"Look yonder—
Hope for the World dawns there!"
Goethe's Faust.—Part II.

The Conquest of Malaria

One million deaths above the average!

That was last year's appalling record of Malaria in India, according to the evidence given at the recent Malarial Congress at Simla.

Happily for the sufferers from this terribly enervating disease there is new hope. More. There is the certainty of cure by means of Sanatogen, the world-renowned food-tonic, and the greatest revitalizing agent known to science.

Admirably as quinine answers in the acute stage of Malaria, it is, admittedly, of little use in that wasted condition of the system which doctors call Cachexia.

It is in Cachexia that Sanatogen stands supreme. As knowledge of its power spreads, the mortality from Malaria must decrease.

Blood, Brain, Nerves, Revitalized

Here is striking evidence. A well-known physician, writing to physicians, says: "In the Cachexia of this disease, Sanatogen has been found incomparably superior to any drug treatment. Its success in nervous exhaustion, typhoid fever, dysentery, diarrhœa, anæmia and numerous other conditions consequent upon acute or exhausting illnesses, has been the subject of comment in all the leading Medical Journals."

Sanatogen has a profound influence in making red blood corpuscles, which increase at the rate of about half-a-million in every cubic centimetre of blood per fortnight, as innumerable doctors have proved.

The invigorating and revitalizing property of Sanatogen has been attested by nine physicians to nine Kings, Queens and Emperors, and has also been Endorsed by 12,000 Physicians

The King's Physician

—Dr. E. Ott, writes: "I have been using Sanatogen for a number of years, with excellent results, notably in cases of convalescence when it was desirable to build up the strength, to stimulate the bodily functions, and to improve the circulation of the blood."

The Czar of Russia's Physician

—Dr. Ferchmin, writes:—"My daughter, who is very nervous and anæmic, has greatly benefited by Sanatogen. Her appetite improved, her weight increased, and the colour of her skin became healthier."

The Emperor of Austria's Physician

—Dr. Kerzl, says:—"I have been using Sanatogen for years with splendid results, and recommend it continually and everywhere, because I am thoroughly convinced that it is an excellent tonic-food."

An exceedingly interesting pamphlet, "Malaria, Its Causes and Effects," has been written by a physician with a wide experience of this terrible complaint. The Sanatogen Co. will distribute, free of charge, a limited number of copies to those who will send a postcard mentioning this paper addressed to The Sanatogen Co. of London, Care of G.P.O., Box 226, Bombay.

Sanatogen may be obtained direct from all Chemists and Bazaars.

Radiol

RADIOL TREATMENT prolongs the life of a Horse's Legs. Completely removes by radiation all soft swellings that disfigure and lame a Horse as sprained Tendons, Windgalls, Bog Spavins, Capped Elbow, Big Leg, Enlarged Glands, etc.

No Blister; No Laying up; No Hair Removed.

RADIOL TREATMENT fines down a worn Horse's Legs and is a certain cure for Puffy Joints and Sprains, Prevents Filled Legs.

An intelligent use of the "RADIOL LEG WASH" counteracts that daily wear and tear of the legs unavoidable with the Horse in constant work, whether training, racing, or on the road.

"The Field," June 16th, 1906:—

"We have been able to test some trial bottles of "RADIOL" in cases of Wind-galls, Splints and Puffy swellings and have found "RADIOL" to be very beneficial, and we have also found it useful as a leg wash for polo ponies after a day's play."

To be obtained from Ereom & Co., Calcutta; Treacher & Co., Bombay; W. E. Smith & Co., Mount Road, Madras; Heath & Son, Sharia Magbraky, Cairo; Jamnadas Bros., The Market, Bombay; The Mombassa Pharmacy, Mombassa.

THE TURF.

THERE is absolutely no racing to report this week. The severe frost has resulted in the abandonment of the last day of Lingfield and the total abandonment of the Kempton, Gatwick and Nottingham meetings and some smaller fixtures.

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

DESPITE the fact that ten of the Association Cup-ties were left undecided a week ago, the first round is now complete except for the question whether Leyton or New Brompton shall participate in the next stage of the competition. Having played a draw at Leyton and another at New Brompton, these two clubs try conclusions for the third time to-morrow, when the Tottenham Hotspur ground will be the scene of the encounter. Both teams belonging to the Southern League, no great importance—except to the clubs in question—attaches to the result of the encounter. All the clubs outside the three leading Leagues have disappeared from the struggle, the field for the second round being made up by twelve First Leaguers, ten Second Leaguers, and ten Southern Leaguers. Among the fallen are Sheffield United, Notts County, and Liverpool—all prominent candidates for this season's League Championship—and Manchester United, the previous holders who, in being knocked out in the first round, have followed the example of Sheffield Wednesday two winters ago and of Wolverhampton Wanderers last year.

London clubs have enjoyed quite a gratifying measure of success, for out of ten taking part in the first round, Woolwich Arsenal, Chelsea, Tottenham Hotspur, Fulham, West Ham United, and Queen's Park Rangers have all got through and there still exists the possibility of Leyton achieving a similar distinction. The luck of the draw for the second round, however, has destroyed all likelihood of metropolitan teams securing any considerable share of representation among the last sixteen, Chelsea alone enjoying the advantage of playing at home. If Londoners, consequently, have no choice in the matter of which Cup-tie to attend, the one contest offered them is of the most attractive description, seeing that Tottenham Hotspur have to appear at Stamford Bridge. Happily the accommodation there is of the most elaborate description, but its extent, whatever that may be, will probably be tested to the utmost. Indeed, the attendance should beat all records for Cup-ties in the second round of the competition.

Quite the surprise in the First League was the result of the match between Bolton Wanderers and Sheffield United. At the head of the competition, Sheffield United had previously won 13 games and lost only 5, while, last on the list, the Wanderers had won only 4 games and lost no fewer than 16. For all that, the Bolton Club pulled through by 1 goal to 0, and in so doing gained what was only their second victory since the month of October. As a result of this defeat of Sheffield United, Notts County, who secured a remarkable win over Sunderland at Roker Park, step into first place with a total of 32 points, but having taken part in 25 matches the record of Notts is not really as good as that of several of their rivals, if the other clubs still well in the running for the championship Aston Villa, Blackburn Rovers, Liverpool, and Bradford City, only drew, but Newcastle United accomplished a fine performance in beating the Forest at Nottingham, this result being especially notable from the fact that some months ago the Forest defeated Newcastle United at Newcastle.

Aston Villa have been showing such fine form of late that Chelsea might well be satisfied with holding the points at Stamford Bridge. Tottenham Hotspur, following upon their brilliant victory over Plymouth Argyle in the Cup last Wednesday, came badly to grief at Manchester. They kept the scoring during the first half down to one goal, but in the end had to admit defeat by no fewer than 5 to 0. Woolwich Arsenal, not only took upon Middlesbrough a handsome revenge for a severe reverse at Middlesbrough in September, but raised themselves above Tottenham as well as Middlesbrough. For all that, the three London teams all figure among the last five in the First League.

The outstanding feature of Saturday's matches in the Second Division of the League was the defeat, on their own ground, of Glossop, who, in a keen game, went down before Fulham by 1 goal to 0. Thus Fulham maintained their tradition of doing well away from home, and in addition they accomplished something out of the common in being the only club so far this season to beat Glossop twice. This result, while being very welcome to the Fulham team, has seriously affected Glossop's position, for with Derby County and Manchester City both winning they take a clear lead of the Derbyshire club, Derby County being three points in front and Manchester City two. Hull City, Leicester Fosse, and Fulham are all well up, but for the time being none of them seriously threaten the positions of the two leading clubs, who, if their players steer clear of accidents, may easily hold their own to the end of April.

Of the nine Southern League matches played on Saturday—snow prevented football at Norwich—three ended with a margin of three goals between the teams, three were drawn, and in as many victories were gained by the only goal scored. As a further coincidence in the results, it is interesting to note that three sides won at home, and three away, the remaining three games as already mentioned having indecisive issues. Of most importance was the success of Queen's Park Rangers at Leyton. None of their rival in the running for the championship did better than draw, so the Rangers strengthened their position at the head of affairs, and now lead by 2 points with a game in hand. Southampton, who had a good chance of greatly improving their own record, being at home to New Brompton, who have to meet Leyton for the third time in the Cup-tie to-morrow, could only divide the points, and of the others well up Brighton and Hove Albion could feel satisfied at holding their own with Coventry City. Crystal Palace failed badly at Watford, and their decent series of disasters is evidently due to something more than a temporary change of fortune.

Both Universities have started their work preparatory to the match at Queen's Club on 19th February with victories, but at present their form has been only moderate, and they have shown slackness that may in a measure be due to the moderate character of the sides to which they have been opposed. Against Essex and against Ealing, Oxford proved successful, but their forwards need to improve a lot. In A. H. G. Kerry they have a very good outside left, but R. C. Maples, the Blue, excels in that position, and R. L. L. Braddell may find it a difficult matter to know how best to arrange his front line. W. C. Jordan is again anything but a certainty for centre, V. O. C. Miley being more effective as a goal getter. The right wing requires strengthening, but if Maples is a success at inside-left the forwards may become better than at present seems likely. Cambridge beat the Old Carthusians decisively, but their opponents were not fully represented and did not play up to their reputation. Cambridge can still score goals against an ordinary defence, but yesterday the whole side were disappointing in a game that produced very little good football.

ARSENAL vs. MIDDLESBROUGH.—The acquisition of two points by Woolwich Arsenal at Plumstead was welcomed by the London club, but it is not possible to form a very accurate estimate of the merit of their victory, for the Middlesbrough men could not keep a foothold on the frost-bound ground, whereas the Arsenal, with felt-soled boots, possessed a great advantage. Thomson played at centre half in the continued absence of Sands, and Middlesbrough lacked the services of Pentland and Verrill, their places being taken by Dixon and Barker. There was only about 6,000 people present. The unpreparedness of Middlesbrough proved their undoing. They simply floundered on the solid turf. As a consequence the Arsenal had all the game and the play was simply so poor that it became farcical. After a quarter of an hour Buckenham scored for the Arsenal, and Neave also succeeded in putting through for the home side five minutes later. At the interval the Arsenal were two goals to the good. In the second half Middlesbrough were simply penned in their own half. Williamson distinguished himself with some fine saves from Barkenham, Lewis, McEachrane, and Lawrence, but the last named beat him with a good shot five minutes from the end of a game which was generally voted to have been the least interesting seen at Plumstead for a long time past. Woolwich Arsenal, 3; Middlesbrough, 0.

CHELSEA vs. ASTON VILLA.—The game at Chelsea, where Aston Villa were the visitors, was on the whole a poor one, and the result a goalless draw. As the run of the play did not favour Chelsea to any great extent, 30,000 spectators were not very satisfied with the drawn game. The Villa had George in goal in place of Cartlidge, the old Bristol Rover, but otherwise both teams were at full strength, with Hilsdon leading the Chelsea forwards. The opening play favoured the Villa, and Bache, wandering over to the right wing, got in a fine shot which Whitley saved splendidly. Then when Hall centred Wallace, Gerrish, and Hampton had shots charged down when the home goal was in great danger. It was not until near half-time that Chelsea asserted themselves. George came out five yards to save from Woodward, and from the resultant corner Brawn got in a shot which was going straight to an open goal, when Miles headed away. Chelsea showed somewhat improved form, but it was not till nearly the close of the game that they could claim a real advantage on play. Williams, the amateur on the Chelsea left, had been almost neglected, but he got more of the ball near the end, and he furnished several good chances to his inside colleagues, two of which Windridge nearly turned to account with clever shots. Previous to this, however, Wallace for the Villa hit the Chelsea goalpost with a rasping shot which would have had Whitley beaten. On the whole, therefore, the draw did no injustice to either side, for on the frost-bound ground slips were frequent and the ball too lively for accurate control by the forwards. Chelsea, 0; Aston Villa, 0.

MANCHESTER UNITED vs. TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR.—At Manchester, before 4,000 spectators, Manchester United gained a decisive victory over Tottenham Hotspur, by 5 goals to 0. The 'Spurs were without the services of Bentley and Morris, while Manchester lacked Duckworth, Bell, Turnbull, and Wall. After twenty-five minutes play a bumping ball from Hooper deceived Joyce and went into the net, giving the United the lead. This was the only score up to the interval. In the second-half Tottenham Hotspur had to play without Humphreys, and they always looked to be a beaten side. Connors soon added a second goal and with the Tottenham defence far from reliable three more points followed from Roberts (two) and Meredith. Roberts gained his second goal with a remarkable shot from the edge of the field. The closing stages of the game were very uninteresting. Manchester United, 5; Tottenham Hotspur, 0.

Notts County, 3; *Sunderland, 0.
*Bradford City, 0; Bury, 0.
*Bolton Wanderers, 1; Sheffield United, 0.
Newcastle United, 1; *Notts Forest, 0.

ORIENT vs. GRIMSBY.—The ground at Homerton was greatly affected by a severe frost, and under the circumstances the players who took part in the goalless draw between Clapton Orient and Grimsby can be excused for their disinclination to go the full course. At no period was the football shown particularly inspiring, and although in the first half Clapton Orient gave promise of victory the improved play of Grimsby after change of ends makes the draw a very fair indication of the efforts of the sides. The Orient were without L. A. Leach and Parker, and their absence probably accounted for the poor form of the attack. It was by no means a happy move (judging from what he did) to play Bevan at outside right, whilst McLean, who also came into the line was far from being a success. On the Grimsby side Gates an ex-Clapton Orient forward, played in fine style at left-back, whilst Fletcher, at outside-right, was recognised as the old Fulham player. He has been playing for so many years now that it was not surprising that his football yesterday lacked profit to his side. In the first half Clapton Orient found Scott, the Grimsby goalkeeper, right at the top of his form, and a trio of saves from Henderson, Bevan, and Bell were sparkling efforts. Grimsby were seldom dangerous in this half, only Bell at inside-left solving the problem of making progress with any effect. Twice, however, Leonard broke away, but on each occasion Whittaker cleared. Early in the second half a tremendous hubbub was caused by an incident on the Clapton goal-line. In saving a drive by Bell Whittaker dropped the ball and from the Press-box it seemed to roll into goal before the goalkeeper recovered it. But the referee ruled against the vigorous contention of the Grimsby players—to their obvious displeasure. Both attacks pressed a good deal, but the defences held out, Scott again distinguishing himself. Clapton Orient, 0; Grimsby Town, 0.

GLOSSOP vs. FULHAM.—Visiting Glossop, Fulham won by 1 goal to 0. About four thousand people were present. During the first half the form shown was very indifferent, the players being afraid to let themselves go on the frost-bound ground and at the interval nothing had been scored. Eight minutes after the restart Dalrymple ran round Needham and beat Butler with a cross shot. Glossop tried hard to get on terms, but without effect, Fulham setting up a very sound defence. Fulham, 1; Glossop, 0.

OLD CARTHUSIANS v. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—Playing their first match this term Cambridge beat the Old Carthusians at Queen's Club by 5 goals to 0. On frozen turf the players took a long time to settle down to anything like their proper form, and for the most part the game was dull and uninteresting. Until Cambridge had gained a decisive advantage there was little that was attractive in their work, and then there remained no doubt as to the result. Cambridge tried a new back, S. Baker, and he did well. The Carthusians were not at full strength, and Vassall at outside right had little chance of showing his ability. During the first half hour each side missed some chances of scoring, but a passing run led to a goal by Bache after Edwards had shot against the goalkeeper from a centre by Edwards. Cambridge gradually improved after change of ends, and, from a centre by Squance, Bains scored with a capital shot. Edwards soon added another goal, kicking low into the net with his left foot. Good combination enabled B. S. Farnfield to score, his shot being very good, and towards the end Edwards put on the last goal with a clever volley. Only a small company watched the game, in cold, bright weather. Cambridge University, 5; Old Carthusians, 0.

EALING v. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—At Gunnersbury-lane, before a small crowd, in fine weather, Oxford University beat Ealing 2—1. Both sides were strongly represented. The opening exchanges were in favour of the University, and in the first few minutes they had an opportunity of scoring, which was missed. In fifteen minutes, however, a smart attack by the forwards was successful. V. O. C. Miley beating H. Milestone from R. C. Maples's pass. Oxford followed up their advantage, and seven minutes later Miley obtained a second goal, this time heading in after a corner taken by H. R. L. Henry. There was no further scoring before the interval, although the University continued to have a large share of the game Milestone having to save from Miley, Maples, and A. E. Cardew. Ealing played a considerably improved game after the interval, and they were constantly attacking, only the splendid work of the backs, R. L. L. Braddell and F. N. Tuff, and the goalkeeper, R. H. Owen, preventing Oxford from suffering defeat. Ealing scored in fifteen minutes through P. J. Doll, the goalkeeper having already saved twice from W. F. Whiteley. Subsequently Owen saved good shots from F. H. W. Hinsch, Whiteley, and Doll. Oxford University, 2; Ealing, 1.

RUGBY RULES

SCOTLAND v. FRANCE.—The first International match between these countries was played at Inverleith, Edinburgh, yesterday. The ground had been protected from the hard frost, and was in fairly good condition. Two changes had to be made in the Scottish fifteen, Robertson (Watsonians) and Stuart (West of Scotland) taking the places of Dobson and Mackenzie. There were about ten thousand people present at the start. Scotland were the first to show prominently in attack, and within five minutes Robertson finished up a fine bout of passing with a try. McCallum failed with the kick, which was from a difficult position. Encouraged by this early success, Scotland continued to have the better of the play, and soon strengthened their lead. Cunningham was brought down when running strongly for the line, and then Pearson made an endeavour to drop a goal. The ball went wide, but Angus, following up, obtained a try, from which McCallum placed a splendid goal. Thus, after ten minutes' play, Scotland were eight points ahead. After this the form of the Frenchmen underwent some improvement, but the handling of the backs was poor. Though holding their own at this period, France only once came near scoring, and then Scotland had to touch down in defence. Effective tackling formed the best feature of the Frenchmen's game, and three scores were cleverly averted by Dedet. At length, however Scotland scored again, Tennant getting over after running half the length of the field. The point was led up to by some skilful work on the part of Scotland. Cunningham took the kick, and only just failed to place a goal. France could not respond, and at half-time the score stood:—

Scotland	... ...	1 goal 2 tries

On resuming Scotland attacked, and from a scrum in the French twenty-five, Tennant scored a clever try at the end of three minutes. McCallum again failed with the kick. Soon after this Scotland still further added to their advantage, some skilful combined work ending in Robertson putting on an unconverted try. A minute later Goudland also crossed the French line, and McCallum converted. Then securing the ball in the loose Tennant dribbled down, and, picking up, ran in unattacked. The place kick was a very easy one, and McCallum converted. Possessing such a formidable lead, Scotland relaxed their efforts after this, and for the remainder of the game the play was in mid-field. Try as they would, the Frenchmen could not break through the Scottish defence, and Scotland thus won by 27 points to nil.

OLD LEYSIANS v. U.C.S. OLD BOYS.—Both sides arrived at full strength at Wandsworth when a discussion arose as to whether play on the frozen ground was possible. It was decided to risk it, and the game which ensued was carried through without casualty. The visitors had the better of matter in the first half, and had scored 11 points without a reply at half-time. The trygetters were Gand, Vickers and W. Griffith Jones, and one of these only—the first—was improved upon. As time went on a considerable improvement in the Leysian backs took place, and more often on the offensive they were continually dangerous. Hosken at length opened their scoring taking the ball from a "line-out" and placing it in an easy position for Meller to add the goal point. Almost immediately afterwards the ball went all along the Old Leysian three-quarter line, and Hosken was left to bring off another brilliant run and score wide out. Meller failed with kick and with the difference of a try between the scores both teams strove hard to get in again but with no success. The U. C.S. Old Boys therefore won by 11 points to 8. U.C.S., 1 goal 2 tries; Leysians, 1 goal 1 try

LONDON SCOTTISH v. THE HARLEQUINS.—Although the Harlequins were unable to command their full side for this game at Richmond, they had no difficulty in preserving their unbeaten record, for, as the game went, they were vastly the better side and won an easy victory. In the opening half the Scottish forwards were quite good, but when the ball got out in the open the Harlequins were always dangerous and twice they scored before the interval as the result of clever passing runs by their backs, Lambert gaining their first try and Roberts their second, and Lambert was successful with each of the place kicks. The second half was always in favour of the Harlequins and though the Scotsmen did much good tackling they could not cope with the pressure that was put upon their defence. The Harlequin backs were admirably together, and whenever they had the ball a score appeared probable. F. M. Stoop gained two tries for them, while Adrian Stoop, Potter, Lambert, and Bassett ran in with others, and although only one of the tries after changing ends was improved the Harlequins won a one-sided game by 30 points to nil. Harlequins, 5 goals 5 tries; London Scottish, 0.

ROWING.

THE 'VARSITY BOAT RACE.

With the Boat Race only a little over eight weeks ahead, practice is in full swing both at Oxford and Cambridge. Neither crew is as yet definite by made up, for while Oxford have already been seriously handicapped by illness, Cambridge seem unable to discover the pick of a very large bunch of equal and rather mediocre oarsmen, with which to fill their vacant places. Full training will begin in about three weeks, so there is not much time left in which to pick and choose, especially as it is a good thing for a crew to have at least ten days' steady practice before they enter the most serious stages. Practice for a University race roughly divides itself into three parts, the preliminary practice, in which the new men are well grounded in style and their hearts gradually worked up to the pitch which is required for the hard work of the second stage, when strength is developed and the system is inured to the strain which will be put upon it in the race itself; while the last fortnight's training, in which the eight individual oars are welded into one crew, and the bodies are freshened up, forms the third stage.

THE DARK BLUES.—It was realised after the Trial Eights race that Mr. Mackinnon had just enough really useful talent to make up a crew, and practically no more; that if he met with no accidents, and no illness occurred, he would be able to produce a crew probably far better than any that has appeared at Putney for at least seven years, if not more. But last week has been one of great anxiety. First of all, C. A. Gladstone, who was deprived last year of his "Blue" by influenza, fell a victim to his old enemy. It is an illness that throws a man back a great deal, and it is doubtful whether an oarsman who has had even a mild attack can regain his fitness and be able to do himself and a crew justice in the same training. It is true that Gladstone has had a good deal of experience and is a good enough oar to come into the boat at quite a late stage of the practice, so that he may be able to resume his seat quite fit and sound since his attack has come so early. A day or two later G. H. Pope succumbed to German measles, which will put him out of the boat for some time to come, if not for good. His loss was very unfortunate in that he was Bourne's understudy for stroke, and the seriousness of Mr. Mackinnon's position was emphasised by the indisposition of Bourne himself. In consequence of these misfortunates the remainder of the crew were given a rest of two days last week, and after that came out in quite a provisional order, with Fleming at stroke.

The president himself has undertaken the main part of the coaching assisted by Mr. G. C. Bourne, who will take over the duties when Mr. Mackinnon takes his seat in the boat. A. S. Garton, last year's 4, has been rowing regularly, while Kitchin, of St. John's who rowed at Putney in 1908, came in last week, and is now rowing 6 Of the new hands Fleming and Owen have rowed throughout the practice, while Millington, Drake, and Loyd have had lengthy trials. Lambert has been rowing bow during Gladstone's absence, and Pidgeon has been tried at 2 and 7. It is obviously impossible to say anything of the chances of the crew matters have settled themselves.

WORK AT CAMBRIDGE.—Mr. Dudley Ward has taken over the work of coaching the crew, but as yet its order is far from being definitely settled H. S. S. Shields has been stroking the boat regularly, and it seems as if he will stay there, unless Fairbairn takes his place. Shields did not show any great generalship during the latter half of the trial eight's race last December, but that may be partly accounted for by the fact that his 7 was practically untrained, and there can be few courses more trying than the Adelaide course. Hellyer has been rowing at 7, but it is probable that he will be found a place higher up in the boat, and that Fairbairn will eventually come into his place. Rosher has been rowing regularly at 6, and it is practically certain that he will remain there, and it is doubtful if a better 6 could be found among modern oarsmen. The president has taken a seat at 5, his old place. G. L. Thomson, last year's 3, has been rowing 5, but he will probably go back to his previous place, for which he is admirably fitted; for 3 is a place where work counts more, and style less, than in any other seat in a boat. Of the other old Blues it seems that, after all, E. S. Horridge will not be in residence this term, while Swanston has gone to America on a holiday, and Arbuthnot has not yet been tried.

H. G. Palmer has rowed regularly at bow, and, with C. P. Cooke, who is now rowing 2, seems likely to keep his place; while C. M. Stuart, the winning stroke of the trials, R. le Blanc Smith, and A. S. Lloyd have all been given lengthy trials.

Although there is scarcely any great talent with Rosher and Williams round whom to build the boat, Mr. Dudley Ward may produce a crew with first-class pace out of second-class material. In 1901 Mr. Felix Wane built such a crew around himself, and there are many other instances. Mr. Dudley Ward rowed 7 in the magnificent Cambridge crew of 1900, and his knowledge of style, built as it is on Mr. Fletcher's coaching, should go far towards bringing Cambridge back into more orthodox paths. For length of swing, body work, and watermanship he was the equal of the famous 7's, W. E. Crum and R. P. P. Rowe, the great Oxford oars of the nineties.

BOXING.

IRISH BANTAM CHAMPIONSHIP.—Although proceedings were resumed on Thursday last with the preliminary bouts of a heavy-weight novices' competition last Saturday night at headquarters nominally marked the resumption after the Christmas vacation, the chief item being a twenty rounds contest for the Irish bantam-weight championship between John Curran and Jim Dermody, both hailing from Dublin. There was a full house when the business of the evening was entered upon with the continuation of the novices' competition, which was followed by a six rounds bout between J. Arundel, of the Borough, and A. Shipp, of Kingsland, two evenly-matched bantam-weights. Arundel, however, was much too useful with a heavy right, and had his opponent well beaten in the second round. (B.) FASTENER RAISED FOR REMOVING LOCK.

"FIELD," June 12, 1909:

". . . . a very interesting model of a side lock, the special feature of which is the provision of means for detaching the locks by the uplifting of a small thumb lever sunk flush in the plate. The lifting of the lever by inserting the thumb nail unlocks the plate and allows it to be removed. The reverse operation of putting it back is effected simply by pressing it home into place. Messrs. Lang have, however, gone further than merely to make their locks detachable without the use of implements or tools; means have been provided for making it impossible to put the locks back in any but the right position, irrespectively as to whether the lock is cocked or uncocked. . . . . Congratulation may be permitted concerning the lively balance and neat finish of the gun submitted."

NOTE.—There are no projections, when the lock is replaced the thumb lever automatically returns flush with the lock plate.

IMPORTANT.

The cocking arms automatically take up their proper position; consequently the adjustment of them that is required before an ordinary side-lock can be replaced is avoided, and sportsmen need not fear damage may be caused by irresponsible persons.

America, and C. Dixon, of Southwark, light-weights, next entered the ring for six rounds. The American, whose methods were not of the best, used his head a good deal and bored considerably; whilst there was a lot of holding, Carsey being the chief offender. The contest went the full distance, and Dixon was given a popular verdict on points.

Following the interval came the principal item. Dermody, who weighed 8st. 4lb, had 4lb. the best of the weights, and also the advantage in height and reach. Curran, however, forced the work in the three opening rounds, and in some brisk exchanges scored with a straight left several times. The boxing continued to be brisk, Curran, who had the better style, doing some good work with the left at close range. Both men were evidently well trained, for although the pace was maintained and hard exchanges were frequent, they came up quite fresh when half the allotted rounds had been contested, Curran at this point holding a slight advantage on points. In the eleventh round Dermody, who had improved during the two previous meetings, adopted rushing tactics, but in some hard two-handed boxing had little the best of matters. In the twelfth Curran scored several times with the left on the head, the gong coming as a welcome relief to Dermody, who again in the next round had to take a lot of punishment. Continuing to show good generalship, Curran added to his lead by means of a very quick left, invariably getting in two for one and having his man down for 3secs. in the fourteenth. Drawing his man well, Curran with left and right on the head had his man well beaten at the end of the sixteenth round, and during the interval Dermody retired, Curran thus securing a well-deserved victory after an excellent encounter.

THE LONDON TOURNAMENT.

J. W. Stevenson vs. E. Diggle.—At Messrs. Burroughes and Watts's Soho-square Salon last Saturday the seventh heat in the American tournament was concluded, when Diggle, who was in receipt of 4,000 points start from scratch, defeated Stevenson very easily by no fewer than 1,993 points. In the afternoon Diggle was credited with breaks of 47, 114, 68, and 238 (unfinished), while the scratch man's best breaks were 218 (including 31 close cannons) and 176. The interval scores were:—

Diggle (in play)	...	...17,417
Stevenson	...	... 14,919

In the evening consistency more than brilliancy marked the proceedings. Diggle, after converting his incomplete 238 into 254, made runs of 47, 64, 67, 78, 51, 58, and 66 Stevenson's most important contributions being 52, 73, 112, 141, 138, 64, 130, and 173. Full scores:—

Diggle (rec. 4,000)	...	... 18,000
Stevenson (scratch)	...	... 16,007

C. Harverson vs. W. A. Lovejoy.—The game of 8,000 up, which these players contested at Messrs. Thurston's Grand Hall, Leicester-square, during the past week, ended last Saturday night in an easy victory for Harverson, who conceded a start of 1,360 points, by 1,567. Harverson always had the best of the argument from the commencement and when a start was made yesterday afternoon he led at 6,667—5,406in his favour. At the first session his chief breaks were 106, 223, 159, 46, and 53 (unfinished), and 52, 120 (including 35 consecutive cannons), 63, and 66 by Lovejoy. At the adjournment the totals were:—

Harverson (in play	...	... 7,335
Lovejoy	...	... 5,889

At night the ex-amateur champion's best breaks were 44, 79, 46, 75, and 111, while Harverson, with 63 (full), 53 56, 88, 103, 70 and 67 (unfinished) won as stated. Final scores:—

Harverson	...	... 8,000
Lovejoy	...	... 6,433

GOLF.

Cambridge University vs. Royal Ashdown Forest.—On Saturday Cambridge University played their first match of the term. They met the Royal Ashdown Forest Club at Forest Row, and were beaten. Royal Ashdown Forest won the foursomes by 3 to 2 and the singles by 6 to 4, thus proving successful on the day by 9 to 6. In the foursomes in the morning the Cantabs were without Mr. C. Marzetti, in whose stead Mr. T. W. Barron played. Mr. H. G. Hutchinson, the amateur ex-champion, led the successful side, and defeated Mr. J. F. Ireland, while in the foursomes Mr. Hutchinson and the Hon. B. Butler beat Mr. Ireland and Mr. E. R. Campbell. Details:—

Athletics and Cross-Country.

At Roehampton, over a seven and three-quarter miles course the Thames Hare and Hounds beat the United Hospitals by 25 points, with the lower score of 15 points to 40 points. E. P. Turner (Thames) beat F. D. Sowerby (Thames) by 300 yards for first place, in 44mins. 25secs. W. K. Fry (Guy's) who finished sixth, was first man home for the Hospitals.

At Forest Gate Essex Beagles' ten miles championship was won by the international champion, A. E. Wood (holder) in 64mins. 22secs. As Neasdon, the Finchley Harriers' seven and a half miles championship was won by W. E. Bull in 45mins. 35secs.

Other club championships at various distances, ranging between seven and ten miles, on Saturday, were won as follows:—Belgrave H. (G. Still), Gainsford A. C. (A. G. Hill). Irish A. C. (J. J. Barrett). Wigmore H. (A. H. Foot). Shaftesbury H. (W. H. Brooks), Queen's Park H. (J. M. Hill). New Barnet A.C. (R. Pingree). Archway ... (C. Peyfrement.)

An inter-team race at Tottenham was won by the North London Harriers, and a similar contest was won by the Salvey Harriers at Slough.

Over a course about eleven and a half miles in extent, from South Croydon to Banstead by way of Russell Hill, Purley, and back, the Surrey Walking Club held a race on Saturday, with the following result: J. H. Van Meurs (3mins. start), 1; E. C. Horton (1min.), 2; H. C. Black (14mins.), 3. Won by 32secs., in 1 hour 38 mins. 8secs. Horton's net time—1 hour 36mins. 40secs.—was the fastest in the race.

Hunting.

THE MADRAS HOUNDS.

Sunday, the 13th instant, found hounds again at the 7th milestone Poonamallee Road, the only huntable portion of the country after the phenomenal drought we have had this cold weather, and even this usually sloppy district is getting baked as hard as the high road and the remains of the paddy crops, which are not worth harvesting, are being grazed off by the cattle.

Dropping down into the Coum river bed from the place of meeting hounds at once hit on a drag and after a hover and a whimper or two away they went back to the road; this however brought them up and they could not own to it again either across the road or in the mango topes to the right, so we hied away to our original destination, the Ayanampakkam casuarina woods about two miles distant. Here a jack was soon on foot, but he was not for running any risks in the open and stuck to the woods assiduously. Popping from one into the other, backwards and forwards, and round and round. Hounds however stuck to him well on a very indifferent scent and after an hour and twenty minutes, during which they were running the whole time, our jack finally sealed his fate by taking refuge in the flue of an old disused brick kiln. "Fortitude" getting in after him and killing him on her own. It was with some difficulty that both of them were extricated as the old kiln was in a very shaky condition and appeared likely to collapse at any minute. Mrs. Middleton was given the brush, and Mr. Cowie the mask. It was a good performance on the part of hounds but a somewhat uninteresting morning from a follower's point of view, as we were seldom out of a trot.

BOMBAY JUNIOR TOURNAMENT.

The tournament opened on the 8th February when two games were played off in the presence of a large attendance which included H. E. the Governor, H. H. the Maharaja of Mysore and the Yuvaraj.

Bombay Gymkhana vs. General Alderson's Team.—This was the first game and was not a particularly brilliant display. The Poona team had matters all their own way and the Gymkhana were eventually defeated to the tune of 10 goals to nil. Bremner scored twice in the opening chukker: the second period saw Martin and General Anderson add goals, Denton scored in the third. The fourth chukker was responsible for 3 goals (two by Bremner and one by General Alderson). Bremner and Denton put on a goal each in the final chukker and the game ended as stated. Teams:—

Major Bremner	...	2	Capt. Redmond	...	2
Capt. Denton ...	...	3	Mr. W. L. Graham	...	3
Major Martin	(back)		Capt. Alderson	(back)

Umpires:—Col. Grimshaw.

Government House vs. 33rd Q.O. Cavalry.—This was a much better game than the preceding contest, play being level and interesting all through. Both goals were visited in turn at the start, but nothing occurred till Greig got away and drew first blood, Aliyar Khan equalising immediately after. Government House attacked at the start of the second period but were driven back and the Cavalry pressing Collins put through, Aliyar Khan adding another goal before the close. The third chukker saw the ball moving all over the field but there was no score. In the fourth a good run by Aliyar Khan resulted in a goal, and Collins notched the fifth point directly after. Both teams made great efforts to score in the final period but were unsuccessful, the Cavalry thus winning by 5 goals to 1. Teams.—

Semi-finals.

General Alderson's Team vs. Bhavnagar.—This was the first of the semi-final games on the 11th instant. It was a very one-sided affair. The Bhavnagar team had been expected to put up a fine display, but their exhibition was very disappointing. General Alderson's team had matters all their own way and won by 9 goals to nil. They scored two goals in the first period, two in the second, two in the third and three in the fourth chukker. The game was marred by an unfortunate accident to Risaldar Sirdar Singh, whose pony came down and gave him a heavy fall, which necessitated his retiring from the game, Lieutenant Zouvar Singh taking his place. Teams:—

Umpires:—Colonel Forbes and Captain Grimshaw.

33rd Q. O. Cavalry vs. 13th Hussars.—These teams from Secunderabad also met on the 11th instant. Here again disappointment awaited the spectators. A close struggle was looked forward to, but the 13th Hussars gave a very indifferent display and were outplayed by the 33rd. The latter were in tip-top form. They were always sure on the ball and hit with great precision and marked effect, piling on no fewer than 8 goals to a single point registered by the Hussars. Teams:—

Final.

33rd Queen's Own Cavalry vs. General Alderson's Team.—These two teams put up a splendid game in the final on Tuesday, the issue being in doubt till the end. There was a large and distinguished gathering and the trophies were presented to the winners at the close of the game by Mrs. Slade after a short speech by General Swann. It was a fine exhibition of polo, play ruling for the most part in midfield. General Alderson's team drew first blood through Denton—a penalty hit shortly, after enabling Kenworthy to equalise. In the second period Aliyar Khan hit another goal for the 33rd and there was no farther scoring. The game thereafter was fast and furious and a fierce struggle thusended in a win for the 33rd Cavalry by 2 goals to nil. Teams as before. Umpires Colonel Forbes and Captain Hamilton Grace.

NATIVE CAVALRY TOURNAMENT.

The tournament opened on the 11th instant at Umbala, when four games were played in the presence of a large number of spectators. The 8th Cavalry were 'At home" on the ground. Sixteen teams have entered this year and it is expected that the annual gathering will be the most successful of any yet held.

10th D.C.O. Lancers vs. 26th P.W.O. Lancers.—This was a well contested and fast game; the 26th showing better combination and having faster ponies, won by 5 goals to nil.

First Chukker.—The 10th ran down but failed to score, and the 26th returning in possession notched their first goal from a scrimmage.

Second Chukker.—A free hit to the 10th was not improved on. Both goals were visited in turn till, Chaytor scored for the 26th and Foster just missed after a fine attempt.

Third Chukker.—Up and down play, neither gaining any advantage till Popham hit a third goal for the 26th.

Fourth Chukker.—The ball travelled all over the ground, Popham eventually securing it and hitting another goal.

Fifth Chukker.—Fast play; both goals were visited and just before time Chaytor put the ball through.

Sixth Chukker.—After a run by the 26th their opponents pressed. They were awarded two free hits in succession but nothing came of them and the bugle sounded victory for the 26th by 5 goals to nil. Teams:—

Umpires:—Major Maxwell and Captain Cherpeston.

14th Murray's Jat Lancers vs. 15th Lancers.—Played on the 11th instant, the 15th winning by 6 goals to 1.

First Chukker.—Level play, no score.

Second Chukker.—The 15th attacked but were unable to get through.

Third Chukker.—The 15th continued to press and registered two goals.

Fourth Chukker.—Play was for the most part in the 14th's territory, their opponents eventually scoring twice.

Fifth Chukker.—The 15th pressed and hit another goal, the 14th thereafter making two unsuccessful onslaughts.

Sixth Chukker.—The 14th ran down but their opponents cleared and rushing down hit a goal. The 14th then got possession and notched their only point. Final score: 15th Lancers, 6 goals; 14th Lancers, 1 goal. Teams:—

Umpires:—Messrs. Leslie Cheape and Wienholt.

8th Cavalry vs. 18th P.W.O. Tiwana Lancers.—This was a well contested game, the 8th winning by 4 goals to 3.

First Chukker.—The 8th were first to attack and Chaplin hit a goal. Up and down play for the rest of the period.

Second Chukker.—Lane rushed down and transferred to Hudson, who scored. The 8th kept up the attack and after Chaplin had failed Hudson added a third goal. Then the 18th pressed and Railston scored after two unsuccessful shots.

Third Chukker.—This was a pointless chukker. The 18th gave a good account of themselves and had hard luck in not scoring.

Fourth Chukker.—The 18th went away and put the ball through. The 8th were next given a penalty hit for a foul but the shot was not successful.

Fifth Chukker.—The 8th ran down but missed and Railston clearing came away in possession and equalised. The 8th then took up the attack and Blood put them ahead, a further attempt to score going wide.

Sixth Chukker.—Fast up and down play. No score. The 8th winning as stated. Teams.—

32nd Lancers vs. 11th K.E.O. Lancers.—This was the last game on the opening day and was well fought out the 11th, who were surer in front of goal, winning by 5 goals to 2. Mr. Gatacre fell and dislocated his shoulder and was relieved by Mr. Sherston for the rest of the game.

First Chukker.—The 32nd were first away and notched a point. The 11th immediately replied with a goal, but failed to improve on a penalty hit a little later.

Second Chukker.—The 11th pressed and had several unsuccessful shots. No score.

Third Chukker.—The 32nd took up the attack but were unable to press it home and the 11th getting possession ran down and scored two goals in succession.

Fourth Chukker.—Gatacre fell and was too badly hurt to continue, his place being taken by Sherston who signalised his appearance by scoring a goal.

Fifth Chukker.—Up and down play, the 32nd scoring a goal.

Sixth Chukker.—The 11th pressed and hit a goal. On changing ends the 32nd got away but their final effort went wide. Final Score: 11th Lancers, 5 goals; 32nd Lancers, 2 goals. Teams:—

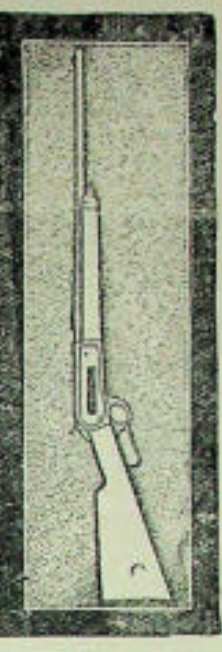
Four more games in the first round were set down for decision on the 12th instant, but the Guides Cavalry having scratched one of these ended in a walk over for the 6th K.E.O. Cavalry. There was a large attendance, the 36th Jacob's Horse were "At home," their band adding to the afternoon's enjoyment.



WINCHESTER .33 CALIBER

A New Large Caliber High Power Rifle.

Big game hunters who have advocated a large caliber high power rifle will find in the Winchester .33 caliber a gun that will meet their requirements. The popular and reliable Model 1886 rifle has been adapted to handle this new cartridge, which is large enough and powerful enough to kill any big game known. The Winchester .33 caliber belongs to the high power smokeless powder class of cartridges, having high velocity and flat trajectory, and it develops great striking energy and penetrating power. The .33 caliber bullet weighs 200 grains. Soft pointed bullets used in this cartridge have special upsetting or mushrooming qualities, owing to their high velocity. This makes the Winchester .33 caliber a particularly desirable cartridge for big game shooting, as mushrooming bullets of this size have terrific killing power.

9TH HODSON'S HORSE vs. 39TH C. I. HORSE.—This was the first game of the afternoon and good play was witnessed, the C. I. Horse eventually winning by 5 goals to 1.

First Chukker.—The C.I. Horse attacked throughout this period but could only score 1 goal.

Second Chukker.—Play in the 9th's territory followed by a good run by Hewlett. Nothing resulted and play was level till the close of the period.

Third Chukker.—The C.I. Horse pressed once more and after one unsuccessful attempt Bahadur Khan scored a goal. Further play in the 9th's territory but all efforts to score were fruitless.

Fourth Chukker.—Play ruled in midfield till Bahadur Khan got away and scored. Todd next got on and registered a goal. Then the 9th put in a determined run to the C.I.H. flags but were stopped.

Fifth Chukker.—Up and down play till Bahadur Khan got the ball and hit it through. The 9th were next in possession and rushing down put between the flags.

Sixth Chukker.—Fast play all over the ground. No further scoring. C.I. Horse, 5 goals; 9th Hodson's Horse, 1 goal. Teams:—

Umpires.—Major Chaplin and Mr. Goldie.

5TH CAVALRY vs. 17TH CAVALRY.—Played on the adjoining ground, this game ended in a win for the 17th, whose shooting was more accurate than that of the 5th.

First Chukker.—Midfield play till Dodd took the ball down for Barge to score a goal.

Second Chukker.—Fast play in midfield; the 17th at length got the ball and scored a second goal.

Third Chukker.—The 17th pressed on resuming but the 5th defence was good. They cleared all onslaughts on their flags and attacked in turn but the score remained unchanged.

Fourth Chukker.—A combined run by the 17th ended in a goal and on changing ends they added another point.

Fifth Chukker.—The 17th attacked and scored from a scrimmage. Midfield play followed and then the 5th scored from a long shot by Clark. Thereafter the 17th pressed and hit another goal.

Sixth Chukker.—Up and down play. A penalty hit to the 17th was not improved upon but just before time they notched another point and won by 2 goals to 1. Teams:—

Umpires.—Captain Wickham and Mr. Weinholt.

31ST D.C.O. LANCERS vs. 36TH JACOB'S HORSE.—This game ended in an easy win for Jacob's Horse who gave a good display, their opponents being apparently off colour.

First Chukker.—Jacob's Horse pressed at the start but were kept out and the Lancers then attacked. Their final efforts went wide and play returned to their territory where Owen Jones scored for the 36th.

Second Chukker.—Play in the 31st Lancers' ground throughout. No score.

Third Chukker.—Jacob's Horse did all the attacking in this period and registered three goals.

Fourth Chukker.—Keeping up the attack the 36th put on another goal before the Lancers got possession and pressed for a spell. Their efforts were unrewarded and the 36th again got on and scored their sixth point.

Fifth Chukker.—The Lancers had the best of this period but there was no scoring.

Sixth Chukker.—Jacob's Horse hit a goal and the succeeding play was in midfield till, the 31st got away but time was called before they put through. Final score: 36th, 2 goals; 31st, nil. Teams:—

CRICKET IN CALCUTTA.

CALCUTTA C. C. vs. DALHOUSIE.—Played on the 12th and 13th instant in the Eden Gardens. The home team batted first and put up 264, C. Reid contributing 104. He batted well but was three times missed. This is the first century scored by any C.C.C. player in their matches this season. Lee and Sewell also made useful scores. Logan was the most successful of the visitors' bowlers, taking 6 wickets for 111, but the fielding of the Dalhousie men was not at all good. The Trades Club went in on Sunday but fared very badly, being all out for 85. Sharp made 28 and Wood was the only other to reach double figures. Going in again they gave another poor display and were disposed of for 97. Calcutta thus won by an innings and 82 runs. Score:—

BALLYGUNGE vs. CALCUTTA.—The return match between these two old rivals, was played at Ballygunge on Monday and Tuesday last, Calcutta succeeding in reversing the verdict of the first encounter by defeating Ballygunge by no less than 9 wickets.

The result hardly came as a surprise, as it seemed to be a more or less foregone conclusion when the composition of the elevens became known, for whereas the C.C.C. had out probably the strongest team that has done duty for the Club this season, Ballygunge had about the weakest; all their regular bowlers were away and with White, Bocquet, Manders, F. Goulet, A. Gould, Skinner and Sayres, all non-starters, the team can hardly be said to have been representative. Calcutta, too, were unfortunate inasmuch that they batted one short, and further, that Ernsthausen strained his leg so badly early in the second Ballygunge innings, that he was unable to bowl, but his absence fortunately made no difference.

Quin won the toss and decided to bat, sending in Craik and Guise to face Yeoman and Hornecastle; neither started with any degree of confidence, the former being particularly shaky at the start, in fact, he never seemed altogether comfortable and was finally bowled by Yeoman when he had scored 38. Lee did not do much, being beautifully stumped by Frost off Yeoman when he had made 5, but Turnbull stopped with Guise a long time, and between them they carried the score from 70 to 183 for the third wicket. Turnbull was the first to leave, playing on to Sherman when 55; Guise followed shortly after, when the board showed 196, and then Major Champain and Given-Wilson made still another stand, 60 being added for the fifth wicket, the score being 256 when the former was yorked by Coulthard for 27. Quin was the next comer, he and Given-Wilson putting on 63 for the sixth wicket, the latter being caught by Pope off Whiteley when the total was 319; Ernsthausen did nothing, and Woodhouse only made 8, but Twiss hit freely for 17, the innings closing for 349, Quin being not out 37.

The Ballygunge fielding was not good, several catches being missed, in fact, had they all been held, the whole team would probably have been out for 250 or thereabouts, but they were not, and the home team have chiefly themselves to thank for being kept in the field practically the whole day. Sherman bowled the best of the seven bowlers tried, his four wickets costing only 59 runs, Yeoman with two for 100, Hornecastle, one for 49, Coulthard one for 52 and Whiteley one for 19, also meeting with a small amount of success.

When stumps were drawn on Monday evening, Ballygunge had put together 96 for the loss of only Yeoman's wicket, D. S. Shallow being not out 46, and A. W. Shallow not out 13. On resuming, the latter only added 4 before being splendidly caught at short slip by Quin and the former, 18, when he was taken in the long field by Turnbull. Of the rest, Frost made 35 and V. Sherman, a brilliant 25 not out, the innings closing for 233, or 136 behind.

Following on Ballygunge made a very bad start Sherman being out for 5, Frost for 1, A. W. Shallow for 5, but Yeoman and D. S. Shallow came to the rescue and between them made things look much better. The former was the first out, caught and bowled by Twiss off a sharply rising ball, and after his departure, a rot set in, McIntyre alone making double figures; the innings closed for 211, of which D. S. Shallow alone contributed a very fine 110, his second century this season. Left with 78 to get to winner, Calcutta set about the task very lightly, the runs being knocked off in rather less than three-quarters of an hour, Wilson being not out 36 and Guise, not out 25.

THE MADRAS TOURNAMENT.

SHERWOOD FORESTERS vs. GOVERNMENT HOUSE S.C.—These teams opened the tournament on the 7th instant, the Foresters winning a one-sided game by 6 goals to nil. They started attacking from the kick off and after Sibthorpe had scored the first point, three more were added during the first half. The Sports Club put up a better defence on changing ends and Moore in goal gave a brilliant exhibition, so that although the Foresters did all the pressing they could only score two more goals. Teams.—

SHERWOOD FORESTERS.—Marsden goal; Doncaster and Berryford, backs; Carver, Moss and Chesterton, halves; Millington, Stevenson, Sibthorpe, Smedley and Orange, forwards.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE S.C.— Moore, goal; C. Nicholas and McKenzie, backs; Gray, Daniels and Lynsdale, halves; A. Ireland, M. Nicholas, D'Cruz, Taylor and V. Ireland, forwards.

Referee—Mr. C. A. Souter.

MADRAS GYMKHANA vs. BORDER REGIMENT.—Played on the 8th instant a very level game ending in a win for the soldiers by two rather lucky goals to nil. The Gymkhana pressed at the start and forced a corner, which was not improved upon. Play was then transferred and the Gymkhana defence was severely tried and Sherer scored with a long shot. A spell in the soldiers' half followed but the ball was again taken to the Gymkhana end where Graham was beaten by a long dropping shot from Winslow. Thereafter play was very level both teams attacked and came very near scoring. The Gymkhana had the best of the exchange on resuming after half time but all their attempts to score were frustrated, and though they attacked throughout the second moiety there was no further score registered and the Border Regiment won as stated by 2 goals to nil. Teams:—

BORDER REGIMENT.—Fox, goal; Fisher and Smith, backs; Wynne, Fairbrother and Brown, halves; Worral, Sherer, Giles, Spencer and Winslow forwards.

GYMKHANA.—Graham, goal; Rogers and Johnston, backs; Starrock, Souter and Farquharson, halves; Purves, Boyson, Rev. Acmonds, Todd and Strouts, forwards.

Referee.—Lieutenant J. V. Shute.

Semi-Finals.

LEICESTERS vs. SHERWOOD FORESTERS.—The first of the semi-finals brought together the above teams on the 9th instant. Their encounter last year had ended in favour of the Foresters but this year the tables were turned. The game was fast and exciting throughout. The Leicesters scored a goal through Chambers at the start and thereafter the contest was most interesting. The Foresters worked hard to get on terms and the Leicesters to add to their score, but the arrival of the interval found no change in the score sheet. The Leicesters got away on resuming and Chambers, heading in neatly, was responsible for a second goal. The Foresters did not relax their efforts at this reverse but continued to play pluckily to the end. They attacked persistently but their forwards were weak in front of goal and opportunities of scoring were missed. When time was called the score read: Leicesters, 2 goals; Foresters, nil. Teams:—

LEICESTERS:—Owen, goal; Fowkes and Bailey, backs; Whitemore, Wale and Cliffe, halves; French, Shingler, Chambers, Butler and Wardle, forwards.

Foresters:—As before.

Referee.—Mr. C. A. Souter.

DORSETS vs. BORDER REGIMENT.—The Dorsets made their first appearance in the tournament on the 11th instant, and giving a fine display won by 2 goals to nil. They rushed away at the start and after a hot scrimmage in front of goal Tarrant scored. They continued to press on restarting and Tarrant again put through—two goals during the first ten minutes. There was no slackening of the pace and the Dorsets had the larger share of the remaining play in the first half, but the Border Regiment's defence was sound and nothing further was scored. On changing ends the Dorsets were undoubtedly the better combination, but though both teams made great efforts neither was able to score and the Dorsets thus qualified for the final by 2 goals to nil.

Final.

DORSET REGIMENT vs. LEICESTER REGIMENT.—This game brought the tournament to a conclusion in the presence of a large gathering of football enthusiasts on Saturday last. The Leicesters were looked upon as the ultimate winners, having beaten the holders, the Sherwood Foresters, at an earlier stage, though they had the best of the play during the first half and quite as much of it as their opponents on changing ends, they were unable to score. On the other hand the Dorsets hit a lucky goal shortly before time and secured the victory by the narrow margin of a single point. The game was fast and well contested throughout. The defence of both teams was very sound and the Leicesters forwards appeared to be better than the Dorsets front rank, but they had bad luck in missing more than one opportunity of scoring. The Cup was presented to the winning team at the conclusion of the game by Mrs. Miller, the Hon'ble Surgeon-General P. H. Benson making a short congratulatory speech. Teams as before.

Referee.—Mr. C. A. Souter.

THE ALDERSON TOURNAMENT.

LEICESTERS vs. LINCOLNS.—The Poona Divisional Tournament for the cup presented by General Alderson began on the 7th instant when two games were played. The first of these, between the Lincolns and the Leicesters, was fast and most exciting, eventually ending in a draw. The Lincolns opened the scoring and putting on another goal shortly after the interval led by 2 to nil. The Leicesters never slackened their efforts and during the last few minutes of the game scored twice. Extra time was played but neither team scored. In the replay on the 8th instant another exciting struggle was witnessed. The Leicesters drew first blood and added a second point on changing ends Though repeatedly rushed by the Lincolns who tried hard to score, their defence was able to frustrate all attempts, and the Lincolns retired beaten by 2 goals to nil.

3RD SAPPERS AND MINERS vs. 114TH MAHRATTAS.—Also played on the 7th instant. The Sappers were the first to score after some exciting play. The 114th equalised but putting through once again the Sappers led at the interval. The second half was well contested, but the Sappers managed to score once more and thus won by 3 goals to 1.

GLOSTERS vs. R.F.A. KIRKEE.—These teams met on the 9th instant, a very interesting game being witnessed by a large gathering. The Glosters from Bombay scored in the first half and led at the interval, but soon after resuming the Gunners equalised. Play was subsequently fast and exciting and it was anyone's game till the last few minutes when a combined run and successful shot gave the R.F.A. the victory by 2 goals to 1. The Glosters might have won were it not for the splendid defence of the R.F.A. goalkeeper who did yeoman service when besieged at the opening of the second half.

LEICESTERS vs. NORTH LANCS.—Played on the 10th instant The North Lancs were quite outclassed and though they played pluckily were unable to prevent their opponents scoring when they liked. The Leicesters notched three points in the first half and four after the interval, the Lancs netting on one occasion.

3RD SAPPERS AND MINERS vs. R.F.A.—The second match in the semi-finals proved another runaway victory, the Sappers winning easily. They drew first blood but the Gunners immediately equalised The Sappers then pressed hotly and registered another point before the interval. On changing ends the Gunners got on terms once more but the Sappers replied with two more goals. A run by the Artillery was next successful and the score stood 4 to 3 in favour of the Sappers, who from this point onwards had matters their own way and scored three times, thus winning by 7 goals to 4.

THE LAVER TOURNAMENT.

First Round.

SECUNDERABAD COMBINED "A" vs. 12TH HUSSARS "B."—The tournament opened at Secunderabad on the 7th instant with the above game. Twelve teams have entered and some exciting contests are expected. The game under notice was in favour of the native team all through. They scored twice, their first goal coming from a corner hit. In the second half they continued to distinguish themselves and scored another goal at the start. Though the Hussars hit a goal and made great efforts to equalise they never relaxed their efforts, and scoring twice more ran out winners by 5 goals to 1.

15TH HUSSARS "A" vs. FUTTEH MARDAN GYMKHANA.—This match on the 8th instant was a very one-sided affair, the Hussars winning by 7 goals to nil. The Gymkhana defence was very feeble and the 13th broke through twice in the first half and five times after the interval.

Y.M.C.A. vs. MAHRUR COLLEGE.—The College were expected to beat the young men who were a very scratch combination, but they never had a show. The Y.M.C.A. played a dashing game and, though rather erratic in front of goal, they kept the College busy defending all through, scored five times—3 goals in the first and two in the second half—and prevented their opponents from notching a single point.

61ST PIONEERS AND 96TH BERAR INFANTRY vs. SHERWOOD FORESTERS.—This was another one-sided game but was conspicuous for the fine form displayed by the combined team. They got to work at once and playing brilliantly scored twice in the first fifteen minutes. The Foresters endeavoured to carry the game to the opposite end, but the combined team kept up the attack and forced a number of corners which the Foresters were lucky to clear. The combined team continued to show their superiority after half time and were unlucky not to score more than the single goal they netted close on time. The Foresters got away occasionally and one of these rushes ended in a goal being registered. Final score : Combined team, 3 goals ; Foresters, 1 goal.

Second Round.

SECUNDERABAD COMBINED "A" vs. 13TH HUSSARS "A"—These teams met on the 11th instant before a large crowd of spectators. It will be remembered that in the tournament last year they had three encounters before a definite result was arrived at, but this year the match was decided at the first time of asking. The game was very evenly contested in the first half. The combined team put through twice, but the second point was scored after the whistle called half time and it was thus disallowed. On changing ends the combined eleven had the best of the play and hitting two more goals ran out victorious by 3 goals to nil.

61ST PIONEERS AND 96TH BERAR INFANTRY vs. Y.M.C.A.—This match was played on the 12th instant and ended in favour of the combined military team by 3 goals to one. They had the upperhand throughout the first half but could only score once. On resuming the Young Men managed to equalise but Dawes soon gave the Military team the lead once more and, Manson adding a third point just before time was called, they won as stated.

LAWN TENNIS AT ALLAHABAD.

A VERY interesting and successful tournament, the open events of which were brought to a conclusion last Saturday, is now being held at Allahabad. The Punjab champions, E. M. Atkinson and L. S. Deane, took part on their way down to compete in the Bengal Championships and once more proved their excellence at the game. They met one another in the final of the singles, when Atkinson was victorious after a hard struggle by 3 sets to love—7—5, 7—5, 7—5. while in the doubles together they accounted for Messrs. Moore and Maharaj Singh. The Ladies' open singles ended in a win for Mrs. Kendal. The tournament was well managed and will in all probability be established as an annual fixture. The handicap events are now in progress. Results :—

MEN'S OPEN SINGLES.

Deane beat Mahomed Nagi 6—0, 7—5.

HEAVY WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP OF AUSTRALIA.

BILL SQUIRES V.S. BILL LANG.

BILL SQUIRES and Bill Lang faced each other for the third time at the Sydney Stadium on Monday the 17th January. Previously the pair had met in the same enclosure, and, later, in Melbourne, and Lang won on both occasions. Since his return to Australia, or at any rate, since his last defeat by Tommy Burns in Sydney, on 24th August 1908, Bill Squires has undoubtedly fallen off in fighting power, and his physique has not taken the eye anything like as well as it did a few years ago. There seems to be some deterioration, though Boshter Bill" looks well enough, and is as game a fellow as ever.

When Squires and Lang met in Sydney it will be remembered, Squires was knocked out in 17 rounds, and there were times when the battle was a really good one. When they faced each other in Melbourne a month or so back the match, according to reports, proved more than interesting, and highly exciting, and was Squires' till the Victorian landed a sleep-producer in the last round. It was this Melbourne fight that worked up the big public appetite, responsible for an attendance of 15,000 people on the latest occasion.

There was nothing in the fighting at any time to rave about. In Melbourne Lang was after his man all through and thus played nicely into Squires' hands for when trouble loomed Squires would clinch, and there were other things Squires would do, and did, which the last-mentioned boxer was enabled to do, and did, while his foeman rushed the work, but at the Stadium on Monday positions were reversed. Squires did most of the following up and the forcing, and Lang the waiting, hence, to a great extent, the New South Welshman's undoing.

Squires hadn't the steam or the vigour of old, though he took a good deal of beating, and Lang showed, in his manner of getting to work, that that experience with Jack Johnson had benefited him a great deal.

Bill Squires butted his head in a good deal, possibly more through the awkwardness of the situation at the moment than deliberately, but it looked bad.

Squires had none the worse of one or two rounds, but the fourth saw him in the light of a more than probable winner. He swung left to one side and right to the other side of the jaw, with such weight that Lang's knees gave ominously, and he seemed a beaten man; but his wits were with him, for he hugged the enemy as tightly as if very life depended upon the power and length of the hold for some seconds. "Boshter" Bill struggled and manœuvred, as he best knew how, to get going and make the most of the opportunity, but "Corners" clanged all too soon, and the minute's respite and the grooming by attendants and experienced seconds made Lang himself again. Subsequently it was the visitor's fight till the end.

The two boxers squared up to each other apparently in great heart. Squires jagged round some and fibbed a bit till Lang essayed a left that missed, but a little later landed the same weapon flush on the mouth. Squires feinted and clinched when he might have been doing something, and then he swung to the head. Lang stabbed a good left to the body. Squires bore in, seriously intent, but the hostile left, sent hard to the head, stopped him. Lang's left hook to the chin was a good blow, and Squires retaliated with left to the head, and copped one on the face before he could get clear. Lang tried to put a vicious-looking chop over, but Bill managed to elude it. Charging in strongly, Squires jabbed left to the face, and Lang got a nice right home on the ribs. Just before the New South Welshman hurled right to the head, and the crowd went into ecstacies over the fact. Lang had the honours of the round.

Twice did Squires' left to the face miss in the second round. Then he made impact with right to the ribs, but ran into a well-primed left hook to the head. They were close together for a while, Squires hugging and Lang slugging. Breaking away, Squires bolted in and landed a right on the belly, and followed up with a straight left which sent Lang's head back. Squires' left just tamed Lang's nasal organ, and his powerfully-swung right, aimed at the jaw, almost burnt the air—there was so much whizz in it. Hot-foot after his man went Squires till Lang, retreating, flopped down on the lower ring rope, nearly going through the hempen boundary, and as he rose Squires' right uppercut—sent out on an annihilating mission—tore harmlessly through space, feet away. Squires' round.

The third saw Squires hook left to the eye, and Lang's hard-driven left found the chin. Lang banged his right to the ribs, and afterwards brought it up to the head. Then he socked left to the face, and whipped two rights to the body in quick succession. It was now seen that an old wound over Lang's eye had opened, and the carmine fluid trickled down his face. Wild slatheremwhack work only harmed each through the useless expenditure of energy. Squires' right missed, and he caught a right uppercut plump on the chin. Lang went after his man here, but a right to the chin checked his rush. They were serving out waps liberally when the gong sounded.

In the fourth Lang tried twice to make connection with right to the head, but failed; then he blocked some well-meant ones nicely. Squires drove left to the forehead, and, coming from a clinch, Lang ripped a right to the belly. Both swung from opposite sides and missed, but their heads crashed together with a crash that was heard many yards away. Recovering quickly, Squires landed left and right on the jaw, and Lang rocked and swayed momentarily till he got a Madralli embrace on his foeman, and refused to break it for some seconds. T'other Bill wrestled and pulled and jerked, but his clinging adversary still hung on. When they unhooked Squires endeavoured to get Lang again, but the clang of the gong came to Lang's rescue. Squires' round.

The fifth was a fairly even time. Each scored, but nothing out of the ordinary happened.

Lang was a very busy man right through the sixth. He started out by hooking a very solid left to the jaw three times in quick succession, followed by a right to the ear, and a left hook to the chin. Squires connected with the chin by means of a straight left, but a right swing—all wool and a yard wide in appearance—missed its mark by inches, ditto a quickly following right uppercut. Wildly swung rights from both sides failed to lodge anywhere. Squires drove left to mouth and jaw heavily, and Lang's right bumped the chin with force, and the left followed suit. Here blood spurted from Squires' lip and nose. A right uppercut to the jaw drove him to one knee as the gong clanged.

The seventh proved the last. Squires drove a straight left to the jaw, but a right from the enemy to the chin sent Squires groggy, and another in the belly did not make the situation any better for him though he stood bravely till Lang, resting his left lightly on his opponent's head, brought a short upward right jolt to the chin into action and put an end to the contest. Bill Squires was once again counted out.

INTERNATIONAL CRICKET.

ENGLAND has again been beaten by South Africa on the cricket field, the second of the five Test Matches that are to be played in that colony having resulted in a win for the home side of 95 runs. The old country therefore looks like losing another rubber as it did last season to the Australians, and it has now to win the three remaining games to avoid doing so.

On the form shown in the first Test match which the Colonials won by nineteen runs there was obviously very little in it between the rival sides, while up to a point in the second game at Durban there was nothing to show that South Africa possessed a really better side than the eleven representing the M.C.C. and England.

England had none the worse of the argument in the second match, when either side had completed an innings, and they were distinctly on top when three South Africans had been sent back in their second innings with only 23 runs scored. It was from this point, for the first time in the match, that South Africa assumed the control, and thence forward they were playing a winning game. In the first match it was Faulkner who pulled the game round in South Africa's favour, and in the second match it was Gordon White who was largely responsible for England's defeat.

Having won the first game by 19 runs and the second by 95 runs, one is perforce compelled to admit that South Africa have proved the better side. For several years the opinion has been held by Colonial sportsmen that South Africa are the equals of both England and Australia in the cricket field. That this is now an accomplished fact, so far at least as the rivalry between England and South Africa is concerned, must be honestly admitted. Consolation, poor as it may be, is to be derived from the fact that England, though twice defeated, have by no means been outplayed.

The South Africans have been fortunate in one respect, and that is in finding several of England's representatives, from whom much was expected, completely out of form. Fane, Woolley, and Denton have failed to reproduce anything like their proper English form, and this, of course, has made a great deal of difference to the touring side. The inability of Blythe to take part in either match has naturally proved a pretty severe handicap. No excuses, however, are to be made for England's defeat, and the South Africans are heartily to be congratulated on their splendid successes. The cause of the Englishmen's failures are not easy to trace but, whatever it is, the fact remains that the Colonials have won fairly and squarely, and it looks very much as if the M.C.C. team will return home without the rubber in its possession.

WISDEN'S CRICKETERS' ALMANAC.

ALMOST simultaneous with England's second reverse in the South African Test games, Wisden's Almanac makes its 47th appearance to provide cricketers the world over with their usual winter feast. Coming at such a time Mr. S. H. Pardon's "Notes by the Editor" are even more interesting than usual, seeing that they deal with the mismanagement of last year's Test games against Australia.

Here we are let into one or two secrets concerning the fatal game at Lord's which was the beginning of England's troubles. There is likewise the usual review of Public School Cricket, and a statistical article, which this time deals with the remarkable career on the field of George H. Hirst, the all-round Yorkshire player.

Perhaps the chief feature of interest in the 1910 "Wisden's" however, is Lord Harris's criticism on "Modern Batting." It is, of course, not unnatural that last seasons's unsatisfactory cricket should have roused the critics, but here is the first authoritative attempt one has come across to explain the reason why.

Lord Harris's article is very interesting indeed and that must be our apology for giving this extract. His Lordship writes :—

"I regret to say so but I do declare that in the little first-class cricket I see nowadays I have seen more bad batting this year than I can remember to have seen in any previous season ; and I fear that a bad style is spreading, for I know from conversation with young cricketers that this style is not condemned by them ; and I therefore venture in the interests of English cricket and for the welfare of school cricketers now, while there is yet time, to raise one voice at any rate against it. I cannot see in the contingent factors anything to necessitate this bad style. The placing of the field does not necessitate it, nor is the bowling more accurate than it was. The one contingent factor which I think has induced this style of play and perhaps necessitated it is the fast swerving ball from the off.

In playing forward on the off side, the left hand does somewhat obscure the batsmen's sight of the ball, and if the ball swerves late in its flight there is, I should say, more chance of missing it than if you face the bowler and drop your bat on the popping crease. I hold that one can play a true Yorker swerving either way just as well with the shoulder up as facing the bowler ; but there's a sort of no man's land between the pitched-up ball and the Yorker, where, if the ball swerves from the off late in its flight, one is liable to miss it because the sight is somewhat obscured.

"The new style is an exaggeration and distortion of an attitude occasionally adopted—and for perhaps for that one rare ball rightly—by the best batsmen of recent years ; it leads to a cross bat, and less than the full face ; it is insiduously dangerously attractive when used successfully ; but it is in the opinion of us who protest reducing materially the capacity of some of our brilliant younger cricketers to play successfully all sorts of bowling on all sorts of wickets, and we hope that our agitation against it will have such effect on the cricket tutors of the present day that they will rigorously discourage it."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

A splendid day's racing was witnessed last Saturday at the Calcutta Seventh Extra Meeting. The going was on the heavy side after the rain in the early morning, but the finishes of nearly every race were very close, and great credit is due to Mr. Griffiths for the good results produced by his handicaps. Little Meg, who won the second race, was a godsend for the books, as she was only backed for very small money and her stable, we understand, had no confidence in her over a mile and a half.

The Fourth Pony Hurdle Race set the ball rolling, five going the gate. High Court led all the way followed by Ruling Passion and Piccaninny until after the last flight where the favourite (Ruling Passion) came with a great run and beat High Court by one and a half lengths. Piccaninny was third, and would have been a lot nearer the winner had her jockey taken her round the outside instead of attempting to get up on the rails where there was no room.

Ardea and Scotch Girl were most fancied for the Esplanade Plate. Bird of Freedom made all the running with the rest of the field in a bunch behind her. Two furlongs from home she fell back beaten and Little Meg, Five Crown, Lasso and Scotch Girl came away together. Little Meg got ahead in the last few strides and won from Five Crown by half a length and Lasso beat Scotch Girl by a head for third place.

Mr. Galstaun went red hot for Village Girl in the Mayo Plate and she was backed down to level money at the finish, Not So Dusty being the only other at all fancied. Hopscotch went out at a great pace followed by Not So Dusty, but the favourite took the lead coming into the straight and won comfortably from her stable companion.

Dignum produced the favourite and winner of the Fifth Selling Handicap Division I. Pressy, Mereworth and Palindrome were the first to show up with Singleton and Foudrette close behind. Coming to the distance Palindrome led with Foudrette, Singleton and Abet next, and after a hard race all up the straight they finished in the above order. The winner was bought in for Rs. 1,100.

In the Fifth Selling Handicap Division II. Lady Teazle, Shakespeare and Comprimil cut out the work with Jacchus just behind. At the home bend Lady Teazle held a comfortable lead from Comprimil and going on won easily. Jacchus put in a fast run but swerved very badly under the whip or he would most likely have troubled the winner. Lady Teazle was bought by Mr. "Holmes" for Rs. 1,000. Baritone broke down after going a furlong and was pulled up.

The Serpentine Plate was a beautiful race from start to finish. Morette and Hackler's Bloom made all the pace, with Punt and Longchamps just behind. Coming down the straight, the three first named were in a perfect line across the course, and from the stands it was impossible to say which had won ; even the judge was unable to part Morette and Hackler's Bloom and Punt was placed a short head behind the dead-heaters, which were both trained by Wishart. Stakes were divided.

Kaffirpan, who was sold to Major Wilson, was most fancied for the Valentine Plate but was never in the hunt, Mayfowl next, with a lot of place money for Wild Boy. Winkfield Melody made all the pace up to half mile from home where Foy took up the running, but coming into the straight, Mayfowl went to the front and had Foy settled. Wild Boy came with a late run and finished third.

Little Thoburn's luck was in on Saturday. He rode two winners and a second. We are all pleased to see this plucky light weight doing well. He rides a nice cool race and finishes very strong. George Murdison was the only other jockey to get a double bracket, Firth and C. Hoyt each gaining one, and Mr. Charrington the hurdle race, which he rode in fine style on the sketchy beast Ruling Passion, who was hitting them all round the course.

Miss Forsyth's handsome hunter Karolyi has, we understand, been purchased by Lieutenant-Colonel Brooke for his brother, who will ride him in this year's Khadir Cup ; he will not have much to complain about as far as his mount is concerned.

The C.T.C. have framed a Pony Hunter Hurdle race for the Ninth Extra Meeting, but it seems rather a pity that this race has not been left open as it would probably have attracted a larger field, there being very few paperchase ponies here this year.

The entries for next Saturday's races (the Eighth Extra Meeting) are very good and we ought to see a fine day's racing.

At the Calcutta Turf Club Meeting held on Tuesday evening the following Stewards were elected for the forthcoming year :—Mr. A. A Apcar, Sir Allan Arthur, Mr. C. H. Kesteven, Major-General B. T. Mahon and Mr. Dudley Myers.

The prospectus remains much the same as last year.

The tenth paperchase was held last Friday at the Sheep Pens and was through jungle nearly all the way, and whenever a little open country showed up Mr. Allen put up a fence. There was only one fall throughout the day, Mr. Tegart and Sheila coming down at the last hurdle, but luckily they got up unhurt and completed the course. The course started parallel with the Red Road, then taking a turn to the left came over a Christmas Tree wall and passed the start, then over the Road and through the village to the north of the Road, and from there across Old Man's Crossing. Then came a left-handed sweep through the lanes, and after turning right-handed again the paper emerged at a big drop jump after which it crossed the Tolly-gunge lane, and still circling right-handed came over a hurdle and mud wall towards the railway, then a left-handed turn and the paper returned over the lower crossing to the finish, just the other side of the railway. A much smaller field than usual faced the starter. Blue Bell II. refused with Mr. Morris at the hurdles, but he was soon after the field again, and with a good long chase before him was able slowly to make up ground and eventually finish third. Fermoy put up a great performance, as with all the extra weight he made Highland Fling gallop hard to win and ran him to a length at the finish.

The Pony Chase was won by Captain Gibbs. Mr. Evers managed to get fifth and thus secured the Pony Average Cup—a very popular success. The final verdict was :—

1. Mr. Evers on Highland Fling
2. Lord Francis Scott on Fermoy
3. Mr. Morris on Blue Bell II.
4. Captain Gibbs on Trilby
5. Mr. Glen on Ballycar
6. Captain Lambert on Battle

1. Captain Gibbs on Pathfinder II.
2. Lord Francis Scott on Just in Time
3. Mr. Glen on Marconi
4. Mr. Marshall on Lochmaben
5. Mr. Evers on Lochabie
6. Mr. Radmore on Bess
7. Mr. Tegart on Sheila (fell)
8. Mr. Buckland on Blazes.

The Pony Paperchase Cup will be held to morrow at the brick-fields over the Salt Lake country. We shall probably see from eight to twelve starters. The race at present seems to be between Just in Time, Marconi and old Pathfinder.

We are glad to hear that the latest news of Mr. T. L. Roberts is most satisfactory. He is now out of danger, but they are afraid it will be a long job before he is quite well again.

The Kadir Cup Meeting will this year take place at Shujmana near Sherpur, the first ties being run off on the 28th March. First entries close on the 1st proximo and second on the 15th idem.

"The weights for the Spring Handicaps were out too late last week to permit of my doing more than enclosing them with my budget of mail news," writes our London correspondent. "Perhaps the most noteworthy feature in connection therewith is the lenient treatment meted out to Minorn in the City and Suburban and Great 'Jubilee' Stakes. One expects the Derby winner of a previous season to figure at the head of affairs in races such as these, and for the life of me I cannot see why His Majesty's colt should receive weight from Sir Martin. A horse with a bit of class about him is always entitled to respect for the events in question, and as we have proof that the son of Cyllene comes early to hand, I fancy he would win one or other of them if trained for his spring engagements. As everybody expected would be the case, Dean Swift heads the list for the Lincolnshire Handicap, but despite the fact that he ran Ob to a head for the race three years ago, I do not think Mr. Joel's old horse is sharp enough for the course, and of the top-weights I have most liking for Mustapha, who, being a gelding and a light-fleshed animal to boot, could be more easily trained than some of his opponents. Mr. Ord has taken considerable liberties with one or two of those engaged, Cinderello (6st. 10lb.) and Dalkeith (6st. 8lb.) being literally 'chucked in.' The latter of this pair is, of course, a sufferer from 'Anno Domini,' but the runaway victory of Dark Ronald in the Royal Hunt Cup proves how dangerous it is to act on the assumption that unsoundness must of necessity be permanent. A candidate that is almost certain to find backers is Fiscal War (6st. 6lb.) who at Yarmouth proved himself a stone or thereabouts in front of Promontory, and Phil Chaloner generally has his charges ready pretty early. This is a consideration which should not be lost sight of by backers, for with the racing season commencing a fortnight or so earlier than usual trainers will be at their wits' end to get candidates fit for the fray.

"With Cackler, Jerry M., and Lutteur III. to choose from, Mr. Topham must have experienced some difficulty in deciding what to make topweight for the Grand National. Bearing in mind his brilliant victory last year and the circumstance that he may be expected to have improved 7lb. or thereabouts in the interim, I half expected the Frenchman would be assigned the post of honour, but he is set to receive 3lb. apiece from Mr. Assheton-Smith's pair, of whom I fancy Cackler is to be preferred. The handicapper evidently shares my view that Holy War is scarcely a 'Liverpool' horse, for he has only been assigned 11st. 10lb., and other good 'chasers that I should be disposed to consider unsuited to the course are Moonstruck, Bloodstone, Abelard and Cannock Lad. Judas and Caubeen, respectively second and third last year, are certain to be heard of again, and so also, I expect, will Tom West. Ireland promises to play a strong hand, for though Schwarmer—a good horse if he only stays—and The Duffrey are now inmates of English stables, it is not long since they left the Emerald Isle, while such as King of the Scarlets, Paddy Maher, Phæthon, and Flaxman may have to be seriously reckoned with. During the next month or so the 'blue riband of the 'chase' is certain to be a frequent topic of conversation, for now that the weights are published candidates will be running from day to day, and, profiting by last year's experience, prudent backers will wait to see what happens before making investments on a race which is notoriously difficult to win."

Our Bombay correspondent writes :—The third day of the Big Meeting, over which a certain amount of gloom has been cast by the death of Charters, which we were kept in mind of by the consideration of certain jockeys who wore crepe, came off on Monday. Except for a fall by Ferguson, which did no harm but to his followers, and a minute or two of excitement in extinguishing a few flames in the surgery caused by the telegraphic wires passing through, the day passed without any untoward incident. As to the results, it was a fairly even day on the whole, Mr. M. Goculdas being again successful, winning half the races carded.

Seven went out for the Gaye Cup which rested between three, Danseuse, Lady Nannie and Evening Herald in order. Pantry Girl led out for a few strides till Evening Herald went away and eventually stayed out a run by Danseuse at a big difference in weights. Lady Nannie found the journey too short, making up a great deal of ground in the last furlong.

On his last easy win and improving form, Rajput was in demand for the Midget Plate, but Mudkoor's track gallop shortened him to a 6 to 4 chance. Creditor made the pace fairly hot as far as the bend where Mudkoor came up in most promising style. Rajput, however, was going well in hand next to him on the outside and went away very comfortably from the distance.

Punters were not far wrong in backing Oakton and Gallileo for the Mahaluxmi Plate, though the former's running earlier in the season would give him no chance with a stone less to carry. These two in that order followed Marton Mere and St. Patrick till at the five the former fell back. Nearing the bend the three were practically level, Gallileo outside, and in the final run Oakton drew away almost as he liked ; nothing but these three within striking distance in a straggly finish.

Believed to have had a bad run last time, Tachreet was always in prime demand for the Town Plate, with good money for Lookman and Winchester. It was a splendid race, these three and Hoodaib being handy to M.V.O. till he was done at the bend. Winchester got through without losing ground, but not so Lookman, which cost him the race, as when he got going down the straight he only just missed by a neck, Tachreet third by half a length.

Although it was a disappointment to see Soultline taken out of the Flying Plate, it resulted in a magnificent race. Lumination and Killua commanded nearly all the money, and went out equally fancied from Lord Carlyon and Lord Merv. Huka only showed out momentarily, the last two named leading abreast, Lumination some way back and Killua further out of it still. At the bend Lord Merv went away, and all looked well for him, but Lumination getting through put in a great dash and caught the judge's eye by half a neck. Killua also ran on wonderfully, and was right up to them on the post in a fraction under 1-1.

Many went to get their own back on Bendigo in the Salsette Plate, but there was also plenty for Babil, Vedas and The Pilgrim. As the race was, Vedas led from pillar to post, always well in hand and having Bendigo settled. Had there, however, been no misfortune at the bend it would at least have been a race. When coming round the bend, apparently with a good chance, Babil's saddle slipped and with Ferguson losing his balance swerved nearly on to the tan and the jockey slipped off. This was not all, as The Pilgrim suffered by being taken out, and thus two, who at least would have made the winner gallop, were out of it. This was Hoyt's third winning mount, and there is no doubt he is riding in great form just now.

We turned out again at Mahaluxmi for the fourth day on Wednesday, when the six events provided some very fair racing. Results were, however, disastrous to punters as three rank outsiders caught the judge's eye. There is no getting away from it that we miss those stables we have been accustomed to see here in the past, as fields amongst Walers and English were small. Whalley won two races, carrying off jockeys' honours for the day, but one of these was by no means welcomed by backers.

DOG MEDICINES

MAY NOW BE OBTAINED IN INDIA

In CALCUTTA from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO.,

And in BOMBAY from TREACHER & CO., Ltd.

These preparations are based on the most recent and up-to-date veterinary research, and are the best possible remedies for the various ailments and diseases for which they are recommended.

It is of the greatest importance in treating all cases of sickness in dogs that the nature of the ailment should be recognised, and in order to enable dog owners to do this we have published a book,

"HINTS TO DOG OWNERS"

which is now the standard work of reference in thousands of kennels in the United Kingdom, where it has had a larger circulation than any book on dogs ever published, the demand for it being so great that more than 200,000 copies have been disposed of. It may be obtained gratis on application to either of the above-mentioned firms in India, and everyone interested in dogs should make a point of obtaining a copy at once.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR DOGS.

These Capsules are tasteless and odourless, and are the surest and safest means of expelling both Round and Tape Worms from dogs (or puppies three months old or over) weighing 10lb. or more. They require no purgative medicine afterwards. May be easily given wrapped up in a piece of meat or cheese.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR PUPPIES AND TOY DOGS.

Every puppy at six weeks old should be dosed with these Capsules which may be safely given to even the smallest and most delicate toy puppy. They surely expel all Worms and never cause the least discomfort. Castor oil is not required before or after giving them, and it is not necessary for the puppy to fast before being dosed.

SHERLEY'S "SKIN CURE."

An absolutely unrivalled dressing for Mange, Eczema, Ringworm, and all other Skin Diseases of dogs. It cures Mange for certain in a week, and not only cures the disease but starts an immediate and vigorous growth of hair.

SHERLEY'S "DISTEMPERCURE."

The best remedy for Distemper ever discovered; it reduces the fever and creates an appetite. In each tin are full instructions as to forcing and dieting, on which the cure of Distemper depends so much.

SHERLEY'S "SHAMPOO."

A Liquid Soap for Washing Dogs. It penetrates the hair, which it cleanses much better than any solid soap and in less than half the time.

It removes dandriff, stimulates the growth of hair, and gives the coat a healthy, glossy appearance.

It also prevents Eczema, and destroys Fleas and all other insects.

Opening with the Imperial Plate, Gun Metal was a better favourite than Mandeville in a field of five, but things went wrong. The favourite fidgetted at the gate and got the worst of a good start, being after that unable to get up at all. Koko, Evening Herald and Danseuse was the order, and though Danseuse put in a run down the straight she failed by a short head. Mandeville was cramped in on the rails, or might have won.

Next the all-important Second Dealers', in which Tajilmulook was favourite from Asfundier, the former not being in the race which the latter recently won in such good time. Sulaik and Valens had a fair following and long shots were taken at Lama, Ruston-i-Hind and Sir Hugo. Guinea Gold showed his paces over the first five furlongs from Asfundier and Lama, but Asfundier went clear away to win on his own. Tajilmulook came promisingly, but could not stay out Sulaik, who succumbed to Valens for second place, the latter coming from nowhere. 1-54⅕ is remarkably good time for new Arabs, almost as good as the best of the old brigade.

Of the half dozen in the Exeter Plate, Master Theo was firmly established, Crossbred next with some for Picturesque and Metal Maid. Lord Carlyon set people thinking when he streaked clear away from his field by close on ten lengths. Whalley, however, was never flustered, and, letting Master Theo run on, he came with a rattle down the straight and had the leader settled. Crossbred also came well, but Lord Carlyon stayed on in second place.

Most of us thought ourselves very plucky to back Precious with 10-7 in the Sir Cowasjee Jehangir Purse, but there was only one to beat the great old warrior, and that only by a head. Dhafer fails altogether to reproduce his form of a year ago. He, however, ran better than of late, making the running with Urgent and Famous. Urgent ran rather an erratic course, but he went away right enough down the straight. Precious had been handy just before the bend, and but for coming rather a long way round his final dash would have done the trick once more. As it was, Urgent just got there in time.

Though up a bit, Castalia was again well backed for the sprint and went out equal favourite with Posco, on her run with Paul Pry. The race appeared to rest between these two, and the former was going well in front when Whalley came along on the outside with Lady Spring and eventually won quite comfortably. Even remembering her Bangalore form, this was a great surprise as it certainly was no fluke.

After disappointing twice, Tachreet was again the order for the last race as he was considered unlucky in previous ones. Rajput has gradually risen in the weights, but so easily has he won on each occasion that he was very much fancied. Salanic only lasted to the home turn, Rajput coming away here and, well in hand, once more comfortably stayed Tachreet out. Lookman just got third from Gafal, who has been most unlucky in the running of late. There is now no getting away from the fact that Rajput is the best Arab we have over anything up to six furlongs.

On Saturday the Big Meeting came to a close with Cup day and as exciting a series of finishes as any one could wish to see. Naturally there was a huge attendance, the ring being simply packed with busy punters, who only helped the bookmakers to increase the spoils of Wednesday. This last day has done much to make up for deficiencies during the Meeting, which has certainly provided good sport. Mr. M. Gouldass has again had a great time of it and, though missing twice when expected, he added another to his list of wins. Mr. R. R. S. follows him, and though he has had more than his share of the spoils he has had to put up with some great disappointments. Consequently their respective jockeys, Hoyt and Brown, are found with a very enviable number of brackets.

It was unfortunate that only four went out for the Innovation Plate, Refresher being left out when so many fancied him. In his absence, Lady Nannie was always odds on from Cheeky, but the result was upsetting. Cheeky and Koko made the running, but Encourage came to them at the three and led into the straight. Brown got through on the rails, but Lady Nannie could make but little impression on the outsider. 1-31 is not brilliant.

As open as you could wish was the Desert Plate, Saboog, Desert King and The Pilgrim being at fours, Farick and Rubio next with money for Sun. Without taking into consideration some acrobatic riding, the race was a great one. Desert King and Farick saw to the pace, and at the final bend the whole field was in a bunch. Desert King and Sun were at the head of affairs with The Pilgrim coming from last a long way round. The last named made but little impression but under a liberal use of the whip he stayed on with the others stopping and won by a head. There being only seven runners, Sun just got his place by a head, thanks purely to jockeyship.

Only five went for the Colaba Plate, but the finish made up for that deficiency. On improving form Oakton was at evens, Flaneur next at fours. First Oakton then Lady Violet shewed the way, Flaneur coming second, and when it came to racing Oakton slipped in between the other two and appeared to have the race won, but desperate measures by Whalley enabled Lady Violet to run on for a dead-heat. Owners subsequently divided. City Plate time was beaten, so these two may be said to have came on marvellously.

The unlucky number started for the Turf Club Cup, an open race on form with Sialkote favourite from Eed, Hadee, Hazza and Maghil. Famous and Hazza were in front practically together for some time till the latter fell back after a mile. Hadee and Sialkote had been handy all the time and when Maghil put in a run into the lead at the half mile he seemed to be going well. He, however, was passed by Hadee, who went clear away. Eed was handy but was struggling in the straight and Sialkote had no chance with the leader; Hoodaib, who has never before been over a distance, coming into second place. The first two were thus ponies who had not previously shewn ability to go such a long journey.

Next came the great Byculla Club Cup in which with Fizz out the cognoscenti considered Master Delaval and Pelargonium were too good for a set of non-stayers. Vancouver, Crossbred and Sporran however came in for some support, and they had more to say in the race than the other two. Sporran made all the running well in hand from Coat-of-Arms, and the former stayed much better than expected. At the half mile, Crossbred came up promisingly and later Vancouver came through, Master Delaval being palpably out of it and Pelargonium never galloping. It was a magnificent race all down the straight, Vancouver and Coat-of-Arms being with the leader as well as Crossbred Coat-of Arms swerved at the psychological moment and Sporran just stayed Vancouver out. Head, neck, neck is enough to improve what sort of a finish it was. Melsom rode a really good race, going the shortest way round all the journey and keeping a nice hold.

The Arab sprint had Mudkoor at the shortest price from his stable companion, Creditor, and Vedas next. These three had the race to themselves, Vedas shewing very slightly in front of Creditor, Sheriff and Mudkoor. Turning for the straight, Mudkoor made a move and at the distance a hot finish was promised, but Vedas was still well in hand and held him quite safe in 1-6⅘, which must just about constitute a record.

Despite all his 10-4, Soultline was always favourite for the Mansfield Plate but odds against were always obtainable owing to good money for Killua. As customary, Soultline was early out in front clear of Killua, who in turn showed daylight from Master Theo. On reaching the distance, Killua came up level, and in a fast race to the post had the other well set. Master Theo came fast, just missing Soultline by a neck. 1-13⅗ is flying indeed.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—The final match in the Gymkhana Hockey Tournament was played this (Saturday) afternoon between the two teams that were left in, viz., the 14th King's Hussars and the 1st Sherwood Foresters. The Tournament so far had been rather a tame affair and people looked forward to some really good hockey to-day; and they were not disappointed. No doubt, our friends of the Sherwoods, who went very near winning the Cup last year, had the best team on the ground and they went out strong favourites. But the 14th Hussars rose to the occasion and played a rattling good game, giving their opponents a pretty warm time of it. It was only when about midway through the first half that Walker of the Sherwoods scored, after both teams had made several unsuccessful attempts to net the ball. Time after time the Hussars went within an ace of putting through but the defence of the Sherwoods was impregnable, and when the Infantry men tried to press home their attacks, the Cavalrymen repulsed them, the goal-keepers at both ends also doing some very useful work. Eventually, the Sherwoods won by a single goal to nil and they deserved their victory.

Before the winners were presented with their trophies, General Cookson, as President of the Gymkhana Club, congratulated Captain Becke and his team on their success this afternoon and on the excellent form they had shown throughout the Tournament. He also expressed his sympathy with the runners-up, for, he said, they played a remarkably fine game. Mrs. Cookson then presented the Cup, Captain Becke receiving the handsome trophy and each member of the team a small silver mug. The Bangalore Rifle Volunteers, who won the Cup in the first two years it was played for, did not enter a team this year, owing, I believe, to some misunderstanding among members of their Sports Club, and it is not likely that the Kolar Goldfield will compete again for this Cup on account of what happened in the Tournament of 1908, when everybody, except the referees, thought they had scored the winning goal. The Cheshires who were the winners of the last two years, entered but had to scratch at the last moment as they could not come, and the same thing happened to the 2nd Dorsets. A word of praise is due to Lieutenant Clark 20th Deccan Horse, Honorary Secretary of the Gymkhana Hockey Club, for the excellent arrangements he made for the Tournament. Colonel Rinch and officers of the 2nd Q.O. Cameron Highlanders were "At Home" to a large and brilliant company of their friends during the afternoon, and the Band and Bagpipes of their regiment kept things going with a swing from start to finish.

On Thursday afternoon, the 17th instant, the 125th Napier's Rifles commemorated with great éclat, the sixty-seventh anniversary of the Battle of Meeanee, in which the regiment (then the 25th Regiment of Bombay Native Infantry, under General Sir Charles Napier) took a prominent part, by holding their Regimental Athletic Sports. Colonel C. I. Fry and officers of the regiment were "At Home" to a very numerous gathering, including the Hon'ble the Resident and Mrs. Stuart Fraser, General and Mrs. Ramsay, General and Mrs. Cookson, Colonel and Mrs. A. A. Jones, Colonel and Mrs. Rinch, Colonel and Mrs. Bromfield, Colonel and Mrs. Roe, Major and Mrs. Chitty, Colonel and Mrs. Bremner, and a host of others. Mrs. Dennys received the guests and the evening was voted one of the most enjoyable social functions we have had in Bangalore this season. I must not omit to mention the name of Mr. Stevenson, who spared no energy or pains to make both the Sports and the "At Home" the success they were.

The Sports programme consisted of a dozen events besides a swimming race which was got off in the morning in Sankey's Reservoir, about 2 miles out of the station. The usual racing, etc., figured on the programme. The ¼ mile open race was won by (1) Bombardier Dunn of the 76th Battery R.F.A., (2) Sergeant Ecott, 14th Hussars, and Bombardier Stevens, 76th Battery. The Open Native Race was won by the 2nd Q.O. Sappers and Miners, who were placed first and second, and a man of the 81st Pioneers was placed third. The Obstacle Race and Tilting the Bucket caused great amusement to everybody and there was some smart escalading and a good display of gymnastics. The Tug-of-War, which lasted for 5 minutes and 11 seconds, was won by "A" Company team, "B" Company being the runners-up. Mrs. Dennys presented the prizes at the conclusion of the Sports

THE 10th Brigade Royal Field Artillery hold their Annual Sports on the 26th instant.

SOME local owners are training a few horses for the Madras and Ootacamund Races which come off shortly.

A CORRESPONDENT writes as follows to the Pioneer :—As suggestions re measurement of ponies are always of interest, and as certain proposals are about to be brought up at the next I.P.A. Meeting re measurement of ponies, I should like to suggest the following system :—That after a certain date, which could be decided later, every pony not holding an I.P.A.C. shall be measured in the following manner :—The pony should be measured in a cage, which should have two fixed sides, a gate at the rear end, and an adjustable bar in front which could be moved backwards and forwards, horizontally, and also up or down to touch the point of the shoulder of any sized pony. The pony, when in position to be measured, should have the two sides just clear of his flanks, the rear end just clear of his hocks, and the bar in front touching the points of his shoulders. The actual dimensions and height of the cage could be discussed.

The following conditions would also be added :—That in every station in India, where tournaments are held under I.P.A. rules, there shall be one of these cages in a convenient place ; and that any pony to be measured must be included in the list of ponies to be played by the team, which is handed into the secretary of the tournament before the match, and must be measured not more than two days before the match. As the ponies would be measured only a few days before playing, it would be necessary to have a fixed amount laid down as to what should be allowed for ponies measured with shoes. The certificate, whether granted for life o, not, would remain under the same rules as at present. The two chief advantages of this system would be :—(1) That ponies measured in this manner would have to stand in a natural position ; (2) that the ponies would be measured when fit, and the present practice of ponies being measured on first landing in India, many of which would never measure again under any other circumstances, would be prevented. It would thus, in a very simple manner, do away with practically all the present evils and difficulties re the height of polo ponies in India, and we should get as near the real 14-1 pony as it would be possible for us to do.

THE Indian Cavalry tent-pegging competitions were run off at Umballa on the 16th instant in the presence of a very large gathering of officers and men, Generals Pilcher and Rivett-Carnac, Colonel Crofts and the Commanding Officers of nearly all the competing regiments being present. The tent-pegging all round was of a very high order and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed throughout the contests.

5th Cavalry, 18 and 26 ; 36th Jacob's Horse, 22 and 20 ; 8th Cavalry, 28 and 14 ; 22nd Sam Browne's Cavalry, 28 and 26 ; 7th Hariana Lancers, 28 and 24 ; 39th C.I.H., 20 and 24 ; 1st Skinner's Horse, 32 and 12 ; 17th Cavalry, 14 and 20 ; 2nd Gardener's Horse, 20 and 26 ; 21st Daly's Horse, 20 and 22 ; Queen's Own Corps of Guides, 24 and 16 ; 14th Murray's Jat Lancers, 22 and 26 ; 23rd Cavalry, 28 and 30 ; 28th Light Cavalry, 12 and 20 ; 11th K.E.O. Probyn's Lancers, 30 and 22 ; 6th K.E.O. Cavalry, 28 and 16 ; 15th Cureton's Lancers, 24 and 30 ; 32nd Lancers, 10 and 10 ; 18th P.W.O. Tiwana Lancers, 18 and 32 ; 10th D.C.O. Hodson's Horse, 24 and 24 ; 35th Scinde Horse, 32 and 12 ; 31st D.C.O. Lancers, 26 and 24.

The following five regiments which had obtained over 50 points took part in the third run, resulting as under :—

23rd Cavalry, 32 totalling 90 ; 15th Lancers, 32 totalling 86 ; 8th Cavalry, 32 totalling 84 ; 22nd Cavalry, 26 totalling 80 ; 7th Lancers, 14 totalling 66.

The 23rd thus won, and retain the cup which they carried off last year and which General Rivett-Carnac returned into their keeping.

In the tent-pegging by sections the 36th won with 20 points, the next in order being the 7th Lancers and 18th Lancers, with 19 each ; 2nd Cavalry and 15th Lancers, 18 each ; 10th Lancers and 32nd Lancers, 17 each ; 14th Lancers and 17th Lancers, 16 each ; Guides and 23rd Cavalry, 15 each.

The British Officers of Native Cavalry Tent-Pegging Competition was held on Saturday last in the presence of another large gathering. The following three teams got the highest points in three runs :—

36th Jacob's Horse, represented by Captain Green' Messrs. Davidson, Gavin Jones and Carpendale 12, 12, 16, total 40.

6th Cavalry.—Captain Craigie Crester. Messrs. Oldham and Slacke, 10, 16, 12, total 38.

Central India Horse.—Major Daunt, Captains Hewett, and Told, Mr. Fraser 12, 12, 12, total 36.

Other scores in two runs were 8th Cavalry 16, 17th 12, 18th 16, 31st 20. The 17th had a team of only three. The same teams competed in tent-pegging by sections and the 36th and Central India Horse tied with 20 points each, and in the run-off the 36th won, the Central India Horse 13, the 6th Cavalry and 31st got 15 each, the 18th 10, 17th 8, and 8th 4 points. At the conclusion of the proceedings General Rivett-Carnac presented the trophy to the 36th.

THERE is no reason to suspect that the foursome is growing in public favour—at any rate, in England. In private games, it is practised comparatively little ; and the various tournaments which have been promoted during recent years with a view to reviving interest in this form of the game have not been strikingly popular. In Scotland, the foursome still has countless adherents. Rather oddly, the leading clubs, such as the Royal and Ancient and the Honourable Company, never hold competitions of the kind, but the great majority of Scottish golfers are keen on the foursome, and the tournaments which take place annually in Edinburgh and Glasgow are among the most successful events of the season.

The explanation is, perhaps, that this type of golf is ingrained in the Scottish race ; the youthful player sees a lot of it and grows up to regard it as being of the same importance as the single. South of the Tweed the beginner is trained on singles. All his friends play either a match against another man or join in a four-ball game or take out a card in a medal competition, and he is apt to view the foursome as a variant which appeals only to a few cranks.

AFTER a most exciting "Marathon" at San Francisco on the 30th ultimo, Dorando reached the goal forty yards in front of Johnny Hayes, the Olympic victor. Hayes led practically all the way after the eleventh mile, and seemed reasonably sure of success. Dorando, however, came with a rush in the twenty-fifth mile, passed Hayes, and kept his lead to the finish. Hayes tried desperately to sprint ahead of the Italian in the final lap, but, much to the surprise of everybody, Dorando showed a wonderful burst of speed, and simply ran away from the American. Time, 2hrs. 41mins. 35secs.

Ten thousand people saw the race. Dorando was accorded a great ovation by his countrymen. Hayes practically collapsed at the finish and was carried from the track. The race was the greatest the West ever saw, and will do much towards reviving interest in long-distance contests.

OLD Tom Hearne, the many-sided groundman at Lord's, died last month. Since 1898 he had been ground superintendent, and by his kindly disposition and sincere love of sport had made for himself a wide circle of friends. Latterly he had been suffering ill-health, and had been admitted as an in-patient to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where he died on the 30th January at the age of 60. Hearne came of a family of brilliant cricketers. His father was the famous Tom Hearne, who died in 1900, and he was cousin to George, Frank and Alec Hearne, who played with such distinction for Kent. Though a first-rate groundman, Thomas Hearne, unlike his relatives, was not famed for his skill as a cricketer. In his early days he assisted his father, who had a tailor's shop in Ealing. Then he became a groundman at the Ealing Cricket Club, and from there went on, in the same capacity, to Wellington College. In 1898 he succeeded P. Pearce at Lord's and continued there till his death. Hearne took a keen interest in many kinds of sport—boxing, sprinting and trotting among them—he was a famous pigeon and poultry breeder and an artist as well.

"THE ALMANAC," writing in the Melbourne paper Sport and Playgoer, says :—"I was shown a great curiosity the other day—an egg laid by a cockatoo 40 years of age. It formerly belonged to Mrs. Hill, Clem Hill's mother, and when he was a little boy this cockatoo used to chase him all round the yard and peck his legs. It was a splendid talker, and they did not like to destroy it, so they made it a present to Mr. Geo. Palmer, who has had it ever since ; and now this is where Clem Hill comes in. Every time this cockatoo has laid an egg Clem Hill has made a century ; and after the last egg it laid, a few days ago, Clem came along and made 176 at the Victorians' expense. The next time Hill plays against Victoria some well-wisher of Victoria should buy or smuggle the bird, to upset 'Hill's mascot.'"

W. G. GRACE has retired so gradually from public cricket that his departure has been little noticed. He only played in 1908 in the Easter Monday match at the Oval but it was not generally known until last summer that he had given up public cricket. The public would have no doubt prepared a farewell match for his special benefit at which they could have shown their enthusiasm for the grand old man of cricket. There are and will no doubt be many as good cricketers, but no one will ever fill quite the same place in the popular imagination that the famous "W.G." has done for many years. Apart from his unequalled genius as a player he had an enthusiasm for the game that never waned, and in his prime a stamina that few men have possessed. His career practically closed in 1906, when on his 58th birthday he played so remarkable an innings for the Gentlemen against Players at the Oval. He made his first appearance for the gentlemen at Lord's and the Oval in 1865, his association with the representative match at the Oval thus extending over a period of 41 years. He played for the Gentlemen at Lord's for the last time in 1899, and but for an unhappy out-run, when firmly set, would very likely have finished with a hundred. The great burly figure and big black beard of "W.G." will be greatly missed on all of the chief cricketing fields of England.

It is likely that the present Parliamentary Session will see some effort made to establish a central Traffic Board to deal with London traffic. In this connection it is pointed out that driving of London motorists is a subject which will come under consideration and they are therefore recommended to be on their best behaviour. Some useful hints are given upon the art of driving. To begin with, the driver should start away as gently as possible, not only from the point of view of the comfort of the passengers but in order to lessen the wear and tear of the tire and the strain on the engine. The more imperceptibly a start is made, the longer will the car and tires last. Then with regard to the turning of corners a quite unnecessary and undue strain is thrown upon the wheels, the tires, the springs, and frame generally by rushing round them apart from the danger which is always present owing to the action of centrifugal force especially in the case of a greasy surface. Skidding round corners is nearly always caused by driving too fast at that particular bend. Thirdly, as to speed, a good or bad impression is quickly created by the manner in which the driver stops his car. The vehicle should be gradually slowed down until the stopping place is reached, and the brakes almost taken off just before the car comes to a dead stop. It is an assured sign of bad driving for a man to put on the brakes at the last moment, bringing the car up with a lurch. The two great qualities which should predominate when driving on the road are alertness and consideration. First, it will be seen that alertness is especially needful for the driving of a vehicle possessed of the speed capability of the modern motor-car, for in a case of emergency, the mind has no time to study the various aspects of the case. Therefore a quick-moving brain is as essential to the motor-cart driver as an accurate eye. For this reason an excellent mechanician is often not a good driver, and a good driver is often not a good mechanician: the qualities of understanding the machine and of being possessed of an alert mind are not always combined in one person, though much can be done by judicious training. "Be ever ready" should be the motto constantly in the mind of a motorist.

It was rather sickening, writes a London correspondent, to lose the second test match in South Africa, specially after tieing on the first innings; but there is no doubt that the South Africans deserved their victory. They played like sportsmen all through, and they beat us because they played better cricket than we did. We have got to win the three remaining matches in order to get the rubber, and we don't look like doing it.

I have always maintained that the M.C.C. tour in South Africa did not attract nearly as much attention among the general public as it deserved to do. The South Africans are as good a team as has ever been got together, and if they had been Australians they would have been appreciated a great deal more here at home. Perhaps it is that we are a slow people, and when we know these fine batsmen and googly merchants better we shall be more chummy towards them.

The M.C.C. team in South Africa won the fourteenth match of their tour against the Transvaal by fifty runs last week.

It is stated that Miss Dorothy Campbell of North Berwick, the present holder of the British and American Golf championships, will not defend her title at the British ladies' championship meeting at Westward Ho! in May. She will also be an absentee at the Ranelagh International Meeting. Miss Campbell has decided to remain in Canada.

The Punjab Lawn Tennis Championship Tournament will be held in Lahore, commencing on the 9th March. There will be the usual men's open singles and doubles, ladies' singles and mixed doubles. Entries close on the 5th March.

The Tennis Tournament which has been in progress at Allahabad during the past fortnight was brought to a most successful conclusion on the 17th instant. Last week we gave a report of the open competitions. We now append the results of the finals in the handicap events. Men's Handicap Singles: Moore—15-3 beat Hewlett—30-3 (6-4, 7-5). Men's Handicap Doubles: Won by Messrs. Nelson Wright and Moore-40; Messrs. Dillon and Darling -¾ scratched. Mixed Handicap Doubles: Mrs. Hutchinson and Mr. Hewlett-30 beat Miss Brooke and Miss Dillon scratch (6-0, 6-3).

The Bengal Championships began on the Calcutta Cricket Club ground last evening, and we should witness some excellent games during the next fortnight. The entries have exceeded those in any previous year and include the names of many prominent local players. The first three rounds in the singles will be played off before Monday next when the semi-finals are down for decision. The doubles commence on that day with the semi-finals next Thursday: the finals in both competitions to be played on the 4th and 5th March.

The Men's Doubles Championship at the All Burma Lawn Tennis Tournament was won by G. F. Arnold and Doctor Hayne, who beat M. B. Baumgartner and P. Henstock in the finals last Friday by 3-6: 6-3: 6-2: 6-4.

The Laver Cup Hockey Tournament was concluded at Secunderabad last Saturday when the 2nd Cheshire Regiment won the Cup for the second year in succession, beating the combined 61st Pioneers and 96th Berar Infantry by 4 goals to nil. Details further on.

The All India Hockey Tournament began at Allahabad on Monday when three games were played, with the following results: the Worcester Regiment beat the Fyzabad Gymkhana by 6 goals to nil; the Middlesex Regiment beat the Combined 6th Jats and 37th Dogras by a goal to nil; the United Provinces Police disposed of the Allahabad Gymkhana by 9 goals to nil and Naini Tal Volunteers defeated the King's Own Regiment by 4 goals to 2. Three games were played on Tuesday. The 2nd West Kents beat the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway Volunteers by three goals to nil Combined team of the 48th Pioneers and the 62nd Punjabis defeated the Allahabad Volunteers by one goal to nil. The 2nd East Yorks beat the 1st Royal Irish by three goals to two.

A handsome memorial to the late Captain Matthew Webb, the Channel swimmer, has been completed and is to be erected at Dover overlooking the Channel. The memorial consists of a bronze bust of Webb, surrounded with an appropriate design of dolphins and sea shells, resting on a red granite obelisk, which bears a bronze laural wreath. The pedestal also bears an inscription recording Webb's successful swim from Dover to Calais in 21 hours 54 minutes on 24th and 25th August 1875. The memorial has been provided by public subscriptions.

The 7th Annual Great Punjab Horse Show will be held in the Park, Rawalpindi, on the 24th, 25th and 28th March 1910, entries closing on the 12th and 19th March.

Two big boxing tournaments will be put through next month. The annual Regimental Tournament at Poona is fixed to begin on the 14th instant, and the Ambala Open Tournament commences on the 7th idem.

Johnny Summers, the clever English lightweight boxer who gave Freddie Welsh a hard fight to secure the championship last November, recently met Rudolf Unholy, the German boxer in Sydney, the pair fighting a draw of 20 rounds. Unholy has improved considerably since his visit to London in 1904 and 1906 when he made a very moderate showing.

Owing to clashing with other Tournaments the date of the Lahore Trades' Cup Football Tournament has been postponed from Monday the 7th to Monday the 14th March.

The billiard match at the Theatre Royal, Calcutta, between John Roberts and Mike Elias ended in a win for the veteran champion, the final scores reading: Roberts, 7,000; Elias (received 2,800), 6,218. Roberts has left Calcutta but Elias remains and is arranging several matches here.

Reuter wires the following results of the third round of the Association Cup played off last Saturday:—Newcastle United beat Blackburn Rovers at Newcastle by 3 to 1. The match between Queen's Park Rangers and West Ham United at Park Royal resulted in a draw, each side scoring once. Leicester Fosse best Leyton on the latter's ground by 1 to nil. Playing at home Swindon Town beat Tottenham Hotspur by 3 to 2. Manchester City best Aston Villa at Aston by 2 to 1, Everton beat Sunderland on Everton ground by 2 to 0. In the match between Coventry City and Notts Forest at Coventry the home team were victorious by 3 goals to 1. Barnsley beat West Bromwich Albion at Barnsley by 1 to nil.

Some very good performances were put up at the seventeenth annual sports of the Bengal Presidency Athletic Association held in Calcutta last Saturday. Details appear further on.

The Bombay Open Polo Tournament ended on the 21st instant in a win for the Poona Horse who beat Palanpur in the final by 3 goals to 2, extra time being played to decide the game.

The Infantry Polo Tournament began at Lucknow on Monday last when two games were played off. In the first, the Durham Light Infantry had matters all their own way and beat the 60th Rifles by 12 goals to 1. In the second game play was very level, the Gordons winning on the call of time by 5 goals to 4 scored by the Highland Light Infantry.

After an absence of more than forty years from the Zoological Gardens, London, a specimen of the moundbird, or native pheasant of South and West Australia, may now be seen in the Western Aviary. This peculiar species is the sole representative of the genus Lipoa, and is distinguished from its nearest allies by the length of the upper tail-coverts, which extend to the end of the tail. The female, whose plumage is identical with that of the male, lays from six to eight eggs in the centre of a small mound. There are usually a number of these curious nests placed in close proximity, and the bird lays one egg per day until the full clutch is completed.

With the sanction of the Government of India the Punjab Government has framed rules under the Indian Forest Act to regulate the shooting, snaring, etc., of game in Kulu. In future it will be necessary to obtain a license at a cost of Rs. 20 to shoot big game in the subdivision, and a limit is being imposed regarding the number of head of game which may be shot. Applications for licenses must be sent to the Divisional Forest Officer, and the licenses will remain in force for one year from the day of issue. Each year the Conservator of Forests will prepare a list of rakhs which will be closed to form sanctuaries for game. For small game shooting a close season is prescribed extending from the 10th March to the 1st September, but this close period will not apply to geese and ducks. Snaring, trapping and netting of game, and the removal of eggs and nests of game birds, is prohibited, except with the permission of the Divisional Forest Officer.

The games in the Kasim Football Tournament, recently decided at Lucknow, attracted vast crowds of Indians and enthusiasm reigned high throughout. Several very close contests were witnessed and an unusual number of draws occurred. In the final the Omar Club of Fyzabad and the Khan's Club, Kathiawar, played full time, but no goals were scored, the game constituting the fourth drawn match of the Tournament. The two teams met again on the 15th instant, and when the whistle went for half time, Kathiawar had scored one goal to nil. Kathiawar assumed the offensive on the re-start, but Fyzabad cleared and scored a goal. The teams were thus one all. Extra time was played, and Kathiawar scored a goal. Fyzabad, who had had an extremely hard tussle through the Tournament, then fell to pieces, and a second goal was made by Kathiawar. The Khan's Club, Kathiawar, thus was won by 3 goals to 1. The Cup and medals were presented by the Hon'ble Mr. Saunders, Commissioner of Lucknow, who gave the Fyzabad team a special present as a mark of their hard exertions.

The Alderson Hockey tournament at Poona resulted on the 19th instant in a win for the Leicester Regiment, who beat the 3rd Sappers and Miners by 3 goals to nil. The final for the Hockey Cup for native units was played at Poona on the same day, the 109th Maharattas defeating the 110th Maharattas by 2 goals to nil.

"I morn and pray," remarked an actor, as he left the steamer, "that I shall never have occasion to cross the Atlantic again." "Rough passage, eh" queried a friend. Rough is no name for it. I had four kings beat three times."

London Week by Week

London, Friday, 4th February 1910.

The elections are over to all intents and purposes and sae the Laird be thankit. Many a doughty champion is leaning upon his sword—Mr. Boffin, Sir—not exactly wiping away a tear, but feeling in his pocket for a voice lozenge and perchance reflecting on his bank balance. Everybody is glad they are over for a brief spell, we want time to take breath for the next racket, for we are promised another, if not two, before the year runs out. Stay, not everybody joins in this gladness. There is a gallant little band of men belonging to no political party, whose members are sorry that the fight is finished. They have worked hard, not without reward, leaving a division as soon as the poll was declared and seeking another field for their enterprise. They have made many enemies, but they reck little of that, for their hands are against all men; but whoever else has suffered the British pickpocket has reaped a fine harvest. A few have been caught, but the majority have escaped detection and are hoping for an early change of Government.

The floods in and around Paris seem to be pretty bad, even after making due allowance for the hysterical treatment all such incidents receive in the press and the scare and faked photographs which accentuate the horrors of the letterpress. A Mansion House fund has been started; doubtless it will soon reach a huge sum. Well, I'm honest enough to agree with those who, while sympathising with the distressed French, think that if there are a few spare hundred thousands available for indiscriminate charity, there are in London this winter a few hundred thousand poor devils of our own race who might be glad of an odd dollar or two. Besides there should be somewhat of reciprocity in these matters. We constantly help our neighbours, I cannot remember any occasion of English national calamity which has afforded France the opportunity of doing much beyond indulging in caricature in her comic papers.

However apart from the gravity of the calamity which has overtaken Paris from a commercial point of view one is so sorry for Paris. Paris the gay, the light-hearted, Paris the world's playground, reduced to a miserably bad imitation of Venice without so much as a gondola to get about in. For the robust in health the floods have been an unspeakable nuisance, for the sick and ailing they have been a nightmare. In England we are used for the most part to rivers which are not liable to make panic-stricken rushes on their banks, and in London if a full Thames, a spring tide, and strong easterly wind combine to make the river slop over the Embankment no one, after all, is very much the worse for it. We have provided as far as may be against being caught unawares, and the flood water no sooner shows in the upper reaches than the telephone wires are busy and weir after weir opens its huge sluices to make easy the path to the sea. Just imagine what it would mean to us if the Thames broke its bounds and romped over South London and Westminster, cutting off the Houses of Parliament and the Abbey, reducing the underground lines to mere sewers, and generally playing the dickens with our boasted civilisation. I suppose we should have a motor-boat service to enable us to get about, and we should all blame the Thames Conservancy or the Port Authority or the County Council, but I doubt if we should hear much of funds being raised abroad to help us in our trouble. Not much.

Last week London skaters had their skates ready and momentarily awaited the announcement that the ponds were "bearing." Our good old friend the clerk of the weather woke up. No other sport lover is so sorely tried as the skater. Frequent disappointment is the cross he carries in such a climate as England's. In London especially his lot is hard. Every winter there comes a time when from his own rather selfish point of view the thermometer is delightfully low. The air grows sharp, and crisp, and clean, and there is a steely look about the sky which suggests a long spell of hard weather. But, in the words of the crusted song, "Oh, what a difference in the morning!" He has cleaned up his skates, drinking deep the while of joyful anticipation, when, vexation! out comes the sun with its mocking smile, or down comes the rain to patter a tearful accompaniment to his own bitter lamentations. So his hopes jump down as suddenly as the temperature has jumped up.

This winter the weather has taken even more than usual pains to annoy him. With a cruelty not exceeded by the Vampire Lady of Kipling's poem, it has lured him on to hope just for the pleasure of being able to repulse him. The thermometer has rivalled the weathercock in its lamentable lack of fixed purpose. The mercury has been ascending and descending with the regularity of a tube lift. Or, as a humorist explains it, when the barometer has gone down the mercury has gone up to see what is the matter.

But even mercury, it would seem, must rest sometimes, and at last the ice was reported to be on the point of bearing. While shivering hawkers blew on their chilled fingers and benumbed tram-drivers danced to recover their lost toes, the hopeful skater chuckled as with every biting blast he saw ice-hockey, ice-carnivals, and all the splendid healthy fun of the sport carried nearer. The papers, undeterred by past experience, rushed out columns about skating and where and how to get there and so on. The ink wasn't dry on their impressions ere the rain came. Like one of Uncle Remus' talkative animals we are reflecting that "any moment may be the next." But some of us haven't put vaseline on our skates just yet.

Mr. H. B. Irving presented us with a new Dr. Jekyll at the Queen's Theatre last Saturday night and scored an undoubted success. A good many people recollect the "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" which the late Mr. Richard Mansfield, after making a great success in it in America, brought to the Lyceum. It enjoyed a fair run, and Mr. Mansfield's Hyde was a masterpiece in the uncanny. His version had the sanction of Stevenson, whose well-known story had appeared but two or three years earlier.

Not so many will remember the "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" of Mr. Bandmann. It was an unauthorised version, which he had played in America, and as soon as Mr. Mansfield announced his London plans Mr. Bandmann determined to be in before him. He took the Opera Comique, and declared to open it on 6th August. Mansfield, accelerating his movements, opened two days before him. Mr. Bandmann's show ran but two nights, and few were privileged to behold one of the most ludicrously absurd productions that have ever made an audience rock with uninvited laughter.

In Mr. Comyn Carr's version, Mr. Irving, of course, adopts more moderate methods. He does not dispense with make-up altogether. Hyde wears a wig and in many ways presents ugly features not in the least elusive. He is, indeed, a most horrible object, and has moments when one's spine turns cold. Yet one feels there are other English actors capable of giving just as revolting an account and on much the same lines.

Where Mr. Irving more definitely excels is in his portrayal of Jekyll. Mr. Carr takes up Jekyll's story only when he realises that the portion which he has compounded is no longer certain in its action and that he may at any moment relapse into Hyde. The spiritual agony of the man is most finely given, the dread in which he goes, his horror when his hands slowly become distorted, and he knows that the process of degradation is setting in. It is this admirable rendering of suspicion and paralysing consternation that the great value of his remarkable performance lies. But the tenderness of Jekyll towards his wife is also very beautifully marked.

Yes, his wife! Stevenson's Jekyll was, of course, not married, nor likely to be. In his story only two female characters are recalled, the unoffending little girl, on whom Hyde tramples in his fury, and the repulsive creature who looks after Hyde's wants. This Mrs. Jekyll is blind, and thinks of Hyde only as an evil thing haunting the house in virtue of some mysterious hold over her husband. Miss Dorothea Baird gives a very touching display of the anxieties, the distress, and the affections of this unhappy woman, who, however, never learns the truth, since Hyde at the moment of his death resumes the shape of Jekyll. The play is, of course, melodrama; it is difficult to invent a stage Hyde that shall not be melodramatic. The main attraction is, of course, Mr. H. B. Irving, and the play is almost a one-part play. Still some minor impersonations are of merit, as the Butler of Mr. Frank Tyars, a most admirable performance, the Lanyon of Mr. Elle Norwood, and the Utterwood of Mr. Henry Vibat, while Miss Cynthia Brooke makes a fascinating Lady Hilda, a lady worshipped by several young men chiefly remarkable for their unrequited passion for epigrams.

Mr. Lewis Waller produced on Monday at the Lyric a new melodrama by Mr. C. M. S. McLellan, called "The Strong People." It is melodrama, because the conflict is one of circumstance and not of character, and success comes to the hero, or to the gentleman who is played by Mr. Lewis Waller, because he is a less vulnerable blackguard than his enemy. He is a very unscrupulous millionaire, whose works are threatened by a mob of men. But there is a young woman (Judith Grant) who is much beloved of these men, and who, dressed like a fashionable lady canvasser, harangues them. Murray (Mr. Lewis Waller) meets her, and is convinced either by her attractiveness or her arguments.

The fact that the audience is never allowed to find out by which he is attracted militates considerably against a clear understanding of the play, but, however it may be, he throws in his lot with her and the men, and sets to work to stop the devilish designs of Colonel Pontifex, who is in command of the troops sent to quell the riots. This gentleman begins the evening by arguing about the rights of the strong man, the value of capital, and his duty as a soldier. The others argue against him. Their teachings, however, fail to move him, so Murray falls back on blackmail—Pontifex, it appears, is a stockholder in the great company—and, after a fierce war of words, during which the action really does move a bit, wins. But he is still far from winning Judith. That takes another act. She gives in at last, but not till he has talked to her. It has been said that Lord John Russell once consented to join the Government because he could no longer stand the sound of Macaulay's long speeches pleading with him to do so. Mr. McLellan does not let the audience know whether Judith loves Murray or not. But he provides a good or at least a sufficient, reason for her giving way to him.

Mr. Lewis Waller made a strong, brave man of Murray, although his actions were more often those of a weakling, and he carried every scene he appeared in. Mr. Lyn Harding acted with fine detail as Pontifex. It was not the fault of Miss Dorothy Dix that she could not make one believe in the strength of Judith Grant. But with her striking, pale face, and black, luminous eyes she was always an interesting figure, and spoke her long, flowery speeches with every effect. Mr. A. E. George gave a fine picture of an old shoemaker (the best-drawn character in the play,) and Mr. Guy Standing acted with a quiet strength as the leader of the workmen.

The death occurred last Tuesday of that misguided yet magnificent, veteran oarsman Mr. Charles Stokes Read, private secretary to the notorious Smyth-Pigott and manager of the finances at the "Abode of Love," Spaxton, Somerset. Mr. Read lost his wife—an imperious woman, who directed the affairs of the Agapemone household—about a year ago.

Mr. Read, who was fifty-eight years of age, was a shrewd man of business, and was the right-hand man of the self-styled Messiah. Physically a Hercules, he was also the embodiment of natural urbanity. When he left Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated M.A., he was pronounced by his favourite don "a perfect gentleman, an honourable sportsman, and a high-minded Christian." In the early seventies he rowed on three occasions for Cambridge in the inter-'Varsity race. In 1872 he rowed 5, Cambridge winning by two lengths. His next appearance was at 6 in 1873, when sliding seats were used for the first time, and the Light Blues won by three lengths in the good time of 19 min. 36 sec. In 1874 he shifted to 7, and again assisted his University to gain winning honours, this time by 3½ lengths.

The Vagrant.

Fishing.

ON DAY ON LOCH LEVEN.

It had long been my ambition to try conclusions with the trout inhabiting the famous Loch from which the species takes its name, and whereby it is known in so many parts of the world where it has been introduced and acclimatised. Although I had more than once killed the fish in other lakes of Great Britain where it had been reared, yet so far no opportunity had offered to throw a fly over the waters of Loch Leven itself. Therefore during a recent visit to Scotland, it was with no little pleasure that I received an invitation to accompany a friend for a day's fishing there, although somewhat late in the season. For Loch Leven is a comparatively early lake, and its season, which begins in April, finishes with August. It was about the middle of that month that I obtained my chance, and I determined to take it, although my host did not hold out any great hopes of a record catch as the weather had lately been uncertain, with a frequency of east winds which kept the fish down and prevented any great rise of fly. Having, however, decided to do our best, our rods and tackle were overhauled, and a visit was paid to the well-known establishment of Mr. P. D. Malloch of Perth, who, I was assured, would not only provide us with the most killing flies for the Loch, but would, as one of the most noted and successful fishermen of the district, be able to tell us the lures most likely to succeed under the not very favourable conditions obtaining at the time we had hit upon. On the morning, then, preceding our trip we sought the above establishment in Perth, and were fortunate to find Mr. Malloch himself present and disengaged. He was an old friend of my host's and therefore gave us a cordial welcome. Fishing talk was, of course, the order of the day, and from what could be gathered our prospects of success were not very bright as sport on the Loch, we learnt, had been unusually bad for some weeks past. However, as he said, we could but try, and selected for us a sufficiency of flies from his comprehensive stock.

The morning of our start was a fairly promising one as regards weather, the wind being southerly and the skies overcast but not heavily so. "Just enough wind to put a curl on the water" as my friend remarked as we were on the point of leaving at 10 A.M. for the railway station, laden with the fisherman's usual impedimenta. It would take us some three-quarters of an hour to reach Glenfarg by rail, from which station we were going to drive the remaining distance to the Loch, he informed me, but we should thus be on our water quite early enough, he declared, as no rise of fish was likely to take place much before midday. The line of rail through the country we passed is of comparatively recent construction, but traverses some fine scenery, so that the time occupied en route was given to sight-seeing and many places of interest were observed during the short journey, and it was not yet noon when we reached the Loch. Our boat was in readiness with two strong-looking gillies—an older and a younger one—who, we found, were on the whole quite hopeful of our chances of sport, although they declined to commit themselves to any positive statement beyond that it was a "verra likely day whateffer," and after we had put our rods together a start was at once made for the south side of the Loch, where by mutual consent of my friend and the head gillie our prospects of getting sport were best. The loch appeared very shallow throughout, but this, I was informed, was not actually so. For towards the end of the summer the growth of weeds begins to so increase and to approach the surface in places, as to give an impression of shallowness; as a fact in parts the lake is fairly deep.

A half-hour of stiff pulling against the wind brought us nearly to the south end, and here it was decided to make our first essay along the edge of a sunken bank or shoal which at this point was only some four or five feet submerged, and where the fish were generally more on the move. During our row up the loch no fish had been seen rising. My friend had trailed his line with an occasional cast, moreover, but without any effect, and I had remarked that so far the fish did not appear to be on the feed. Shortly after reaching the bank our first drift commenced, and ere long a good splash and a widening ring on the water at some distance from our boat heralded the rise of a good fish. By a stroke of the oars our boat's course was altered to allow us to pass over the spot, but before reaching it my friend rose a fish, which however, came short and was not touched, and almost immediately afterwards I had the same luck. A rise of fly had now commenced and small fish were seen taking them in different directions with that quick flicker on the top of the water which betokens the presence of the "sprats" as our fishermen contemptuously called the little fish. This was not, they said, a good sign, for as a rule when the little ones are thus diverting themselves, the big fellows are lying perdu in the depths not concerned with matters on the surface. However, each of us was occasionally getting a rise from the aforesaid "sprats," but none were hooked, as they seemed to be merely playing with the fly. It then occurred to me to try an old dodge which I had often found successful on other similar occasions, namely, to sink my flies well. For at times trout will not take the fly on the top of the water, but will sink it first and then seize it drowned beneath the surface. We were now, I judged, nearly over the spot where the bigger fish had risen a minute or two before, and, casting a long line, I put my flies over the place near as I could determine it. I let them sink well and then brought them in with a succession of short jerks and was just going to attempt another throw when I saw a fish turn in the water near to them, but without breaking the surface. Striking smartly I found I was "into him," and the merry screech of the reel and the rod bent like a hoop told me that he at least was no "sprat." He took out a fair length of line and then leaped and the boatmen declared him to be a 2-pounder at least. He fought gamely enough for one of that size, but I had him well hooked and so gave him the butt freely and soon got on terms with him, and after a few more rushes he was alongside and in the net. He proved to be just over 1¼lbs. and a nice thick fish, and I was gratified at securing first blood thus with a fish of a creditable size. Soon after this my friend hooked his first also, which was a small but very lively fish of nearly a pound weight, and again along the same bank I had another and he also yet another, both of them small ones, however, although not in the category of "sprats."

So far, then, the fish taken had not run to size, none bigger than the first which I had landed, and one or two almost ranking as the despised "sprats." The water was quite lively, indeed, with the continual rises of these sporting youngsters, and only now and then did a swirl and gradually widening circle on the surface show where a bigger chap had quietly sucked down a fly, without the unnecessary fuss and "pother" that attended the same feat of gastronomy when carried out by one of his lilliputian comrades. The gillies were very keen for one of us to get a good fish, and on every occasion when a rise was observed that promised one of heavier size, they gently manœuvred the boat so as to allow it to float over the spot. It was then a matter of chance as to whether it fell to the lot of my friend or of myself (we were fishing from either end of the boat) to reach the spot first and offer the rising fish his selection of one of the four varieties of flies which we each had up. On one occasion, drifting thus towards the spot where a good fish had thus broken the water, it was so nearly a toss-up as to the distance from each of us, that we both got our flies over the spot at the same time, with the result, needless to say, of putting the fish down. As the elder gillie remarked drily, "He mun ha' toucht it was rainin' flees all at once." The most educated of fish, however, occasionally makes a mistake, and at last a quiet curl on the water near my partner's tail-fly was followed by a sharp strike by him, and he was evidently fairly into the first good fish of the day. The line ran out freely and the rod was bent double as the fish bored down to the depths at first, but then changing his tactics—owing perhaps to the pain in his jaw—he came up and went off at score for some fifteen or twenty yards finishing with a fine leap in the air which showed us his proportions nicely. This was about his last effort at escape of a serious nature, for thereafter he merely kept up a sullen strain, but gradually weakening and nearing the boat, where within four minutes of the time he was hooked the gillie slipped the net under him and brought him to hand. He proved to be a very nice thick fish just under three pounds and a typical Loch Leven trout. My friend was naturally very pleased at his success, for a 3lb. trout is a good one indeed in Loch Leven, and I felt that I must look to my laurels now if I was not to take a very back place at the end of the day.

Just after this episode, too, as it turned out, the rise of flies which had been in progress since the commencement, seemed to cease. One or two other boats which were out and had been drifting not far from us were now observed to be making away for the eastern shore, and as the fish were, it seemed, no longer on the move near us, we too decided that it would be better to change our ground. It was a case, then, of "out oars," and while the boatmen bent to their work to get us across the half-mile of water that separated us from the next "drift," we gave our arms a rest and set ourselves to discuss our lunch. Up to the present I had four fish and my friend had five including his big one. Each of us had put back several "sprats" whose size did not allow them to be included in the basket, the method of determining this sometimes debatable point being decided (according to the custom prevalent on the loch) of attempting to pass them through a hole cut in one of the thwarts of the boat, of a size approximating that of a small orange. Roughly this hole is some 2½ inches in diameter, and every boat on the loch was furnished, we learnt, with a similar contrivance. If, then, the fish would pass head foremost through the hole, he was at once returned to the water, but if he "scraped" he was duly added to the basket as being of warrantable size. The method is a very fair one, and at any rate it is universally adopted on Loch Leven where so many angling clubs carry out their annual competitions and where some such definite rule is necessary.

When our sandwiches had disappeared and the crumbs had been washed down with a mouthful of "Highland Malt" slightly diluted, we found ourselves at the head of the next drift. The wind had freshened somewhat, and although flies were to be seen on the water there were no "sprats" now rising, but an occasional good fish would here and there announce his presence by a deliberate movement on the surface. Our two rods were therefore soon hard at work sending our flies over every yard of water within reach. We had not been at it for more than five minutes before I was fast in a fish which gave me some fine lively play, and which I believed from the feel of him to be the best we had either of us risen so far, but when landed he proved, as is often the case, to be not so big as he seemed in the water, as he was only just over two pounds weight. Another came to me soon afterwards a few ounces smaller, while my friend thrashed away diligently with only one rise—a half hearted one—where the fish was only pricked and put down. A sulky mood then seemed to take possession of the loch, and never another fish could be seen moving for a good three-quarters of an hour, and a hail to a couple of the other boats in our vicinity told us they had the same experience. In fishing nevertheless, it is a wise maxim to be always on the look-out, and the neglect of this precept was the means of losing my friend a good fish. For while he was lighting his pipe and his line drifting for a moment on the water, a fine smart rise came to him, but with the matches, rod and pipe, all in his hands, he was too late to strike and missed his chance. This was the first appearance of what proved to be the best rise of fish throughout the day, although it was now late in the afternoon. Shortly afterwards my partner's fly was taken under water and two or three minutes of play brought a 2½ pounder to hand. As the first was being knocked on the head, I got an offer in my turn, and was fast in a fish that I knew to be a good one. And so he turned out to be, for he was three pounds to a fraction and consequently the heaviest fish in the boat. In landing him the younger gillie nearly lost me him altogether, for the elder man was at the moment occupied with my friend's line, and the other through excess of zeal attempted to reach the fish too far from the boat, fouling my line and very nearly breaking it. The language of the old gillie was quite unprintable, but seizing the net while I brought the fish once more up to the side, he neatly scooped him out, remarking then for the benefit of his younger assistant that "fules and fush never come tagither"—a truism, no doubt, but one which had the effect of depressing the red-headed youngster to such a degree that it was thought best to "wet" the fish and make peace at the same time with a dram of whisky all round, which had the desired effect.

Dusk was now coming on, and the other boats were making slowly for the landing-place two miles down the loch. We could not, however, decide to finish as long as the rise was on, and therefore half an hour more was the agreement. During this period we had perhaps the best fun of the day. Fish were moving everywhere and we both of us brought the weight of our baskets up, my friend with five more fish and I with four, none of them, however, of any size, the largest, one of my friend's being under a pound and a half. At length the time came when, if our train was to be caught, we had to put our rods up and make for the landing-place. The gillies, apparently well content with our day, put their backs into it on our return and soon we were alongside the little pier and had disembarked, glad once more to stretch our somewhat cramped limbs. The fish were then duly brought up to be reported and weighed, this being one of the regulations of the Syndicate who own the fishing of the Loch. My friend's catch proved the heavier and was, indeed, as we learnt, the best take of the day, as it turned the scale at 23½lbs. for his fifteen fish. I had the consolation, however, of securing the heaviest fish of the day with my 3-pounder. Our gillies were dismissed, then, with the customary gratuity, and soon we were bowling along the picturesque road which connects the loch with the railway, in the dusk of the summer evening. At the station the other sportsmen were found, and as the train came in we all got into one carriage for the short journey home, during the course of which run conversation was chiefly concerned with the day's doings, and the word "fish" if it occurred once in the course of the talk, must have been used at least a few hundred times.

Thus ended my first day's sport on famed Loch Leven, but not my last, I hope, by many.

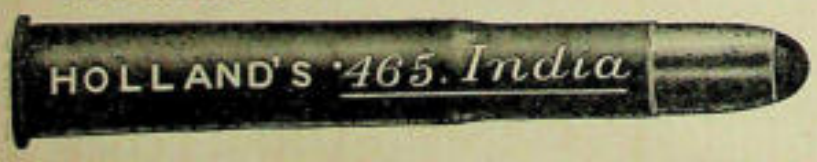
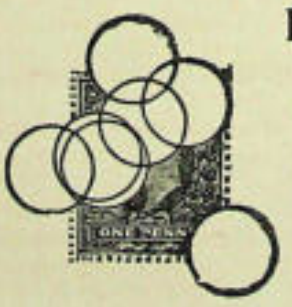
NEW ·465 BORE VELOPEX SYSTEM (PATENT.)



EXPRESS "INDIA" RIFLE.



Messrs. HOLLAND & HOLLAND beg to introduce to the notice of Sportsmen their New ·465 Bore "India" Model Rifle. This weapon has been specially designed to replace the ·450 Bore the importation of which into India having been prohibited. The New Rifle retains all the features of their well-known ·450 and has the same balance, handiness, and lightness of recoil, with the advantage of increased velocity resulting from the use of their New Patent Velopex Cartridge.

"VELOPEX" BULLET

AFTER BEING FIRED

Extract from "THE FIELD" Newspaper.

"The group illustrated was made with the 365-grain bullet as fired from the ·465 cartridge. It was produced at the very first attempt, and it constitutes what seems likely to stand for some time to come as a record amongst properly authenticated targets. The centre of the whole seven shots lie within a space practically 1 in. square (actually 1·00 in. by 1·05 in.) and the reader may satisfy himself from the reproduction of part of the actual target that all the shots would have hit a postage stamp. It is interesting to know that the sights used were of the open variety, and that orthoptic spectacles were not employed."

GREATEST ACCURACY and HIGHEST VELOCITY yet obtained (2,282 feet per second).

BUREAU OF NATURAL HISTORY AND SCIENTIFIC TAXIDERMY,

DEHRA DUN,
United Provinces.

Depôt of Museum and Naturalists' supplies with Department for Ornamental Taxidermy. Feather Pictures of all India Game Birds made by W. M. Hutton.

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

TESTIMONIAL:—

I had an interesting experience with one of your "Lethal" bullets the other day when out shooting with Mr.——. We came up to a crocodile about 14 feet and my friend fired at it with his 500 Express but missed. I put one of your "Lethal" bullet cartridges into my shot gun and fired at a distance of 80 yards. The bullet penetrated and completely severed his spine and a quarter was actually found in his jaw.

Sport in England.

(FROM THE HOME PAPERS.)

LONDON, Friday, 4th February 1910.

THE TURF.

KEMPTON PARK.

IT is the unexpected which happens where English weather is concerned, and whereas nothing seemed more improbable than that there would be any racing last week, a sudden change enabled the Kempton Park executive to bring off a moiety of their programme on Saturday. They must almost regret that the Fates were not even more perverse, for it was a dreadfully poor afternoon's sport, and while one of the six events resulted in a walk-over, there would have been another had not Safety Pin II. been pulled out for a second time to oppose Vinegar Hill for the Paddock Steeplechase. Results:—

WEYBRIDGE STEEPLECHASE—Of 100sovs. 2 miles.

Mr. R. Tyler's Tilston, by Banbury—Clarine, aged, 11st. 10lb. ...	...	Walkington 1
Major Croft's Robin, aged, 11st. 10lb.	...	Mr. A. Smith 2
Mr. Goby's Doggie, aged, 11st. 10lb	...	F. Morgan 3

Also ran: Highstep (6yrs., 11-10, Mason).

(Winner trained by Duller.)

BETTING: 11 to 10 on Highstep, 2 to 1 agst. Tilston, 6 to 1 Robin, 100 to 12 Doggie.

Won by three lengths; ten lengths between second and third. Highstep was pulled up.

THAMES VALLEY SELLING HURDLE RACE PLATE—Of 100sovs. 2 miles.

Mr. E. Gore's Old Nick, aged, 11st. 7lb. ...		Piggott w. o.

MIDDLESEX HURDLE RACE—Of 250sovs. 2 miles.

Mr. D. Clarke's Blind Hookey, by Count Schomberg—Cigale, 5yrs., 11st. ...		Cowley 1
Sir R. Wilmot's Norebo, 5yrs., 11st. ...		Dillon 3

Also ran: Mrs. Charters's Broadside (Walkington); Count Sampiori's Fleury II (Piggott); Chestnut (W. Escott, disq.)

(Winner trained by Robinson.)

BETTING: 2 to 1 agst. Mago Pico, 3 to 1 Blind Hookey, 7 to 2 Chestnut, 5 to 1 Fleury II., 8 to 1 Broadside, 10 to 1 Norebo.

Chestnut won by three lengths; six lengths between second and third, but an objection to Chestnut for bumping and boring was sustained.

LITTLETON HANDICAP STEEPLECHASE—Of 100sovs. 2½ miles.

Mr. S. Hill-Wood's Newsvendor, by Quidnunc—Fair Saxon, aged, 12st. 7lb. ...		Mason 1
Col. Holdsworth's Safety Pin II., aged, 11st. 4lb.		Bulteel (fell)

(Winner trained by Whitaker.)

BETTING: 6 to on Newsvendor who finished alone.

KEMPTON PARK HANDICAP HURDLE RACE—Of 100sovs. 2 miles.

Mr. C. Bewicke's Weather Eye, by Common—Peephole, aged 11st. 11lb. ...		Mr. Bell 1
Mr. Stedall's Charles Edward, 6yrs., 11st. 6lb.		J. Dillon 2
Mr. R. Wootton's Lady Brenda, 5yrs., 10st. 2lb.		Gallegos 3

(Winner trained by Cort.)

BETTING: Evens Charles Edward, 2 to 1 Weather Eye, 3 to 1 Lady Brenda.

Won by two lengths; five lengths between second and third.

PADDOCK STEEPLECHASE—Of 100sovs. 3 miles.

Mr. D. McCalmont's Vinegar Hill, by St. Aidan—Phœnix Park, 5yrs., 12st. 11lb.		Mason 1
Col. Holdsworth's Safety Pin, II., aged, 11st. 10lb.		Bulteel 2

(Winner trained by Persse.)

BETTING: 5 to 1 on Vinegar Hill.

Won by a length and a half.

LEICESTER.

We are told that half a loaf is better than no bread, and also not to look a gift horse in the mouth; so with all its shortcomings, due to the bewildering vagaries of the weather, and quite outside the province of the executive, the one day's meeting in the Midlands at Oadby came as a grateful break in a long spell of enforced idleness. The meeting, fettered like many of late by frost, was released by rain, and then had to run the gauntlet of fog, which was very thick in the town and country-side yesterday morning, and with scarcely a breath of air stirring the outlook afforded by a damp, dismal, dull morning was not promising. However, the mist cleared sufficiently to admit of the first day's programme being brought off on the second day, and all things considered the attendance was by no means a thin one, a representative muster occupying the club enclosure, and the London brigade affording good patronage to the specials from Town. The going, needless to say, was very holding, and it was only at the finish that something like the strength of Leicester fields came to the rescue of a very feeble commencement. Results:—

MAPPERLEY STEEPLECHASE HANDICAP—150sovs. 3 miles.

Mr. H. Sampey's King Pluto, by Ravensbury—Dowerless, aged, 10st. 3lb. ...		Jackson 1

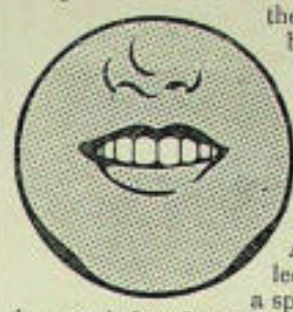
Won by a neck; a bad third. Mint Tower fourth.

FOOTBALL.
ASSOCIATION RULES.



RARELY indeed, is Association football interfered with to the extent it was last Saturday no fewer than seven of the ten matches in the First Division of the League set for decision being compulsorily postponed. Ordinarily in hard weather play is found practicable by removing the snow or by strewing the turf liberally with sand, but the conditions which obtained yesterday in most parts of the country proved too much for the management of the different clubs. A partial thaw on Friday had raised great hopes of matches being brought off, but the frost set in again during the night, and as a climax there came a further heavy fall of snow.

More fortunate than most of the First League teams both Tottenham Hotspur and Woolwich Arsenal were able to bring off their engagements, the thaw in the metropolitan district having been much more pronounced than in the provinces and having cleared away all the snow. Formidable antagonists appeared against Hotspur at White Hart Lane in Bradford City, who early in the season at Bradford defeated the North London club by 5 goals to 1. Yesterday Bradford lacked the services of both Whittingham and Chaplin, while Tottenham were without Humphreys. No goal rewarded the efforts of either side, but Hotspur had rather the better of the play, and would probably have won had not Elkin, one of their backs, been compelled through an injury to leave to remember that of all the duties which we owe to ourselves for health and comfort's sake, the proper care of the teeth is one of the most important.

One should realise—and recent investigations have proved it again and again—that the condition of the teeth has far more influence upon our general well-being than most of us suppose. The protection of the teeth, however, can only be considered as sufficient when the tooth-destroying substances which are the causes of fermentation and decomposition, and which renew themselves in the mouth daily, are also daily destroyed.

As everyone must acknowledge after a little reflection, a special care is needed to keep the mouth free from these harmful substances.

To a certain extent the tooth-brush will be useful for the removal of the impurities from the teeth, but only to a certain extent, as with the brush the surface alone of the teeth can be reached. But as the injurious bacteria are located everywhere—in the mucous membrane of the mouth and especially in the corners and folds where the brush cannot reach—one must use besides the tooth-brush, the liquid and antiseptic dentifrice Odol, which penetrates into the most hidden places of the mouth and destroys all harmful bacteria.

It is in its unique properties that Odol especially excels all other mouth-cleansing preparations. After the mouth has been rinsed with Odol its active antiseptic principle spreads itself with all-pervading effect over the entire oral cavity, the microscopically minute antiseptic element maintaining its influence for hours.

It is this lasting effect, this precious and transcendent quality which no other dentifrice or mouth-wash possesses, that gives to daily users of Odol the absolute assurance that their mouths are permanently protected against the processes of fermentation and decomposition, which, if not guarded against, inevitably destroy the teeth.

HOLBORN, LONDON, E.C., ENGLAND.

the field more than twenty minutes before the finish. Woolwich Arsenal followed up their handsome victory over Middlesbrough a week previously with a win against Bolton Wanderers by 2 to 0. They deserved their success, but the Plumstead goal had a number of narrow escapes, and late in the game Bolton should have scored from a penalty. On following Saturdays the Arsenal have beaten the two clubs standing below the London teams and in so doing have not only improved their own position, but rendered both Chelsea and Tottenham Hotspur useful service. Last but one on the list only three weeks ago, the Arsenal went above Middlesbrough and Hotspur as a result of their victory over Middlesbrough, and now they stand in a better position than Chelsea.

The one First League match in the provinces—that between Aston Villa and Blackburn Rovers—had not only an important effect upon the aspect of the competition, but yielded a desperately exciting struggle. Three times in the course of the game the scores stood level, the Villa, for whom Hampton obtained three goals pulling through by 4 to 3. As a result of this success, the Villa, who have won six and drawn one of their last seven matches, take first place in the League, dispossessing Notts County of the lead and also going ahead of Sheffield United and Newcastle United.

Only three matches could be played in the Second Division of the League, but clubs well up in the competition were concerned in each. Derby County duly met Wolverhampton Wanderers at Wolverhampton, and in a fine game scored three goals to two. With an extra match fulfilled they now lead Manchester City, who could not bring off their game with Clapton Orient, by three points, so that their prospects of promotion are for the time being very bright. Beating Lincoln City quite easily, Leicester Fosse advanced in the table of results to fourth place, but Fulham once more gave a very disappointing display on their own ground and failed to overcome Birmingham, a side standing last but one in the competition, with an extremely poor record. As the result Fulham missed a great opportunity of materially improving their chances of going up into the First Division.

All the Southern League matches were played to a conclusion and the results helped to strengthen the position of the three leading clubs. Southampton lost to Northampton—last season's champions—and fell below Crystal Palace, who, on their own ground, could do no better than draw with Reading. Queen's Park Rangers, who retain their useful lead, had nothing to spare, and their victory at Park Royal by an odd goal over Plymouth Argyle was a very modest performance compared to the great victory by Swindon over Southend United by 6 goals to 1. The Wiltshire team—second on the list—have now a goal record of 65 to 29, and their brilliant forwards make them a most attractive side to watch. Fleming, the international, gives them special distinction. The Albion team won well at Brighton against Watford; unlike Swindon, their strength is due to defence, only 18 goals having been given away in 26 matches. Two teams from the London district enjoyed the distinction of winning away from home—Brentford at Portsmouth and Croydon Common at New Brompton; both surprising results.

Playing against almost the same team of Old Carthusian as Cambridge had beaten by five goals a week before, Oxford gained a victory at Queen's Club by 4—0. The success was well-deserved, the whole side showing good form on rather heavy turf. With the exception of G. C. Vassall, the Carthusian forwards were not clever enough to seriously test the Oxford defence, which always held the mastery, and so made the way comparatively easy for the attack. The Carthusians played keenly, and the University forwards deserve considerable credit for scoring four times. R. C. Maples got three of the goals, and at inside-left—a position he took up after A. H. G. Kerry, his deputy against Essex, showed such capital form—he is proving more valuable than ever he was on the outside. V. O. C. Miley played a robust game in the centre, and Oxford may have a much better forward line than at one time seemed likely. Under very bad conditions, snow falling and the ground becoming very treacherous, Cambridge beat the Casuals—and the only doubt about the side would seem to be the outside-right, H. S. Short or C. E. Squire.

'SPURS VS. BRADFORD CITY.—After a bright, bustling game, in which both sides put in all they knew, the Hotspurs and Bradford City played a pointless draw, a result which flatters the Yorkshiremen a trifle. Bad luck seems to follow the 'Spurs this season. Both Morris and Humphreys were still suffering from injuries and had to stand down, and to make matters worse Elkin, the right back, fell with his leg under him in the second half and so seriously damaged the muscles of his thigh that he is unlikely to play football for some weeks to come. Alec Steel, a young half-back, and brother to D. and R. Steel who played such a prominent part in the recent doings of the Tottenham team, filled Morris's place at right half with distinct credit. He is so like his elder brother that it is difficult to distinguish them in the field. Brown, who filled Humphreys's place at centre forward, was, on the other hand, quite the weak spot in the team, and had Humphreys been playing it is most probable that more than one of the many good centres put in by Curtis and Middlemiss would have been turned to account. A great feature of the game was the superb defensive work of Campbell and Torrance, the Bradford backs. Maskrey in goal also made many fine saves, one in particular from a header from R. Steel being a brilliant piece of work. Joyce at the other end had also plenty to do, and was not so clean in his clearance as Maskrey. In the first half Tottenham had much the best of the early exchanges and towards the interval were kept largely on the defensive. In the early stages of the second half their forwards overran the moderate half-back line of Bradford. Then the accident happened to Likin and the remainder of the game was very even. There were about 25,000 people present, and the ground was in wonderful order, considering the recent weather. Tottenham Hotspur, 0; Bradford City, 0.

WOOLWICH ARSENAL VS. BOLTON WANDERERS.—Woolwich Arsenal made an important step towards escaping from the danger zone by beating Bolton Wanderers at Plumstead yesterday by 2 goals to 0. The Wanderers have suffered greatly from injuries to half-backs this season, and in this match Greenhalgh and Adamson were not fit to play. As a result two forwards, Owens and Marsh, figured in the middle line. The Arsenal, too, were without Sands. Only 6,000 people were present, though the weather was fine and bright. The turf was very greasy after the thaw, but the play was, for the most part, quite entertaining and breezy. Both sides were desperately keen, and in the first few minutes McDonald made a great save from Hunter. Buckenham hit the post when the Arsenal got going, and Edmondson just saved from Lewis. Play fluctuated a good deal, each side attacking in turn. Hughes got an offside goal for the Wanderers and just five minutes later, when the Wanderers were having the best of the game, McEwan also shot an offside point. A fine centre by Lewis was not accepted by the inside men, and then Edmondson made a marvellous clearance by falling full length and scooping out a ball from Buckenham. Just on the interval Greenaway got through and scored with a fine cross shot. In the second half the Arsenal were the better side, though in the first few minutes Hughes nearly scored and Cross luckily kicked out a shot by Stokes when McDonald was beaten. Buckenham just missed converting a centre by Greenaway, and after half an hour Ducat scored with a fine long drive. A few minutes later McEachrane handled in the penalty area and Bayestock took the penalty kick, but shot wide. The Wanderers then fell away and were easily held in check to the end of a game which the Arsenal deserved to win. Woolwich Arsenal, 2; Bolton Wanderers, 0.

Aston Villa, 4; Blackburn Rovers, 3.

FULHAM VS. BIRMINGHAM.—The state of the playing pitch at Craven Cottage yesterday was a big handicap to the players in the match, which ended in a goalless draw. The pitch, after play had been in progress a few minutes, resembled a ploughed field, and it was quite impossible for either attack to show accuracy in their passes. The ball, too, became very heavy after contact with the soft mixture, and this also told against the play. Birmingham were well represented, playing Freeman and Millington, two former Fulham players, on their right wing Fulham changed Lipsham for Walker at outside left, and Burns again appeared at centre forward, this being his first appearance in a home game. Birmingham were the first to solve the problem of how best to get along on the heavy going their small forwards not experiencing the same difficulty as and rebounded out of play. The Fulham attack were very sprightly from the start, and the former with a great shot had the hardest of luck when the ball struck the cross bar and rebounded out of play. The Fulham attack were very disjointed in their methods, due entirely to the inability of Burns to get moving. The big Scot simply floundered about. Dalrymple was certainly conspicuous, and once he was brilliant with a run from the half-way line a beautiful shot, but the visiting defence, Buckley in particular, seldom gave the little sharpshooter a chance. In the second half Birmingham lost the services of Humphrey, their centre forward, who was injured during some midfield play. Playing against a depleted side Fulham had rather the better of the play in the second stages. Twice Harrison worked into position for a shot, but Box showed fine anticipating powers, and on each occasion he saved without great effort. Fulham, 0; Birmingham, 0.

F.A. AMATEUR CUP.—SECOND ROUND.

ILFORD VS. CLAPTON.—With the conditions all against good football at Newbury Park it was not surprising that many mistakes were made in the replayed amateur cup-tie between Ilford and Clapton. On the previous Saturday play was stopped after extra time had been begun, and then Ilford led by 2 goals to 1. It was by a similar score that Clapton won yesterday, but at least two of the points obtained savoured of luck and, moreover, a draw would have best represented the run of the game. The sides were constituted exactly as they were at the first meeting, but they played in different style, the main feature being long crossing, which did not pay in face of the high wind. Nevertheless there was much to interest the 2,000 onlookers, and when Wilson scored for Clapton in the early stages it was a preliminary to many exciting movements. Barclay hit the under part of the goal bar, but, although Ilford dominated the play, it was less than a quarter of an hour from the interval when Mackay equalised after Duce had volleyed the ball on to one of his own side. Crossing over on level terms Clapton, with the wind favouring them, went very well for a time, but their forwards seemed to fear the Ilford backs. However, Wilson scored from a free kick, and this goal decided the match. Clapton, 2; Ilford, 1.

OLD CARTHUSIANS VS. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—At Queen's Club, Oxford beat the Carthusians decisively by 4 goals to 0. The turf was in good condition, though not quite firm after the thaw, and play was generally fast and interesting. Oxford had L. R. Burrows at outside left instead of Kerry, while the Carthusians made two changes in the side beaten by Cambridge a week before. The Carthusians did not play well, their forwards rarely showing to any advantage against a very sound defence, and Oxford had a large share of the play. Sale did excellent work at half, and a pass by him enabled Miley to dash through the centre, a goal by Maples immediately following from a clear opening due to the centre's robust effort. Miley now added a goal from a long pass by Henry, the Oxford inside forwards rushing the defence and the goalkeeper failing to reach the ball. Thanks to Vassall and W. J. H. Curwen, the Carthusians twice came near scoring before half-time, but on resuming they were held almost continually. Maples always very clever, scored with a right foot shot, and he also got the last goal, after having one shot saved. Towards the end Vassall only just missed with a left foot shot, but the Carthusians were rarely dangerous. Oxford University, 4; Old Carthusians, 0.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY v. CASUALS.—The match between Cambridge University and Casuals was played at Cambridge in a heavy snowstorm, which quite spoilt all combination. Edwards scored the first two goals for Cambridge, but before half-time Bisseker obtained one for the Casuals. Soon after the restart Bisseker equalised the scores, but directly afterwards Farnfield put the Cantabs ahead and fifteen minutes from the close the same player again scored, the result being a win for Cambridge by 4 goals to 2. Cambridge University, 4; Casuals, 2.

RUGBY RULES.

ROSSLYN PARK VS. MARLBOROUGH NOMADS.—Though neither side were at full strength, a capital game, chiefly confined to the forwards was witnessed by a small crowd at Richmond between Rosslyn Park and the Marlborough Nomads. For the first part of the game, all through the first half and for a short time after the interval, the Nomads did most of the attacking. Before the interval Biscos and Delacourt got tries for them, the latter being converted by Haslam, and immediately after the resumption Soutar got their third try for them after running half the length of the field. Hill failed with the kick. After the Park took matters into their own hands, C. Dixon dropped two goals in quick succession, and keeping up the pressure McDermott, Purser, and Shennon scored tries. The last was converted by Rogers. Rosslyn Park, 19 points; Nomads, 11 points.

GUY'S HOSPITAL VS. LONDON SCOTTISH.—Playing at home, at Honor Oak Park, it was thought that the Hospital would have a big advantage, but, as a matter of fact, the heavy ground, which became little better than a mudheap as the game proceeded, suited the Scottish forwards to perfection, and Guy's were absolutely outclassed and beaten in the prevailing conditions. The visiting forwards practically controlled the game throughout, continually outmanœuvring their opponents with their short, brilliant dribbles. In the first half the Scots had a strong wind behind, and first Lilly and then Munro scored tries for them. In the second half it was thought that Guy's would do much better, but they could never cope with the others, and Kinross twice crossed the Hospital line. Campbell took all the place kicks, but, with the ball terribly heavy and greasy, only succeeded in converting once, so that the Scottish won by 14 points to nil. The home side has seldom been seen to so little advantage. Scottish, 1 goal, 3 tries; Guy's Hospital, 0.

BLACKHEATH VS. HARLEQUINS.—At Blackheath, in gusty weather, before a good company. The Harlequins were without three of their regular three-quarters, but they combined well, and had all the best of the game. The Harlequins were penalised twice in the first quarter of an hour, but then they began to press, and kept Blackheath on the defensive for nearly all the rest of the half. Bruce Gardener, and Lambert crossed the Blackheath line in each case after good work amongst the backs from openings made by Sibree. None of the tries was improved, but Tinson from some loose work following a kick at goal by Stone scored for Blackheath, and Stone converted. In the second half the Harlequins attacked nearly all the time, and Stoop very cleverly directed the game to Lambert on the left wing. The result was that Lambert had several chances, and though well marked and tackled he crossed the line four times. The first three tries were wide out, and these were not converted, but the last behind the posts he improved himself. Just before the close Maritz taking a cross kick cleverly scored an unconverted try, but the Harlequins won by 23 points to 8. Harlequins, 1 goal 6 tries; Blackheath, 1 goal 1 try.

LONDON IRISH VS. CATFORD BRIDGE.—The thaw rendered the ground at Perry-hill, Catford, a perfect quagmire, but notwithstanding this and the wintry conditions which prevailed, the local interest was strong and a fair attendance witnessed the match. A few minutes from the start Catford Bridge brought a forward rush to a successful conclusion, Walsh getting over in a scramble, and C. Helder converted with a good shot. Hardly had the Irish recovered from this early reverse when another was forthcoming against them, and this also from a forward rush in which Latmar followed up well and scored. Helder's shot at goal nailed by a foot. In the second half the Irish had more of the play, which continued to be of a very scrambling nature, but although they were frequently dangerous they always lacked the finish to bring their attempts home. Catford were also unable to score further, but this was mainly due to the splendid tackling of the Irishmen who nevertheless lost a very even game by 8 points to nothing. Catford Bridge, 1 goal 1 try; Irish, 0.

OLD LEYSIANS VS. ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL.—This match, at Wandsworth, ended in a win for St. Bartholomew's by 1 goal and 5 tries to nil. The ground was on the hard side, but despite this, the winners played a capital game in the opening half, and were so much superior to the home side that the latter rarely got in their opponents' "25." The Hospital forwards heeled finely, and the halves almost invariably enabled their backs to get going. The hard ground was responsible for a lot of faulty passing, but, despite this, the Hospital crossed their opponents' line four times in the opening half through Coombes, Beyer, Neal, and Richards, the latter goaling on one occasion. The Old Leysians, fourteen points behind, played a good game forward in the se-good half, and this, coupled with some very effective tackling, made a much more level game of it, but a rally just before the end saw Brewitt twice score unconverted tries for the Medicos. Bart's, 1 goal, 5 tries; Old Leysians, 0.

RICHMOND vs. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—Although this was largely a scrambling game at Richmond it was fairly interesting, but on the run of the game Richmond were the better side and, as the result largely of the good work done by their forwards, they had much the better of the struggle and deserved their win. For quite two-thirds of the first half they were pressing but the passing by their backs let them down several times and they were only once able to score. Then a cleverly executed bout of passing died out before the Cantabs' resolute tackling, but Beatty, dashing up, gained a try, but it was not improved. On restarting after the interval the Richmond pack went off in great style, and getting down to their opponent' goal line, MacGreggor got possession of the ball nearer the right-hand corner and ran in with a try behind the posts, and Gimson kicked the goal. After this the 'Varsity forwards improved and their backs getting more chances were seen to greater advantage. They made several good passing runs, but the Richmond men tackled so well that their line was only once crossed. Then Pyman scored a well-earned try for the Cantabs and Bruce-Lockhart placed the goal, but a little later Richmond scored again, for Watson ran in with a try for them which was not improved, and so Richmond won the match by 11 points to 5. Richmond, 1 goal 2 tries; Cambridge, 1 goal.

CROSS-COUNTRY.

CAMBRIDGE U. H. AND H. vs. BLACKHEATH H.—In wretched weather, snow and wind prevailing, the Blackheath H. beat the Cambridge University H. and H. over the Gog Magog course at Cambridge by 26 points to 29. The order of finish was as follows: H. E. J. Southwell (Blackheath), 47mins. 14secs., 1; R. E. Garrod (Cambridge), 48mins. 7secs., 2; G. T. Spinks (Cambridge), 48mins. 33secs., 3; C. A. Giesler (Blackheath), 50mins. 10secs., 4; W. H. Nowers (Cambridge), 50mins. 16secs., 5; R. A. Baldock (Blackheath), 50mins. 20secs., 6; R. W. Davies (Blackheath), 50mins. 32secs., and E. R. Small (Blackheath), 50mins. 32secs., equal for seventh and eight places; H. B. Wain (Cambridge), 50min. 47secs., 9. Southwell drew out soon after the half-distance and won easily.

THAMES HARE AND HOUNDS.—Yesterday, over the four-and-three-quarter miles course at Rochampton, E. P. Turner won the Thames Hare and Hounds short-distance challenge cup in 29mins. 29.1/5secs., H. D. Hopkinson being second in 29mins. 49-1/5secs., H. S. Turner, third. The following ran about seven miles: E. H. D. Markham, G. T. Hassey, J. W. Sainsbury, R. H. Watson, F. A. N. Pedder, C. H. C. Noad, B. Hillyard, H. N. Spaling, and C. C. Chapman. Dr. J. A. Voelcker was starter, Messrs. F. G. Rye and F. G. Carruthers judge, and Mr. J. E. Fowler-Dixon timed. The going was very heavy and there was a strong wind against the runners most of the way.

HIGHGATE HARRIERS.—Twenty-nine members of the Highgate Harriers took part in a 7½ miles handicap at Waltham Abbey. The course was in a very bad condition, and one of the last obstacles to be taken was the brook, about 5 feet wide and 3 feet deep. The result was as follows: J. A. Pearce, 1min. 50secs. start, 46mins. 50secs., handicap time, 1; A. H. Fish, 4mins. 45secs., start, 46mins. 51secs., 2; A. Reeves, 3mins. 30secs., start, 46mins. 51-1/5secs., handicap time, 3; S. C. Lathbridge, 3mins. 55secs. start, 47mins. 15secs., handicap time, 4; D. Still, 1min. 30secs., start, 47mins. 52secs., handicap time, 5; T. Johnston, 1min. start, 47mins. 54secs., handicap time, 6.

MOTOR-CYCLING.

A STRENUOUS TRIAL.—The growth of motor-cycling and the interest in the sport were well shown in the first quarterly trial of the present year held by the Auto-Cycle Union, for which there was a record entry of seventy-four, and all but three started. The event was held on Saturday the 29th ultimo over the usual 125 miles course, from Uxbridge to Banbury and back, by a circuitous route, and proved a very severe test for the riders and the machines. The weather was bitterly cold, the roads abounded in deep, frozen ruts, and in places sheets of ice had to be traversed, making it a difficult matter for the single-track machines to be kept upright. The ascent of Dashwood Hill was rendered particularly awkward by a thin coating of hard snow, which made even walking dangerous. Steel studs on the tyres were of little avail as any rider getting into one of the innumerable ruts was almost sure to be brought to the ground.

Falls were many, and one rider was sent right over the handle bars; but the personal injuries were slight, though F. A. McNab had the misfortune to cut a knee. Miss Berend, the only lady rider, was persuaded not to attempt the ascent, and retired. In another part of the course a non-competitor, who was riding in front of T. Silver and H. H. Bowen, skidded and brought down the two latter. Bowen's machine was damaged; while Silver hurt an elbow, and retired at Banbury. To prevent racing, it was arranged that no order of merit would be issued for the timed hill-climbs at Dashwood and Amersham, but all who ascended satisfactorily would be awarded full marks for hill-climbing. Thirty-seven of the riders gained the maximum points under this head. The rules regulating non-stop runs have been made more severe this year than hitherto, as, from the time of leaving Uxbridge until the return there, nothing, except for the replenishment of petrol at Banbury, may be done to the machine or tyres without loss of marks. The following made non-stop runs: F. A. Applebee, 3½ h.p. Rex; S. A. M. Whitham, 3½ Triumph; E. Stanley, 3½ Premier; F. Savoy, 3½ Premier; F. Brown, 3½ Excelsior; R. Lord 3½ Excelsior; F. Thomas, 7 G.O.K.; N. Kennedy, 8 Rat; G. L. Fletcher, 2¾ Douglas; F. Philip, 3½ twostroke Scott; W. F. Newsome, 3½ Triumph; F. Smith, 6 Clyne; H. A. Cooper, 2¾ Douglas; and P.M. Pridmore, 3½ Triumph.

BOXING.

NATIONAL SPORTING CLUB.—Prospects of an interesting evening's sport caused the theatre at headquarters to present an animated appearance last Monday night. The outstanding feature was a fifteen-round contest between Johnny Condon, the ex-amateur English bantam-weight champion, and Willie Gould, lately arrived from Buenos Ayres, where he had been very successful. In all the value of the stakes and purse amounted to £150. Condon, since he recently entered the professional ranks, has made rapid headway, and his victory over Ladbury in the same ring in December caused him to be installed favourite. There was no difference in the matter of weight, each scaling 8st. 9lb. but Condon had an advantage in reach. The business was brisk from the start, Condon being the first to get in with two straight lefts, but the visitor then mixed it well, and in some heavy exchanges there was little to choose. Towards the end of the round Condon got the left in again, and Gould was on the ground when the gong sounded. At the second meeting Condon again forced the work to good purpose with a useful left. The third round was all Condon's. He broke through his man's guard repeatedly, and scored heavily with straight lefts and rights. There was not much to choose between them in the fourth round, although Gould found it desirable to make a good deal of use of the ring, and once, through overstepping just escaped an upper cut. In the fifth, Condon got home with his left on the head several times before Gould steadied him with a straight one on the jaw. The lad from South America came up very fresh for the sixth meeting, and sent in some useful blows from breakaways, but the round ended even. In the next the work was not so brisk, but Condon again scored with the left and right, whilst his footwork was also good. In the ninth round, Condon at once went for his man, and weakened him with some hard left swings, but the South American was by no means done with, and found an opening occasionally: whilst the interval enabled him to come up fresh for the tenth round. He got in twice with the left, but received more than he gave, although the minute's rest must have come welcome to both. In the eleventh round, Condon put on points rapidly, scoring repeatedly with his straight left, but ailing to use his right to advantage. At the twelfth meeting, the South African mixed matters, but not with much success, for he was wild in his hitting, and Condon was always too quick for him. After a quiet thirteenth round, Gould tried forcing tactics, and got to close quarters. He sent Condon down with a back swing, but the latter was soon up. Realising that his only chance of success was a knock-out, Gould went for his man directly the gong sounded for the final round. They mixed it heavily, Gould forcing the work; but he had none the best of it, and after an excellent encounter Condon received a well-deserved award.

GOLF.

OXFORD vs. CAMBRIDGE.—It is stated on good authority, though not officially, that there is every probability of the annual inter University golf match between Oxford and Cambridge being played this year at Rye, in Sussex. It will be decided during April and already the Universities' players are in serious practice. Two years ago an exciting contest at Sunningdale ended in favour of Cambridge by four matches to three. Last year, however, Oxford won very easily at Sandwich, and up to the present each University has won on fifteen occasions.

The selection of Rye is an interesting one in view of the attention which this course has attracted of late. It has recently been extended, and now measures 6,440 yards. Laid out among the Camber sand-hills on the north side of Rye harbour, and about two miles from Rye, the course provides a most exacting test of golf. Mr. R. H. De Montmorency, the English amateur international and a gold medal winner at Rye, once wrote of it as follows: "This course has been described by several golfers as the best along the South Coast, and there can be no doubt that it is one of the best in Europe. A good many tee shots are extremely difficult, and not a few seconds must be really well played if one expects to have a putt for a three. The greens are mostly keen, and more or less undulating. The accuracy required in placing one's drives so as to land near the hole in the second shot is such that really low scores are almost an impossibility. The turf is close, and admits of a long run on the ball, and the character of the fairway among the sand-hills reminds one of St. Andrews."

ROWING.

THE UNIVERSITY BOAT RACE.

OXFORD.—During the forepart of yesterday afternoon rain fell heavily at Oxford, and it was therefore not surprising to find the tub pair having a rest. Plenty of work, however, was done in the eight; in fact, it was the hardest day the crew have had so far. The most satisfactory feature in connection therewith was the return of R. C. Bourne, last year's stroke, to his old position, which he had to vacate early in the term owing to indisposition. He only did a moderate amount of work, however, and on the first outing undertook the coaching, in the absence of his father, Dr. Bourne.

They got afloat shortly before three, and went down to Iffley at an easy paddle, the order being the same as on Friday. Returning, they came back in one piece at 24. On getting afloat a second time Field was given a trial for the first time, taking No. 5 thwart, whilst the President went out of the boat, and undertook the coaching. They paddled to Iffley in stages, and then worked upstream to Randall's Bridge with several easies on the way. Returning to the raft, Bourne displaced Pope at stroke, and they made another journey downstream. A halt was called at the Weirs Bridge, and having turned, they pulled back to the raft, when the President resumed possession of No. 5 thwart, and Dr. Bourne undertook the coaching. Continuing upstream to Randall's, the boat was turned, and having paddled to the long bridges they swung round, and had a hard burst of rowing to the raft, which brought the afternoon's work to a termination. CAMBRIDGE.—Strange to relate, the people who are being shifted about the most in the Cambridge boat this year are Blues, G. E. Fairbairn, the hon. sec. making his fourth change yesterday. In the first week he rowed No. 7 and bow, and then after a long rest appeared at stroke for one day. Subsequently he was shifted to No. 2, and after rowing here for three days, he was yesterday moved to bow displacing Palmer, who had rowed at that position since the start of practice except for the one day when Fairbairn rowed for him. The No. 2 thwart was filled by R. Davies, who had rowed at that seat from 21st January to 26th January.

During the morning and afternoon all were tubbed except Nos. 5 and 6 and shortly after three o'clock the crew pulled away from the Goldie Boathouse and paddled down to Baitsbite in the usual three stages. Having turned, they pulled up to the grating, and then rowed to the Little Ditch at 27. From here they paddled to Ditton Corner, and then rowed up the Long Reach at the same rate as in the earlier row. This concluded the important work of the afternoon. Mr. Dudley Ward coached. Hunting.

THE BOMBAY HUNT.

THERE was a very big field out at Cross Roads on the Melon ground last bye day, but one regretted not seeing one of the whips, Mr H. Blair, who has left for a visit Home. It was a close morning, but dew had fallen heavily and scent for a start proved holding enough. The first covert tried was the Sahar Hill one, and a jack was found at once who made off towards the Andheri road. He was not, however, one of the gamest, as he circled about before crossing and had to lay it hard along the Grange Bunds. Sharp work in the open is followed by a scamper through the Mango Tope. He takes the adjoining hill, but doubles back on his tracks towards Stacey's Tank. Just as he reaches it, however, hounds come up to him and end the hunt. It had been a fast bit of work, and Mrs. Priestley being well up at the death was presented with the trophy.

The morning still being young another cast was made, hounds being lucky enough to get on to another line. We had another half hour's sport, but the jack was not one who cared for the open and most of the run was amongst the trees. From Jack Symons's Hill he made towards the railway, was headed back and entered the Mango Tope. Over Sunday Hill he led along to Marole Village, but when a good run promised in the valley hounds suddenly lost all traces of scent.

Only a small field was out on Tuesday when the meet was at Jackal Hill, and, though at first it looked as though there would be no run at all, we finally had quite a good one of about half an hour. A cast was made on the hill side, but the line was stale and the Chockla woods were seemingly untenanted. The Mango Tope was the same, and it remained to the credit of the covert near the Tubi water main to give us our runs. Breaking out into the open, hounds hunt the varmint across the awkward stony nullah and round to the Backwater. Reluctant to take the water, he turns in a line for Sahar, past the village and in Vakola direction. As he makes off towards Coorla hounds are hot on him, but once more jibbing at the water he runs along the banks. At a narrow part he takes the plunge, but a sharp burst into the quarries on the opposite side ends in his being bowled over. The officials are there, but the rest are content to look on at a distance without crossing.

Thursday's rendez-vous was at Santa Cruz, the morning being a cool and promising one. A big field made an early move to Sahar Hill and it was not long before they were in full swing. Bad going was experienced along the water pipe and a slight check at Andheri road, but from there all went well. Taking a circle round the Mango Tope and Sunday Hill, the jack led into the open and reached the Vehar Hills. Running him right along the range, hounds killed at the other end. The brush went to Mrs. Cuthbah.

NATIVE CAVALRY TOURNAMENT.

Second Round.

15th LANCERS vs. 26th LIGHT CAVALRY.—Played on the 15th instant. The 26th were expected to have an easy win but the 15th played remarkably well and were only beaten in a well-fought game by 5 goals to 4 after extra time had been played.

First Chukker.—The 26th did most of the attacking, but could not break their opponent's defence, the chukker ending without score.

Second Chukker.—The 26th scored through Moir. Then the 15th attacked, but their shot went wide and Popham getting away in possession hit a second goal for the 26th.

Third Chukker.—Midfield play till Popham got on and transferred to Henderson who put it through. The 15th were next to attack and Hallowes registered their first point.

Fourth Chukker.—The 15th had all the best of this period. They were on the offensive throughout, scoring two goals and missing several chances.

Fifth Chukker.—With the score three all, both teams played vigorously and a fast chukker was witnessed. Henderson eventually got away and scored for the 26th.

Sixth Chukker.—Midfield play till Baddeley got on and equalised. The subsequent play being in favour of the 15th, but they failed to score and the period closed with the score 4 all.

Extra Chukker.—The goals were widened and play continued, the 26th scoring the winning goal a couple of minutes after the start. Teams:—

Umpires:—Captain Souter and Mr. Leslie Cheape.

8TH CAVALRY vs. 11TH K. E. O LANCERS.—The game was played simultaneously with the one reported above, a very level fight being witnessed. The scores were level at the call of time and an extra allowance was played to decide the game, the 11th Lancers securing the winning point.

First Chukker.—The 11th pressed, and after a penalty shot had failed Sherston hit a goal, the remaining play being up and down the field.

Second Chukker.—The 8th attacked and after Blood had missed, Lane got the ball and hit it through. The 11th then took up the offensive but their opponents cleared, and Blood once more ran down, nothing resulting.

Third Chukker.—A scrimmage in front of the 8th's goal out of which Hartley scored. The same player added another goal shortly after. Play continued fast all over the ground till the 8th got away and scored.

Fourth Chukker.—The 8th had the best of this period and though they secured nothing from a penalty for hitting behind, a free hit for a foul shortly after enabled Chaplin to equalise.

Fifth Chukker.—Fast up and down play, both goals visited without success.

Sixth Chukker.—After one unsuccessful run, Hartley got on and scored. The 8th nothing daunted kept playing pluckily and equalised, the period closing with the scores level.

Extra Chukker.—Extra time was played, Hartley scoring the winning goal for the Lancers who won by 5 goals to 4. Teams:—

Umpires:—Major Maxwell and Mr. Goldie.

6TH K. E. O. CAVALRY vs. 19TH C. I. HORSE.—This game on the 15th instant was practically a walk over for the 19th, who won by 10 goals to 1.

First Chukker.—The 19th attacked all through this period and scored twice, Mahomed Bahadur Khan drawing first blood, and Colonel Watson following it up with another goal.

Second Chukker.—Up and down play till the 39th got away. The Jemadar's shot went wide but Hewlett was next in possession and made no mistake. Mahomed Bahadur was again conspicuous but shot wide. The 39th, however, continued to press and Watson hit another goal.

Third Chukker.—Play was almost entirely in the 6th's territory and the C. I Horse scored three times. The 6th got away on one occasion and were rewarded with a goal.

Fourth Chukker.—Up and down play followed by an attack on the 6th's goal, the 39th adding two goals to their score.

Fifth Chukker.—The 6th were on the offensive during the major portion of this chukker but the period ended blank.

Sixth Chukker.—The 39th rushed down and Bahadur Khan put through. This was the last of the scoring, play during the remainder of the game being up and down the field. Final Score 39th C. I. Horse, 10 goals: 6th Cavalry, 1 goal. Teams—

Umpires.—Captain Wickham and Mr. Wienholt

17TH CAVALRY vs. 36TH JACOB'S HORSE.—This game completed the second round and was a very well contested bout, Jacob's Horse eventually winning by 4 goals to 2.

First Chukker.—Up and down play. Allardice rushed away and opened the scoring, an attempt to equalise by the 17th going out wide.

Second Chukker.—Very level play all over the field, both goals were visited but whereas the 36th were successful with a long shot, the 17th's effort went wide.

Third Chukker.—The 17th made a determined attack and though they were kept out for some time, Barge eventually put the ball through. Then the 36th got away and Gavin Jones scored.

Fourth Chukker.—Fast play, the 36th after two unsuccessful runs scoring through Farquhar.

Fifth Chukker.—The 17th pressed vigorously and Dodd scored. They were next awarded a penalty shot for a foul and failed to improve on it, but continued the attack to the close of the period.

Sixth Chukker.—A foul against the 17th, the penalty shot proving abortive. Offside against the 17th, their opponents again failing to improve on the penalty hit. Midfield play closed the game with the score, 36th Jacob's, Horse 4 goals; 17th Cavalry 1 goal Teams:—

Semi-finals.

11TH K. E. O. LANCERS vs. 26TH P.W.O. LIGHT CAVALRY.—This was the first of the semi-final games played on the 17th instant in the presence of a large gathering of spectators. The game was very level during the first two chukkers; thereafter the 26th did most of the attacking and ran out victorious by 9 goals to 3

First Chukker.—Each goal was visited in turn the 26th scoring the first point. The 11th were not long in equalising and keeping up the pressure hit another goal from a melee.

Second Chukker.—The 11th ran down but failed to score and the ball was returned to their lines where a great struggle resulted in the 26th drawing level. The 11th were next away and again took the lead but the 26th then took up the attack and scoring a goal, the chukker ended with the score 3 all.

Third Chukker.—Up and down play, Moir hitting a goal after an unsuccessful attempt by Popham. The 11th pressed and failed to improve on a penalty hit and the 26th taking up the attack scored another goal

Fourth Chukker.—Play centred in the Lancers' territory and the 26th scored no less than four goals in quick succession Midfield play followed and then the Lancers had a run and a good shot was only just cleared.

Fifth Chukker.—The 26th pressed but could not break through the Lancers' defence and the chukker ended without score.

Sixth Chukker.—Sherston made two fine runs but was prevented from scoring and play was transferred to the 11ths' territory but nothing further resulted. Final score: 26th, 9 goals; 11th, 3 goals. Teams as before

Umpires.—Major Maxwell and Mr. Goldie.

36TH JACOB'S HORSE vs. 39TH C. I. HORSE.—The Central India Horse were expected to win easily but the 36th put up a splendid game. The score was two all at the close of the fifth period and the local team were only beaten in the end by a single goal.

First Chukker.—Midfield play was followed by a run by Watson and after a prolonged attack Hewlett scored. Allardice next got away and the C. I Horse had to hit behind to save.

Second Chukker.—Nothing came of the penalty hit but another given against the 39th enabled Gavin Jones to equalise. The 39th pressed vigorously, but the opposing defence was not to be broken.

Third Chukker.—The C. I. Horse attacked throughout this period and had several attempts to score but the 36th defended in wonderful style and their opponents only scored once, Bahadur Khan putting through.

Fourth Chukker.—Another exhibition of fine defence by the 36th. Score unchanged.

Fifth Chukker.—Bahadur Khan was hit on the hand and had to retire, Fraser taking his place. Midfield play till the 36th ran down and were awarded a penalty for a cross: nothing came of it. The 36th continued to attack and after three attempts the ball was put through and the score stood 2 all.

Sixth Chukker.—The C. I. Horse attacked and failed to improve upon two successive penalty hits. The 36th then attacked and were still pressing when the bugle sounded full time. The ball being in play the game continued for a couple of minutes when the 39th hit the winning goal. Final Score: 39th C. I. H. 3 goals; 36th, 2 goals. Teams as before.

Umpires.—Major Maxwell and Captain Hallowes.

Final.

26TH P. W. O. LIGHT CAVALRY vs. 39TH C. I. HORSE.—A big gathering assembled on the polo ground at Umballa on Saturday last to witness the final game in the tournament between the above teams. The 36th Cavalry were "At Home" and their fine band was in attendance. At the conclusion of the game General Pilcher gave away the Challenge Cup to the winning team and also the set of cups presented by General Wodehouse. The game was well contested but the C. I. Horse had the best of the closing stages and eventually won by 5 goals to 3.

First Chukker.—The C. I. Horse pressed and hit a goal. A penalty to the 26th was not improved upon but shortly after a similar advantage was awarded the 39th and Watson hit a second goal.

Second Chukker.—The 26th attacked all through this period and successful hits by Moir and Chaytor brought the score level at 2 all.

Third Chukker.—Fast up and down play. The C. I. Horse lost two opportunities of adding to their total. Score unchanged.

Fourth Chukker.—A run by the 26th proved unsuccessful and the 39th getting possession Hewlett came away and scored. Watson following this up with another goal. The C. I. Horse continued to press for the rest of the chukker and missed three shots at goal.

Fifth Chukker.—The 26th pressed at the start but play was transferred to the other end where another goal was scored while Moir was in trouble with his pony. Play followed all over the ground, the period closing with a good run by Bahadur Khan, his final shot going out wide.

Sixth Chukker.—Midfield play till Popham got away and scored, all further efforts on the part of the 26th proving unsuccessful, a penalty hit in their favour also giving them no further advantage. Final Score: 39th C. I. Horse, 5 goals; 26th L. C. 3 goals. Teams as before.

Umpires.—Majors Maxwell and Fagan.

BOMBAY SENIOR TOURNAMENT.

On Friday the preliminary round, being also the semifinal, was played in connection with the Bombay Open Polo Tournament. It was not very encouraging to find only four entrants, and though the second game was of a level description with play fast, the form all round is scarcely up to Open standard, as compared with the Junior. Were in fact a match to be made between the winners of the two divisions it would be no surprise to see the 33rd Cavalry win again. Thus the interest lies in the fact that the final should be well contested, and that the methods of the two left in are somewhat different.

The first game was between Palanpur and Bhavnagar, the former having the services of a capable back in Major Martin and No 1 in Captain Greig, who opened up the game for the other two with their dash. In the first half it was anybody's game with the score one all, but it suddenly took a turn and Palanpur simply hemmed their opponents in. Greig scored no less than four times, and goals by Talley Mahomed and Major Martin brought the final to 9-1.

Better all round form was seen when last year's winners met the 13th Hussars, both being well mounted and playing a very fast and exciting game. Contrary to the former one, it seemed at first as though the Poona Horse were in for an easy win as Captain Lucas put in three times in the first two chukkers Baley then reduced the lead, but the Horse were on the offensive again and should have added more goals. The 13th, however, kept them out and shortly before the bugle Capt. Hamilton Grace put through for them. Another chukker would have been acceptable, but as it was the Poona Horse won by 8—2.

Lieutenant Colonel J. S. Fortes umpired both games with Richmond Captain in the first and Capt Hodgson in the second

The final played on Monday last was won by the Poona Horse by 3 goals to 2. Details in our next issue.

INFANTRY TOURNAMENT. LUCKNOW.

This tournament, which opened on the Mahomed Bagh ground, Lucknow, on the 21st instant, has attracted only four teams. The two games played in the first round resulted in the Durhams defeating the 60th Rifles by the wide margin of 12 goals to 1, and the Gordons beating the Highland Light Infantry by 5 goals to 4, the deciding goal being converted by the Gordons from a penalty hit on the call of time. The final takes place on Wednesday, the 23rd instant. Details:—

SEVENTEENTH MEETING.

Saturday, 19th February 1910.

The Seventeenth Annual Sports of the Bengal Presidency Athletic Association were held on the Calcutta Cricket Club ground in the Eden Gardens last Saturday. We never remember to have seen quite such a small attendance in the higher priced seats. This was probably due to the fact that whereas in former years a subscriber of 5 rupees could bring in a large number of lady relatives or friends—this year ladies were not admitted free. The cheap enclosures were however well patronised. In every other particular the sports were a great success: entries were as large as last year the competition keen and some of the performances excellent. Among the Amateurs Mr. R. H. Leadon was the most prominent athlete: he won the 100 yards Championship and was second in the 220 yards and Quarter mile Championship. Representing the Calcutta Boys' School Old Boys and scoring 26 points he alone carried off the newly instituted Minto Challenge Shield for the Club obtaining the most points in the five Amateur Championship events. Leadon is only seventeen years old, and has performed creditably at these Sports in previous years: in 1907 he won the Schools' 100 yards in 11⅕sec., very good timing for a boy under 14 and equal to the Schools' record for this event. Last year Leadon won the Schools' 220. He has come on a great deal since the last meeting and will probably give even a better account of himself next year. Lieutenant A. K. Tillard was in excellent form and after running third in the 100 yards he won the 220 and also the 150 yards handicap from 4 yards in 15⅕secs. The Quarter mile Championship was won by the holder, Lieutenant N. I. Whitty of the West Kents, and the half mile by Lieutenant Tee of the Royal Irish, who walked in the last 10 yards. The 300 yards handicap was not very successful, Nicholls from 20 yards had an easy win, the back markers being unable to get up. The high jump only brought out three competitors, Mahor being the only one to clear 5 feet 5 inches. The hurdles handicap was a very poor exhibition, none of the candidates having much idea of hurdling.

The British Army Championship Shield was won by the Royal Irish Rifles, mainly due to the exertions of Sergeant Miller, who won the 100 yards in 10⅕secs., which equals British Army record time, and the Quarter mile, while his fine running in the relay race gave this event to his regiment and secured them the Championship by one point from the King's Regiment, who won the 1,000 yards, and mile with Private Roberts, third in the 100 yards, and second in the relay race. The Oxford and Buckinghamshire Regiment also performed creditably, providing second in the 100, 440, 600, and 1,000 yards and third in the mile. The 600 yards went to Lance-Corporal Allen of the Seaforth Highlanders. The Native Troops as usual gave us some excellent racing, the Shield this year being carried off by the 93rd Burma Infantry, who with Imam Din won the 440 yards, and second in the half mile, while Bagh Singh finished third in the hundred. Our cheery friend, Bugle Major Jamal Din, won the half mile in fine style, lowering the previous record which stands to his credit by ⅕sec. He was also second in the ¼ just beaten in a tight finish. The 100 yards record was also broken, Sepoy Sher Jang of the 33rd Punjabis taking ⅕ of a second of the previous best established by him last year.

The Schools' Shield remains in possession of St. Xavier's College, who carried all before them. They won the 100 yards in 11⅕ (equals School record,) were placed first and second in the Quarter mile, while their representatives dead-heated for first place in the 220 yards. They thus scored 50 points against 7 registered by the next school!

The Tug-of-War this year failed to attract, the 8th Mountain Battery being the only entrants. A strong wind in favour of the runners on Friday accounts for some of the very fine timings in the preliminary heats. Details:—

Ballygunge vs. Dalhousie.—Played at Ballygunge on Sunday last, when the home team put together the huge score of 418, a total that, so far as can be traced, constitutes the Club "Record". Scores of over 350 have been fairly common within the last few years, but even in the memory of "the oldest inhabitant," the Club Mali, who has seen nearly 40 years service, the fourth century has never been topped at Ballygunge; Cooch Behar's team, at Woodlands, only a few weeks ago, took 472 for the loss of 7 wickets, and some three or four seasons back, the Calcutta C.C. at the Eden Gardens, put up 393, both against the Club, these being apparently the two highest scores, up to last week, in which Ballygunge have figured. Unfortunately prior to 1895, there are no records extant but it is very im probable that before that date, any bigger total was put up; the Club has probably been stronger during the last few years than it ever was before, better class cricket has been played and wickets have certainly been truer.

Winning the toss, Dalhousie decided to bat first, but until Wickens and Elliott got together, nothing of a stand was made these two, however, took the score from 59 for seven to 108 for eight, when the latter was run out, and the last two men failing to score, the innings closed for 111. Sayres proved the most successful bowler, his six wickets costing only 31 runs.

On Ballygunge going in, a very different state of affairs prevailed, and although Horncastle only made 15, Yeoman, Skinner Frost, Sharman and Pope all treated the bowling with merciless severity. Skinner was top scored with 113, Frost being a good second with 99; the former was lucky in being very badly missed when he had made only 15, and again when 18, but thereafter he hit as only Skinner can, finally allowing himself to be stumped with feet to spare. Frost's was a much quieter display, and he was distinctly unlucky in just missing the coveted three figures by one run; both Sharman and Pope made their runs in excellent style, the latter scoring very fast, in fact the whole 418 runs were made in about three hours and a quarter, average of 125 an hour.

WINCHESTER

.22 CALIBER RIM FIRE CARTRIDGES

Winchester .22 Caliber Rim Fire Cartridges, loaded with either Black or Smokeless Powder are unequalled for accuracy and uniformity in shooting. The explanation of their superiority is a simple one: it is the care taken in the making. All Winchester bullets are swaged by machinery which makes them uniform in size, weight and density. In loading, the bullet is seated so that its axis coincides with that of the barrel of the rifle. That means accuracy. The Winchester Greaseless Bullet, which is a feature of Winchester .22 Caliber Smokeless Powder Cartridges, makes them clean to handle and prevents the powder from losing its strength. Try them next time. Ask for Winchester Make—the Red W Brand.

Jeffery's ·600-Bore Rifles are the most powerful big game weapons obtainable, the striking force of the bullet being about 8,700 ft. lb, whereas a 4-Bore bullet with 14 drs. of Black Powder hits with a force of 7,000lb. These rifles are all made with the Under Lever Snap Action, so as to ensure ease and rapidity in loading. The Top Lever Action with such heavy cartridges is liable to jam and often difficult to open.

Hockey.

THE LAVER TOURNAMENT.

2nd Round.

SECUNDERABAD GYMKHANA vs. 2ND CHESHIRES.—Played on the 14th February the Cheshires winning by 5 goals to nil. They played a very fast game and, pressing throughout the first half, scored 2 goals; the Gymkhana goal was subjected to a heavy bombardment but all other attempts to score went wide. The Cheshires kept their opponents busy defending on resuming and putting on three more goals won as stated. Pickering (2), Freeman (2) and Whitlow were responsible for the scoring.

R.F.A. vs. SECUNDERABAD COMBINED "B." TEAM.—These teams met on the 15th instant the combined team putting up quite a good game against their stronger opponents. They were, however, unable to pierce the Gunners' defence, while the Artillerymen scored on four occasions, three times in the first half and once after the interval.

Semi finals.

61ST PIONEERS AND 96TH BERAR INFANTRY vs. SECUNDERABAD COMBINED "A." TEAM.—A large crowd assembled on the 11th instant to witness the match in the Semi finals between the above teams. The Secunderabad Combined were unable to reproduce the form they had shown against the 13th Hussars and were beaten by 4 goals to nil. The military team did all the attacking and, but for a fine display by the opposing backs and goalkeeper, would have scored oftener.

CHESHIRE REGIMENT vs. R.F.A.—This game on the 17th instant was won by the Cheshires by a goal to nil. The score scarcely represents the run of the play, for the Cheshires were by far the superior team and pressing throughout were unlucky not to score on several occasions. The Artillery custodian gave a brilliant exhibition and saved his charge time and again.

Final.

61ST PIONEERS AND 96TH BERAR INFANTRY vs. 2ND CHESHIRE REGIMENT.—The final in the Tournament was played on Saturday, the 19th instant, when the Cheshires won as was expected. They had the best of the first half and scored 2 goals, Pickering netting the first and a penalty bully enabling Freeman to register the second. The second moiety was very evenly contested, but in spite of all their efforts the combined team were unable to score and the Cheshires thus won by 2 goals to nil. Mrs. Keary gave away the cup after the game and proceedings closed with the usual cheering.

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

"A" DIVISION.

CALCUTTA vs. ST. XAVIER'S COLLEGE.—Played on the Calcutta ground on Monday. The game was interesting but the home team were undoubtedly superior. There was no score in the first half but Calcutta registered 2 goals in the second moiety, Trenchard and Greig putting through. St. Xavier's failed to score.

Y.M.C.A. vs. ROVERS.—This game on the Association ground on Monday was very evenly contested the Young Men eventually winning by the odd goal in five. Fooler (2) and Price (1) scored for the winners, Terki and Chakravarti for the Rovers.

Y.M.C.A (Am.) vs. MEDICALS.—A pointless draw was the result of this match on the Customs ground last Monday. The Medicals had by far the larger share of the attack but were weak in front of goal.

RANGERS vs. SPORTING UNION.—Playing on their own ground last Monday the Rangers thrashed the Sporting Union to the tune of 10 goals to nil in a very one-sided game. H. Lawton (4) Smart (3) Skempton (2) and Burgess were responsible for the scoring.

"B." DIVISION.

TOWN CLUB vs. LA MARTINIERE.—On the Town ground on Tuesday, the above game resulted in a draw of one goal all. Clarke put through for the visitors and Deb for the home team.

BAGBAZAR SP. vs. SIBPUR (INDIAN).—On the Volunteer's ground on Tuesday, Bagbazar beat Sibpur by three goals to one.

MEASURERS vs. MOHAN BAGAN.—On their own ground on Tuesday, the Mohan Bagan team went under to the Measurers by four goals to nil.

CUSTOMS (B.) vs. HASTINGS.—On the Custom's ground on Tuesday, the home team beat the Hastings Club by three goals to nil.

ORIENTALS vs. WANDERERS.—The Wanderers with a scratch side of only 8 men were badly beaten by the Orientals on Tuesday the margin being twelve goals to nil.

THE ALDERSON TOURNAMENT.

FINAL.

LEICESTERS vs. 3RD SAPPERS AND MINERS.—These teams met in the final of the Poona Divisional Tournament on Saturday, the 19th instant, and though the Leicesters had the best of the game the Sappers gave a very creditable display and played with great pluck like good sportsmen right up to the finish. Barton scored for the Leicesters shortly after the start and forced a corner a little later. The Sappers then attacked but were kept out and play transferred to their territory where the Leicesters scored another goal and kept up a hot pressure, the Sappers admirable defence keeping them out till the interval. Play was fairly evenly contested in the second half, but whereas the Leicesters scored once more the Sappers were unable to net the ball and the game ended as stated. The General made a congratulatory speech at the close of the match and Mrs. Alderson gave away the cup and medals.

Boxing.

PUNJAB OPEN TOURNAMENT.

11th to 19th February 1910.

THE Punjab Open Boxing Tournament was held at the Lahore Town Hall, beginning on the 11th and ending on the 19th instant. It was very well managed, arrangements were excellent, entries were good, while better exhibitions of military boxing have seldom been seen in India. Major Williamson acted as referee, Mr. Stuart and Mr. Wigley as judges, Captain Burges held the watch, and Mr. Thwaites, to whom credit for the success of the tournament must be given, was master of ceremonies. Sir David Masson opened the proceedings with a short speech on the first day and gave away the prizes at the close of the tournament. Turning to the various competitions: the bantam weights were won by Private Burns, of the East Surreys, who defeated Scissons of the Glosters in the final. The latter gave great promise when appearing in boy's contests at previous Indian regimental tourneys and has proved himself a first-class man. In the semi-finals he put up a fine fight beating Dwyer of the Kings, who won the Ransam Championship at the recent Lucknow Tournament. The feather and light weights attracted the largest number of entries and both divisions provided some excellent bouts. In the feathers Blake, of the Middlesex Regiment, holder of the feather weight belt at Lucknow, succumbed to Gent of the Glosters in the first ustage, an extra round deciding in the latter's favour. But Gent got no further than the second stage of the tournament when after having all the best of it for two rounds he tired away to nothing and was beaten by Coffey of the Leinsters who was himself beaten in the third round by Farley, the ultimate winner. Farley gave a fine exhibition throughout and his fight with Tighe in the semi-finals on Friday last was one of the best during the evening, an extra round having to be boxed to decide the winner. Paddy Gill, the professional, put in an appearance but was beaten by Lourie in the third round. Among the light weights Private Christian, Sherwood, and Gibbons were perhaps the finest boxers. Christian is a powerful punishing fighter and carried all before him, eventually defeating Sherwood in the final.

The middle weights brought out a lot of quality and some very fine fights were put up. Atkinson senior, of the Glosters, an ex-champion well known all through India, was unaccountably disposed of in his first encounter, Jones of the Lancashire Fusiliers knocking him out in the first round. Atkinson junior, the ex-champion's brother, is a coming man and fought his way into the third round of the tournament, when he was compelled to scratch owing to an an injured hand. Betson and Bain of the Black Watch gave a good display, as did McCarthy and Ward of the Connaught Rangers. Price, South Wales Borderers, and Chivers, Essex Regiment, were, however, the best of the lot and put up a splendid fight in the final. Chivers has held the Locke Elliot Championship Middle Weight Belt at Lucknow for two years, and fighting up to his usual fine form retained his title. Clobessy and Wells carried all before them in the catch weights and were to meet in the final. Clobessy however, scratched and Wells walked over, but a sporting contest was arranged between Wells and Houston of the Black Watch to give the spectators a show. Wells had the best of the encounter and knocked the Highlander out in the second round.

A special contest for a purse of six rounds was fought between Private Blake (Middlesex Regiment) and Private Gent (Glosters). Blake led on points and finally knocked Gent out in the third round.

The Story Teller.

"A TEMPEST IN A TEA POT."

BY P. LEO FAULKNER.

THE "Afridi" was nearing Goalpara and the young police officer and his joyous bride were feeling beautifully happy. King Sol was about to retire for the night and his departure was attended with all that splendour which is generally associated with cold weather sunsets on the Brahmaputra. The serang resplendent in his spotless white clothes and black velvet cap was intent on conducting his big flat bottomed boat through the intricate turns and shifting sandbanks of the treacherous stream and, save for the regular moaning of the leadsman, there was nothing to break the peace-giving quiet of the evening. He was for ever shouting "do bara mil-a-nahin" and the swish of the line as it whirled its way through the water soon became painful in its suggestion of what was to follow. With the approach of night the labourers in the fields were slowly making for their homes all rejoicing that a hard day's work had finished and that material comforts awaited their return. The oxen too seemed affected by thoughts of good things in store and proceeded homewards with more willing steps than they had displayed during the heat and worries of the long hours just past.

Reclining in easy chairs on the fore-deck of the gallant steamer the happy couple were engaged in peaceful reflections. She was thinking of the dear little bungalow on the river's edge that Archie had prepared for her. What curtains would she see in the drawing-room and what colour should adorn the dining-room walls? As for him, he was like all newly married men quite certain that with Madge he had at last attained to utopian happiness. And why could not the world go on for ever thus? Yet by the following day this beautiful lazy existence would come to an end perforce and Madge would then have to share his thoughts with special reports, murders and dakaity cases.

For nearly a whole month everything went well in the little bungalow by the river's edge. Archie discovered that he could do most of his work in the bungalow and so the police office rarely saw him. And none of the heinous cases reported from the interior of the district were serious enough to require his presence at the scene of occurrence, nor did he consider it necessary to inspect any of his police stations although the time had come for him to do so. Madge was busy putting things in order and rushing in and out of Archie's office to implore his assistance in hanging a picture or to ask his advice, which she never followed. Life was thus the veritable bed of roses they knew it would be. But one day miserabile dictu a cloud appeared on the domestic horizon. Madge had gone with Mrs. Watkins, the Collector's wife, to take tea—incidentally to be initiated in the choicest items of station scandal—at Mrs. Doctor's, and Archie was left at home to pass the time as best he could. He took up Thacker's latest "Colonial" and was soon interested in a story about a lovely girl who had decided to work as a lady's maid rather than marry the rich man with whom she was not in love, when a flimsy piece of red paper fell to the floor. He picked it up and read it, read it again—and again, but failed to understand it. It was addressed to his wife and ran:—

BOB ARRIVING TENTH MEET HIM AT STATION.

Who was this Bob and why had his wife not shown him the wire but attempted to keep it a secret. The more he pondered over the subject the more incomprehensible it appeared to his distorted mind. Being foolish (was he not newly wedded?) he determined not to ask Madge for an explanation, but convinced himself that Bob was one of her former admirers. Seeds of jealousy were sown in his heart and it was not long before they had grown into big strong plants. He went straight off to the Club although he had promised his little girl to wait at home and returned for dinner nearly an hour late. He found Madge very upset at his desertion, but steeled his heart against her and imparted the news that he was next morning leaving for a long tour in the mofussil. She implored him to take her too, but he was obdurate and she could not understand the excuses he adduced. Once he had left a tearful Madge and a deserted bungalow behind, he prided himself on what he had done and decided he was the victim of a designing woman and that the course he had pursued was both dignified and correct. Nevertheless his temper was, to say the least of it, strange, and numbers of sub-inspectors were called upon to shew cause why they should not be punished for offences which their Superintendent, had he been in his ordinary frame of mind, would have passed with a word of warning. Madge at home was in great distress, sending orderlies all over the district two or three times a day with long scrolls to her hubby. He was undoubtedly glad to receive these letters but his answers—one a day—were very curt and proper. She soon began to think India "a very horrid place" and wondered why she had left her mother for a strange land with strange people and a stranger tongue.

After being away for seventeen days, Archie returned home chastened in spirit by his long absence. He was willing to forget the past, so he told himself, and to resume the lovey-dovey existence he had so hurriedly cast aside. Madge promised him a great treat after ten and gave a deaf ear to his persistent entreaties to be allowed to know at once what it was.

He never knew a tea to take so long before, and it must have been nearly six o'clock when Madge took him to the stables and showed him a fine bull-terrier, which answered to the name of BOB. It is easy to imagine how foolish Archie must have felt and it is sad to relate that he has never yet acknowledged to his wife the wicked thoughts which filled his heart when that eventful telegram fell into his hands. The dog was a belated wedding-present from Madge's brother, an assistant in an Insurance office in Calcutta and a little common sense on the part of Archie would have robbed me of the privilege of recounting this little comedy.

By the time the various sub-inspectors submitted their explanations, Archie was his normal happy self again and they were all let off with a warning. This finished an episode described by the head clerk of the Police Office, in the course of a conversation with a colleague in the Treasury, as "veritably a Tempest in a Teapot no doubt."

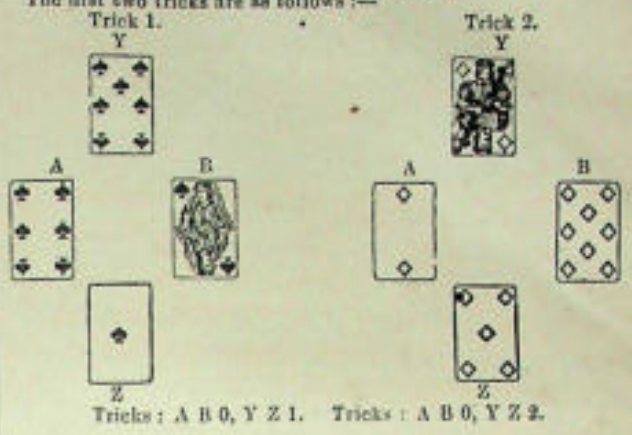
Solution to Problem No. 83.

To get the full value out of this hand, Z must ruff two of his spades in dummy; the fourth can probably be discarded on dummy's last heart. At trick 2, therefore, Z should lead the ace of spades, followed by a small one, which Y ruffs. Y should then lead a small heart, and Z should finesse the knave. If the finesse is successful, Z gives Y a second ruff, and leads the ace of trumps, when, if both opponents follow suit, he can afford to put himself in again by ruffing a club—otherwise he must lead a small heart to the king. On regaining the lead he, of course, goes on with trumps until the queen falls, or is the only one left in, in which case he plays to force it out with a heart, as this gives him a chance of getting rid of his last spade. If, on the other hand, the heart finesse fails, Z has established three tricks in the suit, and A, being under the harrow of a double ruff, is almost certain to lead a trump, which will probably enable Z to catch the queen, while still making two of Y's trumps separately.



Problem No. 84.

Score: A B, a game and 28; Y Z, a game and 12. Z deals, and leaves it to Y, who makes no-trumps. Y's and Z's hands are as follows:—

Y's Hand (Dummy).—Hearts: King, 10, 9, 2. Diamonds: Ace, jack, 4, 3. Clubs: Ace, 6, 5. Spades: 8, 7.

Z's Hand (Dealer).—Hearts: 4, 3. Diamonds: Queen, 7, 6, 5. Clubs: Queen, 10, 3, 2. Spades: Ace, jack, 4.

The first two tricks are as follows:—

Tricks: A B 0, Y Z 1. Tricks: A B 0, Y Z 2.

A FAMOUS HORSE.

THE announcement that the famous American horse Colin is available for stud purposes in England this year is interesting, as the Americans look upon him as being really home bred. He is said to be the best horse America has ever produced, and he won fifteen races of the value of £36,000 in that country without once knowing defeat. We can well believe in his excellence, as when he was shown in the paddock at Ascot last June it was generally admitted that a more commanding and truly made horse had never been seen. That it was intended to run him in England we have no doubt, but Darling, in whose charge he was placed, advised against it. It seems that he had virtually broken down before leaving America, and under these circumstances it would have been a pity to have risked his reputation by running him under conditions that would almost have invited defeat. It was, therefore, decided to leave him at the stud in England, and he was sent to Lord Marcus Beresford's place at Newmarket.

Although Americans regard Colin as home bred we have not to look far into his pedigree, to find that he is "quite English you know." He traces back to a horse that Mr. Padwick had about fifty years ago called Eclipse, who was trained for the Derby by John Scott. He was beaten for this race by Sir Joseph Hawley's Beadsman, with whom he ran a dead-heat a few weeks before, when the stakes were divided.

For some reason or other Eclipse, who proved to be a horse of great courage, started second favourite at 4 to 1 for the Derby, whilst 10 to 1 was laid against Beadsman, heavily backed as he was.

Sir Joseph Hawley was one of the greatest masters of horse racing ever known, and must have managed this business exceptionally well. When Beadsman ran the dead-heat he was considered to be somewhat backward, but probably what inclined the public to give Eclipse the preference was that he had several winning brackets to his name, and public money in the aggregate swamps individual commissions.

As a two-year-old Eclipse beat a good field for the Clearwell Stakes, with Baron Rothschild's Mentmore, which was afterwards well backed for the Derby, second. At the Newmarket Craven Meeting the following year he very easily won the Sale Stakes, a race confined to horses that had been sold by public auction as yearlings from the Hampton Court, Althorp Park, Maresfield, Mr. Greville's, Mr. A. Johnston's, Mr. Newton's, the Marble Hall, Middle Park, Oswaldirk, Grimstone, Sledmere, Rawcliffe, Boythorpe, Thickhill and Masham studs. The proprietors of these studs, it may be mentioned, contributed nothing to the stakes, and for the matter of that no one else did. The most formidable opponent of Eclipse for the Sale Stakes was looked upon as Eurydice, which afterwards won the Cambridgeshire for Mr. "Lord Lyon" Sutton. The next venture of Eclipse was against Beadsman as mentioned, and then came the Derby, for which, ridden by Fordham, he was second favourite, and finished fourth officially placed by the judge. Sir Joseph Hawley won the Two Thousand Guineas that year with Fitz Roland, and it was that what caused Eclipse to start as a favourite for the Derby, over and above the public money was the immense superiority he was known to possess over his stable companion Clydesdale, which ran third for the Two Thousand Guineas.

Mr. Padwick knew through Clydesdale that Eclipse was sure to beat the Two Thousand Guineas winner. He did not give Sir Joseph Hawley credit for making the same discovery with Beadsman. The leading turf commissioner, Mr. Fred Swindell, had at one time a house in Berkeley Square, and one night Sir Joseph called upon him and had a long conversation. Presently Sir Joseph got up to leave, and said in his usual imperious way, "Be here to-morrow night at nine o'clock." Mr. Swindell guessed the nature of the game that was in the air and remained at home. Scarcely had the clock struck nine than there came a loud knock at the door, and Sir Joseph duly entered. All that he said was, "Put me a thousand pounds on the black."

Nothing was said about the trial or anything else. As the public kept on backing the Two Thousand Guineas winner there was a splendid market. Beadsman was tried with Fitz Ronald and beat him with great ease, so that Sir Joseph won £70,000, and to commemorate the victory built a hideous red brick tower to his white stone Italian-looking house at Leybourne. As he had the reputation of being a most consummate judge of art, owing to his long residence in Italy, this astonished everyone. Mr. Padwick, as it turned out, had not made much mistake in trying Eclipse, except that he had jumped to the conclusion that Fitz Ronald was the same horse at a mile and a half as he was at a mile. In the Ascot Biennial Eclipse showed clearly enough that he would have gained an easy victory in the Two Thousand Guineas if he had been in it, as Fitz Roland and Happy Land, which were first and second at Newmarket, had no chance with him, the distance being a mile. Another horse that was beaten in the race was Mr. Merry's celebrated mare Sunbeam, which afterwards won the St. Leger.

Sir Joseph Hawley was well named the lucky baronet. He was much condoled with when he gave Mr. Gully £3,000 for his well-known mare Mendicant, which failed terribly in the new colours. Eventually in disgust he sent her up for sale with the modest reserve of 500 guineas placed upon her, and no one would give it. She returned to Leybourne, where she gave birth to Beadsman, who in his turn gave Sir Joseph another Derby winner in Blue Gown, and, as many think, Pero Gomez also. Now apparently the blood in the sire line is at an end, whilst that of Eclipse, with whom he ran his famous dead-heat, comes before us with the reputation of having produced the best horse the American turf has ever known. On the female side Colin goes back to Volliguess.

"You will admit that doctors sometimes make mistakes, won't you?"

"Oh, yes; the same as lawyers," was the cool reply.

"And doctors' mistakes are buried six feet under ground," was the lawyer's triumphant reply.

"Yes," he replied; "and the lawyer's mistakes often swing in the air."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

A VERY good day's racing was witnessed at the Eighth Extra Meeting last Saturday. Mr. Galstaun set the ball rolling with Hopscotch in the Kalighat Plate, Etna and the above pony being the only ones at all fancied. Fireaway went away with the lead but was soon overhauled by Hopscotch and Etna, and about 3 furlongs from home Hopscotch went ahead and beat Etna easily by two lengths.

SINGLETON was first favourite for the Elgin Plate Division I. Sequent, Singleton and Palindrome were quickest away with the rest of the field well up. Coming to the straight Foudrette and Hacklers Bloom moved up and Sequent won after a great race, from Singleton. Hacklers Bloom beat Foudrette by a short head for third place.

SCOTCH GIRL led throughout in the Sixth Selling race and won easily from Jacchus and Comprimil. The winner was bought in by the owner for Rs. 850, Mr. Holmes then claimed Plain Mister who was knocked down to him for Rs. 1,750.

THE Elgin Plate Division II. was rather an upset as the Cockatoo was backed down to 5 to 4, but could finish no nearer than third. Harene cut out all the work at the start from Blue Flame and Cockatoo. Blue Flame took up the running coming up the straight and beat Harene easily, Foy coming with a late run to finish fourth.

IN the Middleton Plate, Ruling Passion made all the pace and won as he liked from Pat C. and Powerful: the favourite Village Girl was never in the hunt.

TRUE LOVE, Craigendorrie and Morette were first away in the Rawdon Plate, with Kaffirpan and Craigendorrie close behind. Five Crown came with a wet sail up the straight and swamped them all, winning by a length from Kaffirpan and Morette.

A FIELD of eight went out for the Jumpers' Flat Race, the public went hot and strong for Devillette II. and they made no mistake for she won as she liked. Yulgibar made all the pace followed by Ballycar. Devillette II. went ahead about the 5 furlongs and won easily from Comprimil and Tommy Daw. Mr. Bletsoe's saddle slipped coming up the straight but he luckily got off with a slight shaking.

THIS is to be Morette's last season racing: she goes home to the stud after the last extra meeting.

SEA SPRAY was to have left for England last week but as the box in which she was going to be shipped was in such a bad state the trainer would not let her go, and she will leave by the next boat.

IT has been rumoured that Barrett, who has been riding with a deal of success in Bombay, will be seen riding first string for the Hon'ble Mr. A. A. Apcar next season. We should like to see him up as he rides an excellent long distance race and would do well.

MUMFORD left for England by last mail and will take charge of Tangaroa on his arrival. Whalley is engaged to ride him in all his races on the other side.

OWNERS and trainers have sent in a petition to the C. T. C. to ask for an Eleventh Extra Meeting and if it is granted they might make it a G. R. meeting as they do in Poona every year; this would be a success one feels sure.

THE Pony Paperchase Cup was run last Friday over the Salt Lake country, a start being made at the brickfields. A poor field as regards quantity went for this event, six only facing Mr. Allen, the starter, but there was very little to grumble at as to quality, for it would be hard to find two better ponies than Marconi and Just in Time, or even old Pathfinder. Just in Time cut out all the work closely attended by Marconi, with Pathfinder and Lochmaben together a few lengths away. Blazes and Shiela tailed off from the start. After crossing the brickfields the second time the paper ran into the jungle to the left, and going round a sharp bend Just in Time slipped up but was quickly remounted and followed Marconi to the next wall. Just in Time came to grief a second time, after which he had very little chance of ever catching the leader. Coming into sight for the finish, Marconi was well ahead of Pathfinder and won comfortably. This makes Mr. "Glen's" second victory as he won it last year on the same pony. Just in Time certainly had bad luck and we feel sure he would have put up a big fight for first honours.

The following is the record:—

1. Mr. Glen on Marconi, 14-2, carried 12st.
2. Captain Gibbs on Pathfinder II., 14-1¾, carried 11st. 11lb.
3. Mr. Marshall on Lochmaben, 14-1¼, carried 11st. 5lb.
4. Lord Francis Scott on Just in Time, 14-1, 11st. 2lb., carried 11st. 7lb.
5. Mr. Buckland on Blazes, 14-0¼, 10st. 9lb., carried 12st. 7lb.
6. Mr. Tegart on Shiela, 14-1¾, carried 11st. 11lb.

THE Pony Cup was followed by the usual weekly chase for horses, and would have been uneventful had it not been for the fact that Captain Gibbs ran off the course. Instead of going back to the point where he went out, he continued on and cut in after saving a lot of ground. This was bad luck, for had this not happened he would have won the Average Cup: as it is he has to get his place in the next chase or it will go to Mr. Morris who is leading on points from Lord Francis Scott. The horses were all fencing in excellent style and the only one who fell during the morning was Just in Time.

The final order was:—

Captain Gibbs on Trilby II. (disqualified).

1. Mr. Morris on Blue Bell II.
2. Lord Francis Scott on Fermoy.
4. Mr. Pauntley on St. Odille.
5. Mr. Scaramanga on Mauser.
6. Mr. Ballantyne on Fairy followed by Mr. Myers on Napier, Mr. Evers on Macquani, Mr. Tanner on Fingal, Mr. Ross-Craik on Pardon, Mr. Leggatt on Singhla, Mr. Wanklyn on Cheeky.

THE Calcutta Light Horse held their annual sports at their Camp on the maidan on Friday afternoon. The Officers and Members were "At Home" to their friends and a very good turn out was witnessed. The ball was set rolling with Dismounted Service, but this event was not a great success except for "B" Troop, who entered two teams and were the only two to complete the course. Tent Pegging came next and was well up to the average. Scoring would have been a lot higher had they been able to secure good pegs, but the firm who had the order failed to supply them and ordinary straw plaits had to be used. Jumping by half sections was next decided, and was a very good all round competition. Then came the First Aid to the Wounded and Victoria Cross race combined. The Bare Back Wrestling was quite good fun and showed that the members of the C.L.H. have very tight seats and are not at all easy to get unglued. Swimming the tank on horses caused a lot of amusement and was won by Corporal Rothera after a very hard fight. Corporal Lovett finished first but was disqualified for going wrong side of the finishing flags: had he won this "B" Troop would have cleared the board as it was the only event that went to "A" Troop. Details:—

Dismounted Service.—Won by "B" Troop Section, Sergeant Olphert, Troopers Cropper, Richmond and Partridge.

Tent Pegging.—Won by "B" Troop Section. 2nd-Lieutenant Crum, Sergeant Olphert, Corporal Radmore, Lance-Corporal Harvey.

Jumping inter-Troop—Half Sections.—Won by Lieutenant Crum and Corporal Radmore ("B" Troop).

First Aid to the Injured Competition.—Won by Miss Goode and Trooper Walker.

Bare Back Wrestling.—Won by team from "B" Troop Corporals Smythe and Radmore, Troopers Bletsoe, Levetus, Cropper and Marshall.

Swimming Competition.—Won by Corporal Rothera, Trooper Sherman second, Corporal Lovett won but was disqualified.

THE C.L.H. hold their annual Chart and Compass Race next Sunday, and we understand have quite as large an entry as previous years.

After all Rs. 36 per doz "WHITE HORSE" WHISKY IS THE BEST.

The Rajah Venugopaul Challenge Cup Polo Tournament will begin at Madras on the 15th instant.

The Durham L. I. won the Infantry Polo Tournament at Lucknow on the 23rd ultimo when they defeated the Gordon Highlanders in the final by 6 goals to 1.

The Novices' Polo Tournament opened at Bangalore on the 28th ultimo when the Royal Engineers beat the Bangalore Gymkhana by 4 goals to 2. The Imperial Service Lancers, 20th Deccan Horse and 14th Hussars drew byes in the first round.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—There was not as much of a falling off in attendance on Wednesday for the continuation of the Extras, this being the ninth, than might have been expected. The orthodox six events were on the card and gave very fair sport, though the majority of fields were thin. On the day punters had something of their own back after rather a bad Big Meeting.

Of the five in the 14-2 race, three were in Byramjee's stable and all had support, Lady Nannie and Koko in pride of place from Cheeky. A new one to us in Ngakapa, who is likely to shew his Australian form in time, made a couple of furlongs of the running when Lady Nannie came unusually early into the lead. Cheeky and Koko were in attendance, and both were passed by Encourage at the turn, but she also never looked like repeating her last performance. The betting, threes the field, was more open than the race itself.

A field of fifteen went for the race for newly landed Arabs, and on his shewing amongst the older ones when he ran second to Hoodaib, Dilaver was naturally heavily backed but strong money on Padsha, who has also shewn staying powers, made the two equal favourites. Two likely ones for future occasions in Bandy Dick and Prosperity were there to the turn, where Siberia and Dilaver came outside with Padsha on the rails. Fado came well on the extreme outside but, though beating the other two who dead-heated, could not extend Padsha.

The mile horse race dwindled to a field of five, Pincher displacing Posco at the last moment in public favour, Forfeit by no means ignored. Posco went out fully half a dozen lengths to make the running solid and Pincher was beaten when he made his effort. Forfeit and Flaneur came up steadily, but just when they appeared to have some sort of a chance they only found Posco go away from them again.

On what he has shewn in the past, Swalior was steady favourite from Silvermine in the Parel Plate, Mehraj and Young Salanic being taken at nice prices. Swalior is only just recovering from lung trouble and, as was suggested he would, he could do no more than run handy all the way. Rubio led the field for about half a mile and then Young Salanic took a commanding lead. Barrett rode a nice, patient race on Mehraj and had them all cooked down the straight. There is probably no pony running who has placed so often as the grey and being now less ambitiously placed he reaps the rewards of his consistence.

In betting and in the race the Ascot Plate rested between three out of five, Paul Pry, Lord Carlyon and Lord Merv in that order on the boards. Lord Carlyon, as in the Exeter Plate, went away on his own from Lord Merv with Paul Pry lying rather a long way back, too far to be able to make it all up even with the run he put in. Lord Carlyon has been dubbed a rogue, and certainly he did not seem to display very great heart, as although pulling double on entering the straight he was beaten to the world when Lord Merv made a move.

Finally the Coorla Plate, in which Gafal and Salanic were in most demand, though the latter has not of late given much indications of being able to stay seven furlongs. This was the case now, as Mumbra passed him before the bend and then Gafal came and passed the latter very comfortably. On the way he always finishes when in shorter races, the winner on paper was quite the good thing of the day. Gold Mint is clean out of form, but after a long rest Sirur and Saeed give promise.

With a divided race, there were seven events for the Tenth Extra on Saturday and, as suggested by the open betting, these were interesting. There is a serious enquiry in progress into the running of Paul Pry on Wednesday, but how Ames fares is not yet made public. On that occasion two fast horses gave him the slip and he could never make up the ground, but now over another furlong he had everything settled, not including the other two.

Mr. A. S. Oomen shews he has still some very useful new ponies by annexing both divisions of the Selling Plate. In the former there was a rush for Red Hazard, for whom people have been waiting, but then Akseer steadily shortened to favouritism. Ture's Cap and Bandy Dick were both under the whip, Dreadnought taking the lead and Red Hazard coming up only to drop back very soon. Akseer appeared to be shut in, but once he came through all was over.

Nothing much was known about any of those in the second, Alexander, who got away badly, and William Tell in most demand from Director and Prince of Wales, absolutely left. It was never any sort of a race, as Director led all through. Outsiders in Mishriff and Durwah came late into places to shew they are useful.

Sheriff, Plassy and Hishan were all well-backed for the Karjat Plate with some for old Rose, who apparently is very far off his old form, most people thinking his racing career done with. Sheriff shewed quick as ever out of the gate and had Disfigure and Sabah, (the latter is running on,) well set. Barrett however had made no move on Plassy, and when it came to racing he fairly smothered the others in the brilliant time of 1-6-4/5.

The seven furlongs for new ponies had Padsha for a strong favourite on his last easy win from Straight Tip in a field of fourteen. A promising one in Indian Star for a shorter journey made the running to the bend, where Dilaver confirmed his recent running by being done with. Here Padsha and Grand Master led, and the former went away quite comfortably. Prosperity came well in front of Kishra for places and the former is sure to turn out really well.

Five to two the field was on offer for the mile, and Murmurees retained pride of place from Swalior, Sun and Well Done, Desert King not much in demand considering the promise given recently. Murmurees never looked like winning and Swalior ran disappointingly as usual after making the pace. Sun and Desert King were waiting on him, and before the bend Desert King went away to stay the other out, Well Done making up ground into a place.

More open betting in the longer race, on Wednesday's running Maghil, Eed, Young Salamic and Famous being asked for. Maghil ran far below what one might have expected, Famous as usual seeing to the pace. In the stretch leading to the bend Young Salanic came up to him, but at the tree Eed made a run and, taking a good lead, was able to stay Famous out when he came again. Famous would have run even better if dodged about less during the race.

Posco was always in better demand than Paul Pry in the big horse race, and as they were going out a rush came for Marton Mere from eights to six to four. He, however, was poorly away and never made any impression on those in front of him. Posco on the rails and Paul Pry were out on their own together from Chevalier and Mary B. Down the straight Paul Pry had the mare badly beaten and Mary B. found a place from Chevalier.

Though the winner carried 10-1, the time was 1-14-2/5, and there are not many who can beat him over six.

SHERLEY'S

DOG MEDICINES

MAY NOW BE OBTAINED IN INDIA

In CALCUTTA from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO.,

And in BOMBAY from TREACHER & CO., Ltd.

These preparations are based on the most recent and up-to-date veterinary research, and are the best possible remedies for the various ailments and diseases for which they are recommended.

It is of the greatest importance in treating all cases of sickness in dogs that the nature of the ailment should be recognised, and in order to enable dog owners to do this we have published a book.

"HINTS TO DOG OWNERS"

which is now the standard work of reference in thousands of kennels in the United Kingdom, where it has had a larger circulation than any book on dogs ever published, the demand for it being so great that more than 200,000 copies have been disposed of. It may be obtained gratis on application to either of the above-mentioned firms in India, and everyone interested in dogs should make a point of obtaining a copy at once.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR DOGS.

These Capsules are tasteless and odourless, and are the surest and safest means of expelling both Round and Tape Worms from dogs (or puppies three months old or over) weighing 10lb. or more. They require no purgative medicine afterwards. May be easily given wrapped up in a piece of meat or cheese.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR PUPPIES AND TOY DOGS.

Every puppy at six weeks old should be dosed with these Capsules which may be safely given to even the smallest and most delicate toy puppy. They surely expel all Worms and never cause the least discomfort. Castor oil is not required before or after giving them, and it is not necessary for the puppy to fast before being dosed.

SHERLEY'S "SKIN CURE."

An absolutely unrivalled dressing for Mange, Eczema, Ringworm, and all other Skin Diseases of dogs. It cures Mange for certain in a week, and not only cures the disease but starts an immediate and vigorous growth of hair.

SHERLEY'S "DISTEMPERCURE."

The best remedy for Distemper ever discovered; it reduces the fever and creates an appetite. In each tin are full instructions as to nursing and dieting, on which the cure of Distemper depends so much.

SHERLEY'S "SHAMPOO."

A Liquid Soap for Washing Dogs. It penetrates the hair, which it cleanses much better than any solid soap and in less than half the time.

It removes dandriff, stimulates the growth of hair, and gives the coat a healthy, glossy appearance.

It also prevents Eczema, and destroys Fleas and all other insects.

The Tannah Plate concluded the racing, there being a field of thirteen with Zari, Maimoon, Muzloom and Real Blood the order in the betting. Though Zari got a good break from the gate he came back unaccountably soon and Real Blood went in front from Afreed and Maimoon. Jassus came rather wide at the bend, and though he beat Maimoon, Afreed, being done, he never had a hope of catching Real Blood, who at least shews some of his true form.

The sixteenth annual exhibition of antlers and other sporting trophies was recently held in the halls of the Berlin Zoological Gardens. The entries included six German and six foreign elk heads, 256 German stag heads, 26 from other European countries, and 15 from America and Asia, 85 German fallow-buck antlers and 25 from other parts of the world, 509 roe antlers from Europe and 10 from Asia, seven chamois heads from Germany and 12 from abroad. The various trophies from Asia, Africa, and America were very numerous, and the finest red-stag antlers came from Northern and Eastern Germany. The German Emperor exhibited a 16-pointer shot at Rominten, the Crown Prince a head carrying the same number of points, and Prince Henry of Pless an 18-pointer.

A birdfanciers' show which was recently held at the Crystal Palace drew attention to the wonderful popularity of the canary. The canary has arrived at his position of the premier pet bird and the fancier's favourite by sheer solid merit. Some three centuries ago, when foreign birds were rarely seen in England alive, a little finch, in sober plumage of streaky olive green, began to be imported from the Canary Islands, where it was, and is, as common as the greenfinch in England and much resembles that bird in its ways. The reason why this insignificant little bird was brought over was its surpassing song, which is nowadays too familiar to meet with the admiration it deserves, but from the works of the old naturalists one can realize the admiration it evoked. As the canary also proved itself quite ready to breed in a cage which most cage birds, however hardy, are not, its popularity was assured in any case. But nature had another gift in store for it and its admirers; at some time, which avicultural history does not record, the yellow variety arose, and settled the position of the canary as the leading cage-bird once and for all; here we had a tame bird which surpassed wild nature, for it combined a first-class song with a rare beauty of plumage, since no completely yellow species of bird is known in the wild state. Of course, yellow became the popular canary colour, and it was not long before people forgot that the little creature had ever worn any other tint; so much so that the idea, still current, that the green and pied birds are "mules" and not purebred canaries is a very ancient one. Nevertheless there are real mule canaries which are mostly crossed with the goldfinch. The canary has increased and multiplied and inherited the earth—always as a cage—bird, for it has nowhere been turned out and naturalised as a wild one like some other species.

An article in a Home journal on how to obtain a maximum of sport with a minimum of danger in the hunting field must rouse contempt from many riders, but it is nevertheless probable that riders to hounds who seek roads and lanes and avoid hedges and ditches are often more numerous than those who ride across country. It is claimed that it is possible to go out regularly with hounds and yet incur no greater risk of accident than at golf or croquet. A safe horse and a policy of sticking to the roads together with a sound knowledge of the country are necessary in order to obtain this safety. It is said that there are hundreds of men and women hunting to-day who, no matter how fast or how far hounds may run, are nevertheless almost always somewhere near them, though they never ride over a fence and seldom enter a field. It is by no means sure, however, that road riding is safer than cross country riding, unless the horses ridden are accustomed to galloping along roads and lanes and pulling up quickly at corners and sharp turnings. For there are plenty of horses that never blunder at a fence or come to grief in the open which, none the less, have a provoking trick of poking their toes into the ground and stumbling again and again when ridden along roads, especially when walking. Other horses which are accurately described as perfect hunters will be found far from perfect if kept upon the roads all day. Such horses fret and fidget, and keep reaching at their bits all the time they are on the roads, though directly they are taken into a field they remain quiet. Given suitable mounts, however, the man who has carefully studied the geography of the country in which he intends to hunt will find that he can, even though he keeps to the roads all day, see very nearly as much of the fun as the man who rides straight to hounds, and that he can do this with a minimum risk of incurring mishaps. Those who get the most enjoyment out of hunting, however, must agree with the following lines by Lindsay Gordon, the Australian steeplechase rider and poet:—

"No game was ever worth a rap
For a rational man to play
Into which no danger, no mishap,
Can possibly find its way."

It is found difficult on Calcutta golf links to obtain bunkers such as are usual at Home, but apparently we are more fortunate here than golfers in China. According to a London magazine the chief hazards on the links of Tientsin consist of the graves of deceased Chinamen. The modern golfing architect is in favour of mounds as hazards and he might glean some ideas from the graves at Tientsin. "So-and So's grave" has been time out of mind, a favourite name for some bunker of peculiarly infamous reputation in this country, but it has never borne so literal a meaning as it might in China. As to the Chinese caddie, the Chinaman, we are told, does not understand golf at all. His aim is to get done with the round and receive his fee, and he pathetically inquires of his employer at intervals how long he proposes to follow the little white ball. At Pekin, as at Tientsin, hazards have a disconcerting way of springing up like mushrooms in the night. They are, however, of a less horrible character, though possibly more difficult to play out of since they consist not of graves but of cabbage gardens which the Chinaman plants at his own sweet will in the same rapid and light-hearted way. The difficulties are enhanced at Pekin by the fact that the golfer is only allowed to play on condition that he does not disturb the cabbage patches. "Golf is not agriculture," so it has been written for the benefit of those who tear vast and hideous divots from the shrinking turf. It is held to be true at Pekin, and the native agriculturist will have the law on you if you interfere with the fruits of his industry. Cabbage patches are strictly out of bounds. Other hazards of a less transitory character are camel roads which traverse the links from the mountains. Along these roads there come, in addition to camels, great droves of ponies which the Mangolians bring down to sell in Pekin. Yet another possible incident of Pekinese golf is the dust storm, a terrible infliction which brings the game to a speedy and abrupt close.

The height of waves is one of those subjects of general interest which have not received much expert investigation. Many a voyager has gazed awe stuck at great swelling rollers but found it impossible to estimate their height. Some information of a reliable character is forthcoming, however, from Dr. V. Cornish, who, in the course of a lecture to the members of the Royal Geographical Society on "Waves in Water" said that he had endeavoured for many years to obtain exact observations of the actual size attained by waves. In Lake Geneva his observations showed that the extreme height to which the waves attained was 9 feet, the length of the lake being 46 statute miles; on Lake Superior waves as high as 22½ feet had been measured with a wave-length of 300 feet, though on large enclosed seas, like the Mediterranean, or the still larger semi-enclosed sea, the China Sea, it was not found that the increase in the size of the waves went on so rapidly, though they were a little larger. In the Atlantic Ocean waves about 42 feet in height frequently recurred during strong gales in any positions not less than 600 nautical miles from the windward shore. The statements about waves 80 feet or 100 feet high encountered by the modern Atlantic liners related to the altitude of large masses of broken water as they flew aft from the concussion of the vessel's bow with a head sea. The statements of such altitudes, said Mr. Cornish, were not necessarily an exaggeration, but they related to a different thing from that which they called the height of a wave when they were dealing with it as a geographical phenomenon.

Owing to unforeseen circumstances the Poona Boxing Tournament has been postponed and will now commence on Monday 21st March 1910.

The Meerut Boxing Tournament advertised for the "Inter Regimental Week" has had to be cancelled owing to lack of entries.

At last "Tiger" Smith has won a fight at home! The ex-Hussar, who held such a big reputation as a prize fighter in this country, could never make good on his return to England and all his aspirations to fistic fame in the old country were set at rest by each of his numerous opponents. His last defeat was at Birkenhead when Tom Stokes, of Yorkshire, beat him after a tough struggle. A return match was arranged and in this Smith put his opponent out in the fourth round.

Papers to hand by the last Australian mail announce the fact that Tommy Burns, the ex-heavy weight champion fighter of the world has signed articles for a meeting with Bill Lang, the Australian champion; who recently beat Bob Fitzsimmons and subsequently knocked out Bill Squires for the third time. The fight is to take place on Easter Monday, 28th March.

The All-India Hockey Tournament was concluded at Allahabad on the 26th ultimo when the Naini Tal Volunteers beat the United Provinces Police by 7 goals to 3 in the final. Details further on.

The Ballygunge United Club hold their annual Athletic Sports on their ground at Ballygunge on the 12th instant, entries closing on the 9th instant. An advertisement further on gives further particulars.

Queen's Park Rangers and West Ham United having played a drawn game in the Association Football Cup Tournament on the 19th ultimo, the match was replayed on the 23rd, when the Queen's Park Rangers won by a goal to nil.

The annual general meeting of the Calcutta Rowing Club will be held at the Strand Road Boat House at 6-30 P.M. on Thursday, the 10th instant, to receive the report and pass the accounts for 1909, to elect officers for the current year and to transact any other business that may be brought forward.

A Lawn Tennis Tournament for ladies was recently conducted in Calcutta by Mr. J. Binning who presented three cups for competition. The Singles attracted thirteen entries and the Doubles ten couples. The tournament was most successful and some interesting and close fought games were witnessed. Mrs. Coleridge beat Mrs. Muspratt Williams (6—3, 5—7, 6—2) in the Singles and the Doubles were won by Mrs. Muspratt Williams and Mrs. Manders who beat Mrs. Green and Mrs. Keays (6—2, 6—1) in the final. The success of this tournament should inspire the establishment of a regular annual tennis championship for ladies in Calcutta.

The third test match between England and South Africa at Johannesburg was interrupted by a thunderstorm when the South Africans had made 144 runs for 4 wickets. The innings subsequently closed for 305. White scoring 72 and Vogler 65. England's first innings totalled 322, Denton making 104. Going in again South Africa had made 354 for the loss of one wicket, when stumps were drawn

The arrangements for the Indian cricket team's tour in England are being pushed on apace, and already nearly Rs. 50,000 have been subscribed. Mistry, the famous Parsi cricketer, is going, as also the Maharaja of Patiala and a son of the Maharaja of Cooch Behar. Dr. Kanga will also go and other leading cricketers have proposed to join. Only the Jam Saheb has not yet sent a final reply.

Mr. Lacy, Secretary of the M. C. C., has written to Framji Patel, the organiser of the tour, and says:—

"I have already received some answers from the Counties regarding the visit of an All-India team, and as far as I can at present judge I shall be able to arrange an attractive programme, but I do not think I shall be able to obtain a guarantee exceeding £500. There is no doubt that the visit will do much to remove prejudices and promote friendship, and I am confident that everyone with Imperial views—and I thank goodness there are many—will cordially welcome an All-Indian team in England and will feel grateful to you and others who have made the

Dr. Frederick James Furnivall, as most of us are aware, is a great Shakespearean authority and the head and front of many learned societies. Also he is undoubtedly the grand old man of the Thames. All his long life he has been an enthusiastic and strenuous oarsman so that it was quite in accordance with the fitness of things that he celebrated the 85th anniversary of his birth by a nice little thirteen mile spin on the Thames in a light four! The event gave rise to a remarkable demonstration on the banks of the river between Hammersmith and Richmond, the Furnivall Sculling Club turning out in force in honour of the veteran. The doctor rowing bow in a crew coxwained by a lady, left the clubhouse about midday, and was accorded a tremendous reception from about one thousand friends and spectators. Accompanied by several sculling crews from the club and numerous small craft, Dr. Furnivall started his journey to St. Margaret's, Richmond, his passage thence being lined by hundreds of spectators, who cheered repeatedly. At Kew Bridge a very large crowd had assembled to see the boat pass, and representatives of the Ancient Order of Watermen turned out in full regalia for the purpose of presenting the doctor with an address. Unfortunately the latter was unaware of the waterman's intentions, and the boat did not stop. Arriving at Kew another ovation was accorded Dr. Furnivall as he, with his friends, passed along to a restaurant for luncheon. The journey up to Richmond was accomplished in one hour five minutes, and the return in fifty minutes.

Dr. Furnivall is a non-smoker and a total abstainer from alcohol. His work as a scholar has brought him into the society of the foremost literary men of the day. Sculling has divided with scholarship the interest of his life, and of few things is he prouder than of the "Hammersmith (or Furnivall) Girls' Sculling Club," which he started in 1896.

We regret to record the death of Colonel Jocelyn, Principal of the Bombay Veterinary College, as the result of a carriage accident. He was thrown out of his dogcart on Monday evening and sustained very serious injuries to which he succumbed in hospital shortly afterwards.

The competition for the Captain's Prize in connection with the Calcutta Golf Club has now reached the semi-final stage, Messrs. Drimmie (Scr.,) Gatheral (Scr.,) Lawson (-2) and Lyon (-4) qualifying for the penultimate round. The March competition was originally fixed for the 4th and 5th of the month but has been postponed until the 11th and 12th. The club members are "At Home" on the second day of the competition, and the decision to postpone was a wise one in view of the various engagements on the 5th. At this competition the Club Gold Medal (scratch) and the Ladies' Bowl (handicap) are played for, and there is to be the usual approaching and putting competition for ladies during the afternoon.

London Week by Week

London, Friday, 11th February 1910.

There is practically nothing to chronicle this week. Like our old friend Silas Wegg I must "drop into poetry," or rather I will begin this short screed with an allusion to the poets. Descendants of famous poets found "something to their advantage" in yesterday's papers. True it is only a meal that is offered them by the Poetry Recital Society, but it will probably be a good one of many courses and, as we know, more than one poet has found such a meal the desirable and unattainable thing! It is proposed to invite the living hereditary representatives of famous poets to dine with the society in April, either on the birthday of Swinburne or Browning.

The Earl of Crewe, who is the son of Monckton Milnes, the first Lord Houghton, whose powers as a poet were generally conceded, has consented to preside, while the president of the society, Lady Margaret Sackville, is herself the descendant of the two poet Earls of Dorset, who wrote in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

There will, of course, be notable blanks among the poets to be represented—Dryden, Ben Jonson, Pope, Cowper, Keats, Shelley, Rossetti and Swinburne—to name no more—will send no guests. The greatest name of all will fail us, for Dame Elizabeth Barnard's death took from us Shakespeare's last grandchild. There may be Miltonian claimants, but their claims should be nicely examined before they are allowed to sit down to their soup. Milton's grandchildren were poor weaver folk in Spitalfields, whose descendants disappear into obscurity with a child christened at Madras in George II's coronation year.

When Mr. Mason, the dramatist, novelist, and actor—he played a good deal in the Benson and the Bateman companies—retired from Parliament the new House of Commons looked like being without an actor. This result has been averted through the election of Mr. Francis Neilson, the member for Hyde—not Jekyll. He was in the original London cast of Held by the Enemy; he was for many years stage-manager for Charles Frohman in London and America; and he was also, for a long while, the director of the stage, during the grand opera season, at Covent Garden Theatre. Mr. Neilson is a fine novelist and a very convinced politician of quite exceptional powers.

Once more has Sir Herbert Tree vindicated his title to be considered England's most versatile actor. In "The O'Flynn," recently put on at His Majesty's, he is really immense as the harum-scarum, devil-may-care, impecunious, witty, sentimental Irishman. Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy has written a jolly, likeable play and all London flocks to see it. There are duels and black treachery, heroic self-sacrifice, war and love and loyalty and bustle, but the author treats all the well-known incidents with freshness and fun. And it is fine to see Sir Herbert after appearing in so many weird and sinister parts, entering with a boyish spirit into the roystering, drawn-sword-and-hot-punch, cut-and-thrust atmosphere of it all. His first entrance strikes the lively note that is maintained throughout the piece—for he arrives on the stage down a chimney, accompanied by a shower of bricks!

The O'Flynn of the O'Flynn's Castle, Munster, returns from the wars as poor as the rats that haunt his dilapidated ancestral home; but the bright eyes of a lady—none other than Lady Benedetta Mountmichael—fire his spirit, and because she wishes it he buckles on his sword and sets out to fight for the cause of King James II. Adventures come to him thick and fast. Lady Benedetta is blindly in love with the Earl of Sedgemouth, a traitor to his King, with charming manners and a black heart, and the ability to drink huge quantities of punch without so much as slurring a word. The O'Flynn organises a regiment—a weird and wonderful awkward squad, chiefly composed of strolling players and process-servers; The O'Flynn saves my lady's life; The O'Flynn unmasks the treachery of Sedgemouth; The O'Flynn, almost unaided, captures Knockmore Castle from the Dutch; The O'Flynn wins the hand of the fair Benedetta; and incidentally The O'Flynn composes some very pretty verses. Altogether The O'Flynn is a great man, and a very gallant, amusing, Irish gentleman. Miss Evelyn D'Alroy is a charming Lady Benedetta, Mr. Henry Ainley is a handsome and striking Sedgemouth, and other capital character studies are given by Mr. Edward Sass, Mr. William Haviland, Mr. Edmund Gurney, Mr. J. W. Braithwaite, Mr. Henry Morrell, Mr. William MacKintosh, Mr. Nigel Playfair, Mr. Jules Shaw, Miss Auriol Lee and Miss Elinor Foster.

The St. James's was crowded on Wednesday night, when Mr. George Alexander celebrated the completion of his twentieth year of management by presenting each member of the audience with a handsomely-bound copy of Oscar Wilde's comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest," which is just now in such successful revival at the house. A special preface was contributed by Mr. Robert Ross, who paid a well-deserved tribute to the enterprise and high artistic aim of Mr. Alexander's management.

Twenty years! It is a long lease in the careers of men and a lane of many turnings. Yet Mr. George Alexander has been consistent. There is no need for Tariff Reform at his theatre. Of some fifty plays produced scarcely half a dozen were of foreign origin. The great majority were of native birth and often racy of the soil. Pinero, Jones, Carton, Wilde, Grundy, John Oliver Hobbes, Justin Huntly McCarthy, Hope, Haddon Chambers, Henry James, Courtney, Esmond, Sutro, Stephen Philips. What a list! It also stands to the credit of Mr. George Alexander that at his theatre the car of progress started on its march of conquest. The evening of 27th May 1893 marked an epoch in the history of the English stage. For on that memorable night Pinero's "Second Mrs. Tanqueray" was produced in triumph and in one stroke defeated the Philistines and widened the horizon of the British drama.

The Savoy Theatre will be reopened with a new musical play entitled "Two Merry Monarchs," on or about 10th March. The "book" has been written by Mr. Arthur Anderson, and the composer, Mr. Morgan, is appearing for the first time in the making of a London musical play. The same management, with Mr. C. H. Workman, as that which started at the Savoy Theatre last autumn to try to revive public interest in comic opera will produce this new musical comedy.

lecture was in the main a plea for the establishment of a body of playgoers pledged to support the drama as a serious and fine art.

When it was considered, he said, that not a single actor or author or manager could touch sixpence, that not a crust of bread or pint of beer could be earned for a stage carpenter until at least £1,000 a week had been taken for necessary expenses, was it any wonder that the general level of serious plays was so low, and that "legs and tomfoolery," because of their universal appeal, were triumphant!

Legs and tomfoolery, Mr. Jones admitted, were excellent things, "especially when the dancing was that of Maud Allan or Genee, and when the tomfoolery was the wise, graceful, refreshing, and life-giving tomfoolery of Rabelais;" but it was desirable that there should be some discrimination between these things and the serious drama. The theatre was generally regarded by playgoers as "a funny place, where funny people do funny things."

In the provinces the drama might be said to be extinct, except for the rare visits of a London manager. The really living entertainment in the provinces was at the music-halls.

THE SUNDERBUNDS.

SUNDERBUNDS tigers are, as a rule, bold and adventurous. I have known instances when they have driven off cattle at night from one side of the river to the other, that is, from the more cultivated and reclaimed parts, to the opposite and forest clad side, where they were afterwards slaughtered at leisure. On one occasion my boat was anchored at night close to what was then known as the New Toll house, not very far out from Calcutta. A couple of tigers swam the river from the opposite bush—covered sides to where the toll house and a number of hamlets lay, and rushed and stampeded a herd of cattle numbering a couple of score, drove some of them into the water and swam after them till they got them all across to the opposite side. Of course nothing could be done that night, but next morning half a dozen or so of cattle were found missing

It is also nothing unusual for tigers to jump on board a passing boat when going close inshore. In one instance when a friend was coming down to Calcutta in his houseboat, a large tiger jumped on board and carried off the unfortunate cook: this happened about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The boat was going rather close inshore and some 12 to 15 feet from the banks: the cook, who was a Chinaman, was washing plates and dishes on the forward deck, when all of a sudden and without any previous warning, a huge tiger suddenly bounded out of the heavy cover that lined the shore, and before a finger could be raised, had sprung on board and carried off the unfortunate cook. In jumping back with the victim the tiger fell into the water, but before anything could be done to rescue the poor cook, the tiger had scrambled back to the cover and was soon out of sight. It was very distressing to hear the unfortunate man's call for help long after he had been lost sight of.

When travelling through the Sunderbunds boats should always be moored mid-stream or fully some 30 feet or so from the nearest bank, as tigers will often board boats moored close in shore if they think there is anyone on board. Wood-cutters boats are their principal objects of attack; these boats are usually roofless, except perhaps for a small cover of thatch towards the stern in which the boatmen usually lie huddled together, the rest of the boat being left uncovered to stack in the usual Sunderbunds cargo, which consist merely of sundri wood. On one occasion, when a couple of these boats were anchored for the night and rather inshore, a large tiger suddenly sprang on board, and the inmates, who had not yet gone to sleep after their meal, terror stricken, jumped into the water and swam to the next boat. The tiger found himself now in a fix, for on boarding the boat, he had gone through the flimsy bamboo staging, and found himself in chancery, and terror stricken on his part, made frantic efforts to get out, but each time he sprang the staging caught him in the head, and prevented him making his exit, and it was some time before he found himself again at liberty.

A few tigers are annually shot or killed by trap-guns, but owing to the denseness and immensity of the cover only a very few of these are thus destroyed. It is very difficult to get correct statistics and the number of men killed annually by tigers in the Sunderbunds. Boatmen are those from whom the heaviest toll is annually levied, and this class of men are usually averse to let the authorities know, when one of their number fall a victim to the man-eater, and to simplify matters, declare that such deaths were due to have been to cholera or some such other natural causes.

Sunderbunds tigers are more or less amphibious, owing to the nature of the country: they sometimes fall victims to crocodiles, for the larger among these saurians are truly fearsome monsters, measuring as they often do some 20 feet or more and proportionately bulky. Terrible must be such encounters, when the attack is made in some of the more shallower parts, for in deep water the biggest tiger could not have the shadow of a chance, and would be pulled down before it could do much to defend itself.

In the old days there used to be some rather strange ways of shooting tigers: one of these consisted in the slayer taking his position inside what looked uncommonly like a big cage. This cage used to be about twelve feet square with stout sundri saplings for bars. Such a cage could be seen or, rather, the remains of it, at what is thrown as Raney's Villa a couple of miles from the Civil Station of Khulna, and for the matter of that it may still be there. Those mighty hunters the four brothers Raney, alas! now gone to happier hunting grounds, used to relate some wonderful adventures they had: one of the modus operandi was to shoot from these cages, by taking them out to parts, which tigers were known to frequent. The hunter then used to take his seat inside it and to attract tigers attention the watchers chopped at a log of wood; the noise thus created was often mistaken by the tiger for woodcutters, at work for it is among this class that most of his victims were carried off. Spring-guns as well as jaw-traps were sometimes used and it was in one of these latter that one of the brothers Raney had his leg caught, which necessitated the amputation of the limb. These traps were usually on such paths as tigers were known to frequent and a prize sometimes rewarded the setter.

Shooting.

BUYING A GUN.

WHILE these remarks are not intended for the man to whom a gun is a gun and nothing more, nor for the wiseacres who split hairs, on the merits of various makes, still a few words as to the gun and its care may not go amiss. To the true sportsman his gun is everything. On its faithful service and his mastery of it depend his enjoyment afield and his pride in the bag after the day is finished. It is, therefore, meet that he should give some attention to the selection of a suitable companion for his pleasant tramps afield or long hours in a blind.

In selecting a gun, remember that three things are essential: that the gun should be: First—Of good make. Second—Of perfect fit. Third—Suited to the shooting you wish to do.

Any old gun may do to frighten blackbirds from a field, but to bring down the strong winged geese or pierce the feathery armour of a northern-head canvas-back, a gun that will shoot is required, and while a cheap made gun is occasionally found that will shoot as well as a more expensive one and the pattern made by the pellets is far more important than the maker's name, it pays better to put a few extra dollars into the name stamped upon a plain gun than fancy engraving upon the locks of a nameless firearm. The engraving does not improve the shooting power an iota, while the name is a guarantee of good material and workmanship. Do not, in purchasing a shotgun, begrudge a few extra dollars expended in obtaining a good one; it pays in the end. All of the leading makes possess good, distinct "talking points" that are dwelt upon with considerable emphasis by salesmen, any of them will shoot well enough for the most exacting.

Having before you a number of the reliable makes, be careful to select a gun that fits you. This is of the utmost importance. Do not allow a salesman to persuade you that because your neck and arms are of certain lengths, your shoulders slightly stooped etc., you require a certain length and drop of stock, but try them. Take a variety of length and drops of stock and try which, when you are wearing the clothing you expect to shoot in, falls most readily into position when thrown to your shoulder. With your head erect throw the gun to your shoulder, holding it steadily pointed toward some small object not too far away, then lower your head and glance or aim along the barrels. If the gun has come to place easily and is aimed truly, it fits; if it has not come to position easily or has to be "poked" to a true aim, discard it at once and do not purchase it, no matter how well pleased you may be with its appearance or mechanism.

After the quality and fit of a gun some consideration should be given to the adaptability of it to the shooting you expect to do or are liable to do the most of. One shooter remarks, "I have an old-style, heavy, close-bored hammer gun, than which I think there is no better for the goose-pit or duck-pass, but for China pheasants, quail or snipe in close cover particularly, it would be of about as much use as a 12 inche gun from one of our battleships, and to carry it over the stubble fields for grouse is a good day's work."

Grouse, goose or duck shooting on a pass requires a heavy gun of close bore, as many of the shots are at long range, the birds are protected by an armour of close, thick plumage, and hard to kill when hit, and a gun to bring them down should be of large enough gauge to take a heavy charge with a barrel long enough to take care of it and a bore heavy enough to give a close pattern. The 32-inch barrel, choke-bored, 12 gauge, has long been a favourite for this class of shooting, although the 16 gauge is now replacing the larger gun and many excellent shots prefer even a smaller gauge.

For the shooting of grouse and most of the larger upland game birds a lighter gun is generally preferred, not entirely for the sake of the bag, but partially for the relief of the sportsman who has to carry it over rough fields. At the end of a long tramp the difference between a 6½ and an eight-pound gun is noticeable. The 12-gauge with 30-inch barrels, the right half-choked and the left full-choked, is the general favourite. The shots are generally at shorter range, and even at long range, the loose-feathered upland birds are much more easily killed than the waterfowl.

In heavy cover where, on account of the thickness of underbrush, it is difficult to swing even a short gun, where the gun must be handled quickly and most of the shots are under rather than over thirty-five yards, the light, short-barreled "brush gun" of lighter bore is the general favourite, with a heavy, close-bored duck gun which answer admirably the purpose for which it is intended, a quail or snipe in the cover you usually encountered them in, where they flush from almost under foot and have to be stopped before they tip over the first favourable brush or tule clump, would be cleanly missed or so thoroughly killed nothing but a bunch of feathers and fond remembrance would be left.

Some shooters cannot change guns well, and after shooting with a heavy gun are apt to do very poorly with a lighter one, and vice versa. Some get a stock to fit them satisfactorily and have extra barrels; possibly, a 32-inch pair, full-choked, and a 30-inch pair not so heavily bored. One shooter who tried this once and gave it up, says: "The different barrels threw me off even more than the change of guns did, as, while the stock and heavy barrels made a well-balanced gun, the change to the light barrels made a combination I could do absolutely nothing with." In fact, the only solution seems to be two guns of good fit and balance and a sufficient amount of patience to overcome the vexation of shooting under your first few geese after swinging a light gun in heavy cover after the rapidly disappearing valley quail and over shooting your first few snipe after handling a heavy duck gun in a blind.

The gun selected and procured, take care of it. This, with the modern smokeless powder, is a simple thing, and to those who can recall standing for hours over a pail of water pumping suds through the black-caked barrels or scratching away industriously with a wire brush, there seems little excuse for not keeping the inside of a barrel in an almost perfect condition. Some sportsmen constantly use oil; others eschew it. A little good gun oil or vaseline is good as a rust preventive, but when it is used inside the barrel a dry cloth should be run through before shooting.

With the accidents that are constantly happening, due to the careless handling of firearms, advice upon the subject would seem needless, still the fact that so many of these accidents occur proves that a word of warning against the danger constantly attending the improper handling of a gun should not go amiss, and while it is certainly needless to warn a sane adult against pointing a gun, loaded or empty, toward a person, dog horse or any other living animal it is not the intention to nag, a few general rules upon the handling of guns may well be laid down under the caption of "nevers:"

Never hand a loaded gun to another to examine.

Never take a loaded gun into a house or wagon.

Never place a loaded gun against a fence while crawling through or over it.

Never when walking up a covey of birds in the field, carry your gun pointed toward a companion.

Never carry a loaded gun with the stock under the arm so that when it is brought forward a jacket button can catch a trigger.

Never, when a bird flushes and you see there is a person or domesticated animal in line, take it for granted that the shot will not carry so far and shoot, hoping the scattered pellets will do no harm. A person's eye may be injured at 200 yards' distance.

Never lay a loaded gun in the bottom of a boat when there is another person in the boat, or when wading or tramping over soft ground permit the muzzle of the gun to become plugged with mud.

One of the most fruitful sources of accidents is making a practice of always carrying a gun at full cock even when there is no necessity for doing so. With the old hammer guns, when both hammers had to be pulled back, there was some excuse for this, but with the modern hammerless, which can be cocked by simply pushing a catch forward even while the gun is being raised, there is very little. With a little practice no time need be lost in cocking a hammerless gun.

In selecting ammunition always remember that the best is none too good. A few cents per hundred shells extra is nothing in comparison with the vexation of seeing a wounded duck make cover just before a dog can retrieve it, or missing an easy rise when there seems to be no excuse but poor powder. With a good gun, get good ammunition and reduce responsibility so that when a miss is made you can have the satisfaction (?) of charging it to your personal account instead of berating some powder manufacturer who is safe by being a few hundred miles away.

Nearly every sportsman has a choice of ammunition; probably nearly every gun would have, could it express an opinion on the subject. This is really the solution of the perplexing ammunition question: Use the powder and load that shoots best in your gun. This may, of course necessitate considerable experimenting, but the result is worth the attention given the matter. Many sportsmen do not seem to realize that a gun may be overloaded but it may, and after a gun's limit has been reached additional ammunition means an increased recoil without an increase in effectiveness; especially is this true of allowing shell room for shot, which should be devoted to wadding. Use plenty of wadding and if, after getting in your powder, you find there is not sufficient room for the wadding and the amount of shot you intended to use—providing, of course, that your gun can take care of the powder load—put in the wads and leave some of the shot out.

Nowadays, of course, hardly anyone thinks of buying black powder, although you may occasionally meet one of the old timers who will sigh, shake his head and confide to you that the old black powder, in his opinion, gave just a little more penetration than the new-fangled smokeless brands, but there is variety enough among the standard bulk smokeless powders to choose from. At first try any of them or all of them until you settle on one that best suits you and your gun, then stick to it until you have some good reason for changing.

METHOD OF HUNTING BY THE GREAT CARNIVORA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I have read "Nomad's" letter on this subject in your issue of 20th January with considerable interest; the more so as I happened to have Selous' "African Nature Notes" in the house at the time the Indian Field arrived.

If we marshal the great mass of information which we have at our command regarding the habits of tigers and panthers, it would seem impossible to accept "Nomad's" supposition that these animals do not hunt by scent. The habits of village prowling panthers, which subsist almost entirely on goats and dogs, must necessarily be very different from those of game killers pure and simple. Many animals hunt by scent, until they view; but in the case of the domestic animals of a village, scenting is a superfluity; there are the goats and dogs bleating and yelping their whereabouts, and naturally a panther wanting one would use only its ears and eyes. "Nomad" himself points out that the powers of vision of the great cats seems to be neither long, nor very clear. One could hardly accept such a theory as that these animals use only imperfect vision, assisted by acute hearing, in capturing the wary wild creatures of the jungle. In the dense Ceylon jungles panthers constantly hunt at night, and I used often to hear them at dawn in localities regularly resorted to by chestnut. I used to arrive near the edge of a grass glade, while it was still dark, and remain watching there, and it was while thus sitting silently waiting for the light, that I so often heard the familiar grating growl. Most probably a panther would only begin to talk after the night's business was over; at any rate my theory was that they were simply grumbling to each other over poor shikar.

It must not be forgotten that in a country of extremes like India, the scent left by an animal must be very variable in strength. Hot sun quickly dries up all scent, and it is quite conceivable that a buffalo tied up during the day and therefore staying in one spot all the night, might, if there happened to be no breeze, give no whiff of its presence even at a very short distance. I used a spaniel a great deal for small game shooting in India, and was much struck by her inability, in spite of a very good nose, to follow up wounded partridges in dry weather, when there was no moisture in the air. In the hills on the contrary, where both air and jungle were moist, she never had the least difficulty in recovering runners. No doubt exactly the same applies to the big cats: there must be many days when their noses, however good, are useless to them. Tigers too, be it noted, are usually hunted at the beginning of the hot weather, when the air is intensely dry and scenting-conditions at their worst. When a carnivorous animal hunts by scent, we may safely assume that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred it tracks some creature which is on the move, getting the fresh whiff when crossing the trail. The very fact of tying up a buffalo as bait makes the conditions for a tiger or panther finding it by scent the worst possible. The trail to the tying up place is sun-baked and hours old before the visitor comes on the scene. What wonder then that a bait which will give tongue is most likely to be attacked?

Panthers are so bold in their habits, that some of the cases where they have appeared not to notice the scent of a man in near ambush to the bait, may well be disregard, rather than ignorance. I have on several occasions watched jungle cats hunting, and from their attitude, with the head carried low, I feel certain they were using their noses. I think cats raise their heads when listening. Once when sitting over a kill, at the edge of dense jungle, I saw a panther steal out of the covert, and then sit up on its haunches just outside, with its head up. I imagine it was listening intently; it certainly remained in this attitude for quite an appreciable time.

To sum up, I believe a just view of the hunting methods of the big cats to be that they use sight, hearing, and scent, all in turn, according to the nature of the game sought and the existing conditions. That in bad scenting weather and when the game is not on the move, their noses are little use, seems certain. On the other hand, when their prey has to be hunted for in the dark, through dense jungle, I think it equally reasonable to believe that tigers and panthers find their noses the most indispensible of the three organs used.

"VELOPEX" BULLET

AFTER BEING FIRED.

Extract from "THE FIELD" Newspaper.

"The group illustrated was made with the 365-grain bullet as fired from the ·465 cartridge. It was produced at the very first attempt, and it constitutes what seems likely to stand for some time to come as a record amongst properly authenticated targets. The centre of the whole seven shots lie within a space practically 1 in. square (actually 1·00 in. by 1·05 in.) and the reader may satisfy himself from the reproduction of part of the actual target that all the shots would have hit a postage stamp. It is interesting to know that the sights used were of the open variety, and that orthoptic spectacles were not employed."

GREATEST ACCURACY and HIGHEST VELOCITY yet obtained (2,282 feet per second).

BUREAU OF NATURAL HISTORY AND SCIENTIFIC TAXIDERMY,

DEHRA DUN,
United Provinces.

Depôt of Museum and Naturalists' supplies with Department for Ornamental Taxidermy. Feather Pictures of all India Game Birds made by W. M. Hutton.

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

New Life for Nervous Sufferers!

"My nerves are in an awful state!"

That is the daily despondent cry of millions of people whose life is made a misery by nervous conditions, which, if unchecked, may lead to the gravest consequences.

To such sufferers there is the possibility of a "new life" with the restoration of all the old feeling of physical strength and mental exhilaration which made life worth living.

This "new life" is offered by Sanatogen whose merits more than ten thousand physicians have proclaimed in enthusiastic letters, describing the marvellous results they have obtained by what is, admittedly, the world's supreme revitaliser of nerves, brain and body.

Sanatogen is, therefore, pre-eminently beneficial in nervous debility and breakdown, weakened and disordered nerves, loss of memory, disordered digestion and dyspepsia, dysentery, malaria, anæmia, loss of vitality, and the loss of weight and strength which are the inevitable consequences of wasting diseases like Consumption.

Sanatogen's action is due to its constituents—milk proteid and glycero-phosphate of sodium, chemically combined to form a new compound which is at once a food and a tonic, profoundly powerful in its result, yet so bland and mild in itself that doctors constantly prescribe it for young children.

Sanatogen is admittedly the supreme restorative in convalescence from all acute diseases, such as enteric fever, dysentery and malaria, for it is easily digested, rapidly assimilated, and perfectly absorbed.

Hundreds of thousands of people, among whom are many well-known men and women, have voluntarily testified that Sanatogen has restored them to perfect health. A selection from their letters appears on this page.

Sanatogen may be obtained of all chemists and bazaars. Descriptive pamphlet entitled, "How to Keep Well in Tropical Climates," sent free on application to the Wholesale Agents, Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet & Co., Calcutta.

Send a post-card, to-day, mentioning this paper.

The Rt. Hon. Sir Hy. Aubrey-Fletcher, Bart., C.B., M.P.:

"I have used Sanatogen for some time and appreciate its qualities."

Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P.:

"I have used Sanatogen with extraordinary benefit. It is a true food tonic, feeding the nerves, increasing the energy, and giving fresh vigour to the overworked body and mind."

Sir Frederick Milner, Bart.:

"I have been taking Sanatogen for some time, and it seems both to nourish me and give me strength."

Sir William Bull, M.P.:

"I consider your preparation, Sanatogen, is of decided value. It performs that which it promises to do, and I have recommended it to several friends."

Mr. Shirley Tremearne (Editor of "Capital"), Calcutta:

"I cannot speak too highly of Sanatogen, which I took for some time, during a sharp attack of fever. It restored me once more to full vigour. In fact, I was better, and stronger, after this course of Sanatogen than before the attack. I can strongly recommend this preparation to anyone whose system has run-down."

The Lord Bishop of Norwich:

"Mrs. Sheepshanks is taking Sanatogen regularly and deriving great benefit from it."

Lord Edward Churchill:

"I have derived benefit from taking Sanatogen."

Sir Charles A. Cameron, C.B., M.D.:

"Sanatogen is an excellent nerve food."

MADRAS HUNT POINT-TO-POINT RACES.

THESE races, which form the final wind up of the hunting season, took place on Saturday afternoon the 26th ultimo, and though the attendance of spectators was not large and fields were smaller than they should have been, it was a most sporting function and produced close and exciting finishes in each event coloured on the cards.

Riders were mustered at the 6th milestone on the Poonamallee Road while spectators went on to the 7th close to which the finishing point had been marked out by high poles carrying flags, in the Coum river bed. Carriages and motors were able to drive right up to the river bank and their occupants were enable to get a good view of the finish and of the surrounding country, the Body Guard and Police drags being much soughtafter as coigns of vantage.

The members of the Hunt were "At Home" and dispensed hospitality in the form of refreshments to those who had undertaken the long and very dusty journey out.

The contestants for the first race, the Horse Cup, were trotted off by Major Giffard (who with Mr. Marshall was responsible for all three courses) at 4-15 P.M. across the river for about a mile in a northerly direction. Injunctions given at the start were to ride for a clump of palm trees about a mile distant, cross the Ambattur Tank bund just beyond them, then turn left handed inside the tank bund hugging the bund till a flag was sighted, and after going round this left handed make the best of courses for the 7th milestone. Captain Long on Loyalty made the pace hot up to the flag in the Tank but here being brought to their noses the field spread out a bit but the majority took a very good line. Captain Marryat on Kerang was first into the river bed but Mr. Worke on Blaize got up in the run in and beat him for first place by a length, Captain Ross on Red King a good third. The heavy weights were well to the fore: only four of them went and they were all in the first five. The two medium prizes going to Captain Ross third and Mr. Vernon's Milton who was sixth.

The ladies had meantime been despatched on their journey. The number of runners had unfortunately dwindled down to three but the closeness of the finish made up for lack of numbers. They all came into the river bed in a bunch and a neck and neck race ensued up the last 200 yards, Mrs. Marjoribanks on Honesty getting home a head to the good of Mrs. Branson on Diplomat who was in turn only half a length in front of Mrs. Forteous on Miladi.

The next race, the Pony Cup, started from close to the 6th milestone to and round Mogappair village, leaving it on the left and then home. They ran in a bunch to Mogappair but on turning for home a big scatteration took place. Many keeping too much to the west, Captain Marryat got into the river bed above the finish and had bad luck in not winning. He was on the wrong side of the water and instead of crossing it when he came to it he rode down along the far side to an easier place past the finishing flags and then crossed and turned to finish. This let in Mr. Campbell and Mr. Branson who had taken a bee line and dropped down the steep bank level with the flags, got through the water and popped between the flags in the order named before Captain Marryat could get Surhid round. There was not more than a length between the first three.

After an interval for refreshments Mr. Millar distributed the cups. The going was unavoidably terribly hard and this undoubtedly prevented a good number of careful owners from sending their animals. There were two or three "downers" in the Horse cup in which some pretty formidable double bunds had to be crossed but in spite of the hard falling no damage was done. The following was the results:—

THE HORSE CUP.—For horses that have been regularly ridden with the Madras Hounds to be owned and ridden by subscribers. Heavy weights. Catch weights over 13st. Sport in England.

LONDON, Friday, 11th February 1910

THE TURF.

SANDOWN.

THE precautions taken at the close of Friday's racing by recovering the course at the jumps with hay looked like being warranted at nightfall, but assurance was made doubly sure, as a southerly wind came appropriately to the rescue on Saturday. The threatened rain, except for a perfunctory shower, held off and though the sun did not have a chance the temperature was at a much more comfortable degree. The going was in a very holding state, the hoofs cutting in deeply, but good fields came to the rescue, and the meeting certainly contributed the best up-to-date sport under National Hunt Rules this season. It was too much to expect two days of such interesting racing Tuesday's programme was wanting in many of the attractiv. features as compared with Monday's card, and consequently there was a great falling off in the strength of the fields, while quality was nothing like so well represented. However, there was a compensating feature in the fact that not a single fall occurred during the afternoon—a matter of some satisfaction, considering how terribly saturated had the ground become after more rain during the night—and with three of the five races being won by first favourites, backers can be said to have had the best of the exchanges. Results:—

PLUMPTON.

With the air fairly full of moisture all down the line, no break in the clouds was made by the Sussex South Downs, which often divide the weather, as the mists were rolling down their slopes on Tuesday. The wind fortunately kept off the impending rain, and a February, spring-like afternoon was enjoyed by a fairly good company. The going, as it always is on the Station Field, was fairly good, and with a number of rival horses coming in from the Sussex stables in the morning, fields panned out well. Results:—

HURST PARK.

Another hoar frost overnight and a hazy morning in town that might mean what the good Glasgow folk call a "saft day" did not damp the ardour of Metropolitan sportsmen on Wednesday. With an Italian blue sky giving the sun full scope the afternoon proved a beautiful one, while the going, with the grass left long, was neither hard nor heavy. Results:—

After a sharp frost overnight the country yesterday was again on the soft side but with the wind in the south-west a regular drizzle set in after proceedings commenced to spoil sport soon, and make the going a bit holding at the finish. A capital attendance was again recorded, while fields ruled well throughout; but except in the case of Domino and Abelard backers failed to hit the mark, and many were glad to get their losses home in the last race. FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

VERY satisfactory progress was made with the struggle for the Association Cup last Saturday. The second round programme comprised sixteen games, and of these no fewer than thirteen were brought to a definite issue. Southend drew with Queen's Park Rangers, Bristol City, although enjoying the advantage of playing at home, failed to overcome West Bromwich Albion, and meeting at Northampton, Nottingham Forest and Northampton—the conquerors in the first round of Sheffield United and Sheffield Wednesday—played a pointless draw. The field of thirty-two clubs included twelve representatives of the First League, ten of the Second League, and ten of the Southern League, and of these six First Leaguers, three Second Leaguers and four Southern Leaguers earned the right to participate in the third round. When the replays have taken place and the sixteen clubs competing in the next stage are definitely known the First Leaguers will number eight if Bristol City and Nottingham Forest pull through. The Second Leaguers at the best will only be four, while the Southern League must have five representatives, and will have six provided that Northampton dispose of Nottingham Forest.

Quite a feature of these ties consisted in the excellent performances of some of the clubs appearing on their opponents' grounds. Manchester City, journeying down to Southampton, won by 5 to 0. West Ham United disposed at Wolverhampton of the Cup holders of 1908 by 5 to 1. Leyton pulled through at Stockport by 2 to 0. Coventry proved victorious at Portsmouth by 1 to 0. Blackburn Rovers beat Bradford City at Bradford by 2 to 1, and at Stamford Bridge Tottenham Hotspur overcame Chelsea by 1 to 0. On the other hand, Derby County, the leaders in the Second League, went down before Aston Villa at Birmingham by 6 to 1. Woolwich Arsenal lost to Everton at Goodison Park by 5 to 0, Fulham were beaten at Newcastle by 4 to 0, and Bristol Rovers, after being given choice of ground by the draw, having agreed for a consideration of £500 to play at Barnsley, were also defeated by 4 to 0; while the tie at Roker Park between Sunderland and Bradford ended in the dismissal of the latter from the competition by 3 to 1. Barnsley, who three weeks ago knocked out Manchester United, last season's winners, lost at Swindon by 2 to 0, but at Leicester Bury were only beaten by the odd goal in five.

Scoring ruled high, the thirteen games brought to a definite issue yielding 49 goals, but such was the disparity between winners and losers that whereas the successful clubs obtained 43 goals, of the teams knocked out eight failed to score at all, and four others had to rest content with one goal apiece. The London clubs had fair cause for satisfaction. Unlucky in the draw, no fewer than six of the seven surviving the first round had to play away from home, yet Tottenham Hotspur, West Ham United, and Leyton have all pulled through, and Queen's Park Rangers may achieve a similar distinction when they replay Southend at Park Royal during the week. Fulham and Woolwich Arsenal both lost badly, it is true, but these were the only pronounced failures on the part of metropolitan teams. Curiously enough Chelsea, the only London club, enjoying the advantage of playing at home, were dismissed from the competition. London should certainly have four representatives among the last sixteen.

How little League form is to be trusted in gauging the prospects of a Cup-tie was demonstrated by the results of the three matches in which First League teams came together. In the League competition Chelsea had beaten Tottenham Hotspur at Stamford Bridge and Bradford City had defeated Blackburn Rovers at Bradford, while at Plumstead the Arsenal could claim a victory over Everton, yet yesterday Hotspur pulled through at Stamford Bridge and the Rovers at Bradford, while at Goodison Park, instead of at Plumstead, the Arsenal, so far from beating Everton, went down by no less than 5 to 0.

Whoever the actual winners of the Cup may prove to be, the semi-finalists are likely to undergo a big change from last year, for Manchester United were knocked out in the first round. Derby County went down yesterday, and Bristol City, the runners-up, have to beat West Bromwich Albion at West Bromwich before they reach the third round. Newcastle United alone of the four are safely through the first two rounds. Are they this year to receive consolation for their previous disappointments when, reaching the final tie three times in the course of four seasons, they lost to Aston Villa, Everton, and Wolverhampton Wanderers in turn?

RUGBY RULES

In beating Scotland at Cardiff on Saturday Wales gained a handsome win. They were clearly the better side and more readily adapted themselves to the conditions. That, of course, was not surprising, as the Welshmen are acquainted with the Cardiff Arms Park, and visiting sides are at a disadvantage when it is in the muddy state it was yesterday. The Scotsmen floundered about and were not able to keep their feet as well as their opponents. The chief cause of Scotland's defeat was that they were beaten at their strongest point. For once in a way the Scotch forwards did not come up to expectations. Full details are given below.

When the Harlequins and Richmond met at Twickenham early in the season, Richmond after change of ends played up so well forward that for a little while there existed no small prospect of the Harlequins lead being wiped out, and although in the end Richmond lost, the game was something of a blow to the great reputation possessed by the Harlequins. In the return encounter yesterday, however, the Harlequins demonstrated their superiority in no uncertain fashion, leading by 16 points at the interval and running out winners in the end by 5 goals (one dropped) and 2 tries to a try. F. Stoop gained three tries, Lambert two, and Birkett one. At Honor Oak Guy's Hospital although almost at full strength, went down before United Services, much in the same way as they had done a week earlier before the Scottish. On each occasion the result was mainly due to the better work of the visiting forwards, who, lighter than those of Guy's moved more successfully upon terribly heavy ground. By the way, the Services have not received quite enough credit for their recent victory over Cardiff. Admittedly the famous Welsh club was not at anything like full strength, but the team placed in the field included several famous players and yet proved no match for the Services, who rose to the occasion against the Welshmen in great style, working hard from start to finish, passing well themselves, and fairly breaking up the Cardiff combination. L. L. Greig was in great form at half and Lyon has rarely been seen to better advantage as a full-back. The Services have not, on the whole, quite realised the expectations entertained at the beginning of the season, but for some disappointments the victory over Cardiff furnished ample compensation.

WALES vs. SCOTLAND.—Cardiff Arms Park, Cardiff was the scene of the twenty-sixth encounter between Wales and Scotland under Rugby Union Rules. Eighteen years having elapsed since Scotland last beat Wales on Welsh soil, the Welshmen were naturally favourites, but England three weeks ago having for the first time since 1898 lowered the colours of the Principality, yesterday's struggle was invested with more doubt than would have been the case had Wales opened the international season with their customary victory over England. Of the twenty-five previous encounters Scotland had won thirteen, Wales eleven, and one had been drawn. In the Welsh team there were five changes from the side defeated by England, Owen, and R. Jones, the halves, given way to Morgan and Bush, Spiller and Baker displacing J. P. Jones and Hopkins in the three-quarter line, while among the forwards Jenkins appeared instead of Pritchard, who was indisposed. In the Scottish fifteen Sutherland, of Hawick, completed the three-quarter line in the absence of Dobson, the Glasgow Academical, the latter being prevented from turning out owing to an injured ankle. The game, of course, aroused widespread interest in South Wales, the company, being estimated at more than 30,000. Owing to the heavy recent rains the ground was heavy, and a slight drizzle yesterday morning did not improve matters, while with a fairly strong breeze prevailing, the conditions proved far from favourable to high-class football. Punctually at three o'clock the struggle commenced, Wales starting against the wind. The Welsh forwards were in front of the ball at the kick off, so the game opened with a scrummage in the centre. The Scottish forwards at once came away and reached the home "25" where Milroy threw out to Tennant, the latter, failing to take his pass and letting in the Welsh pack, who worked their way back to midfield. Scotland replied with a strong rush, which Spiller at length checked. Scotland again pressed, but were unable to maintain their position, clever work by the Welsh forwards taking the game back to well within the visitors' half. Here Bancroft tried to drop a goal, but failed, and Schulze touched down. In another attack by Wales a dangerous rush ended in the ball being kicked dead and Scotland thus narrowly escaping. Then for a time the game went in favour of the visitors, some scrambling play, mainly confined to the forwards, ending in the visitors reaching the home "25." Under the conditions which prevailed it was no easy matter to handle the ball, and the tackling on both sides continued both keen and sure. From a free kick McCallum found touch near the Welsh line, but from a mark Bancroft cleared, and then Schulze sent the ball dead. Wales next came away in good style, but Bush, attempting a drop, the ball rolled dead again, and from the drop out Scotland made their way to midfield. Once more the Welsh forwards gained ground, Bush, essaying a further but fruitless attempt at a drop. By this time the home team had settled down to fine football, and Scotland found themselves hard pressed. On one occasion Baker narrowly missed a score, Angus just managing to touch down in time, but directly afterwards a strong forward Welsh rush ended in Pugsley gaining a try. Bancroft failed with the place kick. Following upon this reverse the Scotchmen by dint of hard kicking succeeded in reaching the Welsh line, but they were soon drawn back, and then in turn the Welsh forwards brought off a long rush which only ended well inside the visitors' "25." The home side, however, failed to turn the position to account, and soon as the result of some dashing work, the Scotchmen got right down to the other end only for Wales to make their way back to the centre. After some scrambling work in the mud, Scotland pressed, but the visitors were not really dangerous, and once again the play went strongly in favour of the Principality. One attack on the visitors' lines was repelled, but a little later a fine passing movement ended in Spiller scoring, and this time Bancroft converted the try. Leading by eight points, Wales continued to have the best of matters, but Schulze, getting in one or two good kicks, defended to fine purpose, and, moreover, checking two fierce rushes in plucky and effective fashion. In the course of an attack by the Welsh forwards, Tennant, the Scottish half, was hurt, and retired from the field for a time, and a little later Bush fell lame. Nothing further was scored up to the interval, when the game stood:

Wales ... ... 1 goal 1 try

Scotland 0

Immediately upon resuming, the Scottish forwards dribbled down in strong fashion, and were nearly over the home line. The Welsh defence, however, held out stoutly, and the attack ended with Pearson having his kick charged down by the Welsh forwards, who dribbled right to the other end, where Scotland in turn had a narrow escape. Tennant met with another injury, and suffering apparently from concussion, was carried off the field, McCallum being pulled out from the visiting pack to act as half. From a long kick Wales touched down. Following a rush by the home forwards, Scotland cleared, and then Schulze finding touch cleverly placed his side in a favourable position. A free kick enabled the Scotchmen to maintain the pressure, and Wales being penalised, McCallum tried to drop a goal, but the ball went wide and dead. From the position in which the penalty was given a place kick might with advantage have been taken. Soon afterwards there came a further rush by the Welsh forwards, and a rapid movement among the Welsh backs ended in Baker adding a further try. The place kick failed, but with Wales by that time eleven points ahead the result was almost a foregone conclusion. Wales promptly returned to the attack, and in a forward rush nearly scored Schulze touching down for the first time in the game. A minute later Scotland had to touch down again, the Welshmen about this period playing very finely, and Scotland beginning to feel the absence of McCallum from the pack. A further long dribble by the home side threatened danger, but Simson succeeded in kicking dead. A free kick brought slight relief to Scotland, but W. Morgan worked his way back to the visitors' quarters, where Spiller and Baker brought off a capital movement and were only just held up in time to prevent a further score. The attack continued of a very threatening description, and the Welsh forwards actually took the ball over the line, but Scotland managed to touch down. Following upon this narrow escape, Scotland pressed, their forwards putting in fine work. Wales, however, speedily cleared, and Schulze had hard work to stop a strong rush. In the concluding stages of the game Ivor Morgan added a further try for the home side. The place kick was unsuccessful, but still the Principality won handsomely, the final score being:

Wales ... ... 1 goal 3 tries

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

NORTHUMBERLAND vs. LANCASHIRE.—After a very interesting game at North Shields victory rested with Northumberland, who scored a goal and 2 tries to a goal and 1 try. Fine weather prevailed and except for the rather soft turf favourable conditions were enjoyed. The wind blew across the ground and the early play went in favour of Lancashire, whose forwards showed fine form. However, Northumberland improved and set up constant attacks in one of which Mather picked up and ran over in fine style. Cumberlege kicked a goal and at half-time Northumberland led by 5 points to 0. On resuming Northumberland forced the game in great style and Mather and Hogg each crossed the visitors' line. Cumberlege took the kicks but failed with both. Then the game underwent a complete change. Meaks got in and Entwhistle followed with another try, and one goal resulting only 3 points divided the sides, Lancashire continued to make great efforts and there was a rare finish with the defence on each side holding out. Northumberland, 1 goal 2 tries; Lancashire, 1 goal 1 try.

GUY'S HOSPITAL vs. UNITED SERVICES.—As was the case the previous Saturday, the ground at Honor Oak Park was in a terrible state of mud, and the Hospital, though practically at full strength, once more were beaten forward, and once more suffered a reverse. On paper the Services had a weak side out, for Lyon, Warrington-Morris, Greig, Cooper, and Blagrove were all away, but their front division combined splendidly on the heavy going, and scarcely at any time was the formidable three-quarter line of Guy's able to look dangerous even. Again and again the Service forwards broke up quickly, and overran the home half-backs. It was a near thing on several occasions in the first half, but nothing was scored until midway through the second, just after Archer, of Guy's, had been hurt. Then Harrison placed a goal from a penalty kick, and the success was followed up by Boyle running in from a clever try. This ended the scoring. Services, 1 penalty goal 1 try; Guy's 0.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. LONDON SCOTTISH.—Rain fell heavily throughout this game at Cambridge and the play of both sides naturally suffered. The London Scottish were, however, seen to advantage in winning by two goals and three tries to one try. They gained a lead of eight points in the first half, Walter getting over twice, and Campbell placing one goal, and never looked like losing their advantage. After ends had been changed the University were outplayed. Campbell and Malcolm each got over, and a fifth was gained in a forward rush. Campbell also placed a goal. Near the end Jones crossed the London Scottish line. Scottish, 2 goals 3 tries; Cambridge, 1 try.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs. LONDON WELSH.—Played at Oxford under conditions entirely against good football, the University winning by eleven points to none. The winners adapted themselves to the conditions better than the London Welshmen, whose passing frequently broke down. Both sides, however, missed many chances. In a forward rush Allen scored a try for Oxford in the first half, and on resuming Poulton—after a fine run from the centre—and Martin added further tries. Cunningham placed one goal. For Oxford, Bourne tackled splendidly. Oxford University, 1 goal 2 tries; London Welsh, 0.

ROWING.

THE VARSITY BOAT RACE.

No change in the Boat Race date is to be made. Presidents Mackinnon and Williams have made this known officially in a statement which must have opened the eyes of their memorialists pretty considerably. They showed that the 23rd March date is imperative this year, for one thing. For another, that, under all circumstances, no less a personage than the Bishop of London approved of it from the first. Nor is that stickler for religious observances, ordinarily, alone in thus approving of the arrangement. Mr. Throughton (Ealing) reminds one that the race has twice before been rowed in Holy Week, i.e., in 1880 (owing to a fog) and in 1884 (owing to the funeral of the Duke of Albany). He then pertinently adds: "Nobody that I ever heard of was scandalised then, and I am unable to understand why there should be so much 'pother' about it now. Why, people who, like myself, wish to observe Holy Week should be unable to do so because they also wish to see the Boat Race is to me an enigma, and I am a High Churchman of the Pusey-Liddon type. If it were not wrong to row the race in Holy Week in 1880 and 1884, why is it wrong in 1910?" Exactly. Further argument under that heading is about as useless as—well, the pneumatic. All the same, a good many people do very strongly object to even boat racing in Holy Week, and it is just as well to study everybody's feelings whenever possible. It is always difficult to shake off ancient prejudices, you know—but enough. A Holy Week date is not likely to be arranged very often, if at all, for the future, I fancy. Both the representative crews enter upon strict training from Wednesday next. As usual, Ash Wednesday will be observed as a rowing holiday and then real, serious business commences. The Oxonians will again practise over the historic Henley course for a week or ten days, I understand, before migrating to Putney. There Mr. Clade Holland or Mr. Harcourt Gold will have them in charge. The Cantabs will row on the Ouse, at Ely, after Mr. Dudley Ward finishes up his coaching on the Cam, about the 14th instant. Here Mr. D. A. Wauchope will act as mentor. Thence they proceed direct to Putney on 3rd March where Dr. Etherington-Smith will coach them for nearly three weeks. May interim mishap be conspicuous by its absence!

Very few changes are likely to be made in the Oxford boat from to-day. Trials are to be given to Mr. Field (Brasenose) and Mr. Culme Seymour (New College), presumably. Both have been tubbed daily, although the rumour that Mr. Field had been ordered not to row or play football was prevalent last week. It evidently had no foundation. One or both of those oarsmen may accompany the crew as spare men, if they fail to get their colours. Avoirdupois is a strong point of the Oxford eight this year. Only one man—the right one—is under 11st. while Nos. 4, 5 and 6 all scale over 13st. Individually, the men have improved most appreciably just lately, and, as a crew, they have great possibilities. All depends on how well they are taught and how much they improve in the immediate future. They have, of course, not been long enough together yet to gain complete control over the oar, while defects in sliding have yet to be remedied. In the main, however, they swing fairly, use their weight, and to some extent drive well with their legs. Especially they now need improvement in sliding and in wrist-work at the finish of the stroke. Points in their favour are strength, vigour and zest. If between now and the end of the month they learn to apply their strength more effectively, it seems assured that Oxford will turn out an eight at Putney fully averags. Misfortune has fallen the Cantabs also since one's last. Mr. Rosher, the Blue, met with a slight accident which has kept him out of the boat for some days. One hopes he will soon recover. Changes have been made, too, and it seems pretty certain now that Mr. Shields (Jesus) will continue to set the work. Mr. Fairburn did so for several outings, but the old order was quickly resumed, and the C.U.B.C. secretary is now at Bow. Mr. Dudley Ward, their coach, is doing his work well. Slowly, but very surely, he is getting rid of all traces of the 1906-7-8 style of rowing; that I mean, best known as "the Stuart style." When he has finished his task, the orthodox English style—that of which Mr. Dudley Ward himself was such a distinguished exponent—will once more mark the Light Blue's work. This has long been President Williams's desire, and its consummation will fittingly be arrived at during his year of office. Capital progress has been made by most of the oarsmen individually and also as a "crew" during the week. Some of them are not exactly stylists, nor is their body-work pleasing to look at just now. They are still in the rough to great extent, and the blade-work shows a lack of control. All are hard-working, honest men, however, with many good rowing points. If their improvement is continued and maintained during their final practice on the Cam, the livelier waters of the Ouse will help them on considerably.

GOLF.

SOUTHERN FOURSOME TOURNEY.—In spite of the depressing weather which prevailed some interesting golf was seen at Stoke Poges on Tuesday, when the final of the Professional Golfers Association's foursome tournament for the Southern section was decided. The finalists were the brothers J. H. and Josh Taylor and James Bradbeer and C. Charles. The latter couple were the runners-up last year and they had to be content with that position again yesterday. At the end of the first round the Taylors led by 5 up, and they ultimately gained the victory by 6 up and 5 to play. Among the spectators was Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein, himself an enthusiastic golfer.

At the first 9 holes there appeared to be some prospect of a close match. Bradbeer and Charles began well, while J. H. Taylor, who was suffering from a severe cold, did not seem to be in his usual form. Going to the first hole, for instance, he made the, for him, unusual mistake of socketting his mashie shot, and Bradbeer and Charles took the lead. The second was halved, but the Taylors drew level at the third, where the champion got on the green from the tee, and so enabled his side to win the hole in 3 to 4. They took the lead at the 4th, where "J. H." ran down an eight feet putt for a 4. At the fifth the match was again squared. The next four holes were halved so that at the turn the sides were "all even." The Taylors might have won the seventh, where the champion played a fine tee shot, but his side was laid a stymie, and they could only halve in 4.

Up to this point the weather had been fine, but rain now began to fall and continued with scarcely a break during the remainder of the day. Coming home, Bradbeer and Charles did not do so well. At the tenth Bradbeer made a poor drive, but Charles made a good recovery with his pitch on to the green, and the hole was divided in 4. Both "J. H." and Charles pulled their tee spots into the bunkers at the short eleventh hole and the result was a half in 5. The twelfth was the turning point of the match. Charles laid the champion a dead stymie. The latter was about two yards from the hole, but he got round the opposing ball and secured the hole in 4 to 5. This gave his side the lead, and Bradbeer and Charles never afterwards succeeded in drawing level. The Taylors became 2 up at the thirteenth, where Charles topped his drive. On the next green Josh Taylor had a two yards putt for the hole, but he ran two yards past the tin, and his brother had to get down from that distance for a half in 6. Going to the fifteenth, the Taylors played the better long game, but Josh Taylor's putt was put off the line by a tuft, and another half resulted, this time in 5. The remaining three holes were won by the Taylors. At the sixteenth Bradbeer sliced his tee shot close to the river, and he and Charles lost the hole in 3 to 5. The brothers played perfect golf at the next two holes, and won them both in 4 each. They thus led by 5 upon the first round. The scores were:—

Out: 753454456 (42); home: 454465544 (39)—81.

Bradbeer and Charles.

Out: 554544455 (42); home: 455665556 (47)—89.

The Taylors gained another hole going out in the afternoon They lost the first hole, where the champion was bunkered from his tee shot, but they secured the second, where Bradbeer was trapped from his second shot. The next six holes were halved. At the ninth Charles topped his tee shot, and although Bradbeer made a very clever approach from under a tree, the Taylors secured the hole, and thus became 6 up. Coming home, they contented themselves with halving the first four holes, so that the match finished on the thirteenth green in favour of the brothers by 6 and 5. Second round scores:—

J. H. Taylor and Josh Taylor.

Out: 544555554 (40); home: 5551 (16).—Total (13 holes), 56.

Bradbeer and Charles.

Out: 454555555 (41); home: 4554 (16).—Total (13 holes) 57.

CROSS-COUNTRY.

BLACKHEATH H. v. OXFORD U.—On Saturday the Oxford University Hare and Hounds sent a fairly representative team to Blackheath to run an eight mile cross-country match with the Blackheath Harriers. The contest was extra interesting from the fact that the Oxonians may be seen competing in the National Championship. The result of the race was a win for the Blackheathens by 21 points to 34, and they also had the satisfaction of supplying the first two men home in H. E. J. Southwell and E. F. Judson, who finished in that order, third place being filled by the Oxford cross-country "blue" R. E. Knight.

S. L. H. v. CAMBRIDGE U. H. AND H.—The South London Harriers had a busy time on Saturday, when their first team went to Cambridge for a match with the Cambridge University Hare and Hounds first team. The second teams met at Selsdon Road for a contest over the Croydon country, and the S.L.H. veterans' five miles Challenge Cup race and sealed handicap, at the latter rendezvous, were also down for decisions.

In the first team match at Cambridge over the Gog-Magog course a close race resulted in favour of the S.L.H. by five points—25 to 30—although the Light Blues had the first two men home in W. H. Nowers and H. E. Garrod.

In the second team match, at Croydon, the S.L.H. won by the greatest possible margin, viz. 15 points to 40, as they had the first five men home.

Hunting.

THE MADRAS HOUNDS.

THE 6th milestone Poonamallee Road "to finish the season" was the fixture of the 20th ultimo and only a small field cast up at the meeting place. In the absence of Mr. Horne, who was unable to come out, Mr. Campbell officiated as Huntsman.

The first draw, Vardapah Naidu's Mango Tope, close to the meet at once provided a jack, hounds dropping on to him as soon as they crossed the fence into cover and away they went very fast out at the southern end pointing for the Kodambakkam Road. On reaching the southern bund of the Koyambedu Tank all across the open for a mile at best pace, our jack turned up the bund for a bit and then came back in a parallel line with that on which he had come out, hounds still running all they knew. Just before regaining Vardapah Naidu's Tope, however, the jack was headed by some of the field who had got left on the Poonamallee Road and were just starting in pursuit. He was, however, viewed sneaking back into the Tope and hounds were almost at once on his line again, but scent suddenly appeared to have failed in an extraordinary manner as they could only carry it slowly across the Poonamallee Road and the Cooum River and eastwards along the Tirumangalam covers on the far side. Here a sharp jink back threw hounds out entirely and though he was again viewed and hounds laid on when he had been gone only a few seconds, they could make nothing more of it. A good little burst, while it lasted, of 15 minutes.

We then proceeded in the Mogappair direction and soon had another jack going in the Reddipalaiyam Casuarina woods. He led us the usual dance backwards and forwards between Mogappair and Ayanampakkam for an hour, hugging the woods all the time. This part of the proceedings was as the Aryan brother loves to put it, "more readily imagined than described," and hounds had finally to be stopped as they could make no impression on him.

Thus ended the 1909-10 season. The hot weather is coming swiftly upon us The last morning was the hottest we have had this season, as tired hounds and lathering horses proclaimed. The season has unfortunately been a most unlucky and disappointing one. With the utter failure of the north-east Monsoon with ground of iron and skies of brass and scenting conditions to match, hounds, which promised to be a particularly good lot, have never had a "cat in hell" chance. The country has throughout been too dry to carry any but the most catchy and uncertain scent, and so hard from the very commencement of hunting that hounds often got back to kennels with their pads worn through like the sole of an old boot. On the top of this sickness in kennels in December carried off six couple, and it was only through the unremitting exertions of the Master and Young, the kennelman, that the rest of the pack were pulled through, and we have just been able to carry on, doing one day a week with the remnant of the pack left. But with so numerically weak a pack hunting under such adverse conditions, it has been impossible to kill jacks, and the pad board on the kennel door is this year a melancholy exhibition. We all sympathise with Mr. Horne in the troubles that have overtaken him this season in the by no means light job of Master and Huntsman and can only wish him better luck and better sport when we meet him again next November at the 9th milestone at the Mount.

BIWJIMIN.

BOMBAY HOUNDS.

BUT a small field turned out on a promising morning last Wednesday, meeting the Master at Chuckla preparatory to a good run. The first covert drawn was blank, but moving away towards the water main hounds were successful in unearthing a jack. He was headed in making for the Andheri Road and circled round into Bomanwadi over some convenient jumping country before coming out again on to the road. This time he crosses into the Grange Bunds and running along the outskirts of the woods he leads past Stacey's Tank. A run in the open and a dash through the Mango Tope brings us to Roberts' Corner. Into the open again, he turns for the Marole Hills, past the caves and into the splendid Goregaum grass lands. After a brisk run, however, hounds lose the scent on the top of one of the wooded hills at the end of Marole Valley, and never properly got on again.

THE next Meet being on Friday was due to the Horse Show, to allow followers to exhibit their mounts. A fair field met the pack at the Jackal Club, and on the way to Chuckla dew was found to be lying promisingly heavy. These woods were, however, untenanted, but not so the Mango Tope. A dash through it was followed by a run in the open in Marole Valley and on towards the hill of the famous caves. Here a portion of burnt grass land was met and scent failed.

Casting about near at hand, another line was picked up leading us to Sunday Hill. Hounds went straight up it and down the other side, when they turned right handed and made for Marole Valley. At the Church they had to almost double back, and on a wooded hill they were again given the slip after a brisk bit of work.

The Point-to-Point Meeting is to be held on the 21st of March.

OLD CLIFF.

AN old Irishman who was a trifle deaf, was perturbed because when at church he put in the "Amens" at the wrong time. He therefore saw the clergyman after one of the services and arranged to bring him a small bag of peas for the following purpose: The Irishman was to sit in the pew under the pulpit (from which the clergyman conducted the service), and every time the "Amen" was required the clergyman was to drop a pea on the Irishman's head. During the next service peas began to fall on his head in quick succession, and he blurted out "Amen, Amen, Amen, Amen" till he was stopped by the clergyman shouting at him, "Shut up, you fool, the bag has burst."

"WHAT we want," said counsel to the jury, "is justice." "What I want," said the client to the counsel, "is a verdict in my favour."

INFANTRY POLO TOURNAMENT.

A FAST, galloping game was witnessed in the final of the above Tournament at Lucknow on the 23rd February, the teams left in being the 68th Durham Light Infantry and the Gordon Highlanders. The Gordons, at the close of the third chukker, were leading by 1 goal to nil. The next three chukkers, however, went all in favour of the Durhams, who put up 2 goals in each period and ran out winners by 6 goals to 1 goal by the Gordon Highlanders. The cup was given away by Lady Hewett. Details :—

68TH DURHAM LIGHT INFANTRY vs. GORDON HIGHLANDERS.

First Chukker.—Fast and level play, each side being called upon to save. No score.

Second Chukker.—The Durhams had two shots at goal. The Gordons then gained possession and scored. Score : Gordons, 1 goal ; Durhams, nil.

Third Chukker.—The Durhams were on the offensive throughout, but their shooting was erratic, the ball going wide on each occasion. No score.

Fourth Chukker.—Two goals were hit by the Durhams and the Gordons were attacking at the close. Score : Gordons, 1 goal ; Durhams, 2 goals.

Fifth Chukker.—The Durhams obtained a goal from a foal and shortly after they again scored. Score : Gordons, 1 goal ; Durhams, 4 goals.

Sixth Chukker.—Two goals were signalled in favour of the Durhams, both being hit from fouls. Final Score : Gordon Highlanders, 1 goal ; Durham Light Infanty, 6 goals. Teams :—

INTER-REGIMENTAL TOURNAMENT.

1ST KING'S DRAGOON GUARDS vs. 1ST ROYAL DRAGOONS.—A large attendance graced the opening match of the tournament at Meerut on the 25th ultimo It was a very fair game. The Dragoon Guards eventually winning by 5 goals to 2. Lambert and Tomkinson played exceptionally well for the Royals but all their efforts were unable to avert defeat.

First Chukker.—Fast galloping play up and down the field ; no score.

Second Chukker.—More fast play. The Royals were called upon to defend their lines and Cheape drew first blood for the Dragoon Guards

Third Chukker.—The Royals were kept on the defensive but they disposed of all attempts to put the ball through.

Fourth Chukker.—Fast galloping all over the field ; no score.

Fifth Chukker.—Play centred in the Royals' territory and two goals were registered by Hawkins and Weinholt.

Sixth Chukker.—The Royals attacked but were forced back and the Dragoon Guards pressing once more, Weinholt scored a goal.

Seventh Chukker.—The game continued to be hotly contested, Weinholt got away again and scored, the game being stopped soon after owing to an injury to Tomkinson. Then the Royals took up the attack and Turner scored.

Eighth Chukker.—The Royals had the best of this chukker and scored another point through Tomkinson. Their effort, however, had come too late and when time was called the score stood King's Dragoon Guards 5 goals, Royal Dragoons, 2 goals. Teams :—

5TH HUSSARS vs. 17TH LANCERS.—This game on the 28th ultimo had been looked upon to provide a runaway victory for the 17th, but the 8th put up a really excellent game and had much more of the play than the final score would suggest.

First Chukker.—The Hussars went off with a grand flourish at the start and scored three goals in rapid succession before the Lancers had got going. The 17th then rushed down and opened their score.

Second Chukker.—Fast up and down play : no score. A foul against the 8th just on time.

Third Chukker.—The resulting penalty was unproductive, but play was continued at the Hussars end where the 17th put on four goals, Melville being responsible for three, Tilney for the other.

Fourth Chukker.—This was a well contested period and both teams scored a goal.

Fifth Chukker.—The Lancers pressed throughout and Melville and Lockett added to their score.

Sixth Chukker.—Up and down play. Lockett was conspicuous for a fine run the length of the field, his final shot being successful.

Seventh Chukker.—The Lancers pressed hotly but failed to score.

Eighth Chukker.—The 17th kept up the attack and two further goals were notched by Garden and Melville. Final Score : 17th Lancers, 11 goals ; 8th Hussars, 4 goals. Teams :—

10TH ROYAL HUSSARS vs. 12TH ROYAL LANCERS.—This game, also played on the 28th ultimo, was hotly contested, the Hussars, who were better mounted and showed perhaps better combination, winning by 7 goals to 3.

First Chukker.—Up and down play. The 12th had slightly the better of the game ; no score.

Second Chukker.—Another well contested period without score.

Third Chukker.—The Hussars had the best of this chukker and keeping the ball in the Lancers' territory scored two goals.

Fourth Chukker.—The Lancers were forced to defend and the Hussars successfully terminated two good runs to the 12th flags.

Fifth Chukker.—A very even period. The Lancers came through and Nicholas scored.

Sixth Chukker.—The Lancers kept up the pressure but the Hussars were able to frustrate all their efforts till a foul was given against the 10th and Wood taking the free hit scored a second goal for the Lancers.

Seventh Chukker.—Up and down play : a goal to each team.

Eighth Chukker.—The Hussars hemmed their opponents in throughout the final chukker and registered two more goals, thus winning as stated by 7 goals to 3. Teams :—

POONA OPEN TOURNAMENT.

Final.

THOUGH the Poona Horse played rather the better combined game and were unfortunate in having a goal disallowed owing to offside, the Palanpur team were unlucky to lose the final of the Bombay Open Polo Tournament. With Captain Greig more in form at No. 1, the others gave a very taking exhibition, especially Kishen Singh, who being well mounted was continually putting in runs. Major Martin at back was a veritable stone wall and decidedly superior to the opposing defence. Captain Lucas was rather uncertain and deserves credit for saving them more than once through his resource and resolute riding off. He was often instrumental in getting Grimshaw and Alderson on the move, and it speaks well for these that their combination served to beat Major Martin, as alone this seemed impossible.

After the Poona Horse had gained a lead of 2—0, the Palanpur quartette played a great game and drew level in the fifth chukker.

On the goals being widened, however, Lucas had a palpable chance and decided the game and the Tournament with a good long shot.

The Cup was presented by H. E. the Governor after a few congratulatory remarks.

ROYAL CONNAUGHT BOAT CLUB.

ANNUAL REGATTA.

THE 42nd Annual Regatta of the Royal Connaught Boat Club was held on the 21st and 23rd ultimo at Kosherville and was voted on all sides a very decided success. The event of the Regatta was, of course, the Challenge Fours for which Madras and Bombay had sent representative crews. Bombay were the first to win the trophy in 1849, and again in 1876, 1881 and 1885. Madras competed in 1872 for the first time, but it was not till 1882 that Madras took away the cup with them, beating Poona and Bombay. They were again successful in 1905 but Poona regained possession of the cup in 1907. The race this year was most exciting, the Poona crew finishing in front, a length and a quarter ahead of Madras who beat Bombay by a length and a half. The Senior Regimental Fours went to the R. A. M. C. and the Junior race resulted in a dead-heat between the Sappers and Gunners. This was rowed off on Friday last and the judge was again unable to separate the boats at the finish. The Doctors beat the Sappers in the Eight Oar Race. The Oxenham Pairs were won by Turner and Leahy and the other races provided good sport, results of which are appended. General Sloggett, P.M.O., Colonel Penton and the officers of the R. A. M. C. were "At Home" and the band of the 114th Mahrattas played at intervals on Wednesday. Mrs. Baddeley gave away the prizes. BALLYGUNGE vs. C. M. POPE'S XI.—Played at Ballygunge on Sunday last, this was intended to be the closing match of the Ballygunge season ; whether it actually was so or not, remains to be seen, as a game has been arranged for Sunday next vs. Mr. T. C Manders' XI, to be played only "if in the opinion of the Umpires" it is not too hot!

On paper there was nothing to choose between the two teams, Ballygunge having perhaps the better batting side, whereas the visitors were stronger in bowling, but in the end the scratch eleven was beaten by 93 runs in a comparatively low scoring match ; the wicket was in excellent condition, but very fast, and the pace seemed altogether too much for the majority of the visiting bats, anyhow they could only put together 126, Manders' share of this being 69.

Quin and Manders opened the innings, and the latter promptly began to score at a tremendous pace, chiefly off White; he should have been easily caught at third man off that bowler when he had made about 15, but the fieldsman at fault, usually so safe, put him on the carpet in the most approved Ballygunge fashion. The mistake proved expensive, as though missed again by the same man in the same place off a more difficult chance when about 40, he was never in trouble with the bowling, and it was his own fault that he was eventually run out by yards to spare when he had put together 69 out of the 95 scored during his stay ; he called his partner for an impossible run to mid—on, sent him back and then started to run himself. With Quin as his partner they put on 42 for the first wicket, and then he and Craik took the score to 68 without further loss, but at this point, with the substitution of 6 Sherman for White, an extraordinary change came over the game ; Craik was beautifully caught at short slips off the new bowler's second ball, Given-Wilson taken at the wicket off the next (and incidentally off a piece of loose binding round his bat) and Low, clean bowled by the fourth. The "hat trick," and a very useful one too. Of the rest, Wodehouse and Tredaway, who put on 24 for the last wicket, were the only ones to do anything and the innings closed for 126 ; Sherman bowled very well, and had the satisfactory analysis of 5 wickets for 29 runs, Bocquet being a good second with 3 for 31.

Ballygunge sent in Yeoman and White, but the last ball of the first over proved too much for the former, and he retired to make room for Bocquet, who stopped until 69 was on the board, when he was well snapped at the wicket by Tatam ; White was the next to go, caught at slip for a hard hit 59 with the total at 96. Skinner hit freely for 31 and Frost took a careful 18, both falling victims to Tatam, who was keeping in excellent form ; Sherman made 39 in nice style and Kennedy 21, but the rest did nothing, and the innings closed for 219.

As an hour and a quarter remained for play, the visitors went in a second time, but set up rather badly, 7 wickets having fallen for 98 when time was called ; Low was top scorer with 30, Tatam being a good second with 25. The change bowlers only were tried, Coulthard getting 4 for 29, Hornastle 12 for 49 and Frost 1 for 4. Scores :—

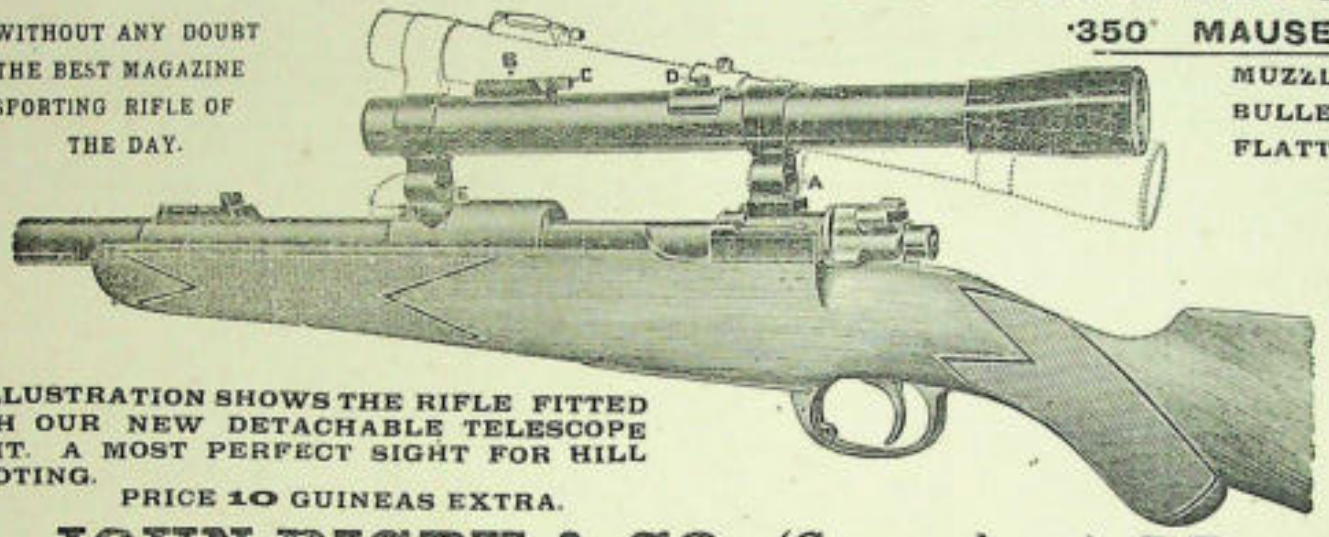
WINCHESTER



THE RIFLE THAT WILL STOP HIM

The shots that will be heard around the world this year will be fired from Winchester Rifles. Their reliability and strong and accurate shooting have made them the first choice of experience-taught big-game hunters, who, when armed with them, consider daring a pleasure and danger a farce. Winchester Rifles are made in ten different models and in all desirable calibers from .22 to .50. From them 'tis easy to select a rifle suitable for hunting any animal, be it a squirrel or the armor-skinned rhino.

Hockey.

THE ALL-INDIA TOURNAMENT.

FIFTEEN teams took part in the All-India Tournament this year and some splendid games were witnessed. Play opened on the 21st instant when four matches in the first round were disposed of. In the first of these the Middlesex Regiment met and defeated the 6th Jats and 37th Dogras by a goal to nil. The British regiment were the better team on the day's play, the combined team giving rather a poor display, which can be accounted for by the fact that they had no previous practice together this year. They showed nothing like the form they were in when they won the tournament in 1906-07, and 1907-08. The match between the Worcester Regiment and the Fyzabad Gymkhana was a run-away affair for the soldiers, who were faster and quicker on the ball than their opponents and eventually won by 6 goals to nil. The meeting of the U. P. Police and the Allahabad Gymkhana was a procession, the Police having matters all their own way and running out winners by 9 goals to nil. Perhaps the best game on the opening day was that between the Naini Tal Volunteers and the King's Own Regiment. The Naini Tal team gave us a fine exhibition of hockey; their combination was excellent, their passing accurate; in fact their front line was as perfect as could be made. The King's Own put up a hard fight but were beaten in the end by 4 goals to nil. The brothers P. and L. Jahans, and Haswell were most conspicuous of the Volunteers, while Lelliot, Todd, Goulden and Bowles played well for the King's Own. The first round of the tournament was completed on the 22nd instant when three further matches were played. The first between the East Yorks and the Royal Irish Regiment was well contested. The teams were very even and though the hockey was not of a very high order it was interesting right up to the end, when the East Yorks were victorious by 3 goals to 2. The Royal West Kent Regiment then met the O. and R. Railway Volunteers and another good game was witnessed, the soldiers who were the heavier team eventually winning by 4 goals to 1. The third game brought together the Allahabad Volunteers and the combined 48th Pioneers and 62nd Punjabis. This was hotly fought from start to finish, time arriving with a blank sheet. An extra period was played during which the combined team scored the only goal of the game.

The second round was put through on the 23rd instant, four matches being decided, two of which were very one-sided affairs, the Middlesex Regiment trouncing St. Joseph's Volunteers, who had drawn a bye in the first round, by the big margin of 11 goals to 1, the Naini Tal Volunteers disposing of the West Kents by 6 goals to nil. The U. P. Police and the Worcesters, however, gave us an exciting game. Play was rather sticky in the first half but on changing ends they woke up and the game was well contested to the finish. The Police scored 2 goals and frustrated all attempts to get through by the Worcesters. Troup was most conspicuous for the Police team by his steady play, Lieutenants Linton and Gordon doing yeoman service for the Worcesters. The match between the East Yorks and the combined 48th Pioneers and 62nd Punjabis was a pretty fair display. The East Yorks seemed a bit off colour, doubtless due to their hard game with the Royal Irish the day before, while the combined team were fresh as paint, and making the most of their opportunities eventually won by 4 goals to nil.

The two matches in the semi-finals were played off on Tuesday last and provided games of entirely different character. The U. P. Police and Middlesex Regiment gave us a splendid game, the issue being in doubt till the end. Play was fast throughout and when half time arrived the Middlesex were leading by a goal to nil. They increased their lead on resuming and looked like winning comfortably, when the Police pulled themselves together and playing pluckily turned defeat into victory. Troup opened their scoring and shortly after put the teams on terms with another successful shot. Naylor added a third goal amid scenes of the greatest enthusiasm among the Police supporters. The Middlesex pressed during the closing stages of the game and came very near equalising on more than one occasion but fortune favoured the Police and they qualified for the finals after one of the most exciting games of the tournament. Troup, Farran, A. McLeod and Powell were most prominent for the winners. The game between the Naini Tal Volunteers and the combined team was a practical walk over for the Volunteers who piled up the large total of 13 goals to a single point registered by their opponents. They held the upperhand throughout and gave the combined team a single chance which Burdett took advantage of. The players responsible for the Volunteers' score were P. Jahans (5), Rowley (3), A. Marshall (3) and W. Marshall (2).

The Naini Tal Volunteers and the U. P. Police met in the final of the tournament last Saturday in the presence of a large gathering, which included Sir John and Lady Stanley, who were "At Home." The game was exciting and though the Volunteers were undoubtedly the better team, the Police gave a good account of themselves and played pluckily from start to finish. The Volunteers went away at the start and P. Jahans scored two goals in quick succession, the Police nothing daunted replying with one. P. Jahans hit another point shortly after and the Volunteers led at the interval by 3 goals to 1. On resuming Rowley scored for the Volunteers and the Police retaliated, but the Volunteers went away again and Jahans netted, Naylor replying with another goal for the Police. The Volunteers pressed hotly during the closing stages and A. Marshall and P. Jahans added two further goals, the Naini Tal team thus winning by 7 goals to 3, their second victory in the tournament. After the match Lady Stanley presented the cup and silver medals to the winners and bronze medals to the runners-up and Sir John made a short congratulatory speech.

The following were the teams :—

NAINI TAL VOLUNTEERS.—S. A. Gabriel, Goal; P. L. Haswell and L. E. Jahans, backs; Plomer, Chavasse and J. Jahans, halves; Hyde, W. Marshall, P. Jahans, F. Rowley and A. Marshall, forwards.

U. P. POLICE.—H. Williamson, Goal; F. McLeod and Fergusen, backs; A. McLeod, J. Murphy and C. Murphy, halves; R. Powell, C. S. Naylor, W. Troup, D. Morgan and C. Farran, forwards.

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

DIVISION I.

CUSTOMS vs. DALHOUSIE.—Played on the Customs' ground on the 23rd ultimo, a very one-sided game resulting in a win for the home team by 10 goals to nil. Fischer (6), Smith (2), Boileau and McCready were responsible for the scoring.

SIBPUR vs. RIFLE BRIGADE.—This match on the Hastings' ground on the 23rd ultimo resulted in a draw of one all.

B.-N.R. vs. E.I.R.—The two Railway teams met on the Calcutta ground on the 23rd February, the E.I.R. winning by 4 goals to 1.

RIFLE BRIGADE vs. RANGERS.—These teams met on the Rangers' ground last Saturday, a fast game ending in a win for the home team by 4 goals to 2. A feature of the game was the fine display of Maden the Rifle's custodian.

Y.M.C.A. (AM.) vs. SPORTING UNION.—Played on the Customs' ground on Saturday, the Amateurs winning by 2 goals to nil.

Y.M.C.A. vs. MEDICALS.—On the Association ground last Saturday the home team beat the Medical College by 2 goals to nil.

ST. XAVIERS vs. E.I.R.—A draw of one all was the result of this match on the Mahomedan Sporting Club ground last Saturday.

CALCUTTA vs. ROVERS.—The Rovers gave Calcutta a good game last Saturday and were only beaten by a single point—scored by Roberts shortly after the interval.

RIFLE BRIGADE vs. Y.M.C.A. (AM.).—Played on the Association ground on Tuesday the soldiers winning by 3 goals to 1.

MEDICALS vs. E.I.R.—This game on Tuesday ended in favour of the Railway team by 2 goals to 1.

DALHOUSIE vs. ST. XAVIERS.—On their own ground on Tuesday the Trades team, who had not their full complement of men in the field, were defeated by St. Xaviers by 2 goals to 1.

RANGERS vs. ROVERS.—The Rangers scored another decisive victory on their own ground on Tuesday when they beat the Rovers by 7 goals to nil. Lawton (6) and Skempton being responsible for the scoring.

CALCUTTA vs. B.-N.R.—Played on the Calcutta ground on Tuesday the home team winning by 6 goals to 1. Roberts, Simson and Beck scored 2 goals each for Calcutta, and Baker netted the only point scored by the Railway.

B. DIVISION.

MOHUN BAGAN vs. ORIENTAL SPORTING.—Played on the Presidency College ground on Thursday, resulting in a win for the Oriental Sporting by 2 goals to 1.

TOWN CLUB vs. RIFLE BRIGADE CORPS XI.—On their own ground on Thursday the Town Club had to admit defeat to the Military by a goal to nil.

27TH PUNJABIS vs. WANDERERS.—Played on the Oriental Sporting ground on Thursday, the Punjabis winning by 10 goals to nil.

LA MARTINIERE vs. SPORTING UNION.—On the Presidency College ground on Friday, this game resulted in a win for the London Street boys by 4 goals to 1.

CUSTOMS (B) vs. ST. XAVIERS (B).—On their own ground on Friday this game resulted in a win for the Customs by 2 goals to nil.

RIFLE BRIGADE CORPS XI vs. 2ND P.B.V.R.—Played on the 2nd P.B.V.R. ground on Monday the Fort team winning by a goal to nil.

27TH PUNJABIS vs. HASTINGS.—Played on the Hastings ground on Monday, won by the Punjabis by 2 goals to 1.

"BLUE CATS," says a connoisseur, "are extremely popular." Since the improvement in the nation's whisky the pink cat with the green ears has become almost extinct.

WEDDING rings in America are gradually being made more slender. The old-fashioned sort intended to last for some years is not considered worth while.

"WHAT is the object of the game?" asked a neophyte at an English football Cup-tie. "To secure as many spectators at sixpence per head as possible," answered the cynic.

THE Halley comet was the topic of conversation. "Are you fond of looking at the stars?" asked Miss Boston. "Well, yes," answered the engaging young man; "but, as a rule, the chorus is good enough for me."

Lawn Tennis.

THE BENGAL CHAMPIONSHIPS 1910.

THIS annual championship meeting commenced on the 23rd ultimo on the Calcutta C.C. ground in the Eden Gardens and during the past week some very interesting tennis has been witnessed. The courts are in first class order, the arrangements are excellent and the general conditions could not be improved upon. The entries this year were a record for the meeting, but among those who have played in previous years we missed the names of E. M. Atkinson, the holder of the Singles Championship and L. S. Deane who in company with Atkinson won the Doubles last year. These champions recently carried all before them in the tournament recently concluded at Allahabad and will doubtless give a good account of themselves at the Punjab championships beginning next Wednesday.

Eight matches in the Singles were decided on the opening day and with the exception of the match between Warden and Gresson and that between Martelli and Kalberer, they call for little notice. Warden had little difficulty in securing the first set at 6—2 but Gresson showed improved form in the second set which he won at 6—3. The third set went to Warden at 6—1 but he had to fight hard for each game. Kalberer and Martelli put up a great struggle, the former eventually winning by 2 sets to nil—9—7, 7—5, Martelli giving a good exhibition. Six matches were decided on Thursday, Pritchett, who has a big Scottish reputation, and A. W. Shallow giving us the best exhibition. Pritchett was evidently not in his best form and Shallow took the second set from him 6—1, but could not hold him in the third. Mathews and Linsell also put up a hard fight. The second round was decided on Friday and save for a close match between Green and Thorpe requires little comment. It was a great fight between this pair all the way Green eventually winning by two sets to one—6—2, 2—6, 7—5. Pritchett disposed of J. B. Wood but as in the preceding round lost the second set. The third round was most interesting Pritchett, Kalberer Warden and Greig qualifying for the semi-finals. Green gave Pritchett the stiffest opposition he had yet met in the tournament. He won the first set at 7—5, and though he was defeated 6—4, 6—4 in the two other games he gave a fine exhibition and proved himself a hard man to beat. Kalberer beat D. S. Shallow comfortably and Warden had little difficulty in accounting for Hewson. Greig and Mathews played steadily, the former eventually winning by two sets to one.

The semi-finals were competed on Monday last, Pritchett meeting Greig and beating him comfortably by 2 to nil, 6—1, 6—3. The other match, between Warden and Kalberer, was undoubtedly the best witnessed so far in the tournament, both players showing up to advantage. Warden won the first set 6—3, and Kalberer took the second with a similar score. The third was intensely interesting. Warden led at 4—3, Kalberer took the next game but lost the next. With the score 5—4 and Warden 40 love in the next game it looked as if Kalberer was easily beaten, but he made a remarkable recovery and with some really fine placing won this game making the score 5 all. Both continued to play brilliantly and Warden eventually won the set and match at 9—7. The final is to be played on Saturday, Warden meeting the Scottish champion, when a great struggle is anticipated. Results thus far :—

DOUBLES.

The Doubles opened on Monday when three matches were played, the most noticeable feature being the defeat of R. H. A. Gresson and J. E. Jackson who won the Double Championship in 1906 and were expected to give a good account of themselves this year.

The first round was competed on Tuesday and six matches in the second round were also played off the same day. Hutchinson and Innes who beat Gresson and Jackson in the first round were easily defeated by Kalberer and Green; and this latter pair had no difficulty in disposing of Pym and Mathews and are looked upon as a good tip for the final. Manders and Martelli after being beaten 6—1 in the first set showed great improvement and won the second set 4—6 from Warden and Shallows but they fell to pieces in the third and were beaten a love set.

The final of the Doubles is to be played on Friday, the 4th.

BOMBAY HORSE AND DOG SHOW.

THE Bombay Horse and Dog Show was held on Tuesday and Thursday last week on the Marine Lines maidan and attracted a large number of spectators. The arrangements were excellent but there was a considerable falling off in the number of entries in both classes. Among the Horses the Polo ponies and hunters were the best represented, the standard among other classes not being up to that of former years, while though the canine exhibits were small in number they were really good in quality.

Travel and Adventure.

AN APPRECIATION OF THE KHASIA.

ABSENCE is said to make the heart grow fonder. This may be true when it refers to people of one's own race, though not necessarily of one's own sex, but whether the saying is true or not, it may safely be said that return after absence frequently disillusions one.

I left the Khasia hills many years ago with the impression that their inhabitants were cheerful nonentities, frequently smelling of strong drink, always reeking of rotten fish, and generally so encrusted with smoke and grime that their faces looked like bits of guarded mahogany.

I returned some twelve years later, a more critical and I hope a wiser man.

A few days after coming back, I was on musketry with my men. Down the range flows a little stream which would hold nice trout at home, but there is nothing in it but a few tadpoles.

Close to the firing point I saw a crowd of Khasias baling out a pool. This seemed somewhat unusual, for I knew it could not be fish they were after. What with poison, traps and dynamite, a fish has a very poor chance for its life in the Khasia Hills, therefore no pool in a small stream would be worth baling out for the fish it was likely to contain. Wondering what was up, I walked over to find out, and asked what they were doing. A man replied "My sister was having a wash before going to the Noogkrem mauch next week and her ear-pin fell into the water, so we are trying to find it."

"Then why don't you give her a rupee to buy another with, instead of taking all this trouble?" I asked.

The man looked at me very keenly and said "Ah! I remember you always used to make jokes like that. This pin had a tola and a quarter of gold in it! You don't seem to recognise me. Look at my face!"

When I suggested that if he were to dip it in the water and rub it well with sand, I might be able to see it, he spluttered pan all over the place with laughing and said "You are just the same after all these years."

He then told me he often used to go out shooting with me in the old days, that he was now a mistri and earning forty rupees a month.

I remarked that was better than doing odd jobs and getting five or six rupees a month, whereupon he got out of the water and told me how times had changed since the earthquake in 1897. Since then the sahibs paid anything the Khasias liked to ask, that they all had plenty of money now, and ate their food off English plates, while most of the men wore Europe clothes and the women gold ornaments all because the sahibs paid such big prices.

The truth of this I soon found out. One can live a great deal better on £500 a year in England than one can in Shillong on the same money, nowadays.

Later on, we wanted an almirah for clothes, and then we learned the true value of the Khasia mistri.

The candidate for the making of this important bit of furniture was, when I had last seen him, our mess masalchi on Rs. 6 or Rs. 7 a month. As an old acquaintance, I was glad to have given him the job, till he brought the almirah, for which he asked Rs. 40. It was made of green wood, stuck together with a few french nails I then discovered that anyone who could hammer a few planks together, or break open a box with a hatchet, could earn in this place as much or more pay than a jemadar in my regiment.

The next work I wanted done was to have the windows and doors in my house made to fit, and for this I applied to my landlord. He sent two dirty ruffian next day, who arrived with a ladder but no tools. I showed them that slips of wood would have to be fitted on top of some of the windows and that the doors would require planing before they would close properly. Off they went, returning the following morning with tools but no wood. They said they could soon supply this deficiency, and after taking a few measurements and a lot of talk and pan chewing, they sat down and calmly proceeded to saw about a foot from off the end of my landlord's ladder and produced the material to make the windows fit. This arduous job took them another day, and at the end the windows were rather worse than when I first complained. I wrote over to the landlord again, and he replied that the men had said the work was finished and he had paid them twelve rupees. Our armourer then put all right, and charged twelve annas, and I would have saved myself much trouble if I had called him in at first.

In the cold weather I took my men into camp about nine miles away on the banks of a river, which used to hold a nice lot of fish.

One morning I saw a Khasia fishing from a bridge quite close to camp, so went to see if he had got anything, but found he had only just commenced. In the evening he was still there and had killed three little mahseer, about quarter of a pound a piece. He said he must now be going, as he lived about seven miles off up the hill. I asked him why he came all that distance for so little. He replied he was working on the road, and therefore had plenty of time for fishing. My wife once engaged a masalchi, but after three weeks he said he couldn't stay any longer. He was asked if he found the work too heavy. "Oh no!," he replied, "but it is very difficult for me, as you don't pay me every day, and I haven't enough time to devote to archery." (The Khasias are great archers, and have regular bow-meetings twice or three times a week, where they have pool shooting at four annas an arrow.) Some months afterwards I met this sportsmen on the road, and asked what work he was doing now; he said he worked for the Public Works as a coolie one week in the month, at twelve annas a day; this kept him in food for the other three weeks, so he had plenty of time to practice his shooting.

The Khasias' latest wheeze is that they are going to give up working for sahibs altogether, and are going in entirely for agriculture, so as to save up money for their old age.

This is probably because they see that they can get as much for one cabbage or cauliflower, or for a seer of beans or peas, as they can earn in a day by manual labour.

The fame of the large pay to be earned in Shillong for the small amount of work done has evidently spread all over India.

Any sort of servant gets at least twice the pay that he would get elsewhere in India and his food doesn't cost twice as much.

One sees sweepers from Amritsar, Ahirs from Orissa, who come as malis or grass cutters, and a drunken riff raff of maghs, Mahomedans, and others who would not get employment anywhere else, all on the tack of doing as little work, and gambling and drinking as much as possible.

On arrival in the place, I engaged two grasscutters, but they left because they objected to my refusing to take any sort of rubbish they chose to bring in, and for a long time I preferred to buy grass from the bazar. The same woman used to cut and bring one large load of grass every day, and in two years time she made enough out of it to enable her to start a little shop, and keep a servant to cut the grass.

I have mentioned the dynamite and poisoning of fish, which has reached such a pitch, in spite of certain (unobserved) orders against it, that I doubt if there is any fish of three pounds weight within a ten mile radius of Shillong, though there are several lively streams which used to hold mahseer running up to seven or eight pounds weight, twenty years ago. The Umiam, 9 miles off, used to hold quite decent fish, and one could often get fifteen or twenty pounds weight of mahseer with fly or small spoon on a good day. The biggest fish I took within half a day's march of this was twelve pounds. The road coolie's bag previously mentioned would be about the usual thing nowadays.

Of course it may be argued that it is difficult to prevent dynamite being used to destroy fish in semi-independent territory. This may be perfectly true, but it should be quite simple to prevent the leakage of dynamite. It could be done just as easily as the leakage of ammunition was stopped, by insisting on the waterproof paper, in which the charge is wrapped, being returned, for it is known that dynamite does not keep well, when once taken out of this paper.

Three years ago, a friend of mine was down at the Umiam, and heard the "thump" of dynamite explosion close by. He found the usual thing going on, took the offender's names and some of the fish, and sent them in with a report.

I never heard exactly what happened to the culprits, but anyhow it was nothing they "couldn't do on their 'ends,'" so to speak. The fish I know were sent to the hospital for a post mortem, for I saw the Doctor babu's letter which stated that the fish were dead, but how they were killed there was nothing about them to show.

How any fish at all remain in these rivers is a mystery.

In the cold weather if one looks down into the pool below the Umiam bridge, one can generally see two or three little fish lying on the bottom belly upwards which evidently indicates dynamite and I am pretty certain that pool, when the water is low, is dynamited once or twice a week, or was up to last cold weather.

The behaviour of the fish proves it. In most rivers, if you drop in a stone, you will see the fish dart away for a second and then return to see what it is. Here you can drop in a lump of "atta" the fish will dart away, and you will see ...e atta" lying on the bottom, and not a fish near it, half an hour afterwards.

The shooting has never been good in any part of the hills near which there are villages, the Khasias is far too keen a shikari to let much game live; this one must accept as inevitable, as it is his own country, but dynamiting could be stopped.

A good many woodcock and snipe visit us in the cold weather, and the 'cocking is certainly good for India. Three or four birds in a morning to one gun not being very unusual.

There must be thousands of them snared by the natives, who are most expert trappers, yet strange to say though the Khasia is able to get what price he likes to ask for any article of food, such as twenty-five rupees for a small turkey, I have never yet seen him offer, or heard of him offering a woodcock or a snipe for sale, so he is not a mercenary poacher, whatever else he may be.

Sir Henry Cotton said that the big earthquake ruined the poor Khasias, so it did, but not in the sense he meant. Nowhere in the world I should think is the average inhabitant better off, better housed, better clothed, or does he do less work than in the Khasia hills, and when I remark that horse's food from Australia, where labour costs ten shillings a day, can be imported at a price to compare favourably with Swadeshi stuff, it shows there is something wrong with the labour market in this part of the world.

Passenger: "That so? The company must think a great deal of you both."

'Bus Driver: "Wall, I dunno; last week the two of us was taken sick, and they got a doctor for the horse and docked me."

"WHAT is your name?" asked the judge of the prisoner.

"Casey, you Honour," answered the prisoner.

"Your full name?" asked the judge.

"Just the same, yer Honour," answered the prisoner; "full or sober."

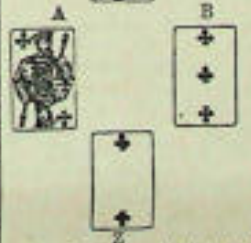
Solution to Problem No. 84.

HAVING brought off his finesse in diamonds, Z must try to establish clubs. He should lead a small club from the table, and finesse the 10, as it is important to keep the lead away from B, and consequently he can afford to finesse deeply against that hand. If the 10 draws the King, two, and possibly three, tricks will have been established in Clubs, and A will be compelled to give Z a second trick in Spades, or open Hearts. If he opens Hearts, Dummy's King must be played, as B must be kept out of the lead at all costs. If he goes on with Spades, Z has a fair chance of the odd trick and may even make game.

Problem No. 85.

Score: A B, 24; Y Z, 0. Z deals and leaves it to Y, who declares Hearts. Y's and Z's hands are as follows:—

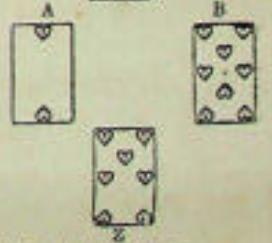


Y's Hand (Dummy): Hearts, K, Q, J, 6, 5, 4, 3. Diamonds, A, Q, 2. Clubs, J. Spades, A, 7.

Z's Hand (Dealer): Hearts, 7. Diamonds, 10, 9, 4, 3. Clubs, 8, 7, 6, 2. Spades, J, 10, 8, 5.

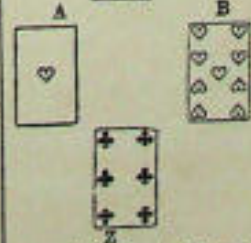
The first four tricks are as follows:—

Trick 1.



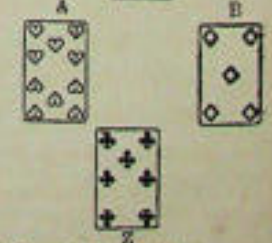
Tricks: A B, 1. Y Z, 0.

Trick 2.



Tricks: A B, 1. Y Z, 1.

Trick 3.



Tricks: A B, 2. Y Z, 1.

Trick 4.

Tricks: A B, 2. Y Z, 2.

How ought the dealer to go on with the hand, and why?

THE DOG'S DERBY.

THE latest greyhound to have its name enrolled on the list of winners of the Waterloo Cup, the blue riband of coursing, is Heavy Weapon, a third season dog belonging to that good all round English sportsman, Mr. S. Hill-Wood.

Heavy Weapon gained the coveted trophy by defeating Mr. H. Birkbeck's Back to the Land, Sir R. W. B. Jardine's Long Span, who won outright in 1907, reached the semi-final in 1908, and last year divided the Waterloo Plate with Face the Foe, Mr. P. J. O'Sullivan's Micky the Mill (the hope of Ireland,) and Carnforth, a nice bitch belonging to Mr. J. Coke.

The winner was to have opposed Mr. J. W. Fullerton's Full Steam in the final, but this puppy had such a gruelling course with Calabash that she was withdrawn, and Mr. Hill-Wood's dog, who is a son of Wartnaby and Garbitas, was given the Cup.

Never, perhaps, have bookmakers received such a fright over the Dog Derby than on the occasion under notice. They peppered Calabash to a merry tune on the night of the draw, and laid 1,000 to 1 against him several times. Full Steam and Carnforth, were also outsiders with whom they "took liberties," and to their great consternation this trio got into the last four. As matters transpired, however, they were able to "get out" all right, for, in the fifth round, Full Steam upset the odds on Calabash; the first time, by the way, the latter was made favourite, and Heavy Weapon accounted for Carnforth.

The owner of the winner is well-known in London. He is a patron of the turf, coursing, cricket, and football. He recently contested the High Peak Division of Derbyshire as a Unionist, but was unsuccessful.

The Waterloo Cup was first contested in 1836, upon which occasion the entry was limited to only eight entrants. So much interest in the event was immediately evoked, that in the following year the size of the stake was doubled, and a year later thirty-two dogs contested. At this figure the entry remained for a period of nineteen years, when the Cup became a sixty-four dog affair, and so it has remained, of course, up to the present time. In the course of its seventy-four years' existence the Waterloo Cup contest has been productive of many stirring incidents. One of the earliest of these occurred in 1857, when the winner of the trophy was Mr. W. Wilson's King Lear, who made the fortune of his happy possessor.

The year 1868 was memorable on account of the victory of a Irishbred puppy, Lord Lurgan's Master McGrath, who was destinied to earn the reputation of being the greatest greyhound that has ever been slipped. Bab-at-the-Bowster, who came to Altcar that year with an unbeaten record was regarded as a likely winner, but she went out in the third round to Lobelia—winner in the previous year. The two former dogs, however, were destinied to meet in the following year, 1869, when one of the most exciting Waterloo Cups on record took place. Both animals had scored several successes in the interim, but the record of "Bab" was such that her chance of retrieving her lost laurels seemed almost a certainty. In the Cup the two crack dogs—"Bab" and "Master McGrath"—were drawn so that they could not meet until the final, and when at last the pair came together for the last stage in the event, opinions were almost equally divided as to their respective chances. The finish, as anticipated, was one of the closest on record, but in the end "Bab" was narrowly defeated by the Irishman, who finished a gallant winner with one of those dashing kills that were characteristic of this remarkable dog.

A year later these two famous animals were again entered in the Cup contest, but Bab-at-the-Bowster once more experienced bad luck, being beaten in the fourth round. Master McGrath had an exciting and dangerous experience, for he was very nearly drowned in one of the ditches. His owner thereupon declared that he would never again enter him for the Cup, but changed his mind when the meeting once more came round, and to good purpose. Master McGrath, in fact, won the Cup for the third time in 1871, when his coursing career came to an end. Queen Victoria was so impressed by the performances of this wonderful dog that after his third victory Master McGrath was taken to Windsor at Her Majesty's command.

So great an honor has probably never been accorded to a greyhound before or since, but this was the final triumph in Master McGrath's career. Two years later he died of heart disease. Though not generally acknowledged to have been so great a greyhound as Master McGrath, the late Colonel North's famous dog Fullerton achieved even greater honors in the Waterloo Cup. This wonderful dog divided in 1889 with his kennel companion, Troughend, and carried off the Cup in each of the three following years, thus virtually winning the trophy in four successive seasons. It is no exaggeration to declare that as a result of these phenomenal successes, Fullerton, in spite of his failure as a stud-dog, became a public idol; and the sensation caused by his mysterious disappearance and subsequent recovery after the lapse of many days, was as great as though some famous personage had been the hero of the incident.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The Calcutta Ninth Extra Meeting was well up to the average. Good field went for nearly every event and close finishes were the order of the day. The weather was on the warm side and by the time we get to the end of the next two meetings it will be quite time to stop. We made a start with the Pony Hunters' Hurdle Race. Marconi led from the jump off followed by the favourite Just in Time, Pathfinder being left several lengths; he apparently did not fancy his job at all, for he tried very hard to stop at the first fence and did quite at the next. Just in Time ran up to Marconi at the half mile post, but the latter went away again and won as he liked by two and a half lengths.

The public followed Mr. Galstaun's lead in the Harington Plate and backed Singleton down to 5 to 2. The field ran together until well into the straight where the favourite came away and beat Longchamps by three-quarters of a length; Palindrome finished next in front of Sequent.

A very poor field or moderate horse went for the Mediocre Plate. Wise Hawk and Frank cut out the work. Devilette, who was fancied by her stable, being left several lengths at the start. Wise Hawk held a substantial lead at the distance from Prince Moorefield, and Devilette came with a late run and finished second, three-quarters of a length behind Wise Hawk.

The March Plate was a beautiful race to watch. Foy held a slight lead all the way, with Steinhager, Morette, Kaffirpan, Mayfowl and Wild Boy all together. Kaffirpan came very fast on the outside and after a great fight with Foy all up the straight was beaten by half a length, a short head divided Kaffirpan and Morette.

Guide was quickest away in the Presidency Plate and led until near home, where Not-so-Dusty and Fadgie both passed him. Not-so-Dusty eventually won by a length from Fadgie, Guide a length behind third.

In the Wellington Plate Sir Ulric and Blix cut out the pace from Golden Morn, Scotch Girl and Blue Flame. Golden Morn went ahead at the Zeerut crossing and nearly brought the leaders down. Jack Sheppard moved up into the fighting line, but Blue Flame came round on the outside and had her field settled whenever she liked, Scotch Girl and Jack Sheppard chasing her home.

Wise Hawk's victory on Saturday was a maiden win for both owner and horse, and we wish Mr. Gutsche more luck with this colt than he has had up to the present.

The entries for Saturday's races are fairly good, and should show a good day's sport.

Billie Butlin, our veteran cross country jockey, has started on his own as a trainer. His string consists of H. H. Kour Sahib of Patiala's two, Longchamps and Not-so-Dusty at present. They ran first and second last Saturday, rather a good beginning. He will take over Wise Hawk at the end of the season and train him for the next Monsoon meetings.

The flat races, we hear, next Monsoons are to be run where the horse hurdle course has been in previous years and the horse and pony hurdles are to be run over one course; but then the question comes up where is the training track going to be, as the public track is far too wet and it would be impossible to gallop there while people are hacking around in the morning.

Mr. Galstaun leaves for England as soon as racing is over here, to buy new horses and he will not be back until after the end of the Monsoon meeting. His horse will probably be in the same hands as last year, as Ferguson takes the best of his horses over to Poona, although Mr. Galstaun at present says he will not race over that side during this year. He has been clearing his stable out lately: has sold Silphoe, Eruption, Primrose and Gladsome to start with and has a few more to follow later.

Mr. Lamb, who has been acting as judge at the Calcutta Extra Meetings since Major Davis left us, starts for Australia after Saturday's races. We understand the energetic handicapper, Mr. Griffiths, will judge at the last meeting. He has not decided as yet whether he will spend the hot weather in India or go home for a trip.

The Calcutta Light Horse held their Twenty-third Annual Chart and Compass Race this year at Kharagpur. The course was about 19 miles altogether and out of the 38 starters 20 completed the course. Lieutenant Steele Perkins did the fastest time, 2 hours 12 minutes—with Trooper Partridge next in 2 hours 18 minutes. Posts were held by Reservists Toynbee, Horn and Leggart, Lieutenant Harvey, Sergeants Lys and Cartright. Mr. Warrington acted as starter and Lieutenant Crum as time-keeper. Mr. Lamb kindly judged the condition of the horses on their return from the journey.

The following is the official order :—

* Winner of Recruits' Prize.

Amongst those who did not complete the course were :—Trooper Beak, Sergeant Eustace, Trooper Richmond, Troop-Sergeant-Major Turton, Troopers Taylor and Murray, Corporals Rotham and Langham, Troopers Ballantyne, Brown, Donald, Marshall, Cooper, Pearce, Stokes, Savage and Jones, and Corporal Lovell.

The twelfth paperchase was held over the Jodhpore country and we witnessed the end of the Average Cup, which eventually went to Captain Gibbs, who won by two points from Lord Francis Scott with Mr. Morris close up third. Captain Gibbs' win was well deserved, as he and his good little mare have gone straight and well throughout the season. The course started about half a mile beyond the Thana and took a turn to the right, crossing the Gurriah Hât Road close to the Thana and from there round by the railway; still going right handed over the Ladies' Wall they ran parallel to the Molla Hât Road as far as to the Tollygunge lane; from there the course bore to the left round the back of the Bund country and so on to the finish over the starting hurdle, about five and a half miles long over rather heavy going after the recent rain. Bird of Freedom gave Mr. Evers a fall but luckily did no damage; this was the only fall during the morning. The pony chase fell through, owing to scarcity of starters, probably due to the pony hunter hurdle race on the Saturday. Mr. Buckland on Blazes was the only one in the ponies to complete the course.

The final order was as follows :—

(1) Lord Francis Scott on Fermoy
(2) Capt. Gibbs on Trilby
(3) Capt. Jelf on Mutiny
(4) Capt. Lambert on Battle
(5) Mr. Morris on Blue Bell
(6) Mr. Dawson on Govindpore II.,

followed by Mr. Cowper on Maisonette, Colonel Headlam on a bay, Mr. Scaramanga on Mauser, Mr. Tanner or Fingal, Mr. Holmes on a bay, Mrs. Wanklyn on Cheeky, Mr. Cropper on Johanna, Mrs. Collin on Kildare, Mrs. Ross Craik on Pardon, Mr. Leggatt on Singleton, Mrs. Craik on a chestnut.

The Paperchase Cup will be run to-morrow and a large field is expected to start in the light weights, but there is no prospect of a field at all for the heavy weights. At present only Lord Francis Scott and Mr. Dawson have entered. Of course a few more may turn up, but it is rather doubtful. Lord Francis Scott must have a big say even in the light weights; his strongest rivals are Trilby, Maisonette and Highland Fling; the latter we understand has been wrong for the last two chases. But they hope to have him fit to run in the Cup blue Bell will be a non-starter, her owner having, left for home to-day.

The Calcutta Light Horse Paperchase Cup is fixed for Tuesday, and a fair field for this event is expected; it should be a fairly easy thing for last year's winner Dalgai, and Lord Chester, Govindpore and Johanna should chase her home.

The dates of the tour of the C. T. C. official measurer will be found in our advertisement columns. He will be in Northern India from the 5th to the 13th April and will visit in order Rawalpindi, Lahore, Umballa, Meerut and Lucknow. He will then go south to Secunderabad, Bangalore, Madras and Ootacamund.

The Tollygunge Club have been very busy lately working on the Gymkhana course; they have followed the C.T.C's example and put up the new pattern of starting machine at each post. We hear there are to be many improvements accomplished before we race there again in June.

Our Bombay correspondent writes :—With about sixty original entries, the race for new maidens was divided into three and we were presented with a programme of nine races, in which punters were usually thereabouts. The jockeys' ranks have been thinned by the departure of Whalley and Brown, as well as the serious illness of Manley, who, however, is reported to be on the mend. We saw R. Vick riding here for the first time, and as he won twice he is on the way to becoming as well known as in Australia. The Stewards having concluded their enquiry by accepting Ames's explanations, and the majority agree.

After all Rs. 36 per doz "WHITE HORSE" WHISKY IS THE BEST.

As to the new-comers, most people have been patiently waiting for Abdul Malik to put in an appearance and he consequently started at evens in a field of sixteen. Kahtan was well backed and made the running, Jumbud coming to him at the bend. Once the favourite was asked, however, he went away from them. Compact had a bad run, but is a likely one.

THE second was more open, as though we knew Regiment's form, Guinea Mohur, who, when first on the track, was not promising, was backed to shorter odds. An outsider in Kaswar gave a lead but spoilt any chance by flying out wide at the bend. Here Fado, Luah and Injas led together, but Guinea Mohur coming through in the centre had them all under the whip, Regiment coming late next to him.

MOST open of them was the third, when Revolver was the order, but could never do anything. Matarlowz, Lama and King Lear were next, and the race rested between the former pair. Independent saw to the pace and put up a good performance by hanging on into a place. Matarlowz had him at the distance, but nearing home Lama came with a run and beat them both. As I have remarked before in these columns, the winner is useful when respectably ridden.

ONCE again the 14-2 race was by way of being an upset. Gun Metal was rather better fancied than Koko, the former following Virbala to the bend. Here Encourage made up his ground outside and soon collared them. Koko had none too clear a journey and though passing the others could not catch Encourage. We must change our minds about the latter, who was never considered a sprinter.

WHEN one realises that it was run in poor Arab time, it can be seen what sort of a race was the mile and a half March Plate. There were only three, Flaneur and Devereux at evens, Lancasterite fives. They literally crawled round in the reverse order to that mentioned. At the five furlongs Flaneur made a move and they were running together till he led at the half mile. Turning the bend Lancasterite was again in front with Devereux coming outside and a hot finish ensued, in which the latter only squeezed home by a short head, Flaneur stopping.

THERE was nothing quite as burning hot as was Sentiment last year in the Hunters' Flat Race, War Cloud being favourite at twos in a late rush for him, with Bramble next and some for Tragedian. Bramble was originally in front, but was soon displaced by War Cloud, Bess, Good Luck and Tragedian next. The front pair went clean away on their own, Bess failing to stay, and War Cloud won as he liked. Captain Anderson continued an easy second on Bramble with Mr. Gove on Good Luck five lengths in front of Mr. Crawford on Twilight, Tragedian with Mr. Rommel up alongside of him.

IN a comparatively poor field, Company was thought really good for the Virar Plate, Hazza next with money for Real Blood, Minerva and Gafal, and the result proved upsetting. It looked all over when Company began to draw on Real Blood at the bend, but he could never quite pass him, and the pair were well beaten in the run home by the stable companions Gafal and Zinfandel, the former having given every indication of this win when he ran a week ago over seven furlongs.

A POORER lot went for the Selling Plate and as several of them have met of late the handicapping caused difference of opinion. Murmurees, Desert King and Dilerjung were shortest, but the latter two could not place. Narsin cut out the pace and even when collared by Murmurees made a great fight of it and was only beaten a head. Dumra had been out of the running, but put in a strong finish into third place, and needs watching.

FINALLY the Goodwood Plate with a good field, but the seven was thought to be outside the abilities of the majority. Lord Merv and Lord Carlyon fought for favouritism, the former being half a point shorter, with a few going for Lachlan, who is not ready yet. Jumping out in front, Lord Carlyon established a long lead again and at the distance it was thought all was over. Lord Merv, however, gradually closed on him and at the second enclosure it was evident he had him well set. Bright Metal finished two lengths behind, just beating Lady Spring after being right in the ruck.

THE news of the death of Mr. T. L. Roberts has been received with the deepest regret on both sides of India. The report of his progress last week was most hopeful for a recovery from his accident in the hunting field, but he apparently suffered a relapse and died in hospital on the 2nd instant. India thus loses a good sportsman and his many friends a genial and hospitable companion. Years ago he was well known on the football field as a good Rugby forward, and later he was interested in hunting and turf matters and as "Mr. Vincent Clifford" owned some useful racehorses, Pincher, Bright Metal, Ashanti Gold and Sentiment among others.

ENGLISH and American sportsmen are beginning to appreciate the fact that the sporting possibilities of Newfoundland are very great. Numbers of shooters and anglers are attracted to the island by the knowledge that there is plenty of sport obtainable in its almost untrodden interior. Newfoundland, which is larger than either of the Maritime Provinces of Canada, is virtually unpeopled, save along the seaboard, where reside something less than a quarter of a million of people, who mostly derive a livelihood from fishing. Lakes and streams, teeming with trout and salmon, abound; the open moorlands and forests harbour large herds of magnificent caribou; the scenery is very beautiful; and the climate, though severe in winter, is extremely dry and healthful. Amongst the large game of Newfoundland the caribou stands foremost, but bears, wolves, lynxes, and many other kinds of furbearing animals are very numerous. The island simply teems with feathered game, including willow-grouse, spruce-partridge, Canada goose, brant goose, many species of duck and teal, woodcock, snipe, and plover; while for devotees of the rod there is trout and salmon fishing as fine as the world can afford. Early autumn, before the arrival of the snow, is the best season for sportsmen to visit Newfoundland. During the summer months the caribou migrate from the more southerly parts of the island into the wildest of its northern area; but as winter advances they return to the sheltered forests. In years gone by great numbers of local fishermen used to camp out and make raids against the deer, salting and packing the venison into barrels for winter consumption. Realising, however, that the caribou would soon become as extinct as the bison if this wholesale slaughter were permitted to continue, the Government set apart a reserve for them, in which no shooting is permitted. Nevertheless, there is plenty of sport obtainable amongst the deer in the unpreserved districts. The caribou of Newfoundland weighs anything up to 500lb., and develops the finest antlers in the world. It is not such a shy beast as many of the Cervus order, and under favourable conditions any sportsman possessing a knowledge of woodcraft may kill caribou unaided. It is, however, well to engage the services of a clever guide, whose charges will be from a dollar and-a-half to two dollars per day, exclusive of food. Moose have recently been introduced to the island from New Brunswick, and it is to be hoped these grand animals will thrive well. The shooting of the latter is, of course, prohibited until such time as they have propagated sufficiently to warrant toll being taken of them.

OF those happy Anglo-Indians who are going home this year to obtain renewed vigour for their labours in this relaxing clime, there are probably several to whom salmon-fishing appeals. For those who neither own nor lease rod-fishing for salmon the question "where to go" is not very easily answered. An ample choice, nevertheless, lies at their disposal. Both in Scotland and in Ireland there are numerous hotels where visitors can obtain excellent sport in various rivers and lochs; and on certain reaches of such famous rivers as the Tay and Dee, rods can be leased by the month, at a moderate cost. With one or two notable exceptions, the best of the Scottish Salmon rivers are situated on the East Coast. The Clyde is the largest river on the West Coast, but, although its Firth and Estuary present scenes of unrivalled beauty, the river in much of its course flows through a manufacturing district, and, nowadays at least, possesses little interest for the salmon-fisher. At no time can it have been a very prolific river, for the lofty falls of Clyde, some 20 miles from Glasgow, interpose an insuperable barrier to the further ascent of migratory fish. Towards the South-West of Scotland are the Nith, Annan, Esk and Liddle, and these, with the Clyde and the Awe, are the only rivers of any considerable volume on the West Coast. Passing mention should, however, be made of the Ewe and the Laxford, which, although small, are capital salmon rivers. Alike from the excellence of the sport it yields and the picturesque beauty of its surroundings the Awe is a notable river. Although its course from fresh-water Loch Awe to salt-water Loch Etive is but a few miles, there is infinite variety of pool and stream, the river in its upper reaches running swiftly, with no considerable length of pool, while lower down there are long reaches of quiet water. The system of the Awe comprises Loch Awe, 25 miles long, and the river Orchy, which flows into the north end of the loch after a fairly long course. All these waters can be fished by visitors at the Dalmally Hotel, and the sport usually obtained is above the average of hotel waters. April and May are the best months for the Orchy.

DOG MEDICINES

MAY NOW BE OBTAINED IN INDIA

In CALCUTTA from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO.,

And in BOMBAY from TREACHER & CO., Ltd.

These preparations are based on the most recent and up-to-date veterinary research, and are the best possible remedies for the various ailments and diseases for which they are recommended.

It is of the greatest importance in treating all cases of sickness in dogs that the nature of the ailment should be recognised, and in order to enable dog owners to do this we have published a book,

"HINTS TO DOG OWNERS"

ILLUSTRATED.

which is now the standard work of reference in thousands of kennels in the United Kingdom, where it has had a larger circulation than any book on dogs ever published, the demand for it being so great that more than 200,000 copies have been disposed of. It may be obtained gratis on application to either of the above-mentioned firms in India, and everyone interested in dogs should make a point of obtaining a copy at once.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR DOGS.

These Capsules are tasteless and odourless, and are the surest and safest means of expelling both Round and Tape Worms from dogs (or puppies three months old or over) weighing 15lb. or more. They require no purgative medicine afterwards. May be easily given wrapped up in a piece of meat or cheese.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR PUPPIES AND TOY DOGS.

Every puppy at six weeks old should be dosed with these Capsules which may be safely given to even the smallest and most delicate toy puppy. They surely expel all Worms and never cause the least discomfort. Castor oil is not required before or after giving them, and it is not necessary for the puppy to fast before being dosed.

SHERLEY'S "SKIN CURE."

An absolutely unrivalled dressing for Mange, Eczema, Ringworm, and all other Skin Diseases of dogs. It cures Mange for certain in a week, and not only cures the disease but starts an immediate and vigorous growth of hair.

THE Duke of Abruzzi recently gave a lecture on his expedition of last year in the Himalayas. In describing his plucky attempt on the huge pyramid of K2, he says that a bare camp was established at Rdokass, about the centre of the Baltoro glacier, where there was a grassy spur upon which goats and sheeps could thrive. From this camp, which was placed in charge of an Englishman, Mr. Baines, parties of coolies kept in touch with the expedition and carried food and other necessaries to the higher glaciers when needed. A high camp was then pitched at the foot of the southern wall of K2, and from here exploring parties struck out to examine the mountain and glaciers on the west and east sides. But from no point could any route be traced which would reach to a reasonably high altitude on the peak. The mountain has only very steep ridges of broken rock, while its walls are sheer precipices partly covered with overhanging glaciers. The Duke, however, made one attempt to climb the mountain by the east-south-east ridge. After reaching an altitude of about 16,000 feet the attempt had to be abandoned, not only on account of the dangerous character of the ascent but also from the utter impossibility of carrying even the lightest of necessary camp equipment. A second attempt on the west side enabled the Duke to reach not without great difficulty, a fairly high column on the watershed. Relinquishing all hope of K2, the party spent several days in surveying the upper basin of the Godwin-Austen glacier and the Duke climbed part of the south-east ridge of the staircase Peak, obtaining a good view of the unknown district to the east, as well as of the north precipitous slope of K2. This occupied the whole of June—the most favourable month. Later an attempt was made on Bride Peak but unfortunately the weather changed entirely and the monsoon season set in. Though the Duke stayed for three weeks at an altitude of over 21,000 feet provided with only the barest necessities of life, he was only able to make two definite attempts to scale the mountain. On the first, he reached a ridge of 24,000 feet. On the second, 18th July, the Duke and two guides succeeded in reaching a height of 24,583 feet, a record. The highest altitude hitherto was that attained by two Norwegian mountaineers who climbed Mount Kabru, 24,000 feet, in 1908. Besides making this ascent the expedition brought back an accurate survey of the Godwin-Austin glacier and a large number of exact altitudes and measurements, besides a meteorological record of the region and several original observations.

"THE race for the South Pole will be the most exciting and nerve-racking the world has ever seen" are the words of Commander Peary, who fresh from nailing the Stars and Stripes to the Big Nail of the North, has announced his intention of competing with Captain Scott in the international race to the South Pole. Captain Scott has said that no step was taken by Commander Peary until he had consulted with him and received his assurance that he heartily welcomed American co-operation in the scientific problems to be solved. As regards the effort to reach the Pole, the rivalry will be of an entirely friendly character, but naturally each will be keen that his own nationality shall be first. The Americans, according to Captain Scott, will have a longer route to travel, but it is very possible it will be a far easier one, as present knowledge seems to indicate that there is a gradual slope from the Pole to the Weddell Sea. Their main difficulty will be to find a suitable wintering spot in Coats Land and to land the animals and impediments of the expedition. No place is known at present where this can be effected, but it is possible that a lucky chance may reveal a spot in which the ship can winter or land her stores. The great obstacle to the British expedition lies in traversing the mountain ranges to reach the upper plateau on which the pole is situated. This can only be done over glaciers which are much crevassed and cracked, and consequently with risk to animals and sledges as well as to members of the expedition.

THE professional golfer looms very large in the public eye nowadays, but it would appear that although the demand for his services has increased so enormously, the circumstances of the average professional have not changed altogether for the better. Golfers in general, when they think about the subject at all, are apt to think of the professionals as extraordinarily lucky people, something more than passing rich, and occupied in doing the thing they like best in the world. J. H. Taylor's admirable letter on the subject addressed some little while ago to Golf Illustrated must have come as a great surprise to many of them. Taylor has the matter very much at heart and speaks with a knowledge that none can gainsay; his case, put shortly, is that the average professional, who is a good but not an outstanding player, has very hard work to make both ends meet. He is paid a very modest weekly wage, nearly all of which he has to pay away to an assistant, for he must keep some capable person to look after the shop when he is playing or teaching. His salary may in many cases, therefore, be practically disregarded, and he may be said to start "all square" with his living to make out of playing, teaching and the sale of clubs and balls. This he could and did do in the days of the gutty ball; but the club-repairing business has fallen away almost to nothing, since one may nowadays, with ordinary good luck, play with one wooden club for an eternity. The business of remaking balls has altogether ceased to exist; and it is in regard to this and the sale of balls that the professional has most severely felt the pinch. A great many players buy their golf balls not from their professional, but from big athletic shops, and in some cases golf clubs have taken the sale of balls into their own hands; indeed, it was an instance of a club's doing this that furnished the text for Taylor's letter. The result appears to be that while the men at the top of the tree make, as is their due, a very sufficient income, many of those who are no more than thoroughly sound, good players only make the barest living.

A LEADING veterinarian of London made a rule, based on his own experience, for watering horses. The best plan, he says, judging from experience and physiology, is to give horses all the water they choose to drink immediately they come in from work, and to let them have a constant supply of water in their stalls and boxes. If this latter provision cannot be carried out, the animals should be given as much water as they will drink before each feed. He never takes the chill off the water, because the horses relish cold water more than water with the chill off. He says that in all his experience with horses he has never seen any ill-effect from watering horses according to the foregoing principles, which, as he says, he has always found to be as sound in practice as they are good in theory.

Prejudices die hard, and the hardest to die in the minds of grooms is that it is injurious to give a horse a drink of cold water when he is heated from exercise. In driving or riding horses long distances the best plan is to water frequently. No matter how heated a horse is, a half-bucketful of cold water will not hurt him, particularly if he continues his exercise. To give a horse all the cold water he will drink when he is red-hot inside and out, we think would be deleterious to the last extent. Trainers of race horses in India give their steeds half a bucket of cold water immediately after a gallop, and with the best results as regards their appetite and health. On the other hand, we have seen numberless cases of colic in horses caused by drinking too much cold water when they were heated. Again, we have seen colic occur in horses from drinking water after being fed on occasions when they had, previous to eating, been deprived of water for some time.

NEWS reaches us from Lucknow that a leopard measuring 9 feet 3 inches was recently shot by a villager in the district of Uttar Khasi Tehri State. The beast, a notorious cattle is said to have been despatched with one charge of No. 1 shot. If the measurements are correct the animal is undoubtedly the record. The largest leopard on record, of which authenticated measurements are available, was one of 8 feet 5½ inches shot by Captain A. G. Arbuthnot, at Bandipur Kashmir, as mentioned in the "Sportsman's Book for India." The Maharajah of Cooch Behar once bagged a specimen measuring 8 feet 4 inches, while we have records of several over 8 feet in length.

H.H. THE MAHARAJAH OF COOCH BEHAR recently entertained a party at a very successful shooting camp not far from the south bank of the Brahmaputra opposite Chandradingha Pahar. A couple of tigers, several buffaloes, deer and miscellaneous small game formed the bag and the Maharajah's guests as usual were given the best of good times.

A TRAGIC shooting fatality occurred in the Dooars on the night of 28th February, resulting in the death of a popular and able planter, Mr. J. F. A. Thompson, of Young Tong Tea Estate. While sitting up in a machan he was accidently shot by a chowkidar, death being almost instantaneous. A good-all round sportsman, he had made his name at polo, and in the cricket field, while he was well known in the tennis world both at Home and out here. Our local readers will remember that he took part in the Tennis Championships in Calcutta last year. His death is much deplored by his many friends throughout the Dooars.

As will be seen in an advertisement appearing further on the maximum number of permits, allowed under Rule II for sportsmen from stations other than Dalhousie and Bakloh has been reached, so no more permits are available for shooting in the Chamba State this season.

THE enhancement of the Government reward for the destruction of tigers in the Sunderbunds to Rs. 200 has resulted satisfactorily, for as compared with 1907-08 the number of men killed by these pests declined from 120 to 103 and the number of tigers killed rose from 11 including 2 cubs to 23 including 6 cubs. The number of men killed by tigers in the Singbhum fell from 31 to 13 in the year under review; four tigers were killed in this Division. In the Angul forests, six men were killed by tigers. As to the provincial results, we find that the net revenue in the last year was Rs. 620,442, while it was Rs. 456,931 in the year 1907-08.

THE Mahableshwar Polo Tournament begins on the 5th May, entries closing on the 30th April.

THE Subalterns Polo Tournament began on Monday at Umballa, when the 12th Royal Lancers beat the 6th Inniskilling Dragoons by 4 goals to 3 after an exciting game. Details in our next issue.

THE Srinagar Week will commence about 20th May 1910 when the programme will contain Golf, Polo and Tennis Tournaments and a Horse and Dog Show.

THE first Gymkhana of the Simla season will be held at Annandale on the 7th May.

THE following sporting fixtures have been arranged for the Ootacamund season:—Races 3rd, 5th and 7th May; Polo Tournament 23rd to 27th April; Tennis Tournament 18th to 27th April; Golf Championship of Southern India 23rd to 28th May; Horse Show 13th and 14th May and Motor Gymkhana on 16th May.

THE Novices Polo Tournament at Secunderabad closed on the 4th instant when the 20th Deccan Horse beat the 14th Hussars by 5 goals to 4 after an exciting game.

THE final game in the Inter Regimental Polo Tournament was played at Meerut on the 4th instant, the 10th Royal Hussars defeating the 1st King's Dragoons by 9 goals to 4.

WE regret to record the death of Lieut.-Colonel Sladen, commanding the East Yorkshire Regiment who was killed by a fall at polo at Allahabad on the 2nd instant.

REMARKABLE hunting scenes were witnessed on Saturday, the 12th February, with the Tedworth Hounds, in command of Captain Walter Faber, M.P.

Meeting at Ellbarrow, they got on the line of a fox, and, after covering four and a half miles in twenty minutes, Reynard jumped down a thirty-feet well and was drowned. Grappling-irons were procured, and the animal's body was recovered.

During the day's run the hounds killed a leash of foxes and ran six foxes to earth, this being probably a record.

THE directors of the International Horse Show have decided on an interesting series of obstacles for the jumping contests at the forthcoming Olympia exhibition.

The chief of this year's novelties will be an old-fashioned toll-gate, with the keeper's lodge on one side of it and a brush fence, representing a hedgerow,

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

IRELAND drew with England at Belfast on Saturday the first Soccer International of the season at one goal each. It was a scrambling game played on a mudheap and the reputations of some of the English footballers suffered considerably. One man stood out head and shoulders above his fellows, McConnell, the Irish centre half. From start to finish he was splendid, at one moment checking Woodward or one of the other inside forwards, at the next setting up a daring attack by the Irish forwards. Had these bursts been carried out with more coolness there might have been a different result to the match, for time and again Cowell and Morley were beaten, and as often one or the other of the Irish forwards overran the ball. The Irish backs, on the other hand, seemed to revel in the mud, McCann playing a sturdy game, and Burnison who is quite a youth, showing splendid defence. Thompson and Renneville, the Irish wingers, made a lot of ground at times, and between them scored Ireland's goal in the first half, Thompson getting his head to a fine centre by Renneville and flashing the ball into the net yards wide of Hardy, who had no chance whatever. Murphy at times was excellent, but Murray and Lacey were weak. The veteran Irish half, Darling, lasted well, but at times was not fast enough for Bond and Fleming, who did fine work towards the end of the game. Frankly, England were disappointing. Cowell and Morley did not act in unison, and Bradshaw and Ducat gave little assistance to their own forwards and were repeatedly beaten by the dash of the Irish forwards. Now and again the English front showed glimpses of the form expected of them, but they finished weakly. The goal scored by England was rather a fluky one, Scott falling in clearing from Hall's centre and Fleming having nothing to do but kick through. Fleming got through again close on the finish, but was ruled offside. Bond's pace was nullified by the heavy going and Hall did not play up to his club form. Woodward, at centre, was, of course, clever at times, but he was generally beaten by McConnell and thus made few openings for his colleagues. Just on time he had one grand chance of winning the game for England, but tried to dribble through instead of shooting and was charged off the ball. Although England was by no manner of means a good side on the day's play, it must not detract from the fine enthusiastic display given by Ireland. It was good to see and if their efforts had won them the match there would have been few to cavil. Summing up the play, it may be said to have been featureless and scrambling, but fast. The ball would sometimes slither past over the mud and at other times stop dead and this in a measure helped the Irishmen, who played an individual game, whilst the Englishmen tried to combine their forces, with the result that passes went astray and the Irish defenders nipped in and cleared.

Some startling results marked the resumption of the First League competition victory resting with no fewer than five visiting teams. Bury won at Middlesbrough by no fewer than 5 to 0. Nottingham Forest overcame Sheffield United at Bramall Lane by 4—1, Everton—beaten on their own ground by Liverpool four months ago—pulled through in the return engagement with their neighbours by 1—0, and Blackburn Rovers gained a victory over Woolwich Arsenal at Plumstead the score in this game also being 1—0. By far the most remarkable performance, however, was that of Manchester United at St. James's Park, Newcastle. So cleverly did Newcastle United acquit themselves in the opening half that they led at the interval by 3—0. Their success in these circumstances seemed assured, but on crossing over goals by Roberts, A. Turnbull, and Blott made the game level, and a second point from A. Turnbull left Manchester United with a win by 4—3.

In beating Bradford City at Trent Bridge by 3 to 2 after being a goal behind at half-time Notts County not only accomplished a good performance but avenged the defeat inflicted upon them by Bradford City in the first round of the Cup. On the other hand, Cup form was repeated in the Forests' victory over Sheffield United. Aston Villa, despite the absence of Hall and Bache, both of whom were assisting England against Ireland at Belfast, managed to overcome Sunderland, but had very hard work to gain a victory, the Wearside team well into the second half leading by 2 to 1. Consequent upon their success the Villa maintained both their leadership in the First League and their splendid record for home matches, none of which have this season resulted in the defeat of the famous Birmingham organisation. Blackburn Rovers winning and both Sheffield United and Newcastle United losing, the Blackburn club take third place in the competition to Aston Villa and Notts County.

Tottenham Hotspur were expected to beat Bristol City and they did so, but only by the odd goal in five and that scored just at the finish. They laboured under a great disadvantage, it should be added, in the disablement of Leslie, who was off the field for the greater part of the match. Narrow as the victory was, it gave Hotspur a very valuable lift in the competition, sending the club up above Chelsea, Woolwich Arsenal, and Bristol City. The Arsenal also suffered a severe handicap in their match with Blackburn Rovers, through Gray having to retire, and in this instance the London club had to admit a hare defeat. Their famous band of international forwards having failed to bring about an improvement in the fortunes of the club, Chelsea made drastic alterations in their front rank, but at Bolton, although contending against the least successful of the whole twenty clubs in the First League, were beaten by no fewer than 5 to 2, despite the fact that Freeman obtained the opening goal of the match. Chelsea have not won a League game since Boxing Day.

'SPURS vs. BRISTOL CITY.—After a plucky and entertaining exhibition Tottenham Hotspur won their return League fixture with Bristol City on the North London ground by 3 goals to 2. The 'Spurs, who played the same team as won the Cup tie at Chelsea, lost Leslie, injured, after half an hour, and though at the start of the second half the left back tried to resume, he remained on the field for but ten minutes, and all the goals were scored while the Londoners had but ten men. Bristol were without Wedlock, who was playing against Ireland at Belfast, and the experiment of playing Marr, a half-back, at centre-forward, was not a great success. Immediately after Leslie got hurt D. Steel, who fell back to partner Coquet, failed to check Burton, and Gilligan had simply to push the centre into the net. Two minutes later Middlemiss equalised from a corner placed by Curtis. Four minutes later the 'Spurs were ahead, Humphreys getting through from a corner kicked by Middlemiss, Minter should have scored again, and Shearman missed a great chance for Bristol before the interval. In the second half Bristol attacked hotly after Leslie had retired for good, and Marr got the equalising goal from a corner after he had been robbed in the goalmouth. D. Steel then resumed at half, and the 'Spurs played the one-back game. Marr nearly scored again for Bristol, his shot striking the post, but five minutes from the close Minter cleverly headed through from Middlemiss's centre, and thus scored the winning goal, for nothing further was done. There were 10,000 spectators. Tottenham Hotspur, 3; Bristol City, 2.

WOOLWICH ARSENAL vs. BLACKBURN ROVERS.—At Plumstead the Arsenal had all the worst of the battle with Blackburn Rovers, who quite earned their victory by one goal to nil, though their forward work was so lacking in incisiveness that it is possible that had Gray not retired injured just after the interval the result might have been a goalless draw. As it was the goal which the Rovers scored was engineered along the wing from which Gray had retired. Even so, the Rovers gave full value for their success, but the game generally was a poor one. About 8,000 people were present, the ground was holding, and the Arsenal played Dick for Ducat, while the Rovers had Ferguson and Suttie for Bradshaw and Cowell. These three absentees were on international duty in Ireland. Robert Crompton returned to the Rovers' team after long absence. The Arsenal should have scored early when Neave put the ball to Buckenham and Steven in the goalmouth, but both men missed. At the other end Ellis Crompton also made a bad blunder, but Aitkenhead had wretched luck when he ran through and hit the cross-bar with a great drive. Ashcroft was not seriously troubled, though he had to give a corner to get away a shot from Greenaway. In the second half a fog, which increased as the game wore on, spoilt the play from the spectators point of view, and to add to the local disappointment Gray was injured and had to retire. After this play degenerated still more by the adoption of the one back game, though once Garbutt got through and missed a great chance. Later he centred, and Cameron got an easy goal. The same player netted later on, but was given offside. Blackburn Rovers, 1; Woolwich Arsenal, 0.

FULHAM vs. OLDHAM ATHLETIC.—Taking the game all through at Craven Cottage, Fulham must count themselves rather fortunate to have shared the points in the (1—1) draw with Oldham Athletic. The football of the visitors was generally more convincing, their speedy and dashing methods being certainly before the inconsistent football of Fulham. True, Fulham scored first, and early in the second half a dozen corners in quick succession, but such periods of pressure were few. Oldham were much more persistent. Fulham played Prout at centre forward, but this young footballer, who learnt his football in the West London district, was by no means a conspicuous success. The heavy ground, however, handicapped him a great deal, the pitch being dreadfully churned up down the centre. Under these circumstances it would be rather unfair to pass critical judgment on him. Fulham started with a big rush, but this soon evaporated, and Oldham took up the running. Fryer saved grandly from Montgomery and Fay. Six minutes from the interval Dalrymple put in a superb dribble and when close up to goal passed to Brown. The inside left missed the ball, but Walker dashing up caught it and shot into goal. Play in the second half, with the exception of the opening moments, favoured Oldham, and half way through Montgomery scored the equalising goal. The visitors pressed continuously, but Fryer, who saved his side, was not beaten again. There were 15,000 spectators at the game. Fulham, 1; Oldham Athletic, 1.

IRELAND vs. ENGLAND.—After a very wet morning, the weather cleared up for the International match between teams representing England and Ireland on the Cliftonville Club's ground at Belfast. Since the match between the two countries two seasons ago the Cliftonville ground has been much enlarged and generally improved. When the game began there were fully 20,000 people present, despite the fact that the rain had only just left off. England eleven turned out as originally selected, but Ireland had to make one change

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

owing to O'Hagan, of Aberdeen, the inside left, being unable to play on account of the Scottish Cup ties. Murphy, of Bradford City, took O'Hagan's place. As the result of the rain the playing pitch was very soft and greasy on the surface, and from the start it was certain that the players would be severely handicapped by the treacherous turf and heavy ball. A fairly strong wind blew from goal to goal, and Ireland, on winning the toss, took advantage of it for the first half. Immediately Woodward had kicked off for England, the Irish left wing got away, and the English goal was twice in danger before Lacey, when well placed at close range, shot wide. Then there came a run by Bond for England, but McCann robbed the outside right and cleared. The Irish forwards were not to be beaten back, but on the muddy ground many of their short passes were intercepted. After a rush by the home attackers, Renneville missed the English goal by less than a foot when close up. A miskick by Burnison led to an attack on the Irish goal, but Hall finished with a poor shot. Hall and Bache showed excellent combination, and started several English attacks, but they sometimes lost the ball through misjudging the pace of the ground. Scott twice saved shots by the English forwards, but once he was almost beaten by Woodward. Ireland then returned to the attack, and when hard pressed Morley, in passing back to Hardy, nearly kicked the ball through his goal. Although showing considerable cleverness in mid-field, the English forwards were weak when near goal. Wedlock slipped down and hurt his leg, game being stopped for a time. Weak play by Darling resulted in an unsuccessful corner to England, and then just before half-time Ireland deservedly gained thefirst goal of the match, Thompson heading past Hardy in fine style from a centre by Renneville. So far the game had gone decidedly in favour of Ireland, whose forwards with a little more steadiness would have scored more than once. The Irish backs had shown sound form, and held their own much better than had been expected against the formidable English attack. Half-time:

Early in the second half each side attacked but Fleming of England and Murray of Ireland were in turn given offside when in dangerous positions. A little later Murphy narrowly missed the English goal. A free kick against McConnell for fouling Woodward led up to an attack by England, Bond, after a short run, getting in a fine centre, but Bache spoilt the movement by getting offside. The second half had been in progress ten minutes when England managed to draw level with a rather lucky goal. Scott, the Irish goalkeeper, caught a centre by Bond, but, impeded by his backs, he dropped it, and Fleming dashing up kicked into the net. For the next few minutes the Irishmen had a lot of work to do in defence, but then the home country got away, and a splendid run by Thompson looked very dangerous. With the ball very heavy however, Thompson finished with a poor shot, and Hardy had simply to pick up the ball. Now the difficulties of the players were increased by drizzling rain, but under the circumstances the game was a splendid one. England showed the better understanding, but the Irish forwards as usual were full of determination. Morley nearly put through his own goal in clearing a centre by Thompson, and then in the last few minutes of the game both goalkeepers had some anxious moments. Hardy was severely tested by Murphy, while Scott saved when on all fours from Wedlock and had to give a corner in stopping a shot by Bond. Fleming put the ball through the Irish goal, but was given offside.

This is only the third time in the twenty-nine matches so far played that Ireland have managed to avert defeat in opposing England. They have never beaten England, who have won twenty-six times. In addition to this match 10 games in 1894 and 1905 were drawn.

CORINTHIANS v. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—In a fairly good game at Queen's Club neither side could score, and the result was a draw. The Corinthians had rather a better side than drew with Cambridge a week before but the forwards did not play so well, owing, perhaps, to the excellent Oxford defence. Broddell seemed to have scarcely recovered from his lameness, but was very useful and only less prominent than Tuff, while Edwards did a lot of work at centre-half and Owen was very good in goal. The forwards brought off some neat combined runs and showed pace and dash, but blundered badly near goal, several obvious openings being thrown away. Oxford were the more often dangerous in the early part of the game, and though Rowlandson had no hard shots to deal with the Corinthians' goal was several times in danger, Timmis once clearing when a score seemed certain. Play was rather slack at times, but after change of ends there came a great improvement. Both sets of forwards showed to more advantage. Owen cleared well from S. S. Harris, Burnsley, and Vassall, while the Corinthians were often hard pressed, Oxford having very bad luck near goal, Cardew once, with no one to beat, being unable to reach the ball. Corinthians, 0; Oxford University, 0.

RUGBY RULES.

ENGLAND v. IRELAND.—The third Rugby international match of the season excluding the games played by France against Wales and Scotland, was contested on the English Union ground at Twickenham, the scene of England's great triumph over Wales just a month ago. Morton kicked off for England and Quinn returned. There was a scrum, and an Irish rush, which however, was short lived. Then Gent gave away a free kick for offside, which took the visitors into the home "25." Then there was a quick follow up, but the English forwards dribbled to the centre. Another Irish rush was checked by Mobbs and a third by Johnston, but the visitors were undoubtedly having the better of matters until Stoop set English three-quarters going. The ball passed from hand to hand backwards and forwards, but Johns passed badly when a better effort would have sent Mobbs in. The Irish forwards worked back to the centre only for the English backs to get going, but they were too keenly marked and made little ground. Lloyd kicked over the scrum, only for Chapman to return into touch. Still, the visitors appeared the stronger in front and their quick breaking and follow up proved for the time disconcerting to home backs. Headed by Pillman and Johns, the English forwards came away, but a kick too far, gave Lloyd a chance, and with a free field he looked very dangerous just as Gent managed to get to touch with the ball. Then came a great run by Mobbs and Birkett to the other end, and a series of scrums and throws in front touch. In this work Gent did many brilliant things by his short touch kicking and Halpin was hurt for the moment. A free kick against Ireland took the "predominant partner" close in, but an alleged "mark" by Hinton relieved the pressure. Again England looked dangerous, Smith throwing wide out to Mobbs, who ran very near, despite the fact that an opponent was hanging on to him. A bout of kicking on both sides went rather against the visitors and there was some vigorous footwork in the Irish quarters. Still, with the Irish holding their own in the packs and getting the ball out to their half-backs more often, nothing tangible resulted. Next came a perfectly wonderful bit of forward work, the Irish eight playing like a three-quarter line, and taking the ball down from hand to hand before the English tackling prevailed, Lloyd made a fine attempt to drop a goal from the "25" mark, but just failed and immediately afterwards the half-time whistle sounded, with the score-sheet quite clear.

Following the customary interval ends were changed. Smyth kicked off for Ireland, and Lloyd following up was checked by Chapman. The Irish front rank seemed as strong and fresh as ever. Hayward spoiled a bout of passing by a wretched throw to one of his opponents, and it was fortunate that Birkett was at hand to tackle. In the loose the visitors played magnificently, and England was very hard pressed indeed. Thompson got within a yard, but Johnston threw him into touch at the crucial moment, and then a great combined movement of the home backs transferred the area of the struggle but, in the vigorous collaring that succeeded Mobbs was hurt, and had to leave the field. While thus handicapped England were hard put to it to keep their line intact. Once Birkett miskicked as he was tackled and Thompson was nearly in. Chapman just pulling him down in the nick of time. It should be stated that Pillman was taken out of the pack to complete the home three-quarter line until Mobbs returned, but on the latter being injured again almost directly he had once more to retire, and Pillman again took his place. England had another chance ruined by Hayward. It was a difficult pass, but it made an enormous difference. Thus Gent and Pillman made ground only for the opposing forwards to recover it. The utmost excitement prevailed, especially when Lloyd from a clever mark essayed to drop a goal. It was a failure, and again the game proceeded amidst cheers and counter cheers. Several times, the ball went into touch close to England's line, and the Irish had to survive some terrible tackling before Pillman came through the pack the whole length of the field. Once more the Irish raced back and Lloyd nearly broke through only for Stoop to return to the attack. Still, nothing appeared to tire out the visitors, who apparently as fresh as ever, attacked again and again. The English worked magnificently in defence, and saves that were little short of miraculous were made by Johnston, whose kicking was wonderful, by Johns, and by Birkett and Hayward, and they managed to keep the line safe to the close, "No side" sounding with nothing scored by either team. Mobbs' absence during the final twenty minutes, of course, handicapped his team seriously, but for all that Irishmen deserve the highest praise for their unceasing efforts. On the day's football the visiting forwards were distinctly the better, while it may be said that the English backs scarcely realised expectations. They were nothing like so brainy as against Wales, and the combination was certainly upset by Hayward, who made a poor substitute for Solomons. This is the second time in the history of the meeting between England and Ireland that the match has been drawn, the record now standing at England 21 wins, Ireland 11, and two draws. The game was conducted throughout with splendid spirit.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

CUMBERLAND v. YORKSHIRE.—In a very exciting game at Kendal Yorkshire scored 2 goals (1 dropped) to 2 tries. Both counties were practically at full strength, and with the weather fine there was a large crowd to see what proved a most interesting struggle. Play was hard and even from the start, the forwards being well balanced. Yorkshire, in a strong attack, scored through Power and Pickering placed a goal. Then Cumberland forced the play and met with such success that Harrison and Smith in turn ran in. The goal kicks failed, so that ends were changed with Cumberland leading by 6 points to 5. On resuming Yorkshire were hard pressed until Strother relieved, and then Pickering almost kicked a goal from a mark. In some very hard play each side in turn got dangerous, and at last Yorkshire had the best of matters. They had rather bad luck, but at length their efforts were rewarded by Pickering dropping a goal which turned the game, Yorkshire just winning. Yorkshire, 2 goals (1 dropped); Cumberland, 2 tries.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY v. MARLBOROUGH NOMADS.—The University had matters all their own way at Cambridge, and won by 50 points to 3. The superior side from the start, Cambridge scored 24 points in the first half, and altogether they obtained fourteen tries, of which four were converted. Lewis (five), Jones (four), Marling (two), Schofield, Pyman, and Purves scored the tries; Lockhart kicked three goals and Pyman one. Near the end Gatey got in for the Nomads, who were very weak in defence. Cambridge, 4 goal 10 tries; Nomads, 1 try.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY v. LONDON SCOTTISH.—The Scottish played only seven forwards at Oxford, and the University won very easily by 32 points to 3, though their team included only six Blues. Cunningham and Gravell played brilliantly, and the Scottish line was crossed four times in each half. The tries were scored by Gravell (two), Cunningham, Diggle, Honey, Jones, Pocock, and Buchanan. Robertson scored for the visitors near the end of the game. Oxford, 4 goals 4 tries; Scottish, 1 try.

GUY'S HOSPITAL v. LONDON WELSH.—At Honor Oak Park.—Adapting themselves better than their opponents to the slippery state of the ground, the Hospital played a good game and thoroughly deserved their victory. There was not much to choose between either side in the first half when Stokes and Roberts gained tries for Guy's, and Evans crossed over for the Welsh. At half-time Guy's thus had a lead of 3 points. On crossing over the Hospital showed their superiority both in the tight and the loose. Stokes, Stringner, Kennedy, and Roberts each ran in, the first named after a brilliant run, whilst Hind goaled on one occasion. The visitors were responsible for several dangerous attacks, but Guy's defence proved too strong for them. Guy's, 1 goal 5 tries; Welsh, 1 try.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL v. OLD ALLEYNIANS.—At Chiswick.—The Old Alleynians scored 4 goals and 4 tries to a try, and won very easily by 32 points to 3. They were the superior side all through, and soon asserted a marked superiority. Garrett obtained the first four tries, running in rather wide out on each occasion, and all the place kicks failed. From a try by Kempson Wade kicked a goal before change of ends, and afterwards he converted tries by Clark, Johnson, and Garrett. The Hospital made a better struggle early in the second half, Wilson crossing for them, but the place was not successful. Alleynians, 4 goals 4 tries, St. Thomas's, 1 try.

HOCKEY.

SCOTLAND v. WALES.—The first of the series of International matches between the four nations was decided at Dunfermline on Saturday, the 12th instant, Scotland and Wales opposing each other. This was the eighth annual game between these countries, and it proved disastrous for the Welshmen, who were outplayed and outclassed from start to finish. The ground was in a fair and outclassed from start to finish. The ground was in a fair condition, but the weather was dull, and only a small number of spectators assembled. From the first bully-off the Scottish forwards opened strongly, and Anderson sending across a well-judged pass to Mackenzie, the latter easily beat Turnbull with his shot. Scotland continued to enjoy most of the exchanges, and it was not long before two further goals were registered, through Anderson and Mackenzie, the latter being the result of a clever individual effort.

The Welsh backs and goalkeeper were having an enormous amount of extra work thrown upon them by the inability and complete failure of the half-backs to keep the Scottish forwards in check, and before the interval Scotland had increased her lead by two more points. Walker got through into the circle and baffled Turnbull with a hot drive, while for a few minutes the Welsh goalkeeper had several other warm shots to clear, which he did very cleverly. But Scotland would not be denied, and soon Burt scored the fifth point. During this period Wales did little or no attacking, and it was manifest that Scotland was much the stronger side in all departments.

Although Scotland only scored two more goals on change of ends, the Welshmen did very little attacking, and when they got into the Scottish circle Ross and Black generally managed to clear. Before the finish Burt hit the sixth, and Mackenzie the seventh goal, so that Scotland ran out the easiest of winners by 7—0. The rôle of N. T. Cowan, the Scots' custodian, was almost that of a spectator, and he only touched the ball twice in the last half.

CROSS-COUNTRY.

SOUTH OF THAMES CHAMPIONSHIP.—Grove Park was the scene of the annual championship of the South of Thames Cross-country Association last Saturday afternoon. There was a record entry of twenty-seven teams for the race, the Herne Hill H., though having to find substitutes for last year's winning six, being doubly represented, as also were the Kent, Reading, and Surrey Clubs. The result was a win for F. C. Neaves, who is to be congratulated on beating a strong field for two years in succession, while Tedder, in finishing third in a field of 267 runners, again proved himself to be a wonderful young runner.

Appended is the order in which the leading runners reached home.

BOXING.

THE FEATHERWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP.—A very important programme was decided at the National Sporting Club last Monday night, there being three contests of special interest down for decision. Jem Driscoll, of Cardiff, beat "Seaman" Hayes of Hoxton for the featherweight championship of England and Lord Lonsdale's belt. Digger Stanley, the bantam-weight champion of England, drew with Young Pierce, the coloured bantam-weight champion of America, while the third item of importance was a six-round contest between Gunner Hewitt, heavy-weight champion of the Navy and Army, and Private Voyles, of the Irish Guards. In this the Irishman proved successful, knocking out his opponent in the last round.

Of course the contest between Driscoll and Hayes excited the most interest. The men weighed in during the afternoon, Driscoll pulling 8st. 13lb. and Hayes 8st. 12½lb. Driscoll was a pronounced favourite, though many of the critics were of the opinion that if Hayes could hold his own during the first ten rounds he might wear his opponent down.

The contest itself was but a hollow affair. After the first round, when both men were content to spar cautiously and feel their way, the match was all Driscoll's. He completely outclassed Hayes, hitting him all over the ring where, when, and how he liked. Hayes was game enough, coming up time after time taking any amount of severe punishment.

The pity was that Driscoll was unable to deal a knock-out blow. Everyone was relieved when at the end of the sixth round the referee stopped the contest and gave the verdict to the Welshman.

Time alone saved Hayes at the end of the fifth round, but he came up pluckily enough and though obviously dazed, did his best to stand up to his man.

Thus three championships, the middle-weight, light-weight and feather-weight, have all been won by Welshmen in the last few months.

picking their way along a ledge about 600 feet up. The splash of the bullet was easy to see on the face of the cliff, and this proved a useful factor in measuring the range. A black billy goat, conspicuous by a white patch, offered the best target, and after one or two sighting shots the rock on which he stood was struck by a Martini bullet. The ricochet passed between his legs, or perhaps singed him, for he sprang into space, leaping grandly straight out from the cliff, struck once on a ledge and made a desperate effort to recover his footing, then, bouncing off, he turned twice over in the air and struck the water with a slap like a whale's tail. Pulling in smartly, we gaffed the carcass, which was just sinking, hoisted in it and found the bones of the face all smashed to splinters by the fall. No shot mark visible, the concussion and splash of the ounce bullet had caused that terrified spring, luckily for us seawards, while he watched and listened in sublime contempt of the shooting below.

Highly elated with our first Juan Fernandez goat aboard, we paddled northward, past Selkirk Cave, boarded in for protection, and round the north-west point of the island, seven miles distant from our anchorage in Cumberland Bay. Heavy squalls swept down the steep quebradas and a nasty lop was set up by the breaking swell, making the boat very lively in the backwash and extremely difficult to shoot from; no landing on the rocks was possible.

We made out Maximilian, silhouetted against the skyline, on the charted peak 1,805 feet immediately above us, his sombrero held to the southward, marking goats below. The glasses soon disclosed a large herd feeling their way slowly down the cliff, so high up they looked like a dark string of hopping fleas. The dogs could just be made out, peering over the edge, down which they dared not venture. One after the other came the long line of leaping and skipping goats, led by several of the oldest patriarchs, strung out, but always dropping from ledge to ledge, landing on tiny jutting footholds, just sufficient for safety, with marvellous poise and precision. Cloven hoofs of horn and rubber alone could guarantee such grip, such feats of acrobatic daring. There was no jostling on the face of eternity, each waited for the other with punctilious ceremony. As one leapt down the next followed, springing and pitching each in their turn upon points of rock no larger than the crown of a hat, no wider than the palm of your hand. Downwards they came, steadily, deliberately, as if well aware the penalty of one false step was instant death.

We opened fire heartlessly at the grizzly old leader, about 1,000 feet up, but the shooting was most erratic, the targets almost invisible. Firing only sufficed to keep the herd perpetually on the move; they worked back persistently towards West Bay. These goats were all black, deep chestnut brown or tawny yellow; most of those with white spots had been shot, while the survival of the fittest coloration held good, their protective shadows harmonizing exactly with the prevailing background. One of the leaders selected a projecting shoulder to deliberate on, and a ball from the .450 Express took him fair in the chest and dropped him back dead into a cave, where, no doubt as a kid, he had often sheltered from the tempest. The cave was, unfortunately, out of all human reach, both from above or below.

With the glasses only could we make out our Chilian goatherd, pointing and gesticulating wildly 600 yards up; no megaphone would have sufficed to transmit his shouts, and he was all but invisible to the naked eye, so we proceeded à la chasse alone. Two hours of hard work failed to drive our quarry to a lower refuge; we find them quietly resting about 1,500 to 1,600 feet almost vertically above us. Here the Express tried three rounds at the largest leader; the first ball kicked a puff of dust out of the cliff just below him, the second struck as much too high, for the tell-tale dust was visible; the third gave no sign, but hit the beast fair in the stomach. We watched him stagger forward, recover himself, then turn to the little track and crawl away from the herd he had led so long and well. Climbing slowly upwards with increasing efforts, he just managed to gain a grass-covered slope at the extreme top and disappeared into a gully. Doubtful of ever securing either of these goats, we headed back and landed under Crusoe's cave in Grassy Bay.

The native joined us and explained in Chilian that the cave was out of reach, also that all wounded goats not knocked off the cliffs made for these inaccessible caves and died there. The second goat had reached a gulch and was hiding there badly wounded; a rifle might be useful in case he jumped. We shouldered the double Express and started off. Maximilian led us landwards up the steepest of slopes and ravines until we had surmounted 2,000 feet, faced by the cliffs. We crawled over a dangerous ridge, and taking our boots off, crept and slip cautiously about 400 feet down to the bare edge of the mighty drop. Here in a deep little quebrada lay our grand old quarry, stretched out by death, "mui antiguo, mui viejo," as the hunter said. He had just strength to reach the edge of this awful declivity in time to die in this friendly dip and save himself that last long tumble he had been spared so long.

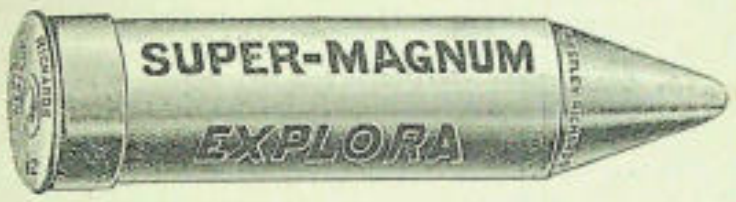
With the rifle an incumbrance we left it and cartridges behind, taking our hunting knives in our teeth we helped each other gingerly down. The strong smelling patriarch was too heavy to lift or pack when paunched (they weigh up to 150 pounds), so we started to skin him as he lay. The knife brought away the little one-half-ounce bullet, now in mushroom shape, from under the skin of the back; it had perforated the vitals upwards, but although driven by 120 grains of Curtis and Harvey's "best diamond black," its energy at such an altitude was all but expended and it had failed to penetrate the tough skin a second time; no bones had been met, either, to check its career.

Maximilian tied the head round his neck, and with the bullet in one's mouth, and the clinging skin on one's back we regained the ridge, but not before we had kicked and rolled the carcass over the cliff. It turned one quite giddy to watch its fall, striking once, twice, bouncing outwards till it reached the blue water beneath, and, without the hide that had kept it together, burst like a shell on impact. Sharks, dogfish, barracouta and crayfish deserved it more than the rats which abounded, and no doubt the finny tribe much appreciated the finale.

The head, well mounted by Rowland Ward, hangs outside over our front door, for the offensive aroma still given off by the long-bearded trophy, in spite of petrol and spirits of turpentine, prevents its acceptance indoors.

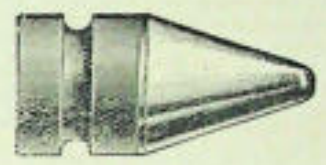
The next day we spent in collecting humming birds and fern roots for South Kensington and Kew; we also ascended to Selkirk's lookout, 2,400 feet, where he daily watched for sail or sign, and we gave his memorial tablet a coat of red lead. Erected by the officers of H.M.S. Topaze in 1868, we had the good fortune to repaint it in 1876 and again in 1885. On each occasion our companion was one of the original Topaze officers who had placed it there. Both since have joined Selkirk in happier hunting grounds, it is to be hoped, than those of which a description has been here attempted.

Shooting.



THE "SUPER-MAGNUM EXPLORA" BALL-AND-SHOT GUN.

THE advances made within the past few years in the range, accuracy and power of the ball-and-shot gun, when used as a rifle, have led up to a further development of a very important kind.



When Messrs. Westley Richards and Company introduced their "Explora" ball-and-shot gun they obtained by the use of their brass capped bullets a satisfactory degree of accuracy at ranges up to 300 yards, with improved grouping and greater striking energy at all other ranges. The improvement effected was very notable indeed. The exhaustive examination of the potentialities of the new bullets, made in 1905 by the London Field, showed that at equal velocities the energy of the elongated projectiles at 100 yards was equal to the energy of the old bullets at 53 yards, while at 200 yards there would be the same energy as the old bullets would possess at 104 yards. With increased velocity further increases in energy could always be obtained, but a limit is very soon reached where an increased charge of powder will destroy the accuracy of the bullet's flight. Setting aside, for a moment, the technical aspects of the case, it was by elongating the bullets and using a front either hollow or of very light material that the improvements over the original type of choked and rifled ball-and-shot gun were effected.

With the "Explora" ball-and-shot gun a bullet of the same diameter and weight as that of the original short bullet used in rifle ball-and-shot guns was adopted. The increased length, due to the front portion being a domed cap of brass (or of lead if preferred), was accompanied by a far greater degree of steadiness in flight than had previously been obtainable. The bullet could thus be propelled at an increased velocity without upsetting. This in turn gave greater ranges and improved grouping, with flatter trajectories at all distances. For the special form of bullet, rifling appropriate in pitch and length had to be devised. The rifling had also, of course, to be of a kind that would not interfere with production of efficient and regular patterns when the weapon was used as a shot-gun. The average muzzle velocity of the "Explora" brass capped bullet was 1,250 feet, representing an increase of 250 f. s over the original system. Any increase in velocity, beyond this, produced by increasing the powder charge, was found by experiment to cause wild shooting. Undoubtedly, if the shot side of the combination could be neglected, alterations in the rifling and increased weight of the gun might allow of the use of a more powerful charge. But in that case the weapon would become a rifle and would cease to serve the dual purpose which is the chief justification of its existence. It was therefore felt that the limit of improvement with the dome capped bullet had been reached. Further increases of power, if obtained at all, must be accompanied by an alteration in the bullet.

In these columns it has already been explained that the capped form of projectile introduced by Messrs. Westley Richards and Company has invariably and necessarily the effect of increasing the length of the bullet in relation to its weight. If of two bullets of exactly the same weight one is solid and the other capped, the capped bullet must be the longer of the two. The makers claim that with this disposition of weight, the centre of gravity of the bullet being thrust back towards the lower third, a very marked increase in the capacity for rotation upon its long axis is imparted to the projectile. The earlier forms of bullet used in the ball-and-shot gun were not designed to shoot with accuracy beyond 100 yards. At greater distances the bullets might turn over and keyhole and their shooting would be wild. The elongated brass capped bullet, with a larger charge of powder, kept its direction and kept its spin, up to 300 yards and probably to ranges beyond, that could not be regarded as of practical utility for purposes of sport. Along the lines thus indicated, a new form of capped bullet, known as the L. T., was produced. This bullet, as the illustration shows, has, instead of the domed cap, a cap in the form of a spike or pencil point which, weight for weight, gives the maximum of length without increase of substance. A larger charge of powder can be used with the bullet, and an increase of 250 f. s. over the highest velocity of the "Explora" is obtained. With the high velocity of 1,500 f. s. the degree of accuracy characterising the ordinary "Explora" is well maintained, and the new form of rifling adopted has no injurious effect upon the distribution and standard of the shot-gun patterns.

THE CARTRIDGE.

On the invitation of the makers we have availed ourselves of an opportunity of shooting with and witnessing trials of the new "Super-Magnum Explora." The gun used was a double 12-bore with 28 inch barrels. With single trigger and detachable locks, and with sling swivels fitted, it weighed 7lbs. 11oz. Guns of precisely the same kind can be made a few ounces lighter without in the slightest degree reducing the tubes or action body. The weapon balances excellently, and handles as it should do—like a shot-gun. The rear sights are a set of flaps for distances from 50 to 300 yards and the foresight, instead of lying over the top of the rib slides into the rib, flush with its surface, making a much neater and more substantial fitting. The range available was limited to 100 yards and during the course of the experiments 50 ball cartridges with two forms of cap, domed and pointed, were fired. The diagram appended was made with the new "Super-Magnum" shooting L. T. pointed bullets at the range named. It shows 10 shots in a space of 4½ by 5½ inches, with 8 grouped in $3\frac{7}{16}$ by 2½ inches. This is a remarkably fine result, and while other groups made were generally spoiled by that one shot which in shooting for diagrams so often goes sufficiently wide to spoil a group, the general standard throughout a long test was excellent. It might be mentioned here that the weather during the trial was very unpropitious, some of the shooting with ball being done and all the shot patterns being taken while snow was falling.

PENETRATION IN WOOD.

TEN SHOTS AT 100 YARDS. (HALF SIZE).

The ball cartridges were loaded in 2½ inch brass ejector cases and the 15 grain charge of Cordite used produces an effect equivalent to that of 7¼ drams of black gunpowder. The long case is used chiefly for the purpose of obviating any possibility of a super-magnum charge being used in the ordinary "Explora," which is designed for a lighter charge. With shot, ordinary 2½ inch cases were used in our test, but it should here be mentioned that a wildfowl charge of 47 grains and 1⅛oz. can be shot in the 2½ inch case when a heavy load is wanted. The extra length of chamber cannot be beneficial from the point of view of patterning, when the ordinary case is used, but it obviously does not bring the results below those of the "Explora." The cartridges were loaded with 1⅛oz. No. 6 shot (304 counted pellets) and 53 grains of Smokeless Diamond Powder. Following were the counts in the 30 inch circle at 40 yards:—

2.	112	133
3.	124	164
4.	137	136
5.	140	122
6.	142	142
Mean	130 pellets.	140 pellets.

These patterns are considerably better than those obtained with the "Explora" under test conditions, and they run rather on the high side. They certainly show that the remarkable increase in the velocity and energy of the bullet has not been obtained at the expense of efficiency on the shot side of the composite weapon. Another gun, which is to be called the "Improved Explora" is being introduced in which the ballistics of the "Explora" are combined with an improved standard of shot patterns, but to that some attention must be devoted at another time.

The "Super-Magnum Explora," with its new form of rifling, is not intended to shoot the round nosed brass capped bullets, because, without the full length of the pointed form, there is a possibility that the increased powder charge may upset them in flight. Several shots were fired in order to illustrate this, but all the bullets penetrated the targets front foremost at 100 yards. Using another gun, the tendency was very clearly demonstrated by getting 2 shots out of 3 with the round nosed bullets turned sideways while the long pointed bullets went through the card targets as cleanly as though the holes had been made with a wadding punch.

The increased powder charge of the "Super-Magnum Explora" imparts to the bullet a muzzle energy of 3,643 ft. lbs. as against 2,611 ft. lbs., with "Explora," the bullet in both cases weighing 730 grains. The muzzle velocity is increased from 1,250 f. s. to 1,500 f. s., an advance of 20 per cent. The pressures, of course, are correspondingly higher, but the barrels and action are built to a specification allowing a very considerable margin over the stresses of the service charge and the special proof charge laid down for these weapons. Where a ball-gun is required with the maximum of effectiveness and power, the "Super-Magnum Explora" affords advantages of a very important kind. It combines the penetrative effect which the muzzle energy indicates, with great shocking power on impact, due to the weight and diameter of the bullet and to the breaking down of the cap on impact. The illustration of penetration on a steel plate at 50 yards shows that, whereas the "Explora" bullet produces only a deep dent the "Super-Magnum" charge perforates the plate and produces considerable rending effects on the solid steel.

Another illustration shows the bullet extracted after penetrating 8 inches of solid wood, where the ordinary "Explora" bullet is arrested 5½ inches. With the superabundance of power thus made available, the ball-and-shot gun should be a perfectly efficient weapon for use on dangerous or heavy game. Tigers and panthers have been shot with the "Explora." The "Super-Magnum" for such purposes would be enormously more effective, while at the same time it would be just as useful when one wanted to kill snipe. The recoil, whether with ball or shot, is not excessive, and indeed the improvements made do not seem to have necessitated any retrogression whatever from the standard of efficiency on the shot side previously attained to.

THERE have been comments recently on the poor living the actors who is not a star makes. This story illustrates the case.

A certain manager was being shown round a lunatic asylum. Seated under a tree in the garden was a man who, over and over again, was counting his fingers and muttering: "Eeny—meeny—miny—moe—eeny—meeny—miny—moe."

"Who is this?" said the manager.

"Strange case," said the attendant. "Found him in the street a few weeks ago. He sits here all day and does that. Harmless, but apparently entirely insane. We are giving him the best of attention in the hope that his reason may be restored."

The manager looked at the counter closely: "Bless my soul!" said the manager. "It resembles my former leading man, Simpson."

The man kept counting his fingers. "Really," said the manager, "it is a most extraordinary resemblance."

Meantime, the others and the attendant had gone on. "Tell me, my good fellow," said the manager, "are you not Simpson, the actor?"

"Cheese it!" said the man who was counting his fingers. If they don't tumble who I am I can stay her all the winter."

Sport in England.

(FROM THE HOME PAPERS.)

LONDON, Friday, 11th February 1910.

THE TURF.

MANCHESTER.

IT was wonderful weather for Manchester, on Monday, the glorious sunshine, balmy temperature, and bright surroundings reminding one of summer. The weather brought a wonderfully good attendance from all parts, as the Lancashire course, with its regrettable fogs, owes atonement for several blank days to its patrons, and in every department the company was good, several prominent supporters of the National sport patronising the club enclosure. The going was very heavy, which may account for the upset of form, while fields averaged small towards the finish. Results:—

Won by eight lengths; two lengths between second and third.

Rain conveniently holding off till bedtime on Monday, furnished another wet night, but again did the morning open bright and cheerful, and although the bank of heavy clouds that threatened rain were kept sailing, the crowd were treated to a few April-like showers during the afternoon. The going, however, was again very holding; in fact, according to experts, the course has been the heaviest ridden over this season, the horses labouring at a slow pace, and for the most part finishing very tired. The attendance was again a capital one for this time of year, but as anticipated, fields did not improve on the previous day. Results:—

A complete change of wind and weather brought a wet squally night and morning, with half a gale blowing and sharp showers and sunshine alternating in April-like fashion. The brighter side prevailed during Thursday afternoon, which was breezy and comparatively bright, to the advantage of the course which, thoroughly soaked, was in a desperately heavy condition. Except in one instance, fields ruled small, but the same remark does not apply to the attendance. Results:—

on the other. There will also be a formidable water-jump, with a moveable fence, for the purpose of increasing the distance in wide jumping contests.

The principal poster which advertises this year's show is an eighteen-foot representation of the Italian horse Vissuto taking the high jump in a flying leap, with a brilliant group of foreign officers looking on: one of the most striking pictures on the hoardings.

C. P. Jones, the famous American lassoer of wild animals, is on his way to British East Africa, for the purpose of "roping" lions, zebras, giraffes, elands, and other big game. The animals, when captured, are to be taken to the western plains of U. S. A., where the experiment of hybridising them with domestic animals will be attempted. Jones, who boasts of having lassoed scores of Rocky Mountain lions (pumas) and hundreds of grizzly bears, was, we believe, responsible for saving the bison from extermination in 1880 by corralling every animal of the species he could find and preserving them on his ranch in Arizona.

Everton beat Coventry City on the latter's ground by two goals to nil.

Barnsley beat Queen's Park Rangers at Barnsley by one to nil.

Playing at Home, Newcastle United beat Leicester Fosse by three goals to nil.

Swindon Town beat Manchester City, at Swindon, by two goals to nil.

The third round of the Murray Football Tournament opened at Lucknow on Monday last when the Worcester Regiment beat the Royal Irish Regiment by a goal to nil after a fast and well contested game.

At the recent Racquets Tournament held by the Bombay Gymkhana Captain J. G. Greig won the Open Singles, beating Captain H. C. Richmond in the final 14—18, 15—3, 3—15, 15—11, 15—6, after an exciting struggle. This is Greig's ninth win in the Singles. In the Open Doubles Captain H. C. Richmond and P. M. D. Sanderson beat Captain J. G. Greig and R. D. England, 14—17, 15—11, 15—5, 15—2, 15—2. The Markers' Singles attracted 9 entries and after some interesting matches in the preliminary rounds the final brought together Jamsetji, the Bombay marker and world's champion, and Padamji of Poona. It was a splendid game, the champion eventually winning by 3 games to 1—15—9, 11—15, 15—5, 15—10. A foursome between Jamsetji and Hormusji of Bombay and Padamji (Poona) and Jehangir (Jodhpore) ended in favour of the Bombay pair, 18—7, 5—15, 6—15, 15—9, 15—3.

The Aga Khan Hockey Tournament at Bombay will begin this year on 6th April, entries closing on the 28th instant.

Referring to an announcement that Comte Madre is taking an Indian polo team to Hurlingham and afterwards to America, the Times points out the difficulties of the scheme. It says that the original conditions of the American Cup confine the issue to an Anglo-American struggle. The holders of the cup have to decide whether the term "England" can be stretched to mean "Empire." The Times continues: "People in India unwarrantably underestimate the skill of the Americans. Unless Indians can mount thoroughbred Australian ponies standing 14-13 they have no chance against the miniature race horses of their opponents." It welcomes the coming of Indians to Hurlingham as conferring an immense benefit on English polo.

The South African's second innings totalled 237 in the third Test match played at Johannesburg last week. This left England with 221 to make to win, which they accomplished for the loss of 7 wickets, Hobbs scoring 93 not out. First innings scores were: South Africa, 305; England, 322.

The fourth Test match between England and the South Africans opened at Cape Town on the 7th instant. England went in first and made 203, Woolley scoring 69 and Bird 57. At the drawing of stumps, South Africa had made 93 for the loss of two wickets and were eventually all out for 207 England in the second innings made 159 for eight wickets when stumps were drawn, Woolley scoring 64.

The 3rd Sappers and Miners celebrated Ghazni Day by holding Regimental sports at Poona. There was a large gathering of spectators, the Royal Engineers were "At Home" to their friends, and an excellent programme was put through. The Pillow Fighting event was most popular with the visitors and the Tug of War by company teams also provided great interest: it was eventually won by the team of the 21st Company. The other principal events were the Pontoon Race won by "G" Company, Native Officers' Bayonet Fighting won by Subedar Arjun Powar, the Open Half Mile by Sergt. Miller of the Gymnastic Staff, and the British N. C. O.'s Race by Sergt. Pocock of the R. E. At the conclusion of the sports Mrs. Evans, wife of Lieut.-Colonel Evans distributed the prizes.

The Anchor Line have contracted with Messrs. David and William Henderson and Co., Ld., for a large passenger and cargo steamer for their Glasgow and New York service, similar in type to the Caledonia and other steamers which are at present engaged in the trade.

The new steamer will be 515 feet long by 62 feet broad and 36 feet 6 inches deep, classed to British Corporation Registry's highest class, and fitted with quadruple expansion engines adequate to maintain a speed of 17 knots at sea when fully loaded. There will be cubic capacity in holds for 6,500 tons cargo in addition to 2,000 tons coal in bunkers.

Accommodation will be provided on the promenade bridge and main decks for 250 saloon passengers, 500 second class and 1,000 steerage.

Owing to the great width of the vessel, the saloons, sitting rooms and smoke rooms for all classes of passengers will be unusually large, airy apartments, and it is confidently anticipated that the new steamer, which is to be completed ready for work on the 1st May 1911, will fully maintain the popularity of the Anchor Line with Transatlantic passengers.

London Week by Week

London, Friday, 11th February 1910.

An amazing hoax has just been perpetrated by some exceeding clever mummers, the victims being Admiral Sir William May, Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleet, and the officers of the battleship Dreadnought. All England has not done laughing over it yet. Six enterprising amateur actors, among them a young lady, sought the aid of "Billy" Clarkson, the famous costumier and theatrical property man of Wardour Street, and disguised as Abyssinian princes, with interpreter and Foreign Office Attache complete, they visited the battleship officially and brought off one of the most ludicrous "sells" of recent years. They spared neither time nor expense: their costumes were gorgeous, their jewels real, they travelled down to Portland in State, and their acting throughout was superb. Their advent was heralded by a wire from "Hardinge, Foreign Office" and when the royal party arrived at Portland everything was in readiness for their reception, the Admiral and his officers in full fig, guard of honour, band, special launch and all the rest of it. They were conducted over the vessel with all the ceremonies, they talked gibberish, the interpreter had a busy time, they alternately beamed with delight or glared ferociously. Their inspection over they went over the side to the strains of the National Anthem of Zanzibar while all aboard saluted.

The party were conveyed to the jetty in the Admiral's launch, and found two official motor-cars waiting to take them back to the station. The chief prince was so overwhelmed with this act of British kindness that he expressed his wish to present the Imperial Order of Ethiopia to the flag-lieutenant. The flag-lieutenant, however, declined the honour, explaining that he could not wear it without special permission, and the chief prince was compelled to keep the Order—which cost £5—round his own neck. The sham princes then entered the motor-cars and drove back to the railway station, whence they reached London safely.

The little detail of the telegram took them rather off the rails, it is to be feared, for Sir Charles Hardinge, Permanent Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, may have something to say about this anon, but otherwise the participants may be said to have scored heavily. Foreign potentates are clean "off" in British Naval circles just now.

The evil-smelling motor 'bus is relentlessly pushing out the poor old horse 'bus: two more horse 'bus routes have just been discontinued. One by one, with the encroachment of tramways and motor-omnibuses, the old horse vehicles are disappearing. Less than a generation ago, as many residents of Brixton and Clapham can still remember the morning omnibuses, "sixpence all the way," conveyed their regular cargoes of City men to Grace Church Street. These omnibuses were generally drawn by four horses, and the smart guard tootled his posthorn as he neared the houses of his "regulars," whom he picked up at their own gates in the rural roads of Clapham Park. Tooting, Streatham, Clapham, and Brixton were then real suburbs, and not the continuous streets of bricks and mortar which they have now become, redeemed only by the oases of the commons and of the few large estates, such as Clapham Park, as yet only partially invaded by the ubiquitous builder. Of all these gaily-caparisoned four-horse omnibuses, only one is now left, the solitary reminder of the mid-Victorian age of suburban locomotion.

The darkest spot in this picture of the disappearing horse-omnibus is that of the displacement of labour, and many a tragedy of unemployment and distress has followed in the wake of the convenient electric tramcar and noisy motor-omnibus. Little by little the band of discharged drivers and conductors have been swallowed up—the younger ones, perchance, in other employments, but the older ones in that submerged tenth from which there is little hope of extrication. In the southern suburbs today can be seen the pitiable sight of weather beaten and red-checked omnibus-drivers turning the handle of an organ to find food for their wives and children. Others are endeavouring to earn a livelihood by any jobbing work they can find.

Besides the drivers and conductors those thrown out of employment include horsekeepers, washers, wheelers, and smiths. The old omnibuses are being broken up for the value of their wheels and ironwork, as it does not pay to sell them at 30s a time, which is about the price that they fetch when put up to auction. Ichabod, Ichabod!

The subject of anarchy in India has been interesting all us old Qui Hais, when reading of the recent legislation put through by the Viceregal Council at Calcutta. There have been many letters to the papers on the subject: the contribution to this literature which pleases me most is the outspoken opinion of "A Superintendent of Indian Police" who wrote this week to the Daily Telegraph as follows:—

"Sir,—I am, above all things, a moderate man; I object to harshness where management by tact and manœuvring will win me a way, but I know the people I am talking about, and I have many intimate friends among many sections of Indians. To deal effectively with persons of this degraded type you must employ measures which will appeal to them. There is only one effective measure the extremist will ever recognise, and that is the "cat." Convict him of seditious spouting in substance—not word for word—before any tribunal, composed, let me suggest, of an Englishman, a Hindu, and a Moslem of position, and sentence him to a dozen, subject to the confirmation of the High Court, and I would be prepared to aver that six months will show you the end of the worst of this movement, so degrading to the country and so distasteful to the more intelligent and responsible of its inhabitants.

"Abolish whipping in all other cases if you will, but for this evil I believe—and many Indians of position I know believe—it is the only effective remedy short of military law.

"I might dilate on other points requiring reform, but I have trespassed enough; and I have only spoken because to my mind, and surely to all men's the situation has gone too far."

"Them's my sentiments" as the ancient mariner said when he indicated the prayer wheel. The Policeman puts the thing in a nutshell. Keep the cat going and have a hanging day every Friday, as Sir Elijah Impey might have said. A few unfettered Impeys at the present juncture might be useful one is apt to think.

I think it was Mr. Henry Arthur Jones who complained the other day that so many people seemed to regard the theatre as a funny place where funny people did funny things. Some theatres answer the description, no doubt, but if the belief to which the dramatist alludes were at all by way of being widespread there wouldn't be a theatre closed in London to-day, not even in the slack season. People of to-day, at any rate, will always pay to be made to laugh.

But aren't there too many theatres which could be described as dull places where dull people do dull things? Or even—though that is exceptional—where unpleasant people do unpleasant things? These dramatists, you know, are rather too apt to attribute this non-success of the serious drama a cause of complaint against the public, but isn't it just within the bounds of possibility that the defects of the serious drama may have something to do with it.

I know it is very hard to write a good play, but if we could only make the public believe—with good reason, of course—that theatres were interesting places where interesting people did interesting things what a boom in drama there would be. The trouble is that so often the modern playwright is so intent on putting forward some crank or fad of his own that he bores the average audience to death.

* * * * * *

Last Thursday night Mr. Robert Hilton greatly daring reopened the Strand Theatre with a revival of "Richelieu." On Monday night the venture ended. When the performers arrived at the theatre they found the following type-written notice on a board inside the stage door:—

"There will be no performance to-night, the run of 'Richelieu' being closed. All communications must be addressed in writing to the general manager."

Including the actors, actresses, auxiliaries, musicians and stage hands, 150 people are thrown out of employment by the closing of the theatre. With the abrupt conclusion of this piece, yet another attempt to bring prosperity to this house has ended in financial disaster. Why this thusness one cannot well make out. Although every type of dramatic fare has been attempted in turn, the public has resolutely stayed away. The theatre is less than five years old, and is one of the coziest houses in town.

As the Waldorf, it was opened with a season of grand opera, and success seemed to be in prospect, when news came of the death in a railway accident in America of Mr. S. Shubert, who was negotiating for a lease. In 1907 his executor, Mr. Lee Shubert, secured the house for a term of twenty-one years, but gave up after four months' management. The attempt to run the theatre as a musical comedy house with "The Gipsy Girl" ended disastrously after about four weeks.

Subsequent productions of "The Antelope" and "Dorothy" had almost equally abrupt endings. After being closed for some nine months, the theatre was re-opened in October last with "The Merry Peasant," another financial failure. Mr. Hilton's ill-luck follows close on that of the "Cinderella" pantomime, which ran for just one week.

"Tantalising Tommy," Messrs. Paul Gavault and Michael Morton's play, produced by Mr. Cyril Maude last Tuesday night at the Playhouse, is one of those plays which one seems to have been seeing ever since one first entered a theatre.

Those who have enjoyed seeing Mr. Maude in pyjamas in "Toddles" may now enjoy seeing him without a waistcoat and with his braces hanging down behind. It is, of course, amusing to observe a timid man in such a predicament, especially when there is a young girl bent on friendliness about. But is it worth Mr. Maude's while to waste his time in pyjama drama?

Tommy is delightful, young, pretty, charming, adorably feminine, and even came before the footlights in pyjamas to "take her bow."

Now Miss Marie Lohr in pyjamas is worth while going to the Playhouse to see in these times of dancing Salomes and boxing actors; but a leading lady in pyjamas, even when she is called Tommy and is a delightful "enfant terrible" and is supposed to be "tantalising," really cannot make a play of four acts, especially when her lover is the typical "loony" type of stage young man of the conventional Victorian school.

A very strong company do their best with parts that cannot be made to appeal. Mr. Cyril Maude plays cleverly as the shy, sorely-tried James. There is many a suitable touch. There are times when his comic rage wins hearty laughter. But it is not a strong part. Miss Marie Lohr is fresh and bright as Tommy, Mr. Kenneth Douglas works hard as the artist friend who is in the beginning the most selfish of mortals, and in the end the most self-sacrificing of good fellows. Miss Maidie Hope is amusing as a country maid-servant with a Cockney accent, and Mr. Fred Lewis works up his scenes as Tommy's father into briskness. The parts, indeed, could not be better filled.

The house-breaker is just now wielding his pick and shovel with heavy hand on some of the few remaining bits of old London. One after another these tangible links with a more spacious and romantic past are being severed in the name of "improvement."

London of the long ago will be soon a thing only to be read of in reference libraries and caught a glimpse of in the shape of a tablet, an effigy, or an inn-sign stored at the British Museum or the Guildhall. The latter is soon to acquire the gilded representation of a chubby boy which at present, from the eastern wall of the Fortune of War Tavern, Pye Corner, Smithfield, peers through clouds of dust raised by workmen who are demolishing the building. The boy is more than a centenarian, and an inscription informs all and sundry that he stands there as a reminder of "the late Fire of London, occasioned by the sin of gluttony, 1666." Another tablet sets it forth that "This is Pye Corner, where the Great Fire of London ended after burning night and day from the 2nd to the 10th of September 1666."

The Fortune of War, Pye Corner, and the fat boy are all coming down together. This is not the first time that Pye Corner has suffered such a fate, for it was blown up during the Great Fire in accordance with the Sovereign's orders, and, a gap being thus made, the spreading of the flames was arrested. Although the Fortune of War is situated within convenient distance of the spot where the Newgate prisoners were executed, it is doubtful if it has ever enjoyed such thriving times as came to it in 1762, when the stupendous hoax of the ghost of Cock Lane was worked upon Londoners who apparently then, as now, exhibited credulity and superstition incredible beyond belief.

The Crossland trial ended this week in the acquittal of the accused. Mr. T. W. H. Crossland, the Sub-editor of The Academy, and well-known to most of your readers as the author of "The Unspeakable Scot" and other works, was indicted for having imputed habitual gross misconduct to the Hon. Henry Frederick Walpole Manners-Sutton, and that the latter was connected with a firm of publishers which produced books of a questionable character, yielding a handsome profit, at the same time that he was engaged in the production of a religious publication known as the Reunion Magazine. Some sensational evidence was recorded and some old Oscar Wilde stories were revived when Lord Alfred Douglas, son of the late Marquis of Queensbury, was cross-examined in the witness box—stories which all of us thought had been buried years ago. I may say that Lord Alfred came out of the ordeal creditably. Concluding his address to the jury, counsel for the defence denounced what he described as the "venomous" opening of the other side, and the "mean and contemptible" cross-examination. Mr. Marshall Hall urged on behalf of the prosecutor that the charges contained in the plea of justification had failed. The Common Serjeant summed up at considerable length, and after deliberating for over an hour the jury returned into court with a verdict of "not guilty" of the alleged defamatory libel.

Mr. John Macallan Swan, R.A., the justly celebrated animal painter, died on the 15th instant at his residence in the Isle of Wight. He was an artist to whom the most patient and laborious study was a strict matter of conscience and a delight. Mr. Swan was but slightly known when "The Prodigal Son," in the Royal Academy of 1889, arrested everyone's attention, and was bought by the trustees of the Chantrey Bequest. Six years later he was elected an Academician. He has gained widespread fame not only as a painter but as a sculptor.

In the chief Zoological Gardens of the world Mr. Swan imbued his mind with that close knowledge of the characteristics of savage animals which make them live on his canvases. He had been a pupil of Gerome. His "Tigers Drinking" was a grand and vigorous study.

He was a man of great physical strength, and has died at the age of sixty-three.

THE WILD GOATS OF JUAN FERNANDEZ.

Introduced originally by the old-time buccaneers or English pirates of the Pacific, the goats on Juan Fernandez were intended to supply fresh meat whenever their importers touched at the island to divide their spoil. Anson mentions that the first goat they captured in 1741 had its ears slit by Alexander Selkirk 32 years previously, adding that the goats there possessed beards of venerable aspect and showed other signs of extreme old age. In such a remote island it is probable that these grand old patriarchs will long continue to browse over its pale green valleys and lead their flocks to safety on its stupendous cliffs, states a writer in the London Field.

Juan Fernandez, or Masa-tierra, with the adjacent islet of Masa-fuera owe their dual existence to volcanic agency. Three hundred and sixty miles from the coast of Chile, just out of sight of the snow-capped peaks of Aconcagua and the Bell of Quillota, they stand aloof, and are seldom visited save by a passing man-of-war. Surrounded by forbidding precipices, down the gorges of which trickle a thousand rills, their high summits wreathed in trade wind clouds, saturated with moistures and knowing little frost, their vegetable growth and green wealth of pasture is unsurpassed. Habitation for herds of wild goats undisturbed prisoners at large, growing to great age and size, with nothing to disturb their peaceful sequestered life save the bellowing of sea-lions and the occasional crack of a ship's rifle.

In 1680 the Trinity sloop, Captain Sharp, put in here on Christmas Day: her crew caulked ship, felled timber, hunted goats, dried fish and washed clothes. They reported goats and whiskered seals as numerous.

Anson made Masa-tierra his rendezvous, and found there a pack of large, fierce dogs, landed by the Spaniards to kill the goats. His sailors shot and ate the dogs in lieu of goat's flesh, probably then difficult to obtain. The flesh of seals they called "lamb," of sea-lions, "beef."

The descendants of these same goats, animals possessed of great longevity, are still being harried by a few dogs, which now run mute and are kept in subjection for the use of man. They drive the goats to their only refuge, the well-worn tracks along the rugged cliffs, and keep them there until the native shepherd can get a shot, from point to point, as occasion requires. The immensity of these unapproachable precipices, so difficult of access by sea or land, will always prevent the goats from being exterminated on Juan Fernandez. Using the tiniest ledges for their foothold, they play follow-my-leader down and along these precarious goat tracks, following their patriarchs, drop after drop, until they reach a point equally inaccessible to dog or man, and there they dwell till shadows veil the mountain walls and hunger presses a return to the grassy slopes above.

Underfoot no danger lurks save from the angry sea; a heavy rolling swell, set up by the trades over the vast Pacific, affords the marksman but little chance of accurate shooting, and landing under cliff is a dangerous proceeding, as we found to our cost. The lively boat beneath affords no steady gun platform from which to bombard the skipping goats above. Without good glasses these brown and tawny targets are difficult to detect against the deep red background of the great cliffs which run to a peak marked 1,805 feet on the Admiralty chart.

Aided by the Chilian hunter and goatherd Maximilian, who was glad of our help, we pulled in a whaler round to West Bay, leaving him above to drive the goats to the cliffs with his two dogs. He was to show himself periodically and signal with his hat to show which way the herd was making. Searching the vertical cliffs with glasses from a rolling boat was no easy matter, but we discovered our first lot of three

It is not doubtful if Driscoll has ever been engaged in an easier match than this, and perhaps it was the easiness of his task which made him take things easily and appear much slower than he has generally been credited with being.

The Stanley-Pierce match was of an international character, and was of especial interest in that on Stanley's success depended his chances of competing for the fourth of Lord Lonsdale's championship belts. Pierce weighed in at 8st. 4¼lb. and Stanley at 8st. 5lb.

This match was as bright and quick a contest as could be wished; but the verdict—a draw—seemed to take everyone by surprise. For Stanley seemed to be leading on points, and increasing his lead almost from the start of the contest. Both men were wonderfully quick on their feet, but Stanley forced the fighting from the first. Pierce was the stronger man, but Stanley's ring craft equalised matters.

The black man spoiled what would otherwise have been a good fight by using his head and butting on several occasions, and he was warned by the referee in the thirteenth round. From the first Stanley forced the pace, and was leading on points during the majority of the rounds. In the third and fourth rounds he scored heavily with lefts and rights to body and neck. But although he forced his man time after time to the corner he misjudged his distance, and failed to land a decisive blow. The pace slackened a little in the sixth round, but after that both men quickened up again.

Pierce went all out in the last round for a knock-out, but failed to achieve his purpose. Then to everyone's surprise the referee decided it was a draw.

In striking contrast to the bantam-weights two heavy-weights took the ring next—Hewitt, champion of the Navy and Army, and Voyles of the Irish Guards. Both are tremendous hitters, but while Hewitt has experience Voyles is merely a youngster. In the second round Voyles knocked his man off his legs with a tremendous right swing. In the third round Voyles swung wildly, and made no attempt to guard himself. Had Hewitt been less shaken he must have scored heavily, but he had not recovered from the knock-down blow.

The fourth round was merely a slogging match, neither man displaying any science. Hewitt missed an excellent chance of knocking his man out when Voyles was on the ropes. In the fifth round Hewitt knocked the Guardsman twice off his feet, but could not put in a finishing blow.

In the last round Voyles pulled round wonderfully and knocked his man out. The winner met with a wonderful reception, being cheered to the echo, the loser being also warmly applauded.

Iron Hague and P. O. Curran met at the Cosmopolitan Gymnasium, Plymouth, on the 18th February, when Hague, heavy weight Champion of England, was beaten by the naval man, being knocked out in the 15th round with a terrific blow. Appended are details.

Round 1.—A hot and cleverly contested one. There was some sparring before Hague got to close quarters and with a very dangerous right he knocked Curran down. The Irishman was up quickly and there was some clinching and in fighting, and soon after they parted Curran surprised his followers by landing a couple of staggering blows on Hague's face which drove the Champion to the ropes. Just as the gong sounded, Curran jumped clear of a vicious right swing, which looked as though it were speedily going to end the contest.

Round 2.—Hague led with his left and swung his right, both of which Curran caught on his arms. Hague again tried to reach Curran but he brushed the blows aside, and laughed as Hague thumped him on the back of the neck. Curran was flung several yards by the blow The round ended comparatively quietly.

Round 3.—Hague pressed hotly in this round, but could never get his blows to reach the point arrived at. He looked truly tremendous as he shot out his left and swung his mighty right but he was fighting the air and Curran was content with cooly evading the blows and countering effectively.

Round 4.—This was a most sensational round. Both men banged away at each other with desperate intent. The crowd was raised to a state of excitement when Curran, with a well-directed blow, felled Hague. The Champion was up in a jiffy and caught Curran a beauty over the right eye which split the skin and caused the blood to flow freely. Curran nothing daunted, rushed at Hague and with left and right well planted sent the Champion to the boards. Directly Hague regained his feet he was sent down. Three times in this round Hague received knock-down blows.

Round 5.—Curran was still very cool and though his right eye was bleeding very freely, he stuck to his task. Hague pounded away with his left on the damaged optic and Curran looked a woe be-gone sight until the end of the round which was distinctly in favour of Hague.

Round 6.—Curran used his feet to advantage, and kept well out of range of Hague's ponderous right swings. Half way through Curran suddenly shot out his left and staggered Hague with a blow on the jaw. He followed it up with another on the ribs and before the round ended Hague appeared to be in distress. He was evidently out of condition. He was still much too dangerous for Curran to venture too close to and thus ended a quiet round in Hague's favour.

Round 7.—Curran received Hague's left several times on his bad eye but the blows were light having been partly parried by Curran who showed a beautiful defence. He repeatedly in this round brushed aside Hague's blows and laughed at the attempts of the slow Yorkshire man to get at him. Hague was continually hitting out of distance. Half way through this round Curran making a lot of ice way by landing two stinging blows on the jaw.

Round 8.—Hague continued to press, but was making a very poor show, all his blows being out of distance. Once or twice he caught the petty officer on the back of the neck as he was flitting past. Half way through Curran took a hand in the attacking and landed right and left on Hague's jaw. They were delivered at long range and consequently were not over-heavy.

Round 9.—Curran caught Hague's blows on his arms and gloves and defied all the Champion's attempts to properly get at him. Hague was making desperate efforts to put an end to the contest in his own particular way but he could not really get home a real hard punch on the slippery Irishman. This is not to say that Curran was not getting some punishment. He was also giving some. It was remarkable how slow Hague was to follow up an advantage. He was either unable through lack of condition or he was not the class of boxer one expected him to be.

Round 10.—Curran had an easy time. He coolly and easily evaded all Hague's attempts to get at him and at the same time was watching for an opening. The round was very quiet and the boxing on the same lines as the former rounds neither man was much disturbed until near the end when Curran got clear of a corner attacking smartly got in a fierce jab on the ribs with his right and followed it up with his left in Hague's face.

Round 11.—Things were pretty quiet in this round until Curran raised the expectations of his followers by getting home with both hands on Hague's jaw. Hague's head went back with a jerk which indicated the force of the blow. "Iron" was forced into his corner, but he quickly emerged and punished Curran with a stinging left on the bad eye.

Round 12.—The same story has to be told as in the earlier rounds. Hague repeatedly trying to get over Curran's guard in vain and Curran often planting a left on the Champion's face. On one occasion, Hague had Curran cornered and was swinging a murderous right when the seaman beautifully side stepped out of danger and left Hague sweating and puffing for breath.

Round 13.—Curran led and planted left and right in quick succession on the jaw: a period of in fighting followed in which Curran scored. No sooner were the men apart when Curran dashed in and got a heavy right to jaw. Five seconds later he swung his left to jaw. Truly Curran's round.

Round 14.—This was in favour of Hague but there was not much in it, Curran attacked but missed a ferocious right swing and fell on his face. He got up at once and set about his opponent in marvellously quick style using both hands with telling advantage. Hague suffered from lack of condition and was floundering about the ring in a vain attempt to get at Curran. Hague had a bit the better of some sharp in fighting but finished the round weak.

Last Round.—The first few seconds were slow but the men gradually warmed up and some hot exchanges followed. Curran started in real earnest and commenced a hot attack with a smashing left on Hague's jaw. Then steadying himself Curran brought both hands in front of him and rushing in delivered a fearful blow with his right on Hague's jaw. He lifted the great Yorkshireman clean off his feet and sent him with a dull thud to the boards. Hague lay like a log while someone commenced to throw water on him but it was some time after the 10 seconds were counted that "Iron" returned to consciousness.

THE BOMBAY HOUNDS.

THE Meet on last flye day was at Sahar and, as the Volunteers are in Camp for a big field day, there was not a very big attendance when the coverts on the hill slopes were tackled. About forty who did turn out were, however, given a good run after a varmint who broke away almost as soon as we commenced operations. Through the woods, he made a line for Bomanwadi Valley and tore across it in the Andheri road direction at a good pace. On nearing the village something turned him as he changed the direction for Chuckla. Taking Peroidra Hill, he ran along with the road, past the barbed wire which has recently been put up, much to all hunting enthusiasts' disgust. Eventually we reached the Mango Tope and going through without a falter came out into good open country. Racing across the plains, hounds take us up Marole Hill, the one with the caves and into the Goremaug grass lands. Covering these they lead the way up the hills at the far end, and, though several elect to follow no further, they run into their quarry in a more distant portion than usually visited.

Chuckla was the venue for Tuesday, when on a cool, damp morning a small field enjoyed two sharp runs. The covert here being untenanted a move was made to the Mango Tope, and on the side of a small hill a jack broke away. Circling round, he was hotly hunted out into the open Marole Valley. Taking a hill, he came down into a bit of good going on to the Marole range and through the Goregnum district. On reaching the nullah, however, hounds lost the line altogether.

Casting again near the water pipe outside Marole village, another is found who climbs the hill near the Church, where hounds are very close on his brush. A great dash across the valley gives him time to reach the hills and the jungle. Through the latter he comes to the Vehar range and here in the undergrowth he makes good his escape.

On Thursday there was a bigger field out on rather a warm morning. The first attempt was made at Chuckla and shortly a quarry dashed out across a bad bit of going past the White House and then right over Lahor Hill. From here there is a change for the better as he gives us a run down Bomanwadi Valley. Leaving it, he crossed the pipe and then the strong Lahor nullah leading to some minor hills before coming out at the Backwater. The jack crosses at once and the other side of Andheri road takes a small hill before entering Powain Valley. A good run follows through the woods and on to the range of hills. The side of these are too steep to tempt followers, but the officials climb up only to find the quarry had gone to ground.

On our return we are met with bad news, the death of Mr. T. L. Roberts. Till his accident a couple of weeks ago he had been a familiar figure in the Salsette country, mounted on some of the best blood obtainable. His geniality has always made him popular and many feel the loss of a good, cheery friend. Last year his horse Sentiment won the Hunters' Flat race on the Mahaluxmi course, and there was some talk of the very one he was riding on this most unfortunate occasion winning the one to be run on Saturday. Of late years he took a great interest in racing and had a couple of useful ones in Ashanti Gold and Finches. He was sergeant-major in the Light Horse and Starter during the Gymkhana and sports entering with gusto into all sporting events.

INTER REGIMENTAL TOURNAMENT.

SEMI-FINALS.

KING'S DRAGOON GUARDS vs. 17TH LANCERS.—Played on the 2nd instant, a brilliant exhibition resulting in a win for the Dragoon Guards by 4 goals to 3 after a fast and exciting game.

First Chukker.—The Lancers attacked at the start and sent in three or four unsuccessful shots; play was then transferred and the Dragoons pressed but were unable to score.

Second Chukker.—The Lancers took up the attack and Melville scored, up and down play closing the chukker.

Third Chukker.—The Dragoons invaded the Lancers' territory and Cheape equalised. Then the 17th ran the ball down and Lockett put them ahead once more.

Fourth Chukker.—Midfield play; offside against the Lancers but the penalty was not improved upon, play ruling level till the close, when the Dragoons went away with a rush and Weinholt put the teams on terms once again.

Fifth Chukker.—The Dragoons pressed and Cheape getting pass soon hit a goal. The Dragoons continued to attack till the close of the period when the Lancers ran down, their final shot going wide.

Sixth Chukker.—Up and down play; Carden just failed to score but soon after Lockett put the ball through and the period closed with the score 3 all.

Seventh Chukker.—The Lancers pressed but Weinholt cleared and play was taken to their end where they were penalised, the free hit securing the Dragoons no advantage. But they kept the ball at the Lancers' end and hit another goal. The remainder of the play being all in favour of the 17th.

Eighth Chukker.—Up and down play; both goals were visited and Lockett had cruel luck, a fine shot of his striking the goal post and returning into play just on time. Final score: Dragoon Guards, 4 goals; 17 Lancers, 3 goals. Teams:—

6TH INNISKILLING DRAGOONS vs. 10TH ROYAL HUSSARS.—This game was also played on the 2nd instant, and though not such a fine display as the preceding one it was well contested, the Hussars winning by 5 goals to 3.

First Chukker.—Both goals were visited, the Dragoons being penalised for hitting behind; no score.

Second Chukker.—The Dragoons pressed and almost scored. Palmes cleared and the Hussars rushing down Vaughan put through.

Third Chukker.—Fast play up and down the field. Colmore narrowly missed scoring but the Hussars were more successful being credited with another point.

Fourth Chukker.—Fast play mostly in midfield. The Dragoons showed to advantage but the score remained unchanged.

Fifth Chukker.—The Dragoons pressed but Annesley cleared and rushing down scored after one unsuccessful attempt. On changing ends the Dragoons again attacked and after two futile shots the ball was put through by Ritson.

Sixth Chukker.—A foul against the Hussars, nothing coming from the penalty hit. Then the Hussars got away and Annesley scored. The Dragoons attacked for the remainder of the period Ritson scoring another goal.

Seventh Chukker.—The Hussars kept the ball in the Dragoons' territory where play was fast but no score occurred.

Eight Chukker.—Midfield play till Burnham got on and scored. Vaughan replied with another goal for the Hussars. The Dragoons pressed for the rest of the play but could not get the ball through. Final Score: 10th Hussars, 5 goals; 6th Inniskilling Dragoons, 3 goals. Teams:—

Final.

KING'S DRAGOON GUARDS vs. 10TH ROYAL HUSSARS.—These teams met in the final on the 4th instant in the presence of a large gathering of spectators. The members of the Civil Service were "At Home" and the 60th Rifles Band helped to enliven the proceedings. It was a capital game, the Hussars who had the advantage of being better mounted eventually winning by 9 goals to 4. The Dragoons, for whom Wickham was most prominent, had the ill-fortune to have half a dozen of their ponies lame after their hard game with the Lancers. The Cup was presented to the winners by Lady Hewett at the conclusion of the game, this being their fourth consecutive victory in the tournament.

First Chukker.—The Hussars pressed at the start but Wickham cleared and the ball was taken to the opposite end where the Dragoons kept it till the close of the period. No score.

Second Chukker.—Midfield play till the Hussars ran the ball down. One attempt went wide but shortly after Vaughan opened the scoring. Up and down play and another shot by the Hussars went wide. Annesley came by a fall in this chukker but was unhurt.

Third Chukker.—The Hussars attacked but without success and the Dragoons getting possession pressed for the remainder of the period. No score.

Fourth Chukker.—The Dragoons got on and Cheape equalised. They continued to press but the ball was brought back and the Hussars put through. The King's Dragoon Guards then attacked and one of their shots hit the goal post and rebounded into play. The ball was taken back to their end where the Hussars scored another point.

Fifth Chukker.—The Dragoons pressed and Cheape narrowly missed scoring. Thereafter the Hussars did all the attacking and after two unsuccessful efforts Palmer put through from long range.

Sixth Chukker.—Up and down play. A foul against the Dragoons, Annesley scoring from the penalty.

Seventh Chukker.—The Hussars took the ball down but it was driven back again and Weinholt scored. Then the Hussars attacked and Vaughan hit a goal, the Hussars being credited with another point from a scrimmage. The Dragoons had the upper hand during the rest of the chukker and Hawkins hit a goal.

Eighth Chukker.—The Dragoons pressed and after Cheape had missed, Hawkins put the ball through. Changing ends the Hussars took up the attack and Vaughan scored another goal resulting from a scrimmage a little later. Final Score: 10th Hussars, 9 goals; King's Dragoon Guards, 4 goals. Teams as before.

BANGALORE NOVICES' POLO TOURNAMENT.

UNDER the Stewardship of Brigadier-General Cookson, Colonel Synge Hutchinson, V.C., 14th Hussars, Lieutenant-Colonel A. A. James, 20th Deccan Horse and Major H. J. M. Marshall, R.E., Lieutenant Bruce, 14th Hussars, the energetic, Honorary Secretary of the Gymkhana Polo Club ran a very successful tournament for Novices, which began on Monday, the 28th February, and concluded on Friday, the 4th instant, the play taking place, by kind permission of H. H. the Maharajah on the Palace Polo ground, which was in first rate condition. Five teams entered; the Mysore Imperial Service Lancers, 14th Hussars and 20th Deccan Horse drew byes and the Royal Engineers drew to play the Gymkhana.

ROYAL ENGINEERS vs. GYMKHANA.—This match was played on the 28th February. The Royal Engineers had the services of Captain White who played an exceedingly fine game. The Gymkhana led off by scoring in the first chukker. Mr. Black of the Cameron Highlanders, putting the ball through. In the second chukker White for the Royal Engineers equalised In the second chukker White for the Royal Engineers equalised In and no addition to the score was made in the next chukker. In and no addition to the score was made in the fourth chukker White scored twice, the Gymkhana playing the fourth chukker White scored twice, the Gymkhana playing the fourth chukker White scored twice, the Gymkhana playing

Stephen opened the Hussars account, Miller adding to the score soon after; in the second chukker Stephen raised the Hussars' score to 3 goals, the Lancers still at 1. In the third chukker the Lancers became demoralised and the Hussars put in goal after goal raising their score to 8, Stephen and Astley accounting for 2 goals each and Pope for one. The Lancers pulled themselves together in the next chukker and attempted to beat their opponents, but Astley saved the situation twice and no score was made by either side. The fifth chukker was productive of 2 more goals for the Hussars, Astley scoring off Pope soon after resuming play and Miller putting on the tenth goal, off Astley, in concluding the chukker. The sixth chukker lasted for 5 minutes and 5seconds, during which the Lancers tried to increase their score, but failed the Hussars coming out victorious by 10 goals to 1. Teams :—

20TH DECCAN HORSE vs. ROYAL ENGINEERS.—This game followed and proved to be the best of the three played so far in the Tournament. The Cavalrymen went out favourites no doubt but the Engineers gave them a good run for their victory. Captain White's fine play was a feature of the game and he was very ably backed by Collins. The Engineers drew first blood, scoring from a scrimmage and soon after Worgan took the ball away and with a rush put it through, making the score level. White tried to score again but the ball was pulled away from him before he could shoot. In the second period the Deccans opened a fierce attack; the Engineers saved for a time, but eventually Worgan got a long shot which he sent clean into goal. Some good play was seen in the next chukker. Oswald opened the attack but lost the ball to White who went dangerously near scoring; Ross now came up and stopping the ball returned the attack; the Engineers again became dangerous, but between Worgan and Ross they got away and the former put in another pretty shot which resulted in a goal. Score: 3—1. The fourth chukker was productive of some very even play; both goals were threatened but neither team scored. Another good chukker followed; hard hitting and racing were the order and the Deccans were the first to gain any advantage, Worgan securing another goal; later on the Engineers got a free hit which White took and sent home safely. Score: 4—2. There was little chance left for the Engineers now although they had the full chukker to play out. White again was very conspicuous, but he found his equal in Worgan. Towards the end, Ross got the ball and with a long shot drove it between the uprights, the Deccan Horse winning by 5 goals to 2. Teams :—

THE FINALS.

14TH HUSSARS vs. 20TH DECCAN HORSE.—The result of this match was in doubt until the very last moment, although the Hussars went out strong favourites. Those in the know, however, supported the Deccan Horse, they being somewhat better mounted. But there was very little to choose between the teams. Stephen and Astley were the backbone of the Hussars team while Worgan and Campbell Ross did nearly all the work for the Deccan Horse, and when the last chukker ended the result was a draw. Widening the goal posts the match was continued. The Deccans had first knock, but their long shots went wide the Hussars next had a try and missed scoring by a very narrow squeak, in fact the spectators gave them a false cheer; the Deccans once more put on a spurt and collaring the ball Ross gave it the winning stroke to the immense delight of Colonel Jones and a large contingent of troopers of their regiment who, it would appear, turned out to see their officers win. Details :—

First Chukker.—The Deccans got away with the ball from the throw in and the Hussars carried it round the goal down to midfield where there was a dispute for its possession; the Hussars eventually cleared and Major Stephen with a long shot sent the ball through. The Deccans next had a try but the Hussars pulled the ball away and taking it up to midfield Miller with a long drive hit the ball wide. Tackling it again the 20th once more got ahead of the Hussars but they could not keep the ball long with them; the Hussars carried the ball up and Major Stephen just missed scoring. In the next run the Deccans got clear away and Ross equalised the score as the chukker ended. 14th (King's) Hussars, 1 goal; 20th Deccan Horse, 1 goal.

Second Chukker.—The Deccans attacked feebly and lost the ball twice, but their third attempt was more successful Worgan hitting a clean goal. The Hussars tried hard to get even with their opponents and managed to do it, Astley scoring off a ball missed by Miller. 14th Hussars, 2 goals; 20th Deccan Horse, 2 goals.

Third Chukker.—The Deccan Horse again assumed the offensive but missed badly several times. The Hussars then returned the attack and the Deccans defended safely, Worgan saving brilliantly more than once. Some very exciting play ensued but neither side added to their score. 14th Hussars, 2 goals; 20th Deccan Horse, 2 goals.

Fourth Chukker.—Resuming play, the 20th got possession but a long shot for goal went wide; after the Hussars had had a few knocks at the ball the 20th again got away with it but sent it behind. The 20th continued to have the best of the game and another long shot just missed getting home, the Hussars got the ball next and a sharp scrimmage came off dangerously near the Deccan's goal, but the latter cleared and taking the ball up to the opposite end Worgan was credited with another goal. Score: 20th Deccan Horse, 3 goals; 14th Hussars, 2 goals.

Fifth Chukker.—It was now the Hussars turn to score and pressing their opponents, Pope got the ball and put it through; the Deccans were not long before they held the lead again, Oswald adding to the score this time. It was anybody's match yet and excitement ran high among the spectators. The Hussars played for all they were worth but could not get even. Score: 20th Deccan Horse, 4 goals; 14th Hussars, 3 goals.

Sixth Chukker.—This was the last chukker in which there were 6 minutes 17 seconds left to play out and the Deccan Horse leading by one goal. The Hussars pulled themselves together and in a couple of minutes equalised the score, Astley sending in a fine shot. Excitement was at its highest when the Hussars again attacked and went very near scoring; there was some hard hitting and fast riding on both sides and when the ball was sent out for the last time the match was drawn, score being 4 goals each.

The goal posts were then widened and after the usual interval play was resumed. The Hussars hit out and the 20th returned the ball, Worgan making a splendid attempt to score but sending the ball wide. Going in again the Deccans still had the game in their favour, the Hussars cleared from a scrimmage and got dangerously near the Deccan's goal; from here the 20th raced up with the ball and again sent it out. This was really hard lines for them. Another fight came off in front of the Hussar's goal the latter clearing and attacking, but the Deccans were equal to the occasion and saved. The Hussars again attacked but the ball was saved and taken up by the Deccans, Ross making the winning stroke to immense delight of their backers. Teams as before.

Mrs. Cookson, wife of Brigadier-General Cookson presented the large handsome Challenge Cup and four small ones to the winners after General Cookson had congratulated them on their splendid form and final victory, and cheers were given for Mrs. Cookson, the winners and runners up.

Colonel Synge Hutchinson, V.C., and officers of the 14th Hussars were "At Home" to a large and fashionable company of their friends, including the Hon'ble Mr. Stuart Fraser, while the Band of the 2nd (Q. O.) Cameron Highlanders kept things very lively altogether.

RELICS OF RACEHORSES.

THE announcement of the presentation by the King of the skeleton of his famous horse, Persimmon, to the Natural History Museum at South Kensington has caused much gratification to the public generally, and especially to that section who desire to see the relics of famous thoroughbreds preserved to the nation for purposes of natural history research and general information. The gift has not yet been officially reported to the trustees of the museum, and until this formality has been observed the skeleton will not be on view to the public. It is hoped to have the exhibit in its permanent position in the course of the next fortnight.

The exhibits begin with Stockwell. There is a gap in the next generation, which was Doncaster's. Doncaster was a son of Stockwell, and was bought by the Duke of Westminster for £14,000, an unheard of sum at that time to give for a horse. But what a tribute the purchase was to the late Duke's remarkably fine judgment of a horse and of breeding lines! Doncaster gave him Ormonde, Bend Or, Orme, Flying Fox, and enabled him to breed Sceptre, who when sold as a yearling at that famous sale at Kingsclear, made the record price for a yearling of 10,000gs. At the museum there is the skeleton of the left fore-limb and left hind-limb of Stockwell—those limbs that helped him to gallop to victory in the Two Thousand Guineas and St. Leger of 1852. By placing the skeleton of the corresponding limbs of a well-known Shire stallion, named Blaisdon Squire, side by side with the Stockwell relics, one may see at a glance the variations in measurements and degrees. They make it clear that while the upper segment of the limbs (humerus and femur) is shorter in the racehorse than in the carthorse, the reverse is the case with most of the other bones. Sir Ray Lankester has pointed out that this greater proportionate length of the lower part of the leg probably gives greater speed in the racehorse, but a larger series of specimens is necessary before it can be definitely affirmed that these proportions are constant.

ORMONDE, BEND OR, DONOVAN

It is especially good to know that the remains of Ormonde are deposited at the museum. The skull is on view, as are also the skull of Bend Or, Stockwell Donovan, Royal Hampton, Corrie Roy, and the Shire horse Blaisdon Squire. Looking at these white bones now, perfectly preserved, labelled, and encased for the public benefit, it is not a little difficult to believe that they belonged to horses that helped to carve out a big portion of the history of the British Turf. Yet the fact remains; and doubtless many who have looked, and many who will in the future look upon them, will experience a flood of memories let loose as they recall the deeds of the famous ones that belong to the past. They will remember that Ormonde was called "mighty," because he was never beaten, and that he was the best horse John Porter ever trained in the course of a remarkable and lengthy career. The mind will go back to that vintage year in which were bred, besides Ormonde, such good ones as The Bard, Minting, Saraband, and St. Mirin. They will remember Bend Or's tremendous battle with Robert the Devil at Epsom, the margin in his favour being only a head, and some will recall those successful days at the stud when the sweet-tempered old horse loved nothing better than the strange companionship of a white cat.

Donovan, too, was a Derby winner—he won £55,154 10s. as a racer—and the unpractised eye may note very little difference between his skull and the others. Yet there are slight variations which are known to the authorities, who carefully measure each exhibit. There can be no mistaking the difference between the skulls of the pure-bred Arab and the modern thoroughbred. That belonging to the Arab shows a narrow nostril and a deeper and wider jowl. The Darley Arabian was, of course, primarily concerned with the beginning of the thoroughbred. The famous Eclipse was descended from him—he was by Marske, a great grandson of the Darley Arabian—and, by the way, it may be mentioned that the skeleton of Eclipse is preserved at the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons in Red Lion Square, Holborn. The observer would not fail to notice, could he be afforded an opportunity of making the comparison, the difference in the skeleton of Eclipse (bred in 1764) and that of Persimmon (bred in 1893). They are evidence beyond all else of the evolution of the thoroughbred.

GIFT OF ORMONDE'S REMAINS.

The possession of the remains of Ormonde is a fact upon which the authorities set much store, and the circumstances are worth relating as to how they came to be offered to and accepted on behalf of the museum. Ormonde it may be remembered, turned a roarer, and the Duke of Westminster sold him out of the country for £10,500. Meanwhile, however, he had given us Orme, and then he again changed hands—this time to Mr. W. O. B. Macdonough, an American breeder—the sum of £31,250 being paid for him. At that time the price represented a record, though it has since been actually exceeded in the cases of Flying Fox (£39,375), Diamond Jubilee (£31,500), and Cyllene (£31,500). Thus the horse of the century" became American property, and he died in America. Mr. Macdonough, however, did a most graceful thing when he wrote to the authorities of the Natural History Museum, pointing out that it was only right the remains of such an eminently British horse should rest in this country, and offering them as a gift. Needless to add, the gift was gratefully acknowledged.

Radiol.

RADIOL TREATMENT prolongs the life of a Horse's Legs. Completely removes by radiation all soft swellings that disfigure and lame a Horse as sprained Tendons, Windgalls, Bog Spavins, Capped Elbow Big Leg, Enlarged Glands, etc.

No Blister; No Laying up; No Hair Removed.

RADIOL TREATMENT fines down a worn Horse's Legs and is a certain cure for Puffy Joints and Sprains, Prevents Filled Legs.

An intelligent use of the "RADIOL LEG WASH" counteracts that daily wear and tear of the legs unavoidable with the Horse in constant work, whether training, racing, or on the road.

One flask of "RADIOL" will make a GALLON of valuable Leg Wash.

"The Field," June 18th, 1906 :—

"We have been able to test some trial bottles of "RADIOL" in cases of Wind-galls, Splints and Puffy swellings and have found "RADIOL" to be very beneficial, and we have also found it useful as a leg wash for polo ponies after a day's play."

To be obtained from Broom & Co., Calcutta; Treacher & Co., Bombay; W. E. Smith & Co., Mount Road, Madras; Heath & Son, Sharia Maghraky, Cairo; Jamnadas Bros., The Market, Bombay; The Mombassa Pharmacy, Mombassa.

Mr. Blundell Maple, Bt., presented the remains of his good horses, Royal Hampton (third in Melton's Derby), and Cortie Roy. The latter's head forefoot, and hind-foot have been set up, and one may notice the curious grey markings on the hind pastern. It is to be presumed that the skeleton of Persimmon will be exhibited complete. Doubtless this course would have been taken with those already referred to, but it is explained that limitations of space, apart from all other considerations, prevent such an interesting exhibition. For practical purposes, however, the bones when not exhibited are carefully measured, labelled, and stored away, the data thus gained being used to throw light on points which are obscure to the scientific mind.

TOUCHSTONE'S SKELETON AT EATON.

The small models of horses are prominently displayed. There is a good one of Persimmon, presented by the Prince of Wales, and another of Zinfandel, who was probably Persimmon's best son. That of Zinfandel was, of couse, presented by the horse's owner, Lord Howard de Walden. The various models of Hungarian-bred horses are instructive. They include an Anglo-Norman stallion; the half-bred English stallion, Furioso; the Anglo-Arab mare, Gidran: the half-bred Arab stallion, Schagya XI.; and the halfbred English mare, Vermeille, all bred in Hungary. Other models are of Neapolitano, a Spanish-Italian stallion, and Maestoso, of the same breed. With the near approach of the Waterloo Cup Coursing Meeting at Altcar, one spared a glance for the skeleton and the stuffed body of that famous greyhound, Fullerton.

Touchstone had much to do with the early success of the Eaton stud, and, while on the subject of the relics of racehorses, it may be stated that the skeleton of that distinguished sire is preserved at Eaton; while Lily Agnes, the dam of Ormonde, and other notable mares are buried in the precincts of the stud. It is on record that a robin once built her nest in Touchstone's skull. At the museum no such liberty with the skull of Persimmon will be possible. To the student of breeding it will summon many interesting memories, and to the devotee of racing it will recall, with the vividness of yesterday, those ever-memorable scenes that were enacted on Epsom Downs in 1896, when King Edward the Seventh (then Prince of Wales) won his first Derby.—Daily Telegraph.

Jeffery's 600-Bore Rifles are the most powerful big game weapons obtainable, the striking force of the bullet being about 8,700 ft. lb whereas a 4-Bore bullet with 14 drs of Black Powder hits with a force of 7,400lb. These rifles are all made with the Under Lever Snap Action, so as to ensure ease and rapidity in loading. The Top Lever Action, with such heavy cartridges is liable to jam and often difficult to open.

PUNJAB NATIVE ARMY TOURNAMENT.

THE tournament at Jhelum has this year drawn twenty-four entries, but of these two have scratched. A commencement was made on the 2nd instant when three games were played off. The first was between the 45th Sikhs and the 47th Sikhs, which provided the best match of the afternoon, a fine exhibition of hockey resulting in a draw of two goals each—all the points being registered in the first half. The game was replayed the following day and proved as exciting and closely contested as the first meeting the result being another draw of two goals all, extra time bringing about no change. The 47th led at the interval by 2 goals to nil but the 45th nothing daunted made repeated attacks after the interval and managed to draw level. At the third time of asking the 47th won by 4 goals to nil. The match between the 38th Dogras and the 46th Punjabis was rather a scrambling affair. The first half was devoid of score and on changing ends level play concluded the game without advantage to either side. Extra time was played and during this the 38th scored twice, the 46th only netting once. The 52nd Sikhs and 31st Punjabis put up rather a sell key display, the only point being one scored by the 52nd from a penalty corner. The 3rd Punjabis were to have met the 28th Punjabis but the latter regiment had scratched leaving their opponents to meet the 47th Sikhs in the second round.

Besides the replay between the 45th and 47th Sikhs on the second day four other games were played, thus completing the first round of the tournament, eight teams having drawn byes. The 30th and 25th Punjabis gave us a good fight in the first half of their match but the 25th showed to better advantage after the interval and ran out victorious by 6 goals to 2. The 26th Punjabis kept the 35th Sikhs penned in their territory, almost all the game and eventually beat them by 3 goals to nil and the 30th Punjabis beat the 36th Sikhs by the odd goal in three after a very fine game. The 35th's second goal was distinctly lucky and a draw would more adequately have represented the run of the play. The only other match was between the 15th Sikhs and 34th Sikh Pioneers, a scrambling game ending in favour of the 15th who had the upper hand throughout and won by 4 goals to nil.

Three matches in the second round were played on the 4th instant. The 37th Dogras beat the 67th Punjabis by 2 goals to nil both points obtained in the first half. The 33rd Sikh Pioneers then met the 1 2th Infantry. The latter had the best of the first half and led at the interval by 1 to nil but half way through the second moiety the 23rd equalised and scoring two more goals won by 3 to 1. The 84th Punjabis were too strong for the 32nd Sikh Pioneers and beat them 3—0.

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

A DIVISION.

CUSTOMS vs RANGERS.—These teams, which are considered the strongest in the League, met on the Customs ground last Saturday when a splendid game resulted in a win for the home team. THE FABLE OF THE SAGES WHO REFLECTED.

There was a Certain Sage—
Or at least, he was very nearly certain.
One day he found himself in the Pathless Desert.
He had a loaf of bread: but he was not hungry.
He had no water: and he was afflicted by Raging Thirst.
He sat down.
"Everything comes to him who waits," he reflected. Just over the edge of the Far Horizon there was another Sage.
Sages have a habit straying into Trackless Wilds.
He had a bottle of water: but he was not thirsty.
He had no bread: and he was racked by Gnawing Hunger.
He sat down.
"Everything comes to him who waits," he reflected.
The hungry Sage waited. He grew hungrier.
The thirsty Sage waited. He grew thirstier.
They went on waiting.
Nothing happened.
So they Pegged Out.

MORAL.

Nothing will come to him who waits unless someone has got a Move On.

A self-made man I know," says Mr. Andrew Carnegie, "was talking to a minister. The topic was his own success. 'Yes,' he said, 'I began life as a barefooted newsboy. At twenty- I was worth £2,000. I was a millionaire at thirty-two. And yet everybody was against me. I have achieved my success single-handed and by my own unaided efforts.' Then the proud self-made man seemed to remember that, in conversation with a minister, he ought to adopt a humbler and Of course, I don't deny that Providence may, now and then, have been of some slight service,' "

THE BENGAL CHAMPIONSHIPS.

THE final of the Singles was played off on Saturday last in the presence of a large and fashionable gathering including His Excellency the Viceroy and a party from Government House. The contestants were C. R. D. Pritchett, who owns a big reputation at home, and F. N. Warden, who has been prominent at the Bengal Championships for many years. Pritchett won the toss and quite overpowered his opponent in the first set beating him 6—0. Pritchett won the first two games of the second set and then Warden made a brilliant recovery and won the next six games off the reel. The third set was very interesting. Pritchett playing strongly won the first three games, the next three went to Warden, but Pritchett again got the upper hand and accounted for the three following and the set at 6—3. The fourth set was most exciting. Pritchett took the two first games, the third went to Warden, the fourth to Pritchett, Warden won the fifth and sixth, the seventh was Pritchett's, but thereafter Warden had all the best of the play. He completely tired his opponent out and taking the next three games made the score two sets all. The fifth set saw several long games. Pritchett fought hard but his powers flagged and Warden outstayed him, winning the set with 6—1 and thus taking the Championship.

F. N. Warden beat C. R. D. Pritchett.

THE DOUBLES.

The third round of the Doubles was played on the 2nd instant and did not produce any very exciting encounter. The match between Wood and Colville and Cobbold and Sands was the only one that ran to three sets. Wood and his partner after losing the first set taking the next two comfortably. The semi-finals were played on Thursday Pritchett and Aylmer met Shallow and Warden and contrary to expectations had little difficulty in qualifying for the final. Warden and Shallow appeared quite off colour and could not extend their opponents. The other match, Green and Kalberer against Wood and Colville, was a much better game to watch. Rain caused its postponement when the score was one set all, and one game all in the third set. It was replayed on Friday and an entirely new commencement made. Kalberer and Green had the best of it all through and won by 2 sets to nil. In the first they scored 6—2; and in the second Colville and Wood took the first three games, Kalberer and Green won the next three, Colville and Wood the seventh game and their opponents taking the next three ran out winners 6—4.

The final in the Doubles brought the tournament to a close on the 7th instant. A well contested game was expected but spectators were disappointed. Kalberer and Green early asserted their superiority and, playing well together, won by three sets to nil. They took the first set at 6—3, lost the first three games in the second but got level at 4 all; 5 all was next called and then they ran out at 7—, while the third set was theirs at 6—3, and they thus won comfortably. The winners were in excellent form and gave a really good exhibition, their opponents playing rather below their usual standard. Taken all round the tournament this year has been a big success. The public have shown the great interest in the play, as evidenced by the big attendances on the ground each day, the tennis has been of high class throughout, the arrangements most satisfactory, while

THE BLOODHOUND IN ACTION.

Of all the dogs that hunt by scent, the English bloodhound is the most wonderfully endowed with trailing ability. He works equally well on any trail, of either man or beast; he is the only all-round trailer, the progenitor of all the hound family. But he is the best known as a man trailer.

The bloodhound was first known in England as the sleuth-hound, later as the English bloodhound; not on account of his thirst for blood, but because of his pure breeding, the same as one speaks of a pure-bred, pure-blood or blooded horse. He was first introduced in England by that good sportsman William the Conqueror. Later he was known in France as the St. Hubert, and in the eighth century as the Flemish hound. There were no real English bloodhounds in America before those sent over by Edwin Brough to the New York dog show in 1888. The registration of the American Kennel Club shows that they were the first imported and the first ever registered.

THE "BLOODHOUNDS" OF SLAVERY TIMES.

Although the genuine English bloodhound is a comparatively new dog in America, partly bred ones and black-and-tan foxhounds have long passed for the real dog. Anyone who was familiar with the "bloodhound" of slavery times, on passing through the Southern States now will see the same type as them, kept now by the "poor white trash" and negros, and used to some extent as trailers in prisons and some convict camps. For the latter purpose they are used in packs. These packs are always dangerous, just as a mob is dangerous. And as the would-be fugitive knows what would be his fate if overtaken by the dogs, his fear keeps him from making an attempt to escape.

Some years ago I bought in the South one of the best trained Southern man trailers. It might have been said of her that she had tasted her game. She was a little thirty-or forty-pound dog and looked like a cross of black-and-tan foxhound, bull terrier, and pug. Her color was that of the foxhound, she had the head, muzzle and a stick-to-it-iveness of a bull terrier when she caught hold, and the three twists and a knot in her tail of a prize pug. She was good natured and friendly if she did not imagine herself imposed upon, except to the party she was trailing; that one was her game and no former friendships counted. This hound was much the kind of dog painted by the Northern politician before the Civil War—a true dog and savage. She gave my visitors a new sensation; it never was a drag hunt after she started. I never let her trail except for the amusement of visitors; then the runner was always instructed to climb near the top of the tree so he could have a better view of her work.

This dog ran finely on a fresh trail, when her voice was as musical as one could wish. But if the trail were laid lightly and much recrossed she was at fault. Then her bay was short sharp and quick, in contrast to that of the English bloodhound, which always maintains a long-drawn, full, resounding bay, like the echoes of a distant cannon.

I have found that my dogs make the best trailers when first trained alone, they worked in pairs. Each then learns to work independent of the other and both will not at the same time overrun the trail. The real bloodhound is seldom trained to bark in leash or to be savage.

A SLEUTH BY INSTINCT.

When there is cause for serious man trailing and a pair of trained English bloodhounds have arrived with their keepers two or more, the dogs are never turned loose or left to discover for themselves what is wanted of them. One specially trained for the purpose is taken and given something to smell that the missing person has had. Then this dog will go quietly over the house or wherever this person has been, examining every thing he has handled, as if to get all possible information about him before he starts. When he is satisfied, not before, he will go to the window or door where the fugitive or lost person left and show he is ready. He is then independent to a point of obstinacy and brooks no interference while at work. When the keeper starts on the trail, holding the leash of a dog in each hand, about all he has to do is to raise his feet and be sure of his footing. The dogs are heavy, powerful, and the most determined of trailers. They will follow a trail for days, camping on it at night and picking it up in the morning.

Bloodhounds used for criminal work or especially for trailing are never taken out of their yards or kennels save for work or practice. If given proper care and the same amount of training that is required to make a man expert in any profession, they would be able to accomplish even as great results as the writers of fiction give them credit for. But most inexperienced persons expect this dog to be more than human. They gave him a little training, then shut him up for months, instead of taking him out every day for practice. They expect him to know a criminal by sight, to be able to select his trail from among hundreds of others and hunt him down. They seem to think a criminal's trail is different from that of any other person, when, in reality, the dog merely hunts the person he is told to hunt—innocent or guilty.

Within the last twenty years I have had many fine trailers. They have been my house dogs as well as my companions. Ch. Victor and Ch. She, both well-known show dogs, were both very interesting aside from their value as show dogs. Victor was a house dog and believed in making himself useful. If any particular member of the family was wanted he was told to go and fetch that person, we simply calling the person by name. He would look up in your face while you were telling him, then if he understood he would give one of his peculiar grins, wag his tail, then commence hunting around for the trail. No guess work for him, no memorizing; he was a trailer, and he always brought the person he was sent for.

Ch. She, however, thought and reasoned. She was only content when with me; possibly she may have remembered the long watches I had with her, when brothers and sisters passed over to the happy trailing grounds, and she also came so near being ferried over. She was always the first to discover if anything unusual had happened, if any man or animal had been around the grounds at night. So proficient a trailer was she that she would track a person or animal without the usual nosing of the ground, trotting along ahead of me as if we were only out for a walk. While apparently paying no attention to anything she was in reality all the time keeping that trail in mind.

One morning She called my attention to the fact that some one had been in my garden and taken some of my melons. She seemed greatly excited over the find. First she took me to three different houses where the boys lived. Then she followed around to the back of my barn to where my hired boy was working, saying plainly enough that he was guilty too. And so it all turned out later. She was just as good at trailing an animal or a bird. One day one of my neighbor's hens got into my garden. I called his attention to the damage she had done, but he thought I was mistaken, saying his hens were shut up. To convince him I spoke to Ch. She, who was with me, and in a minute or two she brought the hen running before her from back of his barn.

Though not a watch dog in the generally accepted sense, being instead affectionate and gentle, always to be trusted with children, the bloodhound is quickly aware if anything unusual takes place, and is the best of protectors for children. No one can speak crossly to the child who plays with this dog without his resenting it, and he will get between the child and any possible danger.

The best results are obtained if the puppies are taken in hand when about two or three months of age. They should be allowed to become accustomed to any change of environment and their owner should gain their confidence before making any attempt to train them. The training ground should be an open lot or field where the puppies will have nothing to take their attention from their first lessons. I reward them by giving them some dainty when they do well, and let the runner do so too. When trained for hunting criminals, and it is desired to train them to be savage, the boy runner then carries an empty grain bag or a strip of canvas to serve as a lure, as in training a whippet for racing. After shaking this in their faces to get them excited and to catch at it, he then runs against the wind, still shaking his lure at them. The puppies are released and soon overtake the boy, the trainer following and urging them on to attack him. He keeps shaking his piece of canvas in a tempting fashion, encouraging them to lay hold, never being so rough with them as to make them afraid or timid, but just enough to get them angry and excited. The trainer then gets them again on leash and the boy repeats his performance, perhaps this time going out of sight. The trainer holds them for a few minutes, encouraging them, then lets them go, running after them and hissing them on.

As the training progresses the runner is given an ever-increasing start, until the dogs become reliable on a cold trail any distance. The difficulties are gradually increased until the hounds will follow at trail through the streets through a maze of different tracks and across streams either on leash or when loose. However, a good trainer will not use the same ground or runner often. The hounds require a general all-round education, which can only be acquired by constant work on the trails of different people, under different conditions. And after they have become proficient it is the sensible thing to keep them in training by giving them constant and varied practice. An acrobat, a juggler, a billiard player or so to speak. It is not logical to expect, however, that a bloodhound will avail himself of the necessary practice to keep himself in good trailing trim, even if given his freedom. A dog must have a good master and be given plenty of exercise and work, or his wonderful nose will fail him when he is called upon to live up to his reputation.—J. L. WISCHELL, in Recreation.

The Naturalist.

AN ANIMALS' HOSPITAL AT WORK.

A large and savage rat recently found its way into the enclosure where the London "Zoo's" grey squirrels live. Before it could be found and destroyed five of the graceful little fellows had been badly bitten and were discovered with angry wounds showing through their pretty bedraggled coats.

These squirrels were the first patients at the "Zoo's" new hospital, a beautifully equipped red-brick building just behind the reptile house which has just started its career of usefulness. Just like the London or any other modern hospital, the floors are constructed of easily cleaned cement with curved corners. Ten airy, warmed cages are situated on the ground floor while the upper part of the hospital is composed of two well-lit, cheerful wards with glass roofs, where the smaller birds and animals will be treated.

Thither the little injured squirrels were conveyed, their hurts were dressed with antiseptics and they are now almost fully recovered.

The need for such an institution in the Gardens is undoubted. There is no more pathetic sight in the world than that of a savage captive animal attacked by a mortal disease. The wild powerful creature, its coat streaked with sweat and its muscles quivering with anguish, will not submit to the well-meant ministrations of its keepers or of the medical expert, and refuses the food in which, perhaps healing or soothing drugs are hidden. It only demands to be left alone to die. Were it free, the merciless mercy of the jungle or desert would ensure speedy relief from its sufferings at the fangs or claws of its fellow.

In the Zoological Gardens, hitherto, it has seldom been possible to do anything in such cases, but to leave the animal in its den, watched by curious visitors and allow Nature to take its course until an expert's certain diagnosis of a fatal termination permits the use of the final kindness of strychnine or a bullet. Now in warmth, quietude, and privacy, and under the constant eye of experts, the "Zoo's" patients will have a vastly increased chance of recovery.

The first patients. The Hospital's Case Book so far, includes five grey squirrels, one fox, two kangaroos, one infant ibex.

The fox went there, addicted with a painful canker of the ear. The savage little creature was secured by means of a noose on the end of a pole which was gently pulled "taut." He betrayed no disposition to snap, so a muzzle was dispensed with, and the ear was dressed as swiftly as possible.

A disfiguring skin disease has attacked one of the kangaroos, and his mate has been placed with him until it is certain she has not also contracted the same trouble. Had the pair been left in the cages they would have "nosed" their healthy neighbours in a friendly way and probably started an epidemic. Curiously enough, the baby ibex has also an affection of the coat.

Scarcely a single ill that we are subject to but has its parallel among the beasts at the "Zoo." Many diseases, indeed, have been carried to them by human infection—notably chest trouble and tuberculosis—which have been the scourge of the monkey-house. The higher the beast in the scale of creation the more liable it is to contract disease from its human visitors. That is the many reason why the most man-like brutes—the apes—are wisely shut off from their admirers by great sheets of plate-glass. Otherwise a single influenza-stricken sneeze from a visitor might place every chimpanzee and orang-utang on the sick list.

A weak heart killed "Lobo," the great grey American timber wolf who died recently. It was diagnosed early last year from his distress after slight exertion. An iron tonic mixed with his meat in pill form pulled him round wonderfully, and he never refused his medicine. He died quietly during the night, and his widow, "Blanco," swiftly told the news with her wailing lament. Unnatural confinement was probably at the root of the heart trouble, and an interesting parallel comes in the case of a flamingo which lived in the Three Island pond. Her wings were unclipped, but she betrayed no anxiety to leave, till one day she swooped into the air, circled round two or three times, and then collapsed and plummeted down dead. The exertion had proved too much for a weak heart, and flamingo died just as a man with cardiac trouble may die if he races for a train.

A Tapir with Mumps. Visitors were recently astonished to see a female tapir—that weird compromise between a pig and an elephant—wearing a heavy white mackintosh. It was in reality a mild mustard plaster which was tied round her neck to alleviate a very homely complaint—mumps. All the symptoms were there, the glandular swelling, pain on mastication (she refused all food), and feverishness. To all intents and purposes it was human mumps, and yielded to the same treatment after the usual period about a fortnight or three weeks.

In the case of powerful savage brutes much which would do them good has to be left undone. When "Eve," the full-grown female chimpanzee, suffered from a skin trouble on her wrists and forearms she could not be properly handled for curative purposes, but whenever she strolled up to be fed the keeper patiently and quietly sprinkled the worst places with powder.

More drastic measures were resorted to in the case of a fine lynx with mange. His temper was vile—simply vile—and when it was necessary to use an embrocation he had to be chloroformed for each application. A box like a miniature lethal chamber was employed and the chloroform pumped in until the lynx collapsed. When on one occasion the treatment was unusually prolonged the lynx showed signs of "coming to." There was a panic for the moment until the operator renewed the dose and restored complete insensibility.

Brain troubles are represented by the elephants, which are sometimes, after a certain age, to all intents and purposes periodic lunatics. One chased a waiter, and another pinned a keeper to the floor, the tusk going through the man's coat, but otherwise only bruising him. A low diet and seclusion are tried, but even if the monsters are cured they are never trusted again.

Setting a Deer's leg. Surgical operations are not very frequent, but it will now be possible to attempt these with a good chance of success in the new hospital, to which is attached an up-to-date operating theatre. A beautiful little hog deer (a rare Indian variety) broke its foreleg this year, a slender limb no thicker than man's finger. Instead of destroying the little creature the expert consulted by the Zoological Society's officials determined to try to save the leg. He used linen bandages dipped in gum. These "set" quite as satisfactorily as plaster of Paris without being so heavy. The intelligent little creature took care of itself, and hopped about on three legs for a few weeks until the expert with a keen knife, cut away the bandage and found the leg as good as ever.

The broken wing of a secretary-bird and the leg of a Chinese pheasant have also been successfully set during the last few weeks.

Chamois and other goats are often troubled with overlong hoofs through lack of sufficient exercise to keep them worn down to the right length. In these cases roping the beast and clipping the superfluous growth become necessary. In the case of lions, or leopards with in growing, claws, the operation used to be performed in this fashion: The paws were caught in running nooses and dragged to the bars a gag of wood was inserted in the mouth, and a pair of clippers did the rest in a few seconds. The effect on the animals' tempers and nerves may be imagined. Now, however, the chloroform box (a size larger than that used for the lynx) is employed, and the savage creature knows no more about the operation than a dental patient under gas.

THE INDIAN FIELD.

THURSDAY, 17th March, 1910.

THE ORIGIN OF HUMPED CATTLE.

ALTHOUGH that eminent authority on ruminants, the late Professor L. Rütimeyer of Basle expressed the opinion more than thirty years ago that humped cattle, or zebu, as they are commonly called by naturalists, are descended from the Malay banting (Bos sondaicus), or some nearly allied extinct species, this theory has been generally ignored by later writers. The late Dr. Blanford stated, for instance, in the "Fauna of British India" that nothing is known with regard to the origin of these cattle, although he expressed the opinion that their birthplace was probably in the tropical or subtropical regions of the Old World. At a much earlier date Edward Blyth, sometime Curator of the Museum of the Asiatic Society of Bengal in Park Street, suggested that humped cattle are derived from an African stock, but since there are no wild cattle except buffaloes from one end of Africa to the other, this theory may be at once put aside. Humped cattle may accordingly be put down as an Asiatic type; and the question therefore is narrowed down as to the wild species—either recent or fossil—to which they appear to be most nearly allied.

In suggesting their derivation from the banting Rütimeyer appears to have relied mainly on the character of the skull and horn; and he seems to have regarded the convex forehead characteristic of most Indian humped cattle as a feature due to domestication, since he lays great stress on the flatness of this region in the shell of a Galla humped ox in the British Museum.

That this convexity of the forehead is an acquired character due to domestication is confirmed by the presence of a similar feature in Roman-nosed domesticated rams and its absence in wild species.

Mr. Lydekker in a recent article has, however, gone a step further than this, and suggested that the hump of the zebu is likewise a feature due to domestication. This theory is based on the fact that the hump is quite useless to the animal (however convenient it may be to the bail-gharivala), and is a structure precisely analogous to the masses of fat at the root of the tail in fat-rumped sheep, which, like humped cattle, are common to Asia and Africa. If this be so, the hump, which is a mere mass of muscle, represents some functional structure in the wild ancestor of the zebu which has undergone a kind of degenerate development with great increase in size.

Now the banting, together with its Burmese representative the tsine, is characterised by the presence of a low ridge on the withers, which stops somewhat suddenly about a third of the back, and is supported by the elongation of the spines of the dorsal vertebræ. Now if this ridge were to undergo a kind of degenerate, or retrograde, development, it might well result in the production of a structure like the hump of the zebu; and in Mr. Lydekker's opinion such has been the origin of the hump.

Further, the excessive size of the dewlap in humped oxen is considered to be another feature due to domestication; this appendage in the banting being of quite moderate size. In this connection Mr. Lydekker takes occasion to point out that the great size of the dewlap of the gayal as compared with the gaur, in which it is practically absent, affords another argument for regarding the former as a domesticated breed of the latter.

Reverting to humped cattle, it has been pointed out that in the very general prevalence of pale fawn and buff in their colouring many of the Indian breeds approximate to the wild tsine ; while, on the other hand, the comparative frequency in Upper India of dark brown or black Brahmini bulls suggests colour inheritance from the typical banting of Java, in which the bulls are black while the cows and the calves of both sexes are bay. Information is required as to whether the cows of Brahmini cattle are bay or chestnut instead of black ; and if ever black, whether they are less frequently so than the bulls.

Humped cattle differ from the banting in the absence of white stockings, which may, however, be represented in the former by the white ring observable in many cases just above the fetlock.

As regards habits humped cattle differ from their European relatives by their voice being more of a grunt than a low, and likewise by their rarely, if never, seeking the shelter of shade or standing midleg deep in water. Unfortunately, there seems to be no information available with regard to the voice and the general habits of the banting. For what it is worth, it may be mentioned, however, that the cry of a young gaur formerly in the London Zoological Garden was stated by the late Dr. Blanford to be quite unlike that of humped cattle. If it should prove that the banting has a grunting like humped cattle, and likewise similar habits, then Mr. Lydekker's theory of the descent of the latter from the former would be converted into a practical certainty.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

THE Calcutta Tenth Extra Meeting was well up to the average of these meetings, but the attendance on the part of spectators is beginning to get very small, probably owing to the heat in the early part of the afternoon A start was made at 3-30 P.M. with the Amateur Pony Plate, Guide being made a warm favourite. Mr. Galstaun's pair delayed the start considerably, but when they eventually got away, Guide led from Murmur and Tightlace. Murmur made an effort up the straight, but could make no impression on the favourite who won easily by a length and a quarter.

BLUE FLAME was most fancied for the Town Plate, and coming away from her field at the half mile she made a hack of Sequent, receiving only 8lb., Golden Morn third.

THE most open race on the card was the Spring Plate. Jack Sheppard and Mayfowl were the first to show up, then Kaffirpan, Little Meg and True Love. At about the mile Jack Sheppard and Kaffirpan drew away together followed by Misty Morn, and Mayfowl moved up to fourth place at the turn. When the distance was reached Mayfowl came away followed by Jack Sheppard and Kaffirpan Mr. Apcar's horse winning comfortably. Misty Morn came with a wet sail and beat Kaffirpan for third place.

THE Amateur Race was a pleasant surprise for everyone as the event gave Lady Jenkins her first winning bracket with Lefterin, who was not greatly fancied. Wise Hawk and Sea Lad made all the running until near home where Sea Lad ran out from the rails and nearly brought Wise Hawk down. They were both passed by Lefterin, who ran on an easy winner from Devilette and Plain Mister.

WILD BOY went out a hot favourite for the Pony Selling Handicap. Even with 10st. 5lb. on his back there was nothing in the race to make him gallop at the finish. Guide led from Wild Boy and Kathleen II. until near the finish where Wild Boy put in a run and beat Guide easily by one and three-quarter lengths. Wild Boy was put up for sale after the race and run up to Rs. 1,750 by the owner of the second pony, but was bought in by Mr. Galstaun at this price. Mr. Galstaun then had Guide brought into the ring and it cost Mr. Thaddeus Rs. 450 to retain him.

THE result of the Seventh Selling Handicap was never in doubt. After they had gone a furlong the favourite had the race won whenever he liked. Bonita led at the start but was soon overhauled by Jacchus and Sir Ulric. At the distance Sir Ulric was passed by Scotch Girl and Dunsinane, but they could make no impression on Jacchus who won cantering.

THE end of the paperchasing season has come all to soon—a season, which has not been quite up to the average owing to the going being so bad. It has only been possible to hold two chases over the Jodepore country, the others all being run on the Salt Lake side, which was as much too hard as the other side was soft. This is the first season that the Paperchase Cup has not crossed the Bund country. The hardest riders throughout the season have been Captain Gibbs on Trilby II. (winner of the Average Cup), Lord Francis Scot on Fermoy (second), Mr. Morris on Blue Bell (third). It is a great score for Captain Gibbs to have won both the Average and the Paperchase Cups in one season, and he was lucky, this being his last chance as he leaves India for good shortly. Very few ladies have been seen out this season as compared with other years. Miss Forsythe was the only one to show up to the front at all well, and she was rewarded by winning the Ladies' Cup on Karoyi, who, we see, has been sold and left this side of India. Lord Francis Scott was very unlucky in there not being a Heavy Weight Cup this year, and he had to compete with the light weights, giving them 10lbs., but even with this penalty off we don't think Fermoy, good horse as he is, could have beaten a smasher like little Trilby, who won very easily. The only others that were considered to possess chances besides these two were Messrs. Cowper and Evers.

MR. ALLEN had made as good a course as could have been expected owing to much of the country still being impossible. The spectators could see a lot of the course from the Mollah Hât road. A start was made near Jodepore Thana, and the course ran alongside of the Mollah Hât road and then turned sharp into the jungle to the right, almost reaching the Railway and back, crossing the Mollah Hât road just behind the start, over three mud walls in the open, and then bearing left over the Ladies Wall and over the starting hurdles to the finish. The field were let go to a good start by His Excellency Lord Minto and Mauser led over the first two fences. Then Trilby took up the running, Fermoy, Highland Fling, Pattle and Maisonette next. Coming over the Mollah Hât road a second time, Mutiny slipped up and Ballycar fell over him, while Mauser came down at the first wall on the Mollah Hat plough. At the Ladies' Wall Trilby had Fermoy beaten, Highland Fling next St. Odille and Maisonette together: the latter was full of running and put in a very fast run home but could get no nearer than third, beaten half a length by Fermoy.

The final order was as follows :—
1. Captain Gibbs on Trilby II. carried 11st.
2. Lord Francis Scott on Fermoy, carried 11st. 10lb.
3. Mr. Cowper on Maisonette, carried 11st.
4. Mr. Evers on Highland Fling, carried 11st.
5. Mr. Fauntley on St. Odille, carried 12st. 2lbs.
6. Mr. Tanner on Fingal, carried 11st.
7. Captain Lambert on Battle, carried 11st.
8. Mr. Glen on Ballycar (fell).
9. Captain Jelf on Mutiny (fell).
10. Mr. Scaramanga on Mauser (fell).

Lady Minto very kindly presented the prizes to the winners after the Chase.

Ladies' Cup.—Miss Forsythe on Karoyi.
Pony Cup.—Mr. Glen on Marconi.
Pony Average Cup.—Mr. Evers on Lockabie.
Horse Average Cup.—Captain Gibbs on Trilby II.
Paperchase Cup.—Captain Gibbs on Trilby II.

An excellent chota hazri was provided by the Club in the shamiana close to the finish.

The Calcutta Light Horse held their annual Paperchase on Tuesday morning over the same course as the Paperchase Cup on Friday. The event was won by Lieutenant Perkins on Dalgai, who sailed in as she liked from Lord Chester. This is the second time this good little mare has won, as last year she beat Anna Maria for first place. A field of ten faced the starter. Colonel E. G. Apostolides but the field was thinned to nine at the first hurdle, Piccolo falling. Sergeant Pearson and Trooper Savage then fell out, and Lieutenant Perkins even at this early part of the journey had the race won, bar accidents. Starlight fell at the first wall in the open after crossing the Molla Hat road and gave Trooper Dowson a nasty fall but luckily did no great damage. Coming over the Ladies' Wall, Dalgai was cantering ahead of Lord Chester who was hopelessly beaten and the winner finished nearly as fresh as when she started :—

The final order was :—
1. Lieut. Perkins on Dalgai, 11st. 7lb.
2. Trooper Levetus on Lord Chester, 11st. 7lb.
3. Trooper Murray on Lola, 11st. 7lb.
4. Trooper Cropper on Johanna, 12st. 8lb.
5. Trooper Muir on Molken, 11st. 7lb.
6. Corpl. Redmore on Bess, 12st.
Corpl. Skene on Vanity.
Sergt. Pearson on The Belter (refused.)
Trooper Savage on a grey (refused)
Trooper Sherman on Piccolo (fell.)
Trooper Dowson on Starlight (fell.)

Captain Gibbs is leaving India shortly and, we hear, will probably take his good little mare Trilby II. home to hunt, unless he sells her locally before he leaves.

Dr. and Mrs. Forsythe also leave for England soon and are not expected to be seen here again for some time as the Doctor will probably retire from India altogether. This will be a great loss to the paperchasing world where they have both been familiar figures for many years.

Captain Macdonnell also goes on leave during the hot weather and is selling off his horses Marconi and Ballycar. Everyone knows what a good pony Marconi is, and he is well worth the Rs. 2,000 that is required to buy him. Ballycar is also a good one, and when he has had a little time is sure to do well both racing and paperchasing.

Mr. G. Fowler Greenhill (senior partner), of Messrs. Cook and Company, who has been seriously indisposed for some time in Dr. Caddy's private hospital, has sufficiently recovered to be allowed to proceed Home, and leaves by the S.S. Himalaya for England on the 24th instant. The sea voyage should pick him up and we wish him a speedy recovery and return to the scene of his work. Dr. Douglas is expected to arrive about the 28th instant.

An accident which might have been much more serious occurred on Sunday evening to Mr. Jack Lyall, of Messrs. Cook and Company. Whilst loading an air gun to shoot a crow the weapon was accidentally discharged, the pellet striking just above the eyebrow, luckily missing the eye ball but causing a nasty wound in the corner of the eye and eyebrow. He was removed to the Medical College Hospital and is doing well. The sight of the eye will, it is expected, not be impaired, but the injury is severe, owing to the proximity of the muzzle of the rifle.

There is some talk of doing away with the bookmakers at Tollygunge Gymkhana's during the coming season. It is hard to say if this will popularise the meetings or not as there are a lot of things to say both for and against the idea. It is certain that a lot of the public who go now go solely to bet, but as far as entries are concerned it will not make the least difference, most of the owners racing at Tollygunge race for the pure sport and not for what can be made out of it. On the other hand they do not propose to do away with the tote, so that anyone can have their little bit each way if they please. We have often wondered that this sporting club does not race under C. T. C. rules: this would put things on a sound basis, and the stakes could then be raised to any amount, and these meetings would in no way clash with the big meetings held on the maidan. There was some talk years ago of the C. T. C. running the whole show, but that would not act; but let the Stewards be elected as in previous years and the Turf Club hold a guiding hand to them as they do in the case of up-country meetings. The Club could still be the same as regards gentlemen riders, and the programmes arranged on the usual lines. We quite agree with the idea of doing away with the bookies out there under these circumstances and think it would improve the racing. The totalisator would work very well without the books, as most of the betting is done in ten rupees a time. But where the public kick is at having to lose 10 per cent. of their money before they start. It would pay the Club well to work for 5 per cent., one would think, if the competition of the books were withdrawn.

The Doncaster race-course is shortly to be much improved by the provision of a straight mile and alterations to the existing St. Leger course—the plans for which have been approved by the Jockey Club.

Mr. C. G. Assheton Smith's Cackler has been scratched for the Grand National Steeplechase which is to be run to-morrow. His chances were greatly fancied in the race and in the latest betting wired out from Home he stood favourite at 9 to 1 against.

Our Bombay correspondent writes :—The two days' racing this week have been rather disastrous to punters who has failed to find safety in long cards. Divisions are usually necessary in the races for new Arabs, mostly out to try and prove themselves worth their feed, and they generally give us a good thing or two, though the proverbial uncertainty of this particular class prevents most from plunging.

A disastrous race was the first for the 13-3's, in which Jumbud and Compact were most in demand, but both were very badly left with Turcs Cap. Had there been a better known boy up on Fado, there is no doubt he would have started at least second favourite. The boy now has the distinction of having his name put up instead of plain Native, and Fahad on this, and other performances when placing, is on the way to becoming a safe one to back. Kaswar and Siberia were passed entering the straight, and Fado won with a bit in hand though Reaper's late run gives great promise.

Regiment in the next, however, turned out to be the good thing he looked according to the betting. There was a smattering for Revolver, still seemingly unable to reproduce his marvellous track form and subsequently sold to Mr. Ali bin Talib, and Injas and Occident were up all through, William Tell unable to stay, but once Regiment came up to them it was evident they would have to be content with placing.

The older midgets were quite a smart lot, and on his late finish on Saturday, Saree warmed to equal favourite with Plassy. These two made a great race of it for well over a furlong on displacing Hishan and Defence. Patiently ridden Plassy just had enough left to win by a head, whereas Shanwar getting within half a length of them suggests that he would have been dangerous had he come a bit earlier. He was recently thought to be a bit stale, and a short rest appears to have brought him on again.

There was nothing standing out on form in the first division of the other maiden race for new ones, Bushoosh being the rage till money came for Braganza and Sir Hugo. Braganza shut up on reaching the bend though appearing to be going well and Bushoosh and Kishra joined Behrin. The three were at it hard all the way to the post, but none of them had a hope with Sir Hugo. He won on his own, and again the fact that plain Native was up put most people off; it was Fahad again, however.

Something warm in the second half materialised though: this being Guinea Gold, a flier over a sprint distance. A strong call came for Rustom-i-Hind, and the pair were together all the way clear in front of Sir Foote. Mujeed was as impatient as ever to bring out his whip, which he used for over the last quarter mile,

DOG MEDICINES
MAY NOW BE OBTAINED IN INDIA
in CALCUTTA from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO.,
And in BOMBAY from TREACHER & CO., Ltd.

These preparations are based on the most recent and up-to-date veterinary research, and are the best possible remedies for the various ailments and diseases for which they are recommended.
It is of the greatest importance in treating all cases of sickness in dogs that the nature of the ailment should be recognised, and in order to enable dog owners to do this we have published a book,
"HINTS TO DOG OWNERS"
(ILLUSTRATED),
which is now the standard work of reference in thousands of kennels in the United Kingdom, where it has had a larger circulation than any book on dogs ever published, the demand for it being so great that more than 200,000 copies have been disposed of. It may be obtained gratis on application to either of the above-mentioned firms in India, and everyone interested in dogs should make a point of obtaining a copy at once.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR DOGS.
These Capsules are tasteless and odourless, and are the surest and safest means of expelling both Round and Tape Worms from dogs (or puppies three months old or over) weighing 10lb. or more. They require no purgative medicine afterwards. May be easily given wrapped up in a piece of meat or cheese.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR PUPPIES AND TOY DOGS.
Every puppy at six weeks old should be dosed with these Capsules which may be safely given to even the smallest and most delicate toy puppy. They surely expel all Worms and never cause the least discomfort. Castor oil is not required before or after giving them, and it is not necessary for the puppy to fast before being dosed.

SHERLEY'S "SKIN CURE."
An absolutely unrivalled dressing for Mange, Eczema, Ringworm, and all other Skin Diseases of dogs. It cures Mange for certain in a week, and not only cures the disease but starts an immediate and vigorous growth of hair.

SHERLEY'S "DISTEMPERCURE."
The best remedy for Distemper ever discovered; it reduces the fever and creates an appetite. In each tin are full instructions as to nursing and dieting, on which the cure of Distemper depends so much.

SHERLEY'S "SHAMPOO."
A Liquid Soap for Washing Dogs. It penetrates the hair, which it cleanses much better than any solid soap and in less than half the time.
It removes dandruff, stimulates the growth of hair, and gives the coat a healthy, glossy appearance.
It also prevents Eczema, and destroys Fleas and all other insects.

and in doing so was unable to go the shortest way round. More coolness would undoubtedly have won him the race, but as it was Guinea Gold got there. Rassmosum was third, and the way he was finishing found him many friends.

On his Big Meeting form, when he made all the running and finished third, the wind-sucking St. Patrick was odds on for the Selling Plate from Mafoota and Flaneur. It was the unbacked one, Oldham, who made the pace and very nearly stayed out. St. Patrick was beaten to the world, well before the bend, and Oldham still had a big advantage when Mafoota put in his run and brought home the goods by a neck in poor time.

Quite a fair class went in the long Arab races though it was disappointing to see Famous omitted, as many were waiting to back him. Parliament was favourite at threes, good money for Young Salanic, Hoodaib and Eed. Parliament, Alma and Dhafer made the pace in turn, the lastnamed keeping it from Dhafer to the home turn: Parliament passed him here and went away like a winner. He had to contend with Dumra still though, and the latter bore out the impression made by his run last time by staying the favourite out. Eed finished well, beating Thaboor for a shop.

His second to Real Blood made Jassus a warm thing for the six furlongs, but getting a poor run he even missed a place. Prime Minister made the running on suffrance from Afreed, who once he came to the front was never seriously troubled, though Muzloom came strong just in front of Sun Sun. Everyone was of course kicking himself for not backing the winner on the Poona form, but he is one of those who has got the name for being erratic.

There were nine races on Saturday, and again some hot things went down, though the handicapping did not prevent a couple of warm favourites amongst the fresh batch winning. We again opened badly when Prosperity was made an even money chance in a field of seven, but being left could only place. Grand Master was neglected, though well spoken of previously, but getting out in front was never displaced and won easily.

Three races were made of the Nursery Plate, and the first of them undoubtedly provided the good thing of the day. Of the thirteen runners, Abdul Malik was at six to four, sevens bar one. There was no mistake about it either, as he won from pillar to post by four lengths. Young Thara seems a hard one to keep straight, but he beat Occident for second place, Karrar fourth rather badly treated.

In very much poorer time, the second lot made a better race of it, Padsha and Kahtan most in demand. The former was most unlucky, as just as he was coming through on the rails Kahtan, Fado and Luah securely jammed him in. Kahtan was consequently in a very nice position, but it took all Southall's driving power to keep him in front of Yabir, who emerged from the ruck and came with a great dash on the outside.

The third saw Guinea Mohur on his recent win a steady favourite and Regiment gradually decreasing in price. Rocksand gave the former a lead to the three where Guinea Mohur promised to win on his own. Regiment had got away poorly, and fast as he came it was too late when he eventually got through. It is my opinion he should have won, and that Akseer got his place after what happened to him shows him a good one to follow religiously.

Everything pointed to Crossbred as being unbeatable in a field of third-raters for the Spring Plate, but a strong commission came for Lancasterite, which was surprising after her defeat by Devereux in bad Arab time. With her light weight Lancasterite was taken to the front, gave way to Lachlan and passed him again at the half mile. Nearing the bend Crossbred began to move on and on entering the straight collared the leader. He did not suggest being all out, so it was a surprise to see Lancasterite just keep her head in front all the way to the post. 2-14 was better time than one could have given her credit for doing, and Crossbred must be clean off.

Fair second-raters went for the Lanowli Plate, and on the fact that Thaboor is better over the couple of furlongs shorter journey he was equal favourite with Zinfandel, on the latter's second to Gafal. The books scored tremendously as neither got a place. Except for half a mile between the seven and three when Desert King was there, Young Salanic made all the pace. Hamayoon was with him for the last three furlongs but could not catch him. Both were well backed, but just when all seemed over Well Done put in an appearance and pipped them by a neck. It was a great finish in marvellous time compared with the winner's recent races, and nobody was sure of how they would be placed till the numbers went up.

With all his weight, War Cloud won so easily at any part of the journey the previous week that he was made a hot favourite for the hunters' mile. Bramble was slippiest at the gate from War Cloud, Bess and Tragedian, Better Luck badly left. At the five the first three were dead level, and at the three Tragedian closed with them. On completing the turn, Tragedian drew out and literally cantered home. This was somewhat of a surprise after his last run, maybe more work on the course has made the difference. It was alleged that the rider, Mr. Gove, was not eligible as a bona-fide member of the Hunt, and an objection was lodged by the owner of War Cloud, who only got second owing to Captain Alderson pulling up on Bramble. One is glad to say this was over-ruled.

Hurgon came to the rescue of backers in the Garegaon Plate, he being backed to six to four in a field of thirteen, though his last run by no means justified such confidence. The public, however, is usually satisfied to follow a strong lead without going into details, and they scored. Lookman with all his 10-3 was heavily supported, but getting away poorly was never in it. Mumbra was likely to be most dangerous, but, being the recipient of a bad bump, could not do himself full justice although he could have no chance with Hurgon. Vedas ran a very good horse, Zari falling back, but once Hurgon was asked he went away very comfortably.

An extraordinarily misplaced boom on Lasata, who in the race was all out to finish near the field at all, cost the public a good deal of money. He wound up a better favourite than Lord Carlyon, and this one too only ran as he has done on almost every occasion. Twice Lord Merv has finished in front of him, and now one of the same stable repeated the performance. Lord Carlyon assumed a three-length lead from Mary B. and entered the straight pulling double. Winsome moved up before the bend, caught him a furlong from home and had him settled.

In connection with the Bombay Gymkhana Lawn Tennis Tournament, the final of the important Marryat Cup came off on Friday. This was won last year by Captain T. C. Lucas, and as he was not meeting any better class players than he did then, it was only what was expected when he repeated the performance. He had a tough one in A. H. Glendenning to meet in the semi-final, when he lost the first set at 6—2. From then, however, his superior steadiness asserted itself, and one is inclined to think the ease of that game was the undoing of Glendenning in the next two. They were keenly fought, but Lucas got home by 6—4, 6—4.

Brooke, who met him in the final, had had an easier time of it, as in D. Reid he met a player clean off colour, beat England comfortably and then got a walkover.

As all through, the form shown in the final was not brilliant though at times each put in some very fine shots. Though it went to 7—5 before he won the first set, Lucas always had the appearance of a winner. He was very erratic at the start and fumbled easy chances, but his general play was superior and he gave Brooke no end of work. Brooke played gamely to the finish, dashed about and got up shots which seemed out of the question, but he was done to a turn half way through the second set, Lucas winning this also by 6—3.

The European Amateur Billiard Championship of the Bombay Presidency came to a close at Pyrke's Saloon this week. Messrs. Hallam and Young have been well up to their usual form, no new comers turning up to stretch the old stagers. It was a good game, fairly level and full of capital bits of play with breaks well up to what is expected in such an event. Hallam played a very steady game all the way and was always in a winning position, though a break of 93 by his opponent made the issue at a time very open. He, however, pegged away with useful items and ran out with the score:—

Mr. Hallam	...	...	... 500
Mr. Young	...	...	... 415

Hallam's best were 48, 39, 38, 36, 35 and 31, Young's being 93, 37, 29, 27, 26 and 24.

The Championship was won last year by Mr. Monk, but he does not seem to be in as good form now.

Our Bangalore correspondent, writing on the 12th instant, says:—The Annual Tennis Tournament, in connection with the Gymkhana Club, opened on the Cubbon Park Courts on Monday afternoon, and judging from the progress made in playing off ties the Tournament should close by Wednesday, the 16th, the advertised date.

The entries this year have been quite up to the average of previous years, the Ladies' Singles and Mixed Doubles not showing any improvement. Mrs. White had unfortunately to scratch, after winning her first round in the Mixed Doubles, with Mr. Copeland against Major Macquoid and Mrs. Clarke, as she was leaving the station; so that the Ladies' Singles has now resolved itself into a match between Miss Anderson (—15) and Mrs. Sargent (—30), the latter being strong favourite. Captain Tovey and Mrs. Ley (—$\frac{3}{6}$) and Captain Sargent and Miss Angelo (scr.) are left in for the final in the Mixed Doubles, and I am sure everybody would be glad to see the latter couple win, as they ought to.

In the Men's Handicap Matches the third round was not completed up to yesterday evening, and they have also not completed the third round in their Doubles. A start was made yesterday afternoon in the Open Singles when three matches were decided.

Captain Sargent, S. and T. Corps, who is running the Tournament this year (and playing as well), has certainly deserved the credit of all concerned for the arrangements he has made in carrying the programme through without undue delay. He was very unlucky last year (when Captain Scott, I.M.S., ran the show) in being knocked out in the finals in no less than three events, and I am sure his friends will be gratified to see him coming out more successfully this time, as he is standing in yet for all the events in which he is competing.

We are to have an afternoon's racing on Easter Monday, 28th instant, for which Mr. Dibben, A.V.C., is framing a programme of seven items, one of which, I hear, is to be an event specially for the Mounted Section of the Bangalore Volunteers. It is hoped that Mr. Dibben will revive the Gymkhana Sports meetings, which have not been held for a long time now.

The Tournament for the Spencer Challenge Football Cup is now in full swing at the British Soldiers' Club. The 2nd Q.O. Cameron Highlanders have taken the place of the 1st Sherwood Foresters in the field; otherwise, there are no changes in the entries. Play in the first round began on Thursday, the 3rd instant, when the 76th Battery, R. F. A., met and defeated "C" Company of the Highlanders by 2 goals to nil. It was a fairly level game throughout, the gunners obtaining their second goal from a penalty kick towards the end of the game. In the next match, played on Monday, 7th instant., "A" and "D" Companies of the Highlanders were opposed to each other; this was also an interesting game, "A" Company winning by 2 goals to 1. On Tuesday afternoon "A" Squadron of the 14th Hussars tried conclusions with "F" Company of the Camerons and wiped them out by 3 goals to nil, Piper netting the ball in the first half and Spencer and Piper again getting a goal each in the second half. In Thursday's game the contending teams were the 81st

Battery, R. F. A., and "E" Company of the Highlanders, when the Infantry men were once more defeated, the Battery scoring 2 goals to nil, Stringer being responsible for the first and Smith the second goal. The first round is expected to continue until Thursday, the 17th instant.

The final game in the Subalterns' Polo Tournament at Umballa produced a most exciting struggle between the 12th Lancers and the 10th Hussars, two extra periods having to be played to decide the match. Victory eventually rested with the Hussars by 3 goals to 2.

The Bombay Jackal Club will hold their annual Point to Point races on Monday the 21st instant, when in addition to the Bombay Hunt Cup, Bombay Pony Hunt Cup, and open Point to Point race for horses and ponies, there will be a jumping competition for each class.

The Pioneer states that the polo team, which Count Jean de Madre will take Home with him, will be composed of the following well-known players:—Mr. Palmes, 10th Hussars; Captain Barrett, 15th Hussars; Mr. Leslie Cheape, King's Dragoon Guards; Major Mathew Lannowe, 4th Dragoon Guards, (already in England;) and Count Madre himself. Count Madre has purchased and is taking with him twelve first-class Australian ponies from different teams to augment his stud in England. The team will play in Paris and at Hurlingham and will later visit America. The Maharajah of Cooch Behar is organising a separate Indian team which, provided sufficient funds are subscribed, it is proposed to take to Hurlingham and also to America.

A conspicuous feature of the forthcoming International Horse Show at Home will be the jumping competitions. The jumps introduced should be of interest to promoters of gymkhanas and sports in this country. At the International Show there will be 18 jumps; but these will not all be introduced into the ring at the same time. In each competition there will be eight jumps, three of which will have to be taken twice—making 11 in all. Four lorries, each horsed by six picked horses from Lord Lonsdale's stables at Lowther, with postilions and outriders will bring the jumps into the ring, and a staff of assistants will place them in position in five minutes time; so that little time will be lost in transforming the ring from a riding into a jumping enclosure. The most difficult of the jumps last year was found to be the "railway crossing" representing an ordinary crossing with closed gates and a double track between. This feature will be retained in the show, as will also the triple bar jump, which has the appearance of being easy to negotiate, but is one of the jumps over which most of the competitors have come to grief in former shows. A very popular jump will doubtless be the toll gate, which is somewhat higher than an ordinary gate, and to which the addition of a turnpike lodge lends a certain spectacular effect. There will also be an Irish bank with a fence immediately at the bottom of the slope, so that a horse will have no opportunity of collecting himself on the slope before taking the fence. The gates utilized for the jumps have been altered so that they may be raised or lowered according to the necessities of the competitions. They vary from 4 feet 6 inches to 6 feet in height. The wide jump, which has been omitted for the past two years, will again be introduced. It will consist of 12 feet of water, with a fence capable of being moved b... foot by foot until the competition is concluded

The perfection lately attained in the manufacture of large bore magazine rifles will cause the demand for doubles to become steadily smaller. It will be remembered that a few years ago it was declared to be an impossibility to make large calibre, high power, cordite rifles in magazine form, sufficiently light and handy for practical use. Now we have Messrs. Westley Richards' 425 Magnum Magazine Rifle weighing only 9 lbs., with a muzzle velocity of 2,350 f.s., and a muzzle energy of over 5,000 ft. lbs.

Such a rifle while powerful enough for all kinds of large game, costs half the price of a double, while it possesses the superior accuracy of the single, with its much smaller liability to damage from the effects of rough usage.

It is in fact hard to understand what possible inducements a sportsman can find in these days to purchase a double rifle.

"Fleur-de-Lys" writes:—I lately had the pleasure of attending a most interesting lecture on bird photography. The lecturer explained that his extraordinarily successful photographs were entirely achieved by careful concealment, combined with unlimited patience. I believe that the photography of some of the Indian birds in their natural state, would afford far less difficulty than similar photography at Home. Some of the Indian birds are so confiding, that arrangements for getting them within range of the camera would offer a comparatively easy problem. In a large compound, one could make any desired corner sacred to photography, and set up a permanent hiding place. Delightful pictures might be made of the little palm squirrels, doves, seven sisters, and so on, without any very terrible amount of trouble.

A year or two ago there was much discussion at home with regard to bird pests. It is now said that the need is being felt more and more widely for a comprehensive and systematic inquiry into the habits of English birds as affecting agriculture and fisheries, which would be carried out most fitly by the Government Board which presides over those national industries. It is increasingly repugnant to all intelligent feeling to persecute any kind of bird unless its mischievousness to material interests is both grave and clearly proven; while there is good reason for believing that certain species which have had a bad name more or less generally attached to them in the past may be positively helpful to man. On the other hand, partly owing to the closer observation of birds' habits, but partly to the changes in those habits under new conditions, some kinds of birds which were formerly regarded as harmless, or actually beneficial, are now known to be often mischievous. If the cultivation of any district is greatly changed, or if the numbers of a species increase much beyond their previous limits, a disturbance of Nature's balance may be set up of the same kind that often occurs more acutely when a European bird, animal, or plant is acclimatized in another continent. The sparrow has become hardly less hated in the United States than the rabbit in Australia; while the starling, which was introduced into Victoria as a "Farmer's Friend," has become a far greater pest of fruit plantations than it has lately in any part of England, though its record there has also much changed for the worse in this respect. A beginning has been made in the work of acquiring the necessary knowledge by the appointment in 1908 of the Economic Ornithological Committee of the British Association. The ways of the starling, the rook and the chaffinch have been studied and it has been found that whilst all three attack fruit or seeds and thereby render themselves a nuisance to mankind, they also confer great benefit by consuming insect pests.

The finest pair of caribou antlers in our national collection have been presented to the Natural History Museum, South Kensington, by Sir Robert Harvey. They measure 58 inches in length. The two largest caribou antlers perviously exhibited there measured 57⅝ inches and 57¼ inches respectively, the latter having been given by Mr. F. C. Selous. The largest pair on record, however, measure 62 inches, and are in the collection of Sir Edmund Loder.

We would draw the attention of our shikari readers to the letter appearing further on inviting sportsmen to destroy a pack of wolves which is causing a panic in the Hazaribagh district. A reward of Rs. 50 is offered for each full-grown wolf destroyed and full directions as to transit etc. are set forth. The approaching Easter holidays should afford local sportsmen an opportunity to undertake the destruction of this pack.

News reaches us from Madras that Sir Wilfred Peek, who is on a shooting tour in South India, was mauled by a leopard at Devala near Ootacamund last Saturday. Khubber of a tiger kill was brought to him and he went to the place to discover a leopard in possession. He wounded the beast and it disappeared into the undergrowth. The animal could be seen from a tree into which Sir William climbed to get another shot giving his rifle to his shikaris to hold, when the leopard charged and the shikari bolted with the rifle. The leopard jumped a height of 8 feet and mauled Sir Wilfred in the leg before he was shot by Mr. Collins, who was of the party. The injured sportsman was conveyed to hospital at Ooty where he has every attention and is reported to be progressing favourably. Sir Wilfred Peek, it will be remembered, was formerly on the staff of Lord Ampthill.

Mr. Alexander Mann, who recently won the Amateur Golf Championship of India, has sent in his entry for the British Championship, fixed to take place at Hoylake in June. We wish our champion every success in the competition.

The annual general meeting of the Calcutta Rowing Club was held at the Strand Road Boat House last Thursday when the following officers were elected for the season:- The Hon. In the final of the competition for the Punjab Chief Court Golf Cup, played at Lahore on Thursday afternoon, Mr. Cornah beat Captain Dunlop by 5 up and 3 to play. The game was fairly level for the first half, but later the winner played a fine game with the result stated.

The Murray Football Tournament has been won by the Highland Light Infantry. They beat the Black Watch in the final at Lucknow on the 4th instant. Details in our next issue.

The Punjab Lawn Tennis Tournament is now in progress at Lahore. We hope to have a complete report next week.

The Punjab Trades Cup Football Tournament commenced at Lahore on the 14th instant when two games were played. In the first the 2nd Gordon Highlanders beat the 17th Lancers by a goal to nil and in the other game the North Staffords, who are holders of the Cup, defeated the North-Western Railway by 2 goals to nil.

Battling Nelson, the light-weight boxing champion of the world, with whom Freddy Welsh has long been endeavouring to fix up a contest, has recently lost the title to Adolph Wolgast of Michigan. These champions recently met at Port Richmond, California, when Nelson was beaten into helplessness by the Dutchman, the fight being stopped by the referee in the fortieth round. We are expecting a full report in time for our next issue.

The final game in the Lansdowne Football Tournament was played at Rawalpindi on the 11th instant, "H" Company 5th Fusiliers defeating V. Battery R.H.A. by 3 goals to 1.

H.E. the Viceroy has again presented a handsome silver cup to the Barrackpore Club for a golf competition. Entrants have to play two declared qualifying medal rounds under handicap, the eight lowest aggregate scores to compete in the further rounds by match play. Majors Lethbridge and Foote, Captain Lord Francis Scott and Messrs. W. O. Grazebrook, J. W. Orr, W. K. Haughton, F. A. Goward and G. E. H. Beaman have qualified.

The records for 120 yards, 11½secs., and 150 yards. 14⅘secs., which were put up by R. E. Walker, the champion sprinter, were sanctioned by the Scottish Amateur Athletic Association at their annual meeting.

The race for the 100 yards professional championship of the world was won at Johannesburg on the 19th ultimo by Donaldson, followed by Postle and Halway in the order named. The winner's time is declared to have been 9⅘secs., which certainly would constitute a world's record.

The Amateur Athletic Association's Championships will again be held in London this year. In the ordinary way the fixture should have taken place in the North of England, but in consideration of 25 per cent. of the net profits going to the Northern Counties Athletic Association to be devoted towards defraying the expenses of the northern entrants, the north waived its right of venue.

The Olympic Games proposed to be held in Athens this year have been abandoned owing to the political situation in Greece. These must not be confounded with the International Olympic Festival which will next be held in Stockholm in 1912. The Greeks hold a special Olympic festival of their own in Athens every four years, the last having been brought off in 1906.

The fourth Test match between England and South Africa ended last week in a win for South Africa by 4 wickets. The final Test resulted in a win for England. Batting first they made 406 for 7 wickets when stumps were drawn on the opening day, but only added 11 runs before they were all disposed of on resuming. Hobbs contributed 187 and Rhodes 77, the first wicket partnership of Hobbs and Rhodes realising 221, which is a record for the Test matches. South Africa were all out for 103 in their first innings, Blythe taking 7 wickets for 46. Following on they made 102 for 3 wickets when stumps were drawn. Continuing the next day they ran their total to 327, Faulkner being responsible for 99. England then went in again and scored 16 for 1 wicket, winning by 9 wickets. South Africa thus won the first, second and fourth Tests, England the third and last. Appended are the results of the M.C.C. tour :—

Match vs. XVI. of Cape Town at Cape Town. Drawn.
Western Provinces at Cape Town. Won by an innings and 133 runs.

Queenstown and N. E. Districts (15), at Queenstown. Won by an innings and 63 runs.
Eastern Province, at Port Elizabeth. Won by an innings and 139 runs.

Transvaal, at Johannesburg. Won by 50 runs.
South Africa, at Johannesburg (third Test match). Won by 3 wickets.
South Africa, at Cape Town (fourth Test match). Lost by 4 wickets.
South Africa, at Cape Town (fifth Test match). Won by 9 wickets.

The average Briton would probably elevate his nose pretty considerably were he invited to partake of hens' eggs "rising 41 years" at breakfast. Nevertheless, a number of guests at a breakfast given by the Royal Zoological Society, Dublin, a few days ago regaled upon eggs over forty years old, which were brought from China by Sir Charles Ball. We are not altogether surprised to hear that a few of the more delicately constituted guests declined to partake of the somewhat over-ripe "bonne bouche" placed before them. Those less faddy, however, tackled their eggs with courage worthy a better cause, and when they had sufficiently recovered from the ordeal pronounced them as being far superior in flavour to the ordinary run of Dublin shop-soiled eggs. It seems that an egg, after 40 or 50 years' careful and, we presume, special conservation, becomes gelatinous and of very delicate flavour.

How to obtain the necessary exercise to keep fit is a question which often worries the busy man. Such a man will be glad to learn that all the exercise an ordinary healthy man needs can be had in two or three minutes by simply running up and down the stairs of his own house. This short but hard exercise will do as much for the lungs and muscles as a quarter of an hour's sharp walk on the flat. A London doctor who is almost exclusively employed in prescribing for the ailments of business men remarked that a staircase form of exercise is excellent for developing sound lungs, but highly dangerous for persons whose lungs are weak or diseased. "The lungs," he said "will never expand if one's breathing is always normal. A great amount of tissue is unemployed and will remain unemployed, unless special efforts are made to exercise it. A sharp 100 yards sprint in the fresh air is the best way to exercise the spare lung tissue, but a sprint in a crowded street would make one as conspicuous as the 'Discontented Sugar Broker' of the 'Bab Ballads.' But there are stairs everywhere. Most men can manage to give five minutes to running up the stairs before breakfast. The flat dweller will have no trouble in finding a staircase. The mouth should always be kept closed whilst you are actually running up the stairs, so as to compel deep breathing at the end of it. It takes quite ten times as much effort for a man to raise himself a foot vertically as to go a foot along a level road, so to run up 100 six inch steps is equal to a hard sprint of nearly 170 yards. But it is no exercise for a man who has any doubt about his internal organs. It should never be attempted by men who are not physically sound."

From statements sometimes heard one might imagine that the financial cost of aeroplaning was not now great. But this is hardly the case. The apparent backwardness of aeroplaning in Great Britain has given rise to some strange misconceptions as to the cause. It is not lack of courage on the part of fliers or even the undoubted lack of proper and convenient flying-grounds, so much as the cost of aviation, that compels many would-be fliers to stand down, and limits the experiments of others. Unless the aviator is a skilled mechanician he must employ one continuously, and also some assistants. The initial cost of an aeroplane that will actually fly is about £600 or £700. A shed will cost another £100, and the stock of tools and replacements necessary for the ceaseless repairs involved in experimental flights with involuntary descents means another £100. It is plain, therefore, that the ordinary individual must put down £1,000 before he can begin to fly. But the risk of damage during the course of experimental or competitive work is so great that, if the aviator would wish to be able to fly whenever conditions are favourable, he must have two aeroplanes. Every time he comes to earth he may safely assume that a couple of sovereigns worth of work will be required to readjust and repair the 'plane. So taking one consideration with another, the aviator's lot, like the policeman's, is not a happy one —financially.

London Week by Week

London, Friday, 25th February 1910.

I have just returned from a fine, inspiriting spectacle, to wit the Shire Horse Show and I have a tendency to glow with national pride in our horse flesh. Other horse shows may wax or wane, but the Shire Horse obviously waxes all the time and flourishes with exceeding greatness. The king, many of the nobility, the big landowners and an ever-increasing number of farmers support the show with exhibits and the public which gazes on the results grows annually larger. This year the class throughout was magnificent; I doubt if the two-year-old stallions have ever been equalled. One exhibit I must signal out for special mention. In the middle of one of the finest classes of shire horses ever seen stood a conspicuous example of the black warhorse, such as was used in English battles 600 years ago. He had no white, while every other horse was stockinged with white. The fine "feathers"—which, in modern English opinion, make fine horses—touched the ground, and began to grow in many specimens well above the knee. "If it was not for those feathers and those white stockings," said a foreign purchaser, "there would be no horse in the world like it." It is a serious question whether English admiration for stockings and feathers is not much overdone, in view of such foreign opinion, which is almost universal. There is much to be said for the old black warhorse.

Mr. A. F. Walter, of the Times, died early this week, aged sixty-four. He was the head of the family which has for four generations controlled the paper founded by his great-grandfather. Some years ago, when the Times became a Company, the deceased, who had been Chief Proprietor, accepted the position of Chairman. He was a barrister, but never practised.

A little more horse talk. The noble animile, after being rather severely repressed by society for something like five years, seems to have a chance of coming to the front once more. People are evincing an inclination to cool off motoring on all and every occasion, so the horse again figures prominently in situations from which he has for long been a comparative exile. I read that motor-cars are regarded as indispensable for long journeys and visits to theatres, and the trade in them is booming, but for drives in the Park and afternoon calls many ladies now prefer to use a horse-carriage.

"Ladies are getting tired of concealing their pretty dresses and faces," writes Mr. Vero Shaw, the editor of the Horse World. "When they travel in motor-cars they put their heads in bags and wear motor-cloaks, and their appearance is far from prepossessing. They are now taking kindly to horses again, and this year will see a distinct revival in this direction. Already there is an increase in the number of horsed vehicles to be seen in Hyde Park, while many more lady riders are seen in the Row than was the case last year. When motor-cars were first introduced people regarded them as an exclusive luxury and sold their horses, but nowadays anybody can get the handsomest motor-car for £1,000 or £1,200, so there is not that marked distinction in regard to them which there was formerly. Ladies like to be admired and envied, and they realise that the possession of a well-matched pair of high-action horses enables them to display their hats and dresses to the best advantage." Evidently Mr. Vero Shaw's knowledge of the fair sex rivals his extensive and peculiar acquaintance with veterinary matters.

A motor-car is indispensable when one wants to travel fast, but for appearance, for absence of vibration, and for cleanliness, the horse carriage is undoubtedly the superior vehicle. Horses are now in great demand, and prices have risen. A first-rate English carriage horse costs from £150 to £300, while a pair of horses, well-matched in colour and of good action, cannot be bought for less than £500 or £600. An exceptionally good pair will command the high figure of £1,000.

The deeply erudite authorities who are attending to archaeological matters for the promoters of the forthcoming Festival of Empire, at the Crystal Palace, have made the arresting discovery that Magog was a woman, the doubtless beloved wife of Gog. If she was also his better half in a physical sense, she must have been a fine figure of a woman I should think, for Gog was no chicken, if tradition may be trusted. The other day the offices of the Festival of Empire, in St. James's Street, were besieged by giants and giantesses competing for the honour of representing Gog and Magog in the show. One of them, a youngster of nineteen, had 7 feet 3 inches to his credit, not to mention a weight of nineteen stone; and there was a dainty lady of 6 feet 7 inches also in attendance. It would seem that the historic giants, so indissolubly connected with the City, are likely to be worthily personated.

All musical London flocked to Covent Garden last Saturday to assist at the first rendering of Dr. Strauss's "Elektra." It was a memorable for though the plot tends to confirm the opinion that the home life of the early Greeks essentially lacked repose—a point which the composer has considered it his painful duty to emphasise—musical London has spoken with no uncertain voice and the opera has been hailed as a masterpiece.

Curiosity was aroused by the reports of wierd effects to be produced by the orchestra, some of them on instruments hitherto unknown—the hacklephone, the tuba, birch brooms and whips—and these seemed to suggest awful possibilities. We were told that drums would be lashed with whips and beaten with the birch. Another effect would be produced by striking the strings of the violins with the backs of the bows. These, with the roaring of thunder and the rushing of wind, were to constitute a more exacting musical test than a London audience has hitherto been called upon to undergo. But the "hacklephone" proved to be a very peaceful instrument and the flagellation of the drums was quite painless. Strauss's whole conception of the ancient tragedy is Titanic—there is no other word for it—Titanic. His mastery of the orchestra we all know; in the present instance his instrumentation is more daring than ever, his vocal writing more complex, but the blending of the two is as near perfection as has probably ever been achieved.

Out of the ordered chaos of the orchestra the voices rang clearly, and, curiously enough, much of the music seemed strangely lyrical. There are many moments of ecstatic melody—moments of poignant emotion—pregnant with sorrow, joy, and hate. It was a feast for musical epicureans.

Technically speaking the music sounds the last note in modernity. One came away from the opera house wondering what can follow "Elektra." Can music go further, or must there be a retrograde movement towards simplicity? Meanwhile we have "Elektra." All honour is due to Mr. Beecham for his courage in producing such a colossal work. How the singers managed to commit the music to memory is a matter for amazement. The vocal music is quite the most difficult ever written, and Mme. Edyth Walker's Elektra was a magnificent tour de force from a dramatic and vocal point of view. The Chrysothemis of Miss Frances Rose was hardly less admirable, as the part is scarcely less arduous. Frau von Mildenberg made a tragic picture of the ghost-haunted queen, Clytemnestra, and made a great impression in her great scene with Elektra. The men have little to do, and did it well Herr Weidmann as Orestes and Mr. D'Oisley as Ægistheus being especially prominent. The orchestra was worthy of all praise. In fact, it was a never-to-be-forgotten night.

A famous figure, absent from the stage for something like twenty years, is shortly to make its reappearance. This is no other than Psycho, Mr. Maskelyne's wonderful automaton, who is due at St. George's Hall in a fortnight's time. Psycho first faced the public in 1875. After playing 4,000 games of whist, and showing quite as much intelligence as the average human player, Psycho unfortunately began to develop signs of interal trouble; in other words, it became clear to his inventor that the delicate inward mechanism of his protege demanded immediate attention. Not having the requisite time for the overhauling of the works, Mr. Maskelyne put the figure away for twenty years. A twelve month back he took it from its resting-place, and during the interval he has been busy endeavouring to restore Psycho to his original healthy condition. Now Psycho is all right again, and prepared to play a rubber, to smoke a cigarette, or to try his new powers of clairvoyance with anyone. In short, as the event may be trusted to prove, he is more marvellous and inexplicable than ever. I remember that good looking and convincing conjurer, Mr. Harry Kellar, exhibiting "Psycho" at the Theatre Royal in Calcutta in 1882, I think.

"The Balkan Princess," by Frank Curzon and Frederick Lonsdale, and which was produced on Monday, is a restaurant romance in Musical Comedy. It can boast of a plot, it is fairly convincing, the acting is good and the singing excellent. Further the lyrics are very bright and pleasing and Mr. Ruben's music is light, charming and never disappointing. The action passes in Balaria, where reigns Princess Stephanie, whose people think it unbecoming to be ruled by a woman. In order to pacify them the Princess is requested to select a husband from six of her nobles. Five the Princess repulses with scorn; the sixth, Duke Sergius, a warrior and revolutionary of renown, repulses the Princess by ignoring her to command to appear at the palace. This makes the Princess anxious to make his acquaintance. She finds the Duke at the Bohemian restaurant, but does not discover his identity until after she has allowed him to dine at her table and dance with her. This is hard, but her patience does not fail until the company raise their glasses to the downfall of the Princess of Balaria. Then she summons her guard, announces that she is the Princess, and arrests the Duke for treason.

A week later, having returned to the palace, she is offered two alternatives—she must either select one of the six nobles as a husband or she must abdicate. She chooses to abdicate, not caring that Sergius, whom she has grown to love, should have the opportunity of triumphing over her. As soon as the deed is signed, however, Sergius persuades her to accept him, and they decide to rule together in Balaria.

Those ferocious, hurricane yet withal wierdly clever actors—The Sicilians—are with us once more; they opened at the Lyric on Tuesday. The complete abandon of their acting, the sweeping storm of their passion, and their entire freedom from affection or "pose" had such an effect that even audiences largely ignorant of the language in which the wild, vivid plays of primitive instincts were performed found themselves held and thrilled.

The piece selected for the opening performance was "Feudalismo," a drama in three acts, which was made familiar by the company on their former visit. It tells a repulsive story of a simple-minded shepherd who is married by order to the mistress of the young squire of the district, and who finally kills the squire horribly enough by biting him in the throat. The scenes are made up of a series of wrangles—men are bitten, women are beaten, and all the elementary passions are let loose.

But all that is unpleasant and crude in the play is redeemed by the wonderful nature of the acting. For these swarthy people from Sicily the footlights never exist. It is all real to them—all hard, cruel, heartrending life. There is a total forgetfulness of self. The smallest parts are filled by actors who seem to feel every mood of the characters—gestures, expressions, movements, all seem to come from the heart. It is a wild, vivid, remarkable picture of a strange life that is shown.

Giovanni Grasso is again at the head of the company, and his playing as Vanni, the shepherd, was as finished and as powerful as ever. The principal actress is Marienella Bragaglia, and she is new to London. In a part that was largely an emotional storm she tore through her scenes with a depth of passion that possessed a sinister fascination. Yet here was no mere violence. Everything, one felt, came from the heart; the pale face, the flashing eyes, the nervous hands, the sob in the voice—all stood for and revealed character.

Mr. J. L. Shine, the comedian, seems to have a profitable knack of getting hurt and getting compensation. Some fifteen years ago, if my memory serves me, he got a bit shaken up in some minor railway accident at Preston: result, £250 paid by the Company without action being brought. Quite recently he tripped over a nasty, horrid batten on the stage and fell: result £1,000 damages against Moss' Empire's Limited. Quite a paying little game, isn't it?

Mr. Bernard Shaw's latest freak production is called "Misalliance;" it was put before a long suffering audience at the Duke of York's theatre last night. The avowed intention is to give the critics a bad time and on the whole the revenge is clumsily contrived. The critic is paid to endure it, the public who blunder into it have to pay. The critic can afford to pity the public and leave "B. S." to settle with those he has thoughtlessly involved in misfortune.

Nobody knows what "Misalliance" is about. Still less—to be Irish—can anyone confidently say what it is not about. It is a conversational revue. Perhaps the topic which most frequently relieves guard is the relation between parents and children. The piece contains some bright lines, which may be best extracted when the piece is published in book form.

One has heard of actors walking through their parts. Here there is more talking than walking to be done. Mr. C. M. Lowne as a self-made man in the underclothing line, with a fondness for quotation, Miss Florence Haydon as a kindly, havering old body, Mr. Frederick Lloyd as a confident but obtuse man of commerce, and Mr. Donald Calthrop as an insufferable Eugene ("Candida") on a reduced scale, had perhaps rather fatter parts than had Miss Miriam Lewes, as a highly objectionable young person, Mr. Hubert Harben as a stiff yet shrewd ex-governor of an Indian province, Mr. Charles Bryant as an adventurous young aeronaut, and Mr. O. P. Heggie as a hysterical youth. Miss Lena Ashwell, as trapeze and juggling artist, is pleasant to behold, but has not much to do or say.

Those who remember Lord Fincastle, V.C., when he was in India may be interested to hear that he has been nominated among the candidates for the London County Council. The Earl of Dunmore, as he is now called, is still as dashing, hard working and thorough as ever. But those who remember him on the polo ground or battle field will find it hard to imagine him sitting on the London County Council.

THE SUNDERBUNDS.

(Concluded.)

Though wild buffaloes are as a rule more or less agressive by nature, those found in the Sunderbunds are particularly so. As elephants cannot be made use of in these marshy forests, the number who go to seek wild buffaloes in them run a good deal of risk. Some years back Mr. White, Deputy Magistrate of Khulna, was killed by a buffalo. The animal had been wounded and was evidently lying in wait for its victim, for it suddenly charged out of the thicket: the spare gun-bearers, as is generally the case with natives, bolted, leaving the unfortunate Mr. W. at the mercy of the infuriated beast. He was impaled on its horns and carried a short distance, and when it got rid of its ghastly burden the unfortunate gentleman was past all human succour. Owing to the great danger and risk there is in circumventing these dangerous beasts, sportsmen, as a rule, are not keen to go after them on foot, but at the same time it is the only means buffaloes can be got at in the Sunderbunds, unless it be from boats, when they are to be found in some of the bhils or marshy parts. Towards the earlier part of the day and again towards the evening, herds of wild buffaloes may be seen in company of deer grazing on the fine dubh grass that grows amongst the sand dunes facing the sea. It is in such parts also that tigers usually levy toll among the deer, but seldom interfere with buffaloes as they are far too dangerous customers to be meddled with.

Rhinoceroses, though they have their habitat in the Sunderbuns, are nowhere plentiful, and one is lucky to get a shot at them. Rhinos are to be mainly found among the belt of sundree forests that run parallel to the sea shore, and by carefully following the spoor one occasionally gets a shot at these ungainly beasts; but a good deal of risk accompany the hunter while stalking in the thick undergrowth. He may be stalked himself by a tiger, who is probably on the watch for some of the deer tribe. Rhinoceroses in such cases will be found among the pools and mud holes half submerged in the muddy ooze. Towards the more northern and cultivated parts of the Sunderbunds, rhinoceroses are sometimes killed by natives by means of pitfalls dug in parts they are known to frequent, but it is on very rare occasions that they are thus caught. As I have already stated deer are still very plentiful in the Sunderbunds, and may be shot easily enough towards the more cultivated parts as they come out in the open to graze; but for shooting of this kind the hunter must be on the ground before sunrise and in such cases he must look out that he himself is not being watched by a tiger.

Native shikaris by putting up machans in suitable localities known to be frequented by deer, manage to secure a good number of these and are sure to find a good and ready market for their meat.

The proper way to do the Sunderbunds is by means of a house-boat or a budgerow having as a tender a country boat properly roofed in which may be used as a kitchen, and a dinghee might be taken in tow to shoot among the shallower parts. Steam launches are far too noisy contrivances to be successfully used. House-boats, though slow, are certainly the more to be recommended for shooting in the Sunderbunds. Such house-boats may be had, including the crew, for Rs. 4 to Rs. 5 a diem according to size and the fare Re. 1-8 to Rs. 2.

The commissariat is an item which must be carefully looked to, both as regards food as well as drink, for nothing can be had in the Sunderbunds except perhaps some fish, crabs and very inferior country vegetables, such as beans, pumpkins, etc. The fish when available are sometimes really good, as they include bekkti, bumloos, soles, etc., and the crabs are really very fine and well favoured. The Sunderbunds water is more or less brackish and unfit for drinking purposes; so a plentiful supply of good drinking water as well as aerated waters must be taken. The commissariat must include tinned provisions, such as soup, corned beef, bacon, ham, potted meats, jams, etc., etc. Of course the choice of these stores will depend a good deal on the hunter. A supply of liquor and wine must not be forgotten; and even if the hunter is a tee-totaller, a few bottles of brandy will be found indispensable. A small medicine chest or some such simple drugs as chlorodyne, essence of ginger, calomel, quinine in tabloids or pills, purgative pills, and a few other such medicines should also be taken. As trophies will have to be looked to, a supply of arsenical soap and skinning knives should be included among the indents.

With proper care and attention as to diet, good health may be kept in the Sunderbunds as well as anywhere else. The proper time to do the Sunderbunds is from the beginning of December till about the end of April, as these are perhaps the healthiest months in the Gangetic Delta.

To be on the safe side a small dose of quinine should be taken every morning and this should also be given to servants as well as to the boatmen.

The trip should last for at least a month, but this would include some of the more distant parts up to the Megna. But a couple of weeks very good outing could be had from Calcutta to Khulna by following the more southerly parts, making use of the rivers Pashar, Shibshor, Modhomatie and Jubuna and their tributaries. While still on the subject of the Sunderbunds, I may as well say that very little can be got in the way of small game, except perhaps kyas or marsh partridges and jungle fowl; but owing to the density of the cover where they are to be found, very few of them can be got at among the cold weather months. A fair number of migratory birds are to be met with but these are only to be found among some of the more open and larger rivers and along the seashores. Curlews abound and are the most common of the birds to be found in the cold weather. It is rather surprising that not more shooting trips are taken to the Sunderbunds, perhaps it is owing to there being no proper guide for such trips, and another great drawback is that no proper and trustworthy shikaris are to be had in the district. A few who call themselves as such know little or nothing about the game, and whatever khubber they can give is from mere hearsay. It is, however, to be hoped that Calcutta sportsmen will in the future give more time and attention to these vast swampy forests, where game still abound and is perhaps still as plentiful as it was half a century ago.

WOLVES IN HAZARIBAGH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "INDIAN FIELD."

DEAR SIR,—I shall be much obliged if you would be so kind as to invite sportsmen to shoot wolves in Hazaribagh. The reward is at present Rs. 50 for each full-grown wolf. Sportsmen should detrain at Kodarma, East Indian Railway (where bullock carts can be hired), and travel 12 miles south to Barhi, a considerable bazar with a resthouse (without khansama), a police thana. Supplies are obtained readily. The Barhi police has been ordered to give information as to the locality of the pack. Eleven children have been killed between the 7th and 23rd February in the tract lying between Barhi and Chowparan police station, a distance of 12 miles. The wolves hunt from early morning till noon and again from 2 P.M. till sunset. They can be best found by enquiring from the boys in charge of mixed herds of cattle and goats. The pack consists of 10 or 11 wolves. A high velocity small bore rifle is recommended. Sportsmen are advised not to attempt to ride up to the wolves. When the pack is sighted the sportsmen should send away his pony and attendants and should approach them leisurely alone. He should wear a turban and make himself look as much like a peasant as possible: the rifle should be carried as if it were a stick.

Yours faithfully,
D. E. MOOKERJI,
For Deputy Commissioner.

TESTIMONIAL:—

I had an interesting experience with one of your "Lethal" bullets the other day when out shooting with Mr.——. We came up to a crocodile about 11 feet and my friend fired at it with his ·500 Express but missed. I put one of your "Lethal" bullet cartridges into my shot gun and fired at a distance of 80 yards. The bullet penetrated and completely severed his spine and a quarter was actually found in his jaw.

The Scourge of Malaria.

The Greatest Mortality for Ten Years.

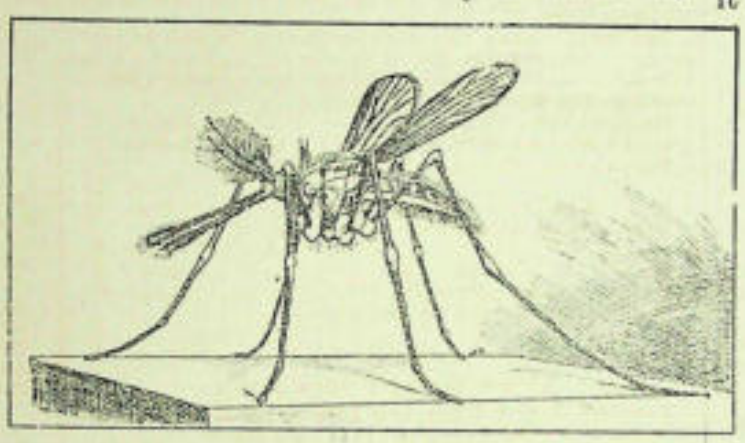
Sanatogen the Latest and Best Remedy.

At the Malaria Conference at Simla, a short time ago, it was stated that the deaths from fever during the last ten years in India averaged nearly 4,500,000 a year, while last year they were a million above the average, the increase being due to Malaria, the most depressing and dangerous of all tropical diseases

Malaria, as everyone knows, is the result of the introduction of a germ—the Malaria microbe or parasite—into the blood. As the microbe multiplies, it destroys the red colouring matter of the blood, as well as the blood itself, which becomes thin and watery. This poverty of the blood leads to impairment of the vitality of all the tissues, for they draw their nourishment from it.

The Tortures of Malaria.

The result is that the Malaria patient suffers from nervous and mental symptoms of various kinds, including loss of memory, impairment of the vision, depression of the spirits, in addition to giddiness, ringing in the ears, unrefreshing sleep, digestive disorders, a sense of lassitude which prevents work, and ever-increasing weakness, while his complexion gets paler and paler until he declines into that wasted condition of the system which doctors call "cachexia."



Admirably as quinine answers in the acute stage, it has little effect on the after-effects. Happily, science has discovered a preparation which is of supreme value at this time.

The Supreme Remedy.

This is Sanatogen, which may unhesitatingly be described as the most powerful revitalising and restorative agent known to the world. Its remarkable properties, which enable it to act like a charm in Malaria, are due to its constituents, glycero-phosphate of sodium, which contains phosphorus in the exact form in which it exists in the body, and milk proteid, the body-building element of milk. These are chemically combined so that the milk proteid is readily assimilated by the body. Indeed, it is so easily digested that it is all absorbed within an hour after it has been taken.

Phosphorus, as a famous physician has written, "is absolutely essential for the growth of what physiologists term the cells of the body, the microscopic bricks of which the human edifice is constructed." Malaria greatly interferes with this cell growth, for which reason children who are especially liable to Malaria are so often stunted in their growth, until they are given Sanatogen, when they improve rapidly.

A child whose case is recorded in the Medical Press and Circular (2nd November 1904), in consequence of Malaria, when three years old, weighed only half a pound more than when it was a year and a half.

THE LARGEST MOSQUITO IN THE WORLD.

Photograph of a model of the mosquito whose bite gives Malaria. The model is three feet high, and is in the Metropolitan Museum, New York.

It was given Sanatogen and at once began to put on weight at the average of half a pound weekly.

Exactly the same effect is seen in adults, for Sanatogen exercises a potent influence on the blood. Under the influence of this wonderful preparation, the number of red blood corpuscles rapidly increases, as does the percentage of the red colouring matter on which its vitality and its power of nourishing the body depend.

This is vividly shown in the following case recorded in the Indian Medical Gazette (December, 1906).

A patient, in a cubic centimetre of whose blood there were 3,500,000 red blood corpuscles, was given Sanatogen. In a fortnight they had risen to 4,000,000 and in a month to 4,500,000, while the red colouring matter gained at the rate of 2 per cent. a week. This is no abnormal case, for it is the common average.

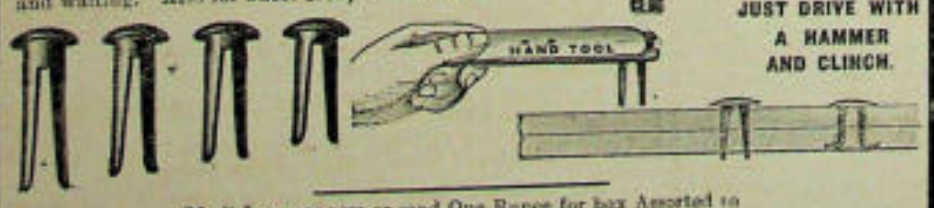
Every medical man in India has drawn attention to the value of Sanatogen in Malaria and one writer on the subject says:—"In the cachexia of this disease, Sanatogen has been found incomparably superior to any drug treatment."

The Great Preventive.

Not only does Sanatogen remove all the depressing symptoms detailed above, but it also acts as a great preventive against Malaria. On this subject, a doctor has written. "In the stage preliminary to the actual establishment of cachexia it is provedly a safe preventive." Writers in the Indian medical papers have, time after time, drawn attention to this marked feature of the remedy. Its success in nervous exhaustion, dysentery, diarrhœa, anæmia, and in numerous other conditions consequent upon exhausting illnesses has been the subject of comment in all the leading medical journals.

There is no more depressing sequel to Malaria than the premature ageing of the sufferer. This is rapidly cured by Sanatogen, and as the patient puts on flesh and all his enervating symptoms vanish he seems to grow younger and younger, until he looks and is as well as ever he was in his life.

An Interesting Pamphlet.



An exceedingly interesting pamphlet, "Malaria, Its Causes and Effects," has been written by a physician with a wide experience of this terrible complaint.

The Sanatogen Co. will distribute, free of charge, a limited number of copies to those who will send a postcard, mentioning Indian Field, addressed to The Sanatogen Company of London, care of G.P.O., Box 226, Bombay.

THE TURF.

NEWBURY.

THERE was much rain last Friday night, and a doubtful morning merged through a showery stage into a beautifully bright afternoon to finish with at Newbury on Saturday, though at one time it looked as if great coats and umbrellas would be the order of the day. It wanted a long spell of sun and wind to do any good to the course, as the paddock, preserved ever so wisely, was in a very greasy state. Results :—

BUREAU OF NATURAL HISTORY AND SCIENTIFIC TAXIDERMY,
DEHRA DUN,
United Provinces.

Depôt of Museum and Naturalists' supplies with Department for Ornamental Taxidermy, Feather Pictures of all India Game Birds made by W. M. Hutton.

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

It rained in steady fashion nearly all the second afternoon, and the fine weather came too late to save the situation. Tattersall's and the further enclosures presented a mushroom growth of umbrellas, while the members' enclosure was but sparsely patronised, and the holiday crowd limited to a very few hardy inhabitants. Fields were again of good proportions, but the going, sound enough on Monday, gradually deteriorated, the horses fairly sticking in the mud. Results :—

FOOTBALL.

BY far the most striking feature of Saturday's ties in the third round of the Association Cup was the poor figure cut by the First League clubs. Of the sixteen competitors surviving the second stage of the contest seven belonged to the First League, and there seemed good reason to expect that four or five would find places among the last eight. So far from expectations in this respect being realised, no fewer than five of the seven were knocked out, while the only two qualifying for the fourth round earned that distinction at the expense of other First Leaguers. Second League teams, on the other hand, fared extremely well, three out of four pulling through, and the only one defeated going down before another Second League club. The representatives of the Southern League, too, had no occasion for dissatisfaction, seeing that two gained victories, if one suffered defeat, while the one tie in which Southern Leaguers were opposed resulted in a draw. Altogether the results may be described as singularly interesting.

Quite the big event was the overthrow of Aston Villa by Manchester City. Unbeaten on their own ground all the season, the Villa, in the opinion of many good judges, possessed prospects second to none of carrying off the Cup, and the decisive manner in which a fortnight ago they had disposed off Derby County, the leading club in the Second League, suggested that they would experience no great difficulty in disposing of Manchester City. The one cause for apprehension on the part of the Villa consisted in the fact that in the second round the Manchester team, travelling down to Southampton, had there beaten the local club by no less than 5 to 0. Yesterday Manchester City again came out in great form, scoring the only two goals of the first half, and, although they experienced some anxious moments afterwards, winning against their famous rivals by 2 to 1. Another notable achievement was that of Coventry in knocking out Nottingham Forest. In the first instance against Preston North End at Deepdale, where so many prominent teams have been beaten this season, Coventry appeared most unlikely to get through the first round, but they succeeded where more famous sides had failed, and between that win and the victory gained yesterday, defeated Portsmouth at Fratton Park.

Matters went badly with the London clubs, Tottenham Hotspur going down at Swindon and Leyton being beaten on their own ground by Leicester Fosse. Consequently the only metropolitan team to reach the fourth round will be the winners of the tie between Queen's Park Rangers and West Ham. Tottenham possessed a great chance of victory when, after a change of ends, a penalty, enabled them to take the lead. Fleming, the international, was in great form, and not only equalised but put on a winning point for Swindon. All three goals obtained for Swindon came from the foot of Fleming. At Leyton Leicester Fosse scored within a few minutes of the start, and although often hard pressed, managed to retain the lead to the end.

Among the clubs knocked out were no fewer than five previous winner of the Cup—Blackburn Rovers Aston Villa, Tottenham Hotspur, Nottingham Forest, and West Bromwich Albion. The last-named went down before Barnsley, but only by a goal scored just at the finish of the game. Whatever the ultimate issue of the competition, the field in its later stages must present a marked change from that of last year, for among the last eight clubs left in there can be only one—Newcastle United—who earned a similar distinction twelve months ago.

In the first division of the League Chelsea gained a welcome victory, and, as it was at the expense of Middlesbrough—a club immediately below them and also in danger of reduction—it came at a very opportune moment. Their success enabled them to advance above Tottenham Hotspur and Woolwich Arsenal, but as they have played more matches than the other London clubs, their position is not perhaps so sound as is otherwise might have been. Still, the fact remains, that they have for the time being lifted themselves clear, though, like Tottenham and Woolwich Arsenal, they need to show much better form in their remaining matches if they are to be free of any anxiety towards the end of April. At the other end of the table a change took place in the leadership, Notts County, by drawing at Owlerton with Sheffield Wednesday, going to the head of the competition. They are now one point in front of Aston Villa, who were yesterday engaged in a cup-tie, but inasmuch as the Nottingham club have fulfilled three extra engagements their advantage does not really amount to very much. The most extraordinary match of the afternoon was that on the new ground of the Manchester United Club at Old Trafford, where a crowd of 45,000 people assembled. The United led at half-time by two goals to none, and later on the score was 3—1 in their favour. Then, however, Liverpool showed wonderful form, and with Goddard and Stewart getting through three times between them they snatched the game out of the fire and won by 4 goals to 3. Thus Manchester United had much the same sort of experience as Newcastle United had at St. James's Park a week previous, when, after leading the Manchester team by 3 goals to none at half-time they were defeated by 4 goals to 3. The similarity between the two matches is, to say the least, extraordinary. Bolton Wanderers could do no more than draw at home with Bradford City, but Bristol City gained two useful points by beating Preston North End.

In fixing the Amateur International match between England and Wales at Huddersfield the Football Association tried a great experiment, but their policy was justified, for nearly eight thousand people turned out to see the game. Unfortunately the match did not produce anything approaching close struggle, the English team—much stronger than that which proved successful at Aberdare a year ago by 5 goals to 2—having matters all their own way from start to finish. Fayers, who took K. R. G. Hunt's place in the English team, played a splendid game and the forwards were very good.

ASSOCIATION CUP.

THIRD ROUND.

SWINDON VS. SPURS.—The conditions at Swindon were anything but favourable to scientific football. As a consequence of the record had wheather the ground was in a thoroughly sodden state, and to add to the difficulties of the players a high south-westerly wind prevailed. The appearance of Tottenham Hotspur proved a strong attraction, and when the game was entered upon there were fully 15,000 people present. Tottenham started, and for a few minutes the Swindon defence was subjected to severe pressure. Swindon then came away, and after Jefferson had brought Joyce to his knees, Fleming scored. The point was led up to by some brilliant play on the part of Wheatcroft and Bown. Following this reverse, Tottenham Hotspur played up finely in the endeavour to get on terms, and forced several corners, but without avail. Swindon, however, were still showing great form, and Bown, after some pretty football, gave Joyce a splendid shot to save. Shortly after this Tottenham equalised. Middlemiss broke away, and beating the Swindon defence centred to Minter, who scored, the ball going in off one of the uprights. The game now became intensely exciting. Swindon took up the attack again, but Wheatcroft was pulled up for offside when he looked certain to score. Nothing more was done before half-time when the score stood at one goal each. The game reopened amid much excitement. Tottenham at once attacked, and after Middlemiss had failed to take advantage of an open goal Kay handled in the penalty area, and R. Steel put the Hotspur ahead. Swindon then pressed and were soon on equal terms, Fleming scoring with a beautiful shot after Walker had run through. Swindon immediately attacked again, their effort to obtain the winning goal being very determined, and Fleming, the hero of the match, gave them the lead. Swindon, 3: Tottenham Hotspur, 2.

QUEEN'S PARK RANGERS VS. WEST HAM UNITED.—Before a record crowd of 26,500, who paid £875 12s. for admission to Park Royal yesterday, these two clever Southern League teams played a draw of one goal each. West Ham had their strongest side in the field, but, the Rangers had Ferguson in the place of McNaught. In the first half the Rangers played with a strong wind behind them, but in their zeal they failed to keep the ball low and with it playing all sorts of tricks in the wind, their movements lost a great deal of force. Moreover, West Ham defended stubbornly. Once Travers put in a great drive which Kitchen saved brilliantly, and Webb looked like getting through was foiled by McDonald. Ferguson once hit the post and Barnes just failed to score when he turned the rebound round the post. Kitchen later saved cleverly from Ferguson, and at the interval there was no score. Seven minutes after the resumption Caldwell centered and Shea shot. The ball was fisted out by Shaw, but as it fell Webb rushed both ball and goalkeeper into the net. Webb was almost through again, and when he drove the ball in hard and low Shaw saved splendidly. The Rangers improved, but Kitchen turned out a shot by Travers. United were handicapped by having Massey "crocked" throughout the second half, and after twenty-four minutes Ferguson, when well offside, was allowed to go on and centre for Steer to head into the net. It was a goal which should not have been allowed, but the Rangers well deserved their draw. Both sides played strenuously to the end, but Hartwell and Fairman, in the respective defence, did yeoman work. Replay on Thursday at West Ham. Rangers, 1; West Ham, 1.

ASTON VILLA VS. MANCHESTER CITY.—At Birmingham before fully 35,000 spectators. Manchester won the toss, and after ten minutes opened the scoring, Steward kicking a very fine goal. The Villa then pressed strongly but failed in front of goal, and Manchester again broke away and scored through Jones. The United seemed to adapt themselves better to the heavy going than their opponents. Cowlin, who had left the field a little time previously, now returned and the Villa tried hard to make some headway, but Manchester, assisted to a great extent by the wind, were always aggressive. The Villa forwards were not up to form and several times their defence was unsteady, both Roche and Gerrish missing when very well placed. The game was really more forcible than skilful. Manchester, however, displayed great dash and Cartledge made some fine saves. At the interval Manchester were leading by two goals to nil. The second half opened with a series of attacks by Aston Villa, whose forwards, however, finished their efforts in miserable style and seldom looked like scoring. The Manchester forwards, on the other hand, often looked dangerous. Then at last Aston Villa gained a goal—Gerrish shooting through. For the remainder of the game Manchester City concentrated their efforts on defence and there was no more scoring. Manchester City, 2; Aston Villa, 1.

ENGLAND vs. WALES.—This amateur international match at Huddersfield drew a large crowd to Leeds-road, the ground of the town Midland League club, who aspire for inclusion in the Second League. Wales won the toss and chose to play with a high wind at their backs. England at once attacked, and twice faulty shooting saved the situation for the Welshmen. The English forwards combined well, but Springthorpe missed an easy chance, Evans taking the ball from his toe. In the next minute the same player had only Goodwin to beat, but missed the goal. P. C. Evans was injured and carried off the field. Then the Welsh goal had several narrow escapes, Goodwin on one occasion saving finely a header from Woodward. Berry eventual got in a nice centre, and Springthorpe headed past Goodwin after twenty minutes' play. Another centre by Berry was sent into the net by Porter. The English forwards were much cleverer and combined and controlled the ball better. Wright ran well and Porter brusted the ball into the net. The Welsh efforts were only spasmodic and ill-timed but H. Jones tested Micklethwaite. Goodwin saved brilliantly from Woodward and Porter. Wales improved but Micklethwaite was equal to all calls. Half-time England 3; Wales, 0.

There were 8,000 spectators present when the game was restarted. Wales were still without P. C. Evans, who had twisted a knee. Springthorpe, who was injured in the last minute of the first half, resumed a few minutes after the restart. England with the wind behind them taxed the Welsh defence. Goodwin saved marvellously an express shot by Berry who had run half the length of the field. Porter in the next minute beat Goodwin at close range. England continued to force the pace. Dines made a good attempt from far out. As in the first half, Fayers did magnificent work at right half, his bulldog tenacity exciting amusement. The Welsh custodian was responsible for splendid clearances. Welsh custodian was responsible for splendid clearances from Berry and Woodward. Three successive corners fell to England, who kept up their bombardment, and the Welsh goal had many narrow escapes. Berry and Woodward scored for England just on time. Result: England, 6; Wales, 0.

OXFORD vs. CAMBRIDGE.—Cambridge defeated Oxford at Queen's Club by 2 goals to 1 in highly sensational and somewhat lucky fashion. This result is doubly satisfactory to the Light Blues, since it gives them the lead in the series of inter-'Varsity matches which previously stood at 17 all. There about 5,000 people present at the West Kensington enclosure, the crowd being largely composed of past and present 'Varsity men, among whom were many old Blues. The weather had cleared up before the game started, and considering the amount of rain recently the ground was in wonderfully good condition, its comparative dryness being evidently due to the strong wind which was blowing almost straight across the ground, but if anything slightly from the direction of the pavilion, whereby that end possessed a fraction of advantage.

Cambridge kicked off, and Oxford, helped slightly by the wind, at once attacked. Maples and Kerry were clever, but after pressing dangerously the first-named player got off-side. Cambridge came away, also on the left, and Bache shot across. Play was fast and keen; the turf though rather on the soft side, was favourable to good football. Bache went away from midfield and passed to Edwards, who shot just wide as Bickersteth tackled him. Nevertheless Cambridge scored after ten minutes in the following manner: Bache ran down and passed to Edwards, who shot well with his left foot, giving Owen no chance. Oxford at once retaliated, and following a corner the other Edwards put through from centre half, but the goal was disallowed, one of the forwards being off-side. Braddell was excellent in checking the Cambridge forwards, who received excellent support from their halves. Miley made a good effort for Oxford, hitting the post, and then Maples shot over. Oxford pressed hard for some time with but two breaks away by the Light Blues, when Short forced a corner. Maples was very clever in the Oxford attack, but Cambridge defended stubbornly, and the play ran evenly with the defence prevailing on each side. Crosmelin Brown did especially well for for Cambridge at centre half. Play continued very fast and keen, both sides showing good form, despite the wind, which became stronger and soon brought some rain with it. Miley, Maples, and Kerry set up a strong attack, but without avail, so that at half-time the score was: Cambridge, 1; Oxford, 0.

Oxford began the second half with a strong attack. Pinkham soon had to save a hot shot from Kerry. Then after Harris had broken away, Kerry twice got down and from his second centre Cardew smartly scored and thus equalised matters. A minute later Cuthbertson volleyed into his own goal, but Pinkham cleared. Miley next shot just wide, and then Maples gave Pinkham another shot. Oxford were now forcing the game in great style. Tuff hesitated and was tackled by Harris, from whose centre Farnfield hit the bar with a smart shot. Oxford were soon pressing again, but did not prove very dangerous, and the pace slackened somewhat. The play ruled mostly in midfield for a bit. Cambridge were generally well held, but Thew and Crosmelin-Brown did splendid defensive work for them. The latter made a good attempt with a shot that Owen cleared. From Kerry's centre Miley nearly scored, Pinkham having to give a corner. Cardew had a fine shot saved. Cambridge did better towards the finish, and Farnfield scored in the last minute. Result: Cambridge, 2; Oxford, 1.

RUGBY RULES.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

DURHAM vs. NORTHUMBERLAND.—Northumberland, having previously won three matches in the northern division of the County Championship and drawn the other, had only to overcome Durham at South Shields to secure first place among the northern counties, and with that the right to meet the champion county of the south in the concluding game of the competition. Fine weather prevailed, and there were 4,000 spectators. Knaggs took the place of Thompson as one of the halves in the Durham team. Northumberland opened well, only ten minutes having elapsed when Roberts gained a try, which Cumberlege converted. Following upon severe pressure in the Durham lines, the home side broke away and, being awarded a penalty kick, Chapman scored a splendid goal. The game continued very fast, half-time arriving with Northumberland leading by 5 points to 3. Nothing was added for twenty minutes on resuming, but then Roberts, taking a pass from Russell in midfield, made a splendid run and finished with a try. The ensuing place kick, however, was charged down. Five points behind, Durham played up vigorously, and from a try by Prest, Siveright placed a goal. The match thus ended in a draw of 8 points each. As a consequence Yorkshire and Northumberland have to play off for the championship of the north. Durham, 2 goals (1 penalty); Northumberland, 1 goal 1 try.

RICHMOND vs. LONDON SCOTTISH.—At Richmond for the second time this season, the London Scottish beat Richmond. It was not by any means a great game, but the Scotsmen were the better side, and should have won more decisively than they did. It was for the most part a struggle between the forwards, and the Scottish pack clearly held the upper hand, but shortly before the interval Irwin met with a serious accident, and for the remainder of the time Richmond were reduced to seven scrummagers. On both sides the backs were very poor, and much of their play was wild and scrambling, at the tackling generally was keen and sure. Early in the game Penny opened the scoring for the Scotsmen with a well-earned try after a capital effort by their forwards, but though it was not improved, Campbell a few minutes later kicked a fine goal from a mark, and as nothing else was scored in the first half, the Scotsmen were leading by six points to nil, when they crossed over. The game went much in favour of the Scotsmen in the second half, but their backs could not finish off their attacking movements. Once G. C. Wilson dribbled two thirds the length of the field, and scored for Richmond, and Teary, with a well judged kick placed the goal, but shortly before the end a nicely managed round of passing by the Scottish three-quarter line, which was quite the best thing of the afternoon, landed Simpson in the corner. Campbell's kick at goal failed, and so the London Scottish won by two tries and a goal from a mark to a placed goal. London Scottish, 9 points; Richmond, 5 points.

BLACKHEATH vs. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—These clubs played a poor game at Blackheath. There was a strong wind blowing across the ground, and as neither side was at full strength the combination was seriously at fault. About ten minutes from the start Wright, after a run across the field, transferred to Jones with a long pass, and he scored. Two minutes later a similar piece of work between Pyman and Schofield resulted in the latter scoring, but Lockhart failed on both occasions, and at the interval the 'Varsity led by six points to nothing. Soon after the restart Pillman got away from a line-out, but Stone failed to improve. Some give-and-take play followed, and both sides touched down, but half-way through the second period some good kicking by the Cambridge backs took the ball into the Blackheath 25, and Lockhart, after feinting to pass the other way, made an opening for Jones, who scored behind the posts, and Mann converted. The 'Varsity won by 11 points to 3. Cambridge, 1 goal 2 tries; Blackheath, 1 try.

HARLEQUINS vs. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—In a great game at Twickenham, with Oxford University victorious, Harlequins had to admit defeat by 12 points to 5. The 'Varsity had got together their best available side, and though at the last moment Cheeseman took Gilray's place, the team included Cunningham, Poulton, Gorley, Buchanan, and Martin. Harlequins were without F. M. Stoop, Maxwell-Dove, and Bulkeley. On the day's play the Harlequins were fairly and squarely beaten. In the earlier stages it was the forwards who were at fault, but towards the finish, when they were heeling out more cleanly, the backs seemed incapable of doing the right thing. The passing was very wild, and on two occasions John Birkett spoiled most promising openings by holding on to the ball. Once a certain try was lost by his failing to pass to Lambert when close to the line. At the same time both sides missed opportunities, but on the whole Oxford certainly deserved their victory. The game opened sensationally, the Harlequins scoring their try from the kick-off. The ball came to Bussell, who sent back to Stoop. He in turn set Birkett moving, and the latter making a lot of ground gave to Lambert. The latter ran in behind the posts, and also kicked the goal. Cunningham, with a splendid individual effort, scoring both the try and kicking the goal, made matters even before the interval. In the second half Poulton dropped a beautiful goal and Cunningham lambed the ball over the bar for a penalty. Oxford won by one placed goal, one dropped goal, and one penalty goal to one placed goal. Oxford University, 12 points; Harlequins, 5 points.

COURSING.

THE WATERLOO CUP.—Although the popular fancies for this year's Waterloo Cup had been dismissed in the earlier stages, there was no falling off in public interest, for the issue was considered decidedly open, despite the strong favouritism of Heavy Weapon in the betting. Consequently the specials to Hill House on Friday were well patronised, and the crowd was quite up to the average for a closing day. Better weather favoured the proceedings than was the case on the two previous days, for the wind had dropped considerably and the sun shone throughout. It was made patent, however, during the opening courses that the ground was still in a sodden state by the spray the dogs sent up. It must be admitted that the sport in connection with this year's coursing carnival hardly realised anticipations. The heavy rainfalls affected the strength of the hares adversely, and many of the trials were of an unsatisfactory character. To clinch matters the spectators were denied a deciding course in either Cup, Purse, or Plate. Division in the minor stakes are not uncommon, but the final day's experience was decidedly unique, for Heavy Weapon gained his honours without having to go to slips for a deciding bout. Full Steam and Calabash were literally run to a standstill and in such a deplorable state was Full Steam that he was at once withdrawn.

Heavy Weapon's good fortune did not end here, as he was lucky to receive the verdict over Carnforth, for although Heavy Weapon led and killed, Carnforth scored the intervening points. But Mr. Brice's decision was in Heavy Weapon's favour, and no doubt he saw more in the brindle's work than the crowd could have done. Heavy Weapon is given to rushing but there is no denying his great speed. This was proved when he led and beat Long Span on Thursday, and, as a matter of fact, Mr. S. Hillwood's dog has never been led in any of his public trials. Heavy Weapon was well supported in the long odds books on the night of the draw, his starting price being 1,000 to 120. Details:—

WATERLOO CUP.—(Cup Cup, value £100, added by the Earl of Sefton), for 64 subscribers, at £25 each, winner £500, second £200, two dogs £50 each, four dogs £30 each, eight dogs £20 each, sixteen dogs £10 each, the Waterloo Purse and Waterloo Plate £360; total, £1,600.

Fifth Round.

Mr. J. W. Fulledton's f d p Full Steam, by Prince Plausible—Grammarian, beat (E.) Mr. T. B. Rixen's Md. ch.M. Crisp's bd d Calabash (late Hanson, by Hopgrend—Heels.

Betting 6 to 4 on Calabash, who in a splendid race up just gained the turn; but Full Steam at once dispossessed him, and ran up a telling sequence before the brindled joined issue. A demon of a hare gave the pair a gruelling, and when they went out of sight Full Steam's chance for the final had disappeared. Full Steam was picked up in such a distressed condition that the humane course of withdrawing him from the deciding heat was adopted.

Mr. S. Hill-Wood's bd d Heavy Weapon, by Warminster—Cathitas, beat (E.) Mr. J. Coke's w bk h Carnforth, by Firth of Forth—Peninsula.

Betting—11 to 8 on Heavy Weapon. The favourite gradually drew away, and at the turn led by a length and a half. Running wide, however, he let in the white and black for two or three points; but going in he settled matters by racing past to effect a brilliant kill.

Deciding Course.

Heavy Weapon declared the winner, Full Steam drawn through distress.

GOLF.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. RICHMOND.—Cambridge University played their second match of the term on Saturday, when they met the Richmond Club, at Sudbrook Park, Petersham. The result was a tie each side winning four games and halving two. Somewhat curiously, the match against Mid-Surrey a week earlier also ended in a tie. Mr. E. R. Campbell again led the Cambridge team, and was beaten by Mr. I. I. Owen, an Old Oxonian, who, however, never played in the inter-'Varsity match. Mr. E. S. Ulyat, the Light Blue captain, halved with Mr. G. L. Leigh, Clare, by doing the last hole in 2. Details are appended:

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. WOKING.—Rain fell heavily during the greater part of the time that the match between Cambridge University and Woking, on the latter club's course yesterday, was in progress. ROWING.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY LENT RACES.—These annual eight-oared races terminated on Saturday afternoon before a large crowd. The weather was fine but the wind was against the competitors up the home stretch. After losing the headship owing to a mishap on Thursday evening, Jesus regained that position on Friday, and yesterday got home safely, but were closely chased by Lady Margaret's for the greater part of the course. Only two of the crews secure their oars through making four bumps, viz.: Pembroke IV., the "Rugger" beat, and First Trinity V., both in the third division.

In the first division, First Trinity II. bumped Clare I. at Grassy Corner. Pembroke I. overtook Caius I. along Post Reach. Corpus defeated Christ's in Long Reach, and Third Trinity, stroked by R. W. M. Arbuthnot, the Blue, made a third ascent by bumping Jesus II. at the First Post Corner.

In the second division Lady Margaret II. were overtaken by First Trinity III., and St. Catharine's defeated Pembroke II. at the railway bridge. Magdalen I. bumped Trinity Hall at the Gut. Clare II. overtook Selwyn at Ditton Corner, while I. were vanquished by Lady Margaret II. Post Reach, whilst First Trinity IV., overcame Pembroke III. at First Post Corner.

In the third division King's II. defeated Caius III. Peterhouse bumped Selwyn II. First Trinity V. ran into Emmanuel III. Jesus III bumped Queen's II., Christ's III. defeated Pembroke V., and Lady Margaret IV. were victorious over Magdalen II.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY TORPIDS.—Sunshine and rain alternated when the Torpids races were concluded yesterday. Bumps were again numerous, and it is doubtful if the boats in the Lower Division had found their level when the end came. Christ Church left off head of the river. St. John's in addition to having a first crew that registered three bumps, can point to a record on the part of their second boat, which went up six places. St. Edmund's Hall secured five places, and Keble achieved a similar record; but on the whole the rowing did not reach a very high standard. Wadham left off head of the Third Division, and Keble finished at the top of the Second without any trouble.

HOCKEY.

OXFORD vs. CAMBRIDGE.—After dispossessing Oxford of the lead in the second half of Wednesday's Inter-University match at Beckenham, Cambridge were beaten in a fine finish by 5 goals to 4. There was really little to choose between the teams, and what slight superiority Cambridge may have had at half-back was balanced by the better passing of the Oxford forwards. The Cambridge captain, A. F. Leighton, who scored three goals, was the best forward on the field; but, except for about a quarter of an hour in the second half, the attackers failed to combine well. Latham and Ball were the best of the Oxford forwards, but Pulton, the Rugby Blue, did useful work in the centre, his dash turning the fortunes of the game at a critical time. The leading men in defence were Parsons and Lowe for Oxford, and Atkin, Stevens, and Bellerby for Cambridge. In the first half goals were scored for Oxford by Latham and Ball, and for Cambridge by Leighton. Subsequently Leighton added two more, and Thompson one for the Light Blues; whilst Marion, Latham, and Ball increased the Oxford total.

IRELAND vs. WALES.—Stormy weather prevailed at Abergavenny on Saturday, when the annual match between Wales and Ireland was decided. In the first half Wales had to play against a high wind, and five minutes after the start W. Ball opened the scoring for Ireland with a very soft goal. The Irishmen continued to attack, Wales made several dangerous individual dashes, and twice came near scoring. The visitors' second goal was gained by F. L. Robinson after a fine run. The Irishmen maintained the pressure, but Wales had a good chance just before the interval. Owen, however, failed badly, and at half-time Ireland led by 2 to 0.

Within a minute of the re-start Robinson shot another goal, and ten minutes later he scored the fourth—again at close range—with a shot which Turnbull had no chance of stopping. Robinson was playing brilliantly, and in the closing stages he gained two more goals, the last after a clever piece of combination. Robinson thus shot five goals in the match, and he was the best forward on the field. This was the sixteenth match between the countries, and thus far Ireland has always proved successful.

Hunting.

THE BOMBAY HUNT.

WEDNESDAY being a holiday, there was a large field out at the Jackal Club, and though the season is drawing to a close and the heat is beginning to be felt, a short and a long run each wound up in the appropriate manner. Hounds were taken into the Melon ground behind the kennels, and from the cactus hedge bounding the first field a jack broke away. The field was well spread out, and this fact is responsible for the heading of the quarry when he seemed to be making for the railway line at Parla. Over some bad melon ground en route for Sahar, hounds were on very good terms, and the way they were hunting prepared us for an early kill on reaching the outskirts of the village.

This occurred alongside the water main, and on completing the customary obsequies a move was made along the pipe in the direction of Andheri road. Hounds were soon successful in getting on to another, one of those which clung to cover and generally lead over all the worst of the country. He slipped hounds across the road, but they got on to him again as he set his mask for the the Mango Tope, the Grange bunds allowing of a pleasant, sharp gallop. Entering at the Stacey's Tank end, he gave his pursuers some trouble by continually turning; in fact he would possibly have got away had he not been viewed taking the track leading right through. Again on the road he was viewed as he dashed through some thick undergrowth. A mere handful of horsemen were able to follow, but the rest were fortunate in not losing the hunt for good, the quarry meeting them again on his circuitous course near Robert's Corner after a scamper up the hill. He now climbed the hill on the near side of the Tope and at last he was so fixed that his only chance was to come down into the open valley. The Goregaum district is an admirable galloping ground, and so well were hounds on the scent that the usually troublesome nullah did not cause a hitch. Eventually he tried his luck on one of the wooded hills, from which he only just escaped in time, and not long after was bowled over out in the open. It was a great run, coming to a satisfactory termination at at a time when it was feared the sun was getting too hot to allow of scent holding.

Naturally enough, Friday, in other words mail day, did not see a big number out at Chuckla. The morning was propitious and some very fast work was put in by hounds, but scent unfortunately ran out at an exciting portion of the run.

Following the Master across to the other side of Somanwadi Village to the covert adjoining the water pipe, the field of just over a score were soon going for all they know for the Andheri road. The quarry, however, did not cross it till close on Chuckla, and came out into the Grange bunds, where good galloping could be safely indulged in. Taking a slightly left-handed turn, he made a detour round the hills and took the field right over Sunday Hill, descending into the valley and the Goregarum grass lands. On nearing the Vehar Hills, he took to the jungles and headed for Marole, but hounds were so hot on him that he turned before reaching the famous hill of caves and set his mask again for Vehar. At the quarries a short check gave him a fresh start and he was found to have made a line for the lake. This was, however, as far as hounds got, as on reaching the pipe they lost the scent completely.

This also had been an enjoyable run, almost throughout, over good country and always at a cracking pace till the first sign of diminishing scent was seen at the quarries.

OLD CLIFF.

Polo.

INDIAN POLO ASSOCIATION.

THE annual meeting of the Indian Polo Association was recently held at Meerut. Lieutenant-General Sir J. H. Wodehouse was invited to continue as President of the Association and Major G. A. Becher 8th Cavalry, was selected as Honorary Secretary; other business was transacted as follows:—

(6) Proposed by Colonel J. Vaughan, seconded by Major Neil Haig and passed unanimously. That the funds be distributed this year in the proportion of 5 to Northern Section, and 4 to Southern, and that the final distribution to clubs be decided by a selected committee in each section.

(7) Proposed by Major G. A. Becher, 8th Cavalry. That the general meeting be abolished. Carried by 55 votes to 13.

(8) Proposal No. 2 was carried by 52 votes to 15 but will read as follows:—"Any proposed alteration in the rules or constitution of the Indian Polo Association to be submitted to the Honorary Secretary through Divisional or Civilian Members of the Committee before 31st January in each year. Proposals received by this date will be circulated to all subscribing clubs, who will send in their votes direct to the Honorary Secretary, Indian Polo Association, before 31st March. The result of voting will be published as soon as possible after 1st April. No votes received after the last day of March can be counted. Each subscribing club to have one vote. No member to vote for more than one club."

(9) Proposed that Rule 23 be included among those mentioned, in case of infringement of which, the Umpire stops the game. Carried by 55 votes to 4.

(10) Proposed that the following be added to Rule II (Rules and Regulations):—"When a Bugle is used in place of a bell the 'Halt' is sounded at the end of the last period, except in the case of a tie, when one 'G' will be sounded, the 'Halt' in this case only being sounded when the winning goal is obtained." Carried by 57 votes to 10.

(11) Proposed that the following be added to Rule 9 (Rules of Club):—"For the purpose of distributing funds to polo clubs, the Committee shall be divided into two sections, a Northern and Southern. The latter to consist of members representing the 5th, 6th and 9th Divisions and the civilian member for Bombay, and the Northern to consist of the remaining members. The proportion in which the funds will be distributed to the two sections to be decided by the Committee, and final distribution to clubs to be made by a selected committee in each section. This proposal to hold good for one year only on trial." Carried by 54 votes to 10.

(12) Proposed by Lieutenant-Colonel Edwards, 33rd Q. O. Light Cavalry:—"That no Indian Polo Association measurer be permitted to measure any pony belonging to a dealer for an Indian Polo Association certificate." It was decided to circulate Colonel Edwards' letter to all members of the Committee before taking final votes on this proposal.

(13) Proposed that Rule 10 (Rules for height and measurement) be expunged. Not passed by 16 votes to 52.

(14) Proposed by Major Brannon R.E.:—"That the Indian Polo Association Committee, as at present composed, be empowered to transact all Indian Polo Association business which at present can only be done by the annual General Meeting under Rule 10 (Rules of the Club). The procedure shall be similar to that set forth in the Indian Polo Association notice dated Ambala, 8th September 1909, with reference to proposals. Each member of the Indian Polo Association Committee will take votes of the Indian Polo Association members in the Division which he represents, on matters of business which are now transacted at the annual General Meeting. He will then notify the result to the Honorary Secretary, Indian Polo Association. The Indian Polo Association affairs are thus placed in the hands of the Indian Polo Association members, the Committee being the machinery through which the work is done." This proposal was carried, but as No. 7 proposal was previously passed, it was then at mover's suggestion withdrawn.

(15) Proposed that after "shall be appointed" in line 5 rule 5 (Rules and Regulations), the following be added: "whose sole duty is to decide whether the ball has passed between the goal posts or between those posts produced." Carried by 45 votes to 22.

(16) Proposed that at the beginning of Rule 20 (Rules and Regulations) the following be inserted:—"A player shall be considered to ride off fairly when, having placed himself abreast of an adversary after following a line of direction as nearly as possible parallel to that in which his adversary is moving, he gradually forces him from, or prevents his continuing in the direction in which he is riding. Riding into an adversary in any other way constitutes dangerous riding." Not passed by 32 votes to 36.

(17) Proposed that following be added to Rule 10 (Rules for height and measurement):—"After (date to be fixed) an Indian Polo Association certificate granted to a pony is cancelled if at any time that pony is declared to be over 14.1 by an official measurer of the Calcutta or Western India Turf Clubs." Not carried by 19 votes to 48.

(18) Proposed by Colonel F. Wadeson, 35th Scinde Horse:—"That subsidiary goals be re-introduced." Not passed by 31 votes to 48.

(19) Proposed that an addition be made to Rule 19. "In the event of the umpire inadvertently allowing the team to line up the wrong way, no goal, if made, shall be allowed to count to either side, and the game be restarted again from midfield directly the mistake is discovered." A rider to be added:—"If a whole chukkur has been played, it should stand, goals scored to count." Carried by 35 votes to 31.

(20) The following members were elected to act as Indian Polo Association members of the Hurlingham Committee for 1910:—Lieutenant-Colonel H. Clifton-Brown, 12th Royal Lancers; Lieutenant-Colonel E. Makins, 1st Royal Dragoons; Major R. E. Chaplin, 8th Cavalry.

(21) It was proposed and carried that Hurlingham certificates of 14-1 for life be registered for Indian Polo Association certificates on the same terms as C. T. C. and I. T. C. certificates.

(22) Proposed and carried that para. 2, Rule 10 (Rules for height and measurement), should read:—"A certificate granted to a pony, which has previously failed to measure, will be cancelled."

THE SUBALTERNS' TOURNAMENT.

6TH INNISKILLING DRAGOONS vs. 12TH ROYAL LANCERS.—The tournament opened at Umballa on the 7th instant when a large gathering assembled to witness the match between the above teams. It was a closely contested game, the issue lying in doubt right up to the end. An accident to Bowen in the fourth chukker was the only disconcerting feature of the afternoon, but it is satisfactory to report that he is rapidly recovering from the effects of his fall.

First Chukker.—This was a pointless period, though the LANCERS kept the Dragoons penned in their territory throughout.

MADE IN A MINUTE.

Second Chukker.—A free hit to the Inniskillings for offside enabled them to take the ball down and score from a scrimmage in front of goal. The Lancers attacked on resuming and Quin equalised, the 12th pressing without success for the rest of the period.

Third Chukker.—Level play. The Inniskillings hit a goal. The Lancers were on the offensive thereafter, but none of their efforts were successful.

Fourth Chukker.—The Lancers got on and equalised. Up and down play followed till Bowen came down and had to be conveyed to hospital. Humfrey took his place and level play closed the chukker.

Fifth Chukker.—Fast play all over the ground, the Dragoons at length crowning a good run with a goal. A hot onslaught by the Lancers failed to add to their score.

Sixth Chukker.—The 12th equalised on starting and then the Inniskillings attacked once more. Wood cleared and the 12th got away again, scoring the winning goal just before time was called. Final score: 12th Lancers, 4 goals; Inniskillings, 3 goals. Teams:—

Inniskilling Dragoons.		12th Royal Lancers.

Mr. E. C. Bowen (later replaced by Mr. J. C. Humfrey)	(back)	Mr. R. B. Wood	(back)

Umpires:—Messrs. Palmer and Leslie Cheape.

King's Dragoon Guards "A" vs. 17th Lancers.—Played on the 9th instant, a fast game ending in favour of the Dragoon Guards by eleven goals to one.

First Chukker.—The Dragoon Guards pressed and scored four goals.

Second Chukker.—The Lancers got away and hit a goal, but play was quickly returned to their territory, where the Dragoon Guards scored. Midfield play followed till the K. D. G.'s got away and hit another goal.

Third Chukker.—The Dragoon Guards rushed down and scored. Up and down play and then the Lancers put in a couple of runs, but nothing resulted and they were forced to defend once more.

Fourth Chukker.—The Dragoon Guards rushed the ball through and scored, adding another point shortly after. Towards the close of the period the Lancers got away but their final shot went wide.

Fifth Chukker.—The Lancers attacked vigorously but they could not break the Dragoons' defence. Play was then transferred and another point signalled for the K. D. G.'s.

Sixth Chukker.—The Dragoons pressed and after two unsuccessful efforts put the ball through once more. Final score: K. D. G.'s, 11 goals, Lancers, 1 goal. Teams:—

King's Dragoon Guards' "A" Team.		17th D. C. O. Lancers.
Mr. L. H. Hawkins	1	Mr. C. E. D. Dubs	1

Umpires:—Captain Ritson and Mr. R. B. Wood.

King's Dragoon Guards "B" vs. 36th Jacob's Horse.—Also played on the 9th instant, these teams putting up a capital game. Fast and level throughout an extra period had to be played before a decision was arrived at.

First Chukker.—The ball travelled up and down the field till the Dragoons got possession and rushing down put it through.

Second Chukker.—Both goals were visited but nothing resulted and play was then transferred to midfield. No score.

Third Chukker.—Fast up and down play. Blacker received a blow on the elbow which prevented him going on and he was relieved by Parnell. The 36th pressed and the K. D. G.'s hit behind, nothing coming of the free hit.

Fourth Chukker.—Jacob's Horse attacked and at length got on terms with a successful shot. They kept up the pressure and forced the Dragoons to hit behind but the free hit was not improved upon.

Fifth Chukker.—Up and down play till near the close of the period when the 36th ran the ball down and hitting a goal took the lead.

Sixth Chukker.—The game was fought out all over the ground, the K. D. G.'s at length putting through and making the score two all.

Extra Chukker.—The goals were widened and play resumed. A penalty hit to the 36th gained them no advantage and then the Dragoons pressed them hard but they cleared and taking the ball down hit the winning point. Final score: 36th Jacob's Horse, 3 goals; K. D. G.'s "B," 2 goals. Teams:—

King's Dragoon Guards' "B" Team.		36th Jacob's Horse.
Mr. W. R. Read	1	Mr. H. Allardice	1

Umpires:—Captain Ritson and Mr. R. B. Wood.

Semi-finals.

12th Royal Lancers vs. 36th Jacob's Horse.—This was the first of the two games in the semi-finals played on the 11th instant and ended in a win for the Lancers who were better mounted and were undoubtedly the better team. Nevertheless the 36th offered a stout resistance and never slackened their efforts throughout.

First Chukker.—The 36th got away but their shot at goal was unsuccessful. Then the Lancers got on and drew first blood, up and down play closing the chukker.

Second Chukker.—The Lancers kept the ball in their opponents' territory but there was no score.

Third Chukker.—The 12th did all the attacking and scored three goals, Wood being responsible for the first and Quin for the two others.

Fourth Chukker.—A run by the 36th was stopped by Wood and the Lancers attacked once again and hit a goal. The 36th next ran down but their shot went out wide and the Lancers bringing the ball down once more registered another point.

Fifth Chukker.—Jacob's Horse got possession and Farquhar scored. Fast up and down play followed till the close of the period.

Sixth Chukker.—The Lancers did all the attacking and in spite of a stubborn defence managed to add two further goals to their total. Score: 12th Lancers, 8 goals; Jacob's Horse, 1 goal. Teams:—

12th Royal Lancers.		36th Jacob's Horse.
Mr. J. W. Hornby	1	Mr. H. Allardice	1

Umpires:—Major Chaplin and Mr. Wickham.

King's Dragoon Guards "A" vs 10th Hussars.—Played on the 11th instant. The Hussars who had drawn a bye in the first round gave a splendid display and the finest game thus far in the tournament ended in their favour by five goals to three.

First Chukker.—Vigorous attacks on both goals. No score.

Second Chukker.—Up and down play, the Hussars at length opening the scoring from a scrimmage. Another run by the 10th was stopped and Cheape rushing down equalised.

Third Chukker.—A fast and well contested chukker. The ball travelled all over the ground, but there was no score.

Fourth Chukker.—The 10th brought the ball down and scored from a mêlée. They were next awarded a penalty for offside but nothing came of it. Just before time, however, Palmer put in a fine run and scored from a scrimmage.

Fifth Chukker.—Play ruled all over the ground and a goal was signalled for each team.

Sixth Chukker.—Fast play till the Hussars got the ball and hit a goal. The Dragoons then had two unsuccessful runs to the Hussars' flags but they kept up the pressure to the end. Cheape hit a goal, but all subsequent efforts were fruitless. Final score: 10th Hussars, 5 goals; K. D. G.'s 3 goals. Teams:—

King's Dragoon Guards.		10th Royal Hussars.
Mr. L. H. Hawkins	1	Mr. M. A. de Tuyll	1

Umpires:—Captains Badger and Truman.

Final.

10th Royal Hussars vs. 12th Royal Lancers.—In the presence of a large gathering of spectators on Monday last these teams put up one of the finest games ever witnessed in Umballa. Hotly contested from start to finish, fast galloping and hard hitting characterised the play. Time was called with the score two all and two extra periods were necessary before a definite result was arrived at in favour of the Hussars. At the close of the game, General Pitcher presented the cup and congratulated both winners and runners-up in a short speech.

First Chukker.—The Lancers were first to attack but Palmer cleared and play was carried to the 12th, territory where the Hussars scored just on time.

Second Chukker.—Up and down play till the Lancers got on but failed with two shots. The Hussars were next prominent but their effort also went out wide.

Third Chukker.—The Lancers pressed and after one unsuccessful shot were able to equalise. Thereafter the Hussars attacked but their shot at goal did not materialise.

Fourth Chukker.—Midfield play followed by several runs to the Hussars' flags without advantage. On changing ends the Hussars were on the aggressive but two attempts to score went out on the wrong side.

Fifth Chukker.—The Hussars continued to press and the Lancers were forced to hit behind, the resulting penalty proving abortive. Then Palmer put in a good run and scored, the Lancers equalising immediately and attacking for the rest of the chukker though without result.

Sixth Chukker.—A penalty hit against the Lancers was not improved upon but the Hussars kept up the pressure, Wood saving from the goal mouth, Midfield play followed and time arrived with the score 2 all.

Extra Chukker.—The goals were widened and the game resumed. Up and down play without result.

Extra Chukker.—A further period was played. The Hussars pressed and after the Lancers had saved three times, Palmer put the ball through and won the game for the 10th by 3 goals to 2. Teams as in the semi-final save that Mr. Bryant played No. 1 for the 10th.

Umpires:—Captains Ramsbotham and Wickham.

.50-110 CALIBER MODEL 1886 RIFLES.

Big game hunters who cling to the old reliable .50-110 Express cartridge will find that the Winchester Model 1886 Rifles made for this cartridge will suit them in every way. They are lighter and handier than other rifles handling this cartridge, and, like all Winchester rifles, shoot strong and accurately and work and wear well. They are made in both solid frame and Take-Down styles and are handsomely finished, and bored to shoot either black or smokeless powder cartridges.

THE MURRAY CUP TOURNAMENT.

THE opening match in the third round of the above Tournament took place at Lucknow, on the 7th instant, before a large attendance. The teams were the 2nd Worcester Regiment and the Royal Irish. The latter lost the toss and from the kick off the Worcesters pressed, until their centre finally shot a goal. The Irish then did their best to equalise, but the defence of the Worcesters was too strong.

In the second half the Irish had, if anything, the better of the play. Two free kicks were given against the Worcesters, and the Irish just missed scoring. The Worcesters then obtained a corner, but the Irish custodian saved. The Worcesters won by one goal to love. Teams :—

WORCESTERS :—Low, goal; Clarke and Paxton, backs; Clayton, Jeffries and Pitt, halves; James, Greenway, Evans, Robertson and Sutton, forwards.

ROYAL IRISH :—Macey, goal; Wells and Dea, backs; Taylor Fitzgerald and Terry, halves; Beads, Wade, Bradie, Wilhie and McVoy, forwards.

ONLY one tie was played on the 8th instant, the 10th Hussars who were to have met the Royal Scots having scratched. The teams were the Black Watch and the East Yorks, and the game proved a past and well contested one. The Black Watch got in two shots at goal, one going over the bar, and they were unfortunate in not scoring. The East Yorks then gained a corner, but without result.

With no goals scored, the East Yorks pressed for a space from the restart, then the Black Watch attacked and their right wing sent in a fine centre, which was headed into the net. Full time saw the Black Watch winners by one goal to nil. Teams :—

BLACK WATCH.—Murie, goal; Richmond and Reid, backs; Tait, Cave and Clark halves, Fenton, Turnbull, Paterson, Watson and Denison, forwards.

EAST YORKS.—Creasy, goal; Whitley and Carney, backs; Hullet, Jackson, and Smith, halves; Haywood, Johnson, Farrody, Grimshaw and Arnold, forwards.

On the 9th instant the Royal Scots met the Highland Light Infantry, who had secured a bye. The game proved to be the most exciting yet played, and although an extra period was allowed, no score resulted.

The tie was replayed on the 10th instant. Each side pressed in turn, but half time arrived with no score. Thereafter the H.L.I. attacked almost continuously, eventually shooting a goal. The Scots then pressed, but the defence was too good. The H.L.I. won by 1 goal to nil. Teams :—

H.L.I.—Paterson goal; Patterson and Gorman, backs; Gallogher, Scrty and Collins, halves; Laurie, Welfare, McNaughtmy, Paterson and Marshall forwards.

ROYAL SCOTS.—Sergeant Fletcher, goal; Smith and Hoyle, backs; Watson, Dunlop and Thompson, halves; Martin, Bolton, Ross, Finlay and Thompson, forwards.

SEMI-FINAL.

The same evening, the 10th, saw the decision of the semi-finals between the Black Watch and the Worcesters. As was the case in previous matches of the tournament, the game was of the closest character Level play prevailed throughout, the ball travelling up and down the field and each goal being attacked, and skilfully guarded. The Worcesters' passing excited much admiration, and they looked like winning, but unfortunately a penalty kick was given against them a few minutes before the whistle sounded. The Black Watch scored, and won by the narrow margin of 1 goal. Teams :—

BLACK WATCH.—Murie, goal; Richmond and Reid, backs; Tait, Carr and Clark, halves; Tenton, Turnbull, Paterson, Watson and Denison, forwards.

2ND WORCESTERS.—Low, goal; Clarke and Paxton, backs; Clayton, Jeffries and Pitt, halves; Jones, Greenway, Evans, Robertson and Sutton, forwards.

CALCUTTA LADIES' GOLF CLUB.

THE ladies were "at home" at their pavilion on Tuesday afternoon to a large number of their friends. A clock golf competition and a men's competition, nine holes by medal play, were put through and the prizes for the season were then distributed by Lady Baker, President of the Club. As will be seen by the list hereunder, Mrs. Lamond Walker, the Club Captain, was the most prominent winner, carrying off four of the trophies :—

Calcutta Golf Club Challenge Bowl.—Winner Mrs. Drimmie, score 65 net.

Stevenson Challenge Bowl.—Winner Mrs. Martelli, score 155 net for 36 holes.

Lady Lansdowne Medal.—Winner Mrs. Martelli, score 591 net for 8 rounds.

Kerr Challenge Bowl.—Winner Mrs. Lamond Walker, score 592 scratch for 8 rounds.

Monthly Medal Cup.—Winner Mrs. Lamond Walker.

Lowest Score Medal.—Winner Mrs. Lamond Walker score 69 for 18 holes.

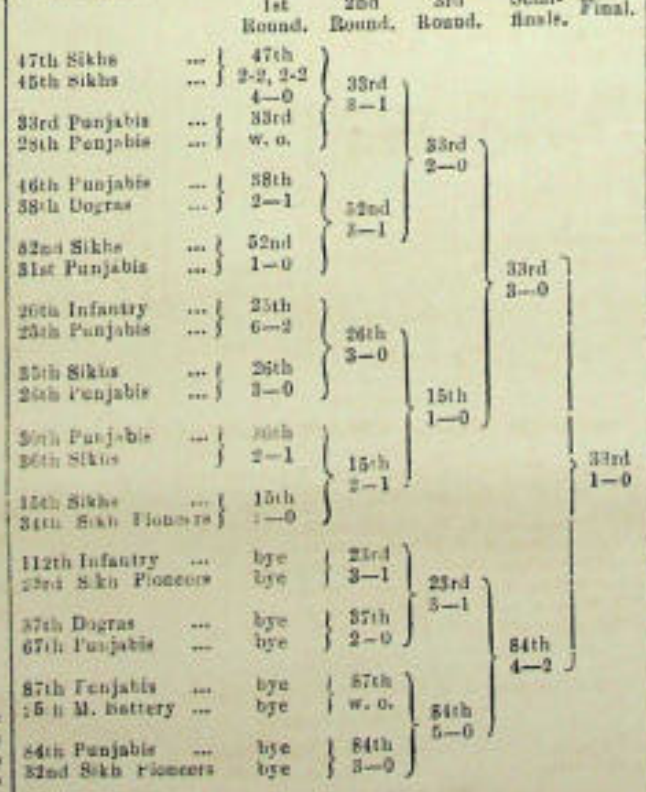
Seton Lindsay Challenge Prize.—Winner Mrs. Lamond Walker, score 68 for 18 holes.

The competitions on Tuesday resulted as follows :—

Clock Golf.—Winning visitor Mrs. Holmes, score 20. Winning member Mrs. Beaman, score 20.

Men's Competition.—Winner Mr. McEvan, score 32; second Mr. McVicar, score 33.

Hockey.



PUNJAB NATIVE ARMY TOURNAMENT

THE tournament was continued at Jhelum on the 5th instant when four matches were played, completing the second round. The 33rd Punjabis met the 47th Sikhs who had played three strenuous games in the first round with the 45th Sikhs. The game, though hotly contested, was mainly in favour of the 33rd. The score was one all at half time, but the 33rd did most of the attacking after the interval and scoring two further goals won by 3 to 1. The 15th Sikhs and 30th Punjabis put up a fast and well contested game. The 15th scored in the first half and the 30th equalised on changing ends. Full time was played without further addition to the score, but during an extra period the 15th registered rather a lucky goal (the 30th custodian slipping in trying to clear) and won by 2 goals to 1. Contrary to expectations the 26th Punjabis beat the 25th Punjabis by 3 goals to nil The first half was fairly level, but the 26th opened their score and having the majority of the play in the second moiety added two further goals. The game between the 52nd Sikhs and 38th Dogras ended in favour of the former by 3 goals to 1, this also being rather an unexpected result.

The four matches in the third round were put through on the 7th instant. The 33rd Punjabis, though not playing their best team, had little difficulty in defeating the 52nd Sikhs by 2 goals to nil, the losers nevertheless struggling manfully to the end. The 87th Punjabis, who had drawn a bye in the first round and had a walk over in the second, made their first appearance when they met the 84th Punjabis. The game was a very one-sided affair, the 84th having matters all their own way and winning easily by 5 goals to nil. The 37th Dogras and 23rd Sikh Pioneers gave us a good game, the 23rd eventually winning by 2 goals to nil, and the match between the 26th Punjabis and 15th Sikhs was also a well contested game, the 15th winning by the only goal scored.

The semi-finals took place on the 8th instant when two interesting games were witnessed. In the first the 33rd Punjabis met the 15th Sikhs. Play was even during the opening stages and half time arrived without score, but on changing ends the 33rd took the upper hand; they kept the 15th on the defensive throughout and netted the ball on three occasions. The 15th played pluckily but could not score. The second game between the 23rd Sikh Pioneers and the 84th Punjabis ended in an unexpected victory for the latter by 4 goals to 2. It was indeed a lucky win, for the 23rd had all the best of the play but were weak in front of goal. The 84th got away three times in the first half, and a goal crowned their efforts on each occasion and they thus led at the interval by 3 to nil. The 23rd continued to have the better of the game on resuming and scored twice, but several attempts went wide, and the 84th adding another point won as stated.

The final tie in the tournament was played on Thursday, the 10th instant, when the 33rd beat the 84th Punjabis by a goal to nil. The winners have a big reputation as hockey players and are holders of the Dewar Challenge Shield which they won at Jhansi last November, and the Eastern Command Cup which they won at Allahabad in January. General Tulloch, commanding the Jhelum Brigade, gave away the Cup and the cheque for Rs. 600 to the winners at the close of play. Complete results :—

POONA DIVISIONAL TOURNAMENT.

THE opening game of the Divisional Hockey Tournament for Native troops at Poona was played on the 7th instant between the 103rd Mahrattas and 12th Pioneers, a splendid game ending in a draw of one goal each. Replaying the following day the 103rd were decidedly the superior team and won by 3 goals to nil. The 12th, though they played pluckily, could not reproduce the form they showed in their first encounter. On the 9th instant the 66th Punjabis met the 114th Mahrattas and after leading by a goal to nil at the interval had matters all their own way in the second half, beating the Mahratta custodian on no fewer than five occasions. The match last Thursday was between the 116th Mahrattas and the 3rd Sappers and Miners, the latter winning by 4 goals to nil. On Friday the 66th Punjabis beat the 103rd Mahrattas by 4 goals to one.

ALL-BURMA CHAMPIONSHIPS.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

THE All-Burma Lawn Tennis Championships held at Rangoon were commenced on the 1st February and brought to a conclusion on the 19th ultimo. Thanks to the courtesy of the Gymkhana officials all the games were played on the Club courts before large and appreciative gatherings. To deal briefly with the various events, the Singles were rather disappointing being productive of few good games. The result was seen to lie between Arnold, Haynes, Baumgartner and Lewty, as last year's Winner, Captain Gilbert, although entered was leaving for Home before the finish and in consequence scratched. Arnold easily came through his side to the final, only being pressed by Lewty, who had beaten him last year. Baumgartner came through the other side, easily defeating Haynes who was somewhat off form in the semi-final. The final was disappointing as Arnold beat Baumgartner in three straight setts—the score hardly being a true index of the games, as the latter time after time had hard luck with a lot of his shots which well deserved to score, and in spite of which most of the games went to deuce.

The Doubles were very open and were well contested. The luck of the draw gave Arnold and Haynes a certain entry to the finals, of which they took full advantage. The other finalists had far from an easy time, as it was only after a prolonged fight with Lewty and Finlayson that they got through, and then had to play another town couple in Thompson and Jones, who, after taking the second sett, went down badly in the final sett. The final between Arnold and Haynes vs. Baumgartner and Henstock was a very good game, and all played decidedly well. The latter couple started off in brilliant fashion, but the steadiness of Arnold and Haynes prevailed, and they gained a well deserved victory by 3 setts to 1.

Although only 8 couples entered for the Mixed Doubles, some of the games were exceedingly well contested. Arnold and Mrs. Windsor, who were the favourites, succumbed to Baumgartner and Mrs. Dawn in the first round. Lewty and Miss Mack had a very good game with Baumgartner and Mrs. Dawn in the semi-final, which had to be stopped owing to the failing light on the first day, after sett all and 9 all had been called. They were successful after a very hard game in the replay of the final sett by 9 games to 7. The final for the first two setts was very close, but in the end Lewty and Miss Mack won the last sett decisively 6—0. Miss Mack is a new comer, who plays a very good game and I believe won the Open Ladies' Singles in Newcastle last year. She possesses a very strong overhead service and is equally at home driving hard or lobbing.

UNITED PROVINCES HORSE SHOW.

Friday and Saturday, 4th and 5th March 1910.

THE show was held in the spacious grounds of the Victoria Park at Meerut on the above dates and thanks to the untiring energy of Mr. Willis, 31st Lancers, the Honorary Secretary, proved a splendid success. Entries were large and the quality of a high standard, more especially in the country-bred classes, the brood mares showing up exceptionally well. The jumping and driving competitions were also an outstanding feature of the show. There was a splendid array of prizes, the judging met with general approval and there was a big attendance of interested spectators on both days. Chess.

Solution of Problem No. 484.

1. R—Q 5, any move; 2 Q or B mates accordingly.

Problem No. 485.

Black, 6 pieces.

White, 9 pieces.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

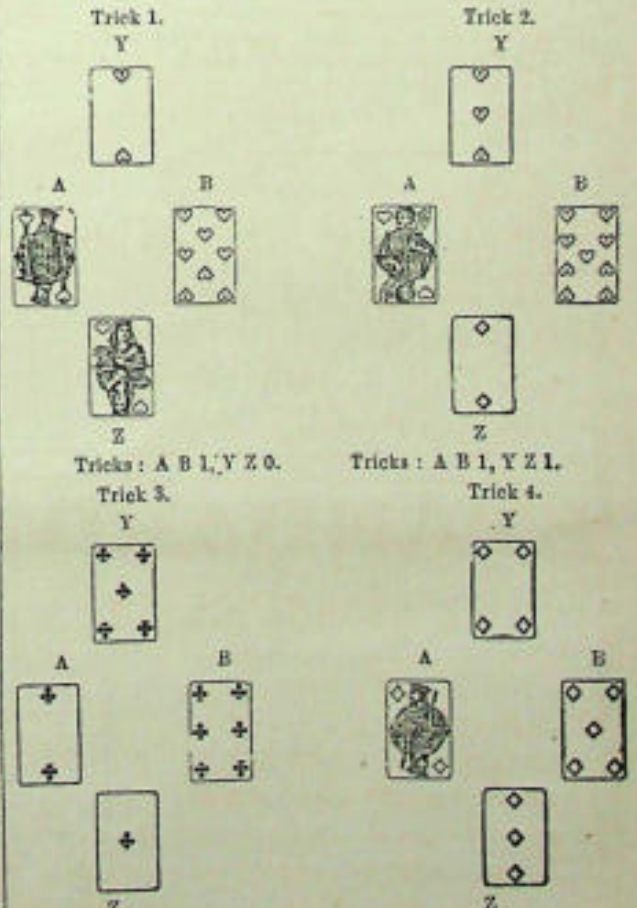
Cards.

BRIDGE.

Solution to Problem No. 85.

Z cannot get the lead into his own hand to finesse diamonds and it is no good throwing it to his opponents, for they will simply put dummy in again by forcing him to ruff clubs. His only chance of doing anything with the hand is to find A with king, knave of diamonds and no others, since B's discard make it clear that if he holds either card it is sufficiently guarded Y should accordingly lead out the ace and queen of diamonds. when, if the king and knave both fall, Z's 10 and 9 will be good and the game will be won.

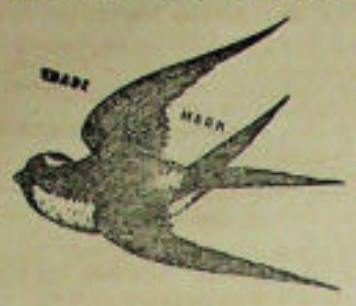
This is Z's one and only hope, assuming that his adversaries play correctly; it is no use beating about the bush by forcing them to discard to trumps.



Problem No. 86.

Score :—A B 0, Y Z 0. Z deals and declares diamonds. A's (the leader's) and Y's (dummy's) hands are as follows :—

A's Hand (Leader).—Hearts: Ace, king, jack, 7, 6, 5. Diamonds: Ace, king. Club: 4, 3, 2. Spades: Ace, jack.



Y's Hand (Dummy).—Hearts: 4, 3, 2. Diamonds: 10, 8, 6, 4. Clubs: King, queen, jack, 5. Spades: 7, 6.

The first four tricks are as follows :—

How ought A to go on with the hand, and why?

CALCUTTA RACING SEASON. 1909-10.

Saturday's racing brought to a close about the most successful season we have ever had in Calcutta, at any rate so far as events on the flat were concerned. There were 20 days on the Calcutta course and 2 days at Tollygunge and of the 121 flat races, a very large majority produced real good fields and fair racing. In the steeplechases there was unfortunately a different tale to tell, but as far as the open items were concerned it was purely a matter of bad luck and no fault of either the course or the terms of the races. Sentiment, Spinnet, Marmalade III, Clipper, Mercedes, Greenstone, Branga, Foy, Mordialloc, Queen of Gems, Dirty Boy, Countenance and Cyril all went wrong altogether or became too unsound to trust over fences and the presence of even 6 or 7 out of these thirteen animals would have made a very big difference to the steeplechases and hurdle races this season. The failure in the amateur class is due to other causes and it is doubtful if there will ever be good G.R. racing here in the cold weather while the old hunter qualification is retained: it serves no good purpose, leads to wrangles and unpleasantness and narrows down the fields to starvation point. Handicap Steeplechases and Hurdle Races for horses that have never won Rs. 500 open as to ownership but confined to G.R.'s as regards riders would fill well right throughout the season and a couple of jumpers flat races for a wind up would make competition all the keener. In this way the sportsmen, who like a ride over the sticks, would all get a chance and the number of efficient G.R.'s in Calcutta would increase and multiply in a surprising fashion. The raw material is all there and the budding talent only wants a chance to put forth quite a satisfactory bloom—if we go on as at present it is likely to die out and all those who have the interests of amateur racing at heart should bestir themselves to do away with the obsolete hunter and ownership qualifications in this class. The two Military Steeplechases that were such a frost in 1908-09, in spite of warnings were repeated as was likewise the frost and we are to have them again in 1910-1911—goodness only knows why!

One failure of the 1909-10 season that it not likely to be repeated is the much discussed and much execrated betting enclosure. The stewards have been much blamed in connection with this but most unjustly. The ring was a legitimate experiment and many in a good position to judge thought it would be a success. It has turned out to be a mistake, the stewards will reconsider the question at the beginning of next season and it is probable that the ring will be abolished. It would have been difficult to have done away with it in the middle of the current season because a large number of season tickets had been sold. There is the whole matter in a nutshell. For the officials as a whole we have nothing but praise—to mention that Mr. Bates was the starter is to say that this work was done as well as possible—more would be superfluous. For a few days while Mr. Bates was unfortunately indisposed Mr. Campbell was an efficient substitute. The presence of the stipendiaries no doubt made for healthier racing, and if one of them erred on the side of being a little too suspicious it is a fault which is easily remedied and he will no doubt be better when he knows us better. The judging was in the hands first of Major Davie and later of Mr. Lamb and we know of only one mistake during the season—the placing of Sham Fight third instead of Mary B in the Calcutta Plate, while the numbers were always put up with commendable promptitude. The appointment of Mr. Lance as Clerk of the Course was most happy and not only have trainers and owners found in him an official always ready to do all possible to oblige, but more important still the course under his tender care has been in good condition right throughout the season. Mr. Hutchison has worked as zealously as ever and, relieved from the strain of the responsibility of two men's work on one pair of shoulders, he has kept the office going in great style, and the stands, paddock and all departments under his charge have done credit to his painstaking work. Messrs. Stokes and Orr have been successful in their capacities of Clerk of the Scales and Timekeeper. Last but most important we come to the Handicapper—well no handicapper has ever given universal satisfaction or ever will and for our part we think Mr. Griffiths is as good as most. We think that his chief fault is a fear of "chucking in" non-tryes—a fear which makes him keep up the weights on horses that are not showing from up to reputation, long after they have demonstrated that they are not at their best and he also strikes one as a little slow to appreciate the difference of horses at different distances.

For instance Mayfowl who was handicapped in 1¼ miles on the 12th on his running in the 1 mile on the 5th was a stone cold cert for the latter race as he is a 10lb. better horse over the 1¼ miles. However, as we have said before, on the whole Mr. Griffiths has done well and will no doubt do better next year.

The figures as to winning owners and jockeys which are give below speak for themselves and need no comment.

THE 'VARSITY BOAT RACE.

LONDON, Wednesday, 23rd March 1910.

THE Inter 'Varsity Boat Race was rowed this afternoon, Oxford beating Cambridge by three and a half lengths. The Cantabs were smarter away but Oxford led at Craven Steps: they were displaced by Cambridge at the Crabtree, but went ahead again at Hammersmith Bridge and led for the rest of the journey, maintaining their form throughout. Time —20mins. 14secs. The race was rowed in ideal weather.

Of the sixty-seven races rowed Oxford has now won 36, Cambridge 30, the race of 1877 ending in a dead-heat. The record time for the race is 18mins. 47secs. accomplished by Oxford in 1893 and by Cambridge in 1900. The crews representing the Universities this year were most probably as follows :—

In a Scottish town a commercial traveller who called upon a tradesman at long intervals made a visit at Christmas-time, "Here's a box of cigars," he said to the tradesman, "and I hope you'll enjoy them."

"Na,na!" replied the trader; "I couldna tak' them—I never dae business that way."

"Tut, tut—nonsense, sir!" exclaimed the traveller: "it's just a Christmas-box."

"Na, na man! I never tak' anything for nae thing."

"Well' well—give me a shilling for the box, said the traveller, "if that will ease your conscience."

"Ay, ay! Weel,I let me see," said the honest shop-keeper, running his eye over the silver he took from his pocket; "I see I've got a florin here—I'll tak' twa boxes!"

"Now, Johnny," said the Sunday-school teacher, "can you tell me one of the most remarkable things Moses did?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied the bright youth. "He broke all the Commandments at the same time."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

AT the Calcutta Tenth Extra Meeting, Mr. Galstaun's luck was certainly in, for he won three races—with Circus Girl, Bonny Boy, Runaway Girl, all ridden by Jimmy Robinson.

The programme opened with the Pony Consolation Welter Handicap. Fadgie went out a hot favourite with Circus Girl next in demand. The latter led from the start, followed by Fadgie, Chippy Norton and Wal, the last named passed Fadgie and Chippy Norton coming into the straight but could not get on terms with Circus Girl : the favourite died away at the finish and could get no nearer than fourth.

IN the Long Distance Consolation Plate, the favourite Speedometer made all the running to the half mile followed by Haloya, Sir Ulric and Tommy Daw, Runaway Girl close up, the latter went ahead three furlongs from home and ran home an easy winner by three-quarters of a length from Tommy Daw, the favourite a length away third.

THE Farewell Handicap was a cake walk for Longchamps, who started an even money favourite ; he jumped out of the machine first and had the race won all the way. Scotch Girl and Wise Hawk came with a run at the end, but could make no impression on Longchamps, who won cantering by two lengths : Wise Hawk beat Kaffirpan for third place by a neck.

THEN came the Sprinters Consolation Plate. Bonny Boy opened up a warm favourite from the start at 6 to 4 on and at the close 3 to 1 on was taken. Royal Colours led at the start from Harene, Bonny Boy, and Northwood. At the distance the four horses raced together and after a fine race up the straight Bonny Boy won by a neck from Harene, who finished a neck ahead of Royal Colours. Northwood a neck away fourth.

STRONGHOLD and Electric Light made all the running from Devilette and Plain Mister next Prince Moorefield and Maroon just behind, Light Metal and Maisonette together last. They kept this order until the three furlongs where Devilette went ahead followed by Plain Mister and Electric Light. Plain Mister caught Devilette at the distance and beat her by two lengths. Maisonette came fast at the end and finished third.

THE Balaclava Plate was an easy win for the favourite Levant. Vanity led from Starlight, Lord Chester, Padre, Levant, and Spero. But dropped back beaten before the half mile was reached, where Starlight and Lord Chester led from Levant and Spero. At the distance Levant had the race won from Padre, who ran up to second place. Starlight beat Spero by a neck for third.

BUTLIN trained another winner in Longchamps last Saturday. He has won three races now for the Kour Sahib with his string of two horses. This make three winners and one second out of four starts.

THOMPSON, the well-known trainer and jockey, died at the Bowring Hospital, Bangalore, on Monday night from the after effects of ptomaine poisoning. He had just returned to Bangalore with a string of horses from Bombay when he was taken ill.

WE regret to record the death in England on the 21st instant of Mr. J. D. West, senior partner of Messrs. J. Thomas and Co., Calcutta. A popular member of society and one of our prominent business men Mr. West came out to this city 27 years ago and had intended to retire in May, but he fell ill while touring in Kashmir and had to go home to recuperate last October. During his lengthy sojourn in Calcutta Mr. West was a well-known figure in the sporting world and was well to the fore in matters connected with racing, polo and paper chasing, at one time acting as a Steward of the Calcutta Turf Club. He was only 51 and leaves a widow with whom the greatest sympathy will be felt.

OUR Bombay correspondent writes:—A rather better class as a whole was out for the Fourteenth Extra on Saturday and so full were entries that eight races were made of them and punters scored. The postponement of next Saturday's races till Monday does not make a blank week as an extra day's prospectus has been framed for Wednesday. I notice there is to be no settling yet and we shall presumably have the usual muddle of three day's fixing up of accounts, peculiarly enough following a bad day for the Books.

BLEACH's stable made amends for failing to win of late, by carrying off the first three races of the day, each being in turn solid favourites. First

DOG MEDICINES

MAY NOW BE OBTAINED IN INDIA

In CALCUTTA from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO.,
And in BOMBAY from TREACHER & CO., Ltd.

These preparations are based on the most recent and up-to-date veterinary research, and are the best possible remedies for the various ailments and diseases for which they are recommended.

It is of the greatest importance in treating all cases of sickness in dogs that the nature of the ailment should be recognised, and in order to enable dog owners to do this we have published a book.

"HINTS TO DOG OWNERS"

ILLUSTRATED,

which is now the standard work of reference in thousands of kennels in the United Kingdom, where it has had a larger circulation than any book on dogs ever published, the demand for it being so great that more than 200,000 copies have been disposed of. It may be obtained gratis on application to either of the above-mentioned firms in India, and everyone interested in dogs should make a point of obtaining a copy at once.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR DOGS.

These Capsules are tasteless and odourless, and are the surest and safest means of expelling both Round and Tape Worms from dogs (or puppies three months old or over) weighing 10lb. or more. They require no purgative medicine afterwards. May be easily given wrapped up in a piece of meat or cheese.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR PUPPIES AND TOY DOGS.

Every puppy at six weeks old should be dosed with these Capsules which may be safely given to even the smallest and most delicate toy puppy. They surely expel all Worms and never cause the least discomfort. Castor oil is not required before or after giving them, and it is not necessary for the puppy to fast before being dosed.

SHERLEY'S "SKIN CURE."

An absolutely unrivalled dressing for Mange, Eczema, Ringworm, and all other Skin Diseases of dogs. It cures Mange for certain in a week, and not only cures the disease but starts an immediate and vigorous growth of hair.

SHERLEY'S "DISTEMPERCURE."

The best remedy for Distemper ever discovered; it reduces the fever and creates an appetite. In each tin are full instructions as to nursing and dieting, on which the cure of Distemper depends so much.

SHERLEY'S "SHAMPOO."

A Liquid Soap for Washing Dogs. It penetrates the hair, which it cleanses much better than any solid soap and in less than half the time.

It removes dandruff, stimulates the growth of hair and gives the coat a healthy, glossy appearance.

It also prevents Eczema, and destroys Fleas and all other insects.

came the divided Selling Plate, Prince Charlie being favourite for the first on track form more than anything as Crown on anything else had the stronger claim. Bandy Dick, by way of being a squib, made the pace but Crown was always handy and Prince Charlie was with them after a couple of furlongs. He and Crown turned together, but from there Prince Charlie had the grey settled.

The second was done in decidedly better time, Prosperity being heavily backed to make amends for his last defeat, when he got a bad start. In a poor class, he nevertheless had by no means all his own way, as after Red Hazard, another of the squibby sort, had shown the way, Siberia continued his consistency and made a bold bid.

Also divided was the Nursery for new ones, and though the second appeared to contain the best of the season there was nothing much in it on timing. For the first Padsha, on the strength of his being so badly shut in the time before, was always at a short price, a strong rush coming for Guinea Gold. Injas and Braganza were first out, Furham next in front of the favourite and Rassmosum. Rassmosum and Injas were unable to stay when it came to racing and Padsha came through. Guinea Gold only began to shew up late, and had no time to catch Padsha, who was not quite all out and put up his best performance. He has steadily improved, and must now be counted amongst the best.

With all his 9-12, Asfundier opened out shortest for the other, but Tajilmulook had a strong enough following to wind him up an even money favourite. He once beat the former over six, but failing to place in the mile Second Dealers' which Asfundier won, he was considered out of form. That he has come back to it, however, was now proved by the betting and in the race, as he led from pillar to post. Guinea Mohur hung on to him all the way to finish half a length behind, a length in front of Asfundier, who was handy without being able to make any impression till the later stages.

Anything more open than the Consolation Plate would take finding, Bright Metal winding up favourite after most money had come for Lasata, despite his last run, and Lancasterite. The former of these passed the latter after a couple of furlongs, Winsome drawing up into second place three furlongs later. Bright Metal was done at the bend when asked, but there was a good race between the other two. Winsome drew up soon after the distance and looked like winning, but Lasata answered the whip gamely and hung on by half a length. It was done in bad time and Vick was asked to explain how Lancasterite could make no show. Smith was also carpeted over Lasata's inconsistency and it is said his reason for this is the use of the blinkers he now wore.

Punters were fairly accurate when they picked Parliament, Dhafer, Thaboor and Eed to fight the Musjid Plate out. Alma led the first two for the first half mile, then as usual Dhafer went to the front, Thaboor coming third with Eed handy. Near the bend Dhafer began to leave Alma and Parliament drew up to lead before the distance, holding Thaboor. Eed got none too clear a journey, and having to come all on the outside just missed Parliament by a neck.

Another good race was seen in the sprint for big horses. From the beginning Chivalry was made favourite, and remained as such from Forfeit, good money coming for Lord Merv. For a change, Coquette was first away, but Chivalry soon caught and passed her, Lord Merv third in front of Forfeit. Entering the straight, Lord Merv began to draw up and in the changes of position that took place Forfeit was interfered with. A hundred yards from home Lord Merv caught Chivalry, and in a fine finish beat him a head. This is the winner's third consecutive win, with 10·6 up this last was a great performance.

Lastly the Tansa Plate of five furlongs with Mumbra, Shanwar and Lookman practically equal favourite. Rose was only in front for a few strides. Sheriff passing him and Mumbra, Shanwar and Vedas settling down next. Though at one time it looked as though Mumbra would pass the little grey, Sheriff stayed on and the first four positions were unchanged, Shanwar staying Vedas out and Lookman failing to join the front batch at all. This was the only real upset of the day.

The Bombay Light Horse annual sports were held at Santa Cruz on Saturday. This being a race day, there was not a big attendance but a very enjoyable time was spent in contesting a varied programme.

First came the Tent-pegging, for the Challenge Cup sportingly presented by Mr. Symons. By carrying on both occasions, Baird was a comfortable winner from Carter.

A Scurry over the couple of furlongs flat was exciting. Pearson on Dick keeping on in front and winning by a length from Stewart's Firefly and Sergeant Major Coy's Lincoln.

Section jumping was very ably carried out, that consisting of Sergeant Baird and Johnston, Mavor and Boyozis being particularly good and winning from Annesley, Whyte, Loundes and Hodges.

Two heats were made of the Postilion Race, Spence and Johnson winning them. In the final Johnson won comfortably.

Lastly the ever popular Lloyd Lindsay, the various sections showing good training. The winners were Byrt, Reid, Danner and Sergeant Major Coy, to whom much credit is due for the general excellence of the arrangements.

This over, the prizes were distributed by Mrs. H. E. E. Proctor.

Our Bangalore correspondent, writing on the 19th instant says:—The Tennis Tournament concluded yesterday afternoon and I have sent you the final results separately. Besides the Hon'ble Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Fraser several other visitors graced the occasion with their presence. Mrs. Fraser presented the prizes, all of which consisted of silver cups, two prizes being given for each event—one for the winner and one for the runner-up. It was the greatest pity that Captain Sargent, who was running the show, was so suddenly transferred to Madras. He left on Monday night with Mrs. Sargent, and his duties in connection with the Tournament were carried out by Captain Tovey, who saw it brought to a successful close.

The "Rocket" Troop ("O" Battery, Royal Horse Artillery) are holding a series of Boxing competitions at their Gymnasium on the 30th instant. The principal events will be a six-round contest between Bombdr. Bagge, "O" Battery, R. H. A., and Pte. Stevens, 2nd Q. O. Cameron Highlanders; and a similar match between Corpl. Edwards of "O" Battery and Corpl. Wheeler, 14th (King's) Hussars. There will also be a Novices Welter Weight competition (10st. 7lbs.) open to Bangalore, for which prizes of Rs. 50 and Rs. 25 are offered and three events for Novices of "O" Battery only, feather weights at 9st., light weights 10st., middle weights 11st. 4lbs.

Football is now in full swing in the station. The Soldiers' Club Tournament has not made any progress during the week as the match in the first round between "B" Company of the Camerons and "B" Squadron of the Hussars was drawn twice and has not yet been played off and there are two other matches to be played in the first round.

The Central College Football Tournament is announced to begin on the 30th instant and the Inter-Schools Trophy Tournament will start from 5th April. The Lal Bagh Golf Club are having a presentation of prizes this afternoon at the Lal Bagh.

I must congratulate the team of the 20th Deccan Horse which pulled off the Venugopal Polo Cup the other day at Madras. This is their second tournament victory this year and they are no doubt looking forward to adding to their laurels at the forthcoming tournament at Ooty and later on in Mysore and Bangalore.

Our London correspondent writes:—It is good news to hear that our old friends of the Argonaut R.C., Toronto, will throw down the gauntlet for the "Grand" and "Stewards" this year at Royal Henley. Latest advices report them as very keen upon further competition at the big English meeting, where they have been always so welcome and successful. Probably no club has ever shown such consistently good work as the Argonauts in the teeth of class rivals. They certainly deserve, even if they cannot command, downright success next July. Entries from Holland, Germany, Switzerland, and America—a couple of scullers, at least—are also promised. It is to be hoped the 1st of June will find these optimistic reports verified. It is rumoured, too, that the Belgians will be represented by a four, although not an eight, at the Royal meeting. With the advent of the University crews to the Upper Thames—they are due next week at Putney—the 1910 amateur season may now fairly be said to be "inaugurated." Most of the leading metropolitan clubs are busy thus early and it is the general opinion they will again attain a fair measure of success even at the Royal meeting later on. No Oxford or Cambridge vs. Belgium race is likely to be rowed this summer, we understand. Nor will the Belgian VIII. compete at the Zambesi River Olympic Regatta, as reported; at least, they had no intention of so doing a week ago. Some Oxford and Cambridge crews may be tempted to go out and, from all accounts, the Thames R.C. IV.—all-conquering last year—are in half a mind to follow suit. One sincerely hopes they may. Four-oared rowing would be safe in their hands, so to speak.

Ernest Barry, the champion of England, has started training for his big match with R. Arnst. It is fourteen years since an Englishman competed for the world's championship. And he believes he is going to carry the proud title—last accomplished thirty-five years ago. "He will succeed who believes he can" is still as true as ever it was. A trainer has not half done his work who allows his charge to ever get out of spirits or to even contemplate the possibility of disaster. And Barry is in the right hands. Outside Tom Sullivan, his trainer in chief, such famous amateur champions as Messrs. Guy Nickalls and H. T. Blackstaffe are keeping an eye on him. In the language of the hour, what they don't know of sculling isn't worth knowing! But Barry and his backers have been treated very cavalierly by Arnst. What right had he to fix up an interim race with Welch, or anybody else, in the face of his Zambesi River engagement? Such action is not cricket. The position is made almost farcical. Suppose Welch beats Arnst (and more unlikely things have happened), will Barry then have to do battle for the stakes only! He certainly will if the Arnst vs. Welch race carries with it the coveted title. But does it? That point ought to be thrashed out immediately. In a sense, it is vital to the August tussle.

Last month a game of football was responsible for two deaths at Aberamman, South Wales. The ball was kicked out of bounds and rolled into the river. There was a strong current running at the time. A lad, in attempting to reach the ball, overbalanced, and was carried down the stream and drowned. Two young men, who rushed to his assistance, were soon in difficulties, but were rescued. One was brought round, but the latter died on the way to his home.

At the Oxford University Sports last month the hammer record was beaten by G. E. Putnam, of Christ Church, who threw 151 feet 8 inches which is the best yet done either at Oxford or Cambridge.

A motor-car which "hisses like a swan" will soon be terrifying Calcutta horses; it was shipped from London on the 1st instant. The owner of this wierd engine is Mr. R. N. Matthewson of "No. 1, Calcutta" who, it may be remembered, some years ago had a fearsome electric light installation on a dogcart—a light on the horse's head, one on the whip, one at each corner of the trap and so on. We read that this swan car has been designed by the owner, that the bonnet is covered in by the model of a swan, that the eyes of this gigantic fowl are composed of prism lenses, which are lit up by electricity and the nostrils are made so that the exhaust can be sent through them, causing a nerve-shattering noise—a sort of hiss of 100 swan power. Its appearance on the Red Road will be awaited with interest.

The fourth round of the Golfer's Cup in connection with the Royal Bombay Golf Club was played last week and resulted as follows:—Johnston beat Lattey, Arnot beat Owen, Laurie beat Duxbury, and Scott beat Marsden. In the semi-finals Arnot will meet Johnston and Scott will meet Laurie.

The Captain's Prize competition in connection with the Calcutta Golf Club was brought to a conclusion on Saturday last when T. Drimmie (scr.) and A. Lawson (2) met in the final, Drimmie winning by 4 up and 2 to play. Considering the large number of entries this victory of Drimmie's is a very meritorious one for a scratch man. He drew a bye in the first round, and then defeated successively J. D Laing (8) by 3 and 2, F. W. Howse (13) by 1 up, W. S. Wallis (14) by 6 and 5, C. E. Wood (6) at the 19th hole, J. D. Gatheral (scr.) at the 20th hole after a tie, and finally A. Lawson (2) by 4 and 2. Lawson, the runner-up, gets a prize from the Wallis (14) was played off on Saturday and ended in another tie.

The Times, not long ago, published the conditions laid down by our War Office, for the guidance of inventors submitting designs for an automatic rifle. It is instructive to note that the calibre is to be not less than ·27 or more than ·28 of an inch. No doubt the great success of the Ross-Eley rifle has influenced our Government in arriving at this wise decision. A reduction in calibre below the ·303 of the Lee Enfield, has long been advised by some of the greatest small arm experts. High tactical efficiency is incompatible with such a large bore as ·303 inch. With a smaller bore it is possible to have very high muzzle velocity without unmanageable recoil, and without the undesirable necessity of unduly reducing the sectional density of the bullet. The Germans and Americans have reduced the weight of their bullets and given them long sharp points. By this means a high muzzle velocity is secured without undue recoil. But these light bullets, in spite of their excellent shape, cannot of course compare with projectiles of greater sectional density, starting with the same muzzle velocity. Thus a ·280 bullet of 160 or 170 grains, and with the latest type of long sharp point, is incomparably superior, especially at long ranges, to a ·30 bullet of 150 grains or thereabouts. (Supposing they both start with about the same muzzle velocity.) It is probable that a muzzle velocity of about 3,000 f.s. with a moderately heavy bullet, will be achieved with the automatic rifle of the future. The actual weight of bullet selected will depend on the pressures given by the smokeless powder employed. One of the conditions is, that the working pressure at 80 degrees Fahr. must not exceed 21 tons to the square inch. We have not been able to ascertain exactly what the pressure in the Ross-Eley ·28 rifle is, but we believe it is decidedly below this figure.

In connection with the above, it will be of interest to recall what very creditable results the Germans have been able to achieve, by the makeshift of using a light bullet in their comparatively large bore Military rifle. The calibre of the German Service rifle is ·311 inch, i.e. decidedly larger than our own ·303.

The original bullet weighed 227 grains; the present sharp pointed one is but 154·3 grains. The muzzle velocity with the light bullet is 2,900 f.s., while the highest point of the trajectory curve for 1,000 yards range, is 14 feet. The Lee Enfield's 215 grain bullet rises to about 25 feet for the same range.

At 2,000 yards the highest point of the German bullet's trajectory is 141 feet, as against 198 feet for the Lee Enfield.

A ·270 or ·280 rifle with bullet of suitable weight to its calibre, and muzzle velocity of about 3,000 f.s. would exhibit a decidedly flatter curve than this German Spitze bullet; especially at 2,000 yards.

Writing of regimental pets a London journal says that these are specially numerous and varied amongst British soldiers in India, and cantonments and bungalows shelter not only dogs but also gorgeously hued parrots and monkeys, as well as tame bears and young lion cubs. Although generally born in captivity, the "old Adam" sometimes manifests itself in these latter, and then they become rather an embarrassing possession to their masters. When this happens there is nothing for it but to make over the animals to the authorities of the nearest Zoological gardens. Here they are visited from time to time by their ex-owners, who bring with them choice morsels of food with which to cheer their captivity. It would almost seem that, despite their new surroundings, the caged animals often remember their old friends. At any rate, there are said to be instances on record of grown-up lions and tigers that, after languishing for years behind the bars of the Calcutta Zoo, have shown unmistakable signs of recognition when a soldier who has known them as cubs has happened to come near them again. Quite the most curious sort of pet for a regiment to possess is a gander. The Grenadier Guards, however, once owned a very fine specimen. This was somewhere about twenty years ago, when the Guards were serving in Canada. One night while a sentry was on duty pacing up and down his lonely beat he saw a goose limping towards him over the frozen snow. The bird had broken its leg, and the soldier carried it off to the regimental surgeon, who set the limb in splints. Peter, as he was called, had a grateful nature, and on his recovery attached himself to the troops. A few days afterwards he saved the life of a corporal by flying in the face of a rebel who was just about to fire at him. The Grenadiers brought Peter home with them to London, and he lived to enjoy a ripe old age at the Tower.

Many people on coming to India for the first time are haunted by the idea of snakes and constantly expect to meet one. Colonel St. Quintin relates his experiences in this connection in Blackwood, and says that though for a long time he wandered all over the country and jungles he saw and killed but very few, and never even once met one in his bath. But a doctor of his acquaintance who had a wife and children and a very large garden running down to the river was so worried with the idea, that he offered his mali two rupees for every snake he killed in the garden. Needless to say the mali made a pretty good haul of rupees the first week, but the snakes did not seem to diminish, rather to increase, and soon became so expensive that he had to reduce the price to two annas, and even then the game would have gone on had not the doctor been so chaffed by his friends that he gave up paying altogether, when of course the snakes ceased to breed daily. He probably never saw a live snake. That mali must have hunted a biggish bit of country, and "rechauffed" a lot to get hold of as many as he did. Colonel Quintin also tells a curious story of a snake and a stork. He saw a large stork standing by the edge of a jheel. It was moving its head and neck up and down in a very curious way. A young fellow with him who had only just come out and had never seen one before shot it. A man dashed up and cut its throat—after the manner of the Mussulman, who professes to eat nothing he has not drawn blood from. A boy then picked up one of its legs and swung it over his shoulder, with its head hanging down. After walking about 100 yards the boy was suddenly shocked that the bird was alive, and its head was seen to be moving. It was then seen on looking closely that about four inches of the tail of a snake was wobbling from the cut in the neck, and presently a big live water snake about four feet long was pulled out. This accounted for the stork's queer behaviour: he had evidently tried to swallow the snake, head first, but it was too big for him, and he could not get it down.

The motor traffic of London is now so large that it is suggested that there should be special police to regulate it and prevent dangerous driving. During the year ending 31st January last it is reported that no fewer than 396 motor vehicles mounted the footway in the metropolitan area, causing 336 cases of damage to property, injuring 109 persons, and killing nine. It is probable that nearly all these accidents, most of them of a novel character, arose from injudicious and sometimes absolutely reckless driving when the streets were in slippery state, or simply from too great a speed in driving in crowded thoroughfares. In a great many cases also what is known to motorists as "driving on the brakes" was almost certainly a direct cause, for it is a common practice among taxicab men to drive the vehicle up to an obstruction, fixed or moving at too high a speed and then jam on the brakes to their utmost extent. This, of course, not only ranks as extremely bad driving among those who know, but has a most deleterious effect on the tires, back axle, and other parts of the vehicle and engine. The policeman on point duty can but rarely check offences of this kind, and a travelling constable would be the best means of preventing them. This fault of using the brakes too hard is rarely seen among the now well trained drivers of private cars, whether amateur or professional, for they realize the damage and danger caused by such methods. The perambulating or cycling policeman would be able to take note of a considerable proportion of cases of reckless driving and report them. It may be argued that it would be difficult to get the evidence necessary to convict an offender without the help and corroboration of bystanders. But there is no reason to doubt that the bystanders would in most cases be more likely to assist the police than the taxicab driver, for the latter is not loved by those who have to use the footways of London or to cross the streets. The prejudice, if any, would not be against the police in checking such practices.

The veteran inventor, Sir Hiram Maxim, is likely to gain fresh laurels by a new aeroplane of which wonderful things are expected. A recent number of "Flight" contains a description by the inventor of his new machine. About 18 months ago it appeared to him that with slight modifications, the Baldwyn's Park type of machine was still the best that could be devised. He therefore determined to build another machine on the same lines, but much smaller, and to have it driven by a petrol engine instead of by steam. This engine has 4 cylinders, 5 inches by 5⅝ inches, which, with the pistons, connecting rods, and crankshaft, are made of a special brand of "Vickers" steel. The engine, including the spindles and exhaust valves, is water-cooled, and a new system of oiling is employed, wherein a small pump with a 1¼ inch bore and 1¾-inch stroke is driven by a train of gears and "clock work" so arranged that the piston is raised against the resistance of a spring and liberated four times a minute, the spring being of sufficient strength to produce a pressure on the oil of 120 lbs. per square inch. The result claimed is that every part of the engine, including the gudgeon pins, is thoroughly lubricated every 15 seconds. The aeroplane is provided with three screws; one is placed directly on the screw-shaft and takes the place of a flywheel. The others are much larger, over 11 feet in diameter, and run at a slower rate. The main part of the machine is composed of six aeroplanes, and the outside ends

Born salmon and trout are very subject to attacks of fungi, and these saprophytic growths frequently produce alarmingly fatal results. Nature provides all healthy fish with a slime on their bodies, which is a protection against fungi; but during the spawning season the male salmon and trout fight very fiercely, and inflict severe wounds upon each other, on which saprophytic growths settle and spread very rapidly. More especially is this the case in shallow and warm waters. A salt bath will, as a rule, cure fish so attacked, and in the United States of America where salmon and trout often become affected with fungi through the low state of the streams, salt is often sprinkled into the water, with excellent results. When salmon are affected, they run down to the tidal waters instinctively and get "clean."

A very successful boxing tournament was engineered by the officers of the Rifle Brigade last week and the three nights contests at the Volunteer Headquarters provided some interesting sport. The Regiment appears to be working hard to revive interest in boxing in Calcutta and it was rather disappointing to find that the attendance was not bigger. Major-General Cowans was present on Saturday night and gave away the prizes. The officials were: Referee, Mr. Sheepshanks; Judges, Captain Powell of the Rifle Brigade, and Mr. J. H. Allen; Time-keeper, Sergeant Pauley of the Rifle Brigade. The following are the results:—

Novices.—Feather. Meredith (K.S.L.I.) beat Hellrick (Rifle Brigade.) Light. Cainan beat Willis (both Rifle Brigade.) Welter. Pritchard (K.S.L.I.) beat Bloomfield Rifle Brigade.) The Rifleman retired in the first round owing to an injured thumb. Middle. Saunders beat Price (both Rifle Brigade.) Open.—Light. Price (Rifle Brigade) beat Barnes (Royal West Kent.) Welter. Daniels (Rifle Brigade) beat Gibson (Royal West Kent.) Consolation Contests. Genesis beat Johnson (both Rifle Brigade) and Ravens and Pattenden (Rifle Brigade) fought a draw. A special prize presented by Mr. Sheepshanks, for the most scientific boxer, was won by Rifleman Price, while the prize for the best loser went to Pte. Landergen (Rifle Brigade) who was knocked out by Mylne (Rifle Brigade) in a five-round contest.

Interesting events have recently taken place in the boxing world. We publish to-day details of the fight between Adolph Wolgast and Battling Nelson for the light weight championship of the world. The Durable Dane, who had for so long carried all before him that he had come to regard all likely opponents as scarcely worthy his steel, was decisively whipped by Wolgast whom Nelson had considered another easy victim. The German outclassed the Battler, beating him all along the line and showing himself a splendid long-distance fighter. Nelson has held the highest reputation for lasting and stamina, but he was outclassed, outlasted and outfought by Wolgast, as the report appearing further on shows. The Battler's courage was, however, undeniable and this fight proved him, perhaps the gamest loser who ever took a thrashing. The question now arises who will be the next opponent of Wolgast, for he will not bear his new honours long without a challenge. Freddie Welsh, Packey McFarland, Murphy and Owen Moran are all anxious to have a try to wrest the championship from Adolph. Moran is supposed to have first call. Owen has just fought a second battle with Murphy, the New York light weight, in which the verdict went against him, a decision which met with the greatest disapproval from the spectators, who regarded Moran as an easy winner and hooted the referee. In three previous encounters Moran had outfought Murphy, having the better of two 10 rounds no—decision contests at New York and beating him in a 12-round affair at Boston. It is possible that another meeting will shortly take place between this couple. Wolgast has met both Moran and Murphy in 6-round no—decision bouts, and if they come together again over the Marathon journey a good fight is expected.

Eddie McGoorty has challenged Tom Thomas, the English middle weight champion, but nothing has yet been fixed up. Iron Hague has once more been beaten—this time by Jewey Smith, and thus another factor is introduced into the question of the English heavy weight supremacy.

The Barton Cup Polo Tournament at Jubbulpore was put through last week and was a most successful affair. Eight teams entered and in the first round the 24th Punjabis beat the 27th Light Cavalry by 5 goals to 1, the 12th Cavalry beat the Royal Fusiliers by 6 goals to nil, the R. F. A. beat the 22nd Punjabis by 6 goals to 3, and the 2nd Lancers beat the Remnants by 5 goals to nil. The semi-finals were played on the 16th instant when the 12th Cavalry beat the 24th Punjabis by 3 goals to 1 and the 2nd Lancers beat the Royal Artillery by 7 goals to nil. The final between the 2nd Lancers and 12th Cavalry was played on Saturday last, the Lancers winning a good game by 6 goals to 2. The teams were as follows:—2nd Lancers: Captain Salkeld 1, Mr. Gould 2, Captain Ward 3, and Captain Knowles back. 12th Cavalry: Captain Fell 1, Mr. Henry 2, Captain Baird 3, and Major Macmullen back.

Captain W. E. Wilson Johnstone, 36th Sikhs, has won the Military Racquets Championship held at home last week.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 25th February 1910.

March has come in brilliantly with slight frost and much successful effort on the part of Old Sol to assert himself. What a wretched month was February! Yet, although the rain we had was in many cases double the average, a curious feature of this climate is that sunshine was also from ten to fifteen degrees above the average. Another even more remarkable circumstance was that places with the most cloud in the daytime experienced the least rain, and localities enjoying the most sunshine had exceptionally heavy precipitation. At Falmouth, and generally in the "Cornish Riviera," as we like to call it, the days were sunny and springlike, and all along the south coast there were frequent sunny afternoons. The climate of these isles reminds me somewhat of Mr. Rudyard Kipling's Fuzzy Wuzzy, a sort of "injer-rubber idjit on the spree" most weeks of the year.

The suffering of Divorce Court clients—especially those who are really too poor to indulge in the luxury of going to law—is occupying the earnest attention of the Royal Commission before which some interesting evidence is being tendered by men whose experience in such matters is unrivalled. This week two witnesses were called, the President of the Divorce Division and his learned brother of the same Court, and their evidence presented points of contrast of considerable interest. Both judges favour an increase of divorce facilities for the poor, and both criticised, though in varying degree, the existing system of judicial separation. But whereas on the first-named subject Sir John Bigham favours a scheme for enabling evidence to be given in a local tribunal, but leaving the case to the decision of the High Court, Mr. Justice Bargrave Deane advocated the sending of a divorce judge on circuit. The question of newspaper reports afforded another example of divergent views. Sir John, convinced that publicity acts as a useful deterrent, suggested that partial restrictions only should be imposed, the publication of improper details being made punishable by fine as contempt of Court. The President's colleague, on the other hand, would prefer to go much further, and, suppressing all evidence, limit the records of cases in the Press to the names of parties.

Sir George Lewis, the well-known solicitor, expressed some emphatic opinions based on half a century's professional experience. He vigorously protested against the present legal differentiation between the sexes, and declared that "the law ought to be changed, and that the wife ought to have divorce on equal terms with her husband." As to the poor, he maintained that the existing law provided no divorce for them; the position, in fact, was shocking and disgraceful. Holding this view, he strongly advocated the entrusting of divorce cases to County-court judges, "among whom are some of the most learned judges we have."

When judges of the High Court discuss with a Royal Commission—and with the public—the conditions of marriage and divorce, we may promise ourselves that, one way or another, a change in the law is at hand. The Divorce Law of 1857 was a lawyer's measure, carried through the Commons by Bethell, and pushed through the Lords by Cranworth. Twelve years before, Mr. Justice Maule had held the old law up to derision in that often misquoted address delivered by him from the bench to a labourer named Hall who had married bigamously after his wife had robbed and deserted him. Punctuated with commands to poor Hall that he should hold his tongue and listen to judicial wisdom, Mr. Justice Maule taught the defendant that the law was the same to the low and poor as it was to the rich man. Hall should have brought an action for damages against the tinker who had wronged him. After paying his costs of some hundred and fifty pounds he could have gone on to the Ecclesiastical Court and to the House of Lords at a price of six hundred pounds more. "As I hope to be saved," pleaded Hall, "I haven't a penny." Hall served three months imprisonment, but his wrongs had their share in changing that law which was the same to rich and poor.

The following extract from the proceedings in the House of Commons last Monday may raise a smile in India:—Sir William Bull asked the Under-Secretary of State for India why, if the importation of seditious literature into India is prohibited, European visitors are allowed to travel over India delivering speeches corresponding to this literature without let or hindrance. Mr. Montagu replied that the Secretary of State is not aware of the existence of the state of things described in the latter part of the Question. The Law as to sedition in India applies to all persons, whether Indians or Europeans, and the Secretary of State has no reason to suppose that the Governments in India apply different standards to Europeans and Indians.

Naturally, in this, as in much else, the Secretary of State is "not aware" of things which every European in India could tell him about. One is reminded of the Biblical adder "who stoppeth his ears" when reading extracts such as the above.

So often has it happened that plays coming from America with the reputation of masterpieces have proved to be nothing more than crude concoctions of milk-and-water sentimentality and sheer theatricality that experience has taught us to remain sceptical until all we have heard has been confirmed by what we see. Thus the production of "The Climax," produced at the Comedy Theatre on Saturday night, was not the disappointment to most of us as must otherwise have been the case. In the States Mr. Edward Locke's three act play had a brilliantly successful run, and we were told to expect a piece singularly original in theme, delicately charming, humanly humorous, and strong and subtle in characterisation. Well, we waited in vain for the realisation of these virtues on Saturday. A good plot of the machine made order was not sufficiently developed to support three acts; the characters were too sketchily drawn to make any appeal; and the padding—of which the piece was chiefly composed—was not often amusing.

The piece provides good opportunity for a "star" actress to act and sing and play the piano. Nothing need be said more about the piece except this, that it turns on the power of auto-suggestion—in this case a young doctor who, in love with a singer, so affects her voice by suggestion as to cause her to lose it; then, having won her, almost at the foot of the altar he confesses, whereupon the girl abjures love and the doctor and goes back to her art, which is her life's vocation.

The "star" was Miss Marie Doro. She is still immature, but she certainly has qualifications, considerable charm and lightness of touch, a pleasing voice, and in one moment of tragedy she came to us right away across the footlights. But by far the best performance of the evening was that of the singing master, Mr. Russ Whytall, who gave a study which was not only elaborated and sympathetic but which stood out as a fine piece of interpretative acting, especially by the art with which he acted away from the audience. Mr. Guy Standing played the lover, Mr. Pinto a young musician. The audience was kindly appreciative. What a curious thing the American sentiment is!

Five-and-twenty years after his father's refusal of an earldom, Mr. Herbert Gladstone has the dignity of a Viscount of the United Kingdom. In cautious Gladstonese, the old statesman informed his Sovereign that he would not put upon record what might seem to be a perpetual, or almost a perpetual, self-denying ordinance for his family in the matter of peerages. But until to-day the baronets of Fasque have been the only Gladstones with a title to their names.

In certain quarters it is rumoured that Mr. Herbert Gladstone will take his surname as his title. He is not a lord of lands, and therefore, any territorial style would be meaningless. Had his father accepted the earldom offered by Queen Victoria he would, doubtless, have looked for a title to Liverpool, the city in which the Gladstones had risen and prospered. But Liverpool is no longer in the market, the Jenkinson earldom having been revived for the late Lord Hawkesbury. In other quarters, owing to the fact that the new Viscount was born in Downing Street, a suggestion has been put forward that he should take his title from the historic yet melancholy thoroughfare in which he first opened his eyes. Thus we are brought nearer to the time when Earls of Tottenham Court-road and Marquesses of Shaftesbury Avenue will pleasantly vary the flavour of the titles in a reformed House of Lords.

Through a collision between two taxicabs in Portman-square, the widow of an Indian officer met her death in London on Friday night. Mrs. Gustavus John Low of 38, Gloucester-place was with another lady in one of the cabs. While passing along the Oxford Street side of the square the vehicle came into violent collision with another taxicab coming in the opposite direction. The cab in which Mrs. Low was riding was struck full on the side, the windows being smashed and one of the wheels torn away.

The lady with Mrs. Low was seated next the broken windows, but she escaped with a slight cut on the forehead. Some of the pieces of glass flew past her and struck Mrs. Low in the neck. She bled profusely, and with the assistance of the police was got out of the wrecked cab as quickly as possible and taken to Middlesex Hospital. She died, however, before the hospital was reached. It was found that the flying glass had severed an artery.

Opinions differ on the subject of the playing of hockey, football and other strenuous games by young women, but surely the suggestion that they should be taught to box is going too far! Brisk games may, in the course of a century or two, give the sex some idea of fairness and some appreciation of sporting spirit, it is just possible, but boxing for women is absurd. The subject is being hotly discussed in the papers this week; but so far I have read nothing that helps me to alter my opinion. If, for example, they could be induced to "play light" there might perhaps be just a little something in it; but, of course, they would fight, who can conceive of two women keeping their tempers through three rounds! But after all women will never take to boxing I should say, how many of them will risk a black eye, a puffy lip or a bulbous nose!

The Vagrant.

Fishing.

TWO DAYS AT TANGROT.

The first morning we started at daylight. My beat was the rock cast and junction pool, while two other rods went higher up the Poonch. The rock cast is just what the words imply. There is a rock striking above the water causing a swirl in which you cast, but unless you hook a fish in the first cast or two you do not get one at all. I had fished this out, and had been once or twice round the junction pool towing a spoon behind the boat; a method of fishing which I cannot endure, whether it is for mahseer at Tangrot or salmon on Loch Tay.

I had not moved a fish, so went down to the actual junction of Poonch and Jhelum for a cast or two in the shallow water at the corner, where the clear water of the Poonch meets the flooded Jhelum. The water was some two feet deep, and I moored my boat within an easy cast of the edge of the yellow rushing torrent of the Jhelum which went tearing past at eight or ten miles an hour. I was using a small silver phantom minnow, the one on which I had lost the big fish two days before. Just as I was drawing off line to cast, an exclamation from the boatman made me turn round in time to see a big fish pass up between the shore and the boat with his back fin out of water.

I turned and cast out into the Jhelum. The minnow swung round into the clear Poonch water, and I was just beginning to draw it in for another cast when it caught in the bottom. I gave a sharp pull to free it, but did not succeed. I was just going to tell the boatman to let the boat down in order to free it, when the faintest movement from the other end told me that it was a fish I had struck. I told the boatman that it was a small fish, and began to reel in——. The next instant the fish was 100 yards away in the Jhelum, and the rapidly diminishing line on my reel told me that something must be done and done quick too if I would avert a smash.

I told the boatmen to row after the fish, but they had barely started before my 150 yards was all gone and the fish was pulling dead on the reel. For an instant I thought something would go; then the boat gained way, and we went flying down the Jhelum after the fish. For 400 yards we only just kept pace with the fish, but then he slackened a bit and I recovered a few yards of line. When I had got twenty or thirty yards back I saw that unless he stopped soon he was lost, as we were only some 300 yards above the big Jhelum rapid down which I believe only one fish has gone and been landed below—Lacy's 62 pounder. I told the men to go to the bank, and when I stepped out of the boat on to the sand I had no line at all on my reel but the fish had stopped.

Just as I landed he began to move again, and I went tearing after him over the soft sand. There was a bank up which I had to go; my shikari was ready on the top, I handed him the rod and he went on while I scrambled after him and regained the rod. Luckily, however, the fish stopped after about 40 yards, and seemingly done by his 600 or 700 yard run played slow and deep, up and down, without another determined effort to get down the rapid. Inch by inch the line came in. Sometimes he ran out a bit, but each time he came nearer in. I was putting on every ounce I dared the whole time as I knew that if he got down the rapid which was roaring and leaping 200 yards below I should never see him again.

I was getting very done with the pulling when the splice came in which showed that he was only 50 yards away. Then for just one instant I thought I had lost him. The line suddenly went slack, and I had that sinking feeling at the heart which all anglers know. I turned and fled away inland as fast as the soft sand would let me. I had not gone far before I again felt the thrill that told me the fish was still on, and had only run towards me. It was the worst thing he could have done, for I now recovered a lot of line, and presently a huge fin and tail appearing for an instant twenty yards out told me that the fish was beginning to tire.

It seemed an age before I could get him quite ready to land. Every time he approached the shore, he was off again twenty or thirty yards, and the pull devil game began again to get him in again. At last, however, he lay gasping on his side in shallow water, and the shikari placing one foot each side his head and getting his hands into his gills lifted him ashore. We passed a rope through his lip, tied him to the boat, and went off to get a weighing machine. Captain Allan was just coming in to breakfast when we got there and he kindly weighed and measured it. 48 lbs., 47½ inches length, 28 inches girth.

About 4 P.M. I started out again, and began to fish the same corner again. At the third cast there was a pluck at the minnow. I struck, and again I found myself racing down the Jhelum with the line on my reel fast shrinking to nothing. This fish however only went about 300 yards and then down he sat on the bottom of the river and sulked. I landed and waited patiently for him to move. I had about 100 yards of line out and I was afraid to do the correct thing, i.e., get in the boat and go over him, for fear of his starting again and going down the rapid below. He occasionally moved ten yards or so in a slow, solemn, irresistible way, but showers of stones did not seem to worry him at all. After 23 minutes of this the minnow dropped out of his mouth, and I was left lamenting. Of course he was much bigger than the other! The last fish always is!

Later on I got an active 19½ pounder who jumped clean out of the water once.

The second day was a day of gales and storm. It poured all day, the Poonch began to rise, and by evening was like soup. Two of us only faced the elements. I got two fish in the morning of 16 and 15 lbs.; while my luck seemed to have deserted me, as I hooked three fish and they all came untruck after a few seconds. In the afternoon the water was filthy and rising rapidly. I fished hard soaked to the skin but only a miserable little four pounder did I hook.

I was fishing Jungoo Rapid down for the last time with a 2½ inch spoon when I got hold of a fish. It played well and hard but mahseer when hooked in small water do not seem to fight like they do in a big stream like the Jhelum. They fight hard enough but they do not frighten one with the velocity of their first rush. It weighed 35½ lbs., and by the time I landed it the storm had increased to a hurricane and the colour of the water to a clayey red so I hurried back to the bungalow meeting J. on the way with a 29½ pounder. The next day the river was in high flood so I left after two days' good sport.

THE TARPON AND THE MEGALOPS.

To the Editor of "The Indian Field."

Sir,—The article on tarpon fishing localities, which appeared in the Indian Field of 27th January last, gives me a reasonable excuse for referring again to a suspicion which I have never had an opportunity of following up. The Indian megalops, as we all know, is of the same family as the tarpon: the two fish in fact are so much alike, that to the ordinary eye the Indian herring is indistinguishable from the American except by difference in size. Now tarpon are not only universally found throughout the Carribean Sea, but occur in the Atlantic on the West Coast of Africa as well. The range of the great fish is consequently very extensive. Is it not therefore quite conceivable that the Indian race is no more or less than the same fish slightly altered by different waters and feeding, and that the megalops may also attain gigantic proportions? I have never yet seen any definite statement as to the dimensions reached by M. Cyprinoides, and if very large specimens do exist, it is quite understandable that these big ones might not come within the ken of naturalists, owing to their great activity, and small value as food.

There are numerous places where tarpon exist, but there their presence is very casually, if at all, noticed. They seem to have visited Jamaican waters for years, before anyone found it out. So the existence of megalops, so large that they might justly be called tarpon, in some of our Indian estuaries, is by no means an impossible affair.

It would be very interesting to hear from those readers of the Indian Field who happen to be in a position to observe estuary fish, whether they have ever seen or heard of very large silvery fish, which might be big megalops. Megalops of considerable size are found in the fresh and brackish waters along the Madras coast. I have hooked large ones in Fort St. George moat, but they always broke me at once, so that I have only a very sketchy idea of what calibre they were.

In the confined and brackish waters of the moat, they would certainly attain nothing like their full natural dimensions.

This is likewise true of the tarpon, which takes equally readily to inland waters in Jamaica, but reaches nothing like the size of the monsters of the Gulf of Florida.

Sea fishing as a sport, is absolutely in its infancy in India, but the seas teem with immense fish, which might give extraordinary sport on suitable tackle. At Karachi, the only place where I fished much in salt water, I used to get excellent sport. I, however, devoted myself to such fish as could be taken on a light sea rod, within easy reach of Manora pier. I had not leisure enough to exploit the larger fish, which one may encounter there by making a more elaborate bandobast. As it was, I constantly got my light gear smashed up by monsters. More than once I had my 100 yards of line taken out with an irresistible rush, and my paternoster carried off bodily; that too neither far out nor in deep water.

Anyone keen on sea fishing, and with the good luck to be stationed in a suitable locality on the Indian coast, might have marvellous sport by fitting himself out with tackle suitable for monsters.

"The group illustrated was made with the 365-grain bullet as fired from the ·465 cartridge. It was produced at the very first attempt, and it constitutes what seems likely to stand for some time to come as a record amongst properly authenticated targets. The centre of the whole seven shots lie within a space practically 1 in. square (actually 1·00 in. by 1·05 in.) and the reader may satisfy himself from the reproduction of part of the actual target that all the shots would have hit a postage stamp. It is interesting to know that the sights used were of the open variety, and that orthoptic spectacles were not employed."

THE HORSE.

ITS TREATMENT IN HEALTH AND DISEASE. WITH A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BREEDING, TRAINING, AND MANAGEMENT.

Edited by Professor J. WORTLEY AXE, M.R.C.V.S.,
Ex-President of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, Late Lecturer at the Royal Veterinary College, and at the Agricultural Colleges of Downton and Wye, Chief Veterinary Inspector to the Surrey County Council, &c., &c., Author of "The Mare and Foal," "Abortion in Cattle," "Anthrax in Farm Stock," "Examination of Horses as to Soundness," &c., &c.

The Illustrations constitute a highly important feature of the work. In no other book on the horse has the pictorial art contributed so largely to illustrate the author's meaning. There are upwards of thirty plates in full colour, and seventy in black and white, together with several hundred text illustrations, all reproduced by the latest and most effective processes, together with many pedigree tables of the leading sires. Every Purchaser will be presented with three beautiful dissected models showing, respectively, the internal structure of the Horse, the structure of the teeth, and the structure of the hoof.

Complete in Nine handsomely-bound Divisional Volumes. Price, Rs. 75 net (Cash or Easy Payments.)

THE TURF.

GATWICK.

A BRIGHT morning made an appreciable difference in the attendance at Gatwick on Saturday in every department, and if the earth had only been as satisfactory as the sky, conditions would have been as near perfect as possible. A loamy soil takes a lot of draining, however, and the going was again very holding, though the combined influences of sun and wind had greatly improved it, and one could walk dry shod over the grass in the paddock. The features of the afternoon were the three successive victories of Walkington, and the failure of another French horse in Fleury II, who was well backed. Results:—

AND SCIENTIFIC TAXIDERMY,
DEHRA DUN,
United Provinces.

Depôt of Museum and Naturalists' supplies with Department for Ornamental Taxidermy. Feather Pictures of all India Game Birds made by W. M. Hutton.

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

The weather was again delightful at Kempton on Wednesday. The pleasant weather accounted for a good attendance, considering the fact that society is out of town and political affairs are paramount. The going had wonderfully improved under sun and breeze and offered a pleasant contrast to the mud through which horses have had to struggle all over the country, and though not plethoric, fields panned out fairly well, two of the races affording some sort of Grand National trials. FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

THE Scottish League team owed their success at Ewood Park, Blackburn, on Saturday, to supreme cleverness. For some time the heavier Englishmen had the better of the play, but on the snow-covered turf they could not do themselves justice, and later on, as the turf became very muddy down the centre of the ground, the heavy home forwards could not force their attacks, while the lighter Scots made the English defence look very poor. At no part of the game did the English halves play well, and with Crompton often outpaced and outmanœuvred by Templeton, the probability of a victory for the Scots always existed. The enforced changes in the Scottish team did not weaken the visitors, Templeton being one of the great successes of the match, and his partner Devine making the most of an easy opportunity to give his side the lead. By their short passing, with the ball always kept low, the Scots occasionally failed to make ground, but late in the game these tactics were out their opponents, who constantly slipped about on the treacherous turf in their efforts to reach the ball, which went from foot to foot of the Scots in a most provoking fashion for would-be tacklers. In defence, the Scots were splendidly served by Miller one of the fastest men in the field, and Brownlie in goal, while all the halves did well in persistently sticking to the English forwards. As a consequence, the home front line found much difficulty in setting down, but in the first half they did well enough to hold out promise of forcing a victory. With better support from the halves this might have been possible. In endeavouring to attack, Wall, who was often good, erred sometimes in keeping the ball too long, and Parkinson more than once tried to work a way through determined opposition when his wing men had been left unmarked. Garbutt, who came in at outside right for Rutherford, showed to great advantage, his skill in taking the ball and sureness in passing leading up to many dangerous attacks. On firm turf the English forwards would doubtless have given a great display, and the weakness was in defence. Considering the conditions, the game was a wonderfully good one. Nearly always fast play was exceedingly keen and for the most part good, with England failing to hold their clever rivals as the game progressed, with the score twice level and the deciding goal coming ten minutes from the end, there was always plenty of excitement, and the large crowd were very generous in their cheers for the Scots, who enjoyed the satisfaction of beating England in the inter-League match for the second year in succession.

Quite the most remarkable victory in the first division of the League was that gained by Aston Villa at Birmingham over Manchester United, the Midland club actually scoring seven goals to one. That success, coupled with the defeat of Notts County on their own ground by Bristol City, enabled Aston Villa to once more advance into first position. Their advantage over Notts County, while nominally only a point, is in reality much stronger, as they have not fulfilled so many engagements. Manchester United were at some disadvantage in being without Wall and Hayes, both of whom were assisting in the Inter-League match at Blackburn but even had they been present it is doubtful if their side would have escaped defeat, the football of the Villa team being so brilliant and thoroughly worthy of the great traditions of the club. Walters scored three goals and Gorrish and Hampton two each, while Manchester United's point was given them by Cartlidge putting the ball through his own goal. Notts County had their attack weakened by the absence of Cantrell, but they were expected to hold their own against Bristol City, who had won in the first game between the teams at Bristol. The match looked like ending in a draw, but during the last eight minutes of a hard struggle Cowell got through twice for the visiting club.

At the other end of the table, where, unfortunately for metropolitan football, the three London clubs are all struggling to avoid one of the last two places, the state of affairs was made very open by Bolton Wanderers and Middlesbrough, the last two in the competition, winning their matches, while Woolwich Arsenal and Tottenham Hotspur both lost. While that was happening, however, Chelsea improved their prospects by defeating Blackburn Rovers at Stamford Bridge. Douglas and Holden, two of the young players recently introduced into the forward line, scored two of the goals and Woodward the other one, the form generally being a great improvement upon that seen in most of Chelsea's previous games. Both Tottenham Hotspur and the Arsenal were unlucky to be beaten. Twice at Middlesbrough, Hotspur drew level after being led, and ultimately they went down by the odd goal in seven in a game in which they enjoyed as much of the play as their opponents. The Arsenal had much the same experience at Plumstead, and at half-time were a goal to the good. Roose's fine work in the Sunderland goal had much to do with the victory gained by his side. At present both Tottenham Hotspur and Woolwich Arsenal are above Middlesbrough and Bolton Wanderers, but both London Clubs are sadly in need of a few more victories.

As the result of a decisive victory gained by Leicester Fosse over Derby County, the leadership of the Second Division of the League has changed hands, Manchester City, who defeated Stockport County after a hard fought game, going to the head of affairs. Derby County were fully expected to hold their own at Leicester, but following an even first half the Fosse gave one of their best displays this season, and the margin of six clear goals by which they won gives a by no means exaggerated idea of the relative merits of the teams on the play. As matters now stand, Manchester City and Derby County are level on points, but Manchester City have a game in hand, and moreover possess a superior goal average.

Though two of the leading clubs, Swindon and Southampton, suffered defeat, the results arrived at had no important bearing on the struggle for the Southern League championship. Queen's Park Rangers and Brighton and Hove Albion, who figure at the head of affairs, both won, and the only noteworthy change in the positions of the prominent teams is that Southampton drop below Northampton. The reverses sustained by Swindon and Southampton came as a great surprise. After their victory over Tottenham Hotspur in the Cup, and in view of their general excellence, Swindon, though unable to put their best eleven in the field, were expected to gain an easy victory over Croydon Common. As it happened, however, Croydon Common showed vastly improved form, and by dint of resolute defence retained the goal lead they had established at the interval. Almost as unlooked for as the success of Croydon Common was the defeat of Southampton at the Crystal Palace. Southampton have this season shown the rare ability to play as well away as at home, but yesterday they failed to reproduce their best form, and Crystal Palace well deserved to win. During the early part of the season Crystal Palace played football of a quality superior to that of probably any other side in the competition, but since beating Brighton and Hove on 18th December they had not until Saturday tasted the sweets of victory.

INTER-LEAGUE MATCH.

ENGLAND VS. SCOTLAND.—The nineteenth match between representative teams of the English and Scottish Football Leagues was largely spoilt by a fall of snow at Blackburn last Friday night. Despite a thaw next morning the Ewood Park ground was covered by about an inch of snow. The lines marking the field of play had been cleared, but that was all. However, the unfortunate weather did not seriously affect the attendance, for when play began there were fully 20,000 people on the ground. Except for the condition of the turf, which as play progressed was bound to become heavy and prevent the players from maintaining a foothold, everything pointed to a good game, there being little or no wind. England won the toss, and Scotland kicking off, at once attacked through Bennett, who ran down on the right, but Quinn failed to gather the outside man's centre. Then Crompton cleverly cleared from a centre by Hay, and an attack by the English left wing followed, Wall, in the end, forcing a corner. A shot by Bache was headed away by Miller, and a little later Brettleton tested Brownlie with a very fine shot. So far, despite the snow and mud, each side had done many clever things, the passing being particularly accurate and well-judged. After England had been dangerous Scotland became aggressive, and less than a quarter of an hour from the start took the lead. Templeton began the successful movement by trickling Crompton, and then after taking the ball down to the goal passed to Devine, who beat Dawson with a fast shot. From the kick-off, however, the English League forwards got right away, and chiefly as the result of good work by Holley and Parkinson gained an equalising goal amid great enthusiasm. Parkinson sent in the shot which beat Brownlie. Fast and even play followed, both goalkeepers having some anxious moments. Brownlie saved cleverly from a neat header by Parkinson, but a little later kicked very weakly, and it was fortunate for Scotland that no Englishman could get to the ball. The home goal had an escape from Quinn, who shot hard after taking a centre by Bennett. Crompton just diverted the ball round the posts and the following corner was cleared. Then for a little while the Englishmen looked like gaining the upper hand in some good hard football, and Parkinson was once unlucky in hitting the post with a great shot. Scotland replied with an attack which ended in McMenemy hitting the bar, but the heavier and faster English forwards soon became aggressive again, and just before the interval Brownlie saved brilliantly from a shot by Holley, and Wall shot wide when he might have passed with advantage. Half time:—

In less than two minutes after resuming, Scotland had regained their lead, Quinn from a throw in near the English goal getting the ball and beating Dawson with a remarkable shot from an awkward angle. After this the Scottish halves commanded the game by judicious play, and Scotland were the more dangerous. The English League halves did not help their forwards to the same extent, but when the second half had been in progress nearly twenty minutes, Barbutt got away, and centering well enabled Holley to place England on level terms Holley sent in a fine shot with his left foot. The forwards on both sides now failed to show to advantage for a short period, most of the play taking place in mid-field. On many occasions the Scotsmen spoilt their chances by excessive passing, but in one attack on the English goal Quinn at close range neatly gave the ball to Templeton, who scored a third goal for Scotland. Ten minutes remained for play and after some uneventful play England set up a promising attack. Garbutt finished a run with an excellent centre, but Parkinson headed just wide of the Scottish goal. The players on both sides had shown signs of tiring and there were few noteworthy incidents before the finish.

RUGBY RULES

IRELAND vs. SCOTLAND.—At Belfast, Ireland met Scotland for the thirty-third time since the annual engagements were instituted. Scotland having to date won a great majority of the matches—23 against 6, and three drawn games. For this match, however, the home county were strongly fancied as only a fortnight ago they had drawn with England after having all the better of the play, in face of the fact that prior to that England had defeated Wales, while since Scotland had rather badly failed against Wales. Ireland, on the idea of letting well alone, made but one change from the side that did so well at Twickenham, Moore coming in for Riordan, who was unable to play. On the other hand, Scotland made wholesale alterations, no fewer than seven of the fifteen that went down before Wales at Cardiff losing their places. At three-quarter, Dobson Walker, and McPherson displaced Angus, Simson, and Sutherland; at half, Cunningham and Lindsay were installed instead of Tennant and Milroy; while forward Stevenson and Abercrombie superseded Kyle and Spiers. The weather was fresh and bright after heavy rain and the turf, under the influence of the wind, which blew diagonally across the field, had recovered fairly well. In the presence of 12,000 spectators Mr. V. H. Cartwright, of the English Rugby Union, the referee, gave the signal to start at a quarter past three. Ireland kicked off with the wind, and the first scrum was formed in their half, but they broke this up and gained ground, while kicks from Quinn and Hinton secured a further advantage. However, the visitors tackled firmly and accurately, and after Cunningham had transferred the struggle beyond the half-way line, Abercrombie and Gowland headed a loose rush to the Irish quarters. Then Cunningham attempted to break through, only to be promptly collared. Pearson got in a kick, but it was a weak effort, and Hamlet found touch with his return. Still the home side could not get away owing to the smart work of the Scotch forwards in the scrums. There they generally got the ball out to their halves. In consequence Cunningham was able to frequently set his backs going. Once he passed out to Pearson, but the latter's pass was in turn intercepted by Read, who enabled Thompson to rush the other end. Unluckily there Taylor knocked on, and spoiled a most promising opportunity. Again the Scots' forwards carried the scrum, and Cunningham kicked over the heads of the players, only for Quinn to intercept and make a good forty yards before blundering with a pass forward. A free-kick against Ireland relieved a momentary pressure, but Thompson and Taylor showed pretty combination and were nearly in. As in the English match, however, the Irishmen did everything except score, and Dobson at length relieved with a fine run to the centre before Hinton tackled him severely. From a second penalty against Ireland, Cunningham just missed dropping a goal, the ball falling a few feet short of the bar, and Hinton returned right down the field with the wind. Schultz was only just in time to avert the fine following up of the home forwards from having effect, and then the Scotch returned to the attack, only to have some passing among their three-quarters intercepted by Taylor. Hinton and Schultz interchanged kicks, and the Scotsman had the better of it at the finish. A great forward rush of the Irish was spoiled by McPherson going down pluckily, and next the visitors returned, getting the best of some loose footwork. The Scots would not be denied, and at length Dobson picked up, transferred to Pearson, who, when he'd, passed back, and Dobson scored the only try in the first far out. Abercrombie naturally failed against the cross breeze. Encouraged by this success, Scotland's front rank returned to the attack, and Waller and Stevenson in turn were nearly in. Just before the whistle went Hinton saved the situation, and ends were changed with the score standing:—

Scotland	...	... 1 try.

The crowd had increased considerably on resuming, and numbered fully 15,000. The visitors now had the better of the conditions, and considering how well their forwards had played, how cleverly Cunningham had spoiled the home rushes, and how brilliantly Dobson had shown up in the three-quarter line, their partisans must have felt very hopeful of maintaining their advantage. One of their half-backs speedily found touch, but McIldowie headed a great rush the Scottish half, only for the Scots to regain the ground owing to a penalty against Blackham for tackling offside. Once more, when some passing among the visiting backs looked awkward, a pass was interrupted, and the area of play transferred. This however, was once more spoiled by Taylor throwing palpably forward to Thompson. This brought about another concerted attack on the home lines, and with Hinton tackled by McCallum before he could clear the ball went over the line but just rolled dead before Gowland could reach it. From the drop out the Irishmen had a chance through Schultz fumbling, but their passing was weak, and the opportunity was lost. Again a forward movement led by Lindsay and Abercrombi nearly succeeded but the final dribble was too hard, and the ball rolled dead. Scotland were penalised next but from the return kick McPherson made a beautiful catch, and swerving from the tackle had almost scored when Thompson threw him into touch. Hinton and Quinn's kick helped the Irish front rank, but they seldom looked really dangerous, and their best work was in tackling So the game went on until within ten minutes of no side, and then came Scotland's second score. It was a pretty piece of work, started by Lindsay, and continued by Cunningham, Pearson and Walter before the latter completed it. Cunningham hit the post with his attempt at goal, but immediately after the drop out there was a line out, and Lindsay throwing to Walter, the latter dodged through and added a third try, which was not converted. In the last two or three minutes McCallum kicked over the line, and Stuart having followed up and scored. McCallum crowned the Scottish victory with a successful shot at goal. This gave them the victory by fourteen points to nil.

THE ARMY vs. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—A very one-sided game was played at the Queen's Club between these sides. The Cambridge backs had a good day and, combining well, did almost as they pleased with their opponents. The Army pressed for a few minutes at the start, but Lewis kicked dead, and from this point the 'Varsity took complete command of the game, and the Army never got into their opponents "25" during the rest of the half. Twice Lockhart made openings for Lewis, the left winger, who scored once behind the posts, but Campbell failed on both occasions. Then the Army were penalised and Lockhart placed a goal, and at the interval the 'Varsity led by 9 points to 0. In the second half the Army again went off with a burst, but spoiled two chances by forward passing, and then the 'Varsity took command again. Another opening by Lockhart sent in Lewis in a good position and Lockhart added the major points. Pyman and Schofield did some clever dodging, which resulted in Schofield scoring an unconverted try, and the 'Varsity eventually won by 17 points to 0. Cambridge, 2 goals (1 penalty) 3 tries; Army 0.

LONDON IRISH vs. LONDON SCOTTISH.—In splendid weather at Catford, though on a somewhat soddened ground, the Irish and Scots fought a hard match from start to finish. Early in the game the Scots took the lead with a try, which Templeton gained following a forward rush and which Kennedy could not improve upon. Then followed for some period a sustained Irish attack, but although for ten minutes or more they kept the ball in their opponents' twenty five they could not drive their attack home, and at length Hopekirk cleared. Once more the Scottish forwards returned to the offensive, and just before the interval Mitchell picked up and ran through with a second try for them. The second half was fought with great fury and hard tackling was the chief feature. Individual efforts were many and praise-worthy, but notwithstanding all there was no further scoring, and the Scots won by their two unconverted tries to nil, though perhaps a draw would have better represented the merits of the play. Scottish, 2 tries; Irish, 0.

HARLEQUINS vs. UNITED SERVICES.—The weather was delightful, and about 1,200 persons watched a game teeming with interesting incidents when these sides met at Twickenham yesterday. Both fifteens were minus notable players, Lambert, Poulton, and Bassell, of the Harlequins and Lyons, Hagrove, and Biggs, of the Services, being absent. At the outset the Harlequins demonstrated their handling skill, but the Services forwards were in good form. A series of dribbling rushes took them down to the Harlequin line, where Lieut. Tagg picked up and scored. Lieut. Harrison failed at the kick. The Harlequin response to this was a burst through by Stoop and Birkett and a handling movement in which more than half the side indulged, and F. M. Stoop scored. Cranfield goaled. A little later Birkett intercepted and ran through to the Services' back, and then a series of swift transfers ended in Dodds scoring behind the posts, and Cranfield again goaled. He all but dropped a goal, too, from a penalty kick. Then the Services had a lot of the play, but it was a long time before Cooper got their second try, the kick at which again failed. At half time the Harlequins led by 10 points to 6, and this was also the state of affairs at the finish, as neither side was able to get through in the second half. Twice Cooper all but dropped a goal and twice Birkett on the opposite side was within a few feet of the line when grassed. The Services were neither speedy nor resourceful behind the pack, but they had most of the play than their opponents and were somewhat unfortunate to lose. However, victory is to the side that can score most, and this the Services certainly could not do. Harlequins, 2 goals: Services, 2 tries.

BLACKHEATH vs. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—Blackheath defeated Oxford University at Blackheath, but a deal of the satisfaction the club might have derived from the victory is tempered by the fact that the 'Varsity were unable to put their full strength into the field. There were four "Blues" only playing, and without Cunningham, Poulton, Martin, Gotley, and Cheesman in the back division, and weakened front rank, Oxford cannot be considered anything more than an ordinary side. At the same time it was a capitally fought out game and brimful of incident. Up to the interval the club looked like piling up a big score but afterwards Oxford so pulled themselves together that at one time they looked like getting on level terms. At the interval B'ackheath led by two goals and a try to love. The first was cleverly obtained by Wright after a bad mistake by Rowbotham, the second by Hands in a forward scramble, and the third by Maritz after gathering an awkward pass by Twining. Shortly after the resumption Stokes added the fourth try for the "Club," and then setting up a hot attack, which was maintained to the finish, Galletly and Carey got over for Oxford. B'ackheath, 3 goals 1 try; Oxford, 1 goal 1 try.

ATHLETICS.

Oxford University Sports.—The Oxford University A.C. was fortunate in getting fine weather for the opening instalment of its sports meeting at Oxford on Saturday. In throwing the hammer G. E. Putnam (Christ Church) beat all Oxford and Cambridge records with a distance of 151 feet 8 inches. There was some capital sprinting by L. C. Hull and G. H. G. Shepherd. Hull did the faster time, but Shepherd, in securing his heat, won very easily. Hull followed up his success of last year in the quarter-mile, which he won with something to spare. R. D. Clarke, who fell a victim to influenza last year and did not compete in the inter-'Varsity match at Queen's Club, ran in quite his best style and won the mile in 4mins. 31secs. Details:—

100 Yards Race.—Heat 1: L. C. Hull (Brasenose), 1; A. H. Godfrey (Trinity), 2. Won, easing up, by three yards. Time, 10-2/5secs. Heat 2; G. H. G. Shepherd (Pembroke), 1; F. B. Chavasse (Balliol), 2. Won easily by three yards. Time, 10-3/5secs.

Throwing the Hammer.—G. E. Putnam (Christ Church), 151 feet 8 inches, 1; R. E. Blake (Exeter), 106 feet 2 inches, 2.

High Jump.E. G. Joseph (Lincoln) 5 feet 6 inches, 1; N. F. Huxley (Balliol), 5 feet 3 inches, and R. F. Angus (Magdalen), 5 feet 3 inches, tied.

Quarter-mile Race.—L. C. Hull (Brasenose), 1; C. Howard Smith (Brasenose), 2; T. R. Hailey (Brasenose), 3. Won comfortably by a yard and a half; eight yards separated second and third. Time, 52 2/5secs.

One Mile Race.—R. D. Clarke (Hertford), 1; W. L. Williams (Jesus), 2; A. M. Brown (Oriel, 3. Won by five yards; twenty yards between second and third. Time, 4mins. 31secs.

The sports were concluded on Monday in miserable weather, rain falling and a troublesome wind prevailing. L. C. Hull, the president, won the sprint in good time, and Godfrey, a Malvern freshman, won the long jump in promising style. An American in McDonald won the hurdles. Results:—

100 Yards Final.—L. C. Hull (Brasenose, 1; G. H. Shepherd (Pembroke), 2. Won by two yards in 10-1/5secs.

Long Jump.—A. H. Godfrey (Trinity), 22 feet, 5½ inches, 1; F. G. Buchanan (Trinity) 22 feet 1 inches, 2.

Putting the Weight.—G. E. Putnam (Christ Church), 37 feet 5 inches 1; R. E. Blake (Exeter), 36 feet 1 inch, 2.

Half Mile.—T. R. Harley (Brasenose), 1; W. L. Williams (Jesus), 2; H. T. Logan (St. John's), 3. Won by fourteen yards, in 2mins. 1sec.

Hurdles.—M. V. McDonald (Lincoln), 1; W. T. MacDonald (New), 2. Won by five yards, in 17mins. 4secs.

Three Miles.—A. M. Brown (Oriel), 1; G. Taylor (Pembroke), 2; R. E. Knight (Pembroke), 3; J. F. Worsley Magdalen), 4. Won by twenty yards Time, 15mins. 10secs.

Cambridge University vs. Mr. E. Quilter's Team.—On the 26th ultimo on the Royal Worlington and Newmarket Club's course, Cambridge University defeated Mr. Eustace Quilters team, in a contest by singles and foursomes, by 10 points to 8. The feature of the singles was the performance of J. E. Tomkinson, who, playing for the scratch side, beat A. C. P. Medrington by 8 and 7 and went round in 71—a record for the course. In the foursomes, each match counted 2 points. Details:—

ROWING.

THE 'VARSITY BOAT RACE.

The penultimate stage of Boat Race practice commenced on Monday. Both crews appeared on the Upper Thames before migrating to Putney for some three weeks' final polish. The change of venue will do them all the good in the world. There is a time in practice, when rows to Sandford and Nuneham, Baitsbite, and even on the Ouse, are a weariness of the flesh. The time when hard work, and strict training has begun to operate physically. Fresh surroundings at this stage enable the men to resume "like giants refreshed." It does not matter in the least which boat is going the better at the present moment, of course. The race is at the end of March, not at the end of February. And it will be equivalent to solving the Chinese puzzle to say, on present respective form, which crew contains the most possibilities of interim improvement. Oxford's strong point is avoirdupois. They are only fractionally lighter than last year's crew in this respect. And, say what some hyper-critical people may, their great strength is already being applied fairly effectively. Stroke gets on a sharp beginning and a real drive in the first part of the stroke and, in the main, he is well backed up at the various thwarts. In every case, moreover, an attempt is being made to swing and use the weight. Failings in both these respects are still apparent and few of the men have yet adequate control over oar or slide. Their leg drive and sliding is still weak. The chief failing on the part of the whole crew is a want of leg-support at the finish of the stroke; in other words, they "wash out" badly. Mr. Holland will soon rectify all this, however, and the Putney critics will be favourably impressed with President Mackinnon and confreres when they take their first tideway row. Their new boat by F. Rough (Oxford) seems to suit them admirably. She is 62½ feet long, 23¼ inches wide, depth amidships 9½ inches, forward 6½ inches, aft 5½ inches.

The Cantabs continue to please Major Wauchope—which is saying a good deal. It is bad luck that Mr. Fairbairn "crocked" during the week. Everybody hopes the Old Etonian will not repeat 1909 experience by again losing his seat at the eleventh hour. Mr. H. G. Palmer makes a capital understudy, but, then, he has not a quarter of the Jesus man's experience. Even thus early the crew is fast enough to give their supporters any amount of confidence. What is more they are well together. Their blades enter the water at the same moment, they remain covered throughout the stroke in the main and they leave the water at the same moment. The bodies and legs of the men are in unison and yet their style seems to me deficient in one great respect: they still fail to make the best us of their weight. Very shortly I hope to see Mr. Shields and colleagues get on more work at the beginning of the stroke and to lift the weights from the stretchers more effectively. Once this is attained their improvement should be rapid. Stern criticism will be much more in order, however, when both crews' training has had more time to show its best effects.

BOXING.

National Sporting Club.—In a long and interesting programme at headquarters last Monday night the chief item was a twenty-rounds contest between S. Keller, of Mile End, and W. Ladbury, of Deptford, who were matched to box the best of twenty rounds at 8st 4lb. Just recently both lads have been seen to advantage, Ladbury putting up a games contest in the same arena against the ex-amateur champion, John Condon, whilst a few weeks back Keller was successful over J. Stewart, at Belfast. Keller, who just went the prescribed weight, was 2lb the heavier, and also had the advantage in height and reach. During the first two rounds Keller was content to allow his opponent to do most of the leading; but after a well-mixed third meeting he began to use his left to marked advantage. Very quick, he found his mark almost every time. Ladbury, however, was very strong and very game, and did not leave all the scoring to the Mile End lad, although a number of well-meant lefts went astray. During the next three rounds Ladbury took a lot of punishment, but early in the ninth he drove Keller to the ropes twice with hard lefts and rights on the head; but before they went to their corners the East-end lad had repaid all he received, and continuing to score with the left, he was well ahead on points when half the allotted rounds had been contested, and it was quite apparent that, barring a knock-out, there could be no doubt about the result. Ladbury however, was not to be denied, and displayed the same gameness that was a feature of his contest with Condon. But with all his gameness he continued to be heavily outpointed, Keller being altogether too quick with his left upon which he chiefly relied. So the match progressed until the full number of rounds had been contested, when Keller was a good winner on points.

Earlier in the evening several bouts in novices' middle-weight and welter-weight competitions were decided, and in six-rounds contests S. Hunt (Hastings) beat N. Williams (Brixton), and J. Egan (Battersea) defeated H. Montagu Woolwich).

Next Monday an interesting evening's boxing is promised, for a number of French boxers will be matched with such well-known British exponents as Joe Bowker, John Carran, the bantam-weight champion of Ireland, G. Moore, W. Gould and G. Beckett.

Polo.

LAHORE JUNIOR TOURNAMENT.

Eight teams entered for the tournament this year and the first round was played off on the 14th instant before a biz crowd of polo enthusiasts. Colonel G. Prendergast and the officers of the 28th Punjabis were "At Home" to their friends on the ground. The first game was between the 10th D. C. O. Lancers and the 28th Light Cavalry. The 10th were better mounted and always had the upper hand, eventually winning by 5 goals to nil. Goldie was in splendid form for the winners, while Claridge rendered yeoman service to the 28th. The game between the 37th Lancers left wing and the Relics was most interesting. Each team scored a goal in the opening chukker, the Lancers added two more in the second, but thereafter play was vigorously contested and there was no further scoring, the 37th thus winning by 3 goals to 1. The Royal Irish Fusiliers and 37th Lancers Staff gave us another good game. The score was one all at half time, but the Fusiliers asserted themselves during the remaining chukkers and put on three more goals, the Lancers scoring only once more just before time. The meeting between the 46th Punjabis and the Lahore Gymkhana resulted in an easy victory for the latter who scored six goals to one registered by the 46th. Mr. Montgomery was most prominent of the Gymkhana team, hitting four of the six goals scored.

The semi-finals were played on the 16th in the presence of another large gathering. Colonel H. P. Shebleton and the officers of the South Lancs were "At Home." The first game was between the 10th D. C. O. Lancers and the Lahore Gymkhana; it was all in favour of the military combination throughout. Despite all the efforts of Montgomery and Melville, the Gymkhana were beaten by 11 goals to nil. The match between the Royal Irish Fusiliers and the 37th Lancers left wing was also rather a disappointing affair. The Fusiliers did not combine well, and though Neill and Gower did useful individual work they could not avert defeat, the Lancers, for whom Fatteh Mahomed played a brilliant game, eventually winning by 5 goals to nil.

The final was played on the 18th instant and spectators were given a most exciting game, the 10th Lancers winning by 7 goals to 1. Colonel H. T. Kenny and the officers of the 37th Lancers were "At Home" during the afternoon, there was a large and fashionable gathering and the cup was presented to the winners by Lady Dane, Sir Arthur Reid making a short speech of congratulation.

First Chukker.—Play was sticky, and though both goals were visited the period closed without score.

Second Chukker.—The teams showed improved form. The 37th pressed vigorously but the 10th kept them out, and Braddyll got away and transferring to Beresford, the latter opened the scoring Third Chukker.—Goldie was prominent and the 10th continued to press but Lucas cleared in brilliant style and the 37th got away to the other end. Benn missed his shot but Stewart was handy and, putting the ball through, made the scores one all.

Fourth Chukker.—The last period was hotly contested; the 10th had the best of the result, but were shooting rather wildly. They managed, however, to put between the flags on one occasion and thus won the game. Score; 10th, 2 goals; 37th, 1 goal. Teams:—

THE VENUGOPAUL CUP TOURNAMENT.

The tournament for the Rajah Venugopaul Bahadur Challenge Cup opened on the 15th instant, when, as only four teams have entered this year, the two matches in the preliminary round were played. The polo ground at Government House, Guinty, has been chosen as the venue this year in place of the Island ground.

Madras Gymkhana vs. Rajah Venugopaul's Team.—These local teams put up a fairly interesting game and it was any one's game up to the last chukker, but the Rajah's team scored twice in this period and won the match by 3 goals to 1.

First Chukker.—The Rajah's team were quickly on the offensive and after the Rajah had missed by inches Annesley got on and hit a goal. They continued to press but Campbell cleared and Thomas rushing down equalised from close quarters. Immediately on resuming Annesley went away and put his side ahead.

Second Chukker.—The Gymkhana had the best of this period but failed to score. Annesley and Duff put in a couple of good runs for the Rajah's team, but their final shots missed the mark.

Third Chukker.—The Gymkhana attacked unsuccessfully. A combined run by the Rajah's team also proved unproductive.

Sixth Chukker.—The Rajah's team got away and Annesley scored, another goal being scored shortly after. The Gymkhana made great efforts but could only get through once again and were thus beaten by 5 goals to 3. Teams.—

Deccan Horse vs. 14th Hussars.—This was a fast and well contested game, the Deccan Horse eventually winning by 7 goals to 4.

First Chukker.—A run by each team the Deccan Horse scoring from a scrimmage. Then the Hussars pressed and after Bruce had just missed the flags offside against the Deccans, enabled the 14th to equalise from the penalty hit

Second Chukker.—Save for a good run by Stephen, the Deccan Horse had most of the play in this chukker and added two further goals to their score, Ley and Worgan being responsible.

Third Chukker.—The Deccan team continued to attack and Worgan hit another goal. Thereafter the Hussars were always on the offensive. Bruce hit a goal but they failed to improve on a penalty hit shortly after.

Fourth Chukker.—The Hussars showed splendid form in this period. Astley and Bruce hit a goal each, the score thus standing at 4 all.

Fifth Chukker.—The Deccan Horse kept the Hussars busy defending in this period and after one unsuccessful attempt once more regained the lead.

Sixth Chukker.—This was a hotly contested chukker, the Hussars making great efforts to get on terms again, but there was no scoring.

Seventh Chukker.—This was another blank period. Astley saved twice in brilliant style and Major Stephen was almost through just before the close of the period.

Eighth Chukker.—A most eventful chukker. After an abortive run by the 14th the Deccans took up the attack, Astley kept them out, but was at length beaten by Worgan. Fast and exciting play followed and Worgan getting possession once again hit another goal, time being called with the score. Deccan Horse, 7 goals; 14th Hussars, 4 goals Teams.—

Final.

Deccan Horse vs. Rajah Venugopaul's Team.—The final game was played on the 17th instant in the presence of a fair attendance, which included His Excellency the Governor and the Misses Lawley. It was a fast and interesting game in spite of the large margin by which the Deccans were victorious. Rajah Venugopaul Bahadur was "At Home" to his friends and the Governor's Band added to the evening's enjoyment. His Excellency the Governor gave away the Cup to the winners and the proceedings terminated with the usual cheering.

First Chukker.—The Deccans did all the attacking in this period with the exception of a run by the Rajah who was stopped by Campbell Ross. They were, however, unable to score till shortly before the close when Ley put through.

Second Chukker.—This period saw the Deccans pressing throughout and they scored four times. Worgan, Oswald and Campbell Ross (2) being credited with the points.

Third Chukker.—The Rajah's team attacked but play was soon transferred to their end, where Ley and Worgan added to the score.

Fourth Chukker.—Play was up and down during the major part of this period and the Rajah's team showed up prominently but while they failed to score the Deccans added another goal to their total.

Fifth Chukker.—The Deccan Horse pressed but were kept out and the ball taken to their end, where Sheik Ismail and the Rajah tried hard to get through. All their efforts were fruitless and play returned to the Venugopaul's territory where Worgan and Ley added to the Deccan's score.

Sixth Chukker.—The Rajah's team attacked vigorously but without success. Ley then got away and hit a goal. The Rajah's team returned to the attack and pressing for the rest of the period scored twice, The Rajah and Duff putting through. Final scores: Deccan Horse, 11 goals; Rajah's team, 2 goals. WINCHESTER

REPEATING HUNTING RIFLES ARE RELIABLE

Reliability, strength and accuracy are the cardinal virtues in a hunting rifle. Success and safety often hinge upon them in big game shooting. Winchester rifles possess these virtues to the fullest extent, all models being made of high grade material and inspected with great care and exactness. They shoot accurately, are positive and certain in action, graceful in outline, easy to operate, and, considering their many good qualities, low in price. They are made in all desirable calibers, weights and styles, and for every rifle a Winchester cartridge is made. Winchester Rifles and Cartridges, the Red W Brand always gives satisfaction.

MADRAS BOAT CLUB.

ANNUAL REGATTA.

Saturday, 19th March 1910.

THE annual regatta was held on the Adyar this afternoon in delightful weather, a strong wind, though much appreciated by spectators, proved rather disconcerting to the rowers. The programme opened with the Junior Sculls : six had entered for this event and preliminary heats were rowed previously the final being contested by Davies and C. G. Alexander the former winning comfortably. Then came the final of the Service Fours which brought together the Professions and Mercantile II. The Professions crew included Barber and Scott Mackenzie who recently represented Madras at Poona. They rowed a long stroke and soon taking the lead won by a length and a half. Time—3mins. This is the first time the Professions have won since 1904.

THE MURRAY CUP TOURNAMENT.

Final.

THE Highland Light Infantry met the Black Watch in the final of the above Tournament at Lucknow on the 14th instant. Favouritism rested with the Highland Light Infantry but a keenly contested game ensued and the Black Watch were unfortunate in not getting the ball through. The only goal of the match was scored just before the close by the Highland Light Infantry, who thus won the game and the Tournament by 1 goal to love.

LAHORE TRADES CUP TOURNAMENT.

THE Tournament for the handsome Cup and other prizes presented by the Lahore Trades has this year drawn a record number of entries, no fewer than eighteen teams sending in their names. Three of these—the North-Western Railway Institute, the Hornets and the 1st Punjab Volunteer Rifles—are civilians, the rest regimental teams, who have been able to enter, as the Tournament this year does not clash with the Murray Cup Tournament. A start was made on Monday the 14th instant, when the two games in the first round were played off. In the first the Gordon Highlanders met the 17th Lancers and a splendid struggle was witnessed. The first half was pointless and the game continued to be a ding-dong fight till two minutes before time when the Gordons scored the only goal of the match. The second game was between the North-Western Railway Institute and the North Staffords, the Cup holders. This was another spirited contest: the teams crossed over with a blank sheet, but in the second moiety the Staffords netted the ball twice and qualified for the second round. The railway men played a man short all through and found it a big handicap.

On the 15th instant the second round opened: the 7th Artillery Brigade beat the Hornets by 2 goals to nil after a slow and uneventful game. The King's Liverpool Regiment met the 12th Royal Lancers, a very level game ending in a pointless draw. Replaying the next morning another well contested game ended in favour of the Lancers by a goal to nil. On the afternoon of the 16th instant two more games were put through. The Royal Irish Fusiliers beat the 5th Northumberland Fusiliers by a goal to nil after very even play. The point was registered just before the interval, and though the 5th tried hard to get on terms in the second moiety their efforts were unavailing. The second match was between the heroes of the first round—the Gordon Highlanders and the North Staffords. The Gordons rushed down at the start and netted the ball, an advantage which the Staffords were not long in reducing, for a tricky shot by Baker put them level before half time. The second half saw a stiff fight, but neither team scored and the game ended in a draw—one all. Another hard struggle was witnessed when the match was replayed on Thursday morning, but this time the Cup holders disposed of the Highlanders by 3 goals to nil.

On Thursday evening the Connaught Rangers and South Lancashire Regiment played a slow and rather uninteresting game which ended in favour of the Connaughts by 2 goals to nil. The other match on the same day between the Royal Sussex and the Black Watch was, however, an exceptionally good game. The first half was fast and evenly contested and the interval arrived with the score one all. On changing ends the ball moved up and down the field till the Black Watch at length forced a corner which they turned to account, adding a third goal shortly after, the final score reading Black Watch, 3 goals; Royal Sussex, 1 goal. On Friday only one game was played, the Lancashire Fusiliers running out victorious by 3 goals to nil after rather a one-sided game with the 1st Punjab Volunteer Rifles.

The third round opened on Saturday, when two games were played. In the first the 7th Artillery Brigade beat the Royal Irish Fusiliers after some exciting play by a goal to nil. It was a very level game, the gunners surprising every one by their greatly improved form. The second game also gave us an unexpected result, the North Staffords, the Cup holders, going down before the 12th Royal Lancers by 2 goals to nil. The Lancers scored five minutes after the start and held their advantage all through the first half. On crossing over the Staffords made strenuous efforts to score, but a corner which was not improved upon was the nearest they got. After a spell of sound defensive work the Lancers got away again and scored their second point, and though the Staffords pressed for the rest of the game all their endeavours were fruitless and they retired beaten as stated. On Monday the Black Watch met the Connaught Rangers: the Highlanders notched a goal in each half and prevented the Irishmen from scoring throughout an interesting game.

POONA DIVISIONAL TOURNAMENT.

THE semi-final of the Divisional Tournament for Native troops at Poona was played between the 64th Pioneers and the 3rd Sappers and Miners, the 64th winning a brilliantly contested game by 3 goals to 2. The score was two all at half time, the Pioneers hitting the winning goal shortly after the interval. They met the 66th Punjabis in the final and a splendid game was witnessed. The first half was pointless but shortly after changing ends the 66th hit a goal, and the Cup holders being unable to equalise were thus beaten by the narrow margin of a single point.

Lawn Tennis.

THE BANGALORE TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

SOME very interesting matches were played on Saturday afternoon, the 12th instant, including the finals in the Ladies' Singles and the Mixed Doubles. In the former, Mrs. Sargent (—30) and Miss Anderson (—15) were the contestants, and though Mrs. Sargent had a heavy handicap of two points to wipe off before she opened her account she survived the ordeal and came out, after a hotly contested match, the winner by 2 sets to love. In the Mixed Doubles, Captain Sargent and Miss Angelo won, beating Captain Tovey and Mrs. Ley by 2 to "love." The small handicap on Captain Tovey and his partner told, but Captain Sargent had to work very hard to win. One of the best matches played in the tournament was witnessed in the Gent's (Handicap) Doubles, when Majors Chitty and MacQuoid met Mr. Stephens and Captain Ommanney. The latter were undoubtedly a very strong couple and Captain Ommanney had the advantage of being able to play with both hands. They conceded 3 points to their opponents while they received only three-sixths. They won the first set, and lost the next two after being 5 games all each time.

The Tournament concluded on Friday (18th) afternoon with the match between Mr. Pringle and Captain Ommanney, in the Gent's Open Singles. The prizes were distributed by Mrs. Strart Fraser. The following are complete results:—

Mr. Pringle beat Mr. Dibben 7—5, 6—4.

Final.

Mr. Pringle beat Capt. Ommanney 11—9, 5—7, 6—2, 6—2.

This was by far and away the best match in the Tournament and was witnessed by a great many people, the Hon'ble the Resident and Mrs. Fraser, General and Mrs. Cookson, etc., being among the spectators. The players were very equally matched, but Captain Ommanney was the prettier player of the two and he also succeeded in giving his opponent a lot of work to do. The original conditions of the Tournament were that the best of three sets to win in all matches, but it was altered in this case and the best of five sets was agreed to by the players.

In the first set five games all was called and then Pringle got the advantage, Ommanney equalised and they won alternately until Pringle got the advantage in the tenth game and won the eleventh and set; 11—9.

The second set was quite as interesting but only went up to 12 games, Ommanney winning by 7—5. Pringle pulled off the third set by six games to two which gave him the lead by two sets to one. In the next set Pringle won the first four games, Ommanney got the fifth, Pringle the sixth, Ommanney the seventh and Pringle the eighth game and set, also the match by three sets to one.

THE PUNJAB CHAMPIONSHIPS.

THE Punjab Lawn Tennis Championships began on the 9th instant and were brought to a conclusion last Saturday, some really high-class tennis being witnessed during the progress of the tournament. The Ladies' Singles only attracted four competitors. Mrs. Leslie Jones and Mrs. Gracey had little difficulty in disposing of their opponents in the first round and came together in the final. Mrs. Gracey was handicapped owing to an accident which had necessitated the postponement of the game, but she played pluckilythroughout, though beaten 7—5, 6—4. The Men's Singles again brought together Deane and Atkinson in the final, the only match of interest in the preliminary round being that between Deane and Mahomed Naqi. The latter showed great improvement on his form last year and with Deane somewhat below par it was a great struggle. Naqi hotly contested every point and won 19 games to 22 scored by Deane. The final was a splendid exhibition of tennis, both players being at the top of their form. In the first set the game was called 4 all and was eventually won by Atkinson 6—4. Deane ran through in the second, which he placed to his credit at 6—2. But in the third set Atkinson pulled himself together and took the score to 5—1. Deane won the next two games but Atkinson took the next and sett 6—3. The last sett opened well. The score went to 2 all and then Atkinson won the next three. The eighth game was secured by Deane, but Atkinson took the last 6—3, and thus regained the championship, which he lost to Captain Rendall last year. The Open Doubles were carried off by Atkinson and Deane who had no serious opposition all through. Two matches in the preliminary round, however, call for mention. That between Hewlett and Hutchinson sr. Pruce and Max Minck was an excellent contest, the couples being very evenly matched, victory eventually going to the Lucknow players who beat Pruce and his partner 4—6, 6—3, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3. The match between Crawford and Lumsden and Lee French and Short also took five setts to decide the winners. Short and the veteran French after winning the first two sets lost the next two and though they fought hard in the last were eventually beaten, the scores being 1—6, 4—6, 6—4, 6—2, 7—5. The Mixed Doubles were won by Mrs. Leslie Jones and Atkinson. H. H. the Lieutenant-Governor came away the prizes and congratulated the winners and runners up and also Mr. E. F. Scott, the Honorary Secretary, to whose excellent management the success of the 1910 Championship is largely due. Appended are results :—

UMBALLA OPEN TOURNAMENT.

The Umballa Boxing Tournament, open to all British troops in India, was held on the 8th, 10th and 12th instant and proved a great success. The majority of the competitors were novices who have lately been under the instruction of Maloney, the professional instructor brought out from England by the Military Department—with the best results. The officials were:—Referee—Captain Julius. Judges:—Lieutenants Carter, R.A. and Blood, 8th Cavalry. Timekeeper: Captain Connell, R.H.A. The arrangements were in the hands of Captain Gordon, Superintendent, and the staff of the gymnasium to whose excellent management General Graves paid a special tribute of praise in the short speech he made prior to giving away the prizes. The results of the finals were as under.—

Boys.—Franklin (Connaught Rangers) beat Sunnicks (Connaught Rangers). The latter retired in the second round.

Bantam.—Private McVean (8st. 4lb.) (Black Watch) beat Private Banyard (8st. 4lb.) (Lancashire Fusiliers).

Feather.—Private Lowery (9st.) (Connaught Rangers) beat Private Tighe (9st.) (Connaught Rangers).

Light.—Private Christian (9st. 12lb.) (Lancashire Fusiliers) beat Sergeant Gibbons (10st.) (King's Regiment).

Middle.—Private Steele (11st. 4lb.) (Royal Irish Regiment) beat Gunner Blisett (11st. 5lb.) (80th Battery R.F.A.)

LIGHT WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE WORLD.

The following interesting account of the fight between Battling Nelson and Adolph Wolgast appears in Boxing.

As the bell went for the opening the fighters just leapt to the centre of the ring and slammed into each other for all they were worth. It was bang, bang, bang, and then straight into a clinch with plenty of pounding. Broken by the referee they were back again and as hard at it as ever. Wolgast was not showing any of the superior speed that had been expected, and the Battler was the more aggressive, while the German fell back before his attack, countering pretty smartly at times. There was plenty of savage hitting but very little advantage to either in the initial meeting.

Round 2 saw both out of their corners like a flash with Wolgast this time getting home first, with a beautiful left flush to the face. He also hooked the right to the jaw and was very busy in the clinches, particularly on the body. Nelson was trying to work his head well in and lie on his man in his favourite style but he could not get under Adolph's chin in the manner he usually attempts to do, owing to the latter's small stature. Nevertheless he forced the fighting and made the German again fall back before him, the latter upper cutting him quite smartly at times as he came on. This was Wolgast's round although Nelson scored first blood with a right swing which landed hard on the German's eye and cut it open badly.

This round appeared to worry Adolph, who fought quite savagely in the third meeting. Nelson nothing loth pounded back for all he was worth. Science was flung to the winds and from the pace that both were travelling it scarcely appeared likely that the battle would go more than half distance. Clinches were frequent and the referee was very busy in parting the men, who hit, swung, hooked and jabbed for all they were worth.

Both the 3rd and 4th rounds were fought in the fiercest manner conceivable each man giving and taking punches with the utmost recklessness. There was very little in it so far and, though Nelson seemed determined to force an early termination if possible and generally forced his opponent to retreat, the latter gave him quite as good as he received.

In round 5 Wolgast had begun to size things up better. He was able to block Nelson's body blows well and evidently worried the Dane quite a lot by the clever fashion in which he protected his ribs and stomach with his elbows and yet at the same time was able to jab up with both fists and rattle the Battler's teeth to a rare tune.

In the next meeting Wolgast went further ahead, although neither in this nor in round 7, of which he also had the better, can he be said to have displayed any remarkable science. The fighting was too furious for science to be shewn by either man. The Battler made the body his chief objective, although he swung and hooked for the face and head pretty frequently. Wolgast, however, as a rule checked these latter blows very smartly and, as already stated, kept his body well covered, particularly in the clinches, which as a rule has been Nelson's favourite time for dealing out punishment. In fact he shewed himself to be quite as good at in-fighting as the formidable Dane, and must have shaken his head badly at times with his upper cuts.

The Battler looked very serious as he went back to his corner after the 7th meeting and came out with a bound like a tiger for the 8th round, opening proceedings with a tremendous left hook to the head, which made Wolgast glad to clinch. He was a bit shaken and got some heavy body punishment before he recovered and began to hand out some jabs of his own. This was Nelson's round, as were the next two, in which he drove Wolgast all round the ring, hurling in blows at him at a terrific pace, with both pounding away for all they were worth in the clinches. Wolgast did get home a slashing right in the 9th meeting which landed on the Battler's ear and brought a copious stream of blood. But the champion just took it as a matter of course and waded into his man as though nothing had happened. It had looked like a stunning blow but it had no effect on Nelson, except to make him fight faster than before, especially during round 10, when he looked to have Wolgast in trouble just before the gong.

If this was the case the German pulled round well, checking Nelson's opening rush with a straight left to the face in the 11th meeting and sending his head back time and again as he charged in to get to close quarters. The Dane's fury was unabated but Wolgast fought coolly, although the exchanges were of the most furious description. Nelson was certainly the wilder of the pair and Wolgast's guard was not only better but his hitting was as had been expected, much faster. He also seemed to be able to hit quite as hard as Nelson and to be quite as indifferent to punishment.

Both waded in in the fiercest possible style for the 12th round but Wolgast again showed faster feet and foot work and a superior defence. He not only scored much more frequently but was plainly marking Nelson somewhat badly while when they closed, as they did repeatedly, and exchanged furious body blows, the German seemed to more than hold his own. Nelson would sling away viciously with both hands and at times paid out little attention to the jabs, hooks and upper cuts which Wolgast kept pelting into his face. Indeed, it was at this game during this and the next rounds that the German was piling up such a formidable lead. For a time Nelson did not appear to worry much and fought as though he had resolved to make it a hard pounding battle throughout, confident in his ability to wear his opponent down.

But his face was showing the effects of the severe punishment he had received and it became obvious that he was not going to win along this line. So in the 15th round he went back to swings again and catching Wolgast high up with a heavy right early in round 15 had him tottering. The German escaped disaster and sought back well after making use of the ring, and had little the worse of the deal on the whole. But another heavy swing in the next meeting forced him to clinch for safety, and it was only after they had been broken three times that he stood up and slogged away. Nelson forced him to retreat, but, keeping cool the "Kid" fully held his own at the outfighting. They battled away like demons throughout and though the Battler perhaps had a shade, rounds 15 and 16 could be best described as even meetings.

Wolgast went off with a spurt for the 17th session and got home left and right to the face without reply. A couple of clinches and then Adolph repeated the previous dose. More clinches and some body fighting, then a few long range exchanges with Wolgast doing the scoring.

Round 18 saw the battle contested, if possible, more fiercely than before. They banged away at each other for all they were worth and there was very little in it. Wolgast landed more frequently perhaps but Nelson certainly hit harder, more than once sending Wolgast reeling. But the latter pulled round and checking Nelson's charges in fine style with straight smashes, made an even break of it.

Nelson rushed wildly in the 19th and met a heavy right on the nose which stopped him. He rushed again and caught both left and right before they got into a clinch when they were too tightly locked to do each other much damage. Broken again they fought all across the ring, Wolgast having much the best of the exchanges.

Both seemed to be feeling the pace by now and the next two rounds saw less footwork and charging. They stood up and slogged away at each other and clinched a good deal. The exchanges were fairly even, but these were undoubtedly the tamest rounds so far. The fighting was still fierce but nothing like so fast as it had been, and so, on the whole, honours rested fairly even.

But this was only a breather, for when Nelson started round 22, it was clear that he had only been gathering his forces. He darted out of his corner for this like a shot out of a gun and tore into Wolgast as if the fight were only just commencing. He had his second wind by now and meant forcing matters. Wolgast met him in rare style, but a terrific right swing landed right on the German's chin and dropped him heavily to the boards. Up again before the fatal 10 had been counted, Wolgast stalled cleverly, and though the recipient of some heavy punishment, yet managed to escape serious disaster, until the gong came to his relief.

But he was still feeling the effects of that punch when he came up for the 23rd time and was forced to fall back steadily before Nelson's furious onslaughts. The Dane drove at him viciously, swinging both hands and driving home heavy punches with either. Wolgast countered cleverly at times and got home some heavy swings, which contributed their quota to the bumps and swellings on the Battler's face but he could not keep his determined adversary altogether at bay and was in no comfortable condition when he retired to his corner.

He had come round better for the next meeting, but nothing could hold Nelson at the pace he was now travelling. Like a giant refreshed he continued to tear into his man during both rounds 24 and 25, forcing him to fight mainly on the defensive. And Wolgast certainly defended himself magnificently. Try as he would the terrible Battler could never get home a really winning punch. He pounded and battered Adolph badly at times, but the latter was still on the premises at the close of the 25th and even after his recent severe gruelling was still a leader on points. So well indeed had he protected himself that despite all the pounding he had received he came up actually the fresher of the pair for round 26. Nelson had shot his bolt. This was not at once apparent, of course, and indeed two or three more rounds were to elapse before the spectators were able to fully realise that the durable Dane had at last met a man who could outstay him. Such a contingency had never occurred to anyone. Nelson might be out-boxed, he might meet faster and cleverer opponents, but that there was a man who could outlast him, who could wear down his iron strength and then actually outfight him, was something we had yet to see before we could believe it.

Certainly his rush was slower, but then this was probably only another breather which he was taking, but when it was seen that Wolgast was landing two blows to one during rounds 26 and 27, and was finding it easier and easier to evade Nelson's attacks, it began to dawn on everybody that the impregnable Battler had at last encountered his master.

Even Wolgast appeared scarcely able to grasp the situation at first. He had all the best of rounds 26, 27, 28 and 29, doing gradually better every round. He seemed to hesitate now and then about going in, as though fearing a trap, but usually concluded to do so and when he did he pounded away; gave Nelson such a belting as must have astonished even that hardened warrior.

The Battler was badly handicapped it is true. His left eye had almost closed earlier and had finally put up the shutters in the 28th meeting, while the general appearance of his face was pitiable. Still he fought on in the gamest fashion, punching back for all he was worth, although it could be now seen that his blows were lacking in steam. They were not troubling Wolgast now and he was able to go right in and pound Nelson just as he liked. He drove both hands to the head and then turned his attention to the Battler's body, which he welted in the severest fashion. The Dane's star had set. That was evident. Only by some lucky accident could he now hope to pull the fight out of the fire.

Rounds 31 and 32 saw Nelson getting rapidly weaker. He was knocked about all over the ring and when in the latter meeting, Wolgast saw that he practically had his man helpless, the battle looked as if it might terminate at any moment. The last ten rounds do not call for any detailed description, as to describe one would be practically to describe them all. Wolgast simply went for his man as he liked, the Dane being scarcely able to raise an arm to defend himself. He held on and resorted to every device to last out, resolved that nothing and nobody should induce them to surrender. If ever there was a game fighter in all the annals of the ring, pride of place must be accorded to Battling Nelson, and never in the whole of his career did he give greater proof of the justness of his appellation. The Battler is a wonderful, a first class fighting man. Scarcely able to stand, a mere chopping block for punishment, he reeled, staggered and tottered about the ring, a helpless victim. His manager, his seconds and his friends all implored him to surrender, assuring him that his chances were hopeless and that he was only going up to be slaughtered.

But no, he had never struck his flag in all his career. In 12 fights he had lost the decision, but they had all been decisions in fights over limited journeys, save, of course that lost—on a foul—decision in his first fight with Joe Gans. Never had he been knocked out and never had he quit. He certainly looked like being knocked out now, and very probably would have been had the fight been allowed to go its full course but Nelson would sooner suffer even that indignity than quit.

Indeed in practically every round from the 34th to the 40th the bell alone saved Nelson. It was clearly his invincible courage which alone sustained him, for a more helpless man has never been seen in a ring. He could not fight—he simply could not. All that he could do was to stand up and be punished and he took all the punishment, and it was heavy punishment, too, which came his way without a murmur. He even protested feebly when the referee intervened finally and put a stop to the proceedings but it was only feeble because the Battler had scarcely strength left to articulate. He collapsed immediately afterwards and had to be carried from the ring.

THE PASSING OF THE FREAK DOG.

Some interesting remarks anent the disappearance of the "freak" dog are contributed to a London paper; we make the following extracts:—

The strongest bridge between any two classes in the animal kingdom is the friendship between men and dogs. Over it have travelled—and to-day travel—multitudes of thoughts and feelings which sweeten the course of life. We all know people who let their affection for dogs take the place of their proper human affections; but in general the friendship of dogs is pure gain to humanity. They are human, with differences. No other animal in the world is really at home within the circle of human companionship.

Much useless discussion is heard about the intelligence of animals, but it seems to me that the sentiment of the dog for man is much more wonderful than the cleverest things that fire liars have attributed to dogs. My spaniel, who has a continuous mood of wretched nose, lasting sometimes for a month and more, when I am away, astonishes me more than if he could prophesy the day of my return. He knows me by my footsteps, even the sound of my bicycle bell, and he knows me by his sense of smell, which it is my firm impression conveys much more to him than identity.

The friendship of dogs is so real a thing that a dog lover goes to a dog show with mixed feelings. He delights to see such glorious specimens of the race, as, for instance, will be collected at the Crystal Palace Show, but, at the same time, he nurtures a certain resentment against the "Fancy" which has made a semi-scientific sport of this human thing.

The "Fancy," which flourishes nowhere as in England, is a very strange cult. It has Darwinian leanings—and, indeed, gave to Darwin half his examples and evidence. It is the apostle of unnatural selection. It produces pigeons with such feathers on their legs that they cannot walk; mice that scarcely keep their equilibrium; hens that appear to be on stilts. It has laid its sacrilegious hand on the dog.

The modern bulldog has the lower jaw so prolonged that his grip, which should be his strongest point, is weaker than any mongrel's. His legs, originally made for strength, have been so straddled by the "Fancy" that the dog moves with difficulty. In some of the toy dogs that nose is held to be the most beautiful of which the nostrils are directed most upwards.

The fox-terrier, meant for earths and burrows, must have a proportionately as long and straight as his nose.

Even Show kennels are very far from that ideal reached the other day by Lord Rothschild's cow Dorothy, which was first in show points and also first in making competitions. Too seldom does the winner on the bench become the best sporting dog. Few hounds are seen at the Kennel Club shows, and this is due in some measure to a natural reluctance among masters to allow an animal bred by sportsmen of great fame to fall under the influence of the ingenuous fanciers whose last thought is utility. The great prize St. Bernards die of heart disease before half their term of life is up, and feather-weight Italian greyhounds shiver into their graves in spite of their greatcoats.

Some of the tender and titivated toys that yap at the Kennel Club shows are as unlike the dog of our affection as are those strange and dog vagrants that frighten the visitor to Constantinople, or the wandering parias that vex the outskirts of an Indian village. Yet the club is one of the most efficient and sensible institutions in the world; and our breeders have brought to great perfection almost all the imported dogs they have taken in hand. Our setters are now as good as, or better than, those of Spain; and neither America nor Newfoundland can compete with us in retrievers.

Again the newly developed varieties are a real addition to the number of our friends. What animal could be of sweeter disposition or finer lines than the golden retrievers shown in public for the first time last year by Mr. Harcourt? The newly bred white West Highland terriers, for which at this moment there is something of a rage, have most of the qualities that are proper to a dog. For these the scientific breeder, if not the "Fancy" proper, are to be thanked. If after all, the mongrel is the most intelligent and faithful of all the species, it is still true that you can get the perfect mongrel from the aristocrat whose points are fixed in history.

Year by year the Kennel Club drops affectations and insists more on adherence to nature. The freak dog is disappearing. The new era began when to the horror of the "Fancy" the Club forbade the clipping of the bull terrier's ears.

Every such institution, necessarily autocratic, must be abused. We all have our criticisms to make. It seems to me, for example, a mistake that no separate identity is permitted to the Scalyham terrier, who is to other terriers what the beagle—whose pedigree is incomparable—is to the Hound. His points are distinctive and beautiful and his identity clear. No terrier is more terrierlike in build or character. But this is a small point.

The Club is sensible, strong and very English. It is regarded as a model all over the world, especially in America. Nevertheless some terrible crimes have been committed in its name. The bulldog, accepted by an ironical accident as typically English, is ruined. His nose is not meant to retract between his eyes, as the "Fancy" at present demands, nor his underjaw to protrude and hook as the judges desire. In this case the prime principle has been very closely correlated with the original use of the dog. If any brokenishness is allowed, as in this most unhappy instance, a crime is committed against the worthiest friend of man.

The Show at the Crystal Palace is described as for "Sporting and other dogs," and, in spite of the horde of pet dogs, sporting proclivities still come to the top, and much less unworthy tampering has been permitted with hounds, retrievers, and spaniels than with the "other dogs." But though the master attribute of all dogs is the power to scent, in the shows shape and coat must take first rank.

This power of scent is something more than a very fine sense. It results in a large degree the mind of the animal. The Osbaldestons and the great masters of hounds have always bred for nose, and for this reason they and the owners of retrievers in the past have produced dogs of incomparable intelligence. No doubt the toy is clever, in some respects extraordinarily so. For craftiness nothing can cap that quite authentic tale of the toy spaniel who stole an egg every morning, and every morning made the beg dog, his companion, eat up the fatal evidence of his guilt—the shell. But if the larger sense, the deeper fidelity, the higher capacity for friendship are what we seek in the dog, we should breed for these qualities with the same seriousness that the sportsman has done, with wonderful results, in order to obtain stamina and hunting qualities in hounds that should be "matched in mouth like bells." Of course, the dog should have "a form complete," as in White Melville's fine description; but he had too good an eye for a dog not to include among the other qualities—the straight legs, round feet, "and brigade-like ribs"—the fashion and "fling" that tell of the inner intelligence.

The hound, if we must take a special variety, stands for all dogs. The puppy which is "walked" by a villager apart from the pack develops at once his genius for friendship. His nature has nothing savage in it. The foxhound is perhaps—the bloodhound excepted—the least fierce of all varieties. It is only when he returns to primal ways and is carried away by the zest of the pack and the hunting scents that any rage possesses him. Nevertheless, he lives faster than other animals outside his species. For all dogs exhaust themselves. They breathe quickly; their energy is furious. The number of foot-pounds a collie, with his "clamour on small occasions, fussiness," will hit in a morning's walk baffles arithmetic. In a day he touches the extremes of ecstacy and lethargy, and his genius for friendship has but a short course.

If dogs lived longer they would surely converse with yet more speaking gestures, movements, and sounds than those of the nose lifting our forearm from the knees, the slight but quick vibration of pleasure, when we touch for a moment in the midst of work the half-slumberous form at our feet, or the dance of pleasure as the hat is taken from the peg. The dog is a great friend because self-negation—so strangely opposed to his physical energy—is as innate in his character as is self-interest in the cat's.

THE INTERNATIONAL HORSE SHOW.

With the publication of the schedule of classes and prizes, the arrangements for the big International Horse Show, which is to be held at Olympia between the 6th and 16th of next June, may be said to have entered upon their final stage.

Even though the exhibition is still young the coming one only being the fourth, it has already taught us to look for colour and floral display, and a wealth of originality and inventiveness at Olympia each year that no other show has ever dared to attempt. For this year's show the scheme is more ambitious than ever, and the description of it that Mr. Frank F. Euren—the man whose organising skill and inventive genius have done so much to give the show its rank as one of the great "events" of the social year—has given to the writer suggests that he has yet another great surprise in store.

Everything that is possible is to be done to create the effect of an old English garden, in which the orchids and hydrangeas of other years will give place to the homely but beautiful and sweet-scented old English flowers. The walls of time-stained and moss-grown stone, covered with clinging creepers and rambling roses, that are to conceal the balcony, will be backed by what the gardeners love to describe as "herbaceous borders," in which masses of hollyhocks, foxgloves, lupins, Canterbury bells, and such old-world favourites will be prominent. A fountain will play constantly by the flight of marble steps that is to lead from the "temple" bandstand to the arena.

The big oaken gates through which competitors will enter the arena will be flanked by rock-gardens, in which little waterfalls will splash among the huge boulders, and will be surmounted by a high rustic trellis, on which roses and jasmine and wistaria will climb. And all around, rising to the sky-line, will be grass-clad hills. The setting could hardly have been more happily chosen for anything so essentially English as a great horse-show.

What may be described as the "business" portion of the show will be as rich as ever in new features of an attractive nature. The most notable of these, perhaps, will be a class for State coaches that are preserved, almost as family relics, and quaint survivals of an age that seems long past, are not only curious but very beautiful; and their appearance, with all the added gorgeousness of their proper harness and trappings, should make a splendid spectacle.

In this class Lord Lonsdale himself and Sir Walter Gilbey are sure to be worthily represented; and if only Lord Derby, the Duke of Portland and Lord Londonderry for instance could be induced to contribute to such a picturesque and almost historical pageant, the spectacle would appeal to very many people for whom a horse show has no attractions in the ordinary way.

To the general public, no doubt, the jumping will appear more strongly than anything else; and this year the jumping promises to be more exciting than ever. There are a number of new features, one being a competition in which teams of the same nationality will jump the fences abreast. For this competition the prizes amount to £310, the first prize being £100. The Connaught Gold Challenge Cup for Jumping over the course by British officers, and King Edward's Gold Cup, value £500, which was won last year by France, will again be competed for.

A new feature will be a wide water-jump. This jump, which will be 12 feet wide, will be constructed in the arena. In front of the jump will be a moveable brush fence, so arranged as to admit of widening the space to be jumped to any extent necessary to the running off of the heats.

The total value of the jumping prizes this year is £4,785. Officers will attend from America, France, Italy, Spain, Belgium, Sweden, Greece, and, it is hoped, from Germany. They will be the guests of the Horse Show during their stay, and every courtesy will be shown to them by officers appointed by the British War Office to act as their cicerones.

Of the other competitors France and Belgium will send as many as ever, and even more enthusiasts than in past years are coming from America, so that there is sure to be the usual keen competition in the stable-adornment of "Millionaires' Avenue." Judge Moore has decided to bring his magnificent stable over again, and Mr. C. W. Watson, Mr. E. T. Stotesbury and Mr. R. P. McGrann will be among his rivals. Mr. Alfred Vanderbilt will be coaching over here throughout the season; and it is understood that he has set his heart upon winning the "Coaching Marathon." Two very well known American exhibitors, Mr. J. W. Harriman and Mr. Paul Sorb, who have not hitherto shown at Olympia, are now entering the lists. Mr. Walter Winans, who keeps over a hundred magnificent horses in his stables at Surrenden Park, and who does things in the grand manner, has already requested, without bothering about details, that "the usual accommodation" shall be reserved for him. His brother, Mr. Louis Winans, will again be a prominent exhibitor.

The following is a summary of the complete classification for the show :—

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

We would draw the attention of our readers to the fact that we are taking larger and more convenient offices over the Edinburgh Press and that in future our address will be 303, Bowbazar Street, Calcutta.

The Official Measurer of the Calcutta Turf Club will class, age and measure horses at the Jumping School near the Zeerut Bridge on Friday and Saturday, the 1st and 2nd April, at 7 A.M.

The first of the purchases for the coming season, Vitange by Vitez—Angy, was landed early in the last week from England and is for Mr. B. P. Roy Chowdhury, who owns Palindrome, Bell Cole, etc., and is now quartered at Wishart's stable, where O. Dignum has temporary accommodation until he moves on to Bangalore for the summer. This horse is very well bred to figures, as he combines in his pedigree the best blood of what Mr. Bruce Lowe calls the "running" and the sire lines. Angy, the dam is a No. 1, being by Orvieto (by Bend Or—Napoli) and this is one of the "running" lines; Vitez is a No. 8, one of the selected "sire" lines and is himself by Melton—Kittiwake and so gets the good Master Kildare, Lord Ronald and Sterling. He is now a five-year-old and though he is not by any means a front ranker and has not won a big race at home, he is probably quite class enough to win any of our big handicaps at the Calcutta Meetings and is, as we say, well bred enough for anything. He has landed in good order and as soon as he has had a bit of time to get over the long sea-voyage he will be sent off to salubrious Bangalore to summer.

Mr. J. C. Galstaun, who has recently been doing a considerable amount of weeding out in his string, is off to England about the middle of next month and is sure to pick up some reinforcements whilst he is there. At present he has nothing that can be said to approach first class form, as Tangaroa, the only horse with any pretensions, has been sent home and will, we understand, be prepared for some of the Autumn Handicaps. Misty Morn picked up one race (the Macpherson Cup) during the past season, but he is only after all a persevering handicap performer and has no chance whatever of crediting his owner with a w.f.a. event. It is probable, as we hear, that Mr. Galstaun will buy a Viceroy's Cup horse and, judging by what moderate English horses have done in the past season, a horse capable of doing the trick ought not to be very difficult to find.

Recent experience has shown that English horses come to hand far quicker than their Colonial brethren, and the principal reason is that an English horse coming to India does not have to "change his season," that is to say, that winter and summer occur in India at the same time as they do at home, whereas in Australia the contrary is the case and a Colonial comes from winter to winter or summer to summer. The old prejudice against English horses for India seems to be dying down, as nowadays far more English race-horses come to the country than do Australians. It used to be said that English horses always went in the feet on the hard Indian courses and that for that reason it was preferable to have the good-footed Colonial, who rarely wreck in that region, and was used to galloping on going not much better than we get in India. This prejudice was more or less based upon very little in the way of actual fact, and recent experience has shown us that the English horse stands the racket as well, and even better than his Colonial brother. There have been very few breaks-down to record amongst the English horses racing in India, whereas the list of the cripples who have hailed from Australia is a very fairly long one. Boabdil, Cherson, Fitzgrafton, Mallard, Peru, Neith, Wandin to cite only a few that during recent years have cracked up! The English horse has come to stay and the long list of successes gained by him during the past two seasons in India very plainly indicates the way in which the wind is setting. A horse that can be bought for £500 at home the Colonial dealers would bid you £1,000 for. Cherson, for instance, was sold in India to Mr. Timol for Rs. 40,000 and this money spent at home would buy three horses, or at any rate two capable of running rings round a horse of his class. Great Scot, Fitzgrafton and Neith were all long-priced ones, though we do not say that in view of the achievements of the two former they were exorbitantly priced horses, but at the same time there is no doubt that a horse of quite sufficiently good class would have been purchased at home for less money. Taking a line through Dalkeith, who went home from India and won the Newbury Cup, a horse of sufficient class to win any Viceroy's Cup could be bought for at least 25 per cent. less than an owner would be asked to pay in the Colonies.

The Australians by opening their mouths too wide have lost a market of which they had in former years practically a monopoly. There is also a doubt whether the class of horse obtainable in Australia to-day is within measureable distance of what it was. Certainly class for class the English bred one is far in advance of his Colonial brother. An English selling plater is nowadays good enough to beat Australian horses that come up with a ready-made reputation from Australia. Take the case of Lumination, a very moderate English mare, on her home form, and Soultline, one of the smartest short-distance horses they can produce in Australia. There was not a great deal between the pair and Lumination's score in stake-money won during the past season was greater than her smart colonial rival's and she put it up in first-class events. Yet the money that would buy a Lumination the Colonial dealers would scoff at if offered for a Soultline.

It is practically decided, so we understand, that the flat races during the Monsoon Meetings will not be run on the Calcutta training track as heretofore, and it is possible that the public riding track will be put into order and utilised for this purpose. As this track will, if this is decided upon, require a considerable amount of overhauling and widening, a process that will entail several culverts being built out, the sooner the work on it is commenced the better. It is obvious that if the training track is to be in good order for the cold weather operations the only possible chance for it is to give it a respite from the cutting up it gets during the Monsoon Meetings. The only alternative to using the public riding track for flat races in the Monsoon Meetings is the well-drained horse hurdle course in the centre of the Calcutta racecourse. We should not be surprised if this were not what is ultimately decided upon, and in that case all the hurdle races would have to be run over the pony hurdle course. It would probably be feasible to considerably lengthen the pony hurdle course as at present it does not by any means follow the alignment of the horse track.

There was some talk of Firth, the well-known jockey, going home to Mr. O. M. D. Bell, who has now taken some training quarters in Berkshire, but the arrangements, we hear, fell through.

Mr. S. Griffiths, the Official Handicapper to the C. T. C., leaves for Australia very shortly, but will return in time for the Monsoon Meetings, so we understand.

Ferguson will probably come to Calcutta for the Monsoons in charge of a few of Mr. Galstaun's.

Mr. Holmes and Mr. Butler will have a few in training for the Monsoons and amongst the former gentleman's will be Plain Mister and Lady Teazle whilst Mr. Butler has a new pony and also a brown horse that shapes well over hurdles. His string will be reinforced by old Blitzen later on.

Mr. A. L. Butler has sold that fine horse Red Sea to an up-country sportsman and the horse's future avocation in life will probably be to lead a Squadron of that gallant corps, The Royals, on parade.

The Randwick pattern of race course rail is to be introduced into Calcutta. This rail is furnished with a flat board running along the inside of the top-rail and this prevents injury to either horse or jockey in the event of their getting bumped on to the rails in a tight squeeze in a big field. This rail has been found to answer admirably in Australia, from which country so many improvements in the appendages and appurtenances of race courses have come.

The starting gate now in use in England is at last the same as that at the first class meetings in Australia, in that the racing executives in England have now adopted the single tape instead of ropes or a multiplicity of tapes. The principal advantage about the single tape—usually in Australia a fairly wide one of some easily broken material—is that it can be quickly mended and being wide and solid-looking it offers no inducement to horses to try and charge through it. Ropes, such as are in use with Indian starting gates, do not on the contrary look solid, but are far more so than this broad tape that the Australians use and have also the additional disadvantage of inflicting more or less severe injuries upon a jockey or even the horse when the latter charges through them. The single tape is kept in a roll on the Australian gates and when it is broken by a horse charging through it, all that has to be done is to pull out an additional length and knot the broken ends. This is done in a few seconds: but when the ropes are broken a period of delay is caused bending a new length [illegible] and removing the broken fragments. Now that the C. T. C. have the up-to-date gates it is a pity they do not adopt the single tape. It is in every way a vast improvement upon any other [illegible] barrier."

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—In compliance with the petition of the Arab owners in particular, the Additional Extra was fixed on Wednesday and in all there were eight events. A. and T. Ferguson, Robinson and Kuhn put in an appearance, making up for the departure that morning of Southall, Ames and Barrett. On the whole the books had a distinct advantage, betting being generally open and good.

We began with a Selling Race for new ones 14 hands and under, in the first of which 5 to 2 was procurable about any, Akhil, Zarwood and Ivan the pick. Ivan was off badly, but Akhil made the running and had Leader and Zarwood beaten. Down the straight, however, Luah came wide and beat him a neck in a punishing finish.

Red Hazard was made a warm favourite for the second from Crown and the bunch that contested the finish meant a good deal of bumping. Frederick Leonard set a hot pace, and when the favourite came up he was unable to get through on the rails. Peculiarly enough, just as he was taken outside, Crown came into his old place and, the others coming away from the rails, squeezed in and got there by a neck. Mohajir was another neck in front of Red Hazard, who should have won but for the former's attentions in the run home.

For the bigger ones, Braganza stood out on form, money also coming for Indian Star and Cocky. Hamdoon turned out to be the only danger, but he also was badly beaten when the favourite came, and it took a bit of extra money to buy the winner in.

As in a handicap he would have had to carry top weight, Thaboor looked like being the certainty of the day in the Substitution Plate. The distance was too short to be in his favour, and as there was nothing to make the running they would have done well to instruct Hoyt to do it himself. He was always well up to Antica and then Vibrona, but so slow was the race run that first Swalior on the outside passed him and then Well Done finding a way through on the rails had everything comfortably beaten.

The mile for the newly landed was actually done in ⅘secs. faster time, Tajilmulook, Akseer and Straight Tip being the order of betting. Whether wisely or not, Akseer was taken away to the front and Rassmosum was soon done but, though under the whip before the bend, Straight Tip was not to be shaken off. Lord Mayor also came well, but though beating Akseer had no chance of catching Straight Tip. Tajilmulook had given some promise before the bend, but weight told and Sawyer finished stronger just behind Akseer.

A division was necessary in the six-furlong Consolation, Director at 5 to 2 remaining favourite from Injas at threes. Revolver led Injas and Director for a time, but then fell away. Siberia ran up close to Injas at the bend, and the two went very wide. Even going the shortest way, Director could do no good, and Siberia never got on terms with Injas.

Excellent timing was put up in the other when Regiment disappointed badly. The second favourite, Luna, looked all over a winner on facing from home, but Guinea Mohur held him very safe once he ran up to him. He went up a good deal in the weights and to win now with 9st. 12lbs. up must be a really smart pony, being only 13-3.

The big horse race once provided a good finish, Mary B and Bright Metal being equal favourites from Solution. Nancy bolted with T. Ferguson and gave him a bad time. Unable to hold her, he slipped off on passing the nine furlongs. The mare turned and came back to the gate, where she pulled up on her own. In the race, Mystery got a break, but soon gave way to Solution, who took a long lead from Metal Girl and Mary B. The last named came after the leader nearing the bend, reduced the lead on turning, and in a most exciting finish pipped her on the post by a neck. Bright Metal was two lengths behind third, after a bad start.

A very enjoyable cross country meeting was held by the Cavalry Brigade at Rawalpindi on the 23rd instant. The course was laid in the vicinity of Tarlai, some seven miles to the east across the Karung River and quite a big attendance graced the proceedings. The programme opened with a 2½ mile race for native ranks of the 5th Cavalry and was won by a chestnut.

The "Gunner's Cup" was next, also over a distance of 2½ miles; this was for hired chargers of "V" Battery, R.H.A., owners up, and was won by Mr. Miller with Mr. Taylor close behind.

The race for hired chargers of officers of the 10th Royal Hussars then followed. Mr. Gordon-Canning passed the flags first, in spite of a big effort on the part of Mr. Gosling, who was a very close second.

The "Karanagh" Challenge Cup for members of the Sergeants' Mess of the 10th Hussars furnished another good finish, Sergeant Hawkes coming in first, Sergeant Quinn second, and R. S. M. Gordon a good third.

The course for the next race—private chargers of the 10th Hussars—was a 3½ mile one, and resulted in a great finish. Colonel Vaughan on his Kadir Cup winner "Vedette" overhauled Mr. Palmer in the last quarter mile and won a fine race.

The "Staff Cup" was the last race, being intended for members of the Staff and of the Punjab Commission, but strange to relate it was badly supported, and, in order to get a field of even four, departments and the Simla Staff had to be indented upon. Captain Lane, A.V.C., won this event on a 14-1 pony, with Colonel Headlam second.

At the end of the proceedings Lady Milbanke presented the "Karanagh" Cup to the fortunate winner. Colonel Vaughan and his officers hospitably entertained all comers in tents which had been specially pitched for the purpose.

The King has given permission for the skeleton of Persimmon to be exhibited at the International Field Sports and Shooting Exhibition to be held at Vienna this summer. The skeleton was recently transferred from Sandringham to South Kensington, but it will not be formally handed over to the authorities of the Natural History Museum until its return from Vienna at the close of the exhibition. This relic of the famous English thoroughbred should prove a great attraction in the Austrian capital, where so many people are interested in horses and the turf.

The bulk of Mr. Roosevelt's African specimens will go to the National Museum at Washington, but other museums in the U.S.A. will also secure trophies. Some 500 specimens of the larger mammals have been killed, including 17 lions, 11 elephants, 10 buffaloes, 10 black rhinoceros, 8 hippopotami, 9 giraffes, 3 leopards, 7 cheetahs, 3 ginem elands, 2 bongos, 3 sable antelopes and 1 sititunga. The Americans are boasting that they will have a finer collection of mammals than even the British Museum.

DOG MEDICINES

MAY NOW BE OBTAINED IN INDIA

In CALCUTTA from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO.,

And in BOMBAY from TREACHER & CO., Ltd.

These preparations are based on the most recent and up-to-date veterinary research, and are the best possible remedies for the various ailments and diseases for which they are recommended.

It is of the greatest importance in treating all cases of sickness in dogs that the nature of the ailment should be recognised, and in order to enable dog owners to do this we have published a book.

"HINTS TO DOG OWNERS"

ILLUSTRATED,

which is now the standard work of reference in thousands of kennels in the United Kingdom, where it has had a larger circulation than any book on dogs ever published, the demand for it being so great that more than 200,000 copies have been disposed of. It may be obtained gratis on application to either of the above-mentioned firms in India, and everyone interested in dogs should make a point of obtaining a copy at once.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR DOGS.

These Capsules are tasteless and odourless, and are the surest and safest means of expelling both Round and Tape Worms from dogs (or puppies three months old or over) weighing 10lb. or more. They require no purgative medicine afterwards. May be easily given wrapped up in a piece of meat or cheese.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR PUPPIES AND TOY DOGS.

Every puppy at six weeks old should be dosed with these Capsules which may be safely given to even the smallest and most delicate toy puppy. They surely expel all Worms and never cause the least discomfort. Castor oil is not required before or after giving them, and it is not necessary for the puppy to fast before being dosed.

SHERLEY'S "SKIN CURE."

An absolutely unrivalled dressing for Mange, Eczema, Ringworm, and all other Skin Diseases of dogs. It cures Mange for certain in a week, and not only cures the disease but starts an immediate and vigorous growth of hair.

SHERLEY'S "DISTEMPERCURE."

The best remedy for Distemper ever discovered; it reduces the fever and creates an appetite. In each tin are full instructions as to nursing and dieting, on which the cure of Distemper depends so much.

SHERLEY'S "SHAMPOO."

A Liquid Soap for Washing Dogs. It penetrates the hair, which it cleanses much better than any solid soap and in less than half the time.

It removes dandriff, stimulates the growth of hair, and gives the coat a healthy, glossy appearance.

It also prevents Eczema, and destroys Fleas and all other insects.

RETURNING from his African game slaughtering expedition Ex-President Roosevelt was marked down by certain American pressmen who lay in ambush all along the Nile to interview him : it was a case of the hunter hunted. The tame poet of a London evening paper refers to the situation thus :—

The hunters of the hunter lay in ambush on the Nile,
Their stylographs were loaded to the brim,
With a singular abandonment of literary style,
They would cry at every sound, "It must be him!"
But it only was a breeze that frolicked gently through the reeds,
And the pressmen still continued lying low,
For exclusive information showed the man of mighty deeds
Was engaged in hunting water-buck at No.
He may dodge the charging rhino, he may deftly step aside
When the wounded lion makes its final spring,
But he knows that the American reporter in his pride
Is undoubtedly another sort of thing.
He may strive to break the cordon or assume a dark disguise,
He may flee upon a camel far and fast,
But the crowd is out for "Teddy," and no matter how he tries,
It is certain they will bag him at the last.

THE discovery within recent years of the great forest-pig and the okapi causes one to wonder whether there are not other species of large terrestrial animals still remaining to be discovered. Herr Hagenbeck, than whom few living men are better able to obtain out-of-the-way information regarding wild animals, is of opinion that "science is, in all probability, still incompletely acquainted even with the larger members of the world's fauna." Such an opinion from another source might, perhaps, be dismissed lightly, but, coming as it does from a man who might be called the king of wild beast traders, it carries a considerable amount of weight. Herr Hagenbeck employs many men who are continually exploring parts of the globe in pursuit of specimens, and these travellers often hear stories from the natives concerning wild animals, which, from the description given by the aborigines, would appear to be unknown to European scientists. Native reports regarding beasts and birds are not always reliable ; still, many important discoveries have been made through information gained from natives. For example, the remains of the South American giant sloth and the existence of the okapi, gorilla and giant pig. In any case, we see no reason to doubt that the catalogue of the world's fauna might still be augmented by hitherto unknown species indigenous to unexplored territories.

"CAMERA Adventures in the African Wilds" by A. Radclyffe Dugmore appears to be the best work of this nature that has yet been published. It gives many photos of wild animals taken at close quarters from which instructive lessons in natural history may be drawn. The rhinoceros photographs are marvellously good ; many of them were taken at close ranges of twelve yards and less, in circumstances of very great physical danger indeed. The lion pictures are also very good. The Times writing on the subject says that it is difficult to imagine anything more nerve-shaking than to lie motionless all night on the ground under the scant protection of a few flimsy thorn branches waiting ten yards from a kill for the opportunity of photographing a troop of lions, unless it be the act of sallying forth to reset the camera and flashlight after the great cat has been scared temporarily away by the blinding glare. On one such occasion Mr. Dugmore found a lion watching him as he did this, for the light of his electric lamp was reflected from its eyes as it crouched in the impenetrable darkness of the night. These and his other adventures, the stories of his sometimes unexpected successes and his frequently undeserved failures, he tells in a pleasant, natural narrative which is nowhere strained or exaggerated. His very remarkable series of photographs will fascinate big game hunters as no such volume has done before ; and beyond that, it will afford the keenest delight to anyone, old or young, who loves animals and animal study. Not the least memorable of the associations connected with it is the knowledge that the rifle was used only now and then in self-defence and occasionally to procure meat for food. Apart from a mild fright, the animals were none the worse for the process of being photographed, and this may recommend Mr. Dugmore's book to those who avoid the usual big game hunters' records of destruction.

IT is not perhaps generally known that most animals when cornered will scream. A writer to Cassell's Magazine states that he once heard a frog scream which had been sniffed at by a cat, the result was to so scare the cat as to cause it to turn a sort of back somersault in its eagerness to withdraw ; but the frog died of fright. He also narrates that he has heard rats scream when frightened and even a hedgehog. The latter had come out for his usual nocturnal ramble and had ventured to leave the hedge bottom for the open field. A terrier—one of the few animals that can tackle the prickly little beast—discovered him, and after a few feigned onslaughts rushed at the hedgehog, and with a quick movement turned it over and plunged his strong forepaws in where the hedgehog's black snout was tucked away. It was then that the hedgehog screamed. Its natural protection had failed it, its vital parts were being forcibly exposed to the teeth of its enemy. The next moment it was dead. What is more startling than screams of horses as they strive to break out of a blazing stable or blindly rush hither and thither in their terror, to escape from an enemy which instinct tells them they cannot overcome ? The horror of such a scene is increased when it happens by night, as is, indeed, most commonly the case, for darkness always seems to increase the sense of fear in animals, and when darkness and the lurid light of a fire are mingled, their terror reaches its highest pitch. From all accounts there would appear to be no more terrifying spectacle than a stampede of beasts, wild and tame before a rapidly advancing forest of prairie fire. With the roaring flames behind them, with shrill bellowings, neighings, trumpetings and screams, they wildly tear along pell-mell, heedless of holes, hillocks, creeks or even pain to themselves or others. Many of them are thrown and crushed in the mad stampede, but the rest plunge on until they reach the cooling waters or some river, or in their blind terror, are hurled in a living avalanche over some precipice, at the foot of which they presently lie, an inert mass, but—free from fear.

THAT dead dogs cannot bark will no longer be a true saying, for Dr. Marage, a French savant, has demonstrated before the Academy of Science that dead dogs can be made to bark and howl as when they were alive. The learned doctor has made a special study of voice physiology, and is known for his curious researches. Among other things, he had succeeded in photographing the vibrations of the voice. He has also demonstrated by various experiments a scientific truth generally admitted, that the voice sounds are produced exclusively by the larynx, and that the cavity of the mouth is only an accessory, which reinforces the sound.

Whilst studying this very point, he hit on the curious fact that dead animals, by means of electric action on the larynx, can be made to emit the same sounds as when they were alive. He applied a feeble electric current to certain muscles of the throat of a dead dog, which immediately caused it to bark. The sound was produced evidently by a series of simple contractions of the larynx, causing a vibration. He multiplied his experiments, and found that big, dead hounds, for instance, could be made to omit a a deep-voiced bark as if they were alive, and smaller dogs could be made to produce a long, pitiful howl, such as is usually heard when they are said to be barking or howling at the moon. The various kinds of howls and barks can be produced at will by changing the electric current.

These experiments served to demonstrate that what is called by singers the sudden loss of one's voice is not due to the vocal chords of the larynx itself, but to the paralysis and inertia of the muscles which cause the vibrations. The proper treatment for restoring the voice might therefore be found in restoring the muscular activity of the larynx. A slight shock from an electric battery might, perhaps, restore the silver voice of a distressed prima donna suddenly afflicted with aphomy. If the voice can be restored to the dead, why not also to the living.

Macpherson had just finished telling how his father's partner had caught the forty-pound salmon after a tremendous struggle of nine hours when Laidlaw entered the club. Laidlaw is a great authority on sporting matters, and, of course, the story had to be retold to him. He gazed meditatively at the ceiling through the thick smoke from his pipe, and when Macpherson had finished he said :—

"Yes gentlemen, what Mac says may be true enough, but the exploit of his father's partner was nothing when compared with my shooting experience up in Perthshire. Ah! it was grand that—grand."

Of course, we were at once all interest, and begged Laidlaw to let us have the circumstances. He puffed slowly at his pipe, then, tilting his chair back against the wall, he swept the room with his eyes and began.

"Some of you chaps may remember that last year I rented a small shooting in Perthshire. Grouse were plentiful, and there were so many hares, rabbits, and pheasants in my area that I soon tired of shooting them. I am sure you'll agree that when a man bags 200 brace of grouse and pheasants every day for a fortnight, not to speak of hares, rabbits, and smaller game, he begins to find the business a bit monotonous, and wants something to stir him up. During the third week of my stay I moped about my hut more than anywhere else, and the hares and rabbits got so tame that they would hop right up to me and take bits of chocolate and butterscotch from my hand.

"Now about a couple of hundred yards from my place there was a small loch, known to the people of the district as the 'dead waters.' It seemed to me to be a likely place for duck, but, go there when I might, I never could see any. I was dying for a shot at wild duck, and used to prowl around gun in hand, often with a pheasant and a hare for my companions, on the look-out ; but still the duck did not come.

"One day I was standing at the door of my hut looking out over the moor. All at once a number of tiny specks appeared afar off, and, as they drew nearer, I saw to my delight that at last a flock of wild duck was coming my way. They were making straight for the dead waters. Of course, I was all excitement, and hurried into the hut for my gun. As luck would have it, I could not put my hands on it, but snatched up an old muzzle-loader I had been working with and came out. I charged it hastily, and, just as the fowls were directly in the line of sight, fired.

"Gentlemen—believe it or not as you will—I had foolishly omitted to withdraw the ramrod from my gun, but so true was my aim that I strung the whole flock of duck right through their necks with the ramrod, and they fell at my feet. The lock of the gun burst and killed two hares that were passing, and the concussion sent me backward in a sitting position on a covey of partridges. It was the shot of my life. By one discharge, gentlemen, of an effete weapon I had killed 23 duck, two hares, and seven partridges. Eh? What's that? Yes, I will, Bob, but not t much water. Thanks."

And that's why we call him Æsop, though chausen might have been more appropriate.

WITH the disappearance of Dr. Cook generally thought that the long drawn ou controversy had ended. But evidently th the case, and Rear-Admiral Peary has still t that he reached the North Pole in spite of t that his story has been very widely acce true. It must come as a surprise to many th Sub-committee of the Naval Committee of Washington House of representatives decid almost unanimously, against honouring Peary unti he should submit proofs of his discovery of the North Pole. Mr. Macon contributed to this result by declaring himself to be sceptical of the explorer's claim. The astonishing part of Rear-Admiral Peary's statement, argued Mr. Macon, was the number of miles travelled every day after Captain Bartlett had left him when he had no white man with him as a witness. His greatest marches were singularly all north of Captain Bartlett's camp. Thence forward he claimed to have averaged 26·4 miles a day until he reached the Pole, 44 miles a day on the way back to Captain Bartlett's camp, and 24·8 miles a day from Captain Bartlett's camp to Cape Columbia. The greatest speed made before Captain Bartlett left him was 9·06 miles a day, so that he must have made nearly three times as great a speed after as before in order to reach the Pole. Mr. Macon quoted Sir Ernest Shackleton and others to show that 10 to 12 miles a day or slightly over, were considered the limit of human endurance over Polar Seas. It seems likely that the House of representatives will have to wait some time for a reply to these insinuations. The members of the Congress Committee demanded in vain that Peary's full records should be submitted to them. It is stated that he refused the request on the ground that compliance would be breaking his contract with the publishers of his story.

ALTHOUGH punctures are of far less frequent occurrence than they were a few years ago in the pneumatic tyre it would be a great boon to motorists if a satisfactory solid tyre could be produced. Since the motor-car's early days efforts have been made to revive the solid tyre in such form that it should possess all the advantages and none of the disadvantages of pneumatics. The success of the different inventions has been of brief duration, but a good deal has lately been heard of the Torkington solid tyre, which must be regarded as in a class apart from the majority of similar inventions. It has recently undergone with conspicuous success, an official R. A. C. trial for durability, while a short ride on a car fitted with these tyres, and not altered in any way as regards springs from the standard pattern, proves that if there is any difference in comfort as compared with a car running on ordinary pneumatics it is so small as to be negligible. The tyres, as stated in the Royal Automobile Club certificate, have been run on a car weighing over two tons, at an average speed of 43·7 miles an hour, for 102 miles at Brooklands, and at the end of the run were only warm to the touch. In addition, three of the tyres showed no measurable wear, while the fourth was ·08 of an inch less in diameter as a result of looseness in the bearing of the wheel to which it was attached. A further trial of 4,000 miles on the road was undertaken, and the subsequent certificate, as published in the Royal Automobile Club Journal, stated that the wear of the tyres amounted to $\frac{3}{32}$ inch and $\frac{5}{32}$ inch on the two driving wheels, and $\frac{3}{32}$ inch and $\frac{11}{64}$ inch on the front wheels—a total amount of wear on all four tyres of $\frac{1}{4}$ less than an inch. This is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that 4,000 miles is not such a long way short of the average life of an ordinary pneumatic cover. On this trial only such trivial troubles as the loosening of three side-plates were experienced.

A London correspondent writes:—This year there is likely to again be a sculling race between the Oxford and Cambridge spare men. P. G. Pope, of Rugby and Brasenose, is the Oxford spare man. He stroked one of the trial eights at Oxford last term, and but for illness would probably have been in the Oxford crew. H. G. Palmer, of Winchester and First Trinity, is the Cambridge spare man. is not often a boxing fatality is recorded in gland: but on Saturday, the 5th instant, a well-nown boxer, "Curly" Watson, died at Wonderland (London) after a bout with the negro boxer, Frank Inglis. The match between the two men, described as a ten rounds international contest, was the principal event of the programme. The fight was of an exciting though good-tempered nature, and Watson seemed to be winning until half a minute before the end of the last round, when he was knocked down by a blow in the face. He rose at once, but receiving another blow fell on his face insensible.

The officials could not restore him to consciousness and doctors were sent for. Watson was taken to a dressing-room, and restoratives were applied, but he died shortly before 12-30 without regaining consciousness.

Watson, who was born at Barrow-in-Furness in 1883, was one of the most popular boxers at Wonderland, where he had fought dozens of contests. In 1905 and 1906, when he was in the Navy, he won the Army and Navy middle-weight championships at Aldershot. He was the holder of the 10st. 8lb. championship belt of England.

Inglis, his opponent, comes from the West Indies, and has not been long in England. He is the 10st. 8lb. champion of the Midlands. There was, of course, the usual inquest at which the jury decided that the contest was a very fair one and a verdict of accidental death was returned.

The 13th Hussars gave a farewell boxing tournament at Secunderabad last week, a very successful show being attended largely on each night. Originally advertised for three nights the tournament had to be extended to five owing to the large number of entries. The novice classes filled particularly well and in these as well as in the other events some excellent fights were put up. On Friday night, half the proceeds of the show were devoted to the fund for the benefit of the widow of the late Trumpeter Giles, R.F.A., who lost his life while taking part in the Hyderabad Volunteer Sports a short time ago. The spectators rolled up and quite a tidy sum must have been handed over to those who are managing the fund. The tournament was brought to a close on Saturday, the 19th instant, and a most interesting evening's entertainment was provided. Besides the final bouts in the various classes there was a six-round contest for the Regimental Championship Belt between Lance-Corporal Payne and Private Sinclair, which was won by Payne: another six-round contest for a purse of Rs. 100 and a side stake of Rs. 200 between Sergeant Chapman, "G" Battery, R.H.A., and Corporal Melville, 13th Hussars. This was the finest fight of the tournament, the Gunner winning after a splendid battle. Lieutenant-Colonel A. H. M. Taylor, D.S.O., Commanding the 13th Hussars, gave away the prizes at the close of the proceedings and congratulated Mr. Kelly and his Committee on the success of their management. The Ring officials were as follows:—Referee, Major Bayley, 13th Hussars; Judges, Lieutenant Lush-Wilson, "G" Battery, R.H.A., and Lieutenant Ruck, 95th Russell's Infantry; Time-keeper, Sergeant-Major McCann, 10th Battery, R.F.A.; Master of Ceremonies, Mr. Greenall, Regimental Sergeant-Major, 13th Hussars.

Appended are the results of the final bouts:—Boys. A. Larner beat Crouch (both 13th Hussars). B. Macintosh, R.F.A., beat Stevens, 13th Hussars. Bantam. Lance-Corporal Murray, 13th Hussars, beat McCarthy, Cheshires. Feather. Munday beat Martin (both 13th Hussars). Middle. Shoeing Smith Bassington, 13th Hussars, beat White, Sherwood Foresters. Novices. 9st. 7lb. Kimberley beat Bennet, 13th Hussars. 10st. 7lb. Lynch, 10th Battery, R.F.A., beat Noble, Cheshires.

The semi-final round of the English Association Cup was played off last Saturday afternoon with the following result:—

Newcastle United beat Swindon Town by two goals to nil. The match was played on Tottenham ground.

Everton drew with Barnsley playing at Leeds, no score being recorded.

The Lahore Trades Cup Football Tournament has ended in a win for the Lancashire Fusiliers, who, after playing a drawn match with the 12th Royal Lancers in the final last Saturday, beat them by 5 goals to nil in the second encounter. The Lancashire Fusiliers it will be remembered won the Durand Football Tournament at Simla in 1908 and again last year—so they continue to maintain their form against the strongest Military combinations in Northern India. A report of the closing stages of the tournament appears further on.

The opening game of the Polo Tournament for the Murree Brewery Challenge Cup was played at Rawalpindi on Monday evening, when the 5th Cavalry beat the Royal Artillery after a level but rather sticky game by 8 goals to 6.

Her Majesty the Queen visited Crufts Dog Show this year on the Thursday and a Royal box was specially prepared for her; this happened to be built exactly facing the stand occupied by the Benbows Dog Mixture Co., and under these exceptional circumstances they had the stand suitably decorated with palms and flags, and the parade of dogs took place in front of the Royal box and their stand. The general public was roped off, so that their stand was the only one left inside the part of the Hall reserved for the parade and was thus the position in the show and the envy of every exhibitor in the place.

The Cooch Behar Football Tournament will be held in Calcutta about the middle of next month, entries closing on 10th proximo.

It is good news to learn that interest in rowing has once again been awakened in Bombay and that after a lapse of several years a regatta under the auspices of the Gymkhana Rowing Club has been fixed for the 2nd proximo, with heats to be rowed off this afternoon and to-morrow. Scratch fours, pair oars, single and double sculls figure on the programme and the committee are sanguine of success. The popularity of the boats this year is undoubted and we understand that a new and commodious boat house is now in course of construction at Chaupati. We trust this augurs for many years of continued prosperity for the club.

Some interesting Golf was witnessed at Tollygunge during the Easter competition. The final of the senior division brought together Messrs. A. S. Drew and H. G. N. Taylor, the latter winning on the last green. In the junior division final Mr. O. E. Williamson beat Mr. W. E. Crum.

The golf competition for the Cup presented by H.E. the Viceroy and played for at Barrackpore was won by Colonel Victor Brooke, Military Secretary to His Excellency.

Mr. H. S. Coates of Gonda is out with a challenge to run anyone over 20 miles for Rs. 200 a side and will give his opponent 10 minutes' start. Any takers?

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 11th March 1910.

Spring has apparently arrived, unless the trees and the flowers are extra precocious this year. The weather has been almost perfect all the week and invited with aggravating persistence to the leading of the out-door life which alas! to your "Vagrant" is not to be thought of till much later on. On every hand one observes omens of the Season. The first spring hats have made their appearance in the Park and the first batch of those tiresome wealthy Americans has been announced. The Mauretania, which arrived early this week, bore a good number of the vast invading army which is yearly welcomed to our shores. A shipping authority estimated that this season about 90,000 Americans will "do" Europe. Their steamship tickets will cost £2,250,000.

House and estate agents in the fashionable districts of London are extremely busy. Wealthy people who live in the country or abroad most of the year are coming back to town, where they will stay till the end of the season. Small houses are rapidly growing in favour while large West End mansions and blocks of flats are becoming more difficult to let. Soon the Indian leave season will bring along the dear old familiar faces which to many of us are as water in a dry land and the hearty "Hullo old chap,—how are you—got home a week ago—come and have a drink" will help to lift for a brief space the curtain behind which so many cherished memories are shut out.

The centenary of the death of Admiral Lord Collingwood friend of Nelson and faithful and gallant servant of His King and country, was celebrated on Tuesday afternoon at St. Paul's Cathedral by a special service. Prince Louis of Battenberg and Lord Charles Beresford were among the congregation, and many wreaths were placed on the memorial, which was draped with flags. Much enthusiasm was shown in Newcastle-on-Tyne, Collingwood's birthplace, in the celebration of the centenary. Mr. A. B. Collingwood, a descendant, commended the Admiral's three maxims, "love of country," "strong sense of duty," and "absolute uprightness." Mr. Balfour, in a letter to the Lord Mayor, said that nothing could be better for the Empire than to preserve the memory of the deeds of the great men who had helped to build it up.

Some lineal descendants of the hero have, if I mistake not, adorned the Bengal Pilot Service during the last half century.

What is a Jew? You in India would find no difficulty in defining him, but over here it is not always so easy. Most Englishmen would reply that a Jew is one born of the Semitic race. On the other hand the members of the Maccabean Club will only recognise as a Jew one who holds the Jewish faith. Therefore they have just given a feast in honour of Mr. Herbert Samuel, celebrating his late promotion as the first occasion on which a Jew has risen to Cabinet rank.

This hailing of Mr. Samuel as the first Jewish Cabinet Minister recalls the like rejoicing when a Rothschild was raised to peerage rank. He was, we were told, the first Jewish peer, and the uninstructed world asked, "What about Disraeli?" But if it be a question of race before religion, there was a Jewish peer among the Irish Lords nearly ninety years before Disraeli put an earl's coronet on his carriage panels. This was Sampson Gideon, Lord Eardley, whose grandfather was Senhor Abudiente, a Portuguese immigrant, and who, like young Benjamin Disraeli, had been "bred a Christian" by a parent who had fallen out with the elders of the synagogue.

I am not sure when "Chantecler" is to be offered to an astonished London audience; if it is not to be soon I fear when the production eventuates we shall be so heartily sick of the name and the atrocities associated with it, our welcome will be rather tepid. There has been a fearful outbreak of "Chantecler" specialities: Chantecler hats, trimmings, muffs, charms, etc., etc., etc.,—the "etc." standing, it is understood, for articles of feminine attire too intimate to be described in definite terms.

Misery Home Secretary Winston Churchill was the victim of a more or less stupid hoax this week. Some Home Office wag, writing on the office letter-paper, ordered coal for the little gentleman from about thirty dealers with the result that after the first two tons had been delivered and the cellar of his house in Eccleston Square filled to the brim, a procession of carts drew up at the door throughout the afternoon and the resulting language of the disappointed carters was, of course, picturesque to the last degree. Winston was intensely annoyed and has invoked the aid of Scotland Yard.

"The Fighting Chance" is another Lyceum success no inconsiderable thing with a theatre that can hold 3,000 or so, and generally does.

Much of the story is not new. There is a diabolically versatile villain with all sorts of infamies on short call. One girl he has seduced, he being her guardian and receiving an allowance from his friend, Stephen Blanchard, making a huge fortune out in Africa, for looking after her. Of course, Rivers has wearied of her before the curtain rises and wants her to be "reasonable," as Stephen may appear at any moment. Moreover, Rivers thinks it would be good business to marry another girl who is rich.

So Rivers sets himself to ruin Jim, the more cheerfully that Jim has all the symptoms of a hero, even to a habit of losing bets and paying. First Rivers makes it appear that Jim has cheated at cards, which, the decision of his fellow-officers going against him, compels him to resign and leads to his expulsion from the house of his father, a stiff old general, the soul of honour, but given to false conclusions. Jim, scouted by all save his sweetheart and the doctor the most level-headed man in the piece (note the value of a scientific education), picks up a revolver and is about to blow his brains out when his sweetheart appears and exhorts him to redeem himself in the eyes of the world by taking "the fighting chance." This he does by 'listing in the Gay Gordons and accompanying them to the Indian frontier, where some of them quickly find little to be gay about.

Their peril is, of course, aggravated by the cruel stupidities of Captain Rivers. That man is at the bottom of everything—except a well. Before leaving England he has availed himself of the chance of making Stephen, puzzled at his fiancee's turning her face away from him, believe that her betrayer is Jim.

In attempting to join the gentlemen the ladies have fallen into the hands of a hostile hill tribe, whose ways are not nice. The same fate has befallen Stephen, and worse, for him they have blinded and tortured almost out of human semblance. It is a gruesome creature like Austin Limason in "The Man Who Was" that gropes his way into the fort. He brings news, more, indeed, than Rivers bargains for. He has shared captivity with the two girls. They will only be released and saved from ills unspeakable if Rivers will take their place. He has learnt, too, the truth as to his fiancee's ruin, and has come to find the man, though he keeps his knowledge from Rivers till the critical moment. Then Rivers divines that the game is up, defiantly confesses his iniquities and shoots himself. No taking "fighting chances" for him. Some bargaining with strange men amid the hills, an attack triumphantly led and conducted by Jim, victory, rescue, and rehabilitation.

The piece is well put on, the Indian fort exciting the admiration of an old frequenter of the frontier. And the acting is, to use an appropriate expression, "first chop." As the villain, Mr. Eric Mayne scintillates with depravity. Mr. Frederick Ross as Stephen gives resonant expression to sterling worth and a righteousness not to be subdued by torture. Mr. Halliwell Hobbes is a trustworthy and sympathetic doctor. His "Damn the facts, I know him innocent" made a prime favourite of him the moment he spoke the words. The female parts are rather weak.

When "The Way the Money Goes" was produced by the Stage Society on a recent Sunday, the merits of Lady Bell's realistic little play of humble life were so generally admitted, that it was decided to present the piece for a limited number of performances at the New Royalty. The first of these performances last night confirmed the good opinions previously formed of the strength of the play. Lady Bell has completely escaped the many pitfalls which those who may be styled amateur dramatists generally tumble into. With simple directness she rams home her moral, which is the appalling thriftlessness of a section of the working classes. With vivid strokes she draws her picture of mean life in a manufacturing town. With striking detail she shows a humble woman's fall through petty debts, her agony and her petty scheming lest the knowledge of it should come to her husband. Lady Bell has set herself to photograph a phase of life which she has obviously studied and obviously understands. These gossiping women of hers, busy on humble things, dealing with tallymen and pawnbrokers—each of them rings true. And if the play has not sufficient dramatic force to afford it much chance of winning prolonged favour at a West End theatre, it is gratifying to find that it has not been left to the obscurity of a single semi-private performance by the Stage Society.

As usually happens when the characters of a play are realistically drawn, the acting was of a high standard all round, especial credit belonging to Miss Helen Haye, Miss Agnes Hill, Miss May Congdon, Mr. H. Nye Chart, and Mr. Frank Cochrane.

"Now is the time," the Walrus said, "to talk of many things," and Mr. Granville Barker had been listening to the Walrus when he sat down to write "The Madras House," produced by Mr. Frohman at the Duke of York's Repertory Theatre last night.

"The Madras House" is not a play in any of that ill-used word. It is a series of amazing versations, interesting, witty, delightful, car by a set of people, perfectly individuali either conventionally real or fantastically de Act I has less to do with Acts II, III than either of Acts II, III, and IV has to the other two—which is not much. It repre interior of the house of Henry Huxtable, markhill, on a Sunday morning, and is desi show the dulness of the lives of unmarried a aged women of the middle class.

Huxtable is a draper in a large way. Act I the counting house of Roberts and Huxtable Peckham. The conservation here is concerned mainly with the evils of the "living-in" system, one of Roberts and Huxtable's girl assistants being used as a text. But none of the incidents in "The Madras House" have any dramatic importance. They are merely used as an excuse for talk.

Act III takes place at the Madras House, the West End branch of Roberts and Huxtable. This side of the business has been founded by Constantine Madras, who, after a career of much philandering, has retired to Arabia in his old age and turned Mahometan, his religion affording him the means of continuing philandering without loss of dignity.

The talkers in Act III consist of Constantine himself (attired in a velveteen jacket and a flowing red tie); his priggish Fabian-Society-like son Henry Huxtable; a retired major (somehow the very description suggests the character), and an American business man.

The subjects of the talk this time are polygamy, polyandry, the woman question, and American sentimentality. The "excuses" are a procession of mannequins and the latest monstrosities in fashionable hats.

Act IV affords us a little more discussion on the relation of the sexes, and the "play" concludes with a fireside chat on the meaning of life.

The acting is wonderful, and the word is used advisedly. Mr. E. W. Garden as Huxtable, Mr. Sydney Valentine as Constantine, Mr. Dennis Eadie (whose versatility was prodigious) as the son, Mr. Arthur Whitby as the American, and indeed the whole company were as good as they could possibly be.

Many good people have been grieved to hear of the passing away of the aged and saintly Bishop of Lincoln, who was scarcely less beloved by the Non-conformists of his diocese than by those he was wont to address as "my dear people." The most conspicuous event of Dr. King's twenty-five years' episcopal charge was the famous trial of 1888.

I have also to record the death, which occurred with tragic suddenness at Westminster, of the Earl of Carnwath, twelfth of that title and a representative peer for Scotland. Lord Carnwath fell unconscious while walking along Great Smith Street, last Tuesday and died almost immediately.

THE SOLANO SYSTEM OF MUSKETRY TRAINING.

Some of the Uses of the Target.

The Solano battle practice target helps to some extent to solve the serious problem of the want of range accommodation in Great Britain for the musketry training of troops. For it renders the musketry training and advanced field practices possible within the radius of a drill hall or a barrack yard. It enables Miniature Rifle Ranges to be used as Musketry Schools.

This Target may be used without any scenic or other accessories for recreation or instruction with any ordinary Bull's Eye or other targets for the simplest and most elementary rifle practices. Or it can quickly, easily, and cheaply be converted into realistic representations of various landscapes typical of different parts of the British Empire and of the Home Country in winter and summer. When thus arranged, Battle Practices for both leaders and men can be carried out with the target at moving marks representing a mobile enemy of all arms operating against the rifleman upon a definite tactical plan, at distances ranging from 400 yards to over 2,000 yards.

The models of troops, etc., used for Battle Practice have been accurately scaled down to correct size for a 25-yard range and tinted with atmospheric effects reproduced from life studies over actual distances. These Battle Practices are not confined to daylight but can be carried out in darkness to train men for fighting at night. Night firing can be conducted with the aid of a searchlight which, with all other mechanism connected with the Target, is operated from behind the firing line.

Besides point blanks firing with '22 bore cartridges, practice is possible with this Target at 25 yards range for rifles and machine guns with full load charges and with sights adjusted for actual distances. Through careful experiments the trajectories of the bullets over actual distances, from 400 to 2,000 yards range, have been scaled down to ordinates for a 25 yards range and the results of firing, aimed at objects on the target, are registered at various elevations above them on the sky piece of the target, where the results of firing can, by a simple mechanical contrivance, be judged with accuracy.

"Aiming off" practices, i.e., allowing for various wind velocities blowing in different directions, can be carried out at 25 yards range with this Target, as for actual distances from 400 to 2,000 yards, by the aid of invisible wind scales which can be fixed to the scenic accessories and which automatically register the degrees of deflection allowed for the firing.

It will be seen by reference to the official report issued by the Army Council in regard to this Target that a thorough training in all important principles of field practices, including eyesight training, distance judging, choice and recognition of targets, fire tactics, fire direction, control and discipline, and the duties of mutual assistance, can be given by the use of it.

It is not pretended that instruction on this Target will in any way equal the instruction afforded by actual field practices. But where these practices are not possible, either for want of proper range accommodation ashore or on board war ships, it certainly provides a means of instructing men in principles which are essential to their efficiency in the complex and difficult duties of the unit leaders and rank and file in a modern battle firing line.

Crossing Tier.

There is one Crossing Tier fixed at the highest level of the Target, viz.: 4 feet 6 inches from the ground, and arranged for two or more objects or figures to move across its whole width, either separately or simultaneously in opposite directions, from the centre to the ends or from the ends to the centre. The crossing tier is operated by an endless cord passing over a handwheel at the firing point.

Vanishing Tiers.

There are three Vanishing Tiers, each of which is divided into three sections: left, centre, and right. Each of these sections contains mechanism which will raise or lower the figures as desired, each capable of being operated separately. The three vanishing tiers, therefore, contain nine vanishing mechanisms which can be used at the same time and can each be operated independently of the others.

Protection of Target.

The face of each tier of the Target is completely covered with steel plate, and as the tiers slightly overlap, it will be seen that the whole Target presents an effective stop-butt. The steel plates are fixed at an angle of 2 in 9, which deflects all bullets downwards, and serves the double purpose of making it safe for use by obviating the danger of ricochets and splinters, and also permitting the lead to be collected.

Manipulators.

Three distinct patterns of manipulators are now supplied.

No. 1. For cases where the Target is to be erected out-of-doors or in the centre of a drill hall.

No. 2. (Either right or left hand.) For fixing to a side wall where it is convenient for the Target to be erected to one side of the range, the wires being led along the wall.

No. 3. For cases where intervening doors or windows necessitate running the wires along a side wall at some considerable height from the ground, the wires entering the manipulator from above. This pattern is also suitable where the wires have to be run overhead down the centre of the range provided there is an end wall or support at the firing point on which it can be fixed.

Portability of Target.

The whole structure of the Target is portable, and if the space it occupies is required for any other purpose the Target can be easily taken to pieces and put together again, each part when detached lying perfectly flat for transport, and occupying comparatively little space.

Grips.

Each crossing and vanishing mechanism is provided with a "Grip," which can be fixed to and detached from the mechanism in a moment. Two complete sets of grips can be supplied to obviate delay in the use of the Target, as while one set is being used the others are available for marking hits scored and fixing new objects or figures for firing.

Grooves.

On the back and front of each line of mechanism, both crossing and vanishing are Grooves ½ inch wide and ⅜ inch deep. The object of these Grooves is to permit the fixing of stationary marks for shooting anywhere on the surface of the Target if it is not desired to use the mechanism. It permits of scenic representations of natural features, houses, walls, etc., being fixed either in front of the marks rendered mobile by the mechanism so as to be used for cover, or behind them, so as to give the effect of natural backgrounds.

Battle Practice Exercises.

All or the Battle Practice Exercises the Target can quickly easily and cheaply be converted into a background representing a tract of country occupied by the troops of a mobile enemy of all arms operating against the riflemen upon a tactical plan. It can also be used for teaching the various essential duties of war marksmanship in eye-training to detect and recognise various war targets, and the various duties of collective firing and discipline, such as fire control, fire direction, and mutual assistance, choice of targets, fire tactics, etc., etc.

When the Target is thus used, the top or A tier represents 2,000 yards distance, the scenery at the back of it and between it and the sky-line representing anywhere in the lower half 2,500 yards distance, and in the upper half distances up to 3,000 yards. The second, or B. Tier, represents 1,400 yards distance; C. 800; and D, 400 yards distance.

Scenic Landscapes.

Three landscapes, named A, B and C, have been designed as a first series for use with the Target, of which landscapes A and C are the first to be published.

The landscapes roughly represent distances from 400 to over 3,000 yards distance.

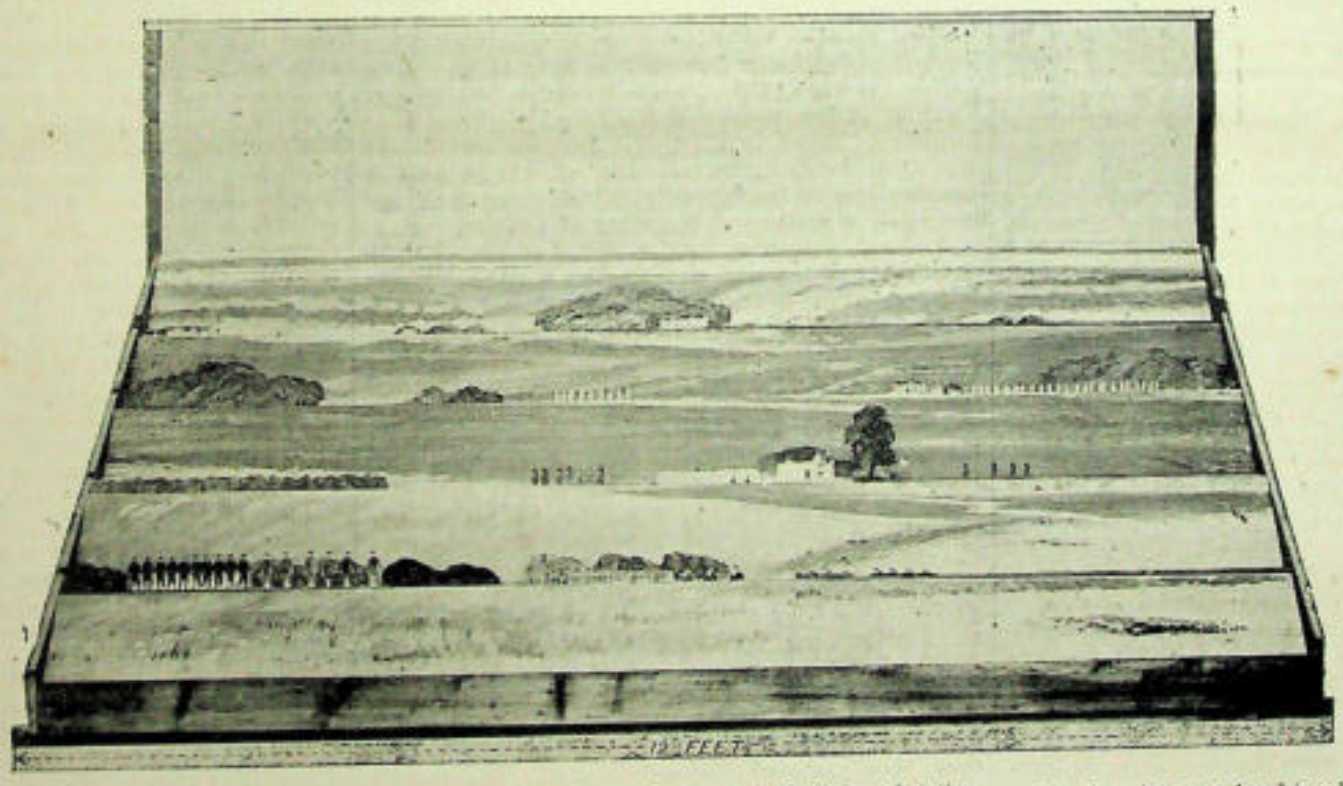
Landscape A represents a green undulating country, partly wooded, with enclosed cultivated areas and open stretches of pasture land, and is typical of a summer scene in England. As the background is devoid of detail and designed to give only a general effect, this landscapes will serve equally well to represent country in different parts of the British Empire within temperate climes, and also country in most European States.

Landscape B represents a wooded, hilly country, typical of parts of the British Isles in autumn or winter.

Landscape C represents a mountain country, typical of the North-West Frontier of India.

The landscapes have especially been designed to represent typical countries in the British Empire, so that they may be used for instructing men in eye-training, use of cover, and the influence upon tactics of ground in different parts of the Empire.

Scenic Frames.



The Frames are supplied to fit exactly into the spaces between the tiers thus securing from the firing line a complete and unbroken pictorial effect. All the frames can be placed in and lifted from position in a moment.

Scenic Accessories.

With each landscape Accessories such as hedges, rocks, trees, bushes, stretches of distant foliage, distant villages, both near and distant houses, stone walls, etc., etc., are provided for the various parts of the landscape. They are all reduced to scale and painted from actual studies with the correct atmospheric effects to harmonise with the light values and perspectives of the landscapes to which they belong. These accessories are all colour printed upon stiff cardboard and are cut in silhouette.

Battle Practice Models.

These models have been officially approved by the Army Council for military training on miniature cartridge ranges.

Description of the Targets.

The Targets are made in two patterns, wood and steel.

The wooden model is made in two sizes, viz.: 8 feet and 12 feet wide, and is intended for indoor use.

Having found it necessary to supply a Target for the Overseas Dominions that will stand excessive heat and wet, we have put on the market an Overseas Model (made in the 12 feet width only), constructed entirely of iron and steel, which is impervious to the effects of climate.

The arrangement of the operating wires and mechanisms has been much simplified, and the weight of the whole Target, although of steel, is little more than the original wooden model.

Iron guides are provided, fitted with eyelets, through which the wires are passed between the manipulator and Target in order to take the weight of the wires to prevent "sagging."

N.B.—This model now takes the place of the original cut-deer wooden model.

General.

The Target consists of a framework, triangular in section, containing four tiers of mechanism. The four tiers are arranged in steps about 14 inches apart, the space between the tiers being filled in with canvas-covered frames, to which is pasted paper landscape scenery. The Target, therefore, presents a sloping surface to the firing line, measuring approximately 12 feet by 7 feet. The framing at the back of the Target is extended vertically, and a sky screen, 12 feet by 2 feet 6 inches, to be covered with blue or grey paper, is fixed to

They have been reproduced in colour printing from life studies and are accurately scaled down to a size at 25 yards range for the various given distances.

They are printed on stiff cardboard cut out in silhouette. They are all fitted with a continuation or base of a common measurement, which exactly fits into the grips of the Battle Practice Target apparatus. They can be fixed to or removed from the grips in a moment. When in position, the whole Target—but no part of the base—is in view from the firing line.

All crossing Targets, that is to say, Targets represented in profile, are reproduced twice over for opposite directions.

All the models for distances from 2,800 to 2,000 yards, with two exceptions, consist of single targets cut out separately in silhouette.

They can, therefore, be arranged separately or in combination at any desired distance apart from one another on the grips, the inch scales on which are meant to facilitate rendering the disposition of the models exact. With the help of the scales on each tier of the target it will be possible to make these dispositions tactically sound in relation to the natural features and character of any landscape.

The two exceptions above mentioned are the infantry line in extended order and a crossing Target of a squadron of cavalry. The model of the infantry lines is made in short lengths, the extension of the men in each case corresponding to correct intervals. The line can be made as long or as short as desired. Two lengths can be fixed together so as to mould the figures in a line or make its extended formation irregular. A single man, if necessary, can be cut out from any length to represent a scout or sentry. The crossing Target of cavalry similarly made in short lengths of two horsemen in line. With these models the strength of the force of cavalry can be regulated. Single horsemen can be cut out and the teams and drivers of the artillery and transport horses for 2,000 yards can be provided from these models.

The models for distances from 1,500 yards to 1,000 are all made in short lengths, as in the case of the infantry line and cavalry crossing Targets for 2,000 yards, with the exception of the tripod machine gun in action, which, is a separate model.

The models from 800 yards to 400 yards are all made of single figures cut separately in silhouette. They can, with the help of the inch measure on the grips, be arranged in formations as close or extended as desired.

These models have been consecutively and separately numbered to facilitate orders for their purchase. It is only necessary to mention the number and the quantity of the particular model required.

Wind Deflection Scales.

These scales consist of narrow strips of paper in short lengths, on which are printed copyright diagrams. The diagrams represent the extent to which bullets are deflected to the right or left of a centre line by various winds of given strength and direction when fired over actual given distances, the actual extent of such deflections being scaled down to the correct proportions for a 25 yards range.

BATTLE PRACTICE ACCESSORIES.

Particulars.

NOTE.—All these accessories are operated from behind the firing line—from a keyboard on the manipulator.

All the apparatus can be used for instruction on the Target, either with or without scenery, and can be operated on the target during all firing practices.

There is little risk of damage to any accessory through bullets striking. The searchlight, when used, does not stand in the line of fire, but to one side of the Target. The flag and flash signallers, gun sound and other accessories, are all fixed to the Target in such a way that their mechanism and all essential parts are protected from fire by its steel plates. Both signallers can be fixed in position in any of the spaces between the sections of mechanism on each tier. The gun sound apparatus can be fixed anywhere to the back of the tiers.

Power is supplied to the electrical apparatus by dry batteries. The line wires are carried from the manipulator along the guides supporting the Target wires, and attached to the terminal block on the Target framework, to which the various electrical accessories can be connected with flexible leads.

Each electrical accessory is supplied with flexible leads having metal connectors at their ends, one terminal block for attachment to the Target frame, 55 yards insulated conducting wire, one cut-off switch, and one operating key or switch.

In cases where an order is given in the first instance for a complete set of the electrical accessories, some light modifications will be made (i.e., the single conductors will be replaced by a multiple core cable, and the operating keys will be mounted on a board, terminals are also mounted together on one block.

1. Gun Sound Apparatus.

A small device on the principle of an electric bell which reproduces the sound of distant machine gun fire at 25 yards. It is operated by a key on the manipulator, and can be fixed to the Target exactly underneath the model of the machine gun, the sound of which it is desired to reproduce.

2. Heliograph and Flash Signalling Apparatus.

An apparatus consisting of a bullet-proof tube of steel, pierced at one end with a tiny aperture, and containing a small electric lamp. The lamp can be operated from the manipulator by a key, so as to signal the Morse code in a series of short and long flashes from the firing point through the aperture at the end of the tube, which is designed to give the effect at 25 yards of distant flash signals, from lamps at night and from the heliograph by day.

When fixed to the Target for use, only a very little of the tube will be visible from the firing point, just sufficient to bring the aperture into the line of vision. When screened as much of the tube may be exposed as desired—for example, when signals are to be flashed from the upper windows of a house or the top of a hill, when an aperture, of course, will be made in the cardboard of the scenic accessory to enable the flashes to be seen. This apparatus can also be used for observation practice.—

3. Flag Signalling Apparatus.

An electrical apparatus operated by two keys on the manipulator, by which the long or short signals of the Morse code can be sent from the Target to the firing point. The flags for this apparatus are mounted on wires which can be fixed or detached from it in a moment. They represent the regulation flag—blue, and white with blue stripe—scaled down to correct size at 25 yards range for distances of 800, 1,400 and 2,000 yards.

When used with scenic accessories of the Target, men can be trained through this apparatus to read the flag signals with the naked eye or field glasses, against every conceivable natural background under every condition of light.

4. Gun-Flash Apparatus.

This device, in principle and construction, is identical with the heliograph and flash signalling apparatus described above. Instead, however, of one aperture at the end, a number of small apertures are pierced along the whole length between the mechanical sections of the Target, but so as to lie horizontally anywhere along the top of a tier, its whole length being visible from the firing point. This apparatus is designed to give the effect of the flashes of artillery fire at long range in day practices or rifle fire at close range in night practices. It can be used for observation practices in teaching men to note and indicate the direction of flashes seen in different parts of the scenic landscape, and at firing in night practices in the direction of flashes of light. It can also be used in night practices to represent the lights of homesteads or hirsute and camp fires on a landscape.

5. Searchlight.

This apparatus consists of an electric lamp projection mounted in such a manner that by the manipulation of two cords at the firing point the light can be projected on to any portion of the Target. The projector and a steel protection plate are mounted on an iron bracket which is screwed to the framework of the Target. The apparatus can be used to practice men in detecting and firing at an enemy on the scenic landscapes under the rays of the searchlight, and for the Battle-Practice exercises in night operations.

6. Target Indicator.

For pointing out direction and position of target on landscape.

7. Dry Batteries.

The Dry Cells supplied for working these accessories have been specially selected on account of their durability and high output. Two distinct types are supplied, viz.:—The Siemens Transport C.F. for use Overseas and the Siemens Hellesen for use in the British Isles.

Messrs. Morton and Company Calcutta, have on view a Salute Battle-Practice target and will be pleased to show it to anybody interested.

THE RHINO IN NEPAL.

EVER since the publication of Dr. Blanford's mammal volume in the "Fauna of British India" it has been accepted as an article of faith among naturalists in England—whatever may be the case with their brethren in India—that the great Indian one-horned rhinoceros is practically, if not entirely, restricted at the present day to the countries east of the Tista valley; that is to say, it is more or less completely confined to Cooch Behar and Assam with some of the adjacent districts.

A greater mistake has seldom been made in a modern work on natural history by an author of high repute; although in this instance little or no blame is to be laid to the charge of the writer of the volume referred to, as the mistake arose from the difficulty or impossibility of obtaining accurate and trustworthy information with regard to the animals of Nepal.

The first information with regard to the true state of the case to reach England was supplied to a well-known naturalist by Mr. D. Ezra, who had then just returned to London from Nepal. According to this information, the Great Indian Rhinoceros in place of being unknown in the countries west of the Tista, positively swarms in the jungles of portions of the Nepal Terai, where it is apparently much more numerous than in its supposed last strongholds in Cooch Behar and Assam.

Evidence of this was afforded by an account of a great hunt organised by the Nepal Government in January and February 1907, in the course of which a very large number of adult rhinos were killed, while half a dozen calves were taken alive. In connection with these latter a somewhat ludicrous mistake arose. In his letter Mr. Ezra either wrote by mistake that these calves were kept for rhinoceros-running, or the recipient misread rhinoceros-coming for rhinoceros-racing. Consequently, a statement appeared in the leading English sporting journal that the Nepal Government kept rhinos for racing purposes!

The mistake was pointed out subsequently by Colonel Manners Smith, British Resident at Khatmandu, in a letter to the same journal; although he was, of course, unaware how it arose. As a matter of fact, these six young rhinos were captured for the purpose of replenishing the stock in a certain part of the Nepal Terai where these animals had been decimated by disease, but as they all proved to be males, the attempt had to be abandoned.

The great hunt of 1907 took place in a part of the Terai which had not been disturbed for many years, and where, in consequence, a very large herd of game of all kinds had accumulated. The hunt was originally intended to have taken place during the visit of the Prince of Wales, but an outbreak of cholera prevented His Royal Highness from including Nepal in his tour. In addition to the aforesaid battehas, the total bag of rhinos on this occasion was no less than 28, of which one-half was composed of males and the other of females.

And yet, according to the letter of the British Resident, this tremendous slaughter is stated to have had no perceptible effect on the number of rhino in the Nepal jungles. If this be true, there is some sort of justification for the size of the bag; but it is sincerely to be hoped that the statement is based on trustworthy evidence, as it would be a thousand pities if the number of these magnificent beasts were seriously diminished. Apart from this, there is another points in connection with this slaughter which deserves mention. So far as our information goes, no attempts were made to save the skins and skeletons of any of these rhinos; although may be some of the heads, horns, or skulls were preserved for the decoration of the durbar-hall at Khatmandu. Be this as it may the skins and skeletons of these animals would have had a very considerable commercial value in Europe, for even British and Irish museums are but poorly supplied with such specimens, while in continental institutions they are probably scarcer still. The British Museum possesses, for instance, only one adult skin—presented by the Maharaja of Cooch Behar—and the recently acquired record head killed by Mr. Briscoe, together with certain skulls and a skeleton. The skeleton is, however, we believe that of a menagerie animal, and one of a wild-killed male would consequently be a valuable addition to the national collection.

But it is not this loss of valuable natural history material that is alone to be deplored; for advantage might have been taken—and for that matter may still be taken—of the abundance of the rhinoceros in the Nepal jungles to clear up certain points in regard to its habits. It is now generally admitted that all the Asiatic rhinos depend upon their lower tusks as weapons for offence and defence; and this being so, it would be of great interest to know what use they make of their horns. One recent writer has indeed expressed the belief that in the case of the great Indian species at any rate the horn is employed for digging up roots; adding that the same opinion is held by the Nepalese. It does not, however, appear that a rhino has ever been actually seen digging in this manner with his horn; and it is therefore important that the story should be either verified or discredited. Properly trained shikaris could certainly ascertain the true facts of the case, if they were definitely put to work.

The observer last referred to also mentions that two rhinos shot by his partly showed rudiments of a second horn; and it would be very interesting to learn whether anything approaching a decent second horn is ever developed in this species.

This serves to remind us that nothing more has been ascertained during the last few years with regard to the Singpho rhinoceros of the Upper Burmese Provinces, which so far as can be judged from the scanty evidence at present available, appears to be a two-horned relative of the great Assam species. Surely some enterprising sportsman could make his way into the country, and procure at least the head of this practically unknown beast, which should certainly be named after the man who first sends a skull and scalp to London.

Then, again, we want to know a great more than is at present available with regard to the occurrence of the one-horned Javan rhinoceros (Rhinoceros sondaicus) in the jungles of Assam and the neighbouring districts. That it once occurred there is certain; and, according to Dr. Blanford, a specimen was shot many years ago by General Kinloch in the Sikhim Terai. Nowadays, however, we have nothing of this species in India, which seems to be everywhere scarce, and is still unrepresented by an adult specimen in the British Museum.

If sportsmen in this country would bestir themselves in the matter of Indian rhinos, they would earn the gratitude of naturalists at Home.

A NEW MATERIAL FOR MAHSEER TRACES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I have lately had my attention called to a new silk-worm product called "Telarana Nova." I had been given a piece of Japanese thread, used for surgical work, and was considerably puzzled as to what it could be made of. Eventually I came to the conclusion that it must be a vegetable product, like the "Bainy Fibre," so commonly used by the native fishermen in Madras. Now I am inclined to think that this is a mistake, and that this Japanese thread (which is made in a continuous length, and wound on reels, and consists of three strands twisted together) must be a silk-worm product, somewhat similar to gut. There are, of course, several Eastern silk-worms which differ considerably from the European domestic variety, and perhaps it is from the caterpillars of one of these that the Japanese surgical thread is manufactured. It looks very like twisted gut, but seems harder in texture, and would no doubt offer more resistance to the teeth of predaceous fish. During my enquiries, Messrs. Robertson, fishing tackle manufacturers (of 27, Wellington Street, Glasgow), wrote to me suggesting that the Japanese thread was probably the same as their Telarana Nova; and on comparing the two, I am inclined to agree with them.

Messrs. Robertson inform me that Telarana Nova is not exactly gut, but is midway between gut and silk. As the silk-worm is converted into gut, just when it is about to spin its cocoon, I presume that the treatment which results in Telarana Nova, takes place at the same stage in the caterpillar's existence, but that the process is different, and so results in a tougher material than the ordinary gut, and a greater length of strand.

The Telarana Nova is sold in six sizes, the breaking strains of which are No. 1 30lbs., No. 2 15lbs., No. 3 10lbs., No. 4 7lbs., No. 5 4lbs., No. 6 2½lbs. I enclose specimen casts of Nos. 2 and 3 and hope that either you Mr. Editor may be able to give them a thorough trial on the big rohu of the Barrackpore tanks; or if you have not the time, hand them on to some good natured friend to report upon. The prices for three yard casts are moderate enough, if they are as good as they appear to be, viz. 2s. 6d. for the No. 1, 2s. for Nos. 2 and 3, 1s. 6d. for Nos. 4 and 5, and 1s. for No. 6, the finest size. What I fancy they would be specially useful for is as casts for fly spoons. At Okla near Delhi, when using a fly spoon with a single handed trout rod, I was always having my gut cut by the siluroids. I fancy the teeth of these predaceous fish would seldom cut through this hard tough Telarana Nova. However the thing wants trying. Gut is such an eternal trouble to fishermen in India, that it is always worth while enquiring into the possibility of some substitute proving better suited to tropical conditions.

With regard to the Bainy Fibre mentioned above, I have always thought that this must be identical with the "Indian Weed" constantly referred to in old books on angling.

Perhaps some of your readers may be able to throw light on the subject. Bainy Fibre is I believe prepared from the fibrous roots of some palm, but I am not certain on the point, nor have I any idea what palm, if palm it is, is the one employed to make the fibre from.

Perhaps some kind reader of the INDIAN FIELD may be able to shed light on this conundrum also.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.
For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.
Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

THE HORSE.

ITS TREATMENT IN HEALTH AND DISEASE, WITH A COMPLETE GUIDE TO BREEDING, TRAINING, AND MANAGEMENT.

Edited by Professor J. WORTLEY AXE, M.R.C.V.S.,

Ex-President of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, Late Lecturer at the Royal Veterinary College, and at the Agricultural Colleges of Downton and Wye, Chief Veterinary Inspector to the Surrey County Council, &c., &c.

Author of "The Mare and Foal," "Abortion in Cattle," "Anthrax in Farm Stock," "Examination of Horses as to Soundness," &c., &c.

The Illustrations constitute a highly important feature of the work. In no other book on the horse has the pictorial art contributed so largely to illustrate the author's meaning. There are upwards of thirty plates in full colour, and seventy in black and white, together with several hundred text illustrations, all reproduced by the latest and most effective processes, together with many pedigree tables of the leading strains. Every Purchaser will be presented with three beautiful dissected models showing, respectively, the internal structure of the Horse, the structure of the teeth, and the structure of the hoof.

RAWALPINDI RACES.

STEWARDS:

LIEUT.-COL. J. VAUGHAN, D.S.O., 10th Royal Hussars. | CAPT. A. E. GLASGOW, The Royal Sussex Regiment.
MAJOR SIR JOHN MILBANKE, V.C., 10th Royal Hussars. | COL. R. W. FULLER, D.S.O., Royal Artillery.

Honorary Secretary.—MAJOR SIR JOHN MILBANKE, V.C.

First Day, Saturday, 26th March.

THE opening day of the Great Northern Spring Meeting was indeed a big success. There was a large attendance which included General Sir Jocelyn and Lady Wodehouse, Colonel Gilbert and the officers of the Royal Sussex Regiment were "At Home" with their band during the afternoon, while the racing was most interesting. The Punjab Army Chase figured on the opening day's programme for the first time and provided a fine race, won by Colonel Fuller's Caravan. The same stable gave us the winner of the first race in April Morn. Mr. Ernest also scored two wins, the Arab Plate with Imtyas and the Giant Pony Plate with Ruislip. The Corinthian Plate for horses over 2¼ miles was won by the little fancied Vernon, who started at tens and the C.-B. Plate, won by Cresta, produced a fine struggle for places a neck and a head being the verdicts. Appended are results :—

THE MAIDEN PLATE.—Rs. 200 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. For maiden ponies 14-2 and under. 14-2 to carry 11st. 10lb. W. I. 3 furlongs.

BOMBAY JACKAL CLUB POINT-TO-POINT RACES.

Monday, 21st March 1910.

THE annual Point-to-Point races were held at Marole on Monday and a good number turned up in response to the Bombay Jackal Club's invitation. A tent was as usual pitched in a well selected spot in the heart of the hunting district and the club did everything in their power to ensure the comfort of their guests, who were able to shew their appreciation after a rather dusty drive from Santa Cruz Station. The course mapped out was a good one with plenty of not too dangerous jumping and a couple of double bunds at Sahar which took some negotiating. Inquisitive villagers there were in plenty, and, what with people riding and walking out across the valley to get a first glimpse of the competitors as they came out of the jungle the sight was an unique one. The huntsman, Will Morgan, was kept busy at his task of Clerk of the Course, as was the Honorary Secretary, Mr. F. Hearson, the Starter, Mr. H. E. E. Proctor, the Judge, our popular M. F. H. Mr. Dunlop and the Clerk of the Scales, Mr. E. G. Montgomery. Dalal, the bookmaker, stood up and ran as well a Totallisator.

Jumping was the first item on the programme, and of the many competitors Messrs. Graham, Phillips and Harter were picked. Eventually Mr. Phillips won with a very natural jumper in Timothy from Mr. Harter's H. E.

A dozen started for the Bombay Hunt Cup, and, having shewn his worth in winning the last two years, Mr. Bommel's Good Luck was expected. It was, however, generally agreed that if Mr. Thomas could hold Warcloud and get him safely over the jumps he would repeat his success in the Hunters' flat on the racecourse. This turned out correct, as after getting over the bad part safely he came into the open on good terms with Good Luck, and then held him safe. Mr. Phillips was next on Timothy, and being the first in who had not previously won a race, he claimed the James Graham Trophy.

Seven started in the pony race, Mr. W. Graham's peculiarly marked Blotting Kagaz being favourite, though many backed Mr. Kirke Smith's Arab, Boxer. They were together on coming into sight, but nearing the flags the waler, as might have been expected, went away well in hand. This order though enabled Mr. Kirke Smith to get some compensation in winning the Remington Trophy, for those who had never won anything bar a Scurry.

Finally the open Jackal Club Point-to-Point, for which only two were left in. On the form of past years, as well as recently on the racecourse, Mr. Symond's Tragedian was expected to be home before Mr. Winbush's Twilight had left the Woods. Though the former won, it was by no means an easy thing. They were seen galloping together, then Mr. Crawford on Twilight took a slight lead, and only after he had had to turn to get inside the left hand flag did Mr. Gove shoot out on Tragedian to just squeeze home on the post.

After a couple of foot races for syces and villagers, the prizes were distributed by Mrs. Kirby.

THE TURF.

SANDOWN.

NOT since the time of the South African War has there been such a successful Grand Military Meeting as that which came to an end on Saturday. Doubtless the delightful weather had something to do with the magnitude of the attendance, but this was not the only gratifying circumstance in connection with the gathering, for the fields were far larger than usual and the jockeyship of the "soldiers" greatly exceeded expectations. Result:—

DERBY.

Weather of Riviera brightness and warmth favoured the opening day of this steeplechase meeting. Under the influence of the spring-like sun, the course had made a wonderful recovery, and afforded the best of going. The attendance did not exceed average dimensions, but there was a briskness about the afternoon's sport which kept interest in the proceedings maintained from start to finish, though all other events were overshadowed by the public Grand National trial, which took place in the Derbyshire Handicap Steeplechase between Judas, Albuera, Wickham, Logan Rock, and Lord Chatham, in which it can be stated that more than one aspirant to Aintree honours had their prospects of victory on 18th March irretrievably ruined. Results:—

FOUR-YEAR-OLD HANDICAP HURDLE RACE—Of 70sovs. 2 miles.

Mr. C. A. Hartley's Stubwood, 12st. 2lb. Hebir 1

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

No event on yesterday's card was of the paramount importance of a Grand National trial such as Midland sportsmen were treated to on Monday, consequently there was a slight falling off in the attendance. Perhaps the altered state in the weather conditions may have had something to do with this, for in place of the springlike influence of the previous afternoon, rain fell during the morning and the state of the course considerably softened. Backers again did well. Results:—

WARWICK.

FROM every point of view save that of the weather and the going the "jubilee" of the National Hunt Steeplechase can be chronicled as one of the most successful celebrations ever held. Formerly it was a "moveable" festival, but for the last five years Warwick has been the venue, and there can be no gainsaying that the line of country there is one of the most sporting that the committee has ever fixed upon. After Tuesday night's rain the track was terribly waterlogged, as the times attested; while as the horses galloped mud and water were thrown up in heavy sprays. Despite these drawbacks large fields turned out, and as usual at this popular function all the sporting nobility and gentry of the country-side put in an appearance, the attendance being the most representative one. Results:—

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

ALL four ties in the fourth round of the Association Cup were brought to a definite conclusion on Saturday, Newcastle United, Everton, Barnsley, and Swindon qualifying for the semi-final stage of the competition. Newcastle United earn that distinction for the fifth time in six consecutive seasons and must possess a great chance of securing possession of the trophy, a distinction which, despite three appearances in the Final Tie at the Crystal Palace, has hitherto baffled the efforts of that famous organisation. Their form in the first round held out little hope of the club going far in the competition this season, a draw at Stoke preceding a narrow victory over the Staffordshire team at Newcastle, but, favoured in the succeeding draws, they have since beaten Fulham by 4—0, Blackburn Rovers by 3—1, and now Leicester Fosse by 3—0. The Leicester team put up a capital fight, restricting Newcastle's score to a single goal until within seven minutes of the finish, when Shepherd and Howie added to the success previously achieved by Wilson. McCracken, the Newcastle back, could not turn out, but a satisfactory substitute was found in Colin Veitch, a most versatile player, who appears equally at home in any part of the field.

Everton, the only one of the four surviving teams that have ever carried off the Cup, had, in visiting Coventry City, a more formidable task than fell to the share of Newcastle, for to the delight and surprise of their supporters, Coventry City had previously knocked out Preston North End at Deepdale, Portsmouth at Fratton Park, and Nottingham Forest at Coventry. Indeed, after this series of fine performances Coventry looked to possess no slight chance of dismissing Everton from the competition, especially as Everton's previous victories—over First League clubs, it is true—had all been gained at Goodison Park. The tie, however, emphasised the enormous value in any match, but particularly in a Cup-tie, of a centre forward who does not hesitate to shoot. Freeman scored both goals for Everton—the first soon after the start and the other just at the finish, and all through he kept the Coventry defence severely tried. The play did not reach a particularly high standard, but on the day Everton were clearly the stronger side. The great distinction of figuring in a semi-final tie has been denied Coventry, yet the team have every reason to be satisfied with their Cup record this season.

Like Newcastle United and Everton, Barnsley started their work in the Cup with a draw away from home, but on their own ground they have accomplished some excellent performances, scoring heavily against Blackpool in the replay, next disposing of Bristol Rovers, and knocking out West Bromwich Albion before their narrow win against Queen's Park Rangers. On the rather small Barnsley ground they are a tremendously hard side to beat, and Queen's Park Rangers—the last surviving London club—did very well to run them to a goal. The Rangers it may be noted, have taken part in seven ties without reaching the semi-final round, drawing at Norwich before they overcame Norwich City, at Southend before they defeated Southend United and at Park Royal before beating West Ham United.

To Swindon hearty congratulations may be awarded. Drawn against Crystal Palace at Sydenham in the first round, they had to meet a side that had often done well in the Cup, and after pulling through that ordeal, they found themselves with Burnley, the conquerors of Manchester United, as their opponents. Again successful, they had next to play Tottenham Hotspur, and now have knocked out Manchester City. There seemed reason to except that Manchester City might have something to say to the destination of the of the Cup this year, that team having not only scored heavily at Southampton, but defeated Aston Villa at Birmingham—a feat which no other club has achieved this season. No early success attended Swindon, but after change of ends a skilful piece of combination enabled Jefferson to score, and later on Bowen also got through. No goals awarded the efforts of Fleming, yet that player was nevertheless very prominent all through the game, and largely assisted in a memorable triumph for the Swindon club.

Aston Villa's position at the head of the First League was materially strengthened for not only did that club gain a victory at Bradford but of their nearest rivals, Notts County could only draw and both Liverpool and Sheffield United met with defeat. The Villa, indeed, now possess excellent prospects of carrying off the League championship for the sixth time in their history, for they have not only more points than any other club but matches in hand as well from the next three teams on the list. Matters went fairly well with the London clubs, for Tottenham won and Chelsea drew, and if Middlesbrough—one of the clubs below the Londoners—secured a point at Blackburn, Bolton Wanderers—the other—lost badly at Sunderland.

For the eighth year in succession Wales last Saturday put up a capital fight against Scotland, keeping their opponents out until more than half of the second portion of the game had gone by and in the end only losing by 1 to 0. Curiously enough, Devine who only got his place in the Scottish eleven owing to Walker of Heart of Midlothian, dropping out, had the distinction of scoring the one goal. Wales met Scotland twenty-nine times before success attended their efforts, but of the last six matches between the two countries the Principality have won four to two. Seven years have elapsed since Scotland last gained a victory on Welsh soil and on that occasion the Welshmen were most unlucky to lose.

RUGBY RULES.

ARMY VS. NAVY.—There was a capital attendance at the Queen's Club on Saturday, and the weather was everything that could be desired. The Prince of Wales was present. Lyon was not included in the Navy team. The Navy at once pressed and scored twice in the first ten minutes, Cooper getting in on the left and Blagrove on the right, but neither of the tries was improved. Before the interval, the Army forwards rushed the ball down, and Gowland, following up promptly, scored, and Harrison improved. At the interval the Navy had a lead of one point but directly after the restart Greig scored near the posts, and Burgess-Watson majorised. Not long afterwards Wade-Gery, after a fine individual run from the half-way line, scored, and Burgess-Watson converted. From this time, however, the Navy did all the scoring. From a penalty for off-side, Burgess-Watson missed the goal, but Royle dashed up and scored a try which was not improved. Just before the close Cooper, being pressed on the left, kicked across, and Burgess-Watson taking very cleverly dashed across and scored behind the posts himself, adding the major points. The Navy thus won by 19 points to 10. Navy, 2 goals 3 tries; Army, 2 goals.

OLD MERCHANT TAYLORS VS. RICHMOND.—Playing a very fine game from start to finish the Old Merchant Taylors gained a decisive victory over Richmond on the old Deer Park. Richmond were not by any means at full strength and at no time had they any chance against the Taylors, whose excellent forwards dominated the game. Behind the pack the Taylors' backs played admirably together, and again O'Callaghan was their great scoring force. Of the eight tries they gained he claimed no fewer than five, and with the match he was credited with his fiftieth try for his club this season. The Richmond forwards played well at times, but they were always beaten in the loose by the Taylors' scrummagers, who scored within a few minutes of the start through Howard and then O'Callaghan twice, and Ryan ran in for them before the interval, but only one of the tries was improved. Once, however, when Richmond were pressing, they charged down a kick to clear by Sanders, and Duggan racing up scored for them, and Harsfall placed the goal. This, however, was their only success, for after changing ends the game went all in favour of the Taylors. Though the Richmond men never really looked like scoring again they tackled very finely, but for all that O'Callaghan ran in with three further tries against them, and Barratt got another as the result of a great individual effort, and as Ryan was successful with each of the place kicks Richmond were beaten by 34 points to 5. O. M. T., 5goals 3 tries; Richmond, 1 goal.

LONDON WELSH vs. ROSSLYN PARK.—The match at Wandsworth, played under summer-like conditions, was of an interesting character, in which it was by no means certain that the better side won. While the Welshmen had no more of the play than their opponents in the opening half they made more use of their opportunities and were able to score a goal by J. S. Evans from a try by Edwards, a try by Maddocks, and a beautiful dropped goal by Jenkins, these enabling them to lead at half-time by 12 points to 0. Then in the second portion the home side tired, and with their forwards as fresh as ever Rosslyn Park did quite three-fourths of the pressing. Houghton scored a try for them which Brewsher improved, and later Brewsher dropped a goal, but they failed to draw level, partly through their own inability to put the finishing touches on many chances and partly through the determined tackling of the Welsh backs. Consequently the Welsh won by 2 goals (1 dropped) and a try to 2 goals (1 dropped). London Welsh, 12 points; Rosslyn Park, 9 points.

LONDON SCOTTISH vs. BLACKHEATH.—But for very poor place-kicking, only one try being converted out of seven, London Scottish would have defeated Blackheath by an even greater margin. As it was they won by one goal and six tries to nil. The game was played at Richmond before a small attendance and both sides were well represented. The Scottish owed their victory to the magnificent work of the forwards, who by their heeling and well-timed wheeling invariably got the ball in the scrum, while in the open they were responsible for some splendid rushes. Kinross scored the first Scottish try within a minute of the kick-off, following a capital run across by Simson. Penny, by cleverly dodging round the blind side of the scrum, got the second, and the third by Walter after he had travelled from the half-way line was about the best of the afternoon. Just before the interval Simson scored the fourth, and all three in the second half were obtained by Gourlay. Walter kicked the only goal. Scottish, 1 goal 6 tries; Blackheath, 0.

HOCKEY.

ENGLAND vs. WALES.—Like the twelve previous encounters between the countries, the hockey match between England and Wales at Cambridge on 5th instant, ended in a win for England. The final score was 9 goals to 0. Wales had to make two changes in her forward line, R. Turnbull (Cardiff) and E. Charles (Wrexham) playing instead of C. W. Pearson and W. J. Pallot, but the English eleven turned out as selected. Brilliant weather prevailed, and there were about 3,000 spectators.

England attacked at the start, and a mistake by Morris-Davies, one of the Welsh backs, nearly let in the home right wing. Morris-Davies recovered himself and saved the situation, but only five minutes had elapsed when he was beaten by Sutcliffe, who scored. For a time the Welshmen had a little more of the game, but they seldom became really dangerous. Twelve minutes after the start Shoveller and Pridmore worked their way into the visitors' circle, and Pridmore shot the second goal. R. Turnbull, the Welsh goalkeeper, then saved finely from both Pridmore and Shoveller, but he was again beaten by Sutcliffe, and shortly before the interval the Welsh defence had a very bad time. Shoveller, Sutcliffe, and Shoveller scored in the order named in rapid succession, and at the interval England led by 6 to 0.

The second half was closer. Wales attacked vigorously on re-starting, and the English defence was severely tested. A corner produced nothing tangible, and a minute later, Beaumont had to save at the expense of a penalty corner, which was also fruitless. Then the English forwards got away, and Sutcliffe shot the seventh goal. The Welsh backs were outclassed, and the halves were giving no support to their forwards. Turnbull, in goal, was the most prominent man on the side, some of his saves being brilliant. Charles and Duncan, the Welsh right wing, made a promising run, but were checked. Sutcliffe added two more goals, and England, who attacked so strenuously towards the end that Turnbull, in a short period, stopped six shots, won as stated. England, 9; Wales, 0.

SCOTLAND vs. IRELAND.—The annual hockey match between Scotland and Ireland took place in Dublin on the 5th instant in fine weather, and before 2,000 spectators. Ireland won by four goals to nil, thus evening last year's defeat at Glasgow. At the outset, Scotland had slightly the better of the game, but failed to score. Ball found the net for Ireland, but the point was disallowed. At the end of twelve minutes, however, Robinson opened the scoring for the home team. Even play followed, both sides showing good form. The Scottish defence was excellent, but at length Ball gave a good pass to Cox, who shot the second goal. Scotland now attacked hotly, but Peterson Brown and Barcus were at their best in defence for Ireland. The pace was tremendous, and at the interval, Ireland led by two to nil. In the second half Ireland had much the better of the play, and Morrison scored early with a terrific drive. Scotland were under great pressure, Tait saving on ten occasions before being beaten for the fourth time by Robinson. Ireland were then on the defence for some time, but the Scotch attack was not very good, and Ireland, held the advantage to the end, Ireland 4, Scotland, 0.

ATHLETICS.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY SPORTS.—For the first day of the C.U.A.C. sports on the 4th instant the weather was bright and fine, but a high wind considerably interfered with the competitors in the sprint, hurdles, and high jump. Consequently most of the performances were slightly below the average, but there were exceptions, notably in the weight. M. J. Susskind, the University College School fresham, won at 37ft. 9¾in., which was about the best performance of the afternoon. The president, A. C. B. Bellerby, won the High Jump at 5ft. 5¼in. He would have done much better had he not been suffering from an injured ankle, sustained in the hockey field. In the sprint the heats were won by H. R. Ragg, last year's first string, and W. T. Wetenhall, the latter doing ⅕sec. faster time than Ragg, who did not relish the wind and took 10⅖secs. P. J. Baker, of King's, won the Mile, as expected, but only after a great race with W. Gavin, Trinity. The time—4mins. 29secs.—was distinctly good, considering the breeze. A. G. Boycott, St. John's, repeated his last year's victory in the Hurdles, and although he struck the second obstacle hard, got home in 17⅕secs. Wetenhall followed up his 100 yards run by taking the Quarter-mile in 52⅕secs.

Enjoyable weather prevailed for the concluding day of the Cambridge University Athletic Club Sports on the 5th instant. Unfortunately the event in which chief interest centred—the sprint—was very unsatisfactory. A wretched start was effected, one man getting four yards the best of the pistol; whilst Wetenhall was left on his knee and Ragg and Annsbury did not finish. The race was re-run later in the afternoon, when there were three false starts. Eventually D. McMillan, a Felsted Freshman (who won at the first attempt), secured first honours from W. T. Wetenhall (Caius) and H. R. Ragg (St. John's). The latter lost quite two yards by stumbling at the pistol fire. The time was 10⅕secs. A. C. B. Bellerby (Emmanuel), who was a post entry, won the Long Jump at 20ft. 8¼in., Murray and Williams, last year's Blues, failing to get in the first three. The King's crack, P. J. Baker, made the running for L. F. Taylor, the Oundle Freshman, in the Half-mile, and retired 120 yards from home, leaving Taylor to finish an easy winner in 2mins. 0⅕sec. B. J. Bower (Emmanuel) threw the hammer 128ft. 2in. The Three Miles attracted a field of sixteen runners, W. Gavin, the cross-country captain, winning easily in 15mins. 21⅕secs.

BADMINTON.

ALL-ENGLAND CHAMPIONSHIPS.—The Royal Horticultural Hall was packed on Saturday when the concluding day's play in connection with the Championship Tournament, held by the All-England Badminton Association, was held. The finals of all Championships and two handicaps figured on the programme for decision.

Ladies' Doubles Championship.—Final: Miss Bateman and Miss Lucas beat Mrs. Lambert Chambers and Miss Lyon (15—8, 15—8).

Gentlemen's Doubles Championship.—H. N. Marrett and G. A. Thomas beat F. Chesterton and A. D. Prebble (holders) (15—4, 12—15, 15—12).

Ladies' Singles Championship.—Miss Lucas (holder) beat Miss Larminie (5—11, 11—3, 11—5).

Gentlemen's Singles Championship.—F. Chesterton (holder) beat H. N. Marrett (15—4, 15—10).

Veterans' Doubles Championship.—Colonel Denne and C. G. Eames (holders) beat Colonel A. Hill and W. Cobbett (15—9, 15—6).

Gentlemen's Doubles Handicap.—Class A: Final Round—F. O. B. Kennedy and F. A. Kennedy beat T. L. Adam and W. Webster (14—15, 15—13, 15—8).

Ladies' Doubles Handicap.—Class A.: Semi-final—Mrs. L. Chambers and Mrs. Marrett (15) beat Miss Hazlett, and Mrs. Kennedy (18) (2—15, 15—6, 15—9). Final—Miss Bateman and Miss Orr (plus 3) beat Mrs. L. Chambers and Mrs. Marrett (14—15, 15—11, 15—7).

Ladies and Gentlemen's Mixed Doubles Championship.—Semi-final—G. A. Sautter and Miss Cundall beat E. Hawthorn and Miss C. K. Peterson (15—10, 15—4). Final—G. A. Sautter and Miss Cundall beat F. Chesterton and Mrs. Lucas (7—15, 15—9, 15—10).

Gentlemen's Doubles Handicap.—Class B: Final Round—A. H. Fyzil and J. A. Ali beat C. Marriott and J. Denison (15—5, 13—18, 15—11).

BOXING.

A FRANCO-BRITISH NIGHT AT THE N. S. C.—Of late years our neighbours across the Channel have taken up with zeal a number of our British sports, and although in some branches they have not yet succeeded in equalling their teachers, they have shown the utmost thoroughness. It is only four or five years since the practice of the "noble art" as we understand it in Great Britain, found favour in France, but it has to a very great extent supplanted the national La Savate. Our pupils have made excellent progress in the interim, so much so that those responsible for their training felt justified in pitting them against some of the best British talent, and for that purpose Mr. Bettinson arranged a special Franco-British programme at headquarters last night. Here ample evidence was forthcoming of the great progress that has been made in boxing in France, for although in some instances outclassed, our visitors were never wanting in pluck; whilst in many cases their knowledge and ringcraft was very pronounced and in every way praiseworthy.

In all, seven international contests were billed, and, in addition, the final of a welter-weight novices' competition was decided, in which George Sealy, of Mile-end, defeated Private Stuart, of the Cameron Highlanders, on points. There were three six-round contests; but only one of them went the full distance, George Beckett, of Southampton, beating Celestin Moret on points. Strong welter-weights, the Frenchman had an advantage in height and weight, and although he received some hard punches, his native sangfroid was most amusing at times. When sent down he was always careful to take the full count, and in the third round the time-keeper had called the ten seconds before he rose; but he was allowed to continue. Although he shaped well, however, Moret was outpointed throughout, and Beckett won well. The only French victory was acclaimed when Andre Bayard defeated Sid Burns, of London, in the second round; but Willy Fruitet, who took the place of another visitor at the last moment, proved no match for Jim Sullivan, of London, and the referee stopped the bout in favour of the Englishman before the second round had been completed.

BELL'S TENTS.

I should like to mention the Great Satisfaction this (80-lb.) Tent has given me. I bought it in 1900 and it has had some pretty rough times, but it is still as good and strong as when I first bought it.—Capt. S. B. ORTON, 39th Garhwal Rifles

One of the chief bouts of the evening was that between Jean Andony, feather-weight champion of France, and Joe Bowker, ex-bantam-weight champion of the world. The Frenchman claimed a big advantage in height and reach, but Bowker's superior knowledge stood him in good stead, and although during the earlier rounds he appeared to have none the best of the encounter, he soon had the measure of his opponent. Andony was very quick on his feet, and showed a good defence; but his attack was lacking, and, tiring after six brisk rounds in which some excellent exchanges were seen, Andony decided to retire.

Hunting.

THE PESHAWAR VALE HUNT.

A SHORT account of some of the doings of the Peshawar Vale Hunt this season may be of some interest to our readers.

The Peshawar Vale is certainly the best, if not the only real hunting country out here, and has been aptly described as the Leicestershire of India; indeed no one could ride over a nicer country particularly after Xmas, when crops having been cut, meets are arranged further afield, and a good gallop can generally be counted on.

Before Xmas sport is not so good, as the coverts, chiefly khets of sugarcane, are so close together, jarks run from one to another, and instead of giving the good gallop they would later are often ignominiously chopped in covert.

There are two sorts of jacks', the ordinary country one who knows too well all the coverts about, and the other who comes from the near hills for the winter.

These latter are very game and big, one killed in December must have weighed well over 40lb. They will often make a point of seven or eight miles, and do not hesitate to cross any of the numerous branches of the Kabul River by which the country is intersected.

A bold horse is required to negotiate some of the big ditches, which are the order of the day, varied by mud walls and "gridirons," a series of water canals, nearly always deep, and generally full of water, with crumbling mud banks between. One rejoices in the name of the Seven Sisters because it is made up of seven of these canals.]

At times the rider must be prepared to swim, and perhaps in fair company as the P.V.H. Dianas are by no means conservative, and think "mixed bathing no sin" in the wake of a stout jack, and on more than one occasion the Hunt Staff have had to divest themselves of their dripping pink and finish the Hunt in shirt sleeves.

The Shah Alum, by no means an inconsiderable river, is often encountered, and it is on record that the P.V.H. have crossed the Kabul River.

The Meets are usually at 7 A.M., and even to the keen sportsman it is rather a struggle to "leave his warm bed and go hunting instead," as the distances from five to ten miles from Cantonments entail very early rising and a long cold drive, at the end of which the hot coffee, thoughtfully provided by the Master this season, proves most acceptable.

Fields vary from forty to sixty, but during the Xmas week swelled to nearly one hundred, including sporting contingents from Rawalpindi, Nowshera and Campbellpore.

Casualties are anything but few and far between, wet and muddy coats being a very ordinary spectacle, and this year there have been several accidents of a more or less serious nature, but

> "No game was ever worth a rap
> For a rational man to play
> Into which no accident, no mishap
> Could possibly find its way"

and that in this belief the fair sex concur with the rational man, may be judged from the fact that out of four cases of broken bones three are claimed by ladies.

One day at Mutira was alone responsible for several severe accidents, and in the Hunt Record Book at the end of the account of this day's doings may be seen the remark "A most enjoyable day!" The difficulties of the country are testified to by the number of loose horses so often in evidence, and five bold horsemen from Rawalpindi lately shared ten tosses between them in the course of the morning.

Although this has been a bad year for scent, owing to the lack of rain, we have had some good sport, 36 jacks having been accounted for so far, and amongst our best runs was one from Broken Bridge, when hounds ran very fast for 45 minutes after a most gallant jack who did not hesitate to plunge into both the Bukshi and Budni Rivers, much grief ensuing to the field, and another from one of the coverts rented by the hunt near Daudzai which lasted 1 hour 17 minutes, only six of the field being up at the finish with the staff. At the end of this last run the Hunt Jemadar caused much consternation by wildly announcing that the Kennel Huntsman had been drowned, and not even the extraordinary enquiry "Kya! bus bogaya!" by which our local Jorrocks meant, "Is he dead?" could raise a smile until it had been ascertained that it was only a case of the horse in a quicksand from which it was shortly extricated.

Other good runs were:—in December, from Bara Bungalow meet, a good jack, found on the edge of the Bara River, taking us at a fast pace to Saubi Covert where he was killed, a four mile point, and again from the same covert, drawing towards Taru, a stout hill jack was found who crossed and recrossed the Cherat Road three times before he finally set straight for the Cherat Hills, over most pleasant country where hound work could be well watched.

This jack was finally lost within 1½ miles of Jalozai, after a hunt of eight miles, hounds being deprived of a well earned kill by three pariah dogs who chased the jack and are supposed to have killed him.

In March, too, we had a good run from Daudzai; a jack found in the Hunt covert took the hounds at a racing pace for three miles to Afghani Daman village, where being hard pressed he swam the Shah Alum, at that time very deep and with a strong current running, the Hunt Staff only at the Master's request, owing to the danger of the current, swimming across with the hounds. The jack on the far side of the river unfortunately headed for Dilazak Jhrel, most dangerous to hounds' feet, so the pack was whipped off.

The excitements of the chase are also much appreciated by the villagers, who swarm out in crowds to watch the sport and often rather interfere with it.

The pack consists of some 30 mixed couple of imported hounds, with kennels at Peshawar and Murree, and this season are very efficiently hunted by the Master, Major E.P. England, R.F.A., ably assisted by Messrs. T. Norris Whaley and Knight Bruce of the Royal Warwickshire Regiment, and W. A. T. Barstow, R.F.A., as Whips, with Simpson as Kennel Huntsman and the Jemadar on the well known "Monkey." Nor must mention be omitted of another unofficial but very useful member of the Hunt, Mr. T. V. Barney, Royal Warwickshire Regiment, whose knowledge of the depths of the rivers and streams is invaluable in saving other people the experimental swims he himself seems to enjoy.

Ladies turn out in force, amongst the most regular followers being:—Mrs. Merk, Mrs. Wadeson, Mrs. Hext, Mrs. Batty and Mrs. Maffy, the Misses Boyce-Combe, Grey, Sparling, Forbes, Heale and Rynd.

Hunting being one of the chief attractions of a Peshawar Winter, many are the regrets when growing crops herald the approach of "Summer, the season of our Misery."

LAHORE TRADES CUP TOURNAMENT.

THE last game in the third round of the tournament was played on the 22nd instant between the Lancashire Fusiliers and the 1st King's Dragoon Guards. The Fusiliers pressed all through the first half, but though they forced several corners they failed to score. On changing ends the Dragoons attacked but were forced back and the Fusiliers opened the scoring from a free kick for hands. They followed this up by another goal, the result of a fine shot by Sprigs and in spite of the determined efforts of the King's Dragoon Guards to keep them out, they registered another point before time was called and were thus victorious by 3 goals to nil.

The first of the semi-finals was played on the 23rd instant when the 12th Royal Lancers met the 7th Artillery Brigade. It was an excellent game throughout, the Lancers eventually proving victorious. The 12th went off with a rush at the start and Bird headed a goal within a couple of minutes of the kick off, the same player netting a second point on resuming. Level play followed till just before half time hands against the Lancers in the penalty area enabled the Gunners to score from the resulting kick. On crossing over the Artillerymen played up bravely and Cowland equalised. Fast and exciting play followed but the Lancers showed their superiority and breaking through a fine defence scored two more goals and thus won by 4 goals to 2, all the efforts of the Artillery to get through proving futile.

The Lancashire Fusiliers and the Black Watch met in the second game of the semi-finals on Thursday when spectators were rewarded with a fine display of football. Both teams were at the top of their form and the game ended in a draw. The Fusiliers had rather the best of the opening moiety but the Highlanders' defence was impenetrable and half time arrived without score. Changing over the Black Watch were on the offensive, but were driven back and Larks scored a goal for the Fusiliers. Nothing daunted the gallant 73rd kept up a strong pressure and equalised from a melee in front of goal. The remaining play was fast and very level but nothing further was scored and an extra ten minutes each way failed to bring about a definite result. The tie was replayed on Friday but spectators were disappointed, for the game was not up to the standard of its predecessor. The Black Watch were distinctly off colour and were defeated, though only by the narrow margin of a single goal. The Fusiliers thus reversing their defeat by the Black Watch in the first round of the tournament last year.

A big crowd assembled on Saturday to witness the final game in the tournament but the game was left undecided—a draw of one all being the result. Replaying on Monday, however, the Lancashire Fusiliers made no mistake and won decisively by 5 goals to nil—one in the first half, the rest after the interval. H. H. the Lieutenant-Governor gave away the Cup to the winners who thus add another to their many football triumphs which include two consecutive wins in the Durand Tournament. Teams:—

Golf.

THE DECLINE OF THE BRASSY.

WHEN a man first starts himself off in golf he looks kindly on his brassy, is inclined to talk much about it to the members of his family who do not understand the game so well as he does, and generally takes a great interest in this club which, with its brass sole, has a look of great seriousness about it. Now is this club in danger of becoming if not obsolete, still one that is no longer to be regarded as a first-class necessity, and one that may be omitted from a player's kit oftener than it is included? asks Mr. Henry Leach in a London paper. The question may appear a startling one; but there is good reason for asking it. The position of the brassy is not what it was. Just consider the circumstances.

In the days of the gutty ball the brassy was everything. It was almost the chief club of the bag. Great length was always wanted with the second shot at holes which were recognised as two-shot holes. So you heard men talking of their brassies, praising their points, comparing them with other men's brassies, and so on. But all this is changed. We hardly speak of our brassies now; and if it does chance that we have to play on some seventh day on a course where caddies are not then allowed to carry, and our bag of clubs has to be slung across our own shoulders, we decide at the outset, when considering how that bag shall be lightened, that the brassy at all events can be left out. Then many of the men will never play with one in any circumstances; they know nothing of brassies.

WHY WAS THE BRASSY MADE?

For this state of things there are two chief reasons. Why was the brassy first made? It had its origin at Blackheath, and it was then made as a driver, with just a plate of brass on the sole to protect it from the gritty, stony turf that had to be played from, and that would soon have been the ruin of a plain sole of wood. At that time the Blackheath men were known everywhere for the peculiar club that they carried. Until comparatively recent times the brass sole was still necessary for the same reason, though the surface of courses was not so bad as it was in those early blackheath days. But now that surface is good everywhere. It is lawnlike, and it would do no harm to any wood unless it were wet.

Next, and more important, is the fact that seldom, save when the wind is against him or the course is most unusually slow, or the hole exceeding long, does the golfer of substantial ability need to gain such full distance with his second shot. Why, in the summer time, when there is great run on the ball, he is often up at the long holes with a driver and an iron, and even when he cannot do that the cleek is most likely good enough for the second stroke that has to be made. Certainly there are many times when the wood has still to be used, but so little familiar is the golfer now with such shots, and such is the length that he strains for when he has to make them—for be it remembered that with a cleek you may get nearly as far with the rubber-cored ball as when using a brassy—that he prefers to take his driver, which he may use with some certainty, because a further result of the betterment of courses is that lies are generally afforded through the green that admit of the ball being easily picked up with the club that is designed for the tee shots only. When he needs a wooden club to play through the green the reigning amateur champion, Mr. Maxwell, nearly always takes his driver.

DRIVER EASIER TO PLAY WITH.

These are the reasons why the brassy is by way of going out, and it would seem that there is much to be said in favour of the men who endeavour to use their drivers through the green as much as possible when a shot with the wood is wanted. It is undoubtedly easier to play with, and if the lie is good enough, why not play with it? Many people think that the professionals have never seemed to make the brassies on quite the right lines. They are frequently too clumsy, with too small faces and with too much curvature in the sole, so that they never seem to "sit" comfortably on the turf. It is as if the makers say when they set out to fashion a brassy,

"Ah, now I must contrive a club that will get the ball out of the cuppy lie and all the bad places on the course!" They simply will not make a brassy anything like a driver. Time and time again have players taken a favourite driver to a club maker and said to him, "Now make me a brassy just like this—exactly like it, save that you may be a quarter of an inch shorter in the length of the face, have a shade more loft on, and a brass sole. Let the new club be just a driver with these modifications." But the old brassies are made after all. The club maker, excellent man, cannot get away from his obsession. But I know of one player at least who tricks him. He gets a driver made just like his favourite, or buys a new one in the shop, and then he has the face filled back a trifle and a strip of brass put on the sole, and all is well.

A CLUB OF THE FUTURE.

In the hands of the average golfer such a club as this should give far better and more certain results than any ordinary brassy, which is, and always was, a most difficult thing to use. There is much about the style, and something about the balance, that take away confidence. So in these modern times a man does well to play with a driver as much as possible through the green, and he may do worse than carry a special driver for the purpose, having just a shade more loft on it than his two-shot club, which is not really meant to pick up the ball from the turf, and will often fail to do so. If on this club he puts a little plate of brass in the place usually occupied by the horn or vulcanite, he has the club for long seconds that is better and more reliable than any other, and the metal at the edge just gives that cleanness and crispness to the shot that the horn cannot. This is the second-shot club of the future; in fact, it is already becoming well established; but men who want it need to give their clubmaker instructions not to make a brassy on these lines—for they would for sure make something very like an ordinary brassy—but to make a simple driver exactly like their own in every respect. Then when the club comes to hand, and is found to be right, they may take it back to the maker, and tell him to put in that little strip of brass for the horn or vulcanite, and file back the face a trifle. That seems to be the only way to get the club that is wanted.

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

A. DIVISION.

ROVERS vs. SIBPUR COLLEGE.—Played on the 23rd instant, resulting in a draw—one all.

SPORTING UNION vs. B.-N.R.—These teams met on the 23rd instant, the game ending in the defeat of the railway by 4 goals to nil.

CUSTOMS vs. ST. XAVIER'S COLLEGE.—Played on the Customs' ground on Saturday. St. Xavier's College, though defeated, gave the home team one of the hardest fights they have had this season and succeeded in scoring two goals against them—the first time the Customs' goal-keeper has been beaten this season. The score at half time was 3—1 in favour of the home and each team scored once in the second half.

DALHOUSIE vs. ROVERS.—The Rovers put out a very scratch combination against the Trades Club on Saturday, the game ending in a pointless draw.

SIBPUR vs. Y.M.C.A.—Played on the Association ground on Saturday, the visitors winning by 4 goals to 1. Duncan (2), Batterbury and Durrell scored for Sibpur and Price for the Young Men.

RANGERS vs. Y.M.C.A. (A.M.).—These teams put up a fast and even game on the Rangers' ground last Saturday, the home team, who played one short all through, eventually winning by two goals to nil.

Y.M.C.A. vs. Y.M.C.A. (AM.).—Playing on their own ground on Monday the Central Branch beat the Amateurs by 2 goals to nil.

RIFLE BRIGADE vs. E.I.R.—This match was played on the Rifle Brigade ground on Monday, the game ending in a pointless draw.

SPORTING UNION vs. SIBPUR COLLEGE.—The Sibpur College had an easy victory over the Sporting Union on Monday, scoring 6 goals to nil. Batterbury (3), Duncan (1) and Durrell being responsible for the points.

CUSTOMS vs. MEDICAL COLLEGE.—A splendid game was witnessed when these teams met on the Customs' ground on Monday. The home team did most of the attacking but the Medicos' defence was excellent and their custodian was only beaten once—the solitary goal of the match.

DALHOUSIE vs. RIFLE BRIGADE.—This postponed match was played on the Dalhousie ground on Tuesday but was stopped by the storm ten minutes from the close, when the score stood 2 to 1 in favour of Dalhousie.

B. DIVISION.

27TH PUNJABIS vs. 2ND P.V.R.B.—Played on the 2nd P.V.R.B. ground on Thursday the game resulting in a hollow defeat for the home team by 9 goals to nil.

SPORTING UNION (B) vs. HASTINGS.—This postponed fixture came off on the Presidency College ground on Thursday, the game resulting in a win for the Hastings team by 4 goals to nil.

ORIENTAL SPORTING vs. SPORTING UNION (B).—Played on the ground of the former resulting in a win for the home team by 4 goals to nil.

MEASURERS vs. TOWN CLUB.—Played on the Town Club ground on Friday resulting in a win for the visitors by 6 goals to 1.

LA MARTINIERE vs. CORPORALS RIFLE BRIGADE.—Played on Tuesday the storm putting an end to play before the second half was completed. La Martiniere scored 2 goals.

POONA OPEN TOURNAMENT.

21st, 22nd, 23rd and 24th March 1910.

THE Poona Boxing Tournament after one postponment opened on the 21st instant and the arena was well filled on this and each of the three succeeding nights. There was always a big attendance of soldiers and the civilian element was also to the fore. The tournament has long been regarded as the premier show of its kind in India and all the Army Champions make their annual appearance at Poona. This year the entries were not as large as on previous occasions and the fighting as a whole was not up to the usual high standard : nevertheless some excellent bouts were witnessed, for example the meeting of Rounds and Yufa in the feather weights, which was won by the latter, who eventually carried off the title in the class. Blake, a previous winner, was knocked out in the semi-finals. The light weights brought together Casey and Makins in the final and another great fight was witnessed, Casey securing the verdict Among the middle weights we saw Gunner Lyons, Lance Corporal Atkinson of the Glosters and other well-known boxers and some surprises were served up. Atkinson, the ex Champion, was put out by Lance Sergeant Milsham of the East Surreys who promises well. He next disposed of Stark with a stunning blow but went under to Lance-Corporal Wooton in the final. Lyons had an easy journey to the final and here secured another victory. He also appeared among the heavy weights, but, after disposing of Harington, was beaten by Clohessy of the Munsters, the ultimate winner. Milsham also took part in the heavy contests but was knocked out by Lance-Corporal Smith of the Lincolns, another fighter with a reputation. Smith and Clohessy met in the final, the verdict going to the Irishman. The boys put up good displays, the fight between Duffey and Caulfield being especially worthy of mention. The arrangements were in the capable hands of Lieutenant Hayne, Superintendent of Gymnasia, and his worthy coadjutor Quarter-Master-Sergeant Chinnery who carried everything through without a hitch and were complimented on their efforts by General Alderson in his speech prior to the prize giving. The officials were :—

Tentpegging.

HINTS ON TENTPEGGING FOR BEGINNERS.

BY JOHN GILPIN.

TENTPEGGING is a great resource in places where there are not enough people for polo. It is a most fascinating amusement and its only drawback for the owner of a small stable is set forth in the wise Army order which lays down that no horse is to have more than three runs at a tentpeg in one day. The best plan is to send down all available horses and give them three runs each. The Army rule is a perfectly sound one. To give a horse more than three runs in one day is found to put him off the game altogether as well as to try his legs severely.

The modus operandi is as follows:—Having mounted with the lance take your horse rather short on the bridoon rein and halt him. Letting the point of the lance rest on the ground, the pole perpendicular, grasp the lance, thumb downwards, with the point of the thumb level with the hip joint. This is the proper point at which to grasp the lance. Having found your length raise the point of your lance until the pole is perpendicular. As you approach the starting point let the point of the lance fall backwards, pass under the hand, and rise again to the front. This is quite easily done if the wrist be allowed to bend easily and if the last three fingers relax their hold of the lance. The back of the hand will now be undermost, the thumb pointing to the front, fingers pointing to the rear, the lance over the wrist. This is preliminary to the flourish of the lance given as you start galloping. As your horse springs off reverse these motions, taking care that the lance does not touch him anywhere. As the lance comes to the perpendicular once more, point up, hold it so, looking "through" it at the peg until you get to the fifteen yard limit (measured from the peg.) Here come down evenly, without jerking, as far as you can, to the right, pressing the calf of the right leg against the horse to prevent your weight from bringing him over the peg. The lance, which should have been brought down in a straight line between you and the peg, should now be grasped in the full of the hand, the arm hanging directly below the shoulder. As the horse approaches the peg the point of the lance is unconsciously directed upon it by the eye. Any voluntary muscular effort means, as a rule, a miss. The rider's eye being fixed on the peg, at the moment of contact the lance comes into the field of vision. It is essential that the eye should remain fixed on the peg and refrain from looking for the lance which will arrive in good time. As soon as the lance comes into the field of vision it should be kept there. As the lance, with, we hope, the peg on it, passes behind us the eye should follow its point, the left shoulder being brought round to admit of this. This is most important. The butt end of the pole of the lance, after the peg has been taken, should come in contact with the back of the rider, the arm should point to the right rear, the wrist should be straight, the back of the hand up. If care be not taken at first the lance will come up straight to the rear, the butt passing over the rider's wrist and bringing his wrist and elbow into a very constrained position, while the point of the lance is brought dangerously near the horse's hind legs. This bad habit once acquired, is very hard to get rid of and care should be taken from the start to avoid it by keeping a straight arm and wrist and watching the point right round. As soon as the lance is in a straight line with the arm to the right rear it should be brought smartly to the front by a widish sweep, the two flourishes repeated as at the beginning of the run, and the lance brought to the "order," resting on the right shoulder. The horse should be gradually pulled up in a staight line with the track. He should not be allowed to circle while pulling up as it might make him inclined to turn off before he was wanted to, and, besides, horses are harder to stop when on a curve especially if they are working their heads round towards home. As soon as the horse stops walk him quietly back to the others. When several men are going in turns it is a good plan for all to dismount and each to mount as his name is called. Horses should never be kept standing about at the starting point. Having to check them when they expect to jump into a gallop sets them backing and shifting and unsettles them a great deal. They should not be taken to the start until the peg is set and the course clear. Tentpegging excites all horses and their peculiarities require careful study. No horse should be practised at tentpegging when he is over fresh. Then all his little idiosyncrasies are at their keenest and he may hit on some new trick that in work he would never have thought of. Some very good tentpeggers, that is horses that go very straight when extended, are sticky at starting. In the case of such a horse it is a good plan to send a man on a steady one to the starting point with him. As soon as the sticky one starts galloping the other pulls up.

It is a mistake to have the starting point too far from the peg. Nothing is gained by too long a gallop and it knocks horses about unnecessarily. When one does start, however, the sooner one is galloping the better. Some horses will plunge and throw themselves about until they are fairly extended and to check them makes them worse. The horse should therefore be pressed into his gallop at once if he "plays up." If you check him when he plunges you may find yourself at the peg before he settles down.

Directly your horse has settled down in his gallop, and you have completed the flourish and got your lance perpendicular, look, as I said before, "through" the lance at the peg. In other words, with your eyes fixed on the peg bring the lance into the line of vision, the hand a little lower than the shoulder and to the front so that the lance just clears the horse. The pole of the lance should now be between your eyes and the peg though you are looking at the peg and not at the lance. Direct your horse so that as he gallops the lance remains between your eyes and the peg. As you bend over your lance will come down straight in that line. As you come down stare at the peg, focussing it most carefully. It must always be in focus of both eyes and you must see nothing else. Then patience. If you consciously do anything except focus that peg with both eyes you will almost crtainly miss it. If you remain entirely and solely actuated by your eye you will, bar accidents, score. The best point to focus is an imaginary point on the peg on its middle line and about an inch above the ground. This will allow for any small error in elevation.

Although it is wise to commence with young horses at slow paces it is not recommended that beginners should practise much at a canter. It is all right to canter until one has grasped what is required of one, but the canter is not the pace for competitions and it is not easy to hold a fretting or plunging horse at a canter and take a peg at the same time. It is essential that the horse should require no attention. He should be going as fast as he can lay legs to the ground, and when he is doing that he cannot very well do anything else, although, of course, he may run out.

The horse chosen for tentpegging should be a free and level mover, of a sedate and kindly nature, and above all he should have a good back for a saddle. It is neither pleasant nor easy to lean well over from a tall, roach-backed, brute with straight shoulders and low withers. However it is not often that one has a very large choice and a lot of fun can be had even with the most "three-cornered" of them. It is only very nervous and excitable ones that are unsuited to the game, and, of course, it is foolish to use an untrained one. He will probably be permanently spoiled. The use of horses under six-years-old is forbidden in the Army.

Horses for tentpegging cannot be too well trained, and, especially when they are first put to the game, the more riding school work they get the better. Preferably they should go straight from the school to the tentpegging track while the sense of discipline is still on them. Horses to be used for Competitions should be practised almost daily, and the rider should practise at pegs only two inches wide.

The course should be carefully prepared. The surface should be broken up evenly so as to save the horses' legs from jar, and, where available, tan, stable refuse, or straw from old thatches, should be spread over the whole. The longer the prepared track the better so as to give the horses plenty of room to stop in. It is a great mistake to pull up a horse suddenly. It hurts his mouth and jars his legs and may make him take an intense dislike to tentpegging. He should be taught to stop by degrees and he should never be jabbed in the mouth. Horses should not be overbitted, and sticky starters should generally be started on the bridoon rein. Very few horses require to be ridden on the bit rein while tentpegging, but I know some that do. With most it is wiser to start on the bridoon rein. The bit rein can be used after taking the peg if necessary. The less a horse's mouth is hurt the less likely he is to give trouble.

The spur is hardly ever required while tentpegging though a spur on the left heel may be of service in correcting one that runs out to that side. It is obviously impossible to wear a spur on the right heel without sometimes driving it into the horse, an act which would probably sicken him of tentpegging for good.

Some horses shy off at first from the pressure of the right leg against them. Others run over the peg from the weight of the rider, as he bends down, drawing them over that way. These faults are easily cured by teaching the horse, in the riding school, not to mind such things, and by careful riding. What are not easily cured are faults such as running over the peg or running out because the horse is thoroughly sick of the whole thing and tries to make it not worth your while to ride him. Riding school, and plenty of it, is the only cure for this sort of thing, but, even combined with first class riding, it is not a certain one, and the horse is always liable to revert to his bad manners if he is at all above himself. He is never to be trusted for a competition. A horse is always more likely to play up and shew unnecessary spirits at a Competition, where he sees a lot of strange horses, than when he is practising with two or three old friends at home.

Some riders always take up the left stirrup a hole before tent-pegging and the one I know usually fails to score if he neglects this precaution. Personally I do not see what effect it can have, but chacun a son goût.

It is worth while to see that your lance suits your horse, that is to say that it handles pleasantly when held at the length required. Some badly-made lances are very point-heavy when used from a tall horse.

Horses and ponies should, if possible, be run in separate classes at Competitions. Most people consider that a man on a pony has an advantage over a man on a horse, and in some places ponies are handicapped a few points against horses. Points are given for style and pace and these should be rigorously withheld for any declension from the ideal, especially in pace. The pace required is the utmost pace of the horse, and nothing less will do.

The pegs must be 2½ inches wide and fourteen inches long. Seven inches of the peg should be above the ground and seven inches, tapering to a point, below. The best material for pegs is the inner wood of very young and small date palms. Care should be taken that the pegs are cut with the run of the grain or they will break. They should be wired round at the top, and again, seven inches lower, at the ground level, to prevent them from splitting. They should be kept in water until about to be set in the ground. The side next to the rider is then rubbed with dry lime, which adheres to the wet wood, and the peg is then inset a hole carefully made to receive it by means of an iron wedge shaped like a peg. It is a good plan in dry places to make a hole where the pegs are to be placed and to fill it with damp clay just before practice begins. It is very easy to set the pegs in this. Some horses shy at the wet clay so it is well to cover it with dust or cut grass, or whatever the natural covering of the ground consists of. It is important that the pegs be soft. It is disheartening to a beginner to fail to carry his peg after making a good hit. Some pegs I have ridden at have rung like iron when hit and absolutely refused to be pierced. The kind recommended above are of a leathery consistence when wet and, if properly made, i.e. with the run of the grain, will be carried every time they are fairly hit. Good practice pegs can be made from the butts of the green leaves of Palmyra palms where they join the trunk. These are easily penetrable. They can be wrapped round with white paper fastened behind with tacks. They of course vary in size. Ordinary wood is quite unsuitable for pegs.

The faults of which beginners are most frequently guilty and by the commission of which they most frequently miss their pegs are these:—First and foremost "pointing" at the peg. It is sometimes done almost unconsciously and must be sternly avoided. More often it is a conscious act. One is close to the peg and the Evil One whispers in one's ear:—"Dig at it and you've got it." Well, you haven't. The next serious mistake lies in looking at the lance-point and trying to direct it on to the peg. The peg is then out of focus and is almost certainly missed. The peg has to meet the lance which must be carried on to the peg by the advance of the horse only. The eye influences the hand in keeping the point in the true direction. Impatience is the cause of both these faults and the overcoming of them makes tent-pegging a very good discipline for a hasty man.

Want of pace is the easiest of all faults to overcome and is justly punished by the withholding of marks. Want of style is due to want of practice and to ignorance of the proper methods. It is laid down that the rider shall not "come down," that is bend over and lower his lance-point, until within fifteen yards of the peg. At practice this fifteen yard limit should be clearly marked and the lance should come down as the mark is reached. On a fast horse one must be very careful not to come down too late, for this leads to a bad appearance which will lose points for style even if the peg be taken. Another fault which looks very ill is not leaning over sufficiently. There are several acknowledged styles of flourishing the lance. The one laid down here is accepted and looks well. Checking the horse at the start, and pulling him up too soon, or on a circle, are faults, and so is the failure to recover the lance properly. The lance should come across the rider's back and be brought smartly to the front as soon as possible with a strong movement. The rider should show that he has thorough control over it and should not trail it along like a crossing sweeper with a broom. A well-soaked peg is unexpectedly heavy when at the end of a lance and a firm movement is required to handle the combination neatly and with apparent ease—and to handle your weapon neatly and with apparent ease is style. May my young readers soon acquire it and take down the numbers of their, at present, undefeated seniors.

Youth will be served" but it must direct its energies aright.

A FAMOUS wig-maker, who is a noted first-nighter, was unusually enthusiastic at the premiere of a gorgeous theatrical production. "Glad to see you like it," said an earnest "student" of the drama as they left the theatre together, "fine production, fine play, isn't it?" "Magnificent, truly magnificent," replied the wig-maniker. "I couldn't detect a join between a wig and forehead anywhere."

Soon after his first baby was born his wife went upstairs one evening and found him standing by the side of the crib and gazing earnestly at the child. She was touched by the sight and tears filled her eyes. Her arms stole softly round his neck as she nestled her cheek caressingly against his shoulder.

He started slightly at her touch.

"Darling," he murmured, dreamily.

"Yes?" she said softly.

"What I was going to say is it is incomprehensible to me how they can possibly get up such a crib as that for seven-and-six."

BALUCHISTAN NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY.

PROCEEDINGS of a Meeting of the Baluchistan Natural History Society held in the Quetta Museum and Library Building on Thursday, the 27th January 1910.

PRESENT. Vice-President.—Colonel D. O'Sullivan, R.A.M.C.

Members.—Mr. A. Anderson, Mr. C. H. Dracott, Major H. Gough, Captain J. A. P. Manson, K. B. A. D. Marker, Mr. W. R. S. Porter, Mr. Shiawakshaw Pherozeshaw, Major F. A. Smith, I.M.S., Mr. H. R. Smith.

Honorary Secretary.—Mr. J. W. N. Cumming.

Visitors.—Corporal H. Bridger, Private T. J. Hudson.

The Honorary Secretary mentioned that he had received expressions of regret from the Hon'ble Sir Henry McMahon, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., Camp Siti and Mr. A. D. McDonough at their inability to be present.

Read list of local donations made to the Museum since the meeting, the specimens themselves being passed round for inspection. Of these the most important were:—

A Brambling, from Quetta, presented by Master Bernie Smith and a beautiful male Snow, from Nushki, presented by Major F. C. Webb Ware, C.I.E.

The following also were passed round for inspection:—A copy of Lepidoptera Indica, Part LXXX, by Colonel C. Swinhoe, M.A., F.L.S., F.Z.S., F.E.S., presented by the Government of India in the Home Department.

A number of shells belonging to the Quetta Museum which had been kindly identified by the Indian Museum, Calcutta.

Various specimens of Molluscs, Lizards, Fish, Coleptera, Hemipters, Neuroptera and Diptera presented by the Indian Museum which formed a most interesting, and welcome addition to the exhibits on view.

A set of coloured plates of insects presented by Mr. H. Maxwell Lefroy, M.A., F.E.S., F.Z.S., Imperial Entomologist, Agricultural Research, Pusa.

List of Botanical specimens contributed by the Baluchistan Forest Department to the Museum, prepared originally by R.B. Bhai Sadhu Singh, retired Extra Deputy Conservator of Forests and now revised by Lala Mulraj, the present Extra Assistant Conservator of Forests in Baluchistan.

Read letter dated 12th January 1910, from Major F. W. H. Walsh, R.F.A., Madras, asking that his name may be retained on the list of members of the society.

Resolved that Major Walsh's name be retained as a member.

The following observations on Bird Migration made at or near Quetta and communicated to the Honorary Secretary during the month, were then read :—

Name of Bird.	Date first seen.	Observer.	Remarks.
Swallow ...	5-3-09	Lt. A. M. Lloyd.	Quetta.
Rufous backed Shrike.	28-3-09	Do.	Nested early in April.
Rose coloured Paster.	19-4-10	Do.	Quetta. A solitary specimen very much battered by wind and rain.
Blue throat ...	22-4-09	Do.	Quetta. Three—remained six days.
White eared Bulbul.	9-6-09	Do.	Quetta.
Gold Finch ...	12-8-09	Do.	Near Urak.
European Red breasted Fly Catcher.	28-9-09	Do.	Quetta. Seen again on 21st October 1909.
White headed Chat.	7-10-09	Do.	At Kuchlak.
Black throated Ouzel.	29-10-09	Do.	Quetta.
Indian Red Start.	16-11-09	Do.	Do.
Eversmann's Red Start.	Do.	Do.	Do.
Bramling ...	11-12-09	Do.	Quetta. In some numbers till 1st January 1910.
Eastern Linnet (?)	23-12-09	Do.	Quetta. In some numbers.
Simla Black Tit ...	30-12-09	Do.	Quetta. Present in January 1910.
Woodcock ...	29-11-09	Capt. E. P. Twigg.	Two were shot by Major Mitchel on 29th November 1909 and another on 12th December 1909 all near Quetta.
Jackdaw ...	18-12-09	Major H. Gough.	Saw several roosting on trees at Quetta.
Common Snipe ...	30-12-09	Mr. J. W. N. Cumming.	Found him with a broken wing under Telegraph wires near Baleli.
Gold Finch ...	25-1-10	Col. D. O'Sullivan.	Quetta.

Colonel O'Sullivan then made some interesting statements with reference to the breeding of the Housefly and the time it takes for their eggs to hatch.

He remarked that he noticed numerous young flies just emerging on 23rd January 1910, among horse dung, which had been deposited on the Quetta Trenching Ground during the first week of November 1909, that Hornets and Ants preyed freely on them until they took their wings, which they were able to do within two or three hours.

Read note dated 24th January 1910 from Major F. McConaghe stating that, according to the Brahuis, trees, on which the Cicada settle in large numbers, do wither but only temporarily as they recover again after a short time: and that in Kelat the insects are eaten by the Brahuis, who consider them a luxury and pay for them the same price as for dried Mulberries.

The election of new members being the next item on the agenda, the following names were considered.

Lieut. P. Shepheard } Proposed by Col. D. O'Sullivan and seconded by Major H. Gough.
Lieut. A. E. Davies }

Corporal H. Bridger } Proposed by Mr. Cumming and seconded
Private T. J. Hudson } by Major Gough.

Moulvi Ferozeuddin } Proposed by Mr. W. R. S. Porter and seconded by K. S. Ardeshire D. Marker.

Resolved that the above named gentlemen be admitted as member

J. W. N. CUMMING,
Honorary Secretary,
Quetta Museum.

PROCEEDINGS of a Meeting of the Baluchistan Natural History Society held in the Quetta Museum and Library Building on Thursday afternoon, the 24th February 1910.

PRESENT : Vice-President.—Colonel C. E. Peirse.

Members.—Lieutenant S. G. Bignell, Corporal H. Bridger, Mr. C. H. Dracott, Private T. J. Hudson, Lieutenant A. M. Lloyd, K. S. A. D. Marker, Mr. J. M. S. Mathews, K. B. B. D. Patel, Mr. Shiakwakshaw Pherozeshaw, Mr. W. R. S. Porter, Lieutenant, G. T. Raikes, Lieutenant P. Shepheard, Major F. A. Smith, I.M.S. Mr. H. R. Smith.

Honorary Secretary.—Mr. J. W. N. Cumming.

Read list of the Zoological donations made to the Museum since the last meeting, the objects themselves being passed round for inspection.

Of these the more important were :—

A Brandt's Rose Finch, obtained in Quetta by Master H. Smith.

A Himalayan Griffin obtained in Quetta by Master C. Anscomb.

A Griffin Vulture obtained in Quetta by purchase.

A female Smew from Saranan presented by Mr. A. Sisson.

A fine Golden Eye, from Saranan, presented by Mr. G. L. J. Davis.

Read letter dated 16th February 1910 from Mr. N. B. Kinnear, Honorary Secretary, Bombay Natural History Society, intimating that the Pipits from Baluchistan which he had forwarded to Dr. Hartert for identification had not yet been returned.

Cuttings from the Illustrated London News, dated 8th January 1910, containing illustrations of the Cicada Septendecim of America in its various phases of development above ground (received from A. M. Lloyd and R. E. Bignell) were then passed round for the information of members.

There being no further business the election of new members was then proceeded with and the following were admitted :—

Mr. A. Sisson, proposed by Mr. Cumming and seconded by Colonel Peirse.

Lieutenant F. H. Kisch, R. E., proposed by Mr. Dracott and seconded by Colonel Peirse.

Solution to Problem No. 86.

A must on no account touch spades, because, unless Z holds both king and queen, he will make two tricks in the suit if he waits to be led up to. At trick 5 he should lead the ace of diamonds, and then either a heart or a club. If the ace of clubs was a singleton Z will get three discards, but he must still have at least two spades left, and he is bound to lead up to A eventually. The point of leading out the ace of trumps is to avoid being put in at a later period of the hand, when the lead may be disadvantageous. If it were certain that the ace of clubs was a singleton, a heart lead would be equally efficacious; but Z may have held ace and one other—his object in leading the ace being to induce his opponents to lead spades—and in that case, if he were forced with a heart at trick 5, he might go on with clubs until A was exhausted, and then lead a second round of trumps, when A would have to open spades, or else to lead a heart which Y could ruff.

Problem No. 87.

Score : A. B, 24; Y. Z, 24. Z deals, and leaves it to Y, who declares diamonds. Y's (dummy's) and B's (third player's) hands are as follows :—

Y's Hand (Dummy).—Hearts, 10, 7, 3, diamonds, ace, king, 10, 9, 4 ; clubs, king, 8 ; spades, queen, jack, 9.

B's Hand (Third Player).—Hearts, jack, 9, 8, 5 ; diamonds, queen, 8, 7 ; clubs, ace, 9, 5 ; spades, ace, king, 8.

The first six tricks are as follows :—

How ought B to play, and why ?

RACING IN ENGLAND.

Seldom has the English flat racing season opened more successfully than it did at Lincoln recently. The weather was simply charming a powerful sun shedding its rays with much warmth over the famous Carholme on each of the three days of the fixture, whilst the sport was of the best, and, thanks to the delightful weather conditions which were pretty general all over the country, the attendance came very near being a record one. America started the season well by winning the Batthyany Plate on the opening day with Bobbin II, but Mr. Harry Payne Whitney's clever trainer, Joyner, was not so successful with the same owner's Delirium in the Lincoln Handicap, the chief item of the meeting, as the best the latter could do was to get fourth to Mr. E. E. Schiff's Cinderello.

The big race turned out a great success, and the fact that it presented a more open appearance than usual increased the general interest. It was admitted from the first that the handicap was a good one; but, owing to the uncertainty which existed as to what would be fit and what would not, the market underwent many changes. During the last two days prior to its decision last year's Cambridgeshire winner Christmas Daisy had practically dominated the situation, but towards the eleventh hour Delirium, presumably because of the victory of his stable companion, Robbin II on the first day of the meeting became a tremendous order.

It was entirely public money that was responsible for his pronounced favouritism, for, as is well known, the connections of the stable do not bet, except in a very modest way. I understand that Mr. Whitney's commission only amounted to £100. Doubtless covering money had a good deal to do with the run on the American-bred horse. The rapid advance of Delirium caused the position of Christmas Daisy to be considerably weakened.

In the preliminary canter nothing moved better than the favorite, but, unfortunately, he was very badly drawn, being on the extreme outside. This may have militated considerably against his chance, especially as it was not assured that he would quite stay the mile. It was only his fine speed that enabled him to cross over and take a favourable position in the early stages. The effort, of course, must have taken something out of him, and in finishing fourth he did not disgrace himself. He was probably third best.

The race needs little description as Cinderello assumed the lead from Forerunner II, and the Two Thousand Guineas winner Norman III to the end to win by a neck. Delirium tired to nothing from the distance, though had he been better drawn he must have gone very close.

It is surprising how certain trainers have an aptitude for winning a certain race. For many years John Watson, Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's trainer, appeared to have a lien on the Brocklesby Stakes, the first of the season's prominent juvenile events. Year after year he prepared the winner, till other trainers chaffingly said, "What is the use of running anything?" The Foxhill establishment presided over by William Robinson for three consecutive years provided the Lincolnshire Handicap winner. That good horse Clorane, carrying the hunting burden of 9st. 4lb., started the sequence in 1894. Then came the Cambridgeshire of the previous year and Prince Barcaldine to wind up with.

To these victories has now been added that of Cinderello. Evidently Robinson knows the Alpha and Omega of what is required to win the first of the season's big handicaps, for last year's book of form conveyed not the slightest clue to the winner holding any chance. But, judging by the way the stable betted, Mr. Schiff's horse must have improved from the form he showed in his juvenile days. Very confident indeed were all those connected with the horse, and, despite the heavy outlays on Delirium and the continuous inquiries for Valens and Christmas Daisy, Cinderello was always very firm in the market.

By Cinderello's success a new page in Lincolnshire Handicap history has been opened for never previously, I think, has the victor been descended from a previous winner of the race. Yet another story would have had to be written had Catty Crag, a brother to Cinderello, enjoyed but ordinary luck in Sansovino's year, cruel misfortune that time making a world of difference.

Liverpool races were not so fortunate in the matter of weather as was Lincoln, a half gale of wind blowing over the Aintree flats on the first day and thereby causing much discomfort; while just as the Grand National Steeplechase was started on the second afternoon a heavy snowstorm came on.

Like the "Lincoln," the "National," was a big success. Included in the field of twenty-five competitors were fourteen horses that made an attempt last year, of which Judas and Corbeen, who finished second and third to the French horse Lutteur III, were now two very strongly fancied candidates. As usual the contest was full of excitement. Falls were frequent, and among the first to go were Rathvale, Lord Chatham, Shady Girl, Brineoge, and Captain Farrel. Shortly afterwards Bloodstone came to grief, and thus shattered the Foxhill stable's hopes of a great double event. The mean-looking Odor, a 100 to 1 chance, was always prominent, and he was in front on the completion of the first round, with Jerry M, Glenside, Carsey, and Jenkinstown in close attendance.

Judas, who was ousted from favouritism at the last moment by Jerry M. was the next to come down, and his example was copied by another fancied candidate in The Lurcher. At three and a quarter miles Jerry M was in the lead but his crushing impost of 175lbs. told, and he was unable to withstand the challenge of Jenkinstown, who won a good race by three lengths, a similar distance separating Jerry M from the rank outsider Odor.

The breakdown of Cackler a week ago may have been very unfortunate for Mr. Assheton-Smith, as the horse was thought to be better than Jerry M over the National course. The form of the winner this season has not been good, and his victory in the blue riband of the chase points to the fact that the field was moderate in character. Jenkinstown belongs to Mr. Howard who won with Eremon in 1907.

THE BOMBAY RACING SEASON

Monday's Fifteenth Extra Meeting brought to a close what must be again considered an interesting season's racing. There has been the usual large number of new Arabs and the majority of old stagers have also been seen in form, but the big horse events have not received all the support one might have wished for. Fields during the early and late extras have been distinctly poor, and as this is the case almost every year in Bombay one wonders why some owners do not keep a few fair horses to pick up the easy races one sees at these times. During the Big Meeting things were naturally better, but there is no getting away from the fact that we missed the support of Messrs. Apcar and Galstaun, whom one hopes to see trying his luck under the new handicapper in Poona.

With Fizz out of form after his Calcutta performances, there was nothing startling to chronicle and some comparative second raters fought out the big event, the Byculla Club Cup. Sporran won it, leg and all, but there was nothing much to beat by a horse who, if he runs on now into his true form, is likely to be first class. Master Delaval is scarcely the horse we expected, and it was left to a pony, Refresher, to win one of the important races.

In sprints we had the satisfaction of finding Soultline at his best, and his galloping under big weights was a thing to marvel at. Lamination also ran up to his reputation, but he is by no means a match for the former, who seems to stand out a class on his own more evidently than has ever been the case before. This, however, was only what we were prepared for after his Trial win in Calcutta, and undoubtedly the most marvellous case of improvement has been on the part of Lord Merv. Always an useful one to pick up a five furlong race when well in, he is now a quantity always to be reckoned with high up in the weights over any distance up to a mile. Old Killua is another we were glad to see earn a bracket in sensational time, and he also improves with age as a stayer—a common occurrence amongst all classes of racers. Over middle distances, Master Theo is as much a power as ever, though a leg seems to interfere with his preparation, and in the same stable Lady Violet proves a handy mare as evidenced in her dead heat with Oakton, better than we have ever known him.

Much the same lot of ponies ran as in Poona, and over short journeys we find Danseuse a real flier and much the best of all seen out this time. Rather more of a stayer, Lady Nannie remains what she was, but more than once she suffered through the gradual improvement in Encourage, though the latter is still not entitled to any great weight. Gun Metal was not herself, nor was Cheeky whereas Evening Herald ran prominently, but the crown of this stable remains with Refresher. As mentioned already, he won the Grand Western Handicap against the best big horses and is an exceptional galloper for a pony. Why he was not started more often the stable know best. In this class particularly outside support was missed as frequently two stables only were represented.

When tackling the Arabs it seems only natural that one should at once mention Precious. There certainly has never been one who has so ingratiated himself with racing people in general as he. There are numbers who religiously back him, oblivious of weight or stable encouragement, and as he has two brackets out of three outings these have done well. Even the third some think he should have won when carrying 10st. 7lb. and giving Urgent, who beat him by only a neck, forty-five pounds. His stable companion, Sialkote, carried off the Derby but other old favourites in Dhafer and Famous have just missed. It is pleasant to see old Eed returning to form, and this stable, the bin Talib brothers, have had more than their share, what with some of the best new batch. Peculiar was never himself and, though Parliament made some amends, Mr. G. K.'s stable has been by no means as successful as he should be during the coming Poona season.

Amongst the short distance ones, there has been some startling improvement in the case of two in particular. Just before the Big Meeting, Rajput began to show what subsequently proved to be tip-top form and won three times off the reel, performances which have brought him up to the top of the handicaps. Previously he had been most consistent and placed more often than not during the last year, but could never approach the form he has run into now. Vedas is the other. Over five furlongs he has been exceptional since he landed, now over this or six there has been no question of letting him rip along and trusting to his staying it out. It has been realised that a more patient race can suit him and he will always be backed within a very few pounds of the famous Lookman and Tachreet. This all without the latter two having gone off the least, as proved by the timings and by the way they have carried big weights in front of everything else. They both won, but Lookman towards the end appeared to have had about enough of it, whereas Tachreet invariably came to grief when Rajput was in the race. Creditor, Shanwar, Ashroff and Hurgon have also kept up their previous reputations. We have seen nothing of Bay Middleton. This means that he loses all his penalties, and as the great little pony is reported to be well, Poona may mean a continuation of his long series of brackets.

Above the average have been the new ponies brought out this year, and, as they have been doing times equal to good second class old ones, they are likely to do well when fully acclimatised. Though at first Asfundier was thought to be the pick, Tajilmulook beat him over six furlongs. The former then turned the tables in the mile Second Dealers, having won the Melton Plate. Tajilmulook was said not to be himself and, though at nearly a stone difference, he finally beat his rival again over six. It will be interesting to see how they fare in another few months. Guinea Mohur also claims to turn out a champion, as in addition to three wins, the last under 9st. 12lb., he ran Tajilmulook to half a length at four pounds difference. He is a great mover and has come on marvellously, changing hands originally as a equib at five hundred, when others have fetched ten times that figure. Valens was one of these, and though he has never been really well he has won and run prominently at other times. If he keeps well now he will take beating over extreme distances.

Sir Hugo, Sulaik, Akseer, Braganza, Padsha, Rustom-i-Hind, Guinea Gold and Fahad Beg are some of the most likely ones.

Mr. M. Goculdass has again had a remarkably good time, keeping up a very fine average right to the finish. In Bleach, with Hoyt as Jockey, he has a trainer whose handling of a stable too large for most men deserves success. Byramjee has his usual number of successes, but in waler classes these for a change have come more from Mr. Kelso's lot than Mr. R. R. S.'s. Mumford won his share, though he did not seem satisfied, and Stevenson has earned a reputation already although the material at his disposal was not a first as promising as it turned out. Of Lord Merv he has particular reason to be proud.

It is satisfactory to note that the Stewards have not thought it necessary to impose any extreme penalty on owner, jockey or trainer. The Paul Pry enquiry was a somewhat prolonged one, but Lord Merv's subsequent running fairly conclusively proved that their action in exonerating Ames was correct. Racing has been good and one is pleased to say that the general impression is that the corrupt state into which the turf was being allowed to fall here has been successfully checked during the past year. It is declared with a certain amount of authority that Mr. Cursetjee is to hand over the reins as Handicapper when the Poona season starts. About this I have my doubts as, though the new one has had the experience of practically the whole of this season the variety of racing we get here takes a very great deal of grasping. What the abilities of the present official are can only be gauged by trainers themselves, who anxiously await the publication of handicaps, or by the very few who make a careful steady of the great game.

With bunches of half ready, wholly green Arabs who have had far from a sufficient number of tries at a starting gate, Mr. O'Gorman has had a trying time indeed. He has, however, had plenty of experience and being possessed of the necessary patience gives us but very few chances of complaining.

The enclosures have received the usual amount of care, the second having been considerably enlarged. There is, however, but little support for the Tote, and though at times it returns good dividends the amount invested would be immediately swallowed were one substantial bet to be made. We look forward to Poona, the improvements on the course, may be we shall be favoured with a reserved space for the Press, and the racing.

"Henry," faltered the young bride, as the pleasure steamer rolled and pitched, "do you still love me?"

"More than ever, darling!" was Henry's fervent answer. Then there was an eloquent silence.

"Henry," she gasped, turning her pale, ghastly face away, "I though that would make me feel better, but it doesn't."

At the end of the first act of a drama, a man leaped hurriedly to his feet. "I heard an alarm of fire," he said. "I must go and see where it is."

His wife, whose hearing was less acute, made way for him in silence, and he disappeared.

"It wasn't fire," he said, on his return.

"Nor water either," said his wife, coldly.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The C.T.C. Stewards have now finally settled all matters in connection with the new extension of the Calcutta race-course, and the following is shortly what it is intended to do both as regards the new course and the Monsoon course. The new extention will link up with the One Mile Course at a point just beyond the 7 furlongs post and both the training track and the public riding track will follow the new alignment. The One Mile Course will not be in any way interfered with and the fine straight half mile to 5 furlongs at the start of that course will be as it now is. The result of this new extension and the linking up of the two courses will be a great improvement at the One Mile turn. This bend will be "flattened" very considerably, that is to say, it will now be so shaped that the curve will hardly be felt at all. On the old course the bend just before the mile-post was a very sharp one and the course was very narrow at that point. The new track will be considerably wider. The whole of this work may not be finished in time for next season, so that in case of any such eventuality the Old Course is not at present being dismantled.

As regards the Moonson flat course the Stewards have decided to lay down a one mile sand gallop on the present site of the public riding track so far as the last three furlongs are concerned and so far as the other seven furlongs are concerned along the new alignment of the extension, if it is found possible to complete the work in the time; if not then the last mile of the public track will be utilised. This new gallop will, of course, be railed, and at no point will it be narrower than about 16 yards, which is very nearly the same width as the training track upon which the Monsoon Races have been seen in previous years. The new sand gallop is to be laid down on a Flemington pattern, that is to say, that it is to have a foundation of kunker. This has been found to be the only foundation that answers in Australia and which prevents the sand top-dressing from washing away or being blown away by the wind.

Mr. R. L. Kindersley will conduct the measuring operations up-country and has already started on his tour.

Mr. Harvey Roulston, Stipendiary Steward to the C.T.C., is now in Australia on leave and returns to his appointment at the beginning of next racing season in Calcutta. Mr. W. Griffiths left for Australia on Monday last and returns in July in time to take over his duties as Official Handicapper at the Monsoon Meetings.

Mallard, now Mallard II., once the property of Mr. A. A. Apcar, is now owned by Mr. R. J. Farquharson and was amongst the starters for the Queen's prize at Kempton, the result of which was published in our last issue. He finished down the course, but it is surprising to see that Mr. Farquharson has managed to get the horse out at all, as when he left here he was supposed to be hopelessly broken down and the stud was said to be his destination. It was a great pity that old Mallard broke down as it would have been interesting to see how he shaped against the English jumpers, it having originally been the idea to send him over fences. He was a fine natural jumper and he would have very quickly learnt how to cross the English steeplechase courses successfully. Mr. Farquharson is a wonderfully patient man and Mallard is not the only old "Indian" friend that he has patched up sufficiently to race, as we notice that Boabdil ran second at Lincoln recently and this horse when he left India was supposed to be a hopeless cripple. When he broke down in the Viceroy's Cup of two seasons ago it was the check ligament that went and the horse hobbled back to the paddock on three legs.

Tom Scott is reported to have bought a horse in Melbourne for H.H. the Knor Sahib of Patiala, Malmsey, the winner of the Standish Handicap. The purchase was contingent upon the horse's passing sound at the conclusion of the V.R.C. Meeting. Malmsey started in the Newmarket Handicap and other races at the V.R.C., but did not run forward.

At the close of the racing season in Calcutta there was some talk of Wootton coming out next season and bringing out a few horses to race and sell in India. It was also stated that if he came he would very probably be accompanied by one of his sons, Frank or Stanley. Nothing further, however, has been heard concerning this project. It was said that if Wootton decided to send any horses they would come out some months ahead in charge of Mr. Haines. That there is money in a venture of this description properly worked recent results

DOG MEDICINES
MAY NOW BE OBTAINED IN INDIA
In CALCUTTA from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO.,
And in BOMBAY from TREACHER & CO., Ltd.

These preparations are based on the most recent and up-to-date veterinary research, and are the best possible remedies for the various ailments and diseases for which they are recommended.

It is of the greatest importance in treating all cases of sickness in dogs that the nature of the ailment should be recognised, and in order to enable dog owners to do this we have published a book.

"HINTS TO DOG OWNERS"
(ILLUSTRATED),
which is now the standard work of reference in thousands of kennels in the United Kingdom, where it has had a larger circulation than any book on dogs ever published, the demand for it being so great that more than 200,000 copies have been disposed of. It may be obtained gratis on application to either of the above-mentioned firms in India, and everyone interested in dogs should make a point of obtaining a copy at once.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR DOGS.

These Capsules are tasteless and odourless, and are the surest and safest means of expelling both Round and Tape Worms from dogs (or puppies three months old or over) weighing 10lb. or more. They require no purgative medicine afterwards. May be easily given wrapped up in a piece of meat or cheese.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR PUPPIES AND TOY DOGS.

Every puppy at six weeks old should be dosed with these Capsules which may be safely given to even the smallest and most delicate toy puppy. They surely expel all Worms and never cause the least discomfort. Castor oil is not required before or after giving them, and it is not necessary for the puppy to fast before being dosed.

SHERLEY'S "SKIN CURE."

An absolutely unrivalled dressing for Mange, Eczema, Ringworm, and all other Skin Diseases of dogs. It cures Mange for certain in a week, and not only cures the disease but starts an immediate and vigorous growth of hair.

SHERLEY'S "DISTEMPERCURE."

The best remedy for Distemper ever discovered: it reduces the fever and creates an appetite. In each tin are full instructions as to nursing and dieting, on which the cure of Distemper depends so much.

SHERLEY'S "SHAMPOO."

A Liquid Soap for Washing Dogs. It penetrates the hair, which it cleanses much better than any solid soap and in less than half the time.

It removes dandriff, stimulates the growth of hair, and gives the coat a healthy, glossy appearance.

It also prevents Eczema, and destroys Fleas and all other insects.

amply prove, for not only have most of these cheap English horses done a bit more than pay for themselves, but a demand having now been created for this class of horse they would find a ready sale at profitable prices.

Amongst the trainers who are taking up their abode in Calcutta for the hot weather with a view to operations at the Monsoon Meetings later on is old Butlin, who has Wise Hawk, Isabella, and one or two more and will later on, so we hear, have Mozart and anything that H.H. the Kour Sahib of Patiala may send down for the Monsoon Meetings. Butlin is a steady hard-working man and his recent successes with Longchamps were a good advertisement for him. We should be glad to see him get a chance during the autumn.

The question as to whether or not stipendiary Stewards are a success in India can, we think, admit of but one answer, an affirmative. In Calcutta during the past season one of these officials undoubtedly had a very wholesome effect upon certain persons, and in a country like India, where it is known that there is a fairly strong organisation in the nature of a jockey's ring, it is in our opinion desirable that officials of this description should be employed. The only complaint is so far as we have heard that the Stewards were not ready enough to act upon the reports of their paid officials. The existence of the betting jockey is a thing that is known to everyone,—Stewards, bookmakers and betting men, and so long as racing continues we fear that this dangerous excrescence of the turf will continue. But although it may never be possible to root out the betting jockey and stop "arranged" races, it is possible to put a check upon this person and these undesirable and dishonest practices, and the stipendiary Steward is unquestionably the best check so far devised. How often do we not hear it freely bandied about before a race that "X is the one the boys are on to-day" and that all the other letters of the alphabet (public form notwithstanding) are "not on the job." The bookmakers all know when the money is coming from the right source and not a few of them are well acquainted with the "heads" who do the commissions for the people inside the mystic circle. It is here that the stipendiary Steward comes in, for he is paid to be out and about and in amongst them learning all the news that is almost common property in the ring. The honorary official does not as a rule care about taking on this sort of work and consequently it is very often the case that the Stewards are quite ignorant of things that everyone else knows and has acted upon accordingly. The want is, in our idea, more of the stipendiary class of official and this view is we believe that shared by the controlling authorities.

It is, we understand, upon very good authority extremely probable that the Australian Act, which prohibits the importation into the States of the Commonwealth of live-stock from India and the East, will be very shortly amended in favour of blood-stock that has never been to any Indian Stud. Representations made by influential bodies in India pointing out the absurdity of this prohibition so far as race-horses are concerned have at last, so it is said, had the desired effect and the Australian legislators brought into line with the Indian view. As regards one of the causes which procured this Act, dourine, a recent Veterinary Report pronounces this disease as non-existent in India, or at any rate says that it is not now discoverable, and that it is doubtful whether it ever existed. This removes one of the pet "bogeys" that Australia has been wont to set up to frighten herself with. The absurdity of the Act so far as this particular disease is concerned is emphasised by the fact that the Australians do not bar the descendants of Orme, etc., a strain that is known by English breeders to be tainted. The effect of the disease is that the progeny are barren, but it has no other effects such as are common in the human form of this disorder. Ormonde was never a success as a stud horse in the Argentine and his failure is ascribed to this cause. As regards the other diseases to guard against which the Colonial Legislature passed this Act, surra, glanders, anthrax, etc., etc., it has never been proved that any infected horse has ever left India. That any such horse could be landed in Australia was made quite impossible by the very strict quarantine regulations both at this end and at the port of disembarkation. The Mallein test for glanders also is now acknowledged to be an absolutely reliable one, and this also "Indian" horses had to successfully pass. It is good news, however, to learn that there is every prospect of an early amendment of an Act which has undoubtedly erred on the side of over-caution.

India might, were she so disposed, retaliate upon Australia and demand that all horses coming from there should be compelled to undergo a severe period of quarantine. "Tick" and skin diseases are by no means uncommon amongst horses landed in India from Australia, but there is no prohibitive legislation and India takes the Colonial horse on trust, asking no questions and hoping to be told no lies! As a matter of fact lengthy periods of quarantine are quite unnecessary, for the sea-voyage itself is sufficient quarantine and any horse with the germs of any disease in him would be capable of detection before he arrived at his destination.

"Mr. Holmes'" English mare, Hackler's Bloom, has missed measurement and will consequently from now henceforth have to race in the horse class as she has passed for ever out of the 14-2 division. She is a three-year-old by Hackler—Lady Flush, and she is growing and filling out. She has shown herself quite capable of holding her own against a fairly good class of the second division out here, so that her failure to measure need not by any means spell farewell to success!

Mr. W. Graham, who has just won the Salmon (Pony) Cup at the Gujerat Pigsticking meeting was at one time well known in Calcutta and was then better in a boat than on a horse, being a very constant supporter of the C.R.C. regattas. He is a cousin of the Hon'ble Mr. C. W. N. Graham. Next week we will publish a full report of the Gugerat Meet. Our report has been delayed in the post.

The market on this year's Derby can hardly be said to have yet settled to anything like serious business and the only three that are so far reported as having been backed are Lemberg 3 to 1, Neil Gow 4 to 1 and Antonio 16 to 1. Lemberg is owned by that lucky sportsman Mr. Fairie, owner of Bayardo, etc., etc., and Neil Gow is Lord Rosebery's. Antonio was an unnamed colt at the time of entry and there is therefore no means at present of tracing him. Lemberg is by Cyllene (Minoru's sire) out of Galicia and has a very brilliant record as a two-year-old as he was only once defeated out of seven appearances and then he ran third. His record reads:—

Ascot: New Stakes £2013, 5 furlongs, 8-10, Catril 8-10 2nd; Sweet Glory 8-10, 3rd.

Newmarket: Chesterfield Stakes, £750, 5 furlongs 9-3, Catrail 8-10, 2nd; Prince Rupert 9-3, 3rd.

Goodwood: Rouse Memorial Stakes, £1,125, 6 furlongs 9-6, Lily Rose 8-3, 2nd; Galey Bawn 8-2, 3rd.

Doncaster: Champagne Stakes, £1,480, 5 furlongs 152 yards ran third 9-0 to Neil Gow, 9-0 Admiral Hawke 9-0. Betting: 15 to 8 on Lemberg.

Newmarket: Rouse Memorial Stakes, £920, 5 furlongs, 9-3, Rochester 8-10, 2nd Yellow Slave 8-11, 3rd.

Newmarket: Middle Park Plate, £3025, 6 furlongs, 9-3, Whisk Broom 9-0, 2nd; Admiral Hawke, 9-8, 3rd.

Won by a neck; three-quarters of a length between second and third.

Newmarket: Dewhurst Plate, £1,527, 7 furlongs: 9-5, Whisk Broom 8-13, 2nd. No others ran Won in a canter.

Neil Gow by Marco—Chelandry besides having had the distinction of being the only two-year-old to "down" the crack has also a very distinguished career as a juvenile and his list of performances is as follows:—

Epsom: Woodcote Stakes, £930, 5 furlongs, unplaced 8-12, (badly left) to Vasco 8-9, Troubled Waters 8-12, Demosthenes 9-3.

Ascot: Coventry Stakes, £1,309, 5 furlongs: third 9-0 to Admiration colt (Admiral Hawke) 9-0, Yellow Slave 8-11.

Sandown: Nat: Breeders' Produce Stakes, £4,857, 5 furlongs, 8-8, Brettenham 8-0, 2nd; Sunshine 8-2, 3rd.

Goodwood: Prince of Wales' Stakes, £1,800, 6 furlongs, 8-11, Bernard 8-8, 2nd; Glazebrook 8-11, 3rd. (Betting: 20 to 1 on Neil Gow.

Doncaster: Champagne Stakes (vide Lemberg.)

Kempton: Imp. Prod. Stakes, £2,569, 6 furlongs, 9-3, Sunningdale 8-0, 2nd; Santa Fina 9-3, 3rd.

The race for the Champion Stakes (3 miles) at the recent V.R.C. Meeting seems to have been a curiously run one. There were only three starters, Prince Foote (favourite), Pendil and Diabolo. All three jockeys were apparently tied down with waiting orders and consequently instead of being a three-mile race it degenerated into a crawl and a spurt home over the last seven furlongs. The time for the 3 miles was 8mins. 47secs; the last mile was run in 1-42; the last 6 furlongs in 1-13½ and the last half mile in 49½secs. Curious timing indeed! The favourite, who started at 9 to 2 on, had to be ridden hard to win by half a length from Pendil—the other one twenty lengths away. Prince Foote is a three-year-old by Sir Foote, an English horse who was originally imported solely with the idea of using him as a stud horse, but who proved himself good enough to clear out all their best and has since also been a success as a sire, as for the half-year ending the 31st January he was second. His progeny had up to then won nine races representing a value in stakes of £12,745. Petruschka, the dam of Sir Foote, is also English and is by Isinglass out of Pet of the Chase; Isinglass by Isonomy by Sterling out of Isola Bella by Stockwell out of Isoline. The dam's pedigre is therefore of the best and the sire is also back to Stockwell through Sir Hugo, his sire, who is by Wisdom by Blinkboolie— Aline by Stockwell—Jeu d'Esprit.

Commenting on Prince Foote's victory an Australian exchange says:—The Championship was won by Prince Foote, but had Alawa stood his ground the result might have been different. One thing certain is that Alawa would have won the All-aged Stakes, in which Prince Foote met his defeat at the hands of Malt King, that is as the race was run. The probabilities are that had Alawa seen the post the pace would have been on all the way, and the time recorded would have been much nearer 1min. 39secs. than 1min. 44secs., and the result might have been different. The owner of Prince Foote was quite disgusted after the race, and felt certain the colt should have won, but on the other hand Mr. O'Brien, the owner of Malt King, was just as certain the result was correct, and offered to match the two colts a mile at the close of the meeting for who should take both of them. The chances are that the pair will meet again in the All-aged Stakes at Sydney and the positions may then be reversed. Prince Foote's record is attached.

The experiments in bird-marking which are now being carried out in various places should be of considerable service in throwing light upon the movements of migrants and other birds. The plan is to mark birds of different species by means of a soft metal ring attached to the leg, the name and address of the person by whom the rings are issued being stamped on the ring. During the past year a large number of these rings have been issued by the editors of British Birds, a monthly scientific journal published in London, and the returns thus far obtained go to show that birds of many kinds not generally regarded as long distance travellers go far afield. Specimens have been secured in Spain, Italy, and France, as well as in many parts of the British Isles, and a large amount of interesting knowledge is being collected in this manner. Bird-marking schemes of a similar nature are also being promoted in Germany and Denmark, the birds marked in the latter country having been taken in many instances in Great Britain. Of these, so far, teal have been the most notable, as many as nine out of about a hundred marked two years ago having been secured here. Of course, the marking of birds is by no means a new idea, for we constantly hear of birds bearing rings with mysterious initials and figures engraved thereon being discovered. But such means of identification are of little use, since the finder has no idea, in most cases, what the marks may mean. An ordinary name and address may be as easily stamped on a small ring, and the finder therefore knows at once with whom to communicate. The practice of bird-marking deserves to be more widely followed, for there is no doubt that we still have a great deal to learn concerning the movements of birds in general.

"The Londoner," whose column in an evening paper published in the "Little Village" usually helps to a cheerful appreciation of dinner, discourses on the reception of Major Fawcett by the Royal Geographical Society. "In days like these," he remarks, "when too many Cooks are quarrelling over the Polar snow-broth, the Royal Geographical Society is, doubtless, on its mettle. For anyone venturing within the society's gate with an uncertified tale of exploration pressing to death between elephantfolio atlases would be the mildest fate. Also I know nothing against the honour of Major Fawcett as a soldier or as an explorer. But if the character of Major Fawcett and his hosts, the Royal Geographers, were not beyond suspicion, I should feel easier in my mind. If I could persuade myself that Major Fawcett's description of voyages up the Amazonian rivers was a fancy with a trip on a nightmare's back for its original the world would seem, on the morrow of his lecture, a more comfortable and homelike place.

"The upper reaches of the Amazon are distant a number of miles which I will not trouble the Gazetteer to estimate. But the top of a Gower-street hotel is very far from its kitchen. Were I lodged on that top story I could shudder at a tale of the number and ferocity of the black-beetles pattering about the pavement. Remote as Bolivia may be, I am disquieted by Major Fawcett's tale of its black-beetles. I say its black-beetles, but so harmless an insect would probably be welcome as a pet lamb in a country where even the mosquito is tolerated in the presence of more serious 'aggerawators.' There are, for example, the pungent-odoured bees which covered Major Fawcett from head to foot, burrowing under his clothes. Concerning these, the hardy major remarks that, while they were attending to him, dinner had to be put off until the swarm had nested for the night.

"Strollers in the Amazonian forests are careful to carry a tape-measure with them. It has no value as a protection against the giant anaconda of those solitudes, but should you be the survivor of a meeting with a fine specimen his measurements will interest the Royal Geographers who live at home in ease. Major Fawcett has run his measure for sixty-five feet along one anaconda. Another exploring party reported the discovery of one which passed this record by a matter of twenty feet. This one, the serpent over twenty-six yards long, is a reptile in which I would rather not believe. It is a relief to know that the Major does not pledge his own word for him. That he moves about by night, when the bees have gone home from business, is an unpleasant characteristic of the anaconda. He utters I am told, a 'weird cry,' expressing, it may be, his delight in meeting with an explorer. But a stroll by moonlight in his favourite forest is a safer amusement than a swim in those reaches of the Amazon where the perania swims. The perania is described as a small fish. His appetite however, is such that if you tumble overboard into a shoal of him, your most active boatmen cannot hope to recover more of you than your skeleton.

"Even the trees of this land of horrors will not be baulked of their malicious joke at the explorer's expense. Brazil, as we know already, is 'where the nuts come from.' But Charley's Aunt had not warned us that Brazil nuts start upon their journey towards Covent Garden by falling in a heavy mass upon the head of the travellers wandering a hundred and fifty feet below the boughs. Another ill-natured tree is that which spits upon you a colourless liquid, causing acute pain and swelling wherever it spatters you. After this I find it sufficiently remarkable that as many as seven explorers out of a pleasure party of two hundred should have returned from an Amazon picnic."

"John Gilpin," whose interesting article on Tent Pegging appeared in our last issue, writes to us pointing out that he was mistaken when he stated that the correct width of a tent peg in competitions was 2½ inches—it should be 3 inches.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—Determined to make the season die hard, the members of the Jackal Club indulged in a paperchase meeting on Monday at Santa Cruz, when a couple of score were out. Mr. A. R. Burney, who knows more about the country than most, set the course, one of about six miles starting from the dry tank at Parla. Passing the white house, the paper led down Bomanwadi Valley, along the Andheri road and then over the water main past the finishing part of the recent Point-to-Point races. A couple of wall jumps mark the turning point, the first portion of the return journey being over rough going past the Backwater and along the Sahar nullah. From the parade ground of the 104th Rifles, however, all is plain sailing to the finish at the Kennels.

It was a sporting course, and the result came as a great surprise, as can be realised from the fact that two Arab ponies finished first. Mr. Kirke Smith's handy chestnut, Boxer, who ran second in the Point-to-Point, came in full of running from the old hero of many events in this country, Mr. T. D. Moore's grey Akbar Khan. Next were two big walers, finishing in the order which completely upset all recent calculations, Mr. G. C. Phillips's Twilight beating Mr. Thomas's War Cloud. Two ladies were next, Mrs. Capper on Adelaide and Mrs. Marshall on Lance. It should be mentioned that one of our best horsewomen, Mrs. McCausland, had hard luck in having to dismount on the Andheri road to tighten girths when going very well. Mr. G. K. Withers on Paddy was seventh, then Mrs. Priestley on Seagull, Miss Reed on Togo and Miss Lowndes on Black Beauty.

All were entertained with muchly needed refreshments at the Kennels, where the prizes were given away. The Ladies' Cup presented by the M. F. H., Mr. R. W. L. Dunlop, went to Mrs. Capper, and that for the gentlemen, presented by Lieutenant-Colonel G. H. Bull, to Mr. Kirke Smith.

The finals of the Western India Lawn Tennis Championship came off at the Bombay Gymkhana on Wednesday before a good number of interested spectators. Messrs R. D. England and W. Reid were the finalists and playing a hard and fast game gave an exhibition which at times was brilliant. As evident when he failed to win a game in his Marryat Cup heat, Reid has been very far from his old form, but improving of late he was expected to make a good fight of it. This he did, but his lack of condition told in the long run. Though beaten, 6—2, in the first set, he won the second so comfortably at 6—1 that he was looked upon as the winner. He won the first two of the next, but the strain of a hard fight told, and he was simply run off his legs, losing at 6—2.

England has been in remarkably good form at the right time. His serving with such a reach was very strong, and the way in which he smashed the ball whenever it bounced kindly was killing. The result is a reversal of Marryat Cup form altogether, and it is fitting indeed that this event should go to the Honorary Secretary.

Our Bangalore correspondent writing on the 2nd instant says:—"Sergt. C. Chapman of "G" Battery, Royal Horse Artillery, stationed at Secunderabad, has arrived here on a month's holiday and has issued a challenge to fight either Bombr. Bagge of "O" Battery, R.H.A., or Pte. Stevens 2nd (Q.O.) Cameron Highlanders in a ten round contest, for Rs. 500 a side and the largest purse offered. The fight to take place during the R.A. Tournament at Secunderabad, which comes off in about two months from now. Bagge last met Chapman here in September 1909 and beat him on points, a decision which Chapman and many others did not agree with. On Wednesday last Bagge defeated Stevens of the Camerons in a six round contest at the "O" Battery Tournament, and he (Stevens) was also defeated by Chapman at the IXth Division Tournament in the fight for the Championship Belt. Chapman is therefore more anxious to meet Bagge than the other man and it is hoped that he will take up the challenge. Since leaving Bangalore Chapman has earned fresh laurels in the ring, his latest being the middle-weight championship of the IXth Division and a match for Rs. 300 last week against Corpl. Melville of the 13th Hussars, whom he disposed of in six rounds. Chapman, some of your readers will remember, held the light-weight championship of South India for 1904-05 and 06 and the welter-weight championship in the two succeeding years."

Johnny Summers, the well-known English light weight pugilist who recently fought a drawn battle with Rudolph Unholy in Sydney, has just put up another draw—this time with Arthur Douglas, the South African. The fight was sensational, for, after having all the worst of matters in the earlier rounds Summers got to work and attacking vigorously and persistently managed to even things up. In fact Nearly Rs. 40,000 have now been subscribed towards the guarantee fund for sending an Indian cricket team to England in 1911. The latest contributors are Sir D. J. Tata, Bart., Rs. 3,000; H.H. the Aga Khan, Rs. 1,000; Messrs. Merwanji and Hormusji Cama, Rs. 500; Mr. R. D. Tata, Rs. 500; H.H. the Maharaja of Jodhpur, Rs. 500, and Mr. R. S. Ponivalla, Rs. 500.

The final decision whether or not to send a cricket team to England will be arrived at in August. Subscriptions have been guaranteed to the extent of Rs. 48,000. It is hoped that the Jam Sahib will consent to join the team in the event of the Committee finally deciding to send an Indian team to England.

There is talk of a cricket carnival being held in Bombay in September when, in addition to the Presidency Matches, there will be a team from the Spicy Isle, and a combination captained by His Highness the Maharajah of Patiala.

The Annual Garden Party of the members of the Sporting Union Club came off on Sunday, the 3rd of April last, at the Belghuria Garden of Pandit Chattoo Lall Misser.

Early tea was served to the members at the house of Dr. Ajit Mohan Bose M. B. (Edin.) in Circular Road.

Some 30 competitors started from here on the Walking Competition at 6-25 A.M. The winner, S. De, a boy of about 16, very creditably covered the distance of nearly 8 miles in fine style in exactly an hour's time, defeating the second, man S. Bose, by about 200 yards. N. Roy Chowdhury, who stood third, was about 120 yards behind the second man.

In the swimming competition there were 19 competitors, N. De stood first and J. Bose following him.

In the competition of "making faces," N. Roy Chowdhury was placed first.

The prizes for different competitions offered by the members of the club, were distributed amidst cheers by the sporting Maharaj Kumar of Mymensingh. About 130 members sat down to the sumptuous dinner arranged for the occasion, all thoroughly enjoying it as well as the various other entertainments successfully arranged.

The party broke up at 7 P.M.

The tie in the Ladies' Challenge Bowl (handicap) competition in connection with the Calcutta Golf Club was replayed last week end when Mr. W. S. Wallis beat Mr. T. E. Dent. The winner's score was 100—14=86 and Mr. Dent's 99—11=88.

The final of the Polo tournament for the Murree Brewery Challenge Cup was played at Rawalpindi on the 4th instant when the 10th Royal Hussars beat the 5th Northumberland Fusiliers by 8 goals to 2.

The annual general meeting of the Calcutta Kennel Club will be held in the Royal Exchange to-morrow at 5-15 P.M. Members are invited to make a special effort to attend.

The match for the Sculling Championship of the world between Arnst and Welch on the 2nd instant resulted in favour of Arnst by six lengths. Arnst is matched to meet Barry, the English Champion, at the International regatta on the Zambesi in July.

The International Marathon Race at New York on the 2nd instant was won by a Swede named L. Jungstorm, who completed the course in 2hrs., 34mins. 8⅘secs.—a new record.

Until recently the life history of the common English eel was unknown; even now it is not complete, but there is reasonable hope for assuming that the complete cycle from mature fish to the return of the young to the rivers will be, in the near future, established. The missing links are the age at which the parent fish arrive at maturity, the exact locality of spawning, and the actual ova as shed from the parent fish. They stay for several years in fresh water, but when nature calls them to perform those functions on which the perpetuation of the various species depend, they leave whatever water in which they have passed their period of preparation and find their way back to the sea. Once in salt water it is assumed that they swim a considerable distance from the bottom; hence none are taken in trawl nets. Their destination in the Atlantic appears to be the deep water beyond the continental shelf. There it is believed that they spawn and die, albeit they never return to the rivers. Here there is a gap in their history. The next that is known with certainty is that a strange marine animal called the Leptocephalus brevirostris, about three inches long and half an inch broad is the larva of the fresh-water eel. The girth of the Leptocephalus in proportion to its length does not at first sight suggest that it has any connection with the familiar elver, but in the course of about eight months—from April to November—a remarkable metamorphosis takes place. The little fish decreases in length and girth, and gradually it assumes an eel-like shape, but until the little fish starts feeding in brackish or fresh water it is transparent. The Leptocephali have been found to exist in the greatest number near the 500 fathom line opposite the mouth of the English Channel; hence when the elvers make for the rivers, those of the south and west of Ireland, of the west of England, and west of France are first encountered, countless millions often ascending in the spring. The Atlantic rivers, perhaps, receive the majority of the elvers, but some make their way through the channel to the rivers of Germany, Holland, Scandinavia, and Russia.

A London writer who recently visited the Horse show at Islington described it as a melancholy exhibition because he felt that the horse has been doomed by the forward march of the machine age, and in a little while will go along the road to Antwerp and oblivion. He goes on to ask who may doubt this. A British Minister for War has only recently declared that there is a shortage of 120,000 horses for the British Army. Alas, horses are no longer being bred, but turned into sausage meat! The dismal fact stares one in the face in the very streets of London. Every day they are disappearing more and more. On familiar cab-ranks they no longer cross their legs in picturesque insouciance. Listening at a club window one hears less often night by night that old delightful click-clack of a horse's hoofs and the jingle of cab-bells. In the Agricultural Hall at Islington there could be heard above the neighing of the horses inside, the ceaseless blaring and blasting of motor horns on motor omnibuses, the continual tooting and long-drawn chords of motor-cars. That trumpeting was by the heralds of the new age, of the machine age, of the horseless age. They were playing the dead march of the equine race. Later this same correspondent went to Olympia then to see the end of the story or rather the beginning of a new chapter It was the second exhibition of aeroplanes in England. There he recognised that the motor-car itself is an anchronism. For he asks, who will crawl along the roads at a miserable twenty miles an hour on a police-trapped route when any man may order a flying-machine and soar through illimitable pace on the racing wind.

In connection with the decision of the sub-committee of the Naval Committee of the American House of Representatives not to honour Rear-Admiral Peary till he submits proofs of having reached the North Pole, the views of Sir Ernest Shackleton are of particular interest. He is reported to have given the following opinion to Reuter's representative :—"Knowing Peary's record and the preparations he made, one cannot have the slightest doubt about his achievement. Seeing that he has already shown his observations to the National Geographic Society of America and that they have accepted his claim, it would seem that again to ask for proof implies distrust. But possibly the manner in which these proofs were asked for has something to do with the difficulty. As to the observations themselves, extreme accuracy of observations at the Pole, with the low altitude of the sun, cannot certainly be relied on, but they would suffice for all practical purposes. With reference to the doubt cast on the mileage accomplished by Peary and the statement attributed to me that 10 to 12 miles a day or slightly more were considered the limit of human endurance over Polar seas, I see no reason why Peary, who had his dogs with him, should not have done what he has claimed. The dogs must have done the pulling, for men could not. On my journey from the Pole with the wind behind me on five consecutive days I did 20, 18, 22, 26 and 29 miles. At the end of the march, when worn out after being out for 120 days, I did one march of 24 miles, and on the two following days traversed a total of 39 miles, and that without any sleep." This statement cannot fail to have considerable effect upon some of the members of the House of Representatives who declined to honour Peary until he submitted proofs. It is likely also to remove any distrust that the general public may have felt towards the explorer.

It is possible that Calcutta roads would cause less annoyance as regards dust if motorist here took the same interest in them as does the Royal Automobile Club in roads at home, who have recently issued a report in connection with roads. This report of the Dust and Dustless Roads Committee of the Royal Automobile Club on the work of the year 1909 is confined to the road question, on account of the fact that the weather has been so uncertain that it was practically impossible to hold trials for dustlessness. Up to the close of the season of 1908, the report states, the road authorities had not thoroughly admitted that motor traffic had become so important that the dust difficulty must be met by resurfacing the roads. Now, however, this is generally admitted, and a good start has been made in rendering English roads dustless in summer and far freer from mud in winter than had previously been thought possible. During the year most of the road authorities have bestirred themselves to study this question and to put down experimental lengths of dustless roads, and to treat greater lengths by palliative methods. The Committee have already obtained a considerable number of replies to a circular letter sent out to surveyors of the south of England, and from those received up to date, which relate to 4,513 miles of main roads in the Home and Southern counties, it is shown that the length of roads tarred and rendered dustless has increased from 393 miles, or 9½ per cent. in 1908, to 657 miles, or about 16 per cent. in the year 1909, so that if the same proportion has been observed throughout the kingdom it is to be expected that nearly 4,000 miles have been dealt with. This is surely an example to other countries which suffer from excessive dust on their roads.

At a recent scientific meeting of the Zoological Society at No. 3 Hanover-square, Dr. Leiper exhibited under the microscope living examples of a nematode worm, which he said played an important part in the causation of grouse disease. Dr. Leiper has bred this parasite experimentally, and found its development was quite analogous to that of the worm which sets up miner's disease, and, just as the larvæ of that worm swarmed in mines, so does the larvæ of this intestinal parasite of the grouse swarm on an infested moor. Within about two days the eggs develope into embryos, which on the eighth day metamorphose into active larvæ. Experimental larvæ were not killed by drying, for by forming cysts they will survive for several weeks, even though no water be supplied. Absolute disiccation, however, will kill them. Larvæ in the stage exhibited, when fed on a healthy grouse, produced the disease, and within four days eggs were found in the bird's dropping.

The open-air winter treatment for lions and tigers at the London Zoological Gardens has again given great satisfaction to the Society. Owing to the wet, sudden, and drastic changes in the weather and occasional snaps of frost, it is considered that the present winter has constituted the most severe test the animals have under-gone since the open-air treatment was started a few winters ago. At present the animals in the large open-air cage are in excellent health. Shelter-houses are provided in each of those cages, but the animals seldom take advantage of them, except to sleep on the roof. Throughout the sharp frosts in the early part of the year they prefered sleeping in the open.

From May to October of this year a great Inter national Exhibition of Shooting and Field Sports will be held in Vienna, under the high patronage of His Majesty the Emperor Francis Joseph I. This Exhibition, the first of its kind, is intended to illustrate the economic importance of hunting, and to show the great value of the work done by the hunter not only from a sporting standpoint but also with regard to trade and industry.

The knowledge that this exhibition is an accomplished fact and that it will be arranged on an extensive scale has awakened a keen interest among hunters of all classes and all countries. The thousands of applications which have been sent in bear sufficient testimony to the desire and determination which exist to show that the subject of hunting is a suitable one for an exhibition.

In this exhibition a separate space will be assigned to each country, where pavilions will be erected, which will be as far as possible imitations of shooting boxes, country seats, etc. These pavilions are intended to hold the hunting exhibits relating to sports, sent in by the countries taking part in the exhibition.

The exhibits will be divided into four divisions :—

(a) Hunting and all things relating thereto.
(b) Trade and Industry.
(c) Art and Industrial Art.
(d) Forestry.

During the time the exhibition is open International Congresses will be held, which will have to discuss various questions relating to hunting and other matters in connection therewith, so that in view of the international character of the exhibition, the Hunting Corporations of the whole world will have an opportunity of meeting for the exchange of ideas and mutual discussion.

Among the various international events, the following are worthy of special mention :—

Exhibition of Trophies—an Exhibition of dogs of all races and classes—an Exhibition of Horses and other animals used in Hunting—Shooting at Clay pigeons—a competition of Hunting Music including Horn blowing—Exhibition of living game—Representation of exotic Hunting—a Hunting Cinematograph, etc., etc.

The programme of the exhibition will further be enriched by various other attractions and arrangements. All further information can be obtained from : The General Commissary of the First International Shooting and Field Sports Exhibitions, Vienna 1910, Vienna, III, Lothringerstrasse No. 16.

The Superintendent of the Calcutta Zoological Gardens has favoured us with a copy of the recently published guide to the gardens which he has compiled the first book of its kind that has appeared in connection with this great institution since its foundation 35 years ago. Tastefully laid out the Zoological Gardens are one of the most popular resorts in Calcutta and the handbook under notice will supply a keenly felt want and will be much appreciated by visitors as a help in finding their way about the gardens. Much interesting information regarding the institution and its inmates is contained therein ; while an excellent plan of the grounds and illustrations from photographs taken by Messrs. G. Girard, G. Alexander and S. Ganguli help to make the compilation as complete as possible. The price is only 4 annas per copy and Mr. Basu is indeed to be congratulated on his efforts to make the Zoo a still more popular resort.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 18th March 1910.

The amiable desire to lead the simple life is extending I see ; and a very good idea it is for dwellers in our frightfully congested areas, provided it can be carried out decently, within reasonable limits and does not open its followers to a charge of being a crank. The latest idea is what I suppose will be known as the 'ealth 'ut if it becomes fairly general. It consists of a tent or some light sleeping shelter in the back garden. It is to figure conspicuously at an exhibition—the first of its kind I believe—devoted entirely to the interests of the open air and simple life cult. This show opens on the 5th proximo at the Cavendish Rooms and I observe that on the Committee are Messrs. George Alexander, H. B. Irving, Granville Barker, Bart Kennedy, Miss Dorothea Baird, and other leading stage and literary lights. Bien ; but why hold it in "rooms," what is the matter with the open air ? the setting seems inappropriate. Addresses will be given by prominent "simple-lifers," and the exhibits will range from nut foods and fruitarian diets to hygienic boots and underwear. The Lady Margaret Hospital will demonstrate their methods of dealing with sickness on simple natural lines. It ought to make for good, for anything that tends to counteract our idiotic penchant for stuffiness and the burrowing habit, as evinced in the large slice of our existence we spend under ground in tubes and basements, is to be commended.

I have just visited the Doré Gallery and have laughed enough to set me up in health and spirits till well over Easter. A room in this usually gloomy gallery has been turned into a veritable hall of laughter by the magic touch of that wizard of humour Mr. W. K. Haselden. Few people in England have not admired, the inimitable drawings he turns out every twenty-four hours in the Daily Mirror, or laughed at his wit, or appreciated the common sense underlying the fun, while marvelling at his phenomenal industry. The gallery of 241 drawings is a record of our daily and annual worries. He pictures the coalman and the rest of the early-morning noise experts, maddening the citizen in his bed ; and so proceeds through the day, cartooning our troubles with food, waiters, bores, business, and hobbies. He finally gets us to the theatre at night and draws our futile efforts to find the auditorium along the labyrinth of corridors, with mysterious doors that lead nowhere. The exhibition is also a history of all the recent social fads and "crankiosities." If it is on during the summer no Anglo-Indian home on holiday should miss it.

The most luxurious train in the world left Victoria Station on Tuesday on its trial trip to Dover. It is in future to be the boat train for the Continental service of the South-Eastern and Chatham Railways, and the company has spent £30,000 on the six Pullman cars which constitute a veritable palace on wheels. The artist who designed the £5,000 cars visited many of the ancient chateaus of France and castles in Spain in order to study the work of the old school of architects, and to reproduce their masterpieces in the form of railway carriages. The result is the production of a train, the interior of which gives the idea of a series of apartments transported from historic buildings. The passenger may wander from one end of the train to the other and pass through five different periods. Even at a speed of sixty miles an hour there is no oscillation on this luxurious train, the cars running as smoothly as a boat on quiet waters.

Two of England's most celebrated black and white artists died early in the week—Tom Browne and Herbert Railton.

All too soon—for he was still some years short of forty—ended the career of Tom Browne, the artist loved by that great public which never pays its shillings at the Academy turnstile. He came from the people. By his own account he was a milliner's errand boy at Nottingham before a firm of lithographers offered him a probationer's place at nothing a week. He left them for another firm which showed its appreciation of young genius by raising his pay to a weekly shilling, afterwards accepting him as a designers' apprentice. One of the late James Henderson's papers accepted his first comic drawing. James Henderson, it will be remembered, had the wit to secure Stevenson's "Treasure Island" when it went begging among the publishers.

From that time Tom Browne pushed his way into the London papers. He came to London, and London found a new note of humour in his merry drawings. He created Tired Tim and Weary Willie, cheerful tramps whose adventures delighted young Londoners year in and year out.

But the humorist worked seriously enough at his art. He joined the Langham Sketch Club, and, at five and twenty, had his first picture in the Academy. He became a member of the Royal Society of British Artists and added R. I. to his name in 1901. Painting by daylight, he drew his black-and-white work at night.

Tom Browne's first picture at Burlington House was painted in the Low Countries. Part of every year thereafter he spent in Holland, where he found the natives "born models," their vast breeches and sabots appealing pleasantly to his sense of the grotesque.

As becomes a popular artist, his work was often seen in the people's gallery of the street hoarding. "Johnny Walker" fixing his eyeglass as he strides is a genuine Tom Browne.

Comparison with Phil May—the one undoubted Old Master among popular favourites—would have been resented by honest Tom Browne.

But his tramps and his Chinamen, his Dutchmen and his London Rough-riders, make a jolly company, the brilliant work of a bold hand.

Mr. Herbert Railton died at St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington, on Monday night, in his fifty-third year, a victim of double pneumonia. He was the originator of the "pretty" school of architectural drawing, and for years was master of this unexplored field. His "Coaching Days and Coaching Ways," which appeared serially in "Harper's," was one of his most successful efforts.

For many years he was able to command a high price for his work. But his success begat a host of imitators, and with the growth of supply the prices came down. Still Mr. Railton always obtained the best prices in a declining market. The last time I foregathered with both these celebrities was at the Yorrick Club, when there were also present W. W. Jacobs, Plant—once a big stock jobber, now a variety artist—the actor-patriarch Odell and a few more Bohemians and lights of other days.

Obviously the suffragettes are intent on killing their cause. Yesterday they carried out their most disgraceful escapade so far. Seven misguided females hired a fire engine and raced through the principal streets of the West End, clanging a gong to attract public attention to their antics. They wore a parody of the uniform of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, with the additional encumbrance of a skirt. In accordance with the usual custom, the police on point duty held up all traffic for the fire engine, which was supposed to be hurrying to a fire, while all vehicles pulled to the near-side of the streets in order not to delay its passage. The engine was defaced by the purple, white, and green colours of the suffragists. It was driven so rapidly that the engine and its hysterical crew vanished before the police realised that they had been imposed upon. There was not time to turn the hose on the shameless hussies.

Mr. Fred Terry had intended to follow the successful run of "Henry of Navarre" at the New with the production of "The Popinjay," but the temporary retirement from the stage of Miss Julia Neilson has compelled the postponement of the new piece, and last night, Saturday, Mr. Terry revived "The Scarlet Pimpernel." It is avowedly intended to occupy the New only during the preparation of another novelty, but it may come to stay longer then is intended, for its popularity, to judge from its enthusiastic reception, shows no sign of waning. Mr. Terry, of course, resumes his original part of Sir Percy Blakeney, and his impersonation of the elusive baronet is as delightful in its debonnair grace and gay humour as ever, while Miss Miriam Lewes, to whose release for the occasion the consent of two managers and one author was necessary, took the part of Lady Blakeney, hitherto played by Miss Julia Neilson, with engaging charm. Mr. Horace Hodges, Mr. Malcolm Cherry, Mr. J. Carter Edwards, and other members of the original cast also took part in the revival.

Earnest students of the drama who are disposed to question the appeal of melodrama to huge masses of the playgoing public need only have gone to the Aldwych Theatre last Friday night to get their doubts dispelled. A packed audience exhaling unbounded enthusiasm, was there to applaud "The Bad Girl of the Family" on the attainment of the 100th night, which constitutes a record for melodrama at Aldwych.

The scene reminded one of those boisterous days of old when Mr. William Terris magnetised his Adelphi followers with "The Harbour Lights" and "The Bells of Haslemere." Thrill followed thrill and humour alternated with pathos in the most wonderful way. There were revolver outrages, attempted abductions, weddings with appropriate organ music, condemned cells, and escaped convicts. And all the while Miss Violet Englefield was proving in the most convincing manner that even in the bad girl of the family the flame of virtue only awaits a favourable opportunity to blaze forth in full splendour. Mr. Richard A. Green as the longsuffering lieutenant, Mr. H. Lane Beyliff as the villain, Mr. Herbert Landeck as the drily humorous moneylender, and Miss Maud Linden as the persecuted heroine, were all thoroughly at home in their parts, and "The Bad Girl of the Family" on its 100th performance went as merrily as the marriage bells with which the exciting drama closed.

Fashion is a fickle thing, if one may be allowed to make a really original remark, and there is a fashion in feeding as in everything else. Apparently the Strand as a "pitch" for restaurants has had its day. Not long ago the Adelphi Restaurant was acquired by the Queensland Government, and it is now the London office of that State. Now one hears that the Gaiety Restaurant has been offered to the Commonwealth Government. The Gaiety of many memories. Think of it !

"Markham of Mohistan" is a new Indian story I commend to your readers. It is a romance of Bombay and beyond and written by M. T. Hainsselin who has a good knowledge of the conditions of Indian life. Such an excellent military story should be founded on something stronger than the worn-out theme of one man taking another man's sin on his own shoulders, "all for the love of a lady." Lieutenant-General Lord Okehampton has an only son, "Mark, Viscount Belstone," and an only daughter, Lady Evelyn. For the love of this lady Captain John Markham, a promising young officer, allows himself to be considered guilty of Belstone's misbehaviour, and has to leave the army in consequence. He leaves Bombay for Mohistan, where rumour remains busy with his name, crediting him with heading an insurrection against the British. The end of such a story is easily guessed, but not the many adventures and hair-breadth escapes of the hero, whose feats, if somewhat improbable and melodramatic, are always breathlessly exciting.

THE VAGRANT.

Fishing.

THE ROMANCE OF SEAL FISHING.

THE remarkable seal-fishing industry of New Foundland is now in full swing, and on both the "front" and the "back" of the island the seal ships will be pursuing their sanguinary work. There is probably not in the world another enterprise like it; between 10th March and 30th April, 350,000 seals, valued at fully $1,000,000, are captured, so it is reported in the general average, by the twenty-four steamers and 4,000 men engaged in this pursuit. The last year was an eventful one in the history of this avocation. Three of the older captains—the last links of the by-gone days before steam was introduced—have been struck off the list, one by death and two by serious illness, and of the skippers now in charge all are men bred to the work since the steam revolutionized the business. Captain Arthur Jackman, the most renowned of the three, as a sealer, whaler, arctic voyager, and dauntless viking who lost four vessels under him but never lost a man, though he cruised from Greenland to the Levant, died early in February; Captain Samuel Bladford, the commodore of the fleet, who had been for fifty years master of a sealer, was stricken with paralysis in January; and Captain William Windsor, who at the age of sixty-seven started on a 200-mile journey on foot and by dog-sled to join his vessel, collapsed by the way and had to abandon the attempt.

Another circumstance which makes last year's seal hunt eventful was the loss of the Leopard on 8th March while going round from St. John's to Port Basque to clear for the fishing in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. She was beset by a midnight blizzard near Cape Race, enmeshed in the in-setting floes, and forced on the rocks, where she was broken to pieces. Her commander was Captain Robert Bartlett, who was in charge of Peary's steamer Roosevelt in the "Farthest North" quest last year, and he and his 103 men barely escaped with their lives. It illustrates the perils of this industry that, seven years ago, the steamer Hope, which had a famous Arctic record and rescued the Leigh-Smith expedition at Spitzbergen, was wrecked in the Gulf waters—the "back of the island"—in 1900, under command of his father, Captain William Bartlett, who, with 194 men, also narrowly escaped perishing with her.

The ships usually sail on 10th March, and after about forty-eight hours' steaming meet the ice-floes on which the young seals are born. Mothers and babes lie on the vast fields, which are rapidly carried south by the Arctic current to the warmer waters of the Grand Bank, where the young are taught to swim. At the inset of the current towards Labrador, where the floes are deflected by the currents along the northern coast of New Foundland, the sealers come upon their prey, and day and night are made hideous with the scenes that ensue. The mother seals fight gamely in defense of their young, but are driven off by the sealers' clubs, and the little ones are slaughtered in thousands. They are the best prizes, yielding the finest oil, and the skin and its adhering mass of fat are separated from the carcass (which has no value) and dragged to the ship.

The seals are found in immense herds or "patches," often covering a body of ice reaching beyond the range of vision, and it is not uncommon to find as many as 250,000 seals killed in one of these herds and brought into St. John's. The seals are to be found also in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and four of the ships go there to hunt them, but twenty of the fleet operate on the Atlantic seaface of the island, their range extending from Belle Isle straits to the Grand Banks, which area of ocean is more or less covered with floes and berg ice every winter, to the great annoyance of trans-Atlantic shipping.

The great slaughter of the young seals takes place between 12th and 24th March. The young ones are then too feeble to move, and there is no escaping the hunter's murderous club. Sometimes the mothers, alarmed at the noise which accompanies the onrush of the men, scramble to the blowholes in the ice by which they reach the water, and thus escape with their young. Their instinct is so perfect that a mother will leave her "pups" at sunrise and fish all day in the adjoining ocean depths, and though the ice has wheeled about at the mercy of the winds and currents, and though there are thousands of seals in the herd, she will make her way back to her own offspring in the evening. The fathers are less considerate, though they fish daily for the domestic circle and take their share of watching over the youngsters, but they will not fight for the little chaps as the mother will, and take to the water on the first appearance of danger. There is little sport and no danger in hunting the young seals, but there is one species of old seal, the "dog hood" (from a kind of cowl behind his head), which affords abundant excitement. These old males are very ferocious, and one will not only, when attacked, face two or three sealers, but will sometimes put them to flight by its savage rushes upon them. These brutes are usually shot with rifles, and often weigh four hundred weight. But they are too full of muscle for their fat to yield rich oil, and their skins are too heavy to have a prime commercial value, so they are never sought unless young ones are scarce, in which case they are better than none.

The industry is full of risks of the most desperate character, the men endangering their lives almost everyday they go abroad on the floes. In their pursuit of the seals it is a common thing for them to wander six or eight miles from their ship, and if they get benighted or meet an accident serious consequences frequently ensue. The most horrible tragedy in the history of the floes was that of the steamer Greenland in 1898. The ship was struck by a blizzard, while 180 men were hunting for seals over the icy plain. They were left helpless, while she was driven to sea. Two nights and a day elapsed before she reached them again, and when she did, she found that forty-eight of them had perished from hunger and cold. Some had gone mad from their exhaustion and been frozen stiff, a few had been killed by fragments of ice tossed about, while others fell into the ocean and were drowned. Of the total only twenty-five bodies were recovered, the others having found a grave in the depths of the sea. About fifty of the survivors were frost-burnt, and it was a sad looking ship which returned to port that year.

Fogs often shut down over the floes, and hundreds of men from the different ships may be isolated by them incapable of regaining their vessels, and being kept in this pitiful plight for a whole night, scantily clad, poorly provisioned, and having to burn their boats and clubs to keep themselves warm. If the weather is mild without snowstorms or frosts, they escape with no worse mementoes of their experiences than a scarred nose, ear or fingers, and not a year passes but some such incident in the progress of the fishery has to be recorded. But if it is tempestuous some lives are certain to be sacrificed, although such tragedies as that of the Greenland are, fortunately, very infrequent. Still, whenever men are adrift there is keen anxity on the ships, and poignant apprehension among the castaways until the fog lifts; for the sounds are so deceptive in this murk that men dare not proceed in quest of the vessels which are blowing, fearing to walk into the open channels between the floes, where drowing will be their fate.

The industry is one of the most arduous, and yet the most unremunerative, known to British colonists. The toil of the hunt, the exposures on the ice, the accidental submergings, the poor food, the insufficient clothing, the loss of rest, the discomforts on shipboard, the ice-blindness, the sickness brought on by lack of attention and of cleanliness—all these things combine to make the seal fishery a dread to all save those whom stern necessity forces into it. And this is not surprising when it is found that the most which a man can earn as his share if the ship was filled would be $80, though he might be a month or more engaged in the hunt, while the average return to all men in the fleet will not exceed $50 one year with another. These rates are increased one-fifth as an outcome of the concessions gained by a strike. The ships themselves sometimes fare as badly as the men.

BANGALORE GYMKHANA RACES.

Monday, 28th March 1910.

THE Gymkhana Race Meeting held this afternoon was unusually well attended and the programme afforded some capital sport. Major Stephen, 14th (King's) Hussars, who has undertaken the duties of Honorary Secretary, was able to attract entries from H. H. the Maharaja's stables, His Highness being in the station at present, and Colonel Beevor, our new sporting P. M. O., showed his colours for the first time on the Bangalore track. Of the seven advertised races one fell through and the six that filled provided the average number of starters in each race. Brigadier-General Cookson occupied the Judges box and Captain Campbell Ross did the starting. The Band of the 14th King's Hussars was in attendance and enlivened the afternoon, while Major Douglas Hamilton and officers of the 2nd (Q. O.) Cameron Highlanders were "At Home" to a select company of their friends. The attendance included H. H. the Maharaja and a party from the Palace and the Hon'ble Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Fraser and a party from the Residency.

It was more or less a day for favourites and there were no big upsets. Kismet won two races for H. H. the Maharaja; Jachus showed that he could win with a good rider on his back and pulled off the Mounted Infantry Race; there was nothing to beat Arth in the five furlongs Arab Handicap and Colonel Beevor secured a win with Erin's Pride in the Charger Race and Arth, who came out a second time, won the Ladies' Nomination Race, Mr. Woodhouse selecting him.

There were two bookies and a 2 rupee totalisator working but not much money changed hands at either, the last named being particularly left out in the cold. Baroda and Nippon were put up for sale after the third race but bought in at Rs. 360 and Rs. 260 respectively.

Following are details of the racing:—

THE OPEN PONY PLATE.—Winner Rs. 49, second Rs. 10. A handicap flat race for all ponies 14-2 and under. 5 furlongs.

RACING IN AUSTRALIA.

V. R. C. AUTUMN MEETING.

Thursday, 3rd March 1910.

ALL-AGED STAKES.—A sweepstakes of 10sovs. each, with 1,000 added; second horse to receive 200, and third 100sovs. out of stake. Weight for age. 1 mile.

Mr. J. E. O'Brien's ch c Malt King, by Maltster—Patrona, 3yrs., 8st. 6lb. ...	McLachlan	1
Mr. J. Baron's b c Prince Foote, by Sir Foote—Petruschka, 3yrs., 8st. 6lb. ...	McCarthy	2
Mr. J. Lynch's b h Dhobi, by Ranfurly—Laundress, 4yrs., 9st.	S. Cuslin	3

(Winner trained by Owner.)

BETTING: 5 to 2 on Prince Foote, 5 to 2 agst. Malt King.

Prince Foote was the first off, but at the end of a furlong Dhobi was leading by a couple of lengths. The other two were together. At the abbatoirs Dhobi was six lengths in front, but at the turn the pair were close handy. Dhobi was first into the the straight, but Malt King immediately took charge. At the distance Malt King was well clear, with Dhobi and the favourite on terms. Malt King finished well, and won from the favourite by two lengths, with Dhobi a length further astern. Time—1min. 43⅘secs.

Saturday, 5th March 1910.

CHAMPION STAKES.—A sweepstakes of 20sovs. each, with 1,000sovs. added; second horse to receive 200, and third 100sovs. out of the stake. For three-year-olds and upwards. Weight for age. 3 miles.

Mr. J. Baron's b c Prince Foote, by Sir Foote—Petruschka, 3yrs., 7st. 12lb. ...	W. H. Smith	1
Mr. H. Power's b h Pendil, by Bobadil—Penitence, 4yrs., 9st.	J. E. Pike	2
Mr. J. Wilson, Jun.'s br c Diabolo, by Bobadil—Ardia, 3yrs., 7st. 12lb. ...	S. Cuslin	3

(Winner trained by F. McGrath.)

Only three started.

BETTING: 9 to 2 on Prince Foote, 9 to 2 agst. Pendil.

In the early stages the race was a farcical one. They simply crawled along at length to length and half intervals to the abattoirs in the following order:—Diabolo, Prince Foote, and Pendil. Then the pace was faster, but was still very slow; but once they got into the straight they again went into a crawl, still in the same positions. At the riverside Prince Foote walked up to Diabolo and gained the inside berth, with Pendil two lengths away. Just as they reached the abattoirs the pace was put on in earnest, Prince Foote being in charge two lengths in front of Pendil. Half a mile from home Pendil was within a length of Prince Foote, Diabolo being three lengths away; but on entering the straight the favourite increased his advantage to two lengths. Pendil then went after Prince Foote, and got within half a length of him as the post was passed. Diabolo was a bad third. Time—8mins. 47secs.

BUREAU OF NATURAL HISTORY AND SCIENTIFIC TAXIDERMY,
DEHRA DUN,
United Provinces.

Depôt of Museum and Naturalists' supplies with Department for Ornamental Taxidermy. Feather Pictures of all India Game Birds made by W. M. Hutton.

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

THE TURF.

LINCOLN.

The flat racing season opened on Monday. After the wintry weather and a moderate jumping season, the renewal of racing on the flat came as a boon and a blessing to sportsmen generally. Lincoln is not one of the most comfortable or desirable halting places, and many racegoers make Liverpool their starting point; but the presence on the card of the first important an e-post betting race of the season—and a most important one this year—imbues the occasion with a special charm. With Monday's settling at the close, and the chief interest centred in the Handicap Day, one does not expect a very large muster; but with the weather turning out gloriously fine, the cold wind finding a conqueror in a hot sun—and between them they got the course in better order than we have seen it for years—a lot of folk from the Midlands had come into the city to swell an attendance that put last year's in a minority. Fields panned out well, and racing was excellent. Results:—

Though not a fashionable event, the Lincolnshire Handicap affords an annual source of pleasure to those who do but little racing, except at Doncaster, all the year round, and to whose credit be it said a more orderly crowd has rarely given the police less trouble in handling. The promise of the morning was borne out, although rain threatened early on; but in the absence of wind soft clouds hung lazily, and we got on very well without sunshine. Not a ripple ruffled the Fosdyke—a unique training ground for a scatter, and whose towpath affords such a comfortable back stretch to the Carholme; but yesterday the swans, floating double—swan and shadow—were disturbed by none of those lazy barges which give such a Dutch tone to the watery landscape. By trap or on foot the stream grew denser as time drew on, and people kept pouring on to the course by the Carholme road and down the hill from barracks and windmills till nearly the time set for the big race. Anent the attendance opinions are divided, but we have seen several larger ones. The going could not have been better, and the fields were of unwieldy dimensions, no fewer than 115 horses carrying silk during the afternoon. This number, though well above the usual here, falls three short of the record on the big Handicap day of 1907, when 118 animals ran during the day. Results:—

LIVERPOOL.

Busy mercantile Liverpool, like the Metropolis, covers such a big area that the advent of some thousands of visitors seems to make no appreciable difference, and as racing folk, unlike the football crowds that invade London on Cup day, restrict themselves to ordinary citizens' attire, the influx of persons is unnoticed. The hotel clerks could tell a different tale, and if the crowded state of the many excellent hostelries which the city can boast be a criterion, the attendance at the Spring Meeting will reach record. Early yesterday morning a sharp shower fell, the while it was cold enough for snow—regular Grand National weather, as a native remarked—but the breeze, though unpleasantly boisterous, banished rain, and put the finishing touch on the going, which has rarely if ever been in such perfect condition. FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

VISITING clubs have often fared well this season in the League competitions, but surely can they have done better than was the case in the First Division last Saturday, when four won and three drew, the only teams to gain victories at home being Aston Villa, Middlesbrough, and Notts County. Of these three the Villa and Notts stand first and second on the list, and, as Liverpool and Sheffield United both lost at home, the contest for the championship has become quite a runaway affair. Holding 40 points, with 11 more games to play, Aston Villa, indeed, hold a position that seems

.351 Caliber, High-Power Self-Loading Rifle

THERE is nothing to take your mind off the game if you shoot a Winchester Self-Loading Rifle. The recoil does the reloading for you, which places the complete control of the gun under the trigger finger. You can shoot six shots as fast as you can pull the trigger and without taking your eye off the sights. As this rifle is made with a detachable magazine, you can replace an exhausted one with a loaded one in a jiffy and continue shooting. No recoil-operated rifle but the Winchester offers this advantage. The .351 Caliber, High-Power Cartridge has great killing power, making it heavy enough for the largest game.

almost impregnable—allowing, of course, for the wonderful form the team are now showing. To catch them Notts County, who are 2 points behind as the result of three more fixtures fulfilled, would have to finish the season in wonderful style and the Villa would have to deteriorate in a manner there is no reason to anticipate. A score of 5—0 against Sheffield Wednesday demonstrates clearly enough how the Villa maintain their form. The Notts' team also won decisively, but they had against them a no more robust defence than that offered by Tottenham Hotspur. To increase the interest in the fight for chief honours it may be hoped that the Villa will drop some points so that Notts County may have a chance of equalling their splendid aggregate of points.

At this period of the season the struggle to avoid the last two places in Leagues often supplies the chief excitement, and at least eight clubs may be said to be in danger of going down to the Second Division. Needless to say, the three London clubs remain among this number. During the week Chelsea gained a point by drawing with Sheffield United and Woolwich Arsenal secured one yesterday, their match at Plumstead with Manchester United failing to yield a goal. A defeat at Everton on Monday was a serious matter for the Arsenal, however, and Tottenham Hotspur's failure yesterday means that the North London club are no better off in the matter of points. Only Bolton Wanderers have less points than Tottenham Hotspur and Woolwich Arsenal, and Chelsea are not much more happily placed, while defeat by 4 goals to 1 at Stamford Bridge from Sunderland can only mean that the team are out of luck and playing moderately. With the semi-finals for the Cup to be played a fortnight hence, it is interesting to note that Newcastle United could not draw at home with Bury, while Everton beat the Wanderers at Bolton. On his form the Newcastle team will experience very great difficulty in beating Swindon at Tottenham; and Everton's chance against Barnsley at Leeds looks much better.

By defeating Clapton Orient at Homerton Derby County materially improved their prospects of gaining promotion from the Second to the First Division of the League. A week ago they seemed to be in danger of being ousted as, although they held a lead of 2 points, they had fulfilled two more engagements than Manchester City, who were second. During the week Manchester City could only draw at home with Barnsley, but as they were opposed yesterday to Birmingham at Hyde Road, and Derby County were playing away, it appeared quite likely that the two clubs would change places. Derby County, however, succeeded in holding their advantage, but as Manchester City won the Midland team are still only a point ahead with one more game played. Leicester Fosse, who beat Glossop and so practically extinguished that club's chances of promotion, may press the two leaders very close before the season ends. On Tuesday next Derby County and Manchester City meet at Derby, and upon the result of that game much depends, for if they win Derby should be almost sure of going up. Fulham who were playing at Leeds, could only draw, but as they long ago ceased to be regarded as likely to finish either first or second the result was not a matter of much consequence.

The fight for the championship of the Southern League becomes more interesting as the season advances. A few weeks ago Queen's Park Rangers, Brighton and Hove Albion, Swindon, and Southampton looked like having the struggle to themselves, but by virtue of successive victories over Southampton, Croydon Common, Portsmouth, and Millwall, Crystal Palace have materially improved their position, and are now in the running. Of the five leading clubs, however, Queen's Park Rangers, who stand second, hold the best record, for though two points behind Brighton and Hove Albion, they have four games in hand, and have fulfilled fewer engagements than Crystal Palace, Swindon, and Southampton, who follow them in the order named.

ENGLAND VS. WALES.—Wales have given England many hard games in recent years at Association football, and last Monday's encounter at Cardiff Arms Park proved no exception to the rule. England scored the only goal of the match, and this just represented their superiority in a fast, even game.

Wales went off with rare dash and nearly scored in the first minute, Hardy being somewhat lucky to save. For some time the players failed to judge the pace of the ground and a lively ball, and many passes went astray. England put on pressure, and Fleming went through the Welsh defence, but shot wide. Parkinson was also at fault in shooting outside. Bond made good use of his chances, and from one of his chances, and from one of his dashes Holley should have scored, but shot wide.

The Welsh forwards were dangerous when they once got through the opposing halves, for they were quick on the ball and kept the game open. Evans distinguished himself at outside left, and one or two of his centres looked very dangerous. It was fortunate for England at this period that Crompton and Pennington were at their best. They kicked and tackled with fine judgment, and Hardy had little to do.

Granville Morris had a good opening, but his shot was a wild one. Meredith distinguished himself by sending the ball out to Evans, who gave Hardy a difficult cross-shot, which the goalkeeper saved. Play was fast and exciting up to the interval, which arrived with the score-sheet blank. The opening of the second half was tame, but the English forwards at last got really going. For some time Wales was hard pressed. Roose saved magnificently from Holley, Corners fell to England, and Roose again brought off a superb save when Holley headed in.

Wales had another lucky escape, for Parkinson went through and when meeting Roose pushed the ball forward. A goal appeared certain, but Hughes dashed up and cleared just as the ball was rolling in. Yet another corner fell to England, and from this Ducat shot hard into the net, Roose having no chance to save. Directly after the Arsenal man hit the post with a lightning drive. Holley shot through, but the referee ruled another English player offside. In the closing minutes Wales made a great effort to save the game. Crompton was penalised just outside the penalty line, but he cleared the free kick. Then in the last two minutes Wales forced a corner. Hardy fell on the ball in saving, and a tremendous scrimmage ensued, but Hardy stuck to the ball, and eventually the referee penalised Wales. Time was called a minute later.

The English defence was excellent. Hardy made no mistake and both the backs kicked with unerring judgment. Wedlock was ubiquitous in the half-back line, and on yesterday's form is practically certain to play against Scotland. Ducat was very clever, but he allowed Evans a lot of room in the first half. Bradshaw played quiet and effective football, and although beaten by Meredith several times he stuck to the famous winger with great pertinacity.

Except during twenty minutes of the second half the forwards were disappointing. The inside men kept the ball too close, Fleming and Holley being great offenders. Bond was brilliant in the first half, but he did not get many opportunities, and Wall was sadly neglected by his partner. Parkinson played a strong, dashing game and may keep his place in the team.

For Wales Roose made some wonderful saves and could not be blamed for the one goal against him. The veterans Blew and Morris were in great form at back Morris being particularly sure in his kicking and tackling. The halves were moderate, Hughes being the best man in the line. Latham was clumsy, his tackling being better than his kicking.

Meredith and Wynn were the dangerous wing in the Welsh attack, the former showing all his old mastery of the ball and accuracy in mid-field. Lot Jones was rather overshadowed by Wedlock, and Morris appeared very slow. Evans played splendidly in the first half, but gave a lame display after the change of ends.

Meredith equalled the record of W. Lewis (Wales) by playing his thirty-second international. No other players in any of the four nations have approached the wonderful record of these two players.

ENGLAND vs. FRANCE.—The Amateur Football Association International between England and France played at Ipswich, did not prove a great attraction, only about 1,500 people being present when the game began. The weather, however, kept many people away, for rain fell when the teams took the field. The ground was heavy and greasy on the surface. From the outset the English forwards proved far too good for the French defence. In less than ten minutes England was two goals ahead, S. H. Day and Gardner each having scored, and at the end of twenty minutes S. H. Day added a third point. The Frenchmen played pluckily, but were seldom dangerous. With a splendid shot Bache gained a fourth goal, and then the visitors improved in attack, their left wing bringing off one or two runs. A. P. Day, in goal for England, however, was not seriously troubled, and by brilliant football the English forwards scored twice more before the interval. S. H. Day and Bache were particularly good, and they each beat the French goalkeeper. When half-time arrived England had gained a lead of six goals to none.

The French defence was even more hopelessly out-classed in the early part of the second half. Less than two minutes from the resumption Maples and Bache finding themselves unmarked near the French goal shot through in simple manner, and as the result of a long run by the English forwards Gardiner kicked a ninth goal. The French front line were never allowed to break through the home defence, A. P. Day only had a few long shots to save. From a corner kick Bache scored a tenth goal, and then in quick succession Gardner put on two more points. In the last twenty minutes England added no fewer than eight goals, the Frenchmen being beaten to a standstill, and nearly every attack by the Englishmen producing a goal. In a period of a few minutes Gardiner, Maples, and Brisley each sent in a successful shot. Then Gardiner and S. H. Day gained the sixteenth and seventeenth points, and before the end Brisley—after a great run—S. H. Day, and Bache all got through. Results:—

RUGBY RULES

IRELAND vs. WALES.—Winning the toss Ireland played with the wind in the first half, the sun shining across the ground. Bancroft started the game and Lyle with a good punt found touch. For a moment Wales pressed, but the Irish forwards soon came away with a splendid rush, not being pulled up until the Welsh line had almost been reached. A scrummage was formed close up, and another followed a few yards in front of the Welsh goal posts. The tackling of the visitors was sound, and though their backs could make little headway the game was gradually carried to the centre, when Hinton kicking too hard the ball went dead. Wales were twice penalised for feet up in the scrummage and on the second occasion Hinton came very near kicking a goal. Then with the play in the Welsh half a penalty was given against McCormac, but the visitors did not gain much from the kick. From a mark Ireland found touch in the Welsh quarters, and so far the kicking of the Irish backs had been better than that of their opponents. Up to this point the game had practically been confined to the Welsh half, and then a strong attack was made on the visitors' line. Wales, however, just escaped and a penalty kick in a good position—taken by Hinton—was charged down. Still Ireland maintained the pressure and Lyle passed out to O'Callaghan, who however, could not get through. Wales were still kept on the defensive, and once when the ball went over their line they had a lucky escape, Bush kicking dead just in time. So far the play had all been with Ireland, the Welshmen not having settled down to their game. With the home forwards close on him Bancroft cleared in fine style, but directly afterwards Williams blundered and nearly let in the Irishmen. O'Callaghan made his mark near the touch line, but Hinton again failed to kick a goal. Watts obtained no real relief from the drop out, the game going on near their lines. A temporary stoppage occurred through an injury to Gronow and on continuing the Irish forwards dashed away. The ball was carried over the Welsh line and in the scramble McIldowie gained a try. Lyle, who took the kick, sent the ball over the bar but as it was touched in its flight no goal resulted. From the drop out the Welshmen were too eager and a scrummage followed in their "25." Directly afterwards there was another great burst by the Irish forwards and Ireland looked to have scored again, but a free kick was given to Wales for off side and so the visitors escaped. Half an hour from the start the Welsh backs at length got going and Gibbs transferred the played to the Irish "25." The Irish forwards soon had the play back in the visitors' half and Wales gained little from a penalty kick. Towards the interval Wales improved, Vile getting the ball out to Dyke, but the later was brought down by Lyle. Then a brilliant bout of passing by the Welsh backs ended in Williams scoring too wide out for Bancroft to convert. Thus at half-time the scores stood:—

Ireland	...	... 1 try.
Wales	...	... 1 try.

Smyth restarted and Bancroft returned into touch at the centre. McCormac made a fine kick three-fourths the length of the ground and the Irish forwards put in a strong rush. Wales, however, doubled back and Spiller and Williams got away. The latter kicked over Hinton's head, but the Irish full back succeeded in touching down. Following the drop out T. Smyth tried to break through and was hurt, but resumed. The Irish kicking continued to be excellent, but their forwards had lost some of their early dash. The Welsh three-quarters, however, were somewhat handicapped by the faulty passing of Vile. Ireland touched down from a long drop by Bush, and also from a second attempt by Bush to drop a goal. Then Hinton was collard, and Evans and Morgan got up. Taylor kicked, but failed to find touch, and Dyke dashing up scored for Wales Bancroft failing with the place kick. Just afterwards Wales were nearly in again, but after smart work by Gibbs, Williams passed forward. McClinton next put in a good dribble, and found touch with ten yards of the Welsh. A scrummage followed, but Bush afforded his side relief. However, Ireland were soon pressing again McClinton again finding touch. A keen struggle followed and though Gibbs made his mark the Irish backs had the better of the exchanges. Thompson dashed over the Welsh line, but had previously stepped into touched. The Irish forwards were still showing good form, and the play continued to be most exciting. Dyke relieved, and following a scrummage rush picked up, and dropped a goal, placing Wales seven points ahead: in the closing stages the game went all in favour of the visitors, whose backs now came into full play. Breaking away Bush made a clever run, and passed wide out to Williams, who, racing past O'Callaghan and Hinton scored wide out. A bout of passing ended in Gibbs going over, and in the last minute Williams added another try, Wales finishing the match in a truly brilliant manner. The final scores were:—

HOCKEY.

ENGLAND vs. IRELAND.—On Monday at Queen's Club West Kensington, the sixteenth annual hockey match between England and Ireland ended in favour of England by 4 goals to 1. The Prince of Wales was among the 2,000 persons who witnessed a fast and well-played game. His Royal Highness arrived about five minutes before the start and exhibited throughout the keenst interest in the match. Rain, which set in for an hour or two before the beginning and at intervals during the play, rendered the ground heavy. Ireland went off at a terrific pace and forced two corners in the first five minutes. The second was well placed by Foot and Ball scored. A few minutes later Morrison lost a fine opportunity, and then, after Darcus, the Irish custodian, had cleared, Shoveller sent a neat pass to Pridmore, who equalised. Sutcliffe next hit the post, but Ireland were holding their own and they forced three more corners without result. Then Shoveller dashed away, and, after a brief spell of attacking, he scored from an acute angle. There were two penalty corners against England, and from the second Keigwin saved brilliantly high up near the corner of his goal. A few minutes later Cox was unlucky in not equalising. He missed only by inches. Leighton, the English outside left, next made a dashing dribble. He left the opposing defence standing, and Darcus slipped in trying to clear. Pridmore rushed up and, although falling, managed to scrape the ball into the net, so that England led at half-time by 3 to 1. The Irishmen played with great dash all through the second half of the game. The halves and forwards combined splendidly, and if the latter had been able to press home their advantages when in the circle they must have equalised. Against two such fine backs as Clover and Goodman, the Irish forwards could not afford to throw away their chances. As it was, however, the visitors were unable to score, although they had considerably the more of the game. England, on the other hand, got through once again, but it was not till the second half was twenty-five minutes old that Shoveller, from a good pass by Twigg notched the home country's fourth and last point. Frequently the English defence was hard put to it to keep their charge intact. For instance, about a quarter of an hour after changing ends Keigwin had to save a couple of shots in quick succession. A minute or so later Clover had to save at the expense of a penalty corner. There was no result. Then England got away a good run by the forwards ended in Shoveller scoring. The remainder of the game was even, and the whistle went with England the winners by 4 goals to 1.

MURREE BREWERY CUP TOURNAMENT.

5TH CAVALRY vs. ROYAL ARTILLERY.—Only five teams entered for the tournament this year, the holders, the 12th Lancers being among those who were unable to put in an appearance. The match under notice was the only game in the first round and was very level all through the Cavalry eventually winning by 8 goals to 6. The Gunners drew first blood, scoring soon after the start, but the Cavalry were not long in equalising and after each team had scored a goal in the second chukker the Cavalry added a third point and took the lead; which they maintained for the rest of the game. The third chukker provided a goal to each team, but in the next period the Gunners went to bits and the Cavalry scored three further goals against them. The last two chukkers were well contested, Evans scored in the sixth and Sandys added two further points in the last: but just before the close Nutting got away and hit a goal for the 5th who thus won, as stated, by 8 goals to 6. Teams:—

Umpires:—Captains the Hon'ble K. R. Meade and the Hon'ble A. Annesley.

Semi-finals.

10TH HUSSARS vs. 5TH CAVALRY.—Played on the 30th ultimo, the Hussars winning by 5 goals to 1.

First Chukker.—The 10th rushed away and Annesley scored. Up and down play for the rest of the period.

Second Chukker.—A very even chukker. Nutting, who played a great game all through, was most conspicuous. Each team scored a goal.

Third Chukker.—The Hussars got on and hit a goal.

Fourth Chukker.—Fast and level play in which Holden was prominent. No score.

Fifth Chukker.—This was another pointless period. Both goals were visited in turn and Miltanke put in a brilliant run but his final shot went wide.

Sixth Chukker.—The 10th rushed away and a nice bit of combined play by Annesley and de Tuyll resulted in the latter putting through. The 5th were unable to score and were thus beaten as stated. Teams:—

Umpires:—Majors Sandys and Crawley.

5TH FUSILIERS vs. RAWALPINDI GYMKHANA.—The second match was between the above teams a closely contested game ending in favour of the 5th Fusiliers by 4 goals to 3.

First Chukker.—The 5th got away and scored on two occasions.

Second Chukker.—Up and down play: no score.

Third Chukker.—The Fusiliers attacked and registered another point. Both goals were then visited in turn without score.

Fourth Chukker.—The 5th continued to have the best of the game and compelled the Gymkhana to hit behind: nothing resulted from the penalty hit and though the Gymkhana goal was subjected to a hot attack there was no score.

Fifth Chukker.—The Gymkhana pulled themselves together in this period and attacking throughout notched two goals.

Sixth Chukker.—A spell of even play and then the Gymkhana got away and equalised, the chukker ending with the score 3 all.

Extra chukker.—The goals were widened and the game continued. The Gymkhana just missed scoring but the Fusiliers were more successful for they followed up a strong attack by putting the ball through and thus won by 4 goals to 3. Teams:—

5TH FUSILIERS.		GYMKHANA.

Umpires:—Major Sandys and Mr. Neilson.

Final.

10TH HUSSARS vs. 5TH FUSILIERS.—The final was played on the 4th instant in windy weather. The Hussars steadily piled up their score out of several shots at the Fusiliers' flags, most of which were carried out wide by the wind, and at rare intervals the Fusiliers invaded the Hussars' end, where they twice scored. At the conclusion of the game the Hussars won by eight goals to two and Lady Wodehouse returned the cup to their possession. Teams as before.

Umpires:—Major Hay and Captain Truman.

CUSTOMS vs. SIBPUR COLLEGE.—Played on the 30th ultimo the Customs being lucky to draw at one all: the Sibpur, College netted a second time, the point being disallowed by the referee.

Y. M. C. A. (AM.) vs. E. I. R.—These teams met on the Association ground on the 30th ultimo, the Railway winning by 2 goals to 1.

RIFLE BRIGADE vs. MEDICAL COLLEGE.—This match on the 30th ultimo ended in a win for the Rifle Brigade by 2 goals to 1. The Medicos made determined onslaughts but all attempts to score were frustrated by Maddea, the military custodian.

RANGERS vs. SIBPUR COLLEGE.—After tying with the Customs the Sibpur team met the Rangers on Thursday last and after a fine display of hockey made a draw of it—each team scoring a goal.

CALCUTTA vs. Y. M. C. A.—Played on the Calcutta ground on Saturday, the home team winning easily by 5 goals to 1. Greig (3), Cole and Lyon scored for Calcutta and Price for the Young Men.

CUSTOMS vs. E. I. R.—The Customs had another runaway victory when they met the Railway on Saturday and defeated them by 9 goals to nil.

SIBPUR vs. Y. M. C. A. (AM.).—Played on Saturday last, the Engineering College winning by 4 goals to 1.

RANGERS vs. DALHOUSIE.—This match on Saturday ended in a win for the Rangers by 5 goals to 2 after some fast and interesting play.

ST. XAVIER'S vs. B.-N. R.—Playing on the Rangers' ground on Saturday the Railway had to admit defeat by St. Xavier's by no less than 11 goals to nil, the largest score recorded in "A" Division of the Tournament this year.

ROVERS vs. Y. M. C. A.—Played on Monday the game ending in a win for the Rovers by a goal to nil.

RANGERS vs. ST. XAVIER'S.—On the Rangers' ground on Monday the home team defeated the Park Street boys by 5 goals to 2.

B.-N. R. vs. RIFLE BRIGADE.—The B.-N. R. created a surprise when they beat the Rifle Brigade last Monday by a goal to nil.

CALCUTTA vs. CUSTOMS.—These teams met on the Calcutta ground on Monday, the home team, who were without Bocquet, being beaten after a fast and interesting game by 2 goals to nil.

DALHOUSIE vs. RIFLE BRIGADE.—This game which was stopped by the storm on the 21st ultimo was replayed on Tuesday when the Dalhousie team were victorious by 4 goals to 1.

"B" DIVISION.

MOHAN BAGAN vs. HASTINGS.—These teams replayed their fixture on the Presidency College ground on Wednesday, when a pointless draw was the result.

CUSTOMS vs. 27TH PUNJABIS.—A very evenly contested game between these teams on Friday ended in a win for the Customs by 2 goals to 1.

WANDERERS vs. 2ND P. V. R. B.—Played on the 2nd P. V. R. B. ground on Friday, the game resulting in a draw of 2 goals all.

MEASURERS vs. CORPORALS' XI (RIFLE BRIGADE).—On their own ground on Friday the Measurers won by 4 goals to nil.

CUSTOMS (B) vs. SPORTING UNION (B).—These teams played on the Customs' ground on Monday and the game resulting in a win for the home team by 2 goals to nil.

MOHAN BAGAN vs. 2ND P. V. R. B.—Played on Monday, resulting in a win for the Mohan Bagan team by 2 goals to 1.

SIBPUR (INDIANS) vs. LA MARTINIERE.—This postponed game was played on Tuesday, resulting in a win for La Martiniere by 3 goals to 1.

MOHAN BAGAN vs. 7TH PUNJABIS.—Played on the Presidency College ground on Tuesday, ending in a win for Mohan Bagan by a goal to nil.

THE HOOPOE.

THE hoopoe, being unique in appearance, is one of the easiest birds in the world to identify. Once described it is never mistaken; once seen never forgotten. Its more remarkable characteristics are the crest of cinnamon and black, which, ordinarily closed up and directed backwards like that of a cock pheasant expands like a lady's fan whenever the bird is surprised or alarmed, also at the moment when it alights; the long slightly-curved-snipe like bill; the very short legs, an unusual feature in a long-billed bird; the small cinnamon-coloured head and neck; and the striking coloured wings and tail composed of alternate bars of black and white.

Quite apart from its appearance the hoopoe is a most delightful bird to watch, because it can be observed without effort by a person sitting in the verandah. It is a bird of the garden, and of the open parts of the garden. In Europe it is said to be a bird of shy and retiring disposition—an elusive creature. In India it is the very reverse. It spends the greater part of day seeking its quarry on the grass plot that does duty for a garden lawn. It will allow a human being to approach within a few feet of it before it attempts to move away. It takes its daily dust bath in the middle of a frequented road. In the early morning it likes to perch on an exposed branch of some tree and give forth its characteristic note, which is not unlike that of the Coppersmith (Xanthiæma hæmatocephala), but less loud, less metallic and more gutteral. To my mind the syllables ook—ook—ook, uttered softly and in rapid succession, represent its note as nearly as possible. Others consider that the Hindustani name Hud-Hud expresses them more nearly. Like that of the Coppersmith, the note of the hoopoe is not easy to locate emanating as it does from deep down the larynx; moreover when calling, the bird bobs its head up and down, this tends to diffuse the sound. What an ornament to an English lawn a couple of hoopoes would be. How beautifully their cinnamon, black and white plumage would contrast with the emerald grass. But, alas, not one person in a million has seen hoopoes disporting themselves in an English garden, and this because of those peculiarly foolish and exasperating people who, imagining themselves naturalists, shoot every rare bird that visits the shores of Albion, and then, by way of adding insult to injury, brag about their exploit in the Press. The European hoopoe (Upupa epops) is a migrant. Every March it comes northwards from Africa and thousands spend the summer in Spain, a few in France, and some would leave the English summer were they permitted so to do by the "Collector." Abuses linger long after attempts are made to stamp them out, but I have every hope that the New Collector's Club inaugurated by Messrs. Kay Robinson, Finn and myself, the members of which collect only natural history photographs and paintings, will in time bring home to the public how unscientific and idiotic is the shooting of rare birds This and the wearing of birds corpses by women in their hats are relics of the spirit which promoted the Red Indians of old to collect and wear human scalps. The Red Indian has given up the practice and is, in this respect, in advance of some of his European brethren. A pretty woman does not need to deck herself in bird's feathers to look well, while no amount of borrowed plumage will cause an ugly woman to look anything but plain. Indeed the corpse of a beautiful bird in a hat often serves to call attention to and accentuate the ugliness of the wearer of the hat. But let us leave this unpleasant subject and return to the hoopoe.

The birds we see in India mostly differ slightly in appearance from the hoopoes of Europe, so that ornithologists have constituted our Indian birds a new species—Upupa indica. It would perhaps be more correct to regard the two kinds as mere races. The main difference lies in the fact that the European form has a patch of white on each feather of the crest between the cinnamon and the black tip, but as nearly every Indian bird has more or less white in the crest it is not easy to draw a line between the two.

Spring is the season of courtship for hoopoes, as for most other birds. One method of display is for the individual that wishes to attract a mate to run along as fast as its short legs will carry it with crest fully expanded, in full view of the object of its desire. I believe that both sexes "show off," but of this it is not easy to be certain, because there is absolutely no external difference between the cock and the hen hoopoe.

Beautiful as the hoopoe looks on the ground, it is more at home in the air, hence courtship is conducted largely on the wing.

A hoopoe when flying about in a garden, now dipping down almost to the ground, now rising to clear a bush looks, as Colonel Cunningham well expressed it, like a great butterfly, and certainly does not convey to the observer the impression that it is a powerful flier. Yet it is is an expert aeronaut.

A hoopoe, when chased by a trained merlin, gives a unique exhibition of the magic of wings. The merlin, racing after the hoopoe, gains on it hand over fist, but, in less, far less, time than it takes to tell, the hoopoe on the approach of its pursuer has swerved a couple of inches, and the merlin has dashed past it having just missed its quarry. Nothing daunted, the merlin turns and makes another dash at the hoopoe, with the same result. Meanwhile the hoopoe is pursuing its way steadily towards some tree, where it knows it will be safe. This haven of refuge it almost invariably reaches without scathe, although the merlin has stooped at it perhaps a dozen times. To the onlooker that hoopoe appears to have had in the course of four minutes more hairbreath escapes than one of Stanley Weyman's heroes has in a lifetime. But, so clever is the hoopoe on the wing, these apparently hairbreath escapes are nothing of the kind, they are merely a display of nice calculation on the part of the hoopoe, combined with marvellous powers of flight.

Wonderful are the aerial manœuvres, the gimations, the twistings and turnings, the tricks in the air of the courting hoopoe. A professional flycatcher when chasing the nimblest quarry could not do better.

The nest of the hoopoe is always in some natural hollow and this hollow almost invariably has the tiniest of apertures. I believe that a hoopoe could, if put to it, squeeze through a signet ring. The hoopoe is a near relative of the hornbill, and their nesting habits are very similar. The hornbill, thanks to the enormous beak requires a large passage for egress, and as it likes to nestle in private, the species has the habit of closing up the greater part of the orifice after the hen has entered it. In this she remains walled up during the whole period of incubation. The hen hoopoe does not find it necessary to close up any part of the aperture leading to its nesting chamber; but nevertheless, rarely, if ever, leaves it when incubating. The cock brings her all the food she requires. The hollow in which the hoopoe last deposits its eggs may be in a building or a tree, and is often quite close to the ground. I once found a hoopoe's nest within two feet of the ground in a mud wall, and another within four feet of the ground in the trunk of a sheshum tree. Mr. A. G. Cardew recorded a nest in a drain in the government offices at Ootacamund. The bird displays no caution when approaching its nest. It will fly into it when a human being is standing a few feet away. The nest as may be inferred from the smallness of the entrance thereto becomes very dirty and unsavoury long before the young birds are able to leave it. The Indian hoopoe displays a truly oriental disregard for sanitation. The young birds, when they emerge from the hole in which they spend the first days of their existence, literally stink. The eggs of the hoopoe are very long in shape and of a greyish or stone colour, more or less tinged with green.

Travel and Adventure.

A BACKWATER TRIP.

IN THE "LAND OF CHARITY."

FEW places in this country afford so much pleasure to the tourist and few places are so little known and so greatly appreciated as beautiful Travancore. This old-world state, hidden away in the southernmost recess of India, possesses an interest all its own. It is par excellence the land of palms, witchcraft and of mystics. Here too, people live in Arcadian simplicity far from the seductive influences of commercial and political strife. Travancore is beyond doubt the most conservative spot in India though its administration is entirely beyond reproach. The people are still wedded to old time prejudices and ill-fangled ideas and the Western spirit is permeating but slowly. The physical attractions of the country are indeed such as to merit poetic eulogy for all time. Nature is exceedingly beautiful here. Travancore with its extensive water communication, its beautiful lagoons, its wealth of tropical scenery, the quaintness of its people and its perennial freshness holds quite a unique position, the only place that can bear any comparison with it being Kashmir. But Travancore goes one farther, and that is its magnificent forests. Like Mysore the state forests are a glorious feature of the country and the big game hunter will find abundant sport to satisfy his energies throughout a lifetime. Tigers and leopards abound plentifully in the interior of the hills and enormous-sized kathis such as only Travancore and Mysore could boast of may be had always. It is doubtful whether the forests of Bengal and Assam can ever compete in this line with those great states. Then there is the sambhur and numerous species of wild goat and deer and much to be had in the way of pigsticking, while the lakes and rivers afford fishing of a most interesting kind. The sardine is also plentiful—so plentiful both in Travancore and Cochin that it is not an uncommon sight to see great boatloads being capsized by the police. Indeed so great is the yield of fish from the waters of these two States that—and it may seem paradoxical to say so—fish is even used as manure! Large quantities of oil are also extracted.

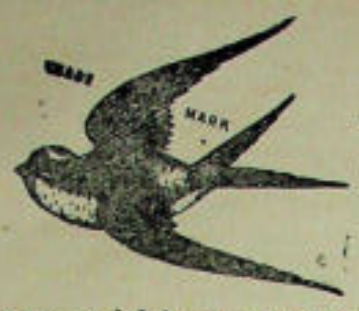
To such a spot a party of us resolved on a pleasure trip some time ago. We left the Madras Central Station in the evening in comparatively fair weather and after a somewhat tedious run alighted at Shoranur the following noon. Entraining again we continued our journey by the Cochin State Railway and here we became acquainted for the first time with real Malabar scenery. It is not hard to say what Pierl Loti and impressionists of his type would say on beholding a green, smiling country like Malabar, so different in all its aspects from every other part India. It is not the Hindusthan of which Kipling and his fore-runners speak. It is not the country of Kim, nor is it in any way like the parts about which novelists build fanciful pen pictures. To compare Malabar with the rugged tableland of Tibet or the mountain fastnesses of Afghanistan would even be a terrible travesty of truth. Malabar stands apart from all these regions. I overheard a cautious Irishman once say that it had a Killarney-like appearance about it: may be. It would occupy too much space to enter into anything more than a mere passing notice of the place. The train route lay in a zig-zag position through miles and miles of picturesque scenery, enclosed on both sides by great hills occasionally relieved by beautiful pastoral country. Towards sunset the train reached its destination and we were shaking off the Beach dust from out feet. We were now in Ernaculam, the prosperous capital of the Raja of Cochin. The whole place bore a peculiarly quaint aspect. Beyond one or two railway officials being accoutred in coat and pants all appeared as primitive as ever, the only garment seen on the person of anybody being a waist cloth, very like a sloongi, reaching as far as the knees, almost a fit study for Herr Teufelsdrosh. Men, women and children seemed to discard clothing as much as possible. Almost every other man you saw in the street was frightfully disfigured with a swollen leg. Some had both legs deformed to an enormous size. This I believe is due to bad water for which Ernaculam is notorious. It is a great pity that nothing apparently is being done to mitigate this awful scourge—for a scourge it rerily is. In these days of congresses it would not be doing too much to investigate this matter and ameliorate as much as possible the condition of the people. But I am digressing.

Leaving the railway station at Cochin we proceeded to the dak bungalow with our servant bringing up our largage in the rear in push-pushes, a peculiar mode of conveyance. The following morning was devoted to exploring the little town and visiting places of interest. The dak bungalow which we made our temporary abode is situate on the bank of the backwater connecting Cochin with the sister State. From here could be seen hundreds of tiny craft floating in the sparkling water while boats of a larger size turned and tossed merrily. The vallum is a popular journey boat. In appearance it resembles the Masulah boat which is common in the Madras harbour, the only difference, however, being the former has a thick awning of matted hemp and a huge sail. These vessels carry from ten to thirty passengers and they accomplish long voyages. They are a cheap mode of travelling, but very slow. They may with advantage be utilised for pleasure parties though, if they are to be preferred to the more up-to-date sailing boats which ply form Cochin, Quilon, Alleppy, Trevandrum and all the ports in Travancore and Cochin. Another kind of boat which is very common on the Cochin-Travancore backwater is the scooped boat carved out of the trunk of great trees. These are paddled along the stream in much the same way as the wild Indians of America paddle their canoes. Cochin possesses not a few species of fish; among these is a peculiar kind closely resembling the trout. Boatmen may be seen often at their wits end when carrying a single monster fish weighing from five to eight maunds in a boat. Sometimes a fish is cut in two and only one half placed in a boat for want of room.

One most interesting feature of life in Cochin is that men, women and children take to the water as easily and (I think) as naturally as a water duck. It is not a rare sight to see a woman getting through the water to land with a load on her head. Among the many beautiful buildings which Cochin boasts of the Residency is perhaps the most picturesque, situated as it is on the backwater between Ernaculam and British Cochin. There is an annual regatta held here under the auspices of the British Resident, which draws society from all parts of the state. It is more than a regatta—a carnival if one may style it. Every year this event is looked forward to with the greatest interest and the natives crowd in very great numbers to see the sahebs in their "play." There is also a place of Roman Catholic pilgrimage close by called the Palutri chapel which is visited by thousands of people from both States. It is a sort of Lourdes and many miracles are supposed to be worked at this shrine. Crocodiles and alligators swarm all over the country. These "leviathans" can be seen in every lake, river and canal in all sizes and colours, and are a dangerous asset to the place. But to return to my theme.

At 5 o'clock the same evening having engaged the biggest vallum lying in the jetty we set sail for Travancore, or, to call it by its popular name, the Land of Charity. Numerous smaller vessels passed us as we glided along the lake. Steam packets bearing passengers from Trivandrum and other places snorted and ploughed gaily. The journey was exceedingly pleasant throughout, excepting once only when we nearly met with a disaster on the Vembanad Lake—the Bay of Biscay of Travancore. The first and the last thing that obtrudes itself on the traveller's eye is the endless forest of cocoanut palm. Countless trees grow on the banks of the water which the natives use to great advantage. The scene which is intensely delightful at first soon becomes monotonous. Hundreds nay, thousands of little huts nestle under these palms where groups of women could be seen rhythmically beating out the coir to the tune of quaint native melodies. The trees yield an excellent drink called toddy. The natives derive manifold benefits from the cocoanut. They erect distilleries by which the toddy is made a regular trade, while the cocoanut is turned to copra and the husks are made into rope. Huge bundles of husks weighing many tons may be seen carefully netted floating down the stream and the men comfortably enconced on the top or fast asleep. The people on the banks of the backwater mostly subsist on tapioca which grows plentifully there.

At dusk all is calm except the steady dip, dip, of the oars of the boatmen, the demoniac laughter of the owl or the noise of the cicada in the trees on the bank. Now and again we could hear the barking of a dog in the distance village or the beating of a native dram, and anon we could see a blaze of fire light. The boatmen as they paddled along chanted their hymns to the Blessed Virgin. Most of them are Roman Catholics and wear a diminutive scapulor round their necks. The greater part of our journey was done in absolute darkness. All along the banks you detect a pungent odour, and the fireflies one sees on the backwater of Travancore are a sight to be long remembered. Myriads of these flit through the air in the inky blackness of the nights Birds too there are of all kinds, of many shades and hues, and the minas are much larger in size than the Assam birds. Many rare specimens are to be seen in the splendid Zoological gardens which the Maharajah keeps at Trivandrum. Birds are not the only interesting subjects of interest too there, for His Highness is credited with the fact that the State zoo in the Capital is the finest in India and one of the finest in the world and contains all manner of beasts many of which are captured from the State forests.



The following morning found us in Alleppy in high spirits in the midst of a busy population. Alleppy with its picturesque lighthouse, landing place, thickly populated streets and motley crowd of buildings is the busiest town in the State and is undoubtedly the most cosmopolitan spot in Travancore. We breakfasted at a local merchant prince's house that day, witnessed a nautch kindly provided by a native gentleman of the place and after indulging in much conviviality in which both of our friends joined heartily we bade farewell to Alleppy. It is a great pity that business prevented us from visiting the Capital or Quilon, as it has always been my desire to see the mahogany and sandal forests and the huge elephants which are to be seen at work especially in those towns. One more sight which struck us as very curious was the clever way in which tree climbers performed feats of climbing. I do not allude to the ordinary toddy extractor who may be seen in many other parts of India. I am talking of the men who get up lofty areca nut trees. The tree is so pliable that the nut finder after getting all the available nuts from one tree sets it in swinging motion so as to bring it within reach of the next tree. While in this position the man calculates the space with a mathematical exactitude the same as a trapeze performer in a circus, and, with a monkey-like agility, quickly bounds away to the other tree, and this at a height of forty or fifty feet. In this way he finishes his work with a whole grove of trees within the area. This is one of the cleverest feats to be seen in Travancore. There are many other things which would interest the traveller, and as I have said, a native of Calcutta or Bombay would find himself a stranger in a strange land when he gets to that old-world State, and he will find himself muttering Hamlet-wise that there are more things in this part of the country than are dreamt of in the geography.

By 8 o'clock that evening we were in Ernaculam once more. The dak bungalow cook gave us not too recherche a dinner, and not to be behind the rest of his million confreres in other parts of India he with unfailing punctuality presented each of us with the usual tinselcoated lime on a silver, and we had allowed ourselves to be immolated on the alter of bakseesh.

Although we did not see all the places we had originally intended to visit, we were nevertheless pleased with the little that offered itself to us. This was some time ago, and ever since I took into my head to set my impressions down on paper my thoughts irresistibly go back to the beautiful lagoons, to the long winding canals, the swollen rivers and the exquisite tropical scenery, and above all to the staid little dak bungalow nestling under the cocoanut palms on the Cochin backwater.

THE SOUTH POLE.

THE announcement that the Americans have entered the race for the South Pole has quickened the interest of Englishmen in Antartic exploration. The British expedition which is fitting out to leave this year in an attempt to reach the South Pole will be under the command of Captain Robert Scott, who had charge of the National Antarctic Expedition of 1900-04; and the American enterprise will be conducted by Commander Peary, the discoverer of the North Pole. It is satisfactory to find that perfect good feeling exists between the two explorers. Commander Peary has written to Captain Scott expressing "appreciation of your big, manly, characteristic attitude as shown in your letter." Captain Scott in reply thanked Commander Peary for his "generous" letter and suggested that there should be some co-operation between the expeditions in the matters of meteorology and magnetism.

There is an especial reason why the credit of first reaching the South Pole should belong to Great Britain. Good work has been done in Antarctic exploration by Borchgrevink, a Norwegian, and Dr. Nordenskiold, a Swede, the United States can claim Captain Wilkes, while France is proud of Dr. Charcot but it will be universally conceded that since Captain Cook made his celebrated second voyage in 1771-5, the honours of Antarctic discovery have lain principally with Great Britain. Cook reached 71 deg. 10 min. south latitude and it was not until 1841 that Sir James Ross beat this record. Since then Captain Scott and Sir Ernest Shackleton have both lessened the distance to the South Pole. Captain Scott hopes to start from England in June with 25 men of his crew. When he leaves New Zealand in November he will be accompanied by another 28 men, who will form the landing party. He intends to land six men in King Edward's Land at a point where it will be easy to take meteorological observations. In January the huts will be erected and large quantities of stores landed. The party will then be about half way through the Antarctic summer. In February or March Captain Scott will lay out the depots and set out south, taking with him twenty ponies, twenty-five dogs, and motor-sledges which are now being built in England. He hopes to carry provisions 200 miles to the south during that season, and then the expedition will settle down for the winter. At the end of August the sun will appear once more, but it will be still too cold to travel, and the main journey will probably start in October. They will have to cover over 800 miles, and the rate of travel will not be more than fifteen miles a day. It will be the middle of December before Captain Scott can get to the South Pole and he wants to arrive there on Midsummer Day. He expects to get back home in February or March of the following year.

Commander Peary's steamer the Roosevelt will leave America for the South about 1st September under the command of Captain Bartlett; and the expedition, consisting of no fewer than twenty or more than twenty-five men, will reach Punta Arenas in the south of Chili about 1st December. Thence a course will be steered almost due south, the hope being to push forward as far as the 80th parallel, where the Antarctic nights of April, May, June, July and August will be spent. Commander Peary does not propose to use Manchurian ponies or motor-sledges. In his opinion dogs are the best means of traction and the expedition will rely solely on them. Half a dozen dogs which he took to the North Pole will form the nucleus of the South Polar pack which will be recruited in Labrador or Greenland. At one time it was feared that an attempt would be made to forestall Captain Scott and establish the base of the American expedition on the shores of McMurdo Sound, the headquarters of the British expeditions which have done so much in the last decade to extend knowledge of the geography of the Antarctic regions to the south of New Zealand.

Commander Peary's proposal that the American expedition should work from a base on the opposite side of the Antarctic area affords welcome evidence of a desire not to trespass on the sphere marked out by Captain Scott as his field of operations. The Antarctic regions on the side opposite to McMurdo Sound are occupied by the Weddell Sea, where Dr. W. S. Bruce on board the Scotia discovered Coats Land in 1903. Nearly two years ago Dr. Bruce announced his intention of seeking to reach the South Pole from Coats Land as a base, and Sir Earnest Shackleton has also had under consideration the advantages of making Coats Land the base of his next Antarctic expedition. If Commander Peary's scheme is carried out the British and American expeditions will be engaged simultaneously in seeking to reach the South Pole from opposite sides of the Antarctic regions. Authorities on the question express the opinion, however, that there is not much prospect of the American explorers winning the race for the South Pole under these conditions. Coats Land is still virgin territory, and the most southerly point to which it has been traced is just south of the 74th parallel. An American expedition with its base at this point would, as Commander Peary says be about 2,000 miles from the base of a British expedition with its headquarters on the shores of McMurdo Sound. It is not quite correct, however, to say that two camps would be at approximately equal distances from the Pole. Between the most southerly known point of Coats Land and the South Pole is a distance of about 1,100 statute miles, while between Cape Royds, on McMurdo Sound, and the South Pole is a distance of about 850 miles. Moreover, while the American explorers will be adventuring into an absolutely unknown region the track to the South Pole from McMurdo Sound has already been traced to within about 100 miles of its objective. This will be of immense advantage to the British expedition. On the other hand, it is to be pointed out, as Captain Scott observes, that while the distance the Americans have to traverse may be considerably greater, the facts, so far as they are known, seem to indicate that there is a gradual slope from the Pole to the Weddell Sea, where the Americans propose going. If that is so they will have no difficulty with mountains and glaciers. The main difficulty for them will be to find a suitable wintering spot. At present none is known. The race promises to be a most interesting one and we cordially wish good luck to both expeditions.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

Our special wire, published on the 24th ultimo, gave the result of the race for the Grand National; in our epitome of English Sport to-day will be found full details. The surprise of the race was Odor, against whom the extreme odds of 100 to 1 were offered. It is said that at one time he was sold for the sum of forty shillings. He finished third.

The first fence proved fatal to three horses—Judas, Shady Girl and The Lurcher—and when the fifth jump had been negotiated more than half of the twenty-five horses which started were riderless.

A mile from home only six horses were left in the race, Jerry M., the favourite, leading from Odor, Springbok, Jenkinstown, Fetlar's Pride and Carsey. Soon afterwards Springbok was pulled up and Jenkinstown joined the leader. When two jumps only remained Jenkinstown got the better of the favourite, and coming along to the finish, finally won by three lengths, while Odor finished three lengths behind the second.

Three years ago the owner and trainer of the winner enjoyed a similar success when Eremon won the big race in 1907.

There is a good deal in the mail papers concerning the somewhat inordinate amount of "grief" that there was in the Grand National and not a few complaints that fences were bigger and stiffer than ever. The last assertion is, in part, true as we will presently proceed to demonstrate by placing in juxtaposition last year's and this year's measurements, both taken a few days prior to the race. At the same time the large number of falls were not all due to horses "coming it." Loose horses interfered with and brought down not a few of the competitors, and as regards others they did what racing reporters politely call "lost their jockey;" in other words, the horses did not come down. This of course is the most direful of all calamities that can overtake the cross country jockey, for contumely is heaped upon him and he gets no sympathy, however much he may be hurt and however little it may have been his fault. To the merciless critic, safely entrenched in the Grand Stand behind a pair of race-glasses and a big cigar, he is "a sliding-seated tailor," however good a horseman he may be in actual fact. In theory, of course, no one who has arrived at that degree of proficiency in horsemanship that entitles him to be put up on the back of a steeplechase horse ought ever to "fall off;" but anyone with practical experience will in most cases have ready sympathy with the victim, knowing how easy it may have been for such an untoward accident to happen. On a nice, easy jumper, who makes no errors, how comfortable and delightful a pastime steeplechase riding looks to be! But it is a very different pair of shoes on an awkward horse, who, until he settles to the regular rhythm of the thing, is an extremely unpleasant "perch" for his lion hearted jockey. He is probably madly excited at the start and, however good his pilot's hands may be, "takes charge," as the saying is, over the first two or three fences, or, in other words, is completely beyond all human control and goes at them like a bullet out of a gun. If he has luck and is a well-shaped one with good shoulders and plenty of activity the liberties he will take with the obstacles before he "drops on to his bit" and settles down, may not bring them to grief. If on the other hand, he is a careless clumsy horse, who jumps wildly and takes off anywhere and lands anyhow, a very slight contretemps, a bump, a flounder, an awkward twist as he recovers himself, will, and as we know very often does, unship the very best of horsemen! The horse may, for instance, be almost knocked down on to his knees, he may land in so badly-balanced a fashion as to slip and flounder for sometimes fifty or sixty yards before he regains his equilibrium, and in coming through the top of a stiff fence his jockey's feet have both very probably been torn out of the irons by the thick thorns or brushwood. Again another horse may have cannoned into him, striking his jockey hard and more than half lifting him clean out of the saddle; there is a tremendous stagger, the horse lurches and rolls like a ship in a heavy sea; is half down; and then with a very awkward plunge and a flounder, recovers. These little incidents are lost upon the critic in the stand, who merely notes that the horse "has not fallen" but that his jockey has been sent spinning half way into middle of next week and has "fallen off"!! If the unfortunate wight happens to be a G.R. he is "one of those d—amateurs!" if a professional he is either "drunk," or "a confounded tailor who never ought to have been put up;" but in actual fact both these condemnations are as often as not quite undeserved!

Although we by no means favour appeals against Stewards' decisions in turf cases and are content to believe that when a decision has been arrived at there is usually very little more to be said, there are certain circumstances in which it is decidedly desirable that delinquents should be given a right to apply for a re-hearing or to appeal against a decision that has been given. A case cropped up in Western Australia not so very long ago, in which a horse, a trainer and jockey, who had been warned off by the Perth Stewards had been refused a re—hearing. The stewards who warned these people off were the Stipendiaries and in Western Australia they have, it appears, a thing called a Board of Appeal. The "accused" applied to be heard on appeal and were refused. They then took it into the Law Courts and succeeded in obtaining a rule against the Stewards on the ground that they had not been given a proper hearing and that one of the Rules of the W.A.T.C. had been contravened. The rule in question was:—

"No decision given upon any enquiry into any charge or complaint against any person, or into any objection against any force under these rules, shall be valid or of any effect unless the person against whom the charge or complaint, or against whose horse the objection shall have been made, shall have been afforded an opportunity of (a) attending the enquiry, (b) hearing all the evidence given thereat, (c) cross-examining all witnesses who shall have given evidence thereon, (d) being heard and giving and adducing evidence on his own behalf."

In this particular case it was proved that the accused had not had such opportunity and the Stewards were bowled over as the court made the rule absolute, and the Stewards were restrained from preventing the horse starting, the trainer and jockey in question carrying on their professions. The decision opens up a somewhat long vista of possibilities.

In the last National there were twenty-five runners and the distance from the start to the first fence is 546 yards, none too much with such a big field. A good many jockeys pull well out to the right at the first fence to avoid the crush, but the majority of the field jump it on the inside, i.e., nearest the rails and horses are jumping into one another's pockets, as the saying is, so that the least mistake on the part of anything in front means almost certain disaster to one or more of those behind. Before Becher's Brook had been jumped the first time round, out of the 25 runners Shady Girl, The Lurcher, Vedas (fell) (first fence), Wickham, Rathervale, General Fox (fell) (second fence), Lord Chatham, Bloodstone, Phaeton (fell), Brineoge (ref) (third fence), Paddy Maher, Albuera (fell), Bushedo (knocked over), Captain Farrell (ref) (fifth fence), that is to say that fifteen of the falls and mishaps occurred before half a dozen fences had been crossed, and this points to things other than the actual obstacles having caused the grief, as the first four or five are not the worst obstacles on this course! As to the fences having been bigger this year than they were last, this is true, as we have already stated, and it is of interest to compare the actual measurements taken on the 10th March, that is to say, a week before the race with the measurements of last year's fences taken at approximately the same time.

15.—The "Open Ditch" a thorn fence (gorsed), 5ft. 2in. high, 3ft. wide, ditch on take off side 6ft. wide, 2ft. deep, and banked to guard rail in front 2ft. high.	15.—5ft. 2in., 3ft. 6in. wide (ditch same.)
16.—The "Water Jump," 16ft. wide, with thorn fence (gorsed) 3ft. high on take off side.	16.—Same.

It will therefore be noted that with the exception of fences Nos. 12, 13, 14 and 16 the course was appreciably bigger this year.

The increase in the measurements of the thickness, i. e., width through of the fences is the most important thing to be considered, for it means added strength, which taken in conjunction with an added height of, in some cases, nearly half a foot, makes this very uncompromising course a stiffer proposition than ever. Slight additions in the height of a steeplechase obstacle, unbacked by increased width and consequent resisting power, do not matter very much, but a big 5ft. 6in. obstacle with very little "give" in it is a very tough problem, especially over a course that was as heavy as was far famed Aintree in this present Year of Grace! Last year out of 32 runners 19 got the course though Red Hall fell twice in doing so!

The only three new introductions into the Derby betting, so far, are Major Eustace Loder's Admiral Hawke by Gallinule—Admiration (the Admiration colt); Mr. E. Blanc's Impregnable by Flying Fox—La Camargo and Lord Saville's Chaffinch colt (by (Eager—Chaffinch). Admiral Hawke ran very well as a two year old, and as noted in our last issue, had upon two occasions the honour of beating two of the cracks, Neil Gow, who finished third to him, and Yellow Slave in the Coventry Stakes at Ascot and Lemberg in the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster. He was out eight times last season and of these engagements he won five, being placed on two other occasions. His is record is as follows:—

Admiral Hawke ch c by Gallinule—Admiration, 3 years:—Ascot: Coventry Stakes, £1,809; 5 furs., 9-0. Yellowslave 8-11, 2nd, Neil Gow 9-0, third.

Newmarket: Fulbourne Stakes £6'6 10s; 5 furlongs 140yards, 9-5, Galantine 8-7, 2nd; Facet 8-4, 3-4.

Sandown: Nat Breeders Produce Stakes, £1,357; 5 furlongs; unplaced, 9-5, to Neil Gow 8-8, Brettenham 8-0, Sunshine 8-2.

Goodwood: Lavant Stakes, £1,215; 5 furlongs, 9-5, Mistralia 8-6, 2nd; Sunningdale 8-9, 3rd.

Doncaster: Champagne Stakes, £1,580, 5 furlongs 152 yards second, 9-0, to Neil Gow 9-0, Lemberg 9-0, third

Newmarket: Middle Park Plate, £3,025, 6 furlongs, third, 9-3, to Lemberg 9-3 and Whisk Broom 9-0

Newmarket: Criterion Stakes, £962; 6 furlongs, 9-4, Maid of Corinth, 9-2, 2nd; Merry Task 8-8, 3rd.

Newmarket: Moulton Stakes, £557; 5 furlongs, 9-4, Catalpa 8-4, 2nd; Artless 8-0, 3rd.

His record as will be admitted makes him out distinctly useful and he has apparently wintered well as otherwise they would not be backing him. He has beaten both the cracks on separate occasions and perhaps his performance best worth remembering is the Champagne Stakes in which he finished only one and a half length behind Neil Gow and beat Lemberg a length. That this was no fluke he plainly showed by this forward running in the Middle Park Plate, in which race Lemberg got home a neck from Whisk Broom and Admiral Hawke was three-quarters of a length away. Lemberg won with a bit in hand but not a great deal, so they say, and Admiral Hawke was fancied by his connections as his S.P. was returned at "fours." Bar accidents, therefore, he looks to be certainly likely to repeat this two-year-old form.

Impregnable has not a very lengthy record and his career has been a short and not so far a successful one.

Impregnable b. c. by Flying Fox—La Camargo 3yrs.

Paris: Prix de St. Firmin £509, 5½ furlongs, ran third, 8-11, to Bel Ceuse 8-8, Sabionnet 8-11.

He has not run on the British side of La Manche so far!

The Chaffinch colt has likewise not a very long list of performances, but out of his three two-year-old ventures he won one and was placed once.

Colt by Eager—Chaffinch, 3yrs.

Hurst Park: August Two-Year-Old Plate, £214, 5 furlongs, 8-7, Persuade 8-7 2nd; Blue Girl colt 8-7, third.

Manchester: Michaelmas Plate, £472, 5 furlongs, ran second, 8-12, to Blue Girl colt 8-7, Dunraven 8-7, third.

Birmingham: November Nursery Plate, £265, 5 furlongs, ran fourth, 8-13, to Little Linne 7-0, Down South 7-4, Trite 7-10.

The Blue Girl colt is in the Derby and is the colt by Hamburg owned by Mr. H. P. Whitney.

Several of our Calcutta friends, human and otherwise, were engaged in the Kadir Cup of which we publish the full details elsewhere. Amongst them were Lord Francis Scott, who rode that well-known paperchase horse of his Fermoy and Captain Lambert who rode Battle, also well known out paperchasing. Both these very safe and clever horses fell. Mr. Nicholls of the 17th Lancers rode Mr. Winckworth's old mare Ermine, who has win C. L. H. Cups and also gymkhana hurdle races in these parts. Lord Francis Scott rode as his second nomination Beaumaris, a grey horse well known here and at one time owned by Mr. R. A. C. Pugh. Karolyi, late Miss Forsyth's possession and winner of the last Ladies' Cup, gave his new owner Mr. Brooke of the Horse Gunners two falls, one in the second round of the Kadir and another in the race for the Hoghunters Cup, a point-to-point over the Kadir country. Evidently this sort of job did not suit the big ones and both Karolyi and Fermoy would be more at home over the average obstacle to be met steeplechasing or hunting.

We understand that there will be the customary four Gymkhana Race Meetings at the Tollygunge Club, before the opening of the regular monsoon season in Calcutta, two in June and two in July.

As our readers gathered from our special telegram of the 24th ultimo, Oxford won the Boat Race comfortably by three and a half lengths in 20mins. 40secs. They maintained their form to the end, finishing in really magnificent style. Cambridge was practically out of it after Hammersmith Bridge, though they plugged away doggedly but could make no impression on their rivals. There is no doubt that the race was won by the superior weight and superior length of the Oxford crew. As a crew they are very little inferior to the best that have ever been seen on the tideway. The moment the bodies were full forward the oars were instantaneously in the water, and the whole of the power given by the lift of the bodies applied to the task of shifting the boat. On the other hand,

SHERLEY'S
DOG MEDICINES
MAY NOW BE OBTAINED IN INDIA
In CALCUTTA from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO.,
And in BOMBAY from TREACHER & CO., Ltd.

These preparations are based on the most recent and up-to-date veterinary research, and are the best possible remedies for the various ailments and diseases for which they are recommended.

It is of the greatest importance in treating all cases of sickness in dogs that the nature of the ailment should be recognised, and in order to enable dog owners to do this we have published a book,

"HINTS TO DOG OWNERS"
(ILLUSTRATED),

which is now the standard work of reference in thousands of kennels in the United Kingdom, where it has had a larger circulation than any book on dogs ever published, the demand for it being so great that more than 200,000 copies have been disposed of. It may be obtained gratis on application to either of the above-mentioned firms in India, and everyone interested in dogs should make a point of obtaining a copy at once.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR DOGS.

These Capsules are tasteless and odourless, and are the surest and safest means of expelling both Round and Tape Worms from dogs (or puppies three months old or over) weighing 10lb. or more. They require no purgative medicine afterwards. May be easily given wrapped up in a piece of meat or cheese.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR PUPPIES AND TOY DOGS.

Every puppy at six weeks old should be dosed with these Capsules which may be safely given to even the smallest and most delicate toy puppy. They surely expel all Worms and never cause the least discomfort. Castor oil is not required before or after giving these, and it is not necessary for the puppy to fast before being dosed.

SHERLEY'S "SKIN CURE."

An absolutely unrivalled dressing for Mange, Eczema, Ringworm, and all other Skin Diseases of dogs. It cures Mange for certain in a week, and not only stops the disease but starts an immediate and vigorous growth of hair.

SHERLEY'S "DISTEMPERCURE."

The best remedy for Distemper ever discovered; produces the finest coat and creates an appetite. Every tin are full instructions as to nursing and dieting, on which the cure of Distemper depends so much.

SHERLEY'S "SHAMPOO."

A Liquid Soap for Washing Dogs. It penetrates the hair, which becomes much better than any solid soap and will last three half the time.

It removes dandruff, nourishes the growth of hair, and gives the coat a healthy, glossy appearance.

It also prevents Eczema, and destroys fleas and all other insects.

A. F. SHERLEY & CO.,

Cambridge were notably deficient in two points, balance on the stretcher and capability of getting their oars into the water sharply when full forward. Full details are given in our "Sport in England."

We regret to record the death of Raja Venugopaul Kishen Bahadur, brother of the Raja of Venkatagiri and the Maharajah of Bobbili. Raja Venugopaul was a good sportsman and a fine polo player. He annually gave a Cup for competition in a Polo Tournament at Madras, and as recently as the middle of last month he took part in this Tournament—his own team being defeated in the final by the 20th Deccan Horse. The Raja had ever an open hand and was patron of numerous charitable institutions in Southern India.

The Mussoorie Polo Tournament will be held during the week commencing Monday, 9th May, entries closing on the 20th April and 2nd May. The Challenge Cup is at present held by the 2nd K. E. O. Gurkhas. An open Gymkhana Race Meeting is also fixed to be held at Mussoorie on the 12th and 14th May.

The Annual General Meeting of the Calcutta Kennel Club was held at the Royal Exchange last Friday, Mr. L. Medley presiding. The Accounts, which showed a Credit balance of Rs. 1,653-3-4., were passed and the meeting proceeded to the election of office-bearers for the current year, the following gentlemen being duly elected :—

President :—Mr. A. A. Apcar, C. S. I. ;

Vice-President :—The Hon'ble Mr. Lionel Jacob, Mr. J. A. Mollison, Mr. W. K. Dodds, Mr. R. G. D. Thomas and Mr. S. C. Demetriadi.

Committee :—Messrs. L. Medley, C. M. Atkinson, L. Watson, M. P. Baird, J. L. Reid, G. Jamieson, G. King, F. S. Kerr, H. P. LeMesurier, F. Trollope, T. J. Sullivan and E. Zimmerman.

Honorary Treasurer :—Mr. Paul Lauder.

Honorary Secretary :—I. J. Tredaway.

Mr. Medley was elected as the Delegate to the Indian Kennel Association which was to meet at Simla and Mussoorie. Certain minor alterations were made in the Rules of the Club and the Committee were empowered to proceed with the arrangements for the next Annual Show, which is to be held at the end of January 1911.

As will be seen from the details given in "Sport in England," the Cambridge athletes had an easy victory in the forty-seventh annual athletic contest with Oxford, which took place under most favourable weather conditions at Queen's Club. There was a capital attendance and great enthusiasm prevailed among both old and new Blues as the Cantabs gained one event after another, finally winning by 7 to 3.

Our Lucknow correspondent writes :—The last few months have witnessed quite a number of football tournaments open to schools and colleges in Lucknow and the surrounding districts. The last to be decided was the Dilkusha Cup Tournament, which was annexed by La Martiniere College, Lucknow, who also recently won the Kunwar Maharaj Singh Shield. The final in the Dilkusha Tournament took place at Lucknow on the 4th instant, the opposing team being the Umar Club of Fyzabad. The latter pressed at the start, but the Martiniere then gained possession and after several smart runs were fortunate in scoring. Fyzabad played up well, but did not succeed in penetrating the College defence. The second half was more or less a repetition of the first. The Fyzabad rushes were staved off, and the Martiniere eventually put up a second goal from a scrimmage in front of the posts. The cup and medals were presented by the Hon'ble Mr. A. L. Saunders, Commissioner of Lucknow. The game took place on the 8th Hussars' ground, which was kindly lent by the military authorities for the occasion, and Corporal Lintot of the 8th Hussars was referee. The arrangements for the tournament were in the hands of Mr. E. W. Warde Jones, the Secretary.

It is said that although there could not be any two opinions concerning the importance and educative value of the Aero Show which was recently held in London, it was nevertheless a failure as a financial speculation. It seems that whilst the public will go eagerly to see aviators in the air, "still life" studies do not attract, and the show at best was simply a school for enthusiasts. Nevertheless aviation continues to make progress and fair evidence of this is given by the fact that the first proposed rules of the air have just been submitted to the French Minister of Public Works. Under these rules aerial traffic is not to circulate at the height of less than 50 metres over buildings and enclosed property nor are aerial vehicles to stop over enclosed property at any height below 500 metres. All aerial craft passing each other are to do so on the right. Aeroplanes and heavier-than-air machines are to give way to dirigibles. Towns are to be circumnavigated unless special permission to fly over them has been obtained. Aviators are to pass an examination and receive a licence before taking to the high road of the air. Air craft are to bear their licence numbers in large characters. In order to facilitate air traffic all buildings over 50 metres in height must at night bear lights at every succeeding 50 metres so as to indicate the height and the roof in all its extent. The names of villages are to be painted in large letters upon the roofs of all railway stations. No dangerous ballast is to be thrown overboard from balloons, which must be furnished with streamers so as to indicate the direction in which they are travelling. These rules appear sensible but the question may well be asked how they are to be enforced. If an airship chooses to cross over a town how can the authorities prevent it or punish the offender. However large the figures that indicate the licensed number of the vessel they will hardly be discernible from the ground if it is travelling at any great height.

A well-known English sportswoman has declared that hunting is the one sport in which women can absolutely hold their own with men. She considers, moreover, that the majority of women are infinitely better riders than the majority of men. This may seem a very bold assertion in face of the well-known fact that every man who wears spurs believes himself an adept in the art ; yet as regards horsemanship there are many men who consider that she is right. For one thing, it is pointed out, in England women usually both ride and hunt a great deal more as children than do men ; for, whilst a month at Christmas and perhaps a fortnight's cubhunting in September is about all the time that a boy gets to devote to the sport, his sister, under the milder régime of home education, hunts regularly once or twice a week and probably hacks nearly every day, so that by the age of 14 or 15 she is, or ought to be, quite a capable horsewoman. As regards the first claim, however, that in hunting women can absolutely hold their own with men, there is less agreement, for it is argued, whilst those valuable assets of pluck, judgment, determination, and enthusiasm are probably divided fairly equally between the sexes, that initiative valour which inspires the horseman to take his own line across a country, independent of leads, is seldom found amongst women. With a good many packs the subscription for ladies is still fixed at a slightly lower rate than for men ; in this connection a well-known ex M. F. H. has declared that in his opinion women should subscribe more, not less, than men in view of the fact that they do about three times the damage. He says that the ordinary hunting woman would no more dream of riding up a furrow to save the rest of the field than she would dream of flying ; that she revels in a gallop over a turnip field, ignoring the fact that a turnip dies at every stride of her horse, also that she rarely knows seeds from old grass land, and if she did would not turn a hair's breadth out of the way to avoid them. Whilst it must be admitted that there are women guilty of such misdeeds the statement is an exaggeration if applied to the average horsewoman. Another fault imputed to them is that they cannot forego the joys of conversation in the hunting field.

A correspondent to a London journal attempts to prove the superiority of the cat over the dog. The cat, he says, is a refined reasonable animal, a gentleman in a fur coat, the dog, except in the case of some of the finer breeds refined by selection, a noisy, uncouth, clumsy "bounder." He cannot do anything without fluster and fuss, to say nothing of noise. It is claimed that other animals appreciate this quiet behaviour of the cat, and detest noise and bounce. With regard to the nocturnal concerts for which cats are unenviably notorious, however, it is admitted that cats do caterwaul, but contended that these vocalisations have not the irritating attribute of purposelessness. When a cat opens out it has something to say. It may be the love song of a feline troubadour, or it may be a challenge to a rival, but cats do not howl at the moon, or merely to give themselves lung exercise, as dogs so often appear to do. Besides, it is asked, what noise a cat produces, even in the most exacerbated disputes of feline parochial politics, is so nerve-racking and sleep-banishing as the execrable staccato yelping with which the "first friend" of man regales unhappy humanity ? In barking, the dog is gratuitously objectionable ; the cat's caterwaul is an ancestral expression, like the dog's equally detestable howl, but the bark has been invented by the domestic dog as an addition to his already considerable powers of vocal annoyance ; he has "aggravated his voice" with a vengeance since he came into partnership with us. Again it is pointed out that no creature is more daintily clean or refined than a cat ; we all know how it avoids mud, in which the dog light-heartedly paddles, and then puts its muddy paws on one's clothes. The cat's tastes in eating and scent are refined ; the dog loves carrion, and his feeding is conducted with indecent voracity.

A remarkable rise, says the Pall Mall Gazette, has taken place in the price of those athletic accessories into the manufacture of which rubber enters, owing to the advance in the cost of raw rubber, which is about 100 per cent. higher than last year. The articles which are affected include, golf balls, tennis balls, squash and hand balls, batting gloves, etc. The advance in price ranges from 10 per cent. to 25 per cent. Golf balls have gone up in the case of two of the best known Scotch makes from 24*s.* a dozen to 30*s.* a dozen. Two well, known English firms at Birmingham are still keeping to the old price, 24*s.* a dozen, but it is felt that they will be bound to fall into line before long. One effect of the advance in price of golf balls is expected to be an increase in the demand for the cheaper balls ranging from 1*s.* to 1*s.* 6*d.* Tennis balls have gone up fully 20 per cent. Those sold formerly at 11*s.* 9*d.* per dozen are quoted to-day at 14*s.* per dozen, and the 12*s.* per dozen balls are now 14*s.* 3*d.* per dozen. Squash balls and hand balls are 10 per cent. higher in some instances more, whilst cricket bat handles have advanced 10 per cent. The rise in leather which seems to have accompanied the rise in rubber would certainly have made cricket balls dearer had not the contracts been given out last year. Footballs have gone up 1*s.* a ball and they may be dearer next season. Manufacturers are very chary about taking orders as long in advance as usual. The cheaper footballs, as in the case of the cheaper golf balls, are practically unaffected, the advance in price apparently having only extended to those articles into the manufacture of which the best material enters. Athletic outfitters declare that advances in the price of athletic accessories have taken place all round, but, that in some cases it has been impossible to raise the retail price. In the case of golf balls and footballs, where a sweeping advance of 6*d.* and 1*s.* respectively, were declared, there was no difficulty about the matter.

A Correspondent writes :—During his shooting expedition in Africa Mr. Roosevelt has frequently been criticised severely as a wholesale slaughterer of wild animals. A more charitable critic, however, points out that his reflections on longer range shooting with a high velocity rifle, low trajectory, and sharp-nosed bullet, are well worth considering, especially at a time when the ethics of sport are being thrown into the melting pot as completely as any one unit of human effort can throw them. Mr. Roosevelt found the wounds alarmingly severe from the pointed-nosed bullet, but to hit the small vital parts of big game he found could only be done occasionally, and evidently by chance between 300 and 600 yards. He has been repeating at these long ranges the sort of experiments made on disabled beasts of Gordon Cumming, when South Africa teemed with the game that is now extinct there. These experiments on disabled beasts were for the purpose of discovering where to aim and how to kill the hard skinned beasts at near distances with low velocity rifles, which were the only kind then available. Probably the following of the information given in the book that followed has saved many a shooter's life and taken many a beast's. The latter would have died out fast enough without the knowledge and their deaths are to be regretted, but all the same it is always better to kill than to wound and, consequently such experiments on wounded beasts cannot be condemned; neither can those of Mr. Roosevelt, for in both cases they teach when not to shoot, and that is a lesson quite as important in sport as how to shoot. The man who has only learnt the latter, and not the former, is a dangerous companion, and a destroyer of more sport than game, but if he has learnt when not to shoot and only fails in skill, there is no reason why he should not have the opportunity of learning given very often by all his friends.

The venue of the great fight between Jeffries and Johnson on 4th July is to be the Emeryville race track across the bay from San Francisco. Although there are many who still think that the contest will not come off, the general impression seems to be that it will eventuate and that it will be refereed by Eddie Smith, who has officiated over many fights including the recent Moran-Murphy, and Nelson-Wolgast encounters. Reference to these brings to mind the probability of a match between Wolgast, the new light weight champion, and Owen Moran to take place in September next. Another meeting which is being eagerly looked forward to is that between Ketchel and Langford, which ranks in favour next to the Jeffries-Johnston affair and which may possibly be brought off on the 2nd July as a preliminary to the big fight. The first week of July will also see a twenty-five round contest at 9st. for the feather weight championship of the world between Jem Driscoll and Abe Attell, so we are promised some interesting doings in the boxing world before long.

The thirteenth annual gathering of the English Amateur Boxing Association was held at the Alexandra Palace at the end of last month and must be written down a record both as regards sport and attendance. The winners of the five weights were as follows:—Bantam—J. Lee, Edinburgh A. G. S. Feather—G. Houghton, Northampton Institute B. C. Light—T. Tees, Lynn. Middle—R. C. Warnes, Surrey Commercial Docks, and Heavy—F. Storbeck, Transvaal. The Public Schools Championships were held at the Gymnasium, Aldershot, and provided good sport. A rather peculiar rule has been introduced this year into these competitions: whether it is wise remains to be seen. The rule is that the knock out blow counts for nothing. If a man be knocked out and he has scored the major portion of the points previous to being sent to sleep he is the winner. F. C. Bourne (Rugby) and F. Lewtas (St. Paul's) were the only two of last year's winners to defend their titles. The former maintained his supremacy among the heavy weights but Lewtas was beaten by F. H. Bread, Dulwich, the ultimate winner of the middles. Bedford supplied the winner of the feather weights in G. F. Reid and Felsted, the winner of the Bantam contests—R. V. Routledge, while the light weights was won by V. C. Farrell of Cranbrook.

The middle weight boxing championship of the world has been won by Billy Papke who beat Willie Lewis at the Cirque de Paris, the week before the last English mail left. The contest lasted but three rounds. No sooner were they started than Lewis placed a left to the face and clinched. He then tried a one-two wallop but missed. Papke swung his left to the head, and Lewis tried a right swing and a loop punch. Papke strutted up to his opponent as if to shoot out a right so Lewis covered. Billy feinted and swung a hard right beautifully ducked by Lewis. A right caught Lewis on the jaw sending him to the ropes, and a right hook later brought him down for 8 seconds. Dazed Lewis pluckily regained his feet and managed to keep on them until time came to the rescue.

Second Round.—A change suddenly came over the aspect of the meeting. Papke swung left very short and some in-fighting followed. In trying another left swing, Papke missed, giving an opening. Lewis was on it at once with a hard right to the jaw that shook his opponent. Both men now hammered away irrespective of science in a hard exchange. Lewis then landed a right, and received the same, followed by a long clinch. Papke appeared to be weakening, so Lewis went for his man with a series of left and rights. The audience yelled itself to frenzy until time came. Willie's round.

Third and last round.—Papke rushed at Lewis, but was met with a right upper-cut to chin. Encouraged by this success and the crowd's cries, Lewis let go a right, scored, and both clinched. Papke, later, got home on the head with a left, but shipped another right upper-cut. Papke now set himself going. Following up Lewis he slammed in two lefts that projected Willie on to the ropes. Before the latter could recover his guard Papke smashed his right on Lewis' jaw, followed by a left to head, and yet one more right on the point, and Willie dropped for the full count.

Sydney telegrams state that Burns beat Lang on points in 20 rounds. Australian exchanges to hand by the last mail considered Lang's chances of reversing his previous defeat by the ex-champion as singularly rosey. Bob Fitzsimmons had expressed himself as confident that Lang would win, but apparently Burns has lost none of his powers and we shall probably soon hear of him again as matched with some of the best of the present champions. A match was recently on the tapis between Tommy and either Sam McVea or Joe Jeannette, to be held in Paris, but this fell through. In connection with the Burns-Lang contest it may be mentioned that Burns' indisposition caused a postponement. Tommy and his medical adviser stood out for the 20th April as the day for the contest but Lang steadfastly refused to go beyond the 13th instant, the fight being eventually brought off last Monday.

Paddy Gill, the professional boxer, met Driver Sampson, R. H. A., for the second time in a twenty-round contest for the featherweight championship of the United Provinces at Lucknow on the 9th instant. Gill stood up pluckily and the contest was a good one for nine rounds, then Sampson who was in better condition took the upper hand and eventually knocked out the Irishman in the fifteenth round.

Reuter announces that the Hurlingham Polo team beat the Meadow Brook team by 5 goals to 4. The latter team was identical with one exception with the Meadow Brook team that regained the International Cup at Hurlingham in 1909.

Advices from Lake Wood, New Jersey, state that during polo practice Buckmaster was thrown, his collar bone was broken, and he was unconscious when picked up. Internal injuries are apprehended.

The Aga Khan Hockey Tournament opened on Saturday last when two games were played. In the first the Lusitania Sporting Club beat the Bombay Gymkhana by 2 goals to nil and in the other the Elphinstone College had an easy victory over the Marine Wanderers by 2 goals to nil. London Week by Week.

Easter is going to be a record for good weather say the prophets, and I believe, for once, they are going to be right. To-day the conditions are perfect; as soon as this brief screed is in the pillar box your "Vagrant" strikes for the open country and four days of the simple life awheel. We wheelers, campers and others are not to have it all our own way I see; a "flying holiday" is to be one of the novelties this Easter. At the Royal Aero Club's flying grounds at Eastchurch the Hon. C. S. Rolls, the Hon. M. Egerton, Captain Dunne, Mr. Moore-Brabazon and Mr. C. Grace, who can all fly, are to assemble for the holidays and enjoy an up-to-date vacation with frequent aeroplane trips over the Isle of Sheppey. Many friends are expected to motor down to form part of the flying party.

At Brooklands, where a number of British aviators now have machines and sheds, there will be holiday flying also, providing the wind is not too high.

In other directions the conquest of the air proceeds apace. Preparations for the establishment of an airship service between Hamburg and London are well forward. The service is to be instituted by the Zeppelin Arship Company as the second of their aerial lines. The first will be from Hamburg via Cologne to Baden-Baden. It will assuredly not be long before the sky is spotted with airships and aeroplanes at all hours of the day and night. It is fortunate that the atmosphere offers a highway not likely to become congested by any reasonable amount of traffic.

Last Sabbath I carried out a modest programme of picture gazing, for it was Show Sunday and I was bidden to a few studios. Many of the works which will be seen on the first Monday in May are of remarkable interest. The Hon. John Collier has no "pazzie" picture this year, unless one may class as such a dreamy moonlit figure clad in a diaphanous robe of black, who reposes in a cleft of marble rocks at the top of a mountain. Mr Collier calls it "The Summer Night that Paused among her Stars." His triumph at the Academy will be a superb portrait of Mrs. Cyprian Bridge, a beautiful young lady tripping down a marble staircase

Her features, her hair and her figure are all perfect, and her black dress, embroidered in gold, is modern and yet classic in effect.

Mr. Joseph Farquharson, A.R.A., was showing his Academy pictures at Migvie Lodge, Porchester Gardens. The first is entitled "When the West with Evening Glows." The fiery sky is all aflame with crimson and gold, which fails to penetrate the dark recesses of a leafless wood in the middle distance, but which tints the snowy foreground with rose colour and gilds the fleeces of sheep wandering in vain search for food. A glimpse of hanging woods in the distance and a floating wisp of blue smoke suggest the vicinity of the oak-panalled lodge in Aberdeenshire where the painter spends his holidays. In another picture a solitary stag is seen standing knee-deep in fern "At Evening the Wild Woods Among." The imprisoned sunlight seems to brighten as the eye wanders down a winding path, and the brilliant autumn foliage and the delicate network of branches cut sharply against the glowing sky.

Mr. Frank Calderon's pictures were to be seen at the Baker Street Studio of Animal Painting, in which his classes are held. He has this year a fine portrait of Miss Claire Dewrance, "Master" of the West Kent Harriers, seated on her hunter with the pack running alongside. He is also sending a strongly painted three-quarter length of Major-General Maxwell standing by his charger and resplendent in his goldlaced uniform and medals.

Miss Lucy Kemp-Welch has brought up her great oil painting, "Young April," from Bushey to London, and it was shown on Saturday and yesterday at the Fine Art Society's rooms, Bond Street. A girl is seen holding a solemn old white carthorse by a halter, while the breeze lifts her white apron and plays havoc with the folds of her blue linen dress, thereby giving the artist an opportunity for fine modelling of draperies. The lazy submission of the heavy powerful animal to the grasp of the girl's slender fingers suggests a great reserve of latent strength, and contrasts with the perky boldness of a young foal that peeps round the corner. "Such a troublesome model," says the artist; "he had to be painted principally from memory."

The old White City is being rapidly transformed. With characteristic precision and thoroughness the army of Japanese who have taken possession of the White City are rapidly pushing to completion their particular sections of the great Japan-British Exhibition, which is to be opened early next month.

For the most part the great white buildings are full of the din of hammering by swarms of lithe, little Japanese workmen in quaint blue costumes, and one can only say that an exhibition is taking shape in what may prove to be record time. But in the great hall a piece of richly wrought Oriental architecture in an almost finished state gives an idea of the surroundings in which the visitor will find himself in the summer.

This is a massive and realistic reproduction of the famous Temple Gate at Nara, Japan's ancient capital, and its sumptuousness will later have a sombre relief of dark cedars, with stone lanterns set among them. Through this gate visitors will pass to inspect the twelve life-size tableaux illustrative of Japan's two thousand five hundred years of history.

The four seasons as they appear in Japan will be represented by four large natural tableaux, each of which will be a miniature landscape through which visitors will be able to walk. There is a Japanese house in one of the buildings, with a painting of a tree on one of its walls so realistic that it looks as though its leaves might be plucked.

In another building a large space is to be devoted to the native pottery and such things as punch bowls, finger bowls, flower vases, tea-pots and services, and incense burners of Japanese manufacture, and bearing fantastic Oriental designs, will be on view, while elsewhere, in the Japanese fair, the potters will be seen at their work.

Yesterday we put away for another year our anecdotes of past varsity Boat Races, and with them the list of judges, bishops, and statesmen who have rowed in them. Also the great question whether pulling an oar in the race guarantees longevity or hastens an early death will be at peace. Without consulting the well-thumbed records, it is reasonable enough that boat-race crews should yield a fair crop of celebrities. Riches or hereditary privilege do not warrant a man for a seat in his University boat. But of the eighteen heroes we may say that they belong to the class from which All Soul's chose its fellows, that they are at least well born, well-clothed, and moderately well learned. In spite of the lean days under their trainer's eye, they are well fed young men, and the long course proves them sound in wind and limb. So it is that the University oar starts life's handicap very far from scratch. Church, Bar, and the Parliament House still offer careers to University men. Therefore if this year's crews do not find the country within the next thirty or forty years a suffragan bishop, a county court judge, or a minister under Cabinet-rank, we shall be justified in writing down Wednesday's affair as a contest of dullards. Doubtless your epitome of English sport this week gives your readers all details of the race itself.

Maurice Maeterlinck's delightful poetic fairy play "The Blue Bird" was performed for the 150th time at the Haymarket Theatre last Saturday night. With its delicate allegory and its under-current of philosophy and pathos, the piece is of far more enduring worth than the ordinary children's play which is found tolerable only at Christmas-time, and judging by the very real pleasure with which a large audience followed every one of its many scenes last night, it is still far from exhausting its popularity. A second visit serves to reveal many new beauties, while it is certain that no finer stage pictures have adorned our stage. Fortunately the whole of the original cast are still available. As the children who meet with so many strange adventures during their search for the emblem of happiness, little Oliver Walter and Pauline Gilmer have lost none of their childish naturalness and it is a pleasure to renew acquaintance with Mr. C. V. France's Time, Mr. J. Fisher White's Spirit of the Oak and Mr. Norman Page's Cat.

With a capital of £10,000 the One-Act Play House, Limited, is being formed to carry on the business of theatre proprietors and play producers in London and elsewhere. The directors are Colonel Vines of Clarges Street, Piccadilly; H. G. Spencer Tuite, author, of Gloucester House, Finchley; and Henry Bagge, managing director. It is proposed that the performances will somewhat resemble those of the Theatre du Grand Guignol in Paris, at which each evening five or six one-act plays, ranging from farce to comedy, are given. A novel feature of the company is that each holder of fifty of the 9,500 Preferred shares of £1 each will have a coupon sheet containing eight ticket orders for stalls, and each holder of thirty, eight orders for dress-circle seats. There are also 10,000 Deferred shares of 1s. each. These ticket orders will be renewed each year.

There is a fine flavour of vertebrate patriotism about the pledge of the Islanders, a new imperial association of citizens who may have a wide and deep influence on national and imperial affairs. In days when too many men seem afraid to speak their full minds and when our ears are deafened with the effeminate shrieks of those who make it their first concern to forget that they have a native land, this pledge rings true and earnest. Two keels to one for the security of our country, our Empire, and the world's peace, and personal contribution to the material and moral health of what is ours to hold against all comers—this is the basis of the Islanders' creed.

The policy which the Islanders have pledged themselves to secure, their card of membership says, "is that by which two British ships shall be laid down for every one of the next strongest European Power." Members, however, do more than merely affirm the need for this standard of safety. They make the following promise:—

"I will endeavour each year to perform some act, however small, for my country which will increase her commercial prosperity, maintain her maritime supremacy, and strengthen her moral influence among the nations."

Thus the new organisation is triply devoted to the cause of patriotism. A further duty, however, is laid on the members—that of enroling as many members as possible.

Each member wears, in the form of a watch-charm, brooch, stud, or pin, a badge—one of the neatest worn by any society. It is in the form of a tiny red letter "I" on a hollow circle of white enamel.

The Vagrant.

The gourmet thoughtfuly poised an oyster on the prong of his fork and gazed at it with tender affection. Procrastination seemed only to enhance the joy to come. Then he popped it in. "Waiter!" he roared. The servant hurried to his side. "Waiter," exclaimed the man, "these oysters that you brought me are bad." The waiter smiled. "I know that, sir," he answered, "but we have given you three more than you ordered to make up for it."

Once again had he got into respectable society, and he went down to dinner with his hostess. The conversation somehow got on to the Divorce Court. "I hold," said his hostess, "that the greatest scoundrel in the world is the man who makes love to his friend's wife. Do you not agree with me, Mr. Blobbs?" "Well," said Peter, anxious to say the right thing, "you can't exactly make love to a stranger's wife, because you don't know her, don't you know." A massive butler has orders to say, "Not at home," should he see Blobbs within a three-mile radius of the house.

Review.

BARBUS TOR AT HOME.*

Thirty-seven years ago the angling community in this corner of the Empire received from the pen of Mr. H. S. Thomas that classic work The Rod in India. When a treatise of this description passes into a second and third edition without challenge from other authors, it is evident that it can take unto itself the motto nulli secundus. It may be that the presence of this magnum opus on every self-respecting book-shelf throughout the length and breadth of this peninsula has had the effect of frightening away any possible productions on the part of the lesser fry. Whatever the reason be, it is a matter of common knowledge that the angling literature of India is distinctly meagre when judged by the standard of quantity and not quality. For some time past it has been recognised that a volume mainly comprising the humble experiences of these lesser fry, the waters in which they have caught their minnows and lost their whales, would come like The Pickwick, the Owl, and the Waverly pen—a boon and a blessing to fishermen. Skene Dhu has stepped into the breach with a compact and handy volume called The Angler in Northern India. As regards the scope of this publication we cannot do better than quote verbatim its aims and limitations as set forth by the author.

"Firstly, it is by no means intended as a rival for that most excellent manual The Angler's Handbook, but is issued with a view of compiling a further list of localities and bringing many of those already entered more up to date.

"Also, it is published in the hopes that it may be considered as a continuation of The Mighty Mahseer, as, though supplementing the chapter on Barbus Tor himself, practically none of the information concerning other fish, tackle, useful hints, etc., is again reprinted, nor are any of the plates of fish reproduced, although most of the fish are described in detail. Then, although the title Northern India might lead one to suppose only the Punjab and United Provinces were intended, the term Northern is meant in a general sense to take in the whole upper half of India, say north of the Narbudda river including, however, that river and its tributaries."

The first chapter is entirely devoted to a list and brief description of fishes most commonly met with in India, and in this connection we put forward a few suggestions, which if it were possible to carry through would form records of more than passing interest. The visitor to these shores, imbued with the spirit of old Izaak Walton, might imagine that he had unexpectedly dropped into a piscatorial paradise, as instanced by the following excerpts:—

The Mahseer—runs up to 200lb. in weight.
The Rohu—run big to 50 or 60lb.
Wallago Attu—runs very big to 100lb. in weight and over 6 feet in length.
The Gaunch—runs to over 200lb. and 6 feet long.
Genus Macrones.—18 species, some of which attain to great size, 6 feet in length.
The Cutla—runs big 100lb. and 6 feet in length.
The Bumin—runs to over 200lb. and 6 feet in length.
The Nair—runs to over 200lb.

If a novice were to start out with the idea that his basket might be squashed flat by the weight of a 200lb. mahseer, it is within the bounds of possibility that, after a very few days, he would put up his rod and lock up his reel and vote that barbus tor was a fraud and the joys of capturing him something beyond the ordinary angler's delusion. Our contention is that it would be far preferable to put down in black or white all known measurements of the largest specimens that have been caught on rod and line. In two instances, Skene Dhu has mentioned, somewhat vaguely perhaps such records; we refer to the mahseer of 104lbs. taken out of the Hutter River and a goonch of 164lb. killed at Okhla. To read an account of such a Titanic struggle would fire even the blood of the most despicable sluggard, and might lure him forth in an attempt to imitate these heroic deeds. We have before this offered to open our columns in order to facilitate the compilation of a pamphlet containing fish records. Alas! the apathy of the East, or it may be the modesty and reticence of the average angler, has had a deleterious effect on its bulk. The same lucky fisherman who hooked the 104lb. mahseer mentioned above recently slew a good runner-up in the shape of a 102 pounder. Some time ago we published the results of a fishing expedition undertaken on the Irrawaddy near Myitkyina by two military sportsmen from Rangoon. In this trip the largest mahseer to measure its length on terra firma weighed 91lb. We believe we are correct in saying that this fish tops the list as far as Burma is concerned. We could also mention the names of two other officers, who, in identically the same locality, grassed, if the expression be permissible, a couple of mahseer scaling 84 and 81lb. respectively. To obtain, prepare and keep up to date a booklet of records not for the undivided benefit of Barbus Tor, would no doubt present considerable but certainly not insuperable difficulties. In our estimation there is a broad field open for useful work in this connection to an enterprising person who is not afraid to put this hand to the plough.

The second chapter treats of the study of the mahseer with particular reference to his capture in the rivers and streams of the Himalayas. There is much useful counsel set forth, which should appeal to the greenhorn, and naturally help to guide him along the path to good fortune, and send his green heart a bobbing and a throbbing. Chapter III deals with "useful hints." These tit-bits of general information should prove of the greatest service to all true followers of the gentle art, especially the advice tendered under the heading of "medical." When prompt and correct action may be the means of saving the life of a human being it should be the bounden duty of every resident in the East to acquire a thorough knowledge of the more simple though none the less important processes. Skene Dhu by the inclusion of such valuable instructions in this section should have earned the gratitude of all genuine sportsmen.

The author of The Angler in Northern India does not confine his outdoor efforts solely to the slaughter of his finny quarry, he takes a lively interest in the graven aspects of piscine problems. We refer to marking and returning fish to their native element. We heartily concur with the appeal to other members of the brotherhood that they should do their utmost to help on this worthy cause. In the British Isles and in other parts of Europe the statistics established by the recapture of marked salmon has thrown light on what was, a few years back, total darkness. Of the migratory habits and rate of growth, etc., of the mahseer and other Indian fishes very little is accurately known at the present moment. If any permanent and reliable result is to be obtained co-operation among fishermen is above all essential to success. As regards the metal plates utilised for labelling purposes we would put forward a suggestion. If each individual angler manufactures and employs his own private disc, the contingency will in all probability occur, in which two or more badges are of a similar design. Thus the very object in marking fish would be defeated, for erroneous conclusions might be deduced. Moreover the indolence of some natures is beyond all hope of correction. If these plates could be issued from a central bureau or agency, and marked in some particular manner, with consecutive or distinguishing numbers, the experiment would be conducted on a sounder and more substantial basis. This venture once again opens out a vista of possibilities to a zealous organiser.

* The Angler in Northern India.—By Skene Dhu, Pioneer Press, Allahabad.

Skene Dhu closes this chapter with the following words :—

"If other anglers would try marking a few fish * * * I am sure that the courteous editors of the Asian and the Indian Field would willingly lend their columns to record any captures and this keep anglers in touch with each other."

As far as this journal is concerned we cordially invite all fisherman to communicate with us on this subject and we will take a great pleasure in publishing any details of recaptures that may come to hand.

"Localities" forms the title of the fourth and last chapter, which occupies the generous space of 260 out of a complement of 334 pages. The author, in his prologue, asks that criticism may be lenient (from those who judge that this section might be fuller or more comprehensive. We cannot do better than to charge the general public with the burden of shaping their own opinions on this portion of the volume. In our estimation the greatest credit is due to Skene Dhu for the untiring energy that he must have expended in putting on the market the treatise now under review. The task of collecting, arranging and preparing for the press a heterogeneous mass of information connected with three-quarters of the Indian Empire must have been immense. We think that all fishermen east of Suez will join us in congratulating the author on the undoubted success of his labours. We can recommend, without prejudice, The Angler in Northern India to every individual who essays to tread in the footsteps of Izaak Walton. This excellent compilation also deserves a place on the bookshelves of every mess and club library from Kashmir to Cape Comorin and from Quetta to Myitkyina. The addition of a full index has increased the general utility of the work. Before taking leave of this recent publication we will propound a few suggestions and observations in view of the prospective appearance of a second edition, which we trust will become a reality in the near future. We consider the fishing diary is hardly suitable to requirements. In the first instance the "remarks" column is far too limited in extent. The essence of such a diary should fall into this category. It would be preferable to increase the dimensions of the diary all round. Certain advantages would also be derivable by keeping it entirely separated from the body of the book. A pocket on the inside of the back cover would present a convenient and handy resting place. The incorrigible ruffian who is eternally borrowing the prize packets of a library and continually omitting to return them is too well known to merit description. If the step we moot were carried into effect an irreparable loss might be prevented. There is yet another point to which we must make a passing allusion. Criticism, if employed in a healthy manner and not misapplied in a carping spirit, should achieve good results. A perusal, more especially in connection with Chapter II. of the Angler in Northern India, has disclosed a curious mannerism in the author's style, which he would do well to amend. The number of sentences that commence with the particle "and" is truly astonishing, moreover an expression such as "and once again finally" scarcely reads harmoniously.

But if ever the scorn of the critic's pen were righteously and richly deserved, surely the fact disclosed by the following tale should draw forth the merciless lash of his rhetorical invective "My most cordial thanks are due to those brother anglers who have helped me with notes and information.

"And here I would add one thing. Only three out of all the men that I have corresponded with have in any way been averse to the publication of localities."

Oh! you selfish, mean, illiberal, ungenerous, narrow-minded, miserly, shabby, niggardly, close-fisted, churlish, hide-bound, sordid and mercenary trio of dogs in a common manger, we will not be so uncharitable as to wish that your earmarkgeonly avarice may reap its own due reward. Rather would we say purge yourselves of such plebeian atrocities, if this slight sacrifice be within the bounds of possibility and of your degraded natures. Cast off this vile slough and appear before your fellow fishermen humbled and repentant of your past infamous malpractices. Verbum sat sapienti.

THE KING OF THE BEASTS.

For centuries the lion bore the title of King of Beasts, but during the past ten years or so there has arisen a tendency to depose the monarch from his proud position and from recent correspondence in the Times of India it will be seen that there is at least one strong supporter of the superiority of the tiger. There can be no doubt that the hitherto accepted position of the lion has been largely due to the noble and majestic appearance imparted to him by his mane. Added to this are his historical and biblical associations, the glamour of a thousand years of story and the prestige of such somewhat apocryphal tales as that of Androcles. The lion has generally been represented as noble and generous by nature; the tiger as a cruel and bloodthirsty animal with attributes of relentless savagery. In this respect there is not likely to be much difference in the nature of the two greatest of beasts of prey. That the lion can be as cruel as the tiger has been sufficiently proved by the experiences of Colonel Patterson, the author of "The Man-eaters of Tsavo." No tales, real or mythical, of the savagery of wild beasts exceed in horror those of the maneless lions which took such heavy toll on those employed during the construction of the railway in East Africa. No doubt the tigress whose fell deeds are related in Sanderson's Thirteen Years among the Wild Beasts of India was as terrible an enemy of humanity but its performances were wanting in the dramatic surroundings of those of the man-eaters of Tsavo. It would appear, moreover, that the lion is more addicted to man-eating than the tiger. Another ignoble attribute of the lion is its habit of preying on carrion, to which we believe the tiger seldom resorts, although it will eat its own kill when in a somewhat advanced state of decomposition.

In view of the controversy that has arisen, calling in question the lion's title to the proud position of "King of Beasts" it is interesting to see what naturalists have to say on the subject. Dr Lydekker, who is a competent and keen naturalist, tells us: "Till well on in the present century the title was almost universally bestowed upon the lion by writers of natural history, on account of its generally majestic appearance, and the assumed nobility and fierceness of its character. Of late years, however, there has been a strong tendency on the part of those who have had the best opportunities of observing the animal in its native haunts, to depose the lion from the proud position it had so long occupied. The reasons for this change of view appear to be that when roaming abroad by daylight the lion, as Mr. F. C. Selous, the well-known African hunter, informs us, does not carry his head so high up as he ought to do in order to be entitled to the epithet majestic; while his disposition, instead of being noble and fearless, is considered by Livingstone and other writers to be more correctly described as cowardly and mean." No doubt at its best a fine well-maned lion presents a most imposing appearance, but lions with good manes are comparatively scarce in a wild state, and without its mane the lion certainly looks inferior to the tiger.

As regards the courage of the African animal, an evidently well-informed writer in the last February number of the Badminton Magazine says:—"A lion is one of the most cowardly of animals as well as being one of the most astute. Even when wounded it is possible to come close up to him in heavy jungle without his thinking of charging. The only time apparently that he summons up courage to charge is when he is fairly cornered and knows he has been seen." In this respect, then, the lion would appear to be generally inferior to the tiger, which will almost invariably charge with the greatest ferocity when wounded. It may also be said that the method of hunting the lion would not be readily adopted in the case of the tiger, not merely because of the different habits of the latter animal, but also for the reason that its ferocious attributes invest the sportsman with more respect for its character. Even as regards general appearance, the tiger may well be held to be a serious rival of the lion; the colour and coloration of the tiger are infinitely superior in beauty to the drab coat of the lion; and with a fine ruff round his head, the tiger may well bear comparison even with a well maned lion.

One of the kingly attributes of the lion sometimes referred to is its roar, which has been represented as something approaching the thunder of the elements. But this roar on investigation appears to be something very different. As one of the correspondents of the Times of India says, "although the lion may not 'roar as gently as a sucking dove,' Livingstone says that a European cannot distinguish between the note of a lion and that of an ostrich." Probably there is not much to chose between the roars of the two representatives of the great carnivora.

The relative size of the lion and tiger is a matter of great interest in connection with the subject at issue. Extraordinary ideas on this point appear to have been prevalent at one time and find expression even in recent publications. Thus a comperatively new Encyclopedia gives the length of the lion's head and body as eight feet with an additional four feet for the tail. An old edition of the same work records that "the tiger is sometimes fifteen feet in entire length to the tip of the tail; an instance is on record of eighteen feet." However these elongated measurements may of course be at once discarded. I fancy the eleven and twelve foot tigers of a past generation, mostly no doubt taken from skins, may also be relegated to the regions of myth.

The first thing in comparing the measurements of animals is to see that they are taken in the same manner. A tiger or lion measured "sportsman fashion" will record on the tape a foot or so more than one measured between uprights. The length of the tail should also be taken separately, and weight, height and muscular development have to be taken into consideration. Sir Samuel Baker, a sportsman who had experience of both, considered the lion to be the heavier of the two animals, but his opinion does not appear to be borne out by recorded measurements. Mr. Selous after having flayed it, "carefully measured the naked carcase of the largest lion (out of six). From the top of the front teeth to the end of the tail it measured 9 feet 7 inches, laying the tape along the curves of the body and as all the gristle and meat of the nose had been cut away with the skin and at least an inch must have been lost with the tuft at the end of the tail, I think it would have measured all but ten feet before it was skinned, even without making any allowance for the mane." This is certainly not a very satisfactory measurement for purposes of comparison. Mr. Vaughan Kirby considers that 9 feet 6 inches measured along the contour is an average length for a good male lion. This would certainly be under the average for good male tigers. According to Dr. Lydekker (Game Animals of Africa) the record lengths of lions, before skinning are 10 feet 7 inches and 10 feet 5 inches. These are presumable measurements taken "sportsman fashion" round the curves.

The Maharaja of Cooch Behar in his Thirty-seven Years of Big Game Shooting gives measurements of thirteen tigers ten feet or more in length, the longest being 10 feet 5 inches, but longer tigers than this have been recorded. It is not stated how these measurements were taken—presumably "sportsman fashion." The biggest tiger killed by the present writer measured 9 feet 8 inches between uprights and 9 inches longer round the curves. But it had a tail of only 3 feet whereas the biggest Cooch Behar tiger had a tail 3 feet 6 in inches length. Mr. Blanford, a very competent observer, was of opinion that the tiger stands lower, but is heavier and more powerful than the lion. Mr. Vaughan Kirby gives the average standing height of the lion at forty inches. Mr. Blanford gives one at 42 inches and another 38 inches. The Maharaja of Cooch Behar has in his list several tigers over forty inches in height and one of 44½ inches, which he remarks was by far the heaviest and biggest tiger he had seen. As regards weight, Mr. Vaughan Kirby says that an average lion will range from 400 to 500 pounds, a somewhat elastic estimate. Mr. Selous killed a fine one that weighed 500 pounds. One killed in the Orange Free State in 1865 is reported to have weighed over 583 pounds. The Maharaja of Cooch Behar did not weigh his biggest tiger above referred to. He has thirteen recorded with a weight exceeding 490 pounds; of these seven weighted over 500 pounds the heaviest being 546, 532 and 520 pounds respectively.

Dr. Lydekker says the skull of an adult lion may measure as much as 13 inches in extreme length with a breadth of 9½ inches across the cheek bones, but I think larger measurements are recorded elsewhere. The length of seven of the Cooch Behar tiger skulls is recorded; they are all over 14 inches in length and the biggest is 15¾ inches.

From what has been said and taking all weights and measurements into consideration, we incline to the opinion that, while lions and tigers are much of a size, the superiority in weight and average measurements goes to the tiger.

While the lion has been divested of most of his royal attributes, which are almost entirely due to the glamour of history, it is certainly open to doubt whether the tiger can be installed in his place. The mane will always give to the finest typical representatives of the species a noble and imposing aspect that renders the lion in appearance a more impressive looking animal than the tiger. But to the latter will probably be awarded the palm for majestic beauty due to colour and coloration, and for muscular power as well as fierceness and courage.

FISHING IN FINLAND.

I.

ESPRE NOUS.

THE Anglo-Indian on furlough frequently finds that time hangs heavily on his hands. Should he be a follower of the Gentle Art, he will probably elect to spend some of his hard-earned savings in pursuit of his favourite pastime. The choice of a locality usually entails much discussion, and correspondence passing through the post, before a solution is eventually reached. In Great Britain, except, perhaps, in some parts of the Emerald Isle, for the poor man, salmon-fishing is practically out of the question. The prices demanded are in most instances far beyond the humble means of the exile from the East revisiting for a short period the land of his birth and up-bringing. In desperation a trip after trout to some Higland loch is generally undertaken. But once again it has to be acknowledged that the expenses incurred in this connection are hardly commensurate with the baskets creeled. Some more venturesome anglers cross the North Sea to Norway or Sweden, but the ubiquitous tourist to the land of the hardy Norseman has had in recent years the effect of increasing prices to an alarming degree.

Where, then, can a pleasant holiday be enjoyed, in a reasonable climate, on a slender purse.

Echo answers—"Finland"—.

I have frequently been interrogated as to the cause that originally brought Finland, of all the countries of Europe, into the circle of visitable areas. The prospect of a provincial season with its concomitant round of tea-parties, and "at homes," in which putting competitions, smelling events, book, song, and other allusions figured prominently, rendered a move to some less poodlefakiecross (there is no exact English equivalent) entourage essential to a proper peace of mind. Such was primarily the motive, and in its stead an outdoor life, affording some form of sport was a desideratum. As regards the cause, a fellow-passenger on the homeward voyage, likewise a keen angler, had mentioned Finland as a potential fishing and pleasure ground; not that he had ever visited that Russian dependency himself, but hearsay had furnished excellent reports of its capabilities.

One morning in the early part of June of last year I wandered into the offices of Messrs. Thos. Cook and Son, in Ludgate Circus, E.C., and enquired whether the firm had established any branch bureau in Finland. To quote a parliamentary expression—the answer was in the negative. A Baedeker's or a Murray's guide-book was next demanded. Alas—the nearest approach was a volume on Russia, printed in French! My footsteps were then directed towards Long Acre, and entering Stanford's new premises a request was tendered to the effect that I wished to be shown a map of Finland. Only one solitary copy was forthcoming, and its supposed worth can be judged by the price quoted—one golden sovereign and four shillings! It is hardly needful to state that this precious chart did not change hands. The series of reverses just described was indeed proof positive that Finland, as a tourist resort, had, to all intents and purposes, been unexploited by the travelling public. The key to the situation, however, was at length obtained through an application to Messrs. John Good and Sons, of Hull, agents to the Finland Steamship Company. In due course two booklets were received; the information derivable from them, together with an enthusiastic letter from my fishing tackle maker, were instrumental in the die being cast in favour of a visit to Finland. One of these booklets is aptly termed—"Off the Beaten Track"—and contains a fund of useful instruction for the intending visitor. There is one point that has escaped notice—that is, the price of salt in the Grand-duchy. Cum grano salis has withstood the test of centuries; but in these degenerate days some crackers require a ton, and not a grain, of salt to make them slip down all but the most gullible of throats. The ordinary human being is frequently justified in wondering whether some authors, politicians, and explorers have not really been transformed into the same saline figure as Lot's wife. Hark ye awhile to the following sensational encomium.

"The popular idea of Finland is completely beside the mark. In summer this little northern country is one of the most beautiful holiday resorts in Europe. Its meadows are gay with flowers. Its waving forests of fir and pine and birch have a thick undergrowth of berry-bearing plants and shrubs. A thousand lakes of silvery clear water mirror the blue skies and the green shores. Larks are singing in the skies, and rainbow-hued dragon flies flutter up and down the meadows and lake shores. The air is balmy with the aromatic essence of the pines, and the sun shines with a tropic warmth that would be almost intolerable were it not for the grateful shade of the forests and the coolness of the lake waters."

Ah—what a truly utopian scene is depicted. Is there no treacherous rift in this harmonious lute?

But read on—

"The air is exceptionally bracing, the beauty of the scenery is great, and has a peculiarity of its own. The fishing is splendid. Trout, salmon, and grayling await you in the rivers, which simply teem with fish, and if you are a keen shot you will have plenty of opportunity of using your gun, for there are wild duck, capercailzie, black cock, and the true hazel grouse to be brought down. The open season for elk occurs during the first week of September, when an allotted number of males are shot yearly."

Oh, salt—where is thy flavour? Oh, ye birds of the air, ye beast of the forest, ye big and little fishes, spread out thy tails, for the Nimrod is at hand with a whole boat load of bottled brine with which to anoint thy feathered, furred, and scaly caudal appendages!

But what of the fishing resorts? Are these nooks of nature likewise illumined by the halo that crowns this paradisiacal province? Let the reader judge for himself.

"The following valuable information re salmon fishing at Vaala has been obtained from an Englishman resident in Finland, who is fully conversant with the fishing there, and he states that his own experience and that of his friends, is 'that Kajana and Vaala are the two best places in Finland for fishing:—

"Any intending tourists, who place fishing first, should travel to Kajana, and, after spending a few days there, continue the journey to Vaala. The latter place is undoubtedly the finest fishing ground in Finland. Of course it may happen at certain times that the fish are off their feed, and do not rise well, but as a general rule one can reckon upon first class sport in July and August.

"A fishing ticket available for the whole season costs 10·25 Finnish marks, i.e. 8*s.* and boatmen charge Fmk 6 5*s.* per day; room and food will cost a further Fmk 5 or 6 per day.

"In July 1907, between 9th and 27th, an angler caught 33 salmon, weights ranging from 6½ to 29lbs. besides numerous trout and grayling."

How simple, how delicious, how entrancing it all sounds. One feels inclined to steal one's neighbour's rod, reel, and tackle-box, and hurry off pell-mell to such fairy spots. And Kajana—just listen—.

"The Kajana River abounds in grayling and trout; perch, cream roach, and pike are also found there. The largest trout caught here by rod weighed 13 English lbs., the largest grayling 4½lbs. The usual weight of grayling and trout is 1 to 3lbs. but there are frequent instance of trout from 5 to 6lbs.".

Num!— num!!— num!!!—

But like the monkey in front of the looking-glass, let us make a grab behind it, and see what comes to hand.

"It is the winter which has given rise to the popular idea of Finland. Then, indeed, the landscape is truly arctic. The mercury freezes in the bulb of the thermometer Rivers and lakes and the sea itself are frozen solid, and the trees bend and break beneath their heavy burden of snow. The sun only shows itself a red disc, for a few hours a day above the southern horizon. For seven or eight months the icey north claims Finland as its own"—.

O tempora! O mores!—Just imagine—Rivers, and lakes, and the sea itself are frozen solid! What a magnificent opening for some enterprising company promoter! There are the salmon, and the trout, in fact all the various species of salt and fresh water fish hermetically imprisoned within a block of ice as large as England and Scotland put together, and the Creator alone knows how many feet in thickness; and all that is required is to break it up and tow it piecemeal with its entombed and refrigerated contents to the open markets of Europe.

Enough has, perhaps, been said to demonstrate the style of literature with which the intending tourist is primed, and the hesitating sportsman is allured. The level-headed individual will assuredly want to know where unquestionable facts merge into flighty fancies, where one can tread with a firm step, and where it is necessary to sound the soil for hidden pitfalls. The statement that every cubic inch of water is frozen solid can be nothing more than a gross and absurd exaggeration. If such were the case every form of life swimming in its depths would become extinct. Are then the weights of the finny leviathans, which are reported to have been snatched from their natural element at Kajana and Vaala, also to be relegated to the same stratum of Ureism as the "solid frozen sea?" Too much salt-eating in the East raises a thirst well nigh unquenchable. It will be my endeavour to set before the reader a few facts about Finland and some experiences which befell me, and I will promise at the outset that the dish will not be ruined by an admixture of saline condiments.

MONVES.

Being a successful business man, and having made lots of money, he naturally thought he would be as successful in the realms of literature. So he wrote a book and sent it to a publisher. To his intense disgust, instead of offering a substantial cheque for the copyright, the publisher demanded a certain sum to pay him for the risk in issuing the book. The author was very wrath. But after he had cooled down he decided to send the manuscript to a journalistic friend, and ask his opinion. "What do you think I should get for this?" Quietly the journalist waded through the M.S. and made a short note at the top—"Five years."

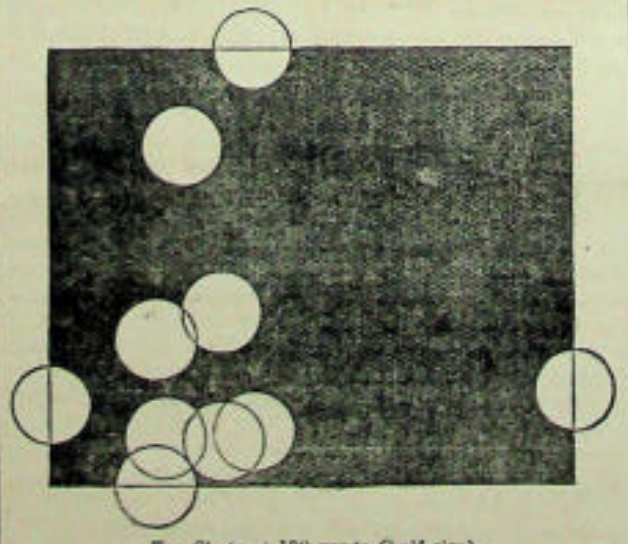
Shooting.

IMPROVED SHOT PATTERNS WITH THE BALL-AND-SHOT GUN.

In a recent issue of the Indian Field, the improvements in bullet effectiveness secured with the "Super-Magnum Explora" ball-and-shot gun were dealt with. Messrs. Westley Richards and Company, the makers of the "Explora," series have introduced another model called the "Improved Explora," in which improved shot patterns are obtained without sacrificing the bullet efficiently which has made the "Explora" so successful.

The shot patterns obtained with the "Explora" were about equal to that of a cylinder gun and were well up to the standard expected of an ordinary ball-and-shot gun. While the increased velocity, longer range and superior accuracy of the bullet was not accompanied by any deterioration in shot patterns, neither was any sensible improvement made in the efficiency of this side of the composite weapon. Since the "Explora" was first introduced in 1905 the makers have found that two perfectly distinct requirements existed. In the first place, where the ball-and-shot gun was used chiefly as a heavy rifle, sportsmen were perfectly satisfied with the shot patterns, but would like to shoot heavier charges so increasing the energy of the ball. The difficulties in the way of this consummation having been overcome, the "Super-Magnum Explora" has been introduced. In the second place, where the improved bullet-accuracy and efficiency of the ordinary "Explora" was found fully adequate for all the purposes required there was often expressed a desire for a similar degree of improvement on the shot side. With this point we now have to deal.

The ball-and-shot gun, being only a little heavier than the ordinary shot-gun, is very largely used in India equally as a shot-gun and as a rifle, so that the need for improvement in shot patterns would naturally be widely felt. When success had been obtained by modifying the rifling and using pointed projectiles with the L.T. brass cap in projecting bullets at a higher velocity than before, without upsetting them in flight, it was found that with the new rifling used the old standard of shot patterns could be maintained. Working backwards, it was further found that by chambering the gun to take 2½ inch instead of 2¼ inch cases and using the new rifling and pointed bullets, the "Explora" standard of ball shooting could be conformed to, or even slightly advanced upon, while the shot patterns would be distinctly better. A new model, called the "Improved Explora," has accordingly been constructed on these lines. The rifling has fewer grooves, and is shallower than that of the old ball-and-shot gun so that the friction both of bullets and shot is materially reduced. It is to this that the improved shot patterns are due.



A lengthy test, conducted in the presence of the writer, reveals interesting details of the improvement effected. Under test conditions the old "Explora" gave average patterns of 120 to 130 pellets in the 30 inch circles at 40 yards. The following results were obtained with the "Improved Explora" using 1¼ oz. of No. 6 shot (301 pellets) and 33 grains of Smokeless Diamond in 2½ inch case. The counts are in selected 30 inch circle at 40 yards.

2.	122	131
3.	136	145
4.	136	143
5.	135	135
6.	160	150
Mean	141	142

This represents distinctly better shooting than the "Explora" type previously produced. The patterns were nicely distributed, there being an absence of those bare patches which ball-and-shot gun patterns sometimes show. These are distinctly better than ordinary cylinder results, and can be classed as representing slightly choked effects. The makers can regulate the "Improved Explora" barrels to shoot to a standard averaging between 145 and 155 pellets or up to the 50 per cent. average of improved cylinder game-shooting barrels.

In regard to bullet efficiency, the standard of ballistics adopted is the same for the "Improved Explora" as for the ordinary "Explora," but the bullet has the L.T. pointed brass cap instead of the round nosed cap, and the rifling, as already stated, is different. The appended diagram, made at 100 yards with the L.T. pointed bullet, shows excellent grouping, the 10 shots being spaced within 5 by 3¼ inches. It will be noticed that three shots have broken through the card so closely together that their outlines can only just be traced. The group represents better shooting than that of the "Explora" with round nosed bullet, and taken in combination with the improved shot patterns it affords extremely satisfactory evidence Messrs. Westley Richards and Company of the advance have effected in their new model. One of the distinguishing features of the "Explora" was its ability to shoot lead bullets as well as the brass capped form and this advantage has been preserved by the adoption of a new lead bullet of pointed form. The construction of this bullet insures greater solidity in the structure, which therefore has less tendency to break up on impact. While it expands and mushrooms perfectly it retains a large proportion of its original mass in the course of its passage within the object struck.

IMPROVED EXPLORA.

Ten Shots at 100 yards (half size).

This new combination of bullet and rifling brings the "Explora" ball-and-shot guns nearer that ideal of a combination in which there shall be no sacrifice either on one side or the other. The shot patterns obtained with the particular model tested are not materially better than those obtained with the "Super-Magnum Explora" but the makers would not guarantee with the latter the same standard that we happened to get. With the "Improved Explora" shooting the lower velocity bullet out of 2½ inch cases, the shot pattern can be regulated to the requirements of individual users. With an experimental single barrel, that would shoot the pointed bullets well, the following shot patterns were obtained using the 33 grains charge of Diamond, and 1¼ oz of No. 6 shot. The counts are in 30 inch circle at 40 yards as before:—

1.	163	4.	162
3.	169	6.	185

For this series the average is 171 pellets, the characteristic pattern being about 165. With a ball-and-shot gun to shoot up to 150 yards or so, the makers are prepared to guarantee patterns practically up to this standard. The bullet used in the "Improved Explora" weights 730 grains and has a muzzle velocity of 1,200 feet per second. The brass pointed form has great penetrative power while the lead bullet is available for expansion, and either can be shot from a gun weighing about 7 lbs. This assuredly represents a very advanced type of ball-and-shot gun, and one upon which Messrs. Westley Richards and Company, are entitled to be highly congratulated.

RIFLE NOTES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The new service bullet, at least the one under experiment, is rather a startling innovation and rather upsets one's old ideas of weight being necessary for the correct flight of a projectile. In the report of Mr. Haldane's speech on the Army Estimates the new bullet is said to be of substantially the same form as the German Spitzer or pointed bullet of 154 grains weight, but though it is somewhat longer it is a great deal lighter, its weight being only 100 grains, or 115 grains less than the present service bullet of 215 grains. This is due to its being made of some very light metal. The bullet is said to have given very excellent results in flatness of trajectory similar to the German and French bullet.

The extremely light weight has, I presume, been found necessary owing to the acknowledged weakness of our breech action which cannot stand the strain of the increased charge which would be required to propel a bullet of the weight of the German one at the very high velocity now considered requisite, but I think the light bullet will hardly be found to compare favourably with the heavier one at long ranges. The results of the trials will be interesting reading when they are published.

The saving in weight of the new ammunition will be a very great consideration, being more than a pound and a half for 100 rounds, over 16lbs. in 1,000 rounds, and about 7⅓ tons in one million rounds.

A correspondent has already pointed out in your columns the deadly effect of the pointed bullet, and it is time we adopted it to place our men on an equal footing with continental soldiers in this respect. I am afraid, however, that the light weight of only 100 grains will tell unfavourably on the wounding power of the bullet compared with their heavier ones.

I have heard nothing more of the automatic rifle of our future armament. Apparently the question of complete re—armament will be put off for the present. Perhaps, however, the next few months may bring out some satisfactory weapon. The life of a small bore rifle shooting a long and comparatively heavy bullet with very high velocity is not a long one so far as accuracy is concerned, and every rifle will require a few spare barrels in reserve if accuracy of the Bisley standard is expected to be maintained.

B.

THE PRACTICAL APPLICATION OF SILENCERS TO GUNS AND RIFLES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Numerous accounts of the Maxim Silencer have lately appeared in the English newspapers. So many extraordinary inventions are reported from time to time, most of which, according to their enthusiastic chroniclers, are destined to revolutionize everything, that the cautious reader is apt to regard all these glowing accounts with scepticism. His want of faith is justified too, for very very few of these so-called great discoveries are ever heard of again.

My own view of the Maxim Silencer has been that though no doubt there is something in it yet the contrivance is more of a toy, destined to amuse newspaper men, than a practical appliance, which one should have fitted without delay to one's guns and rifles.

A home made silencer, constructed out of a piece of air-gun spring enclosed in a length of brass tube, and made to slip on to the muzzle of a Stevens rifle, like a sight protector, demonstrated conclusively that it was possible to get rid of a good deal of the sound of the explosion. The rough fitting reduced the report of ten or twelve grains of black powder to a light crack like a short ·22 rim-fire cartridge.

Maxim's Silencer for high power rifles is about 6½ inches long and weighs three-quarters of a pound. Inside the tube are a number of discs (eleven in the silencer under discussion) arranged much like a turbine. The discs nearest the muzzle are of stouter metal than those further away and are held in place by annular indentations in the tube. Each disc also has a slot in the edge fitting over a rib in the interior of the tube: this is to prevent rotation. The gases, as they issue from the muzzle of the rifle, are whirled round in the silencer, and the blast thereby so controlled that nearly three-quarters of the noise of the report is got rid of.

The silencer was tested practically in the United States with one of the new Service American rifles.

The general result of the experiments showed that the silencer reduced the report about 70 per cent. and the recoil by about half.

Accuracy was not at all affected. In the case of a number of groups fired from the machine rest at 1,000 yards range, the rifle gave just the same shooting with and without the apparatus.

The ammunition used was specially selected, loaded with pyrocellulose powder and 150 grain bullet, giving, without the silencer, a muzzle velocity of 2,700 feet per second.

The velocity does not appear to have been tested with the silencer attached, but is presumably much the same as it is without, for the shooting was not altered by the apparatus.

The silencer was also tested in the dusk and found to get rid of the flash in addition to most of the report.

All the above details point to Mr. Maxim's invention being likely to prove of some really practical use. The weight right at the end of the muzzle is a considerable drawback and would seem to preclude the use of a silencer on the shot-gun. That is to say, unless it can be made very much lighter: this, having in mind the large calibre of the 12 bore shot-gun, appears unlikely.

The Maxim Silencer is attached to the muzzle of the rifle by means of the familiar interrupted screw, so that it is very easy to take on and off.

How the arrangement would stand the continuous action of hot gases on the silencing discs and how often and in what manner it would require cleaning out, are matters which do not yet appear to have been cleared up.

One thing strikes one forcibly, that even if of little practical use to honest people, it is certainly a grand invention for poachers.

(FROM THE HOME PAPERS.)

GOOD FRIDAY, 25th March 1910.

THE TURF.

LIVERPOOL.

LOCAL prophecy was correct, as after all the beautiful early spring a blizzard of snow fell at morning exercise last Friday, but fortune stood our friend, and another high wind, with even a keener edge than Thursday's, swept the sky, giving the sun an almost clear course, and eradicating all traces of yesterday's rain left the course in good, sound condition.

The Irish brigade, whose happy hunting grounds are Aintree and Altcar, were in rare force; the cherry brogue and exuberant spirits of the irrepressible Irishman were in evidence on all sides. Those good fellows, the Irish padres, were as usual in strong force; one looks for them here as an established feature.

Lancashire, and, for the matter of that, counties a long way south, had sent their fair women and brave men to swell the representative assemblage that greeted the Prince of Wales, who headed the party from Knowsley.

Year by year a record is claimed, and, of course, with a rapidly multiplying population, it is a natural sequence, dependent, by the way, on the weather, which tempted everyone who could do so to see what can be seen of the Grand National. The attendance reminded one of Ascot, so far as the club enclosures went, the crush being something incredible. The stands presented a brilliant appearance the fair sex mustering in crowds, while the Senate, the Bar, the sister Services, music, literature, and the drama were numerously represented. Outside the holiday crowd fairly occupied the course, a long line of coaches, carriages, and motors filling the far side of the rails; but round the Grand National course the rails were not so thickly lined by spectators as last year. Depôt of Museum and Naturalists' supplies with Department for Ornamental Taxidermy. Feather Pictures of all India Game Birds made by W. M. Hutton.

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

"THAT DOTH RENEW SWIFTER THAN BLOOD DECAYS."—Shakespeare.

Time has Proved that nothing terminates life in the aged so quickly and so surely as rust. Be active—if your power and vigour are waning, if you have no inclination for work or pleasure, if despondent, languid, or weak, Wincarnis will bring new life, create pure, rich, vitalising blood, build up new tissues, new nerve force, and with these new strength of body and brain. Wincarnis starts by checking all waste of strength and renews the lost vitality that nature needs for perfect health, fortifying every organ of the body to ward off ill-health and disease.

The same grand weather which obtained all the week lasted out till the finish. The two spring fixtures form undoubtedly the hardest week of the whole season, and the racegoer who "does" them properly is a tired man when the curtain falls on Saturday at Liverpool, be he the richer or the poorer for his toil and trouble. The springlike surroundings lent a charm to sport which has shown no dearth at either venue, and though the Prince of Wales was not present on Saturday the rank and fashion which had kept the club enclosures and the county stands full for the most part stuck to their guns and made a brave show; while, of course, the business part of the community was fully represented up to the finish, the falling off being most noticeable in the ranks of holiday-makers. Results:—

FOOTBALL.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

Up to the present the big feature of the international championship under Association rules has been the play of the Irishmen, who, drawing with England, at Belfast last month, Saturday in the same city, defeated Scotland by 1 to 0. In so doing the representatives of the Sister Isle gained what was only their second victory over Scotland in twenty-six years, the one previous success which had attended their efforts against the northern kingdom taking place at Glasgow in 1903. At the moment they certainly possess excellent prospects of at least sharing, and of possibly securing, first honours, for they have only Wales now to meet, and the representatives of the Principality have already gone down before both Scotland and England. Form all round, however, appears remarkably even, no more than one goal having separated the opposing teams in any of the four international engagements already decided. Play does not seem up to the usual standard, despite the capital work which Wales accomplished against England at Cardiff last Monday, but it is certainly a welcome development of the Association game that, instead of the championship being always assured to either England or Scotland, Ireland and Wales should now be able to hold their own. How great is the advance made by Ireland this year may be gathered from the fact that last season the Sister Isle lost to England by 4 to 0, to Scotland by 5 to 0 and to Wales by 3 to 2. The result of the championship will not be determined until the second Monday in April, Wales and Ireland meeting on that day in Wales. In the meantime the question of supremacy between England and Scotland will have been determined by the match at Glasgow next Saturday week.

Three-fourths of the huge programme entailed by the First League competition has now been fulfilled and, apart from the possibility of a complete upset of form within the next few weeks, Aston Villa are practically certain to carry off the championship for the sixth time in the history of the club. Already the famous Birmingham organisation have secured 62 points—four more than stand to the credit of Notts County, who have two matches fewer than the Villa left to play. Notts County may possibly be overtaken by Newcastle United, Sheffield United, Blackburn Rovers and Liverpool, but none of these four have much chance of seriously challenging the Villa for first honours. While the struggle for the championship thus threatens to end somewhat tamely, and Bolton Wanderers cannot now reasonably expect to escape from the last place in the competition, a most interesting struggle is in progress to decide the question whether Middlesbrough or one of the three London clubs shall accompany Bolton Wanderers in the Second Division next season. Tottenham Hotspur at the moment stand in the greatest danger, but there is little to choose in the positions of the North London club and Woolwich Arsenal and Middlesbrough on the other.

Saturday's results, except in one or two instances, were altogether surprising, only two of the clubs playing at home gaining victories, and no fewer than five having to admit defeat. At White Hart-lane Tottenham Hotspur found themselves completely outplayed by Newcastle United, and Bolton Wanderers went down very badly before Manchester United at Old Trafford, but the other three clubs standing low on the list all fared well, Chelsea holding their own with Everton at Goodison Park, Middlesbrough overcoming Notts Forest at Nottingham and Woolwich Arsenal beating Bradford City at Valley Parade—this last performance being one which few teams can claim to have accomplished this season. Chelsea, too, had good reason to congratulate themselves. Taking the field at Everton without either Woodward or Windridge, they found themselves a goal to the bad at half-time, and yet drew at 2 goals all. Preston North End—a truly remarkable side, inasmuch as while unable to claim a single victory away from home, they possess a splendid record for matches on the Deepdale enclosure—showed themselves once again a great team at home, their meeting with Notts County resulting in a victory of no less than 4 goals to 0.

The results of Saturday's games among the more prominent clubs of the Second Division of the League have brought about a singular alteration in the state of affairs. Derby County, who a week ago were by no means certain of keeping their place at the head of the competition, are now four points ahead of Manchester City with only one extra match played, and for the moment they appear practically certain of promotion. Beaten on Wednesday last and only able to draw yesterday Manchester City have not made much progress, but they still stand two points in front of the next club on the list. Their most dangerous rivals seemed to be Leicester Fosse, but they lost to Birmingham and allowed Oldham Athletic and Hull City to advance above them. Both these teams have fulfilled two more engagements than the Fosse, so that their advantage is not so pronounced as it at first sight appears, but if Manchester City and Leicester Fosse suffer another defeat each the position will be quite open.

Tomorrow the ties in the semi-final round of the Association Cup take place, Newcastle United and Swindon meeting at Tottenham and Everton and Barnsley at Leeds. Barnsley, on reaching the penultimate stage of the competition, have owed much, it is generally believed, to the peculiarities of the Barnsley ground, where they have gained all their victories, and on neutral territory they will probably experience much difficulty in holding their own with so well equipped a side as Everton. Swindon will have many supporters at Tottenham, but from what was seen on that ground yesterday the tie would appear almost a certainty for Newcastle United. It by no means follows, however, that Newcastle will play as skilfully and confidently in a Cup tie as they did against Hotspur in a League match.

The finish of the Southern League competition promises to prove much more interesting than seemed likely a few weeks ago. For three weeks now Queen's Park Rangers have had to be content with a position second to Brighton and Hove Albion, and a defeat by Bristol Rovers during the week made their task of pulling up three points in their outstanding fixtures less easy. Both the leaders won yesterday, the Albion doing the better performance in overcoming Millwall at North Greenwich, though the Rangers were quite at their best in scoring 4—0 against Luton. With Swindon, Crystal Palace and Southampton losing, the two top clubs have the fight to themselves and will probably remain unchallenged.

IRELAND VS. SCOTLAND.—Although the weather turned out cloudy and threatening the conditions at Windsor Park, Belfast, for the twenty-seventh match between Ireland and Scotland were excellent. The turf was in splendid condition, and with Ireland showing improved form everything pointed to a good game. When the players entered the field there were fully 18,000 people present. The only change from the originally selected sides was the substitution of McTavish of Falkirk for McMenemy of the Celtic in the Scottish forward line. A fresh breeze blew across the ground and Scotland gained no advantage by winning the toss. Ireland attacked from the kick-off, but Resentile after a good run was forced over the line. Then the Scottish left wing brought off a pretty combined run, but Quinn, who received the centre, was neatly robbed by McConnell. Sinclair followed with a run for Scotland, only to send his shot wide of the home goal. Scott saved well when the Irish goal was in danger as the result of a free kick against McConnell, and a little later Harris checked Walker when that player looked like getting through. For the next ten minutes the Irish forwards played splendidly. Thompson once after a good run, sent in a tremendous shot which Brownlie only saved with the utmost difficulty. The Scottish goalkeeper also stopped several other fine shots. Play was carried on at a fine pace by both sides, one of the features being the way in which McConnell held Quinn, the Scottish centre forward. The Irish centre half played a masterly game, and was repeatedly cheered by the spectators. From a free kick against Ireland Quinn shot high over the bar and then nearly scored when Scott fisted away a centre by Sinclair. Ireland set up a promising attack as the result of a long run by Thompson, but the final shot went wide. A little later Thompson should have scored after brilliant work by Lacey, shooting miserably when he had an open goal before him. Murray, too, had a fine chance, but was robbed by Loney when in the act of shooting. In the last few minutes of the half Ireland attacked with vigour, but met with no success. Half-time:—

Ireland	...	... 0
Scotland	...	... 0

The second half began with an attack on the Irish goal, but McConnell finally cleared and, with the ball taken down the field Scotland had to concede a corner from which Renneville sent behind. Huggins nearly broke through the Irish defence and, although McCann stopped him, an exciting scramble in the home goal mouth followed. Breaking away the Irish forwards brought off a pretty passing run and Renneville finishing with a fine centre enabled Thompson to score for Ireland with a fast shot. After this goal Ireland played better than ever, their backs doing especially well, and more than holding the Scottish forwards. McConnell continued to frustrate nearly every effort by Quinn. The Scotch goal had narrow escapes when Thompson headed just over the bar and Renneville just grazed the post with a hard shot. Scotland played up with fine determination, but all their attacks proved fruitless and in the end Ireland gained a thoroughly deserved victory.

RUGBY RULES

CALCUTTA CUP.

SCOTLAND vs. ENGLAND.—The thirty-seventh meeting between the representative Rugby players of these countries which took place at Inverleith was shorn of some of its interest by the fact that both sides had experienced great difficulties in getting their sides together. From the outset the English selectors had considerable trouble over their fifteen, but they had definitely decided on their team on Thursday, and it was announced. But immediately after publication Hudson, one of the three-quarters, and Johns, one of the forwards, both of the Gloucester Club, cried off. The vacancies were filled by P. W. Lawrie the Leicester three-quarter, and L. Haigh of Lancashire, who was the reserve forward. Berry, owing to the indisposition of his wife, had also returned his invitation, but in view of England's dilemma yielded to an urgent request to play. Scotland were compelled to make a couple of changes in their three-quarter line, Dobson and Walter standing down and their places were taken by W. R. Sutherland of Hawick and A. W. Angus of the Watsonians, both of whom played against Wales. There was some doubt about Scott, but the Edinburgh Academical found himself able to turn out. As usually happens in connection with this match, the weather was fine with a sharp and rather cold wind blowing across the ground, but the turf looked to be in good order. The match was one of considerable moment as on the result depended not only the possession of the Calcutta Cup, but the international championship, England having beaten Wales and drawn with Ireland, and Scotland after losing to Wales had defeated Ireland. Of the previous games played between these countries Scotland had won sixteen to England's eleven, and nine had been drawn. In view of the special importance of the game the match had aroused unusual interest in Scottish Rugby circles, and the attendance must have been well over twenty thousand. All the stands and enclosures were crowded, and five minutes before the game started spectators were still pouring into the ground. England won the toss and had some benefit from the wind. Scotland kicked off fully five minutes after the appointed time, and the first scrummage was carried by the Scottish forwards, who reached the English 25 line. F. M. Stoop and Chapman were playing together on the English right and John Birkett and Lawrie formed the left wing. The Scottish backs tried to get through, but Angus was well tackled, and then Adrian Stoop dribbled past the centre, but a loose kick by a Scotch forward found touch in the English half. The next incident was a Scottish rush, and Macpherson made an effort to race round but was stopped by Chapman. There was next a line out dangerously near the English goal line, but Berry got the ball from the throw in and backed up by Birkett, the game was taken to the centre. Here the English halves got the ball away, and after some passing it reached Lawrie who ran past Sutherland, and nearly evaded Schultz, but in swerving to avoid the full back he was overtaken and pulled down by Pearson from behind. Some scrummaging in the centre followed, and then the English backs made two fine attempts to break through. On the first occasion Chapman failed to take rather an awkward pass from F. M. Stoop, and on the second occasion unwisely kicked down the field and enabled Schultz to get in an effective reply. Then England came away again and Birkett looked to have cleared the way, but F. M. Stoop missed his pass, and with it a very fair chance of scoring. Again the English backs attacked, but a good chance was thrown away by Birkett holding on too long, and attempting to go through inside but he was tackled. Lawrie was out unmarked and the ball should certainly have been passed to him. Directly afterwards Adrian Stoop made another opening, but once more Birkett spoiled its effectiveness by holding on too long. Up to this time the English forwards had been getting the ball and heeling, but at length the Scottish forwards made some ground by dribbling. Another rush took the play into the English half, but Chapman cleared with a useful kick and touch. Another awkward rush was finely saved by Johnstone, and then Sutherland got off but was well collared by F. M. Stoop. This run, however, took the game well into the English "25," and the Scots made desparate efforts to press home their advantage. Cunningham made a fine effort to break through, but was held up, and then Macpherson, taking a pass from Scott, ran cleverly through the English centre and scored for Scotland under the post, McCallum placing a goal. The score was finely accomplished, but the English tackling was marked by hesitation and Macpherson should not have been allowed to get through. After this success Scotland, who were playing a better game, again pressed, and after a bout of passing Macpherson was nearly over, but was bowled into touch by Johnstone very near the goal line, England having a fortunate escape. They, however, cleared and F. M. Stoop with a good kick found touch near the centre. Then the English backs had another turn at attacking, but Lawrie could not get through and the game was taken once more into the English "25." But the visit was of short duration, for the English backs came away in fine style, and a brilliant bout of passing ended in Birkett getting a fine try, which Johnstone improved. Nothing further happened before the interval, when the score stood:—

Scotland	...	... 1 goal
England	...	... 1 goal

On the resumption the game settled down in the Scottish half and a Scottish rush was quickly checked, but Pearson, following up his kick, collared Johnstone, who had no chance. After Sutherland had made an ineffectual attempt to break through, Birkett got clear with Lawrie up to him, but again he held on too long and a good chance was spoiled. The game was fought out in the centre, and then Lawrie made a good run but could not quite get round, but the game was taken well into the Scottish half. The Scots were soon back in the centre, and England being penalised, Cunningham found touch in the English half. Then Adrian Stoop came through, and with a clever swerve beat the Scottish centre. He then passed to his brother, who handed on to Birkett, and he ran behind, scoring England's second try, which Chapman failed to convert at a moderate angle. Again England attacked, and after a bout of passing the ball reached Chapman, who made a fine effort to run through but was held up. Shortly afterwards another effort by Chapman was also stopped, but the Scottish defence was being well tested. Sutherland, however, seemed too fast for Chapman. Schulze got in a fine kick and Lawrie was hard pressed but managed to get out of the difficulty. The next incident was a fine dribble by Pillman into the Scotch quarters, and then the English backs were away again and F. M. Stoop looked to have cleared the way for Haigh to score, but the Lancashire forward missed the pass and another fine chance was lost. England were now playing strongly, but thanks to some fine kicking by Schulze Scotland reached the centre. Chapman regained some of the ground with a good kick and some fast play near the Scotch "25" followed, and after a penalty kick to Scotland F. M. Stoop ran well into the Scottish quarters. Here the game remained for some time till England were penalised and Cunningham found touch near the centre. A rush by the English forwards followed and Chapman picking up raced through with Ward and Pillman in attendance. The movement ended by Berry scoring. Chapman failed to convert. About a quarter of an hour from time close England were leading by eleven points to five. After this the game was for a time confined to the centre, but the English backs were soon away again. F. M. Stoop made a good kick and with Schulze failing to field England were nearly in but were penalised. Johnstone had his return charged down, but Gotley covered the mistake. Then Pillman dribbled right down past Schulze, and Retson following promptly picked up and went over scoring a try, but Chapman failed at goal. The Scottish backs made a great effort and Sutherland got away but was overtaken by F. M. Stoop just outside the line. Directly afterwards Macpherson was held up by Lawrie who a little later got in a fine kick. Nothing further was scored and the game ended.

ROWING.

THE VARSITY BOAT RACE.

Oxford won the University Boat Race on Wednesday by three and a half lengths, Cambridge being unable to hold them after Hammersmith Bridge was passed. They form worked out correctly, and no surprise was shown on the riverside.

In winning the toss and taking the Middlesex station Cambridge were fortunate, for they secured the advantage of the bends in the river to the point practically opposite the upper end of Chiswick Eyot. Cambridge started off at 36 strokes to the minute, the Oxford stroke setting one less. Cambridge took the lead at the start, but before a dozen strokes had been pulled Oxford drew level and held a slight lead at the boathouses.

Beverley Brook.—Here it was seen that Oxford were forging ahead, although the lead was but slight at this point.

Craven Steps.—The Oxford lead was still maintained at this point, but the Cambridge crew were rowing hard, and at Walden's the crews were almost level.

Crabtree.—The efforts of the Light Blues were so far successful that at the Crabtree they had not only reduced the Oxford lead, but had taken a lead of three-quarters of a length.

Harrod's—Then Oxford made a desparate spurt and nearly succeeded in drawing level with their rivals.

Hammersmith Bridge.—Oxford here went to the front in dashing style, and were then leading by three-quarters of a length. The Dark Blues were rowing 34 to the minute well within themselves, and Cambridge were rowing 36 with a tendency to increase.

Doves.—Oxford were now only half a length to the good, and the same distance separated the crews at the waterworks, where the crews kept to the same number of strokes.

At the bend of the river the Oxford lead was increased to a length, and this advantage was still further increased at Thorneycroft's, where a length and a half separated the two boats.

Devonshire Meadows.—The Cambridge men were making heroic endeavours to overtake their rivals but their efforts seemed utterly futile, Oxford seeming able to row away as they liked.

Bull's Head.—Oxford's heavier weight and stamina were now telling, and rowing with apparent ease, they had increased their lead to two and three-quarter lengths.

Barnes Bridge.—Oxford were now leading easily, though the Cambridge crew held pluckily to their hopeless task.

Rowing well to the last, the Dark Blues won the race by three lengths, the crew finishing in excellent condition.

HOCKEY.

ENGLAND vs. SCOTLAND.—At Pittodrie Aberdeen on Saturday England beat Scotland by 3 goals to nil, and thus gained the honours of the hockey season in the United Kingdom, having previously defeated Ireland and Wales. On the English side A. G. Powell, M. A. Matthew, and C. J. Corbett played instead of R. F. Keigwin, E. W. Page, and S. H. Shoveller, while for Scotland H. Cookson and D. T. Richardson appeared instead of A. Donnistoun and G. Elliott.

The weather was dull. The English right wing attacked at the start, and, at the end of three minutes, Pridmore scored. For a short time Scotland had the better of the game, but only thirteen minutes had elapsed when a good run by the visitors ended in Leighton shooting the second goal. England maintained the pressure, and Tait, the Scottish goalkeeper, made some wonderful saves, one from Leighton being especially brilliant. Burt at centre half also did many fine things for Scotland, and there being no further scoring before the interval, England led at half-time by 2 goals to 0.

On restarting Scotland attacked vigorously, and a fine drive by Walker was well saved by Powell. Shortly afterwards Anderson just failed to score with a hard shot. Then Tait saved grandly from Pridmore and Corbett. Eventually, however, Corbett scored, and England won by 3 goals to 0.

ATHLETICS.

OXFORD vs. CAMBRIDGE.—The forty-seventh annual inter-'Varsity athletic contest and the twenty-third to be held at Queen's Club, took place at that enclosure on the 19th instant. The weather was cold and cheerless, and a strong wind blowing in favour of the hurdlers and long jumpers, swept across the ground. Oxford were unfortunate in losing the services, through a sprained ankle, of L. C. Hull, the Rhodes scholar, who is the Dark Blue president this year, and was the first string in the sprint and quarter-mile, both of which events he won last year. His place in the quarter was taken by G. R. L. Anderson, but the race went to Cambridge through W. T. Wetenhall. Anderson had to stand down from the hurdles race, but M. V. Macdonald, the second string, placed that event to Oxford's credit. H. R. Ragg, of Cambridge, in the sprint, and M. G. D. Murray, also of Cambridge, in the long jump, were other second strings who achieved winning honours, whilst in the jump, L. V. Ludinszky, who is president of the Vienna University Athletic Club tied, for first place, with A. C. B. Bellerby, the Cambridge president.

Cambridge won the first four events and six out of the first seven, so that with three events still undecided they had secured the match. They eventually won by seven events to three. The Light Blues have now won twenty-three times to Oxford's twenty-two, two meetings, viz., in 1854 and 1899, having resulted in ties. Details:—

100 Yards.—H. R. Ragg, Hereford and St. John's Cambridge, 1; D. Macmillan, Felsted and Trinity, Cambridge, 2; H. G. Shepherd, Abingdon and Pembroke, Oxford, 3; L. O. Hill, Michigan, U.S.A., and Brasenose, Oxford, did not start. Won by a yard; the Oxonian, who was last all the way, being another four yards away. Time,—10-2/5secs.

Putting the Weight.—M. J. Susskind, University College School and Pembroke, Cambridge 37 feet, 1; G. E. Putnam, Kansas, U.S.A., and Christchurch, Oxford, 36 feet 4½ inches, 2; R. E. Blake, Tennessee, U.S.A., and Exeter, Oxford, 34 feet 9 inches, 3; H. J. Bower, Uppingham and Emmanuel, Cambridge, 34 feet 4.

In an exhibition put Susskind did 37 feet 5½ inches.

High Jump.—A. C. B. Bellerby, St. Lawrence College, Ramsgate, and Emmanuel Cambridge, 5 feet 8 inches and L. V. Ludinszky, Buda Pest and Downing, Cambridge, 5 feet 8 inches a tie; E. G. Joseph, St. Paul's and Lincoln, Oxford, 5 feet 3½ inches, 3; N. F. Huxley, Private and Balliol, Oxford, 5 feet 2 inches, 4.

One Mile.—W. Gavin, Uppingham and Trinity, Cambridge, 1; A. M. Brown, Charterhouse and Oriel, Oxford, 2; R. D. Clarke, Private and Hertford, Oxford, 3; A. G. Knight, Dulwich and Magdalen, Oxford, 0; L. F. Taylor, Oundle and Clare, Cambridge, 0; A. J. N. Williamson, Highgate and Pembroke, Cambridge, 0. Williamson and Knight raced for the lead at the start. At the end of the first lap Williamson and Gavin led from Clarke; then Brown went to the front, but was soon displaced by Gavin, who won by ten yards; Clarke being another fifty yards away. Time—4mins. 26-4/5secs.

120 Yards Hurdle Race.—M. V. Macdonald, U.S.A. and Lincoln, Oxford 1; A. J. Boycott, St. John's Leatherhead, and Selwyn Cambridge, 2; G. F. Elmslie, Cheltenham and Jesus, Cambridge, 3. G. R. L. Anderson, Eton and Trinity Oxford, did not start. Macdonald took the lead soon after the start and got well away, but was caught by Boycott after the last hurdle. The Oxonian got away again and won on the post, Elmslie being beaten by a yard and a half. Time,—16secs.

Half Mile.—P. J. Baker, Bootham's School, York, and King's Cambridge, 1; T. R. Hatley, Dulwich and Brasenose, Oxford, 2; F. G. Black, Wellington and Pembroke, Cambridge, 0; W. L. Williams, City of London and Jesus, Oxford, 0. The men set off at a fast pace, the first quarter-mile being covered in 54secs. Passing the members' stand the order was: Williams, Hatley, Black, and Baker, but the last-named drew right away in the long back straight and won by forty yards. Time,—1min. 57-3/5secs.

Long Jump.—M. G. D. Murray, St. Peter's College, Adelaide, and Trinity, Cambridge, 21 feet 5½ inches, 1; A. C. B. Bellerby, St Lawrence College, Ramsgate, and Emmanuel, Cambridge, 21 feet 3½ inches 2; A. H. Godfrey, Malvern and Trinity, Oxford 20 feet 1½ inches, 3; F. G. Buchanan, Kelvinside Academy, Glasgow, and Trinity, Oxford, 20 feet 1½ inches 4.

Throwing the Hammer.—G. E. Putnam, Kansas, U.S.A., and Christ Church, Oxford, 146 feet 3 inches, 1; H. J. Bower, Uppingham and Trinity, Cambridge, 126 feet 1 inch, 2; F. A. Trenchard, Oundle and Trinity Hall Cambridge, 122 feet 3; R. E. Blake, Tennessee, U.S.A., and Exeter, Oxford 106 feet 4 inches 4.

Quarter-mile.—W. T. Wetenhall, City of London and Caius, Cambridge, 1; C. Howard Smith, Winchester and Brasenose, Oxford, 2; G. R. L. Anderson, Eton and Trinity, Oxford, 0; H. Banister, Merchant Taylors, Great Crosby, and Jesus, Cambridge, 0. The last-named set the pace at the start. Wetenhall took the lead just before entering the home straight, and although hard hunted by Howard Smith won by three and a half yards. Time,—51-1/5secs.

Three Miles.—A. E. Cator, Bruton and Keble, Oxford, 1; E. G. Taylor, Durham School and Pembroke, Oxford, 2; S. C. Waldegrave, Renton and Emmanuel, Cambridge, 3; R. E. Knight, Crypt Grammar School, Gloucester, and Pembroke, Oxford, 0; H. P. Dawson, Oundle and Trinity, Cambridge, 0; R. F. Armitage, Gresham's College, Holt, and St. John's, Cambridge, 0. Armitage set the pace at the start, followed by Knight, and, at the end of the first lap the order was the same, with Cator lying third. At the end of the next lap Knight just led from Dawson and Cator, the time for the first mile being 6mins. 48secs. In the next lap Waldegrave went up into third place behind Knight and Cator. Dawson retired in this lap and Armitage in the next. After covering two miles in 9mins. 53secs., Knight retired, leaving Cator with a long lead from Taylor, who was forty yards ahead of Waldegave. This order was maintained to the finish, Cator, who completed the journey with a strong sprint, winning by more than 300 yards, 70 yards separating Taylor and Waldegave. Time,—14mins. 45 4/5secs.

RACQUETS.

THE SINGLES MILITARY CHAMPIONSHIP.—The final round of the Military Singles Racquets Championship at Prince's Club, Knightsbridge, on Saturday, ended as expected in a win for Capt. W. E. Wilson-Johnston of the Indian Army. He met in the final Capt. A. C. G. Luther, a former holder of the championship, but, although the latter played well at times, the superiority of the winner was always apparent. In service there was little to choose, but Capt. Wilson-Johnston showed far the greater facility for finishing the rallies. In the first game Capt. Luther led at 10—7, but three of his four subsequent innings were unproductive and Capt. Wilson-Johnston in the end went out with a run of five aces. Capt. Luther reached 8—9 in the second game, his opponent at the next hand going to "game" with a sequence of six in the third game innings were numerous. Fourteen were taken before Capt. Luther with a run of five caused the score to be called "seven all," and after another nine hands the game was set fine at "thirteen all." Capt. Wilson-Johnston then had possession, and keeping in won the match. Result:—

Final round.—Capt. W. E. Wilson-Johnston, 36th Sikhs, beat Capt. A. C. G. Luther, 1st Batt. (King's Own) Yorkshire Light Infantry, by 3 games to love and 48 aces to 31. Scores: 15—10, 15—8, 18—13.

Pigsticking.

GUJERAT CUP MEETING

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

THE Gujerat Cup Meeting was held as usual during the Easter Holidays. This year the Camp was pitched at Patri in picturesque surroundings with a big jheel, swarming with wild fowl close at hand. The Native Chiefs who were competing were the guests of the Chief of Patri, who most considerately placed the courtyard of his Dharamsala at the disposal of the Committee, which enabled them to arrange stabling for most of the competitors horses.

The heats were drawn on Thursday, and early on Friday morning we were in full swing round Patri Tank, where there appeared to be any quantity of rideable pig. The country round about was rather trappy and there were several falls, but no damage was done.

The Salmon Cup heats were run off first, as some of the competitors for the Gujerat Cup had not arrived in Camp.

Takore Narsinghji of Katosan, Mr. W. L. Graham, the Maharaja of Baria and Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Forbes won their heats.

The Gujerat Cup heats were run off during the afternoon on the banks of the Okla about six miles from the Camp. It was a good pig country, but the cover was rather thick and some difficulty was experienced in getting the pig to break cover as they preferred to stick to the scrubby jungle, which covered the dry river bed.

Mr. Lory, the Maharaja of Baria, Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Forbes and Mr Crawford won their heats.

SEMI-FINALS.

Saturday's meet was at Nani Majiti, and we set out for our ten mile hack about 7 o'clock. As soon as we arrived at the village, a move was made for the cover, which was a long belt of woodland varying in breadth from a quarter to half a mile. In the cover the grass was longish and the going a bit blind, but outside we had an open and fairly easy country. The two semi-final heats of the Gujerat Cup, Forbes and the Rajah of Baria in one, Crawford and Lory in the other, were on the line, but we had to beat for some time before Forbes and the Rajah of Baria were sent off into the open after a fair sized boar, who was obviously making his point for a clump of trees about a mile distant. This heat was rather one-sided, as Forbes was always in front and speared after going about half a mile. Soon after Crawford and Lory got going after a fine boar, which stuck to the longer grass and gave them a sporting run over ground where it was not all plain sailing. This heat proved a much more level affair, both riders being close together. Crawford was perhaps more often in front, but could never get near enough to spear till at length a sharp jink gave Lory his opportunity which he took and so gained entry into the final round. It being then about 11-30 we beat back towards our tiffin with Narsinghji and W. Grahams, one of the semi-final heats of the Salmon Cup, ready to go. On the way back they were sent off after a pig, but Graham, who was always in front, did not get near enough to spear before the boar reached some thick jungle, where he was lost. After tiffin at Nani Majiti we started off again about 2 and it was not long before a pig was found for Forbes and the Rajah of Baria, who met for the second time in the day in the semi-final of the Salmon Cup. The result was much the same as in the morning, Forbes was always in front and had no difficulty in reaching the final round. Shortly after Graham and Narsinghji got away after a fine boar. The grass was long and the going distinctly difficult, but there was never any doubt about the result. Graham led from the word "ride" and speared after going about three-quarters of a mile. This concluded the day's sport and we set off on our trek home, reaching Camp about 6 o'clock.

FINAL OF THE GUJERAT CUP.

We started out on Sunday morning at 7 for an eleven mile journey to the meet where the finals were to be run off. The venue was a large village surrounded by thick hedges of prickly pear in which big pig were reported to be lying up. The surrounding country was open and a fine run seemed likely if the pig could be forced into the open. Unfortunately our efforts to do this were unsuccessful and breakfast had to be taken without the final of the Gujerat Cup having been decided. After breakfast we went further afield and at length Forbes and Lory were sent away to a beautiful start after a fine pig which proved well worthy of the final. The pig had a good start and the two raced neck and neck after him. At length Forbes got in front and once there was never displaced. Lory was always close behind, but Forbes gave a fine exhibition following every jink of the pig and never giving his opponent a chance of getting in. At length Forbes speared and gained a well merited victory and the cup for which he has been several times in the final round in previous years. It was found impossible to run off the final of the Salmon Cup the same day and it was left till Monday.

FINAL OF THE SALMON PONY CUP.

The final of the Salmon Cup was decided on Monday morning and won by W. L. Graham, both cups thus being carried off by Bombay competitors. The meet was at the Nothgoral Tank, four miles away, where a fine stretch of water is bordered by thick reeds. The pig stuck to the rushes and were difficult to drive into the open, but at length Forbes and Graham were sent after a fine boar, which, however, got back into the reeds before either could spear, though Graham twice missed narrowly. Soon after another pig broke out and Forbes and Graham got away well together. Forbes was first on the pig but a bush baulked him and let Graham up. Then the pig got into the rushes again and neck-and-neck the two followed every jink, till Graham speared and secured the cup.

Thus concluded the Gujerat Cup Meeting at 1910—which was a most enjoyable outing.

The thanks of all were due to that good sportsman Mr. Macnamara for the splendid sport he provided and the infinite pains he took to show us good pig, and also to Mr. Kindersley, who undertook the onerous duties of Secretary with conspicuous success.

KADIR CUP MEETING, 1910.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

THIS great and world wide famous competition was held at Shajumana.

Not only were the entries larger than heretofore, but the numbers of onlookers and ladies increased in even a larger proportion.

Mr. Norton, R. H. A., had rendered available every luxury for the competitors, more especially for the horses who were stabled in a delightful bagh—which had been temporarily transformed into a stable which rivalled the Olympian wonder in thoroughness and forethought.

Delighted as every competitor is to see the vast concourse of parasols upon the elephants, yet if some of the fair ladies had been able to hear the torrents of insults which were thrown at the fair sex by the "heats" upon "the line" it is quite certain that they would never come again. For when 3 or 4 individuals have been on the line for six hours without a ride they at once reflect their misfortunes upon the competitors and onlookers upon the elephants to whose ceaseless babble is attributed the evasiveness of the wily pig.

One often wonders that the hard working Secretary does not either become white with anger, or at least abusive with his tongue for the people upon the elephants create a noise which a wily boar can certainly hear at least a mile away, hence the remarkably few good boars which are seen.

This year saw the grass and also the jhow in a very high state, thus there were a greater number of falls and accidents than has been customary in former years.

Horses and men were "laid out" in numbers, inter alia Vedette (Colonel Vaughan's celebrated Kadir winner) and Battle of Captain Lambert's had to be shot; whilst although many others were mutilated it is hoped that recovery will be effectual.

Major Tilney had two very ugly tosses, and upon the last occasion was carried back unconscious to his camp.

However it is the pace at which horses are ridden which causes grief in the Kadir, and together with an exceptionally heavy grass it is very fortunate that there were not more serious accidents.

There always seemed to be a loose horse upon the horizon and especially on Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning were the empty saddles in prominence.

The pig avoided the babble of the elephant line in a most exceptional manner on Monday after luncheon, so much so that there were serious thoughts of cancelling all second nominations; but very fortunately upon Tuesday morning all the first round had been completed by 10 A.M. (presumably luncheon has a loosening effect upon the tongue).

Then a halt was called and amidst great excitement the next round was drawn.

Eventually the final heat has contested by Captain Paynter, R.H.A., Spear, Lieutenant Palmes 10th Royal Hussars, Captain Thompson, 17th Lancers, and even though they were shipped on the back of an old sow she afforded a good run in a very open country and Captain Paynter speared, thus winning the great contest and by the same token proving his well-known powers with a hogspear.

Everyone was of the same delightful opinion, viz., that it mattered not which of the three won the final, for anyone of them would verify the assertion:

"That no bad man or horse has ever yet won the Kadir."

The heats are appended:—

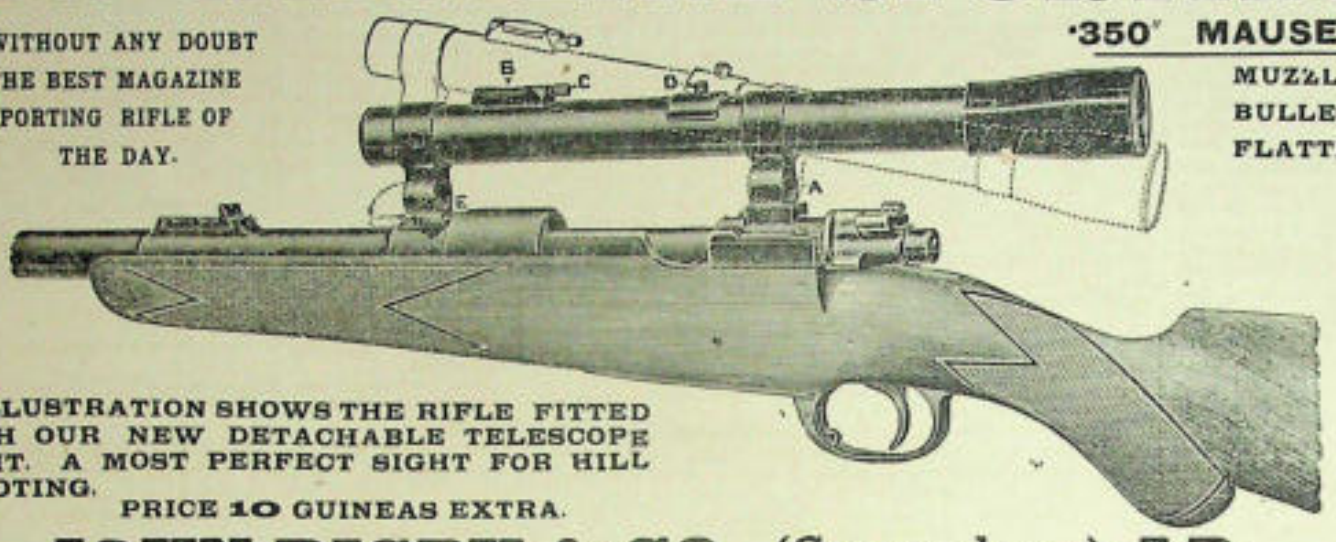
WINCHESTER .33 CALIBER

A New Large Caliber High Power Rifle.



Big game hunters who have advocated a large caliber high power rifle will find in the Winchester .33 caliber a gun that will meet their requirements. The popular and reliable Model 1886 rifle has been adapted to handle this new cartridge, which is large enough and powerful enough to kill any big game known. The Winchester .33 caliber belongs to the high power smokeless powder class of cartridges, having high velocity and flat trajectory, and it develops great striking energy and penetrating power. The .33 caliber bullet weighs 200 grains. Soft pointed bullets used in this cartridge have special upsetting or mushrooming qualities, owing to their high velocity. This makes the Winchester .33 caliber a particularly desirable cartridge for big game shooting, as mushrooming bullets of this size have terrific killing power.

The Story Teller.

THE BEAR BURGLAR.

ATKINSON'S growing interest in Maya Argent resulted in our both following that young lady to Brittany. There we wandered from one place to another, an arrangement which suited me quite as well as it did the others, for while they explored quaint villages and pretty country, I devoted myself to inveigling the nice little trout which haunt the clear brooks of this charming province.

Soon after our arrival, the French newspapers gave graphic accounts of a series of curious burglaries, which were taking place in the suburbs of Paris. Constantly repeated tracks and footprints pointed to the robberies being the work of a boy, who was invariably accompanied by some large animal. The accounts differed as to what manner of beast it was, but the proprietor of a large travelling menagerie, who was naturally something of an expert declared, directly he saw the tracks, that they were undoubtedly those of a bear.

None of the plundered victims seemed to have seen the burglar himself, but three at least had encountered his four-footed companion.

In one case, a detective who had been prowling round some detached houses in Neuilly, on quite another affair, had his attention attracted by a slight noise proceeding from an empty house, the owner of which had gone away for a short time. The man went quietly round to investigate, and suddenly without the least warning, a large dark coloured animal rushed at him with a loud snarl, and upset him into a flower bed, at the same time making a cuff at the side of his head, which cut his cheek open and half stunned him. The detective picked himself up and went and found another man to help him. The two then went back again to the house together. They found the bear-like tracts going across the soft soil of the flower beds, and the neat small footprints of the boy burglar below a window, which he had been engaged in forcing, when he was disturbed.

On another occasion, in a house in Vincennes, a maid servant heard a noise and got up and went to see what it was. On coming out on to the landing she was knocked down the staircase, by the rush of a large black animal. The whole household was wakened by the noise, the girl was found lying half-way down the stairs, badly bruised, and the burglar had escaped, and taken a number of valuables with him. The usual tracks of a boy and a bear were found outside the house. In the third case, a certain M. Renaud and his wife, who lived in a small house in Auber-villiers, had been awakened one night by noises in the room below them. The husband rang the bed-room bell, and shouted, while the wife opened the window, in order to scream for help.

The bed-room window looked on to the garden at the back of the house, and as Madame Renaud was throwing up the sash, she saw distinctly in the moonlight a large animal like a bear run swiftly across the grass, and vanish through a hedge at the bottom of the garden. When cross-examined as to the appearance of the creature, Madame Renaud declared positively that the animal was thick set and black like a bear, and much too big for a dog.

In this case also the burglar, who was not seen and must have gone away in a different direction, carried off considerable booty. Many other burglaries by the same strangely assorted pair were committed in various parts of Paris but the three instances given above were the only ones when either of the two were actually seen: usually the robberies were carried out so silently and cleverly that nobody knew their houses had been broken into till the following morning.

Thus the boy-burglar and his four-footed assistant had so successful a career, and carried off so much valuable booty, that they became the sensation of the day.

Though the animal always left the same bear like tracks, the boy used to vary his foot-gear.

Sometimes the footprints were those of high-heeled shoes, at others of stockinged feet. Another time the marks left would be those of tennis shoes. On two occasions clear prints of naked feet were left sealed in wet soil.

One of the theories put forward was that the burglar was a woman, but this seemed scarcely probable seeing that several of the robberies gave evidence of the thief being possessed of great personal strength. The upholders of the woman theory, of course declared that in one case where the burglar had turned over a heavy safe and lowered it gently on to a stone floor, that the animal attendant assisted at the operation. This on the fact of it was absurd. How could any animal however well trained, lower an iron safe without pinching itself? Such were the gist of the various suppositions put forward by the daily papers.

Of course Aykroyd and I were greatly interested, and as this enterprizing burglar carried on his successful career, without the least misadventure from the pursuing police, our interest deepened. One of the curious parts of the business, was the wide distance apart that the robberies took place. How could a large animal like a bear be taken such distances without detection?

Interested though we both were in the burglaries, Aykroyd showed very unmistakeably that on his part the interest though keen, was purely academic. Maya Argent at this time occupied his attention to such an extent, that the only active work he seemed to have any desire to engage in, was the pursuit of his lady-love's affections.

A timid suggestion which I made one day, that he should offer his assistance to the Paris police, was rejected with scornful rudeness. "You shut up and go and fish, Waring. This is a holiday, and not to be desecrated with any kind of work whatsoever: least of all helping the French police to take all the interest out of my morning paper."

After a while the bear burglar appeared to be satisfied with his profits, and there were no more robberies for a considerable time. Shortly after this lull in the proceedings, Maya Argent went back to England. Aykroyd and she had now come to an understanding and they were definitely given out as engaged.

His lady-love having been at last won, my friend's interest in external matters resumed its normal intensity. He now himself suggested a fortnight in Paris, before our return home. I cheerfully agreed, but feared that there was little chance of the burglar resuming operations during our stay.

Arrived in Paris, Aykroyd approached the police, but in spite of good introductions, found them far too jealous to accept his assistance. Eventually he obtained a grudging promise that if the bear burglar distinguished himself again, a message would be sent immediately, and an unofficial investigation, in presence of the French police permitted. The favour was granted only on the understanding that it was simply for Aykroyd to divert himself: he was not to be in any way identified with the police and the regular detectives in the affair.

Aykroyd, who rightly enough held a high opinion of the value of his own peculiar powers, was immensely disgusted at this professional selfishness. As a matter of fact I do not think that my friend's fame had yet penetrated as far as Paris, and the Parisian police most probably regarded him as more in the light of a nuisance, than a rival likely to filch their laurels.

Aykroyd however was so much annoyed, that he assured me he had no intention now of telling anything he might happen to find out: he was intensely curious as to these burglaries, and meant to unravel the mystery for his own satisfaction. There however it would end, the burglar should go safe, as far as he was concerned.

Ten days passed away before the bear and his master made a move, and then their next escapade was startling.

While the burglar was engaged in collecting valuables in a country house, near Bondy, a sturdy keeper, who was returning home late, heard sounds, and went towards the house. The thief heard him, and jumping out of a window on the ground floor, ran across the garden followed closely by his bear. The keeper at once fired his gun at the bear, which turned and charged down on him. The man lost nerve and tried to escape, instead of firing his second barrel into the animal at close quarters. In a moment he was caught, knocked over, and desperately clawed. A blow on the mouth tore and crushed the keeper's nose, lacerated his lips, and knocked out three of his front teeth. The man lay in a semi-unconscious condition for some time, and when he had recovered sufficiently, crawled to the house and called for help. The invalid owner, his wife, and four women servants, of course heard the shot and the struggle, but were all too afraid to do anything. In fact the keeper crouched calling and moaning at the door for some considerable time, before any of the inmates summoned up sufficient courage to come to his assistance.

Aykroyd and I proceeded to the scene of the incident, personally conducted by two genial gendarmes.

Arrived at the house, which was quite in the country on the borders of Foret de Bondy, we found several other police, and a shrewd looking man in plain clothes, who was introduced to us as M. Cassier, a detective of considerable repute. The garden where the encounter had taken place, was more of an orchard than a garden, fruit trees being studded at intervals about the grass.

The French police having completed their investigations, permitted us to examine the scene.

Aykroyd produced his knee-caps, and in a moment was running all over the ground on all fours, like a big dog snuffing every here and there vigorously. The Frenchmen, never before having witnessed such methods, at first stared in blank astonishment; wonder soon gave place to amusement, and amusement in its turn to uproarious mirth. In a very short time the tubby little gendarmes were either supporting each other, or leaning against the fruit trees convulsed with laughter. Aykroyd just then was lost to the world, and took absolutely notice of his guffawing audience. At last, however, an impudent looking stable boy, who had gradually edged into the sacred circle, suddenly got in Aykroyd's way, and pretending to be knocked over and overcome with terror, shrieked "The bear. The bear." Aykroyd without rising from all fours delivered the impertinent youngster a backward kick of such violence, that it turned the lad's pretended fear into very real grief. Then without waiting to witness the renewed merriment of the gendarmes at this turning of the tables my friend, still on all fours, took a line straight for the hedge at the bottom of the garden, and vanished through a gap in it, into the orchards beyond.

The stable boy got up tearfully and finding the laugh turned against himself, slunk away. After some minutes the gendarmes, finding the fun was over, also melted away, and so left to myself, I sat down on a garden chair which happened to be there, and lit a cigarette. Aykroyd was away for over half an hour: then at length he appeared again through the gap in the hedge, but no longer on all fours, while the knee caps had been hidden away in his pocket.

We went into the house, and found the two policemen who had come with us, in the kitchen. One of them asked my friend what he thought of the affair. "Oh," said Aykroyd "It is evidently a large bear of the Russian variety. The morning has been most interesting to me, and I thank you both very much for having been so kind as to conduct me here."

And having slipped a substantial douceur into the little policeman's hand, he assured him that he would not on any account allow him to incommode himself by seeing us home.

We strolled away leisurely down a pretty branch road, leading towards Rossy. As we walked, Aykroyd told me all that he had arrived at. "The case now is no longer interesting to me. I have not the least doubt that were I so disposed, I should be able to run the thieves to earth in a very few hours. The police have been quite outwitted. There is no bear at all, but evidently a very clever active man got up in the Teddy-bear part.

"I detected at once the scent of two human beings. . . . a strong living scent. Mingled with this was the faint bygone aroma of bear: the amount of bear scent in fact which a man would carry with him if he wore a bear-skin coat. A bear's skin properly fitted up is no doubt the whole and sole disguise. The man has evidently thoroughly practised moving on all fours. You know how easily I can do it myself, and no doubt the burglar has accustomed himself to this mode of progression far better than I have.

"I have followed the newspaper accounts of the former robberies carefully and believe the reason why Teddy-bear's assistant was not seen before, was simply that he carried out most of his burglaries single handed. There is a very decent young detective, who was present at several of the investigations into the earlier robberies. I have questioned this man on numerous points, and find that the footprints of the supposed boy were often lightly idented, as though his weight were no more than that of a child. The prints of small naked feet were twice left in cold weather, in which it would be a great hardship to go about barefoot. I am convinced then that these marks were made by man in the bear's skin by means of casts which he carried with him.

"That the man is a skilful modeller is evidenced by the perfect bear's foot which he has manufactured for his own wear. It would be easy enough for him to carry a pair of casts on the evenings he went out alone, and so make the footprints of the supposed boy. The lightness of the indentations in some places would be thus accounted for. As to his companion last night. . . she was a woman. See here." And Aykroyd showed me two long golden hairs. "I found these in a thorn hedge, some distance away from the house. Besides these, she left further evidence of her sex in strong whiffs of a scent known as "Peau d'Espagne." In the hedge too through which they forced their way, I was able to detect traces of a subtle scent: the perfume of one of those sachets of orris, musk, lavender, and pot pourri, which women love to keep among their clothes. The burglar's assistant was not only undoubtedly a woman, but a woman with golden hair, and very probably considerable personal attractions.

Until this last time Teddy-bear was careful not to damage anybody really seriously. No doubt the keeper's charge of small shot hurt him severely and temporarily upset a naturally equable temper.

"I went far enough along the burglar's tracks to find where the man had discarded his disguise, and resumed an upright position. I followed a bit further still, and ascertained that he walked with difficulty, and had to be helped along by the woman. He was no doubt pretty badly hit, and is very possibly laid up for a time.

"You can now see how narrow would be the field of enquiry, if I told the police all this. We should have to search for a clever modeller, of powerful physique, who has a golden haired wife, and is temporarily laid up by illness or accident.

For my part I sincerely hope the clever pair will get away. Probably the man has had a lesson from last night, and will lie low for a time. We returned to our hotel, and Aykroyd dismissing the whole affair from his mind, sat down to write to Maya.

For my part, I could not get the thought of this daring couple out of my head. There was something romantic about it all; and at last I actually began to feel quite anxious them, and wonder how much the police knew.

"Suddenly an idea occurred to me: there was a French artist named Lange whom I had once known quite well. No doubt he still lived in the Quartier, and I should easily find him. Lange would know all the modellers, and very possibly I might find who the burglar was straightaway."

Well I found Lange without much trouble, he was the same Bohemian vagabond that I had known in days gone by. I knew he hated the police, and so took the simple plan of telling him the whole story, and swearing him to secrecy. "I know the man of course," he cried, "His name is Ferrovia, and he is an Italian. His wife has got golden air, and she is quite young and pretty. Ferrovia is a marvellously clever modeller, and is a very powerfully built, active fellow. He is also laid up to-day, though yesterday morning he was well enough. There is not the least doubt he is the man. I tell you what, I can easily get his wife over here to see you, and you can warn her."

I had to wait nearly two hours in Lange's studio, before Ferrovia's wife appeared. She was a tall handsome girl, with hair of the most brilliant gold. On seeing a stranger, she blanched suddenly. "Do not be afraid Madame Ferrovia, I am an Englishman, and no friend of the Paris police. I have come to warn you. My friend Mr. Aykroyd, also an Englishman, went to the house in Bondy this morning, and in half an hour had discovered all about you, and how Ferrovia disguised himself as a bear. You better get out of France both of you at once. Mr. Lange will no doubt help you both to leave unsuspected."

The girl thanked me profusely, covering my hand with kisses, to my great embarrassment, and then I went back and told Aykroyd what I had been doing. He was much amused. "I" he said "am treated cavalierly by the police, so sit tight, and say nothing. You go a step farther, and assist the criminals to escape from justice, because your sentimental heart sympathises with them."

I hear from Lange about three months later that the Ferrovias had got safely away to Italy, and were now living happily on a little farm, bought with their ill gotten gains. In fact it was to get back to his beloved Italy, and to have a little farm of his own, that Ferrovia had taken to these daring robberies.

Thus was vice rewarded. When we told Maya, she said it was all very wrong, and that she did not at all approve.

"You seem to forget, dear girl," said Aykroyd, "that you were once a burglar yourself."

BOMBAY MALARIA.

The following paper was read:—"The Natural History of Bombay Malaria" by Dr. C. A. Bentley.

Dr. Bentley, in the course of his paper said:—

Modern Preventive Medicine has had to borrow very largely from other sciences and in particular has received immense assistance from students of Natural History. This is clearly shown by the present state of our knowledge regarding malaria. Laveran's discovery first attracted Naturalists to the study of malaria, but it was Ross' magnificent work which led to real alliance between Natural History and Sanitary science.

The Natural History of malaria can be approached from three different aspects; (1) As it relates to the malaria organism; (2) as it affects men, the human animal; (3) and lastly as it applies to the alternative host—the anopheles mosquito.

It is the latter aspect with which we shall deal to-night. In November 1908, Captain Liston announced his discovery, that the species of mosquito responsible for the dissemination of malaria in Bombay was "N. Stephensi." This discovery is of very great importance, as a careful examination of Bombay shows that we are justified in assuming that "N. Stephensi" is the only mosquito able to carry malaria that is present in the greater part of the city. This being so it is necessary to learn everything we can about the Natural History of this mosquito in order.

Dr. Bentley described at length the different type of breeding places in which "N. Stephensi" was to be found, and after discussing the habits of the insect and the causes which led to its spread, indicted the measures which could be adopted for reducing the number of the insects and eventually control it. He exhibited specimens of the small mosquito destroying fish "Piku" and some of the water-weed "Wolffia arhiza."

Colonel Bannerman called attention to the fact that the first intimation that "N. Stephensi" was the cause of the epidemic of malaria in Bombay was in a paper send before this Society by Captain Liston, I.M.S., in 1908, and that another member of the Society the late Mr. E. H. Aitken had been the first to call attention to the mosquito devouring fish "Piku" referred to and exhibited here by Dr. Bentley.

Colonel Bannerman also said it would be a good thing if all the members of the Bombay Corporation were members of the society so that they could obtain some information from such papers as these which would be of value to them.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Dr. Bentley for his interesting paper which will be published in full in the Society's Journal.

Two of the Licensing Bill demonstrators were having an argument on Temperance, and in the course of the conversation one of them said that he had heard that if all the public-houses in London were placed side by side they would reach from London to Glasgow. "Ay," said the other, "what a grand walk that would be."

INTERNATIONAL YACHT RACING.

The British Yacht Racing Association is to be commended on its agreement with France and Germany for the promotion of a series of regattas. Since the rules of the various countries in Europe that foster yachting were consolidated into one code common to all there has been a steady growth in international racing, and with several countries competing with one another to attract the pick of the fleet, there was considerable risk of sport being marred by an undue clashing of interests. The Yacht Racing Association's agreement with Germany and France, however, for the promotion of a series of big international regattas saves the situation.

Arrangements have been made by which international regattas are to be held triennially in British, French and German waters. The first of these great yachting festivals will be held at Ryde, commencing on 8th August, and extending over a week. Next year France has the call, while in 1912 Kiel will be the venue. In order that the time-honoured "Clyde" and Irish regattas should not offer a counter attraction to the festival in Germany and thus imperil its success, the Scottish and Irish clubs have consented not to offer such prizes at their regattas in 1912 as would tempt British owners to remain in home waters rather than take their yachts to Kiel.

Prospects of sport in British waters for the coming season are excellent. The big cutter class, which last year was confined to Sir Thomas Lipton's "Shamrock" and Mr. Myles B. Kennedy's "White Heather" will be augmented by Sir James Pender's "Brynhild" which was not commissioned last season. This yacht has had a somewhat chequered career since she made her appearance in 1907. In her first season she displayed such indifferent form that she was generally condemned as a failure, but during the following winter extensive alterations were carried out to her hull, and with such good effect that, in 1908, the Nicholson-built boat proved the best hard-weather yacht in the fleet.

Even at that her owner was not quite satisfied, and with a view of placing the yacht upon level terms with her rivals in light and moderate breezes, he had still further modifications effected. More lead was added to the keel, which had been remodelled in a broader but shallower mould. This had the effect of reducing the cutter's draught and girth measurement, leaving a margin in her rating for an additional 1,000 square feet of canvas. With approximately 10,400 square feet of sail, the yacht will carry about the same area as "Britannia" in her palmy days.

"Shamrock," which had such a rare tussle with "White Heather" for the championship of the class last season, has also been altered: her garboards have been padded in a similar manner to that which proved so effective in the case of "White Heather" in 1909, and she will have the benefit of an enlarged sail plan. What with these alterations and the presence of a third yacht, the class presents a very open appearance, and the racing of the trio should be full of interest.

From a spectacular point of view, however, the first class cutters will be eclipsed by the great schooners that compete in the A-class for yachts of mixed rig exceeding 23 metres rating. The schooner class this year will be purely international in character, as four countries will be represented in its ranks. Germany has two strings to her bow in "Meteor IV" and "Germania," and France puts her faith in "Susanne." The new Herreshoff schooner "Westward" will carry the fortunes of America, whilst Mr. Cecil Whitaker's eight-year-old "Cicely" is the hope of England.

Chief interest will naturally centre upon the American clipper, for America is famous for her schooners all the world over. "Westward" is the first yacht designed by Hereshoff under the International Rules, and commanded by the redoubtable Charles Barr, of America Cup fame. With only "Cicely" to depend upon England will hold but a weak hand in the coming contest, but the Fife schooner is such a good boat, particularly in moderate and light breezes that she may yet hold her own against these foreign invaders, if she has weather to her liking. International racing will also play a prominent part in the 15-metre class during the latter portion of the season. Two vessels now in course of construction on the Clyde, from the designs of Messrs. Fife and Mylne respectively, are designed to carry the German flag, and two others are being built at Kiel. This quaretette, with the Spanish vessels "Hispania," "Tuiga" and "Encarnita," will form a very strong opposition for the English yachts to meet, and Mr. W. P. Burton's brilliant "Ostara" is likely to have a hard fight to retain the International Challenge Cup she won last year.

During the early part of the season the racing will be confined to the English cutters. The vessels that competed last year will again carry colours, and the fleet will be augmented by a new vessel from the design of Mylne. This recruit will fly the fighting flag of Mr. G. C. Lomer, who in 1909 raced Avel III. in the cruiser class. The handicap class will not be quite so strong from a numerical point of view as in 1909, Mr. George Terrell having decided not to commission "Maymon." The Marquis of Ailsa's famous old cutter "Bloodhound," which carried all before last summer, has been thoroughly overhauled, and is now in first class condition. The old 40-rather "Creole," that has flown Colonel Bagot's colours for the past twenty years, may be expected to add to the 276 prizes she has already won for her owner, whilst "Gauntlet" and "Sonya" will fight their battles over again. Other vessels likely to compete in the handicap division are "Camella" and "Carina."

HORNS AND ANTLERS AS MEDICINE.

It would be curious to know the reason why horns and antlers have been considered from time immemorial to possess a medicinal value to which modern science shows that they have not the slightest claim. Possibly the fact that "hartshorn," or ammonia, was originally obtained from these appendages may have had something to do with the matter; while, on the other hand, there may also be a phallic element in the belief as to the medicinal value of both horns and antlers. Rhinoceros horns were, it is scarcely necessary to mention, highly esteemed in the middle ages as poison detectors, and are still, we believe, used for the same purpose in China. Goblets were cut from them, and, when gorgeously mounted in gold and studded with precious stones, were used by Eastern Monarchs as a ready means for detecting attempts to administer deadly drugs; as the liquor would, it was believed under such circumstances, effervesce and overflow when poured into the vessel. Even the cuttings of the horns produced during the manufacture of the goblets would act in the same manner, so that these also were carefully preserved and sold. As to the value attributed in ancient days to deer-antlers in medical practice this may be gleaned by reference to the old Pharmacopœas.

Our present theme relates, however, to the use of powdered deer-antler in China as a medicine of great reputed value, especially, it is said, in female diseases. Till the Altai was opened up by British and other sportsmen during the last twenty years or so practically nothing seems to have been known in Western Europe as to the existence of a great trade in these antlers between Central Asia and China. Neither, for that matter, was it realised that Central Asia is the home of various races of wapiti which supply a large portion of these highly valued commodities. Perhaps the strongest part of the matter is that the antlers to be used in medicine must be cut from the head of the animal—either alive or dead—while still imperfectly formed and clothed with the highly sensitive, vascular, velvety skin technically known as the "velvet."

According to an excellent account given some years ago by Prince Demidoff, the wapiti, or maral, are kept by the farmers of the Altai in large enclosures, known as "Maralniks," solely for the sake of their antlers, which are annually sawn off from the heads of the unfortunate stags while still in a partially developed condition. As every one knows, an antler is then a most delicate and tender structure: and to saw off these appendages while in this state from the head of the living animal is one of the most terrible and revolting acts of cruelty that it is possible to conceive. Indeed, our friends of the Humanitarian League have here an excellent field for the exercise of all their energies; and one on which they would be much better employed than in harrassing the Zoological Society about the feeding of a few snakes.

To stop the traffic would, however, be a tough job as it is almost incredibly profitable and brings in a large revenue to the Altai Kalmuks. According to the information supplied by Prince Demidoff, the cash-value of deer antlers in the Altai is about thirty shillings per pound, at which rate a good head will be worth from £10 to £12. And as some of the maralniks contain 150 head of deer, while the total number of captive deer in the whole Altai has been estimated at 6,000, of which perhaps about one-third are profitable stags, some idea can be obtained as to the magnitude of the trade.

China is a big country, but one would think such a supply would allow every woman in the empire a good share of the precious dewai. As a matter of fact, however, the wapiti of the Altai afford only a portion—and perhaps a relatively small portion—of the total supply of deer antlers sent to China. For it has recently been ascertained that the trade is also carried on in the neighbourhood of Vladivostock; and it is quite likely that it may also flourish throughout a large portion of Siberia.

In the Vladivostock district, the supply is afforded by the Manchurian sika—a deer less than half the size of the wapiti, with a white-spotted summer coat, exchanged in winter for a uniformly brown livery. Although some of these deer are kept in a semi-domesticated condition, like the Altai wapiti, and the stags have their antlers sawn off every season while in the velvet, the majority exist in the wild state. Of these wild sikas a certain number of stags are shot every season by the natives and their antlers cut out from the skull still attached to the bone, in which condition they are stated to be much more valuable than when sawn off from the living animal. This is indicated by the fact that sika-antlers, which are very much smaller than wapiti-antlers, realise from £7 10s. to £10 the pair. Three days after removal from the head the antlers undergo a curing process, after which they are ready for exportation. They are brought up readily enough by the Chinese traders at the prices mentioned; and the trade enables a large number of settlers, both Chinese and Russian, to enjoy a fat living and at the same time excellent sport.

It may be hoped that the attention of the Russian Government will ere long be directed to the necessity of regulating the slaughter of these handsome little deer in the Vladivostock district, for although the natives scrupulously refrain from killing does and only shoot bucks when their horns are in velvet, the slaughter of a large number of the latter sex shortly before the commencement of the breeding season must, one would imagine, have a marked effect on the number of the species. The natives, it is said, spend a large portion of the winter in making themselves acquainted with the haunts of the finest bucks, in order that they may have the less trouble in finding and killing them later on in the season.

In addition to deer antlers, the Chinese use large quantities of what they are pleased to call dragons' teeth for medicinal purposes. These are teeth of various extinct animals which are found in a beautiful state of preservation in cases in different parts of the Chinese Empire and may be seen exposed for sale in the druggists' shops at Shanghai and elsewhere. Like the antlers, they are ground up into powder before being used as dewai; and their medicinal effect is probably of about the same value as that of the former. Many of these teeth have been sent to Europe, where they have afforded valuable information with regard to the extinct mammalian fauna of China; and quite recently the British museum has received a consignment of fossil elephants' teeth from Szechuen which have been rescued from the usual fate of such remains.

A certain stockbroker once went to a horsedealer and tried to pick up a general utility nag. He explained that he wanted a nice, quiet good looking animal for himself, which could be driven by his wife in a dogcart, and would not object on occasion to being hitched up to a lawn-mower. The dealer listened to him with wrapt attention, and finally asked, in dulcet tones, "Would you like him to wait at table at all, sir?"

"THERE," exclaimed Major Shifty, pointing to a notice on an otherwise blank wall, "is a sentiment that I would like to see proclaimed, in a circus-poster type, over the doorway of every post office in the land." "What notice?" inquired his dull-witted companion. "That!" viciously rejoined the Major pointing to the edict with his cane; "Post no Bills."

"DID you ever," said one preacher to another, "stand at the door after your sermon, and listen to what people said about it as they passed out?" Replied he: "I did once"—a pause and sigh—"but I'll never do it again."

DOG MEDICINES
MAY NOW BE OBTAINED IN INDIA
In CALCUTTA from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO.,
And in BOMBAY from TREACHER & CO., Ltd.

These preparations are based on the most recent and up-to-date veterinary research, and are the best possible remedies for the various ailments and diseases for which they are recommended.

It is of the greatest importance in treating all cases of sickness in dogs that the nature of the ailment should be recognised, and in order to enable dog owners to do this we have published a book,

"HINTS TO DOG OWNERS"
(ILLUSTRATED),

which is now the standard work of reference in thousands of kennels in the United Kingdom, where it has had a larger circulation than any book on dogs ever published, the demand for it being so great that more than 300,000 copies have been disposed of. It may be obtained gratis on application to either of the above-mentioned firms in India, and everyone interested in dogs should make a point of obtaining a copy at once.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR DOGS.

These Capsules are tasteless and odourless, and are the surest and safest means of expelling both Round and Tape Worms from dogs (or puppies three months old or over) weighing 10lb. or more. They require no purgative medicine afterwards. May be easily given wrapped up in a piece of meat or cheese.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR PUPPIES AND TOY DOGS.

Every puppy at six weeks old should be dosed with these Capsules which may be safely given to even the smallest and most delicate toy puppy. They surely expel all Worms and never cause the least discomfort. Castor oil is not required before or after giving them, and it is not necessary for the puppy to fast before being dosed.

SHERLEY'S "SKIN CURE."

An absolutely unrivalled dressing for Mange, Eczema, Ringworm, and all other Skin Diseases of dogs. It cures Mange for certain in a week, and not only cures the disease but starts an immediate and vigorous growth of hair.

SHERLEY'S "DISTEMPERCURE."

The best remedy for Distemper ever discovered; it reduces the fever and creates an appetite. In each tin are full instructions as to nursing and dieting, on which the cure of Distemper depends so much.

SHERLEY'S "SHAMPOO."

A Liquid Soap for Washing Dogs. It penetrates the hair, which it cleanses much better than any solid soap and in less than half the time.

It removes dandriff, stimulates the growth of hair, and gives the coat a healthy, glossy appearance.

It also prevents Eczema, and destroys Fleas and all other insects.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

A number of horses left Calcutta last week by the S.S. Jelunga, amongst them Little Meg, Mercedes, Mystic Circle, Plain Mister, Just in Time, etc., and their destination is said to be primarily Bangalore.

Mr. J. D. Scott is very shortly on the wing for Dehra, his departure from Calcutta having been delayed by the fact that his new stables at his summer quarters have been a longer time in getting completed than he anticipated. Mr. Scott will have about 40 horses all told summering with him, and he is expecting some reinforcements from home for next cold weather racing season, but so far details of what is coming to him are lacking.

We regret to hear that Mr. W. R. Tanner, who is the owner of Fingall and some others, recently sustained a bad accident, through a horse he was riding bolting with him and throwing him on a metal road. Mr. Tanner was suffering from concussion of the brain and some bad cuts and bruises, but is now, we are glad to hear, better and able to get about again.

Mumford, who is at present in England, has a commission to buy horses for Mr. J. B. Norton, who is well known in Calcutta and who is one of the latest recruits to the turf.

Mr. J. C. Galstaun leaves for England about the middle of next month and it is probable that he will buy one or two horses for next season, as his string, which he has recently weeded out very considerably, is needing some new blood very badly.

Fergusson, Mr. Galstaun's trainer, is at present on a short visit to Australia and he may return with one or two horses if he finds anything likely to suit his patron. He will be in charge of Mr. Galstaun's Monsoon lot and we here that almost all the old division will come here to try their fortune at our now very well-endowed autumn fixtures.

If distances in India were not so immense and the risks of travelling horses in the heat of the summer and the rains so great, we should no doubt see a large contingent from the Western Presidency come over here for the Calcutta Monsoon Meetings, for as the dates are at present arranged it would be quite possible for the Bombay-Poona division to come here and put in a good time at our first four meetings and still have ample margin to get back to their own domains in time for the opening of the Poona Autumn Meeting. The great drawback is, as we say, the risk and the distance and owners are naturally somewhat diffident. But so far as stakes go and the money to be won in the ring the Calcutta Monsoon Meetings compare nowadays more than favourably with the Extras at the end of the season both in Calcutta and Bombay, and the arrangements and appointments leave very little, with certain reservations, to be desired.

The new sand track which is destined to be used for racing on during the Monsoon Meetings in Calcutta is now in course of active preparation. The arrangements, so far as we gather, for the flat races during these meetings are that the training track from the mile post to the half mile will be utilised and from that point onwards the new sand track which will be laid, and is now being laid on the public riding track. Apart from other drawbacks, this arrangement does not commend itself to us as a good one, as horses will come suddenly out of deep holding turf on to a surface that will, if the present method of preparing it is persevered with, be as hard as the high road. The new sand track is being modelled upon what we are told is done at the Flemington course in Australia. The foundation is constructed of ordinary bricks laid flat; on top of this is placed an amalgam of kunker (broken bricks) and ordinary road metal, on top of this (at Flemington) they roll in three inches of sand; in Calcutta the sand dressing is to be four inches thick. This new course is not viewed with favour by those most interested and Mr. J. D. Scott, the well known owner-trainer, Mr. Galstaun and others are by no means enchanted with the idea. What may do in Australia in wet weather, can by no means be depended upon to answer equally well in India in the torrential rains of the Monsoon and we shall be pleasantly surprised if this somewhat bold experiment, which is to cost Rs. 20,000 odd, prove successful. To begin with the ground upon which the brick foundation is placed cannot be depended upon to remain in position even without being galloped on by big fields of race horses. Then again the four inches of sand top dressing will stand a very big chance of being washed away by the heavy rain of the Monsoons, and we have only to turn to the Calcutta roads and more pertinently still to the country roads to obtain a very fair idea of what will happen after three or four days of such rain as we invariably get in the Monsoon. Sand rolled into turf has been found to answer well in the Monsoons, but sand rolled into a hard surface, such as this that is now being put down, cannot be depended upon not to wash away or be cut through by the mere fact of horses galloping over it. In Australia the weather conditions are totally different to those which obtain in India and this fact is the principal one which makes it extremely doubtful whether a track built upon Australian lines is likely to answer in India. We can however but await the event.

The suspension of F. Wootton recently announced is the second occasion upon which the popular light-weight has been "outed" for a similar offence—foul-riding—and two seasons ago he was deprived of his ticket upon a similar complaint from the same jockey D. Maher. It is an offence which cannot, in our opinion, be too severely dealt with and Wootton has been treated with great leniency in only being suspended for two months. It is likely to considerably interfere with Wotton's average and will amongst other things deprive him of a ride in the Derby in which race he would probably have ridden Neil Gow, his rival Danny Maher having, so we understand, now been definitely secured by Mr. Fairie, for whom he rode Bayardo last season, for Lemberg. Wootton has not yet steered a Derby winner so that this sentence will fall somewhat heavily upon him. Maher on the other hand has three Derbys to his credit (Rocksand 1903, Cicero 1905, Spearmint 1906) and if, as it is said, he has now been definitely booked for Lemberg it looks very like a fourth victory for him. Last season Maher was as often on the back of Neil Gow as he was on that of Lemberg but he probably has picked the winner of this year's Derby if he has decided to ride the latter.

The result of the Craven Stakes, which was won by Neil Gow very easily from Mr. H. P. Whitney's colt Whisk Broom, by Broomstick out by Audience, and Mr. Buchanan's Tressady, bay colt by Persimmon out of Simplify, does not help us very much so far as the Derby is concerned. Whisk Broom is not in the Derby, and this colt must not be confused with the other one that Mr. H. P. Whitney has in by Broomstick out of Sallie of Navarre. Since this race Tressady has come up level in the betting with Admiral Hawke and was returned at tens at the Calcutta Rooms early in the week, though possibly a much better price than this will be obtainable about him before the race is run. The fact, however, of his having come in with a rush from an outside position augurs that the judges on the spot do not think too badly of his Craven Stakes performance, and the reason for his being backed is undoubtedly because Whisk Broom, by whom he was only beaten a neck, ran up to Lemberg in the Middle Park Plate, Admiral Hawke being third. Of the others recently quoted and whose performances we have not until now set out, are Greenback 12 to 1, San Antonio 16 to 1, Witchwork 16 to 1 and Abattis 33 to 1. The performances already published (Lemberg, Neil Gow, Admiral Hawke, Chaffinch colt and Imprenable) will be found under a separate heading at a later page and for the convenience of our readers we will publish this list week by week with the necessary additions. The performances of those horses mentioned since last week are subjoined :—

ALTHOUGH there is some warrant for the support of Tressady and Greenback, both of whom have, as their records show, performed with more or less distinction as two-year-olds, neither San Antonio nor the very moderate Abattis would seem to hold any great chance.

ADMIRATION, who was the dam of Admiral Hawke and also by the same token of Pretty Polly, is dead. On the turf this mare was of no use and although she was kept in training till she was a five-year-old she was never any good and all that she ever won were two small jump races of £50 and £102. Major Eustace Loder, however, decided to keep her and she gave him Pretty Polly and now this very promising Admiral Hawke, who is by Gallinule.

THE V.R.C. Grand National Hurdle Race has been increased in value by £250, this making the added money £1,500. the same as that for the V.R.C. Grand National Steeplechase. The Melbourne Derby is now worth £3,000 instead of £2,000 as formerly and the V.R.C. Leger £1,050 instead of £750 as previously. The Newmarket Handicap is increased in value from £1,000 to £1,250. The Melbourne Cup has also been increased in value and the added money is now £6,000 instead of £5,000. There are various other less important increases in race values, all of which, however, are of interest to those who buy horses in Australia with a view to running them in terms races and also handicaps in India.

MR. P. NELKE'S Lagos, 5yrs., by Santoi, dam by Wisdom out of Sterling Lass, won two good races as a three-year-old in 1908—the Lewes Handicap and the Brighton Cup,—but last year although he was out a good many times he only scored once (Goodwood Plate) but ran into a place on four other occasions. He ran third in the Salisbury Cup (1½ miles) to Southannan and Sand Apple; he ran up in the Dullingham Plate (1½ miles) at Newmarket to Royal Realm, 8st. 10lb., his own weight 9st. 13lb., Llangwm 10st. 4lb., running third; and he then won the Goodwood Plate (2¼ miles) with 8st. 6lb. on his back, beating Elm Twig, 7st. 9lb., and Asticot, 7st. 13lb., and a good field which included Laughing Mirror, Pure Gem, etc., etc. In the Great Ebor Handicap he was defeated by Dibs, 8st., and Royal Realm, 8st. 2lb., his own weight 8st. 8lb., and in the Great Yorkshire Handicap he also suffered defeat, finishing third behind Specifical, 6st. 8lb., and Laomedia 7st. 6lb., his own weight 8st. 6lb. A big field went for the "Metrop." as our telegram discloses, and carrying top-weight, 9st., Lagos won apparently with fair ease by two lengths from Claretoi and Relish, neither of whom were deemed last week to be probable starters. Lagos' starting price was 100 to 7.

THE Meerut Gymkhana race meeting advertised to take place on the 14th and 16th April has been postponed until the 21st and 23rd idem.

THE duties of Honorary Secretary of the Annandale Gymkhana at Simla have been taken over by Captain Muir, A.-D.-C. to the Viceroy. The programme of the season's amusements will be arranged at the usual annual meeting early next month. The following will be the various Sub-Secretaries:—Polo.—Captain Nicholas, A.-D.-C. to H. E. the Commander-in-Chief. Races—Captain Ridgway. Cricket—Lord Francis Scott. Horse Show and Gymkhana—Captain Mackenzie.

As an outcome of the fatal accidents which occurred a few months ago at American Football the Inter-Collegiate Football Rules Committee has tentatively adopted six changes in the rules of the game calculated to make it safe. The changes remove the five yards restriction on a player receiving the ball from the snapback, and require seven men to be maintained by the offence on the line of the scrimmage. The flying tackle is prohibited, and the game divided into four periods of 15 minutes each. Pushing or pulling a man running with the ball are forbidden, and the onside kick is limited to 20 yards beyond the line of scrimmage. The changes so weaken the offence that other changes will be necessary to strengthen it. This matter will be taken up at a meeting of the committee, to be held in Philadelphia on 29th April, when the rules regulating the use of the forward pass will probably be decided. In the meantime many people are said to have given up the game altogether because they consider that the changes spoil the game although they at the same time admit that in its old form it was too dangerous to be allowed. The position for the Inter-Collegiate Football Rules Committee is therefore a very difficult one and they will find it hard to manufacture a game that will please everybody.

"THE call of the East!" The phrase, says the Earl of Ronaldshay in an article he contributes to "Travel and Exploration," conjures up all the illusive witchery of Eastern scenes and the glamour of the orient. Yet there are many for whom the call of the East has long since lost its appeal, for whom, indeed under stress of long and enforced familiarity with the prosaic actualities of daily life in Eastern lands, it has assumed a note of hollow—even Sardonic—mockery. For many the call of the East has existed does exist, and will exist, not always seductive perhaps, but always insistent; and a moment's reflection will surely show that this same "Call of the East" has been one of the governing factors in the making of modern history. From the day when the daring and enterprise of the great sea captains of Portugal solved the riddle of the southern seas, an unbroken and ever-swelling volume of explorers, soldiers, and traders has poured from Europe into Asia, attracted irresistibly to her vast mysterious shores. Nations have risen and fallen on the tide of the Asian Sea. Portugal, Spain, Holland, France and Great Britain have each been borne in rapid succession to the loftiest pinnacles of their greatness upon the crest of an Eastern wave. The day of conquest has sped by, the curtain of mystery behind which the now familiar outline of Asia loomed darkly to the pioneers of four centuries ago has been rolled aside; Asia stands to-day a world revealed; yet the spell which she laid upon the traders and adventurers of four centuries ago, she casts over an infinitely wider community at the present time. There is, no doubt, still work for the soldier and the explorer; the merchant may still find ample occupation in spreading over the entire continent the warp and woof of a vast commercial web; but with the gradual filling in of the mosaic of European ascendancy the monopoly of trader and soldier has gradually passed away, and the early bands of fighting and trading pioneers have been swelled by a vast army of travellers and students who have been attracted in ever increasing numbers to the limitless and fascinating fields of Eastern study and research

THE average golfer is probably not aware of any special significance in the term "a good foursome player." According to the Times the phrase as a rule has more than a simple and straightforward meaning. It means that the player on whom it is bestowed possesses certain moral and mental qualities and it casts a covet slur on the rest of the golfing world by insinuating that they do not possess them. It is sometimes rather amusing to observe the difference between two schools of golfing thought on this point. Those who are particularly devoted to foursomes would have one believe that the art of foursome play is a sacred mystery which can only be understood, even in the remotest degree, after years of apprenticeship. "The atrocious crime of being a young man" they consider absolutely prohibitive of success, and will cheerfully back two middle-aged gentlemen, of quiet pedestrian attainments, against the most dashing and brilliant of youths. On the other side are those who find an incomprehensible joy in a four-ball match, and regard a foursome as an antiquated and tediously unselfish amusement. They will argue that all this talk of the art of foursomes is a mere myth invented by the race of short drivers to hide their deficiences. That this latter school are wrong, they themselves will generally demonstrate satisfactorily by playing indescribably badly in a foursome. At the same time one is sometimes tempted to think that the opposite doctrine is capable of exaggeration. But, as a rule, accuracy pure and simple, does meet with a richer reward in foursomes than in singles; the short and steady player may be utterly crushed in a single by the overpowering length of his slashing adversary, but that is not so likely to happen where there are two steady players and two slashers, if only because it is contrary to the laws of chance that the two slashers should scintillate at one and the same moment. A particularly brilliant performance in a foursome is an exceptional thing, as witness the fact that golfers will often speak of a reasonably steady score as "very good for a foursome"—an expression which has about it an unpleasant ring of condescension, but in reality pays a high tribute to the difficulties of the game.

THE heights obtained by aeroplanes have progressed immensely in the last year; the maximum height now stands at 4,100 feet and it is estimated that they will soon be capable of soaring to the height of a mile. This power gives it a new value in war; for it is pointed out that a height of 5,000 feet the flying machine is but a speck in the sky, and, as well as escaping notice, it would be absolutely safe from gun-fire. A fleet of aeroplanes could therefore travel in daylight to their objective without any great fear of detection or attack from an enemy on earth or sea. There are, at the same time, sundry difficulties in the way of the aeroplane as a scouting instrument, and more particularly as an attacking vessel. The flying machine maintains its position in the air by virtue of its speed, and this is seldom under 35 miles an hour. Obviously this speed renders close observation rather difficult, though experience, as in the case of the birds, proves that rapid observation will be cultivated by practice, and in time we may hope to have aerial scouts who can prepare an accurate map of the country below them, even when they are travelling at very high speed. Experiments have shewn that for the present the role of the aeroplane is that of a scouting and observation agent, and a good deal of progress must yet be made ere it can be deputed to serve in any other capacity. Before the flying machine can be usefully employed for carrying out attacks on forts, fleets, etc., it will probably be utilised as a destroyer of military balloons and dirigibles, although the dirigible would have certain advantages in a conflict of this kind. But taking into account the low initial cost of aeroplanes, the rapidity with which they can be built, and the enormous strides which are being made in attitude records, it would appear that more serious attention should be paid to them by the military authorities. Already France has formed a corps of military aeroplanes, and 20 machines will be attached to the Engineers and Artillery by the end of this month. As regards dirigibles, France has of late pursued a mistaken policy, for expert opinion is steadily trending in favour of employing both dirigibles and aeroplanes, and allotting separate work to each.

An effort is being made to revive cycle racing in Bangalore and a meeting is to be held on the 14th and 16th May on the racing track belonging to the Indian Cycle and General Engineering Company, Limited, who have guaranteed the prizes. The proposed programme is as follows:—Championship of Southern India, 1 mile. Open to all comers. Two miles race. Open to natives of India only. Three miles garrison race. Open to warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the British Army stationed in Bangalore. Three miles Native Army race. To play on 28th and 29th May.

Messrs. Mackinnon, Mackenzie and Co. vs. The Mercantile Bank.

The National Bank of India vs. The East Indian Railway.

The Port Commissioners vs. Messrs. Graham and Co.

It has been decided that should any pair of teams be unable to play on the dates assigned to them, they may arrange and exchange with any other pair not playing on that day.

In the case of any member of a team being unable at the last moment to play the committee have the power to allow him to play some other time.

With the above exceptions any team who do not return their six scores on the Monday following the week and assigned to them shall be disqualified.

The onus of arrangement rests with the team or individual that is unable to play.

The Hockey League fixtures in Calcutta are at an end and the Beighton Cup Tournament is now in full swing. League results will be found further on. Once again the Customs are on top in the first division with the Rangers next, Sibpur and Calcutta tying for third place. The Measurers head the junior list with the Customs "B" a close second and the 27th Punjabis third. In the big competition now in progress the Riversiders are looked upon as likely to retain possession of the Cup but we should not be surprised to see their colours taken down by the Rangers, Medicals or Sibpur. The finals of two minor competitions were played on Saturday last. The junior competition for the Kaivan Cup between St. Xaviers College "B" and the Measurers ended in a draw of one all but on replaying on Monday St. Xaviers won by a goal to nil: the Lakshmibilas Cup open to Indian teams only was won by Bishop's College who beat the Sporting Union by 2 goals to one.

The match between Jamsetji of Bombay (holder) and C. Williams for the World's Racquets Championship will not take place this year, but it is hoped that it may be held next Spring.

To a bazaar book of maxims prepared by the Garelochhead (Dumbartonshire) Golf Club the Duke of Argyll contributes the following rhymed eulogy of golf:—

It gives to the bad the sleep of the just;
It lays the proud low in the bunker of dust;
It raises the humble to sit in the lap
Of fortune made kind by a fair handicap.
For the man of adventure 'tis balm to his soul
To get himself happily into a hole.
Then let out your elbows and swing your club free
And don't press your game with a "Drat" and a "D."

The average gillie's notion of proportion in angling matters are at times embarrassing, as witness the following story of the lessee of a beat on a salmon river in the Highlands, who, exasperated by a run of blank days, turned to his gillie and asked: "How is it, Donald, that I can't get a fish about seven or eight pounds? I am constantly hearing of fish being killed of much greater weights in the water below." "I should say 'twas because they are verra much bigger leears on the ither watter," was Donald's reply. But the gillie's sense of proportion does not always abide between the size of fish and the terminological inexactitude. Occasionally the pocket influences the situation, as may be exemplified by the instance of an angler who, exultant over the capture of a fine salmon, observed to his henchman: "I'll warrant you haven't gaffed as fine a fish as that for any other angler this season, Sandy!" "Aweel, I dinna ken," replied Sandy. "There was the Lunnon gentleman's fush last month—she was a fine fush—a braw fine fush." "What! a finer fish than this?" "I cudna say preceesely without consideration. Mebbe she wass an' mebbe she wasna." "Well, how big was it, anyhow?" "Aweel, I cudna say without consideration; but she wass big enough for the Lunnon gentleman to gi'e me half-a-sovereign for the gaffin o' her!"

We have received from Messrs. Hardy Brothers of Alnwick, the well-renowned specialists in all appertaining to fishing, a copy of their catalogue for 1910. This interesting volume should be on the bookshelf of all fishermen, as it contains much useful information as well as being a complete list of this great firm's angling specialities. We have details of rods, tackle, reels and other appurtenances to the gentle art, while there is a special section dealing with flies with beautifully coloured illustrations of all the most popular patterns. Another special section is devoted to Indian fishing and the whole contains much that is interesting and useful to the angler. There are many novelties in the new list both for dry fly and wet fly anglers and to select a few we might mention the knockabout special Dry Fly Perfection Rod (1910 Model) £3 3s. as made for and approved of by Mr. Halford; the patent "Slip On" lead which is far the best thing of the kind ever introduced and is the ideal lead—one which is at once quickly attached or detached from the trace, without liability to catch in weeds—which does not in any way damage the trace and at the same time is a perfect anti-kinker; the Hardy Anti-kink Phantoms; and the "Tulips" and "Tarpon" end rings, two new designs of end rings which should be much appreciated by sea anglers, might also be noted. A notice of the new catalogue would be incomplete without mention of the three colour production of the back cover, which is a memorandum of the great triumph of Hardy's rods at the great International Casting Tournament at the Franco-British Exhibition in 1908.

The annual point-to-point races of the Peshawar Vale Hunt were held on the 13th instant at Kazana Thana and were largely attended, Their Excellencies the Viceroy, Lady Minto and Lady Eileen Elliot being among those present. The course was a circular one, four miles long over a natural sporting country, and the five races were most interesting. There was plenty of grief but luckily no serious damage to either riders or horses.

The first race, "Heavy Weights," produced 13 starters and was won by Mr. Bolton's Pentagon ridden by Captain Heale, with Major England, M. F. H.'s Wales (owner up) second, a length behind, and Mr. Barney's Whistling Rufus (Mr. Bannerman riding) third.

The second race, "Light Weights," drew 11 starters and was won by Mr. Bolton's Harlequin (again ridden by Captain Heale) with Captain Dyer's Welfare (owner up) second and Major England's Boyer (owner up) third.

The third race for walers and C.-B. ponies, 9 starters, was won by Major Westmoreland's Lady Grisel ridden by Captain Daniels, A.-D.-C., with Mr. Knight Bruce's Vesuvius (owner up) second and Mr. Merk's Kingfisher (Major England up) third.

The fourth race for Arabs and C.-B. ponies was won by the second whip, Mr. Knight Bruce riding his sporting little pony The Pet, Mr. Montague-Smith's Scandal second and Mr. Bannerman's Nut third, both ridden by their owners.

The last, a "Zemindar's Race," was two miles long, and produced 20 starters and a close finish; grief was plentiful. The riders were full of pluck and keener to jump than their mounts.

The R. A. and R. E., Peshawar, were "At Home" during the afternoon and the prizes were given away by Her Excellency Lady Minto.

The Murree Brewery Hockey Tournament final was played on the 16th instant, the 24th S. W. Borderers defeating the York and Lancasters by 8 goals to love.

The fight for the feather weight championship of England and a purse of £1,000 was brought off at the National Sporting Club on Monday the 18th instant when Jim Driscoll knocked out Spike Robson in the fifteenth round. Spike Robson held the feather weight championship from December 1906 when at the N.S.C. he secured the title on a foul in the fourth round in a contest with Johnny Summers. Departing for America with his newly won honours, Robson met Abe Attell, the American feather weight champion, and light weights in Tommy Murphy and Young Erne. These three contests were all 6 round no-decision affairs, but Robson created a very good impression. Returning to England he was told that Driscoll was anxious to box him for the feather weight title and £50 aside. Robson was agreeable, provided Jim would raise his side bet to £200, being the sum he had put down to fight Summers, and the only condition on which he could get Johnny to meet him. Spike insisted on this side wager because by staying in England he would be compelled to forego some excellent engagements in America. Driscoll being unable or unwilling to find the necessary backing, Robson went back to to the States, knocked out Benny Hopkins in New Rochelle, Jack Daly in New York, fought no-decision bouts with Grover Hayes (twice) and Terry McGovern, and was knocked out by Joe Gans, then the light weight champion of the world. Back in England again he was surprised to learn that a match for the feather weight championship had been arranged between Driscoll and Seaman Hayes. What had he, the holder of the title, done that he should be ignored? He had won his title at the club, and it certainly does seem strange that when the club were looking for an opponent to dispute the ownership of Lord Lonsdale's belt with Driscoll he, the actual champion, should be so unceremoniously passed over.

Not being anxious to spoil sport he did not interfere with the negotiations; besides which as they had been already completed it did not appear as though any intervention would be likely to prove profitable. But he came up to town to await the result and prepared to challenge either Welsh or Driscoll. Seeing the latter he told him that he felt that as he would probably like a chance to really establish his claim to the honour, he (the holder) would be willing to accommodate him. Driscoll announced his intention of returning to the States in March. This appeared conclusive so Robson did not trouble until he heard at the paying over of the stakes and purse that Driscoll was complaining that he could not find an opponent in England. Spike at once came forward and pointed out that he was anxious to defend his title or dispute Jim's, money was deposited and the match fixed for the 18th April. Robson had been out of the game for a couple of years and many thought that he would not be able to come back, but he was confident of himself. He was beaten, as the telegram from London shows, but the contest went fifteen rounds and must have been a good one. We await further details with interest.

Freddy Welsh the English champion light weight, and Packey McFarland, the American boxer, have at last been matched to meet each other and the fight will take place on the 30th May next. There has been a great deal of trouble in fixing up this match, but it is at length arranged and those at Home during Derby week will be given an opportunity of witnessing a rare good fight. It has been stated that Packey is over weight but he asserts that he can scale the required 133lb., and the two men have gone into training for the contest. They have met twice before. In February 1908 at Milwaukee when McFarland was given the decision in a ten round contest. This is the only occasion on which Welsh has been beaten, and in the opinion of many it is doubtful whether the exchanges were so distinctly in Packey's favour as to have entitled him to much better than a draw. The second battle in July of the same year was an extraordinary encounter from all reports. Welsh had outboxed McFarland in 19 of the first twenty rounds, but during the last 6 founds Packey fought like a young tiger and evened matters up so that Jeffries was left no alternative but to declare the fight a draw. The next encounter should be well worth seeing.

London Week by Week.

FRIDAY, 1st April 1910.

WE have practically recovered from Easter with its attendant ceremonies and festivities. We ate our hot cross buns on Friday and we adult consumers in this direction revived, as is our annual custom, the lost joys of juvenile appetites. Then we gave ourselves up to four days' junketting and, as far as weather conditions went, a more perfect Easter it would be hard to imagine. In their millions Londoners struck for the country and the seaside, to seek a brief respite from the cares and worries of business and home life. Hundreds of thousands took their modest outings nearer home. They teased and over-fed the long suffering animals at the Zoo, in accordance with the best Cockney traditions, they crowded all the popular shows and made for all the open spaces and though the absence of flower and foliage deprived them of exercising to any great extent their passion for destruction, that joy will arrive later on, for are there not still Whitsun and the August Bank Holiday to come? Cyclist, golfers, and others bent on open air pastime simply swarmed, the motorist in his thousands was supremely happy in finding sufficient dust to raise, and the bright and continuous sunshine drew hundreds of parties to the rivers. Of course, there was the usual long list of motor, cycling, boating, hill climbing, and, other fatalities, murders and suicides, fires and calamities; in these days no pleasure scheme is unassociated with mishap and after all, like your Indian famines, it may be only one of Dame Nature's little schemes for reducing effete population.

In connection with these holiday-makings it is interesting to note the gradual change which is coming over the British tripper. A leading railway official has been making some observations on the subject. He says that people take more luggage with them nowadays; the handbag habit is dying out.

Week-end holidays now extend from Thursday to Tuesday instead of from Saturday to Monday.

Early morning trains are not so well patronised; holiday-makers dislike getting out of bed too soon.

Ladies take a more elaborate toilette than they did five years ago.

Many West End residents have discarded their motor-cars for holiday touring and prefer to travel by train.

There is a greater demand for first-class tickets on excursion trains.

Holiday-makers, although they take more luggage with them, are less liberal in their "tips."

WHILE we have been enjoying our simple pleasures on this side of the Channel, certain ingenious and wickedly daring Frenchmen have been bringing off a most extraordinary Easter hoax in the gay city. Too long the British Philistine has borne with the jeers of the critic at his inability to recognise, in certain streaks of violet upon orange lit with vermilion, a masterly rendering of the "Noonday sunlight effect in the market at Seville." He has been bewildered between the school which holds that landscape should be painted with a trowel and a hood of oil-colour and the other school which would express nature in terms of a million variegated dots, suggesting handfuls of paper confetti thrown at a wet canvas.

In future the sniggering Philistine will shield himself behind the story of the "Setting Sun" hung in the Gallery of the Independents at Paris and painted, according to the sworn certificate of an officer of the law courts, by a donkey to whose tail had been lashed a paint-brush dipped from time to time in vivid colours. When the donkey had produced on the canvas an effect resembling "a tom cat having a fit in a lobster salad," as a critic once remarked on seeing one of Turner's sun rises, the horrible daub was signed "J. R. Boronali," entitled "the "Setting Sun" sent in and, mirabile dictu, was hung at the exhibition!

THE "Little Brown Dog" of Battersea seems destined to become a sort of fetish with the anti-Vivisectionists. It has caused heaps of trouble already. It has excited the quasi-scientific wrath of irresponsible medical students; it has involved the ratepayers in a heavy cost for its protection; it has been discussed with almost as much passion as is occasionally shown in the Hungarian Parliament; it has been dragged into the Law Courts; and it has been made the subject of a Trafalgar Square demonstration. What ridiculous nonsense it all is. The anti-Vivisectionists may have a very good case; their sentimental wailings over the sufferings of the original "Little Brown Dog" may be creditable to their hearts; but all this hysterical fuss about a sculptured effigy only serves to make their cause ridiculous. Now subscriptions are invited towards a fund for further litigation, with the purpose of getting the memorial replaced in the Latchmere Recreation Ground: it is rather rough on the ratepayers that they should have to defend such preposterous actions.

ANGLO-INDIANS who have returned to England and made more or less unsuccessful attempts to settle down here are not unfrequently found turning towards Canada in the hope of finding once more the broad and genial atmosphere they miss so sadly in poor, dull, insular old Belat. There is no doubt that at the moment there is quite an unprecedented boom in Canadian immigration, and not the least remarkable feature of the boom is the incontrovertible evidence, which is forthcoming on every hand, that the present flood of emigrants to Canada is almost exclusively confined to healthy, hopeful, ambitious men with capital, and that the diseased, the desperate and the failures, the mental, moral, physical, and financial wrecks no longer emigrate at all.

The general type of Canadian immigrant has recently improved almost out of all recognition.

The new and higher type of the departing emigrant is, indeed, a striking feature of the present exodus to the Dominion—a feature, moreover, which should give the most convinced Free Trader pause.

AT a time when the plays of Shakespeare were in danger of neglect the revivals at His Majesty's Theatre performed something very like a national service. And important and useful as have been Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree's annual festivals in the past, that which began at His Majesty's last Monday night, and which is to continue for five weeks, promises to eclipse all that have gone before. Sir Herbert has called to his aid practically every Shakespearean actor in London, and among the interesting names that will figure in the various casts are Miss Ellen Terry, Mrs. Kendal, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. F. R. Benson, and Mr. H. B. Irving.

An entirely successful beginning was made with the revival of "The Merry Wives of Windsor." The revival was in its essentials identical with that made last summer. Sir Herbert's playing as Falstaff is too well-known to call for detailed criticism at this time of day. Elaboration has in certain phases led to over-elaboration; there are touches that are too broad, too farcial; but the study as a whole is a wonderful comic conception, a rich example of finely-detailed character and humour. Miss Ellen Terry, as last year, played Mistress Page, a performance of sheer joyousness, perfectly spontaneous in its mischievous fun, sunny, and irresistibly charming. As Mistress Ford Lady Tree struck just the right gay, sprightly notes. Mr. Lyn Harding again gave a sound, well-conceived performance as Master Ford, Mr. Henry Ainley, the new Fenton, was handsome and boyish. Mr. Hubert Carter was an admirable Pistol, Mr. Edward Sass scored as Bardolph and other chief parts were worthily interpreted by Miss Iris Hoey, Miss Kate Philips, and Messrs. Nigel Playfair, William Haviland, E. M. Robson, and Jules Shaw.

The mounting, it almost goes without saying, was as beautiful as the art of the producer could make it, and the revival was greeted with great enthusiasm.

FOR the third time Mr. Gerald Du Maurier plays a gentleman burglar in a play "presented" by Mr. Charles Frohman; but his new character is totally different from the two genial criminals who have won such popularity in the past. Raffles and Arsene Lupin gloried in their crimes till the end, and always triumphed over the police. Lee Randall, alias Jimmy Valentine, the hero of the play by Mr. Paul Armstrong produced at the Comedy Theatre on Tuesday night, has repented of his sins before the beginning of the second act, and is as "straight" as any man in Illinois in the third, but it is only through the magnanimity of a detective that he is not marched off to Sing Sing Prison again in the end.

Jimmy's claim to fame among the criminal classes is that he is the only man in America who can find the combination of a safe by a sense of touch; but although he is sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, he is fortunately recognised by Rose Lane, the niece of the Lieutenant-Governor of New York, as a man who once saved her from insult. Inquiries are made into his case, and because the evidence was slender against him, he receives a pardon.

His love for the lady opens up a new life for him. He is able to hide all the tracks of his old career. He is able to pose as a man wrongfully convicted. Under a new name he is given employment in a bank, whose head is Rose's father; he prospers exceedingly, and Mr. Lane looks upon him favourably as a future son-in-law. Then his whereabouts are discovered by a detective who had made it his life's work to run him to earth. Jimmy, however, has successfully merged his identity into that of a cousin who had, fortunately, disappeared, and the detective is outwitted for a time.

But Rose's little sister is shut into a new safe in play by her little brother. If she remains there five minutes her death must result. So Jimmy goes back to his old trade to save her life, finds the combination, and the girl is saved. The detective watches the operation; Jimmy's identity is revealed. But touched by the devotion of Rose the detective promises to forget all he has seen.

The thrill of the play is reserved for the end, when Jimmy, blindfolded, works with his fingers to find the secret of the lock. It is a rare good thrill, too, and is in itself sufficient to make the success of a play that is an exceedingly good example of its kind.

Mr. Du Maurier has fewer opportunities to distinguish himself than in his previous criminal roles, but his ease, and the exceeding cleverness of his acting in the final scene gave distinction to the character. Miss Alexandra Carlisle played prettily as Rose Lane, and excellent work was done by Mr. Guy Standing as the detective, by Mr. Harry Nicholls and Mr. C. M. Hallard as Jim's criminal pals, who also turn "straight," and by Mr. Fred Cremlin as a paralysed prisoner.

THE stroller in Bond Street is pulled up at the entrance to the Walker Galleries by a coloured realisation of a convict, who, looking lugubriously from beneath the legend, "Lawson Wood's Pictures," murmurs, "Wish I could see 'em."

This whimsical indication that the artist is holding his third exhibition is characteristic of the seventy drawings which make up the collection, and which teem with humorous insight, combined with clever draughtsmanship and a colour sense more marked than is usual in the ordinary black-and-white man.

Some of Mr. Wood's work touches high and serious levels, such as his sombre and pathetic water-colour, "The Power of the Dog," which shows an old beggar lamenting over his sick pet, which lies stretched helplessly at his feet, half covered with an old coat.

But the humorous water colours show the artist at his very best. "The Club Scout" pictures for us a prehistoric motorist being warned of a police trap by a scout mounted on a mastodon. "Gooseberry" gives us two pairs of daintily drawn shoes and ankles in familiar proximity, while a chaperoning spaniel trails his neglected cord in the foreground.

Twenty years ago London laughed for a complete summer over the exhibition of humorous art which was held in the galleries of the Royal Institute. Every comic artist of repute from Rowlandson to Tenniel and his contemporaries was represented. The success of Mr. Lawson Wood's show suggests that another humorous collection might be gathered together with advantage.

The egregious Keir Hardie has a new title: at a meeting of the Independent Labour Party Conference held in London at the beginning of the week a virulent little Bengalee orator referred to him as "the Sirdar of the White Coolies" whatever that may mean. This particular Baboo is Bepin Chandra Pal, the founder of the notorious Bande Mataram newspaper of odious memory. In the course of his fiery harrangue he threw his misguided audience into ecstacies, particularly when he made a blackguardly attack on that good sportsman and thorough gentleman the Maharaja of Burdwan, who, as your readers are aware, not long ago spoke in unappreciative terms of Keir Hardie. He described the Maharajah as "a rajah without a raj, a king without a kingdom." He said that the Rajah's "insult" to Mr. Keir Hardie was not resented "by your aristocratic, blue-blooded representative in India." "In the name of the whole of India," cried Baboo Pal warmly, "we resent and denounce this outrage which that young bounder committed in the Council Chamber."

Roars of laughter at the unexpected use of the word "bounder" by this solemn-looking little Bengali mingled with the cheers which approved his attack on the offending Maharajah.

Keir Hardie's speech fell a trifle flat after this oration. But the resolution he moved was instructive, as illustrating what the Socialists want in India. It was this:—

"In the opinion of this conference the economic and administrative problems of India are among the most urgent of imperial questions.

"It believes that before any effective redress is secured, it will be necessary to build up an organisation in India having the same objects as the Labour movement in this country, viz., the amelioration of the condition of the Indian agriculturists and labourers and as a necessary preliminary to this, this conference urges the granting to the people of India the rights of lawful association and freedom of speech and of the Press." Hardie added to this, by consent, the words "and the extension of representative government based on popular election for the whole of India." Bap-re-bap!

Victoria crosses are going up in market value. A Victoria cross that belonged to a deceased veteran was sold by auction the other day for over £60. Intrinsically, the medal is only worth a few shillings; the glory circling round it is what gives it a special value. I suppose that survivors, left in strained circumstances, are justified in getting what they can for these souvenirs of gallant deeds; nevertheless, it jars on one's sentiment to see them put up to the competition of dealers and collectors who regard them simply as marketable curios and do not care a rap about the heroism for which they were conferred. Most families would, rather part with life itself than let the treasured token of a father's valour pass out of their possession. But there are exceptions; moreover, there are such things as death duties and valuations for probate.

A FOOL AND A GRIZZLY.

In bear hunting to-day there remains much of doubt. Men still differ concerning the species, their color and their size, and there is above all else a tendency to exaggerate the degree of danger attendant upon the bear hunter—especially he who is in search of the grizzly. Still, while there are on the other hand some hunters of much experience who claim, with ardent sincerity, that even the grizzly is hunted without risk to the sportsman, one may safely say their opinions are not shared by frontiersmen who hunted the grizzly before he had been taught a just and righteous fear of mankind by the wholesale onslaught of civilization.

It is indeed interesting to trace the gradual breaking up of the rule of the grizzly by the onward march of the white man across our continent, as one may who cares to delve in the archives of the expeditions that swept across the country in the first half of the past century. Gradually, one notes, as expedition followed expedition, there was increasing scarcity of the grizzly on the plains and river bottoms. Reading on one can trace his retreat first into the foothills, and lastly into the mountains, until to-day he can be found in only the most remote and rugged of the mountain ranges.

Seldom can we learn, in these early records, much of the habits and life of the grizzly in the old days when he still held sway; though of later years, we have had volume after volume of conflicting romance and fact written of him, filled with warnings and cautions of the most exacting nature. They are all words of conflict that give us little insight into the story we desire. And still, although I killed my first grizzly in the Big Horn mountains in the early seventies, and have for thirty-four years lugged around with me a bona fide reputation as a bear slayer, I like to read almost anything of the days when Old Ephraim was abroad in the land and with the right of his might, generally "on the prod." Having killed as many Wyoming grizzlies, perhaps, as any man living, I know how to enjoy a bear story. Perhaps it is too much to expect of myself the ability to contribute my share to the general fund. At any rate, the only bear story I have concerns chiefly an Indian.

In the fall of 1876 I was hunting with a companion in the Big Horn mountains. One afternoon, when returning to camp alone, I stopped at one place to look over the country. The view was magnificent; off to my left and below me over a mile was a little park in the heavy timber and in it a small lake shone blue and clear in its bright green setting of grass. As I stood admiring the scene a grizzly walked slowly out of the timber, down to the water's edge and began to wallow. It was the work of several hours to stalk shoot and skin my bear, a splendid specimen, and pack the green hide back to my horse. I returned just as the sun was going down and, as usual, I had some trouble packing the hide on him. No horse ever gets used to the bear smell. Just as I finished my scrap with the buckskin I was startled by a voice:

"Ugh! White boy kill um bear!"

I turned and their stood an Indian. I asked him where he had come from.

"Me see white boy pony tracks; me find pony and wait."

We proceeded to get acquainted, and as his tepee was near by and mine a good three hours away I was glad to accept his invitation to camp with him.

The buck set off at a swift walk through the woods It was now quite dark and we had trouble finding the trail, but once on it the Indian never stopped until we were at his tepee. There I unsaddle my horse and an Indian boy took him and turned him out with theirs. A squaw set before each of us a pan of boiled meat, some dried cherries, a small piece of bread and some coffee, and after we had done justice to the meal the Indian drew out his pipe of red stone and filled it with kinikinick. His squaw handed him a light from the fire and he lay back and took several long whiffs with evident satisfaction. Then he handed the pipe to me and commenced to talk. I smoked and listened.

First the Indian asked me what I wanted with the bear. I told him the skin was worth ten dollars. He then said his people, the Arapahoes, did not kill the great bear unless forced to, as the bear was very fierce, that the Great Spirit did not like to have the great bears molested, and so on in the same vein. I laughed at this, which did not please him at all. He then told me that he knew where there was a bear that had killed several men, both white and red; and he asked me if I did not think this proof that the Great Spirit protected the bear. I only laughed, telling him to show me the big bear, and if I did not kill it I would believe what he said. I thought he was spinning me an Indian legend, but he made sport of me and told me when I saw this bear I would so shake with fear that I would be unable to shoot straight and that the bear would undoubtedly get me, which he did not want to see, as I was only a boy.

I was somewhat nettled at this jibe and told him he knew there was never such a bear as he claimed. But he assured me there was and asked me if I would like to see it. I was only too glad to say yes, adding that I would take its skin to camp.

"White boy do not boast," said he. "I will show you the man-eating bear before another sun sets."

After a little more talk we went to bed, or rather lay down with our feet to the fire in the centre of the lodge.

The next morning, after we had eaten and smoked, the Indian asked, with an implied taunt, if I wanted to see the big bear. I replied in the affirmative and tapped my gun significantly. He spoke a few words to the Indian boy, who went out and soon returned leading our horses. We went out to saddle up, and when I commenced to tie the bear skin taken the previous day back of my saddle, the Indian told me to leave it and his squaw would flesh, stake and dry it, as we had a long ride to make and our ponies would be tired anyway. I did so. Everything was ready, so far as I could see, but he wanted to be sure of his "medicine." He took his medicine bag from around his neck, laid it on a post that was set in front of the lodge, and walked 'round and 'round it, muttering and pointing to the four points of the compass and the sun. This he kept up for about fifteen minutes. Finally, his medicine being to his liking, we mounted and rode off down the creek. We rode for about four hours before there was a word said, when the Indian spoke:

"White boy want to see big bear we go up hill," and he pointed to a high mountain that stood between two forks of the creek we had been following.

"Go!" said I.

We turned up the mountain, by an old deer path. When we reached the summit, after a hard climb, the Indian got down from his horse and gave me the sign to do likewise. I dismounted and threw the reins over my horse's head so he could graze. It was noon or near it, and the Indian produced from the folds of his blanket a couple of chunks of jerked meat, which we ate in silence. Then we smoked. In the talk that followed my red companion told me that in this moon the big bear always was to be found on this mountain and that he would not displease the Great Spirit by hunting for him, but would go up to a certain bald point and wait for me if I still felt like risking my young life. I told him I would find the big bear if he was there and not afraid to show himself. There was more banter along this line, and it began to have a quieting effect upon me. I was then a boy well under twenty years of age, and as I had been raised in the mountains I knew that some old boar bears did get very savage and cunning, so much so that it was almost impossible to kill them. Finally we went up to the bald point before mentioned. The Indian was a little ahead of me, and when he reached the divide he stopped and raised his arm.

"Look, he is there!" he exclaimed.

Sure enough, on the north slope of the ridge in a little swamp, just above the edge of the timber, was a big grizzly.

I asked the Indian to go with me until we could get close enough to see how big this bear was, but he said he would not do so even though his medicine was good. While we were talking I had been thinking and taking note of conditions. The wind was exactly right if once I got into the timber below; and the bear was in short range of the timber. No matter how cross he was I decided to risk his getting to me if I could get a good shot at him while he was quiet. My mind was made up, and I told the buck I would show him how to kill a bear if he would wait there a little while.

As I started back into the timber I could hear the Indian saying, "Good bye, white boy," and it was not comforting. I went 'way down around through the timber and began to stalk the bear. When I got about half way to him I saw his track, where he had crossed a soft place at a spring, and it almost took my breath. I had seen plenty of bear tracks before, but none like this. I had no difficulty in locating the bear as I had taken my bearings before starting and I came out directly back of him at the edge of the timber, crawling the last hundred yards to a convenient log.

When I got to the log I raised up and peeped over—and my heart just about stood still. There, not more than fifty yards from me, was what I took to be the father of all grizzlies. He had a hump on his back like a buffalo. He was feeding on some berries that grew along a little stream which came from a snowbank higher up the mountain.

A little to the right of where I lay and at the other end of the log I was behind, grew a clump of bushes. I crawled as quietly as possible to a position behind these and raised up with my rifle in position. Just then the bear turned from me and I could plainly see the line of his backbone. I drew a careful bead, held my breath and "let him have it." Please remember, my heart had not bothered me all this time; it had stopped as soon as I saw the bear.

When the bullet hit the bear and he roared my heart gave a jump that amply made up for the lost time. Of all the noises I have ever heard I think that was the most terrifying.

Like all bears, this one started for cover. But he was done for and dragging his hind parts; I had broken his spine. Tearing up everything that was in his way, uttering all the while those fiendish roars, he came almost directly toward me. I knew he would pass within thirty or forty feet of me, so I waited until he was nearly opposite, then fired right where his heart ought to be. It was a good shot, as I later found. He redoubled his efforts for a few moments but soon commenced to weaken; his efforts grew less and less until he finally lay quiet.

Then I got up and went out to my bear. My first thought was that he was the largest I had ever seen. He was so old that he was gray. What made him appear bald-faced was that the fur around his eyes and in stripes running from the eyes to the nosetip, was hoary from age.

I thought of the Indian, and went out in the open to look up the mountain for him. He was still where I had left him and made no move to come down. I motioned for him to come and he came a little way and stopped. I took out my knife and stuck the bear. Then I climbed on him and motioned for the Indian to come. He started slowly down the mountain toward me, but I did not have time to watch for I knew I would have to get to work with a will to skin the bear and get back to camp that day.

When I had peeled off one of the bear's legs I looked up and the Indian was standing some thirty paces away; he would come no nearer. I kept at my work, paying no more attention to him. He nevertheless came closer, quite gradually, and he finally set his gun down, drew his knife and commenced to help me.

It was well on toward the middle of the afternoon when we got the bear's hide off. We hung it up and stripped off a lot of the fat; then I threw it over my shoulder, the Indian took both guns, and we started back for our horses. Have you any idea how heavy a green grizzly hide is? It will make the best of men sweat to pack one up a hill for half-a-mile; so you can guess how I felt when we got back to the horses.

We reached the tepee after dark, and found my partner there looking for me. My red host did not tarry after our after-supper smoke, but sought his buffalo robe and was soon lost to the world. He had made no comment whatever concerning the killing of the big grizzly.

Just as we were mounting the next morning, my host came up to me and took me by the hand, saying, in his most impressive manner, that a man who could kill the big bear was a very great warrior, just how great he could not say until he had time to think it over, but he would tell me when he came to sleep at my tepee.

Two or three days later we were talking of moving our camp, when who should ride up but my friend the Arapahoe. He got off his horse, shook our hands and proceeded to get outside of all the grub we had cooked. Then came the inevitable smoke and talk. He started in by rehearsing how he had informed me of the great bear and I had wanted to kill it. He said he had thought I was boasting. Then he proceeded with the account of our ride to the mountain and the killing of the big bear, adding that among his people a man who could do such a thing would be the greatest warrior who had ever been heard of. He would be looked up to and obeyed by all who knew him and his words would be treasured after his death. It was remarkable that I, a mere boy, had gone up to the big bear that all his people knew to be protected by the Great Spirit and had killed it. He said he had had no rest for two sleeps and that he had finally come to believe that I was only a poor fool white man and did not know any better!

I have always been grateful to that old Arapahoe. Indirectly, I learned a whole lot from my brief experience with him. I was, as I have said, little more than a boy at the time; he was an elderly if not an old man. And although he may not have known much about bear hunting, his philosophy was sound. Moreover, he was a clever man.

We spent the day in camp, getting our things together preparatory to moving, and entertaining our guest as best we could. I felt pretty good about getting the big grizzly, and, of course, I owed it all to the Indian. My partner assured me there would be a good deal of talk when the story got around, and took upon himself the honor of dubbing me "Bear George." The big hide, we were both sure would sell for double the price of an ordinary grizzly hide.

Our guest decided to spend the night with us, and during our after-supper smoke-talk I began to realize how much common sense he had to not tackle a bear that was known to be bad. I began to respect him, and I shook his hand before we turned in.

That night the Arapahoe stole my big bear skin.—G. B. McL. in Recreation.

Fishing.

ENGLISH RECORDS OF THE SEASON.

MANY of our fishermen friends will read with interest the following record of large catches contributed to a London contemporary by the Editor of the Anglers News.

Ranging from a 6½oz. gudgeon—a veritable monster of its tribe—to a 50lb. salmon, the fish caught in river and lake during the past season have included many exceptionally fine specimens, though in a general way anglers have experienced numberless disappointing excursions—a result by no means due to any absence of the quarry, but undoubtedly brought about by the frequent floods, low rivers, and bad fishing days.

On many rivers salmon fishing was very poor—on several rivers it was excellent, notably on the Beauly in Scotland, where a record season's catch was obtained. On the Falls beat of this river, in the Beauly district, a memorable battle with an equally memorable salmon took place. Weighing 49lb., the salmon was hooked on the fly—a silver grey—by Henry Frazier, fisherman to Mr. C. W. Ogden, and over four hours elapsed before it could be brought to bank. Old Beauly anglers cannot recall the capture of a heavier salmon in this river.

The River Dee was among some of the salmon rivers which fished satisfactorily last season, and not a few anglers are doing well on it this year. Two 50lb. salmon were taken in the past season—one by Mr. G. C. Williams, in the Shannon, at Castleconnell, Ireland, and the other by Mr. G. Thomas, in the Ness, at Inverness. Fishing in the Sprouston waters, Lady Edith Trotter had the good fortune to hook and land the finest Tweed salmon of the season, a fish scaling 48½lb., and from the Floors Castle waters of the same river the Rev. W. McCullum got a 42-pounder.

The Avon, at Christchurch, furnished the largest salmon taken from English waters—a 44¼lb. fish, which fell to the rod of Mr. W. M. Hayter; and Mr. J. A. Hutton caught the finest Wye salmon, landed in the Hereford district. It scaled 44lb.

The trout angler's season was an uncertain one. The May-fly rise, however, showed an improvement here and there, and Thames sport on the whole was bad. At the same time the Thames well maintained its reputation for big trout, and the list of captured fish was headed by a beautiful specimen of 10lb. 10oz., killed by Mr. R. Elger, at Mapledurham, near Pangbourne. Waters as far apart as the New River, in Herts, and Lough Corrib, in County Galway, yielded two of the heaviest trout. The New River fish was caught by Mr. Clark, at Hoddesdon, and scaled 13lb. 9oz., and the Irish lake trout was taken by Mr. C. C. D. Maclagan, and weighed 15lb.

The most notable capture with the dry-fly was probably that effected by Major H. J. Bartholomew, who, while out on the Test, in Hampshire, took a fine trout of 8lb. 9oz. with a silver sedge. Loch Lomond yielded an 11½lb. trout to the rod of Mr. R. Newlands.

In various waters anglers have captured some exceptionally large pike, roach, bream, chub, dace, and perch, the dace taken including several 1lb. 1oz. and 1lb. fish, and in this connection the Kennet and its tributaries, and the Beane, a Lea tributary, have again furnished the champion fish. Mr. A May on one occasion took two 1lb. 1oz. dace in the Kennet; and on the Piscatorial Society's Moor stream preserves, near Newbury, Mr. H. T. Sheringham caught a 1lb. dace. Dace of these weights are almost as rare as 5olb. and 6olb. salmon.

As usual the majority of the pike of the monster order hail from the Irish lakes; but, thanks to the skill of Mr. A. J. Penny, of Great Yarmouth, England this time can boast of a 30lb. pike. It was captured within a few days of the close of the season on Potter Heigham Sounds, a piece of water off the River Thurne well known to angling and yachting visitors to the Norfolk Broads.

The big pike taken in Ireland include fish of 35lb. (Mr. Holmes Leigh), 34lb. (Mr. H. Cutler), 32lb. (Mr. Francis), 32lb. (Mr. F. Barber-Starkey), 30lb. (Mr. William Sparrow), and 29lb. (Mr. W. Barber-Starkey). These six fish had to face the gaff on Loughs Mask, Cullen, and Conn, and on a lough near Leenane.

No large pike have been reported from the Thames this past year, but chub up to 6lb. and a big roach (2lb. 8oz.) have been taken in its waters—the roach at Teddington by Mr. S. Day—and this river at Radcot Bridge has yielded the record barbel for many years. This fine specimen scaled 14¾lb., the fortunate captor being Mr. R. Jones. The chub of the season is the 7lb. Avon fish landed at Christchurch by Mr. Jams Clapp, and the champion roach, one of 2lb. 15oz., which was caught in Hornsea Mere, Yorkshire, by Mr. M. H. Ringrose.

Carp and tench of good size have been recorded; and the great gudgeon already mentioned was a Lea fish and was caught in the Hertford waters by Mr. Seymour. The bream this past season have made a brave show, and that grand old angling river, the Thames, has furnished a perfect Goliath in the form of an 8lb. specimen, taken by Mr. George Pocock, a Reading angler, while fishing at Shiplake.

A NEW MARLIN REPEATING SHOT GUN.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The Marlin Firearms Company have brought out a new model shot gun, which merits favourable notice. It is a 12 bore, and is designated "Model No. 24." It differs little in general appearance from their older No. 19 model, which it succeeds; but embodies certain alterations as regards the unlocking of the action by recoil, and the safety sear, which make the present gun extremely safe in use. Two features in the Marlin shot gun are of especial merit. The complete closing in of the whole action due to design of the bolt, whereby the gun is rendered impervious to wet and dirt; and the excellent balance and handiness of the weapon itself, making it as easy to shoot with, as an ordinary double English shot gun.

I have had no opportunity so far of testing a Marlin gun for pattern, but the Company guarantee the shooting of both their 12 and 16 bores, and I have no doubt that, if tested, the full chokes would reach the 70 per cent. standard. I have always regarded a repeating full choked shot gun as being an useful addition to one's battery, when in the East. There is wildfowl shooting, nearly everywhere throughout India, and duck are usually a little beyond the capabilities of the ordinary game gun. The full choked repeater would just make all the difference with those high duck and geese, which the ordinary gun seldom kills clean, and so often lets away altogether. American-made repeaters take the 2¾ inch case, which holds 1¼ ounces of shot, with a big charge of smokeless behind it comfortably.

A very useful gun for wildfowling would be a Model No. 24, Grade "B," 12 gauge take down gun, with 30 inch full choked barrel. This pattern has a specially hard steel barrel, of high elastic limit and great tensile strength. The weight is 7¾lbs., and the price about £6, or a little over. The Marlin shot gun has a very simple mechanism, and one has only to remove the screw on which the carrier pivots, in order to take both this, and the breech bolt out of the receiver. Thus it is an easy matter for anyone to take apart the mechanism for cleaning, when this becomes necessary—owing, however, to the complete closing in of the action, it seldom requires anything but oiling.

I mentioned in some former notes, that a friend had lately purchased a 10 bore repeating Winchester shot gun, after we had ascertained by careful trial that the gun was capable of shooting 70 per cent. patterns. This weapon has proved since a complete success for shore shooting. My friend has found that with 4 drachms of Black powder, or its equivalent of smokeless, and 1½ ounces of chilled No. 4, or No. 1 shot, the gun kills extremely well. He has already shot a number of duck, curlew and plover with it, on an estuary in the North of Ireland.

PROPER DESCRIPTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The following appears in The Times of India Illustrated:—

People are often at a loss how to describe groups of animals and birds. Therefore, the following will prove interesting. You should say:—

A covey of partridges.	A cast of hawks.
A nide of pheasants.	A trip of dottrell.
A wisp of snipe.	A swarm of bees.
A flight of doves or swallows.	A school of whales.
A muster of peacocks.	A shoal of herrings.
A siege of herons.	A herd of swine.
A building of rooks.	A skulk of foxes.
A brood of grouse.	A pack of wolves.
A plump of wildfowl.	A drove of oxen.
A stand of plovers.	A sounder of hogs.
A watch of nightingales.	A troop of monkeys.
A clattering of choughs.	A pride of lions.
A flock of geese.	A sleuth of bears.
A herd or bunch of cattle.	A gang of elk.
A bevy of quails.

I think that they might have made the list more complete and at the same time I venture to disagree with it in some particulars. For instance the authority (?) quotes a "brood of grouse." Possibly he may be right, but I must say I have never heard the expression. Why not a "Covey" of grouse? Likewise—a "flock" of geese. Flock may be all very well for farmyard geese but it is certainly not correct for the wild goose. A "gaggle of geese" is the expression. Again he says—a "herd of swine" and a "sounder of hogs" should it not be "a sounder of swine" and "a singular of boars"? He also says "a nide of pheasants." Should it not be a "nye" of pheasants? What should it be for black game?

The authority (?) might also have of quoted "a badling of ducks" and "a fall of woodcock" and even "a bevy of beauties" without going far wrong.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.
For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.
Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

MYSORE BIRTHDAY POLO TOURNAMENT, 1910.

UNDER I. P. A. RULES.

PATRON:

H. H. THE MAHARAJA OF MYSORE, G.C.S.I.

STEWARDS:

THE YUVARAJA OF MYSORE. | R. H. CAMPBELL, ESQ., I.C.S.
LIEUT.-COL. J. DESARAJ URS, M.V.O. | MAJOR C. E. E. F. K. MACQUOID, D.S.O.

Honorary Secretary:—LIEUT.-COL. J. DESARAJ URS, M.V.O.

1. A Challenge Cup presented by His Highness the Maharaja will be played for every year about the time of His Highness' Birthday and during the Mysore Race Meeting in June.
2. The Cup will remain in possession of the Winning Team till next year, but if any team win it three years in succession, the Cup is won outright and becomes its property.
3. In addition to the Challenge Cup, a small Cup will be given to each player of the Winning Team.
4. The Tournament is open to teams from any Regiment, Depôt, Battery or Batteries quartered in one station, and to teams composed of bona-fide resident members of any single recognised Gymkhana or Club.

CONDITIONS.

5. The Tournament will begin on Wednesday, the 22nd June.
6. Number of ponies limited to 18 per team.
7. Only ponies which are bona-fide the property of a player in a team or of a member of the Regiment, Battery, Depôt, Gymkhana or Club to which such player belongs, can be played.
8. Duration of time, 6 chukkers of 7½ minutes each, "all in."
9. Entries close 23rd May. Rs. 50.
10. Unless 4 Teams enter, the Challenge Cup will not be competed for, but only the 4 small Cups will be given to the players of the Winning Team.

N.B.—The players of each team (with waiting man) entering for the Tournament will be considered as guests of His Highness the Maharaja on their arrival at Mysore and until the end of the Tournament. Teams requiring stabling should intimate at the time of entering to the Honorary Secretary the number of ponies they are bringing with them.

A measuring of ponies for I. P. A. Certificates will be held at the Race Course, Mysore, at 8 A.M. on Tuesday, the 21st June.

(FROM THE HOME PAPERS.)

LONDON, Friday, 1st May 1910.

THE TURF.

KEMPTON.

THE appreciation of the national sport by those who have but rare opportunities of enjoying it except through the Press was emphatically endorsed by the enormous crowd—undoubtedly a record—that crammed the enclosures and overflowed in a vast crowd on Kempton's spacious enclosure on Easter Monday. The South-Western Railway had their work cut out to despatch the numerous crowded specials, and the road division were in strong force, while it speaks well for Bank Holiday that so many prominent patrons of the Turf were present, including Mr. L. de Rothschild, who came down with Lord Dalmeny, but exasperating luck attended him. It was a grand day for March, with the going in perfect order, and big fields kept sport at top pressure from start to finish.

The field for the Queen's Prize was not a "classy" one and Pure Gem, the gentleman of the party was short of work. Mr. J. Bell was pretty confident with Lawn Sand, who started favourite, with a bunch backed at sevens and eights. Amongst the outside lot, at 100 to 8, came Old China, for whom the distance was deemed too short. Fagan was present to see the mare run, and whereas Mr. J. Bell's horse, Lawn Sand, finished last, Mr. A. Bell's mare, who had done nothing since winning the Kbor Handicap and the Manchester November Handicap in 1908, came out fresh as paint, and scored in the easiest possible fashion from King Charming, who, at 35lb. disadvantage, confirmed the Newbury running with Banoge. Specifical was running on at the finish. Santeve spurted to the straight, but failed to sustain Liverpool form, while Lawn Sand's running is too bad to be true. Results :—

AND SCIENTIFIC TAXIDERMY,
DEHRA DUN,
United Provinces.

Depôt of Museum and Naturalists' supplies with Department for Ornamental Taxidermy. Feather Pictures of all India Game Birds made by W. M. Hutton

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

MANCHESTER.

The Lancashire Steeplechase has ever had a strong hold upon the many sportsmen who flock to Castle Irwell each Easter Monday, and as the weather was surprisingly bright for the time of the year the attendance of holiday-makers in all departments was a vast one. It was fortunate that the richly-endowed cross-country event offered so powerful and attractive an entertainment, as the first two events on the card fell terribly flat with a walk-over and a match. However, the failures in the "National," and there were five in the principal item—were afforded an opportunity of retrieving their lost laurels, and to show what they might have done at Aintree had the obstacles not been as formidable as reputed. Results:—

(Winner trained by Coulthwaite.)

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Moonstruck, 6 to 4 agst. Holy War, 33 to 1 Frampton.

Won by six lengths; a bad third.

What falling off there was in the attendance on the second day was scarcely noticeable, and, if anything, the muster in Tattersall's was even larger than on Monday being swelled by regular racegoers who journeyed on from Kempton Park and other holiday fixtures in the provinces. Local sportsmen also had every excuse for putting in an appearance, for nothing brighter could have been imagined than the weather conditions, the sun having the warmth of midsummer, while for Manchester the light was surprisingly clear; the going, if anything, was on the firm side, and fields larger generally than on the opening afternoon. Results:—

EASTERN HANDICAP STEEPLECHASE.—Of 200sovs. 2 miles.

FOOTBALL
ASSOCIATION RULES.

In drawing with Everton the Barnsley team accomplished a surprisingly good performance. Regarded as extremely dangerous opponents at home, as their wins in the previous rounds proved, they were not expected to make more than a good struggle with a First League team well experienced in the more important contest. On this occasion the Second Leaguers were not only the equals, but the superiors of their seniors. No one seeing yesterday's game at Leeds would deny that, on the day, Barnsley were sufficiently the better side to have merited victory. On dry turf, very sparsely covered with grass, they set a splendid pace, which never slackened, except during a brief period in the second half, and, in a very fast, punishing match, Everton were never allowed to settle down to the game one looked for from a set of men of such high repute. Quickness on the ball and untiring dash and energy enabled Barnsley to have the better of the play, and their methods and execution contrasted so favourably with that of their rivals that their success would have come as a just reward. As a matter of fact, neither set of forwards played in a manner suggesting the scoring of goals, almost all the passing runs being confined to the wings. So closely shadowed were all the forwards by pertinacious halves and backs that only a couple of really dangerous shots were made during the hour and a half's football, and the second, by Makepeace, might have enabled to snatch a victory had not Ness intervened with a neat kick. While the pace of the ground, which made the ball difficult to control, had a lot to do with the effectiveness of both sets of forwards, the inability to score could be attributed more largely to the splendid play of both pairs of backs. Macomachie, of Everton, and Downs, of Barnsley, perhaps, deserve most praise, but all four men were excellent. Wonderfully sure in their kicking, quick to appreciate what was the right thing to do, they went through an arduous match with hardly the semblance of an error. If disappointing because of the moderate forward play, the match was so full of life and dash that there was not a dull moment, the large crowd that filled the Elland-road ground having every cause for the enthusiasm they showed over the spirited display given by Barnsley. The match will be replayed on Manchester United's new ground on Thursday.

Beating Swindon at Tottenham Newcastle United qualified for the fourth time to take part in the Final Tie at the Crystal Palace, but with the match at Leeds as yet undecided their opponents in the supreme struggle are not yet known. As everyone expected, the game on the Hotspur ground produced a hard fight, but, apart from that it was, frankly, disappointing. When a week ago Newcastle United had given such a sparkling display of skilful football on the same enclosure against Tottenham Hotspur they raised hopes that were unfortunately not destined to be fulfilled, and, although they won, it must be confessed that their play left a lot to be desired. That they deserved their success, however, there could not be the slighest doubt for Swindon quite failed to reproduce the former that had carried them through the previous rounds. In the first half Silto put in a magnificent shot that Lawrence throwing himself full length on the ground, could only just save, and on one other occasion Swindon might have scored. These, however, were the only times that the Newcastle goal was ever in any real danger; while on the other hand, the Swindon men were lucky to escape being at least a goal down at half-time. But while they did not perhaps enjoy the best of luck with their shooting, the Newcastle forwards had very little to congratulate themselves upon with regard to their play generally, for all through the game their football was singularly lacking in combined effort. They played Swindon at their own game of kick and rush, and thus limited, if they did not actually prevent altogether, the opportunities for the display of their own undoubted abilities as a scientific side.

Although the forwards never really settled down to their proper style of play the defence was extremely good. McCracken and Whitson at back, and Veitch and McWilliam at half doing fine work. Whether they would have been so effective against a more determiend forward line, however, is a matter of conjecture. Their task was on the whole an easy one, for with Fleming continually out of place the Swindon attack was deplorably weak. For a player who has represented his country in international engagements, Fleming played wretchedly. He was everything but an inside right, the position in which the programme denoted him to be and he accomplished nothing during the game worthy of his reputation. Wheatcroft, too, in the centre could do little against Low, and was often offside, while he failed to keep his wings going when he got his chance. The outstanding player in the Swindon team was undoubtedly Walker, the leftback. Time after time he cleared splendidly from Rutherford and Howie, and on at least two occasions he stopped a goal by getting in the way of stinging shots. One however, could speak more enthusiastically of him if in his methods he had a little more regard at times for the ankles of some of his opponents. Still, he was a tower of strength in a hard-working defence, and it was the irony of fate that Newcastle's first goal should have been the result of a slip on his part. From a free kick the ball was placed well in, but it should have been cleared. Walker, however, in trying to head away sent it straight up in front of goal to a Newcastle forward. Swindon could not clear it, and following several attempts to kick through Rutherford at length got possession and scored. The second goal came directly afterwards, Stewart going through by himself, and these two reverses settled Swindon's chances of reaching the final. While they played well enough to win, Newcastle United will require to show better form if they are to succeed in carrying off the cup next month at the Palace.

Following up their victory over Middlesbrough on Friday with a further success at the expense of Bury, Aston Villa brought their aggregate up to 46 points—only seven less than last year sufficed to give Newcastle United the championship. Seeing that their nearest rivals—Blackburn Rovers and Liverpool—stand no fewer than seven points in arrear, the Villa may now feel quite confident of carrying off first honours in the League for the sixth time in their history. A very close struggle however, is still in progress for second place, Newcastle United and Sheffield United as well as Blckburn and Liverpool being well in the running for that distinction. The struggle to escape reduction to the Second Division of the League is now merely a question whether Middlesbrough or one of the London clubs accompany Bolton Wanderers who, as the result of 32 matches can show no more than 18 points to their credit. As a result of Friday's games Tottenham Hotspur and the Arsenal went above Middlesbrough, but as Middlesbrough yesterday defeated Notts County, and both Hotspur and the Arsenal were beaten, the positions are reversed, Middlesbrough being a point ahead of the two London clubs with the additional advantage over the Arsenal of an extra match to play. The Arsenal missed a great chance yesterday when against Sheffield Wednesday they had distinctly the bigger share of the play, but failed to turn their opportunities to account, and had to admit defeat by 1 to 0. Hotspur, who have yet to gain their first victory away from home found themselves two goals behind when half-time arrived at Liverpool, and never looked like getting on terms. Chelsea also stood in danger of being beaten by Manchester, but they managed to equalise during the concluding stages of the game and so secure a most valuable point.

In beating New Brompton Brighton and Hove Albion materially strengthened their position at the head of the Southern League and their chances of carrying off the championship are just now particularly bright. Queen's Park Rangers, who stand second on the list, have, it is true, four games in hand but whereas they could only draw with Brentford on Friday. Brighton and Hove continue to play splendid football, there being no suggestion of staleness. Crystal Palace and Northampton are no longer in the running for premier honours, and chief danger to Brighton and Hove and Queen's Park Rangers will probably come from Swindon. Now that their interest in the struggle for the Association Cup has come to an end, Swindon can concentrate all their efforts on the League.

ASSOCIATION CUP.

Swindon vs. Newcastle.—Tremendous interest was manifested in the semi-final tie for the English Cup between Swindon, the last survivors of the Southern League in the competition, and Newcastle United, at Tottenham yesterday, and the attendance numbered 33,000, the gate receipts being £2,200. The weather was delightfully fine, and only a light breeze was blowing, favouring neither side unduly. As a game it was very poor. Newcastle never rose to the height of excellence they displayed a week ago in their League match with Tottenham on the same ground, and the Swindon players seemed obsessed with the importance of the occasion. Walker at left back played a great game for Swindon, Skiller in goal was excellent, and the halves, Silto, Bannister, and Tout played unflaggingly. Fleming, the star of the team was, however, too well looked after by McWilliam ever to have a chance, and he has rarely given a more ineffective display. The other forwards tried hard, but were outclassed by the Newcastle defence. The Newcastle forwards never got going until they scored half way through the first half, but Rutherford was the best of them all through. McWilliam played a great game, and Lawrence in goal made some fine saves at a time when a goal to Swindon would probably have given them the match. McCracken and Whitson, the backs, tackled resolutely, but kicked badly. As the teams came out, Newcastle were decided favourites with the crowd, the cheer which greeted them being much deeper than that which herald the approach of the Southern League side into the playing field. Swindon won the toss and chose to defend the Park Lane end. Play started with Newcastle attacking on the left wing, but from a centre from Wilson, Higgins headed behind. Bannister headed away, cleverly from a movement in the centre by Newcastle. Then Swindon got going and Whitson had to kick out to clear from a dangerous dash by Fleming. Rutherford was hurt in trying to head the ball at the same moment as Walker, but the stoppage was only of brief duration. Two or three free kicks were given against Swindon, but the reason was not very apparent, seeing that they were for light shoulder charges. Play was very even, with Newcastle the cleverer side and Swindon certainly the more vigorous. Still, neither team started in good style. McWilliam tested Skiller from a free kick, and with Stewart in attendance the Swindon goalkeeper had some difficulty in clearing. Just afterwards the Swindon goal had a series of narrow escapes in a scrimmage. Skiller was out of his goal, and first Bannister and then Kay kicked away almost from under the bar, when it looked long odds on Newcastle scoring. After some pretty passing Stewart shot hard just wide of the post. Swindon then had a spell of attacking, but Fleming was given off-side when nicely placed. A great shot by Higgins went just over the Swindon cross-bar. Play opened out a good deal, but there were far too many free kicks for shoulder charges. A brilliant bit of work by Fleming looked dangerous for Newcastle, but he could not get an opening. Just afterwards Silto got in a tremendous drive which looked like scoring for Swindon, but Lawrence flung himself at full length and just turned the ball round the post. Play was now very exciting, and Howie, with a nice opening, shot wildly, ballooning the ball high over the goal. Swindon were now having the better of it, and McWilliam only stopped Lavery by a high kick, which landed full on the chest of the Swindon outside-left and evidently occasioned him considerable pain. Lawrence was kept on the qui vive the ball rarely being out of the Newcastle half. In a brief attack by the Newcastle forwards following a free kick, Rutherford forced a corner, from which Howie headed behind. Fleming got away but ran the ball behind, and Bown just afterwards forced a corner, McCracken only just getting up in time to kick behind. Skiller made a fine save from Higgins, who shot in from a centre by Howie. Swindon forced two more corners in quick succession, but they came to nothing. Lawrence saved a good oblique shot from Jefferson, and then the ball was at the other end in a flash. Skiller diving into a scrimmage and clearing from a shot to Veitch, which had been turned awkwardly for him by Walker or Bannister. He was hurt in the scrimmage, but soon recovered. Another hot onslaught on the Swindon goal saw the backs kick out three times in quick succession from difficult shots. Walker showed fine form during this trying period, twice clearing brilliantly. He also got in the way of a shot from Rutherford, and then play swung away to the other end. After some aimless midfield play Skiller saved a hot shot from McWilliam, and Lawrence stopped a similar one from Tout at the other end. It was great contrast from the display given by Newcastle on the ground the week before. They were no better than Swindon in the first half, both sides playing the kick and rush game, and, moreover, not being good at it. Half-time:—

Newcastle United	...	0

Swindon had to face the light breeze in the second half, but were the first to get going, Lawrence having to run out and clear from Bown. Play was, however, very scrambling, neither side showing any good combination. Rutherford got away nicely once on the Newcastle right wing, but his centre went over the line. Skiller had to save a tame shot from Stewart, and Bannister charged down a good, fast shot from Higgins. Lavery was hurt in a collision with Veitch, and the game was stopped for a few minutes. Swindon attacked again, and a centre by Jefferson went just over the bar. For a time the Swindon backs and halves were kept busy, but there was a lot of wild kicking on both sides. It was amusing to watch the manner with which the Newcastle defence concentrated themselves on Fleming, with the result that he scarcely ever got a chance. Wheatcroft shot just wide of the post from a centre by Jefferson, but the whistle had previously gone for the ball having crossed the line. Walker brought Rutherford down heavily just outside the penalty line, but the free-kick came to nothing. It was now poor scrappy football. After twenty minutes Newcastle got a soft goal Rutherford scoring after Fleming and Bannister had both tried to head away a well-placed free kick by Veitch. In less than a minute some good passing by Rutherford and Howie gave Stewart an open goal, and he made the match practically a certainty for Newcastle by beating Skiller at close range. It was all over with Swindon now, as Newcastle having the issue practically in safe keeping were playing a much cooler game, although it was not a high-class exhibition by any manner of means. A couple of corners fell to Newcastle, but brought no further goals and with both teams playing a tired game towards the finish, one of the least interesting semi-finals of recent years ended in a victory for Newcastle.

RUGBY RULES

ARMY CUP FINAL.

Gloucestershire Regiment vs. Leicestershires.—There was a good company with a strong military element at Twickenham to witness the final tie for the Army Rugby Cup, the contestants being the Gloucestershire and Leicestershire Regiments. The Prince of Wales was present and at the close presented the cup and medals to the winning team. The game was a very hard fought and keenly contested one, and there was some of the best tackling of the season on both sides, but neither side displayed much skill. There was no combination worth mentioning, and there was only one bout of passing during the afternoon. Two forty minutes were played and at the end of that time nothing had been scored. It was decided to play fifteen minutes each way as extra time, but the first quarter of an hour produced nothing. Early in the second fifteen minutes the Gloucestershires, by some good kicking, reached their opponents' 25, the ball was dribbled over and James scored a try, which was not improved. Nothing further was scored. Gloucestershire Regiment, 1 try; Leicestershire Regiment, 0.

BOXING.

Boxing at Eton.—There was a large and enthusiastic attendance in the new and well-appointed gymnasium in Common-lane, Eton College, to witness the annual boxing and fencing competitions in connection with the Eton College Officers' Training Corps. There was a full programme of events, but unfortunately the heavy-weights (above 12st. 7lb.) did not fill. None of the displays were perhaps, as good as those given by the Hon'ble G. W. Grenfell, Mr. A. S. Garton, and Mr. D. Winterbottom in previous years, but still, in Mr. A. L. E. Smith, P. H. Broughton-Adderley, the Hon'ble H. W. Gough, Mr. W. D'A. Hall, Mr. D. F. G. Duff, and Mr. R. T. Leighton, the school has excellent boxers. The following were the results of the finals of the various competitions:—

Light Heavy-weight (12st. 7lb. and under).—A. L. E. Smith defeated P. H. Broughton-Adderley.

Middle-weight (11st. 6lb. and under).—P. M. L. Edmunds defeated G. P. Simpson.

Welter-weight (10st. 7lb. and under.)—Hon'ble H. W. Gough defeated D. M. B. Hall.

Light-weight (9st. 9lb. and under.)—W. D'A. Hall defeated D. W. Bennett.

Bantam-weight (8st. 6lb. and under).—D. F. G. Duff defeated E. C. E. Smith.

Feather-weights (8st and under).—D. F. G. Duff defeated E. C. E. Smith. The same two boys who contested the bantam-weights were also in the final of the feather-weights.

Fly-weight (8st. and under).—R. T. Leighton defeated T. A. Edwards.

School Fencing.C. M. Cottrell-Dormer defeated R. Stiring Stuart, after a good exhibition.

A clever sabre display was given by C. L. Boyd and C. M. Cottrell-Dormer, the latter winning after a close contest.

CROSS-COUNTRY!

The International Race.—The international cross-country, race, which was set for decision at Belfast, on Saturday was the eighth one of its kind. All the preceding races had been won by England, though the positions of the other competing countries had changed from time to time. The weather yesterday was ideal, but there was only a moderate

WINCHESTER

.22 CALIBER RIM FIRE CARTRIDGES

Winchester .22 Caliber Rim Fire Cartridges, loaded with either Black or Smokeless Powder are unequalled for accuracy and uniformity in shooting. The explanation of their superiority is a simple one: it is the care taken in the making. All Winchester bullets are swaged by machinery which makes them uniform in size, weight and density. In loading, the bullet is seated so that its axis coincides with that of the barrel of the rifle. That means accuracy. The Winchester Greaseless Bullet, which is a feature of Winchester .22 Caliber Smokeless Powder Cartridges, makes them clean to handle and prevents the powder from losing its strength. Try them next time. Ask for Winchester Make—the Red W Brand.

attendance, owing partly to the distance of Belvior Park, the venue, from the town, and the counter attraction of the Irish Football Cup final. The course was one of nine miles and consisted of six laps of natural country. The going was good, but consisted chiefly of grass land, there being no plough or road. England were unfortunately without the services of their national champion, F. C. Neaves, and ran only eight men, as also did France, who were without Fallon. Wales were without Griffiths and Lloyd whilst Wallach of Bolton, took the place of Watt in the Scottish team.

The runners were dispatched an hour after the appointed time. Duffy and Bowman, of Scotland, set the pace, followed by Massy and Aldous, of England. At the end of the first lap, Sergeant O'Neil Ireland, led by 20 yards from Wood and Wallach, who were abreast, while Badwin and Downing were next. After two circuits had been made. Wallach led O'Neil by two yards, with Wood ten yards farther away. Then followed Baldwin, Scott, Harris, Downing, and Massy. At the half-distance O'Neil was in front, his time being 26mins. 21secs. Wood was second only five yards to the rear. Then came Baldwin, forty yards behind, and he was followed by Wallach, Scott, Harris, and Downing. Soon after Wallach met with a mishap and retired.

Wood, running strongly, drew away from O'Neil in the last lap, and won by fully 100 yards. O'Neil beat Baldwin for second place by 150 yards. Result: A. E. Wood, England, 54mins. 2secs., 1; Sergeant T. O'Neil Ireland, 54mins. 24secs., 2; H. Baldwin, England, 54mins. 56secs., 3; C. Harris, Ireland, 56mins. 9secs., 4; A. Aldous, England, 5; W. Scott, England, 6; J. Murphy, Ireland, 7; A. McPhee, Scotland, 8; C. Ruffell, England, 9; A. Wilson, Wales, 10; E. Massey, England 11; F. Buckley, Ireland, 12.

Team placings:—
England: 1, 3, 5, 6, 9, 11. Total, 35 points.
Ireland: 2, 4, 7, 12, 14, 17. Total, 56 points.
Scotland: 8, 15, 16, 19, 20, 24. Total, 102 points.
Wales: 10, 18, 21, 29, 30, 31. Total, 139 points.

France failed to finish the necessary six. Bosin retired after hurting his ankle.

WALKING.

London to Oxford Walk.—Under the auspices of the Middlesex Walking Club a walking race took pace on Saturday over the 54 miles 1,300 yards of road from the Marble Arch (London) to the Martyrs' Memorial (Oxford), over which route T. E. Hammond on 29th March 1907, established a best on record of 8 hours 51mins. 14.3/5secs. This record was generally regarded as being in great danger yesterday, when for the race now under notice the following well-known walkers competed:—H. V. L. Ross, holder of the London to Brighton walking record of 8 hours 11mins. 14secs.; F. E. Roberts, H. Brown, O. F. Makeham, B. H. Warden, R. L. Parker, and the promoting club's honorary secretary, J. R. Barnes Moss. The winner's ties however, was well outside record, Robrts finishing first in 9 hours 32mins. 20.1/5secs.

After fifteen miles had been covered the order was: Roberts, 2 hours, 23mins. 5secs.; Ross, 2 hours, 24mins. 41secs.; Barnes Moss, 2 hours 31mins. 41secs.; Makeham, 2 hour 33mins. 37secs. At High Wycombe, about twenty-nine miles, Ross was leading in 4 hours 35mins. 6-1/5secs., with Roberts second in 4 hours 39mins. 14.2/5secs. Going up Dashwood Hill Roberts was in front of Ross (who was suffering from sore feet) by a mile and a half. The latter soon afterwards retired. Roberts, walking splendidly, completed the distance in 9 hours 32mins. 20-1/5secs.; O. F. Makeham was second in 10 hours 21mins. 30secs., R. L. Parker third in 10 hours 34mins. 45-4/5secs.; and H. Brown fourth.

Rowing.

ROWING IN MADRAS.

Merchants' and Bankers' Fours.

The eleventh annual race under the above title was held on the Adyar on the 11th instant. There were only two crews this year, the holders, Messrs. Binny and Company, defeating Gordon Woodroffe's after a great race. A double sculling race for men and three mixed events filled out the programme. Mrs. Boyson gave away the prizes at the close of the proceedings. The programme opened with a tub race with lady coxswains, which was won by Messrs. Coles and Killick steered by Mrs. Boyson. Then came the big race.

Binny and Co., Ld.	st.	lb.		Gordon, Woodroffe and Co.	st.	lb.

R. Lee	10	4	(cox)	G. K. Gillon	10	4	(cox)

beat

They got off together and raced abreast to the Adyar Club landing stage where Binny's just got their nose in front and gaining slowly eventually won a splendid race by a third of a length.

The ferry race which came next was won easily by Mrs. Formby with Messrs. Cunliffe and Paul.

Heats in the men's coxswainless double sculls had been rowed previously, Steele and Campbell defeating Smith and Ogden, and Hignett and Scott Mackenzie disposing of Purves and Deane. The final was not a particularly exciting race. Steele and Campbell after their hard race in the fours were unable to extend Hignett and Scott Mackenzie, who won comfortably. A mixed double sculling tub race wound up the programme and was won by Miss Boyson and Mr. F. H. Coles steered by Mrs. Armstrong.

GOLF AT TOLLYGUNGE.

Club Silver Challenge Bowl.—This annual competition by handicap medal play was held on the Tollygunge links on Saturday and Sunday. There were 60 entries but only 23 returned cards and none of these were particularly brilliant, the high wind having a lot to do with the poor scoring. Messrs. Medicals vs. 88th Carnatics.—This, one of the opening matches of the tournament, was played on the Rangers' ground on Monday last and resulted in a win for the Medicos. They had decidedly the best of the game all through and kept the military team busy defending. Havildar Jan Mahomed gave a fine display, while Moral, the Carnatics' custodian, was also in fine form and but for their efforts the score against them had been larger. Doyle, Beveridge, McNelly and Nyes scored for the Medicals while the Carnatics' only point was registered by Lieutenant Spitta. Teams:—

Medicals.—Mann, goal; Perkins and Hartley, backs; Hixon, Doyle, and Rego, halves; Nyes, McNelly, Beveridge, Hinder, and Hippolette, forwards.

88th Carnatics.—R. Moral, goal; Lieutenant St. John and Maryan, backs; Arockim, Havildar Jan Mahomed and S. A. Hafiz, halves; Abdul Soban, Lieutenant Barker, Lieutenant Spitta, Syed Russul and J. Moral, forwards.

LA MARTINIERE vs. Y. M. C. A. (AM.).—This match was played on the Calcutta ground on Monday, an interesting game ending in favour of La Martiniere. The Amateurs drew first blood, Jellico scoring the only point of the first half but on changing ends the London Street boys drew level, Clarke putting through. The same player put his side ahead shortly after but the Amateurs working hard got on terms again, Dr. Gray equalising. The score was two all at the close of play but extra time was played during which Potter scored the winning goal for La Martiniere. Teams:—

LA MARTINIERE.—Roseboom, goal; Jacob and Hodges, backs; Brown, Pritchard and Gregory, halves; Duff, Clarke, Bell, Mr. Potter and Bowen, forwards.

Y. M. C. A. (AM).—Wood, goal; Gasper and Smiler, backs; Duncan, Jellico and Edwards, halves; Seth, Comber, Scot, Dr. Gray, and Gasper, forwards.

Referees:—Messrs. Richardson and Thurgood.

CALCUTTA vs. Y. M. C. A.—The Dalhousie ground was the venue of this game on Monday when a very poor exhibition of hockey was witnessed. During the first half Calcutta did most of the attacking but, playing much below their usual form, they could not press their advantage home. Several opportunities were lost and only one goal scored, Manders beating Twindale midway through the moiety. On changing ends the Y. M. C. A. rallied wonderfully well and Calcutta were called upon to defend almost throughout this half of the game. Cole and Penton played soundly, however, and the Associationonly got through once, Vanspall beating Graham. Just before the close Manders lost a chance of giving Calcutta the victory by shooting wide. The game thus ended in a draw—one all. Teams:—

CALCUTTA.—Graham, goal; Cole and Penton, backs; G. Badham, Studd and Yeoman, halves; E. Badham, Greig, Manders, Bake and Turnbull, forwards.

Y. M. C. A.—Twindale, goal; Reynolds and Haysham, backs; E. Vanspall, H. Vanspall and Collingwood, halves; Luff, McKay, Prince, Pooler and Cranenburgh, forwards.

Referees:—Mr. Bhattacharji and Sergt. White.

27TH PUNJABIS vs. KING'S SHROPSHIRE L. I.—Played on the Customs ground on Tuesday, a fast and interesting game ending in favour of the Punjabis by the odd goal in 3. Magniac scored for the 27th in the first half and Statham equalised on changing ends, time being called with the score one all. An extra period was played and during this Dallas-Smith put through the winning point for the Punjabis. Teams:—

27TH PUNJABIS.—Fazil Din, goal; Jug Sing and Lieutenant Todd, backs; Sher Khan, Capt. Wernicke and Bindru, halves; Bhagot Sing, Lieutenant Dallas-Smith, Lieutenant Magniac Jowa Sing, and Sultan Khan, forwards.

K. S. L. I.—Greening goal; Roberts and Corpl. Garrido backs; Pritchard, Hayward and Haley, halves; Lieutenant Dobbs, Lieutenant Fost, Sergt. Statham, Corpl. Saunder and Capt. Maxfield, forwards.

Referees:—Messrs. Richardson and Adams.

BALLYGUNGE vs. MOHAN BAGAN.—These teams met on the Rangers' ground on Tuesday, a scrambling game ending in draw of one all. Dawson scored for Ballygunge and Sarkar for Mohan Bagan. Teams:—

BALLYGUNGE.—Slane, goal; Clarke and Peddie, backs; Dunsterville, Trenchard and Gahan, halves; Colthart, Dawson, Gordon, Speyer and Price, forwards.

MOHAN BAGAN.—Dass, goal; B. Bhaduri and Banerji, backs; Sarkar, Guin and B. Mitter, halves; S. Bose, B. Bhaduri, A. Dass, H. Mitter and R. Mitter, forwards.

Referees:—Messrs. Bhattacharji and Skempton.

CUSTOMS vs. E. I. RY.—This game attracted a large attendance to the Dalhousie ground on Tuesday. It was not a particularly brilliant display: the Customs seemed to be considerably handicapped by the absence of the Smith brothers and they will have to show better form if they mean to keep the Beighton trophy. The first half was devoid of score and there was little to choose between the teams, both sides attacking in turn. On changing ends, however, the Riversiders showed a marked improvement. McCready opened the scoring: play ruled very level for a spell and then Fischer beat Tubbs and the Railway failing to score were beaten by 2 goals to nil. Teams:—

CUSTOMS.—Seth, goal; Anderson and Quiterio, backs; Lynch, Barlow and Durham, halves; D'Silva, Boileau, McCready, Fischer and Galbraith, forwards.

E. I. R.—Tubbs, goal; Smith and Parker, backs; Crostley Christain and Smith, halves; Hooper, Goff, Smith, Sowdon and Reiding, forwards.

Referees:—Mr. Studd and Sergt. White.

Medical "B"	Had to withdraw on account of the B. H. A.

Though certain clubs had to withdraw from the above competition on representation from the Bengal Hockey Association, the League ended on the 9th of April 1910 with every possible success. The City A. C. stand first in the League, and they deserve their position. They have a strong set of backs and half-backs and with one or two changes among the forwards and another goalkeeper, they would make a team difficult for any junior team to beat them. The Armenians who closely followed the City A. C. had very hard luck in being beaten by the narrow margin of one goal by the City A. C. The Telegraph who stand third in the League are gradually improving and it is hoped to see them making a good stand in the Bengal Challenge Shield which is now going on. The management of the Council was all that could be desired. Every possible attempt was made by them to appoint referees in all matches and in this they were very greatly successful or two which were abandoned on account of the rain. The teams entered also took a very keen interest in the management of the competition which was evident from the fact that no complaints were lodged by any of the clubs. In this connection it is questioned whether it was sportsmanlike of the B. H. A. to request a club (not affiliated to their Association) to stop playing in this competition. The B. H. A. presumably is meant for the encouragement of Hockey in Calcutta and as so, surely it is not for the making of sport that they should stop affiliated clubs from playing in any competition. There was no such rule during the happy days of the I. F. A. and I don't think that there was any discouragement of Hockey then. So it is to be hoped that the B. H. A. will remain satisfied with their own cups and henceforth not interfere with any other competition but leave them to themselves.

THE AGA KHAN TOURNAMENT, BOMBAY.

LUSITANIA SPORTING CLUB vs. BOMBAY GYMKHANA.—This was one of the matches which opened the tournament on the 9th instant and to the general surprise the Gymkhana were knocked out. The Gymkhana forwards were all at sea and lost many opportunities of scoring. The Lusitania Club got away at the start and scored a goal straight away. The Gymkhana then attacked but could not score and their opponents breaking away again hit a second goal. A third was within their reach but they lost the chance through being over eager. Play was more level in the second half, neither team scored and the Gymkhana retired beaten as stated. Teams:—

LUSITANIA CLUB.—Abraham, goal; F. Athaide and B. Athaide, backs; S. M. Carlos, Stokes and Mendonca, halves; Barron, Nelson D'Souza, J. F. Paes, Cynaco, D'Souza and Dominic D'Souza, forwards.

BOMBAY GYMKHANA.—Bunch, goal; Baker and Cowie, backs; Christie, Sim and Stoddart, halves; L. B. Ward, Moir, Vidal, Sharpe and Ayscough, forwards.

ELPHINSTONE COLLEGE vs. MARINE WANDERERS.—This game calls for little comment. The Elphinstone College were always the superior team, and outclassed their opponents in weight, speed and combination. Playing a fast game they attacked all through and won by 7 goals to nil. Benjamin, Rickwood and Kapadia scored in the first half, Kapadia (3) and Chotia adding to the total after the interval. Teams:—

MARINE WANDERERS.—Jayranath, goal; Kapadia and C. Contractor, backs; H. Doctur, L. Paren and C. Mehta, halves; T. Parakh, R. Writer, J. Bapasola, N. Sethna and M. Mistri, forwards.

ELPHINSTONE COLLEGE.—Kanga, goal; Jamshed Antia and Gimi, backs; Benjamin, Sabawallah, and K. Naoroji, halves; Chotia, Jehangir, Antia, Kapadia, Rickwood and Billimoria, forwards.

14TH HUSSARS vs. HORNETS.—This was the only match played on the 11th instant, the All Blacks scratching and giving the Glosters a walk over. The game under notice was rather an uninteresting display: the soldiers had the best of the play throughout, erratic shooting depriving them of a more decisive victory. They scored 2 goals, Smith putting through in each half and the Hornets failed to score. Teams:—

14TH HUSSARS.—Izard, goal; Powell and Lewis, backs; Bartlett, Rasell and Piper, halves; Smallwood, Baker, Terrill, Smith and Hallard, forwards.

HORNET H. C.—Eagle, goal; Pires and Marcado, backs; Viegas, Eddington and Furbisher, halves; Garrick, Windsor, Cornfield, Gordon and Conway, forwards.

Y.M.C.A. vs. WING, GLOSTER REGIMENT.—These teams met on the 12th instant, the Y.M.C.A. winning by 3 goals to nil. They had the upper hand all through but their shooting was wretched or they would have won by a larger margin. The soldiers defended soundly in the first half and though the opponents made repeated attacks on their citadel all through the first half they were unable to score. On changing ends the Association missed several opportunities and it was not till midway through this period that Fido registered their first point. To this Ward added two further points from penalty corners and the Y.M.C.A. won as stated. Teams:—

Y.M.C.A.—Kiddle, goal; W. George and N. George, backs; Hildreth, Ward and Dowling, halves; Templeton, Kelly, Spelling, Fido and Buckley, forwards.

WING, GLOSTER REGIMENT.—Drade, goal; Hill and Law, backs; Orchard, Cooper and Hazb, halves; Rock, Powell, Mowie, Sprikb and Leeby, forwards.

INTERNATIONAL "A." vs. PARSEE PIONEERS "A."—Played on the 12th instant. The Internationals kept their opponents penned round their goal all through the first half and during which they scored three goals. After the interval the Parsees rushed down and notched a point. They continued to have as much of the game as the Internationals in this moisty, but they could not score and their opponents adding three more goals to their total ran out winners by 6 goals to 1. Teams:—

PARSEE PIONEERS "A."—H. Pherozo, goal; Havildar and Paeri, backs; Cooper, Chinoy, and Detia, halves; Kerrawalla, Chotia, Kala, Pocha and Billimoria, forwards.

INTERNATIONAL "A."—Mahomed, goal; Aziz and Siddick Usama, backs; Galoo, Ahmed and Cadir, halves; Khan, Razak, Yussuf, Ahmed and Cunsadin, forwards.

R.G.A. vs. INTERNATIONAL "B."—This match was played on the 13th instant and proved a run away affair for the Gunners who scored six goals in the first half and added four more on changing ends. The Internationals failed to score. Teams:—

R.G.A.—Mercer, goal; Jones and Taylor, backs; O'Neill, Wordsworth and Mulcahy, halves; Fleming, Jenkins, Brook, Bourke and Whiston, forwards.

INTERNATIONAL "B."—Abdul Wahed, goal; Mahomed and Hussain, backs; Haji, Oomar and Doctor, halves; Mahomed Khan, Dadu, Gaffar, Modi and Vakil, forwards.

GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE vs. BOMBAY EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY O. B.—This was an interesting and well contested match played on the 13th instant the Medicos winning by 2 goals to 1. The Grant College attacked vigorously at the start and Swinger missing a kick let Hansen in to score the first goal. The Old Boys then took up the attack, but all their onslaughts were checked and an abortive corner was all that accrued to them till shortly before time Gilder put the teams on terms. Crossing over with the score one all both sides played hard and exchanges were even. The Medicals forced several corners, from one of which Cook scored a goal. The Old Boys lost more than one chance of equalising, the remaining play was vigorously fought out to the finish but there was no further score, the Medicals winning by the odd goal in three. Teams:—

GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE.—Canteenwala, goal; Hildreth and Easden, backs; Newland, Osborne and Windsor, halves; Hayter, Steinhoff, Hansen, Cook and DeSouza, forwards.

B.E.S. OLD BOYS.—Swinger, goal; Dudley and O. Murray, backs; Zincke, Scott and Watson, halves; V. Murray, Gilder, Major Stevens and Holtham, forwards.

Second Round.

LUSITANIAN M. S. C. vs. GLOSTERS.—The Glosters who had walked over in the first round met the Lusitanians on Saturday last a splendid game ending in a win for the latter. They pressed at the start and Nelson opened the scoring. Fast play followed but in spite of all their efforts luck was against the Glosters and they could not get on terms before the interval. On changing ends the military team attacked vigorously and Browne at length equalised. Play was very level for the rest of the game and time arrived with the score one all. Extra time was played and after Cynaco had scored for the Lusitanians Scott-Tucker again put the Glosters on terms. Play was fast and exciting for the rest of the match and just before time Pacs sent the ball through from a melee in front of the Gloster goal and thus gave the Lusitanians the victory by 3 goals to 2. Teams:—

LUSITANIAN SPORTING CLUB.—Abraham, goal; R. R. Athaide and F. Athaide backs; R. S. M. Carlos, C. A. Stokes and L. F. Mendonca, halves; R. Barros, R. I. Nelson (captain), J. F. Pacs, S. Cynaco and Dominic Souza, forwards.

GLOSTER REGIMENT.—Sexton, goal; Sherwood and Goldsworthy backs; Browne, Lieut. Counter and Wilson, halves; Lieut. Scott-Tucker, Stait, Burrows, Smith and Cavanagh forwards.

14TH HUSSARS vs. ELPHINSTONE COLLEGE.—This match was also played last Saturday and ended in a win for the Hussars. The first half was very evenly contested, the soldiers being the quicker team. They opened their account shortly after the start then the College equalised but the Hussars went ahead again before the interval. The College team seemed to go to pieces after half time and the soldiers did most of the attacking, scoring three more goals and running out winners by 5 goals to 1. Teams:—

14TH HUSSARS.—Izard, goal; Powell and Lewis, backs; Barrlett, Rasell and Piper, halves; Baker, Smith, Hallard, Terrik and Smallwood, forwards.

ELPHINSTONE COLLEGE.—Kanga, goal; Jamshed Antia and Gim, backs; Benjamin, Sabawalla, K. Naoroji, halves; Chotia, Jehangir Antia, Kapadia, Rickwood and Billimoria, forwards.

Pte. Jeffries, H. L. I., beat Pte. Maney, H. L. I.

On a wet, cold, February day, George Farmer stood coughing before a chemist's window.

His eye rested on a placard which said:—

NO MORE COUGHS.
NO MORE COLDS.
1s. 1½D. PER BOTTLE.

George entered the shop. The chemist said he could guarantee the anti-cold remedy, and the young man bought a bottle. Two days later he returned again through mire and sleet.

"I've drunk that mixture," he gasped, "and it seems to have plugged up my throat. I can hardly breathe!"

The chemist started.

"You drank it?" he cried. "Why man, it's an india-rubber solution to put on the soles of your shoes!"

"You look like a fool!" thundered the disgusted man to his son just in from Oxford. "More and more like a conceited, hare-brained, helpless fool every year!"

Just then an acquaintance of the old gentleman entered the office and saw the youth.

"Hello, Charley! Back, eh?" he exclaimed genially. "You're getting to look more and more like your father every year!"

"Ya-as," said Charlie; "that what the governor's just been telling me."

"You have been with your firm a long time?" said a man to his old schoolfellow.

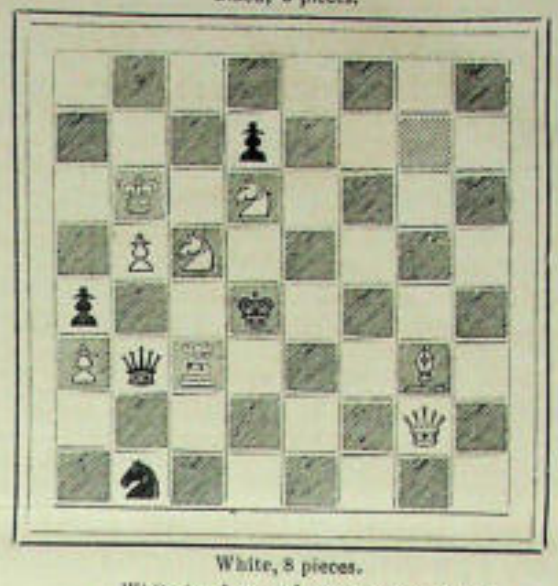
"Yes," answered his friend, with a patient expression of countenance.

"What's your position?"

"I'm an employee."

"Yes, but what do you do?"

"Well, I am a doer and the others are tellers. It's like this. When the guv'nor wants something done he tells the cashier, and the cashier tells the book-keeper, and the book-keeper tells the assistant book-keeper, and the assistant book-keeper tells the chief clerk, and the chief clerk tells me.



"And what then?"

"Well, I haven't anybody to tell, so I have to do it."

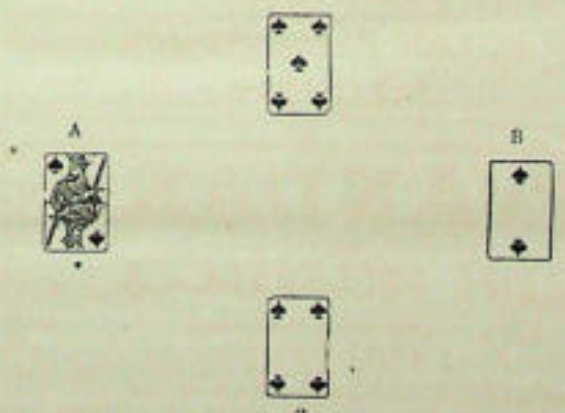
Solution to Problem No. 87.

Practically B's only chance of winning and saving the game is to force Y to lead from the guarded king of clubs, in the hope that A has the queen. With this object in view he should, at trick 7, lead the ace of spades, and if Y plays the 9 he can follow with the king, and then the 8. If, however, Y throws the queen or knave under the ace B should at once follow with the 3, so as not to part with the command of the suit, and on winning the third round with the king he can force Y with his long heart. The ace of spades is led at trick 7, in preference to the king, in order that Z may place the latter card with A, and not put up the 10 on the second round, which might enable him to make a successful finesse in clubs. The same object will be gained, probably, if both honors are held back, and the 8 is led.

Problem No. 88.



Score: A B, 0; Y Z 0. Z deals, and declares hearts. A's (the leader's) and Y's (dummy's) hands are as follow:—

Y's Hand (Dummy).—Hearts, 9, 5, 4, 3; diamonds, 8, 7, 6; clubs, ace, 10. 2; spades, 9, 7, 5.

A's Hand (Leader).—Hearts, king, 10. 2; diamonds, queen, jack, 8; clubs, king, 5, 4; spades, ace, king, queen, 6.

The first trick is as follows:—

Trick 1.

How ought A to go on with the hand, and why?

LEMCO and Milk is splendid for Children.

Lemco and Milk has made many backward delicate children strong. The rich Beef goodness of Lemco in Milk is wonderfully nourishing, the weakest digest it easily when unable to take milk alone. Use ¼ to ½ teaspoonful to ½ a pint of warm milk. No preservatives, no flavouring in Lemco, only pure highly concentrated beef.

THE VIENNA SPORTS EXHIBITION.

GREAT efforts are being made to render the British section of the forthcoming Sports Exhibition at Vienna a thorough success, although unfortunately the preparations were deferred so long that it will be quite impossible for the British exhibit to be ready by the time the show opens. The exhibition is indeed to be opened at the beginning of May, but it will be fortunate if the British contingent is ready for opening during June.

The King takes great personal interest in the exhibition, and it is largely due to his Majesty's initiation that the British section is to attain the importance to which it had an undoubted claim. One of the great features of this section will be the big game trophies, which are to be limited to species inhabiting British territory, or countries under British protection. According to a list drawn up for the Committee by Mr. Lydekker—the recognised authority on big game—the number of such species is between 160 and 170. Some writers would indeed make the list much longer, as many of the species include local races often reckoned as separate species by themselves. No other country in the world could, of course, show a list anything approaching this in length; and it is for this reason it is so much to be hoped that the British section will be properly represented, as indeed it is sure to be if only the time for preparation and collection is sufficient.

It is intended that each country in the empire shall have a space allotted to it for the display of its own big game trophies; so that there will be a British Islands, an African, an Indian, and a Canadian Section. Further, the African and Canadian sections will be split up into sub-sections, so that Somaliland, British East Africa, Rhodesia, the Cape, British Columbia, etc., will each be separately represented.

A special feature of the British big game exhibit will be the finenest of the specimens shown, efforts being made to obtain the loan of heads which approach record standard, even if they be not the actual records themselves. For this purpose all the leading big game sportsmen and owners of private collections of trophies of this nature have been approached and asked to lend a selection. On the whole, the replies received up to date have been very satisfactory, and there is no doubt that a representative series of heads and other trophies will be shown, although it is much to be feared that there will be a number of gaps in the list. On the other hand, a considerable number of owners, on the plea of possible damage to, or even loss of, their specimens, have declined to contribute; and it is notable that in this list are included most, if not all, of the owners of private museums. This hesitation is not to be wondered at, for it cannot be denied that the moving and packing of specimens, to say nothing of the perils of the voyage, cannot possibly improve them, and must in some cases, unless almost superhuman care be exercised, result in damage more or less serious.

Among those who have not hesitated to run these risks and to contribute their quota are His Majesty the King, H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Westminster, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Earl of Ilchester, the Dowager Countess of Dunmore, Sir Robert Harvey, General Sir Arthur Paget, Major C. S. Cumberland, Mr. Simpson-Hinchliffe, Mr. Charles Lucas, Mr. J. G. Millais, and many others.

It is a pity that time did not admit of residents in India, such as the Maharaja of Cooch Behar, being asked to contribute to their quota. In spite of this there is every probability that India will be well represented; among the exhibits being Colonel Fairholme's fine gaur head. The number of specimens of each species will be limited, in the case of every country, to two or three. That the specimens will be well displayed, is rendered evident by the photograph published recently in our English namesake of the picturesque and spacious building erected in the exhibition grounds for the British section.

The exhibit is, however, not to be confined to big game animals alone, for in the case of the British Islands, at any rate, it will include all the wild animals, birds and fishes connected with sport. Grouse, partridges, snipe, plover, and duck will thus find a place in the exhibition hall, as will also the hare, the fox, and the otter, while the right to be represented can scarcely be refused to peregrines and other falcons employed in hawking. Whether this part of the show will include other portions of the British Empire, we are unable to say, although the probability is that from limitations of time this would be impracticable.

Of course all connected with racing, coursing, and other field sports will form an important item in the British section, although we have at present no information as to the lines on which this portion of the show will be arranged. It has been announced, however, that the King will send the skeleton of his thoroughbred Persimmon, and efforts are being made to induce the authorities of the Museum of the Royal Veterinary College to send that of Eclipse.

As to cricket, football, racing, Yachting, athletics, etc., we are still more in the dark; but since we have good reason to believe that Mr. Theodore A. Cook, the accomplished Editor of The Field, has a hand in this section, it may be taken for granted that all that can be done will be done.

Our best wishes for the success of the show.

SPERMACETI.

A very curious side-issue has been raised in connection with the wax bust purchased some months ago by the Berlin Museum as an example of the work of Leonardo da Vinci. In the hope of settling the question as to the authenticity or otherwise of the bust, the wax of which it is composed was submitted to analysis, with the result that it was found to consist of a mixture of beeswax and spermaceti. In announcing this fact the chemist by whom the analysis was made stated that the bust was disproved to be the work of Leonardo, as spermaceti was unknown before 1700. In this he was technically wrong, but practically right; for although it appears that what we now call spermaceti was known in the time of Shakespeare, who refers it to it as "permaceti," and is alluded to in the pharmacopœas of the period as a waxy emollient, it was so rare and precious that it most certainly would not have been used for making wax busts. Accordingly, the Berlin bust, in place of being the work of Leonardo da Vinci, may be attributed to the eighteenth century artist Lucas, who is known to have employed a mixture of spermaceti and beeswax for modelling purposes. The real question raised by the controversy is, however, what was the substance known to Olaus Magnus, Conrad Gesner, and other writers of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries as spermaceti, i.e., whale's sperm.

Both spermaceti (as we know it) and ambergris have long been known to be the products of whales, although there was formerly an idea that at least one of them was obtained from the Greenland whale instead of both of them being yielded solely by the spermwhale or cachalot. The spermaceti of the aforesaid writers—by whom it is alluded to as ambar—seems, however, to have been ambergris, as it is described as being of a greyish colour and found floating on the surface of the sea; in both of which respects it agrees with what we call ambergris rather than spermaceti. And it may be added that from its physical structure, ambergris rather than spermaceti, is much more likely to have been regarded as cetacean sperm.

Such amounts of real spermaceti as were obtained previous to 1700 were not improbably the products of spermwhales stranded on the coasts of the Mediterranean, as the Italians have from early times called this whale capidoleo, i.e., oil head, and were thus evidently familiar with the fact that the cavity of the skull contains the oily liquid which solidifies after death into what we call spermaceti. On the other hand, spermwhales are but rarely stranded on the British Coasts; and the testimony of the old Norfolk naturalist Sir Thomas Browne tells us that such carcases were expected to contain ambergris in the stomach, but makes no mention of spermaceti.

It seems, therefore, that for a long period there was great confusion between spermaceti and ambergris; one being often called white amber as the other was invariably termed the equivalent of grey amber which was the original spermaceti still remains to be proved.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

By his victory in the Two Thousand Guineas Neil Gow has fully endorsed the good opinion that so many people have had of him and has also very faithfully reproduced his two-year-old form in the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster. In this race he met Lemberg at the same weights as those at which they ran yesterday, 9st. and beat him, Admiral Hawke also finishing in front of Mr. Fairie's colt. It was the only previous occasion upon which the pair had met and Neil Gow's success in this second encounter is certain to gain him many friends and cause a consequent lengthening of the price of the Derby favourite. Whisk Broom, Mr. H. P. Whitney's colt, who has performed so consistently, holds no engagement in either the Derby or Leger.

Victories in the Two Thousand Guineas have been followed by success in the Derby in twenty-one cases which is one more than the number of horses that have won the Derby and Leger and five more than the number of horses that have won the Two Thousand and the Leger. The winners of the double event (Two Thousand and Derby) are Smolensko (1813), Codland (1828), Bay Middleton (1836), Cotherstone (1843), West Australian (1853), Macaroni (1863), Gladiateur (1865), Lord Lyon (1866), Pretender (1869), Shotover (1882), Ormonde (1886), Ayrshire (1888), Common (1891), Isinglass (1893), Galtee More (1897), Flying Fox (1899), Diamond Jubilee (1900), Rock Sand (1903), St. Amant (1904), and Minoru (1909).

Horses that have followed up a victory in the Middle Park Plate by a win in the Two Thousand Guineas are not very numerous. The list is as follows: Prince Charlie (1872), Petrarch (1876), Isinglass (1893), Ladas (1894), St. Frusquin (1896), and Galtee More (1897).

The dates of the Calcutta Monsoon Meetings are now announced and it is to be noted that instead of denoting each day as a separate meeting, which was, of course, somewhat of a mistake in the past, the eight days' racing are divided into two meetings of four days each, with a break of a fortnight dividing the two. The dates are almost identical with those of last year the opening day being on the 30th July whereas last year it was on the 31st and the date of the last meeting is the 24th September last year it having been the 25th. The dates are as follows:—

First Meeting—
First Day	30th	July.
Second „	6th	August.
Third „	13th	„
Fourth „	20th	„
Second Meeting—
First Day	3rd	September.
Second „	10th	„
Third „	17th	„
Fourth „	24th	„

The programmes are identical in every particular with last year's and there is no change in values or conditions whatever. Entries for the first day close on Monday, 25th July; for the second day on Monday, 1st August; for the third day on Monday, 8th August; for the fourth day on Monday, 15th August.

The prospects for the Darjeeling Gymkhana Races fixed for the 3rd, 5th and 7th May are stated to be very good as there are plenty of ponies up at the hill station and the Lebong parade ground on which is situated the miniature racecourse is said to present a busy appearance most mornings. Piccaninny who is the bane of starters' existence in Calcutta is said to be going up for the meeting in Mr. Galstaun's interests and will no doubt give the local artist as much trouble as she does the C.T.C. officials.

The Tollygunge Club have also announced three dates and the opening meeting takes place as usual in the melting month of June, the actual dates of the four meetings being 11th and 25th June and 9th and 23rd July. These meetings at the pretty little Club course always pay very handsomely and are well supported both by owners and the public, but if rumour speaks truly the race-fund is not allowed to have all the money that the meetings earn and consequently the many possible improvements to the racecourse and its appendages and appurtenances are not carried out for want of funds. It should, for instance, be possible to provide a 1½ mile hurdle or flat course and by this means also lengthen the distance of the chase course, which at present is far too short, being little if anything over 1¼ mile! Mr. Geo. Jamieson, the Secretary, does excellently well under the circumstances, but he could do so much more if the sinews of war were available. There have always been two well defined camps in the Tollygunge Club, the Racing division and the golfists, and each naturally considers that his own particular branch should have preference. It is not an uncommon thing to see golfists hard at work on the links which cross the course, on a race day, and jockeys riding at the meeting have even, so we are assured, had to brave the whirring golf-ball as they pursue their adventurous way!! It would be nice to think of the two factions like little birds in their nest agreeing, but we fear it may not be this side of the millenium!

The first entries for the Octacamund Races which take place on the 3rd, 5th and 7th May include the names of some well known performers in Calcutta, amongst them the winner of the last Viceroy's Cup, Retort! This mare is entered along with Mercedes and Mystic Circle for the Ootacamund Cup, but we shall be surprised if "Mr. Holmes" starts her, as she is quite unsuited to the bad turns on that course and we can only suppose she has been put in to keep the weight down on her stable companions. "Mr. Holmes" has also got Lady Teazle and Plain Mister entered on the second and third days of the meeting, and Little Meg owned by Messrs. Swan and Hilliard and the pony, Bonita II., owned by Mr. B. N. Burjorjee are also down to run. There are several other horses and ponies entered for these races that used at one time and another to be more or less well known in these parts, amongst them old Ping Pong, Mr. Galstaun's old friend, Bell Dhu, the three cornered brown that used at one time to belong to Mr. O. M. D. Bell; Matsumata, a Tollygunge Club performer, and Clear Creek, a little English mare that was in Calcutta some little time ago.

The result of the City and Suburban in which Minoru was unplaced and Bachelor's Double, Mustapha and old Dean Swift finished 1, 2, 3, was a striking justification of the soundness of the deductions of the Committee of Handicappers. The Committee were soundly accused of having chucked Minoru in and of having totally failed in their duty in not handicapping him on his classic form, especially as he was an Epsom winner competing again over our Epsom course. It was argued and with no small show of justice that the handicappers were wrong in estimating that the three-year-olds of 1908 were better than the three-year-olds of 1909 and that the Committee had no business to put Minoru in at a pound less than White Eagle was handicapped with old Dean Swift last year. Last year White Eagle, it will be recalled, defeated Dean Swift somewhat easily getting 9lbs. from the old veteran. This year Minoru was in at 8lbs. with the Dean and there was also this to be taken into consideration that Mr. Joel's old horse had 3lbs. more on his back as the scale was that much higher. However, for reasons that we shall not learn until the mail papers arrive two weeks hence, Minoru proved very decisively that either the Committee were quite right in their estimate of him, or else that he has lost a good deal of his three-year-old brilliance. Dean Swift is the hero of this contest as he won it in 1906, he won it again in 1908; he ran a good second last year giving away a lot of weight to a smart four-year-old; and this year again conceding lumps of weight he finished a gallant third and he is now in his eleventh year!

Bachelor's Double is the Irish bred four-year-old owned by Mr. J. Lowry and trained by Mr. Ally Persse, of whom the Fatlanders thought well enough last year to send across and also back for the Leger. The colt ran nowhere, yet once again proving that a winner of an Irish Derby may not always be a swan. Now, however, that the colt has come out and won a big handicap against good form his future career may be worth watching. He is in the Coronation Cup at Epsom, the Gold Cup at Ascot and the Atlantic Stakes at Liverpool in July. He is by Tredennis out of Lady Bawn and his juvenile successes, with the exception of the Irish Derby in which he beat The Phœnician and Electric Boy, were not of much importance. He won the 5 furlong Grand Prize at Leopardstown the first time that he ever saw a racecourse, and subsequent to his win in the Irish Derby he secured His Majesty's Plate and the Lord Lieutenant's Plate at the Curragh.

Writing before the result of the Two Thousand was known our Turf correspondent says:—

The Derby and the Guineas betting telegraphed out since last we had an opportunity of referring to these events does not materially alter the aspect of affairs save that it gave every assurance to the supporters of Lemberg for both of the first two classics. The position of Mr. Fairie's colt in the betting on these two races is apparently in every way justified as all accounts of him state that he has wintered extremely well and that nothing could have done better. He is reported to have furnished into a very fine horse indeed, and those who have had a recent opportunity of seeing him assert that he has vastly improved in appearance and is giving Alex Taylor every satisfaction. As regards Neil Gow, prior to his winning the Craven Stakes, there were some disquieting rumours as to his soundness, but these rumours were never definitely confirmed, and the fact that the colt has stood a race in public over a course like the Rowley Mile, which might be calculated to find out an unsound one, is reassuring. Lord Rosebery's candidate is also being well supported for both Guineas and Derby, which looks as if everything were alright with him. Admiral Hawke is the one that the knowing ones have their eyes upon and he is expected to uphold to a great degree the reputation of his distinguished relative Pretty Polly. Neil Gow beat Lemberg as a two-year-old (Champagne Stakes, Doncaster) and in this race Admiral Hawke finished second also in front of Lemberg. At Ascot Admiral Hawke "downed" Neil Gow who finished third in the Coventry Stakes to Major Eustace Loder's colt and Yellow Slave. On top of this Admiral Hawke ran a good third in the Middle Park Plate to Lemberg and Whisk Broom. The latter, it will be remembered, finished second to Neil Gow in the Craven Stakes; Tressady also is being nibbled at for the Guineas and Derby third, so that the Admiration colt's form is not open to any charge of flukiness or inconsistency. He is the only three-year-old bar Yellow Slave who has defeated both Lemberg and Neil Gow, and if he goes for the Guineas and makes any show at all his price for the Derby will be certain to harden very considerably.

In connection with the new introductions to the Derby Betting it is said that there is no warrant whatever for the mention of Impregnable and that the quoted price is entirely a bookmaker's price, as not a silver sixpence has gone on from the stable or from anywhere else. He is regarded as a very improbable starter and they do not give him a 100 to 1 chance even if he does go. The only new addition to the list since we last published the performances of the horses mentioned in the Derby Betting is Lord Durham's bay colt Rochester, by Rocksand out of Caparison, who only ran once as a two-year-old, but on that occasion performed as under:—

Rochester b c by Rocksand—Caparison, 3yrs. (Lord Durham.)

Newmarket: Rous Memorial Stakes, £920, 5 furlongs, 8-10, second to Lemberg, 9-3. Yellow Slave, 8-11, third. Won by a neck; three lengths between second and third.

The following short table of leading performances of prominent Derby candidates may at the present juncture be useful as a guide to "form at a glance":—

Race.	1st.	2nd.	3rd.
Champagne Stakes	Neil Gow, 9-0	Admiral Hawke, 9-0	Lemberg, 9-0
Middle Park Plate	Lemberg, 9-3	Whisk Broom, 9-0	Admiral Hawke, 9-3
Coventry Stakes ..	Admiral Hawke, 9-0	Yellow Slave, 8-11	Neil Gow, 9-0
Rous Mem. Stakes	Lemberg, 9-3	Rochester, 8-10	Yellow Slave, 8-11
Craven Stakes	Neil Gow, 9-0	Whisk Broom, 8-10	Tressady, 9-3
Tatters II Sale Stks.	Tressady, 9-3	Greenback, 9-0	Abattis, 8-5
Gre t Surrey Foal Stakes .. .	Greenback, 9-0	San Antonio 8-9	Welberg, 8-8
Berkshire Foal Stakes ..	Greenback, 9-4	Yellow Slave, 8-13	Welberg, 7-12
Prince of Wales' Plate ..	Whisk Broom, 8-7	Galantine, 8-12	Woodcombe 8-7 (Witchwork 8-7 unplaced)

The above if worked out makes Admiral Hawke out to be as "likely" a one as any of them. The table will no doubt be capable of elaboration before the end of the season, and we will make the necessary additions as occasion demands.

Mr. J. A. de Rothschild's Bronzino, a chestnut colt by Marco—Flitters, who is mentioned in the Guineas betting, ran nine times as a two-year-old but did not once "strike ile," and the price at which he is quoted for this race—20 to 1—just about represents his chance of success. He ran into a place on three occasions—(Nottingham) Bedfont Plate, 6 furlongs, 8-5, third to Hackler's Glow, 8-5, and Bachelor's Knight, 8-10! (Doncaster) Bradgate Park Nursery Handicap, 6 furlongs, 7-4, third to Spanis, Prince, 7-12, and Sunbright, 8-2. (Newmarket) Ditch Mile Nursery, 7-10, third to Sunbright, 9-0, and the Thimble colt, 5-10.

Reuter's wire dated London 26th instant gave the betting on the Two Thousand as follows:—2 to 1 Lemberg, 100 to 30 Neil Gow, 5 to 1 Tressady, 6 to 1 Rochester and 100 to 6 Sanctuary. The last named is a brown colt by Isinglass by Stagsden and is owned by Captain Northey Hopkins. He is engaged in the Derby, but no mention of him in connection with that race has so far been made in any betting returns. He only ran once as a two-year-old and the occasion was the Guerdon T.Y.O. Maiden Plate at Manchester, 5 furlongs; carrying 8-12, unplaced to Catrail 9-3, Dunraven 8-12, and Victoria Bay 8-9. There was no particular merit in this performance, and he has therefore probably been backed on a more recent exhibition of which the report has not yet reached India. Catrail on two occasions ran up to Lemberg, namely in the New Stakes at Ascot and the Chesterfield Stakes at Newmarket.

In addition to Vavasor, the winner of the Sydney Cup, purchased for Mr. A. A. Apcar for £1,500, Mr. R. M'Kenna secured Beau Vive, who ran second to Storey in the Doncaster Handicap, and the new owner is Mr. T. M. Thaddeus of Calcutta, who owns The Bedouin. Mr. M'Kenna paid £500 for this horse, and as he has shown promising form as a three and four-year-old he may not prove to be by any means an expensive horse. The distance of the Doncaster Handicap is 1 mile, and on this occasion it was won in 1-38¼, which equals

DOG MEDICINES
MAY NOW BE OBTAINED IN INDIA
In CALCUTTA from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO.,
And in BOMBAY from TREACHER & CO., Ltd.

These preparations are based on the most recent and up-to-date veterinary research, and are the best possible remedies for the various ailments and diseases for which they are recommended.

It is of the greatest importance in treating all cases of sickness in dogs that the nature of the ailment should be recognised, and in order to enable dog owners to do this we have published a book,

"HINTS TO DOG OWNERS"
(ILLUSTRATED),

which is now the standard work of reference in thousands of kennels in the United Kingdom, where it has had a larger circulation than any book on dogs ever published, the demand for it being so great that more than 200,000 copies have been disposed of. It may be obtained gratis on application to either of the above-mentioned firms in India, and everyone interested in dogs should make a point of obtaining a copy at once.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR DOGS.

These Capsules are tasteless and odourless, and are the surest and safest means of expelling both Round and Tape Worms from dogs (or puppies three months old or over) weighing 10lb. or more. They require no purgative medicine afterwards. May be easily given wrapped up in a piece of meat or cheese.

SHERLEY'S WORM CAPSULES FOR PUPPIES AND TOY DOGS.

Every puppy at six weeks old should be dosed with these Capsules which may be safely given to even the smallest and most delicate toy puppy. They surely expel all Worms and never cause the least discomfort. Castor oil is not required before or after giving them, and it is not necessary for the puppy to fast before being dosed.

SHERLEY'S "SKIN CURE."

An absolutely unrivalled dressing for Mange, Eczema, Ringworm, and all other Skin Diseases of dogs. It cures Mange for certain in a week, and not only cures the disease but starts an immediate and vigorous growth of hair.

SHERLEY'S "DISTEMPERCURE."

The best remedy for Distemper ever discovered; it reduces the fever and creates an appetite. In each tin are full instructions as to nursing and dieting, on which the cure of Distemper depends so much.

SHERLEY'S "SHAMPOO."

A Liquid Soap for Washing Dogs. It penetrates the hair, which it cleanses much better than any solid soap and in less than half the time.

It removes dandriff, stimulates the growth of hair, and gives the coat a healthy, glossy appearance.

It also prevents Eczema, and destroys Fleas and all other insects.

the Australian record. The weights were Storey 7-2, Beau Vive 7-8, Apple Pie 7-0 (carried 7-1), but the winner came home by himself, nothing being able to pace it with him when he went away from his field at the distance post, so that this somewhat discounts the value of Beau Vive's performance. Mr. Thaddeus, who had no luck at all with The Bedouin, is also, so we hear, purchasing in England and intends to have three or four in training, including The Bedouin, next season. It is said that The Bedouin may run at the Monsoon Meetings and that Mr. Jack Scott will probably have the management of him if he does.

In addition to Vavasor and Beau Vive, the bay horse Barallan and the brown mare Hoax have been purchased for India.

Messrs. Campbell and Sons, of Kirk's Bazaar report having sold, on behalf of Mr. P. Heffernan, of Millbank, Junee, N.S.W., the racehorse Ungarie, brown gelding, 4 years by Trentmoor—dam Josephine, Mr. Thos. Scott, of India, being the purchaser. Ungarie, together with Mr. Scott's recent purchase, Malmsey, will be shipped to the East.

Wargrave, the Cesarewitch record breaker, died at the Knockmany Stud, Limerick, on the 3rd instant; he reared up, fell, broke a leg and was shot. He was foaled in 1893, and was bred by Sir James Duke, for whom he ran as a two and three-year-old. In his first season he took part unsuccessfully in four races, but subsequently carried off three nurseries in succession. Next season he was allowed to take his chance in the Derby, but failed to distinguish himself. Afterwards, however, he won a couple of minor events, and later ran unplaced for the Cesarewitch, Derby Cup, and Manchester Handicap.

Shortly afterwards Mr. Horatio Bottomley became Wargrave's owner, and in his colours the colt won at the first time of asking, an important event, the Babraham Plate. Subsequently, he finished fourth to Congratulation for the Great Metropolitan Stakes, and was second for both Jubilee Handicap and Victoria Cup, but took up the winning thread again in the Great Ebor Handicap, concluding the season with a second failure in the Cesarewitch. During 1903 Wargrave did not run, but next season, after a few failures, he set the seal to his fame by carrying off in record time the Cesarewitch. Starting favourite Wargrave's victory was highly popular, for his connections had throughout made no secret of their opinion that he would win.

Curiously enough, the hero of the great Newmarket event was pulled out for the Lowther Stakes, run over the last 1¾ miles of the Cesarewitch course, next day. His only opponent was His Majesty's Chateworth, who received 17lb., but the bearer of the Royal livery proved triumphant by the respectable margin of 20 lengths. The year 1905 was Wargrave's last on the Turf, but though he won two races they were of modest value. Once again, however, he contested the Cesarewitch, finishing third to Hammerkop and Merry Andrew.

The Tollygunge Club Gymkhana Meetings will be held on 11th and 25th June and 9th and 23rd July. Particulars will be published later. The following will probably be included in the first Programme:—

The Novice Stakes.—A Flat Race for Horses that never won a Flat Race, Hurdle Race or Steeplechase, value Rs. 45 or over nor started in a Flat Race, Hurdle Race or Steeplechase, value Rs. 550 or over. C. W. over 11st. Distance—4 furlongs.

The Visitor's Plate (Open).—A Flat Race for Maiden Horses. C. W. over 10st. Distance—4 furlongs.

The June Stakes.—A Flat Race for Maiden Ponies 14-2 and under. W. I. 14-2 to carry 12st. Allowance—Arabs 40lb., country breds 21lb. Distance—4 furlongs.

The Club Stakes.—A Flat Race for Horses that have never won a Flat Race, Hurdle Race or Steeplechase, value Rs. 500 or over. Penalties—Winner of a Flat Race, Hurdle Race or Steeplechase value Rs. 450 or over, once 5lb., twice 10lb., oftener 14lb. C. W. over 10st. 7lb. Distance—4 furlongs.

Our Darjeeling correspondent writes:—The Sky meeting coming off here on the 3rd, 5th and 7th May, just promises the usual amount of sport, for with the exception of Picaninny, who will do duty for Mr. Galstaun vice Primrose, there is no new blood. Gowan, Kestrel, Fairyland, Flair and Red Lad will fight their battles over again and should each win in their turn. In the Bhootea Class there are a couple of new ones, but they will have to be of exceptional merit to lower the colours of Dandy, Music, Jim, Makeshift, or Punch, who are all again in hard training. With the exception of Punch, the other Bhootea ponies are European trained. It is only once in a blue moon that an indigenous trained Bhootea pony wins a race. The season is very slow and late and the station is very empty for the time of year. We are hoping the race week will attract a good few, as many other attractions are put into the Gymkhana Club Programme of Amusements. The weather is exceptionally fine, and we can trust it will continue over next week.

The Shannon would probably be very near the top as a salmon river if its wonderful natural resources were husbanded instead of being worked to death by the nets. Every spring some heavy salmon are killed by anglers, and this season so far has been one of the best for a long time. One of the beats near Castle Connell yielded forty-one heavy salmon during March.

The most successful angler was Major J. R. Fraser, who commanded the Beaconsfield Town Guard during the siege of Kimberley. Major Fraser on twelve days between 9th and 31st March landed twenty-five salmon, weighing 604lb.—a record for March on the Shannon probably, at any rate for recent years. Major Fraser's two best days were 30th and 31st March, when he landed eight salmon, weighing 371b., 35lb., 35lb., 32lb., 29lb., 25lb., 24½lb. and 18lb., and lost three others. Twenty-one of the fish were got casting from the boat or bank and four by harling. Major Fraser is the only salmon angler who has this season killed four fish over 30lb. each.

Some of the famous Tay casts have done very well. The Duchess of Bedford killed ten salmon on one day (25th March), the largest 24lb. On 23rd March the Marquis of Tavistock landed thirteen salmon, the largest 32lb.; probably these were all taken harling. But one of the outstanding events in the angling world is the wonderful way the Welsh and English Wye is improving since the over-netting was stopped. In one beat alone three rods have averaged three fish each of about 20lb. for nine days' fishing; about a third are killed on fly, the rest on minnow or sand eel by fishing from the bank or wading. The Wye promises to be one of the finest salmon rivers in the United Kingdom in a few years' time.

Some extraordinary fly-casting was witnessed at the Tir aux Pigeons in the Bois de Boulogne, Paris, where a tournament was held under the auspices of the Casting Club of France last month. Mr. John James Hardy, British champion salmon and trout fly caster, gave an exhibition of fly-casting, for which he used what is probably the lightest fishing rod in the world. It is made of Palakona bamboo, 7 feet in length, and weighs only 2½oz. With this rod Mr. Hardy cast twenty-five yards, which is much further than the average cast of an expert fisherman using a rod three times this weight. The rod is Mr. Hardy's own invention.

The champion's nephew, Mr. Laurence Hardy, with a rod weighing just over 4oz., cast thirty and a half yards. He then gave an exhibition with a special rod fitted with a reel controlled by a brake. With this reel Mr. Laurence Hardy cast ½oz. of bait the remarkable distance of sixty yards.

Among other sportsmen who took part in the competitions were Messrs. R. D. Hughes, C. D. Muir, and J. T. Emery.

The following yarn is told of a worthy disciple of Izaak Walton who did not always catch the fish which he took home in his creel:—Angler: "How much are those trout a pound, Mr. Brown?" "One-and-four, sir." "Then I will take five pounds, and please throw them to me as I stand here." "Throw them, sir?" "Yes; throw them. I would not tell my wife a lie on any account; so throw them one by one, and I can honestly say I caught them." "But had you not better take whiting, sir?" "Why?" asked the honest angler, "what makes you think so?" "Oh, nothing, except that your wife called here early this afternoon and said that if you dropped in with your fishing tackle and a general woe-begone look about you, I had to give you whiting, if possible, as she liked them better than any other kind of fish."

The sculling match between Arnst, the world's champion, and Welch, the champion of New Zealand for the championship of the world and £300 a-side, took place on the 4th instant at Akaroa. Arnst won easily by six lengths. The weather was fine, and the water conditions were fair.

The result can only be in accordance with general anticipation, for it stood to reason that Arnst would not seriously jeopardise his prospects of meeting Ernest Barry for the championship of the world on the Zambesi River next August. There is a rumour of the big man meeting Harry Pearce prior to the big event, but as Pearce is not great, such a match would hardly do professional sculling much good. Welch was about three stone lighter than Arnst.

It is almost impossible to exaggerate the American interest in the Jeffries-Johnson glove contest at Emeryville, California, on 4th July. The promoters are preparing reserved seating accommodation for 50,000 persons. They now say that the gate receipts will reach at least a quarter of a million dollars, which seems quite likely, as no seat will cost less than five dollars, and those at the ring-side are priced at fifty dollars, and the applications are raining in from all parts of the world. The purse is £20,200, but this is a small sum compared with the value of the moving pictures rights, which, if the contest proves "spectacular" and the championship returns to the Caucasian race, will be worth a fabulous figure.

It has been decided that not a glass of intoxicating liquor shall be sold in the arena. This is because racial feeling will be quite bitter enough without any stimulant, and for a similar reason every man will be searched and relieved of his revolver.

When Tommy Burns was given £6,000—win, lose, or draw—to meet Jack Johnson, he (Tommy Burns) was Champion of the World, and a match between him and Jack Johnson looked the biggest thing possible in the boxing line. Some people considered the money an enormous amount, and marvelled at the drawing power of one party to a contest being rated so highly as to justify the payment to him of a small fortune, untrammelled by conditions of any kind, except that he should go into the ring and fight.

Tommy Burns is not Champion of the World now, yet he has a market value to-day higher by a great deal than when he stood on the topmost pinnacle of the game, for Tommy has recently received and accepted an offer of £5,000 to fight Sam Langford in 'Frisco on 5th September ("Labour Day") next, and £5,000 will be paid Burns whether he wins or loses, or the contest is declared a draw.

Burns and Langford are a fine match physically, and in other respects. Next month Tommy will be 29 years of age. In February last Langford saw his 30th birthday. Burns is 5ft. 7ins. and Langford 5ft. 7½ins. high. Burns will weigh, in thorough condition, about 12st. 7lb. and Langford about the same, or very little less, and each has a very long reach for his height.

What a fight this bringing together of the two greatest light-heavyweights in the world should result in!

Those interested in amateur boxing in Calcutta have ever deplored the lack of opportunity afforded them of indulging in the sport, and the want of some organisation which caters for lovers of the noble art has been keenly felt. Hitherto private individuals desiring tuition in the use of their fists have had to pay a soldier from the Fort to come and knock them about, or secure the services of some professional whose fees for tuition have generally been more than the average individual could afford. All attempts by professionals to run boxing and physical culture schools in Calcutta have always, in our experience, ended in failure. It is therefore cheering to learn that at last there is every possibility of the formation of a club for the promotion of amateur boxing in this city. A small band of enthusiasts met on Friday evening to discuss ways and means, and it was then decided to form a club for gentlemen amateurs without further delay. For such an organisation to be a success it is necessary that it should be run by capable people, and a strong and influential committee is being formed to undertake the management. Several well-known sportsmen and gentlemen of high social standing have expressed their readiness to serve on this committee, and with such a guarantee the public may rest assured that the club will be conducted with every regard for law and order and in the best interests of amateur sport.

The fees are to be extremely moderate, and to guard against the admission of undesirables election is to be by ballot, and the committee are to have every power to reject any proposed candidate, or expel him should he subsequently prove to be objectionable. There are to be active and honorary members, and the club is to have at its disposal the services of an instructor who will attend two evenings a week to impart instruction and will give each active member his personal attention. This organisation will start with the best wishes of all sportsmen and we feel sure that at last a long felt want is to be filled. It is more than probable that a club such as this one, conducted on the best lines, has a big future before it, and boxing will receive a big fillip in this country as undoubtedly it recently has at Home, in America and on the Continent, while the more sanguine of us may look forward to the founding of an Amateur Boxing Association at no distant date. Meanwhile prospective members are invited to send in their names to either Colonel Binning, V.D., 240, Lower Circular Road, Mr. J. H. Bullen 2, New China Bazar or Dr. J. H. Gray, Physical Director, Y.M.C.A., Chowringhee.

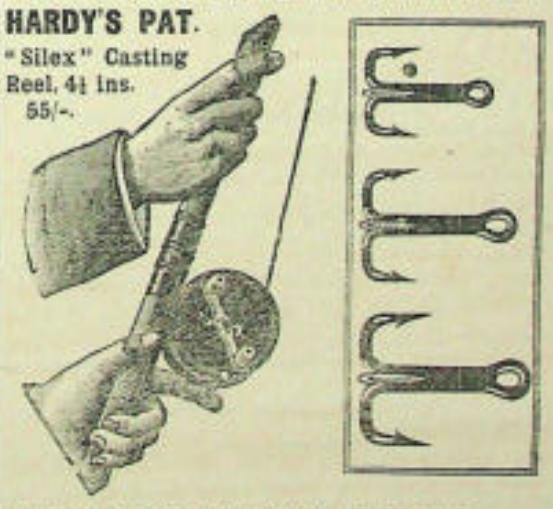
It was on the 8th May, 1902, that the city of St. Pierre, Martinique, was destroyed, and now it is described as the town of sleep. "It is men, not walls, that make a city," the Greek maxim ran; and more, it is living men. For the walls of St. Pierre are there still; and probably no fewer than 40,000 of its inhabitants are there also. But they have been asleep these eight years now. And it is extraordinarily impressive, this white, sightless skeleton of a dead city. A visitor describes how in orderly rows the houses stand as seen from the sea, the streets rising in tier upon well-graded tier back from the shore to the hills. But every street is silent, every house roofless, every window cavernous and blind. The sea is as smooth as a sheet of glass. Between the vessel and the shore one small boat contains two boys who have been fishing, the sun shining on their copper-coloured skins and on the brilliant red rock-fish with which the bottom of the boat is littered. Otherwise there is no life in all the wide roadstead, where seventeen vessels with numerous small boats were swallowed up that day. The chief business thoroughfare of St. Pierre runs wide and straight for two miles, the roadway flagged with blocks of stone, fair and smooth to where on each side the gutters are now green ribbons of herbage. There the high kerb rises, and beyond it the broad-paved sidewalk reaches to the straight, clean, orderly frontage of the stone-built shops. Straight and orderly the line of the shop-fronts still stands—the fronts only, with gaping doorways and empty windows. But beyond the bare incombustible stone and metal not a fragment or shred of wood or glass or fabric remains of all the bravery of what was once perhaps the gayest and most fashionable shopping street in the West Indies. It is said that in a few more years the streets will all be overgrown, the masonry buried in green, and the forest-growth will have pushed its way down to the shore. This is one of the islands where the dreaded snake the Fer de Lance is found. In just such a broken wilderness as this, where under the flowers and the butterflies the wreckage of the city offers strange dark hiding places, it will love to make its home. Then few people will care to push their way through the thick growth among the ruins. Ships will content themselves with passing off shore, and passengers will be shown from a distance the place where once St. Pierre stood. But a little more and a generation will arise to which the story of the disaster is but a tradition, and the very site of the wickedest spot in the West Indies will be forgotten, its memory overgrown with myth and legend, even as the ruins of the city itself are already half submerged in flowers and green leaves.

It is said that sportsmen are beginning to fear that one effect of airships will be to make game scarce. It is well known that when many kites are habitually flown they have the effect of driving the game to other districts. The effect of a kite, however, is very small in comparison with that of an aeroplane or a dirigible balloon. A German landowner, strolling over his estate the other day, saw two black storks which had been standing, with a number of ducks, on the bank of a pond, suddenly take to flight, without apparent reason. The next instant the ducks, quacking loudly, took wing and were soon out of sight. Looking around for the cause of the bird's affright the proprietor saw a dirigible balloon, which the birds had probably perceived before it became visible to him. He learned afterwards that deer, browsing in the fields, had been frightened by the sight of the airships or by the noise made by its propellers and had fled to the forest. All animals are terrified by airships. Partridges, quail, and other game birds crouch and hide, while domestic fowls utter loud warning notes the instant they perceive the monstrous bird of prey. The Swedish aeronaut Von Hoffken, while sailing at a moderate elevation, observed that elks, foxes, hares, and other wild animals fled at his approach, and that dogs ran, howling into the houses. While the Zeppelin III was going from Dusseldorf to Essen the aeronauts on board noted that horses and cattle galloped frantically over the fields on catching sight of the airship.

A proposal recently before the General Committee of the Royal Automobile Club was to the effect that efforts should be made to secure the enactment of a regulation obliging electric tram-cars to carry some form of mechanical signalling device to give notice to traffic behind them of their intention to stop or slow down; but the conclusion arrived at was that it was inexpedient to take any action in the matter. The reason for this decision was, it is suggested, the fear that action in the direction proposed would be followed by reprisals on the part of tramway authorities, who might agitate for similar treatment to be applied to motor-cars. If that is the case, the attitude is not a very heroic one for a body which is supposed to make considerate driving one of its special cares. It is not altogether clear why, if such mechanical signalling is to be required at all, it should not be required as well of motor-cars as of tram-cars. It is true that the driver of an open car can indicate what he is going to do by the recognized system of hand-signals; but many closed cars, in particular those in which the driver sits in the interior of the body, are just as helpless in this respect as the tram-car. In fact, it may be argued that for them the need for a mechanical signalling device is more urgent, for they have more degrees of freedom than the tram-car, and by virtue of their ability to turn to the right or left, whereas the tram-car must keep to its track, they have greater potentialities of incommoding traffic behind them.

British North Borneo is described as teeming with big game, but the nature of the country throws many difficulties and hardships in the path of the sportsman. Of the countless varieties of four-footed animals, elephants, rhinoceros, timbadu (wild cattle) sambar, barking-deer and mouse-deer, honey-bears and wild pig are all to be found. And there are two varieties of wild cats, the Hariman-akhar and the Hariman-dahun. These, however, are very seldom seen, being extremely shy; but they are often captured by the natives in traps. The two great cats—the lion and the tiger—do not exist in the country. On the other hand, there is an infinite variety of monkeys and several tribes of apes, including the huge and ferocious orang-outang. The jungle also gives shelter to innumerable birds, amongst which may be especially mentioned the argus and fire-backed pheasants and hornbills. The great monarchs of the wilds—the elephant and the rhinoceros—seldom, if ever, leave the shelter of the forest; but all the other four-footed animals wander forth in search of open spaces, where they may graze to their hearts' content in the cool of the evening and under cover of night. On the seacoast indeed great numbers of sambar and wild pig roam along the beach, delighting to nibble at the brine-soaked grass. Moreover, all the rivers in Borneo swarm with crocodiles. In riding the country of these terrible pests one may obtain plenty of exciting sport and at the same time enjoy the comforting reflection that every "kill" confers a very real benefit on the people of the district. The tracking of big game through the forest guided by a clever native is described as a most fascinating sport. The discolouration of over-trodden roots, the degrees of dampness of the mud splashed upon the tree-trunks, and the teeth-marks on the nibbled grass are to him as letters in a book, whilst long experience enables him to determine almost exactly the hour at which a herd of timbadu were feeding on the spot, the speed at which they were moving, and the probable time it will take to get up to them.



More public support is needed by the Lahore Zoo and to this end an appeal has been published by the Deputy Commissioner as President of the Zoo Committee. Owing to the rise in the price of food stuffs and in the cost of labour, public grants to the Zoological Gardens are quite insufficient to maintain them in their present condition to say nothing of carrying out necessary improvements. There are three alternative courses open to the Committee :—(1) To reduce the number of animals ; (2) to charge an entrance fee for admission to the gardens ; (3) to raise a considerable sum, about Rs. 4,500 a year, by public subscription.

We have now with us in Calcutta, Captain H. M. Smeaton, a British officer, who is walking round the world for wager. He left New York on the 8th April 1908 and has already traversed 18,000 of the 45,000 miles he has to cover. From New York he tramped across the American Continent to San Francisco, where he took steamer for the Hawaiian Islands. From there he passed on to Fiji and subsequently toured New Zealand, Tasmania, Australia, Java, Japan, the Straits Settlements, and Siam, before coming to Burma. He walked through Burma to the frontier of Tibet, intending to go through that mysterious land, but was turned back. He made another attempt viâ Darjeeling but was again refused permission to enter the forbidden land. Captain Smeaton arrived in Calcutta last week end and gave a lecture at the Tivoli Theatre detailing his wonderful and exciting experiences on his journey. It is to be deplored that he was much heckled and annoyed during his lecture by a number of hooligans in the audience who, acting up to the best (or worst) traditions of the Bentinck Street play house, interrupted and harassed the speaker till he was obliged to abruptly bring his lecture to a close. A nice impression of Calcutta to leave in the mind of one who has the opportunity of comparing the world's great cities!

Reuter wires that the New York correspondent of the Times has voiced the opinion of prominent polo players in America which favours the encouraging the advent of Indian teams like those of Count Madre and the Maharaja of Cooch Behar, which would be eligible to challenge for the championship. Americans regard the trophy as emblematic of the championship of the world and feel bound therefore to consider a challenge from any part of the world.

The final game in the Association Cup Football Tournament was played at the Crystal Palace on Saturday last in the presence of the usual immense crowd. The contesting teams were Newcastle United and Barnsley and the game resulted in a draw of one all.

The final of the Western India Doubles Lawn Tennis Championship was played on the Bombay Gymkhana courts last Friday and was won by Messrs. R. Kidd and J. R. R. Brooke, who beat the holders, Captains T. C. and G. Lucas, 2-6, 6-0, 6-4. Last year's champions won the first set comfortably, but thereafter went completely out of form and only secured one of the thirteen succeeding games.

The annual general meeting of the Madras Race Club was held on the 25th instant, with the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Miller in the chair. The report showed that the Club had now Rs 20,221 to its credit. Two meetings were held during the year, the December meeting resulting in a profit of nearly Rs 1,100 and the March meeting in a loss of Rs. 576.

London Week by Week.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Friday, 8th April 1910.

On Tuesday the descendants of the Poets met and dined, separating in all love and friendship. And now there seems no reason why the rest of us should not have our turn in this reflected limelight. A succession of banquets awaits us, and the Descendants of the Archbishops should hasten to secure a date that will not clash with the revel of the Descendants of the Highwaymen.

But what was this feast intended to commemorate? Poets, as we know, are oftimes hungry, but poetry is not really a matter of eggs and ham and strawberry jam; the muse cannot be exalted by dining and toasting. The covers were laid at the Holborn Restaurant, the menu was lengthy and varied, let us hope no descendant went empty away or had indigestion.

Among the 300 guests present were:—

Lord Coleridge (representing Coleridge).

The Duke of Norfolk (Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey).

Lady Mary von Hugel (Sir Philip Sidney).

Sir Robert Edgcumbe (Wycherley).

The Earl of Lytton (Bulwer Lytton and Owen Meredith).

The Hon'ble Mrs. Maxwell-Scott and Mr. Hubert Maxwell-Scot (Sir Walter Scott).

Mr. Cust (Milton).

Miss Evelyn Lang (Isaac Watts).

Baron Ernest Bertouch (Earl of Rochester).

Mr. Tennyson D'Eyncourt (Tennyson).

Shakespeare's name and family were represented by the Rev. J. W. Shakespeare, M.A., Mr. and Mrs. William Shakespeare, Mrs. R. Walton, Mr. Francis Henry Key, Mr. Alfred Richardson Key, and Mr. Frank Hart.

Wednesday's papers waxed merry over the affair and the Express, Wegg like, dropped into poetry after the manner of Longfellow as thus:—

True it was that though no poet
Sat and browsed upon the entree,
And no splendid fire poetic
Glistened in the diners' eyeballs,
Yet long hair was there in plenty,
Hair that had defied the barber,
Hair that said, "Although no poet
I can do it when I want to."
Hair and pose and garb poetic,
Affectation, even whiskers
Gathered round the well-spread tables
In the restaurant called Holborn.
And they chattered at the tables,
And they said. "He was my uncle's
Great grandfather's second cousin.
By a morganatic marriage."
They conversed in rhythmic fashion:
"Will you kindly pass the mustard?"
"Thank you I will take the souffle."
"Yes, the ice is quite delightful."
" . . No, I've never read his sonnets."

There seems to be some hope of a further revival in coaching-matters this summer. I hear that a most sporting feature is to be added to the Marathon race in June, which, with other similar events, is to make this year's Olympia a coaching carnival of unapproached dimensions. Entries have been received from both Belgium and France, so that we shall have in the competition a strong Continental element, as well as American.

Other foreign competitors are Judge Moore, whose hilarious course made last year's race notable, and whose horses are already in training and will arrive this month; Mr. Vanderbilt, whose cool driving won the cup last year; and Mr. Paul Sorg, whose team of four blue roans is now training hard between New York and Atlantic City.

"It is wonderful what last year's Marathon did to revive coaching. Therefore a greater Marathon has been added, under the title Corinthian, in which the Coaching Club is taking active interest. Some of the details have just been settled. The amateurs will drive out their teams in the afternoon, be entertained at a gala dinner by the directors, and then drive back in the evening into Olympia. Three routes are being considered, of which the turning points or dining points are, respectively, the Star and Garter at Richmond, Kingston Vale, and Raynes Park, Wimbledon.

Another coaching novelty is being actively organised by Lord Lonsdale. The idea is to have a competition of old-time state coaches. Lord Lonsdale himself possesses one of these rather gorgeous pieces of antiquity; and a number of others, which have not made a public appearance for years, are still in the possession of the old families. This emergence will have historical as well as spectacular interest."

The humour to be found in Indian Law Courts is proverbial, doubtless there is much of humour and pathos to in English Courts but outside of the reminiscences of certain legal luminaries it is not often offered to the public. Playwrights, for example, seem to give it a miss in baulk. Addressing the members of the London district of the Phonographic Society at St. Bride's Institute a few days ago on "The Law: Its Humour and Pathos," Mr. J. A. Slater said he wondered why people did not go more often to the Law Courts. There was no theatre which could give them so much entertainment. At the theatre they had art, and saw what was supposed to take place in real life, but in the courts they had humanity, and it was only when they saw the play of humanity that they got the finest sensations the world could give.

With regard to barristers, he said there was a certain glamour cast around them and people thought they must be extremely clever. It was true there were some of the most brilliant men in England among them but there were also some of the "most blithering idiots." Of the ten or twelve thousand barristers in England about 2,000 made an effort to practise. There was much exaggeration about barristers' earnings. Much was made of men making £15,000 to £20,000 a year. They did not exist. The men at the Common Law bar who made a thousand a year numbered less than fifty.

Fortunes, he added, were rarely made at the bar, and of the tragedies of the law none were more terrible than those in the Temple. Of the twenty-six men who were called at the same time as himself three alone were now practising and six had died of drink. They found themselves utterly stranded and sank.

When "The Rivals" was produced in 1775 it made a first-night failure, owing to the deficiencies of Mr. Lee as Sir Lucius O'Trigger. The part was transferred to a more suitable comedian, and the comedy—the first of Sheridan's—developed into the success we all know. A singular feature of Mr. Lewis Waller's revival of the comedy at the Lyric last Monday night was that Sir Lucius O'Trigger, always a difficulty even to this day, was the best-acted character of the lot.

The actor is Mr. Leonard Boyne, who has of recent years usually acted heroes in the provinces. Sir Lucius is no hero. But he is an Irishman, a typical Irishman, drawn by an Irishman, and fit to be acted by an actor born at Westmeath. There is a certain airy humbug about Irish humour which neither the Englishman nor the Scot can compass; but Mr. Boyne carries it off with cheerful grace, and makes a marked success where most of his predecessors have made failures.

As Jack Absolute, Mr. Waller does not score, indeed he reminds one rather of a pricked bladder. True there was the uniform, the Waller swagger—or "carriage," I suppose I must write—the Waller smile and much else, but he exhibited no buoyancy and there was no resilience in his acting. In a word he seemed deflated.

Miss Lottie Venne was an admirable Mrs. Malaprop. Her widow was much younger and more attractive than is the rule; altogether a more agreeable person than Sheridan had in his mind. But Miss Venne avoided the common error of making Mrs. Malaprop bring out every absurdity as if it were a word or remark of great importance. She spoke her words, whether right or wrong, trippingly, and one enjoyed her egregious blunders the more that their maker was sublimely unconscious of them.

Mr. Robert Loraine restored Bob Acres to something like his pristine possibility. Since the days, at least, of Buckstone, Bob Acres has been clowned or, at any rate, represented as wildly fantastical creature of farce. Mr. Loraine is content to portray a rather racketty young squire with a passion for "strange oaths."

The Lydia Languish was Miss Kate Cutler, who somehow does not make as much of her part as might be expected. She was, however, very pleasing, and will improve as she comes to realise that Lydia is not called Languish for nothing, but is Sheridan's compendium of the feminine foibles and follies of his early days. Miss Beatrice Ferrar is an alert Lucy. Mr. C. W. Somerset is a rather sour Sir Anthony, representing the old gentleman as a curmudgeon of sinister aspect, and not as a pleasant old fellow, but easily crossed. As Sir Anthony says, no one is more easily led so long as he has his own way. But accepting Mr. Somerset's reading no fault is to be found with his execution, his Sir Anthony being a very real and coherent nuisance, well stricken in years. The play was finely mounted.

The chief interest connected with the revival of "Trelawny of the 'Wells'" given last night in connection with Mr. Charles Frohman's Repertory Theatre at the Duke of York's is that it offers an opportunity of comparing the old Pinero with the new. This "comedietta" in four acts was written before Pinero began to picture the serious side of life, and although much of it is now more than a little out of date, the piece as a whole compares more than favourably with the author's latest successes. Sir Arthur has seldom been more successful than in "Trelawny of the 'Wells.'" He has set himself to picture a phase of life which he knows well, and every incident, every character rings true.

But if only for the splendid cast that Mr. Frohman has gathered together, the revival is well worth while. Mr. Sydney Valentine, in his staid, easy way, for instance, is an ideal James Telfer, and nothing better could be desired than M. Edmund Gwenn as Augustus Colpoys, Mr. Dennis Eadie as Tom Wrench, Miss Hilda Trevelyan as Avonia Bunn, Miss Irene Vanbrugh as Rose Trelawny, and Mr. Dion Boucicault as Sir William Gower. Each character is splendidly drawn and is splendidly played. A large audience gave what was in every way a notable revival a very hearty welcome.

Leatherless boots are the latest triumph of the humanitarian inventor who objects to our borrowing the skins of animals in order that we may go better shod, while, if rumour does not lie, the butcher is to receive a severe setback, by the introduction of the perfect sausage

The vegetarian sausage is quiet and well behaved. It has no tricks and will not respond if whistled to, nor can it be taught to sit up and beg, and therefore it may be counted lacking in the elements of music-hall humour. It tastes, I am told, like ham, only better, so that there is no mistaking it for the ordinary variety which tastes like pork or like bread and ochre according to its composition. The butchers are rumoured to be evolving a counterstroke in the shape of a meaty substitute for mashed potato.

It is announced "on the highest authority" that the gentlemen of London interested in polo will shortly issue an appeal to sportsmen for no less a sum than £10,000 to cover the cost of sending out a team to meet, and to beat, it is hoped, the team which won the America Polo Cup on this side of the Atlantic last season. The Americans' trip last year cost 40,000 dollars and a side from this country cannot possibly be sent out for less. Mr. Walter Buckmaster is now in America making preliminary arrangements, and other noted English players are taking part in tournaments over there. Ponies will have to be bought and "made," and sales in polo-bred animals are already booming.

Mr. W. M. G. Singer, the well-known owner of race horses, whose Challacombe won the St. Leger in 1905, was divorced yesterday. Mr. Singer is the second son of Issac Merrith Singer, the strolling player who invented the Singer Sewing Machine and became a millionaire.

The Vagrant.

Generally speaking a waiter's life is not a particularly happy one, and Mr. Browne has found it very difficult to please some of his customers. A fussy individual entered the restaurant the other day.

"Waiter," he said, "I'll begin on oysters One dozen—natives mind; I like them on the deep shell; not too large nor yet too small. Choose them carefully, and remember you must not bring me any that are not fresh and plump."

"Yes, sir," said the waiter, sardonically; "an would you like 'em with pearls in 'em or without, sir"

GAME BIRDS IN BENGAL AND THEIR WAYS.

There are two kinds of geese that migrate regularly to Bengal during the cold weather months, namely, the bar-headed geese Anser Indicus (Vern. Bal hans: Khurie hans,) and grey geese Anser Cinereus (Vern. Raj hans: Khar hans.) The first to arrive are the bar-headed geese; these make their appearance usually about the middle of November and are the last to depart, which they usually do about the end of March, and I have even seen a few in company with ruddy-sheldrakes towards the beginning of April. Grey geese usually begin to migrate about the end of November and leave about the middle of March. On their first arrival in India bar-headed geese make straight for the seashore or for some of the more open and larger lakes, and it is only a couple of weeks or so later that they spread themselves all over the country. As the paddy is then ripe vast number of geese, ducks, teal, etc., find abundance of food among the countless acres of the ripe grain that covers the country on all sides.

Bar-headed geese usually feed during the night and early in the morning and usually resort during the day to the churs and sand-banks which are to be found along most of the bigger rivers. Towards the earlier part of the season bar-headed geese feed mostly on paddy and other grain as well as shrimps and other crustacean and peas and other crops. As the paddy is ripe and is harvested bar-headed geese may then be found feeding on the tender green grass that springs up on all sides as the water recedes and dries up; they are also very partial to feeding on such fields where the paddy stalks have been set fire to and burnt, the birds I suppose finding parched paddy a favourite diet. These geese have at this time a rather fishy flavour owing I suppose to the change of diet, as fish, shrimps etc., are rather plentiful in the more or less dried up pools to which the geese have now to resort for drinking and the water of which becomes very tainted and contaminated. Bar-headed geese are extremely wary and shy, specially so towards the beginning of the season and very difficult to approach, but are not quite so towards the latter part of their stay. A good way to get at them when lying basking on churs or sand-banks is to get into a small covered up country-boat and to drop down with the tide, and at such times one may get within 40 or 50 yards and a right and left will often account for half a dozen or more, as they usually sit huddled together. Being extremely wary they are very careful before pitching on a place to safeguard against any ambush by avoiding any bank or unevenness of the ground, which may afford facility to a stalker to get within range. Sentinels on such occasions are posted towards the higher parts of the ground they settle on. These keep a good lookout all round and at the slightest suspicion a warning of kwank ! kwank ! ! will send the whole flight off. A good way to get at these geese when they are feeding on grass or parched paddy is by making use of some cattle from among the numerous animals that one may now see feeding on the new grass. The modus opperandi is to get hold of a few cows and make the herdsmen drive them towards the unsuspicious geese while you follow yourself crouched on the near side of the cows. The shooter will often then be able to get within 50 paces or nearer and right and left will often account for several birds. On one occasion a friend and I were out shooting and had had a fair day among the snipe in the forenoon. Towards the afternoon we descried vast numbers of geese feeding on the new grass, their grey colour contrasting singularly with the green background of the young grass and making them visible from a long distance. My friend and I at once made up our minds to have a try and see if we could not succeed in securing some of these fine birds. The place where they were seen feeding was about half a mile from our encampment and a large number of cattle intervened between us and the geese. We made our way forward towards the cattle and for the promise of a tip the herdsman volunteered to lead half a dozen of his cows towards the geese. Having dismounted from our horses, we now took shelter behind our bovine friends and quietly made our way towards the unsuspicious birds, the herdsman driving the cattle as directed; we managed to get to within less than 40 paces and four barrels resulted in seven geese being left behind and we got two more as they came flying round. They were apparently not very much alarmed for they went and settled again half a mile or so distant and a second stalk resulted in four more birds being added to the bag. Bar-headed geese before they depart from Bengal assemble in vast flocks. Thousands may be seen one day on some of the big churs or sand-banks of the Ganges; the next day not one will be seen: they have all departed during the night for their northern homes. Though the bulk of these bar-headed geese migrate to Siberia and other high latitude countries, a certain number of them breed on Lake Tassomaru and other high Himalayan lakes. Grey geese migrate later and are more partial to marshes then bar-headed geese, and they very rarely resorts to churs or sand-banks or rivers as bar-headed geese do. These geese feed during the night and earlier parts of the day on the paddy and are very partial also to the tender shoots and leaves of acquatic plants; they are also very fond of crops and may often be seen feeding among peas, wheat, barely and such like and do a lot of damage at such times. During the day grey geese resort towards the deeper and more central parts of the marshes. They are more shy and wary then bar-headed geese, though they may be approached easily enough to within range, if one does so when they are resting during the day in the middle of the marshes. Grey geese though late in migrating to Bengal are the first to depart and unlike bar-headed geese they do not breed among the higher Himalayan lakes but migrate to Siberia and other northern countries. Their favourite homes are among the Tundras of the North. Grey geese begin to leave Bengal towards the end of February and by the first week of March they have all gone. The late Colonel Presvalsky when exploring round about Lake Labnor found the Anser cinereus to arrive in vast flocks on the still frozen lake towards the end of February; all these birds were resting on their way to their Northern homes; as their stay at the lake lasted only for two or three days, and the explorer found the exodus to almost entirely cease by the middle of March.

For the table grey-geese are far superior to the bar-headed ones, as these latter acquire a somewhat fishy taste, specially so towards the latter part of the season, when their diet consist a good deal of shrimps, small fish and other crustaceans, a diet to which grey geese seldom resort.

Besides the grey and bar-headed geese, the brent goose (Bernicla brenta) migrate sometimes to Bengal but on very rare occasions. I was once fortunate enough to come across six of these fine birds, and managed to account for five of them. Barring their showy appearance I consider these geese to be rather inferior for the table, and the one I had cooked was remarkable for its toughness; probably if was an old bird.

Fishing.

TROUT FISHING IN GALICIA.

The first roseate tints of early morning were beginning to show above the summits of the Carpathian Mountains when my young Australian friend, B., and myself shouldered our creels and started off to walk the four miles or so of forest-track which lies between the garrison town of Sambor and the River Bystrzyca.

It was a glorious June morning, and the forest glades and valleys were filled with the melody of a thousand feathered choristers. Every patch of tangled brake and under-covert seemed to harbour a nightingale, and the sweet love-song of the thrush and of the blackbird was heard amid the delicate green foliage of the giant forest trees.

In parts the narrow forest road led through dense growths of the waist-high bracken, or a stretch of emerald turf thickly spangled with wild hyacinths, pale blue dog violets, and the star-like wood anemones. In the open portions of the forest were to be seen many acres of heather-clad moorland, and more than once the crow of a blackcock reached the ears of my companion and myself as we brushed through the springy heath cover.

At length, after seventy minutes of brisk walking, we arrived on the bank of one of the most charming mountain streams imaginable. Of crystal clearness, the River Bystrzyca, after leaving the Carpathians, winds its serpentine course through smiling valleys, deep ravines, wild moorlands, and virgin forests until it joins the treacherous Dniestr. In parts the banks of the first-named stream are fringed with beautiful willows and other water-loving trees. There are, however, plenty of open reaches where one can throw a fly without fear of getting "hung up," and the clean gravelly bed of the stream would delight the eye of any fly-fisherman. Indeed, it is strange to me that the rivers and streams of Galicia are not better known to devotees of the rod, for goodly trout are to be found in many of them.

Before starting on the business of the day, B. went in search of dry sticks, from which to build a fire, while I busied myself preparing the various things which we had brought with us in the picnic hamper. He soon returned with a double armful of dry twigs, and, having laid them under the drooping branches of the weeping willow, which formed our camping-ground, he filled the kettle with water from the river, while I set light to the sticks, and very soon we had a pan of frank-furters hissing and very soon we had a pan of frank-furters hissing over the blazing fire. To boil the kettle was but the work of a very few minutes, and long ere our friends in the neighbouring town had awakened from their beauty sleep we were enjoying an al fresco breakfast in the midst of the most beautiful forest and mountain scenery to be found in all Galicia.

Breakfast finished, the light ten-foot split cane rods put together, and having arranged to meet at the same spot under the willow at mid-day, my companion and myself parted, he going up, while I elected to try my luck down-stream. There was no lack of insect life on the river, and, having noticed a number of small fish rising to a fly resembling a blue dun, I turned over the time-discoloured leaves of my old fly-book until I came to a bunch of small and beautifully tied Blue Duns, one of which I selected and attached to the finest drawn cast I could find among my tackle. There was just sufficient ripple on the water to lend a well-thrown dry fly a life-like appearance. My first cast, however, was clumsily managed, but was taken instantly by a plucky four-ounce fish, which jumped high out of the water when he felt the steel, and fought as gallantly as many a trout of twice his weight which I have caught in English trout-streams. At length I had him safely in the landing-net and a brilliantly spotted fellow he was. Elated with the success of my first cast, I carefully whipped every foot of water between my starting-place and a belt of alders about a quarter of a mile lower down the reach.

For some little time I failed to rise a fish of any kind, and was in the act of reeling in my line, preparatory to looking for a fresh beat beyond the alders when the swirl of a heavy fish attracted my attention and the next moment the artificial dun was sucked beneath the surface. It was quite unnecessary for me to strike, as the fish had hooked hard and fast. Up and down stream and across he rushed, with all the gameness of a grilse. Suddenly, however, bang! went the trace, and at the loose end of it what I honestly believed to be a good three-pound trout. It was useless crying over spilt trout, however, and, having rigged up a fresh trace, I started off to try my fortune further down stream.

Once clear of the alder belt I had a fine stretch of open water before me, and in some parts the river widened out to fifty yards. There were several deep pools in this reach, in which, from former experience, I knew lay some lusty trout.

It was by this time nearly 11 o'clock, and the sun blazing hot, thanks to a cool south-westerly breeze, I was able to continue on my beat in comparative comfort. There were now but very few fish rising, and for perhaps three-quarters of an hour I did not get a touch of any kind. While throwing under the further bank, however, my fly was taken greedily, and in a moment I knew that I was into something heavy. "There's no trout about that gentleman," was my inward ejaculation as the fish, after making a wild rush up-stream, caved in like a lamb, allowing me to reel him into the bank without a struggle. I was right in my surmise, for my capture proved to be a very handsome chub of nearly 3½ lb. weight.

I was in the act of scaling the fish, when a Ruthenian shepherd approached. After gazing in open-mouthed astonishment at my delicate-looking little rod, to the butt of which was attached a bright steel spear-head, the shepherd asked if I speared my fish. Upon showing him the fly and explaining the use of the same, not only did he open his mouth wider than before, but his eyes seemed as though they would bolt out of their sockets as he half-frightenedly examined the tiny lure of steel and feathers. "Bah!" exclaimed the rustic, "the fish that take that thing (pointing to the fly) must be born fools." He probably thought the person who used such a bait to be as great a fool as the fish which took it, but the Ruthenian peasant does not dare to voice his opinion regarding his betters outside the precincts of his mud hovel. In the circuitous manner peculiar to his race, my new friend begged for largess with which to purchase tobacco. Having bestowed a 20-kreuzer piece upon him, I asked how he and his fellows caught their fish. "Rake up the bottom with a pole and spear them with a four-tine eel-spear. Or," went on my bucolic instructor, "when the stream is narrow and shallow enough we build a dam across it, and (with a grin) we sometimes catch a cartload of fish." Alas! that the fishing laws of Galicia, or rather Austria, are so lax.

Bidding the peasant carry my landing-net and creel, I fished carefully up-stream, picking up a trout here and a dace or chub there as I went. Neither of the first-named fish exceeded three ounces, however, and somewhat tired of catching such pigmies, I determined to fish back to the starting-point. At the last cast, however, my fly was taken like lightning, and as I struck a beautiful two-pounder leapt high out of the water. For quite fifteen minutes did he fight manfully for his freedom, and during the mad rushes he made I quite expected to see him carry my fine-drawn cast into his sanctuary among a cluster of big boulders. In spite of his gallant battling, however, he was unable to cope against cane and steel and tested gut, and at length, thoroughly spent, he was drawn over the landing-net. Two pounds and as many ounces did that game trout weigh, and a more beautifully proportioned or more brilliantly marked fish I never hope to grass again.

A few more unsuccessful casts over the pool in which I rose the last fish, and I retraced my steps to the willow, where I found B. awaiting me. On comparing notes I discovered that my friend's creel contained two and a-half brace more trout than did my own. Nevertheless, my two-pounder proved the show fish of the morning.—J. M. M. B. THE ·25-20 WITH REDUCED CHARGE OF SCHULTZE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

Sir,—Long experience with ·25-25 and ·28-30 Stevens rifles has satisfied me that both these weapons may be depended upon to shoot well with reduced charges of shot-gun smokeless powder. A friend, Colonel W., possesses a ·25-20 Stevens single shot rifle, and as he was anxious to find a reduced charge for this rifle which he could use for rooks, rabbits, etc., we decided to target carefully a number of cartridges loaded with 4½ grains of Schultze and a 62½ grain solid bullet. This particular load seemed to me to be likely to give good results, judging from my previous knowledge of the ·25-25 and ·28-30. Excellent though the shooting of my own rifles had always proved, yet I was hardly prepared to see such a fine performance as that achieved by the ·25-20. Colonel W's rifle happens to be tight in the lead, so that the initial resistance to the bullet being driven into the rifling, is much greater than in my own ·25-25. To this no doubt the good shooting is largely attributable, for it is all important that Schultze, or other smokeless powder, when used in small charges and well air spaced, should meet with sufficient initial resistance to ensure proper combustion.

The shooting was done throughout by Colonel W in the prone position, but no sling was used. The sights fitted to the rifle were magnifying ones, and the day was calm with good light. Thus all the conditions were thoroughly favourable.

The first five shots, fired at 25 yards range, were on or in a rectangle half an inch high and one inch wide.

Five shots fired at 50 yards were all on a one inch square.

Seven shots at seventy-five yards were all on a rectangle three inches high and two and a quarter inches wide. (This group was enlarged by one shot which was known to be unsteady at the moment of firing; otherwise the diagram would have been considerably smaller. Six of the shots being on a rectangle 2½ inches wide and one inch high.)

Seven shots at a hundred yards were all inside a rectangle four inches high by three inches wide.

Seven shots at one hundred and fifty yards were on a rectangle six inches high by four inches wide.

After shooting the rifle for accuracy it was next tested for trajectory.

Five shots at 100 and five at 50 yards were fired with the same elevation, and then the mean height on the target of each group having been ascertained the vertical interval between these respective heights was measured: this was found to be just five inches. That is, the highest point of the trajectory curve over a range of 100 yards is five inches. Thus the curve is just a shade higher than that of the ·22 R.F. Long Rifle cartridge (the latter being about 4·75 inches). The ·25-20 with reduced charge is therefore a really fine shooting little weapon and with 4½ grains of Schultze it will do all that the ·22 R.F. is capable of, and a little more. The ·22 R.F. never seemed to me to have sufficient stopping power for rabbits, while the ·25 with its slightly larger flat topped bullet, appeared just about right. With the ·25-25 and reduced charge of Schultze or Amberite I have killed a great deal of small game, including many hares. These latter always dropped at once to a body shot with this small charge, showing that the shock effect was sufficient. On the other hand the velocity being low, birds such as pigeons, partridges and sandgrouse are not smashed or knocked about in spite of the bullet's flat nose. When shooting the ·25-20 for trajectory at 100 yards, a still finer diagram was obtained, the five shots all being in a three inch circle. It will be seen therefore, to put the shooting moderately, that with the reduced load the ·25-20 can be depended upon to shoot into a four inch circle at 100 yards, a highly satisfactory degree of accuracy.

In the case of the ·25-20 single-shot, it is noteworthy that the 4½ grains of Schultze exactly half fills the available powder space in the shell. The charge is of course left loose and unwadded, this being an essential condition in order to obtain regular combustion.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.
For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.
Blair's Pills have rendered me immune service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

Mr. A. Foley's b g Beau Vive, by Fucile—Glen Vive, 4yrs., 7st. 8lb. ... ... P. J. Foley 2
Hon. A. Wynne's br f Apple Pie, by Ayr Laddie (imp.)—Praleen, 7st. 11lb. (inc. 11lb. over) ... ... J. Dillon 3

(Winner trained by J. Gough.)

Other starters : Parsee 9-3 (A. Wood) ; Miss Flaneur 8-12 (C. Bolton) ; Metograph 8-11 (W. Osborne) ; Mala 8-11 (N. Wood) ; Flavinius 8-11 (J. Harden) ; Knox 8-11 (W. Southey) ; Blue Book 8-9 (M. Connell) ; Kerlie 8-7 (D. Callinan) ; Olivaster 8-3 (R. Lewis) ; Flaxen 8-2 (J. Pike) ; War Star 8-2 (J. Lightfoot) ; Vavasor 7-13 (W. H. McLaughlan) ; Nadir 7-10 (F. Hickey) ; Perkeo 7-9 (R. W. Brennan) ; Red Knight 7-8 (W. H. Smith) ; Bright Steel 7-7 (W. Burn) ; Didus 6-4 (S. Abbott) ; Britain 7-3, inc 11lb. over (G. Rose) ; Gidyea 7-2 (S. Lamond) ; Snowfoot 7-0 (F. Hood) ; Duke of Clarence 6-11, inc. 11lb. over (S. Cusdin) ; Black Range 6-11, inc. 11lb. over (G. Lambert) ; Vaustie 6-7 (A. G. Phillips).

BETTING : 7 to 1 agst. Blue Book 8 to 1 Parsee, 10 to 1 Vavasor, 14 to 1 Storey, 16 to 1 each Knox, Miss Flaneur, Red Knight, Kerlie, and Beau Vive, 20 to 1 each Metrograph and Flavinius, 25 to 1 each Mala, Flaxen, Olivaster, Nadir and Britain, 33 to 1 Perkeo, 40 to 1 Black Range, 50 to 1 each War Star, Bright Steel, Snowfoot, Apple Pie, and Gidyea, 75 to 1 Duke of Clarence 100 to 1 each Vaustie and Didus.

Mala, Snowfoot, and Knox comprised the leading division as they moved off, but when the field had settled down Nadir went to the front and led past the seven furlongs from Mala, Perkeo, Parsee, Flavinius, and Apple Pie. Storey went to the head of affairs in the next furlong, where Vauntie, Mala, Perkeo, Parsee, Nadir, and Apple Pie were most prominent of the others. There was little or no alteration amongst the first half-dozen passing the half-mile, but Vauntie retired rounding the turn, Storey piloted the field into the straight, where his attendants were Nadir, Parsee, Mala and Flavinius. Storey was out by himself at the distance, where Beau Vive left the rest of the field in pursuit. The Warwick Farm representative was, however, not to be caught, and went on to win by three lengths from Beau Vive, who similarly beat Apple Pie for places. Britain was a close fourth, followed in order by Flavinius, Vavasor, Parsee, Perkeo, and Black Range, the last to pass the post being Gidyea. Time—1min. 38⅕secs.

A. J. C. St. Leger.—A sweepstakes of 10sovs. each, 1 forfeit, with 750sovs. added. For three-year-olds. Colts, 8-10; fillies, 8-7; no allowance to geldings. The owner of the second horse to receive 150sovs., and the owner of the third 50sovs. from the prize. 1½ miles.

Mr. J. Baron's b c Prince Foote, by Sir Foote (imp.)—Petruschka (imp.), 3yrs., 8st. 10lb. ... ... D. McCarthy 1
Mr. J. C. Williamson's blk c Danilo, by True Blue—Lady Robinson, 3yrs., 8st. 10lb. ... ... M. Connell 2
Mr. Wilson jun.'s br c Diabolo, (Vic.), by Bobadil—Ardea, 3yrs., 8st. 10lb. W. H. McLachlan 3

(Winner trained by F. McGrath.)

Betting: 3 to 1 on Prince Foote, 4 to 1 agst. Danilo, 10 to 1 Diabolo.

Prince Foote moved off in front from Danilo, with Diabolo in the rear. The favourite was first into the straight, and showed the way past the stand a length and a half from Danilo, with Diabolo a length further away. Lengths separated them in this order at the mile, and at the seven furlongs Prince Foote led Danilo a length and a half, with Diabolo four lengths away. Danilo ran up to Prince Foote in the next furlong, and these two passed Kensington fifteen lengths ahead of Diabolo. After passing the half-mile Prince Foote came away, and eventually won as he liked by twelve lengths from Danilo, who beat Diabolo by four more. Time—3mins. 5⅕secs.

Second Day, Monday, 28th March 1910.

Champagne Stakes.—A sweepstakes of 10sovs. each 5 forfeit, or 1sov. only if declared before 4 o'clock P.M. on the day of general entry for Autumn Meeting, 1910, with 1000sovs. added. For two-year-olds. Colts, 8-10; fillies, 8-8; geldings allowed 3lb. The winner of any race (not a handicap) of the value of 200sovs. to carry 7lb.; of 500sovs. 10lb. extra. The owner of the second horse to receive 200sovs., and owner of the third 100sovs. from the prize. 6 furlongs.

Mr. R. Eastern's ch f Desert Rose, by Malster—Mangosteen, 9-4 (inc. 10lb. penalty) ... ... M. Connell 1
Mr. J. Wilson jun's Bobadea, by Bobadil—Arden, 8-10 ... ... S. Cundin 2
Mr. Wm. H. Mate's b c Gigandra, by Ibex—Mira, 9-6 (inc. 10lb. penalty) ... D. Callinan 3

(Winner trained by F. McGrath.)

Other starters: Tanami 8-10 (J. Lightfoot); Orodes 8-10 (W. Burn); Sylvander 8-10 (F. Hickey); Beverage 9-6, inc. 10lb. (J. Pike); Malthusian 8-10 (S. Lamond); Kummulla 8-8 (W. Osborne); Nancy Stair 8-8 (J. Dillon); Lady Peggy 8-8 (W. H. Smith); Lager 9-4, inc. 10lb. penalty (W. H. McLachlan); Precious 8-7 (C. Bolton).

Betting: 9 to 4 agst. Beverage, 5 to 1 Lady Peggy, 7 to 1 each Desert Rose, Malthusian and Gigandra, 10 to 1 Lager 12 to 1 each Nancy Stair and Sylvander, 14 to 1 each Kummulla and Bobadea, 20 to 1 the others.

Gigandra, Precious, and Desert Rose were first to get going, and at the end of a furlong Precious was out clear from Desert Rose, Gigandra, and Lady Peggy, followed by Sylvander and Lager. Precious showed the way round the turn, but Gigandra was first into the straight, with Desert Rose at his heels, and Precious, Sylvander and Lager next. Desert Rose silenced Gigandra at the distance, and coming on won by two and a half lengths from Bobadea, who beat Gigandra a length. The favourite, who was badly placed in the first couple of furlongs, finished fourth, and was followed by Lager, Tanami, Malthusian and Kummulla in that order, with Precious and Nancy Stair at the tail end of the field. Time—1min. 15⅘secs.

Sydney Cup.—A handicap sweepstakes of 20sovs. each, 5 forfeit, or 2sovs. if declared before 4 o'clock P.M. on Monday, 14th March 1910, with a Gold Cup value 100 guineas, presented by Francis Foy, Esq., and 3,000sovs. added. The owner of the second horse to receive 500sovs. and the owner of the third 250sovs. from the prize. 2 miles.

Mr. A Knox's br h Vavasor, by Grafton (imp.)—Waihine, 4yrs., 7st. 9lb. W. H. McLachlan 1
Messrs. P. H. Morton and S. Osborne's b m Daisy Chain (imp.) by Florizell II.—Chatelaine, 5yrs., 7st. 2lb. ... W. H. Smith 2
Mr. Hunter White's b h Jinnee, by Skopas (imp.)—Djin Djin, 4yrs., 6st. 11lb. (inc. 11lb.) ... ... P. Brown 3

(Winner trained by T. Payten.)

Other starters: Trafalgar, 9-5 (J. Barden); Maltine, 9-1 (W. Osborne); Pendil, 9-0 (M. Connell); Barallan, 8-9 (D. Callinan); Lord Nolan, 8-4 (C. Bolton); Downfall, 8-1 (A. Wood); Kerlie, 8-0 (J. Pike); Ungorie, 8-0 (A. Hyland); Olivaster 8-0, (R. Lewis); Hoax, 7-12 (R. W. Breman); Danilo, 7-8 (N. Wood); Lady Wilde, 7-6 (W. Burn); Beau Vive, 7-4 (P. J. Foley); Didus, 7-3 (S. Lamond); Britain, 7-1, inc. 5lb. over (G. Ross); Footpath, 7-0, inc. 4lb. over (R. Abbott); Black Range, 6-10, inc. 3lb. over (G. Lambert).

Betting: 6 to 1 each agst. Trafalgar and Daisy Chain, 7 to 1 Vavasor, 10 to 1 Beau Vive, 12 to 1 each Britain and Ungarie, 14 to 1 each Maltine and Downfall, 6 to 1 Pendil, 20 to 1 each Kerlie and Hoax, 25 to 1 each Lady Wilde and Olivaster, 33 to 1 each Danilo, Barallan and Didus, 40 to 1 each Jinnee and Black Range, 50 to 1 Lord Nolan, 100 to 1 Footpath.

From a good start Maltine, Black Range and Kerlie were first to show, and Kerlie immediately took charge from Hoax and Maltine, with Black Range, Olivaster and Daisy Chain, next. In this order they entered the straight, and passing the stand Kerlie was just in front from Beau Vive, Maltine, Olivaster, Daisy Chain, Trafalgar, Black Range, Danilo, Vavasor and Britain. Leaving the straight Kerlie and Beau Vive were together in charge from Maltine and Olivaster, who were followed by Hoax, Daisy Chain, Downfall, Black Range and Trafalgar. Passing the mile the order was much the same, and Kerlie and Beau Vive led along the back and up to the six furlongs from Maltine, Black Range, Olivaster, Downfall, Hoax, Daisy Chain and Trafalgar. Olivaster then moved up to the leader, and at the half-mile shot out from the field, with Vavasor, Maltine, Black Range, Kerlie, Trafalgar and Daisy Chain as his nearest attendants. Trafalgar dropped out rounding the bend, and Olivaster and Daisy Chain entered the straight almost abreast from Maltine, Jinnee and Vavasor. Olivaster and Daisy Chain were still in front at the distance but Olivaster tired to nothing over the last bit, and, flashing through in the centre, Vavasor came away to win decisively by a couple of lengths from Daisy Chain, who beat Jinnee, who also finished well, by two more. Then came Didus and Danilo, attended by Ungarie, Barallan, Maltine, Olivaster and Black Range, with Downfall last of the main body, followed at intervals of something less than a furlong by Footpath and Beau Vive. Time—3mins. 29⅕secs.

Third Day, Wednesday, 30th March 1910.

Cumberland Stakes.—A sweepstakes of 10sovs. each, 1 forfeit, with 1,000sovs. added. For three-year-olds and upwards. The owner of the second horse to receive 200sovs. and the owner of the third 100sovs. from the prize. 2 miles.

Mr. J. Baron's b c Prince Foote, by Sir Foote (imp.)—Petruschka, 3yrs., 8st. W. H. Smith 1
Messrs. P. and W. Mitchell's ch h Trafalgar, by Wallace—Grand Canary, 4yrs., 9st. J. Barden 2
Mr. H. Power's b h Pendil, by Bobadil—Penitence (imp.), 4yrs., 9st. ...W. McLachlan 3

(Winner trained by F. McGrath.)

Betting: 7 to 2 on Prince Foote, 4 to 1 agst. Trafalgar, 14 to 1 Pendil.

Moving off slowly, Pendil came into the straight a couple of lengths ahead of the other two, an advantage he increased by two more passing the judge's box. Pendil remained in front to the nine-furlong post, but was joined by Prince Foote at the mile, with Trafalgar a length further away. They were all together at the half mile, after passing which Pendil beat a retreat, and Prince Foote and Trafalgar, settled down to battle it out. Trafalgar, on the outside, had his head in front of the favourite rounding the turn, with Pendil two lengths further away. Prince Foote and Trafalgar were locked together entering the straight, but the three-year-old had Trafalgar's measure at the distance, and beat him home with something in hand by a length, Pendil being six lengths further away. Time—3mins. 43⅘secs.

A.J.C. Plate.—A sweepstakes of 10sovs. each, 1 forfeit, with 1,000sovs. added. For three-year-olds and upwards. The owner of the second horse to receive 200sovs. and the owner of the third 100sovs. from the prize. 3 miles.

Mr. J. Baron's b c Prince Foote, by Sir Foote (imp.)—Petruschka (imp.), 3yrs. 8st. ... ... W. H. Smith 1
Mr. H. Power's b h Pendil, by Bobadil—Penitence (imp.) 4yrs., 9st. W. H. McLachlan 2
Messrs. P. and W. Mitchell's ch h Trafalgar by Wallace—Grand Canary, 4yrs., 9st. J. Barden 3

(Winner trained by F. McGrath.)

Other starter: Bobrikoff, 9-2 (A. Wood).

Betting: 6 to 4 on Prince Foote, 3 to 1 agst. Bobrikoff, 5 to 1 Trafalgar, 33 to 1 Pendil.

They moved off slowly together, and Prince Foote led past the stand by half a length from Trafalgar, with Bobrikoff three lengths further away, and a length in front of Pendil. So they passed the mile post, and ran to the six furlongs, where the pace was more solid, and passing the stand the second time Prince Foote was clear from Trafalgar, with Bobrikoff three lengths away next, and Pendil last. There was no alteration in position as they passed the mile post in Indian file, with lengths between them. All pace was now clapped on, and Trafalgar almost got on terms with Prince Foote at the six furlongs, where the other two closed up. Trafalgar was beaten at the half mile, and Bobrikoff went up into second place. The favourite led Bobrikoff two lengths into the straight, where Pendil threw out a challenge, and passing Bobrikoff, got to within three-quarters of a length of Prince Foote at the distance; but the three-year-old came away under pressure and beat him by a couple of lengths, with Trafalgar five lengths further away, and Bobrikoff after a gap of eight more. Time—5mins. 28secs.

BUREAU OF NATURAL HISTORY AND SCIENTIFIC TAXIDERMY,
DEHRA DUN,
United Provinces.

Depôt of Museum and Naturalists' supplies with Department for Ornamental Taxidermy. Feather Pictures of all India Game Birds made by W. M. Hutton.

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

LEICESTER.

Leicester has had singularly unfair treatment compared with other meetings at the hands of the clerk of the weather, and on Wednesday morning, with rain pouring down in torrents, the outlook was disheartening enough. The watery visitation, however, was limited to April showers, and though the sky was dark enough for November rain ceased for good at midday. The attendance, which was large and representative, and the going which had been gradually hardening, was again in excellent order while fields ruled strong. Results:—

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

THE England team cut a very disappointing figure in the great international of the year at Glasgow and suffered a well-merited defeat by 2 goals to nil. Despite some weakness on the part of their backs, Pennington being particularly at fault, they had nothing the worst of the first twenty minutes very bright play, and there seemed every prospect of a close and exciting struggle. From the time, however, that Scotland scored their first goal the Englishmen appeared to lose confidence to such an extent that no one present could have felt much doubt as to the issue of the contest. A second goal followed before the interval, the English defence on this occasion, as on the previous one, blundering badly. As it happened, no further success attended the efforts of the Scotsmen, but on the general run of the play the home side might easily have increased their head in the second half when the resolute effort of Scotland and the comparatively tame ineffective work of the visitors afforded the most pronounced contrast. There came of course, chances for England, but the general demoralisation extended to the forwards, whose shooting was either wild or ill-directed. England were badly let down at back, Pennington, who had done so well against Wales, being quite off his game in both tackling and kicking. Crompton, it is only fair to state, improved vastly in the second half, but by that time the mischief had been done. Durat and Makepeace worked steadily, if not always to successful purpose, while Wedlock lacked judgment. Forward, Bond stood out head and shoulders above his colleagues, of whom Hibbert and Hardinge were so poor as to cause wonder why they had been selected.

Scotland undoubtedly enjoyed a big advantage in having their right wing and centre from one club. Bennett and McMenemy combining especially well and being always dangerous when they got away. Templeton, on the other wing, showed wonderful cleverness in control of the ball, but was inclined to overdo matters. All three halves played a strong judicious game, the honours falling to Thomson, whose mastery over the opposing forwards became more and more pronounced. With some doubt as to whether they would justify their selection, Hay and Law came through the ordeal with much credit. The game opened so brightly that the subsequent deterioration in the Englishmen's play came as a great surprise. Still the Scotsmen deserved all praise for the manner in which they completely mastered their opponents. Consequent upon England's defeat, Ireland, if they beat Wales to-morrow week, will be champion country.

No League match this season has aroused greater local interest than that a Tottenham last Saturday, when Hotspur drew with Aston Villa. So strongly placed at the head of the competition that the championship must be theirs, the Villa, always one of the most popular sides, were sure to attract a large crowd, and, quite apart from the desire to see the cleverest and most consistent team of the year, was the burning question of Hotspur's ability to get away from the bottom places in the table of results and so avoid relegation to the Second Division. By beating Sunderland 5—1 and Blackburn Rovers 4—0 in consecutive engagements on the White Hart-lane ground, the Tottenham team had raised great hope among their supporters of proving equal to a very trying ordeal. It was recognised that this fixture with the leaders might be the critical event of the season, and a crowd of 35,000 people assembled to see the battle. By drawing Hotspur fully realised expectations; but it is not too much to say that they were lucky to divide the points. For doing this they have to thank Joyce; but even the splendid work of their goalkeeper could not have saved the side had not fortune smiled on every effort of their burly custodian. Joyce accomplished many brilliant things; but in the intense excitement of the second half when shot after shot was sent in by the Villa forwards he took many risks, sometimes blundered, and yet did not give away the goal that would have meant the defeat of Hotspur.

In a most spirited encounter played at a rare pace on a fast ground, the Villa gave a fair idea of their admirable skill and, despite the great keenness of the struggle, never lost their form. Good throughout, they combined well, and showed individual cleverness against a side which worked with all the desperation usually associated only with Cupties. Tremendous excitement prevailed as the Villa forced attack after attack, and a scene of enthusiasm marked the termination of the match, as the outcome of which Hotspur will probably keep their position in the First Division of the League. Not only was the prospect favourably influenced by the result of their own endeavours, but Chelsea lost badly at Bradford. As Woolwich Arsenal succeeded at Bristol and Middlesbrough drew at Sunderland, Chelsea now find themselves last but one on the list, with only Bolton Wanderers, who drew with Sheffield Wednesday at Owlerton, below them. Chelsea's outlook is extremely bad, and while everything points to one of the London teams having to go down, the chances seem all against the Stamford Bridge team escaping this degradation. Experiencing very bad luck in having men injured, Chelsea have had to go to Bolton Wanderers to try and strengthen their forwards; but yesterday it was chiefly in defence that they failed, as is shown by an adverse score of 4—1, and the large number of goals obtained against them may determine the issue when the season's records are complete.

In winning at Bristol Woolwich Arsenal accomplished an extremely good performance, which makes them equal to their victims in the matter of points. Middlesbrough also have 27, so that any one of five clubs may have to join Bolton Wanderers, and four weeks hence there is likely to be very little to divide these teams, whose struggle is not for honours, but to avoid disgrace.

The results of Saturday's games among the more prominent clubs of the Second Division of the League have had the effect of making the struggle for promotion once more quite open. The surprise of the afternoon was the defeat, on their own ground, of Derby County by Bradford, and they are now only two points ahead of Manchester City with an extra match played. Derby County's advantage, therefore, may very soon disappear. Two points behind Manchester City come Hull City and Oldham Athletic, the latter having fulfilled one more engagements than the others, and if fortune favours them either may advance to second place. The chief point about the competition, assuming that Derby County do not lose their place, is that any one of four clubs may finish second, so that the remaining fixtures of those teams are invested with more than ordinary interest. It may be taken for granted that they will play hard for promotion, as a slip now on the part of any one of them may mean the dashing to the ground of the aspirations of that club.

Brighton and Hove Albion now seem certain to carry off for the first time in their career the championship of the Southern League. Their prospects were materially improved yesterday, for though they could only draw with Northampton, Queen's Park Rangers, who threatened most danger, went down before Crystal Palace. The Rangers, it is true, have fulfilled four engagements fewer than Brighton and Hove, but they are seven points behind, and recent form does not suggest the ability to make up the lost ground and overtake the leaders. Up to yesterday Swindon, one of the most powerful combinations in the competition, seemed to be in the running for premier honours, but they could do no more than draw with Luton, and with an equal number of games played they are now a point behind Queen's Park Rangers. Providing they maintain their present high standard of play Brighton and Hove will finish at the head of the table.

SCOTLAND vs. ENGLAND.—The thirty-ninth annual match between England and Scotland was played at Hampden Park, Glasgow, on the 2nd instant, and as usual the meeting of the two countries aroused an immense amount of interest. The attendance was estimated at 100,000, while the receipts amounted to £4,417. to keep the huge crowd in order there were 400 policemen present and an ambulance staff of forty was on duty. The weather could hardly have been more favourable and the turf proved quite dry and firm—in fact everything pointed to a splendid game. The records of the two countries stood at: Scotland, 16 wins; England, 12 wins—ten games having been drawn. So far during the season England had drawn with Ireland and beaten Wales, and Scotland beat Wales and were defeated by Ireland. Scotland made no change from their originally selected side, but England at the last moment had to substitute Hibbert, of Bury, for Fleming, of Swindon. Fleming had sustained an injury to his leg during the week. Before the game began the band of pipers of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders played a selection of music. When at half past three the teams entered the field the dense mass of spectators presented an impressive sight.

Scotland won the toss, and England kicking off at once forced a corner, which was fruitless, and then Templeton got away for Scotland and looked dangerous until forced into touch by Crompton. In goal for Scotland, Brownlie neatly cleared a centre by Bond, but a little later he had some trouble in saving a good shot by Hardinge. At the other end in the next minute Higgins shot very weakly at Hardy when well placed. The game was contested at a fast pace, the ball travelling very quickly from end to end on the dry ground. As the result of a clever run and centre by Bond, Parkinson had a shot at the Scottish goal, but Brownlie saved. Then Bennett outpacing Pennington threatened danger to England, but Crompton came to the rescue. The next incident was a fine shot at the English goal by McMenemy and Hardy, not handling very cleanly, had an anxious moment. After there had been one or two successful appeals for off-side by each country, Parkinson, profiting by a mistake by Thompson slipped through, but his shot went just wide of the posts. A free-kick to England against McWilliam followed, but Land cleared, and Scotland got away. Templeton dribbled through, and with Pennington failing to clear, Quinn got in a shot at the English goal. Hardy came out and stopped the ball, but could not kick it away, and McMenemy running up scored the first goal for Scotland amid great enthusiasm. The English backs started very uncertainly, and their errors led to this goal for Scotland. From the restart Bond went away for England, but only an unsuccessful corner kick resulted, and the ball soon came back to the English goal. McMenemy had a fine opening forced for him by Templeton, but he got off-side. Then Parkinson left the field for a few minutes to have a slight injury attended to. Combining nicely, and showing capital pace, the Scottish forwards were now giving the English backs, who were still not too good, great trouble. The visiting half-backs failed to hold the opposing forwards on many occasions, and their passing to the men in front of them was very poor. When the game had been in progress little more than half an hour a second goal rewarded Scotland. Quinn beating Wedlock started the movement, and sent the ball out to Bennett. Pennington was drawn away, and when Bennett centred Quin rushed in and hustled the ball past Hardy into the net. More attacks by Scotland followed this second point, McMenemy only just missing with a hard shot, and Quinn heading a few inches over the bar. England broke away, and Hibbert getting his head to a centre by Bond went very near reducing Scotland's lead. Then Bond sent in a shot which Brownlie saved, and Hardinge kicked wide when well placed. Half-time:—

England	...	... 0

The second half had hardly begun when, with Thomson blundering, Parkinson had a fine opportunity of scoring for England, but Brownlie ran out and saved a poor effort by the Liverpool player. Pressure by Scotland followed by McMenemy and Higgins both sent in harmless shots. Pennington was forced to concede a corner and Higgins headed in for Crompton to clear smartly. Crompton also did well in checking Bennett when that player looked like getting through. Scotland were now having by far the better of matters and it was well for England that Crompton had improved greatly on his form of the first half. Attacks by the Englishmen were infrequent, Thomson doing much good work in breaking up the combination of their forwards. An individual run by Templeton, who went right through the English defence, ended in that player shooting very wide. When play in the second half had been in progress twenty-five minutes, Hay made a mistake that nearly led to a goal by England, but Parkinson, after steadying himself, shot a few inches over the bar. Scotland next forced several corners and it came as a great relief to England when Bond took the ball towards the home goal only to end with an unsuccessful shot. England were now well beaten and Bennett almost added a third point for Scotland, Hardy only just saving. Before the end came Parkinson and Makepeace each made attempts to score for England, but their shots were both rather wild. Just at the end Scotland forced two corners but without result.

LACROSSE.

ENGLISH CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP.—The representatives of southern lacrosse left something to be desired in both passing and shooting at Lord's on Saturday, when the Old Hulmeians met Catford for the English Club Championship. Catford started in a manner which led their supporters to look for a victory, but after scoring the first goal, they were quite outclassed. The Old Hulmeians had little difficulty in intercepting the generally erratic passing, and at half-time they led by 11 goals to 2. Early in the game C. J. Mason, the Catford goalkeeper, collided with another player and hurt an eye, but although so handicapped he played a fine game. In the second half several players were slightly injured so hard was the ground, and an unusual incident was witnessed when several players rushed the Old Hulmeians goal and broke it down. The northerners were nearly always on the attack, and although Mason made several excellent saves, they scored no fewer than 20 goals to Catford's 6. There was a large crowd present, including many members of the Association of Old Hulmeians.

ATHLETICS.

ETON COLLEGE SPORTS.—The Duke of Teck was among the company present on Agar's Plough on Saturday afternoon to witness the final heats of the school sports. G. O. Chance won the senior hundred yards and quarter mile in excellent style, and R. Burdon won the hurdle race, but he only defeated by inches C. W. Tufnell who had just previously won the high jump, and was consequently rather fagged. Mr. Elmer Speed gave a handsome cup to be competed for in the long jump, which the Hon'ble J. C. Maitland won with a fine leap of 19 feet 7½ inches. Mr. Speed's son was fourth with a leap of 17 feet 8 inches.

The chief feature in tthe junior events was the excellent performances of G. K. Dunning, who had previously won the junior steeplechase, mile, and half-mile. He now carried off the hundred yards and quarter mile in fine style, winning both races comfortably. He certainly should be heard of again.

A great event was the annual tug-of-war between the Wet-Bobs and Dry-Bobs, which closed the sports. The Dry-Bobs secured the first pull and then the Wet-Bobs gained a pull. The last pull was a great one. For several minutes the teams could not move the light blue ribbon tied round the middle of the rope one way or the other. It was a splendid trial of strength and endurance and it lasted nine minutes, when the Dry-Bobs, admirably led by Mr. R. St. L. Fowler, captain of the eleven, gradually pulled their opponents over and won the event amid great applause.

GOLF.

OXFORD vs. CAMBRIDGE.—The Cambridge golf team sprang a genuine surprise on everybody at Hoylake yesterday, when, in the thirty-second match between the rival universities they gained a brilliant victory by five matches to three.

It can be said at once that the success was thoroughly deserved and was almost entirely due to the splendidly level nature of the side. Oxford had two or three brilliant men, but apart from Holderness, their last player, nobody in the team after Evans, who was third, won a match.

When at the end of the first round the sides were level on individual games, it certainly looked a good thing for the Dark Blues, but the steadiness of the other team, or rather certain members of it, and the magnificent recovery of Medrington in particular, turned the scale and enabled Cambridge to gain their sixteenth success in the series of contests.

This win of Medrington was quite the best performance of the day. Outdriven off the tee by a very stylish golfer, in Lorse, Medrington nevertheless stuck to his work well, and more than held his own in the short game. When the thirteenth green was reached the match was square. Then off two successive tee shots Medrington's ball found a rabbit scrape. He lost both the holes and two more into the bargain, so that he wound up four down—a position that seemed certain to lose him the match.

Going out in the afternoon he began by taking the first three holes off the reel in four, three, four, and, out in thirty-six, he was actually one up at the turn. He never lost his advantage after that, and came in with a victory that as much as anything else, perhaps contributed to Cambridge's success. He nearly always had to play the odd after the tee shots, but in approaching and putting, particularly putting, he was simply splendid and never gave his opponent a chance.

Although on the losing side, the best golfer of the sixteen was unquestionably Hooman, who since last year has improved considerably and is now a really great player with a fine, free style. Hooman times the ball perfectly in all his shots, but it is with his seconds that he excels.

It was a great day for Hooman for he showed that he was one of the most finished golfers seen at either university for some years, both in knowing what to do and doing it well.

Never steady, Finch-Hatton was worn down by Ireland, and Evans, though he won, did not show his best form. Score:—

NINTH DIVISIONAL TOURNAMENT.

The Tournament opened at Secunderabad on the 18th instant. Only four teams, the Royal Artillery, Cheshires, Sherwood Foresters and 13th Hussars have entered this year; the Gunners and Cheshires coming together in the first match. The Artillery pressed hard at the start and lost many opportunities of scoring: the Cheshires then showed up for a bit, but the Gunners returned to the attack and Burroughs scored the first goal. They were almost through again shortly after and then the Cheshires took up the offensive but all their efforts were unavailing and the R. A. returning to the charge, scored a second goal. Nothing daunted, the Cheshires played hard and rushing down, the ball was put through by Smith. On changing ends play was very level, opportunities were presented to both teams but were not taken advantage, of there being no further scoring, and the game ended in a win for the Gunners by 2 goals to 1.

The second game was played on the 19th instant between the Sherwood Foresters and the 13th Hussars. It was a very closely contested match and a draw was a fitting result. Each team scored in the first half, Walker putting through for the Foresters and Davis for the Hussars. There was no further score on changing ends and an extra ten minutes each way also failed to produce any further points.

The match was replayed on the 22nd instant, the Sherwood Foresters winning by 3 goals to 1. The first half was pointless and it was not till midway in the second moiety that the scoring was opened, the 13th drawing first blood. The Foresters worked hard and were not long in equalising, and in spite of strenuous play by both teams there was no further scoring, time arriving with a goal to each team. Extra time was played and the Sherwoods scored twice during this period, winning as stated.

The Royal Artillery and the Foresters met in the final on Saturday. The Sherwoods were a better team on the day's play, quicker on the ball and showing better combination they scored twice and kept their opponents out all through the game, thus winning the trophy which was presented to them after the match by Colonel Whittal.

G. W. Chambers and R. H. Meredith qualify.

A doctor, spending a rare and somewhat dull night at his own fireside, received the following message from three fellow-practitioners: "Please step over to the club and join us at a rubber of whist." "Jane, dear," he said to his wife. "I am called away again. It appears to be a difficult case: there are three other doctors on the spot already."

THE BEIGHTON CUP TOURNAMENT.

Rangers vs. Rovers.—These teams met on the 20th instant, an exciting game ending in a win for the Rangers. Play was fast throughout, the Rovers displaying individual brilliance, while the Rangers relied on strong combined play. The Rovers were weak in front of goal and were unable to break through their opponents' defence, whereas the Rangers netted the ball twice, Smart drawing first blood and Cody scoring the second point off a fine centre by Oliver. Teams:—

Rangers.—Cooper, goal; Margrett and Postence, backs; Richardson, S. Lawton and Tripp, halves; Oliver, Smart, Cody, Skempton and Edwards, forwards.

Rovers.—Ghose, goal; A. Sukul and Dhan, backs; B. Sukul, Joseph and S. Triki, halves; P. Kachap, Kaman, F. Triki, P. D. Kachap and Bhattacharjee, forwards.

Referees:—Messrs. Rosser and Adams.

Calcutta vs. Y. M. C. A.—The draw between these teams was replayed on the 20th instant and resulted in an easy win for Calcutta, who beat the Young Men by 5 goals to nil. Greig (2), Cole (2) and Roberts were responsible for the scoring. Teams:—

C. F. C.—Graham, goal; Captain Penton and Yeoman, backs; E. Badham, Studd and Powell halves; Turnbull, Roberts, Cole, Greig and Blake, forwards.

Y. M. C. A.—Tindale, goal; Heysham and Reynolds, backs; Collingwood, E. Vanspall and H. Vanspall, halves; Cranenburgh, Potter, Price, McKay, and Duff, forwards.

Referees:—Messrs. Richardson and Galbraith.

Sibpur vs. P. V. R. B.—This game on the Custom's ground on the 20th instant ended in a win for Sibpur, who had little difficulty in disposing of the Volunteers by 4 goals to nil. Durrell (2), Batterbury and Wilks scoring the points. Teams:—

Sibpur.—McQuinn, goal; Payne and Fox, backs; Murphy, Baptist and Hunter, halves; Milner, Durrell, Batterbury, Duncan, and Wilks, forwards.

P. V. R. B.—Hughes, goal; Simpson and Fridge, backs; Mayers, Wood and Walter, halves; Godwin, Newton, Allen, Gay and Ganter, forwards.

Referees:—Mr. Thomas and Sergeant White.

St. Xavier's vs. Bagh Bazar.—Played on the Rangers' ground on the 20th instant the College winning comfortably by 2 goals to nil. The goals were obtained by Ford and Pybus. Teams:—

St. Xavier's.—David, goal; Yorkshee and McGuire, backs; D'Cruz, Francis and Hussey, halves; Kuntlett, Bray, D. Ford, Newton and Pybus, forwards.

Bagh Bazar.—J. Chatterjee, goal; R. Sen and Dutt, backs; P. Mukerjee, Banerjee and D. Mukerjee, halves; J. Sen, Bose, H. Banerjee, P. Mukerjee and K. Chatterjee, forwards.

Town Club vs. Wanderers.—A pointless draw was the result of a scrambling game between these teams on the Calcutta ground on the 20th instant. Replaying the next day the hockey was of better class and the game fast and interesting. The Town Club won by a goal to nil, P. Bose putting through. Teams:—

Town Club.—Bose, goal; Ghose and Mitter, backs; Mullick, Bose and Singha, halves; Banerjee, Sarkar, Mitter, Bose, and Deb, forwards.

Wanderers.—P. Claridge, goal; Hazelbrook and P. Claridge, backs; D'Cruze, Marcus, and Crew, halves; Love, Carvallo, Hazelbrook, Rahim and Wakeham, forwards.

Ballygunge vs. Mohan Bagan.—These teams having scored a goal each at their first encounter the match was replayed on the 22nd instant, Ballygunge winning by 2 goals to 1 after rather an uninteresting game. Teams:—

Ballygunge.—Stone, goal; Clarke and A. N. Other, backs; Dunstervill, McMahan and Gahan, halves; Baker, Trenchard, A. Gould, Dowson and Coltart, forwards.

Mohan Bagan.—Das, goal; S. Bose and Banerji, backs; Mitter, Guin and A. Dass, halves; Mitter, Sarkar, Patel, H. Mitter and Deb, forwards.

Referees:—Sergeant White and Mr. Medleycott.

Second Round.

Medical College vs. Aligarh College.—These teams met on Thursday, a fair game being witnessed. The medicals played considerably below their form and the visitors were much the better team on the day's play. They showed better combination and were quicker on the ball all through and, despite the splendid defensive work of Perkins, who played a grand game for the medicos, the Aligarh team scored two goals, registered by Anwar Ali. The medicals only scored once—McNeilly putting through. Teams:—

Medical College.—Mann, goal; Perkins and Hartley, backs; Hixon, Doyle and Rego, halves; Nyss, McNeilly, Berridge, Hinder and Heppolett, forwards.

Aligarh College.—Mahomed Usaf, goal; Noorud-din and M. Hosain, backs; M. Alam, Y. Koreshie and A. Ali, halves; Anwar Ali, Abbas Ali, S. Ali, Asar Ali and Z. Hassan, forwards.

Referees:—Messrs. Margrett and Bhattacharjee.

Dhanbaid vs. Jamalpur.—These railway teams met on the Customs' ground on Friday last, a fast and interesting game ending in favour of Dhanbaid by 2 goals to 1. The first half was pointless, but on changing ends Alexander scored for Jamalpur, Green equalised and time arrived with the score one all. In the extra period Green gave his side the victory with a smart and successful shot. Teams:—

Dhanbaid.—Harris, goal; Whaley and Gregory, backs; Hunter, Coldwill and Arakiel, halves; Walker, Green, Hannay, Minas and Save, forwards.

Jamalpur.—Tomkins, goal; Watkins and Caliston, backs; Solomon, Jordon and Mills, halves; Bennette, Alexander, Robin Melchem and Allison, forwards.

Referees:—Messrs. Adams and Price.

Customs vs. Sporting Union.—The Customs were quite in their best form on Friday last, when they turned out and walloped the Sporting Union to the tune of 7 goals to nil. They were always on the aggressive and scored when they liked. Fischer (3), McCready (2), Boileau and D'Silva hit the goals. Boileau was badly hurt during the latter part of the game and had to retire. Teams:—

Customs.—Seth, goal; Anderson and Quiterio, backs; Lynch, Durham and Barlow, halves; Boileau, D'Silva, McCready, Fischer and Galbraith, forwards.

Sporting Union.—Gupta, goal; Day and Moitra, backs; Mullick, Bose and Roy Chowdhury, halves; H. Dass, Sarkar, Chatterjee, Banerji and Nag, forwards.

Referees:—Messrs. Richardson and Thomas.

Dalhousie vs. 27th Punjabis.—These teams met on Friday last, when the result was a pointless draw after a fast and interesting game, but at their second meeting the Trades Club were
