the quinquennium approximated to a million pounds. After carrying forward a sum of £43,464, the fund for division was £956,926. Of this the policyholders received £834,233, including £61,433 paid them as intermediate bonus.

An equal bonus at the rate of 30s. per cent. per annum is not unsatisfactory, although it must be admitted to compare unfavourably with the higher bonuses paid by certain offices which have no shareholders to satisfy and are in a position to operate their business at a minimum of cost. In reality it is an excellent bonus. Owing to the Standard Life raising the bulk of its premium income in India, Canada, and other parts abroad, its expenses are necessarily increased to a very considerable extent. It is, in fact, an international life office, and cannot fairly be compared with offices which obtain the whole of their business at home. While policyholders lose through this extra expenditure, they gain in another way. On the millions held by the Company as a life assurance and annuity fund a very high rate of interest is earned, and only a comparatively small sum is paid for income-tax. Last year interest on the whole of the funds yielded £535,635 and the net rate earned was £4 5s. 8d. per cent. But few life offices to-day secure such a fine average return, and as the Standard's valuations are now made with 3 per cent. interest throughout, the next surplus declared ought to prove even greater than the present one, and possibly admit of an increased distribution to the holders of participating policies.

Jesse and Warren Buffum, two students of Harvard, are engaged (according to the Telegraph) in walking from Boston to San Francisco, but great issues depend upon the walk. The two brothers were selected by the Physical Director of Harvard as being of almost equal physique. It was decided that one should be trained on a meat and one on a vegetarian diet, and that each should adhere to his particular form of diet during the walk. No alcohol is allowed. The third stage of the tramp is over, the pedestrians have reached Denver, and America is considerably excited by the discovery that Warren, the vegetarian, is in much better condition than his brother. Meat-eaters believe Jesse will outlast his brother, but there seems as yet no parent but wishing to this thought. Warren declares he longs for meat at the end of a long tramp, and is heartily sick of vegetables, but this is possibly because he is only a pro tem. vegetarian. The brothers take a double-room wherever they stay, but they make a point of sleeping on the roof of the hotel, in woollen bags and waterproof coverings. They have thus slept, or at least passed, through several blizzards. The doctrines they are testing are not mere fads, nor is it easy to see how a more satisfactory test will ever be arranged. We await news from San Francisco, and it looks as if Warren will win.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 10th November 1911.

The taxi-drivers of London are on strike, for which relief much thanks. Honestly this strike—perfectly wanton though it is and an undoubted outrage on commercial morality—has been welcome at any rate to those of us who have little or no use for taxi-cabs and who are fixed in the opinion that the taxi-driver is absolutely the most insolent ruffian we have to contend with in these uncomfortable times. This indolent school-board product lolls in his cab, smoking, expectorating, and fouling the atmosphere with his language; beyond pulling a couple of levers and turning the steering-wheel he sits, practically inert, for hours and accumulates adipose tissue at an astonishing rate, and grows more revolting with every pound he puts on; frequently he is a drunken beast and always, when he is on the move, his ignorance and recklessness make him the greatest terror of our streets. As a cyclist and a pedestrian I owe him many a grude; as a law-abiding citizen I regard him generally with distavour and frequently with abhorrence. He has struck because his employers have declined to permit him to put in his own pocket the "Extras" received by him on his masters' account, and in his present position he has alienated every scrap of public sympathy that might otherwise have been forthcoming, even from those quarters where it is usually to be found in any dispute between capital and labour. The other day the public were shocked at the terrible revelations of fraud on the part of a number of the drivers employed by the General Motor Car Cab Company. Individual cases of dishonesty such as the police courts bring daily to light are sufficiently painful, but the discovery in this case that scores of well-paid working men had been engaged in a wholesale conspiracy to rob their employers came like a national reproach.

Never before in the history of English industrial troubles had such a case been known of wholesale and systematic robbery. There was no pretence of the men being entitled to the money or any part of it. It was sheer, unmitigated fraud. The cab owners took steps to protect themselves and the robbers went out on strike for the right to cheat!

People who have no concern in the relations between the driver and the employer are reminded by the claim to pocket the extras of causes of complaint in the relations between the drivers and themselves. It does not need a long memory to recall a number of circumstances that do not represent this dissolute bandit in a very engaging light. The general recollection of the driver in the early days of the new vehicle is of a man greedy and insolent to a degree. In the flush of his easy triumph he defied the hackney carriage regulations and claimed in effect the right to choose his fares and name his own price. Unless he recognised an assurance or a prospect of being lavishly overpaid he would refuse to accept a fare on the pretence either of "going home" or of being "short of petrol."

Altogether apart from the merits of the dispute—if it can possibly have any merits—the taxi-driver is surely making a huge mistake. He is a luxury, not a necessity, and we can make shift to do without him until he sees fit to return to the rank. Moreover, the strike is putting no effective pressure upon the employers. Most of them have been making very little money of late—many, indeed, have been working at an actual loss—and they are not particularly sorry for an interruption which does them very little harm. There is not the slightest fear of the business being snapped up in the meantime, for the taxi-cab has no competitor of which it need be afraid, and the public will undoubtedly return to it as soon as the drivers decide to resume work. There are no horses to eat their heads off, as when the hansom-drivers and the omnibus-men came out on strike, and the expense of laying up a taxi-cab in the yard is so small that only a man in a very small way is likely to take it seriously into account. London has been annoyed by the strike, but it would be ridiculous to say that the business of the Metropolis has been paralysed by it, while the omnibuses, the Tubes, the owners of hansoms and "growlers" and the boot-makers are disposed to regard the whole thing as an exceedingly happy device for enabling honest men to come by their own.

Personally I regard this strike as a boon and I hope it may long continue. For days it has been a positive pleasure to walk in streets no longer rendered hideous by perpetual hooting. One has been able to cross over to the other side without feeling that it was a risky thing to do in spite of one's accident policy, and to see the hansoms and growlers "making hay" was a positive comfort. There are far too many of these juggernauts running; if the drivers cannot make a decent living on existing fares and without thieving, I suggest that instead of raising fares, as has been suggested, the number of cabs should be limited.

Could irony go farther than this? A club has been formed in London called the "Merrie England Club." And in the twentieth century, too, when everyone's merriment has been extinguished by the increased cost of living, the turmoil in the industrial world, and the sorrowfulness of musical comedy! Merrie England, forsooth—with taxation going up, another drastic Licensing Act threatened, and the New Woman asserting herself everywhere! Why, as a people, we have forgotten how to be merry. We no longer dance round maypoles, play kiss-in-the-ring on village greens, or troop after the Lord of Misrule with jests and junketings. We don't even grow joyous over the waits and carol singers, and there is no hilarity in the average man's struggle to make a sovereign do the work of twenty-five shillings. The "Merrie England Club" is a ghastly misnomer. A wager might be ventured that, in less than six months, every member of it will be sobbing on his own bit of sackcloth and wiping his sad eyes with ashes.

The "perfect wife" has been discovered at last and in America, of course. In no other country would the existence of connubial felicity, however rare, be shouted from the housetops. In London town, if a man possessed, or was beguiled into believing that he possessed, a perfect wife, he would conceal his delight lest peradventure covetous neighbours might seek to rob him of his treasure. The American lady who, after thirty-six years of marriage, has been trumpeted by her husband as perfect, seems to possess one conspicuous virtue. She is a good cook. She knows how to "feed the brute." From the stress laid on this accomplishment we may infer that the perfect wife's perfection is principally of a culinary character. No wonder that the husband is contented, that he never speaks a cross word, and that he looks at his wife through coloured glasses. This domestic mutual admiration society is really quite interesting; nevertheless, so much sweetness of temper must be rather cloying. It is possible for husband and wife to be faultily faultless and to have so much home perfection that they grow weary of it and of each other. The picture of this American couple, with their thirty-six years of placid, wellfed contentment, and never a single tiff or even a latchkey argument, suggests a monotony so awfully depressing that a good breezy row, with crockery flying about, would be a delightful interlude.

The dignities of Baron, Viscount, and Earl of the United Kingdom, which have been conferred on your Ex-Viceroy, Lord Curzon, were gazetted last week. He will be known by the names, styles, and titles of Baron Ravensdale of Ravensdale, Viscount Scarsdale of Scarsdale, and Earl Curzon of Kedleston.

In default of male issue, his eldest daughter, the Honourable Mary Irene Curzon, will assume the title of Baroness Ravensdale of Ravensdale, which will be handed down in turn to her eldest male heir, or in default to the Honourable Cynthia Blanche Curzon or the Honourable Alexandra Naldera Curzon, her sister. The Viscounty of Scarsdale will go to Baron Scarsdale and his heirs in the event of Lord Curzon dying without male issue. The present Baron Scarsdale is Lord Curzon's father.

More than a year ago died Florence Nightingale, a very old woman, old in years and honours. The fame of her is still young among us. When we forget Florence Nightingale, "whose name is a blessing to speak," we shall have forgotten so much else that we shall be no longer an English people.

To me it seems that a Memorial Committee could do little enough to add praise to that famous name. Her work, however, goes on, and is to finish; there must be ways in which we could gain merit for ourselves in commemorating her. But a Memorial Committee Meeting at the Mansion House can, it seems, come but to one decision. "It was settled that the Memorial should take the form of a statue"—of a £6,000 statue—"and that any balance should go to an annuity fund for nurses who are past work."

In dealing with such matters our want of imagination is indeed pitiful. We know well enough that, as a nation, we have neither genius for sculpture nor even an honest liking for it. Our London climate, our grey rains and smudging fogs mock at our adventures in the art. In the lands of the south, where marble is white against blue skies, where the bronze glows warm to the sun, there is place for the statue in the open air. In London it becomes a dolorous joke. When on days of chill rain or greasy London mist, I pass Mr. John Stuart Mill in his uneasy Embankment chair have pity for him: but it is not the pity that is akin to love. He and his fellows posture in the comedy of misery. And now we are invited to add Florence Nightingale to that sad crew on the pedestals.

Mr. Cyril Maude was last Saturday night seen at the play house, seen in his most winning and persuasive manner in the rôle of one of those debonair men of the world who come within the category of "Men there are that never age, others can't be young." This motto is the text of the pleasing comedy "Dad" which afforded a gentle flow of amusement and the sympathetic humour of which should ensure it a very fair measure of success.

At one time we heard much of the man who was supposed to be effete and worn out at forty, and here we have Sir Joseph Lorrimer, who is quite a boy by the side of his matter-of-fact natural son, who really goes so far as to cut his own son out in the affections of the girl to whom he was engaged. At the first blush this may sound somewhat repugnant, but as the author puts it and the actor represents it, it seems the most natural thing in the world and the fitting end to a play that touches but lightly on the emotions and aims rather to produce a sense of genial satisfaction than any dramatic appeal to the feelings.

Characterisation and dialogue are the elements upon which the author depends for his general effects, and it must be admitted he is happy in both. Nothing could be more admirable than the striking contrast between father and son, and the equally effective contrast between the two girl parts so admirably represented by Miss Alexandar Carlisle and Miss Marie Hemingway. They interest us and charm us and more than compensate for the slightness of a plot, the denouement of which it is not difficult to foresee.

The fact that it is a natural and not a legitimate son does not really affect the story, save that it offers an excuse for Sir Joseph's neglect of his offspring until he has passed his majority. One might also add that it gives occasion for an excellent scene between father and son. The father loses patience with the young man because he has chosen the girl he intends to marry, and the son rightly enough reproaches him for this excessive interest in a life which hitherto had troubled him so little. There are other episodes that also ring with truth, however much their serious import is hidden beneath the lightness and charm of the dialogue. Exceedingly humorous is the scene in which the prosaic young farmer is introduced by his father to a worldly-minded and frivolous lady, who it is intended shall have the social guidance of the young "cub" from Cornwall. The same may be said of Richard's proposal in the first act to his near neighbour, Miss Georgina Cardew.

Mr. Maude's performance, was a perfectly finished study of the polished man of the world with a very susceptible heart. Mr. Kenneth Douglas was equally admirable in his carefully thought-out portrait of the prosaic and monosyllabic country-bred youth. Mr. Sam Southern contributed a delightful thumb-nail sketch of an obliging club friend. Mr. J. D. Beveridge, as the local parson, was perhaps the only character strongly reminiscent of the French original.

Melodrama and religion, the teaching of the Sermon on the Mount working in opposition to the teaching of the Old Testament, political wire-pulling and the intrigues of nations, a representation of Count Tolstoi and a little mild love-making, royalty and revolutionists, even a hymn or two, and even a pun or two—Mr. Israel Zangwill has found room for all these in his new four-act play, "The War God," produced yesterday afternoon at His Majesty's Theatre.

Mr. Zangwill has laid his scenes in a European country which he calls Gothia. The King is a puppet, and the State is practically ruled by the Chancellor, Count Torgrim. Torgrim believes his best way to serve not only his country but his God is to make successful war upon other countries. He plots and schemes to make Gothia the ruler of all Europe—not, let it be emphasised, to further his own ends, but because he conscientiously believes it is his religious duty. Taxes to buy armaments lie heavy on the people; there is a revolution; but the big obstacle in the way of Torgrim's plans is not the revolutionists but Count Frithiof, who in essentials is Tolstoi—he is Tolstoi in his appearance, Tolstoi in his way of living, Tolstoi in his preaching. Count Frithiof is murdered by the revolutionists, who also regard his preaching as an obstacle to the success of their plans. But Frithiof's gospel of love and peace lives after him; it is taken up by the people; it ruins Torgrim—as no doubt it would eventually ruin the State.

Mr. Zangwill has written an ambitious play, and no one could doubt his deadly earnestness. There are impressive moments; there are beautiful passages. But in his deadly earnestness Mr. Zangwill has allowed his sense of humour to desert him; and moreover, his scenes are entirely artificial.

None of the characters won sympathy. They were all cranks. But they were splendidly acted. It is difficult, perhaps, to believe that any man so strong, capable of rising from a lowly origin to the head of a great country, would be so lacking in dignity and self-control as Mr. Arthur Bourchier made Count Torgrim out to be; but his study on the whole was remarkable—virile, with moments of great power. Sir Herbert Tree's performance as Count Frithiof (made up strikingly to resemble Tolstoi) was superb. He had little more to do than stand down stage and voice Tolstoi "isms," but he did it with dignity and a certain beauty. Excellent in their way, too, were Miss Lillah McCarthy, Mr. Charles Maude, Mr. J. H. Barnes, Mr. A. D. George, and Mr. Gerald Lawrence.

A success! There are few things the playgoer loves better than to witness a successful première. The triumphant feeling which, like an almost tangible fluid, pervades the theatre is exhilarating to a degree.

It was this sensation, that filled the Globe Theatre on Saturday soon after the curtain had risen over the farcical comedy "The Glad Eye." It was infectious, irresistible. Homeric laughter came rolling down from the "gods" and spread over the dress circle to the stoical stalls. The hardened first-nighter tried in vain to shake it off. Suddenly, in a helpless convulsion, he bumped against the critic of forty years' standing. Even this connoisseur of the drama lost his well-studied critical pose. It was the sign of capitulation. His fellow-critics shook in their seats, beyond control.

The German dramatist, Von Schonthan, started play-writing in order to get away from his wife and country home. As long as he could attend the rehearsals in gay Berlin he little cared about the final fate of his numerous farces.

The two merry Frenchmen, Gaston Bocard and Maurice Poligne, took refuge in another giddy pastime—that of ballooning—to escape rustic monotony. A trip on the balloon the Zebra with Comte de la Beuve, the aeronaut—that is what they told their wives. Paris—"Paradis des Femmes," the Moulin de la Galette and Kiki, the pert little midinette—was their real destination.

Lucienne, Gaston's shrewd wife, well knew her husband's weakness. It did not take her long to find out that it was not exactly aerial sport the two philanderers were after.

How she sets traps, into which the luckless husbands duly fell; how Kiki made matters worse with her mischievous "glad eye"; how Maurice's pretty wife bravely resisted the advances of an over-arduous admirer, and how all these disturbances furthered the science of spiritualism is related in the rollicking style of very French humour.

The farce is of the non-star type. There are many good parts, and every one of them was splendidly acted. In fact, such excellent ensemble-playing is rarely, too rarely, seen on our stage.

Lawrence Grossmith and H. Marsh Allen as the naughty husbands did delightful work.

The two wives, one, world-wise, ordering a new frock every time her husband goes "ballooning," the other old fashioned enough to believe in matrimonial fidelity, were brilliantly played by Auriol Lee and Daisy Markham.

Miss Ethel Dane made an exquisite study of Kiki, the "chic" little milliner, as only Paris knows her. Would not one board a dozen Zebras for one of her "glad eyes?"

Mr. E. Dagnall, who produced the play, gave a very amusing sketch of a crankish spiritualist.

THE VAGRANT.

NILGIRI SHIKAR.*

WHAT was done for the hills of the Pachmari district years ago by the late Captain Forsyth in that charming work, "The Highlands of Central India," Mr. Fletcher has accomplished for those of the Nilgiri in the present volume, which stands on a much higher plane than the great majority of sporting narratives, and is at the same time teeming with interest and exciting adventures. Fortunately there was abundant room for the book as the shikar of the Nilgiris has been but little described; one of the two volumes devoted to this subject consisting, confessedly of articles in the lighest style, while of the other, as Mr. Fletcher remarks, the less said the better.

That the author is thoroughly master of his subject will be apparent to every reader who peruses the book with attention; we believe indeed that Mr. Fletcher has resided for many years in the Nilgiris, where he has an estate of his own. The value of the work is much enhanced by the excellent map forming the frontispiece to the volume; and an attractive feature is constituted by the illustrations, although we should have preferred that fewer of these represented dead animals.

Although the book is chiefly devoted to big game, there is a chapter on small game, including birds, with a list of Nilgiri species, which has been revised by Mr. Lydekker, and notes on rifles and the preservation of skins in the field.

The elephant and the tiger claim, of course, a large share of space, each having a couple of chapters to itself. As the author remarks, it seems incredible that, so late as the year 1873, "the indiscriminate slaughter of elephants was not only permitted in the Madras Presidency, but was encouraged by Government by the offer of a large reward for every elephant killed; and even after this lapse of time the elephant lover must feel a pang of regret at the thought of the wholesale butchery that was perpetrated under the aegis of this deplorable system. I have heard laid but quite authentic tales of how men made elephant-killing the business of their lives; of how cows and calves were slain by the hundred—yes literally by the hundred—for the sake of the reward, which was not claimed in the case of tuskers because the value of the ivory greatly exceeded the Government fee; and of how as a natural result, elephants were exterminated in certain tracts where previously they had roamed in herds. Here, in South-East Wynaad, the slaughter was enormous, and I have heard (I believe this is strictly true) of one man who was then resident there credited with the killing of three hundred elephants, mostly cows and calves."

Happily this atrocious state of affairs has long since been ended; and it may be hoped that the Wynaad elephant herds are now on the increase. The author, who at one time enjoyed the position of a "lord of elephants"—for he tells that during a certain period he had the sole right of shooting and capturing elephants over an extensive area—has the credit of having practised extreme moderation in the destruction of these noble animals. "I have," he writes, "such an intense admiration for this magnificent creature that I never see an elephant without a feeling of regret that the death of even the one I have shot can be laid at my door; and nothing would now induce me to shoot another unless he were a confirmed rogue, or in self-defence."

To the view of Sanderson and Blanford that the intelligence of elephants has been much overrated, the author unhesitatingly takes exception. "I maintain," he writes, "that an elephant in a difficulty does show more cleverness than would other animals. Sanderson is unfair in saying that pitfalls are merely covered with a few sticks and leaves; on the contrary, these traps are always most artfully concealed, and are made to resemble the surrounding ground so closely that even men sometimes come to grief."

In regard to tigers, it must suffice to mention that the author is in accord with Sanderson in the belief that in nearly all cases they seize cattle and other big animals by the throat and not by the neck; the only exception that came under his own notice being an old bull buffalo.

"It has never been my lot," he observes, "to see a tiger actually seize a bullock, though on several occasions I have spent hours with the cattle when I knew a tiger was in the vicinity, in the hope of witnessing the sight. But over and over again I have closely questioned my cattle-men, who have been spectators of a tiger's kill from a distance of a few yards, and their description tallies exactly with that of Sanderson."

Lack of space prevents notice of the author's account of any other species of Nilgiri game, except the Nilgiri ibex, wild goat, or tahr, which is, of course, the one species absolutely characteristic of the district. In the first place, it is interesting to learn that the name "waryato" which has been applied to the species is obviously a corruption of the native words barray, a cliff, and ader, a goat.

"In former days—the halcyon days of sport on the Nilgiris"—writes Mr. Fletcher, "ibex were found in very large herds, an assembly of even one hundred being not uncommon according to the accounts of old-time sportsmen. But owing to incessant persecution the numbers were thinned at such a rate that at one time the ibex stood in imminent danger of extermination. The introduction of the Nilgiri Game Act in 1879, which prescribed a close time for all game, did much to avert this calamity; the absolute prohibition of ibex-shooting, which followed a few years later did more. Under this salutary legislation there was such a steady increase in the herds, that in 1908 it was found possible to permit the shooting of one saddleback under each license issued in a season, and this rule still obtains, though, I need hardly add a saddleback does not fall to the lot of every sportsman who goes on a shooting trip to the Kundahs. The largest herd I ever saw was at Betrmund on a glorious January morning in 1890, and numbered 59 individuals. Curiously enough, this large herd did not contain a single warrantable buck; and ensconced behind a rock, I contented myself with watching them for a couple of hours, while they fed up to within a hundred yards of my post."

With this we must take leave of a very charming book, which as already stated, is not to be ranked with the mere rock of ordinary volumes on shikar, but is to be regarded as a distinctly valuable contribution to our knowledge of the fauna of India. Mr. Fletcher is to be heartily congratulated on the result of his labours; and the book must occupy a prominent and easily accessible position on the shelves of every Indian sportsman's library.

Shikar.

MORE THAN THEY DESIRE OR DESERVE.

THEY that expect nothing are commonly blessed in that they are not disappointed. Fortunately, however, for the shikari, Heaven sometimes sends him even more than he desires or deserves.

So it was that I moralized over my pipe at the end of the morning this paper attempts to describe. . . . . .

"Fifteen miles of a ride, Lal Khan, and nothing but the blue pigeon at the road-side well, eh, if I remember right." I had said at the start. "I am not a Shikari, as you know, Sir," replied my Daffadar, who, to do him justice attends to his duties as an officer of Border Military Police assiduously enough to have little leisure for sport "my cousin will be able to tell you when we get to Kot Isa." I had done the march before, the previous year, and did not expect much. It was country bare of any kind of feathered game, but I retained a grateful recollection of the pigeon at the well and never under any circumstances ride without a gun and a collection of assorted cartridges. I crammed my heels into my pony accordingly and bustled along at a rate of speed which my own good Arab, hardened by sufficient work on a long tour made little of, but which was serious enough for my Daffadar's plump Beloochi mare.

Behind us rode old Hussain, my orderly Sowar for the journey, grey-haired and not so young as once he was, but still the best tent-pegger in the force.

"That's the well—eh," I said over my shoulder, pointing to where a ruined house showed ahead about a quarter of a mile off the road. "Yes" said Hussain and in another moment we had pulled up and were off our ponies.

It does not last very long, the sport at the ruined well, but what there is of it amounts to say six snap-shots at the wild birds out of the natural trap and a possible extra round or two if the birds are obliging enough to settle again in the neighbourhood or swing back again to find out what is wrong with a dead mate.

Good fun it was as ever, the gun at the ready in the right hand, a stone thrown with the left and then the scurry of the strong-winged, startled birds, as they tumbled out, affording a temptation, none the less to be resisted because so strong, to hurry one's fire.

"Fine birds" I said to myself as old Hussain collected them for me "not bad, and here come the respectables." A band of native gentlemen including Chakur Khan, my Daffadar's cousin, who had arrived while I was engaged on the pigeons now advanced and gave me a very friendly and cordial greeting.

"I have a bustard marked down for you" said Chakur Khan, "not a mile from here." "Splendid," I said. "I did not expect such good luck after my fruitless hunts here last year." "Ah yes" said the squire, "but this year is a far better one than last, we have it is true, the rag-tag and bob-tail always with us, who make their own powder, use toycaps and firing pebbles out of native guns, kill a good few birds and frighten many more, but we've had a very different season. So far from a drought, we've had, as you know, torrential rain that broke down most of the embankments, but has given great crops of mustard wherever any of it was held up. Green-mustard is the favourite food of Oobara Mac Queenii and my hopes rose proportionally. The squire, a jolly figure in a loose grey garbardine on a tearing white C. B. mare, accompanied by lesser folk on nondescript tats, personally conducted me for half a mile, till we met the men on the camel who had found the bustard for me.

Chakur Khan then left me and I got up behind the Shikari, a very dark-skinned scrub of a fellow of the musician caste, Hālu by name, but as the result showed, a good workman and an amusing companion.

We passed swiftly off, over fields of stiff clay, deeply fissured by a hot sun after the recent rain.

"Look where the floods broached the embankments" said Hālu. "A little less rain and the harvest would have been a bumper one. But your farmer is a grumbler out and out. Now it's too much rain and now it's too little to be good for him." We had now reached one of those thin, somewhat isolated patches of mustard, which the bustard loves, with, not too far away, a bit of open sand-hill and scrub for them to hide in during the heat of the day, and Hālu pulled the camel back to a walk, a sign that we were somewhere in the neighbourhood of our quarry. "Ah!"

Hālu and I simultaneously saw them get up, one bird, a lame one and correspondingly wary, taking to flight after a short reconnaissance, and the other running swiftly away from us. We had hopes in regard to the more confidential bird, and following him at a tangent, as if he were not our real objective, soon had the satisfaction of seeing him slow down to a walk. Carefully and with elaborate detachment, we drew a circle round the bird and eventually saw him disappear quietly over a bank into the high crop.

"Got him"! whispered Hālu. "He'll squat now." I was divided in my swift mind like the Homeric heroes. Should I jump down and go in on foot? That would give me a better shot if the bird had not gone far. But supposing he had, one sees so much better off a camel and travels so much quicker, even though the motion is apt, occasionally, to spoil one's shooting. So I decided to stick to the camel and almost immediately after regretted it, for our animal at once began to behave with the perversity for which it is justly famous. Scripture tells us not to muzzle the ox that treads out the corn, but what shall be done to the camel that insists on stopping and eating mustard at the moment when you expect the wily bustard to get up?

Hālu pulled at the nose-string, with a muttered imprecation and he got the Ship of the Desert going again. Fortunately the bustard did not rise in the interval.

"Look out now, your Honour" said Hālu as he sent the camel past a depression well filled with mustard, and, almost as he spoke, the bird, till now well hidden, jumped up and flew. It could not have been better done.

The bird was on the near side of the camel, passing me from right to left and the shot was an easy one, mounted though I was. "God keep you pleasant" said Hālu, as the bird dropped limply, hit well in front with a charge of "fours." "You've hit him so hard that it will be difficult to make lawful meat of him." "Have a try" I said, having frequently seen the ease with which a Muhammadan is able to detect signs of life still existing in anything he wants to halal, and sure enough, thus encouraged, Hálu found the bird not so dead as he had at first supposed.

"That's enough before breakfast" I said. Radiol

RADIOL TREATMENT prolongs the life of a Horse's Legs. Completely removes by radiation all soft swellings that disfigure and lame a Horse as sprained Tendons, Windgalls, Bog Spavins, Capped Elbow Big Leg, Enlarged Glands, etc.

No Blister; No Laying up

No Hair Removed.

RADIOL TREATMENT fines down a worn Horse's Legs and is a certain cure for Puffy Joints and Sprains, Prevents Filled Legs.

An intelligent use of the "RADIOL LEG WASH" counteracts that daily wear and tear of the legs unavoidable with the Horse in constant work, whether training, racing, or on the road.

One flask of "RADIOL" will make a GALLON of valuable Leg Wash.

"The Field," June 16th, 1906:—

"We have been able to test some trial bottles of "RADIOL" in cases of Wind-galls, Splints and Puffy swellings and have found "RADIOL" to be very beneficial, and we have also found it useful as a leg wash for polo ponies after a day's play."

To be obtained from Eroom & Co., Calcutta; Treacher & Co., Bombay; W. E. Smith & Co., Mount Road, Madras; Heath & Son, Sharia Maghraky, Cairo; W. Wilson, Rawal Pindi and Murree; The Mombassa Pharmacy, Mombassa.

(Winner trained by W. Hisby.)

BETTING: 5 to 4 on Jacamar, 7 to 2 agst. Cisco, 7 to 1 Woolerina, 10 to 1 Flaith, 34 to 1 Pisstre, 50 to 1 each Wilari, Radiator, Crown Grant and Posadas, 100 to 1 each Durdans, Sanskrit and Posio.

When they took up their positions at the barrier Posio, Cisco and Jacamar were on the rails; Sanskrit, Posadas, and Flaith were observed in the centre, while Wilari was on the extreme outside. A grand start was effected, and Posio, Cisco, Sanskrit, and Durdans were the smartest to move. Durdans led out of the straight just ahead of Posio, Woolerina, Sanskrit and Cisco, with Jacamar last. As they galloped along the river side Posio and Durdans were racing in company ahead of Woolerina and Sanskrit; then Cisco and Pisstre, while the favourite was last. At the bridge Woolerina ran to the front from Radiator, Durdans, Posio and Cisco, while Jacamar was observed threading his way through. When they reached the abbatoirs Woolerina was making the pace from Radiator, Sanskrit, Jacamar, Crown Grant and Cisco, while Posio had dropped back last. Rounding the far turn Woolerina was still bowling along with the lead a length clear of Radiator; then came Jacamar, Cisco, Posadas and Crown Grant. As they swung round the turn Posadas went up to the leader, with Jacamar, Cisco, Pisstre and Wilari all prominent. Posadas was first sighted as they turned for home from Jacamar, Cisco, Pisstre and Crown Grant, with Wilari out wide. At the distance Jacamar was just ahead of Pisstre, Cisco and Posadas, with Wilari coming fast. At the half-distance Jacamar, Pisstre, Cisco and Wilari were in a line, and a grand finish resulted in a head victory for Wilari, with Cisco a length clear of Jacamar; Pisstre was half a length off fourth, while the others finished in the following order:—Crown Grant, Flaith, Posadas, Woolerina, Sanskrit, Radiator and Durdans, with Posio last. Time—2mins. 38⅘secs.

MELBOURNE STAKES.—A sweepstake of 10sovs. with 1,000 added; second horse to receive 200sovs. and the third 100sovs. out of the stake. For three-year-olds and upwards. Weight-for-age. 1¼ mile.

(Winner trained by C. Wheeler.)

BETTING: 7 to 2 agst. Trafalgar, 5 to 1 The Parisian, 10 to 1 Comedy King, 16 to 1 each Flavian and Bridge, 20 to 1 each Ladies' Man, Piastre, Cadonia and Jacamar, 25 to 1 each Hartfell, Cisco, Didus and Glue, 33 to 1 each Woad and Prizefighter, 40 to 1 each Mutilator and Duke Foote, 50 to 1 each Flaith, Aurofodina and Britain, 66 to 1 each Sandbath, Camballo, Crown Grant and Adgio, 100 to 1 each Flavel, Diabolo, Riffian, Rifle, Married and Alarm, 150 to 1 Lord Nolan, 200 to 1 each Posadas and Indiscreet.

The starting hour was about a quarter of an hour ahead when Woad came through the gate from the saddling paddock to the course proper, and after an interval of two or three minutes Ladies' Man put in an appearance. Posadas was the next to follow, and then in rapid succession followed Didus, Bridge, Cisco, Alarm, Britain, Camballo, Duke Foote, Mutilator, Flavel, Diabolo, Married, Rifle, Aurofodina, Cadonia, Hartfell, Adgio, Crown Grant, Glue, Sandbath, Lord Nolan, Indiscreet, Prizefighter, Comedy King, Flavian, The Parisian, Riffian, Flaith, Piastre, Trafalgar, and Jacamar. The preliminaries occupied a few minutes, but punctually to time Mr. Watson took the field in hand. Flavel took the berth on the rails, and he had beside him Glue, Crown Grant, Cisco, and Lord Nolan, and conspicuous in the centre of the line were Ladies' Man, Posadas, Duke Foote Trafalgar, Hartfell, and Comedy King. The positions on the outside were taken by Mutilator, Diabolo, Britain, Didus, and Piastre, Diabolo having the position nearest the outer rails. Diabolo gave less trouble than usual, and after a very brief delay, Mr. Watson released the barrier and the field moved away in a perfect line. Among the quickest to find their legs were Hartfell, Cisco, Crown Grant, and Posadas, and Cisco rapidly dropped into his stride. He piloted the field over the first furlong and when they reached the course proper he was showing just in advance of Posadas and Didus, and then in very close order came Flaith, Aurofodina, Hartfell, Prizefighter, Flavian, and Piastre, while the last two were Mutilator and Glue. Passing the stands Posadas, Cisco, Flaith, and Aurofodina were almost in a line, and after them came Indiscreet, Hartfell, Flavian, Prizefighter, Ladies' Man, and Duke Foote. Cisco had charge as they went out of the straight and turning towards the river side he was a length clear of Posadas, who had Flaith, Hartfell, Aurofodina, Britain, Indiscreet, Piastre, Trafalgar, and Ladies' Man in close attendance. The last three at this stage were Lord Nolan, Glue and Mutilator. Before reaching the bridge Aurofodina ran past the leaders and went on with the lead from Cisco, Posadas, Flaith, Britain, Didus, Hartfell, Flavian, Jacamar, Comedy King, Ladies' Man, The Parisian and Trafalgar, while Glue was now conspicuous in the rear. Aurofodina continued to force the pace along the back stretch, where Posadas, Didus, Flavian, Flaith and Jacamar were his most prominent followers, and the nearest of the others were Comedy King, Trafalgar and The Parisian. Running past the abattoirs Aurofodina was out fully three lengths from Cisco, and then came Britain, Didus, Flavian, Jacamar, Comedy King, The Parisian, Piastre, Flaith and Trafalgar. As the field approached the home turn, Aurofodina began to drop back, but nevertheless he was in front as they came round the turn, where Jacamar had run up into third place just behind Britain, and after that trio the most conspicuous of the others were Didus, Flavian, Crown Grant (who was well up on the outside), Sandbath, The Parisian and Trafalgar, who were both moving up towards the leaders. Aurofodina dropped right out as the field turned for home, and his stable mate Didus was the first to reach the home stretch, closely pursued by Flavian, Jacamar, Sandbath, The Parisian, Trafalgar, Comedy King and Aurofodina. Didus showed the way to the distance, where Flavian, The Parisian (who was making up his ground very fast), Jacamar and Comedy King were all handy, whilst Cadonia, who had been well back in the field, was beginning to get clear of the rank. Immediately the distance was past The Parisian went past Didus, followed by Flavian, and his victory was proclaimed on all sides. By the time the half distance was reached The Parisian was out a length clear of Flavian, Didus and Comedy King, whilst Cadonia could be seen coming very fast in the middle of the course. The Parisian continued to draw away as the post was reached, and he won very easily by two lengths from Flavian, who beat Didus by a head. Cadonia, who finished fast, was a close fourth, Comedy King fifth, Woad sixth, Adgio seventh, Prizefighter eighth, Sandbath ninth, Jacamar tenth, Mutilator eleventh, Duke Foote twelfth, Ladies' Man thirteenth, Flavel fourteenth, Trafalgar fifteenth, and Crown Grant sixteenth, while the last bunch comprised Cisco, Hartfell, Rifle, Glue, Diabolo and Riffian, while Lord Nolan was the last to pass the post. Time—3mins. 27⅘secs.

THE TURF.

NEWBURY.

THE advanced season is beginning to make its influence felt, and at Newbury last Friday we missed the warm sunshine that recalled summer at Folkestone on Wednesday, while rain fell en route, but fortunately dried up for the racing. The afternoon was dull, but there was little keen edge to the wind, though a great-coat proved an acceptable addition to one's outfit. The going was in excellent order, and fields, as usual here, were strong in quantity, if quality was a trifle lacking. Results:—

PROGRESS.

¶ In 1880—after sixteen years working—the average number of "ELGIN" Tents sold amounted to 1,000 per annum.
¶ During the next fifteen years—1880-1895—the number sold was almost four times that of the preceding sixteen years, the average being 3,500 per year.
¶ And for the fifteen years—1895-1910—the average number of "ELGIN" Tents sold reached the enormous number of 7,500 per annum.
¶ This means that over 1,80,000 "ELGIN" Tents were made and sold in forty-six years.
¶ To the really shrewd purchaser of Tents the deduction is obvious: the extreme worth of "ELGIN" Tents is being more definitely realised daily. No other tents have made such progress.

If you are interested in Tents write to us to-day now for Catalogue, Samples and Prices.

WINCHESTER

AN EFFECTIVE BIG-GAME GETTER.

There's no question about it — when you go after big game, you want a rifle that has power. You get it in the .35 Caliber Winchester Repeater. This rifle handles a cartridge having a 250-grain bullet, which has a muzzle velocity of 2200 foot seconds and a muzzle energy of 2687 foot pounds. Think of this tremendous energy being expended inside an animal, as it is when a soft-point bullet is used! And you have five cartridges all told, which can be fired in rapid succession. What animal could withstand the terrible shocking effect of such a battery? Many so-called big-game guns seem mere toys in comparison. The .35 Winchester has a strong, simple and reliable action, and a short 24-inch barrel, which is easily handled and yet shoots straight and true at all ranges effective for big-game shooting.

ALL GUNMAKERS CARRY THESE RIFLES.

BETTING: 100 to 30 Kemponough, 6 to 1 Lilaline, 7 to 1 each Mirabeau, Slash Lane, Paradise, and Roseate Hue, 8 to 1 Maria, 10 to 1 Don Rodrique, 100 to 7 the others.

Won by two lengths; a head between second and third.

A high wind from whatever quarter is no more preferable than the much objectionable one from the East, and everyone at Lincoln on Wednesday was grateful for a still morning after Monday's gale. One cannot expect such an attendance here in autumn as in spring, but it was satisfactory to learn that the attendance on Monday supplied £100 to the good more than the corresponding day last year, and the fine weather attracting the country side, caused a welcome increase. Results:—

ASSOCIATION RULES.

For the fourth week in succession a different club occupies first place in the senior division of the League. In the middle of last month West Bromwich Albion enjoyed that distinction. The Albion were speedily dispossessed by Bradford City, who last week gave way to Middlesbrough and now the position of honour belongs to Newcastle United, who have carried off the championship three times in the course of eight years. Newcastle secured the leadership as the result of a narrow victory over Bury—the one club in the First League without a single win to their credit—the issue of that encounter furnishing further proof that, in contrast to the experience of some previous years when one or two teams have displayed marked superiority over all their rivals, there exists this season comparatively little difference between the more prominent clubs and those at the bottom of the list. To this conclusion possibly an exception should now be made in the case of Newcastle United, who if only pulling through yesterday by the odd goal in five, have beaten Sunderland, Blackburn Rovers, Sheffield Wednesday, and Bury in succession.

Strongly contrasted fortune attended the efforts of the two London clubs. Unbeaten since they went down before Sheffield United at Bramall-lane six weeks ago, Woolwich Arsenal received a visit from Everton and, despite the fact that the Liverpool men had recently defeated Bolton Wanderers and Bradford City, the Plumstead men having played so steadily of late, were generally expected to win. Certainly no strong reason existed why the Arsenal should have met with a reverse. As matters went, however, the skilful tackling of Everton prevented the Plumstead forwards really developing their game and, although the home side struggled on manfully to the end, a solitary goal secured by Jefferies in the opening half gave Everton the victory. The Arsenal had not previously sustained a single defeat at Plumstead in League matches this season. Whereas the Arsenal thus met with an unexpected reverse, Tottenham Hotspur delighted and surprised their supporters by beating Manchester United at Old Trafford. That the North London club had at length got a satisfactory forward line the heavy score registered against Preston North End clearly suggested, but that the side had developed sufficiently to overcome the League champions at Manchester seemed too much to expect, particularly as Brittain, one of the regular Tottenham backs, could not turn out. In the absence of that player, Morris, the old half-back, one of the famous eleven that won the Association Cup more than ten years ago, was called upon to partner Collins. A great struggle took place in the presence of nearly 30,000 people. No goal resulted from the opening half, but at length Minter and Middlemiss scored for the visitors and only one success attending Manchester United, Hotspur were left with a memorable victory by 2 to 1.

Apart from Tottenham Hotspur and Everton, Blackburn Rovers were the only team to win away from home the Blackburn men in gaining a victory at Oldham achieving a performance which had baffled the powers of Bradford City. Middlesbrough sustaining a narrow defeat from Aston Villa at Birmingham and Sunderland going down before Bolton Wanderers, Bradford City step into second place with Blackburn Rovers as their nearest attendants. West Bromwich, who began the season by winning four games out of five, have not since emerged victorious from any one of half a dozen engagements. Bolton Wanderers—like the Albion promoted from the Second Division since last season and equally successful during the month of September—stood in danger of a worse experience than the West Bromwich men, but they showed vastly improved form yesterday against Sunderland and won by 3 to 0. Another notable win was that of Liverpool, who, unable to claim more than one victory at the end of ten encounters, lowered the colours of Notts County—a side that early last month had scored ten points out of a possible fourteen.

Hull City have not been allowed to retain the leadership of the second division of the League for long. In a remarkable match they were beaten by eight goals to none by Wolverhampton Wanderers, and as Burnley just succeeded in overcoming Clapton Orient the Lancashire club now occupy first place. Superiority in goal averages has given Wolverhampton Wanderers precedence over Hull City, who stand third on the list. Another very heavy scoring match took place at Derby, where Derby County defeated Fulham by six goals to one. That victory enabled Derby County to advance to fourth place over the heads of Chelsea and Clapton Orient. Altogether the three London clubs were by no means prominent in yesterday's matches, for in addition to Clapton Orient and Fulham being beaten, Chelsea, playing at home against Bristol City, could only draw. Bristol City, despite the point they thereby gained, have gone down in the competition to last place but two, Birmingham and Stockport County, who both won, being now above them. By beating Notts Forest at Nottingham, Birmingham created the biggest surprise of the afternoon, while Huddersfield Town did well to get the better of Grimsby Town at Grimsby. No other club had previously won there this season.

Queen's Park Rangers retain all their strength in defence, and the forwards gained them another victory in an out match Bristol Rovers being their latest victims. The one unbeaten team in important football, the Rangers, have given away only three goals in ten matches, and they have obtained 24. As Swindon, at home to Brentford, also won by two goals, the relative positions of the two leading clubs remain unaltered, while Crystal Palace, winning by a bare margin and perhaps rather luckily at Luton, hold the third place. Millwall suffered defeat for the first time since the third Saturday of the season. Securing 9 points in six games they were fourth on the list, but now a reverse by an odd goal from West Ham United causes them to fall below Northampton. The meeting of the two East-End clubs attracted so large a crowd that the Boleyn Castle ground could not accommodate the people, an unfortunate accident happening, a fence down one side of the playing enclosure giving way and several onlookers sustaining injuries. As there were 25,000 people present the disastrous crushing on such a moderate sized ground can scarcely be wondered at. With regard to the other matches the most noteworthy result was that at Leyton, where the home side suffered yet another heavy defeat, and from a team of no greater repute than Plymouth Argyle. New Brompton, who have an equally bad record, lost at Brighton, the Albion putting on the record score of 7—0.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY VS. CASUALS.—In a fast and interesting game Cambridge University defeated the Casuals by 1 goal to 0 at Tufnell Park. The University made one change, Lang taking Vachell's place at half. Cambridge kicked off and after the Casuals had rushed the ball down, Crisp, the Cambridge left-winger, got possession and scored with a shot which Newman should have had no difficulty in saving. After this the Casuals did most of the attacking, Clarke, Cutter, and Birks showing good combination, but the Cambridge defence was safe, Thompson especially being good. Then Woosman made a fine run, his shot just going over the bar. At half-time Cambridge still lead by a goal. Afterwards both sides played well, B. S. Farnfield being very clever for Cambridge, while Birks and Clarke sent in hot shots which Hopewell saved well. In the closing stages Cambridge, having got the measure of a rather weak defence were unlucky in not scoring several times, Crisp, Woosman, and Weeks sending in good shots, which were cleared. Cambridge University, 1; Casuals, 0.

TOWNLEY PARK VS. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—Although their captain, A. H. G. Kerry, was able to play for the first time this season, Oxford showed no improvement on previous performances, and were beaten at North Dulwich yesterday by three goals to two. The conditions were quite favourable and the home side played a good hard game and deserved their success. They scored quite early, G. G. Roberts shooting through from the right wing, and though Kerry was prominent in some smart runs and centres, Oxford was generally weak in attack. Townley Park set up some strong attacks, and from a pass by Holloway H. S. Buck increased their lead. Hosie and Kerry each nearly got through for Oxford, who did much better after change of ends. A. C. Kirby, playing centre-half, scored with rather a soft shot, and R. H. Twining equalised. Oxford continued to have the better of matters for some time, but during the last quarter of an hour they were often hard pressed, Campbell coming out prominently in defence. Townley Park often nearly scored and at last a smart shot by Williams gave them the lead again and decided the match in their favour. Townley Park, 3; Oxford University, 2.

RUGBY RULES.

LONDON SCOTTISH VS. OLD ALLEYNIANS.—In a keenly contested game at Richmond the Scotsmen were entitled to their win by three tries to a placed goal. The Alleynians were much below their best form during the opening half, though improving all round subsequently. The Scottish forwards were always the better together, and their backs were the more dangerous scoring force. During the opening half the Alleynians were mainly on the defensive, indeed, they were only able to cross their rivals' "25" once. Monti ran in with the Scots' first try a few minutes after the start, and a little later Gildray scored, Purves failing to improve either try. After changing ends the Old Boys improved, and it was a sporting struggle to the end, with the odds always in favour of the Scotsmen. One nice passing effort by the Old Alleynians backs ended in Gold scoring near the post, and Wright with a well-judged kick placed a goal. They made several efforts to pull the game round, but the Scottish tackling was equal to all that was demanded of it, and shortly before the end the Scotsmen assured themselves of victory. After a stoutly contested ten minutes in the Old Boys "25" some passing by the Scottish backs ended with Monti getting in by means of a capital dodging run. Scottish, 9 points; Old Alleynians, 5 points.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY VS. RICHMOND.—As was to be expected, the Richmond fifteen proved unequal to the task of holding their own at Cambridge, the Light Blues being successful by one goal and two tries to nothing. The play in the first half was of a moderate quality, and half-time arrived without anything being scored. After the interval Owens obtained the first try for Cambridge, and then for a time the attack was mainly in the hands of Richmond, but they were unable to score. Towards the close Lewis gained a try after a splendid run, and then C. N. Thompson also scored after fine work by Thorne, the try being converted. On the whole, the game was a little disappointing. Cambridge University, 11 points; Richmond, 0.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY VS. HARLEQUINS.—The Harlequins visited Oxford and gained a handsome victory by 5 goals and 1 try to 2 goals (1 penalty) and 3 tries. The Dark Blues were without Pain and Bullock, while the Harlequins played Saunders for Evans. In the first half Brougham, Lambert, and Dodds scored for the Harlequins, and Lambert kicked 2 goals, while Dingale and Poulton gained tries for Oxford, one of which was converted by Lagden. After changing ends, further tries for the Harlequins were obtained by Lambert (2) and Brougham, and Green and Fulton scored for Oxford, while Cheesman kicked a penalty goal for the home side. Harlequins, 23 points; Oxford University, 17 points.

ROSSLYN PARK VS. UNITED SERVICES.—The United Services took the field at the Old Deer Park, Richmond with a weak side, and Rosslyn Park secured an easy victory by 9 points to 0. The Services' forwards put in a lot of good work in the first half, but were not well served behind the scrum, and nothing resulted from their efforts. This also proved to be the weak spot in the Park team, and the sides crossed over with nothing scored. On resuming the game proceeded upon even lines for some time, but the Park men lasted the game out in better style. Without showing any marked individual superiority, they managed to keep their opponents in complete check and themselves score 3 tries. The first of these was gained by Fisher, following a rush by the forwards. The second resulted from a nice run by the backs led by Dixon, the final pass going to Dymond, who got over on the right. The last was scored by Soutar, who received the ball when the Services' defence had been completely out-manœuvred. All the goal kicks were taken by Moore, who failed to convert. An occasional burst by the Services' forward brought no result. Rosslyn Park, 9 points; United Services, 0.

BLACKHEATH vs. CARDIFF.—A very keen, but not particularly clever, game at the Rectory Field ended in a draw—three points all. Blackheath scoring a penalty goal and Cardiff one try. The conditions were admirable and there was a capital attendance, over 4,000 people being present. Cardiff were without their captain, Dyke, and one of the halves, Clem Lewis, and were rather disorganised behind the pack, while there were several new forwards. Blackheath had Griffiths and Liddell away playing for Yorkshire; still they held an advantage in the scrummage and as for the first twenty minutes of the game the forwards monopolised the play Blackheath had the better of matters. Once they nearly scored from a clever cross kick by Maritz, but none of his colleagues were up in time. Then Cardiff pressed, and after some good combination amongst the three-quarters Spiller scored an uncoverted try. In the second half Blackheath nearly scored through Maritz quite early, and shortly afterwards Stone placed a goal from a penalty. After this the game was more keen than clever Pillman nearly scored after a good run, but the defence always prevailed. Blackheath, 3 points; Cardiff, 3 points.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

SOMERSET vs. CORNWALL.—In this game at Taunton both counties were strongly represented, and the match was witnessed by 3,000 spectators. Somerset had previously beaten Hampshire, and they gained a further success, defeating Cornwall by one penalty goal and two tries to nothing. Norman Coates appeared for C. Roman, while Eustace, of Camborne, took the place of Gilbert among the Cornishmen, Gilbert had left for Canada. The ground was in good order, the conditions being quite favourable to a fast game. At the outset the play went all in favour of the visitors and they had the misfortune to lose Gent, who retired through concussion. Vincent Coates scored for Somerset, but the place kick failed. Cunningham also nearly got over. The play in the second half was of poor quality. The Somerset forwards were the stronger but the Cornishmen handled the ball more cleverly. The next try was obtained by Vincent Coates, and later Shewring kicked a capital penalty goal. This came just on time, and was the concluding incident of the match, which was mainly contested by the forwards. Somerset, 9 points; Cornwall, 0.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE vs. DEVON.—The meeting of these counties at Bristol was of considerable importance, the impression being that on its result would depend the championship of the group. A keen match was witnessed, Devon, who are the holders of the championship, being successful by one dropped goal to nothing. The game was fast, but of a scrambling nature, Devon were the better forwards, and during the earlier stages did most of the pressing. Gloucestershire, however, had a fair share of the attacking, and a rice came very near scoring. Towards the interval Jago dropped a goal. After change of ends the game was keenly contested, the Gloucestershire attack showing considerable improvement. Some of the Gloucestershire passing was very clever, but it was more than once spoiled by the weak play of Everle in the centre. The Devon defence was excellent, and Johnston, the international full back, brought off some daring saves from the feet of the Devon forwards. Jago at half back was in fine form for the winners. Devon, 4 points: Gloucestershire, 0.

LANCASHIRE vs. CHESHIRE.—In meeting Lancashire at Aigburth, Cheshire sustained another disaster, the home county winning by two goals and two tries to one try. This match was played in fine weather before a capital crowd. At the last moment Roddick dropped out of the Lancashire team, his place being taken by Horsfall, of Broughton Park. The game had only been in progress about five minutes when Haywood obtained a try for Lancashire and Jackson played a goal. Kemp followed with another try, but by persistent forward work Cheshire attacked and Johnson obtained a try. Thus, when half-time arrived Lancashire led by eight points to three. After crossing over the Lancashire men gave a capital display, being seen to superior advantage at most points of the game. Latham fielded a cross kick by Schofield and gained a brilliant try, which Jackson converted. Then a splendid concerted movement by the Lancashire backs ended in Kemp adding another try. Lancashire pressed hard to the finish, but were met by a fairly stout defence. Lancashire, 16 points; Cheshire, 3 points.

YORKSHIRE vs. DURHAM.—These counties took the field for the first time in the competition at Ilkley, and Yorkshire won very comfortably by two goals and five tries to two tries. The weather was fine, but a strong westerly wind prevailed, and the ground was in a heavy condition. In the first half Yorkshire had to face the wind, and mostly were kept on the defence. The home side, however, played well under difficulties, and Griffiths lost a try for them by touching down over the dead ball line. Later, however, the same player gained a try after another brilliant run, and Hunter also scored for the home county. Heal and Hall gained tries for Durham, and at the interval the scores stood at six points each. With the wind now in their favour the Yorkshiremen attacked with considerable vigour, and were frequently dangerous. In rapid succession tries were obtained by Eric, Paul Steinthal, Griffiths Hunter, and Arthur King, two of these being converted by Harrison. In the later stages the wind dropped considerably, but the Durham men were unable to make much headway, and towards the close put up a rather weak defence. Yorkshire, 25 points; Durham, 6 points.

CROSS COUNTRY.

OXFORD.—The Oxford University Hare and Hounds Novices' and Freshmen's race took place on the 4th instant over five and a half miles of very greasy going, but there was some good running, in which G. M. Sproule, T. G. Pocock, and J. M. Silvester figured prominently. Silvester took the lead at the onset, and was first man until Shotover was reached, where Sproule, who, by the way, came up with a good reputation in the Five Miles Championship of Victoria to his credit, assumed premier position, and, never being headed, retained his place to the end. Pocock reached the tape in an exhausted condition, closely attended by Silvester. Unfortunately, the timekeeper's watch went wrong soon after the start, and no times were returned. Appended is the order of arrival:—

G. M. Sproule, Melbourne and Balliol, 1; T. G. Pocock, New College School and New College, 2; J. M. Silvester, Trent College and Jesus, 3; A. G. R. Garrod, Bradfield and University, 4; H. F. Slade, Bristol Grammar School and Balliol, 5; F. H. Emmett, Lancing and Keble, 6; J. L. Pamphrey, Sedbergh and Trinity, 7; M. W. Parr, Winchester and Brasenose, 8; R. C. Boyd, Harrow and Trinity, 9; D. G. Murray, Winchester and New College, 10; P. W. Whitcombe, Washburn College, Kansas, and Wadham, 11; R. G. Bailey, Kelly College, Tavistock, and Keble, 12; E. L. D. Robinson, Lancing and St. John's, 13; W. J. Pearse, Quebec and New College, 14.

'VARSITY ROWING.

THE COXSWAINLESS FOURS.

OXFORD.—With a counter-attraction in the 'Varsity Rugby match with the Harlequins, it was not surprising that only a very limited number of spectators patronised the towing-path when the final between New College and Balliol was rowed on Saturday afternoon. The conditions were excellent, there being practically no wind, and a good race was witnessed, New College winning in the excellent time of 6mins. 20secs.

The crews got away on level terms, but Balliol, who had first station, soon forged ahead, and were the best part of a length to the good just before Rough's was reached. Here Bourne went over to the Oxon side and with a few sharp strokes New College regained their lost ground. On passing the Boathouse Balliol began to hang out signals of distress, and the Wykehamists, seizing their opportunity from this point, put in a brilliant effort, and gaining rapidly, eventually won by two lengths in 6mins. 30secs. The winners rowed with oars by Norris, Putney. Crews:—

New College I.—Sir W. Parker (bow), 11st. 6lb.; A. F. R. Wiggins, 12st. 13lb.; F. A. H. P'tman, 12st.; R. C. Bourne (stroke), 10st. 13lb.

Balliol.—H. R. Denham (bow), 10st. 10lb.; R. W. Flitcher 12st.; F. W. Heinemann, 12st.; A. H. M. Wedderburn (stroke), 13st.

CAMBRIDGE.—Strangely enough, the two finalists in the race at Cambridge on Saturday were the same as last year, but whereas on that occasion Third Trinity had all the luck of the draw, this year the order was reversed. There was a very large attendance to witness the race, including such famous Old Blues as Messrs. R. H. Adie, G. E. Fairbairn, S. M. Bruce, E. W. Powell, J. C. Drinkwater, J. B. Rosher, F. E. Hellyer, E. S. Hornidge, together with the two steerers and Mr. R. H. Sanderson, the judge.

The Etonians, in the second station, went off at the faster stroke, but their opponents were rowing very strongly and at the Little Ditch there was hardly anything in it, "Third" being, perhaps, a foot or two up. What little the Etonians gained in the Gut they lost by rather bad rowing round Grassy Corner. However, they did better in Post Reach, getting together again and being about a quarter of a length to the good at the Red Grind. Amid great excitement the crews raced on without any change until the Willows were reached, and then Mr. J. H. Gibbon called upon the Etonians, and they made a remarkably fine effort, gaining quite a length by the time the Railway Bridge was reached. Collins then made two or three efforts, but gained very little. By this time both crews were showing signs of distress, and the Etonians were not able to gain much more, and won by 1¼ lengths. Time—11mins. 5secs. Mr. J. H. Gibbon steered the winners, who used oars by E. Ayling and Son, Riverside, Putney, on the patent aluminium-lined tubular principle, whilst Mr. J. ATHLETICS.

CAMBRIDGE FRESHMEN'S SPORTS.

The sports were held on the 6th and 9th instant under favourable conditions and some capital performances were achieved. On the first day R. S. Woods put the weight 35ft. 6in. but A. A. Seton was unlucky in just getting over the line. There was an appreciable wind against the sprinters, sixteen of whom competed in three trial heats, but J. G. Will was unable to turn out owing to his accident in the football match against Swansea. The winners of heats were E. N. Davie, A. A. Seton, and H. M. Makintosh, but nothing better than 11secs. was accomplished. The high jump was not only distinctly good, but probably it is unprecedented that two Freshmen should exceed 5ft. 7in. A. C. Straker, who stands 6ft. 3¼in. won with 5ft. 8¼in. while F. Sproule, the American, who is much taller and works himself up in peculiar fashion, cleared 5ft. 7¼in. There were two heats in the quarter-mile. S. W. Curtis won the first in 55secs. and C. V. Brainbridge the next in 56 1-5secs. both getting home comfortably. J. G. Will was unable to compete. C. Thorne, the Rugby three-quarter back, beat Straker in the opening heat of the hurdles in 18secs. while H. F. Brown just managed to beat D. J. Day in the next course in 18 4-5secs. Eleven turned out for the mile, which ended in a smart win for E. P. Turner, who beat A. J. Peters on the post in 4mins. 39 4-5secs. The hammer-throwers experienced difficulty in keeping within the circuit. R. S. Woods was best with 85ft. 1in. Two heats of the 120 yards handicap were also run.

Some good performances were accomplished on the second day. Perhaps the best thing done was C. Thorne's 120yds. hurdle race in 17secs. E. P. Turner had an easy victory in the three miles, but he had no one to make the pace. H. C. Webb cleared 19ft. 9in. at the long jump. The half-mile was won by C. N. Lowe in 2mins. 3 2-5secs. The 440yds. race went to H. Law in 54 4-5secs. and the 100yds. race to H. M. Macintosh in a yard inside 11secs. Appended are results of both days:—

FIRST DAY.

Putting the Weight.—R. S. Woods (Dulwich and Downing), 35ft. 6in. 1; A. A. Schon (Germany and Corpus), 32ft. 8in., 2; F. Sproule (Stone School, U. S. A. and Trinity Hall), 29ft. 6in. 3.

100 Yards Race.—Heat I.: E. M. Davis (Perse and Jesus), 1; C. V. Brainbridge (Taunton and Downing), 2. Won by 4yds. Time, 11secs. Heat II.: A. A. Schon (Germany and Corpus), 1; S. M. Curtis (Worksop and St. Catharine's), 2. Won by 4ft. Time, 11 1-5secs. Heat III.: H. M. MacIntosh (Glenalmond and Corpus), 1; H. Law (Repton and Pembroke), 2. Won by 3yds. Time, 11secs.

High Jump.—A. C. Straker (Harrow and Jesus), 5ft. 8¼in., 1; F. Sproule (Stone School, U. S. A. and Trinity Hall), 5ft. 7¼in., 2; A. G. Happell (Tonbridge and King's), 5ft. 3¼in. 3.

440 Yards Race.—Heat I.: S. W. Curtis (Worksop and St. Catharine's), 1; H. Law (Repton and Pembroke), 2; A. G. Thurlow (Felsted and Caius), 3. Won by 3yds. Time, 55secs. Heat II.: C. V. Brainbridge (Taunton and Downing), 1; F. G. Heap (Leys and King's) and C. E. H. Druitt (Blundell and Sidney), dead heat for second place. Won by 8yds. Time, 56 1-5secs.

120 Yards Hurdle Race.—First heat: C. Thorne (Haileybury and Clare), 1; A. C. Straker (Harrow and Jesus), 2. Won by a yard. Time, 18secs. Second heat: H. F. Brown (Cheltenham and Trinity Hall), 1; D. J. Day (Repton and St. John's), 2. Won by a foot. Time, 18 4-5secs.

One Mile Race.—E. P. Turner (Wellington and Christ's), 1; A. J. Peters (St. Peter's, York, and Christ's), 2; E. M. Bock (Wellington and Caius), 3. Eleven started. About a quarter of a mile from home Turner took the lead from Bock, but presently lost it to Peters. Some 50yds. from home Turner began sporting hard, and catching Peters near the post won by half a yard. Time, 4mins. 39 4-5secs.

Throwing the Hammer.—R. S. Woods (Dulwich and Downing), 85ft. 1in. 1; C. H. Vernon (Oundle and St. John's), 71ft. 1in. 2. R. W. Barrett was not measured.

120 Yards Open Handicap.—Heat I.: J. L. Fairlie (Caius), scratch, 1; P. J. Baker (King's), 4yds. start, 2; E. Norseworthy (Caius), 5yds. 3. Won by 2ft. Time, 12 3-5secs. Heat II.: J. H. Barrett (Trinity Hall), 4yds. 1; G. L. Clark (Jesus), 3½yds. 2; L. F. Taylor (Clare), 1yd. Won by 2ft. Time, 12⅕secs.

SECOND DAY.

Long Jump.—H. C. Webb (King's College School and Christ's), 19ft. 9in. 1; A. A. Schon (Germany and Corpus), 18ft. 4¾in. 2; E. F. Housden (King's School, Canterbury, and Peterhouse), 18ft. 0¼in. 3. Eight competed.

100 Yards Race.—Final heat: H. M. Macintosh (Glenalmond and Corpus), 1; E. M. Davis (Perse School and Jesus), 2; H. Law (Repton and Pembroke), 3. Won by half a yard: about 4ft. between second and third. Time, 11secs.

Half-mile Race.—C. N. Lowe (Dulwich and Pembroke), 1; A. J. Peters (St. Peter's, York, and Christ's), 2; F. E. Barrington (Charterhouse and Caius), 3. Won by 35yds. Time, 2mins. 3 2-5secs.

440 Yards Race.—H. Law (Repton and Pembroke) 1; C. V. Brainbridge (Taunton and Downing), 2; H. W. Curtis (Worksop and St. Catherine's), 3. Won by a foot. Time, 54 4-5secs.

OXFORD FRESHMEN'S SPORTS.

Held on the 6th and 9th instant these sports, taken all round, did not read a very high standard.

There were however, one or two performances of merit on the first day the best, perhaps, being in the half-mile, which was won by A. H. Pitman, the Eton College oarsman, who rowed last week in the New College four, in 2mins 3 2.5secs. after a punishing finish with F. G. Dickinson, Rossall and Keble. The last named ran with rather poor judgment at the finish or might have won. J. J. Savage, a South Australian freshman at Brasenose, won his heat of the quarter-mile so easily in 54secs. as to suggest that he will do much better time in the final. The same student won the long jump with a fairly good leap of 20ft. 7in. W. C. Moore, Exeter, the mile Blue, ran splendidly in the open mile but failed, by a dozen yards, to give 80yds. start to the cross-country runner, A. L. Silvester, Jesus, who won in 4mins. 26secs. R. L. Lange, the American Rhodes scholar at St. John's, was at scratch in the open 100yds. but was not fully trained and was beaten by G. H. Shepherd, the 'Varsity second string, who won from 3yds. in 10 2.5secs. Appended are results:—

FIRST DAY.

100 Yards Race.—Heat I.: R. Burdon (Eton and University), 1; A. G. Price (St. Peter's and Magdalen), 2. Won by inches. Time, 11secs. Heat II.: W. T. Palmer (private and Exeter) and F. H. T. Stonex (Rossall and All Souls'), dead heat. Time, 11secs. Heat III.: J. B. S. Notley (Kelly College and Keble), 1; W. G. K. Boswell (Eton and New College), 2. Won by a yard. Time, 11secs.

100 Yards Handicap.—G. H. G. Shepherd (Abingdon and Pembroke), 3yds. 1; R. L. Lange (St. John's), scratch, 2; R. L. Hartley (St. John's), 6yds. 3. Won by 2ft. a yard between second and third. Time, 10 2.5secs.

Putting the Weight.—E. T. Adams (Baylor University, Texas, and Worcester), 33ft. 2in. 1; E. W. Andrews (Uppingham and New College), 32ft. 6in. 2; F. F. Russell (New York University and Brasenose), 30ft. 5in. 3.

Half-mile Race.—A. H. Pitman (Eton and New College), 1; F. G. Dickinson (Rossall and Keble), 2; T. S. Pocock (New College School and New College), 3. Won by 2yds. 20yds. between second and third. Time, 2mins. 3 2.5secs.

Long Jump.—J. J. Savage (Perth, Australia, and Brasenose), 20ft. 7in. 1; V. Davis (Washington and Exeter), 19ft. 10in. 2; R. Burdon (Eton and University), 19ft. 9in. 3.

One Mile Handicap.—A. J. Silvester (Jesus), 80yds. start, 1; E. Gowan Taylor (Durham and Pembroke), 30yds. 2; W. C. Moore (Felsted and Exeter), scratch, 3. Won by 4yds.; 8yds. dividing second and third. Time, 4mins. 26secs.

440 Yards Race.—Heat I.: J. J. Savage (Perth, Australia and Brasenose), 1; R. C. Carritt (Rugby and New College), 2. Won by 11yds. Time, 54secs. Heat II.: W. G. K. Boswell (Eton and New College), 1; F. H. Stonex (Rossall and All Souls'), 2. Won by 2½yds. Time, 54 2.5secs.

SECOND DAY.

THE DELHI DURBAR TOURNAMENT.

13TH HUSSARS vs. GOLCONDA.—This match opened the tournament on Monday and, contrary to all expectation, ended in the defeat of the Golconda combination. The Hussars pressed at the start but missed two shots at goal and before the close of the first chukker Golconda nipped through and opened their account. Play was fairly even in the second period, but Shah Mirza Beg added to the Golconda score. In the third chukker play was fast up and down the field and at length the 13th got away. Vanneck taking the ball down for Lawson Smith to score. Golconda were next prominent and Shah Mirza scored again. Then the 13th were awarded a free hit, as Golconda had hit behind to save, and from the penalty shot Hind scored a goal. After half time Golconda had to hit out from their own line on account of offside. Vanneck got possession and put the teams on terms. The 13th had the best of the next chukker, the sixth, Hind and Vanneck doing good work. Vanneck scored a goal. The 13th continued to show improved form in the seventh period, but though both goals were visited no score was registered. The Golconda team seemed to have gone to pieces in the last period and the 13th scored twice, good combined play by Lawson Smith and Vanneck leading up to both goals. Shortly before time was called Shah Mirza Beg, who was the only one of the Golconda team playing up to his reputation, slipped through and scored.

Final score: 13th Hussars, 6 goals; Golconda, 4 goals. Teams:—

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

ALTHOUGH the wickets were slow, owing to the rain, three centuries have been added this week to the seven already scored, A. McCready of the Customs, A. McAndrew of the Jute Mills United, and C. P. Simpson of the Rangers, joining the list of three figure individual scorers. The bowling was not first class, and the fielding left much to be desired and the trio of batsmen all gave chances, but centuries are seldom made without a blemish. The Customs man invariably scores heavily against weak bowling while his club-mate Quiterio usually gets lots of runs against the best bowlers.

While Calcutta lost both matches last week, the club this week played both games to its credit, beating the United Services at the Gardens by 80 runs, and the Port Commissioners at Garden Reach after an exciting game by 9 runs.

Ballygunge also had out a couple of teams, but the Suburban Club were not favoured by fortune, both matches being lost: Nattore winning by 46 runs, while at Barrackpore the "A" team of Ballygunge lost by 39 runs.

Two of the Calcutta C. C.'s most reliable cricketers who have played for several years will not be seen regularly this season, viz. Hon'ble F. H. Stewart and J. D. Guise and, like E. H. Bray the old Cantab, others are giving up the game. The new blood this year is exceptionally good, and it is seldom we see so many class cricketers in one season. A. J. Carter, A. N. Moore, A. P. Muir and N. W. Chisholm are all above the average and while the former pair are noted for their batting, Muir and Chisholm are all-rounders, Muir by good judges being considered one of the finest bowlers now in Calcutta.

Mr. J. H. Heehle is taking keen interest in the High Court team—a newly formed club, and when the Europeans will be strongly represented, the Law Club should render a good account of themselves.

It is pleasing to note that after a period of four years cricket will be played regularly at Dum Dum; but as the 1st Middlesex have only three Company teams stationed in the little suburban town, the residents of the place should also be invited to play. S. E. A. Whiteway and A. T. Wood are good all-round cricketers and the inclusion of these two will greatly strengthen the side.

In the match between Calcutta and the United Services, the scoring on both sides was very consistent and A. J. Carter who has got quite a lot of runs for the club was the highest individual contributor. He got 75 and although he gave one chance he batted excellently and was particularly strong to the "off." Given-Wilson has not been lucky this year, and after scoring 24 he was caught at short slip, the ball gliding off his wrist. Muir got 28 and Quin 34. It was unfortunate that no fewer than three batsmen should be run out—Carter, Muir and Coleman—all sharing the same fate.

The Services were not a representative side for with the exception of C. P. Beachcroft and another, the rest were Military men. Captain R. N. Bocquet and A. W. Shallow were unable to play, the latter assisting Ballygunge against Nattore. Calcutta closed their innings for 277 which included 30 extras.

The Services commenced batting at noon, on Sunday, but owing to the rain in the early part of the morning the wicket was slow and runs were difficult to get. However, they batted cautiously and were able to total 197. F. F. Brockholes, the Rifles' officer, contributed 33, and F. N. C. Rossiter, of the Garrison Artillery, made 42 in dashing style. F. S. Sheridan, a new comer to Calcutta, also made several good strokes in subscribing 33. With the exception of von Ernsthausen's six wickets for 70 runs, there was nothing very grand in the trundling line, but Muir who maintained a perfect length was difficult to play: he did not, however, meet with much success, only getting one wicket and having two catches dropped off his bowling.

The Ballygunge and Nattore match attracted a large crowd to Ballygunge and a very interesting game resulted in the Maharaja's team winning by 46 runs. On Saturday afternoon Nattore had scored 135 for seven wickets, and as all the best batsmen were out and the wicket on the following morning was in favour of the bowlers it was fully expected that the end was not far off. However, cricket is a most uncertain game, and the remaining three wickets added 52 to the overnight total. K. Roy, an old Town Club player, batted remarkably well for 63, and C. M. Ali, who comes from the Agra College, got a not out 40.

Ballygunge wanted two short of a hundred to win but against the attack of the great Baloo little hopes were entertained of the Suburban Club accomplishing their object, and this impression proved correct, for the Home team were all out for 151. Aziz, another of the Agra College boys, bowled in a most erratic manner and made the ball rise dreadfully high. Marsden in his wildest mood could not be said to be so dangerous. White was hit on three occasions but despite this he carried out his bat for 77, A. W. Shallow 20, A. Gould 14, and C. S. Murray 15 were the other double figures recorded. Baloo, All India's champion bowler, took 8 wickets for 60 runs.

In the Port Commissioners vs. Calcutta match at Garden Reach the start on both sides was good, but the two tails failed to wag. Out of a total of 182 for the Port team, A. E. Pyster was top scorer with 34; L. J. Allen got a not out 32, and H. G. Hilary, A. C. Patterson and T. H. Elderton all made double figures. A. W. Watson for Calcutta took five wickets for 35 runs. Calcutta replied with 191, H. F. Yeoman 87, J. C. Sewell 32, and H. V. Low 27, being the only three to obtain double figures. Teddy Templeton and A. C. Patterson's shared the wickets, the former getting five for 61, while Patterson five cost 35 runs. The wicket keeping on both sides was poor.

In the Customs and Y. M. C. A. match the scoring on both sides was meagre but this was due to the bumpy wicket. The Customs' ground wants badly rolling.

The Y. M. C. A. on Saturday were all out for 58 but the Customs fared only a little better; 90 being registered for eight wickets—and this, after two of the softest catches had been dropped. The Y. M. C. A. fielding was execrable. Quiterio's 33, and Marsden's five wickets for 20 runs were the principal features of the match.

The Town Club had the best of a drawn game with the Rangers, the Indians scoring 120 for six while the Rangers got 83 for seven wickets. J. Bhattacharji batted soundly for 72 For the Rangers Templeton hit well for 28.

Dalhousie also had the worst of a draw with the E. B. S. R. on Saturday, the Railway scoring 117 for six, while Dalhousie lost seven wickets for 62. It is only fair to state that Dalhousie were not at full strength.

The Telegraph beat the Rovers by six wickets on Saturday and a team from Dacca beat the High Court by 83 runs. J. Roy for the winners contributed 101.

In the Barrackpore and Ballygunge match on the former's ground last Sunday a pleasant day was spoiled owing to the nasty drizzling rain. Ballygunge who batted first, started well, three wickets falling for 91, but after this, there was a collapse and the whole side was out for 122. Barrackpore replied with 168. C. M. Pope 44, V. Cooper 37 for Ballygunge; and A. L. Inglis 41, A. M. Sims 25, and C. F. Scroope 30, for Barrackpore were the chief contributors. Captain Lightfoot who did the "hat trick" got in all six wickets for 30 runs, J. R. Coulthard for Ballygunge took three for 28 runs.

At Sunday at Ichapur, the Jute Mills United beat the Home team by five wickets, J. McAndrew hit splendidly for 120. The same day at Howrah the Rangers beat Howrah Sporting by two wickets and C. P. Simpson for the winners contributed 128, Simpson hit vigorously and got in all twenty-four 4's. The Home team made an excellent show however declaring at 206 for six wickets.

The 3rd Middlesex played the sister Battalion at Dum Dum on Sunday, the men from Lebong winning by 4 runs. No officers, however, played in this game.

CRICKET AT LAHORE.

LAHORE GYMKHANA vs. KING'S REGIMENT.—A weak eleven represented the Gymkhana against the King's Regiment on the 23rd instant and were beaten by 156 runs. The Gymkhana batted first and were all out for 126, Hassard, Crofton and Duke being the chief contributors. The military team made 282 Briggs contributing 130—the result of dashing cricket. Score :—

THE DELHI DURBAR TOURNAMENT.

THE Tournament opened on Monday, when two games were down for decision, but the 2nd North Staffords having scratched there was only one match, that between the R.G.A. (6th Division) and the Loyal N. Lancashire Regiment (6th Division). The Lancs did most of the pressing at the start but the Gunners kept them out. A spell of level play followed and then the R.G.A. got away and drew first blood shortly before the interval. On changing ends play was again very even and no advantage was gained till nearing the end the Lancs forced a corner and equalised from the resulting kick. The game thus ended in a draw, but extra time was decided upon and during this period the Lancs found the net. The Gunners tried hard to get on terms again but without success, the Lancs thus qualifying to meet the Durham L. I. in the second round on the 2 th.

AGA KHAN TOURNAMENT, POONA.

THE second of the semi-finals, between the Loyal North Lancs and the Indian Army, ended in an easy win for the former by 5 goals to 1. The Lancs had matters practically their own way from start to finish. They kept the Indian Army busy defending throughout the first half and scored twice. On changing ends they put through again. Then their opponents got away and opened their account, but they were quickly forced back to their own territory again, where the Lancs put on two more goals and won as stated. The Dorsets and the Loyal North Lancs met in the final on the 22nd instant when a splendid game was witnessed. The Lancs were the first to score but the Dorsets equalised soon after and they changed ends with a goal each. The second half produced no score and in spite of extra time no definite result was arrived at. The tie was replayed on Friday last in the presence of a big crowd of spectators. This time the Dorsets asserted their superiority and though the Lancs put up a stubborn fight they had to retire beaten. The Dorsets scored a goal in the first half and two after the interval without reply, thus winning the game and the tournament by 3 goals to nil. At the conclusion of the game Mrs. Rosher, wife of Colonel Rosher, commanding the Dorsets, handed the cup to the winners and General Alderson made a short congratulatory speech.

Lawn Tennis.

WHAT IS AN AMATEUR.

THE Council of the Lawn Tennis Association has been engaged on most interesting work. It has defined an amateur, and a whole lot of the rubbish originally propounded has been wiped out. Even as matters stand, to play a friend for half-a-crown makes both cease to be amateurs, which is absurd. This, however, is a small affair compared with the alterations proposed in the draw for competitors in the singles at Wimbledon. Now, this draw has always been straight. At other tournaments it is commonly seeded. So says the well-known handicapper, Mr. Scrivener in the Field. According to him, and his authority is unimpeachable, the All-England club is seeking to do legally a thing which has been done through the length and breadth of the lawn tennis world for years. If there were any feeling against the practice the players would have objected. The reason why there is no such feeling is two-fold. The leading players realise that if the draw were simply haphazard, then all the best players might cut each other's throats, because they were in the first half of the draw, while those players who are not amongst the first-class derive practice against the best players. They enter to get it, and so they rise by stepping-stones of their dead selves to higher things. And both classes of players quite understand that, unless some such process were generally adopted, public interest in tournaments would rapidly vanish. If you want gate-money, you must not have all the cracks slaying each other in the first few days of a tournament. That would never do. The showman's art has to be brought into action and the draw is seeded. But not at Wimbledon. And there big gates are drawn all though the meeting, and there all the cracks meet. They are not spread over the country at half- a-dozen different meetings.

It is said that if you do not draw as you do at Wimbledon favouritism and chicanery will flourish. The answer is that the Council of the L.T.A. has adopted a plan suggested by Wimbledon—I use that word to define the All-England Tennis Club—which will be submitted to the general meeting. And I cannot see why, with modifications, it should not be applicable to every open tournament. I think it may be assumed that the leading players are themselves in favour of some modification of the present system, otherwise the scheme would not have been propounded. One player may have a series of easy matches up to the semi-final or final, another may have played five or six strenuous games, and find himself at a great physical disadvantage, because he is in one half of the draw and his opponent is in the other half. In other words, the luck of a draw determining once and for all the position of the players may, and often does, affect unfairly the result. Strictly there should be a draw every round, but that is impossible, as players and public want to know where they are, and to make their arrangements accordingly. Now the Wimbledon scheme modifies the luck of the draw by preventing all the best players coming together in one half. These selected competitors are called qualified competitors, and they are distributed over the draw in quarters. This is one by lot, and the method is simplicity itself. It absolutely avoids any possibility of favouritism. For instance, Roper Barrett, and Wilding, if he played through, might meet in the first round. These qualified competitors are champions in the doubles or singles in the last five years, and winners of similar championships in any nation having a recognised L.T.A. and for this purpose each country in the United Kingdom and each colony in the Federal Commonwealth is a separate entity. International players in the last three years, and those who are in the final sixteen of the previous year at Wimbledon, or who, if non-resident, have been in that number during the previous three years, are all qualified competitors. The scheme simply comes to this, that these qualified players are distributed over a draw which is divided into four parts instead of possibly being drawn all in one half. And there is no reason why the same system should not be applied to other tournaments. It would, of course, be impossible to permit a system at Wimbledon which would be forbidden elsewhere. That is clear. At the same time the L.T.A. is issuing a warning notice against the prevalent practice of seeding the draw. Well, the L.T.A. must face facts. Some such process is necessary. It is impossible, as in the case of the Football Association Cup Ties, to have a fresh draw each round. So long as the terms and conditions of the process are approved by the L.T.A. and are known to the public and competitors, there can be absolutely no objection.

So far as Wimbledon is concerned, I believe the effect will be to raise the standard of play. Men will be keen to get into the final sixteen. The luck of the draw may help them, but to get there they will have to be something more than rabbits. I have no doubt a certain number of persons enter because the club gives competitors so much for their money. Any fool can enter and scratch. Some enter to gratify their vanity. It adds enormously to their reputation in the eyes of the vulgar world who are not lawn tennis players. Some years ago I had a journalistic squabble with a certain lawn tennis journalist. My then editor seemed nervous about my future. He asked me, "Did I know that the person in question had played at Wimbledon?" I replied that I did not care, but if the editor would pay my entrance-fee I would play as well, if he thought it would add to the prestige of the staff. He kept his money, and those who really played at Wimbledon gave me ammunition—more than enough. It is very difficult to refuse entries for an open championship. I have no doubt the Wimbledon folk would feel their championships were no longer such as they had been if they were not open urbi et orbi—as well to the suburban slammer as to the rustic lobber. The Wimbledon scheme has been carefully formulated; it is a model of sound draughtsmanship, and one may hope that, in the precedent it may afford, the L.T.A. will find a way out of the very difficult position created by seeding the draw. Verily, necessity compels invention, and Wimbledon has invented.

Boxing.

DELHI DURBAR TOURNAMENT.

The Durbar Tournament opened on Monday, the 27th instant, with the results noted below. The boxing is being held in the fine amphitheatre that has been built to accommodate 7,000 spectators and all the arrangements under the direction of the Honorary Secretary, Captain Stansfield, of the Gordon Highlanders, are tip-top. The entries of warrant, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Regular forces and Volunteers are excellent. There are 6 in the heavy-weights, 47 in the middle, 67 in the light, 57 in the feather, and 49 in the bantam-weights. But the officers' entries are poor—5 in the heavy, 6 in the middle, 5 in the light, and 4 in the feather. Monday's results:—

Bantams.—Pte. Rogers, Essex Regt. beat Pte. Miller, k. o. Dmr. Fairman, Munster Fus. beat Pte. Salmon, Middlesex, k. o.

Feathers.—Pte. Mortimer, 5th Fusiliers, beat Pte. Garish, K.O.S.B.'s, on points. Pte. McGuire beat Sergt. Adams, Gordons, on points. Pte. Coatsworth, 5th Fusiliers, beat Pte. Motoring and Aviation.

MOTOR NOTES.

LONDON, 10th November 1911.

It would be decidedly wrong of me to pass without dealing fully with the great Motor Show which is being held in London. This Exhibition which was organised by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders is so thoroughly representative of every phase of the pleasure car industry as to be more justly titled "International" than any preceding one held in Britain, or any other country in the world. Whatever may be the case with respect to motor vehicles produced either in the Eastern or Western hemispheres, London forms a natural centre towards which there inevitably gravitates all the newest designs and models. The greatest city in the British Empire is now universally recognised, not only by our own, but also by foreign manufacturers, as the leading market, consequently the annual display brings together the very finest collection of vehicles that can be arranged under one roof. The current Exhibition contains chassis or complete cars from practically all the renowned British and European factories, together with a larger number of cars from the United States than has previously been seen in England. Here it is possible for experts to compare new features, note advanced ideas in constructional details and realise the fact that the wonderful array represents the most startling business development in the world's history. A little more than a decade has sufficed to convince sceptics that the motor car is something more than an engineering fancy, and to-day it would be difficult to estimate how much the affairs of the Kingdom are interwoven with the self-propelled road vehicle. Solely through the car, road construction is being revolutionised, hitherto remote corners of the country are brought within close range, interest in rural life has revived, and concurrently new outlets for trade have been created.

Year after Year, opinion has been expressed that cars have reached the stage when various makers' productions must be so much alike as to preclude close observers from discovering any material advance. Yet inventive faculty never ceases, and it is safe to affirm that the 1911 Show is the most interesting of the series. Without exception, the older factories each emulate the other in staging machines embodying clever departures from previous practice. Without attempting to particularise, it is sufficient to indicate that the engine design has materially advanced in the last twelve months and no man dare predict in what direction further improvement will tend, for the wonder of to-day becomes the commonplace of to-morrow. Frames, gearing, the transmission, brakes, ignition, carburetters, wheels, tyres, and in fact all the details combined in the modern car, have received attention. It is a mistake, however, to suppose that the Exhibition is intended to attract wealthy purchasers. The annually increasing attendance of visitors testifies otherwise, and more than ever it is possible for all classes of the community to find there some car which will exactly accord with financial limitations. The chassis, costing many hundreds of pounds, stands besides others costing a tenth part of that sum and there can be no question of doubt that both are equally worth their selling prices. Between those limits there is such a choice of intervening figures that the man must indeed be hard to please who cannot find something to meet with his approval. Many of the smaller powered vehicles are now in such demand, that manufacturers can standardise both chassis and up-to-date body work, to an extent deemed impossible at a recent period, and are thus able to offer complete cars,—reliable and presentable—at prices within the reach of modest incomes. In fact, money never commanded such value before.

I will now describe minutely the trend of improvement.

Frames.—Pressed steel frames are now in such universal use, that any alteration in shape and arrangement is not really wanted, nor hardly expected.

Engines.—Although four and six cylinder engines are supplied by many manufacturers, the single cylinder and twin patterns not only maintain previous popularity, but seem likely to receive recruits from factories that have not hitherto been able to encourage these types from lack of space. Noiseless non-stretching chains for driving magnetos, water pumps and cam shafts so successfully eliminate sound, that electricity can no longer be claimed as the only quiet prime mover. Engine lubrication was once upon a time haphazard and unreliable, what with the time and trouble of drip feeds and fear of seized bearings through want of oil. To-day the motorist replenishes the oil supply less frequently than the petrol tank and if too much or too little be given, simple tell-tale devices instantly acquaint him with the position. For one mile or a thousand miles, the engine automatically lubricates its bearings and prevents smoke emission. Automatic carburetters produce gas of a quantity and quality according to the requirements of the moment, and are now at such a state of perfection that fuel consumption is probably at least 25 per cent. less than in 1906.

Clutches and Gears.—Clutches remain pretty much the same as they were, the leather-faced cone type again finding favour, and it can be remarked that where alterations in clutch design are manifest, increase of diameter is about the only improvement possible. Epicyclic gearing continues on a few cars, its simplicity of control naturally appealing to users. The larger proportion of vehicles in the Exhibition are fitted with what is best described as the "Standard" pattern gear box, in which sliding gear wheels are automatically selected and locked in position for any desired speed through the agency of the lever. Gear changing is made simpler than ever by improved machine tools, for cutting the teeth of the wheel shortening them in large diameter ball bearings. The advantages helps to reduce noise when the low gears are in operation. Demand for greater flexibility on control, response from the manufacturers in the form of speed gear boxes, enabling a better average speed to be maintained in hilly districts. Leakage of lubricant is another important detail which has received attention and by fitting oil-tight glands at the ends of the gear shafts, one filling of oil, or the compound recommended by each manufacturer, suffices for several weeks running.

Transmission.—Final transmission viâ a propeller shaft and bevel or worm drive to a rear live axle, constitutes practice so universally accepted that but a small fraction of cars are now chain driven. Personal choice must decide the conflicting claims between bevel and worm, for each type possesses particular advantages and the exponents of both can best explain their merits. One feature hardly allowing for argument is the tendency to keep the propeller shaft horizontal when the car is full of passengers, in order to avoid wear at the universal joints which are now invariably interposed between the gear box and rear axle. Whether the driving worm must be placed above or below the driven worm-wheel concerns only the manufacturer, because the results of experiments prove that either form is equally applicable.

Brakes are now so absolutely dependable that provided occasional attention is given to their adjustment, the steepest hills can be negotiated without fear of mishap. Comfort for passengers, on cheap as well as expensive cars, in the way of beautifully sprung chassis hardly allows for further improvement, yet in addition of the many patterns of shock absorbers, now marketed, makes cars so fitted travel with the luxurious smoothness of a river-borne boat. Detachable wheels and dismountable rims are perfected to such a stage that punctured tyres no longer need delay progress for more than a few minutes.

The modern car is so reliable, requires such a small amount of attention to maintain in perfect running order, and has its control movements simplified to such a degree, that any intelligent person has little else to do but steer and use the brakes. Expert attention, except for unusual mishaps, is unnecessary and those unacquainted with mechanical matters are, through the continued efforts of manufacturers in a position to purchase and drive with the assurance that the investment will produce unlimited enjoyment.

The Turner Petrol Cars Limited of Wolverhampton, have just placed on the market a new 10 H. P. vehicle which is particularly suitable for India. It has been the fruits of four of England's best mechanics, who have been working quietly for the past four years in perfecting a motor car which would be without the ordinary faults which the user has to contend with. It is needless to say that their efforts have been crowned with success, and it would be to the purchasers own advantage to reap the benefit of so many years' study. The car is being offered at a very moderate price, and can be delivered at Calcutta at a little over £200. A card to them will bring you the specification which will convince you of the value given.

Some few motorists and others, who were once cyclists, but who had not been astride a wheel for years, have declared to me that on returning to the bicycle and taking a spin, they felt quite "used up" and thought wheeling really hard work. Now a beginner in cycling does not reach so parlous a stage, and the

Assuming that fancy pattern treads are good, why shouldn't the idea be elaborated.

Here are a few suggestions. None of the accompanying designs is copyrighted, and we give any tyre manufacturer free permission to adopt either one or all of them. What splendid advertising points they would afford!

The "Veto" pattern all rubber non-skid, for instance, would make, for political motorists, an excellent souvenir of the great fight; and "national emblem" tyres would undoubtedly have a large sale.

Why do you fit your wheels with fancy pattern tyres?

To prevent skidding and breaking your neck.

After about one thousand miles, however, the pattern is worn flat and your safety is problematical.

The question resolves itself into this: if grooves and knobs are useful, they must last until the tyre, and not yourself, is defunct. But the trouble is, they don't. Therefore, solve the difficulty by purchasing a Michelin "Semelle" Non-Skid.

If, on the other hand, all sculptural effects are useless, why fit such tyres? Better by far buy a Michelin Square Tread, which lasts longer and always gives satisfaction.

Car-Lighting by Electricity.

Pioneer experience and expert knowledge have produced a dynamo car-lighting plant that is a triumph of simplicity.

This is not the least remarkable feature that compels admiration; appreciation is felt for its extreme lightness and compactness.

All the bugbears of previous systems have been entirely eliminated: many real improvements embodied. Thus the outfit is marked by a degree of efficiency, and reliability, never yet equalled by any existing plant.

We had the first word on the subject, and were determined to have the last in practical car-lighting outfits. This has been effectually secured in the new system. Therefore no car, however luxurious, is complete without it.

The dynamo complete can be supplied from £7 10s.

DYNAMO LIGHTING SYSTEM.

reason is that he cannot mount a machine right away, and pedal a dozen or twenty miles. During the noviciate, he practically undergoes a mild course of training, and by that time he is expert enough to go abroad he knows pretty well what he can do, and, generally, is elated that he can do so much. The old time rider although he may have been away from the bicycle for years, does not forget the art of wheeling, no more than a man forgets the art of swimming, after having once learned. Hence, mounted on the machine and having once picked the knack of balancing away he goes for a 10 or 15 miles ride in no better condition than the youth who is just about to learn how to ride. His muscles are soft and unused to the work he gives them, and it is no wonder they rebel. He should have first pottered around on a low gear, and accustomed his limbs to the new—that is, the old—exercise before attempting what was once to him a very easy task.

DURING the recent strikes in England owners of motor vehicles both commercial and private, were faced with the very serious possibility that their cars would in a short time be put out of use owing to the difficulty, and, in some cases impossibility of obtaining sufficient petrol supplies. The condition of the labour world even now is such that it gives rise to a certain amount of anxiety, and, to avoid the state of things that prevailed during the last strikes, it is being strongly urged by several of the principal motor manufacturers that, where possible, arrangements should be made for securing and carrying an ample stock of petrol. It is proverbial, that the public memory is short, but the lesson conveyed by the last strike and the serious results it would have had if it had lasted longer, should be sufficient to forewarn motorists against being left with a small stock of spirit.

AVIATION NOTES.

I AM informed by the Honorary Secretary of the Kite and Model Aeroplane Association that a Volunteer Motor Man-lifting Kite and Wireless Telegraph Corps is about to be founded. This corps will be provided with most modern equipment, including a motor man-lifting outfit with winding gear and 25-H.P. petrol engine on a motor chassis which will be capable of carrying sixteen men, besides officers and drivers. The kite equipment will be of the Cody type.

"HOLES IN THE AIR" of which Aviators complain, are thus described by Der Motor-wagen. If an aeroplane is going against the wind with small speed, relatively to the earth, and thence suddenly runs into a current which crosses its path or into a quiet section of the atmosphere, its speed is insufficient to uphold it and it drops and, if the motor power and propulsion are not strong enough to produce a rapid increase of momentum or if the aeroplane is too near the earth, the drop is likely to prove fatal.

M. GUSTAV HAMEL made a plucky attempt to fly from Hardelot, near Boulogne, to Hendon recently. He was just frustrated by the fog having to abandon flight for the day at Webly. He had arranged to take a new 70 H.P. Bleriot Two Seater Monoplane from Hardelot to Hendon, and, starting from the French coast, he crossed the channel at a height of from 5,000 to 6,000 feet. M. Hamel encountered fog all the way, and as he progressed, it became so dense that he descended to a certain where he was, and found himself at Maidstone. Restarting, he steered for London by compass, and followed the course of the Thames as far as the Ealing district. Then he struck out for Hendon, but the fog caused him to descend again, when he alighted in a large field near Webly. The distance in a direct line is about 100 miles, but the aviator must have covered at least 130 miles.

THE question of danger arising from the navigation of aircraft over the River Thames was discussed at a recent meeting of the Conservators. The Finance and General Purpose Committee recommended that the Home Secretary be asked to issue an order prohibiting flights over the Thames on the occasion of Regattas, or at other times when numbers of persons congregate on the river and its banks. The recommendation was agreed to.

OF the two fatal flights I have to record this week it is to be noticed that both are foreigners. The first, an aviator named Eugene Fogabare fell last week while flying at the State Fair grounds at Macon, Georgia, U.S.A. He died whilst being conveyed to the hospital. The second is a German aviator named Tashs, lost his life at Schneverdringen near Hanover, last Saturday in the course of a trial flight on a monoplane of his own construction. It is stated that the airman was blinded by the sun, and, not seeing where he was going, flew against the side of a low hill, where the machine overturned.

IT is stated that the Dutch Government has acquired three aeroplanes for use of the Home army, and six for service in the East Indies. At the recent Dutch military manoeuvres, Van Meel accompanyed by Van Heyst, was daily reconnoitering on a Henry Farman bi-plane, and was able to obtain the most minute information as the movements of the opposing force's troops. Laboschere also did some excellent work on one of the latest types of Zodiac bi-plane.

LORD RENDALE, during the course of his annual presidential address, at a recent meeting of the Royal Photographic Society said, that to the Great Leonardo da Vinci, mathematics were the common metre of all science and arts. Not only did he anticipate many later discoveries, but he was also a pioneer of aviation. It was along this line that his most absorbing experiments were carried out. For thirty years at Milan and Rome he laboured upon flying machines, inventing a parachute. He saw that if men were to fly, it must be by some means similar with those with which the bird was endowed, and the only thing he needed to perfect the accomplishment in this direction was a motor.

THE annual meeting of the British Aerial League was held in London on the 18th ultimo, Mr. B. S. Straus, who was in the chair, said that during the last twelve months much greater advances have been witnessed than ever the most sanguine supporters of the movement dare to prophesy. The public was at the stage of taking a more thoughtful interest in Aerial Navigation: but apart from the experimenting with the craft at Farnborough, a few aeroplanes of various types and ages, and the four new Valkyre machines, Great Britain has nothing to show as an offset to the great activity shown by our neighbours.

MR. SOMMER made an aeroplane flight on the 18th ultimo carrying no less than six passengers on his machine. He flew from Rheims to the military camp at Chalons and back in fifty-five minutes, a distance of about thirty-eight miles.

THE SECUNDERABAD HORSE SHOW.

17th and 18th November 1911.

THE Annual Show was held to-day and was a complete success. Entries were good and most of the exhibits were of very good quality. Captain Meynell, who is well known in the Poona racing world, was most successful. Captain Mathew Lannowe was also among the winners and we hear he is getting some new ones shortly from Home. Major Lawrence, 14th Hussars, was also showing good ponies, and one in particular, the Lady, ridden by Captain W. S. Dayrell, was a beautiful mare exhibiting much quality and her rider showed her off exceedingly well. A report would be incomplete without a reference to the excellent riding of Captain Lush-Wilson, R. H. A., and also that of Mrs. Wilfrid Dayrell. Results:—

WIFE: "If you come home drunk again I'll never speak to you as long as I live." Hubby—"You sh-sh-shouldn't put temptation in my way, my dear."

"I WOULD die for my country," he exclaimed dramatically. "Well," she replied quietly, "I've no doubt your country would appreciate it." Then he got mad.

"IT'S a perfect shame," said the young wife, fretfully, "the careless way the tailor sewed this button on! This is the fifth time I've had to sew it on for you."

"No man can serve two masters," said the priest to one of his parishioners. "I know that, yer riverance. Me brother tried it, and now he's doing time for bigamy."

A commendable feature about Lemco is its marvellous "keeping properties." Even in the tropics opened jars keep absolutely fresh and pure. This phenomenon is not due to preservatives, but to beef purity and perfect concentration. Food reliability reaches its topmost point in Lemco. Replace the cork to keep out dust.

ROYAL INTEREST IN NATURAL HISTORY.

From early days the Royal Family of England has taken an interest in natural history. To say nothing of the old Royal menagerie at the Tower of London, it may be mentioned that in 1762 Queen Charlotte was presented with a South Africa zebra brought from the Cape by Sir Thomas Adams in the Terpsichore man-of war, and subsequently preserved with great care at Windsor ; this animal being not improbably the first of its kind ever brought to England.

Again, King George IV received in 1827 a present of a Nubian giraffe from Mohamed Ali, Pasha of Egypt, which was likewise kept at Windsor, where, however, it unfortunately survived only for a short time. This was the first live giraffe which arrived in England, and also one of the first four imported into Europe in modern times. It is believed that George IV had other wild animals in the home park at Windsor.

Although Queen Victoria does not appear to have taken any very strong interest in natural history, she nevertheless presented a white kangaroo to the British Museum, which is still exhibited in the Natural History branch of that institution.

King Edward VII, on the other hand, displayed a very marked interest in animals ; and for many years before he came to the throne was a Trustee of the British Museum, and whenever possible attended the meetings of that body. Not that he contented himself with simply attending these meetings ; for on several occasions, accompanied by the Director, he made a tour of inspection of the exhibition galleries, and on at least one of these took the opportunity of expressing his views as to the arrangement of certain specimens.

As is well known, his late Majesty brought home a large number of Indian animals on his return from his visit to India in the middle seventies ; and the mounted skin of one of these—the elephant Jung Pershad—is exhibited at the present day in the British Museum. Unfortunately, this animal is a mukna ; and it would be a graceful act if one of the great Indian Princes would present to the British Museum the complete skin, skull, and tusks of a wild tusker as a memorial of their present Majesties' visit to their Indian Empire.

King Edward had a considerable collection of big game trophies, including a couple of fine American moose heads and wapiti heads exhibited in the British section of the Vienna Sports Exhibition, of which by the way, the official description and illustrated catalogue has just been issued in London as a Government blue book. Whether or not these particular trophies fell to his Majesty's own rifle, history sayeth not ; but as Prince of Wales, the late King was highly successful as a big game sportsman in India ; while, as quite a young man, he had the rare privilege of shooting a fine bull from the herd of so called wild white cattle kept by Lord Tankerville at Chillingham Park, Northumberland.

On ascending the throne, King Edward presented to the British Museum three heads of Spanish draught-cattle from Osborne ; these being from animals given to Queen Victoria by the Empress Eugenie. His Majesty also presented a wild boar from Windsor forest ; it having been decided to exterminate a herd of these animals which had been introduced during the previous reign, on account of their interfering with shooting, and being otherwise inconvenient tenants. Almost at the close of his life his late Majesty also presented to the national collection the skeleton and a cast of the head of his famous Derby winner Persimmon, where both—after a visit to Vienna—are now exhibited to the public among the other domesticated animals.

It remains to add that during his too brief occupancy of the throne, King Edward was Patron of the Zoological Society of London, in the welfare and progress of which he always exhibited a strong interest. His present Majesty King George V followed his father's footsteps in serving as a Trustee of the British Museum during the years that he was Prince of Wales, and likewise in becoming Patron of the Zoological Society after he had ascended the throne.

During his first visit to India, as Prince of Wales, His Majesty caused the skeleton of an Indian elephant to be sent to the British Museum. He has also shot big game in many parts of the world, his contributions to the Vienna exhibition including heads of musk ox, caribou, and rusa stag. The latter animal, which far exceeds in size the specimens in the British Museum, was shot by His Majesty in Mauritius, where the species has been introduced from Java, its native home. Probably few British sportsmen have a representative of this fine deer in their collections of trophies. King George has also, we believe, shot red deer in New Zealand.

His Majesty's interest in natural history has been especially shown in connection with the "King's Collection" of South African animals during the past summer in the London Zoological gardens ; the animals having been collected and presented to the King as a memorial of the accomplishment of the Union of South Africa.

Her Majesty Queen Mary has likewise displayed her interest in natural history by paying, when Princess of Wales, at least one informal visit, accompanied by one of the Princes, to the Natural History branch of the British Museum. During the visit referred to, her guide was somewhat surprised at being asked if there was a specimen of Russell's viper on exhibition ; and although the exhibited collection of snakes is at present small, this particular species fortunately happened to be included. On the other hand, when the Royal visitor asked to see an Indian civet, it had to be confessed that there was none on exhibition. These two instances serve to shew Her Majesty's practical acquaintance with the natural history of the countries she has visited.

When the Prince of Wales comes of age, it may be hoped that he will follow in the steps of his father and grandfather by accepting a seat on the Board of Trustees of the British Museum, and thus publicly shew that he maintains the Royal interest in the natural history of the Empire and the world in general.

"So he said I was a polished gentleman, did he?" "Well, yes; it was the same thing, I suppose." "Ah, what were the exact words?" "He said you were a slippery fellow."

Mother-in-law: "If I knew that the weather would be good, I would stay a few days longer." Wife (quietly to her husband)—"Don't you dare monkey with that barometer!"

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The following Stewards of the C. T. C. have proceeded to Delhi for the Durbar: Mr. A. A. Apcar, Sir Allan Arthur, The Hon. Mr. C. H. Kesteven and Mr. D. B. Myers. The following gentlemen have been appointed to act as Stewards of the Turf Club in conjunction with Mr. G. B. Deakin, namely, Mr. A. G. H. Macpherson, Mr. G. B. Paris, Mr. R. H. A. Gresson and Major Hayes. The first three gentlemen are all former Stewards of the C. T. C. and Major Hayes is at present second in command of the battalion of the Middlesex Regiment now quartered in Calcutta.

The Calcutta Racing Season 1911-12 opened on Saturday last when the First Extra Meeting was run and a very interesting day's sport was witnessed giving promise of better things to come. The course and stands were looking their best, the former being in very good order after the rain, which greatly assisted the "artificial rainfall," and the latter and their appendages and appurtenances in the way of weighing-room, tea-rooms, etc., were redolent of new paint and polish ready for the great event of the season, the visit of Their Majesties in January. The grass course, according to the Clerk of the Course, is apt to get too soft if it is much watered, but in our opinion it is impossible for this course ever to err on this side and that the only possible way is to keep it in a perpetually soft state, for the moment that watering ceases the hard clay subsoil binds and renders everything as hard as the high road. We are told that the damage done is difficult to repair when the course is soft, but this should surely be possible of circumvention and it is hardly necessary to note the fact that India is not the only place where courses get cut up by being raced upon and are subsequently repaired. It would be better to have a course cut up and soft than a course cut up and hard and we conceive that it might be possible by putting on extra labour to so minimise any damage that may be done as to make it negligible. Every year as the racing season in Calcutta commences we come back to our old plaint for a straight five-furlong course and every season with clockwork regularity we get reports of the badness of the present five furlongs. The Calcutta course is now good compared to what it used to be, but that still leaves it a long way off what we ought to have! The five-furlong course in Calcutta is in our opinion dangerous and the frequent complaints made by jockeys of the bumping and crossing at the start are by no means without foundation. The five-furlong starting post is practically on a bend and the consequence is that the only chance horses that have drawn outside numbers have is to go for the rails as early as possible. The result is that before they reach the half mile there has been a desperate scrimmage and many a horse's winning chance has been entirely extinguished.

A very bad case in point happened on Saturday when a good half of the competitors in the Beginners' Plate were knocked out of their stride and some of them brought on to their noses, by one of the horses with an outside number coming across the moment the gate went up. The Stewards very properly carpetted the jockey who was in fault, but this is not a solitary case and it always happens in a greater or lesser degree at the start for these short races. In the six-furlong races things are not quite so bad, but even so they have only a furlong and a half to go before they are on to the turn.

The Stewards have apparently accepted defeat in the matter of obtaining a straight five-furlong course on account of the difficulties which it presents, but we are not prepared to regard these difficulties as insuperable. No course of the pretensions of Calcutta in the United Kingdom is without its one-mile straight, and although our difficulties here are somewhat great and a close view of the finish of the five-furlong contests might not be obtainable from all the present stands there is no reason why another stand should not be erected! The pull-up could be arranged for at the sacrifice of some of the present paddock space and the rearrangement of the training paddock and portion of the present paddock. The weighing room and other offices would doubtless have to be removed to some other location, but the situation is not in our opinion hopeless, and we deem no sacrifices too great to obtain a thing that is virtually a necessity. We much doubt whether a course with such a dangerous five furlongs as Calcutta would obtain a license in England, and if this view were pointed out to the authorities who hold sway over the Calcutta maidan and from whom the C. T. C. hold their permission to race on Crown lands, we do not anticipate that there would be any difficulties placed in the way. It is a pity that when so many great improvements have been made in this course of late years it should lack one very great essential. The round course is not an ideal one even now, for there are bad turns and there is a very short run-in, a fact upon which English jockeys riding here for the first time have commented, but it is far from a bad course and probably the best obtainable under present conditions. If it were possible to alter it from its present shape of an irregular triangle to something more resembling an irregular circle, it would obviously be better, but hemmed in as it is with public thoroughfares this is not, we fear, feasible. A straight five furlongs, however, is feasible and it is to be hoped that the Stewards will sooner or later reopen this matter and reconsider the scheme.

Fields at the First Extra were moderately good in all bar the pony hurdle race, the Zeerut Plate, which provided an uninteresting contest between three, Ruling Passion, a red hot favourite at odds on, never having the result in any doubt and winning all the way with top weight up, 11st. 8lb.; Lacrosse, who was ridden with great determination, made an onslaught on the winner five furlongs from home, but when he found that Ruling Passion was impervious he was eased. The place money on the challenger was in the soup as Edwards came up with a rattle in the last few yards and shot Lacrosse a short head for second honours. Out of the seven left in the Lilliputian Plate there were only two backed, Circus Girl, who went from level money to odds on and enjoyed the full confidence of her owner, and The Point. There was also a little money for the new one of Tom Scott's, Dulcimer, and those who took two's about it for a place were not far wrong for it got there, beating Circus Girl half a length. The Point made every yard of the running and won comfortably. The winner started at 2 to 1 and these odds were practically the same as those returned by the totalisator. The machine almost invariably returns the bookmakers' prices about a favourite. The tote price for a place however was not quite the same as the ring for the books were taking 2 to 1 and a Rs. 10 investment a place showed the gorgeous profit of one rupee!

The Beginners Plate was next on the list and was the race that evoked most interest of the whole six on the card. When Langton was scratched there was a set in favour of four of them, Goldseeker and Koonowla coming in first of all for most notice ; then a stable commission came into the ring for Airman, and last of all they went for Jemima, the new mare owned by Mr. Roy Chowdhury, and the public rushed to get on her when it was seen that the owner was having some. Jemima started a firm favourite at twos. They were a good looking lot in the paddock take them all round and perhaps the finest looking colt of the lot was "Mr. Holmes'" Orange Pekoe, a beautiful big chestnut by Mackintosh out of Lady Principal. Goldseeker is also a very neat and well-coupled colt and Koonowla has plenty of good looks, but we are inclined to think that he is a knave. Airman is not quite ready and the same may be said of many others—Orange Pekoe, Whin, Picnic, Alpheus, etc. It was in this race that there was such a bad scrimmage at the start, Chin Chin being the offender and she badly bumped Koonowla, Airman, Goldseeker and others. The winner was also interfered with but after a furlong got away from Chin Chin and secured the rails, winning at the finish fairly easily by three-quarters of a length. The Stewards cautioned J. Davis who rode Chin Chin. Airman was so badly bumped that he never got on his legs at all and Goldseeker also was interfered with. Koonowla, who likewise had a rough passage, either could not, or would not, go to his horses after it.

In the Criterion Plate also there was a bad case of bumping and boring, but in this instance it cost the offender, Eustace, his position. Cherry Hackle was a good favourite and there was also a good deal of money for Black Douglas, who was at one time at 2 to 1. Sperry was then backed by the stable connections but the bulk of the money was all through the piece for Cherry Hackle. In the race Eustace, a big lump of a colt, came up amongst them at the finish and after first of all knocking Cherry Hackle about and crossing her badly, bored Black Douglas out across the course. Sperry had the inside running and escaped the big bay colt's attentions and won comfortably by three lengths. We doubt whether the result would have been any different even had Eustace not knocked the favourite about, for when Robinson asked her the question she could not respond and Sperry won full of running. An objection was of course inevitable and Eustace was promptly outed, Black Douglas being placed second and Cherry Hackle third.

In the Pony Plate another favourite went down and Mr. Galstaun's Village Maid, who had the call of the market all through, was badly left and was never in the hunt. Mauveron and Kiora were in front all the way, the latter, a weedy little thoroughbred pony by Footbolt out of Locket, winning comfortably from the big chestnut Mauveron by two and a half lengths. Mauveron is a good stamp of "pony" and is very well measured. We expect to see it score before the meetings are out.

Out of the dozen left in the last race on the card, the Club Plate, Black Douglas, Warrayure, Tana and Hamara were struck out and Langton was promptly installed a firm favourite despite the fact that he was reckoned to be short of work. With 8st. 3lb. however and taking into consideration the two-year-old form he showed against such good things as Hair Trigger II, Borrow, Meleager, etc., it looked good enough. A Bombay commission came over by wire to back him and it first of all looked as if he were going to have things all to himself, but another commission came into the ring for the hurdler Bachelor's Knot, a recent winner in Poona, and when the volumes closed on the race there was very little to pick between him and Langton. Langton was away first and made all the running till close home, when Bachelor's Knot tackled him and Lady Erna also ranged up alongside him. Superior condition told and coming away beyond the distance post A. Hoyt had no difficulty in scoring on Bachelor's Knot by two lengths from the favourite. This gallop will do Langton a lot of good and we shall expect to see him reverse the positions on Saturday next in the Maiden Horse Plate, for he is a considerably better class horse than his vanquisher. This brought the proceedings to a close.

As regards "futures" there is not much in the way of information to add to what is already in our reader's possession. On Saturday last there was a good deal of fast work done and both Mr. Apcar's cracks, Mayfowl and Vavasor, went a good strong working gallop round the course. Mayfowl had a light weight up and many people thought that Vavasor held all the honours at the finish. He certainly went well, but Mayfowl, as has already been noted, is not a horse that ever shows them a gallop and we were personally more than satisfied with the way in which he finished. We still hold to our opinion that there is more than a doubt as to whether Vavasor will stand and we are by no means persuaded that he is going to do so. The principal opposition to Mr. Apcar's horse will, we think, be eventually found to come from Black Buck and Aborigine with Last Call as a very possible danger, if he shows any signs of coming back to form, a thing he has so far failed to do. On Saturday Bleach sent the horse a good mile with old Master Delaval to lead him in his work and he moved in excellent style and is looking very bright and hard, but beyond that we cannot go, for he does not show any great turn of speed. A public performance is the only thing that can settle it one way or the other. Black Buck, who has been sold to Messrs. "Heather" and Jones was attended on Saturday morning by Santoinette and they were credited with having galloped the mile on the litter in 1-42. The big black gelding was going very well indeed and galloped in very resolute style. It is a notable thing how often the Viceroy's Cup form of the preceding year is repeated and we shall not be at all surprised to see this occur this year. Black Buck we think must be close up to the front if all goes on well with him. Aborigine was sent a working pace mile with Devereux and moves well, and he has improved since he has been here, but those who know him and who saw him run in Poona are fonder of his chance in the Trials than in the Cup. Nevertheless, fit and well he cannot possibly be disregarded for the long dart. Prince Rupert and Maria Farina were sent along in earnest for a mile and we did not like the way Prince Rupert finished and he did not to our thinking seem to be putting it all in. Maria Farina on the other hand was distinctly attractive. They say she is not sound, but if they can get her to the post sound on King's Cup day she will in our idea take some beating if she has any sort of luck in the handicap. Retort went a working pace mile ridden by P. Brown and attracted a good deal of attention. She is looking better than she has ever yet done since she has been in the country and she is apparently quite sound and well again as she moves particularly freely and they do not seem to be afraid of giving her plenty of it. Last of all there is Wave Bird. This horse is somewhat under a cloud at the moment. Fergusson is going very easy with him when to all appearances the one thing he wants most is work, for he is decidedly too big and in no racing shape at the moment. It is said that they have been swimming him. He certainly is not lame as he was out on the course on Monday morning doing cantering exercise and was perfectly sound; but time is very short now and he has far too much top hamper for our liking. Those who knew the horse at home say that he will never win races in his present shape. It is probable that we shall see both him and Prince Rupert out in a race or two before the day and it will therefore be better to suspend our verdict till after that event. At present, however, it is impossible to give either Wave Bird or Prince Rupert a winning chance in the Viceroy's Cup, the former has not had time enough and he is far too heavily topped a horse to make it safe to try and hurry him. Prince Rupert we have no faith in and shall be surprised if he wins a race at all this season.

The final entries for the Viceroy's Cup are not numerous and only number five, Black Douglas, Brogue, Hilarity, Master Delaval and Black Buck, and with the exception of the last named they do not in any way materially alter the previous complexion of affairs. Black Buck's entry was expected but the others are entered principally because with so many of the prominent competitors under suspicion it is quite on the cards that the race might go to some unthought of outsider.

The second entries for other important races at the first meeting are :—

The King Emperor's Cup.—R. C.

Mr. R. Craig McKerrow's br e m Once Again (5 yrs.)
Mr. T. M. Thaddeus' ch e m Wayward and Wild (5 yrs.)
Mr. Kelso's br e m Hilary (5 yrs.)
Thakur Sripal Singh's b e m Mayfly IV (4 yrs.)
Chief of Manavada's b aus g Realm (6 yrs.)
Mr. J. Crawford's b e g Bachelor's Knot (4 yrs.)
Messrs. Heather and Jones' br e m Santoinette (5 yrs.)
Messrs. Heather and Jones' bk aus g Black Buck (6 yrs.)

The Indian Grand National.—About 3 miles.

Capt. A. Brough's b aus g Mahoney Bay (aged.)
Mr. Cowper's br e m Maisonette (aged.)
There are no second entries for the Trials.

As H. H. the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab is not giving the usual cup for the Lieutenant-Governor's Cup race this year, this race, subject to the approval of the C.T.C. Stewards, will be abandoned and the following race substituted :—

The Arab Derby—Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second and Rs. 50 to the third. 1 mile. A high-weight handicap for Arab ponies 14-1 and under. Entrance—First and Final Rs. 15, to close on 15th December; extra for ponies not struck out by 12 noon the day before the race.

The third entries for the Lucknow Army Cup, closed on the 1st December, are three :—Captain J. L. Mansel's Good Shot 13-3½, Captain E. Lloyd's No Trumps, and Mr. E. G. Weldon's Sheraz 14-0.

It is seldom indeed that one hears of an angry demonstration on an English race-course directed against the management of the fixture. At Leicester, on the 13th November, because an extra rail prevented customers from betting with the bookmakers in the far side enclosure, they expostulated in no uncertain manner, massing on the course, with the war-cry: "No racing!" The demonstration, which stretched half-way across the straight below the winning-post, had only a few policemen and one mounted constable to control it, and breaking through, the public raided the ring, landing over the rails, while a smaller number invaded Tattersall's.

The situation demanded diplomatic dealing, and with cheers the crowd, who had paid their shillings, were allowed to fill the vacated enclosure without further course. The victory was with the mutineers, many getting double their value, while those who invaded the rings on the stand side reaped an enormous advantage. An amicable settlement was more satisfactory than would have been a fracas, and the malcontents got their way, as the obnoxious railing was removed next day.

The Bombay Natural History Society in December last issued a special appeal for funds to enable them to carry out a systematic collection of the animals of India, Burma and Ceylon, and they have obtained up to now some Rs. 23,000, which includes a grant-in-aid of £100 from the Trustees of the British Museum. Several of the Indian Princes, including H. H. the late Nizam of Hyderabad, H. H. the Maharaja Scindia, the Maharajas of Mysore, Bikanir, Baroda and Cutch, have also forwarded handsome donations. The work of collection has already been begun. The first collector, Mr. Crump, started in East Khandesh, the Berars, Cutch, and is now steadily working the Central Provinces. The second collector engaged by the Society, Mr. G. C. Shortridge, arrived from England a fortnight ago and is hard at work in the Dharwar district. Mr. Shortridge was one of the members of the recent expedition to New Guinea promoted by the British Ornithological Union and, as he has had experience in collecting also in Java, Australia, South Africa, the West Indies and Central America, the Society is to be congratulated on obtaining Mr. Shortridge's services. We understand that what the Bombay Natural History Society particularly desires is specimens of the smaller mammals which have never been systematically collected and which are usually not noticed by sportsmen when shooting big game. The Society desires, of course, to obtain everything from the size of an elephant down to a mouse, but as the larger animals are fairly well known, the necessity for collecting them is not so important. Donations are still desired by the Society in order to enable them thoroughly to carry out their scheme, as the work will take probably three years or more to complete owing to the enormous area to be covered. A large number of specimens have already been forwarded to the British Museum, South Kensington, for identification and the descriptions will in due course appear in the Society's Journal.

It is now recognised that the matter of diet is one that affects everyone in a greater or lesser degree. Most of the ills from which mankind suffer may be attributed to errors of diet, and there is today a greater demand, than at any other time, for a preparation that is sustaining and nourishing, and at the same time appetising.

Such is the "Allenburys" Diet, which, although it has only been introduced a short time, is becoming almost general in use, as it is equally valuable and acceptable to those in delicate or robust health. The "Allenburys" Diet, is a partially predigested milk and wheaten food, easily assimilated by those of the most enfeebled digestion, and an especial virtue is its easy preparation, for it can be made in a minute, requiring only the addition of boiling water to render it ready for use.

The "Allenburys" Diet is quite distinct from the well-known "Allenburys" Foods for infants. It is a food chiefly intended for adults and is especially helpful to invalids, dyspeptics and the aged, while as a light supper repast after late evening engagements, when a heavy meal is not desirable, it has no equal.

Taken by nursing mothers it has proved of surprisingly great value. It increases the quantity and quality of milk and induces restful sleep. It is obtainable at all chemists in tins at 1*s.* 6*d.* and 3*s.* each.

Another of Messrs. Allen and Hanburys products of high nutritive value is the "Allenburys" Milk-Cocoa. This product is also partially predigested and is taken by all those who cannot digest cocoa as ordinarily prepared. It requires the addition of boiling water only to make at once a delicious and highly nutritious beverage. It is supplied by all chemists in tins at 1*s.* 9*d.*, 3*s.* and 6*s.* 6*d.* each.

The "Allenburys" Diet and the "Allenburys" Milk-Cocoa being simply prepared and easily digested represent the ideal forms of nourishment for both young and old.

On the 13th November a case came before the Stipendiary Magistrate at Birmingham which has excited a lively interest in the English sporting world as testing the legality of boxing for stakes. The contest concerned was that for the feather-weight championship arranged to take place on 16th December between Owen Moran and Jim Driscoll, who were summoned to show cause why they should not be bound over to keep the peace. Among several witnesses called were Police-constable Hall (the solitary witness for the prosecution), a former heavy-weight Army champion; Mr. J. H. Douglas (President of the Amateur Boxing Association), Lord Lonsdale, and other boxing experts, and several medical men. The Stipendiary came to the conclusion that the proposed contest was not a mere exhibition of skilful boxing, but a prize fight, and accordingly ordered both principals and promoter to be bound over. He consented to state a case with a view to an appeal. A report of these interesting proceedings appears elsewhere.

Matt Wells, the English light-weight champion, returned home from the States a disappointed man, inasmuch as he found it impossible to induce either Packey McFarland or Ad. Wolgast to enter the same ring with him. But Matt isn't too downcast about it and means to have one or both of them ere long and to vent on them all his accumulated feelings.

Langford goes to Australia to meet Sam McVea, and contribute his share to what may prove the greatest "all black" fight of history—and certainly the greatest of modern times, excepting, perhaps, that between the late "Chocolate" George Godfrey and Peter Jackson for the coloured heavy-weight championship of the world 23 years ago. As Jack Johnson has retired, and, through his failure to act up to a contract entered into with Sam McVea, the latter will be entitled to sign himself heavy-weight champion of the world, the winner of the Langford-McVea clash must hold an undisputed right to the distinction mentioned.

Though Langford and McVea fought a draw in Paris some months ago, it may be taken for granted almost, that their meeting in Sydney on Boxing Day will turn out an even better battle.

Each knows the other well now, and is satisfied he can work his guns with more damaging effect than in the previous encounter.

Bandsman Rice, the English middle-weight boxer, met Dave Smith at the Sydney stadium on the 8th November, the verdict going to the local man. Rice was over fond of plunging into clinches and holding somewhat desperately with his left when he did so. It was not that he was deliberately unfair but merely because he seems to have acquired an awkward habit of which he cannot break himself. Smith's victory was never in doubt at all and he was easily master of the situation throughout. He was faster on his feet, quicker with his hands, knew yards more about ducking and avoiding than Rice did, and could generally land pretty much as he liked. But his blows never seemed to bother the Bandsman, who kept coming back at him with the utmost determination and the most serene disregard of anything Smith could do. Rice played a few gallery tricks but although these were undoubtedly smart, they were scarcely useful. The only doubt about the issue of the contest lay in Smith's ability to stand Rice's body blows which were forceful and numerous. As far as points went, there was only one man in it, and that was not Rice. The verdict in Smith's favour met with hearty approval.

There was a great gathering at the Liverpool stadium on the 16th November when Johnny Summers essayed to wrest the world's welter-weight title from the famous Dixie Kid, under American weight conditions (10st. 2lb. ringside). The preliminaries were soon settled and with Mr. Corri officiating as referee inside the ropes, the men advanced cautiously towards each other. Suddenly a vicious left swing hustled through the air. Summers ducked, clinched, broke and hooked his right home hard. A few brief exchanges followed, Summers being remarkably busy. Both rattled home blows to the ribs and body, Summers appearing to have more steam behind his efforts. It was plain, however, that the Kid was only feeling his man out and was holding himself in reserve, while Summers, impetuous as usual, was fast abandoning his initial caution. The little East Ender was scoring though, and scoring well, though the black checked his advances whenever they became dangerous by pushing out his long left as a prop to keep Summers away. Still Johnnie would not be denied and slammed home a couple of lefts to the mouth plus one right to the chin which appeared to shake the darkie and cause him to push his left out a trifle anxiously. Summers had the best of the first round. In the second, Dixie opened proceedings by feinting a left swing which drew Summer's guard and letting fly with a right which only missed the point of Johnnie's jaw by the merest fraction of an inch. The black slipped round looking for openings. Twice he came to close quarters and twice was Johnnie busy, although the black was covering grandly and suffering little damage. The end came in most sensational fashion. The Kid worked Summers into a neutral corner and came in full of menace. Johnnie was ready for him with a couple of jabs to the stomach so the Kid retreated—but only for a pace or so. Feinting a huge left swing, he coaxed Summers into an attempted counter, but before Johnnie's blow could get home the black sent in a short sharp right which caught the Englishman on the angle of the jaw. Round spun Summers as if though he had been shot, and down he went flat on his back, and was counted out.

A message from Kansas City states that a match for the World's Wrestling Championship under catch-as-catch-can rules has been arranged for 27th December between Alec Monro (England) and Frank Gotch (America) for a purse of ten thousand dollars.

The M. C. C. began their match with Queensland at Brisbane on the 1st instant in hot weather. The Home team batted first and put up 290 runs, Jennings scoring 91 and Hartigan a lucky 59. Jennings was at the wickets for 2 hours and 12 minutes and hit 14 fours. The M. C. C. made 62 for two wickets when stumps were drawn for the day. On Saturday they carried their total to 275, Meade contributing 79 and Rhodes 64, not out. Queensland lost two wickets for 65 in their second innings before close of play. There was heavy rain on Saturday night and on Monday the wicket was tricky. Queensland were all out for 124 and the M. C. C. were left with 140 to make to win. This they succeeded in doing for the loss of three wickets, Meade scoring 54, not out. They thus won by 7 wickets. Hitch has had to take to his bed owing to a strain and will be unable to play in the match against an eleven of Australia which begins on Friday.

The Marathon Race in connection with the Old Bombay Exhibition was held on the 29th ultimo and attracted no less than 100 entries, of which 76 faced the starter. The course was from a point at Bandra Causeway along the main road through Mahim to finish up inside the Stadium of the newly opened Exhibition. The Dublin Fusiliers had a team of five entered and they were looked upon to supply the winner and so it proved, Private Vine after leading practically the whole way, coming in first in 1 hour 0min. ½secs. Mahoney, of the same regiment, was expected to win but after running well up he could not finish closer up than 8th. Head Constable Haria Mahadeo, from the District Police of East Kandesh, was a very close second, and Pte. Barnetson, of the Royal Scots, third. The Dublins provided the 1st, 6th, 8th and 9th men home. Appended is the order of finishing:—

London Week by Week.

Friday, 17th November 1911.

"An inventors' club is about to be established in London." Such is the momentous intelligence printed in an evening paper. The difficulty will be to find a building large enough to accommodate all who are eligible as members. To begin with, there are many thousands of county court witnesses whose powers of invention, if not artistic, are at least bold and various. Then there is the great army of picturesque news writers, who rely on their imagination for their facts, and the news vendors, who deceitfully shout 'orrible murders in suburban roads. Nor must company promoters, mining engineers, and expert witnesses be forgotten; they form a very select class of inventors. Considerable room will be required in the club for the ingenious writers of advertisements for patent medicine vendors, beauty specialists, and all that genus. A few years ago travellers would have been prominent in an inventors' club, but according to Lord Curzon they are becoming more and more truthful, and the race of Cooks and De Rougemonts is fast dying out. A commodious wing will be required for the disciples of Izak Walton. If their inventions chiefly cluster round the pivot of avoirdupois, there is always a spontaneous unblushing confidence in their statements that many of their fellow-members will envy.

The complaint that we are behindhand in our methods of education will soon have no justification if a London daily paper is permitted to develop a brilliant idea that has occurred to its editor. In order to fit children betimes for the serious responsibilities of life, he invites them to say how, in the case of boys, they would propose marriage, and how, in the case of girls, they would reply to a proposal. The practical value of this early initiation into the mysteries of courtship ought to be immense. Even adults may learn something from the views of these precocious lovers. One of them says that the correct way to propose is to take the lady, first to a sweet shop and treat her to "love hearts," and afterwards to a cinematograph show, where some scene of conjugal happiness pictorially enacted will help to screw his courage to the sticking point. Another would lead his lady into a quiet corner and boldly put his arm round her waist. To men of experience the quiet corner seems to possess advantages. To woo a damsel with such gross delights as "love hearts" and bull's eyes is undignified, and picture palaces—though useful as shelters in wet weather—may peradventure exhibit domestic scenes that chill rather than encourage youth's beautiful infatuations.

But the whole scheme may be only so much misdirected enterprise. "Men," says a contemporary, "don't propose nowadays." A man walks out with a girl quite in a casual way; they discover without any love-making that they suit each other and drift into an engagement. There is no orthodox formula, no nervous, timid creature afraid to put his fate to the test, no blushing lady faintly whispering "Yes," and yielding her coy lips to the touch of a stubbly moustache. The stern fact that a young fellow may find himself on the brink of matrimony without ever having proposed is appalling. It is hazardous enough to take the plunge consciously and of deliberate intent, but to find yourself committed without knowing anything about it until too late is a catastrophe so terrific in its possible consequences that it ought to be included with pestilence and sudden death as evils we pray to be delivered from.

The absolute triumph of Mr. Oscar Hammerstein has to be recorded this week. He opened the brand new London Opera House on Monday with "Quo Vadis?" and achieved well deserved celebrity at a bound. Up till now grand opera in England has been a seasonable pastime for seasonable people. The Opera was merely a rendezvous, a musical Rotten-row. Last Monday night's production of Nougues' "Quo Vadis?" means a landmark in the musical history of this country. It was opera for opera's sake. Respectful silence reigned throughout the performance. The boxes, for once, did not serve for the purpose of spreading delicate gossip. The fact is that the overpowering brilliancy of the production struck the audience dumb.

Never has London witnessed a more perfect rendering of grand opera. Oscar Hammerstein promised us much. He has given us more. His lifelong devotion to operatic art has culminated in this presentation of "Quo Vadis?" which will be remembered long after the virgin splendour of the London Opera House has been toned down by homely soot and fog. Oscar Hammerstein came, saw, and conquered.

"Quo Vadis?" based on that remarkable novel which made Sienkiewicz, a struggling Polish author, famous in one day, is refreshingly original. The music is instinct with the same elevating essence which induced millions of people to read Sienkiewicz's book. It brings home with irresistible force the victory of the pure Christian spirit over the sensuality of a decaying empire.

The music belongs to the naturalistic school. Sensuous and warm when interpreting the perversity of the Neronic period, it grows sacred and pure during the prayers of the martyrs and the preaching of the apostle. M. Nougues has been happiest in his expression of the early Christians' martyrdom. In the fourth act, at the end of the first scene, where the Christians await their fate under the vaults of the Coliseum, their holy resignation is expressed in overwhelmingly beautiful notes.

Of the very competent cast, M. Maurice Renaud, a fine baritone, who played Petronius, and Aline Vallandri as Eunice, deserve special praise. Of the minor parts I mention Nina Ratti's Myriam and the young Christian of M. Leroux. The chorus was exceptionally efficient.

More striking, however, than either the music or the singing was the altogether sensational staging of the opera. The training of the crowds, the sumptuous sceneries, the light effects, the views of burning Rome, were examples of stage-craft hitherto undreamed of in England's capital. The feature of the production was the arena scene, in which the costumes of noble Romans, the glittering uniforms and the elegance of dancing slaves resulted in an orgy of colour and grace. It was there that M. Jaques Coini, the stage director, gave us an idea of his ingenuity.

The audience—so large that hundreds had to stand—was of a most representative character. The spontaneous applause with which the brilliant gathering hailed the production leaves no doubt as to the raison d'être of the London Opera House.

* * * * * *

"A Butterfly on the Wheel" returned to the West End last week without explanation or excuse, and certainly none was needed. At the Queen's on Saturday night, the reception accorded to this stirring play was of a kind to rejoice any author's heart. The applause rang true; throughout the interest of the audience showed no trace of relaxing. The circumstance may be regarded as a fitting tribute not only to the ingenuity of the writers, but to the quality of the acting. Messrs. Hemmerde and Neilson have evidently studied in the school of Sardou. In breadth of outlook

Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen

Merits Every Good Word ever spoken in its praise.

To say a Fountain Pen is reliable, does not make it so. To say a Fountain Pen is the best, does not make it so. But when hundreds of thousands of people constantly affirm that a certain Fountain Pen is absolutely reliable, and is without a doubt the best, then one may be quite sure the pen possesses exceptional merit.

People started praising Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen twenty-six years ago. To-day, in its perfected form, Waterman's Ideal enjoys the whole-hearted support of millions of writers. No, it is no exaggeration—millions. Over a million Waterman's Ideals were sold last year—also the year before. Could you wish for stronger evidence of the quality of the Pen?

and neatness of construction they are not, of course, the equals of the master whose work they seek to emulate. But their story is cleverly devised and skilfully developed. It possesses, also, to a considerable extent the saving grace of plausibility. These qualities are not invariably to be found in what one is forced to classify as "drawing-room melodrama." Fortunately, save that in the second act the dice are a little too obviously loaded and the Machiavellian villainy of Lady Atwill a trifle too strenuously insisted on, "A Butterfly on the Wheel" puts but a slight tax on the listener's credulity.

Even more serious shortcomings than these would sink into nothingness before the amazing power, the concentrated intensity, the profound pathos, of the famous scene in the Divorce Court, where Mrs. Admaston is subjected to a cross-examination almost brutal in its severity at the hands of the prosecuting counsel. The opportunity is one which any actress might covet; with perfect truth it may be said that few could make of it more than Miss Madge Titheradge does. It is a splendid tour-de-force; the spectacle of this nervous, fragile woman, hardly more than a girl, brow-beaten and bectored, hysterically powerless to defend herself, literally "broken on the wheel," becomes, indeed, wellnigh too poignant and painful. Remarkable as Miss Titheradge's performance is, it suffers from an excess of feeling—feeling so real that the tears stream down her cheeks, and physical endurance all too obviously reaches its extreme limit. Here we are confronted with the old and much-discussed problem, Shall the actor be the master or the slave of his emotions? In the present case there can, surely, be but one answer to the question. Apart from this, there is only unbounded admiration for the power, the nervous forcefulness, the extreme sensibility revealed by Miss Titheradge. Nor is she to be less cordially praised for the vivacity, the sprightliness, and girlish abandon shown in the earlier scenes. In the absence, through illness, of Mr. Henry Ainley, the part of Collingwood was taken by Mr. Leon Quartermaine, who achieved in it a very genuine and substantial success. Mr. Stanley Turnbull, who follows Mr. Norman McKinnel in the rôle of Sir Robert Fyffe, also scored heavily, although his style is less deadly and more domineering than his predecessor's. Mr. Evelyn Beerbohm is to be congratulated on his clever handling of the character of Lord Ellerdine. Mr. Beerbohm has always been a comedian of real promise, but now he has fairly come into his kingdom. A word further should be spared for the Lady Atwill of Miss Grace Croft, a portrait most carefully and effectively finished.

One is often appalled at the general ignorance of India as disclosed in the cheaper public prints and the speeches of those greatly daring people who pose as authorities. This is bad enough when intended to be seriously received, but when Indian subjects are treated in lighter vein the result is simply wicked. The other day, preaching at St. Stephen's, Walworth, on the King's visit to India, the Rev. R. de Courcy Laffan said the Englishman's ignorance with regard to that country was deplorable.

He asked an M. P.'s wife if he would find her husband at the House. "Oh, no," she said, "they are talking about India, and John takes no interest in India."

The Indian Civil Service had done a noble work, yet when a man who had had in his hands the government and prosperity of thousands came home and settled down quietly in a country town, he was thought less of than a grocer who happened to be an alderman or who kept a carriage. How very true.

Review.

COPTS AND MOSLEMS UNDER BRITISH CONTROL.*

This book leaves an impression on our minds which must be far from the intentions of the author. It strikes us as a very clever piece of special pleading, designed to urge the exclusive claims of the Copts, who form a small minority of some six or seven per cent. of the population of Egypt, and at the same time to throw discredit on the methods of the British administration of that country. We are told that the Egyptian nationalists desire political independence so far as it brings Mahomedan supremacy. No doubt this is true, but what the Copts appear to desire is, if not Coptic supremacy, a larger share of the loaves of office than they hold already, and a share in executive office for which they do not appear to be entirely fitted. They appear, in fact, to be the Brahmins of Egypt; and a remarkable parallel might in some respects be drawn between the state of that country and that of India. Certainly there has been a change for the better in Egypt since Mr. Roosevelt showed our Radical Government the error of their ways, and told them to "govern or get out;" as there has been in India since a period which coincided with the departure of Lord Morley from the India Office. We could have done with a visit from the ex-President of the United States to this country, for it is only under weak or wrong-headed government that the ever-present forces of discontent show themselves above the surface.

The nationalist movement in Egypt coincided in some respects with that in India, where political independence is desired, not for the good of the country and its toiling millions, but for the restoration of Brahmin supremacy. Thus the agitation against Lord Curzon's greatest achievement, the partition of Bengal, was partly factitious and fictitious, and partly due to its involving the destruction of Brahmin supremacy over the Mahomedan inhabitants who form the large majority of the population of Eastern Bengal. In Poona the same forces have been at work to reestablish the lost supremacy of the Mahratta Brahmins.

The question discussed in the work under review is that of the rights of the Copts in Egypt, of which country they appear to be the original inhabitants, though the same may be said of the Mahomedans, who have, however mixed with Arabs. Under Mussalman rule they appear to have made themselves indispensable, and under British rule they have risen to high office. Boutros Pasha, the late Prime Minister who was murdered by a fanatic, and Tewfik Bey were Copts. Apparently, the Copts expected that under a Christian administration they as Christians would receive favoured treatment. Their expectations have not been realised, as they might have known would be the case had they studied the history of British rule in India, where all creeds are treated alike. As Lord Cromer in his Modern Egypt, wrote:—"The principles of strict impartiality on which the Englishmen proceeded were foreign to the mates of the Copt. When the British occupation took place, certain hopes began to dawn in his mind. "I," said the Copt, to himself, "am a Christian: If I had the power to do so, I would favour Christians at the expense of Moslems. The English are Christians: therefore as the English have the power, they will assuredly favour Christians at the expense of Moslems." As Sir Eldon Gorst tells us in his report, "when the Copt found that this process of reasoning was fallacious, and that the conduct of the Englishman was guided by motives which he had left out of account, and which he could not understand, he was disappointed, and his disappointment deepened his resentment."

The Copts are able financiers and clever clerks. Under Mussalman rule they probably held a large number of offices for which they were suited; the Mahomedans being more backward and lethargic. But under British rule the Mahomedans have advanced in education and in administrative capacity, and no doubt they now compete with the Copts for offices which the latter formerly held, but of which, being such a vast majority, the Mahomedans are no doubt entitled to the larger share.

Under a Radical administration there has been in Egypt as elsewhere, a relaxation of the reins of government, a sentimental foolishness in pandering to sedition, and in yielding to the vociferous demands of self-seeking agitators. But we do not believe that there has been, as the author of this book attempts to show, any favouritism towards one race or one religion at the expense of another. Mr. Kyriakos Mikhail does his cause no good by quoting Keir Hardie, that most persistent enemy of everything English.

It is to be hoped that with the advent of Lord Kitchener in Egypt this and many other questions will be satisfactorily settled. But the Copts would be wise if, instead of intemperate press and other agitation, they would support the British administration and in every way show themselves worthy of confidence.

Shikar.

THE GOTRA PANTHER.

I have had about seventeen years experience of big game shooting in Central India and the Central Provinces and have never had an accident until I came across this particular panther. My wife and I were encamped near the small village of Gotra in Central India when khabar was brought in that a cow had been killed in a nullah a couple of miles away. This nullah was almost devoid of cover and led down to the Kali Sind river whose bed is covered with jow bushes and banks with wait-a-bit thorn and scattered Dak bushes.

Our shikari had made up his mind that the panther was lying up in this jungle, so we solemnly beat a couple of miles of the river bank without seeing anything but a few pig. The heat in the bed of the river was scorching, so having had lunch we decided to beat our way home up a nullah parallel to the one in which the panther had killed, in the hopes of getting a few partridges or hare for the pot.

We had scarcely formed line when my wife, who was with me, called my attention to the fresh pugs of a panther. This was a bit of luck, as our freind had evidently killed and walked up this nullah and probably lain up somewhere in front of us. We immediately stopped the beat and sending them round to the head of the nullah told our shikari to beat it down to us. After waiting half an hour we heard the beat begin and when it was about 300 yards away a roar and then silence. A few minutes later one of my men came up and said that the beat had come on the panther, lying up in a small patch of grass; that he had broken through, and in doing so had mauled a man badly. We got out of our places and on reaching the beat I was told that the animal had broken out to the left and was lying in another patch of grass, which was pointed out to me. Just then I saw the panther slink out of this and disappear in another patch a few yards further on. As there was absolutely nowhere for him to gain cover except in the nullah, I sent the beat round to drive him towards us, telling them to make as much noise as possible and to begin far away, thinking that no unwounded animal would wait for a line of men in what, except for grass 2-foot high and very thin and patchy at that, was bare maidan. Very soon we saw and heard the beat, who obeyed my orders implicitly; they came right up to the patch of grass without the panther showing himself, and I was beginning to think he must have got away without my seeing him; when we heard a coughing roar and then saw the panther silhouetted against the sky, standing on his hind legs with his paws on the shoulders of one of my Sikh duffadars. The man fell, and like a flash the panther seized a coolie next to him, as soon as he was down he left him and made for another. It was exactly like what happens with a terrier when a bag of rats are shaken out in front of him. My feelings can be imagined. I was powerless to help, the distance between the panther and myself was a good 200 yards and I was more likely to hit a man than the panther if I had fired. I at once ran over to the scene of action, but when I got there, there was nothing to be seen except nine men all more or less severely mauled, the rest of the beat were busy running to their respective villages and the panther had disappeared.

Luckily we had some permanganate of potash crystals out with us and these we pressed into the punctured wounds and rubbed over the scratches, then sending for carts from the village, which was luckily only half a mile away, we walked back to camp. Shortly after our arrival the wounded were brought in and we spent over four hours dressing their various hurts. Our instruments were primitive and consisted of a pair of nail scissors, a hair pin which we used as a probe, a bottle of whisky as a disinfectant, and some of my wife's night dresses which were torn up for bandages.

The next morning our hospital assistant arrived on the scene and, much against their will, the wounded were bundled into carts and sent off under escort to the station where they remained for some weeks. I am glad to say that all recovered eventually.

After this I naturally was afraid to beat for our friend again and tried everything I knew to bring him to bag, by tying up goats and sitting over them or by sitting over his own kills. It was, however, quite useless. The panther seemed to know that I was after him. He would kill, and if I sat up he would not return until I left. Once or twice he came but took care not to get within range of my machan. After many futile attempts I at last had to give him up for the time being, as I went off home on a year's furlough. On my return last year I heard that he was still very much all there and had killed one man and broken the thigh of another during my absence. Besides this he had killed over a hundred head of cattle and several camels. So afraid were the villagers of him, that they said that unless I came out and shot him they would have to leave their village. Hearing that there were several other panthers in the vicinity and also some bustard I decided to have another try for him.

The very day I reached Gotra news was brought in of a kill and we decided to sit up over it. We got into our machan about 6 o'clock and about half an hour afterwards, when I was just beginning to think what a rotten game sitting up was and wishing I could stretch my legs, I heard something moving behind me. Turning round very slowly I saw a panther quietly walking along the bed of the nullah which led to the kill. I forgot to mention that to add to the attraction of the kill, I had tied up a goat about 20 yards away, and this now suddenly attracted the panther's attention. Crouching flat on the edge of the nullah he began stalking the goat exactly as a cat does a mouse. When about ten yards away he lay absolutely motionless, except for a very slight twitching of the tip of his tail. Then with one spring he landed full on the goat and rolled over with it; before he could get up my wife fired, the bullet hitting him on the point of the shoulder; to make quite certain of him he got the second barrel as well. When the smoke cleared off we saw the panther lying dead and the goat standing unhurt. I scrambled down from the machan and went to inspect my friend, when to my disgust I found that he had escaped again and it was a large female that we had shot.

Just as we were preparing to go off to camp we heard a growl and a crash and the sound of some heavy animal making off through the jungle. It was too dark to see any tracks but in the morning when we revisited the spot we found the pugs of our old friend, who must have been lying close beside us all the time and who had sent his better half to kill for him, intending, if all was well, to come and share the meal. After this I gave up all hopes of bringing him to bag. Two days later khalar was again brought in that a panther had killed a goat in the bed of the river where my friend lived. The shikari swore that the pugs were those of a small female, so feeling quite sure that this was yet another panther and not the old sinner, I determined to beat. We were posted in trees about 30 yards apart on the river bank, which here was very steep, and out of sight of the river bed which, with the exception of a few jow bushes, was quite bare and apparently not worth watching. Soon after the beat started we heard a shout and saw a small panther break out across a hill to our right. Thinking that perhaps there might be a chance of chinkara or pig I ordered the beat to come on up to the guns. When within 100 yards of us we heard the same old coughing roar and yells and shouts from the river bed. Scrambling out of our places we reached the bank just in time to see a very large panther galloping towards us; just as he reached the steep bank we both fired. He answered to the shot, rolled over, but before we could fire again disappeared up a small nullah which led into the river bed.

Having given him the usual half hour's law, we started to walk him up and found blood leading up the steep bank into the jungle we had just beaten. The cover was very thick and, although sure the animal was hard hit, I decided to drive a herd of buffaloe that were grazing near by in front of us. They went all over the ground and showed no sign of seeing the panther; so as the ground was apparently clear I went to investigate. Following the blood carefully I saw that it led to the mouth of a porcupine earth, and pushing in a cut bough soon proved that we had located our friend at last. There was a growl and the bough was pulled out of the hands of the man who held it. We then blocked the mouth of the earth with rocks, and listening to the low rumbling growls which we heard from time to time, we decided to dig down to where the animal lay. It was no easy job; but after digging for about four hours through the hard red soil, we at last struck the earth about six yards back from the mouth. Making a small hole we pushed a stick in, instantly it was seized and a paw was thrust through the hole scratching and tearing at the earth. Carefully enlarging the hole with a crowbar from above and prodding the panther with a pointed stick had at last the desired effect, and for a second a great ugly head appeared, which was greeted with a volley. Then as all was quiet we opened up the earth and with the help of ropes brought our friend at last to view.

He was not a very long panther but very deep and with enormous head and paws and bearing the marks of many fights. While skinning him we found several slugs under the skin, which shows that he must have had some experience of firearms and probably accounted for his ferocity.

It appears that when the small female broke out, the beat came along anyhow, and some of the men strayed down into the river bed. As they came up to the jow bushes the panther dashed out and seized the nearest man, mauling him severely. This was the row we had heard in the river bed. He then charged across and was shot by my wife. He had only one bullet mark in the body and that had hit him in the stifle, breaking the thigh to atoms; this was a lethal bullet fired by my wife, my shot having missed him clean. His head was, of course, smashed to bits but this occurred afterwards when he was killed.

The last victim was very severely mauled about the scalp but I am glad to say was none the worse after a month in the regimental hospital. I think this animal must have nearly achieved a record, as his total bag to my personal knowledge was ten men mauled while beating for me; one man mauled and one killed while I was away on furlough, besides all the damage he did to cattle. Gotra village was en fête for several days and nights after he was slain and many were the congratulations we received on having brought our old friend to bag at last.

DEER-HUNTING IN CUBA.

It has all but passed in our America. Not so in Cuba, where hunter, deer, and hounds are still joys of to-day. My Cuban friends had long tempted me, and at last I yielded—to fetch away a memory that can never pass. Don Jose and Don Daniel had the pack—skilled hunters and old dogs that assured us sport from the very first. The deer is no Cuban born, but foreign. "He is not canonised as yet," said Don Jose, "but that Spaniard who first brought deer to Cuba is my patron saint."

From old town to virgin wild in Cuba is but a span, and this January night we make it in an hour with horse and hound and pack mules, to stretch our hammocks in an old thatched hut till dawn. The night, the scene, the group stirred in my Cuban friend's memories, and tales of old guerilla days, when Spain had pressed them hard as ever their Cuban hounds had pressed a deer, and the night's first half was filled with stories of guerilla raids, of war, plunder, rapine, and fearful reconcentration. The second half I froze where never ice was seen. Cuban nights, though tropical, have that strange quality. One feels as cold and bloodless as a snake. We felt so to-night, and stayed so until rich Cuban coffee—full, parched, fine-ground, and life-infusing—"brought us to" again. Coffee alone? Yes, alone. It is enough; no true Cuban asks more breakfast. Our dogs got not so much, but off they were with nothing at sunrise—a dozen lanky, thin, and nosey brutes that showed no signs, the least, of being fancy dogs or pets. Their skinny looks and settled, old-dog ways carried assurance further of the day's success. I felt how good to-day to be no deer in front of them!

"Hoo—ah! hoo—ah!" the urging cries with hand-claps of the master soon made them plunge into the jungle of the woods that patched the broad savannahs of Cuba's southern coasts—"Hoo—ah! hoo—ah!"—and kept them going. The tone and manner of the master were encouragement itself, and dogs vanished.

A half-hour passes, and we turn a sudden corner in the wood, to run into a stranger hunter, mounted and blue-clad like us, a little wizened man with piping voice and keen black eye—a Cuban type. He looked the hunter, and he was. "I hear your hounds, Don Fernando," said our master. Not a note could I catch, strain as I might; yet in five minutes more they came in full cry, with ours a pack of twenty, to run us wild.

Who can describe it? Men and horses awoke and involuntarily, all unconsciously, moved to the sound. The ground is a broad, level savannah with great patches and clumps of woods and timber. From timber to timber and through thick wood the deer makes way with the ever-sounding pack behind. The hunters race from wood to wood in the hope of cutting off the flying game and, mounted still, of "winging" him upon the further exit.

At the edge of a wood, after a long, swift run, hunters are foiled and hounds thrown off. A wise old dog, circling far to the rear, picks up the scent, and the chase is on again and back to the far spot from whence it came. My sturdy Cuban pony takes me there in a great race with all the hunters. We scatter at the jungle's farther edge. I await the coming pack—each moment nearer with blood-stirring bay and music. A shadow, a vision, a moving branch, and I have lost my chance. The dogs sweep past me crestfallen, and soon have moved the game onward to a distant wood. Spurring, galloping, hunters follow and some precede with plunging, stumbling, excited horses. Again the deer comes straight upon me, hotly pursued by a lone hunter at top speed, shouting and with raised rifle. With rising hair I fly his line of fire; but needlessly. He is no wild man or tenderfoot. The deer escapes again and plunges into the forest's edge, but out again over a broad burn, where hounds are done up, thrown off, and can no longer follow. The burn has killed the scent, and the run seems ended.

The case looks bad enough for half an hour, till the master puts the pack far out upon the plain. There a lively bitch—young Mukden—takes up a scent, and all the pack moves slowly, walking, for a distant wood, whence all at once a louder, fuller cry told the tale of the game now sprung again. The winded deer had there come to rest in deer-reasoned safety. That stop was fatal. Or made it any difference to the long scented hounds? Far round the further edge of the wood two hunters spurred a mile away, followed far by all the others. My straining horse was plunging on. A shot behind. Another deer had sprung and got away. The hounds and hunters bore on. A shot and shout ahead. The other had gone down. Two swiftest hounds were on him, and his run was over. Above them a blue-clad Cuban hunter stood triumphant.

The morning is far advanced; it is hot, horses sweating and hounds panting with wide-open mouths and lolling tongues. Here is the strain of the sport in Cuba. From an ancient shallow well which hunters knew, the dogs were watered first; then cooled by "souzing in"; then rested; for we yet planned to chase the other deer that had just now got up. Dogs and horses cooled and freshened up; we are off again, shouting and clapping. His trail is easy, but not he—an old, strong, cunning, fellow. He plunged away at a tremendous speed through a tangled tropical forest that cut off the hunters, and in a long straight-away run that sent the baying pack for an hour or more far out of hearing. At last he executes a crafty turn, by which he gains much time, and when again he comes our way he's far ahead. The dogs have run five hours in tropic heat, and follow, now at just a walk and long strung out. It's useless, cruel to run longer, and the horns sound off. It takes an hour more of voice and horn to make these grim old dogs let go. They are a joy.

That afternoon the second "orchestra" was put in play, but not, of course, upon the buck that had that morning won. That would have been dishonour, and no man thought, much less dared mention, such a thing.

Some men are woodsmen born. To them the earth, the air, the forest are but signs—an open book. Tutu, Don Jose's man, was one of these. This afternoon he goes straight to the game—a mighty buck—as if by fore-agreement with His Majesty to meet him there. All hounds are near. The race is breakneck from the start. There are no preliminaries; just a wild start. This time, I think, I'll stick to the master, and I do in a long, straight shoot through open woods two miles or more—taking logs and stumps, bushes, branches, and hanging vines as they come—trusting to luck to make it or "bust," swaying, dodging, ducking, blinking; at last to bring up against an all-stopping barbed wire fence. Hounds and game had done the same. The sudden silence is deadly. The dogs had lost all trail, were scattered, and in ten minutes more were wandering wide in a hopeless, most discouraged way. Hunters were soon sitting, nonplussed, in their saddles—helpless. The game had got away across a burn again; yet it was a mere palm's breadth that seemed no obstacle to stop a pack of shrewd old hounds Still time is lost—a half-hour or more—and things look hopeless now. An old dog slowly walks across the burn, and on its further edge flushes a flock of quail, that startles us but does not turn his thoughts. He has the thread, and in an instant has started the mighty buck in hiding there. Across the open burn at top speed he plunges, as if fired from a catapult. Magnificent! Shots and wild shouts, a rush of hunters—and the chase is over.

"Here's where I hit him!" "Here's my shot!" and "There is mine!" "I knew I'd get him!" and so on. "But let us see his other side," said one. No hole was found. One man had used a shotgun —I. The hill in silence was marked mine. "As large a deer as we ever saw in Cuba."—Lieutenant-Colonel R. L. Bullard, U. S. A., in Sports Afield.

(Winner trained by T. Payten.)

Other starters: Lady Medallist (9-7 inc. 10lb. pen.) (M Connell); Kuringai (8-11, W. H. Smith); Woolerina (8-10, inc 10lb. pen., W. Barnett).

BETTING: 7 to 2 agst. Popinjay, 4 to 1 Comedy King, 9 to 2 Beverage, 6 to 1 Lady Medallist, 8 to 1 Woolerina, 10 to 1 Lager.

Lady Medallist was the first to move away, and Beverage was the last to leave the barrier. In a few strides Popinjay was out in front, and he went past the abattoirs with a few lengths' lead from Lager, Comedy King, Woolerina and Kuringai with Beverage last. Passing the sheds, there was very little alteration in the order. Popinjay led into the straight from Comedy King, Lager, Kuringai and Lady Medallist, and at the distance he was clear of Lager, Comedy King, Kuringai and Lady Medallist, whilst Beverage was moving up very rapidly on the outside. Popinjay held his lead to the end, and won easily by a length, whilst Beverage came fast and ran a dead-heat for second place with Lager, Comedy King was a close fourth, just in front of Lady Medallist, and then came Kuringai, with Woolerina last Time—1min. 39⅕secs.

OAKS STAKES.—Of 10sovs. each, with 500sovs. added second 100sovs., and the third 50sovs. For three-year-old fillies 1½ miles.

(Winner trained by W. Risby.)

Other starters: Blythesome (8-10 W. H. Smith); Bunting (8-10 W. A. Ryan); Nyan (8-10, W. P. Bass); Malt Blossom (8-10, W. H. McLachlan); Debutante (8-10 W. Barnett); (St. Abbs 8-10, W. Smart).

BETTING: 5 to 2 on Wilari, 8 to 1 agst. St. Abbs, 10 to 1 Orvieto, 15 to 1 Debutante, 20 to 1 each Blythesome, Malt Blossom and Queen May, 50 to 1 each Bunting and Nyan.

As soon as the field settled down, Nyan took up the running and went along the riverside ten lengths clear of Malt Blossom, Blythesome, Queen May, Bunting, Debutante, and Wilari, with Orvieto last. Passing the bridge Nyan had increased her lead to twenty lengths from Malt Blossom, Bunting, Queen May, and Wilari, but immediately afterwards Wilari set out after the runaway, followed by Orvieto. Wilari took the lead rounding the home turn, and came into the straight followed by Orvieto, Queen May and St. Abbs being some lengths back at the head

Mr. A. Knox's br c Crown Grant, by Grafton—Lady Lochiel, 3yrs., 7st 5lb. J. Hopwood 3
(Winner trained by J. A. Mayo.)

Other starters: Flavian (8-7, G. Lambert); Bridge (8 5, W. H. McLachlan); Flavel (7-12, W. H. Smith); Adgio (7-11, R. W Brennan); Mutilator (7-9 A. Higgins); Posadas (6-11, inc. 2lb. over A. Sawyer); Deacon Skinner (6-7, Master Prout); Halloween (6-8, inc. 1lb. over, F. Harmer)

BETTING: 2 to 1 Cadonia, 5 to 2 Flavian, 3 to 1 each Bridge and Crown Grant, 12 to 1 each Mutilator and Mountain Oak, 14 to 1 Adgio, 20 to 1 Halloween, 25 to 1 the others.

Flavian jumped off with the lead from Posadas, Cadonia, and Bridge, and passing the judge's box held command from Posadas, Cadonia, Halloween, Adgio, Bridge, Deacon Skinner, and Mutilator, with Crown Grant last. Flavian led out of the straight from Posadas, Cadonia, and Halloween, and along the river was just in front from Posadas, two lengths away coming Cadonia, then three lengths further off Halloween and Bridge. Positions were practically unchanged passing the bridge and racing along the back stretch. Flavian was half a length in front from Posadas, three lengths off coming Cadonia, then Mountain Oak, Halloween, Bridge, Flavel, and Deacon Skinner. Passing the sheds, Flavian and Posadas were out from Mountain Oak, Flavel, Bridge, and Halloween. Flavian led round the turn and showed the way into the straight to Posadas, Mountain Oak, Bridge, and Flavel. The leader shut up in the straight, and Posadas and Mountain Oak were together in front at the distance from Cadonia and Bridge. Cadonia raced to the head of affairs at the half-distance and won by a length and a half from Mountain Oak, who beat the fast finishing Crown Grant by a short neck. Then came Bridge, Posadas, Mutilator, Flavel, Flavian, and Adgio, the last two being Halloween and Deacon Skinner. Time—3mins. 2secs.

C. B. FISHER PLATE.—A sweepstakes of 10sovs. each, 2ft with 750sovs. added, second horse to receive 150, and the third 75sovs. out of the stakes. Weight-for-age. 1¼ miles.

Mr. S. Green's br or b h Comedy King, by Persimmon—Tragedy Queen, 5yrs., 9st. 11lb. ... J. Harrison 2
Mr. J E. O'Brien's ch h Malt King, by Malster—Patrona, 5yrs., 9st. 4lb. ... W. Black 3
(Winner trained by W. S. Hickenbotham.)

Other starters: Beverage 9-0 (J. E. Pike); Lady Medallist 8-13 (M. Connell).

BETTING: 5 to 4 agst. Trafalgar, 9 to 2 Malt King, 5 to 1 each Beverage or Comedy King, 10 to 1 Lady Medallist.

Beverage was first through the barrier from Comedy King, and led past the stand from Malt King, with the favorite last. Turning out of the straight Comedy King was two lengths in front from Beverage and a length further away Lady Medallist was pulling double, then Trafalgar and Malt King together last Lady Medallist led along the river from Trafalgar. Comedy King and Beverage; and racing past the bridge Trafalgar went to the front from Lady Medallist, Comedy King and Beverage. As they raced along the back Trafalgar was three lengths in front of Lady Medallist and Comedy King, and as they passed the abattoirs was still three lengths in front from Lady Medallist, then Beverage, just in front of Comedy King and Malt King. Trafalgar increased his lead by four lengths passing the sheds from Lady Medallist, who was half a length in front of Beverage and Comedy King. Trafalgar led by three lengths round the turn from Lady Medallist, Comedy King and Beverage, and was first into the straight from Lady Medallist and Beverage. Trafalgar led past the distance from Comedy King, who made a fast run, but Trafalgar was never troubled, and won in a canter by four lengths; with half a length between second and third. Beverage beat Lady Medallist by about a head for fourth place. Time—2mins. 37⅘secs.

THE TURF.

LIVERPOOL.

WHAT a charm the Liverpool Autumn Cup exercises over all classes of the countryside was proved last Friday by the strong support accorded the occasion by all classes. The rank, fashion, and beauty of the county was well represented in the enclosure, and the paddock was thronged during the intervals, the scene being all the more charming by reason of the advanced season forming an excuse for the fair sex to don their expensive winter furs. The further enclosures were crowded, and Tattersall's mustered its strength for the occasion. Bright, with a keen tinge in the air, the morning's splendour was dimmed before racing finished by the mist, which spoilt a hitherto good light for glasses, while the excellence of the going accounted for the strength of the fields, and racing was brisk and interesting. A dense mist came up the Mersey estuary on Friday night, suddenly shutting out a star-lit sky. Very thick it was at daybreak, and doubts were entertained as to the Saturday's programme being brought off, but the old adage that everything comes to him who waits was confirmed, though the waiting process was somewhat irksome and for a long while seemed futile. The executive determined to start at 1-30 with the flat racing as per card, and then wedging in the hurdle race and steeplechase. Results:—

WINDSOR.

A brisk afternoon's sport, with winners easy to find, though fields were well above the average in size, no fewer than 88 horses carrying silk in the six races, rounded off by a Royal success in the last event—such was the experience at Windsor on Saturday. As the weather, though dull, kept fine during the time racing was in progress, the sport was enjoyed under good conditions, and everyone seemed perfectly contented. The only drawback was the thick haze which hung over the lower end of the course and obscured the starts. Results :—

LEICESTER.

The sensible policy of starting a special train from London at an hour that admits of a comfortable preparation for the journey was proved on Monday by the crowded specials to Leicester, which arrived about the same time as those from Leeds and Manchester, and caused a tremendous rush on vehicles of every description, the attendance being one of the best we have

MELOX AND MELOX MARVELS.

THE PREMIER DOG FOODS.

MELOX gets Dogs into condition and keeps them fit. Is readily eaten when all other Foods are refused. It improves and strengthens the digestives organs.

MELOX MARVELS, the miniature Dog Biscuits, contain many of the essential principles of MELOX and a large proportion of meat and its juices. Possess great nourishment and form a dainty change of diet.

For Hot Climates these Foods are unique, as they are essentially Bone and Muscle makers. Bitches raise healthy Litters, while bad doers and weakly puppies thrive upon it in a remarkable manner.

Can be obtained of all Army and Navy Stores Depôts in India or direct from—

On Tuesday a regular November morning improved towards noon, in that all the wet was under foot; and though skies were dull—seasonably so, one might say—the light at Oadby was very good for race-glasses. By the time set for racing it began to rain again, and an umbrella was a useful adjunct. The attendance, though not so large as on Monday, was again a very good one for Leicester, which is gradually improving in general favour. Results:—

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

In these days, so considerable is the amount of labour at the command of the management of the big professional clubs, that frost has to be exceptionally severe or a fall of snow remarkably heavy to necessitate the postponement of an important match. To mitigate the effects of frost upon the football there is always a plentiful supply of sand or some other suitable material available, and to remove snow from the field of play takes the small army of sweepers, engaged in such circumstances, only a short space of time. While, however, frost and snow can thus, as a rule, be successfully combated, the most energetic of club secretaries fight in vain against fog. On Saturday this winter visitor made its appearance in various parts of the country, and in such pronounced form that the First League matches at Nottingham and Bury and the Second League contest at Derby had all to be postponed. As it happened, the two games in the senior division were not of special importance, but the encounter at Derby, where Burnley should have played Derby County, must, with Burnley standing at the head of the competition and Derby County occupying a prominent position, have had an important bearing upon the struggle in the Second Division of the League.

With the programme thus reduced from ten matches to eight, the First League yielded in all only a dozen goals. Six clubs did not score at all, eight had to rest content with one goal apiece, Tottenham Hotspur and Blackburn Rovers sharing the distinction of registering a second point. To such an extent defence prevailed against attack that in no case did a club securing even a single goal have to admit defeat. Despite the meagre supply of goals, yesterday's games brought about a number of changes in the positions of the more prominent teams, Blackburn Rovers, Tottenham Hotspur, and Everton gaining ground, and Newcastle United Bradford City, and Middlesbrough, although none of these latter lost their matches, now filling humbler places than those they occupied a week ago. For the fifth week in succession a different club stands at the head of the competition. A month ago that honour belonged to West Bromwich Albion. A week later Bradford City occupied the post. Middlesbrough next secured the lead, only to be supplanted by Newcastle United, who now have to give way to Blackburn Rovers. The advantage which the Rovers can claim over the Newcastle men is of the narrowest, each club having scored 16 points in twelve matches, and each having had 13 goals registered against them, but the Rovers have 18 goals to their credit and Newcastle one less.

Beating Liverpool at White Hart-lane Tottenham Hotspur gained their sixth victory this season and their third in succession. Saturday's meeting having been immediately preceded by wins against Preston North End and Manchester United. On the general run of the play the North London club scarcely deserved to pull through by as much as 2 to 0. Liverpool at times having their full share of the game. A good opening by Middlemiss half way through the first portion of the match, however, enabled Minter to score, and on change of ends a further point came from the foot of Middlemiss, who since his return to the eleven is playing better than at any other period of his career. As a result of yesterday's success, Hotspur, who three weeks ago stood thirteenth on the list, step into fourth place in the competition, with as many points as Bradford City, but a slightly worse goal average. No victory rewarded the efforts of Woolwich Arsenal at West Bromwich, yet the Plumstead men were probably satisfied to halve the points. The Arsenal were a goal down at the interval, but on crossing over Gordon Hoare, who in the absence of Chalmers filled the centre position, made the game one goal all, at which score it remained to the finish. The Plumstead men average no more than a point a match, but it is to be noted in their favour that they have not suffered defeat away from home since 23rd September.

Beating Leicester Fosse by 4 goals to 1, the Hull City team have quickly recovered from the severe thrashing they received last week at Wolverhampton, and as Burnley made no upward move in the Second Division of the League, owing to their match at Derby being stopped through fog, Hull City once more advanced to first place. With an equal number of matches played they are one point in front of Burnley, who, in turn, lead Wolverhampton Wanderers and Chelsea by a point. All these clubs have got through twelve engagements and, with so little separating them, their future games will be followed with the keenest attention. Certainly everything points to the struggle for promotion being keener than ever this season. For the time being Clapton Orient have dropped out of the running, being now eighth on the list. They suffered their fourth consecutive defeat on Saturday when, at Bristol, they lost by one goal to none; but, like Chelsea, the Fulham team gained an excellent victory and made some slight advance in the competition. After their recent brilliant form the overthow of Wolverhampton Wanderers at Barnsley was in the nature of a surprise, though Barnsley are generally a strong team on their own ground and likely to cause an upset. Grimsby Town, who were beaten at home last week, were one of three clubs to win on opponents ground, the others being Chelsea and Notts Forest. The unfortunate clubs in the competition are Gainsborough Trinity and Glossop, both of whom have yet to gain their first victory.

The meeting of the leaders with last season's Southern League champions proved worthy of the occasion, some 25,000 people seeing a great game, in which Swindon proved successful by 3 goals to 1. Well merited, the victory was as decisive as the score suggests. Queen's Park Rangers for once failing in defence, while Swindon, their victors, played consistently sound football without a sign of weakness. Not only did the Rangers suffer their first defeat of the season, but Shaw, in being beaten three times, gave away as many goals as had been scored against the side in ten matches. This reverse does not deprive the Rangers of their position at the head of the competition, but Swindon's record is only inferior in the matter of goal average, and success at Park Royal shows the champions to be quite as good a side as when premier honours fell to them early in the year. Crystal Palace, as usual when visiting Southampton, gained a victory, and strengthened their hold on the third place, as Northampton could only draw at Brentford; Millwall go up fourth, thanks to a win over Bristol Rovers, while West Ham United also improved their record.

The BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL states:—

"PURGEN has been largely prescribed in the London Hospitals, and has in suitably graduated cases shown itself to be a useful purgative both in Children and Adults. The properties ascribed to this substance have been verified by its use in a large number of cases of constipation, in various diseases."

"THE LAXATIVE OF THE FUTURE."

PURGEN acts surely, gently and uniformly, without causing any irritation or pain, and its effect does not wear off by prolonged use. PURGEN is not absorbed by the system. It has no action on the liver or kidneys, and it does not produce flatulence, nausea, depression or other disagreeable symptoms usually associated with aperient medicines. PURGEN is an especially valuable medicine for the delicate, for invalids and for children. Made up in small tablets of agreeable flavour and sold in boxes only.

Sold in Three Strengths:—

"INFANT" (for young children); "ADULT" (for "grown-ups"); "STRONG" (for invalids and chronic constipation).

Every Demand Satisfied

Durries that are well made, well coloured and well designed will always look well and wear well. These are special points in "ELGIN" durries. Made from yarn specially spun by us, dyed by expert dyers and woven under strict European supervision by the best workmen obtainable, an "ELGIN" durrie will give satisfaction all the time. Even when badly worn and soiled it will always fetch value. Shun bazaar productions; they are not safe and they do not give you the value we guarantee. We can make durries to any required design and customers can select their own colours.

Elgin
DURRIES

A few extracts from numerous letters addressed to the company will show the estimation in which "ELGIN" durries are held. A Colonel writes:—"The durries arrived promptly, and we are delighted with them. They are just what we wanted." An I.C.S. official states:—"The durries supplied are beautifully coloured and made and surpass my expectations." A Major says:—"I am very pleased with the durries and your prompt attention to my order." A Native Chief says:—"Your durries are all that you claim them to be and I am perfectly satisfied with them." THE CASUALS VS. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—In a good game at Tufnell Park the Casuals were fortunate to gain a bare victory by two goals to one. Play was always fast, and at times both sides showed considerable skill in dribbling and passing. Rather slippery at the start, the turf became very muddy towards the finish, when rain fell, but the players kept their form very creditably. Oxford were again without their captain, A. H. G. Kerry, but the forwards were much better than in previous games, and G. D. Pidgeon, playing full back with I. P. F. Campbell, made the defence much more reliable. The Casuals had a very good side, and C. E. Brisley, at centre forward, showed special cleverness in keeping his line together. There was little to choose between the sides in the first half, but Oxford did well to cross over on even terms. Soon afterwards Brisley dashed through and scored a fine goal, and the Casuals, though often hard-pressed kept their lead until about ten minutes from the end, when Hosie got a good goal for Oxford. When a draw seemed almost certain the Casuals made a couple of breaks away, and in the second of these V. Edwards shot the goal which gave his side the victory, a decidedly lucky result, seeing that Oxford had attacked almost continually for half an hour. The Casuals, 2; Oxford University, 1.

NEW CRUSADERS VS. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—Only a small company watched the Crusaders beat Cambridge at Sidcup. Cambridge strengthened their forward line by substituting Law for Crisp, and Evers and Vachell were in the half-back line. The Crusaders were without H. V. Farnfield and Hobbs, and through H. G. Yates missing his train, they played one short for over half an hour. With the home side at this disadvantage Cambridge naturally were soon attacking, but the Crusaders were the first to score. Edwards got in a good centre under difficulties and Eric Farnfield, with an open goal, had no difficulty in giving his side an early lead. Cambridge were not long in equalising, a pass by Winterbottom being met by B. C. Farnfield, who beat Wilson with a capital shot. Yates appeared just before the interval, which arrived with the score 1—1. During the second half Cambridge did nearly all the attacking, the whole team playing in much better form than when they met Kent on the same ground nine days earlier. However, they were opposed by a clever defence, which gave them very few scoring opportunities. Fleming on one occasion had hard luck on striking the bar. F. H. Farnfield twice saved what appeared to be certain scores by just reaching the ball, and he with J. Davis defended especially well. Towards the close the Crusaders dashed away and when Yates centred Edwards beat Hopewell in a rush for the ball and scored the winning goal. New Crusaders, 2; Cambridge University, 1.

THE COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

NORTHUMBERLAND VS. YORKSHIRE.—Considerable interest attached to the meeting of these northern counties at Newcastle as they were regarded as the strongest teams in the division. The weather was fine, and the match attracted a large crowd. The promise of a close contest was fully realised, Yorkshire winning by two tries to one try. In the early stages the Yorkshire forwards got the ball repeatedly, but the backs did very little with their chances, mainly owing to the keen tackling of the home men. Eventually Roberts scored for Northumberland, but the place kick failed. Later Harrison gained a try for Yorkshire, but failed to convert. Afterwards Harrison missed a chance of kicking a goal from a penalty, and at half-time the scores were at one try each. After changing ends Yorkshire pressed vigorously, but were repulsed, and then Alexander only just missed scoring for Northumberland. Afterwards a combined movement by F. E. Steinthal and Griffiths ended in the last named gaining a try. Harrison again failed to kick a goal from a penalty, but Yorkshire managed to hold their narrow lead to the end. On the whole the Yorkshire passing was rather poor. Yorkshire, 6 points; Northumberland, 3 points.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY VS. GLOUCESTER.—After a long interval Gloucester visited Oxford and sustained a rather heavy reverse, the Dark Blues winning by four goals (one penalty) to nothing. Oxford were without Knott, and Cook was absent from the Gloucester fifteen. Soon after the start Poulton gained a fine try for Oxford, the point being improved upon Gloucester fairly well held their own until Hall was injured and left the field. Then in quick succession Gingle, from a penalty, dropped a brilliant goal, and the same player and Poulton gained tries, both of which were converted. The forwards were evenly matched but Oxford held an advantage outside the scrummage. Oxford University, 13 points; Gloucester, 0.

BLACKHEATH VS. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—A very hard and keenly contested game at the Rectory Field ended in a draw, neither side scoring. There was a capital attendance and the ground was in excellent order, but the play was not of a high character. By the Army match Blackheath were deprived of Pym, their scrum half, and two of their best forwards, while others were away playing for Yorkshire, but Dickson returned to the full-back position, and Neale (late of Bristol) was once more included in the three-quarter line. Cambridge were without Thorne and Will, and were very weak behind the scrum. The game was rather a scramble, in which the forwards took a leading part, and it was not often that anything good in the way of combination was seen. The backs were evenly matched; the scrum halves on either side were weak, so that few openings were made by them. The stand-offs, however, were both excellent, and while Thomas put in some good kicking, Coverdale did his best to get his three-quarters in motion. Neale and Sanfuentes on the right wing were very strong and made a number of good attacks, but every time the defence was too strong for them. In fact, on both sides defence was the feature of the game, the full backs doing splendid work. Blackheath, 0; Cambridge University, 0.

OLD LEYSIANS VS. LONDON HOSPITAL.—The football at Barnwood-lane, Wandsworth, was extremely level during the first half, but the Leysians, entirely by reason of the clever drop-kicking of Pepper, who twice kicked goals from the visitors' "25," managed to secure a useful lead of eight points before the change of ends. Afterwards, however, the home team quite outplayed their opponents. Their forwards did splendid work in the loose and the Hospital defence, sorely attacked, at times broke down badly. From one of the forward rushes Mellor went over and from another Mallinson scored, while just before no side B. H. Holloway also obtained a try. These just two tries were both gained under the extreme wing, but Pinkham on each occasion placed splendid goals. Thus the Leysians won entirely on their merits by means of four goals (two dropped) and a try to nothing. Old Leysians, 21 points; London Hospital, 0.

ATHLETICS AND CROSS-COUNTRY.

At Golder's Green the Surrey Walking Club's open seven miles handicap was won, in a field of nearly 100 competitors, by J. E. Burwash, of the promoting club, with 6½m. start in the net time of 59m. 40s.

Oxford University Hare and Hounds' first team beat the Surrey Athletic Club's first team over a five and a half miles course, at Raynes Park, on Saturday, by 2 points (38 to 40) and also supplied, in W. R. Wright, the first man home.

In the second team match over a seven miles course at Oxford, the Dark Blues gained a hollow victory, the first four men hailing from the 'Varsity.

Corpus College, Oxford, sports took place on the same afternoon, when A. Chavasse, a brother of the old Blue, won the 100yds. in 10 4-5s. the 120yds. hurdles race in 20s. and the quarter-mile in 58 3-5s.

Cambridge University Hare and Hounds lost both their matches with the South London Harriers on Saturday. In the first team match, over the Gog-Magog seven miles course at Cambridge, the S.L.H. won by 26 points to 29. The first three men home were C. J. Moss (S.L.H.), 40m. 22s, 1; S. F. Ayres (S.L.H.), 40m. 45s, 2; G. T. Spinks (Cambridge), 41m. 20s. 3.

In the second team match, over a seven miles course at Croydon, South London won by a single point (27 to 28). E. F. Judson (S.L.H.), 41m. 18s. was first.

Clydesdale Harriers decided a seven miles level race and inter-team contest at the Glasgow Agricultural Society's grounds on Saturday. A. Kerr (Motherwell H.) was first man home, and the Monkwell Harriers won the team race, in which twenty-five clubs took part.

At the annual general meeting of the National Cross-Country Union, at Manchester on Saturday, it was decided to hold the next championship at Haydock Park, and to regard the international race as a trial for the selection of the English representatives at the Olympic Games.

ROWING.

THE COLQUHOUN SCULLS.

The first day's racing in connection with the Colquhoun Sculls took place on the Cam yesterday in the presence of a large company, and some excellent racing was witnessed. The whole of the competitors figured in the four heats. The result makes it clearer than ever that the issue will rest between the popular president, R. W. M. Arbuthnot, L. A. Pattinson (Jesus), and D. I. Day (Lady Margaret). The latter put up a splendid race when defeating H. M. Heyland, Pembroke, by about two lengths. He was giving away about two stone in weight, which was an important factor in view of the strong wind against the scullers. It is only fair to Heyland, however, to explain that he has recently recovered from an attack of influenza, and was probably unable to produce his best form.

H. W. Hales, Pembroke, had little difficulty in disposing of C. Grantham Hill, Caius, the latter being a stone the lighter. He had been prepared by G. E. Wallace, the boatman, but the elements were all against him. For him to have stood a chance, perfect calm was necessary.

Everybody looked forward with eagerness to the race between R. W. M. Arbuthnot, Third Trinity, and R. S. Adams, Trinity Hall. Here again there was a big difference in the weights of the opponents in favour of the Trinity Hall sculler, but the president's superior style counterbalanced this, and he won with comparative ease. Adams rowed a plucky race, and although practically exhausted when his opponent won by over 50yds. he persevered until he finished the course. Then he immediately dropped his left scull, and in another second he had fallen into the water.

The last race of the afternoon, between L. A. Pattinson, Jesus, and C. F. Burnand, First Trinity, was completed in the fastest time of the whole series, there being 2secs. between Pattinson's time and the next best. Although Burnand has not done much sculling this year, he made a very creditable show, and probably, had he taken the earlier preparation a little more seriously, he might have got nearer the final. It is not without interest to mention that Pattinson is the only competitor who has been trained by a professional. Before beginning operations on the Cam, he had a series of spins at Putney with "Bossy" Phelps, and the well-known professional coach has been journeying backwards and forwards to Cambridge for the last fortnight.

THE DELHI DURBAR TOURNAMENT.

King's Dragoon Guards vs. 10th Hussars.—These teams met on the 28th November when the Dragoons reversed the result of the last Inter-Regimental tournament in the final which they were beaten by the 10th. To-day's game was well contested throughout and there was a large gathering of spectators, their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Hardinge being among those present.

First Chukker.—Fast play till Rasbotham got on and opened the Dragoons' account, Cheape nearly putting on another goal shortly after.

Second Chukker.—This was a fast period and play was very level, neither team securing any material advantage.

Third Chukker.—Cheape got away and only just missed scoring. The 10th were next prominent but Weinholt deprived them of the ball and running down scored a goal. Annesley got possession from the throw in and hit the 10th's first point.

Fourth Chukker.—A free hit for a foul against the 10th gave their opponents a chance, but Cheape's shot went out wide, up and down play followed and then in a melee before the 10th's flags Rasbotham put through. The rest of the period was all in favour of the 10th and Annesley and Palmer scored goals. The score was 3 all at half time.

Fifth Chukker.—A good run by Cheape was unsuccessful and then the 10th pressed but could not get through and play was taken to midfield. Then the Dragoons got away and Cheape put through. He got possession again from the thrown in and scored another goal before the close of the period.

Sixth Chukker.—Both goals were visited in turn and Weinholt hit a goal. The Dragoons had the best of the play in this chukker but there was no further scoring.

Seventh Chukker.—The 10th pressed vigorously and Palmer scored. But from the throw in Weinholt got away and put on another goal. Play was most exciting and the Dragoons continued to hold the upper hand.

Eight Chukker.—The Dragoons had decidedly the best of the last period and Rasbotham obtained another goal, the final score reading: K. D. G's, 8 goals; 10th Hussars, 4 goals. Teams:—

K. D. G's.		10th Hussars.
Capt. Rasbotham	1	Capt. the Hon. A. Annesley	1
Mr. Weinholt	2	Capt. W. O. Gibbs	2
Capt. L. Cheape	3	Mr. E. W. Palmer	3
Major Wickham	(back)	Mr. W. L. Palmer	(back)

Umpires:—Captains Lockett and Ritson.

Bhopal vs. 17th Cavalry.—Played on the 29th instant, Bhopal winning somewhat easily by 7 goals to 4.

First and Second Chukker.—Play was very even during the opening periods. Bhopal drew first blood, Imtiaz Ali putting through but it was not long Wilson equalised. Then Bhopal came away again and Imtiaz Ali put on a second goal. The 17th pressed and Bhopal hit behind to save.

Third Chukker.—The resulting penalty was not turned to advantage by the 17th but the Cavalry had the best of the game in this period, though they could not add to their score.

Fourth Chukker.—The 17th kept up the pressure and Wilson scored, Henderson adding another point soon after—the result of a good dribbling run. Then Bhopal attacked and Imtiaz Ali was given possession by Ghulam Ahmed and he put the teams on terms. Abdul Wahid added another point and Bhopal led at half time.

Fifth Chukker.—This was a well contested chukker but where as the 17th's efforts were fruitless, Bhopal's score was augmented by two more goals, Abdul Wahid and Imtiaz Ali being responsible.

Sixth Chukker.—Bhopal were again prominent in this chukker, and Imtiaz Ali was much to the fore and was responsible for yet another goal.

Seventh and Eighth Chukkers.—The 17th showed greatly improved form in the last two periods and they scored another goal. But all their further efforts were unsuccessful and they were beaten as stated by 7 goals to 4. Teams:—

Bhopal.		17th Cavalry.
Jemadar Ghulam Ahmed	1	Mr. Kirkwood	1
Capt. Abdul Wahid	2	Capt. Wilson	2
Imtiaz Ali	3	Capt. Henderson	3
Capt. J. L. Todd	(back.)	Mr. Atkinson	(back)

Imperial Cadet Corps vs. 9th Hodson's Horse.—Although play was not of so high a standard as that in the preceding games, spectators were treated to a very exciting match on the 30th ultimo when the Cadets beat the 9th by 5 goals to 4.

First Chukker.—Play opened rather stickily but they soon warmed to their work and the 9th scored through Vigors.

Second Chukker.—Offside against the Cadets gave the 9th a free hit and Fatteh Mahomed taking the ball down just missed scoring. Fast play followed but the period ended without score.

Third Chukker.—Atkinson was conspicuous for some good runs and Fatteh Mahomed again added to the 9th's score.

Fourth Chukker.—The 9th pressed but were driven back and Akle Singh opened the Cadet's account.

Fifth Chukker.—The Cadets pressed vigorously and both Saranur and Jaora hit goals.

Sixth Chukker.—Fast play all over the field, the 9th obtained two goals through Fraser.

Seventh Chukker.—The Cadets were striving hard and eventually a neat shot by Jaora put them on terms.

Eighth Chukker.—Play ruled up and down and was very level all through the last period. Jaora scored just before time and gave the Cadets a 5 to 4 victory. Teams:—

9th Hodson's Horse.		Imperial Cadet Corps.
Mr. M. O. Vigors	1	H. H. the Nawab of Saranur	1
Capt. A. Fraser	2
Kote Duffadar Fattah Mahomed Beg	3	H. H. the Nawab of Jaora	2
Capt. F. St. J. Atkinson (back)		Maharaj Akle Singh	3
		Capt. Skinner	(back)

Umpires:—Colonel Watson and Captain Barrett.

17th Lancers vs. The Scouts.—This the finest match witnessed in the tournament thus far, was played on the 1st instant and ended after an extra chukker had been played, in a win for the Scouts by 8 goals to 7.

First Chukker.—The first was rather a ragged chukker, both teams attacked in turn but nothing of importance occurred.

Second Chukker.—The 17th got on and Melville opened their score, a second point being registered by Parbury soon after.

Third Chukker.—The Scouts did all the attacking in this period and Miles and Barrett were conspicuous for good work but there was no score.

Fourth Chukker.—Barrett got away and put the ball through. Miles had a shot soon after but missed by inches. A penalty against the 17th was not turned to account and then they ran down and the Scouts had to hit behind to save. Lockett took the penalty hit but shot wide.

Fifth Chukker.—Offside against the Scouts but the penalty hit went out wide. Then Barrett got away and equalled with a splendid shot, Miles adding to the score before the close of the period, a wonderful shot from a difficult angle.

Sixth Chukker.—The Scouts had all the best of this period. Miles hit a goal, Barrett followed up with another and Miles added a third. A foul against the 17th gave the Scouts another chance but Barrett hit wide.

Seventh Chukker.—The 17th showed up in this period and put on two goals, Melville and Parbury been responsible.

Eighth Chukker.—Parbury rushed the ball through and a foul against Chanda Singh soon after enabled the 17th to equalise. The 17th kept up the pressure and Melville gave them the lead soon after. They appeared to be going to win when just before time Chanda Singh equalised with a magnificent shot.

Extra Chukker.—The goals were widened and the game resumed. Play was very level for a spell till Miles and Chanda Singh took the ball down and Miles scored, thus giving victory to the Scouts by 8 goals to 7. Teams:—

Mr. Parbury	1	Mr. Miles	1
Capt. Melville	2	Capt. Stewart	2
Mr. H. Turner	3	Capt. Barrett	3
Capt. V. N. Lockett	(back)	Col. Chanda Singh	(back)

6th Inniskilling Dragoons vs. Palanpur.—Played on the 2nd instant the Dragoons winning comfortably by 8 goals to nil.

First Chukker.—The Dragoons pressed and Ritson scored, a second goal was added soon after. A collision between Nixon and Ritson in which Nixon came down caused some delay.

Second Chukker.—The 6th kept up the attack and Colemore scored.

Third Chukker.—This was a more level period. Bhairun, who was working very hard for Palanpur, averted a couple of likely goals.

Fourth Chukker.—The Dragoons got down and scored in a scrimmage. Then Palanpur pressed but nothing came of their efforts and the ball being returned to their territory Nixon hit a goal.

Fifth Chukker.—The Dragoons attacked but missed several easy shots.

Sixth Chukker.—The Palanpur team were again kept on the defensive and Colemore scored for the Dragoons.

Seventh Chukker.—Palanpur attacked but could not get through and at length the Dragoons cleared and rushing down put on their seventh point.

WINCHESTER

RIFLE AND PISTOL CARTRIDGES.

To do justice to your skill, you should use good ammunition no less than an accurate rifle or pistol. The arm is often blamed when the ammunition is at fault. To insure your getting cartridges that are uniform in size and shooting strength, and sure-fire and accurate, ask for Winchester cartridges—the Red W Brand. These cartridges are made and loaded in the most complete plant in the world by automatic machinery and are always just the same.

Second Round.

13th Hussars vs. King's Dragoon Guards.—Played on the 4th instant the Dragoons winning by 8 goals to 1.

First Chukker.—The Dragoons attacked throughout the opening period and Cheape scored a goal.

Second Chukker.—The Hussars ran down and Lawson Smith equalised. Then the Dragoons pressed once more. Weinholt ran through but his final effort went out wide. He put in another good run shortly after and this time made no mistake Rasbotham scored their third goal before the close of the period.

Third Chukker.—Up and down play. Both goals were visited and the Hussars got another goal, the result of good play by Richardson and Lawson Smith.

Fourth Chukker.—The 13th hit behind to save and from the penalty shot Cheape put the ball through. Rasbotham added another goal a little later and then the Hussars put in a good bit of combined play and scored, making their score 3—5 at the interval

Fifth Chukker.—The Dragoons attacked and Rasbotham hit a goal. The Hussars were busy defending for the rest of the period but they kept their opponents out.

Sixth Chukker.—This was a very level chukker and both territories were invaded. The only score was a goal by Wickham.

Seventh Chukker.—The Kings Dragoons continued to do all the attacking and Cheape scored just before the close of the period.

Eighth Chukker.—The 13th made desperate efforts during this period and Vanneck scored a clever goal. All subsequent attempts were frustrated and the final score was King's Dragoon Guards, 8 goals; 13th Hussars, 4 goals. Teams as before.

Umpires :—Captain Lockett and Ritson.

Imperial Cadets vs. Bhopal.—Played on the 5th instant a fast galloping game ending in a win for Bhopal by 7 goals to 3. The close of the sixth chukker found the score 2 all. In the seventh Bhopal scored three times to a single point by the Cadets and in the last they put on 2 more without response and won as stated. Teams as before.

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The final arrangements for the Christmas week matches have at last been decided, and the first match of the C.C.C. will be against the United Services, which will take place at the Gardens on the 23rd and 24th December. On the same dates the Bombay Gymkhana will play Ballygunge on the latter's ground, when it is to be hoped that the suburban Club will be able to put out a representative side. This, however, is doubtful, as some of the B.C.C. members will be assisting the Services. On the 25th and 26th Calcutta play Bombay and on the 27th the Club will meet the Elphinstone College at the Gardens as stated in my previous notes. A two-day match, Nattore vs. Bombay Gymkhana, takes place on the Maharaja's ground on the 18th and 19th and the last of the big fixtures will be between Calcutta and Ballygunge on the 31st December and 1st January.

The Maharaja of Patiala, who will also be in Calcutta for about a fortnight for the big race meetings, is to be accompanied by most of his cricketers, including Tarrant, the Middlesex "pro", Mistry, and others, and there is a rumour that His Highness' team, with the assistance of Prince Victor and Prince Hitty of Cooch Behar, will play a couple of games on days when there will be no races.

Prince Victor, who has been down with fever at Cooch Behar, is, I am glad to say, out of bed and will captain the Bengal Gymkhana in the four important matches next month.

It is a thousand pities that Dalhousie, Rangers and the Town Club have had to cancel all their engagements which were fixed to take place on their own grounds. The portion of the maidan on which their tents were pitched has been given up to the contractors for building, stands etc. in connection with the Royal visit. The Trades Club consequently have had to cancel all their fixtures, even their Sunday games, as it would be impossible to play without practice and, what is more, there is no where to keep their gear, the tents on this portion of the maidan having already been taken down. The other clubs on the maidan have received orders that their tents will have to be lowered out by the 8th instant, and consequently cricket will be greatly interfered with. True sportsmen will sympathise with these clubs, who have spent lots of money and time on getting their grounds in perfect order, and will now have to give up all their enjoyment. There is a rumour that no cricket will be allowed on any part of the maidan while His Majesty is in Calcutta; but all lovers of the game hope there is no truth in this.

The week's matches produced some interesting cricket, the game at the Gardens between the C.C.C. and their old opponents the Customs being witnessed by a large number of spectators, and it was the first occasion this year that the pavilion was full. Calcutta batted first and occupied the wicket nearly all Saturday afternoon and T. C. Stafford, who is one of the most inconsistent batsmen, came off on this occasion, contributing 64, the highest individual score in the match. He drove hard, but was badly missed at short leg, where he was later eventually bold. A. J. Carter again got runs, playing a good innings for 28, while S. C. B. Lee also batted steadily for a not out 32. Given Wilson's 12 was the only other double figure recorded, the innings closing for 167. The Customs' fielding might have been better, two catches being dropped, but Marsden bowled really well, getting six wickets for 59 runs, while McCready got three for 58. The Customs on the same evening lost Cross l. b. w.—a very doubtful decision, the total being 18 for one wicket. On the following morning the Riversiders fared badly, the remaining nine wickets only adding a hundred to the overnight score, Quiterio contributing 28. Daly (21) and Singleton (16) were the other double figures recorded. The home attack was exceptionally good, all the bowlers keeping perfect length, and the fielding left nothing to be desired. A. P. Muir took four wickets for 33 runs, Lee four for 35 and N. W. Chisholm two for 25. As there were three hours left for play a second innings was indulged in, but with the exception of White's not out 35, Quiterio's not out 52 and A. J. Stevens' 27, there was nothing else of note in the batting. Both White and Quiterio's displays were without blemish, neither batsman giving the semblance of a chance. Calcutta declared at 113 for six wickets, while the Customs got 110 for five. Calcutta won on the first innings by 49 runs. In the second innings McCready got five wickets for 45 runs and Chisholm for Calcutta three for 32.

The Y.M.C.A. Jamalpur team came to Calcutta and played the Rifle Brigade last Saturday, when the Fort eleven won by 88 runs. Out of a total of 196 seven of the military players got double figures, Lieutenant Bridgeman (52) and Sergeant Condon (31) being chief contributors. Jamalpur replied with 104, to which Boileau (25) and Dickins (21) were the principal run getters. Corporal Sawyers for the winners took seven wickets for 45 runs.

Time saved the Aryans from being beaten by Ballygunge on Saturday, the home team declaring with a total of 111 for seven, while the Aryans got 54 for eight wickets. H. F. Foster's not out 29 and C. S. Murray's seven wickets for 21 runs were the only features of the game. Neither side were representative.

The Chowringhee Branch beat the Wellington Branch of the Y.M.C.A. by seven wickets in a half-day match on Saturday. Atkinson's not out 69 for the winners was the only feature of the game. The same day the Telegraphs beat Howrah Sporting by two wickets. G. Edie batting soundly for a not out 73. Edie in ten innings has scored 400 runs with four not-outs.

The match between Rangers and Dalhousie which should have come off last Saturday, had to be abandoned, as both teams have had to cancel all their engagements.

The 3rd Middlesex, who have been stationed at Lebong but are at present under canvas at Hastings played Ballygunge on the latter's ground last Sunday when the home team won by 124 runs. Batting first Ballygunge knocked up 292 by consistent play, seven of the batsmen getting into double figures. D. S. Shallow and his younger brother A. W. were in scoring vein, the former compiling 84 while A. W. got 67, Both batted in free and attractive style, and F. N. C. Rossiter (28) and G. Peddie 25 also showed good form. Lieutenant Horne got 4 wickets for 66 runs. The Middlesex responded with 168, to which Lieutenants Horne, 39, Lightfoot 28, Captain Miller 16, and Lieutenant Wellman, not out 43, were the principal subscribers. Frank Gould for Ballygunge took five wickets for 35 runs.

A team from the 66th Punjabis, composed entirely of officers, beat the E.B.S.R. officers by 115 runs in an enjoyable game at Barrackpore last Saturday. Captain G. L. Whatford for the winners distinguished himself with the bat contributing 71 in the first innings and a not out 37 in the second. Captain Smith (61) and C. E. Daly (20) for the Punjabis and Captain Keelan 19 and 12 for the Railway also batted well. The Punjabis totalled 179 and 68 for two (innings declared) while the E.B.S.R scored 79 and 53.

The Rangers beat the Sporting Union on Sunday at Marcus Square by 31 runs, the respective totals being 161 and 130. For the winners W. Jackson hit well for 68.

At Garden Reach the Port Commissioners beat the Orientals on Sunday by the narrow margin of 6 runs. The visitors scored 149 and the P. C. 155, E. Grimswale (45), A. E. Templeton (40) and the latter's five wickets for 45 runs were the chief features of the match.

The United Jute Mills are doing very well indeed and on Sunday the Scotchmen beat Sibpur College on the latter's ground by 16 runs. The respective totals were 132 and 116. For the winners J. McAndrew again was top scorer subscribing on this occasion 47. D. McLaen got 24 while for Sibpur Baptiste contributed 55.

THE DELHI DURBAR TOURNAMENT.

TWO more games were played on the 29th ultimo. In the first of these the Black Watch (2nd Division) met the Lancashire Fusiliers (3rd Division) and, as was expected, a fine game was witnessed. The Highlanders had, if anything, the bigger share of the game, but their shooting was at fault. Play was fast and inclined to be a little rough at the start but they soon settled down and the ball moved all over the field, the interval arriving without score. Both teams defended stoutly and it was not till nearing the end that the only goal of the match was scored, the Lancashires putting through from a free kick and thus winning a good game. The second game was between the 1st Battalion Royal Irish (7th Division) and the Border Regiment (Burma Division). The former were expected to win but to the general surprise they failed to rise to the occasion. Play was interesting and the Burma representatives evidently had their shooting boots on, for they made three goals without response before the interval. The Irishmen tried hard to score but lost many chances owing to erratic shooting. On resuming after half time they pressed vigorously and eventually managed to net the ball but this was the last of the scoring and the game ended in a win for the Border Regiment by 3 goals to 1. On Friday last two further games were played, completing the second round. The first of these was between the Loyal North Lancashires (6th Division) and the Durham Light Infantry (5th Division). There was little to choose between the teams, though the Lancashires were quicker on the ball than their opponents. The Durhams gave several good exhibitions of passing but their efforts in front of goal were poor and they were eventually beaten by the odd goal in three. The other match between the King's Shropshire Light Infantry (9th Division) and the 2nd Royal Welsh Fusiliers (4th Division) was not a very brilliant display, the King's winning by 3 goals to 2. They drew first blood, but the Welsh equalised before the interval. On resuming the Shropshires again took the lead and held the upper hand for a long spell but the Welsh got away once more and made the score two all. The concluding play was interesting, and the Shropshires putting through again won as stated. The Semi-finals were played on Monday. The Lancashire Fusiliers met the King's Shropshire Light Infantry, and beat them by three to nil. The game was slow and a very poor display all round. The other game was between the Border Regiment and the Loyal North Lancashire and, though better than the first match, was not a very remarkable contest. The Border Regiment won and will meet the Lancashire Fusiliers in the Final on Saturday. There is a probability of Their Majesties being present on the occasion.

THE DELHI DURBAR TOURNAMENT.

The second round in the tournament opened on the 30th ultimo when two games were played. In the first the 84th Punjabis (2nd Division) beat the 1st Bahmans (9th Division) by 4 goals to 3. They took it by turns to lead and the winning point was scored in the last few minutes of the game. The 33rd Punjabis (7th Division) then met the 46th Punjabis (1st Division.) Though not so fast as the previous match this was another good exhibition and though the 46th were not expected to win they made the 33rd travel all the way. The 46th's custodian let through two rather easy shots and they had to retire beaten by 4 goals to 2.

On Saturday the second round was finished with two games. The first was between the 30th Punjabis (5th Division) and the 48th Pioneers (8th Division). The 48th put up a good game in the first and half, when play was very level, but on changing ends they went to pieces and were quite outclassed, being eventually defeated by 3 goals to 1. The game between the 130th Baluchis (4th Division) and the 93rd Burma Infantry (Burma Division) was a very one-sided affair; the Burma team had matters all their own way and won comfortably by 7 goals to 1.

The semi-finals were played on Tuesday. The first game was between the 30th Punjabis and the 84th Punjabis. The initial moiety was very level and only one goal was scored, the 30th putting through. On crossing over the 30th put on another goal, but the 84th played up and registered their first point. Thereafter the 30th were always on top and scoring three more goals they ran out victorious by 5 goals to one. The second game brought together the 33rd Punjabis and the 93rd Burma Infantry. It was fast and interesting throughout and only one goal was scored, the 33rd putting through in the first half. The final between the 30th Punjabis and the 33rd Punjabis will be played on the 14th instant.

Boxing.

ARE "KNOCK OUTS" ILLEGAL?

An English Test Case.

Owen Moran and Jim Driscoll were summoned, at Birmingham on the 15th November before the stipendiary (the Hon'ble B. B. Foster), to show cause why they should not be bound over to be of good behaviour and to keep the peace; and Gerard Austin was summoned for aiding and betting the combatants, who are matched to box twenty three-minute rounds at the Sparkbrook Skating Rink on 16th December, for the feather-weight championship of the world.

Mr. Marshall Hall, K.C., Mr. H. Joy, and Mr. H. Grattan Bushe represented all three defendants; and Mr. J. E. Hill appeared on behalf of the Chief Constable, who instituted the proceedings. The case has aroused great interest throughout the sporting world, and the court was crowded with a number of well-known sportsmen, including the Earl of Lonsdale, Sir C. Champion-de-Crespigny, Mr. Eugene Corri, Mr. Bruce Logan, Mr. Frank Bradley, and several eminent medical men.

Mr. Hill, in opening the case, said the proceedings were not instituted in any puritanical spirit, but in the interest of true sport, as it was contended that what was contemplated was nothing more nor less than a prize-fight. The public conscience had been stirred in the matter, and the promoters were themselves to blame if they found themselves in a difficult position through having arranged so important a contest. He contended that it was a money-making affair rather than a contest in the true interests of sport. Driscoll held the feather-weight championship, which he won in 1910 at the National Sporting Club, and he was now challenged by Moran. The contest was to take place, according to the agreement, under "strict Queensberry rules," whatever that might mean.

An Undertaking.

Mr. Marshall Hall interposed to say that they were prepared to give an undertaking that the contest should take place under 1910 National Sporting Club rules.

Mr. Hill went on to say that the men were engaged for a twenty three-minute round contest for (in addition to the championship) £200 a-side, a purse of £2,600, and a gold belt of the value of £300. The winner was to receive 60 per cent. and the loser 40 per cent. of the stakes, and he calculated that the one would take £1,560 and the other £1,040. The Chief Constable was taking the matter up because he apprehended certain contingencies. He had no knowledge that the contest was to be conducted under the National Sporting Club rules, but, on the contrary, the agreement between the men named "strict Queensberry rules," and there was no reference to points in the matter.

If it was going to be a prize fight, as he contended, the Chief Constable was justified in stepping in. The Sparkbrook Skating Rink, in which the contest would take place, would seat 3,000 people, and the price of admission ranged from 5s. to five guineas. The gloves were to be of 6oz. but it was well known that they could be so arranged as to inflict as much damage as the knuckles. The feeling of the Chief Constable was that if the fight took place, the men were likely to injure one another. The one main object of each combatant was to hit the other so hard as to knock him out.

It was apprehended by the Chief Constable that illegalities would be the order of the day. Bodily harm was the sole motive of the contest. He submitted that what was proposed to take place was not a mere exhibition, but a prize fight. Driscoll had won six fights by the knock-out blow, and Moran four. What was proposed was a money-making affair.

The Knock Out.

Police-constable William Hall, formerly of the 21st Lancers stated that in 1906 he won the heavy-weight boxing championship of the Cavalry Brigade at Aldershot. The intention of the principals in such contests, as well as in those such as Moran and Driscoll were engaged in, was to win by knocking out one or the other. It was a common things for combatants or their seconds, when the gloves were handed to them, to knock the padding into the fingers or back to the wrists. This was done as a support for the wrists and to put the finishing touch on the knuckles.

Describing the condition of men after a contest, he said they would be exhausted, their eyes would most probably be stopped up, their lips cut, blood would be flowing from the nose and mouth, and there would be bad bruises. In the agreement between Driscoll and Moran the contest was described as a "battle." He was of opinion that if the contest took place there would be a breach of the peace.

Mr. Hill: Why do you say that?

Witness: Because I believe that each of these people will enter the ring with the intention of subduing each other as early as possible by violent blows, which will mean an assault, and, therefore, a breach of the peace.

Cross-examined, he said he thought some of the spectators would rather see a knock-out blow than that the contest should go the whole twenty rounds. He agreed that Moran and Driscoll were very clean and skilful boxers. It was a case of attack and defence on both sides and he agreed that the greater the skill of the defence the greater the probability of the contest going to the full number of rounds. As the skill was increased the probability of the knock-out was decreased. The contest would bring together some of the very best people in the country and some of the lowest. He had seen contests where the spectators had got very excited and the referee had had to stop the combatants.

There were no other witnesses for the police.

Scientific Sport.

Mr. Marshall Hall formally submitted that before the stipendiary could make any order binding over Driscoll and Moran there must be a legal presumption that they were about to commit a breach of the peace. There was no evidence in support of the contention.

Mr. John Herbert Douglas, president of the Amateur Boxing Association, said boxing was a scientific sport, and free from brute force. Moran and Driscoll were clever, clean boxers. The more skilful the boxers, the less likely was the knock-out blow. In such a contest as that arranged, it was 3 or 4 to 1 that it would go to the full length. If the contests were considered illegal, then all boxing tests would be illegal. It was a rare occurrence to see professionals get nasty. It was always against the man if he did so, display of temper meant reduced skill. All competitive boxing was a question of hard hitting. If the contest in question were considered illegal, he did not know what could be called lawful.

By Mr. Hill: A man tried his best, whether he was fighting for a million pounds or a nominal prize. The sole object was not to subdue an opponent. The contest was no different from a hundred that had taken place.

Lord Lonsdale stated that he had witnessed an enormous number of boxing contests. He was one of the framers of the National Sporting Club rules. He believed, the Queensbury rules had been inserted in the agreement between the men under a misapprehension. Although the agreement stipulated "straight Queensberry rules," the contest would be fought under National Sporting Club rules, with 6oz. gloves. He had no reason to anticipate anything different in this case to what had happened in scores of other cases that had not been interferred with.

Mr. Hill: With regard to the knock out blow?

Lord Lonsdale: It it is absolutely unknown to me except in one way. I have had it three or four times and have given it several times—it is a blow that happens to come, that knocks you out. There is no particular blow that is a knock-out. The knock-out blow is, as a rule, of particular force. I do not think it need be of particular force; it is the accidental position of the blow.

Do you mean to say that a light blow would knock a man out?—It might.

More often it is a blow of considerable force?—Yes; naturally it must be so when quick men are engaged.

A man goes into the ring to subdue his opponent?—I do not know what you mean by "subdue." You might often win a boxing competition by not hitting your hardest.

The man who deals the knock-out blow is probably the winner?—I do not say that is not so, but it is not always the case.

If the man can respond within ten seconds—if a man is so incapacitated that he cannot recover in ten seconds he is regarded as knocked out?—There is a lot of humbug talked about the knock-out.

Referees' Opinion.

Mr Eugene Corri said he accepted the position of referee in this particular match, and would conduct it under National Sporting Club rules. It was not absolutely necessary that the man who received a knock-out blow should lose the match, because he might, and very often did, recover under the ten seconds. If he saw at an early stage that one of the men was clearly outclassed, he would stop the match at once. It was the object of the referee to stop anything approaching brutality. It would be his intention, if the match took place, to see that there was no brutality.

Mr. Bruce Logan said he had received four knock-out blows in one match, but in each case he had recovered before being counted out. He did not experience any physical pain. The more skilful an opponent the less likely was the knock-out blow. It was better to box for points than for the knock-out blow.

The Rev. Everard Digby, curate of St. Paul's, Coventry, stated that he had had a long practice in boxing. He knew both Driscoll and Moran. He did not think there was the least reason to anticipate a breach of the law.

Medical Evidence.

Dr. Allport, medical adviser to the Amateur Boxing Association said the human body was capable of being educated to progressive amounts of physical shock, just in the same way that it could be educated to lift heavy weights from the ground. One of the most important objects of boxing was to educate the body so as to receive progressive amounts of shock—in other words, so as to enable it to take punishment. The point to which this was carried in boxing was extraordinary. A blow on the point of the chin was more likely to cause a knock-out than anything else. The knock-out was not painful. He thought the probability was that the Moran and Driscoll contest would go the twenty rounds. Supposing one got the knock-out blow it could not cause the smallest injury.

Sir Robert Simon and Sir Thomas Chatasse, two Birmingham medical men, gave evidence supporting Dr. Allport.

Mr. Berriman, manager of the National Sporting Club, said he knew Moran and Driscoll, and he agreed that they were exceptionally skilful and equally matched. In all probability the contest would go to the full limit.

Mr. Marshall Hall mentioned that the agreement between the men had been altered to bring the contest under the National Sporting Club rules.

A Prize Fight.

Addressing the stipendiary, he said the prosecution had to satisfy the Court that they were really apprehensive of a breach of the peace. Let the contest continue, and be properly waged, and if the police were of opinion that there was anything in it which differentiated it from legitimate boxing, they could take proceedings for the contravention of the law.

The stipendiary retired with the clerk to consider his decision. On returning, he said the first question he had to decide was whether the contest was a mere exhibition of skilful boxing or a prize fight. In his opinion it was a prize fight, and he accordingly decided that both the combatants and the promoter must be bound over as required by the police.

On the application of Mr. Marshall Hall, the magistrate consented to state a case with a view to an appeal.

The Naturalist.

WORK OF THE SPIDER.

It is on the fine calm days of September and October that the fall of gossamer, the cobweb of the air, is usually seen. And it is also at this time that the cold dewy or misty night reveals the abundance of the spider in garden and field. You go out after such a night and find the garden transformed. The invisible moisture of the air has condensed in tiny droplets strung like beads along each slender strand spun by the spider. The spinner's work is thus brought into prominence, and you wonder where all the spiders can have come from to produce so much web. Here are geometrical webs by the score, each radiating and connecting thread a necklace of dewy beads. Denser hammock-like webs, weighed down with myriad dewdrops, are thickly hung among the bushes. And stretching from almost every leaf and twig in all directions are single threads. On the ground, even, you may see them passing from one little clod of earth to another. And across the path from one bush to another they hang in graceful curves—curves which suggested to Sir Samuel Brown the suspension bridge which he afterwards built over the Tweed.

BY APPOINTMENT To H.M. THE KING.

In praise of LEMCO

Home-made beef tea is neither so strong, so free from fat nor so digestible as Lemco; that is why Medical men prescribe Lemco for their patients.

Home-made beef tea often disagrees; Lemco can be assimilated with ease and benefit; home-made beef tea takes hours to prepare, Lemco is ready in a minute; home-made beef tea varies in quality, Lemco is constant.

Lemco

LEMCO, Thames House, London, E.C.

The meaning of the webs is obvious: they are snares for the unwary fly. But what do these countless single strands, passing from point to point in all directions signify? They would appear to be, in many cases at least, the tracks left by spiders as they journey to and fro, their footprints, so to speak. It is said, indeed, that a large number of spiders thus leave a thread behind them wherever they go. But many of these threads suggest a mode of progression difficult to associate with the crawling spider. One would think, for example, that if a spider wanted to get from the point of a leaf to an adjacent one about the same height it would have to let itself down, crawl along the stem and then up to the point of the second leaf. But its track, in the form of a single thread, goes straight from point to point, suggesting rather a dart through the air. Did the spider jump across, having first attached its thread to the one leaf, or did it first of all shoot a line across, and then use it as a tight rope? And these long lines stretching from bush to bush across a broad garden path, they are not long enough to suggest that the spider let itself down, walked across the path and then ascended the bush on the other side, and if it did pursue this course why attach and stretch tight the line? Shooting itself through the air, or literally throwing a bridge—in the shape of a line of web—across seem the only alternatives. But there are certain experiments and observations available to show how the spider works in certain cases. There are, for example, Blackwall's classical experiments recorded in the Transactions of the Linnean Society. He set a branched twig upright in a vessel of water, and placed on it several geesamer spiders. As soon as they felt a suitable current of air they emitted glutinous matter from their spinnerets which was carried out as lines. When a line became attached to anything the spider would pull it tight and make it fast to the twig. Along these lines, thus bridging the water, they made their escape.

Here, then, we have the generally accepted explanation of the spider's methods, though there appear to be a few cases to which it does not apply. Here, for example, are spider lines for which it is difficult to assign a raison d'etre. As we glance up at the telegraph wires the sun happens to catch them at the right angle, and we see a gleaming fringe of spiders' threads waving from them in the breeze. Of what bold acrobatic feat on the part of the spiders are these threads the evidence? Did they let themselves down, or project themselves upwards, attached to these threads, and then sever their connection, leaving their threads behind? And how did they get on to the telegraph wires to begin with? It is scarcely likely that they climbed the poles and then walked along to where we now see waving threads. Similar waving threads may often be seen gleaming from the hedgerows, and here also they are difficult to explain. So also are these we see waving from the graceful clusters of foxglove bells by the lake side. The delicate strands appear and disappear as they undulate in the breeze, flashing out at times into prismatic colours. Some stretch in graceful curves from plant to plant, others wave free in the breeze.

To explain these free waving spider threads we may perhaps develop Professor Forel's observations a little. A spider lets itself down, say, from a telegraph wire, spinning a thread as it goes. Then from another silk gland it throws out a curl of web to waft in any breeze or ascending current of air. As it is wafted away it severs its connection with the original thread, which is thus left waving free from the wire. The spider itself goes sailing through the air aided by the light web, for many spiders are skilled aeronauts. An observer on boardship some distance from land sees a spider on the side of the vessel. As he looks a thread of silk shining in the sunlight is seen waving from the spider's body. Presently spider and thread float off in the air together. And on one occasion a vessel sixty miles from land was boarded by thousands of little spiders, each one floating on a thread! The record of this wonderful occurrence is to be found in the "Voyage of the Beagle." And Darwin tells us that he had often seen the same little spider on some little eminence send forth a thread and sail away in the air "with a rapidity that was quite unaccountable."—The Globe.

CALCUTTA ZOOLOGICAL GARDEN.

ANNUAL REPORT.

The following extracts are taken from the Annual Administration Report of the Zoological Garden, Calcutta, for the year 1910-11.

The Honorary Committee have the honour to submit their report for the year ending 31st March, 1911:—

Buildings.

The following were some of the new works undertaken during the year:—

The New Monkey House.—The collection of monkeys having gradually increased, a circular brickbuilt house for delicate monkeys with a spacious wire and iron enclosure was constructed. It is divided into 12 compartments, each with an earthen floor, so as to allow the animals to live in what are as nearly as possible natural surroundings. The outer enclosure allows the inmates plenty of open air and space for exercise. The inner enclosure is protected with a tiled verandah, and is provided with snug dormitories which afford good shelter from sun and rain. The whole house is admirably planned, and the animals enjoy the place very much and are in splendid health.

The Recreation Enclosure to the Small Carnivora House.—With a view to giving the smaller carnivoria an opportunity of taking open air exercise by turns, an open air recreation enclosure was built behind the existing building. The enclosure is divided into six compartments. The floor is covered with sand, and each cage is provided with a bath. Opportunity has been taken in this connexion to improve the ventilation of the house, and large ventilation holes with iron gratings have been added to the dens.

The Barasingha Enclosure.—A new commodious shelter-shed for the Barasingha deer has been erected. The old wooden one, which was unsightly, was removed, and the space in front was raised and the drainage improved.

Finance.

The financial condition of the Garden is very satisfactory, and there is a steady increase in the receipts from visitors which amounted to Rs. 42,018.12 as against Rs. 36,068.4 of the previous year, thus showing an increase of Rs. 5,950.8.

The following is a comparative statement of receipts from visitors:—

Year	Receipts
	Rs.	A.
1906-09	... 35,929	12

Visitors.

It is gratifying to report that the total number of paying visitors during the year was 537,122, an increase of 37,494 over the figure of the previous year. This clearly indicates the increasing popularity of the Garden.

Among other distinguished visitors, Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Hardinge visited the Garden several times and his Royal and Imperial Highness the German Crown Prince also honoured it by a visit during his stay in Calcutta.

Comparative table of visitors during the last three years:—

Year	Visitors.
1908-09	... 471,305
1910-11	... 537,122

In addition, a large number of children under four years of age and school children attended by their teachers were admitted free. On the day of the Fancy Fair about 10,000 people entered the Garden. Besides these 47,139 persons visited the Garden on the free days.

Garden.

The Garden has been kept up in excellent condition throughout the year. The lawns and paths are in good order, and the show of flowers has been a special attraction to visitors. It is also a pleasure to report that the Garden was awarded 8 first, 2 second, and 2 third prizes in the Alipur Agri.-Horticultural Society's Flower Show held on 17th and 18th February, 1911.

Conclusion.

The thanks of the Committee are due to the ladies and gentlemen who have added to the collection of the garden by their donations. Thanks are also due to those who kindly offered to present animals to the Garden, but whose offers could not be accepted, either because the particular species of animal was already sufficiently well represented or owing to the want of accommodation.

The Committee also desires to express its sincere thanks to the Officers Commanding the 27th Punjabis for allowing their band to play free on Sunday evening.

Superintendent's Report.

I have the honour to submit the following report on the existing condition and the progress of the menagerie of the Garden.

The following comparative table shows how the various collections of animals in the Garden stood during the last four years:—

Year.	Mammals.	Birds.	Reptiles.
1907-08	401	795	310
1908-09	417	803	312
1910-11	599	1,342	259

Many important additions to the collection have been made during the past year, among which attention may be called to the following:—

Births in Captivity.

The following is a list of the most important instances of births in captivity during the year 1910-11:—

Mammals.—6 lion cubs (Felis leo), 3 leopard cubs (Felis pardus) 1 white jackal (Canis aureus (Albino)), 1 Malayan tapir (Tapirus indicus), 1 white wallaby, 6 kangaroos (Macropus giganteus), 1 Indian gazelle (Gazella bennettii), 2 Barasingha deer (Cervus duvaucelli), 1 Barking deer (Cervulus muntjac), 3 Hog deer (Cervus porcinus), 4 Spotted deer (Cervus axis), 2 Moose deer (Tragulus meminna), 4 Sambur deer (Cervus aristotelis), 2 Banteng (Bos sondaicus) 1 Hybrid gazelle between Persian and Indian, 2 Indian antelopes (Antilope cervicapra), 1 Urial (Ovis vignei), 2 Rhesus monkeys (Macacus rhesus), 2 Macaque monkeys (Macacus cynomolgus), 1 Pig-tailed monkey (Macacus nemestrinus), 1 Grivet monkey (Cercopithecus æthiops).

Birds.—1 Crowned pigeon (Goura coronata), 4 Ring-necked doves (Turtur risorius), 2 Ring-necked parrakeets (Palæornis torquatus), 4 Black-headed Ibis (Ibis melanocephalus), 1 Pied Imperial pigeon (Carpophaga bicolor), 1 Scarlet Ibis (Eudocimus ruber), 1 Nicobar pigeon (Calœnas nicobarica).

Reptiles.—56 Russell's Vipers (Daboia russelli), 14 Cobras (Naia tripudians), 6 Tortoises, 10 Banded Kraits (Bungarus fasciatus).

The following is a list of those birds that bred in the Garden during the year in their wild state:—

(1) Indian House Crow—Corvus splendens. (2) Indian Tree Pie—Dendrocitta rufa (Scop). (3) Golden-backed Woodpecker—Brachypternus aurantius (Linn). (4) Bengal Red-whiskered Bulbul—Otocompsa emeria (Linn). (5) Common Kingfisher—Alcedo bengalensis (Gmel). (6) White-breasted Kingfisher—Halcyon smyrnensis (Linn). (7) Common House Kite—Milvus govinda (Sykes). (8) Pied Myna—Sturnopastor contra (Linn). (9) Common Myna—Acridotheres tristis (Linn). (10) Black-naped Oriole—Oriolus indicus (Jerdon). (11) Indian Koil—Eudynamis honorata (Linn). (12) Common Hawk Cuckoo—Hierococcyx varius (Vahl). (13) Red-vented Bulbul—Molpastes bengalensis (Blyth). (14) House Sparrow—Passer domesticus (Linn). (15) Magpie Robin—Copsychus saularis (Linn).

The following birds bred freely in a wild state on the island of the big lake:—(1) Little Cormorant—Phalacrocorax Pygmæus (Pall). (2) Indian Snake Bird—Plotus melanogaster (Gmel). (3) Night Heron—Nycticorax griseus (Blyth).

The following birds laid eggs but were unable to hatch:—Burmese peafowl—Pavo muticus. Gold pheasant—Thaumalea picta. Ostrich—Struthio camelus.

Deaths.

The total number of deaths during the year was 174.

The following is a list of more important deaths during the year:—

1 Vieillot's Fireback (Euplocamus vieilloti), 2 White Llamas (Llama glama), 3 Lion cubs (Felis leo), 1 Clouded leopard (Felis nebulosa), 1 Golden cat (Felis temminckii), 1 Orang-utang (Simia satyrus), 1 Tiger (Felis tigris), 1 Anoa (Anoa depressicornis) 1 White Peafowl (Pavo cristatus), 1 Lesser Bird of Paradise (Paradisea minor), 2 Banteng cows (Bos sondaicus), 3 Gayals (Bos frontalis), 5 Nilgais (Boselaphus tragocamelus), 2 Sambur deer (Cervus aristotelis).

There were other losses by death of smaller animals, birds and reptiles, but most of them were due to causes for which the management of the Garden could not be responsible.

CATTLE, WILD AND TAME.

In a well-illustrated small octavo volume which Messrs. Methuen and Co. are publishing under the title of "The Ox and and its Kindred" Mr. Lydekker has endeavoured to convey on scientific, and at the same time popular, lines the leading features of the chief breeds of domesticated cattle and their relationships to extinct or living species of wild cattle. The work also includes chapters on wild, hybrid and extinct cattle, and likewise a full account of what is known with regard to the extermination of the great extinct ox, or aurochs—the urus of Julius Cæsar—of Europe and South-Western Asia. That such a work was wanted is quite evident; and Mr. Lydekker's little volume ought to appeal alike to the naturalist, the breeder, the big-game sportsman, the archæologist, the palæntologist, and the general reader.

Perhaps the most generally interesting part of the work relates to the history of the aforesaid great extinct ox, which in Cæsar's time was still abundant in the forest-tracts of a large portion of Europe, but during the Middle Ages was gradually driven back and killed off in the more western countries, till it finally survived for a time only in the great forests of Poland, where it was specially protected by the monarchs of that unhappy kingdom. Fortunately Poland was visited about the middle of the sixteenth century by the great German diplomatist and historian Count von Herberstein, who, although he may not have actually seen a living aurochs, was presented with the skin of a recently killed one by the Polish king, and who has left us a most interesting account of the animal and its habits.

In Herberstein's time there appear to have been still a considerable number of wiled aurochs—or thur, as they were locally called—still living in the Jaktorowka Forest, near Warsaw; but, as we learn from later writers, these were gradually diminished, till in 1599 only 24 remained; by 1602 these had become further reduced to four, while in 1620 the sole survivor was a cow, which perished in 1627.

Although a few half-domesticated and perhaps half-bred individuals appear to have been kept for a time in a private preserve by the Polish sovereigns, with the death of this cow the great black aurochs—which Cæsar described as but little smaller than an elephant—disappeared for ever from the fauna of the world. Its name still lingered, however, among the peasantry of Eastern Europe, by whom it became eventually transferred to the bison, a species of a very different type, which survives at the present day in a protected state in the Bielowitcza Forest of Lithuania and in a truly wild condition in the fastnesses of the Caucasus. For many years naturalists accepted this transference of names, with much resulting confusion, which is not even yet by any means eliminated.

It may be added that the aurochs likewise lived in ancient Assyria and Crete, and that the legend of Theseus and the Minotaur is based on half-tamed wild bulls kept by king Minos in his Cretan palace.

Although the aurochs died out completely as a wild animal early in the seventeenth century, there seems little doubt (in spite of many assertions to the country) that it has left comparatively little modified descendants (except in the matter of size) in many of the breeds of cattle of Western Europe. In the British Isles the most auroch-like type appears to survive in the black Pembroke breed. Very noteworthy is the fact that there is a white breed (with black ears and muzzles) of these Pembroke cattle, and also that these albino Pembrokes are practically identical in type with the so-called wild white cattle which, under various slight local modifications, were formerly kept in many old British parks, and still survive in a few. Despite many absurdities that have been written with regard to these white park cattle being the descendants of white sacrificial cattle introduced by the Romans into Britain, Mr. Lydekker has no hesitation in regarding them as albino derivatives from the great black aurochs of Cæsar's time, and therefore as some of the most interesting animals to be met with in the British Islands.

On the other hand, the draught cattle of Spain, the pale-coloured cattle of the Roman Campagna and the beautiful dun, long-horned cattle of Podolia, Hungary and Transylvania are considered to be in great part derived from the zebu or humped cattle of India. The zebu was likewise, undoubtedly the parent form of the cattle of ancient Egypt, some of which had lost the hump by elimination and selection, while others had become polled. To the same source are likewise to be traced the whole of the cattle bred by the natives of Africa and Madagascar, some of which are also more or less completely humpless. Among these some of the most remarkable are the cattle of the Gallas, the Nuers, and the natives of the Bornu district, southward of Lake Chad, all these being remarkable for the great thickness of their enormous horns. Equally noteworthy are the Ankoli cattle of Uganda and the long-horned breed of Ngamiland, in both of which the horns tend to excessive length rather than girth. Fortunately Mr. Lydekker was able to secure a photograph of one of the last, if not actually the last, of these long-horned Ngami cattle, the skull and horns of the same animal being in the British Museum.

Full justice is done to the various breeds of Indian humped cattle, and the distinctions pointed out between the Gujrati, Hissar and Mysore types.

As regards the origin of the zebu itself, the author affirms the view previously expressed in our columns as to the banting or tsaine, or possibly some nearly allied extinct specie, having been the original stock. In this view he is in accord with, and has indeed been anticipated by Dr. Keller of Zurich. In one way this anticipation of what the author seems to regard as a pet theory is fortunate: for if two workers arrive at the same conclusion quite independently of one another, there is the greater probability of its being true.

Domesticated buffaloes, yak and banting receive full treatment, special attention being directed to the high nutritive value of buffalo beef and milk as compared with those of ordinary cattle. On the other hand, as he has nothing specially new to record with regard to the existing species of wild cattle, the author treats this portion of the subject in a comparatively brief manner. It will suffice therefore to mention that he expresses some degree of indecision with regard to the trustworthiness of certain statements which have been published in connection with the maximum stature attained by the gaur, or miscalled Indian bison.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The removal of the seat of the Government from Calcutta to Delhi which has been decided upon by H.M. the King is not likely to have any effect upon local racing, any more than if Winchester, the ancient capital of England, were substituted for London. The Viceroy is certain to visit the old capital during Xmas week and it will not mean a discontinuance of the Viceroy's Cup or of any of the pomp and circumstance which attends the arrival of His Excellency on that occasion.

Our congratulations to Sir Apcar A. Apcar and to Sir Cecil Graham, two prominent representatives of sport in different branches in Calcutta, who have been made the recipients of H.M. the King's favour in the Durbar Honours.

The Calcutta Second Extra Meeting was run on Saturday last under the pleasantest possible conditions, the weather now being as near perfection as it is possible to get it and we are not yet afflicted with the overwhelming crowds that are bound to descend upon us after Delhi is over. The paddock and other enclosures were, in fact, somewhat empty, but it is only the lull before the storm and after next Saturday there will hardly be standing room. The Club Stand has only a limited capacity and we hear that the Stewards have been already compelled to curtail the issue of badges owing to the great demands that are likely to be made upon the available space. When these three big stands were built some years ago doubts were expressed as to whether they would ever be filled. It was then, if we remember correctly, in contemplation to erect a fourth stand of equal dimensions with the Monsoon Stand, but it was deemed that the three present ones in addition to the small fourth stand in the easternmost enclosure would suffice. It is now apparent that the Stewards had a keener insight into the coming expansion of Calcutta's racing population than their critics, for in the Christmas week and even after it, these three big erections are packed in every department and the lawns in front take the overflow, clearly showing that, so far from the accommodation provided being excessive, it is not now adequate to the needs of this growing city. We suppose, at a rough estimate, that within the last five years the racing population of Calcutta has increased tenfold if not more. At one time the single stand, half of which was reserved for the public and half for members, was more than sufficient for Calcutta's needs and it was not anything like as big or as commodious as the smallest of the present stands. Nowadays, however, things have changed considerably and on a big day there is very little difference between a Calcutta racing crowd and a racing crowd at any other big centre. So far as comfort is concerned we have likewise progressed beyond all knowledge of our former selves and blessed, as we usually are in the "winter," with weather bad to beat in any part of the world, racing in the city that soon will cease to be the Capital is probably carried on in greater luxury than in any other known centre—so far as the spectator is concerned that is to say. The course itself is open to further improvement and until we get a straight T.Y.C. and a longer straight we cannot claim to have arrived at the pinnacle of excellence which everyone desires Calcutta to attain.

The racing on Saturday was of a far more interesting nature than the previous week's meeting and there was a better class running all round. The appearance of such a large number of Trials and Cup horses naturally evoked the keenest interest and after the race for the December Plate the chances of the prominent performers and also of some of those who were not prominent were exhaustively discussed. Tangaroa's victory and the prominent running of Vavasor, to say nothing of the run with which Last Call was making up his ground at the finish, all gave rise to much speculation, some of the connoscenti being certain that we had seen the absolute winner of both races. Vavasor made a good many friends and Last Call's adherents also predicted success for him as they said that it was now nonsense to talk about his breaking down and that he was evidently going to come back to form. So far as Vavasor is concerned if this horse remains sound he must naturally be very dangerous and no one but a blind man could disregard the very big chance he must hold, nevertheless after Saturday's race there was heat in the leg on which he has the splint, but it was not considered to be of any moment as the horse was out at work on Monday morning going perfectly sound and he has been so since. Vavasor went a good half speed gallop yesterday with The Cockatoo. At the same time there is very rarely smoke without fire and it would be unwise to disregard the possibility of his breaking down. It is the other leg however of which his trainer is, we understand, the more frightened. If he could be depended upon he is probably the better of Mr. Apcar's pair, but personally we prefer a horse that has never been wrong down below and that we know is certainly quite as good a horse as when he won the big race last year. Whatever happens or does not happen the position of the Apcar stable is a tremendously strong one and it will take a good deal of storming. As regards Last Call the horse has certainly done everything they have asked him to do so far: he is in extremely good health and he certainly was coming up hand over fist at the finish of that seven furlong race last Saturday, after beginning very slowly and being practically out of sight for the first half mile. The distance, of course, was not his, for Last Call is a long distance performer and he has never been out over his pet journey since he has been in India. We should very much like to see Mr. M. Goculdass win the Viceroy's Cup, for he has not hitherto had all the luck he deserves, but unless this horse can be got back to within about 7lbs. of his best, we do not see him doing it this year. The Poona form was too bad to give us any encouragement and until that form is wiped out by a public demonstration Last Call must remain in abeyance. There is no denying that he ran well on Saturday, and that probably at the end of another four furlongs he would have been up amongst them, but we shall await the eating of this "pudding" as being the best way to judge of its merits! Aborigine's prominent position also was much discussed and as this was the first time that the horse has been really extended since his arrival in Calcutta, he ran very well. He came with a quick dash at them from the home turn in and it seemed to take all the steam out of him as the effort was not sustained.

As regard the possible Trials candidates Tangaroa won so easily that there is no knowing how much better he could have made the time. It was officially given as 1-28⅘ and he had a good big weight up—9st. 7lb. Last year Soultline carrying a similar burden won this race in 1-26⅘ beating Lumination with as great ease as Tangaroa beat her on Saturday last. Mr. Garda's mare disappointed us, for she was certainly at the end of last season entitled to be considered the quickest thing on four legs in the country next to Soultline. The position so far as we can make out remains unchanged so far as the Trials is concerned: if Soultline is "on his day" we do not think that either Tangaroa or Lumination will beat him, but on Tangaroa's running on Saturday, that is the order in which we place them—1 Soultline, 2 Tangaroa, 3 Lumination. We were not greatly impressed with the appearance of Mr. Garda's mare and she did not move with her former freedom. This is not the first time that Tangaroa has beaten her at level weights, for he won the Calcutta Plate, 6 furlongs, in which she was third to him and Soultline, and she was down the course to him in the Hooghly Plate. On the present condition of the two horses we certainly prefer Tangaroa and if anything should be amiss with Mr. Goculdas' flier on the day, or should he be asked to come out and race before the Trials, we would rather trust our money to Mr. Galstaun's honest old brown. Tangaroa and Vavasor are own brothers (Grafton—Waihine) and those who are fond of backing coincidences have named these two horses as the winners of this year's Trials and Cup respectively. Both have great fighting chances and stranger things have undoubtedly happened ere now. Tangaroa is such an honest trier and is so obviously in great nick at the moment that it is certain he will give a great account of himself next Saturday week. Black Douglas was the great disappointment of the December Plate, for they backed him both ways and expected him to get into the first three even if he did not come out and win it. He was getting 1st. 5lb. from the top weights and he never was in the hunt, so that we fear he must be somewhat overrated and was lucky to meet the cracks in Poona when they were not ready. When he beat Tangaroa in the 1 mile August Plate at that meeting he was getting 1st. 11lb. and he won a length, Mayfowl and Huka dead-heating for third honours. When Black Douglas was selected for this race last Saturday in preference to his other engagement over a distance that in our opinion suited him better, it certainly gave colour to the supposition that his connections must have considered him a 6lb. to 7lb. better horse than when he beat Tangaroa in Poona. It is obvious that he is not.

As for the rest of the card Sequent had no difficulty in winning the Hurdle Race though a number of people apparently thought he might not do so from the way in which they rushed in and backed True Love just before the start. This mare was considerably boomed and the money that came in for her caused Sequent's S. P. to be even money, when prior to that 5 to 4 on was the best that could be had about him. The chestnut mare had neither the condition nor the jumping capacity of her opponent and when McNeilage went up alongside of Sequent to have a feel at him he was soon compelled to relinquish the assault as hopeless, for Sequent jumped clean away from her over every obstacle and had her well beaten a long way from home, winning pulling up by two and a half lengths. We do not see what is to stop the Apcar stable over hurdles and we tip their horses to win the next two races over obstacles in Calcutta with whatever they put C. Hoyt up to ride. There is nothing here dangerous and Parkhill is not in our opinion as good class as any of the three champions that Watson has. True Love jumped much better than she has done hitherto in her schools and considering that she had nothing alongside her to keep her straight as Sequent sailed straight away from her and Kipling was a good last all the way, it was a much improved exhibition. She however wants a lot of practice yet and if she is to get over Tollygunge her education cannot be undertaken too soon.

In spite of the set in favour of Mr. Galstaun's stable for the Harrison Plate The Point, the previous Saturday's winner, was made a hot favourite. Calculations were upset however by the Kuar Sahib of Patiala's pony Waiata, who won virtually all the way and held the field very safe. Dulcimer, who showed promise the previous week, ran disappointingly and missed getting into a place by five lengths. They would have nothing but Leo Grand for the Peel Plate and this extremely fine pony started at level money. Nothing had a chance with him the whole way and he is probably the next best pony of the class here after Refresher, who downed him handsomely when the pair met in Poona in the 6-furlong All Pony Handicap. Leo Grand is a magnificent pony to look at and shows his quality at every point. He is an Australian entire and is described in the list of pedigrees as by Leolantis out of Decoration. He is certainly one of the best looking things in training here at the moment and when Refresher is out of the way he will have a clear board.

The Maiden Horse Plate was a race in which there was a good deal of interest taken and there was a fair amount of betting also. They went for Bachelor's Knot and Airman first of all, a stable commission coming into the ring for the latter. Jemima and John Wesley were next chances. In the race Bachelor's Knot was never in it and the battle was fought out between the two second selections, Jemima and John Wesley, the judge being unable to divide them. Airman saved the place money, finishing two lengths behind the dead-heaters but he was never dangerous. Langton, who was fancied by some people, was another disappointment and ran a considerably worse horse than he did the previous week. Goldseeker, also Koonowla and Lady Erna were never prominent and of the previous Saturday's performers, bar Jemima and Airman, Chin Chin, the only Australian in the race, was the only one to show any signs of repeating form. As the horses were going out Koonowla caught the Secretary to the C.T.C. and kicked him, luckily only with his hocks, but it knocked Mr. Hutchison down and might have seriously injured him. Jemima lashed out as she was being led on to the course and kicked a spectator's hat off, missing his face by only a few inches. Greater caution is obviously necessary on the part of the public and it would be a wise measure if the officials made a wide lane through the crowd to allow horses to pass on to the course. The quietest horse will often let out when he is being led, but both these two were known to be somewhat flighty.

The last race on the card with both Black Douglas and Lady Erna out of the way was a good thing for Parkhill and he won by three-quarters of a length from old Realm, who ran a great deal better horse than we expected to see him do and fought it out with a dash of his old fire. The gallop will have done Parkhill good, as he carries a good deal of stuff at the moment and is a bit on the big side. Details will be found elsewhere.

The jockeys Whalley, A. Templeman and Jelliss arrived in Calcutta from Bombay on Sunday last. Wootton, Saxby and Bowley are expected next mail.

W. Mumford, the well-known trainer, we are glad to hear, is now making good progress towards recovery. He had only a comparatively mild attack of enteric and it is hoped that he will be well enough to come out of hospital in about a fortnight's time.

The Tollygunge Steeplechase course is very hard going in parts and in fact it would be a very good plan to plough it up all the way round as no amount of top dressing will ever minimise the jar as when the surface is loosened with a plough. The objection to ploughing it up seems to be the dust, but it is better to have dust and no jar than the present almost adamantine conditions, for there is very little grass on the course and down the stand side of the course hardly any top dressing. The landing sides of the fences are also badly in need of doctoring, for at present they are as hard as the high road. A heavy layer of litter and other dressing for about twenty or thirty yards out from each of them is badly needed. Even if this course were ploughed up, as it certainly ought to be all round, it would not be very difficult to keep the dust down at the fences with kerosene oil. What we want of course is a chase course in Calcutta where the going can be kept soft with a copious artificial rainfall or, failing that, water laying on at Tollygunge to accomplish a similar purpose. When summer steeplechasing was inaugurated at Blackpool this year the first care was to arrange for an artificial "rainfall" to keep the course soft and, save that they had one or two wells handy, their difficulties were as great, possibly greater, than our's at Tollygunge. The Municipal hydrants are not far away, there are also adjacent tanks, but Blackpool's example has not been availed of.

On Sunday last there were a few horses out at Tollygunge schooling but Maisonette (Williamson) was the only one of any importance and she was accompanied over four of the fences of the horse course by Farthing Bun (Mr. Evers). Mr. H. V. Scott of the Rifle Brigade who now owns Mimicry rode Blix in a school, Williamson being on Mimicry and the same G.R. also rode Levi over a few fences and later on Durbar who went over a few of the pony course fences with Abstainer (Mr. Barrow) and Alton (Williamson). At the second fence Abstainer landed on top of a cow that happened to be grazing on the course. It nearly brought the horse down and it killed the cow.

There were a good number of horses and ponies schooling over hurdles on Tuesday afternoon on the Calcutta course in preparation for the various jumping events in the immediate future. The most important school was that in which Mayfowl (C. Hoyt) and Five Crown (McNeilage) took part. They went the full course and though Mayfowl started jumping very stickily he soon warmed to his work and fenced brilliantly. The pace was very hot over the last mile and both horses performed well. Blenheim Orange (Northmore) also went a good school and was taken out the first six furlongs by Durbar (Williamson) and Plain Mister (Mr. Scott) and brought home the last mile by Fearless Boy (Mr. Barrow). Mr. Holmes' horse went on vastly improved form. Amongst others to school were Bandy Leg (Williamson), Glory (McNeilege), Edwards (Randall), Ngakapa (Northmore)—a very promising jumper, Butterfly II (Hayhoe), Murmur (Mr. Evers), Master Priam (Williamson), Abstainer (Mr. Scott), Vernier (Williamson), Ruling Passon (Northmore), Alton (Williamson) and Comet (Randall).

The following horses have been landed from Home ex the S.S. Assyria:—St. Gilgan, who is for Mr. G. K.; Mrs. Bang for Captain M. R. K. Hodgson, and Flying Mac, who has been sent out by Mr. A. F. S. Jackson for sale. The same gentleman has sent out by the S.S. Media Glengarry, a two-year-old colt by Lord Bobs out of Scotch Brose; Queer Fish, a two-year-old colt by Matchmaker out of Queen of the Fishes; Angel Man, a four-year-old gelding by The Tinman out of Perfect Peace; East Pool, a four-year-old gelding by Eager out of Eastern Prize and two 14-1 ponies both by Grey Leg. All these are for sale.

FISHING.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—After a gap of less than two months since Poona ended, we opened the Bombay season on Saturday with the First Extra. The town being very full at present owing to the recent King's visit and his return later, there was a good attendance in both enclosures. As mentioned some time ago, the Stewards have decided to do away with the book-makers in the Second and to give the Tote a fair trial, and as a consequence that portion bore rather a strange appearance. Those who patronise it are being better cared for, in that the stand has been enlarged as well as having a covering from the sun. The First is in good order everywhere and the track in particular is very good.

There are plenty of jockeys here despite the absence of many who are now in Calcutta, and though the entries were naturally not up to what we shall see later the racing was not at all bad. Punters had a good time, as in every instance the winner was very well backed and each race appeared to rest between a couple. Some horses are still in Poona, where the climate is better, but pretty well all will be back here during the coming week.

As to the racing itself, we started with an Auction Plate in which Good Evening and Zuffer Beg stood out, being quoted in that order with not much to choose. Good Evening was well away and flattered as far as the bend, but Evans had only been waiting behind on Zuffer Beg, and as soon as he asked him it was all over.

Mr. Comer thus collared the first event of the season, but he also went one better by winning the next. Here again Jehangir and Ashroff commanded the market, ten to one being on offer the rest of the field. Evans again rode a waiting race on Ashroff, Jehangir thus flattering as far as the turn. Unable to keep the rails in turning, Ashroff dashed up on the inside and Order challenged on the other. Jehangir was well beaten by both and could only just keep his place from Young Thara. Order made a game effort, but Ashroff was well in hand and when given his head went away with some ease.

In the big horse race one stood out, this being Huka, who was the only odds on favourite. Though Metal Girl and Yvette made the running fairly fast just in front of Huka, there was only one in it as they faced for home, and Huka could have won by more than the three lengths. Metal Girl looked well and was able to retain her place from Bright Metal, who could not keep with them in the early stages. Lady Obie is well spoken of but far from ready and was never in the hunt.

Shawcutt and Money Gold were the two in the seven-furlong race, the longest of the day, the former being a quarter of a point shorter. He, however, ran much below form and except for coming up well at the bend was never able to make much impression on Money Gold, who practically led all the way, Harry Johnson vindicates his improvement in Poona, and in the last dash was able to pass Shawcutt for second place.

It was hard to decide between Creditor and Kimberley in the next, they going out at 6 to 4 and 7 to 4 respectively from Grequa. The result will thus be seen to have been a bad knock for the books. Happy Land went out to cut Kimberley up, the latter taking over soon after the three. Creditor then came along like a winner, but in a desperate finish the grey was able to stay him out by a head. Grequa and Shihab were well up all the way, the former bringing home a good deal of place money.

Lastly a Novice Plate, in which betting was more open than in the others, Turkish General winding up a decided favourite from Seven Fifty and Soomsam (late Vazir) who had already started once. Soomsam went out to make the running, and had everything but the favourite beaten. Turkish General was handy and got through along the rails as they came into the straight, which was the end of the race, as he won very easily.

The latest arrivals are two American jockeys, Archibald and Reid, who have been riding in Germany and France respectively with success. They are here on a holiday, but they leave shortly for Calcutta and will probably get to work there.

Our betting readers will be interested in the advertisement of Mr. Joe Lee which appears on a previous page, but they will be more interested if they will pay a visit to his spacious chambers at No. 8, Lall Bazar and take a glance at the exceedingly liberal prices he is offering on the principal events in connection with the Racing Carnival which begins next week in Calcutta. Mr. Joe Lee is not licensed by the Calcutta Turf Club, but the fact that he does extensive business with many of the most prominent racing owners both in Calcutta and in Western India should be sufficient guarantee of his bona fides.

Reuter announces the death on the 5th instant at Clevely of the famous race horse Isinglass. By Isonomy—Deadlock, Isinglass in 1893 achieved the brilliant success of the treble event on the English classic races, winning the Two Thousand Guineas, the Derby and the Leger of that year. This performance stands to the credit of but nine other champions viz., West Australian (1853), Gladiateur (1865), Lord Lyon (1866), Common (1891), Galtee More (1897), Flying Fox (1899), Diamond Jubilee (1900), and Rock sand (1903). Isinglass made a very modest debut in a Maiden Plate over the Rous course at the Newmarket Second Spring in 1892 which he won. His next outing was in the New Stakes at Ascot, which he placed to his credit by a couple of lengths, and he finished his career as a two-year-old by carrying off the Middle Park Plate for which he started at 10 to 1 agst., Dame President going out favourite at 7 to 4. In addition to the three classics in 1893 Isinglass won the Newmarket Stakes very easily by three lengths and suffered the only defeat of his career—in the Lancashire Plate at the Manchester Meeting. He then had a long rest and did not appear again till July 1894 when he won the Princess of Wales' Stakes at Newmarket and followed this up with victories in the Eclipse Stakes and Jockey Club Stakes the same year. He crowned a wonderful career by capturing the Ascot Cup as a five-year-old and won for his owner Mr. McCalmont a record sum as to the amount of stakes won. This had been previously held by Donovan with £54,955, Isinglass's winnings amounting to £57,185. It must be remembered, however, that the Duke of Portland's horse only ran for two seasons, whilst Isinglass stood training for four.

Mr. A. E. T. Watson has the following note regarding this great horse in his article on Racing in the Encyclopædia of Sport: "La Fleche and Orme were three-year-olds when a two-year-old named Isinglass was gradually making a reputation which was somewhat grudgingly accorded him. Racegoers were curiously slow to recognise the merit of Isinglass, who, however, did everything that was asked of him as a two-year-old. He was one of those horses of whom it is said that they would 'make a race with a donkey'; he did what was necessary but wasted no exertion. That index of public opinion, the ring, continually showed that Isinglass was not properly appreciated; however, he won the New Stakes at Ascot, the Middle Park Plate and went into winter quarters with an unbeaten certificate. Next year he came out for the Two-Thousand Guineas which he won easily enough; he won the Derby, the St. Leger and again throughout the season did everything that he was asked to do. That he could beat Ladas in the Prince of Wales' Stakes at the Newmarket July meeting, was, next year, deemed incredible by the supporters of Lord Rosebery's colt, but there was no sort of doubt about the result when it came to racing, and, in fact, Isinglass only once met with defeat—in the Lancashire Plate when he failed to give weight to Raeburn: this being generally attributed to the fact that he was a horse who hated to make his own running, and his little jockey, T. Loates, could not persuade him to go on in front. It is no disparagement of Loates, in the face of the colt's succession of victories in which that jockey always rode him, to say that a stronger, longer legged horseman would have shown Isinglass off to much better advantage than he was able to do. The result of his career which ended with a victory in the Ascot Cup, was that Isinglass won in stakes the largest sum ever gained by a single horse £57,185, the produce of eleven victories in the twelve races in which he took part.

Mr. B. M. Burjorjee continues to have a successful time with his races in Rangoon. On the first day of the recent Autumn meeting he scored three wins, taking the McDonnell Cup with Wheel of Fortune for the fourth time in succession, the Trial Stakes with Lavender and running a dead heat for first place with Cuckoo in the Midget Stakes. On the second day Mr. Burjorjee annexed the St. Leger with Lavender in the same time—2mins. 32secs.—as her stable companion Hla Nyoon II did last year. This is the third time Mr. Burjorjee has won this cup, value Rs. 1,000 with fifteen thousand added to the winner, and he has also won the Derby three times. He was heartily congratulated by the stewards and friends on his success.

The final game in the Delhi Durbar Polo Tournament was played on Monday evening in the presence of their Majesties the King and Queen. The Inniskilling Dragoons met and defeated the King's Dragoon Guards by 4 goals to 1. The K. D. G.'s were heavily handicapped owing to the absence of Captain Leslie Cheape, who was prevented from playing by an attack of fever. Her Majesty presented the King's Cup to the winners at the close of the game, amidst hearty cheering.

The Delhi Durbar Football Tournament was concluded on Saturday last when the Lancashire Fusiliers, representing the 3rd Division, met the Border Regiment representing the Burma Division, in the final. His Majesty the King with the Governor-General and the Commander-in-Chief watched the game till a few moments before its close. Play was well contested, the Lancashire Fusiliers eventually winning by a goal to nil. Details further on.

We have to thank Messrs. Traill and Co. for a couple of the excellent Indian diaries published annually by them for the past 28 years. These are too well known to describe at length, sufficient to say that they maintain their high standard of excellence throughout. The diaries are compiled with English and corresponding dates in Bengali, Fusli, Samvat, Tamil and Malayalam, Telugu and Canarese, and Burmese, obtainable in no other diaries. They are full of useful information, consisting of tables of all kinds, ready reckoner, servants' wages, sun rise and sun set, phases of the moon, etc. The series comprise 34 different kinds, price from (6 annas) to Rs. 6.

The M. C. C. team touring in Australia met Toowomba (Queensland) on the 6th and 7th instant. Batting first the English team made 340 for 6 wickets and declared. Woolley batted freely and scored 99 which included 4 sixes and 10 fours. Kinneir made 80—a rather lucky innings as he was given three lives. Iremonger contributed a not out 50. Toowoomba made 96 in their first innings and following on were all out for 110. The M. C. C. thus won by an innings and 134 runs.

The M.C.C. played an Eleven of Australia at Brisbane on the 8th, 9th and 11th instant. The visitors had first lease of the wickets and after a bad start put up 236 for eight wickets before play closed on Friday. The next day they were all out for 267, Douglas contributing 101 and Kinneir 63. The Australian eleven put together 277 for eight wickets on Saturday and completed their innings for 347: Crawford hitting vigorously compiled 110 in as many minutes, Minnett made 69 and Kellway 66. When Crawford had made 37, he was caught by Mead on the boundary but the umpire disallowed the catch on the ground that Mead's foot was on the cycle track. The Englishmen disagreed with the decision and a sensation was caused, the game being stopped for some minutes. The M. C. C. had scored 279 for 4 wickets when stumps were drawn on Monday and the match thus ended in a draw. Mead made 50 and Hearne 89 not out.

Patrons of Athletics were afforded a rare treat on Saturday afternoon, the 18th November, when the trio of sprint champions, J. Donaldson (Victoria), A. B Postle (Queensland), and C. E. Holway (America) contested a series of events on the Jubilee Oval, Adelaide, under the auspices of the South Australian Athletic League. This body has been in existence for 12 years, and never before had it attempted a programme of purely athletic events on the scale of that presented on the 15th ult. The attendance numbered over 2,000—a muster with which the officials were well satisfied—and every one was agog to see the "blue streak," of whose marvellous bursts of speed they had read and wondered half incredulously whether he was all that admirers had claimed for him. Seeing is believing, and all who saw him dash to victory over each of the three distances were convinced that they had witnessed one of the finest all-round sprinters the world has known. Save for the heat the weather conditions were perfect for the running.

Considerable interest attached to the meeting. Each of the three contestants has held the championship. Postle, the first to obtain it, lost to Holway on a wet track in England, in October, 1909; Donaldson took it from the pair in February of last year; and Holway recaptured it from the Victorian, who ran in bandages after a breakdown in Wales six months later. Donaldson reasserted himself in three straight heats against Holway in Melbourne last May, and again badly beat the big American in Sydney in September, and the champion won two or three heats against Postle in Melbourne recently. Consequently the struggle for supremacy on Saturday was looked forward to to with great expectancy, especially as Postle has lately been improving in form.

The initial event was over 100 yards. The rivals were easily distinguishable from the pavilions. Donaldson wore blue singlet and knickers, with a big white A on the chest. Postle donned red, with a white kangaroo; and Holway, garbed in white, sported a little shield of stars and stripes. Donaldson and Postle are both built on the spare, greyhound lines that suggest pace, while Holway is more massive in stature. At the sound of the gun Donaldson appeared to get into his stride quite as smartly as Postle, but the American lagged a little. The clean, open, stylish stride of the champion was generally admired. At 80 yards cries of "Postle" broke from the crowd, but the dashing finish of the Victorian was as yet unknown to them. With a tremendous spurt he altered the order, and to the accompaniment of deafening cheers he threw himself into the tape six inches ahead of the Queenslander. Holway was three yards back from the winner. Considering that the grass track was a trifle on the rough side, the time of 9 $\frac{1}{5}$ was good. Every one was surprised and delighted with the wonderful turn of speed displayed by Donaldson; but more than one of the "old hands" expressed the belief that he could put a yard of daylight between himself and Postle. The second heat (110 yards) provided what was perhaps the most evenly contested race seen in South Australia. A beautiful start with Donaldson, if possible, a fraction away, a neck-and-neck go, cries of "Postle wins," the same brilliant dash by Donaldson, and a win by four inches. The time was 10½. Thus Donaldson asserted outright his claims to retain the championship. In the 130 yards heat Postle left the mark as if he had been fired out of a gun. The "blue streak," however, was not to be denied, and he touched the tape a yard in front. The time was 12$\frac{2}{5}$, compared with 12 established by Donaldson in Sydney on 23rd September 23. Holway put up a much better performance in this heat, but never seemed in it with the other men. His forte, of course, is long-distance racing. The official measurement of the course subsequently revealed that it was six inches over. Postle is certainly a marvel at getting off the mark; but Donaldson is proving almost an adept. The Queenslander on each occasion seemed a likely winner up to 80 yards; but in the final burst of speed by the Victorian he was outwitted. He admits Donaldson's superiority at present; but thinks that if he can get back to his best form in six weeks' time he will beat him.

The Inter-'Varsity Rugby match was played on Tuesday last when Oxford beat Cambridge by 19 points to nil. The Dark Blues led at the interval by 11 points to nil, Poulton, Steyn and Bullock scoring tries—one of which was converted. In the second half Cambridge made desperate efforts to get through but could not pierce the Oxford defence. Oxford pressed towards the close of the game and got over with two more tries, Dingle's effort being converted.

The Bangalore Durbar Hockey Tournament for teams of British units came to a conclusion on the 9th instant when the 2nd Q. O. Cameron Highlanders beat "O" Battery R. H. A. by 4 goals to nil in the final and annexed the handsome trophy presented by Mr. Thos. Leishman.

We have to thank the Editor of the Indian and Eastern Engineer for a copy of the Special Durbar Motor Supplement published by this journal. It contains a series of articles which should be of value to motorists in India, including the following:—Motoring in India, Motoring in Western India, Motoring in Burma and Ceylon, Motoring at Delhi, Motoring in Southern India, A Road Route—Delhi to Calcutta, Road Notes—Bombay to Delhi. Other features include a descriptive article on Delhi, a fine photogravure portrait of His Majesty the King-Emperor, and a series of descriptions of up-to-date Cars, Accessories, etc., suitable for India. The price of the number (which is published separately from the usual monthly issue of the Indian and Eastern Engineer) is Re. 1.

The annual Regatta of the Madras Boat Club will be held on Saturday, the 27th January next. The following events are down for decision:—Inter Club Fours, Pair Oars, and Challenge Sculls—open to crews from recognised Rowing Clubs. Service Fours, Junior Sculls, Junior Pairs and Junior Fours and a Tub Race.

On Tuesday, the 5th instant, a large gathering of spectators thronged the Stadium at the Old Bombay Exhibition to witness the finish of the Marathon Race open to the British Army. The course was from Mahim Causeway and a large number of soldiers took part, the following being the positions of the first eleven, all of whom finished within the time limit of 65 minutes. The first four got money prizes and all of them qualified for the time limit medal. Lance-Corporal Marney of the Dublin Fusiliers finished first, a few yards ahead of Private Vine from the same regiment. Vine, it will be remembered, won the Open Marathon race the week before. The Open Lawn Tennis Tournaments of the Allahabad Gymkhana Club are to be held in the Alfred Park, Allahabad, from 5th to 10th February. There will be Gentlemen's Open Singles for the Bulrampur Challenge Cup, Gentlemen's Open Doubles, Mixed Open Doubles, Ladies' Open Singles, Gentlemen's Handicap Singles and Doubles and Mixed Handicap Doubles. Good prizes are being offered and the tournament should be a big success. Entries close on the 27th January with the Honorary Secretary, Mr. C. A. Mumford, from whom further particulars may be obtained. The Tournament Committee is as follows:—Messrs. G. P. Boys, R. W. Burdett, S. R. Moultrie, S. P. O'Donnell, the Hon. Mr. Justice Tudball (referee) and the Hon. Mr. H. Nelson Wright.

It will be of interest to our readers to learn that Messrs. Curtis's and Harvey, Limited, have been awarded by the Jury of Turin Exhibition 2 Grands Prix and 2 Diplomas of Honour in connection with their exhibit there. This exhibit consisted of a life-sized model of a small portion of an English coal mine showing the miner in the act of charging a hole in the coal, and also dummy samples of their gunpowder, high explosives, smokeless powders, sporting cartridges, etc.

It would seem that the eagle is not quite so harmless a bird as its protectors claim for it. The idea that an eagle is capable of catching a grouse is pooh-poohed in many quarters on account of the much slower movements of the king of birds. That the grouse is swifter of flight than the eagle is not disputed, but when an eagle sweeps hurriedly over a height and hovers over a covey of grouse the birds are paralysed for the time, their power of initiative is gone for the moment, and in that brief space the eagle swoops down and carries off one of the birds. Such a scene was witnessed in Patt Forest, Rossshire, recently. The eagle carried the bird to a rock near by and quickly disembowelled its victim, after which it was carried away to the retreat. It is not, perhaps, generally known that the eagle is the only bird of prey that follows out this disembowelling process on one and every occasion.

An interesting paper by Dr. A. Menegaux, of the Paris Natural History Museum, furnishes the information that 140 species of birds have disappeared in the last 500 years. Dr. Menegaux points out that many causes besides feather trade operations have caused the disappearance of vast numbers of bird. "The feather trade," he says, "which, save as regards ostrich feathers, dates from the early 'seventies, did nothing to bring about the disappearance from North America of the passenger or wild pigeon, of which the rookeries in 1808 held between two and three thousand million birds, and covered about 120 square miles, many of the trees holding as many as 90 nests. In Petosky, Michigan, they killed a thousand million of these birds in 1873; the young birds were fed to the pigs. In 1903 only seven living specimens were known, and the prize of £300 for an inhabited nest was not claimed. By the end of 1910 only one living specimen survived. This was a female bird 18 years old, whose mate, 26 years old, had predeceased her. The Labrador duck was to be found in vast numbers on the Hudson at the beginning of the nineteenth century. Hunted for its flesh, this bird has been exterminated; it is represented to-day by 53 museum specimens. The great auk, so familiar in past times on the North Atlantic coast, is now extinct. There are 71 specimens in the world's museums. They have gone from us much as the bison and beaver have gone from America and Europe. The Hon. Walter Rothschild tells us, after a careful study of the question," continues Dr. Meneguax, "that in less than 500 years at least 140 species of birds have disappeared; 63 are only known by their bones, feathers, or eggs, and 77 by sketches or stuffed skins. In addition to these 47 species are well-nigh extinct, and 51 species are threatened with extinction in the near future." Dr. Meneguax arrives at the conclusion that it is possible to safeguard the world's bird life by developing the breeding of certain species, domesticating others whose plumage has a trade value, creating reserves, instituting international protective laws to serve agriculture, commerce, and science equally.

Messrs. Barton, Son and Co., the well-known jewellers, have sent us a photograph of the Royal Casket they made to the order of the Bombay Municipal Corporation for presentation to Their Majesties King George V. and Queen Mary on their arrival in India. We should say this was one of the very best pieces of workmanship turned out by the eminent firm, and it was justly much admired in Bombay. Messrs. Barton claim it a great privilege to have had this important piece of work entrusted to them. The Casket assumes the shape of an architectural structure, and being Indian composite in design, represents the different communities of the peoples of India residing in the Bombay Presidency.

The shape of the Casket at the base is that of a square with rectangular abutments on two of its sides, thus giving 12 different faces. It is supported by eight models of colossals winged bulls, which are commonly called by the Persians "Phil-i-Kerghardan." The upper parts of the figures are human in shape with crowns on their heads and thickly-curled beards, while the lower portions are those of a full-grown bull. These are cast in solid silver oxidised in parts, the wings being fashioned of 18-ct. gold. A broad frieze composed alternately of winged steers in oxidised silver and rosettes in gold taken from a Bas relief at Persepolis, runs round the lower portion of the base and immediately above the feet which portion of the Casket is representative of the Parsee Community in Bombay. The two faces of the square with those formed by the abutments are bound at each angle by solid silver pillars highly ornamented, and embellished on the columns and capitals in gold. The front face bears the inscription engraved on a slab of ivory and emblazoned in colours and gold. It is framed in a sunk mount of solid silver with gold ornamental work, and the whole is enclosed in a framing of gold. The opposite side shows a silver panel illustrating a bird's-eye view of the city of Bombay enclosed in a framing of gold. On the obverse and reverse faces caused by the abutments are displayed four views of Bombay executed in Florentine bronze and framed in gold. They are the Municipal Corporation Buildings, the University Tower, Abdul Rahiman's Street, and the Crawford Market. The two side faces of the abutments bear the Royal Arms and the Arms of the Bombay Municipal Corporation, respectively, in solid gold within a framing of the same metal and fitted on to ivory plates. These are placed between pillars similar to those which bind the angles of the receptacle and between them again are given pierced panels of cocoanut, palms and scroll work executed in Florentine bronze against ivory backings. The panel showing the Royal Arms is hinged and fitted with a button handle composed of a fine garnet. This face closes the receptacle in which the address will be placed. Above the pillars and running round the 12 sides of the receptacle is a broad frieze of gold decorated with an alternate design of fine turquoises and oxidised silver rosettes. A bold projecting mould runs round the entire Casket, and above which is given a pierced railing of Arabesque design culminating at each angle in little cupolas or solid silver with gold finials. Two silver dome-shaped cupolas with collars and finials of heavily chased gold surmount the two abutments, and between these forming an upward continuation of the square base is a rectangular structure bound at its four corners by solid silver pillars heavily carved in Hindu architecture, and showing on each of its four faces panels ornamented in the same style, with a gold border line round each face, and a broad gold frieze above them supported by the four pillars aforesaid. Above this again and forming the crowning feature of the Casket is its pyramidical "Sikha," peculiar to Hindu architecture. It comprises no less than 50 faces, all of solid silver with the arrises and finials (of which there are 21) in solid gold. On the four broadest faces are little brackets each supporting a solid oxidised silver medal of a Hindu deity. A gold frieze runs completely round the angular base of the "Sikha," while at each corner is given gold models of "Ganesha" embellished with rubies, emeralds and pearls. A plinth of mottled ebony supports the entire Casket, and it like the receptacle is composed of 12 faces, and at each of its angles is given a model of the stern of a "Kotia," an Indian craft peculiar to Bombay. These are of solid silver with the bow ornaments fashioned in the form of a parrot's beak, from which the craft gets its name. Each boat has its anchor and chains of solid gold. The Casket is fitted into a handsome teakwood case heavily carved, and bearing on the panels of its doors the Royal Arms and the Arms of the Bombay Municipal Corporation respectively. The gold used throughout is of fine 18 carat.

Friday, 24th November 1911.

Your readers will probably receive, without any particularly noisy demonstrations of enthusiasm, the news that the Crystal Palace has been "saved for the nation" as the scare head lines in Saturday's papers told us. You good people, most of you at any rate have outlived the Crystal Palace and the attractions that made it the paradise of juveniles. But there are a few juveniles left in this country and to them and their parents (who pay at the turnstiles you know) the news has some significance and interest. The old show—grounds, buildings, fittings—was to have been under the hammer on the 28th instant, but the munificent action of the rather public spirited gentleman, the Earl of Plymouth, has saved the situation, for he has purchased it from the first debenture-holders for £210,000, planked down £20,000 now and will provide the rest before the 31st October 1912. He will hold the property until the nation has subscribed towards its repurchase from him. So now all the B. P. has to do is to roll up and weigh in with the shekels. In the meantime the Crystal Palace will be under the supervision of Mr. Ernest I. Husey, the receiver, and whatever benefit is derived from the working of the undertaking during this period will, it is stated, be placed to the credit of the first debenture-holders.

Lord Plymouth became intimately acquainted with the Palace and its fine grounds this summer in his capacity as Chairman of the Council of the Festival of Empire.

For some time the Earl of Plymouth has been of the opinion that the Crystal Palace should be a national undertaking—run by the public for the public—and his magnificent beneficence will unboubtedly be greatly appreciated by the nation at large.

The sale of the famous Huth library has been proceeding merrily for some days and astonishing most of us with the incredible prices given for some of the lots. For example nearly half the total of the third day of the sale was produced by the sale of one book, a copy of the first edition of Bacon's essays realising the record price of £1,950. This price is more remarkable when one learns that the book was purchased in 1870 for £13 5s. With the amount realised—£4,661—the total for the first three days falls just short of £20,000.

Thirty of the lots sold on the third day, which were acquired by the late collector for a total expenditure of under £200, produced over £3,100, among the more important items being:

Mr. Lloyd George—may he receive his deserts in the hereafter—goes ruthlessly on from one gigantic blunder to another. In other countries I wot of surely some bold spirit actuated by an overwhelming sense of national duty, would rise up and slay this man; in England we merely pour out vials of our wrath in the public prints. He is rushing through the Insurance Bill with an indecent and wicked haste that seems incredible even for him and he has raised the finest and largest variety of hornet's nest over the Domestic Servants' clauses. This idotic measure imposes a fresh tax of 26s. a year for each servant upon households that are already overburdened: it seeks to convert every master or mistress into a tax collector: it obviously aims at rendering the relations between master and servant even more irksome and chaotic than they are at present. Nearly all sections of the press are opposing the bill, the flood gates of angry correspondence have been opened wide, monster meetings of mistresses are being organised, colossal petitions are being signed, a fund for the campaign opened but a day or two ago has already swelled to thousands of pounds, all the nasty adjectives in the dictionary have been used up over and over again: masters are miserable, mistresses mutinous and slaveys scornful—much more scornful than usual I mean.

Now the servant is supposed to pay 13s. of the tax. But many of the girls will quarrel with mistresses who stop the tax out of their wages. Unless the mistress either stops the 13s. as well as paying her own 13s. or pays the whole 26s. herself, she will be prosecuted and fined any amount up to £10. Thousands of servants will leave their situations rather than allow mistresses to deduct 13s. from their wages. The servants will ultimately adopt one of two courses:—

Widows, nurses, and spinsters, who are compelled to go out and make a meagre living—just enough to keep them in food and shelter—and have to engage a girl to do their housework, will have to deprive themselves of necessaries or do their own housework. There are many poor women in this class who really cannot afford to pay the 26s. The tax is the same upon them as on people who can pay it without suffering. The servant problem is already a continual worry to mistresses. By making them tax collectors in their own homes and providing cause for endless squabbles between harassed mistresses and irritated maids, Mr. Lloyd George is going to make the servant problem an intolerable nuisance. As mistresses now insure their girls against accident and in nearly every instance see that they have good medical advice, the Bill is not needed.

THE wretched Suffragette is once more rearing her silly head and making herself an active nuisance. The Women's Social and Political Union carried out last Tuesday night the threat "to demonstrate" which was promptly made after the meeting with the Prime Minister and Mr. Lloyd George last Friday to discuss the position created by the Government's promised electoral reform Bill. This disgraceful demonstration followed on lines similar to others in times past, with Caxton Hall as the starting place and the Houses of Parliament as the goal of a "deputation" that desired to lodge its protest on the floor of the House. Its result was also much the same. The ranks of the mob of shrieking females were broken and its members scattered into small groups almost as soon as they left the hall, and afterwards a series of scrambles took place in Parliament Square. There was a good deal of window smashing in the course of the evening, and the numerous incidents were followed by an immense crowd of people. In all about 220 arrests were made, among those taken into custody being Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, Lady Constance Lytton, the Hon'ble Evelina Haverfield, Mrs. Brailsford, Hampstead, and Miss Æthel Tollemache, Bath. After the House had risen the prisoners, who included a few men, were released on bail, Mr. Pethick Lawrence and other sympathizers becoming sureties for them. Since then the Bow Street Magistrate has been dealing with them in batches. The ringleader, Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, has got a month in jail, and many others have been sent up for trial.

LET me recommend your readers to purchase the latest book on shikar—"Big Game Hunting in Northern Rhodesia," by Owen Letcher, F.R.G.S. and published by John Long. Descriptions, opinions and information as to the game, the country, the people and their habits make the book not only entertaining, but useful, informative, and therefore of some permanent value.

We are always learning something new of the zoology of the country. It is not so long since that new creature, the okapi, was discovered, and the author of this book mentions how he has heard from an Awemba native of an elephant with six or more tusks, from an Angom of a bird with one eye, and from a native in the Northern Transvaal of a double-headed snake. On the Lower Zambesi there are tales of an antelope bigger than an eland, and many other distortions of orthodox natural history.

Mr. Letcher makes some serious criticism of missionary work in the country, of which he has first-hand knowledge, a criticism which one frequently hears from Englishmen returning from residence in Africa and India. He says:—

> I am convinced that it is much better to teach him (the native) how to work than to attempt to instill Christianity into his being. It has been my experience that to Christianise a native is often a most effective means of turning him into an absolute rogue. The Native Commissioner is the best kind of missionary for the African native, not the man who attempts to fill the brain of a black with the religions of Europe, and the dangerous doctrine that all men are equal.
> There are different kinds of missions and many different types of missionaries. Those who teach the natives of Africa to regard the white man as his brother are dangerous maniacs, for such a doctrine cannot fail to prejudice European rule in South Africa. Civilisation and Christianity do not make for the greater happiness of the natives .... Teach them Christianity and you generally succeed in upsetting their mental balance and turning them into scoundrels .... Can we reasonably expect a raw savage Awemba, scarcely yet redeemed by British rule from the lowest depths of barbaric cruelty, to realise the sacred significance of the crucifix? And yet I have seen Awemba wearing round their necks the symbol of Christ on the Cross—symbols obtained from mission stations. What does this gift mean to the Central African native? To his mind it probably represents nothing more than a man nailed to a tree—I write this in all reverence—a thing affected by the white man, and therefore an article of some value—a trinket or charm, if you will.

Mr. Letcher is prepared for a storm in consequence of his condemnation of the missionary system in South Africa, but he believes his convictions to be honest, and they have been arrived at after much consideration. Altogether, whether regarded as a record of travel or an impression of a little-known territory, the book is deserving of careful study. It was undoubtedly well worth writing.

THE park orator is often amusing when he is not violent, but he is sometimes still more amusing when he is. The gentleman who, last Sunday, spoke of a distinguished living statesman as having "the brains of a baboon (don't omit the "n" Mr. Printer), the neck of a giraffe, the roar of a crocodile, and the hind legs of a kangaroo," has a pretty and playful wit. The only fault to be found with his chaste, miscellaneous, zoological metaphor is that it was not miscellaneous enough. Why did he not round off his complimentary catalogue by adding "the shriek of a cockatoo, the venom of a cobra, and the claws of a tiger"? The cultured demagogue of the Marble Arch must not deal too gently with his foes. He need not, however, be afraid of the retort that he has the brain of a baboon. No one would do such an injustice to the baboon.

WE had been afraid lest the "faithful retainer" was dropping out. But heartening news comes in regard to this matter from Marseilles. "The Rajah's Nephew," remarks a newspaper report, "who has been arrested at Marseilles on a charge of obtaining jewellery without payment"—harsh words but utterly free from any attempt at fine-writing—"has given the Paris police trouble of a novel kind." In its essence the thing was a study in corpulence. The Rajah's nephew, we gather, either from a systematic disregard of the warnings of the Not-Another-Chop League, or from constitutional causes, had not developed the Vanishing Waist-line. No. And in the end they had to call a cab. ["Voiture: voiture: holà: arretez-vous, cocher, sous le nom de la loi"—or something of that sort.] Yes. There was Black Maria, standing practically empty, in the alley at the back of the Court, and yet they had all the trouble, not to speak of the expense, of getting a cab. Men who are too fat to enter the official prison van ought, say the jurists of France, to be compulsorily banted. Every sympathetic soul will agree that that was a bad business. But we cannot but feel pleased when we read that "his faithful Hindoo servant also gave a lot of trouble, as he refused to leave his master on any account, and came to blows with the police." Thank heaven, it had a happy ending. "The master and servant have now been sent together to Fresnes prison." Hurrah for the faithful retainer.

CONCERNING THE SIBERIAN TIGER.

TIGER, to the British mind, connotes India. The two are inseparable—tiger suggests India, India tiger. You would laugh at a man, no doubt, who told you that one can get badly frost-bitten lying in wait in a snowy gulch up very near to the Arctic Circle for a shot at a couple of tiger. Yet that is the case.

Lions inhabited Europe till the time of the Roman Empire, till after the famous evangelising voyage of St. Paul. With their headquarters in Greece they ranged over the entire Balkan peninsula To-day they are common in Persia, and their intimidating roar may often be heard by the voyager on still summer evenings, along the sandy southern shores of the Bosphorus. In prehistoric times the fearsome sabre-toothed tiger—the extinct ancestor of our modern beast—used to be a common object of the wayside, even in Britain, but no specimens of the modern tiger have ever been recorded in Europe. Fifty years ago tigers used sometimes to come down to the Caucasian shores of the Caspian Sea.

Tigers to-day range over the greater part of southern and eastern Asia. You meet with them in Turkestan. In India they are getting really scarce and amusing stories are told of the difficulties of the British Government, on the occasion of the German Crown Prince's recent visit to our great dependency, in connection with the ensuring of a certain bag of this quarry for our illustrious guest. Tigers are on the increase in the Sunderbunds, the swampy, jungle-clad islands at the mouth of the great River Ganges, and they are unpleasantly to the fore in Singapore and throughout the Malay peninsula.

While out in Siberia, Manchuria, and along the Korean frontier, this spring, I had an opportunity of finding out, at first hand, something of the ways of that truly formidable animal, the Siberian tiger.

A Siberian tiger—a well-fed, well-exercised, long, lithe, tawny, and glossy Siberian tiger—is the finest wild beast to-day treading this green earth of ours. The further north you go, the better specimen of tiger you meet, till you come eventually to the pink of perfection, the super-tiger, in the hinterland of Vladivostock. He is as markedly the physical superior of the Bengal tiger as the Scottish wild cat is that of the domestic pussy-cat of our homes. The two finest tigers in the London Zoological Gardens are Siberian, but, fine as they are, they show poorly when compared with their comrades ranging the fertile hills of the Oosoori. A Bengal tiger and any sort of tiger in a mild climate has a thin pelt; it is sufficiently warm for him. But in the cold climate, where there is constant exposure, as in the Oosoori, to a winter temperature of 20 degrees under zero, the fur becomes so luxuriant that you may plunge both hands out of sight in it. The Siberian tiger's pelt is worth nearly twice as much, commercially, as that of the Malay branch of the family.

Siberia is a vast country, a good deal bigger than Europe, and its landscape is as dissimilar, in various tracts, as that of Holland and Switzerland. The fact that a certain wild creature—bird, beast, or reptile—crops up here or there is no indication that it will be found elsewhere. Hence you must not suppose that the Siberian tiger comes anywhere near the Ural Mountains or Northern Russia. It is confined, like much big game of the country, to the well-watered Oosoori district near the mouth of the Amur. Here it is very plentiful, the numerous herds of small deer and antelope inhabiting the region furnishing it with a good food supply.

About half a century ago a very remarkable phenomenon took place. For no apparent reason a great migration westward toward Russia set in. Small armies of tigers traversed plain and mountain, jungle fastness, and dense forest for a thousand miles. They became a positive menace in tracts of country that had never before known them, and scared numbers of ignorant Siberian peasants pretty well out of their wits—men and women who had never hitherto even heard of the existence of such a beast, and took it to be an incarnation of the Evil One. One hardy old tiger pioneer was shot by a band of Russians on the very shores of Lake Baikal, within 50 miles of Irkoutsk, the capital city of Siberia, with its 70,000 inhabitants, cathedral, modern streets, and factories. Then, as mysteriously as the westward movement had begun, it came to an abrupt end, and since then the tigers of Siberia have been content with their home in the Oosoori.

Indications would seem to provide a parallel for the movement in the past. It is well known that the larger felidæ are prone to these uneasy migratory promptings. It is on record that some 700 years ago a large invading army of Japanese, who were fighting their way northward from Manchuria, carrying all before them, were checked and actually forced to retire, when they came to the Oosoori by the swarms of mosquitoes. No mention is made by the chronicler of the "log" of the expedition of the tiger, which would certainly have been found a serious menace had they then been as plentiful as they are to-day. This would rather point to the great northward trek of the tigers up the China coast from Malay and the Indies having occurred since then. They had a hard time getting through China, being harassed by the teeming population, but a number of them reached Korea, and in that deserted region established themselves firmly. Another northward trek was made, and the second great tiger camp was established in the Oosoori.

Korea, politically and nationally speaking, is a pretty dead country to-day, the Japanese having annexed the whole land, even changing its name to Cho-Sen. But so far as the tiger is concerned—the big northern, or Siberian tiger—things are remarkably lively. While I was up along the Korean-Manchu border, matters indeed had reached almost a state of panic. The great beasts in many localities had become utterly fearless. They would stroll into a village one evening, and with a haughty disregard of the presence of the mildly combative villagers and the selection of small spears and arrows that decorated their stout hides, porcupine-quill fashion, smash in a cottage door and proceed, with admirable sang-froid, to devour everyone indoors, upstairs and down. Moreover, they were picking up the unpleasing habit of digging up buried corpses and devouring them. One poor old fellow, a Korean farmer in a neighbouring village, was going home one day and found a tiger devouring the recently buried body of his daughter and the remains of two men. Big battues were being organised in Seoul itself, the capital of the country, to sally forth and kill down tigers as "noxious vermin."

You encounter an odd fact when you come to inquire into the weight of a tiger. Two hundred pounds is a good average weight for a well-developed man. Well, a large adult tigress, with all her bulk, runs to only 50lb. more. The very biggest Bengal tiger encountered will rarely exceed the weight of two men and a small child. The Siberian tiger, however, often runs to 550lb. and even 600lb., a distinct ascendancy in weight.

The biggest Siberian tiger ever seen in Europe was, some time ago, in the possession of Carl Hagenbeck, the famous Hamburg collector of big-game. Its skin measured 13ft. 6in. from tip of the nose to tip of the tail. The biggest Indian tiger of which we have authentic measurements fell to the gun of the late Maharaja of Cooch Behar, whose death at Bexhill, only the other day, will be fresh in the reader's memory. This beast measured 11ft. 7in.

In Vladivostock, the Pacific termination of the Trans-Siberian Railway, and within a few hours of the best tiger country, semi-tame cubs are a common pet with the young Russian officers of the garrison.

Readers of the Shooting Times, the depth of whose purses is not sufficient to warrant an attainment of secret covetings of tiger-hunting in India, might do well to realise that here, in the Oosoori province of Siberia, there is some of the finest tiger-shooting in the world to be enjoyed at a very economical figure. All things being considered, it needs £400 to undertake from England, a tiger-hunting holiday in India. For well under £100 a man might go out from London to the Oosoori and enjoy two or three weeks' sport with an absolute certainty of bagging two or three Siberian tigers, along with a wealth of smaller game. There is none of the difficulty and exasperation of having to deal with a small army of beaters, for unlike the jungle-tiger of Bengal—who sleeps away the day and pounces by night on his prey at the drinking places—the northern beast is at his fullest activity by day. Instead of having to deal, from the security of an elephant howdah, with a sleepy, surprised creature, that cowers, alarmed by the beaters, from the path of your ponderous mount, you are out to encounter a thoroughly well-awake brute, ranging the open countryside, and you are, if you follow the Russian custom, afoot. You may rely on the element of sport being well to the fore.—B. Digby in Shooting Times.

THE CAWNPORE SPRING MEETING.

SIR,—My attention has been drawn to the Prospectus of the Cawnpore Spring Meeting 1912.

This meeting seems to be run with the idea of "making a bit," or at any rate of standing to lose nothing. Now this is all right from the joint Honorary Secretaries' point of view, but such extortionate charges are deterrent to most poor owners, who after all are the geese who lay the golden eggs. To make a meeting popular first catch your owners and get entries, but the cost of the entries for this particular meeting are more likely to have the opposite effect and drive owners away.

To particularize.

For all Races value Rs. 200 to the winner, Rs. 50 to the second and Rs. 25 to the third, it costs at the cheapest first entry Rs. 25 to win a stake of Rs. 200.

For all Races value Rs. 500, Rs. 100 to the second and Rs. 50 to the third, it costs Rs. 40.

This in addition to the usual course fee, makes the proposition a hot one when one takes into consideration the increased cost of living at Cawnpore for the horses, and also rail fare and sundry expenses. Personally I race for profit, and not as an act of philanthropy towards struggling Mofussil Meetings. Compare these terms with Allahabad and the difference is somewhat remarkable.

There we see—

Entries for all races value Rs. 200 to the winner, first entry Rs. 5 forfeit nil.

Entries for all races value over Rs. 200 to the winner, first entry Rs. 10, with Rs. 10 extra for horses not struck out by 12 noon day before.

Would there were more meetings framed on these lines. For a poor man it makes it impossible to pay one's stable bill if beguiled to a meeting such as Cawnpore.

The Indian Bookie who stands up at these little meetings is a shy bird, and offers the shortest of prices, and the lotteries usually after the first day prove a snare and delusion accentuated by a splitting headache.

RANGOON AUTUMN MEETING.

Saturday, 2nd December 1911.

THE autumn meeting opened this afternoon in sultry weather but this did not prevent an enormous crowd turning up and most successful sport rewarded the big attendance. Punters must have come away "all smiles" for the favourite won in each of the seven events coloured on the programme. The Burjorjee colours were again to the fore, Wheel of Fortune winning the McDonnell Cup for the fourth year in succession,—though Murdison cut things a bit too fine and only got up in the last stride,—and Lavender winning the Trial Plate for which he started at 5 to 7 on. The Tom Thumb Plate provided a most exciting finish, Mr. Burjorjee's Cuckoo dead-heating with Dat Pyan Mah for first place with Thein Mauk a neck away third. Fields ruled large in all the events but the Autumn Plate which was won by Mya Glay. Results:—

THE LILLIPUT PLATE.—Rs. 1,000 to the winner, Rs 250 to the second, and Rs. 100 to the third pony. A flat race for Burma-bred ponies 12-3 and under. 12-3 to carry 9st. W. I. 7 furlongs.

Radiol

RADIOL TREATMENT prolongs the life of a Horse's Legs. Completely removes by radiation all soft swellings that disfigure and lame a Horse as sprained Tendons, Windgalls, Bog Spavins, Capped Elbow Big Leg, Enlarged Glands, etc.

No Blister; No Laying up
No Hair Removed.

RADIOL TREATMENT fines down a worn Horse's Legs and is a certain cure for Puffy Joints and Sprains, Prevents Filled Legs.

An intelligent use of the "RADIOL LEG WASH" counteracts that daily wear and tear of the legs unavoidable with the Horse in constant work, whether training, racing, or on the road.

One flask of "RADIOL" will make a GALLON of valuable Leg Wash.

"The Field," June 18th, 1906:—

"We have been able to test some trial bottles of "RADIOL" in cases of Wind-galls, Splints and Puffy swellings and have found "RADIOL" to be very beneficial, and we have also found it useful as a leg wash for polo ponies after a day's play."

To be obtained from Broom & Co., Calcutta; Treacher & Co., Bombay; W. E. Smith & Co., Mount Road, Madras; Heath & Son, Sharia Maghraky, Cairo; W. Wilson, Rawal Pindi and Murree; The Mombassa Pharmacy, Mombassa.

THE TURF.

DERBY.

By good luck the finest day of the meeting was the last on Friday the 17th: we had a lovely afternoon with a few high floating clouds. Just flecked a bright sky and it was so mild an overcoat was more of a foe than a friend. It was a day of big fields and good racing. In the Derby Cup poor old Bromzino the top weight and favourite made a gallant but fruitless effort to catch the Judge's eye and was beaten by half a length by Clarenceux. Results:—

WARWICK.

Nothing like so much rain had fallen in the Midlands as in Surrey, and the country looked fresh and green, with very little surface water in places. The specials from London were well patronised for a Monday, and the countryside rallied round their November Meeting. The club enclosure was well patronised, as

THE MOST POWERFUL REPEATER MADE.

In the confidence that comes from knowing that one is equipped to meet the largest or most dangerous prowler of the jungle is often found success. The .405 Winchester is the most powerful repeating rifle made. Its 300-grain, soft-point bullet has sufficient shocking power to stop any game alive. Note the tremendous velocity and energy shown by the following figures: velocity, 2204 foot seconds; energy, 3236 foot pounds. The rifle holds five cartridges, which can be fired in rapid succession, each shot delivering a ton and a half of energy. Simple of operation, reliable in action and accurate in shooting, it is used by famous big-game hunters in all parts of the world.

MANCHESTER.

The weather is such an important factor at Manchester that a wet morning yesterday cast a damper on visitors' spirits, but fortunately the day developed into one of the most charming sort known since racing was removed to Castle Irwell ; in fact, it was more like May than November, and but for a wreath of mist that weaved up later in the afternoon the view of the racing was wonderfully clear. The attendance on the part of the sport-loving Lancashire folk was much larger in proportion than was that of the members as the attendance was moderate in the club enclosure, but immense in the big public stands further on. The going was in excellent order, and though fields, after opening well, did not came up to the gigantic expectations aroused by the programme, they averaged sufficiently well, and racing was brisk and interesting. FOOTBALL.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

Up to the present Woolwich Arsenal can claim no more than four victories in the First League this season, but among the clubs which have gone down before the Plumstead team are Newcastle United and Bradford City, who stand at the head of the competition with 18 and 17 points to their respective credits. On Saturday the Arsenal added considerably to their reputation with a win by 3 to 0 against Sunderland, the margin in their favour being more decisive than that registered in any other game in Division I yesterday. The Wearside team, it is true, were not quite at full strength, and played a new recruit as centre-forward, but the Plumstead men may well be proud of their achievement. Before the interval Randall, the forward secured from Newcastle some weeks back, scored two goals, and to the same player fell the distinction of obtaining the third point. A fortnight ago, when Everton appeared at Plumstead, the form of the Arsenal front rank proved very disappointing, and the visitors won by 1 to 0, but with that solitary exception the Arsenal have not suffered a League defeat for a couple of months. They are now quite a well-balanced side, sound in defence, as they have often shown themselves in other years, and capable of much more skilful attack than has usually characterised their efforts. Until yesterday Woolwich Arsenal had not beaten Sunderland for four years. Since that memorable win, obtained by the way during the Christmas holidays of 1907, the Wearside team had won five matches out of seven and drawn the other two.

Whereas on the second Saturday of the month Hotspur won at home and the Arsenal drew away, last week end the London clubs reversed those performances, the Arsenal proving victorious Plumstead and Hotspur sharing the points with Aston Villa at Birmingham. Inasmuch as the Tottenham men, since their admission to the First League, have never yet defeated the Villa, the North London club may well rest content with having effected a draw, even if the famous Birmingham organisation have this season shown themselves much less formidable at home than usual. On two occasions during the match Hampton placed the Villa ahead, but each time Hotspur speedily drew level, R. Steel equalising the home club's first goal and the second being rushed when Anstey, the Villa custodian, was endeavouring to deal with a long shot from Middlemiss. All through the Tottenham men played nice, bright football, and although their goal had some narrow escapes, they quite deserved to halve the points. Stepping into fourth place a week ago, Hotspur retain that position with as many points as Blackburn Rovers, but not quite as good a goal average. In their last five matches Hotspur have only dropped two points.

Dispossessed of the leadership in the First League by Blackburn Rovers a week ago, Newcastle have regained that distinction thanks to a victory over Notts County. The Nottingham team made at St. James's Park a much closer fight than recent form had suggested as likely, but the odd goal in five went to their opponents. Blackburn Rovers, who have been playing so well this season, engaged in the most formidable task of the afternoon and just lost, the only goal of a strenuous contest at Bradford going to Bradford City, who so far have won all six matches in which they have engaged at home. As a consequence of this defeat, the Rovers drop to third place, with two points fewer than Newcastle and one less than the Cupholders. Manchester United, last season's champions, met with their third defeat in the course of five games and Everton who had four successive victories to their credit, sustained an altogether unexpected reverse from Preston North End. Following upon a long spell of failure, West Bromwich Albion secured their first win for practically two months. Manchester City, whom they overcame, are, however, a very poor side this season, with only one win to show at the end of a dozen engagements. Bury, losing at Oldham, are in an even worse plight than Manchester City.

The three London clubs of the Second Division of the League enjoyed complete success and in consequence all of them advance in the competition, but while Chelsea and Clapton Orient are among the first five on the list, Fulham have already met with too many reverses to have much chance of ever figuring very near the top. Chelsea now stand third with an equal number of points to Hull City, but are not so well off because of an extra game played. Their victory over Huddersfield Town, like that of Clapton Orient over Birmingham, was expected ; Fulham surprised everyone by winning at Leeds, where visiting clubs usually find the local side—however lowly their position in the competition—hard to beat. As Barnley gained a signal triumph at Turf Moor at the expense of Bristol City, they go above Hugh City. The Lancashire club, however, have had to fulfil an extra engagement to secure their advantage of one point, so that Hull City are in reality slightly better off.

After holding the lead in the Southern League for eleven weeks, Queen's Park Rangers have to retire in favour of Swindon—their first conquerors. This change seemed probable, but it has come about in quite startling fashion, Swindon gaining a handsome victory over Millwall, while the Rangers failed so utterly in the second half of their game at Northampton as to have a margin of four goals against them when play ceased. Having their defence pierced eight times in two matches after ten contests had yielded only three goals to their opponents, the Rangers are now no better of than Crystal Palace, who would, indeed, have gone into second place yesterday had not the miserable weather prevented the game at Sydenham from being played out. As it is, Swindon stand alone at the head of affairs in just the same emphatic manner that Queen's Park Rangers did a fortnight ago. Swindon have only suffered one defeat—at Watford, five weeks ago—and they now are once more undoubtedly the best side in the competition.

The Fourth Qualifying Round of the Association Cup was played on Saturday and for the first time this season the competition had an interest for the general public. Several Second Division and Southern League clubs were engaged. There were two distinct surprises, Stoke going down before Walsall and Lincoln City beating Grimsby Town. To-morrow the draw will be made for the Fifth Qualifying Round, and the clubs who get through this stage enter the competition proper.

England's amateurs had little to spare in beating the Irishmen at Huddersfield by 2 goals to 0, but after a defeat at Belfast last year and a draw at Leeds in the previous engagement, it was something quite satisfactory to win. Realising the necessity of making special efforts to beat Denmark, the Football Association got together a very powerful team early in the season, and the success at Park Royal naturally improved the Englishmen, who have now avenged reverses sustained from both the Danes and the Irishmen. The forward line was particularly strong, including A. Berry, the Oxford Blue, E. G. D. Wright, the old Cambridge player and Corinthian, V. J. Woodward, Gordon Hoare—often sought after by professional clubs—and G. W. Webb, who played last April against Scotland. Seeing that they had to make four changes in their side, the Irishmen are to be congratulated in restricting the scoring to a goal in each half.

ENGLAND vs. IRELAND.—The annual match between amateur elevens representing England and Ireland was played at Huddersfield and attracted about 3,000 spectators. The Irishmen, whose team had been weakened by several changes had a very rough journey in crossing on Friday, and were not considered at all fit. England took the field as selected. At the start England attacked and forced a corner, which was well placed by Wright, but Webb shot over. Ireland then broke away and Robertson made a fine dribble, but fell when within shooting distance. Just after this a corner fell to Ireland, and should have resulted in a goal, but Neville missed with the goal at his mercy. Bookman, the Irish outside left, was a source of much trouble to the English defence, and from one of his centres McDonnell was rather unfortunate not to get through. Then, at the end of 25 minutes, England met with success, Woodward scoring for them. For a time after this the Irishmen were seen to considerable advantage, their forwards being very often dangerous, but the English backs were safe. On one occasion, however, McDonnell managed to get in a fine shot, which Brebner saved in brilliant style. From this point to the interval England held the upper hand, and McKee was called upon to clear shots by Hoare and Berry. Nothing more was scored, however, and thus at the interval the score stood:—

Ireland	0

On resuming both sets of forwards attacked in turn, but McKee, in goal for Ireland had rather more to do than Brebner at the other end. He made several brilliant saves, but at length was beaten by Webb, who finished a clever forward movement with a hard shot. Not long after this McCann, the Irish right back, was injured, and had to leave the field, but, despite this, the Irish defence was not again penetrated, McKee continuing to keep goal in fine style. What Ireland lacked in skill they made up for vigour and determination, but they met with a stubborn resistance and could not manage to reduce the margin against them.

RUGBY RULES.

YORKSHIRE, who defeated Lancashire in decisive fashion at Skipton on the 18th instant, occupy in the North much the same gratifying position as that held by East Midlands in the South-East. The Yorkshiremen had previously overcome Durham and Northumberland, so they now have only Cumberland and Cheshire to beat to be certain of first place, and as Cumberland and Cheshire are clearly the weakest of the six competing teams in the North, no serious opposition to Yorkshire's triumph is likely to be forthcoming from those quarters. It is to be hoped that at length the county championship will fall to Yorkshire, who have already qualified for the final struggle two years in succession, but lost last spring to Devon, and in the previous season to Gloucestershire. Down in the West the question of first honours is by no means so near settlement a in the North. Somerset can claim two wins and a draw and Devon one win and a draw, while neither Gloucestershire nor Cornwall have yet gained a victory. In all probability the issue will depend upon the contest between Devon and Somerset at Exeter on the second Saturday of December.

Among Club games by far the best performance accomplished by any English team last Saturday was that of Oxford University in running Newport to three points on the Newport ground. That achievement, coupled with the victories of Cambridge over Dublin University and London Scottish, holds out great promise of a fine struggle between Oxford and Cambridge next month. Lansdowne, losing to the Harlequins at Twickenham by 29 points to 0 and Dublin University being beaten by the Services at Portsmouth, the Irish teams on tour fared badly, but it must not be forgotten that they were both trying themselves very highly. Blackheath, on the Rectory Field, gained at the expense of Richmond a much more decisive victory than appeared probable, and the Old Leysians, continuing their brilliant career, defeated Rosslyn Park by a dropped goal and six tries to nothing. So far the Leysians have won seven games off the reel, scoring 149 points to 13—in their last four engagements 87 points to 0.

LONDON HOSPITAL vs. BEDFORD.—On their ground at Hale End the Hospital showed a sad falling off from their mid-week success, and the fame they achieved in beating Oxford University suffered an eclipse through the convincing victory of Bedford. It was a game in which, consequent on the weather, play was almost wholly forward, and in this respect the visitors proved the faster, cleverer, more dashing and resolute side. It was not until late in the game, however, that they reaped their reward. First Adams scored for the Hospital, and Hall replied for Bedford. Cocking kicking a goal. Then Hopkins scored again for London, who led at the interval by two tries to a goal. For some time after crossing over the Hospital held out, but after Willett had scored owing to a bad mistake by a defender, other tries were cleverly obtained by Collins and Stafford, but neither was converted. Bedford consequently won by a goal and three tries to two tries. Lindsay was the only notable absentee from the Hospital side. Bedford, 14 points; London Hospital, 6 points.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S H. vs. OLD WHITGIFTIANS.—Most unfavourable conditions attended this match at Winchmore Hill, but in spite of a sloppy field and a greasy ball both sides played with the utmost keenness. The Bart's forwards showed to better advantage during the first half, both in the scrum and in the loose. The visitors' tackling was splendid, but at the interval they were six points behind. When the game was resumed the Hospital added a try after a few minutes' play. From this stage honours were even, play being largely in midfield. On one occasion Yates might have scored for the visitors. He cleverly intercepted a pass and had only the back to beat him. He, however, kicked the ball and lost it. Near the finish a neat passing bout by Bart's three-quarters all but ended in a try. Bower falling over just near the line. Neither side relaxed throughout the second half in attempts to score, but all efforts were without success. The scorers for Bart's were Brewitt, Richards, Bradley and Bower, who each gained an unimproved try. Stewart scored the Whitgiftians' only try, which was unconverted, the game thus ending in a win for Bart's by four tries to one try. St. Bart.'s, 12 points; Old Whitgiftians, 3 points.

BLACKHEATH vs. RICHMOND.—There was only a small attendance at the Rectory Field, where Blackheath defeated Richmond by the substantial margin of two goals and three tries to nothing. Rain fell all through the match, and the ground was very slippery, the ball soon becoming greasy. The Blackheath three-quarters, however, notwithstanding the unfavourable conditions, played a great game and were the principal factors in the victory. In all departments of the game Richmond were much inferior, and they were quite unable to withstand the attacks of the Blackheath three-quarters, although the home side were without Neale, Naritz, and Sanfuentes. All four worked well together, and, considering the conditions, made the most of the openings made for them by their halves. Five times did they cross the Richmond line, and all four men were credited with a score. Stringer opened the scoring seven minutes after the start. Stokes attempted to drop a goal, but failed to get hold of the ball, which skimmed across the ground to Stringer, who ran in. Then Stokes intercepted in midfield and scored behind the posts, and just before the interval a good run by Dodds and Stringer resulted in the first named getting in, and Coverdale placed a goal. In the second half, when the light was very bad—the game started half an hour late—Owen and Stokes scored tries, one of which Dickson improved from near the touch line. Blackheath, 19 points; Richmond, 0.

OXFORD vs. EDINBURGH ACADEMICALS.—Oxford beat Edinburgh Academy on Iffley-road ground on the 21st instant by a dropped goal, a penalty goal, and 2 tries to a placed goal and a penalty goal.

The Scottish gained the first try through Watson, who had been transferred from outside half to wing three-quarter. Watson followed up a drop at goal by Scott and touched the ball just before David, playing as substitute in the Oxford team for Sampson, could get up. It was a very near thing, so near that the referee hesitated about giving the try.

Lagden followed with a penalty goal for the 'Varsity, and early in the second half Poulton gave the Dark Blues the lead by dropping a goal from a distance of thirty-five yards.

The Academy recovered the lead through Scott, who landed a magnificent penalty goal from the touch-line in the Oxford "twenty-five." Up to five minutes from time the Academy still led, but in the closing stages Steyn, after a brilliant run, and Donald from a line-out near the goal-line, got over for Oxford, Lagden failing at each attempt, and the Dark Blues won as stated.

The Scottish were unlucky to lose. Their forwards, splendidly led by Scott, were irresistible in the loose, while Watson showed plenty of pace on the wing. The Oxford tackling showed much improvement, but the exertions of the Newport match told their tale on the forwards.

ROWING.

THE COLQUHOUN SCULLS.

NINE scullers figured in the preliminary heats of the Colquhoun sculls as per details in my last letter, and as a result C. A. Pattinson and R. W. M. Arbuthnot came together in the final round. Rain fell heavily, but the racing conditions were more favourable than on the previous days. It was a great race, Pattinson held a good advantage half way over, but up Long Reach Arbuthnot, the 'Varsity president, sculled very pluckily, and in the end was only beaten by a narrow margin. Mr. L. H. Bushe Fox umpired. Details:—

Second station: L. A. Pattinson, Rugby and Jesus, 12st. 5lb., 1. First station: Arbuthnot, Eton and Third Trinity, 10st. 4lb., 2. Won by a length. Time, 7mins. 52secs. The time is excellent, being only 6secs. outside the record set up by R. V. Powell, Third Trinity.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—With only a week elapsing before the race which takes place at Goring on Saturday next there are not likely to be many more alterations in the constitutice of the two trial eight crews, although there may be some rearrangement of the seats to a limited extent in order to get the two crews as nearly as possible equal. The coaching has been in the hands of the president, R. C. Bourne and L. G. Wormald, with Dr. Bourne lending them asistance with the tubbing. The president has experienced unusually favourable weather almost continuously since practice commenced and yesterday proved no exception to the rule, although there was rather an unpleasant wind. An alteration was necessitated in the constitution of No. 2 owing to the indisposition of Wiggins, and whilst L. G. Wormald took his place going down on the return journey, the latter went out of the boat and coached, Fletcher going No. 6 whilst the president took the latter's place at the stroke thwart. The crews were afloat at half-past two, R. E. Burgess, Magdalen, being in attendance on No. 1, whilst the president looked after No. 2. They went away at a stroke of 28, paddling to Iffley without an easy. Below the lock some more paddling was done, and they took matters leisurely until reaching Radley Common, where a halt was made. After a brief rest some hard rowing

GOLF.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs. OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE SOCIETY.—The Oxford and Cambridge Golfing Society defeated Oxford University in a very close match on the Oxford University Club's course at Radley on Saturday by 9½ matches to 8½. The Society won the singles by 6½ to 5½, and in the foursomes each side won three games. The weather was fine, and there was no wind.

Mr. A. J. Evans, who led the University side, was not at his best, and lost his match against Mr. H. W. Beveridge, but Mr. J. F. Macdonell played splendidly, and with a score of two under 4's for 14 holes beat Mr. A. C. M. Croome by 5 holes up and 4 to play.

In the leading foursome Mr. Cuming putted very well, and he and Mr. Beveridge defeated Mr. Evans and Mr. Macdonell by 4 and 2. Mr. Croome and Mr. Hammond-Chambers, after having been 3 up at the 10th, only beat Mr. Holderness and Mr. Smith by one hole. The results were:—

CYCLING.

OLYMPIA CYCLE SHOW.

THE exhibition of pedal and motor cycles which opened at Olympia on Monday is the second which has been organized by the Cycle and Motor Cycle Manufacturers' and Traders' Union. A survey of the exhibits makes it clear, however, that it is a considerable advance upon its predecessor.

A year ago the trade had only just broken the old association with the Stanley Show, and indeed both that at the Agricultural Hall and the exhibition at Olympia by the new union were held almost concurrently in 1910. On that occasion the Stanley Show was only the ghost of its former self, the trade transferring its support to the exhibition at Olympia. If the management of the new union carry their point of absolute control of such matters the Olympia Show will in future be the only cycle exhibition of the year, and if the character of the present show may be regarded as reflecting the intentions of the trade, then the annual exhibition at Olympia will rival in comprehensiveness the great motor exhibition which it follows.

There will be found this difference between these two great trade exhibitions. The display of motor-cars includes a fair representation of foreign industry, the Cycle Show is the exhibition of a British industry. In this field of enterprise Great Britain, where the trade was founded, has always predominated. There was a period when the cheap American bicycle was imported in large numbers, but the invasion was so completely repelled that it has never been repeated. The trade returns bring out the strong position held by the British manufacturer, for while the exports of British built pedal cycles and accessories have amounted in value during 1911 to £1,957,582, the value of the imports into Great Britain of foreign made cycles during the same period was only £2,646. The British exports of motor-cycles and parts thereof for the ten months ended 31st October last amounted to £254,861, compared with £125,400 for the corresponding period of 1910 and £73,667 in 1909. Imports for the corresponding periods were £92,596, £87,667 and £59,391. The comparison is favourable to the British manufacturer. Behind these figures are the enormous home sales of the industry.

Popular attention has been so attracted by the change in methods of road transport brought about by the motor-car that the important position occupied by the old cycle industry is frequently overlooked. Yet outside the growing trade in power-driven machines it is a safe assumption that there are more pedal bicycles being sold to-day than at any previous period. The production by the large makers of a soundly-built machine at a low price brought the bicycle within reach of the artisan class, and it is in this field that the great trade in pedal cycles is being carried on to-day.

The present exhibition contains a notable display of pedal machines, but the design has now been to a great extent standardized, and new features are only to be found in details. More interest attaches to the exhibit of motor-cycles, this branch of the industry being still comparatively new, and in the stage of rapid development. Attempts have been and are being made to bridge over the gap between the pedal and the motor cycle by the provision of an auxiliary device to the former class of machine, and if complete success should be realized there would probably be a great popular demand for such a combination machine. The improvements which have been made in the motor cycle proper during the past year must be sought for in several directions.

The chief changes in design are in the standardizing of variable speed gear, the more common employment of pedal starting devices, and the additional attention paid to carburettor design and methods of ignition. One result has been a considerable extension of the field of users, and a conspicuous feature is that the woman rider is being attracted in constantly increasing numbers. Examples of all the latest types of machine, including those designed for side-car attachment, will be found at Olympia.

The cycle stands occupy the whole of the floor space at Olympia, tyres and accessories being exhibited in the gallery. There are nearly 300 stands, and all the leading manufacturers in both sections of the trade are represented.

DELHI DURBAR TOURNAMENT.

IMPERIAL CADET CORPS vs. BHOPAL.—These teams met in the second round on the 8th instant, Bhopal winning by 8 goals to 3.

First Chukker.—Play was slow and uninteresting, the Cadets did most of the attacking but neither team scored.

Second Chukker.—Fast play up and down the field: Jacra opened the Cadets' account.

Third Chukker.—Bhopal had the best of a rather sticky period and Imtiaz equalised.

Fourth Chukker.—Bhopal continued to attack but were unable to score. Jacra got away for the Cadets but his stick broke as he was about to shoot, Sikander was, however, handy and scored with an easy shot.

Fifth Chukker.—Both goals were visited without success. Then Bhopal were penalised for off-side, the Cadets just failing to score from the penalty. Up and down play closed the period.

Sixth Chukker.—Bhopal pressed but nothing came of their attack. Then the Cadets were on the offensive for a spell but they were kept out and before the end of the chukker Abdul Wahed ran down and put the teams on terms.

Seventh Chukker.—Bhopal attacked and after Todd and Imtiaz had missed Todd got through again and gave his side the lead. The Cadets then rushed down and equalized in a melee. Thereafter Bhopal had the best of the play and Abdul Wahed and Todd added to their score.

Eighth Chukker.—The Cadets went to pieces in this period and Bhopal pressing throughout scored three more goals, thus winning by 8 goals to 3. Teams:—

SCOUTS vs. INNISKILLINGS.—Played on the 6th instant the Inniskillings winning a great game by 2 goals to 1. The Dragoons were better mounted, Ritson and Colmore for the winners and Colonel Chanda Singh of the Scouts were the most prominent.

First Chukker.—Fast and level play, Bowen drawing first blood for the Dragoons shortly after the start. Both goals were visited but without success.

Second Chukker.—The Dragoons had if anything the best of the play in this period but there was no scoring.

Third Chukker.—The Dragoons attacked and Chanda Singh saved twice in splendid style. Then the Scouts got away and Barrett equalised. A run by the Dragoons followed, Colmore just missing the flags.

Fourth Chukker.—The Scouts attacked but Miles shot wide. Offside against Nixon and the Dragoons had to hit in from behind their line. Fast and level play till the close of the chukker when the Scouts hit behind to save.

Fifth Chukker.—From the penalty Ritson put in a good shot and Miles hit behind. Ritson nearly scored with his next shot and then the Scouts cleared and ran down but Miles shot wide. Both goals were next visited but nothing resulted.

Sixth Chukker.—A penalty hit to the Scouts, Nixon being offside. Barrett's shot hit a pony. Exciting play in front of the Dragoons' goal but they managed to clear and Ritson and Colmore took the ball down. They were, however, unable to beat Chanda Singh and Barrett.

Seventh Chukker.—The Dragoons attacked but could not score. Ritson's pony then came down but no one was hurt and on resuming the Dragoons kept up the pressure and eventually scored in a scrimmage. The Scouts then attacked and Bowen was kept busy but he saved in splendid style.

Eighth Chukker.—The Scouts attacked throughout this period and made desperate attempts to get on terms but all their efforts were unavailing and they were beaten as stated by 2 goals to 1. Teams:—

Semi-Finals.

KING'S DRAGOON GUARDS vs. BHOPAL.—Played on the 9th instant. The Dragoons outclassed their opponents at every point and won easily by 10 goals to nil. The first was a very sticky chukker, the Dragoons doing all the pressing but there was no score. In the second the Dragoons were on the offensive throughout and Weinholt and Rasbotham hit a goal each. Bhopal were prominent for a short spell at the beginning of the third but Cheape cleared and scored a goal. He added another point shortly after. From this point on the K. D. G.'s did all the attacking and scoring 6 more goals won as stated by 10 goals to nil. Teams:—

INNISKILLING DRAGOONS vs. KISHENGARH.—The Viceroy's staff team having scratched from the tournament the Kishengarh team reached the semi-finals without playing a game. On Saturday they met the Inniskilling Dragoons and were beaten after a splendid game by 4 goals to 3. They were unlucky to lose the services of Moti Lall who was injured in the third chukker and unable to continue. Bunni Singh was the mainstay of Kishengarh, while Ritson and Colmore were again most conspicuous for the Dragoons. Their Majesties the King and Queen were present during the major part of this game.

First Chukker.—Fast and level play throughout. A run by Ritson and Colmore resulting in a goal for the Inniskillings.

Second Chukker.—Both goals were visited but all the shots were unsuccessful. Then the Dragoons were penalised for hooking sticks on the wrong side and Kishengarh equalised. They got another chance of scoring from a similar penalty shortly after but failed to turn it to account.

Third Chukker.—Soon after the start Ritson and Moti Lall collided and the Kishengarh man was injured and had to be removed in an ambulance. His place was taken by a substitute and the game resumed. A dangerous foul against the Dragoons gave their opponents a penalty but nothing came of it. Then the Dragoons attacked and Colmore scored.

Fourth Chukker.—Bunni Singh got away and scored with a magnificent long shot. Fast and exciting play followed both goals being visited in turn. Just before half time the Dragoons rushed down and scored, leading at the interval by 3 goals to 2.

Fifth Chukker.—Kishengarh pressed throughout and had hard lines in not scoring on more than one occasion. Towards the close the Dragoons got away and Ritson scored.

Sixth Chukker.—The Dragoons missed a couple of good chances and though they pressed in this chukker nothing was scored.

Seventh Chukker.—The Inniskillings were robbed of a goal by the Maharajah's pony. Up and down play followed and then Kishengarh made great but fruitless efforts to score.

Eighth Chukker.—Colmore ran down and Ritson shot but Bunni Singh cleared in fine style and bringing the ball back just missed by inches. The Dragoons were next prominent but could not get through and the Maharajah taking the ball down put in a fine shot. Bowen was forced to hit behind and from the resulting penalty the Maharajah scored for Kishengarh. A fourth point was not however forthcoming and they had to retire beaten by 4 to 3. Teams:—

Final.

KING'S DRAGOON GUARDS vs. INNISKILLING DRAGOONS.—The final match in the tournament was played on the 11th December and witnessed by a huge crowd. Their Majesties were present and H. M. the Queen presented the trophies to the winners at the conclusion of the game, proceedings terminating with much cheering and enthusiastic demonstrations of loyalty. The King's Dragoon Guards have the sympathy of all sportsmen in their bad luck, for, owing to an attack of fever, their best player, Captain Leslie Cheape, was unable to take part and his absence was a serious handicap. The team was disorganised and had to suffer defeat by 4 goals to 1. The Inniskillings were at the top of their form and are to be congratulated on their success. Ritson and Colmore excelled themselves and Nixon and Bowen both played better than they have done before.

First Chukker.—The K. D. G.'s got away and were nearly through, Colmore clearing. A stoppage occurred while Their Majesties arrived and on re-uming the Inniskillings rushed away and scored their first point from a throw in. Ritson was nearly through again but missed and the ball was returned to the Inniskilling territory.

Second Chukker.—A run by the Inniskillings was unsuccessful. Thereafter the K. D. G.'s pressed vigorously and several shots were sent in, none of which took effect. A run by Colmore closed the chukker—his final shot going out wide.

Third Chukker.—Rasbotham ran down the length of the field and equalised. Fast up and down play closed the chukker.

Fourth Chukker.—The Inniskillings had the best of this period but could not score. A couple of good runs by Rasbotham for the opposite side were also unsuccessful, half time arriving with the score one all.

Fifth Chukker.—The Inniskillings attacked but were driven back by Wickham and Weinholt. The 6th, however, returned to the charge and were on the offensive throughout this period, which, however, ended without score.

Sixth Chukker.—The 6th pressed and scored in a scrimmage: Colmore just missed scoring a little later and then the K. D. G.'s attacked. The Inniskillings were kept busy for a spell but they managed to clear at the end of the chukker.

Seventh Chukker.—Colmore was responsible for a good run but the K. D. G.'s drove the ball back and level play followed for a spell. Then the K. D. G.'s looked like equalising from a scrimmage, but the 6th cleared and Ritson and Colmore took the ball down for Nixon to score.

Eighth Chukker.—The K. D. G.'s attacked but were driven back and play followed in midfield. Shortly before time Colmore got away and scored the fourth goal for the 6th who won as stated by 4 goals to 1. Teams:—

Cricket.

CALCUTTA NOTES AND COMMENTS.

SEVERAL centuries have been scored during the week; E. A. White's 172 is the highest individual effort recorded this season, and is also this brilliant cricketer's third three-figure innings so far. H. J. Hilary comes next with 171, but the ground at Garden Reach is a very small one and the attack of the Police was feeble, yet Hilary's innings was a good one and probably he will assist the C.C.C. in their big engagements before the season terminates.

G. Turnbull's 100 against Ballygunge, at the Gardens on Sunday, was a faultless display, and the Old Fettes boy was the first this season to score three figures on this ground. Other centurions were J. G. Frost 101 against Customs; R. N. Bocquet 104 not out for the Middlesex against C.C.C.; A. Mc'reedy 109 for the Customs against the Middlesex at Dum Dum; G. Purshottam 101 (retired) for Nattore against Rangers; H. Barlow's 104 for Customs against the Port Commissioners and G. Banerji 109 not out for Howrah Sporting against the Jute Mills United.

Thursday, 7th December, was a public holiday, and with the exception of Dalhousie, Rangers and Town Club most of the other teams were able to play on the maidan, whilst there was also cricket at the Gardens and on the B.C.C. ground. The match at the Eden Gardens was the first of the three fixtures arranged between Calcutta and Ballygunge, but while the former had out quite a representative side (including three of the best bowlers) Ballygunge on the other hand had to find substitutes for White, Frost, and the younger Gould. The cricket on Thursday was slow, but the scoring was even, which made the game interesting. Calcutta batted first and scored 151, a meagre total considering the excellent wicket. But Ballygunge fared a shade worse, their innings closing for 140. G. Turnbull 45, C. P. Beachcroft 26, and N. W. Chisholm 27 for Calcutta; and F. N. Rossiter 46, A. W. Shallow 33 for Ballygunge, were the principal run-getters and with the exception of Turnbull's and Rossiter's displays there was nothing of note in the batting. In the trundling, however, some good analysis were secured. Ernsthausen, the old Oxford and Surrey player, coming out best with five wickets for 41; Chisholm got three for 31, and Muir two for 32. For Ballygunge F. Gould got three for 37, Murray four for 52, and Hoerder three for 31.

The game was resumed on Sunday, and when the home team had put on 241 for eight wickets, Guise, who was captaining the team, applied the closure at 2-15, giving Ballygunge two and a half hours to get 253 to win. The Suburban team, however, made a miserable show, the whole side being out for 97. It is only fair to Ballygunge, however, to state that the wicket had crumbled, for the ground could not be watered during Friday and Saturday according to the rules of cricket. In addition to Turnbull's 100, A. J. Carter 41, and C. P. Beachcroft 33, batted with success. On the losing side R. N. Bocquet 28, R. L. McIntyre 24, and F. N. Rossiter 18, were the chief contributors. To prove that the wicket had crumbled and was going from bad to worse, Rossiter and Chisholm who were both tried last to bowl for their respective sides secured the best analyses, the former getting four wickets for 59 runs, while Chisholm got a similar number at a cost of 33 runs.

A close game between the Y.M.C.A. and 3rd Middlesex on the former's ground last Thursday, resulted in a win for the military by 7 runs. Out of a total of 114 for the Middlesex Lieutenant Grassmore 31, and Drummer Millwood 38, were the chief contributors. On the home side Atkinson 31, and H. Lindsay 22 batted best. Lieutenant Lightfoot for the winners took six wickets for 40 runs.

The second strings of the B.C.C. and C.C.C. beat City Athletic on Thursday at Ballygunge by 79 runs. The combined team scored 210 to City's 131. For the winners V. Cooper hit well for 74; and F. S. Sheridan 28, J. C. Sewell 26, and A. P. Wodehouse 26, all batted soundly, S. Chatterji's 35 was the best batting result on the losing side.

The same day the Customs beat the Port Commissioners by five wickets and 87 runs, but with the exception of Barlow's 104 not out, V. Alexander's not out 50, for the Customs and A. E. Fyster's 42 for the visitors there was nothing in the game. The P. C. totalled 150 and the Customs 237 for five.

The Rifle Brigade playing in the Fort on Sunday beat St. Xavier's by 70 runs. Neither side was representative, but the visitors were the more handicapped, not having any of their regular bowlers. The Rifles scored 109 while St. Xavier's got 39.

In the match at Ballygunge between the "A" team of the Suburban Club and Calcutta "A", the home team, owing to a late declaration, threw away a fine opportunity of winning. Ballygunge registered 335 to which White contributed 172 and retired, P. Crawford coming next with a not out 48. Calcutta replied with 182 for 7 wickets, H. V. Low batting attractively for 53.

Nattore gave the Rangers a good leather hunting and beat them by two wickets and 203 runs, but the match had really been won before the Maharaj's team had lost a single wicket. The Rangers totalled 120, and Nattore passed this total without the fall of a wicket. However they continued batting, and eventually knocked up 323, G. Purshottam retiring after putting together 101. The Rangers, it is fair to state, were without Templeton, Cooper, and Cody. The last named and Chandler have not represented the Club in several matches this season.

The 1st Middlesex lost to the Customs at Dum Dum on Sunday by 21 runs. The Customs batting first totalled 264 for six, to which McCready, who was dropped no fewer than six times, subscribed 100. Mr. J. A. Stevens 80, and Quiterio 27, however, batted soundly. The Middlesex were all out for 173, Lieutenant Gould playing a steady innings of 54. Marsden took six wickets for 52 runs.

Tuesday being another public holiday—Durbar Day—there was some cricket, but the games were not of much importance nor were they very interesting.

At Ballygunge the Suburban Club played and beat the Customs by 127 runs Out of a total of 186 for the visitors M Quiterio who is far and away their best batsman, was top scorer with 49, and his innings, as usual, was without blemish. J. Singleton 27, C Barlow 47, W. J. Ward 23, and Marsden not out 18, were the other double figures recorded. Frank Gould took 4 wickets for 58 runs. Ballygunge knocked up 313—J. G. Frost retiring on completing his century—an attractive innings, while D. S. Shallow 55, and H. E. Skinner 43, hit well. Marsden got 4 wickets for 70 runs, and McCready five for 103, the wicket-keeping of the Customs was poor, there being no fewer than 43 extras.

Calcutta played a half day match against the 3rd Middlesex but the latter were assisted by R N. Bocquet and Sergeant Pigott, the latter belonging to the sister battalion. The Middlesex scored 175 for two, Bocquet getting a not out 104 and Lieutenant Hume 47. Calcutta for one wicket knocked up 62.

The joint "A" teams of the Ballygunge and Calcutta clubs beat the Customs "A" on the latter's ground by 162 runs. The Customs totalled 84, while the visitors knocked up 250. The scoring was consistent. P. Crawford 40, H. F. Forster 48, and J. B. Hodgson 35 being the chief subscribers.

Nattore placed another win to his credit when they team beat the Sporting Union by 7 wickets and 194 runs. Sporting Union got 104, while Nattore registered 298 for three. P. Vithal made 120 and retired and H. R Mehta batted soundly for 60.

THE DELHI DURBAR TOURNAMENT.

FINAL.

LANCASHIRE FUSILIERS vs. BORDER REGIMENT.—The final game in the tournament was played between these teams on the 9th instant, a well-contested match being witnessed by an immense crowd of spectators. His Majesty the King-Emperor, graced the game with his presence during part of the play. The Fusiliers went away at the start and a regular bombardment of their opponents' citadel took place, but Fox in goal played a wonderful game and brought off some marvellous saves. Several corners were obtained by the Fusiliers, but they were unable to turn them to account. Then play was transferred and the Border Regiment attacked for a spell. The Fusiliers cleared and then the ball moved up and down the field. The Lancashire men looked dangerous on more than one occasion, but the opposing defence was too strong for them and the interval arrived without score. The Fusiliers pressed on resuming but their efforts were unavailing for some time. About half way through the second moiety, however, the Borderers' custodian was beaten. Nothing daunted the Border Regiment played up to the end and made desperate efforts to get on term but without success and they had to retire beaten by as goal to nil. For the winners Hefferman at back, Russell centre half and Springs outside left were most conspicuous, and Ellwood, Smith and Fox were the pick of the losing team. Both teams will receive cups and medals from Her Majesty the Queen-Empress' hands on the afternoon of 15th December after the termination of the military tournament. Staff-Sergeant J. Curley of the S. and T. Corps refereed most ably throughout. The arrangements made by Captain Chamier, 33rd Punjabis, Honorary Secretary, Football and Hockey, have been excellent and the whole tournament went without a hitch from start to finish.

MOTOR NOTES.

London, 12th November 1911.

THE present-day motorist has become more or less hardened to tramlines, and though he looks upon them as an evil and a source of danger, particularly shortly after they have been watered, yet by cautious driving and a knowledge of the vagaries and the carelessness of people getting on or off them, he manages, except in rare instances, to avoid accidents. There is one phase of the tramlines, however, that no motorist can become reconciled to, and which is a fruitful cause of accidents, and that is where the line is laid so close to the pavement that it leaves only sufficient room for the motorist to scrape past. There are many tramway lines in and around London so built, and woe betide the motorist who gets caught between the tramcar and the pavement. If he steers too close to the latter to prevent an accident the chances are that he will hit somebody on the edge of it, or, on the other hand, he will hit the side of the tramcar, with usually disastrous effects. Such a case as this was heard last week at Preston, when the motorist lost the day. The evil of all this is that in the majority of cases roads were constructed before trams, and the designers did not anticipate such vehicles passing along them. The only remedy is to in future see that any roads that are likely to have tramlines laid upon them should be built of a width sufficient to allow an ample margin on both sides to allow other vehicles to pass.

How unfavourable weather affects motoring was amply demonstrated by the particularly wet and cold conditions, for, however desirous the motorist might have been to get abroad, either on business or pleasure, he had first to carefully consider whether the roads were in a fit state for motoring; and many came to the conclusion that touring at least was quite out of the question. So long as the road surface has a coating of metal, the automobile can, in almost any weather, make good headway. Unfortunately, however, many of our highways, some of them important ones, are not macadamised throughout, and, heavy and continuous rains, coupled with ordinary traffic, cut them up so as to preclude the passage of the lighter vehicles and automobiles. There is no need to specify any particular highway; but the fact remains that many are now so bad that car-owners have, in some instances, relinquished the motor and adopted other, if slower, methods of travel.

Under ordinary winter conditions, the cold alone militates against touring, though with the hoods, screens, and side-curtains the passengers are so well protected from the elements that the chilliness has fewer terrors than formerly. It is the cold weather combined with greasy and rutted roads that make the motorist pause; and it is a noticeable thing that when a pursuit is abandoned, even temporarily, the period of abstention is usually lengthened far beyond what was originally intended. The effect of all this is to discourage the automobile, more than with the bicycle. The roads, according to their conditions, are an important factor in the development of the motor-vehicle, whether used for business, recreation or sporting purposes. Were there no roads there could be little motoring, but with more plentiful and better highways motoring must naturally increase.

MOTORISTS in general will be somewhat astonished to learn that, in the opinion of a firm of garage-keepers in the south of England, only 5 per cent. of their number are "gentlemen." The firm in question have made a complaint to the "Royal

THE point about the C.A.V. System of car-lighting is that, with all its efficiency, it stands alone as . .

THE SIMPLE SYSTEM.

It is exceedingly simple of control, and the dynamo is a marvel of mechanical simplicity, it is entirely self controlled. The special features in the C.A.V. System are all the results of actual lessons learnt on the road. They are not just experimental theories. They are practical results. We have experimented at OUR expense; we don't ask you to experiment AT YOUR OWN. The C.A.V. booklets contain full particulars of the whole system; may we mail you copies, post free?

Automobile Club Journal" on the subject of the treatment received by them from motorists who happen to require assistance on the road. By the time the mechanic or some messenger reaches them, the firm say, in ninety cases out of a hundred the motorists have disappeared. Of the remaining 10 per cent., half plead that they have no money to pay the garage charges, the other moiety being the "gentlemen" already mentioned. It is pretty certain that this particular firm's experience has been abnormal. Every motorist is not necessarily a gentleman or an honest man, but that 90 per cent. would be guilty of the offences indicated is incredible. It is pointed out, however, that there may occasionally be excuses for failure to wait on the relief from the garage. If the trouble is a shortage of petrol, for instance, and a good Samaritan happens to come along it is suggested that the motorists would be foolish either to wait further for a tin of fuel that he does not need, or to go round all the garages in the nearest town to find out which one was sending him supplies.

In a case heard a short time ago at the Manchester County Court, in which a taxicab proprietor was sued for damages on account of a dog killed by one of his vehicles, the judge made a few remarks upon the speed of motor-cars and the dog danger with which all motorists who have narrowly escaped accidents through the vagaries of dogs will agree. The judge, in giving a decision in favour of the defendant, stated that it was difficult to tell the speed of a car, and, though he would not care to say at what speed a motor-car should travel, it seemed to him that on a clear, wide road they could travel a great deal quicker than others. Dogs were not like human beings. Drivers had considerable trouble to avoid them, because they could never tell what the animals would do. The judge's remarks on the question of estimating speed will be echoed by all motorists who have been before the courts. The majority of magistrates seem only too willing to accept witnesses' estimates as correct, and it comes as a pleasant surprise that a judge should state it is difficult to judge speed. It is obvious to all motorists that to correctly, or even approximately, judge the speed at which a car is travelling can only be achieved after years of experience, and it would further the interests of justice if magistrates generally were not so prone to place implicit reliance on the indiscriminate statements usually made by prejudiced onlookers. On the question of dogs, this seems a trouble that will be ever with us, and nothing short of making it compulsory to put dogs on the lead will remedy it.

Motorists in Great Britain are given promise that their interests, no matter in what sphere, will be better looked after in the future than they have been in the past, for a proposal to constitute a National Automobile Council has met with warm approval throughout the kingdom. No fewer than nine major organisations have been requested to send delegates to an inaugural meeting, who will represent the leading clubs, the users of commercial cars, motor manufacturers, and motor-cab proprietors. The Royal Automobile Club will place its committee-room at the disposal of the proposed council, and convene all meetings when required by any one of the constituent bodies. Leading British motorists incline to the belief that when the Chancellor of the Exchequer made his "notorious onslaught" upon the motor industry, and began that serious system of taxation—"the effect of which has not even now been fully appreciated"—if such a body as the National Automobile Council had been in existence such taxation might have been adequately opposed. As it was, however, everything was more or less confused, and the way in which Mr. Lloyd George approached only one of the three bodies then in existence made the confusion worse confounded. The N. A. C. will bring together those who represent the business and pleasure side of automobilism, the technical and expert, as well as the private and public service aspects. It will endeavour to formulate and give effect to the views of motorists as a whole, in case of any further encroachments upon what may be considered their rights.

AVIATION NOTES.

Though the Indian Government has as yet taken no direct steps towards the formation of an Aeroplane Force, yet an immense amount of interest is taken in aviation by the Army men in India, from the highest ranks downwards, as is proved by the fact that so many officers in the Indian Army, or in British regiments in India, have learned to fly, their numbers being out of all proportion to those of the British Army at home. It is, however, fairly certain that some official move will be made before long.

Nevertheless, without waiting for this official move, there is likely to be quite a good deal of flying on their own account done by soldiers in India in the near future. The first officer to obtain permission to take an æroplane to India is Lieutenant H. H. Harford, who left to join his battery of Field Artillery at Karachi on Monday of last week. Mr. Harford, who took his certificate in excellent style at the Bristol School at Brooklands the previous week, has bought a Bristol biplane, which is now on its way to join him at Karachi, and on its arrival he hopes to be able to make himself and his machine useful to the authorities by giving demonstration flights whenever and wherever his other duties permit. Major Benwell, of the Scinde Horse, who has also been learning to fly at the Bristol Brooklands School, and is returning to India in a few days, hopes to find time to join Mr. Harford in his æroplane work, and between them they should be able to do excellent service, for they have spent a very big portion of their leave at Brooklands, and know considerably more about flying than do many of those who are supposed to be authorities on the subject.

It is much to be hoped that their sporting venture may prove to be the beginning of a big Indian military Aviation School, and that the authorities at headquarters will give them every encouragement.

Following on the Government's decision to hold a competition in England for the purpose of discovering the most suitable aeroplane for war purposes, Mr. S. F. Cody has stated that he is pleased that at last he would be enabled to demonstrate officially the capabilities of his machine, which, he claims, was capable of doing all that was asked by the French Government at the recent tests at Rheims. Mr. Cody says he would make no charge for the tests, nor would he accept any prize if he were successful in every detail. On the other hand, if he failed in more than 30 per cent. he would be prepared to pay the expenses of the official observers for having wasted their time.

Knowing Mr. Cody and his machine, the writer does not hesitate to say that it could pass the French military tests with ease as it stands. Also, his "Circuit" machine is a better, faster and safer machine than any French biplane which has passed the French tests. But if Mr. Cody were to pass these tests all of them, every day for a month, he would have practically no chance of selling a similar machine to the British Army—at any rate, while the present state of disbelief in all-British machines prevails in the Air Battalion and Aircraft Factory. Cody is too all-British, and knew too much about aviation to be a persona grata in certain quarters.

Quite illuminative was the information given in the House of Commons last week by Colonel Seely in response to an enquiry from Mr. Joynson Hicks. He wanted to know whether the gallant Under-Secretary for War, in arranging the promised competition for aeroplanes and aviation, would follow the example of other nations and confine the Government prizes to English manufacturers, who alone could be relied upon in time of war; and whether he would give some of the prizes in the form of orders for the manufacture of machines rather than in cash. Colonel Seely in reply said the object of the competition was to obtain the design most suitable for Army requirements, and therefore it was not desirable to confine the competition to English manufacturers. The method of allotting the prizes to be given had not yet been settled. Mr. Joynson Hicks was persistent, and queried whether it was not desirable that Army aeroplanes should be manufactured in England. Colonel Seely responded that it was quite plain, for the reasons given in the question, that it was desirable that the manufacture should take place in England, but the Government did not propose to restrict the competition to English inventors, for the reason he had already given.

Perhaps at no school in England is the staff more enthusiastic than that at the Bleriot establishment at Hendon, for, of the five mechanics that look after the welfare of the school stable, four are pupils, and well on the way to becoming fully-qualified pilots. Salmet, the chief instructor, it will be remembered, passed through the mechanic stage before taking his "brevet," so that now he is not only most capable as a flyer, but equally clever at the wise au point of his mount. Together with the favourable terms for tuition that the Bleriot firm are now offering, the prospect of receiving instruction from a schol run entirely by pilot aviators should certainly have some weight with prospective pupils.

The merit of Ewen's flight from Lanark to Edinburgh, I am afraid, has not been fully appreciated by we southerners owing to our lack of knowledge of this district. When one realizes that the course is one and a half time as long as that from Brooklands to Hendon, and lies over much more difficult country, and that the flight was performed on a Deperdussin monoplane equipped with an air-cooled Anzani motor of only 28 h.p., one gets some idea of its true significance. Surely a remarkable test for both man and machine!

Charles Hubert, now well on the way to complete recovery, is regaining some of his old light-heartedness, and no doubt the receipt on last Saturday morning of the cheque for £500 from H.S.H. the Duke of Teck, on behalf of the Aerial Post Committee, contributed considerably in this respect. As for the future, he has not at present decided what course to take, but he is rather struck with the idea of carrying out preliminary tests of a new fast monoplane which his brother, Jean Hubert, has at present under construction in Paris.

DEATH-TRAPS IN LOS ANGELES.

THE Los Angeles district of California does not appear to be in all respects a pleasant place for either men or animals to live in (or shall we say to die in ?), and certainly some of its human inhabitants have little or no claim to relationship with the celestial beings from whom the province takes its name.

As examples of death-traps invented by the diabolical ingenuity of men whom it is a shame to term human beings, we may refer in the first place to the three separate attempts made in October 1910 to blow up General Otis and his supporters. Infamous as were these dastardly crimes, they fade into complete insignificance beside the bomb-burst organised by two scoundrels named McNamara, which wrecked the publishing office of the Los Angeles Times at a time when it was packed with people. Of this terrible crime the following brief account was given in an English contemporary of 6th December :—

"One of the two McNamaras—men of exceptional intelligence, but of equal ferocity and levity—carried a travelling bag packed with high explosives. In an alley behind the newspaper office, with its doomed occupants, the dynamitard placed a clockwork bomb. The explosion smashed through the walls of the building, killing twenty-one persons outright and mutilating or otherwise wounding many others. We need not enlarge upon the appalling character of this orgy of murder. The worst things that have been done by European Anarchists—even by Nihilists in Russia, or by the Italian fiends who flung the bomb into the pit of the theatre at Barcelona—cannot be compared for callous butchery with this."

But if human ingenuity has devised these diabolically destructive sudden death-traps, nature has also done her part in Los Angeles by constructing a kind of infernal machine of a totally different type, which, although slow in its action, has had time on its side, and in the course of ages has therefore been far more fatal to animals than have all the bomb explosions to their lords and masters.

We allude, of course, to the celebrated asphalt pit of Rancho la Brea, near Los Angeles, which appears to be a black inferno whose period of activity dates at least from the time when mammoths and woolly rhinoceroses roamed by the banks of the Thames, and has been in working order ever since. So far as we gather from the published and verbal descriptions that have reached us, the La Brea inferno consists of a pit of no great diameter, but of unknown depth, filled with a slowly bubbling mass of asphalt and sand, upon the surface of which is a thin layer of water. This layer of water appears to be the bait to the trap, which is situated in a thirsty region, where it is frequently difficult for animals to quench their thirst. Accordingly, eagles and other big birds swoop down from the firmament for a drink, only to find themselves held fast in the tenacious pitch by their feet, and thus doomed to die a lingering death. Their helpless struggles serve, however, to lure such animals as wolves and coyotes to their doom; for these, after quenching their thirst, are tempted to approach the struggling birds, when they themselves share the same fate.

This process has been going on ever since the Pleistocene period, as the deeper layers of the asphalt are positively crammed with the skulls and bones of extinct sabre-toothed tigers and giant wolves, accompanied more rarely by those of giant ground-sloths and abundantly by the foot-bones of eagles and other birds, whose bodies were either devoured by the sabre-tooths and wolves or perished by exposure to the air. The bodies of the big mammals, on account of their superior bulk and weight, would, of course, gradually sink and become buried in the yielding pitch, which by its slow movements would ultimately cause them to approach the bottom, or as near thereto as the previous accumulation of bones permits.

Such, in brief, is the nature of this strange, and we believe unique, natural death-trap. It might naturally be supposed that the asphalt is worked for commercial purposes; but, as a matter of fact, it contains too great an admixture of sand for such uses, and it is accordingly worked solely for the sake of the fossil bones, of which it apparently contains sufficient to stock all the museums in the world.

Time was when the complete skull of a sabre-toothed tiger was a great and priceless rarity; but since one collector alone is reported to have obtained something like sixty of these skulls from the La Brea death-trap, there is strong probability of a big slump in the price of these commodities.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

THE Calcutta First Meeting opened on Saturday last, the 23rd December, under very favourable auspices, the weather being of the best, the attendance large, and the racing of an interesting nature, though it was regrettable that the two principal events in the card, the Burdwan Cup and the Trials, did not attract bigger fields. Both these races, however, and also another one possessed a special interest by reason of the bearing they had upon the big event of the 27th, an event upon which we are precluded from commenting in this issue owing to the fact of the result arriving to us after these notes are in print. Her Excellency Lady Hardinge came in from Barrackpore and was accompanied by Lady Londesborough, Lady Irene Denison, Lady Mar and Kellie, Captain A. A. Todd, A.-D.-C., and Lord Sefton and others of the Government House party were also with Her Excellency. Lady Hardinge was received by Sir Apcar A. Apcar, Senior Steward of the C.T.C., and took a keen interest in the proceedings, going into the ring where the horses are paraded and inspecting the competitors for the Trials. Amongst other well-known people present were Sir Lawrence and Lady Jenkins, Sir Cecil and Lady Brett, Sir Cecil Graham, Sir William and Lady Dring, Major the Hon. W. Cadogan, General B. T. Mahon, General Sloggett, General Broome, General Cookson, Admiral Slade, Colonel Deare, H. H. the Maharajadhiraj of Burdwan, H. H. the Maharajah of Cooch Behar, Colonel M. R H. Wilson, H. H. the Kour Sahib of Patiala, Mr. Gokuldas, Mr. Garda, Mr. Galstaun, the Zemindar of Sivagari, "Mr. G. K.," Mr. and Mrs. R. H. A. Gresson, Major Stratton, Sir B. S. Brooke, Sir William Bass, Colonel Maxwell, Major Mort, Captain Astor, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sanders, Major Eustace Crawley, Captain Forester, A.-D.-C., Captain Barrett, Mr, Cleveland, Mr. Craig McKerrow, Mr. W. T. Miles. Captain Charrington, Captain Nicholson, etc., etc.

RACING commenced at 2-30 P.M., and with only six races on the card an earlier start was not necessary. Before proceeding to discuss the bearing that Saturday's results had upon the future, we will shortly run through the card and record the sequence of events. The Burdwan Cup came first and up to the last moment it was not known whether Sir A. A. Apcar intended to run Mayfowl, but the question was soon set at rest by the appearance of the horse's number in the frame. Five Crown, who was quite good enough to beat the others, was struck out and is presumably being reserved for the Grand Annual which, writing before the event, we consider him to be pretty certain to win. It was no doubt taking a big risk running Mayfowl over hurdles so close on to a big engagement on the flat, but it was done with success last year when they had no thought of him as a possible Cup winner and, so far as can be seen, it has done him no harm this year, for the horse was out again at trotting exercise on Sunday. Sir A. A. Apcar decided that this was to be the horse's winding-up gallop for the Viceroy's Cup—and it was his horse to do as he liked with, but we fancy the large army of the horse's supporters heaved a sigh of relief when Mayfowl landed safely over the last obstacle. There was, of course, no semblance of a race, as there are no hurdle race horses in India of sufficient class to take on Viceroy's Cup winners. Of the defeated, Realm and Collegian ran best, finishing in that order behind Mayfowl, and we shall not be surprised to see old Realm make a great bid for it in the Grand Annual, though, if Five Crown runs an honest horse, he can have no chance of beating him. Anno Domini and not class will beat him, for old Realm is, or was, a far better performed one than Five Crown and he is also a well-bred one, being by Majestic out of Lynette. Collegian, it is said, is none to generous, but he was up against too hot a class in Mayfowl on Saturday. This is the third year in succession that Mayfowl has won this race.

THE Eclipse Pony Plate, which came next, was as great a certainty for First Bell as the opening event was for Mayfowl bar accidents and the result was never for one moment in doubt. There was money for The Plum and also for Waiata, but the book-makers were taking 5 to 4 about the favourite all the way through the piece. First Bell was never farther away from the front than third and as they made the turn Firth came away and quickly had the field settled. First Bell's win in the Civil Service Cup in Lucknow was as easily obtained as was this one on Saturday. In the Civil Service Cup Hopscotch ran second and Son of a Gun and The Plum dead-heated for third place. This is the third time that First Bell has won this race, counting in his dead heat with Token in 1910. The other occasion was in 1909. He will probably now start favourite for the Civil Service Cup in 1912 and all going well with him he must have a big chance. It is a curious coincidence that the two first winners on the card on Saturday should have each completed the "hat trick" in their respective races. Both were virtual certainties.

A DOZEN were stripped for the six-furlong Ellenborough Plate, a high-weight handicap for horses and there was a fair amount of betting: four of them, Black Douglas, Cherry Hackle, who was Wootton's mount, Airman and Foudrette, all being at short prices and Chestnut Park also carried a bit of money and was fancied by his stable. Airman flattered his supporters' hopes for a season and Cherry Hackle made an offer at the home turn, but when Black Douglas and Chestnut Park came at them their chances were quickly extinguished and in a close finish under the whip Black Douglas won by half a length from H. H. the Kuar Sahib of Patiala's new importation. Chestnut Park's appearance did not favour the impression that he was as forward as he is. He is not a very prepossessing horse to look at and is a bit flat-sided. The race was run in fair time for second-class horses—1min. 15secs.

THE Trials was the next race on the card and of the seven acceptors Lawn Sand was struck out and is to be utilised, according to present information, as a pace-maker for his stable companions in the Viceroy's Cup. This cut the field down to six and of these both Tangaroa and Soultline were sent on ahead to the post by permission of the Stewards, both being somewhat excitable horses. This caused some disappointment, as owing to Soultline's not being sent to the course very often few people have had an opportunity of seeing much of him. Of the quartette on view Aborigine certainly looked the best. Lumination in our idea is muscle-bound and she looks tight in her skin. Her recent lameness is ascribed to rheumatism. A lot of money went on to this mare during Saturday morning and the ringmen reported that before racing commenced she was the most fancied one in the field. Before the first race the prices were 6 to 4 Soultline, 2 to 1 Tangaroa, 5 to 1 Aborigine and Lumination. As the time of the race approached, however, Mr. Galstaun came in and again backed his horse and this re-arranged matters somewhat, Soultline going back to 2 to 1 and Tangaroa was quoted at 9 to 4, both the others going back—Aborigine to sixes and Lumination to sevens. The race needs very little description, for it was decided past all doubt in the first few strides. Tangaroa was out of the gate like a flash and Soultline came with him, but Wootton gave his rival no breathing space and took him along at once. Soultline has no liking for this sort of thing and unless he has things all his own way and can get out in front and stay there he hoists the white flag at once. In our opinion this is what he did on Saturday and he only had hold of his bit for about three furlongs deliberately abandoning the contest before the half-mile turn. Even if he had put it all in and run an honest race it would have taken him all his time to get there, for the pace was solid and the time a Calcutta record for this race 1min. 40⅕secs. and Tangaroa won hard held. How much he could have knocked off this time we should not like to say, but the race would have been run well under 1min. 40secs. if Wootton had had to shake him up. The victory of Mr. Galstaun's horse was very well received and he and Wootton came in for a good deal of applause. A telegram was sent home to Wootton's father announcing his son's victory in the first big race of the Calcutta season. Of the vanquished, Lumination was second in our opinion only because Soultline would not try and because, when Aborigine found that victory was impossible, he was not knocked about. We were not much attracted by this horse's performance and we can only conclude that he has been somewhat overdone, for it certainly was not Aborigine's form. He may show us a different gallop in the Viceroy's Cup, but we are not sweet on his chance and shall be agreeably surprised if he even gets into the first three.

THE Paddock Plate—Division I—came next and the favouritism of Ballymaclune was in our opinion justified on the strength of the win in the Cornwallis Plate (R. C.) on the previous Saturday, as he was only meeting The Cockatoo on 8-lb. worse terms, and the latter who had finished third on the previous Saturday was then a length and three-quarters behind the winner. The unreliable Langton was backed, but Brogue we could not look at on her previous Saturday's showing even though she was meeting Ballymaclune on 14-lb. better terms. After the Cornwallis Plate on the previous Saturday veterinary opinion said that Brogue was in a state of collapse and Mr Jackson, M R. C. V. S., who was asked his opinion said that, as has been known to happen, the filly had generated an abnormal amount of oxygen in her lungs and that it had nearly choked her. She recovered and was apparently none the worse, so Mr. Galstaun decided to run her, but he did not think it worth while backing her and she went out at tens and twos. On her home form (vide Durbam Plate 2 miles at Hurst Park, Wavebird 8-13, Brogue 7-4 beaten a short head) she was good enough to win, but after a poor performance such as hers was, it was not possible to fancy her. F. Wootton rode her a beautiful race and won very comfortably at the finish by two lengths from Langton, The Cockatoo third, Ballymaclune fourth. Brogue is in the Viceroy's Cup, but we believe it was not then definitely decided whether to start her or not, or whether to fly for lower game and reserve her for the big handicap, the King-Emperor's Cup

It has also to be borne in mind that as a two-year-old this mare ran third in the Bedfont Plate 6 furlongs at Kempton to Prince Palatine, this years' Leger winner and Wise Gift giving the winner 2lb. and meeting Wise Gift at level weights. She is by Symington out of Goody Two Shoes; Symington is by Ayrshire, out of Siphonia by St. Simon out of Palmflower by The Palmer out of Jenny Diver, who was by Buccaneer by Wild Dayrell. She is a very nice little mare, but she is only a pony and is only about 14-3 and a bit. Nevertheless there is a good deal of her and there is no doubt about her being able to stay over a distance of ground.

The last race on the card was the second division of the Paddock Plate, for which Humara, one of the Kour Sahib's new ones was well backed, and she had no difficulty in beating Koonowla, to whom she was, be it marked, giving 13lb. Sir A. A. Apcar's colt ran forward all the way, but he was beaten in a few strides the moment he was seriously challenged. We fear that he must be ticketted a bad one as well as a faint-hearted one. Details appear elsewhere.

As to the bearing which last Saturday's results have upon the big race of the present week, seeing that the race will be over by the time these notes are in print, we do not propose to dwell at any great length upon the possibilities, for they will of necessity now be but vain imaginings. Many people strongly demurred to Mayfowl's being started over hurdles, quite apart from the risk of accident and the decision to run him was much criticised in various quarters. The horse carried a good deal of the public money, and jumping a flat racer is not as a general thing supposed to be calculated to improve him for the "legitimate." However, every man has every right to do as he likes with his own, and Sir A. A. Apcar was, of course, quite within his rights in starting the horse. Personally, although we may disapprove of running such a risk, we do not think that in Mayfowl's case it made any difference, and we bow to the necessarily superior wisdom of his immediate connections who decided to give him his final winding up gallop over hurdles in public. Nevertheless we think, as a general axiom, it is not sound policy and that a race on the flat would have been better. Many people again said that Mayfowl did not finish well. Here we do not concur. The horse came home like a lion, and we hold to the opinion that he is the better of the Apcar pair, even though some of the stable connections think otherwise. There cannot be much between the two horses, and the only logical deduction is that where the one is the other must be. Nevertheless with always the lurking suspicion as to Vavasor's standing and knowing what a staunch and brilliant horse Mayfowl is in a race, we prefer to stand him in preference. It is quite on the cards that they will finish together, first and second probably —but together wherever they finish. As to the opposition we intend to discard Aborigine. Saturday's running was not his form by anything from 12lb. upwards and in our opinion he has had a bit more of it than he cares about. We shall be surprised if he finishes in the first three. Black Buck we consider is a great danger and we cannot get Last Call out of our mind. They say the horse is troubled with the slows nowadays, but we do not place too much reliance upon private performances, and on the English form, which he might easily repeat, there is nothing in India that can be named in the same breath with him. We fully expect to have the pleasant duty of congratulating Sir Apcar Apcar upon his eighth victory in a Viceroy's Cup, but we are by no means certain of being able to do so. The issue in a few words is very open, more so than we remember it to have been for a great many years past. The race will be run at a stinging pace all through, and these are tactics that will suit at least three of them, Mayfowl, Last Call, and Black Buck. If Vavasor stands the racket he must be amongst them, and we therefore place them 1, 2, 3, 4, with

Winners of A. vs. Winners of B.
Winners of C. vs. Winners of D.

FINALS.

Wednesday, 3rd January, 11 a.m.

The 10th Hussars and Calcutta are the present favourites and the betting is a shade in favour of the former, for although Calcutta is an admittedly strong combination they are not so well mounted, taken as a whole, as the 10th. The Calcutta team is composed of Sir Cecil Graham, Mr. H. V. Scott, Captain F. St. J. Atkinson, and Captain A. A. Tod.

We regret to learn that Colonel M. R. H. Wilson's fine horse Kaffirpan succumbed to tetanus on Friday last. Kaffirpan won both the Grand Annual Hurdle Race and the Indian Grand National last season and would have very probably repeated his victory in the latter race this season.

Refresher reared up in his box and fell over backwards and damaged himself. It is extremely hard luck on Mr. Mathuradass Goculdas coming on top of his disappointment over Soultline.

Mr. R. A. C. Pugh's To Kalon is, we understand, hopeless so far as this season is concerned, and the trouble is the sheath of one of the tendons. Mumps, owned by the same gentleman, fell at the open ditch on Sunday last and got up very lame. She put her forelegs into the ditch and shot Williamson, who was riding her, over on to the other side of the obstacle.

We would draw the attention of those who go racing at Tollygunge to the advertisement of Messrs. G. F. Kellner and Co., appearing further on. Many people like to have luncheons at Tollygunge, but almost invariably fail to give due notice so as to admit of Messrs. Kellners making suitable arrangements. Each year many have to be refused at the last moment as they had not booked tables in advance. Kellner's have an organisation to cope with thousands if only they have due notice. Verb Sap.

Signorinetta, the astounding winner of the Derby and Oaks in 1908, starting at 100 to 1 for the former race after 1,000 to 3 had been laid against her, passed out of the ring at Newmarket on the 6th instant unsold. Chevalier Ginistrelli offered his favourite subject to a reserve, and this was not reached when bidding ceased at 7,500 guineas.

Retirement has improved the general appearance of Signorinetta. Mr. Somerville Tattersall, in a few remarks to a large and cosmopolitan company, described her as one of the best-looking mares he had ever looked over, and said he personally would regret to see her go abroad, though as to this they must not forget that without foreign custom these great sales would perhaps be impossible. There were rich men among his audience. He thought Signorinetta was a case in which a wealthy man should bid without troubling about a thousand or two, for he believed she would breed something absolutely first class.

"Will anyone," continued Mr. Tattersall, "start her at 5,000 guineas!" There was a response at 2,000 guineas, and the figure rose to 7,500, but then the mare was passed out.

When spoken to subsequently the chevalier had nothing to say for publication. His emotions seemed to be a little mixed. He has been racing in England for a long time, having won the Manchester November Handicap so far back as 1885, and his intention if Signorinetta had been sold was to give up and return to Italy. But he has an almost passionate regard for the mare, and understandably so in view of her achievements, it being an occurrence of extreme rarity for a filly to win the Derby and Oaks, so that she either had to realise his estimate of her value or he would stay on hoping to breed another Derby winner. During the bidding the chevalier leaned over the rails and Signorinetta recognising him whinied, and every time she passed him she turned her head in his direction. After it was all over and Signorinetta had left the ring, the chevalier hardly permitted her to be out of his sight. His fondness for her is quite pathetic.

A London correspondent writes:—Isinglass one of the "horses of the century," the produce of a mare retrieved from the shafts, winner of the Two Thousand, Derby, and St. Leger, and of the record sum of £57,185 in stakes, dropped dead at Cheveley Park, Newmarket, yesterday.

This is a McCalmont estate, and it was Isinglass who established the personality of the late Colonel McCalmont as a matter of public concern. It seemed a pity that the record of this great horse should be tarnished by one defeat, which prevented the colonel from copying the example of the late Duke of Westminster with regard to Ormonde, so generally reckoned the "horse of the century." His Grace presented a plate to the Jockey Club inscribed with the deeds of Ormonde and the words: "This horse was never beaten." Romance and Brilliance were equally mixed in the case of Isinglass. His dam, a mare called Deadlock, came to be looked on as worthless, and was actually sold by the late Lord Alington to Captain Machell for £19. After a while the captain ridded himself of her, but when a youngster which she left behind, called Gervas, turned out useful, he made strenuous efforts to find her again. One day he recognised her in the shafts of a farmer's cart, and in a diplomatic manner, without explaining his reasons, or showing more than a casual interest in the creature, he swapped a cart foal for her—at least, that is the common version of her recovery. Later she was sold for £500 to Colonel McCalmont, who bred Isinglass from her to Isonomy.

Another story has it that this gentleman himself saw Deadlock, took a fancy to her, and purchased her for the absurd price of £20, but the Machell version is more generally accepted as the true one. In either case the transaction was a wonderful example of luck and judgment.

Isinglass, who was a very handsome, though lazy, horse, quickly showed the mettle he was made of. In 1892 he won, among other races, the New Stakes at Ascot and the Middle Park Plate at Newmarket, and in 1893 secured the envied "Triple Crown" by winning the Two Thousand, the Derby, and St. Leger, in addition to the Newmarket Stakes. In each of these races, as in the Middle Park Plate the previous year, the second horse was Sir (then Mr.) Charles Rose's Ravensbury, and it is interesting to recall that the latter gentleman's ill-luck in competing against Colonel McCalmont on the turf subsequently repeated itself in electoral contests in the Newmarket division. Ravensbury's habit of running second earned for him the soubriquet of "Yellow Jack II." The original Yellow Jack, the property of the notorious Mr. Padwick, finished second for the Two Thousand, Derby, Chester Cup, Ascot Derby, Goodwood Cup, and other important races in the "fifties."

The career of Isinglass continued to be remarkable. He won in 1894 the rich Princess of Wales's Stakes at Newmarket from a field of horses whose joint value was estimated at the aggregate of 75,000 guineas, and his brilliant duel with the Derby winner of 1894—Lord Rosebery's Ladas—in the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown is still not forgotten. He was supposed—outside the stable—not to be quite up to concert pitch, and a member of the Ladas party after the race repeated this idea to Captain Machell, who was the manager of Colonel McCalmont's horses. "'Ah," said the captain, "you see, we can keep a secret at Bedford Lodge." Isinglass also won the Jockey Club Stakes, thus securing three "ten thousand pounders" in the same year, and the following season he won the Ascot Gold Cup. That was his last appearance. His one defeat was sustained as a three-year-old, in the now defunct Lancashire Plate, at Manchester, when essaying to give 10lb. to Raeburn, who had been withheld from the St. Leger in order to be kept fresh for this mammoth stake. Nothing would make running for Isinglass, and he detested having to make his own, a state of things to which his own people always attributed his defeat.

His success at the stud, though very considerable, yet did not match his brilliant career on the turf. His only classic winners are the Oaks pair Cherry Lass and Our Lassie, with power to add to their number in Lord Falmouth's Belleisle, the champion of her sex in 1911, if not of her age. Altogether the stock of Isinglass in thirteen seasons won £148,253.

Now that the career of Isinglass is at an end the appended table may prove interesting to our readers, showing, as it does, the relative winnings of Isinglass, Donovan, and Bayardo, the three great prize winners of recent years:—
